PUC oks direct-dial calling plan

Pampa-to-Amarillo fee cheaper for some users

By JEFF WEST
Staff Writer

Pampa is one step closer to being able to make direct dial calls to Amarillo without the long distance charges.

The Texas Public Utilities Commission approved a SW Bell plan late last week that will allow residents with Pampa exchanges to dial Amarillo without incurring long distance charges. The optional plan will cost $15 a month for residential lines and $30 a month for businesses, according to SWB spokesman Kelly Curbow.

The plan, which will be implemented within six months, does not allow the same option going from Amarillo to Pampa. Curbow said SWB hadn't received the actual order as of Friday morning but once it does a company committee will meet within three weeks to pick a date the optional service will begin. They will also decide whether to notify customers they can sign up by using an insert or by advertising.

The PUC delayed making a decision for a short time to make sure that competition could also have access to the service, Curbow said. SWB has agreements with 226 companies that allow them to offer a similar service by leasing phone lines at a discount.

One Pampa company already is offering a similar service although not with a direct dial. City Link located in Pampa and other area cities offers one-rate calling not only to Amarillo but to much of the western panhandle including Canyon, Borger, Dumas, Happy and Tulia among others, according to Kevin Moon co-owner. To access their system requires calling a local number and entering a personal pin number. He said people in the towns served can also sign up and call Pampa in the same way. City Link charges $15 a month for residential lines and $20 a month for businesses.

Judge: Evidence stays in burning bed criminal case

One Pampa woman's legal troubles will continue after she failed to get evidence suppressed.

Joy Bybee Brown, 36, is charged with arson in connection with incident in March of this year when she is alleged to have set fire to a bed at her residence at 617 N. Christy, while her husband Darrell Brown was in the bed.

When firefighters responded to a 911 call they found the fire had been put out and Darrell Brown answered the door. Court records claim that Joy Bybee Brown told firefighters and the Fire Marshal that she had set the fire. She then ordered them out of her house. Police officers were also called to the scene.

Defense attorney Gene Thompson tried to suppress evidence collected at the house on the grounds that since there was no fire when officials arrived they needed consent to search or a search warrant, either criminal or administrative.

Assistant District Attorney Matt Martindale contended the fire department was responding to an emergency 911 fire call and didn't need a warrant to investigate why a fire had started.

"They were acting to ensure public safety," Martindale said.

Judge Steven Emmert of the 31st District Court ruled against the defense motion without comment. No date for a trial has been set.

Chisum on Sunset Commission

State Rep. Warren Chisum has been appointed to the Texas Sunset Advisory Commission which works to make state government more efficient and accountable by requiring state agencies to prove their worth. Twenty-five agencies are slated for review before the 2001 Legislature convenes.

Speaker Pete Lancy made the appointment.

Pampa well-represented today in Cowboy Hall of Fame event

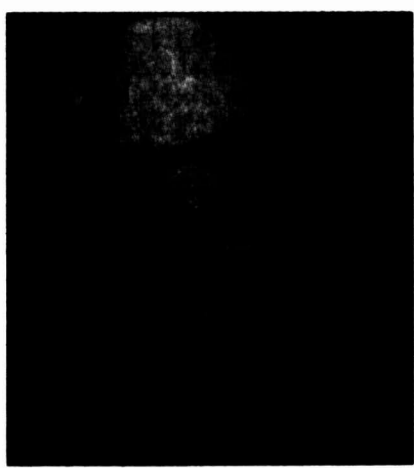

Buster Ivory, Eddy Akridge receiving honors

By NANCY YOUNG
Managing Editor

A well-known Pampa cowboy, Buster Ivory, will be inducted into the National Cowboy Hall of Fame and Western Heritage Center in Oklahoma City today. A former resident, Eddy Akridge, will also be inducted. Ivory will be the recipient of the Ben Johnson Memorial Award. The award is very special to the local cowboy because he was friends with Johnson and his father, Ben Johnson, Sr. Ivory knew Johnson from the 1940s until Johnson's death in 1996.

The award is presented to an individual who best exemplifies the lifestyle of Johnson.

Ivory, a member of a third-generation Irish ranch/rodeo family from Modoc County,

Buster Ivory

Calif., entered his first rodeo at MacArthur, Calif., in 1938 when he was 15 years old. He was declared the All Around Cowboy by winning $58 for first place in the bullriding competition, and splitting first/second in the steer stopping.

The competition was the beginning of Buster's rodeo career which was to span several decades. The young man moved to Dublin, Calif., to live with his cousin, Perry Ivory, who was to teach him all about rodeoing.

Perry was a top rodeo cowboy who is a National Cowboy Hall of Fame inductee. He gave Buster considerable advice on rodeoing. The one thing Buster will always remember that Perry told him is "rodeo is full of lots of aches and pains and sleepless nights."

Buster joined the first professional rodeo association in 1940. Cowboy's Turtle Association, and has remained a member of the associations of professional rodeo for 59 years.

Jaime Loya puts the finishing touches on an aircraft parking apron at Pampa's Perry Lefors Air Field after Raul Banda lays down the hot asphalt surface. Both men work for Alpha Pavement Technology, an Amarillo company that got the contract to resurface the runways, taxiways and parking areas at the airport.

Saddle Up! Trail ride Saturday

FRITCH — Lake Meredith National Recreation Area will host a fall trail ride beginning at 10 a.m. Saturday, Oct. 23.

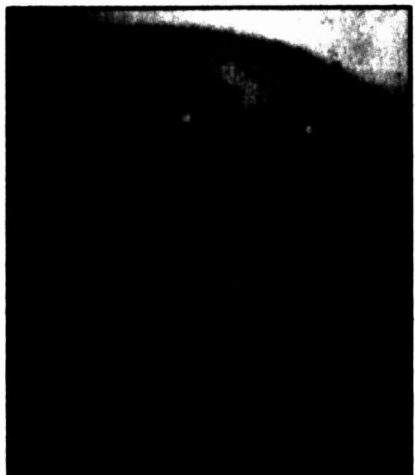

The route will be on the Plum Creek riding trail. The ride will last approximately three hours and is offered free of charge. Riders must bring a current Coggins test certificate in order to participate. Be ready to begin riding promptly at 10 a.m. Plan to pack a snack, bring water and a sack lunch. The rain date for the ride will be at 10 a.m. Saturday, Oct. 30.

Superintendent John Benjamin said, "We are pleased to present the fourth trail ride offered to park visitors since March 1998. Many people are aware of what Lake Meredith has to offer for boaters, campers, hunters, fishermen, and picnickers. We would like to encourage visitors to explore the park by horse and on foot. With the help of the Public Land Corps and many volunteers, we have improved trails in several backcountry sections of the park and erected two corrals at convenient horse camp locations.

"We have installed improved restroom facilities at many backcountry locations. In the future, we hope to be able to present other programs that demonstrate the park's varied natural and cultural resources. We hope we can continue to offer new programs that explore the many opportunities for recreation at Lake Meredith."

For information or for directions, contact Diane VanTatenhove at LMNRA, (806) 857-0311. Some trail riding experience is necessary as parts of the trail are steep and not suitable for beginning riders. Children under 16 are welcome to ride with the group, but only in the company of a parent or other responsible adult.

Their destination today.

An LC-130 plane — equipped with skis to allow it to land on a runway carved out of polar ice — touched down for just 22 minutes at the pole. It kept its engines running in case temperatures of minus 58 degrees prevented them starting again.

The air was barely warm enough for rescuers to attempt their mission: If temperatures drop below minus 58, the plane's hydraulic systems, critical to its ability to land and take off, become hard to handle and make flying risky. But as a "weather window" opened, the plane, its crew of nine and a two-member medevac team picked up Nielsen and dropped off a replacement doctor.

Six hours later, Another Air National Guard plane, a C-141 Starlifter, arrived in Christchurch, New Zealand, and was believed to be carrying Nielsen. Officials refused to confirm whether Nielsen was on board, but one military source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the C-141 had left McMurdo base on the Antarctic coast one hour after Nielsen arrived there from the pole.

COWBOY

He has competed in saddle bronc riding, bareback riding, bull riding and team roping at major rodeos for several years finishing among the top six cowboys for World championship honors in saddle bronc riding. He judged the first National Intercollegiate Rodeo Association National Finals in 1949 in San Francisco. He has been selected as a judge and served as arena director for most major rodeos.

He was involved as a producer, manager, livestock supervisor and/or arena director for many International Rodeos, including the "World's Fair" in Brussels, Belgium in 1958; 1968 World's Fair Rodeo in Montreal, Canada; "Rodeo Far West" (in three European countries); Marlboro Western Promotions in four countries; and a special western horse attraction for the Queen of England.

He managed the San Francisco California Cow Palace Rodeo for three years, secretary/treasurer for the Rodeo Cowboys Association for four years, and Indian National Finals Rodeo Technical Advisor for eight years.

In 1990 he was inducted into the Rodeo Hall of Fame, Rodeo Historical Society, Oklahoma City and in 1991 he was inducted into the ProRodeo Hall of Fame as a Notable. He is a Gold Card member of Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association.

A bronze replica of Ben Johnson is in the museum's new American Rodeo Gallery.

Eddy Akridge is one of the four living 1999 Rodeo Hall of Fame inductees. He began rodeoing in 1945 and joined the RCA, now the PRCA, in 1948. Some of his accomplishments include All-Around Champion Cowboy in 1949 at both the Pendleton Roundup and the Calgary Stampede, World Champion Bareback Rider of the International Rodeo Association in 1953, and PRCA World Champion Bareback Rider in 1953, 1954, 1955, and 1961.

Akridge was born in Pampa on Jan. 8, 1929. His father worked on ranches as a foreman in Mead, Kansas and Beaver, Okla., when he was a child.

He learned his rodeoing skills from the "school of hard knocks". Akridge, who is now an assistant golf professional in Las Vegas, Nev., said it took him three or four years to learn what aspiring rodeo performers learn in special rodeo schools now in 35-40 days.

When he was 16 years old he said he decided he wanted to rodeo and he ran away from his home to pursue his goal. He said he walked to the highway and got a ride into town. The 70-year-old recalled that he had only $6 and needed it for food, so he slept in an office of an ice house. After getting to his destination, he found that the rodeo had moved on and he didn't get to ride. After several days he returned home. He worked for awhile before he competed in a rodeo at Perryton where he won $110 in bareback. He moved to Perryton where he worked in a slaughter house, and rodeoed on his time off.

He went to a rodeo in Dallas where he won four saddles. He said he was pretty pleased to take four saddles home to show his father. He became professional at 19. He went to Tucson, Az. where he won $940. He won at Calgary in 1949 and Pendleton in 1953.

Akridge said he continued to ride barebacks week after week for 25 years. He has competed at all the major rodeos—Houston, Dallas, El Paso and across the nation. He also rode in Madison Square Garden and Boston Garden. He said the only major rodeo he never won was in Denver.

He and his wife, the former Lila Blocker Akridge, who was a cousin to Dan Blocker of Hoss Cartwright fame on "Bonanza", moved to Las Vegas in 1970.

He and some friends formed a band, the Gold Buckle Band, and played for several years in Las Vegas. Naturally, their music was country/western. "We had a lot of fun," he said. The band played for Neiman-Marcus' grand opening in Las Vegas, and the Dallas-based company also flew the band to San Diego and San Francisco to play for the grand openings of those Neiman-Marcus stores.

Akridge was inducted into the Cowboy Hall of Fame in Colorado Springs several years ago. He said he took up golf after his son, Dale, became a golf professional. He still attends a few performances of the National Rodeo Finals each year in Las Vegas.

Ivory and Akridge will be representing Pampa well in Oklahoma City today.

He won first in the National Finals bareback riding in 1959 at Dallas. He said it paid less than $400.

Akridge commented that there used to be six or eight competitors who were good in events, but now there are 35 good in each event. He also said he felt the stock is bred better today than in the past.

Senator wants 5¢-a-gallon gas tax hike

DALLAS (AP) — The chairman of the Senate Finance Committee says Texas lawmakers will soon need to consider raising the state gasoline tax.

Sen. Bill Ratliff, R-Mount Pleasant, told a Dallas business group on Thursday that the need for increased highway spending will require adding a nickel per gallon to the current gasoline tax of 20 cents per gallon.

David Laney, chairman of the Texas Transportation Commission, said Ratliff was right. "He's raised an issue that's coming at us like a freight train," Laney said.

Unless Gov. George W. Bush calls lawmakers into special session, the earliest Legislature could consider the tax increase would be the session starting in January 2001.

Infant OK after put in a bag and discarded

IRVING, Texas (AP) — A newborn baby girl is reported healthy and in good condition after she was found inside a plastic trash bag that had been placed in a dumpster.

Shortly before 4 p.m. Friday, paramedics and police responded to an apartment complex where an 18-year-old woman was found bleeding heavily internally.

The woman was taken to a hospital, and officers left. But an hour later, paramedics returned to the apartment complex after hospital officials discovered the woman had given birth.

The mother's identity hasn't been released. Investigators said they were preparing charges of attempted capital murder against her.

Last victim of church shooting leaves hospital

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The last shooting victim still hospitalized after an attack at Wedgwood Baptist Church was released Friday from John Peter Smith Hospital.

