Bass Assails Threats By City Group

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Former Lubbock mayor Roy Bass said this morning at a preliminary hearing on next year's city budget he is "ashamed" of the Lubbock Property Owners Association because of their talk of recalling the City Council and because they have not offered any specifics on where the budget can be cut.

Those like Bass opposed to drastic cuts in city services outnumbered by more than 2-to-1 those wanting substantial tax cuts.

Most of this morning's discussion focused on a list of potential service cuts city officials say may be necessary if all tax cut demands of the association are met.

The association's request for a 25 percent tax cut, the removal of the tax on automobiles, and the increase of the homestead exemption for the elderly to $10,000 would require budget cuts of $5.5 million, city officials have said.

But association members, who have grabbed recent headlines with their talk of recalling the city council or suing to freeze the city's tax roll, were clearly outnumbered today as Lubbockites urged the council to use reason in any tax cutting.

Bass said for the past few weeks people have been operating on emotions and urged "a cool, calm appraisal of the situation."

He attributed the taxpayer uprising to a general dissatisfaction with the federal government.

"The city tax dollar is the finest and most efficient you can spend," Bass said, adding he had reviewed next year's proposed budget and "the fat that folks keep talking about simply is not there."

Bass said the main message of the tax revolt is that citizens are not interested in any new programs and said "the council would be well-advised not to make any drastic cuts in services."

Calling the association talk of recalling city council members "a cheap shot," Bass asked where the group's members were "when it came time to put your name on the ballot."

The former mayor also noted that his valuation had increased 45 percent and the valuation of a rent house he owns skyrocketed 100 percent.

Many of those appearing this morning opposed particular cuts which might be necessary if taxes are substantially reduced.

Sister Regina Foppe appeared to oppose any budget reduction for the health department and said "The City of Lubbock has been dragging its feet in the health services for over two decades."

She asked, "Do we value our citizen's health more than wealth, or is our motto individual wealth versus the community's health?"

Byrnie Bass, vice chairman of Lubbock's Cultural Affairs Council, said Lubbock's cultural activities makes the city "more than a place to go home and turn on the air conditioning."

Mrs. Russell Bean predicted budget cuts of the magnitude requested by the association would "set Lubbock back 50 years."

Others appeared on behalf of retaining

Police Capture Terrorists

PARIS (AP) — Two Arabic-speaking terrorists armed with grenades and submachine guns shot their way into the Iraqi Embassy early today and seized hostages, but they were captured in a gunfight after a day-long siege.

At least two policemen and one terrorist were reported wounded, and an embassy guard was seriously wounded in the initial attack.

The raiders, who struck at about 10 a.m. and were captured 8½ hours later, reportedly had been demanding freedom for a woman held in connection with another anti-Iraq terror attack in London last Friday.

A third gunman who took part in this morning's raid apparently panicked and fled the scene soon after the attack began.

In late afternoon about 20 members of a specially trained French anti-terror squad had taken up position around the embassy, on a tree-lined street in the 16th Arrondissement, a fashionable Paris district.

The Iraqi ambassador to Paris, Mundhir Tawfik al-Wandawi, who was not in the embassy at the time of the attack, and other Arab League diplomats had been negotiating with the gunmen.

The official Iraqi News Agency reported that the terrorists demanded the release of a woman held in London as a suspect in an unsuccessful assassination attempt against the Iraqi ambassador to Britain. The terrorists also sought a plane to take them to London to pick up the woman and then from the British capital to an unknown destination, Paris police sources reported.

One hostage wounded in the abdomen, head and leg was released by the raiders about five hours after the takeover and taken to a hospital, police reported.

The terrorists had continued to hold about a half-dozen more hostages, it was reported. Iraqi spokesmen said seven to 10 others had been trapped in an upper floor of the four-story embassy, not directly threatened by the terrorists but unable to pass through lower floors to leave.

Iraq is one of the chief financial and political backers of radical Palestinian bands, some of which have clashed with more moderate Palestinian guerrillas in Beirut. Arab sources speculated the anti-Iraq attacks could be linked to these intra-Arab struggles.

Wandawi had said earlier he would authorize French police to storm the building if they decided to and "if it's necessary."

The attack began shortly before 10 a.m. when the three men first claimed they had an appointment, then, when queried by embassy guards, drew weapons and opened fire, witnesses said.

"One of them shot like a madman," said an embassy employee who escaped.

The terrorist who dashed out of the building during the shooting left a submachine gun and a pistol on the sidewalk outside, police said.

In London Friday, a woman terrorist hurled a hand grenade under the limousine of Iraqi Ambassador Taha Ahmed al-Dawood just as Dawood was about to enter the car, police reported. The ambassador escaped injury because at the last minute he was summoned back inside his embassy to take a call from a friend.

Montford's Fund Plea Approved

Lubbock County Commissioners today approved a $59,000 grant application to give criminal district attorney-elect John T. Montford four additional investigators next year.

Continuing their budget deliberations for 1979, the commissioners have already granted most of the budget requests Montford made early this month.

The Texas Criminal Justice Council grant asks $14,400 for a chief investigator and $11,300 each for the three others.

There are three investigators on the staff now.

The commissioners have also approved an $18,000-per-year office administrator for Montford.

"I'm getting so many applications for chief administrator I think I can get by with paying less than $18,000 a year," Montford said, however.

In an aside at the 11 a.m. meeting, Montford said he is planning a grant application for 1980 to add two deputies to help staff a central office on the first floor of the courthouse for handling bad checks.

Some individuals have check cases pending in as many as five different courts in the county, he said.

Three Rescued; Storm Fading

SOUTH PADRE ISLAND (AP) — Three persons believed missing from a pleasure boat that washed ashore in the wake of tropical storm Amelia were found safe by Coast Guard rescuers today. They had apparently been trapped inside the boat's hull.

A Coast Guard spokesman at New Orleans said the 34-foot "Miss Laurie Ann" was beached upside down about five miles from the southern tip of South Padre Island. He said rescuers waded out to the boat, heard voices and hacked the hull open, freeing three persons.

Initial reports said the three were in "good shape" but were taken to a local hospital for observation.

At least five other boats were sunk by the season's first tropical storm, but CWO Don Jones of the Coast Guard said all persons aboard the others were rescued.

Jones said the storm's sudden development made it dangerous. "It's a tropical depression and no one cares about it. This one built up, became a tropical storm and bang ... bang ... bang."

Jones said Mexican fishing boats anchored in a boat channel near the Coast Guard station had impeded rescue traffic, creating one problem. Another problem was a little more unusual.

"You ain't gonna believe this, but them surfers were surfing right down the middle of the channel on 15-to 20-foot rollers (waves)," Jones said. "They got in the way."

While officials mopped up along the coast, Amelia began weakening as she moved inland north of Brownsville and began breaking up over sparsely populated ranchland to the north.

The storm turned northward early today, aiming her howling 50 mph winds and heavy wind-driven rainfall at sparsely populated South Texas ranchland.

Keeping her tropical storm designation by apparently having enough of the system remaining over the warm water of Increasing cloudiness will bring cooler weather and a chance of rain to Lubbock and the South Plains today and Tuesday, weathermen predict.

The forecast lists a 20 percent chance of rain today, 30 percent tonight and 20 percent again Tuesday.

Temperatures should be in the high 80s today, mid-60s tonight and near 90 Tuesday.

It was 92 Sunday in Lubbock and a warm 70 for the early morning low today, as the newly humid air held the daytime heat.

BALLOONISTS ARRIVE — Christopher Davey, right, and Don Cameron, the two British balloonists who were forced to ditch into the ocean Sunday just 110 miles short of their goal, arrive in Concarneau, France, early today aboard a trawler. The balloonists vowed to try to cross the Atlantic again next year. (AP Laserphoto)

Balloonists Vow To Try Again

CONCARNEAU, France (UPI) — Two British adventurers, beaten by stormy weather in their bid to be the first to cross the Atlantic in a balloon, reached land in a French fishing boat early today and immedately vowed to try it again.

Tired but in good spirits, Donald Cameron, 37, and Christopher Davey, 34, pulled into the picturesque Brittany fishing port of Concarneau after midnight aboard the trawler Elsinor.

"Too bad, wasn't it?" Davey told waiting reporters. "We think we let everybody down."

The ship had plucked them from the sea Sunday after they were forced to ditch only 117 miles west of the port of Brest, a few hours from victory.

"Two Americans will launch in 10 days time," Cameron said with a smile. "If they fail, we'll definitely have a go next year. We've learned a lot on this trip in the way of technical equipment."

Though Davey and Cameron joined at least 13 other balloonists who tried in vain to cross the Atlantic, they set a distance record for a balloon flight of 1,805 nautical miles, spokesmen said at the Bracknell, England, control center which guided them.

"There's no way we could have carried on," Cameron said, "we simply ran out of ballast." The balloonists said they were defeated by storms, bad winds and an eight-foot rip in the inner bag of the canary yellow balloon.

The Englishmen had dumped equipment to lift the balloon to find a favorable wind, but the $275,000 craft could not rise higher. They ditched in the Atlantic three days, 23 hours and 30 minutes after the takeoff from St John's, Newfoundland Wednesday.

"When things started going wrong we stopped sleeping," Cameron said. "We worried as to whether we should sleep and we didn't. We slept only 6 1/2 hours on the entire flight."

During the crossing, a bird perched atop the alloon, the adventurers said.

"Initially I felt tremendously miserable when we were picked up," Cameron said. "We are fine now. We were marvelously received by the people on the French ship."

The men shaved, showered and ate hot soup aboard the rescue ship. Their navy blue peajackets and corduroy trousers were rumpled.

Despite the close quarters in the 14-foot red gondola, "we're still good friends," they said.

The Elsinor brought back the gondola and the balloon was taken by a British aircraft to Belfast.

House Sets Tax Action

AUSTIN (AP) — It was T-minus nine days and counting today as legislators in special session sought votes to adopt a tax relief program to please Gov. Dolph Briscoe.

The 30-day session must end by midnight Aug. 8, and nothing on Briscoe's lengthy agenda had received final legislative approval as the special session went into the last full week.

The Senate, perhaps in a mood of wishful thinking, voted to adjourn at 6 p.m. Tuesday. The House, however, has not set a time to quit.

Briscoe has the option of calling lawmakers back if their efforts do not satisfy him.

A now-you-have-it, now-you-don't 100th vote escaped Speaker Bill Clayton on Friday, but he predicted that the House today will get the two-thirds majority it needs to approve a property tax relief package.

The House and Senate also scheduled debate on a bill to consolidate all property appraisals for tax purposes within a county in a single countywide appraisal office.

The bill, by Rep. Wayne Peveto, D-Orange, also would establish a board to set statewide appraisal standards and issue manuals and forms to guide local appraisal offices.

Newlyweds Visit Grandmother

OCEAN CITY, N.J. (AP) — Ocean dips, lunchtime hoagies and family chatter filled the weekend for newlyweds Princess Caroline of Monaco and Phillipe Junot as they relaxed at the beachfront home of Caroline's maternal grandmother, Margaret Kelly.

PRINCESS CAROLINE

Caroline's mother, Princess Grace, joined the family reunion as she flew in from Minneapolis where she was attending a board meeting of 20th Century-Fox.

Mrs. Kelly, who will be 80 in December, was unable to attend the couple's wedding last month, so Caroline and Junot, following their Tahiti honeymoon, came to see her.

On Saturday night, Caroline and Junot presented a trophy to winning jockey Steve Cauthen and Mrs. Robert Levy, whose horse, Gay Jitterbug, won the Sunrise Handicap at the nearby Atlantic City race track.

Bobby Fischer Plays Computers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Anatoly Karpov and Viktor Korchnoi are battling for the world chess title, but the moody former champion, Bobby Fischer, lives as a recluse and apparently shuns chess matches — except with computers.

"I can say for a fact that he's played a game with a computer, which was published," said a longtime friend of Fischer's who asked not to be identified, "but he hasn't played a human being in six years."

Fischer, now 35, reportedly lives with an official of the Pasadena-based Worldwide Church of God, to which he has donated about $94,000.

In 1975 Fischer renounced his chess title and passed a chance at a purse of more than $3 million after the International Chess Federation refused to alter its rules to meet his conditions for a title defense against then-challenger Karpov.

His friend said that despite his rift with the chess federation, Fischer "has never lost interest in chess." Those who follow the game say he hasn't lost his talent either.

Driver In Queen's Motorcade Dies

MOOSE JAW, Saskatchewan (AP) — A routine trip to the local airport for Britain's Queen Elizabeth II took on tragic proportions when the driver of her motorcade's lead car apparently suffered a fatal heart attack and smashed his auto into a telephone pole.

QUEEN ELIZABETH

The car carrying the queen and her husband, Prince Philip, was not involved in the accident Sunday. But the queen's press secretary said the queen "couldn't fail to be aware of it."

Another spokesman said the queen would send condolences to the famiy of the driver, military warrant officer Norman Danny O' Donnell, 48.

He was pronounced dead at a nearby hospital.

The royal couple and their son Prince Edward were heading to the airport for a flight to Saskatoon.

Slow! Bee Crossing

WALLA WALLA, Wash. (AP) — You've seen highway deer crossings, even cow crossings. But a bee crossing?

The Lighter Side Of Today's News

Nine alfalfa farmers have asked Walla Walla County commissioners to post bee crossing signs to slow traffic that proves fatal to the pollinating alkali bees, which are choosy about which fields they frequent and follow cer-Charles Saranto, spokesman for the group, asked the county to place 20 mph speed limit signs on nearby roads to help cut down the number of bees that wind up mashed on vehicle radiators and windshields.

Farmers say they are stung economically by the loss of bees that pollinate their alfalfa. Each bee death means a $1 loss, they said.

Dennis Skeate, county engineer, said the state has no official bee signs, but he would post speed limits if farmers supply accompanying explanatory posters.

GOT A LIGHT? — The Federal Trade Commission, which for a decade has been giving us figures on the tar and nicotine levels in each brand of cigarettes, is now developing a testing machine taht will allow it to tell us about a new peril — carbon monoxide. FTC workers Gerald Merfeld and Harold Pillsbury examine the output of the machine at the agency's Washington headquarters. (AP Laserphoto)

Carbon Monoxide Tests Planned For Cigarettes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Opening another front in its war on smoking, the federal government plans to publicize a new peril — carbon monoxide — in hopes of prodding the tobacco industry to reduce that substance as it has tar and nicotine.

The Federal Trade Commission is currently developing a machine that tests the level of carbon monoxide smokers are inhaling. For a decade, the FTC has been providing figures on tar and nicotine levels.

FTC officials said the first test figures on carbon monoxide in each brand of cigarette are anticipated next year. Those figures are expected to be required in cigarette advertisements, just as tar and nicotine levels are now.

Researchers say carbon monoxide in cigarette smoke cuts down the amount of oxygen in the blood at the same time that the nicotine is increasing the heart's demand for oxygen.

FTC Chairman Michael Pertschuk said carbon monoxide had been singled out as another significant hazard in smoking by both the Public Health Service and the National Clearinghouse for Smoking and Health.

"It is based on their urging that we add carbon monoxide to the items to be tested and published," he said.

Federal officials have campaigned against smoking since the famous 1964 surgeon general's report linked it to major health problems. The tobacco industry insists that the scientific case showing smoking causes fatal diseases has not been proven.

Joseph A. Califano, secretary of health, education and welfare, stepped up the federal attack this year by launching a $30 million research and public education campaign against smoking.

The FTC's contribution is to publicize which cigarette brands are highest and which are lowest in tar and nicotine according to tests made in an FTC laboratory. The test results are required in cigarette advertisements. Many brands use the tar and nicotine levels in small print, but some low-tar cigarettes use their standing on the FTC rankings as a major selling point.

Pertschuk said the carbon monoxide figures when they are available will be another step in the FTC's policy of promoting development of less harmful cigarettes.

"The tar and nicotine findings have stimulated competition among cigarette companies for less hazardous cigarettes," Pertschuk said, adding that the level of smoking among Americans remains high.

More than 40 percent of the brands on the market now are considered low in tar and nicotine, a much larger percentage than when the FTC rankings first appeared in 1967.

Pertschuk said one brand, Carlton, appeared on the market a decade ago just in time to claim it was lowest in tar and nicotine.

"It appears to have established its presence by that claim, and other brands might be expected to do the same thing with carbon monoxide," he said.

The FTC chairman said that on a recent trip to Chicago he spent three days answering phones at the FTC regional office to see what kinds of consumer problems were being handled.

"One fellow called and said he wanted to quit smoking and asked what cigarette was lowest in tar and nicotine. I said under our tests it was Carlton."

Pertschuk said he suggested, without telling the caller that he was chairman of the agency, that he smoke several cartons of Carltons and then try to quit altogether. "That's what the scientists at HEW have told us to say," he said.

Claims For Protein Supplements Hit By Federal Trade Official

WASHINGTON (AP) — Protein supplements are sold to health food enthusiasts through misleading claims that sometimes are blatant misrepresentations, a federal official concludes after conducting extensive hearings.

Christopher W. Keller of the Federal Trade Commission said on Sunday that contemplated federal regulation of the advertising and labeling of protein supplements was supported by expert testimony during 25 days of hearings over which he presided.

Keller, however, refrained from endorsing the key part of the FTC's proposal. That would require this message in all advertisements and labels for the supplements:

"Protein supplements are unnecessary for most Americans. The U.S. Public Health Service has determined that the daily diet of most Americans provides adequate protein."

Keller said that statement is factually correct, but questioned whether it would solve the problem he found. He cited the health warnings on cigarette packages and said the suggested message on protein supplements could be just as ineffective.

Protein supplements are powders, liquids and pills made from protein isolates. They are sold primarily through health food stores and by door-to-door and mail-order sales.

During the hearings in Los Angeles, Boston, Washington and San Francisco, retailers of protein supplements and most health food consumers who submitted comments opposed the FTC proposal.

However, Keller said his role was to determine facts and that he had to rely on the many experts who appeared.

"Expert witnesses were consistent in their opinion that protein supplements have no significant nutritional benefits," he said.

"The record discloses no significant nutritional benefits from the consumption of protein supplements, as such. Any benefits from the use of protein supplements are equally true of consumption of protein from any other source," said Keller,

He said the hearings established that there is "widespread misrepresentation, both express and implied, of the protein need of most Americans."

Keller said, "Even the most cursory examination of the labels and advertising materials contained on this record demonstrates that protein supplements rely heavily in their appeal to the consumer upon misleading claims which range from subtle exaggeration to blatant misrepresentation."

Among the misleading labels and advertisements for protein supplements are claims that they will aid athletic performance or will help in losing weight, he said.

"Misconceptions about food and nutrition are especially prevalent among athletes and others involved in athletics," Keller said. He added, "The consumption of protein has no benefit in weight reduction."

The five-member FTC will vote on any regulation of protein supplements before it takes effect.

Alleged Murderer Getting New Trial

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — Juan Corona, the one-time farm labor contractor who insists he is innocent of murdering 25 migrant workers seven years ago, gets a second chance this week to clear himself.

Corona, 44, whose life-term conviction was reversed by the California Supreme Court, will be transferred from prison to Fairfield, Calif., where he will be arraigned Thursday in advance of a new trial.

Corona was found guilty by a jury at his first trial of hacking the transient laborers to death. Their bodies were unearthed one-by-one from shallow graves in peach orchards near the Sacramento Valley community of Yuba City in 1971.

At the time it was the largest mass killing in the nation's history.

Corona's wife Gloria, faithfully attended his four-month trial and declared tearfully after his conviction that the guilty verdict demonstrated there was "no justice" in the United States. She later divorced him.

Corona, a Mexican-born father of four daughters, has insisted all along he was not the killer.

His new chance for freedom will take place in the courtroom of Superior Court Judge Richard Patton.

The Supreme Court cleared the way for the new trial July 20 by refusing to review an appellate court ruling that Corona's lawyer, Richard Hawk, failed to provide an adequate defense at the first trial.

The state District Court of Appeal said Hawk, involved in writing a book about Corona, presented no defense witnesses and made no use of a "diminished mental capacity" defense despite a prison psychiatrist's finding that Corona suffered from "schizophrenia: paranoid type."

Ultimately, the appellate court faid, the first trial constituted a "farce and mockery."

Sutter County District Attorney Ted Hansen has assigned his top deputy to run the new trial. He also has hired a special prosecutor at $50 an hour and assembled a support staff of four others. The special prosecutor, Ronald W. Fahey, helped convict Corona the first time.

Corona, a janitor at the California Training Facility in Soledad, was described by prison officials as a "conforming, well-behaved inmate" with a penchant for privacy.

In 1973 he was attacked in a cell at the California Medical Facility in Vacaville, stabbed more than 30 times and blinded in one eye. Since then, he has been held in protective custody.

Authorities described Corona as a loner who speaks only to a few other convicts, makes an occasional class in geography and attends a weekly Roman Catholic mass.

"He is a decent person, a religious man with normal concerns," said Michael Mendelson, one of the two lawyers who won his new trial. "He is coherent, but he's worried. He's not sure what happened to his life."

Expensive Toys Attract Adults To Convention

DENVER (UPI) — The toys were of an expensive variety and not one of the 350 adults at the weekend convention were ashamed to admit playing with them.

However, Al Levin, 56, admitted he might have gone a bit overboard and pointed to his $35,000 worth of toy trains arranged on a display table.

"I never had a train when I was a kid, but I always wanted one," said the Baltimore photographer. "I sort of overreacted when I had the chance, and that's just a fraction of what I have at home."

C. A. Meyer of Glendale, Calif., readily admitted his infatuation with toy trains and said it probably resulted from being raised during the Depression.

"A lot of us grew up when your parents couldn't afford to get you what you wanted," he said. "Now, you can afford these things, so you get what you want."

Stu Sutton of Aurora, Colo., a coordinator of the convention, had no easy explanation for his fascination with the toys.

"I have liked trains since I knew there were trains," he said. "Hasn't everybody?"

Robert McBratney of Yuba City, Calif., said his buying and selling of antique trains had earned him a living since he retired from the Air Force 15 years ago.

"We go to conventions like this and sell enough to meet expenses and have a good time," McBratney said. "I had to construct a whole building at my house to hold my collection.

"It's crazy, there's a thousand lunatics in this room," he said. "But they're enjoying themselves."

Sandy Adams of Energy, Ill., who wore a button reading, "Pray for me, my husband collects toy trains," said she had two reasons for enjoying the hobby.

"It gets me out of the house to meet other people," she said. "And I always know where my husband is at night. He's down in the basement with his trains."

Officials Leave Safety Tests To Owners

ATLANTA (AP) — Because of a lack of manpower and expertise, state and local authorities say they probably will continue to rely on amusement park owners to make sure their rides are safe.

The issue of amusement park ride safety surfaced again last week when three persons were killed after a cable car at Six Flags Over Mid-America in St. Louis slipped from the cable and fell 75 feet to the ground.

The accident prompted officials of Six Flags Over Georgia to close down a similar ride at the park near Atlanta.

The Georgia Office of Consumer Affairs will have the authority to inspect amusement rides in a few weeks when the agency is given the power to enforce federal product safety laws.

"But we have nobody who would know anything at all about how to inspect them," said state consumer affairs chief Tim Ryles.

According to Leslie Pounds, regional director for the federal Consumer Product Safety Commission in Atlanta, her office has the authority to make spot checks at amusement parks but lacks the manpower to do so.

"We are a very small agency," she said. "We have 126 investigators, which is only two people per state.

"We do not have the manpower to randomly go to amusement parks to check," she said.

Ryles said the safety of amusement rides concerns him, but added that the record of safety at amusement parks is "reasonably good."

A spokesman for Six Flags Over Georgia, Dave Kaplan, said park officials check rides for safety every day.

"In this business safety has to be a priority because public confidence is so important," he said.

"I think the safety record speaks for itself. It's something very rare when something like this (the St. Louis accident) happens. It's something we hate to see because it reflects on the whole industry," Kaplan said.

TV People Watching Trial With Interest

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The outcome of an $11 million negligence suit, charging that an NBC television movie inspired the rape of a 9-year-old girl on a San Francisco beach, could pose a huge question for the future of TV programming.

The trial begins today in San Francisco Superior Court.

Seeking $1 million in compensatory damages and $10 million in punitive damages, Valeria Niemi of San Francisco claims in her suit against NBC-TV and its local affiliate, KRON, that the three girls who raped her 9-year-old daughter were imitating a scene from the television movie "Born Innocent."

The film profiled the life of a runaway teen-ager, portrayed by actress Linda Blair, who was sexually assaulted during her stay in a reformatory.

Mrs. Niemi's daughter was attacked four days after the film was aired on Sept. 10, 1974.

At a pretrial news conference, NBC attorney Floyd Abrams said there are conflicting statements about whether the girls, and the boy who stood lookout for them, actually saw "Born Innocent." The four youngsters, aged 10 to 15 at the time of the attack, were charged in juvenile proceedings and put on probation.

Abrams said he would argue the film did not spawn the attack. He said a defeat in the case could have wide-reaching effects on television by intimidating future portrayals of "life as-it-is."

"We view this as a terribly significant First Amendment case dealing with constitutional rights of free expression," he said.

"If calling something negligence can open a wedge in the First Amendment then we think this would — not only for television by the way, but every other kind of media as well — create a big hole in the First Amendment," Abrams said.

"What I fear is that a loss in the case will necessarily lead to a kind of blandness, a kind of avoidance of television dealing with hard and real and poignant social problems," Abrams added.

Defense attorney Marvin Lewis said, "It's merely our contention that the particular scene, which was graphic and unnecessary for the telling of the plot, caused harm to an innocent victim."

Lewis contended that "there is no question that children and young people learn by imitation," saying that studies back him up.

