Council, drilling firm dig for compromise

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

A compromise on drilling oil and gas wells within the city limits — a venture that could involve dealing with poisonous gas — may have been reached between northside Midland residents and some city council members during the past month.

But the drilling firm that precipitated the changes has indicated it may lodge some complaints about the proposed ordinance, which Parker & Parsley, Inc., feels is "too restrictive."

The latest proposal will be presented Tuesday during a 3:30 p.m. session before the Midland City Council. A revised ordinance was presented to the council at its December meeting, but the mayor and councilmen couldn't agree. Residents and a representative of Parker & Parsley also requested time to study the new proposal. Since then, additional changes have been made.

However, the council had agreed the ordinance needed to be revised after Parker & Parsley first appeared before the panel in October for a permit to drill a well in 349 Ranch Estates, a subdivision east of Big Spring Street which was annexed into the city about a year ago.

UNDER THE CURRENT ordinance which allowed a well to be drilled if at least 250 feet from the nearest occupied dwelling, the company complied with all requirements. But residents objected.

In December, the company approached the council for a second permit, and it was granted.

At that Dec. 13 meeting, the council considered a revised ordinance that would prohibit drilling an oil or gas well nearer than 1,000 feet from an occupied dwelling. On Tuesday, the council will study another version that reduces the distance to 660 feet.

According to Councilman Tom Sloan, who had wanted to approve the ordinance on the 1,000 foot minimum, the lesser distance should cause residents no problem. He said the first change called for 1,000 feet from the well bore while this new version requires the entire operation to be fenced and the 660 feet to be measured from the enclosure.

"The changes we've made since the council meeting have been more restrictive with the exception of the 660 feet," he said. That distance is comparable to two football fields with end zones, or at least two city blocks.

HE ALSO SUGGESTED if a company needs to drill closer than 660 feet that it drill at an angle. "I've talked to drilling contractors and they said there's no problem drilling at a slant."

Or, he said, the companies can have the option of following Los Angeles' rules in which "you can't hear it, you can't see it, you can't smell it." There is no obvious evidence of oilwells in downtown Los Angeles but they're there, according to Sloan.

Other changes in the ordinance to be presented Tuesday include:

—Requirement of steel slush pits, instead of earthen pits, and the removal of their contents.

Odessa curbing crime count

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA - Year-end statistics show crime in a tailspin in Odessa, with all major offenses down at least 10 percent from 1982.

Nationally recognized by an anti-handgun group as the "homicide capital of America" based on 1982 stats, police point to an increase in manpower as a major factor in curbing crime.

Murder was down 11 percent in 1983, with three fewer people being killed in the city than the 27 recorded the year before.

City council authorized an increase of 45 officers for the past year. While bringing the total force to 201, it enabled the police to act — rather than react to calls from the community.

Officers have been instructed to enforce the laws more strictly. "We've got more people out there, but they are making a conscious effort," said Deputy Chief Floyd Garrett.

Areas that in the past were sometimes neglected due to shortages and more immediate problems are now regularly watched by Odessa patrolmen. Garrett said citizens have complimented the force on the visible presence of squad cars in their neighborhoods.

During the boom years, Odessa's transient population mushroomed as people from all over the country crowded the city in search of jobs created by the resurgence of the oil business.

"It took a bad situation and made it worse," said Garrett. In addition to attracting the criminal element to the job-rich area, the option of higher-paying employment shortened the list of candidates for the police force.

Many of the transients have since left, which Garrett said could have contributed to the lower crime rate. But as he noted, "Our population has not decreased that much."

Rape was down 17 percent, from 46 to 38, a decrease Garrett said might be traced to fewer transients in the city. Aggravated assault and burglary reports decreased by 25 percent in the past year.

Robberies decreased by a third, down 84 from 249 in 1982. Robbers made off with $45,000 less in their 1983 heists, and 75 percent more property — almost $900 — was recovered as investigators had time to follow up leads and make more in-depth investigations.

More murder cases were cleared in 1983 than were recorded. Police were able to clear 25 murders, one more than was added to the log during the year, for a 92 percent improvement over 1982. Investigators cleared at least double the number of rape, aggravated assault and robbery cases they had the previous year.

Auto theft dropped by 41 percent, with 337 fewer reported missing in 1983.

Statistics indicate Odessa roads were much safer in 1983. Accidents were down 30 percent, from 6,166 in 1982 to 4,337 last year. Traffic injuries and deaths declined — 17 fewer lives were lost and 616 fewer people were injured in their cars.

A key factor in the traffic improvements was the addition of 12 officers to the department's motorcycle division, bringing it to 19. Motor officers patrol Odessa streets from 7 a.m. to 11 p.m.

Officers were not as busy making arrests in 1983. While 8,080 arrests were recorded through November 1982, 7,432 arrests were made through 11 months of last year.

In tune with national awareness of DWI, Odessa police made 58 percent more DWI arrests through November 1983, compared to the same period in 1982. "Drunks have accidents. Drunks hurt people," said Garrett.

The one-year turnaround in the crime rate is encouraging, but Garrett did not promise to eliminate crime here.

"Every city has its resident criminals," said Garrett. "You're not going to stop all the crime in Odessa, just like you can't stop crime in Midland. It's going to happen."

Midland officials hope rate will 'break even'

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

Although figures on last year's overall city crime rate are still being compiled, preliminary statistics on the five major offense categories indicate Midland will be lucky if the final tally for 1983 doesn't exceed the 1982 level.

"I hope the overall rate stays at least even with 1982's," said Police Chief Wayne Gideon. "Of course, I would hope for a decline, but it doesn't look like we're going to get it."

The five major categories are homicide, rape, robbery, assault and burglary.

While there were nine fewer homicides in 1983, rapes increased by seven; robberies were up by eight; assaults decreased by 66; but burglaries surged by 141.

Eight homicides were recorded in 1983, compared to 17 the year before. Rapes for 1983 stood at 39, with 32 reported in 1982. The robbery figure was 83 last year and 75 in 1982. Assaults went from 351 in 1982 to 417 during 1983. And burglaries rose from 2,287 in 1982 to 2,428 last year.

The 1983 clearance rate for those five categories averaged 81 percent, according to Gideon.

Texaco's bid carries tales of its own

By ROBERT BURNS
AP Business Writer

■ Getty favors takeover — Page 6G

NEW YORK — Texaco's stunning $10 billion bid to swallow Getty Oil Co. speaks billions about the profound changes under way in the oil business.

Texaco's takeover offer — by far the largest in history — is dramatic evidence that even the biggest and most far-flung American oil companies consider it more attractive to buy oil reserves on Wall Street than to drill for them.

And Getty's willingness to be gobbled up demonstrates the intense pressure felt in the boardrooms of oil companies influenced by members of founding families.

Any binding agreement, however, has been blocked until noon Monday by Superior Judge Richard P. Byrne in Los Angeles. Byrne required Getty to give one of the attorneys for Claire Eugenia Getty, a granddaugher of J. Paul Getty, details of Texaco's takeover bid by noon Saturday.

The judge gave the attorney, John Walker, the right to approve the Getty-Texaco merger on behalf of Ms. Getty by Monday morning.

It was the maneuvering of Gordon Getty, sole trustee of the Sarah C. Getty Trust and the youngest surviving son of J. Paul Getty, that led to Texaco's takeover bid. Getty management, led by chairman Sidney Petersen, had sought to retain control.

At Superior Oil Co., Howard Keck, son of the company's founder and until recently one of its top executives, is inviting a takeover despite the opposition of Superior management. Superior is one of the most successful U.S. oil producers.

To help explain this tumult in the oil patch, experts point to geology: Many oil companies simply are not finding new oil fields as fast as they drain existing ones.

Texaco, for example, saw its worldwide oil reserves plunge 59 percent between 1978 and 1982. If its deal with Getty is completed, it will double its reserves in one stroke, as well as expand its total assets by 37 percent. Using the commonly accepted measure of annual sales, Texaco would remain the nation's third-largest oil concern, behind industry leader Exxon Corp. and No. 2 Mobil Corp.

The usually conservative, slow-moving Texaco burst into the Getty powr struggle last week, first with a deal to buy just the 11.8 percent of Getty's stock held by the J. Paul Getty Museum for nearly $1.2 billion. Within hours, it had won approval from Getty directors on a bid for 100 percent of the company's stock. Texaco reportedly offered $125 apiece for Getty's 79.1 million shares, or $10 billion. Getty shares closed at $104.375 on Thursday but were not traded on Friday.

U.S. officials: Israel thinking about unilateral withdrawal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reagan administration officials believe Israel is considering a unilateral troop withdrawal from Lebanon, giving up a demand that Syrian troops also pull out. They say American peacekeeping forces might leave even before the Israelis.

There is a growing feeling here, U.S. officials confirm, that both the United States and Israel are resigned to achieving what they can in Lebanon in the near future and then getting out before such issues as a Syrian troop withdrawal and a new political structure for Lebanon are resolved.

But one official said Syria has signaled in its recent conduct in Lebanon that it will avoid a direct challenge to Israel and that it will restrain Palestinian guerrilla forces under its control. The officials discussed the outlook in Lebanon on the condition they not be identified.

Final decisions on withdrawals haven't been made, but an agreement now being negotiated in Lebanon to extend the authority of the government of President Amin Gemayel outside Beirut is seen as a crucial element in the U.S. and Israeli strategy.

Before withdrawing, Israel wants to be sure that the Lebanese government can be counted on to maintain control over southern Lebanon to prevent terrorist attacks across the border into Israel. The United States is committed to improving the skills of the Lebanese police and army to give them that capability.

Officials are satisfied at the progress so far in rebuilding Lebanon's army and police force.

An administration official said the danger to Israel has been considerably eased by the withdrawal of the Palestinian guerrilla forces loyal to Yasser Arafat, and that the Syrians helped force Arafat out for that reason.

"The Syrians understand the Israeli 'red-lines,'" said one official. "Israel will tolerate Syria, but finds the Palestinian presence intolerable."

No more than 4,000 Palestinian guerrillas remain in Lebanon and they are "totally dependent" on Syria, which seems not to want to provoke Israel, the official said. In fact, he suggested Syria may insist that the guerrillas pull back to Syria's borders. There are reports this is already happening.

The official said it is significant that Israel and Syria have not clashed in Lebanon for many months.

Two Marines wounded in new fighting

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Two U.S. Marines were slightly wounded today as a new outbreak of fighting spilled over onto their camp at Beirut airport. In Damascus, Druse leader Walid Jumblatt said a new peace plan was "not acceptable" as it stands, and refused to meet with the government and rival militias.

In Sidon, Lebanon, witnesses said two Israeli tanks rumbled through the streets, firing machine guns at parked cars, ramming other vehicles and injuring about 10 people in two sweeps of the southern port city. A military spokesman in Tel Aviv denied Israeli tanks were involved and said he believed reports of the incident were an "invention."

A statement from the Marines said the two Americans suffered "minor" injuries when a shell landed near them on the southeast edge of camp during an artillery exchange between Lebanese army positions just south of the Marine base and Druse militiamen in the hills to the east.

Seven Lebanese army soldiers were wounded during the fighting at Khalde, just south of the airport, and at army positions east of Beirut.

Although Jumblatt said he would not meet with the opposition delegates who went to Damascus to discuss the new peace plan, a representative of Jumblatt's Syrian-backed Progressive Socialist Party and one from the allied Shiite Moslem Amal militia were to take part in talks.

Lebanese army intelligence Chief Col. Simon Kassis was to join representatives of the Phalange Party and the Christian Lebanese Forces militia in Damascus for the negotiations over the Saudi-mediated peace proposal, which aimed to separate the many warring factions in Lebanon and set up a stable cease-fire.

But Jumblatt said that delegation had not arrived from Beirut. Sources in the Lebanese opposition said earlier that the men had arrived.

Jumblatt was asked by reporters what he thought of the security plan. He replied "not acceptable," then added "this is because the essential points are still to be discussed." He didn't elaborate on what he considered the essential points to be.

Jumblatt, who earlier had said a political settlement would have to follow the security plan, declared today, "nothing can be achieved without a prior political settlement."

Beriut newspapers said Syrian and Saudi Arabian mediators were holding new rounds of talks in Damascus today with the anti-government militia leaders to try to sort out last-minute hitches in the plan.

In Sidon, Associated Press reporter Ahmed Mantash said pedestrians dived for cover as the two Merkavas tanks, each with three crew members on the turret, raked parked cars on both sides of Sidon's streets with machine gun fire.

He reported by telephone that soldiers in Israeli uniforms were visible in the turrets, and said injuries suffered were minor — from ricocheting bullets or flying glass.

About 25 cars were destroyed during the sweeps, but the tanks did not shoot at passenger-filled cars in Sidon nor at those waiting in line at the Awali River bridge to enter southern Lebanon, Mantash said. The Israeli front line in Lebanon is along the river.

U.S. troops 'lightning rod for terrorism'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Calling U.S. troops in Lebanon a "lightning rod for terrorism," Rep. Robert Matsui, D-Calif., said Saturday they should be removed from the Middle East immediately.

Matsui, a member of House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill's Ad Hoc Lebanon Monitoring Group, made his remarks in the weekly Democratic radio address.

"The president's ill-conceived and ill-defined Middle East policies have more than failed," he said.

Kremlin hardens public stance on missile talks

MOSCOW (AP) — The Kremlin on Saturday strengthened its hard-line public stand on the disrupted medium-range arms talks, vehemently rejecting Western hopes that the Soviets might soon return to the Geneva bargaining table.

The Communist Party organ Pravda accused U.S. and West German officials of lying about the course of the talks, dismissed NATO's bargaining position as "absurd" and repeated the Soviet refusal to resume negotiations unless the Western allies agree to roll back the NATO missile deployment program.

Pravda said: "The contentions by American and some West European officials that the Soviet Union is on the verge of 'returning to the talks'...are nothing but attempts to deceive the peoples and absolve themselves of responsibility for the torpedoing of the talks."

Quoting President Yuri V. Andropov's Nov. 24 statement on the Soviet walkout at Geneva, it said the Kremlin would think about resuming negotiations only "if the United States and other NATO countries display readiness to return to the situation that existed before the beginning of the deployment of American medium-range missiles in Europe."

The harsh attack on Western nuclear policy was part of a Soviet campaign that seeks to blame the United States and its allies for the Soviet walkout from the Geneva negotiations last Nov. 23.

Like all such Soviet commentary, which Western analysts believe is aimed in part at fostering West European opposition to the NATO missile program, Pravda's article included warnings about the "danger" of continuing the program.

The Soviets' campaign also appears aimed at the Stockholm security conference that begins Jan. 17. The Kremlin, which usually takes a tough stand before such meetings, has been trying to place the burden for compromise on the NATO countries.

Nigeria's oil-fueled boom out of gas

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — The signs are everywhere. Nigeria's oil-fueled boom has gone bust.

The days when foreign businessmen crowded the lobby of the Eko Hotel are over. For years visitors had to make pre-paid hotel bookings months in advance in order to be sure of a room. Now you get a room if you just walk up and ask.

Nigeria is the second-largest foreign supplier of oil to the United States behind Saudi Arabia, and depends on petroleum exports for 90 percent of its hard currency earnings.

Last year those exports earned $5 billion, less than half what they did in 1979 when a civilian government was sworn into office after 13 years of military rule.

That government, headed by President Alhaji Shehu Shagari, was overthrown Dec. 31 in a military coup.

The senior army officers who head the new regime are pledged to clean up an ocean of graft and corruption they say grew in the freewheeling days when Nigerian light crude fetched a premium $42 a barrel.

A glut on the international oil market and a subsequent decline in oil prices has meant this West African nation of 90 million people has much less money to spend on imports and industrial projects.

It also has almost no money to run its schools, hospitals and other public institutions.

In his first news conference after seizing power, head of state Maj. Gen. Mohammed Buhari last Thursday called on international creditors and the International Monetary Fund to help bail Nigeria out of its financial straits.

Buhari said he did not want to "mortgage our economy to any country or anyone else" in order to meet service payments on the country's $14 billion foreign debt.

But he acknowledged Nigeria is in no position to contest conditions demanded by foreign financiers or the IMF, including a devaluation of the naira, the country's currency.

"...Perhaps we have no alternative other than to accept some unpleasant terms to make sure we continue to obtain raw materials, at least to get the factories up again and people employed so that they can live a resourceful life," he said.

In 1970, oil accounted for 20 percent of federal revenue. That figure reached 90 percent by the end of the decade and much of Nigeria's traditional agriculture-based export sector was in shambles.

Nigeria grew enough food to feed itself when it gained independence from Britain in 1960, but now it imports such staples as rice to feed its burgeoning population.

Over the past decade, young people dreaming of quick riches abandoned their villages and swelled the population of Lagos, a teeming city now squeezed onto several small islands and the surrounding mainland on the lagoon separating the capital from the Atlantic Ocean.

With the oil boom came rampant corruption.

Nigerian go-betweens demanded and got up to 20 percent on bids won by international contractors. With more revenue at their disposal, critics say, federal and state political figures sought to expand their influence through patronage and speculation.

Lagos landlords charged foreign businessmen three years' rent in advance on offices and homes, and every service had its price.

Cloudy skies cover Texas

By The Associated Press

Mostly cloudy skies and mild temperatures prevailed over Texas on Saturday, except for the Panhandle which had sunshine.

The weather pattern was still being controlled by a weak high pressure system, but an upper-level system produced all the clouds, said the National Weather Service.

Most of the state had high temperatures in the 60s, except for the coast and South Texas, where highs were reported in the 70s.

Winds were variable at 5 to 10 mph statewide.

Overnight lows were expected to dip into the 30s in the north with 60s for the low in South Texas. The weather service said the clouds would become thicker, creating a chance of showers scattered over most of the state except the Panhandle by Saturday night.

Law enforcement officials hope crime rate will 'break even'

Midland did achieve an apparent first during 1983, however, in that there were no reported armed robberies during the holiday season — traditionally the time of year such offenses go up dramatically.

"It's very unusual," said Gideon, who has more than 20 years' tenure with the department. "I can't recall it ever happening before that we didn't have at least one or two robberies at Christmas."

Eight commissioned officers were added to the personnel roster in 1983, with their total strength now standing at 167 — about 12 of whom are assigned to Air Terminal.

"While no police force ever has enough officers," said Gideon, "I don't think additional personnel is the whole answer. So we've been emphasizing other avenues of crime reduction — the crime prevention program, along with vigorous enforcement and prosecution.

"I think the biggest deterrent is still swift and sure punishment."

In addition to homicide, rape, robbery, assault and burglary, other crime categories include theft, forgery, auto theft, theft of service, vice, arson and vandalism.

A complete compilation of the 1983 crime rate isn't expected to be ready until February or March.

Farmers suffer EDB-related ills

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — From peanut planters in Florida to pineapple growers in Hawaii, U.S. farmers are suffering withdrawal pains after the ban on the effective but dangerous pesticide ethylene dibromide.

"The alternatives to EDB are more expensive and less effective," said Bruce Hawley, assistant director of the American Farm Bureau Federation in Washington.

In addition, some farmers say, supplies of alternative pesticides could fall short because of sudden heavy demand and producers' failure to anticipate the ban on EDB.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency suspended EDB as a soil pesticide Sept. 30 after it was discovered in drinking water in Florida, California, Hawaii and Georgia.

The agency announced intent to cancel EDB as a fumigant for stored grain as well, but that action has been delayed for hearings.

In Washington, pressure has been building on federal regulators to set a tolerance level for EDB because researchers in Florida found traces of the pesticide in national brands of grain products.

On Friday, Texas officials announced that researchers had found EDB in one-third of 86 products tested. In addition, federal scientists backed up the Florida tests.

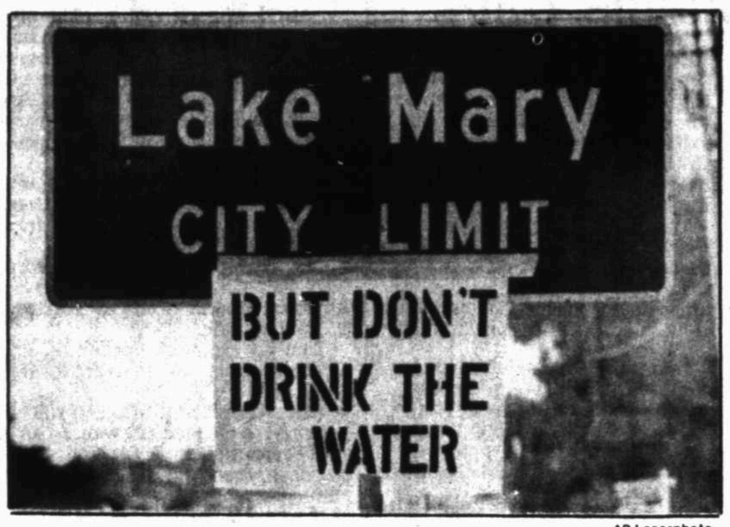

"The Florida results are not at all at variance with ours," E.L. Gunderson, a chemist at the U.S. Food and Drug Administration in Washington, said Friday.

The EPA has said it would offer guidelines on acceptable food residue levels by the end of the month. The agency knew in 1974 that laboratory animals developed cancer after exposure to EDB. In 1980, the agency predicted it would show up in food. No steps to curtail its use were taken until four months ago.

"I think we've been slow in regulating EDB," EPA administrator William Ruckelshaus said Thursday while visiting the agency's office in Dallas. "It is bad stuff and it is a very potent carcinogen, but we don't have any evidence that it has harmed anyone — nor do we have any that it hasn't."

Last month, Florida Agriculture Commissioner Doyle Conner stopped sale of 76 individual wheat and corn products containing 1 part per billion or more EDB, a standard recommended by state Health Officer Stephen King.

Using results of the EPA tests on rats and mice, King testified in federal court Dec. 23 that EDB was among "the most potent carcinogenic compounds in our environment today."

A sign of the times offers travelers on U.S. Highway 17-92 at Lake Mary, Fla., a warning about EDB. The city of Lake Mary draws its water from Snaford, Fla., where six wells tainted by the pesticide EDB have been closed.

The FDA tests indicated up to 386 parts of EDB per billion in stored wheat. A sample of whole oats contained 30,700 parts per billion.The researchers also found traces of EDB in processed grain products, such as wheat flour.

The products whose sales were halted in Florida included corn meal, flour, cake mixes, popcorn, hush puppies and grits, and the action brought a lawsuit — still pending — from the Grocery Manufacturers of America Inc.

Since then, other states, including Georgia, Massachusetts, North Carolina, Ohio and Texas, have announced plans to check food samples.

On Friday, California officials announced plans to test Florida oranges and grapefruit. Florida citrus bound for California, Texas, Arizona and Japan is fumigated against spread of the Caribbean fruit fly, which has infested parts of Florida.

If the federal government adopts King's 1-part-per-billion threshold, perhaps 25 percent of America's stored grain would be considered unacceptable for market, said the Farm Bureau. Farmers say that despite U.S. grain surpluses, such a loss would seriously disrupt the chain of production and raise prices of grain products.

Emergency federal action against EDB and the prospect of further restrictions have crystallized a national dilemma: Consumers expect affordable food, but they don't want contamination from farm pesticides that are needed to control destructive insects.

Farmers say they're caught in the middle.

"You can't blame the farmer," says Florida Agriculture Commissioner Doyle Conner. "They had no way of knowing EDB would create problems."

Before it was suspended three months ago, EDB was an unrestricted pesticide with widespread use in agriculture. It has been used on cotton, tobacco, citrus fruits, soybeans, peanuts, potatoes and pineapples. It has also seen post-harvest use on shipped fruit and stored grain and in milling operations.

"It's been accepted for years, and then, all of a sudden, we get a cannon shot across the bow," said Jack Angell, a spokesman for the Farm Bureau in Park Ridge, Ill.

Since 1961, EDB has been a key weapon in Florida's program to fight nematode rootworms in citrus groves.

Now, the citrus industry must turn to other anti-nematode pesticides, such as Temik. However, Temik has been found in Florida drinking water, despite assurances from its producer, Union Carbide, that it would dissipate from the soil as a gas and never enter water supplies.

Because of the contamination, Florida has restricted Temik in three ways: it can be applied only in the dry season, Jan. 1-April 30; it cannot be applied within 300 feet of a drinking water well, and its annual dosage has been cut in half from the label rate, from 67 pounds per acre to 33.

Fruit shippers can still use EDB as a post-harvest fumigant, but the federal government has proposed cancellation.

"We really don't have anywhere to turn to at this point," said Jim Emerson at Seald-Sweet, a major citrus exporter based at Tampa. "And we're under a directive from a foreign government, Japan, to certify that Florida citrus exports are insect free."

The citrus industry is exploring "cold storage" — lowering the temperature in shipments by sea — but the technique hasn't been perfected.

Grapefruit picked early in the season are susceptible to chill damage caused by cold storage treatments en route to Japan, said Emerson.

In Hawaii, the papaya industry is "working feverishly to come up with an alternative" for treating fruit for export, said Lyle Wong, chief of the state Department of Agriculture's pesticide branch.

Researchers have suggested alternating hot and cold treatments in attempts to kill insect eggs and larvae, said Robert Souza, director of the Papaya Administrative Committee.

Another possible substitute to post-harvest pesticide fumigation is gamma radiation to kill fruit flies, but agriculture leaders acknowledge this might be unpopular with consumers.

Hawaiian pineapple growers have turned to an alternate soil pesticide known as Telone II. Wong said it was not considered as effective as EDB.

"Telone II is more expensive," said the Farm Bureau's Hawley, who also questioned its effectiveness in clay soils. "EDB was cheaper and more flexible because it worked under a variety of soil and climate conditions."

The Colorado Forest Service uses EDB to fight the mountain pine beetle, which "can kill up to 90 percent of the trees on a given hillside or drainage," said John Laut of the forestry agency.

Infested wood is cut, piled and covered with plastic to form "tents" with EDB inside. Under the federal order, the forest service may use the pesticide until September, and Laut is worried that Colorado's pine beetle program will be hurt after that.

A likely alternative, a pesticide called Lindane, is less efficient than EDB, he said.

News spreads from Sunshine State

By KEN KLEIN
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Florida, the nation's top tourist destination that spends millions promoting its good-time image, seems an unlikely prospect to alert America about toxins in food and water.

But for six months, the Sunshine State has been serving up bad news about a suspected cancer-causing pesticide called ethylene dibromide, or EDB.

Dismayed by lack of federal standards and alarmed by discoveries of EDB in food and drinking water, Florida officials have adopted the toughest restrictions in the nation.

"We were the only ones out there," says Florida Agriculture Commissioner Doyle Conner, the dean of the nation's state farm officers.

Conner suspended EDB as a soil pesticide Sept. 16 — two weeks before the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency took similar action.

Worried that the Sept. 30 federal suspension didn't cover EDB supplies already sold, Conner issued a permanent state ban Oct. 7.

In December, Florida was the first and only state to stop sale of nationally marketed grain-based products after state researchers found small amounts of EDB in food.

Other states, including Ohio, Georgia and North Carolina, have announced plans to check food samples in the wake of discoveries in Florida.

Florida's ban on certain corn and wheat items, which prompted a lawsuit filed by the food industry, has added pressure on the Reagan administration to set federal tolerance levels in food.

Federal environmental officials assured Florida leaders last week that the national government would recommend consumption standards by late January.

Why did Florida view the EDB problem with such urgency that it interrupted the marketplace and inspired the wrath of American food producers?

"There is a special sensitivity in Florida because of finding EDB in our drinking water, the surrounding publicity and the inquiry by the Legislature," said Conner.

His agency, which had used EDB in a program to control nematode rootworms in citrus areas until July 29, found the pesticide in groundwater last July. That was shortly after Conner learned of similar water contamination in California.

Since then, reports of EDB discoveries in new wells have been nearly a daily feature in Florida's press.

Meanwhile, critics had accused Conner of footdragging on regulation of pesticides, suggesting that he was too closely tied with agri-business.

"Doyle has done bad job," charged House Community Affairs Chairman Sid Martin, D-Hawthorne, in early November.

Martin questioned the wisdom of allowing the state's agriculture department to continue to regulate pesticides, giving Conner political motivation to take a tough regulatory position.

Conner denied political motives inspired his controversial ban on food containing traces of EDB.

His stop-sale orders, he said, were based on a recommendation from State Health Officer Stephen King that food with 1 part per billion or more of EDB should not be eaten.

King, a veteran public-health expert, testified in federal court Dec. 23 that EDB is among the most potent carcinogenic compounds in today's environment.

A food producer group asked a federal judge for a temporary restraining order against Florida. The request was denied but a constitutional challenge of the stop-sale orders is pending.

"It's a day's work," said Conner, referring to his crackdown against food with EDB. "We did not go at anyone with any vendetta. There are minimums to be met ... it's that simple."

But the food industry protests that Florida's 1-part-per-billion standard is much too strict and accuses Conner of mounting a politically motivated campaign of fear.

"The problem of water contamination in Florida cannot be solved by placing stop-sale orders on food products," said George W. Koch, president of Grocery Manufacturers of America Inc., a group that challenged Florida's stop-sale directives in federal court.

"By addressing the EDB problem this way, Florida authorities are not only misleading the Florida consumers ... but are unnecessarily alarming the people of Florida regarding the safety of their food supply."

Conner said he doesn't enjoy upsetting America's food industry, which he calls the world's best. One reason, he said, for the industry's international respect is adherence to strict rules against contamination.

Conner acknowledged that 50 state standards on EDB tolerance in food would be an unreasonable burden on commerce.

"The day there's a national standard, Florida will adopt it," he said.

Drilling firm calls compromise restrictive

—Giving the council 30 days to act on applications rather than 20.

—Removal of any caliche drilling pads as part of the cleanup operation.

—Compliance with Railroad Commission.

In a Dec. 28 memo to Mayor G. Thane Akins and the council, City Attorney Joe Nuessle noted that wells being drilled east of Midland contain "a very deadly poisonous gas."

That gas is hydrogen sulfide, according to a spokesman with Railroad Commission in Austin. "It's not uncommon to find hydrogen sulfide associated with the area around Midland. Most of the wells out there have various amounts."

THE SPOKESMAN said when an application to drill a well in a formation with known hydrogen sulfide is filed, the RRC imposes a set of requirements on the operator to make sure none of the gas escapes.

Sloan said that gas is one reason he supports the longer distance from residences. Hydrogen sulfide has no odor, he said, "and it just zaps you. Once you have that gas in your operation you've got to be careful."

Akins, who approves of the lesser distance requirement, is a petroleum engineer and agreed the gas is common in West Texas. While it can be found often in the San Andres formation, it's rare in the Sprayberry, he said.

"I don't believe it's a concern on these particular wells," he said of Parker & Parsley's operations.

J. Michael Cunningham, attorney for residents in 349 Ranch Estates, reviewed the proposed ordinance with some of the property owners Friday afternoon and said the proposal "basically is fine. But there are a few things we want to bring up to the council."

THOSE ITEMS include:

— Requiring nearby residents be notified by registered mail when a permit is being sought,

— Establishing safety aspects in case of a poisonous gas leak.

— Requiring slush pits to be filled in and all electrical lines buried.

Even without these amendments, Cunningham said the proposed ordinance "is much better than what we have now. I'm sure we can live with it."

But Parker & Parsley don't agree. In a letter written Jan. 4 to the mayor and council, vice president of operations J.D. Moring asked the panel to consider "the economics of the situation if a permit to drill is denied or aborted because of adoption of the ordinance." The company had asked for a minimum distance of 300 feet, and that the well-bore — not the fence — be the point for determining minimum distance.

The fact that Midland's economy is based on petroleum isn't lost on Sloan, who admitted he makes most of his living from that industry.

"But you've got to protect the community as well. We want to have a working system to accommodate development of oil and gas. But we've gotta protect the quality of life."

Texaco's bid for Getty indicative of changes

The Sarah C.Getty trust, named for J. Paul Getty's mother, holds the largest block of Getty Oil stock — 40.2 percent. Forty-eight percent of the stock is publicly held.

Pennzoil Co., a smaller oil company that also is looking to increase its oil reserves, had won a deal to share control of Getty with Gordon Getty in a deal valued at about $5.2 billion. Texaco acted only two days later.

For now, Getty has agreed to be taken under Texaco's wing, but analysts note the deal may face court challenges as well as a government antitrust review.

Although the timing probably was a coincidence, Texaco was among a group of oil companies that learned just one month ago their nearly $1 billion drilling project off the north coast of Alaska was a bust. That project, known as Mukluk, had been considered by oil experts as the premier prospect in North America.

"The failure of the Mukluk effort has led people to speculate that we've found all the major new oil fields we're going to find in North America," said Bruce Lazier, who follows the oil business for investment firm Prescott, Ball & Turben.

With the risks of oil exploration in such harsh environs as Alaska appearing larger with each new failure, oil companies find it more economic to fatten their oil reserves by plunking down billions for one of their competitors.

In 1981, Mobil tried unsuccessfully to buy oil producer Conoco Inc. in a heated bidding war eventually won by Du Pont Co. The winning bid in that fight, $7.6 billion, had been the biggest takeover in history before Texaco's deal.

Mobil lost out a year later to U.S. Steel Corp. in a multi-billion dollar fight for control of Marathon Oil Co. A few months later, Occidental Petroleum Corp. paid $4.2 billion for oil producer Cities Service Co., and last year, Phillips Petroleum Co. bought General American Oil Co. of Texas for $1.2 billion.

It is noteworthy that each of these massive deals came at a time when the American oil industry was still celebrating the lifting of government price controls, said Daniel Yergin, president of the energy consulting firm Cambridge Research Associates.

The industry had long contended that if it were freed of government price and product-allocation controls — as it was in January 1981 — it would stand a better chance of finding new oil fields that could reduce U.S. dependence on imported oil.

Although the industry has scored some successes in recent years, the prospecting has been "pretty darn disappointing in many instances," Yergin said.

COoerned that any significant oil finds will be few and far between in the years ahead — not to mention extraordinarily expensive — more and more of the industry's leading producers are expected to attempt to follow Texaco's takeover strategy.

Contadora group meets to discuss regional peace plan

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Foreign ministers of the Contadora group and Central American countries gathered Saturday to discuss a peace plan at a time when the region is more troubled than at the start of the peace effort a year ago.

Although progress in the talks has been glacially slow, the effort by the Contadora group — Mexico, Colombia, Venezuela and Panama — is the only widely seen hope for a peaceful settlement of Central America's conflicts and has kept the opposing sides talking.

The opening of the weekend meeting was delayed until midday Saturday by the late arrival of Colombia's foreign minister, Rodrigo Lloreda.

The officials are to discuss a plan submitted two weeks ago on how to carry out the Contadora process, emphasizing demilitarization of the region.

In addition, four of the five Central American nations are to present a proposal that emphasizes elections.

That plan, sponsored by El Salvador, Guatemala, Costa Rica and Honduras, was announced Friday night by Honduran Foreign Minister Edgardo Paz Barnica.

On Saturday, Foreign Minister Miguel D'Escoto of Nicaragua — the only Central American nation not party to the plan, called it "a rejection" of the Contadora process.

Among other things, the proposal calls for free civilian elections, which would exclude military political parties or those based on popular militias such as exist in Nicaragua.

Commenting on the proposal submitted two weeks ago, D'Escoto said some parts of it "will have to be fixed," but did not say what Nicaragua's objections were.

A third proposal was expected to be presented by Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government, but no information on that plan was immediately available.

The meeting is expected to end Sunday or Monday. It is the fifth time the foreign ministers of the nine countries have met here in the past year to try to work out a solution to regional tensions.

All five Central American nations express faith in the Contadora process, aimed at decreasing militarization of the region, removing foreign military advisers and establishing democratic governments.

Last September, the five Central American nations agreed in principle to a 21-point Contadora plan.

The plan includes a moratorium on arms acquisitions in the area after Feb. 29 and an inventory of arms aready there. It also includes:

— A timetable for the phasing out of foreign military advisers

— Plans for free, broadly-based elections

— Identification and suppression of "irregular forces".

Rebels attack Nicaraguan base

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — In fighting in the region, a plane and two boats attacked a major Nicaraguan military base south of Managua — the first such rebel attack — a military source said today. There were no immediediate reports of casualties.

Meanwhile, Thomas Pickering, U.S. ambassador to El Salvador, said Friday he was "very pleased" with efforts by the U.S.-backed Salvadoran government to control human rights abuses by the military.

Earlier this week, El Salvador reassigned to diplomatic posts abroad two former intelligence officers who had been linked to rightist death squads, thought to be responsible for most of the 39,000 civilian deaths in the four-year civil war.

In Nicaragua, meanwhile, a military source said rebels attacked the Montelimar military base Friday night and early today with a plane and boats.

Lt. Claudia Obregon, a spokeswoman for the Defense Ministry, confirmed an attack occurred, but gave no details. The base is located 37 miles south of Managua on the Pacific coast.

The military source, who asked not to be identified for security reasons, said the plane and boats were unidentified, but apparently were manned by rebels fighting the leftist Sandinista government.

It was the first rebel attack on a military base, although they have bombed ports where oil is unloaded. The base, with the country's largest airport runway, is believed to be the country's largest and most important.

In El Salvador fighting, four rebels in a red Datsun sprayed submachine fire Friday on five soldiers guarding an electric company office eight blocks from the U.S. Embassy in San Salvador.

Cpl. Victor Manuel Flores said one soldier was badly wounded in the resulting gun battle. "They took us by surprise, but we were lucky," he said. Flores said the government troops returned fire and apparently wounded one of the rebels.

Measures 'totally inadequate'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Robert White, a former U.S. ambassador to El Salvador, said Saturday that the Reagan administration's stepped-up effort to curb rightist death squads in that country is "totally inadequate."

While welcoming the administration's new initiatives, White said they will have no effect "on the official terror which pervades El Salvador."

President Reagan removed White as ambassador shortly after the Reagan administration took office. White has been an outspoken critic of U.S. policies in El Salvador since then.

White, now a professor at Simmons College in Massachusetts, said recent transfers of Salvadoran military officers linked to death squads are little more than "cosmetic rearrangements that will have no impact on the activities of these groups."

His views were outlined in a paper released by the independent Commission on United States-Central American Relations.

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher will meet separately Jan. 18 with Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko during the Stockholm disarmament talks, his office said Saturday.

Genscher will meet with several other colleagues during the Conference on Confidence- and Security-building Measures and Disarmament, which starts Jan. 17, a Foreign Ministry statement said.

Genscher, 56, is recovering from injuries suffered Tuesday afternoon when his armored Mercedes limousine spun off a high-speed freeway and flipped over three times. He suffered a broken breastbone and internal bleeding.

Liberia recognizes Nigeria

MONROVIA, Liberia (AP) — Liberia on Saturday recognized Nigeria's new military government, which ousted elected civilian President Shehu Shagari in a coup a week ago.

In a message to Maj. Gen. Mohammed Buhari, who now leads the Nigerian government, Liberian Head of State Samuel K. Doe said, "I extend a hand of friendship and brotherhood to you and members of the Supreme Military Council."

Doe, who came to power in this West African coastal country in a military coup in April 1980, said he hoped that Nigeria would continue to play an important role in African and world affairs.

Teen-agers kidnapped, killed

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Unidentified abductors kidnapped 17 youngsters from a village playground in a Bihar state, eastern India, then killed them and threw their bodies into the Ganges River, a local legislator said Saturday.

D.P. Yadav, a member of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's Congress Party, told reporters that the youths ranged in age from six to 16. He said they were abducted by "hardened criminals," but could not identify the kidnappers or explain why they seized or killed the victims.

Army to try to grow food

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — The Ugandan army, sometimes accused of stealing food from the peasants, will try to grow its own food this year on its own farms, Radio Uganda said Saturday.

Farming tools soon will be distributed to military units throughout the East African country, and the government hopes the soldiers will be able to grow enough food for themselves and have some left for local civilians, the state-owned radio quoted Defense Minister Paulo Muwang as saying.

Real Estate today

NO USE WAITING

Houses cost no more in real dollars today than they did thirty years ago. This may be hard to swallow - but it's true. Thirty years ago, you could have bought today's $90,000 house for only $30,000. However, the median income at that time was $5,000. Today, that same house has tripled in value-but so has average median income. In dollars earned, the purchase of a home today is no more than it was 30 years ago. True, mortgage interest rates have tripled, but so have the interest rates on money that you invest.

If you are waiting to accumulate a larger down payment - this time next year, you may well be further behind than ever. If you are renting while waiting to buy, you will be missing out on the tax benefits and you'll probably be paying more rent as well.

If you can't afford your dream house today, your best bet is to buy whatever you can, as soon as you can. It's easier to MOVE UP to the dream house than start there.

Mondale says he's solid in South

ATLANTA (AP) — Walter Mondale felt he had some things to prove during five days of campaigning in the South. Foremost among them was that, "I'm doing quite well in the South."

The front-runner for the Democratic presidential nomination completed his southern swing Saturday with stops in Savannah, Ga., and Atlanta before heading for New Hampshire.

John Reilly, a Mondale law partner and political adviser who accompanied the former vice president on the trip, said the goals of the southern swing were to demonstrate strength in the region and to get the Mondale organization revved up.

He denied that the trip also was designed to demonstrate Mondale's continuing appeal among blacks in the face of the challenge from the Rev. Jesse Jackson. "That did not enter into it," said Reilly.

But whether Mondale planned it that way or not, Jackson was a presence that could not be ignored.

At every stop in the region, Mondale was asked to comment on the civil rights leader's role in obtaining the release of Navy Lt. Robert Goodman from Syria.

The former vice president had a stock answer. He was lavish in his praise of the success of Jackson's mission.

"I think the way in which the Rev. Jackson conducted himself brings forth the admiration of all Americans," he said.

The question was bit touchier for black political leaders endorsing Mondale.

Mayor Richard Arrington Jr. of Birmingham, Alabama's largest city, was asked why he had backed the Democratic front-runner over Jackson.

"I think at this time the priority is to win the White House," said Arrington, who emphasized his continuing friendship with Jackson and his support of his for the vice presidential nomination.

Arrington's willingness to endorse someone else for president, at a moment when Jackson was capturing national attention and praise for his Syrian mission, was an important symbolic moment for the Mondale campaign.

It was a signal, Mondale advisers hoped, to other black politicians that Jackson's presidential candidacy need not stop them from backing the white front-runner who has a long record of support for civil rights.

Important from a different perspective of Mondale's strategy in the South was the endorsement of Tom Drake, speaker of the Alabama House of Representatives. Drake declared his support of Mondale in a brief statement in front of the Greenbrier Bar-B-Que in northern Alabama.

Drake is close to Gov. George Wallace, and southern politicians are likely to see his endorsement as something that would not have happened without the tacit approval Wallace.

The endorsements gave Mondale help he wanted in the black and white communities.

They were an essential part of the political organizing the Mondale campaign is doing. Another aspect of the southern swing involved issues.

Throughout the trip, Mondale worked at developing three broad themes — the need for a more competitive America, for a fairer society and for peace through strength.

He hit hard at high federal budget deficits and pledged to reduce them by more than half during the first term of his presidency.

In rural areas he lambasted the Reagan administration's farm programs and called the deficits a hidden subsidy to overseas competitors of American farmers.

Ex-teacher wins herpes lawsuit

OTTUMWA, Iowa (AP) — A judge has awarded $50,000 to a retired schoolteacher who sued her former husband because he infected her with genital herpes during their four-year marriage.

Wapello County District Judge Phillip R. Collett ruled last week that Mildred McGaw, 68, was entitled to damages because her ex-husband, Elmer J. Mormann, failed to reveal he had the disease.

Mrs. McGaw and Mormann were married in July 1978 and divorced in November 1982.

She filed suit last June seeking $150,000 in punitive damages and $150,000 in compensatory damages, claiming she had suffered "great emotional upset and humiliation" from the disease.

"The defendant knew he had herpes and withheld such information from the plaintiff," the judge said in his ruling. "The defendant's conduct was such as to indicate he intentionally allowed or caused the plaintiff to be infected."

Last September, a 31-year-old Seattle woman who said her estranged husband gave her herpes during an attempt at reconciliation was awarded $40,000 by a jury. Several other similar lawsuits have been filed around the nation.

Eastern dropping slogan

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Eastern Airlines is grounding its slogan that the Miami-based carrier is "America's favorite way to fly" — after new figures showed it isn't.

The decision came after new industry statistics showed Eastern, which in recent years had carried more passengers than any other U.S. airline, had slipped behind both United and Delta.

Eastern spokeswoman Paula Musto said that in place of that line, Eastern will stick with its other slogan, "We earn our wings every day."

