JUDGE BEN LINDSEY "BOUNCED" BY CHURCHMEN

Five Leaders In International Anti-Soviet Plot To Face Firing Squad

Home Town Talk

By B. D. D.

Here's a letter that Talker finds in the day's mail:

Editor Record News:

I am an inmate of the Texas prison system at Richmond. I have been in prison eight years and have never received as much as a letter from the free world. So I am asking this favor of you to please run a little ad in your paper asking if anyone out there would like to send a little Christmas to a lonely convict. I would be glad to get even a letter. We are allowed to receive toilet articles of any kind, gloves, socks, cigarets and candy.

Thanking you in advance for anything you see fit to do for me, I am just a number.

ROBERT BROWN,
Care state camp No. I, Richmond, Texas.

We don't know anything about Robert, his race, color, the crime for which he was convicted, how long he has yet to serve or anything about him, but we would say that one who hasn't received as much as a letter from the "free" world would be appreciative of any gift, no matter how small or inexpensive. It may be safe to assume that Robert hasn't been spoiled by too much attention in the eight years he has served in the penitentiary.

Widows outnumber widowers 2 to 1 in the United States, the comparative percentages being 69 per cent female and 31 per cent male, according to the last census figures available.

"This is the obvious outcome of certain familiar conditions," says the Statistical Bulletin of the Metropolitan Life Insurance company commenting on these figures. "In the natural course of events one of the two partners in wedded life will outlive the other, so that, for a longer or shorter period, the survivor is widowed. Which of the two dies first is a matter of chance, but the probabilities of survival are not at all evenly divided between the two. In the majority of cases, the husband is the older of the two partners. Men, moreover, are subject to a somewhat higher mortality than women. Thus, on two separate counts, the odds tend to be somewhat against the husband's survival. If the age of husband and wife are given, it is possible to calculate definitely for each the chance of outliving the other.

"If the wife is older than the husband—a rather unusual situation—the odds may be in favor of the husband surviving his wife. So, for example, if the wife is 35 years old, and the husband 30, the chances are 56 in a hundred, or just a little better than even, that the husband will survive his wife and so be left a widower. Here the handicap of the male is more than outweighed by the five years difference in his favor in point of age. But by far the more usual situation is that husband and wife are of about the same age, or that the husband is older than the wife. In all such cases the odds are against the husband's surviving the wife; that is, the odds are that the wife will be left a widow. So, for example, with husband and wife both 30 years of age, the chances of the husband's outliving his wife are only 48 in a hundred, 52 in a hundred that his wife will become a widow.

"If his wife is five years younger, that is, 25 years of age, then his chances of outliving his wife are only 40 in a hundred: the odds are three to two against him, or, what amounts to the same thing, the odds are three to two that the wife at some time will be widowed. Naturally, the odds against the husband's survival become greater and greater as the wife's advantage in age increases. To take a rather extreme case, if the wife is 15 years younger than the husband, the latter being 40 years of age, the chances of the husband outliving the wife are only 26 in a hundred, or the odds are three to one against him, or three to one that the wife will become a widow at some time in her life."

All this may have something to do with the selling of life insurance but it is interesting reading nevertheless.

It ought to stop some wives from worrying about their husband's second wife but probably it won't.

The many friends of Frank Power, former mayor of Archer City, are glad to learn of his appointment as county auditor of Archer county. The appointment was made last week by Judge Allan Montgomery of the 30th district court. He succeeds Edwin Weldon who has been elected county attorney. Mr. Power is a skilled accountant and is familiar with the county's finances, and can flavor a commonplace and practical act with words of humor and philosophy which are as much needed in public business as elsewhere.

And Grady Bell, former secretary of the Archer City Chamber of Commerce, goes to Odessa to become secretary of the chamber of commerce of that oil center. Mr. Bell helped to make the interests of Archer City and of the whole Archer county identical and served the people of the whole county. The best wishes of many friends go with him to his new field of work.

'QUICK DEATH' ORDERED IN FAMOUS TRIAL

Ten-Year Prison Terms Assessed Against Three Others

2,000 AWAIT HEARING

Sensational Testimony Implicated England And France

By CHARMION VON WIEGAND

MOSCOW, Dec. 7. (US)—Five of the eight defendants in the most famous political trial in the history of the Soviet were tonight sentenced to "quick death" before a Red army firing squad, and the remaining three received sentences of 10 years in prison.

The sentences were returned by the special court of four judges, who have been deliberating the testimony of 12 days in secret session since last night.

Those sentenced to death were Prof. Leonid C. Ramzin, so-called "arch-plotter;" Prof. Alexander A. Fedotov; Prof. Ivan A. Kalinnikov, Prof. Nikolai F. Charnovsky, and Victor Larichev.

Sentences of 10 years in jail were returned for Serge V. Kupriyanov, Vladimir I. Ochkin and Xenophont V. Sitnin.

All Confessed

There was no consideration of guilt by the special tribunal, since all the defendants had confessed their parts in undermining the five-year plan by sabotage, and in a foreign interventionist plot in which they implicated British and French statesmen.

The sentence was returned by Chief Justice Veshinsky, and signed also by the three other justices, Antonov Seratovsky, Vassily L. Luvoff, and P. A. Ivanov. Luvoff and Ivanov are workers in factories in Leningrad and Moscow.

All of the eight men who were thus sentenced, after broadcasting their incriminating testimony over a nation-wide radio chain to which the millions of Russians listened in, formerly held high posts in the Soviet government.

Ramzin was a former director of the Moscow Institute of Technol-

40-Year-Old Murder Case to Be Tried Today

MACON, Mo., Dec. 7. (UP)—Albert Layman, 63, will go on trial tomorrow, charged with assault to kill Thomas J. Billings, here in 1889, more than 40 years ago.

Layman, arrested at Blackwell, Okla., denied he was the man who struck Billings over the head with an axe handle and declared he came to this section only a short time ago. In April, 1889, a Macon grand jury indicted an "Albert Layman" for the crime.

The state's case rests solely on identification of Layman by two 80-year-old men, G. H. Fulmer of Sherman, Texas, and R. B. Turner of Laplata, Mo.

Barthou Promises New French Cabinet Tonight

PARIS, Dec. 7. (AP)—Senator Louis Barthou tonight abandoned his efforts to form a cabinet succeeding the government of Andred Tardieu.

This announcement came shortly after the senator had gone to Elysee palace this evening to acquaint President Doumergue with the state of negotiations for forming a ministry of concentration.

Barthou's failure apparently was due to the radical party's objection to the inclusion of Louis Marin, head of the extreme right group, in his proposed ministry.

Queen Of Belgians Leads Savants Into Blighted Area To Study Fog

By LUCA RIZZARDI

BRUSSELS, Dec. 7. (UP)—Scientists from the Universities of Brussels and Liege, groping for a solution to the mysterious deaths in the fog-blanketed Meuse valley, agreed today that "toxic substances" held in the mists were at least partly responsible for the fatalities.

Elizabeth

The professors, including experts from Queen Elizabeth's Scientific Foundation, accompanied the queen into the Meuse valley on a brief tour of the stricken zone today. The fog had lifted, and the death danger was believed passed.

They agreed the fog might have caused the epidemic of deaths, but they also agreed that not the fog alone caused death but the presence of toxic substances which it held. On their recommendation, adequate measures will be taken to combat these "toxic substances."

The latest death occurred at Jemeppe, bringing the total to 57.

Many persons in the neighborhood of the zinc factories in the stricken zone today experienced burning throats. The fog had hung most heavily near the factories. Bricklayers at Flemalle Haute, one of the towns affected, on Friday were obliged to quit work. They drank quantities of lemon water to ease their burning throats.

The people in the Meuse valley were less frightened today, but determined in the event of a recurrence of the fog in such density to abandon their low lying houses and retreat to the hilltops.

Early theories that poison war gas oozing from the dank ground had caused the deaths were abandoned generally by government engineers investigating the catastrophe. However, they were investigating the zinc and other factories in the locality on the theory that fumes from them might have been held to earth by the fog blanket, asphyxiating the victims.

It was pointed out in denying the poison war gas theory that the Meuse valley at this point was held by the Germans from the beginning of the war in 1914, and that gas was not used until a year or so later.

Post-mortems under the direction of ministry of health officials were conducted over the week-end. Announcements were expected Monday.

DEATH CLAIMS WM. E. BARTON

Noted Clergyman And Writer Dies in New York

NEW YORK, Dec. 7. (AP)—The Rev. Dr. William E. Barton, noted clergyman, author and lecturer, died today, at the Long Island college hospital, Brooklyn, where he had been critically ill for the past month. He was 69 years old.

He was the father of Bruce Barton, widely known advertising man and author.

Two of his sons, Charles William Barton, editor and publisher of the Sheridan (Wyo.) Enterprise, and Bruce Barton, were at the bedside. His wife died in 1925.

Services will be held at the Broadway tabernacle Tuesday at 3 p. m. in charge of the Rev. Dr. Nehemiah Boynton, a life-long friend, who, like Dr. Barton, was a moderator of the National Council of Congregational churches, the highest office in that denomination.

Burial will be at Foxboro, Mass., alongside his wife, and where he maintained a summer home.

He was ordained in the Congregational church upon his graduation from college in 1885. Shortly afterward he married Esther Treat Bushnell, of Johnsonville, Ohio.

For two years the young preacher labored with his first charge at Robbins, Tenn., the experience determining him to return to school. With his wife and their infant son, Bruce, he went to the Theological Seminary at Oberlin, Ohio, worked his way and won his degree of bachelor of divinity in 1890.

Then began a career that eventually was to be surmounted by eminence in three fields—ministry, writing and lecturing. After nine years' service at Wellington, Ohio, and Boston, Dr. Barton went to Oak Park, Ill., where he established a reputation as a clergyman who dealt with realism and abhorred sham.

As a lecturer he was an able, convincing and entertaining speaker. In his writings he pursued diversified fields, and besides five works on Lincoln and four books on "Safed and the Sage," he wrote "The Life of Clara Barton," "My Faith in Immortality," "A Life of Christ," and several score other books principally relating to religious subjects.

During the trial, Mrs. Spicer testified she fired the shot that caused Upmor's death when he bumped into her and her husband while they were dancing.

Mob Action Threatens While Pair Is Quizzed in Assault on Banker

Officers Predict Early Solution of Kidnaping and Probably Fatal Shooting of Bowie County Man

TEXARKANA, Texas, Dec. 7. (AP)—Four of six men arrested and held for questioning in connection with the kidnaping and possibly fatal shooting of R. W. Hanks, 55, cashier of the Guaranty Bond State bank at Redwater, Texas, last night, were released tonight. Two others, a 47-year-old farmer and his stepson, 28, were held in jail. Officers predicted an early solution of the kidnaping.

Crowds milled around the building where District Attorney R. G. Waters was conducting the questioning. Feeling was running high and officers were taking every precaution to avoid mob violence although no formal arrests had been made.

Victim Near Death

Hanks, meanwhile, was in a semi-conscious condition at a hospital here. He had been shot four times.

One of the men held was identified by residents of the vicinity in which the shooting occurred as the man who yesterday wore the coat Hanks had on when an aged trapper, J. D. Simons and a negro youth found him during the night.

Hanks incoherently told of the kidnaping at the hospital today. He said a man approached him at his home last night and forced him to walk at least 10 miles to an old mill where an automobile carrying several other men, was waiting. Hanks said he did not know how many were in the car but said he could identify them if they were brought before him.

$5,000 Demanded

Hanks' abductors asked him to obtain $5,000 from a relative who was president of the bank. He refused and officers believed the men became frightened when Simons and the negro appeared near the mill, and intended to kill the banker as a precaution against capture. The man's wounds ranged downward leading investigators to believe the kidnapers shot him while he was on the ground.

The trapper said he was attracted to the scene when an automobile approached the mill, drove away, and then reappeared, and he heard several shots fired at unusually long intervals. Simons said he then heard a man groaning and upon investigation found Hanks stumbling along a lane. He and the negro took the banker to a nearby house and summoned aid.