The two-hour film, aired at 7:30 p.m. in some areas and 8 p.m. in others, helped force creation of "family-hour" programming, in which the FCC banned sex and violence in the early evening.

Last fall, 15-year-old Ronald Zamora was convicted in Miami of murdering an elderly woman neighbor, despite his lawyer's argument of insanity brought on by violence on television.

The judge in that case refused to allow the defense to present expert testimony on the effect of TV violence. Zamora is serving a life sentence in a juvenile facility.

Mrs. Niemi's suit was initially dismissed in 1976 by a state trial judge who ruled the litigation was barred by constitutional guarantees of free speech and free press.

But the state Court of Appeals overturned that decision, saying that dismissal of the suit violated the Niemi girl's right to a trial on the question of whether the movie provoked the rape. NBC then went to the U.S. Supreme Court, which refused to hear the appeal.

Abrams said the case poses a threat not only to the broadcast media but also to the printed word. He said the American Library Association feared a defeat in the case would make it impossible to determine what books to place in libraries that might not lead to imititive acts.

Jamaican Airline Resumes Service

NEW YORK (AP) — Flights between Jamaica and the United States and Europe are to resume following a contract agreement reached between Air Jamaica and its native Jamaican pilots, an Air Jamaica spokesman said.

A two-day sick-out had brought airline operations to a virtual standstill, said John Baumann, Air Jamaica's general manager for North American operations, who said flights would begin today.

Contract details were not announced Sunday, but the dispute reportedly stemmed from demands by Jamaicans requesting salaries equal to those paid the airline's American and Canadian employees.

Religious Items Taken By Thief

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — While he was helping a stalled motorist, Brookes Davis, Grace Lutheran Church's music director, had his briefcase stolen. He had left it next to his car in the church's parking lot.

The police said they hoped whoever had stolen it would make constructive use of its contents — numerous religious documents, religious sheet music, a prayer book and a Bible.

PAINTING STOLEN

HAMBURG, West Germany (AP) — A Degas, "Before the Mirror," and Renoir's "Portrait of Madame Leriaux" were among 22 paintings valued at $750,000 that were stolen from Hamburg's municipal museum. The museum's alarm system had been switched off for repairs. Officials believe the thieves, who broke in Saturday night, knew of this.

Local Vandals Damage Vehicle Windshields

Weekend property losses, in addition to the usual assortment of residential and business break-ins, included criminal mischief on Clovis Road.

According to reports, windshields of five vechiles were shattered by what appeared to be BB shot. The three cars and two pickups, complainants said, were parked at the side of Metro Catering and Gateway Conoco Station, both at 3301 Clovis Road.

In other reports, Robbie Lea Johnson told police someone pried her 2206 Cedar Ave. back door during the past weekend and, after ransacking her house, made off with $4,370 worth of property. Reports indicated the goods stolen included furniture, clothing, a washing machine and record player.

Walcy Askew of 2803 Ave. H said burglars got into his apartment Sunday and stole a shotgun, pistol and radio, with a total value at $365. The residence also reportedly was ransacked during the incident.

Whoever knocked out the front window of Bill's Drive-Inn at 901 Idalou Road early today reportedly got away with 20 pounds of hamburger meat and five boxes of potato chips.

Charles Hargrove of 5311 19th St. told officers a compressor was stolen from the back of his pickup parked in the 3300-block of Slide Road Sunday.

According to Antonio Garcia Jr. of 3320 1st Place, someone stole a $165 pistol from his van parked in the 2600-block of 3rd Street Sunday.

A 34-year-old city man accused of absconding with more than $19,000 from an East Lubbock supermarket continued to elude police Sunday.

Charles William Thompson, district manager of Piggly Wiggly Shop-Rite Foods, Inc., told police Thursday a named suspect had "absconded" with the money "while acting in his capacity as an employee" of the Piggly Wiggly store at 3101 E. 4th St.

Thompson said the incident apparently occurred between 3 p.m. and 6 p.m. July 21, but was not reported until Thursday.

Officers still were searching for the man late Sunday just as they were for an assailant who attacked 36-year-old Joe Juarez Sunday.

Juarez of 1514 32nd St. told police the man's daughters had been playing with his own outside their home about 11:35 a.m. Sunday when an argument erupted between the girls.

Juarez said the man's children ran home and soon after their father returned. When the children again began fighting, Juarez said the man jumped into the scuffle, then became enraged when Juarez tried to pull him off the children. Juarez said he was beaten severely by the man.

Earlier Sunday, officers investigating a reported prowler instead found a 19-year-old man sitting behind the wheel of a car parked in the 1100-block of 58th St.

The man was arrested for possession of marijuana after he allowed officers to search his car. Police reports indicate the officers discovered a plastic bag of suspected marijuana in the auto's glove compartment.

A 36-to-45-year-old man, however, eluded police Sunday after indecently exposing himself to several children about 9 p.m. Saturday, near 66th Street and Elgin Avenue.

Burglars literally backed a truck up to the doors of Clyde P. Perkins' 1320 Ave. Q music store late Saturday or early Sunday, then carted off an estimated $2,953 in musical equipment.

BRINKS FILM SCENE — During this segment of the latest film version of the Boston Brinks robbery of Jan. 17, 1950, members of the gang "fight" with one another. The scene was being filmed Friday in South Boston, while at the same time in downtown Boston, robbers barged into an editing room and fled with $100,000 worth of freshly shot film. The robbers handcuffed four movie editors and escaped with 13 reels of film. (AP Laserphoto)

'Sting' Operations Net 3,699 Suspects

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government says it helped finance 50 undercover "sting" operations that recovered $114 million worth of stolen property and involved 3,699 arrests in 33 cities during the past three years.

By posing as criminals in these operations, federal and local law enforcement officials have broken up theft and hijacking rings and solved unrelated crimes including rapes, assaults and murders, a government report said Sunday.

Under the sting concept, police or federal agents set up phony businesses or fences to pay cash for stolen goods. The thieves, burglars and racketeers who bring in stolen goods to be fenced frequently stop to chat about a wide variety of criminal activity.

As the underworld figures sell their loot and pass along what they know of other crimes, a hidden camera secretly records the entire sequence on films that are used later for trial evidence.

When the officers finally close their "business," they arrest their former customers.

The Law Enforcement Assistance Administration described the operations in a report on 50 undercover projects it has helped financed in 33 cities during the past three years.

With only $3.2 million in "buy" money furnished by the LEAA, federal and local undercover officers have recoved $114 million worth of stolen property and made 3,699 arrests, the report said.

The loot included hijacked truckloads of television sets and other new merchandise, bogus certified cheeks and money orders, a painting stolen from a museum in Paris and hoards of valuables burglarized from homes.

The conviction rate thus far has been 98 percent, a high percentage resulting from guilty pleas, the LEAA said.

Acting Administrator James M.H. Gregg said, "the stings are gaining in popularity with federal, state and local law enforcement officials because they have proven their worth .. They have the capability to net hard-core criminals by the hundreds and recover stolen property in the millions."

"Besides that, stings have helped solve hijackings, crack auto theft rings, solve other crimes such as murder, assault and rape, and they have gathered invaluable criminal intelligence information on the inner workings of organized crime," he said.

The largest sting thus far was staged in Los Angeles County, where the FBI and 33 sheriff's deputies set up business in seven store fronts for 22 months, Gregg said. They bought $42 million worth of property for only $450,000.

According to James O. Golden, LEAA project director, the officers try to return the stolen property to its owners after the operation is over but it is often difficult to trace.

"Citizens and manufacturers who inscribe their property with identifying numbers and keep accurate records stand a good chance of getting property returned from sting warehouses," Golden said. "Others don't."

Judges Group Recommends TV In Court

BURLINGTON, Vt. (AP) — The executive committee of the national Conference of Supreme Court Chief Justices has recommended that television, radio and photographic equipment be allowed in the nation's courtrooms.

If approved by the full conference this week, the resolution would call for an amendment to the Code of Judicial Conduct to allow such news coverage "under guidelines that would preserve the decorum and fairness of our judicial proceedings."

The conference is meeting this week in Burlington. Coordinator Marna Chater said 50 states, four territories and the District of Columbia are represented at the meeting.

The proposed resolution is the work of a 16-member study committee chaired by Justice Benjamin Overton of Florida, where television cameras have been permitted under an experimental pilot program.

The recommendation follows a year-long study of media coverage in the courts.

Chief Justice Albert Barney of the Vermont Supreme Court, the host of the judicial gathering, said he has strong reservations about the prospect of expanded news coverage in the courts.

But he said Vermont's court system, which currently bans cameras from trials, is prepared to ease its rules.

Colorado Chief Justice Edward Pringle said television coverage "lets the public know that trials are not conducted in the Perry Mason manner."

"You don't solve the murder on the witness stand," he said.

Neighborhood Storekeeper Plays Self In Brinks Robbery Film

BOSTON (AP) — On a cold, drizzly night 28 years ago, storekeeper Peppy Cavallo watched as police cars clogged his neighborhood streets. He had just missed what was then the largest armed robbery in American history — the $1.2 million Brink's holdup.

Today, the peppery 62-year-old still runs his tiny corner store in Boston's predominantly Italian North End. He also is playing himself in a film version of the stickup that is costing nine times what the holdup men got away with — and which last Friday was set back by a Brink's-type heist of its own.

Three thieves broke into a downtown editing studio, handcuffed several employees and escaped with 15 reels of "rough cut" — partially edited film.

"All we lost is time," director William Friedkin said of the three months of editing that went into the stolen film. "But time is money in the film business."

The producers of "Brink's," which stars Peter Falk, say they consulted thousands of photographs taken by police and the FBI to accurately reproduce scenery to look like it did Jan. 17, 1950.

But Friedkin also interviewed Cavallo, because he is believed to have been the first local resident to find out about the holdup.

"There was nobody on the street," Cavallo recalled, while haggling with a member of the film crew over the price of a case of fruit juice.

"Within a half-hour, the street was loaded with people like they came out of the woodwork. ... They hit it on a Tuesday night, but if they had hit it on a Thursday night — the day before payrolls went out — they'd have had $10 million," Cavallo said.

"I watch my store with maybe $500 worth of groceries more than they watched their $1 million," Cavallo said of 1950 security at Brink's.

The film's director of publicity, Leo Janos, said that while the producers are attempting to accurately portray what really happened, the movie also is an expansion of the book "Big Stickup at Brink's" by Noel Behn.

"A certain amount of license is being taken," Janos said. "Nobody wants to see a movie where all you show is what happened. You have to expand the characters a little. We're playing it almost as a farce. So much of it was 'Loony Tunes.'"

Janos said it took the thieves seconds to pick the lock on the safe, but police had to smash it open with sledgehammers.

"A lot of the movie is accurate," said Cavallo, one of many North End residents hired as extras. "They put a little comedy in it, though.

"There was one scene where I told them there were too many people. I'm no director, but I told them and they changed it. But I saw 40, 50 scenes and that was the only one that didn't look kosher."

"For a lot of reasons, this was America's favorite crime," Janos said. "Nobody was hurt, all the robbers were lower class people from the neighborhood who were underdogs, and they became heroes.

"But they weren't all that colorful, and we had to develop the personalities."

Bond Claims President Slow To Help Blacks

BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI) — Georgia state Sen. Julian Bond, saying blacks still are 30 years behind whites in earning power, attacked the Carter administration for meager efforts to combat the problems of the poor.

"That's a cancer no surgeon can cure," Bond told the Louisiana Black Assembly during the weekend. "We are the last hired and the first fired, we are poor out of proportion to our numbers, we are hungry despite integration of lunch counters, we are ignorant despite integration of schools.

"Much like ants in an invisible bottle, we black Americans are held back by walls we cannot see, but feel just as if they were made of steel."

Bond said a Rand Corporation survey shows blacks comprise just 1 percent of the engineers, 2 percent of the doctors, 3 percent of the administrators and 6 percent of the craftsmen, Bond said.

Calling Carter, a former Georgia governor, "the man who knows the words to our hymns, but not the numbers on our paychecks," Bond criticized the president for weakening the full-employment Humphrey-Hawkins bill into a measure supporting lower unemployment levels. Bond said the poor need a strong public works program.

Bond attacked Carter's urban policy as "a Band-aid for an amputation" and said blacks have been deceived by Carter's promises of handling the problems of the poor.

"Many of you thought you were voting for the Waltons," Bond said, "and you have sadly discovered you were voting for the Yokums instead."

Bond labeled the 1970s the "Age of Scarcity" and warned that continued cutbacks in social security, welfare and Medicaid were ahead. He said social programs designed to uplift the poor fell into disfavor during the Vietnam War.

A DAILY MESSAGE FROM The Newspaper Bible©

Mark II: 7-23, The Living Bible

7 So the colt was brought to Jesus and the disciples threw their cloaks across its back for Him to ride on.
8 Then many in the crowd spread out their coats along the road before Him, while others threw down leafy branches from the fields.
9 He was in the center of the procession with crowds ahead and behind, and all of them shouting, "Long live the King!" "Blessed is He who comes in the name of the Lord!"...
10 "Blessed is the Kingdom He is bringing, the Kingdom of our father David!"..."God save the King!"
11 And so He entered Jerusalem and went into the Temple. He looked around carefully at everything and then left—for now it was late in the afternoon—and went out to Bethany with the twelve disciples.
12 The next morning as they left Bethany, He felt hungry.
13 A little way off He noticed a fig tree in full leaf, so He went over to see if He could find any figs on it. But no, there were only leaves, for it was too early in the season for fruit.
14 Then Jesus said to the tree, "You shall never bear fruit again!" And the disciples heard Him say it.
15 When they arrived back to Jerusalem He went to the Temple and began to drive out the merchants and their customers, and knocked over the tables of the moneychangers and the stalls of those selling doves,
16 And stopped everyone from bringing in loads of merchandise.
17 He told them, "It is written in the Scriptures, 'My Temple is to be a place of prayer for all nations,' but you have turned it into a den of robbers."
18 When the chief priests and other Jewish leaders heard what He had done they began planning how best to get rid of Him. Their problem was their fear of riots because the people were so enthusiastic about Jesus' teaching.
19 That evening as usual they left the city.
20 Next morning, as the disciples passed the fig tree He had cursed, they saw that it was withered from the roots!
21 Then Peter remembered what Jesus had said to the tree on the previous day, and exclaimed, "Look, Teacher! The fig tree You cursed has withered!"
22,23 In reply Jesus said to the disciples, "If you only have faith in God—this is the absolute truth—you can say to this Mount of Olives, 'Rise up and fall into the Mediterranean,' and your command will be obeyed. All that's required is that you really believe and have no doubt!

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

Crisis For Another Day?

AS IT TURNS out, the postal workers settlement is a draw with a time limit.

No one is really satisfied, particularly union members who choose to express their disapproval via sporadic work stoppages or slow-downs.

Although the unions are getting less than the 14 percent annual increases first demanded, they do have a three-year guarantee against mass staff reductions resulting from automation.

We ought to know better than to believe management's optimism that it held the settlement within limits which will not necessitate a postage rate increase for the duration of the contract. There may be an Easter bunny, too.

THE REAL achievement then may be in having bought time, three crisis-free years in which to reorganize the postal structure and operations.

Technological innovation should begin to yield some dividends. The service is beginning to experiment with electronic message transmission, including use of satellites in international communication.

Such innovations, and increased use by private business of telephone-line facsimile systems, may have some effect in decreasing the cumbersome and costly physical moving about of mass quantities of paper.

Postal managers, however, believe the greatest improvements in both efficiency and cost effectiveness will come from increased mechanization and automation in mail handling.

PERSONNEL COSTS account for 85 percent of the Postal Service's current $17 billion budget, almost 1 percent of the gross national product.

Some 90,000 jobs have been trimmed, largely through attrition, during the past several years.

In coming years, the service wants to be in a position to make further deep cuts in the present 700,000 staff as technological advances make this possible.

Which means the no-layoff clause, which union members see as their real victory in this contract, could be the do-or-die issue for both sides next time.

Therefore, for the public and the Postal Service, the real crisis may come three years from now.

Tax Cut Gets Blood

MY NEIGHBOR Twice Removed says he 'preciates the thought but he just can't afford many more of those tax "cuts" like the school trustees are foisting off on him.

This year, his house was assessed at $15,000 and his school taxes, at a rate of $1.58 per hundred-dollar valuation, were $237.

After a 65 percent increase in valuation and an 18-cent cut in the rate, his school taxes next year will be $346.

According to the Old Math he learned years ago, that's $109 more that the tax "cut" will cost him.

Pshaw, neighbor, don't you know that the schools are doing a better job of teaching math now than they did when you went to school?

★

School teachers aren't overpaid but neither are they as underpaid as their constant noise-making has led many taxpayers to believe. Merit makes no difference in pay. Any run-of-the-mill teacher here can work up to a salary of $16,565 for 10 months (which includes Christmas and Spring vacations), the day-to-day equal of $19,878 on a 12-month job.

★

BUD JOHNSON is a retired barber whose retirement years at 2518 26th St. have been marred by "weeds as high as your head" in alleys nearby.

"I've reported the condition to City Hall three or four times but they don't seem to get anything done about it," Johnson tells me. "It's been bad for three years."

In their budget-cutting studies, city councilmen are considering a reduction in the already-pathetic attempts to get property owners to cut their weeds.

"Tell 'em what they're doing to a bunch of retired folks" who just want a pleasant environment in which to live, Johnson asks.

Rather than cut the weed-control program, City Hall might consider stepping it up—and getting the extra money by "socking it" to property owners who fail to keep their alley, yard and curbside weeds cut.

★

El Paso firemen demanded a free annual physical examination to prove they're healthy instead of an annual agility test to prove they're able to fight fires.

★

U.S. women soldiers in West Germany objected to sharing sleeping tents with male soldiers on manuevers. They insisted the Army doesn't have blanket authority in equal rights enforcement.

★

THAT SUIT TO force a race-conscious ward system on Lubbock for the election of school trustees appears to run at cross-purposes with the entire civil rights movement.

It is especially incongruous that the same federal court which only recently ordered that racially identifiable schools be integrated now is being asked that school trustee posts be segregated by race.

The suit was filed as a class action by a group of blacks and browns arguing that racial minorities here "suffer the indignity and humiliation of second-class citizenship which is affixed to them as a painful and degrading badge of slavery."

Now, that's pretty strong language. And it's particularly vulnerable to rebuttal in light of the fact that one Mexican-American now serves on the seven-member Board of Trustees which, until recently, also included a Negro member.

MRS. JOAN ERVIN, in fact, was elected and re-elected to the school board, not just because she was black but because the voters believed she was qualified.

She might have been re-elected again had she attended meetings with greater regularity and had she not initially announced she would not run again.

In any case, just because a black or a brown loses an election is no basis for claiming that "equal access to the political system" has been denied.

Public officials should be elected on their merits, not on the color of their skin.

A ward system designed to guarantee, or effectively assure, that a certain number of racial minorities will be elected should be anathema to anyone who believes in racial equality.

IN THE ALLAN BAKKE case, the Supreme Court itself said in a split decision that racial goals or quotas are unconstitutional.

Federal Judge Halbert O. Woodward ruled in the Lubbock school desegregation case that classrooms which were racially identifiable because of past public policy must be integrated.

It would be inherently contradictory for him now to rule that the school board itself must, as public policy, be divided up into racially identifiable districts.

Holmes Alexander:

Toxic Dust Takes Breath Away

WASHINGTON—Rep. Morris Udall, chairman of the energy and environmental subcommittee as well as of the parent Interior Committee, is up against one of the iron laws of nature, for the universe abhors a vacuum and also a standstill.

In other words, there is no stopping the nuclear juggernaut which we have now industrialized, having first militarized it, and Chairman Udall is riding a conveyor belt which can't be turned off or put into reverse.

Mo Udall presides over hearings on his bill (H.R. 12535) which addresses part of a larger problem—what do we do about atomic waste material.

When uranium, the basic ore, is processed most of the waste flows off in fuming lava streams and can be contained (the scientists hope) in salt mines for the time being.

UDALL'S IMMEDIATE problem is not so sensational, but has toxic and lethal consequences just the same. There are 22 inactive sites where "tailings," a sort of nuclear chaff, have been left behind.

These tailings are alive, or radioactive, for centuries and the alarmist viewpoint is that they contaminate soil and water to the detriment of all vegetable and animal life.

Question: How does Congress write legislation on such a problem? Udall the other day had witnesses with proposed solutions which the public ought to know more about if only to monitor the energetic atom which is not going to stop growing and turning up more complications as the world spins on.

UDALL'S FIRST witness was Dr. Joseph Hendric, chairman of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission. In our place in this universe, mankind is a puny being, and I suppose it's cosmicly laughable to suppose that congressional legislation can be considered as a form of scientific government. But we've got to try.

Dr. Hendric would like the law to keep the most busybody unit in government, the Environmental Protection Agency, at arms' length. Anything that EPA lays a hand to becomes a greater problem than it was before.

If there is an alternative route for the Nuclear Regulatory Commission to take, it is to hand the disposal of the mill tailings over to the states.

This would mean that, however delicate and difficult the work might be, it would be attempted by persons who live on or near the mill sites, have more incentive to learn the know-how than a federal office at 1717 Pennsylvania Avenue, where the Nuclear Regulatory Commission's headquarters are.

As it happens, a beginning has been made in the right direction. New Mexico, Texas, Colorado and Washington state license nine mills between them, and therefore share responsibility with the federal government. There are nine other mills in several states, which are solely licensed by the central government.

Udall's subcommittee hearings this far deal only with energy and environment, but there is a danger that Congress must give attention to physical safeguards of the nuclear industry.

The loose notion that malevolent persons can penetrate a guarded nuclear plant and steal enough material to produce home-made bombs is probably a bogeyman scare.

But even a failed attempt by such persons would be spectacular, give encouragement to cracked minds and set the advanced industry back by decades. Only one thing is certain about nuclear security is the uncertainty itself.

Sewer Service Gets Debtors In Deeper

(First of two related columns)

MOST PEOPLE SUED for not paying bills in New York, Chicago, Detroit and Philadelphia did not even know they were being sued until there already was a judgment against them!

Less than 1 percent actually had a trial before the court, although at least 25 percent of the victims felt they had a legitimate complaint or valid reason for not paying.

Folklore in our country holds that the lone "disaster area" in our justice system is in the criminal courts or relates to complaints about court congestion or overloaded dockets.

BUT A LANDMARK study, "Consumers in Trouble; A Study of Debtors in Default," by David Caplovitz, pulverizes these comfortable myths with such findings as the above.

A few miniscule steps have been taken since the Caplovitz study was released back in 1974 to deal with the most outward symptom of this problem—the phenomenon of "sewer service."

This gets its ugly name from the practice under which certain process servers throw summonses into the sewer instead of giving them to the person supposed to be told to appear in court.

Legal experts in most areas of this country scoff at the "sewer service" problem as non-existent in their regions. Yet the Caplovitz study documents the fact that the problem is nationwide.

THE REASON THE legal experts are so unaware of the problem is that the victims of this filthy practice are at the bottom of the pile, and consist of citizens who don't know how to complain, to whom, or where—and who also think (rightly, in most cases) that complaints from them wouldn't accomplish anything.

Consumer protection agencies usually are in touch with sophisticated middle-class citizens who complain at once when something goes wrong, but they are almost entirely out of touch with the segment of the American population most victimized by these abuses.

Even in New York and a scattered minority of other cities which have tried to attack the outer layer of the "sewer service" phenomenon, the number of consumers getting a day in court has risen only a tiny bit.

The explanation is that many other obstacles must be overcome before the consumer gets a day in court. The consumer must, for instance:

* UNDERSTAND THE summons—usually written in legal bafflegab—assuming he or she gets one;

* Overcome the fear of court and judges prevalent in the depressed segments of many communities;

* Know whether there is a valid excuse for not paying, which is not as automatic as you may think, because many believe that if they signed a contract they must pay;

* Have some knowledge about such basic legal excuses as fraud, breach of warranty and whether a contract is, in fact, unconscionable;

* Be able to find the courthouse, take time off from work or hire a babysitter in many cases to get there, be prepared to come back to court several times before the case is finished;

* Get a lawyer or be able to pick a proper way through a maze of legal procedure without expert help, neither of which may be at all feasible or even possible.

Legal Aid and Legal Services resources are stretched to the limit by landlord-tenant domestic relations, criminal representations and other assignments, and consumer defense often is indeed at the absolute low on the lists.

MOREOVER, MANY "working poor" are just above the income limits for obtaining free legal advice—and yet these Americans just cannot afford their own lawyers for the fees that must be charged for appearing in court.

Although largely unnoticed, the Caplovitz study has the potentials of a powerful bomb—if it ever goes off. The legal system in general has been prepared to sweep this uncomfortable problem under the rug.

Many undoubtedly would prefer this bombshell by the man who also wrote "The Poor Pay More" to be placed quietly in the archives, there to be defused and never to be brought to your attention. But obviously, I'm not letting this happen.

James J. Kilpatrick:

Heaven Can Wait...On Heather

SCRABBLE, VA.—Heather, my love:

You know what you remind me of? You remind me of the wild chicory that every summer grows along our Blue Ridge Mountain roads.

It grows tall and leggy and exuberantly, and it is topped by blue flowers that almost match the color of your eyes.

Chicory is irrepressible, my love, and so are you.

This has been quite a year for you, the year between seven and eight. You have learned to read —really, truly read—and now you can read almost anything that comes along.

You will read "exuberantly" in the second paragraph, sounding out the syllables one at a time, and when you have the word licked you will ask someone what it means.

You have had an inquisitive cast of mind ever since you were in the two-year-old stage of "why?", and you seem to get more inquisitive all the time.

YOU ALSO HAVE learned to write, really to write, in whole sentences that are spelled correctly even if the penmanship is still a little wobbly.

