From Staff and Wire Reports

Part of an oil rig sank into quicksand-type soil as four crewmen working at the well scurried for safety after it blew out.

Located about 40 miles southeast of Lubbock, the well, which was being drilled for a Midland-based company, blew out Wednesday as it was being drilled and the rig struck a pocket of air in the shallow Yates formation, officials said.

It later settled quickly to an apparently stable foundation estimated to be 35 to 65 feet below the surface.

None of the crewmen working on the derrick were injured, and they said the only casualties were four Rolex watches left on a part of the rig now underground.

Crewmen abandoned the rig just before the derrick floor, which normally is some 15 feet above ground, plunged to a depth of at least 20 feet in mud and water.

"It fell quick. It set down in about 1½ minutes," crewman Mickey Norris said. "I was running."

The top 45 feet of a derrick sticks out of the mud where it sank early this morning near Lubbock. No one was injured when the rig, located on a ranch about 40 miles from town, where it settled shortly after drilling operations began.

Dukakis still making fun of Bush tax plan

Associated Press

Michael Dukakis renewed his attack today on George Bush's plan to reduce capital gains taxes, suggesting it would merely help the rich "hire a second butler." Bush was on the West Coast in the battle for California's prize of 47 electoral votes.

Campaigning less than two weeks before Election Day — and four days before Halloween — Dukakis said today in Evergreen, Ill., that Bush's tax plan was like "Halloween come early — a treat for the wealthiest one percent and a trick for the rest of us."

The plan, Dukakis said, would "give the people at the top the money and hope the crumbs fall off for the rest of us."

Bush has proposed reducing the top tax rate from 33 percent to 15 percent for capital gains, such as profits from sales of stocks, bonds or real estate. The Republican presidential nominee has defended his plan as a potential boon to the U.S. economy, contending people benefiting from the tax reduction would then increase their investing.

"Who's he kidding?" Dukakis asked supporters in Evergreen Park, a suburb of Chicago. "What are they going to do with the extra money? Hire a second butler, a lifeguard for the pool?"

Dukakis, trailing in public opinion polls, also referred in his remarks to Democratic President Harry Truman's 1948 comeback victory. He was campaigning late in the day in Truman's home state of Missouri, where a statewide poll indicated that Bush's late August lead of nine points had dropped to one.

"Harry Truman was a fighter and so am I," Dukakis said. "My friends, this election is up for grabs."

President Reagan, meanwhile, was out seeking votes for his vice president. In remarks prepared for a rally in Little Rock, Ark., he noted that the Democrats have complained about negative GOP campaigning, and he said, "On Nov. 8, go into that polling booth and do some negative campaigning of your own, the right kind of negative campaigning: Say 'no' to new taxes and 'yes' to the Republican ticket."

CPAs favor GOP stance

Texas CPAs say the Republican platform would be the most effective in improving both the American and Texas economies.

Overall, 76 percent favor the Republicans while only 7.4 percent favor the Democrats on business issues, according to a recent survey. The remaining 16 percent were evenly split between a choice of neither or both.

CPAs identify the budget deficit as the most critical economic problem facing the country and its new president. While 71 percent see the deficit as serious, 53 percent think the Republican platform has the best chance to reduce the deficit although another 31 percent feel neither party will be able to control the deficit.

Council vote key to channel project

By CHRIS VAN WAGENEN
Staff Writer

A major million dollar construction project that will alleviate flooding along the city's infamous Northwest Drainage Channel could get under way as early as next April.

The $760,000 project — if approved by Midland City Council — will require the closing of Haynes Avenue and Maxwell Street from six to nine months, according to engineers.

In addition, the Texas Department of Highways and Transportation announced plans to spend $380,000 on construction of a multiple flow box culvert at Midkiff Road, about a half mile south of Midland Park Mall.

State Engineer Lynn Passmore said the culvert will be built in two stages restricting two-way traffic to one lane for a period of four months beginning sometime in April.

To coincide with that, city engineers said they expect to let two similar contracts on culvert construction at Haynes and Maxwell as well as contract an excavater to widen and deepen the channel by two to three feet.

While Midland has about $1.2 million in carryover bond money from a 1982 election, not everyone agrees how those funds should be spent.

Mayor Carroll Thomas, for one, questioned the validity of the drainage project, given the fact the city had earmarked the remaining bond money for needed street repairs.

Thomas said he was baffled by a discussion that occurred Tuesday at a council workshop, when city engineers first talked about letting contracts out on the culverts.

"I'm not for spending that money on (culvert) bridges," Carroll commented. "We can't afford to let contracts on anything ... there's no way of telling at this point when we'll get anymore bond money."

However, Councilman Bill Williams said he'll seek council support. "I plan to push very strongly to get this done. It makes no sense to replace one (culvert) and leave the other two bottlenecked."

Williams said if bond money isn't made available, the council should at least consider dipping into the city's surplus fund. "I think it needs to be done and quickly. We've had flooding at homes there more than once this year. I'd like us to be scheduled with the state."

Deputy City Manager Mike McGregor estimated the city would have to fork out nearly $290,000 on the Maxwell project and another $460,000 at Haynes to install the culverts. "That would pretty much finish off the bond money."

Earlier this week, the city hired the engineering firm of Parkhill, Smith and Cooper to prepare plans and specifications related to the project.

The company recently completed a computer-modled master plan that provided the city with detailed cost estimates and recommendations aimed at curbing channel flooding from Big Spring Street to Holiday Hill Road.

According to Harvey Hansen, director of streets, traffic and engineering, Midland's portion of the project could be put out for bid as early as February, with construction to commence in April.

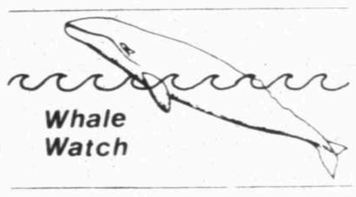
City officials are considering whether or not to make certain improvements at the Northwest Drainage Channel to help alleviate flooding in that area.

Whales head to sea after capturing world's attention



BARROW, Alaska (AP) — Two whales that held the world's attention for weeks swam away from their icy trap in a channel cleared by a Soviet icebreaker and Eskimo chain saws, and rescuers hoped the leviathans would reach the open sea.

"It's in nature's hands now," said Gary Hufford, a National Weather Service ice analyst.

The California gray whales swam off into the sunset Wednesday on what was hoped would be a long journey to their winter home off Baja California.

Officials halted helicopter surveillance at nightfall, and said they planned to meet today to decide whether to try to locate the whales that scientists dubbed Crossbeak and Bonnet.

But their fate may never be known. Scientists involved in the rescue that cost more than $800,000 didn't attach radio transmitters to the whales, in part because of concern that the devices would only add to the animals' stress, said federal marine mammal biologist Jim Harvey.

A whale that was trapped with the pair nearly three weeks ago apparently died last week.

Arctic front making its way toward West Texas

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

The weather in West Texas certainly is living up to its reputation as conditions run the gamut from warm to cool, from sunny to cloudy, from foggy to windy.

That's only the beginning. An arctic cold front is making its move into Texas today and is expected to spread showers and thunderstorms over most of the area tonight and Friday.

Forecasters with the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport said the cold front should move into the state after dense fog blanketed a vast area early today.

A dense fog advisory was in effect for the Permian Basin until midmorning as moisture from the Gulf of Mexico flowed over cooler surface air, producing the fog and low level clouds.

Fog reduced visibility to as low as 20 feet at Odessa, and to about one-eighth of a mile at Midland International Airport, forecasters said.

Forecasters predict a return of cloudiness to the area tonight and Friday as the cold front moves southward with showers and thunderstorms possible.

Tonight's low should be in the mid-50s and winds will be from the southwest at 10 to 20 mph and gusty, shifting to the northeast by Friday morning.

Skies will be mostly cloudy Friday and temperatures are expected to be much colder, with a 20 percent chance of showers forecast. The high will only reach into the upper 60s and winds will be out of the northeast at 10 to 20 mph and gusty.

Partly cloudy skies, continued cool temperatures, and lightly scattered showers, are possible through Monday, with high temperatures remaining in the lower 70s.

Midland can expect its coldest temperatures Saturday and Sunday with overnight lows continuing their downward trend.

The chance for a freeze — though very remote — is possible Sunday night, forecasters said.

Midland recorded its earliest first freeze on Oct. 29, 1980 and its latest on Dec. 6, 1954, bringing the average date to Nov. 9, forecasters said.

Buck shot after it chases Texan up tree

ELK RIVER, Minn. (AP) — A Texan, who was amazed to see a buck bigger than one back home and just wanted a closer look, was rammed by the deer and chased up a tree until someone heard his cries for help and called police, who shot the animal.

The incident has left Benjamin Kirkland, of Lufkin, Texas, with a new appreciation for Minnesota wildlife and officials shaking their heads in disbelief that a wild deer would attack and "tree" a human.

"I thought sure enough I was a goner," said Kirkland, 26, of his close encounter late last week with a 225-pound, eight-point deer, which attacked him in the woods near Elk River.

Kirkland said he was returning to his motel around dusk Friday after working on a nearby pipeline when he saw the large buck grazing in a field a few hundred yards behind his motel, about 30 miles northwest of the Twin Cities.

"Where I'm from, deer just don't get as big as that," he said Wednesday. "This looked like a monster to me."

Teen to be tried in stabbing

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A grand jury has decided a 15-year-old youth will be tried in juvenile court for the stabbing death of another youth who was dragged from his car and killed following a party September 25.

The grand jury for the 238th District Court late Wednesday approved a petition which means the youth will be tried and could be sentenced up to 30 years in the Texas Youth Commission, County Attorney Mark Dettman said.

WEATHER SUMMARY

WEATHER

Over the past five years, first freezes occurred on Nov. 26, 1983; Nov. 19, 1984; Nov. 20, 1985; Nov. 11, 1986; and Nov. 9, 1987.

Wednesday's high of 71 was 19 degrees cooler than the record of 90, set on that date in 1950. The overnight low of 55 was 22 degrees warmer than the record of 33, set on this date in 1967.

STATE

A cold front moved into Texas today and was expected to spread showers and thunderstorms over most of the state tonight and Friday.

Much cooler temperatures were expected to spread across the state Friday and remain for at least the weekend, forecasters said.

The cold front moved into the state after dense fog blanketed a vast area of the state early today.

The fog reduced visibility to as low as 20 feet at Odessa, to near zero in the Austin area, to about one-fourth of a mile in the Waco area and to one-eighth of a mile in the Permian Basin.

Moisture from the Gulf of Mexico flowed over cooler surface air, producing the fog and low level clouds.

An upper level disturbance produced showers and thunderstorms in northwest portions of South Texas early today. Some pea-size hail pelted Uvalde County just west of Hondo early today.

Forecasts called for a return of cloudiness to the state as the cold front moves southward with showers and thunderstorms possible across the state tonight and Friday.

Lows tonight will cover a wide range from the upper 30s in the Panhandle to near 70 in South Texas with readings expected to be in the 50s and 60s over most of Texas.

NATION

Prison teachers taken hostage

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Two inmates serving murder sentences and armed with homemade knives took a pair of women teachers hostage today at Northern State Prison, authorities said.

City police Lt. John Reid identified the inmates as Angel Guzman, 26, and Edward Robinson, 27.

James Stabile, a spokesman for the state Department of Corrections, said the incident began shortly after 9 a.m. when Guzman and Robinson seized vocational counselor Joan Mason and teaching assistant Annette Martin, both of Newark.

Stabile said they held the women in the library of the prison, which opened last year as New Jersey's newest state correctional facility. He said that as far as he knew, no one had been injured.

He said Guzman and Robinson were armed with "shanks," which he described as self-fashioned knives.

"We have not heard any demands at this point," Stabile said.

Authorities quickly confined the other approximately 1,000 inmates to their cells and called in the state's special operations group to conduct negotiations, Stabile said.

The special operations group, consisting of negotiators, emergency rescue crews and a heavily armed assault team, is called routinely during such situations, Stabile said.

Stabile said Warden Robert Stephens and Gary Hilton, the assistant state commissioner for adult institutions, were both on the scene to direct talks with the inmates.

Rescuers thankful ordeal over

BARROW, Alaska (AP) — Those involved in freeing two California gray whales from their icy enclave said the experience left a lasting impression.

"This is the wildest thing that's ever happened to me," said Craig George, one of two North Slope Borough wildlife biologists who babysat the whales since they were found two weeks ago trapped in ice so thin it wouldn't support a man's weight.

"It's crazy. It doesn't make any sense, but it's wonderful," George said.

He said that at first, he didn't think the whales could be freed.

"No, I thought it was one of those exercises in futility that you had to do," he said. "I learned a lot. I learned that with persistence, clear thinking and proper chain saws, you can do anything."

His colleague, Geoff Carroll, who shared the vigil for night after cold, lonely night, said he was more optimistic from the beginning.

"It was just one of those things where you start out, and see what happens. I guess I always believed we'd get them out, but I never thought it would turn out the way it did."

Whaling captain Arnold Brower also spent countless hours on the ice, offering his expertise and mobilizing the Eskimos who kept the whales alive and moving toward safety by cutting a path of more than 100 breathing holes.

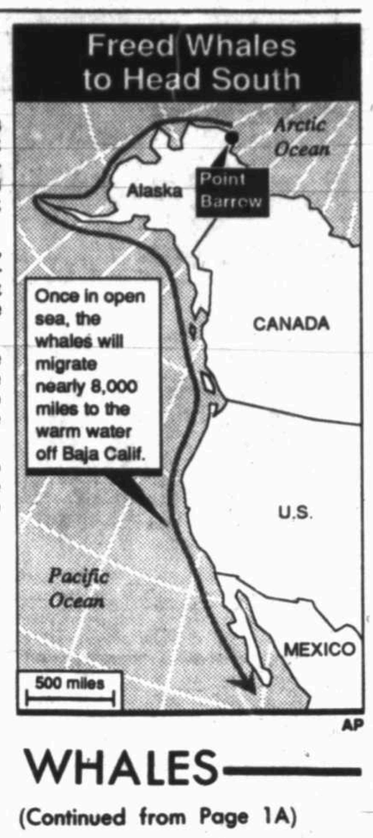
"I'm really relieved," he said. "I feel like my burden may be lifted."

Rescue coordinator Ron Morris said he never had any doubts about the eventual success of the operation, which ended with the whales following the path cut by a Soviet icebreaker.

Rick Skluzacek and Greg Ferrian, Minnesotans who showed up uninvited to provide de-icing equipment that enabled rescuers to keep the breathing holes open, were elated.

"Great," Skluzacek said of the whales' escape. "Anything more than that one-word answer is too much. You can't describe the feeling.

"I couldn't feel better now, no way, shape or how," he said as he went off to look for a cigar to celebrate.



DEER

Kirkland said he crawled behind an embankment, planning to sneak up behind the buck and get a good look without being detected. But when he reached the spot where he thought the buck should be, there was nothing.

He stood up to walk away, and the buck was 30 steps away, staring at him.

Kirkland froze. "Generally, a buck deer like that is going to break and run to get away from you. He's supposed to be way scareder of you than you are of him," Kirkland said.

But this deer began walking toward Kirkland, who said he thought it must be somebody's pet. The deer came up and smelled him, then charged, slamming its antlers into Kirkland's ribs, he said.

The deer then slammed Kirkland into a pine tree and he grabbed onto the tree and scampered up it.

"I knew that tree was going to save me — it was the only way out," Kirkland said.

Kirkland says he sat in the tree about 40 minutes, with the buck pacing below and pawing the ground, before people at a nearby shopping center heard his cries for help and called police.

Elk River patrolman Dave Sievert called in a State Patrol officer and a reserve officer to help, and killed the buck when it lowered its head and started charging them.

Roger Holmes, chief of the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources wildlife section, said he's sure the deer was raised by humans and released. Such deer lose their fear of humans and, when excited, can become dangerous to people, he said.

"This just does not happen with a truly wild deer," said Holmes. "I have never heard of a situation where a wild buck has ... attacked a human being."

ENDORSE

"The massive deficit coupled with the public's resistance to either increased taxes or cuts in entitlement programs like Social Security will limit the options of either party to bring down the deficit," says Ross McElreath, president of the Texas Society of CPAs.

McElreath cautioned that results of the survey are not an endorsement of either party or political view.

Focusing on Texas, 82 percent of the CPAs surveyed said the Republican party would have a more positive impact on business in the state, while 64 percent predicted the same result for individuals in Texas.

When asked which party would most benefit farmers, each party received a 34.5 percent (23.5 percent said both and 7.4 percent said neither), suggesting that CPAs believe both platforms are responsive to agriculture issues.

When asked which would reduce the trade deficit, 38 percent said neither. The Republicans received 39.6 percent, with Democrats receiving only eight percent and both 14 percent. However, Democrats are seen to be more likely to implement policies to curb foreign investment — 40 percent compared to 18 percent, with the both and neither choices evenly divided with 21 percent each.

No matter who takes office in January, CPAs surveyed do not expect taxes to be reduced for either business or individuals.

Asked to predict new tax laws to reduce taxes and/or to restore tax credits, an overwhelming 72 percent said neither party would pass legislation reducing personal taxes.

In regard to business, 69 percent also think neither party will reduce taxes or restore lost tax credits. The Democrats are considered more likely to propose significant new tax legislation during the first two years of the new term, the survey found.

The same poll of CPAs was conducted in three other major states with surprisingly similar results on the overall economic improvement questions.

In response to the question, "Which party platform will be most effective for overall improvement of the economy,? CPAs answered:

	PA	OHIO	FLA	TX
Republican	72.4	80.8	75.3	76.4
Democratic	11.1	6.2	10.4	7.4
Both	10.0	1.2	7.4	8.1
Neither	6.5	11.9	6.9	8.0

Respondents believe that the Republican platform can reduce federal spending, control the size of government, assure capital availability, check inflation, continue deregulation, and hold down unemployment.

Democrats are expected to increase the minimum wage, improve the economic status of women and minorities and mandate employer-provided and funded benefits, according to the survey.

The CPA Poll sampled 600 of the more than 28,000 CPAs who are members of the Texas Society of CPAs during the first two weeks in September. A sample of this size reflect that population at a 95 percent confidence level, plus or minus 4 percent.

Headquartered in Dallas, the Texas Society of CPAs is a nonprofit organization dedicated to promoting professionalism among CPAs.

"It is not an indictment, but it is like an indictment" in its effect, Dettman said of the petition. Under a state law which went into effect in September 1987, a juvenile can be tried in juvenile court for the most serious offenses, such as capital murder, murder, aggravated kidnapping, and aggravated sexual assault.

Dettman said he could have asked that the youth be certified as an adult — in which case he would have been tried in district court — but he said the decision was made instead to ask for the petition.

The youth is charged with the killing of 17-year-old Randy Lara, who was one of about 50 persons who attended a September 24 party at a house at 2300 W. Kentucky Ave. According to police accounts, the party, which featured alcohol and marijuana use, started about 5:30 p.m. By 2 a.m. the next morning it was out of hand.

Lara was involved in an argument inside the residence, apparently between two women, which spilled outside and escalated into a fight, according to investigators.

Lara then left the party with his brother, 19-year-old Jerry Dean, and two other persons. They left in Jerry Dean's car, drove around the block, and when the car stalled a half-block from the party at the intersection of College Avenue and Baldwin Street, a crowd of at least six and as many as 10 persons peppered the vehicle with rocks and empty beer bottles.

Randy Lara was then dragged through the car's passenger window. He was beaten and kicked, was stabbed twice in the back and three times in the head and neck, according to a police report. He was found near the curb in the front yard of a residence in the 2300 block of College, and was dead on arrival at Midland Memorial Hospital.

Police have said the mob then tried to get to Jerry Lara, who was driving the car, but he managed to get the car started and drive away. He was cut in the confrontation and required treatment at Medical Center Hospital in Odessa.

After the car left the scene, police believe the trio went to pick up a .22-caliber rifle. When they returned, 33-year-old Vincente Vasquez of Lamesa was standing in the front yard of the Kentucky Street residence. He was shot in the face and seriously wounded.

Grand jurors did not return an indictment in the Vasquez shooting, assistant district attorney Chuck Roades said today. He said the shooting was still under investigation.

Initially, police believed Lara was killed after the shooting, suggesting the mob may have been angry about the attack on Vasquez. But they later learned the killing happened earlier.

If convicted, the 15-year-old will serve the first part of his term in a TYC facility, Dettman said. When he is 18 years old, the youth likely would be transferred to a Texas Department of Corrections unit.

Wednesday night, Dukakis used a nationally broadcast town meeting in Naperville, Ill., to dispute GOP allegations that he is soft on crime, weak on defense, favors gun control and ignores environmental problems.

The vice president, campaigning in Detroit, Sioux Falls, S.D., and Billings, Mont., told voters Wednesday that the Democrats' version of prosperity is higher interest rates, similar to the 21.5 percent rate near the end of the Carter administration.

"We don't need that kind of Democratic prosperity," Bush said. "We need the kind that Ronald Reagan has brought to this country."

The latest national poll by ABC News-Washington Post showed Bush holding an eight-point lead over Dukakis, a somewhat smaller advantage than the double-digit margin the GOP nominee had in two polls earlier this week.

The survey of 1,242 likely voters put the contest at 52-44 percent, closer than the 13-point gap in a CBS News-New York Times poll and the 14 points among likely voters in a Gallup poll released Tuesday.

The ABC-Post poll was conducted during the seven days ending Tuesday, and had a margin of error of plus or minus three percentage points.

In hopes of turning the tide, Dukakis was continuing his series of television appearances with an interview tonight on the "CBS Evening News."

Democratic vice presidential candidate Lloyd Bentsen, who appeared on the program Wednesday night, said the Republicans had run a "miserable campaign" of distortions.

WHALES

But a major factor in the decision against the transmitters was that "a lot of people really didn't want to know" the surviving whales' fate, Harvey said.

In a final frenzy Wednesday, Eskimos using chain saws cut 50 new breathing holes into the ice, nearly as many as they had cut in two weeks. The whales, which grew accustomed to the cutting, repeatedly surfaced in the new holes before the last block of ice was removed.

The animals moved to less than half a mile from a channel carved through the 18-inch-thick ice by two Soviet icebreakers late Tuesday and early Wednesday.

RIG

Norris said he and other crew members fled the derrick as the rig-floor steps were folding up behind them. He said the workers encountered the pocket of air at 7 p.m. Tuesday. The rig started falling into the mire early Wednesday.

The well, Midland-based Siete Petroleum Co.'s No. 1 Irish, was being drilled by Wes-Tex Drilling Co. of Abilene.

The well, a ½-¾-mile step-out from the SMS (Canyon Sand) Field was targeted for a total depth of 7,300 feet in the Canyon Reef Formation near a fork of the Brazos River in Kent County, according to Siete president Toby McWilliams.

The location "is surrounded by holes," producing wells and abandoned locations, he said. "That's what makes it so amazing this happened."

The No. 1 Irish is Siete's "first time drilling in that immediate area," but the two-year-old company operates other wells in the general vicinity, McWilliams said.

John Howerton, assistant drilling superintendent at Wes-Tex, said 60 feet of the Lee C. Moore double-derrick rig began sinking about 2 a.m. Wednesday. Howerton said he doesn't know how the crewmen managed to escape when the rig sank.

"Only God knows," he said.

Howerton said he doesn't know if the rig is salvageable, or if it will be left in the hole. A replacement rig is estimated to cost about $200,000.

Wes-Tex officials said they are surveying the damage and are in contact with the Texas Railroad Commission to determine what to do next.

Officials of the Railroad Commission, which has sent representatives from its Lubbock office to the site, said the blowout has been contained, and no problems are anticipated.

A commission spokesman said rigs have sunk in the region before, but said it is a rare occurrence.

McWilliams said Siete will drill another well on the lease, adding that it is hard to tell whether a drilling contractor will be anxious to put another rig on-site in the area.

"We may have trouble finding one (drilling contractor), or they may be standing in line for the chance."

Democrats pass GOP senate rivals in funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Something strange is going on in this year's 33 election contests for the U.S. Senate: Democrats are raising more campaign money than their Republican rivals.

By the end of last month, according to financial data reported to the Federal Election Commission, the 33 Democrats running for Senate seats had collected $83.6 million toward their campaigns. Their 33 GOP opponents had pulled in $73.3 million.

"It is unusual," said Tom Mason, communications director for the National Republican Senatorial Committee, the party's campaign arm. "But it's incumbency talking," as well as givers' expectations that the Senate will remain under Democratic control, he said.

It is true that incumbents always have an easier time raising campaign money, and that Democrats have more incumbents, 15, up for reelection this year than the Republicans, 12.

And it also is true that most political analysts are predicting not only that Democrats will hold onto their 54-46 Senate majority, but they may pad it by a seat or two come Nov. 8.

GOP incumbents actually fared slightly better than their Democratic counterparts in fund raising. The dozen Republicans averaged $3.8 million apiece as of Sept. 30, while the 15 Democratic senators averaged $3.4 million.

But in nearly every other category — open-seat races, challengers, and political action committee money — the Democrats outdistanced their traditionally well-heeled rivals.