Four Escaped Maniacs Recaptured in New York

NEW YORK, Dec. 7. (AP)—Four maniacs who made a sensational escape from Matteawan state hospital last Thursday were captured in a Brooklyn apartment early today and were on their way back to Matteawan tonight in an ambulance, guarded by five keepers.

Three maniacs are still at large. The four were captured in the home of Mrs. Mary Ochsenfels, who was arrested and charged with harboring criminals.

Those captured were William H. Nelson, who had escaped previously and who returned and liberated the other six; Harry Gordon, the "mad butcher" of Rochester, N. Y.; John H. Gambill, and John Biggins, of New York. They said they escaped because of "brutality and starvation" at the hospital.

POSSE HUNTS SLAYER OF TWO

Pawnee Farmer Shoots Boy And Officer

PAWNEE, Okla., Dec. 7. (AP)—An armed posse tonight was scouring the hills near here for Jess Powell, farmer, 65, following the slaying of Floyd Bell, 18, and Ed Hartwick, Pawnee county undersheriff and wounding of Bell's companion, Marion Kendall, 20, 10 miles north of here late today.

Bell, a farm boy, was killed and Kendall was shot in the leg while they were returning a log chain, borrowed from Powell's farm. Hartwick was killed without warning by a shot from the underbrush when he and Sheriff Ben Lancaster went to the farm to investigate the shooting.

Bell and Kendall, officers said, went to Powell's home for the chain when their horse slipped into a ditch. Powell did not answer the door and the boys took the chain from the barn, used it and were leaving after returning it when the shots were fired from the house.

Bell fell, fatally wounded. Kendall made his way to the highway. A nearby farmer notified Sheriff Lancaster of the killing and he and Hartwick immediately left for Powell's farm. As they neared the house, the farmer shot from the underbrush, killing the undersheriff instantly.

A posse of citizens and officers from Fairfax, Pawnee and Ralston formed and after finding Powell had not returned home, began searching the underbrush.

Powell, a widower, lived alone.

DR. OBERMEYER STIRS CROWD IN FORUM TALK

Speaker Critical of Peace Talk Coming From 'Armed Camp'

BURK SENDS ARTISTS

New Generation Has More Courage Than Old, Audience Told

Whatever doubts leaders of the Wichita Falls Open Forum may have entertained in the past relative to this community's response to the free programs thus provided should have been permanently and effectively dispelled Sunday by the attendance of approximately 1,000 persons at the Memorial auditorium and an attentive interest which hung eagerly on every line of Dr. Charles G. Obermeyer's daring and stimulating discussion of "Culture and the Problem of Happiness."

The speaker convincingly overcame by incisive thought and unquestioned sincerity within five minutes the first abstract isolation imposed by the marked English roundness of his speech. The commanding stage presence with which he took his audience completely into his hands during the 75 minutes of his address was adroitly employed at the outset of his talk to bring his hearers into a compact body at the front of the auditorium. The main floor of the room was more than half-filled, and there appeared to be no departures whatever until the period of questions and answers was reached, shortly after Dr. Obermeyer concluded his principal delivery.

Happiness Rare

"Culture and the Problem of Happiness," the subject of his lecture, Dr. Obermeyer said was a particularly timely and interesting one because of the apparent absence of happiness throughout mankind generally when the elements commonly supposed to contribute happiness to human life are abundantly present. A paradoxical situation exists, he explained, in that philosophers, poets, psychologists and other leaders in civilization find widespread disturbance instead of happiness.

"Indirect and round-about methods are being sought in some parts of the world," he said, "to circum-

Seven Drown When Coal Schooner Founders

WATCH HILL, R. I., Dec. 7. (AP)—Seven persons lost their lives when the coal laden schooner Storm Petrel foundered in the chill wind-swept waters of Long Island Sound seven miles off here late yesterday, the coast guard reported today.

Officers of a coast guard fleet of destroyers and patrol boats sent out from the New London, Conn., base searched for hours for survivors and the extent of the tragedy was not known until today.

The drowned were four men, including the captain whose name was believed to be Dial; two women, one of whom was the captain's wife and ship's cook, and a child. The names of the others were undetermined. All were negroes.

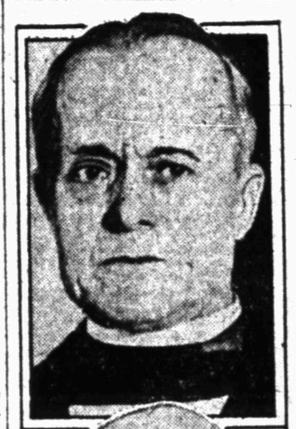

Crew Goes Down With Small Chinese Launch

HANKOW, Dec. 7. (AP)—Shipping circles here today were informed that the Chinese passenger launch, Sientau, operating between Hankow and Changsha, had capsized and sank near Sinti on the night of Dec. 2.

The cause of the disaster to the small craft was not known here nor was the number of persons drowned or the number aboard when the Sientau left here for Changsha.

Unverified dispatches early in the day said 300 had drowned but this was discredited by the size of the Sientau and it was considered the report was grossly exaggerated as frequently happens in Chinese press circles.

'Unjust'—'Vile'

Bishop William T. Manning (top) and Judge Ben B. Lindsey were the central figures in a near-riot at the Sunday morning services in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, New York, when Judge Lindsey loudly protested the bishop's remarks against him. The former Denver jurist was forcibly evicted from the church.

BEDLAM RULES IN CATHEDRAL OF ST. JOHN

Bishop Manning's Attack On Companionate Marriage Brings Riot

JURIST CHARGES LIES

Former Denver Jurist And Writer Pummelled By Irate Crowd

NEW YORK, Dec. 7. (AP)—A little man from Denver, the former Judge Ben B. Lindsey, turned Golden Rule Sunday into a pandemonium of epithets, recrimination and violence today at Bishop William T. Manning's church—the fashionable Cathedral of St. John the Divine.

Lindsey, with none at his side, sat tense among the 3,500 groomed worshippers and heard himself scored as the author of a book, "the most filthy, insiduous and covertly written piece of propaganda ever published in behalf of lewdness, promiscuity, adultery and unrestrained sexual gratification."

The bishop, coldly calm, brought his sermon to an end with a denunciation of "a man who stands openly for legalized free love under cover of the term 'companionate marriage'."

He turned his back to the congregation and bowed his head in prayer.

Lindsey Mounts Table

The Denver champion of companionate marriage strode forward and leaped on a table just below the pulpit in which the bishop still entoned the ascription.

"Bishop Manning!" he cried, his voice electrifying the thousands who had been listening to the bishop's excoriation, "you have falsely represented me! If this is not a house of justice, it is not a house of God! In justice I ask for five minutes to answer your unfair attack!"

The prayer of the bishop of the diocese of New York was drowned by the voice of the former children's court judge of Denver. The bishop remained with his back to the pews.

Cathedral in Uproar

Two ushers sprang forward, pulling Lindsey from the table. the cathedral, one of the most famous churches of the world, buzzed with the voices of richly dressed women and men in morning dress.

A hundred or more men and women arose in their seats, pushed into the aisles and rushed forward.

A man's voice cried; "Punch him."

Another man struck Lindsey on the head.

Profanity was heard. The aisle leading toward the press table at which Lindsey had been sitting and on which he had leaped, filled with pushing, excited worshipers.

Prayer Goes On

Everyone seemed to have forgotten that the church was in prayer; everyone save Bishop Manning who, his back still to his congregation, continued his petition for divine blessing.

The words of prayer were drowned in the hubbub, above which rose the voice of Lindsey, crying: "He lied about me. He had no right to lie about me! This is no house of justice! This is no house of God!"

No voice was raised to silence the uproar. The bishop himself remained occupied with his prayer. An effort by reporters seated at the press table to halt the confusion failed.

Lindsey Ousted

With his escort of ushers, the Denver advocate of companionate marriage was hustled to a side door. Behind him surged the crowd of men and women. At the top of a wooden stairway leading to the ground four detectives broke through in time to save Lindsey from being pushed head-long upon them.

A woman screamed: "Lynch him!" The detectives pushed the crowd back, threatening arrests. Thirty or more persons broke through and followed on a long walk to the police cab in front of the great stone church. They continued their angry shouts.

Finally Detective Lieut. Flood turned and threatened to arrest the next man who spoke.

"But I am a decent citizen!" pro-

T.&P.N. HEARING OPENS MONDAY

Lubbock Crowded as Rail Battle Starts

LUBBOCK, Texas, Dec. 7. (UP)—The biggest railroad hearing in Texas' history brought hundreds of guests to town tonight for the opening of testimony before the Interstate Commerce Commisison tomorrow on the proposed Texas and Pacifcic Northern $13,000,00 line from Big Spring to Vega, a distance of 333 miles.

Attendance at the hearing was expected to reach 1,000. Thirty West Texas towns sent representatives to testify to the growth and development of the section, at least 20 attorneys have been engaged and three major railroad systems were represented by counsel to oppose the project.

Opposition will come from the Santa Fe, Fort Worth and Denver and Rock Island and allied interests. Many railroad executives were on hand for the hearing and it was estimated that 500 witnesses would be called. Night sessions will be held in hopes of completing testimony this week.

H. C. Davis, I. C. C. examiner, will preside at the hearing. Proponents will be represented by C. W. Donnally, of Washington.

Proponents of the project will argue that an area of 24,000 square miles would be affected by the line, that 10 towns in the district have no rail lines now and seven more towns are several miles from railroads.

Capitalist Injured In Infernal Machine Blast

CHICAGO, Dec. 7. (UP)—An infernal machine, disguised as a mail order package, injured Anthony May, wealthy bondsman, so critically when he opened it today that physicians said he probably would die.

Pageant Marks Closing of Final Gap in Transcontinental Road

ARDMORE, Okla., Dec. 7. (AP)—The crossing ground of famed cattle trails of yesteryear was the scene today of a modern "trail blazing" drama in a celebration here of the closing of the final gap of U. S. highway No. 77.

The event marked the completion of an all-weather highway connecting the Pacific coast with the Atlantic and the Canadian border with the Rio Grande.

Approximately 15,000 visitors, including dignitaries of Kansas, Texas and Oklahoma mingled with virtually the entire population of this city of 18,000.

A colorful pageant which depicted development of transportation from pioneer days to the present featured the program.

Besides officials and representatives of the three states present on the speakers' platform was a representative of the British government, Colonel Reese Jeffries, London, who represented his nation at the recent international good roads congress in Washington.

Tribute to Oklahoma pioneers who led in laying out "trails" which later became highways for interstate traffic was given by Governor-Elect William H. Murray, of Oklahoma.

Governor Holloway said "the day of toll bridges has passed," and assured his listeners the time was not far off.

Governor-Elect Ross Sterling of Texas was represented by Walter Back, state representative.

WORSHIPPERS OUST LINDSEY

Tumult Reigns in Famous Cathedral

Rushed to Station

Lindsey was rushed to the 100th street police station and held there until the arrival of his attorney, Arthur Garfield Hays. The police at first were going to hold him for $500 bail. Hays persuaded them to release his client on his own recognizance.

In the church when order was restored Bishop Manning called for an unprogramed hymn, "Fight the Good Fight." The organist could not immediately find the music.

The congregation broke into prolonged applause. There were shouts of "God bless Bishop Manning." It was the second time in history that applause had been heard in the great cathedral and the first time at an actual service. Communion followed.

Asked by police to lodge a charge, Bishop Manning replied: "I will make no charge."

To Summon Bishop

Nevertheless Attorney Hays said he would cause a subpoena to be issued for the bishop to appear tomorrow. Hays also was trying to get into touch with Attorney Clarence Darrow to ask his aid. Darrow was in New York.

Judge Lindsey said he had been allowed to continue his challenge to Bishop Manning he intended to say:

"You read my telegram and my letter to you giving my side of the case, and if you are not sportsman enough to let me be heard you have no right to hit beneath the belt even if you are a bishop."

He wrote the lines during the bishop's sermon, he said. What he objected to most, he told reporters, was the bishop's remarks about his disbarment by the supreme court of Colorado.

