U.S. pulls out of embargo

Administration hopes shift will end war in Bosnia

■ New step sends signal U.S. doesn't support keeping weapons from reaching Muslim Bosnian government, Pentagon official said.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Clinton administration is hoping a shift on enforcement of the Bosnian arms embargo will push the Bosnian Serbs toward a diplomatic settlement ending the long war in the former Yugoslavia.

As of midnight tonight, U.S. warships patrolling the Adriatic Sea will stop diverting or delaying vessels suspected of carrying weapons bound for Bosnia, senior American officials said Friday.

The immediate effect may well be small since most weapons enter the region by air. As well, only three ships out of 42,000 challenged since the maritime embargo began 17 months ago were found to have weapons bound for Bosnia, the officials said.

The United States maintains that the embargo prohibiting sales to all sides has placed the Muslims at a disadvantage against the better-armed Bosnian Serbs.

The new step "sends a signal the United States doesn't support the arms embargo" that has kept weapons from reaching the Muslim Bosnian government, one senior Pentagon official said.

He noted that the approach should only be reinforced by the Republican takeover of Congress. Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas has called for Washington to act on its own and lift the embargo.

Congress voted last summer to cut off all funds for enforcing the arms embargo by Nov. 15 if the Bosnian Serbs did not agree to a settlement by the deadline. President Clinton approved taking the action several days in advance of that deadline.

The Serbs have rejected a five-nation plan that would require them to relinquish about one-third of the territory they have captured.

Author recalls 'visit to North Pole' in books

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

What child hasn't wanted to visit the North Pole to see Santa Claus, the reindeer and the elves?

Well, Dallas author R.W. "Bob" Thompson Jr. did just that, in his imagination, as a 6-year-old child.

Now he's 66 and has written his experiences at the North Pole in a series of children's books called "The North Pole Chronicles."

Thompson said he wanted to relive his adventures in the books for his 11 grandchildren — four of whom live in Midland: Michelle, 7, Robert, 5, Michael, 3 and Coleman, 23 months. They are the children of Bobby and Sharon Floyd, who is Thompson's daughter.

As a lad, he wrote to Santa Claus asking for some stories about what happens at the North Pole. He told Kris Kringle he wanted to publish a neighborhood newspaper with the stories.

Then, Thompson claims, he was granted "every child's ultimate Christmas fantasy — a trip back to the pole in Santa's sleigh."

Thompson compiled his holiday excursions in make-shift newspapers that he distributed to friends and family.

After he was teased about his stories, he put them away only to discover them recently while going through boxes in storage.

"I thought my grandchildren would enjoy them," he said.

Separate traffic accidents leave 1 dead, injure teen

Staff Report

Two separate traffic accidents Friday night left one Midland man dead and a teen-ager injured.

In the first incident, a man was killed after pulling out in front of an intoxicated driver about 6:15 p.m. About two hours later, a prank left a 16-year-old Midland girl injured.

Robert Currasco, 42, was pulling out of his apartment complex and into traffic at 3200 Wadley Ave. when his car was struck by a vehicle driven by 17-year-old Robert Avent, according to police reports.

Currasco was transported to Memorial Hospital and Medical Center where he died about 2½ hours later of severe head and internal injuries, police said.

Avent was arrested for driving while intoxicated/manslaughter, police said.

HARTFORD, Conn. — The Rev. Walter Everett has forgiven the man who killed his son seven years ago. He also helped him get out of prison early. And today, he will officiate at the man's wedding.

"I had known people whose loved ones had been murdered, and years afterward, they still seemed consumed by the anger and the hatred. I didn't want that to happen to me," said Everett, who will perform the wedding at Golden Hill United Methodist Church in Bridgeport.

Department begins construction on Loop 250 development project

Staff Report

The Texas Department of Transportation has begun construction on a 1.5-mile stretch of Loop 250 from near State Highway 158 to north of Tremont Avenue, according to Michael V. Chetty, the department's engineer in charge of the project.

The $4.8 million project is being built by Price Construction Inc. of Big Spring, which will build the main lanes and interchanges at Tremont and Wadley avenues near the northwest corner of Loop 250, Chetty said.

"The Tremont-Wadley project is on schedule," he said. "And, we will have it well under construction by the time we award the bids for the I-20/Illinois section in July of 1995, with work to begin in September."

The Interstate 20/Illinois Avenue project came as a result of an accelerated schedule made possible by a $67.8 million supplement to the state-funded mobility category of

Bicyclist bomber kills Israeli soldiers in Gaza

NETZARIM, Gaza Strip (AP) — A suicide bomber rode his bicycle past Palestinian police in the confusion of a protest Friday, veered behind the concrete blocks of an Israeli checkpoint and detonated his explosives. Three Israeli soldiers were killed and 11 people were wounded.

The bomber was identified as a member of Islamic Jihad, one of the most violent factions opposed to peace talks between Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization.

The attack was at one of the largest crossroads on Gaza's north-south highway, jointly patrolled by Israel and Palestinian troops.

Brig. Salem Abu Omar, a PLO officer, said the bomber apparently got past police while they were blocking busloads of Palestinians from staging an anti-Israel protest at the intersection.

Army spokesmen said three Israeli soldiers were killed and six injured when the bomber set off his bomb behind the concrete blocks of the Israeli checkpoint. The bomber had the explosives strapped to his body and died in the explosion.

'When a suicide bomber manages to reach such a place there is no sure way to prevent there being victims.'

— Lt. Gen. Ehud Barak, the Israeli chief-of-staff

In Gaza City, hospital officials said four members of a Palestinian family in a passing taxi were hurt, and Omar said at least one PLO police colonel was slightly injured.

Islamic Jihad said the attack was in retaliation for the death of Hani Abed, an Islamic Jihad leader killed by a car bomb last week. Palestinians blamed the bombing on Israel.

After the attack, 3,000 people attended a rally in Gaza City outside Abed's house, where masked men fired automatic rifles and an announcer bellowed: "This is one of our first responses in answer to the death of Hani Abed."

One group of protesters wore white sheets and hoods to signify their willingness to carry out future suicide attacks.

An Islamic Jihad leaflet identified the bomber as Hisham Ismail Hamad, 21, of Abed's Sheikh Radwan neighborhood in Gaza City, Israel Radio said.

The group, reportedly funded by Iran, is the smallest and most violent of the Islamic militant groups opposed to the Israel-PLO accord.

It is separate from Hamas, which has claimed responsibility for other acts of terror similarly designed to wreck peacemaking with Israel, including the bombing of a Tel Aviv bus and kidnapping and execution of an Israeli soldier last month.

Both Israeli and Palestinian officials seemed at a loss on how to deal with such attacks in areas where their responsibilities overlap. They planned a meeting late Friday to discuss the problem.

"There are no guarantees for anything in life," the Israeli chief-of-staff, Lt. Gen. Ehud Barak, said after inspecting the site. "When a suicide bomber manages to reach such a place there is no sure way to prevent there being victims."

The explosion occurred in an area of the Gaza Strip still controlled by Israeli forces. The army pulled out of most of the strip when the PLO took over in May, but maintains patrols around Jewish settlements.

One of those settlements is Netzarim, an isolated community of 180 people 200 yards from the intersection. Clearly visible from the settlement are the outskirts of Gaza City with its 300,000 Palestinian residents.

Israeli troops and PLO police gather at the junction for joint patrols.

"We heard a tremendous boom and (saw) smoke above the junction," said Haim Yifrah, a Netzarim resident who was nearby at the time of the attack. Blood stains were splattered across the road.

Ferry begins first voyage, follows route of 'Estonia'

TALLINN, Estonia (AP) — The mood was somber and the memories painful as a new ferry set sail Friday on the route of the Estonia, which capsized and sank Sept. 28 in frigid Baltic waters, killing more than 900 people.

Among the crew aboard the Mare Balticum were survivors of the horror-filled night when the Estonia sank on a voyage from Tallinn to Stockholm, Sweden.

"I'll be thinking of my friends entombed in the Estonia when we pass over," said Capt. Erich Moikhe. "I lost all my friends on that ship. All of them."

The gray-haired captain said he would stop his vessel over the spot where the Estonia lies about 230 feet below the surface and sound the foghorn.

The Mare Balticum carried only 438 people on its maiden voyage, 320 passengers and 118 crew. Like the Estonia, it can carry up to 2,000 passengers.

Several passengers brought flowers to toss into the sea where the Estonia sank off the coast of Finland.

The mood aboard the Mare Balticum was subdued, a far cry from the gaiety of the Estonia's popular pleasure cruises.

'It's difficult," said the ship's doctor, Aivar Kaur, whose wife went down with the Estonia. "But everyone knows their job and will do it."

The 11,800-ton Mare Balticum is owned by Estline, the company that owned and operated the Estonia. The company was anxious to resume traffic on the profitable line, one of the busiest on the Baltic.

As the Mare Balticum prepared to sail, people laid flowers at the foot of a large white cross erected on a hillside as a memorial to the Estonia's victims.

"This country is still reeling from the tragedy, like after a war," said Milvi Magi, who lost several relatives. "It will take a long time to get over it."

Mine explosion kills 21, injures 7, African radio says

MAPUTO, Mozambique (AP) — A land mine explosion killed 21 people and injured seven in central Zambezia province, state radio reported Friday.

It said the blast occurred Wednesday when a truck carrying police and others hit the land mine near Namanjavira, an area controlled by RENAMO rebels.

The truck was carrying bazookas, machine guns, rifles and mortar shells seized from a weapons cache believed to belong to the rebels, Radio Mozambique said.

RENAMO fought a 15-year civil war before signing a peace treaty in 1992. An election called for in the peace pact occurred Oct. 27-29, and officials were still counting votes Friday.

President Joaquim Chissano and his ruling party were leading, with the rebel movement in second place.

The war, which started two years after independence from Portugal in 1975, left thousands of land mines throughout the countryside.

Western nations and the United Nations have launched demining programs, but the painstaking process of finding and defusing the devices has failed to reach many areas so far.

European allies express reactions to U.S. decision to lift embargo

N.Y. Times News Service

BONN, Germany — European allies expressed alarm Friday over the Clinton administration's decision to halt American military participation in enforcing an arms embargo against the Bosnian government, warning that the unilateral move undermined the solidarity of NATO and could further diminish the chances for peace in the Balkans.

The decision seemed to thrust the United States into its most serious diplomatic rift over the Balkan war since early 1993, when Washington failed to convince NATO partners to lift the embargo and to bomb Serbian forces who were trouncing Bosnia's mainly Muslim government.

The American decision to exempt Muslim forces from the embargo was not wholly unexpected in the United States, since Congress had voted to cut off all funds for enforcing the ban as of Nov. 15 if the Serbs had not agreed to a peace accord.

Nonetheless, the move drew a baffled response from European allies, who apparently had not taken the pressure from the American Congress very seriously.

The step particularly seemed to worry Britain and France, which have thousands of troops at risk as United Nations peacekeepers in the former Yugoslavia and have joined the United States, Russia and Germany in seeking a negotiated peace.

"It is a worry because this is a mandatory resolution of the Security Council and an agreed policy of the alliance," the British foreign secretary, Douglas Hurd, told BBC radio.

France called for a meeting of foreign ministers of the major powers to seek a "clarification" of the new American policy.

In a telephone call to Secretary of State Warren Christopher, the French foreign minister, Alain Juppe, "conveyed the French government's deep worries about this unilateral decision, which we can only regret," a foreign ministry statement said.

The statement said France would reassess the safety of the more than 3,600 troops it has with the peacekeeping force in Bosnia.

The American decision, effective on Saturday, means that the United States Navy will no longer divert ships carrying arms to Bosnia or Croatia or share intelligence information on the shipments with Western European allies.

The move is not expected to have an immediate effect on the battlefield, since the Bosnian government has been receiving clandestine arms shipments, mostly by air, for some months. But it seems likely to erode the Western allies' pattern of cooperation and strengthen the resolve of France and other European governments to move away from dependence on the United States for their defense.

"This example proves just how much Europe needs to be autonomous where intelligence-gathering, satellite reconnaissance and logistic support are concerned," said Sir Dudley Smith, a British Member of Parliament who is also head of the legislative assembly of the 12-nation European Union's military arm, the Western European Union.

Like NATO, the Western European Union is based in Brussels and is a participant in the naval embargo on arms shipments to all the belligerents in the Bosnian war.

Haitian crime rises, turmoil takes blame

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — The military regime is gone, the police force is ineffective and U.S. soldiers don't want to be cops.

Haiti's political turmoil has been a boon for criminals, Haitian business executive and shopkeepers said Friday.

"They are taking advantage of the insecurity, the fact that there are no police on the streets," said Olivier Nadal, general secretary of the Haitian Chamber of Commerce. "The Americans themselves, they don't want to intervene."

Two Haitian employees of the U.S. embassy were killed Thursday while stopping at a bank to pick up the embassy payroll, reportedly worth about $57,000. A third employee was critically wounded.

U.S. authorities searched Friday for a suspect, identified as 25-year-old Francois College.

Earlier this week, a rash of robberies struck the capital and its wealthy suburbs. Gunfire often rings out at night in poor neighborhoods.

U.S. troops arrived in Haiti in September to oversee the return to elected government after three years of military rule. They are participating in a multinational force that is trying to transform Haiti's military-run police force to a civilian agency.

An interim police force has been set up. But few arrests have been made, something that angers many Haitians.

"We don't have any police protection," Guirlene Obas, 25, said, as she showed reporters empty shelves in her Au Petit Bateau clothing store downtown. Nighttime burglars broke through steel shutters and cleaned out the store.

"When we call the police, they don't come. If we go to the station, they tell us they can't do anything because of the American presence," said Stephat Sinturin, a 47-year-old secondhand book seller.

Human rights activists said the criminals are often supporters of the old military regime who have kept their weapons despite U.S.-led disarmament campaigns.

Chinese leader warns of danger within own party

BEIJING (AP) — The Communist Party, its authority undermined by rampant corruption, issued a warning Friday by one of its last living revolutionary leaders that China faces grave dangers if the party's top ranks are not united and disciplined.

The statement by Bo Yibo, 86, was published in all official newspapers and on the front page of the party's People's Daily. Bo rarely makes public comments or appearances, and the use of his statement showed the depth of the party's concern about its inability to command respect and obedience.

Party leaders have been trying for months to impress upon their 54 million members the need to end corruption and other abuses that have damaged the party's reputation and could jeopardize its future.

"Party building" was the focus of a party meeting in September.

Bo, a colleague of Deng Xiaoping and veteran of the civil war that brought the party to power in 1948, drew heavily on historical lessons in stressing the importance of building a strong party leadership.

Bo's comments also were intended to shore up support for President Jiang Zemin, who is generally viewed as a compromise leader without a solid power base. He also is Communist Party general secretary and chairman of the Central Military Commission.

Bo made special mention of Jiang's leadership, reiterating Deng's praise of his handling of both international and domestic problems.

NATION

Heavy rains drenched parts of the Southeast and high winds gusted through the Northeast on Friday, while winter storms hit parts of the West, Alaska and even Hawaii.

In the Southeast, gusty winds and more than 2 inches of rain were reported in some parts of eastern Georgia and South Carolina before the storm headed off shore.

Up the coast, Greenville, Maine, recorded winds of more than 45 mph. Weather observers in Mount Washington, N.H., clocked winds of up to 87 mph.

In the West, 6 inches of snow was reported early Friday in the eastern Sierras, and 4 to 5 inches fell in the Reno, Nev., area. Storm watches were posted for parts of Arizona, Colorado and New Mexico as the storm moved east.

A winter storm warning was in effect for the upper elevations of the island of Hawaii, where heavy snow fell at the top of 11,500-foot Mauna Loa volcano. Flash flood watches were issued for other areas of the island because of heavy rain.

Several inches of snow fell in northern Alaska on Friday, and up to a foot fell over Thursday and Friday along the southern coast from near Anchorage to Valdez to near Juneau.

Another storm system off the coast of Baja, Calif., brought up to a third of an inch of rain to southern New Mexico at Buckhorn and at Truth or Consequences.

The highest temperature in the lower 48 states was 86 in Fort Myers, Fort Lauderdale and Miami, Fla. The low was zero at Old Faithful, Wyo.

VISIT: Author tells North Pole tales in books

(From 1A)

So, he spoke to a friend who is an illustrator — Roderick K. Keitz, best known for his creation of the "Frito Bandito" — to recreate his memories of the characters.

The characters include Stumble the reindeer, elves — Captain Horatio Oldsalt, who makes water toys; the Bright brothers, who make flying toys; Betsy Moss, who makes stuffed animals and doll clothes; the Ikes Man, who makes bikes, trikes and unisikes; and Suzie Scheff, who makes candy and cookies.

Their stories are related in two books, "Wow! I Got To Go To The North Pole" and "The Christmas Eve Tradition."

They are the first two books in the Christmastime series. Thompson said he has found five of his stories and plans to release one each year through "The North Pole Chronicles."

Thompson wrote a note at the end of "The Christmas Eve Tradition" to entice readers to watch for the next book in the series.

"In future issues, The North Pole Chronicles will tell you about some of the exciting things that happen to the North Pole elves at other times of the year.

"For example, 'The Shopping Trip' is about Santa's spring trip around the world to look for new toys, and 'The 4th of July Parade' tells how a new patriotic symbol is created. I hope you enjoy reading them as much as I enjoy reporting them," the note said.

"I bet you didn't know there is a star on the top of the North Pole.

"Only a person who had actually been to the North Pole would know there is a star on top," Thompson said.

When asked how it got there, Thompson replied, "You have to wait and read the book."

Midland children can read about Thompson's adventures and meet the author during the Junior League of Midland's Festival of Trees from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. today at the Midland Center.

"When I sign for the children I . . . love to see their eyes widen. I just melt," Thompson said.

Thompson said his stories relate good family values while entertaining children.

A big fan of Christmas, Thompson said he has been big on traditions and encourages families to start their own traditions.

Just as is written in his book "The Christmas Eve Tradition" — ". . . he asked that the whole thing be repeated next Christmas Eve and the Christmas Eve after that. It would be a new Christmas Eve tradition."

On the back cover of the book, Thompson sends his Christmas wishes to the reader.

"We hope something happens at your house that will become a Christmas tradition . . . hopefully, it will be something that you will want to repeat year after year.

"All traditions are great, but traditions that belong to just your family, and no one else's, are one of the things that make Christmas so very, very special."