Mason chalks some of the differences up to unusual situations in a handful of states that skew the numbers the Democrats' way, and topping his "unusual list" is Herb Kohl.

"It's like running against a bank," he says of the Milwaukee Democrat who holds a substantial lead in the Wisconsin Senate race against GOP state Senate minority leader Susan Engeleiter. Kohl, owner of the Milwaukee Bucks basketball team and heir to a family grocery store chain, spent $3 million, most of it his own money, to overcome better-known rivals in the primary, and may top $6 million by Election Day.

Engeleiter, who is conceded to be better versed on the issues, was trailing 3-to-1 in fund raising and was down by more than 20 points in the last published statewide poll. Kohl has sought to make his spending a virtue, saying it means he won't be beholden to special interests. "Nobody's senator but yours," is the tagline to his prolific TV spots.

Mason also points to Virginia, an open seat where former Democratic Gov. Charles Robb has been regarded as the prohibitive favorite for years and has been treated by campaign donors more as an incumbent than as an open-seat candidate. Robb had raised $2.7 million, compared with $192,000 for his lesser-known GOP opponent Maurice Dawkins.

In addition, Republicans say the presidential election has diverted attention from bids by quality GOP candidates and made it harder for them to compete for a limited amount of campaign dollars.

But Democrats have other explanations for their new-found parity with the GOP in fund raising.

Family, well-wishers mark hostage's birthday

CADIZ, Ky. (AP) — Now and then, Peggy Say allows herself to think about what would happen if Terry Anderson does not come home. The brother she has not seen in 3½ years marked his 41st birthday today still in captivity.

Anderson

"I tried to think what if he didn't come back, what if they killed him. I don't know what I would do because I would be so angry," Mrs. Say said during a recent interview at her home in a lakeside community near Cadiz.

Anderson's birthday, his fourth in captivity since he was abducted March 16, 1985, in Beirut was being celebrated with parties, prayer services and rallies by friends and well-wishers from the Middle East to his home town of Batavia, N.Y.

Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, is the longest held of the 14 foreign hostages abducted in Lebanon. He was kidnapped by the pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem faction called Islamic Jihad, or Holy War.

"We aren't forgetting him," said Terri Fritz of Batavia's radio station WBAT, which along with a merchants group sponsored a birthday party with a huge cake decorated with 1,321 candles, one for each day of captivity.

In Lebanon, seven newspapers published a letter to Anderson on the eve of his birthday from a group of journalists working for his release.

"We join our hearts with yours in yearning for your freedom. We greet you, we salute you and we encourage you," said the letter from the Journalists' Committee to Free Terry Anderson. "All free men and women who live by the pen share...in your captivity."

Mrs. Say, 47, who planned to spend Anderson's birthday with family and friends in New York City, has devoted most of her energy since his abduction to gaining his release.

While she has tried to contemplate the worst, she and her husband, David, are hopeful her brother will see freedom by the presidential election, less than two weeks away.

"It's such an agony of anticipation," Mrs. Say said.

Father tells daughter of baby swap claim, will not allow tests

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — A man revealed to his 9-year-old daughter that a Pennsylvania couple claims she is their child and was mixed up at birth with another infant, but he insisted he will not allow tests to prove it.

Mays

Robert W. Mays, a 43-year-old roofing supply salesman, identified himself for the first time Wednesday as the father of the girl, Kimberly Michelle Mays. He said he decided to step forward for fear that she would be told by someone else who might frighten her.

"It took me a long time to realize the seriousness of this situation," he said. "At first, I thought it was a terrible joke."

Regina and Ernest Twigg of Langhorne, Pa., claim the girl was born to them but was swapped with another child soon after birth in 1978 at a Florida hospital. The girl they raised as a daughter died in August of a heart defect.

During a news conference at his attorney's office, Mays said he told his daughter a week ago of the Twiggs' months-long battle to require her to submit to genetic blood tests to prove her parentage.

"It was the most difficult thing I ever had to do in my life," he said. "For a moment there was panic in her eyes. She said, 'Daddy, I don't want to move away.'"

"Does it mean I'm not your little girl?" she asked.

Mays said he reassured the blonde fourth-grader that he was her father and nothing would change, then she settled down.

"It was the only time during our hour talk she stopped me. It was all that was important to her. She wanted to make sure everything was still in place, then (she asked) could she go ride her bike," Mays said.

Mays said the Twiggs have presented no evidence to show Kimberly could be their daughter. And even if genetic tests supported their claim, Mays said he would not surrender her.

"I would fight to the ends of the earth for her," he said.

"I wouldn't care if they traced her heritage to Cabbage Patch U.S.A., she is my daughter."

An attorney for the Twiggs, William Post, said Mays was "irresponsible" for coming forward.

"The Twiggs were terribly distressed and amazed that he would do a thing like that,...that he would call a press conference and expose a child to this kind of publicity, Post said.

The Twiggs have said their daughter, a healthy girl, was switched in a baby-selling scheme at Hardee Memorial Hospital in Wauchula for a sickly child. Hospital workers then altered records to hide the swap, they allege.

Kimberly was born at the hospital in late 1978, about the same time as the daughter the Twiggs raised, Arlena. The couple said genetic tests this summer proved Arlena was not their biological daughter.

The Twiggs filed a $100 million suit against the hospital and some of its employees and persuaded the FBI to investigate. The FBI failed to find sufficient evidence that federal law had been violated.

This month, the Twiggs asked a judge in Sarasota to force Kimberly to submit to sophisticated genetic tests to determine if she has O-positive blood like theirs. But Mays said he also has O-type blood and doesn't know what type Kimberly has.

The judge has yet to rule on whether the testing should be required.

Mays said he hopes his disclosure will help avoid a long legal battle that could evolve into a custody fight with the Twiggs.

"We want them to please, think about this child and not cause trauma in her life," he said.

Truman's '48 presidential upset commemorated

WASHINGTON (AP) — They were wild about Harry Truman all over again, as graying veterans of the 1948 presidential campaign gathered to commemorate the biggest upset in U.S. political history — and scoff at the notion that it could ever happen again.

Veterans of the Truman and Dewey campaigns joined pollsters and pundits who emerged from that election with egg on their faces at a reunion Wednesday night to watch a public television documentary, "The Great Upset of '48."

The 60-minute show will air nationally Tuesday night.

As James Reston, who covered the race for The New York Times, put it in the documentary shown at the National Press Club: "The only question about '48 is: Who screwed it up the most — the Republicans or the reporters?"

Thomas E. Dewey, the Republican governor of New York, had such a commanding lead in the polls that the Roper organization did not bother to survey after early September.

Truman had launched his campaign haplessly, addressing a half-empty hall in Omaha, dedicating an airport in Idaho to the wrong person and pronouncing Josef Stalin "a decent fellow" in Oregon.

But "Give-em-hell Harry" also cudgeled the "do-nothing" Republican-controlled Congress, vetoed the Taft-Hartley bill to shore up his labor support, appealed to farmers and stood fast for civ rights while his opponent ran a bland, issue-less race, content to sit on a lead.

"The polls were completely wrong," said Eric Sevareid, then a CBS Radio reporter, who recalls the big crowds that turned out for the supposedly doomed Democrat who had inherited the Oval Office in 1945 on the death of Franklin D. Roosevelt.

"We began to think, 'Something is going on here,' but none of us had enough guts to go bet even at 9-1," said Sevareid.

"The picture of this indomitable little man fighting against extraordinary odds began to grab the American people," said Clark Clifford, Truman's White House counsel. "We'd go into towns and expect 500 people to be in the yard when the train pulled in and there'd be 2,000."

Dewey, a former prosecutor, was so sure of victory he had taken to dropping names of his Cabinet, and "he had been negotiating the purchase of a suit to be inaugurated in," recalled author Robert J. Donovan, who covered the race for the New York Herald Tribune.

Reporters joked that Dewey's middle initial stood for "Elusive."

"So far as I am concerned, this campaign will not create division among the people," Dewey assured voters.

When Alice Roosevelt Longworth, Teddy's daughter, lampooned Dewey as "the little man on the wedding cake," his staff urged Dewey to shave off his mustache, but Dewey's wife vetoed the move. "She thought that was trimming his sails for political purposes," recalled Herbert Brownell, Dewey's campaign manager and later attorney general under Dwight D. Eisenhower.

When Newsweek canvassed 50 top political writers, they all picked Dewey.

Truman shrugged it off, telling Clifford, "I know every one of these 50 men. Not one of them has enough sense to pound sand in a rat hole."

"One thing for sure: nobody ever guessed again," said Edward Herlihy, who helped H.V. Kaltenborn broadcast the election for NBC Radio. It was Kaltenborn who assured Americans that despite an early lead for Truman, Dewey would prevail "when the outlying districts are reported."

The "Buran" space shuttle sits atop rockets at a Soviet space launch facility.

Soviets ready to launch their reusable shuttle

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union said Wednesday it will launch its space shuttle Buran on an unmanned mission this week, following months of delays similar to those that plagued the maiden voyage of its U.S. counterpart.

A government commission set the launch for 6:23 a.m. Moscow time Saturday (11:23 p.m. EDT Friday) after receiving reports from specialists following several thousand tests of the Buran and its booster rocket, the Energia, the official news agency Tass reported.

"Buran" is Russian for snowstorm, an appropriate name since the first snow of the season fell this week in Moscow.

Preparations for pouring nearly 2,000 tons of liquid hydrogen, oxygen and hydrocarbon fuel into Energia, billed as the world's most powerful booster rocket, are to begin Thursday, Tass said. The rocket is capable of carrying more than 100 tons of cargo into Earth orbit, and up to 20 tons to the planets Mars and Venus.

State-run television on Wednesday showed the white delta-shaped Buran, with its name emblazoned in red, attached to the Energia on a launch pad at the Soviet Union's Baikonur Cosmodrome on the Central Asian steppes of the republic of Kazakhstan.

Launch was originally planned for the first half of this year, but was postponed as technical problems arose, officials said. A Soviet TV announcer indicated Wednesday the launch time could be pushed back because tests of systems may take longer than anticipated.

"The 29th of October is a day when confidence, hopes and fears will be confirmed or refuted," the announcer said.

National Party retains urban South Africa

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Results today showed the ruling National Party won control of the major cities in municipal elections and candidates who advocate stricter racial segregation captured much of the country's heartland.

Only a tiny fraction of the country's 26 million blacks voted in Wednesday's segregated elections, which the white government described as the most significant extension of democracy in South African history.

Government opponents said the black votes were meaningless because blacks have no vote in national affairs, and only about 1.4 million were registered in the contested districts.

The balloting was the first in which people of all races voted the same day. A total of 7,229 seats were being contested, most in white towns and cities. Of the 1,839 seats available on black councils, only 905 had more than one candidate, and 138 had no candidate.

The government declared itself satisfied with the results, and said they would be a basis for choosing black leaders to negotiate on national issues.

Constitutional Development and Planning Minister Chris Heunis said, "A significant percentage had voted for peaceful evolutionary change in South Africa. These people have shown that the constitutional structures, as they are unfolding, are acceptable to them."

State-run Radio South Africa estimated the black voter turnout was about one-third nationwide.

Turnout of black voters ranged from as low as 11 percent in Soweto, the nation's largest township with 2.3 million residents, to up to 80 percent in some small rural communities.

But the independent South African Press Association reported that even in townships where the turnout was high, the number of blacks eligible to vote was so low that the voting represented just a fraction of the black population.

The country's 5 million whites maintain separate municipal councils, residential districts, schools and health services.

Ribbons signify city's commitment

The ribbons are red, not yellow, and they're tied around a lot more than oak trees but the symbolism is as poignant as ever: Where there is a ribbon, there is commitment.

Midland is no stranger to drug abuse, but it's draped with red ribbons this week.

The ribbons are a way of calling attention not only to the problem — the despair of drug abuse — but also to the answer. That answer is found in the willingness of countless Midlanders from all walks of life to pursue a drug-free lifestyle.

That's the only way to stop the flow of drugs into this country. Where there is no demand, there will be no drugs. But reaching that point won't be simple.

President and Mrs. Ronald Reagan have led the charge to a drug-free society. The Red Ribbon campaign began in 1985 when a federal drug agent named Enrique Camarena was murdered by Mexican drug traffickers. Today, however, the campaign has filtered down to the community level where the importance of saying "no" to drugs can be stressed in the schools, in the workplace, in the home, and everyplace else by ordinary people who see the need to make a change in our society.

This week, the Midland and Greenwood Independent School Districts will be participating in Red Ribbon endeavors. Through such activities as English essays, poster contests, rallies and balloon lifts, the schools hope to get the point across to youngsters and parents alike that drugs are not okay; they're deadly and should be avoided.

The road to a drug-free society will be neither short nor smooth. It will take education, desire and unending effort. For some it will take a period of rehabilitation; for others, it will take a pledge to never start using drugs. It will take the work of people who normally don't like to "get involved." More than those ingredients, however, it will take a giant dose of commitment on the part of each of us.

But that's what this week and those red ribbons are all about. Commitment.

LETTERS

Column showed change

Lewis Grizzard's column of Oct. 17 reveals the total transformation our society has recently experienced. We now boldly, yes even proudly, say, selfishness is compassion and killing is kindness. The columnist calls decent citizens who work to save innocent lives, "crazies." He then callously disregards the most helpless person in his entire story — the unborn child.

This baby was not destroyed out of compassion but as the mother stated, it was "the last thing either of us needed in our lives..." That child was conceived by two grown adults and then destroyed.

But Grizzard has done us one good turn. His story accurately explains why most of the 25 million unborn children have been slaughtered in our nation since 1973. The unborn are considered "things" and not people, and they are very inconvenient. Let us not be blinded by cries for "rights to privacy" and "my civil rights" from the fact that the most innocent, helpless people in our society are being killed by the millions. Just stop a moment and think of it. Millions!

The prophet from centuries ago cried out "Woe to those who call evil good and good evil." God have mercy on all of us.

Agnes served beer

This letter is in regards to the letter of June 16 about the Agnes Cafe and serving beer. When she was located on Wall Street across from the old Scharbauer Hotel, she served beer for two or three years before she moved to Baird Street.

It is true that she helped people who were down on their luck — but not all of her employees were drunks. Yes, she preferred serving food instead of beer and George Bush did eat there, and if there was an empty chair she'd sit someone at a table with an empty chair. No one seemed to mind.

By the way, she threw a fellow out in the street because at the noon hour he didn't want food, just wanted to drink. He later became a city politician and good friend of Agnes.

Me and Ferral Volwa are ex-employees of Agnes.

Get the facts straight

In regard to the statement made by David Mandell in his Oct. 23rd letter, that "there was over $400 worth of long-distance calls made from the county cemetery," the facts are that $400 is the yearly budgeted amount for the total telephone service, not long-distance calls. Records will show that long-distance calls in 1987 amounted to $2.52 and $0.00 so far in 1988.

Please Mandell, get the facts straight before casting a shadow on the operating costs of county government and the county cemetery.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, Oct. 27, the 301st day of 1988. There are 65 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

In 1858, the 26th president of the United States, Theodore Roosevelt, was born in New York City.

On this date:

In 1795, the United States and Spain signed the Treaty of San Lorenzo, which provided for free navigation of the Mississippi River.

In 1880, on his 22nd birthday, Theodore Roosevelt married Alice Lee.

In 1886, the musical fantasy "A Night on Bald Mountain," written by Modest Mussorgsky in 1867 and revised after his death by Nikolai Rimsky-Korsakov, was performed in St. Petersburg, Russia.

In 1904, the first rapid transit subway, the IRT, opened in New York City.

In 1914, author-poet Dylan Thomas was born in Swansea, Wales.

In 1938, Du Pont announced it had coined a name for its new synthetic yarn: nylon.

Dukakis showed foreign affairs savvy

WASHINGTON — George Bush has been trying to paint Michael Dukakis as a foreign affairs lowbrow, but an incident that occurred 16 years ago shows the Democratic candidate to be far more prescient on some foreign policy matters than his opponent.

Jack Anderson

In 1972, a brutal military junta ruled Greece, and the Nixon administration was propping it up with military aid. From 1967, when the junta seized power, until the U.S. elections of 1972, in fact, the colonels had been given $197 million. The military regime was immensely unpopular and U.S. support for it caused millions of Greeks to turn against this country.

Two years later, Turkish forces invaded Cyprus. The junta in Athens lost its grip and was replaced by a civilian government. Anti-American feelings ran high; in 1975, the CIA station chief in Athens was murdered; and in 1980, a stridently anti-American demagogue, Andreas Papandreou, was elected prime minister.

In 1988, the United States is still deeply resented thoughout Greece. Athens has reduced its role in NATO and the U.S. is in danger of losing access to four valuable and strategic military bases.

As the conservatives of three decades ago might have put it: Who lost Greece? The answer: The Republican Nixon-Agnew administration, which stubbornly stuck by the Greek dictatorship until it was too late to withdraw with a positive image.

Where was George Bush during this period? He was the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations. As far as can be determined, he was a staunch supporter of the Nixon-Agnew policy toward Athens. At least we could find no evidence to the contrary.

And where was Michael Dukakis in 1972? He was a private attorney in Boston and the moderator of the public television show, "The Advocates." As a result of this exposure, he was a prominent member of the Greek-American community.

In September, 1972, he signed a fund-raising letter in support of Democratic presidential candidate George McGovern. It said:

"The activities of the military junta in Greece and the generally pro-junta attitude of the Nixon administration are, I am sure, familiar to you. The U.S. government's all but overt support of the colonels is typical of an administration that seems to have forgotten what the United States has traditionally stood for in the international community.

"George McGovern has made his position on the Greek issue clear. In a recent letter to Elias Demetracopoulos (a Greek exile leader in Washington) ...he made the following commitment:

"'In January of next year, I would announce the immediate termination of all U.S. aid to the Greek dictatorship. ... I would further order a basic review of the agreement ... for the establishment of bases and home porting facilities for U.S. military shipping on Greek soil. ... I would reduce to an absolute minimum the number of U.S. military personnel stationed in Greece.'"

Dukakis continued his appeal with this prophetic statement:

"There can be no doubt about the importance of November's presidential election to those of us who have watched events in Greece over the past several years with dismay and sadness.

"If Nixon is re-elected, the present American policy favoring the junta will continue. If McGovern is elected, it will end."

The policy did continue. Greece was lost. We now know where Michael Dukakis stood on the issue.

Where was George?

MEDIGAP PROBE — We recently reported on a new study that shows how elderly Americans are sometimes conned into buying needless health insurance policies. The policies are nicknamed "Medigap" insurance because they are designed to cover the costs Medicare does not. Even though new state and federal laws have curbed misleading marketing practices, the Federal Trade Commission reported that some sales people continue to convince the elderly to buy policies they may not need. The House Energy and Commerce Committee is continuing to investigate the problem. Anyone who thinks they have been the victim of underhanded or high-pressure insurance sales pitches is encouraged to write to the Energy and Commerce Committee in care of the House of Representatives, Washington, DC, 20515.

MINI-EDITORIAL — Australia has provided one more incentive for smokers to kick the habit. A Melbourne bus driver recently won $52,000 in an out-of-court settlement after he sued the transit authority, claiming he was the victim of the cigarettes smoked by his passengers.

Weicker race gives conservatives hard choice

HARTFORD, Conn. — Come through the looking glass, into the wonderland of Connecticut's Senate race.

Candidate A praised U.S. action against Libya and Grenada and in the Persian Gulf, questions the restraints the War Powers Act places on Presidents, denounces Castro as "more of a Marxist-Leninist than Gorbachev," endorsed the Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction plan and praised the nomination of Robert Bork.

George F. Will

Candidate B denounced the U.S. bombing of Libya as a "gutter act," called the invasion of Grenada worse than any recent Soviet act, reveres the War Powers Act, praises Castro's "enormous intellect and idealism," opposed not only the Bork nomination but also that of William Rehnquist to be Chief Justice, opposes SDI, contra aid, Gramm-Rudman spending restraints and criticized Connecticut's Republican 1986 Senate nominee for criticizing the Democratic incumbent's liberalism.

Candidate A is attorney general Joseph Liberman, the Democrat. Candidate B is the Republican incumbent seeking a fourth term, Sen. Lowell Weicker. Suddenly it seems possible that Weicker's seat, until recently presumed safe, may be yanked from beneath him, with many Republicans helping with the yanking.

In 1970, Weicker slipped into the Senate by winning just 42 percent of the vote in a three-way race in which a second Democrat ran as an independent. In 1976, riding a Watergate wave (Weicker honed his grandstanding skills on the Watergate committee), he won 58 percent against a poorly financed Democrat. In 1982 he won 50 percent against a Democratic opponent of Lebanese extraction whose extreme liberalism divided the Democratic Party and whose views on the Middle East drove away Jewish voters. (The Democrat got 46 percent; a minor candidate 4 percent.)

Today the Democratic Party is united behind a Jewish candidate. Polls over the last eight months show a steeply declining trend line for Weicker support. His agitated performance in a recent debate belied his professed disbelief in polls showing the race even.

Because of actions taken when Republicans controlled the state legislature, this will be Connecticut's first statewide election without a straight party-line lever on voting machines. This will stimulate ticket splitting to Weicker's disadvantage, while Bush carries Connecticut.

By preening as a maverick motivated by principle, Weicker has catered to Connecticut's independent streak. "My party," he says sonorously, "is the state of Connecticut." But Connecticut's interests probably suffer because when he tends to appeal on its behalf to collegial feelings the appeals fall on ears deafened by his noisy moral exhibitionism that has made him one of the least liked senators.

Connecticut does well from defense spending, but this is because of industries dating to the Second World War and an even older tradition. As Michael Barone writes, Connecticut "has always been a state of tinkerers and innovators" where people "have worked with vast ingenuity and unusual precision." It produced Eli Whitney's cotton gin and his rifle made of interchangeable components, Colt industries, Sikorski helicopters, Pratt and Whitney jet engines, and United Technologies.

The contrasting inelegance of Weicker, whose rhetoric has been described as "communication skills indigenous to a junior-high-school playground" is illustrated by his analysis of the 1988 Republican platform: "I think the platform sucks." Of the intellectual idealist Castro, Weicker says, "I saw what he has done with my own eyes. By Caribbean standards it's Park Avenue." However, "Castro has been known to snow people, but he didn't snow me."

Republican participation in the attempt to retire Weicker involves people other than hard-shell conservatives and thinking more profound than the ideological urge to purge liberals. Liberman is a liberal, although not to the Weicker degree or in the hydrophobic Weicker manner. And serious, long-standing Republican activists who are now active against Weicker know this: A Weicker vote that would give Republicans control of the Senate would be far more important than all his other votes combined.

Because few Republicans would sacrifice Senate control even for the deep cathartic pleasure of defeating Weicker, he probably will call in some Republican senators to lie heroically on his behalf by exaggerating the chance of Republican control. But control would result only if Bush's coattails (an oxymoron?) produced a gain of four seats. A net loss is more likely.

So, free from the fear that they may cost their party Senate control, the challenge for anti-Weicker Republicans is to relate their rebellion to something more worthy than ideological fastidiousness. It should be something even larger than the correct belief that Weicker's political style involves too much subtraction from public civility. The rebellion should be based on this idea: There must be some limits to the disregard of party loyalty: some boundaries, however broad, to the naked individual entrepreneurship that characterizes political careers like Weicker's.

ART BUCHWALD

To borrow clothes or not isn't only question!

I guess that the only election question left is, will Barbara Bush or Kitty Dukakis borrow clothes from American fashion designers when one of them becomes first lady of the land?

Art Buchwald

It probably wouldn't have come up if Time magazine had not revealed that our best couturiers were throwing millions of dollars' worth of outfits over the White House fence for Nancy Reagan to wear. Mrs. Reagan's press secretary explained why, after promising not to do it any more, Mrs. Reagan continued to borrow from the designers. The press secretary said, "She set her own little rule, and she broke her own little rule."

You could argue that by wearing borrowed clothes, Mrs. Reagan was helping the domestic fashion industry. Or critics might suggest that in taking $20,000 gowns, Mrs. Reagan was putting the White House under obligation to the designers who dress our upper classes. On the other hand, you could defend Nancy's actions because there is too much to lose if we allowed our first ladies to be dressed by Sears-Roebuck.

Finally you could do what most people do when they read the Nancy Reagan yarn and exclaim, "This is terrible. I am so shocked. I don't know if I have the strength to turn to the inside page and read the rest of the story."

But, as Oscar de la Renta once said, "Those who do not remember the past are doomed to repeat it."

Which raises the subject of how many dresses Kitty or Barbara intend to borrow while in the White House.

I called the Bush headquarters to speak to someone high up in the campaign. They gave me the person in charge of the motor pool.

At first, she seemed wary about answering questions concerning Mrs. Bush's clothes.

"Will Mrs. Bush continue the Nancy Reagan policy of calling up Adolfo and saying, 'I don't have anything to wear for a tea today with the wife of the prime minister of the Solomon Islands'?"

"At this point in time, Mrs. Bush will continue using her own wardrobe because she intends to be with Mr. Bush when he goes out to fight crime in the streets."

"Suppose Galanos or Valentino comes up to Mrs. Bush and says, 'If you wear my gowns, the country will prosper and your husband will balance the budget'? Would that persuade her to borrow some dresses?"

