Hance credits alien amnesty opposition

Primary margin among slimmest

AUSTIN (AP) — U.S. Rep. Kent Hance says his strong opposition to granting amnesty for illegal aliens helped him lead the way into a runoff election for the Democratic U.S. Senate nomination.

"The issue we really stressed was jobs," he said Sunday. "That was stressed as the amnesty issue. If you look at the studies that show 65 Americans lose their jobs out of every 100 undocumented workers that come in, this is a concern."

Hance was the top vote-getter in the primary election Saturday — barely. The margin between the Lubbock native, state Sen. Lloyd Doggett and former U.S. Rep. Bob Krueger was one of the closest ever. Krueger, who had been considered the favorite, said he probably would seek a recount if he finished third.

Walter F. Mondale overwhelmed Sen. Gary Hart in the Texas Democratic precinct caucuses, and Republican U.S. Rep. Phil Gramm swamped three opponents to win the GOP Senate nomination without a runoff.

President Reagan, unopposed on the nonbinding Republican primary ballot, got 97 percent to 3 percent uncommitted.

"If I'm not in the runoff, I will ask for a recount," Krueger said early Sunday. Aides later said he had not decided whether to request the recount.

With all precincts reporting, the secretary of state's office showed Hance with 455,768 votes, or 31.23 percent, Doggett with 454,807 votes, or 31.16 percent, and Krueger with 454,497 votes, or 31.14 percent.

The News Election Service said Hance had received 456,417 to Doggett's 453,848. Krueger was 173 votes behind Doggett at 453,375.

There were some upsets in other state races Saturday, including the District 7 State Board of Education race, in which board chairman Joe Kelly Butler of Houston was defeated by Mary Bishop.

Nine-term Congressman Abraham "Chick" Kazen lost to former Bexar County Judge Albert Bustamante, who said his victory was due to "a coalition of business people, labor people, people from all walks of life." Kazen was the only incumbent congressman to be defeated.

U.S. Rep. Charles Wilson of Lufkin, in what he called the toughest race of his 12-year congressional career, bested four challengers and will face Republican Louis Dugas in November.

After an acrimonious fight, Supreme Court Justice C.L. Ray won renomination by soundly defeating Fort Worth lawyer Shelby Sharpe.

John Hill, the unsuccessful Democratic gubernatorial candidate in 1978, got the party's nomination for Supreme Court chief justice. By an 81 percent to 15 percent margin, Hill swamped Justice Sears McGee, who charged that Hill was "really running for governor" again, an allegation Hill denied. McGee will keep his seat on the nine-member court.

State Democratic Party officials on Sunday continued to tabulate the results from the more than 6,000 precinct caucuses, the first step in determining the allocation of 169 of Texas' 200 delegates to the Democratic National Convention.

Figures from about 60 percent of the caucuses gave Mondale 21,407 of the precinct delegates elected Saturday for 50 percent. Hart had 11,572 for 27 percent, and Jackson 7,014 for 16 percent. Another 7 percent were uncommitted.

Ready for runoff

Democratic U.S. Senate candidate Kent Hance talks with reporters and campaign workers Sunday outside his Austin headquarters. He said he's looking forward to a June runoff against either Lloyd Dogget or Bob Krueger. The three polled within two-tenths of a percentage point of each other in Saturday's primary and a recount is expected.

Krueger expected to seek recount

DALLAS (AP) — Rep. Kent Hance, who lagged so far behind early in the Democratic Senate primary race that he says everyone called him "distant Kent Hance," captured strong support in rural areas and finished first in one of the closest primaries in Texas history.

Hance and second-place Lloyd Doggett were separated by 961 of the 1.46 million votes cast, and state Sen. Doggett was ahead of former Rep. Bob Krueger by only 310 votes, according to tabulations by the secretary of state's office.

News Election Service reported that Hance got 2,869 more votes than Doggett and that Doggett won only 173 more than Krueger.

Krueger, who had been the front-runner in the race, said Sunday before final figures were in that if he finished third he would seek a recount to determine who gets in the June 2 runoff.

"It was closer than I liked. I don't think I'll pick up the nickname 'Landslide'," said Hance, smiling and joking at the outcome.

The Lubbock congressman said he didn't care whom he faced June 2.

"I think Krueger had a big lead early on, but it was strictly name I.D. In the last two or three weeks, when people were getting ready to vote, they started focusing on the issues, they started thinking about the candidates. I think that's when it turned around for us," said Hance, who in the closing days of the campaign emphasized his opposition to amnesty for illegal aliens.

"Seven weeks ago," Hance said, "they had me in the polls at 10 percent. I thought my first name was 'distant.' They kept calling me 'distant Kent Hance.'"

Krueger, a Shakespearean scholar and former university dean, had lost a bitter Senate race six years ago to Republican John Tower.

"I must say we didn't expect to be this close," Krueger said Sunday morning. "I'm familiar with close races. You expect in Texas to have hotly contested races."

Mondale looking forward to next primary

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

Does Hart have chance? — Page 2A

Walter Mondale is looking to Tuesday's next big round of primaries and offering himself as a latter-day Harry Truman, as Gary Hart insists he's not about to pull out of the Democratic presidential race despite two fresh losses.

Hart expected to pick up a victory today in his home state of Colorado, where Democrats hold local caucuses and 43 national convention delegates are at stake.

Mondale was conceding Colorado to campaign today in all four of the states holding primaries Tuesday — Indiana, Maryland, North Carolina and Ohio. A total of 368 convention delegates are at stake on that day.

Hart, trailing Mondale nearly two-to-one in delegates, was a loser twice Saturday. He finished second in Louisiana's primary behind the Rev. Jesse Jackson and in Texas caucuses behind Mondale.

The Texas loss was a particular blow, since Hart had staked much of his nomination hopes on a showing in the western states, among which Texas has the second largest number of delegates.

"The issue is not who wins states but who wins delegates," Hart said Sunday, contending that Mondale would score a net gain in delegates of only about 30 out of Texas and Louisiana.

At a news conference in Washington before starting a campaign swing through Ohio and Indiana, Hart insisted he would win the nomination on the first ballot at the Democratic National Convention in San Francisco this July.

Asked if, in light of the Texas loss, there were any circumstances under which he would quit the race before the convention, Hart answered "None."

"I am still waiting for someone to ask Mr. Mondale when he is going to demonstrate that he represents the real majority of this party," he said.

But his Texas campaign manager, Rep. Martin Frost, acknowledged winning the nomination will be difficult now. "He needed to win this state in my judgment," said Frost. "He didn't do so."

The Texas results were still being counted today by state Democratic Party officials. With 61 percent of the vote counted, Mondale had 21,407 votes or 50 percent, to Hart's 11,572 or 27 percent and Jackson's 7,014 or 16.4 percent.

In Louisiana, final unofficial returns had Jackson with 136,794 votes, or 43 percent. Hart had 79,387 or 25 percent, and Mondale had 70,543 or 22 percent.

Salvadoran runoff sees little protest

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Hundreds of thousands of Salvadorans streamed to the polls for a runoff presidential election largely free of rebel disruption and of the bureaucratic bungling that marred the first round.

Sunday's runoff matched Jose Napoleon Duarte, a moderate Christian Democrat, against Roberto d'Aubuisson, candidate of the ultra-right Republican Nationalist Alliance.

The Central Election Council said unofficial results might be available sometime today, but that it would be about a week before the final tally is released.

Representatives of both parties said returns they had compiled showed their candidate leading with 55 percent of the vote.

A survey of voters leaving the polls gave Duarte 54 percent of the vote against 46 percent for d'Aubuisson. The poll had a 4 percent margin of error, said a spokesman for the Miami-based Spanish International Network, which released the survey based on interviews with 2,800 voters.

Officials said they had eliminated many of the snags which prevented some 200,000 of the eligible 1.8 million voters from casting ballots in the initial round March 25. Initial reports indicated about 1.6 million voted Sunday, compared with 1.2 million in March, officials said.

Voting took place in about 220 of El Salvador's 261 municipalities, compared with 204 in the last round, election officials said.

Salvadoran law requires citizens to vote, although officials said there were no plans to seek out those who skipped Sunday's balloting. Government identity cards are stamped when people vote, and there is a strong government campaign pushing the patriotic duty to vote. Many Salvadorans say they feel safer if their identity cards show they have voted.

Leftist rebels staged scattered raids but stopped few people from voting, authorities said.

"The voting went well," said Eliseo Rovira of the Central Election Council. "It was not nearly so bad as in March."

In March, ballot boxes arrived late at many polling stations, voters were confused over where they were supposed to cast ballots and the electoral registry had numerous errors.

Eight candidates from moderate to far-right parties competed in the first round. Duarte took 43.4 percent of the votes in that election, with d'Aubuisson winning 29.7 percent. Since neither won 50 percent, a runoff was required.

Duarte proposes a national conciliation, including talks with rebels, to end a 4½-year-old civil war. D'Aubuisson says the guerrillas must be crushed militarily. D'Aubuisson is said to have links to the death squads, but that has not been proven and he denies it.

Officially, the U.S. government has taken a neutral stance in the election, but members of Congress and the Reagan administration have indicated a victory by d'Aubuisson would jeopardize the chances of additional U.S. military aid being approved for El Salvador.

Leftists boycotted both elections, dismissing them as a farce and saying the only way to hold a fair vote is by negotiating a share of power first.

Rebels blew up power lines Sunday, blacking out a large part of the country. They also dug trenches in a few highways and burned ballots in three small towns in Chalatenango and San Miguel provinces.

State's litter signs lead fight with rhymes

By CHARLIE SMITH
Associated Press Writer

OKLAHOMA CITY — Watch out motorists

Now there're signs
To help fight litter
With outrageous rhymes!

The roadside poetry is the project of the Oklahoma Farm Bureau. The signs are intended to remind people to keep highways clean, without being mean.

The idea isn't new: The series of six signs with a rhyming message written in script, closely following one another on the highway, made Burma Shave a national institution almost 60 years ago. Those distinctive ads ended in 1963.

But the Farm Bureau, a private statewide organization, is rekindling the idea and has begun to place 1,800 new signs — 300 sets of six signs each — all over Oklahoma at an estimated cost of $15,000.

"This actually began while we were trying to formulate a policy of trying to eliminate rural dumping and litter," said bureau spokesman Steve Paris.

The bureau has been lobbying strongly in the Legislature for a bill that would require a deposit on bottles as one way to cut down on litter, but has been rejected thus far by lawmakers.

Paris says the sign campaign may be one way to win over public support to push for the bottle bill.

"We wanted to do something that would bring the bottle bill before folks so that they'd support it," he said.

Among the rhymes:

—I raise cows, they eat hay; don't throw trash on the right-of-way.

—Y'all come back, now, don't be bitter; cause we don't want your trash and litter.

—Come on Okies, take a stand; let's clean up this littered land.

—Refrigerators and old stoves on our roads aren't treasure troves.

—Okie farmers love their land, throw your trash in a garbage can.

—People with class don't dump trash.

All of the series end with a sign naming the local Farm Bureau chapter, which splits the $50 cost of each set of signs with the state organization.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Krueger expected to seek recount

Bob Krueger

On the Republican side, Saturday's primary was much easier for Rep. Phil Gramm, who waltzed away with 73 percent of the vote in a field of four candidates.

The secretary of state's office reported Hance with 455,768 votes, or 31.23 percent, Doggett with 454,807 votes, or 31.16 percent, and Krueger with 454,497 votes, or 31.14 percent. Three other candidates split 6.47 percent of the votes.

NES tabulations totaled 666 more votes than the secretary of state's office, which planned to check its figures today with county clerks. NES reported that Hance won 456,417 votes, or 31.26 percent, to Doggett's 453,548 votes, or 31.06 percent, and Krueger's 453,375 votes, or 31.05 percent.

Less than one vote per precinct separated all three Democratic contenders for runoff places. Under Texas law, if no candidate receives more than 50 percent of the primary vote, a runoff is held between the top two vote-getters.

The contestants from both parties had spent nearly $8 million through the end of March in the scramble to succeed Tower, the chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee who announced last August he would retire from the seat previously held by Lyndon B. Johnson and Sam Houston. Tower has held the seat for 23 years.

With all but five of 4,766 precincts reported by the secretary of state's office, Gramm ran away from the GOP pack with 247,280 votes, or 73 percent, to 55,989, or 16.52 percent for Rep. Ron Paul of Lake Jackson, 26,484 votes, or 7.8 percent for Houston oilman Rob Mosbacher Jr. and 9,132 votes, or 2.7 percent, for Houston public relations man Henry Grover.

Gramm, 41, outspent the field with contributions of about $1.8 million. Mosbacher, 32, raised $1.6 million — about $1.15 million of it personal loans. Paul, 48, raised about $1.3 million, according to records filed by March 31 with the Federal Election Commission. March 31 was the last filing date before the primary.

The former "Boll Weevil" Democrat who switched parties after co-sponsoring President Reagan's 1981 economic program and won re-election in his district last year, said he was surprised with the margin of his victory.

"We attracted thousands of people like Democrats and independents who have never voted in the primary before," he said.

It was the first time, Gramm said, that he had voted in a Republican primary, having been a Democrat until his party switch last year.

Warm, cloudless weather continues in Permian Basin

From Staff and Wire Reports

Cloudless skies and warm weather will simmer in the Permian Basin as summer weather continues, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Tonight is expected to be fair and warm with a low near 50. Tuesday should be sunny and hot with a high in the middle 80s.

Easterly winds will breeze at 5-15 mph tonight, increasing to 10-20 mph Tuesday.

Sunday's blistering high of 99 missed the record high of 103, set in 1947, by four degrees. The overnight low of 63 was 21 degrees warmer than 1933's record low of 42 degrees.

STATE

After a weekend of sunny skies and warm afternoon temperatures, a cool front settled across Texas today and brought the promise of thunderstorms to eastern and southeastern sections of the state.

Before dawn, the front was located along a line extending from Sherman to Abilene to Midland, the National Weather Service said.

No significant rain was reported during the night. Pre-dawn skies were mostly cloudy, excpet for West Texas, where mostly clear skies were the rule.

NATION

Thunderstorms accompanied by high winds and hail extended from the Carolinas across western Virginia, West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee and Arkansas today, while a tornado watch remained in effect over portions of Tennessee and Kentucky.

The storm system was making its way east from the Mississippi Valley to the Atlantic shore after dumping torrents of rain on the Tennessee Valley over the weekend, sparking flash floods in which two people drowned in Tennessee.

Flash flood warnings remained in effect today in parts of Missouri, Arkansas, Kentucky, West Virginia, South Carolina and Tennessee.

Rain also fell today from northern Illinois across southwest Wisconsin, Minnesota and the Dakotas. Snowshowers were scattered from Wyoming through central Colorado, and an inch of snow fell at Lander, Wyo., between 7 p.m. and 1 a.m. CDT.

What happened in 'Hart Country'?

An Analysis

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

AUSTIN, Tex. — In the arid, oil-rich country of West Texas and in the booming suburbs of Houston, Gary Hart's dream of a western revival of his presidential candidacy failed a critical test.

Those areas should have been Hart country. But when Texas Democrats went to their precinct caucuses, both proved to be Mondale country.

The strongest signal former Vice President Walter F. Mondale sent from Texas was his ability to outpoll Hart on the senator's turf, the region the Coloradan said would reverse the voting patterns of Illinois, New York and Pennsylvania.

The first sign came not from Texas but from Tennessee where Mondale scored an unexpectedly strong victory last Tuesday.

"Clearly, the Hart campaign suffered from a loss of momentum coming in out of Pennsylvania and out of Tennessee," said Rep. Martin Frost, D-Tex., Hart's state campaign manager.

Industrial, unionized Pennsylvania, still reeling from the impact of the 1982 recession, was fertile ground for Mondale. But Tennessee looked like one of those states, conservative and lacking strong union organizations, that was made for a Hart comeback.

Of the four states holding primaries on Tuesday — Ohio, Indiana, Maryland and North Carolina — only North Carolina looks like fertile ground for Hart.

But the candidate refused to accept that view. He told a news conference on Sunday that things are moving his way in Ohio and Indiana. "We feel good about both those states," he said.

He brushed off his Texas defeat by saying, "The issue is not who wins states but who wins delegates."

Hart claimed Mondale's net gain from Lousiana and Texas would only be about 30 delegates.

But Hart seemed to be refusing to accept the reality of Mondale's wide lead in the delegate race.

The senator needs more than occasional victories; he needs to win them all.

He needs to confront Mondale in the union stronghold of Ohio and beat him and do the same in Indiana and Maryland.

But in recent weeks, the Hart strategy has looked better in the telling than in the doing.

As Frost surveyed the caucus results from around the state, he conceded that areas like West Texas and the Houston suburbs that Hart had expected to carry went for Mondale.

Throughout the long campaign, Hart has complained about the caucus system as favoring Mondale and his labor allies.

But Frost discounted the argument that Hart might have won if Texas had a primary rather than caucuses.

"I do not think the Hart campaign can blame the system for its loss in the state of Texas," said the Texas congressman. "The system in Texas was not at all unfair to the Hart campaign."

Would Hart have carried Texas in a primary?

"I'm not sure he would have won a primary," said Frost. "He would have done better."

It was clear the congressman thought Hart ought to give serious thought to dropping out of the race and helping Mondale unify the party and get ready for battling President Reagan in the fall.

But presidential dreams die hard, especially for a candidate like Hart who thought his strategy was right on track in the weeks following his New Hampshire upset. Hart insisted Sunday that when the first ballot is taken at the Democratic convention in July, it will end with a Hart majority.

Ray blames Sharpe's 'negative' stand

DALLAS (AP) — Justice C.L. Ray said Democrats renominated him for the Supreme Court because his challenger went too far in the unusually bitter primary campaign for a judicial seat.

"When you start running a negative campaign, you have to be careful. There's an undefined line you can't cross and he crossed it," said Ray.

But Shelby Sharpe of Fort Worth was not apologetic for the acrimonious duel that he credited with generating interest in the Supreme Court race.

"For many reasons, we felt the incumbent judge had to have an active opposition. With our supporters' help, he got just that," said Sharpe, after he congratulated Ray on his victory.

Republicans gave State Board of Education Chairman Joe Kelly Butler a pink slip in his effort to win re-election, but Democrats gave former secretary of state and attorney general John Hill a new political life.

Hill, whose last campaign resulted in a loss to Republican Bill Clements in the 1978 gubernatorial race, got 81 percent of the vote in Saturday's primary to easily defeat Justice Sears McGee.

"I am certainly grateful for the vote of confidence," said Hill. "I hope it represents an expression on the part of the public of confidence in my experience and my platform.

"This is absolutely the highest service I could possibly perform for the people of this state. I want to improve the court system and I will dedicate myself to that task," said Hill, rejecting claims by McGee that his race was just a prelude to another gubernatorial bid.