The tradition he and his wife had with their five daughters was for him to put one Christmas decoration up each night, starting on Thanksgiving night, after the children went to sleep.

He said the girls would wake up anxiously searching the house to see what new holiday delight was on display.

"You can make so much fun out of little things like that and it builds up to the holiday," Thompson said.

Through his daughter's involvement in the Junior League of Midland, Thompson was invited to sign books at the Festival of Trees.

"We have a double connection with the Festival of Trees," Thompson said. "My wife used to be the president of the Dallas Junior League."

FORGIVE: Pastor to officiate at killer's wedding

(From 1A)

Carlucci feels redeemed by Everett's compassion. But like others, he doesn't fully understand how the pastor could forgive him.

"I have a 13-year-old-daughter and if anybody hurt her, I'd probably feel like I have to hurt him," Carlucci said.

The men's lives collided on July 26, 1987.

The younger Everett, 24, who had been out drinking, returned home to find that his Bridgeport apartment had been burglarized. In the commotion, he locked himself out.

Carlucci, who lived in the same building, was in his apartment after a two-day bender on drugs and booze when Everett pounded on his door, yelling, "Let me in!" A friend of Carlucci's opened the door and saw Everett had a knife. Carlucci ran to get a gun.

Carlucci and Everett struggled, and Everett was shot.

"I was trying to scare the guy. I didn't know who he was," Carlucci said Wednesday. "I didn't set out to kill him."

Carlucci pleaded guilty to manslaughter. At first, Everett thought the five-year sentence would not be "an even trade" for his son's life. The turning point came at the sentencing, when Carlucci apologized.

"He stood and said, 'These probably sound like empty words to the Everetts, but I don't know what else I can do. I'm sorry,'" Everett recalled. "I was moved by it."

Everett, pastor of United Methodist Church in Hartford, and his first wife adopted Scott when he was 22 months old. He was the eldest of their three children.

Scott's death and the pastor's forgiveness ended the Everetts' marriage, which was already troubled. Everett remarried two years ago.

Carlucci, now 34, had a troubled past. He started using drugs by age 16. By 22, he had served time for a bar shooting and a parole violation.

Less than a month into his sentence for manslaughter, Carlucci got his first letter from Everett.

"He told me that he had forgiven me for the love of God," Carlucci said. "Tears were coming down my face. It made me feel like I wanted to live, where before that I didn't care."

After months of exchanging letters, Everett visited Carlucci.

"When I went to leave, we started to shake hands, and instinctively, we embraced," Everett recalled. "We both started to cry."

After Carlucci had served 2½ years, Everett testified for him at his parole hearing. Carlucci was released in 1991 after less than three years behind bars.

Carlucci said he has been drug-free and sober since entering prison and has held a job as a truck driver for three years. He met his fiancee, Sandie Foerster, 31, at a party sponsored by a recovery program for drug addicts.

Before proposing last Christmas, Carlucci asked his friend, whom he still calls "Mr. Everett," to officiate at the wedding. Everett quickly agreed.

"I wouldn't have it any other way," Carlucci said. "He's my best friend."

END: U.S. to stop policing arms embargo

(From 1A)

At the White House, Press Secretary Dee Dee Myers said Clinton's action was consistent with the congressional ban. However, she added it was still his belief that it would be better to act in concert with other nations.

Britain, France and other Europeans wanted the embargo maintained out of concern any influx of weapons could increase fighting and also out of concern their own peacekeepers might be targeted. The United States has no peacekeepers on the ground in Bosnia-Herzegovina.

Russia, with traditional cultural and religious ties to the Bosnian Serbs, also has opposed any easing of the embargo against the Muslims.

The measure passed by Congress also forbids the United States to share with any foreign government intelligence information pertaining to arms shipments to the Bosnian government.

The three U.S. ships of the 19 NATO vessels involved in the action, dubbed "Operation Sharp Guard," are expected to help enforce the overall United Nations economic ban against Serbia and Montenegro, a second senior Pentagon official said.

U.S. ships may also be used to help enforce the ban against arms entering Croatia or Serbia, he added.

The officials described the situation only on condition of anonymity.

The first Pentagon official said the U.S. vessels would be permitted to continue stopping ships and searching for weapons that might be used against NATO, such as air-to-air or air-to-ground missiles, anti-naval weaponry or any kind of weapons of mass destruction.

The arms embargo was imposed in 1991 against all parties in the conflict as Yugoslavia disintegrated and fighting began in Slovenia and Croatia.

But the ban has never completely prevented Muslim-led Bosnian government forces from getting weapons bought clandestinely or donated by sympathetic governments and smuggled across the Croatian border. U.S. officials said this week that weapons were being funneled through Zagreb, the Croatian capital.

Serbs rebelled in April 1992 after Bosnia's ethnic Croats and Muslims voted to secede from Serb-dominated Yugoslavia. About 200,000 people are dead or missing in the war.

British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd expressed concern that the U.S. action could split NATO. In an interview on BBC radio, he insisted the embargo was "a mandatory resolution of the Security Council and an agreed policy of the alliance."

In Moscow, where right-wing sentiment favors the Serbs, lawmakers said lifting the embargo would intensify the fighting.

the 1995 project development plan.

The Odessa district is to receive an additional $3.7 million that will be dedicated to the Loop 250 development plan — specifically the section north of I-20, Chetty said.

"In addition to the main lanes from State Highway 158 to just north of the Tremont intersection, there will also be interchanges built at Wadley and at Tremont like those we just completed at Midland and Midkiff," he said.

When interchange construction is under way, traffic at the affected intersections will be rerouted or delayed briefly. The traffic plan calls for the two intersections to be affected only during the middle of the day to allow access to Abell Junior High and Greathouse Elementary schools.

"When we complete this current project and the I-20/Illinois project, we will move on to subsequent projects on Loop 250, including the Garfield and A Street interchanges and the SH 349 and Lamesa Road interchanges," he said.

The stretch from just west of Garfield to just west of SH 349 will be put under contract in September — 1996 fiscal year — while the final section in the development plan — from just west of SH 349 to east of Lamesa Road — will be put under contract in September of 1996 — 1997 fiscal year.

"Assuming that funding continues to be available, we should have Loop 250 completed from IH 20 to Lamesa Road by mid-1998," Chetty said.

clothes. Before this, the man dropped what was later found to be two pieces of bread.

"Then he proceeded to shuck his pants," one Texaco employee said. "I was on the fifth floor and I went up to the sixth floor to tell everyone to check this out," he said, laughing.

While naked, the man was reading what appeared to be a Bible and was chanting. Intermittently he would look into the sun, witnesses said.

"At one point, he threw his hands up and fell straight, flat backwards. He didn't bend his knees . . . or try to break his fall in any way," the Texaco employee said.

"He laid there for a while and then he got up, rubbed his head a little, and picked up his book. There was a lot of traffic going around him," he said.

Moments later, the man put his clothes back on and left the street for the sidewalk where police arrested him shortly thereafter.

The man told police at the scene that he'd had a religious experience of some kind, witnesses said.

"It was pretty bizarre. Everyone got a big kick out of it . . . sort of," the employee said, joking.

Police arrested the 46-year-old man and charged him with disorderly conduct by exposure, a misdemeanor offense, according to police reports.

Upon arraignment, a judge may order psychological evaluation of the man. As of late Friday, he remained in custody.

Minority leaders meet with Department of Justice officials, decry unitary status

By Katherine Poteet
Staff Writer

Decrying the idea that the Midland Independent School District has effectively desegregated and stating that controlled choice is an excuse to keep minorities away from white students, minority leaders have stepped up their efforts to prevent the district from trying to obtain unitary status.

Members of the original group of intervenors who fought for desegregation in the 1970s announced in a press conference Friday that they and Dr. Viola Coleman met with U.S. Department of Justice representatives for two days to express their concern about controlled choice and unitary status.

"We are willing to negotiate, not compromise," said Robbyne Fuller, president of FOCUS (Federation of Citizens United to Serve). "Unitary status will not be considered. We want equal schools and education, not unitary status."

At two separate MISD board of trustee meetings, the school board voted 5-2 to pursue the idea of declaring unitary status for the district — which, in effect states that the district effectively desegregated the schools — and then to adopt objectives for a modified desegregation plan. The plan is a compromise to seeking total unitary status and involves neighborhood schooling plus controlled choice.

At a community meeting Thursday, MISD Superintendent Joseph Baressi read the list of the plan's objectives — including increasing minority staff and administration, decreasing the dropout rate and maintaining desegration within the schools — and then said the district had until June 26 to develop and implement the plan. If the plan was not implemented, the district would go to court on that date to push for unitary status.

"As parents and intervenors, we will not accept unitary status or controlled choice," Mrs. Fuller said. "We will not accept the concept of neighborhood schools, which will resegregate the schools. We will not pay taxes so that the parents on the west side can have their own private school under the guise of controlled choice."

Felipa Lara, president of the local chapter of LULAC (League of United Latin American Citizens), said her organization will be discussing the issue of unitary status at its district meeting today.

"The district still has far to go," she said. "There is not unitary status in this district."

Margie Titus, president of the local NAACP chapter, said the district should be spending its time making the cluster system better and equalizing the schools through renovations and better staffing.

"As a citizen and taxpayer, I am concerned with quality education for all children," she said. "I know there are many children in this district who are at risk and the district should be making them its No. 1 priority. Controlled choice will not address our problems. We need equality for all our youngsters."

Texans line up for chance at $40 million

Hearst News Service

McALLEN — Tonight is jackpot night for the Texas Lottery, and $40 million is out there waiting for a friend.

And just like Wednesday night, when a mere $30 million was at stake, two lanes of cars are expected to funnel into the parking lot of the Town and Country No. 1 convenience store here, where Lady Luck has been known to stop.

The Town and Country is the top outlet for lottery sales in Texas and one of a handful of outlets with two jackpot winners — and nearly everyone in South Texas wants to be next.

"We have regular customers from Rio Grande City, Laredo, Harlingen and Brownsville. We're talking 140 miles one way to Laredo, and 70 miles to Brownsville," marveled Alvin Potter, who runs the store.

"Why do they come here, pass 200 lottery outlets on the way, to this store?" Potter asked. "They consider this a lucky store."

Already this year, tickets winning jackpots of $40 million and $8 million have been purchased at the Town and Country.

"When we hit our third one, no one will be able to catch us," said Potter, who started out in 1961 as a $40-a-week clerk at the Town and Country and bought the place 21 years later.

The Potters — Alvin, his wife Nelva and their son, Tim — have applied the principles of mass production and customer service to the lottery.

On a busy Wednesday or Saturday night, up to two dozen workers sell tickets.

As the cars pass through the lot, idling, barely stopping, teen-age runners dart back and forth, exchanging lottery tickets for cash, trading hunches for dreams.

Inside, another smaller crew works the walk-in trade, along with the occasional customer looking for beer, milk or cigarettes.

Town and Country No. 1 even has its own lottery hotline that people can call to learn the winning numbers minutes after they are drawn in Austin.

Repair garage becomes Santa's workshop

WAXAHACHIE (AP) — Christmas arrives this time each year for Johnny Robertson, who clears out most of the vehicles from R&B Paint and Body to set up an oversized Santa's workshop.

At his suburban Dallas business, Robertson paints and buffs gold pine cones that are taller than most trees, 12-foot bells, gargantuan Christmas balls and tin soldiers.

"When my 2-year-old grandson comes here, his eyes just open up in amazement, and I really enjoy that," Robertson said.

This week, he was working on a pair of 4-foot Christmas balls, which dangled from the garage ceiling as he sprayed on a bright red coat. "It takes three days and 12 gallons of material to finish one of these balls," Robertson told The Dallas Morning News.

Design Solutions of Dallas crafts the fiberglass decorations before sending them to Robertson for the finishing touches. From Waxahachie they are sent to New York, Chicago, Boston, Minneapolis, Charlotte, N.C., and Dallas.

This year, Design Solutions and Robertson are teaming up to create 30 monumental Christmas displays across the country, including the yuletide scenes at Rockefeller Center and the Trump Tower in New York City.

Robertson, whose father also owned a body shop, has been painting cars since he was 13.

Registration for breakfast to open Tuesday at 7 a.m.

Staff Report

The Networking Breakfast for minority-owned, women-owned and all small businesses opens for registration at 7 a.m. Tuesday at the Midland College Student Center. Breakfast is served at 7:30 a.m. and the meeting will conclude at 8:30 a.m. Cost is $5.

"We encourage small business owners and managers to attend," said Bruce Partain, communications manager for the Midland Chamber of Commerce. "This is their chance to meet the purchasing agents from large companies, exchange business cards and brochures and begin steps towards making a sale."

Partain said each participant is introduced and "approximately eight small businesses that register is advance can present a two-minute 'commercial' about their business." Business representatives can call 684-4100 if they wish to speak at the meeting. If possible, attendees should bring about 50 business cards or brochures to exchange with other business people.

"Purchasing agents from any size company are also invited," Partain said. "This is their chance to 'Buy the Basin' and secure more local suppliers."

Special guest at the breakfast will be W.B. Reynolds, district manager of SCORE, The Service Corps of Retired Executives. SCORE is a nonprofit association providing business counseling to small business people. Reynolds said the organization is especially interested in interviewing retired business people who might become volunteer business counselors for SCORE.

The Networking Breakfast is sponsored by the Citizens Coalition for Economic Development, the Midland Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs, the Midland Chamber, the Midland College Business and Economic Development Center, the Midland Hispanic Chamber, the UTPB Small Business Development Center, Exxon, Texas Instruments and TU Electric.

Jury sentences A&M administrator to year's probation, $2,750 fine

BRYAN (AP) — Former Texas A&M University administrator Robert Smith was sentenced Friday to a year's probation and a $2,750 fine for soliciting gifts from a vendor who was negotiating a multimillion-dollar contract with the school.

After hearing attorneys' arguments, the jury took a little more than 1½ hours to arrive at the punishment, which also included a suspended, six-month jail sentence.

The punishment appears to fall in between each side's recommendation. Smith's attorney, Dick DeGuerin, asked for a $1 fine and no jail time. Brazos County District Attorney Bill Turner sought the maximum $3,000 fine and one to two years' probation for the misdemeanor conviction.

Smith, a former vice president of finance and administration, was convicted Thursday of asking Barnes & Noble Bookstores Inc. to provide first-class air fare, limousine rides, meals, lodging and Broadway theater tickets for his wife to accompany him on a four-day trip to New York in June 1993.

Smith, 58, was demoted from vice president for finance and administration to director of special operations in June after being indicted by a Brazos County grand jury.

Turner said he believes the sentence sends a message to government workers.

"Clearly to me, as a government official ... we have a sacred duty as public servants to honor taxpayers' property," he told the Bryan-College Station Eagle. "When we deal with taxpayers' property, we deal with it by the book. We don't personally benefit because of our role as a public servant."

A 30-year employee at Texas A&M, Smith maintained Friday that he was innocent and had been pursued unfairly by law enforcers.

"My objective of this has been the same: And that has been to prove my innocence. And I don't intend to quit now," Smith told the newspaper.

Smith's attorney, Dick DeGuerin, renewed his promise to appeal the conviction, which was the first in a 14-month FBI and Texas Rangers criminal investigation of questionable business dealings at Texas A&M.

Eight other A&M officials, including Texas A&M Athletic Director Wally Groff, have been charged with misdemeanor offenses in connection with the falsification of vouchers used to purchase alcohol.

Groff and an associate pleaded no contest to the charges on Oct. 31. The other six cases are pending.

Plan for less school gets objections

By Seth Sutel
Associated Press

TOKYO — A bit more leeway in Japan's notoriously strict school system would seem to be a blessing, but few are cheering the plan to give children more days off.

Teachers, students, and parents are objecting to a plan to make public schools cancel classes two Saturdays per month, up from the current one per month.

"It's hard enough to digest the current curriculum in a six-day week — a five-day week is ridiculous," Mitsuo Arai, headmaster of the Senzoku No. 1 High School, complained in Friday's Sankei newspaper.

Japanese children attend school about 240 days a year, compared with an average 180 in the United States.

The Education Ministry decided to reduce the number of days, but not the hours kids have to spend in class. The time lost on Saturdays will have to be made up, possibly cutting into time for activities, sports and free time.

Several mothers interviewed on television shows voiced concerns about the extra burden of watching the kids.

"If the children are in school, I have more freedom in organizing my schedule and doing errands. But if they're off, I have to spend all the time taking care of them," one mother said.

An Education Ministry survey in March showed 47 percent of parents were opposed to the change, mostly because "the kids would only play more."

But that's the whole point, says the Education Ministry, in recent years has tried to respond to accusations it prepares regimented thinkers but not the creative individualists a modern Japan needs.

"Up until now, children's education relied heavily on school time," says Itsuro Tomioka, assistant chief of the ministry's elementary school division.

"It's important to give kids more time to do things on their own and with their families," he said, but acknowledged the number of hours required would not change.

Muscovites play 'blame game' in shortage

By Angela Charlton
Associated Press

MOSCOW — Fuming over the city's worst gas shortage since Soviet times, Muscovites are looking for someone to blame. There are plenty of candidates:

The refinery, the retailer. Regulation, deregulation. The mayor, the mafia.

"Who has time for this?" Vadim Polkov asked, kicking the snow off his tires and glaring at 70 cars between him and the pump Friday. "There's no hope for this country."

The gas crisis — which hit at the same time as a 25-percent price hike — showed signs of easing by week's end. But "No Gas" signs still dangled from many pumps.

The federal government stepped in Friday, promising to have other regions ship gasoline to Moscow through the end of December. The city, meanwhile, took away the gas station licenses of ten firms accused of price-gouging.

During the worst of the 10-day shortage, hundreds of cars and trucks lined up at the few stations which still had gas and black marketeers were getting as much as 10 times the 63 cents a gallon charged by state-run stations. The average wage in Russia is about $100 a month.

The shortage has set off another round of one of Russia's favorite pastimes — the blame game.

The first accusatory fingers pointed at the city refinery. A processing unit broke down last week, forcing the refinery to cut gas deliveries by over a third.

Then there were crude oil producers. They stopped deliveries to the refinery until they got advance payment from the city.

Federal officials and economists also faulted Moscow Mayor Yuri Luzhkov. He has kept Moscow gas prices lower than those in neighboring regions, which means suppliers have looked elsewhere for customers.