Seminary student Jeff Laster, 36, said he was looking forward to the fresh air and home cooking.

Laster, working as a custodian at the church, was believed to be the first person shot on Sept. 15 after asking gunman Larry Ashbrook to put out a cigarette.

Eight people died including Ashbrook, who shot himself. Seven others were wounded.

DaimlerChrysler announces two recalls

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. (AP) — DaimlerChrysler AG is recalling 417,000 1998 and 1999 Chrysler Cirrus, Dodge Stratus and Plymouth Breeze cars to inspect a brake tube that could be worn by contact with an exhaust clamp.

The automaker said that there have been three reports of the clamp wearing a hole in the right rear brake tube, causing a fluid leak and the loss of some brake capacity.

There have been no injuries as a result,

DaimlerChrysler said Friday.

Separately, the German-American automaker is recalling 3,700 1999 Plymouth Prowlers to repair a dashboard warning light.

The recall is intended to assure the proper function of the brake warning light if a hydraulic pressure differential is detected.

DaimlerChrysler said car owners will be notified by mail and repairs will be made at no cost to the owners.

Daring operation rescues woman

CHRISTCHURCH, New Zealand (AP) — After five months isolated by the Antarctic winter and forced to treat herself for a breast lump, Dr. Jerri Nielsen finally put her care in somebody else's hands.

In a daring operation, a crew from the New York Air National Guard's 109th Airlift Wing rescued Nielsen today from the U.S. National Science Foundation's South Pole research station, where she was the only doctor.

Nielsen, 47, discovered a lump in her breast in June after the darkness, swirling snow and ultra-cold temperatures of the Antarctic winter had closed in, sealing off the Amundsen-Scott research station and its 41 inhabitants to the outside world.

A risky air drop of medical supplies in July allowed Nielsen to begin treating herself with chemotherapy. But rescue efforts had to wait for summer to set in and temperatures high enough to allow airplanes to fly safely.

After days of waiting on the Antarctic coast for temperatures to thaw, the rescuers finally reached their destination today.

An LC-130 plane — equipped with skis to allow it to land on a runway carved out of polar ice — touched down for just 22 minutes at the pole. It kept its engines running in case temperatures of minus 58 degrees prevented them starting again.

The air was barely warm enough for rescuers to attempt their mission: If temperatures drop below minus 58, the plane's hydraulic systems, critical to its ability to land and take off, become hard to handle and make flying risky. Coffee Blood Center participating in ABC campaign

AMARILLO — The "Pints for Half-Pints: Giving Kids Another Chance Campaign" is a national initiative coordinated by America's Blood Centers to bring together blood donors and recipients, highlighting how the generosity of volunteer blood donors helps save the lives of so many children. Coffee Memorial Blood Center in Amarillo is a member of America's Blood Centers, the national network of non-profit, independent community blood centers.

The goal of this campaign is to create an awareness for the need to give blood, especially for children as they cannot donate for themselves. Volunteer blood donors

The goal of this campaign is to create an awareness for the need to give blood, especially for children as they cannot donate for themselves. Volunteer blood donors help save lives, but seldom realize the impact of their donation. Pints for Half-Pints allows donors to see the difference they have made by putting a face on the need for blood.

the difference they have made by putting a face on the need for blood. The campaign will kick-off in this month in Orlando, Fla., with a media event at SeaWorld Adventure Park. Children and their families from all over the country will gather for the formal presentation of the Year 2000 Calendar at a national press conference. The calendar contains life-saving stories of children whose lives have been saved by volunteer blood donations. Kirkland Sperry, son of Craig and Jennifer Sperry of Canyon, is representing the Panhandle for this year-long campaign and Coffee Memorial Blood Center is sending the family to participate in the kick-off event. In addition, Kirkland's story will be featured on the nationally distributed calendar. Kirkland was born with a cardiac condition and a seizure disorder. Both would require lifelong monitoring. To complicate matters, Kirkland developed Respiratory Syncytial Virus when he was only 2-months-old, was hospitalized, coded and then put on a respirator. Kirkland's doctor informed his parents that his condition would only get worse if a blood transfusion was not done within hours. Within a week of receiving blood, Kirkland was disconnected from the respirator and miraculously went home 13 days after bordering on death.

This is what Craig Sperry, Kirkland's father said regarding his son's life-saving transfusion, "...and he is watched regularly by his guardian angel, Dr. Garcia. But his other guardian angel, who he will never know, was the person who gave their precious blood so that one day a life may be saved. In this case, the life saved was our son. Someone had truly given the gift of life, the gift of blood."

WT names Homecoming King, Queen

CANYON — West Texas A&M University's last Homecoming Queen and King of the 1990s are D'Lee Breittling, a junior kinesiology major from Amarillo, and Lee Jarvis, a junior agribusiness major from Spearman.

The royal couple was honored during halftime of the WTAMU Homecoming football game against Tarleton State University at Kimbrough Memorial Stadium.

Breittling was sponsored by Shirley Hall and the Buffalo Marching Band. She is a feature twirler, Zeta Tau Alpha vice president and a member of Student Athlete Advisory Committee, Baptist Student Ministries and Student Athlete Training.

Jarvis was sponsored by the Residence Hall Association. He is a Jarrett Hall residence assistant, member of Steering Committee and Student Organization Round Table and University Sing co-chair. Finalists for Homecoming King were Stefan Bressler, a graduate marketing major from Pampa, and Matt Maples, a senior political science major from Amarillo.

The winners were selected in an election held by the WTAMU student body.

News gets crazier and crazier

Every day when different ones of us go through the Associated Press wire to see what's happening around the state, nation and world, there are those stories that catch our attention and often prompt a bit of newsroom conversation.

It seems more and more the stories we talk about are the ones where something bizarre happened and people are dead. Just when I think nothing crazier than the last horror can happen, something does.

Lately one aspect that has caught my attention, and probably yours, is how so many people are killing others before taking their own life.

I don't understand. If you want to kill yourself, knock yourself out. But don't take others, innocent people, with you.

And, besides, if you blow yourself away just how much satisfaction can you get from your evil deed?

(OK. Before I get calls. Obviously the best approach to depression, anger, violent outbursts or suicidal thoughts it to run, not walk, for professional help).

The latest such tragedy (unless something happens between this penning and Sunday) was in our own state, in Pleasanton, about 30 miles from San Antonio. Seems the 21-year-old man had a history of domestic violence and was known to be a crack shot.

Two deputies and a DPS trooper were picked off with a high powered rifle and two more peace officers were wounded. Thankfully those two are recovering. It was an ambush. A cowardly act. But then guys who verbally or physically abuse women are cowards because they lack the courage to admit they have a problem and get help. How hard is that? Looks to me like the shame would be in not getting help. But those types never think anything is wrong with them.

A DPS spokesman said the trooper never knew what hit him. He was still behind the wheel when the bullet smashed the glass and entered his head. I can't help but think about his little girls — a toddler and a 13 year old ... and all the other family members and friends of the slain peace officers.

The officers were tricked into coming to the residence of a 21-year-old man after he phoned in a bogus 911 call. All this happened only hours after the man had been released from jail on a domestic violence charge. It seems he'd hit his wife in the face with his fist because she couldn't find their missing cow.

Get a grip.

Wonder who is gonna lose it next and who will pay the price?

Unfortunately, we'll find out before very long I fear.

City commissioners are on the right track

While another round of voting is necessary before two new ordinances become law, City Commissioners are on the right track when it comes to instituting some parking and noise restrictions for Pampa.

Some commissioners and citizens might like to see even more stringent restrictions than what is headed for final passage but a compromise is what formed the final proposal.

And, there are those who want to see no restrictions and support being allowed to park 18-wheelers, large recreational vehicles, cattle trailers, boats, utility trailers and what have you along our city streets.

When the first draft was put before commissioners a while back it proposed the banning of all such vehicles and trailers from city streets and from private property.

Seeing a large contingent who did not want the ban to extend to private property, the commission compromised and are placing the restrictions on streets only. State law requires that anything parked on private property not extend onto the sidewalk.

Another compromise agreed upon is to allow truck/tractors to be brought to homes if the vehicles can be parked on private property. The commission realized that many truckers bring the tractors home to work on them and to load and unload personal belongings. The only hitch here is that idling can't run over 15 minutes every four hours.

And most important of all, there is the safety factor. Our streets will be safer for motorists and pedestrians when now-blocked views are cleared.

There are some who are talking about trying to recall commissioners and/or elect a new commission that will repeal the restrictions and allow wholesale parking of anything on our city's residential streets.

While there is a large group who support the trucker's positions, it's entirely possible there is an even larger, but less vocal group, who don't want trailers, boats, RVs, etc., parked along streets causing sight as well as actual congestion.

Unfortunately, there are those in this group who are afraid to make their feelings known. Some have even reported receiving threats from some of the minority of the trucker contingent.

This isn't right. No member of either group should threaten or make the other person fearful.

After all, we should be able to have intelligent debate and be able to make our individual positions known all the while acting with respect for our fellow Pampans.

The virtue of selfishness, greed

You can call it greed, selfishness or enlightened self-interest, but the bottom line is that it's these human motivations that get wonderful things done. Unfortunately, many people are naive enough to believe that it's compassion, concern and "feeling another's pain" that's the superior human motivation. As such, we fall easy prey to charlatans, quacks and hustlers.

Since it's not considered polite to come out and actually say that greed gets wonderful things done, let me go through a few of the millions of examples.

There's probably widespread agreement that it's a wonderful thing that most of us own cars. Is there anyone who believes that the reason we have cars is because Detroit assembly-line workers care about us? It's also wonderful that Texas cattle ranchers make the sacrifices of time and effort caring for steers so that New Yorkers can enjoy a steak now and then. Again, is there anyone who believes that ranchers who make these sacrifices do so out of a concern for and feeling the pain of New Yorkers?

The true reason why we enjoy cars, steaks and millions of other goods and services is because people care mostly about themselves. Now ask yourself: How much steak would New Yorkers have if it all depended on human love, kindness and feeling the pain of others? I'd feel sorry for New Yorkers.

This is what Adam Smith, the father of economics, meant in "The Wealth of Nations," when he said, "It is not from the benevolence of the butcher, the brewer or the baker that we expect our dinner, but from their regard to their own interests." Smith also said, "I have never known much good done by those who affected to trade for the public good." In other words, the public good is promoted best by people pursuing their own private interests. This bothers some people because they're more concerned with motives than with results.

Walter Williams

Syndicated columnist

Tactics broadly condemned as exploitative also serve a valuable social function. Let's look at price-gouging complaints when Hurricane Floyd took aim at the East Coast. After Florida and Georgia governors callously ordered evacuation of millions of citizens, there were complaints of gasoline-station dealers raising the price of gasoline. Though the gasoline dealers were motivated by profits, their actions served the public interest.

"OK, Williams," you say, "explain that one." Say gas prices before the hurricane threat was $1.10 a gallon. You're running low or have a half-tank and just want to fill up. If the price stayed at $1.10, you'd fill up. But what if the price rose to $1.75? A lot of people would probably say, "I'm only going 100 miles inland, so I'll make do with the half tank." Or, if you're riding on empty, at $1.75 a gallon you just might decide to buy just a half tank and fill up when you get to your destination 100 miles inland.

Here's the question: In the wake of a mass evacuation, which is the preferable state of affairs — people's gas tanks filled half full enabling everyone to get away from the hurricane, or many people with full gas tanks, and gasoline stations out of gas, and people stranded with empty fuel tanks?

Another way to put this question is which would you prefer, particularly if you're driving on empty: gasoline being available at $1.75 a gallon or unavailable at the "fair" price of $1.10 a gallon? Again, gasoline dealers didn't intend to promote the public interest but by pursuing their own they did.

Free markets, private property rights, voluntary exchange and greed produce preferable outcomes most times and under most conditions.

Buchanan's time is not now, it seems

Pat Buchanan, if he runs as a third-party candidate, will just help win the White House for Al Gore or Bill Bradley. Therefore, the best thing he can do for his own cause is just drop out of the race.

Now there's no question that the Republican Party plays conservatives for suckers and differs only marginally on the big issues with the Democrats. Buchanan, being a public figure, should not support a party which repudiates his strongly held beliefs. But criticizing the party and running as a third-party candidate are two different animals.

The reason Buchanan can't win is because his views are out of sync with a majority of Americans. My views are the same as his on most points, though I'm even further to the right than Buchanan. The difference is that I know that a majority of Americans don't agree with me, but Buchanan still believes in the myth of a silent-but-conservative majority. It does not exist. The majority of Americans in 1999, silent or vocal, are left of center; they believe in the welfare state and an interventionist foreign policy (as long as there are only a few American casualties).

The reason a third-party Buchanan run would hurt the Republicans and help the Democrats is the Electoral College system of voting. It's a winner-take-all system. Thus, a candidate who draws 49.9 percent of a state's popular vote doesn't get a single electoral vote of that state. All of that state's electoral votes go to the candidate with 50.1 percent.

Charley Reese

So you don't need to be an expert to figure it out. No sane person inclined to vote for Gore or Bradley would switch to Buchanan. But some people inclined to vote for a Republican — say, George W. Bush — would. In key states like California, Illinois, Michigan, Ohio and New York, the race between Bush and Gore might be very close. Hence, subtracting 3 percent to 5 percent of Bush's vote for Buchanan would tip all of those electoral votes to Gore.