In November, Hill will face John Bates of Waco, who ran uncontested in the Republican primary. McGee did not step down from his seat to run for chief justice slot left vacant by Jack Pope and will return to the court.

Ray got about 56 percent of the vote to 29 percent for Sharpe and 15 percent for a third candidate, Texas S. Ward of El Paso.

During the campaign, both Ray and Sharpe invoked the name of Don Yarbrough, who was elected to the court in 1976 and later sent to prison for perjury. Most political observers attributed Yarbrough's win to confusion among voters who thought they were voting for another Houston lawyer with the same name.

Ray said if voters weren't careful, "they could wind up with another Don Yarbrough." His campaign administrators said he did not mean to imply that Sharpe might end up in prison, only that Sharpe was an unknown.

Sharpe, meanwhile, used Yarbrough as an example of why he thinks judges should be appointed, not elected. Ray supports election of judges.

Sharpe attacked what he called Ray's "really questionable ethics," including, he said, improper contacts with lawyers with cases pending at the Supreme Court.

In the Republican primary for the state education board place from District 7, controversial chairman Butler lost to Mary Bishop, who got about 57 percent of the vote. Butler, of Houston, has been a staunch defender of the board, which has come under heavy attack by H. Ross Perot, chairman of the Select Committee on Public Education.

Democrats picked five nominees for the state board. But in races for the court of criminal appeals, the Democrats picked one nominee and sent two other races into runoffs.

Supreme Court Justice Franklin Spears, a Democrat, was unopposed for re-election.

The Court of Criminal Appeals races included a scramble among Democratic candidates for one vacancy, since Justice Wendell Odom did not seek re-election. There were no Republican candidates.

In the Democratic contest, Bill White of San Antonio got 34 percent of the vote to win a place in a runoff election with Thomas B. Thorpe of Dallas, who trailed with 16 percent. Kerry Fitzgerald of Dallas had 14 percent of the vote, George Ellis of Houston had 10 percent, William Phillips had 10 percent, Walter Boyd of Houston 9 percent and Harry Heard of Longview 6 percent.

Justice Bill Davis, who faced three Democratic challengers, will face Roy E. Greenwood of Austin in a runoff for the nomintion.

Davis had 39 percent of the vote. Greenwood trailed with 24 percent, George Martinez had 22 percent and Buddy Stevens of Arlington had almost 14 percent. No GOP lawyers entered the race.

Court of Criminal Appeals Justice Sam Houston Clinton won the nomination to seek re-election, getting 69 percent of the vote to 31 percent for his Democratic challenger, State District Judge Oliver Kitzman of Brookshire.

Virgil Mulanax of Gilmer was unopposed for the Republican nomination in that race.

The only contestants in the Railroad Commission race were incumbent Democrat Mack Wallace and Republican John Thomas Henderson of Austin.

In the contested State Board of Education races, incumbent Wayne Frederick was nominated, getting 56 percent of the vote to 44 percent for challenger Bernard Packard in District 2.

Incumbent Don H. Cook got the nomination in District 5, getting 65 percent of the vote to 35 percent for challenger Charles F. Hardt.

Johnnie C. Carpenter won the nomination in District 12, collecting 70 percent of the vote to 30 percent for Glenn Kroh.

Ruthe Jackson beat Jim Hollingsworth in District 24, getting 72 percent of the vote to 28 percent.

Mike Fernandez, who lost his state board seat last month because of an appeals court ruling, collected 69 percent of the vote to 31 for Lou Lowther in District 21. However, Fernandez' status as a candidate had been thrown into question by the appeals court ruling, which said Fernandez could not serve on the state board and work for a city utility at the same time. Fernandez has appealed the ruling.

Hart vows to stay in race despite Texas loss

AUSTIN (AP) — Sen. Gary Hart, the loser in a state his backers said he "needed," has vowed to stay in the Democratic presidential nomination chase to the end, despite an increasing string of losses.

"The issue is not who wins states, but who wins delegates," Hart said Sunday in response to Walter Mondale's strong showing in the Texas caucuses

With reports complete from about 61 percent of the more than 6,000 Texas precinct caucuses, the Democratic Party said Mondale had drawn 50 percent of the support, Hart had 27 percent and the Rev. Jesse Jackson picked up 16.4 percent. The uncommitted total was 6.5 percent.

In the non-binding Texas Republican presidential primary, President Reagan won 97 percent of the vote to 3 percent uncommitted.

At a Washington news conference, Hart was asked if there was any scenario that would drive him from the race before the Democratic National Convention.

"None," he replied.

But his Texas campaign chairman said the Saturday night defeat in Texas put Hart near the end of the line.

"My own view is that it will be very difficult now for him, having lost Texas, to win the nomination," said U.S. Rep. Martin Frost of Dallas. "This was a real victory, a significant victory by (former) Vice President Mondale."

Hart "clearly needed to win Texas," Frost said. "You can't put any other kind of face on the situation here. This was a state that should have been good for him — a western state where he was right on the issues that affected our state. He didn't win."

Hart's demise could come Tuesday in the Midwest, Frost said. Losses in both Indiana and Ohio would mean "it will be time for the party to unite and be concerned about the fall," he said.

Jim Quackenbush, Mondale's southern strategist, said the Texas caucuses should give Mondale about 161 of the state's 200 delegates to the Democratic National Convention.

Saturday's caucuses did not pick delegates to the national convention, but set the ratios for how those delegates will be picked. Of the 200 delegates who will go to San Francisco, 169 are picked through the caucus system that started with the precinct meetings.

Delegates selected at the precinct conventions attend county conventions on May 19. Delegates selected there move to the June 15-16 state convention at which national convention delegates will be picked.

Thirty-one delegate slots are reserved for state and party officials.

Mondale's Texas campaign leaders said they were pleased with his strong showing in Hispanic areas.

Snyder bank reopens with new name

SNYDER, Texas (AP) — The failed First National Bank Snyder reopened today under a new charter, new management and a new name — American State Bank of Snyder.

American State Financial Corp., a Lubbock-based holding company, purchased the bank's assets Friday, a few hours after the First National was declared insolvent because of bad loans.

It was the sixth West Texas bank to be closed in recent months by the U.S. Comptroller of the Currency.

"The lack of available funds to meet depositor demands coupled with substantial loan losses led to the insolvency," said Dean DeBuck, a spokesman for the comptroller's office.

The new bank has been capitalized at $1.25 million, said Eddie Johnson, the bank's new president, formerly vice president of the holding company.

First National's senior vice president has been replaced and all eight officers have been replaced by six holding company officers, Johnson said.

"The rest of the staff will remain the same," Johnson said. "We expect a short transition period but we will try to keep everything the same for right now. All existing First National Bank checks will be honored," he said.

Johnson said a mixture of bad loans — ranching, farming and energy — figured in First National's demise. He declined comment on the bank's management.

H. Joe Selby, senior deputy comptroller for bank supervision, ordered the bank closed at 3:35 p.m. Friday and appointed the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. as receiver.

A few hours later, American State submitted a bid of $962,000, the highest of four offers, said Alan Whitney, a spokesman for the FDIC.

Whitney said funds belonging to depositors with accounts below the federal insurance limit of $100,000 still would be available to the owners and that checks drawn on First National would continue to be honored.

First National, which was granted a national charter on Jan. 15, 1981, had $16 million in deposits as of last Wednesday.

Dallas officials citing hotels before convention

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas city officials have cited six hotels for fire code violations in a crackdown on safety at inns that will house delegates for the Republican National Convention in August.

Deputy Fire Chief Bob Melton said that fire code violations at the Regent and Melrose hotels were termed serious, but violations at the other four were minor are expected to be corrected soon.

He said that since the fire safety crackdown began about five months ago, 14 of the 46 convention hotels have been inspected.

Fire officials said they fear that they could not get close enough at the Regent and Melrose in an emergency to fight a fire.

The Regent was cited because because seven third-floor rooms and an atrium level could not be reached with 150 feet of fire hoses as required by the code, officials said.

Hotel officials plan to resolve the problem before the convention.

"There are some standpipes (water sources) near the rooms. It was my understanding that this would meet the requirements," said Joe McCarthy, president of Lincoln Hotels, which own the Regent. "If any hotel is sensitive to fire safety, it is the Regent. We have had two fires in the last year or two."

Melrose officials refused to comment.

The other hotels cited were Hyatt Regency, 20 infractions; the Bradford Hotel, seven; the Hilton Hotel, four; and the Sheraton Inn, four.

Hotel officials said that most of the problems have been resolved or will be shortly.

"I have instructed all my people to inspect the convention hotels," Melton told The Dallas Morning News. "We'll get to all of them by August. Most of them are in pretty good shape, but a few have some problems."

The fire code inspections are part of intense scrutiny the hotels have received from local, state and national officials in preparation for the GOP convention which is scheduled for Aug. 20-23.

Many hotel officials are studying recently released results of state health department inspections of their kitchens, which showed that many had unsanitary conditions. Thirty of the 40 hotels inspected scored below the acceptable score of 70 on the food sanitation inspections, records show.

L. Don Thurman, environmental engineer for the Texas Department of Health, said the hotels will be inspected again later this month or in early June.

Priest shortages put burden on Texas Catholic churches

DALLAS (AP) — The number of Catholics has increased in recent years, but the number of priests has not and that is putting a burden on Texas priests, many of whom rely on volunteers and deacons to help them carry on their work.

"Usually I'm expected to be in three or four places at any time, and people don't realize the time constraints," said the Rev. Donald Zimmerman, pastor of St. Monica's Catholic Church in Dallas.

Zimmerman, 37, has discovered that fewer young men are joining the seminary, while the number of Catholics is increasing.

Nationwide, the Catholic population rose from 47.9 million in 1970 to 52.1 million in 1983 while the number of priests dropped from 59,192 to 57,870.

The Southwest seems to be one of the hardest hit as Catholics from the north join immigrants from Mexico to swell the population, the Dallas Times Herald reported Sunday.

In Texas, where the Catholic population jumped more than 380,000 between 1980 and 1981, the typical priest serves 65 percent more people than the national average of one priest to every 900 parishoners.

The Brownsville and Corpus Christi dioceses have two of the highest ratios of priests to parishioners in the nation — one priest for every 2,000 people.

To survive, many of the priests have turned to help from volunteers and deacons.

"I have a business manager who runs things day to day," Zimmerman said. "I don't call the plumber. I have a great many lay people who visit folks in the hospital and take them Holy Communion."

Religious observers cite several reasons for the priest shortage, including a confusion about priestly roles since the Second Vatican Council increased lay participation in the early 1960s.

Nun to testify in trial of worker

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Federal prosecutors prepared to question a nun who has agreed to turn government witness against a church worker charged with smuggling Salvadoran aliens.

Sister Dianne Muhlenkamp, 36, of Fort Wayne, Ind., who is on probation for a year, was expected to take the witness stand today to testifty about circumstances surrounding her arrest with church worker Stacey Lynn Merkt, 29.

Ms. Merkt is charged with conspiring to illegally transport two Salvadorans.

Ms. Merkt, Sister Dianne and Dallas Times Herald reporter Jack Fischer were arrested Feb. 17 on a desolate South Texas highway near Hebbronville as they were taking Salvadorans Mauricio Valle, Brenda Sanchez-Galan and her baby to San Antonio.

The Salvadorans, who were held in contempt of court Friday and jailed for refusing to testify against Ms. Merkt, claim that they were going to San Antonio to apply for political asylum.

Defense attorney Daniel Sheehan said evidence will show that Salvadorans who go to immigration offices in the Rio Grande Valley to apply for asylum are immediately arrested and sent to a nearby federal detention camp.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Robert Guerra said the government will rest after calling Sister Dianne, who was driving the Catholic Diocese-owned car at the time of the arrest, and one other witness.

"Then we'll see the circus begin," said Guerra referring to the unique defense that Sheehan plans to present.

Defense attorneys plan to use the Merkt case to call attention to American involvement in Central America and U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service policy regarding Salvadoran refugees. They say INS policy violates the intent of the Refugee Act of 1980 and United Nations protocol governing refugees to which the United States is a signatory.

The defense will argue that the Salvadorans are bona fide refugees fleeing persecuton by U.S. sponsored right-wing death squads and were being aided by an underground railroad of church people who believe assisting the refugees is a religious duty.

The defense also claims that Ms. Merkt intended to help the Salvadorans apply for political asylum and that the refugees could legally apply for asylum within the U.S. without entry documents.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Tuesday, May 8, 1984

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Red Cross Society founder Jean Henri Dunant, U.S. President Harry S. Truman, music's Oscar Hammerstein and Bishop Fulton Sheen were born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: politician John J. Anderson, Jr., author Peter Benchley, boxer Sonny Liston, Don Rickles, Kansas City pitcher Dennis Leonard, jockey Angel Cordero and actress Melissa Gilbert. A wonderful turnaround in business will make 1984 a year to remember.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Curb spending. Money invested on advertising or public relations will boost profits. Meetings and interviews enjoy favorable influences. A special group plays a significant role in your professional life.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Domestic projects can be handled with greater efficiency today. Creative endeavors will be handsomely rewarded. Be careful not to overreact to a controversial statement or surprising situation. Your poise impresses higher-ups.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A tempting offer sounds too good to be true. Trust your intuition. Someone puts your intellectual abilities to a test; you pass with flying colors! To get ahead at work, be original.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): New professional or community contacts will help you further your aims. State your case clearly when dealing with someone influential. A secret fling would be a big mistake if you are married.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A more practical approach will help you solve an old problem. Show greater sensitivity to other people's needs. Romance could tempt you to do something foolish. Think things through very carefully.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): The news from abroad could affect your finances. Doublecheck any travel reservations and schedules. A business contract or family friend gives you a new employment lead. Follow up as soon as possible.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A special introduction will bring you closer to a long-sought goal. Pay more attention to your appearance. A conservative approach will impress someone in authority. Romance begins to sizzle.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A professional attitude towards your responsibilities is essential for business success. A crowded schedule requires great effort and flexibility. A friend gives you an opportunity to further your social aims.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Contracts come up for review. Family matters are on your mind. Call relatives living at a distance. Joint financial resources and loans are in the spotlight. Take a conservative approach.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Simplify work procedures and your job performance will improve. Do not let an urge to play interfere with your work. Creative endeavors and home beautification projects are favored. New alliances surprise and delight.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Someone prominent has a profound effect on your career or finances. You may be asked to move to another city. Talk things over with family members before making a commitment.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Shared projects and group activities are favored. A financial discussion cannot be postponed. Be willing to take on new responsibilities.

Comedian 'warms up' TV show

NEW YORK (AP) — He's never on stage. Viewers won't see or hear him. He doesn't even get his name in the credits. But if you're laughing along with the studio audience during CBS' "Kate & Allie" tonight, J.J. Wall will be smiling, too.

Wall was the show's warm-up act when the series was taped in New York earlier this year. As studio jester, his job was to keep the audience alert and enthusiastic before the show and during the many shooting breaks.

"Warm-ups are such a critical part of TV, but they're often done wrong," said Bill Persky, producer-director for "Kate & Allie." "Sometimes you can get audiences hyped up and the show takes off faster. But sometimes you get people who compete with the material on stage, and that can be destructive."

In theory, TV's laugh chain begins with the warm-up act. A 30-minute show might take two hours to complete. A lethargic crowd could turn the studio into a morgue, sap the energy of the stars and not contribute lustily enough to the natural laugh track. And that could infect the home audience.

Wall, 32, a stand-up comic from New York, was selected, by Persky, because he's a natural ad-libber who enjoys chatting with people. "You have to make the audience feel comfortable and involved," said Persky.

Persky's only instructions were that Wall forget his nightclub act. "A stand-up comic's jokes are faster than the show's material," Persky said. "It would create a rhythm and an expectation that we could never match."

Persky, who wrote scripts for the old "Dick Van Dyke Show," recalled when series regular Morey Amsterdam did the warm-up instead of writer-producer Carl Reiner. Amsterdam's joke delivery was rapid-fire.

"The next scene seemed less funny," Persky said. "After laughing at bang-bang one-liners, four lines of dialogue setting up a joke didn't work as well."

Wall does a lot of spontaneous humor in clubs and colleges, and he easily slipped into the role of friendly New York tour guide in the Feb. 24 taping of tonight's episode, the last of six original programs this season. (Happily, though, this sophisticated hoot of a comedy, which stars Susan Saint James and Jane Curtin, has been renewed for the fall.)

"I like the idea of walking a tightrope," said Wall.

Between takes, Wall talked to the out-of-towners about their experiences here and back home. He kidded some about their accents, their jobs or their shoes. He was congenial and never nasty or insulting. He's no Don Rickles.

GOREN BRIDGE

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

BY CHARLES GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF

Q.1 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠7652 ♡QJ6 ◇A95 ♣963
Partner opens the bidding with one club. What do you respond?

A. — Dedicated five-card major addicts will religiously respond one spade. However, we go along with those who do not like bidding so weak a suit if there is any alternative. Since we don't like responding one no trump when we have a four-card major suit, we opt for a waiting bid of one diamond. That leaves us admirably placed for any rebid by partner.

Q.2 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠95 ♡A93 ◇95 ♣AKJ872
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	1 ♠	2 ♣	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A. — In view of your excellent trump support and strong club suit, your hand merits a move toward slam. Since you have nothing to cue-bid and Blackwood won't solve your problems, the only logical bid you can make is a raise to five hearts.

Q.3 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠J6 ♡KQ6 ◇AJ98 ♣KQ102
The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
1 ♡	1 NT	Pass	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	Pass	2 ♠
Pass	?

What action do you take?

A. — The one hand your partner can't have is a near bust with a long spade suit — with that hand he would have bid immediately. Expect partner to have only a four-card spade suit or a weak five-carder and a few points, and heart shortness. Don't leave him in a bad spot; bid two no trump and at least give him the option of introducing a second suit, if he has one.

Q.4 — Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠1095 ♡K105 ◇AK6 ♣AJ95
Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one diamond. What action do you take?

A. — This is not the shape for a takeout double. We would overcall one no trump. In theory, you are 1 point short for that action, but your intermediate cards (10s and 9s) more than make up for that deficiency.

Q.5 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A10 ♡AK9873 ◇A5 ♣A106
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 ◇	Pass	4 ♠	Pass

What do you bid now?

A. — We have some sympathy if you elected to bid seven clubs right here — if nothing else, partner should have a good club suit and you do not need much more for a grand slam. However, you should try to avoid bidding a grand slam that might depend on guessing the queen of trumps, so we suggest you jump to five no trump. That is the grand slam force, asking partner to bid seven with two of the three top trump honors.

Q.6 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AKJ9 ♡95 ◇95 ♣K10876
Partner opens the bidding with one diamond. What do you respond?