"The time has come to give this up," First Deputy Prime Minister Anatoly Chubais said Friday, referring to Luzhkov's penchant for trying to regulate the market.

Anti-trust officials blamed the crisis on the near-monopoly that government-run gas stations enjoy in Moscow.

Others noted, with disgust, that the capital's 10 million residents are served by a single state refinery.

Trade is topic at economic forum

N.Y. Times News Service

JAKARTA, Indonesia — A meeting of representatives from 18 countries on both sides of the Pacific Ocean opened Friday with the United States indicating that it had reservations about how rapidly the group should move toward achieving free trade across the region.

The central question at the annual meeting of the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation forum, which began Friday morning, was whether the 18 member countries would agree to lower trade barriers by the proposed date of 2020. The United States is a big backer of the free trade proposals and of the 2020 deadline.

But Washington has expressed some reluctance about part of the proposal that would require industrialized countries to eliminate trade barriers ten years earlier than the developing countries, according to two Asian officials.

Viewed from Asia, Washington's concerns are political. Asian officials say that the United States is worried that certain U.S. industries will be unhappy if U.S. markets are opened to imports from the fast-growing East Asian nations a decade before those nations fully open their markets to U.S. products.

Arousing opponents of free trade in the United States could, in turn, also make it harder for the Clinton administration to win congressional approval of the world trade agreement reached in the Uruguay Round of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, or GATT.

The United States appears to be the only country unwilling to accept the target date of 2010 for the advanced nations, Asian officials said here.

Still, it is not clear whether the United States will press its case because doing so could make developing nations less supportive of the overall free trade goal.

The proposed ten-year difference is designed to make the free trade agreement more palatable to developing nations by giving them extra time to improve their industries before subjecting them to foreign competition.

Rebel leader says he'll sign peace treaty

LUANDA, Angola (AP) — Angolan rebel leader Jonas Savimbi reportedly assured a U.S. diplomat Friday that he will sign a treaty ending 19 years of war despite a government offensive that overran his headquarters.

Savimbi called Madeleine Albright, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, and told her he would be going to Lusaka, Zambia, for the treaty signing on Tuesday, Albright told The Associated Press.

Asked whether Savimbi actually would sign the document, Albright declined comment. But UNITA rebel spokesman Marcos Samondo told the Portuguese news agency LUSA that Savimbi had assured Albright he will sign the treaty.

The treaty, to be co-signed by President Jose Eduardo dos Santos, caps 11 months of painstaking negotiations.

A nationwide cease-fire was to come two days later, followed by a power-sharing deal between the government and UNITA.

UNITA had called off the deal as government troops overran Savimbi's stronghold of Huambo, 330 miles southeast of the capital, Luanda, in a huge assault this week. The rebels had demanded government troops pull back from the city.

The government, mistrustful of UNITA and determined to negotiate from strength, has ignored several appeals by the United Nations, the pope, the United States and other countries to call off the Huambo assault.

U.N. and Zambian officials said Friday the government offered a cease-fire at last-minute talks with U.N. mediators in Lusaka, the Zambian capital.

It was not clear whether the cease-fire offer would be respected on the ground, or even if it had been authorized by dos Santos.

S. African judge bans magazine due to lampoon

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — A Supreme Court judge on Friday banned the sale of the December issue of the South African edition of Hustler magazine because it includes a parody of a well-known white leader.

The "disgusting lampoon" of retired army Gen. Constand Viljoen in the sexually explicit magazine injured his dignity and required the court to protect Viljoen from it, Justice M.M. Joffe ruled.

A full-page photograph of Viljoen, leader of the pro-apartheid Freedom Front, included a comic book-style speech bubble under the headline "Constandly speaking about sex education and pornography."

Viljoen said the parody created the impression he used crude language and spoke about subjects that harmed his reputation and community standing.

Joffe agreed, calling the parody a distasteful attempt to denigrate Viljoen's views and values. He gave Hustler until Nov. 22 to provide reasons for lifting the ban.

Viljoen caused the deepest split in years in the right wing in February when he broke ranks to form the Freedom Front to take part in the April vote that brought the African National Congress to power and gave his group a seat in parliament.

South Africa's censorship board banned the sexually explicit magazine's November special edition because it had a picture with the head of the board, Abraham Coetzee, on the rear end of a donkey.

According to the South African Press Association, Hustler publisher Joe Theron said the special issue was meant to push censorship limits.

Gingrich urges conservative program changes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Newt Gingrich said in his first speech as incoming speaker of the House that key anti-poverty programs should be "replaced thoroughly from the ground up," signaling that he will pursue an ambitious legislative agenda and pull no punches.

His strategy with the Democratic White House? "Cooperation yes, compromise no."

In remarks to reporters, the Georgia Republican said Medicaid, Head Start and the Job Corps were among the programs that need to be re-examined. He added that re-examining a program "doesn't mean it has to be abolished."

Striking his familiar confident, combative tone, he left little doubt that when the new Congress convenes in January, he would try to push it in a much more conservative direction.

Gingrich, still reveling in the GOP capture of Congress, also said he would not compromise with President Clinton on the tax cuts, welfare revamping, and other measures his party vowed to pursue in its campaign-season "Contract With America." He said he could cooperate with Clinton on some issues, including efforts to make government smaller.

"On those things that are at the core of our contract, those things which are at the core of our philosophy, and on those things where we believe we represent the vast majority of Americans, there will be no compromise," he told a meeting of investors. "Let me draw a distinction: Cooperation yes, compromise no."

White House Chief of Staff Leon Panetta called Gingrich's remarks "the same kind of speeches that he's been giving ... for almost 16 years in Congress."

"The reality is that if Mr. Gingrich is to be taken at his word and he does want to cooperate, this hopefully will be a period in which we can work together," Panetta said in an interview on PBS' MacNeil-Lehrer NewsHour. "It's easy to talk about these issues; every member of Congress can give a Rotary Club speech. But in the end you have to deliver."

Just elected to his ninth congressional term, Gingrich will replace the retiring Rep. Robert Michel, R-Ill., as GOP House leader and is expected to become speaker in January when the Republicans take over.

Gingrich said he interpreted last Tuesday's GOP victories as an overwhelming endorsement of his party's conservative views — and a rejection of the Democrats' more liberal philosophy. Republicans wrested control of both chambers of Congress from Democrats for the first time in 40 years.

"Those who argued for counterculture values, bigger government ... and bureaucracies deciding how you should spend your money were on the losing end in virtually every part of the country," he told a luncheon that about 50 journalists flocked to cover.

Student says service violates anti-slavery law

By Marlene Alg
Associated Press

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. — Daniel Immediato's parents taught him that doing good is its own reward. But they never said he was obliged to help others.

He agrees, and it may cost him his high school diploma.

Immediato, 17, is a senior at Rye Neck High School, where students are required to do 40 hours of community service.

He refused to comply, saying the requirement, instituted in 1992, violates his constitutional rights. He and his parents, Eugene and Diane, sued the Mamaroneck-based Rye Neck School District in federal court last spring.

"Students are being forced to perform uncompensated service to others," Scott Bullock, Immediato's lawyer, argued Thursday before U.S. District Judge Charles Brieant.

Bullock said the requirement violates the anti-slavery 13th Amendment and the 14th Amendment's due process provisions. It also creates a clash between parental authority and school authority, he said.

School district lawyer Phyllis Jaffe said that 40 hours of service over four years are not slavery and that students had many programs to choose from.

"This is an education program," Jaffe said. "It teaches them how to go to work, how to cooperate. It teaches teamwork and problem solving. ... We're trying to teach them good citizenship."

Immediato has a paid job as a lifeguard and coaches an ice hockey team for children. But the school district said neither fulfills the service requirement, which would be served if he helped the homeless, for example.

The judge will rule later.

A student in Pennsylvania lost a similar case in 1990. The Supreme Court refused to hear the case on appeal.

After court, Immediato said he would not graduate in June and would get a general equivalency degree instead if necessary.

Republican promises of cooperation may turn into confrontation

Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — The hand of cooperation is being extended by President Clinton and leaders of the Republican congressional majorities in the wake of Tuesday's lopsided elections, but this is one first impression unlikely to linger.

From taxes and spending to foreign policy to judgeships, there's likely to be plenty of confrontation to go around, particularly as the next campaign comes into view.

"Maybe we can do some business," Senate GOP leader Bob Dole told Clinton in a telephone call on the morning after the Republicans had wiped out Democratic majorities in both houses. And Rep. Newt Gingrich, who soon will become speaker of a Republican-controlled House, talked of identifying areas of compromise that could be approved early in the congressional session.

But that was the same Newt Gingrich who called Clinton and his wife "counterculture McGovernicks," on the morning after the elections. And who said Friday: "Let me draw a distinction: cooperation yes, compromise no."

And Sen. Phil Gramm of Texas, who raised the millions that helped the 11 Republican senators-elect who triumphed this week, is tugging Dole to the right in their jockeying for the 1996 GOP presidential nomination.

■ Analysis

Gramm is not willing to "go halfway in the wrong direction" with Clinton: "I think Republicans would be very foolish to believe that somehow the American people elected us to cut a deal with Bill Clinton to promote his agenda, but to do it more slowly, to do it more efficiently."

Gingrich, who led House Republicans out of a seeming permanent minority status, relishes the politics of confrontation.

As a freshman from Georgia in the late 1970s, he made himself a thorn in the side of veteran Rep. Charles Diggs, D-Mich., who had ethics problems. Over the years, he's clashed proudly with one Democratic speaker after another: Tip O'Neill; Jim Wright, toppled in an ethics scandal that Gingrich stoked insistently; and the lame duck, Tom Foley, circumspect and cautious in speech, who once remarked that Gingrich's dream of becoming speaker belonged in the realm of "fantasies."

For his part, Clinton said he would work with Republicans, up to a point. "I do not believe they (the public) voted for reversals of economic policy or the positions on crime, I don't think they voted for a reversal of the Brady bill or the military assault weapons ban," said the president, who must move to the center as he runs for a second term while holding onto what's left of the Democratic core constituency.

He said — as did Gingrich — that he thought compromise might be achievable on a tax cut, welfare reform and giving him a stronger hand in cutting individual spending items.

Legislation to pay for the military operation in Haiti must be voted on early in 1995, and Republicans are considering attaching a provision that would make it easier for a president to cut spending on his own.

At the same time, the ascendance of several incoming Republican committee chairmen will make confrontation inevitable. Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., at Foreign Relations will scrutinize nominations for the State Department and diplomatic corps. Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, at Judiciary will pass on judicial appointments. Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., who will be in charge at the Banking Committee, has already announced plans for "responsible and thorough" Whitewater hearings, backed up by GOP-drafted subpoenas if necessary.

Republicans in both houses will work to reverse some of Clinton's Pentagon reductions, meaning that domestic programs that Democrats traditionally favor would have to bear an even greater burden when it comes time to pay for the tax cut.

"I do not believe that we can afford to go back to the days of exploding deficits, which I believe would lead to a weaker economy, to lost jobs, and to a more difficult future for ourselves and our children," the president said at his post-election news conference.

Rep. Bill Archer, the Texas Republican who will take over the House Ways and Means Committee, outlined a tax cut proposal that would, in fact, reverse a portion of the 1993 economic program that Clinton won.

Contained in the Republican "Contract with America," it would repeal some of the tax increase that last year's deficit reduction measure imposed on Social Security benefits for some higher-income recipients.

Veterans are underrepresented in Clinton administration, study says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Veterans are seriously underrepresented in senior administration positions, and those who fought in Vietnam have been ignored in the appointment of White House staff, says a study by veterans interest groups.

Veterans activist John Wheeler, using Office of Personnel Management figures, said only 21 percent of the nearly 600 men appointed as of last June to offices needing Senate confirmation were veterans. Among White House staff, the figure was far smaller, he said.

By comparison, 30 percent of a similar number of Bush administration appointees in December 1992 were vets. Nearly half the American male population over age 35, 64 percent of male senators and 45 percent of male House members are veterans.

White House spokeswoman Ginny Terzano said there were minimal differences between this and previous administrations in the hiring of veterans. She said the White House and the president "have been very attentive to reaching out to veterans when it comes to the hiring process and will continue to do so."

Clinton's White House differs from that of Bush and previous presidents in that many of its younger staffers grew up at a time when the United States had a volunteer army and was engaged in no major wars. As a college student during the Vietnam War, Clinton joined anti-war protests and avoided the draft.

Wheeler, who has been pressing the White House for more than a year on the veterans employment issue, said the generational change was no excuse for the dearth of top slots going to people with national service experience.

Clinton's White House differs from that of Bush and previous presidents in that many of its younger staffers grew up at a time when the United States had a volunteer army and was engaged in no major wars.

Meantime, Clinton observed Veterans Day by saluting the nation's military for "standing watch for freedom and security."

In a speech at Arlington National Cemetery, he promised the nation would not forget those still unaccounted for as a result of the Vietnam War, and praised forces serving in the Middle East and Haiti.

"I am proud to share this Veterans Day with you in this magnificent place of rest and reverence," Clinton said. "We say, simply and from the bottom of our hearts, 'Thank You.'"

Charles Moskos, a military sociologist at Northwestern University, asserted that while the low number of veterans in White House jobs was probably inadvertent, it reflects the administration's "tone deafness in terms of military-related issues."

Wheeler did the study with Lewis Puller Jr., winner of the Pulitzer Prize for his autobiography recounting his struggle with wounds, including loss of his legs, suffered in Vietnam. Puller committed suicide last May.

Wheeler, a Washington lawyer who headed the group that planned the Vietnam Memorial and who backed Clinton in the 1992 presidential election, said Clinton's record is "particularly egregious" because he pledged that his administration would "look like America" and because "a lot of veterans went out on a limb to support him."

Clinton has always had trouble gaining the trust of the military community because of his Vietnam War activities, his attempts to change the Pentagon's policy toward gays and his moves to reduce defense spending. His failure to appoint veterans could further alienate those who served in uniform, Wheeler said.

Ed Timperlake, a senior VA Department official in the Bush administration, said that while many qualified veterans got jobs in Clinton's VA and the Pentagon, the lack of veterans in other departments "has been a pretty big blind spot."

Wheeler said his own research found that as of June only 4 percent — five of 126 — of male White House staff members were veterans.

AIDS activist Pedro Zamora dies after MTV farewell show

MIAMI (AP) — Pedro Zamora, who educated the public about AIDS by discussing his life with the disease on MTV's "Real World," died Friday, hours after his farewell appearance was broadcast on the show's season finale. He was 22.

Zamora

Zamora was sick but still active in June when he filmed the closing episode of the program, which documents the real lives of a group of young roommates.

"That's where the real tragedy, the real mystery of the disease lies," said Doug Herzog, MTV executive vice president of programming and production in New York. "He leaves the house a healthy man, or seemingly healthy. Four short months later, we're saying our goodbyes to him."

Zamora learned he had the AIDS virus when he was 17. Handsome, trim, dark-eyed and a gifted speaker, he went on a lecture tour, telling audiences at high schools and other organizations that he was infected through unprotected sex.

He testified before Congress, showing that "AIDS is a disease with a human face," President Clinton said Friday.

"If you want to reach me as a young gay man, especially a young gay man of color, then you need to give me information in a language and vocabulary I can understand and relate to," Zamora said at a congressional hearing July 12, arguing for more explicit AIDS educational programs.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Zamora's family established the Pedro Zamora Memorial Fund at the AIDS Action Foundation, 1875 Connecticut Ave. N.W., Suite 700, Washington, D.C. 20009.

Clinton embarks on trip to Far East

ELMENDORF AFB, Alaska (AP) — President Clinton set forth on a week-long visit to the Far East on Friday, calling the opportunity to expand trade with fast-growing economies in Asia an early test of the new political realities at home.

"Let us now join together to move this country forward in the best American spirit," said Clinton, still reeling from his party's losses on Election Day.

Clinton used a two-hour refueling stop at Elmendorf Air Force Base for a Veterans Day address to military personnel and their families in a capacity-crowded hangar. He then drove into Anchorage to tape Saturday's radio address at Anchorage's Art Museum.

Noting that Alaska's congressional delegation was all Republican, Clinton said: "In light of the elections last Tuesday giving a majority of the Congress to the Republican Party, I want to pledge again to work with them on issues of concern to the state of Alaska."

And, Clinton added, "more importantly to work with all others of both parties in a nonpartisan way on behalf of problems in this country which are in many cases new, different, challenging, unlike anything we have faced before, and unable to be put into clean and neat partisan categories."

Air Force One touched down during a light snowfall, with a foot-high blanket of fresh powder on the ground. Snow removal equipment had worked through the day to clear the runway.

The trip gave Clinton a chance to practice foreign policy and to take his mind off Tuesday's mid-term elections, which decimated Democratic ranks and delivered both chambers of Congress to Republicans for the first time in 40 years.

Clinton headed for Asia suggesting that moves to open markets to U.S. exports is an area on which battered Democrats and triumphant Republicans can cooperate.

There already is a lot of Republican support for the trade pact — a tariff-reducing update of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) — up for a vote in Congress early next month. Clinton was expected to tell Asian leaders that U.S. ratification was within grasp.

His next stop was Manila, for a state visit to the Philippines. He will visit an American cemetery and, with Philippine President Fidel Ramos, tour the island of Corregidor, site of fierce World War II fighting.

Triplets' mom says she might have more kids

By Tony Knight
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — A 50-year-old woman who gave birth to triplets this week said it was easier than running the Los Angeles Marathon three years ago, and that she might have more.

Milagros Olarve was born June 10, 1944 in Quezon City, Philippines, four months before Gen. Douglas MacArthur waded ashore after the battle of Leyte Gulf. She was given a name, which in Spanish means "miracles."

Now, she and husband, Florante, also 50, say they have three little miracles of their own — their first babies, all born naturally.

The babies, Alexander, Veronica and Stephanie, were born just 28 weeks into the pregnancy on Thursday but have a very good chance of surviving, said Dr. Ronald Wu, the Olarve's obstetrician.

The tiny new-borns were born between between 2:34 and 3:31 p.m. weighing from 2 pounds, 1/2 ounce to 2 pounds, 7 ounces.

"The babies are doing very well at this stage," Wu said. "They just need a little help in breathing and to be fed intravenously."

Milagros Olarve, a data analyst, said she was laid off last year by Bank of America and decided to use some of her retirement funds to pay for the special medical procedure she used to get pregnant.