The passenger loads of all three airlines grew last year, but Eastern's growth was slower, the industry statistics show. In 1983, United carried 38.19 million passengers, Delta 36.80 million and Eastern 36.79 million.

United spokesman Chuck Novak had complained that Eastern should stop using the slogan.

Factory gutted by fire

ROCK HILL, S.C. (AP) — Fire gutted a Chinese noodle factory that supplies more than 200 restaurants in the Southeast, but the owners say they won't interrupt service.

The Southern Noodle Co., which manufactures egg roll skins and Oriental food products for distribution to restaurants in the Carolinas, Georgia and Tennessee, was burned out of its 7,500-square-foot plant on Friday. Much of its stock was lost.

"Our trucks are going to New York Saturday and they will be back Sunday with supplies for our customers," said store owner Foon-Sai Chen. "We are trying our best not to delay service to customers. We can't afford to lose any of them."

The fire began around 3:25 a.m. Friday and was under control 1½ hours later, said Fire Chief Harold Carter. The fire appeared to have started in the warehouse, possibly with an electrical short, he said.

No damage estimates were available.

City shows unity over White

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — When Dan White gunned down liberal Mayor George Moscone and homosexual Supervisor Harvey Milk, he bolstered solidarity in the gay movement he detested and forged "a unity between gay and straight," say observers of the city's political scene.

The proof was on the streets of San Francisco on Friday in the thousands who turned out for rallies to protest White's new-found freedom after serving five years of a seven-year, eight-month sentence. White was convicted of voluntary manslaughter in the Nov. 27, 1978, deaths of Moscone, 49, and Milk, 48.

"In a way, White's light sentence for manslaughter bound the various factions of San Francisco together," wrote San Francisco Examiner columnist Bill Mandel in the paper's Sunday editions. "The five years since his crime have witnessed a stunning political and social integration of the gay community."

Milk, revered by the homosexual community, was replaced on the Board of Supervisors by another openly gay politician, Harry Britt. Homosexuals, estimated at 15 percent of the city's nearly 700,000 residents, proved a potent political force in the mayoral election after Moscone's death and often are credited with sweeping Dianne Feinstein to power.

The gay community was out in force Friday, staging work stoppages around the city, protesting with 15 minutes of ear-splitting noise in the afternoon and closing a block of Castro Street for a three-hour rally at night.

At one point, police estimated a crowd of 9,000 at the Castro Street demonstration. Earlier in the day, 1,500 showed up for a protest in Union Square, and their ranks swelled to twice that as they marched through the financial district, blowing whistles, banging pots and ringing bells to express their anger.

"They (Milk and Moscone) built a movement because they were popular," said William Reidy, who showed up early at Union Square carrying a sign that read "Mad" on one side and "Angry" on the other. "The killings created a unity between gay and straight."

Under a cloak of secrecy, White, 37, was released from Soledad Prison to Los Angeles

AP Laserphoto

Some 1,500 demonstrators protested in San Francisco following the release of Dan White Friday from a California prison. White's parole came five years after he gunned down Mayor George Moscone and Supervisor Harvey Milk in San Francisco's City Hall in 1978.

County, where he will serve a year of parole, reporting to parole officials every 48 to 72 hours. Prison officials said White had wanted to return to San Francisco but was forbidden to under the terms of his parole.

If he ever does return, he will find a San Francisco far different from the one he left behind, Mandel says.

"Much of the change has been positive, and much of it developed in defiant reaction to White's deed," Mandel wrote. "If anything beneficial can be gleaned from his killings ... it is the survival and growth of the very principles Dan White tried to murder with his bullets."

Woman arrested for offering to kill actress

CHICAGO (AP) — A college student charged with threatening the life of her ex-teacher considered would-be presidential assassin John W. Hinckley Jr. a kindred spirit and wrote to him offering to kill actress Jodie Foster, authorities say.

Penny Lynn Bailey, 19, a Daley Junior College student, was arrested Friday at the FBI's Chicago office where she had been called in for an interview, an agency spokesman said.

She was charged with writing a letter to an Omaha, Neb., woman — former coworker Cheryle Kapsack — on New Year's Eve in which she threatened to kill her former Chicago high school teacher, Janet Swanson, according to an affidavit signed by FBI agent Barbara Babcock.

"By killing me and her we would coexist harmoniously, never having to say goodby," Ms. Bailey allegedly wrote in the letter to Miss Kapsack.

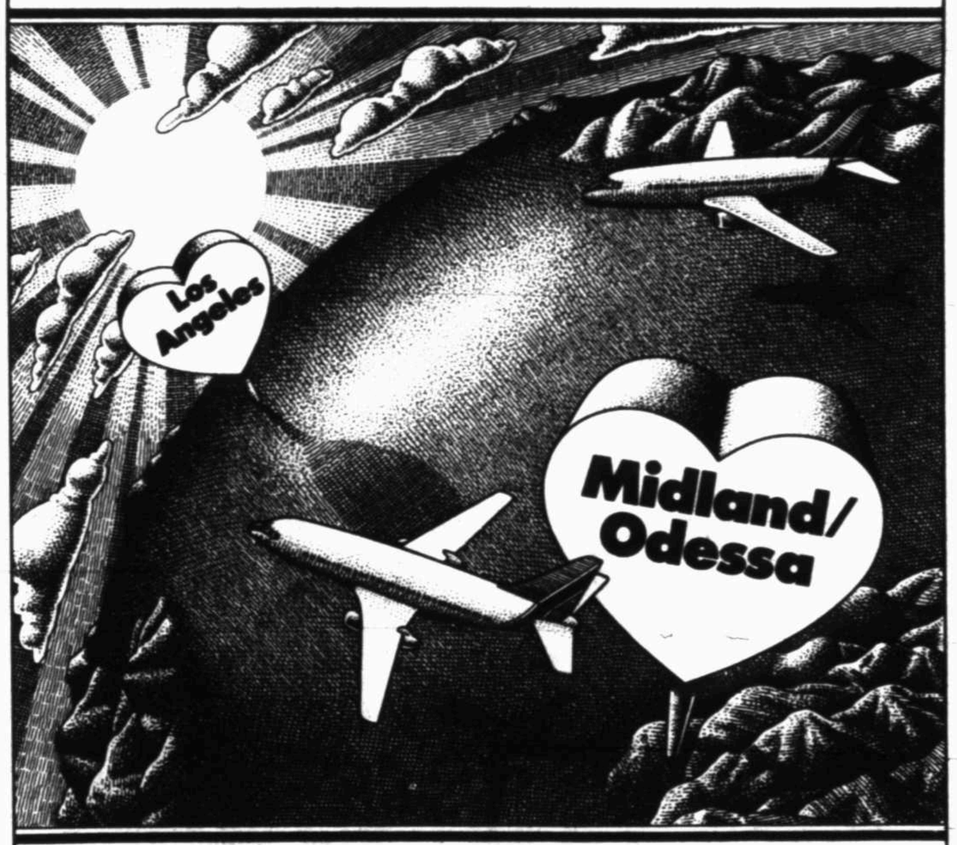

With the affidavit, the FBI released a letter Ms. Bailey allegedly mailed to Hinckley on July 13, 1982, comparing what a federal prosecutor called a "love-hate relationship" with Ms. Swanson to Hinckley's infatuation with Miss Foster, whom he tried to impress by shooting the president.

"You are not alone in your quest to find that one very special person that you are willing to die for or be killed for," federal authorities quoted Ms. Bailey as saying in the letter to Hinckley.

The FBI said the letter was sent to St. Elizabeths Hospital in Washington, where Hinckley has been confined since he was found innocent by reason of insanity in the attempted murder of Reagan in March 1981.

The affidavit went on to say "Bailey and Hinckley corresponded through mid-September 1982. Various plans were discussed, including Bailey's traveling to New Haven, Conn., to kill Jodie Foster (a student at Yale University there), and Bailey's hijacking an airplane and demanding that Hinckley, Foster and Swanson be brought to the airport."

Bank becomes state's 13th to fail

WINCHESTER, Tenn. (AP) — Farmers Bank & Trust, closed because of excessive loan losses, is to reopen Monday under the management of Mid-South Bank & Trust Co. of Murfreesboro, officials say.

Farmers Bank & Trust on Friday became Tennessee's 13th bank to fail in nearly 11 months. Chartered in 1906, it had about $48 million in deposits when it was closed.

Mid-South paid $1.45 million for the failed bank's office in Winchester and its three branches, said Alan Whitney, a spokeman for the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. in Washington. It will receive an advance of $26.3 million from the FDIC.

Gunshot kills 9-year-old girl

NEW YORK (AP) — A 9-year-old girl was killed when a shot aimed at her aunt went through a wall and struck her in the head early Saturday.

Police Sgt. Ed Burns said Aldna Hagan, who lived with her aunt, Theodora Williams, 37, apparently was hit by a shot aimed at Ms. Williams by her boyfriend.

Burns said police were seeking the unidentified boyfriend, who fled.

Texaco ordered to pay $3 million

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — Texaco Inc. has been ordered to pay more than $3 million to the family of a man who died of leukemia in 1979 after he was exposed in the Coast Guard to a chemical produced by Texaco.

A federal Court jury reached its verdict Friday in favor of the wife and children of Otis Mason. But jurors also said Mason, the Coast Guard and three distribution companies were partially at fault.

Mason, who died at age 32, was a Coast Guard instructor at Norfolk, Va. His duties included teaching the use of the chemical benzene, now linked to leukemia and other diseases, in a test of ship lubricants.

Texaco, in a statement issued from its corporate offices in White Plains, N.Y., said it would appeal.

Reagan names disaster areas

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan on Saturday announced a disaster declaration for four counties in Texas because of freezing temperatures that have hurt the state's agriculture industry.

The four counties are Cameron, Hidalgo, Starr and Willacy. Under the disaster declaration, the counties' 3,600 farmers may apply for various forms of federal economic assistance to offset losses, including low-interest federal business loans of up to $75 million.

Marlin Fitzwater, deputy White House press secretary, said some 2,300 are expected to apply for the low-interest loans.

Judge orders church confession

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A federal judge who ordered a man convicted of buying a stolen car to erect an "I'm a thief" sign in his front yard has sentenced the man who sold the vehicle to confess in church.

"I use different methods (of sentencing)," U.S. District Judge L. Clure Morton said Friday after handing down the unusual sentence to Jesse M. Smallwood of Crossville.

However, Smallwood didn't approve of the sentence.

"I'm not going," he said. "I didn't steal any car and I'm not going to church to confess. I don't even go to church."

Smallwood said he would rather go to jail than church. "I don't mind the weekends in jail, but I don't think any court's got the right to disturb a church," he said.

Jury awards kidnapper $35,000

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — A convicted kidnapper has won $35,500 from a jail he sued for denying him reading glasses, handcuffing him to cigarette smokers and delaying delivery of his magazines.

A federal jury made the award Friday to Richard Warren Williams, who is serving a 25-year-to-life prison term for kidnapping. Williams, claiming his treatment as a pretrial prisoner had violated his civil rights, had sought $520,000.

'Informant' charged in murder

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) — An unemployed cook was charged with murder Saturday for the kidnap-slaying of a University of Maine coed, and the suspect's mother said it was his tip that led police to the body.

David Willoughby, 26, of Randolph, was arrested early Saturday at a Holiday Inn and transferred to a state mental hospital pending arraignment Monday, authorities said.

Meanwhile, an autopsy showed that 21-year-old Paula Roberts, abducted Dec. 3 from a small store on the city's outskirts during a robbery, died from "multiple skull fractures," Assistant Attorney General Matthew Dyer said. He said no details would be released on te type of weapon used.

The clothed body of Ms. Roberts, who attended the University of Maine-Farmington and worked in the store as a clerk, was found Friday in a wooded area in a residential section of Maine's capital city after the Kennebec Journal shared a tip with investigators.

The newspaper said Saturday in a copyright story that it was approached the previous day by a man with knowledge about the killing who said he came forward to speed the investigation and end uncertainty by Ms. Roberts' family about her fate.

The informant said he did not go to police because he had a criminal record and feared he would be linked with the crime. The man told the paper he loaned his mother's car to two drinking partners and was later told by one of the men that they had used the vehicle in a robbery and murder.

He took two reporters to the area where the body was found. The newspaper summoned police who entered the woods and made the discovery Friday afternoon, the Journal reported.

(Purpose or Nature of Project)
Midland, Midland, Texas
(Location - City, County, State of Project)

This Environmental Review Record is on file at the above address and is available for public examination and copying, upon request, at Room 310, between hours of 9:00 a.m. and 5:00 p.m. No further environmental review of such project is proposed to be conducted, prior to the request for release of Federal funds.

Chinese premier launches visit to stabilize U.S. ties

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang is opening a two-week trek across North America as China and the United States attempt to stabilize their often troubled and awkward relationship.

Senior U.S. government officials said Saturday they have largely put aside former hopes that Washington and Peking can build a strong strategic alliance as a bulwark against the Soviet Union.

Instead they are concentrating on the task of building ties — especially in the field of economic and technological cooperation — piece by piece, seeking to end discord by "injecting an element of trust into our relations with China."

"What we hope to avoid is temper tantrums on either side," said a U.S. official. "We have been receiving very positive signals from the Chinese. They want this to be a good trip. So do we."

"We are still in the process of building a solid, normal relationship with China," a senior colleague added.

THE OFFICIALS, some of whom are scheduled to meet Premier Zhao, briefed reporters only on condition that they remain anonymous. They said a closer relationship with China cannot be built quickly and may require decades of work.

"We've got to build up an economic relationship before we can have a close political relationship, which is something that I do not expect before the beginning of the next century," said one official.

But another said that as long as China is faced with strong and growing Soviet military forces on its borders, "there is no way they could not be interested in a relationship with the United States."

One of the most promising items open for discussion is a final agreement on a U.S.-Chinese pact on peaceful nuclear cooperation that could result in the sales of nuclear reactors to China.

The prospects for that agreement were enhanced by China's recent decision to join the International Atomic Energy Agency and to accept non-proliferation controls on its nuclear exports.

OTHER ITEMS on the agenda are a U.S.-Chinese taxation treaty, an investment pact, a maritime cargo agreement, cooperation in science, cultural exchange, and industrial and technological cooperation.

Before leaving Washington, the Chinese premier and President Reagan are also expected to renew U.S.-Chinese cultural exchanges suspended in the wake of the defection last year of Chinese tennis star Hu Na.

And they will probably sign a new Industrial and Technological Cooperation accord, an agreement that one U.S. official said could give the Chinese government's "blessing to doing business with Americans."

Officials here who direct day-to-day contacts with the Chinese refer to Hu Na's request for political asylum in April 1983 as "Black Thursday." The Chinese government canceled 19 sports and cultural exchanges in protest.

Relations remained troubled through most of a year marked by disputes over import quotas for Chinese textiles, Chinese access to U.S. high technology, and the levels of U.S. arms shipments to Taiwan.

CHINA LODGED a protest in November over a congressional resolution calling for a peaceful solution to the problem of Taiwan and a bill urging U.S. support for Taiwan's bid to retain membership in the Asian Development Bank.

The People's Republic of China had just been admitted to the bank and sought the ejection of Taiwan, which Peking considers a breakaway province that is an integral part of the Chinese nation.

Before leaving Peking, the Chinese premier also made clear that he wants his trip to Washington to result in improved ties, saying in a news conference last week that he will not demand an immediate end to U.S. weapons sales to Taiwan.

He is, however, expected to repeat China's objections to those sales.

"All indications are that he is going to chew our ankles a bit about Taiwan," one U.S. official said. "But any Chinese leader is going to do that. He has a constituency to speak to in Peking."

Democrats shape policy manifesto

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some of the nation's most prominent Democrats, trying to shatter the idea that their party lacks new ideas, have unveiled an election-year program that calls for overhauling the federal tax system and employing more diplomacy in dealing with the Soviet Union.

While not officially endorsed by the party or the leadership of the Democratic-controlled House, the policy manifesto is aimed at helping shape the 1984 debate as Democrats attempt to re-take the White House and the Senate, both now in Republican hands.

The wide-ranging 90-page document, titled "Renewing America's Promise," accuses President Reagan of bringing the country astronomical budget deficits, failing to emphasize diplomacy in foreign policy and arms control, and abandoning women, minorities and the poor.

The policy blueprint is the product of three years' work by House Democrats and was published by the National-House Democratic Caucus, a newly formed organization headed by Rep. Gillis Long, D-La., chairman of the House Democratic Caucus, and Robert S. Strauss, former party chairman. It is an expansion of a similar book issued in 1982.

The group's membership includes 70 House Democrats and 83 other top party figures, among them former defense secretaries Clark Clifford and Harold Brown, invest-

The document calls for sharp cuts in the growth rate of the national debt by 1988; permanent changes in taxation and the health care system; a new forum for cooperation between labor, industry and government; new public and private investment in research and industry; and a revival of arms control efforts.

TO ALL INTERESTED AGENCIES GROUPS AND PERSONS

The above-named City of Midland proposes to request the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development to release Federal funds under Title I of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974, PL 93-383, to be used for the following project:

Southside Fire Station

Purpose or Nature of Project
Midland, Midland, Texas

Project
$50,000
Estimated Cost of Project

It has been determined that such request for release of funds will not constitute an action significantly affecting the quality of the human environment and, accordingly, the above-named City of Midland has decided not to prepare an Environmental Impact Statement under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969, PL 91-190. The reason for such decision not to prepare such Statement are as follows: Construction will impact the site only. This project is confined to a small area. The inconvenience caused by equipment coming and going will be for a limited time. The long-term benefit derived from an improved fire facility will more than outweigh these short-term impacts.

An Environmental Review Record respecting the within project has been made by the above-named City which documents the environmental review of the project and more fully sets forth the reasons why such Statement is not required. This Environmental Review Record is on file at the above address and is available for public examination and copying, upon request, at Room 310, between hours of 8:00 a.m. and 5:00 p.m. No further environmental review of such project is proposed to be conducted, prior to the request for release of Federal funds.

All interested agencies, groups and persons disagreeing with this decision are invited to submit written comments for consideration by the City to the office of the Mayor. Such written comments should be received at City of Midland, P.O. Box 1152 on or before January 23, 1984. Teen-ager sentenced to death by injection

HOUSTON (AP) — A 19-year-old man accused of plotting the robbery of an amusement center and the murders of four former co-workers, and later bragging about the killings, was sentenced Saturday to death by injection.

The same jury that convicted Richard James Wilkerson of capital murder in one of the slayings deliberated two hours and 10 minutes over two days before deciding he deserved the death penalty instead of life in prison.

The sentence will be appealed automatically.

Wilkerson showed no emotion when the jury's verdict was announced. But as he left the courtroom, he bowed his head and whispered, "I'm very sorry for what happened."

"I don't feel sorry for him. He didn't feel sorry for my sons," said Jose Pequeno, father of two of the victims.

Wilkerson was convicted Friday in the July 1 murder of Anil Varughese, an 18-year-old pre-medical student who worked as night manager at the Malibu Grand Prix, a video arcade and miniature race track in southwest Houston. Wilkerson had lost his job at the arcade.

Varughese was stabbed 42 times. Three other workers — Arnold Pequeno, 18; his 19-year-old brother Joerene; and Roddy Dale Harris, 22 — also were killed.

According to testimony, Varughese gave Wilkerson his paycheck and offered to help him get back his job. Wilkerson then plunged a knife into him.

Afterward, witnesses said, he went home, took a shower and then went shopping, and later laughed and bragged about the killings.

Shortly after his arrest, Wilkerson gave police a six-page statement and helped police gather evidence.

Defense attorney Ray Howard said the verdict was not surprising. "We knew it was going to be this way. The amount of evidence was overwhelming. The jury had a tough job to do and they did it."

But Wilkerson's mother, Dorothy Winn, sobbed and said, "This is not justice."

Also charged with capital murder in the slayings are Wilkerson's cousin, James Edward Randall, 16, and Kenneth Ray Ransom, 20, a paroled convict.

Richard James Wilkerson, 19, leaves the state district courtroom Saturday, hands handcuffed behind him, after being sentenced to death by injection in the slaying of a former co-worker at an amusement center last July. Wilkerson is also charged with capital murder in the stabbing death of three other Malibu Grand Prix employees.

Pilot sues Customs after release from jail

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A pilot who spent four months in a Mexican jail has filed suit against the U.S. Customs Service, claiming its actions led to the shooting down of his plane by Mexican officials.

"When the Soviets shoot down an airliner, everyone is shocked. But here, we're providing Mexico with information so they can shoot down Americans," said James Skrobarcek, attorney for William Humphries.

Humphries, 55, argues in a $2.8 million damage claim that the Customs Service released confidential information about the load of electronics gear he was carrying.

U.S. customs officials say they have an agreement to tell Mexican officials when contraband equipment is being shipped south, just as the Mexicans tell U.S. authorities when drugs are headed in the opposite direction.

Mexican import duties of up to 100 percent on television sets, microwave ovens and other electronic equipment have created a lucrative market for smuggling the gear into Mexico.

U.S. laws do not prohibit the export of such goods, but it becomes contraband as soon as it hits Mexican airspace without payment of duty.

Skrobarcek, of Corpus Christi, said his client carried a load of videocassette recorders and Japanese watches when he piloted his twin-engine Cessna 310 from the McAllen airport Aug. 10.

> "When the Soviets shoot down an airliner, everyone is shocked. But here, we're providing Mexico with information so they can shoot down Americans."

> William Humphries

"Our contention is that U.S. Customs, by releasing the information in the shipper's export declaration to Mexican officials, violated that document's confidentiality and resulted in his being shot down and jailed," Skrobarcek said.

"But more importantly, the U.S. government is aware that Mexico has a shoot-first-ask-questions-later attitude," he added.

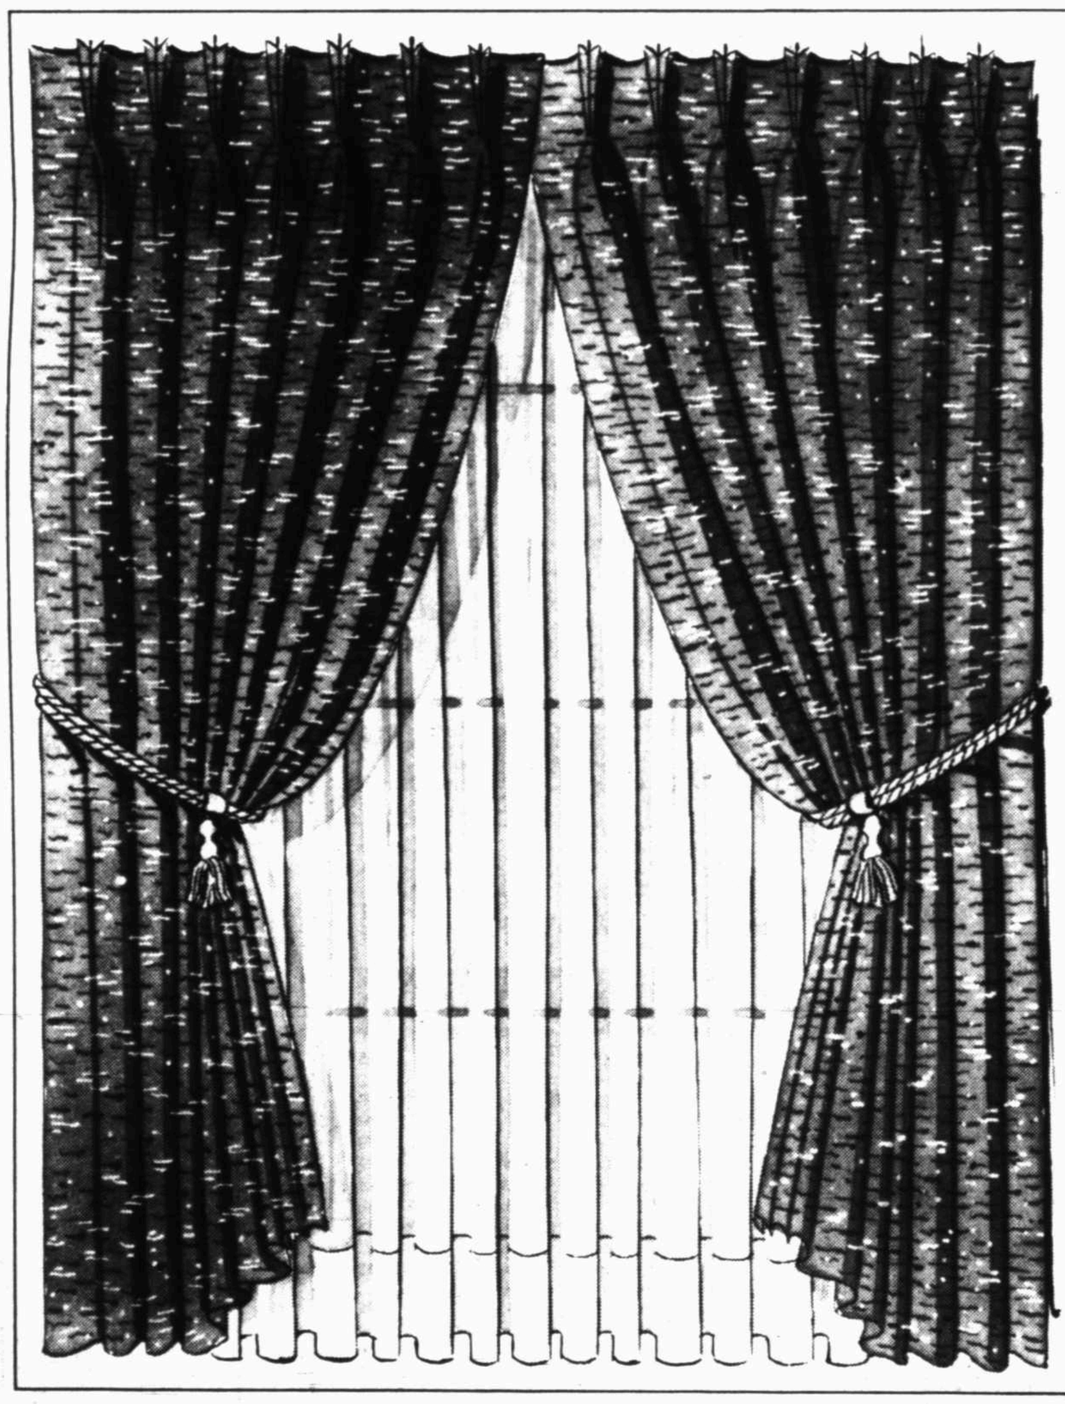

Humphries flew out over the Gulf of Mexico until both engines were hit by automatic rifle fire from two Mexican customs planes flying below him, Skrobarcek said.

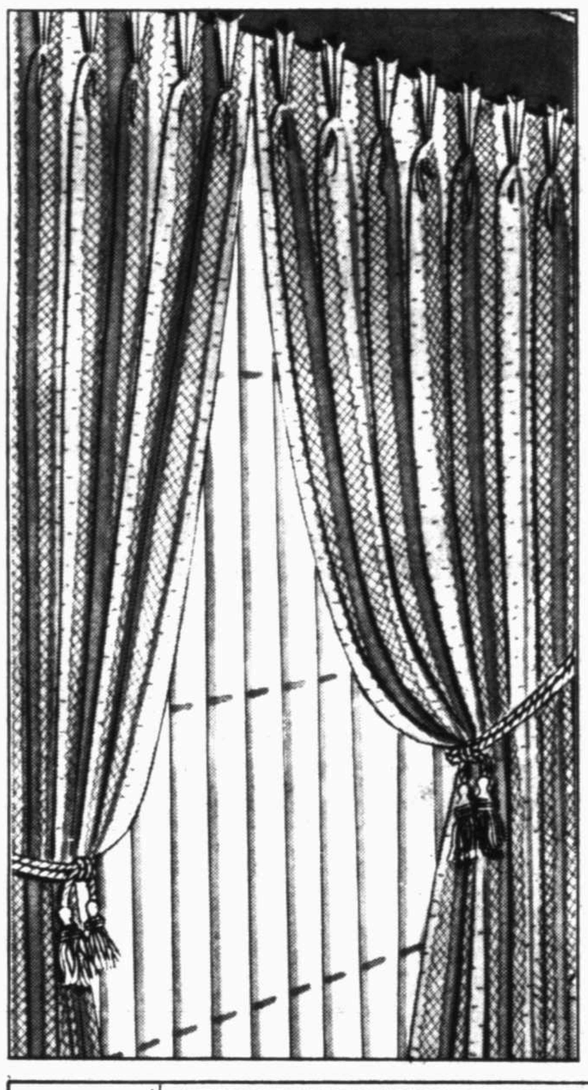

Humphries crash-landed in the Gulf of Mexico, was arrested and taken to jail in Reynosa, Mexico. He was released Dec. 31.

"From what I've learned, the attack was completely by surprise," Skrobarcek said. "There was no effort to guide him in or warn him."

Sale of bank to be completed next week

ODESSA (AP) — The sale of the West Texas Savings Association of Lubbock to the First Savings and Loan Association of Fort Stockton should be completed by next week, executives of the acquiring firm said.

Federal and state savings and loan regulatory agencies late last week approved the sale of the bank — a branch office of Odessa Savings Association, said Wayne Merrill, president of the Fort Stockton thrift.

An offer of $1.25 million was made to acquire the $31 million-asset Lubbock branch, Dallas businessman Brett Davis said.

He said additional paperwork must be completed next week before the final transaction agreement is signed.

Davis, president of Dadecor Inc., a Dallas real estate business, purchased the Fort Stockton savings and loan last year.

Davis paid $2.07 million for the stock of the $141.68 million-asset Fort Stockton savings and loan, which was chartered in 1956.

Three new board members named

AUSTIN (AP) — Three new members of the State Board of Veterinary Medical Examiners were named Friday by Gov. Mark White to serve until Aug. 26, 1989.

Kenneth Dorris, 50, owner of a veterinary hospital in Stephenville, will replace Dr. John E. Wilkins, Greenville, whose term expired.

Justice of the Peace Jim Humphrey, 34, replaces the late Joseph H. Ballard Jr., Fort Worth.

William L. Anderson, 53, owner of animal hospitals in Addison and Frisco, replaces Dr. Dan J. Anderson Sr. of Fort Worth, whose term expired.

TDC guard accidentally shot to death

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — A Texas Department of Corrections guard was accidentally shot to death while cleaning a gun and another apparently was killed during a robbery at his home, a prison spokesman said Friday.

Dalton B. Cawthray, 44, of Sugar Land, was found dead Thursday evening at the Clemens Unit armory where he worked, said prison spokesman Charles Brown. Cawthray had been shot once in the chest with a .38-caliber revolver that he apparently had been cleaning, Brown said.

John A. Sutton, 45, of Montalba, was found slain early Friday after an apparent robbery at his home, Brown said. Sutton worked as a guard at the Beto 1 Unit.

Sutton's wife, Mildred, told investigators that two men wearing ski masks broke into their home, shot her husband and fled with an undetermined amount of money. Mrs. Sutton was not hurt, Brown said.

Authorities have no suspects in Sutton's death.

Cannonballs, shell property of city

HOUSTON (AP) — A cache of 91 Civil War cannonballs and mortar shells unearthed at a downtown car lot a year ago now belong to the city of Houston.

The munitions were discovered Feb. 17 by workers excavating a grease pit for a car wash at a National Car Rental Co. facility.

Authorities first wanted to destroy the rounds, fearing the black powder inside might explode. But historians and collectors fought to preserve them.

The munitions were disarmed and returned to the city Thursday to become part of the permanent collection at the Houston Police Museum.

According to research by Patricia C. Nesbitt of the Houston Archaeological Society, the shells were buried on property once owned by Cornelius Ennis, a wealthy merchant and one-time mayor of Houston.

Ms. Nesbitt said Ennis may have buried the shells in 1865 at the end of the Civil War so they would not be taken by disbanded Confederate soldiers.

Texas to profit from new project

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas will gain as much as $250,000 a year under a new Rapid Deposit Pilot Project involving the Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation and the state treasury, Treasurer Ann Richards said Friday.

The pilot project began this week in the highway department's offices in Austin and Amarillo. Later it will be extended to include 115 offices throughout the state.

The project cuts down the time between the receipt of money by the highway department and its deposit with the interest-bearing treasury from three to six days, she said.

Previously, branch offices would send their receipts to a finance office of the highway department, which in turn sent the funds to the department's Austin headquarters and then the headquarters would deliver the money to the treasury.

Ride passed inspection, records show

DALLAS (AP) — Inspectors certified that the Enterprise and 79 other amusement rides at the State Fair of Texas were safe 10 days before an accident killed one person and injured 16, records show.

Inspection records on the Enterprise were released Friday by the State Board of Insurance after Attorney General Jim Mattox ruled they must be made public.

Kratzert, Jones and Associates of Southington, Conn., inspected the fair rides for the third consecutive year.

"In our professional opinion, these rides were in proper structural and mechanical condition for public use at the time of our inspection," company president Arthur W.C. Kratzert said in a letter to fair officials.

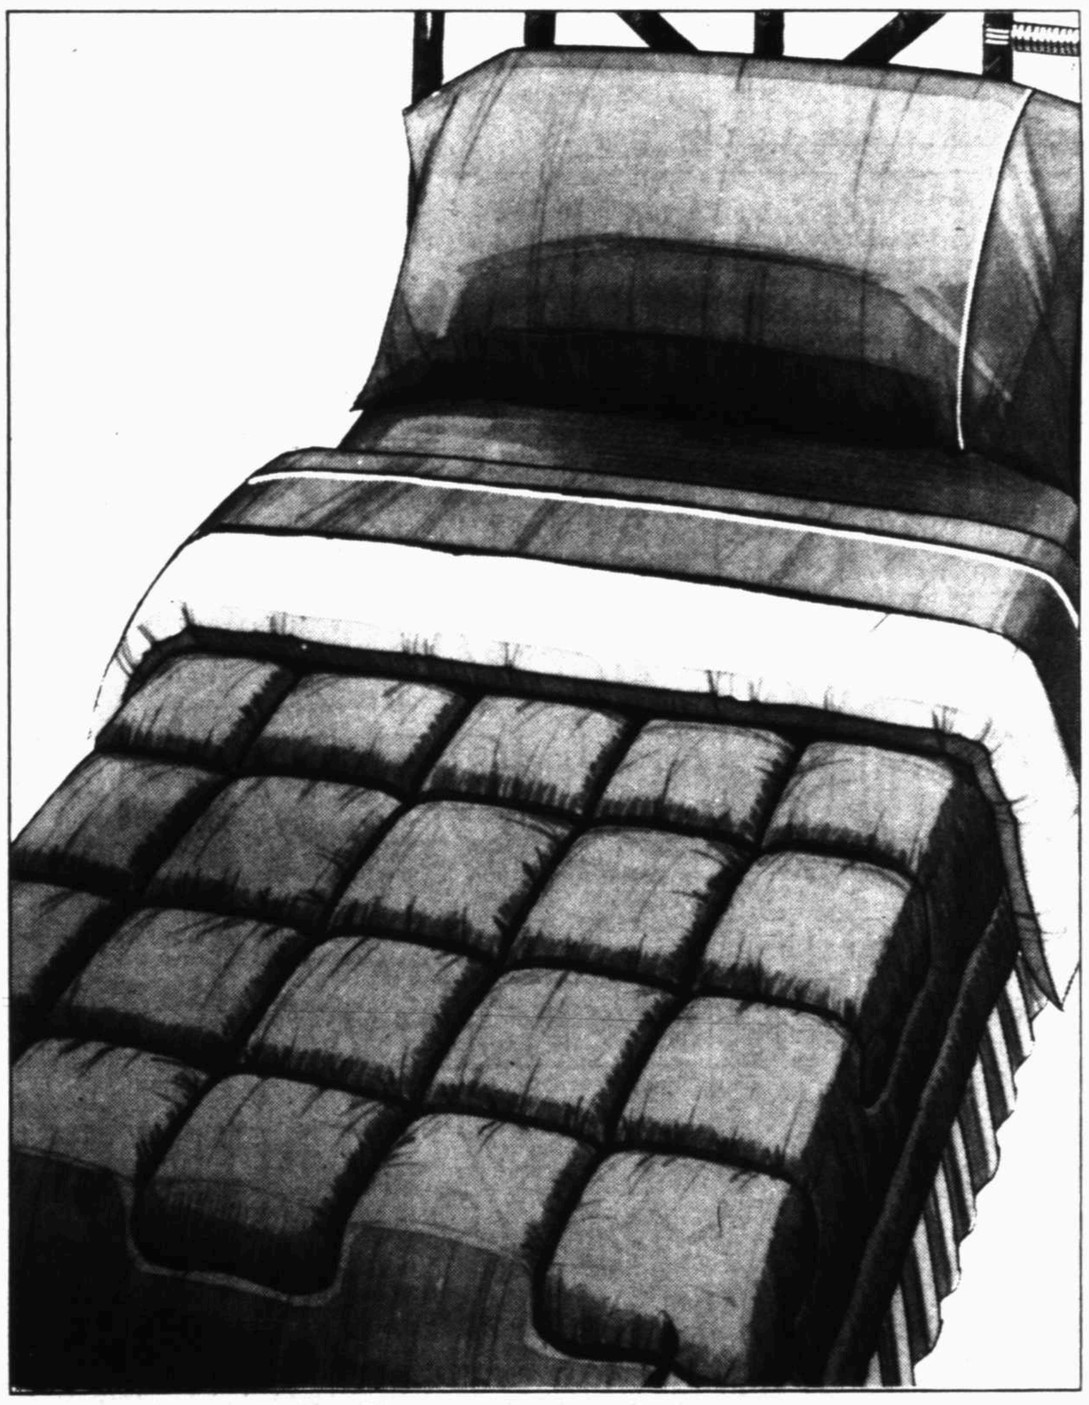

Kratzert said Friday he still does not know why the accident happened.

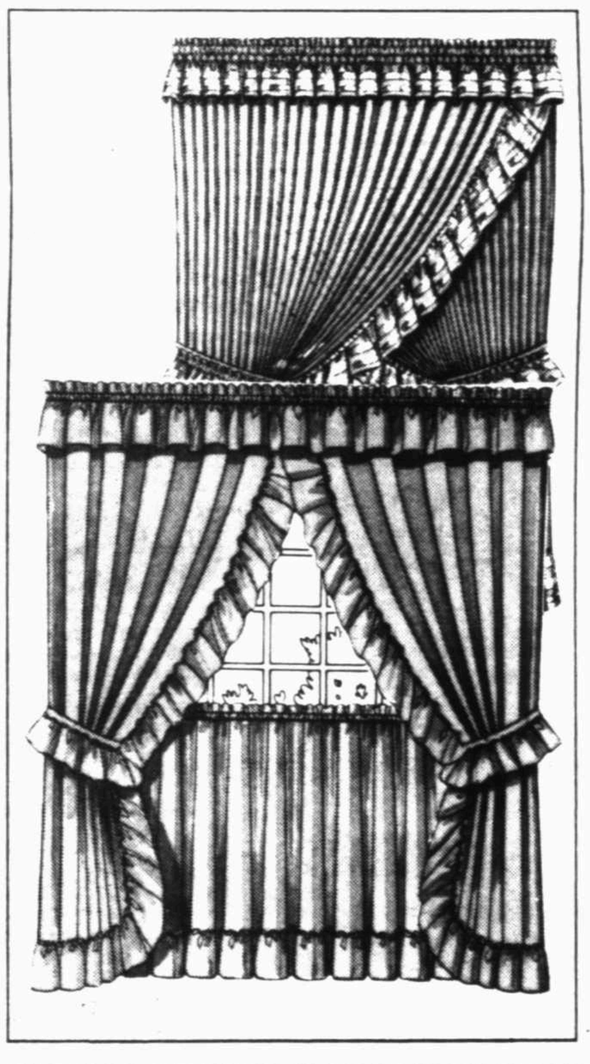

"You know, airplanes crash despite all the attention spent avoiding that. Things happen," he told The Dallas Morning News.

Engineers hired by attorneys representing people injured in the Oct. 17 accident found missing bolts on two of the cars connecting them to the frame and cracks in the frames of all 20 passenger cars.

She's clerk by day, dancer by night

AUSTIN (AP) — To those who frequent the Supreme Court building, the first indication that Fritzi Born was not an "ordinary" pencil-pushing clerk there came when a flier was taped up in a nearby coffee shop.

"The fun ... the fantastic Fritzi," it said, and there was a picture of Fritzi, hardly recognizable at first, in a belly dancing costume.

Fritzi, by day a clerk for the Texas Supreme Court, enters what she calls a fantasy world by night, joining hundreds of other Texas women in belly dancing.

For some, belly dancing is merely a form of exercise. For others, including a few men, it is a part-time or full-time profession.

ALTHOUGH there is no statewide organization, the Austin Bellydance Association, with nearly 70 members, is typical of groups in major cities throughout Texas and the nation.

The Austin association includes a nurse, schoolteacher, engineer, newspaper reporter, insurance executive and, of course, a Supreme Court clerk.

"I think belly dancers today — and usually they are career women — are of above-average intelligence," Fritzi said in a lunch-hour interview in her office. "You have to be up on politics. You don't want to dance to Egyptian music if Egypt and Israel are at war."

In what is possibly an apocryphal story, Fritzi said she had heard of a dancer who was booed off the stage by Arab students at the University of Texas after the dancer used the Jewish song "Hava Nagila" in her act.

TO BE SAFE, Fritzi said, she sticks to Armenian music.

Dance historians have traced belly dancing to 5500 B.C. By comparison, ballet was not invented until 1498, according to a book on dance history, "The Oldest Dance."

Belly dancers appeared at the Crystal Palace Exhibition in New York in 1853 and the American Centennial celebration in Philadelphia in 1876 but, according to the book, the term "belly dance" was coined in 1893 at the Chicago World's Fair.

By the late 1970s, it was estimated that there were 1 million belly dancers in the United States.

Fritzi began dancing eight years ago after medical tests revealed that an apparent childhood disease had destroyed one of her kidneys and she needed to keep her weight down. "After six weeks, I was addicted," she said.

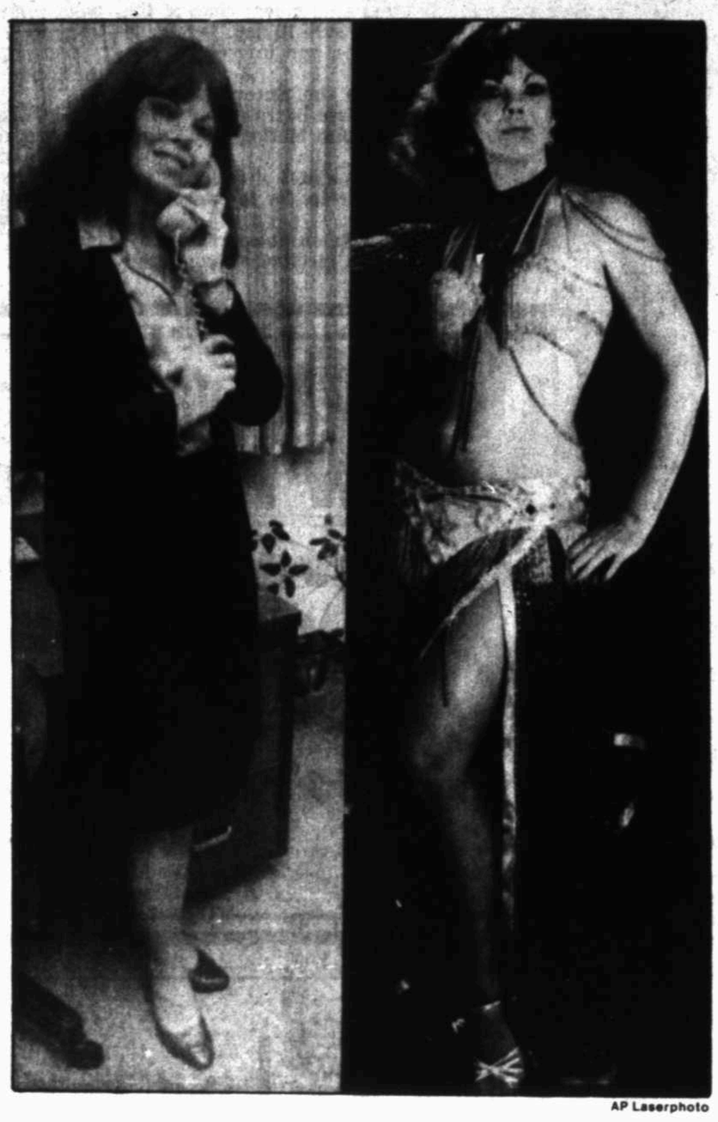

A belly dancer's bread-and-butter is a "bellygram," a brief performance, often to celebrate a person's birthday, which earns a dancer $50. In Austin, the city's only full-time belly dancer, Maria Amaya — dance name Amaya — sets the fee and others follow her lead.