This summer, as part of your second-grade homework, you are keeping a journal of two sentences a day. I like some of your sentences better than some of mine:

"We brought our dog Bess to a picnic. At the picnic everybody got wet." That tells the whole story.

"I counted 30 strikes of lightning. Mike got bored." A strike of lightning is far superior to a stroke of lightning or a bolt of lightning.

For the record, I note that much of your summer journal deals with food. Are eight-year-old girls always hungry? I expect so.

ON THE LAST DAY of camp, "we won the watermelon." On June 28, "I had a bubblegum ice cream." That is positively the most appalling thought your grandfather has had all day.

"I made cookies with Linda." That is better. "We went blackberry picking." You did indeed, and you came home chigger-bit all over.

I saw nothing in your journal about the accident in June, when you cut your foot so badly on the backyard carousel, and maybe this was because you knew you were wrong and were ashamed to record the facts.

You tried to stand in the middle of the turning mechanism, and you were lucky not to lose a foot. On July 6, "I got my stitches out." Okay. But it was a dumb thing you did.

Otherwise it was a happy year for you.

YOU ACQUIRED A black Lab puppy, name of Bess. You found a snakeskin just after the snake had shed it—a perfect skin, head and eyes, still warm—and you and your father measured it with a carpenter's rule: Five feet, 10 inches. Some snake!

You did your chores at the farm, and you did them happily.

You got along better with younger brother Douglas, and you began to get little-girl conscious of how your hair looks and whether your dress is okay for church.

One evening a week or so ago, you came bursting into the kitchen, all flying legs and arms, to tell us about the canoe trip.

You and Douglas and your father had gone up near Harpers Ferry, and stayed in a big orange tent full of chiggers, mosquitoes and spiders, and Saturday morning you took your position in the bow of the canoe, with Douglas in the middle and your father in the stern, and you headed down the Potomac.

"FOR A LONG TIME it was all flat water, all dull and plain and yucchy, but it was clean and we went swimming. Then about 2 o'clock we got to the White Horse Rapids, and that was great.

"One boat flipped over. Fourteen canoes gave up, but we kept on going. It was a little scary, but not much. Then we ran the Devil's Staircase.

"About 5 o'clock we pulled out of the river, and we ate hot dogs, spaghetti and baked beans.

"We slept in the big orange tent and Sunday morning we ran the Shenandoah—a mile of flat water and then Bull Falls! Whee!"

You told us all about it, with your eyes shining and your hands making white-water rapids in the air, and then you saw lightning bugs outside and ran out to catch a few in order to make a lantern from a Mason jar. These are nice things to remember.

You are eight, Heather, and you are loved.

—Grandfather

Panel Seeks Aid In Identification

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Millions of Americans were asked to help today in identifying blurred photographs and sketches of mystery men connected to the murders of John F. Kennedy and Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

The Assassinations Committee Sunday made public two composite drawings and three blurred photographs "to make best possible use of available pictorial evidence and photographic techniques ... in the hope that citizen recognition of them might shed additional light on the assassinations of ... Kennedy and King."

Anyone recognizing any of the men depicted have been asked to contact the House Select Committee on Assassinations, Wauhington, D.C. 20515, and submit any pictures they may have of the subjects.

Proven linkage of any of the men to the Kennedy and King cases case would directly challenge the still unrefuted conclusion by the Warren Commission that Lee Harvey Ofwald acted alone in killing Kennedy in Dallas Nov. 22, 1963; and the guilty plea by escaped convict James Earl Ray that he murdered King in Memphis, Tenn., April 4, 1968.

Ray is serving a 99-year sentence in Brushy Mountain Prison at Petros, Tenn., but has since changed his story and is seeking a new trial on the ground he was the "fall guy" for a mysterious Canadian smuggler named "Raoul" who has never been identified.

First formed Sept. 17, 1976, to investigate persistent rumors of conspiracies in both murders, the House assassinations panel so far has failed to come up with anything concrete to dispute the "lone assassin" theses.

A series of public hearings is scheduled on both cases in August, September, November and December, when all "new" evidence will be reviewed and many witnesses, including Ray, will be recalled for testimony.

The three photographs relaased by the committee Sunday included a blurred image of a dark-haired man, possibly with mustache, sitting on a curb with a group whose faces do not show. The committee caption said only that the picture was taken in Dealey Plaza "moments after President Kennedy was shot."

The other two photographs, according to the committee, are "of two men who may have been in Mexico City in the fall of 1963 when Lee Harvey Oswald ... was there."

One photograph shows a handsome, apparently blond-haired man in his 20s or early 30s. He appears to be wearing a jacket over a dark turtleneck sweater or pullover.

The other photograph, badly scratched and blurred, is a side shot of a light or gray-haired, aquiline-nosed man who could be in his late 40s or 50s. He wears a light suit, shirt and tie. The face of a man leaning beside his left side is obscured.

A sketch, captioned "Ralph," shows a middle-aged, dark-haired, square-jawed man with high cheekbones "who allegedly was in Atlanta in 1967 or 1968."

The other composite drawing, captioned "Maurice Bishop," shows a man with close-cropped hair bearing a resemblance to Prince Philip, husband of Queen Elizabeth of England.

The committee said this man "reportedly represented himself as a member of the U.S. intelligence community in the 1960s and ... on occasion used the name Maurice Bishop."

CLIMBERS KILLED

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Seven climbers were killed in the Swiss Alps during the weekend amid fine summer weather. Police said three men including a Japanese were killed on the Matterhorn, two West Germans died in a snowslide below the Eiger, an Englishman was killed on the north face of the Grand Cornier and the seventh man fell to his death in the Uri Alps.

Regulation Will Help Antitrust Enforcement

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is moving to prevent "midnight mergers" that are consummated before federal antitrust lawyers know they are in the works.

A regulation scheduled for publication today requires advance notice of major mergers to both of the government agencies that have antitrust authority.

"This is a very important enforcement tool," said Mark Sheehan, a spokesman for the Justice Department's antitrust division. "Antitrust law is littered with cases of midnight mergers, where the object was not to let the government know until it had a fait accompli (accomplished fact).

"The enforcement agencies then had to try to figure out how to unscramble the eggs of the combined assets and combined management," he said.

The regulation, the joint product of the Justice Department and the Federal Trade Commission, requires that both be told of such mergers at least 30 days in advance so that the action can be challenged in advance.

When the regulation takes effect, 30 days after publication in the Federal Register, a company with assets of more than $100 million acquiring control over a company with assets of more than $10 million will have to give advance notification.

In telling their plans, the companies will have to file a detailed 21-page form with both agencies.

Either agency could then go to court seeking a preliminary injunction to block any proposed merger considered a threat to a competitive marketplace.

Daniel C. Schwartz, deputy director of the FTC's antitrust arm, estimated that about 500 transactions each year will require advance notification.

One example of a large corporate merger that would have required advance notification was the acquisition by International Telephone and Telegraph of Hartford Insurance Co., an action that led to lengthy litigation over divestiture.

There will be a transition period for some mergers, but the regulation is expected to be totally effective by Sept. 29, Schwartz said.

The regulation is backed up by fines of up to $10,000 per day for non-compliance, Schwartz said. "We expect to apply that very stringently," he said.

A legal challenge of the requirement by major businesses is considered likely. But Schwartz expressed confidence that it would be upheld by the courts.

Biorhythm Reminders Posted With Employee Safety Notes

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Something new is being tacked among the usual safety notices and crew reminders on bulletin boards of several oil rigs in the Gulf of Mexico — "critical days" drawn from biorhythm charts of the workers.

It's part of a new experiment by Shell Oil to see whether biorhythms, a theory that recently has hit a wave of popularity like fad foods or astrology, can be useful in preventing accidents among industrial workers.

No results are in yet, but Shell safety specialist Rupert Turner said the program is worth a try.

"We recognize going into it that it doesn't have any kind of satisfactory, scientific basis," Turner said. "We recognize also that other people have used it. It has reduced accidents (elsewhere) and if it has some value, we're going to use it and keep some people from getting hurt."

The theory of biorhythms states that behavior moves in recurring waves — from high to low and back again, with the "zero," or "critical" point between them. The physical cycle runs 23 days, the emotional 28 days and the intellectual 33 days.

If all three cycles cross into the critical zone on the same day, it's considered by adherents to be a good day to stay in bed.

Many companies, both domestic and foreign, have experimented with biorhythm safety programs with some success. Turner said he believes Shell's — which is being conducted with 200 employees of the Marlin, Bay Marchand, Rig 11 and Rig 21 units — is the first in the offshore oil and gas field.

The employees' birth dates are fed to a Shell computer, which figures the biorhythms. "Critical days" then are posted on charts.

Turner said success of the program at other companies may have been self-generated — that by posting "critical days" and warning employees to be extra cautious may have reduced accidents whether or not they actually were days on which employees were accident-prone.

Employees asked to participate in the voluntary Shell program had mixed reactions, Turner said, with some strongly favoring it and others looking on it skeptically as a form of horoscope or black magic.

The company plans a one-year experiment, after which the safety records of the 200 employees will be compared with other employees'. Turner said it will be difficult to determine if the program has been successful, but if it proves effective it may be expanded and used throughout the company.

"If it's just a gimmick we don't want to use it, because we don't want to be involved in something that's dishonest," he said.

"How do I feel about it personally? I have reservations about it. The only reason we're looking at it is that other industial corporations, some of the large ones, have utilized it in their safety programs and it is showing results."

Journal Proliferation Blasted By Editor

BOSTON (UPI) — There are too many medical journals, causing sloppy and sometimes dubious medical research to find its way into print at the public's expense, says the editor of the prestigious Naw England Journal of Medicine.

Dr. Arnold S. Relman says a persistent researcher can go from journal to journal and eventually get something published.

He said the issue is more serious than overcrowded bookshelves in medical libraries because published research guides medical treatment.

"I think it's an important problem and I don't think it's understood well enough," Relman said during an interview held after an editorial he wrote on the subject appeared in last week's Journal.

The editorial, called "Are we a filter or a sponge?" cited the "rising flood of medical literature" and suggested medical journal editors meet regularly to discuss what they are going to publish and weed out bad research.

"I think this would go a long way to improving the filtering and reducing the sponge-like functions of the system," Relman said.

The Journal editor said there is no accurate count of the overwhelming amount of biomedical journals published in the world. About 5,000 such publications are received by the Harvard University medical library. The Index Medicus publishes one-paragraph summaries from about half that number, which amounts to a quarter-million summaries a year.

"There are far more journals than are useful," Relman said.

Relman says part of the problem is just "needless duplication." But he says a shoddy piece of research that winds up in print is a worse situation.

The job of processing a typical manuscript at the New England Journal takes from four to six weeks. Relman said the magazine rejects 85 percent of all articles submitted, and three to five reports of original research wind up being published in each weekly issue.

Relman said Journal articles aren't guaranteed to be infallible.

"We don't guarantee the authors are right," he said. "All we're saying is that in the opinion of competent experts who have no special ax to grind, this paper reports work that seems to hava been done properly, is original, well-written and appears to be worth reading."

Demos Battle 'Tax Squads'

By CLAY F. RICHARDS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — While Proposition 13 fever is sweeping the country, the Democratic National Committee is mobilizing a modest campaign against the current wave of Republican-backed federal tax cut legislation.

The GOP is chartering two jet planes to send "tax squads" around the nation preaching in favor of billion dollar tax cut legislation: the poverty stricken Democrats are using one man and the U.S. mails to get their message through.

The main targets of the Democratic campaign are the so-called Steiger amendment which would cut the capital gains tax, and the Kemp-Roth bill which would cut income tax rates by 30 percent over a three year period.

The GOP has made the two bills the cornerstone of its fall election campaign. The Republicans hope the tax cut issue can be used in the November elections to cut heavily into the Democrats' domination of Congress.

National party chairman John White is the Democrat's one man "tax squad." Flying in tourist class on commercial airlines, White is touring the country to speak at party gatherings. His message these days is almost entirely devoted to the tax cut question.

Kemp-Roth, he says, would cause runaway inflation.

"That single inflation point alone is sheer recklessness, and an example of the shortsightedness of the Republicans," he said. "They are interested in the 'quick-fix.'"

He calls the Steiger amendment the "millionaire's tax relief act" because it will give a $200,000 tax break to each of 3,000 millionaires while the average family with an income of $15,000 to $20,000 will get a tax cut averaging 25 cents.

"The Republicans have seized on the tax reform and reduction initiated by Jimmy Carter and the demand of the people for tax relief as an opportunity to bamboozle the voter that tax reduction for the rich is tax reform," he said. "We are not going to let them get away with that."

The rest of the Democratic program consists of using the U.S. mails to get the word around. Last month a position paper on the Steiger amendment was mailed to about 800 state and local party leaders, congressional candidates, and Democratic VIPs who were urged to get the word around.

A similar mailing on Kemp-Roth will go out soon, and its message will be much the same as White makes in his speeches.

The position paper includes a "Dear Friend" letter signed by White in which he subtly urges the receiver to pass the word about the bad points of the legislation and to write to Congress urging defeat of the measure.

"The point is to make sure our major constituencies are fully informed," said Scott Wolf, director of research for the Democratic National Committee. "It's a complex issue, and we can't use a hard sell like the tax cut advocates do.

"We have to explain very carefully what the bills do because we feel once the provisions are more fully known the popularity for these bills is going to wane," he said.

Ford Hits Profits Record

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co. profits edged up to an all-time record $540 million or $4.55 per share in the second quarter, but the company complained that its profit margin was down.

Chairman Henry Ford II said last week that while worldwide sales leaped 22 percent from the year-ago quarter to set another record, profits were up just 1.3 percent for the three months ended June 30.

Wall Street observers echoed Ford's comments that inflation and a "less profitable mix" of cars kept profits from rising higher.

Sales were up to a record $11.9 billion from the previous record for any quarter of $9.8 billion set in the year-ago quarter. Profits compared with $530 million or $4.49 per share last year.

For the first six months, the company's earnings were $8.48 per share, down 11 cents from last year, reflecting this year's first quarter drop of 17 cents from the first quarter of 1977.

Ford and the rest of the U.S. auto industry had exceptional sales of cars in the United States in the quarter as automakers recovered from a winter sales slump. Ford's North American vehicle sales were up 18 percent.

Ford sales outside North America were up even more sharply at 34 percent and accounted for $224 million of the company's $540 million worldwide earnings.

However, Ford said its after-tax return on sales dropped to 4.6 percent from 5.5 percent a year ago.

"The continuing decline in the company's profit margin will make the task of funding our capital expenditures more difficult," the chairman and chief executive officer said.

The company's first-quarter profit amounted to a 5.82 percent return on stockholders' end-of-quarter capital. That would be a return of 23.3 percent if continued for a year, down from the 24 percent annual rate recorded for the 1977 second quarter.

Analysts said the robust sales outstripped the earnings hike because of increased costs of labor and materials and burgeoning sales of smaller cars that are less profitable than larger cars.

Unlike other major industries that have been reporting huge second-quarter earnings improvements, automakers are in the midst of basic product changes that mean less profitability, analysts said.

The "downsized," less profitable cars are intended to meet federal demands for better fuel economy.

Ford and the rest of the U.S. automakers raised prices about 1.3 percent in early May but "that was too late" in the quarter, said Arvid Jouppi of Colin, Hochstin Co., a New York investment research firm.

Ford said the quarter also set records in employment and labor costs. The company said labor costs were up 19 percent from last year and that employment exceeded half a million for the first time, with 506,000 employees worldwide.

Ford is the first of the Big Three U.S automakers to report second quarter earnings.

JET LANDS SAFELY

SHANNON, Ireland (AP) — A chartered Trans International Airways DC-10 jetliner with 376 American tourists on board left for the United States Sunday night after an eight-hour delay caused by a minor landing accident. The plane rolled off the end of the 3-mile-long runway and its nose wheel bit into the turf, an airport representative said.

Council Formed To Promote Growth Of EFT Services

By MARK POTTS

NEW YORK (AP) — It may be an electronic monster to some people, but to a bank president, an automatic teller is something else — a device that can, in some places, do the work of four human tellers.

It's also a lot of other things to bankers, and the proliferation of the money machines and other kinds of computerized mone transfer systems has resulted in the formation of an industry group called the Electronic Money Council.

The group, which includes representatives from the retail sector, equipment manufacturers and consumer groups, as well as bankers, was started recently to attempt to bring some order to the burgeoning electronic funds transfer (EFT) field — and to promote further growth.

"Despite the over-regulated legal environment which sharply restricts our ability to give customers full EFT services, we see impressive growth," said Eugene M. Tangney, co-chairman of the council and executive vice president of the First National Bank of Boston.

The automatic tellers consumers see — 8,000 in all — are but a tip of the EFT iceberg. EFT services also include check verification, automatic bill paying, direct deposit of payroll and social security checks and pay-by-phone arrangements.

"In effect, EFT gives people access to their own money, when and where they want it, and on their own schedules, rather than those of the service provider," said James E. Smith, co-chairman of the group and executive vice president of First Chicago Corp.

"Our mission is to explain clearly the simplicity and safety of EFT services."

Two of the EMC's first actions were the commissioning of an attitude survey about EFT and the compilation of a "Consumer Bill of Rights."

The attitude survey showed that EMC has its work cut out for it — half the 1,650 persons surveyed had never heard of EFT. Of those who knew about it, 38 percent thought it was good for the average consumer, 24 percent thought it bad, and the rest had no opinion.

But when those who were unfamiliar with it had EFT explained to them, two-thirds indicated an interest in using a service offered by the machines.

"The objective of our public education effort is to reinforce the attitudes of those favoring EFT and demonstrate its benefits to the segment that is undecided," said Tangney.

The consumer bill of rights includes guidelines concerning the consumer's ability to find out all the terms of EFT service, get account documentation, correct errors and provide relief in the case of a lost or stolen card.

The rights also include privacy, the refusal of unwanted cards and banks being liable for their errors.

The bill of rights provides some order to a chaotic situation — government rules on EFTs are being formulated, and in the meantime, banks have been operating with a patchwork system of regulations.

"In general, the council believes the best way to protect consumers is to insure that EFT develops and grows in a competitive environment, responsive to consumers' needs," says the preamble.

Elderly Fight Fires

PACKWOOD, Wash. (UPI) — Most of the members of the High Valley volunteer fire department are senior citizens, but they don't let age stand in their way.

The 20 or so members provide protection in a four-mile long valley with a population of several hundred. Some of the firefighters are as old as 70.

"Most of them are pretty active people for their ages," said Dale Freelove, deputy fire chief in Kent, south of Seattle. He purchased property in the area and is serving as a fire adviser to High Valley.

"Being on the volunteer department is a part of keeping young in High Valley," Freelove said.

The department has become a good example of self-reliance in the eyes of state fire officials who offer an admiring comment when asked about the community.

It has been the only private fire corporation in the state not either in a fire district or municipality.

As a result, the community has no power to levy taxes and the volunteers are not eligible for fire training or other assistance from the state.

Despite those drawbacks, the folks of High Valley have built a metal fire station, complete with bunk quarters and a radio room, and bought a fire truck, 1955 vintage.

Each Monday evening the members show up at the station for drills.

"We take the truck out, test the hoses, have each fireman handle the pump and test the airpacks," Arvil Sessions, who moved to the area four years ago from Los Angeles after his retirment, said. "We don't actually have any fires to put out during the drills.

"It's not really strenuous activity, and we keep everybody pretty well cautioned about too much exertion."

Although the department responds to less than five calls a year and most are brush or chimney fires, Freelove said, "they're well trained and ready for anything that comes along."

Saudi Arabia Places Order For Meals

LONDON (AP) — Saudi Arabia wants to buy 100,000 portions of freeze-dried chicken and rice dinners in astronaut-like plastic packaging, and the U.S. Department of Agriculture has been asked to help find an American producer.

The order comes from a London buying agent for one of Saudi Arabia's biggest importers, a family firm called Sharbatly. One of its outlets is the Sharbatly Establishment for Trade and Development which is placing the order.

Sharbatly's London agent, John Meredith, told The Associated Press in a telephone interview recently that he has not received any bids as yet from American food processers, but hopes the USDA will locate a supplier or two interested in the order.

"I can't say for certain what the freeze-dried meals are for, but I believe they are probably for the civil defense ministry," he said.

One clue to the possible use of the freeze-dried chicken and rice comes from Switzerland where the government has announced plans to distribute similar packages of emergency rations to every man, woman and child in the country, Meredith said.

The estimated cost of the pre-packed meals is about $3 to $4 each, making a total bill of $300,000 to $400,000.

The curious export item showed up in a routine USDA report which gave no use for the unusual Saudi request.

New York Gets Tough On Dogs

NEW YORK (AP) — This city of many dogs, big dogs and nice dogs, lap dogs and mean dogs, will try Tuesday to become a city of nothing but tidy dogs.

That's the dawn of a new law that mandates $100 fines for owners who ignore $25 summonses for failing to remove the evidence that their dogs had done more than simply trod the city's steets.

The uninformed may wonder whether Mayor Edward I. Koch has made a mountain of a molehill by assigning 2,500 enforcers to the poop troop. But the Bureau of Animal Affairs estimates the molehill at 175 tons a day, enough to No one says it will be easy to transform the city's byways and parks from virtual minefields that only the wary can traverse unsullied. Though sales of scoops have been brisk, there are fears the law will be ignored, even by those charged with enforcing it.

Not the least of the problems is that only 300,000 dogs are licensed. Another 400,000 of man's best friend are said to be strays.

Worse, the state law doesn't say what to do with the wastes once removed. It's OK now to place unsealed doggy bags in mesh-wire litter baskets, and officials concede that's hardly better than the street.

The availability of litter baskets poses a problem, too. Sanitation Commissioner Anthony Vaccarello says 7,000 of them disappear yearly, leaving many corners bare. The alternative, he says, is home disposal.

"What are we supposed to do with it?" Marsha Kaufman, assistant manager of a Queens pet shop, demands. "I suppose you could throw it into an open car and maybe someone will steal it."

Allows Vaccarello, "It's going to be a problem, I'm sure."

To encourage compliance, the mayor has marshaled all the ammunition in his enforcement arsenal — including police, meter maids, the sanitation department and environmental agencies — and ordered them to ticket violators.

"If dog owners exercise their responsibility ... they will comply with the fines law and clean up after their pets," he says. "If they do not, the strict fines will add strength to our appeal that cleaning up after your pet is no longer a courtesy — it's the law."

But the American Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals fears the law will boomerang. "We're afraid it's going to cause more dumping of animals on the streets," says spokeswoman Leslie Eustace.

State Sen. Sheldon Farber of Queens, who voted against the state law, has a different concern. "To pass laws that will not be enforced is to create a contempt for the law," he says.

Only a few cities have similar laws.

In Washington, Environmental Health Director Bayliss Walker says the district's law has been enforced in just one problem area lately. Despite a $200 fine, Chicago has found it difficult to force dog walkers to carry "some means" to clean up after their pets.

A spokesman for Atlanta's Department of Environment and Streets says "we hardly ever enforce" the law. In Albuquerque, N.M., no one has ever received the maximum 90 days in jail for failing to heed a warning to rid a yard of canine contamination, and an environmental official reports few complaints about public areas.

Buffalo, the only other city big enough to be covered by New York's law, claims it will enforce the statute starting Aug. 1, but envisions no special effort to do so. The law, says a police official, was intended for New York City and its high-rise apartment buildings.

Predictably, the law has not been greeted with unbridled glee.

Calling it "stupid and unfair," Bob Wisdom maintains there is "no way" he'll clean up after his Labrador retriever. But Susan Wagner says, "A park is not a pasture ... I'm going to pick up. I used to do it but stopped because people looked at me like I was crazy."

Pet store proprietors, meanwhile, say there's been a sudden rush on contraptions with names like "super duper pooper scooper."

"They're going great," Deborah Russo, manager of the Doggie Diner in Greenwich Village, relates. She says the most popular device was a kind of a golf stick equipped with a vacuum cleaner bag selling for $4.95. Men, she adds, tend toward the long-handled things, while women are buying simple cardboard scoops at 8 for $1.

Marsha Kaufman of Brooklyn's Puppy Palace says she's run out of her $8.99 gadgets and turns away 40 to 50 "frantic" people a day.

As for her two Great Danes, she laughs, "I'll use a steam shovel."

If she can get her dogs to the Times Square area, however, her dogs can use a spanking new "comfort station" complete with plumbing.

Another dog owner is a policeman whose beat includes what has been called the world's biggest dog toilet, Riverside Park in Manhattan. The officer, who would not be named, says he owns an Irish setter — and, since last week, a $7 scoop.

"Up here especially, where there's a lot of dogs, you have to walk with your head down. I think it's a good law if they enforce it," he observes. However, he notes that to issue a summons you have to see a dog make his mess and have his master ignore an order to clear it.

"It's going to be pretty hard, because if he looks up and sees you, he'll pull the dog so he won't make a mess," the six-footer declares.

Adds a police lieutenant, "I don't think they're going to be following people around. There are times they'll observe it, and I'm sure they'll take action."

Christians' Barrage Blocks Army Move

KAOUKABA, Lebanon (AP) — A 500-man contingent of the Lebanese regular army moved into southern Lebanon near the Israeli border today, but was stopped 10 miles short of its destination by mortar and artillery fire from right-wing Christian forces.

In its statement announcing the southward advance, the army command ignored the unexpected harassment by Israeli-backed Christians.

The Christians are led by two renegade majors, Saad Haddad and Sami Chidiac, who have vowed to stop the entry of the regular forces into a 50-mile stretch of border country. Haddad's followers wear Israeli-made uniforms and use Israeli weapons.

In Tel Aviv, Israeli radio reported that the Christians fired on the Lebanese troops to warn them to stay away from Christian enclaves near the border. The radio said the Christians view the unit as a Syrian force, not Lebanese.

