FDIC liquidator named in slander suit

By JULIE FAUBEL
Business-Energy Writer

Thomas R. Procopio, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.'s liquidator in charge of failed First National Bank of Midland, is being sued for slander in Oklahoma's Garfield County District Court in Enid.

A $2 million slander suit has been filed by Enid businessman Jere A. Sturgis against Procopio, who was liquidator in charge of Penn Square Bank in Oklahoma City before coming to Midland.

Attorney Stephen Jones, who telephoned the Reporter-Telegram Thursday, said he had filed a petition with the court Wednesday on behalf of his client.

The suit seeks damages for a statement Procopio made to a newspaper reporter on Dec. 9, when he reportedly said Sturgis submitted false information to the FDIC.

Sturgis alleges comments about himself, made by Procopio and quoted in the Daily Oklahoman newspaper, were slanderous per se.

The case stems from the failure of Penn Square Bank in 1982. Jones said, initially, Sturgis or his corporation made application to Penn Square for approximately $60 million. Penn Square was able to place most of the total with "up stream" banks in New York, Michigan and Washington and kept $5 million for itself.

Sturgis, believes Procopio and the FDIC acted in a "heavy handed" and "third reich" manner in its dealings with him following the bank's failure. He also accused the FDIC and Procopio of violating their word not to force him into bankruptcy. Sturgis' opinions were quoted in the Daily Oklahoman.

Responding to Sturgis' remarks, Procopio, who telephoned a Daily Oklahoman reporter from Midland Dec. 9, said Sturgis had filed "inaccurate" information with the FDIC. And that Sturgis "has abused the system to such an extent he has caused many innocent bystanders to be hurt financially."

In an interview with the Reporter-Telegram Thursday, Procopio said he was aware of the suit but had not been formally served. He dismissed the suit saying it was "frivolous" and a case of "sour grapes."

Procopio said Sturgis' accusations are "totally without foundation" and "an attempt by Jones to protect his client's credibility which we, the FDIC, felt there was a lack thereof.

"Mr. Sturgis, as I have stated before, never cooperated with us. He saw us only when he felt it was necessary," Procopio said.

He also said Jones and Sturgis have accused the FDIC of many wrongdoings, adding, "Sturgis has been unable to live up to his responsibilities created by having a large line of credit.

"(Penn Square) had many debtors who weren't able to live up to their financial responsibilities. Those debtors caused the uninsured depositors of the bank and other creditors to suffer serious losses because they borrowed more money than they could ever pay back," Procopio said.

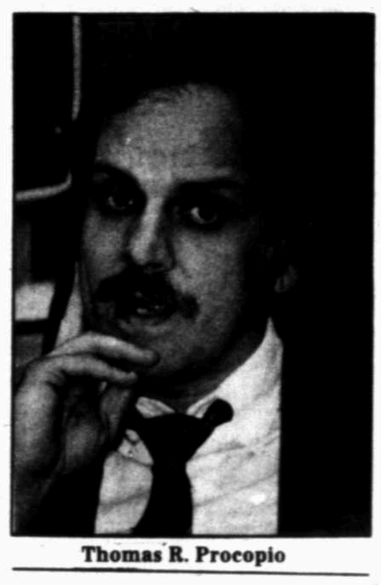

With regard to the Dec. 9 story in the Daily Oklahoman, Procopio defended his earlier remarks.

"The statements about him (Sturgis) are true. He gave us inaccurate information when we were trying to work out a situation with his loan. Because he gave us inaccurate information, we thought it in the best interest of the bank and its creditors to put Mr. Sturgis into bankruptcy and to have our interests protected in the courts."

Sturgis' attorney also called Procopio "haughty, condescending and obnoxious" while in Oklahoma and charged that the FDIC had virtually destroyed the oil and gas business in Oklahoma.

Jones also said that Procopio, in his judgment, was handling FNB's liquidation much differently than Penn Square's. He said Procopio had considerably changed his approach in Midland because of mismanagement at the Oklahoma bank and because of pressure from FDIC headquarters in Washington, D.C.

Responding to Jones' remarks about the different treatment Midland is receiving, Procopio said, "As to the turnaround, we haven't had the occasion to act as he says because we haven't had to deal here in Midland with debtors like his client. It appears that the debtors and customers of the former bank (FNB) are more straight shooters than Sturgis was. And yes, we do act differently toward people who we feel are deceiving us and being uncooperative."

Front ices portions of 49 states

By RON SIRAK
Associated Press Writer

A curtain of cold descending from Canada plunged temperatures below zero today from the northern Rockies to the Northeast, and parts of 49 states — all but Hawaii — were chilled to freezing.

"In fact, if you want a nice, warm vacation, you can go to Alaska," said Nolan Duke of the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo. Juneau and Anchorage were both to be at or above the freezing mark, he said.

At least 18 lives have been claimed by the combination of arctic air and snow-slicked roads since Tuesday.

The mercury sank to 31 below zero today in International Falls, Minn., and 24 below in Fargo, N.D. Minneapolis reported a reading of 19 below, and most of Minnesota was in the minus-20 to minus-30 range.

Temperatures in the teens extended as far south as Louisiana, Alabama and Georgia. New Orleans hovered around the freezing mark overnight, and south Florida could do no better than the 40s and 50s.

In Tampa, Fla., the warm-weather site chosen for Sunday's Super Bowl football game, it was a chilly 47 early today.

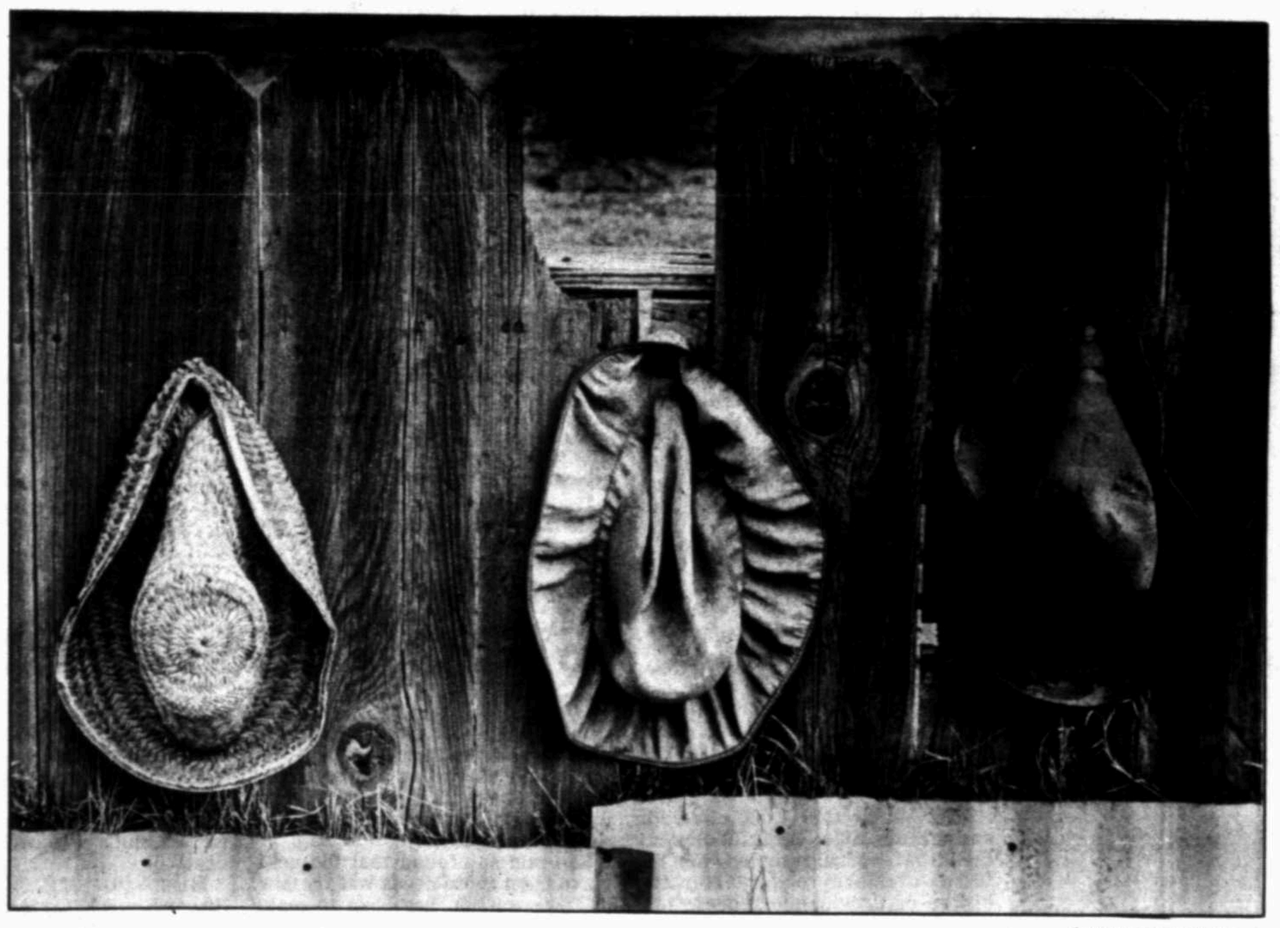

But dense cloud cover apparently spared the Florida citrus belt from another killer cold like December's, which destroyed millions of dollars' worth of fruit.

"Think of the clouds as being a roof, and it keeps the heat in," said Emmett Ricks of the National Weather Service in Miami.

That protective roof has been blown off most of the nation by a jet stream of icy air from the depths of the arctic. And while the sun was expected to shine on most of the nation today, it will be an empty light bringing little warmth to a nation weary of cold.

Duke said temperatures will moderate somewhat over the Rockies and the Plains but warned that "it's still only January." He said the worst was still ahead for the Midwest and the Northeast.

From the Rockies to the Northeast and as far south as Kansas and Missouri, the mercury was stuck below the zero mark.

Islamic summit calling on Egypt

CASABLANCA, Morocco (AP) — An Islamic summit has called on Egypt to endorse all its "principles, rules and decisions" as the price for readmission to the 45-nation body, a semi-official Moroccan daily reported today.

Those "decisions" presumably included condemnation of Egypt's Camp David peace treaty with Israel. The Egyptian-Israeli agreements four years ago led to an Islamic boycott of Egypt.

The newspaper, Le Matin, said the summit, which ended late Thursday, decided to send a three-nation delegation to Cairo to discuss with the Egyptian government the invitation to rejoin the Moslem family of nations.

■ Jordanian strike force discussed; Related story — Page 1D

The decision to readmit Egypt — suspended after it signed the treaty — was the major action of the summit and came over the objections of hard-line countries such as Syria and Libya. It remained unclear if Egypt would accept any conditions, but the summit's action was a significant overture.

While the Islamic Conference Organization was holding its summit Thursday, the government of President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt announced that it would reject any conditional invitation to return to the organization.

First illness may burst his bubble

HOUSTON (AP) — Sick for the first time in his life following a bone marrow transplant, a 12-year-old boy who has no immunity to disease is responding "by the book" to the only procedure that could free him from a sterile plastic bubble, a hospital official says.

His fever and diarrhea are not causes for concern, doctors say, adding they are optimistic about prospects for David, the boy who has grown up in a germ-free bubble, eating sterilized food, breathing filtered air and never touching another bare human hand.

The world's oldest survivor of untreated severe combined immune deficiency, David underwent the transplant Oct. 20.

"He has developed a slight fever, but that's expected," said Susannah Moore Griffin, a spokeswoman for Texas Children's Hospital. "It's by the book. It happened to other children who have had the same procedure."

David, whose last name is kept secret by the hospital, came through the transplant procedure well and only recently developed a reaction, Ms. Griffin said.

A series of tests run last week should determine whether the transplant was a success. Results will be announced by Jan. 27.

David was born by Caesarean section and immediately placed in a sterile environment. He has lived most of his life in a three-chambered plastic bubble in his parents' home. Everything that touches him — food, clothing, toys and books — must be sterilized by chemicals or heat.

Doctors had hoped to keep David alive long enough to find a donor whose bone marrow matched his. But no such donor was found.

David and his family resisted any effort to use experimental procedures to treat his immune deficiency until last October. They agreed then to try a type of bone marrow transplant that would enable the use of a non-matching marrow.

For David's transplant, doctors took marrow from his 15-year-old sister and treated it with monoclonal antibodies and a chemical. These killed the cells that would have attacked his body.

Doctors hope the bone marrow will take up residence in David's own marrow and start producing disease-fighting cells that will provide immunity.

Trudeau stepping back into 'Doonesbury'

He's been caring for twins, creating for Broadway

By DOLORES BARCLAY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — While fans fiddled with other funnies as their beloved "Doonesbury" took a vacation from the comics pages, Garry Trudeau fathered twins and sent Zonker, B.D. and Uncle Duke to Broadway.

Now, between diapers and burps, the cartoonist is readying pen and ink for the return of his Pulitzer Prize-winning strip in September.

"At this point, we don't know what the story line will be," Lee Salem, editorial director of Universal Press Syndicate, said in a recent telephone interview. "But the play acts as a bridge between where the strip ended and where it will pick up."

When readers last saw "Doonesbury" a year ago, Joanie Caucus, the feminist lawyer, was having cosmic conversations with her infant son.

Fans don't know the name of the newest "Doonesbury" character. But they do know the names of Trudeau's twins: Richard Ross and Rachel Grandison. His wife, Jane Pauley of the NBC "Today" program, gave birth Dec. 30 and announced Thursday that she is returning to the show on Feb. 27.

The Broadway musical "Doonesbury," which opened in November to lukewarm reviews, was one reason the artist took a 20-month sabbatical from his comic creation, which ran in 700 newspapers. He also said that he wanted to write a book on the political right and that his cartoon characters had to grow up.

Trudeau wrote the book and lyrics and Elizabeth Swados composed the music for the musical, which takes place in the Walden commune on graduation day. Michael J. Doonesbury, the dithering major-domo of the commune, graduates with a degree in business administration.

Zonker Harris, the bearded guru of the perfect tan, goes into real estate with his renegade Uncle Duke. Marvelous Mark Slackmeyer gets a job as a disc jockey with a Long Island radio talk show.

And superjock B.D., who dreamed for years of playing football for the Dallas Cowboys, is traded to the Seattle Seahawks for two draft picks and a bus.

Ms. Swados was a "Doonesbury" fan before she sat down with her friend Trudeau to work on the musical.

"I felt they were people I knew very well," Ms. Swados said in a telephone interview from Los Angeles. "Each character had a kind of spirit which dictated the music....

"I'm looking forward to (Trudeau's) writing more lyrics," she said. "He's a good lyricist. We've discussed writing some more songs together."

Trudeau, the Greta Garbo of the comic strip world, refuses to give interviews and make public statements about his plans.

"The last I saw of Garry, he was holding a beautiful baby in his arms; his wife was holding the other one," Ms. Swados said. "I think that's his source of inspiration now."

When Trudeau announced in September 1982 that he planned to take a rest from the strip he had worked on for 15 years, he said his characters had remained in the mindset of another era. It was hard leaping from draft beer and social mixers to cocaine and computers.

During the break, newspapers were forced to remake their comic strip pages; some added new strips to fill the space.

"There's really no replacement for 'Doonesbury,'" said James Hail, editor and publisher of the North Idaho Press in Wallace. "We used 'For Better or Worse' to fill the space, but we kind of missed 'Doonesbury.'"

The Philadelphia Inquirer added three strips — "Conrad," "Marvin" and "The Neighborhood," according to Tom Wark, associate managing editor for features.

"In my opinion, 'Doonesbury' is a real comic classic, like 'Pogo,' like 'Peanuts,' like 'Little Orphan Annie.' It happens to be one of the modern classics," Wark said.

It looks like long, slow thaw

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — If the Reagan administration is to have an election-year thaw with the Soviet Union it is taking shape very slowly.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz returned home from Europe Thursday night with "nothing positive to report" on resuming nuclear arms control talks.

The Soviets apparently are willing to return to the bargaining table to consider a mutual cutback in troops and armor in Central Europe.

But they refused to meet on missiles until the United States reversed the deployment of Pershing 2 rockets in West Germany. Shultz described the talks as "terminated."

Also suspended are discussions in Geneva, Switzerland, to reduce long-range bombers, intercontinental ballistic missiles and nuclear submarines.

President Reagan had offered in a speech Monday at the White House to forge a "constructive working relationship" with Moscow.

Shultz made some conciliatory gestures of his own at the opening of a 35-nation disarmament conference Tuesday in Stockholm, Sweden, although he jabbed at the Soviets for perpetuating the "heartless division" of Germany.

The Soviet reaction to Reagan and Shultz was acrimonious in public, and a trifle yielding in private.

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, addressing the conference Wednesday, swept aside Reagan's olive branch as a "hackneyed ploy." He denounced the United States as "the main threat to peace."

When he met with Shultz Wednesday afternoon at the snow-cloaked Soviet embassy, Gromyko toned down the rhetoric. "Nobody was talking for effect," said a member of the U.S. delegation afterward. "They were talking as diplomats discussing issues."

But Gromyko was tough. And even before the windup of the 5-hour and 10-minute session, Tass, the Soviet news agency, circulated a report that blamed the United States for the "dangerous consequences" of deploying new Pershing 2 and cruise missiles.

Shultz acknowledged Thursday morning, as he flew to Oslo, Norway, for a courtesy call on King Olav, "we made no headway" on nuclear weapons. "We made no agreement to meet again," he said.

And yet, there are a few signs of the thaw Reagan and the secretary of state sought.

AP Laserphoto

U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz takes questions after a conference meeting in Stockholm. See related story, Page 1D.

An Analysis

First, the two sides are talking again at a high level, and about a wide range of issues — the Middle East, Central America and Africa, as well as weapons.

Their last session, at Madrid, Spain, in September, was dominated by an angry disagreement over the Soviets' downing of a South Korean jetliner with 269 people aboard.

This time, Shultz and Gromyko had what one official described as the most serious U.S.-Soviet discussion in three years.

Second, Gromyko evidently agreed to have a Soviet delegation back at the bargaining table in Vienna, Austria, in March to resume deliberations on a reduction of NATO and Warsaw Pact troops and armor in Central Europe.

The talks have meandered for 10 years without visible accomplishment. Over the past six months, the Soviets have laid down a new approach to the negotiations.

It is the West's turn to respond after the talks resume.

And while Shultz and Gromyko did not set a date to meet again, Anatoly F. Dobrynin, the Soviet ambassador to Washington, will be making periodic calls at the State Department, serving as a channel to the Kremlin.

This is a familiar role for him. A decade ago, Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger conducted a lot of diplomacy through the affable Russian.

But while Kissinger virtually ignored the U.S. ambassadors in Moscow, the current envoy, Arthur Hartman, will play the same kind of role as Dobrynin.

Hartman was at the table when Shultz met with Gromyko and has the confidence of the secretary of state.

Before Shultz took off for Europe last Saturday, a knowledgeable U.S. official told The Associated Press "we are making one last stab at seeing if the Soviets are prepared to do business with this administration."

He said "if nothing clicks" between Shultz and Gromyko "we could go into a stall."

Shultz and Gromyko didn't exactly click. But there also is no stall.

And President Reagan could benefit whatever direction the relationship goes.

If the Soviets do not yield, his supporters will make sure he is credited for trying. If the Soviets give ground, Reagan will win applause for statesmanship.

Shultz denies that politics are influencing U.S. foreign policy.

While maintaining his composure through the ups and downs of his European trip, Shultz was almost indignant when a reporter suggested at a London news conference that Reagan may be playing election-year politics with issues of war and peace.

"The president has run for office quite a few times and managed to win," Shultz replied. "His stance has been rather anti-Soviet. I don't think he needs them in order to win."

Ohio radio stations broadcast trial

CHILLICOTHE, Ohio (AP) — Two radio stations broadcast a hatchet-murder trial live from start to finish, giving listeners the chance to hear the guilty verdict at the same time as the defendant, says a station official who believes the broadcast is a first.

"We just wanted to do something to get the information to people as quickly as possible," said Mike Smith, the news director of WBEX-AM and WKKJ-FM. The broadcast posed few problems and drew few complaints, he said.

On Thursday, three judges convicted Timothy D. Wingo, 33, of the May 3 hatchet slaying of 74-year-old Beatrice Woodfork, a former Sunday school teacher. Wingo also was convicted of robbery in the aggravated murder case, meaning he could be sentenced to death.

Smith said he had not originally planned to broadcast the entire trial live. "But because of listener reaction, we did. We received well over 100 calls. Luckily it was not a jury trial and lasted only three days," he said.

Among the obstacles the stations faced were "people calling to say they couldn't hear the judge. He wouldn't allow a microphone on his bench" because they could pick up conferences with lawyers, he said.