"No, because Mrs. Bush does not make such a big thing out of clothing. By the same token, Mrs. Bush admires Mrs. Reagan's taste in clothes, even though we have to assume that there are many skeletons in Nancy's closet."

"Does this mean that Mrs. Bush will say 'no' to Halston?"

"I didn't say that. If she becomes first lady, she will wear what she thinks is appropriate for the occasion — no more and no less."

"If Mrs. Bush moves into the White House on inauguration day and finds all the clothes that Mrs. Reagan wore still in the closet, what will she do?"

"She'll give them to Vice President Dan Quayle, who will be in charge of crisis management."

I decided to try to get through to Kitty Dukakis. The Dukakis people turned me over to a high-level messenger in the Washington office. He told me that Kitty had no intention of wearing any designer outfits in the White House. "Mrs. Dukakis feels that wearing couturier garments would detract from her husband's efforts to give the country catastrophic health insurance coverage."

"Is Mrs. Dukakis a clothes horse to start with?"

"No. As Michael Dukakis told Kitty the other night, 'You are no Nancy Reagan.'"

He added that when it comes to buying outfits, Kitty intends to stick with Filene's Basement, which Mike is going to make the summer White House.

"What does Mrs. Dukakis think Nancy should do with the clothes she borrowed?"

"Give them to the Imelda Marcos' Fashion School of Design."

WORLD in brief

Palestinians issue appeal to people

JERUSALEM (AP) — Leaders of the Palestinian uprising have issued a direct appeal to the Israeli people, calling in a leaflet for Israel's withdrawal from the occupied lands and the establishment of a Palestinian state.

Meanwhile, violence continued Wednesday in the 11-month uprising against Israeli occupation. A three-year-old Palestinian girl died in the Gaza Strip town of Khan Yunis, and her family claimed the death was caused by tear gas inhalation, the army said.

Ten other Palestinians were reported wounded in clashes with Israeli soldiers in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir inaugurated the Jewish settlement of Naaleh in the West Bank and promised to expand the controversial Jewish communities if his right-wing Likud bloc wins the Nov. 1 election.

The leaflets, signed by Unified Nationalist Command of the Intefadeh (Arabic, for uprising), were distributed to foreign correspondents outside Israel.

Czech freedom marked

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Authorities today mark the anniversary of the nation's independence for the first time in 40 years of Communist rule with mass celebrations apparently intended to overshadow banned independent events.

For the first time since 1968, when the "Prague Spring" reforms of ousted Communist leader Alexander Dubcek still held sway, an official will lay a wreath on the grave of Thomas Garrigue Masaryk, founder and president of the democratic republic of Czechoslovakia.

With the backing of the United States, Britain and France, Masaryk and other campaigners for Czechoslovak independence proclaimed a democratic republic on Oct. 28, 1918.

World War I was coming to an end, and the giant Austro-Hungarian empire, of which Slovakia and the Czech lands of Bohemia and Moravia were part, was on the verge of breaking up.

Firm could be shut down

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Corazon Aquino today threatened to shut down the company whose passenger ship sailed into Typhoon Ruby and sank with hundreds of people aboard.

Authorities ordered the owners to explain why they should not lose their license for letting the vessel sail into a storm whose winds reached 140 mph.

The latest casualty figures indicate just 197 people survived the sinking Monday of the 2,855-ton Dona Marilyn in heavy seas about 300 miles southeast of Manila.

The coast guard said an undetermined number of others reached a small island more than 100 miles west of where the ship sank. At least 33 bodies have been recovered, officials said.

Soviet body gathers

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet parliament convened today to adopt a 1989 budget in the face of official pronouncements that the government must find a way to slash deficit spending and increase food supplies.

The 1,500 deputies assembled for the regular Supreme Soviet fall session are expected to sit through two days' worth of long, dry speeches before unanimously approving the annual budget and development plan submitted by the leadership.

But some Western diplomats predicted today's session could be different as the legislature deals with what the government has called a serious budget deficit. Tass, the official news agency, acknowledged the problem of spending beyond the government's revenues "was passed over in silence previously."

Some analysts say the Soviet deficit could rival that in the United States, where $100 billion deficits have become routine.

Chinese births decline

BEIJING (AP) — Chinese family planners today claimed a slackening of the population explosion in the first half of this year, but said keeping the growth rate at manageable levels will not be easy.

Li Honggui, a senior official in the Family Planning Commission, also disclosed at a news conference that there were 10.39 million abortions, 46 for every 100 live births, in China last year.

China denies it forces women to undergo abortions, although local officials are said to exert heavy pressure on women with unplanned pregnancies to abort.

According to a nationwide survey of 500,000 households, there were 8.84 births and 3.39 deaths per thousand people in the first six months of 1988, for a natural increase of 5.45 per thousand.

Mines sales considered

MONTERREY, Mexico (AP) — Pending sales of two government-owned copper mines could bring $2 billion to debt-ridden Mexico, a government spokesman said.

The winning bidders for Mexicana de Cobre and Compania Minera de Cananea will be announced next Tuesday, the government said Wednesday. Bidding on the two mines in northern Sonora state closed today.

The announcement ended speculation that the government had changed its mind on the controversial sale.

Abortion pill distribution may resume

PARIS (AP) — An official of the French pharmaceutical company that suspended distribution of the abortion pill RU 486 said today that the pill could become available again if the public outcry subsides.

"We could resume distribution of RU 486 if the atmosphere returns to normal," Pierre Joly, vice president of the Roussel-Uclaf, said on French radio.

Joly denied the company made the decision because it feared a threatened boycott of its other products, saying "a boycott could only be carried out by doctors who have to put the interests of their patients above everything else."

When the French government last month authorized use of the anti-hormone substance in registered abortion clinics, Joly said a moral dimension developed.

"Public opinion was unleashed," he said. "We witnessed an orchestrated campaign that grew in strength," mentioning anti-abortion groups in the United States, France and West Germany.

"In such an environment, it was possible for a woman who had began treatment with RU 486 to stop, thereby risking giving birth to a defective child," Joly said.

A communique issued by the company Wednesday said distribution of the drug worldwide was stopped in response to an "outcry of public opinion at home and abroad."

The story was front-page news in French and U.S. newspapers.

The Marseille daily Le Provencal said in an editorial that when the pill was invented the World Health Organization welcomed it, China was enthusiastic and the United States said it met all medical specifications.

"It is true that the religious authorities and the right-to life groups were shocked by this progress," the paper said. "But all the same, are we going to be without a voice when confronted with these fundamentalist manifestations of faith against science and against the law?"

The company's decision was hailed by Cardinal Albert Decourtray, head of the French Roman Catholic conference of bishops, as well as by anti-abortion groups.

At the Ministry of Health, which authorized prescription of the drug last Sept. 23 subject to strict medical supervision, an official said the decision "makes one wonder about who's in charge" at Roussel-Uclaf.

The official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said he regretted that the company decided to stop distribution after all the research, medical trails and other steps necessary to get the pill to the market.

He said he was surprised by the reasons the company gave because "in France, anyway, the protests were pretty weak and did not lead to either catastrophe or strong feelings. The company acted to preserve its image abroad."

The official said the government could not reverse the decision because it was a minority shareholder in the Paris-based company. The majority shareholder is the West German chemical group Hoechst.

The pill, also known as Mifepristone, is an anti-hormone that acts by blocking the action of progesterone.

Boulter claims Bentsen will strike out with voters

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

The Los Angeles Dodgers did it to the Oakland Athletics, but can Amarillo Congressman Beau Boulter emerge victorious in the senatorial race pitting him against the odds-on favorite?

Depends on whom one asks or what one reads.

A recent Dallas Morning News poll showed incumbent Sen. Lloyd Bentsen a full 25 points ahead of the Panhandle Republican. Time magazine this week dubbed the Texas race a "cinch" for Bentsen.

Boulter, however, thinks differently.

At a press conference Wednesday, Boulter said the politically see-sawing philosophies of Bentsen's will come back to haunt him on election day.

As election day draws near, it is "becoming evident that Lloyd Bentsen is treating his Senate seat as a consolation," Boulter claimed.

Under the Texas "LBJ" law, Bentsen is legally running for the office of senator and vice president concurrently.

Bentsen cut "a deal" with the Democrats, Boulter said. The 18-year Senate veteran agreed to "serve as a smokescreen for the liberal" tendencies of Dukakis and win Texas' electoral bloc in return for a chance at the second-most powerful job in the nation, he added.

Beau Boulter

Lloyd Bentsen III told the Reporter-Telegram last week his father did indeed want the vice presidency, but maintained moderate Republican supporters could take solace in the fact Bentsen's conservative ideology would remain intact regardless of who his boss is.

But with the polls also showing Republican presidential nominee George Bush's lead widening over that of Democrat Michael Dukakis, Bentsen is gearing his energies back toward the race he thinks he can win, Boulter said.

Dukakis staffers will say Bentsen's final campaign stint — in Texas and only in Texas — is geared toward galvanizing a Democratic win here, Boulter added.

However, the Amarillo congressman said Bentsen "is like a little boy who's lost a fight...hears his momma calling and is going home."

Texans, Boulter hopes, will realize Bentsen "doesn't want to be senator and if he's comfortable with Dukakis, he shouldn't be senator."

Sen. Bill Armstrong, R-Colo., in town with Boulter Wednesday, said Bentsen's actions have perplexed fellow legislators.

"We haven't seen much of him," Armstrong said.

"But most of us find it surprising the things he's doing and saying. Why would a Texan support Michael Dukakis?" the senator asked.

"If Bentsen were running solely for the Senate, everything he'd campaign on would be different than what Dukakis stands for," Armstrong added.

In February, Bentsen gave an "eloquent" speech in favor of financial aid to the Contras in Nicaragua, Boulter said.

But since the Dukakis nomination, Bentsen sang a different tune in opting against sending money to help the "freedom fighters" battle a faction he'd earlier dubbed "communists," Boulter charged.

Federal jury to decide if asbestos hurt families

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The effects of asbestos fibers on the health of three Odessa men who had worked with asbestos insulation and building products and two of their wives are being considered this week by a civil jury in federal court in Midland.

Fears are that the microscopic asbestos fibers, once embedded in the lungs, would cause scar tissue and would result in disabilities. Those infirmities include shortness of breath and lung diseases, including cancer of the lungs and digestive tract.

Plaintiffs in the lawsuit are Nolberto S. Aguirre, 52, and his wife, Edubijes T. Aguirre, 46; Aguirre's brother, Guillermo Aguirre, 63, and his wife, Carmen Aguirre, 65; and Antonio Galindo, 53.

Defendants in the suit include Armstrong World Industries Inc., The Celotex Corp, GAF Corp., Keene Corp., Raymark Industries Inc., and Owens-Illinois Inc.

Seven other companies, initially named as defendants in the suit for unspecified damages, have reached settlements with the plaintiffs and have been dismissed from the case.

In his testimony, Guillermo Aguirre said that he was suffering from shortness of breath and malaise.

"I was getting very tired, fatigued," he said. "I would not get enough air if I walked fast enough," he said. "It makes a difference on my marriage. It has been too much anxiety, fear."

Aguirre said that he is an ex-smoker who quit tobacco about 25 years ago.

"I have asbestos in my lungs. I know that," he said. "I know that my future may not be a future. How should I say?" said Aguirre, who said he was a warehouseman most of his life. He is now retired.

Defense attorney Tom Taylor of Houston referred to the testimony of plaintiffs' witness, Albuquerque, N.M., physician Dr. William I. Christensen, who had testified that Aguirre had scar tissue in his lungs. Christensen had said that Aguirre likely would not develop cancer.

"Doesn't that make you feel better?" Taylor asked.

"No way," Aguirre said.

Crowd traps man accused of trying to kidnap boy

From Staff Reports

BIG SPRING — An angry crowd of mall shoppers subdued a 47-year-old Big Spring man for police after he allegedly tried to kidnap an 8-year-old youth from the mall Tuesday night, a Big Spring police detective said today.

Morris Lester Madden was arrested near the Highland Shopping Center about 8 p.m. Tuesday, Detective Sgt. Bill King said. He was charged with aggravated kidnapping, and was ordered held in lieu of $90,000 bond by Justice of the Peace Willie Grant.

The boy, who was not injured, had gone to the mall with family members and friends. Sometime between 7:30 p.m. and 7:45 p.m., Madden allegedly lured the boy outside with an offer of money. Once the boy was outside, Madden "grabbed him and ran," according to King.

"The kid got away from him, and he (Madden) was held at the scene by other patrons of the mall," the detective said.

Madden did not know the boy or his family, according to King.

Dead skunk in abandoned well threat to water supply

By RICK BROWN
Assistant City Editor

An obnoxious smell at Debbie Conkling's house seemed strongest when she irrigated her lawn, but she had no idea a skunk had fallen down an abandoned water well on her property.

In fact, Ms. Conkling didn't even know the well existed until a man came to fix a burned out control box in the old shed that contained the opening.

"We knew that a skunk had died in that little house because we could smell it," said Ms. Conkling, 34, 4609 Tattenham Corner. "I didn't want to go out and see it, so I just shut the door."

After she found the eight-inch opening — the Friday before the one-year anniversary of the Jessica McClure rescue — "It scared me knowing there was a hole in the ground out there," she said.

"My kids are way too big to fall down something like that, but I have a puppy..." she added. "Even if it hadn't been for the Jessica story, I would have done something."

What Mrs. Conkling did was call Ron Stanley at J-R's Water Well Service and Supply, who alerted her to what he considers the real danger behind open, abandoned wells.

"The primary concern of open water wells is not people falling in, it's keeping the wells from being contaminated," Stanley said this morning.

Stanley did not know whether the skunk smell had traveled from the abandoned well to the well that serves Ms. Conkling's home, but he was sure that bacteria could travel between the two because "the wells do connect," he said.

The driller earlier this week attempted to fish the dead animal out of the 90-foot-deep well, but to no avail. However, "there's no doubt" the skunk was there," he said, because "we got pieces of it back."

The alternative solution was to pour "a high dosage of chlorine" down the hole for purification purposes, said Stanley. Now, Ms. Conkling says she smells a swimming pool when she waters her lawn.

In addition to the purifying chemicals, Stanley also plugged the well with cement to make sure the mishap never occurred again.

The process cost $219, but Mrs. Conkling was undeterred by the price.

"I grew up knowing about abandoned wells," she said. "But it never occurred to me that they could contaminate the water.

"People have a responsibility not only to their own families, but to the community to have their wells plugged, because that's everybody's water supply," she said.

Northern Pikes find success through hard work

The Canadian rock group, The Northern Pikes, from left, Merl Bryck, Don Schmid, Bryan Potvin and Jay Semko, open for English singer and songwriter Robert Palmer tonight at Ector County Coliseum. Showtime is 7:30 p.m. Tickets, priced at $15, may be purchased at the door.

By GEORGIA TODD TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

Success for the Canadian rock group The Northern Pikes meant sacrifice. When the group formed in January 1984, the members decided to allow themselves $7 a day to live on and to invest the rest of their wages in their music.

"We planned to record at least one individual record, which meant financing ourselves and sending it out to as many people as possible," says Jay Semko, vocalist and bass player for the four-member band. "We were isolated in the prairie and didn't have the accessibility to a big city like Toronto or Vancouver, so it was physically impossible for us to get there without a reputation to precede us."

Band members spent hours working assembly-line fashion sleeving, packaging and mailing "to anyone who we thought could give us some kind of advancement" on a six-song record they had financed and recorded on their own Black & Round label.

"We kept on playing the bars, doing Top 40 and not doing it very good but good enough to make a living," Semko says. "We were always more interested in our own music and writing and performing our own music. In bars, people want to hear what they know."

He laughs as he recalls how they used to slip one of their own songs into the evening's gig.

"We'd say, 'Here's a new one by...' " The name of a popular group would be inserted and the band would play the selection. Afterwards if someone came up to them and said, "That's a good song. When's that record coming out?" the band would confess it was their song and explain how "club managers don't want us to play our own."

When they open tonight for English singer and songwriter Robert Palmer at Ector County Coliseum, they won't be slipping their songs in via someone else's name. Today, the group is considered by the Toronto Star to be "the best commercial pop band in Canada" and has two albums on Virgin Records to its credit — "Big Blue Sky," recorded in 1987, and "Secrets of the Alibi," released this year.

Honest reply to hackneyed greeting gives pause for thought

Ed Todd

The other day, I asked a fellow, "How are you doing?"

It was my old-line Southern greeting: Hi. Howdy. Hello.

Nothing more.

But he took the question as more than mere rhetoric and responded: "I don't know."

Well, right off, I began reading all sorts of things into that simple reply. I ignored the literal. I failed to consider the honesty of the answer. It didn't occur to me to ask, "How so?" or "What do you mean?"

Fact is, my paranoia turned that reply every which way. Conflict set in. I felt the slap of the gentleman's white glove across my face. I could hear the avenger's plea: "I demand satisfaction." A duel would be called at dawn, and one of us would fall wounded and dying.

I was angry. The response became a curse. Why the slap? Why the terse answer? He doesn't like me any more. Did he ever? He was being sharp and caustic. Resentment clouded inward vision like an early-morning fog.

Then, a few days later, someone asked me if I were faring well. Asked how I was doing.

For some reason, I decided to give a straight-shooter's reply — to be honest about it — instead of murmuring the everyday response: "Fine."

So, I said: "I don't know."

I really didn't and told the person so. I wasn't trying to be cute.

At that very moment, my friend's earlier "I-don't-know" reply became clear, pure, and honest. He actually had shared an innermost feeling with me. My old resentment fled, and I sense a new-found freedom. I was so amazed.

And it occurred to me how I previously had misread other comments by making judgments and inferences. Some are so personal I dare not mention them for fear of being embarrassed. That rarely stops me, but today I thought I'd taste a bit of discretion.

Poor me! Such a sensitive soul. Sob. Sob.

From my childhood, I recall cursory comments which I, a budding ego, took personally and interpreted without benefit of the context or spirit in which the remarks were made. It seemed that some came as fire from a strafing pursuit airplane. They were painful and even today, after all of these years, still pang. Others, which I perceived as more loving, kind and sincere, came as gentle breezes caressing the wildflowers.

Despite my failings, today I consciously try to say what I mean even if I mean to be evasive or poignant.

And if I really don't know how I feel, I occasionally respond to a greeting, "I don't know — really don't."

And I feel better for the honesty. No slap intended.

If you don't know, you don't know.

Officials mum about Guard unit in Marfa

MARFA (AP) — Officials aren't saying much about the recent, simultaneous presence of three sophisticated U.S. Customs aircraft and a Texas Army National Guard unit in this quiet town.

The National Guard set up a camouflage tent inside a fenced-in compound behind the U.S. Border Patrol sector headquarters and left Monday morning after a week of secret communications exercises, officials said.

While the National Guard was in Marfa, U.S. Customs stationed a Blackhawk helicopter, a twin-engine Cessna Citation II jet and a single-propeller Ayres Thrush 600 at the town's municipal airport. Such aircraft are usually kept at hangars in El Paso, San Angelo and San Antonio, even when they are sent on patrols in the Big Bend area south of Marfa, a Customs official said.

The presence of the National Guard and the contingent of Customs aircraft coincided with the fall marijuana harvest season in Mexico, and come just a month before the deployment of a radar balloon designed to detect drug smugglers flying and driving across the border.

But officials would not say whether the National Guard and Customs were working together, or whether either's presence had anything to do with the harvest season or December's deployment of the radar balloon above Marfa, about 60 miles north of the Mexican border.

The National Guard unit's mission was so secret that the assistant chief of staff of the Texas Guard said he was kept uninformed. Charles Conroy, spokesman for U.S. Customs in Texas, said he knew of no special operations based in Marfa.

Lt. Col. Dwain James, assistant chief of staff of the Texas Army National Guard, said Tuesday by phone from Austin that he was told only that the guard unit was in Marfa to perform a classified communications exercise. He said he was not told the number of Guardsmen present, where they were from or whether they were working with other branches of the armed forces.

"It was a very restrictive exercise," James said.

The Guard brought in two helicopters and a truck loaded with communications equipment, then set up a 30-foot-square camouflage tent on a lawn between the Border Patrol headquarters building and parking lot, a Border Patrol official said.

The Guard roped off the area around the tent, stationed armed guards and did not allow Border Patrol agents nearby, said patrol deputy chief Charles Hensley.

"They said they were testing some kind of radio equipment," Hensley said, adding that one Guardsman told him they were working with a communications unit at Fort Huachuca, Ariz.

But Lt. Roger Meyer, public affairs officer for the 11th Signal Brigade at Fort Huachuca, said the brigade was not working with any National Guard units in Texas in the last two weeks.

Fort Huachuca, about 60 miles southeast of Tucson and 20 miles north of the U.S.-Mexican border, is the site of the first U.S. Customs aerostat — a helium-filled radar balloon that can detect air and land traffic up to 200 miles away.

The Customs service's second aerostat is scheduled to go up in early December above Marfa. Other aerostats are scheduled to go up later near Yuma, Ariz.; Deming, N.M.; and the Rio Grande Valley in Texas.

Customs agents unsuccessfully asked a pair of visiting reporters to leave the publicly owned Marfa airport last week, and would not answer any questions. The Ayres Thrush 600, built originally as a crop-duster, had been modified into a two-seater.

Apartment complex employee threatened, robbed

Police Roundup

From Staff Reports

An apartment complex employee was slapped and threatened with a knife before she was robbed Wednesday afternoon at the apartment office, Midland police said today.

The woman was not seriously injured, but did suffer slight cuts on her throat, according to police.

The man walked into the office of the Cedar Creek Apartments, 415 W. Scharbauer Dr., about 4 p.m. and asked the employee about vacancies at the complex. When the employee looked down to check a vacancy list, the man slapped her and then held a knife to her throat, according to the police report.

He then demanded money, and took personal cash from the woman and cash from a bank bag in the apartment office. The amount of money taken was not disclosed by police.

The man left on foot, according to police.

The suspect was described as a black man, about 6 feet tall with long hair. He was wearing a gray hooded sweatshirt and black sweat pants, and his demeanor was described as "angry" by police.

Animal control officers were called in to assist Midland County Sheriff's investigators Wednesday afternoon after they found a large guard dog between them and two suspects in a drug investigation.

Investigators Jose Primera and Fred Stubbs were attempting to serve a warrant at 2210½ Gulf Ave. about 4:30 p.m. when they were confronted with a Rottweiler, Primera said. After Animal Control officers subdued the dog, the investigators served the warrant and entered the home, he said.

A man and woman, both described as in their 30s, were arrested, and will be arraigned in peace justice court by late today. The couple is expected to be charged with possession of a controlled substance, Primera said.

A small amount of what investigators believe is methamphetamine, or speed, was found in the house along with what was described as drug paraphernalia.

Primera said officers had received information that the speed was being sold at the house. He said the speed was probably "cooked" in another city and delivered here, as officers found no laboratory equipment at the house.

In other reports, the sheriff's office is investigating the theft of items valued at more than $10,000 from a vacant business.

According to reports, 12 reels of steel cable valued at $6,000, a 1,500 gallon oil tank with pump valued at $3,000, three empty steel spools valued at $450, a water well tank and the roof to a metal carport were among the items reported stolen.

The business, located a mile east of the intersection of Interstate 20 and State Highway 158, had apparently been vacant since May of this year, according to investigators.

PIKES

In "Big Blue Sky," a "lot of those songs were influenced by prairies," Semko says. The songs in "Secrets of the Alibi," are a "little more influenced by our travels. We write songs about real things that have either happened to us or things we have observed. Our songs come from the heart."

But, Semko vividly recalls those early days. During the first eight months on the road, he says, "We gave ourselves a per diem to live off — $7 a day. Generally accommodations were provided, or we slept on the school bus. We realized we might not be making much money now, but if we sink our money in our talent, we felt we had a chance."

When the group recorded its second independent album, "Scene in North America," in 1985, Semko says, "We spent more money on the cover. We were in hock. A lot of bands, when they start out spend money on PA systems or lighting. We asked ourselves, 'What's going to help us the most? What do we want to get across most to people our music or the technical end of it?' "

The path they choose gave them the opportunity to become familiar with working in a studio environment, which was to be helpful when their first recording contract did come through.

Two more years of constant touring plus two professionals' interest in the band paid off.

"No one in the music business actually flies out to Saskatoon," Semko says. However, two professionals did just that — Fraser Hill, an independent record producer from Toronto, and Doug Chappell, who was later to become the president of Virgin Records.

Time passed before the group was offered a record contract. Thus, when The Northern Pikes signed a record contract with Virgin Records Dec. 18, 1986, the group had already done a national tour of Canada.

When they arrived in the studio to record, Semko says, "We knew how to work in a recording studio, and we knew what we wanted."

"Big Blue Sky" went gold in Canada, and The Northern Pikes were on their way to stints as opening acts for such known performers as David Bowie, Duran Duran, Andy Summers and Alarm.

"To this day, we're really knocked out that this happened to us," Semko says. "As a result, we've had a lot of opportunities that a lot of bands never get."

He remembers the group's first performance before a large audience — the David Bowie concert at Toronto in the baseball stadium where the Blue Jays play.