A. — There are those who believe that you should always show a four-card major in response to partner's minor-suit opening bid. In the words of Sam Goldwyn: "Include us out!" When you can afford to take two or more bids, there is no reason why you should not bid your hand naturally. Respond two clubs, and show spades at your next turn.

Business strength

Small business in America is no small thing.

In fact, small business is getting bigger all the time, says the U.S. Small Business Administration, and it plays an important role in the nation's economic health.

Consider the following facts:

— There are nearly 14 million small businesses today — more than three times the number that existed 30 years ago.

— During the last recession, while many big businesses were laying off workers small businesses continued to hire. The result was that during the period between 1980 and 1982 there was a net increase of almost one million workers, thanks to small firms.

— Since the economic recovery began in 1982, employment in industries dominated by small firms has grown faster than in big business-dominated industries.

— Small business employs about half of the country's private labor force.

— A large number of the firms in Midland and Odessa are classed as small businesses.

What that all translates into is the fact that the economic health of America — and of communities like Midland and Odessa, in particular — depends in large part on small business owners.

That's a good reason for all of us to join hands in saluting these entrepreneurs this week — Small Business Week.

In proclaiming May 6-12 Small Business Week, President Reagan said, "America's strength lies in the ingenuity and perseverance of its people. No other group of Americans better exemplifies these qualities than the nation's small business owners."

Small business keeps America strong.

Worthwhile alliance

The United States Ambassador to the United Nations, Jeane J. Kirkpatrick, is known as a hardheaded observer, one who does not hesitate to criticize American policies when criticism seems warranted, and also ready to put in a good word for a program when she thinks praise is in order. So she was worth listening to in New York the other day when she addressed the National Committee on American Foreign Policy on the strengths and weaknesses of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

With typical directness, Mrs. Kirkpatrick said NATO "is a colossal success, the greatest single success of the post-World War II years."

With equally typical objectivity, she took note of the presence of disagreements between the United States and our European allies, admitting that "it is not a perfect marriage." But she emphasized that whatever differences of opinion exist are overshadowed by "a potential Soviet threat to the security of Western Europe and a belief that the Atlantic alliance is the best available option for protection from that threat."

As long as the Soviet threat remains, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization will be necessary as one of the foundations of freedom.

Another View:

The 1-cent solution

One-quarter of all the coins minted in the world are U.S. pennies, 14 billion a year, in fact. One of them won't buy even a vagrant thought anymore, much less a jawbreaker or a few minutes on the parking meter, and the cost of producing them is almost as great as their face value. So why do 5 billion of them disappear every year? And why does even the faintest suggestion that they be phased out of circulation raise howls of protest, especially in Congress, where the power of decision rests?

Hoarding seems to be a large part of the answer to the first question. Pre-1982 pennies were made of copper (since then they've been 97 percent zinc), whose price in good times can soar well above the face value. As for the latter question, those who have spent time researching the problem say it's psychological. To get rid of the penny would be like admitting that inflation has had real impact. (Well, hasn't it?) Then there's the danger that most merchants would, as in England when the half-penny was taken out of circulation a few years back, round off prices upward to the nearest nickel (which no longer contains nickel, of course). Probably true, but surely the impact would be minimal, and temporary.

Then there are all those timeless expressions: A penny for your thoughts, a penny saved is a penny earned, penny-ante poker, penny-wise and pound-foolish (never mind that this country dropped the pound two centuries ago). Perhaps when it becomes widely understood that eliminating pennies would save taxpayers $70 million a year — about 29 cents (er, make it 30) each — Congress will find the courage to send all those pennies back to heaven, whence the song says they came. In no time, we'll all get used to grumbling over our 75-cent cup of coffee about that nickel-pinching boss who won't give us a raise.

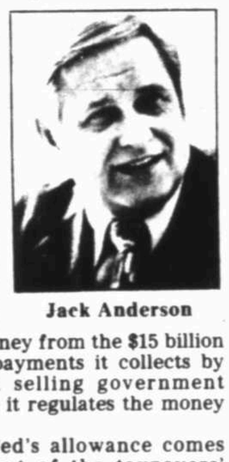
'Little Sammy' still unaccountable

WASHINGTON — Imagine a teenager who could set his own allowance without any explanation to the parents who pay it, and you'll have a some idea of the way the Federal Reserve System operates. Only some idea, because the Fed's self-set allowance is more than $1 billion a year.



Jack Anderson

The Fed writes its own budget and doesn't have to justify a nickel of it to Congress because the money isn't appropriated by our elected representatives. The Fed gets its spending money from the $15 billion in interest payments it collects by buying and selling government securities, as it regulates the money supply.

But the Fed's allowance comes indirectly out of the taxpayers' pockets. That's because the interest it earns must be turned over to the Treasury — minus the Fed's expenses. The more the Fed spends on itself, the less money it gives the Treasury. Fed officials seem to regard the remission of funds to the government as a gift.

So it's your business that the Fed's personnel costs went up 10 percent — to $600 million — in the midst of overall cutbacks and layoffs by less-favored federal agencies. It's your money that subsidizes the tennis and squash courts, the elaborate dining and shopping facilities in some Fed buildings — and the $391,384 cafeteria subsidy in one year.

And it's your dough that pays the salary of a full-time art director, who decorates the offices of Fed officials and holds art shows with a yearly budget of nearly $100,000.

Why doesn't Congress clip the wings of the high-flying Fed, which regularly lectures the lawmakers on their spending habits? The answer seems to be that most members of Congress — like most of their constituents — find the Fed's whole operation so mysterious that they pretty well accept without question the idea that the Fed must remain unaccountable.

At any rate, despite occasional muttering over the years, Congress has declined to force the Fed into the regular budget and appropriations process that other government agencies must go through. The Fed is also immune to General Accounting Office audits of monetary policy, significant Freedom of Information Act demands, General Services Administration rules and civil service regulations.

The latest example of the Fed's hypnotic effect on Congress is the Federal Reserve Modernization Act. It would have repealed the existing $140 million limit on construction costs for the 12 Federal Reserve Bank branches around the country. This would have let the Fed's regional satraps spend as much as they wanted on new offices.

This high-handed power grab was sailing through Congress without even discussion when Rep. William Patman, D-Texas, spotted it and howled in protest. He was able to get the construction limit put back in, though at $200 million.

Patman is trying to force the Fed to submit to a full congressional audit — a fight that's been going on without success for at least 20 years.

"I just don't know why we can't muster the courage to do something like that," Patman told my associate Michael Binstein. "We have far too few restrictions on the Fed."

Taking on the Fed is a Patman family tradition. His father, Rep. Wright Patman, D-Texas, as chairman of the House Banking Committee ran the only real audit of the Fed shortly before he died in 1976.

NORA'S STORY: Nora Astorga, a high-ranking Sandinista official in Managua, was recently turned down by the Reagan administration as the new Nicaraguan ambassador to the United States. The reason: her role in the murder of Gen. Reynaldo Perez, nicknamed Perro (the Dog), chief of staff of Anastasio Somoza's National Guard, on March 8, 1978.

I first reported the lurid details of Ms. Astorga's bloody deed later that year. In hiding, she told her story to my reporter, Bob Sherman, asking that only her first name be used. Here's what I wrote then:

"When she first met Perez, Nora was 27, the mother of two and soon to be divorced. Perez was negotiating a land deal through the company Nora worked for. From the outset, he began making advances to her.

"Nora said she put him off for almost a year. 'But then I began to think that maybe we (the Sandinista underground) could use this to our advantage,' she said. 'So I talked to my contact and the order came back that I should try to set him up.'

"Nora invited the general to her modest home in Managua for the long-awaited tryst. ... The general's limousine arrived on schedule. The unsuspecting Perez was greeted at the door by Nora.

"Impatient to embark on what he obviously anticipated as a long and delightful affair, Perez led his hostess directly to the bedroom — where two guerrillas were hiding.

"'I embraced him immediately, holding him tightly around the chest,' Nora said. The guerrillas slipped up behind Perez and cut his throat from ear to ear. Then they dumped his body on the bed and covered it with a red-and-black Sandinsta flag."

EVANS & NOVAK

U.S.-Israeli bond costs plenty

WASHINGTON — The empty-handed return of a high-level Reagan administration mission to Persian Gulf states to offer specific U.S. protection against Iran was the latest evidence that American Mideast policy now scrapes rock bottom.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

The mission, which included Rear Adm. John M. Poindexter, President Reagan's deputy national security adviser, was one of supplication: Just ask us for anything, from F-15s to an on-shore military exercise, and our boys will be there to help you!

There was not a single taker from Kuwait to the United Arab Emirates — certainly not Saudi Arabia. With a pro-Israel election-year Congress moving fast to prevent the U.S. from creating a Jordanian strike force for defense of the Persian Gulf litoral, the foreboding prospect looms of defenseless oil-rich Arab states.

Even if the Iranians are stalled for now in their move to split Iraq and advance to the Kuwaiti border, the inability to persuade friendly Arab states to accept U.S. security guarantees shows the costs of ever-tightening U.S.-Israeli bonds. No countries anywhere in the world are as fearful of both Iran and the Soviet Union as those along the Persian Gulf.

But U.S. impotence to halt the Israeli invasion of Lebanon, followed by the Reagan administration's ducking into and then ducking out of its own role in Lebanon, has emptied the pool of influence and credibility that once flowed so richly out of Washington to the Arab world.

Poindexter and Assistant Secretary of State Richard Murphy headed the blue-ribbon delegation that returned empty-handed April 22 after 10 days of trying to beguile conservative Arab leaders to accept American security guarantees. That followed a lengthy visit here by the defense minister of Kuwait. He listened literally for hours as the Pentagon brass and Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger, highly respected by Arab leaders, described what the U.S. was prepared to do.

Not a chance, the Pentagon was told; the word and the worth of the U.S. have been so diluted that military exercises, much less bases capable of handling U.S.-piloted F-15 fighters, could not be tolerated in Kuwait. Even naval exercises "over the horizon" — beyond the reach of human eye — are ruled out as potential breeders of political trouble.

President Reagan's admirable scheme to use a Jordanian strike force, transported by American carriers, to meet any Iranian threat is under systematic attack by pro-Israeli congressmen and lobbies. The latest assault came from Tom Dine, head of the American-Israel Public Affairs Committee (AIPAC), the premier pro-Israel publicist. His demand in a recent speech to AIPAC's policy conference that the administration cut off all military aid to any Arab state "until and unless" it agrees "to make peace with Israel" mirrors Israel's own lobbying effort with the administration.

AIPAC has an enviable record of anticipating Mideast positions to be taken later by various presidents, particularly in an election year, a fact well understood by pro-American Arab states. Both AIPAC and Israel want the Middle East to be defended by American force at least partly based on Israeli soil or in Israeli ports, not through joint U.S.-Arab arrangements. That Israeli thesis lies at the heart of its demand for wider "strategic" agreements with Washington.

Kuwait's refusal to give the U.S. any base or other military rights plays directly to Israel's demand for the coveted ever-closer partnership with the U.S. It also stimulates anti-Arab votes in Congress, which further increases hostility for the U.S. in the Arab world.

It was this costly cycle that the Poindexter-Murphy mission sought and failed to break. Kuwait would pay a lot for U.S. security guarantees against Iran if the guarantors wore Jordanian uniforms, as Reagan wants. But Congress is accommodating Israel and refusing Reagan's requests to give Jordan the weapons it needs for the Persian Gulf strike force.

With direct American participation ruled out, that leaves one of the West's most important regions naked to aggression — a potential victim of the tightening link between the U.S. and Israel.

CHARLEY REESE

Rich die in lonely places, too

The assassin, Sirhan Sirhan, claimed a second victim the other day. It just took David Kennedy longer to die of his wounds than it did his father, Sen. Robert Kennedy.

Charley Reese

The 28-year-old David was found dead in a hotel room after a long bout with drug abuse.

It is easy to think, especially in this age of media where we deal more with images than with reality, that the rich and famous are demigods, but of course they are not. They are just human beings like the rest of us. They get tired, depressed, sick, hurt and grieved. And they die.

The trappings of wealth — money in the bank, big homes, expensive clothes, servants, advisers, airplanes and cars — do not and cannot shield the human being from being human.

Nor can fame. To have your face known to many people, to have reporters write stories about you, to appear on television, or to hold high office means nothing. You can have all that and still be sad, tormented, lonely, frightened and confused.

In the dark hours of the night, the most famous of the famous lie down alone and as they lie there, they do not think of their fame or their wealth. They think the thoughts of all humans — that they are mortal, vulnerable creatures on a spinning cinder in a vast, dark universe that in many ways is harsh and cruel.

Imagine young David Kennedy as a 12-year-old sitting alone in a chair in a hotel room watching his father die over and over and over on instant replay, wanting to run away but gripped by the cyclops' eye and forced to watch the man he loved so much lie bleeding on the kitchen floor of the hotel.

I am astounded, at myself as well as at others, that we are not more kind to each other. If death and pain have any lesson to teach it's that we should not go out of our way to inflict on each other what will inevitably occur to all of us in the natural course of events.

It is absurd that human beings, bound together by a common fate in a common time frame in a common place spend so much of their time and energy scheming against, destroying and abusing each other.

Yet I see within myself what I deplore: a capacity to rationalize cruelty, a capacity for rage that urges destruction, a sense of separateness, an instinct to defend my circle of space, a capacity to shut people out of my consciousness and to reduce them to more symbols like targets.

What strange creatures we humans are. Of all the life forms, we alone possess the capacity to squelch our instincts and over-ride our impulses and to live peacefully if we so choose. Yet of all the life forms we know, we are without a doubt the most cruel and destructive and aggressive.

I suspect the answer is that we are still in a primitive stage of development. We tend to think we are so smart but what we know compared to what we don't know is like one square inch of the Pacific Ocean.

And since we tend not to get wise until we get old, we have an endless cycle of wisdom dying and ignorance being born. A record of technical knowledge can be left and easily assimilted but wisdom, even though it is recorded, must be learned by each individual at the cost of great effort.

I don't have any answers except to be kind, especially to the rich and famous because it is so much easier to be unkind to them, to be harsh in our judgments, to expect perfection, to make demands we ourselves couldn't meet, to let that worm, envy, gnaw at our good sense.

I wouldn't want to change places with the Kennedy family. They are not the only family struck by a series of tragedies but they have suffered plenty.

A long time ago in a distant land a rich young prince we now know as Buddha observed that neither youth nor wealth nor political power offered immunity to suffering and death. He spent his life in a quest for understanding and at last found it.

What did he discover? Each of us must find our own answer.

Mondale says he's Truman-like Democrat

Walter Mondale

CINCINNATI (AP) — Walter F. Mondale, likening himself to Harry Truman, is depicting himself a "people's Democrat" as he wraps up his campaign in the four states holding Democratic presidential primaries this week.

Truman won election in 1948 despite being given little chance of winning, Mondale said Sunday in a day of campaigning in several Ohio cities and Ft. Wayne, Ind.

But people were "looking for somebody they thought was truly a people's Democrat. We don't get many of those in American history," he declared, adding that Truman went on to win a "tremendous" victory.

Mondale is the front-runner for the Democratic nomination, but he trails President Reagan in public opinion polls.

The former vice president, trying to nail down the party's nomination by the end of the primary season June 5, arranged stops today in seven cities in the four states holding primaries Tuesday.

Together, the four contests — in Ohio, Indiana, North Carolina and Maryland — have 368 convention delegates at stake.

As for the elections on Tuesday, Mondale's advisers feel confident about Maryland's primary. His own polls show him narrowly ahead in Ohio, according to one aide, who asked not to be identified by name. Polls by two Ohio newspapers, the Columbus Dispatch and the (Akron) Beacon Journal were released Sunday, and each had Mondale with a narrow lead.

Indiana and North Carolina are more difficult states for Mondale to win, according to aides.

Mondale is conceding Hart a victory today in the senator's home state of Colorado. There are 43 delegates at stake in caucuses there.

Mondale spent most of Sunday in Ohio touring the state with Gov. Richard Celeste.

The former vice president spent about an hour at the home of unemployed welder Roger Geisman in Warren, talking with him, his wife, their five children and his parents.

Geisman was laid off two years ago, has had his van repossessed and a lien placed on his house and had his gas shut off for several months. Mondale emerged from the house to promise a policy that would "move this country back toward full employment."

He said it would not be "responsible" to provide targets or a timetable for such a goal, but said his policies would produce a "dramatic change" over Reagan's performance.

Mondale first evoked Truman's name later in the day at a park in Dayton, Ohio, where he stood on the rear platform of a restored train and recalled the ex-president's whistle-stop campaign of 1948.

"He'd been to the White House, but he remembered who had sent him there," Mondale said.

When people heard him speak, they "had heard someone that they knew had not turned big shot on them ... They had found a man of the people and they knew it."

"That's why I'm going to win this election," said Mondale. "I'm a man of the people and I'm going to win it the same way."

Would Harry Truman be same kind of president in 1984?

WASHINGTON (AP) — If Harry Truman were in the White House in 1984 instead of in 1948, would he be the same kind of president?

An interesting question to ponder on the 100th anniversary of Truman's birth, Tuesday, May 8.

Somehow, the presidency has changed vastly since it fell unexpectedly on the vice president on April 12, 1945, like "two planets and the whole constellation."

A huge White House bureaucracy exists that wasn't there in Truman's time.

"The Buck Stops Here," said the sign on his desk. It had no place else to go. The presidency pretty much started and stopped with him. When he wanted something done, he told the appropriate Cabinet secretary to do it.

He wrote home: "All the president is, is a glorified public relations man who spends his time flattering, kissing and kicking people to get them to do what they are supposed to do anyway."

Those days, the presidency wasn't an institution, churning up option papers for the chairman of the board.

It was a man, sitting behind a desk, at work.

Twenty-page memos in the Truman Library on the minutiae of government still bear HST's hand-written margin notes.

When Truman was president, he used to give reporters his own briefings on the federal budgets he sent to Congress.

Robert Donovan, who covered Truman as a White House correspondent and wrote a highly regarded two-volume Truman biography, says television as one of two machines that changed the presidency enormously; the other was the jet plane.

"The presidency began to change under (Dwight D.) Eisenhower," Donovan said, "With the jet plane a president could travel far and not be gone very long. A trip like the one Ronald Reagan just took to China would have taken weeks."

But the biggest difference between Truman's White House and those of recent presidents was in the staff. There was no White House structure that paralleled the rest of the executive branch. Truman had a handful of aides, but they were generalists.

Congress to focus on El Salvador, deficits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two issues that have dogged Congress more than any others this year, U.S. military aid for El Salvador and an election-year prescription for trimming federal budget deficits, will be the focus of House and Senate activity this week.

Beginning Tuesday, the House will be debating several approaches to aiding El Salvador as legislators consider a $10.5 billion worldwide foreign aid authorization bill for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

President Reagan, meanwhile, is deciding whether to address the nation as part of a personal lobbying campaign to gain congressional approval for increased aid to Central America.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said Reagan will decide early this week whether to make such a speech.