Second Arrest

Judge Lindsey said it was the second time in his career he had been arrested. He was arrested 15 years ago in Denver for what he called "refusal to betray the confidence of a boy charged with murder." He was convicted for contempt of court.

In his sermon Bishop Manning denied he had forbidden Lindsey's speech before the New York Churchmen's league and held his objection to have been legitimate.

"There is in this diocese a little group of clergymen who, with a motive I do not venture to say, have been doing whatever lay in their power to make difficulties for their bishop and to place him publicly in embarrassing situations."

Manning's Attack

At the start of his sermon, Bishop Manning said:

"There is in this diocese a little group of clergymen who have been doing whatever lay in their power to make difficulties for their bishop and to place him publicly in embarrassing situations. One instance of this is the recent agitation in regard to my sermon on the apostolic ministry, an agitation so unwarranted that it amazed our whole church.

"Some time ago I was compelled to express myself in regard to the immoral and destructive teachings of Judge Ben B. Lindsey of Denver. About 10 days ago, to my great surprise I received a printed notice from the New York Churchman's association stating that at its next meeting the invited speaker would be Judge Lindsey. Bishop Gilbert, president of the association made the earnest request, supported by my own, that this strange invitation be withdrawn. The meeting took place."

"The diocese of New York has been most loyal. In the last two years, however, little discordant groups have been stirring up trouble. This finally reached a climax when the clergy disobeyed by protest and heard Judge Lindsey expound his theories. Because of this, it is now my duty to speak.

Invitation "Shocking"

"I hold it was a grave mistake and a shocking thing for a gathering of our clergy to endorse the former Judge Lindsey by inviting him this way. I am told that as result of his invitation the former judge has been asked to present his views to a well known college for young women.

"The former Judge Lindsey's teachings are contrary to the plain principles of Christian morality, companionate mariage so-called, is only a name for legalized free love.

"According to his proposal a young man and a young woman are to live together and their union is to continue if they prefer, the coming of children is to be prevented with the help of contraceptives and if they have no children, the union is to be discontinued at any time they desire. If that is not free love what is it? Would any among us consider it a debatable question whether his own daughters should enter into such a union as that?"

Bishop Manning then reviewed the disbarment of Lindsey from the bench by the Colorado supreme court, Dec. 9, 1929. At that time Lindsey was charged with accepting $27,500 from Mrs. Helen Elwood Stokes, divorced wife of W. E. D. Stokes, New York multi-millionaire for services in contesting Stokes' will which cut off his two children by the second Mrs. Stokes. The mother was able to obtain for her children $3,000,000.

Bishop Manning quoted the opinion of the court that Lindsey was guilty of "professional misconduct and was false to his oath and to his trust."

Lindsey later charged that his disbarment was due to the enmity of the Ku Klux Klan and pointed out the state bar of California held there was no cause for his disbarment.

"The action of the clergy in granting the right of Lindsey to address them was deplorable and inexcusable. It now becomes my duty to answer his teachings.

"These teachings by clever suggestion tend to break down the moral defenses of our young."

Quotes Criticism

Bishop Manning then quoted an opinion of Lindsey's writings that he attributed to Dr. A. W. Hertzau, which said:

"The gist of Lindsey's teaching is:

"Companionate marriage is nothing but propaganda for gross immorality."

Bishop Manning added:

"This is true."

The bishop said then that Lindsey upheld the belief of Bertrand Russell that marital fidelity is not an essential to a successful matrimage. Lindsey later denied that he holds these beliefs.

"This is the man whom our clergy heard. Why should this man get publicity? The clergymen who heard him could well ask themselves that question. This is not the kind of moral leadership that the church of Christ expects.

"The world today lacks moral indignation. The present situation is tending to destroy morality and decency. The time has come to blaze forth and scatter the teachings of such as Lindsey.

"The people will uphold me in requesting the clergy to rescind their invitation to hear Lindsey. We must brand his teachings as false.

Endorsement Is Question

"The question confronting the clergy was not their right to hear him, but whether the clergy should endorse a man who stands for legalized free love.

"And this is the man to whom some of our clergy gave their countenance and encouragement by inviting him to address them. I think those who arranged this invitation and carried it through have something to explain to the fathers and mothers of our diocese.

"Judge Lindsey's doctrine is only too well calculated to confuse the minds and break down the moral defenses of the young.

"The question involved in this matter is not the right of free speech, the question is whether the clergy of our church, the guides of our young people, should give the countenance and endorsement of their invitation to a man who stands openly and publicly for legalized free love under cover of the term, companionate marriage."

After his release from the station house, Lindsey said:

"I have a right to practice law in every state except Colorado. I had every right to accept the legal fees for which I was disbarred. If I had been allowed to continue, I would have said to Bishop Manning:

"The judge you quoted was recently defeated for election, largely on that issue.

"Then I intended to turn to the congregation and plead for a few minutes to answer the bishop's attack."

The judge referred to was Chief Justice Greenley W. Whitford.

FORUM TALK DRAWS 1,000

Dr. Obermeyer Talks On Pursuit of Happiness

vent the apparent spread of unhappiness. In India, for instance, Gandhi is recommending a return to obsolete industrial methods, such as the handloom, as a road to industrial health, and thereby to happiness."

Society has obtained a measure of happiness up to the present, Dr. Obermeyer said, through the provision of law, the development of religion, and the formation of groups which satisfy to some extent many of the primary desires of the human personality. Protection by law, reconciliation by religion, and preeminence by merbership in an "exclusive" group, he pointed out, are the contributions of those elements. Membership in "groups" was described as applying not only to smaller social organizations, but to nationalities.

"This sense of membership is one of our biggest weaknesses," he declared. "It gives a man, (or a race) a sense of false security. One begins at once to think of his own kind as being vastly better than all other kinds. Therein we carry the habits of childhood into our supposed maturity, into community, and into national life."

Culture of Courage

Civilization today generally boasts only an infra-cultural plane of living, the speaker continued, a level not yet lifted to that of culture.

"Now our problem is how to grow up," Dr. Obermeyer continued. "Can we reconcile this growing up with culture which seems to disturb us unhappily? If we grow up from that, will we still be happy? This is the big problem of the 20th century. The creed of this century may be stated as follows: First, a faith in understanding. It believes definitely that if we but go on understanding, with courage to grapple, if we determine to understand, we shall find light somewhere. Not courage of acceptance, but a willingness to grapple with facts. Secondly, it has courage to face our facts, both pleasant and unpleasant. This is what the cultured man finds in the path of his happiness—not easy happiness of the children, nor of the luncheon club variety—culture will mean the loss of these lighter kinds of happiness which we have known."

Launching into a discussion of affairs political, economic, and religious throughout the world, Dr. Obermeyer said "there is a tremendous amount of fear, and a much greater amount of vanity."

"The churches of England, France and Belgium, in 1913, proclaimed themselves loudly as devoted to peace," he declared, "but in 1914, I challenge you to find one that was preaching peace. They were all preaching war. Did any of them that you know of preach that Christ stood for peace, that He said 'who liveth by the sword shall perish by the sword,' and He said 'love your enemies?' We are now in the age of debunking, which merely means facing the facts.

"This matter of armaments, and the recurrent cutting of the warknot, is one of the prize hypocracies of the age. There are more armaments in the world today than ever before: bigger navies, bigger armies, bigger armed camps, more hostility, more complicated entanglements, more possibility of it breaking out anew now if they were not afraid of it and temporarily paralyzed.

"Europe today is an armed camp, more so than in 1914, and so is America. 'Security' is one of the nice words we use for telling why we must have big armaments. What is security? You are secure when you are strong enough to beat the other chap down if he makes an unfriendly move. It is easy to see the degree of security which that guarantees him."

Discussing the "hypocracies" of civilization, Dr. Obermeyer arraigned with utter severity the methods which he said are used to include the masses in the scheme of things when war breaks out.

Inside the Uniform

"Up to that point, using England as an illustration," he said, "90 per cent of the people have had a definite sense of exclusion. The rich heritage of the great British empire has brought them 10 years of unemployment and a constant dependence on the dole for keeping mind and body together. But when we go to war, we go to that man with an excellent speech about 'his king and his country needing him,' we picture to him his big part in the country's organization, show him the beautiful uniform, promise him better food than he ever was privileged to have in private life, picture to him being a hero, play the band, wave the flag, and away we go. Inside that uniform is a child which wants to show off, who wants to swank and swagger and say 'look at me.' But even more difficult of analysis is the humble saint whose vestments shout 'look and see how humbly pious I am.' The humble saint is the one who gives trouble aplenty to the analyst of human nature."

The 20th century civilization is now learning that one sure way to happiness is not to pursue it, the speaker declared. Knowledge of facts is one of the most peculiar and reliable sources of the new happiness which is coming, he said.

"The older generation now can trust the younger generation far more than the younger can trust the older," he continued. "It is our 19th century thinking that is going to plunge us into the next war. The younger generation—by which I mean the generation of younger thought—is more courageous. They may have another war foisted upon them, but they show some signs of coming through. Those who are alive, those who are willing to grapple with 20th century thought are our hope."

"Culture is understanding," he said, "grasping the meaning of life, sensing of life, vibrating to suffering and confusion among our fellows. Happiness will come from facing facts, trusting other men to be as good as we are. The secret lies fundamentally in the human heart."

One hour of spirited discussion, marked by the proffer of many penetrating questions from the floor, followed Dr. Obermeyer's lecture, with practically the entire audience remaining eager participants.

The 30-minute musical program which began at 3 o'clock was given by a public school organization of Burkburnett, and elicited from the audience a generous applause for its various parts. A high degree of excellence featured the several numbers given, particularly the work of the High School Girls' Choral club directed by Miss Isabelle Johnson. This group sang "Prayer Perfect," "Neapolitan Nights," and a trio consisting of Misses Mozelle Martin, Armadine High, and Ruth Willis sang "One Fleeting Hour."

The well known miniature male quartet consisting of Webb Garland, first tenor; R. E. Britton, second tenor; James Griffith, baritone, and Roy Jackson, bass, was given an ovation at the conclusion of a group of standard male quartet songs, done in approved style, and perfectly memorized. The four appear to average nine years of age, and would represent one really adult basso in weight. Miss Geneva Merrison directs the quartet.

A group of 12 voices from the low fifth grade, directed by Miss Nancy Bryant, sang three numbers, including Brahm's "Lullaby," and "Holy Night," in two-part harmonies. Dr. Obermeyer was introduced by Sam Kruger, who had been presented first by Overton Abernathy, vice president of the open forum.

Soviet Condemns Five Plotters

ogy, and admitted having laid the plans to wreck seven industries in the five-year plan.

Kalinnikov was a former director of the Moscow Military-Aeronautical academy, and a member of the state planning board. Charnovsky, Larichev, and Ochkin had been members of the supreme economic council.

Alexander Fedotov, who is 66 and half blind, was director of the textile research institute, and Sitnin was chief engineer of the textile trust.

The fate of 2,000 other political prisoners who languish in Soviet jails is likely to be to a large measure decided by the present trial and the sentences, since all the prisoners are linked by the prosecution with the "Prom" or Industrial party, of which the convicted eight men were the leaders.

The four judges, who for 12 days heard testimony by state witnesses and the confessions of the eight accused men that they had "wrecked" the five-year plan and conspired for foreign intervention, locked themselves up last night to deliberate their decision.

Fantastic Trial

In the ladies' salon of the oval room of the former Noblemen's club, now known as the house of trade unions, the four pored over the indictment of the men, the charges of Nikolai V. Krilenko, state prosecutor, and the admissions of Prof. Leonid C. Ramzin and his associates.

The sensational, even fantastic trial, which began on Nov. 25, ended yesterday with the final appeals of the eight prisoners for mercy so that they might "participate in the further miracles of the Soviet." England, France, and British and French statesmen were accused of furthering the plot to overthrow the Soviet, and although these charges were echoed in open court, the details of the accusations were made known only to the judges in a secret session.