I believe in voting one's convictions, but I also believe in being realistic. No third-party candidate for president is going to win. Four more years of the far left that Gore or Bradley would bring to the White House is too high a price to pay for the satisfaction of sending a message to the Republican Party. I made that mistake once. I won't do it again. As the great Louis B. Mayer once said, "If you want to send a message, use Western Union."

The big college football rivalry in Florida is between the Florida Gators and the Florida State Seminoles. You often see bumper stickers that read, "I'm for any team that beats the Gators." Well, I feel the same way about Gore and Bradley. Whoever can beat them will get my vote. Buchanan or Bob Smith (another disgruntled conservative), both of whom would be great presidents, cannot do it.

Conservatives need to understand that they have long years of work ahead of them to re-educate the American people if they ever expect to see the Constitutional Republic restored. Starting with the New Deal of Franklin D. Roosevelt, Americans have been indoctrinated with the notion of a benign government which fixes all their problems, economic and social.

The government created by the Founding Fathers was designed by a moral, self-reliant people for moral, self-reliant people. Trying to change the government before you change the people is like trying to build a skyscraper from the roof down.

In the meantime, choose the lesser of two evils in presidential races. It's not satisfying, but that strategy may keep enough restraint on government to provide the time for a ground-up reform movement to take shape.

Pat Buchanan, bless his fine Irish heart, should retire from presidential politics. He's the right man but at the wrong time.

Lawmaker's Medicare talks focus on nursing home, hospital payment complaints

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lawmakers have narrowed Medicare negotiations to proposals that would give $15 billion to health care providers who have dogged Congress with complaints their fees were squeezed too tight.

Congressional leaders say agreement is out of reach on a major overhaul of the health insurance program for the elderly and disabled, including the addition of new prescription drug benefits.

"I don't think we have enough time to do it this year," Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., said Thursday.

Separate plans offered by House and Senate committee chairmen this week would give nursing homes more money for patients with complex illnesses, loosen payment caps for rehabilitative therapy, and grant hospitals, HMOs and home health care companies a temporary reprieve from scheduled fee cuts. Both plans would dip into budget surpluses expected in coming years.

The House plan would offer relief to caregivers more quickly — $15 billion over five years compared with the Senate's $15.2 billion over a decade — and the two plans would disburse the relief differently.

Reception from health care industry groups has been lukewarm.

"We view this as a down payment," said American Hospital Association spokeswoman Carol Schadelbauer.

The prospects are good for an eventual compromise among lawmakers.

Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan of New York, an influential senior Democrat, has endorsed the Senate plan by Sen. William Roth, R-Del., the Senate Finance Committee chairman.

Clinton administration officials reviewing both GOP proposals were optimistic they could form the basis of some small bipartisan agreement on Medicare this year.

"The president, the vice president and the first lady have stated their strong belief that some of the Medicare provider cuts were flawed and resulted in excessive payment reductions,"

White House domestic policy adviser Chris Jennings said.

President Clinton is seeking to broaden the potential agreement by trying to persuade Republicans to offset the relief payments with some new changes in the way Medicare does business, such as requiring competitive bidding by medical suppliers.

But White House expectations are low that any Medicare deal could go beyond that this year.

In 1997, lawmakers had touted $115 billion in Medicare payment cuts that were part of the balanced budget act as a move toward more accurate reimbursement of health care providers they said had long been overpaid.

Now, as the government is expecting bigger and bigger budget surpluses into the future, many health care companies are struggling.

Financial analysts say a variety of forces in addition to the Medicare cuts are creating turmoil in the medical marketplace, including the shift to managed care and too-rapid expansions by some companies.

Nursing homes have blamed Medicare for recent layoffs, plummeting stock prices and the bankruptcy of one large national chain.

Hospitals reporting financial losses and falling bond ratings are saying in their own $3 million public relations campaign: "Is this what Congress meant to happen when it balanced the nation's budget?"

Administration officials have been among the most skeptical about the industry complaints. Health and Human Services Secretary Donna Shalala has said she believes that most companies are now paid fairly by Medicare and that they got in financial trouble only because they had gotten used to being paid too much.

But earlier this year, Clinton offered to return $7.5 billion to caregivers to prevent any harm to Medicare patients.

Yogurt shop murder suspects to undergo psychological evaluations

By MIKE CRISSEY
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — A psychologist was assigned Friday to the case of two men charged in the 1991 slayings of four teen-age girls at an Austin yogurt shop.

Forrest Wellborn, 23, of Lockhart, and Maurice Pierce, 24, of Lewisville, were arrested last week in the slayings of Eliza Hope Thomas, 17; Amy Ayers, 13; Jennifer Harbison, 17; and Jennifer's sister Sarah Harbison, 15.

Miss Thomas and Jennifer Harbison worked at the I Can't Believe It's Yogurt store, which also was set on fire the night of Dec. 6, 1991.

Wellborn was 15 and Pierce was 16 at the time of the killings, so they have been charged, as juveniles. Two other men also are in jail on capital murder charges.

State District Judge Jeanne Meurer assigned psychologist George Parker to evaluate Wellborn and Pierce. According to state law, Parker will try to determine how mature the suspects were at the time of the killings and their mental state.

"This is going to be an interesting issue," said Robert Icenhauer-Ramirez, Wellborn's attorney. "Determining the maturity level of someone eight years later is unlike any other juvenile psychological evaluation I've heard of."

The judge scheduled a Nov. 29 hearing to determine whether the two should be tried as adults. Wellborn and Pierce are being held in Travis County Jail on $1 million and $1.5 million bonds, respectively.

Prosecutors said if Wellborn and Pierce are not certified as adults they cannot stand trial on capital murder charges.

Because of their ages when the crime occurred, conviction if tried as an adult would carry a maximum sentence of life in prison. State law says the death penalty may not be used when someone was younger than 17 at the time of the crime.

Wellborn and Pierce are being held based on the confessions of Robert Burns Springsteen Jr., 24, and Michael James Scott, 25, of Buda, Icenhauer-Ramirez said.

Springsteen was arrested in Charleston, W.Va., after neighbors told police he had been bragging about the murders. Springsteen is jailed without bond in Charleston, pending an extradition hearing Nov. 4.

Scott is being held in Travis County Jail, also without bond.

Because they were 17 at the time of the murders, they could face a maximum punishment of life in prison or death if convicted.

Man involved in cheerleader murder indicted again on conspiracy charges

MONTAGUE, Texas (AP) — Curtis Gambill, one of the three men already serving prison time for the 1996 slaying of a 16-year-old Oklahoma girl, has been indicted on further charges of conspiracy to commit murder.

Prosecutor Tim Cole said he wants to be certain Gambill, already serving a life prison term for the murder of Heather Rich, is never released from prison.

Cole seeks a consecutive term of five to 99 years that would be added to Gambill's first-degree felony sentence.

Gambill is one of three Oklahoma youths convicted in the slaying of Miss Rich, who was driven across the state line and shot nine times in Texas.

According to his plea agreement, Gambill was supposed to testify against co-defendant Joshua Bagwell. But Cole says Gambill violated the agreement by failing to testify consistently with his previous statements, so he decided to seek the conspiracy charge that previously had been dropped.

The latest indictment of Gambill was returned Monday.

A judge recently upheld Bagwell's conviction, and Cole expects the same action in the appeal of Randy Wood, the third man convicted in the Rich murder.

The Family of Earl Kyle would like to express their thanks to all the family members, friends and neighbors who have helped us and have done so many nice things for us. Our appreciation goes out to Rev. Gene Harris, our brother-in-law Rev. Fines Marchman, to our church Priest Park Church of God, and the First Baptist Church of Skellytown for the fine lunch and the funeral. Earl would have been very pleased.

We, also, wish to say thanks to all of you who came by to visit us at home, in Amarillo while we were in the camper and at the hospital. Those visits meant so much to Earl. Thanks to Leonard Hudson Drilling Co. and employees and our neighbors in Walnut Creek Estates who did so much for us.

We appreciated the Baker Bunch and others that donated to our church bus fund.

Earl loved his church. Thanks, also, to the many employees of the Pampa School system who sent food, cards, flowers and donated to the benevolent fund. To all of you who have said kind words and said prayers for us - Thank You. Prayers and friends have helped us get through this difficult time. I'm sure we have forgotten someone or something, but please know that everything was very much appreciated. God Bless Each of You! Please continue to remember us in your prayers.

And a Special Thanks to the group who plays music at Pampa Nursing Center one night a month and to the Church of God people who sing and play there on Sunday morning.

Routier attorneys argue to use corrected transcript

DALLAS (AP) — A new version of the trial transcript for death-row inmate Darlie Routier was presented Thursday to a judge.

Attorneys for Ms. Routier, who are trying to win a new trial for her, say the original transcript was inaccurate. A new version includes more than 18,000 corrections.

Ms. Routier was condemned for the June 1996 stabbing death of her 5-year-old son, Damon, at the family's Rowlett home. Her 6-year-old son, Devon, also died in the attack, which Ms. Routier blames on an unidentified intruder.

The Market Forecaster

By George Kleinman

Wheat (Bull/Bear)

Outlook: The final stocks report of this millennium was very bearish for wheat because feed usage fell by 100 million bushels, a whopping 30 percent for the June-August quarter. Taking corn and wheat combined, a whopping 200 million bushels of grain was added to supply by the government with a stroke of a pen. Prices will most likely remain on the defensive in the coming weeks, and a test of the contract lows looks to be in the cards. On the other hand, there is talk in the market about a change in the government program, which would make it more advantageous for farmers to store grain. This is bullish; however, it remains in the planning stage only as far as we can see. The spring wheat harvest, which was quite delayed this year, is now close to over. There have been yield problems in Canada and the Dakotas but in a bearish environment this will be put on the back burner for now.

Strategy: Hedgers: Consider selling all cash wheat and simultaneously purchasing call options for March. In this way, you can maintain ownership of cheap wheat, but free up cash to pay bills. Your downside risk is limited (something storage cannot do), yet you maintain full upside potential. Use the current at the money calls to establish positions (there is no hurry; however, wait for the market to come to you.) If you took our previous recommendation, you own the 270 December calls at 12 cents or lower, which is less than the cost of storage and interest.

Traders: Traders who took our previous recommendation are spread with the purchase of December Chicago wheat and the sale of December corn (at under 60 cent premium to the wheat.) Risk to 50 cents difference (on a closing basis) and expect the spread to eventually widen to 85 cents for a profit potential of over $1,000 per spread.

Corn (Bear)
Outlook: The last major stocks report of this millennium was released since our last column and it was very bearish. The USDA reported corn feed usage for June through August fell by over 10 percent, a whopping 100 million bushels. Feed usage for wheat was down dramatically as well, with this one stroke of the pen adding a huge 200 million bushels of "new" feed grains to an already burdensome supply. The market will most likely remain on the defensive as harvest progresses. Some private analysts are looking for an even larger final crop than the September crop report indicated. The report calls for a very large 9.4 billion-bushel crop which would be an average yield of 130 bushels nationally. The corn ending stocks is a large number as well, 1.8 billion bushels and the highest in 12 years. Bottom line, even though corn is cheap it could get cheaper. I am looking for a move below 200 in December corn before harvest is completed.

Strategy: Hedgers: Corn users look to be a buyer on a scale down from current levels looking to finish the program if the market trades as low as 185.

Traders: Traders are spread with the purchase of December Chicago wheat and the sale of December corn at less than a 60 cent premium to the wheat. Risk to 50 cents (on a closing basis) and expect the spread to widen eventually to 85 cents for a profit potential of over $1,000 per spread. Aggressive traders are also short December from above $2.10 looking for less than $2. Lower your stop to $2.21.

Soybeans (Bull/Bear)
Outlook: The September USDA Crop Report and the quarterly stocks report were both termed neutral; however, one could certainly make a case that a crop close to 2.8 billion bushels is a big one and bearish. This number could be revised on the October crop report (which is not yet available at press time.) Meanwhile, this market is fading under harvest pressure now, but really isn't acting all that bad compared to corn and wheat.

was hit already and will most likely be exceeded shortly. Demand remains excellent (although the cash market is still quiet with no panic buying from packers, something which will be seen as we get close to a top.) As I have reiterated all last summer, I think it is very bullish the way the cattle market has acted this past summer. The common wisdom was the cash and futures would plummet during the summer based on large supplies of market-ready cattle and instead they have shown strength. With supplies 3 percent larger than a year ago, it means demand is superb. I contend if this market can continue to hold up this well today, it bodes very well for the coming months. The cattle numbers are still projected to drop sharply into the end of the year.

Strategy: Feeders: No hedge protection is recommended at this time in either futures or options since the trend is your friend.

Cow/calf operators: Cattle feeders remain buy-hedged. If you took our previous recommendations, you are long the January feeder futures at 78 and 79 with effective prices actually $5.50-7.50 lower than this (due to rollovers.) Hold until you buy your replacement feeders.

Traders: Based on a previous recommendation, you are long December futures in the 6450-6500 range. Raise your stop again to 6660 to lock in an additional profit and be prepared to hold for the duration.