The president has asked for $132.5 million in authority for military aid next year for the government of El Salvador, but the request has attracted little support in the Democrat-controlled House.

House Republican Leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois said flatly last week the proposal has "no constituency" and he urged Reagan to make a nationally broadcast speech to explain the necessity for the money.

Congress has earmarked $64.8 million in Salvadoran military assistance this year, and a Senate-passed supplemental appropriation for $61.7 million is awaiting House action.

The bill being considered this week would authorize $64.8 million in military aid for El Salvador next year if the president reports "demonstrated progress" in human rights and other reforms by the Salvadoran government, and an additional $124.5 million if he reports that military involvement in death squads has ended and unconditional negotiations with leftist guerrillas have begun.

Rep. Gerry Studds, D-Mass., has indicated he will offer an amendment to block all military aid unless both the president and Congress decide that a range of reforms have been accomplished, including an end to the death squads, improvement of the judicial system, land reform and negotiations to end the nation's civil war.

In addition, Republicans will propose an alternative that would authorize $128 million in military aid on condition that the president certifies demonstrated progress toward those objectives.

Also on Tuesday, the Senate will begin its third week of debate on a three-year $144 billion "down payment" on reducing deficits that has the president's blessing. Savings would be accomplished through a mixture of tax increases and restraint in military and domestic spending.

So far, Senate action has consisted of rejecting a series of larger, and more politically painful, substitutes.

Still pending is an alternative $200 billion package drafted by Democratic leaders that would raise more in taxes and cut more from military spending than the plan Reagan worked out with senior GOP senators.

Plane flies without pilot

NORTH ANDOVER, Mass. (AP) — A small plane took off without a pilot after its owner spun the propellor, and the craft just missed an ice cream store "that is usually packed," police said.

The owner was adjusting the propellor while posing for a picture Sunday evening when the single-engine Piper accidentally started, authorities said. It became airborne for about 50 yards, jumped an embankment and 6-foot fence and destroyed Ken's Auto Body near the end of the runway, fire officials said.

A fire department spokesman said two firefighters were treated for minor injuries after fighting the fire that engulfed the body shop.

"It could have been a great tragedy," said police Sgt. Michael Davis. "It crashed right across the street from an ice cream store that is usually packed on Sunday."

Koch mocks Chernenko

NEW YORK (AP) — About 200,000 people marched on the United Nations to protest the Soviet Union's treatment of Jews, then heard Mayor Edward Koch mock Konstantin Chernenko for the Soviet leader's book on human rights in the Communist country.

"It sounds like a nice place, this Soviet society Chernenko writes about. I wonder where it is," Koch said Sunday.

Koch and other leaders criticized the Soviet Union for preventing 400,000 Soviet Jews from emigrating.

Emigration of Soviet Jews dropped from 51,320 in 1979 to 1,314 in 1983, according to the Greater New York Conference on Soviet Jewry, which organized the rally.

Man must pay fine

GREEN RIVER, Wyo. (AP) — A judge ordered a man to pay $2,550 and attend a rehabilitation program for hacking a motel's registration desk with a power saw and firing a gun at a security guard after he was refused a room.

John Paul Rayburn, 33, must pay a $1,000 fine, $1,200 to the Rock Springs Holiday Inn and $350 to the public defender's office.

A judge gave Rayburn a suspended three-to-five-year prison term, but put him on probation with a condition that he not consume alcohol and participate in a rehabilitation program.

Rayburn pleaded guilty Thursday to a charge of aggravated assault in the April 4 incident. The security guard wasn't injured.

Security tightened as pontiff arrives in Papua New Guinea

PORT MORESBY, Papua New Guinea (AP) — Security was tight as Pope John Paul II landed in this South Pacific capital city today to a greeting from tribal dancers, a bagpipe band and thousands of cheering islanders.

His arrival came a day after a youth brandishing a toy pistol charged his motorcade in Seoul, South Korea. In Solomon Islands, where he is to visit Wednesday, officials reported they increased police guards and deported 11 people after learning of a possible Libyan threat to the British Embassy.

The pontiff stepped down from the papal DC-10 and kissed the ground as a 21-gun salute boomed over the airport, a former World War II fighter base. The band played the Vatican and Papua New Guinea anthems.

Beside the plane, dancers wearing feathers and pig tusks chanted a traditional welcome as drumbeats sounded.

After greeting Prime Minister Michael Somare and Papua New Guinea's governor-general, Sir Kingsford Dibela, the pontiff made a short speech in English and repeated it in Motu and Pidgin, the two most common languages in this diverse Melanesian society.

He told the crowd in front of the terminal that he had been "nurturing in my heart a particular desire" to visit this island, a former colony at various times of Britain, Germany and Australia. Roman Catholics are the religious largest group in Papua New Guinea, comprising one-third of the 3 million inhabitants.

He went from the airport to Hubert Murray sports stadium, where he gave an open-air mass. He urged the nation's youth "to take up and respond to the divine call" and become priests, brothers and nuns.

"It is my fervent prayer that the church in Papua New Guinea, as she continues to grow and mature, may experience a great flowering of vocations to the priesthood and religious life," he said.

Only 55 of the island nation's 518 priests are natives. The first indigenous bishop was ordained in 1970.

An estimated 60,000 villagers flocked to the stadium on food to hear the pope recite mass.Tribesmen were asked to leave their axes and bows and arrows at home. Authorities wanted to prevent any outbreak of ancient tribal rivalries which led to 50 deaths and hundreds of injuries last year.

In Port Moresby, police searched houses along the pope's motorcade route and overlooking the stadium. Security officials said 500 police would be on duty in Port Moresby and another 400 in the highland town of Mount Hagen, which the pope visits Tuesday.

The South Korean who dashed toward the pope's motorcade in Seoul on Sunday — identified as Lee Joon-kyu, 23 — was quickly apprehended and the pope was not aware of the incident when it occurred, authorities said.

Lee, a student at a Seoul university, had a three-year history of mental instability, police said. He was taken to a hospital, placed under police guard and scheduled to undergo psychiatric examination, police said.

Police Supt. Choi Jae-sam quoted Lee as saying he wanted to "surprise the pope for the sake of fun" and that he "could not understand what all the fuss is about."

Later in Seoul, the pope canonized 103 martyrs, including Korea's first saints, as 800,000 people watched. The canonization of 93 Korean and 10 French martyrs was the first such ceremony outside the Vatican since the 13th century.

The Vatican said the pope intended it as a "personal tribute" to the world's fastest growing Roman Catholic church.

Panama counts presidential ballots

Ardito-Barletta

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Panamanians held their first direct presidential election in 16 years, chosing between a military-backed economist and an ex-president ousted three times by the armed forces. Both claimed today to have slim leads.

Arnulfo Arias Madrid, 82, candidate of a coalition led by his own Authentic Panamanian Party and by Christian Democrats, was matched Sunday against Nicolas Ardito-Barletta, 45, an economist supported by the official Revolutionary Democratic Party and the military.

Election officials declared a recess late Sunday night without counting any votes. They said they would resume their activities this morning and expected to have official results by late today.

Both Arias and Ardito-Barletta said their own unofficial tallying showed them narrowly ahead.

Each candidate is considered friendly to the United States, which has more than 9,000 military personnel here, and each has pledged not to change the status of U.S. armed forces installations.

There were no reports of violence in Sunday's balloting. Election officials had said they expected a turnout of between 700,000 and 900,000 voters.

Arias, a fierce critic of the military, has been ousted by the military each of the three times he was elected to the presidency. The last time, in 1968, he was in office only 11 days before the military toppled him.

Arias has said the current government, in the hands of the Revolutionary Democratic Party and led by President Jorge Illueca, is really a military dictatorship. He has said the power of the military must be reduced.

The official party which backs Ardito-Barletta was founded by the late Gen. Omar Torrijos, who ran the government here directly or through intermediaries from the 1968 coup until his death in 1981.

Relations have been tense between Arias and Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, head of the armed forces and said to be the most powerful figure in the country. But Noriega has said the military will accept the choice of the people.

Panamanian citizens have "arrived at this date without hatred or rancor, in the peace we all want to preserve in the face of suffering and war in other countries in the region," the general said.

Illueca took office in February after former President Ricardo de la Espriella resigned. It is speculated that he resigned, at least in part, because he did not want the government to be used to aid the campaign of Ardito-Barletta.

Conservative wins Ecuadorean runoff

Febres

QUITO, Ecuador (AP) — Leon Febres Cordero, a wealthy conservative who said his business skills could help cure Ecuador's economic woes, defeated leftist lawyer Rodrigo Borja in a presidential runoff. He called today for unity to rebuild the country.

"Hunger, inflation and unemployment do not have any political color," said Febres, 53, in a victory speech.

With the count from Sunday's balloting virtually complete, Febres, a mechanical engineer and business entrepreneur, had 1,353,968 votes, or 52.08 percent, to Borja's 1,245,898 votes, or 47.92 percent, the government's National Election Bureau said today.

The results ran counter to polls that had predicted Borja would win and bucked a trend in which left-of-center presidents were elected recently in Argentina and Venezuela.

Borja said he would wait for official election results in about two weeks before conceding defeat. "We have lost a battle but not a war," he said.

Borja, the 47-year-old founder and leader of the nation's Social Democrat Party, won first round voting Jan. 29 by a slim 1.2 percent over Febres, and reportedly had picked up more support since then. The first round eliminated seven other presidential candidates.

There was scattered violence during the campaign and one person was reported killed. But voting Sunday was orderly and peaceful. Soldiers with fixed bayonets guarded the polls.

Febres is to begin his four-year term Aug. 10, taking over from centrist President Osvaldo Hurtado.

Febres acknowledged today that solving the country's problems of 45 percent inflation, high unemployment and a $7 billion foreign debt would be difficult. "But I think a lot of Ecuadoreans will help me," he said.

The majority of voters apparently believed he could do the job and were sold on his claim of managerial experience and his campaign slogan of "bread, houses and jobs."

He was propelled to victory with strong voter support from the area around Guayaquil, Ecuador's commerce center and Febres' home town.

During the campaign he said his government would welcome foreign investment. He said he favored unilateral negotiations with the International Monetary Fund to try to ease Ecuador's foreign debt.

Ecuador has had 24 military dictatorships in its 154-year history.

Irish bomb disarmed

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Experts disarmed a 40-pound bomb in Newry and youths tossed gasoline bombs at police early today after a weekend of scattered violence on the third anniversary of IRA hunger striker Bobby Sands' death.

A spokesman for Northern Ireland's Royal Ulster Constabulary in Belfast said the bomb, hidden in a knapsack, was found late Sunday in the Newry town center after a telephone warning to police. Army disposal experts carried out two "controlled explosions" to disarm it, he said.

Fire probe continues

LONDON (AP) — Scotland Yard said today that after interviewing a man living in New York City it will submit a new report to prosecutors on a fire which killed 13 black youths at a birthday party in east London three years ago.

The fire, at a house in Deptford in January 1981, was followed by unrest in London's black community, fed by rumors that a white man was seen throwing something into the house before driving off in a car.

In a subsequent march by 6,000 people, which went past the gutted house, 17 police officers were injured in clashes. One of the march organizers claimed the blaze was a racist attack.

Nobleman murdered

PARIS (AP) — The body of a young Frenchman descended from two of Europe's noble families was recovered from the Seine River and an autopsy showed he was murdered with two shots from a hunting rifle, police reported today.

Edouard-Xavier de Lobkowicz, 23, was the eldest son of New York-born financier Prince Edouard de Lobkowicz and his wife, Princess Francoise de Bourbon-Parme.

He was last seen alive when he left his parents' luxury apartment near the Arc de Triomphe in early April. His car was found abandoned a few days later at the Gare de Lyon railroad station.

Arafat, Deng meet

PEKING (AP) — PLO chairman Yasser Arafat met today with China's top leader Deng Xiaoping and later described the talks as successful but declined to say whether the Chinese will give him more weapons.

Herschel Walker gains 127 yards

By The Associated Press

Herschel Walker ran for 127 yards and three touchdowns while Brian Sipe threw for two more scores as the New Jersey Generals, 9-2, buried the Oklahoma Outlaws 49-17 Sunday in the USFL.

Walker carried the ball 16 times, including TD runs of 62, 2, and 4 yards. Sipe, who passed for 103 yards, completed six of seven attempts.

"This can't happen every week," Walker said of the scoring explosion. "But we can go out and win and play hard."

Doug Williams completed 31 of 51 passes for 381 yards with one touchdown and three interceptions for Oklahoma, 6-5.

Novo Bojovic kicked a 29-yard field goal with 59 seconds left in overtime to give the Michigan Panthers, 7-4, a 31-28 victory over the Houston Gamblers.

The kick came 12 plays after linebacker John Corker deflected a 30-yard field goal attempt by Houston's Toni Fritsch.

John Williams ran for 165 yards and two touchdowns for the Panthers.

In Washington, Alan Duncan kicked a 29-yard field goal four minutes into overtime to lift the Memphis Showboats over the mistake-prone Federals 13-10.

Watson's slump ends

CARLSBAD, Calif. (AP) — There was no question the slump was there. But there also was no question, not in Tom Watson's mind, that it would end.

"I did go through a spell of bad golf, there," Watson said.

"But it was just a matter of time, and not a long time, before I won again," he said Sunday after another early eagle had propelled him to a 5-under-par 67 and a comfortable, front-running, five-shot victory in the MONY-Tournament of Champions.

He simply started in front, stayed in front, finished in front of a field of winners only.

And, while he said he knew it would happen, that did not detract from the joy that the worst slump of his career was, at last, unquestionably at an end.

"Damn, it's nice to win again. It's nice to win that way. It's a good feeling," said Watson, who had taken the Match Play title at the start of the season but had not won a stroke tournament since his fifth victory in the British Open last season, and had not won in stroke play in this country since the 1982 U.S. Open.

Watson, continuing his habit of dominating a few, selected events, acquired his third T of C title with a 72-hole total of 274, 14 strokes under par on the difficult, 6,911-yard La Costa Country Club course.

T of C Golf

It was Watson's second triumph of the season and the 30th of his American tour career, enabling him to tie Horton Smith for 10th place on the all-time list.

It was worth $72,000 from the total purse of $400,000 and boosted Watson's winnings for the year to a leading $284,468, more than he won in 1983.

Perhaps more importantly, it confirmed an end to a puzzling, frustrating slump that had plagued him early this year and re-established him as the dominant player in the game, a position he had held without for a six-year period ending in 1982.

In the seniors division, a new tournament for the over-50 champions, Orville Moody scored a seven-shot victory. Playing on the same course, and from the same tees as the PGA Tour players, Moody matched par 72 Sunday for a 288 total and collected $30,000 from the total purse of $100,000.

Watson, who now has collected 23 of his 30 American victories (the total does not include five British Open titles) in only 10 tournaments, won this with apparent ease.

Dodgers defeat Midland

From Wire Reports

SAN ANTONIO—Chris Thomas pitched an eight-hitter for his fourth win in five decisions and demonstrated pitchers can hit, too, by going three-for-three as San Antonio defeated the Midland Cubs, 8-3, in a Texas League game Sunday.

In addition to his trio of hits, Thomas scored a run in the Dodgers' key three-run third inning. With two runners on, Cecil Espy hit what appeared to be a single, but the ball got by Midland centerfielder Ricky Baker and Espy went all the way around the bases.

The loss was the second straight for the Cubs, who brought a three-game winning streak to San Antonio. Jeff Fruge, 0-4, took the loss as Manager George Enright employed four pitchers.

Gators Towers thwarts Diablos

By The Associated Press

Kevin Towers tossed no-hit ball for six innings and Al Newman batted in two runs as Beaumont beat El Paso 5-1 in a Texas League game.

Shreveport and Tulsa were rained out, while Jackson and Arkansas had the night off.

Towers, 3-0, gave up his only hit in the seventh when Dan Plante opened the inning with a single up the middle. Towers got relief help in the ninth from Mike Couchee, who also allowed one hit.

Lakers' Ervin "Magic" Johnson collides with Mavericks Mark Aguirre during heated action of NBA playoff game at Dallas Sunday as Los Angeles took a 3-1 lead in the series.

Lakers use 'rock' in win

LA leads Mavs, 3-1

DALLAS (AP) - The Los Angeles Lakers escaped rowdy Reunion Arena Sunday with a 122-115 overtime victory to move within a game of advancing to the National Basketball Association Western Conference playoff finals.

It took a missed free throw and a rookie mistake by the Dallas Mavericks in the final seconds of regulation play to help the Lakers take a 3-1 lead in the series.

Los Angeles outscored Dallas 14-7 in overtime with Bob McAdoo coming off the bench to contribute two steals and six points.

Maverick guard Derek Harper dribbled the final six seconds off the block in regulation to send the game into overtime, thinking Dallas was ahead a point.

Laker Coach Pat Riley said "It was a bizarre ending in regulation. I thought he (Harper) was going to run the clock down and I was waiting for him to try to take a shot or get a foul.

"I WAS about to call a play for him myself. I was surprised as anybody when he didn't go in."

The fifth game of the best-of-seven series moves to Los Angeles Tuesday night.

"I'm happy with the split," said Riley. Now we have the opportunity to take it home and win. The playoffs don't start until somebody loses at home so we have a good chance."

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar was high for the Lakers with 33 points including 11 straight in the fourth period but it was McAdoo and Michael Cooper who shined in overtime.

Cooper had four points in the extra period, Earvin "Magic" Johnson added a bucket, and Abdul-Jabbar hit two free throws.

Mav center Pat Cummings sent the game into overtime 108-all, hitting a a left-handed hook with 31 seconds to play. He was fouled by Johnson but missed the free throw that would have given Dallas the game.

Abdul-Jabbar missed a short hook shot and Dallas had another chance to win in regulation but rookie guard Harper dribbled the last six seconds off the clock thinking the Mavs were ahead.

"I thought we were ahead," said a crestfallen Harper. "It was a mistake. I was upset about it. I thought it was 109-108."

DALLAS COACH Dick Motta said "When I saw Derek backing up it hit me that he doesn't know the score or the time. I wanted to tackle him. It was just unfortunate.

"It's an uphill battle for us now."

Mark Aguirre was high for Dallas with 34 points but didn't score in the fourth period and left with a badly bruised right hip with 54 seconds left in regulation.

Guard Rolando Blackman had 21 points for the Mavericks but that was countered by James Worthy of the Lakers, who scored 19. Cooper finished with 17 for the Lakers.

Johnson had 14 points and as many assists.

Johnson doled out 10 assists including a no-look, behind-the-back spectacular to Cooper in the first half as the Lakers built a 61-53 lead.