"We still have four more embryos in the freezer," said the new mother. "Maybe if we win the lottery, we'll have more."

Called assisted reproduction technology, the process involves surgically harvesting eggs from the mother's ovaries and freezing them while she recovers from the surgery.

Some of the eggs then are thawed, fertilized in a test tube, and implanted on the wall of the uterus. Pregnancy does not always result. This was the Olvare's second try, and there are enough eggs left for a third one.

Jazz performer Carmen McRae dies at age 74

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Carmen McRae, a scat-singing jazz virtuoso with a smoky, seductive voice, is dead at 74.

McRae

McRae, who died on Thursday a month after suffering a stroke, was ranked with such song stylists as Sarah Vaughan, Ella Fitzgerald and Betty Carter.

"She said, 'I don't want a memorial. I don't want a funeral. I don't want flowers. All I want to be remembered for is my music,'" said Jan March, her secretary and friend of 26 years. "That was her whole world."

With phrasing that often sounded effortless, she blended tones ranging from the nasal to the guttural.

He repertoire included "God Bless the Child," a song closely associated with her biggest influence, Billie Holiday; Cole Porter's "I've Got You Under My Skin;" Billy Joel's "New York State of Mind;" and Dave Brubeck's "Take Five."

"Every word is important to me," she once said. "The lyrics of a song I might decide to sing must have something that I can convince you with."

McRae had been bedridden since suffering respiratory failure four years ago during a show at the Blue Note nightclub in New York. She never performed again.

'Interview' works with intelligence, wit

Tom Cruise portrays Lestat in "Interview With The Vampire."

By Dolores Barclay
AP Arts Editor

■ "Interview With the Vampire" is playing at the North Park Cinema.

There are pitfalls with vampire movies: They can be so campy that they become a comical blur of incisors and black capes, or so big on style that substance is nowhere to be found.

Neil Jordan, thankfully, avoids both traps in his intelligent and amusing "Interview With the Vampire."

Jordan's stylish movie boasts outstanding performances by Brad Pitt and Kirsten Dunst, and good support from Antonio Banderas, Christian Slater and Stephen Rea.

But it appears all who criticized even just the casting of Tom Cruise were right: He turns in a rather tepid portrayal of the Vampire Lestat. He tries hard and really throws his little heart into it, but simply lacks the depth to deliver the dramatic colorings and philosophical torments of the vampire's existence.

Cruise is much better at dark humor, and at least shows some of the impish spirit that made him so enjoyable in "Risky Business."

The movie truly belongs to Pitt and Dunst. In fact, "Interview With the Vampire" doesn't really come alive until Dunst enters the picture.

Jordan's pacing is slightly off for the first half of the film, which introduces Louis (Pitt) in modern-day San Francisco as he gives an interview to a reporter named Malloy (Slater) about his life as a vampire.

A flashback takes us to 18th-century Louisiana, where Louis, a plantation owner despondent over the death of his wife and child, courts death as a merciful way out of his miserable life.

He meets Lestat and is taken by the ancient vampire, who offers him immortality. Louis accepts, and thus begins his descent into the world of the undead. He becomes Lestat's protege, and Lestat is a very willing mentor who dives into his work with much abandon and nary a care for his victims.

Becker returns with an impact

By Jon Pareles
N.Y. Times News Service

■ Review

Fifteen years later, we find out who put the edge into Steely Dan. It was Walter Becker, who played bass and guitar and left the lead vocals to his songwriting partner, Donald Fagen.

On his first solo album, "11 Tracks of Whack," Becker brings back everything fans cherished about Steely Dan: the desperate characters and elliptical narratives, the jazz harmonies and the ingeniously warped structures.

And it turns out he has exactly the right voice for his own words: a groan that's jaded, long-suffering, cranky and shrewd. The first words Becker sings are "In case you're wondering, it's alive and well."

Becker is as much an oddball now as Steely Dan was during its million-selling reign in the 1970s. On seven remarkable albums from 1972 to 1979, Steely Dan perfected stealth pop: songs in which calm tempos and suave production cloaked unlikely musical twists and lyrics about topics like stock-market crashes, Puerto Rican immigration or the golden age of be-bop.

Only Paul Simon, Randy Newman and the best Brazilian songwriters showed the same musical sophistication, while Steely Dan had a terse cynicism all its own: a fascination with sleaze and duplicity that was one part hipster slumming, two parts film noir.

The songs glided onto pop radio stations, and soon the musical surfaces of Steely Dan songs — the Ellingtonian chords, the urbane swagger — were imitated by hack songwriters and easy-listening pop-jazz groups.

But few wanted to follow up on Steely Dan's lyrics or its sneakier musical ploys. The imitators merely recreated the dapper wardrobe, minus the switchblade in the inside pocket.

Tim Allen stars as a wisecracking, reluctant St. Nick in "The Santa Clause," playing at Midland Park Mall.

Ho,ho — hum

■ "The Santa Clause" is proof that Tim Allen should keep his day job.

By Michael H. Price
N.Y. Times News Service

A genial but inept and thoroughly derivative movie, John Pasquin's "The Santa Clause" serves chiefly to deliver notice that ace TV comedian Tim Allen is not yet big enough to take charge of the big screen.

The "Home Improvement" guy is trying to fill some unusually large boots here: Allen isn't impersonating Santa Claus so much as he's "becoming" Santa Claus, and yet the nearest he comes to a transformation is a coarse exploitation of the fat-guy image customarily associated with the character.

It's no help that Allen's "fat suit" — a convincing rig using the same technology that bulked up Robin Williams for "Mrs. Doubtfire" — obscures the personable Allen so thoroughly that it might as well be any ordinary schmoe playing the role.

Comprising about equal parts traditional legend, blubbery vulgarisms and the central plot gimmick of John Cherry's "Ernest Saves Christmas" (1988), this Leo Benvenuti & Steve Rudnick screenplay pitches Allen as a guilt-ridden divorced father (a trendy and shallow characterizing element) who "borrows" the clothing of a sidelined St. Nicholas, only to find himself confronted with a "legal" requirement that he must now become the new Santa Claus.

Allen carries off the proceedings with little help and many encumbrances; the job allows him no authority as a comedian, no sense of holding an audience in the thrall of the personality that serves him so well in the less demanding arena of TV comedy.

Director John Pasquin has overseen many episodes of "Home Improvement" — a handicap of experience that causes Pasquin to seek the same easy laughs, the uninventive compositions and the jerky pacing that are the stock-in-trade of network television. The big screen deserves better, and so does the Yuletide season that "The Santa Clause" seeks to exploit.

'Scarlett': A Rhett-ched miniseries

By Ann Hodges
N.Y. Times News Service

■ "Scarlett" airs Sunday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday at 8 p.m. on CBS (KOSA-Ch. 7).

"Scarlett" is not "Gone with the Wind." Joanne Whalley-Kilmer and Timothy Dalton may call themselves Scarlett O'Hara and Rhett Butler, but they're not. Nor are they Vivien Leigh and Clark Gable.

Once past those admittedly impassable obstacles, this saga of "Scarlett," as told in eight sweeping, swooping CBS hours, is a wow of a miniseries.

It's a TV dream drama for readers of romance novels with fantasy figures like Fabio on their covers. It premieres at 8 p.m. CDT Sunday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday on CBS.

Whalley-Kilmer does take a while getting used to. She's not the beauty that Leigh was, and her Southern accent is off-putting at times. But once you're caught up in the big picture — which you will be — this offshoot Scarlett grows on you. And, in the end, Whalley-Kilmer does an admirable job of carrying virtually the whole shooting-match on her shapely shoulders.

Dalton does not fare so well, but then he has an even stronger image to overcome for those who recall Gable's Rhett. And Dalton, too, has some trouble with his accent.

The supporting cast is great fun — Sir John Gielgud, Stephen Collins, Julie Harris, George Grizzard, Jean Smart, Esther Rolle, Paul Winfield, Ann-Margret, Brian Bedford, Sean Bean, Annabeth Gish, Elizabeth Wilson, Barbara Barrie and more.

William Hanley's teleplay races from syrupy Southern comfort and down-home corn to spicy melodrama. It's not literature, but it's first-class soap opera.

It's a big expensive project, and the money spent shows on the screen — in the costumes, the settings, the location shoots that took this company to 53 locations, from Charleston, S.C., to Ireland and England. It's also evident in the many crowd scenes, the 2,000 extras and the 200 speaking roles.

Actually, "Scarlett" looks incredible. And it couldn't have happened without international sales. It's setting the record for simultaneous global premieres, running this week in Italy, Germany, Aus-

Three recent movies hit home video market

By Dolores Barclay
AP Arts Editor

"Wyatt Earp" (Warner. Priced for rental market. Rated PG-13)

If you crave a good Western and want to delve into Wyatt Earp's life, then go rent or buy the video "Tombstone." It's a great movie, plus you'll get to see Val Kilmer's incredible and sensitive portrayal of Doc Holliday.

In other words, you can avoid Lawrence Kasdan's overblown "Wyatt Earp." Into the second hour of Kasdan's film, after an hour of an uninteresting childhood tale, you wonder why the movie was made.

And as you strain through the third hour, you just wonder when it's going to end. Even then you have to wait another 10 minutes, since Kasden tacks on an anecdote of yet another Earp heroic deed.

"Wyatt Earp" is leaden and episodic, and relies almost entirely on a very wooden Kevin Costner in the title role. Even the commanding presence of Gene Hackman as Earp's father, and Dennis Quaid as a gaunt Doc Holliday, can't instill much excitement.

Quaid, who lost a great deal of weight to appear as the tuberculosis-ravaged Doc, gives an odd portrayal. His Southern accent is hard to identify, as is his misplaced anger. But he's interesting to watch. Isabella Rosselini does a good turn as Doc's companion, Kate Elder.

James Newton Howard provides an intrusive score that swells with strings every time the camera pans the landscape.

"Beverly Hills Cops III" (Paramount. Priced for rental market. Rated R)

"Beverly Hills Cop III" is the dumbest of the cop trio.

This time around, Axel tackles a counterfeit ring that uses a theme park, WonderWorld, as its headquarters. There are no surprises, there's no real police work to unravel, and there are no mysteries. It's all very predictable with lots of gunplay, noise and blood.

The movie opens in Detroit, where Axel and his fellow cops are about to raid a chop shop and walk right into a double-cross involving some carjackers, who are selling stolen government printing paper, and some counterfeiters, led by WonderWorld's head of security, Ellis DeWald (Timothy Carhart).

The carjackers are blown away and the cars are riddled with bullets, even though the cops can't seem to shoot straight and never think of blowing out the tires so the bad guys can't get away.

But our superhero is in hot pursuit and almost nabs DeWald when he's stopped by the feds, who say they want him to get away so they can trace his operation. Only one problem: Axel's boss is killed in the gunfight, and Axel wants revenge. A clue sends him to WonderWorld in Southern California ... and Beverly Hills.

Once there, the Beverly Hills jokes abound.

Judge Reinhold reprises his role as Billy Rosewood, who now has his own office. Hector Elizondo appears as Flint, a seasoned cop waiting for his retirement.

"Speed" (FoxVideo. $19.98. Rated R)

"Speed" is quite a ride — a heart-stopping race against death and terror. It is slowed only by terrible dialogue and a painfully wooden and laughable performance by Keanu Reeves, who stars as he-man superhero cop Jack Traven.

The movie opens with Traven and his partner, Harry (Jeff Daniels), a bomb expert, combing through an office building where a crazed extortionist (Dennis Hopper) has trapped an elevator full of people between floors with bombs placed on the emergency brakes.

The duo fearlessly climb down the elevator shaft, discover the bombs, realize they can't easily diffuse them and come up with an idea for removing the passengers. But the lunatic bomber is six steps ahead of them.

The sequence is a good one, and you hold your breath until the last second. Hopper is good and mad, having been thwarted by Traven and denied his $3 million ransom for the elevator hostages. So he sets up another catastrophe and pits himself against Traven. This time it's very, very personal.

Hopper takes on city buses. One, he dispatches immediately; the other provides the action for the remainder of the movie. You see, Hopper has planted a bomb on a bus. It is activated once the bus reaches 50 mph and will explode if the speed dips below 50.

Much disbelief must be suspended if you want to enjoy this ride. Otherwise, you'll sit shaking your head and laughing at the filmmakers.

Sandra Bullock puts in a good turn as one commuting passenger, Annie, who must take over the wheel once the driver is felled by a bullet.

The bus sequences offer some of the most imaginative stunts seen in recent years. Watch especially for Annie and Jack's departure from the speeding vehicle and the bus' Evel Knievel leap.

Blame the writing problems on Graham Yost, who makes his feature film debut with "Speed."

SCARLETT: Writers take big gambles

(From 1B)

tria, Spain, Sweden, Japan, Hong Kong and who-knows-where-else. The whole world so loves "Gone With the Wind," it's willing to take a chance on "Scarlett."

The executive producer of "Scarlett" has taken a chance, too. It cost Robert Halmi Sr. $9 million to buy the TV rights to author Alexandra Ripley's controversial sequel to Margaret Mitchell's masterpiece.

And, once he bought the book, Halmi took another gamble; he rewrote it for TV.

"Anytime you dramatize a book, you have to be visual, to interpret feelings that maybe are not in the written word," Halmi explained at a rather tempestuous session for skeptical TV critics. The drama was still in production then, and the critics were confused and concerned by some of the clip-scenes they saw, involving rape and murder and such. Those things didn't happen in the book.

"This miniseries is eight hours. The book probably would have made 4 1/2 hours of entertaining TV," Halmi said. "The wonders of TV is you could dwell on the characters, explain the characters, and take their passion to the conclusion. And so we are welcome to do scenes that are not in the book."

There are also new characters. Some were in "Scarlett" the book, but some weren't.

This "Scarlett" begins in Atlanta after the death of Scarlett O'Hara Butler's best and only friend, Melanie Wilkes. Ashley Wilkes (Collins), the man Scarlett always thought she loved until Rhett Butler left her, is throwing himself on his wife's grave in grief, and Scarlett is throwing herself on him but only to help him. Now her affections are elsewhere.

When Scarlett goes home to Tara and the bedside of her dying Mammy (Rolle) she's reunited with Rhett for the first time since his famous exit line in "Gone With the Wind." He still doesn't give a damn, but Scarlett does.

For the rest of this eight hours, Scarlett chases Rhett. It's a credit to director John Erman that the pace of the chase never lags, and even with a herd of characters involved, it proceeds to the finish line with no confusion.

Scarlett goes to Charleston and meets Rhett's mother — yes, his mother — and his best friend, Sally Brewton, and his favorite madam, Belle Watling. Those roles are played deliciously by Harris, Smart and Ann-Margret.

Scarlett's Charleston aunties are fine cameos, too, by Wilson and Barrie, and Gielgud makes the most of his role, as her grumpy rich grandpa.

Scarlett goes to Ireland digging for her roots and because she's having Rhett's baby. By this time, ah do declare, Scarlett has undergone such a change of character that Rhett might be excused if he didn't recognize her. That self-centered witch he once wed is turning into such a saint, you may even be moved to shed a tear in the sweet, misunderstood lady's behalf.

By the final chapter, the calendar has flipped to 1876, and Scarlett is about to meet her sorest test in the dock of London's Old Bailey. By then if you're not hooked and rooting for a happy resolution of the Rhett-Scarlett romance, either you haven't been watching or your heart's gone cold.

VAMPIRE: Movie lacks sensuous, erotic overtones filled with spiritual yearning who would rather subsist on rats than take a human life by drinking blood.

When he meets the child Claudia (Dunst), whose mother has died from an epidemic, he once again remembers love. He makes her a vampire, as Lestat once did with him, and they form a family of sorts.

Claudia never grows from her child body, but does mature as a woman in other ways, and Dunst does a remarkable job with the transformation.

It is Claudia who seeks the destruction of Lestat, thus bringing about her own demise.

Louis, frail and vulnerable — a sensitive vampire, if you will — becomes stronger and more terrifying following Claudia's destruction. What soul he had left dies with her.

It is Louis who must avenge Claudia by taking on the evil Santiago (Rea) and others of the vampire tribe that follows the theatrical Armand (Banderas), a vampire who desires Louis.

"Interview With the Vampire" somehow lacks the erotic and sensual overtones of vampirism, although there are times when Jordan ("The Crying Game," "Mona Lisa") hints at it with his actors. Even Lestat, who presumably loves Louis, keeps him at arms' length.

Philippe Rousselot should be commended for his outstanding cinematography and Dante Ferretti's production design is splendid. Stan Winston added just the right pallor and exposed blood vessels to the vampire visages. The effect is quite good.

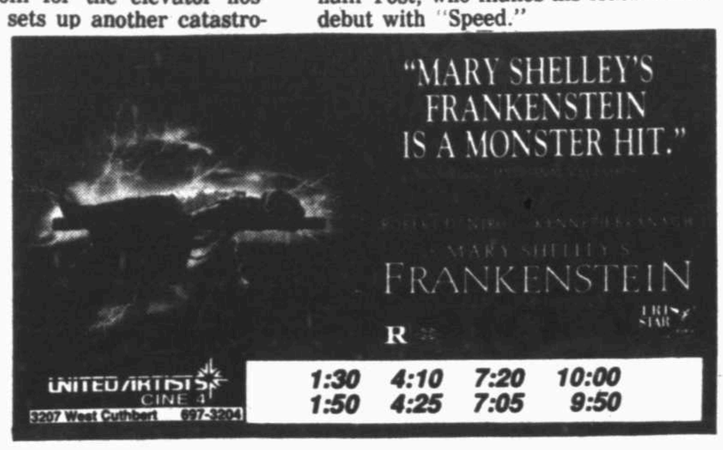
Jordan directed from a screenplay by Anne Rice, who adapted from her best-selling novel.