As proceedings stood when the case was turned over to the judges, State Prosecutor Nikolai Krilenko was the outstanding figure. This little man with his dynamic manner and relentless questioning dominated the entire trial. Since the famous Shakta trial, he has become known as the Soviet's "hunter of men."

"Hunter of Men"

Krilenko is short and squat, and unprepossessing at first sight. But the piercing gaze of his uncannily bright blue eyes dominates a room full of people; to face those searching eyes is a task even for a guiltless person, for Krilenko is the soul of Soviet justice.

At the age of 10, this man was a Bolshevik, and called often in his youth to defend himself against the czaristic regime. He was exiled, returned, and was one of those present at the first congress of soldiers and peasants, and was jailed by Alexander Kerensky.

In March, 1918, Leon Trotsky was appointed commissar for war, and reorganized the Red army of which Krilenko had become the natural chief. Krilenko was awarded the post of attorney-general, which he has held ever since.

At 45, he is a severe but contended man, with two daughters by his first wife, a prominent party worker. Krilenko is the first Alpinist of the U. S. S. R., and spends his vacations climbing the most dangerous peaks.

Patriotic Talk And Report Feature D.A.R. Luncheon

Christmas decorations made the dining room at the Country club a gala setting for the regular monthly luncheon and program of members of Major Francis Grice D. A. R. Saturday. Members and guests were seated at small tables, each having a festive center of red Christmas wreath on boughs of spruce. A small frosted Christmas tree with pine cones and mistletoe surrounding it completed the pretty motif while at the regent's table a bowl of poinsettias and tall Christmas candles were a distinctive honor. Seated with the regent, Mrs. E. C. deMontel, were Mesdames A. H. Carrigan, John Waggoner, Clifford Deaton and Luke McCrory.

Mrs. Fred T. Couper was leader in the program for the day and an unusual feature was its completion while members sat at the luncheon tables. Miss Mary Jo Strother of the Knickerbocker Fine Arts school was introduced and played two numbers, the brilliant "Shepherd's Hey," by Percy Grainger and "Alt Wien," by Leopold Godowsky, the lovely spirit of old Vienna being interpreted beautifully by the musician in the latter number.

Civic Department

Recreation will be the topic of discussion when members of the civic department meet Tuesday at 3 o'clock, according to the announcement of the cahirman, Mrs. R. G. Scheurer. C. C. Bunnenberg, head of the city park department, will be the speaker.

Hostesses include Mesdames Van Lesley, E. B. Lehrack, Beryl Lundien, H. F. Weldon, W. R. Little, A. Kutz, Frank Kell, W. A. Stuckey, V. E. Stampfli, O. C. Somers, C. W. Stice, D. W. Wiley, P. L. Myers, H. Willis, J. E. Wolf and O. M. Smith.

Mrs. Duff Reports

Mrs. E. T. Duff gave an outstanding report of the recent state D. A. R. conference in Waco, "the city with a soul," where she said they were royally feted and dined. She quoted strongly from officers addresses, saying that, Communism was stressed as a rising tide of terror. The 1,280,000 "Young Pioneers of America," are a danger to be curbed by children of the Revolution, and the drive is urged for 1,000,000 C. A. R.

Speakers at the conference, Mrs. Duff reported, denied that the D. A. R. is a militant organization but said that it is one that believes in preparedness and is against scrapping battle ships and national defense while other nations prepare for war. Mrs. Duff said that four years ago, only 14 states had a Communist on the ballot but in the last national election, 36 states had them. Urgent request was made also that when the American flag is used in patriotic celebration, the users see that those flags are made in America.

The special work of the D. A. R. at the port of entry where they have two rooms was emphasized and work of the national organization for which local pledges were asked was given in brief resume. The lighting system at convention hall in Washington, "sunshine by day, moonlight by night," was beautifully described and the "C sharp" bell to be placed by Texas in the Valley Forge memorial hall, weighing 4,800 pounds and costing $6,000 was another patriotic memorial in which the local chapter was much interested.

Texas has 60 D. A. R. chapters with approximately 4,000 members, Mrs. Duff stated. She told briefly and vividly of the social features of the Waco conference, spoke of the monument to be financed by the C. A. R. on University of Texas grounds and mentioned the special honor paid Mrs. John Prewett when she was made honorary life member of the Texas State D. A. R. Mrs. A. H. Carrigan voiced the thought of the Major Francis Grice chapter, when on completion of the report, she said she was fully persuaded the reason no other delegates attended the meetings was because they so thoroughly enjoyed the wonderful reports brought back by Mrs. Duff.

Business Session

Mrs. E. C. deMontel, regent, presided during the luncheon and brief business session, which opened with a salute to the flag and invocation by Mrs. Carrigan. In the absence of Mrs. James P. Waggener, secretary, whose resignation was later regretfully accepted, Mrs. C. E. Deaton read the minutes of the last meeting. Mrs. Roy E. King chairman of conservation and thrift talked briefly on the patriotic education of school children as a safeguard against Communism. "If a small wedge will work for them, it will also work for us," Mrs. King said. She urged that the D. A. R. committee go into every school and see that every child knows how to salute the flag.

Amendments to the constitution to be effective at the next meeting were read and hostesses for the day announced. The beautiful decorations and delightful luncheon were arranged by the chairman, Mrs. Charles Reid and her committee as follows: Mesdames J. E. Hall, Carey Hunter, D. C. Copelin, John Hampton, Claude B. Woods, R. E. Ducker, Jouette Bonner and Miss Ruth Wilcox.

Members present Saturday were Mesdames John Waggoner, Wisthrop Rogers, Jouette Bonner, C. H. Reid, V. C. Calvin, W. E. Parshall, Eleanor D. Pace, Luke McCrory, A. H. Carrigan, E. C. deMontel, C. E. Deaton Roy H. King, Carrie E. Wilcox, E. B. Bailey, S. Y. Ferguson, Charles Borland, Kirby Naylor, Guy Rogers, John Prewett, Mary K. Hartson, N. H. Martin, J. E. H. Railey, G. PEEPS AT PEOPLE

By MRS. L. N. CASON

We heard a gentleman the other day humming "Down by the Old Mill Stream," then stopping abruptly to ejaculate, "There aren't any more old mill streams; they are all irrigation ditches now," as though that passing of a romantic phase had only just struck him.

It is something of a stride in America's pace, at any rate. Broad acres fitted for farming are of more intrinsic value than the little mills that have been supplanted by the great milling companies—even though one of our first memories is hearing our own father declare "water ground meal is best." Those little water mills have a romantic glamour on history's page, but there are few things that equal the fascination of rich soil newly upturned and the coming to life of seeds that one has himself planted.

Fields of wheat waving in wind and sunshine make one of the most beautiful pictures we have ever seen and a clean little garden holds an intrigue more subtle than golf or tennis. One could stand the recent heavy rains when he read reports stating "rains beneficial to wheat."

And now the season of Christmas is almost upon us. A season of tolerance and fellowship more truly in 1930 than for many years. We can hardly find it in our heart to feel harshly toward that some one who cut a hole in our back porch screen Saturday evening and carried away our cream and eggs even though our Sunday morning breakfast was short. We would, however, have felt more glow over it if we might have voluntarily fed a hungry person.

To go hungry must be, we know, a tragic thing. And so many unfortunates out of work are threatened with hunger now. Yet so many are more willing to cut luxury from their own diet this Christmas and give the surplus to the needy than in many years.

Study clubs of the city are cutting out the refreshment plate they used to serve and giving the equivalent toward helping the unfortunate—let us not call it "charity." That word has sometimes a harsh and bitter sound; it is not defined as it was in Paul's time as the feeling that "suffereth long and is kind."

The First Methodist W. M. S. set a precedent for a splendid work when they served their luncheon last Monday to tables filled with folk who are not in the habit of sitting down to such a delicious plate as groups of this society always serve.

The world seems to be full of people who say "I can't see how he could," or "I can't understand her," or other phrases to the same effect. There are even people in splendid health who look upon those not so fortunate as rather lacking in intellect, though when they become ill it is quite another matter.

Here at the border of the Christmas season would be so fine a time to throw off the "little town mind" and become broad as the universe. One may fall short in aims and ideals; his arrows may go crooked, but he can always aim right in the beginning. That "universal mind" would live and let live, give and forgive and above all it would make as many children as possible happy at a season like this.

Christmas stories are not complete without children. To make them happy seems somehow getting very close to God.

Envious Dr. Van Dyke
For Women Only
Lady Astor's Plan
What's in a Name?

—By EMILE GAUVREAU

Dr. Henry Van Dyke denounces the awarding of the Nobel prizes for literature to Sinclair Lewis as "an insult to America," because Lewis in his novels "scoffs at our country and its traditions." Dr. Van Dyke is old enough to know better than that. Satirists are more helpful to a nation than namy-pamby optimists who are always extolling things as they are.

To take a nation to task for its shortcomings, ignorance, vices and materialism is not to insult it, but to help it. Voltaire did not insult France. Shaw did not insult Britain with his denunciations. Men like Tuttle and Kresel do not insult New York by exposing its crimes and criminals. Dr. Van Dyke envies the art and fame of his rival who has, perhaps, less culture than the estimable professor of Princeton, but certainly has more vitality and significance.

While silly young Randolph Churchill delivers a series of American lectures disapproving of women in politics, Lady Astor plans a dinner to 36 of the most brilliant women in Great Britain. She feels that women's achievements in the past year have not been recognized. There will be no men at her dinner. Even the orchestra will be made up of women musicians.

Britain is rich in great women, numbering among them able parliamentarians, barristers, librarians and far-seeing Indian delegates. In courage, Amy Johnson, young aviatrix who flew from England to Australia, ranks with Lindbergh. Women who vote today can thank the English suffragettes who led the world in the battle for equal rights and who struck lusty blows to help their American sisters.

Linoleumville, Staten Island, has changed its name to Travis, because the citizens refuse to be "laughed at." This action should get an example for other places with uncomplimentary or uneuphonious names, such as Old Rags, Oshkosh, Squeedunk and Hicksville. If individuals enjoy the privilege, why not towns? Linoleumville sets no precedent.

A name, to some degree, should be the choice of the individual or towns that bears it. A person who feels he answers better to Gainsborough than to Ginsberg should make the change. Some names can never be remembered. That is why any number of illustrious writers adopted pseudonyms. George Sand was Madame Dudevant, nee Lucile Dupin; George Eliot was Ann Evans; Mark Twain was Samuel Clemens; Maxim Gorki was Peshkov; O. Henry was W. S. Porter; S. S. Van Dine is G. Huntington Wright.

Many persons will wonder, now that Einstein's daughter has come into the news with her marriage, how it feels to be the daughter of a great man. Is it an advantage? Are the sons of great men better off than the sons of obscure ones?

The daughter of a great man usually is fortunate; but the son of a great man is not to be envied. A woman does not resent being known as a great man's daughter; but a man would, or ought to, if he aims to make a name for himself in the world, resent it.

It is proverbial that the offspring of the great are usually ne'er-do-wells. Few instances of the sons or grandsons of famous men becoming famous themselves occur: Hazlitt a'Beckett, Landor, du Maurier, Cruikshank, John Hays Hammond, Landseer and some others. On the whole, they are nameless.

Hambone's Meditations

Copyright, 1930, by The Bell Syndicate, Inc.

The best quality of hard red winter wheat, says the department of agriculture, is produced in the United States. Is this calculated to make the Russian Reds turn green with envy?

Residents of Linoleumville, Staten Island, N. Y., have changed the name of their town to Travis. Probably because they felt they had been walked on enough.

The Coming of Santa

EACH YEAR when the odors of balsam and spruce start to spice the air, and star-shine and tinsel glow light up the humdrum streets, the old question arises: Shall bewhiskered old Santa Claus go back to the North Pole forever, or shall we let wide-eyed youngsters watch for him the night before Christmas?

But this year it is more than a mythical problem. Across the land hundreds of limp black stockings will be tacked above the fireplace or fastened to the bedpost on the magic night of nights.

Hundreds of little boys and girls will go to sleep, basking in the anticipation of the dolls and horns and round red drums that they will find in the morning. And hundreds of pairs of eyes will open in hurt surprise because Santa Claus didn't come.