EXPENSES include music tapes, "and it's nothing to spend $1,000" on a costume, Fritzi said.

Amaya, a native of Crystal City, is like many other belly dancers in that she has a college degree, is married and has a child. Fritzi's husband is an employee of the state health department, and they have a 15-year-old daughter.

Fritzi, 35, said the oldest belly dancer she had seen was in her mid-50s, but she noted there is a troupe of dancers in Austin known as the "senuous grandmothers."

"What belly dancing should be is an expression of life," said Fritzi. "As the music changes, the dancer's mood should change. I've seen dancers dance and know they are dancing anger and their mood will change.

Belly dancer

"Mainly, belly dancing focuses on the hips — isolation, moving one hip without the rest (of the body) moving with it."

Fritzi exercises for 20 minutes a night and warms up for an hour before a performance. She says she is in better shape than when she ran track and played basketball in high school.

"ONE OF THE true joys for me is seeing an audience come from 'What is this?' to 'I'm enjoying this but should I be enjoying this? to 'Hey, this is all right,' " said Fritzi.

Amaya, in a recently published interview, said, "Seriously, we all enjoy dancing basically because it makes us feel better about ourselves."

Milijon Crowell, president of the Austin Bellydance Association, said, "Why do we do it? Of course, we each have a different answer, but somehow we feel the pull of the dance. When we dance, we're beautiful. It doesn't matter what the mirror shows — tall, short, fat, slim, 18 or 60 — dancing expresses something deep within us that can't be expressed any other way, and no matter what our other interests are, belly dancing binds us into a unique sisterhood."

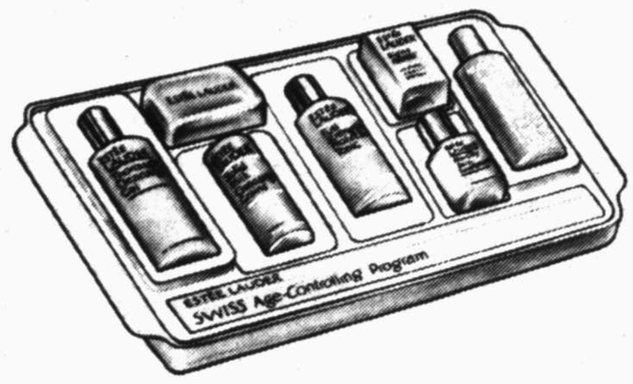

Fritzi said, "The belly dancer is many times acting out what a woman would like to be. She sees you up on stage and thinks 'That could be me,' and you live out her dreams, her fantasies."

The ultimate compliment from an audience?

"Just the sound of applause," said Fritzi. "No, I think for me the ultimate compliment is when, after I perform, women come up to me and tell me how much they enjoy it, because belly dancing really is for women."

Infant dies in hot tub

MESQUITE (AP) — A baby girl drowned after falling into a hot tub at her home in this Dallas suburb, police said.

Sandy Hutcheson told officers she found her 1-year-old twins, Erin and Jeromy, in the hot tub at 8:45 a.m. Friday. Erin was pronounced dead at Charter Suburban Hospital about an hour later. Jeromy was treated and released.

"The mother said she was in the garage just a few minutes, putting trash in trash bags," said police Lt. Larry Sprague. "When she came back, she found the kids in the tub.

Skins impress 49ers but...

San Francisco seeks respect in NFC title game today

By PAUL ATTNER
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — The party line from Camp 49ers this week goes like this: the Redskins are awesome, the Redskins are great, the Redskins are going to be so difficult to beat.

But underneath the pablum is an undercurrent of pride. Coach Bill Walsh put it best: "Remember, we were world champions only two years ago."

That's what stings the 49ers. They were the Redskins of 1981 — the glamour team, the franchise of the '80s. And, now, to be given hardly a prayer of winning Sunday in Washington is humbling.

You could sense Walsh's discomfort early this week. Two years ago, he was the genius. Now, he is being asked if the Redskins are one of the great teams of all time. He agreed that they are, but added this:

"Our players really don't back off regardless of the opposition. We generally show up to play pretty well. ... We have been there ourselves, believe it or not. We won the world championship two years ago."

Walsh paused, then said: "I remember we were decisive underdogs before, in 1981 when we played Dallas. And we won that game."

The glory of the Super Bowl triumph has haunted the 49ers almost from the day they won the game. Dreams of repeating became a 3-6 nightmare last year. Now, tackle Keith Farnhorst sees familiar looks in the faces of their fans.

"Before the championship game against Dallas, you could walk into a restaurant and they'd look at you and you could see them thinking, 'You've had a great season, so don't feel bad when you get your butts kicked Sunday.' That's how it is now for this game. I'm sure the Redskins were trying to intimidate whatever team they played next by the way they beat the Rams ... but I think we have a lot of confidence, probably more confidence than we should have."

He was asked if he could see the Redskins succeeding where the 49ers had failed so miserably.

"Not really," he said. "You just have to appreciate how lucky it is to win a Super Bowl. Maybe we still have some of that luck left."

Whether the 49ers' wounded pride can carry them very far Sunday is another question. San Francisco's offense lacks the magic of 1981 and the team remains inconsistent in Walsh's eyes.

The 49ers realize that the Redskins are bigger and more powerful. San Francisco is a finesse team, with a smallish defensive front three that averages a mere 252 pounds.

But the 49ers also have defensive backs whose tackling provides their teammates with a weekly dose of emotion. San Francisco's chances rest heavily with that secondary, both physically and spiritually.

"Our defensive backs aren't finesse players," Walsh said. "Our defense is underestimated. It's taken for granted. We do play defense, I guarantee you that.

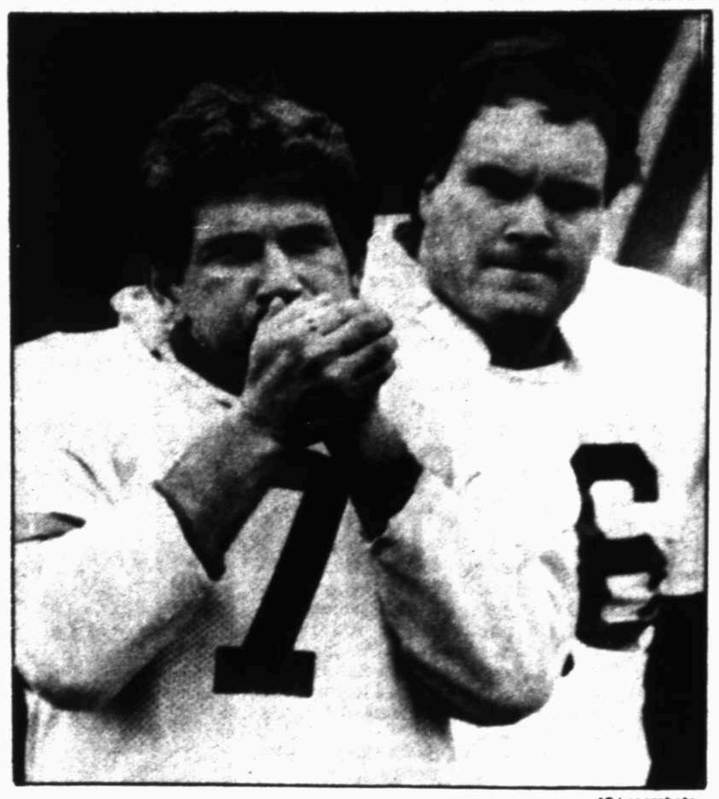

"The significant difference between the Redskins and everyone else is (John) Riggins," Walsh said. "No one has a fullback to match him. He has the stamina to give out punishment for 60 minutes."

The 49ers need to shut off Washington's running game; otherwise their formidable pass rush (Fred Dean with 17 1-2 sacks and Dwaine Board with 13) will be neutralized.

Under new defensive coordinator George Seifert, San Francisco uses more line stunts and blitzes than the 1981 team. But the 49ers' aggressiveness still grows from defensive backs Ronnie Lott and Carlton Williamson. Perhaps no secondary in the league is as quick to come up against the run as the 49ers.

"I think we are better than we were in 1981 as a defense," said Board. "The only difference is that we aren't forcing as many turnovers as we did back then. We're more experienced and our pass rush is more consistent."

Said Walsh: "We don't want to make the mistake of getting into a physical game with them. It is critical that we have balance on offense or it is going to be difficult for us to win."

Controlling Raiders:

It takes raw meat, machine guns, whips and Seahawks

By JERRY MAGEE
Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — Give Al Davis your tired, your poor, the wretched refuse, etc., and Davis will take them and beat your brains out.

The last time anybody counted, the Los Angeles Raiders listed 20 athletes with experience on other teams. Not all of these people could be confused with the Boy Scouts of America.

"When we have a general meeting, the first thing I do is open the door, throw in some raw meat, and, real quickly, close the door," said Raider coach Tom Flores.

"When the noise subsides, I'll go in. By that time, they're a little docile. I have a guy in the back with a machine gun, and a guy on the side with a whip, and, eventually, I get their attention. Once in a while, I have to growl, because it's the only thing they understand.

"Finally, I'll say: 'Break. We go on two.' " Flores paused. "It seems we have to repair the door all the time, because they forget to open it."

FLORES' ACCOUNT was, of course, apocryphal, but the Raiders are the bad guys of Sunday's American Conference championship game here. The good guys would be the Seattle Seahawks, an expansion franchise which has come through the back door, so to speak, qualifying as a wild-card team for the finals of the AFC tournament.

The game Friday became a 92,498-seat sellout. At the 1 p.m. kickoff, the crowd could be the largest in the Coliseum since 1957, when Pete Rozelle was associated with the Rams, Sid Gillman was their coach, and they attracted 102,000 for a game against San Francisco.

Had their Raiders swept their AFC West series against Seattle, Flores said he likely would be more comfortable about this third game between the teams than he can be under the existing circumstances. The Seahawks dealt Los Angeles half its four defeats, winning in Seattle in mid October 38-36, then winning again in the Coliseum two weeks later 38-21.

IN THE FIRST game, the team from the Northwest held a 38-22 lead before Marc Wilson, spelling an erratic Jim Plunkett, rallied the Raiders to a couple of anticlimactic touchdowns.

Flores argued his club has improved since those two games in October. "Our offensive line is better, and we're not giving up the sacks we were," the Los Angeles coach noted.

Also, Plunkett, 35, freshened by being rested for 2½ weeks in November, has been throwing with increased accuracy and velocity.

Still, Flores is concerned. The matchups trouble him. Davis, you should know, is very big on matchups.

"Once in a while, there are certain teams that match up well against other teams," Flores said. "For years, the Jets always beat the Dolphins. Certain basketball teams play well against certain teams. We always play well against certain teams, while other teams can't."

"I won't name those teams," Flores said, "but we've always had trouble with the Seahawks, for whatever reason."

The reason might be that the Seahawks pursue a conservative course under Chuck Knox. The Raiders are a big-play team, and teams striving for big plays tend to commit more turnovers than teams with less ambitious schemes.

"During the season, we were minus 12 in turnovers, and they were plus 14 or 15," Flores said. "In the playoffs, they're plus 7. We're plus 1. Those things are not accidents; those things are created by the way teams play. It happens too often to certain teams to be luck. They do a very good job in that respect."

FLORES, OBVIOUSLY, feels the Raiders must limit their turnovers today. They surrendered the football eight times in their first game against Seattle, five times in the second game. In each game, Seattle linebacker Shelton Robinson returned a fumble recovery for a touchdown.

"In the first game, we literally gave them great field position," Flores remembered, "but in game two, they outplayed us. We had no excuses. They beat us on the field."

It is encouraging to Flores that his athletes played without error a week ago in eliminating Pittsburgh 38-10. "I think we had five games in a row when we gave up a touchdown or something like that with a fumble," Flores said, "and there's very little you can do to eliminate fumbles."

The kicking game should be a feature of this affair. Seattle's special teams are rated No. 1 in the AFC, the Raiders No. 2. "Don't go for coffee when the special teams are on the field," Flores said.

RAIDER BRIEFS—The Raiders Friday downgraded reserve running back Rick Berns from "probable" to "questionable" because of a groin injury. Wide receiver Dokie Williams also is "questionable" with a hamstring problem...

One Raider who is confident is Todd Christensen, the all-pro tight end. "If it comes down to me, we'll be in good shape," Christensen said. "That was melodramatic," he added. " 'Gone With the Wind.' Forgive me."

Being named the league's ranking player at his position did not overwhelm Christiansen. "Being the three-time air hockey champion in training camp is much more significant than being all-pro," he said. "That's peripheral to the game; I can't control that."

Christiansen on the Raiders' image as the renegades of the NFL: "The concern is how you perform, not whether you're helping old ladies across the street."

Giants-Bears met in first one

CHICAGO (AP) — It was a day of hundred-dollar bonuses and free overcoats, of 4,000 free passes in a stadium only two-thirds full.

It also was a day for sewing the seeds that would grow into the Super Bowl, and laying the first scent of what would become a mind-boggling money trail.

It was Dec. 17, 1933, a half-century ago, when the Chicago Bears beat the New York Giants 23-21 in the NFL's first championship game.

Wrigley Field was the site of the game, which drew a crowd of about 25,000 —including 21,-000 paid customers.

The top ticket price to watch the clash of the Eastern and Western division champions was $6, so costly in the midst of the Great Depression that 11,-000 seats went unsold and hundreds of fans too poor to go through the turnstiles scaled the ballpark's walls while police turned their backs.

There was no way to measure then how many people listened to Bob Elson's broadcast of the game over radio station WGN, but the estimate was in the thousands. Some commercial time was bought — probably for several hundred dollars a shot — by the Dodge-Plymouth Dealers of Chicago.

Each player for the winning Bears received a bonus of $210.34; the losers got $140.22 apiece. Each Bears' player scoring a touchdown got a free overcoat from a Chicago clothier.

"We were worth every bit of it," said Luke Johnsos, an All-League end for the Bears, who would serve as the club's assistant coach for 30 years after his playing days. "The players of today aren't worth what they're getting."

Counting playoffs en route to Super Bowl XVII last January, each player for the Washington Redskins, who won 27-17, received $70,000. Each player on the losing Miami Dolphins received $52,000.

Attendance at the game in the Rose Bowl at Pasadena, Calif., was 103,667, with tickets priced at $40 and scalpers getting hundreds of dollars for a choice pair.

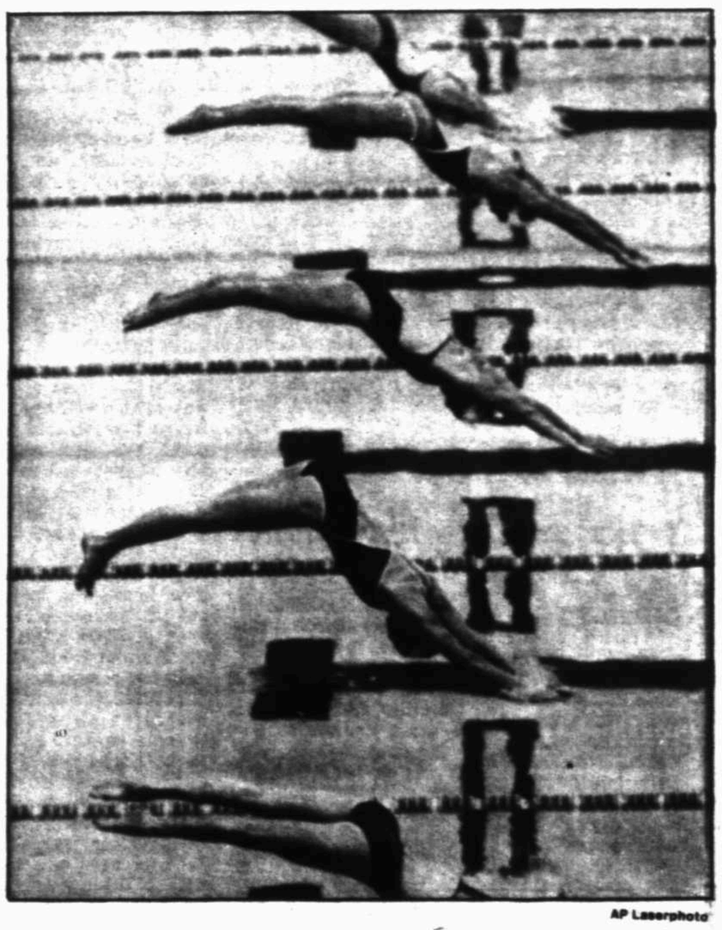

NBC sold the full quota of 24 commercial minutes at a rate of $450,000 per 30 seconds. More than than 40 million households watched, the most ever to see a live telecast.

The Super Bowl at Tampa Stadium will draw a capacity 72,000, with CBS charging $475,000 for 30 seconds of commercial time. The allotment of 24 minutes was quickly snapped up.

ABC is charging $1 million per minute of commercial time for the 1985 Super Bowl, to be played in the 90,000-seat stadium at Stanford University. Six of the 24 minutes already have been sold.

The 1933 game is considered the NFL's first title contest, even though a championship playoff was staged the previous December. The Bears won 9-0, beating the Portsmouth, Ohio, Spartans in a game played indoors in Chicago Stadium.

In Super Bowl XVIII at Tampa Jan. 22, one of the Bears' all-time greats, Bronko Nagurski, will toss the coin to get the game underway.

Disillusionment in Colorado

It's disillusioning to discover that one of your favorite places is a hotbed of eneny agents and outright communists. No wonder they call it Purgatory.

I was disembarking from the No. 5 chairlift at the top of the mountain on thebackside and I almost missed it as I skied clear. Los Angeles Rams 14, America's Team 10.

Frantically, I sought confirmation. A young lass from Dallas said, "Alas, it's true, but I don't think it's a final."

THAT'S ALL I needed to know. I headed for the base of the mountain a couple of miles away...to the rescue...well, not really, I didn't want to miss the game-saving rally.

As I went by I heard someone mutter in amazement, "Jean-Claude Killy?"

By the time I reached the bottom of the mountain and burst into the lounge where there was a tv set, the news was even worse. America's Team trailed 21-10, but there was still plenty of time, 13 minutes, to salvage the game and certainly the Cowboys wouldn't sink so low as to lose to the Rams.

Certainly not. I had to buy a beer to qualify for a watching stool at the bar, but Danny White had the Cowboys on the move, even after a bonehead penalty. Now Tony Dorsett,

St. John's tops Friars

NEW YORK (AP) — Chris Mullin had a game-high 17 points, 12 in the second half, as 13th-ranked St. John's opened defense of its Big East championship with a 57-52 victory over Providence.

Jeff Allen, starting at center for 7-foot Bill Wennington and Willie Glass each contributed 11 points for the Redmen, 10-1.

Otis Thorpe had 15 points for the Friars, 8-3 and 0-2 in the conference. Carl Hill followed with 10 points.

St. John's opened the second half with an 8-2 spurt to take a 35-26 lead when Mullin hit on a jumper. Providence never got any closer than three after that, the last time being 55-52 on a jumper by Ray Knight.

Miami must explain $300-ticket remark

DALLAS (AP) — A remark by a Miami football player about scalping Orange Bowl tickets has caught the attention of the NCAA, AP learned Saturday.

David Berst, director of enforcement, said no investigation was planned, but he was waiting to hear from Miami officials on the incident.

The remark was heard by several thousand people who still were in the Orange Bowl Tuesday night celebrating the dramatic 31-30 victory over Nebraska which gave underdog Miami the national championship. The Kansas City Star quoted the unidentified player as saying over the public address system, "I sold two tickets tonight for $300 each, and I feel like I got scalped."

The practice of players' selling tickets for amounts greater than their face value has figured in some of the NCAA's biggest probation cases, including Southern Cal and Clemson. The Miami football program went on a two-year NCAA probation, with one year of sanctions, in November, 1981. A Miami spokesman said Saturday the player — whom he declined to identify — is a well-known joker.

"It was just an off-hand, silly comment made in the celebration of the moment," Ron Steiner, Miami sports information director, told the AP. "Nobody here took it seriously because we don't think there's any way it could be true."

Both teams come up losers

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Neither team won a women's gymnastics meet between the University of Wisconsin-Oshkosh and UW-Milwaukee Friday.

Under NCAA rules that apply to the Oshkosh team, the score was UWM 151.05 points to 145.8 for Oshkosh.

Under NAIA rules that apply to UWM, the score was Oshkosh 130.4 points to 122.7 for UWM.

A UWM spokesman said each team would have to consider the meet as a loss for its respective record, noting the discrepency in the point totals resulted because NCAA rules recognized one event not recognized under the NAIA rules.

Gibbs, Walsh remember

By BILL CENTER
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — Both Bill Walsh and Joe Gibbs remember the date. Oct. 4, 1981. For both it was a pivotal date in the histories of their respective football teams.

The San Francisco 49ers came to Washington with a 2-2 record. The Redskins, in their first season under Gibbs, were 0-4. The 49ers won the game, 30-17. It was the turning point for both teams.

The 49ers won 10 of the last 11 regular-season games and captured the Super Bowl title. The Redskins won eight of their last 11 games to finish at .500. A season later, Washington won the Super Bowl.

All that stands between both and another Super Bowl engagement is each other. today they meet in the NFC Championship.

"Before that 1981 win over the Redskins, we hadn't linked that much together," Walsh said recently. "That was our second straight win, the second in a string of seven straight that pushed us over the top."

The Redskins, who last week blew away the Los Angeles Rams 51-7, have won 35 games and lost only six since that setback.

"No one was saying I was such a great coach when we started 0-5," said Gibbs, who recently was named Coach of the Year for the second straight season. "They were already forming farewell committees in the suburbs."

The NFC-East champion Redskins, who are 15-2 this season, are 10-point favorites. San Francisco has an 11-6 record and won the NFC-West.

Washington is coming off the most lopsided victory (44 points) in the history of the franchise and the fourth most one-sided victory in the history of post-season play.

But Walsh Friday expressed the opinion that the 49ers are equal to the task.

"Our players have a history of winning, too," said Walsh. "We just have not been herded in here to play a game. This is a better team than the one in 1981. I just can't guarantee at what level we will play."

The 49ers, who survived a last-second field-goal try by the Lions and held on to down Detroit 24-23 last week, will be playing without all-pro wide receiver Dwight Clark.

UTEP now up to 13-0

EL PASO (AP) — Luster Goodwin poured in 14 points to lead the unbeaten and 10th-ranked Texas-El Paso Miners to a 72-50 Western Athletic Conference win over Air Force Saturday.

Goodwin, a 6-foot junior, scored eight of his points in the first half, which saw the Miners embarrass the Falcons 40-11.

Air Force remained scoreless for the first seven minutes of the game. After junior Jon Jordan put the Falcons on the board with a layup, the Falcons didn't score again for another seven minutes.

The Falcons came out playing harder in the second half, and actually outscored UTEP 39-32.

Freshman Rodney Tention led the Falcons with 12 points.

For the Miners, who boosted their overall record to 13-0 with the win in their first WAC game of the season, Kent Lockhart and Kevin Hamilton followed Goodwin with 11 points apiece.

At one point in the second half, the Miners led the Falcons by 32 points.

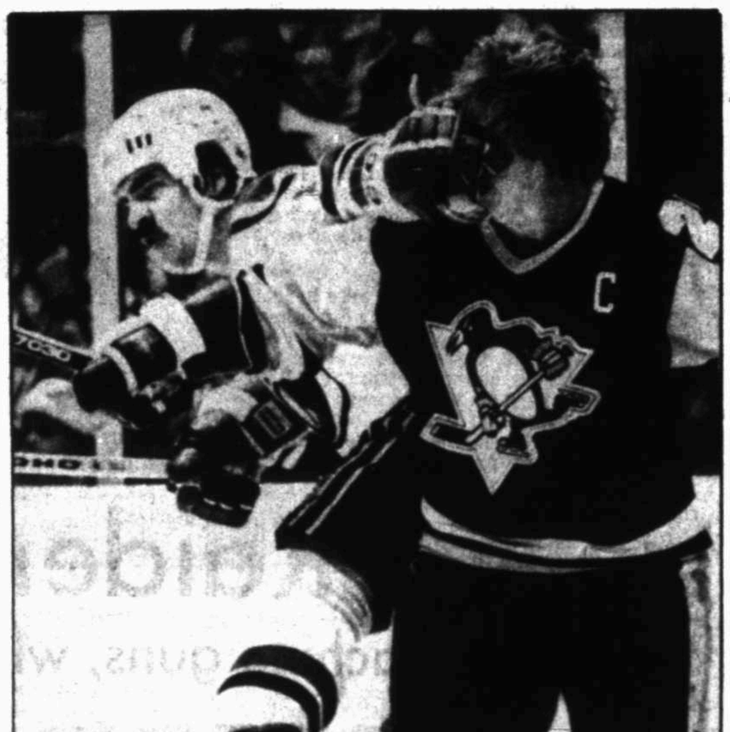

The Miners shot 50 percent from the field for the game, while the Falcons hit just 37 percent.

East wins Shrine game

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Alabama's Joey Jones scored touchdowns on a diving catch of a 45-yard bomb and a seven-yard run off a reverse, leading the East to a 27-19 victory Saturday in the 59th Shrine East-West Game.

College football's oldest all-star show, which drew a crowd estimated at 75,000 at Stanford Stadium and was nationally televised, brought in some $300,000 for the 22 Shriners' hospitals for crippled children.

The East struck first, capitalizing on the recovery of a fumbled snap on the West's 17-yard line. Miami defensive lineman Tony Fitzpatrick, a late entry in the game, made the recovery. Four plays later, Buford Jordan of McNeese State bolted over from the three for a touchdown.

After Sean Pavlich of the Air Force missed a 47-yard field goal attempt for the West, the East went ahead 14-0 on Jones' catch in the end zone of the 45-yarder from Florida quarterback Wayne Peace.

Nebraska quarterback Turner Gill cut the deficit for the West to 14-7 on the first series of the second quarter when he connected on five of five passes in a 76 yard drive and scored on a 12-yard rollout.

The West got the ball back a minute later on an interception by Texas' Craig Curry, who returned the ball 39 yards to the East four-yard line. Gill scored from the one on third down to make the score 14-13, but Pavlich missed the extra point.

Jones, named the game's most valuable offensive player, gave the East a 20-13 lead with 1:20 left in the half when he ran untouched into the end zone on a reverse from the seven, capping a 75-yard, 11-play march directed by Alabama teammate Walter Lewis.

Jesse Garcia of Northeastern Louisiana kicked a 30-yard field goal early in the third quarter as the East stretched its lead to 24-13.

UCLA's Kevin Nelson ran two yards for a touchdown after the West recovered a fumble early in the fourth quarter to help the West to close the gap to 24-19.

Garcia ended the scoring with his second field goal, a 44-yarder with 1:51 left, and Fitz-patrick sealed the victory on the West's first play after the kickoff by recovering another fumbled snap.

Expos' problem in clubhouse

MONTREAL (AP) — Outfielder Andre Dawson of the Montreal Expos says the team must solve a problem in the clubhouse before it can reach its potential on the field.

Last month, former Expos pitcher Scott Sanderson said certain Montreal "detest one another," some were jealous of the lucrative contracts of others and the team was afflicted with a "cancer (that) erodes the enthusiasm of the more spirited players."

Dawson said that Sanderson, traded last month to the Chicago Cubs in a three-way deal, might have been overly harsh because of lingering bitterness about the deal.

"I don't think there's any jealousy on this team," said Dawson, in town to receive the Expos' Player of the Year Award he shared with left fielder Tim Raines. "That's been said in the past, that players have a tendency to be jealous of the contract ($2 million per year) of (catcher) Gary Carter.

"I don't think that's the case. I know Scott, and he means well, but he was right when he said we didn't have the unity among the players that you need."

Dawson said the players weren't as close-knit as they should be, that they tended to go their own way after games.

"We've got to start right from Day One at training camp, get a camaradarie, get a little bit of communication among the players," Dawson said. "We need spirit, we need believers, we need a little more effort from every player."

Leadership, said Dawson, was the residue of all 25 players on the roster doing their job, not the responsibility of one man.

Raines said that for a team to win, "it's got to be like a family," but he couldn't explain why that feeling was missing on the Expos.

Dawson and Raines, along with the nucleus of the team — pitchers Steve Rogers, Charlie Lea and Bill Gullickson, Carter and third baseman Tim Wallach — all came up through the Expos' farm system.

"The only players I came up with were Tim Wallach, Charlie Lea and Bill Gullickson," said Raines. "The other guys are much older than I am.

"Maybe what we have is a generation gap."

Lee Boosters meet Tuesday

The Midland Lee Booster Club will honor the school's football coaches and their wives in a 7 p.m. Tuesday reception in the Lee cafeteria, said Bob Walker, club president.

The school's football team played in the state's Class 4-5A championship, losing to Converse Judson, 25-21.

The Midland school board is expected to make a decision on Lee's new head football coach Tuesday afternoon.

Spike Dykes, who guided the Rebels for four years, resigned in late December to join the coaching staff at Texas Tech. Dykes led the Rebels to a 13-3 mark in 1983, the best record ever recorded by Lee in its 23-year football history.

The reception will be open to the public.

Illinois repulses Badgers, 63-62

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Bruce Douglas scored four of his 10 points early in overtime and four other Illinois players scored in double figures as 14th-ranked Illini held off upset-minded Wisconsin 63-62 Saturday in the Badgers' Big Ten home opener.

With the score tied 54-54 after regulation, Douglas hit a layup to put Illinios ahead for good.

After Doug Altenberger converted a free throw, Douglas connected twice from the free throw line to put the Illini ahead 59-54 with 2:42 left in overtime.

Two more free throws by Altenberger and two by Quinn Richardson gave the Illini a 63-58 lead.

Baskets by Wisconsin's Cory Blackwell and Rick Olson narrowed the gap to 63-62. Illinois' Efrem Winters, a 76 percent free throw shooter, failed on the first shot in two straight 1-and-1 opportunities, giving the Badgers a chance to win the game.

However, Olson's short jumper bounced off the rim with four seconds left and Illinois held on for the victory.

George Montgomery, Altenberger and Richardson scored 12 points each to lead Illinois, 11-1 overall and 2-0 in Big Ten play. Blackwell added 17 points for the Badgers, 4-7 overall and 0-2 in the conference.

Wrecks wreck Deacons

ATLANTA (AP) — Scott Pettway drilled a 15-footer from the left baseline with three seconds remaining to give Georgia Tech a 68-66 victory over previously undefeated and eighth-ranked Wake Forest in an Atlantic Coast Conference basketball game Saturday.

The Yellow Jackets, who trailed most of the way in the ACC opener for each team, tied the game 64-64 with 2:50 to play when Yvon Joseph sank a turn-around four-footer.

Wake Forest, 9-1, regained the lead when Danny Young sank two free throws, but Joseph got the Yellow Jackets even at 66-66 when he hit a short hook shot with 1:11 remaining.

Young, who had hit his first four free throws in the game, then missed the front end of a one-and-one situation, with Tim Harvey claiming the rebound for Tech. The Jackets held the ball until 11 seconds remained, calling time out to set up the last-second shot, which was designed to go to either Mark Price or Joseph.

Salukis trim West Texas

CARBONDALE, Ill. (AP) — Kenny Perry scored 22 points and Cleveland Bibbens added 19 and pulled down 12 rebounds as Southern Illinois edged West Texas State 80-76 in the Salukis' Missouri Valley Conference opening game Saturday.

The two teams traded baskets early in the game and Perry's free throws with 10:31 left in the first half tied the score at 20-20. Southern Illinois then took control, outscoring the Buffaloes 20-10 for the remainder of the half with Bibbens scoring eight points in the stretch.

West Texas cut into the lead in the second half on the shooting of guard James Jackson who finished with 26 points. The Buffaloes cut the lead to within one down the stretch but Southern Illinoi' foul shooting down the stretch kep them at bay.

Roy Birch finished with 12 points, Nate Bufford added 10 as the Salukies improved their overall record to 9-3.

Former Cub finds life after baseball

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Where do athletes go and what do they do when their professional careers have come to an end?

For some their is a broadcaster's booth. Others turn to Lite Beer from Miller and Hertz commercials. However, those jobs are for athletes who were around long enough to make a name for themselves.

Kurt Seibert, an All-American for Clemson in his junior year in 1976 and a two-season performer for the Midland Cubs (the end of '77 and all of '78), didn't have an illustrious career, but he accomplished one of his goals before he was through — he made it to Chicago and spent the final 40 days of the 1979 season with the Cubs.

"I was only in the majors for 40 days, but it was my career," said Seibert. "I did a lot of watching from the bench but I enjoyed every minute of it."

In 1980 he was traded to the Minnesota Twins organization and spent two seasons in Toledo. He was sold to Detroit in 1982 and was released from the squad early in spring training.

NOW SEIBERT, originally from Maryland, is back in Midland where his wife, formerly Penny Lankford, is from, and playing baseball is behind him. He's starting a new career and it's one that will keep him near his first love: Athletics. Seibert is working for The Midlander, a local recreational complex, as director of the Human Performance Center, a department he's trying to build from the ground floor.

"I'm going to learn the business world," said Seibert. "I'm going to learn how to meet and treat people. We try to emphasize the importance of physical fitness, basically what I've been involved with all of my life as an athlete and the courses I was involved with in college: Fitness awareness. It's something I believe real strongly in."

Before he could take up his new career, Seibert went back to Clemson and finished the college education after his baseball career was cut short. He was drafted by the Chicago Cubs in 1976 in the third round.

"I was an All-American my junior year when Clemson went to the World Series (in Omaha)," said Seibert. "I was given a substantial bonus for signing and they drafted me in the third round. If not for the bonus, I probably would have stayed in school."

Two weeks ago, Seibert received his degree in administration management with physiology as a minor. Physiology, the science of fitness, was always one of Seibert's better subjects and he's now able to put his school work and professional experience to good use with his Human Performance Center. He was also a 3.0 or better student his last six semesters of school.

SEIBERT, AT 28, is bringing various athletic experiences to his new job. He wasn't just a baseball player. He took a few college courses while in Toledo and was involved in baseball clinics when in Midland. He also spent four years as an assistant college baseball coach at Clemson and Toledo University.

"I was doing that while playing pro ball," said Seibert. "A lot of guys don't realize they can do that. I got an education, made connections at Toledo and with the town people. The point I'm trying to make is that I broadened my view. Education is not just books.

"I volunteered one winter to work with the Midland High team and it also helped me because I was able to keep throwing," continued Seibert. "It was the year I had an operation on my arm so it helped me get my arm back in shape. It helped me with my coaching, showed me another philosophy of coaching. I watched how Tim (Whalen) related to the kids. I coached in the off season for four years at the major college level.

"Coming back to Midland now, one thing I'd like to do is let people know how good the two coaches are in Midland (Whalen and Midland Lee's Ernie Johnson). To get two of them in the same town of this size is quite an accomplishment. Back East they have a lot of talented players but the coaches don't have all the expertise in the world."

And what he's already done is nowhere near completing his life's goals.

"I want to succeed in business, obviously. That's everybody's goal," said Seibert. "I want to develop my children (Austin Elliott, 2½ years old; Stephanie Ann, 2½ months) to the best of my ability. I want to raise a family and, to me, that is a challenge.

"I want to experience as many things in life as the good Lord will let me. I'd like to be president of a university some day. Write a book. I have more than one goal. I want to succeed in working in a recreational complex and own one of my own some day and run clinics for kids. Politics, to see how many people I can get to trust me and put across my sincerity."

Seibert likes the challenge of setting goals and working to see them through. He used baseball as goal, the ultimate of which was accomplished when he made it to the big leagues.

"I used baseball to get through college and paid them back by being an All-American, the best player I could be," said Seibert. "You have to have pictures in your mind, goals, desires. You make every day a challenge and it gives you a reason to keep on going. I'd like to keep going until I'm about 80 or so."

SEIBERT LOOKED back a bit toward his baseball career, the moments he remembers and the costs he paid to get there.

"My first big league at bat was a strike out," said Seibert. "They all kidded me about it. They said I was nervous, but I wasn't nervous. I was excited. I didn't know I was going to be up. There were two out and none on in the sixth and the guy said 'You're up Seibert.'

"I tried to remember all the things they do on TV. I put pine tar on my bat and I never use pine tar. I swung a leaded bat and I usually just stretch with my own bat. I put on the wrong batting helmet. I'm a switch hitter and I didn't have my own helmet yet. I was running around the dugout looking for a helmet. "I faced a guy I'd faced all year long in AAA, a guy I'd hit good, but he struck me out. The next time I got up I hit the ball hard but didn't get a hit."

To get those moments, Seibert had to give up other sporting activities. Baseball owners don't want their players injured playing baseball let alone in other sports.

"From the time I got out of high school in '73 I wasn't able to go water skiing or snow skiing or play racquetball or basketball, probably my favorite sport," said Seibert. "I had to worry about my wrist and by my hands because of baseball."

Since returning to school, Seibert has returned to other sporting interests. He shoots baskets, though he admits he never really gave it up completely, and is working on his racquetball game. He says he wouldn't mind picking up sky diving, but that's about as dangerous as he'd like to go. Driving race cars or motorcycles is a bit more risky than he likes.

Baseball is still a favorite pasttime and he's looking forward to the start of the Midland Cubs season.

"I can't wait to see the Cubs play," said Seibert. "Watching them play will be a whole new area for me. I want to get involved in Midland activities, all the way from Little League to the Cubs."

Young stars in Hula

HONOLULU (AP) — Steve Young of Brigham Young University passed for one touchdown and ran for another to lead the West to a 21-16 victory over the East in the annual Hula Bowl all-star college football game Saturday.

Jim Sandusky, a receiver from San Diego State, was named the outstanding offensive player. He had seven pass receptions for a total of 124 yards.

Freddie Gilbert, a defensive end from Georgia, was the outstanding defensive player as he was credited with six tackles, including three which resulted in a loss of 21 yards.

The West scored just one minute, 10 seconds into the game. Jeff Leiding of Texas recovered an East fumble on the East's 12-yard line on the third play from scrimmage. Two plays later, Young hit Dave Lewis of California with a four-yard pass for the score.

Leiding left the game in the third quarter with an elbow injury.

Young scored on an 11-yard run with 8:07 remaining in the first quarter. A 52-yard pass from Young to Sandusky led to the touchdown.

Jeff Hostetler of West Virginia took over at quarterback for the East after Duke's Ben Bennett was unable to move the team in two series.

Hostetler led the East on an 80-yard touchdown march, which included a 34-yard pass to Cliff Benson of Purdue, and was capped by a 17-yard run by Iowa's Norm Granger for the score.

The East got the ball again under the Hula Bowl rule allowing the trailing team to receive the kickoff.

But Lupe Sanchez of UCLA intercepted a pass by Bennett at the goal line to stop the East's effort to tie the game.

The West scored again with 6:58 left in the half on a 46-yard pass from Steve Pelluer of Washington to Gerald McNeil of Baylor, the first play after Colorado's Victor Scott intercepted a pass by Hostetler.

The East took to a ground attack in the third quarter, capping a 72-yard touchdown drive with an eight-yard pass from Hostetler to Kenny Jackson of Penn State.

The East kept the 0all, but was unable to move. Young returned as West quarterback and drove his team to the East 38 yardline, where an offside penalty on fourth-down forced a punt at the beginning of the fourth quarter.

Hostetler led the East on another ground attack deep into West territory, but he fumbled on the West 3, with Rick Bryan of Oklahoma recovering for the West. Three plays later, Gilbert tackled Young in the end zone for an East safety.

The East took the ball on their own 15 with 2:30 remaining in the game. Hostetler led the attack to the West's 32 but was sacked by Reggie Singletary of Kansas State.

Hostetler came back, moving to the 22 and a first down, but Sanchez made another goalline interception to end the game.

Seattle makes bookies nervous

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Few of Reno's legal sports bookies were nervous last summer when fans of the Seattle Seahawks began putting unsually large sums of money on their National Football League team to go to the Super Bowl.

Those same bookies now are a little unnerved as pro football's perennial doormats are one victory shy of a date in Tampa Bay. Seattle plays the Raiders in the American Football Conference championship game in Los Angeles today.

Last August, the Seahawks went off at 100-1 to win the Super Bowl and 50-1 to win the AFC title.

"If they win, we're crushed, killed, slaughtered," said Mike Fernandes, the sports book supervisor at the MGM Grand-Reno. "If anybody else wins, we're OK."

"From what I've heard, everybody is buried on the Seahawks. People didn't care what the odds were.

Chuck Travella, sports book manager at Karl's Silver Club, agreed that a Seahawk championship would be "painful."

"It could cost us 50 grand to $75,000. There's nothing that could be much worse than that."

Bad day in Purgatory

who from his statistics hadn't arrived any sooner than I had, broke off a nice run and Dallas was threatening around the Rams' 20. There were isolated shouts of encouragement to break it all the way.

THEN, WHITE went back and fired a strike at the one to Leroy Irving, who unfortunately happens to wear horns on his headgear. By the time Ron Spring horsecollared him, Irving was on the Cowboy two.

I think it was Irving. I couldn't really tell. The bar had turned into bedlam. Everybody in the joint was for the Rams.

It didn't figure. The parking lot was loaded with Texas, Colorado, New Mexico and Arizona cars with nary a California car in sight.

I couldn't believe my ears. Either these people didn't know which team was which or they didn't know anything about football...that this was America's Team beeing humiliated. The temptation to make a speech was resisted, besides no self-respecting Texan would be skiing in Colorado when the Cowboys were on TV.

Leaving most of the beer, I stormed out of the bar and headed for the lift where there were no lines.

The only satisfaction came from the crowd at Texas Stadium. At the top of the lift, I looked out, snow covered mountains as far as the eye could see, and thought about it.

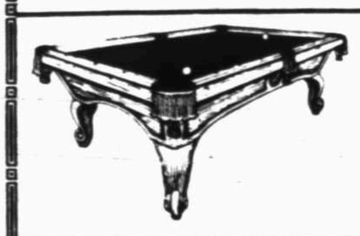

Everybody at Texas Stadium had looked so damned cold and miserable. It was sure nice to be vacationing in ski country where it was comfortable, even if the place was overrun by subversives.

Coach Guy Lewis watches Akeem Olajuwon practice free throws as Cougars cope with internal strife and broken water pipes.

Crisis in Houston

Cougs recovering nicely

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ

HOUSTON (AP) — Guy Lewis spent the Christmas holidays in Hawaii, where his University of Houston basketball team was ripped by the defections of two players and a loss to Fresno State in the finals of the Chaminade Classic.

The Cougar coach returned home Dec. 29, expecting a warm respite from the turmoil. Instead he found freezing weather, and at his front door he was greeted by soggy carpets and sagging ceilings. Pipes in the attics had burst during record low temperatures, leaving heavy damage.

With his family assembled around him, Lewis could have gone into a four-corners and tried to stall the problem or called in lanky plumbers to slam dunk the pipes.

But family members simultaneously came up with a better antidote for the occasion.

"With so many things going wrong, we just all started laughing," Lewis said. "We said if you put all this in a movie no one would believe it could all happen at once."

THE LEWISES recovered from their giggles, checked into a hotel and started cleaning up the mess.

The Cougar team also set about its own house cleaning, sweeping aside the holiday distractions and retooling for a run at their third consecutive trip to the NCAA Final Four.

They say they are no longer anguished over the departures of Benny Anders and Braxton Clark, who were miffed that freshmen Ricky Winslow and Michael Anderson replaced them in the starting lineup.

In fact, some players say the departures of Anders and Clark over a lack of playing time could not be considered a crisis.

"It really was a minor happening," guard Reid Gettys said. "Two players just told the coach they were quitting the team and he said fine and got them a ticket to go home. I would personally like to wish them luck wherever their paths take them from here."

Gettys said the Cougars went into Southwest Conference action last week more united as a team than ever before, ready improve upon their No. 7 ranking.

"It's something that could have torn this team apart with players taking sides but it's really served to pull us together," Gettys said. "We now have some guys who feel they've been given a better chance to play, myself included. So we've got guys on the bench who are playing even harder to get that chance."

THE DEPARTURES were a momentary crisis, however, for 7-foot center Akeem Olajuwon, whose best friend on the team was Anders.