"It's a big place. It was frightening at first — the first five minutes we were really shaking. Then we realized it was no different than any other gig. It was just a vast area as opposed to a finite room."

The Northern Pikes have now opened for enough acts to be used to the experience.

"We're getting used to doing opening act slots; it's not that hard in the end. We try our hardest. If you're good, and you're music is good, and you have confidence in yourself, then hopefully the people will pick up on that."

Thursday's performance at Ector County Coliseum marks the first time the group has played West Texas, but not the first tour of Texas. The Northern Pikes have played Texas twice before and the group was one of four performing groups on the "Four Play Tour."

"We enjoy being down here," Palmer says of performing in Texas. As for opening for Robert Palmer, he says, "It's always good when you can open up for someone whose music you like as well. At our stage of the game, it's a gas to be on the road and to be able to be involved in a big show like this."

Semko says success won't blur reality for the members of The Northern Pikes.

"We're still guys from Saskatoon. We've spent a lot of time on the road. A good thing about being from Saskatoon — it's a good place to go back to, and get your feet on the ground, and get your head together when things get too crazy."

WELLS

Stanley, who also serves as vice president of the West Texas chapter of the Texas Water Well Association, said that plugging or capping is "not only environmentally sound, it's required by state law."

Property owners with open, abandoned wells could be fined as much as $200 a day for keeping a well open, he said.

"All our water in the West Texas area is continually getting worse and worse — more salt water is being injected into it and more toxic chemicals are being put into it," he said. "Old water wells that are uncapped or uncemented just add to the problem."

JURY

Christensen, who specializes in pulmonary diseases and internal medicine at the Lovelace Medical Center and who is chairman of the center's Occupational Sports and Preventative Medicine Department, said that fibers from asbestos, a non-combustible mineral once more widely used than now in insulation and fire-proofing, "causes diseases of the lungs." Scar tissue, he said, replaces the lungs' air sacks and impairs efficiency of the lungs.

Christensen had examined Aguirre as early as 1986 and afterward.

"That's something your lawyers set up and paid for, right?" asked Taylor.

Aguirre said yes.

Aguirre's attorney, Brian D. Weinstein of Dallas, noted that the men plaintiffs in the case had gone from "job site to job site" in applying asbestos insulation.

"All of them have been diagnosed with asbestos-related diseases," he said.

"All of them look healthy today," Weinstein said. "This is going to be the healthiest day for the rest of their lives. Tomorrow, they will be less healthy."

He contended that the disease, asbestosis, is progressive.

In the lawsuit complaint, Weinstein charged that Nolberto Aguirre, as a helper-shop foreman from 1954 to until recently, was exposed to asbestos fibers.

"...He has inhaled massive quantities of asbestos dust which became airborne during insulation and rip-out procedures," Weinstein said in the complaint.

Wives of the Aguirre brothers were exposed to the dust by shaking out and washing their husband's work clothes, he said.

Taylor, as spokesman for the defendant manufacturing companies, said a test of the liabilities of the companies is in the nature — the quality — of their products.

"Our products are not defective," he said in the trial presided over by United States District Court Chief Judge Lucius D. Bunton, and denied that the Aguirre brothers, their wives, and Galindo have asbestosis. "Their breathing tests are normal," he said. "These people do not have cancer. They don't have it, and they are not going to get it."

Taylor noted that asbestos is a naturally-occurring mineral that, in its raw state, may be harmful if breathed in massive amounts.

"But if you put them (asbestos fibers) in finished products," Taylor said, "they are not going to do you any harm."

Drought raises pumpkin prices

DALLAS (AP) — There's good news for Texas pumpkin growers and bad news for pumpkin lovers because of the drought that wiped out or sharply reduced pumpkin crops in the Midwest.

Texas pumpkin growers who raise their crop on irrigated fields are finding that they are getting good prices for their crops as they are in demand to become Halloween jack-o-lanterns and Thanksgiving pumpkin pies.

The bad news is in the form of higher prices for pumpkin lovers.

"Pumpkin prices are way up and they're in demand," Ellen Ritter of the Texas Agriculture Extension Service said Wednesday.

Pumpkins are selling for 15-20 cents per pound at the retail level this year, compared with 10-15 cents per pound last year.

The mini-Jack Be Little and Munchkin varities that are used as decorated centerpieces cost as much as 40 cents per pound.

"The price is way out of line, but many people are willing to pay anything for what they think depicts beauty," Roland Roberts, an agriculture service vegetable special in Lubbock, said.

Roberts said growers in the Panhandle have produced about 39 million pounds of pumpkins this year on 1,500 acres.

Girl being evaluated for liver problems

PITTSBURGH (AP) — An 11-year-old Texas girl who in 1984 became the world's first recipient of a combined heart-liver transplant has returned to Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh to be evaluated for liver problems, officials said.

Stormie Jones of White Settlement, a Fort Worth suburb, and her mother, Susie Purcell, arrived in Pittsburgh Wednesday evening aboard a commercial flight from Dallas.

"The fact that she's flying commercially is indicative of her overall strength," said Children's Hospital spokeswoman Sue Cardillo. "She's not that seriously ill where she requires a medical ambulance to fly her here. These last few days she's been her spunky self."

Stormie had been undergoing treatment for liver rejection since Sept. 28 at Children's Medical Center of Dallas, Miss Cardillo said.

"During her hospitalization she had experienced jaundice, itchiness, erratic sleeping pattern, and those are all indications of liver complications," she said.

"As far as we know, the heart is not involved yet," said Ann Harrell, a spokeswoman for the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center.

Before You Tie One On...

A tie is an essential accessory to a man's wardrobe. And with quality ties costing $25.00 and more, getting a long life from your tie is very important. Most ties are cut on the bias of the fabric, or against the grain. This makes them susceptible to distortion from pulling and stretching. To prevent distortion, knot the tie gently and always remove the knot when you take off the tie. Store your ties hanging straight.

If you spill something on a tie, blot it gently. Never rub a stain as this may cause chafing of the fibers especially in silk ties. Bring your tie to us, your IFI member professional drycleaner as soon as your tie is soiled. This can help the tie last longer and look better. Don't allow your tie to become heavily soiled before cleaning.

Baptist factions differ on convention's outcome

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Baptist General Convention's annual meeting ended much as it began, with moderates and fundamentalists claiming support from state Baptists and promising to continue the fight for control.

By the end of the two-day convention Wednesday, three moderate-backed candidates had been elected to the top offices and a resolution that moderates say is a policy break from the fundamentalist-controlled national Southern Baptist Convention had been approved.

Fundamentalist leaders, however, said the resolution — reaffirming the doctrine that Christians can communicate with God without the need for an intervening authority — did not differ from the national church's stance.

STATE

Paige Patterson, president of Criswell Bible College in Dallas and a leader of the fundamentalist group, said moderates prevailed at the convention, but fundamentalists enjoy "grassroots" support of most of the 2.4 million member Baptists in the state.

"They are the butchers, bakers and candlestick makers," Criswell said, who were unable to take off work and attend the convention. The convention drew about 6,000 people and more than 4,000 "messengers" or delegates.

But Winfred Moore, an Amarillo pastor and chairman of the board of trustees at Baylor University, the largest Baptist college in the nation, said of Patterson's comments, "I think he's whistling in the dark, or whistling Dixie, or whatever it is you whistle."

Neither side accepts the label that they apply to each other. Essentially the fundamentalists believe there has been a permissive trend among Baptists, and in Texas they mark this trend at Baylor University.

They have a long list of gripes about Baylor's religion department.

A publication called "The Founder's Review," circulated at the convention, warned of the liberalness at Baylor with articles under headlines, such as "Baylor Religion Professor Endorses Abortion Rights," "Darwin: My Hero," and "Baylor Press Honors Humanist."

"All we have asked (of the Baylor leadership) is to listen to responsible voices," Patterson said.

But the moderates say they have listened and all they hear is a desire by the fundamentalists to take over the college .

Chaplains to aid Border Patrol

EL PASO (AP) — The U.S. Border Patrol, whose agents have been saddled with new duties and new pressures, plans to hire 21 chaplains over the next six months, an official says.

Each of the agency's sectors will have a chaplain to counsel agents and their families, said Gus de la Vina, deputy chief of the El Paso sector. El Paso and two other sectors might get chaplains by year's end, said Mike Williams, El Paso chief patrol agent.

The Border Patrol's primary mission is to catch people who have entered the country illegally. But in the past 18 months, the agency has been charged with helping other law-enforcement agencies catch drug-smugglers — and Border Patrol officials say the job has become more dangerous.

Paying districts for high test scores debated

AUSTIN (AP) — State lawmakers are discussing giving incentive payments to schools with high gains in student performance, and including performance by pupils as a factor in evaluating teachers.

Rep. Bill Hammond, R-Dallas, said at a Wednesday meeting of the Legislative Education Board he finds it "bizarre" that student performance currently is not a factor in appraising teachers.

But Chairman Jon Brumley of the State Board of Education said the Texas Educational Assessment of Minimum Skills should be further improved before that could occur.

"I think we're not ready for it," he said.

Brumley, of Fort Worth, presented to the Legislative Education Board recommendations that were tentatively approved by the State Board of Education. Hammond serves on the Legislative Education Board, along with Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, House Speaker Gib Lewis and other lawmakers.

Among the recommendations Brumley presented was a proposal to give incentive payments to districts with high gains in student performance.

The proposal says scores on the TEAMS test, a basic skills exam, would be used to determine performance along with other indicators. Other performance indicators are not specified.

Rep. Bill Haley, a Center Democrat who serves on the Legislative Education Board, criticized the proposal at a Wednesday meeting of the House Public Education Committee, which he heads.

If he still were a teacher, Haley said, "I would retire before I ever would submit myself or my students or the public in general to such a scam."

Linking test scores with money would be like linking Medicaid reimbursement for doctors with how quickly a patient recovers, Haley said.

"Testing is not what some politicians want to think it is. It is not something that tells you everything there is to be told," Haley said.

Rep. Ernestine Glossbrenner, an Alice Democrat who serves on the House committee, also is a former teacher and also expressed concern about the incentive proposal.

"It seems to me that this would encourage even more teaching to the test. It's difficult for me to understand the educational benefit in terms of that," Ms. Glossbrenner said. "I want the children in my district to learn a broad curriculum."

Family fined for hiring illegal alien as maid

HARLINGEN (AP) — Thousands of Texas households probably are violating the immigration reform law by employing undocumented aliens as domestic help, a government spokeswoman said after a family was fined for illegally hiring a maid from Mexico.

"People should just be aware that if they continue to violate this law, they are incurring some risk," said Virginia Kice, spokeswoman for the Immigration and Naturalization Service's Harlingen District.

A family from the Lower Rio Grande Valley city of San Benito was sent notice Tuesday that it will be fined $350 for hiring the illegal maid, who has already been sent back to Mexico, Ms. Kice said.

INS investigators on Oct. 13 visited the residence after receiving a telephone tip on the "Employer Sanctions Hotline," she said.

INS officials said they would not reveal the name of the San Benito family until a Certified Mail receipt from the fine notice returns to the agency's Harlingen office.

"This family conceded that they were in violation of the law, and agreed to pay the fine," said Ms. Kice, adding that hiring undocumented maids, primarily from Mexico, is a long-standing, common practice along the border.

"I think this practice is quite widespread here on the border," Ms. Kice said. "It's almost a tradition and I'm sure that this San Benito family is one of only thousands in the Valley who have employed an undocumented maid."

The fine — the lowest possible under the law — included $250 for hiring the undocumented alien and $100 for not having a complete Employment Eligibility Verification Form, known as Form I-9, for the woman.

The 24-year-old maid was earning $40 per week and had lived with the family since July, officials said.

The Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986, which provides amnesty for certain illegal aliens, also makes it illegal to hire people not authorized to work in the United States.

Anyone employing someone on a regular basis is required under the immigration law to ensure that the employee is authorized to work in the United States, and must have the person complete an I-9 Form if hired after Nov. 6, 1986.

Bentsen's campaign one of best financed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen's re-election campaign is one of the best financed among candidates for the Senate and leads in contributions from political action committees, according to a study by Common Cause.

Bentsen, the chairman of the tax-writing Senate Finance Committee, has collected $2.3 million in PAC money since his last election in 1982 and the end of September, according to the Common Cause study which documents the fund-raising advantage incumbents have over their challengers.

The study by the citizens lobby showed contributions to the Democrat's re-election campaign are outpacing those to his Republican opponent, Rep. Beau Boulter of Amarillo, by a margin of about 8 to 1.

Bentsen ranks second among Senate candidates for total contributions — $8.5 million; fourth in total expenses — $5.1 million; and first in cash on hand — $3.2 million, Common Cause said.

Boulter, meanwhile, has raised $1.15 million, spent $1 million, collected $90,961 in PAC money, and had $79,548 cash on hand on Sept. 30.

Total spending on the campaign — $6.2 million — ranks fifth among the most expensive 1988 Senate races, Common Cause said.

Bentsen, who is running simultaneously as the Democratic nominee for vice president, leads Boulter by wide margins in the polls.

"The 27 Senate incumbents enjoy huge financial advantages over their challengers in all campaign finance areas," Common Cause said. In the area of PACs, incumbents outraised their challengers by a margin of 5 to 1.

PACs represent business and labor groups, corporations and even other political candidates. In a statement, Common Cause President Fred Wertheimer said PACs overwhelmingly contributed more to incumbents than to challengers.

Our father was a wise man. We remember him telling us: "Listen to the words of your elders, for they have learned from experience. Then be sure that you don't make the same mistakes they did!"

At both tables in a team game, North–South reached a contract of three no trumps. The auctions were identical and normal.

In light of South's initial response, a spade lead was ruled out, and neither West felt like leading from jack–third in a minor suit; so the opening lead at both tables was a top–of–nothing heart. Both Easts rose with the ace and found the excellent defense of switching to the jack of spades.

At one table, declarer remembered being taught: "Cover an honor with an honor." He put up the queen of spades, West won the king and returned a low spade to his partner's ten. A spade continuation through declarer's nine allowed West to score the ace–eight, and the defenders had four spades and the ace of hearts in the bank before declarer had blinked an eye.

At the other table, declarer worked out that, if he ducked the jack of spades, he was in jeopardy only if East had made a spectacular shift to the jack from J x x. All other spade distributions could be defused. He therefore played low, and no matter how the defense continued the contract was as secure as Fort Knox. Had East continued with a low spade, declarer intended inserting the nine. When, in fact, East continued with the ten, declarer covered with the queen and West could do him no harm.

Waylon Jennings suffering from exhaustion, hospitalized

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Country music star Waylon Jennings, hospitalized after complaining of chest pains during a performance, was simply suffering from exhaustion and will be home this weekend, a spokeswoman said.

Doctors examining Jennings after he was hospitalized Monday determined the singer hadn't suffered a heart attack, spokeswoman Marylou Hyatt said Wednesday from Jennings' office in Nashville, Tenn.

"He's strong as an ox," she said.

Jennings

Jennings, 51, became ill during a performance in Santa Ana, 30 miles south of downtown Los Angeles.

Jennings, who has won two Grammy Awards and four Country Music Association Awards, is probably best known for his duet with Willie Nelson on "Mamas Don't Let Your Babies Grow Up to Be Cowboys."

RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK, N.C. (AP) — Dr. George Hitchings says he'll donate his share of the 1988 Nobel Prize for medicine to a foundation he helped create five years ago.

Hitchings, 83, a scientist emeritus with Burroughs Wellcome Co., said Wednesday he would give the $130,000 to the George and Beverly Hitchings Endowment of the Greater Triangle Community Foundation.

"Science, I think, has been pretty well funded," Hitchings said of why he chose charity over scientific projects. "There are a lot of people things that are more necessary right now."

The foundation makes grants to nearby non-profit agencies.

PARIS (AP) — American industrialist Armand Hammer, famous for his role as an unofficial ambassador between the Soviet Union and the West, has received one of France's highest awards.

Culture Minister Jack Lang on Wednesday named Hammer a Commander of Arts and Letters for his contributions to the arts. The ceremony took place in the gilded salons of the French Culture Ministry.

Lang noted that the 90-year-old patron of the arts and head of the Occidental Petroleum Corp. spent nine years in the Soviet Union amassing an impressive collection of 18th century French furniture and rare French china.

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Actor Dennis Quaid may be portraying rock 'n' roller Jerry Lee Lewis in an upcoming movie, but he won't get the singing parts, Lewis says.

"You're not getting the soundtrack, boy," Lewis told Quaid at a gathering Wednesday to promote the movie, "Great Balls Of Fire," much of which will be filmed in Memphis.

Lewis

Filming is to begin Monday on the movie, named for one of Lewis' best known recordings. The film will be based on the beginning of Lewis' career, which got a major boost at the old Sun Records studio in Memphis.

Lewis said he is impressed with Quaid's piano playing and singing, but plans to record the music for the movie himself, although Quaid indicated he might try some of the musical parts.

Quaid said he studied piano for several months, watched films of Lewis' performances and attended his concerts in researching the part.

• • •

AIKEN, S.C. (AP) — Soul singer James Brown has been indicted in connection with a police chase that started in Georgia and crossed into South Carolina.

Brown was charged Monday with two counts of assault and battery with intent to kill and one count of failure to stop for a police car. He earlier was charged in Georgia over the Sept. 24 incident.

Police said Brown entered a seminar in Augusta carrying a gun, and then led police on the chase.

During the chase, Brown allegedly tried to run over two officers who were setting up a roadblock. The officers shot out Brown's front tires, and the singer continued driving "on the rims" for several miles before driving his truck into a ditch, according to police reports.

Brown, 55, is on a European concert tour, but his attorney has said he will be back for his trial here next week.

KALAMAZOO, Mich. (AP) — Two former members of the singing DeBarge family and two associates have been convicted of conspiring to transport cocaine from Los Angeles and distribute it in Michigan.

A U.S. District Court jury on Tuesday convicted Jonathon "Chico" DeBarge, Robert "Bobby" DeBarge, Dwayne O. Hill and Mark Douglas. Each could receive a maximum sentence of life imprisonment at their January sentencing.

The four were accused of conspiring with at least two other people to distribute 2.2 pounds of cocaine in western Michigan.

Jonathon DeBarge, 22, of Grand Rapids, recorded a solo album, "Chico DeBarge," that reached No. 33 on the Billboard magazine pop music charts in 1986. Robert DeBarge, 26, of Los Angeles, was a former member of the singing group Switch.

The family's most famous brother, El DeBarge, pleaded no contest in September 1986 to assault and battery charges in Grand Rapids.

CHICAGO (AP) — S.B. Fuller, known as the dean of black entrepreneurs after he built a door-to-door cosmetic company into a national business, died Monday of kidney failure at age 83.

He started Fuller Products in 1935 with $25 borrowed on his car, then used door-to-door sales representatives to handle 30 items from a little-known cosmetics line.

At its peak in the 1960s, Fuller Products Co. included newspapers, appliance outlets and department stores, as well as farming and beef cattle production firms.

Portable heart-lung machine can cut risks in operations

Copley News Service

For a cardiologist, it is stranger than life to see a patient with no heartbeat lie wide awake on the operating table, chatting easily. But such is the nature of heart medicine today, due to a new portable heart-lung machine that has taken the terror out of certain high-risk heart procedures.

The machine, called the Bard Cardiopulmonary Support System, can be used without opening a patient's chest by threading finger-thick catheters through the femoral artery and vein in the leg to the heart. The system has one chief advantage over standard heart-lung machines: time.

"There's a term cardiac surgeons use when patients get into trouble on the operating table," explained cardiologist Dr. Paul Overlie. "They call it 'crash onto the pump.'"

"Crash onto the pump" is exactly as it sounds. With the patient rapidly failing, surgeons work frantically to get a heart-lung machine in place before it is too late.

"It can take 15, maybe 20 minutes," Overlie said. "Surgeons must prep the area, then open the chest. They put a tube in the aorta and a suction tube into the right atrium. All the while, they're pumping the heart with their hand. I've watched this for years, and I've always thought, 'There's got to be a faster way. Look how much time we're losing!'"

In contrast, the new system, also known as CPS, is so much quicker and less traumatic that it promises to change heart-lung machines from last-ditch usage to a widely utilized protective system.

Like a standard heart-lung machine, the system does the work of the heart. It shunts the flow of blood out to an external machine that reoxygenates, warms and then pumps the blood back to the body. So completely does it take over heart function that patients register no heartbeat; on echocardiograms, the heart is seen as absolutely motionless. But unlike standard heart-lung machines, the system is done without open-heart surgery. The small opening in the leg, for placement of the catheters, heals quickly and painlessly.

Overlie predicts four uses for portable bypass: in emergency cardiac-arrest patients, for high-risk angioplasty patients, as a backup in standard angioplasty and as a bridge to heart transplant. Overlie, who has a cardiology practice in Lubbock, Texas, is one of four U.S. researchers experienced in using the device. He was the first to pioneer usage with heart attack victims.

"These were patients who had failed advanced cardiac life support," he explained. "We tried it on 12 patients, and we were able to resuscitate six of these. That's six vs. zero. None of these 12 patients would have survived without this kind of intervention. And now they're at home doing fine."

Since 1986, Overlie and Dr. Robert Vogel, head of cardiology at the University of Maryland, have expanded the system's use for high-risk heart patients. In this way, it is used to support patients who need balloon angioplasty but are considered too weak or sick to undergo the procedure.

In the United States, cardiologists annually perform about 200,000 angioplasties — a non-surgical alternative to bypass surgery that unclogs coronary arteries. It is done by inserting an inflatable catheter through the blockage. Success rates for angioplasty are commonly in the 90 to 95 percent range. But extremely sick patients have been considered inappropriate candidates for this procedure and bypass surgery. Maryland's Vogel estimated that an additional 20,000 to 60,000 patients each year could undergo angioplasty if the system were available.

In the last several months, about 90 high-risk patients have undergone angioplasty supported by portable bypass. Many of these suffered from disease in multiple coronary arteries, blocked grafts from previous bypass surgery or massive congestive heart failure — an extremely debilitating condition resulting when the heart cannot maintain adequate circulation.

AIDS drug

Two bottles of the drug called CD4, currently being used experimentally by several hospitals around the country to fight the AIDS virus, are on display at the Biogen Inc. offices, makers of the drug, in Cambridge, Mass.

AIDS infection unlikely through skin contact

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Doctors and nurses face a one-in-a-thousand risk of catching AIDS when they get infected blood or other body fluids on their skin, even though gloves they wear for protection often leak, studies found.

"Gloves have been leaking for years, we've been wearing them and we haven't found a lot of infections in hospital employees" exposed to AIDS, hepatitis B and other viruses, said Jane DeGroot-Kosolcharoen, an infection control nurse at Middleton Memorial Veterans Hospital in Madison, Wis.

Three studies conducted by DeGroot-Kosolcharoen and researchers in Massachusetts and Florida found leakage in more than half of some of the brands of gloves tested. One study was conducted as an eighth-grade science project by a student whose father is an infectious disease expert.

The studies found wide variations in leakage rates for various brands of latex and vinyl gloves, but tended to show sterile surgical gloves less leak-prone than non-sterile examination gloves, and latex less leak-prone than vinyl.

A fourth study concluded blood, sputum, urine and other body fluids of AIDS patients gets on the skin of health care workers "far too frequently," with about one-quarter of a group of 770 hospital employees getting AIDS-tainted liquids on their skin.

But the chance of one such exposure infecting a person with the virus for acquired immune deficiency syndrome is no more than 1.1 in 1,000, said Barbara Fahey, an infection control specialist who performed the study at the National Institutes of Health Clinical Center in Bethesda, Md.

A related study by NIH epidemiologist David Henderson found health care workers face a one in 250 chance of catching AIDS from a single instance of being jabbed by a contaminated needle, and a one in 300 chance of being infected if virus-tainted liquid comes in contact with their mucous membranes.

"There really is a risk we all have to swallow. It's a bitter pill," Henderson said Tuesday during the 28th Interscience Conference on Antimicrobial Agents and Chemotherapy.

However, the NIH studies showed health care workers got AIDS-tainted fluids on their skin far more often than they contacted such liquids through their mucous membranes or needle injuries.

Researchers at the conference said hospital workers should check gloves for holes before using them, then wash their hands after removing gloves.

DeGroot-Kosolcharoen said recommendations for health care workers to wear gloves to protect themselves from AIDS and other viruses caused a nationwide glove shortage and that "manufacturers have had difficulty supplying enough gloves without compromising quality."

CHIROPRACTIC & YOUR HEALTH
DR. F.L. ASKEW

ASPIRIN WON'T CURE IT

If you have recurrent headaches and take aspirin for relief, you're only masking the problem, not solving it.

A headache is like any other kind of pain. It's a symptom that something may be wrong. If you only suffer headaches occasionally, like when you're overtired or have had too much to eat or drink, things can probably be set right again by getting a proper amount of sleep and eating and drinking normally. But if you have a "headache pattern" – frequent headaches over a long period of time – you may need treatment to get relief.

Perhaps the underlying cause is a misalignment of your spine. This may be causing the vertebrae to exert undue pressure and irritation on your nervous system. Your nervous system extends from your brain down through your spine to every part of your body. It plays a vital role in the body's health.