Syrians make up the bulk of 30,000-man Arab League peacekeeping force that ended Lebanon's 1975-76 civil war. Israel opposes any movement by the Syrians toward the border.

The Lebanese contingent, under Col. Adib Saad, halted its advance at this tiny hamlet after word reached a U.N. post that the Christians had blocked the mountain highway with tanks and field guns.

Earlier announcements by the army command in Beirut said Lebanese troops were to be dispatched to the southern region to serve as a buffer between Yasser Arafat's Palestinian guerrillas and the Israeli frontier.

There was no Israeli government reaction to the move, but an official source in Israel said the Lebanese unit "appears to be a Syrian force in Lebanese disguise."

The source said that according to Israel's information, the unit is heavily manned by Syrians, moves with Syria's blessing and protection and Syria is playing a major role in the regrouped Lebanese unit.

The troop movement is the first assertion of the Beirut governmet's control in the area since 1973.

Lebanese regulars withdrew from southern Lebanon after a two-week war with the Palestinians in 1973 that ended with an agreement giving the guerrillas free run of the area. They used it as a staging area for raids on Israel until the Lebanese civil war in 1975 took them north to fight alongside the leftist Lebanese Moslems against the right-wing Lebanese Christians.

The 18,000-man army disintegrated during the civil war that ended in November 1976. About 3,500 troops have since been reassembled and equipped, mainly with American arms.

The southern force was to take station between French troops on the Mediterranean coast and Norwegian forces in the foothills of Mt. Hermon, the Lebanese Defense Ministry said. Beirut newspapers reported that Israeli and Lebanese army officers met Sunday under U.S. auspices, and "obstacles were removed from the way of deploying Lebanese regulars in the South."

Since the withdrawal of the Israeli troops who invaded southern Lebanon in March, control of the south has been divided between the U.N. force and Christian militias supported by Israel.

The Lebanese government also tried today to reopen the port of Beirut, which was closed July 1 by Syrian shelling of Christian militiamen. But mortar shells landed in the port area, and the port workers fled to their homes.

An official announcement did not fix blame for the brief shelling and mentioned no casualties.

Four Palestinians were reported killed and 15 wounded in battles between rival Palestinian groups near the northern Lebanese port of Tripoli. The Beirut newspaper An Nahar, which reported the fighting, did not say what started it but the clash was between pro-Iraqi extremists and supporters of Yasser Arafat.

Arab Unity Bid Aided By Sadat

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) -Egyptian President Anwar Sadat met today with Saudi Arabian Crown Prince Fahd on the Mideast situation amid reports of a new drive to reunite Arab ranks.

Sadat's meeting with Fahd follows his ruling out further peace talks between Egypt and Israel until Israel recognizes Egypt will not negotiate its demand for Israeli withdrawal from all occupied territory.

The Egyptian leader's adamant stand at a news conference Sunday collided head-on with Israeli Prime Minster Menachem Begin's statement a week ago that Israel would give nothing back to the Arabs without getting something in return.

Fahd's itinerary includes stops in Syria and Jordan -both frontline states with Israel. This led some observers to speculate the Saudis were trying to regain Arab solidarity that was shattered with Sadat's trip to Jerusalem last November.

Fahd's trip to Egypt is "the climax of the incessant efforts of the (Saudi) kingdom to reach a framework that would return the Arab nation back to its path of solidarity," said the Saudi Nadwa newspaper in its editorial today.

Sadat's resort to direct negotiations with Israel has divided Arabs into three distinct groups.

The rejectionists have opposed his peace overtures and are trying him for "high treason" in Baghdad. Several moderate Arab states have supported him, notably Morocco and Sudan.

Others like Saudi Arabia and Jordan have not publicly endorsed Sadat's move but have not rejected it either, adopting a wait-and-see attitude.

With negotiation with Israel bogged down, Saudi Arabia, bank-roller of the three frontline states, has apparently moved to bring the Arabs back together, some reports suggest.

Sadat, who met for 2½ hours Sunday with American mediator Alfred Atherton, in effect also called on the United States to put forward its own peace proposals. He said the United States should "act as full partner, not as mediator" in the talks.

"If it is agreed upon officially that land and sovereignty is dropped out of any compromise and Israel is ready to discuss peace in all its aspects, we shall be ready," Sadat said.

He said Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan's proposal of territorial compromise, made at his meeting two weeks ago in England with Egyptian Foreign Minister Mohammad Ibrahim Kamel and Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, was "of great significance" and "a new element, but it is a negative element."

Diplomats in Washington said last week that Dayan offered to negotiate a partial Israeli withdrawal from the West Bank of the Jordan River and to discuss who would govern the West Bank in five years.

Previously, Israel would not discuss giving up any land or the future of the West Bank beyond the five-year period of local autonomy for the Palestinian occupants it proposed in December.

Sadat said Dayan's offer was "a step backward, not forward."

He said Begin's refusal to give up Arab land without getting something in return "has pushed this whole problem to a climax" and that Egypt will refuse to talk until Begin retracts it.

Sadat has offered to negotiate guarantees of Israeli security after the West Bank, the Sinai and the Gaza Strip, captured by Israel in 1967, are back in Arab hands.

Sadat said he does not see an Egyptian-Israeli meeting in the near future and said Egypt has not agreed to a foreign ministers' meeting in the Sinai which the United States is trying to promote. Atherton said he discussed the proposed meeting with Sadat, but did not elaborate.

In Jerusalem, the Israeli Cabinet at its weekly meeting said it is ready to negotiate and that it hoped the "much talked-about conference in the Sinai" would take place.

Travel Slowed Across Europe

LONDON (AP) — Hundreds of thousands of air travelers were stranded at European airports today, waiting for flights delayed by a slowdown of air traffic controllers in France.

The slowdown hit hardest over the weekend as millions of Europeans — who tend to take their vacations in August — began their annual migration to sun spots.

The slowdown also affected the thousands of American tourists who traditionally flock to Europe in summer. Hundreds of other Americans were packed into crowded British airports over the weekend waiting — some for days — for seats on cheaper standby flights back home across the Atlantic.

The airport on the popular Mediterranean resort island of Majorca was a typical example. More than 70 planes were waiting to take off, and airport officials said there was no more room for planes to park. Takeoffs were running one hourly, compared with an average 500 daily.

There seemed to be no relief in sight at least until Wednesday, when the French controllers' union meets to decide what future action to take. They are demanding modernized equipment and more personnel, which they claim are essential for passenger safety, as well as an improved pay structure.

Further disruption could begin Thursday, however, when Italian airport ground personnel and some pilots have scheduled a 24-hour strike. The walkout has been called by a leftist union representing most ground workers and less than 10 percent of Italian pilots.

Because flights from all over Europe pass through French airspace, the chaos on the air routes extended from Britain to Italy and from Scandinavia to Spain.

Would-be passengers camped out in airport departure lounges waiting for their flights to be called. Some even set up tents around French airports.

"I am sick. The doctor told me to go home to Algeria and rest," said an Algerian waiting for a flight to his hometown.

Storm Hits Gulf Coast

the Gulf of Mexico, Amelia was moving northward at 12 mph, forecasters said.

There were no immediate reports of damage or injuries inland.

The storm drenched South Padre Island, a slender resort island just off the coast, with up to 4 inches of rainfall. Some power outages were reported on the island.

Two Coast Guard helicopters fought the rain and winds for hours Sunday night, plucking the crews of the sinking shrimpers from the 10-to 12-foot seas.

One of the shrimpers, the Margaret Webster, broke up and sank off South Padre Island when a "big wave" swamped the vessel, the captain said. Its crew was rescued by another shrimp boat, the Betty Margaret.

The crews of two other boats, the Mermaid of the Sea and the Frankie E., were rescued by helicopters as they clung to life preservers or debris from their boats.

A Coast Guard spokesman said no reports were available on a fourth shrimper and three private craft that had been reported in distress.

Forecaster Gil Clark at the National Hurricane Center in Miami said Amelia "was not a particularly strong storm" and was not likely to grow stronger

City Hearing

the Human Relations Commission, the city bus service, libraries, and parks and recreation.

Adolphus Cleveland said the potential service cuts would have a greater effect on minority and lower-income perssons. Since minorities are the "last to be hired and first to be fired," Cleveland said the 250 city jobs which might be eliminated would hit minorities hardest.

Those supporting the property owners' tax cut suggestions included Ira Williams, who encouraged more efficiency of government. He questioned why city facilities such as the golf course, the cemetery and swimming pools couldn't be self-supporting.

D.J. Faulkner said "one of the biggest wastes" in city government is allowing city employees to drive city-owned vehicles home each night. Faulkner estimated the city could get about two additional years out of the vehicles if they were restricted to official business.

The budget hearing were to continue throughout this afternoon and tonight "as long as anyone wants to talk," Mayor Dirk West said.

Council members will resume work on the budget at a work session Tuesday afternoon.

Byrd Maneuvers For Energy Vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supporters of phasing out price controls on natural gas today were mustering the votes they will need to break a filibuster when the measure reaches the Senate floor toward the end of this week.

Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., told reporters he plans to allow four days of debate before forcing a vote on breaking a filibuster. The chances of breaking a filibuster on the first vote are considered slim, but Byrd said he would schedule votes daily in an effort to come up with the 60 votes necessary to limit debate.

The natural gas pricing measure is one of the most controversial segments of the package of energy bills that evolved from the energy plan President Carter sent to Capitol Hill more than 15 months ago.

The bill will reach the Senate floor on Thursday or Friday.

In the House, meanwhile, the week will be devoted mostly to foreign policy and defense issues, including debate starting today on lifting the three-year-old embargo against U.S. arms sales to Turkey.

The natural gas conference agreement to be decided in the Senate this week would lift federal controls over natural gas prices by 1985.

The Senate had voted to lift controls by 1983, but the House had agreed with Carter that price regulation should continue.

It took six months for House and Senate conferees to reach a compromise agreement which would immediately raise the current price ceiling of $1.49 per thousand cubic feet of gas to $1.93. The price then would rise about 10 percent a year until complete deregulation in 1985.

Under certain conditions, the president or Congress would be able to reimpose controls for a limited time.

Sen. James Abourezk, D-S.D., a member of the conference committee, says the natural gas bill will cost consumers too much.

Dismissing claims by producers that they need higher profits to encourage discovery of new gas reserves, Abourezk has indicated he will try to block a final vote on the conference agreement by staging a filibuster.

He is expected to get some help from conservative Republicans who believe the natural gas bill does not deregulate prices fast enough.

It was not clear if supporters of the natural gas compromise would be able to muster the 60 votes needed to break a filibuster.

The Senate has already approved a conference agreement on converting some industries from scarce oil reserves to coal.

The House, meanwhile, will work on four of the five parts of Carter's plan for conserving U.S. energy, rather than voting on them one at a time.

A fifth part of the energy plan, a massive tax on U.S.-produced crude oil, is given only a 50-50 chance at best.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., said the Senate will likely begin debate on the natural gas agreement on Friday, and may then work during an unusual Saturday session.

The House vote on the Turkish arms question is expected to be extremely close. The Senate approved lifting the embargo last week.

The foreign military aid authorization bill, which the Senate passed last week after demanding to be consulted by Carter on future U.S. troop withdrawals from South Korea, also is expected to draw House debate.

The key issues are congressional consultation on the troop pullout question and whether to end a trade embargo against the white-ruled government of Rhodesia.

In a later debate on a foreign aid bill this week, an attempt is expected in the House to prevent U.S. funds sent through international banks from going to communist countries such as Cuba and Vietnam.

The House has also scheduled debate on a $119 billion defense appropriations bill which includes funds for the last big aircraft carrier for the U.S. Navy.

FAA GRANT TOTALS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration approved airport development grants totalling $167.63 million during the third quarter of the fiscal year, the Transportation Department announced. The projects included 67 projects for $16.01 million at airports serving general aviation, or private aircraft, and 161 projects for $151.63 million at airports serving airlines.

Sign-Up For New B & I Series Underway With Deadline Near

"The Business and Industrial pages of the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal can work for you, too."

It is now time to arrange for inclusion in these B & I pages as contract sign-up is underway for the new series of presentations.

Actually, deadline for participation arrangements is only a few days away, so immediate attention is necessary.

See an Avalanche-Journal retail advertising salesman or call 762-8844, Extension 222, and a representative of the advertising department will then explain the program in full, helping plan a comprehensive schedule of presentations in stories and pictures, together with ads that week after week carry their impact.

These pages have a record of proven benefit to advertiser and customer alike.

The B & I program can be especially beneficial in the key merchandising months ahead, months that involve back-to-school, ballgame season, Christmas, fall and winter activities, winter vacation time, and new year events.

Many businesses and services actually consider the B & I presentations as best opportunity for "getting the message across," testimonials indicate month after month.

One businessman wrote:

"My business was exceptional on the day the story ran; in fact, it was the best day I have had, and the entire week marked an 84 per cent increase over the previous one. I thank you for the good job (on the B & I pages)."

Another informed the B & I editor:

"The first story you published about my service directly resulted in a sale that more than paid for my B & I contract for six months!"

"Now, in your own situation, does this sound familiar:

"I have said, time and again, that next time I'm going to be on the B & I pages. My business associates have reported the effectiveness, and readers have expressed their enthusiasm for the informative stories and ads."

Now that time is here, together with its opportunities.

"Your business or service can be featured in pictures and stories in the unique B & I section, but only if action is taken at soonest possible time.

The messages carried in the B & I pages provide a distinct service to both advertiser and the consumer, and full details are gladly and clearly outlined by The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal.

Professional Aid

"Your own story can be told effectively, prominently, professionally and correctly on these pages in the activity packed season ahead."

"Your messages can be featured, however, only if arrangements are made now; so don't find your firm or service omitted from the B & I pages during these key months ahead."

"Those interested in being represented through these factual stories and pictures for the first time, or as a continuation of former rewarding schedules, should call 762-8844. Extension 222, and a representative of the advertising department will then explain the program in full and help plan a comprehensive schedule of messages.

"Know Texas Insulation Systems, Box 591, Lockney, Texas, phone 652-3348, and profit."

Specializing in ThermoCon spray-on and loose-fill for residential, commercial and industrial applications, Jerry Ulmer and staff are masters in their field. For full details see Ulmer at the Lockney facilty, write Box 591, Lockney, Tex. 79241, or call (806) 652-3348.

ThermoCon spray-on insulation for metal buildings is one of the fine product-service combinations. Let one of the Texas Insulation Systems technicians give full details, showing what this application can do in your own situation.

Spray-on ThermoCon affords temperature, sound and fire control in one application!

Because of its chemical content, it permanently bonds to steel, wood and masonry surfaces painted or not! It provides a strong color-stable environmental system that will not chip, shed, flake, dust or be subject to rot or fungi. ThermoCon is odorless and non-toxic.

Because it forms a monolithic seal, it can be used wherever temperature, sound or fire control is needed on ceilings or walls, exposed or unexposed. No latning, undercoating or preparatory base is required!

Because of its workable fibrous texture, ThermoCon can expand and contract with your building without losing its hold. Its built-in flexibility makes it easy to cut, saw, mold, shape or paint.

Because of its application by pneumatic spray, it is much faster and more economical than conventional insulation, Ulmer emphasizes.

(ThermoCon, incidently, is a national company with dealers throughout the nation and in Canada.)

Appropriate buildings for this ThermoCon system include farm buildings, airplane hangars, industrial plants, warehouses, auditoriums, gyms, showrooms, supermarkets, mobile homes, apartments, condominiums, office buildings, etc.

"It is twice as effective as wire-backed fiberglass batts; heat intense enough to melt metal will not penetrate ThermoCon's protective barrier!"

EASY TO REACH, EASY TO APPRECIATE

Newest Spic & Span Cleaners Draws Special Service Acclaim

Nationally-circulated trade publications recently have spelled out what a lot of Lubbockites have known for a long time . . . that Spic & Span 1-Hour Cleaners in Lubbock truly are superior!

Quoting from the July issue of American Drycleaner:

"Speed, quality cleaning and superservice, coupled with a sterling reputation built over 30 years, are among the factors which helped make Spic & Span 1-Hour Cleaners of Lubbock a Merit Award Winner in American Drycleaner magazine's 17th Annual Plant Design Contest.

"This new award-winning plant is the second Spic & Span fabricare operation that Chester and Janette Holder have going for them in Lubbock . . ."

This second and added Spic & Span facility is located at 3331 70th St., just a block east of Indiana at its approach to Loop 289. Easy access and plenty of paved off-street parking in a non-congested area are among the location factors that have earned appreciation of the customers in that south and southwest Lubbock area.

Randy Gordon is manager of this functionally-beautiful facility where fast, courteous service, top-quality work and convenient location are emphasized.

The Holders still operate the facility at 2109 50th St., too, and one is invited to patronize the Spic & Span unit that is most convenient.

More about the newer 70th Street plant:

"Some Bigger, None Better, No Brag, Just Fact" is the motto quite adequately summing the concept of business there.

Among customer considerations there are so very many factors, including convenient location with its nearness to the loop enabling easy use by motorists travelling to shopping areas, schools and to work.

There is parking for 35 cars at front of the attractively canopied building.

Even the plant's interior is outstanding, with its functional design also eye pleasing, with crisp, cool looking white ash paneling on the walls, divider and two spacious counters, a color scheme of white, orange and gold tones, and white acoustical ceiling with recessed lighting.

Most work moves through the plant very fast; but even with this speedy service, the customer finds that the Holders, Gordon and other staffmembers like to meet the customers and discuss their garments with them.

Items are hung immediately after they're run and are then sent to the finishing stations by slick rail. Three finishing units are provided, one for silks, one for coats, shirts and miscellaneous garments, and a pants unit. After finishing, the work goes to assembly where it is inspected, checked, bagged and hung on the conveyor that can dispense finished garments from both ends.

For sure . . . Spic & Span does not skimp on the two important basics . . . quality and service!

"May we prove this, to your satisfaction . . . at Spic & Span, 3331 70th St., or at the long-established 2109 50th St. facility?"

And remember further:

Chester and Janette Holder, owners of Spic & Span Cleaners, specialize in one thing only ... "the dry cleaning industry". They are real pros in the drycleaning field and both are active workers in the business, keeping their minds alert for anything new to benefit the customer.

Vetral's Unveils Fall, Winter Apparel Fashions Throughout

The approaching new season is very much in the air at Vetral's Fashions!

Gorgeous fall and winter arrivals swell the exciting and large stock at Vetral's, now recognized region-wide for its fashions at affordable prices.

Sale Items

(A limited amount of spring and summer wear still is on hand and is drastically reduced in price for immediate removal to make room for new arrivals. There are summer dresses and pant suits, as example, marked at one-half price! What a buy!)

So . . . one can buy now at Vetral's, not only securing exceptional values for the summer days still to follow, but to purchase for school and fall events ahead. Layaway is invited, of course.

The fresh and delightful stock includes daily arrivals of fall dresses and pant suits, sweaters, blouses, etc. The colors, materials and styles seem to be the prettiest ever in women's apparel, and Vetral's Fashions has done an outstanding job in selecting merchandise that is "right," fashionable and practical.

Vetral's has it all!

Everything at Vetral's is new nothing is in the expansive racks but fresh, delightful stock.

Easy To Reach

"The Best for Less" is the meaningful slogan at Vetral's Fashions, located just east of Lubbock. Go east on the well-marked route, from Lubbock's East 4th Street, to north of the Roosevelt School. The drive takes less time than many instances of traffic fighting within one's own city area.

Though open from 9 a.m. until 6 p.m., Vetral's is glad to open late for the convenience of customers wishing to shop at a later hour.

This is just one of the thoughtful gestures of the smart apparel shop. (Remember, simply take FM 40 east of Lubbock for six miles, then go three-fourths mile south.) The fashion shop on the west side of the pavement is clearly marked and features easy access and plenty of paved parking. No congestion here! No high overhead here!

Owners Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Davis traditionally assure real treats in fashion and quality at sensible prices. They and their capable assistants give the customer every benefit.

Select from pant suits, coordinates, dresses, sweaters, blouses, etc., that reflect the care in which Vetral's buys and stocks.

For those who already know the everyday low prices and the chic merchandise at Vetral's, enthusiasm naturally is being shown for the new fall arrivals. For those who may not have patronized Vetral's, now would be an excellent time . . . come on out and shop while selection is at its best.

Vetral's can be called, directly (toll free) from Lubbock; dial 842-3376.

Master Charge and Visa card use is welcomed.

FALL WEAR THAT LOOKS RIGHT, PRICED RIGHT — Mrs. Jimmy Davis, owner of Vetral's Fashions; and staffmember Babe Keeler display one of the beautiful, all-new, provocative arrivals already placed on the racks at the popular shop just east of Lubbock. Note the accompanying story for details including summer items on sale.

INSTRUCTION IN PARTY SETTING — International Dance Club owner-instructor Ed Murphy (pictured with partner) not only is recognized locally but also on national level where both himself and students have copped key honors in several dance categories. Two Lubbock representatives will compete in the fall Grand National events in New York City, Murphy relates.

International Dance Club Opens Way To Fun, Achievement, Entertainment

"It is exciting to be a good dancer!"

A whole new world of fun, entertainment and achievement can be opened for one upon enrollment with the International Dance Club, 5415 Aberdeen, phone 792-3781, in Lubbock.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Murphy are owners and operators of the Lubbock International Dance Club, providing instruction for the past five years (two years at the new, spacious, beautiful quarters at 5415 Aberdeen, just a block west of Slide Road and near South Plains Mall).

Not only has Murphy garnered awards at even the national and international level, but his students have made enviable records in competition at every level. Doesn't this speak well of the instruction provided right here in Lubbock at the International Dance Club?

Compete Nationally

A group from Lubbock will go to New York in September for the Grand National competition at the Waldorf-Astoria, and competing from Lubbock will be Nina Clare and Geneva Kahlich.

Last year at the same event, Lubbock representatives placed 4th in the Latin dance category, competing against all other national entries.

Ed himself has copped numerous prestigious awards in various dance categories. First to introduce country-western dancing in club competition he placed first in Dallas, with the Cotton Eye Joe, polka and other dances featured.

His students recently took 27 first place awards in the Aladdin Dance tourney in Ls Vegas, Nev., with Murphy presented the "Top Teacher" award.

Varied Programs

All dance categories are involved in the instruction available at the spacious facility in Lubbock, with programs available for any type budget, Murphy emphasizes, welcoming the opportunity to personally explain the opportunities and options.

The International Dance Club, at 5415 Aberdeen, remember, is open from 10 a.m. until 10 p.m., Mondays through Fridays; and on Saturdays from 12 noon until 6 p.m. Enrollment can be arranged any day.

Benefits Cited

It is exciting to be a good dancer, and Ed Murphy and his instructor staff delight in helping one achieve that goal.

"Good dancers are popular companions and are always invited," Murphy points out. "When you are a good dancer, you can meet people easily, comfortably. Others will feel at ease dancing with you because you have the confidence you need that comes naturally with knowing how to dance well. Think of it!"

The International Dance Club provides dance instruction in a party setting. You learn any or all of the popular dances that you choose. There are weekly parties, evenings out on the town and travel to nearby and faraway places.

"Give us a call today, at (806) 792-3781 and receive details of how you can join our world of dancing."

Baby World, Lue Ree's Tell Summer Sales, Fall Readiness

Readiness for fall and back-to-school is in the air . . . at Baby World and at Lue Ree's Children's Shop, that is!

And a tremendous sale is underway at each, involving all spring and summer wear.

At Baby World, 4918 50th St., all spring and summer wear is marked at one-half price!

And what values there are to be found in the Sidewalk Sale at Lue Ree's!

And what a great time to select, while the stock is fresh and new . . . and extensive, from coats and jackets for fall and winter use. Layaway is invited and encouraged.

Just one year ago an important announcement was made from Baby World . . . that owners Vickie and Jonathan Hoffman not only were maintaining a great stock there, but that they had purchased an additional store, Lue Ree's Children's Shop in Briercroft Center.

Both Serve Well

Each store has since served in its distinct way in a manner appreciated by customers who recognize the added convenience, and the expertise of Vickie, Jonathan and staff in serving with quality merchandise and affordable prices.

Baby World stocks boys sizes through 7, and girls sizes through 6X.

Lue Ree's stocks boys wear in infants through size 12, and girls sizes in infants through 14, plus pre teens and some juniors.

Accessories are found at both stores.

Furniture, Nursery Items

Possibly best known for the apparel items and accessories, Baby World is truly outstanding in its presentation of furniture for the little folks, featuring Simmons products. See the most attractive display of this line now presented.

Everything at Baby World and its sister shop, Lue Ree's, conveys that exciting offerings are the rule and that patronage and friendship is fully appreciated.

Selection from top lines is enabled. The ownership "likes children" and stocks accordingly!

Helping to plan the nursery is a valuable but free assistance of Baby World.

Visa, Master Charge and layaway purchases are invited.

Off-street parking is provided at both Lue Ree's and Baby World, and are among the multiple conveniences that make these stores ones that could and should become "habit forming for you, too."

"May we have the pleasure of serving you, and saving for you, during our sale?

Cowling's July Clearance Entering Final Hours

Today is final day of Cowling Furniture's gigantic July Clearance Sale!

This means that if one hurries, there still are banner savings available . . . even to 50 per cent off on numerous items!

This semi-annual sale at Cowling Furniture features savings in every department . . . with especially good buys on sofas, lamps, even most of the paintings in stock, together with furniture items for every room.

Ken Cowling has just returned from market and has made outstanding purchases in new merchandise for which room must be made. New arrivals already are noted throughout the big store.

Stressing value and quality always, still further budget aid is enabled in the July Sale that ends today.

With an enlarged, yet most discriminating, selection offered, Cowling's Furniture, 1210 Ave. Q, has "what's right and what's quality" for every furniture need.