The economic depression will make a good many stockings stay flat that always before have been fat.

And so the question arises again as to whether belief in the patron saint of little children shall go on.

A child's heart is so wistfully shy. It doesn't share its longings. It paints its own pictures of the toy shop in the far-off silver land where Vixen and Blitzen and all the other reindeer are waiting impatiently for the gift-bringing pilgrimage to the streets where children live. When a child is forgotten he can't understand. His mind puzzles the problem again and again. Perhaps Santa Claus didn't have his address. Maybe he didn't get his letter.

And the he decides that it is strange that so many other children weren't forgotten.

And so sometimes, unless there is someone who is very patient and understanding who will explain, a child decides that the world doesn't play fair. Santa Claus has his favorites. The child pulls on his giftless stockings, an empty feeling in his heart, and a tight little pain in his throat.

And there is nothing in all the world so pitiful as a little child who has been disillusioned.

A good many youngsters in this land are due to be disillusioned this year—unless some of the rest of us get busy and take a vow that they shall not be.

It's up to us. If we are careless and selfish, we can let things go on in their natural course—and leave a lot of helpless kids to wonder why it is that Santa Claus can't seem to find some houses. If we really get into the spirit of Christmas, however, we can make the jolly old gentleman something more than a myth. We can save a lot of children from a Christmas morning heartbreak—and, thereby, get a pretty good Christmas for ourselves, too.

Worry for a Mother

MOTHERS of adventurous young boys are bound to get some anxious moments every now and then. Adventurous young boys are that way. But consider the plight of the mother of that Cleveland lad who ran away from home recently.

This youngster wound up in Chicago, broke. He went boldly to Al Capone's house and asked for help. Capone's borther took him in, entertained him—and then called the boy's mother in Cleveland to tell her where he was!

Now imagine being a mother, with a missing son over whom you have worried for a couple of days—and being summoned to the telephone to learn that he is visiting in the home of Al Capone! Can you wonder that the lady frantically called the Chicago police? Or that her husband hopped the next airplane to Chicago to bring the boy back?

To be sure, the boy wasn't hurt; indeed, his host treated him royally. But when you consider all angles of it you can perhaps understand how it must have seemed back home.

Mother Jones

AMERICA certainly is poorer for the death of Mother Jones. This gallant old lady had had about as turbulent and active a life as any woman ever had. She began her fight for the laboring man away back in the seventies and continued it until the last few years, when extreme old age compelled her to retire. All in all, she put in a solid half century at it, and did it with an energy, a courage and a combativeness that never failed her.

Scores of anecdotes are being told about her. We like best the one that tells how she replied to a Pittsburgh judge, before whom she was brought for making a speech to mill strikers without a permit. The judge asked her who gave her the authority to speak when the police had ordered her not to. Immediately she replied, "Patrick Henry, Thomas Jefferson and John Adams!"

That was Mother Jones. She was a fine fighter and a splendid democrat. The country has lost a valuable citizen.

It's Not Finished Yet

THERE is not much that can be said about the California supreme court's second refusal to recommend a parden for Warren K. Billings; not much that can be said, for the simple reason that practically everything has already been said, over and over again.

Billings and his comrade in the 1916 bombing case, Tom Mooney, are thus due to lie in prison for a while longer yet. But no one need assume that the last has been heard of this famous case. It is not a closed issue. A tremendous number of people are firmly convinced that a monumental injustice has been done, and the California justices might as well realize that they will eventually have to look into the case again.

Speakeasy

Why, dearest, it was only yesterday
When you and I first held gay rendezvous;
I know we saw a charming little play,
At least you did, for I kept watching you;
Then, proudly as a prince, I rang a bell
That led us to a gay, alluring place,
And soon the wine was prompting me to tell
The secrets stirred by your enchanting face.
I wandered in that place the other night,
And at the very table where we sat,
A couple lolled outlined against the light,
And he was loud—and she was coarse and fat.
Then, suddenly, I felt the old, dull pain,
And I was out and in the street again!

—KID KAZANOVA.

Older Than Old

Master Samuel Fischer of the "Princess Charming" folderol relays the one about the giggle water fiend who was arguing with another bar fly in a 52d St. ether asylum where the stuff only costs four bits a convulsion.

"I've been watching you for the last hour," said one of the drunks, "and I'll betcha 10 bux you can't drink 20 drinks in a row!"

"No?" replied the other. "Well, I'll take that bet, but you must gimme five minutes." The challenger agreed. The souse left the place.

Returning five minutes later he swallowed the 20 beers and collected the bet. "Hel! Justaminit," said the loser. "Tell me something. Whereja go during that five minutes?"

"I just went across the street to another speakeasy," was the devastating retort, "and drank 20 beers to see if I could do it!"

The Reply Caustic

When Jimmy Walker, the town mayor, visited London ever so many months ago, the reporters asked him, among other things: "Why is it, sir, that you are not prompt—like our Lord Mayor?"

Jimmy smiled, and then niftied: "What else has your good Mayor to do—but be prompt?"

Add Favorites

One of the older but better anecdotes about football is Walter O'Keefe's gag. Rockne, it appears, once was instructing his crew. "It is roughness and toughness that gets you into condition," said the famous Rockne. "Try playing soccer for limbering yourselves up. Briefly the idea is this, either kick the ball or kick your opponents' shins, see?"

The crew chuckled and adjourned to the field and the whistle was blown to start them off.

The kicker, unable to find the ball, yelled: "Hey, where's the ball?"

A tough guy playing opposite him impatiently replied: "Aw, the hell with the ball—let's start the game!"

How Stars Are Made

The "Tol'able David" firm stars a newcomer stage-named Richard Cromwell, who never before appeared on the screen or the stage. He is 19 years of age. Some critics turned in sugary reports about his adroit playing. Others were less enthusiastic. The Columbia Pictures firm had exhausted the supply of all available youths in Hollywood, taking 121 tests of applicants, none of which made a favorable impression.

Cromwell ankled in one day and cornering an executive said: "I think I ought to be considered for that role—on the ground that I read the book!" This made such an impression on the executive Cromwell was signed, the executive never having read a book and so he was immensely impressed.

Cromwell's name is now in Broadway bulbs. He was engaged at $50 per week, but the legal department of the company insisted that his wage be tilted to $125 per week after it discovered that the California statutes permitted anyone to break a contract and quit who earned less than $5,000 a year.

Giving Them the Works

The Monday, Nov. 24, Philadelphia Bulletin "Personal" department contains this advertisement, among other puzzling things: "If interested in Peter Arno or Walter Winchell's works, write R-26, Bulletin."

A racket?

Bop!

Leave it to the local goat-getters to cut each other's throats for a laugh. Kelcey Allen, one of the Town Types, was being bothered by Nathan Dorfman, one of Mr. Ziegfeld's press agents.

"Aw," aw'd Nathan, "you're the type of wisecracker that carries his own audience around with him!"

"You don't say?" snapped Allen. "It wouldn't be a bad idea if some press agents I know did the same."

Sotto Voce

Fred Weston: Toothache and too many other irritations to come. So sorry. Maude Hallor: You mated "silks" with "wilts" and "given" with "seven." Unless you enclose self-addressed envelopes the wicker gets them. Frank G. Carlin: See Current Variety Literati dep't and Zit's Broadway page.

Newspaperman Stuff

The most amusing gag concerning the Park Rowgues comes from Jane Franklin, herself a typewriter destroyer. Jane tells of the unemployed reporter who, in desperation, signed up with a circus whose pet gorilla died, and for whom no substitute could be found. The reporter's job was to don a gorilla's outfit and do stunts on a trapeze.

The first night he did a single somersault in a leap from the ropes, and the applause was deafening. Then when he did a double leap — the spectators cheered. "Now," boasted the reporter, "I'm going to wow 'em with a triple leap!"

But something happened. He slipped, missed his hold, and landed in a lion's cage. The lion made a dash for him.

"Good gahd!" moaned the trembling reporter, "now what am I gonna do?"

The lion slapped a paw at him and said: "Hell! Do you think you're the only newspaper man out of a job?"

LITTLE MISS NOBODY

By VIDA HURST

"May I use your telephone, I've had a flat tire."

Dolores Graham, 26 years old, and unusually attractive to men, and Dr. Fenton, are found shot to death in each other's arms in the latter's office. Celeste, 19, and equally beautiful, is the daughter of Dolores. Because of the scandal attached to her mother's death Celeste is forced to quit her job and break her engagement to Norman Jackson.

Celeste had never been kissed until her engagement and she had held the respect of all the young people in her "crowd." After the tragedy, Harry Martin, one of Celeste's former friends, takes her for a ride. He insults her with his advances and she jumps from the car, intent upon walking home.

Dale Hamilton offers to give her a lift home in his roadster. Dale is the son of a millionaire department store owner. Thinking that knowledge of her family scandal would make Dale never see her again, Celeste decides to tell him nothing of herself. Later they go to a fashionable beach and grow rather fond of each other. To Dale, Celeste is known as "Miss Nobody."

Celeste gets another job through her former teacher at the Elite Department store. There she meets Blondie McManus, a girl the same age as Celeste in years, but much her senior in experience and sophistication. They grow rather fond of each other.

Blondie leaves the two at the table with the excuse that she has to return to the store early. Scott tries to make a date with Celeste and she refuses. Days go by and she hears nothing from Dale Hamilton. Dale happens into the office just as Scott is renewing his attempt to make a date with Celeste.

Wallace Scott, assistant credit manager at the Elite, tries to make a date with Celeste. She refuses, gets in bad with him and gets a notice that she is fired.

Russell Graham, Celeste's father, also quits his job because of the scandal. Dolores had saved some money for a rainy day. Celeste returns home to find that her father had found the money and had spent it to see a ball game.

CHAPTER XI

How much money did mother have in that box?" Celeste demanded.

Russell Graham did not lift his eyes from his plate.

"Not much. Less than $5."

Celeste did not believe him. Dolores had been saving it for a long time.

"It's a good thing you found it," she forced herself to say, calmly. "Because we're going to need it to live on."

He said, hastily, "But there was only a few dollars, I tell you. It's already spent."

Celeste rose from the table and went to the bathroom, off the kitchen. It was the only place she could hope to be alone, and she knew if she were not alone instantly she would say or do something terrible. For her father to use the money Dolores had saved and then complain because Celeste could not afford to buy anything better than "hamburgers" for his dinner was too much. Yet if she reprimanded him, what good would it do? She knew now the only way to get along with him was to cater to his whims. Give him two good meals a day, plenty of smoking tobacco and the sport page of the Evening Herald. Deprived of any of these, he became irritable and unkind.

She opened the window and looked out into the clear night. Never had she so needed her mother. The woman whose waxen face she had viewed at the morgue was not the Dolores she loved. Neither was the beauty whose pictures had smiled from Los Angeles papers. Her mother was a vivacious, temperamental creature. Sitting on top of the world one day; in the depths of despair the next. But always loving, always sympathetic, always unselfish.

Celeste knew she would never see her mother as anything but a beau-

Health and Diet Advice

These Alkaline Lima Beans

Those who are doing heavy work usually come home wishing for a heavy nourishing meal, and the tendency is to eat too many of the heavy acid-forming foods. One of the recent important discoveries in the food line is that lima beans are very alkaline-forming. If you serve lima beans occasionally you may be sure that you are serving an alkaline food which will tend to balance the acid-forming foods in your diet and so build for better health.

Dried lima beans are also rich in vitamin B which prevents pellagra and polyneuritis. They are a good winter food, being heat and energy producers. The dried lima beans are especially valuable in those places where it is hard to get fresh vegetables during the winter. When cooked, these beans have a rich, nut-like flavor. They are not expensive, and when using them the housewife cuts down the cost of the meal because they swell up by absorbing water. When you buy two cups of dried lima beans you have six cups when they are cooked.

