Fatal Bomb Plot Probed In Columbia

BUGA, Colombia (UPI) — An army of investigators led by Interior Minister Fernando Londono sifted scant evidence today, trying to determine who planted the bomb that killed at least 51 persons here Christmas Eve.

The dead included 12 soldiers and 39 civilians.

Another 122 persons were wounded by the crude but horribly effective bomb that went off in the midst of a group of worshipers who had attended religious services at the local army post.

A government communique published in Bogota hinted that the "unprecedented crime" was the work of "a terrorist underground organization which has attempted similar acts . . . in sparsely populated places."

This appeared to be a reference to the Moec, an extreme-leftist group of students and unionists which has been accused of guerrilla activity and the bombings of various politicians' homes. However, none of the bombings previously attributed to the Moec had caused casualties.

Newspapers in Cali, a provincial capital 35 miles southwest of here, said the bomb was planted by Gustavo Nes Barabbas, a harness-maker for the Buga garrison, who was blown to bits by the blast. They suggested no motive.

Although no official confirmation for the press reports could be obtained immediately, it was known that Nes' widow was one of two persons who had been held for questioning.

The bomb was set off on the parade ground of the block-square barrack of the palace infantry battalion while a crowd of about 500 persons who had attended religious services and a fireworks display was streaming toward the gates.

SNOW BATTLED — Pedestrians scurry across a downtown intersection as a heavy snow snarled traffic in Kansas City during the weekend. The snow spread over a large portion of the midwest stranding travellers in many areas.

Senator Byrd To Battle Medical Plan For Aged

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Harry F. Byrd, D-Va., said today he would oppose action by Congress next year on President Kennedy's program to provide health benefits for the aged under Social Security.

Byrd, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee and a foe of federal welfare programs, will play a key role in the debate when Congress meets next month.

Among the priority administration measures which must clear Byrd's committee before the Senate can act on them are liberalized trade legislation and a controversial tax reform package, as well is the medical care plan.

Byrd gave his views on several issues in a telephone interview from his office in Winchester, Va. He had just returned from a 30-day round-the-world trip — which he said he paid for out of his own pocket.

The senator made it clear he was against what he termed "any use of the Social Security fund to socialized medicine."

He recalled that a Social Security plan to provide hospitalization and other benefits for an estimated 14 million citizens aged 65 and over was rejected by his committee in 1960.

"I'm still opposed," he added.

Byrd described as a "fair bill" a tax relief measure designed to ease the impact of the court-ordered sale of $3 billion in General Motors stock by DuPont. He forecast the bill would win congressional approval.

Byrd declined to predict the outcome of the expected battle over Kennedy's request for a new liberal trade policy.

Man, Reported Shot By Wife, Is Recovering

A 53-year-old Pampa man was reported in good condition today in Highland General Hospital where he is recovering after allegedly being shot by his wife following a family argument Sunday afternoon.

The injured man is William Moore, 718 E. Scott. Officers said he was shot in the lower abdomen with a .22 caliber rifle by his wife, Dollie Mae, 49. They said she admitted firing the rifle at her husband following an argument in their home.

Officers said they received a call at 4:45 p.m. Sunday from Lloyd Addington, son - in - law of Mrs. Moore, who lives nearby who said he believed Mrs. Moore had shot her husband.

Upon investigation the officers found Moore in the bedroom. They called an ambulance and he was taken to the hospital where he underwent surgery shortly afterward.

Mrs. Moore told police she and her husband had been in an argument. She said he kicked her in the stomach and said he was going to beat her. She told officers she ran into the bedroom and grabbed the .22 caliber rifle and told her husband to stay away. When he refused, she fired the gun, she said.

Officers said Mrs. Moore is not being held in jail and no action would be taken in the case until the husband was questioned sometime today about the incident.

Rites Pending For James W. Pool

Funeral services are pending for James Wendyl Pool, husband of Mrs. Carol Henry Pool, who was killed in an automobile accident at approximately 7:30 a.m. on Saturday, near Clarksville, Tenn. The couple was riding in a car driven by another person and were enroute home to spend the holidays with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Allie Pool in Cumberland, Okla. and with Mrs. Pool's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Henry in Pampa.

Mr. Pool was born Sept. 4, 1938 in Cumberland. He was graduated from high school in Madill, Okla. in 1956 and from Oklahoma State University, Stillwater, Okla. in January, 1961.

He was a lieutenant in the United States Army and following the holiday vacation was in the process of being transferred from Baltimore, Md. to California.

Interment rites will be held in Madill. The date and hour of the services are pending the arrival of a brother, Harold, who is in the Navy stationed in Bremerton, Wash.

Survivors are his wife, Carol; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Allie Pool of Cumberland; two brothers, Frankie Lloyd of Seminole and Harold of Bremerton, Wash.

Arrangements will be announced later by the funeral home in Madill.

Fire Razes Famed Tennessee Hotel

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — A stubborn fire that blazed out of control into the early hours today destroyed the historic Maxwell House Hotel, which had played host to seven U.S. presidents.

One guest was still unaccounted for early today. Property loss was estimated at $2 million.

Hotel officials said that 60 guests were registered when the fire was discovered. The flames spread slowly, enabling a switchboard operator to alert guests in the four-story brick structure.

Holiday Traffic Takes Big Toll

By United Press International

The nation's holiday traffic toll topped advance esimates today with the greatest number of deaths for a three - day Yuletide since the Christmas of 1955 when 609 died.

The National Safety Council said it appeared the final total of traffic deaths would be approximately 550. The council had estimated in advance of the holiday that 500 Americans would die in highway accidents during the 78-hour holiday, which ended at midnight.

This morning the United Press International counted 506 persons dead in traffic accidents since the start of the holiday at 6 p.m. local time Friday.

The breakdown:
Traffic 508
Fire 71
Planes 6
Miscellaneous 60
Total 645

California led the nation with 53 deaths. Texas had 50 and New York 39. Other states in which the toll topped the 20 mark included: Illinois and Michigan, 26 each; Ohio and Pennsylvania, 23 each.

Pope John Calls Ecumenical Meet

VATICAN CITY (UPI)—Roman Catholics studied a papal Christmas message warning against the "shadow of war" and looked forward today to next year's ecumenical council to help achieve Christian unity and peace.

Pope John XXIII told world leaders Monday that "the judgment of history will be severe for those who have not done all that was in their power to remove humanity from the shadow of war."

Then he issued a papal bull, announcing that the first ecumenical council in 92 years will be held in 1962. The Pope said the date would be set "according to the opportunity favored us by Good Providence."

Yule Over, Jerusalem Gate Closes

JERUSALEM, Israel (UPI)— The Mandelbaum Gate was raised again Monday night and 3,000 Israeli Christians returned to their homes from their annual pilgrimage to Jordan.

The 36-hour truce is a Christmas tradition in this city, divided by the Israeli-Jordanian border, which is closed the rest of the year.

The pilgrims passed through the Mandelbaum Gate —Jerusalem's equivalent of Berlin's Brandenburg Gate — on Christmas Eve to visit the holy sites in Jordan or to see their relatives and friends.

Thousands of Christian pilgrims and tourists streamed through the narrow stone streets of Bethlehem, where Jesus Christ was born.

The pilgrims filed in and out of the centuries-old Church of the Nativity and many others wandered into nearby fields where shepherds in long robes tend their flocks as their forefathers did nearly 2,000 years ago when Christ was born.

A chorus of chimes and church bells mingled with Christmas music from loudspeakers mounted around the manger scene in the square in front of the Church of the Nativity.

Services were held Monday in the Church of the Nativity and the adjacent St. Catherine's Roman Catholic Church in Bethlehem.

Almost all the Israeli Christian pilgrims who went into Jordan made it back to the gate within the 36-hour limit. But several became ill in Jordan or traveled too far from the city and were unable to return in time. They were expected back today or Wednesday and officials said they would be allowed back into Israel without any trouble.

Water Problems Again Before Commissioners

Mitchell Hill, Southside super market operator, was back before City Commission today in defense of his original charges that two private businesses were operating in Fairview cemetery and receiving water free of charge from the City.

"There's been a lot said about what I had to say last week," Hill said, "and I just want to repeat that I usually know what I'm talking about when I say something."

Hill said he had talked with City Manager John Koontz during the past week and learned that although there is only one water meter in the cemetery there are five water consumers getting water from the one meter.

Mayor E. C. Sidwell interrupted Hill to ask him if it might not be the best plan to study these problems from the overall standpoint.

"There are some 350 water meters outside the city," the mayor said. "If there are situations that need correcting I believe we will find it out in an overall study and any situations that need to be corrected, I believe will be corrected.

"There are problems which the commission must solve. They will take much study, but I think in the final analysis we will be able to unite on some plan that will resolve the problems.

The mayor suggested that it might be well to take the overall picture into consideration later, rather than to go into any individual cases right now.

Hill replied that he was just trying to get everybody paying on the same basis. He said he felt sure the commission would work out any inequities. Hill added that he didn't want the Communists to take over in Pampa.

Commissioner Newt Secrest and Hill got into a little word squabble when Secrest asked Hill if he wasn't one of the leaders against a proposed new charter plan which was defeated in a special election early this year.

"Do you mean that all those who voted for the charter changes were Communists? Secrest asked.

After Hill left, Commissioner L. P. Fort said when he was elected commissioner last Spring he began an investigation. Speaking of the cemetery situation he said he knew that a local funeral home

President To Undergo Checkup By Physicians

PALM BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — President Kennedy undergoes a year-end medical checkup today before buckling down to composition of his State of the Union Message and "last-look" conferences on the budget.

After a quiet Chrismas tingled by concern for his gravely ill father, the President planned a midday meeting with doctors who will examine his back which caused him much discomfort in the late spring and early summer.

Dr. Preston Wade of New York and Dr. Janet Travell, the White House physician, will conduct the informal checkup. Wade is the specialist called in to treat Kennedy last June for a back injury which put him on crutches for a time. Dr. Travell is here primarily for a holiday. The White House Monday denied a report that she, first woman in history to serve in her present post, was resigning.

Press Secretary Pierre Salinger said the President's back was all right, but that Wade was "in this area and he's going to give the President kind of a year-end checkup."

Kennedy recently required medical attention for a head cold, but he is now virtually symptom-free. Although the temperature dropped to the mid-40s Monday, he went swimming in a heated pool at the estate of C. Michael Paul where the President's family is spending the holidays.

A delegation of top presidential advisers was due here late today for an afternoon conference with Kennedy on the budget and the State of the Union Message to be delivered to Congress late next month.

Move Believed Sure To Arouse Tito Aid Foes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — If negotiations now in progress go as planned, the United States is expected to announce soon a big new surplus wheat sale to Yugoslavia.

Such a transaction almost certainly would raise again the political issue of U.S. aid to the Tito regime and other Communist countries.

The issue most recently reached headline proportions when Sen. John G. Tower, R-Tex., assailed the Kennedy administration's decision to go through with agreements to sell obsolescent military planes to Yugoslavia and to train Yugoslav pilots in this country. The agreements were first made by former President Eisenhower.

U.S. aid to Yugoslavia since 1948 has been a case history of American policy toward countries that are in neither the Soviet bloc nor Western camp. In 1948, Yugoslav President Tito broke with Stalin and declared his country a socialist state independent of Kremlin rule.

Since then, the United States has provided Yugoslavia with roughly $2 billion in military and economic aid, including about $400 million in sales agreements.

During these years, changes have taken place in Yugoslavia which pleased the West and must have irked the Kremlin. Forced collectivization was virtually abolished by Tito. The economy became more and more geared to Western trade. Some free enterprise features were started in industry. The old police terror was forgotten. Travel in and out of the country was encouraged.

Tito's policies brought results, which in turn pleased the West even more. Agricultural production increased. The country approached self-sufficiency in food. Living standards improved. The rate of industrial growth became one of the highest in the world.

In all these fields, Yugoslavia has been growing much faster than such Soviet bloc satellites as Hungary, Czechoslovakia and East Germany.

All this points up the reason for aiding Yugoslavia, even though it is a Communist state — the free world is benefitted when a socialist country which cooperates with the free world rather than with Moscow does better than Soviet satellites. Such a situation makes the Kremlin's hold on its satellites that much weaker.

Last September, an anti-Western episode jolted U.S. aid policy toward Yugoslavia completely off the rails. Pro-Soviet and anti-U.S. positions taken at the Belgrade conference of neutral nations that month so annoyed President Kennedy that he ordered a full National Security Council review of policies toward Yugoslavia.

The administration announced that past agreements would be honored — including the sale of planes and training of pilots—but that future negotiations were temporarily on ice.

Now the administration appears to be cautiously and slowly returning to its pre-Belgrade conference policy. The forthcoming agricultural sales agreement—expected to include $30 million in wheat and perhaps $10 million in vegetable oils—is a start.

Cold Air Mass Edges Way Into Panhandle Area

By United Press International

Clouds spread inland from the Gulf of Mexico today, while another cold front began edging into the Texas Panhandle.

The U.S. Weather Bureau said clouds would increase over all but North Central Texas today and tonight, with the colder weather spreading rapidly southward.

The new mass of cooler air was expected to drop temperatures into the low 20s in the Panhandle tonight, as compared with an overnight low of 25 degrees at Amarillo and 27 at Dalhart early today. Monday's high was 69 at Laredo.

Little or no precipitation was expected to accompany the new frontal system, except for some light showers across East Texas.

Flurries and light snow fell along a belt from interior regions of the Pacific Northwest to northern New England.

Miami, Fla., reported its coldest Christmas Day in 22 years. There was snow cover as far south as North Carolina. Portions of Florida got frost.

A new onslaught of polar air dropped temperatures to zero or below in Montana and North Dakota.

New England, where the weather was blamed for more than 30 deaths, dug out from under a snow blanket as deep as 26 inches. Iowa, where six died of heart attacks while snow shoveling, got its first airline flights in four days Monday.

Transit authorities hoped to restore partial bus service today in Des Moines, which has had none since last Friday.

At Maryville, Mo., a dozen persons were rescued Monday from a pumping station where they had been marooned since Friday. Succor came as food supplies were all but exhausted.