Opening in late 1975, Cowling's has become recognized as a good firm, with good merchandise, with integrity and with a quality-savings combination to be appreciated.

With so very much presented in its selection, it is impossible to enumerate all, but these arrivals likely should come in for special note:

The best selection of sofas yet stocked by Cowling's is currently presented.

Rattan Now Stocked

New groupings for every room of the home are available.

Some extremely good quality Rattan furniture has been added to the extensive stock.

A very good supply of credenzas, consoles, bedroom and dining room groupings is another present situation, all in readiness for redecorating.

All in all, Cowling's has the largest stock yet; they have continually stocked good lines and are staying with these respected and well-known brands.

Both investment art and just "plain pretty art work" is stocked in a beautiful array of selective paintings, tastefully arranged throughout the attractive store.

"This is an out-of-the-ordinary furniture store," more than a few customers have found, and Ken Cowling and family want the opportunity to personally show this as the truth. Modest on the outside, the big store is most impressive within; actually, entry is into a whole new world of quality furniture at prices to please.

"If it is all-around good taste that you appreciate, then let Cowling's friendly family staff serve you. The firm is a family store, family owned and operated, with each member doing his and her best to bring your own family the very finest home furnishings to fit your budget."

Financing is available, and personal attention in every visit and transaction is a watchword at Cowling's, just south off Broadway, on Avenue Q. Both an east and north entry is provided, with appreciated off-street parking at the north.

MINI-BLIND SPECIAL

Special savings at A & J Blind & Shade Shop provide a distinct advantage at this time.

For example . . . 20 per cent off on all mini-blinds!

"One's budget must and should be considered, and A & J, at 1917 19th St., phone 762-4013, in Lubbock, does all in its power to befriend your budget for home improvement."

FLOWERS TODAY — AN EXPERIENCE IN BEAUTY

Flowers Today, On Slide Road, Excels With Multiple Services

For summer decorating, what could be more desired than indoor tropicals?

For these, the time is now, and the place is Flowers Today, in a class by itself at 5308-B Slide Road.

Or if the need is flowers for the shut-in, the hospital patient, or for any other situation, Flowers Today likes to prove itself as the wise choice.

The firm's assertion that "we're here to serve you, to do it the way you want it" is most evident even upon initial entry to the beautifully stocked and appointed shop on the west side of Slide Road, with plenty of off-street parking.

Not only does Flowers Today have a most enticing and wide selection of potted plants, green plants, silks, fresh flowers, tropicals, etc., but it stocks a discriminating choice in accessories.

Note the really fine crystal pieces (including antiques and imports), brass and copper ware.

Whatever the decorative item selected at Flowers Today, a fern stand, baker's rack, or other, one can be assured that value is the word.

Owners-operators Tim Tippit and Winifred Hill would have it no other way.

The firm was purchased by the duo back in November of last year, and word seems to have spread rapidly regarding the type shop, the concept of service, and the merchandise variety provided.

"Serenity" likely is first and correct impression of the so-beautiful shop — from its fern wallpaper to the plush carpet and attractive floral arrangements.

"It all purposely says 'we're glad you're here'."

Floral needs for weddings are met, professionally and beautifully.

City-wide delivery is a service of the firm.

A lot of silks and dried arrangements are stocked.

In decor pieces, it is pointed out that many are one-of-a-kind items, including handpainted china.

For a new experience in floral shopping, for selecting from stock or ordering a custom arrangement, Flowers Today, phone 795-9333, at 5308-B Slide Road, is heartily recommended.

"Remember, we're here to serve the public; may we include you among our valued customers?"

Hughes Services 'Goes Second Mile' In Fullest Assistance To Customer

For full janitorial services with "plus-benefits that we like to prove", the name to know in Lubbock, Amarillo and throughout the South Plains and Panhandle is Hughes Services, Inc., 101 Sherman Ave. in Lubbock!

(And for purchase of professional maintenance supplies, at the same Lubbock location, there is HUCO Products. Co., taking pride in stocking the very best in equipment and related needs.)

Hughes and HUCO each "go the extra mile" in assisting the customer, helping in maximum benefits from both the services and equipment selection and use.

Customers have long profited from the learning and experience, plus capacity for service, of the Hughes and HUCO personnel. Offices are maintained in both Lubbock and Amarillo, and counties throughout the area are well served by Hughes (with current accounts noted in Levelland, Slaton, Hereford, Canyon, Plainview and other area points.)

"Are you included?"

Assistance That Counts

Hughes Services has a record of customer assistance . . . such as supervision to assure the right procedures and results for each account.

"If your building has a problem in janitorial servicing, there is no charge from Hughes for an in-depth survey and recommendations."

And if a housewife has a problem on floor care within the home, we are glad at Hughes and HUCO to tell what use and how it should be used.

All this is made possible by "the right products, the devotion to service, and the training that is a continuous procedure for all staffmembers."

Demonstrations, films, on-job training — all are part of the Hughes and HUCO concept of fullest service, and in keeping with a record of foresight and achievement that might be dated from establishment of Hughes Service back in 1954 and the addition of HUCO Products in 1970, with numerous additions to products and services marking the intervening and ensuing years.

In explaining HUCO Products, president George Hughes puts it this way:

"We believe a professional wants strictly professional merchandise; hence any product we sell is used in our own professional maintenance business; we have tested it before recommending and selling it, for sure."

Among the products available from HUCO are Hillyard floor treatments including gym finishes and concrete seals. (One can run a new slab and just as soon as it is dry for walking, a spray seal can be applied to keep it from ever getting stained. How great for a commercial building, or even for the home owner who can seal the garage or even the residence floor before carpeting.

All types of hospitalization chemicals are stocked.

And Dynasurf products, L&A pressure washers and associated chemicals.

Plus National Super Service floor machines.

(Be sure and learn of the electric powered 20-in. buffer with brush speed of 1,070 rpm, three times as much as usually expected for buffing units. And it is simple enough and easy enough for any woman to run. Imagine, buffing 10,000 sq.ft. per hour! And the finishes last longer with a "wet look" finish that resists scuffing.

Actually, for finest in cleaning equipment and related products, all thoroughly proven, one can with assurance depend upon the progressive HUCO Products Co., 101 Sherman Ave. in Lubbock.

And who cannot benefit from patronizing Hughes Services, Inc., at the same address!

Limited-Time Offer Spelling Added Savings At Bernice's

Isn't this a nice way to usher in a new month:

For the first two weeks in August, a free conditioner will be given with any permanent wave in the shop at Bernice's Hair Fashions, 2107 Knoxville Ave.!

And look at these further inviting reasons for relying upon Bernice's:

(A) The staff is unquestionably skilled;

(B) The location has a lot going for it;

(C) There are everyday low prices to please; and

(D) The shop, at 2107 Knoxville Ave., near Methodist Hospital, has recently been attractively redecorated.

Every beauty service, including razor cuts or scissor cuts for both men and women, Uni-Perms, sculptured nails, and more, are afforded at Bernice's.

Uni-Perms, including cut, shampoo and set, are a sensible $21, and other services at the salon are equally reasonably priced.

Staffed To Serve

The staff is schooled in all the new hairstyles and latest methods, and one could do well to form the habit of depending upon Bernice's, phone 795-2604. Early and late appointments can be arranged.

Barbara Huffman, a Jessie Lee graduate well recognized in the trade and by customers who appreciate quality in beauty and hair care, is manager. Barbara has been with Bernice's for 14 years.

Bernice Sturdivant still is owner.

Barbara is assisted by an able staff including newest member Helen Cross, and by Mary Williamson and Debbie McCollum.

Helen is a recent graduate of Mickie's Beauty Academy in Lubbock, and though adept in the numerous beauty services she especially enjoys sculptured nails and blow dries as specialties. Helen, who attended Dunbar, has been a Lubbock resident since 1959.

Mary Williamson, an Odessa Beauty School graduate, has been with Bernice's for seven years, and she specializes in blow dries and curling iron, though rendering the other beauty services as well.

Debbie McCollum, another graduate of Mickie's Beauty Academy, specializes in blow dries, curling iron and general hairdos.

With these operators, one can be certain that the complete hair care and beauty services are superior.

Manicures are available.

Whether long or short hair styles are the situation, or whether old or new style cuts are desired, Bernice's can be a most satisfactory solution.

It is pointed out that with the very popular Uni-Perm, one's hair behaves as nicely as naturally wavy hair.

Bernice's is open six days a week.

Remember the location, one-half block south of Methodist Hospital at 2107 Knoxville Ave., phone 795-2604, a location especially appreciated by residents of that area and by hospital-related personnel, visitors, etc.

"Exceptional beauty care is just as near as Bernice's Hair Fashions in Lubbock where the coffeepot always is on and a friendly, casual atmosphere prevails."

Woolco's Special Air Cooler Price Enables Exceptional Buy

From time to time, Woolco is able to present what could rightly be termed "super buys" in its program of affording values to the best of the firm's ability ... prices in keeping with its invitation "We want to be your favorite store."

This week such a feature is enabled on a limited number of Phoenix Air Coolers.

H.T. Abston of the Woolco staff calls attention to this window model, two-speed unit, regularly priced at an inviting figure of just $319.95, but while these 17 last they are going at a still much lower $269!

"There is lots of summer ahead," Abston aptly points out, "and these units can be of real service right now, making for immediate comfort and savings and will last for season after season. I would consider such a purchase a very wise investment."

The invitation is extended to not only scan the items on this page, including the special cooler offer, but to watch every Woolco advertisement, and, better yet, come into the spacious, friendly, well-stocked store and see for yourself just how very much Woolco wants to please!

Track Down Cousins With Family Tree

By SHARI LEWIS

Last winter I performed in Bergen County, N.J., and met a new cousin, Steve North. Well, he isn't really a new cousin, but he comes from a part of my huge family that I didn't know. He knew me, though, because Steve is keeping record of our family tree.

Your family has a tree, too — and you are a branch of that tree. Here's how you can start looking for all of the other branches and some of the roots:

Write down your name, birthday and the place you were born. Do the same for your parents and grandparents. Go as far back as you can, and ask other living living relatives to tell you about their cousins.

Try to collect pictures of all the people in your family tree, and paste each picture on a circle, cut out of stiff paper or cardboard. If you stick a twig in a clay pot of earth, and dangle each picture on a branch (oldest member near the bottom) you can see how your family tree has branched out!

TODAY'S BRAIN TWISTER: The names of lots of the states in the union are on a $5 bill — abbreviated, at the top of the columns. If you can lay your hands on a $5 bill, how many of the states can you find? (Look for the answer in tomorrow's Kids-Only Club column.)

(Mail to Shari should be addressed Kids-Only Club, in care of The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, P.O Box 1111, Los Angeles, Calif. 90053.)

Soviets Waging Resources War

By FRANK CORMIER

WASHINGTON (AP) — While the Carter administration pictures Soviet-Cuban intervention in Africa as imperialism on the loose, a voice from the recent, Republican past advances another theory.

John O. Marsh Jr., a Washington attorney who was a member of President Ford's senior staff until 18 months ago, gave his alternative view in a address at Lori Fairfax Community College in Middletown, Va.

"The Soviet Union," Marsh said, "is waging an undeclared war which is a 'resources war.' Africa is the battleground because from this land come many of the resources and raw materials essential to Western society and especially the United States."

Noting the United States is not self-sufficient in many vital minerals, Marsh went on:

"If the riches of the African continent, which has been a sleeping giant, are denied to us, not only industry but our entire society will suffer."

Then broadening the geographical horizons of his assessment, Marsh concluded:

"We cannot ignore the possibility that Soviet designs on Africa, together with recent developments in Afghanistan and pressure on Iran, are part of a giant pincer movement aimed at imposing an energy and resources stranglehood on the West."

Marsh, a former Democratic House member from Virginia who became a Republican convert after serving as assistant secretary of defense for congressional liaison, had no national security role in the Ford administration.

However, a man who held a key foreign policy position at the time said privately he agrees with Marsh's view of Soviet intentions.

Publicly, the Carter administration views Soviet and Cuban moves in Africa as a communist version of 19th century colonialism. A number of important black nationalist leaders voice agreement.

So the president and his men are relatively free from any suggestion that the United States is motivated by narrow nationalistic concerns in denouncing Russian and Cuban involvement.

National Security Council experts reject Marsh's thesis and say they see no persuasive evidence that the Soviet Union and Cuba have been drawn to Africa by its resources or because of dreams of economic exploitation.

Trade figures can be interpreted to buttress the NSC view. Last year, for example, U.S. imports from Ethiopia, with its big complement of Soviet and Cuban advisers and troops, amounted to a mere $90 million.

Angola, the other major arena for massive Cuban involvement on the continent, looms larger in economic dealings with the United States. Its shipments here last year amounted to $310 million.

Yet significant numbers of Cuban troops are detailed to guard the Angolan facilities of Gulf Oil, which account for much of Angola's trade with the West. Without oil exports, the Angolan economy would collapse — reason enough to safeguard the source of the country's wealth.

Broadening the geographic horizons to include Afghanistan and Iran, as Marsh did, is another matter. The former Ford aide and the NSC draw closer together as the frame of reference is expanded.

Without question, President Carter and his foreign policy advisers agree that every Soviet move that could threaten the West's Middle East oil supplies, and the tanker routes out of the Persian Gulf and Arabian peninsula, are of strategic concern.

In that broader context, no one seems inclined to discount the potential for an East-West resources struggle.

Firm Seeks Means Of Extracting Gas

NEW YORK (UPI) — A nearly inexhaustible supply of natural gas lies beneath the half dozen or more states extending from West Virginia to eastern Texas in what is known as the Devonian shale belt.

Unlike western oil shale in which no gas is found, the Devonian, lying 900 to 1,000 feet thick, 3,000 feet or more below the earth's surface, is known to contain high quality natural gas.

Estimates vary on just how much gas there is, but the opinion is increasingly being reached by government and industrial experts that there could be as much as 300 trillion cubic feet, a nearly inexhaustible supply.

A report by the Congressional Office of Technology says Devonian shale could yield 15 to 25 trillion cubic feet of gas during the first 15 to 20 years of heavy extracts.

"Moreover, this gas lies right where it is needed most, under the most industrialized states," says Dr. George Sutherland, chairman of Rockcor, Inc., of Redmond Wash.

The problem is to get it out in large amounts. It's a problem Rockcor has been working on.

The company, a diversified high-technology manufacturer formed by Sutherland and two other Boeing alumni over 18 years ago, makes explosive fuels for rockets and rocket engines.

For the past six years it has been engaged in work on a method, called Astrofac, of using a liquid rocket fuel explosive injected into the Devonian shale to free the gas and make it flow in large amounts to the well.

"Gas has been extracted from Devonian shale for years," Sutherland explained, "but the flow obtained by using conventional drilling and ordinary explosives to break up the shale is relatively small. Still, it's attractive because the gas is of such high quality and the wells produce so much longer than conventional wells."

Rockcor's method has been tested in West Virginia, Kentucky and Texas so far and has succeeded in creating gas flows several times as great as those possible by any other method, Sutherland said.

"We inject up to 28,000 pounds of liquid explosive in each well at extremely higm pressures," he explained. "We don't know for sure how big a radius around the well the explosive penetrates but we do know it gets out the gas at reasonable cost."

The federal government has ruled that Devonian shale gas is entitled to premium price incentives because it is hard to extract. "That make our process even more attractive," Sutherland said.

Rockcor did not intend originally to get into the gas business itself, only to demonstrate the feasibility of Astrofac and sell its technology and explosives to petroleum companies.

Sutherland said, however, the company has found the long range prospects so attractive it now plans to use the technology itself on a fairly big scale.

"It's easy enough to sell the gas to a pipeline company after you go to the trouble to get it out of the ground."

ARGENTINE EXPORTS UP

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Shipments of manufactured goods from Argentina have been steadily increasing, reports the Ministry of Economy. Some 49 percent of the nation's total exports for 1977 were manufactured products, about evenly divided between industrial and agricultural items.

CETA Faces Termination

Twenty-two Comprehensive Employment Training Act projects in the county employing 246 workers may be terminated soon unless Congress approves further funding, said Juanita Forbes, public service employment director.

The workers are now connected with 22 CETA projects, of which all will be terminated at least by Dec. 31 unless further federal funds are allocated, Miss Forbes said.

The CETA projects, including one recently completed, total $854,070.

A CETA contract with Lubbock Housing Authority terminated June 30, but, Miss Forbes said, all 30 of the CETA workers on that project were either hired onto the regular staff or placed in another project. Several other contracts are scheduled to expire at the end of this month, she said.

Funding for the Title VI program originally was to last from Oct. 1, 1977 to Sept. 30, 1978. Miss Forbes said she did not know whether additional funding will be available for the three-month extension, or whether CETA will have to dip into its present budget.

The allocated budget totaled $1,497,203 — $1,148,461 for participant wages and $126,330 for the workers' fringe benefits.

CETA contracts under Title VI are with such entities as the City of Lubbock, Texas Tech University, South Plains College and Reese Air Force Base.

Miss Forbes said CETA did not start calling until Friday asking that workers be hired on a permanent basis. Since the future of Title VI is not clear, Miss Forbes said she is not trying to phase out the program all together, but to operate it on a lower basis.

"Between now and Dec. 31, we are going to try to find them (CETA clients) jobs either where they're working now, or somewhere else in the private sector," she said. "We try to avoid these people becoming part of the unemployed force again."

Last Friday staff members of employment and training programs operated through the South Plains Association of Governments began contacting public employers with an appeal for local, private jobs for the CETA workers. The move was in anticipation of an expected funding cutback Sept. 30.

Title VI program funds provide federal money for hiring unemployed professional, para-professional or otherwise skilled workers needed for "innovative" community projects, without the restriction that prospective workers be economically disadvantaged, according to Juanita Forbes, Title VI project director for the governmental panel.

More than half of the 279 Lubbock County CETA workers are professionals or para-professionals with college degrees, Miss Forbes said, making them easier to place with private or municipal employers than the remainder of the workers.

Miss Forbes said local officials decided to begin preparing to transfer many of the workers as soon as possible after Title VI funds were not approved for the coming year.

Funds for the present $1.8 million program expire Sept. 30, and U.S. Department of Labor officials have extended the deadline only through December.

Even the three-month funding is for an as-yet-undetermined program, Miss Forbes said, local leaders know only that the program will be able to accommodate some of the workers. It remains to be seen, she says, how many workers will be involved in the program or how much they'll be paid.

"What we are doing is this. We over-enrolled around a time in March at the instructions of the Department of Labor with the understanding then that throughout the rest of the year we would have to start decreasing enrollment (of workers on CETA payrolls). This is what we're anticipating now," she said.

"Between now and Sept. 30, we're trying to find out how many of our workers we can get picked up by their employers now, how many we will need to retrain and just what we can do with them. We've set our deadline as Friday to find that out."

"We've always known we would have to phase out at some time. We're just trying to keep from having to find out how many of those people we will have to carry right to the last minute," she said.

Staff members will make an extensive appeal, she said, to see as many CETA workers become municipal workers as possible, but "those that can't, we'll just carry along until we can get them jobs somewhere. No one is going to be fired. We can keep them on until we run out of money, but our concern is that those people get jobs. We don't want them thrown back on the labor force."

City and county personnel officials were unavailable for comment Sunday, but Vaughn Hendrie, the city's director of community relations, said to his knowledge city officials had not been approached as of Sunday about taking on additional workers.

"We've got vacancies that are budgeted positions, but as far as putting them in new or created positions, that's another story," Hendrie said.

City leaders already have expressed a desire to put a limit on city spending and cut local taxes — a goal at odds with the possibility of accepting new workers.

CETA workers have an average, annual salary of about $9,000, Miss Forbes said, and in the past have been connected with projects like the Canyon Lakes, senior citizens programs, housing programs and several projects with Texas Tech.

Miss Forbes said staff members will seek through Friday to obtain commitments from employers to take on workers.

From then until Sept. 30, she said, staff members will try to relocate or find other jobs for workers whose employers cannot absorb their jobs into payrolls.

After Sept. 30, limited funds will be available for some workers, but not the full 279, she said. Thereafter, she said, the program still could be abolished in congressional appropriations bills during funding consideration expected after December.

GANDERING ABOUT — Geese may be silly but they are cautious about making new friends. However, Terry Bare's attempt to get chummy with this Mackenzie Park flock succeeded — with the help of a little patience and a succulent morsel or two. Bare, 26, said it took about 15 minutes for the geese to get up enough courage to waddle over and take a "gander" at him. (Staff Photo by Dennis Copeland)

Abilene's Dry Forces Receive Injunction

AUSTIN — An attorney for the dry forces in Abilene's controversial local option election last month says a temporary restraining order has been issued by a state district judge here prohibiting the Alcholic Beverage Commission from granting beverage permits in the West Texas city.

Buck Wood said Sunday the order was obtained Friday from State District Court Judge Charles Mathews.

Wood said the action was brought on behalf of two Abiline residents who are challenging the legality of a second canvass of the June 17 election.

The results of the June election found the wets with 11,591 votes and the drys with 11,160.

However, the Taylor County commissioners canvassed the vote on July 10 and refused to count the votes from one box. This action gave the drys a 35-vote victory.

AT PAT WALKER'S
WE'RE CELEBRATING OUR SIXTH YEAR IN LUBBOCK.

READ WHAT SOME OF OUR PATRONS HAVE TO SAY ABOUT OUR PROGRAM.

Connie Clifton formerly of Lubbock says:
When I began my program at Pat Walker's Figure Salon, I weighed 178 lbs. and wore a size 20 dress. Today I weigh 126 lbs. and wear a size 8 dress. I can lounge around the pool in my new size 8 bikini!

Ms. Clifton is now Manager of the Pat Walker Salon in Garland, Texas.

I am so pleased with the success I have had with the Pat Walker program. Pounds and inches came off to give me a new figure I can be proud of! I can really say I'm glad I did it.
—Vivian Rodgers Lubbock

Ann Haynes Lubbock Says,
"The Personnel has been so encouraging in any way they could. You don't starve yourself. I am the same size I was twenty years ago." Mrs. Haynes has lost over 50 lbs. and 55" at Pat Walkers.

GOREN ON BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AK965 ♡7 ◇J852 ♣962
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♡	2 ◇	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—Your hand has excellent playing strength, but for the moment, you should be content to probe for a possible spade contract by bidding a mere two spades. Any response to an overcall is a forward-going move, so partner will strive to make a rebid on the slightest pretext. If he shows disfavor for your suit, you can support diamonds at your next turn.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A ♡A6 ◇K109843 ♣AJ106
The bidding has proceeded:

East	South

What action do you take?

A.—Bid four diamonds. Your point count is sufficient for a double. However, partner's likely response is four hearts and since he might have a bust, you would be awkwardly placed. Unless partner has a long suit, four hearts could be headed for a multi-trick set, and if you attempt to correct to five diamonds, that might be even a worse contract because your suit is too porous.

Q.3—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K104 ♡J8752 ◇K8 ♣AJ6
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Since partner opened third-in-hand, you don't want to hang him by unilaterally committing the hand to game. This is a close choice between a jump to three spades or two no trump. Since most of our values are prime, we prefer the jump raise in partner's suit even though we have only three-card support.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K963 ♡874 ◇AQ ♣AJ108
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	2 NT	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Partner has issued an invitation to game, and you should be delighted to accept. A raise to four spades is the recommended choice because of your excellent trump support. It's true that three no trump might be a better contract, but you have no satisfactory way to explore that possibility.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A5 ♡KJ762 ◇AJ5 ♣AJ8
Partner opens the bidding with one spade. What do you respond?

A.—You almost have the values for a jump shift, but that would not be an advisable tactic on this hand because you are not sure where you want to play the hand. Either major suit or no trump could be the best spot. We suggest a response of two hearts. Partner's rebid over this simple change of suit will probably be more illuminating than any rebid he makes under the pressure of a jump shift response.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South with 40 on score you hold:
♠AQ83 ♡A1092 ◇KJ7 ♣93
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠	3 ◇

What action do you take?

A.—You are likely to close out the rubber by bidding three spades, but why select a risky action when you have available a solid alternative. Partner can easily be a bit heavy for a raise to two spades with 40 on score. If that is the case, you can punish East severely for competing. Double. If partner has a weak hand, he can always retreat to spades.

Q.7—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQ1072 ♡AK953 ◇83 ♣5
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	Pass	Dble.

What action do you take?

A.—Partner doesn't have much, but then again, you don't need much for him to make a game. For example, five little hearts and a singleton spade would give you an excellent play for four hearts. East's balancing double doesn't necessarily show hearts, so we would continue describing our hand by rebidding two hearts.

Q.8—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠QJ87 ♡A92 ◇A106 ♣A105
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	Pass	1 NT	?

What action do you take?

A.—Pass. While you probably have the best hand at the table, you can't expect much from partner, and the opponents have already bid your longest suit. To enter the auction at this point, when your left-hand opponent has not yet limited his hand, marks you as either very venturesome or very rich.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: Things are changing so fast on the social scene, I'm not sure how far a woman can go these days and still be a lady. Some questions:

Should a woman ever call a man who has shown an interest in her, and ask to see him?

If a woman would like a physical relationship with a man (holding hands, kissing, etc.) should she ever make the first move?

How do you think a man would react to a woman's taking the initiative?

KAREN

Dear Karen: Men differ in their reactions to aggressive women, but my mail tells me that in most cases, a man would welcome a call from a woman telling him frankly that she would like to see him. There is nothing "unladylike" about a woman's taking the initiative or telling a man she thinks he's attractive. Not only would most men feel flattered, it would save a lot of time and eliminate of lot of game-playing.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: I'm 26, single (by choice) and not a bad-looking woman. There's a man (also single) who works where I work. Solly and I kid around a lot, but he's more of a friend than a boyfriend.