Wheat in storage rises

AUSTIN — According to the Texas Agricultural Statistics Service, Texas had 143.3 million bushels of wheat stored in all positions on Sept. 1 compared with 139.5 million bushels a year ago. This inventory is up 3 percent from last year and is the highest inventory since Sept. 1, 1988.

In Texas at the end of the marketing year, there were 15.7 million bushels of corn stored off the farm. This was up 55 percent from the 10.1 million bushels stored a year earlier.

Total old crop sorghum stocks in all positions, at 6.1 million hundredweight, were up considerably from the 2.0 million cwt a year earlier.

Total U.S. old crop corn stocks were estimated at 1.80 billion bushels, up 37 percent from the Sept. 1, 1998, level. The on-farm stocks accounted for nearly 45 percent of the total stocks. Wheat stocks totaled 2.46 billion bushels, up 3 percent from a year ago, and sorghum inventory, at 36.5 million cwt, was up 33 percent from Sept. 1, 1998.

Farmers urged to ponder Y2K plans

MANDAN, N.D. (AP) — Bill Haag is getting a new computer system at his grain elevator, but ask him about Y2K and his answer is short.

A lot of hype, he says. "I think they just blow it out worse than it is," Haag said. He doesn't think any of his equipment will be affected.

Researchers are not as confident. Those who have studied how the millennium bug could affect farm equipment are urging pork, dairy and grain operations to make contingency plans. And last-minute workshops in the Upper Midwest are planned to spread the word about how to prepare for equipment problems in case the bug bites worse than expected.

Charlotte Meier, executive director of the North Dakota Pork Producers, said she has received no calls about Y2K worries from the state's 750 pork operations.

"At this point, I would say there isn't that much concern," she said. "I think if they know the electricity is going to be running that's all they're concerned about."

Mike Adelaine, an extension specialist from South Dakota State University, thinks farmers should be concerned about more than that. He has put together an Internet list of Y2K-compliant software commonly used in farm operations and is planning a workshop in November for those who get a late start on preparations.

"Basically, what we're going to do is say: 'Hey, folks, be aware of this issue, make some contingency plans and let's see if we can get you through this time period,'" Adelaine said.

Y2K problems could arise from malfunctions in computers that read only the last two digits in a year and mistake 2000 as 1900.

In particular, owners of pork, poultry and dairy operations are being urged to make sure their climate-control devices will not collapse suddenly on New Year's Day.

Producers with livestock feeding or milking systems are encouraged to contact manufacturers to find out how they might be affected. The same goes for producers with any kind of environmental control mechanisms in barns or confined feeding operations.

Producers also should prepare to do farm work manually if automated machinery doesn't work, said Wayne Hansen, who has studied the issue for the University of Minnesota Extension Service.

Electronic scales, moisture testers, grain drying equipment and crop storage ventilation systems used in grain elevators could be affected, he said.

The Y2K bug also could hamper farmers and ranchers who use computers to keep their books.

"We are seeing the medium-size smaller operations that do have the older machines that would need to get up to speed," Adelaine said.

Hansen said earlier workshops on Y2K have not drawn many farmers.

"We don't know if it's because they don't think it's a problem or if it's because they feel like they've fixed everything already," he said.

He does not believe Y2K will cause the devastating problems, but said there's reason to prepare.

"There will be some problems," he said. "We know that for a fact. It's just a matter of how severe they are."

The Internet site for making Y2K contingency plans on the farm can be found at www.abs.sdstate.edu/ecs/home/y2k.html.

EPA grants chemical exemption for mite control

AUSTIN — Agricultural Commissioner Susan Combs recently announced the Texas Department of Agriculture has been granted approval by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency to issue a Section 18 specific exemption allowing the use of Capture 2EC (bifenthrin) on sorghum grown for seed to control the Banks grass mite.

The specific exemption expires Aug. 23, 2000. Capture 2EC, manufactured by FMC Corp., may be used following all applicable directions, restrictions and precautions on the label as well as the following restrictions:

- Applications should be made only by certified applicators, licensed applicators or people under the direction supervision of licensed applicators. All applicators must have a copy of the EPA approval notice in their possession prior to any applications.

- Applications may be made by ground or air through chemigation at a rate of 0.06 to 0.1 lb. a.i. (3.84-6.4 fluid oz. product) per acre. Applications must be made in a minimum of 10 gallons of water per acre by ground application, and a minimum of 5 gallons of water per acre by aerial application. A maximum of two applications may be made with a maximum of 0.2 lb. a.i. (12.8 oz. product) applied per acre.

- A preharvest interval of 30 days is required.
- A maximum of 50,000 acres of grain sorghum grown for seed production may be treated under this exemption.

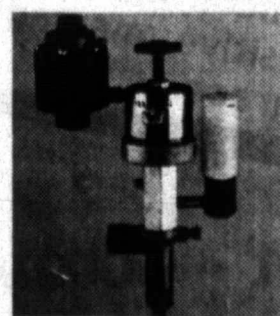

- This pesticide should not be applied directly to water, to areas where surface water is present or to intertidal areas below the mean high water mark. Applications should not be made when weather conditions favor drift from treated areas. A buffer zone of 150-feet must be maintained between treated fields and the edge of streams, ponds, lakes, rivers, springs, swamps, marshes or irrigation canals containing water year around.

- This product is highly toxic to bees exposed to direct treatment.

West Texas A&M to spotlight Judy Kracke during 'An Evening Celebrating the Arts'

CANYON — West Texas A&M University will present "An Evening Celebrating the Arts" on Friday, Oct. 22 in Mary Moody Northern Hall. The evening of arts will include an exhibit of the current works of Judy Sutton Kracke, WTAMU instructor of art, at 6:30 p.m. and a performance by the Harrington String Quartet at 8 p.m. The art reception will feature Kracke's newest series. She will present a gallery talk at 7:15 p.m. in the Mary Moody Northern Hall Formal Art Gallery.

Kracke has gained recognition as the creator of three-dimensional work including designing and directing large-scale, site-specific, interactive, collaborative sculptures as well as installations and gallery works.

"Art is the vehicular voice, the survivor of time and the embodiment of the human experience," Kracke said. "As an artist, I have been inspired by the visual, intellectual and spiritual expressions from cultures around the world."

Kracke is a sculptor exhibiting both nationally and internationally. She has permanent works owned by cities, universities and museums in Argentina, Australia, California, Virginia, Washington and several more.

Antique Schoolhouse Bell Is At Center of Family Discord

DEAR ABBY: Several years ago my husband's sister asked us if we wanted an old schoolhouse bell she had purchased. She was moving and could not take it with her. Because we like antiques, we accepted her offer.

After much effort and paying to rent a moving truck — the bell weighed 1,500 pounds — my husband moved it to our house. It was so heavy he got it no farther than the top of our driveway, and there it sat for more than two years! It became obvious that the bell was just too large and heavy for us to do anything with. It would have cost us a small fortune to have someone build a stand for it, so I asked a local auctioneer if he could sell the bell for us.

When my sister-in-law learned I had sold the bell, she had a fit! She thought I should have asked her permission to sell the bell, as she had considered the bell only on "loan" to us. I never considered a 1,500-pound item that we paid to move, sitting in my driveway for more than two years, a "loan." I'm angry that this has caused such a rift in my husband's family.

I was always taught that when you are given something, it is yours to do with as you please. My husband feels caught in the middle, and we are now having marital problems for the first time in our 14-year marriage. What do you suggest?

MELVA IN PHILLIPSBURG, N.J.

Abigail Van Buren

SYNDICATED COLUMNIST

DEAR MELVA: I, too, have always thought that once a gift is given it belongs to the recipient to keep or dispose of as he or she wishes. However, the bell is gone and there is nothing any of you can do at this point to retrieve it. Perhaps offering to split the money you received for the bell will soothe your sister-in-law's wounded spirit. In any case, you and your husband should not let his sister's attitude sabotage your marriage.

DEAR ABBY: Tomorrow I'll be celebrating my 64th birthday, and even though I have read your column faithfully for many years, I never thought I would be writing you for advice. This is the dilemma:

I am computer literate, while my wife of 45 years has been somewhat apprehensive about attempting to learn computer basics. Our grandson is 14 and would very much like to have a computer. My wife is adamantly opposed to it at this time. She says that when he graduates from high school, she will contemplate getting him one. I say by that time our grandson would have lost valuable time and the opportunities that come from having knowledge of the computer. There are many youngsters who, upon completion of high school, are forced to go to work. Consequently, their formal education is set aside until later, or perhaps never.

My wish would be for our grandson to continue his formal education after graduating from high school. However, in the event that he does not, I think we should get him a computer now, so that he could gain the necessary knowledge to compete in the labor market. As you well know, almost every workplace now requires employees to have at least some knowledge of computers.

Whatever your answer is, I will honor it. If it is contrary to my thinking, I'll never again mention it to my wife. However, if you agree with me, please try to convince my wife that we are doing a disservice to our grandson by not getting him a computer now. Thank you.

MANNY IN LAS VEGAS

DEAR MANNY: I agree with you. Computer proficiency is a skill that students need today. Colleges, as well as employers, expect applicants to be computer literate. If your wife doubts this, she should place a call to some of the local high schools and inquire. Perhaps that will reassure her.

have to enjoy others. Return calls later; place your major focus on resolving a money situation. You gain because of your ability to function with others as a team. Make decisions as a unit. Tonight: Now turn to the more social part of your life.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

Jordan Unit inmates participate in KAIROS 6 Walk, 'Free for Sure'

By RICHARD DOUGLAS
Jordan Unit Reporter

"It's not just the food," says resident Devose, a participant in the recent KAIROS 6 Walk at the Jordan Unit. "Sure, it may have been part of what drew me there, but it's influence quickly lost its hold as the program went on."

For the past three years KAIROS Ministries has been fellowshiping with the residents of the Rufe Jordan Unit. Most of what I'd heard about the group was centered around the great quantities of delicious foods the participants gorge themselves with during the initial three-and-a-half day retreat.

"Man, they feed us cheeseburgers, and Dominoes pizza, and steak, and catfish filets, and fresh fruit, and ice cream. More than we could possibly eat in a week. Do you know how long it's been since I had fried catfish?" said one of the participants of KAIROS 5. KAIROS Walk spans three grueling 12-hour days. "Listen, dude, we're there for twelve hours a day every day, you gotta know there's a lot more going on than just eating," says resident Bustos, also a participant of KAIROS 6.

Resident Devose says he learned a lot. "These are the sweetest people I've ever met in my life. Yes, food is a part of it, but there's also love, and sacrifice, and caring. These people give you their home addresses! Not some P.O. Box, but their homes, where they live. "Write me," they tell us. "Let us know how you are doing."

Devose says that he'd all but given up. "I couldn't find anything to feel good about. I was ready to lay it down and do the rest of my time in lockup. I'm going home in 18 months, but even that didn't excite me. But now I feel good all the time. I'm not talking lightening bolts or hearing unseen voices. I'm talking about the simple happiness that comes from having someone care and not be afraid to show it. (See, KAIROS, Page 26)

Local research consortium receives funding for fiscal year 2000

AMARILLO — When President Clinton signed the Energy and Water Development Appropriations Bill recently, he ensured the ANRC, a university research consortium headquartered in Amarillo, will be funded during FY2000. The ANRC is an independent research consortium of The Texas A&M University System, The Texas Tech University System and The University of Texas System.

ANRC's research focus is on nuclear and environmental issues. The organization grew out of the city's desire to ensure that any new missions sited at Pantex would be safe and environmentally sound. Toward that end, the ANRC was established in late 1994. Its mission is to assist the Texas Panhandle, the State of Texas and DOE by conducting scientific and technical research, advising decision makers, and providing information on nuclear weapons materials and related environment, safety, health and nonproliferation issues while building academic excellence in science and technology.

Since its inception, the ANRC has provided more than $32 million to fund more than 120 research projects and education programs. These research projects and education programs deal with a variety of nuclear and environmental issues that are important and beneficial to the State of Texas and DOE.

Some of the most notable include:

—ANRC researchers have developed a waste treatment process that uses an enzyme to treat radioactive waste. The enzyme is used on contaminated paper and similar cellulose products. The enzyme digests the majority of the paper or cellulose, which means the amount of contaminated material that requires special disposal is greatly reduced. The process may become part of Los Alamos National Laboratory's standard treatment procedure for reducing waste and will provide significant cost savings to LANL and the American taxpayers.

—ANRC researchers devised a method for detecting leaks in plutonium storage containers and an automated system for collecting and analyzing extremely fine airborne particles.

—ANRC researchers have reviewed environmental impact statements and performed a variety of safety analyses for the State of Texas.

—ANRC hosted a NATO Advanced Research Workshop in 1997. The Amarillo workshop was the fourth in a series of meetings between U.S. nuclear scientists and their Russian colleagues.

—ANRC established the Electronic Resource Library, a centralized national library of government documents, scientific journals, scientific and technical reports and articles from popular press that pertain to plutonium. The ERL is maintained at Amarillo College with ANRC funding.