"It did bother me that first game after they left," Olajuwon said. "Everybody was thinking about it. But that is in the past. They are gone and I know what I have to do."

Lewis is impatient at hearing questions about the departures almost two weeks after they occurred.

He says the whole incident was overplayed in the first place and in the second place it was not even the top crisis on the team this season.

The No. 1 problem, he said, was losing two games prior to league play — the season opener against defending NCAA champion North Caolina State, and to Fresno State.

"Every year you are going to have some crises," Lewis said. "Really, every time you lose a ball game it's a crisis. If you have any problems on your team they will usually expose themselves after a loss.

"I usually figure that's when you know you've got a good team is when you have a loss and you bounce back."

HOUSTON rebounded last season from successive losses to Syracuse and Virginia with 26 consecutive victories before losing to North Carolina State in the national championship game.

Three seasons ago, the Cougars lost four consecutive conference games but recovered and made a surprise trip to the Final Four.

Lewis has seen an increased determination on the team since the Hawaii trip and would like to think his team has met and conquered its crises for this season.

"I'd say since we got back from Hawaii, everybody is really pulling together for more unity than normal," Lewis said. "They are all trying to over-compensate in that regard and I can see nothing but complete unity."

Gettys said losing to North Carolina State was more of a turbulent time for the team than losing Anders and Clark.

"There was a lot of individual stuff going on after the N.C. State game this year, a lot of finger pointing," Gettys said. "But after the Fresno State game I personally never felt closer as a team."

Anders was a crowd favorite last season for his substitute roles. He was tabbed "Instant Offense," and was a contributing factor in the Cougars' drive to the NCAA finals.

In 10 games this season, Anders averaged 17 minutes per game and hit 43 percent from the field for a 7.3 average, while suffering defensive lapses. Winslow quickly fit into the team's dunking routine and has averaged 23 minutes and a 56 percent shooting average from the field.

Clark, who led the nation's junior college scorers last season, started Houston's first six games but averaged only 12 minutes of playing time and scored at a 35 percent clip.

ANDERSON came off the bench to fill voids and has been the starter since Clark went to the bench.

Lewis is not surprised that he has unhappy players on his bench. He'd be more shocked if all his bench players were content with their fates.

"How many players have you seen at different universities quit recently because of not playing enough," Lewis said. "It doesn't make any difference if you're great, pretty good or what, if you're not playing, you're dissatisfied."

Team captain Michael Young and Gettys said charges by Anders and Clark that the team was selfish, that players from the city of Houston got preferential treatment and that point guard Alvin Franklin passed only to certain players were untrue.

Valvano not embarrassed by loss

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Top-ranked North Carolina had just whipped defending NCAA champion North Carolina State Saturday, but Wolfpack Coach Jim Valvano wasn't disturbed, saying, "I don't feel like it was a 21-point beating."

"I'm not ashamed or embarrassed by this one," he said after the 81-60 ACC loss. "Carolina is a great club. Whatever they need, it's there. They have inside strength, great board play and they can shoot it."

Undefeated North Carolina, posting its 10th victory, broke open a close contest in the second half when the Tar Heels' Sam Perkins had 16 of his game-high 22 points. The 6-foot-10 senior hit on 8-of-12 from the field.

It was the ACC opener for the Tar Heels, while 12th-ranked N.C. State, 10-4, is 0-2 in the league.

All-American Michael Jordan and freshman Kenny Smith added 18 points apiece for the Tar Heels, who shot 50 percent from the field. Jordan paced North Carolina with 12 rebounds. N.C. State shot only 37 percent from the field and was outrebounded 40-34.

Carolina pulled away in the second half after leading 34-31 at intermission and 34-33 after Lorenzo Charles of the Wolfpack hit on a drive on the first play after intermission.

"I think the first five minutes in each second half have got to be the most important part of every game," Jordan said. "We did all the things we are capable of doing. We just busted the game open."

North Carolina then went on a 15-2 spree, with Perkins contributing seven points, to take a 49-35 lead with 14:06 to play. A N.C. State run midway in the second half fell short when Charles missed some key free throws.

"Lorenzo missing three one-and-one chances when we were within 10 doesn't help you in a game like that," Valvano said.

"Sam Perkins did a great job defensively on Charles in the second half. We didn't start him on Charles in the first half because we were afraid of foul trouble," North Carolina Coach Dean Smith said.

A capacity crowd of 12,400 at Reynolds Coliseum watched the Wolfpack attempt vainly to shoot over the Carolina zone.

Kentucky beats LSU

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Kentucky senior Melvin Turpin found a way to end the Wildcats' frustration at Louisiana State. He scored season-high 35 points to lead his second-ranked team to a 96-80 victory over the No. 9 Tigers Saturday.

"This is a good win for us. It is one we wanted because we had some problems the last three times down here," said the 6-foot-11 center, who also had a game-high 13 rebounds.

Turpin hit 15 of 17 shots from the field and five of six free throws as the Wildcats' awesome front line dominated the rebounding.

"Turpin was sensational. When he is ready to play he is as fine a player as there is in the country, and he was ready to play tonight," said Kentucky Coach Joe Hall as his team pushed its record to 10-0 on the season.

Cannon's sentence to stand

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Reducing the five-year prison sentence of former Louisiana State University football standout and confessed counterfeiter Billy Cannon would invite others into crime, says a federal judge.

Defense lawyers pleaded for a reduced sentence, saying Cannon cooperated with federal investigators and thus helped break up his $6 million scheme, which involved a half dozen people.

Trailers that can be unhitched and pick-up campers that can be removed from trucks are generally connected by a multiple connector. All wiring passing between the two parts of the trailers or camper goes through the connector. The tow vehicle usually features a female receptacle which is protected with a self-closing cover. The male plug is usually left unprotected on the trailer or camper. As a result, the male plug may become corroded over a period of time resulting in possible problems. It is suggested that the camper plug may be protected by covering it with a heavy plastic bag (when not in use) and tightly drawn tie at the bag's collar.

Teer aces same hole twice in 24 hours

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) –Several golfers have aced the same hole on successive days. But Sven Sjosten, a 71-year-old Swedish golfer, made his two holes-in-one within 24 hours in two different years.

Playing in a foursome on Sweden's southernmost course at Beddinge near Malmo, Sjosten scored his first ace on New Year's Eve. He played again on New Year's Day and aced the same par-3 hole, again using a pitching wedge.

"It's a short hole, but there are plenty of bunkers. And the terrible wind and the bouncy green made it tougher than usual," Sjosten recalled Saturday.

Sjosten did not have a hole-in-one insurance, but "it's worth buying champagne for nine people after hitting those aces," he said.

Going all the way

Attorney General Jim Mattox's recent decision that local governments can't legally ban the drinking of alcoholic beverages in motor vehicles is another indicator of how government sometimes goes only halfway in attempting to solve a problem.

Midland has four ordinances dealing with open containers and consumption of alcoholic beverages on city streets, roads and alleys. Mattox's ruling makes it clear that now the Legislature, which failed to act on the open container measure last session, must do so.

Mattox's ruling might cause some cities to rid themselves of their open container ordinances. Not Midland. City Attorney Joe Nuessle says he will recommend Midland leave its ordinance on the books until it's tested in court.

That's a wise decision, even if the city's ordinance loses any future court test. The real problem at play here is not open containers in automobiles, but drunken drivers. While it's true that an open container holding an alcoholic beverage in a vehicle doesn't mean the driver is intoxicated, that open container certainly can lead to a drunken driver and all the tragic consequences that can result.

Texas already has a law governing driving while drunk. But what about that driver who climbs into his vehicle after drinking several beverages in a bar and heads home after stopping to buy one "for the road" — the one that proves to be one too many?

In recent months there has been a public outcry about the carnage on the nation's streets and highways due to drunken drivers. Law enforcement officials also have indicated that public awareness of the driving while intoxicated problem has figured strongly into safer driving habits and enactment of a tougher DWI law in Texas.

Does it make sense, then, to not have a law that bans open alcoholic beverages from vehicles? Of course not.

Perhaps Mattox's ruling and the positive action by a number of cities such as Midland will bring about enactment of a statewide ban on open alcoholic beverages in vehicles.

If society is going to get serious about overcoming a recognized problem that touches thousands of lives yearly, it should do so without fail. Midland is doing just that.

Another View:

Countering terrorism

Americans have paid a high price for leftist political sabotage of U.S. intelligence systems: Numerous assassinations at home and abroad, the Marine headquarters blast at Beirut, kidnappings, hostage-takings, a series of bombings of embassies and other overseas posts, and terrorist bombings of the Capitol, public buildings in various U.S. cities and many office buildings.

Terrorist activities against Americans at home and overseas were highly stimulated by more than two decades of leftist agitation, propaganda and political action that hamstrung first congressional investigation and then FBI and CIA surveillance of terrorist organizations and activities.

For example, in two years in the last half of the 1970s, FBI informants in terrorist organizations declined from 1,100 to fewer than 50. In 1973 the FBI had more than 21,000 domestic security investigations in progress. By 1978 it had terrorism cases open on only 12 organizations.

The damage done under radical and "liberal" auspices to the CIA and counterintelligence operations in general during the late 1970s is incalculable. It may be measured to a large degree in terms of American officials and military personnel murdered overseas, of embassies blown up, of a lack of alertness and muddling of purpose that did not exist previously at command levels.

During those years when U.S. intelligence should have been undergoing refinement and strengthening, it was being pilloried and sabotaged.

International terrorism, laboring under no such handicaps, thrived until it reached its present arrogant tide, working hand in hand with the Soviet KGB and its Bulgarian corollary in the conspiracy to assassinate Pope John Paul, committing a string of gory murders in Italy, Germany, France and Greece.

The murder schools of the KGB undoubtedly have a guiding role in the truck bombings in Beirut and elsewhere in the Middle East. It is improbable that the Soviets, with their billion-dollar investment of new arms in Syria, would leave such things to chance or to the wild impulses of Moslem fanatics.

The time and energy spent on the bleeding of U.S. intelligence during the 1970s should have been spent training and planting agents and building up surveillance systems capable of ferreting out the truck bombers, their hiding places, explosives sources, helpers, connections, the identities of members of their organizations and all other details essential to their interdiction and, if need be, destruction.

Not all Americans were blind to the real motives for the wrecking of the U.S. intelligence apparatus. The distance from that sabotage operation on Capitol Hill to the scene of the Marine headquarters bombing at the Beirut airport was, in one very real sense, incredibly short.

In today's world of proliferating terrorism, the nation that does not act shrewdly and intently to field the most capable intelligence apparatus it can devise, to stop terrorists before they can do their dirty work, will pay the price of failure with ever-increasing bloodshed.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Hussein still not peacemaker

WASHINGTON — I have a message for President Reagan as he seeks to revive his moribund peace plan for the Middle East. It's the same message I delivered more than a year ago: Don't count on King Hussein of Jordan.

Jack Anderson

"Reagan sees the king as a possible strategic partner and is ready to offer him a generous gift of arms," I wrote on Dec. 22, 1982. "But intelligence reports describe Hussein as 'uncomfortable' with this role and hesitant to sit down at the bargaining table. He would like the military aid without the strategic honor."

Unfortunately, this appraisal is still valid. Four U.S. presidents have courted the diminutive desert monarch, hoping to win him over to sweet reasonableness in a general Mideast peace settlement. With Hussein's cooperation, the Reagan peace plan could become a reality; without it, the initiative doesn't have a chance. And Hussein is continuing to withhold his sought-after cooperation.

For months in early 1983, top administration officials courted Hussein ardently, and expressed confidence that he would eventually join in overall peace negotiations with Israel. But it turned out they were whistling Dixie. Hussein has enough problems without incurring the wrath of other Arab nations by sitting down at the table with the Israelis.

The little king has held onto his throne — and his life — by the skin of his teeth for more than 30 years, surviving coup plots and assassination attempts by skill, courage and more than a little bit of luck. He rightly fears that any accommodation with Israel, which is what the Reagan peace plan would require, might prove fatal.

So the administration's peace initiative bombed out. It was a major embarrassment for the White House and for the State Department officials who had assured the president he could rely on Hussein.

Heads rolled in Foggy Bottom. Among those who suffered for pushing Hussein as the keystone of the Reagan peace plan was Nicholas Veliotes, head of State's Near East Bureau. He was shipped off to be ambassador in Cairo.

But now it appears that the policy advisers who led President Reagan into his Middle East peace plan embarrassment have bobbed back to the surface like so many corks. Like the Bourbon kings of France, they have apparently learned nothing and forgotten nothing. They are still pushing the idea that the peace plan is viable and that Hussein will rise to the occasion and support it.

In his Cairo exile, Veliotes is busily trying to get Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak to support the Reagan peace plan that Veliotes helped draft in Washington. He has apparently persuaded officials in Foggy Bottom that the recent reunion between Mubarak and Palestinian Liberation Organization leader Yasir Arafat was a crucial step forward in the U.S. peace initiative.

The reasoning behind that hope is that Mubarak will support the Reagan plan as a means of "taking out" Syria, which he regards as a threat to peace in the Middle East. And he views the Reagan peace plan as the best way to preserve the peace.

Intelligence sources told my associate Lucette Lagnado that Mubarak has another goal as well: He wants to persuade Arafat that Jordan should negotiate on the Palestinians' behalf at the peace table. This is crucial, because the excuse Hussein gave for refusing to support the U.S. initiative was that he was not authorized to speak for the Palestinians.

The White House shares Mubarak's hopes of neutralizing the Syrians and their Soviet allies by opening a diplomatic "second front" — the United States in league with the moderate Arab countries to force sweet reason on the Syrians. It is the best chance the United States has of extricating itself from the mess in Lebanon, administration officials believe.

Despite the best efforts of Mubarak and the administration, intelligence sources believe, the Reagan initiative will fail this time, too. For one thing, they say, Arafat will never allow Hussein to negotiate for the Palestinians; this would be an abdication of the last remnants of power Arafat has.

For his part, Hussein has, if anything, even less reason to support the Reagan plan now than when it was first proposed. The Syrians then were still reeling from the drubbing they got from Israel in the summer of 1982.

But now Syria has been completely rearmed by the Soviets and is stronger than ever. Hussein, already concerned at assassination attempts against Jordanian diplomats by Syrian-backed terrorists, doesn't want to provoke the reckless regime in Damascus by negotiating with Israel.

INSIDE REPORT:

Jackson coup changes landscape

WASHINGTON — Euphoria swept the White House and the Reagan re-election committee last Tuesday less because of Lt. Robert Goodman's release than the abrupt change in the political landscape wrought by the Rev. Jesse Jackson.

Rowland Evans

Jackson's triumph in freeing the downed naval aviator wiped away what President Reagan's insiders now confess was maladroit handling of the affair. Even more important for Republicans, it entrenched the evangelistic civil rights activist on the Democratic presidential scene.

Robert Novak

Jackson, the wild card who could disrupt front-runner Walter F. Mondale's well-planned game, had been falling out of the Democratic presidential deck — to Mondale's immense relief. Thanks to Goodman's release, however, Jackson promises to irritate Democrats generally and Mondale particularly through the San Francisco convention.

Much as this now satisfies the Reagan camp, it was not dimly conceived by the president's men as Jackson planned his Syrian mission. White House refusal to put through a telephone call from Jackson (which the president had said he would take) is now explained as precaution against blighting his mission with a U.S. government imprint. But Reagan's political advisers harbored quite different concerns at that time; they did not want to associate the president with a quixotic effort denounced by respectable opinion led by The New York Times.

Much worse politically than Jackson's telephone non-connection were specific State Department instructions to presidential envoy Donald Rumsfeld not to raise Goodman's captivity in his Damascus conversations for fear the Syrians might use the pilot as a bargaining chip. Even so, for so experienced a party politician as Rumsfeld not to raise the issue anyway astounded some administration insiders. "I'm sure it was just a case of Don being too new on the job to free-lance," one high-ranking official told us.

The impression given by the administration was that Robert Goodman carried no high priority. "We came very close to looking racist on this one," one close-in Reagan adviser confided to us. Jackson took the Republicans off the hook, helped along by Reagan's typically graceful acceptance of his feat.

It also revived Fritz Mondale's biggest nuisance, just as he seemed on the verge of eliminating the wild card from the deck. Since Nov. 1, Jackson had lost 44 percent of his supporters to Mondale (according to a private poll for another candidate). For a candidate grossly deficient in organization and fund-raising, that looked fatal.

Far from changing that prognosis, Jackson's mission to Damascus was viewed by Democratic leaders with the same contempt voiced by The New York Times. "Tell Jesse he's not president yet," said a sarcastic presidential rival, Sen. Ernest F. Hollings. But if South Carolina Fritz was characteristically indiscreet, Minnesota Fritz was characteristically cautious. "I want to be careful here," Mondale told us over Cable News Network when asked to comment on Jackson's impending trip.

Goodman's release is universally viewed in political circles as pulling Jackson's black voters back from Mondale. "How can any black turn his back on Jesse after he rescued a brother?" was the rhetorical question posed to us by a white pro-Mondale political operative.

Whether or not the Damascus afterglow also reaps Jackson some white votes in early primaries is debatable. That he now will be around the next six months is not, which forces Mondale to figure out how to deal with him. Reagan's gleeful re-election strategists archly suggest that it would be "an affront to blacks" if Mondale does not take Jackson as vice president or at least secretary of state.

It is obviously more subtle than that. Jackson's demands that the Democratic Party move to the left dismay Mondale strategists who see the need to edge their man rightward toward the center. Moreover, in making his demands for much greater black participation in the party, Jackson often hints at reprisals.

He does so again in an interview with Lally Weymouth published in the current New York magazine. Jackson quotes Georgia Democratic Chairman Bert Lance as saying, "I can't deliver" on these demands, and himself responding: "If the party cannot deliver for its membership, why should the membership deliver for the party?" When Weymouth asked about a Jackson independent presidential candidacy, his none-too-reassuring answer was, "I'm not inclined to."

GEORGE F. WILL

Anti-porno measure 'revealing'

WASHINGTON — By the time peace spread her gentle wings over the Minneapolis city council it had, by a 7 to 6 vote, done something innovative. In doing so it showed how awkward are attempts to act wisely on unwise premises.

George F. Will

The council came out for censorship, declaring pornography to be a form of illegal sex discrimination. Had the mayor not vetoed the measure, even the panorama of skin that assaults the senses of anyone approaching a normal newsstand would have violated the civil rights of all Minneapolis women, regardless of whether they are exposed to or affronted by it.

The amendment to the city's civil-rights law would have defined pornography as the practice of "exploitation and subordinaton based on sex which differentially harms women." That is part of a remarkable statement of "findings":

"The bigotry and contempt (pornography) promotes, with the acts of aggression it fosters, harm women's opportunities for equality of rights in employment, education, property rights, public accommodations and public services; create public harassment and private denigration; promote injury and degradation such as rape, battery and prostitution and inhibit just enforcement of laws against these acts; contribute significantly to restricting women from full exercise of citizenship and participation in public life, including in neighborhoods; damage relations between the sexes; and undermine women's equal exercise of rights to speech and action..."

Although most of those assertions may be true, or true enough, it is hard to say how they constitute "findings." The assertions (here is another: "pornography is central in creating and maintaining the civil inequality of the sexes") are overreaching, a tactic of desperation. Why is such extravagance necessary? Because the logic of today's jurisprudence requires such unreasonableness before reasonable action can be taken.

It should not be necessary, before using law to sustain minimal decencies, to pretend that one can demonstrate that the polluting touch of pornography produces this or that particular behavior. But the Minneapolis law bristles with such assertions because today's judicial fashion holds that (in Felix Frankfurter's words) "law is concerned with external behavior and not the inner life of man."

It would be more sensible to say, as proper conservatives do: Behavior is a consequence of the inner life. Besides, the soul of the citizenry reveals the success of the country. We judge a nation by the character of its citizens, and common sense unassisted by sociological "findings" tells us that pornography is coarsening, and hence injurious to the community, and especially to women. Even more destructive than pornography are libertarian laws that express the doctrine that law should be indifferent to the evolution of the nation's character — to the inner life. So censorship of the most execrable material is wise.

Alas, the First Amendment as currently construed proscribes common sense. The freedom of speech clause looks as though it has been trampled by a naked dancer, which in a sense it has. Various courts have decided that the clause was designed to protect not just speech — a capacity connected with reasoning and ideas, and hence self-government — but "expression," including that of naked dancers.

The mayor of Minneapolis said the measure went beyond the regulation of conduct to the impermissible regulation of "the transmission of ideas which may or may not have a causal relationship with illegal conduct." It is odd to speak of "ideas" being transmitted in pornographic movies, but that is not the only example here of the brittleness of the inapposite language of liberalism.

A wise woman once wrote that sex is the Tabasco sauce that a nation with an adolescent palate sprinkles on every course in the menu. But the Supreme Court has left local authorities with some power over the crudest uses of the sauce. Local standards can be consulted when regulating material that appeals to prurient interests and is without literary, artistic, political or scientific value. If women can find more convincing language to use when pressing the point they made in Minneapolis, and I wish them well, they will alter community standards and thereby perhaps expand the power of local authorities to regulate pornography.

SPEAKING OUT

Humanity balances individual's values with herd's demands

By DEAN KING

Dean King, a Midlander since about 1958, was raised at Gainesville. He attended Cooke County Junior College and Midland College, and is employed as an audio operator for KBAT radio.

Since the dawn of the human race, every benefit to mankind has resulted from some form of individual initiative while every woe of mankind has been related in some way to our herding instincts. Whether we like it or not, the ongoing pattern of human life always has been — and always will be — perpetual confrontation of the values of the individual in conflict with the demands of the herd.

But, of course, "initiative" is not synonymous with "nobility." Truly noble human conduct is nearly nonexistent. The vast majority of our actions could be justly classified into varying degrees of ignobility, depending upon one's relation to the herd. Most mingle into it, in which case, there's really no need to classify initiative because it quickly dissolves away. In all other cases, ignobility ranges from zero to some unknown plateau which probably has not been reached — yet.

A few individuals just maintain a quiet separation from the herd while others seem to deliberately antagonize it. Still others concentrate on herding the herd.

Being utterly devoid of any conscience or personality of its own, the herd responds in a "domino effect" to any stimuli imposed upon it — especially manipulations from calculating herdsmen. Predictable control requires fairly constant activity to maintain direction and dynamics. At rest, it becomes highly unstable. The absence of external stimuli leaves a vacuum that will be filled by internal agitation. The herd has all the volatile elements for explosion (the larger, the more ominous). And the detonator is always "individual initiative" — noble or ignoble.

We don't know the exact point in man's history when the major threat to his survival changed from the ravages of wild animals to the encroachment of mankind — upon mankind. But we do know that personal disagreements grew into tribal bloodfeuds, then into international wars, and eventually into our present day threat of global devastation.

Ironically the modern world's two major military adversaries grew from similar military origins: Both were born of revolutionary fervor against imperial monarchies. But ideologically, they began, and have remained, diametric opposites. The American Revolution declared the "inalienable rights" of the individual. In sharp contrast, the Russian "Bolshevik" Revolution proclaimed "emancipation" of the "working class" as a collective, anonymous mass — complete with herdsmen to "ride-herd" on non-herding inclinations.

Ideological irony has since permeated American "special interest" groups. We hear, rising perpetually from the various herds, a polymonotonous din of remarkably similar harangues propounding "emancipation" for all humanity. Oh yessiree, they want to save us "huddled masses" from: Economic tyrants, industrial litterbugs, military nucleacs, firearms, fascists and freedom's favorite phobia — readily cussed, rarely discussed — "the communist menace."

Question: Have you ever noticed how most of the "crusader" types seem to share the same knack for consistently overlooking (or obviously avoiding) the one and only avenue that can possibly lead to (genuine) "emancipation" of anyone from anything. Instead of encouraging individual initiative, they preach mass collective unity. Well, so did Marx, Lenin and Hitler — the master herdsmen.

All the proponents of 20th Century herdsmanship would like us to believe that more and more unification into ever larger herds will effectively "de-horn" the danger of imminent stampede. Recorded history (including today's headlines) does not agree. And besides, even if we whack off the horns of dilemma, there's still the hoofs. Some choice — impaled or trampled!

We have only to look and listen to detect the most immediate result of mass unification: The bigger the herd, the deeper the manure!

International formula could save face for all factions in Lebanon

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.

Editor-in-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

EDITOR'S REPORT

Hearst

LOS ANGELES — In thinking over this report to you on weekly domestic and international affairs, I virtually decided to recommend withdrawal of our Marines from Beirut when the news suddenly arrived about an international formula that could hopefully preserve "face" for all concerned parties.

The idea convinced me to put on "hold" a withdrawal phase for which a rising crescendo of Americans believe is the way out of the morass. As reported to me, the plan calls for President Amin Gemayel to extend his authority to areas of the little country that so far have escaped factional fighting. Syria and Israel, arch-enemies, have agreed to the project. We would use our influence with Israel to hold its fire while Saudi Arabia, oil-rich Arab moderate, would work its persuasion with Syria to sit still.

Once this program — admittedly fraught with problems — could be effective, around 40 percent of Lebanon will be brought under government control. Then, as congressional leaders were informed in Washington, a dialogue could begin for negotiation. It most certainly would result in partition of the country. But, importantly, the program could enable co-existence to begin between Israel and Syria, reduce tension in the Middle East and allow our boys to be withdrawn and come home.

In view of this development, sudden, startling and imaginative, I believe it's wiser to follow Sir Winston Churchill's sage advice "it is better to jaw-jaw-jaw than war-war-war." So, while we allow a reasonable time for the project to gather momentum, I urge that we hold off withdrawing the Marines and see what happens in the near future.

The optimistic news caught me at deadline time for this report. The plan had been worked up by President Reagan's special Mideast envoy Donald Rumsfeld, Secretary of State Shultz and the president's national security adviser, Bob McFarlane. The president then reviewed all options, made suggestions and the package was proposed. Rumsfeld presently is back in the Middle East talking to the principal parties.

I don't know what, if anything, the personal mission of Jesse Jackson to Syria did to help expedite the program. He was successful in winning the release of naval Lt. Robert Goodman, the navigator-bombardier shot down and captured by Syrians. The Rev. Jackson, seeking the Democratic nomination for president of the U.S., merits the heartfelt congratulations of all Americans for his feat, as the president declared in welcoming him and the Goodman family to the White House.

With Lt. Goodman's release, President Reagan promptly called President Hafez Assad of Syria to thank him and urged Syria's leader to join with him in a quest for peace. I feel that the presidential telephone call went a long way toward formulating this peace initiative being developed now.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Terrible decision

To the Editor:

I have heard numerous complaints about the Midland public school system in the 11 years my children have been in school. Some I have tried to reason out as being truly in the best interests of everyone involved, but not this time.

My complaint is not only for my child and myself but for 16 other children who will have to adjust to new friends and a new teacher. We are not speaking of fifth or sixth graders but kindergarten children. This is the most critical year in a child's school life and how the administration can toy with those lives is beyond me.

Mrs. Janice Watson has been at Bowie for several years and is the most wonderful teacher I have ever had the pleasure to meet and have work with my children. She is kind and has a way of making those 5- and 6-year-olds want to do their best in school. Janice is truly concerned about the best interests of every child she meets or works with. We parents have the highest regard for her as a teacher and person.

And now they say they are taking her away from us and moving her to a new school. Hire a new teacher or use a substitute in the new school for the remainder of the year or whatever you need but don't mess with these children and Mrs. Watsons' well being. I realize they say Bowie's enrollment is down and she will move to a school that needs her. Fine, then do that in September when it will affect less children — not now!

How can an administration proclaim to be concerned about children and do this to such a vulnerable age of children? Where is the common sense? Where is the concern for children? They have shown terrible judgement and I hope they rectify this immediately!!

Thank you

To the Editor:

This past Christmas season, the Unitarian Universalist Church offered UNICEF cards and calendars for sale to the Midland community. I am please to report that $470.50 was raised, reflecting the sale of nearly the entire consignment.

I would like to thank everyone who purchased UNICEF cards, who volunteered their time to help with sales, and the Unitarian Universalist Church for hosting the sales.

The proceeds collected will mean better health care and nutrition, safe water and sanitation, and better access to education for children who are living in a time of darkness.

On behalf of UNICEF and the children, thank you for your kindness and support. These efforts will help make life more bearable for the thousands of needy children throughout the world.

More deputies

To the Editor:

Recently I placed a call to the sheriff's office at 1:30 a.m. It was about 20 degrees outside and visibility was maybe 50 feet, but a deputy came as quickly as possible.

Now, for all of you sitting in your recliners saying well that is their job, they are paid to do this. True, but there were only two men on duty that night to cover the many miles of the rural area that encompasses Midland. Why? Because each time Dallas Smith has asked for an increase in salary, men, uniforms, or anything else, he has either been turned down, or given a portion of what he has asked for.

This Catch-22 situation is like sending a boxer into the ring, telling him not to come out until he has won the fight and then tying his hands behind his back.

One question for the county commissioners. What is your dollar value for a human life?

In closing let me say this is not just a one person problem. It belongs to all of us living in the rural and outlying areas of Midland. If you don't want to stand up and be counted, ask quesions and get some sraight answers or call your county commissioner and ask why we can't appropriate more money to the sheriff's office for additional deputies.

Christmas spirit

To the Editor:

I had the privilege of working with a fine community service over the Christmas weekend — Senior Services of Midland.

They coordinate the weekend program, called "Share A Meal," that delivers a hot meal to our city's elderly and handicapped. Ordinarily, Luby's prepares the meals and various churches and individuals deliver the meals. However, since Luby's was closed on Christmas Day, there was no one to prepare the meals.

The manager, Jerry Kruger and his wife, Molly, and their three small children volunteered to give up their Christmas morning to prepare the meals so no one would have to do without. That is the true spirit of Christmas by my definition. I feel very blessed to have met this family, and I just wanted to make public their generosity.

Hungry also found in American suburbs

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

On Monday the President's Task Force on Food Assistance is expected to present its findings on who is hungry in America and why. Undoubtedly it will reflect studies made on Skid Rows, Indian reservations, inner-city slums and depressed rural areas such as Johnstown, Pa., where unemployment hit 26 percent in 1983. It's not likely that the investigators looked for hunger in suburban communities where much poverty exists but is hidden.

Homeless people are living in neighborhood parks, under bridges, along freeway embankments. Daytime parking lots become miniature cities at night when people settle in to sleep in cars or under tents.

In North Hollywood, in the shadow of movie studios, within sight of movie stars' homes, families are doubled up in small apartments, or living in garages, or sharing a room with a hot plate in a shabby motel.

Current government programs are insufficient to deal with this growing phenomenon. By the third or fourth week of each month, government aid (welfare checks, food stamps) are gone and hunger sets in. Private groups have formed to alleviate this problem. One of these is the North Hollywood Interfaith Food Pantry, a neighborhood coalition of five churches and two synagogues now giving emergency food to 200 people a week.

One reason for the inadequacy of the government's response is the common confusion between hunger and starvation. Policy-makers discredit reports of hunger because they have not seen children with swollen bellies and emaciated limbs. That is evidence of starvation, not hunger. Yet malnutrition and prolonged hunger are life-threatening to infants.

At the food pantry starving people are rarely seen. The clients are usually at the pre-hunger or hunger level. The pantry tries to stave off the next stage by giving them emergency food and referring them to social agencies for other assistance.

About two-thirds of the clients come to the pantry only once. The 10 percent who are homeless average two visits each. Seventy percent are families with children; the under-18 age group is 56 percent of our clientele. Few persons over 60 visit.

Most likely, some of these people can purchase food for themselves. But if 10 percent deceive the pantry about their financial status, it still needs to stay open for the 90 percent who do not.

The benefits of a healthier economy won't filter down to these clients for a long time. For some of them, never. Every week, food pantries like this are being pushed harder and harder, yet they dare not cease operation.

BILL MODISETT

'Dirty Harry' expresses feelings of many Americans

Bill Modisett

All Clint Eastwood has to do is growl, "Go ahead. Make my day" in his new movie, "Sudden Impact," and — suddenly — the film is certain to be the topic of conversation for weeks to come.

Why? Think about it.

In the movie character Harry Callahan, Clint Eastwood has given body and form to a need expressed by the American public in prison sentences of 300 or 400 years and the reinstitution of the death penalty, which the public never told the Supreme Court to take away. To take away fulfillment of that need is to flirt with the blossoming of vigilante justice.

That isn't to say the American public is incompassionate, cruel or heartless. Doubtless there are countless bleeding hearts who will claim that is the case. But it isn't.

What the American public is seeking — and finding in the form of the Harry Callahan character — is a degree of justice lacking in the judicial system today — justice with an unavoidable certainty.

Callahan says what he means. Callahan follows through on what he says. Callahan always remains aware that justice is the hand of compassion extended to the victim of crime while remembering the rights of the accused. Has the American judicial system forgotten for whom justice is intended? Have the scales of justice been weighted in favor of the criminal?

Not in Eastwood's "Dirty Harry" character. If a choice is to be made, Callahan makes that choice in favor of the victim, not the criminal. With a vengeance, dirty word though it has become in recent times.

When criminal prosecution evolved into the 20th Century, when the gas chamber and the electric chair fell out of favor with our "civilized" system of justice, when the civil liberties movement took compassion for the accused to ridiculous heights, justice was swept away.

What replaced justice was an orgy of criminal's rights at the victim's expense. And frustration. Frustration from a public that all too often sees a criminal turned loose on a "technicality" or released from prison early for "good time" while the victim's horror remains, will never be forgotten.

There is a particular point in "Sudden Impact" when the audience breathes a sigh of relief. A girl is surrounded by three thugs on an ocean boardwalk. She is about to meet a fate probably worse than death. Possibly followed by that death.

The camera pans to the end of the boardwalk and there, silhouetted in the darkness by lights, stands Harry. There is a chuckle of expectation from the movie crowd. And the frozen stares from the thugs. Everyone knows. Justice is about to be served.

Yes, you can dilute the effectiveness of the ending by noting that Harry is taking the law into his own hands. Or that "extenuating circumstances" possibly should be weighed. Or that it's just a movie and in "real life" things don't turn out the same way.

That's definitely true. But our movies are, to a degree, a reflection of our society. Why is the Harry Callahan character so popular?

Maybe because he can give the public something it's not finding in court.

MC drama department finding identity

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

"Like anything else, you don't start a wonderful basketball program the first year," Michael Spicer says of Midland College's drama department. "It takes a few years to grow. It takes a few years for people to become aware that you exist."

Although drama courses have been offered at MC for a number of years, the program lacked cohesiveness. "There wasn't much emphasis on giving the program an identity. This is really what we're trying to do now," Spicer says.

MC and Midland Community Theatre have, in the past, worked together on the drama program. It began with the involvement of Art Cole, MCT's founding director and director emeritus, in establishing guidelines for an associate degree in community theater. Two years ago, both organizations realized that to give the program impetus, it must be revamped and led by someone. Spicer now is in charge of the drama department at MC while remaining a director at MCT.

Last spring MC staged its first play, "Bullshot Crummond." This spring it will present its second. What the play will be remains an unknown until after Wednesday and Thursday's registration and the semester is underway. It is only then that the needs and abilities of the participating students can be ascertained.

MC's drama department offers acting, voice and diction (Lessac method), history of the theater, introduction to the theater, introduction to technical theater and rehearsal and performance — "courses that will get some requirements out of the way for students who are wanting to go to an upper level university."

Spicer talks about each one.

"Introduction to the Theatre," deals with the history of theater and the role of the actor, director, designers, producer, audience and critic. "We talk about the business of theater," Spicer says. "I spend one lecture talking about the business in New York, the most proliferate theater city in the United States, as a business, and how it works the way it works, and why it works that way.

"I spend another whole session talking about how to go about getting a job. It's not so they can go out and get a job but simply so they understand what it takes, what's necessary, and the methods by which people derive their careers in the theater."

Being more talented doesn't mean that person will get the job, according to Spicer. Instead, being too tall or too short or too dark or too light may mean someone else lands the job. "You can get the job or not get the job because of obscure reasons."

The courses, Introduction to Acting and Acting II, are designed to increase the students' perceptions, to make them more aware of having a process through which to approach a role. "We do a lot of sensory exercises. We do basic scene work and monologue work. Acting II, which is the second-semester acting course, is a little more advanced and a little more in-depth in terms of scene work. It's not so advanced that someone just coming into it couldn't glean something from the course."

The spring semester course, History of the Theater, covers 1642 to today. The fall semester course covers prehistory to 1642.

The Technical Theater course shows students "the basic use of tools in a shop, how a set is constructed, what materials are used, how it's put together, why it's put together that way, with a number of hours of hands-on experience in the shop working on productions."

In Voice and Diction, Spicer says, "The first half of the class is usually physical warmup because that's so important to the body and to the voice. The second half is working specifically on the technique. Good vocal quality and proper diction is a learnable experience. This is an essential course to a number of people, not just necessarily in acting. Anybody who can learn to speak correctly will serve themselves better later in life."

All students in the drama department sign up for the one-hour Rehearsal and Performance class so they can get credit for the work they do out of class. Class credit is gained through seeing films and live theater, or participating in some aspect of live theater.

Classes which may be added to the curriculum next fall include an introductory design course and a cinema course, one which will be tied to the MCT film series.

The classes are designed to have an appeal for non-theater students and area residents.

"I try to tailor the courses so that students who just have a basic interest can gain something from the course," Spicer says. "I'm a firm believer that any course you take that teaches you to stand up in front of your peers and talk or speak or perform is essential. The greatest fear people have is getting up in front of an audience and speaking."

Midland-Odessa chorale to hold auditions Tuesday

Auditions for the Midland-Odessa Symphony Chorale will be held Tuesday and Jan. 17 from 6:45 to 7:30 p.m. at the Symphony Rehearsal Hall, Terminal.

The Chorale will open the spring season in February with a "Choral Music of Our Heritage" concert. Included on the program will be the Midwest premiere of "Spring Cantata" by Gregg Smith as well as traditional favorites.

In March the symphony and chorale join together in Gabriel Faure's "Requiem," one of the most beautiful works of the 19th century. Works by other French composers will also be featured.

Later in the season, the Chorale will present an "Evening of Broadway" as well as being featured in the season's grand finale with the symphony and bass-baritone Arnold Voketaitus in an evening of opera arias and choruses.

No solos will be required at the audition. Other audition times can be arranged by making an appointment with Dr. Stanley Engebretson, chorale director. This is Engebretson's fifth season as director of the chorale.

For more information on the chorale or the auditions call 563-5269.

Connery: 'Never again'

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The man who convinced actor Sean Connery to make his acclaimed return as James Bond in "Never Say Never Again" wants Connery to say "never" one more time. But Connery says it's really NEVER this time.

Producer Jack Schwartzman said he has film rights to another Bond movie. But Connery, unhappy with the way Schwartzman made "Never Say Never Again," said he "absolutely" would not return again to the agent 007 role he created in the first Bond movie, "Dr. No," in 1963.

Connery said making his recent release seemed "as long as all the other six I did put together.'

"Anyway, by the time they'd be ready to go on another Bond, I'd be too old," said Connery, 53.

'Twilight Zone' hearings will begin Monday

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A hearing starts Monday for five filmmakers charged with the deaths of three actors during production of "Twilight Zone," in what some lawyers call an unprecedented case that could drive the movie industry out of California.

The preliminary hearing before Superior Court Judge Brian Crahan is to determine if there is enough evidence for director John Landis and four others to stand trial on charges of involuntary manslaughter for the July 1982 deaths of actor Vic Morrow and two children.

Attorney Jerome Berchin, who is suing the filmmakers and Warner Bros. studio for $200 million on behalf of one child's family, said the very prospect of a trial is unprecedented.

"I feel a precedent already has been set," Berchin said. "I think the movie industry has been shaken by this accident...because it appears that insufficient safety precautions were taken."

"It's already had a very substantial effect in terms of insurance, in terms of who's covered under insurance and in terms of some directors' extreme nervousness about making some kinds of movies at all," said prominent entertainment attorney Tom Pollock.

More than $82,000 in fines, currently on appeal, have been assessed by state health and labor agencies against the moviemakers and Warner Bros., which distributed "Twilight Zone" to theaters last summer.

Neither Warner Bros. nor co-producer Steven Spielberg were charged with criminal violations.

"We didn't have sufficient evidence to show that, criminally, they (Warner Bros.) were responsible for this," Deputy District Attorney Gary Kesselman said Thursday.

Last June, a county grand jury indicted Landis, associate producer George Folsey Jr., production manager Dan Allingham, special effects coordinator Paul Stewart and helicopter pilot Dorsey Wingo.

Wingo was flying the helicopter during early morning filming of a Vietnam war sequence in a riverbed near Valencia, 40 miles northwest of Los Angeles. A powerful special effects explosion disabled the craft and it fell on the three victims, killing them instantly.

Landis' attorney, Harland Braun, said Thursday that if the case went to trial and Landis was convicted, no filmmaker ever would risk filming in California again.

ANTIQUES
Antiques and fine arts are rated by financial experts among the top three "best investments" today — along with real estate, precious metals, and precious and semiprecious stones. But only antiques have the distinction of being affordable by large and small investors alike. (Have you priced diamonds, gold, or investment real estate lately?) Antiques are available in every investor's price range.
The suggestion that "carefully selected antiques should double in value within three years" is an exciting one. And what other investment can you display, use and enjoy daily in your home or office while it grows in value?

'Man Who Loved Women' tempting but unsatisfying

A Review

Burt Reynolds' latest movie, "The Man Who Loved Women," is, as the title suggests, about a man who is obsessed with the opposite sex. And as sculptor David Fowler, Reynolds loves them all, in every variety; the short and tall, young and not so young, blonde, brunette and redhead. But before long, this obsession begins to affect his work, and he seeks help with a psychoanalyst — a woman, of course, (played by Julie Andrews).

Based on a 1977 Francois Truffaut film of the same name, "The Man Who Loved Women" is a Blake Edwards' version that reverses the equation. Truffaut's lover worked hard for affection, but Edwards' lothario is besieged by adoring women, and his "illness" renders him incapable of saying no to his impulses.

The story of Fowler's conquests is interwoven with scenes in his analyst's office, with Miss Andrews providing narration to bridge the gaps. And there are plenty of gaps. Like the same experience one feels after eating candy from a sampler — tempted but unsatisfied with just one taste of one kind — "The Man Who Loved Women" just doesn't let us know enough about any of the ladies who are drawn to this sexually benign fellow.

There is Kim Basinger as passionate and slightly raunchy Louise, the wife of a Texas millionaire, Marilu Henner as "leggy" Agnes, and Jennifer Edwards as Fowler's vulnerable hooker-turned-artistic assistant, Nancy. They weave in and out of his life, along with many others (including a fling with his analyst), leaving no clue to the mystery of his appeal.

Apparently, writers Edwards, Milton Wexler and Geoffrey Edwards are content to have us think a handsome (Reynolds looks his best) nonthreatening, vulnerable, wealthy, single and famous sculptor is irresistible to all women. OK, no stretch there. But his melancholy is depressing and his aspect flat. A few hours with Fowler is enough to turn anyone off the "man who has everything."

Despite Reynolds' assertions that his best work hit the editing room floor (suggesting maybe he has something else to offer), what we see is what we get — a sometimes funny, slow-developing, simple-minded look at a nice guy who can't turn it off.

Reynolds tries to play it straight, with his "couch" moments being his worst and the whole character smacking too much of his off-screen persona, lovable as it is. Miss Andrews does for psychoanalysts what she did for singing nuns — canonizes them.

Rated R, "The Man Who Loved Women," is harmless viewing, and there is a chuckle or two to be had, but I ask you: Do you really want to see a movie with Burt Reynolds and Julie Andrews as lovers?

Symphony concert to feature Appalachian bluegrass music

The Midland-Odessa Symphony's fourth subscription concert of the season will feature bluegrass music via the McLain Family Band.

From eastern Kentucky's Appalachian Mountains, the McLain Family Band has performed as musical ambassadors for the United States in 62 countries as well as touring extensively in the United States. A listing of the group's credits would include more than 100 performances with symphony orchestras, six appearances at Kennedy Center, performances at Carnegie Hall and at the Grand Ole Opry.

On television, the group has performed three times on NBC's Today Show, as guests on the Pearl Bailey PBS Special — "Pearl and Friends at Centre Stage," on the Johnny Cash Christmas Special and on the British Broadcasting System.