At an office party last Christmas, I told Solly if he lost 30 pounds he'd be terrific looking. He said if I gave him an "incentive" — like spending the night with him — he'd lose 30 pounds.

Well, I couldn't see Solly losing 30 pounds, so I said it was a deal.

Much to my surprise, Solly went on a diet, and so far he's lost 26 pounds, and I know he'll lose the other four soon. I never planned on paying off. Now what I do?

NERVOUS

Dear Nervous: Pay off. And spend the night reading the Bible to Solly.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: I am a widow, attempting to run a small motel. I must pay the mortgage, taxes, insurance, etc., and live on what's left.

I have no hired help and must do most of the repairs myself.

I keep my rates low to compete with the luxury credit-card trade.

My problem is that so many "guests" carry away my property that I am being driven out of business. Will you help me, Abby, and print the following for travelers:

"I don't mind your using my towels to wipe off your windshield — but please leave the towel; don't toss it into your car. Or if you take my washcloths to wipe of your kids' hands and faces en route, please leave a quarter to replace the cloth — that's what it costs me. And when you accidentally carry off a key, drop it into any mailbox. I'll gladly pay for its return, since it's a lot cheaper than having new keys made.

"And as for you gals who take blankets, pillows, coffee pots, dishes and silver — have a heart! I'm sure you have much better at home.

"I don't want to start charging deposits against the return of such items; neither do I want to turn your license number in to the motel blacklist.

"After you've gone, and I go to clean your cabin and check my loss, it makes me sick to realize that I've actually lost money on you."

The Slim Gourmet

Next time you reach for an ear of corn and some misguided dieter tells you it's fattening, don't hit him with it. Why waste it! Simply explain why corn is the least fattening of the so-called "starchy" foods.

Not only is corn lower in calories than equivalent amounts of bread, potatoes, spaghetti and rice, it's higher in fiber, the new darling of diet-watchers. Only a baked potato comes close. Here's how similar amounts compare in 10 gram (3.5 ozs.) amounts, gauging the amount of fiber and number of calories:

Corn, cooked on the cob, .7 gram fiber, 91 calories; baked potato, .6 gram fiber, 93 calories; bread, .2 gram fiber, 269 calories; brown rice, cooked, .3 gram fiber, 119 calories; white rice, cooked, .1 gram fiber, 109 calories; spaghetti, cooked firm, .1 gram fiber, 148 calories; and spaghetti, cooked tender, .1 gram fiber, and 111 calories.

"What about the butter?" asks Misguided Dieter. "Who eats corn without butter?"

"I do," you can claim (if you're really virtuous.) If not, point out that it's only the butter you EAT that counts. Butter that slides off or rolls down your arm has no calories. There's no way you can get more than a teaspoon of butter to adhere to a steamy ear of corn...but bread, potatoes, pasta and rice will absorb as much butter as you care (or dare) to add.

Corn is no slouch in the vitamin department, either. That delicious yellow color signifies vitamin A (about 400 units per ear). Corn is a better place to get vitamin A than butter!

Once you've put an ear of corn on your plate, there's not much room for a super-size serving of steak. And corn takes time to eat. Your tubby tablemate can put away three buttered rolls before you're past the first four rows of kernels.

TRIM TIPS FOR CORN LOVERS:

Have an ear of corn in place of — not in addition to — bread, potatoes, pasta or rice.

Sprinkle it with butter-flavored salt instead of butter and margarine. Or use diet margarine, half the calories.

Buy it fresh as possible, from local markets. Corn is as perishable as fish. (Doesn't "spoil" quickly, really, but turns starchy within 24 hours of picking.)

Cook and freeze what you can't use tonight. Promptly cooked, frozen and reheated, corn will taste fresher than "fresh" corn kicking around the refrigerator all week.

For best results, drop corn in boiling water and cook only 2 to 4 minutes. Or steam in a basket over boiling water 4 to 5 minutes. Never leave it in hot water.

To freeze leftovers, cool rapidly, then wrap individual ears in plastic wrap or foil.

Defrost thoroughly. Otherwise the cob will be cold.

Drop defrosted ears in boiling water just until the kernels are heated through. Or, microwave plastic-wrapped ears until hot to the touch.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

According to statistics, my children had a 50-50 chance of inheriting Tardy Syndrome.

Their father has it. It's a recessive gene that renders its victims helpless to be on time for anything.

I've told you before how in my husband's lifetime he has never heard the Star-Spangled Banner, has never seen the lights dim at a concert, has never seen a football team with clean uniforms, and has never seen a bride coming DOWN the aisle. (Come to think of it, we met over a Belated Birthday Card display.)

The other morning as I put his 44-minute egg in front of him I said, "What time do you have to be at work?"

He said, "Eight o'clock."

"It's eight o'clock now."

"Terrific," he said, "I've only got time for one more cup of coffee, then I'll have to dash."

I slumped down into a chair. "I don't know how to tell you this, but you have passed Tardy Syndrome down to your son. It's true. The director at Brucie's camp called last week and said he is very disturbed with Brucie.

"Not once since he arrived has he gotten up early enough to salute the flag. He has never been first in line for anything and for him roll call starts with the letter H. I mean, you have to wonder about a child who has never boarded a bus while it is standing still."

"Why don't you talk with the doctor?" asked my husband.

"I have. He said last week that Brucie has all the traits of Tardy Syndrome. He was an eleven-month baby, never showed up on time for birthdays, was 12 before he lost his baby teeth and didn't go through the terrible two's until he was three and a half."

"What did Brucie say to that?"

"He wasn't there. He was late for the appointment."

"What do you want me to do?"

"Set an example and talk to him."

"I'll do it tonight," he said, then added, "I'll call you if I'm going to be on time."

ELEGANT BARBECUE

Planning an elegant barbecue? Take a tip from the Orient and present each guest with an O-shibori to cleanse their hands. Dip guest-size terrycloth towels in warm water, scented with cologne. Wring out; fold in half vertically then roll up. Wrap towels in aluminum foil and heat in oven at 300 degrees for 10 minutes. It's a beautiful finish to a steak teriyaki barbecue.

SHOWER CURTAIN

Follow these easy steps for giving your mildewed shower curtain a lift: Brush off mildewed spots as best you can. Then wash in a gallon of water to which you have added half a cup of chlorine bleach and a small amount of detergent. Run the curtain through your washer in hot water on a shortened cycle. This same technique also works for plastic curtains and kitchen appliance covers.

Sauce Base Enhances Novel Summer Dishes

NEW YORK, N.Y. (Special) — Summertime cooking! It should be interesting, easy and fast. After all, if there's one thing you can do without on a hot summer evening, it's time spent over an even hotter stove.

One sure way to beat the kitchen heat is to prepare dishes that can be served more than once. And that doesn't mean leftovers, either. It means creating side dishes that have a unique taste when first served hot, and an equally good but different appeal when served again, cold.

Next time you're whipping up some accompaniments for a barbecue, try these double-duty dishes. They're easy, as all foods for barbecues should be, and begin with a versatile red sauce base that enhances the flavors of many favorite recipes. All you need are some basic items: tomato paste, onions, seasonings and hot pepper sauce. In fact, you can make a big batch of sauce ahead of time, refrigerate and use in a host of ways.

Try it in Ruby Ratatouille, a mixture of summer squash, green pepper, celery, onions, spices, or in Sassy Spanish Rice, a piquant version of the classic. Both dishes are excellent served hot with grilled meats, and are just as good chilled when the flavors are subtler, yet still quite distinct.

Another feature of these dishes is how easily they can be altered to suit the individual palate. Just keep a bottle of hot pepper sauce on the table, and let everyone adjust seasoning to taste. In fact, you'll want to keep hot pepper sauce near the barbecue, too, since it really perks up the flavors of grilled meats.

RUBY RATATOUILLE

3 tbsps. vegetable oil
4 cups sliced zucchini squash, unpared (2 large)
2 cups sliced green pepper (1½ med.)
2 cups sliced celery (cut in 1-inch pieces)
½ cup sliced onion (1 small)
1 clove garlic, minced
1 recipe Red Sauce Base
2 tsps. sugar
1½ tsps. dried leaf basil
1¼ tsps. dried leaf oregano, crumbled
1¼ tsps. salt

In large skillet, heat oil. Add squash, green pepper, celery, onion and garlic; mix well. Cover. Cook over low heat 15 minutes, stirring occasionally. Add Red Sauce Base, sugar, basil, oregano and salt; mix well. Cover. Cook 10 minutes longer. Serve hot or cold. If desired, serve with additional hot pepper sauce. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

SASSY SPANISH RICE

1 recipe Red Sauce Base
1 bay leaf
¼ tsp. salt
2 cups cooked rice (½ cup raw)
¼ cup water
½ cup grated Cheddar cheese
½ cup chopped pimiento
¼ cup chopped parsley

In large saucepan, make Red Sauce Base. Add bay leaf and additional ¼ teaspoon salt. Simmer 15 minutes, according to recipe instruction. Stir in cooked rice, green pepper and water. Cover, simmer 5 minutes, stirring occasionally. Add cheese, pimiento and parsley; heat, stirring constantly, until cheese is melted. If desired, serve with additional hot pepper sauce.

RED SAUCE BASE

2 tbsps. salad oil
1 med. onion, chopped (½ cup)
1 can (6-oz.) tomato paste
1 cup water
1 tbsp. sugar
1 tsp. hot pepper sauce
½ tsp. salt

Heat oil in medium saucepan; saute onion until clear, about 5 minutes. Stir in tomato paste, water, sugar, hot pepper sauce and salt. Simmer 15 minutes.

Freezer Items Safe During 'Blackouts'

By LOUISE COOK
AP Writer

The lights flicker and fail. After the search for candles, the worries begin. What about all the food in the frezer?

You don't have to sit and watch your budget melt away during a power failure. Many of the items can be salvaged.

According to a frozen food industry information service, a freezer that is fully stocked, with food that is completely frozen will keep temperatures at a satisfactory level for two days, providing that it is not opened.

Resist the temptation to peek. "Keep that coldness inside. Don't let it out," said spokesman Marge Ferroli. Cover the freezer with a blanket or old newspapers to provide extra insulation.

The emptier the freezer, the greater the loss. If the freezer is less than half full, the food will keep for a maximum of one day only, Miss Ferroli said. Food stored in the freezer compartment of a refrigerator — or in the refrigerator itself — is more difficult to save; don't take a chance with foods that look or smell spoiled.

If your freezer will be without power for an extended period of time, consider adding dry ice. Twenty-five pounds of dry ice will hold the temperature below freezing in a half-full, 10-cubic-foot freezer for two to three days. Do not place the dry ice directly on the containers of food; put a layer of cardboard in between.

Some items can be refrozen if they are only partially thawed. As a general rule, you may safely refreeze foods that are still under 40 degrees Fahrenheit. (Fish is the exception; it tends to spoil very quickly and usually cannot be refrozen once it has reached 32 degrees.) When in doubt, look for ice crystals in the food. The existence of the crystals means the food is between 32 and 40 degrees and can be refrozen, Ms. Ferroli said.

Foods that have completely thawed out usually should be discarded or, if still good, used immediately. You can, however, refreeze red meats and vegetables if you cook them first.

Note: Foods that have been refrozen probably won't taste as good as those that remained frozen. They also will not last as long; use refrozen items as soon as possible.

Under normal conditions — no blackouts or brownouts — frozen foods will last up to a year if stored consistently at zero degrees Fahrenheit. The amount of time you can keep individual products varies widely, however. Most meats, particularly cooked ones, should not be kept for more than a few months.

The ice-cube section of a conventional, one-door refrigerator generally is kept at 15 to 20 degrees Fahrenheit; you can store frozen foods in this compartment, but should use them within a few days. Foods stored in the frozen food compartment of a one-door refrigerator with a temperature of 10 to 15 degrees will last for several weeks and foods placed in the freezer compartment of a combination refrigerator-freezer at a maximum of 8 degrees will last for several months.

If you have a separate freezer, you should check the temperature periodically with a special refrigerator-freezer thermometer. Put the thermometer in the front of the storage area, fairly high up in the food load, and leave it overnight. If the temperature is above zero, adjust the control and check again in 24 hours.

More and more people are using freezers these days to take advantage of specials on meat. Frozen foods also have increased in popularity because of the rising use of microwave ovens, the growth of one and two-person households and the rise in the number of working women.

Dollar sales of frozen foods in 1977 totalled $7.8 billion, an increase of 12.9 percent from 1976, the service reported. In terms of tonnage, sales increased 3 percent from 1976 to 1977. The biggest growth came in the areas of pizza, prepared vegetables and so-called ethnic foods.

To make the best use of a freezer, it is important to select one that is the right size. A freezer that sits half empty most of the time wastes energy and money. The U.S. Department of Agriculture estimates that you should allow six cubic feet of space for each family member; you can figure on getting three pounds of food in every cubic foot.

EYE ON SAFETY

For safety sake, never apply eye color on the inside rim of the eye. Save the lining for underneath the eye or on top of the lid.

Clip 'n' Cook

FISKGRATIN
(Swedish Fish Au Gratin)

2 lbs. cod fillets, fresh or frozen
1½ tsps. salt
1 tsp. dried dill weed
3 cups hot seasoned mashed potatoes
¼ cup butter or margarine, melted
½ cup shredded Swiss cheese
Paprika
¼ cup finely chopped onion
2 tbsps. flour
1 cup milk
2 egg yolks, beaten
1 can (4½-oz.) tiny shrimp, or 1 cup small frozen Alaskan shrimp, drained
1 tbsp. lemon juice

Thaw frozen fish and shrimp. Arrange fish in shallow 3-qt. baking dish or on a large heatproof platter. Sprinkle with 1 teaspoon salt and ½ teaspoon dill weed. Cover with foil and bake in hot 425 degree oven, 10 minutes. Remove from oven; remove foil and spoon off any liquid collected. Spoon 6 large dollops of mashed potatoes at either end of fish platter. Drizzle 2 tablespoons butter or margarine over fish and potatoes; return to oven. Bake uncovered 10 to 12 minutes longer or until fish flakes easily when tested with a fork. Sprinkle cheese over potatoes and sprinkle with paprika. Return to oven just until cheese softens. While fish is cooking prepare sauce. Cook onion in remaining 2 tablespoons butter or margarine until onion is tender, but not brown. Stir in flour and remaining ½ teaspoon salt. Add milk; cook, stirring constantly. Return to saucepan and cook, stirring constantly about 2 minutes. Add shrimp, lemon juice and remaining ½ teaspoon dill weed; mix and heat. Spoon a small amount of sauce over fish and serve remaining sauce with fish. Makes 6 servings.

Instant mashed potatoes may be used. Reduce water called for by 1/3 cup.

SEARCH Program Gives Individualized Education

CLOVIS, Calif. (AP) -Once there was a high school student who died; and nobody — teachers or students — could remember anything about him.

That true story didn't happen here, where a pilot program is under way to keep students from getting lost in the crowd."So many times a kid goes through school and nobody ever knew him," says Robert Slabey, director of Students Explore, Analyze, Research, Care, Hope (SEARCH).

The program in this central California community, newest of three in the state, provides personalized, individualized education with the human touch to 207 of the school's 900 students in 9th and 10th grades.

The program will more than double next year when 11th and 12th grades are phased into the new school.

Admittance to the intensive counseling program is voluntary with no special requirement.

Highland High School in Bakersfield was among the original group of seven schools in the United States and Canada that began the program eight years ago.

Now, Highland's entire student population of 1,500 and all teachers and administrative staff participate in the "highly successful" program, says assistant principal Bob Millikin.

"Results we're getting from youngsters in college now show that the program has been of high value to them," Millikin says.

All the programs have three things in common — teacher-counselors, continuous progress and individual instruction.

Slabey says five teacher-counselors at Clovis West are "the backbone" of the program, providing students with a friend on campus they can go to for help with any problem, either academic or personal.

The teacher-counselor keeps track of attendance, advises on college and career and serves as guidance counselor, psychiatrist and teacher all in one.

Parent conferences also play an important role in the program, Slabey says.

Working with parents, the teacher-counselor can solve almost any problem the student has, he feels.

Slabey calls the teacher-counselor "a definite alternative to the traditional counseling system" where one high school counselor is responsible for hundreds of students.

"Some kids need the one-to-one approach and they see their teacher-counselor in the classroom daily."

The five teacher-counselors for 207 students allows a ratio of about one to 40.

Slabey says the premise of continuous progress is to let students work at their own pace as long as they complete certain requirements at specific dates during the semester and complete all work by the end of the term.

"The Clovis philosophy will never evolve to that of some schools where they give the student the work and tell them to come back in 10 weeks," he adds. "Here we work in a self-contained classroom with continuous monitoring of the students' progress."

The curriculum includes basic subjects required for graduation plus an extra year of math and an additional semester of English. Elective courses and physical education are taken outside the program.

Slabey says individualized instruction means the work is designed to help each student improve their abilities and challenging faster students with special projects.

"For example, if a student needs to work on writing skills and also has a science fair project, we tell him to write the science paper and turn it in for credit on paragraph writing," he said.

"We try to motivate the student in what he likes to do and tie it into what he has to do," Slabey says.

BARBECUE

Turn meat on the barbecue when you see little bubbles on its top surface. One turn is usually plenty. Use tongs or a pancake turner so that you don't puncture the meat and let juices escape.

DEMONSTRATOR ARRESTED — Helmeted Oxnard, Calif., police subdue a rioter Sunday outside the Oxnard civic auditorium where the Ku Klux Klan was showing a racist film to make "a statement about the white majority." The Klan reportedly has been trying to form a chapter in Oxnard. About 300 demonstrators stormed the auditorium to break in where the Klan had barricaded itself. (AP Laserphoto)

Several Hurt, Jailed At Anti-Klan Rally

OXNARD, Calif. (AP) — An anti-Ku Klux Klan demonstration in this racially tense coastal community erupted into a violent melee with police that left more than a dozen people injured and 13 in jail.

"All hell broke loose," police Lt. Joe Hawkins said as the 300 demonstrators, mostly Mexican-Americans, shouted "Kill the Klan," threw bricks and bottles, and swung pipes and two-by-fours at the Klansmen on Sunday.

At least eight people were reported seriously injured, including four demonstrators, one Klansmen and three police officers. Seven other officers were treated for minor cuts and bruises, police said.

The 13 demonstrators arrested were charged with inciting to riot, assaulting police officers, carrying concealed weapons and refusing to disperse.

Hawkins said 300 demonstrators were massed outside Oxnard Community Center when 40 Klan members — escorted by private security guards and guard dogs — arrived in a moving van for the showing of "The Birth of a Nation," the D.W. Griffith film that depicts blacks in demeaning roles.

The Klansmen shouted "white power" at the demonstrators as they marched into the auditorium, and 60 law enforcement officers used nightsticks to keep the two sides separated.

The Klansmen barricaded themselves inside the community center while police and demonstrators battled, then slipped out a back delivery entrance and sped away in their moving van.

The confrontation came while three Mexican-American youths face trial on murder and rape charges in the bludgeoning death of 17-year-old Paul Yenney Jr., a popular Oxnard high school student, and the rape and beating of his girlfriend, Linda Fiene, 18.

The attack on the teen-age couple, both white, last Oct. 14 further polarized strained relations between well-to-do whites and poor Mexican-Americans in this close-knit community of 100,000.

The Klan claimed it was showing the film as a benefit for the Yenney and Fiene families, although the families said they never were contacted by the Klan about such a benefit and would reject any money from the group.

The Klan has been trying to organize a chapter in Oxnard, and Police Chief Robert Owens claimed Klansmen were trying to exploit the Yenney slaying to attract followers.

HEW Official Notes Reduced College Aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Commissioner of Education Ernest L. Boyer is forecasting that the boom days are over for growth in federal aid to America's schools and colleges.

Boyer said — after two years in which the federal education budget shot up 45 percent to nearly $13 billion — austerity is the keyword for the fiscal 1980 budget now in preparation.

"There won't be any significant increases overall for education. Some programs will show some modest increases, while others will probably show some reductions," he predicted in an interview.

Two major efforts, the $3.3 billion Title I program aiding poor youngsters and the $972 million for handicapped students, remain at the top of Boyer's list of priorities. He hints that more funds may be found for them.

Efforts in the Nixon and Ford administrations to hold the line on education spending always hit snags in Congress, and the Carter administration may have to relearn that lesson. Boyer said California's property-tax cutting Proposition 13 has helped create "a mood of resistance to spending," but the overriding constraints are the president's concern about balancing the budget and controlling inflation.

Boyer, 49, maintains that federal dollars have made a big difference in educating poor children and have "sparked a social revolution" by enabling them to afford college.

The same national studies that paint a gloomy picture of how much 17-year-olds are learning also show that youngsters in earlier grades are making progress, said the former chancellor of the State University of New York, who has been with the federal government 17 months now.

"I am convinced that our problem in the schools increasingly is not in the early grades, and is not related to teaching language and mathematics. I think we have turned that around considerably," he said.

"The major American education problems are in the upper grade levels, and most especially in the high schools. Title I money is not sufficient to follow young people along through all of the grades, and some of the early gains are not sustained," he said.

Grocers Adopt 'No Frills' Prices

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

The tissues are unscented, the peas are uneven and the packages are unmarked.

But the prices are lower. And consumers apparently are willing to skip the trimmings on "no-frills" groceries and take the savings.

Retailers report the unbranded products introduced in supermarkets from coast to coast in recent months are selling well, despite generally low-key advertising. They say they do not have — or will not release — specific sales figures, but spokesmen for some of the first stores to stock the products are unanimous in their enthusiasm for the concept.

The idea started in France in 1976 when a chain named Carrefour introduced a group of low-cost products packed in plain cans or boxes, without any brand name. Jewel Cos. started testing the plan in February 1977 and formally introduced it in Midwest stores eight months later. Star Markets of Cambridge, Mass., a part of the Jewel operation, followed suit and so did retailers across the country. AP, the nation's second-largest chain, recently started a line of generic products in its stores in the Washington, D.C., area.

How much can you save by skipping the frills? Prices vary, but the products in the plain wrappers generally sell for 25 percent to 35 percent less than national brands. At one AP store, for example, a 15½-ounce can of cut green beans was selling for 31 cents, about 33 percent less per ounce than the national brand.

In some cases, the no-frills products are virtually identical to national or house brands except for packaging. Packaging costs vary widely, but the Department of Agriculture says that in 1976, the latest year for which figures are available, 8.7 cents of every dollar consumers spent for farm-produced foods went for packaging.

In other cases, there IS a difference. Paper products are often available in white only and lack perfume. Detergents may not be as strong as the brand-name cleansers. Canned fruits and vegetables are standard quality rather than fancy. Peas may not be uniform in size, for example, and fruit may be bruised, but the stores say the difference is a matter of eye appeal, rather than nutritional value.

Jewel says its 108 no-frills products, available in 200 of the chain's 235 stores, sell for 10 percent to 35 percent less than brand-name items. "It is still in the expansion stage," said spokesman Michael Hatt. He said the store had no sales figures, but, when asked if the products were moving well, he replied emphatically: "Oh, yes."

Hatt said people generally try non-food products first. "I suspect there's less brand loyalty in the non-food area," he added.

John Vecchione of Star agreed. "I think the consumer is more willing to gamble with something she doesn't have to put on her plate," said Vecchione, explaining that the paper goods line of no-frills products "seems to be moving best."

Also popular, according to Vecchione, is dry dog food in five-pound sacks. "It's outselling every other brand by a 2-to-1 margin," he said.

On an overall basis, Vecchione said the 60 items in the line were "moving very, very well." He said the store was constantly trying to introduce new products. Among recent additions to the line: ice cream, tea bags, frozen french fries and frozen stuffed clams.

Robert Wunderle, a spokesman for Supermarket General Corp., which introduced no-frill items to its 105 Pathmark stores on the East Coast earlier this year said the products were selling "very well. An indication of their acceptance is that we started on March 1 with 27 products and today we have approximately 60."

Wunderle noted that most of the products are staples for which there is an established customer demand. "We know that there is a market there for peanut butter, for example," he said. "We're just giving the consumer a third alternative (to national and house brands)."

Consumer Reports, published by Consumers Union, recently checked five no-frills foods from Pathmark and found that they were "at least fair in taste and looks and sometimes as good as, or even better than, the name brand." The magazine also said the items were "up to par in terms of nutrients and net weight."

One Washington-area housewife who tried A&P's no-frills line reported that all the items sampled "seem to be very good."

Marcia Lewandowski said she started with the paper products, then bought some of the canned goods, including peas and creamed corn. "Sure there are some small ones (peas) in there," she said. "So what? If I were having Jimmy Carter for dinner I might get the fancy peas."

Brighter Lights Approved

DETROIT (AP) — Now that the federal government has seen the light, General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co. are preparing to equip some 1979 model cars with new headlamps, designed to improve night vision by 20 percent.

The Transportation Department approved the new design last week, after determining the new sealed beams will not seriously impair the vision of oncoming drivers.

GM spokesman Don Postma said Saturday he does not know which models will carry the new headlights, but he said they will be installed on "some luxury models" at the start of the 1979 model year.

The luxury compact Lincoln Versailles will carry the brighter headlights in 1979, Robert H. Harnar, manager of engineering and product news at Ford, said Saturday.

The new headlights provide more efficient power, enabling the auto companies to use a lighter-weight alternator system, said Harnar. This reduces car weight, aiding the automakers in fuel economy efforts, the Ford spokesman said.

Veteran Awaits Judge's Decision

By ROBERT M. COCKRUM
Avalanche-Journal Staff

John David DePauw, 28, said today he realized all his chances have run out if he were to get in trouble with the law again. DePauw, arrested 16 times, 10 on drug incidents, since his return from Vietnam in the early 1970s, asked 99th District Court Judge Thomas L. Clinton for commitment to a drug rehabilitation program in Dallas.