The hustling Lakers scored 10 fastbreak baskets and shot 63 per cent from the field. Worthy was high with 13 points and Abdul-Jabbar added 12.

Aguirre led the Maverick scoring in the first half with 8 of 12 from the field and three free throws for 19 points.

Abdul-Jabbar became the second leading all-time NBA playoff scorer in the third period, passing John Havlicek's total of 3,776 points.

Mary Decker breaks mark

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Mary Decker broke her own American record for a 10,000-meter loop road race course Sunday, coasting to victory in 31 minutes, 37.77 seconds.

The mark in the Women's 10,000-Meter Run bettered her old American mark of 31:52.2 set in the same race last year. It was only the third time Decker has run a 10,000-meter race — twice in a road race and once on a track.

The 25-year-old Decker, who lives in Eugene, burst away from the pack and was running by herself after the first 200 meters of the race, which was run on bicycle paths along the Willamette River.

They can afford to throw away money and they do...

Bob Richards, TBS-CNN sportscaster, in Midland last week to tape some segments for both networks was particluarly enthralled by the "Game called by grasshoppers" incident at Cubs Stadium in 1972 when the second game of a Midland-Amarillo doubleheader was called as a result of an invasion of the insects.

It may have been good public relations, but Richards, who spent three days here, says he loved it in West Texas, once the wind slowed down a bit. "Look at it this way, the worst seat at Cubs Stadium is better than the best seat at any major league park. I love minor league ball."...

The Mrs. watched the Kentucky Derby on TV and listened on the radio and claims, "You get more information about what's going on on the radio." Seems radio had the foul claim story while TV was still show-casing Howard...

Umpires aren't always wrong. Friday night 1,772 fans moaned in unison on a play at first when it looked like Midland's Jeff Jones was safe at first as Beaumont Pat Casey made a futile and unsuccessful lunge. Not so, said Jeff to a "be honest" query from a teammate. "He got me right on the heel. It was a good call."...

It could be that all of Dallas Green's idiotic trades have sure enough made the Chicago Cubs a factor in the National League East. Of course, it's early but with another reliable starter...

Bill Max hit .336 with 28 homers and 122 rbi for El Paso in 1983 to earn Texas League all-star third baseman honors. So the Milwaukee Brewers released him outright and the Jackson Mets picked him up...

Guess who had the top-rated coaches TV show in the Durham- aleigh-Chapel Hill area last winter—Jim Valvano or Dean Smith? Guess again, Duke's Mike Krzyzewski outdrew both the NC State and North Carolina coaches...

Sam Bowie and Melvin Turpin, once the Twin Towers of Kentucky. After the Wildcats' NCAA collapse are the now the Fawlty Towers?...

SMU's Jon Koncak says he was attracted to SMU because Dave Bliss was one of the few coaches who spelled his first name properly. Lucky, I wasn't recruiting for Notre Dame and Arkansas last week. Instead of Wally Kleine and Joe Kleine, I'd probably have wound up with Chuck Klein, which wouldn't be all that bad if I was recruiting a baseball player...

Jerry Cooney? A one-time heavyweight contender, Cooney is thinking of a comeback, if brittle hands can stand the punishment.

Owls sweep doubleheader

HOUSTON (AP) — Mike Fox had a grand slam home run in the first game as the Rice Owls Sunday swept a non-conference baseball doubleheader from Texas Lutheran, 16-3, 8-3.

It was Fox' fifth homer of the season and keyed an eight-run rally that inning. The junior catcher also had an RBI single to give him five RBIs for the game.

Rice scored five runs in the fifth inning of the second game to take an 8-3 come-from-behind victory. Jeff Tousa had a two-run double in that outburst.

David Hinnrichs, 8-1, was the winning Rice hurler in the first game. Kent Kidd, 6-2, was the loser.

Derek Hoelscher, 7-1, was the winning pitcher in the nightcap. Tom Sommers, 2-2, was the loser.

Knicks square series with Celtics; Suns sink Jazz

By The Associated Press

The New York Knicks deadlocked their series with Boston 2-2 as Bernard King burned the Celtics for 43 points, his fifth time in the playoffs with more than 40.

"I played good defense. He just dropped them in," said Cedric Maxwell, one of the Celtics who guarded King in New York's 118-113 victory. "I pushed him and knocked him down, but he was unreal. It worked out better when I grabbed his jersey and he got called for a walk."

NBA Playoffs

King, who hit 17 of 25 shots from the floor, said he wasn't bothered by Boston's preseries comments that he would never score 40 against the Celtics after he did it four times in a five-game series with Detroit. He had a total of 63 points in the first three games.

"I don't take anything they say to heart. It's part of their tactics, part of the psychology," King said. "I never go out there to prove something."

The Celtics, who got 29 points from Larry Bird, 21 from Kevin McHale and 20 each from Robert Parish and Dennis Johnson, tied the score twice in the fourth period after trailing by as many as 14 in the third period. But Boston never took the lead the entire game.

MAURICE LUCAS sank two free throws with four seconds left in overtime as Phoenix beat the Utah Jazz 111-110.

Walter Davis sent the game into overtime on a three-point goal with three seconds remaining after Adrian Dantley's two free throws with six seconds left put the Jazz ahead 103-100. Davis finished with a career playoff high of 32 points, including six in the extra period, while Lucas scored 26.

Dantley had 37 points for the Jazz, who led 107-103 with 1:44 to go in overtime.

It's up to Oilers to stop Islanders

Stanley Cup

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — It now will be up to the Edmonton Oilers to do what Montreal couldn't do — stop the New York Islanders and preserve the Canadiens' NHL record of five consecutive Stanley Cups, achieved from 1956-60.

"We wanted to beat them for the players from those teams," said Montreal forward Mario Tremblay after the Islanders won the Prince of Wales Conference final playoff series in six games with a 4-1 victory Saturday night. "But they had too much for us."

For the first two games, the Canadiens were in control of the series. They won twice at home and made the Islanders look like anything but four-time champions. But the Islanders hit their stride in Game 3 and outscored Montreal 15-5 the rest of the series.

"I'M GLAD we had a chance to get a crack at them," said Canadiens' captain Bob Gainey, who played the last two games with a separated left shoulder. "It's a good experience builder for us. It gave us a taste of what it takes to beat a club like this."

But only a taste. The Canadiens never came close to finishing the meal.

"All it took for us was to get a fast start and I saw it coming when we got two quick goals in the third game," said Mike Bossy, who had three game-winning goals in the series. "We got a 5-0 lead and could relax. We never had a big lead in any game before that, where we could sit back and have fun out there.

"From then on, we were back to being in control of our game."

They'll need total control of their game to beat the Oilers in the Stanley Cup final, which opens here Thursday night. The Islanders swept Edmonton in four games in the 1983 final series.

"They're going to come at us much faster," said Islanders' captain Denis Potvin, who established a playoff mark with 98 career assists with two assists in the clinching game. "They want the puck badly. Montreal, at times, didn't seem to want to have the puck."

THE ISLANDERS began to turn around the conference final when their forwards assumed control of the puck.

Also, the Islanders started getting the first goal, just as Montreal had done in its two victories.

"We knew we had to get on top and make them try to come back," said Clark Gillies, who has seven playoff goals after scoring only 12 during the regular season.

"They had to change their plan once we got ahead," said defenseman Ken Morrow. "They couldn't sit back."

The Islanders can sit back and rest for a few days before beginning the final leg of their drive for five titles.

Goaltender Billy Smith will welcome the rest. He has started the team's last 28 postseason games. He holds Stanley Cup marks for most playoff victories by a goalie (84), most minutes played (6,931) and most appearances (118).

Bossy has 17 game-winning goals in Stanley cup play, one behind the record of Maurice Richard. Bryan Trottier has 96 assists, two behind Potvin.

Cale limps home Winston winner

From wire reports

AUTO RACING— Cale Yarborough heard his engine sputter and start to die with two laps remaining in Sunday's Winston 500 Grand National stock car race. "I had to pump it to get it to go again," said the relieved Yarborough moments after nursing the car to a one car-length victory over Harry Gant in the 500-mile race. Gant, who now has finished second 15 times in his Grand National career, said, "I thought I could pass him back, but we got hung up with a lapped car."...

MARATHON— Rafael Perez, a 35-year-old PE teacher from Costa Rica who already has qualified for the Olympic Games, won the Long Island Marathon Sunday in 2 hours, 23 minutes, 8 seconds, finishing nearly five minutes ahead of runner-up Steve Heinbockle of Huntington, N.Y., whose time was 2:28:00. Cherylik Clifton of Glen Cove, N.Y. was the first woman finisher, in 3:06:20...

Rick Sayre of Ashland, Ore., and Carol Raven of New Zealand won the 13th annual Vancouver International Marathon. Sayre, 30, took the lead from the start and captured the men's division in 2 hours, 16 minutes and 34 seconds over the 26-mile, 385-yard course which started and finished at B.C. Place Stadium. Raven, 27, sprinted the last 100 yards to catch Nancy McLaren of North Vancouver and win the women's division in 2:52:04. McLaren's time was 2:52:10...

TRACK— Carol Lewis, University of Houston junior who is the nation's top-ranked long jumper, says she will turn in her athletic scholarship after this season. Lewis, 20, plans to represent the Santa Monica Track Club, joining her brother, world No.1-ranked jumper Carl Lewis. The jumper, one of the harshest critics of the NCAA, said, "Everyone is scared of the NCAA. I could care less about the NCAA. I'm not going to compete for the NCAA after this semester, and I don't see where I'll be losing anything. I didn't want to compete this year. I don't see where the NCAA cares much about the athletes. At the TAC (The Athletic Congress) meets, the officials there know what they're doing," she said. "At Helsinki in the World Championships (last summer) everything was done that could be done to help the athletes. The NCAA seems more intersted in its own little world."...

HORSE RACING— A smoky fire in a horse barn about 75 feet from the backstretch forced the cancellation of racing Sunday after the eighth race at Suffolk Downs, and the evacuation of 6,937 patrons without injury from the grounds. All horses in the barn and grooms also were evacuated from the burning structure without injury. The fire was on the backside in the stable area, far removed from any patrons. There was no danger to any patrons. Racing was cancelled because the barn was relatively close to race track, about 75 feet, not close enough to burn racing surface, but enough to make conducting of a race unsafe...

BOXING— Osvaldo Ocasio of Puerto Rico waited until the 14th and 15th rounds to batter John Odhiambo of Uganda into submission and retain his WBA junior heavyweight title...

There were lots of golf bags to process during the MCC Partnership Invitational over the weekend as Big Spring's Don Osborne and Ron Broadrick won the championship flight.

Big Spring team wins MCC golf

From Wire Reports

Don Osborne and Ron Broadrick of Big Spring shot a final round 69 to win the Midland Country Club Invitational Partnership golf tournament by two strokes Sunday.

Ron Folk and Steve Thompson, Odessa, the leaders after 36 holes, skied to a 76 after opening rounds of 65-67 to finish with a 208 and slid to third place.

Osborne and Broadrick shot a 205 with steady rounds of 66-70-69 to beat out Randy Geiselman and Steve Whiteside, who shot a finishing 71 to move up from third place to second with a 207.

Kelly Cox and Robin Brunner were fourth with a 211. The third and fourth place teams were from MCC.

Sam Byrd and Mason Adkins finished with a 71-215 to hold off Craig Campbell-C.E. Boyd and Jim Cauthen-Andy Shapira, who finished at 216 in the President's flight.

In the first flight, Graham Mackey and Walter Locker, both Midland, shot 70-217 to win by three strokes while Robert and David Caudle took a two-stroke victory in the second flight with a 214.

Jim Crowder and John Young won the third flight by a whopping nine strokes, carding a final round 73 on the way to a 210. Ross and Reg Brunner shot a final round 75 for a 221 in the fourth flight.

Other flight winners were: Jim Davis-Pete Shipman, sixth; John Philbeck-Kerry Blair, seventh; W.B. Newberry-Bob Searles, eighth; Joe Plemons-Don Prosley, ninth; and C.Perry-T. Thomason, 10th.

Ailing Show afflicts Cubs

By Associated Press

Eric Show is sick, and it's contagious.

He's making the San Diego Padres' opponents sick, too.

Show, fighting a weeklong bout with a flu virus, became the National League's first five-game winner Sunday, working seven innings and driving in two runs as San Diego beat the Chicago Cubs 8-5.

"I came down with it before my last start, and I've really been feeling bad," Show said. "I wasn't real strong."

Show's previous start came last Tuesday in a 3-2 victory over Atlanta. The Padres right-hander has won three in a row, sustaining his last loss, 8-2, on April 20 to the Los Angeles Dodgers' Fernando Valenzuela.

Show allowed six hits, walked three and struck out three before he left for a pinch hitter in the eighth. Rich Gossage pitched the final two innings as the Padres ended a three-game losing streak.

National League

Astros 10, Mets 1

The Astros scored eight runs in the third inning as an anticipated strikeout duel between Nolan Ryan and Mets rookie Dwight Gooden fizzled early. Ryan pitched his first complete game, a six-hitter, but Gooden lasted only 2 1-3 innings after giving up eight runs on six hits.

Reds 5, Phillies 3

Dave Parker drove in two runs, including one with a broken-bat single that snapped a 3-3 tie in the eighth inning, enabling Cincinnati to beat Philadelphia. Parker's second RBI scored Gary Redus, who had singled, stole second and moved to third on a passed ball. Redus has 14 stolen bases in 14 attempts .

Tom Hume earned his third save by working out of a jam in the bottom of the eighth after rookie John Franco had given up a leadoff triple to Ozzie Virgil and walked Mike Schmidt. Schmidt hit a two-run homer in the third.

Steve Carlton, who hasn't won since opening day, lost for the second time.

Giants 3, Cardinals 2

Dusty Baker's seventh-inning triple drove in the winning run as the Giants swept the Cardinals in St. Louis for the first time since 1966. Jack Clark, who had homered and hit a sacrifice fly, started the seventh with a single and scored from first on Baker's hit.

Braves 2-9, Expos 0-8

Craig McMurtry and Steve Bedrosian combined on an eight-hitter to blank Montreal in the opener, and Atlanta wasted a 6-0 lead in the nightcap before rallying to win on a two-run single by Mike Jorgensen and Dale Murphy's inside-the-park homer.

McMurtry gave up six hits in 7 1-3 innings to post his third win in six decisions, and Gerald Perry accounted for both Atlanta runs when he tripled home a run in the fourth and scored on Murphy's RBI grounder.

Jorgensen's pinch single in the eighth rallied Atlanta to an 8-7 lead, and Murphy's sixth homer, which bounced off the top of the wall in left field, made it 9-7. That offset a solo homer by Tim Wallach in the bottom of the ninth.

Dodgers 6-1, Pirates 4-2

Terry Whitfield doubled in the tie-breaking run as Los Angeles scored twice in the 10th inning of the first game to end a five-game losing streak against the Pirates.

Mike Marshall led off the inning when he reached on third baseman Bill Madlock's error. Rafael Landestoy ran for Marshall, and Candy Maldonado got a bunt single. Steve Yeager forced Landestoy at third, and Whitfield doubled home Maldonado as Yeager went to third. Yeager scored on a bunt single by Dave Anderson.

In the second game, Lee Lacy singled to drive in the tie-breaking run in the ninth inning as John Tudor scattered seven hits to beat Fernando Valenzuela. Pinch hitter Hedi Vargas singled with one out to start the inning. Marvel Wynne, who had a string of eight straight hits broken earlier in the game, singled as pinch-runner Joe Orsulak went to third, setting the stage for Lacy.

A's Norris booked on drug charge

OAKLAND Calif. (AP) — Pitcher Mike Norris of the Oakland A's was arrested at an East Oakland motel and booked for investigation of drug charges Sunday, police said.

Norris, 29, who lives in Oakland, was booked for investigation of possessing cocaine, marijuana and paraphrenalia, according to officer Ray Viglienzone. He was also booked for investigation of possessing cocaine for sale.

Norris was released after posting $9,500 in bail, according to Jackie Johnson, bails and fines clerk.

A's President Roy Eisenhardt, who is a lawyer, said he knew nothing about the circumstances of the arrest and first heard about it from a reporter.

Incredible Tigers rally to go 22-4

By Associated Press

For a while, it looked as if the Cleveland Indians had the Detroit Tigers on the ropes.

The way the Tigers are playing this year, however, you can't count them out of any game.

Losing by five runs midway through Sunday's game, and trailing 5-1 going into the eighth inning, the Tigers rallied to tie it. Four innings later, they pulled out a 6-5, 12-inning victory to stretch their 1984 road record to an incredible 11-0.

"I can't say it was inevitable, but once we got the adrenalin flowing, we knew we had a good chance," said Dave Bergman, who doubled and scored the winning run in the 12th.

The victory improved the American League East leaders' record to 22-4, best in the major leagues.

American League

Blue Jays 2, Royals 1

Cliff Johnson's tie-breaking single in the ninth inning scored Jesse Barfield from second and lifted Toronto over Kansas City. Barfield started the ninth with a double high off the left field wall at Toronto's Exhibition Stadium against Kansas City starter Larry Gura, 4-1.

Red Sox 3, White Sox 1

Bruce Hurst pitched a two-hitter and Mike Easler belted two homers to pace Boston over Chicago.

Vance Law broke up Hurst's bid to throw the first no-hitter in Fenway Park since 1965 by lifting a 1-0 pitch into the left-field screen for his third homer as the leadoff batter in the eighth inning.

With two out in the eighth, Scott Fletcher grounded a single through the middle for the only other hit off Hurst, who struck out four and walked three in improving his record to 4-3.

Chicago's Floyd Bannister, 2-3, allowed only four hits over seven innings, but was outdueled on Easler's fourth and fifth homers of the year.

Twins 4, A's 3

In Minneapolis, two-run singles by Tim Teufel and Gary Gaetti in the fifth inning gave rookie Ed Hodge his first major league victory as Minnesota beat Oakland.

Yankees 8, Brewers 4

In Milwaukee, Andre Robertson's tie-breaking double triggered a four-run uprising in the 10th inning as New York beat Milwaukee and snapped a five-game losing streak.

Steve Kemp led off the 10th with a double off reliever Pete Ladd, 2-1. One out later, Robertson doubled to knock in Kemp, snapping a 4-4 tie, and Willie Randolph followed with an RBI-single.

Orioles 6, Rangers 1

Cal Ripken, Jr., hit for the cycle and Mike Boddicker pitched a five-hitter as Baltimore defeated Texas at Arlington Stadium.

Boddicker, 2-3, pitched his second complete game of the season while Frank Tanana, 2-4, took the loss.

Ripken tripled in the third inning, singled in the fifth, doubled in the seventh and homered in the ninth, his ninth of the year. The Orioles' shortstop knocked in two runs and scored twice in his 4-for-5 performance.