Ranging in age from 16 to 55, the McLain Family Band combines vocal and instrumental talents of father Raymond K. McLain, guitar and accordian; Raymond W. McLain, fiddle and banjo; Ruth McLain Riopel, mandolin and bass; Michael Riopel, guitar, mandolin and harmonica; Nancy Ann McLain, bass and mandolin; and Michael McLain, mandolin and banjo.

In additional to traditional bluegrass favorites, the band will perform Concerto for Bluegrass Band and Orchestra by Phillip Rhodes. This work was written especially for the McLain Family Band.

Also on the program will be a performance of Berloiz's "Harold in Italy," with symphony player Sally Chisholm featured on the viola. Miss Chisholm is a member of The Thouvenel String Quartet of Midland.

McLain Family Band

Concerts are Friday at Odessa's Permian High School Auditorium and Saturday at Midland's Lee High School Auditorium. Both performances are at 8 p.m. The Odessa concert is sponsored by the Odessa Symphony Guild.

Single admission tickets will be available at the door. For more information or to purchase tickets call 563-5269.

Agent told station officials Craft 'wasn't beauty queen'

JOPLIN, Mo. (AP) — An agent for former television anchorwoman Christine Craft testified Saturday he warned officials of KMBC-TV that "she wasn't a beauty queen" before they hired her.

"She's 36, been in the sun too much and has wrinkles," Bob Hamilton, a friend of Ms. Craft who acted as her agent, testified in the retrial of her fraud suit against Metromedia Inc., the former owner of KMBC.

Hamilton said before KMBC hired Ms. Craft, he told station managers "she wasn't a beauty queen. She's not a Miss America candidate."

But he said then-news director Ridge Shannon told him "we love her just the way she is" with "the fresh California beach look."

Ms. Craft's lawsuit, alleging sex discrimination, pay discrimination and fraud, was prompted by her demotion as news co-anchor in August 1981. Hamilton testified that in a telephone conversation a few days after the demotion, Shannon said if Ms. Craft sued, "We will drag her through the courts, we will wear her down, she won't have a chance." However, U.S. District Judge Joseph E. Stevens Jr. ordered that comment and related statements stricken from the record at the request of the defense.

The suit by Ms. Craft, now 39, claims she was hired for her journalistic skills and was promised that her looks would not be tampered with, but was forced to undergo changes soon after she started at KMBC-TV.

She was awarded $500,000 on her fraud claim by a six-member federal jury last summer in Kansas City. However, Stevens threw out the verdict because he felt it was "excessive" and reached by jurors who might have been confused or prejudiced by extensive media coverage.

Stevens ordered a new trial to be held in Joplin before a sequestered 12-member jury.

In testimony Friday, former KMBC producer Sherry Chastain said Shannon made derogatory comments about the appearance of another station anchorwomen.

1983 worst year for Warner

NEW YORK (AP) — Warner Communications Inc., the nation's biggest entertainment conglomerate, has just wound up the worst year in its history: 12 months of whopping losses, widespread layoffs and major upheavals in management.

To top it off, publisher Rupert Murdoch may be girding for a takeover attempt.

"We've had a really horrible year," concedes Robert Rolontz, director of information for Warner, who isn't saying much else, except that no executives would be made available for interviews.

Industry analysts, however, have much to say about the company, and a lot of it is upbeat. They say Warner has a lot of potential and a turnaround is likely.

"I think the worst may be over," said Fred Anschel, an analyst with Dean Witter Reynolds Inc. "If you look at the company as a whole, forget about 1983...It turned out to be far worse than anybody expected, even management."

But, he added, "They're not as bad a company as they're made out to be."

The company lost $122.4 million in the third quarter, compared to a profit of $78.7 million in the same period of 1982. The company said an operating loss of $180 million at its Atari subsidiary erased a 32 percent gain in the company's other segments.

For the first nine months of 1983, Warner lost $424.7 million, compared to a profit of $224.8 million in 1982. Revenue fell 19.1 percent to $2.37 billion.

Analysts say Warner's problems resulted from growing too big too fast.

"The company got really big," Anschel said. "Obviously you're going to get into an internal mess at that pace."

Atari, which had fueled Warner's rapid growth, was clobbered when the home video game market suddenly ran out of steam.

Christopher Kirby, an analyst with Sanford C. Bernstein & Co., noted that as retail inventories built up, game makers slashed prices below the level needed to make a profit. In addition, he said, Atari was hurt by closing out older models before shipping new ones.

Asked how much trouble Warner is in, Anschel responded: "I'm not worried about that. I think they'll make money next year."

About half of Warner's business is consumer electronics. It is also involved in recorded music and music publishing; book, comics and magazine publishing; movies and TV shows; cable communications; direct response marketing; cosmetics; and theater productions.

But as worries about the company's finances have receded in recent weeks, another element has risen for Warner — the possibility that Murdoch plans to try to take over the company.

Many analysts initially discounted that idea when Murdoch announced he had bought 4.4 million shares of Warner stock, nearly 7 percent of shares outstanding, making him the company's largest stockholder.

But last week, Murdoch's News America Publishing Inc. said in a filing with the federal government that the publisher had a "good faith intention" of acquiring between 25 percent and 49.9 percent of Warner's stock.

Then late in the week in a new filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission, Murdoch said publicly for the first time he might try to take control of Warner, either through buying more stock or a proxy fight.

Only a few days earlier, Warner had announced a move apparently designed to strengthen it against a takeover bid by Murdoch. Warner agreed to trade a 19 percent stake in Warner to Chris-Craft Industries Inc. for a 43 percent share of Chris-Craft's broadcasting unit, BHC Inc.

Some analysts said that could cause problems for Murdoch, an Australian, because federal regulations prohibit foreign companies from holding major shares in American broadcasting concerns.

Analysts cite different areas of potential growth for Warner.

"If they play their cards right they have a realistic chance of being a major player in the (home computer) field," Anschel said. "Just imagine the market among college students...When you finish with the (term) paper you pop in the video game for entertainment."

Midland Community Concerts brings the San Francisco-based acapella male vocal group, Chanticleer, to town Tuesday for an 8 p.m. performance at Midland High School Auditorium. The show is open to subscription ticket holders only. Chanticleer gave its first performance in San Francisco's historic Mission Dolores in June 1978. The program was drawn from the male vocal tradition of the 15th and 16th centuries. Today, the group performs material taken from Elizabethan England through New American as well as six centuries of German works.

Connecticut artist to hold workshop

Artist Henry Earle, Wilton, Conn., will hold a five-day workshop Jan. 16-20. The workshop is sponsored by Midland Arts Association.

The opening demonstration will be at 2 p.m. Jan. 15 at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave. The public is invited to attend this demonstration. Cost is $2 for those not enrolled in the course.

Earle has executed murals for, among others, E.R. Squibb Co., Norwich University, Weider Association and Barbara Rockefeller. He has designed sets for cinema, television and theater.

Museums and clubs that have exhibited his works include the Farragil Gallery, New York City; The Fine Arts Gallery, Hartford, Conn.; National Arts Club; American Watercolor Society; and Bruce Museum, Wichita, Kan.

Earle conducts yearly workshops for artists and craftsmen in Dallas, Brownwood, Breckenridge, Lubbock, San Antonio and Santa Fe.

Paramount reaps huge profits

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Paramount Home Video executives were in a quandary over what price tag to pin on the videocassette version of Paramount Pictures' hit movie, "Raiders of the Lost Ark."

Should they use a standard price of $79.95 and figure on selling a quick 60,000 copies, or go out with a discount price of $39.95, as they did on "Star Trek: The Wrath of Khan," and hope to sell three times as many copies at a lower profit margin?

"When we lower our price, our break-even point is almost three times what it is at the higher price," Paramount Video President Tim Clott said in a recent telephone interview from New York. "We knew it would sell at least 60,000 copies at $80.

'Something' refers to incest

The ABC Special "Something About Amelia" airs on KMID-TV Monday at 8 p.m.

The movie, starring Roxana Zal, Ted Danson and Glenn Close, deals with the impact of incest on a teenage girl. The film's focus is not the act of incest itself, but the emotional trauma suffered by the family once the secret is in the open. Parental guidance is suggested due to the nature of the subject matter.

KMID-TV plans to run a Hotline at the end of "Something About Amelia" for anyone who needs assistance or wishes additional information on the subject.

Retirement need not be end of the line

Adjustment often required

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

When Dean Chaddock retired from his work as an independent geologist in 1966, he started playing golf three times a week. He also averaged 22 hours a day with his wife.

When he lost her a year ago, he felt alone.

"Now I don't see how I ever had the time to work," he said.

Between planning for a trip to Europe this summer, swapping stories at the Senior Citizen's Center and rushing his 17-year-old grandson to the emergency room following an accident with a collector's dagger, the 76-year-old stays pretty busy.

Six years ago, he and two other men were at the Men's Health Club at the YMCA, when one of them mentioned his birthday was Nov. 23. So was the other man's, so was Chaddock's. They've been celebrating it together ever since.

"We have a lot of fun," he chuckled. "We take a bunch of pictures."

HE DOESN'T PLAY golf anymore, but he works as a volunteer at the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity book store one morning a week. "At first, I thought it was going to be every day, but I'm glad it's not. I've got too many other things to do."

Edith Jennings, sitting in her living room with crocheted afghans folded on the couch and colorfully woven armchair coverings, retired in 1978. After teaching school for 31 years, she was ready.

"Really, I didn't have any trouble adjusting to it. I was glad I could retire," she said. "I had a lot of hobbies I was interested in — and oesides, I was just worn out."

Being a school teacher was helpful, she said. "I was used to having 2½ months off a year. A school teacher always knows she's going to have that time off so she catches up with what she was going to do in the winter. And one thing about retiring is you don't have to do everything at once. If you get tired, you can quit it and pick it up later."

The 65-year-old said her husband Sterling, 69, has had a little bit more trouble getting used to days of emptiness. He's retired from his job as a delivery man, but had worked part-time until last summer.

"He doesn't have as much to occupy his time as I do," she said. "He loves to fish — but, of course, he doesn't get much of that done around here. But I don't think a woman's work is ever done. If you keep the house clean, cook three meals a day, clean the clothes — then you've got a lot to do. He does the yard work and helps with other chores, too. And he likes to read. But I don't think men know how to take hold and do it."

GORDON BUSKIRK'S retirement has "been kinda gradual." As an independent petroleum geologist since 1950, he found it pretty hard to let go. But last March, he suffered a stroke and was ordered not to drive.

"I still have an office, and I still do a little work and see if I can find anything to do, see if I can find some deals going on."

The 72-year-old also is following in his grandfather's footsteps and writing an autobiography about his life and experiences. "I doubt if it'll ever be published, but I thought it might be interesting, particularly for my grandchildren. Besides, it gives me something to do. Kind of reliving my life."

Since his forced retirement, Buskirk said he's learned something: "My office is kinda isolated, so it's not much fun. I enjoy being with people."

The change in his lifestyle also changed that of his wife, Maxine.

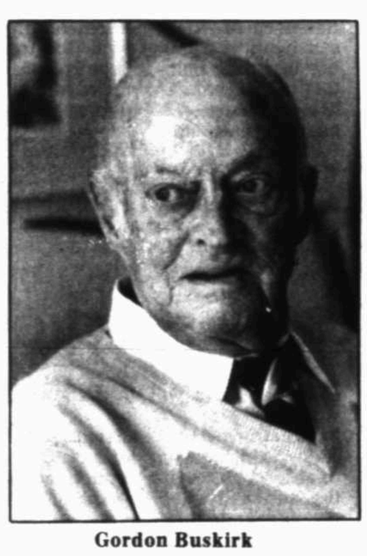

"I was used to going off tootin' by myself," she said, with a smile. "It's been a big change for Gordy, and it's been a big change for me."

Reaching out

Exercise classes are some ways senior citizens spend the days of their retirement. Many are finding new friends and activities at the Senior Citizen's Center to fill the empty hours.

Mae Hedrick

Relaxing in the bright, cheerful home where they've lived for the last 33 years, watching the leaves fall through the neighborhood as their group moved away and their son's generation moved in, Buskirk said he balked at the first suggestion of going to the Senior Citizen's Center.

"I HAD GOTTEN to the point where I didn't think I was as old as the rest of them," he said, adding with a chuckle, "but that was false because I am."

He spends many mornings at the center, participating in exercise classes, playing cards and talking. "I've found out I need people," he said. "It's very important that I keep in touch. If I didn't, it'd be curtains."

Mae Hedrick has been in Midland since November. She had left her home in West Virginia to visit a daughter in Houston. When her son-in-law was transferred to Midland, Mrs. Hedrick came along. She plans to stay until school is out for summer vacation.

"I guess I've spent six months of the last year in Texas," said the very young looking 63-year-old, who was challenged to prove she was indeed a senior citizen by Chaddock. "And here I am starting a new year in Texas."

A former hospital nurse before going into private nursing, Mrs. Hedrick said, "I raised five children before I ever left home to go to work."

Grandparents have rights

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

Nobody wins in a divorce. And nobody wins when grandparents have to go to court to get visitation rights, according to a local authority.

In recent years, grandparents' rights have become an increasingly prominent social and legal issue. "I don't think there's any question," said civil attorney John Hyde. "It's a common issue that's spreading across the country.

"Grandparents are becoming more aware of their rights to have access to their grandchildren. In many cases, the divorce completely alienates the grandparents and more and more they're seeking the right to visit."

Visitation rights of grandparents were not addressed by the state legislation until 1977. "The legislature has begun to recognize that the nuturing of a child and his development...rightfully includes the visitation rights of the child's grandparents," Hyde said.

Last September the Texas Family Code was revised to protect those rights even more. Not only may courts grant reasonable access to grandchildren, they may now take necessary action to enforce those orders.

"The distinction is in the emphasis of the wording," Hyde explained. "It puts some teeth in the statute by saying courts can file whatever orders necessary to enforce."

In most instances, it is the parent with custody of the children that tries to sever a relationship with in-laws. Even when in-law relationships remain close after a divorce, that situation may change when the parent remarries.

"The new spouse seldom rests easy with these relationships that are carry-overs from the past," explained John Young, director of Family Services of Midland. "The ex forms new in-law relationships and the old relationships fade in importance. There is no longer time for everyone, and choices have to be made — the past versus the future."

Two or three times a year grandparents will go to local court to obtain visitation rights, according to 318th State District Judge Barbara Culver, who hears nearly all domestic cases in Midland County.

"It happens once every 25 to 30 cases if that often," Hyde estimated, but added, "The change in the statute will probably herald more cases in the future."

"Most of the time it can be taken care of on a practical basis without having to take it to court," attorney William B. Smith said.

That is the solution recommended by Young.

"Any legal effort to win visitation rights is often doomed, even if it is successful," Young said. "Visitation that has to be court ordered against the opposition of the custodial parent can be sabotaged in a thousand ways by that parent. It can involve the grandchildren in devastating loyalty conflicts that tear them apart inside.

"The two issues are what are the rights of the grandparents and what is in the best interest of the children. Grandparents should carefully weigh the costs and benefits of even a favorable court ruling before proceeding.... A court ruling in their favor may be only a hollow victory that benefits no one."

New marriage keeps Midlanders young at heart

Silas Kee, 84, gives his 'teen-ager' wife Mary, 68, a hug. Silas asked Mary to dance one day in June and they were married Oct. 21. "He said he finally found one (a wife) — and she's the loveliest woman in the world," Mary said. "He said it took him 84 years."

By HALLYE JORDAN

He asked her to dance in June. In October they were married.

He calls her his 68-year-old-teenager wife. He's 84.

"He said he finally found one — and she's the loveliest woman in the world," Mary Kee said, with a giggle. "He said it took him 84 years."

Her husband Silas slaps his knee and laughs.

A resident of Midland since 1917, Mary, who has been driving a school bus for the past 12 years, said when school let out last spring, she decided she would go down to the Midland Senior Citizen's Center, "and see if I could meet someone."

The father of one of the hairdressers where she had her hair done was down there a lot, she was told.

She met him at one of the weekly dances.

"He asked me to dance and we danced two or three times," Mary said. "Then I'd see him down at the center and we'd dance and talk a lot. And then I asked him if he'd like me to come by and pick him up to go to the dances and he said, "yeah."

He proposed three months later.

"He said, 'Mary, what do you think about us getting married?' I said, 'Silas, I don't know — I'll have to do some thinking on that.'

"We went as far as going to get a blood test and then I backed out," she said.

"It was his age. I thought maybe we'll get married and then I'll lose him."

Silas' reply was, "Well, Mary, if we just have each other for six months, it's worth it to me if it is to you. Take your time and let me know when you're ready. I'll always love you."

One of his daughters was worried about the marriage for Mary's sake because Silas was hard of hearing and had no education.

"I don't know why I love Silas, but I do," Mary said she told the daughter. "Maybe those are the reasons why — because he needs someone.

"I called her and told her I'll just take the good with the bad, or the bad with the good, whichever," she said, laughing. "It took me about two months. I couldn't stay away from him but I couldn't live with him without marrying him." She gave him her answer on Wednesday and they were married the next Friday.

October 21, 1983.

The ceremony took place at the home of a daughter in Midland. Four of her five children and families were there. So were his three daughters and their families.

"It was just family, but it was a houseful," she said. "Everybody was really happy for us. They said, 'Mother, if it makes you happy it thrills us to death.' "

Going through the wedding pictures, Mary points out her oldest daughter, who stood up with her. There were her grandson and his wife, married just two weeks before.

Silas claps his hands and laughs at the photos.

"Isn't he darling?" Mary smiles.

They spend their time now playing "42." At the center, where Mary drops him off on her way to work, he plays a lot of pool before riding MidTran home.

"And he stays here and washes the dishes," Mary said. "He told me, 'You do the cooking and I'll wash the dishes.'

"That's worth just having him around," she said, adding with a laugh, "not really. Truly, he is one of the most wonderful people I've ever known."

Silas interrupts, displaying his wedding band. "My ring matches hers." She laughs and shows her ring and a watch that matches, given to her by his three daughters for Christmas.

Silas moved to Midland about four years ago from Plains, where he and his wife operated a cafe. He had worked in ranching, farming, air-conditioning and irrigation, as well as dabbling in oil, he said.

His first wife died in 1980; so did Mary's husband. She married May 3, 1934; he married May 16, 1935.

"It's kind of strange, isn't it?" she asked. "Silas said God just meant for this to happen."

They are planning a trip to see her youngest daughter in Indiana this summer. Mary expects to retire at the end of the school year in 1986 and when she does, "I'll spend my time messing around with my husband.

"God didn't intend for man and woman to live alone," Mary said. "I don't care if you are old. You still are lonely. And I think just having someone come around and say 'I love you,' and you saying it back helps.

"We're both very happy," she said, turning to her husband.

"You bet," Silas replies, giving her a hug. "And I want everyone to know."

Sixth arrest made in felony drug investigation

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

The arrest of a teen-age Midland girl early Saturday morning brings to six the number of persons arrested in the wake of a felony drug investigation conducted by Department of Public Safety narcotics agents.

The 16-year-old girl was taken into custody in the 4200 block of Andrews Highway about 4:30 a.m. Saturday.

Although she's being held in city jail on traffic and marijuana charges, a DPS spokesman said the girl was one of nine defendants named in 15 sealed indictments returned last week by Midland and Ector County grand juries.

As of late Saturday afternoon, five of the nine indictees had been arrested — including 26-year-old Maria Rosario Flores Luna of 1300 Cottonflat Road, a fourth-grade teacher at Jane Long Elementary School.

She is charged with delivery of heroin and remained jailed Saturday under $50,000 bond.

"The only business we had with her was away from school," said the DPS spokesman, who asked not to be identified. "We have no information that she was peddling to kids."

Other Midlanders arrested in the case were 31-year-old Heradio Luna Jr., also of 1300 Cottonflat Road, and a 28-year-old man who was not one of the indictees.

The 28-year-old man, who gave a rural Midland address, was arrested early Friday afternoon on possession of heroin charges after he allegedly tried to sell drugs to narcotics agents who were rounding up indicted suspects in the case, according to the DPS spokesman.

Formal charges are expected to be filed against the man Monday. Luna is charged with delivery of cocaine and remained jailed Saturday under $60,000 bond.

Also arrested Friday were two Odessans: 33-year-old Arturo Galindo and 34-year-old Jose Garcia. They are charged with possession and delivery of heroin and were in Ector County jail.

Bond had not been set on them by late Saturday afternoon, according to a spokeswoman for the Ector County Sheriff's Department.

The DPS spokesman said the four indictees still at large are expected to be in custody by mid-week.

The indictments and arrests capped a three-month undercover investigation by the DPS narcotics division. Midland police and Ector County sheriff's deputies assisted in the arrests, which began Friday.

Eight indictments were returned Wednesday by the Midland County grand jury, while Ector County grand jurors returned seven indictments Thursday.

There was no large-scale confiscation of narcotics, however. "All we recovered is what we purchased," said the DPS spokesman, adding that most of the heroin was 60 to 80 percent pure, with some of it costing $800 a gram.

Midland school Superintendant Dr. Joe Baressi said he will ask school trustees at their meeting Tuesday to suspend Ms. Luna without pay, pending resolution of the charges against her.

Retirement not end of line

Now she's spending most of her time visiting the children and grandchildren since retiring in October 1982.

She had been doing a lot of crocheting back home, she said. But the hobby has been ignored while on her travels.

"I just haven't had time," she said. "I bought sacks and sacks of yarn on special — I bought way too much." Pausing, she added, with a grin, "I hope it's not all rotting.

"RETIREMENT CAME natural for me," she said. "I enjoy meeting people and getting to know them. And this senior citizen's center is much better than the one in Madison (W.Va.)"

When her daughter suggested she visit it, Mrs. Hedrick jumped at the chance. She walked in not knowing a soul and has met many new friends.

"I didn't realize while I was working and before I was a senior citizen that I would meet so many interesting people."

Being around people is what brought Chaddock to the center, also. "A lot of my peer group were here," he said, adding with a wink, "and there are a lot of widows here, too."

Once they are retired, many people withdraw from society, the two agreed. The feelings of loneliness and unworthiness are common.

The thought of making an effort to get out and mix with friends and meet new ones often is difficult, especially for those who have lost their marriage partners and whose families have families of their own.

"That's the thing, I think, is that with a lot of widowers and widows — the loneliness," Chaddock said. "I think you go bananas if you don't have someone to talk to.

"I'm a great talker," he continued. "But I'm egotistical enough to think I help people some."

The stories that roam through the ceramic and dining rooms and hover over the pool table between shots could more than fill the volumes in the library of the Senior Citizen's Center. Many are recollections of events in far away countries and states, of days long past, golden as the sunlight that plays through the window on silvery heads that nod in understanding at the similar tales.

"That's what it's all about," said Mrs. Jennings, "getting to know people."

Suspect attempted suicide one month after crime spree

HEMPSTEAD, Texas (AP) — A former lawn mower repairman accused of murdering state highway patrolman and five other people during a 5½-hour crime spree across Southeast Texas tried to kill himself less than a month later, court documents revealed.

Eliseo "Joe" Moreno, 25, was found unconscious on the floor of his Waller County jail cell Nov. 4 with a plastic garbage bag wrapped tightly around his neck, documents showed. Moreno apparently got the bag from a garbage can kept outside his cell, authorities said.

An emergency crew from Waller County Memorial Hospital revived Moreno within minutes.

The suicide attempt was revealed in a defense motion filed in state district court Friday requesting psychiatric evaluation of Moreno.

The motion said Moreno has "recently engaged in behavior through written communications with family and friends which borders at least on the bizarre."

Since his arrest Oct. 11, Moreno has been drawing pictures of himself lying in a casket with God tossing lightning bolts at him, officials told the Houston Chronicle. Another drawing showed Moreno as Superman, officials said.

Defense attorney Richard Tindal, Sheriff Ronnie Sitton and District Attorney Jim Kesshan declined to comment on the suicide attempt, citing a gag order isued by State District Judge Oliver Kitzman.

Moreno is charged with capital murder in the slaying of Russsell Lynn Boyd, 25, a Texas Department of Public Safety trooper gunned down after stopping Moreno on a traffic violation outside Hempstead.

He also is charged with capital murder in the slayings of his estranged wife's relatives, Juan and Esther Garza, who were killed at the apartment in College Station.

He has been charged with murder in the deaths of Ann Bennatt, 70, her brother-in-law James Bennatte, 62 and Allie Wilkins, 79, all of Hempstead. In addition, he faces charges of aggravated robbery and aggravated kidnapping.

Robbery suspects charged with accomplice's murder

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Two men arrested in connection with the armed robbery of a grocery store have been charged with murder because their alleged accomplice was fatally shot by a store clerk, police in this West Texas city say.

Eduardo Gallegos, 25, and Juan Salas, 28, both of El Paso, were charged with murder Friday after El Paso police Lt. John Lanahan said they were believed to be two of three men who robbed a grocery store Dec. 17.

An employee of the store, whom police have not identified, followed the men from the store after the robbery and fired three shots.

Assistant District Attorney Bill Moody said that althorugh the store employee fired the fatal shot, Eduardo Gallegos and Salas have been charged with murder under provisions of a state law that says a person commits murder if he is involved in the commission of a felony and antoher person is killed.

Teaching panel studies 'ladders'

AUSTIN (AP) — A subcommittee on the teaching profession gave fair warning Saturday that it will consider "career ladders" that teachers can climb to raise their salaries.

The legislative-citizen subcommittee apparently feels career ladders would be preferable to "merit pay," which has been a controversial topic among teachers.

One teacher argument against merit pay is that teachers fear favoritism if administrators are given complete control over passing out higher salaries.

The subcommittee voted 8-0 Saturday to go on record as pursuing a career ladder for teachers. A Dallas consulting firm will do the groundwork.

Subcommittee chairman Bill Haley said Saturday he has spoken to at least 20 teacher groups around the state and when he explains how the career ladder concept differs from merit pay, "they absolutely love it."

"This will not be a capricious evaluation," said Haley, D-Center. "You will know from the beginning where you are."

Haley, a public school teacher for 12 years, said a career ladder would be in writing and would spell out how a teacher could advance to raise his or her salary. Now, he said, teachers basically move up by obtaining a higher degree or by staying on the job another year.

With a career ladder, for example, a teacher might advance by completing a certain number of seminars on teaching, Haley said.

"The idea is not to get rid of but to develop good teachers," he said. "One of our main objectives is raising the self-esteem of teachers."

The subcommittee is part of the Select Committee on Public Education, which is reviewing state educational policies, including teacher pay, under the guidance of H. Ross Perot of Dallas.

A report is expected March 1.

Cold weather boosts water deliveries

From Staff Reports

BIG SPRING — Extremely cold weather at the end of December increased water deliveries by the Colorado River Municipal Water District.

CRMWD reported a 17.15 percent increase in water deliveries to its four principal cities. This surge in demand enabled CRMWD to complete December almost in a dead heat with 1983 deliveries.

Deliveries from Dec. 11-20 averaged 27,400,000 gallons a day; for the past nine days they have averaged 32,100,000 gallons a day. Odessa zoomed from a minimum of 10 million gallons on Dec. 17 to 22.5 million on Dec. 28. Big Spring jumped from 4,583,000 gallons on Dec. 19 to 11,645,000 gallons on Dec. 28. Midland came from a low of 8,080,000 gallons on Dec. 20 to 11,340,000 gallons Dec. 28. Snyder went from 2,018,000 gallons Dec. 19 to 4,004,000 on Dec. 29.

Big Spring's figures don't include use by Cosden Oil Corp.'s refining complex.

Most of a two-million gallon increase at the outset of the pre-Christmas cold snap was attributed to consumers leaving taps open to prevent freezing. Since then, the big surge ha come through loss of waer due to breaks in large water mains of city distribution systems. Figures show there wa a 15 million gallon jump from Dec. 26 to a high of 48-plus million gallons on Dec. 28, the largest single day since late September.

Total deliveries in December amounted to 1,145,783,236 gallons, only 6.8 million gallons under the same month in 1982, or off 0.4 of 1 percent. For the year, deliveries aggregated 18,175,801,000 gallons, only one million gallons less than the previous year.

Municipal deliveries were 1,034,786,000 gallons, up 6.31 percent over a year ago. At the same time, deliveries to oilfield secondary recovery units were 110,996,436 gallons, or down 38.1 percent.

For the year, municipal deliveries totaled 16,096,216,850 gallons, up 283 million gallons, or 1.79 percent. Industrial and oilfield deliveries were 2,079,584,369 gallons, or down 284 million gallons, which was a decrease of about 12.04 percent.

CRMWD's weather modification program given four more years

BIG SPRING — The Colorado River Municipal Water District last week was granted another four years for its weather modification efforts.

The Texas Water Commission unanimously approved the new permit for what has become one of the longest continuously operated precipitation enhancement experiments in the nation. There was no opposition to the grant.

Starting in 1971, the district annually has seeded convective clouds in storm systems over a target area roughly from Big Spring, Lamesa, Post and Roscoe. At first this was purely an effort to induce more rainfall on the Lake J.B. Thomas and Lake E.V. Spence watersheds. For the past decade, however, it also has been a research project in conjunction with the Texas Department of Water Resources, and for a time with the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation.

Although, meterologists will not claim scientific proof, there is a strong statistical picture in support of increased rainfall within the target area and downwind of it. CRMWD uses two airplanes in the program.

Planned Parenthood names new director

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Dana Frazee, former director of education and resources for Planned Parenthood of the Permian Basin, Inc., has been selected to fill the position of executive director, which was vacated in October when Tamra-Shae Oatman resigned to become director of personnel for the State Treasury Department.

Jack Valenzuela, formerly a member of the board of directors, served as acting executive director during the interim.

Ms. Frazee, a four-year resident of Odessa, was offered the job in December following a selection process which included review of 52 applications. She officially assumed the position Jan. 1.

"A goal of mine is to put emphasis back on our clinic services because the past few years we've had to be in the political arena to support our positions in favor of a woman's right to choice on abortion and confidentiality for our clients," Ms. Frazee said. "Now we can go about doing what we do best — provide quality medical care for women."

Employed by the agency since March 1982, she served as director of education until being appointed to director of education and resources in February 1983. In these roles, she originated a variety of new educational programs, including the "Straight Talk" classes for mothers and daughters and fathers and sons. As a member of the PPPB administrative staff, she also participated in a wide range of planning and management activities.

She holds a bachelor of arts degree in German and history from the University of Colorado. She taught high school English, German and special education for 10 years in Colorado and California before moving to Odessa.

Dana Frazee

She and her husband, John Frazee, assistant professor of literature at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin, have three children: Caroline, 4, and 6-year-old twins Samantha and Olivia.

PPPB, a nonprofit organization which depends on both community and governmental financial support, provides family planning and educational services over a 17-county region of West Texas. Clients are charged according to ability to pay. Medical clinics are provided in Odessa, Midland, Big Spring, Pecos, Monahans, Lamesa, Seminole and Fort Stockton.

Alcoholics Anonymous conference opens Friday

The 14th annual Midland Mid-Winter Conference of Alcoholics Anonymous opens Friday in The Midland Hilton ballroom.

Although the first session starts at 8 p.m., the hospitality room, operated by the local members, opens at 1 p.m. when registration begins. Speaker for the Friday 8 p.m. session is Tom I. from Aberdeen, N.C. The Night-Owl Meeting will begin following the close of the first session and a coffee break.

Saturday's sessions will begin at 8 a.m. with a General Service Organization breakfast and meeting in the Civic Room. At 9:30 a.m. the next session begins with special speaker Kay T. from Edwardsville, Ill.

The next session will feature an Al-Anon speaker, Marceline W. from Lake Whitney. Al-Anon is an independent organization which works closely with A.A.

Alcoholism is considered by the American Medical Association to be a family disease and the Al-Anon program, which is based on the same 12 principles as the A.A. program, is an organization designed for those affected by alcoholism, whether they be relatives, employers, employees or friends.

Saturday's sessions will close with an 8 p.m. speaker, Clancy I. from Venice, Calif. A dance will follow.

Big Spring clinic establishing center for minor health problems

BIG SPRING — Malone and Hogan Clinic will open a new extended hours medical center Monday for minor health problems. The center will be staffed by Malone and Hogan Hospital Emergency Room physicians.

Opened from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. Monday through Friday, the center will join the clinic's pediatric practice on Saturday mornings with office hours of 9 a.m. to noon.

The extended hours center will bridge the gap between the closing of the clinic and the beginning of the 12-hour duty of the hospital's emergency room physician.

"After five is the only time some persons can fit in medical attention for themselves and their families," said Dr. Brian Caplan, an organizer of the new center. "Making an emergency room a routine health care provider has been an expensive proposition for many."

No appointments will be necessary at the center, located in the first floor surgery area in the Malone and Hogan Clinic, 1501 W. Eleventh Place. The office fee is $25 with additional charges made for extra physician consultations, lab work, X-rays and medication. Payments can be made in cash or with VISA or MasterCard credit cards.

County personnel director to take new direction

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The Midland County commissioners looked at what they had wrought and put it aside.

They felt the county could do without a personnel director and would be served well by its old hiring-firing methods: leave it up to the department heads and elected officials.

Victim of the shutdown, 34-year-old Jerrie Ann Westmoreland, however, views the office as productive and served "to improve professionalism throughout the courthouse.... It's not taking away their (officials') authority."

Rather than keep her in the almost $27,000-a-year job, the commissioners opted to shift Ms. Westmoreland to a multi-role: handling the county's federal Community Development and rent-subsidy projects, weatherization and commodity programs for aid to the needy, and phasing out the personnel office.

Commissioner Durward Wright, who in January 1982 voted against hiring Ms. Westmoreland and setting up the office, said the post has served its purpose.

"That office originally was formed on a temporary basis to determine if a personnel director was needed," Wright said.

By a 3-2 vote, the Commissioners' Court created the office in 1982.

"I WILL TELL them (department heads) what I think," Ms. Westlandmore had told the court on the day she was hired two years ago, "zero in on what kind of skills they want (in their workers). I think that (hiring and firing) should be their choice.... I'm not looking to take any of their power."

The county, which operates on an $11 million budget, has about 300 employees, 19 elected officials and about 25 department heads.

When the personnel office was created, Midland was amid a petroleum boom, people were seeking better-paying jobs, and the county was experiencing a high turnover in workers.

"I did not feel we could justify the expense," Wright said of the office. "I did see some merit in it."

That has changed, he said.

"There's much less turnover. There's much less need for recruitment."

Commissioner Win Brown was ambivalent. He initiated the hiring of Ms. Westmoreland two years ago and last week made the motion to shift her into other roles. The vote was unanimous.

YET, BROWN SAID he views the personnel director's position as essential to efficient county government.

"It's desperately needed," he said.

But circumstances, including an austere budget and some officials' bypassing the personnel office in their hiring procedures, compelled him to move to vacate the position.

Ms. Westmoreland is to be phased into her new jobs by Feb. 1; she will succeed Melle May, the county's Veterans Service Office director, who has been handling the federal programs since Richard Nunez resigned last September.

Meanwhile, Brown said Ms. Westmoreland is to continue preparing the county's personnel handbook.

"We left the position open," said Commissioner C. DeWayne Davis. "But we're not hiring the first person who applies."

"There was objectivity in it," he said of shutting down the office. "There was no malice, no ill-feeling."

Among other benefits, he said the office as developed by Ms. Westmoreland ensured fairness in hiring and employment practices and kept the county out of federal court.

"If anybody gets in hot water (over discrimination), they better have some answers," he said.

Midland County Judge Bill Ahders said the personnel slot was vacated because of budgetary reasons.

"I THINK WE NEED someone to look after our personnel situation," said Commission C. Wallace "Wally" Craig.

Ms. Westmoreland developed a personnel record-keeping system. But County Treasurer Dee Thompson has maintained payroll, retirement, insurance and other pertinent records on county employees.

Craig noted the county's 1984 budget includes a personnel-purchasing department budget. It is funded with $49,292.

The commissioners have talked about hiring a purchasing agent who, in knowing the ins and outs of buying, would save the county money.

"No question we need it, too," Craig said. "The problem is finding someone who is competent in both fields."

Ms. Westmoreland's work background is in personnel management; her academic is in psychology.

"My biggest problem has been lack of understanding (among county officials) of the personnel functions, of the effectiveness and utilization of the personnel office," she said.

She sought out job applicants, conducted interviews, culled out those not qualified for specific jobs, conducted tests, and, in effect, put the job applicants on the auction block for bidding on by department heads.

"It took a quite a bit of research to determine how employment laws affect the county," she said. "Doing certain things or not doing certain things could get the county into a lawsuit. And many counties have been sued because of employment discrimination."

IN THE PAST YEAR, Ms. Westmoreland said she conducted 535 interviews; of the applicants, 60 were hired in several departments.

The interviews, she said, were conducted "in accordance with their (department heads') goals. I didn't tell them what to do" with job applicants. "My role is that of a consultant."

She worked closely with the sheriff's department in seeking deputies.

"'What you do,'" she said Chief Deputy Sheriff G.W. Thompson told her, "'is weed out the undesirables and give us the cream of the crop.'"

Sheriff Dallas Smith said "The lady was available, and she did what we asked of her. She did the screening based on what we wanted."

Tax Assessor-Collector Frances Shuffield said Ms. Westmoreland worked closely with her in setting up an employee-leave program long before the commissioners adopted one.

"She helped me draft this thing so that I would be legal in the eyes of the federal government," Ms. Shuffield said. She said some of her deputies were abusing leave time; there was no countywide leave policy at that time. "I wanted some strengths to stop the abusers.... It certainly has been a pleasure to have some control."

In the wake of the oil boom, people have been more stable in their jobs, said Ms. Shuffield. She has had "more luck" in re-hiring former employees rather than seeking help via the personnel office. "It's terrific when you can hire somebody that knows the job and has the training."

"I'm really not that enthused about having somebody going out and finding (potential county) employees right now. I don't think there's that great a need of having it. I used her when I needed her. I, Vern Martin and the Sheriff's Office have used her quite often."

District Attorney Vern Martin said his office has benefitted from the personnel office.

"I have been enormously interested in seeing a personnel department in the courthouse," Martin said. "There has been a lot of pettiness and jealousy going on in the courthouse that could be totally avoided."

Another elected official, who bypassed the personnel office, hires based on recommendations by friends and then interviewing. "That's sure a better way to hire."

Ms. Westmoreland, however, is an advocate of the personnel-office concept.

"Personnel develops the human resource of any organization or county," she said, "with the human resource being the most valuable and expensive of any asset."

Longtime sheriff to seek re-election

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

STANTON — Dan Saunders, who recently observed his 31st anniversary as Martin County sheriff, has announced his intentions to seek re-election this year.

Saunders filed the necessary papers last week with the county clerk and county Democratic chairman. He indicated he was announcing his plans early to dispel rumors that he might seek retirement.

"I have worked hard and my family has sacrificed for me to be able to build the sheriff's department into what it is today," Saunders said in a prepared statement. "Since I was elected in 1952 this county has seen eight presidents, observed men walking on the moon and experienced the end of two undeclared wars. These years in history have been an exciting time in which to live. But even more exciting and interesting has been my opportunity to be sheriff during one of the most rapidly changing periods of time the criminal justice system has ever known."

Saunders, who noted that some changes have been good and others not, added that any kind of change "is painful to someone."

The longtime sheriff explained that his office is installing a new radio system and recently initiated a reserve deputy program.

That program, he noted, "is working wonderfully. The seven young men who are making up our original reserve quota are all certified now and are truly dedicated to their purpose. I have nothing but praise for them and their families."

Saunders said the next project he hopes to initiate is a complete revamping of the program for handling prisoners.

Law enforcement in a smaller town, said the sheriff, is closely monitored by the public. "Peace officers are given very little margin for error. I like this. That is the way it should be. It tends to make better officers out of all of us...I am very proud of the personnel that work with me in the sheriff's department. They are all dedicated, in different capabilities, to their duties."

Saunders expressed his gratitude to the county judge and commissioners court "for their support and encouragement in our endeavors to serve the people of this county. This is a service orbganization and will remain so as long as I hold the reins."

The office of sheriff, noted Saunders, is a powerful one "and it can be dangerous if placed in the wrong hands."

The sheriff noted that, despite possible rumors, he has no further political ambitions, instead desiring only "to be a better sheriff. The people of this county have honored me and my family beyond my childhood expectations and I am most grateful. But hopefully, my greatest accomplishments and contributions to the county are yet to come."

The Democratic primary will be held May 5.

Council to consider zone changes

Tuesday afternoon will be consumed with public hearings on zone changes and permits to sell alcoholic beverages when the Midland City Council gathers for the first meeting of the year.

The session will start at 10 a.m. in City Hall Council Chambers.

The council will look at an ordinance setting new water rates, plans for renovating the Doug Russell pool, a law to set speed zones in various city parks and the possibility of evaluating water in and around the T-Bar Well Field.

A fall school crossing study will be walked through by a representative from the Public Works Department. And the panel will consider giving a refund to Midland Independent School District to participating in oversize water lines, street construction and right of way to serve Santa Rita school.

In the public hearings the council will:

—Look at a site plan for Polo Park Retail Center at the northeast corner of Garfield and Loop 250 North.

—Consider a zone change request to office district on the northwest and northeast corners of West Cowden and Keith Streets.

—Ponder a zone change request for the northeast corner of Loraine and Dakota Streets and the northeast corner of Loraine and Dakota to office district.

—Consider a specific use permit for Overhead Door Company for utility storage buildings.

—Consider specific use permits to sell beer and wine in a restaurant at Andrews Highway and Midland Drive and at Murray's Delicatessen, Inc., at Wadley and Midkiff and to sell all alcoholic beverages in Chili's at Loop 250 and Garfield and at Gardski's Loft at Midkiff and Loop 250.

—Review requests for a specific use permit for a pharmacy on Louisiana between Mogford and Kent streets and a day nursery on the southwest corner of Belmont and Hicks streets.

—Hear request for a zone change to multiple family district on northeast corner of Fairgrounds Road and East Golf Course Road.

Clarence Scharbauer III will ask for the city to annex a 322-acre tract on the west side of Loop 250 between State Highway 191 and Wadley Avenue extended.

County Commissioners' Court

Midland County commissoners are to consider budget requests, select a Salary Grievance Committee and consider Gerald Cox's views on justice of the peace and constable precincts boundaries in their 9 a.m. Monday meeting in the Midland County Courthouse.

Cox is expected to propose that JP-constable lines conform to commissioner precinct boundaries so that JPs and constables would be assigned to the four precincts. Under the present setup, JP Precinct 1 takes in most — 97 percent of the county — and has two JPs, one constable and four deputy constables. JP-constable Precincts 2, 3 and 4 are in unpopulated range land in south Midland County.

In other business, the commissioners are to set the 1984 terms for county court, discuss West Texas Opportunites, set the speed limit on County Road 145 East, consider establishing house numbers on county roads, consider budgetary requests, consider utility adjustments and accept road easements or deeds and requests for pipeline or cable crossings.

MISD Board of Trustees

The Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees are expected to appoint a replacement for Lee High School Coach Spike Dykes at Tuesday's meeting.

The agenda also includes:

—Making recommendations for the 1984-85 budget.

—Hiring an architect to design plans for a new elementary school.

—Accepting several donations for the district's computer program.

—A progress report on implementation of the four-year guidance plan for students.

—Hearing the results of the district's performance on the PSAT.

The meeting will take place at 1:30 p.m. in the board room of the administration building.

MC Board of Trustees

Midland College Trustees have called a special session for 4 p.m. Tuesday. The only item on the agenda is discussing of financing for the proposed health sciences building.

Davis will seek re-election

Midland County Commissioner C. DeWayne Davis has announced his candidacy for re-election to the post he has held since 1981.

In noting his intent to file for the Democratic Party's nomination, Davis cited his interest in continuing with county projects, such as the proposed jail, library expansion, courthouse remodeling and county road work.

"I'm not running for this job because of the salary," which is pegged at more than $23,000 a year. "This (work) is my interest and concern. I don't have any outside business activities."

Davis, a 64-year-old retired high school government teacher and former chamber of commerce executive, defeated Republican Alexandra Morris for the Precinct 3 post in the November 1980 general election.

"There have been many constructive projects in the past few years," said Davis.

He noted the fiscal responsibility of the commissioners' court.

"Taxes have been maintained at a level which has been commendable and which has not increasingly burdened the people with county taxes." All the while, he said, efforts have been made to "render the best of services to Midland County."

Davis said his tenure on the court and his service to the county has been an educational experience for him and of benefit to the public.

"I hold a public office, an office of public trust," he said. "And with that office goes the added responsibility of seeing many projects to completion, projects that are on the drawing board."