The judge did allow the stations to place a microphone in front of him when he announced the verdict, according to Smith, who said he had not heard of any other stations broadcasting a complete trial.

"Commercials were during recesses. We did not take any breaks for commercials," he said. "We had to rearrange some commercials. There were some sponsors who wanted their ads removed until the trial was over."

As to the two listener complaints he received, "One guy said he would rather hear music than somebody else's problems. The other guy said he just didn't want to hear it," he said.

The AM station broadcasts at 1,000 watts and the FM station at 20,000 watts, Smith said.

"The AM will cover 50 miles, FM goes probably over 100 miles," covering Ross County's population of 65,000 and reaching Columbus, the state capital, 46 miles away, he said.

It was not known how many people actually listened to the broadcast.

The chief judge in the three-judge trial, Ross County Common Pleas Judge Nicholas Holmes Jr., said the broadcasts drew more attention than he had expected.

"I didn't think anybody would listen. It's pretty dry material. I didn't think people would be able to follow what was going on," he said.

When he was asked in December about broadcasting the trial, "the only difficulty I had was to determine there would be no disruption of court proceedings," Holmes said. "As long as there wasn't, I didn't think it could hurt anything and I thought it would be a good way to let people know what happens in court.

"I haven't seen any kind of negative reaction from anybody," the judge added. "I can't see any reasons I wouldn't do it again."

However, Holmes said he thought a live broadcast would not be appropriate for a jury trial. "I think that a community filled with people who knew everything that went on might pressure jurors," he said.

Smith praised the judge's decision, saying, "I think it showed a lot of guts to stick his neck on the block. I'm sure he could have met some criticism for allowing it."

Smith said that since the trial began, the station has had requests to broadcast another upcoming murder trial.

Wingo will undergo psychological testing before sentencing. The judges have the option of sentencing him to death, life in prison with no chance of parole for 20 years or life with no chance of parole for 30 years.

The other two judges were John Reece of Akron and Robert Gorman of Cincinnati.

Nun picks politics over sisterhood

JOHNSTON, R.I. (AP) — Forced to choose between the sisterhood and politics, Arlene Violet has chosen the latter.

Miss Violet told 1,000 cheering supporters at a party Thursday night that she had resigned from the Sister of Mercy order after the bishop of Providence Diocese told her she would be forced out of the sisterhood if she tried again to unseat Democratic Attorney General Dennis Roberts II.

"I made that decision (to leave the order) with a clear conscience," said the 40-year-old lawyer, a Republican. "I'm motivated by what is the right thing to do."

Since Miss Violet made a close but unsuccessful bid for attorney general in 1982, church rules have been changed to prohibit priests and nuns from seeking political office without permission from their bishops.

She said that when she became a Sister of Mercy 23 years ago, "I committed my life to meeting the unmet needs of the people."

She said she found that the vehicle to meet those needs was the law, and her mission has been to make legal services available to all, regardless of income.

As attorney general, she said, she would identify high-crime neighborhoods in the state and combine various law enforcement efforts to combat the crime.

When asked whether she would seek to return to the order should she lose the election in November, she replied, "I haven't entertained that option at this point.

"I feel I share my common bond with my Sisters of Mercy and I feel that will continue," she said.

For months, state Republican leaders had been urging Miss Violet to challenge Roberts for a second time. In 1982, she lost 56 percent to 43 percent.

Miss Violet asked Providence Bishop Louis E. Gelineau for permission to enter politics and keep her vows. But two weeks ago, Gelineau said no.

"It is certainly incongruous to expect that I should grant a dispensation in such cases when the Holy Father himself does not do so," Gelineau said.

Pope John Paul II opposes clerics seeking office, but the issue remains a controversy.

The Rev. Robert Ogl, a priest from Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, has been given permission by his bishop to seek re-election to Canada's House of Commons.

But in Michigan last May, Agnes Mansour, a former Sister of Mercy, also chose to leave the order after being given an ultimatum. She is director of the state Department of Social Services, which provides funding for abortions for poor women.

The church ordered her to renounce the funding of abortion, but after Ms. Mansour said she had to follow the law, her bishop told her to choose between the order and the state job.

In 1980, the Rev. Robert Drinan was told to give up either the Jesuits or his Massachusetts congressional seat. He chose to leave the House of Representatives.

Interior's buffalo now off 'right' track

By WILLIAM KRONHOLM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The wandering buffalo on the Interior Department seal has come home. He's back facing left again, ending a flirtation with the right initiated by former Interior Secretary James G. Watt.

News releases put out by the department under Interior Secretary William P. Clark show the buffalo facing left. For a time under Watt, right-facing buffaloes were in vogue, reflecting the new orientation of the department.

But a department spokesman says the buffalo's about-face has no connection with Clark's arrival. The change actually occurred some months ago, he said, though apparently went unnoticed by most of the reporters who wrote about Watt's original change.

The buffalo, standing before a mountain sunset, is the central figure in the Interior Department's official seal. For decades it faced to the left. Shortly after Watt took office, however, news releases emanating from the secretary's office showed the buffalo had been flip-flopped; it faced to the right.

Watt spokesman Douglas Baldwin attributed the change at the time to simple graphics design. The seal was in the upper left corner of the page, he explained, and a right-facing buffalo looked at the text rather than the edge of the paper.

But another aide told a newspaper Watt ordered the change because "he thought the right side should have equal time." And Watt distributed privately purchased lapel pins to his top aides showing the Interior seal with a right-facing buffalo.

Watt also gave a pin to President Reagan, who cited the change as a symbol of the change Watt was bringing to the department.

Watt resigned last October. Clark took his place. And press releases now show the buffalo back in his familiar position, facing to the left.

No symbolism intended, insisted department spokesman Harmon Kallman.

"We never really changed the official seal," he said. "To really change it would have cost many thousands, perhaps millions, of dollars," plus running afoul of strict regulations specifying the content of the seal.

Senator would keep cookie profit from crumbling

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Tennessee Revenue Department wants to take a $13,500 tax bite out of Girl Scout cookie sales, but a state senator says he'll lead the fight to keep the cookie profits from crumbling.

"I think Girl Scout cookies are an institution that's unique," Sen. Doug Henry said Thursday. "I don't think the little girls should have to pay sales tax...."

Henry, a Democrat, said he will sponsor a bill to exempt the Girl Scouts from the sales tax.

The Tennessee Revenue Department has asked Attorney General William Leech whether it can impose the state's 4.5 percent sales tax on Girl Scout cookies.

"There's nothing in the law that says you can sell something and be exempt from the sales tax," said Hardy Moyers, deputy revenue commissioner. "A charitable organization can buy something, like a typewriter, and that's tax-exempt. But if it turned around and sold the typewriter, it would have to be taxed."

Penny Harrington, a lawyer for the Nashville Girl Scout Council, said the Girl Scouts will lobby the Legislature to pass Henry's bill if Leech rules that the cookie tax must be paid.

"Our legislators have reacted very positively," Ms. Harrington said. "I don't think anybody really wants to take anything away from the Girl Scout troops."

She said she did not know if other states imposed a sales tax on Girl Scout cookies.

The Girl Scouts collect more money from cookie sales than from any other fund-raising event the organization conducts, Ms. Harrington said.

She said an estimated 150,000 boxes are sold annually in Tennessee. Last year's price was $1.75 a box, which translates into annual sales of $262,000 based on Ms. Harrington's total sales estimate.

If the state's 4.5 percent sales tax applied to the cookies this year, with cookies being sold at $2 a box, the Girl Scouts would lose $13,500 to Tennessee coffers.

"The auditing problems would be tremendous. It would probably reduce the sales to some degree," Ms. Harrington said. "And can you see those girls keeping up with all those pennies in their grubby little hands?"

Ms. Harrington said the state never questioned the Girl Scouts about the sales tax until last year, when the Chattanooga Girl Scout Council asked the Revenue Department for a refund.

The lawyer said the Chattanooga council was the only one of eight in the state that had been collecting tax on the cookies.

"All that time the eight councils had been advised they didn't have to pay, but Chattanooga had been paying it since 1968," Ms. Harrington said.

Investigator says fugitive was ready for gun battle

AMARILLO (AP) — A criminal investigator says a hospital interview he made with an Oklahoma fugitive convinced him that the man was preparing to engage officers in a gun battle on a ranch near Borger in the early morning hours of Aug. 11, 1981.

Before officers cornered him, however, ranch foreman James Grandstaff, who had been awakened by the ruckus, drove up to offer his help and was gunned down by mistake, Michael Lon "Mickey" Blackmon testified Thursday.

Blackmon testified in the trial of a $5 million wrongful death civil suit filed by Sharon Grandstaff, widow of the shooting victim.

Texas Ranger Jim Gillespie was testifying when the trial was recessed for the day Thursday afternoon and was scheduled to resume his testimony this morning. He said he was appointed to investigate the shooting of Grandstaff — to find out who, where, when, why and how somebody shot him.

Test results eliminated a rifle fired by officer Bailey Roberts as the weapon that caused Grandstaff's death, Gillespie said.

Baby's death unexpected, nurse says

GEORGETOWN (AP) — The mysterious death of a 15-month-old baby took medical workers by surprise, an emergency room nurse testified at the trial of a fellow nurse charged with injecting the infant with a muscle relaxant.

The child, Chelsea McClellan, "looked good and was moving her extremities" when she was brought in to the emergency room at Sid Petersen Hospital, head nurse Sharon Keith testified Thursday as the prosecution's first witness in the murder trial of Genene Jones.

Ms. Jones, who was a nurse at a private pediatric clinic in Kerrville owned by Dr. Kathleen Holland, is charged with fatally injecting the baby with a muscle relaxant in September 1982.

Kerr County District Attorney Ron Sutton opened his case with a promise that jurors would see "this tragic story of the life and death of Chelsea McClellan unfold before your eyes."

Sutton started telling the story somewhere in the middle, after the point when Ms. Jones allegedly gave the injection at the clinic.

Thursday's witnesses said the baby did not seem in a struggle for life when she was brought from the clinic to the hospital.

Ambulance driver Steve Brown was called to the clinic on Sept. 17, 1982 to transport the girl.

He testified that the baby was on an examining table at the clinic and there was "not much of any kind of movement." The baby stopped breathing during the three-minute trip, but she seemed to recover and appeared OK after arriving, he said. At the hospital, it was decided to take Chelsea to a San Antonio hospital for tests.

"Everything seemed real good to me. The baby was stable. That's what I was told," he testified.

About 15 miles toward San Antonio, all changed, he said. Brown heard Ms. Jones shout, "Pull this...over." The ambulance stopped on the side of Interstate 10, as did Ms. Holland and Chelsea's parents, Reid and Petti McClellan, who were in two other cars.

The ambulance headed for a hospital in Comfort, where Chelsea died, Brown said.

Mrs. Keith said that despite the apparent lack of an emergency, she had been curious about two injection marks on Chelsea's legs.

General's brother takes issue with ruling of suicide

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The brother of an Army Reserve general who tried to make his suicide look like a terrorist hanging will challenge the official version of the death, according to a published report.

Maj. Gen. Robert G. Ownby was mired in financial trouble when he lashed his hands behind his back and hanged himself after planting a typewritten note that suggested terrorism, Bexar County Medical Examiner Dr. Vincent DiMaio said Thursday.

Ownby's brother, Dr. Ralph Ownby Jr., told the San Antonio Light he would seek "legal review and representation" concerning the ruling, but he would not elaborate.

Ownby, 48, was found hanging in a headquarters building at Fort Sam Houston early Jan. 11, a note pinned to his sweater saying he had been "sentenced and executed" for "crimes by the U.S. Army."

The FBI discovered the typewriter on which the note was written "at a place Gen. Ownby had access to," DiMaio said, but would not disclose the location.

"It was fairly evident from the beginning that it was a suicide," DiMaio said.

Both DiMaio and the FBI refused to elaborate on the financial problems of the two-star general, who owned and operated Bristow-ONB Corp., a company that manufactures steel doors and frames.

"It remains absolutely inconceivable that Bob committed suicide," the general's brother said from his office in Richmond, Va. "I will work with the other members of my family to do everything appropriate in the interests of my brother's memory. My brother would have done the same thing for me."

Man drops action against evangelist's ministry

WACO (AP) — A man who claimed that his parents were pressured into bequesting most of their estate to the television ministry of evangelist Jimmy Swaggart has withdrawn his challenge of their wills and apologized for making the allegations.

Last month, Larry Neale Baugh's mother, 70, was stabbed to death with scissors in her home at McGregor, 20 miles west of Waco, and his father, 72, died after a long illness. Their deaths came within two weeks of their changing their wills to leave the bulk of their estate to the Swaggart organization.

Documents filed earlier this month with the county clerk's office in Waco by Baugh sought to have his parents' wills voided. In addition to undue pressure brought against his parents, the wills were improperly witnessed, he had charged.

He also alleged that representatives of Swaggart recommended the hiring of a 19-year-old maid who later was charged in his mother's slaying and that church officials counseled her on Bible verses dealing with violence and later "looted" the Baugh's home and safe deposit box after his father's death.

"In the haste of preparing these pleadings and filing them, the facts were not verified sufficiently," an attorney for Baugh said in a prepared statement that was read Thursday morning at a news conference.

"Many of the charges alleged in those pleadings have since been proved false," added the attorney, Tony Duty of Waco.

"We realize these erroneous conclusions and misstatements have caused great harm to the individuals and organizations against whom they were made...It is our desire to remedy the wrong and the damage that was done and to put this matter behind us."

Duty said Baugh was "attempting to make restitution" to Swaggart's organization and three people named in the allegations.

Dennis Brewer, a lawyer for Jimmy Swaggart Ministries, said the organization accepted the apology from Duty and Baugh and predicted the will would be probated before a Feb. 21 hearing set in the civil case.

Man convicted of trading call logs for drugs

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A judge has sentenced a former Southwestern Bell service representative to three years in federal prison for trading the telephone records of narcotics agents for drugs.

Stanley Warren Smith, 27, could have received up to four years in prison Thursday from U.S. District Judge William S. Sessions.

Smith pleaded guilty in December to a charge of using an interstate communications device in the commission of a felony.

Prosecutors said Smith acquired methamphetamines in exchange for the telephone records of undercover U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration agents.

Female governor to chair '84 Democratic convention

Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — The nation's only woman governor, Martha Lynn Collins of Kentucky, was named Thursday to chair the 1984 Democratic National Convention in San Francisco.

Collins will direct the convention with the help of California Rep. Julian Dixon, D-Culver City, who has been named as the convention's rules committee chairman, and Rep. Geraldine Ferraro of New York who will chair the platform committee.

Announcement of the appointments by Democratic National Committee Chairman Charles T. Manatt came the day before the Rev. Jesse Jackson is scheduled to meet with the DNC executive committee to challenge party rules for selecting convention delegates.

Jackson has charged the rules, developed by the party commission that was headed by North Carolina Gov. James B. Hunt, were designed to benefit well-financed, front-running candidates and threatened to exclude poor and minority participation.

Jackson has challenged the rule which requires a candidate to receive at least 20 percent of the vote in a congressional district before winning any delegates and the "winner-take-all" rule in seven states where all the delegates are awarded to the candidate receiving a plurality.

A former school teacher, Collins was elected as Kentucky's lieutenant governor in 1979 and to the governor's office last year.

Explosion injures eight

YORK, Pa. (AP) — About 4,500 residents evacuated when an "enormous explosion" and fire gutted a three-story building, injuring eight people, were allowed to return to their homes after workers repaired a leaking gas line.

The 4,500 people were evacuated from a five-block downtown area shortly after the explosion Thursday afternoon because of fear of another blast. They were allowed to go home 4½ hours later, after workers for Columbia Gas Co. found a leak under the street near the building and repaired it, company officials said.

Two of the eight injured were hurt seriously, and police Lt. Dennis McMaster said it was not known whether they had been inside or outside the building, which housed a beauty parlor, several apartments and vacant offices.

"The feeling is we got everybody out," he said, adding that one of the injured was a firefighter.

Mayor William Althaus, who was across the street in City Hall when the blast occurred, said, "I felt an enormous explosion and heard a stunning noise."

"It was a ball of fire," said Joseph Jajich, a dentist who was in his car outside the building. "It blew the glass out, it was just unbelievable."

The fire burned for several hours, but firefighters prevented the flames from spreading to nearby buildings, McMaster said. The city's full force of 40 firefighters was joined by 100 volunteers.

The gas line, which serves about 50 customers, was not immediately returned to service, the company said.

Shelters for the evacuated were set up in nearby churches, schools and a YMCA, but many apparently went to stay with friends or relatives, McMaster said.

Scott Thompson, an announcer at WOYK radio station, a half-block from the explosion, said he felt the blast when "all of a sudden the windows all rattled."

An employee at York Federal Savings, about a block from the destroyed building, said the force of the blast "rocked our building," while another employee said the explosion "felt like dynamite."

Rocking America

When the "fabulous foursome," better known as the Beatles, arrived in the United States two decades ago with a new style of music — and controversially long hair — they drew more than a few critical comments from those who viewed the group as a dangerous influence.

Over a period of years, though, critics mellowed as the group's music found millions of willing listeners. Countless other musical groups followed the Beatles' lead in a revolution of the music industry and a revolution of society many Americans never expected to see again.

Guess what? It could be happening again and, surprisingly, some of the same individuals who rocked to the Beatles in the name of musical freedom are now opposed to this invasion by a new wave of Britains.

Opposition to the Beatles was largely cultural. They sported unusual haircuts, the wore strange clothing, they sang lyrics that previously were taboo — they were, in a word, different.

A number of Americans still attribute to the group's influence growth of the drug culture in the 1960s and 1970s, and detrimental changes in the family structure.

The new British rockers also are controversial, although in a different way. They aren't even known to most Americans over the age of 30, but Culture Club, featuring Boy George, Eurythmics, Duran Duran and others are launching another invasion of America and finding fans and foes alike.

Their garments are a scandal, entertainers such as Boy George dressed in women's attire a la punk rock. But a number of Midlanders have been heard to remark that their music is appealing. That is the dividing line for a musician. Can he — or she — reach listeners and find acceptance?

It took time, but the Beatles accomplished that feat, finally winning over a lot of American adults who found the group totally offensive at the outset. Maybe Boy George and the rest of the unusually clad British musicians in this subsequent wave will find that acceptance with time, too. Maybe not. Will they change American society as much as did the Beatles? Time will answer that, too.

For now, those Americans who find the performers musically appealing but a visual affront have an acceptable option: Listen but don't watch.

Another View:

Time to move on

So far as President Reagan is concerned, the controversy over Charles Z. Wick is apparently over. Wick, the director of the U.S. Information Agency, secretly taped a lot of telephone conversations over a period of more than two years and then, when found out, tried to deny, deceive and bluster his way past reporters who had the evidence of his misbehavior in hand. Whether Wick broke the law by his covert recording sessions is something the General Services Administration and a couple of congressional committees are looking into. Whether he acted unethically is a settled question. He did, and his attempts to cover up the truth have only made that ethical failure all the worse.

Reagan, nonetheless, has already passed approving judgment on Wick who, as USIA aides are instructed to tell everyone they meet, "is the close personal friend of the president." He won't fire Wick, Reagan says, citing what he calls his "splendid" work at USIA, "far superior to anything that has ever been." The validity of that claim is as questionable as it is unprovable. Certainly a lot of professionals within the agency would argue with it.

Wick's tenure, whatever it has meant to USIA morale and competence, has entailed considerable additional taxpayer expense for the care and keeping of Charles Z. Wick. The man enjoys the imperial style: first class air travel all the way, luxury hotel suites, an insistence on VIP treatment wherever he goes, as well as the attendance of three or four bodyguards. His predecessors somehow were able to make do with none. Wick, in private life a rich man, justifies this indulgence at public expense by saying that serving in government costs him money. That service is costing the rest of us money, too.

The secret tapings that Wick first refused to tell the truth about are known to include conversations with former President Carter, Reagan administration officials and private citizens. Their purpose, Wick claims, was only to aid his own memory and assure that policy would be properly carried out. That doesn't explain why he neglected to tell his unfortunate callers that they were being recorded, something that simple courtesy, to say nothing of fidelity to ethical standards, so obviously requires.

Surely Wick knows that most people, and particularly those in government, tend to be more careful about what they say when they know they are talking — literally in the present case — on the record. A couple of years ago Wick complained in a Los Angeles speech about press leaks from within the government. Having to worry about leaks, he said, inhibits candor. Leaking "chills comment. It chills the ferment and formulation of policy." That was an impassioned argument in behalf of confidentiality and privacy. Ah, yes. But not bothering to alert callers that they are speaking into a recording machine is simply an aid to memory.