Mariners 3, Angels 1

Ed Vande Berg, making his first major league start, combined with Dave Beard on a five-hitter as host Seattle beat California.

Vande Berg, 2-1, previously had never worked more than four innings.

Stars triumph

The touchdown came after the visiting Blitz had pulled within 23-21 on Vince Evans' 6-yard TD pass to Larry Canada with 24 seconds left in the game.

On Monday night, Arizona is at New Orleans.

In Saturday games, John Reaves passed for 205 yards and two touchdowns as Tampa beat Jacksonville 31-13 before 71,174 fans in Jacksonville; Steve Young threw for 185 yards as Los Angeles stopped Pittsburgh 20-12; and Kevin Shea kicked a 27-yard field goal in overtime to lead Oakland past Denver 20-17.

Chuck Fusina passed for two touchdowns and David Trout kicked five goals to lead the Philadelphia Stars past the Birmingham Stallions 43-11.

The victory, before an announced crowd of 49,500 in Birmingham, raised the Atlantic Division-leading Stars to 10-1. The Southern Division-leading Stallions slipped to 9-2.

Amy Stewart, owner of Energy Plus Inc., says her small business is "the hardest boss" she's ever had.

Overcoming problems is joy of running a small business

By JULIE FAUBEL
Business-Oil Writer

SMALL BUSINESS PROFILE

Imagine that you're the owner of a permanent and temporary secretarial service during the oil boom of 1980. New offices springing up overnight and calling for help...now imagine your that same person, during the bust of 1983. For Amy Stewart, owner of Energy Plus Inc., located on the ground floor of Wall Towers West, its been the best of times and the worst of times.

Stewart, who had been a secretary for several years in Midland before buying the secretarial-temporary service business in November 1975, had no idea of what she had gotten herself into back then.

"Everybody has misconceptions that owning a business is easy — it's the hardest boss I've ever had."

Stewart said the most difficult aspect of owning a small business is the size and limitations of the staff which creates more demands on her time.

"There are so many things that only I can do such as banking, advertising, planning, to name a few."

Stewart said her early business education came from the time tested method of trial and error. However she also credits luck. "It's a lot of hard work but you can't deny the part luck plays."

Hard work and luck combined Stewart built her business from a secretarial-typing-phone answering service with billing of less than $100,000 to just under $1 million in 1982.

And then came the bust.

Stewart said the most difficult adjustment she and the company had to make during 1983 was trying to find a relatively painless way to cut back. While she said she noticed signs of the slow down in 1982, the cutbacks didn't come until 1983 when she had to layoff eight out of 14 employees. "They weren't wholesale layoffs though, laying people off or firing them is the hardest thing I've had to do since I've been in business."

However, Stewart is not one who gives up easily, because she is so conscious of the bottom line, she has taken the necessary steps to stabilize her business.

Being in a service business, Stewart said, she is extremely conscious of quality. "In order to ensure repeat business, what goes out that door must be quality, good work."

"I have to live here in this community and I don't want people talking about me or my business behind my back."

On a limited budget Stewart is not able to do a lot of advertising, therefore she relies on referrals. To ensure her repeat customers, she tries to offer them personal service and a quality product. She also encourages clients to work directly with the person doing their work instead of going through her. She also credits her staff for the company's success. "I'm nowhere without them. Perhaps I could do each job individually, but I am not six people."

Maintaining cash flow, recruiting and advertising toppped Stewart's list the problems associated with being self employed.

"Cash flow is always a problem in a service business because many times when you're working for a large company that has a system for paying invoices, you have to wait for the system to work and to get your money. Second, the lack of qualified or career-minded temporaries continues to be a problem. And third, a small business does not have the funds to dedicate to creative advertising and image building — but every once in awhile, you splurge."

Another problem Stewart mentioned about owning a small business is the lack of freedom to take time off.

Despite the problems, Stewart said being self-employed is very rewarding and "You feel good when things go well — there's a tremendous sense of accomplishment. And while you may not be able to take a lot of time off, you do get to make your own decisions."

Yet sometimes making your own decisions can be difficult, "Many times you agonize over your decisions trying to decide which way is best," she added.

In addition to her work, Stewart is also serving her second year as chairman of the Small Business Council of the Midland Chamber of Commerce. One reason she became involved with the council is because of her experiences in the business world. "I felt like I had a lot to tell about the school of hard knocks and I saw a way to help create a vehicle to help others benefit from my experiences."

Stewart is not really interested in seeing her company grow big again because, she believes, today's problems are directly related to the size of her company three years ago.

"I don't necessarily want to become that much bigger, I'm just looking for a few good companies," she said borrowing a phrase from the U.S. Marine Corp.'s recruiting ads. "While I'd like for the company to grow, I don't want to lose that hands-on participation."

"While I've been told many times and many different ways how I should run my business, I believe you need to run it with the personality or management philosophy that's best for you. If you need to run it hands-on then do it."

Shell makes giant oil find

HOUSTON (AP) — Shell Oil Co. is exploring a giant oil field in the Beaufort Sea that company officials say is one of the country's most promising oil prospects.

The Seal Island prospect off the Alaskan coast contains at least 100 million barrels of oil, company officials said, qualifying it as what industry experts term a "giant" field.

The discovery well is in the Beaufort Sea, 50 miles east of a dry hole drilled on the Mukluk prospect and five miles off the northern coast of Alaska, officials told the Houston Chronicle in an article published Sunday.

The prospect is the first Beaufort Sea discovery to be declared commercial, a term used in the industry to refer to a field that can be drilled profitably at current market prices.

Industry experts consider the Beaufort Sea one of the most promising oil and gas exploration frontiers in the country.

Only one-half of 1 percent of 40,000 wells drilled during the American oil industry's 125-year history are what experts call giants, fields that contain the equivalent of at least 100 million barrels of recoverable oil or natural gas.

The field, first disclosed by Shell in January, is about 12 miles northwest of the Prudhoe Bay oil field, the largest oil field in the nation and one of the world's 10 largest.

R.H. Howard, general manager of Shell's Rocky Mountain and Pacific divisions, said he doesn't expect the Seal Island prospect to match Prudhoe Bay's holdings.

The field also underlies leases owned by Amoco Production Co., Amerada Hess Corp. and Texas Eastern Exploration Co.

Howard said production may begin in eight to 10 years, but declined to estimate the cost of developing the find.

Expenses for the discovery well total $23 million so far, company officials said. Other exploratory costs included $32 million to build a gravel island and $122.6 million to lease eight blocks.

Initial tests by Shell showed oil flowing at rates between 600 and 5,000 barrels a day.

M.C. Forrest, exploration manager for Shell's Pacific frontier division, said it's "very rare" to drill a well that flows 5,000 barrels of oil a day.

"We know we have a good well," Forrest said. "This is the best well I have ever drilled, a world-class well. We don't know yet if it's a world-class field."

Seal Island is 12 miles northwest of the TransAlaska Pipeline System's first pump station, but the pipeline needed to connect it to the system must be built in waters that are covered by ice much of the year.

The gravel island was built in late 1981 and early 1982 using 700,000 cubic yards of gravel transported over a nine-foot thick ice road. About one-fourth of the 12.4 mile road lay on ice floating over water.

Steelworkers want import quotas

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's steelworkers and second largest steel producer are joining forces to press for a ceiling on imports in hearings this week before the U.S. International Trade Commission on how much foreign competition has hurt the industry.

Bethlehem Steel Corp. and the United Steelworkers union are seeking a five-year program to restrict foreign steel to 15 percent of the U.S. market, a goal the Reagan administration opposes, saying it could provoke retaliation from trading partners.

As interest in the hearings has grown, the commission has pressed the Commerce Department auditorium into service as a hearing room to accommodate an expected heavy turnout of industry representatives and elected officials.

Planned witnesses include Bethlehem Steel Chairman Donald Trautlein, union President Lynn Williams, Pittsburgh Mayor Richard Caliguiri, the governors of Indiana, Pennsylvania and Texas as well as a sizeable Capitol Hill contingent.

"The biggies are turning out," commission spokesman Hal Sundstrom said of the scheduled four days of hearings starting Wednesday on an omnibus complaint filed by Bethlehem and the union.

The hearings will help the commission determine whether steel imports are injuring Bethlehem Steel and the USW, as they maintain.

"Obviously the industry has been in trouble for a long time," Sundstrom said. "The question is, are the imports the substantial cause?"

Steel imports came to 17 million tons, or 20.5 percent of domestic U.S. sales, last year. Steelmakers lost $6 billion in 1982 and 1983. About 100,000 steelworkers are unemployed.

The House and Senate steel caucuses have sought to enact an import quota.

Low attendance for offshore conference

HOUSTON (AP) — Officials have made sure that the 1984 Offshore Technology Conference, which opens in Houston today, will be far less crowded than its 15 predecessors.

This year's three-day meeting will be for scientists, engineers and other industry professionals only, making attendance the lowest ever, OTS officials said.

The 11 industrial societies that sponsor OTC decided in 1981 that the event was becoming too large and the scientific papers presented during the conference weren't getting the attention they deserved.

Some exhibitors said the show was getting to expensive for them and didn't bring them enough sales to make their participation worthwhile. Several firms, such as Hughes Tool Co. and Dresser Industries Inc., withdrew their exhibits.

So, the sponsors decided to hold a scientific conference annually and a trade show in alternate years.

Total attendance this year is expected to be between 2,000 and 5,000, OTC spokeswoman Lisa Lowe said. More than 58,000 people attended last year's conference.

About 200 scientific papers will be presented at this year's OTC — about the same number as last year.

Dollar up; Gold falls

LONDON (AP) — The dollar jumped in early trading today, powered by predictions of sharply higher American interest rates. Gold prices fell back.

Dealers said investors were reacting to a prominent Wall Street economist's forecast of "spectacularly higher" interest rates. Henry Kaufman, chief economist at Salomon Bros. investment house, said most of the surge would come later this year and in 1985.

On Saturday, Martin Feldstein, chairman of the U.S. Council of Economic Advisers, was quoted by a French newspaper as agreeing that American interest rates would rise over the short term.

Higher U.S. interest rates increase the dollar's value as an investment.

Eurodollar deposit rates — interest paid on dollars held in Europe — were up 18 to 14 of a point today, dealers in Frankfurt said.

In Tokyo, the dollar began the day with a leap of 2.02 yen to a closing 228.05. That compares with 226.03 on Friday. Later today, when markets opened in Europe, it gained further to 228.20.

Other dollar rates at mid-morning, compared with late Friday:

–2.7564 West German marks, up from 2.71625.

–2.2700 Swiss francs, up from 2.2477.

–8.4545 French francs, up from 8.3475.

–3.0990 Dutch guilders, up from 3.0565.

–1,703.25 Italian lire, up from 1,680.50.

–1.29430 Canadian dollars, up from 1.29125.

Silver was quoted in Zurich at a bid price of $8.78 an ounce.

Stock market loses

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was narrowing its losses but remained slightly lower through morning trading today.

Telephone and mining issues retreated, while chemical and computer stocks moved ahead.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off 16.22 on Friday, recovered 1.88 to 1,167.19 after two hours of trading today. The measure had opened with a loss of nearly 4 points.

Declines held a 7-6 lead over advances on the New York Stock Exchange, but the NYSE's composite index edged up 0.07 to 91.82.

Big Board volume totaled 34.79 million shares at noon EDT, against 46.08 million at that hour Friday.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was unchanged at 212.21.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Widow gets penalty for quarterly tax bills

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I'm a 78-year-old widow and have always paid my income tax in one sum when it was due in April, as my late husband did. I am now being billed for not paying in estimated quarterly installments, which would be a hardship for me. I make out my own income tax return and do not want to be forced to hire a tax preparer.

My only taxable income is interest from bank accounts and bonds. My income tax usually is only a few hundred dollars. I don't think it's fair to penalize people in my circumstances for paying their taxes in one sum. What do you say?

A. Ma'am, I agree. It can be a chore to fill out the estimated tax worksheet on Form 1040-ES and send in quarterly payment vouchers, along with the tax due. Nonetheless, that's one of the requirements of this country's income tax system.

However, if your total federal income tax amounts to only "a few hundred dollars," here's some good news for you.

If the amount of tax you owe next April is less than $400, you don't have to make estimated quarterly payments for 1984. For 1985 and thereafter, that "threshold" will be $500. It was $300 for 1983, $200 for 1982 and $100 for 1981 and previous years.

The rules call for anyone whose tax liability is higher than the threshold to make quarterly estimated payments. It is a hardship for lots of people — of all ages. But the Internal Revenue Service is charged with collecting taxes. If you don't make the quarterly payments as due, you're slapped with a penalty.

• • •

Q. Income tax is withheld from my salary, but I have interest, dividends and other income that I cannot possibly estimate with accuracy. What method in the world can I use to make quarterly estimated federal income tax payments, so I won't be stuck with a penalty for underpayments?

A. There are four methods available. Make sure the tax you pay through withholding and-or quarterly estimates is at least equal to: 1. The tax shown on the previous year's return; 2. The tax on last year's income using this year's rates and personal exemptions; 3. Eighty percent of the tax computed by annualizing taxable income; 4. Ninety percent of the tax figured at current rates on taxable income for the period ending before the month in which the installment is due.

The first method is, far and away, the easiest. As long as the total tax you pay during this year is no lower than the tax you paid last year, you're home free — without penalty. From your 1983 return, you know what tax you paid for that year.

• • •

Q. The Internal Revenue Service has advised me I owe tax and penalties on dividends I supposedly received in 1981 from stocks at a brokerage house where I have an account. I didn't get any dividend income from that brokerage that year or any other year.

Each time I call my broker, I'm told they are looking into this matter. I wrote the IRS, requesting a letter naming the stocks from which they say I received dividends. No answer. Where do I go from here?

A. Sit tight. Assuming the brokerage house didn't collect any dividends for you, you're the victim of a computer error. It's up to the brokerage to get things squared away. Lean harder on your broker and get a statement of your account for the full year 1981.

However, if the brokerage held stocks for you and credited to your account dividends it collected on those stocks, you do indeed owe tax on those dividends. You and, based on the mailbag, some other people seem to think that, because they never took out of their brokerage accounts dividends brokers collected for them, they didn't have taxable dividend income.

Not so. When a brokerage collects dividends on stocks it holds for you and credits those dividends to your account, you have taxable dividend income.

Q. You answered a letter from a reader who said he has $100,000 in a rollover individual retirement account. I didn't know IRAs had been in existence long enough for anyone to accumulate that much. How can that person have $100,000 in an IRA?

A. Because he has a ROLLOVER IRA, which he established by putting the proceeds from his retirement plan into an IRA. Anyone who receives a lump-sum distribution of his or her employer's contribution to a "tax-qualified" pension, profit-sharing or other retirement plan can put it into a rollover IRA and keep that money sheltered from income tax until it is withdrawn.

That's been the rule since 1974, when IRAs were authorized by the Employee Retirement Income Security Act. Some people receive $100,000 or more as lump sum distributions from retirement plans. So, it's not unusual for those fortunate folks to have large rollover IRAs.

Until 1982, regular IRAs were available only to working people who were not in any other retirement plan. Those who qualified could put 15 percent of earned income or $1,500 a year into an IRA — $1,750 in a spousal IRA, if only one spouse worked.

Beginning with 1982, those annual IRA contribution limits were raised to 100 percent of earned income or $2,000 — $2,250 for a spousal IRA.

• • •

Q. During my working years, I put 3 percent of my salary into my company's savings plan. The company matched my contribution. When I retired, I left the money to accumulate. It now totals $40,000, of which I contributed $10,000 in after-tax dollars. The balance represents the company's contribution, plus interest.

I am told if I take the total amount out of the savings plan, $30,000 will be subject to income tax. Can I transfer the entire $40,000 into an individual retirement account at a local savings and loan association? If so, how do I proceed and what would be the tax consequences?

A. You can put all or part of the $30,000 into a rollover IRA at a S&L or any other IRA sponsor. You won't have to pay income tax on the money you roll over.

Before 1983, you had to put all of an employer's contribution plus interest from a retirement plan into a rollover IRA to avoid a tax bite. Now, you can roll over only part of that money into an IRA. Of course, you'll have to pay income tax on the portion of your employer's contribution you don't roll over.

You can't roll over the $10,000 you put into the savings plan. There would be no good reason to do that, anyway. You have already paid tax on that money. It you put it in an IRA, you would have pay tax on it again.

The easy way to accomplish what you have in mind is to go to the S&L and sign the necessary papers to move the $30,000 from the company savings plan to a rollover IRA at the S&L. Every IRA sponsor has such papers ready and waiting.

You could withdraw the money from the company savings plan, take possession of it and then put it in a rollover IRA. However, you would have to do that within 60 days after receiving the money. If you wait any longer, you'll have to pay income tax on the money.

• • •

Q. I have my individual retirement account at a bank, in savings certificates that are about to mature. When I roll the certificates over into new certificates, will this be a rollover IRA?

A. No. You'll simply be renewing your certificates. Even though the word "rollover" often is used when one certificate matures and the proceeds from it are put in a new certificate, that's not a "rollover IRA." You'll maintain your present IRA the same place you now have it.

"Rollover IRA" means taking money out of a pension or other retirement plan and putting it in an IRA.

• • •

Q. Dividend checks from stocks I own always reach me on or before the dividend payment dates. Interest checks from my bonds invariably reach me a couple of days later. Why?

A. We have to be realistic about this. Stockholders are a company's owner. No corporate management in its right mind wants to alienate the owners.

A bond is a debt security. As a bondholder, you are a creditor. A bond issuer meets its obligation to bondholders by making interest available at the office of the paying agent on the interest payment dates. When interest checks are mailed, they might reach you later.

Lasers may be used to give acupuncture

Dear Dr. Solomon: When I think of acupuncture, I think of needles. But now I hear that lasers are being used for this purpose. How can lasers be used to give acupuncture treatments? — Douglas, Tarrytown, New York

Dear Douglas: Lasers may be used to stimulate tissue in a similar manner to that produced by acupuncture needles. Some physicians in the United States use laser acupuncture to treat pain as well as emotional problems such as anxiety and depression. In addition, Chinese researchers have reported using the technique in the treatment of schizophrenia.

One advantage of laser acupuncture, if it is shown to be effective in the treatment of emotional disorders, is that it is free of drug side effects.

Dear Dr. Solomon: You once wrote that older people may lose some of their sense of taste and sense of smell. Could age be the reason this is happening in a 64-year-old man? — Mrs. T.W., Minneapolis, Minn.

Dear Mrs. W.: It is true that normal aging can cause some alteration in a person's sense of taste and smell, but this is not the only reason and I would not assume it to be. Viral infections and head injuries, for example, as well as cancer and dental problems may also be the cause.

I would suggest the person see a physician for a complete evaluation before aging is considered to be the reason a 64-year-old man is experiencing some alteration in his sense of smell or the sense of taste.