C. DeWayne Davis

GOP sets up steering committee

DALLAS (AP) — A group of ranchers wants to set up a special steering committee during the Republican National Convention next summer by bringing 150 longhorns to town.

The Texas Longhorn Breeders' Association plans to pen 150 steers in the Trinity River basin near downtown and conduct trail drives during the convention, which begins Aug. 20.

"Once, maybe twice a day during the convention, we'll head 'em up and move 'em out, move them up and down the river, down past the Reunion Tower, turn around and trail 'em back," said John Ball, a past president of the organization.

"We're very excited about it," said Dave Fox, chairman of the Dallas Welcoming Committee.

The Pennyrich bra is available at the Pennyrich Bra and Lingerie Shop. This shop is owned by Jo Smith and is now in it's tenth year of serving Midland. Ionicron brings water to the Permian Basin

If you haven't compared the difference between tap water or softened water and Ionicron conditioned water, you should make the test.

Over eight thousand Texas homeowners made that comparison and chose Ionicron.

Ionicron, Inc., a Dallas-based public company, is the exclusive distributor of water conditioning equipment manufactured by Ionics, Inc., offering homeowners ans businesses "clean water for life."

Ionicron markets a sophisticated water refinery that is installed at the source of the main water supply, where it conditions, not just softens, all incoming water.

"Water as it flows from the tap, is neither pure or natural, but a manufactured product thet has been treated with a variety of chemicals to clearify, alter and disinfect it," explained Irwin Karp, Ionicron's President and Chairman of the Board,

Karp said Ionicron's system filters out dirt, helps remove odors, chlorine, pesticides, DDT, hardness and many other undesirable contaminants.

"The response to our product has been overwhelming throughout the Permian Basin. Residents realize the seriousness of the West Texas water supply as well as recognize quality equipment to overcome many of the problems associated with it," Karp continued.

To date, Ionicron's bateriostatic water conditioning system is the only type of water conditioning system for homes and small businesses registered with the U.S. Enviromental Protection Agency.

Mike Dahlheim, Ionicron's Midland/Odessa general manager, said that in the Permian Basin, where the water is very hard, tap water will leave stains and deposits on plumbing fixtures.

"Hard water makes shampoo tough to lather and leaves soap scum in the tub as well as on the skin and in hair. This soap residue and irritating minerals left byhard water can also harbor bacteria and cause chapping, flaking,itching and dryness.

"These are the primary reasons why 30 percent of U.S. beauty salons use conditioned water, and why, in a recent article, Vogue magazine said conditioned water'... will pay for itself in improved hair and skin behavior, and in savings on soap and soap products.'" elaborated Dahlheim. Dahlheim explained that Ionicron conditicned water (as opposed to hard water) allows water heaters, dishwashers, washing machines, ice makers and all water-using appliances to perform more efficently while expanding their life expectancy.

Besides the Bacteriostatic water conditioning system, Ionicron offers Reverse Osmosis for drinking salt and sodium free water which also services ice makers. In addition, Ionicron has a patent pending on a portable distiller ideal for the non-homeowners or those on sodium resticted diets.

Ionicron, Inc., a public company with shares traded over the counter, is located on County Road 125 West, in the Terminal area next to Duccomun Metals. Corperately based in the Dallas area, Ionicron also has an office in Houston with independent distributors in Abilene, Waco, Austin, Wichita Falls, St. Louis, Chicago and Phoenix.

For a free water analysis or additional information call 561-5355.

Charley Miller(L), serviceman/installer, and Mike Dahlheim, General Manager, show Ionicron's Bacteriostatic Water Conditioner or Conditioning System. To find out more about these systems call Charley or Mike at 561-5355 or stop by and see them at 10055 County Road 125 West.

Cattleman's Steak House, 3300 N. Big Spring in Midland, offers you top quality food at a reasonable price, along with the best service in town. Treat yourself to an evening out at Cattleman's, and you will see what makes it so special. Just one trip and you'll be hooked.

Cattleman's satisfies every appetite

One trip to Cattleman's Steak House,and you'll love what Bill and Pat Henkel have done to serve you. The pleasant, relaxed atmosphere and the courteous staff will make you want to come back again and again. The staff is not only friendly but extremely efficient. Cattleman's deserves your business and once they have it they will work hard to keep you coming back. And the service isn't the only good quality that Cattleman's has, the food is absolutely delicious.

Mouth-watering appetizers at Cattleman's range from mountains of fresh onion rings to shrimp cocktail, fried zucchini, or even excellent fried mushrooms. If you prefer, you may order a hot bowl of homemade soup, steaming chili, or even frito pie. And the salad bar can easily become a meal in itself. (We're only on the appetizers and you're already hungry!)

To complement your dinner, Bill and Pat offer you a good selection of wines, champagnes, and sherry, at prices to fit any pocket book, from inexpensive to exquisite. They serve only the premium beers, those which are considered by most to be the best.

Now comes the steak, cooked to perfection. Dinner steak, club steak, or ribeye would be the perfect way to satisfy your appetite. Sirloins come in all sizes, from a single serving up to service for eight. T-Bone is an old favorite at Cattleman's, and comes in three sizes to fill anybody's hunger. Prime rib is the choice of many hungry diners (when available).

But steak at Cattleman's is not the only specialty, seafood is quite popular, too. Delicious fried shrimp, oysters, scallops, catfish, and even froglegs are available at Cattleman's. And even though every item on Cattleman's menu may be considered a treat, you owe it to yourself to try their chicken fried steak. Other popular menu items include chicken strips, hamburger steak, and Virginia ham steak. All entrees include a hearty baked potato and a trip to the excellent salad bar.

For those with not such a large appetite, Bill and Pat provide the all-American hamburger or cheeseburger, each available in two sizes. Or try their jalapeno burger to spice up your meal. Grilled cheese, ham and cheese, steak sandwich, and a delightful turkey, ham, and cheese sandwich are some of the other items available for lesser appetites. The salad bar is available not only with the meal, but as a meal in itself, also.

Special child's plates are available for the little ones. Beverages include tea, milk, soft drinks, and coffee. And if you have any room left after the steak, the desert is absolutely heavenly. Top your meal off with scrumptious blueberry or cherry cheesecake or delicious pecan pie. Hours at Cattleman's Steak House are from 10am to 2pm and 5pm to 9:30pm, Monday through Friday, and 5:00 to 10:00 Saturdays. Cattleman's is closed on Sunday's.

Of course, if you have been in Midland long, you have already been introduced to the delicious food, wonderful atmosphere, and excellent service at Cattleman's. If you have only been in Midland for a few short months, though, you would have had to fight the construction on Big Spring St. and may have passed up your opportunity to dine at Cattleman's.Now that the construction on Big Spring St. is somewhat finished, you can come on in. Even if the parking lot is full, stop by. It almost always is, but you rarely have more than a five minute wait to be seated. See you this week at Cattleman's Steak House in Midland!

IS A HIGH-PERFORMANCE SEDAN LESS PURE BECAUSE IT'S SINFULLY LUXURIOUS?

The BMW 733i is lavishly appointed with electrically-operated leather bucket seats, richly-grained wood dash and door panels, a sunroof and every other amenity you're entitled to expect of an expensive luxury sedan. Yet none of this opulence detracts in any way from the kind of performance that "can take a limited amount of time and turn it into an experience to be savored for always" (Car and Driver).

"... That's why, when John and I were transferred to Midland, we chose to live at Oakridge Apartments. Sure, we passed up a few gimmicks and giveaways offered by the other communities. But what we got instead is an apartment community superior to anything else we saw. New on the market this year, Oakridge Apartments are bright and beautiful with sparkling new amenities and lots of extras. But more than that, Oakridge is a real quality neighborhood. The people out here are just great, and the management team is the best we've ever had."

1-, 2- and 2-bedroom studio apartment homes are available now. Take Loop 250 to N. Holiday Hill Road and look for the giant American flag.

"The quality of the apartment is much better than any others I've seen in Midland."

Mary and Perry Nelson talk about The Clusters:

"The extras included seem like a real bonus. We're former homeowners, so it takes a really nice apartment complex to satisfy us."

"I have a lot more kitchen appliances than I ever did in my own home. Dishwasher, trash compactor, garbage disposal, side-by-side refrigerator, built-in microwave, washer and dryer."

But that's not all. You also get French doors to patios/balconies, mini-blinds, ceiling fans and your choice of wall coverings.

Plus unmatched amenities such as luxurious clubhouse, two pools with Jacuzzis, lighted tennis courts, 4-station jogging trail, aerobics classes and exercise room.

Come and visit and you'll see why the Nelsons' say, "There have been many days we've come home and said, 'They've really done it again, they've gone first class.'"

The Clusters. Midland's finest adult community. Special pricing now available.

TEXAS FOLKS' VOLKSTANZ

Text by David Lee Forrest

FOLK DANCE/noun (translation of German volkstanz): A dance that originates as ritual among and is characteristic of the common people of a country and that is transmitted from generation to generation with increasing secularization — distinguished from court dance.

Webster's Unabridged Third New International Dictionary

Germans enjoy the Cotton-Eyed Joe, according to Midlander Heidi Hanssen, who toured Germany last summer for six weeks with the Texas Tech University German Dancers.

Although the group's main purpose on the trip was to perform traditional German folk dances, a few Texan dances were included their repertoire.

"We taught the Cotton-Eyed Joe and they loved it," said Miss Hanssen, a senior German major at Tech.

The group, designated earlier this year "the official Texas State German Folk Dancers" by Governor Mark White, also demonstrated square dances "just to show people we're from West Texas."

The dancers were invited to West Germany to perform in the events celebrating the 300th anniversary of German immigration to the United States. In 1683, the first group of German immigrants came to America from the city of Kreflet, Germany.

TEXANS PERFORMING the Germans' own dances was an approriate gesture of friendship because it "shows them how interested we are in their culture," Miss Hanssen said.

She said the Germans were at least as interested in Texan culture, or at least a Hollywood version of it.

"Dallas"is a very popular television show in West Germany, she said.

"They have these cowboy clubs there," she said. A large one she visited was called Old Texas Town.

"They made it just like West Texas. Each of these cowboy clubs has a sheriff. People go out there dressed like cowboys. They sing a lot of Western songs over there.

"They had flag shows like we have at football games here. The Germans really like flags," Miss Hanssen said.

"They find a real romance in that Old West image. Their terrain is so different, their past is so different from ours."

At the same time, the Texans found that not many Germans have continued their folk dancing traditions.

"THE NAZIS REALLY pushed everything German. After the war, they were real disillusioned with it."

Many older Germans seemed pleased to see young people performing their traditional dances, she noted.

"A lot of them would say, 'Oh, I danced those about 60 years ago.' I think they were impressed to see them again."

Some Germans who saw the group perform mistook them for natives.

"They thought we were from the Black Forest," she said. "They were shocked."

Miss Hanssen said she encountered almost no anti-American sentiments in West Germany.

"There was one demonstration in Krefelt," she said, while the group was there. The demonstrators protested during a speech by Vice President George Bush, but the dancers weren't near the disturbance, she said.

She also met Germans who had been held in American prisoner of war camps during World War II.

"THEY SAID THE AMERICANS treated them so well in these camps that they always wanted to remember them," she said.

"The main thing is we went there to show our friendship and they accepted that right away.

"It was just great. In every city, the mayor gave us an official greeting."

The dancers stayed with German-host families. One unusual place they spent time in was a senior citizens' home in Tupingen.

"They came and woke us up when it was time to begin again. They greeted us every day like we were kings and queens."

Another highlight was a nighttime performance around a bonfire on a mountain in the Black Forest. The Texans were joined there by a native folk dance group.

"They knew our dances because we took them from them," Miss Hanssen said.

THE GROUP ALSO DANCED at the wedding reception for an American soldier and his German bride in Memmigen.

One of the less pleasant spots the group visited but did not perform was East Berlin.

"People are pretty controlled there," she said. "Everybody in the businesses seemed to be watching you."

At one point, she noticed East German soldiers armed with machine guns patrolling a catwalk.

"East Berlin was pretty frightening."

At the conclusion of the their tour of the country, the Tech students took a final exam to get course credit for the trip.

"We had a huge final," she said. "It lasted at least three hours. I wrote about 10 pages."

For Miss Hanssen, the tour was the culmination of three years of performing with the Texas Tech University Dancers.

Dancing has been a long-time interest for her.

"I started with ballet when I was young," she said, adding she has also studied tap, bellydancing and aerobics.

"There's no trick" to folk dancing, she said. "It's just getting in there and trying."

SHE BECAME INTERESTED in German after having studied Spanish and French.

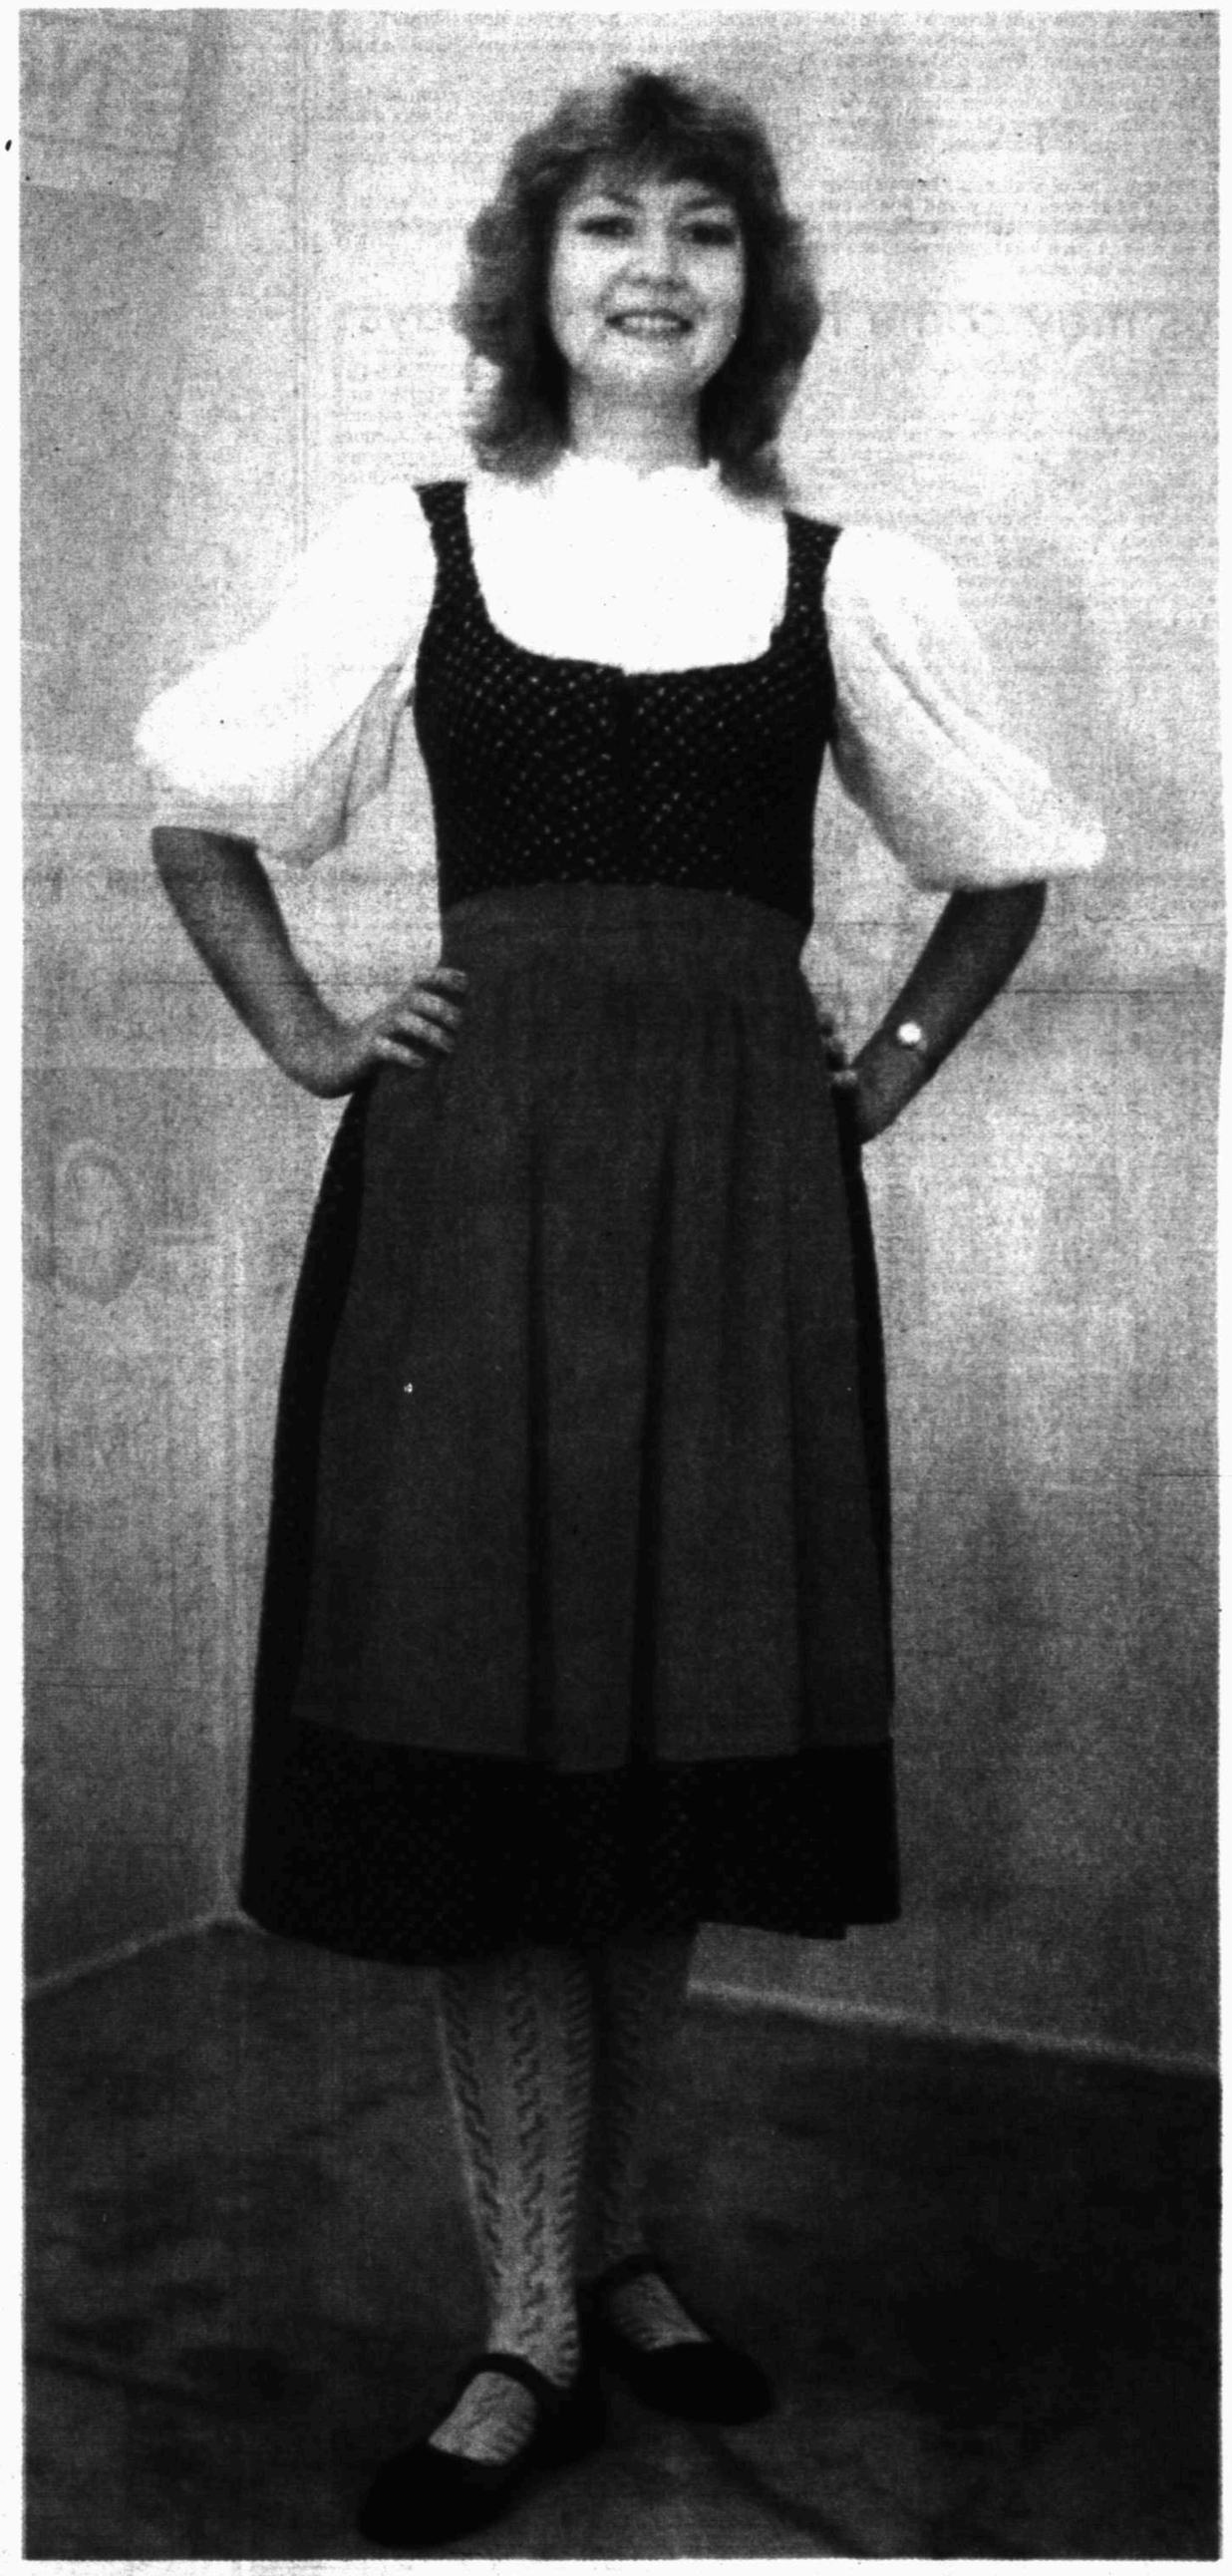

"I liked it (German) better. It was more of a challenge. It wasn't as easy.

"Also, I like tradition and the Germans are very traditional.

She plans to return to West Germany after her graduation.

"I want to teach English in Germany. I'll be leaving in August for Munich. That's where I want to live.

"Once you've had a taste of traveling, that's all you want to do."

Midlander Heidi Hanssen demonstrates a folk dance position in a costume representative of the Texas Tech University German dancers.

DEAR ABBY

Daughter wants too much

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a widow, living on a small, limited, fixed income. I have a 30-year-old divorced daughter who has been living with a rather well-to-do 35-year-old man for the last two years. They have decided to get married, and they think that I should put on a $10,000 wedding.

Abby, I do not have $10,000. I tried to borrow on my house, which is not paid for, but because of my age (63), I am not considered a good risk. I am unable to work and do not want to borrow from my relatives.

Am I wrong in thinking that a couple who have been living together should have a small wedding and pay for it themselves? I gave her one wedding already.

I was told that if I didn't come up with the $10,000 wedding, my daughter (who is my only child) will never speak to me again. Please rush your answer to me. I am desperate. — CAN'T SLEEP IN N.Y.

DEAR CAN'T SLEEP: Do not go into debt to give your daughter a $10,000 wedding. And don't worry about her never speaking to you again. You will hear from her — as soon as she needs something.

DEAR ABBY: Shortly after my boyfriend (whom I'll call Joe Blow) got divorced from his wife (whom I'll call Peggy), she married someone else. That marriage lasted 11 months, after which Peggy started to call herself Mrs. Joe Blow again.

Abby, Joe and I plan to get married one day, then I will be Mrs. Joe Blow. This will be confusing with Peggy going around calling herself Mrs. Joe Blow.

This is causing a lot of arguments between Joe and me. I say that once Peggy and Joe were divorced, she gave up the right to use his name. Joe says he doesn't care what name she uses as long as she leaves him alone.

Peggy uses the excuse that she is using his name only because she wants to have the same name as her children.

Is that good enough? And is it legal? — THE FUTURE MRS. JOE BLOW

DEAR FUTURE: Legally a person may use any name he wants as long as it's not used for fraudulent purposes. Since Peggy has children named Blow, it seems reasonable that she would want her name to be the same as her children.

She is NOT "Mrs. Joe Blow" — she is "Mrs. Peggy Blow" — and if you want to be Mrs. Joe Blow, lay off, or you'll blow your chances.

DEAR ABBY: My dear, sweet 83-year-old mother has been an invalid for nearly five years. She lives with me and rarely gets out, except to go to the doctor's. Being unable to walk is the least of her problems. She's a diabetic and practically blind, and can no longer watch TV or do needlework to help pass the time. In spite of her disabilities, she's cheerful and uncomplaining and would love to have company, but very few of her old friends come to see her or bother to call anymore. When she had her health, she entertained beautifully and had many friends, but now she sits alone day after day, forgotten.

When I meet some of her old friends on the street or in a store, they ask with a genuine look of concern, "... and how is your dear mother?"

I give them all the same answer. "She's about the same, thank you."

Abby, I have all I can do to keep from saying, "If you really care how my mother is, why don't you pick up the telephone and call her? Or go to see her once in a while? It would mean so much to her."

But since I don't have the courage to say it, I hope you will print this letter. I'm sure there are many others who feel the same as I. — NO NAME, NO TOWN

Virus may come from sea, vet says

Hearst Feature Service

A decade ago, veterinarian Alvin Smith, now at Oregon State University, found that a virus causing lesions and spontaneous abortions in California sea lions was "indistinguishable" from one that ravaged pigs nationwide in 1952.

New varieties of the culprit — called a calicivirus — have since turned up in diverse hosts: whales, cats, snakes and even primate.

To reach such a variety of hosts, they either jump from organism to organism, Smith proposes, or they escape from bubbles popping on the ocean surface, waft ashore and enter a food chain. If he is right, the seas may be a bottomless reservoir for viruses — and our attempts to combat diseases on land may be nullified by legions of new strains waiting to come ashore. Some flu viruses are said to be spread by wild ducks.

Will caliciviruses eventually strike humans? Smith suggests they may already have done so. Lesions are a universal symptom of this viral infection; recently, the number of reported lip sores has increased.

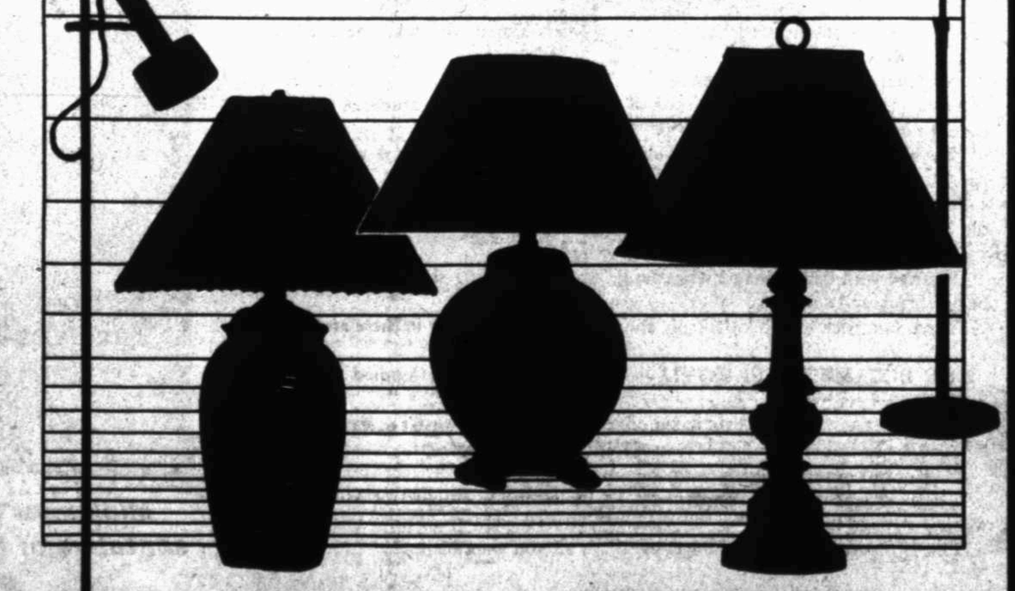

"How many of these are actually examined to see if they're herpes infections?" he muses.

Have you heard...?

By MARILYN McKNIGHT HARRISON

In observance of their 50th wedding anniversary, Maurice and Dick Hughston invited their four daughters and families to be their guests for a holiday visit to St. Thomas.

Accompanying them were Sally and Rip Rogers and sons Richard, John and Jimmy of Dallas; Nancy and Ed Watts and sons David and Daniel of Midland; Mary and Bennie Smith and children Mauri, Trey and Todd of Houston, and Harriet and Rick Crayton and daughter Katie of Springfield, Missouri.

Staying at Mahogany Run, the nineteen family members were housed in three condos overlooking a beautiful golf course. They enjoyed a relaxing week of sailing, snorkeling, golfing and tennis, not to mention the fabulous shopping. A visit by ferry to the nearby island of St. John was another highlight. Their trip, which extended from Christmas Eve to New Year's Eve, brought the family all together at Christmas for the first time since the girls' departure from home.

The Hughstons were married October 25, 1933, in Dallas and moved to Midland in 1946. Mr. Hughston is retired general attorney for Shell Oil Company. They were honored by their daughters at the time of their anniversary last fall with a cocktail buffet at the Watts home.

MRS. LILLIAN KIMSEY, a longtime resident of Midland, was honored on her 80th birthday December 27 with a dinner party at The Energy Club.

Family members present were her son Roy Kimsey Jr., and his wife Dale; her grandchildren Sandra and Arthur Dragisic and Kristen Kimsey of Midland, and Nancy and David Dacy and Danny Self of Austin, and her one great-grandchild Kirk French Jr. of Midland. Also joining in the celebration were a small group of Mrs. Kimsey's long-time friends.

Mrs. Kimsey was born and reared in Houston. In 1927, she and her husband, the late Roy E. Kimsey Sr., moved to Midland, where he headed Hughes Tool Company. Besides the one son, they were parents of a daughter, the late Charlotte Self.

ANN SEMPLE entertained with a delightful New Year's Day open house. Approximately 65 guests dropped by during the afternoon, oohing and aahing over her beautiful new townhouse, enjoying the football on TV and the good conversation, along with Mimosas, Bloody Marys and a delicious array of cocktail foods.

Among the guests were David Rosen, along with his parents Sarah and Morris Rosen, visiting here from Fort Lee, New Jersey; Sharon McGuire, a new Midland resident from Austin, and Karen Pace and former Midlander Royce Lubke, both in from Houston. A few of the others were Betty Jo Munn, Trudie and Glen Thomason, Kevin Mahoney, Oza Whitten and Pat and Tom Rattan.

TO RING IN the new year and usher out the old, Cathe and Bob Leggott hosted a festive New Year's Eve party at their home, which was beautifully decorated for the holidays. At midnight, the guests gathered together to sing "Auld Lang Syne" and partake of the traditional blackeyed peas and ham.

Among their friends enjoying the fun evening were Betty and Jim Rhotenbery, Vera and Dick Powers, Vina and John Rahlfs, Sonja and Dennis Britain, Cindy and Greg Midkiff, Joan and Al Jones, Audrey and Bob Baker and Louise and Hugh Christianson.

ONE OF THE NICEST of Christmas gifts was received by Joan Weir with the unexpected arrival home of her son Andy, on Christmas Eve. Serving with the Navy in San Francisco, Andy and his dad, the Rev. Bill Weir, made elaborate arrangements to insure his arrival would be a complete surprise. Bill used the pretense of driving to the airport to pick up Andy's Christmas gifts, which supposedly had been shipped air freight. Instead, the gift turned out to be Andy.

Completing the family circle was the Weirs' daughter Cindy, a student at North Texas State University.

Andy's long-time interest in electronics has led him into a new field of study, avionics, aboard the aircraft carrier the USS Enterprise.

ANNE-MARIE AND DON BACHMANN and children Kristen and David, have had as holiday visitors Anne-Marie's mother Mrs. Urmia Van L. Cummings of Guyana, South America, and sister Pat Cummings of Kansas City, Missouri. They were joined after Christmas by Don's brother, tennis pro Ray Bachmann of Mount Prospect, Illinois. Ray stopped off en route home from a tennis school in Los Angeles.

The guests were treated to a grand tour of Midland Community Theatre, where Don is executive director, and the local museums, along with the requisite trip to a well site for first-time visitors to West Texas.

Informal courtesies extended the visitors included tea and wine at the home of Dottie (Mrs. Jack) Fox, with Ruth (Mrs. Bob) Price assisting, and cocktails at the home of Bebe Fisher.

Harvest dessert wines expensive but pleasant

By DAN BERGER
Copley News Service

Now that the gift shopping is done and you're ready to treat yourself to something you want-mold known as Botrytis.

Botrytis attacks grape clusters only when there is lots of moisture in the air. This happens rarely in California's prime wine-growing regions, but when Botrytis hits, it produces tiny holes in the skin of the grape, permitting the water inside to evaporate, thus concentrating the natural sugars.

Higher sugars in the grapes can make sweet dessert wines, and in addition the Botrytis gives such wines a unique, peach-and-honey aroma.

The first California wine made this way was made in 1973 by Freemark Abbey winery. After a warmer growing season than usual, Freemark Abbey's Johannisberg Riesling grapes were still on the vine when, on Sept. 20, heavy coastal fogs rolled in and blanketed the Napa Valley. Botrytis spread rapidly, infecting Freemark Abbey's grapes.

Instead of 21 percent natural sugar that wine maker Jerry Luper thought he had, the grapes had become dehydrated; a sampling in the winery showed the average sugar to be over 30 percent.

The resulting wine was called Edelwein (which means "noble wine" in German). But there wasn't much of it, because so much grape juice had been lost through dehydration. However, the intensity of the Riesling aroma was magnified by the honeyed Botrytis character. The taste was miraculous: a combination of peach/pear fruit, lush figlike fullness and a balance between sweetness and acidity that was marvelous.

Freemark Abbey makes an Edelwein every year the weather cooperates, and in 1982 a wine of proportions similar to the 1973 version was produced. The 1982 Edelwein Gold is intensely flavored and extremely complex already — though it will gain in complexity with a few years in the bottle.

The wine has nearly 22 percent natural residual sugar, only 8.8 percent alcohol, and .96 percent acidity to balance much of the sugar, so the wine doesn't taste cloying.

At $17.50 for a half bottle ($32 for a full bottle), this is expensive wine, but a 375-milliliter bottle (more than 12 ounces) offers enough to serve 12 persons one ounce each. And all you need of this nectar is an ounce because the aroma alone is worth the price of admission. Sip the wine very slowly, and it pleases for a long time.

Joseph Phelps in Napa and Chateau St. Jean in Sonoma have been the most consistent of the late-harvest Riesling producers, but many superb wines in this style have been made in the last few years because wine makers (a) had Botrytis, and (b) had more courage to try to ferment "moldy" grapes.

In 1982, Franciscan Vineyards produced its first such wine, designated Select Late Harvest Johannisberg Riesling. It, too, offers good Riesling aromas (floral and honeysuckle) combined with 19 percent residual sugar, .84 percent acid and 9.3 percent alcohol. Released last month, this wine is $15 for a half bottle, $25 for a full.

Japanese tattoo artists cover whole bodies

By The Los Angeles Times—Washington Post News Service

TOKYO — Japan's tattoo artists don't just stop at an anchor and heart on the forearm. For them, the whole body becomes a canvas for tattoos.

And some artists are still practicing the craft without any mechanical aids.

Shotaro Yamada, 53, is one of those tattoo artists. For 30 years, Yamada, who works in a small shop in the backstreets of Tokyo's Taitoku district, had been tattooing whole pictures on his customers, turning them into walking works of art.

Frequently, a samurai warroir will rear forth from a customer's back, framed in ornamental flowers, gods, snakes and dragons. Usually, the tattoos extend from the neck down the back and beyond, as far as the ankles and wrists.

Around the neck, an area of skin is left untouched, enabling the tattooed individual to wear an open-necked shirt without revealing his secret. The front of the body is either entirely covered with tattoos or a strip is left clear on the top half, giving the effect of an open smock.

Yamada, who used the working name of "Horibumi the Second," says, "I never wanted to be a tattoo artist like my father."

He was a fireman, but when he was 22, an illness kept him in bed for a year and he started to draw.

Friends of his father encouraged him to keep on with the fantastic designed he produced from Japan's rich mythology and history, and to transfer them to the living body. And so it happened.

To produce the tattoos, Yamada stretches the individual's skin between his fingers and then, at lightning speed, he gets to work with needles dipped in dark ink.

Teens' prized toys not harmful, experts say

NEW YORK — Discarding a teen's favorite childhood toy in order to help her grow up may, in fact, backfire on a parent, says a recent issue of Seventeen magazine. Instead of stunting a teen's emotional development, holding on to a cherished doll or stuffed animal can actually ease the transition into young adulthood, experts reveal, by providing a non-treatening measure of security.

"As a child moves into adolescence there's a need to have a type of transitional object that does not in any way reflect sexual concerns," Dr. Demetri Papolos, a practicing psychiatrist on the faculty of Albert Einstein College of Medicine in New York, reported in the magazine. This is the main reason why, he explained, adolescent girls will abandon their very lifelike Barbie dolls in favor of a collection of cuddly stuffed animals. "A Barbie doll can be a lot more anxiety-producing than a cute little asexual animal," he said.

Papolos added that a special childhood toy can at times act like an old trusted friend for a teen who is passing through some difficult emotional times. Particularly one who is struggling with her parents. "There's a need (for teens) to have an object that won't let them down — one that is totally under their control and one that will survive any kind of treatment, loving or hating," Papolos said. "An adolescent can walk into her room after she's had a bad experience, grab her stuffed animal and punch it," he continued.

While parents might wonder if a teen with a roomful of stuffed animals will ever grow up, all the experts agree that there is no cause for alarm and that instead such a teen is actually demonstrating some very positive emotional qualities.

'Positive reinforcement' not enforced

By ERMA BOMBECK

Every decade, a maternal messiah emerges to lead parents out of the wilderness of child-raising.

They are called authorities in parental techniques.

Does your child have a bedroom that will have to be cleaned before you can have it condemned? There is a way.

Did the schedule of their chores burn up when the aquarium caught fire? There is a way.

Do baby-sitters come only when combat pay and hospitalization benefits are offered? There is a way.

Can you set a full table without visiting their room first? There is a way.

When you ask them to drop their dirty clothes off in the kitchen, do they ask, "Where is it?" There is a way.

The experts call their solution "positive reinforcement," and it's been around for a long time. Children understand how it works better than adults do.

It has never worked for me.

Years ago, after I had tried kindness, compassion, anger and threats to drown their puppy, I turned to "positive reinforcement." A psychologist, whom I admired, said parents made too much of things and reacted too strongly. All you had to do was lay out a situation, then praise the child for it. If a child, for example, left a book on the floor, all I had to say was, "There's a book on the floor," and he would arrive at the decision of what should be done with it.

To test the theory, I put a book on the floor and said to the first child to arrive, "There's a book on the floor." He said, "I know, I nearly broke my neck tripping over it. Better pick it up," and disappeared. The second one came by and when I told him of the book said, "You're real quick today."

I got so disgusted I never tried it with the third one. The other day, after I viewed his bedroom, I thought I should give him the chance to redeem "positive reinforcement" from my doubts.

So when he asked me to go to a movie with him I said, "I'd love to go with you, but I have to do all the work you didn't do today."

There was genuine concern written all over his face. "How much more do you have to do?" he asked.

"There's your dirty clothes all over the floor, your dirty dishes under your bed to take out, your bed to make, your trash to be carried out, your wet towels to take to the laundry room and your floor to be vacuumed."

He put his arm around me. "Why don't you just get up earlier tomorrow morning and do it?"

If there's a way . . . I've lost mine.

'Special needs' children now awaiting parents

An estimated 100,000 "special needs" children are currently awaiting parents to adopt them, according to a Family Circle article.

Today, says the article, you don't have to own a home, be childless or even married to adopt a child. Social workers are eager to find loving parents who are willing to commit themselves to providing the necessary medical, educational and therapeutic care and the emotional support these hard-to-place children need.

Some of these "special needs" children are past the usual age desired by adoptive families (especially if they are over 10). Others are minority children or are handicaped in some emotional and/or physical way; or they may be brothers and sisters who want to be kept together. These children are eligible for state and federal subsidies that can help adoptive parents shoulder the cost of their care — including medical equipment or physical therapy.

Many children are available for adoption from foreign countries, too.

Black, white infant mortality differs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although the national infant mortality rate is falling, the gap between the survival rates of black and white babies is widening, a study of 36 states and 16 major cities shows.

Data collected from state and city health officials ledthe Food Research and Action Center to conclude that 20,000 fewer black babies would have died between 1978 and 1982 if the infant mortality rate for blacks had been the same as that for whites.

The national infant mortality rate was 11.2 deaths per 1,000 live births in 1982 compared to 13.1 per 1,000 in 1979.

Nancy Amidei, executive director of the group, said its analysis showed that black infants die at a rate twice that of white infants in the cities and states studied. The rate for whites in 1982 was 9.9 per 1,000 compared to 19.3 per 1,000 for blacks. In some cities, black infants die at four times the rate of white infants. The cities and states studied are those which were able to provide complete statistics for 1978-82 on infant mortality by November 1983.

The group blamed the recession and a reduction in federal support for health programs for much of the disparity.

"If publicly-provided health and nutrition services are cut back in a time of rising unemployment and rising poverty, we should not be surprised to see more low birth weight babies born to poor and minority women and to see fewer of their infants survive," Ms. Amidei said.

The group also found that the gap between black and white babies is widening. While the black infant mortality rate was 86 percent higher than that for whites in 1978, the black infant mortality rate was 95 percent higher than that for whites in 1982.

The group identified an "Infant Mortality Belt" stretching across the southeastern and south central states where the death rate for babies is above the national average. New York and some industrial states in the Midwest also can be included in this belt, according to the group's 42-page report.

"The Incidence and Distribution of Infant Mortality and Low Birth Weight in the United States 1978-1982" was released by the non-profit research group just two days after a Children's Defense Fund report which checked similar information sources and drew complementary conclusions. The earlier report also noted spot increases in infant mortality but focused on a trend away from early prenatal care for poor pregnant women despite the fact that the babies of women receiving early prenatal care have three times greater chance of survival than those of mothers who do not.

The District of Columbia had the highest infant mortality rate in the nation in 1982 at 20.3 deaths per 1,000 live births. There, the rate for whites was six deaths per 1,000 live births compared to one of 23.3 deaths per 1,000 live births for blacks.

It is followed by South Carolina at 16.2 per 1,000 live births (12 per 1,000 for whites and 22.2 per 1,000 for blacks), Mississippi at 15.4 per 1,000 (10.4 for whites and 20.9 for blacks), Alabama at 13.8 (10.3 for whites and 20.3 for blacks), North Carolina at 13.7 (10.9 for whites and 19.6 for blacks), Illinois at 13.6 (10.7 for whites and 24.5 for blacks), Georgia at 13.3 (9.6 for whites and 20.2 for blacks), Louisiana at 12.9 (9.3 for whites and 19.1 for blacks), Virginia at 12.9 (10.7 for whites and 19.3 for blacks) and Florida at 12.8 (10.1 for whites and 20.4 for blacks).

Transplant child's holiday gift

By The Los Angeles Times—Washington Post News Service

LANCASTER, Calif. — Zacharie Russell is having a very special Christmas. He is celebrating the holiday like most other 6-year-olds — playing with his new toys, horsing around with his brothers and eating a big family Christmas dinner.

It would not have been so, had Zacharie not received the liver transplant he needed for a chance of survival.

But on Aug. 2, after trips to hospitals in the Midwest and East to be evaluated for a possibile transplant, after public and private campaigns to raise money for the expensive operation, and after waiting months for a suitable donor, Zacharie Russell got his chance.

THE 13½-HOUR surgery at the University of Pittsburgh's Children's Hospital was successful, and he is recuperating remarkably, according to his family and physicians.

"He's done so well," said Zacharie's father, Joe. "He was only there (in the hospital) 90 days. The doctors considered it amazing. There are kids there (with transplanted livers) five or six months after.

"The liver he got was apparently so healthy that it started to work right away," Joe Russell added. "Usually it takes 12 to 24 hours for the new liver to function. His started, they told us, before they finished the operation."