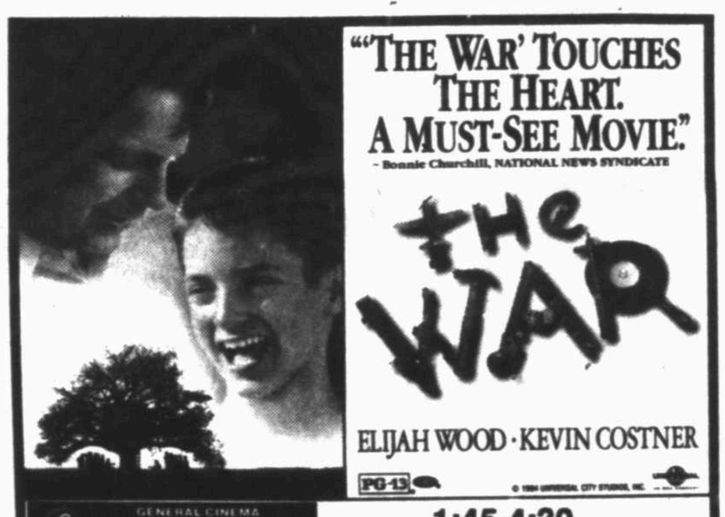
"Interview With the Vampire" is a Warner Bros. release produced by David Geffen and Stephen Woolley.

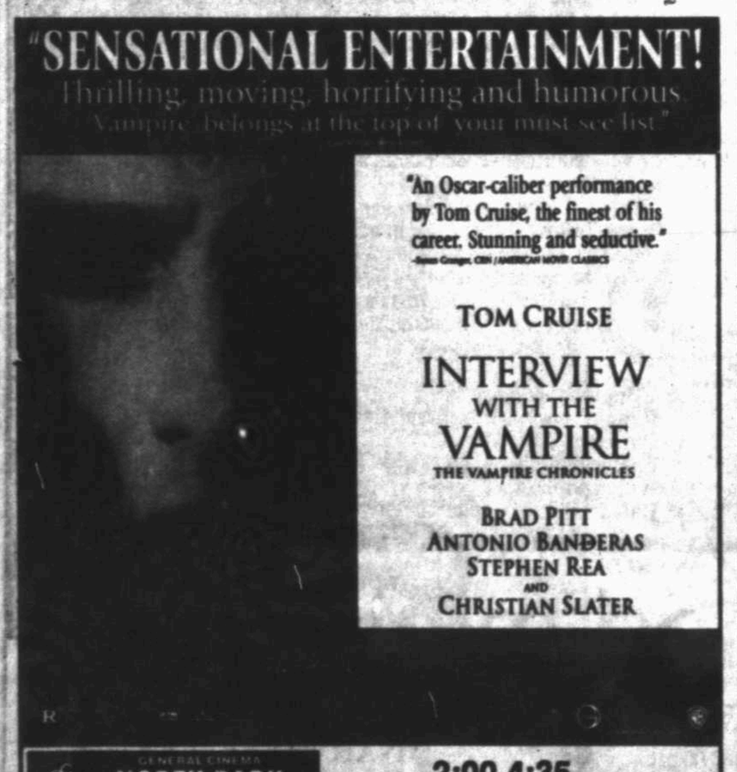
The squeamish and those who can't handle blood (even fake movie blood) would be advised to avoid this film. It is rated R.

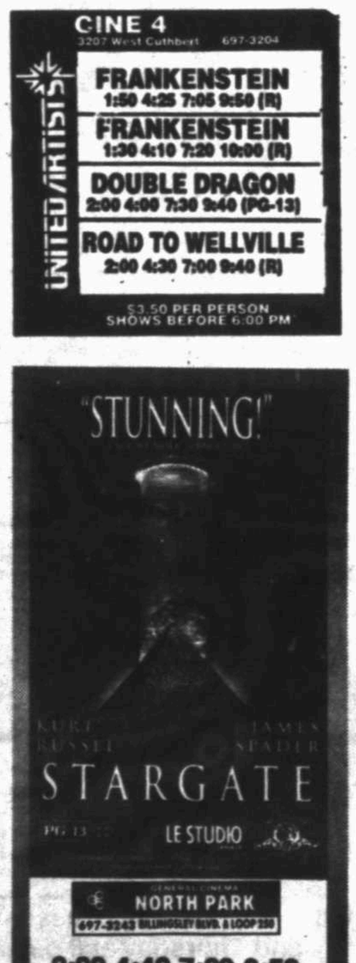
PG-13 — Special parental guidance strongly suggested for children under 13. Some material may be inappropriate for young children.

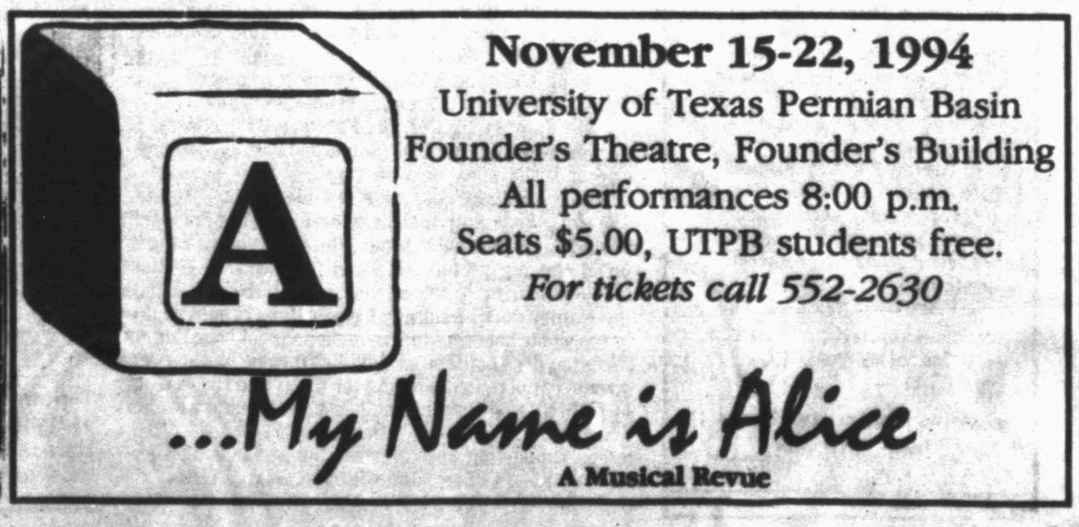
R — Restricted. Under 17 requires accompanying parent or adult guardian.











COUNTRY MUSIC MEMO

Haggard still in touch with roots of his raising

By Paulette Flowers and Otto Kitsinger

Merle Haggard. He's not pretty. He's lived a complicated and messy life. He's moody. He's written songs that made even staunch conservatives wince. He's a riddle to his closest friends. He is a giant; every singer, every songwriter and every picker stands on his shoulders. He's the hard truth, the battered heart and the undefeated soul of country music.

And he would hate that we said so. Asked about the navy blue Lincoln that his song publisher, his record label and a Birmingham businessman gave him on his induction into the Country Music Hall of Fame, Merle said, "I've never heard of anything like it — a new car just for playing music. Like just for putting on a roof, you know?"

For those who tuned in late, Merle Ronald Haggard was born in Bakersfield, Calif., on April 6, 1937, the son of dirt poor Oklahoma Dust Bowl immigrants. When Merle was 9, his dad died, and Merle began to live the life described in his song "Mama Tried." He "turned 21 in prison" doing time in San Quentin for a botched burglary (drunk, he broke into a bar that was still open).

Long talks with convicted murderer Caryl Chessman (through a ventilation shaft) while Merle was in solitary confinement (for brewing beer in his cell) convinced him to turn his life around. Music became his way out, and in 1963 he was released on parole.

He made hard country music when few others did, and rose to fame like his heroes Lefty Frizzell, Jimmie Rodgers and Bob Wills. After "Okie From Muskogee," his most famous (and infamous) song, then-governor Ronald Reagan gave Merle a full pardon.

Now he is one of the most honored artists in country music. He's won 16 ACM Awards, 7 CMA's, and a Grammy. He's had 38 No. 1 singles in Billboard. Onstage, he sometimes plays the fiddle Bob Wills gave him.

Merle's personal troubles didn't stop after San Quentin. He's been through divorce (four times; he's now happily married to his fifth wife, Teresa), financial disasters and various addictions. But even when he got so down he wanted to quit the music business, the music business wouldn't let him go. Merle says, "More even than the Hall of Fame award, I'm proud of what my music has become over the last few years -- what people claim that it means to them."

There are two new tribute albums by some of today's top artists: "Mama's Hungry Eyes" (Arista), which benefits Second Harvest Food Bank; and "Tulare Dust: The Songs Of Merle Haggard" (HighTone).

On Nov. 22 and 23, TNN will air the two-part "Merle Haggard: An American Story." Narrated by Willie Nelson, it has interviews and performances by Merle and by some of the artists who appear on the Arista tribute album. It opens with an incredibly touching sequence that moves between Merle's brilliant performance at the Ryman Auditorium this summer and footage of him revisiting his prison cell.

Get the new tribute albums, by all means. But if the only song you've heard "The Poet Of The Common Man" himself sing is "Okie From Muskogee," buy one of Merle's. "Merle Haggard: 1994" is his latest. Put it on and listen. You'll hear truth.

Merle Haggard. Country Music. Same thing.

QUIBBLES 'N' BITS

Gold From the Vaults Dept.: Mercury is mining its vaults for some great collector's sets: a 40-song set of Reba McEntire's Mercury recordings (1976-83), "Oklahoma Girl"; "Cup Of Loneliness: The Classic Mercury Years," 51 songs (1954-62) by George Jones; and compilations on Johnny Cash and the Kentucky HeadHunters.

Billy the Kid Dept.: Billy Dean, who spent three weeks speechless (throat problems) this summer, sounded just fine backstage at the CMA Awards. He told us that he's going to "kick back and write some songs this winter."

Rough Cuts Quote of the Week: "I got the Alan Jackson syndrome up there. I felt like I was going on and on forever." -- Pam Tillis, after being named 1994 CMA Female Vocalist of the Year, referring to Alan Jackson's marathon acceptance speech a few years back.

BECKER: Artist stares at middle age

(From 1B)

Fagen has made two albums since Steely Dan dissolved in 1980: "The Nightfly" (1982), a fondly twisted reminiscence of the early 1960s, and "Kamakiriad" (1993), a loose travelogue. Becker produced albums, including "Kamakiriad," before Steely Dan reunited for summer tours in 1993 and 1994; Fagen and Becker produced "11 Tracks of Whack" (Giant 9 24579; CD and cassette) together.

Steely Dan was precociously middle-aged. When its leaders were in their 20s, their lyrics scoffed at youthful passion, and their music had little use for rock's excesses, preferring the swing and tricky harmonies of bebop and hard-bop.

Becker, now in his 40s, is staring at actual middle age, and "11 Tracks of Whack," like Paul Simon's "Still Crazy After All These Years," applies singular musical ingenuity to visions of shrinking horizons and squandered opportunities. Steely Dan's snide intelligence has been fused with a sense of mortality.

Becker sings about junkies and cheating lovers, a space alien and a suicidal couch potato, old girlfriends and a spoiled son. Where Steely Dan usually kept a guarded distance from its characters, Becker shows some empathy.

In "Junkie Girl," the narrator watches the hooker he loves die of an overdose; in "This Moody Bastard," a depressed loner obsesses over his long-gone college sweetheart.

Becker is unsparing in "Cringemaker," a song about a "college belle" who became "the wife from hell"; after he wonders, with a sardonic female chorus, "Whatever happened to my ha-ha-yeah," he decides, "I guess we always knew ... who we would turn into."

In "Hard-Up Case," a bleak reggae march, the singer realizes his lover has given up on him and found another man, but he takes a parting shot: "Look at what you're dragging home — another hard-up case." There's no melodrama, but no detachment either; Becker's frazzled, cracking voice is quietly convincing.

Becker hasn't lost his sense of humor. In "Hat Too Flat," a sideways funk tune full of clattering cowbells and oblique guitar, the narrator is an extraterrestrial arrival from Arcturus who's trying to assimilate; he gets everything right except the language ("My English it is more better now") and the headgear. And "Little Kawai," a country waltz, details a parent's halfhearted attempts to discipline a wayward son.

With Becker in charge, the songs move toward Steely Dan's jazzy side. Where Fagen relied on crisp keyboards, Becker features his own guitars, which make the arrangements slippery: notes hover and loop, buzz and tickle, as their sliding pitches reinforce the disorientation in the lyrics.

Naturally, Becker carries on Steely Dan's musical gamesmanship. Songs start in one key and end in another ("Cringemaker"), bring in new material behind solos ("Book of Liars") and shift harmony from introduction to first verse ("My Waterloo").

In "Girlfriend," as the singer watches reruns, the song slouches down through chromatic harmonies; he wonders "Where does a guy like me fit in?" and is answered by a blurting bass-clarinet solo.

"Lucky Henry," about a hobo's persistent reincarnation, meshes a singsong melody with a double-time jazz vamp; "Surf and/or Die," about a hang-glider crash, floats glassy chords over an urgent riff.

Yet "11 Tracks of Whack" doesn't hide behind its own craftiness. "I wear my heart on my sleeve/A sight you surely must have spied by now," Becker sings in "My Waterloo," and for all his self-consciousness, he means what he says.

He's still smart, still a wise guy, still as cagey as any songwriter in pop.

Area Jewish families prepare for upcoming Chanukah celebration

Staff Report

In their shopping for Thanksgiving turkeys and all the trimmings, some Americans will be buying one more bag of potatoes. These Americans will be reheating the pans and re-setting the table for continued festivities when the Thanksgiving holiday is finished.

They will be preparing for Chanukah, the eight-day Jewish holiday that commemorates historic freedom from political and religious oppressors. The holiday begins the evening of Nov. 27.

Holiday celebrations, including worship services, a latke cook-off and song sessions for member families, are planned for Temple Beth El, Grandview at Redbud, Odessa, at 8 p.m. Nov. 25. For more information, call 550-5111.

This year, Chanukah arrives on the heels of Thanksgiving. The date varies slightly from year to year as it corresponds with the ancient Hebrew calendar. During the eight days of Chanukah, Jewish families will gather around the festive tables, light candles and eat latkes, special fried potato pancakes that are as much a part of the Chanukah tradition as turkey is at Thanksgiving.

Although Chanukah is among the best known Jewish holidays, it is actually considered a minor festival since its origins are historical rather than biblical. The story of Chanukah relates to the book of Maccabaeus, an apocryphal piece of scripture not considered part of the sacred Hebrew Bible, often referred to by non-Jews as the Old Testament.

The practice of Chanukah is noted in the earliest Jewish legal codes. The holiday began when the tiny country of Judea, in the surrounding Syrian empire, overcame the dominant Hellenistic culture that threatened the continuation of the Jewish people.

Following a successful revolt, the small Jewish remnant held an eight-day celebration to rededicate the previously desecrated temple. Then they established an annual commemoration of the event.

Quite literally, Chanukah means "dedication." Annually, Jews throughout the world dedicate themselves to the same values that led their ancestors to revolt against religious and cultural oppressors.

One of the best known observances of the holiday appears in the play "The Diary of Anne Frank," where young Anne and her family observe the festival in spite of their plight as refugees from Hitler's henchmen.

The central feature of the Chanukah observance is lighting an eight-branched candelabra, in Hebrew, "menorah." Families light one candle each evening to represent the passing days of the holiday. Connected with the eight-day celebration, a story is told that, when Maccabaeus came to rededicate the temple, a jar of oil that could burn only one day in the sacred temple fixtures actually burned eight days.

Other customs include eating potato pancakes and doughnuts (foods fried in oil), exchanging gifts, singing joyous songs and playing amusing games.

One game, reminiscent of Eastern Europe, features a four-sided top called a dreidel (dray'dl). Children take turns spinning it until it lands on one of four letters that represent the saying "a great miracle happened there." The miracle refers to the oil that burned for eight full days and to the tiny nation that triumphed over an oppressive force.

■ Church hosts talk

The Unitarian Universalist Church, 3301 Neely Ave., will host a presentation at 9:45 a.m. Sunday titled "The Sherrods' Odyssey and Adventures in Nepal."

Cliff and Joyce Sherrod will present a report of their experiences as volunteer workers at a medical clinic at a remote mountain village in Nepal. Program highlights include intellectual adventure, magnificent scenery and the warm hospitality of the Nepalese people.

The public is invited to attend.

■ Group hosts speaker

The Ladies Ministry at Mid-Cities Community Church is hosting Debbie Mason as a guest speaker at 6 p.m. Sunday at the church, 8700 W. Highway 191.

A covered dish dinner will follow the program.

Mrs. Mason, a graduate of California State University, Fullerton, won first place in the Performing Arts Guild of Orange County. She has served as a soloist and teacher for Christ for the Nations Institute, Dallas, for five years. She also teaches voice and piano from her home.

She is the wife of Bob Mason, senior associate pastor of the church on the Rock-North, Carrollton.

In 1990, she was diagnosed with mouth cancer. She has undergone eight surgeries and radiation treatment. One-third of her tongue has been removed and two-thirds of her jaw. The doctors told her if she survived, she would never sing again. They were wrong. She will perform during her Midland talk.

Thoughtful Moments™

Special Blessings

They speak of love, their fragile beauty,
Nurtured 'neath the sun and rain.
Flowers are God's special blessings
In our times of joy and pain.

Borrowed from celestial colors,
Where the vibrant rainbow glows.
One of God's most special blessings
Is the soft, majestic rose.

Study links anxiety, sudden cardiac death in men

DALLAS (AP) — Men who complain of high anxiety can be up to six times more likely to suffer sudden cardiac death than other men, Boston researchers say.

Anxiety is proving to be one of the strongest risk factors for sudden cardiac death, even more so than cigarette smoking, said Dr. Ichiro Kawachi, assistant professor of health and social behavior at the Harvard School of Public Health.

"But we are not saying that someone who is anxious is guaranteed to have a sudden cardiac death," said Kawachi, the lead researcher on two studies done by separate teams of Boston scientists.

Results of a 32-year study of 2,280 men linking anxiety and heart failure were published in the November issue of Circulation, a journal of the Dallas-based American Heart Association.

A heart attack occurs when a clot inside the artery causes a blockage of blood flow. Sudden cardiac death is an electrical phenomenon affecting the heartbeat.

Although scientists do not fully understand how it happens, intense psychological stress may trigger episodes of irregular heart rhythms that lead to sudden death, Kawachi said.

Dr. Gary Weingarden, a cardiologist who practices in the Dallas suburbs of Richardson and Plano, said Friday that stress could be a contributing factor in heart failure. But he did not believe a person would drop dead simply because of high anxiety.

"I think you have to presume that there's something wrong with the heart, though, underneath it all," he said. "There's got to be something else going on."

He identified coronary artery disease, a weakened or abnormal heart muscle, or some form of basic electrolyte imbalance as possible underlying causes.