Why suffer from recurrent headaches needlessly when treatment is available to help correct the problem?

Modern Plastic Surgery
by Sylvan Bartlett, M.D., ASPRS

BREATHING EASIER

Many patients undergo a rhinoplasty because they are dissatisfied with the shape of their noses. However, there is also a significant amount of people who wish to change the configuration of their noses because they have difficulty breathing. For the majority of this latter group, it is necessary to change the position of the nasal septum. This is the partition that separates the nose into two cavaties. While no septum is perfectly straight, some exhibit a deviation severe enough to interfere with breathing. Surprisingly, two-thirds of the patients who undergo surgery to correct a deviated septum have deformities related to untreated nose injuries from the past. For this reason, a person should have any injury to the nose examined soon after the fact. Swelling may hide a bone displacement that is not readily noticeable.

Whether you select rhinoplasty for cosmetic or reconstructive needs, select a physician who is board certified in plastic surgery. Before the surgery is performed, be certain you are fully informed about the procedure, its risks, recovery period, and outcome. PERMIAN PLASTIC SURGICAL CENTER is located at 848 Central in Odessa. We are a member of the ASPRS and perform cosmetic, reconstructive, and plastic surgery, including rhinoplasty and face lifts. Hours: M-F 8-5. Please call for further inquiries or consultation: 335-8711, 563-3110.

HINT:
When rhinoplasty is combined with surgery to correct a deviated septum, the procedure is known as a septorhinoplasty.

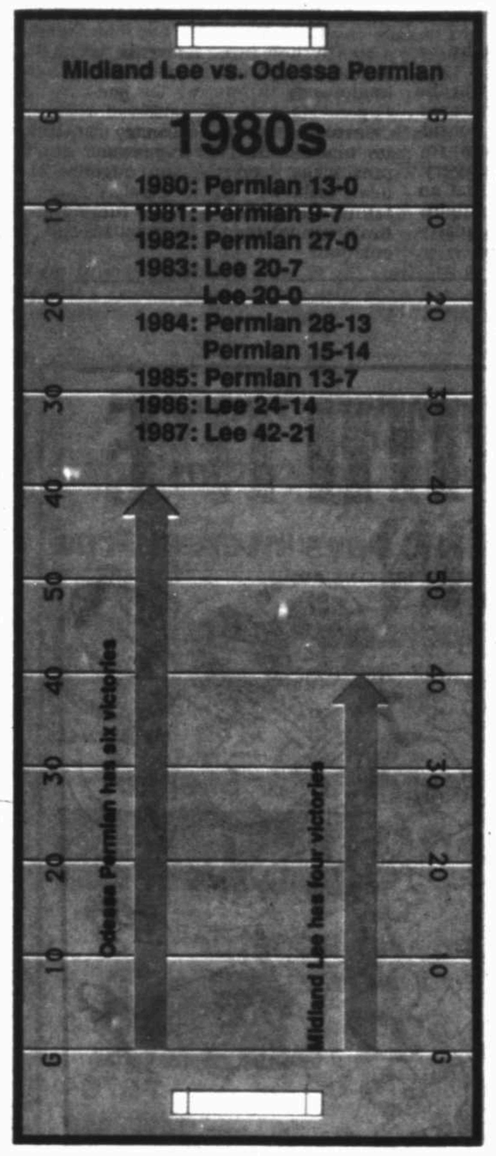
Rebs in must-win situation



By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

ODESSA — Midland Lee enters Ratliff Stadium Friday night against Odessa Permian with its back to the District 4-5A wall. Will the Rebs come out kicking and scratching, or will it be only another lonely wail to kickoff Halloween weekend?

The Rebels are in a position of having to win the game if they want to run their consecutive playoff appearances to six, and it couldn't be a tougher chore.

Obviously, Lee is in a rebuilding year while Permian is living in the fast lane, ranked fifth in the state, leading the league in offense and defense and destroying opponents by margins that would turn Napoleon green with envy.

Lee stands before a Mojo firing squad that would dearly love to put the Rebels in their place.

But Permian doesn't have all the positives. Lee has beaten Permain two years in a row to wrestle away the district championship from the Panthers. Lee's Earl Miller hasn't been beaten by Permian since taking the reigns of the Rebels and Permian coach Gary Gaines hasn't fielded a team that has beaten Lee.

But Lee's positives have little to do with the task at hand and no one understands that better than Miller.

"Permian is No. 1 in every area," says Miller. "They're tops in offense and defense and No. 1 in the Harris poll. They have given up 21 points in district play and are averaging about a million. In short, they are an awful good football team."

But Miller's decidedly underdog unit will show up for the game.

"If we are going to have a chance at the playoffs. We have to win this game. That's very obvious," said Miller. "It's been a long, painful road getting to the point where that is possible, but we think we are getting there, getting close to having a chance.

"It's been an uphill battle all year and we have no apologies. Some years you have a lot of experience and some years you don't. We've won more games than I thought we would at this stage.

"This game is what high school football is all about. At least, we have a chance to play for the playoffs before 20,000 people. This could be the biggest event in the entire lives of some of our kids and I think they will rise to the occasion. That doesn't mean we will win, but it doesn't mean we will lose, either."

And even though Permian coach Gaines enters as a decided favorite in this one, he doesn't expect an easy cake walk.

"This is just a typical Lee-Permian game with a lot at stake. It's no different than in the past. It's the kind of game that puts a pit in our stomachs as coaches. I can tell you that," said Gaines. "This game is so important because a win would put us in the playoffs and a loss just might force a coin flip. If there is a three-way tie for first, one good team will be left at the house.

"This game is great for West Texas and Midland-Odessa in particular. There's not a better matchup. We would certainly like to avoid a tie, but I don't know how good we really are. I don't think our lop-sided scores are indicative of how good we are. Things have just might force a coin flip. If there is a three-way tie for first, one good team will be left at the house.

"This game is great for West Texas and Midland-Odessa in particular. There's not a better matchup. We would certainly like to avoid a tie, but I don't know how good we really are. I don't think our lop-sided scores are indicative of how good we are. Things have just kind of snowballed for us in some of our games, but we will find out how good we are Friday."

Miller says that the way to beat Permian hasn't changed over the years.

"You have to control the ball, get first downs and score when you can," says Miller. "You don't beat Permian by finesse, but by running right at them.

"You have to play great pass defense. Their No. 1 asset this year is throwing the ball to (Lloyd) Hill and (Robert) Brown. We've stopped the run all year, but we haven't stopped the pass. The San Angelo game is a prime example of that.

"If we slow down the Permian offense, we have a chance, but no one else has been able to do that. We can't give up the big home run like everyone else has. Permian is averaging about four big plays a game and we can't allow that."

Gaines, too, feels his Panthers can run into some problems against Lee.

"Their offensive line is quick and they have backs that are just unbelievable. They always seem to graduate one batch of backs and just put another great batch out there," said Gaines. "Farris Strambler is a great back. David Whiteside is really tough and both quarterbacks appear to be good operators. I can't really see a difference when either one is in there.

"Quincy White is a super tight end and I don't know who we have who can line up with him. And Lee has made some changes that have helped them by moving Benny Jones to linebacker and moving Billy Parks to center.

"We've got to keep Lee from breaking the long ones and they've done that to us the last two years. Offensively, we've got to find a way to move the ball on the ground. We've used the pass with some success this year, but we set it up with the run and we have to establish the run first."

National League Manager of the Year Tommy Lasorda, right, holds up a jersey for President Reagan during the Dodgers' Tuesday visit to the White House.

No Surprise

Lasorda named Top NL Boss following sterling Series win

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Tommy Lasorda was aboard a jetliner, flying home with his World Series champion Los Angeles Dodgers after a White House visit, when he got the news that he won National League Manager of the Years honors by a landslide.

The rotund skipper, known as much for his love of pasta as his baseball savvy, has won two World Series, four NL pennants and six NL West titles in 12 years at the helm of the Dodgers.

"This completes my day — one of the greatest days of my life," Lasorda said Wednesday. "Right now, you are definitely talking to the happiest man in the world."

A fast-talking Brooklyn native, Lasorda counts celebrities such as Frank Sinatra and Don Rickles among his friends and is well-known outside baseball circles because of his many appearances in TV commercials hawking products ranging from pizza and beer to yogurt and antacid tablets.

He received 19 of 24 possible first-place votes in the Baseball Writers Association of America balloting and appeared on all but one.

He received 101 points in the vote by a committee of two writers from each NL city. Lasorda also was voted Manager of the Year in 1983, its initial year.

"I'm honored, no question about it," he said. "But as I've said many times before, individualism wins trophies, but teamwork wins pennants.

"As a manager, whatever success you achieve, whatever awards you receive, becomes a reality because of the contributions of your players, your coaches, your trainers. I want everyone to share this with me."

Jim Leyland of Pittsburgh finished second with 50 points after leading the Pirates to an 85-75 record and second place in the East behind the New York Mets.

Davey Johnson, who led the Mets to a league-leading 100-60 record and their second East title in three years, was third with 38 points.

San Diego manager Jack McKeon, who took over the Padres from Larry Bowa in late May and led the team to the league's second-best record over the final four months of the season, was fourth with 27 points. The Padres rebounded from a dismal start to post a 67-48 under McKeon.

Despite the personal honor, Lasorda was still feeling the glow of President Reagan's tribute to the Dodgers on the White House lawn.

"To be honored by the president of the United States was a great thrill and an honor," he said. "He honored a team that captured the hearts of all America."

The Dodgers won the West by seven games as they finished 94-67 this year, a sharp improvement over identically poor 73-89 records in 1986 and 1987.

Rangers face tough assignment

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

After an admittedly sub-par performance last week against Crane, Greenwood head football coach Bob Purser said the Rangers need to be atop their game in a District 4-3A showdown Friday with Kermit.

Both teams are undefeated in district play going into the 7:30 p.m. contest at Greenwood.

"There's no way we can beat them unless we play the best game we've ever played," Purser said. "They're ranked 12th in the Harris ratings, while we're 96th."

But does that mean the Rangers will be content with playing not to lose big, instead of playing to win?

No way, quoth Purser.

"They're good, but they're beatable."

In other area action, Stanton travels to Iraan in another battle of undefeated district teams; Big Spring travels to Andrews; Lamesa visits Slaton; Crane treks to Alpine; McCamey goes all the way to Presidio; Reagan County goes to Ozona; Rankin visits Sterling City; and Garden City hosts Water Valley.

PURSER SAID the trip to the El Paso-area community of Fabens two weeks ago left the Rangers flat for last week's tilt with Crane, though Greenwood did pull out a 22-14 victory.

"We had less effort against Crane than we had all season," Purser said. "We took that long trip to El Paso, got back at 6 a.m. Saturday morning and never recovered."

Both Greenwood, 6-2 after six straight wins, and Kermit, 7-1, feature wishbone attacks. But while Greenwood relies on the finesse and open-field speed of quarterback Ran-

Replacing Landry a difficult chore

Patterson

People have been talking for five years now about how its time Tom Landry called it quits.

It has been said the game of football has quietly passed Tom by.

It was written by one penman in Dallas that Tom is senile. All because Landry forgot what yard line the ball was on during a crucial drive against Philadelphia.

Not exactly as earth shattering as forgetting Gorbachev's phone number after accidentally launching a nuclear warhead. Still, to football fans — or Cowboy fans, I should say — what Landry forgot was evidently bad enough to call for his head on a metallic blue and silver platter.

So, who to replace him?

Mike Ditka? Naah. He said recently his Dallas memories are no longer special. So, if he doesn't need the Cowboys, they don't need him. Besides, Ditka seems like the guy who wouldn't wear a seatbelt in Midland after the police department announced it would step up enforecement of the law.

Dan Reeves? No again. Reeves, it has been said, has become quite comfortable and happy as the Denver coach.

Dick Vermeil? The former Philadelphia coach turned broadcaster is too much like Howdy Doody with high blood pressure. A sort of mature Dennis the Menace.

So who then?

Well, here are some suggestions ... when and if Landry ever retires:

■ Ron and Nancy Reagan. A package deal. They'll both be out of work soon, and with Nancy's fancy red dresses she could send in the plays from the sideline. That way, Pelluer surely won't miss 'em.

■ The loser of the Bush/Dukakis presidential race. That way the Cowboys could be taught how to play dirty.

■ Lyndon Larouche could effectively teach receivers and those in the secondary to consistently look over their shoulders for the ball.

■ Buddy Ryan, known as a fat little Darth Vader in some circles. Ryan gets mad at the Cowboys twice a year. If he was their coach, he could be mad at them every week. After losses he could physically and mentally abuse his players, at which time they could bounce him off the walls like a clump of silly putty.

■ Barry Switzer. If the Sooner coach ran the Cowboys, he could get an idea of how it feels to have the score run up on him each week.

■ Pop superstar George Michael. Probably wouldn't do the Cowboys any good, record-wise, but at least he'd sell out Texas Stadium every week — with 62,000 teenage girls. And while we're on the subject, was George Michael named after George Bush, or Michael Dukakis? Or neither?

■ Elvis Presley could coach the Cowboys. After all, the Pokes have been just as alive as he has lately.

■ Bryant Gumbel. After all ... is there anything this guy can't do?

Eighth Week not too exciting — in terms of college pickins'

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

If you like spine-tingling games that aren't decided until the last minute — former New York Mets manager Wes Westrum called them "cliff-dwellers" — this may not be your week.

You have to go all the way down to ninth-ranked Auburn to find a Top Twenty team that is favored by less than two touchdowns. Clemson and South Carolina are the only other teams in the Associated Press rankings that are single-digit favorites.

The main reason, of course, is that there isn't a single game between Top Twenty teams this weekend. But watch out for those Halloween hobgoblins. They may sneak up on someone.

Like seventh-ranked West Virginia, for example. The Mountaineers' 7-0 record is their best since 1955. Since then, they are 1-30-1 against Penn State and 8-44-2 in the series, including 13 shutouts.

West Virginia's last five victories in the series were by a total of 24 points, including a 21-7 "romp" in 1955.

The Mountaineers are coming off a 59-19 blitz of Boston College. Penn State has dropped two in a row, scoring only one touchdown while losing to Syracuse 24-10 and Alabama (8-3).

Despite its lack of success in the series, West Virginia is a 13-point favorite. Halloween Upset Special . . . Penn State 24-21.

Last week's prediction record was 28-21-1 — .598, dropping the season's score to 280-112-4 — .714. Against the point spread, last week's mark was 20-18-0 — .526; for the year, 127-132-1 — .490.

Washington State at No. 1 UCLA (favored by 21): The top two passers in the country go head-to-head and — surprise! — Timm (CQ) Rosenbach is rated No. 1 — not Troy Aikman. But Aikman has repeatedly said he would rather see his team be No. 1 ... UCLA 49-21.

No. 2 Notre Dame (by 34) at Navy: Army was smart enough to drop the Irish; when will Navy learn? One of the nation's longest intersectional rivalries continues indefinitely, with Navy trailing 51-9 and losers of the last 24 ... Notre Dame 49-7.

No. 3 Southern California (by 16) at Oregon State: The last time the Trojans lost in Corvallis (1967), they also won the national championship. History may repeat, but not in Corvallis ... Southern Cal 35-21.

No. 4 Miami, Fla. (by 31) at East Carolina: The Hurricanes are coasting until they visit LSU on Nov. 19 ... Miami 56-14.

Missouri at No. 5 Nebraska (by 37): The Cornhuskers have been on a roll since UCLA blew them away. They have a five-game winning streak, the closest a 63-42 victory over Oklahoma State in which they led 35-0 after one period ... Nebraska 42-14.

Kansas at No. 8 Oklahoma (by 50): Believe it or not, 0-7 Kansas is probably looking past the Sooners — to next week's game with Kansas State, which may be its only chance for a victory this year ... Oklahoma 45-7.

No. 9 Auburn (by 7) at Florida: The Tigers are 0-7 in Gainesville since 1972 but the Gators may be too banged up to continue that streak ... Auburn 17-7.

No. 10 Wyoming (by 17) at Colorado State: The Cowboys have scored 171 points in their last three games but this could be closer than you think ... Wyoming 31-21.

Rice at No. 11 Arkansas (by 22): Arkansas is 7-0 and within range of its first Cotton Bowl trip since 1975. Rice is 0-6 and within range of more losses since the Owls visit Notre Dame next week ... Arkansas 38-10.

No. 12 Oklahoma State (by 38) at Kansas State: Even if the Cowboys are looking ahead to Oklahoma, they shouldn't have too much trouble with a winless K-State team that lost to Tulsa, Tulane and Louisiana Tech ... Oklahoma State 45-14.

Mississippi at No. 13 LSU (by 11): Ole Miss has won three straight and another victory would put them in the bowl picture ... LSU 34-17.

No. 14 Michigan (by 29) at Northwestern: Bo Schembechler & Co. can smell the roses and the right to be beaten in Pasadena by UCLA or USC ... Michigan 49-6.

No. 15 Clemson (by 8) at Wake Forest: The Tigers have scored 110 points in their three televised games, 66 in their other four. This one's not on the tube, but nevertheless ... Clemson 24-14.

No. 17 South Carolina (by 3) at North Carolina State: If N.C. State wins this one, the Top Twenty can't overlook the Wolfpack any longer ... South Carolina 24-17.

William & Mary at No. 18 Georgia (no line): Tom, Dick and Harry can't help William & Mary in this one ... Georgia 52-0.

No. 19 Alabama (by 12) at Mississippi State: Bama's only loss was to Ole Miss. Second Upset Special ... Mississippi State 17-14.

RANGERS—

dy Donnell, Kermit runs a power offense based on the speed and strength of left halfback Billy Ray Thompson.

Thompson, a 5-foot-9, 160-pounder, ran for 1,800 yards last season and passed the 1,000-yard mark again in the Yellowjackets' game with Fabens last week. The senior is no stranger to Greenwood, but the Rangers have always had fairly good success with him.

THE ALL-STATE candidate gained only 78 yards in last year's Kermit-Greenwood game, but the Yellowjackets still won 35-6 after winning 38-7 in '86.

Still, Purser holds Thompson in high regard.

"He's by far the best running back we've faced," the Ranger coach said.

If tradition was the key, Kermit would have the hands-down advantage. The Jackets have won 10 of the last 11 district championships, while Greenwood has never made the playoffs in nine years of grid competition.

But Kermit coach Randy Hicks says tradition can be a double-edged sword.

"With tradition, you have to guard against complacency. You have to play well every week."

Greenwood won't be the kind of team Kermit can go through the motions against, Hicks said.

"They're a good football team that's getting better every game," he said. "Donnell can probably run the open field as well as Billy Ray.

"The difference is that Billy Ray touches the ball 14 or 15 times a game, while Donnell may touch it 60 times."

KERMIT GIVES Thompson a break with the likes of right halfbacks Saul Alvarado (seven TD's) and Richard Ramos. Also, quarterback Victor Muniz has engineered a run-oriented offense while scoring six more times.

Mammoth right tackle Duke Carter (6-3, 260) leads the Jackets on the offensive line.

Defensively, Kermit has gotten strong performances from cornerback Ramos, linebackers Alvarado and Mark Parks; defensive end Timmy Cravens and safety Jimmy Ballard.

The Yellowjacket defenders will be facing a Greenwood backfield that has benefited from the dual talents of alternating fullbacks Jimmy Cox and Jimmy O'Briant. Cox came back from an injury to run for 41 yards in eight carries at Crane, while O'Briant led the team in rushing with 55 yards last week after having gained more than 100 yards in each of the previous two weeks.

Halfbacks Brian Aylor and Randy Marquez can't be overlooked, either, even though they've been overshadowed in recent games by Donnell and O'Briant's heroics. Both have the speed to break a game wide open, as Marquez evidenced by returning the opening kickoff for an 88-yard touchdown against Crane.

OOPS: It was incorrectly reported that possible bi-district opponents for Rankin and Garden City would come from District 9-A.

Instead, the District 8-A winner will play the District 5-A runnersup in area playoff competition on Nov. 18, with the 8A runnerup to play the 5A winner on the same weekend.

District 5-A schools include Wink, Sanderson, Grandfalls Royalty, Anthony, Dell City and Fort Davis. Wink was the pre-season favorite, but the Wildcats were upset by Fort Davis last week.

Going into this week's action, Sanderson leads district standings at 2-0, followed by several teams at 1-1.

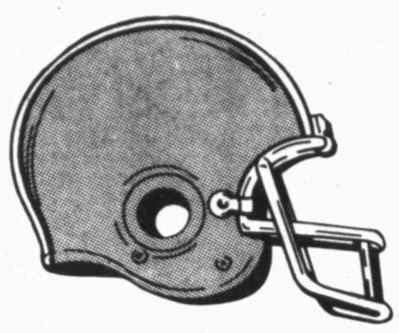
Aikman leads in Heisman race

UCLA quarterback, Okla. State rusher lead race

By GORDON S. WHITE Jr.
New York Times News Service



NEW YORK — Before conceding the 1988 Heisman Trophy to Troy Aikman, the fine UCLA quarterback, there are two things to consider.

First, there is still too much football to be played by other contenders to have them give up on the award that is given by the New York Downtown Athletic Club to the year's "outstanding college football player."

Second, maybe Aikman just isn't the best college football player in the nation, although he certainly appears to be close to it this fall.

In most years, the Heisman Trophy race is a lot like the current presidential campaign, a lot of hype and publicity with TV exposure playing a big role. This year, there has been a little less hype.

For instance, Steve Buzzard, the sports information director at Oklahoma State, has taken a refreshing approach toward his school's candidate for the Heisman.

Barry Sanders, the Cowboys' exceptional junior tailback, is leading the nation in rushing yardage, scoring, all-purpose running yardage and punt returns. But, said Buzzard, the school isn't cranking up the publicity machine.

"We've decided we are not going to do anything special for Barry," Buzzard said. "No posters. No special releases. No phone calls to voters. Barry is just going to have to do it by himself." So far, Sanders is doing just fine on his own.

UCLA, on the other hand, has been sending out a handwritten postcard each week to update the electors on Aikman's statistics.

To streamline the voting procedure, the number of electors has been reduced this year by 145 to 870 sportswriters and broadcasters. As always, the 47 living Heisman Trophy winners will also participate, for a total of 917 electors.

Gil Brandt, the vice president for personnel of the Dallas Cowboys, is a superb judge of football players. He emphasizes that some players are good for a college team and others for a pro team and some for both.

"Rodney Peete of Southern California is a quarterback who does more for his team than Aikman does because he fits so well into the Southern Cal system," Brandt said recently.

"But if I was drafting today, I'd have to take Aikman over Peete because Aikman will be a better pure passer, a better pro prospect."

Although the Heisman is awarded for excellence in collegiate play, some electors tend to vote on the players' pro prospects.

So far this fall, Aikman and Peete, the two Los Angeles quarterbacks, are apparently running one-two in the Heisman battle. Aikman, the pure passer, is thought to hold a slight edge over Peete, the runner-passer.

The Heisman — as well as a Rose Bowl berth and, perhaps, the final No.TH1 ranking — may very well be settled when UCLA and Southern California meet on Nov. 19.

But Brandt pointed out that Aikman and Peete weren't the only outstanding players. He also likes Sanders as a runner very much.

Other players who have impressed the Cowboys' vice president include Major Harris, West Virginia's quarterback.

"He's a little undisciplined," Brandt said of Harris, who has led the Mountaineers to a 7-0 mark. "But, like Peete, he can do it all and he's big and strong and smart."

Injuries have also played a part in the 1988 Heisman Trophy process. Blair Thomas of Penn State was a highly regarded running back, but underwent knee surgery last winter and has not played this fall. He may return next season as a fifth-year player after being red-shirted this fall for medical reasons.

Emmitt Smith, the fine Florida tailback, finished ninth in the 1987 Heisman Trophy vote as a freshman and was the highest finisher to return to college action this year.

But Smith was seriously injured against Memphis State on Oct. 8 and will miss at least two games as he is not going to play against Auburn on Saturday. Nevertheless, Smith is No.TH7 in the nation in rushing.

More changes at Wrigley

Just a few months after experiencing its first game under the lights, Chicago's Wrigley Field will undergo more changes, including the addition of 66 skyboxes, a new press box, upper deck concession stands and additional seating. The skyboxes are expected to rent for up to $65,000. Price of the renovations is estimated at $14 million.

Class of '83 has poor report card

By JERRY MAGEE

Don't invite members of the NFL's celebrated quarterbacking Class of '83 to a reunion.

New England's Tony Eason hasn't played a down. In Pittsburgh, Todd Blackledge failed to wrest the position from Bubby Brister, though Brister is now hurt.

And Miami's Dan Marino, Denver's John Elway and Buffalo's Jim Kelly have not been performing up to their customary standards. Before he blew away the Jets on Oct. 17, Kelly had thrown only four touchdown passes.

Of the Class of '83, only the Jets' Ken O'Brien is having a strong season.

SEOUL PRESEASON?

New Jersey businessman Alan Levine is trying to set up an NFL preseason game at the 100,000-seat Olympic Stadium in Seoul, South Korea. Levine's interests include publishing and ice cream exporting to Southeast Asia, Japan and South Korea.