The USIA is in the business of portraying the United States honestly and accurately to the world. An agency director who tried to lie about the wrong and bad things he did is hardly the ideal representative of such a noble effort. In 1982 Wick told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that he expects "to be out of this job by 1984 or sooner." He's already running late.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1887, the Senate approved the leasing of Pearl Harbor in Hawaii as a naval base.

In 1937, Franklin Roosevelt became the first president to be sworn in under terms of the 20th Amendment, which moved inauguration day from March 4 to Jan. 20.

In 1953, Dwight Eisenhower took office as the 34th president of the United States.

Today's birthdays: Comedian George Burns is 88 years old. Actor DeForrest Kelley is 64. Actress Patricia Neal is 58. Former astronaut Edwin "Buzz" Aldrin is 54. Comedian Arte Johnson is 50. Actress Dorothy Provine is 47. And actor Lorenzo Lamas is 26.

Thought for today: "Do what you feel in your heart to be right, for you'll be criticized anyway." — Former first lady Eleanor Roosevelt (1884-1962).

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Saving tax dollars costly pursuit

WASHINGTON — Robert Reilly was a top official at the U.S. Information Agency until he committed an unpardonable sin: He tried to save the taxpayers some money.

Jack Anderson

This seemed to offend a congressional aide who handles the USIA's budget. Reilly's superior, Charles Wick, feared that antagonizing the aide might imperil the budget that provides USIA with daily manna. To placate the aide, Wick banished poor Reilly to a lowly outpost. Discouraged, the taxpayers' hero left.

The whole byzantine affair centered on a junket to Australia; such things are important in Washington. Here are the dreary details:

The man who wanted to go to Australia was Spencer Oliver, who earned a footnote in history as the politico whose phone at the Democratic Party headquarters was tapped by the Watergate burglars.

Oliver also had a telephone set up at the American Council of Young Political Leaders, a bipartisan educational outfit he founded in 1970, which gets about $400,000 a year from USIA.

He has now moved his phone to the Helsinki Commission where he is the staff director. But he continues to serve on ACYPL's board.

Oliver is an inveterate traveler at the taxpayers' expense. He not only toured the United States as an ACYPL official, but from 1970 to 1981 he went on 32 trips abroad — to Western Europe, the Soviet Union, Japan, China, Latin America and Africa.

When contacted, Oliver contended that his travels were important to promote ACYPL's objectives and were strictly business. His critics call them "junkets" and charge that he also gave his political cronies trips at USIA's expense.

In 1982, Oliver asked USIA to pay for his 33rd overseas trip — this one to Australia with a group of ACYPL delegates. The travel request was channeled to Reilly who saw no need for an escort to accompany the delegates and so notified ACYPL.

If the delegates had needed a translator and Oliver could have fulfilled that function, Reilly indicated, USIA might have approved the expense. But Reilly solemnly noted that English is spoken in Australia.

Since Oliver was a Democrat, his travel wishes should have been of small consequence to the Reagan administration. But Washington is a city of interlocking connections. Rep. Dante Fascell, D-Fla., is chairman of the Helsinki Commission, where Oliver works. He is also chairman of the subcommittee that oversees USIA's budget.

Fascell was the model of propriety in this whole sideshow. But a busy congressman doesn't always know what is done in his name.

The subcommittee aide who handles USIA matters for Fascell is Virginia Schlundt. She placed a call to the deputy director of USIA and, according to one account, "chewed him out for half an hour." The substance of her complaint was that Reilly had made a serious mistake, that Oliver should go to Australia and that Reilly should be fired.

In the end, Oliver went to Australia but used ACYPL's funds. Wick groused that Reilly had used bad judgment when he rejected Oliver's trip request. "I need Dante Fascell," the USIA director later confessed to a group of congressional aides. "He's too important to our budget."

After a brief period in the USIA's doghouse, Reilly left the agency. But the final chapter was written in a highly sensitive USIA memo, which my associate Dale Van Atta has obtained. The memo charges that most of the Democrats sent abroad by ACYPL from 1978 to 1982 were from "a definable clique that was active in Democratic Party affairs in the 1960s (who) served as the core of the Young Democrats."

Oliver isn't mentioned by name. But he was head of the Young Democrats in the 1960s. Later he founded ACYPL and became its foremost junketeer.

The memo also notes that "an inordinate number of representatives of particular states" were included among ACYPL's globe-trotting travelers. Specifically cited was Florida — Fascell's home state.

Footnote: Virginia Schlundt did not respond to several telephone calls.

HUMBUG OF THE-WEEK: Shortly before the holidays, Postmaster General William Bolger gave the customary warning to Postal Service employees against accepting gifts from the people they serve. Postal workers are paid adequately, officials explained.

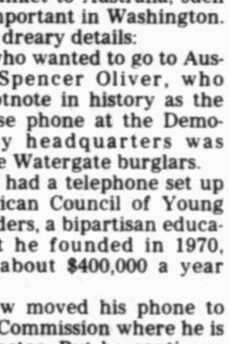

But with Bolger, it's a case of "Do as I say, not as I do." The postmaster-general is paid $80,000 a year — adequate by most standards. Yet he recently accepted appointment to the board of directors of a major optical firm — a sinecure that will net him $12,000 a year, plus $650 for every board meeting he attends.

INSIDE REPORT:

Reagan's trumps bolster hand

WASHINGTON — Partly by accident, President Reagan's buttery peace appeal to the Russians coincided with his charge of Soviet cheating on nuclear treaties, giving him trump cards for the 1984 campaign the Democrats will find hard to top.

Rowland Evans

Reagan's White House advisers suspect the Kremlin is ready for a slight warming up in the wintry super-power climate, but if they are wrong the president can play his nuclear-violation trump. However much he is pressed by the White House establishment and his wife, Nancy, to push the politics of peace, Reagan knows that cheating on SALT rather than easing tensions is where reality starts in dealing with the Soviets.

Robert Novak

That explains the lack of right-wing hand-wringing this week over one of Reagan's most effective and uncharacteristic speeches in his campaign to convince voters that, no, he is neither Genghis Khan nor Attila the Hun. No amount of peace rhetoric, however well-purposed, can conceal the wells of Reagan suspicion about Soviet reality.

Yet the timing of these two seminal 1984 campaign events — the charge of Soviet treaty violations and Monday's peace appeal — was almost entirely coincidental. Reagan signaled his intention to call the Soviet Union on alleged non-compliance with its SALT treaty obligations months ago. As we reported at the time, he wrote a close friend in September that "we have some screws that can be tightened and I have screwdriver in hand" — a veiled allusion to the forthcoming SALT non-compliance matter.

But some diplomats and White House insiders were nervous about making a federal case out of SALT violations. No president since the 1972 SALT I Treaty had come close to accusing the Russians of cheating. There was no agreement, moreover, on what the U.S. should then say it would do about it: whether to abrogate the treaties or proclaim legality for similar U.S. violations or simply sweep it under the rug.

For Reagan, there was never any doubt about how the U.S. should react. If the Russians were really cheating, get the evidence, get it right and get it out. Led by conservative Republicans, the Senate last fall voted 92-0 to ask for a presidential report on the suspected violations. That vote was a stunning demonstration not only of Republican but also of Democratic concern, revealing the political power of the violations issue.

The force driving Reagan to the cheating mat was not partisan politics (although unlike some of his aides he welcomes it as a political issue) but genuine concern over American security. Reagan has long been suspicious of the SALT process. He personally pushed the 1980 Republican platform pledge "to end the Carter administration cover-up of Soviet violations of SALT I and II." He is well aware that most of the non-compliance charges now lodged against the Russians deal with problems that started in previous administrations.

These include accusations that the Soviets violated SALT II by encrypting data about their test flights of new missiles; that they have constructed an immense radar in Central Siberia that violates the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty; that they have systematically violated the treaty ban on chemical and biological warfare, and that they have probably conducted underground nuclear tests larger than the 150 kilotons permitted by the Threshold Test Ban Treaty.

That clears Reagan of Democratic charges that his broadside attacks against the Soviet Union as an "evil empire" so poisoned the atmosphere that Moscow was elbowed into its SALT violations binge. Not true, says the president privately. The seeds of SALT cheating were planted long before he took over the Hot Line.

The tete-a-tete in Stockholm today (Jan. 18) between Secretary of State George Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko may reveal the response of the Soviet Union to Reagan's peace appeal.

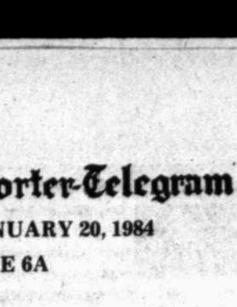

But for the Democrats, no quick and easy response presents itself. If Soviet conduct permits Reagan to play his trump card of peace on the grand U.S.-Soviet stage, perhaps climaxed by an elusive Summit, the 1980 warmonger cry will strike deaf ears. If the Soviets compel Reagan to make a campaign cause out of the cheating issue, with surrogates handling the harsher rhetoric, the Democrats may find themselves unwittingly tainted by Soviet deeds that originated on their White House watch and almost certainly without their knowledge.

CHARLEY REESE

Criticizing U.S. system quiets voices

Treatment by American establishment intellectuals of Soviet dissidents follows a pattern. As long as the dissidents are criticizing the Soviet Union, they are fussed over, but if they dare, and most of them have, to criticize the West, then they are cast into the outer darkness where people with unfashionable opinions languish unnoticed.

Charley Reese

For example, the Washington Post, that most prestigious of newspapers, not long ago gave a page one story to a Washington woman who wrote a letter to Soviet boss, Yuri Andropov, criticizing American policy. It relegated to 65 words a story about President Reagan proclaiming Andrei Sakharov Day and calling on the Soviet Union to release him.

Sakharov, the Soviet physicist who suffers internal exile in Gorky for the crime of standing up for peace and human rights, has fallen out of favor with American liberals like those on the Post.

For one thing, Sakharov warned the United States to arm and not to be deceived into falling behing the Soviet Union in strategic weaponry. He even committed the heresy of saying the MX missile is probably necessary. Sakharov, you see, is not fooled by Soviet peace offensives. He remembers the night before he fell from grace when he said at a Kremlin meeting that he hoped the bomb he developed would never be used. A Soviet general snarled, "It's your job to build them; we'll decide where they will be used."

American liberaldom does not want the United States to seek nuclear superiority nor does it wish to admit what a dangerously hostile state the Soviet Union is (if it did, people might ask questions about past liberal policies).

It was bad enough for poor Sakharov to praise the MX, but his greatest sin is in criticizing American intellectuals. In a published letter smuggled out of Gorkey, Sakharov has tried to warn the American people of the influence of the Soviet secret police, the KGB, in the West.

"The West is filled with citizens who by reason of their positions are able to promote Soviet influence and expansionist goals. Some, he said, are motivated by idealism, others because it is fashionable or profitable, while another category consits of "...naive, poorly informed or indifferent people who close their eyes and ears to the bitter truth and eagerly swallow any sweet lie ... others have been bought in the most direct sense of the word and these include some political figures, businessmen, a great many writers and journalists, government advisors..."

Gee, that sounds like Sen. Joe McCarthy or the John Birch Society talking. Only it's not an American conservative, it's the father of the Soviet hydrogen bomb, a man who was once trusted with the Kremlin's great secrets.

It is a man whose liberal credentials — liberal in the old and fine sense of that word — are beyond question. It is a man who has done more than run off at the mouth about human rights. It is a man who has put his own life on the line for human rights and who is suffering greatly for his beliefs and magnificent courage.

I would think that when a Soviet citizen in a position to know such things asserts that some influential Westerners have been purchased by the KGB that such an allegation would at least spark an inquiry. On the contrary, the allegation has vanished into the modern media version of the black hole — absolute non-attention.

By contrast, when an American Marxist makes an allegation against the CIA, it gets so much media attention that when it is finally proven to be false the public, on the whole, continues to think it is true.

The loss of interest by American intellectuals in Sakharov follows the pattern of Alexander Solzhenitsyn, Vladimir Bukovsky, and Lev Navrosov. These poor men, fortunate enough to escape the belly of the dragon, are shocked out of their minds when they realize how dangerously narcotized the West is about the Soviet Union. They begin to shout warnings, to criticize our so-called experts of misleading us. and right then and there, they become persona non grata in establishment circles. You won't see them on your morning TV news shows nor will you read much about what they have to say.

It is a peculiar form of American quirkiness that some American experts, even those who do not speak Russian, insist they know more about the Soviet Union than these Russians. What does Sakharov know about the Soviet Union? After all, he only built the thermonuclear warheads American liberals are so frightened of.

Sex offender denied bail

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Citing "a high degree of cruelty, viciousness and callousness" in a man sentenced to 527 years in prison for the abduction and sexual abuse of two children, a judge has denied him bail pending an appeal.

Superior Court Judge Robert Dossee pronounced sentence and denied bail Thursday for Luis "Tree Frog" Johnson, 34, who was convicted of 100 counts in the 1982 abductions of Tara Burke, then 2, and Vietnamese refugee Mac Lin, then 11.

Johnson and Alex Cabarga, 18, were found guilty of forcing the youngsters to perform sexual acts, which were photographed. Tara, who was held for 10 months, was rescued when Lin escaped and sought help.

Preacher to allow treatment

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A fundamentalist preacher has decided to abandon legal efforts to prevent his 13-year-old daughter from receiving court-ordered chemotherapy for bone cancer, but might return to court if her condition worsens, his lawyer says.

Larry Hamilton had fought in state courts for nearly six months to stop his daughter, Pamela, from being treated because his church believes in faith healing and forbids the use of medicine.

"It would be a complete exercise in futilty from a legal standpoint to pursue it" now, lawyer James A.H. Bell said Thursday.

'White Dog not racist movie'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "White Dog," a movie about a dog trained to attack black people which NBC dropped from its schedule as "inappropriate," isn't racist, the president of Paramount Televison Group says.

'When you see it you'll see it's not a controversial movie at all. People say it's a bigoted movie, but it's not. It's just the opposite," Rich Frank said.

Police plan to circulate fliers

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Stanford University police plan to circulate fliers bearing the picture of a former graduate student about to be paroled from his sentence for killing his faculty adviser in 1978.

Faculty members also have been told to contact authorities if they see on campus Theodore Streleski, 47, who served five years for a second-degree murder conviction in the 1978 bludgeoning of Stanford mathematics professor Karel deLeeuw.

Under the terms of his Feb. 22 parole, Streleski must accept psychiatric treatment and must never return to Stanford or contact any member of the Stanford community.

Hog deaths due to power failure

NEW DOUGLAS, Ill. (AP) — The baffling deaths of 240 hogs were caused by a power failure that shut off the ventilation system in the animals' shelter and suffocated them, a veterinarian says.

The deaths of the hogs at a farm near this southern Illinois town had perplexed some swine experts and the animals' owner because hundreds of other hogs in the same building survived.

Transplant patient thanks Mickey Mouse for liver

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A toddler who was making an "absolutely wonderful" recovery today from liver transplant surgery has already shown appreciation to the one she thinks made it possible — "Thank you, Mickey," she told her Mickey Mouse doll.

Trine Engebretsen, 2½, of Miami, is a "tough little cookie," and she awoke from the life-saving surgery to find her stuffed friend Mickey — and Minnie — propped at the foot of her hospital bed, her parents said.

"It's just a miracle, it really is," Mary Ann Engebretsen said after seeing her daughter following a 12½-hour transplant operation Thursday at Children's Hospital.

"We told her that we loved her and that we were proud of her that she got through it OK. She responded to my voice, and her eyes started to tear. She moved her arms and was kicking her legs. She knew we were there," said Mrs. Engebretsen, 29, who appeared on NBC-TV's "Today" show Jan. 5 to appeal for a donor.

Trine's mother said she was touched by her daughter's reaction Wednesday to the news that a possible donor liver had been found.

"She just looked at Mickey Mouse and said, 'Thank you, Mickey,' as if she knew he was going to do it all along," said Mrs. Engebretsen, a former Walt Disney World goodwill ambassador who promoted the entertainment park at various functions and once arranged for Mickey Mouse to visit her daughter at home.

Mrs. Engebretson and her husband, Lars, called Trine's recovery "absolutely wonderful."

Meanwhile, surgeons began performing a similar operation on Austin Szegda, 3, of Grundy Center, Iowa, who was rushed to Pittsburgh late Thursday morning when a liver initially intended for Trine was found to be more suitable for him. Surgery began at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, a hospital spokeswoman said.

"He's looking forward to having a new liver," said his father, Mike Szegda, 33, a laid-off factory worker.

Trine, a blue-eyed blonde, was moved to the hospital's intensive care unit Thursday afternoon after her operation.

Doctors described her condition as critical but stable, normal for recent transplant patients.

"I think at this point it's a little early to make any predictions. Things are going as well as can be expected," said Dr. Andrew Urbach, a pediatrician responsible for the girl's post-operative care.

Urbach said the first few days are crucial to the girl's recovery because the new liver might be rejected by her body. She will remain hospitalized for at least six weeks.

Both the child's doctors and parents, however, said they were optimistic.

"She's a tough little cookie, and I'm convinced she's going to make it," said Engebretsen, 40, a cruise ship captain for Norwegian Caribbean Lines.

Culpepper takes Lufkin job

Midland High coach Pat Culpepper accepted the head coach/athletic director job at Lufkin Thursday.

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

LUFKIN — The Pat Culpepper era at Midland High came to an end Thursday night when he accepted the post of head football coach/athletic director for the Lufkin High Panthers.

The big factors in Culpepper's decision to leave Midland are the athletic director job that goes along with coaching and the fact that Lufkin is a one-high school town with all athletes coming into the system instead of being divided into two or more schools.

"This is just something I need to do," said Culpepper shortly after the decision was announced in Lufkin. "I'm into junior high programs and we'll be having a meeting on junior high football one night a week. We're going to get this program turned around."

The Lufkin football program, after three successful years under former coach Ed Cauley, had a 25-5-2 start and qualified for the state playoffs once. In the last four seasons, Lufkin's record fell to 14-26 with one season of .500 ball.

The Panthers compete in District 13-5A with Longview, Longview Pine Tree, Marshall, Nacogdoches, Texarkana, Tyler and Tyler Lee.

"We canvased about 75 applicants and picked out 10 to sit down and interview," said Lufkin principal Jim Wright. "We felt Coach Culpepper had the wide variety of experience and the right chemistry with people to put Lufkin football back on top."

WORKING CLOSELY with the junior highs, which includes building a weight program, is a primary goal for Culpepper, not only to teach some of his coaching philosophy, but to also get a feel for the players his future teams will rely upon.

"This junior high system is something I was looking for," said Culpepper who had to share players with Midland Lee from the three junior highs. "I want to find out who the quarterbacks are, who the linebackers are, the kickers. I want them to know what is expected and I want to know who's coming. That's the key. There are some fine athletes in this area. They have four starters at the University of Houston from Lufkin."

From the athletic director standpoint, Culpepper hopes to "benefit from a certain amount of control and the ability to deal with the superintendent," he said.

CULPEPPER SPENT four years in Midland, compiling a 17-23 record and came within a coin flip of gaining a state playoff berth in 1982.

"I feel I've given Midland, Texas 100 percent of everything I had and it was time to look for a place that I could do the things I believe in. What can you say about the guys in Midland that hustled and helped us build a weight program so we could win, the Dog Pit.

"Midland is the first community where my wife and I could get to know the people in the community," continued Culpepper. "We'd always been involved with college coaching and the only parents you get to know are the recruit's parents and they don't even live in the community. It's been a wonderful experience meeting the people of Midland.

"The only thing I can say is thank goodness for people like Gil Bartosh (Midland atheltic director) and Dr. Joe Baressi (superintendent of schools), who had patience with a person with unbridled enthusiasms to win. And Jack Stone (former MHS principal) and Dr. Phil Peregrine (MHS principal). Those people have a great deal of patience. They gave me a lot of sound advice on when to slow down, when to back off."

Bartosh, who had been expecting the move, said, "I want to wish him well. I think he did what he thinks is best for him and his family. This wasn't a surprise, we were sort of expecting it because we felt he was the leading candidate for the job in Lufkin. It's probably a great opportunity for him."

CULPEPPER HAS already given some consideration to members of his coaching staff and is considering some of the coaches here in Midland. One, in particular, is Bob Howell.

"I'm going to bring three people in," said Culpepper. "There will be assistants on this staff to evaluate. I'd like to bring Bob Howell in as offensive coordinator. I think he's the best quarterback coach you can hope for.

"I'm also going to try and hire the defenisve coordinator at Cleburne (Culpepper's home town), Jerry Durling, and then I have several other people to talk to for the other coordinator position. I will talk to everybody on this staff from junior high all the way through high school."

To reorganize the Lufkin program, Culpepper was given a two-year contract at $40,000 per year.