Dear Dr. Solomon: A niece of mine either has anorexia or seems to be on her way to it in my opinion. She is as thin as a rail but still worries that she's a little too hippy. The only reason I think I may be wrong is that she eats good foods. She stays away from sweets and would never think of eating junk foods, and generally has what I think you would call a well-balanced diet. The only trouble is that I eat in one small meal what she eats all day long. Is this anorexia or just a case of being careful with a diet? — Mrs. D.W., Trenton, N.J.

Dear Mrs. W.: Some patients with anorexia appear to follow the pattern you describe. That is, they select foods that generally would make for a nutritious, well-balanced diet, but they severely limit the amount of calories they have.

I cannot say that your niece does or does not have anorexia, but your description of her eating habits would not automatically rule it out.

For Frank, Babylon, Long Island, New York: a person with bronchial asthma should check with his or her physician before participating in athletic activities. In general, however, the problems a patient may encounter depend on the type of activity. Continuous motion sports, such as running, tend to cause the most problems, while swimming seems to cause the least. Sports such as baseball, where the motion is not continuous, fall midway between the others.

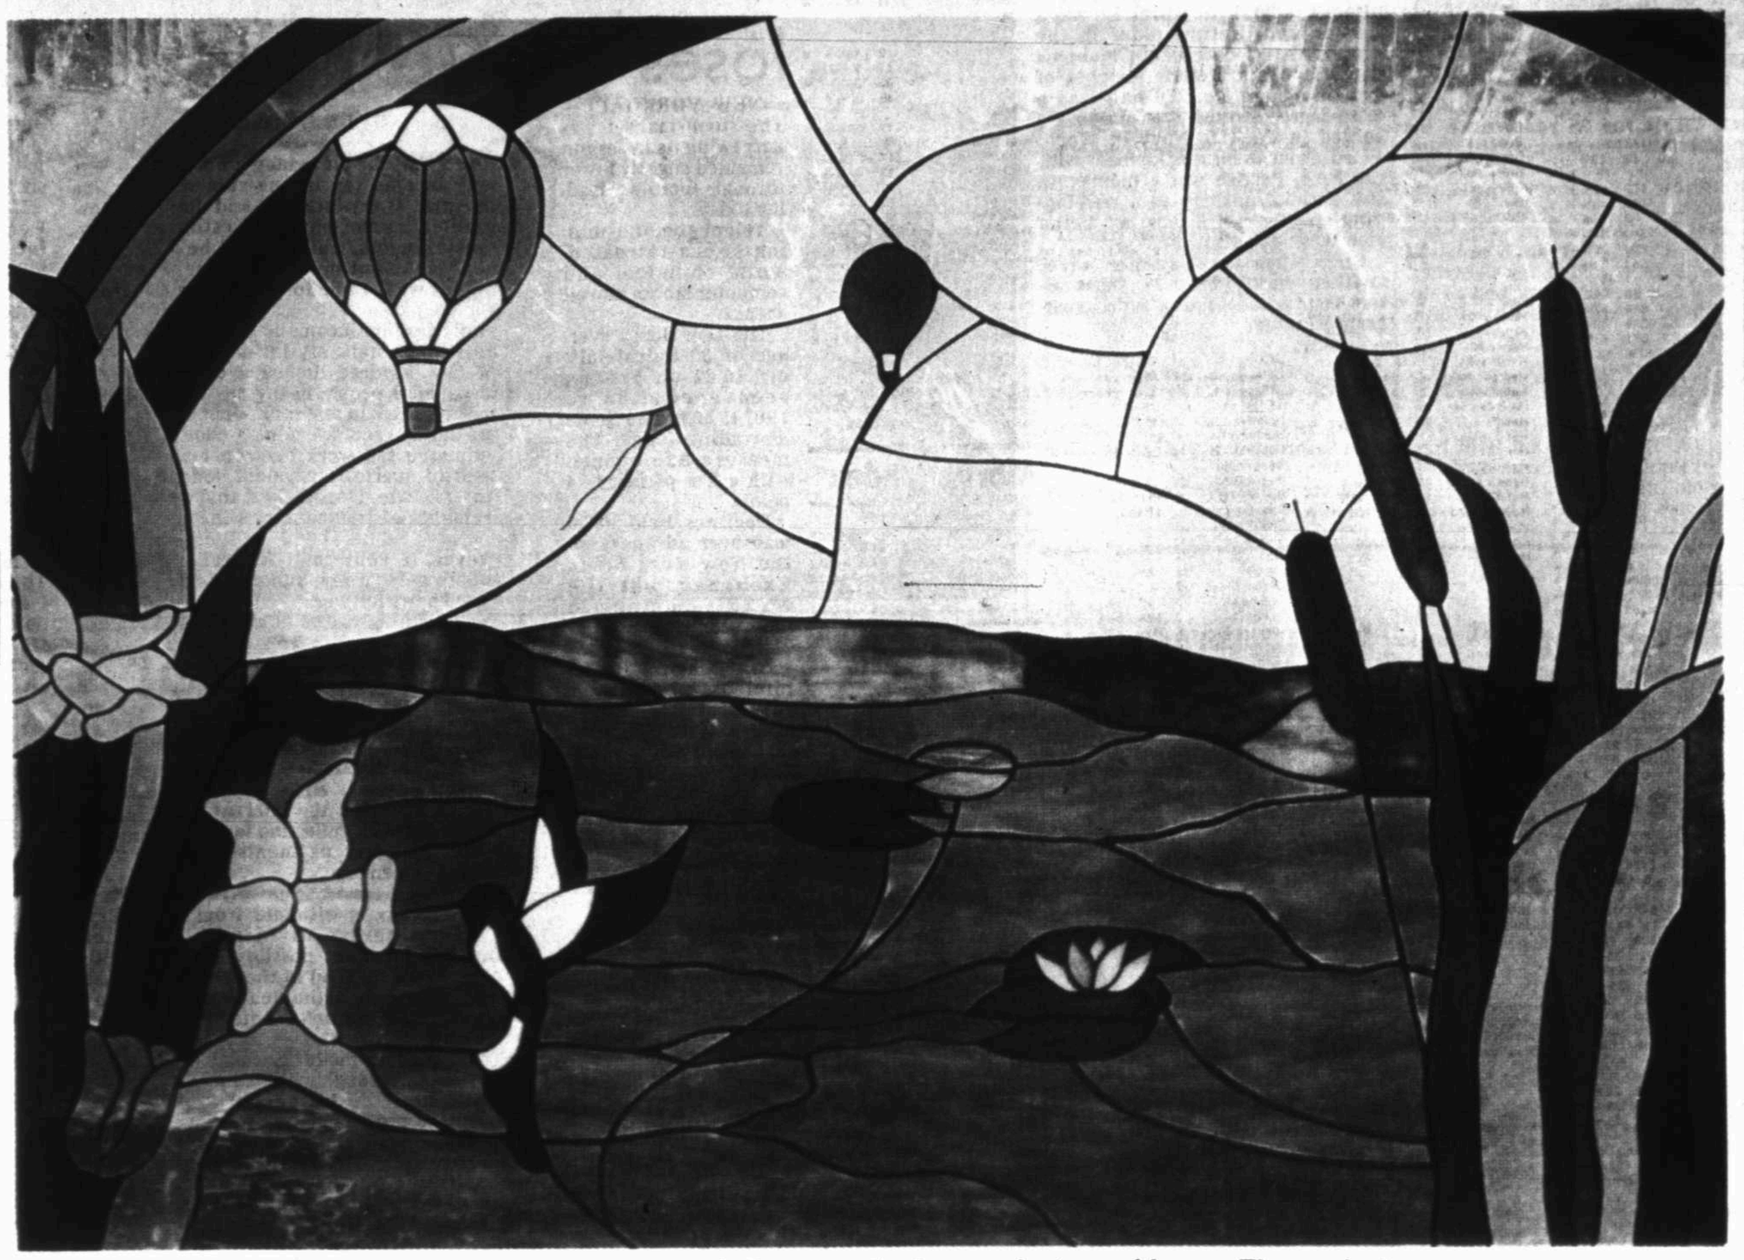
Stained glass



This is one of a series of three windows made for a private residence. The project took three months to complete and contains 1,100 pieces of glass.

Joyce Low looks at her job through rose-colored glass — and virtually every other color glass imaginable.

What began as a hobby seven years ago has grown into a busy and profitable glass-working business. And she has advanced from stained glass to custom beveling, sandblasting, glass painting and glass restoration.

"Stained glass is just a first love for me, and I guess that's why I never tire of it," she said. "I'm always ready to start on the next one once one is finished."

Her prices start at $70 per square foot, and may go as high as $120 depending on the intricacy of the work and type of glass used. "Stained glass is so expensive because it's time consuming," she explained. "There's a lot of do-it-yourselfers out there that skip a lot of important steps."

Oversimplified, the job begins by drawing a design. Ms. Low minored in art at college. On some windows, she spends as much time making the design and the pattern as she does on the project.

A life-sized pattern is drawn and rubber-cemented to the glass, and she cuts around it freehand. The colored glass is prepared industrially by adding metal oxides to it. Ms. Low takes several things into consideration when selecting what type of glass to use — color, translucency, texture, thickness — whether to use handblown or machinemade, where and how it will be used.

This 500-year-old French panel is one of Joyce Low's restoration projects.

Once the piece is cut, the edges of the glass are smoothed with a grinder and the fragments are pieced together like a jigsaw puzzle. A strip of lead is laid between the pieces and molded to fit them, then soldered at the joints.

If the panel is to be used as a window or door she finishes by caulking, weatherproofing and reinforcing with steel bars.

"It's very messy work," she said, adding she has never completed a project without cutting herself.

The color photo pictured is one of a series of three panels. Ms. Low said it took her about three months to complete the project — half the time was spent making the pattern, which she is copyrighting. The windows contain about 1,100 pieces of glass.

She also does sandblasting, or glass carving. Again she makes a pattern and then recreates it in glass. Varying the depth of the cut gives the image dimension and texture. It's painstaking work, and one slip can ruin a project.

She has made more than 100 windows and doors over the past six years, she said. That doesn't include many more mirrors, suncatchers and other products. She has even been contracted to make stained glass windows for miniature dollhouses. The cost for a 5- by 1½-inch window is about $40.

Ms. Low said a beginner can start with a $100 investment. She has about $5,000 worth of tools and equipment.

"The first year I worked my tail off and sat down and cried because I didn't make a penny. And it's been all uphill from there. But business is good. We've worked hard to get where we're at."

Now there's plenty of demand for her services, Ms. Low said. She had to hire a full-time assistant to keep up. She does private as well as commercial work.

Oddly enough, her home has little glass work in it. "What I do have sells."

Once the glass fragments are pieced together they are held in place by a strip of lead molded to fit them. The joints are then soldered.

Ms. Low polishes off one of 21 custom-beveled windows she is preparing for a Midland homeowner.

Totals finally in for Ector County races

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Ector County's vote counting finally ended at about 2:30 a.m. Sunday, with the outcome of only one county race changing from interim results released.

Former Odessa policeman J.D. "Jesse" Sharp saw his victory snatched from the jaws of defeat, losing on the final boxes counted to Joe Commander, son of Pct. 1 Constable John Commander, who also won in the Democratic primary.

The younger Commander will face competition again in November, this time from GOP nominee Martin Stringer for the Precinct 3 Constable's spot. The elder Commander has no GOP opponent.

In other contested primary races, Acting County Attorney Gary Garrison was victorious in the Democratic primary and has no GOP competitor.

Tax Assesor-Collector Lea Taylor defeated former employee Juanita Rogers and faces no competition in November.

Incumbent Precinct 1 Commissioner David Childers triumphed over salesman Vic Williford and faces businessman Bill Tolbert, who defeated horse breeder and businessman Charlie Whilete in the GOP primary, in the presidential election.

Former Sheriff's Deputy Kenneth Turner out-totaled his two Democratic opponents combined to avoid a run-off. Turner will face Sheriff Bob Brookshire in November.

Final totals in GOP Ector County primaries were:

Severe economic damage predicted

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — West Texas farmers and ranchers say that a two-year drought has cost them nearly $1 billion and the problem could get worse if the region's rich topsoil continues to erode.

"Out here, we're just sitting on our tractors gripping the steering wheel," Lubbock County Extension Agent Randy Upshaw told the Dallas Times Herald. "And waiting for rain."

Half of Texas' 186,000 farm and ranch families are already in financial trouble after five years of the worst agricultural recession since the 1930s. And more than half of Farmers Home Administration loans in state are considered delinquent.

Agricultural officials said a third dry and barren year lies ahead in western sections of the state and much of South and Central Texas. Another summer of drought could force significant numbers of farmers over the financial edge into bankruptcy, economists said.

Rainfall in April, customarily the state's third wettest month, fell behind normal.

In some cases, only one-fourth of normal precipitation has fallen this year. Dry winds are carrying away millions of acres of topsoil.

"Once you begin forecasting beyond five to seven days, you don't do much better than you would flipping a coin," said George Bomar, a meteorologist with the Texas Department of Water Resources.

Last fall, the drought caused at least $500 million in damage to 30 counties in the Trans Pecos area, which runs south of a line from El Paso to Midland.

Officials said the losses contributed to the state's declining net farm income, which totaled about $800 million last year, compared with $42 billion in 1979.

Fred Lundgren, special assistant to Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower, said the drought by now has probably cost West Texas twice its 1983 losses, or about $1 billion.

He said 82 West Texas counties are eligible for federal disaster loans, available in areas where at least one-third of agricultural production was wiped out. Federal officials said many counties suffered even greater losses.

"Farmers are deep into their second year of drought... (and) Texas has had some of the most severe wind damage of any of the Great Plains states," said Claiborn Crain, agriculture coordinator with the Texas Office of State-Federal Relations in Washington, D.C.

The USDA Soil Conservation Service reports that 1.3 million acres of Texas land was damaged by wind erosion in January and February, the most recent months for which figures were available. During 1983, 1.8 million acres were damaged during the entire year.

Violinist wins contest

DALLAS (AP) — Violinist Michaela Paetsch of Philadelphia won the Dallas Morning News G.B. Dealey Awards string competition on Sunday.

Ms. Paetsch won $7,500 in cash and a solo appearance with the Dallas Symphony Orchestra during the 1985-1986 season.

The two other finalists in the competition, which was established in 1931 by the late publisher of the Dallas Morning News, were Peter Wiley, a 28-year-old cellist form Cincinnati, and 21-year-old Sara Sant'Ambrogio, a cellist from New York. They finished second and third, respectively.

Ms. Paetsch, born in Colorado Springs, Colo., began playing the violin at age 3 and was taught by her mother for 15 years. She currently is studying with Szymon Goldberg at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia.

Two suspects arrested at church

From Staff Reports

Two burglary suspects were in custody today after their arrest early this morning at the Terrell Church of God in Christ, 1605 N. Terrell.

Being held in the city jail pending the filing of formal charges were a 45-year-old East Jefferson Street man and a 32-year-old East Pennsylvania Avenue man.

Police said they received a call about 4:20 a.m. today from a church deacon who said he heard noises in the building. The building was surrounded and police dogs aided in apprehending the suspects, who were arrested without incident.

In a burglary complaint, Greta Kinsley of 2404 Elizabeth said a TV set, stereo equipment and a large amount of furniture and household goods were among the items taken in a break-in of her residence over the weekend.

Total loss was placed at $19,000. There was no sign of forced entry, according to police.

MMH celebrating Hospital Week

Midland Memorial Hospital joins with hospitals across the state in celebrating Texas Hospital Week through Saturday.

Thousands of health care professionals across the state have committed their lives to caring for others and work to promote the well-being of Texans. These health care professionals are dedicated to providing each community with the best possible care in necessary and critical times.

MMH salutes those who are committed to the caring cause during Texas Hospital Week. Join the celebration and commend those who prove every day that Texas hospitals are the caring kind.

Murder charges expected to be filed

From Staff Reports

Formal murder charges are expected to be filed today in the wake of an early morning shooting that claimed the life of a Baird Street resident.

Pronounced dead at Midland Memorial Hospital by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine was 27-year-old Lee Roy Ellis Jr. of 932 N. Baird. Police said he had been shot five times in the chest with a .22 caliber handgun that was recovered at the scene.

The shooting occurred during a domestic argument at the residence shortly after midnight. A 28-year-old woman was taken into custody and was being held in city jail pending the filing of murder charges in the case.

Services for Ellis are pending at the Thomas Funeral Home.

Beta Sigma Phi celebration honors 'Girls of the Year'

The 53rd anniversary of Beta Sigma Phi was celebrated recently with a Founders' Day banquet at the Petroleum Club. Founded by Walter W. Ross on April 30, 1931, the organization has grown from one chapter of seven women to 250,000 women in chapters in 32 countries. Midland has 13 chapters serving the community with service projects.

At the celebration 14 women were honored as Girls of the Year:

Beverly Acker, chosen Girl of the Year by Xi Alpha Mu, has been a member for 12 years. She has been City Council president, chapter president, vice-president, treasurer and corresponding secretary. She was City Council Girl of the Year and Sweetheart. Employed by the Department of Human Resources, she has two daughters, Lisa and Dawn.

Leona Armentrout was selected Girl of the Year by Preceptor Alpha Omega. She joined Beta Sigma Phi four years ago as fellowship member. She has held various offices and chaired several committees, and currently serves as treasurer. Leona and husband James have two children, James and Debbie, and three grandchildren.

Marlyn Butler, Girl of the Year for Preceptor Epsilon Delta, has been a member of Beta Sigma Phi for 17 years. She has been president, vice-president, recording secretary and corresponding secretary. She has been Sweetheart, Girl of the Year and has received the order of the Rose. She and husband Oland have two sons.

Jan Dorsey was chosen Girl of the Year by Beta Delta. A member for eight years, she has served on all committees and held several offices. She was president of her chapter this year.

Genell Emerson, Preceptor Eta Upsilon's Girl of the Year, has held all major offices and chaired several committees and has been Girl of the Year several times. Currently she is chapter president.

Darla Fisher was selected Girl of the Year by Mu Psi. A member for four years, she was involved in the sanctioned Annual Soccer Tournament for the Permian Basin. She has served on all committees and held all offices, and is current chapter president. Married to Jerry Fisher, she and her husband are parents of Michael and Charisea.

Anne Fox, chosen Girl of the Year by Xi Epsilon Epsilon, has been a member four years. She has served as corresponding secretary, treasurer and vice-president. Anne and husband Tom have one child, Ricky.

Jeanie Jewell, named Girl of the Year by Xi Pi Kappa, has been a member of Beta Sigma Phi for 10 years. She has held every office and chaired every committee and has been Girl of the Year and Sweetheart. She is currently chapter president. Jeanie and husband Arnold have two children.