Another coach turns to broadcast booth

Good basketball players have to be quick. So do good basketball announcers.

"In pro football and major league baseball, you have plenty of time to talk between plays," said Hubie Brown, CBS' new No. 1 NBA analyst.

"In pro basketball, with the 24-second clock, you've got to make your point and get it back to the announcer in a few seconds. You only have one chance."

Brown was known as a master strategist when he coached the New York Knicks and Atlanta Hawks. But can he translate his knowledge of X's and O's to a national audience that includes people who think a zone trap is a way to catch speeding drivers?

"I don't think you should ever underestimate the intelligence of your audience," said Brown, who has been working as a part-time commentator for CBS since 1982. "I know everyone out there isn't a basketball coach, but I also know that most viewers know a lot about the game."

Ted Shaker, executive producer of CBS Sports, said the "average NBA viewer has become much more sophisticated" in recent years.

"That calls for more sophisticated coverage from CBS, and Hubie Brown fits that role to a tee," he said. "He sees the game in a most interesting way, and his knowledge of the game and of the individuals playing the game will make for great coverage."

Brown replaces Billy Cunningham, who left CBS so he could remain coowner of the Miami Heat. The network had asked Cunningham to sever his ties with the expansion NBA franchise to avoid a possible conflict of interest.

CBS also demanded an exclusive deal with Brown, who worked as a commentator on Philadelphia 76ers and Detroit Pistons games last season. This year, Brown will work only for CBS.

"We feel it's a full-time job," Shaker said. "I'm sure Hubie could do a game every night because he loves basketball so much, but I think that would work against us. If you want to watch Hubie, you'll have to turn to CBS."

Trainer Angelo Dundee, who recently split with Sugar Ray Leonard over a money dispute, may work as a commentator at the Leonard-Donny Lalonde fight.

Titan Entertainment, which is handling the closed circuit and pay-per-view telecasts, wants to hire Dundee as an analyst for the Nov. 7 bout at Caesars Palace in Las Vegas, Nev.

"I think it's a great idea," said Jim Troy, Titan's senior vice president in charge of cable and international TV. "I'm sure Angie would have a lot of interesting things to say."

There are two possible snags — getting the approval of Leonard's attorney, Mike Trainer, and agreeing on a fee. A decision should be reached by next week.

Fresh off parole, Cade appears to have job

Associated Press

GREEN BAY, Wis. — Cornerback Mossy Cade, paroled from prison last week after a sexual assault conviction, feels some disappointment that the Green Bay Packers don't want him to rejoin the team this season, his agent says.

The Packers announced Wednesday they would give Cade the chance next year to win back a spot on the team.

"He's a little disappointed they didn't want him back this year," Cade's agent, Randy Rueckert, said. "We're trying to work something out so he can play this year."

Tom Braatz, executive vice president of football operations, issued a statement saying he and team President Robert Parins met with Cade and Rueckert in Chicago Tuesday. They told Cade "we would welcome him back to the Green Bay Packers' next training camp," the statement said.

"We asked him what he wanted to do, and he said he wanted to come back and play football," Braatz told an interviewer Wednesday.

Cade, 26, was paroled after serving 15 months of a two-year sentence. He had been convicted last year on two counts of second-degree sexual assault. He was accused of forcing a Houston woman who was a relative by marriage to have sex with him while she was visiting at his De Pere home.

Cade played defensive back for the Packers prior to his conviction. He was acquired in a 1985 trade for two draft picks, and Braatz said the team wanted to protect its investment by keeping a spot open for Cade.

"This is a business decision," Braatz said. "We have a need for a defensive corner."

Cade is on the club's reserve-did not report list. He eventually will meet with NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle on his football future. Joe Browne, the league's director of communications, said Wednesday that no meeting had been held and no meeting was scheduled this week.

State parole officials had said earlier that Cade was offered a security guard job at a Memphis, Tenn., securities firm.

"If the front office feels comfortable with Mossy being back, I don't have any problems with it," Coach Lindy Infante said.

Infante said, however, he sensed a wide split of opinion in the community.

"There is a contingent of people who believe that when a guy pays his debt to society it is over with," Infante said. "There are others that say that no matter what you do you should never have the guy back on the team because of what he did in the past.

"For me to make a bold statement either way, I feel would be out of place," he said.

A Green Bay television station conducted a phone-in survey Monday night, and 67.3 percent of the more than 5,000 respondents favored Cade's return.

Packer players seemed willing to accept Cade back.

"If the coaches felt he was in a situation where he would help the team, that would be fine," center Mark Cannon said. "I have no reservations about him personally at all. I still believe what I heard was his side."

"I'm glad he's getting another chance," Packers quarterback Don Majkowski said.

"Anybody with the ability he has could only help," wide receiver Sterling Sharpe said.

Landry's wife maintains support for husband

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Alicia Landry says she wouldn't encourage her husband to quit professional football, saying "everyone who knows anything about the game still thinks he is doing a great job."

Her husband, Tom, has undergone a crossfire of criticism because of the Dallas Cowboys' 2-6 start, the team's worst in 25 years.

"So far I'm not worried because I'm very optimistic in Tommy's ability to coach and I know he can do it," she said Wednesday. "He has proved he can do it, hasn't he?"

Mrs. Landry said the carping "was from a very few unfair people. Their job is to say something awful. The polls are kind of tacky but there have been a lot of people standing up for him."

Alicia said the attacks on her husband were also attacks on his age, 64.

"Don't we have a president who is over 64?" she asked. "I guess it's a sign of the times that when you get a little older you aren't supposed to be able to do anything."

Alicia and Tom aren't letting the bad times get them down.

"When we came to Dallas in the early '60s, a good friend of mine from the New York Giants (Ann Mara) told me: 'Don't read the newspapers when you lose.' I guess that's why we've lived this long. I don't think Tom's morale is down. I don't think he will let it affect him."

A 24-23 loss to Philadelphia on Sunday triggered the criticism of Landry after Dallas blew a 20-point lead.

"It was a very tough loss," Alicia said. "I didn't dream we could lose that game."

She attends all the Cowboys' game at home and on the road.

"Sports is a lot like politics," Mrs. Landry said. "If you can't stand the critics then you have to get out. I know what you're saying right now — he should have retired, right?

"You have to understand that Tom is a competitor. He thrives on competition. I wouldn't try to influence him to get out of the game — yet. He is the one who has to live with it, go to the office for those long hours every day."

Landy said on Tuesday he will honor his contract which lasts through the 1989 season.

She said her husband was "extremely crazy" about the current team.

"He's very happy with this team because it works so hard, that there is no dissension," Mrs. Landry said. "This team has so much heart and just a super mix. I just hope someone doesn't ruin it."

She said her husband does read the sports pages "for everything else but football."

Alicia said the Landrys plan to be around to see the Cowboys regain their NFL prominence.

"Life is difficult but once you know it, it isn't difficult anymore," she said. "Most of the people have been lovely. They've still been nice everywhere we go."

Lomax healthy for Pokes

PHOENIX (AP) — Phoenix Cardinals quarterback Neil Lomax has declared himself ready to play Sunday at Dallas but running back Stump Mitchell says his ankle injury may sideline him for another week.

Lomax, who has directed the NFL's No. 1 offense, had to leave last Sunday's 29-21 loss to Cleveland after suffering a contusion on his arthritic left hip.

On Monday, Lomax was limping noticeably. But after having Tuesday off, he was running the offense with no apparent problems in Wednesday's practice.

"I feel good. The hip's feeling better," Lomax told reporters. "I think I'll be able to play."

"I thought he moved fine," said Cardinals Coach Gene Stallings. "It looks to me like he'll be able to play Sunday."

Mitchell, the team's leading rusher this season and second all-time leading ground gainer, sat out last week's game with a badly sprained right ankle suffered in the 33-17 loss Sept. 25 at Washington.

He was dressed for practice Wednesday, but did carry the ball in drills.

"The ankle is not coming along as good as I thought," Mitchell said. "I still can't cut on it. Right now, I can't play."

"It's hard to tell about those ankles," Stallings said. "Ankle injuries are as hard a thing to get over as anything. I'm not going to play Stump until he's ready."

Stallings said rookie Tony Jordan will start again Sunday if Mitchell can't play.

Nixon making brave demands

ATLANTA (AP) — Russ Nixon has rejected an offer of a one-year contract to continue managing the Atlanta Braves and has informed team officials he wants a multiyear deal.

Nixon, who replaced Chuck Tanner as manager of the Braves after 39 games of the 1988 season, said Wednesday he thought he needed more than one year as manager to develop the team's younger players.

Nixon also said he thinks the Braves are more than a year away from being serious contenders in the National League West and does not want his managerial status to be the focus of media attention next year.

"I'm not going to go through what I went through this year," he said. "From the All-Star break on, that's all anybody wanted to talk about, whether I'm managing the team next year."

Nixon, whose record as manager of the Braves this year was 42-79, said that General Manager Bobby Cox "told me he thought he could work something out in the next day or two and that he'd get back to me. Right now, one year is the holdup."

Even though the game is expected to be a sellout, it appears that many Lee fans don't hold much hope for a Lee victory. For the first time in six years, some tickets — allotted to Midland — were sent back to Odessa. The long lines of previous years didn't materialize in Midland this year. Permian, on the other hand, is ticket hungry.

Preservation of Earl's jersey appears assured

Famed Longhorn back would have to approve usage of number

Associated Press

AUSTIN — After some doubt, it appears that the No. 20 jersey of former University of Texas running back Earl Campbell will not be worn again by any Longhorn football player — unless Campbell gives his OK.

Campbell's jersey was retired in 1979, two years after he had become the only Texas Longhorn to win the Heisman Trophy.

Over the weekend a newspaper report said "a big rumor floating around Austin" was that No. 20 would be pulled from retirement for Cuero running back Robert Strait, who also wears that number and is considered one of the state's top college prospects.

IN RESPONSE to that report, UT athletic director DeLoss Dodds on Tuesday told the Austin American-Statesman that he and Texas football coach David McWilliams "have talked about the Earl thing, but Robert Strait's name never came up."

"The conversation we've got going on right now is what we're going to do in the future," he said. "We've talked in general terms about possibilities such as retiring a jersey instead of a number, things like that."

WHEN ASKED if a decision to retire a jersey instead of a number would be retroactive, thus putting Campbell's No. 20 back in circulation, Dodds replied: "That's part of the conversation. But if we did that, it wouldn't be for a specific athlete."

Campbell himself said Tuesday he did not think his jersey, the only one ever retired at UT, should be used again.

"I don't think it's fair to me or fair to the guys I played football with here for four years. We all worked hard and deserved the honor of having it retired. If they (UT officials) are planning on bringing it out of retirement, all of us who played on those teams should have a role in making that decision."

Dodds on Wednesday said, "Let me make my position clear. There is no way I would support any move to activate that number. There has never been any discussion about Earl's number with relation to any recruit or player."

DODDS SAID discussions with coach McWilliams, former coach Darrell Royal and the UT athletics council earlier this year had centered around the possibility of retiring the jerseys, or numbers of former Longhorn quarterback Bobby Layne and former linebacker Tommy Nobis.

"We are looking into ways of honoring athletes in the future," Dodds said. "If the council had even considered doing anything that would have involved Earl, he would have been the first person anybody discussed it with. Personally, I would oppose anything that changed what we have already done with regard to honoring Earl."

Disney Classic leader Bob Lohr of nearby Windermere, Fla.

Lohr takes early lead

By STEVEN WINE

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — Bob Lohr said he felt like he birdied every hole. Fuzzy Zoeller just wasn't sure the first-round leader of the Walt Disney World Classic played all 18.

Lohr fired a 10-under-par 62 Wednesday for a two-shot lead over Zoeller after the opening round of the $700,000 tournament.

Lohr made 10 birdie putts to come within a stroke of both the PGA Tour's low score this year and Mark Lye's record on the Palm course, one of three used in the 72-hole tournament.

"Today was fun, needless to say," said Lohr, a four-year PGA Tour veteran still looking for his first victory. "I felt like I'd birdied just about every hole."

Zoeller's 64 was his best score this year, but he was still two shots behind Lohr.

"That was a marvelous round of golf," Zoeller said of Lohr's effort. "Are you sure he played all the way around?"

Zoeller, seeking his first tour victory since 1986, was eight under par over the Lake Buena Vista course, the shortest and easiest of the three layouts. Mark Calcavecchia, rookie Jay Don Blake and Mark McCumber all shot 65 at the same course.

Five golfers shot 66 — Chip Beck, the tour's No. 2 money winner this year, and Rick Pearson at Lake Buena Vista; Robert Wrenn and Tom Kite at Palm; and David Edwards at Magnolia, another par-72 course.

Paul Azinger, Donnie Hammond and Russ Cochran shot 67, while 19 golfers were at 68.

The tour's top money-winner, Joey Sindelar, shot a 71, while defending champion Larry Nelson had a 72.

Eighty of the 132 starters broke par under sunny skies with a light breeze.

PGA

"I don't think there's anything wrong with low scores," Lohr said. "I don't think many guys want to play 30 U.S. Opens a year."

Lohr said he started slowly, missing birdie putts of 8, 15 and 18 feet. But he knocked two 140-foot wedge shots to within a foot of the cup for birdies, and later made birdie putts of 15, 25 and 15 feet. Lohr birdied all four of the par-5 holes and tied his personal best score.

"The key was I drove it really well, and that set me up on the fairways," he said.

Lohr, 27, came within a stroke of winning three tournaments last year. This year he's 69th on the money list and his best finish has been a tie for fifth.

"My main goal this year was to be a little more consistent, and I think I've done that," Lohr said. "I'd be lying if I said I didn't want to win. Sure, everybody wants to win. But I don't put that much pressure on it."

Zoeller hit 17 greens in regulation, made eight birdies and offered two reasons for the low scores.

"Look at your weather," he said. "And the golf courses are in tip-top shape. You can't ask for any finer."

Beck had seven birdies on the way to his best round since June. He trails Sindelar by $11,980 and hopes to overtake him by the end of the Nabisco Championships Nov. 10-13.

"It's important to get off to a nice start," Beck said. "This is the start of a three-week stretch that's important to me, and it was nice to begin like this."

Glenn Davis named Astros' MVP

Astro slugger honored by Baseball Writers

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston first baseman Glenn Davis, who hit .271 and drove in a team high 99 runs, was named the Astros' most valuable player Wednesday by the Houston chapter of the Baseball Writers Association of America.

Davis also led the Astros with 30 home runs and had 152 hits, second on the team to shortstop Rafael Ramirez's 156 hits.

Davis will receive the award Feb. 8 at the annual baseball dinner sponsored by the Houston Athletic Council.

FORMER ASTROS trainer Doc Ewell will receive the BBWAA award for long and meritorious service to baseball and Cleveland pitcher Greg Swindell will be honored as the Greater Houston Area Major League Player of the Year.

The player of the year award is a new honor for a major league player who played high school or college baseball in the greater Houston area.

Baseball

Swindell, who played high school baseball at Houston Sharpstown and pitched at the University of Texas, compiled an 18-14 record last season and 3.20 earned run average.

Swindell struck out 180 batters in 242 innings.

THE WRITERS also chose chapter officers for the 1989 season. Richard Luna of United Press International was elected chairman.

Fred Hartman of the Baytown Sun and Ivy McLemore of the Houston Post were re-elected as secretary-treasurer and sergeant-at-arms.

Soviet runners in New York Marathon for first time since '82

By ROBERT McG. THOMAS Jr.
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — With perestroika on their lips, running on their minds and their eyes on the chance of winning some hard American currency, seven Soviet runners, the first to enter the New York City Marathon since 1982, proclaimed Wednesday that the political barriers to Soviet athletic participation in the United States had fallen forever.

"If you invite us every year, we'll come every year," said Nikolai Tabak, the team's top men's prospect.

He drew nods of approval from his teammates when he told a news conference that the new Soviet policies of glasnost (openness) and perestroika (restructuring) had made an indelible change in Soviet life, even for highly regulated elite athletes.

"The effects of perestroika are very extensive," he said.

"We're free to say anything we think. Because we say what we think, people think more of us for it."

Less than two weeks before the Nov. 6 marathon, Tabak, who has a personal best marathon time of 2 hours 10 minutes 4 seconds and has run seven marathons under 2:15 over the last two years, is the fourth-ranked man.

He is rated behind Steve Jones of Britain; Ibrahim Hussein of Kenya, last year's winner, and Wojtanu Bulti of Ethiopia.

The top Soviet prospect in the women's division is Tatyana Polovinskaya, a fast-improving 23-year-old who set the Soviet women's record of 2:27:05 in placing fourth at the Olympic marathon in Seoul.

That came just two years after her best time was only 2:36.

According to Fred Lebow, the marathon director, she is ranked third in the women's division, behind Joan Benoit Samuelson and Grete Waitz.

To make Tabak, Polovinskaya and the other representatives of the Soviet Union's austere state-run athletic program feel right at home, the news conference was held at that West 57th Street monument to Czarist opulence, the Russian Tea Room.

There, with Stan Saplin serving as master of ceremonies, Marsha Chursina, a Soviet immigrant, serving as interpreter, and red-coated waiters serving everybody in sight, the Soviet runners and their coach, Valery Shechanov, expressed their pleasure at being in New York.

They promised to do their best in the marathon and engaged in good-natured banter with reporters.

Asked about the team's athletic equipment, especially the manufacturer of its running shoes, Polovinskaya gave only a brief glance at the three officials traveling with the team before demonstrating the new Soviet openness.

"That," she said, "is a military secret." (Judging by the Tiger logo on their socks as well as the distinctive design of the shoes, the supplier was a Japanese shoe company.)

When Tabak was asked if the group had been warned not to train in Central Park at night, he said it didn't make any difference since "nobody can really catch up to us."

Even if they do not win any prize money, the Soviet athletes will have cleaned up on their visit.

Although they are receiving no direct appearance fees, like seven lesser Soviet runners who are competing in the America's Marathon in Chicago on Sunday, the Soviet delegation arrived two weeks ahead of their race, the better to enjoy American luxuries at American expense.

The marathon's organizers are picking up their hotel bill as well as shelling out $55 a day in subsistence money for each of the seven runners and three officials.

Lebow estimates that with the round-trip air fare, importing the Soviet delegation will cost $25,000.

With a prize list beginning at $26,385 plus a new Mercedes for the winners of the two divisions, the Soviet runners made clear they would like to get a share of it, even though, as it turns out, they probably won't get to keep much of it, if any.

According to the delegation's chief, Tengiz Bolkvadze, the chairman of the sports committee for the tiny autonomous Soviet republic of Adzhar, there are limits to the changes that have been made under perestroika.

Kelvin on the loose

By DAVID GINSBURG

HERNDON, Va. (AP) — The Washington Redskins have unleashed Kelvin Bryant, and the former U.S. Football League standout has proven he can be a star in any league.

After spending his initial two-plus years in the NFL as a pass-catching specialist, Bryant was granted his wish to see the ball on first down.

The results have been sensational. By land and through the air, Bryant accumulated 653 total yards in the last four weeks. His 210 yards in Washington's 20-17 victory over Green Bay last Sunday was more offense than the Packers could muster.

"When we signed him from the USFL, that's the type of guy we thought we'd get," said Redskins assistant coach Joe Bugel. "He's done it all for us this past month."

When Bryant played with the Philadelphia, then Baltimore Stars, his 4,055 rushing yards was the second-highest total in USFL history behind Herschel Walker. He led the Stars to the USFL championship game in each of his three seasons.

After the league's demise in 1986, he came to the Redskins with a four-year $3.7 million contract. After Bryant suffered through a series of leg injuries, Washington coach Joe Gibbs used him only as a pass-catcher.

CHAPS

"Barton County lost to eventual NJCAA champion Hutchinson in post-season play," noted MC head coach Reggie Franklin, who is beginning his second season at MC. "Jacksonville beat Odessa in the bi-regional game and finished eighth at the national tournament, South Plains returns its big inside players, and Howard is expected to be much-improved this season under new head coach Steve Green, formerly an assistant at the University of Houston.

Started as a four-team classic in 1978, the Chap Classic went to an eight-team championship format in 1983 and now is the oldest tournament conducted by a member of the Western Junior College Athletic Conference. South Plains and Howard also are members of the WJCAC.

According to Rick Ball, a junior college basketball specialist, this tourney features five of the top 15 junior college sophomores in the country. Carl Herrera, a 6-9 native of Venezuela who plays for Jacksonville, is ranked second on Ball's blue-chip list; Jackie Jones, 6-7 from Barton County, is sixth; MC's Sydney Rice, 6-10, is seventh; Keith Stewart, 6-9, of South Plains is 14th; and MC's Charles 'Smokey' McCovery, a 6-2 point guard, is 15th.

But many eyes will be on some of the freshmen. Barton County is high on Kenny Williams, a 6-9 ½ forward who was listed by many as the first or second best high school senior last year. Williams signed with Dean Smith at North Carolina, but was a Proposition 48 casualty. Williams was a McDonald's Prep All-American Choice. And Howard College has 6-8 Carlos Thunm and 6-4 Natan Vierriea, both from Sao Paulo, Brazil, not to mention three 6-7 players.

The Chaps feel they grabbed a few freshman pearls themselves: Randy Williams, a super-quick 6-2 guard from Fort Worth Dunbar, helped his team to the Texas 5A finals; 6-9 Darryl King of Lawton, Oklahoma, already shows many of the moves displayed by his older brother, Stacy, of the '87 Final Four Oklahoma Sooners; and Kethus Hanks is another 6-2 guard who helped lead Houston Sam Houston to the 1988 Class 5A state championship.

Following the Chap Classic, Midland College goes to Warner, Okla., for the two-night Murray State Classic. After a home game Nov. 17 against the McMurry College JV, the Chaps go to Great Bend, Kan., for the Barton County Thanksgiving Tournament.

Four WJCAC games end the fall portion of the schedule, including home games Dec. 1 against Howard College and Dec. 5 against South Plains. The year closes with the expanded Mesa, Arizona, Rotary Shoot-Out Dec. 28-31 which has been expanded from eight to 16 teams.

"We look pretty good on paper, with five returning lettermen, but only McCovery was a regular starter last year, said Franklin. "Rice came on strong the latter part of the season, but with only one semester of play in high school and one year at MC, he's still learning. Steve Overstreet, 6-7, lost about 25 pounds since the season ended last March, and has really been playing well.

"Were going to have to depend on several of our freshmen to start and perform under pressure."

The Chaps were 25-7 last year and finished as Region V runners-up after ending up third in the WJCAC standings.

May mean more drilling says CEO

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

While Enserch Exploration has announced it is pulling its exploration department out of Midland, the move could actually mean more drilling activity in the Permian Basin, says the firm's president and chief executive officer, R.G. "Bob" Fowler.

Fowler and other Enserch executives from Midland and Dallas were honored at a Midland Wildcatter reception Wednesday at the Midland Petroleum Club.

Fowler said Enserch was consolidating exploration efforts at its headquarters for the same reason other oil companies are consolidating exploration.

Explained Fowler, "We are doing it to get more control over budgets and get the most bang for the buck. In these times, our board of directors and our bankers are demanding that we get more control of capital expenditures. Having a geophyscist in the field is sort of like having a daughter in college; you can be assured they will spend money."

Enserch announced earlier that it will send 15 to 20 of its Midland exploration employees to Dallas, leaving about 40 production and support employees in Midland.

Fowler explained that competition between districts to get their share of the exploration budget often meant the best prospects were not getting drilled. "Each district wants its share of the budget even though its prospects and plays may be inferior to those of another district."

He added that consolidation of exploration also allowed the "geological superstars" to work on projects companywide and not just in their district.

Doug Sehree/Reporter-Telegram

Enserch Exploration Inc. officials were honored at Wednesday's Midland Wildcat Committee reception at the Petroleum Club. Enserch officials present included, from left, Bob Fowler, president and chief operating officer; Gary Junco, senior vice president, land and marketing; Matt Lutz, senior vice president, exploration; and Dick Kincheloe, senior vice president, land and marketing.

"In every company these superstars emerge, and you want to be able to maximize their talents rather than confining them to a single region. Also, by centralizing exploration talent, we find they are able to feed on each other."

Fowler said the Permian Basin may actually get more of the firm's attention and total exploration budget if the prospects and plays here prove to be superior to other districts, adding there is much excitement in the company about the potential of the Permian Basin.

"We are having a show-and-tell session tomorrow, and it looks like we have some outstanding plays here with good prospects to look at."

MCorp head: Bankruptcy possible

DALLAS (AP) — The chairman of MCorp, a Dallas-based bank holding company, says "there is a high probability" that the company will file for bankruptcy or be forced into that action by creditors.

"I think everybody recognizes that there is a high probability that we will be in bankruptcy within 30 days," chairman Gene Bishop said Wednesday. "It's obvious that we can be forced and that we may not have any choice."

"In the interest of protecting our assets and our creditors, it's really the only alternative."

There had been recent industry speculation that the bank holding company, Texas' second-largest behind NCNB Texas National Bank, was forcing the bankruptcy issue to advance its own plan to recapitalize.