Farias, Harmon pound Cougars

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Midland Lee's Felicia Farias and Stacy Harmon scored a combined total of 43 points enroute to a 70-48 District 4-5A girls' basketball victory over Abilene Cooper Thursday night at Lee Gym.

The Rebels were never seriously threatened by Cooper after they took a 16-10 first quarter lead and ran it to 38-21 at the half. Coach Shirley Stephenson's full court press and "if you can call what we run a zone," defense totally baffled the Cougars.

Farias led the game's scorers with a 22-point effort, including 10-of-12 free throws and hauled in six rebounds. The only mar to her performance was her shooting from the field, 7-of-18.

"My shot has been off. It's coming off my hand wrong, but it's coming back" said Farias who has a 17.7 scoring average despite the shooting problem.

Harmon, on the other hand, had few problems with her touch as she hit 8-of-11 field goals and 3-of-5 free throws for her 19 points which bumped her average to 10.9 on the year. She also led the team on the boards with eight rebounds and was credited with three assists.

"I thought they both did a great job," said Stephenson. "I thought everybody did a great job. We played a good game against a good team."

Bobcats Tracy Scott and Rhonda Hays led their team's scoring attack with 18 and 10 points respectively.

THE REBELS are now 7-1 in 4-5A play and are on the downhill side of their season schedule. Downhill only in the fact that Cooper is the first team the Rebels have faced in the second half of the season. Ahead, on Monday, is a return engagement with Midland High followed one week down the road against the only to mar Lee's perfect 4-5A record: San Angelo.

"Our whole team was off that night," said Fariais about the 57-49 setback. "I don't think anybody was playing good. We'll be ready for them next time."

The difference between then and now?

"We're playing great," said Farias. "We've come a long way. We've been working on our passing and it's getting a lot better."

With Midland High the next team on the schedule, the Rebs have to continue their recent play because, "we know how hard we have to play every ball game," said Stephenson. "We've got to strive to do our best. Midland High is next and they have a good team."

IF THE varsity matchup between Lee and Cooper was a little dull because of the one-sidedness, then the JV game was a smashing success.

After trailing 12-6 in the first quarter and 30-17 at the half, the Little Rebels rallied to score a 55-53 victory on a Fonda Fields buzzer shot. Fields finished the night with eight points while Candace Morney led the team with 12. For Cooper, Debra Nobles scored 16 and Angela Simpson 15.

MHS, AHS vie for 4-5A first

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Midland High, Abilene High and Odessa Permian are currently tied for first place in the District 4-5A boys' basketball standings at 4-1. One, and possibly two, of those teams will fall into a hunter role.

Of the three teams, Permian is the one most likely to win, facing 0-5, 2-19 Big Spring. The Steers have played no one in the league close and the front-running Panthers should be no exception.

That leaves MHS and AHS, opponents at Chaparall Center tonight at 8 p.m, two teams that like to run with each having a good chance at coming out on top.

"We think it's going to be a big ball game," said Bulldog head coach Jack Stephenson. "They play just like Hobbs, New Mexico. They run and press and shoot. They've played some good people this year and have been pretty successful so we feel like it should be quite a contest."

Maybe a no holds barred, fight to the finish like the Bulldogs have encountered in their last three outings. After an easy time against Big Spring, Midland High has survived successive encounters with Abilene Cooper, 65-61; Odessa High, 65-63, and San Angelo, 72-70 in overtime.

"I think this will help us along the way," said Stephenson about the close-call victories. "When we had to do things, it seems we were able to do them."

Abilene High has a spread out offensive attack that's led by Tom Simmons with a 15.4 4-5A average and Kirk Robinson at 12.6.

"Simmons is their leading scorer and he's a real good player," said Stephenson. "He's kind of like Joe Terry from Odessa High. Abilene's next best player is Kirk Robinson. They play a lot of people like we do do and they press and run. I think it'll be a pretty fun basketball game."

Midland High will be countering the AHS shooting with a three-player inside-outside attack.

Chris Rooker, at 16.4, is the third best scorer in the district and has a soft touch from the outside.

Kenneth Johnson, who plays inside tough and isn't afraid of going up from long range, is hitting at a 13.8 click while Darrell Davis slams around underneath the bucket for an 11.4 average.

Elsewhere in the 4-5A, Midland Lee travels to Abilene Cooper and San Angelo is at Odessa High.

LEE'S REBELS are coming off an easy 62-30 victory over Big Spring, but the Cougars aren't Steers and they know how to play a good game. They have two of the league's top scorers and those two players are enough to worry any coach.

"Well, they have real good outside shooting," said Lee head coach Paul Stueckler. "I think Bob Estes is a premier outside shooter and zone buster. I think he and Midland High's Chris Rooker are the two best shooters in the league.

"Joe Melson likes to shoot about a 15-foot jump shot left handed. He plays the low post and likes to break outside and shoot."

Estes is the 4-5A's top scorer this year with an 18.8 average while Melson is fifth on the list at 15.8.

Defensively, the Cougars like to "mix it up," said Stueckler. "They play a 2-1-2 zone part of the time and man-to-man part of the time."

Lee, too, is fond of pressure defense and has been known to fall into a zone now and then.

Offensively, Lee is paced by two-year starters Alvin Henry with a 13.8 average while Derek Westbrook is just in double figures at 10.0

"It will be a typical game for us," said Stueckler. "If we can win this one, it would sure mean a lot to us."

Especially in the standings. The Rebs have moved into a tie with San Angelo for fifth place at 2-3 and can gain some ground on the leader(s) with a victory.

Lady Bulldogs clobber Abilene

ABILENE — Midland High may have trailed Abilene High 15-14 at the end of the first quarter Thursday night, but the Eagles' dream of victory was a short-lived one as the Bulldogs dominated the second and fourth quarters for a 61-45 District 4-5A girls basketball victory.

The Bulldogs outscored the Eagles 14-7 in the second frame to build a 28-22 halftime lead; increased it to 44-37 after three and won the final quarter by a 17-8 count.

OJ Johnson, Denise Lanz and Deidra Knapp each scored 14 points to lead the Bulldogs to victory while Lisa Williams scored 15 and Trena Jackson 11 in the losing cause.

Midland High, now 5-3, 14-8 on the year, hosts Midland Lee at 8 p.m. Monday night. Abilene High fell to 1-7, 7-14, with the defeat.

In junior varsity action, AHS scored a 36-35 victory over the Bulldogs.

ELSEWHERE IN District 4-5A, San Angelo pounded hapless Odessa High 63-31 while Odessa Permian snuck by Big Spring, 52-51.

The Panthers, tied with Midland High for third at 5-3, had to overcome a Big Spring lead in the third quarter and finally did so in the fourth, 48-47 on a pair of free throws by Carolyn Gibbs with 2:22 remaining and then held on to win.

Sheree Itz with 14 points and Laura Bartlett with 13 set the pace for Permian scorers while Monette Wise pumped in 16 and Debra Rubio 15 for Big Spring.

For San Angelo a 21-4 first quarter followed by a 20-2 second built a margin Odessa High came no where near touching as the Bronchos, winless in eight 4-5A outings, managed to recover only five points in the final two periods.

Monica Bradley led the Bobcats with 15 points while Anita Algood added 11. Fawn Cox was the only OHS player in double figures.

Badgers slip by Chaps, 54-52

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Amarillo College held the lead for just two seconds Monday night, but it was long enough to beat Midland College, 54-52, at Al Langford Chaparral Center Monday night.

A couple of free throws with two seconds to go by 6-6 Andrew Kennedy, a freshman from Jamaica, gave the Badgers their third Western Junior College Conference victory in six starts.

When 5-9 Mike Sanders popped in a 22-footer with 55 seconds left, it tied it at 52, one of two ties the Badgers enjoyed all night. The other was at 31. Still, after trailing 27-21 at half, Amarillo, while never ahead until the end, kept the pressure on MC throughout the final 20 minutes.

THE 14-5 Badgers, coming off a Monday loss to New Mexico Junior College, patiently waited for the inside shot and it paid off. Kennedy scored 13 of his 17 points in the final half, sinking five of eight from the field, while 6-6 Ignatius Lott scored 12 of his 16 points in the final half on six of seven from the floor.

"We couldn't get out of that slow down tempo. We never could get out of that half court game," said MC Coach Jerry Stone in the wake of one of the lowest scoring Chap games ever at the Center. "I never felt good during this game, even at half. We seemed dead. We played like it was a first game of the season."

"We were trying to play the way we did in the second half in the first half as well," AC Coach Mark Nixon explained. "Only we were tight, unsure, nervous and didn't execute."

He went on, "We shot only 37 per cent in the first half and I told them if we go out and play our normal game, we'll win."

REVIEWING the final seconds, Stone wished he had them to play over. "I'd have made sure that we got the last shot by calling time out. But my philosophy is that lots of times when you call the time out in that situtaton, it just tightens everybody up. Looking back now, I'd have called the time out."

After Sanders' longie that tied it at 52, Jerald Wrightsil took a 10-footer from the baseline. It missed, AC rebounded and called time out with 17 seconds left.

MC committed a sixth foul with five seconds left so that when Kennedy went up for a shot off the pass in, Kennedy was blocked by three players, but drew the one-and-one foul. He converted both and MC had suffered its second league loss in six games and fifth loss in 19 games.

BRIAN ESSARY'S 16 points led MC while 6-11 Teviin Binns scored 12 and Jackie Phinnessee had 10.

When Amarillo's Les Bolden tied it from underneath at 31 with 14:17 left in the second half, Essary came off the bench to hit from the right corner and MC widened that 35-33 lead to 44-38 as Phinnessee spun off the post for two with 9:45 to play. At the time, it looked like the Chaps had weathered the challenge, but the Badgers refused to go away.

AC crept to within two at 48-46 on a Kennedy basket from under the rim with 5:16 left, but Phinnessee scored from the lane and Essary drove the rim off a beautiful feed by Phinnessee for a 52-46 lead with three minutes left. But again AC rallied as Lott scored on a tip at 1:55 and on another inside job at 1:25 to set up the finish.

AC converted 15 of 21 field attempts in the last half while MC made 11 of 18 to finish with 24 of 45 for the night.

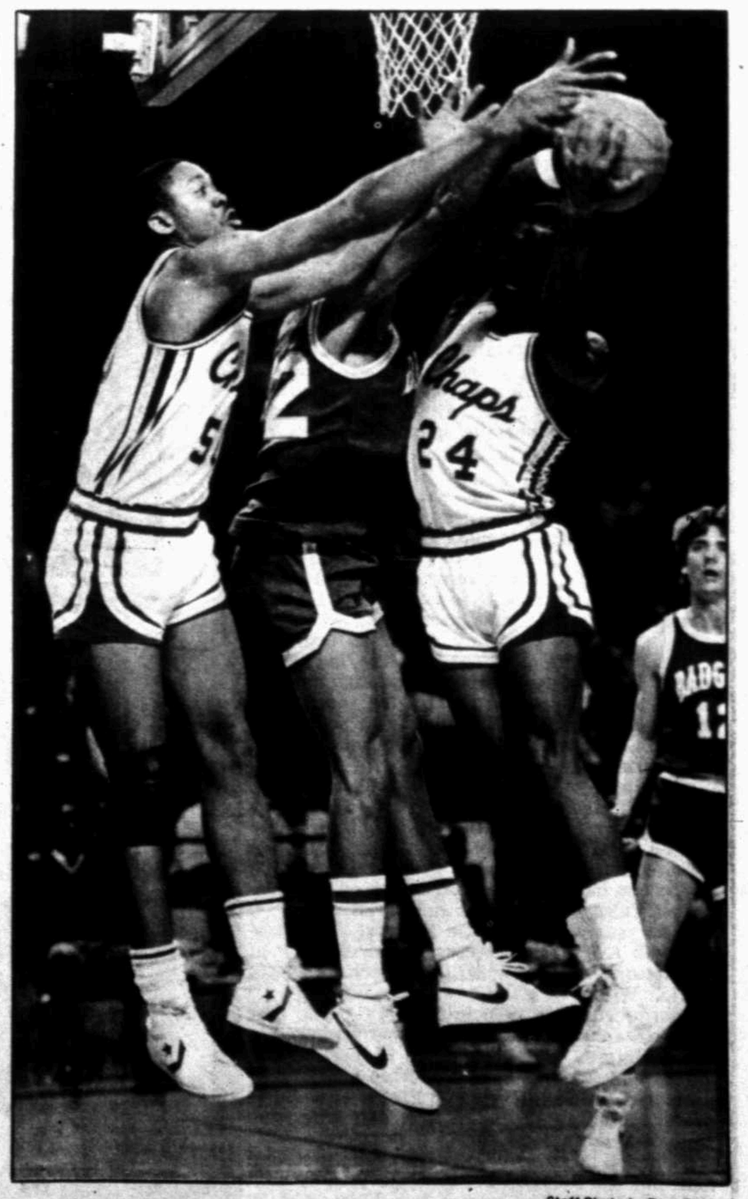

THERE IS no relief in sight for MC Monday when the Chaps travel to Big Spring to play 16-1 and 6-0 Howard College, the WJCC pacesetter.

MC returns home next Thursday to face Frank Phillips College.

Higgins suffers head injury

NEW YORK (AP) — A terrifying head injury to Rod Higgins that resulted in body seizures for several minutes on the basketball court sent the Chicago Bulls forward to the intensive care unit at Lenox Hill hospital.

Higgins, who was carried from the Madison Square Garden court on a stretcher after he fell late in the National Basketball Association game with the New York Knicks, regained consciousness and was admitted to the hospital in stable condition. Knicks physician Dr. Norman Scott said Higgins had a "seizure and concussion" and added that Higgins could stay in the hospital for tests and observation for several days.

"It was a seizure induced by a brain injury," said Chicago trainer Mark Pfeil, who rushed to Higgins' side after the fall. Pfeil added that Higgins had no previous history of seizure problems.

With 3:04 left in the game and the Knicks leading 105-82, Higgins fell after bumping into the Knicks' Marvin Webster. The Bulls' Wallace Bryant, who is 7-foot and 250 pounds, had just missed a dunk attempt and he came down on top of Higgins at the same moment the 6-7 forward fell under Bryant.

Almost immediately, Higgins' legs and body started shaking violently as trainers and doctors rushed on the court.

"We just went through the motions in the last couple of minutes," Webster said. "Basketball just didn't seem important anymore. He was hurt while doing his job. They were fast-breaking and I was in back of him. I bumped him and he started to fall and then Bryant just fell on top of him. It was so scary. It's was the scariest moment I ever felt in my career."

"We were so shocked," Bulls Coach Kevin Loughery said. "Hopefully God will make him better and it will be nothing permanent. It was very sad to see one of your players and your teammate like that on the court. Something like this makes basketball look very small."

None of Higgins teammates wanted to comment.

"They all said a prayer for Rod," Loughery said. "They're shook up and some of them are crying."

UTEP, Tulsa upset victims

By The Associated Press

With the parity in college basketball these days, any team can reasonably expect to beat any other team on any given night. But every team?

Well, it wasn't quite that bad Thursday night, but the fallout will be felt in next week's Top Twenty. The latest casualties included a pair of previously unbeaten teams, fifth-ranked Texas-El Paso and No. 13 Tulsa. Joining them in the loser's circle were No. 11 Oregon State and No. 17 Fresno State.

The only ranked teams to escape were eighth-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas, which crushed Pacific 117-78 in a Pacific Coast Athletic Association contest, and No. 9 UCLA, which trimmed Pac-10 rival California 76-54.

But UTEP succumbed to Colorado State 63-51 in a Western Athletic Conference game, Oregon State was surprised by Washington State 74-65 in Pac-10 action, Tulsa — the only Top Twenty team to lose at home — bowed to Illinois State 79-73 in a Missouri Valley Conference contest and Fresno State fell to UC-Irvine 63-57.

Top Ten

Junior center Mike Gray scored 14 of his 19 points in the second half as Colorado State handed Texas-El Paso its first setback of the season after 15 victories. The Rams used a tenacious defense and slow-paced attack in the first half to keep the powerful Miners at bay, although the score was tied 23-23 at the intermission.

In the second half, Gray began his heroics, hitting a series of short jump shots against the smaller UTEP front line.Colorado State, which had been horrible from the foul line this season, hit 20 of 26 free throws in the second half, including 18 of 24 in the final 6½ minutes.

The Rams got 12 points apiece from Scott Mann and Todd Benn, while Rich Strong and John Dudley chipped in 10 apiece. UTEP's Fred Reynolds, seeing the most action since he hurt his back three weeks ago, was the only Miner in double figures with 12.

Tony McAndrews called the triumph "the biggest win of my coaching career at Colorado State."

"It's a tremendous feeling beating the No. 5 team in the nation," said Dudley. "This shows us that on a given night we can play with any one."

Jeff Collins scored 24 points and Richie Adams added 18 in UNLV's rout of Pacific.All 11 players scored at least five points for the fast-breaking Rebels as Pacific suffered its worst PCAA loss ever.Collins, a 6-foot-2 guard, scored five times on slam dunks.

Center Stuart Gray scored 16 points and had a career-high 14 rebounds to lead UCLA over California.Gary Maloncon scored 12 points and Kenny Fields and Ralph Jackson added 10 apiece for the Bruins. UCLA has won 49 straight games from Cal beginning with the 1961 season.The Bruins used a 16-3 burst to open a 30-13 lead and shot 65.5 percent in the first half to Cal's 22.6.

Second Ten

Guard Chris Winkler scored 18 points and forward Ricky Brown added 17 to pace Washington State over Oregon State. Washington State led 53-51 with 6:04 left, but point guard Keith Morrison hit six free throws in the final two minutes to give the Cougars a cushion.

Guard Michael McKenny scored 26 points — 8-of-11 from the floor, 9-of-11 from the foul line — to help Illinois State stun Tulsa and take the lead in the MVC.The Redbirds, 12-3, led throughout the first half, once by as much as nine points. But Tulsa, 15-1, stormed back to tie the game 35-35 at the intermission.

After hitting the first basket of the second half, Tulsa, the nation's highest scoring team, was blanked for five minutes while Illinois State poured in 11 points. Nor did it help any when Tulsa center Bruce Vanley was ejected early in the second half for a flagrant foul. Herbert Johnson led Tulsa with 15 points and 15 rebounds.

"Last year we started the Missouri Valley season with five straight victories and ended it at the bottom," said Illinois State Coach Bob Donewald. "Where we stand now means nothing."

George Turner's 17 points led UC-Irvine past Fresno State and three other Anteaters scored in double figures — Bob Thornton 15, Ben McDonald 13 and Todd Murphy 10.Irvine consistently pressured the ball, forcing 18 Fresno State turnovers, including 13 in the first half when the Anteaters took a 34-24 lead.

Irvine led by as many as 12 points in the second half, but the Bulldogs cut the lead to 59-57 with 1:02 left. But Murphy hit two free throws with 22 seconds left and Turner added a last-second dunk.

Bruins slug to 4-3 win over Nordiques

By The Associated Press

When the Boston Bruins and Quebec Nordiques meet on the ice, things usually heat up.

The Bruins have "a definite dislike for these guys," Boston's Craig MacTavish says of the Nordiques. "A lot of their players carry their sticks unnecessarily high, but I'm sure they feel the same about us."

So Thursday night, both National Hockey League teams were out for blood as usual — and the Bruins managed to scrape out a 4-3 victory.

"We were one point behind Buffalo and we wanted to be back in first place, but probably just as important they (the Nordiques) clobbered us in the last two games and had beaten us the last three times," said Boston defenseman Gord Kluzak. "It definitely was the most important game this year."

In the other NHL games, it was Philadelphia 2, New Jersey 0 and Montreal 3, Hartford 2.

NHL

Kluzak scored a goal and two assists as the Bruins took a 3-0 first-period lead and survived a Quebec comeback in the contest at Boston.

After the Bruins charged in front on goals by MacTavish, Rick Middleton and Kluzak, the Nordiques cut the lead to 3-2 on second-period goals by Peter Stastny and Bo Berglund.

But Boston regained control on Greg Johnston's first NHL goal at 7:45 of the third period. The goal proved to be the game-winner when Quebec's Michel Goulet scored his 36th goal with 4:54 left in the game.

"You're waiting for it," Johnston said of his first goal, "and when it comes it's just great. It's not as tough (to fit in with the Bruins) as you think because they are such a high-caliber team, they can cover up for you."

Flyers 2, Devils 0

In Philadelphia, goals by Ross Fitzpatrick and Ilkka Sinisalo and the goaltending of Bob Froese carried the Flyers over New Jersey.

The third-place Flyers outshot the Devils 44-15, but could only beat goalie Ron Low twice.

Froese picked up his first shutout of the season and fifth of his career. Ironically, he has blanked only New York-area teams: the Devils and Islanders twice, the Rangers once.