In addition, ANRC has funded, or helped fund, a plethora of education programs in Amarillo and the Texas panhandle. These include the JASON Project, the Traveling Chemistry Show, the West Texas Environmental Project for Interactive Studies in Science and Mathematics, the West Texas A&M University Student Researchers' Conference and Discovery Expo at the Tri-State Fair.

HSQ will present a lecture recital of George Crumb's Black Angels in the Mary Moody Northern Recital Hall.

"This is a really fun piece," Annie Chalex, HSQ member and Harrington lecturer, said. "We will use our bows on wine glasses. You name the percussion, and we will be using it."

The piece was written for an electronic, string quartet. HSQ members will use pick-up mikes to create the desired sound.

"It is extremely contemporary," Chalex said. "George Crumb is known for this kind of piece."

This will be HSQ's first performance of Black Angels. They will present the lecture recital at the Texas Music Educators Association Conference in February.

Members of the quartet are principal chairs in the Amarillo Symphony Orchestra and studio teachers in the university's music department.

Admission to "An Evening Celebrating the Arts" is free and open to the public.

GROOM — Grant Weinheimer threw four touchdown passes and Wade Ritter ran for two to help push Groom to remain unbeaten Friday in District 1 Six-Man action. The final score was 54-12 against Fort Elliott.

The Tigers broke the game open by scoring 24 points in the second quarter, giving them a 30-6 halftime advantage. They pulled away over the final two periods.

Weinheimer threw scoring passes of 32 yards to Garret Britten, 35 yards to Dustin Babcock, 37 yards to Clay Ritter and 24 yards to Russell Conrad. He completed 7-of-12 passes for 182 yards.

Ritter rushed for 144 yards on 13 carries and scored on runs of 8 and 9 yards.

Groom had 453 yards total offense, including 271 on the ground and improved their record to 6-1 overall and 2-0 in district play. Fort Elliott, which fell to 5-3 and 0-2, and was held to minus 28 yards rushing and had 138 overall.

BASEBALL

NEW YORK (AP) — So much for a Subway Series.

While the Yankees are doing their part, the Atlanta Braves have just about snuffed out that New York state of mind in the NL championship series against the Mets. The trains might be rumbling toward Shea Stadium next weekend, but it's unlikely there will be any fans in the stands.

The Braves, upset in the NLCS the past two years, are taking no chances this season, building a virtually insurmountable 3-0 lead over the Mets when Tom Glavine started and John Rocker finished a 1-0 victory Friday night.

"It's a long shot. No doubt about that," New York manager Bobby Valentine conceded. "But we're going to show up."

Atlanta can advance to its fifth World Series of the decade — but first since 1996 — when John Smoltz pitches against New York's Rick Reed tonight.

Glavine pitched seven sterling innings, making an unearned run in the first stand up. After Mike Remlinger pitched the eighth, it was time for Rocker to sprint in from the bullpen, well aware he became Public Enemy No. 1 in New York by saying he hates the Mets and calling their fans "stupid."

"He's created some controversy up here, but he went out there and walked the walk and talked the talk, I guess," Glavine said, seeming a little embarrassed by Rocker's shenanigans.

"I know it's an awful lot different than most of us. Most of us just want to quietly come into town, beat somebody and get out of town. But it works for him. John is an extremely intense individual."

The sellout crowd of 55,911 at Shea Stadium was clearly upset by comments made by Rocker and teammate Chipper Jones, waving signs such as "I Want to Fight John Rocker" and serenading Jones with slow chants of "Lar-ry, Lar-ry" — his given name, but one he doesn't like.

In the ninth, Rocker arrived at the mound to deafening boos. Seeming to thrive on the reception, he shook off an error by shortstop Walt Weiss to strike out Mets division series hero Todd Pratt, retire Melvin Mora on a deep fly to center and get Rey Ordóñez on a weak grounder to Weiss to end the game.

Rocker pumped his fist at the quiet crowd while the Braves ran on the field to congratulate him. New York players walked back to their dugout with their heads down, surely aware that no team has recovered from an 0-3 deficit.

Cowboys face Giants in must-win game

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — After the New York Giants won the NFC East in 1997 in Jim Fassel's first season as coach, there was an assumption the days of Dallas' dynasty were over.

How else could you look at it? The Giants had a young up-and-coming team and the Cowboys and their stars, Troy Aikman, Emmitt Smith and Michael Irvin, were aging.

Like many assumptions, it was inaccurate.

The Cowboys not only bounced back in 1998 to win their sixth division title in seven years, they did it by posting the first perfect division record (8-0).

Dallas (3-1) is showing no signs of letting up this year. It carried a share of first place with Washington in the NFC East into the weekend. While the Redskins are at Arizona on Sunday night, the Cowboys visit Giants Stadium on Monday night to face the struggling Giants (2-3).

"I think we are a better football team than a year ago," Aikman said. "Now it's just a matter of proving it. We started off well. Obviously losing Sunday (to Philadelphia) was a big disappointment, but that's life in the NFL when you don't play well. The important thing is to bounce back against New York."

The Cowboys will be without Irvin this week, and maybe forever. The 12-year veteran receiver is considering his future in football after sustaining a neck injury and swollen spinal cord in last week's 13-10 loss at Philadelphia.

"I speak for everyone when I say there is still concern," Aikman said.

The Giants, who missed the playoffs with an 8-8 record last season, come into the game in turmoil.

The defense, which has played well enough to be 4-1, is annoyed with the offense, which has struggled since opening day. While there has been no finger-pointing, yet, the locker room could get ugly if quarterback Kent Graham's return to the lineup doesn't wake up the offense, which has 19 points in the last two games.

Kerry Collins started last week with Graham sidelined by a concussion and he didn't do much in a 14-3 loss to Arizona.

Earlier this week, Fassel told the team and admitted the offense wasn't doing its job. The offense also took it upon itself to have a meeting.

"These guys know what they've got to do," All-Pro defensive end Michael Strahan said. "They're smart enough to figure it out."

The Giants have struggled in recent years against Dallas, especially on Monday night. The Cowboys have beaten the Giants in all seven of prime-time games.

Last year's win came courtesy of "Prime Time." Deion Sanders scored on a 59-yard punt return and a 71-yard interception return, and caught a 55-yard pass to set up another TD in the Cowboys' 31-7 win.

Besides controlling Sanders, the Giants defense needs to slow down Smith. The 10-year veteran has rushed for 100 yards three times this season. He leads the NFC with 409 yards rushing.

Aikman has struggled a little, throwing for 840 yards, eight touchdowns and seven interceptions. Five of the TD passes came in the season opener.

The key for the Giants will be to get more consistent play from the offense and for the defense to not only slow Dallas, but chip in with a few turnovers.

In the Giants' two wins, they forced eight turnovers. In three losses, they didn't force a single turnover.

"Without stating the obvious, it's a very, very, very important game for us," said Fassel, who has been criticized more in recent weeks by the media for the offensive shortcomings. "We're coming off a loss and it's against a team we always feel like we have to play well to beat. We need a win."

Young ponders future after concussion

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — As San Francisco 49ers quarterback Steve Young ponders his future in football, he can look to an abundance of evidence showing that repeated concussions and head injuries can cause irreparable damage.

Attention on brain injuries in sports has been focused in recent years on boxers, such as Sugar Ray Robinson, Jerry Quarry and especially Muhammad Ali, whose Parkinson's disease may have been exacerbated by repeated blows to the head.

But plenty of other athletes have been forced to retire after suffering concussions, including hockey's Pat LaFontaine and Brett Lindros and football's Merril Hoge and Al Toon.

The problem, doctors say, is that no one is quite sure how many are too many — or when the next hit could be the blow that takes away an athlete's motor skills and memory.

"I don't know how many athletes have sat in front of me and said, 'Doc, what is down the road for me if I've had so many concussions?'" said Dr. Michael Collins of the Division of Neuropsychology at Henry Ford Health System in Detroit. "We just don't know," he said.

Young, 38, was knocked out during a game against Arizona on Sept. 27. It was his fourth concussion in three years. He will sit out the next two games, and his diagnosis will be reevaluated at that time.

Young's neurologist, Dr. Gary Steinberg of the Stanford University School of Medicine, categorized the concussion as mild and said there was no indication of permanent brain damage.

"I don't think we're talking about a Muhammad Ali-type of situation here," Steinberg said. "It's nothing of the order of magnitude compared to Muhammad Ali."

Doctors say that Ali and other boxers helped bring attention to the potential problems of brain injury in sports. Robinson and Quarry both showed signs of dementia pugilistica, or being "punch drunk."

PAMPA — Justin Barnes got his kicks and the defense put together a shutout as Pampa downed Dumas 16-0 Friday night in a District 3-4A game at Harvester Stadium.

Barnes kicked three field goals and tailback Terrance Lemons scored on a 4-yard run as Pampa evened its district record at 1-1 and improved to 4-3 for the season.

Pampa's defense, led by Jason Burklow, Justin Lemons, Tim Ferris and tackle Tyson Curtis, never gave Dumas many scoring opportunities. Dumas finished with only 115 total yards and 5 first downs.

Lemons touchdown with just 42 seconds left in the first quarter helped give Pampa a 10-0 lead. The TD was set up when Curtis knocked the ball loose from Dumas quarterback Skipworth and Ferris recovered the fumble on the Demons' 24.

The Harvesters' offense had to rely heavily on Barnes after several potential scoring drives stalled out. Barnes connected from 33, 35 and 47 yards.

Lemons led all rushers with 110 yards on 20 carries. Fullback Thomas Long picked up 100 yards on 14 carries.

Quarterback Kaleb Snelgroes threw for 71 yards. Barnes (2-28 yards) and J.J. Roark (2-17) led the receiving corps.

Pampa had 325 yards total offense and 20 first downs. Center Jeff Warren, guards Tyson Curtis and Andy Schroeder were among the Harvester linemen who delivered some key blocks to spring Lemons and Long loose for some big gains.

Dumas (2-5 overall, 0-2 in district) got 96 yards on 14 carries from tailback Marcus Simpson.

Up next for the Harvesters is Hereford at 7:30 next Friday night in Hereford.

Violations at SMU

DALLAS (AP) — An investigation into a suspended Southern Methodist University assistant football coach has revealed more serious violations than the school originally believed.

While most of the information gathered appears to be "secondary in nature," not all the findings can necessarily be deemed as minor, Copeland said Friday.

"We have found things that are disturbing beyond secondary violations," he said.

SMU announced on Aug. 6 that it had suspended assistant coach Steve Malin with pay and hired the Kansas City law firm of Bond, Schoeneck & King to investigate.

The NCAA defines secondary violations as those that provide a limited recruiting or competitive advantage and are isolated or inadvertent.

Major violations are any other than secondary, specifically those that provide an extensive recruiting or competitive advantage.

Copeland would not discuss the specifics of the findings, but said they did not involve any other current or past SMU coaches.

Malin was interviewed in the past two weeks, the final step in the investigation, Copeland said.

Top-ranked Wheeler rushes past Claude, 29-14

CLAUDE — The Mustangs defense arrived at Nicholson Field in a foul mood and powered Wheeler to a 29-14 win against Claude on Friday in the District 1-1A opener for both teams.

Through three quarters, Claude gained five rushing yards and 21 passing yards. Claude also managed just two first downs through three quarters as Wheeler built a 26-0 lead.

Brooks Brown led Wheeler with 121 rushing yards on 22 carries and one touchdown. Brown also completed eight of 17 passes for 127 yards. Caleb Finsterwald ran 14 times for 146 yards and a touchdown. Casey Childress chipped in with two touchdown runs.

Wheeler ran for 292 yards and passed for another 127.

Ty Knox led Claude with 151 yards on 11 carries, including an 82-yard scamper for a touchdown late in the game.

In the first half, Wheeler seemingly had more trouble with the penalty flags than with Claude. The Mustangs defense completely throttled Claude, allowing just two first-half downs. On the other hand, Wheeler saw two touchdown plays called back because of penalties.

However, Wheeler managed to strike for two touchdowns in the second quarter and took a 13-0 lead at the half.

Claude gained 14 yards on 11 carries on the ground and completed one of six passes for 21 yards. Claude totaled 16 offensive plays in the first half and never ventured beyond midfield.

Wheeler drove deep into Claude territory on its second possession of the game and seemingly scored when Finsterwald took an option 15 yards into the end zone. But a clipping penalty brought the ball back, and Wheeler ended up turning the ball over on downs.

On Wheeler's next possession, the Mustangs rambled 81 yards in 11 plays for the first score of the game. Brown sparked the drive by taking an option 36 yards to the Claude 17. The next play, Childress blasted 17 yards into the end zone. But a holding penalty brought the ball back to the Claude 27.

However, Wheeler benefited from penalty on third-and-14 from the Claude 14 when the Mustangs committed pass interference in the end zone. Wheeler got first down at the Claude 2, and Childress scored two plays later to give Wheeler a 7-0 lead late in the second quarter.

Late in the second quarter Brown sprinted 43 yards around right end for Wheeler's second touchdown to give Wheeler a 13-0 lead with just more than three minutes left in the half.

Wheeler's offense gained strength through the first half. Brown ran 14 times through 91 yards, including five carries for minus yardage. Brown got sacked four times for minus 27 yards. Brown also completed five of 10 passes for 77 yards, including a 40-yard bomb to Kyle Masters near the end of the half.