Lima beans are more wholesome than the ordinary dried beans and they do not have as much of a tendency to form gas. Dried lima beans are a good source of protein, containing 18 per cent. However, the protein is not a complete one, and the beans should be supplemented by the use of meat, milk or eggs at some other meal of the day. Lima beans also contain a large amount of starch and those who have a tendency to gas sometimes find that the mixture of protein and starch causes excessive fermentation. This condition will not be so pronunoced if vigorous physical culture exercises are used.

When you use lima beans it is the best plan to make them the principal dish of a meal, using in addition large quantities of cooked and raw non-starchy vegetables. Lima beans may be made into a variety of hearty home dishes that taste good after a day of hard work. Here is a good basic recipe for preparing dried lima beans: In the morning after breakfast put the lima beans to soak in cold water. About a half hour before supper time drain the lima beans, cover them with boiling water and cook slowly until they are tender. This requires about 30 minutes. Add a little salt after they have been cooking 20 minutes. This recipe can be used for either large or baby limas. If you do not wish to cook the limas yourself, you can obtain them from your grocer already cooked and canned.

Lima Bean Soup

Rub two cups of cooked lima beans through a colander. Add three cups of hot water, one cup of condensed milk, a half teaspoonful of salt, and a quarter of a teaspoonful of celery salt. Mix in one tablespoonful of finely chopped parsley. Boil for about five minutes, stirring constantly. Serve with a lump of butter in each dish.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

To Keep Voice Clear

Question—Singer writes: "I am to sing at a concert and would like to know what is best to soothe the throat. While at home my voice is very clear, but as soon as I face an audience it gets clogged. This might be due to a little nervousness, but please advise me what will keep it in order for the occasion."

Answer—There is no special remedy to take which will soothe the throat, as the substances swallowed do not remain on the vocal cords. A small amount of menthol mixed with honey sometimes gives a temporary relief. It is also a good policy not to use cold water, ice cream or any other cold substance before singing and it is also wise to not eat a very large meal before your appearance. If you have a tendency to catarrh you should attempt to overcome this by following a correct fasting and dieting regimen.

Value of Greens

Question: G. H. writes: "I would like to know the value of spinach, Swiss chard, and Brussels sprouts from a medicinal standpoint."

Answer—Neither spinach, Swiss chard, nor Brussels sprouts have any medicinal value in the sense of curing disease. However, they are all alkaline-forming foods and should be used freely, with the possible exception of the Brussels sprouts, which are gas-forming with some people.

Low Blood Pressure

Question—Mrs. F. R. asks: "Will you kindly advise proper diet for one with low blood pressure?"

Answer—One with low blood pressure should live on a well balanced diet. No special foods are required, but simply good combinations, such as I suggest in my weekly menus. Increasing your physical exercise each day will do more than anything else to bring up your blood pressure.

UPSETS FEATURE WEEK'S BATTLES BETWEEN TITLE-SEEKERS

The Rambler's Corner

By FRED THOMPSON

A friend, forgetting the boundaries of delicacy, said the other day he intended writing a letter to the "Ram-buller-er" about something of great importance. In my indignation at my new name I forgot what it was he intended writing about.

The Rambuller not only caught it in the neck from this gent, but he was pierced on all sides when the results of last week's football games came in. In fact, this column set a record by having every last one of his predictions turned into so much mud.

Dalhart, we thought, would find Slaton easy pickings; Amarillo, we concluded, was certain to be whipped by Breckenridge; and Olney, we deducted, after much meditation and prayer, was better than Nocona by one, and, at the most, two touchdowns. They won by six.

When the last of the scores came before our eyes Sunday morn—the Sandy-Buckaroo score, I mean—the fact that I had been wrong on all my forecasts interfered mightily with the digestive processes usually so calm at breakfast; and after a long walk in a sour humor, the Rambuller concluded he would adopt Major Hoople as his patron saint, Egad, and also, alas!

Through with a clean confession of his sins, the Rambler will now assume his name spelled in the proper form, and will try to tell the folks of Olney and Nocona, how much he likes them; and how he was honored by the beautiful girls of Olney, dern 'em.

We had a great time at Nocona last Friday. I should have brought a quart back home with me. Now don't get evil-minded, because I mean coffee, the coffee they serve at the big Nocona restaurant just across the street from Alexander's Stoar—and I wouldn't have the spelling changed, in this instance, at all. If that's the way Mr. Alexander wants his store named there's not a store in the world that could make the stoar a store. In fact, the spelling is a relief. So many stores are just named store, and in fact looking at the same spelling all the time gets to be a bore. On the other hand, when the gentlemen of the press alighted at Nocona and saw the refreshing sign over Mr. Alexander's stoar, there was quite a roar.

The special train from Olney hauled into Wichita Falls in the middle of the night, about 10:30 a. m., and I just got on it in time. The Rambler received quite a reception. In fact, nearly everybody on the train pointed to me with disgust. Even those who came up and shook hands offered me razzberries on my predictions, and I finally got quite loaded down with the jocular fruit. However, I found a soothing atmosphere when I found Jack Williams, the Olney C.-C. mgr., and Coach Acker and Rankin Goode to talk to, because they said, poor fellow, leave him alone a little while.

But then came the biggest surprise. Jack told me to accompany him into the next coach and take a look at the Olney girls' pep squad. As we innocently entered the coach the squad roared out 15 cheers for the old Rambler and I never felt so pleased in all my fourscore years and six. They repeated the cheer as yours truly was hobbling across the gridiron before game time, trying to adjust the press table and fix up the chairs, and I nearly forgot how cold it was, so did my cheeks burn.

Well, I have a sweetheart, at last. She is Miss Olney.

How did you like the way Robert Gott and Mr. Teague and Mr. Teague's friend covered that game? I think they did a wonderful job of it. Robert, the Olney lad who told me what to write at the Chillicothe-Olney game at Chillicothe, was at my side again last Friday. He called the Olney plays and I wrote. Mr. Teague of Nocona, and a friend of his, were on the other side of the table calling Nocona plays. I spent half the time nailing my fingers back in place, as they persisted in dropping off, frozen, one by one.

If the Rambler was a mile off on his guess as to how bad the Cubs would whip Nocona, then most everybody else was too. I found only a few Olney folk who thought the Cubs would run up a big score. Chief among these was Blackie Williams, Olney cafe proprietor, who announced Olney would win by a great margin—it was so big I didn't even try to remember it, because I thought it was foolish. Jack Marcell also uttered some preposterous score that eventually came true, or just about it. Incidentally, Mr. Marcell, wanting to get a good seat so he could see everything the Cubs did, perched on the players' bench inside the lines. The cops came up and told him to beat it back where he belonged, but Marcell told them he was the team's physician. So the cops bowed politely to Dr. Marcell.

SANDIES DUMP OLD TRADITION

Oil Belt Ivy Hangs In Shreds After Two Losses

Poor old man Dope went about with the aid of a cane Sunday, barely able to stagger around after being the butt of many blows and upsets in Northwest Texas football battles last week-end.

The most stunning shock was the defeat of two Oil Belt teams by district 1 elevens. Amarillo and Pampa were the victors and Breckenridge and Ranger were the losers. Amarillo's 13 to 0 victory over Breckenridge Saturday marked the first time in the history of the league a contender from district 1 administered a walloping to eleven men from the Oil Belt in a conference game. There are still some who contend Breckenridge has the better club, and lost to the Sandies through sheer weariness. The Bucks played two stiff games within a week before meeting the Sandies, having been defeated by Ranger, and then being forced into a play-off with Cisco. The Sandies, on the other hand, won their district 1 crown in a walk, and then waited restfully for the Breckenridge game.

Pampa Looks Powerful

However, Pampa's decisive victory over Ranger Friday—the score was 38 to 0—indicated anew that there was something wrong this year in the petroleum district. The game was not a league affair, but was played merely as a test of each team's strength. The result coupled with the outcome of the Breckenridge-Amarillo game, makes one long more than ever for that post-season game Pampa and Amarillo will play, for Pampa, victors by a huge margin over a club that whipped the Buckaroos, appears more decisively than ever a stronger outfit than the Sandies.

Two other upsets, one of a negative and the other of a positive nature—occupied our best minds Sunday. Dalhart was rather a heavy favorite to win the bi-district championship from Slaton Friday, but the latter team completely reversed the prediction by whipping the Wolves, who had boasted an uncrossed goal line all season, and who had whipped everything in sight in four states. Slaton won by a touchdown, the final score being 7 to 0. The game was played on neutral ground, at Lubbock.

Slaton thereby won the right to play Olney, victors over Nocona the same day. Acker's Cubs, incidentally, furnished no mean surprise to onlookers and critics. They had been doped to win, but by the narrow margin of one or two touchdowns, Nocona having blossomed forth with one of the strongest teams in the school's history this year under able coaching of T. H. Jenkins. But lo, the Cubs won by no less than six touchdowns, the final score being 51 to 14. Nocona scored its two counters on brilliant broken field runs by Zachary and Cunningham. Zachary intercepted an Olney pass in the second quarter and sprinted 50 yards for a touchdown, and Cunningham accomplished the even more difficult feat of bucking through the line to receive a pass and coursing the remainder of the distance—60 yards—by agile side-stepping and Leland-like use of his under-pinning. Zachary booted both field goals from placement. The latter, incidentally, was the only backfielder Nocona possessed who gained consistently.

Olney Meets Slaton

Every Cub lugger, however, seemed able in this department. Goode, quarterback, and his three aides, Graves, Goldsmith and Duckworth, trotted through many a highway the Cub line opened up, and they were many. The Gilmore brothers, Braxton and William, took long and short passes from Goode to register immense gains.

Olney, in sight of its second consecutive regional championship, must fight for the distinction with the Slaton team. The game will be played in Olney Friday afternoon.

SANDIES MEET FAVORED CORSICANA TEAM NEXT

DALLAS, Dec. 7. (AP)—Of the many teams which entered in the Texas Interscholastic league race for the high school championship of Texas, only two will be left in the race next Saturday night.

Three of the eight district champions which last week entered quarter-final play were eliminated and another must be blotted out Monday when Tyler and Greenville clash in a postponed bi-district skirmish at Tyler.

Outstanding among Saturday's games was Amarillo's 13 to 0 victory over the Breckenridge Buckaroos. It was district 1's first victory over an Oil Belt team in bi-district competition and set a precedent. It further bolstered the Golden Sandies as serious contenders for the title. The Sandies next Saturday will meet the race's prevailing favorites, the Corsicana Tigers. This team Saturday crushed the Oak Cliff eleven from Dallas, 26 to 0.

The Austin Maroons registered a 34 to 15 triumph over John Reagan High school of Houston. The Austin team will meet the winner of the Tyler-Greenville fray, next Saturday, in the other of the two semi-final games.

However, the Amarillo-Corsicana game was expected by many followers of the league to decide the championship, as both teams are rated heavily superior to any of the remaining teams, either Tyler, Greenville or Austin. Dallas was favored as a neutral ground for the game although selection of a place for the meeting was undecided.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—The major leagues' "fallen arch brigade" poured into New York today to begin its annual attempt to sell a baseball player and get a baseball team in return.

Gathered here for the winter meetings of the National and American leagues, club owners and managers stood around the lobby of the Hotel Commodore and engaged in endless conversations designed to discover a second baseman who can hit, an outfielder who can field or a pitcher who can put the ball where he wants it.

Lobby Veterans

Some of the boys, such as Dan Howley of the Cincinnati Reds, Rogers Hornsby of the Chicago Cubs, and Donnie Bush of the Chicago White Sox were one up on the others. They just spent a week attending the minor league convention at Montreal where the lobby-standing record was seriously threatened a score of times. With this week of preparation behind them they felt they were in better shape both to talk and to stand than those who passed up the Montreal meetings.

There were few signs of any definite tracing attempts today. Hornsby seemed to sound the keynote when he said the Cubs were prepared to stand pat on their recent lineup, but that they, like anyone else, would be interested should good talent be offered for a reasonable consideration whether in cash or players. "The Rajah" is not worrying about one position on his infield. He intends to play second base himself.