Canadians 3, Whalers 2

In Hartford, Bobby Smith and Craig Ludwig scored goals 65 seconds apart in the second period to give Montreal its victory over the Whalers.The victory was Montreal's fifth in five games against the Whalers this season and snapped a three-game losing streak.

Hogs beat 'Horns

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Scott Rose sank two free throws with five seconds left to secure Arkansas' 70-66 victory over Texas in a regionally televised Southwest Conference basketball game Thursday night.

The Razorbacks, who are 14-2 for the season and 5-0 in the conference, played the first half as expected against the Longhorns, 4-11 for the season and 0-4 in the SWC.

Arkansas quickly overcame an early 5-4 Texas lead, scoring eight points on five Texas turnovers and building a 19-5 lead with 11:40 left. At one point during the Razorback rally, Texas missed five straight shots.

Texas woke up midway through the period and was able to match Arkansas shooting, but could draw no closer than 15 points and trailed at intermission 45-27.

But Texas' inspired defense held Arkansas to six field goals in the second half and the Longhorns rallied behind forward Carlton Cooper who blocked four shots and scored 16 points in the half.

Alvin Robertson led Arkansas scorers with 23 points, all but five of them in the first half. Joe Kleine, the Razorbacks' leading scorer and rebounder, was held to 15 points and eight rebounds, below his average of 20.5 points a game and 10 rebounds.

Cooper led Texas with 23 points and Karl Willock added 18.

Your best choice may be a minor emergency clinic . . .

This recent news article points out the advantages of minor emergency clinics, advantages which are available to you at Midland Minor Emergency Center and Westwood Medical Clinic.

Midland Minor Emergency Center
2310 W. Ohio
9 AM-10 PM Everyday

Westwood Medical Clinic
4334 W. Illinois
9 AM-6 PM Mon.-Fri.

Freestanding emergency centers: Usually located in shopping malls or other busy commercial areas and open for long hours, weekends and holidays — times when most private doctors are not available — these walk-in/walk-out facilities are a combination hospital emergency room and private doctor's office.

Of the 900 centers now open around the country, all treat cuts, sprains, fractures, burns and other minor emergencies. Some also treat flu and childhood diseases and give checkups for school and college. All centers have diagnostic equipment right on the premises.

You don't have to make an appointment at one of these centers, and usually you don't have to wait long.

Costs are comparable to those for an office visit in the communities in which they're located, but they're substantially less than the costs for hospital emergency-room visits (see box).

COST COMPARISONS

Condition	Hospital ER	Emergency Centers
Simple arm fracture	$157	$80
Influenza with fever	$159	$48
Arm laceration requiring suturing	$133	$75
Upper respiratory infection, bronchitis	$136	$42

Laker slump continues

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

A fast break in need of a tuneup is keeping the Los Angeles Lakers from winning as often as the teams that won two of the last four National Basketball Association championships.

The Lakers still lead the Pacific Division by percentage points after Thursday night's 138-123 loss to Phoenix, but six losses in their last 11 outings and a 24-15 overall record is not what Los Angeles has come to expect.

"We're not as good as we were at this time last year," Lakers Coach Pat Riley said. "If there's one problem, it's that we don't fast break the way we used to. I'm trying to use the hounds — (Bob) McAdoo, (Michael) Cooper and (Magic) Johnson — and it's not happening. We have to fit the pieces back together and make it come together again."

Elsewhere in the NBA, New York defeated Chicago 109-92 and Golden State edged Portland 107-103.

Los Angeles committed 14 of its 26 turnovers in the second half, while the Suns notched nine of their 16 steals in that same span.

"We came apart," Riley said. "Phoenix really became the aggressor and it was a combination of them rattling us and their pursuit of the ball. Hey, we're still in first place, so I'm not overly concerned. We'll lose battles along the way, but we're still in the war."

"We need to put some kind of consistency together," said Johnson, who had 13 points and 12 assists for the Lakers. "We're definitely not breaking much. It starts with defense."

Phoenix, a perennial playoff team that has struggled to an 18-22 record this season, won its sixth straight home game.

"We thought if we could slow them down, we had a good shot of beating them. They probably have one of the best running teams in the NBA," Suns Coach John MacLeod said. "I told our guys to hustle back faster on defense in the second half and try to stop their break and things worked out well for us."

The score was tied 28 times — including 36-36 after the first quarter and 69-69 at halftime — before the Suns took control midway through the third period.

Consecutive baskets by Walter Davis, James Edwards and Maurice Lucas put Phoenix ahead to stay at 89-83. Davis and Edwards both had three-point plays in a one-minute span to make it 94-89 and the Suns scored the final six points of the period for a 102-91 bulge.

Phoenix coasted in the fourth quarter, leading by as many as 21 points down the stretch.

Lucas and Kyle Macy each finished with 19 points for the Suns, while Alvan Adams and Edwards both had 18 and Davis 15.

The Lakers got 23 points from James Worthy, 22 from Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and 20 from Jamaal Wilkes.

Knicks 109, Bulls 92

Bernard King hit all 11 of his field-goal attempts against Chicago and dominated the second and third periods with 29 of his 31 points in a game marred by a head injury to Bulls forward Rod Higgins.

Higgins suffered seizures on the Madison Square Garden court when he fell on his head with 3:04 left in the game after bumping into the Knicks' Marvin Webster. The Bulls' Wallace Bryant missed a dunk attempt and he came down on top of Higgins at the same moment the 6-7 forward fell under Bryant.

King scored only two points in the first period, when he played less than two minutes because of foul trouble. The Knicks built a 30-18 lead while King sat on the bench, and he returned to score 17 points in the second period to help New York pull ahead 60-45 at halftime.

King had 12 points in the third period when the Knicks opened a 97-70 margin. Bill Cartwright added 21 points for New York and Orlando Woolridge led the Bulls with 19.

Warriors 107, Blazers 103

At Oakland, Mickey Johnson put Golden State ahead for good with a three-point play with 16 seconds remaining against Portland.

Two free throws by Kenny Carr put the Trail Blazers ahead 103-102 with 1:04 left, but he fouled Johnson as the Warrior forward hit a 20-foot jumper. Johnson's free throw made it 105-103 and Lester Connor got Golden State's last two points on free throws with seven seconds left.

Portland, which got 22 points from Jim Paxson, had rallied to make the game close after trailing by 11 points early in the fourth period. Purvis Short scored 20 of his 31 points in the third quarter to help Golden State get the lead.

Skins rate three-point pick

By ANDREW BEYER
The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

A year ago, when the Redskins faced Dallas and Miami in the playoffs, the smart money was on Washington.

Handicappers for top sports-advisory services agreed that the Redskins were underdogs in both games only because their opponents were teams that the public has traditionally loved to bet. It was a classic situation: the best team was getting points.

But a lot has changed between that game and Super Bowl XVIII, in which the Redskins are three-point favorites over the Los Angeles Raiders.

"The betting line is wrong," declared Rich Bomze, publisher of the Sports Reporter, one of the handicappers who loved the Redskins last season. "Washington was only a two-point favorite at home against L.A. this fall when the Raiders had a lot of key players out. This game ought to be pick-'em. The oddsmakers are making you pay for betting the new America's team."

The Super Bowl teams figure so close that professional handicappers and bettors have difficulty formulating a strong opinion on the game. "The public's interest is very strong because these are popular teams," said Las Vegas handicapper Russell Culver, "but there haven't been any overwhelming moves by the wise guys here. There's a good chance they may bet more on the UCLA basketball game the same day."

Super Bowl

EVEN THOUGH it may be tough to pick a winner, the proprietors of sports services are obliged to tell their clients something. For the most part, the handicappers are telling them to bet Washington, judiciously:

— Jim Feist of National Sports Services in Las Vegas: "The biggest statistic in the game is the turnover ratio in favor of the Redskins, and their consistency should be the major factor. But if this weren't the Super Bowl, I would pass the game."

— Bomze: "The Redskins have got consistency, character and a recent winning tradition, and I like Theismann over Plunkett. But I'm telling people that laying three points is a sucker play; they shouldn't bet too heavy."

— Ron Lowe of Washington's Capital Sports Service: "I like the 'Skins because of the quarterback matchup. Plunkett's an immobile quarterback and the Redskins feast on immobile quarterbacks."

— Steve Turner of the Texas Sports Wire: "I'll take the Raiders; I think their secondary gives them an edge and I think their line can play with the Hogs. But if this were the regular season, I'd have no opinion."

HANDICAPPERS IN Las Vegas who have trouble picking a winner of the Super Bowl still have plenty of opportunities for action. That city's bookmakers are offering a potpourri of "proposition bets" on every phase of the game.

Will there be more or fewer than two fumbles lost in the game? Will there be more or fewer than three field goals? Which team will lead in time of possession? You can lay 11 to 10 and bet on any of these propositions.

You can lay $1.40 to $1 and take the Raiders plus half a point in the first quarter. You can lay $1.55 to $1 and bet that John Riggins will carry the ball fewer than 28 1-2 times. ("The sharpies really came in on that one," a Las Vegas source said.)

The most popular and widespread form of special wagering is on "totals" — the total number of points scored in a game. The line on the Super Bowl is 48 1-2, and the handicappers surveyed are inclined to think the total will go over that number. "Normally in a Super Bowl, teams are inclined to be conservative," Turner said, "but I don't think these teams will. And I think they'll both be able to move the ball."

Feist's major recommendation to his customers will be to bet "over 48 1-2." "Offensive football is in now," he said, "and these are two of the best offenses in years. I don't feel any defense can contain these offenses, and I suspect the total on this game will go into the 60s, maybe even the 70s. I will recommend a bet on the over for business, and a bet on Washington for entertainment."

The body of a striking Union Oil Co. refinery worker lies covered, left, after he was killed when he was run over by a tanker truck which tried to "highball through the picket line" Thursday night in Rodeo, Claif., union officials said. To the right is the tanker truck which killed the striking worker, indentified as Greg Coobic, 20.

Oil strike turns bloody

RODEO, Calif. (AP) — A striking worker at a Union Oil Co. refinery was run over and killed when an independent tanker truck tried to "highball through the picket line" Thursday night in the strike's second violent act in two days, union officials said.

Contra Costa County sheriff's department officers confirmed the death and said the driver of the truck was being held for questioning. The name of the driver, who was not a Union Oil employee, was not released.

Dozens of striking workers gathered at the union hall after the accident, and a union official said he was "trying to keep it from getting too mobbish."

The victim was identified by the union as Greg Goobic, 20. He was crushed by the truck as he stood at the main gate of the refinery with another picket, Paul Griffith, 19, according to Sheriff's Lt. John Gackowski.

The driver "went for both of us," Griffith told reporters. "I barely jumped out of the way. The next thing I saw was Greg's tennis shoes. Then I saw Greg roll over."

Griffith may have been the only eyewitness, Gackowski said. A sheriff's deputy, patrolling the area, apparently was not at the gate when the incident occurred, but reported it minutes later.

John Billecci, recording secretary of the union, said Goobic "was run over by a truck trying to highball through the picket line."

The strikers were especially angry Thursday night at refinery manager Bill Stark, who had met with union officials at the sheriff's office earlier in the day and "assured us that all vehicles would stop" for the strikers, Billecci said.

Later, "when (the strikers) saw the refinery manager standing in (Goobic's) blood, it was really upsetting," Billecci said. "They came back with tears in their eyes. They said he was just standing there, staring down the strikers with his arms crossed and his feet in the blood.

"They're angry and they want to do something, but we're telling people to just go home. ... We're trying to keep it from getting too mobbish."

Goobic was a trainee in the operations division at Union Oil, Billecci said.

"He's only been here since last March, trying to earn some money to go back to school," Billecci said.

VCR sales expected to soar higher

Hearst Feature Service

Sales of video cassette recorders, already soaring above all early expectations, are expected to get even better as a result of the U.S. Supreme Court ruling that home recording is legal. "There's a certain amount of the public that was waiting to buy a VCR until it was clear whether or not it was illegal," said Jack Wayman, senior vice president of the Electronic Industries Association in Washington, a trade group that represents the video recorder manufacturers.

The EIA estimates there are already about 10 million VCRs in the 83.5 million U.S. television homes, and 6 million more will be sold during 1984. Sales last year approached $2 billion, with 4.1 million VCRs sold, compared to 2.2 million in 1982 and 1.4 million in 1981.

"Now that the legal cloud has been lifted, we expect an even greater boost in sales," continued Wayman. "And we anticipate the notoriety from the case – articles in newspapers and on TV – will interest a lot of people who aren't quite sure what a video recorder is. Now they'll know, and some of them will buy one as a result."

In a 5-4 decision that took almost two years to reach, the Supreme Court said it is legal to tape a program and to watch it at a later time. It also ruled that a video recorder manufacturer like Sony cannot be held liable if its machines are used to violate copyright laws.

Kenji Tamiya, president of the Sony Corp. of America, immediately hailed it as a "landmark decision" and an "important victory for consumers." In a prepared statement, he said that it shows the court agreed that the primary uses for the video recorder are to time-shift (see shows at a later time) and to make home movies, and not simply to record copyright programs.

This resolves a case first brought in California in 1978 by two Hollywood studios, Universal and Disney, against Sony, which was the first to market a video recorder in the U.S. However, both sides said the war is far from over. The case now will move to Congress, where lawmakers have been waiting for the high court to rule, and into lower federal courts, where there are still related issues pending.

Bush pledges resistance to trade protection pressures

By The Los Angeles Times - Washington Post New Service

WASHINGTON — Vice President George Bush Thursday pledged that the Reagan administration will continue to resist domestic pressures for more trade protection, which he said "are mounting" as a result of policies being pushed by Democratic presidential candidates.

But he also acknowledged, in answer to a question, that President Reagan granted additional trade protection to America's textile industry last month because of a commitment "made in our campaign for election four years ago."

"We have some areas where we are something less than pure in terms of free trade. Textiles is one of them," Bush said in the keynote address to a conference on Economic Interdependence and the future of World Trade sponsored by the International Herald Tribune and Trade Net.

He suggested that Reagan, who bowed to pressure from the industry in overruling most of his key advisers, may impose greater curbs on textile imports in order to keep his campaign pledge to protect American markets from surges of foreign textiles.

William A. Niskanen Jr., a member of the President's Council of Economic Advisers who opposed the textile curbs, told the conference's luncheon session that the industry demanded the protection despite increased sales last year.

"Good times apparently do not reduce the demands for protection," said Niskanen, one of the leading free trade advocates in the White House.

While defending administration moves to protect the American textile industry, Bush attacked "some who want to replace President Reagan" — his euphemism for the Democrats — for pushing labor-supported domestic content legislation designed to limit U.S. imports of Japanese cars. The bill passed the House of Representatives last year and is due to come before the Senate this year.

"That is not the right course, but in an election year it is the popular course," he said.

Bush said the election-year "siren's call for protectionism" appears to be going on despite the economic recovery and declining unemployment, which he said should "diminish the temptation" to install barriers to free trade, especially in the Congress.

Niskanen echoed that view, calling 1984 a "most dangerous" year for free trade because a growing number of American industries are preparing unfair trade cases timed so they will come up for a presidential decision within two months of the November election.

Noting that "most of the Democratic candidates have endorsed some measure of increased trade restraint," Niskanen said Reagan will face political pressure from American industry and labor this year to go along with their demands for trade protection.

Bush also cited protectionist pressures as a good reason for Japan to open its markets to American products, suggesting the $25 billion U.S. trade deficit with that country could be cut "by selling more to Japan and by opening markets, and not by enacting laws that would protect and thus, inevitably, shrink markets."

The vice president has been assigned to follow up on commitments made by Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone during Reagan's visit to Tokyo last year that would make it easier for American goods to be sold in Japan.

But a Japanese businessman hinted that Nakasone may be unable to keep all his commitments on trade because of his election setback in November. "Nakasone may not be too strong in responding to U.S. wishes to fulfill the promises he made to President Reagan," said Mamoru Tabuchi, executive managing director of the Mitsui & Co. (U.S.A.) trading company.

Moreover, Bush's agenda is growing, with U.S. trade experts reporting new areas of high technology running into Japanese trade barriers. These include Japan's continued refusal to buy American satellites and new limits on trade in high techology where the United States now has a competitive advantage.

Also pending is a full extension of an agreement to open Japan's booming telecommunications network to American products, which expired Dec. 31. U.S. trade officials, expressing disappointment with the agreement's first three years, extended it for only 90 days to gain Japanese commitments to buy more sophisticated American telecommunications equipment.

Politicos, consumers join AT&T in criticizing 'access fee' decision

WASHINGTON (AP) — A number of politicians and consumer groups have joined the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. in criticizing a regulatory decision to postpone the payment of telephone "access fees" by consumers.

The Federal Communications Commission, by a unanimous vote, tentatively decided Thursday to put off the fees from this April until the middle of 1985. That will spare consumers from paying an extra $2 a month to their local phone company, but will also scuttle plans for a major reduction in long-distance rates.

The agency said it would take a final vote on the matter next Wednesday, but no changes are expected between now and then.

AT&T, not surprisingly, criticized the move because it wants to reduce its long-distance rates to better compete against firms like MCI Communications and GTE-Sprint. The politicians and consumer groups chimed in for quite different reasons.

"Today's decision provides no certainty to the public that telephone rates will remain reasonable and affordable in the years ahead," said Rep. Timothy E. Wirth, D-Colo., who sponsored a bill passed by the House that would permanently bar residential access fees. "The only certainty it provides is that local residential telephone bills will not be unfairly increased by the FCC before the election this November."

"The action delaying implementation is a blatant political move aimed at thwarting legislative action," agreed Samuel A. Simon, the executive director of the Telecommunications Research and Action Center, a Washington-based public interest group. "Congress should not be fooled into believing this 'problem' has been solved."

While approving a delay to provide time for additional studies "and to better educate the public about the issue," the FCC made it clear it still believes access fees should be introduced.

The monthly charges are called access fees by the FCC because they are tied to the ability of customers to "access" the long-distance phone network. Currently, local phone rates are held down for all customers — including those who don't place long-distance calls — through hidden payments that are built into the rates paid by long-distance callers.

The FCC wants to eliminate that contribution, or subsidy, paid by long-distance callers to encourage competition and discourage large corporations from building their own private phone systems. FCC Chairman Mark S. Fowler warned Thursday such private systems, by siphoning off revenue from local phone companies, would ultimately drive up local rates much more than access charges.

Wirth and Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., who is also sponsoring legislation, counter the FCC plan is unfair because it would spare long-distance callers from making any contribution to hold down local rates.

Citing such concerns, the FCC said it had decided to take most of this year to conduct a study of whether access charges pose a threat to universal phone service. A final decision should be made by December, allowing any fees that are approved to take effect by June 1985, the agency said.

ATTENTION

INVESTORS, ENTREPRENEURS, AND VENTURE CAPITALISTS.

Invest in Connecting Point, a high growth and high tech retail company based in Denver, Colorado. Connecting Point is a national retail chain, opening franchised stores that sell computers, cable television, video, and advanced telecommunications products.

Capitalize and profit on the professional retailing of high growth products in the computer, home entertainment, and telecommunications fields.

A Connecting Point franchise is the perfect way to diversify your investment portfolio into the high growth industries of home computer retailing, cable television, and new telephone services.

We are seeking qualified investors who wish to profit from Connecting Point stores in Midland and Odessa. This unique franchise opportunity requires individuals or groups with at least $150,000 of liquid capital, plus additional financing.

Our Franchise Director will be in Midland and Odessa on January 24, 25, and 28th. Call Todd Jackson at (303) 779-6026 to schedule an appointment. Introductory seminars will be held Tuesday, January 24 at 7:30 p.m. at The Odessa Hilton and Wednesday, January 25 and Thursday, January 26 at 12:00 noon and 7:30 p.m. at The Midland Hilton.

Call today.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices headed lower again today as the market's slump of the past two weeks persisted.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 20.62 points over the last nine sessions, dropped 4.29 to 1,261.73 by noontime today.

Losers held a 5-3 lead over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Malcolm Baldrige, the secretary of Commerce, said today that no meaningful action to reduce the deficit was likely until next year.

The Commerce Department reported this morning that the gross national product grew at an inflation-adjusted annual rate of 4.5 percent in the fourth quarter of last year. That figure matched an earlier "flash" estimate by the department.

International Business Machines led the active list, down 1 at 117⅞ in trading marked by a 1.2 million-share block at 118.

The NYSE's composite index lost .35 to 96.25. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .56 at 227.14.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 42.88 million shares at noontime, against 41.56 million at the same point Thursday.

AT&T breakup can be taxing

By CHET CURRIER
Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — For the 3 million-plus shareowners involved in the breakup of American Telephone & Telegraph Co., deciding on the proper course of action can be a taxing task.