DR. BASIL ZITELLI, a pediatrician on the liver transplant staff at Pittsburgh's Children's Hospital, said: "Zack has done well. Very, very nicely. We're pleased with his progress.

"I would say his chances (at long-term survival) are as good as anyone else's (with a liver transplant). But he runs the risk of complications, just as the others do. The primary one we see is rejection (the body rejecting the new organ). We do 25 to 30 liver transplants a year, and at least two-thirds of them now survive the operation beyond one year.

"We've only been doing this here for about 2 1-2 years, so we don't have any long-term statistics," Zitelli added. "But there are long-term survivals of the transplants that were done in Denver. One has survived 14 years, several for 10, and we have every hope that our patients will do very, very well."

AS HIS FATHER and mother talked at their ranch-style home in Quartz Hill, in the high California desert near Lancaster, Zacharie sat on the couch, looking through a catalogue for things he wanted for Christmas. His younger brothers, Jeremy, 3, and Jonathan, 20 months, sat nearby.

There was a toy with highways and road signs and trucks and fire engines that he especially wanted, he said. "And this race car from the 'Dukes of Hazzard,' and this commando game," he added.

Zacharie chattered away, showing the visitors the Christmas ornaments and manger scene he had made in kindergarten and Sunday school.

CLEARLY, THE Zacharie Russell of December is a far different child from the one seen in July.

He was unusually quiet then for a boy his age. He had to be careful in everything he did. He couldn't play much or hard. He was born with biliary atresia, an absence of bile ducts that causes the liver to malfunction and results in early death.

Zacharie had to follow a strict diet. Because of his malfunctioning liver, his stomach was distended and he was in pain most of the time. He spent most of his few years in hospitals.

Before his transplant operation, he had had five major liver-related surgeries. "He spent 20 hours in surgery the first year of his life," said Joe Russell. "And then a whole lot more."

"THERE'S A BIG difference in his personality now," Cathy Russell said, watching Zacharie and Jeremy wrestle on the floor near her feet. "He's real outgoing, sometimes too much. He's really impressed now with the fact he can jump and run. It was hard for him to do that before.

"It's just a wonderful Christmas for us," she said. "He's never been well for the holidays before. Many of them he spent in the hospital. I see him now sometimes coming down the hall and he just walks like a regular kid. Before, it was a real effort for him. Now, he just trots down that hall."

ZACHARIE LIKES TO play baseball and kickball and soccer. "I play pretty well," he said with a grin.

"We even got a complaint from his teacher about wrestling in the schoolyard," said Joe Russell. "So you know that he's just a different boy."

Zacharie, who now has no diet restrictions, said he was looking forward to trying the roast goose his mother planned to prepare for Christmas dinner, and pumpkin pie that he loves. But, all things considered, he said he would rather have pizza. "Plain cheese, I like best," he said.

"That's the first thing we did when we got home from the hospital — have pizza," said Joe Russell.

AS NORMAL AS his life is now, Zacharie Russell's well-being still depends on an anti-rejection drug called Cyclosporin that he must take daily for the rest of his life.

It is a costly drug, $180 for a 12-day supply.

Joe Russell, who works part time as a grocery clerk at a Lancaster supermarket and also sells real estate, has applied to his union, the Retail Clerks Union, asking that medical insurance pay for the Cyclosporin.

Cyclosporin is a powerful drug with a noticeable side effect on Zacharie. His body hair grows much faster and thicker now. His eyebrows have grown much heavier and his facial hair is more apparent.

THE IMPORTANCE OF PERSONAL DEVELOPMENT AND IMAGE PROJECTION IN TODAY'S BUSINESS WORLD

A personal development course can pave the way for smoother human relations by teaching the techniques and proper attitudes for getting along with others.

A personal development course can provide self-awareness of one's strengths, weeknesses, desires, and the knowledge to acquire the traits of personality and appearance that lead to success in the business world.

The proof of the value of personal development training is evident in the biographies of prominently successful people who have made the most of themselves and who have lived up to their potential. Many have had the kind of assistance that you will receive in your personal development course-assistance that has helped them to look at themselves objectively. Once aware of how their appearance and personality affected others, they have made a genuine effort to improve their "image projection." This simply means that they have designed their appearance and personality for success. You can do the same.

The clothes you wear have an affect on others. You will learn how to select the styles, colors, fabrics, and accessories that are appropriate and becoming for you and for the business environment in which you will work. Awareness of lines, color, fabrics and accessories will make it possible for you to discriminate and to select the apparel that is right for the image you wish to project.

Personality has been described as the total effect one person has on another. If this is true, your success demands that you learn and practice good manners, good speech and good interpersonal relations. Your personal development course contains lessons on voice improvement, how to use the businss telephone to greatest effect, and the twelve steps to a winning personality.

Summed up, your personal development course is more than a dress for success course, more than a good grooming course, more than a personality pays course In essence it is a "how-to" course to increase your self-awareness and to enhance your chances for success in the job market by teaching you how to project an image that potential employers will like so that their response to your application for employment will be: "You're hired."

Old theater kept alive

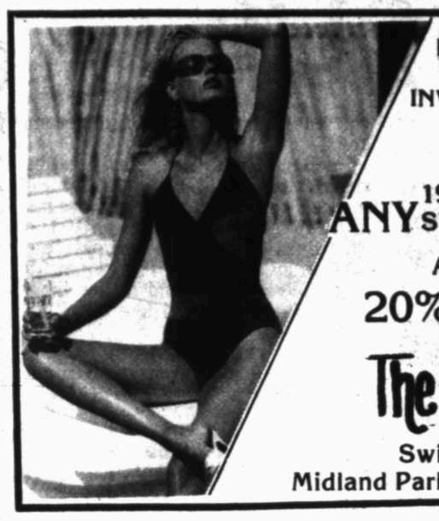

NASHVILLE, Ark. (AP) — When summer ended and it was time for his job at the Elberta Theater to end, Kent Wells stayed on. Now, Wells has a full-time job renovating the movie house as well as producing weekly music shows.

Wells, 20, originally of Ashdown, wanted a summer job working in the country and western music field. The pickings were slim, but Wells' brother, Dennis, told him that the Elberta Theater was to be leased out for the summer. "The fellows that owned it were going to use their drive-in over the summer," Wells said in a recent interview. "We didn't have any summer jobs lined up, playing or otherwise, so we just decided to give it a go."

Each Saturday night since June 18, crowds of between 350 to 450 people gather in the theater for a live country and western music show. Wells performs and produces the show that includes performers from around the area. The crowds come from Nashville and surrounding southwest Arkansas cities. Wells says sometimes people come from Dallas or Shreveport, La.

The theater was built in 1946. The brick structure has been covered with stucco. Outside there is a neon sign and inside the seats are the old padded variety.

Wells and his wife, Marcia, 21, want to repair the sign and the seats, paint the inside of the theater, do some remodeling and put down a new carpet. "We're just trying to give the place the look similar to what it had when it was opened," Wells said. The painting is half finished.

Consumers warned about shock risks

Many deaths by electric shock have occurred because a consumer didn't know that electric power was still running into an appliance even though the switch was turned off. So says U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission Chairman Nancy Harvey Steorts in a Family Circle article.

Ms. Steorts urges in the article that you always unplug small appliances — especially ones used in bathrooms, kitchens or anywhere else near water. For example, if a plugged-in but turned off hair dryer were to fall into a filled bathtub, the person would probably be electrocuted.

C.P.S.C. recommends:

— Never use any electrical appliance (shavers, hair dryers) while bathing.

— Keep all electrical appliances, including radios, away from tubs, sinks or shower stalls.

— If a plugged-in appliance does accidentally fall into the water, don't reach into the water for it. Unplug it immediately at the wall outlet. Never leave an electrical appliance within the reach of children in any room in the house.

Cozy Comforts to Chase the Chills

On a chilly afternoon, there is nothing quite as welcoming as a hot beverage accompanied by a fragrant loaf of homemade bread.

After working outdoors, what better way to restore your strength — and improve your mental attitude at the same time — than with quick warm-up snacks made with wonderfully delicious ingredients. A cozy almond tea nog topped with a frothy sweetened cream can easily be paired with a warm slice of cinnamon apple tea bread livened with raisins and walnuts. Or, try warming up to a soothing cup of cran-orange drink to help you bear the cold or to brighten soggy spirits.

Like all good and natural things, these recipes start with wholesome ingredients: high quality water and caffeine-free herbal tea bags. Not surprisingly, the gentle taste, warm colors and fragrant aroma of these cozy comforts result from a combination of tea with a delightful blend of herbs and spices and water that's fresh in taste, free of odor and crystal clear.

Up until a few years ago, the water flowing from kitchen taps often did the trick. Today, however, according to the Water Quality Association, many consumers are finding their tap water unexciting. As water makes its way through the atmosphere and underground pipe systems, it picks up impurities, sediment and unwanted minerals. The result in the kitchen is often water that detracts from the true flavor of the recipe adding instead, an off-taste, unpleasant odor or a cloudy appearance.

Fortunately, if your palate prefers something more pleasing, a home water filtration system can be installed under the sink or in a utility area to provide a cleaner, clearer, tastier supply from the tap.

What does it all boil down to? High quality water will enhance the true taste, flavor and aroma of these heart-warming herbal tea recipes for your pleasure today and in the cold days to come. What a comforting thought!

ALMOND TEA NOG

- 2 cups high quality water
- 4 almond pleasure herbal tea bags
- 1 cup milk
- 2 tablespoons brown sugar
- Brandy (optional)
- Sweetened whipped cream

In medium saucepan, bring water to a boil. Add almond herbal tea bags; cover and brew 5 minutes. Remove tea bags. Stir in milk and sugar; heat through. Just before serving, stir in brandy and garnish with whipped cream and sliced almonds. Makes about 4 servings.

CRAN-ORANGE CUP

- 2-1/4 cups high quality boiling water
- 6 gentle orange herbal tea bags
- 3/4 cup cranberry juice cocktail, heated to boiling
- 2 tablespoons brown sugar

In teapot, pour boiling water over orange herbal tea bags; cover and brew 5 minutes. Remove tea bags. Stir in remaining ingredients. Garnish, if desired, with cinnamon stick and orange peel. Makes about 4 servings.

CINNAMON APPLE TEA BREAD

- 1-1/4 cups high quality boiling water
- 4 cinnamon apple herbal tea bags
- 1 cup raisins
- 1/2 cup honey
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 1 egg
- 3 cups all-purpose flour
- 1 tablespoon baking powder
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 cup chopped walnuts
- 1/2 cup confectioners sugar

Preheat oven to 350°.

In teapot, pour boiling water over cinnamon apple herbal tea bags; cover and brew 5 minutes. Remove tea bags and reserve 2 tablespoons tea.

In large bowl, pour remaining tea over raisins, honey and butter and cool completely; beat in egg.

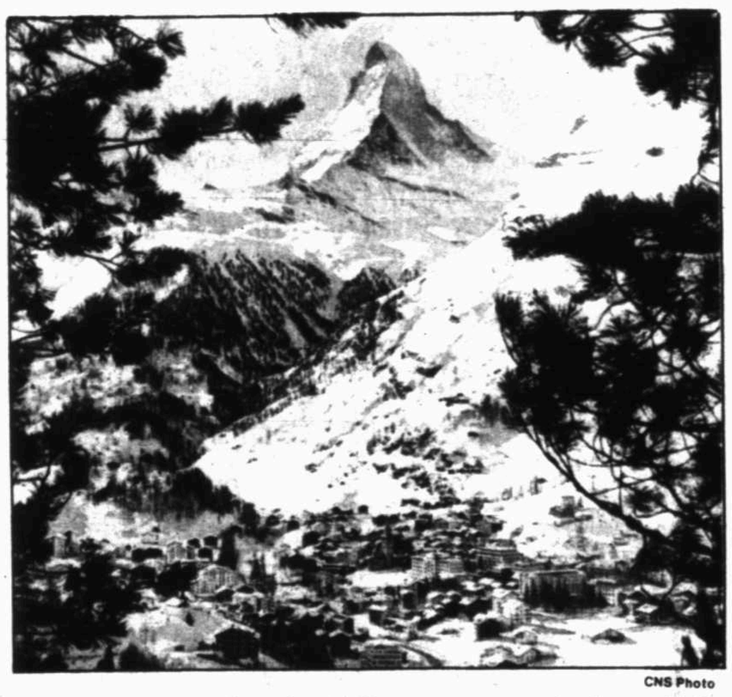

In medium bowl, combine flour, baking powder and salt. Gradually add to tea mixture, blending well after each addition. Stir in walnuts.

Turn into greased and floured 9" x 5" x 3" loaf pan and bake 1 hour or until bread tests done. On wire rack, cool 10 minutes; remove from pan and cool completely before glazing.

Meanwhile, in small bowl, gradually add reserved tea to confectioners sugar until desired thickness; drizzle over bread. Makes about 8 servings.

HOW TO BREW A PERFECT CUP OF HERBAL TEA

- USE FRESH, COLD WATER
  Cold water is aerated (full of oxygen) to bring out the full character of tea. A home water filtration system can supply clean, clear, fresh-tasting water from the kitchen tap.
- BRING TO A ROLLING BOIL
  Boiling water releases the full flavor and fragrance from tea leaves. Avoid boiling too long or boiling twice.
- PREHEAT THE TEAPOT OR CUP
  Fill teapot or cup with hot water and let stand a few minutes to preheat.
- USE ONE TEABAG PER CUP
  This gives each cup the maximum flavor, color and body.
- POUR AND COVER
  Pour in boiling water immediately and cover to retain heat.
- BREW 3 TO 5 MINUTES
  Brew by the clock, not by color. Some teas brew light, others dark. For most teas, 3 to 5 minutes is recommended.
- SQUEEZE
  A gentle squeeze will remove every delicious drop of tea.
- SERVE
  Serve, if desired, with sugar or honey. Enjoy!

Zermatt and the Matterhorn offer a cozy corner in the world for skiers, racers or spectators of hockey, sled-races and ski acrobatics.

Season for all skiers

Copley News Service

Nature and the Swiss have cooperated to make that country the skiing capital of the world. Nature has provided a range of mountains that appeal to skiers of all skill levels. And the Swiss have made their slopes accessible by dotting them with more than 1,400 mountain railways and ski lifts.

The Swiss National Tourist Office reports that 23 Swiss resorts will offer ski packages this season. These range in price from a modest $150 per person for a seven-day stay in Grindelwald to a luxury one-week vacation in Zermatt for $1,399 per person. Some tour operators offer accommodations in apartments that are priced as low as $49 per person for a weeklong land arrangement.

Cross-country skiers enjoy well-groomed trails throughout Switzerland. Those who have perfected their sport can join 13,000 others from around the world to test their endurance March 11, 1984, during the 16th Engadine Ski Marathon.

There's a host of events for spectators, as well. Among them, sled-dog racing at Andermatt, ice hockey at Arosa, spring ski jumping on Mount Titlis near Engelberg and ski acrobatics at Adelboden. For the artistically inclined, Hoch-Ybrig in central Switzerland will hold its annual Snow Sculpture Competition Feb. 16-19; the theme will be "The Olympic Games."

Skiers and non-skiers alike should consider combining their Alpine vacation with a visit to at least one Swiss city.

No matter what activity appeals to you, it can be included in one of the many travel programs that make the country both accessible and affordable. Among these, Swissair's "The Alpine Experience" offers ground arrangements with guaranteed dollar rates through April 8; the airline's new "Cross-Country Ski Vacations" program features various grades of accommodations at 44 hotels in Crans-Montana, Davos, Engelberg, Grindelwald, Gstaad and St. Moritz.

Further information and a calendar of winter events are available from the Swiss National Tourist Office, 608 Fifth Ave., New York, N.Y. 10020.

Stormy day? Get the camera out!

By HOLT CONFER
Copley News Service

One of the reasons Kodak has managed to maintain leadership position in photographic products is its understanding of the marketplace. Oh, sure, Kodak makes good products — and I don't want to diminish that factor — but even the very best product won't sell if it doesn't fill a specific need for the ultimate consumer.

The disc camera, for example, will probably end up being studied by business school graduate students as a classic case of being at the right place with the right product at the right time. Millions and millions of the disc cameras were sold simply because the camera was reliable, easy to use, produced very passable prints and sold at an affordable price.

The moral of the story is that Kodak apparently realizes that the big money in photography supplies is in the mass market — the people who just want to take a few pictures of the important events in their life and don't really care to get deeply involved with all the mechanics.

For example, many of the major camera manufacturers are introducing auto focus units. Auto focus cameras are obviously another camera idea whose time has come. A little bit more sophisticated than the disc cameras, but still the auto focus manufacturers are aiming at the mass market where the bulk of the bulk of the 20-30 million pictures taken each day are generated.

But to get back to Kodak — they've recently introduced a pocket guide to 35mm photography that follows their time-proven concept of appealing to the photographer who can't be bothered with remembering a whole lot of data about the picture-taking process.

Here's what the Kodak editors say in their introduction: "We give you basic, intermediate and advanced tehniques, we give you general tips as well as specific tips. We tell you how to photograph oddball subjects like lightning, fireworks or star trails, as well as common subjects like landscapes, people and animals.

CNS Photo

Don't put your camera away when the weather gets bad — "storm clouds, curtains of rain in the distance or falling snow all stir strong emotions often based on survival.

From birthdays to moonrises, from vacations to snowstorms, we give you a wide range of information to answer the many questions arising in photography. ..."

And so they do. There's never more than three or four pages devoted to any subject, so it's very easy to find the information you might need. The editors have also made certain this pocket guide (it measures 3¼ x 6¼ inches) is written in easy-to-comprehend language.

For example, on the subject of lighting (one of the most important factors any photographer needs to consider), here's what the editors say — "From dawn to dusk the light changes and, in turn, the appearance of anything it strikes changes.

"The light changes in three important ways: intensity, color and direction. At sunrise, the soft, yellowish front lighting from the sun may flatter crumbling castle ruins as a romantic symbol of legends. While at mid-morning the harsh, almost colorless sidelighting from the sun will pick out every little defect and depict the same ruins as a symbol of neglect.

"Generally, early- or late-day sun is the most versatile. When fairly low in the sky, the sun can be used as frontlight, sidelight or backlight simply by changing viewpoint.

"In addition, the warm color of light from the low sun may be more pleasing than the nearly colorless light of midday."

Now coupled to this informative dialogue are pictorial examples (most always in color).

High-tech ski boots beat the freeze

Hearst Feature Service

SEATTLE — Ski-equipment technology continues to keep pace with the space age. Items include everthing from a $1,500 hand-built powder-snow ski dubbed Pure Gold (a built-in device "beeps" when you lose it in the deep stuff) to a ski boot wired for heat.

The new technologies are even being applied to old ideas. The foam-fit "custom" boot, for example, is back.

Since uncured foam was poured into ski boots almost two decades ago, it has promised instant comfort, however, it also promised problems, such as producing bubbles, and, after use on the ski hill, it usually disintegrated in time.

Raichle, Koflach, Dynafit and Dachstein have studied chemistry for the boots to make them a success. The method still requires ski shop experts to inject the foam on-site to customize the fit.

Lange uses a built-in, heat-sensitive material for its "Thermofit" boot — a material that softens when warmed. It is done electrically by sandwiching into the boot a sheet of aluminum foil on which an electrical-resistance circuit has been printed. A connection at the rear, boot-top high, is plugged into a wall outlet, the heat softens the foam. The bootbuyer then buckles up, and the current is switched off. The foam conforms to the foot as it cools.

The air boot, too, has returned. The air-bladder concept was pioneered by the Henke Boot Co. 30 years ago when leather was the ski-boot standard. The idea waned because the leathers used softened too quickly. Now, Raichle, Nordica and Koflach have brought it back.

The concept is based on the use of an air cushion to surround a foot's ankle area, and the amount of air used is controlled as it is in a bicycle tire. An "inner-tube" stem sticks out at the boot top and to this, a small bulb pump is attached.

Because of the many quality skis on the market, a coin may as well be flipped when considering brand names. The key is to remember that the gamut ranges from noodle-limp skis for deep powder to rigid planks for speed on the pack.

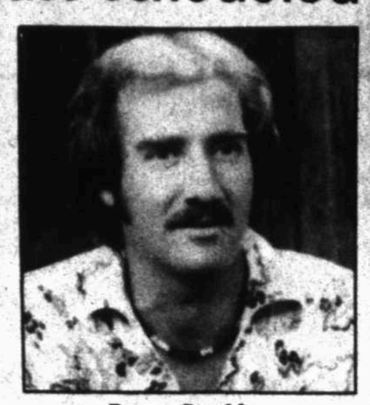

Bindings have also made recent breakthroughs.

Geze has taken a long look at heel-releases and has come up with what it believes is a more-sensitive heel-release unit. The decision to concentrate on heel-release technology was based on statistics showing more leg breaks occurred because of forward bends (controlled by a binding's heel piece) than because of sideways twists (controlled at the toe).

On the market for about two years and priced from $220-$240, the German-made Ess is a plate binding.

The Ess plate slides on a flexible track so, with a flip of a cover plate and lever, a skier can alter the binding's placement on the ski forward or back as much as six centimeters.

Special spread

COMPANY BRUNCH
White Wine
Shirred Eggs & Sausage
English Muffins & Pear Honey
Coffee

PEAR HONEY

Delightful old-time spread.

3 large (1⅓ pounds) ripe but firm Anjou pears
2¼ cups sugar
3 tablespoons lemon juice

Peel and core pears; grate coarsely — there should be 3 loosely packed cups. In a 3-quart saucepan over moderately low heat stir together pears, sugar and lemon juice until sugar dissolves. Boil rapidly, stirring occasionally, until the mixture is about as thick as warm honey — 20 minutes. Store in tightly covered jars in the refrigerator. Makes about 2¾ cups.

Basket: Easy pick-up

The crowd's coming any minute and you're picking up odds and ends at the last minute. Next time, be prepared. Take a tip from Family Circle magazine and have a "pick-up basket" handy.

Any light, roomy basket that you can drop those assorted items into at a moment's notice will do. Now you'll have a neat, efficient way to quickly remove clothing items, books, letters, keys, school papers and the like.

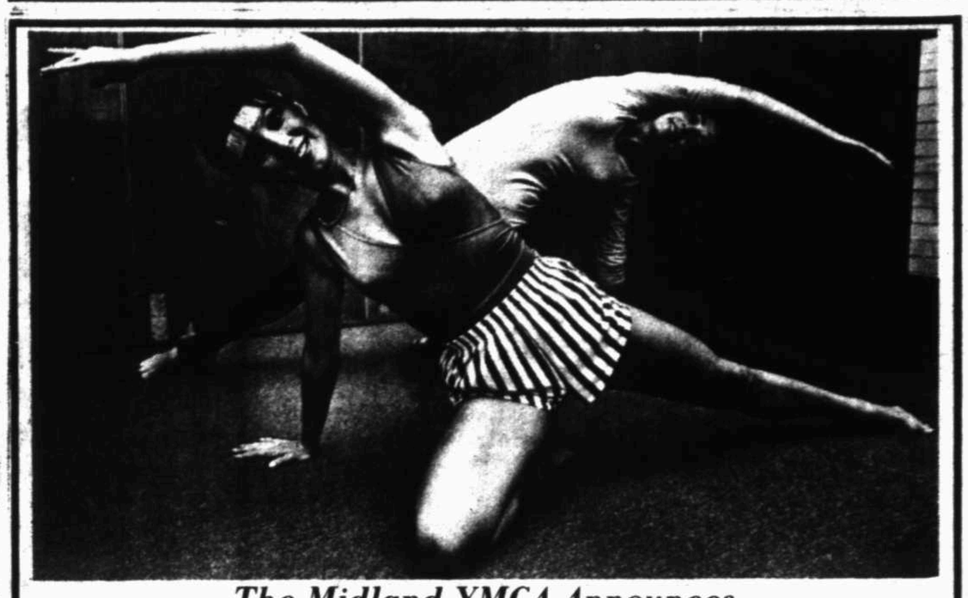

Stash the basket out of sight in a closet before the guests arrive. This way you won't have to stuff things in drawers and cabinets, and you'll eliminate the problem of finding them later.

Scientists watching 35 American volcanoes

SAN FRANCISCO — Scientists are keeping an eye on 35 volcanoes in the United States. The volcanoes are either due to erupt every 200 years on the average, or last erupted less than 300 years ago.

The Geological Survey says these 35 volcanoes, all located in the Western states, including Hawaii and Alaska, merit close attention because massive eruptions, similar to the violent explosion of Krakatoa in Indonesia 100 tears ago, and surpassing the Mount St. Helens eruption, are possible in the U.S.

Wall systems create space in tight rooms

By The Associated Press

Wall systems can solve the problems posed by shrinking living space. As a result, sales are up for the multi-purpose storage units which can be used in a variety of rooms.

At the recent Southern Furniture Market in North Carolina, a number of manufacturers introduced new systems or showed expanded offerings.

According to a trade publication retail sales of wall systems are growing fast. One retailer, for example, said this type of furniture represents almost 15 percent of his sales. But five years ago, it contributed only about 5 percent.

Most wall systems purchased in the U.S. are installed in the living room. But they are beginning to turn up in other rooms, too.

The wall system is replacing the conventional china cabinet and buffet server in the dining room, supplanting the triple dresser in the bedroom, and competing with bookcases and etageres in dens and family rooms. Systems with beds concealed within are even turning family rooms into occasional guest rooms.

Not long ago, consumers who wanted to purchase wall systems had to shop at specialty retail outlets. Today, most furniture stores offer both imported and American-made wall systems.

David Llull, an executive with Interline Co., which has been importing its moderate-price European-made systems for five years, said his firm's sales had multiplied 500 percent during this time and that the top furniture chains in this country now routinely carry wall systems.

Werner Meier, an importer of higher-priced systems for the past six years, says consumers caught on faster than retailers to the advantages of a wall of specialized storage options which could be customized to suit different needs.

Not only urban dwellers appreciate the fact that a single wall of cabinetry can shelter such diverse items as clothing, housewares, hobby equipment and home entertainment components, he said. Customers often come into a retail store seeking such a solution to storage needs.

In many instances, consumers are sophisticated enough to have taken measurements of their rooms and to have a list of the type and amount of possessions to be accommodated in the wall system, he said.

These Americans are only doing what Europeans have done for a long time. That is because most European homes and apartments are built without the closets Americans consider essential. As a result, storage systems must be purchased or built into all the rooms where such space is required.

European manufacturers are old hands at designing and building such systems. They often have automated equipment enabling them to produce a variety of components with many storage functions.

Birthdays should count

By ADELE SCHEELE, Ph.D.

Today's my birthday. Today I understand why someone would want to make a birthday count as one of the holidays to be celebrated — usually by having it off from work, only I want it on.

So let's go for it: telling one's age. I'm 45. I'm happy about it. I feel good. I feel bold. I also feel a lot younger than I did when I felt the oldest I've ever been.

I was only 27, teaching English, and worried to death about quitting. That meant giving up a retirement fund and health benefits. Don't laugh. It was one of the critical decisions of my life.

I recall waking up in a fetal position with heart palpitations that nearly sent me to the hospital. I got trench mouth, too, and can still at will recreate that metallic taste of the nervous condition named for soldiers in the trenches in World War I who literally tasted the bitter fear of battle.

My war was against the emblem of security and its so-called guarantees that represent life when the job at hand doesn't.

I won the war and the battle though it wasn't easy.

It was all brought back for me this past weekend. At the end of my speech at the conference of the American Vocational Association, one administrator asked me for advice. Should he settle for the "golden handcuffs" that a secure job gave him, or should he risk working for a politician, whose job was certainly time-limited.

He asked me what questions to ask himself to determine the answer. I suggested two: Suppose this year were the last you would live, how do you want to spend it? If your colleagues were promoted, who would you be most jealous of? He smiled at the second.

I then offered some ideas for his staying and enhancing his job by doing more of his preferred activities in a bigger, more visible way.

But judging from his smile, know that being bolder is often better. As we walked out the door together, he told me he had decided to take the risk and talk to the politician. He was in his mid-forties and couldn't wait any longer, after all he was two-thirds done.

I understood his decision, but questioned his math. Forty-five is not two-thirds done. We only started working full time at 21. So we've been in it for only 24 years and therefore have more than half to go.

At 45, he is infinitely wiser and therefore better than he was at 25. Wisdom and experience count if indeed we are doing different tasks better. We suffer only if we've had one year of experience 25 times over. There's a big difference.

If you have a birthday coming up, and you want to celebrate it off work, not on, then ask yourself why you're dissatisfied. Then ask yourself what you can do about it.

Sometimes it can be answered by the two questions asked by our handcuffed friend. They may work for you by triggering some surprising ideas. This new year could turn around more than your attitude.

Doing what you care about in a gutsy way makes you younger. And younger means being open to fresh ideas without so much cynicism and fear that settles in for a stereotyped version of old age.

What I'm counting on is nothing frail or pessimistic but rather energetic, wise and vital. And those characteristics of strength come from living and not being afraid to embrace change.

Living well is more than the best revenge; it's the only rejuvenation.

Energy-efficient wood stoves cause pollution

Hearst Feature Service

SAN FRANCISCO — On cold, rainy days, Charles Gerrans, the former mayor of Colma, Calif., loves to close off the back two bedrooms of his 87-year-old house and toss some wood in his wood-burning stove.

"The house has very large rooms with 10-foot ceilings, but I can get it up to 70 in two hours," he says. "The heating bill is around $15 a month."

People like Gerrans, however, face a threat to their energy-efficient, low-cost stoves from environmentalists, who are becoming increasingly concerned about pollution from the nation's 14 million wood burners.

Oregon passed a law calling for tough emission standards on all stoves sold after July 1, 1986. Missoula, Mont., adopted regulations prohibiting fires on "pollution alert" days in any stoves not certified as clean burning. Beaver Creek, Colo., banned wood burners outright, while other curbs are under consideration in Washington and Alaska. California is looking into the problem, but so far the state Energy Commission remains enthusiastic about wood-burning stoves.

The problem centers on people who don't use their stoves correctly. With one million new wood stoves being sold yearly, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency last month urged consumers to increase the efficiency of their stoves and, at the same time, reduce the amount of pollutants they generate.

"Although the stoves have gained in popularity in the past several years, so too has scientific concern over the environmental impact," says Robert Hall, an engineer with the EPA's Industrial Environmental Research Laboratory. "In a comparison study of air pollutants emitted from all types of residential heating fuels, it was estimated that heating systems using wood accounted for 95 percent of the carbon monoxide emissions, 88 percent of organic gases and 54 percent of the particulate emissions."

Before turning your faithful wood burner into a planter, you should know the EPA concedes that Hall's figures represent only a small fraction of emissions from all sources. And the EPA is offering hope to those who dote on toasting themselves before a dancing fire on a frosty evening.

Hall says the main problem is that people frequently burn their wood too slowly.

"To operate correctly, the stove fire must have an adequate air and fuel supply to achieve high temperatures," he says. "Often, homeowners will reduce or damp down the air supply to make the wood last longer. Temperatures in such a starved-air condition will not be hot enough to burn off the by-products of combustion. The result is increased air pollution and increased creosote formation." (Creosote is the oily, pungent liquid distilled from wood tar.)

The EPA suggests four steps to control wood-smoke pollution:

— Buy the smallest stove that will provide enough heat. A larger stove, burning at the same rate, will have lower combustion efficiency and produce more creosote and more air pollution.

— A catalytic combustor and a heated secondary air supply directed to the flames may be effective devices in improving secondary combustion.

— A large mass of non-combustible material such as stone, brick or water immediately adjacent to or surrounding the stove will store heat.

— Visible smoke leaving the top of the chimney or long lazy flames leaving the firebox are signs of incomplete starved-air burning. When this occurs, more air is needed to complete the burning.

Although these suggestions could raise the initial price of wood stoves, undermining what is now one of their prime virtues, a survey by the Oregon Lung Association found that more than two-thirds of potential buyers in that state would be willing to pay $100 or more extra for a pollution-free stove.

The California Energy Commission says the easiest and best fire source is a mixture of softwoods such as pine and firs with hardwoods such as oak.

Heartburn: One holiday complaint lingers longer

Hearst Feature Service

Millions of Americans have vivid memories of the just-past holidays: A half-eaten box of chocolates sitting on the coffee table next to an overflowing ashtray and a puddle of flat champagne.

That's not all they remember, however. There were those all-too-frequent reminders of one of the most common ailments of mankind: heartburn. This unforgiving insult occurs when food and alcohol flow freely — at least as far as the stomach.

There, things literally take a turn for the worse. Gastric juices frothing in the stomach can gurgle back upstream into the tender esophagus — the tube that runs down from the mouth. Unlike the hearty stomach, which is seemingly lined with everything but Teflon to ward off the digestive juices it produces, the esophagus is not well-protected.

When the digestive juices gurgle up, they begin digesting away at the bottom of the esophagus, causing that all-too-familiar burning sensation of heartburn.

As is true of most matters, the most effective approach to heartburn is prevention.

"To cite Polonius (in Shakespeare's 'Hamlet'), moderation in all things," said Dr. David Altman, who heads the University of California at San Francisco's gastroenterology clinic. And if that's not always possible, medical science has come up with ways to cope with the ailment:

— Don't lie down after you eat; gravity is on your side when you're standing up.

— Don't eat just before going to sleep.

— If you're really desperate, put blocks under the front of your bed to raise your head slightly.

— Steer clear of tight garments and girdles, which apply unhelpful pressure from below.

— Antacid tablets work well at neutralizing stomach acid. (But Altman warned that Alka Seltzer and similar products can irritate the stomach.)

— Steer clear of peppermint and spearmint, which seem to make heartburn worse. While science hasn't unraveled all the mysteries of the esophageal ailment, it's learned a lot.

"There are different abnormalities that may contribute to this final, common pathway," said Dr. Wylie J. Dodds, a professor of radiology and medicine at the Medical College of Wisconsin. His research group is the only one in the nation that works full-time to study heartburn.

Normally, the esophagus protects itself from the torment of stomach juices. It is equipped with a valve near the stomach which squeezes shut except during a swallow. But when too much food and drink are ingested, the valve simply loses its grip. With a full stomach below, the valve tends to relax periodically. And with each relaxation, acid and digestive juices squirt up into the esophagus.

The esophagus is prepared for this: squirts, called refluxes, occur once or twice an hour in healthy people, Dodds noted. Most of the acid is usually coaxed back into the stomach within a minute. But when the esophagus is deluged with too many refluxes or the acid-flushing mechanism isn't working up to par, juices linger and burn.

Museum gets grant

NEW YORK (AP) — The seven-year-old Staten Island Children's Museum is a recipient of $100,000 from the Challenge Grant program of the National Endowment of the Humanities.

It is one of 75 educational and cultural institutions nationwide to receive part of the $22 million federal funds allocated to this program. Each dollar awarded must be matched by three dollars in private contributions.

Twenty-two-year-old ski resort gains baby brother

Beaver Creek is newest addition to Vail area

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

VAIL, Colo — If ever there was a ski resort that didn't need publicity, Vail is it.

This place has the best of everything and lots of it. More than 70 restaurants, bars and throbbing nightspots. Enough lodges, hotels and condominiums to sleep a five-digit guest population. Dozens upon dozens of boutiques and retail shops. Too many hot tubs to count. So many fireplaces that ordinances have been passed to cut down on cinders in the air. And a ski mountain that is, in the opinion of many an experienced schusser, the best in Colorado, bar none.

As recently as 1960, nothing was here but the massive hulk of rock and soil that looms, with its crisscross of chairlifts and ski trails, over the glitter that is Vail today.

Twenty-two-year-old Vail is a made-to-order ski resort, a success story created by dreamers and financed in large part by Texans. Thousands upon thousands come to partake of the dream each winter — more than anywhere else in Colorado.

As if it weren't enough, Vail Associates, the people who developed it all, have built a second resort, Beaver Creek, just 10 miles down the road. If you were under the impression that Vail was expensive, exclusive and ultratony, you should see Beaver. It's an upscale Vail, replete with a former president (Gerald Ford) in residence and some of the most stunning resort architecture ever to make it off the drawing boards.

Vail — Beaver Creek's reputation as a haunt for millionaires is backed by 2 real estate realities — don't start looking in Vail Valley unless you've got a cool quarter million to put down on a one bedroom condo on the outskirts of town. In Beaver Creek it takes twice that to go in partners with four other families on a house.

The brighter side of the coin is that many of those very same properties are for rent at competitive prices. You needn't pay more for accommoations here than at other ski resorts in the area. Even Vail and Beaver Creek can't afford to turn down mainstream visitors.

But these resorts do have an image to uphold. Both places attract members of the social set that in today's vernicular is most suitably termed "upscale." That means rich. You'll see more fur coats, fur-covered boots, fur hats — and more of the kind people who nonchalantly wear such things — than at any other ski area in the country, save perhaps Aspen. You needn't own such gear yourself to feel comfortable here, though. Casual attire is the order of the day in all but the poshest restaurants restaurats and nightclubs. This is, after all, Colorado, where blue jeans are a much more integral part of the scene than Porsches Porches and designer wardrobes of the caliber portrayed on television's "Dynasty."

Vail sprawls haphazardly across its valley, following the countours of the land, but its heart remains at the ski mountain base area, broken into two parts. There's the original Vail Village, an Alpine-style collection of shops, restaurants, lodges and nightspots nighspots that one day, if they survive long enough, might come to be considered quaint. And then there's Lion's Head, Vail's newer, modern-style half, with more shops, restaurants, lodges, nightspots, etc. — as well as lots of condos.

Close to 50 lodging concerns are members of the Vail Resort Association and not one of them can could be considered shabby. In Beaver Creek everything but everything is strictly first class. The Westin has a dark, comfortable lobby made warm with a crackling fire. Drinks are served by white-gloved waiters and waitresses as a piano player tickles the ivories in the background. There's a restaurant, Alfredo's, where northern Italian dishes are served up to guests settled back in easy chairs. A disco, Rumors, caters to the '60s tastes of the 30's crowd.

You can indeed pamper yourself into oblivion at this glittering Rocky Mountain resort. But the real reason to come here in winter is to tackle that beckoning hulk of a mountain.

Skiers gush prophetic over Vail Mountain and with good reason. Its slopes go on and on and on, with 18 lifts and 10 square miles of skiing terrain comprising the largest single ski mountain complex in Colorado. At at Beaver Creek, eight chairlifts and 670 acres of skiing terrain comprise a set-up that is different entirely.

One of the nicest things about skiing at Beaver Creek is winding down at the area's Village Hall, a spacious warming house with ample lockers, good restaurants and a huge room where live music greets the apres-ski crowd. The lodge-type atmosphere is non-existent at Vail, where activity after the lifts close is spread out between smaller places such as like Cyrano's, Frasier's, Bart and Yeti's and Alfie Packer's.

A ski school 450-instructors strong works between the two ski areas and its reputation for excellence is unparalleled. Lift tickets, priced at $22 for adults this year, are interchangeable between mountains.

Bachelor endures extremes

Copley News Service

The triple peaks of Three Sisters Wilderness Area rose to the west. To the east were the snow-capped summits of central Oregon's Cascade Range. And towering above all the mountains that ringed the quiet town of Bend (population about 20,000) was Mount Bachelor, reaching up to 9,000 feet.

At least, that's what we were told. The mountains surrounding us, which normally hold back warm, moist air from the Pacific Ocean, were shrouded in gray sheets of snow — warm, heavy snow that California skiers know all too well. They call it "Sierra cement."

In a two-day visit earlier this month, we never saw the mountains. Temperatures rose steadily, topping 40 degrees, and the wet snow turned to rain. We left when the forecaster said another warm storm was about to descend upon us, but that first day, we gamely rode the bus to Mount Bachelor — Oregon's premiere ski resort.

Fewer than 100 skiers probably hit the slopes that day, stumbling back inside the lodge after a run or two, soggy and ready to "ski the bar" for the remainder of the afternoon.

I pulled down my hat, wrapped a mask around my face and took a trip up an otherwise-empty chairlift, resolved to explore the mountain.

Mount Bachelor is known for having some of the driest, lightest snow on the West Coast, primarily because mountains to the west hold back warm, moist ocean air. "We call it 'mucky, moldy country' on the other side of the mountains (where Eugene and Portland are). It's much wetter over there," said one skier, who drove to the mountain that day in the vain hope of finding some powder.

"It's not Utah," said John Kieran of Eugene. "But for my money, it's better than anything on the coast, and I've skied Squaw and Heavenly and Mammoth. The quality of snow is usually much better here."

Light snow isn't Bachelor's only attribute, if the locals are to be believed. Racing coach David Dona said crowds are nearly always light, even on picture perfect days. "You never wait for a lift during the week. Even on holiday weekends, you rarely see a lift line more than 10 minutes long," he said. (Compare that to a typical 30-minute wait for popular chairlifts at Mammoth Mountain on weekends).

"Even when the lifts are full, there are so many ways to get down you don't worry about running into people," said Kieran.

Pet transport tips

Traveling with the family pet can be an enjoyable experience if you take the time to accommodate the special needs of your traveling companion. The American Society of Travel Agents has some tips to help assure a safe and comfortable flight for your dog or cat:

— Consider whether your pet is emotionally suited for travel. Although some dogs and cats travel very well, others become nervous, refuse to eat or get motion sickness. If your pet is excitable check with a veterinarian about tranquilizing the animal.

— Plan as far ahead as possible. Notify the freight office of the airline on which your pet will fly to discuss details. If you are traveling during the hot summer months schedule your flight in the early morning or late evening so that the pet does not suffer heat prostration.

— You will need to crate the animal in a travel kennel or pet carrier available at pet stores or most major airports. Make sure the kennel is well ventilated and large enough for the animal. A rule of thumb is the kennel should be able to hold twice the animal's weight and be roomy enough for the pet to stand up and lie down.

— A health certificate is required by most airlines, verifying the pet is up to date on innoculations and is in good health.

— Several days before the trip introduce your pet to the travel kennel by feeding it treats there. Encourage the animal to sleep in it and add a favorite toy.

— Never plan on shipping the dog until it is at least eight weeks old, and only after weaning.

— Don't put the dog into its kennel until necessary just before the flight. Don't feed the dog within six hours before departure or give it water within two hours of departure unless the weather demands it. After you have landed keep the pet's food and drink to a bare minimum for at least two hours to give the animal a chance to calm down.

— Exercise your pet on the way to the airport. Give it one last chance to relieve bodily functions as close as possible to departure time.

Community National Bank off to good start

By DAVID C. SODAMANN
Business-Energy Editor

When businessmen from the Tall City's southside announced plans to establish a new bank there over a year ago, many Midlanders may have wondered if such a bank would be viable. The southside, after all, is perceived as having less money than other areas of this city. But if the first week's receipts are any indication, the founders of Community National Bank knew exactly what they were doing.

"The first day we opened 130-some new accounts for right at $3 million," said Bob Gribble, president of the new bank. "Since opening day (Jan. 2), through Thursday, we probably opened another 50 or 60 accounts for about $1 million."

Other banks of comparable size opened recently on Midland's wealthier northside did not do nearly as well in their first days. Midland American Bank, for example, after more than one year in business had $4.63 million in deposits, the most recently reported figure, Sept. 30, 1983.

Most of the new accounts opened, Gribble said, are checking accounts or certificates of deposit and money market accounts.

"The turnout and response from this general area has been just super. The biggest comment we've had is 'Why hasn't someone done this before?' "

By the end of 1984, Gribble said, he expects "conservatively" Community National will hold around $10 million in deposits.

Community National is in a unique position to grow, Gribble said, because there are no other banks in its market area to compete with. In addition, it is conveniently located, easily reached, with plenty of parking, unlike the downtown banks.

Community National will primarily serve the needs of people living, working and doing business in south Midland. However, Gribble said, "That doesn't mean if you live out at the polo grounds that you couldn't come over and bank with us.