Swelling the crowd were a number of minor league club owners and managers who spent a fruitless week in Montreal trying to dispose of some of their star playing talent. If the majors and the non-draft leagues manage to come to an agreement on the draft question, some of these sales undoubtedly will go through. Until then, however, the majors have declined to have any dealings with the non-draft circuits.

Business Starts Tuesday

No official business will be transacted by either major league until Tuesday when the National league meets. On Wednesday the American leaguers go into their annual conclave and the two leagues meet in joint session Thursday.

Monday will not be a total loss, however, for major league representatives and a committee from the minors are to go into an informal huddle on the draft dispute at 1 o'clock. The majors want the five non-draft leagues—International, Pacific Coast, American association, Western and Three-Eye leagues—to accept the universal draft. That is, they want to be able to select, or draft, at a fixed price any player from these circuits just as they do from other minor leagues.

The non-draft leagues apparently are willing to accept the draft provided the terms are generous enough. They would accept, it was said, should the majors fix the draft price in class AA leagues at around $15,000; agree to allow the minors to retain a player for two or three years before he becomes eligible to the draft; and agree to keep their hands off sand-lot and college material from which the minors, especially in the lower classification, formerly were able to recruit their talent at reasonable prices.

Lively Ball Dispute

As far as the major league meetings themselves are concerned, apparently the most troublesome question will be the lively ball. It is known some club owners are prepared to demand that some action be taken on this much discussed problem. Three distinct schools of thought will be represented if and when the question comes up.

Some would have the ball left as it is; others are in favor of deadening it to wipe out the present epidemic of home runs; still another faction would let the ball remain as it is, but would institute a system whereby balls hit into certain sectors would be limited to two or three bases rather than home runs.

Frederick Cage Teams Win Opening Games

Special to The Record News.

FREDERICK, Okla., Dec. 7.—Both games were won by the Frederick cager teams in their games Friday night with Consolidated No. 2 school on the latter's court in the beautiful new gymnasium, Coach Paul Allen's Bearcats getting the big end of a 22-17 score and Mrs. Bob Cull's girls winning 28-17. This was the first game of the season for either Frederick team but not for the Consolidated school. The Frederick boys had had only three days practice and the work displayed by them leads their admirers to believe they will again prove conference winners as was true last season.

Lineup of the boys game: Frederick—Steinbock (captain), Burt, Minyard and Fondren, forwards; E. Billingslea and C. Billingslea, centers; Addison, Sam Moore, Pritchard and Quaid, guards.

Consolidated No. 2—Anderson and Grant, forwards; Kelly, center; McClung, Bailey and Peter, guards.

SCORELESS TIE

Special to The Record News.

RULE, Texas, Dec. 7.—The Rule High school Bobcats played the town boys a scoreless football game Friday afternoon. There was much excitement throughout the game when the ball was near the goal, and several times it seemed as if one side or the other would score. Both teams played a splendid game.

The mascot of the Columbia university Lions must go before next season. It is a cub lion, and already has grown too tough for most of the football players to handle.

GRAHAM ELECTS CO-CAPTAINS

Harley and Lisle Honored By Team

Special to The Record News.

GRAHAM, Texas, Dec. 7.—The Graham High school Steers elected Ollie Harley and George Lisle as co-captains of the 1930 Steer team for the year. The plan had been inaugurated this year of electing the captain at the end of the season instead of prior to the opening. Only lettermen of last year participated in the election. Both Harley and Lisle closed their high school football careers in the game with Nocona on Thanksgiving day, and both have been outstanding stars throughout the season. Lisle has been one of the most valuable men in the Steer line. Harley started the season in the line, but was shifted to the backfield to replace Jack Wheeler when he was injured in the Bridgeport game and distinguished himself in every game. He led his team in scoring during the season, having 65 points to his credit. Other members of the 1930 squad who ended their high school gridiron careers this season include Oliver Graham, Billy Turney, Malcolm Graham, Guy Gibbs, Carl Worshal, Richard Cope, and Grady Beard.

Young County Cage League Organized

Special to The Record News.

GRAHAM, Texas, Dec. 7.—The Young County Basket Ball league was organized in Graham a few nights ago at a meeting held in the office of Houston Crump, boys work director, with representatives from several teams from various points in the county present. Others signified by letter their intention to participate in the league. Lois Cook was elected president and Harvey West vice president of the organization. Mr. Cook and Mr. West, together with Mr. Crump will comprise the executive committee of the league. A constitution was adopted.

Schedule games will begin Dec. 10 and will be played on Monday, Wednesday and Saturday whenever possible. The Albany five, winners of the Breckenridge league last year, loom as favorites in the race for title honors, but will be given strong competition. Eliasville, Ramsey Drug store, National theater, Jean and Loving have strong teams.

The schedule for the first week has been announced as follows: Wednesday, Dec. 10, National theater vs. Loving; Alexander vs. Bunger. Saturday, Dec. 13, Jean vs. Ramseygrams; South Bend vs. Guinns. Monday, Dec. 15, Albany vs. Eliasville, Colston, Herron City, Bryson and Newcastle have not definitely decided to enter the league, but will have games scheduled during the first week.

Rangers Finish Brilliant Season

Special to The Record News.

PERRYTON, Texas, Dec. 7.—The Perryton Rangers under the direction of Coach E. E. Shupe have finished a very successful season in football. In eleven contests the Rangers won 8 lost 2 and tied 1 game. One of the losses was to a class A team. The Rangers scored a total of 247 points against 92 for the opposition, and, in six of the eight winning games the opponents were held scoreless.

Eleven men on the Rangers' squad will be lost by graduation and some of the gaps will be hard to fill. Here are those scheduled to graduate: Alton Witt, Lee Tucker, Max Dean, Herbert Sanford, Giltner LaMaster, Ford Hamker, Jesse Morris, J. W. Jines, Donald Shockley, Roy Schollenbarger and Lawrence Callihan. Witt, Tucker and Shockley are backfield men, while Hamker at end will leave holes that will be hard to fill.

The following is a complete list of games played by the Rangers with the scores: Sept. 12, Pampa 53, Ranger 0; Sept. 19, Canadian 0, Rangers 39; Sept. 26, Gage, Okla., 0, Rangers 33; Oct. 3, Laverne, Okla., 0, Rangers 19; Oct. 10, Follett 7, Rangers 13; Oct. 17, Yanigans 6, Rangers 12; Oct. 31, Spearman 19, Rangers 6; Nov. 7, Borger 7, Rangers 7; Nov. 11, Stratford 0, Rangers 80; Nov. 18, Higgins 0, Rangers 31; Nov. 21, Shamrock 0, Rangers 7.

WIN AND LOSE

Special to The Record News.

JEAN, Texas, Dec. 7.—Jean second string basket ball team won a tight game from the Hunt school Juniors by the score of 10 to 8 on the local court Friday afternoon while the first string lost a hard fought game by the score of 21 to 20 to the Eliasville High school boys, on the Eliasville gym court.

Finn Eriksen, a Danish boy who never wrestled until he enrolled at Iowa State Teachers' college in 1927, will captain the mat squad for the second season.

NAVY WARNS ARMY ELEVEN

Midshipmen Plaster Favored Penn Aggregation

NEW YORK, Dec. 7. (AP)—A Navy team which has had a rather poor season sent out a trumpet blast of warning yesterday to the Cadets at West Point that they must give their best if they expect to win next Saturday's service fray. In smashing a favored Pennsylvania eleven down to a 26 to 0 defeat, the Midshipmen yesterday showed everything that they had seemed to lack before.

Penn could make only three first downs and gain only 36 yards from scrimmage while Navy made 225 yards and 18 first downs. The Midshipmen battered their rivals around all through the first half. With a pair of the supposedly weak substitutes, Tommy Hurley and "Rusty" Williams, opening things up a bit, Navy made itself some breaks and seized on them to score four touchdowns.

Although Colgate managed to keep its record against eastern rivals untarnished in New York's big benefit game, New York university shared the honors of the day by holding Len Macaluso, the nation's leading scorer, in check and giving the powerful Maroon eleven only a 7 to 6 victory.

Rain in Pittsburgh held the attendance down to 5,000 as Carnegie Tech romped to a 26 to 0 victory over Washington and Jefferson in another charity affair. Harry McCurdy, Carnegie quarterback, was the spark plug of the Tartan attack, scoring one touchdown and passing for two more.

Western Maryland completed its second season without a defeat and remained alone at the head of the eastern ranking list as the only unbeaten team as it downed Maryland, 7 to 0, in the battle for the state championship. Outplayed all through the first half, the Terrors opened a real drive in the final period and went 65 yards to send their star fullback, Koppe, across with the touchdown.

Although western Maryland was the only team in the East to get through the season without a beating, Colgate's final victory gave the Maroon a good claim on the mythical sectional championship with Army and Fordham as its leading rivals.

Rockne's Ramblers Turn Homeward After Copping Third National Title

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 7. (AP)—Football's supreme laurels—permanent possession of a trophy signifying national intercollegiate champions three times in a decade—crowned the brows of Knute Rockne's Irish warriors as they headed homeward late today. Ownership of the Rissman trophy, bestowed for winning three national titles under the Dickinson rating system, was one of Notre Dame's chief spoils from her 27 to 0 rout of Southern California yesterday.

Late today Rockne herded his Ramblers toward their home fields. The unconquered Notre Dame warrors of 1930 will arrive in Chicago Wednesday morning en route to South Bend.

The vanquished, still wondering at the amazing team which overwhelmed their best but comparatively puny efforts, remained to do naught but cheer their conquerors. The Trojans, subdued by their worst defeat since Coach Howard Jones took them in hand five years ago, heaped honors where honors were due.

"On the morning after the night before," the remark was heard often: "The Trojans were dead on their feet." Why, no Trojan supporter could say. Sports writers handed the palm to the Irish, writing down defeat to their masterful and perfectly timed work in every department, offensive or defensive, which swamped and stunned the men of Troy. The gloom on the Trojan campus was pierced by only one hope—"1931 may be another year."

Cage Training To Start at Perryton

Special to The Record News.

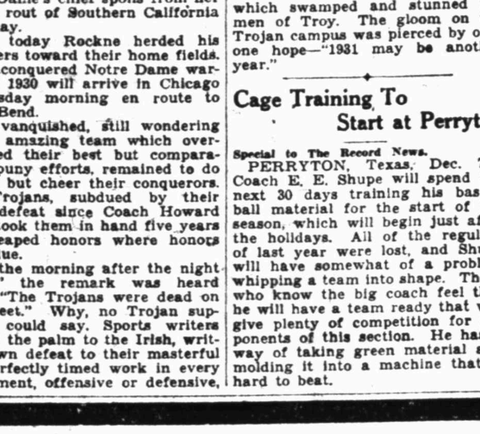

PERRYTON, Texas, Dec. 7.—Coach E. E. Shupe will spend the next 30 days training his basket ball material for the start of the season, which will begin just after the holidays. All of the regulars of last year were lost, and Shupe will have somewhat of a problem whipping a team into shape. Those who know the big coach feel that he will have a team ready that will give plenty of competition for opponents of this section. He has a way of taking green material and molding it into a machine that is hard to beat.

"TEXAS HISTORY MOVIES" — By Patton and Rosenfield

MARTIN RAPS MOB ACTION

Floral Heights Bible Class Hears Talk

Followers of certain "preachers and teachers" today should remember the counsel of Gamaliel the Pharisee with reference to the stoning of Stephen, Judge P. A. Martin told members of the Floral Heights Methodist church men's Bible class Sunday morning.

"We know such leaders," he said, "whose chief assets are the enemies they have made, and whose greatest distinction lies in the fact that a mistaken public has deigned to take notice of their presence in the world and have answered some of their ravings. When I think of them I always recall the wise words of the wise old Gamaliel who told the Jews to 'refrain from these men and let them alone.'"

"No man or set of men ever yet succeeded in crushing any movement by persecution, or by resorting to extreme measures 'outside the law.'" said Judge Martin. "It was a mob that crucified Christ, and a mob that stoned Stephen, and no mob in the history of the world ever has exhibited any judgment or common sense."