The Tree Comes Down

By WID GILBERT

(A report of the day after Christmas based largely on events in a Pampa home.)

"That tree sure looks gaudy." It was The Man speaking to his wife.

"I'm getting tired of it myself," she responded. "Let's take it down," they chimed in unison.

And again there was a joint word—

"What, so soon after Christmas?"

The Man stood back from the tree in the living room of the home and eyed it. Gone were the packages from beneath its boughs. Only the cotton and the bespeckled paper, symbols of a White Christmas, remained at its base, covering the steel holder that kept it standing in place. Paper, colored in glistening red, gold, white, green and blue — almost every color of the rainbow, was scattered about the floor, remnants of unwrapped gifts early Sunday morning.

There was emptiness under the tree. The Man could feel it as he stood gazing at the lights that once again had been turned on, radiating the reflected beams of their own brightness from out the recesses of the holiday bulbs hanging from the tree's branches.

And there was the silvery tinsel, hundreds of strands of it, caressing the limbs of the tree ever so gently and themselves, like the dew in the morning's sun, throwing back to The Man the beams of lights from the tiny electric globes bedecking the boughs.

The Man stood there, gazing in reverie. For a moment he relived those moments before the tree was put up. He recalled the windy day when, with his wife, they went to the Optimist lot and purchased it, pulling over a score or more of them, before selecting the one they thought would be just right.

That was a time of anticipation, a foretaste of the happy yelps of their offspring when the two children would leap from their beds enraptured in the thought of the gladsome surprises in store for them at the base of the tree. There was satisfaction and an explicable joy in that moment of anticipation when the tree was purchased.

But there was more. There were the visits to the various stores. The strain at getting hints from the wife and children about their desires, wishes and hopes for Christmas. This too, filled a recess of his soul with anticipatory satisfaction. He was glad that, in a large measure, he had so adequately surmised the expectation of his loved ones. True the smallest child had cried a bit in disappointment when the doll failed the minute specifications

Vice President's Sister Succumbs

FREDERICKSBURG, Tex. (UPI)— Funeral services were pending today for Mrs. Josefa Moss, 49, younger sister of Vice President Lyndon Johnson who died Christmas Eve of a cerebral hemorrhage.

Mrs. Moss had spent the evening with the entire Johnson family around a Christmas tree at the vice president's LBJ ranch near Fredericksburg.

A short while later, she died in her sleep.

Sad Story Of Muffed Allied Action Bared

By LEON DENNEN

NEW YORK, N. Y. (NEA) — This is the sad tale of missed diplomatic opportunities which has direct bearing on the East-West conflict over Berlin.

According to an amazing disclosure by Moscow's puppet Walter Ulbricht, the Russians were considering leaving East Germany in 1953 and again in 1955 in order to unload the liability of the rump state.

The Western powers would not be facing the Reds today across the wall of shame that divides Berlin had they paid more attention in those years to the struggle for power in the Kremlin.

This is not handsight; it is a confirmation of facts long known to analysts of Soviet affairs. Since another Summit conference in 1962 is clearly in the cards, the crucial question is:

Will President Kennedy repeat the mistakes made by former President Eisenhower in 1953 and 1955?

As Ulbricht revealed in a recent speech to top East German officials, Lavrenti Beria, Soviet secret police chief executed in 1953, and George Malenkov,, who was deposed as premier in 1955, "actively opposed the building of a Communist system" in East Germany.

Ulbricht, in the speech reported in Neues Deutschland, mouthpiece of the German Communists said "Beria took a stand against the construction of socialism" in East Germany. The police chief advocated "a policy of refreat and capitulation" before the Western powers. Ulbricht emphasized:

"With Beria and Malenkov the rejection of the Leninist principles of Soviet democracy were allied with a capitulation policy toward imperialism."

Read for "imperialism" the West and you get the full significance of the Red's unwitting admission.

Those who followed the Kremlin's struggle for power in the 1950s — by analyzing the speeches of Russian leaders and from reading the Soviet press — were of course aware that there was a conflict in Moscow about the withdrawal of Russian troops from East Germany.

Had the Western powers played their cards properly they could have had a German settlement on something approaching their own terms.

Tragically, some of the State Department's "experts" on Russia could see no further than their diplomatic noses. They insisted—as they continue to insist today—that the Russian power struggle was something invented by journalists.

They urged former President Eisenhower not to give aid to the East Berliners who revolted in June, 1953. In 1955 — instead of taking advantage of the troubles in the Red camp — they urged General Eisenhower to go to the Geneva Summit meeting which an ambitious Nikita Khrushchev needed to bolster his prestige in Russia and to divide the West.

The same "experts" are now advising President Kennedy to start negotiations with Khrushchev even before Ulbricht's wall has been razed. They ignore the counsel of French President de Gaulle that sovereign states should "not negotiate under threat be it even the supreme threat of atomic destruction."

First cookstoves were marketed in 1830. Built to burn wood, they had built-in ovens and a tank at the end for heating water.

Lone Hollywood Agent Has Named Many Film Stars

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Ever wonder who names those movie stars Rock and Tab and Troy?

There is a man who's responsible: Henry Willson, one of Hollywood's top agents.

Willson has named many of filmtown's stars, including Lana Turner, Rory Calhoun, Rhonda Fleming, Rock Hudson, Tab Hunter and Troy Donahue.

How does he arrive at a monicker?

First if a name obviously doesn't have the ability to catch on, it's got to be changed. Like Nicholas Adamshock to Nick Adams.

"Also," said Willson, associate producer of Hudson's latest film, "Come September" — "I try to get a name that looks like the guy."

For example, take two of his latest names:

Cal Bolder — "He's a big western-type guy, and that sounds it."

Link Manners — "He's also a big Texas-type."

Oldtimers like Lana, Rory and Rhonda have two syllable first names. But nowadays, Willson has almost a set formula:

"It flows better," he said, "and I think it's easier to remember.

"You decide on a name the way you'd try to sell any new product. If you called a soap 'Shmarawag' or something, who'd remember it?

"Even if you're a movie fan in Africa, you can hear the name Troy or Lana or Rock and know immediately whom it refers to.

"I have one protest, though. Everybody thinks I named Rip Torn, but I've never met the man. He did it himself."

Willson gave examples of how he arrived at some names:

—Troy Donahue. "Some years ago, I changed the name of a young singer from James Darren to Troy Darren. Then he went to Stella Adler's acting school in New York, and she suggested he go back to James. So I had the name Troy left over.

"Well, about 15 years ago, I gave Rory Calhoun the choice of having either Calhoun or Donahue for a last name. He wound up with Calhoun, and I had Donahue left over. When a young boy named Merle Johnson came along, I merely put them together and named him Troy Donahue."

— Lana Turner. "Her real name was Judy Turner, and that was a good name. But at the time she was starting, the name Judy was identified with Judy Garland. Garland was a kid, but Lana at 16 was playing romantic leads. So I gave her that first name because it had a leading lady ring to it. Actually, I had a collaborator on that name."

—Rock Hudson. "His real name is Roy Fitzgerald, and that's good too. But when he was coming up, there was another Fitzgerald — Barry. He was well known and doing a lot of pictures with Bing Crosby, and I needed a new name for marquees so there'd be no confusion. I picked Rock because it gave the idea of size and sound-ed like what he represents — bigness and strength."

—Tab Hunter, "Actually, we were in the process of tabbing him with a name — and the word 'tabbing' led to Tab."

Willson has gone to the other extreme with ordinary names too. He renamed Robert Van Orden with the simple monicker John Smith.

"We did that because he looked as American as applie pie," said the agent. "A big, happy grin, and so forth. Also at the time, there were Van Johnson, Van Heflin, Bobby Van and Mamie Van Doren."

Willson knows when to leave real names alone too. Among the clients whose names he let stay were Marie Wilson, Robert Wagner, Joan Fontaine and Barry Coe.

He's made an occasional error, too. He renamed a girl Marilyn Louis as Rhonda Fleming.

"At the time, I didn't think Marilyn was a sexy name," he said. "How wrong can a guy be?"

PANAJACHEL, Guatemala (UPI) — Against the backdrop of some of the most spectacular mountain and lake scenery in the world, the vacationer can journey more than 200 years into the past —and do it in modern comfort.

Panajachel is the little village where the highway meets Lake Atitlan some 90 miles of constant sightseeing away from the capital of Guatemala City.

A few miles away across the glassy waters of the lake, and with three dead volcanoes looking over your shoulder, you can step from a modern power launch into an Indian village still living for the most part in the 18th Century.

San Antonio Palopo is just one of nearly a dozen villages that climb the mountains rising from the shores of the 16 by 12 - mile lake that glimmers green under the close-by clouds.

Life is simple in the shadows of the mountains that rise as much as 2,000 feet from the 5,000-foot elevation of the lake. There are no roads or phone lines to the outside — crops from the terraced fields that climb the mountains are carried out to the nearest highway or market on the backs of the men along narrow trails.

Women with babies slung on their backs and even little girls carry water from the central fountain in pottery jars — that weigh as much as 43 pounds when filled — on their heads.

Everyone lives in mud - walled, thatched roofed cottages along the dirt trails. There aren't any streets or sidwalks as such. It's a steep climb — and one to be taken slowly at this attitude — to work up from the shore to what could be called the village square —the relatively level patch occupied by the fountain and the old, whitewashed Spanish colonial style Roman Catholic church.

You'd know a villager from San Antonio anywhere once you've seen one of them. Everybody dresses alike; the women in long, blue wrap - around skirts and blouses with red fronts and stripped red and white sleeves; the men in checked brown and tan apron-skirts, shirts similar to the women's blouses, and, for church, a solid blue coat. All the clothing is woven right in the village, just as distinctive tribal clothing is made in villages all over this mountainous Central American land.

If the Spanish padre is in the village on his boat - borne visits around the lake, you can see the people summoned to Mass by the bells cast in 1730 which stand in a thatched pavilion outside. Inside the men put on huge scapulars and kneel to the left of the altar in the aged building, and the women and children to the right. Many hold candles as they kneel through the service.

Outside the visitor gets a few curious smiles, but there's little other communication. The villagers speak a Mayan patois rather than the Spanish of their nation.

Turkeys peck in the dirt yards, the women wash clothing by beating it on the rocks at the edge of the lake, the men cultivate corn that grows vertically despite the angled mountainside.

All this is only 45 minutes away from the comfortable hotels and pensions of Panajachel, which is a quaint village in its own right. This is an area popular with Guatemanlans on holiday, and it has also been discovered by Europeans. The rush from the United States to this idyllic and unspoiled resort, where a single room with three meals is $12 a day, is still to come.

Buses and regular tours run here from Guatemala City, traveling scenic, paved — but narrow — mountain roads that switch back over valleys 1,000 or more feet below and climb as high as 9,000 feet.

Sitting in the patio of the Hotel Tzanjuyu at night you can watch the head lights of cars going first one direction, then another as they wind down the mountain more than 1,000 feet above.

There's fishing, swimming and plain quiet relaxation. But the very best Panajachel has to offer is a look into the unspoiled life of the Indians whom time has passed by.

State's Holiday Death Toll Nearing 100 Mark

By United Press International

A two-car crash that killed five persons and critically injured two others sent the already spiraling Texas holiday violent death toll skyrocketing and safety officials expressed alarm at the number of persons being killed.

A United Press International survey showed at least 90 persons have been killed in the state since the holiday period started at 6 p.m. Friday, 50 of them in traffic accidents.

The Department of Public Safety expressed concern that its pre-holiday estimate of the number of deaths for the 10-day Christmas-New Year's holiday period may have been too low.

Deaths in all categories were already running far ahead of those for the same period last year.

The worst accident of the period, not only in Texas but in the nation, happened Monday night on U.S. Highway 79, about two miles east of Hearne. It was a head-on crash on a curve and killed five persons.

The dead were identified as Verge J. Jeffery, 38, San Antonio, driver of one of the cars, and four of the five occupants of the second car—Doug Ainesworth, 25; Billy Gray Tyler, 22; James Ray Cazey, 22, and his brother Michael Eugene Cazey, 21, all of the New Baden community near Hearne.

Critically injured were Mrs. Rosa Britton Jeffery and Larry Ainesworth, 21.

Authorities were not able to give an immediate explanation for the accident. "It just happened," one deputy said. Investigators said one of the cars was on the wrong side of the road and may have "drifted" too far into the curve.

Bill Carter, a spokesman for DPS headquarters in Austin, said deaths were running "way the heck ahead of last year in suicides and homicides" and were eight ahead of last year at this time in traffic.

The DPS had predicted a total of 88 persons would die in traffic during the 10-day period, and with the state entering only the fourth day, well over half that number have died.

"All we can do is ask drivers to be careful and tell them how many people are being killed," Carter said. "Statistically, it is hard to tell just how we will come out. It may slow down. Maybe it will if enough people get scared by these (death) figures."

William Dewey Jempe Jr., 7, was struck down and killed during the final hour of Christmas when he dashed into the path of a car in Fort Worth.

Services Pending For Mrs. Carlson

Interment rites are pending for Mrs. Mildred Alberta Carlson, 62, 1616 Hamilton, who died at 2 a.m. today in an Austin hospital.

She is survived by her husband, Harry E. of Pampa; two daughters, Mrs. Elaine Waters of Pampa and Mrs. Barbara Crow of Austin; and one sister, Mrs. H. P. Elliott of Downey, Calif.

Arrangements will be announced later by Duenkel-Carmichael Funeral Home.

Many Committee Shifts Confront GOP'S In Senate

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Spirited backstage shuffling was expected among Senate Republicans for choice committee seats held by the late GOP Sen. Styles Bridges of New Hampshire.

In addition to a possible fight for Bridges' post as chairman of the Senate GOP policy panel, there also is bidding for his spots on three important committees—Appropriations, Armed Services and Space.

Although Senate Republicans customarily award committee assignments on the basis of seniority among those seeking them, the vacancies will mean a general reshuffling of GOP members on many committees.

Bridges was the ranking Republican on both the Appropriations and Space committees. He was second Republican in line on the Armed Services Committee.

Sen. Leverett Saltonstall, R-Mas., an announced candidate for the policy committee chairmanship, is the top-ranking Republican on Armed Services. With Bridges' death, he also became the No. 1 Republican on Appropriations.