That is true literally as well as figuratively, because the Internal Revenue Service has a keen interest in every step stockholders take as the Bell System completes its metamorphosis into eight separate companies.

In the months ahead, people who owned stock in the old AT&T as of the end of 1983 are due to receive new stock of each of the seven regional companies that are taking over local telephone service.

For each 10 shares of AT&T they have, they will get one share apiece of Ameritech, Bell Atlantic, Bell South, Nynex, Pacific Telesis, Southwestern Bell and U.S. West. They will keep their original AT&T stock, representing a proportional interest in a new, smaller company.

The divestiture plan itself, and new investment vehicles created on Wall Street especially for the occasion, give investors a wide variety of options beyond just sitting back and taking delivery of the new stocks.

They can sell some of the bits and pieces and buy others, either through a broker or directly through AT&T. Or they can exchange their present AT&T stock for one of several telephone unit trusts being offered by Wall Street firms.

Some strategies create "taxable events" — the realization of capital gains or losses that must go onto the investor's tax return for 1984 — and others do not. As investment advisers point out, it makes good sense to take the tax implications of each option into account before deciding how best to proceed.

First of all, AT&T points out, the breakup was effective Jan. 1 of this year. For investors who did not act on their own to sell or exchange AT&T stock last year, therefore, divestiture has no effect on their tax returns for calendar 1983.

In addition, for anyone who simply takes the standard distribution of the new regional stocks, without selling or swapping any of them for others, the breakup is essentially tax-free. In effect, it is treated as though a shareholder has traded in a box of eight stocks for those same eight stocks wrapped separately.

Similarly, swaps of original AT&T for units of telephone trusts are largely tax-free.

Supreme Court decision stymies price-fixing fight

By MARY M. SULLIVAN
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — After losing a battle in its price-fixing suit against 15 major oil companies in the Supreme Court this week, California is now turning its attention to winning the war.

The high court refused to hear a technical question in a case brought by California and four other states that the oil companies had engaged in a price-fixing scheme in which they allegedly forced gas station operators to charge certain prices.

But the entire suit is pending in Federal District Court, Los Angeles, and California is pinning its hopes on a victory there.

The question which the Supreme Court refused to hear was whether the states had the authority to bring the suit on behalf of their citizens, whom they claimed overpaid for gasoline because of the alleged price fixing.

"The (Supreme) Court's refusal means that individual retail consumers are currently unable to recover damages," said Wayne M. Liao, California deputy attorney general. "The decision had a lot of significance."

Attorneys general of California, Arizona, Florida, Oregon and Washington charged that the companies suggested to the dealers what retail prices they should charge, urged them to post those prices and disciplined or put out of business station owners who failed to heed the directives.

The Ninth Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals in California ruled in 1982 that although federal legislation giving the states the authority to represent its citizens in class action suits was passed in 1976, the states alleged the companies' scheme began before then and thus, they could not represent their citizens.

They may bring suit only on behalf of themselves, the appeals court decided. The Supreme Court's refusal to hear the question effectively upheld that ruling.

"We're saying we don't know when the price fixing started but that it continued up to 1977 (when the suit was filed)," Liao said.

He predicted that the whole case will not be heard in Federal Distrct Court, Los Angeles, until next year.

By refusing to hear the question, the Supreme Court made no decision on the veracity of the states' charges.

But Robert Mittelstaedt, a lawyer for Standard Oil Co. of California said, "We certainly did not engage in price fixing."

The oil companies have asserted that antitrust laws did not apply to their practices because of a 1977 Supreme Court decision that excluded purchasers of price-fixed goods from collecting damages when a middleman (in this case, the gas station operators) is involved.

Grant Billingsley

Lynn Hunt

Jaycees honor two Midlanders

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

"Leadership can be lonely, it can be very painful. Leadership can also be compassion, comprehending, caring, acting without fanfare but with certainty: Leadership is overcoming the challenges we face through our own initiative."

With those words U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler ended his speech before the Jaycees 27th Annual Distinguished Service Award banquet. But it also served as a description of the two men honored for their work: Lynn Hunt as Boss of the Year and Grant Billingsley as recipient of the Distinguished Service Award.

The dinner in the Petroleum Club was capped by the awards and Loeffler as guest speaker, who focused on what can be expected from this year's Congress.

Hunt, president of Hufo Oil, told the group after receiving his award, "Before, the only claim to fame I had was I'm the father of a 1-year-old baby girl at the age of 46."

The Distinguished Service Award is given to a man between the ages of 18 and 35. At the age of 30, Billingsley is one of the youngest executive vice presidents of a chamber of commerce in the country. He was cited for his work with the Midland chamber, where he started in 1975.

"He added stability to goals and direction to the chamber," said last year's DSA recipient, Steve Davidson. "The chamber lost its leadership twice in 20 months. It would have been easier for him to have left either time."

In response Billingsley said, "The job I do is one I love. I have an exciting product and it's easy to sell. We'll continue to make Midland one of the best places to be."

Congress will mark down 1984 as a status quo year. More liberal legislation may pass the House and Senate, the president will veto it and the veto will be sustained, predicted Loeffler, who represents Midland in his 21st Congressional District.

The economic recovery will continue, he said, looking back to December 1982 when unemployment hit a high of 10.8 percent. Now it's down to 8.2 percent. Industry was operating at 65 percent of its capacity at the low point of the recession; today it's at 75 percent with room to grow.

"For every 1 percent reduction in unemployment, it's saving the U.S. government $30 billion in expenditures. That's why the deficit fell below what was expected," he said of the $180-plus billion rather than the expected $200-plus billion.

In January 1981, the interest rate was 21.5 percent; today it's 11 percent. And inflation has dropped from double digits down to 4 percent. What Loeffler feels is off-balance is the seven-point spread between inflation and interest rates. Normally, it should be about four points.

While he praised the work of Paul Volcker as chairman of the Federal Reserve in bringing down the interest rates, he blamed those additional points on Congress and its spending tactics.

"For 1983-84, Congress will reflect high taxes and a high spending philosophy," he said.

While the spenders and spendthrifts are expected to battle it out again over the budget, the congressman said he wouldn't be surprised if there isn't a budget resolution passed. And with the election year, he is prepared to see "a Walter Mondale budget, a Jesse Jackson budget, a John Glenn budget and a Ronald Reagan budget. With the parade of budget personalities, Congress won't do anything."

Loeffler taken on CIA tour

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

"This house needed a roof. That house needed a bathroom."

The group remained silent and gazed as the driver pointed out one house after another, the car twisting and turning on the paved to unpaved streets.

"This house was completely rebuilt. The west side was covered with plastic to keep out the wind. A high school group redid the bathroom there."

Each one a different house; each with a similar need met by the same organization.

Bobby Trimble, president of Christmas in April, had put his car in gear on a below-freezing afternoon and punched his now-familiar talk to the "play" position to show U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler what CIA means in Midland. The program, entering its 12th year, has been recognized as a national leader in volunteerism with its goal of rehabilitating houses of elderly homeowners through money and labor donated by local residents.

Last year, a group in Washington, D.C., organized a Christmas in April program fashioned after Midland's. Loeffler and his staff donned old clothes and rolled up their shirt sleeves to work on one man's row house. For the congressman, Wednesday's visit was similar to a fact-finding mission in which he viewed for himself how Midland's CIA operates.

The car pulled up to a green-shingled house at 106 N. Tilden and stopped. As the group piled out of the car, 72-year-old Mrs. L.M. Mack appeared at the door. Loeffler, Trimble and the others settled down inside the warm house and listened as Mrs. Mack described her recent bout with laryngitis and bronchitis.

"Three years ago we put on a new roof. It had leaked so much the sheetrock was falling off inside," Trimble said of the house. It's been on CIA's repair list every spring since 1979 and is scheduled for more work this year.

It's not just the one Saturday in April that these houses get an uplift. "My water froze and I couldn't get a plumber for a week," Mrs. Mack told Trimble.

"Why didn't you call me?" he gently chided her. "I could have gotten one quicker."

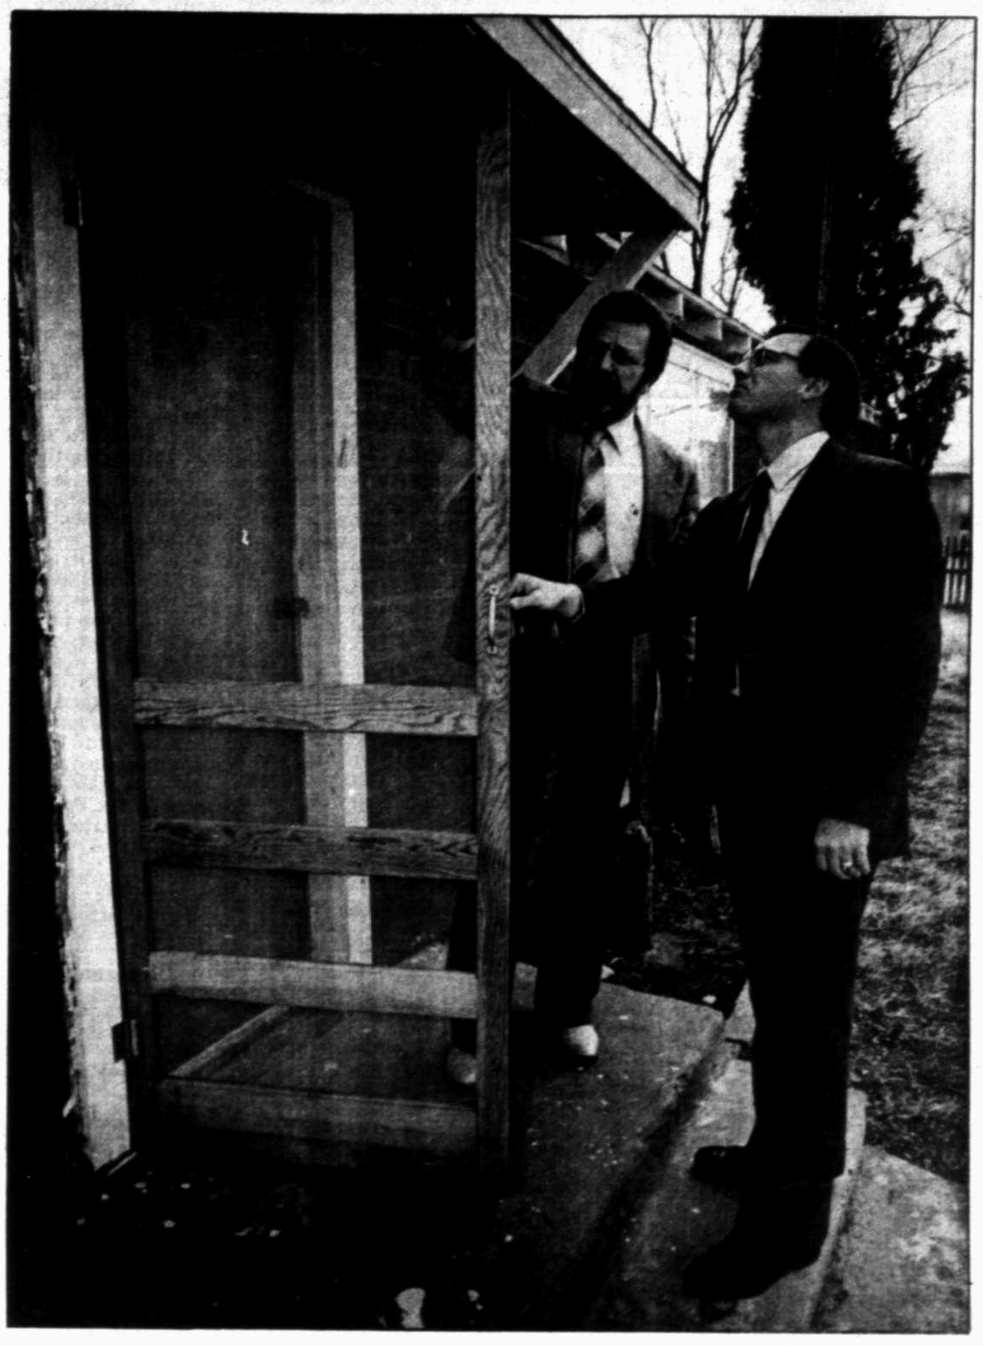

She turned to the congressman. "My house was a mess," Mrs. Mack said of her home which was built on that site in 1946. "I'd never be able to do this work. It had been raining and the sheetrock was falling down over my bed." And her head, she later added.

Trimble walked Loeffler through the house, pointing out repairs and which year they were done. "You can't use aluminum doors on these older houses. You have to take a wooden door and cut it down to fit."

Back at Loeffler's office in the George Mahon Federal Building, the congressman said he wanted to see "what we were a part of last year. People here are going to the aid of those who need help without the government getting involved.

"There's no question these people need help," the congressman said. "Mrs. Mack is a beautiful person. If Washington had been the epitomy of helping others, she wouldn't have needed Christmas in April."

But the government can't help everyone and the Republican administration says it has been trying to make the public realize that, at the same time stressing the need for more volunteer work. Trimble received a national volunteer award two years ago from President Reagan for the CIA program.

Ins and outs

Bobby Trimble, left, shows U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler how to size a screen door to fit an older house. As president of the Christmas in April program, Trimble has sized hundreds of screen doors. He explained the ins and outs of the program Thursday afternoon to Loeffler, who wants to see the program expanded in Washington, D.C.

Trimble already has started seeking donations amounting to $70,000 and labor from 2,500 people to repair to some degree another 130 houses this spring. Through 1983, CIA has worked on 876 projects — some of these houses two or more times.

Loeffler asked questions — where does the money come from, how do they stretch it to do so many things, where do the materials come from, how are volunteers sought? Trimble answered each one.

"I'm going back and talk to the people that ran it last year," Loeffler said of the Capitol city's program. "I hope to get it this big in Washington."

This wasn't the usual trip to Midland for Loeffler — he saw a different side and new faces.

"I gave him the scenic tour," laughed Trimble.

Residents to vote on area's incorporation

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA - The presiding officer isn't talking, but there will be a second election Saturday in Ector County.

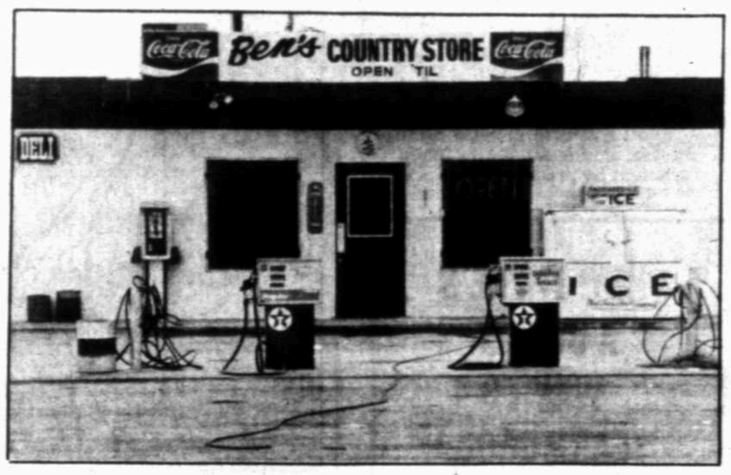

A smaller turnout is expected at Ben's Country Store, where neighbors will vote on whether their unincorporated area should become the town of Dale, than at the 31 polling places in Odessa where voters will decide whether to rollback the tax rates of their county and school district.

Confusion surrounds the Dale election, which is to be held in a horse trailer outside Ben's Country Store in a remote area of the county west of Midland on Andrews Highway.

Dwayne Hamilton, the man who obtained the 20 signatures necessary to call the election, is not helping the situation. Hamilton, a Midland businessman in oil exploration, refused to talk to The Reporter-Telegram.

The area has no industry and few buildings. Straddling Ector and Midland County, little more than the 200 residents required for incorporation live within the 2-mile strip which may be a city as a result of Saturday's polling.

Odessa attorney John "Buddy" Rogers, who lives where Dale may be, explained that the name "Dale" was chosen in memorial to a 13-year-old boy who died six years ago at the county line of asphyxiation while repairing his pick-up.

Staff Photo by Cody Bell

The calm of Ben's Country Store will be interrupted Saturday as area residents come to this isolated store on Andrews Highway west of Midland to vote on the proposed incorporation of the 2-mile strip straddling Ector and Midland County that would be called Dale.

THE LAST NAME of the boy is also shrouded in mystery. "I don't think his family wants it known," said Rogers.

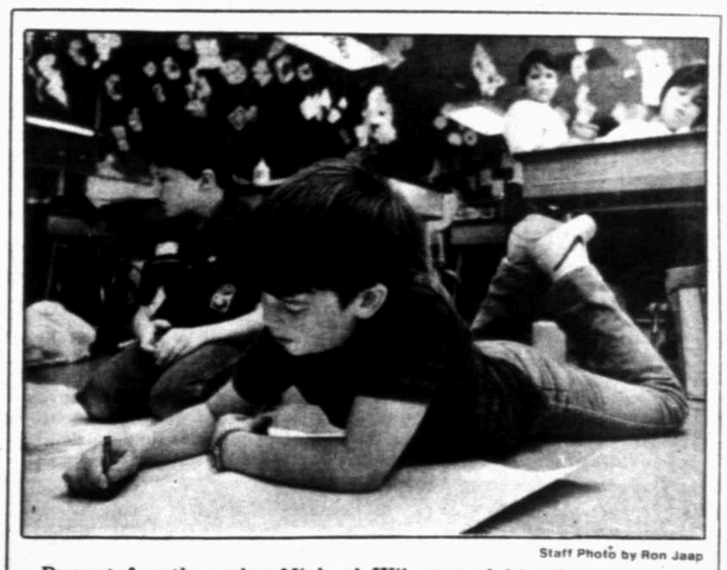

More importantly, people of the proposed town are largely unaware what Saturday's election could mean.

D.R. McCraw, who along with his wife signed the petition, said he knew there would be an election Saturday, but was unsure what it all meant.

"That's what I understand and I don't know any more about it than you do," said McCraw. "I think a lot of people are in the dark. I'm in the dark as far as that goes."

Ector County Judge Jan Fisher, who called the election after approving the petition, said "Mr. Hamilton never expressed the reason to me." She also noted that, contrary to tradition, Dale may be incorporated before it is a commonly recognized community.

Burnet fourth-grader Michael Wilson and his classmates are making posters and various other projects to cheer up patients at Parkview Hospital.

Program 'Pick-Me-Up' for students, patients

From Staff Reports

Caring for the sick is not a task performed solely by the medical profession. Two of the accelerated fourth grade classes at Burnet Elementary School are aiding patients at Parkview Hospital in what has been appropriately named the "Pick-Me-Up" program.

Along with their teacher, Katie Steele, the 60 students will complete a different project each week for hospital patients. Posters, get-well cards and meal-tray favors are some of the things the children will design.

"The kids get such a big kick out of it," Ms. Steele said, adding that they overwhelmingly voted to undertake the project for one or two hours a week. Last year her students corresponded with residents of an Arkansas nursing home.

"They get the feeling of helping another person. Last year, with the pen pals, when the kids got the letters back and realized they had made somebody happy, it really made them feel good. A lot of them don't realize how lucky they are, and this helps them to see how lucky they are."

Once a month student projects will be judged by hospital personnel, and the top three entries will be voted on by the patients. The winner will be awarded a pizza donated by Godfather's Pizza or Big Cheese Pizza. After judging, the nominee's projects will be displayed in the hospital lobby.

In the spring, Burnet third graders plan to get involved in the program as well.

"We are so pleased that the administration and these wonderful kids at Burnet have agreed to work with us on this program," commented hospital administrator Dick Lilley. "We all agree that the students will learn a valuable lesson from it — the importance of helping others and, in return, helping themselves."

Involuntary wage assignment no 'magic wand'

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Even with the recent passage of involuntary wage assignment for child support, the parent delinquent in payments can remain on stage as the ugly ogre while the parent with custody of the children stands helplessly by, the stereotypical damsel in distress.

"I'd like to say I can wave a magic wand and make him pay," Nancy Oseasohn, attorney with the child support enforcement division of the Texas Attorney General's office said. "But nobody can make him pay."

Speaking at a Thursday night meeting of Parents Without Partners, Ms. Oseasohn said the only way the kingdom will be restored to order is with the cooperation of judges, district and country attorneys. And when that isn't provided, her recommendation is the dungeon.

Since the constitutional amendment was approved by voters last November, a parent who is two months behind in court-ordered child support payments can have a third of his take-home wages docked from his paycheck for child-support purposes.

But before that is possible, a hearing has to take place, the district judge must find there is cause to serve papers on him, the papers must be served to him and his employer and another court hearing must be held.