The Mustangs committed five penalties for 45 yards.

Wheeler also had another chance to score late in the first half, moving to the Claude 6 after the 40-yard Masters catch. However two sacks and an incompleteness ended the threat.

Wheeler increased its lead in the third quarter with two more touchdowns. Wheeler marched 90 yards on its first second-half possession, help by a 30-yard hookup from Brown to Masters. Finsterwald stepped off the final 63 yards into the end zone to give Wheeler a 19-0 lead.

On its second possession of the second half, Wheeler took the long way home, marching 76 yards in 10 plays. Brown sparked the drive with a 26-yard run on the first play of the drive. Finsterwald added a 19-yard run and Wheeler also benefited from a pass-interference penalty in the end zone. Childress plunged into the end zone from a couple of yards out to give Wheeler a 26-0 lead midway through the third.

Claude scored two later touchdowns in the fourth quarter to make the score respectable, but Wheeler's defense thoroughly dominated the first three quarters and put the game away.

The Mustangs drove for a touchdown with 4:15 remaining. Knox and Kenny Herring carried all 11 plays on the 83-yard drive. Knox blasted into the end zone from a yard out to bring Claude within 29-8.

Meals on Wheels

Serving Pampa for 21 years

Chests containing meals are ready to be picked up and delivered.

By NANCY YOUNG
Managing Editor

Pampa's Meals on Wheels turned 21 years old this month.

The service has provided meals to many Pampa residents through the years who are unable to prepare their own meals, ensuring them a meal at least once a day.

Meals on Wheels is a non-profit community service which prepares and delivers meals to local residents. Residents who are 55 years of age or older who are of all socio-economic levels who are homebound due to illness, physical or mental handicap, or advancing age, and who are unable to prepare their own meals may benefit from the Meals on Wheels program.

The program enables eligible citizens to maintain their independence in their own homes and environment. Meal cost is determined by the recipient's ability to pay. Payment for meals is accepted.

Gray County Extension Committee on Aging began the program in 1978 with two goals in mind. The primary goal was to serve a hot noon meal to those who were unable to prepare an adequate meal for themselves. The secondary goal was to relieve some of the isolation, loneliness, and depression that goes along with being alone, on a fixed income and many times in poor health.

Pampa's Meals on Wheels was born on Oct. 9, 1978, with 45 meals delivered that day in Pampa. The meals were delivered out of Leisure Lodge which is now Coronado Health care Center.

In 1980 MOW outgrew the nursing home facili-

The program continues to operate from the base of the local Methodist Church. After operating locally for 21 years, the goals of MOW have not changed. The numbers have grown and changed throughout the years.

MOW is currently serving an average of 150 meals per day, five days a week. Special diets are available.

The true backbone of the program is the many faithful volunteers it takes to "get the meals out." Volunteers are used in the kitchen to "dish up" desserts and to fill the plates.

As many as 25 volunteer drivers are used on a daily basis to deliver the meals to the recipients. Drivers are always needed. Anyone interested in volunteering may call the MOW office at 669-1007.

MOW depends on support from the Pampa community to ensure the success of the program. They receive it in the forms of financial through donations and memorials as well as physically through volunteer hours. The local Meals on Wheels has been a United Way agency since 1979.

Meal recipients are honored on their birthdays with a cake provided by the Barrett Baptist Women, or a flower provided by Roberta's Flowers and Freeman's Flowers.

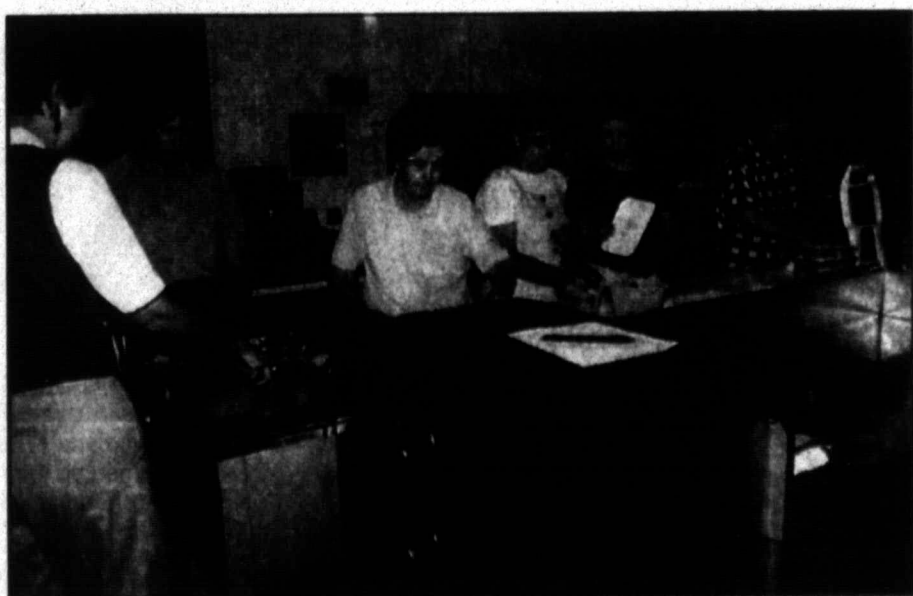

Thanksgiving brings the annual Share-A-Meal program where residents of Pampa are given the opportunity to share a meal from their holiday table with one of MOW meal recipients. MOW also helps Mary Ellen and Harvester Church of Christ organize meals for Christmas Day delivery.

Volunteers from Sr. Developmental Class at PHS (l. to r.) Lucinda, Rocky Ivey, Troy Owens and Josh Brown deliver to Mary Ellen and Harvester Church of Christ.

Jessica Bender and Jimmy Lemley

Bender-Lemley

Jessica Bender of Aurora, Colo., formerly of Pampa, and Jimmy Lemley of Dallas were wed Sept. 25 in Central Baptist Church of Pampa with the Rev. Bob Gharis, brother-in-law of the groom of Dallas, officiating.

The bridesmaids were Stacy Hamilton, Tara Ault, Molly Kohl, all of Colorado, and Kathy Brown of Amarillo. The flower girl was Callie Coleman, cousin of the bride of Pampa.

The best man was Deon Bender, brother of the bride of Boulder, Colo. The groomsmen were Chuck Ray of Blossom, Chris Swaim of Paris and Randy Barber of Denton. The ring bearer was Joshua Gharis, nephew of the groom of Garland.

The ushers and candlelighter were Shane Kienast, Jamie Pittman and Jay Wilson, all of Paris, and Chris Lutz of Arlington.

Registering the guests were Tamra and Angela Henthorn, cousins of the bride of Pampa.

Music was provided by pianist Janet Elliott, aunt of the groom of Kilgore, and vocalists Kathleen Abel of Colorado, Molly Kohl of Denver, Colo., and Andy Elliott, uncle of the groom of Kilgore.

A reception was held following the service in the parlor of the church with Christine Griffin, Louan Suttle, Tammy Henthorn, Gina Minyard, all aunts of the bride, and Peggy Turner, all of Pampa, serving the guests.

The bride is the daughter of Jon and Joyce Bender of Aurora and is the granddaughter of J.B. and Maud Minyard of Pampa. She attended Pampa schools prior to moving to Colorado and graduated from Gateway High School in Aurora in 1995 and from Parks College in Aurora in 1998. She is currently employed at First American Real Estate Tax Service.

The groom is the son of George and Mary Lemley of Blossom. He holds a degree from the University of North Texas and is currently employed at Sunbelt National Mortgage at Southlake.

The couple planned a honeymoon cruise, which set sail from Puerto Rico, and intend to make their home in the Dallas area.

Rural, small town Texans have hard time getting home loans

By MIKE CRISSEY
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — The smaller the city Texans live in, the smaller their chances are for getting a home loan, a housing group says.

Compared with residents of Dallas and Houston, rural Texans are half as likely and those living in small to mid-sized cities are one-fourth as likely to be approved for a home loan, according to a study by the Texas Low Income Housing

Information Service.

The study compared mortgage acceptance rates in Dallas and Houston to rates in Laredo, Longview, Midland, Texarkana, Tyler and Victoria and 196 rural Texas counties.

In 1997, 59 percent of the 195,908 mortgage applications in Dallas and Houston were approved, compared with 42 percent of the 28,303 applications made in the six mid-sized cities and 32 percent of the 56,099 applications in rural counties, the group said.

"The study dispels the misconception that home lending problems only exist in the largest urban areas," said John Henneberger, co-director of the Texas Low Income Housing Information Service.

"The mortgage credit problems of residents of smaller Texas cities and rural areas dwarf those of big cities," he said.

John Heasley, executive vice president for the Texas Bankers Association said the study was flawed because it did not look at applicants' credit worthiness.

"One of the realities of mortgage financing is the ability to repay loans," he said. "Lower income Texans tend to live in rural areas. That may be the reason for the lower rates."

Heasley said rural banks wouldn't stay in business if they didn't serve their customers.

Henneberger said the study was timed in part to coincide with consideration of a revised federal banking bill, sponsored by Senate Banking Committee Chairman Phil Gramm, R-Texas, that would lengthen the examination cycle of the Community Reinvestment Act.

The revised bill would require that banks with less than $250 million in assets be examined for compliance with the law every five years, rather than every two years as they are now.

Under the federal act, banks must meet the credit needs of all communities where they collect deposits, particularly in minority, poor and working-class neighborhoods.

Henneberger said extending the time between compliance checks would weaken the law in the areas of Texas that need the most reinvestment.

Christi Harlan, spokeswoman for the Senate Banking committee, said the bill wouldn't weaken oversight of smaller banks.

"A five-year interval is about what small banks can afford for CRA exams," Ms. Harlan said.

She said Gramm had talked to executives of small banks about an appropriate length of time for examination. Gramm opposed an earlier version of the bill that would have exempted small banks from the act, she said.

Child testifies he 'saw my dad shoot my mom'

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — An 11-year-old boy testified he saw his father kill his mother last December after learning the woman was having an affair.

The boy testified Thursday in the trial of his dad, 34-year-old Jimmy Watkins.

"I saw my mom fall down and I saw my dad shoot my mom," the boy said as his father sobbed at a defense table.

Watkins is accused of killing Nancy Watkins last Dec. 22 at their home near Eagle Mountain Lake, about 25 miles northwest of Fort Worth. He shot her once in the head, chased her boyfriend outside and shot him twice, then returned and shot his wife five more times as she pleaded for help in a 911 call, prosecutors say.

Watkins tried to shoot the boyfriend, Keith Fontenot, in the head but the gun misfired and Fontenot escaped, officials said.

As a 911 tape was played in court Thursday, Watkins sobbed, listening as the bullets that he admits firing silenced his wife's pleas for help.

Watkins, a former chief with the Dido Volunteer Fire Department, has pleaded innocent by reason of temporary insanity. If convicted, he faces up to life in prison.

Defense attorney Lisa Mullen said during her opening statements that "this is not a case of whodunit."

It is a case, she said, of a man filled with so much rage that he lost his sanity, if only for a moment.

The defense will present evidence to explain what would cause "a man that's so good to do something so awful," Ms. Mullen said.

The trial is expected to last through next week.

Names in the news

NEW YORK (AP) — Playwright Arthur Miller has been awarded The Dorothy and Lillian Gish Prize, honoring his 50 years of serving as a moral beacon for American literature.

"I guess what I've been trying to do for half a century is to part the curtain on what we deny," Miller said Thursday during a small gathering at the Hudson Theater. "To me, that is what the theater is about — to discover what we are desperately trying to suppress."

Miller, whose work includes the Pulitzer-Prize winning "Death of a Salesman" and Tony-Award winning "The Crucible," was given a silver medal and $200,000.

The prize was established in 1994 with a bequest from the estate of actress Lillian Gish, who said she wished to recognize artists who made an "outstanding contribution to the beauty of the world."

Author E.L. Doctorow noted Miller's plays always include a point at which a character faces their own weakness. Often, a thinly veiled setting harkens to the Holocaust, seemingly asserting that everyone has "a Nazi within them," Doctorow said.

"No one can deny the courage of a writer who will say so," he added.

Miller, 83, said he is at work on a new play, and plans to distribute the prize money to arts groups in New York. He said he still writes daily.

"I've lost all my hair doing it," Miller said. "The good part of it is that it's enjoyable."

BOSTON (AP) — Audiences have seen figure skater Nancy Kerrigan shine on ice. Now listeners will decide whether she sparkles on the air.

Kerrigan's first pop single, "Shining Through," is included on a new compact disc "Reflections Off The Ice — A Musical Tribute to Skating," a compilation of music used by figure skaters.

"I had a lot of fun recording the song and believe me, as much fun as it was ... I'm not giving up the day job," she said.

Kerrigan, 30, said she recorded the song in 1994 after being approached by songwriter Michael Jay. He was convinced she had a good voice, though Kerrigan had her doubts. Her only previous public singing performance came in a 1992 "Saturday Night Live" sketch with Adam Sandler.

The CD single is Kerrigan's only recording. She has no plans for more.

The Olympic silver medalist said she knows there could be a mixed reaction to her song.

"I don't like everything on the radio. I don't expect everybody to like it," she said. "I'm not trying to be Barbra Streisand or something."