The text of his address in part follows:

"The members of the early church attempted to establish a voluntary communism, as a form of social government. They sold or gave away all they had and placing the proceeds in a common treasury they dealt out to every man 'according to his needs' the necessary things of life. While they remained a very small company this could be satisfactorily done. But when the number of Christians increased to hundreds and even thousands there came the inevitable complaints concerning the distribution of food and raiment. The people of the dispersion, that is those who though Jews, were born in foreign parts, felt that their widows were not being given as much as those of the home land of Palestine and they complained to the apostles about the matter. The apostles gave them a very fair proposition. They told them to choose seven good men of their number to look after these worldly affairs and they did so.

"The first man chosen was Stephen. His name being of Greek origin, it is supposed that he was a Jew of the dispersion, born somewhere in Greece and probably caught up in the great religious ingathering at Pentecost. Nothing is known of him however except what we gather from the simple story of his brief career as a deacon and his tragic death, as given by St. Luke in the Acts of the Apostles.

"The Record says 'they chose Stephen, a man full of faith and of the Holy Ghost.' Not being one of the apostolic college, he was what we call a layman in the early church. It is evident that he was an educated man, able to speak several languages for he disputed with the proselyte Jews and the foreign element among the people in their synagogues daily and doubtless at the same time performed all the duties of his place together with the other six who were appointed to conduct the business administration of the church. He so well defended the cause of Christ that no one could debate with him and not being able to combat his arguments, his opponents sought to destroy him by false accusations. So they reported him to the Sanhedrim for blasphemy, saying that he had spoken 'against Moses and against God.'

"And so he was brought before the Sanhedrim and called upon to defend himself. How well he did so is recorded in full in the seventh chapter of Acts. He preached to them a most wonderful sermon. He did not mince his words. He called a spade a spade. He denounced the rulers of the Jews in no measured terms. He called them 'ye stiff-necked and uncircumcised in heart and ears, ye do always resist the Holy Ghost: as your fathers did, so do ye.'

"And when they heard these things, they did not wait for him to finish his sermon. They were 'cut to the heart and they gnashed on him with their teeth; but he, being full of the Holy Ghost looked up steadfastly into heaven and said I see the heavens opened and the Son of Man standing at the right hand of God.' They stopped their ears and ran on him, put him out of the city and stoned him to death as he earnestly prayed the Father not to lay his death to their charge. And thus died the first Christian martyr. And, as is always the case, the blood of the martyr became the seed of the church. In the persecution which followed the disciples were scattered to the four winds of heaven. They ran away to the East, West, North and South and wherever they went they scattered the seeds of the gospel. So that the death of Stephen did more to carry forward the work of the Master than he could ever have done, if he had lived to the old age and died a natural death. Those who stoned Stephen laid their clothes down at the feet of a young man whose name was Saul and Saul was consenting to his death. In our next lesson we shall hear something more of this young man Saul of Tarsus, and of the probable effect the death of Stephen had upon his life and its wonderful results.

"Out of the life of Stephen, we gather that the Holy Spirit makes men eloquent, persuasive and brave. Out of his death we gather that no man or set of men ever yet succeeded in crushing any movement by persecution or resorting to extreme measures or measures 'outside the law.' It was a mob that crucified Christ and a mob that stoned Stephen and no mob in the history of the world had ever exhibited any judgment or common sense.

"There was in Jerusalem in those days a wise old counselor named Gamaliel, a member of the Sanhedrim and a teacher of great note. He was a Pharisee. And when the council was about to turn Peter and John over to the mob he reminded them of some truths that were known to them all. He said: 'Refrain from these men and let them alone: for if this counsel or this work be of men, it will come to naught but if it be of God, ye cannot overthrow it; lest haply ye be found to fight even against God.' It was his wise counsel that saved the lives of these two apostles and saved the Jewish council from two more mob murders. Persecution always strikes back like a boomerang and hurts the persecutor worse than it does the persecuted.

"If I wanted to organize some sort of a new church or a new political faith I would feel assured of success if I could first incur the hatred of all the orthodox bodies of church or state and get them to denounce my project in the most unmeasured terms, but if they let me alone and paid no attention whatever to my effort I would feel doomed to failure from the start.

"I think I could name some teachers and preachers, and some politicians as well, whose chief assets are the enemies they have made and whose greatest distinction lies in the fact that a mistaken public has deigned to take notice of their presence in the world and have answered some of their ravings. When I think of them I always recall the wise words of the wise old Pharisee, Gamaliel."

Today

At the Theaters
By ELEANOR FLEMING

MAJESTIC: Richard Barthlemess in "The Dawn Patrol." Mickey Mouse cartoon and sound news.

STRAND: "Morocco" with Marlene Dietrich and Gary Cooper. Andy Clyde comedy, Talkartoon and sound news.

STATE: Lupe Velez, William Boyd and Paul Cavanagh in "The Storm." Talking comedy and sound news.

GEM: "Alibi" with Chester Morris. Comedy.

Of all times in the year, it would be the week that "Morocco" was showing when the old eyes balked at any more movies! And so, the theater column for today is turned over to Mary Ann, of the advertising department, whose judgment is fairly trustworthy, even if she is an ad writer.

And now a talkie that is hardly a talkie at all, for "Morocco," the United Artist's production now playing at the Strand, has comparatively few spoken words. This very lack of conversation adds to the dramatic element of the picture and lends itself to the provocative silence of the desert. The best of the few spoken lines are saved for Marlene Deitrich with her accent. Incidentally, I wonder how many of our screen stars could be transplanted to Germany and perform a German role as notably as does Miss Deitrich in her American debut.

The naturalness of the setting, the slow swinging motion of the camels, the swathed natives, the shrill sensuous music of the dives, the tramp, tramp of the Foreign Legion, the deep white sands, add more than mere effect.

Miss Deitrich's costumes are practically all black and white or black and silver creations designed to set off her stately blonde beauty. For full minutes she stands and lets her audience admire her; then utterly capitulates them when she says in a quiet voice; "There is a Foreign Legion of women, too." However, her drunk scene is not so convincing. Perhaps she has not been in America long enough for that.

Gary Cooper has a swagger, dare-devil role. Although he gives an excellent portrayal as Legionnaire Brown he was probably used because he is tall enough not to make Miss Deitrich appear ungainly.

Adolph Menjou is cast in a role entirely too meek for his continental sophistication.

If I used the star system I would rate this picture a 3-star production.

The Talkartoon takes you to Mars on a skyrocket and is as exotic as the feature. Whoever directed Andy Clyde's technicolor comedy paid so much attention to the setting that he forgot he was letting the laughs go hang. Every situation was anticipated but the scenery was so gorgeous I am ready to pack up and hit for the tall timber country and find a quiet lake resort.

Little Miss Nobody

tiful martyr, utterly unlike the wanton middle-aged wife the newspapers portrayed. Leaning her hot head upon her hand, she prayed that wherever Dolores was she might understand how much her daughter still loved her. She was recalled from her reverie by the living room door banging. Contrary to the custom her father had observed for years, he had deserted his chair under the reading light.

"He must be upset," Celeste reflected, carrying the dishes to the kitchen. She decided she was too utterly exhausted to do the scrubbing as she had planned. Now that she had lost her position, there would be plenty of time for scrubbing.

She was in the midst of washing the dishes, with the sleeves of her blue smock rolled high above her elbows, when she heard the violent ringing of the apartment house bell.

"Daddy's forgotten his key," she thought, and ran to open the door, relieved in spite of her disgust to know that he was coming back.

But it was not her father who had played a devil's tattoo on the apartment house bell, but Dale Hamilton, with the familiar debonair smile on his lips and a longing in his sea-blue eyes which matched her own.

"May I use your telephone?" he begged. "I find I have a flat tire."

What matter his excuse?

"Come in!" Celeste cried.

He dropped his hat upon the center table and looked at the cheaply furnished room with unconcealed curiosity.

"So this is where Miss Nobody has been hiding?"

Now that she was with him again, Celeste felt complete control of the situation.

"You know who I am?" she said, calmly. "My name is Celeste Graham. It was at your suggestion that Mr. Sellers offered me a position."

"I didn't know that day at the beach. Did you?"

"Not until you said your father owned the Elite."

"I didn't know until I saw you talking to Wallace Scott."

"You saw me in the elevator."

"But I was unable to find out who you were or what department you worked in. It's a large store, you know, with several hundred employes, most of whom wear smart little black silk dresses."

Now that he knew, what was he going to do about it?

"Aren't you going to ask me to sit down?" he said.

Celeste did so and looked at her faded smock, wondering if she should excuse herself long enough to change it.

"Don't," he pleaded. "You're adorable just as you are. But tell me, Celeste, why are you so timid and afraid?"

She sat across the room from him in the battered leather chair which made an effective contrast to her delicate little figure.

"I'm not afraid of anyone," she denied. "But I didn't suppose you'd care to know me after you realized who I was."

"Why? Could you be blamed for the fact that your mother was murdered?"

Deliberately she repeated Norman Jackson's words, "It was only the fact that she was murdered," she said.

He interrupted, "As if that would make any difference to me!

His words were balm to her tortured pride, but she had not forgotten the formal way he had spoken to her in the elevator; nor the fact that he had made no effort to overtake her on that other day when by his own admission he had seen her talking to the assistant credit manager.

"If it doesn't make any difference why wouldn't you speak to me?"

"I couldn't without making it apparent that I was interested in you."

Celeste, small hands folded demurely on her lap, asked quietly, "And would that have been such a crime?"

"According to the orders of my father—yes! I'm permitted all the liberty I like outside the store, but no friendship of any kind—no matter how innocent—with any of the Elite employes."

Her blue eyes widened.

"Honestly? And you let him dictate to you like that?"

Dale snapped open an elaborately engraved cigarette case.

"Have one?" he offered. "No? Being dictated to, as you call it, is more or less a matter of diplomacy. The allowance my father gives me far exceeds any disappointment I may feel from regarding his wishes."

"Oh, well, of course, if that's the way you feel about it"——

"On the other hand," he assured her, smilingly, "where there's a will there's a way. Also in the words of trite but erudite wisdom, it's often easier to go around a wall than to climb over it. If you know what I mean."

Celeste didn't.

Dale Hamilton flicked the ashes from his cigaret into her father's discolored pipe-holder.

"Would you be interested in a position as stenographer for Richard Randolph Clayton?"

"Who is he?"

"My present employer—stocks and bonds—only son of a millionaire father who died leaving everything he had to his 32-year-old son. R. R. C. admits that he has need of another stenographer, and I fancy he will not be so rigid in some matters as my father has been."

Celeste gasped at the implication of these words.

"Do you mean that's the reason I lost my job? That it wasn't because the girls in the store had found out about me or anything Mr. Scott said?"

He grinned. "I don't know what Wallace Scott would have to say about it."

Celeste hesitated, wishing she had not betrayed herself, but he understood.

"So he's been telling you what a big guy he is? Listen, Celeste, the only reason you lost the w. k. job was because I asked Sellers to fire you. Ordinarily I shouldn't dare interfere like that. I haven't anything to say about who is or is not fired, but since he had made a place for you at my request it was easy enough to tell him you would not need it any longer."

She stared at him delightedly.

"You had me fired so that you could offer me this other position?"

"At $5 a week more."

"Oh, Mr. Hamilton"——

"Dale, if you please."

"Dale! How perfectly darling of you!"

No scruples entered her mind. She had secured the other position at the instigation of Dale and Mr. Tormie. Why not this one? Men had always done things for her mother and her in the old days before Dolores had been murdered. Now that she thought of it, her position at the telephone company had been secured through the assistance of Dr. Fenton, her mother's employer—and lover, she reminded herself, grimly.

But she mustn't think about that now. Think only of the delightful fact that Dale was her avowed champion. He had taken her away from the store so that he might avoid breaking his father's rule and yet continue to see her.

"Why are you so good to me?" she asked.

He tossed his cigaret into the pipeholder and came across to sit on the arm of her chair.

"Why do you suppose?"

She laughed, dimly.

"But you must know ever so many more interesting girls."

"None half so sweet as you are," he whispered.