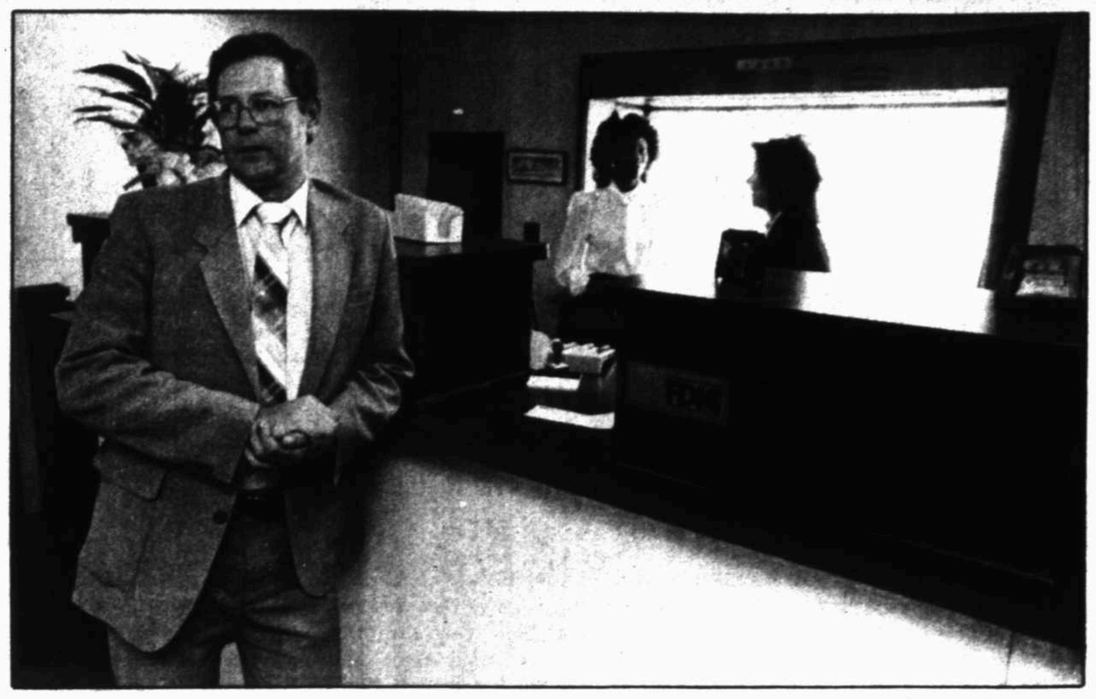

"The Greenwood community and the community south of Midland — the farming community — we're certainly after them also. We do want to make some agricultural loans, definitely."

Gribble said Community National will be guided by a simple philosophy. "We want to project an image of a community type bank that is friendly, service oriented, here to serve the community. We want to be known as a friendly bank. That's what we're striving for."

Community National will be the kind of bank, Gribble said, that will welcome all customers, whether in greasy jeans or three-piece suits.

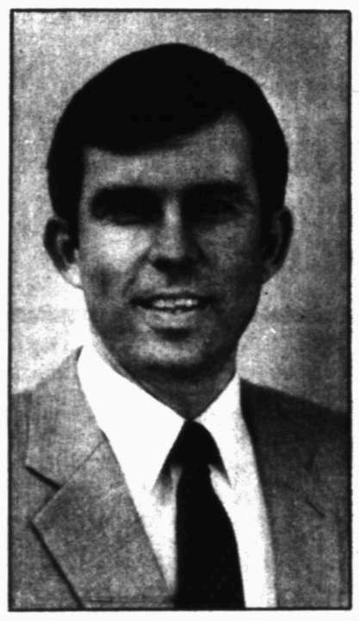

"I really feel we'll serve a need that has not ever been served," Gribble said.

Community National is now operating from temporary offices near the intersection of Florida Avenue and Terrell Street. Plans for a permanent 8,000-square-foot office at the same location are being drafted by architects, Gribble said. Construction should begin the first of March, and be completed by January 1985.

New officers, changes anounced at UnitedBank

Beginning Monday, UnitedBank, Midland's only downtown independent bank, will have three new officers directing its operations.

Wayne Merritt, who has been the bank's president, will become vice chairman and chief executive officer. A native of Midland, Merritt was with First National Bank of Midland as an executive vice president and lending group manager before being named president in August.

Don B. Jones will become president replacing Merritt. Scott Lovett will become executive vice president.

UnitedBank, formerly known as Mid-Cities National Bank, opened Aug. 1 at Air Terminal in place of failed Metro Bank. In November, the bank moved downtown and changed its name to UnitedBank National Association. It is temporarily located at 511 W. Missouri. In the fall, it will move to the UnitedBank Building, 500 W. Illinois, currently under construction.

In making the announcement Merritt said the changes have helped UnitedBank accomplish several of its goals.

"We set out in August to do several things. First, to get a first-class banking facility, which is coming along nicely and very much on schedule. Second, we wanted to assemble an experienced staff, particularily with a local flavor to it."

Jones, a graduate of Texas Christian University, comes to UnitedBank with more than 15 years experience in banking and the oil and gas business. Jones moved to Midland in 1968. He was with First City National Bank for about four years before joining First National Bank of Midland. In 1980, he left First National to go into the oil and gas business. In May, he rejoined First National where he became senior vice president and head of the energy division.

Jones said he liked the challenge of being associated with a smaller bank and having the opportunity to watch it grow.

"It's going to be a good challenge. It's a very intriguing situation right now. When I moved here in 1968 there were three banks and now there are 10. There's Savings & Loans that are acting like banks, there's brokerage firms which are thinking like banks, the competition for deposits is ferocious. I think there's plenty of room for a downtown locally owned and operated bank."

Jones also said he wants "to see good solid growth" for UnitedBank. "We want to establish ourselves as a bank with an excellent reputation — strong and stable."

Lovett comes to UnitedBank from RepublicBank First National Midland. After graduating from Southern Methodist University in 1971, he went to work for former President Nixion's Price Control Commission in Washington D.C. for about three years. He then returned to SMU where he recieved his M.B.A. in 1974. Since then he has worked for RepublicBank in Dallas and Elcor Corp. In September, Lovett joined First National Bank of Midland where he was a vice president and department manager in the energy division.

Lovett said he welcomed the opportunity to supervise UnitedBank's lending and credit administration areas.

"I saw this as an opportunity to join up with very fine young people and an opportunity to try to form a strong bank — one that Midland will be proud of. I wanted to be a part of this bank in its infant stage and as it grows and matures."

Davidson joins Petroplex board; S&L moves Monday

Davidson

MIDLAND — Midlander Steve Davidson has been elected to the board of directors of Petroplex Savings Association

Jim M. Everett, president of Petrolplex, said, "We are pleased to have someone with such high personal integrity and civic involvement join our Board of Directors."

Davidson is an oil and gas investor with a Bachelor of Business Administration degree from Teaxas Christian University. He has been on the Midland City Council since 1980 and was Mayor Pro-tem in 1982-83.

A 1979 Leadership Midland graduate, he was Chairman of the Leadership Midland Curriculum and Arrangements Committee in 1981 and 1982, and is Advisory Committee Chairman for 1983-84.

Petroplex's new director is also on the Government Affairs Committee of the Midland Chamber of Commerce and was president of the Midland Jaycees from 1979 to 1980.

• • •

Petroplex Savings Association will relocate its main office Monday to Dinero Plaza, 1004 N. Big Spring, from its current location at the Paragon Building.

Announcing the move, Everett said, "The Dinero is one of the finest office buildings in Midland, and thanks to its location and available parking, one of the most convenient."

The Petroplex Motor Bank will also move to the Dinero Plaza. Temporary motor bank facilities will be located in the Dinero parking lot east of the main building. The permanent motor bank, to be opened in May, will be constructed on Cuthbert Street one block east of Big Spring.

Everett also announced Petroplex will soon open a new branch office at 1109 Andrews Highway, between Cuthbert and Midkiff.

Petroplex currently has a branch office in the Plaza Center near the intersection of Garfield and Wadley streets.

Petroplex is an independent savings association chartered by Midlanders in 1982. Assets of the institution totaled $121 million for the calendar year ended December, 1983. It was recently identified as a "high performance institution" by National Thrift News, a financial industry publication.

Fed blocks banks' efforts to enter insurance business

By The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — The Federal Reserve Board Friday rejected efforts by three major banks to expand into the insurance business by taking advantage of a loophole in a South Dakota state law.

Reinforcing the barriers between banks and other kinds of financial institutions, the board decided not to permit federally chartered bank holding companies to buy or start banks in South Dakota — the only state giving banks free rein to enter the insurance business.

Citicorp of New York, BankAmerica Corp. of San Francisco and First Interstate Bancorp of Los Angeles had all applied to the Fed for permission to establish South Dakota operations, which under state law would be free to sell insurance throughout the country.

Congress is considering changing the law that keeps banks out of the insurance business and the Fed said it will suspend action on the three banks' applications until the lawmakers act.

"Taking account of the important and fundamental legal and policy issues raised by these applications and their pending consideration before Congress, the board reached the tentative judgment that it could not approve the proposed bank acquisitions," the Fed said in a statement issued Friday.

The statement said the Fed also "decided to defer futher action" on proposed new regulations which would change the rules restricting non-banking activities by banks, holding companies and subsidiaries.

The insurance industry is vigorously fighting the banks' efforts to move into their business and four insurance trade associations filed objections to the South Dakota acquisitions.

The Fed's action "appears to be a total victory for the insurance associations," according to a statement issued by Drinker Biddle & Reath, a law firm representing the insurors.

The South Dakota state government has been encouraging out-of-state banks to set up operations there as a way of drawing well-paying, white-collar jobs to the sparsely populated state. Last year, the state passed legislation allowing out-of-state bank holding companies to set up shop in South Dakota and enter the insurance field. The South Dakota law limits the insurance activities of banks within the state, but gives virtually unrestricted authority to sell and underwrite insurance elsewhere.

The Federal Reserve Board could have simply killed the applications by the three banks to take advantage of the South Dakota law, but did not do so.

Instead, the board gave the banks the opportunity to request the regulatory agency "suspend the processing of their applications" — a move which puts them on hold indefinitely.

ASK THE FDIC

Lawmen may investigate some bad FNB loans

By THOMAS R. PROCOPIO

What happens when someone has borrowed thousands of dollars from the bank on collateral that does not exist and the money owed cannot be collected? And the bank finds out? Who takes over these loans and what is done about them?

There is a very good chance that loan will be taken over by the FDIC and not RepublicBank or any other bank.

We would first investigate to see if the customer made a false statement to the bank as to the amount of collateral that did exist to pledge or the amount of assets that he had substantiating his net worth.

If false statements were made to the bank we would turn that over to our investigation unit who would inturn decide if a U.S. attorney referral letter was appropriate. What that letter does is say to the attorney that we feel a certain section of the criminal code was violated. A voilation exists when any customer of a bank obtains credit from a federaly insured bank by false means and that's a criminal offense.

We send our information to the U.S. attorney to decide whether the FBI should investigate. If they decide to investigate, the FBI conducts infield audits. They can subpoena people for purposes of obtaining records or discussion about the allegations made

Then the FBI recommends to the U.S. attorney whether to prosecute or not. If prosecution is recommended, it is turned over to the grand jury and the person is indited.

Hopefully, and I'm sure this is the case, that there wasn't any fraud perpetrated and there wasn't any attempt to deceive the bank.

If collateral doesn't exist, I hope we will be able to rely on the customer's good character and other assets to repay the loan. I hope this will be the situation in nine out of 10 cases.

But every once in awhile though, you'll catch a situation where there was deception and fraud by the customer. Or, sometimes, as happened at Penn Square Bank in Oklahoma City, the customer and the loan officer are in cahoots to deceive the stockholders and the insurer of the bank.

In the case of Penn Square, this type of situation I just described where false statements were made about collateral and assets happened as many as 300-400 times we are alledging. There were over 500 U.S. attorney referrals at Penn Square and a great majority of them were this type of violation — false statements made to the bank.

• • •

I've read about your employment needs but why should I want to go to work for the FDIC if they can only guarantee me one year's employment?

This is a problem we have with all prospective or new employees who go to work for a liquidation office. In most instances it's mainly a lack of communication.

The one-year appointment is used because we do not know our needs from one day to the next. We may have 45-50 bank closings, as we did last year, or we may have four or five closings. So, in order to be in a position to reduce staff accordingly, we just hire people on a year-to-year basis.

To give you an example of how this is a false concern, we have people working for us today that have been on a year-to-year contract for over 10 years. Nearly 40 percent of our permanent staff, that is liquidators like myself and people in our area office in Dallas, have come from the so called year appointment staff. In other words, if you came to work for us on a year-to-year contract, four times out of 10 you would be on permanently with the FDIC, offered transfers to other parts of the country or you would have your pick of different offices throughout the country.

• • •

What type of benefits does the FDIC offer?

I feel that the FDIC is unique among the government agencies as far as benefits are concerned. We are a quasi-government agency which affords us opportunities and benefits which are different than most agencies because those agencies come under public revenue financing.

Other government agencies get their money to operate from the general revenue fund which comes from tax payers. The FDIC does not get its money from the general revenue fund. It comes from the assessments on banks for insurance and in the case of liquidation like this (FNB) it comes from the collection of loans.

We offer dental insurance for the employee and his family free of charge. The employee is entitled to free vision insurance. We offer 26 days of paid leave per year, which includes personal and sick days. This is in addition to the federal holidays. Our hospitalization/life insurance package is subsidized by the FDIC.

In addition, the benefits as far as experience in bank operations is surpassed by none.

• • •

I'm an oilfield salesman who has been laid off. Can you use someone with my skills and abilities or do you need people with banking and financial backgrounds?

This is not true. It's a misconception that we are only looking for people who have worked in a bank before. We have a great need for people with loan workout experience but we also have a great need for people with a good head on their shoulders, good common sense, people who can deal with people and people who have some general business experience. We need all types of professional people and support people.

Our salary ranges are for grade three, which would be a messenger or custodian type of position is $11,000-14,000, depending on experience. For clerk type positions, again depending on experience, the salary range is $11,000-16,000. For secretarial positions, the salary range would be $13,000-22,000. On the department head level, grades 14 and 15, the salary range is $42,000-58,000.

Japan most competitive nation

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Japan leads the Free World as the most competitive industrial nation for the fourth year in a row, according to a survey released Friday by the European Management Forum.

Switzerland ranked second in the annual survey and the United States ranked third, it said.

Europe's industrial powerhouse, West Germany, maintained its fourth-place ranking for the fourth consecutive year, but "slipped back significantly in its overall performance," according to the report.

The European Management Forum, a Swiss-based, non-profit group, assesses 22 countries in the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development.

Its report said the performance by the United States was "marred by mediocre results" in three of the 10 categories considered in the survey — industrial efficacy, state interference and outward orientation. The report said that if those areas were not considered, the United States would rank first overall.

It was rated at the top in the category of human resources and second in dynamics of the market and financial dynamism.

The smaller European economies appeared to have adapted best to the world recession. Sweden moved up four places to fifth place; Finland moved up two places to sixth; Norway moved from 12th place to eighth; Denmark from 11th to ninth place; and Austria from 10th to seventh.

Three of the big four European industrial powers — Britain, France and Italy — all ranked "very badly, continuing or exacerbating last year's dismal showing," the survey said. Britain ranked 14th, France 15th and Italy 17th in the survey.

The countries showing the biggest losses were the Netherlands and Australia, each dropping five places to 10th and 12th place respectively, and Canada which fell back from sixth place to 11th.

The Mediterranean countries — Spain, Turkey, Greece and Portugal — were at the bottom of the list.

The European Management Forum makes its comparison using 284 criteria. Of these, 227 are based on statistics while the others are based on the opinions of corporate executives and economists who are given questionnaires.

The organization defines competitiveness as the "immediate and future of opportunities for entrepeneurs to design, produce and market goods within their respective environment whose price and non-price qualities form a more attractive package than those of competitors abroad or in domestic markets."

Big bank failure stuns Nebraskans

By The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

LINCOLN, Neb. — Ask any visitor arriving at the municipal airport here to guess which two topics dominate this city, and he will almost certainly identify, accurately, the unseasonably frigid weather and the Orange Bowl appearance of the University of Nebraska's fearsome Cornhuskers football team.

"You are Entering Big Red Country," proclaims the wallhanging just inside the airport terminal in greeting to visitors who hurry by.

But in many homes around Nebraska's capital city, there is another topic of conversation and a mood of anger as sharp as the winter winds.

In those homes, everything has taken a back seat to the financial disaster that befell thousands of Nebraska families when the doors to the state's largest so-called blue-collar bank were locked by the state last November.

That Commonwealth Savings Co., the state's largest and best known industrial-loan company, run by one of Lincoln's leading citizens, should fail was a blow. But the discovery by many families that their savings were not as secure as they had been led to believe was a shock whose impact is only now beginning to be felt.

FOR DESPITE THE sign on Commonwealth Savings' door promising that accounts of up to $30,000 were guaranteed by the Nebraska Depository Institutions Guarantee Corp., none of the savings company's 7,400 depositors has been able to withdraw a cent since the company was declared insolvent on Nov. 1 — even though the average account contained far less than $30,000. Nor is it likely, concedes Nebraska Gov. Robert Kerrey, that many of the farmers, retirees, school teachers and blue-collar workers who were the bulk of Commonwealth's depositors will ever get all of their money back.

The reason, as these customers have found out the hard way, is that a private company's guarantee is not the same as government-backed insurance.

In this case, the guarantee was worthless. The deposit insurance fund supposedly backing the funds on deposit at Commonwealth did not have enough money to cover the $69.5 million in deposits. And the state of Nebraska refuses to come to the depositors' rescue because, it says, the insurance fund was state-created but not state-backed.

Adding insult to injury, the Internal Revenue Service recently notified Commonwealth depositors that those with demand accounts who could have withdrawn principal and interest up to the day the state seized the company must pay 1983 income taxes on the interest they probably will never see. Depositors will not be able to offset those taxes by declaring a loss probably for several years until the precise amount of the loss is determined.

Industrial-loan institutions like Commonwealth were allowed almost unlimited freedom to invest in real estate and other financially risky investments such as commercial stocks and bonds. Commonwealth, for example, was one of the largest landowners in Lincoln when it failed, with a portfolio of non-earning assets that included 3,500 residential, industrial and commercial lots that could not be sold because of a deep depression in the state's real estate industry.

IN THE AFTERMATH of the Commonwealth failure, Nebraska banking director Paul Amen has resigned; the FBI and the Department of Justice are investigating allegations of public corruption, with Paul Douglas, Nebraska's popular three-term state attorney general an acknowledged target of the probe; Commonwealth President S.E. Copple, a prominent Lincoln resident and developer, is awaiting trial on criminal charges involving loans from Commonwealth to himself; and one of the law-enforcement officials involved in the investigation says that criminal indictments against other local businessmen are likely to follow.

Nebraska's industrial-loan companies have been around for more than 40 years. But it was not until 1978 that the state legislature approved a bill enabling them to advertise that they guarantee depositor accounts through the private Nebraska Depository Institutions Guarantee Corp., originally formed by legislative fiat in 1976 to guarantee credit unions in the state.

From 1978 until 1982, the state's 33 industrial-loan companies told depositors that their accounts were "guaranteed" up to $10,000 by the NDIGC. Then, at the urging of its member institutions, the fund applied for state banking-department approval for an increase in coverage to $30,000 per account. Permission was granted — by the department's then-director, Paul Amen. But while tripling the fund's potential liabilities, NDIGC directors did not increase the annual assessments that their institutions paid into the fund. Nor did they halt the practice of paying out all of the fund's interest earnings each year as dividends to member institutions.

Thus, while there has been a total of about $320 million on deposit at Nebraska's industrial loans in the last several years, the insurance fund has never exceeded $3.6 million in assets.

So when Commonwealth failed, the fund could not even begin to cover the losses and defaulted on its guarantee. It had only $1.6 million in liquid assets — an insurance-to-deposits ratio of only 0.5 percent.

SOME SAY THAT Commonwealth collapsed partly because its 86-year-old president, Copple, placed his faith in real estate and failed to predict the severity of the real-estate depression that began in Lincoln in 1980 and continues today. At the time of its collapse, the company owned enough property in and around the city to account for 10 years of normal activity in the Lincoln real estate area — specifically, 3,500 undeveloped and developed residential, commercial and industrial lots.

But sources familiar with the civil and criminal investigations spawned by the failure of the 50-year-old industrial loan say Commonwealth also crumbled because of greed, insider dealings and the reluctance of the state to take action against a prominent financial institution.

The charges against Copple center around a so-called straw man loan in which Commonwealth "loaned" $1.1 million last year to a secretary who worked for one of Copple's sons. The secretary has testified that she turned over $700,000 to S.E. Copple and that $400,000 went to her boss, Newt Copple. Nebraska law prohibits banks from making personal loans in excess of $10,000 to their own officers and directors.

John Stevens Berry, the amiable, bear-like attorney handling Copple's criminal defense, says he will prove that his client is innocent. He broadly hints that the defense case will implicate other prominent Lincoln businessmen.

In Douglas' case, questions about his dealings with a second Copple son, Milt, center on a series of transactions in which the attorney general allegedly purchased dozens of residential lots from Copple, then sold them to Copple's secretary for a reported $79,000 profit. The secretary in turn reportedly sold them to a third party. All of the paper work for the multifaceted transaction was recorded on a single day.

DOUGLAS MAINTAINS that he did nothing illegal. He says that his total profit from a 5-year partnership with Milt Copple was "only about $40,000." The rest of the money, he said, went to a third partner in the development, whom Douglas refused to identify.

Because of his dealings with Milt Copple, Douglas has removed himself from the Commonwealth case. And the U.S. Attorney for Nebraska, Ron Lahners, has removed himself from the federal investigation because of his friendship with Douglas.

Lahners brought in a deputy U.S. Attorney from Denver, Patrick Murphy, who confirmed in a brief telephone interview that he was investigating allegations of corruption by public officials in Nebraska.

Sales taxes rise

Special To The Reporter-Telegram

Sales and use taxes, those venerable state revenue-producing veterans, continue as an impressive souce of money for these units of the nation, notes Commerce Claring House in reviewing the decade-long activity of this levy.

For the twelve months ending June, 1983, state and local sales and gross receipts tax collections rose 6.3 percent, to a total of $64.6 billion. General sales and gross receipts taxes were the best source of revenue in eighteen states in fiscal 1982.

Sales tax rates have increased in 23 states and the District of Columbia over the past decade. The largest increase was in Nevada, where the tax rose from 3 percent to 5 3/4 percent. However, this jump was the result of legislation making county sales and use taxes mandatory. Sales tax rates increased by two percentage points in five states — Arizona, Massachussetts, Minnesota, Washington and West Virginia.

Idaho and Nebraska's sales tax rates climbed by 1 1/2 percent over the period, Missouri's rate jumped 1 1/8 percent, and the District of Columbia and the following thirteen states raised their sales tax rates by 1 percent:

Arkansas, Connecticut, Florida, Illinois (effective January 1, 1984), Indiana, Iowa, Maryland, New Jersey, Ohio, Rhode Island, Tennessee, Vermont and Wisconsin. New Mexico's sales tax rate decreased by 1/4 of 1 percent.

Currently in only one state (Oklahoma) do taxpayers pay the tax at a rate below 3 percent, while seven states and the District of Columbia levy sales taxes greater than 5 percent. Sales taxes are not imposed in Alaska, Delaware, Montana, New Hampsire and Oregon.

The state sales and use tax changes during the last ten years are illustrated by the following CCH Chart. All local taxes are excluded, unless mandatory.

Forecasters place bets on 1984

By CYNTHIA KASABIAN
Hearst Feature Service

Predicting the fate of the U.S. economy at this time last year was a crap shoot with the bets scattered. Now the bets are placed for 1984, and they are largely stacked on the same line: continued growth.

"We're into an expansion; we're now past the recovery," said Henry Wallich, a member of the Federal Reserve Board.

The gross national product — the value of goods and services turned out by the economy — is growing at a pace much faster than had been anticipated, unemployment is continuing its decline and inflation is way down. For many, it's cause for a sigh of relief. But not for the nation's money manager, the Federal Reserve.

"I believe Fed policy will be the biggest factor in the economy in 1984," said Roger Brinner, director of U.S. forecasting for Data Resources Inc. "There is no other ingredient in the economy that has as much uncertainty associated with it or as much power to dramatically change the way the world looks."

As in 1983, this year the Fed is going to be required to do its balancing act — allowing the recovery to proceed while trying to keep inflation in check.

ACCORDING TO FED chairman Paul Volcker, "The greatest challenge of all is to face up more openly and directly to the need to find ways to combine continuing growth with continuing progress against inflation." He stressed that it's a particularly difficult challenge because of the enormous federal deficit, estimated to be nearly $200 billiom this year and next.

The $195 billion federal deficit of 1983 helped to stimulate growth and spur the recovery, but in 1984, as the economy continues to grow, it will transform into a major, long-term problem. Already, the deficit has contributed to high interest rates because of the massive government borrowing that's needed to finance it. And this year, continued economic health will prompt businesses to invest, spurring competition with the government for funds. This is likely to drive rates yet higher, stifling expansion and further aggravating the international financial system, already strained by the strength of the dollar.

Largely because of the deficit, said Wallich, "We're getting this recovery at the cost of increasing damage to the machinery of the economy. We're not investing enough, we're consuming too much, we're importing too much and we're not exporting enough."

However, because this is a presidential election year, it's unlikely that great strides on reducing the deficit will be made. Suggestions for raising taxes to increase revenues or cutting back on government services are rarely vote-getting proposals. So, while it seems clear that the 1984 deficit will remain largely untouched by Congress, the hope is that some action will be taken this year to reduce the 1985 deficit.

Meanwhile, in an attempt to offset the problems created by the deficit, the Fed has adopted a strategy of slow and steady growth of the money supply.

"It is true that we don't use the same automatic approach that if M1 moves, we jump. We can attain our targets over a longer period," said Wallich. M1 includes cash in circulation and accounts on which checks can be written.

SINCE SUMMER, the Fed has pushed the money supply toward the lower end of its 5 percent to 9 percent growth range. Additionally, it has kept the federal funds rate (the rate at which banks borrow and lend to each other) and the discount rate (the rate the Fed charges member banks for loans) relatively steady. The Fed's goal is to sustain the recovery by moderating its growth — the tradeoff being continued high interest rates. But it's a price the Fed is willing to pay because if the recovery accelerates too quickly, the inflation rate also is likely to rise, according to some economists.

Generally, economists are optimistic that the Fed will keep the money supply relatively stable. However, the record of money supply management is hardly a proud one. Because of various influences on the supply of money which are outside the Fed's control, such as the public's preference to hold more or less cash, or even seasonal changes, the Fed often misses its target range.

"It's not easy for them to hit their targets, but that's not to say that they can't slow down the growth of the money supply or speed it up and achieve a major change in direction," said Lawrence Chimerine, chairman and chief economist at Chase Econometrics, based in Bala Cynwyd, Pa. "That's all they have to do."

The moderate money growth sought by the Fed this year has led several economists to predict that economic growth in 1984 will slow somewhat, leading to more sustained economic health.

Adjusted for inflation, the GNP is expected to grow about 4 percent to 4.5 percent from last year's fourth quarter to this year's fourth quarter. This year, "real" GNP is expected to be about 6.5 percent.

Since many economists believe that real economic growth inevitably leads to higher inflation, they are generally projecting that inflation this year will increase by as much as 6.5 percent. The annual inflation rate for 1983 was about 3.5 percent.

UNEMPLOYMENT IS expected to drop below 8 percent by election time. Currently, it's about 8.4 percent.

As for interest rates — well, it's an issue on a lot of minds. Despite low inflation, rates remain high. The reasons include confidence in the U.S. economy among overseas investors, the need to finance the federal debt, and the money supply.

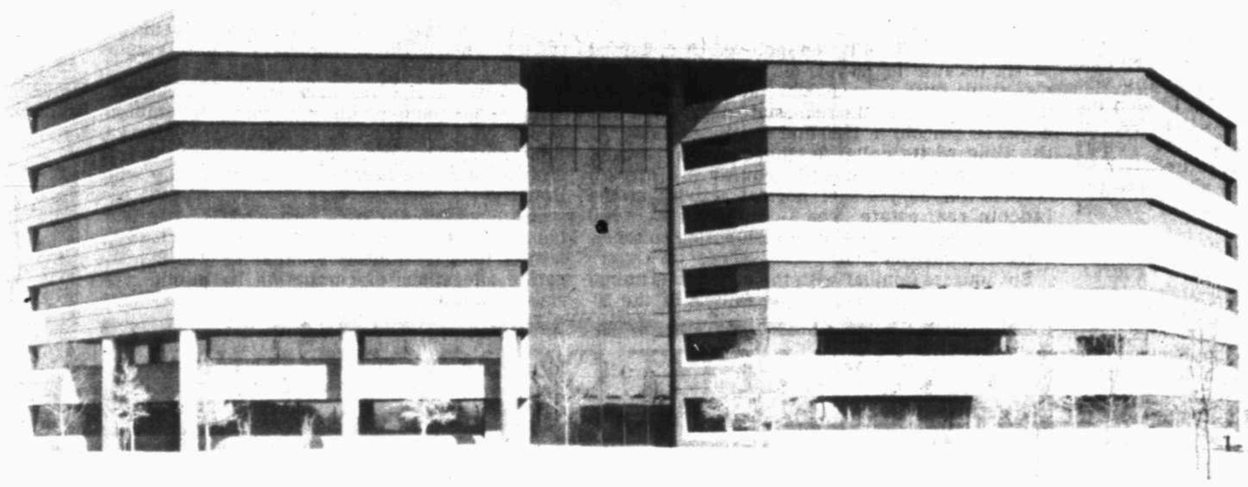

Treasury bills, now at about 9 percent, aren't expected to skyrocket this year. But if they do rise more than a couple of points, some economists believe it would severely weaken, perhaps even end, the recovery.

"I think the dominant indicator to watch now is interest rates," said Chimerine. "If they stay well-behaved, the recovery will continue. The first sign of trouble will be higher rates. Regardless of what the Fed does, we'll see higher interest rates if the deficits are not reduced a year or two down the road."

It should be noted, however, that although economists sound confident of their interpretations of what is happening to the economy now and their forecasts for the rest of the year, their projections for 1983 proved to be abysmally off-target — most were too pessimistic.

"In early 1983, we were trying to figure out if the recovery was for real," said Alice Rivlin, director of the economic studies program at the Brookings Institution and former director of the Congressional Budget Office. "Now we're in a situation where we are wondering how long it will last and whether it will be inflationary."

BUSINESS NOTEBOOK

Insurance changes possible

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Employers in Texas may see a change to allow the use of unlimited, or actual, payroll on worker's compensation premium charges, with an apparent change in the opposition to the proposal from the Texas Association of Business.

State Board of Insurance members are to hear a proposal by the National Council on Compensation Insurance for a change from the use of $300 per week maximum payroll to unlimited payroll on Jan. 26.

NCCI contends the change won't have any overall effect on premium charges, but some charges will be redistributed among employers.

It's anticipated that no change, if approved by SBI, could be made before April 1, and some industry officials have indicated that any rate adjustments would be delayed until Sept. 1.

A four-year transition period is expected to be used to phase in the new program, assuming SBI approval, those officials say.

Texas Association of Business has opposed the change in the past, but Gerald Dorsey, TAB, Houston, reports the group has worked out its differences with NCCI and will be supporting the change at the hearing.

Dorsey says the groups have been working since April on how to "offset" manual rates for the 600 individual classifications to keep the overall premium unchanged.

TAB has considered the offsets proposed in the past to be inadequate, Dorsey says, but "we have come up with an agreement that will answer our objections."

NCCI earlier reported that a study it had made of 230 employer payrolls indicated reductions under its plan would range from 6.1 to 72.9 percent; any increases are proposed to be limited to five percent under the first year of the plan.

SBI also will be looking at the new "simplified" worker's compensation policy, at a hearing planned for 10 a.m. Jan. 12 at the John H. Reagan Building in Austin.

NCCI general counsel Don DeCarlo, author of the policy, will explain it and answer questions concerning it.

SBI staff supports adoption of the policy.

Commissioner Sam Kelley, office of the Consumer Credit commissioner, says Texas finance companies appear to be readying for another attempt to pass a constitutional amendment to use of homesteads as collateral for other than home improvement loans.

An attempt to win approval of such an amendment failed in the 1983 Legislature.

Kelley, in a report presented at a State Finance Commission session, reported that past complaints about interest rates in Texas have died down — but finance companies are "most interested in home equity loans."

Kelley says he expects another "strong effort" to approve such second mortgage loans in 1985.

The State Finance Commission is considering whether it wants to take a stand either for or against such legislation.

• • •

The Savings and Loan Section of the State Finance Commission has proposed 13 rule changes, with most of the amendments described as being of a "housekeeping nature."

Substantive changes include enlarging the powers of a savings and loan association to invest in real estate ventures and subsidiary corporations, increasing the limit on unsecured loans to 25 percent of an association's net worth (from 10 percent), and assessing a fee on applications for investments in subsidiary corporations.

The proposed rule on investment in real estate ventures adds language to the existing rules to exclude specifically "oil and gas drilling ventures," and specfically adds commercial buildings.

The proposal also changes from 50 to 100 percent of an association's net worth as the amount which may be invested in such ventures.

Current provisions speak to such investments in real property intended "principally for residential use."

The section is to consider final adoption of the proposals later this month.

• • •

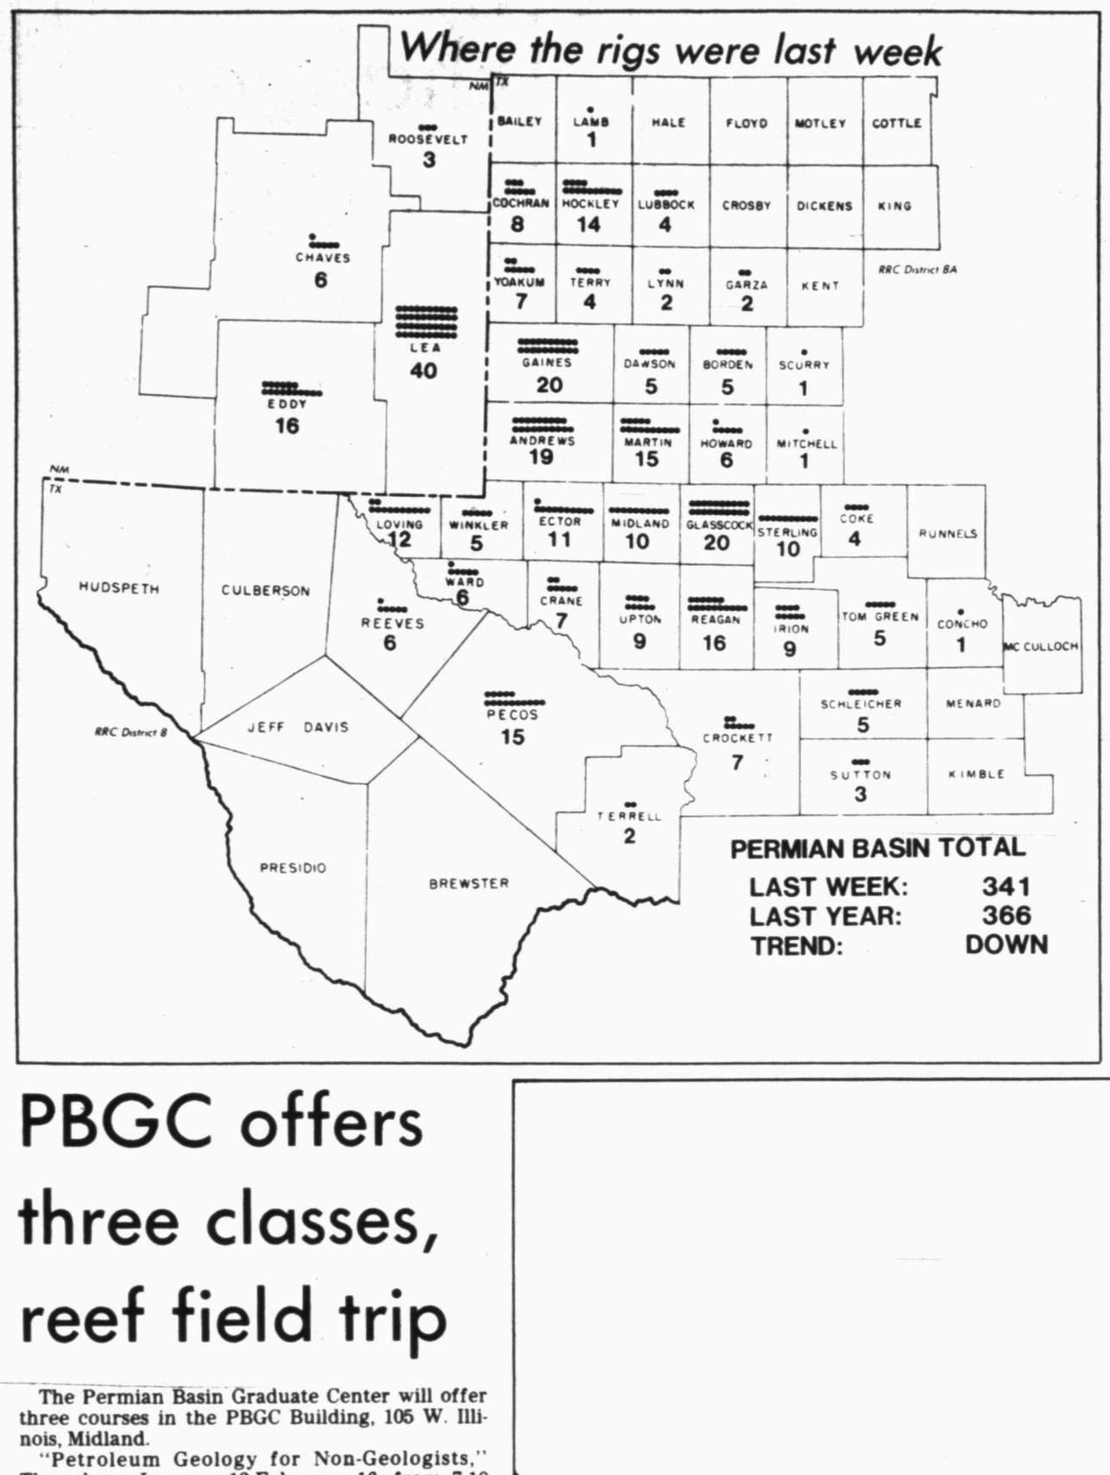

The Banking Section of the Finance Comission will meet Jan. 18 to consider use of loan production offices in Texas — a matter which came in for attention by the Section at its December meeting.

Gerald Smith, Houston, argues use of such offices is "another party issue" for State and National banks.

Banking commissioner James L. Sexton notes that while the Texas Consititution prohibits banks from doing business in more than one place, loan production offices can avoid that prohibition if they are provided through a holding company.

Getty wants Texaco takeover

By ROBERT BURNS
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Getty Oil Co. says it wants to be taken over by Texaco Inc. in a merger estimated at $9.9 billion — the largest in corporate history — but the spurned Pennzoil Co. threatened court action to block the deal.

Texaco's takeover bid was accepted by the Getty board "in principle" almost immediately, Getty Chairman Sidney R. Peterson announced Friday night. The new combination would increase Texaco's assets by 37 percent and double its crude oil reserves.

Officials at both companies declined to release details or discuss the deal. Jack Leone, a Getty spokesman, said terms of the agreement might be released this weekend.

In its only detailed statement, which came earlier Friday, Texaco said it had agreed to buy 11.8 percent of Getty's shares for $125 apiece, or a total of $1.16 billion.

But if, as analysts expect, the merger involves Texaco buying 100 percent of Getty's 79.1 million shares of common stock for $125 a share, the deal would be worth $9.9 billion. That would top the previous record takeover price of $7.8 billion paid by Du Pont Co. for oil producer Conoco Inc. in 1981.

The Texaco offer scuttled a 2-day-old agreement between Gordon Getty, the youngest surviving son of the late billionaire J.P. Getty, and Pennzoil, a Houston oil company, to convert Getty to a private entity under joint ownership.

Pennzoil Chairman Hugh Liedtke, in a message citing unspecified but "significant antitrust issues presented by the Texaco offer," urged Getty directors Friday to comply with Wednesday's agreement and said he would take Getty to court if it proceeded with the proposed deal.

The Pennzoil deal, which Liedtke said was approved by a 14-1 vote of the Getty Oil Board, had climaxed months of warring between Getty management and Gordon Getty.

Even with the addition of Getty, Texaco would remain the nation's third-largest oil company, behind industry leader Exxon Corp. and No. 2 Mobil Corp.

In Washington, Justice Department spokesman Mark T. Sheehan said it was "certainly likely" that either the department's antitrust division or the Federal Trade Commission would examine both the Pennzoil and the Getty proposals.

Wyoming Corp. reserves up significantly

Wyoming Resources Corporation, Midland, recently announced a record increase in the company's oil and gas reserves has been recorded for fiscal 1983. Proven oil reserves increased to 835,279 barrels of oil which is a 480 percent increase over 1982 quantites. Proven gas reserves increased to 5,728,584,000 cubic feet which is a 50 percent increase over 1982 quantites. The combined estimated value of the company's proven reserves as of October 31, 1983, is $25,755,484.

The 480 percent increase in proven oil reserves is a result of management's response to stable oil prices and continued oil demand versus a surplus natural gas supply. The company's concentration toward drilling oil prospects also resulted in a 50 percent increase in gas reserves as many of the company's prospects were both oil and gas productive. Management's policy toward present drilling activity has concentrated on oil prospects, however, the company believes the gas surplus is temporary and is accumulating gas prospects to drill when the gas markets improve.

The company's first public limited partnership closed November 23, 1983, and is participating in nine company-owned development drilling prospects. In each of the nine prospects, the partnership, WRC 1983 Drilling Program, LTD., owns 31.56 percent and the company owns 22.34 percent with the remaining interest held by other participants. The first prospect, University "C" No. 1-22, has tested commercial quantites of oil and completion operations are under way. The second prospect, University "D" No. 1-23, has been drilled to a total depth of 7,900 feet and completion operations are scheduled for early January. The third prospect, University "E" No. 1-24, is currently drilling below 4,960 feet with a projected total depth of 7,900 feet. Based on results from initial tests, the company is discussing the addition of a second drilling rig to cause an accelerated completion date for the nine prospects as early as March 1, 1984.

The company's joint venture drilling program with industry partners continues at an active pace. At present, the joint venture, which is managed by the company, has 13 wells in separate stages of drilling, testing and completion. In each of the joint venture wells, the company earns a 10 percent cash manage-ent fee plus a 6.25 percent carried working interest through completion. Additional joint venture drilling is planned, but details have not yet been finalized.

Congress sees fewer energy bills

By STEVEN EISENSTADT
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The introduction of energy legislation decreased substantially last year, a new analysis of the year in Congress shows.

The number of bills and resolutions dealing with energy last year dropped 46 percent from 1981 and a whopping 132 percent from 1979.

The figures, providing an unusually vivid snapshot of the number of energy-related measures in Congress, were released by Legi-Slate, a computer-based legislative tracking service owned by The Washington Post Co.

There were 529 energy bills and resolutions introduced in 1983, comprising 6 percent of all legislation, the study showed.

That was a marked decrease from 1981, when lawmakers wrote 773 pieces of energy legislation, which accounted for 9 percent of all legislation.

The drop is even more dramatic when compared to the 1979 figures. In that year, Congress responded to the long gas lines and petroleum shortages after the Islamic revolution in Iran by writing 1,231 energy-related measures, more than any other type of legislation except health and medicine.

Energy-related measures accounted for 12 percent of all legislation in 1979, double the 1983 percentage.

Some of the study's other findings include:

— More than half of the 8,437 measures dealt with money matters, ranging from tax bills to budgets and appropriations measures.

— Nearly 900 measures dealt with science, computers and space, including 107 on data processing and computers alone. Introduction of these measures last year is twice the 1979 level.

— Legislation dealing with personal property and real estate totalled 920 last year, almost double the 1979 figure.

— Introduction of measures related to agriculture, livestock and rural affairs have stayed at about the same level since 1979.

— More than 2,400 measures dealt with the environment and the interior, an increase since 1979. The proposed laws include 362 on rivers, lakes and harbors.

The study also showed that the 29-member Texas congressional delegation introduced 364 pieces of legislation in 1983, the fourth highest total in Congress.

The Texas delegation outdistanced all others except California's 47-member contingent, which introduced 681 measures, New York's 36-member delegation, with 658, and Illinois' 24-member group, with 463.

Rep. Henry Gonzalez, D-San Antonio, introduced 35 bills and resolutions in 1983, more than any other House member from Texas. By contrast, freshman Reps. Solomon Ortiz, D-Corpus Christi, and Steve Bartlett, R-Dallas, sponsored only one each.

Rep. Tom Loeffler, R-Hunt, introduced four measures in 1983, none of which were signed into law.