Under established practice, however, Saltonstall will give up his top seniority on one or the other.

If he chooses to keep his top spot on Armed Services, Sen. Milton R. Young, R-N.D., would take over as senior Republican on Appropriations. If Saltonstall chooses Appropriations, Sen. Margaret Chase Smith, R-Maine, would move into the top GOP Armed Services spot.

Should the Republicans regain control of the Senate, the top GOP members on each committee would become chairmen.

● Tree

she had told Santa Claus, in a sub rosa letter, that she wanted. The multiplicity of the other gifts assuaged her grief and the tears quickly dried. For a moment his own heart felt like weeping as he recalled the moment.

He noticed and recognized another bit of paper. It had been wrapped about the gift he had purchased for his wife. Surreptitiously he had learned what she wanted. She had thought she could not afford it. He had bought it for her and she had exclaimed with delight. It was not too much — just a necklace, but she had wanted it, and now it was hers. When she had opened the package and discovered the gift, she walked over and planted an endearing kiss on The Man's lips;

"Thank you, sweetheart," she had said, adding, meaningfully, "I love you."

Something within The Man swelled into a choking heap. He swallowed, but with difficulty, to regain his composure. It was a cheering, contenting, blissful moment.

And his own gifts were satisfactory, useful practical articles that would last throughout the year keeping alive the thought "She gave me this for Christmas."

Like her mother, the older girl — it is her second year in school — had emitted ejaculations of delight and had repeatedly bestowed tokens of affection on both her parents and her little sister.

So, he stood there, in deep meditation. There came the recognition that the tree had brought delectable joy into the home. His head turned upward. At the top of the tree he looked upon the angel, all clothed in white, its precious wings clinging to its side, symbolic of its visit to the earth when there reverberated over the world, "Behold I bring unto you this day tidings of great joy."

His reverie was rudely interrupted.

"What are you doing standing there?" his wife asked, "Let's get the tree down."

Together they unloaded its branches. First the tinsel was removed. Then the fragile bulbs. Then the electric light stands. The debris was removed from the base of the tree. Down on his side he went, pliers in hand, releasing the screw bolts that had secured the tree. It was warm in the room and there were tiny beads of perspiration on his brow as the job was concluded. He picked up the tree. The rear of the room was heaped with empty boxes, cluttered with colored paper of many hues and blocked by two tables laden with gifts. He took the tree out the front door and back to the alley.

The tree was down. Another Christmas had come and gone. He wished in his heart that indeed there was peace in the world. He entered the front door. His wife was busy running the sweeper, cleaning the rug. He went into the room where the girls slept. He sat down on the edge of their bed. Slowly the oldest awakened, then the other. She scampered over the body of her prone sister, tossing the covers back. She wrapped her arms about her dad's neck. Affectionately she planted a kiss on his cheek.

"The tree is down," The Man informed his little girls.

"It is!" both exclaimed in surprise.

The older girl spoke.

"Daddy," she said, in complete innocence of her thoughtful and significant words —

"I wish Christmas would come to stay."

does get free water for its flower beds in the cemetery.

Officials of the funeral home were quoted last week as saying they paid for all water used.

Mayor Sidwell said it was the plan of the City to review the entire situation sooner or later. At that time, he said, he felt any inequities, if any existed, would be corrected.

"The problems we have should get a lot of consideration and thorough study — and I am sure they will," he said.

The commission spent nearly an hour discussing payment of services rendered by Koch, Fowler & Grafe, Inc. The discussion resulted in commission approval of vouchers for $4,480 and $1,920, leaving a final bill of $1,450. City Manager Koontz was asked to write the Dallas engineering consultants for an itemized statement on the bill.

In other business the commission tabled for one week the appointment of a five-man city zoning board, discussed details of the contract with Merriman and Barber, local consulting engineers, for their services in making a preliminary survey of right-of-way and drainage problems in connection the improvement of SH 273 from Brown St. south to the city limits and SH 152 west from Faulkner St. to the city limits.

Gas Rate Boost Voted Down By Lefors Council

LEFORS (SPL) — The proposal made by the Gray County Gas Company to the Lefors City council for higher gas rates has been turned down by the council meeting in a special session.

Those present were Mayor W. F. Wall, councilmen Ray Dickerson, Fred Blackwell, Jim Hannon, and L. R. Cain. Representing the Gray County Gas Co. were D. M. Jones, Lefors; Robert E. Underwood and Donald W. Stewart of Amarillo. Visitors were James Means and Charles Roberts.

The gas company asked for immediate action by the council, either an acception or rejection of the proposal.

The council voted to reject the proposal and hold to the orignal contract dated, Sept. 17, 1930.

The gas company representatives stated that their only alternative now is to appeal to the Railroad Commission to set a rate for them which will give them what they say is a fair return.

Commies Return To Underground, Reporter Finds

By RAY CROMLEY

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Attorney General Robert Kennedy's current drive to make the Communist party and all Communists register with the government faces a long and rocky road, say some of Kennedy's close associates.

Some experts at the Justice Dept. say the appeals could drag on in the courts for years. One man says a decade.

The Justice Dept. recently announced the return of a 12-count indictment charging the party with failing to register as a foreign agency. This could conceivably place the party open to a $10,000 fine on each count, or $120,000. But the Justice Dept. isn't certain what it can do if it does win its case and the party refuses to pay the fine.

The regulations that cover this required Communist party registration are vague on several key points. Even attorneys at the Justice Dept. do not agree yet on what these rules mean. The Communist Party, U.S.A., says its Secretary Gus Hall, intends to pick and peck at the law through the courts as long as possible. The long Red figh since he Sub- The long Red fight since the Subversive Activities Control Act of 1950 was enacted indicates the drawn-out nature of their tactics.

But Assistant Attorney General J. Walter Yeagley, the man immediately in charge of internal security and the Communist registration, figures that the government's drive will prove such a harassment to the U.S. Reds that their major programs will suffer a severe setback.

Reports indicate Communist units are desrotying their records. More Communist are going underground. Party groups are holding fewer meetings. These are more furtive and secret. Some Communists are talking about setting up a new party with a different name to evade the law.

Justice Dept. men think any of these steps will slow the Communist party down further. They think the farther underground the party moves, the less effective it will become. These officials think back to the last time the party went underground. The difficulties of operation proves so great the Red leaders felt compelled to move above ground again even though it meant that key men had to expose themselves and go to jail.

Says Yeagley, "We've been surprised at the results. They've had to drop many of their programs or let them slide." Communist work among young people, Negroes and laboring men has been slowed. Their new membership and fund - raising drives have been slowed. Their plans for creating more effective front organizations have been weakened.

If the Communist party and its members face this uncertainty and these legal problems year after year, their effectiveness will continue to be seriously reduced however long the Communists drag out the court cases, say top Justice Dept. aides.

But these Justice Dept. men say the government's job will not be easy. The government regulations say the Communist party shall register, list its members, its sources of money, its expenditures, its printing plants, identify its literature and its publications as Communist originated.

Justice Dept. officials say they are not certain how they can prove in court that even The Worker is printed by the Communist party, even though they know that it is. The newspaper is set up legally under separate ownership.

Since the Communist Party, U.S.A. did not register on Nov. 20, the national officers of the party were required to register on Nov. 30. They did not do so. The Communist party has now reshuffled its officers on paper. There is a difference of opinion in the Justice Dept. now as to which top Communist can be indicted under the law.

Regulations say that if the top officers of the Communist party refuse to register and refuse to register the membership of the party, they can each be fined $10,000 and sentenced to five yars in jail for every day of refusal to register after Nov. 30, 1961.

Disagreement exists within the Justice Dept. on exactly what this means. One group holds that any man or woman who has been a top officer during the past 12 months must register under this provision. A second group holds that this requirement applies only to any man or woman who has been a top officer on or after Nov. 20. A third group contends that only those men and women can be indicted who are still top officers at the expiration of the deadline on Nov. 30.

To make the matter more complicated, some top officials of the Communist party have said they are going to claim in the courts that registration is self - incrimination and therefore is not compatable with the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution.

Justice Dept. officials say they believe the intent of the law was not self - incrimination. But some Justice Dept. high officials worry that the wording of the law may not be precise enough to guarantee to the courts that there is in fact no self - incrimination involved.

The regulations say, too, that if the party doesn't register, which it hasn't, and if the top officials don't register — and they haven't — then every Communist in the United States is supposed to register by Dec. 30. But the Justice Dept. has no easy way to require registration.

To prove their case, in many instances, the government men would have to uncover one or more of their own agents as witnesses.

'Johnny Bob' Getting Set For Red Invasion

LOUISVILLE, Ill. (UPI) — Self-styled anti - Communist 'Johnny Bob' Harrell and his Christian Conservative movement followers expect a Russian atomic attack and invasion.

The mausoleum tycoon and his followers, numbering about 100, who live on Harrell's scenic 100-acre estate here have dug "between 15 and 20" fallout shelters into the sides of hills along the little Wabash River.

"The Lord is telling us what to put into the shelters," said Harrell. "There are three gallons of water for each person, food for three days, beds, a lantern, one gallon of kerosene and three changes of clothing.

"The Lord is having us watch this fallout caused by the Russian tests and there is a possibility we may use the shelters before the actual attack."

The 39 - year - old former Air Force pilot, who says he has spent more than a quarter-million dollars in his fight against Communism, claims to have been divinely healed of cancer more than two years ago while in a motel room near a famous medical center where he had gone for treatment.

Since then, Harrell says, the Lord has dictated his every move.

His self-proclaimed fight against Communism has alienated Harrell from this town where he grew up and once was a Sunday School superintendent and civic leader.

His charges that there are Communist cells in the country have brought vigorous denials from citizens who scorn the publicity Harrell and his group have brought the town of 900.

"There's not a Communist in the county," said State's Atty. H. Carroll Bayler. "The FBI and state authorities have checked."

When Harrell refused to send his children to public schools earlier this year and some of his followers did likewise, they were tried and found guilty of failing to keep their children in a lawful school. The Illinois Supreme Court refused to hear an appeal by Harrel and sent the case back to an appellate court where action is still pending.

Harrell attracted national attention in August when he gave refuge on his guarded estate to Dion Davis, 19, of Greenville, Pa., who left the Marines without leave of absence. Davis said the Marines "teach men to hate" and "flaunt sin right in your face."

Harrell proclaimed that authorities "will have to kill me" before he would allow Davis to be taken from the estate against the AWOL Marine's will.

Then came a conference of FBI agents with the young Marine at the guarded gate of Harrell's estate in which they pleaded with Davis to voluntarily surrender. Davis refused.

The next day before dawn, an Army half-track broke down the gate and more than 100 FBI agents and state troopers invaded the estate, seized Harrell, some of his followers and Davis. Not a shot was fired.

The agents seized more than 100 guns and 10,000 rounds of ammunition.

As a result of the raid, Harrell and some of his followers face federal court action on charges of harboring a Marine deserter.

Meanwhile, Harrell and his followers, free on bond, have been busy on the estate, building the fallout shelters and doing other clearing work. Harrell and his clan live in smaller dwellings near an imposing, three - story, 24-room replica of Mount Vernon, George Washington's home.

Harrell says the Lord hasn't told him the ultimate purpose of the home, but some of his followers envision it as a someday center of government.

The estate has its own schools and church.

Harrell says he pays the families for work they do on improving the estate. He owns a four-seat airplane and has his private all-weather runway.

Besides holding a patent on a method of building mausoleums, Harrell claims oil interests, owns a motel and has other real estate holdings. His mother, a widow, owns a sporting goods company.

Harrell said the movement's school emphasizes "God and country" in its teachings. The school's principal is Rev. A. Vance Comer, a former Methodist minister.

The group has its own flag, which flies with six American flags from the gleaming white portico of the palatial replica of Mount Vernon.

SCHOOL FOR ONE—This new $7,500 five-classroom school, top, in Barbassiria, Italy, has one pupil, Alba Nan. All other youngsters in the town moved away from the poverty-stricken town. In photo below Alba waits for a problem from teacher Eleonora di Stefano.

LONDON (UPI) — British track and field circles set the minimum standard performance for the high jump in 1834 at 5 feet, 6 inches. John Thomas topped this mark by almost 2 feet in 1960.

Peace Corps' Sleeves Rolled Up

WASHINGTON (NEA — President Kennedy's South American trip took him into the land of the Peace Corps, an organization that in a year has moved from the campaign rostrum to the jungles.

The Peace Corps' $800,000 gamble in Colombia is off to a good start. Before the volunteers had completed three weeks in the field, Colombia's President Alberto Lleras Camargo was urging that the 62-man force be doubled as soon as possible.

This is no small tribute from Colombia's government, which earlier had mixed emotions about the Peace Corps' community development project. It is aimed at providing technical know - how for the construction of roads and buildings while teaching villagers how to help themselves.

Although Colombians welcomed the technical aid, they were scared stiff at the thought of the self-help psychology. The last thing they wanted was a group of young North American zealots starting grass root movements that could get out of control.

Also, Colombia is 95 per cent Catholic, and a few local priests openly oppsoed the idea of 'Protestant missionaries" roving around their flocks. About a third of the Peace Corpsmen are Protestants; the remaining are almost evenly divided between Jews and Catholics.

The Colombia project is under the administration of CARE — active in Colombia since 1954. So far this year it has helped feed over a million Colombians.

As the volunteers were put through their final five weeks' training at an experimental farm outside Bogota, Colombian officials began to get interested. President Lleras met and chatted with each man, then reviewed the 29 areas selected for community development.

Scratching those areas infested with bandoleros—organized guerrillas — Lleras shuffled the list three times. Finally, the volunteers were allowed to trundle off in pairs to native villages.

Colombia's area of 435,000 square miles dangles like an odd-shaped Christmas bulb from the Isthmus of Panama. Its 12 million people are concentrated in the western half of the country in mountain valleys and along the coast. The eastern half is primarily virgin jungle.

Volunteers were assigned as assistants to native counterparts. Since Peace Corpsmen pull out after two years, the project must develop as a local organization under local leadership to be effective in future years.