MCorp announced earlier this week it would stop paying dividends to preferred shareholders and would cease payments on about $470 million in debt. That action effectively put the bank holding company's creditors on notice that they could push MCorp into bankruptcy after Nov. 21.

"When we made the decision last week to quit paying dividends and interest (on debt), that gives us 30 days from that date, which is Nov. 21," Bishop said. "It has the potential of triggering a bankruptcy.

"It's sometimes very hard to get the government's attention, and I do think now that we've got their attention," Bishop said. "The time clock is running now."

MCorp proposed a recapitalization package earlier this month that would include $400 million from the bank holding company itself, $400 million raised from investors and shareholders, and an undisclosed amount of aid from the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. Analysts have estimated the company would need at least $1 billion in federal money.

MCorp has set aside $400 million for the rescue and the FDIC wants the company to spread that money around to its ailing banks.

"The regulators . . . are saying we should use our money, and put it down in the banks and then they'll see what they can do for us," Bishop said. "They will give us no assurance they will do anything."

Bishop said MCorp attorneys have told the company to leave the money where it is, partly for the recapitalization and partly so the board won't be sued by creditors upset that the holding company was putting all of its assets into its subsidiary banks.

Chamber hires fund-raising experts

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Assistant Business/Oil Editor

The Midland Chamber of Commerce's board of directors took the first step toward what they hope will be a resolution to a long-standing drain on operating revenues.

Board members Wednesday approved a contract with National Community Development Services, an Atlanta-based marketing consulting firm which specializes in assisting local chambers of commerce.

The $15,000 contract authorized by the board calls for NCDS to complete an initial fund-raising feasibility analysis based on 50 to 60 personal interviews in the community.

The report, which is expected to be available within four to six weeks, will include NCDS' "go/no-go" recommendation, and an achievable target amount, timetable, plan and other details if it is deemed advisable to go ahead.

Chamber Chairman Steve Davidson introduced the proposal, noting that recently completed multi-year fund-raising drives coordinated by the firm have exceeded their goals by 50 to 60 percent in Sioux City, Iowa and Pine Bluff, Ark.

The company has assisted more than 100 communities raise more than $1 million apiece, Davidson said.

He added that the consultants have a reputation for honest evaluation and will advise against moving forward with a drive if community support and the chances of success are insufficient.

Contracting for the feasibility study does not obligate the chamber to hire the consultants to conduct the fund drive if the decision is made to move forward, according to chamber President John Fowler.

Auto sales up 14.8 percent in October

By PHILIP E. ROSS
New York Times News Service

DETROIT — New American-made cars and light trucks sold at a daily rate of 35,407 units in mid-October, up 14.8 percent from last year's comparable period.

The seven domestic manufacturers reported Tuesday that their cars sold at an average rate of 21,800 a day, up 13.2 percent, while light trucks averaged 13,607 a day, up 17.3 percent. There were nine selling days in the Oct. 11-20 period this year and eight last year.

As was the case in the Oct. 1-10 period, the market seemed stronger than it really was because the new results were being compared with unusually weak sales in the fall of 1987. That weakness was a consequence of buyer incentive programs offered by Detroit in the summer of 1987, which prompted many people to buy cars earlier than they might have.

Ford reports another record quarter

By JOHN HOLUSHA
New York Times News Service

DEARBORN, Mich. — The Ford Motor Co., continuing its string of financial successes, Wednesday reported record third-quarter net income of $856 million, or $1.78 a share, up 21.7 percent from $703.2 million, or $1.38 a share, in the third quarter last year.

The earnings gain, in line with expectations of securities analysts, resulted from improved overseas operations that more than made up for a decline in domestic profits.

Ford said it earned $384 million from its foreign operations in the quarter, a gain of $274 million from the year-ago period.

Earnings from operations in the United States totaled $472 million, a decline of $121 million.

The company attributed the decline to higher costs of material and labor, a less-profitable mix of cars and trucks, and a decline in the performance of its financial services group.

Despite paying back about $500 million in loans and spending $500 million on capital improvements, Ford ended the quarter with $9.3 billion in cash.

David N. McCammmon, the company's vice president for finance, said Ford was still looking to make acquisitions, particularly in the financial services area.

But he cautioned that Ford's top executives did not feel any pressure to make a deal. "We have done two and a half billion in acquisitions in less than three years, a half billion at a time," he said. He added that the company might continue with relatively modest purchases.

Third largest thrift wants to leave FSLIC for FDIC

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Great Western Bank, the nation's third-largest savings and loan, says it wants to leave the troubled federal system that bails out failed thrifts and to join the insurance system for commercial banks.

The move would save Great Western $26 million a year in insurance premiums and send a message to Congress that the nation's healthy thrifts are fed up with paying to rescue faltering, often badly managed S&Ls, analysts said.

"This is a very important statement," said Peter Treadway, an analyst for the investment firm of Smith Barney, Harris Upham in New York. "This is a signal that Great Western is not going to put up with any more nonsense and have its net worth stolen without a fight."

Great Western said Wednesday it has applied for permission to drop Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. coverage of deposits in its 263 retail branches in California, Florida and Arizona in favor of insurance by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., which covers most banks and some thrift institutions.

Most savings institutions are barred by Congress from leaving the FSLIC, although Great Western says it is exempt from that rule.

Great Western's action appeared unlikely to mark the beginning of a mass exodus from the FSLIC, which faces $50 billion to $100 billion in bailout costs. But the move was seen to have symbolic significance as members of Congress are expected this session to put a high priority on the issue of thrift bailouts.

"This is sure to get the attention of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and Congress," said Norman Coulson, chief executive of Glendale Federal Savings & Loan Association. "Congress has got to address this problem sooner or later. They can't continue tapping the healthy thrifts forever."

Great Western Financial, based in Beverly Hills, is the nation's No. 3 thrift holding company with $31 billion in assets and 900 offices nationwide.

The insurance switch, if approved, wouldn't affect customers or employees, but would save the parent company and its stockholders about $26 million a year in special FSLIC premiums, said spokesman Ian Campbell.

Great Western is among about 40 of the nation's 3,200 S&Ls that filed documents making them eligible for exemptions from the ban on defections from the FSLIC that was imposed by Congress in August 1987 and renewed Aug. 10.

About 10 S&Ls, none of them as large as Great Western, have left the FSLIC to be insured by the FDIC while retaining their savings and loan charters.

What irks healthy thrifts are the high FSLIC premiums they are charged to offset the losses of a minority troubled thrifts. Those premiums run about 2½ times more than those assessed by the FDIC.

Both the FSLIC and the FDIC insure customers accounts up to $100,000. But while the FSLIC is insolvent, the FDIC expects to have at least $15 billion in reserves by the end of the year.

Markets await next OPEC rumor

From Staff and Wire Reports

In the absence of market-moving developments, crude oil futures prices were mixed in dull, quiet trading on Wednesday.

"The market is just waiting for the next rumor to come out of OPEC," said Peter Beutel, an energy analyst with Elders Futures Inc.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries was scheduled to meet several times this month to discuss controlling production as a way to prop up worldwide oil prices, which have fallen sharply in recent weeks.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, the December contract for West Texas Intermediate dropped back a nickel this morning after rising 15 cents Wednesday to settle at $13.41 a barrel.

In two days, the market had gained back less than one-fourth of the $1.20 prices plunged on Monday.

Analysts said the market had little reaction to a report Wednesday from the Islamic Republic news agency that Iran would continue to oppose an OPEC production quota for Iraq, its 8-year war foe, equal to its own.

Iraq said recently it would maintain its production at a minimum 2.7 million barrels per day, nearly double its assigned OPEC quota. Iran, meanwhile, is pushing its daily production toward 3 million barrels, well above its 2.3 million barrel quota.

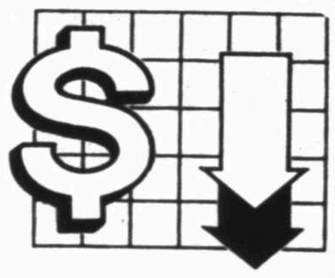
Dollar languishes near recent lows

LONDON (AP) — The dollar was mixed in Europe today after falling to four-month lows on a report of unexpectedly low U.S. economic growth. Gold also was mixed.

The U.S. currency fluctuated in a narrow range in moderately active trading. Dealers in Frankfurt and Tokyo reported modest intervention by the West German and Japanese central bank in support of the dollar. The banks, as is their custom, declined to comment.

In Tokyo, the dollar fell 0.90 yen to a closing 125.90 yen. Later, in London, it slipped back even further to 125.70 yen.

It was the lowest dollar-yen rate recorded in Tokyo since June 17, when the dollar closed at 125.73 yen.



Other dollar rates at mid-morning, compared with late Wednesday:

—1.7750 West German marks, up from 1.7745

—1.4975 Swiss francs, down from 1.5065

—6.0635 French francs, down from 6.0725

—2.0035 Dutch guilders, up from 2.0005

—1,322.00 Italian lire, down from 1,323.50

—1.1990 Canadian dollars, up from 1.1988

In London, the British pound fell to $1.7580, compared with $1.7600 Wednesday.

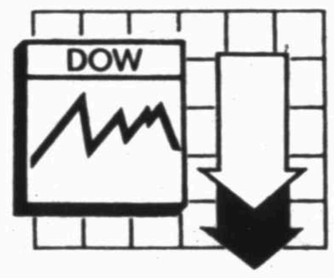
Gold opened in London at a bid price of $408.10 a troy ounce, up from $407.05 bid late Wednesday. At midmorning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $407.15.

In Zurich, the bid price was $406.95, down from $407.10 bid late Wednesday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold fell 54 cents to close at a bid $409.22.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $6.22 a troy ounce, up from Wednesday's $6.21.

Slow growth fails to inspire traders



NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market retreated Wednesday as new evidence of slowing economic growth failed to catch traders' fancy.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 8.18 to 2,165.18.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 4 to 3 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 624 up, 814 down and 528 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 181.55 million shares, against 155.19 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 216.82 million shares.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market lost $8.66 billion, or 0.31 percent, in value.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks dropped .50 to 158.37.

Standard & Poor's industrial index fell 1.44 to 324.22, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was down 1.00 at 281.38.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market slipped .93 to 385.19. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 303.44, down .94.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

KKR may initiate hostile bid for RJR Nabisco

NEW YORK (AP) — RJR Nabisco Inc. has broken off buyout talks with Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co., raising the possibility that the powerful investment firm might launch a hostile $20.3 billion tender offer for the food and tobacco conglomerate.

The failure of the talks appeared to set the stage for a showdown between Kohlberg Kravis and Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc., Nabisco's financial partner, over what would be the nation's biggest corporate acquisition.

After a meeting of Nabisco's outside directors Wednesday, President F. Ross Johnson said the group concluded Kohlberg Kravis's proposal to acquire Nabisco for $90 a share was not in the company's best interest.

Wang sentenced to 3 years in conspiracy

NEW YORK (AP) — Stephen Wang has been sentenced to three years in prison for his role in the nation's second-largest insider trading fraud.

Wang, 24, who was sentenced Wednesday, is a former junior analyst at Morgan Stanley & Co. He pleaded guilty last month to fraud for conspiring with Taiwanese businessman Fred C. Lee to profit in the stock market by stealing from the firm secrets about impending corporate takeovers.

Wang and Lee were exposed in late June by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Fed: FSLIC bailout 'dangerous precedent'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan says the fund insuring savings and loan deposits needs more money, but requiring the Fed to help bail it out could set a dangerous precedent.

Greenspan's remarks were made Wednesday in response to questions submitted by the Senate Banking Committee, which has debated whether taxpayers must pay to bail out the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. The Federal Home Loan Bank Board, which regulates S&Ls and oversees the insurance fund, believes the assessment levied on the industry can cover the costs.

But many analysts, and now Greenspan, agree that the insurance fund's current revenue flow isn't enough.

CHAMBER

Board members' concerns about going outside the area — and the state — to hire consultants were answered by Davidson who said the quality of expertise and degree of specialization available from NCDS could not be matched locally.

"If we want to be competitive, to be a player in economic development recruiting and other areas, we will have to have a better-funded multi-year program," Davidson said.

The funds raised through a long-term drive would be used for a project tenatively dubbed "Forward Midland" — an accelerated four-year marketing program, with specific quantifiable goals.

Bringing in outside expertise to bolster flagging finances is needed to address the chamber's long-term debt service obligations, on the organization's building as well as past operating deficits. Projected flat membership dues revenue over the next couple of years cannot maintain debt service and funding the level of economic development activity Midland needs, Fowler noted.

"We're not floundering, but we're not setting the world on fire either," said Bill Franklin, chairman of First City Bank — Midland and a chamber director.

Another potential benefit to the chamber from NCDS' interviews and analysis is "getting a good strong feeling of which directions the chamber should be headed and how best to get there," added Doug Henson, president of SBC Corp., and treasurer of the chamber.

AUTOS

Car sales in mid-October this year ran at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 7 million, only slightly more than the anemic 6.8 million annual rate of early October.

"The numbers look pretty good," considering the relatively modest level of buyer incentives now, said Joseph S. Phillippi, an auto analyst in New York with Shearson Lehman Hutton.

"But if sales don't move up again, if we don't see 7.5 million, 7.6 million fairly consistently, we're going to have some revisions in production plans late in the fourth quarter and in the first quarter," he said.

ENSERCH

Enserch had a budget of $150 million in 1988 and Fowler does not expect it to be substantially different in 1989. Unlike many firms which took on heavy debt to finance expansion during the boom, Enserch has stuck closely to its policy of spending cash flow only.

"Enserch is a strong company today because we never borrowed. We spend only cash flow." He said cash flow and budgets for 1989 would depend greatly on oil prices.

Enserch has been a strong supporter of stabilized oil prices and initiated efforts to have the U.S. Department of Commerce review the plight of the oil industry under Section 232 of the Fair Trade Act. The act permits industries which feel they have been injured by foreign imports to petition the Commerce Department to study their problem and present recommendations for relief to the president.

"I expect a recommendation will be presented to the president this week. There is no chance of an oil import fee under Reagan, but he can still help even at this late date. If we are to have an import fee or other device to stabilize oil prices, we will have a better chance of getting it under Bush or Dukakis."

He said the alternative to doing nothing to stabilize oil prices was to have no domestic petroleum industry.

Fowler said there could be no price stabilization in the present market without OPEC accord, adding he thinks an accord can be achieved.

"I think pressure for production quotas from the smaller Arab countries, can bring accord. These small countries, which put on the pressure to end the price crash of 1986, are again hurting badly as a result of low oil prices."

When accord is achieved Fowler said prices will spike overnight. "You will see oil prices go to $18 within a matter of hours. There will not be a gradual increase in price over several days or weeks."

Enserch, the successor to Lone Star Production, has roots that go back to 1940s in the Permian Basin. The company is the eighth largest owner in the SACROC Unit of Scurry County. "SACROC is the foundation for this company," said Fowler.

Of the 8,000 barrels of oil the firm produces daily about 2,000 come from the Permian Basin. But Enserch has also been a big player in the deep gas of the Delaware Basin, and is convinced that recovery of the oil industry and the economy of Texas will be led by natural gas.

"We have always felt that recovery would be gas-led," said Fowler. "We are strongly encouraged by gas prices, which are already higher than this time last year. Oil prices are controlled by the international oil market, but gas prices are not."

FORD

Ford was the first of the domestic auto makers to report earnings for the third quarter, which is usually the weakest for the industry because of the costs of plant conversions and the introduction of new models. General Motors and Chrysler are expected to report their results tomorrow.

In the quarter, Ford again increased its share of the car market — by nine-tenths of a percentage point, to 21.3 percent — and its share of the truck market by a percentage point, to 28.9 percent. McCammon said this market share was the company's best in 10 years.

Ford is now producing at the limit of its capacity, but McCammon said financial performance could improve.

He said the combination of a 2.5 percent price increase on its 1989 model lineup and a slowdown in the rate of rise in materials costs could widen the company's margins in the coming year.

CONSUMING INTEREST

Caffeine-free tea boasts full-bodied flavor

By LINDA ANDERSON

Anderson

In our office, like in all offices, we each have our daily routines. The first thing on my daily agenda is to head for the soft drink machine for my morning dose of diet Dr Pepper. My two co-workers, on the other hand, prefer a morning cup of tea. Not only is it soothing and pleasant and warm, they say, but they don't have to put 50 cents into a machine to get a cup.

Anyway, when we got a free package of Celestial Seasonings' new Caffeine-Free Tea bags, it seemed only natural to leave the taste-testing to them (while I sat back with a can of diet DP and a bag of peanut M&M's; breakfast of champions).

Label advertising claims the tea is "a fine blend of herbs and natural tea flavors" that is "100 percent naturally caffeine free." If you are like me, you are probably wondering what "natural tea flavors" can possibly be. In this case, these flavors come from these ingredients: blackberry leaves, roasted chicory root, natural tea flavors (there it is again) and other natural flavors (same song, second verse), rosehips, hibiscus flowers and roasted carob. But still no clue about "natural tea flavors." Oh well. ...

The label also carries learned — but useless as far as tea is concerned — quotes from famous people: "Trifles make perfection and perfection is no trifle." —Michaelangelo. Or this one: "Read the best books first or you may not have a chance to read them at all." —Henry David Thoreau. I wonder if the quotes change from box to box.

The label lists a toll-free number for consumers to call if they have any questions about "this or any other Celestial Seasonings product." However, since the telephone number is hidden on the part of the flap that goes inside the box, and the only way you are going to see it is to buy and open the package, so I'll give it to you now: 1-800-351-8175.

The taste-testers gave the caffeine-free tea rave reviews (although one waited until afternoon to do the tasting, saying she needed her caffeine in the morning.) One said, "It has the best full-bodied flavor of any herbal tea I've ever tasted. It even looks like tea, which is amazing. Some teas don't even change color after the bag has been in the water five minutes."

But, she added, "It doesn't taste like real tea, not quite. Not enough to give it (real tea) up, even though I know I should."

General concensus was, if you want to have your caffeine-free tea and drink it too, Celestial Seasonings' Caffeine-Free Tea might be the one for you. For me, I'll stick to good, old caffeine-laden real tea. It is, after all, the real thing.

BETTER BUSINESS

Vitamin company contest winners may end up losers

By JOHN K. SCHMIDT

Schmidt

The Better Business Bureau has been flooded with inquiries concerning vitamin company postcards telling recipients that they are eligible to receive one of four prizes for participating in a national promotional campaign.

There are more than a half dozen different firms responsible for the mailings, but the postcards and prizes offered are similar.

The prizes range from a new truck to a $5,000 savings bond to a genuine fur coat.

But the BBB has learned that when recipients call the toll-free number, they are told they must purchase a $200 to $300 supply of vitamins. The "winners" are then told that in order to obtain one of the four prizes that they qualify for, they must purchase the vitamins with a credit card.

The firms claim that they are working in conjunciton with a "major manfuacturer" and two major credit card companies. Consumers are led to believe that somehow the firms already have access to their credit card number and by simply agreeing to the purchase, the amount will be billed to their credit card.

However, the BBB has learned through telephone shoppings that the firms do not have prior access to credit card numbers. The firms require that a credit card number be given over the telephone before the shoppers could even find out which prize was "won." The firms state that the prize will be mailed. The firms do not explain how the "winner" of the new truck will receive it through the mail.

Fat intake, soluable fiber affects cholesterol level

By MARIAN FARR

Farr

Although diet is only one factor that affects your blood cholesterol level, it is an important factor which you can control if your level becomes elevated. If your blood cholesterol is higher than desirable, the following suggestions may help you become more aware of how to reduce the total fat and saturated fat in the diet, increase soluble fiber and keep your dietary cholesterol intake moderate:

■ Limit the use of sandwich spreads such as butter, margarine, mayonnaise and salad dressing. Soft diet margarine contains less fat than regular margarine. Read labels and choose margarines where the first ingredient listed is liquid oil, not hydrogenated (hardened).

■ Limit your intake of all fats and oils, especially those high in saturated fat, such as butter, cream, lard, hydrogenated vegetable fats (some margarines and shortenings) and foods containing palm oil, palm kernel oil, coconut oil or cocoa butter. Read labels carefully. These fats are often used in processed foods like cereals, crackers, cookies, baked goods, snack foods, candy, non-dairy creamers and non-dairy milkshakes.

■ Steam, boil or bake vegetables, or for a change, stir-fry in a small amount of vegetable oil.

■ Season vegetables with herbs and spices rather than with sauces, butter or margarine.

■ Try lemon juice on salads or use limited amounts of oil-based salad dressings. Reduced-calorie dressing usually contain less fat. Some oil-free dressings are available.

■ To reduce saturated fat, use soft margarine instead of butter in baked products and, when possible, use oil instead of shortening.

■ Substitute plain low-fat yogurt, blender-whipped low-fat cottage cheese, or buttermilk in recipes that call for sour cream or mayonnaise.

■ Use skim milk or low-fat milk more often in puddings, soups and baked products.

■ Limit the use of full-fat cheeses.

■ Choose lean cuts of meat. Trim fat from meat before and-or after cooking. Remove skin from poultry before cooking.

■ Roast, bake, broil or simmer meat, poultry or fish. Cook meat or poultry on a rack so the fat will drain off. Use a non-stick pan or spray for cooling so added fat will not be necessary.

■ Chill meat or poultry broth until the broth becomes solid. Spoon off the fat before using the broth.

■ Limit egg yolks to one per serving when making scrambled eggs or omelets. Use additional whites for larger servings.

■ In egg-based recipes, such as omelets, quiche, etc., substitute two egg whites for one whole egg for half of the eggs in the recipe.

■ Try substituting egg whites in recipes calling for whole eggs. For example, use two egg whites in place of each whole egg in muffins, cookies and puddings. Replace the fat contributed by the yolk, which is needed in some recipes, by adding one teaspoon of oil for every yolk not used.

■ Limit serving sizes of meat, poultry, fish or shellfish to three to four ounces. The USDA/DHHS Dietary Guildelines suggest you choose two servings a day from the meat grup, which also includes eggs, dried beans/legumes and nuts.

■ Limit your use of liver and other organ meats.

■ Increase servings of fruits, vegetables, breads and cereals, starchy foods, beans and legumes. These foods are virtually free of fat and saturated fat, and many of them contribute soluble fibers which may lower your blood cholesterol level.

Some cordless phones need recharging

New York Times News Service

Cordless telephones — many are now on sale — are a convenience when the backyard or terrace becomes your summer living room.

Models and features vary widely depending on price.

Some contain answering machines, intercom systems and automatic dialers capable of storing up to 20 numbers.

Some can be used in a swimming pool and some allow both the base and the handset to be used as individual phones.

The base of a cordless phone, which houses a transmitter, must be plugged into a modular telephone jack and an electric outlet.

The portable element is the handset.

During recharging, which takes three to six hours, the handset must be cradled in the base.

Most current models have ranges of up to 1,000 feet, the legal limit set by the Federal Communications Commission.

Because of the limited number of frequencies allotted by the FCC, users often experience interference; newer models will search automatically for the clearest line.

For $50-69, consumers can expect to get pulse and tone dialing with volumn control. Phones with an intercom system, paging, memory dialing and frequency selection sell for $100-150.

For built-in answering machines and extensive memory, consumers can expect to pay $200 and up. These phones also will feature dialing and wider frequency selection.

Future business men, women may conduct jobs on road

Hearst News Service

A new wave of technology in office electronics will give millions of workers greater flexibility in where they do their job.

People who collect, analyze or communicate information can, according to an article in the current issue of Popular Mechanics, set up their office at home or on the road.

Advances in personal-computer hardware and software offer processing speed and memory-handling capabilities that make earlier PCs look like Model T Fords. Useful computing power also is arriving in smaller packages, from mobile portables to down-sized desktop models.

For those who don't want a full-functioning PC, there are personal word-processing systems that trade the broader versatility of the PC for the simplicity of the dedicated writing machine.

Some of these are termed turbo typewriters, built on what is essentially a typewriter chassis. Others are pared-down computers. Prices range from $400 to $1,495.

Even more impressive are developments in communications and new data-access applications.

Telephone-answering devices (TAD) have been a key element in the development of the desktop revolution. Now most manufacturers offer devices that combine telephone and TAD in a single chassis.

You can even use your computer as a TAD.

Several add-on accessories will enable your computer to send and receive voice messages over the telephone. Ranging in price from $149 to $349, they digitize incoming or outgoing vocal information and store it in disk-based memory.

Even more exciting, with an inexpensive telephone modem you can transform your computer into a vast research library.

With a $25 subscription to Dialog Information Services, the most comprehensive of the major electronic-information services now available, you can scan thousands of sources from your desk chair. Dialog claims to have more than 100 million items in its on-line archives and at last count offered nearly 300 separate databases. The typical cost is about $60 an hour.

For the more casual user, Knowledge Index offers about 60 of Dialog's databases, available evenings and weekends for a flat $24 per hour.

For reference works you can thumb through on-screen, there's Bookshelf, a set of 10 complete reference books housed on a single CD-ROM — a compact disk that stores computer data instead of music. Microsoft bundles the program, priced at $295 by itself, with all necessary hardware for $1,095.

Consumers accept some — not all — price tags

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Who could like them — the $200-a-night hotel rooms, the $1,000-a-month studio apartment rents in Manhattan, the $55 prix fixe dinners, the $150 boots, the $50 hair cuts?