IF ATTEMPTS to locate him, serve the papers and make the payments are not made by the proper officials, the process disappears in a puff of smoke.

"Involuntary assignment simply gives the court an additional tool in enforcing (court-ordered child support)," Ms. Oseasohn said. "It doesn't get the man served, it doesn't get him in court and it doesn't get him to support the children."

Admitting her speech is "sexist," Ms. Oseasohn explained her bias stems from the large number of the cases she handles involving a woman with custody and a man delinquent in child support payments.

Although many judges are reluctant to find a man in contempt of court for not paying child support, stating he can't work while in jail and everyone loses, Ms. Oseasohn disagrees.

If the man wasn't paying child support while he was working, it won't make any difference to his children if he's not paying while he serves a jail sentence. But it may make a difference to him.

"I want the jail confinement experience to be so obnoxious and unpleasant that he'll do anything to avoid it, including coughing up some money," she said. "And whether he coughs up the money or not, he should be punished for disobeying the court order (to pay child-support) in the first place."

SERVING WEEKEND jail sentences is ineffective in most cases, she added. "There have been people who are confined to jail for weekends and they show up for the first one. But that's the last time they show up."

With the Department of Human Resources until this fall, when the child support enforcement division was moved under the auspices of the Texas Attorney General's office, Ms. Oseasohn said her department intends to file two separate papers when fighting for delinquent child support payments.

The first will be for involuntary assignment of wages and the second will be for contempt of court and a jail sentence. The second paper will be filed in case the man, once involuntary assignment of wages is approved, decides to quit his job.

Other survivors include his wife; a son, Tommy Salmon of Odessa; a brother, Floyd Salmon of Hughes Springs; three grandchildren; and four great-grandchildren.

GOP candidate champion of 'West Texas spirit'

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

Schaefer

ODESSA — Championing the "West Texas spirit," Republican Tom Schaefer Thursday announced his candidacy for the U.S. House of Representatives' spot in the 19th congressional district vacated by Kent Hance's decision to run for the Senate.

Schaefer, a history professor at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin, promised to work to get industry moving again in the area during a press conference at the UTPB student lounge. He flew directly to Lubbock, where he announced his intentions at Texas Tech.

The candidate said he would work to "unshackle the bureaucrats in Washington. If we don't get our industry moving, we will not move," he said in criticism of the Windfall Profits Tax.

A supporter of social programs and President Reagan, Schaefer suggested that private citizens should further these programs themselves without government aid. "Filtering this money through bureaucratic hands" cuts the actual benefit almost in half, said Schaefer.

While supporting "volunteerism," Schaefer said "We can't simply trust that volunteer organizations pick up the slack." He is president of Servants of the Poor and formerly presided over the St. Vincent de Paul Society.

"Slight tax increases may be necessary," he said. Suggesting defense must be kept strong so the U.S. could "negotiate from strength" with the Soviets, Schaefer said the defense budget should be increased each year, but at a lower rate than is presently done.

He called for Japan and West Germany to quit "freeloading" on the U.S. in providing defense. "I think they should pick up more of the tab."

Suggesting that 75-80 percent of Russia's technology was once American, Schaefer said he wanted this changed. He also criticized the Soviets for "cheating" on arms pacts.

"I'm committed to the West Texas spirit," he said, pointing out that he chose to move to this area after living in Alaska, Puerto Rico and several major American cities.

He was deeply involved in the construction of the Alaska pipeline and represented the city of Fairbanks in hearings. Currently, he teaches history at UTPB and directs the Small Business Institute at the university.

Odessa Mayor Bob Bryant cited his work in helping struggling local businesses through hard economic times.

Supporting "compassionate legislation" which aids troubled segments of the population, Schaefer said he wanted to help "cut the waste out of these programs. There is so much waste."

More incentives should be offered to increase private donations to social programs, he said.

He closed with a quote from author James Michener: "If the U.S. is saved, it will be saved by the Texas spirit."

United Way of Midland elects officers, directors

From Staff Reports

Paul Rea

New officers and directors were elected at the annual meeting of United Way of Midland Thursday afternoon.

Outgoing president Harrel Feldt honored retiring officers, saying 1983 was a banner year for United Way volunteer participation.

"The United Way has really been fortunate in 1983 to have had such a high caliber of individuals serving the community on our board of directors," he said.

He noted that those elected to serve in 1984 represent an exceptional cross section of leaders from all corners of Midland. New officers include: President Paul C. Rea, Spectrum 7 Energy Corp.; President-elect Jane Wolf, James Tom CPA; Vice President of Research and Development Louan Rogers; Vice President of Administration and Personnel John Swallow, independent oilman; Secretary Cyn Choate, Dr. Vincent C. Bash; and Treasurer Robert Sneeringer, Peat Marwick Mitchell & Co.

Division chairmen appointed were: Allocations, James Henry of Henry Petroleum Corp.; Campaign, Joseph O'Neill III of O'Neill Properties LTD; Communications, Arlene Jara Strickland of Midland Memorial Hospital; Planning, Mark Leaverton of Stubbeman, McRae, Sealy, Laughlin & Browder.

George Irish, Midland Reporter-Telegram publisher, was named campaign vice chairman for 1984.

Those elected to fill positions on the board of directors included: Jim Everett, Petroplex Savings; Spencer Beal, BTA Oil Producers; Gloria Caldwell, FDIC; Judith Devenport, Earle Craig Jr. Corp.; David Jones, ClayDesta National Bank; Deanna Mutter, Shearson/American Express; Dr. Jess Parish, Midland College; Chris Scharbauer, Scharbauer Cattle Co.; Amy Stewart, Energy Plus Inc.; and David Oxford, Texas Instruments.

Area's residents confused about incorporation election

Rogers had no doubts as to the reason for the election. Pointing to the annexations and trades made between Midland and Odessa as the cities develop, he said "The next thing you know, they come up and take all the property."

Dale needs to become a town "to eliminate the possibility of them trying to shove it down our throats," he said. City officials from Midland and Odessa deny any immediate interest in the proposed city's limits.

"WE'VE GOT people with a common interest out there that people in the city wouldn't understand," said Rogers. "I haven't heard any opposition."

At least one family is resisting the move to municipality. Malcolm J. Miller Jr. taped a homemade "absentee ballet" to the map posted in the store outlining the proposed boundaries of Dale.

A sheet from a legal pad advertising the reasons not to incorporate hangs from the store wall just above the election notice and map. Among the reasons listed to "VOTE AGAINST INCORPORATION" are the potential effects on taxes, phone bills and state law requiring that incorporated areas provided basic services to citizens.

After learning of the upcoming election, Miller studied the situation and determined that incorporating was not to his liking.

"I'm against anything I don't understand," said Miller, who has made a last-minute effort to sway voters by passing out leaflets.

"There's a few questions they haven't answered," said Miller's son, also named Malcolm Miller Jr. "It really doesn't sound like that good of an idea."

"Hardly anybody knows about it," said young Miller, a student at Midland High School.

ROGERS SAID that the incorporation would protect the lifestyle of this rural coummunity. But young Miller questions the logic of this, noting of the area's settlers "They came out here to live in the country. They came out here to be alone."

The Midland High student noted that the population has "boomed" since his family moved to the country 2½ years ago. "It was pretty desolate when we got out here."

David Reagan, assistant city attorney for Midland, explained that incorporation would mean Dale would be responsible for providing basic services such as water, sewer, roads and law enforcement.

While state law governs "general law" cities, Reagan said that municipalities have a large degree of discretion in providing these services. Unless a private citizen filed suit, the city would not likely be forced to provide services, he said.

Another question deals with who will run Dale. "That's wide open," said Rogers. "We don't know of anybody that's going to be an officer."

Miller wondered whether Hamilton aspired to public office. "Maybe he wants to be mayor, I don't know," he said.

Leftover paper ballots, out of use in Ector County since the switch to punch cards, will be used by voters to decide whether they want to hail from Dale.

County Clerk Lucille Wolz predicted that 15,000 would cast ballots in the rollback election, but was less optimistic about the Dale turnout. "Fifty to 75 is gonna be a big turnout out there," she said.

Wage assignment no 'magic wand'

Although the first priority of the state child support department is to take cases of families on welfare, Ms. Oseasohn said non-welfare cases are accepted.

With herself, two paralegals and a couple of secretaries handling a 22-county area, she said non-welfare families seeking to collect delinquent child support payments should be insistent when contacting her department.

"We do have non-welfare applications," she said, "but the paralegals will try to discourage you when you call us up."

Seven hundred welfare cases were set up by her department within the last month or so.

DEVELOPED FROM her experiences, her attitude to men who are ignoring their children is blunt, she admitted.

In situations where the man goes to the judge to get out of child support payments because he has remarried, is financing a trailer house and starting a new family, Ms. Oseasohn replies, "Dammit — if he had another family first, he should be responsible to them first. He has no right to go out and get another woman pregnant."

For those delinquent in payments and in financial difficulties themselves, she says: "They (the children) should be no more naked and no more hungry than he. I don't care if it's $5 (he pays them) a month, he can be picking up Coke cans and selling them."

To the argument of not paying because the child support payments will go to the ex-wife and not the children, she says: "He's not saving $500 or $175, whatever the payments are, a month and buying health insurance with it. He's not sending Christmas gifts with it, he's not setting up trust funds with it. They are mad at the ex-wife" and they're cheating their children.

"I can't make these guys care," she said. "I can't turn them into good fathers. But I can do my best and say, 'By God, they are your children and they are your responsibility and you will pay.'"

Ten-car pile-up blamed on icy roads

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Police were working a 10-car accident on E. 8th St. Friday morning which they blamed on icy road conditions.

Preliminary reports indicate the pile-up originally involved seven vehicles. Three more were added when they were unable to stop as they came upon the wreck in the 2500 block of E. 8th St. about 7:50 a.m. today.

Reports on injuries were not available at press time, but Lt. Rusty Baker said one person was trapped inside a car as a result of the collisions. Several patrol cars and ambulances were at the scene.

"Our streets are just like ice," said Baker. "They're (accidents) coming in faster than we can get to them."

Traffic was being detoured around the wreck from the intersections of E. 8th and E. Highway 80 and Meadow and E. 8th.

Baker suspected that the pile-up was the result of a chain reaction after at least one car slipped on the icy pavement. Full information on the accident will not be ready until 3 p.m., he said.

Fund set up for accident victim

From Staff Reports

Texas American Bank/Midland has announced the establishment of the Michael Ellis Fund to aid Michael Ellis, who has been hospitalized in a comatose condition since a mid-December sking accident.

Ellis is the husband of Debbie Grigsby Ellis, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James O. Grigsby of Midland. Ellis, who was a graduate student at Texas Tech, is now at Midland Memorial Hospital. The Ellises have no medical insurance.

James Grigsby was a policeman on the Midland force for many years, and was proprietor of G&G Burglar Alarm Co., which he recently sold.

Ellis' father is currently serving with U.S. armed forces in Germany. Deposits in the Michael Ellis Fund should be directed to the attention of Beth Buck or Barbara Conner at Texas American Bank/Midland.

Civil suit filed against deputy

From Staff Reports

A civil suit seeking an unspecified amount of dollar damages has been filed against Midland County deputy sheriff Lt. Gary Painter.

Filed Thursday in Midland's 142nd State District Court, the suit alleges that Painter pistol-whipped Odessan Michael Charles Scott, 18, during a DWI arrest Aug. 23.

No details of the incident are included in the suit, and neither Sheriff Dallas Smith nor Midland County are named in it.

Smith said this morning that no brutality complaint had been filed against Painter prior to the filing of the suit.

"He's a good, level-headed guy," Smith added. "It's my understanding that Scott's attorneys tried to use the threat of a lawsuit as a lever to get the county attorney's office to drop the DWI charge. But it's still pending."

Smith said he looked up Painter's report on the arrest after learning of the suit Thursday: "Painter had it right in his report that he had hit the suspect with his gun" after Scott allegedly resisted attempts to arrest him on the DWI charge.

Scott's attorney, John Smith of Odessa, could not be reached for comment by press time.

Jaycees honor two Midland men

Instead, he would like to see a bipartisan committee work out a compromise. They succeeded on the MX missile and Social Security. Instead of making the country wait for piecemeal legislation from Congress, this committee could hammer out the entire budget package.

Taking a look at the community service projects undertaken each year by the Jaycees, Loeffler added, "The strength of a democracy is not what elected officials can do, but what people can do for themselves and will do for others."

Study: Drugs help prevent heart attacks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Many people at risk of heart disease because of high cholesterol levels that cannot be lowered by diet alone can be helped with drug therapy that reduces blood fats, says a major government study.

Results of the $150 million, 10-year study said consistent use of cholesterol-lowering drugs can cut levels of these blood fats by 19 percent and reduce heart disease risk by up to 40 percent.

Researchers also said the clinical trial conclusively proves their long-held belief that reducing the levels of fatty cholesterol in the blood cuts the risks of heart disease for everyone.

The Coronary Primary Prevention Trial, originally designed to find out if a drug that alters cholesterol levels can decrease disease and heart attack, ended up proving much more, experts said.

"This is the first study to demonstrate conclusively that the risk of coronary heart disease can be reduced by lowering blood cholesterol, as we previously suspected," said Dr. Basil M. Rifkind of the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute, the branch of the National Institutes of Health that sponsored the study.

There has been considerable circumstantial evidence from previous human and animal studies that cholesterol reduction cuts heart disease, but none has been conclusive until now, Rifkind said.

Dr. Robert L. Levy of Columbia University, a heart disease expert who headed the heart institute when the study began, told a news briefing the findings apply to more than the middle-aged men with high cholesterol levels used in the study.

"Now, for the first time, we have conclusive evidence that people can do something about heart disease by lowering their cholesterol," Levy said in an interview.

"The study showed that the greater the reduction of cholesterol toward normal levels, the greater the reduction of heart attack events," he continued. "Because of this direct relationship, the results can be extrapolated readily to other groups."

Experts estimate that more than 40 million Americans have moderate to high blood levels of cholesterol and other fats.

Heart disease is the No. 1 killer in the United States, each year claiming 550,000 lives and costing the nation $8 billion in direct health costs, experts say. The researchers estimated that if all Americans reduced cholesterol levels by 25 percent, this would lead to a 50 percent cut in the incidence of heart disease.

Cholesterol is a fatty substance naturally found in the body that at higher levels has been implicated in atherosclerosis, or hardening of the arteries, which in turn leads to heart attack and stroke. With this condition, cholesterol, minerals and fibrous tissue combine to form layers of material called plaque which narrow vessels and restrict blood flow.

Cholesterol has different effects depending upon what molecules carry it through the body. Cholesterol carried by so-called low density lipoproteins, or LDLs, is considered the type that causes heart problems.

Animal fats are considered a major source of cholesterol in the human diet and doctors believe dietary reductions of these fats will cut the risk of heart attack and other coronary problems.

The new study, which involved 3,806 men who were studied at 12 medical centers, showed that lowering cholesterol reduced the incidence of heart attacks by an average of 19 percent, said Rifkind.

The results also show that reducing cholesterol reduces incidents of painful angina by 20 percent and the need for coronary bypass operations by 21 percent.

Dr. Basil Rifkind, left, of the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute, National Institute of Health, and Dr. Robert Levy of Columbia University take part in a Washington news conference where a report was released saying that lowering blood cholesterol can reduce the incidence of heart attack and coronary disease.

Study follows years of research on cholesterol, heart disease

NEW YORK (AP) — The evidence grew slowly. Too much cholesterol in the blood was linked to a statistically greater risk of heart attack.

Animals fed cholesterol developed heart disease similar to that of humans. The arteries of heart attack victims were found to contain fatty deposits rich in cholesterol.

Cholesterol was clearly a bad thing. But what was never certain was whether reducing cholesterol — through diet or drugs — would reduce the risk of heart disease.

Ten years ago, the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute launched a study to answer the question, and the results were announced last week.

Lowering cholesterol, the institute found, does indeed reduce heart attack risk. One hundred thousand deaths could be prevented every year if the 30 million Americans with high cholesterol brought their cholesterol levels down to normal.

The question now is what effect the new study will have on the treatment of the 40 million Americans with high blood cholesterol levels.

A variety of drugs are available to lower cholesterol, said Dr. David Blankenhorn of the University of Southern California. He said in a telephone interview that he hopes the new study will encourage doctors to use them in patients who would benefit.

"People with elevated cholesterol, the top 10 percent of the population, clearly are being undertreated in my opinion," he said.

If they are treated, however, they should be carefully diagnosed first, Blankenhorn said. "The drugs need to be matched to the patients, and I don't think that's sufficiently emphasized," he said.

The packaging and transport of cholesterol through the bloodstream is a complex process, Blankenhorn said, and the various drugs that lower cholesterol each do so in a slightly different way. That's why the drugs must be tailored to the individual.

Dr. Robert Lees, professor of cardiovascular disease at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, agreed that cholesterol-lowering drugs should probably be used more often.

"We're talking about a disease that more than half the population has," Lees said. Yet sales of cholesterol-lowering drugs are much lower than might be expected if all those people were being treated.

Drugs may not be the answer in all cases, however. Alteration of the diet may be a better way to lower blood cholesterol for some people, doctors say.

Hormone linked to hypertension

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — A brain hormone has been discovered that could eventually allow doctors to identify people who are at high risk of developing high blood pressure.

According to a report presented this week, the hormone may also explain why eating salt can raise blood pressure and may give doctors a way to prevent salt-induced hypertension.

"Salt is the culprit — no question about it," Dr. Mordecai Blaustein of the University of Maryland School of Medicine said at a science writers' seminar sponsored by the American Heart Association.

Studies have shown that people in certain Amazon tribes who eat no salt never develop high blood pressure. And other primitive people who cook with sea water have extremely high blood pressure, and consequently a high rate of death from strokes.

The brain hormone that Blaustein and others are working to purify causes the sodium in salt to stay in muscle cells in blood vessels.

When the muscle cells take in sodium, they contract, causing the vessels to tighten and blood pressure to go up, just as squeezing a balloon would cause pressure to climb inside the balloon, Blaustein said.

The hormone may not be important in all forms of hypertension, he said. But in cases where it is important, doctors may be able to measure an increase in the hormone before blood pressure climbs.

Doctors could then tell patients to restrict their salt intake very carefully, and perhaps avoid the development of high blood pressure.

Much more must be understood about the hormone (which has not yet been named) before it can be put to practical use, Blaustein said.

DEAR ABBY

Big Brothers, Sisters help children

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I was touched by the letter from "Childless and Hurting," the young woman who was unable to bear children and whose husband refused to adopt.

I have a suggestion for her. While it may not fully satisfy her longing for motherhood, she could become a "Big Sister" to a young girl who needs a one-to-one relationship with an emotionally mature and stable woman.

The Big Brothers/Sisters of America is an agency that presently serves some 100,000 children from one-parent homes. Through a careful screening process, children who need positive role models are matched with responsible adults who agree to spend from 3 to 6 hours a week with them for at least a year.

With nearly 12 million children in the United States growing up in one-parent homes, the number of children in need of a positive role model far exceeds the number of adult volunteers.

Here in Lake County, Ill., our newly organized Big Brothers/Sisters Agency just hired its first executive director, and we're about to make our first "match."

What a wonderful way to start the new year! — LYNNE V. IN GURNEE, ILL.

DEAR LYNNE: Congratulations! In checking out the organization, I learned that it is an 80-year-old non-profit agency with over 400 chapters across the country.

So, readers, if you are an adult and willing to devote 3 to 6 hours a week to a child who desperately needs guidance and companionship, look into Big Brothers/Sisters. (It's in your phone book.)

Your wholesome influence could turn a child's life around.

DEAR ABBY: Here's one I'll bet you've never had before. I am a 33-year-old professional dancer (female) who recently started dating a very successful 42-year-old musician.

I noticed he was wearing a tiny gold earring in his left ear, so I asked, "What's with the earring?"

He told me that as a very young man he had been in the Merchant Marines. During that time he crossed the equator, making him eligible to join a club exclusively for sailors who had crossed the equator.

He said as part of the initiation ceremony, every man had his left earlobe pierced so he could wear a tiny gold earring to identify him as a member of that club.

How true is that story? Or is there a chance that he is gay? — IN DOUBT IN DETROIT

DEAR IN DOUBT: The story is 100 percent true. And there's a 10 percent chance that he's gay because one out of 10 people is.

DEAR ABBY: According to Francis Bacon:

"Age appears best in four things:
"old wood to burn,
"old wine to drink,
"old friends to trust,
"and old authors to read." — LILA IN EAST HARTFORD

DEAR LILA: Add one more. According to Benjamin Franklin, older women make the best mistresses.