The long-term research project was established by the Veterans Administration. When the study began, participants were asked five questions about their anxiety level that helped researchers construct an "anxiety symptom scale" ranging from zero to five.

During 32 years of follow-up, 131 cases of fatal coronary heart disease, including 26 sudden cardiac deaths, have occurred among the participants.

The "odds ratio," or relative risk, of sudden cardiac death was 4½ times higher in anxious men who participated in the Normative Aging Study, compared with participants who reported no symptoms of anxiety.

Education board to recommend billions in spending to Legislature

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Board of Education approved legislative recommendations Friday that are up to $3.5 billion more than state budget leaders have indicated can be spent over the next two years.

The 15-member board, which includes four members who were defeated or didn't run for re-election and will be replaced in January, voted to recommend to the Legislature:

■ Phasing in 15 additional staff development days for teachers over the next two years at a cost of $889 million.

As a "minimum first step," allowing school districts to substitute up to 15 staff development days for student instructional days. School districts already can individually apply for waivers to substitute training days for teaching days.

■ Establish a $100 million "safe schools fund" to pay for an alternative education program for serious offenders, plus programs to address prevention and the needs of less serious offenders.

At a minimum, the board recommended $50.4 million for the program for serious offenders.

■ Begin a program to raise teacher salaries to the national average over the next five years at a cost of more than $2 billion for 1996-97. The minimum recommendation is a 5 percent across-the-board pay raise for teachers costing $700 million.

■ Fund up to 30 extra days of school for students in kindergarten through eighth grade who are in danger of being retained. This would cost $421 million.

The proposals are on top of a $2.7 billion spending increase that the board previously recommended to continue funding a school finance reform law, pay for textbooks and meet a court order to help schools construct buildings.

State Senate Finance Committee Chairman John Montford, D-Lubbock, has estimated that public schools need a $2.2 billion increase over the next two-year budget period.

The Legislature meets in regular session beginning in January.

Education Board member Will Davis of Austin said the increase in teacher training days and extended-year program for students would particularly "make an enormous contribution to the retention of youngsters and performance of kids in school."

Traffic stop leads to arrest of bank robbery suspect

STEPHENVILLE (AP) — A bank robbery suspect is in jail because of a routine mid-week traffic stop in Dallas.

Dallas police stopped Leslie Palmer, 29, formerly of Stephenville, for a traffic violation Wednesday night. When they checked for any outstanding violations, they discovered he was wanted in connection with the Nov. 3 robbery of Stephenville State Bank and Trust.

At his arraignment, bond was set at $40,000, and he was taken to the Erath County Jail.

Palmer was identified from a video taken at the bank. A man entered the bank and told the four female employees to lie down on the floor and give him all their money. The man did not display a gun.

He was driving a stolen van owned by a Stephenville man. The van was found abandoned about one-half mile from the bank.

Jury convicts teen of capital murder in 'urban survival' trial

FORT WORTH (AP) — A 19-year-old man was convicted Thursday of capital murder in the shooting deaths of two men who he claimed would have eventually killed him.

A jury rejected defense attorneys' claims in Daimion Osby's capital murder retrial that Osby killed two men as an act of "urban survival."

In Osby's first trial, his attorneys argued that he suffered from a kill-or-be-killed paranoia from growing up in a high-crime urban area. That ended in a hung jury when one juror held out for an innocent verdict.

The defense's case ran into trouble Wednesday, when State District Judge Bill Burdock blocked defense attempts to allow psychologist Raymond Finn to testify about how Osby was affected by living in a high-crime, inner-city neighborhood.

"This was about the most critical evidence we could present," said Osby's attorney, Bill Lane.

Prosecutor Renee Harris said Finn's testimony would have gone into the same issues that the jury is to resolve.

"The jury is going to be called on to decide whether Osby's fear was justified," she said. "He doesn't have any more knowledge than they do on that issue."

Outside of the jury's presence, Finn testified that Osby showed signs of post-traumatic stress disorder because of purported threats on his life by the two cousins he is accused of killing.

Osby suffered various symptoms of the disorder, including impaired judgment and high anxiety because of the threats and the stress of living in a violence-prone neighborhood, Finn said.

Mother receives indictment in girls' death

AUSTIN (AP) — A woman whose daughters drowned in a car accident with their father is accused of injuring the girls by not stopping them from riding with him even though he had been drinking.

Shirley Draper, 34, could face up to life in prison if convicted.

Hays County Sheriff Paul Hastings called the case "unique."

"She has two dead children; so, how far do you go in terms of punishment and retribution?" he asked after the indictment was handed down Thursday by a Hays County grand jury in San Marcos.

Ms. Draper's husband, Harry Draper, said, "Shirley's innocent of any wrongdoing." He deferred any other comment to her lawyer, Bill Allison, who didn't immediately return a telephone call from The Associated Press.

Eight-year-old Marissa Cook, 10-year-old Shauna Cook and Gregory Cook, Ms. Draper's ex-husband, died after Cook's 1992 Chevrolet Lumina skidded into a wastewater treatment pond in a subdivision near Wimberley, south of Austin, on Sept. 25.

Hastings said Ms. Draper told authorities that her ex-husband, who was visiting from Fort Worth, had drunk vodka before taking the girls to breakfast. According to the sheriff, Ms. Draper said that she and Cook had been drinking together since the night of Sept. 23.

Eight-year-old Marissa Cook, 10-year-old Shauna Cook and Gregory Cook, Shirley Draper's ex-husband, died after Cook's 1992 Chevrolet Lumina skidded into a wastewater treatment pond on Sept. 25.

Tests showed that Cook, 36, had a blood alcohol level of 0.22, more than twice the legal limit for driving in Texas, said Hays County Justice of the Peace James Stowe.

Cook had been placed on probation in July after three driving-while-intoxicated convictions, Tarrant County officials told the Austin American-Statesman.

A breath-testing device had been installed on the car to keep it from being operated by someone who had been drinking alcohol.

"She also told us she was aware one of her children would have to blow into the apparatus to get the car running and keep it running," Hastings said.

A spokesman for Smart Start, which installed the device on Cook's car, said the system could be "fooled" if someone other than the driver breathed into the device.

The case comes as Mothers Against Drunk Driving is preparing for a national push to classify as child abuse the transportation of children by intoxicated parents, said Susan Bragg of the Dallas County chapter of MADD.

"We are supportive of prosecution in cases where children who are defenseless victims are given to intoxicated parents," Ms. Bragg said.

Hays County Assistant District Attorney Mike Wenk said Ms. Draper likely would be given a chance to surrender after a warrant is issued on the indictment, which charges her with two counts of injury to a child and two counts of endangering a child.

She could face life in prison if convicted of injury to a child, and up to two years in jail if found guilty of endangering a child, he said.

The indictment alleges Ms. Draper injured her daughters by not preventing them from riding with their father when she knew he "had previously consumed alcohol and was not capable of operating a vehicle safely."

Ms. Draper contacted police late Sept. 25 about her missing children. She was in Fort Worth looking for them when the bodies were found on Sept. 28.

Ignored Sandies aim at Lee

■ No. 10 Amarillo High hopes to pay back Rebels, who have dominated the Sandies in the playoffs.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

AMARILLO — Undefeated Amarillo High was ignored by the rest of the state for 10 weeks until it finally landed that No. 10 state ranking this week, and now the Golden Sandies take dead aim on another of life's major problems — the Midland Lee Rebels.

The 9-0 Sandies host 6-3 Lee at 1 p.m. here today at Dick Bivens Stadium in a Class 5A Small School bi-district playoff outing, and you can't blame them if they feel like they have a score to settle with the Rebels.

Lee has dominated Amarillo in the playoff experience, winning four of the five playoff meetings between the two schools. However, it was last year's 63-26 Lee win that these No. 10 Sandies want to correct.

The 63 points by Lee last year was a playoff record for Lee until the Rebels placed a whopping 79 points on the boards against El Paso Bowie a week later.

"The tables have turned on us this year," said Lee head coach Earl Miller. "Last year we had an experienced team and they were young. It's just the

MHS, Lee stars begin senior year

It was just a little less than two years ago that Midland High's Amy Alcala and Midland Lee's Krissy Woodard posed for a similar shot when they were touted as the Super Sophomores, the so-called franchise players for what both teams' coaches hoped would be the start of a three very successful years in District 4-5A.

Four- and three-year starters in girls basketball is certainly not uncommon. But to accomplish that feat at the Class 5A level is something of a rarity. But the two players were more than just one of the starting lineup. In both their sophomore and junior seasons, Woodard and Alcala led their respective teams in scoring.

Their paths began differently. Woodard, a 6-foot-2 post, was playing for coach Elise Kail, who in her first year at Lee, brought home the district championship. A lot to live up to for a sophomore. Alcala, a 5-9 forward, was on the other end of the spectrum. Coach Jim Raughton's

Greenwood took its first-ever postseason victory here 57-21 over Clint in a Class 3A bi-district playoff. The Rangers triumphed when Bucky Smith led a 23-point, first-quarter outburst that put the Lions (8-3) out of contention early.

MC answers wake up call

■ Ben Radford scores 16 points in final 10 minutes to lead Midland College out of the doldrums.

By Bill Petitt
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — Midland College head basketball coach Pat Rafferty is still trying to find the right buttons to push.

Friday night, Rafferty must have thought he hit the snooze button on the Chap alarm as MC overcame a sluggish start by going to its "Big Ben" to escape with a 105-91 win over Angelina College on the first night of the Howard Classic here.

Midland College (3-0) stays unbeaten with the win while Angelina drops to 1-2.

Ben Radford scored a career-high 31 points, including 16 points in the final 9:33 of the game to lift Midland from a 69-65 lead to as much as a 20-point lead in the final minute of the game.

"We knew going into the game that Ben was the best athlete in the game," said Rafferty, who was disappointed in his team's performance. "We just didn't come ready to play. When we were warming up, our guys looked over there and saw a bunch of 6-foot-3 guys and thought that if we just showed up, we could win.

"Angelina has a feisty team and we just played at the level of our competition."

"That's surprising to me," said Radford after learning of his 31 points. "At half, coach told me to make strong moves to the basket and to be a little quicker inside. They were smaller, but they were quick and we had to adjust to that."

Angelina, who came into the game averaging 114 points per outing, kept Midland on its toes until the final 10 minutes of the game when Midland pulled away by crashing the boards and converting seven free throws in the final three min-

Steers run to daylight

■ Big Spring tries to slow El Paso Parkland's speedy rushers this afternoon in a bi-district playoff.

By Mike Butts
Staff Writer

Big Spring comes out from under Friday night's lights this afternoon to show off its talents in the West Texas glare. And by all accounts it should be an afternoon to savor for Steer football fans.

For the first time since at least 1940, Big Spring's football team plays a home playoff game. And maybe for the first time ever the Steers play on Saturday afternoon when at 2 p.m. today they face El Paso Parkland's Matadors in a Class 4A bi-district playoff. The Steers (6-4) are expected to win their first playoff game since 1990.

And lack of injuries is one reason Big Spring rebounded from a 2-4 start to win its last four games and qualify for postseason play.

"We're as healthy as we've been in four years and I think that's been a big key," said Big Spring coach Dwight Butler, who leads the Steers to the playoffs for the first time as a head coach.

Parkland (8-2) rebounded from an 1-8 1993 season to win District 3-4A with an eight-game winning streak. But Butler is not quite sure what to expect from the Matadors.

"This is like a blind date," Butler said. "Maybe you've seen it from afar but close up you have no idea what they're like. We've seen them on video but we have no idea about who they played."

* Denotes District 4-5A games.

Excuse Midland High girls coach Jim Raughton if he doesn't panic when told he is facing one of the biggest rebuilding projects in his five years as coach of the Lady Dawgs.

MHS fans may not realize it, but Raughton has faced and conquered situations similar to the one he has now after losing four starters and eight total seniors from the most successful Lady Dawg team ever. Not only did the senior-laden squad go a perfect 12-0 in District 4-5A in claiming their second-straight league title but the Lady Dawgs also advanced to the Region I-5A tournament for the first time in the program's history.

But building a team around just one or two returning starters has gotten to be a habit with Raughton.

"The year before, we lost three starters," Raughton said of the 1993 team which won its first district and bi-district titles. "The year after that (1994) we lost three starters and look what that team did. And this year we've lost four starters."

The Lady Dawgs begin the season Monday with an 8 p.m. contest against Stanton, a Class 2A playoff team last year.

It must be pointed out, however, that all-everything senior guard Amy Alcala has made Raughton's job all that much easier. In two years as the starting guard for MHS, Alcala has led in scoring. She surpassed the 1,000-point mark for career scoring as a junior and was named the district's most valuable player for two straight years.

And Raughton said this year will be no different.

"She's been expected to score points in the past and she's still going to be expected to score points," Raughton said of Alcala, who will play next year for Baylor.

"She may have to score a few more this year," he said. "But I don't think we've ever seen Amy do what she is capable of doing. She can rise to any occasion."

And like past seasons, opposing defenses will focus most of their energy on defending Alcala.

"There's no doubt about it, they're going to double (team) Amy," Raughton said. "And we know that. That mean's somebody's going to be open and I don't think there's any girl we're going to have on the floor that you can just completely turn loose. Some people tried to do that last year and they weren't able to do that because we have good quality shooters."

The four starters who picked up most of the slack when Alcala faced a double-team situation last year were forward Julie Chancellor, the co-MVP of 4-5A, point guard Karie Cornelius and posts Michel Ann Thompson and Elaine Rogers.

But the Lady Dawgs are returning four seniors who got sufficiant time off the bench last year and who were called on several times to score and score quickly.

Seniors Jamie Rand and Veronica Poage along with junior Marci Swinney played all season on the varsity.

"They know what it takes and they know what it's like to get to the big game," Raughton said. "We've got some girls on this team who can shoot. Veronica and Jamie are both capable of going out and getting 20 points a night."

Senior LaKendria Kendrick and juniors Laura Childress and Ogonna Merritt got good playing time on the varsity during the pre-district games before being moved to the junior varsity for the rest of the season. In one of those varsity outings, Kendrick broke a school record in number of three-point goals made in a single game with seven.

"Ogonna is one of the best I've ever seen at stealing the ball and taking it down to the other end and scoring," Raughton said.

Rounding out the varsity are juniors Toya Zachery, Tia McCutcheon, Jo Ann Brito and Autumn Yaeger.

Zachery, one of the tallest players on the team at 5-foot-9, is a little slower getting into basketball after helping lead the MHS volleyball team to the playoffs.

"Toya Zachery is as good an athlete as there is," Raughton said. "Tia McCutcheon worked, worked and worked on her shot and Jo Ann is one of those girls who got cut in the ninth grade and came back last year only to have knee surgery. So she's a very hard worker."

One thing that won't change with the turnaround in personnel is the style of play MHS fans have gotten used to since Raughton took over.

"Basically, we're going to try to play the same way," Raughton said. "We're going to try to play in the transition and we're going to try to pressure the basketball on the court. I think this year we'll probably play a bit more aggressively on defensive."

That game plan will open up an obvious weakness which the Lady Dawgs had to face last year as well. While MHS hit the high-water mark of 30 wins in 1994, the season was not without its close games, with most of them coming against teams which tried to force the quick Lady Dawgs to slow down their game and play in the halfcourt.

But Raughton hopes this team will deal with the inevitability of that opposing game plan they way it did last year.

"As things stand, we've got no size and we make no bones about it. We're 5-8 and 5-9 in the middle," Raughton said. "But those girls know that. They know what they've got to do in order to win. They've got to get up in people's faces and pressure, pressure, pressure the basketball. I think as far as athletic ability goes, this is as good a group as I've had here."

Whatever the strengths and weaknesses are, it could all come down to the winning tradition the Lady Dawgs have established in the last four years.

"You put these girls on the floor, they like to win," Raughton said. "They know what it takes to win and they've been there and they've experienced the winning and the losing. They believe that it's a lot nicer when they win."

For the first time in four years, Midland Lee girls basketball coach Elise Kail feels like the style of play she's been implementing at the junior high and freshmen levels is paying off.

"It makes me feel like there's some hope, like what I'm doing maybe is right," Kail said recently as her Lady Rebels gear up for the 1994 hoops season. Lee opens its schedule Tuesday with an 8 p.m. contest at Class 4A Big Spring.

"I feel like all coaches question what they do," Kail continued. "I certainly do. Players question what they do also. But when I see it working, then I know what I'm doing is right and it's going to work for the program.

"I've had some good freshman coaches last year and this year's sophomore products show that. We're starting to get stability in the junior high programs because we've got some coaches who are going to hang around down there."

With only one starter returning and two other returning letter winners, the outlook may not seem so bright for the Lady Rebels, who are trying to return to the playoffs after winning the District 4-5A championship in 1992.

But what Kail has seen from her young team has given the Lady Rebels a huge amount of excitement about the prospect of returning to the playoffs.

"I can see kids starting to do the exact same things (techniques)," Kail said. "You want to have programs like Levelland and Sudan and Nazareth where all your kids look like machines. And I can start to see that and it's exciting.

"A lot of people are going to thing we're not going to be very strong because we've only got one returning starter," Kail said. "But I've got a lot of kids who have played summer basketball and their experience shows and the preseason is going to make a big difference.

"It's going to be interesting. We're a lot further along than we've ever been because I've only got one varsity volleyball player on the team so we've been working with the top nine players since the first day of school. That helps a lot. I'm freaking out because we're so far advanced over past years. We went to play a (controlled) scrimmage Tuesday night and I was ready to play a game scrimmage. And I've never been ready to do that.

"It's fun," Kail said. "The kids are excited about it. They realize they've improved."

One of the main reasons the youngsters are more seasoned than they usually are has been because of the mainstay of senior post Krissy Woodard.

Woodard (6-foot-2) will start for Kail for the third-straight season and is well-versed in what Kail expects from her team.

"She's already such a leader," Kail said. "It's amazing how much she's matured. (Woodard's experience) brings stability. There's a lot of things that I don't even have to talk about in practice in that position. And with someone who doesn't have all the experience, you've got to waste practice time breaking things down.

"That's the way it's been my last three years here, having to constantly break down each position and explain things over and over again. That's why we're so much better this year because there's so much these kids already know from learning all that in junior high."

The Lady Rebels will be led by four seniors: Woodard, 5-3 wing Tiffany Rodgers, 5-7 wing Farrah Fisher and 5-8 wing Michelle Benson. Fisher and Benson joined Woodard on the varsity last season but Rodgers played on the junior varsity.