Rolling up their sleeves, the teams got down to work on activities ranging from showing natives new animal breeding techniques to constructing homes, roads, bridges, schools and aqueducts. Colombia's chronic poverty has been aggravated by recent civil wars which left more than 200,000 homeless.

After two weeks, the Peace Corps was verbaly attacked by Colombia leftist organizations. "We were a little worried at first," said Merton Cregger, director of the project. "Leftist groups left us completely alone."

President Lleras countered with a request for 60 additional Peace Corps workers. Peace Corps Director R. Sargent Schriver said volunteers for these posts will begin training in the U.S. next month.

In addition to technical improvements, native bosses — campesinos — hope to eventually institute badly needed land reforms. Almost all of Colombia's cultivated land is owned by a handful of coffee, sugar and tobacco barons.

Concluded one Peace Corps official: "We've gotten off on the right foot in Colombia. Why, the boys are so busy they don't even have time to write post cards."

Chuckles

THE FINAL BLOW

COLUMBIA, S.C. (UPI)—Produce dealer Russell Morris had complained to authorities that he was being plagued by thieves.

He turned up at the sheriff's office again Wednesday to say the thieves were back and this time took his kitchen sink.

MAN'S BEST FRIEND

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI)—The city commission holds a hearing next week on a proposal to ban animals and fowl from city limits which has drawn protests from owners of monkeys, horses, quail, sheep and rabbits.

No one has objected to a possible ban against hogs.

Getting the Aces

LAFAYETTE La. (UPI) — Jay aERT SCORED HNE ON TWO successive rounds of the 1959 El Paso Open. He aced the 201-yard 10th hole in the third round and the 170-yard third hole the following day in the fourth round.

Dear Abby....

Hearing Aids Fall On Deaf Ears

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Your sympathetic letter to "Exhausted Daughter," whose mother was deaf, fell on deaf ears to me. Believe me, there are none so deaf as those who will not hear. I have heard all the excuses: "I'm too old to learn to use a hearing aid. They're too noisy and make me nervous. They give me a headache, etc." It's all baloney!

My aunt ruined her daughter's life because of deafness. The poor girl used to rush home from her job, do the marketing and run all the errands. She was literally chained to her hard - of - hearing mother. This girl was a beauty, but she never married because she had no social life. Tell those deaf people to TRY a hearing aid. And if that doesn't work, go to speech class and learn to lip read!

ONE WHO KNOWS

DEAR ABBY: Being totally deaf since childhood, I can only say "bless you" for the understanding you showed for the hard-of-hearing and deaf. I wonder how many people know that Helen Keller, who is both blind and deaf, once said, "I would rather have my sense of hearing than my sight!"

MAKING THE BEST OF IT

DEAR ABBY: In your column you said, "Love is a two-handed game and it is impossible to be 'in love' alone." I have to disagree with you. According to you, it is not possible to be in love with someone who doesn't love you. I know for sure that I was in love with someone who didn't even know I was alive. I'm no youngster, Abby. I am old enough to be your mother. Please either retract your statement or explain it. I don't get it.

SEVENTY PLUS

DEAR SEVENTY: It is possible to "love" someone, but in order to be "in love" — it must be mutual.

DEAR ABBY: I am married to a man who was married before. He keeps all of his ex-wife's letters, their marriage certificate and an album full of pictures of them together taken while they were still married. I feel that either he should send these things back to her or throw them out, but he refuses to. I am very hurt and jealous over this and it bothers me a lot. We have agreed to go along with your answer.

SECOND WIFE

DEAR SECOND: Your husband obviously does not want to part with these souvenirs yet. Compromise. Ask him to bundle up all the memories and store them out of sight. To insist that he destroy them would be a mistake. When he's ready to do it on his own, he will.

Are things rugged? For a personal reply, write to Abby, Box 3365, Beverly Hills, Calif. and don't forget a stamped, self - addressed envelope.

For Abby's booklet, "How To Have A Lovely Wedding," send 50 cents to Abby, Box 3365, Beverly Hills, Calif.

Any woman should be able to do her own hair. But this is particularly true of the young housewife, who is often tied to hearth and home for days on end. This girl is both model and housewife and she is adept at handling her own hair. She pins up her longish hair in the morning (left). At breakfast, it looks like this (center). Puffs serve as basic setting for evening hairdo (right). She wears her hair in a full French twist, both flattering and easy to maintain.

Simple Hair Style For Harrassed Housewives

By ALICIA HART
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

With children to dress, a husband to get off to work, and breakfast to cook, a housewife has little time for morning glamour.

Still no man should be expected to stare across the breakfast table at a sloppy robe and a head full of rollers.

You can look neat and attractive without losing much of that valuable morning commodity — time. It takes no longer to slip into a pretty housecoat than to don a wornout robe. And if you have a hairdo that you can easily handle yourself, you won't need to show up in curlers.

Here's a hair style that was created for a young model, who is also a busy homemaker. The style consultant for the Lilt Reference Service calls his creation a "hairdo for harrassed housewives." It's a hairdo that can easily be managed in the morning, and it's sufficiently versatile to be brushed into an evening coif without spending the afternoon in rollers.

Because it was important in her modeling career, the young housewife refused to have her shoulder - length hair cut to a more manageable length.

The consultant insisted on a pushbutton foam permanent first to give the hairdo the necessary body for a "do - up" for mornings and an "up - do" for evening.

The morning hairdo was a camouflaged setting for the evening version. Instead of using rollers, he artfully spun the hair into rolls, which were held in place by carefully hidden bobby pins. The crown was rolled into two rows of puffs, one overlapping the other. The sides were turned into flounces billowing out over the ears. The back was pinned up in a series of little buns, and the entire hair do lightly sprayed.

Three hours later, pins were removed and the hair brushed into a charming French twist for evening.

When the model was asked to try the hair styles herself, she was able to do the morning style in five minutes, and to brush it into the evening style in 10 minutes.

If this little time is needed to keep long hair attractively styled all day, it should be even simpler if your hair is short. A soft permanent to an expertly styled cut that you can brush into place quickly should do the trick. And the hardware can be dispensed with at the breakfast table.

THE SOFT TOUCH

Next time you take a bath, fold up a clean, fluffy towel and place it against the tub in back of your head. It will serve as a soft cushion while you relax and revive in warm soapsuds.

Families Guests At Christmas Fete

Following a covered-dish dinner served from a festive table decorated in the yule manner, Santa Claus paid a visit and presented each child with a gift, Christmas stocking and candy canes. During the evening, the children also had their pictures taken with Santa Claus.

The remainder of the evening was spent playing games of "42" and visiting.

Luncheon Theme Has Yule Motif

CANADIAN (Spl) — The Arts and Crafts Club Christmas party was held Wednesday noon at EJ's Cafe.

The luncheon table was decorated at one end with a Santa holding red candles and at the other with a green and silver net tree hung with colored balls and flanked by red candles. The places were marked with green hosiery drying hangers with the guests' names.

Preceding luncheon, invocation was given by Mrs. F. D. Teas and the group sang a carol, "O Little Town of Bethlehem".

After luncheon a Christmas program was presented. Mrs. Jim Mitchell and Mrs. Walter Killebrew sang two duets, "In Fields Abiding" and "Cantique de Noel," accompanied by Mrs. Bill Jackson.

Mrs. Bud Hoobler gave a story "When Christmas Came to Nowhere Hills" and read a list of Christmas Ten Commandments.

Mrs. Killebrew gave a story "When There Was No Christmas."

If You Wear Glasses Use Eye Make-Up

By ALICIA HART
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

If you wear glasses, you could already own several frames in different colors. You may have a pretty pair for evening wear, sunglasses for snow glare plus a pair for office or street wear.

You pobably don't feel self-conscious about wearing them, but you can have more fun in wearing them if you make a habit of wearing eye make-up that blends with the color of the frame —mauve make-up for mauve frames, blue for ice blue and so on.

Be sure that you keep your brows plucked and that the sweep of your brows is clean and well-defined. If your brows are light or sparse, darken them with an eyebrow pencil.

Glasses in themselves are sparkly and colorful so take it easy on earrings or other glittery jewelry near your face. It can add up to too much.

When you have your hair styled, make sure that your hairdresser is aware that you wear glasses. This can make a big difference in the final hairdo.

The holidays often leave many women feeling guilty about the amount of nibbling and outright hearty eating they do. This attitude is nonsense. Christmas and New Year's are (or should be) the most festive holidays of the year. To diet your way through them is to carry the Puritan attitude to the extreme.

This is what you can do: plan, once the holidays are over, to take off the added poundage. Face the fact that you are quite likely to gain weight but that you do not intend it should be permanent poundage.

After New Year's Day, get busy with your diet. The beginning of the year is an appropriate time for starting new projects anyway. It's in the air; everyone will be talking diets, and you won't be feeling sorry for yourself because you've gone through the holidays denying yourself all those goodies.

If you find it difficult to leap out of bed in the morning to face a busy day, try stretching before you get up. This will tend to awaken you gently and to keep you lithe and limber, too. Then get out of bed and really stretch. You'll be surprised at how much better (and livelier) you feel.

Follow this with toe touching (knees unbent) for 30 counts. If you can't quite reach your toes the first time, keep trying. You'll make the grade inside a week's time.

VERY GOOD REASON

Do you know that your hair picks up more dirt from the air in an hour than the rest of your body does in a day? What better reason to shampoo twice a week?

ASK THE DESIGNER by gaile dugas

Dear Gaile: I would like to plan a winter wardrobe around two coats. The casual coat is in a brown, black and green plaid with just a touch of orange. The dress coat is black (straight lines) with a handsome removable black beaver collar. I would like several costumes for each. What color hat and gloves would be smart with each? I am housewife and mother and professionally employed as well. — Mrs. S. M.

Dear Mrs. S. M.: You are wise to plan your wardrobe carefully around these two major purchases. On the accessories, advice comes from designer Bill Blass of Maurice Rentner. He says:

"For the plaid coat, consider black shoes, bag and gloves worn with a green hat. And for the dressy black coat, handsom shoes and handbag in black calf."

To this, I'd add the suggestion that you play down the plaid and sparkle up the black coat. If brown is becoming to you, a brown wool dress with just a touch of the orange (no more than piping) would be pretty. Pick up a single color of the plaid in any dress you buy to wear with this coat. You'll avoid color clashes this way. The black coat can take a wool dress in glowing blue or ruby with the color repeated in a hat.

Dear Gaile: Could you please tell me if bucket purses are still in style? I bought a lot of clothes for school and, foolishly, bought a bucket purse. One of my friends says that bucket purses are not in style. Is this true? I will abide by your answer. — J. L. K.

Dear J. L. K.: Some styles tend to become classic. Good examples of this are the trench coat, the fur - trimmed suit, the opera pump, the princess dress, the sheath and the jacket dress. They change slightly in appearance from season to season but they're always around in some form. This is true of the bag you describe; your friend is wrong. This is what Lou Nathan of Lesco - Lona hand bags has to say on the matter:

"The bucket bag is a very important look which originally developed from the shopping bag. It is a basic which dates back to the time when a woman carried only one bag. This was the one. It is practical, accessible and a must in every woman's wardrobe, from the age of twelve up. This casual look in good serviceable leather is becoming more and more important."

That should take care of any doubts you may have about your bag being in style. Enjoy it!

Bethany Class Fete With Mrs. Ramsay

Bethany Sunday School Class of First Baptist Church met Thursday in the home of Mrs. Lida Ramsey, 922 Mary Ellen.

A devotional entitled, "The Wonder of the Incarnation" was given by Miss Edna King and followed by prayer.

Mrs. T. V. Lane gave "The Christmas Story." A series of games relating to Bible stories were played followed by a gift exchange.

Refreshments were served to 23 members and one guest.

THE LIGHT TOUCH

If you are making up for daytime, apply cosmetics near a window where the light is abundant enough to guide you. Otherwise, use bright daylight bulbs and check the results in front of a window before going out.

It's never safe to pat a bear until he's made into a rug.

TV Tip

CHICAGO (UPI) — Insufficient lighting or no lighting at all can make night-time television viewing tiring and boring, according to the American Home Lighting Institute.

One dim light doesn't solve the glare problem and sometimes adds an annoying reflection from the screen, the Institute said. It suggested a so-called "TV Wall," used by many homeowners who light up the entire wall behind the TV set by installing a cornice or valance along its top.

BUILDING ANGLES — Novel apartment houses in Lahr, West Germany, will house French soldiers and families stationed in the area. The angular buildings built by the Bonn government contain 24 apartments grouped around a centrally located stairway.

NEW MEXICO HONORED — A new commemorative stamp honors New Mexico's 50th year of statehood. The four-cent issue, depicting a view of a mesa known as "Shiprock," will go on first-day sale at Santa Fe, on Jan. 6.

Clown School

TYLER, Tex. (UPI) — One of the nation's most exclusive clubs is the Tyler Clown Club, organized about 12 years ago chiefly to train volunteer performers in the annual Tyler rose festival. It has grown to a score of members, mostly businessmen, who study circus clowns and learn enough technique to perform at benefits and hospitals.

Woman Who Fought Uncle Sam Wants Change In Vote Machines

STONINGTON, Conn. (UPI) — Vivien Kellems picked a fight with Uncle Sam over withholding taxes in 1948.

Miss Kellems, 65, also has tangled with municipal and state governments.

In the office of her plant she's drawing battle lines once more. This time she's taking on Connecticut Democrats. The issue: voting machine levers which the crusader claims make it difficult for citizens to split votes.

Although she is an Iowan by birth, Miss Kellems typifies the old - line Connecticut Yankee — shrewd in business and independent in politics. She feels that when a law is unconstitutional, she has a duty to defy it "in keeping with American tradition and practice."

"Every man who signed the Declaration of Independence was a lawbreaker and a rebel," she said. "He broke the law but he founded a nation."

Miss Kellems doesn't intend to form a new nation. She just has plenty of ideas for reforming this one, including the establishment of a direct primary.

She met her biggest adversary — Uncle Sam — when she refused to collect withholding taxes from employes at her plant.

The grounds: such "involuntary" collections violated the 13th amendment.

"I objected," she said, "to being a tax collector for the federal government, I still do."