But life being what it is these days, the sense of shock and outrage at what were once considered astronomical and ridiculous prices has, in many cases, become either numb or muted.

Once-startling totals are now accepted, not always gracefully and not necessarily by everyone, but some of them sometimes by some part of the population.

There are, for instance, the resigned lot who simply shrug and say "Well, that's the way it is," and fork over the required money for hotel rooms or boots or whatever.

But these same people may flinch at the idea of a restaurant tab that could buy groceries for a good part of the week.

Then there are those who spend $5,000 for a stereo system, and when something goes wrong, enlist the neighbor's "handy" son rather than pay a $200 service charge.

There's some line-drawing point for everyone, a different line for different individuals, an unreasonable line sometimes, a quirky line maybe, but the line is there.

It comes into play almost as frequently over strange and comparatively inexpensive things as it does when substantial amounts are involved.

Terrie Williams, who recently left Essence Magazine to start her own public relations firm, admits that as a Grade A fan, she doesn't think twice about paying $1,500 for season tickets to New York Knicks games.

However, once there, or in any stadium, she will not pay $2.50 or $3.50 for a hot dog or $1 or more for potato chips. No way.

"I bring my own things to nibble," she said. "If I'm with someone and they want to buy it for me, fine, but I can't do it."

Williams said she has a friend who bought a fur coat last year "for many thousands of dollars," and who then found a $100 scarf that went with it perfectly. She couldn't buy it; that was her line.

If there's a $30 price tag on an undershirt or shorts, or a pair of shoes marked $200, Gene Hovis isn't immobilized. But show him a tie for more than $12 or $15 and it will stay right where it is.

Hovis, a cookbook author and food consultant, will spend $45 for a theater ticket. But he'll starve first, or watch the show with parched mouth, rather than spend $1.50 or $2 for candy or a drink.

A restaurant check for $40 to $60 isn't something that Christy Ferer enjoys but it doesn't upset her. But anything more than 60 cents for a cup of takeout coffee, anywhere, and she'll suffer caffeine withdrawal.

"The Waldorf has the best takeout coffee in town but I won't pay $1.25," said Ferer, fashion editor of NBC's "Today" show and president of Vidicom Production Co.

When it comes to her two young daughters, she has invested as much as $60 for a pair of shoes for each of them — but the socks inside those shoes better not top $2.

Betsy Carter, the editor of New York Woman, spends "a lot" on her haircuts. The hands that do the editing? She went "shopping" until she found a $5 manicure.

She believes "everything I read in ads," she said, which is why she often spends $12 and $15 on lipstick and even more on skin cream. But when it comes to vitamins, it's off to the discount store.

Carter has a house in Sag Harbor. She rents it by the year. There's a nearby market that charges $2.09 for mayonnaise. No way, even if it's desperately needed for chicken salad.

Freshman need long-distance calls

New York Times News Service

While having some sort of difficulty during the first year at college is common enough among young adults to be considered a rite of passage, there are some things parents of freshmen can do to help their children through this transition to adulthood and independent living.

"Students want to control when they call home," said Nancy Cooper, associate dean of residential life at Oberlin College.

"They don't mind doing it regularly, but they don't want parents to call them."

Regular mail from home, especially when it includes clippings from the local newspaper and an occasional care package of goodies, can ease students' anxiety throughout their time on campus, say college administrators.

"If your child calls to say he hates his roommate or the food is awful, don't rush in to help," said Ms. Cooper.

"The best thing you can do is let him vent his feelings without passing judgment on what he's saying. If, when he's through talking, he still feels the same way, encourage him to solve the problem himself by going to the resources on campus."

AT WIT'S END

EDITOR'S NOTE: Erma Bombeck is on vacation this week. This column originally appeared 11/26/85.)

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

I thought it was me. But other Americans hate it as much as I do. Worse than buying a bathing suit. Worse than going to the dentist. Worse than making a speech or returning something.

The No. 1 hate of 92 percent of Americans is talking to a telephone answering machine.

All three of my kids have an answering machine. Each is turned on all the time. No one has that kind of a social life, not even Cher. I know as sure as God made little green apples that they're lounging in bed listening to me sweat and clear my throat waiting for the sound of their beep. It's their personal revenge for all those years I said, "This is your mother talking. Look at me when I talk!"

No wonder their messages are cute and clever. They spend hours scripting them. It's the caller who is at a disadvantage. In 20 seconds I have to adjust to the fact they're God knows where, remember my name, ask someone for my phone number because I never call it, and find my glasses to see what time it is when I called. All this before that earsplitting beep that coincidentally sounds like a machine monitoring my heartbeat.

That's why I have by my phone my own ad-libs for such a moment when my children don't want to talk to their mother:

— "Mom here. I know you're not going to be happy. We made out the will today."

— "Sweetheart! At last I'm to become a grandmother. Why didn't you tell me? The sweetest girl dropped by today and told me. Call when you can."

I don't think I've talked directly to my kids in three years. The other night I fought back. When one of their machines gave its blurb, I said, , "This is your mother's answering machine. She's out right now, but if you leave YOUR name and YOUR phone number, she'll get back to you. The beep is broken, so right after I stop talking, you have five seconds. Ready, set, go!"

Let them sweat for a while.

Old-fashioned seltzers making a sweet comeback

By SHARON BENOIT
Copley News Service

Thanks to the European importers of fancy sparkling water, an old American standby is making a strong come back in major supermarkets nationally. This time around, however, the product is sweeter and, in some cases, even more health-oriented.

A couple of generations ago, a case of seltzer water was commonplace in grandma's cupboard. She used it for cooking, drinking and, more frequently, as a illness remedy second only to chicken soup. No doubt about it, seltzer water was the product to buy in the fledgling days of the 20th century.

Then along came the 1950s. Flavored sodas and disposable bottles became the rage and the popular seltzer, dressed in its trusty blue glass bottle, had its last day in the sun.

Soon after its demise, supermarket shelves became jam packed with hundreds of Me-Too soft drinks such as Pepsi-Cola, Coca-Cola, 7Up, Dr Pepper and Orange Crush. Nearly every American joined the Pepsi Generation, or participated in one or more taste tests and/or fought the Uncola wars of the 1960s and early 70s.

It wasn't until the mid-1970s that American consumers again got a glimpse of sulfur water on their grocery shelves. A new, more aggressive health-conscious era had begun and grandma's old remedy was trying real hard to make a come back.

The seltzer trend indirectly began because of an import from France bearing a name most people still can't pronounce or afford. Perrier (Pear-E-A). Still, it was the marketing success of Perrier, say observers, that has prompted the latest consumer fling with seltzer.

In the early 1980s, seltzer manufacturers large and small slowly began emerging in major cities all over the country. Original New York Seltzer was the innovator.

BUT, OTHERS have jumped on the bandwagon, too. Neighborhood grocery stores are now stocking a wide variety of flavored seltzers such as Old Chicago Seltzer, Gimme Seltzer and Winterbrook Seltzer in regular, diet or salt free versions. There's little room on the shelves for anything new.

Today's seltzer water is far sweeter tasting than its turn of the century version. It's fruit flavored on purpose to attract the old cola crowd, and usually is available in a variety of glass or plastic containers for convenience sake.

Original New York Seltzer vice president Bruce Sweyd says this California firm, headed by Alan and Randy Miller, the founder's family, was the first to revive the seltzer craze in 1982. The original owner of New York Seltzer used to deliver bottled seltzer and flavored syrups door-to-door in the east. He says the Miller family moved to California and decided to start selling flavored seltzer to small Mom-and-Pop grocery stores.

But, the smartest thing the Miller family did was hook up with beer distributors who had room to spare in their delivery trucks and gladly agreed to help market their product nationally. It was this unique channel of distribution that helped quicken consumer acceptance of the seltzer brand.

Ken Robinson, nonalcoholic brand manager at Bestways Distributing in Sylmar, Calif, says his company delivers Original New York Seltzer to retail outlets in suburban areas of Los Angeles County. "We're distributing this product to health food stores, yogurt shops, liquor stores, caterers and supermarkets. It's a product that caught on real fast," states Robinson.

HE SAYS SALES shot straight up for about 18 months. However, its popularity has levelled off during the past six months and, according to Robinson, it probably will continue to do so as the brand matures.

"Sales have probably reached a peak," surmises Robinson. "We don't plan on carrying any other brands. New York Seltzer is number one. Its easy to get."

Robinson believes the sweetened seltzer water has a quality image. "It has found its place between carrot juice and Jolt Cola," he muses.

Canada Dry is going after New York Seltzer in a big way with the introduction of its Sparklers' Sweetened Soda. The product, tested in Ohio earlier this year, is expected to have distribution built on the east and west coasts by summer's end.

"We're trying to convince the local soft drink bottlers to help us get this product off the ground," states John Fayad, senior brand manager of waters and mixers at Canada Dry's headquarters in Atlanta. "We really think we can overtake New York Seltzer and will be giving it a lot of promotional and sales support."

Dave Pergo, national sales manager of Old Chicago Seltzer, a Santa Fe Springs, Calif., competitor in the seltzer category, says Old Chicago is one of the latest brands to make some waves in the marketplace.

"We introduced Old Chicago in the summer of 1986. Last year, we received the rights to use a patented calcium supplement, called Ultracal in our seltzer products."

ULTRACAL, says Pergo, absorbs into the body faster than dairy products and without fat. He indicates that Old Chicago is positioned as a health-oriented product and by mid-July will more than likely have erased the word "seltzer" from its brand name entirely.

"There is legitimate confusion in the marketplace about our product," says Pergo. "People don't understand that Old Chicago has a calcium supplement. We want to make that clear in our marketing efforts. Too many people think of sweet and flavored when they hear the word seltzer."

Old Chicago is currently available in New York, New Jersey, Philadelphia, key cities in the Midwest, Southwest and West. "It's doing well on the east coast, but we're having trouble in other areas," he says. "We're not sure why. We're hoping to increase sales by stressing the health aspect of the product. We want to target people who are interested in good tasting drinks with healthy benefits."

Another misconception about flavored seltzer has surfaced since this product's revival. When Original New York Seltzer was introduced, many people believed it to be a diet drink. Unfortunately, they found out the hard way it was not. Although its Original label stresses "No Sucrose," New York Seltzer is filled with calories — between 110 and 130, depending on the flavor — and the sweet taste is in fact 100% pure fruit sugar. (Sucrose by the way is sugar derived from sugar cane. Fruit sugar also known as fructose is present in fruit and honey.) New York Seltzer has since added a diet version to its Original product line.

WINTERBROOK Seltzer, marketed by Winterbrook Corp. in Seattle, was actually the first seltzer marketeer to come out with a diet seltzer, sweetened 100% with Nutrasweet.

Martin Shain, principal and marketing director for Winterbrook, sees a seltzer war brewing in the not too distant future. He doesn't believe there is room on the supermarket shelves for so many different types of seltzer brands.

"In the long run," Shain says, "there will only be room for two or three major brands of sweet seltzer. Already the brands are thinning. Some brands are becoming regional ... it's similar to the beer business."

Shain predicts grocers will soon begin to cherry-pick seltzer brands. "They'll stock the glass bottled six-packs or the bigger bottles or the diet brands, but not all of the variations. They'll also pick the packages that sell the fastest."

Right now, Shain says the most popular brands are packaged in 10 ounce bottles or six packs.

Many experts don't see nostalgia playing any role of import in the popularity of seltzers. If it does, it's purely coincidental. Most of the sweetened seltzer companies are owned by young, entrepreneurs who can be found experimenting with wild flavors in their garages or basements.

Virtually all of these beverage marketers are attempting to sell seltzer as an alternative to soda with healthful, clean tasting benefits. It's basically a continuation of the no caffeine, no artificial colors and no preservative craze of the '70s.

Where will it end up? No one really knows. Seltzer water could be around until the turn of the next century.

DEAR ABBY

Woman puzzled over spreading word of impending marriage

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a 27-year-old woman. Five years ago I married and moved across the country. I haven't been in touch with most of my relatives since then. A lot has happened in the last five years. I'm now divorced and I'm planning to marry again next month.

My question: Is there a proper way to spread the news about my upcoming wedding to my relatives? I was never very close to these people, but I thought I'd just bring them up to date on my marital status. I don't want to send them wedding announcements because it might look like I'm soliciting gifts. I considered sending handwritten notes, but then again, it might look like I'm asking for a wedding gift.

Should I wait until December and include a little note with my Christmas card? Should I just tell my bigmouth cousin and wait for her to spread the news? Or should I just settle down to a life with my new husband and forget my relatives? — RELATIVELY ALONE

DEAR ALONE: The CBS (Cousin Broadcasting System) is probably the most efficient way to spread the news. But cover all the bases and enclose a personal note with your Christmas cards.

DEAR ABBY: I'm wondering how come it's always the husband who buys the wife a gift on their wedding anniversary — and not the other way around?

In this age of "equal rights" and "women's lib," one would expect gift-giving to be reciprocal, but apparently women seem quite content with the old double standard.

And by the way, while I was buying flowers for my wife for our anniversary, I raised that question with the florist. She said, "Don't you think your wife deserves flowers for having given you two wonderful children?" This confused me even more, as I was under the impression that the children were my wife's, too! — CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED: Come on, now! I'm old enough to remember the pre-women's liberation days when women gave their husbands neckties and cuff links on their anniversaries. And that's when most wives didn't work outside the home. They shaved a little off the grocery allowance and stashed it in the sugar bowl for such occasions.

DEAR ABBY: Your column changed my life! Through Operation Dear Abby, I met Chief Petty Officer Ken Watson, stationed aboard the USS Robert E. Peary in Pearl Harbor, Hawaii.

We corresponded for four months, then he flew to Michigan to visit me. He took me back to Hawaii with him for a week's vacation, where he proposed to me on his birthday on a beautiful moonlit beach at midnight. We were married in August. His two sons from a previous marriage now live with us, along with my two sons from a previous marriage!

Abby, I never knew what happiness was until I met this wonderful man. He is absolutely the best husband and father in the world. I am writing this on the one-month anniversary of our marriage. I could never thank you enough for putting me together with the man I want to spend the rest of my life with. — MRS. KEN WATSON, ROMULUS, MICH.

DEAR ABBY: I need to get this off my chest. My pet peeve is people who answer the telephone in a place of business and do not let you get a word in before they say, "Hold, please!" Then I'm put on hold. This absolutely infuriates me!

If they would only give me a chance to say, "This is a toll call, so please don't keep me holding too long." But I don't get a chance to say anything. Instead, I am left listening to elevator music and watching my telephone bill go up. — INFURIATED IN FLORIDA

DEAR INFURIATED: Unfortunately, there is nothing you can do when you are put on "hold" before you can say a word. However, you can tell them how you feel about this rude practice — when you're finally given a chance to speak. You can also write that place of business and threaten to take your business elsewhere. They may not change their policy, but you will feel better.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing this with tears in my eyes and a very heavy heart. Two years ago, we purchased a beautiful large bird cage for our two parakeets. On the top of the cage were some pretty decorative curled ribbons that fell into the cage. Our birds would play with these ribbons and appeared to have great fun shredding them.

This morning when we uncovered the cage, we found our darling Tweetie dead — he had hung himself on one of those ribbons! We never dreamed that such a thing could happen or we would have cut the ribbons off.

It's too late for our parakeet, Abby, but maybe this will serve to save another. — JOE AND BILLE SABO, TUSTIN, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: Re the military wife who didn't want guests to smoke in her home: Would she send her husband's commanding officer in the backyard to smoke? Or, if they were living, how about JFK, FDR or Winston Churchill — all smokers? — DOROTHY IN FORT LAUDERDALE

DEAR DOROTHY: Rank has its privileges. I'd say that the commanding officer, and such luminaries as JFK, FDR and Churchill, would be welcome to light up wherever they please.

Dear Abby's Cookbooklet is a collection of favorite recipes — all tested, tried and terrific! To order, send your name and address, plus check or money order for $3.50 ($4 in Canada) to: Abby's Cookbooklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Second Canadian back in PTL bidding

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — A second Canadian businessman is back in the bidding for the assets of PTL, the financially troubled ministry of deposed television evangelist Jim Bakker.

Real estate magnate Peter Thomas of Vancouver asked U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Rufus Reynolds to consider his proposal along with that of Stephen Mernick of Toronto.

Four of PTL's largest creditors joined in Thomas' motion, which was filed Wednesday in federal bankruptcy court. Attorneys for two creditors said they weren't endorsing Thomas's $113 million offer over Mernick's $115 million bid, but that they want Reynolds to have a choice from at least two competing bids.

Reynolds is scheduled to rule on Thomas' motion Nov. 16, which is the same day he has set to consider a motion approving a sale to Mernick.

PTL, which has been in bankruptcy proceedings since June 1987, must sell its assets to pay debts that could amount to more than $130 million.

Secret bomber under fire

WASHINGTON (AP) — The secret Stealth bomber isn't even scheduled to be publicly unveiled until next month, but it already has become a target for critics who say it isn't needed and may not work.

The latest complaints were raised in a report Wednesday by the Federation of American Scientists, a private group which in the past has been sharply critical of Reagan administration arms control policies and defense decisions.

"There is no role for the B-2," the report said, using the formal name of the plane designed as a "flying wing" and made of high-tech materials that make the plane difficult to detect on radar.

The Pentagon is scheduled to unveiled the bomber publicly Nov. 22 at the Northrop plant in Palmdale, Calif.

Congressional critics have raised questions about the plane's future, particularly as cost estimates have increased.

Swindall's trial postponed

ATLANTA (AP) — A judge's decision has forced Rep. Pat Swindall to fight an uphill battle for re-election while under a perjury indictment. But he has said he hasn't lost any moral high ground to his opponent, former actor Ben Jones.

In one of the nation's bitterest campaigns, Swindall, R-Ga., has repeatedly brought up his Democratic rival's admitted alcoholism and past brushes with the law. Jones, who played "Cooter" on television's "The Dukes of Hazzard," has proposed in turn that Swindall be tested for drug use and psychiatric problems.

The battle returned to the limelight Wednesday when U.S. District Judge Robert Vining halted the two-term congressman's trial on 10 perjury counts until after the Nov. 8 election.

Robin to be blown to bits

NEW YORK (AP) — He's punched out the Penguin, wrestled the Riddler and crushed the Catwoman. But after 48 years of crime-busting, Robin — yes, the Boy Wonder, Batman's earnest if excitable teen-age sidekick — has been blown to bits by the Joker.

Death comes next week for Robin when DC Comics distributes Batman issue No. 428, the third installment of the four-part "A Death in the Family," in which the younger half of the Dynamic Duo is dynamited by the clown prince of crime.

"It was very odd. I realize all this stuff is made up, but everybody here felt like the family of an accident victim, waiting for the doctor to come out and say, 'There's still hope,'" said Dennis O'Neil, editor of the Batman series.

But it won't be the Joker, Batman creator Bob Kane, or O'Neil facing murder charges for the killing of Robin — it's the readers of the Batman comics who voted in a phone-in poll to off the teen superhero born in 1940.

Murder charge dropped

NEW YORK (AP) — A woman no longer faces a murder charge in the beating death of the 6-year-old girl she and her live-in lover illegally adopted, but her attorney says she never will forgive herself for what happened.

At the request of prosecutors, a judge dropped murder charges Wednesday against Hedda Nussbaum, who is expected to testify that her live-in companion, Joel Steinberg, killed Lisa Steinberg, whom they obtained as a newborn from an unwed teen-age mother.

Shultz' personal trips total nearly $1.9 million

WASHINGTON (AP) — Personal trips taken by Secretary of State George Shultz on his military aircraft over a 30-month period cost the government nearly $1.9 million, with Shultz paying only the price of economy-class airfare, a congressional report says.

The General Accounting Office report says Shultz took 23 personal trips during the 30 months ended last July, most of them visits to family homes at Stanford University in Palo Alto, Calif., and Cummington, Mass. Most of the time Shultz was accompanied only by his wife, Helena.

The total bill for those trips came to $1,892,214, GAO told the House Government Operations Committee in a report released Wednesday. Most of the money was spent for Shultz' military plane, its sophisticated communications equipment and the secretary's security personnel, the review said.

Shultz reimbursed the government for less than 1 percent of the cost, basing his repayment rate on the economy air fare rate to a destination plus $1, State Department officials told the GAO.

The total amount Shultz reimbursed the government was $18,783, the GAO said.

Shultz' annual Cabinet salary is $99,030. His net worth is unavailable, but his financial disclosure form filed earlier this year shows that a blind trust created from his holdings had income last year in excess of $100,000.

State Department spokesman Charles Redman said Shultz used the military plane because "the secretary of state is the secretary of state 24 hours a day, 365 days a year," no matter where he is.

Redman said Shultz has followed the practice used by other secretaries of state for the past 15 or 20 years. Many other Cabinet members also use military aircraft for reasons of improved security and communications, he said.

Redman added, "The fact of the matter is that the security threat doesn't disappear just because the secretary happens to be on vacation, nor does the need for communications."

The bulk of the $1.89 million cost for the 23 trips went for military aircraft — $797,219, the GAO said. Hotel accommodations for security personnel and other aides cost $336,414; overtime for those personnel cost $256,205; per diem food costs were $183,030; and $141,464 was spent to install telephone lines.

In addition to the 23 personal trips, the study listed a series of other trips by Shultz between 1982 and 1986 that were listed as official travel, but which also included a private component. Those trips weren't among the 23 whose expenses were totaled by the GAO.

Publisher allegedly offered $1 million to murder rivals

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Larry Flynt offered a self-styled soldier of fortune $1 million to kill rival sex magazine publishers Hugh Hefner and Bob Guccione, and Frank Sinatra and Walter Annenberg, authorities said.

The purported hitman, Mitchell WerBell, died of a heart attack in December 1983 about a month after Flynt gave him the check, sheriff's Capt. Robert Grimm said Wednesday night. WerBell was in his 60s when he died of natural causes, authorities said.

Flynt's alleged motive was not disclosed and no charges have been filed against him.

Grimm told a news conference that information about the plot turned up recently in an investigation of the 1983 murder-for-hire slaying of New York theater producer Roy Radin, whom authorities said was embroiled in a soured finance deal for the movie "The Cotton Club."

A former Flynt bodyguard, William Mentzer, is one of four defendants charged in Radin's killing.

Investigators have not interviewed the Hustler magazine publisher and have not presented a case to the prosecutor, Grimm said. He declined to elaborate and said Los Angeles County Sheriff Sherman Block spoke about the purported plot earlier in the day because he had been approached by the news media.

"Our investigation is continuing," Grimm said.

Grimm identified targets of the alleged plot as Hefner, Sinatra and Guccione. He declined to name a fourth person targeted, but authorities told KNBC-TV that person was Annenberg, the publishing magnate and former ambassador.

"Larry Flynt one evening called an individual by the name of WerBell to his home and allegedly offered him $1 million if he would arrange for the death of these four individuals," said Block, adding he took the matter seriously.

"I've been led to believe that Larry Flynt has a propensity to try to harm people he sees as his enemies, whether (over) business arrangements or whatever."

A woman at Flynt's office told The Associated Press Flynt "just said he doesn't make comments on trash like that."

WerBell was an international arms dealer who developed the MAC-10 submachine gun. He called himself a retired general of the Royal Free Afghan Army, according to promotional material from his Georgia-based counterterrorism firm, Sionics Inc., released by the sheriff's department.

Grimm displayed a photocopy of a $1 million check allegedly signed by Flynt and made out to WerBell.

Reagan backs replacing U.S. embassy in Moscow

WASHINGTON — President Reagan has decided that the United States should tear down its new Moscow embassy building, which is heavily penetrated by Soviet listening devices, and build a replacement, administration officials said Wednesday.

Reagan's decision followed State Department recommendations, a State Department official said. Administration officials said Reagan would consult with Congress before any action was taken.

The administration has been trying to decide what to do about the building since the existence of the listening devices was disclosed last year.

A recent study commissioned by the State Department that recommended that the chancery be replaced said that building a new one would cost less and take less time than trying to save its predecessor. The study was prepared by the BDM Corp. and the MK-Ferguson Co.

An administration official told The New York Times in September that the "weight of opinion" within the administration was that the chancery should be replaced.

This official said at the time that one reason for this position was that members of Congress wanted to replace the structure. In September, Rep. Olympia J. Snowe, R-Maine, called on the administration to act quickly to demolish the structure. She had visited the complex last year as a member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

In addition, government intelligence experts would be reluctant to certify that the American embassy structures are protected against Soviet spying unless an entirely new structure is built.

Because Congress has adjourned, Reagan's decision to consult lawmakers apparently postpones final action on demolishing the building to his successor and the 101st Congress, which will be asked to provide the money, possibly hundreds of millions of dollars, for the job.

Construction of the chancery was halted in 1985 because of suspicions that the Soviets had planted listening devices. American intelligence specialists have been examining the structure to try to determine how the Soviet spying techniques work.

If the chancery is saved, the building would be used for unclassified activities, while the old embassy building next door would be refurbished and used for classified activities.

Soviet officials will not be able to occupy a new Soviet Embassy office building here until the American chancery is demolished and replaced.