"Those girls are going to have to take over the leadership role and they've done that already in practice, which is good," Kail said.

"Michelle is very effective from the shooting range of about 12 feet, and inside she's real effective," Kail said. "She's got this funky move inside where she scores on everybody and draws the foul at the same time."

That move will help Benson, who will see some time at the post position because the Lady Rebels are not real deep at that spot. Behind Woodard are 5-9 sophomore Nisha Washington and 5-10 junior Colleen McCarty, both newcomers to the varsity.

Fisher will be the eldest member of the Lee guards and wings. Fisher joined the team after the Lee volleyball season was over and Kail said, "She's still making the transition but she's further along than she's ever been. She can hit the three-point shot very effectively and she's one of the quickest players in the lineup."

Sophomore Jamie Rhoads, a 5-8 wing, leads a talented group of newcomers to the Lee squad. Juniors Sam Sailler (5-4), Claire Wright (5-6), Jaclyn Smith (5-7) and Lisa Chapman (5-7), a transfer from Denver City, will make up most of Lee's outside game.

"Jamie's a real good shooter," Kail said. "She can open up the offense. She'll take it in and just completely clear out the lane and put it up. That's going to be a big help because it will take pressure off Krissy and it's going to take pressure off Claire.

"She's probably going to be one of the best players in Midland over the next three years," Kail added.

Wright should be Lee's strongest long-range shooter.

"Claire has moved her three-point shot out to the NBA range. She can shoot a three-pointer about two-and-a-half steps off the line and make it," Kail said. "She will be my primary point guard."

Not only is their excitement about the possible re-emergence of the program, but there is a small amount of looking back to last year's team which finished fifth in league play with an 11-15 overall and 4-8 loop record.

"The talent we had last year, we should have done a lot better than we did," Kail said. "And these seniors know that. They saw what happened when we didn't play up to our ability and they're bound and determined that it's not going to happen again.

"That has been the biggest motivation this year."

SENIOR: Tall City stars reflect on past two years

(From 1C)

Lady Dawgs had not won a district title during his tenure but they had made some strides.

Since then, things have been reversed. MHS has won two straight district championships behind Alcala, who was twice named the league's Most Valuable Player. Two successful runs in the playoffs, with an appearance in the 1994 regional tournament, have highlighted Alcala's career.

The Lady Rebels, however, fought through internal problems last year to finish outside the top three playoff spots for the second straight season. Woodard, however, has not gone without being recognized as she was named to the second team all-district in 1993 and the first team last year.

Now that they are seniors, both have some things to say about what those first two years were like and what they hope for themselves and their teams in their final high school season.

Besides all the success in the playoffs and the personal accolades, Alcala says learning as much as she could about the game of basketball has been one of the most rewarding things about her high school career.

"I know the game better now," Alcala said. "You never know all you can about the game. You learn something new every time you step on the court. I'm constantly working on my game, to try to improve it in every aspect."

The search for team success hasn't been as easy for Woodard and her teammates.

"Just being on varsity and starting as a sophomore was a real big responsibility for me," Woodard said. "But it didn't work out like I was expecting it to (in 1992) and the same with my junior year. We had a lot of internal problems because the team didn't really get along great.

"Those two years — and I guess Coach can confirm it for you — weren't good at all," Woodard continued. "She knows how bad they were for me. But this year, it's going to different."

Both players have put in the extra hours to become better players. Whether it's playing in organized leagues over the summer or just packing in the hours on their home courts. And both feel like the work has been worth it.

"I know I've been working my tail off all these summers and it's paid off," Alcala said.

She points out, however, that leading the team in scoring every night is not all she's cracked up to be.

"Especially last year, everybody was putting so much emphasis on offense," Alcala said. "But sometimes it's the little things that make the big things happen. If you're having a bad offensive night, a good defensive effort makes up for that. Defense is a major, major part of our game plan. It just might not be as glamourous."

Woodard said she feels like her two years as an underclassman have helped her go from t[illegible]mid sophomore to aggressive senior.

"I have the attitude now that I don't care if I knock the crap out of somebody," Woodard said. "I don't care what they think of me. I'm going to get out there and play my game. I'm going to be aggressive. I've just got a different attitude. At the post you have to be strong, you have to be tough and you have to be able to score. And to do that you have to be aggressive and you have to be mean. And so I'm not being nice anymore."

It's been a fun two years, they both agree. And it's been fun for girls basketball fans to be able to see Alcala and Woodard .

JJ's lead Mavs over Philly

Associated Press

■ NBA Roundup

PHILADELPHIA — Jamal Mashburn and Jim Jackson scored 22 points apiece as the Dallas Mavericks held off a late Philadelphia rally and defeated the 76ers 107-100 on Friday night.

Dallas, which never trailed in the game, took a 90-80 lead on a jumper by Lucious Harris with 6:55 to play. But Philadelphia went on a 14-6 run, closing to 96-94 on two free throws by Jeff Malone with 2:26 to go.

Lorenzo Williams then hit a jumper, his only field goal of the game, to give the Mavericks a six-point advantage. After Shawn Bradley made a follow shot at 1:20, Dallas made five free throws to close out the scoring.

Rookie point guard Jason Kidd added 19 points and nine rebounds for the Mavericks, while Harris had 16 points.

SuperSonics 129, Suns 123

TACOMA, Wash. — Shawn Kemp scored 26 points and Detlef Schrempf got 12 of his 22 points in the fourth quarter as Seattle defeated Phoenix.

Sam Perkins also had 22 points and Gary Payton 20 for the Sonics, who led 118-109 with 5:57 left before the Suns came back with three consecutive 3-pointers, two by Elliot Perry, to tie the score.

Danny Manning scored 27 points and Dan Majerle 23 for Phoenix.

Rockets 102, Celtics 82

BOSTON — The Houston Rockets, who began last season with 15 wins, improved their record to an NBA-best 5-0 as Hakeem Olajuwon scored 26 points in a victory over Boston.

The defending champions led by at least 11 points all the way after Kenny Smith's jumper from the top of the key with 5:29 left in the first quarter made the score 17-6.

Houston won its 19th straight in November since losing to Utah on Nov. 28, 1992.

The Celtics, who have played three of last season's semifinalists, are 0-3 for the seventh time and the first since 1977-78. Their worst start was 0-5 in their first season, 1946-47.

Boston had just two double-figure scorers — Dino Radja with 31 points and Xavier McDaniel with 10. For Houston, Vernon Maxwell scored 21 and Robert Horry 15. Olajuwon had 14 rebounds.

For the fifth straight game, Houston had an outstanding first quarter. It led 33-18 behind Olajuwon's 13 points and a scrappy defense that had three steals that resulted in dunks and held Boston to 38 percent shooting.

In their previous four games, the Rockets leads after one quarter were 30-20, 28-19, 27-14 and 33-22.

Bullets 104, Nets 91

LANDOVER, Md. — Calbert Cheaney scored 22 points and five other Washington players reached double figures as the Bullets, off to their best start in five seasons, beat New Jersey.

Washington hasn't been 3-1 since opening the 1989-90 season with five wins in six games. The Bullets' lone loss this season came Wednesday, when they blew an 18-point lead in Philadelphia and lost by a point.

After Washington let an 11-point halftime lead shrink to 78-73 early in the fourth quarter, Don MacLean made two straight baskets to ignite a 9-2 run that made it 87-75.

Hornets 123, Bucks 115

MILWAUKEE — Dell Curry hit five 3-pointers and had 30 points as Charlotte won for the first time this season over Milwaukee.

Marty Conlon hit the first basket of the final period to give Milwaukee a 95-94 lead, but the Hornets ran off nine straight points, going ahead 103-95 on a basket by Larry Johnson with 8:47 left.

Charlotte then built its lead to 113-103 on a 3-pointer by Curry with 4:31 left. The Bucks pulled to 113-110 on a shot by Todd Day, who had 21 points, with 1:43 left, but Charlotte held on.

Bulls 112, Timberwolves 100

MINNEAPOLIS — Scottie Pippen scored 22 points and Chicago used a smothering defense in the third quarter to beat Minnesota, keeping the Timberwolves winless.

Despite its best effort of the season, Minnesota now has lost 15 straight dating back to last year. A loss at home Saturday to Boston, which also is winless, would tie the franchise record for consecutive losses.

Chicago, which had six players in double figures, has never lost to Minnesota in 11 games since the Wolves entered the league in 1989.

Warriors 112, Jazz 104

SALT LAKE CITY — Tim Hardaway hit six 3-pointers and scored 30 points as Golden State stayed undefeated by handing Utah its first home loss of the season.

Hardaway connected on 10 of 15 shots from the field, including 6-of-10 from 3-point range. Latrell Sprewell also had 30 points for the Warriors.

Ricky Pierce added 21 points, and Rony Seikaly had nine rebounds to go with six points. The Warriors are off to their best start since 1991-92.

Driver 'Sacks' Hooters 500 record

HAMPTON, Ga. (AP) — On a record-smashing day, it was Greg Sacks who had the biggest hammer.

Sacks, giving Hoosier Tire the pole for Sunday's season-ending Hooters 500 at Atlanta Motor Speedway, led the onslaught that saw 41 of 56 drivers lap the 1.522-mile oval faster than the previous record of 180.207 mph, set in March by rookie Loy Allen Jr.

Sacks, driving a Ford Thunderbird for D.K. Ulrich, was the fastest on the recently repaved track with a lap of 185.830. Kenny Wallace, subbing in the final nine races of the season for injured Ernie Irvan, was a distant second at 184.746 on Goodyear tires.

"We're a first year team and we haven't done a lot of good things this year," said Sacks, who earned his second career pole and first since July 1990 at Daytona. "We've run strong at a couple of tracks, but this gets us in the record book in a big way."

Sacks, 42, was excited by his latest accomplishment, saying, "When I won that pole at Daytona it was exciting because it was my first one. It's been so long that this one feels like the first time again."

But Sacks, who was among the fastest drivers in tire tests at Atlanta, had the pole for Sunday's 500-mile race in his sights going into Friday's session.

"When we tested here (last week), I tried to go through (turns) one and two wide open and nearly lost it," he said. "It was a hairy situation. But we were able to stay wide open through three and four with no problem.

"I don't think I slept two minutes last night. I ran about 500 laps on this track in my mind trying to figure out how to solve our problem and get through one and two wide open.

"I told (crew chief) Tony Furr we were either going to be on the pole or be rolling another car off the track 'because I'm going to drive it wide open all the way around.' It was a good lap -great grip on a great surface."

Just as excited as Sacks, who has one Winston Cup victory — the 1985 Pepsi 400 at Daytona — was Ulrich, who said, "This was the first time in 24 years I've ever set foot in Victory Lane, and I wouldn't have got there without foot-to-the-floor Sacks."

Fords, which won 25 of the 31 poles this season, swept the top five spots Friday, with Derrike Cope third at 183.921, followed by Geoff Bodine at 183.909 and Mark Martin at 183.736.

Rounding out the top 10 were Jeff Gordon at 183.502, Joe Nemechek 183.386, Ricky Rudd 183.220, John Andretti 183.147 and Terry Labonte 183.128.

Albus, Thompson share Senior lead

■ Golf Roundup

MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. — Jim Albus birdied the final hole to gain a share of the second-round lead Friday in rain, wind and cold at the Senior Tour Championship.

The former club pro was tied with Rocky Thompson at 135 at the halfway point of the $1.35 million, season-ending tournament sponsored by Golf Magazine.

The weather shifted from the calm, warm conditions of the opening round.

Overnight, the temperature dropped 30 degrees into the mid-50's. The 25 mph winds put the wind-chill at 40. It also drizzled occasionally.

And the scores reflected the change.

Albus, with a 71, and Thompson, with a 70, were two of the three players in the field of 28 to break par 72 on the Dunes Club course that yielded subpar scores to 15 in the opening round.

"It was tough," Jim Dent said after completing a 69, the best score of the blustery day. "The golf course got its revenge today. Anything around 75 was a pretty good score."

Statistics proved his point. The elite field played to an average of 70.81 in the opening round, 73.89 in the second round.

Thompson offered an even more telling example. For his approach to the second hole Thursday, he used an 8-iron; Friday it was a 3-iron.

World Cup of Golf

DORADO, Puerto Rico — Sunny skies replaced rain, and Fred Couples and Davis Love tightened the U.S. grip on the lead.

Couples and Love, in search of a record third straight World Cup title, started slowly, but a string of seven birdies over five holes turned a one-stroke lead into a rout.

The Americans finished the day 15-under-par and 27-under for the tournament, 11 strokes ahead of the Malaysian team, with 36 holes to play.

"The fairways were still a little soggy, but the course was in a lot better shape," Love said. The Americans had waited out a three-hour rain delay in Thursday's opening round.

UT President Berdahl says talk about firing Mackovic premature

AUSTIN (AP) — University of Texas president Robert Berdahl says football coach John Mackovic has done a good job and that any talk about his departure is "premature and harmful."

Mackovic has been under fire since the Longhorns, 5-4, dropped three of their last four games to virtually eliminate themselves from the Cotton Bowl race.

That included losses to Rice, Texas Tech and Texas A&M.

"Everybody's disappointed," Berdahl said in the Friday edition of the Austin American-Statesman.

However, he said, "I think John has done a good job. There have been moments when we've struggled, moments that have been tough. People who believe a program can be built in three years are unrealistic."

Mackovic, 16-14-1 overall at Texas, is in the third season of a contract that pays $425,000 annually.

Berdahl said he would be the one to make any decision about Mackovic's status.

"(The decision) is ultimately mine, but a number of people would consult on that issue first," he said. "But there's been no discussion. I think all the speculation is premature and harmful."

Berdahl was vice chancellor for academic affairs at the University of Illinois when Mackovic was hired to coach the Illini in 1988. Mackovic was 30-16-1 in four seasons there.

"It takes time. It requires more patience than some people have," Berdahl said.

"How can you say you're satisfied with losses? I want to win every game. But we have to be realistic when we play better teams. Nobody will say we had a better team than Texas A&M. I was disappointed we lost the Rice game, I was disappointed we lost the Tech game.

"We have to pay attention to see what went wrong. It's not my job to get in there. I'm not a micromanager. We'll ask people at that level to put together the best analysis," he said.

Berdahl didn't unequivocally say that Mackovic would return to coach the Longhorns in 1995. "He has a five-year contract. He's in the third year of those five years. I think that tells you your answer," he said.

Owls, Bears feel Cotton fever

■ Baylor and Rice play today to decide who stays in the race for the Cotton Bowl.

By Michael A. Lutz
AP Sports Writer

Baylor and Rice are trying to deal with Cotton Bowl fever, something they haven't had to worry about in recent decades.

Rice hasn't represented the Southwest Conference in the Cotton Bowl since 1957 and Baylor hasn't been there since 1981. They'll battle today to see who stays in the race to reach the Dallas classic on Jan. 2.

Baylor coach Chuck Reedy expected both teams to be playing for some kind of post-season recognition.

"I have a lot of respect for Rice, and I felt they'd be right in the hunt for this all along," Reedy said. "We certainly hoped at this stage of the season we'd be playing for something.

"Obviously, the winner will still be in the hunt and the loser probably no longer will be in the hunt for the Cotton Bowl."

Baylor (6-3, 3-2) is a one-point favorite over the Owls (4-4, 3-2).

Texas (5-4, 2-3) is a 26-point favorite to beat Houston (1-7, 1-3) in Austin s Memorial Stadium; Texas Tech (4-4, 3-2) is a 21-point favorite at home against Southwestern Louisiana (5-4); No. 9 Texas A&M (8-0-1, 5-0-1) is a 12-point favorite at Louisville (5-3); and Texas Christian (5-3, 2-2) is a 2½-point favorite at Southern Methodist (1-8-1, 0-5-1).

Rice coach Ken Hatfield doesn't expect a miracle from the Owls.

"Our players have to learn how to handle it," Hatfield said. "You try to get across that they don't have to go out and play over their heads. It's not going to take a miracle to win. We just need to do the things you did to get here."

Still in the Cotton Bowl race, all with two losses in league play, are Rice, Baylor, Texas Tech and Texas Christian.

Baylor needs to win out against Rice and Texas to keep its Cotton Bowl hopes alive, but Texas Tech would be the immediate beneficiary of a Baylor win. If Rice loses again, the Red Raiders could go to the Cotton Bowl by winning their last two SWC games, against Houston and Texas Christian.

It's possible even for five SWC teams to end up with three losses, which would put Texas back in the Cotton Bowl picture. That could happen if Baylor were to beat Rice, then lose to Texas, and if TCU were to beat Texas Tech, then lose to Texas A&M.

On multi-team finishes, Texas Tech has the nod, since the Red Raiders have never represented the SWC in the Cotton Bowl.

A&M has dominated the league again this year, but is ineligible for the championship or post-season play because it is on NCAA probation.

Rice wide receiver Ed Howard expects his holidays to be interrupted.

"If we don't go out and play our best game, we'll be home for Christmas," Howard said. "I've seen my family for three years at Christmas. This year, I hope they see me on TV."

TCU also has a chance to play in the Cotton Bowl for the first time since 1959. But the Horned Frogs have Texas A&M still to play, which makes it more difficult for them to win out.

Coach Pat Sullivan is worried about SMU on Saturday, despite the Mustangs' record.

"They're going to be very loose," Sullivan said. "Anytime you've got nothing to lose, you tend to relax and not make as many mistakes."

The Cougars averaged 5.4 points over their first five games this season but they've averaged 20.6 points in their last three.

Texas A&M coach R.C. Slocum is reminding the Aggies the season isn't over.

The Aggies beat Texas 34-10 last week. The Longhorns are usually the last game on the schedule.

"Normally, we pull out all the stops for the Texas game," Slocum said. "We play the game and that's it. Then, maybe, you are getting ready for bowl preparations in a few weeks."

Texas coach John Mackovic doesn't appreciate the Longhorns being written off after losses to Rice, Texas Tech and Texas A&M over the past four weeks.

"I just happen to believe that we'll go through the tough times and get through to the better times," Mackovic said. "With that in mind, I can look forward to the next day knowing that. I feel sorry for those of you who cannot."

Baylor president tells boosters he believes NCAA will punish school

HOUSTON (AP) — Baylor president Herbert Reynolds has told a fund-raising group he believes the NCAA will impose sanctions on the basketball program on top of those already levied by the school.