Miss Kellems even wrote a letter to then President Truman requesting that "High Tax Harry," as she called him, indict her and requesting a Supreme Court test of the case.

Uncle Sam did not indict her, but attached her bank accounts and collected some $8,000.

Now, she has announced her intention to run for office in Connecticut next year as a part of her voting machine campaign.

The post? She hasn't decided yet. But the office isn't important to Miss Kellems. She wants to run for something — "even dog catcher" — to get the television time allowed a political candidate. She wants time to argue that a voting machine lever makes vote splitting difficult.

"Many people," she said, "are cheated out of their vote because they are unable to vote the way they want to."

Miss Kellems got into business in 1927 when her brother, Edgar, an engineer, devised an improved cable grip. She took the device to an electric company in New York and got her first trial order.

The business had its ups and downs, but mostly ups. In 1935 the firm's plant was moved from New York to Westport, Conn. By 1949, the business outgrew the plant and Miss Kellems had her first legal battle.

She fought Westport's zoning board which refused to let her expand in a residential town. So, she moved the firm to nearby Stonington where it now occupies a 35,000 square foot building designed by her brother.

"If I have had any success in business," she said, "It is because I learned to know men and hold my own among them."

Miss Kellem's battles include the following:

— a victory in getting Connecticut to abolish the Night Work Law, a regulation which prohibited women working between 10 p.m. and 6 a.m.

— a loss when she opposed Clare Booth Luce for the Republican nomination for Congress in 1942. In retrospect, Miss Kellems figures that a victory might have damaged her business.

— another loss in a later try for the Senate, running as an independent against former Senators William Purtell and William Benton. She ran a second time against Sen. Prescott Bush and Abraham Ribicoff, now U.S. Secretary of Health Education and Welfare.

— a victory of sorts when she ran as an independent against Ribicoff and John Davis Lodge for governor of Connecticut in '54. She is said to have drawn enough votes away from Lodge to give Ribicoff the victory. She supported Ribicoff for a second term in hopes of gaining his support for her proposed changes in the states voting machines.

Miss Kellems is at an age when most people are thinking of retirement.

Asked if she would apply for social security from the Uncle Sam she's battled, Miss Kellems replied that she would have to stop working to qualify.

She doesn't intend to stop working "until they put me in my grave."

HARD ON FLOORS

OXFORD, Eng. (UPI)—Women who wear stiletto heeled shoes will have to remove them before entering St. Aldate's Church, from now on.

The reason: Too many holes have been punched in the floor.

Financial Review

NEW YORK (UPI) — A water company gave up most of the single line of endeavor in which it had engaged for many years. Today, as 1961 drew to a close, its funds or other aid have gone into at least nine o t yrhe septfofero,ft at least nine other types of effort.

Its executives have under consideration some sort of investment or financial arrangements with at least four other groups or enterprises.

One associate explained it: Under the direction of Canadian-born Richard L. Rosenthal, a $42 million capital accumulation raised by the sale of 14 water operating companies in New York state has been used to set up a sort of department store of finance.

Until mid-1960, the company was known as the New York Water Service Corporation, distributing water in 19 cities in this state. Through involuntary condemnation, and acquisition of most of its properties by municipal governments, 14 of the companies were disposed of, and there sat the capital.

In mid-1960, with the enterprises growing in variety, it became the Utilities and Industries Corporation, and set out on a plan of "engaging in any sort of financing suitable to the needs of the company it is assisting."

Telephone service never stops improving

These 8 communications improvements, now in effect in many communities, are representative of the hundreds that are being made each day. Many are in themselves little things. But big or little, all have only one purpose — to give you the best possible telephone service at the lowest possible cost.

Direct Distance Dialing permits you to dial your own Long Distance calls as quickly and easily as you do local calls. This service improvement is spreading rapidly. By the end of the year, one fourth of our telephone customers will be able to dial Long Distance this faster, easier way.

Plastic Insulated Cable improves your service two ways. First, plastic insulation gives better protection from the weather, helps prevent impairment of your service. Second, each wire is color coded, providing faster installation and repair service.

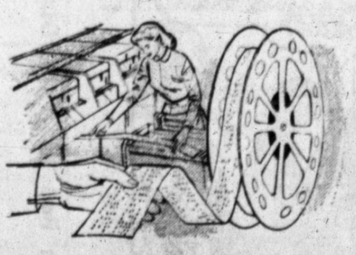

Automatic Line Test is made periodically on most telephone lines. This equipment tests your line and your telephone for electrical defects. If it locates trouble, information is recorded so that the trouble can be promptly fixed and disruption of your telephone service prevented.

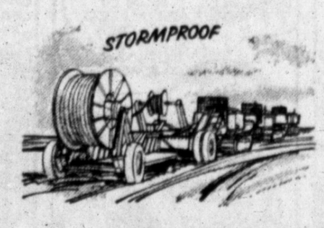

Pumping Air in Cables helps keep your telephone trouble free. Air pressure in the cable holds out moisture should a small leak occur. Reduced pressure as air escapes provides warning of leak so it can be repaired before it affects your service.

Electronic Voice Boosters keep your voice at a strong, clear conversational level, prevent fade-out caused by distance. Loss in transmission has been cut nearly in half in the last five years. Today, you hear better than ever.

Electronic Machines help speed Long Distance calls you dial direct. Part of this equipment is an accounting machine capable of automatically recording 100 calls at the same time. This machine records on tape your telephone number, the number you are calling and the length of your conversation, accurately and speedily.

Burying Telephone Cables makes them weatherproof, gives you more trouble-free service. Today, 55 percent of telephone wire is underground, providing stormproofed express routes for your local and Long Distance calls.

Recorded Announcement helps prevent lost calls. Should someone forget to hang up an extension or accidentally knock the receiver off the hook, a recording reminds you to hang up the receiver. This enables you to be reached once again by those trying to call you.

Holiday Cage Tournament Tonight

Buckeyes Are Rated Top College Cagers

NEW YORK (UPI)—Ohio State, for the first time this season, was the unanimous choice today as college basketball's No. 1 team and if they finish this week unbeaten no one is going to argue with that rating.

For the Buckeyes, who received the first place vote of every one of the 35 outstanding coaches who make up the United Press International rating board for a perfect score of 350 points, start play Wednesday night in the Los Angeles Classic, which drew three other teams in the top 10 in the eight-team field. They start out against Washingon, ranked 20th, but in the tourney are fourth-ranked Southern California, ninth-ranked West Virginia and 10th-ranked Utah.

Cincinnati, although beaten by Wichita last week, held on to second place in this week's ratings, getting a total of 285 points against 219 for third-ranked Kansas State.

Wichita with 123 points was fifth followed by Kentucky with 115, Duquesne with 91, Duke with 82, West Virginia with 79 and Utah with 64.

Kentucky, Duquesne and Utah were newcomers to the top 10—decided on 10 points for a first place vote, 9 for a second and so on down to one for a 10th place vote. Providence, Arizona State and Purdue dropped out of the select group.

In addition to Ohio State, which last season was the unanimous choice of the coaches six times, six of the other top 10 teams are scheduled for tournament action this week. Only Wichita, Kentucky and Duke will not see action in the jam of the Christmas week tournaments.

Kentucky made the biggest advance, jumping from 14th to sixth place after beating Kansas State. Duquesne advanced from 12th to seventh and Utah from 11th to 10th.

Gillman May Protest Title Game

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (UPI)—The game has been over for two days. Houston won, San Diego lost and even Charger coach Sid Gillman is willing to admit "that's that."

However, it appears it may be days before the furor of the final hectic minutes of Sunday's American Football League championship game here dies down.

The next move in the crisis precipitated by what Gillman Monday, called the "worst officiating I've ever seen" appeared to be up to AFL Commissioner Joe Foss—who said he won't act hastily. When Foss does act it may mean fines for Gillman and other Chargers.

The problem started during the third period of the title game when Gillman dashed out to protest a call that gave San Diego the ball on its one-yard line instead of the 20.

A total of 106 yards in penalties against San Diego during the game didn't soothe Sid's nerves any. So when the game ended, with San Diego on the short end of a 10-3 score, Gillman and several other Chargers rushed onto the field to tell field judge John Morrow a thing or two.

In the heat of the discussion between Gillman and Morrow, observers said the official grabbed Gillman's lapels. Suddenly there was no official. Charger player Bob Zeman had leveled Morrow with a tackle. Cooler heads preavailed at that time and the incident was over.

Foss, probably the only person of the 29,566 in Balboa Stadium to miss the post - game fracas, said he was on his way out of the stands when Gillman and Morrow had their tete-a-tete and would have to wait to act.

"There may be some fines later on," Foss said, "but not until I get the official" game reports and have a chance to study them."

Foss did comment on the officiating, saying that the play Gillman got upset about "was a right call."

Ply Leads South Past North In Annual Shrine Grid Tilt, 35-10

MIAMI (UPI) — Baylor's Bobby Ply, sought by the Pittsburgh Steelers and the rival pro league's Dallas Cowboys, was an even more sought after prospect today as the outstanding player in the North-South Shrine Game.

Ply stole the show and passed the North right out of the Orange Bowl before 18,892 chilled spectators Monday night as his three scoring passes and personal touchdown smash led the South to an easy 35-10 conquest.

The Southwest Conference ace completed 14 passes in 26 attempts for 185 yards and touchdowns via the airways to Tennessee's Glenn Glass and Miami's Larry Wilson and Bill Miller in 50-degree temperature. The other South score came on an 18-yard touchdown sprint by Miami's Jim Vollenweider. Roland Jackson of Rice booted all five extra points.

Michigan's Bennie McRae scored the lone North touchdown on a five-yard pass from Arizona's Eddie Wilson and also backed over for a two-point conversion. Two other North threats which bore no fruit were a 65-yard kickoff return by Arizona State's Nolen Jones and a game record 73-yard pass from Wilson to George Sefcik of Notre Dame.

That last thrust came in the final moments of the game and gave the North a first down on the South two-yard line. But the North couldn't wallop it across. Ply, on the last play of the game, tried to pass from his own end zone, partially fumbled the ball and was downed by Larry Bowie of Purdue for a North safety.

Still, the six-foot, one-inch, 190-pound Ply deservedly was voted the outstanding player of the game.

He flipped a 45-yard touchdown pass to Glass and his aerials set up Vollenweider's 18-yard scoring run in the first quarter to send the South off winging.

Ply pitched for 13 and ran for 13 more in a third South scoring drive before he personally sneaked it over from the one to give the South an insurmountable lead.

Wilson got one back for the North when a 65-yard drive paid off with his five-yard scoring toss to McRae. But that was the end of the evening for the North—whose Larry Onesti of Northwestern was named its outstanding player — except for Ply's last play yield of a safety.

Ply meanwhile fired the South 84 yards to a touchdown, ended by his eight-yard toss to Wilson, and then swept the South 54 yards to a windup touchdown on a six-yard flip to Miller.

Cincinnati Rates Heavy Favorite

By United Press International

Cincinnati and Providence, winners of the two major post-season tournaments of the 1960-61 college basketball campaign, head a powerful eight-team field in the Holiday Festival which highlights the annual rash of Christmas-week tournaments around the nation.

The Holiday Festival begins at Madison Square Garden today with afternoon and evening doubleheaders. Another fine field of eight also starts play today in the first annual Quaker City Tournament at Philadelphia.

At Oklahoma City, Wichita is back to defend its title against such strong clubs as Utah State, Seattle, Houston and Bowling Green in the All-College Tournament, which also gets underway today.

These three tournaments will hold the national spotlight for themselves only briefly, however, because something like 25 Christmas-week tournaments will be played by next Saturday night. These include the Los Angeles Classic, the Big Eight Tournament at Kansas City, the Far West Classic at Portland, Ore., and the Gulf Classic, at Shreveport, La.—all starting on Wednesday.

The Queen City Tournament at Buffalo, N. Y., the Sun Carnival at El Paso, Tex., the Hurricane Classic at Miami, Fla., and the Downeast Classic at Bangor, Me., begin on Thursday.

The Sugar Bowl at New Orleans, La., the Motor City Classic, at Detroit and the Evansville Holiday Tournament at Evansville, Ind., begin Friday.

The 10-year-old Holiday Festival has had its ups and downs but shapes up this year as the No. 1 Christmas tournament.

Cincinnati, last season's NCAA tournament champion and now the nation's second-ranked team, and Providence, surprise winner of the 1961 National Invitation Tournament, are both entered in the powerful field. New York University, St. John's of New York, Wisconsin, Dayton, LaSalle and Dartmouth are the other entries.

Cincinnati goes against St. John's in one half of today's afternoon doubleheader with LaSalle matched against Dartmouth in the other game. In the night doubleheader, it will be Providence against Wisconsin and Dayton against New York University. The Dayton-NYU games matches the only two undefeated teams in the tournament.

The pairings in the Quaker City Tournament are Duquesne vs. Wyoming, Penn State vs. Iowa, Pennsylvania vs. Holy Cross, and Villanova vs. Niagara. Duquesne, making a powerful bid to rank among the nation's top teams as it was in the 1950s, is rated the most dangerous team in the field.

Thurston, Ringo Head NFL Pro Squad On All-Star Grid Team

NEW YORK (UPI) — Fred Thurston and Jim Ringo of the Green Bay Packers and Jimmy Patton of the New York Giants, whose unglamorized feats only occasionally make headlines were the outstanding choices today on the United Press International 1961 National Football League All-Star team.

The All-Star backfield of quarterback Sonny Jurgensen of the Philadelphia Eagles, halfbacks Paul Hornung of the Packers and Lenny Moore of the Baltimore Colts and fullback Jimmy Brown of the Cleveland Browns accounted for a combined total of 67 touchdowns by passing, rushing or pass-catching this season.

Roosevelt Brown, New York Giants offensive tackle, was honored for the sixth consecutive season. Cleveland's Brown and Gino Marchetti, Baltimore Colts defensive end, each was chosen for the fifth straight year and Patton for the fourth in a row.