The single was released to radio stations Thursday. The CD is scheduled to go on sale on the Internet on Nov. 1.

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The mayor of New York City got a musical ribbing from a songwriter in the heart of blues country.

Jill Sobule wrote and performed a song Thursday at the Associated Press Managing Editors conference, tweaking Mayor Rudolph Giuliani for his fervent opposition to the "Sensation" exhibit at The Brooklyn Museum of Art, which includes a painting of the Virgin Mary decorated with dung.

"Call Rudy" includes the lyrics: "Call Rudy if your art's a little queer, call Rudy, election year is near. Don't call the Whitney, don't call the Met, don't call MoMa, lest you forget. You can be a sensation on every news station, lines round the block to see your degradation. It's your duty, call Rudy."

Sobule performed the song during an APME panel discussion on music censorship. Giuliani, a Republican, is believed to be considering a U.S. Senate run against Hillary Rodham Clinton; neither has announced their candidacy.

Sobule, a New Yorker whose who scored a hit with her 1995 song "I Kissed a Girl," said she plans to record "Call Rudy."

BOSTON (AP) — Jordan's King Abdullah II has a personal connection to a Kennedy family artifact on display in the Kennedy Library.

During a tour Thursday, he was able to view a Bible that his father, King Hussein, gave President John F. Kennedy in 1962. The Bible, which has a cover made of mother of pearl, is engraved with a relief of "The Last Supper."

It is on display as part of the library's newest exhibit, "Treasures of the Kennedy Library."

Abdullah visited the library with his wife, Queen Rania Al-Abdullah, as part of the library's Distinguished Foreign Visitors program, which provides a forum for international leaders to meet with the American public.

Abdullah was scheduled to speak at Harvard University today.

Abdullah, 37, is in the United States after eight months on the throne, following the death of his father in February. He met Tuesday with President Clinton.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A month after surgery cleared a blockage in his carotid artery, Bob Barker is heading back to "The Price is Right."

The longtime game show host says he'll resume taping the show on Oct. 25.

Barker was admitted to a Washington, D.C., hospital on Sept. 16 after complaining of fatigue and a tingling sensation in his right arm. After surgery, doctors recommended that Barker rest for several weeks.

God speaks to us in many ways, and for those of us at Hiland Christian Church, its through our favorite pastor, Mike Sublett, and God must have a lot to tell us because Mike speaks, and speaks... Mike has chosen a noble task - to lead sinners to the glory and salvation of Jesus Christ. Mike encourages and builds up those he meets and e-mails. He touches the lives of those near, with church and prison ministry, and far, with messages throughout cyberspace. Mike is described by his church family as "bold for the Lord", "spontaneous", "compassionate", "exuberant", "enthusiatic", and, "a Jesus believer and God's voice for unity". How can we thank God enough for you in return for all the joy we have in the presence of our God because of you? (1 Thessalonians 5:11)

Thank you Mike for caring and never giving up on us. Thank you God for bringing Mike back to Pampa. We love you. God bless you and your family.

CHAPEL

The brothers, along with other players who greet festivalgoers, offer a "humorous look at religion in the 16th century," said Jeff Baldwin, festival entertainment director and resident historian. He portrays Thomas Cranmer, Archbishop of Canterbury and first spiritual leader of the Church of England after King Henry VIII broke with Rome.

Baldwin notes that religion played a central role in community life in those days.

"The primary entertainment back then would've been passion plays (depicting Jesus' life, death and resurrection)," he said. "Religion ruled everyday life. We chose a time (for the festival) when there was a lot of religious upheaval in England, with Henry VIII closing the monasteries and taking wealth from them and making himself head of the church.

"We also know there was no weekend at the time. Most of the time off that people got was to go to church. Religious holidays were like our holidays today. There were all these saints' days."

The festival, which recreates the sort of village fete held in England at harvest time, becomes a miniature community that swells to 3,500 each fall, if you count the weekend campers, festivalgoers who come and spend the night at rough campsites.

"This is a magical show. It's really evolved," said Diane Bairstow of Colorado, who portrays "Ame de la Coeur" or Love of the Heart. Her long, blond hair flowing, she carries a beribboned basket on her right arm and wanders the festival as a poetess, offering to read — and sell — love sonnets.

"In the past 12 years, I've been all over the country doing shows," she said. "With most of the other shows, there are promoters. They don't own the land. They don't really care for it. But George has put so much into it and requires so much of everybody. A lot of people out here, particularly the older ones, are very spiritual. We are part of something."

This fall marks wheat weaver Cora Hendershot's first year at the festival. She makes "house blessings," woven symbols of wheat depicting Devonshire crosses, Welsh love knots and other traditional symbols. She traveled from Oregon to display her wares in a simple booth. She sits at the front, in Renaissance dress, weaving, rocking and talking with customers.

"This is a craft done since the beginnings of agriculture," she said. "The wheat or grain crop was so important in an agrarian economy. Even after countries became Christianized, the idea that the crop needed to be blessed continued. I think I help keep an important spiritual tradition alive."

Larry David tries a comic take on stand up for an HBO special

By FRAZIER MOORE
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Larry David, so misunderstood.

A funny guy? Sure. "Seinfeld," which he co-created and often wrote, proved it. So does "Larry David: Curb Your Enthusiasm," his HBO special premiering Sunday at 10 p.m. EDT.

What about the accompanying stigma — that he's megalomaniac, hypersensitive or simply odd? Where does that kind of nonsense get started?

If a recent interview proves anything, Larry David is in fine psychic fettle. For example, even after his triumph with "Seinfeld," there's no swelled head for him. "I maybe have just a little more confidence in my work now," he allows, "but not that much."

Nor has his "Seinfeld" payday — a reported $242 million — made a material difference in his world.

"You do have thoughts occasionally like, 'Holy cow! I have a lot of money!'" he admits. "But it's not like, 'I must be great.'"

At age 51, David knows exactly who he is: the same as he was a long time ago, plus years of experience to seal it. "I really don't think that anything about me has changed since I was, I don't know ... 12?"

Perhaps his biggest life change: the onset of baldness.

"But I like how I've taken to it," he declares with a mirthless laugh. "No toupees. No beard to offset it. I'm quite proud of how I've adjusted."

"The only thing I ever did for it was try the Chinese Bald Cure. We did an episode about it on the show." (That would be "Seinfeld" No. 25, "The Tape.")

"But it actually happened. We asked the guy bringing the Chinese food to call China on the phone from my apartment, after we tried and couldn't get anybody who spoke English. And the stuff came."

"It's worked great."

Consider that last remark an exercise of comic license. And expect more on "Curb Your Enthusiasm." David's first brush with TV since the May 1998 "Seinfeld" finale, this is a very funny special about Larry David putting together a Larry David special.

During "Curb," he kvetches to his manager, frets to his wife, stewes during meetings at HBO, and wonders why he said OK to cameras stalking him to get it all.

On the program, David is a hybrid form of volatile impatience, someone capable of juggling stubbornness with cautious indecision. As any "Seinfeld" fan would expect, he has a tendency to deconstruct life's every passing moment.

After waiting for his manager to get off the phone, David lodges a complaint about the office-greeting policy.

"You know I'm in the room, how come you don't pick up your head and say, 'One second?'" David asks. "All you have to do is: 'One second.'"

His right hand cradles an invisible receiver. "When I'm on the phone, I go, 'One second.' Or you don't have to SAY 'One second,' just —" he hoists the index finger of his other hand — "like that."

Beside such telling glimpses, this "mockumentary" includes insights from David's friends, Jason Alexander, Richard Lewis and, of course, Jerry Seinfeld.

Best of all, it captures him doing stand up for the first time in 9 1/2 years (who knew!), seen in snatches from club dates he books to steel himself for his big HBO concert.

"Who do you think has more freedom — the married men in America or the single men in Communist China?" he asks the room. "I gotta go for the single guy in Communist China, no contest. I'm a married guy in America. I can leave the country — but I can't leave my house."

It was David's real-life itch to get back onstage that led to this "Curb Your Enthusiasm" spoof. Somebody suggested he should film his practice sets.

"I very reluctantly said, 'Oh ... OK,'" recalls David, sipping his nonfat decaf cappuccino. "That's exactly the way I make up my mind to do anything: a reluctant OK. I never go, 'Yeah! Great idea! Let's do it!' Never."

"Then I thought, 'Well, maybe this needs some narrative around the stand up.' It became more and more of a comedy film, and less and less of a stand-up film."

David says he made seven or eight unannounced appearances at clubs in Los Angeles and New York.

And how did it feel? "I was as anxious as I was 10 years ago."

So why did he want to go back? Among comedy cognoscenti, David is as well-known for his hatred of stand up as for his mastery.

"I hated it and loved it, all at the same time," he explains. "When it goes badly, you have one of two attitudes: either, 'Well, everyone is stupid, but I'm great,' or, 'People are really smart and I stink, I have no talent, what am I doing?'"

"But when it goes well, everyone is brilliant and I'm the greatest thing on the planet!"

In other words: David doesn't hesitate to assume that the consensus of everyone on Earth is reflected by 100 people in a comedy club. "They're a very representative group," he insists. "A scientific sample."

The funny thing is, he's got proof.

Roommate accused of devising fatal attack

By KELLEY SHANNON
Associated Press Writer

PLEASANTON, Texas (AP) — One of three lawmen slain in an ambush was laid to rest Friday, hours after the gunman's roommate was jailed and charged with helping plan the shootings.

Kenneth Vodochodsky, 19, was arrested about 3 a.m. on three charges of capital murder and two counts of attempted capital murder in connection with the assault carried out Tuesday by Jeremiah Engleton.

Bond for Vodochodsky was set at $5 million. Engleton, 21, died of a self-inflicted gunshot in a standoff with police after the lawmen were killed, officials said.

Vodochodsky bolted from the shooting scene only minutes before the attack, just after Engleton placed a bogus 911 call that lured the officers to their deaths, according to an affidavit filed by Texas Ranger Tony Leal.

Vodochodsky allegedly knew Engleton wanted to kill lawmen and bailed his friend out of jail the day of the attack, the affidavit states.

On Thursday, Vodochodsky returned to the scene of the crime and told a neighbor, Edward Essary, of his role, the affidavit said.

"Yeah, I bailed him out to do this," Vodochodsky told Essary, according to the document. Engleton had wanted to assault officers the night he was arrested on a domestic violence charge, but Vodochodsky allegedly warned him not to do it then "because nothing was planned," the affidavit said.

Two Atascosa County sheriff's deputies, Mark Stephenson and Thomas Monse, and Texas Department of Public Safety Trooper Terry Miller were killed by Engleton one by one as they arrived at his trailer home.

A deputy U.S. marshal and a Pleasanton police officer were wounded.

On Friday, the day Stephenson would have turned 32, more than 500 law officers from all over Texas poured into Pleasanton to pay their respects.

Only 250 people could fit into the funeral home chapel. The rest waited outside and listened to the service on a loudspeaker.

Stephenson leaves behind a wife, Rachel, and three children ranging in age from 3 to 16. He was remembered as a devoted family man, an avid high school football booster and a courageous law officer.

"Perhaps one thing that violence teaches all of us is violence hurts everyone. Like a ripple from a rock into a pond, the ripple just seems to go in so many directions," said Monsignor John Wagner, who officiated.

After bailing out Engleton, Vodochodsky and his friend went directly to a gun shop, the affidavit said, and bought $200 worth of ammunition: four boxes of assault rifle bullets, four boxes of .380-caliber ammo, three boxes of 9mm ammo and four boxes of shotgun shells.

Diana Ellis, Stephenson's sister, told those in the crowd to think hard about how they are living their lives "because you never know how much time is left."

"Mark was a very honorable man. He was a family man. He had morals, he had character," she said.

A former military member, Stephenson was buried at Fort Sam Houston National Cemetery in San Antonio.

Funerals for the other two slain lawmen will be Saturday.

While Stephenson and the other dead and injured officers were being praised in the chapel for serving their community, Vodochodsky sat in jail accused of helping Engleton plot the officers' assassination.

Vodochodsky told Essary that Engleton "was going to kill himself and was just going to take some pigs with him," the ranger's affidavit states.

After bailing out Engleton out of jail Tuesday, Vodochodsky allegedly told the ranger, he and Engleton went to a gun shop and bought $200 worth of ammunition: four boxes of assault rifle bullets, four boxes of .380-caliber ammo, three boxes of 9mm ammo and four boxes of shotgun shells.

Vodochodsky nearly didn't make his escape because he had to jump-start his car and finally got it going after the 911 call was placed, the affidavit states.