Prosecutors want DePauw, who received an eight-year probated sentence for heroin possession in 1975, sent to prison. DePauw is awaiting trial Aug. 28 on charges of aggravated robbery in connection with an April 1977 residential holdup.

Clinton said he would decide DePauw's fate in the next few days, after checking with others about the Dallas program and the defense's claim that DePauw has helped authorities in drug investigations.

The Army veteran is accused of holding Mrs. James Layland of 3013 80th St. at gunpoint while robbing a safe of more than $7,000. The crime was foiled by the woman's son, who called police and then hid himself in a bedroom closet with a double-barreled shotgun.

Craig Layland, 14 at the time of the incident, fired a shot at the suspect as the man tried to escape through the garage. Police said DePauw apparently shot himself in the left arm during the panic caused by a shotgun blast and not being able to raise the garage door.

DePauw admitted during the hearing that he was on the drug "speed" at the time he went to the Layland residence dressed in a suit and at first representing himself as a preacher.

When prosecutor Jim Darnell asked details of planning the robbery, DePauw's answer each time was, "I don't remember."

Psychologist Richard L. Wall told the court that DePauw suffers from a physiological personality disorder that is a little less severe than a "manic depressive psychosis," which is marked by high and intense elation followed by severe depression.

Wall said the problem was not unusual among drug users and alcoholics. He also said tests indicated DePauw was of above average intelligence.

"Did he know the difference between right and wrong?" Darnell asked, referring to the Layland robbery. The answer was "yes."

Wall was asked if he could tell when a person was being "forthright and honest."

"Yes," said Wall, "but that's not saying I can't be conned."

Defense attorney George Thompson asked that two county jail prisoners, in court for hearings of their own, be removed from the room before DePauw went on with his testimony.

DePauw, at first out on bond following the alleged Layland robbery but jailed again when he failed to report to his probation officer, told the court he continued to smoke marijuana two months after returning to the Lubbock County Jail last January.

He said that he had helped the sheriff stem the influx of the contraband since that time and that he also had aided the Department of Public Safety in a drug investigation several years ago.

He gave no details.

DePauw is seeking commitment to the "Help Is Possible " program in Dallas where there are currently 15 persons going through the three-step rehabilitation plan. A HIP representative said those involved in the program are under judicial pressure to make good in kicking the drug habit, although there are no locks on the doors at the facility.

Failed Robbery Called 'Prank'

EAST NORWICH, N.Y. (UPI) — The man walked into the restaurant with his undershirt pulled over his head, announced a holdup and the cashier broke up laughing.

Then, while the man clutched what looked like a gun, an off-duty security guard handcuffed him.

But the man turned around and said, "Hey let me go, it's only a sorority prank," and the guard uncuffed him. The man, his head still buried beneath the shirt, fled.

Nassau County Police said Sunday, however, they are handling the case as an attempted robbery. The giveaway: "He said sorority instead of fraternity," a police spokesman said.

Police said the strange masked man walked into Howard Johnson's restaurant Saturday morning, waited in line to get to the cashier and announced a stickup.

Bundy Denies Guilt

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) — Former Utah law student Theodore Bundy, acting as his own attorney, denied today that he was guilty of murdering two Florida State University women students and savagely beating three others Jan. 15.

Bundy, described by the FBI as a suspect in as many as 36 murders in Florida and the West, refused Circuit Judge John Rudd's offer of a public defender and indicated he will be his own lawyer until Atlanta defense attorney Millard Farmer is given permission to represent him.

Rudd said he will rule on Farmer's motion to enter the case Wednesday, and set Bundy's trial for Oct 3. It is estimated the trial will take three to four weeks.

After the 10-minute arraignment, Farmer told reporters he will delay filing a petition in federal court seeking to represent Bundy until after Rudd rules. "If I'm not allowed to represent him, he'll represent himself," Farmer said.

TODAY'S STOCK PRICES

Wall Street Prices Edge .26 Higher

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices edged upward today in response to favorable news on the economic outlook.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had climbed 22.87 points last week, gained another .26 to 856.55 by noontime today.

Gainers outpaced losers by a 3-2 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The Dow would have shown a gain of close to 2 points had it not been for ex-dividends, or dividend-payment adjustments, involving four of the average's component stocks.

The government reported this morning that the index of leading economic indicators, which is designed to function as a kind of crystal ball for business activity, climbed 0.4 percent in June after an upward-revised 0.1 percent advance in May.

Separately, a trade association of machine-tool producers reported that orders received by the industry jumped 54 percent in June.

In addition, analysts noted continuing hopes that interest rates might be at or near a peak after their steady rise over the last several months.

Citicorp topped the active list, unchanged at 24⅛. A 500,000-share block traded at that price.

The NYSE's composite index gained .07 to 56.25. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .43 at 154.58.

Volume on the Big Board came to 13.49 million shares at noontime, against 13.84 million at the same point Friday.

Young Leftist Group To Air CIA 'Crimes'

HAVANA, Cuba (AP) — Young leftists at the 11th World Festival of Youth and Students are staging a five-day, international tribunal to air charges of alleged crimes committed by the CIA and other so-called imperialist forces.

The opening session Sunday in the former home of the now-abolished Cuban Congress featured witnesses from the western Sahara, where Algerian-backed rebels are fighting the army of Morocco's conservative royal government.

Later sessions will center on the activities of the United States, the prime target of the festival's "anti-imperialist solidarity" theme.

Allegations of CIA abuses in Chile and Cuba will be heard. A delegation from the United States, one of 145 countries represented at the festival, will discuss the "evil effects" of imperialism on American youth.

On the festival's lighter side, there were concerts Sunday night by delegations from Hungary, Bulgaria and Romania and cultural presentations by youths from Greece and Equatorial Guinea. Popular music was performed by groups from West Berlin, Chile and the Philippines.

More than 100 different activities are planned each day of the week-long festival, which ends Saturday.

Not all the 20,000 delegates are young. The 2,000-member Soviet contingent, the largest one, is headed by longtime Communist Party leaders.

Also present is Vietnam's Xuan Thuy, who took part in the negotiation of the Vietnam peace agreement.

Another not-so-young delegate is Yasser Arafat, the leader of the Palestine Liberation Organization, who held a noisy news conference Sunday attended by many of the 1,569 foreign reporters and photographers present for the festival.

Arafat claimed Israeli troops killed 1,180 civilians in their invasion of southern Lebanon four months ago, but there had not been a word of protest from President Carter.

"Why doesn't Carter remember it as a violation of human rights?" he asked. "Carter thinks our blood is cheap because we belong to the Third World."

When a questioner asked whether the PLO planned to engage in more "terror" to achieve its goals, Arafat objected to the use of the word. He likened the PLO to the anti-Nazi resistance movements in Europe during World War II and said the only terror in the world today is carried out by the forces of "imperialism, Zionism, colonialism and racism."

Many of the reporters responded with rhythmic applause.

Chess Stars Still Seek First Win

BAGUIO CITY, Philippines (AP) — Challenger Viktor Korchnoi and defending champion Anatoly Karpov played to draws in games five and six of the world chess championships during the weekend, so each will enter game seven on Tuesday still seeking his first win.

Korchnoi stalemated Karpov's king Sunday, ending the twice-adjourned fifth game. The sixth game was played Saturday while the fifth was in adjournment. All six games have ended in draws.

The first player to win six games will get the title and $350,000, the richest chess prize on record. The loser will get $200,000. Draws don't count, and the tournament, which started at this mile-high mountain resort north of Manila July 18, is expected to take months.

Korchnoi, a 47-year-old Russian defector, was given a good chance to beat Karpov, 27, in the fifth game Friday but missed a chance for a check in what some experts said was the worst blunder of his career. He tried but failed to cover for it Sunday by chasing Karpov's king with his bishop. The game lasted 12 hours and 124 moves over the three days.

The seventh game will be played Tuesday.

Fifth Game Ends

BAGUIO CITY, Philipines (AP) — Following is the complete move-by-move play of the fifth game of the 13th world chess championship match between defending champion Anatoly Karpov and Viktor Korchnoi. Moves from the Saturday's sixth game were unavailable today. Moves 1-41 were made Thursday, moves 42-91 on Friday, and moves 92-124 on Sunday:

Amin To Race While Wife Takes Duties

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — President Idi Amin said today he is temporarily handing over control of Uganda to one of his wives while he takes a leave from his official duties to become a racing driver.

The Ugandan dictator's newest wife, Miss Sarah, has been granted a leave from her duties as a soldier in Amin's "Suicide Mechanized Regiment" to be alternate driver for the burly field marshal's 1971 Citroen-Maserati, Radio Uganda said.

"President Idi Amin will wear his famous jacket and red cap," Radio Uganda reported in an apparently tongue-in-cheek announcement of the Ugandan leader's latest exploits.

The decision to allow Amin to take part in the forthcoming "Economic War Motor Rally" this week was taken by the country's highest policy-making body, the radio reported.

"The Defense Council has resolved that President Idi Amin Dada be given the green light to participate in the Economic War Motor Rally in view of its historical significance," the radio said.

While Amin races in "his old car, his senior wife, Medina Amin, will command the country in his absence," the radio said. n

That was expected to be for several days after the start of the rally scheduled to begin Aug. 4.

Amin has never before turned over control of the country to his wife.

"President Amin's car is equipped with radio communications and the police have been asked to note its registration number because the number plates are old," the radio said.

Amin inaugurated the "Economic War Motor Rally" to commemorate the launching of his own economic war in 1973 against Asian traders in Uganda, some 40,000 of whom he expelled on three months' notice.

Since then the country's economy, missing the Asian expertise and reeling under Amin's unpredictable policies, has remained virtually paralyzed.

While Amin's road race dominated the headlines in Uganda, neither the radio or newspapers made any reference to the U.S. Senate's vote to halt all imports from Uganda, especially its main cash crop, coffee.

Diplomatic sources in East African capitals have expressed fears Amin could try to use the 200 U.S. citizens still living in Uganda as pawns as he did 18 months ago in a confrontation with the Carter administration.

But thus far Amin has kept unusually quiet on the situation, which could have serious political consequences for his regime.

Dollar Drops Against Yen

TOKYO (AP) — The dollar hit a postwar record low against the Japanese yen for a sixth consecutive trading day Monday, with its total drop for the period reaching 10.45 yen.

The dollar closed at 190.80 yen, down from 192.125 yen Friday and from 201.25 yen the previous Friday, just before it started its plunge through what had been seen as a psychological barrier at 200 yen.

Foreign banks sold dollars actively in morning trading, and the dollar bottomed at 190.30 yen. The banks later repurchased some dollars to adjust their positions amid caution over the possibility of tightened foreign exchange regulations aimed at checking speculation in the yen.

Most dealers said, however, a tightening of controls was unlikely for various technical reasons.

Unhappy Japanese Protests Dismissal

TOKYO (AP) — A man shouting protests against the recent firing of a defense forces general drove his car close to a motorcade of Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda today, police said.

He was arrested on traffic violation charges after a brief getaway attempt and Fukuda, unharmed, continued his official tour of the coastal city of Fukui, 250 miles northwest of Tokyo, police said.

A police investigator said 42-year-old Yoshihiko Uchiyama, Fukui bureau chief of the right-wing newspaper "Yamato," apparently did not plan to injure Fukuda, and carried no weapons. Uchiyama told police he wanted to say something about last week's firing of Gen. Hiroomi Kurisi, chairman of the joint staff council, the police investigator said.

RENAISSANCE MODEL — The strikingly modern design of Detroit's Renaissance Center, background, dwarfs a model of the 16th Century Pallazzo Chiericati of Vicenza, Italy, recently as workmen unloaded it from a truck. The model is part of a collection of 12 scale models of the work of Renaissance architect Andrea Palladio, which is on loan from the Italian government. It will be on display in Detroit through Aug. 20. (AP Laserphoto)

Politicans Set For Ring Fight

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Lights dazzle. A ringside bell clangs. An announcer grabs an overhead mike and flings one arm to his left:

"In this corner, ladies and gentleman, weighing 210 pounds, Democratic legislative candidate Milton Street!"

A roar goes up from a capacity crowd.

"And in this corner, weighing 190 pounds, city councilman and challenger Francis Rafferty!" Another roar.

The color of the trunks hasn't been decided but this unlikely scenario is approximately what is on the mind of Councilman Rafferty, who on Wednesday called the press together to challenge Street to settle a political dispute in the ring.

The men are serious. One civic leader says he fears the grudge match will make the city of "Rocky" the laughing stock of the country.

Perhaps Rafferty and Street could ask their fellow Democrat, Mayor Frank Rizzo, to be referee.

Rizzo is at the eye of the storm, which began in City Council chambers Monday during heated hearings on whether to change city charter rules to allow Rizzo to run for an unprecedented third term.

Rafferty, a Rizzo supporter, supports the change. Street opposes it. In Monday's preliminary bout, plainclothes police had to pull the men apart after Rafferty called Street a "faggot" and Street, a black activist, called Rafferty a "racist."

Rafferty was still jabbing Wednesday when he met with reporters.

"You name your favorite charity. I'll get a match with Milton Street at the Spectrum," Rafferty said.

"Tell Rafferty he's on," said Street when informed of the challenge. "Bad health and all, I'll take him on." Street has been hospitalized with multiple sclerosis but says the nerve disease, which causes loss of muscle coordination, is now under control.

Recognizing a good draw, local fight promoter J. Russell Peltz leaped into the fray. He said he expected "no problem" in getting approval from the Pennsylvania State Athletic Commission.

But Thursday night, commission secretary Francis Walker expressed some doubt, saying that only commission chairman Howard McCall could approve the fight, and McCall was unavailable for comment.

"I don't know if it would be approved," Walker said. "It would be very unusual."

Rafferty, 40, is a former amateur boxer who fought 15 light welterweight bouts during his Army service and after his discharge.

Street, 37, has never fought in a ring. He says he jogs daily and neither drinks nor smokes.

Street, who became a street vendor after his illness, made a name for himself locally when he organized black vendors into a lobbying force. He drew national attention last summer when he moved poor people into federally owned abandoned houses. Street is now the Democratic candidate for the 181st district of the state Legislature.

Peltz suggested the date of Aug. 24, on a fight card that features middleweights Benny Briscoe and Marvin Hagler at the Spectrum, Philadelphia's largest indoor arena.

But Leon Katz, chancellor-elect of the Philadelphia Bar Association, urged McCall to "put a halt to this thing."

"It would set a dreadful example and make our city the laughing stock of the country," Katz said.

DR. LAMB

High In Calcium

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — For the past two years I have been giving my children, ages 11 and 7, low-fat and skim milk. I asked the doctor if they were getting enough calcium and he said they were. Recently I heard a nutritionist claim that children should have whole milk to get the calcium they need. Who do I believe? Are there other foods that supply calcium?

DEAR READER — I would suggest you place your trust in the food analysis of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. There is no calcium whatsoever in the fat in milk. It is the fat that's removed from low-fat and skim milk.

In fact, if you were to check the agricultural handbooks for food values you would find that fortified skim milk and fortified low-fat milk, which is what most people use in these instances, contain considerably more protein and calcium per glass than ordinary whole milk. Perhaps you misunderstood the nutritionist. She may just have been talking about milk in general and cited whole milk as it is commonly used, rather than implying that if the milk wasn't whole you wouldn't get the calcium you needed.

To give you more information about milk and the calcium and protein content of whole milk, low-fat milk and skim milk I am sending you The Health Letter number 7-2. Others who want this issue on milk can send 50 cents and a self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Milk and milk products are our best sources of calcium in the diet. One of my favorites in this group from a health point of view is low-fat cottage cheese, sometimes referred to as slim cheese or low calorie cheese. You can also use low-fat yogurt provided you don't have a problem of intolerance for milk sugar. In that instance some of the yogurts may not be satisfactory.

Mature beans contain an appreciable amount of calcium, considerable amounts of protein and are a low-fat food. Canned salmon or sardines, if you eat the bones, also supply an appreciable amount of calcium. There is a certain amount of calcium in the leafy vegetables but very often this calcium is not readily absorbed from the digestive tract. It isn't always available to the body.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have a friend in college who studies many hours a day and gets very little physical activity. She eats quite a bit but she doesn't get fat. Does studying use a lot of calories? Would you use more calorie studying for three hours than you would just sitting for three hours?

DEAR READER — I hate to disappoint you but the brain uses very little energy even when one is concentrating on extremely difficult tasks. It has been said that you can run the brain on less calories than you find in one peanut, which I guess means that all of us have peanut brains.

This is one of the main reasons that office workers and people who use their brains tend to get fat. Desk work of any type for a person means that the person doesn't use very many calories a day.

U.S. Dollars Buy Less In Europe

LONDON (AP) — The bargains that Europe used to be famous for are no more. Inflation, the long-term advance of the Eurpean currencies and the nose dive of the U.S. dollar this summer have thinned the pocketbooks that American tourists once carried overseas.

That Black Forest cuckoo clock that the neighbors got for $200 in Germany in 1975 will now cost more than $435.

Matching cashmere sweaters that caught the eye in London shops for about $40 three years ago will take nearly $118 of hard-earned U.S. dollars now.

A Swiss watch that cost $100 three years ago now goes for $175, and very often the purchaser is no longer an American but an Arab tourist with oil bucks to spend.

Since the end of World War II, when America seemed like El Dorado to war-torn Europeans, countries like Germany, The Netherlands and Denmark have developed living standards equivalent to America's.

Furthermore, since the May Day kick-off of tourist season this year, the Swiss franc has gained nearly 10 percent against the dollar while even the troubled British pound has climbed 5.4 percent in one month alone. On Monday, it took only 1.77 Swiss francs to buy a dollar; in London, it took $1.93 to buy a British pound.

Three years ago an American in Paris could find a good simple lunch with wine for $5. Today, he'd be lucky to get by for $8. In 1970 a feast for two at the three-star Tour d'Argent might have cost $65. Today, the tab is $125.

The price for hefting a liter of beer at the Munich Oktoberfest four years ago was $1.75. Today, a liter at the Hofbrau Haus costs $2.17.

Switzerland has virtually no inflation, so a one pound box of chocolates costs a Swiss the same 24.31 Swiss francs as three years ago. But an American would find the same box had gone from $8 to $13.

In Copenhagen a medium quality Danish mink coat that sold for $2,600 four years ago now costs about $5,000, although this is partially because the sales tax has gone up 18 percent.

The hand-carved Danish pipe that was $19 is now $36. A hand-blown crystal wine glass that sold for $11 is now at least $15.

The turn-about on the world money market now means that the Danes who carved and cut such trinkets now pile into cut-price weekend flights to London to snatch up $90 Harris tweed sport coats in a model that cost only $27.60 in 1973, and crocks of fancy English marmalade that have gone from about $1.12 to nearly $4.

ENERGY CONSERVATION

NEW YORK (AP) — The Woolworth Building is replacing all of its approximately 3,000 windows in a move to cut by 20 percent the amount of energy needed to heat and air condition the 60-story building. The $2.6-million contract for the new thermo glaze windows is billed as the largest single agreement of its kind ever awarded in the United States.

Researchers Develop Diarrhea Treatment

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Tourists call it Montezuma's Revenge, Delhi Belly or less tasteful names. Whatever name you use, traveler's diarrhea has ruined a lot of vacations to Mexico and other developing countries.

Now, researchers at the Johns Hopkins Hospital have developed a simple, preventive treatment: a daily dose of the drug doxycycline, an antibiotic from the tetracycline family, starting before the vacation.

Dr. R. Bradley Sach, a Johns Hopkins associate professor of medicine, and his brother, Dr. David Sach, also a Hopkins researcher, found that use for doxycycline during a series of studies on traveler's diarrhea involving Peace Corps volunteers in Kenya and Morocco.

"We found that the main bacterium (causing the diarrhea) is a bacterium that is a form of E. coli that is sensitive to this drug," said Bradley Sach. "Therefore, it was logical that we try this drug. We found its protection to be very good."

For anti-diarrhea purposes, doxycycline is taken once a day in capsule form.

"It's long-acting, so only a single daily dose is needed," said Sach.

He said the drug acts in the small intestine and, "that's where the organisms grow so it's secreting exactly where you want it."

Sach said there are some side effects associated with doxycycline, but no adverse reactions have been found in the Johns Hopkins study. However, he recommends against prescribing it for pregnant women and for children because it can stain immature teeth.

"We are recommending that they can take this drug for short periods of time, about three weeks, and it will be about 90 percent effective," added Sach, who has received calls about the treatment.

Boy Seeks To Aid Ailing Twin

LAKE PLACID, Fla. (AP) — Darryl Wirick wants to donate one of his kidneys to his ailing twin, Darren. His parents are willing but have asked the courts to decide whether the 7-year-old boy can legally make such a decision.

"Darryl is a minor, and we don't have the right to make this decision," said his mother, Diane Wirick, 34. "The lawyers say they don't know of any other cases like this."

The Wiricks have filed a petition in Highlands County Court, seeking a ruling indicating "that the court understands that he's aware of what he's doing." Doctors say Darren needs a transplant, but they want to know what the Wiricks' rights and liabilities would be.

The petition asks for a ruling because "the life of Darren T. Wirick is in immediate and present danger because of complete kidney failure."

Mrs. Wirick said neither she nor her husband, Daniel, 36, were able to donate their kidneys to their sick son because of tissue incompatibility.

But Darryl, Darren's blond, blue-eyed twin, "would be ideal for the transplant," she said.

Darren had to have one kidney removed shortly after birth; the remaining kidney is failing, and he is being kept alive through use of a dialysis machine at the University of Florida's Shands Teaching Hospital.

Mrs. Wirick said physicians and psychologists have talked to the twins to determine whether the boys understand the situation.

"I think everyone is satisfied that both of the boys know just what is going to happen — at least as well as a 7-year-old can understand these things," she said.

She said psychologists told her that the physical and emotional well being of the healthy twin would be jeopardized more by the loss of his brother than the loss of a kidney.

"They get along super," says Mrs. Wirick. "They're very close to each other. Maybe one will spend a night at someone's house and when he comes back, they're just so happy to see each other."

Mrs. Wirick said Darryl was recently talking to her about the proposed transplant operation.

"He said, 'I want Darren to have my right kidney. It's my best one. I write with my right hand and I throw a ball with my right hand. So, the right one has to be my best kidney.'"

The boy's father added, "When he told us that, we knew how much he wanted to help his brother."

Mrs. Wirick later relayed the comment to Darren's doctor, who "looked kind of stunned," she recalled. "Then he said, 'That is the kidney that we were planning to give to Darren.'"

Carter Unsure About Med Plan

By CHARLES S. ALDINGER

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Not even President Carter knows yet whether middle-income Americans would have to pay a set percentage of their medical bills under his national health insurance plan.

But HEW Secretary Joseph Califano said Sunday one thing is sure: Poor people would get free benefits under the proposal, which Carter wants to put in effect step-by-step beginning in 1983.

"The level of cost sharing and the extent of cost sharing, if any, is something that will have to be determined when we lay out the bill," Califano said during an interview on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation" Sunday.

"But low-income families — the poor people — will not be part of any cost-sharing component."

Califano received 10 broad guidelines on health insurance from Carter Saturday. He will use those guidelines — which give no direct orders on how medical care should be parceled out or how it should be financed — to draw up the legislation.

he will send the bill back to Carter for final approval before it goes to Congress next year.

When it gets to Capitol Hill, however, it will have company in the form of another health insurance bill to be presented this year by Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass.

Kennedy attacked the Carter plan last week as weak and ineffective, and said the proposal did not end itself to one, hard-hitting bill.

"Sure, there'll be problems in the Congress," Califano said. "But whether one can say that there will be more problems if there is one bill or more problems if there are two bills is, to me, highly questionable."

"For 30 years, the Democcatic Party at the national level has tried to pass a national health-insurance program and not succeeded," Califano said.

"Senator Kennedy has introduced any number of different bills. None of those bills have been able to be passed by either house. None of them have been reported out by the relevant committees of either house.

"We intend to introduce a piece of legislation that will have the opportunity of passing," Califano said.

He said the Carter guidelines do not preclude a single bill, although he pointed out Saturday that Carter wants to keep all options open to fight inflation.

"The president's program is not piecemeal," he said. "The president's preference — and it is a strong preference — is for a single bill. We are traveling with Senator Kennedy and those people who want national health insurance. we are all walking down the same path. We are all going to the same place. And we are all going to get there at the same time."

He noted Lyndon Johnson rammed Medicare and Medicaid through Congress as two separate bills and said, "I do not regard those as piecemeal pieces of legislation."

Guidelines For Plan Spelled Out

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Here is the text of President Carter's 10 guidelines to HEW Secretary Joseph Califano for formulation of national health-insurance legislation:

1. The plan should assure that all Americans have comprehensive health care coverage, including protection against catastrophic medical expenses.

2. The plan should make quality health care available to all Americans. It should seek to eliminate those aspects of the current health system that often cause the poor to receive substandard care.

3. The plan should assure that all Americans have freedom of choice in the selection of physicians, hospitals and health-delivery systems.

4. The plan must support our efforts to control inflation in the economy by reducing unnecessary health care spending. The plan should include aggressive cost-containment measures and should also strengthen competitive forces in the health-care sector.

5. The plan should be designed so that additional public and private expenditures for improved health benefits and coverage will be substantially offset by savings from greater efficiency in the health-care system.

6. The plan will involve no additional federal spending until fiscal year 1983, because of tight fiscal constraints and the need for careful planning and implementation. Thereafter, the plan should be phased in gradually. As the plan moves from phase to phase, consideration should be given to such factors as the economic and administrative experience under prior phases. The experience of other government programs — in which expenditures far exceeded initial projections — must not be repeated.