The team, selected by a 42-man panel comprised of three regular NFL writers from each league city, lined up like this:

Defense—Ends, Marchetti and Jim Katcavage, New York; tackles, Henry Jordan, Green Bay, and Alex Karras, Detroit Lions; middle linebacker, Joe Schmidt, Detroit; outside linebackers, Bill Forester and Dan Currie, Green Bay; corner halfbacks, Erich Barnes, New York, and Jesse Whittenton, Green Bay; safety, Patton and Johnny Sample, Pittsburgh.

Eleven of these players are holdovers from last year's all-NFL team. They are Hornung, Moore, Jimmy Brown, Roosevelt Brown, Smith and Ringo on offense, and Marchetti, Karras, Jordan, Forrester and Patton on defense.

Thurston, Green Bay's brilliant 250-pound blocking guard who is a four-season NFL veteran, was the most popular choice on the team, attracting 33 of a possible 42 votes.

Patton, who occasionally grabs some attention with his pass interceptions (he had 8 this season), was runnerup in the voting with 31 ballots, while Ringo had 30 votes. Hornung was next with 28.

Roosevelt Brown, the Giants' sturdy 245-pound offensive tackle, now has been chosen on every NFL All-Star team since 1956.

Blanda Won't Hang Up Spikes Yet

HOUSTON (UPI) — Reports that veteran quarterback George Blanda might retire from professional football were officially spiked today.

K. S. Bud Adams, owner of the American Football League champion Houston Oilers, announced that Blanda, halfback Billy Cannon and fullback Charley Toar all agreed Monday to terms for the 1962 season.

Adams said he could have had them sign their new contracts shortly after the Oilers beat San Diego 10-3 on Sunday for the second successive title.

"The only reason they didn't sign their contracts on the plane en route back to Houston was because everybody was having such a good time and I didn't want to bring it up," Adams said.

Reports circulated last week indicated that Blanda, the AFL all-league quarterback and player of the year this season, might decide to retire.

Blanda and Cannon were chosen on the first offensive team of the United Press International all-AFL squad and Tolar was named fullback on the UPI second offensive team.

Southwest Cagers In Holiday Meets

By United Press International

Southwest Conference teams complete their shakedown cruise this week before embarking on the title race after the New Year's break.

Only the Rice Owls will be idle this week as conference teams compete in holiday tournaments and doubleheaders.

Arkansas' Razorbacks, the surprise of the season thus far with a 6-1 record, will get a good test Friday and Saturday in the Poinsetta Tournament in Greenville, S.C. against Clemson on opening night and either Furman or Georgia Tech the following night.

Defending champion Texas Tech, boasting a 4-1 mark, joins Texas in playing host to a pair of visiting outsiders in two doubleheaders at Lubbock Thursday and Friday nights. Thursday night will find Texas 5-2 playing Mississippi and Tech meeting William and Mary. They swap foes Friday night.

Baylor's 3-5 record still might be good enough to win the Sun Bowl Tournament Thursday and Friday. The Bears play Texas Western the first night and then meet the winner of the New Mexico-New Mexico State game Friday night.

Texas A&M 4-2 and TCU 1-5 compete in the all-College tourney at Oklahoma City Tuesday through Friday. Tuesday night, TCU opens against Houston, while the Aggies open Wednesday night against Wichita.

TCU is in the same bracket with Oklahoma City and Utah State, while the Aggies are bracketed with Seattle and Bowling Green.

Southern Methodist 5-3 figures in the only single activity of the week, hosting St. Louis at Dallas Friday night.

Last week's highlights saw Tech whip Oklahoma 70-42, Arkansas nip Louisiana State 84-81 in overtime and SMU down Alabama 71-66 and Vanderbilt 91-73 with Jan Loudermilk whipping up a 37-point performance-high for the season among conference scorers.

Texas A&M downed Auburn 62-50, but bowed to UCLA 81-71; Rice bowed to Creighton 91-87 and beat Vanderbilt 71-64 but had its Saturday night date with Drake canceled because of bad weather at Des Moines.

Texas whipped East Texas 82-67, Baylor fell to Tulane 66-55 and to Georgia Tech 57-44 and TCU concocted its first victory of the season by downing Centenary 63-61 then lost to Oklahoma City 73-62.

Lone Star Teams 'n Cage Tourneys

By United Press International

Tournament activity will occupy half the Lone Star Conference basketball membership this week.

Southwest Texas, East Texas and Sam Houston will compete in the Southwestern AAU Tournament in Dallas Thursday through Saturday, while S. F. Austin plays Thursday and Friday in the McNeese Invitational at Lake Charles, La.

Single games will find Howard Payne hosting Abilene Christian at Brownwood Thursday and Lamar Tech at Tulsa Saturday.

Pace-setting Texas A&I rests this week on its 7-1 record, while Sul Ross also takes the week off.

Aussies Take 2-0 Lead In Davis Cup

MELBOURNE, Australia (UPI) —Roy Emerson and Rod Laver, ignoring a broiling sun that sent the temperature over the 100-degree mark, gave Australia a 2-0 lead over Italy in the Davis Cup challenge round today by matches.

Emerson, who won the American championship at Forest Hills, N.Y., last September by downing Laver in the final, needed only 90 minutes to whip Nicola Pietrangeli, 8-6, 6-4, 6-0. Then Laver, the Wimbledon champion, chased towering Orlando Sirola off the court, 6-1, 6-4, 6-3.

The straight set victories, witnessed by 11,000 cheering partisans at the Kooyong Tennis Stadium, left the vanquished Italians panting for breath. It also left the Aussies needing only one more victory in the remaining three matches to wrap up the cup for the 10th time in the last 12 years.

Rens Surge Into Lead In ABL

By United Press International

The tireless Pittsburgh Rens spent the holiday hustling into first place in the Eastern Division of the American Basketball League.

A one-handed jump shot by Bucky Bolyard with 12 seconds remaining gave the Rens a 108-106 victory over the Cleveland Pipers Monday night in the only ABL game. It was the Rens' fifth game in five nights.

Connie Hawkins, who scored 26 points in Pittsburgh's 100-86 victory over the Chicago Majors Sunday, contributed 37 in the Rens' triumph at Cleveland. Dick Barnett led the Pipers with 23.

PLAYS WITH RENS

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Archie Dees will make his first appearance as a member of the Pittsburgh Rens in an American Basketball League game against the Chicago Majors here Thursday night. The former Indiana University star, released two weeks ago by the St. Louis Hawks of the National Basketball Association, agreed Monday to play with the Rens.

Celtics Making Runaway of NBL Pro Cage Race With 26-4 Mark

By United Press International

If the Boston Celtics' supremacy in the National Basketball Association is ever to be challenged, their Eastern Division rivals will have to stop playing "dead."

With the season almost halfway over, neither Philadelphia, Syracuse nor New York has defeated the world champions.

The Celtics, who are making a runaway of the Eastern Division race with a 26-4 record, have lost all four games to Western teams —twice to Cincinnati and once each to Los Angeles and Detroit —while beating each of their eastern rivals four times.

Boston took on eastern "cousin" Syracuse Christmas night and didn't do any gift-giving, handing the Nationals a 127-122 defeat behind Tom Heinsohn's 45 points.

In other NBA contests, the Chicago Packers, fined $2,500 for showing up late by league president Maurice Podoloff, got revenge against the Detroit Pistons with a 118-97 victory in the opener of a doubleheader at Madison Square Garden; the Knickerbockers outlasted the Warriors, 136-135, in double overtime, and Elgin Baylor's 40 points paced the Los Angeles Lakers over the Cincinnati Royals, 141-127.

Heinsohn connected on 18 of 35 field goal attempts as Boston coasted to victory, with Syracuse closing the gap only in the last five minutes. Sam Jones chipped in with 23 points.

Walt Bellamy's 35 points topped the Packer attack as they rolled up an 18-point lead in the third quarter and were never in trouble. Gene Shue scored 20 points for Detroit.

The Knicks beat the Warriors on Johnny Green's basket with 13 seconds remaining of the second overtime period. Wilt Chamberlain had 59 points and 36 rebounds for Philadelphia while Richie Guerin led the Knicks with 40 points.

The Lakers were aided by Jerry West's 31 points as LA had six other players in double figures, offsetting 40 points by Oscar Robertson and 35 by Wayne Embry for the Royals.

N.M. State Slates Busy Cage Action

By United Press International

Defending co-champion New Mexico State, which has won only two of six starts this season, opens a busy four-night round of activity tonight against one of the two teams it has managed to beat.

The Aggies host New Mexico at Las Cruces, entertain Brigham Young there Wednesday night, then face New Mexico again Thursday night in the opening round of the Sun Bowl Tournament at El Paso. Friday night they play the winner of the Texas Western-Baylor game in Sun Bowl action.

Baeza Rides Home Three Winners

By United Press International

Braulio Baeza, 21-year-old Panamanian jockey, played Santa Claus to his backers at Tropical Park on Christmas Day, booting home three winners, a second and a third in six mounts.

After starting the $807.00 daily double with Keep Ideals ($26.70) in the opener, Baeza turned in a brilliant ride aboard Humane Leader to win the $11,675 Christmas Handicap before 11,650 fans.

Baeza completed his triple in the finale by scoring on Pepe El Zorro for a $5.20 payoff.

Humane Leader, a 4-year-old son of Palestinian, responded to Baeza's urging to rally from third in the midstretch for a half-length victory. Greentree Stable's Eurasia, the favorite ridden by Herbie Hinojosa, closed with a rush to earn place money, a nose in front of Level Flight.

NBA Teams Have To Be Punctual

NEW YORK (UPI)—National Basketball Association teams today were warned to show up on time for their games in the future.

The warning was contained in a record fine of $2,500 levelled against the Chicago Packers by NBA president Maurice Podoloff when they arrived almost an hour late for their meeting with the Detroit Pistons Monday night in the opener of a doubleheader at Madison Square Garden.

Coveting Clarified

The following editorial comment is taken from a sister, Freedom Newspaper, the Santa Ana (California) Register. It centers upon an exchange between the editor and a letter writer who seeks a meeting of the minds in relation to the Coveting Commandment, the Golden Rule and the Declaration of Independence. Since our editorial policy is based upon the concepts enunciated in these famous expositions, we are reproducing this editorial, and others forthcoming in this series, for our readers.

We have a very thoughtful letter written by Robert L. Larsen who was chairman of the Santa Ana Chamber of Commerce Educational Committee and a former member of the Santa Ana School Board, which we want to acknowledge in two parts.

We want to do this because he made a good suggestion, the understanding of which is very germane to our general well-being. For this reason, we are going to quote his letter and then attempt to do what he has requested—interpret our understanding of the Coveting Commandment, and in later issues, the Declaration of Independence and the Golden Rule. And we will try to answer his questions in a later issue.

We want to commend Mr. Larsen for his willingness to think out loud, so that we can have more light on human - relations subjects. Too few people holding positions of responsibility, as Mr. Larsen has held, are willing to do this. We commend him for his time and energy in presenting his ideas. We quote from his letter:

"In your editorial of November 3, you said I evaded answering certain questions you raised. I have attempted to give my interpretation of the three moral guides you refer to, namely, the Coveting Commandment, the Golden Rule and the Declaration of Independence. Since you have your own interpretation of these documents and I have mine, I feel we are at that point where we should have a meeting of minds on exactly what we are talking about."

We will now attempt to explain our understanding, as of now, of the Coveting Commandment. We confess we did not have our present idea of the Coveting Commandment until we had read "The Ten Commandments" by Taylor G. Bunch. He opened up a whole new vista to us of the importance of this commandment.

Coveting has two meanings, one good, one bad. It is good to covet understanding and property like that of others by earning it; it is not good to covet what belongs to someone else.

Coveting, as used in the Tenth Commandment, means "to long inordinately for something belonging to another." The commandment, thus respects private property. One could not covet if no one owned anything. Webster says "inordinate" means, "lacking order or right arrangement; disorder; disorderly; unregulated; unrestrained; not limited to rules prescribed, nor to the usual bounds; excessive; immoderate."

We believe that if we do not covet we will get what goods and services we need from others on a voluntary basis; by giving the other party something he would prefer to have in exchange for what he has.

Coveting is in the mind of man.

THE SIN OF COVETOUSNESS

Since we are indebted to Mr. Bunch for changing our interpretation of this commandment, we want to quote briefly:

"Since covetousness is a sin that leads to all other sins, the tenth commandment is a summary, not only of the second table of the decalogue, but of the whole law. The violation of this precept may lead to the transgression of every other. Covetousness is the fountain from which flow the poisonous streams of idolatry, hypocrisy, Sabbath desecration, disobedience to parents, murder, fornication, stealing, and lying or the bearing of false witness."

If people did not covet they would never initiate force against others. They would not believe in taxes, because taxes are based on initiated force or the threats of same. The government, then, would be supported on a voluntary basis where both parties believed they were benefited.

Mr. Bunch quotes John Burr in his "Studies on the Ten Commandments," page 146, as follows:

"Trace every breach of the moral law, whether murder, adultery, theft, slander, or any of the sins of which these are the heads and representatives, back to their source, and it will be found that it has been suggested and inspired by one or another of the vices of which covetousness is the chief."

As stated above, the Coveting Commandment is a natural law that was discovered and existed long before Moses' time.

If there are any exceptions as a guide to human relations not covered by this interpretation, we would like to have the oversight pointed out.

Now that we have made known our interpretation of the Coveting Commandment, we do not see how there can be a meeting of minds until Mr. Larsen puts in writing his interpretation. The Register, of course, will gladly publish it.

We'll go into our interpretation or understanding of the Golden Rule and the Declaration of Independence in the following editorial.

Moral Guides Interpreted

In the above we quoted part of a letter from Robert L. Larsen in which he said that he seemed to have a different interpretation of the three moral guides The Register uses to determine right, namely the Coveting Commandment, the Golden Rule and the Declaration of Independence, than The Register did. We attempted to set down our interpretation of the Coveting Commandment and asked Mr. Larsen to make his known.