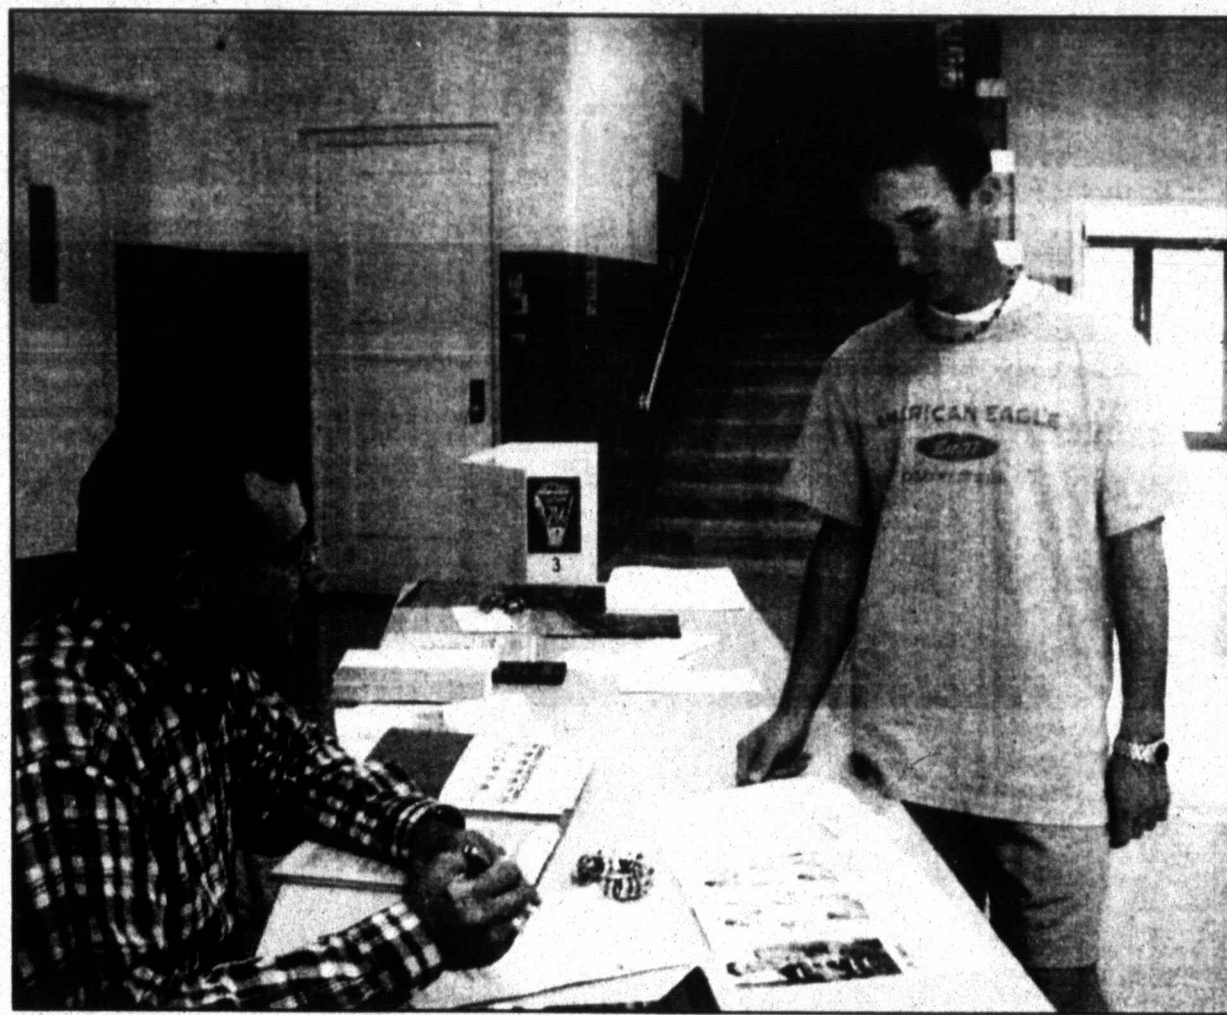

In an interview with the Houston Chronicle on Thursday, Vodochodsky said his family had lived in the mobile home with Engleton's family for the past six or seven months.

Vodochodsky told the newspaper his friend of 11 years had been upset about marital problems.

"I didn't think that he'd do this," Vodochodsky said.

A memorial fund for the officers' families has been established at Atascosa National Bank, 1525 W. Oaklawn, Pleasanton, Texas, 78064. The phone number is (830) 281-2507.

Bicyclists hold ride to benefit AIDS work

HOUSTON (AP) — More than 600 bicyclists are on the second day of a four-day, 325-mile journey from Houston to Dallas to raise money for 23 AIDS service organizations in Texas.

They pedaled out of the Astroarena parking lot at 7:10 a.m. Thursday, headed for a first-night stay on a campground 84 miles away in Navasota.

Each cyclist had to raise at least $2,300 to participate. Together, the riders brought in $2.1 million, officials said.

The deadline for church news and letters to the editor is noon Wednesdays.

People in the news

RAEFORD, N.C. (AP) — His TV mom might not have approved, but at 45, the man best known as Greg Brady is old enough to jump out of an airplane if he wants to.

And that's what Barry Williams did Thursday when he made a 12,500-foot tandem jump with members of Fort Bragg's elite parachute team, the Golden Knights. In a tandem jump, two people are strapped together and use the same parachute.

"Yes, yes, yes," Williams hollered as he and his tandem master, Sgt. Mark Hogue, landed on the ground.

Williams, star of the 1970s TV show "The Brady Bunch," said he was in town to tour the Army post and fulfill a longtime dream of skydiving.

When asked if Greg Brady would have liked to skydive, Williams replied: "I don't think Carol Brady would have let him, but Greg would have done it."

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — Nicolas Cage was unhurt after his chauffeur-driven Bentley got into a fender-bender.

The actor was riding in the car on Hollywood Way at about 4 p.m. Thursday when a teen-ager in a Toyota turned in front of the car, police said.

"She cut in front of him and it went crunch," police Lt. Joe Latta said.

The other driver also escaped injury. No charges were immediately filed.

Cage, who won an Oscar for "Leaving Las Vegas," currently stars in "Bringing Out The Dead," a movie about New York City paramedics.

HONOLULU (AP) — The Gloved One canceled his plans to moonwalk in the new millennium in Australia and Hawaii.

Mama Concerts, a German-based promoter, planned to have Michael Jackson perform in Sydney on New Year's Eve and then fly over the international date line to perform a second millennium show on New Year's Eve here in Aloha Stadium.

Jackson's Web site announced Wednesday that both concerts were canceled.

Marcel Avram of Mama Concerts said Jackson doesn't want to interfere with his plans to finish recording his new album.

NEW YORK (AP) — Robert De Niro says the city pulled the plug on his planned $150 million film and TV studio project at the Brooklyn Navy Yard, despite assurances from Mayor Rudolph Giuliani that everything was set.

Earlier this week, Giuliani announced that instead of backing the De Niro group's project, the city had signed an agreement with another developer.

In a statement released Thursday, De Niro, Miramax Films president Harvey Weinstein and Tribeca Productions executive Jane Rosenthal suggested they were misled by the city, which leases the Navy Yard.

Giuliani said that no agreement had ever been reached with the De Niro group. As proof, he offered a May 3 City Hall news release that announced that the De Niro studio project was being considered.

"I'm a lawyer. What does it say in the press release?" he asked, before answering. "The word in the press release, repeated three times, is 'explore.'"

BOSTON (AP) — The Prince Spaghetti kid says he won't answer to Italian slurs on the job.

In a commercial for Prince Spaghetti, the kid played by Anthony Martignetti came running when his mother cried, "Anthony! Anthony!" from an apartment window.

Martignetti, now 42, is suing the Stop & Shop dairy plant where he says his supervisor calls him names like "guinea" and "meatball."

"Most people in the country were touched by the commercial and it's kind of a sad irony that he's here today based on the very thing the commercial was about — his Italian heritage," said his lawyer, Herbert Holtz.

The suit filed Thursday contends that Martignetti's supervisor taunted him with slurs for years and even subjected him to physical abuse.

"We strongly dispute the allegations," Stop & Shop spokeswoman Terry Vanderwater said.

Letters to the editor

Memories cause pain in the heart ...

To the editor,
I'm one of the people that was in that wreck that happened at the end of May. Every day, I go through physical pain and I go through quite a bit of pain, but what hurts a lot more than my physical pain is my heart.

I really don't think it matters at all whose daughter it was that died. The main reason the incident is still being talked about today is because she was such a nice person and easy to get along with. There is quite a few people who had never met Stacey Sehorn. Well, I can begin by telling you that she was a very easy person to get along with. She was the best friend that I had ever had. It was hard enough for me when I found out about what had happened to her, now think about how hard it is for me to write this letter.

Stacey and I were Amarillo roommates and at the time of the wreck we even worked together. So, she was a very big part of my life. Her main priority was to help people who were not as lucky as she was. In high school, she was a Peer Tutor, making a difference at such a young age. At the time of the wreck, she was helping mentally and physically challenged people work and try to earn a little bit of money. She dedicated her life to helping these people which made her such a wonderful person and such an easy person to care so much about.

I'm going to go ahead and finish this letter up before I get too upset. Stacey pretty much thought of the people that she cared about before she thought of herself. Maybe the people in Pampa should follow Stacey's example.

Pampa

It's time for Pampans to open their eyes ...

To the editor,

It has just now come to my attention how much the new Clarendon College School is costing the city of Pampa! It is crazy! Two-point one million dollars for a building in a town that everyone is claiming is fading away? Come on people, am I missing something?

In today's schools, the children are putting more effort into their studies, thus, achieving more goals. Within those goals they are receiving more scholarships that will take them almost anywhere they want to go. If a person was to go and ask 100 seniors if they plan to attend college here in Pampa, do you think the answer would be yes? Get real! As the times are changing kids don't want to be close to home, with the exceptions of a few. I myself, lived in a small town, did not have a lot of money and had no other choice but to go to a hometown college. Don't get me wrong, the education here at Clarendon College might be good, but don't sell yourself short. You can't even get a four year degree here in Pampa. In order to even do that, you would have to transfer to a bigger school — Amarillo, Lubbock, Clarendon.

Not to mention, how many of you Pampa people realized you were paying more taxes to help bring forth this project? Probably not very many. Why is the PEDC so concerned about it? Oh, I FORGET THEY THINK THIS IS DAIRY COUNTRY! Pampa, come on, open your eyes, look around, this town is not worth paying for something that won't be around long!

"A little girl named Samantha sent me a drawing of the outline, of her hand. Inside she'd written, 'These hands have prayed, for you.' It makes me warm all over just to think about that."

KAIROS is a nondenominational organization, members of all religions are welcome. There are no hell and brimstone sermons and no specific religious concept is forced on it's members. "The focus is on love, unity, understanding, fellowship, and worshiping," says a KAIROS veteran. "These are things all religions have in common. We're all headed for the same goal, the religious road we take to get there is irrelevant."

A participant of KAIROS 3 told me, "Religion alone couldn't have gotten me into the program and it certainly couldn't have kept me there over the years. What appeals to me is the warmth and human kindness the people from KAIROS lavish on us."

Resident Hawkins was a participant of KAIROS I and is still very active with the group after three years. "You know what impresses me most about KAIROS?" he asks. "Unlike many ministries that cruise through prisons preaching the word of God and talking, about religious good deeds and caring, but then disappear for a year. KAIROS people keep coming back. They come to visit once a month, every month, and will personally answer every letter you write them. They make themselves available to us. Try that with the ministers and sponsors from some of the other prison ministries."

"We're not just faces to them, they know us by name. When I received a birthday card this year I cried. It was the only one I got and it wasn't from my family, or my children or my friends. It was from my KAIROS sponsor. I can't put into words how much that meant to me."

A few of the offenders who attend KAIROS are upset that the general population consider the food a bribe to get you there and a reward for staying.

"The food is just a way for these people to show their love for us," says one member. "If they had their way they'd feed the whole unit, but the system being what it is they can only feed us 42 at a time. Six months from now there will be 42 more."

I'm told that KAIROS is a Greek word meaning "God's special time." From what this reporter has learned, we could all benefit emotionally from some special time, no matter our affiliation with God.

Lefors fireman attends school

COLLEGE STATION — Richard Craig Harkcom, volunteer fireman and fire chief of the Lefors Volunteer Fire Department attended the 70th Annual Texas Firemen's Training School. The school, attended by nearly 2,000 students representing about 750 cities from more than 25 states, was being held on the Texas A&M University campus.

Firemen can choose their course at the school from a list including Fire Fighting, Fire Prevention, Fire Department Officer Training, Fire Department Pump Maintenance, Specialized Fire Protection, and Disaster Rescue Training.

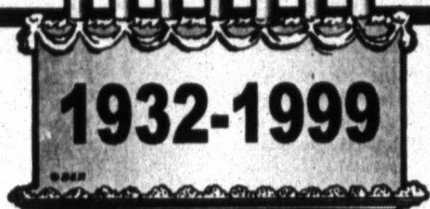

Harkcom was sponsored by Gray County Farm Bureau and Texas Farm Bureau Insurance Companies by contributing toward the cost of the school. Since volunteer firemen are interested in attending this school to help do a better job of fire fighting and fire prevention, 125 County Farm Bureaus and the Texas Farm Bureau Insurance Companies in the statewide program have sponsored 125 firemen at the school.

"The Farm Bureau insurance Companies believe Volunteer Fire Departments have been very effective in reducing the amount of loss involved by fire in rural areas," said Farm Bureau President Bob Stallman of Columbus. "It is our hope in sponsoring this program that the fireman will help the Lefors Volunteer Department to better serve the residents of Gray County."