"Will the NCAA do anything in addition to what we have done? Probably," Reynolds told members of the Baylor/Waco Foundation.

"They can take another scholarship or two away from us, but I feel like they will do something to say, 'We are still in the driver's seat in collegiate athletics,'" said Reynolds, who rarely has commented publicly on the controversy.

Reynolds made the remarks Nov. 3 during a speech to members of the foundation, a group of Waco business leaders who raise money for the university. A transcript of the speech was obtained by the Houston Chronicle and reported Friday.

Reynolds used the speech to discuss several aspects of the controversy. He also acknowledged the basketball problems, which include allegations of academic cheating orchestrated by coach Darrel Johnson's assistants, are a threat to the university's reputation.

Happy Valley not full of roses yet

Associated Press

■ College Roundup

They're not selling rose-colored glasses in Happy Valley yet, and mothers have refrained from naming infant daughers Rose.

The Penn State band hasn't played "Everything's Coming Up Roses," although it probably has practiced that song from the Broadway hit "Gypsy."

All that could change today. Should the No. 2-ranked Nittany Lions win their Big Ten game at Illinois, they would clinch a berth in the Rose Bowl.

"On any given day, they can be beat, and Saturday (today) we'll prove that," Dana Howard, Illinois linebacker, said.

The Nittany Lions (8-0) were made aware of that possibility last Saturday when they were unimpressive in a 35-29 win over Indiana, and they are speaking softly.

"Their defense is supposed to be really good," Brandle Noble, a Penn State defensive lineman, said. "Our offense will have its hands full. Illinois (6-3) has a really balanced offense."

Should the Illinois defense stop Penn State's high-powered offense, or even signficantly slow it down, the Lions could be whistling "Second-Hand Rose."

While Penn State is trying to get to the Rose Bowl for the first time since a 14-3 loss to Southern California in 1923, top-ranked Nebraska (10-0) should be running over Iowa State at Ames, Iowa. The Cornhuskers lead the nation in rushing, while Iowa State (0-8-1) is 105th among 107 teams against the run.

A Top 10 team that could have it tough is No. 6 Alabama (9-0), which plays at No. 20 Mississippi State (7-2).

Although unbeaten, the Crimson Tide has not dominated opponents — only two wins have been by more than 10 points — and in Mississippi State it will be facing a team that has won four straight games.

"I think our talent is just as good as theirs," State receiver Eric Moulds said. "They've just gotten a few more breaks. That's why they're 9-0 and we're 7-2."

Auburn (9-0), the only other unbeaten, untied team in the Top 25, will try to stretch its winning streak to 21 games when it entertains Georgia and pass-master Eric Zeier.

"Eric's had a great year," Georgia coach Ray Goff said. Zeier, who has slumped recently, will have to have a great game if the Bulldogs (5-4) are to score an upset.

In other games involving Top Ten teams, No. 4 Florida (7-1) is home against South Carolina, loser of three of its last four games; No. 5 Miami (7-1) entertains hapless Pittsburgh; No. 7 Colorado (8-1) is at Kansas, which still has a shot at a bowl; No. 8 Florida State (8-1) plays struggling Notre Dame at Orlando, Fla.; No. 9 Texas A&M (8-0-1) plays at up-and-down Louisville, and No. 10 Colorado State (8-1) is home against Arkansas State.

The game in which No. 2 Notre Dame upset No. 1 Florida State was the Big Game of 1993, but today's matchup is just the biggest game in the state of Florida.

Lou Holtz, coach of (5-3) Notre Dame, however, sees similarities to last year's game.

"I don't see any difference in one Florida State team than the others," he said. "They have as much speed and talent this year as they had last year."

Other games involving ranked teams will be No. 11 Kansas State at Missouri, No. 12 Utah at Air Force, No. 13 Arizona at No. 17 Southern California, No. 14 Syracuse at No. 25 Boston College, No. 15 Oregon at Stanford, Rutgers at No. 16 Virginia Tech, No. 18 Duke at North Carolina State.

STEERS: Town hosts first playoff game since 1940

(From 1C)

playoffs for the first time since 1972. Parkland played a non-honors Class 5A schedule last year. James said his and his staff's recruiting efforts almost doubled the number coming out for football to 48 players. That and two speedy running backs capable of breaking big plays has helped lift Parkland.

"Out of 18 El Paso High Schools in town we were picked No. 18," said James, who also ended a playoff drought in '85 when he took El Paso Riverside to the playoffs for the first time ever. "We were all upset about being picked last place in the city. So that was a little bit of a motivator there."

Matador running back Charles Johnson is Parkland's top offensive threat. He has 4.4-second 40-yard speed and has rushed for 1,471 yards this year. But fullback Tony Decquir can also run (4.5 speed) and has helped the offense with 760 yards. Sophomore Darrack Davis replaced injured returning starter Ty Pacheco at quarterback and is second in 3-4A with 780 passing yards.

"They have some skill people who can break big plays," Butler said. "Defensively we'll have to contend with people who are about the same size as we are."

But the Steers have depended more on quickness than size on defense this year anyway, leading District 4-4A in yards allowed per game with 214.6.

On offense Big Spring begins with tailback Quinton Dickson (919 yards rushing, 5.8 average). Junior signal caller Bucky Crenshaw started the season as a backup and finished second in 4-4A passing yardage (854 yards, six touchdowns). Steer tight end Daniel Franks has caught 20 passes.

Big Spring's reliance on the run — it has 1,771 yards rushing and 975 passing — and its rare use of the big play could result in a contrast in offensive styles.

"You're going to see a big-play team against a boring team," Butler said. "Boring may be a bad word, (but) we don't have anybody that's going to bust it for 80 yards."

No current Steers have played in the postseason. But playing at home could offset that inexperience.

"If you're going to have to be in the playoffs with a bunch of young men that have never done it before, it's nice to have it at home," Butler said. "The bad thing is you don't want them to get caught up in the hype."

REBELS: Lee faces Amarillo

(From 1C)

opposite this time around.

"Every coach I know, including Coach (Larry) Dippel, have long memories when it comes down to getting drilled. You can bet that last year's game will be on their minds and they will really come after us."

Dippel swears that last year's outcome has little to do with this season but added, "I hope last year has a bearing for us because we're just hoping that we can prevent that from happening again. That 63 points last year made for one long afternoon."

And the new No. 10 ranking is just another obstacle to fight through as far as Dippel is concerned.

"The ranking is nice, but we haven't had to deal with something like that very often around here," Dippel said. "I really don't know how our kids are going to react to that. I hope it's a good thing for us and I hope we're close to that ranking when the playoffs are over."

Miller feels his team can play with Amarillo High, "but we are going to have to establish our offense and score when we get the opportunity. We've only scored seven points in our last two games, and I don't care if you're playing good teams or not, that won't get the job done.

"And it's not like we haven't had our chances. We're just not getting the ball in the end zone. It's not like we are three plays and out, but we break down on fourth and short or third and short in key situations."

If the Lee offense can't put some major numbers on the board, the Rebel defense will again have to come up with a big game.

"Our defense has done a good job overall, but we have been letting our opponents have big plays on third downs and that's been a killer for us," Miller said. "We've got to make some things happen on defense.

"Amarillo has a good offensive team and T.J. Jones is an excellent running back. They have a small, quick defense that is adequate, but they have more experience on the offensive side of the ball."

Jones led District 3-5A in rushing with 1,075 yards and led the league in scoring with 14 touchdowns.

Dipple isn't buying the fact that Lee is on a slide after losing three of its last four games.

"People don't seem to understand that Lee lost three games to three very good teams. Odessa High is as good as any of them," Dippel said. "We know we have a game on our hands because we understand what kind of program they have and what kind of district they come out of. We have a lot of respect for Lee."

All five previous playoff meetings between the two squads have been played at Lubbock's Jones Stadium. This is the first time these two teams have ever met at Dick Bivens Stadium in Amarillo.

"Dick Bivens has a grass field, but they play a lot of games during the season up there and it's usually chewed up pretty good by this time of the season," Miller said. "We had a playoff game once with (Amarillo) Palo Duro there and it was real muddy. And the other thing is that you never know what to expect from the weather at this time of year. It can be brutal on occassion in Amarillo. I know. I've coached at Tulia before."

Dippel said, "The field isn't in great shape this year. There's not much grass left on it, but it's pretty good for a dirt field."

The winner of this outing will meet 9-1-1 El Paso Riverside in the area round. Riverside tied El Paso Irvin 32-32 Thursday night and advanced on penetrations. If Lee beats Amarillo High, the Rebels will have to travel to Riverside for a 1 p.m. MST meeting next Saturday.

Tickets for that game will be $6 for adults and $4 for students and can be purchased at the Memorial Stadium ticket office Tuesday through Thursday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Friday.

But Lee has to win and a state power must fall for that to happen.

CHAPS: Midland turns up defensive pressure

utes.

The Roadrunners held as much as a five-point lead, 33-28 with 6:06 to play in the first half, before Midland carved out a 48-45 halftime lead. MC never trailed in the second half although Angelina cut the Chap lead to four points, 69-65 with 10:14 to play on a Tysmon Jolivette basket.

"Midland kicked our butts on the boards (in the second half)," said Angelina coach Guy Davis. "They did a great job on the defensive end in the second half. It was probably the first game this season that we didn't put up 100 shots in a game. Turnovers were also a big difference. It gave them a lot of feed offs in the lane."

One person doing most of the feeding was sophomore Kevin Rice. Rice took control of the perimeter with pressure defense before leg cramps sidelined him off-and-on in the second half. He scored 21 points while going to the free throw line 14 times.

Forward Shedrich Franklin scored 15 points, including two breakaway dunks late in the game. Freshman swingman D'Juan Baker added 11 points.

The Chaps went to the charity stripe 51 times thanks to 31 Angelina fouls. Midland was in the bonus 9:12 into the first half and 4:42 into the second half.

Midland will face Lee College today at 6 p.m. Lee (1-1) played Howard College late Friday.

RANGERS: Greenwood overcomes deficit

(From 1C)

round game. Greenwood (9-1) has won nine games in a row since falling to Ballinger in the season opener, 29-7.

Friday the Rangers, who led 57-7 in the second half, got off to a shaky start when they gave up a 90-yard touchdown run on the second play of the game and lost a fumble on their first run.

"I don't know what we were thinking, but they made a play and we came back and fumbled," Greenwood coach Bob Purser said. "It was scary. And not having No. 23 (injured halfback Indavong Phonasa) out there was scary, too."

Clint's Ruben Trujillo broke free on the left side of the Ranger line for 90 yards and a score to put the Lions up 7-0 less than a minute into the game.

"We missed the call on defense," Smith said. "It was a strong left but we lined up in a strong right."

Then Clint recovered the Greenwood fumble to set up at the Rangers 39 on their next possession.

But the Rangers held and Smith started his scoring spree. His 6-yard run tied the score with 4:40 left in the first quarter. On their next, play the Lions fumbled, leading to a Smith TD run of 20 yards less than a minute after his first score.

Clint committed a safety when Dennis Taylor downed the ball in the end zone on the ensuing kickoff. Smith then took the free kick 68 yards to make the score 23-7 with 3:22 left in the first quarter.

"(Bucky) made some great moves and some good catches, punt and kickoff returns," Purser said. "He did everything in that span."

Smith ended the first half with four touchdowns, 79 of his 110 yards rushing and two catches for 17 yards.

The Rangers didn't appear to miss Phonasa with 357 yards rushing and 23 first downs. But the Lions were obviously not a worthy opponent, falling to the Rangers in Greenwood's most lopsided win of the year.

"We've had several (wins) like that," Purser said. "It's hard to even know how much you've improved from the first of the year, but you know you have. We made some mistakes. We weren't prepared for some of the things they did."

Ranger quarterback Josh Jones threw a touchdwons pass and rushed for 54 yards. And Greenwood played several reserves in the second half. In all, eleven players carried the ball for Greenwood. Backup quarterback Casey Otho scored a touchdwon and rushed for 54 yards.

Clint rushed for 247 yards, but much of that came with the game already decided. The Lions had nine of their 12 first downs on their last two drives.

The Rangers were hurt by turnovers the last time they played Ballinger.

"We moved the ball running the option but now they (Ballinger) have time to work on it," Purser said. "I'm not sure if we can consistently run the ball on them. But we'll find out."

They'll find out if they can follow up their first playoff win with a first area championship.

Baseball owners issue collective bargaining ultimatum

RYE BROOK, N.Y. (AP) — Baseball owners told players Friday they need to work out a collective bargaining agreement by next month or they'll feel pressure to impose an economic system for the 1995 season.

On the second day of meetings under the supervision of mediator W.J. Usery, the sides once again discussed industry economics rather than specific proposals. Boston Red Sox chief executive office John Harrington, the new head of the owners' bargaining team, said luxury taxes will be discussed Saturday when the talks reconvene.

"We've had a lot of constructive dialogue in keeping with what we started yesterday," said Usery, appointed by the Clinton administration on Oct. 14. "A lot of issues have been discussed, continue to be discussed."

Owners feel pressure from two dates: Dec. 7, the last day for teams to offer salary arbitration to their players who became free agents, and Dec. 20, the last day to tender 1995 contracts to unsigned players on their rosters.

If there's no deal by next month, Harrington said owners probably would meet to discuss imposing a system — presumably with a salary cap — their right under federal labor law.

"Nobody wants to get to that meeting to vote on implementation," Harrington said. "Whether its December 6th or 7th or 20th, they don't want to see it happen."

In addition, Harrington said teams felt pressure because of the need to sell season tickets and advertising for 1995.

"The real calendar that's driving everybody is the business calendar," he said. "We have advertisers and sponsors we have to talk with."

Harrington was appointed as chairman of the owners' negotiating committee Thursday by acting commissioner Bud Selig. Richard Ravitch, who had been the owners' chief spokesman until this week, remained silent for a second straight bargaining session.

Participants in the joint sessions, which totaled about four hours, said Usery tried to focus the talks on industry economics rather than management's salary cap plan, which hasn't been altered since it was proposed June 14.

"There was a fair amount of conversation about why people feel strongly about either the positions they've taken or what led them to take those positions," union head Donald Fehr said. "There was an attempt to analyze them."

Both sides said it was too early to determine where these discussions will lead. The strike, which began Aug. 12, starts its fourth month Saturday.

falls from the playoffs with a 5-6 season record.

Permian now faces another Coronado in the area round next week. El Paso Coronado, a team that Permian has already beaten this season, defeated El Paso Hanks 48-35 to advance. That means Permian will meet a Coronado three times this season.

L.C. Ward led Mojo with 80 yards rushing on 26 carries for one touchdown. Quarterback Jeff Dinger passed for only 18 yards, but one of his two completions was a 12-yard scoring strike to Ja'Quay Wilburn. Wilburn also scored on a three-yard run while Jeremy White kicked a 34-yard field goal.

Permian led only 10-0 until the fourth period when the Panthers put 14 points on the boards. Coronado's statistics weren't far behind that of Permian, but the Mustangs suffered two interceptions and three lost fumbles. Permian had no turnovers.

Lady Chaps return to winning ways

Staff Report

ALTUS, Okla. — Midland College's Lady Chaparrals absorbed their first lost in the team's brief history on Thursday night here at the Western Oklahoma Classic, but got the ship sailing again Friday with a sound 81-69 win over Eastern Oklahoma State.

Pam Hicks led the way with 15 points as the Lady Chaps climbed to 4-1 for the year while Joanna Kailahi had 14 points, Shannon Jordan 11 and Stacie Johnson 11.

"We had our best first half of the year," said MC women's coach Ron Jones. "We led 45-27 at the half and it was because we did a good job defensively. That lead dwindled some at the end, but we were never in danger of losing the lead.

"We still aren't consistent yet because we are so young as a team, and we need to keep working on being more consistent."

The Lady Chaps handed Eastern (4-1) its first loss of the year. MC will play Temple Junior College at 5:30 p.m. today in the next Classic outing.

"We beat Temple early in the Super Scrimmage in Dallas," Jones noted. "We watched them play (Friday) and they lost to Western Oklahoma by about 10 points."

Cher thinks politicians are one step below used-car salesmen, so Sonny should be right at home.

Cher thinks Sonny is where he belongs — in Congress

WASHINGTON — Cher to Congress: You've got him now, Babe.

Sonny Bono's ex-wife and singing partner said he should be right at home in the House since "politicians are one step below used-car salesmen."

"Politicians don't work for the people; the system works for the politicians," she said in Friday's Washington Post. "It's a huge crime to be so greedy and to let the people down and the country fall apart. Politicians are one step below used-car salesmen."

Bono is a former mayor of Palm Springs, Calif.

OSLO, Norway — Liv Ullmann received one of Norway's highest honors Friday.

The Norwegian-born actress was named a commander in the Order of St. Olav. She accepted a royal medal at a ceremony in Oslo.

Members of the order are named by King Harald V "as a reward for outstanding contributions to the fatherland and humanity."

Ullmann was named to a lesser rank, a knight, in the order in 1977.

NEW YORK — The Duchess of York was a hit at a Harlem youth center.

"When you see her on the news, she sounds really stuck up. But she's not like that," Tahirah Wilson, 15, said after meeting the former Sarah Ferguson.

Duchess of York tours Harlem youth center.

The duchess toured a center run by the New York City Mission Society. She was accompanied by actress Dina Merrill, a member of the society's board.

They visited computer, dance and handiwork classes Thursday. The duchess read her children's book, "Budgie," to a Head Start class.

"I'm going to tell my mommy that I met a girl who's a princess," said 4-year-old Erica Jessica Hawkins.

The duchess is the founder of Children in Crisis, which helps youngsters in war-torn countries.

HIGH SKY AREA
LOOKING FOR EXTRA INCOME
OR A STEADY PART TIME JOB.....
Does a Weekly and Monthly Income
Sound Appealing????

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has an opening on one of its "Special Allowance" routes. This route receives a regular income from rack sales, $250 per month gas allowance in addition to the regular monthly route profits.

As with all newspaper distributorships, this opportunity requires a P/T, a 7 day a week commitment (when you go out of town, you must arrange a substitute for yourself) and it is early morning work which allows for time to go to your "regular job".

Newspaper distributorships can provide great supplemental income for housewives and/or mothers, senior citizens, college students or any other adult wanting to "moonlight".