Now we continue to quote from Mr. Larsen's letter. We have numbered his statements and questions so that we can answer them numerically. He writes:

"(1) For example, you said in your editorial that the Declaration of Independence 'set up a new form of government.' The Declaration did not set up any 'form' of government . . . If you believe the Declaration did, as you say, set up a form of government, what was the form? (2) Do you believe the Constitution of the United States provided a form of government that was based on the principles stated by Jefferson in his Declaration? (3) If so, do you feel Article 1, Section 1.8 of the Constitution which states 'The Congress shall have the power to lay and collect taxes . . . to pay debts and provide for the . . . general welfare of the United States' is in violation of the Golden Rule or the Coveting Commandment? (4) Do you have an alternative to the principle of taxation to raise funds for the support of an organized society? (5) What type of society do you consider the ultimate in terms of service rendered, protection given and rights guaranteed to its citizens?

"(6) You asked in your editorial if 'the majority forced the minority to pay for a newspaper or a church that the minority believed was advocating falsehoods and would lead to tyranny, would that be violating the Coveting Commandment?' I don't know what the Coveting Commandment has to do with this question. Any such action would be prohibited by Article I, the first amendment to the Constitution and the first of the Bill of Rights which states that 'Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of the press.' Therefore, any such act passed by a majority of voters in a community would be declared unconstitutional as soon as it was tested in the courts. This would be due to the guarantees given to us by the 'just' government recommended by Thomas Jefferson in his Declaration of Independence and over which he presided as President from 1800-1808."

ANSWERS TO MR. LARSEN'S STATEMENTS AND QUESTIONS

(1) We possibly should have said "set up a new concept of government." Mr. Larsen took the statement out of context after we had said the Declaration of Independence "tried to set up a government where all people were equally free to have the right to life, liberty and pursue happiness." It tried to get into the minds of people the concept that would permit such a government, and the concept must come before the actual form. It must be in the hearts of men before it can be put into operation. Of course, it outlined the ideologies of a relatively new concept of government that very few people had ever believed in. For generations they had believed in the divine right of kings and that one man was superior to another as to rights and had a right to rule over another against his will. This concept was relatively new.

(2) We do not believe the Constitution of the United States was based on the principles set forth by Jefferson in the Declaration. We do not so believe because it permitted one man to own another. It permitted aggressive force to be used, which denied the principle of the Declaratain of Independence, that all men are created equally free, and that governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed individual, not from the consent of the majority.

(3) Article I, Section 1.8 of the Constitution is incompatible with the Declaration of Independence. It is based on aggressive force and gives the government the power that no man has a right to have. It sets up a double standard of rightness, and a double standard of rightness, in reality, means no standard of rightness.

(4) Our answer is that the government should render service so valuable to the individual that he willingly pays for it. We are quite sure that we would want to hire a policeman and hire records kept and want to voluntarily pay for it. And we do not think we are so much better than other people. We believe they would also pay for anything that they believed would give them satisfaction.

(5) The type of society we want is to have a government with the consent of the individual. And if a man doesn't want to use any part of the government, he should not be obliged to pay for it. He, of course, would not get the services from the government that he did not pay for. We, to a degree, are doing that with the roads. If a man does not use them, he does not pay for them, unless his use is so minor that the cost of collecting would be greater than the income. This should apply generally.

(6) It would be a violation of the Coveting Commandment according to our interpretation, but we do not know how Mr. Larsen interprets the Coveting Commandment until he puts it in written form. He quotes the commandment but he doesn't explain what the words mean. We must have a meeting of minds on the meaning of "coveting anything that is thy neighbor's."

We used an illustration that applies equally to schools or churches or freedom of the press. It is a little easier to see when it relates to churches and freedom of the press than when it relates to schools, but there can be no more harmful coveting than grabbing the minds of the youth of the land and giving the government the power to determine what they must read and how they must be taught. If that isn't coveting, we would like Mr. Larsen to give us a definition of coveting thy neighbor's property that would not make it coveting.

Will Mr. Larsen please define "coveting" that will give him the right to go to his neighbor and force his neighbor to let him educate his child the way Mr. Larsen wants to and make his neighbor pay for it? And would Mr. Larsen contend that if the majority did it within a geographical boundary it would not be coveting? Would he contend that multiplying a thing that is coveting by a million makes it not coveting?

The Declaration of Independence was in perfect harmony with the Coveting Commandment. It attempted to set men free from the tyranny of other men. As Ayn Rand says, civilization is a process of setting man free from men, and the Declaration of Independence was an attempt to set man free from men. It contended we got our rights from the Creator; that all men were equally free to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness; and that governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed, not from the consent of the majority.

We will await Mr. Larsen's interpretation of the Coveting Commandment and the meaning of the Declaration of Independence that gives the majority the right to force the minority to pay for anything the majority desires.

How To Beat A Card Sharp!

Allen - Scott Report

ROBERT ALLEN

PAUL SCOTT

He May Be President But — As a Daddy

WASHINGTON — Caroline Kennedy is beginning to get an idea of just how uniquely important her father is.

That was graphically explained to her by an older and more knowledgeable cousin.

He and other young relatives and playmates of the four - year old miss visited the White House to view the tall, beautifully - adorned Christmas tree and other decorations. As the children were being led down a hallway for refreshments, the President and several assistants hurried by. He greeted the youngsters with a big smile and wave of his hand.

"Hi, Mr. President," halloed Caroline's spirited cousin.

As the children continued on their way, she said to the lad, "What's a President?"

"He's the boss of the government," was the prompt assertive reply.

"What's that?" demanded Caroline, even more baffled.

"He runs the country," explained the cousin. "He's like a daddy. He takes care of things."

"He's my daddy," bridled Caroline emphatically. "He's mine."

"Sure," agreed her cousin. "But he's the daddy of the country, too."

"He's my daddy," proclaimed Caroline firmly. "I'm his girl and he's my daddy."

That ended the argument. At this point, her cousin wisely dropped the matter. Intuitively, the young man must have been aware that women always have the last word and he couldn't win. So he astutely changed the subject.

LINGUISTIC LADIES — Attorney General Robert Kennedy, like his older brother the President, is proud of his wife's linguistic talents.

At a Christmas party for more than 900 foreign students in the Great Hall of the Justice Department, "Bobby," introducing his slim, modish wife, proudly noted that she speaks French.

"Say something in French dear," he urged.

"Bonjour," said Mrs. Kennedy shyly.

"Oh, honey, you can do better than that," exclaimed "Bobby." "Say something else."

"Comment ca va?" added his wife, and sat down.

Later, the Attorney General laughingly told some of his young guests, "I can parlez vous a little French when I have to. But it took me eight years to pass my second - year French. Ethel is much better at it. She made a speech in French when we visited the Ivory Coast, and did quite well."

WORDS OF WISDOM — A curious incident ocurred when Edwin Bayley was sworn in as director of public affairs of the Agency of International Development (AID), new title of the foreign aid agency.

The Bible opened on the Book of Job, and after Bayley took the oath, AID Director Fowler Hamilton read the following from Chapter 13:

"Lo, mine eye hath seen all this, mine ear hath heard and understood it."

"This is quite a coincidence," smiled Hamilton," and a very fitting one. This passage is peculariy appropriate for the job you are tackling."

"I hope it works out that way," said Bayley earnestly.

At a diplomatic gathering, Assistant Secretary of State Harlan Cleveland was expounding on a favorite subject — that amity between countries must be based on understanding of their different customs and manners.

To illustrate his point, he related a story about a discussion between an Englishman and a Malayan over the use of fingers vs the knife, fork and spoon were essential for santiary purposes. The Malayan contended he was dead wrong.

"I am certain my fingers have not been in anyone else's mouth," "But I can't say that for your tableware."

California's large, rambling, wooden Governor's Mansion, in downtown Sacramento, was built by the father of the late Lincoln Steffens, noted muckraker of the early 1900s. There has been much talk of erecting a new executive mansion in a mre desirable location.

Governor Edmund Brown, referring to that, remarked:

"My mother was born in 1879, the same year this mansion was built. But she's in much better shape."

CHRISTMAS CHEER — As Vice President Johnson has done for many years, he will hang red velvet stocking on the mantel on Christmas Eve. The Second Family traditionaily opens its gifts on Christmas morning. . . Mrs. Kennedy already has one gorgeous Christmas gift. It's a new fur coat of Somali leopard. Cut along simple lines with four buttons and a notched collar, the coat was made by a furrier who made several coats for Mrs. Dwight Eisenhower and one for Queen Elizabeth of England. Somamli leopards come from Somaliland, Africa, and coats of their fur are quite expensive — from $5,000 up.

SOCIAL WHIRL — Mrs. John Foster Dulles, wife of the late Secretary of State in the Eisenhower cabinet, is returning to the social circuit. She attended a swank reception at the Italian embassy. Other guests were Russian Ambassador "Smiling Mike" Menshikow and Finnish Abassador Seppala, who seemed to get along all right. . . .A Brazilian Naval Day party at that country's embassy, drew numerous top - drawer naval officials, headed by Admiral George Anderson, U.S. Chief of Naval Operations. The lavish buffet and various bars were heavily patronized. . . .A group of Tunisian dancers were the unusual attraction at a large dinner party by Tunisian Ambassador and Madame Habib Bourguiba. The agile gyrations of the dancers drew loud applause and exclamations, "It's the twist." Actually, it was a native dance of exceptional dexterity. One dancer, to demonstrate her perfect balance, held a water - filled urn on her head while she gyrated, lay on the floor on her stomach, touched her toes with her fingers and rose to dance again — all without spilling a drop.

Hankerings

By HENRY McLEMORE

For all its beauty, the Christmas tree is the biggest troublemaker we have in our house all year.

It causes more arguments than the budget, more harsh words more hurt feelings than unexpected guests brought to dinner, and more sulky silences than forgotton birthdays and anniversaries.

The trouble starts with the buying of the tree and continues right on through until, dry and needle - less, it is handed to the trash man.

My wife likes mammoth trees. I lean toward medium - sized ones. Nothing would make her happier than to be able to build a home around a California redwood so that it would be sticking up through the living room, all ready to be decorated for Christmas.

She does not take into consideration the height of the ceiling when she selects a tree. "We'll make it fit," she says, or, "It will fit in somehow."

I always maintain that a tree should not be more than six feet higher than the ceiling. My wife considers this "pinchy."

Once the tree is bent into place, the second round of battle begins.

My wife feels very strongly about how much decoration should go on a tree. Her idea is that 7,000,000 balls, two tons of "snow" fifty strings of lights, and 34,000 assorted stars, angels, candies, cookies and walking sticks, are about right.

I feel — just as strongly — that part of the tree should show through, or else why go to the trouble of getting a tree? This results in my taking off ornaments as fast as she puts them on, and this does not bring peace and quiet to the house.

Our major fight, however, concerns when the lights of the tree should be on, and for how long. The battle lines are sharply drawn here.

My mate wants the lights to burn 24 hours a day, until Jan. 1, beginning the minute it is put up. To turn them off a second causes her to bristle.

I am of the school that believes the lights should burn a few minutes a day at the most. They should be turned on for a fleeting second at night so passers-by will know we have a tree. Visitors should be allowed to see the tree lighted for half a minute. And, of course, the lights should have been on for the first ten minutes of Christmas Day. But she burned them all day.

Ten minutes would have been enough. Economy is not the reason — well, not the whole reason — for the way I feel. I have a deep - seated belief that the little bulbs, as tiny as they are, will not last more than a total of ten minutes and should be spared. They are tender and need tender care. So, the moment my wife turns them on, I am on the lookout for a chance to flip the switch.

The final battle comes over when to take down the tree. I am all for taking it down on January 1st at the latest. My wife would like to have it stay put until well into March or April. It breaks her heart to think of having it carted away.

So, we compromise. Last year we took down the the tree in mid-February. It was drier than a broom and about as handsome. This year I am hoping to have it out for the trash man by the end of January. But I won't.

Pegler Says:

Gene Tunney's Friendship Meant Facing Firing Line

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

The night that Gene Tunney left our dinner table in the Press Box on 45th Street and stepped over to another where four men were drinking and one of them was heckling me for no reason, he went far beyond the normal requirements of chivalry and friendship. Coming from a very tough part of New York and having a brother on the cops, Gene knew that a man always runs the risk of a knifing or a shooting when he deals himself into trouble with strangers who are drinking. Furthermore, he obviously was Gene Tunney the retired champion, all the more reason to keep a still tongue. A fellow who goes looking for trouble has no right to complain if he gets an overdose of it. A knife goes in and does its work in a second and a fellow who carries a knife doesn't draw it to pare his nails. But the quarrelsome one pulled no knife and after Gene had boosted him out of the Press Box the others were very genteel. They bought a drink for our table and went into the other room for dinner.

Frank Graham, Jr., the writer who brought this up in an article on Tunney's personality in Sports Illustrated, must be the son of my cherished old friend who was chasing fire engines for the Evening Sun in Brooklyn in the First War when I was sliding down the brass pole for the U.P. and hitching up my suspenders on the run for the Interborough station at Brooklyn Bridge, answering the same alarms. The Evening Sun was a great school for cubs and a Sun cub thereafter could hang up his hat and go to work in any shop in the country. My own U.P. under Roy Howard, Bill Hawkins and Fred Ferguson later became equally famous for the same reason. The British were loading ships in Brooklyn and the Germans had a habit of setting them afire. One morning some stranger came up to me inside the firelines on a pier and showed me a handful of grain with little fish hooks in it. He said the dirty Huns, as we called the Germans in those days, were sifting fish hooks into the grain, which would be fed to the British horses and mules in France. This seemed very reprehensible, but our rewrite man must have been a hyphenate because he said these animals were hauling ammunition and guns up to the front in France to kill German soldiers.

Frankie Graham and I went our separate ways for years, to meet again on baseball and fights in the twenties, which was when I began to run across Tunney. I had a bashful longing to touch this kid's arm or carry his bucket after his first big fight in the old Garden in which Harry Greb smashed his nose with a butt in the first round. When Gene went to his corner he blew his nose and both eyes popped out like purple plums as often happens if a fellow blows when his nose is smashed. Thereafter it was awful. I sat under Tunney's corner and you may skip this part if you are having a meal — at each intermission he bent over the bucket and bled a cascade.

I was always a slow performer so the old plant was almost empty when I put my typewriter in the crate and started for the exit. Just then I saw Tunney, hooded under a bath towel, stumbling out alone except that some swipe had volunteered to steer him in his blindness.