Margie Lannine, Xi Chi Xi's Girl of the Year, pledged the organization in 1974. She was instrumental in the organization of the chapter, and has held every office and chaired every committee. She was chosen Girl of the Year in 1980 and Sweetheart in 1977. She is current chapter vice-president, advisor, scrapbook chairman and membership chairman. She attends Midland College and plays handbells at Midland Lutheran Church. Margie and husband Rick have four children, Chris, Jeff, Sarah and Tessa.

Mollie Lea, Girl of the Year for Psi Phi, pledged Beta Sigma Phi in 1982. She has been treasurer and ways and means chairman. Selected Pledge of the Year in 1983, she will be chapter vice-president in 1984-85. She and husband Mike have a son John.

Gloria Livingston was chosen Girl of the Year by Xi Phi Zeta. She has been president and treasurer and is currently City Council treasurer. She and husband Jim are parents of Tobie and Jamey.

Terri Ramsey, Girl of the Year for Iota Beta, has served as social chairman and member of yearbook, scrapbook, program and telephone committees. She is the chapter's vice-president-elect for 1984-85. She and husband Art Ramsey have two children, Kristy and John.

Donna Smith was named Girl of the Year by Alpha Phi Mu. She has been vice-president, corresponding secretary, treasurer and Sweetheart, and in 1984-85 will be her chapter's president. She has two children.

Alice Williams was chosen Girl of the Year for City Council of Beta Sigma Phi. A member for the sorority for 20 years, she is a member of Preceptor Eta Upsilon chapter and has held every office and chaired every committee. She has been Girl of the Year and Sweetheart. She is current City Council president.

DEAR ABBY

Woman's boyfriend one 'son' too many

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 29-year-old divorced mother of two boys. I own my own home and am presently involved with a 20-year-old man. We've been living together for two years. It was my idea that he move in. He wanted to marry me, but I hesitated because of one failed marriage.

He's very intelligent, responsible for his age and is great with my kids, but he shows his immaturity by constantly flirting and collecting girls' phone numbers.

Last week I wasn't feeling very well so I came home early. I let myself in, and when I went into our bedroom I found him in bed with a young girl. (Both our pictures had been turned facedown on the dresser!) The girl said she was sorry — she didn't know he was "married" and she had just met him an hour ago! I told him to pack his clothes and get out.

He's been gone a week and wants to come back. This is not the first time something like this has happened. He lies and can't be trusted. Do you think the difference in our ages has anything to do with this? I miss him. Should I take him back? He's good in bed. — CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED: He should be good in bed. He's probably had a lot of practice. I think the difference in your ages has a lot to do with it. He's still a little boy who needs mothering. You need a man, not another son. Don't let him come back. He's using you.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 33-year-old single woman who has chosen to remain childless even if I decide to marry.

Needless to say, many people (including my mom) make me feel guilty about my decision. They say that one day when I'm old and alone, I will regret not having children and grandchildren.

Sorry, I just can't buy that line of thinking. How can I shut people up when they start harping on this subject? It's beginning to get on my nerves. — NO KIDS, THANK YOU

DEAR NO KIDS: First, nobody can make you feel guilty. If you feel guilty, it's because you choose to. You can't shut people up, but you can abruptly change the subject, tune the bores out or absent yourself from their company.

DEAR ABBY: "Mrs. D., Libertyville, Ill.," wrote: "I've enjoyed your column for many years. It was so witty, with just the right answers to some very real problems. Will you please return to those days and skip all the lectures and sermons you've been running of late? Also, please let the Food and Drug Administration buy space in the newspapers and medical journals to warn people about combining drugs with certain foods."

Abby, I think Mrs. D. is out of line. Be that as it may, when Fiorello La Guardia was mayor of New York City, he hung above his desk at City Hall this pronouncement by Abraham Lincoln:

"If I were to try to read, much less answer, all the attacks made on me, this shop might as well be closed for any other business. I do the very best I know how — the very best I can, and I mean to keep doing so until the end. If the end brings me out all right, what is said against me won't amount to anything. If the end brings me out wrong, 10 angels swearing I was right would make no difference." — ARTHUR H. PRINCE

(Do you wish you had more friends? Get Abby's booklet, "How to Be Popular — You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Abby, Popularity, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Book review club to meet

Study: Hidden cost of smoking $3 a pack

BOSTON (AP) — An extra tax of $3 on every pack of cigarettes would be needed to recover all the medical expenses and lost wages caused by smoking-related illnesses in the United States, researchers contend.

A study released found that a man between the ages of 35 and 44 who smokes more than two packs a day will cost an average $58,987 over his lifetime in cigarette-related medical bills and lost work.

The cost for a woman in this category is $20,152, largely because of lower projected earnings for women.

The figures were compiled by health economists who calculated the hidden costs of smoking. The figures are averages for all smokers, not just those who get sick.

"We likened every smoker to a gambler," said the study director, Gerry Oster. "And we wanted to estimate the likely amount of money that every smoker should expect to lose in the lottery that he or she is playing with his or her life."

Some of these smoking costs are paid by non-smokers in the form of higher insurance premiums and Medicare costs. A higher tax on cigarettes, Oster said, would require smokers to pay all their medical bills and make up the earnings that they would have contributed if they'd avoided the habit.

"These cost estimates do not imply that every smoker will get lung cancer, coronary heart disease or emphysema," Oster said. "This takes the costs for those smokers who do develop the diseases and spreads them across all smokers."

The study was conducted at Policy Analysis Inc., a Brookline, Mass., firm that researches health-cost issues, and it was released Monday at a meeting of the American College of Cardiology in Dallas.

Oster said that the estimates are probably low, because they considered only smoking's contribution to lung cancer, heart disease and emphysema. Smokers also face higher-than-usual risks of other kinds of cancer and lung disease.

Nato vs. Warsaw Pact

One reason for the Reagan Administration's push for a defense buildup has been the unequality between Nato and Warsaw Pact forces stationed in Europe. Here are how they compare:

Norway ponders defense of coastline

OSLO, Norway (AP) — A surprise visit by a huge Soviet war fleet off Norwegian shores has highlighted a problem increasingly on the minds of this country's politicians and public: it's difficult, perhaps impossible, to defend 13,000 miles of fiord-shredded coast.

NATO's only member besides Turkey sharing a frontier with the Soviet Union, Norway has been reexamining its military forces in a five-year orientation plan for 1984-88.

In Pentagon strategy, and that of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, a powerful Norway is indispensible to the protection of Europe's northern flank and the ocean gap between Greenland and Britain.

NATO's Atlantic command headquarters in Norfolk, Va., has called mastery of the North Atlantic waters off Norway a "No. 1 priority" to prevent Soviet submarines and surface ships from reaching the open seas.

Last month's exercise in those same waters by a Soviet armada of scores of surface ships, submarines and aircraft showed the interest the Kremlin's admirals also take in them. Michael McGwire, author of a treatise on Soviet naval power, said the Norwegian Sea "has moved from being nice-to-have to need-to-have" for the Soviets in case of war.

At the center of the discussion over Norwegian defense is the growing realization that this nation of 4 million people hugging the Scandinavian coast may no longer be able to count on a "people under arms" or citizens' militia to defend itself in the nuclear age.

With the price of an F-16 jet fighter topping $10 million, Norway has had to choose between preserving military tradition — including large reserve units and a pack horse company — and buying costly hardware.

Oslo's military planners, said Knut Frydenlund, chairman of the Defense Committee in the Storting (parliament), face "a choice between quality and quantity." To renew its fighter squadrons alone would cost almost 70 percent of the investment budget.

Norway is preoccupied with defense because of its location. Less than 60 miles east of the Norwegian frontier lie the massive military concentrations of the Soviet Union's Kola Peninsula.

NATO intelligence estimates that naval bases near Murmansk and Pechenga, both on the peninsula, are the ice-free homes for 60 percent of the Soviet war fleet, more than 300 naval aircraft, 195 attack submarines and two motorized infantry divisions.

Sixteen airstrips are kept at varying degrees of readiness on Kola, along with "one of the world's largest concentrations" of nuclear weapons, according to Norwegian defense reports.

Against this massed might, Norway can mobilize only 325,000 men and women, armed in large part only with rifles. In the event of war, reinforcements would have to come from abroad.

Norway under attack would be aided by sealifts and airlifts of troops from as far away as Canada, the United States and Italy.

Turkey under fire by European activists

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — Turkey remains under the fire of human-rights activists in Western Europe because its military leadership has failed to lift martial law after the election of a civilian administration last November.

But many Turkish civilian leaders are appealing for patience from the critics, asking for the chance to show that the civilian arrangement will work.

Turgut Ozal, a civilian, took over as premier in November, as the result the first elections since the September 1980 military coup that pulled the country back from the brink of anarchy. The military leader of the coup remains on as president of the country.

Among the foremost criticisms is the allegation that inmates, many of them rounded up in the martial-law crackdown on leftist and rightist extremists, have been tortured and mistreated in Ankara's Mamak Prison and a prison in Diyarbakir in eastern Turkey.

Christian Rostoker, assistant secretary-general of the International Federation of the Rights of Man, charged in Paris on April 18 that in giving aid to Turkey the United States is "financing another gulag," a reference to Soviet prison-camp system.

The human rights leader spoke at a news conference attended by Dr. Francois Martin, a French physician who had just returned from Turkey, claiming to have proof of the torture of prisoners in the Mamak and Diyarbakir facilities.

Demonstrators from Paris, Switzerland, Austria and West Germany are scheduled to start arriving in Strasbourg, France, Monday to protest the alleged human rights abuses in Turkey. Strasbourg is the headquarters of the Council of Europe, which has been debating whether Turkey, a nation of 50 million people, merits continued membership in the organization.

Ozal has set up a high-level commission to study prison conditions; martial-law authorities dismiss the allegations of widespread torture and mistreatment as propaganda.

Last November's elections also have come in for criticism abroad.

Some European critics say they do not consider civilian rule fully restored here because only three political parties, out of 15 new ones set up, were allowed by the military to field candidates in elections. Martial law continues in 54 out of 67 provinces, including in the major centers of Ankara and Istanbul.

The Council of Europe, for example, contends that the elections were undemocratic because of the military's role in the campaign. The military chiefs openly supported the Nationalist Democracy Party of Turgut Sunalp, a retired army general. The party placed third in the balloting.

Jackson gives mom Rolls Royce for birthday

Michael Jackson

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — "You could feel the love in that room," as rock superstar Michael Jackson gave his mother, Katherine, a red Rolls-Royce with a white ribbon on it for her birthday, pianist Floyd Cramer said.

Cramer flew in from Nashville to perform at the surprise party Saturday at the request of Jackson, 25.

"About three weeks ago, Michael called me up to say that they were planning this surprise party for their mother, and that I was her favorite recording artist," Cramer said Sunday in Los Angeles.

About 50 people were at the "very private family affair," at the Bistro Garden, including "all the children, the father, Joe Jackson, the grandchildren," said Frank Rogers, Cramer's manager, who also attended.

Cramer, known for his "slip-note" piano style, said he rehearsed with Michael Jackson about an hour before the party. Cramer played one of his biggest hits, "Last Date," and did a duet with Jackson on "For the Good Times."

"Everything you read in all the publications about the closeness of that family is true," he said. "You could feel the love in that room," he said.

Sophia Loren

SORRENTO, Italy (AP) — Italian movie star Sophia Loren says her 11-year-old son Edoardo, who is co-starring in her latest film, has the "determination of a professional" and shows an interest in an acting career.

Miss Loren, 49, who is in this southern coastal town for the shooting of the film "Qualcosa di Biondo" ("Something Blond"), said Saturday the joy of working with Edoardo is "indescribable."

"The tenderness, the sweetness of our relationship is something I can't compare to any other cinematic experience I've ever had," she told reporters.

She said her husband, producer Carlo Ponti, was "enthusiastic and proud" about Edoardo's first film role.

"For several years (Edoardo's) shown a calling for acting. He has the seriousness and determination of a professional," Miss Loren said.

Mother and son portray a female taxi driver and her nearly blind son for whom she is seeking money for an operation.

It marks Miss Loren's first appearance in an Italian production since 1977, when she and Ponti were placed under investigation for tax evasion.

FLORENCE, Italy (AP) — Yuri Lyubimov's unconventional production of "Rigoletto" gave the Soviet director his first major artistic controversy since he left the Soviet Union last summer.

In the production, the lead performer, Rigoletto, is dressed as a circus clown, rather than the court jester envisioned by Giuseppe Verdi for his classic opera. Mannequins of late political leaders, including Adolf Hitler, Italian dictator Benito Mussolini and China's Mao Tse-tung, were part of the scenery.

On opening night Saturday at Florence's Teatro Communale, the audience mixed boos and catcalls with applause. Lyubimov, 66, did not take the customary bow on stage, but remained in his box seat.

Lyubimov arrived in Italy in September after staging Feodor Dostoyevsky's "Crime and Punishment" in London. He was dismissed in March as head of the Taganka Theater, which he founded in Moscow 20 years ago, and expelled from the Soviet Communist Party.

It was an apparent reprimand for his controversial directing and extended stay in the West.

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Child actress Drew Barrymore, star of Dino De Laurentiis' movie "Firestarter," missed the film's world premiere because of an ill-timed airline flight.

"We were trying to literally patch a flight through to Wilmington for her," said Michael Levitt, a spokesman for De Laurentiis. "But we couldn't get her here before 7 o'clock. She would have missed all of the reception and part of the movie, so we decided it would be better for her not to be here at all."

In the film version of the Stephen King novel, Miss Barrymore portrays a girl who can start fires with her mind — a talent complicated when her temper literally flares out of control.

The film features multiple special effects, including a variety of exploding cars and burning people.

Miss Barrymore also was featured in "E.T." and "Poltergeist."

• • •

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Veteran television reporter Greg Dumas, a movie and stage show critic for San Diego station KGTV, has died of injuries sustained in a traffic accident, authorities say.

The popular entertainment reporter was killed early Sunday when his car was broadsided by a pickup truck at the intersection of Hawthorn and Kettner near downtown, said KGTV assignment editor J.W. August.

At the time of the accident, Dumas, 53, was driving the wrong way on a one-way street, police Lt. Bill Hoover said. He sustained massive chest and head injuries and was pronounced dead at the scene, police said.

The driver of the pickup, John Salvador Martinez, 28, was booked for investigation of driving under the influence of alcohol, then released from county jail, Hoover said. He was apparently uninjured, the lieutenant said, adding that Martinez was not blamed for the accident, since Dumas was coming from the wrong direction.

LONDON (AP) — The Rev. Billy Graham left a hospital bed where he is being treated for a serious sinus condition to preach before 2,500 people at London's Westminster Chapel in advance of his first crusade in Britain in 16 years.

"It's a great joy to be here," Graham, 65, said in greeting at the start of his hour-long sermon Sunday night.

Upset looms in race

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — In a cross-country balloon race to see who can fly the farthest, a balloon called Rodney the Jazz Bird appeared headed for an upset victory as the favored Rosie O'Grady stalled near Oklahoma City, a race official said.

The two helium-filled balloons were the only contestants remaining out of a field of nine that lofted into the air over Palm Springs Saturday, said Debbie Fawcett, a spokeswoman for the Gordon Bennett International Balloon Race.

The report Sunday night that the Rosie O'Grady has stalled, but still aloft, was considered reliable since it came from air traffic controllers at the Oklahoma City Flight Center, the spokeswoman said.

The Rosie O'Grady, which has won the race once and placed second or third four times, was reported about 20 miles southeast of Oklahoma City, over Lexington, Okla., she said.

Although Rodney the Jazz Bird had trailed Rosie O'Grady by 200 miles earlier Sunday, Ms. Fawcett said race organizers heard nothing to indicate Rodney was also stalled.

When last heard from at about 6:30 p.m., Rodney was seven miles south of Amarillo, Texas, and in position to catch "a pretty good wind going toward Chicago," Ms. Fawcett added.

The absence of radio contact from either Rosie, piloted by Joe Kittinger and Bob Snow of Orlando, Fla., or Rodney, piloted by John and Mari Shoecraft of Phoenix, was not surprising, Ms. Fawcett said.

"If they tell us where they are, then we're going to tell the press," she explained. "They don't want the other balloon to know where they are. It's part of the strategy."

Although Ms. Shoecraft piloted the first balloon to complete a transcontinental flight, a victory by Rodney "would be considered a remarkable upset as Mr. Kittinger had just made a world-record solo flight of over 2,000 miles in late 1983 from Las Vegas, Nev. to Buffalo, N.Y.," race organizer Tom Heinsheimer said.

Rodney the Jazz Bird has only been in the Gordon Bennett race once before, placing fourth in 1982 — the year Rosie O'Grady won.

The race, which was first run in 1906, was named for James Gordon Bennett, publisher of the New York Herald. Suspended for many years, it resumed again in 1979 and has been run annually since then.

The first seven balloons to drop out did so for operational or weather reasons and reported no injuries or serious problems, race spokesman David Blakeman said Sunday.

Kentucky man an expert on 'negative names'

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Travelers on a trek across the United States might find themselves at "No Place," or might trip across a spot where they had "No Business."

They could even kick up the dust in a dried-up creek named "No Water," says a connoisseur of the negative spots on the map.

Robert Rennick of Prestonburg, Ky., has made a hobby out of geographic locations with "negative names" such as Nameless, Tenn., No Creek, Ky., and No Go, Ind.

Sites called No Name or Nameless often were christened by settlers who could not make up their minds about what to call their new homes, Rennick said Sunday.

Other negative names, such as No Water, described the characteristics of a place, such as a dried-up stream or creek, he said.

Many places, such as a No Names Hill in New York, were dubbed for Indians whose names were roughly translated, he said.

And some negative names, such as the No Business creeks found in Tennessee, West Virginia and Idaho, were adopted because people had "no business" being there — either because the terrain was so rough it was dangerous or illicit activities such as moonshining were being conducted in the area, Rennick said.

"There are so many of these," Rennick said. "They've never had any other name, or their nicknames are better known than their formal name. In most cases, these names continue to be borne by the places, though in most cases they were given originally on a temporary basis."

Rennick presented a paper on places "Without Names" at a regional meeting of the American Names Society at Fairleigh Dickinson University in Florham Park, N.J.

He said he has been interested for years in onomatology, the study of origin of proper names of persons or places, and particularly unusual names of geographic locations.

About a year ago, Rennick said, he began an intensive survey of places with negative names.

Researchers have little luck pinning down accurately how the places got their names, but there's no shortage folk tales, he said.

For example, those who live near an Oregon hamlet known as Noti, 18 miles west of Eugene, say it received its name from two 19th-century travelers who were taking turns riding a horse.

When one rider would reach a predetermined location, he would tie up the horse for the traveler following on foot and begin walking until he reached the next spot where he would pick up the horse.