(Do you wish you had more friends? Get Abby's booklet, "How to Be Popular — You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $2, plus a long, stamped (37 cents) self-addressed envelope to Abby, Popularity, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Drugs, driving don't mix

SOUTHFIELD, Mich. (AP) — Driving after drinking is a widely publicized no-no. But prescription drugs and over-the-counter medications can affect drivers also and can be contributing factors in automobile accidents, warns the Automotive Information Council.

Pain killers, tranquilizers, blood pressure medications, muscle relaxants, as well as other prescription drugs, affect a driver's ability because they can cause drowsiness, dizziness, blurred vision, confusion and lack of muscle control, the AIC points out.

Company sells sand to Arabia

By The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

MANAMA, Bahrain — A British company has won a contract to export sand to Saudi Arabia, 95 percent of which is desert, the Gulf Daily News reported here Thursday.

The sand will be used in concrete for a new vault at a bank in Jeddah.

According to the newspaper, the imported sand is finer and does not contain impurities like desert sand.

New Disney characters make debut

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Two new Walt Disney characters have been created to portray the human imagination in tangible form.

The new characters are Dreamfinder, a red-bearded, top-hatted story teller, and his sidekick, Figment, a miniature dragon-like puppet.

According to Tony Baxter of Walt Disney Productions, "by humanizing Dreamfinder, people are taken out of 'high-tech' animation and associate him with their own world, as a fellow individual. Figment was designed to represent a fresh point of view, similar to that of a child."

The two new characters are featured at the Eastman Kodak pavilion in Epcot Center, near Orlando.

Sakharov letter smuggled to conference in Stockholm

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Andrei Sakharov, the dissident Soviet physicist who won a Nobel Peace Prize, has had a letter smuggled to the European security conference, appealing for medical care for his wife.

The letter was to be distributed today to all delegations at the conference, according to Sweden's largest daily, Expressen, in a front-page article.

Sakharov says in the letter that his wife, Yelena Bonner, has had repeated heart attacks and is severely ill but because of the couple's persecution in the Soviet Union cannot get proper medical care there.

"Only a trip abroad to get nursing can save her, and me, as her death would also be mine" Sakharov said in the letter dated Jan. 12 in Gorky, where he has been forced to live in internal exile since 1980. His wife is allowed to travel from Moscow to see him and is virtually his only contact with the outside world.

Sakharov, awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in 1975, is perhaps the most prominent dissident in the Soviet Union.

In the letter, Sakharov said that his wife applied for permission to go abroad in September and that he repeated the request in October in a letter to President Yuri V. Andropov, but has received no reply.

Igor Andropov, son of the Soviet president, is one of his country's delegates to the international security conference here, which completes its first week of work today.

Expressen said a reporter saw the younger Andropov in the delegation and asked the question that has been asked around the world since Aug. 18, when the Soviet leader was last seen in public — How is your father?

Igor Andropov continued walking but politely told the reporter in English: "I'm not sure this is the right time or place to discuss the matter."

Igor Andropov, son of Soviet President Yuri Andropov, represents his country at the Stockholm conference.

The elder Andropov has been ill for months, and there has been speculation he suffers from a kidney ailment.

The son is in Stockholm as an expert on international affairs.

The Stockholm meeting, officially called the Conference on Confidence and Security Building Measures and Disarmament in Europe, is to study ways to reduce the risk of war on the continent. It might last as long as two years.

Much of the attention this week was on Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, who conferred for the first time in four months.

Funds sought for strike force

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is urging Jordan's King Hussein to go public with plans to create a U.S.-financed strike force to respond to Persian Gulf emergencies, arguing it is the only way Congress will vote the funds.

After being once rebuffed, the administration has decided to renew its request to Congress to approve the $220 million needed to arm and equip two brigades of Jordanian troops, about 8,300 men, it was learned Thursday.

A unique aspect of the plan is that the Jordanian troops would be ferried by American military pilots in American C-130 aircraft to assist friendly Arab governments in times of emergency.

But administration officials have concluded the plan stands little or no chance of getting congressional approval unless it can be discussed publicly. However, they aren't sure Hussein will agree to open consideration because it could hurt his standing in the Arab world and endanger his regime.

There have been seven attacks on Jordanian diplomats recently in which two diplomats were killed. A reporter was told that in all cases a fundamentalist Islamic group claimed responsibility, saying they were in protest against Jordanian military ties to Washington.

Six terrorist bombs have gone off in Jordan in the past six months, further underscoring the potential threat to Hussein — long a moderate Arab leader with close ties to Washington.

Administration officials don't doubt Hussein's commitment to establishing a strike force with American help if it can be done secretly, but worry he will balk at risking a public debate in Congress.

However, Hussein is being told that is probably the only way the proposal can win approval. Congress refused last year to finance the plan unless it could be considered publicly.

The underlying purpose would be to maintain access to Persian Gulf oil supplies by protecting moderate Arab governments from Islamic fundamentalist movements, such as the one that seized power in Iran.

Druse tanks fire on Lebanese holdings; Assassins sought

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Lebanese army positions came under tank fire today from Druse strongholds overlooking the U.S. Marine base, state radio said, and police reported no breakthroughs in their search for the assassins of American educator Malcom Kerr.

The government-run radio station interrupted its regular programs to report a mid-morning bombardment from hillsides east of the capital, saying army positions near a key highway junction were under tank cannon fire.

The radio did not say whether the army returned fire or identify the attackers. The area is a base of Syrian-backed Druse insurgents.

Army and Druse forces traded sporadic barrages of artillery and rockets south of the Marine base overnight. No casualties were reported, and state radio said the U.S. contingent of the multinational force was not involved.

Police said they have been unable to dig up any clues to help find the assailants who killed Kerr, president of the American University of Beirut, or who kidnapped the Saudi Arabia consul in Beirut on Tuesday.

world in brief

Cuba withdrawing troops

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cuba appears to have begun the first significant withdrawal of its forces from Ethiopia since dispatching troops there six years ago, U.S. officials say.

The officials, who asked not to be identified, said the change began about a month ago but it is not clear whether the troops are being sent home or to Angola, where more than 20,000 Cubans have been stationed since the mid-1970's.

Guerrillas allowed to flee

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — In a diplomatic coup by Chile's main guerrilla group, four accused assassins who forced their way into the Vatican mission here won the Holy See's backing for their bid to elude military justice by leaving the country.

Western diplomats and Roman Catholic sources said Thursday that Monsignor Angelo Sodano, the papal representative, asked the military government to grant the suspects safe conduct because they faced summary judgment by an army war tribunal that almost certainly would result in executions for three of them.

U.S. soldier admits his hoax

SCHWAEBISCH-GMUEND, West Germany (AP) — A U.S. Army soldier has admitted that his purported kidnapping by anti-nuclear activists last weekend was an elaborate hoax, West German police said today.

Herbert Sarchro, spokesman at Stuttgart police headquarters, said Spec. 4 Liam Fowler, 21, of Port Orange, Fla., told authorities he had acted alone.

El Salvador enters phase two

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The Salvadoran army is preparing to launch the second phase of a major counterinsurgency and reconstruction plan in one of the country's key agricultural regions, military officials say.

Malaysian minister blasts U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Malaysia's prime minister, declaring the Third World "must no longer be silent," is accusing the United States and other Western powers of using developing nations as an arena for superpower rivalry.

Reciting an unexpectedly bitter litany of complaints, Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad on Thursday lumped the United States with other industrialized Western nations he accused of "bullying," "manipulation," and a "patronizing attitude as if we come to ask for charity."

THE BETTER HALF

I finally got the raise my boss promised. He put elevator insoles in my shoes!"

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Saturday, January 21, 1984

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Confederate General Stonewall Jackson and American Civil Liberties Union founder Roger Baldwin were born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: singer Mac Davis, actress Abby Dalton (TV's "Falcon Crest"), golfer Jack Nicklaus, Richie Havens and San Francisco Giants pitcher Mike Krukow. A promotion is a real possibility now. Consider an offer involving a move to a distant city. It could provide the fresh start your career needs. A financial program begins to bear fruit. Take romance more seriously before partner decides to move on to greener pastures. Additional duties at work should mean higher pay. Speak up.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Curb your demands and others will respond favorably. A teen-ager has a super idea. Do something very special for loved one's birthday. Be careful not to overdress for a social event.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your intuition is on target. Use it to stay ahead of the competition. Romance needs more time to grow. Anticipate a loved one's requests. Your unprompted thoughtfulness works wonders.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Love looks cozy when romantic partners find time for each other. A banking or billing error should be checked out. Something that has been lost could be recovered by accident.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You may be worrying too much about your professional life. Look in many directions and you will discover the best road to take. A talk with an older person leaves you feeling more confident.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A romantic interlude could lead to an important decision or announcement. Old complaints need to be settled once and for all. An unusual situation brings out your psychic ability.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Take trips with those who share your interests. You must make a decision regarding a family trust or loan. Showing your affection openly will reassure a sensitive romantic partner.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Mate or partner may oppose our financial plans. Be on the lookout for unusual opportunities. Take advantage of the January white sales, but avoid going on a spending spree.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Something you overhear at a social gathering could cause problems. If you are wise, you will ignore any gossip. A member of the opposite sex makes an astounding disclosure.

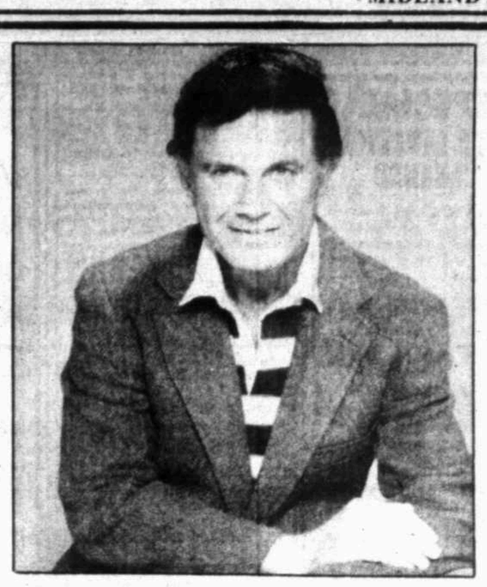

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Keep an eye on weekend expenses. You could have a profound influence on a troubled teen-ager. Allow more give-and-take in your personal relationships. Become a better listener.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Romance is inspiring. Pool your talents with a partner's if thinking of starting a small business. Do not waste time on those who want to pick your brains for free. Buy essentials only.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Work done at home can be highly profitable. Member of opposite sex is very judgmental. Stay away if you do not want to hear "the truth" about yourself.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Complete household chores in the morning to allow more time for small fry. A visit to a museum or theater will entertain members of several generations. Keep spending down.

PBS goes to Super Bowl

NEW YORK (AP) — Lamar Hunt, one of the founders of the old American Football League, thought the newly arranged championship game pitting his league titlist with the top team from the National Football League should have a flashy name. "NFL Championship" just wouldn't do.

That was the old name, and it would have represented another slight by the genteel NFL against the upstart AFL. Hunt, owner of the Kansas City Chiefs, also wanted a splashy brand name that would help sell the game.

Hunt's Super Ball became Super Bowl to nearly everybody except the NFL, which referred to the game as the NFL-AFL Championship in 1967 and 1968, the first two years the league champions met. The NFL finally deigned to refer to the new name in its 1969 program, but it wasn't until Super Bowl IV that the NFL discovered Roman numerals.

This historical anecdote comes courtesy of public television's "Inside Story," the only regularly scheduled national gadfly critiquing the press. Normally, this program covers the major issues of journalism, as in tonight's new-season opener, when it discusses the Grenada press ban with former President Carter, veteran CBS News anchor Walter Cronkite, President Reagan's chief of staff James Baker and Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger.

But next Friday, "Inside Story," with anchor-correspondent Hodding Carter, tackles Sunday's Super Bowl XVIII in "Super Bowl-Super Stakes," reporting on how the event has become much more than a 3½-hour football game and two-hour pre-game show.

In the all-time ratings rankings, Super Bowl XVI and Super Bowl XVII are fourth and fifth, respectively, behind the "M-A-S-H" finale, the "Who Shot J.R.?" episode of "Dallas" and one episode of "Roots."

This has not been a banner year for NFL ratings. Its showcase "Monday Night Football" game had its worst ratings in 14 years.

CBS, which is charging advertisers a record $450,000 for a 30-second commercial, hopes the Washington Redskins-Los Angeles Raiders match-up will be the first to top the 50-rating mark, which would mean half the nation's 83.8 million TV homes will be watching.

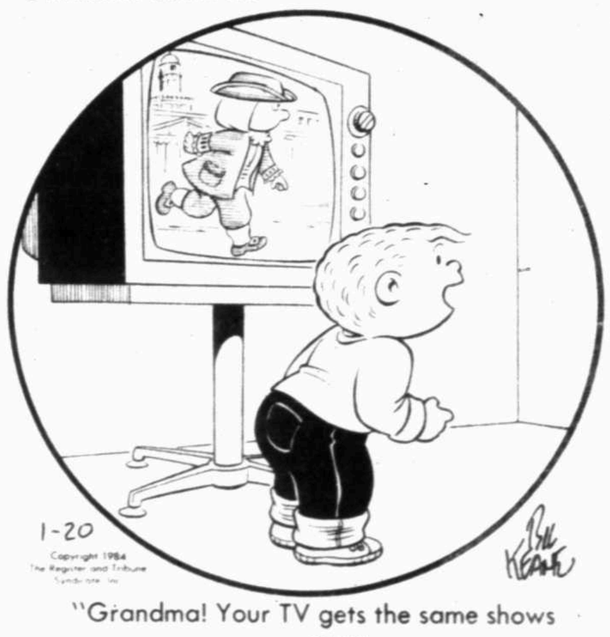

Last year's 48.6 Super Bowl rating helped the follow-up program, "The A-Team," attract a huge sampling audience, and the series has become NBC's biggest hit. CBS will follow Sunday's game with "60 Minutes" and a two-hour premiere for its new helicopter series, "Airwolf."

We are not the only ones who have stressed the need for a combined holding of at least eight cards for a satisfactory trump suit. While this is surely the most flexible holding, a seven-card fit, especially in a major, is often more than adequate. The great guru of the 4-3 fit was the late Sonny Moyse, and it has become known in the trade as the Moysian fit.

This hand, from a tournament more than 20 years ago, was one of his favorites.

We do not know why East, who was sure of at least six tricks in diamonds, behaved so tamely throughout the auction. South opened in his long suit, then took advantage of East's silence to show his four-card major at the one-level. North took a preference to clubs, and East belatedly introduced his diamond suit.

That gave South the opportunity for a fine bid. He wanted to play in game somewhere, but he was not sure where, so he showed his power with a cue-bid of three diamonds. That almost surely denied a diamond stopper, for with the enemy suit under control, South could have bid some number of no trump. Now North described the other feature of his hand — three-card spade support. Note that he could not have four spades, since he did not raise spades immediately.

South decided that North could not have more than two diamonds on the auction. If that were the case, the defenders could not force South with diamonds, causing him to lose control of the trump suit. So South boldly bid the game in spades, his known seven-card fit, rather than in clubs, his ten-card fit.

Events proved him right. After a diamond lead, he lost exactly three tricks in the red suits. He would have lost exactly the same tricks at a contract of five clubs.

"Three's Company" won't be much of crowd next season, with the announcement that co-stars, from top left Joyce Dewitt, Priscilla Barnes, Richard Kline (bottom left) and Don Knotts are leaving the ABC-TV series. The changes were announced Wednesday and new cast members will be announced later. "Three's Company" made its debut in 1977.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Glaucoma caused by high eye pressure

Dear Dr. Solomon: I know that glaucoma can be a serious disease that can cause blindness, but I would like to know what actually causes it. — Tom, Jackson, Miss.

Dear Tom: Glaucoma is cause by high pressure within the eye that gradually results in damage to the optic nerve and retina. Early detection and appropriate treatment can help avoid a very serious outcome.

Solomon

Dear Dr. Solomon: Up to what age is it possible for a woman to be able to continue to respond sexually? — Janice, Grand Rapids, Mich.

Dear Janice: According to Dr. James A. Batts, of the Medical College of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia, a woman retains the ability to respond sexually into her late seventies and beyond. Of course her sexual activity will depend upon the availability of a partner.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Now that I am retired, I am planning to do a great deal of traveling overseas. Is there any reason to be concerned about serious illnesses like malaria any more? — Mr. T. O'M., Santa Rosa, Calif.

Dear Mr. O'M.: It is better to be prepared than concerned. There are still health hazards, including malaria, for travelers who go abroad. Dr. Jonathan M. Mann, of the New Mexico Health and Environment Department, notes that travelers may be at risk because they assume that food, water, and swimming areas are safe. I suggest you check with your physician about recommended medical interventions, such as the administration of typhoid vaccine, once you know which countries you will be visiting.

Dear Dr. Solomon: A brother of mine is doing real good on kidney dialysis, but now he says he is thinking of getting a transplant. Do you think that this would be a good idea? — Marilyn, Kansas City, Mo.

Dear Marilyn: The advisability of dialysis versus a transplant is a very individual matter that can only be decided after a thorough discussion between the patient and his or her physician. The most anyone else can do is speak in generalities.

The results of a study of more than 75,000 dialysis and transplant patients have indicated that transplant recipients have a more successful outcome than do dialysis patients. During the first year, mortality is about the same for both groups. After three years, however, 56 percent of dialysis patients were still alive compared with 91 percent of patients who received transplants from related donors, and 78 percent of donors whose transplants came from unrelated donors.

I would assume that your brother has discussed the advisability of a transplant with his physician, who would be best able to answer your question about the procedure.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Reagan in middle of Raiders, Redskins

WASHINGTON (AP) — Caught between a tribe of Redskins and a crew of Raiders, President Reagan has delicately avoided the slings and arrows of either Super Bowl contestant by refusing to reveal his favorite in Sunday's football classic in Tampa, Fla.

"Since both teams playing are from my current hometowns, and since none of the Democrats who are interested in this job have declared their preference, I see no reason to be recklessly courageous. May the best team win," the president told members of the Council on Physical Fitness during a White House reception Thursday.

Before moving to the home of the Washington Redskins three years ago, Reagan lived in Los Angeles, home of the Raiders, and still returns there on vacations, usually on the way to his ranch near Santa Barbara, Calif.

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — News commentator Howard K. Smith has come to the rescue of the state of New Jersey, which has always had something of an identity crisis from being sandwiched between New York and Philadelphia.

Smith, 69, narrated an hour-long documentary, "New Jersey — The Way We Are," illustrating state trends revealed in the 1980 census. The film was shown to 200 guests at a Trenton hotel Thursday.

"Situated in the shadow of these two great cities, and mainly recognized as being the path of least resistance between them, New Jersey has been destined to struggle hard for an identity of its own," Smith said before the screening.

New Jersey Network spokeswoman Tish Hamilton said the film, to be broadcast Jan. 26 on public television, features interviews with several hundred state's residents who exemplify such trends as the population shift to the southern regions of the state and migration to the suburbs.

BOSTON (AP) — Former Mayor Kevin H. White is giving up the politician's gavel for the professor's pointer, teaching communications at Boston University.

University President John R. Silber announced White's faculty appointment Thursday and said White's "profound knowledge of America's cities, and his 16 years experience as one of this country's most successful mayors, makes him superbly well qualified."

White, 54, a graduate of Williams College in Williamstown and Boston College Law School, served as Massachusetts secretary of state and was elected mayor in 1967. He was re-elected three times, serving longer consecutively than any of his predecessors.

Silber said White, who will step into his new job in September, will also help develop a center for the study of political communication.

PROFESSIONAL MANAGEMENT BY THE QUINN-L MANAGEMENT CORPORATION

Bring your children and pet home to luxurious, carefree townhome living by leasing at one of our fine communities...

Why settle for just an apartment when you can enjoy the luxury of townhome living with garages or covered parking for the same price?

Signature Place
1907 Tarleton at Shell Ave.
689-8115

Townhome living as personal as your signature, located in an established residential neighborhood and designed for your individual needs. 1, 2 & 3 bedroom designs with a private courtyard and 1-car garage and covered carport, plus pool and cabana for residents and guest, washer/dryer connections, fireplace, all electric kitchens with self-cleaning ovens and some units with wet bar and breakfast area.

SINCLAIR PLACE
On Sinclair, just West of Midland Dr.
689-9826

Located in an established upscale neighborhood, Sinclair Place is beautifully landscaped with tree-lined streets that wind through charming clusters of rustic-style brick and wood townhomes. Amenities include washer and dryer in every unit, plus refrigerator in the fully equipped kitchen, covered porch or patio, fireplace, one and two story with 1 or 2 bedrooms, 2 car garage and swimming pool with club house.

GULFSHORE VILLAGE
Andrews Hwy. At Denton