This distinctly was not his manager, Doc Bagley, whom I had seen behind him in the ring. Bagley showed up next day to count the money, and complained that he had done enough needlework to make a suit of clothes mending Gene's eyebrows the night before. Gene fired him and bought himself back for $5,000. Bagley had gone out on the town all night, leaving the kid recently back from his hitch with the Marines in France to groupe his way home alone.

Gene was skinny as a shad, but he began going into the woods to inhale piney air and build up his legs and barrel with roadwork and directed diet. He also used out-of-town words like "contemptible" for "lousy" and "scoundrel" for "sombidge." Obviously, a fighter who used such language was in the wrong racket.

Gene thought the reporters of that day were needlessly skeptical or hostile, but he had some flaws himself. He threw in with Dudley Field Malone, a young lawyer of the Woodrow Wilson cult, better known as Deadly Fumes Malone, an awful phoney who later latched onto the defense with Clarence Darrow in the Monkey Trial in Dayton, Tenn. He messed around with Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., when the Vanderbilt name was a challenge to all right - thinking members of the lower orders. And he seemed to think it was an honor to be allowed to pay old Homer Cummings enormous fees to bail him out of legal tangles with the likes of Boo Boo Hoff, the Philadelphia bootlegger. Homer later was FDR's Attorney General.

Gene thought these characters were quality. The reporters began to satirize his social activities. One of his managers signed a contract with a syndicate and when Gene later learned that his daily essay, as champion, was worth ten times the stated amount he refused to collaborate. So his ghost would meekly hang around and wheedle little things out of his camp and weave them into deathless prose.

One afternoon at Speculator, when Gene was training for the second fight with Dempsey, a slim, dark-haired young woman came into the settlement and was welcomed at Gene's cottage, ostensibly as an interviewer for a magazine. Bill Corum, of the New York Journal, apparently was the only one who knew that she was Miss Polly Lauder, of Greenwich, and that they would be married soon. He broke the story by himself.

Gene hated me a long time for disclosing his contract with Boo Boo Hoff when he could have won me as an ally by telling the simple truth instead of trying to put me off with a panicky explanation which made his part look all the worse.

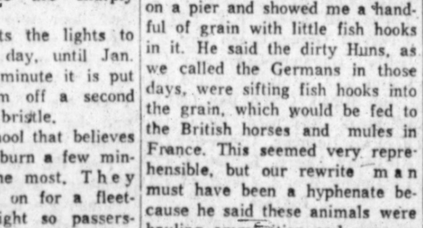

But I had married meanwhile and when Polly Tunney and Julie Pegler became affectionate friends our ridiculous feud fused into the friendship which brought him out of his chair to take on four strangers, all of them drinking, that night in the Press Box long ago.

AMERICA'S NEWSPAPER READING HABITS

OF THE 54 MILLION HOUSEHOLDS IN THE 48 CONTINENTAL STATES:

86.4% READ AT LEAST ONE NEWSPAPER ON AN AVERAGE WEEKDAY;

80.4% READ AT LEAST ONE PAPER EACH DAY;

6% READ ONE OR MORE PAPERS ON A PASS-ALONG BASIS.

FOUR OUT OF FIVE ADULTS READ A NEWSPAPER ON ANY GIVEN WEEKDAY.

(TOTAL READINGS: 125.5 MILLION ADULTS; 12.75 MILLION TEEN-AGERS.)

53% OF READERS CLIPPED AN ITEM OTHER THAN ADVERTISING IN THE LAST THREE MONTHS;

27% STILL HAVE THE CLIPPING;

18% SENT CLIPPING TO SOMEONE ELSE.

THE PRINTED WORD—Newspapers are here to stay. Not that anyone doubted it, but a recent survey shows that newspapers reach every segment of the American public and are an important part of most of our lives. Highlights of the survey, supervised by the American Newspaper Publishers Association, are shown in the chart above. The survey covered 4,826 interviews with persons 15 years and up in 622 different places. Other figures: 72 per cent of the country's teen-agers (15 to 20) read a newspaper on any given day; for adults, it is 88 per cent. Interestingly, 49 per cent of those interviewed said they would "feel quite lost" without a newspaper; only 28 per cent felt that way about television. Heaviest readership is among the better-educated, higher-income class of people.

Tough Welfare Plan Backs Work Program

By JERRY REYNOLDS

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — California has a tough welfare program that is "conservative to the point that it's stimulating relief recipients to go back to work," according to William R. MacDougall, general counsel for the County Supervisors Association of California.

"We know our program is tough because the state and federal governments often suggest to us that we are too tough," he said.

Despite this admission, MacDougall called the controversial welfare program of Newburgh, N. Y., a "futile conservative rebellion against a liberal welfare program."

He pointed out that the largest part of the welfare load throughout the country is generous. This is because the Federal government draws the guidelines for the categorical aid programs such as old age security, and aid to needy children, blind and disabled, and the states must stay within these guides to be eligible for federal aid.

But local governments have a free hand in administering general relief to persons who cannot qualify for categorical relief. It is in this area, according to MacDougall, that California counties have tightened up to encourage recipients to seek jobs.

"We have toughened up to this point," said MacDougall. 'We won't let anyone starve."

Despite his claim that Newburgh started a "futile conservative rebellion," McDougall admitted that California counties already are making eight of the 13 restrictions proposed by Newburgh.

For example, Newburgh's resolve to deny relief to able-bodied men who refuse employment caused MacDougall to ask:

"Where has Newburgh been? This has been standard operating policy in the general relief programs of California counties for years."

Take Newburgh's plan to pay relief in food, clothing and rent vouchers instead of cash. This is prohibited by federal law for the categorical aid programs, according to MacDougall. In general relief where it is permitted, some California counties use vouchers only in problem cases where relief money isn't beng spent properly. Other counties issue vouchers in all cases.

It also is standard policy in California to deny aid to families whose breadwinner has volunatarily quit his job except in the aid to needy children program.

"You just don't starve children because a parent quit a job," MacDougall said. He said in these cases vocational rehabilitation is the answer, keeping the pressure on the parent to find work.

MacDougall also criticized Newburgh's proposal to limit relief to new residents to one or two weeks of aid.

"Far better," he said, "is California's system of returning the non-resident to his legal residence but caring for him pending his return."

California counties, MacDougall said, flatly reject Newburgh's proposal to refuse relief to mothers who continue having illegitimate children.

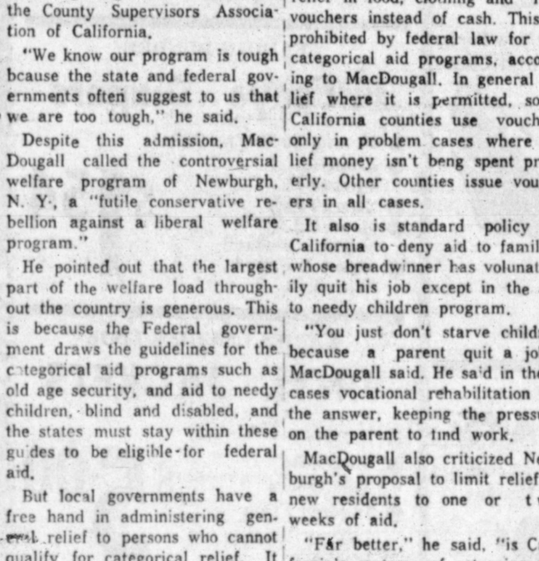

"It is neither desirable nor practical to remove all illegitimate children from their homes so that the mother can be denied relief," MacDougall said. "Such action could only result in greater expense."

He said under a recent Federal law, it is now possible to get Federal help in sharing the cost of placing children in a foster home if their own home is not fit. He said the finding of unfitness of a home deals with the entire home environment rather than whether the child was illegitimate.

MacDougall called Newburgh's plan "arbitrary and punitive." Newburgh's plan, if all its parts were legal, would work only as long as there are a few Newburghs. If every community were to become a Newburgh, the plan would soon lose its punch—which is obviously that of stimulating needy people to go somewhere else.

"Far better as an approach to the problems that plague Newburgh would be imposition of a residence requirement as a condition for aid — a requirement that New York state does not (but California does) have.

"The real value in the Newburgh plan lies in focusing public attention on the desperate need for legislative revisions aimed at halting what has become a massive dash to dependency on others as a way of life."

SIZE OF THE PROBLEM — Current overhaul of federal-state public assistance programs touches on the lives of over six million people. Newschart, above, shows major causes of dependency. Russia Tries To Copy 'Sister City' Program

TOKYO (UPI) — The Japan-United States "Sister City" program is winning friends for both countries. The Russians are trying to copy it.

Although some American cities tend to treat their Japanese sister cities more like country cousins, the project is one of the most successful of those begun under the People - to - People program initiated by former President Dwight D. Eisenhower, according to a former U.S. State Department official.

The former official is Conger Reynolds, Washington, D. C., who recently completed an extensive tour to most of the almost three dozen cities in Japan participating in the program.

"The sister city affiliation is only one part of the People - to-People program," Reynolds said in an interview. "But it is one of the most important parts. On the whole, it is growing and developing very nicely and doing much to make good relations between the people."

Reynolds, who made the tour of the Japanese cities at his own expense but with the backing of the State Department, said it was "my way of helping the People-to - People program — one way of working for peace."

Reynolds was visiting some of the Japanese cities at about the time a Russian visitor was proposing that Japanese cities make similar tieups with Soviet cites. The Russian visitor was First Deputy Premier Anastas Mikoyan, the number two man in the Kremlin heirarchy.

Mikoyan made serious proposals for sister city tieups between Oska and Leningrad and Kyoto and Kiev during his visit to the two Japanese cities. The Japanese did not formally accept the Mikoyan proposals at that time but Soviet officials said the suggestions were being followed up. They also are being expanded. A Soviet group went to Hiroshima to make arrangements for sister city ties between the world's first atomic - bombed city and Stalingrad.

Reynolds believes the American Japanese sister city program is too far advanced and proceeding too smoothly for the Russians to make any serious threat to it immediately. But he expressed serious concern about the obvious lack of enthusiasm by many of the participating American cities.

The most serious offender, according to Reynolds, is Newport, R. I., which has a tieup with Shimoda, a port city south of Tokyo. Reynolds said Newport had done so little that it was embarrassing. He noted that Shimoda was particularly important in Japan - U.S. ties because it was there that the first U.S. consulate was established more that a century ago by Townsend Harris.

Also getting a demerit was Boston. But Reynolds said Boston had entered into its tieup with Kyoto only reluctantly and could not be blamed completely. He said Kyoto, the so - called cutural-capital of Japan, asked specifically for the Boston tieup because of Boston's cultural background. But Boston officials agreed to the tieup only after prodding by U.S. State Department officials.

Reynolds cited Portland, Ore., which has a tieup with Sapporo, for its enthusiastic support of the program. He also praised San Diego, which has a tieup with Yokohama, and said most of the California cities participating in the program showed more enthusiasm as a general rule.

The big problems in the program are on the American side, he said. And the biggest problem is money. He said most of the councils in the Japanese cities usually set aside a small amount of funds for use in promoting the sister city ties. But in the American cities the money almost always must be obtained by private donations.

Reynolds said officials in many participating American cities fail to sufficiently "spread the responsibilities for the progrm within the community." He also said big problems are created by changes of administration in the American cities because most of the work is done by committees appointed by city officials. When the administration changes, the work often must be started anew, frequently with less enthusiasm.

The sister city program is carried out in many countries but Japan is by far the biggest. Next to Japan, French cities have more ties with American cities than any other country. Germany is a close third with England far behind in fourth.

Record Firm Helps Spread Christianity

NEW YORK (UPI) — A major problem that confronts many successful clergyman is the money that accompanies a rise to prominence in the pulpit.

Should he accept his wealth as an earthy reward for his achievement? Or should he turn it back to the church and live as modestly as the less well paid and less successful minister?

These are not easy question to anwer, and often when the decision is made to accept a high income, the man who does so is criticized widely by other ministers and even some laymen who themselves have comfortable incomes.

The problems of business success in the ministry have been given considerable thought by a handsome young Southern Baptist clergyman who worked his way through divinity school as a radio sportscaster and now is a hi-fi missionary to the American home.

The Rev. Jarsell McCracken, 33, of Waco, Tex., developed a recording ministry in the conviction that Christianity not only starts in the home but must be built there. He also wanted to do something to elevate the most popular hymns from the area of religious rock 'n' roll and hillbilly renditions.

The result is Word Records, a $3 million-a-year business that has put McCracken as president, in a financially comfortable position as it has his two chief aides, Tom Norfleet, executive vice president, and B. M. Norcross Jr., secretary - treasurer. They have built a record library of songs and Bible lessons for children, hymns and chorales of some of the best - known church music groups, family study programs and solos by such well - known performers as Ethel Waters.

Most of the business is done through direct selling in the home, but some records are sold by mail and in stores. The chief aim of McCracken is to teach children Christian ideals through phonograph records they can hear over and over again throughout the week.

"If these are moral and ethical teachings provided children, it will be something they can carry into life," McCracken said in an interview here.

Although he has no church in which to preach regularly on Sunday, McCracken feels that he has a ministry. The fact that it is financially sound means it is theologically successful too, as far as he is concerned.

"If you go into a business, whether religious or not, you have to go into it to make money or you can't operate very long," he said. "We are in a religious business. Our purpose is to bring the Christian influence into the home. We can't do this without a sound financial basis and operating at a profit. Our purpose is spiritual but we must make the corporation sound.

"I think it is un-Christian for someone to go into business and fail. The Christian religion demands the best of a person. The so-called humility of sackcloth and ashes is a false humility. Some people excuse their failures on a religious basis — you are not supposed to make money, they say. Those who criticize often don't have money and would like to."

McCracken said that a large part of Word Records' profits goes back into the business, mainly to develop new ideas. It takes a lot of money to launch a record program. Right now, the company is preparing a series of testimonials by members of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes.

"It is essentially wrong for money to be the primary interest of anyone, however," McCracken said. "Money is not a worthy goal. It is what you do to get the money and after you get it what you do with it to build a Christian life that matters."