7. The plan should be financed through multiple sources, including government funding and contributions from employers and employees. Careful consideration should be given to the other demands on government budgets, the existing tax burdens on the American people, and the ability of many consumers to share a moderate portion of the cost of their care.

8. The plan should incluje a significant role for the private insurance industry, with appropriate government regulations.

9. The plan should provide resources and develop payment methods to promote such major reforms in delivering health-care services as substantially increasing the availibility of ambulatory and preventive services, attracting personnel to under-served rural and urban areas, and encouraging the use of prepaid health plans.

10. The plan should assure consumer representation throughout its operation.

Lowering Tax Rate Seen As Incentive

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., sponsor of a bill to cut income taxes, says lower tax rates are needed to restore incentive to American workers. He said Americans now have little reason to invest or achieve because so much of their earnings go for taxes.

Kemp speaking on a television interview show Sunday, said his proposal to cut tax rates by 30 percent over three years was not undercut by a plan approved by the House Ways and Means Committee. He said the panel's $16.2 billion cut includes "some very progressive steps" but does not go far enough."

Paper Strike May Cause Shortages

By The Associated Press

Toilet tissue, paper towels and other paper products may be harder to find at West Coast stores if the 23-day-old West Coast paper mill strike continues for another month, paper distributors say.

Distributors in the Northwest contacted late last week predicted a "critical shortage" of paper products, including newsprint, and said their supplies will be exhausted within 30 to 60 days.

If the strike continues, company spokesmen said, they will have to look for help from the East Coast, where paper reserves also are limited.

"The East Coast mills are in no position to take on any new accounts," said Bob Adler, general manager at Allied Paper Co., Inc., in Tacoma, Wash.

He said his firm began stockpiling supplies early last month when it realized a strike was possible. However, he added, the company already is beginning to feel the effects of the work stoppage, which has idled nearly 10,000 workers at 22 West Coast mills.

"The situation is getting more critical every day. If it continues, we'll just deplete our warehouse stock," Alder said.

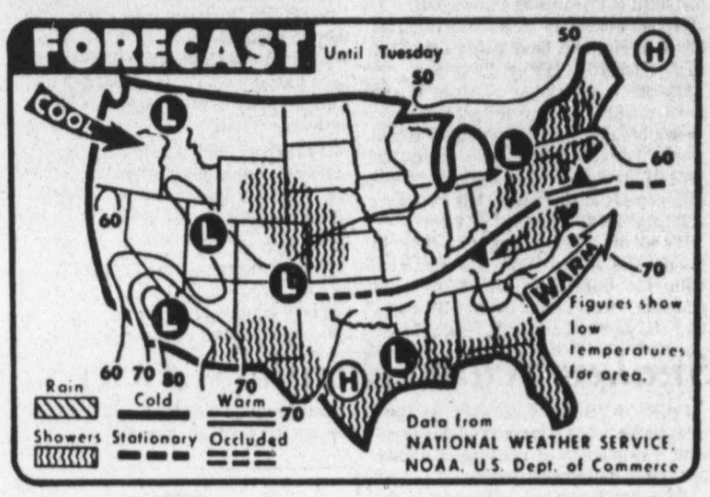
"If it's a lengthy strike, we'll have to go back East to get help," said a spokesman for The Stationers, Inc., Tacoma's largest retail outlet for office supplies. "But every other dealer is going to be in the same situation."

One company which says it isn't in trouble is Western Paper Co., Seattle's largest paper distributor.

Mike Dooley, customer service representative, said Western is one of the few Puget Sound distributors not dependent on West Coast mills, since it gets most of its supplies from the Midwest.

Several newspapers have announced format changes — designed to get more print on a page — as a result of the strike which began July 7.

A Crown Zellerbach Paper Co. spokesman in Seattle said his firm is shipping only 60 percent of ordered quantities of newsprint because of the strike.



WEATHER FORECAST — Showers are forecast in three areas of the nation for today and Tuesday, according to the National Weather Service, including a four-state area of the Great Plains, along the southern U.S. border from Arizona across to Florida, and in a band from Virginia northeast into Maine and east of the Great Lake. Heat, Sun Strike Black Expedition

By PAT TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Like their counterparts 101 years earlier, a group of black men, seeking the authentic heritage of the past, had their own troubles with the West Texas sun over the weekend as they traced a 65-mile route to just inside the New Mexico border.

The eight-man group, members of the Roots Historical Committee, assembled near Meadow last Friday to begin a ride-and-walk trek to a place called "Nigger Hill," named by a buffalo hunter.

The march was the idea of Eric Strong, the 26-year-old director of the heritage committee, and Donald Brooks, an 18-year-old assistant political science researcher at Texas Tech University.

Ironically, Brooks — who says he wants to make the trip again next year — was one of the first to succumb to the relentless Texas sun.

Brooks began having "double vision" Friday, felt dizzy and nursed a headache. Soon, he wasn't perspiring.

Strong, who had boned up on the symptoms of heatstroke, knew what was ailing Brooks and the 18-year-old was taken to the truck that trailed behind the expedition carrying water for weary horses.

Brooks passed up the water momentarily for the relief-giving air-conditioner and some wet towels.

The expedition, which sought to imitate as much as possible the 25-man contingent of calvarymen of 101 years ago, had brought along only fruit juice to slake their thirsts.

More than a century before the men had gone 86 hours without water and had been forced to drink the blood and urine of their fallen horses.

The first expedition, unlike the most recent, had a defined purpose at the outset: to catch a band of fleeing renegade Indians. The ill-fated party of calvarymen never found the Indians and watched four of their 10th Calvary, Company A, die during the march under a torrid sun. A fifth man also fell victim to the heat.

Besides Brooks, one of the horses — rented from Trammell's Riding Stables at Buffalo Lakes — had to give up the march. And Leon Bunton, a Lubbock juvenile probation officer, "deserted," Strong alleged. With tongue in cheek, Strong says Bunton will be court-martialed next week for his unauthorized absence.

But Strong says the group as a whole could empathize with Bunton's actions.

"We came near mutiny" the first day, he says.

Camping at night near Whiteface the group quickly lost some of its romantic feel for the out-of-doors and the starry sky.

"We were scared. It was dark. The water truck was gone" and a pack of coyotes circled around the campsite, adding a little too much authenticity to the march for the latter-day "buffalo soldiers."

On Sunday, Strong returned with the group of "soldiers" who had reached their New Mexico destination about 10 a.m. CDT.

The group had suffered bunions and chafing, Strong said, and needed sleep badly. But the trip had been inspirational, too, he said.

"It (the expedition) made me respect the guys who were on that actual journey," Strong said Sunday. "There were a lot of things I didn't understand about calvary uniforms," he confessed.

Strong said the wool "blouses" made the men perspire, which helped cool them down and kept the sun off their backs and arms. Neck scarves kept the "gritty" perspiration away and high boots protected the men from burrs, he said.

Strong said the people of Morton "were fantastic. They were extremely friendly." He paid tribute to Glen Thomas, the Cochran County judge, who gave the expeditioners "the royal treatment."

Strong also had kind words for Shakir Muhyee, an Islamic minister.

"He was an inspiration factor in the whole situation. Had it not been for him, we wouldn't have made it," Strong said.

Like his friend, Brooks, who didn't complete the march "this time," Strong said the expedition was definitely a worthwhile experience.

Would he do it again?

"Never. I don't think I'll ever do it again. I'm too sore. My back is hurting and it took too much money," the Lubbock Opportunities Industrialization Center counselor said.

"But I think it was worth it. We gained a respect for those people."

Study Urges Tax Breaks For Television Stations

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI) — A Harvard University study recommends the government use its tax policy to increase television exposure for political candidates, much the same way it tries to spur home buying.

The study released Sunday urges that networks and local television stations be allowed tax breaks in order to make it more financially attractive for them do increase political programming.

The study said the government should allow stations and networks to write off both revenue lost in making campaign spots and money spent airing campaign-related public service shows.

The authors of the report advocated temporary lifting of regulations requiring stations to provide candidates equal time. That would allow authorities to determine what effect such a move would have on a campaign.

The equal-time rule has irked broadcasters, who have found it keeps them from doing campaign programs because they must give equal time to minor party hopefuls.

The report was written by the Campaign Study Group of Harvard's Institute of Politics. The group is made up of professors from a number of universities and top campaign workers.

Coal Industry Investigation Reportedly Set

NEW YORK (UPI) — Federal and state authorities have launched an investigation into allegations of illegal activities in the coal industry, including fraud, bribery and organized crime activities, The New York Times reported today.

The investigation includes efforts by organized crime to take over coal interests, the Times said in a dispatch from Atlanta.

The newspaper said federal grand juries were probing coal field crime in Alabama, Georgia and Illinois and one is to begin shortly in West Virginia. Indiana, Kentucky and California were conducting state inquiries, the article said.

The Times reported that governors of four states — Alabama, Kentucky, Georgia and Virginia — have petitioned Attorney General Griffin B. Bell to set up a federal task force to investigate the situation.

Georgia Gov. George Busbee said in a letter to Bell the illegal activities in the nation's coal field included "securities fraud, murder, extortion, wire fraud, tax evasion, tax fraud, domestic and foreign bribery, kickbacks and political corruption, bankruptcy fraud, organized labor problems, loan sharking and insurance fraud."

Man Wants To Swap Auto For Swords

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — Dick Dodge, a 43-year-old former telephone installer, took out the following advertisement in a local newspaper recently: "Honda, '77 Accord, 5 spd. 12,000 mi., $4,950, or trade for fine samurai swords."

"It's no joke," Dodge said. "I'm a Japanese sword broker. I want to get rid of an extra car, so I figured I'd combine that with work. There is a large retired military population in San Diego. Many people brought these things back as souvenirs."

The swords, he says, range in value from $100 to $10,000, depending on age and condition.

Dodge and his Japanese wife, Kayoko, live half the year here and half in Japan, where they trade their wares at auctions.

"I take the swords back to Japan and sell them myself for double the price," Dodge said.

'Sesame Street' Star Awes Young Fans

By DALE SINGER

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — When Gordon talks, children listen.

Gordon, one of the human stars of public television's "Sesame Street," has an air of gentle authority that can make a crowd of children follow directions in a way that can only make their parents jealous.

But Roscoe Orman, the New York-born actor who has played Gordon for the last five years, says it's only natural for his fans to be a little awed by seeing him in person. After all, when they see him every day at home, he's only a few inches tall.

"They get so used to seeing all of us on TV, it's hard for them to adjust to seeing us in person," he said during a St. Louis County stop on a nationwide tour. "They wonder how you ever got out of the back of the TV in the first place."

Basides, he said, it's easy for him to tell an audience to stand up, clap their hands and hush so he can sing a quiet song.

"I don't have to deal with them 24 hours a day, like their parents do," he said. "That's another job altogether."

Orman, a veteran of 15 years in the theater, still has time for off-broadway shows because his Sesame Street studio work takes only four months out of the year. He makes occasional stops at shopping centers to sing songs, talk with fans and hand out autographed pictures.

It's not always easy being a superstar to the pre-school crowd. When he's walking with his own wife and 3½-year-old daughter, Orman said children often spot him and give him a strange look, wondering why he's not with Susan, his wife on the show.

Not even a floppy hat and sunglasses he carries to avoid recognition work all the time, he said. On a recent Sunday morning, he tried to have breakfast by himself in a restaurant in Indiana. As soon as he sat down, the autograph line began to form.

"The first thing in the morning, you don't want to have to deal with that," he said. "But you have to either excuse yourself gracefully or just grin and bear it."

Orman's half-hour shopping center show includes greetings from Big Bird, Bert and Ernie and Oscar the Grouch — who says "Have a rotten day". He asks the kids why a square is different from a triangle and leads them through their letters and numbers.

Playing Gordon tends to typecast him as an actor, Orman said, but he thinks the character has changed him as a person.

"Kids are so honest, so direct, that they've probably made me more so, too. When I do this show, I couldn't help but have a good time. I'm probably more like Gordon than any other character I've ever done."

Those characters include a sinister procurer of young girls on a popular soap opera and an appearance on "Kojak," where Orman's shaved head look rivaled that of star Telly Savalas.

"One of the extras kept looking at me," he said, "and finally asked, 'Hey, how'd you ever get this job? Kojak doesn't ever allow other shaved heads on the show.'"

Snakes Scare Burglars Away

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Burglars broke into a bar here and tampered with a coin-operated machine, but they left before finishing the job.

"The only thing we can think of is the burglars must have seen them," owner Joe Lahiff said. "They must have scared them off."

"They" are three boa constrictors. They were on the floor of the manager's office, which was as far as the thieves got.

Lahiff said he normally kept his dog at the bar to ward off intruders.

Non-Indian Vendor Jailed In Santa Fe

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — A young non-Indian artist was arrested for the second time when he displayed his wares among Indian vendors under the famed portal of the Palace of the Governors here. Brian Joyce, 26, was charged with trespassing on state property.

Museum of New Mexico policy, upheld by U.S. District Court Judge Edwin Mechem, restricts selling under the portal to Indians. When Joyce was first arrested Wednesday on the same charge, Magistrate Isaac Archuleta set an unsecured bond, meaning Joyce was set free without having to post bond. After the second arrest Friday, Archuleta set a $500 cash bond and Joyce was jailed Friday afternoon.

Star Wars Actor Fights Recognition Problem

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — For more than a year now Dave Prowse has lived with the curse of anonymity despite the fact that he is the most popular star in the most successful movie ever made.

Prowse is a huge Englishman who stands 6-foot-6, weighs 260 pounds and has a chest measurement of 52 inches. He's a hard man to miss in a crowd.

As an actor he is pleased that people stare at him even if it's for the wrong reason. He would dearly love to be recognized for his role in "Star Wars," the all-time box-office champion.

Prowse played Darth Vader, the evil military genius from Death Star who almost conquers the universe.

One would suppose Dave's face would be as familiar as Paul Newman's. But, alas, he played the entire role in an ominous black helmet, flowing black cape and a metallic mask.

Not once is Dave's face seen. Nor is his voice heard even fleetingly. So Dave is destined to spend the rest of his life identifying himself as good old Darth Vader and hoping people will believe him.

Nor does he find consolation in the fact that three other cast members of "Star Wars," popular almost beyond measure, are equally anonymous.

Kenny Baker as R2D2 spent the entire film as a robot that resembled nothing so much as a mobile oil drum. Anthony Daniels, C3PO, was a humanoid gold-plated robot. Peter Mayhew, Chewbacca, was a furry anthropoidal space creature.

Dave, Baker, Daniels and Mayhew, beloved by millions of movie-goers, seen as a group would go altogether unnoticed by all save their families.

The four actors became friends during production, but they haven't been seen together since.

Prowse, who makes his home in London, came to the United States this summer to attend the Space 1999 Convention in Columbus, Ohio. Coincidentally, 20th Century-Fox re-released "Star Wars" to booming business and Dave has taken the opportunity to let people know the identity of the real Darth Vader.

"It's frustrating to be the biggest hit in the most popular movie of all time and not be recognized," Dave lamented on a brief stop in Hollywood.

"Every actor wants recognition. Look, there are hundreds of people in this restaurant and none of them knows me."

He would have been mobbed, of course, had he worn his Darth Vader outfit. But Dave has only donned the menacing mask, cape and helmet twice since "Star Wars" was released more than a year ago.

"Once was on an important English television show to publicize the film," he said, "and the other was for the cover of a European magazine. Twentieth Century-Fox owns the costume and they flew it over to me.

"I wouldn't wear the costume if I did own it. It would destroy the illusion."

Dave's 15-year acting career was devoted primarily to monster movies made in England before "Star Wars" came along. He starred in "Horror of Frankenstein," "Vampire Circus" and "Frankenstein and the Monster From Hell."

He is a weightlifter and an authority on body-building. At 43 Dave is a personable man with a prominent nose and distinct English accent.

In 1975 when director George Lucas was casting "Star Wars" in London, he called Dave for an interview, impressed with the villainous role Dave had played in "A Clockwork Orange."

"George told me he was making a space fantasy and asked me to consider playing either Chewbacca or Darth Vader. I turned down Chewbacca at once. He was one of the good guys. I know that people remember villains longer than heroes.

"I chose Vader immediately, without even seeing the script. At the time I didn't know I'd be wearing a mask. And throughout the production I thought Vader's voice would be mine.

"But it became obvious that they couldn't have a creature from outer space speaking with an English accent. No matter how much they processed the voice, it would still sound British.

"Vader's voice was dubbed by James Earl Jones and was heavily processed. Naturally, I was disappointed. No actor likes to be dubbed. It's just an ego thing."

Dave's ego is somewhat assuaged by fame in England as the Green Cross Man. He appears almost nightly on English television in a Superman-like costume.

Owners Of Apartments Refuse To Sell To Comedian Brenner

NEW YORK (AP) — Funnyman David Brenner isn't laughing much over what happened when he tried this month to buy a $500,000 apartment at an ultra-ritzy address in Manhattan.

Like Barbra Streisand, Peter Lawford, Liza Minnelli and even solid family man Neil Sedaka, the comedian found that persuading the owners of cooperative apartments in New York City to accept entertainers as neighbors is harder to achieve than star billing.

Brenner, reached in Las Vegas where he is currently performing, said he had gone so far as to forward a good-faith deposit of $50,000 to buy an apartment at One East End Avenue. He had collected personal financial statements, three business and four personal references.

But the directors of the building refused to interview him as a prospective cooperative owner. He was told through the real estate agent handling the transaction that "under no circumstances would we ever allow an entertainer to purchase an apartment in our building."

"The feeling many cooperatives have is they won't even consider entertainers because of the publicity, the tying up of elevators, the late parties," said Beatrice Castle, a representative of the real estate firm of D. Buttons Co., which handled the Brenner transaction.

"Which is interesting," said Brenner, "because I haven't attended a party in 10 years, much less given one."

Leon Brickman, the attorney for the One East End Avenue Corp. and about 200 other cooperative apartment corporations in the city, said, "David Brenner may be the greatest guy in the world, but as long as the board did not discriminate on grounds of race, creed, national origin or sex, then they did not violate any state statutes."

That means boards of cooperative buildings in the city are legally free to reject tenants if they don't approve of the person's occupation or lifestyle, or have questions about the person's financial status.

Brickman would not directly confirm the reason Brenner was denied the apartment, but did say that co-ops "have had some bad experiences with 'entertainers.'"

The board refused to accept Brenner despite a letter to the board from Jane Arneberg, the present owner of the apartment, vouching for the comedian as a quiet and charming person. Miss Castle says she had also been working hard on Brenner's behalf.

Brenner, by the way, says he no longer wants to live at One East End Avenue.

TURNED DOWN — Comedian David Brenner said in a telephone interview that he offered to put a $50,000 deposit down on a New York apartment, but learned that entertainers were not allowed to move into the building. (AP Laserphoto)

Dog Becomes Blood Donor

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Ten years ago, an undistinguished puppy of German shepherd and other undetermined heritage was brought into the office of Dr. Raymond Pahle.

The owner did not want the pup and asked the veterinarian to put it to sleep. The veterinarian asked whether it would be all right if, instead of killing the dog, he kept it alive and used it to help keep other dogs alive.

And that's what happened. The once-unwanted dog became a blood donor to other dogs at Pahle's clinic. The clinic also has a cat named Joey who is a blood donor.

Just as a human being, a dog or cat can be in urgent need of a blood transfusion, but there are no animal blood banks. So it is practical to keep donors as permanent residents of animal hospitals, the veterinarian said.

The animals, Shep and Joey, are not often needed for this purpose, so they are really part-time blood donors and full-time pets, he said.

Couple Gets Wish For Polish Judge

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Robert Gedek, 24, and Grazyna Checko, 23, didn't care that dozens of prisoners awaiting arraignment sat behind bars down the hall. They wanted a Polish judge to marry them and got what they wanted at the Police Administration Building.

The newlyweds immigrated to the United States from Poland just over a year ago and as yet don't have a firm grasp of English. So they requested a list of judges when they got their marriage license, and found what seemed to be a "good Polish name," Gedek said. Squeezed into his session in arraignment court Friday, Municipal Court Judge Michael J. Bednarek performed the ceremony in English, explaining certain phrases to the couple in their native tongue.

Four-Year-Old Boy Sleeps Through Robbery

WESTWOOD, N.J. (AP) — A 4-year-old who dozed off in his father's car slept safely in the back seat while the vehicle was stolen.

Alexander Gatanas and the car were recovered Saturday in nearby Maywood, about 90 minutes after they were reported missing.

Alexander's father had taken him to a nearby hospital for treatment of a hand wound. On the return trip, he left his son in the car with the engine running while he picked up a prescription order from a drug store.

Three minutes later, the car and the sleeping boy were gone.

Sgt. John Hartman of Westwood speculated that the thief fled after seeing Alexander. "Whoever stole it must have been pretty surprised to find a 4-year-old in the back," he said.

Road To Democracy 'Rough'

By JOHN REICHERTZ

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — President Carter, speaking to Latin American diplomats in June, made what has to be the understatement of the year.

"We realize that the path from authoritarian to democratic rule can be a difficult and demanding one," Carter told the VIII plenary meeting of the Organization of American States in Washington.

More than 17 million voters slipped ballots into a assortment of antiquated and modern urns in eight Latin American nations since the New Year, and the cry that followed in many cases was "Fraud!!!"

On May 16, the Dominican Republic's three-term president, Joaquin Balaguer, sought a fourth term. By early the following morning it was becoming clear that Antonio Guzman, a 67-year-old cattle rancher and head of the Dominican Revolutionary party, was winning.

At that time, the national police stomped into the national electoral board's office and stopped the vote count.

Carter and several Latin American leaders immediately protested and urged vote counting be resumed. Carter let it be known that U.S. support for the Dominican Republic depended on "the integrity of the electoral process."

Balaguer met with his generals for 36 hours and then ordered a resumption of the count that eventually led to his defeat.

Carter, explaining why he spoke out about the Dominican Republic, said four nations with military governments were scheduled to have elections later in the year, and he did not want the precedent of fraud to be set.

In Paraguay and Guatemala elections had already been staged, but most observers, including the state department, did not bother to raise a big fuss. While there was no fraud, there did not seem to be much choice either.

There was never much doubt that strongman Gen. Alfredo Stroessner would win his sixth term as president in Paraguay.

And in Guatemala, where military governments have come and gone for 157 years, it did not seem to matter which of the three army candidates won the March elections.

But the hopes for change were greater in Bolivia, Peru and Ecuador, where military regimes have been firmly entrenched for years, without the pretense of staged electons. In July Bolivia held its first elections since the then Col. Hugo Banzer seized power in a 1971 military coup.

The elections were to allow landlocked Bolivia to observe the 100th anniversary of its loss of a passageway to the sea to Chile in the War of the Pacific with the respectability that being a democracy brings in the Western hemisphere.

But there never was much doubt that Air Force Gen. Juan Pereda, Banzer's hand-picked candidate, would win the elections — one way or another.

Three-time president Victor Paz Estenssoro said weeks before the elections he was sure he would win "if there wasn't a fraud the size of the one being organized."

Ten days after the July 9 balloting, Pereda had a solid lead in the slow vote counting.

But all opposition parties and some international observers — including an OAS observer invited by the government — contended that government and military officials had perpetrated gross fraud on Pereda's behalf. The U.S. state department expressed concern and encouraged action by the Bolivian electoral court.

The court promptly annulled the vote and called for new elections in 180 days.

Pereda, who had also encouraged the annullment to the displeasure of Banzer, two days later led a bloodless armed rebellion and seized power.

Peru's June 18 election of a constituent assembly intended to guide the country to democracy by 1980 was the first in the country in the last 12 years, and it came in the middle of a crisis.

In May severe rioting broke out as the deficit-ridden government imposed an economic austerity program calling for increases in the price of foods and transportation.

After a two-day general strike and scores of deaths in rioting, the military government suspended constitutional guarantees, deported eight leftist candidates and stopped all political advertising on television and radio.

The measures brought a virtual halt to the campaign for almost two weeks, but most were lifted 10 days before the elections, which went off smoothly bringing a sharp but no controlling increase in leftist power in Peru.

A month later Ecuador, Peru's oil-rich neighbor to the north, went to the polls to elect a president after eight years of military government and its electorate behaved as if the voting was the most natural of activities.

The election, however, did not produce a victor as no candidae won the absolute majority vote required for the presidency.

Too Many Cowboys

WITH THE DALLAS COWBOYS starting their final week of practice before their exhibition opener against San Francisco Saturday night, Coach Tom Landry is not happy about his offense. So what's new?

The Cowboys, for whatever the reason, never have been the most impressive NFL team in the good ol' summer time. They have had their moments, of course, and occasionally the 'Pokes stomp a foe through the Astroturf. But those romps have been the exception, not the rule.

Usually, the Cowboys spend an unpleasant August getting beat by the Oilers or the Rams or the Seahawks, while their loyal fans shake their heads in disbelief. Perhaps it is a heritage that traces back to their first great quarterback, Don Meredith, who hated summer camp and exhibition games. Dandy always believed that summer was for golf or water skiing, not bloody noses and bruised bodies.

Ghosts of dismal summers past returned to haunt the Cowboys last weekend when they staged their annual intrasquad battle at the Thousand Oaks, Calif., training site. Quite a production it was, too, with an overflow crowd and a sprinkling of movie stars. A Dallas radio station even broadcast an account of the scrimmage back to the home folks.

Unfortunately, the scrimmage fell a bit short of expectations. The 'Poke offense sputtered, despite Roger Staubach's sharp passing, and the general level of play was far short of Super Bowl standards. Observers decided it rated as either uninspired or dull, take your choice.

If some of the critics had been knocking heads twice a day since July 10, like the rookies, they might have been dull and uninspired too.

LANDRY SAID, FOLLOWING the scrimmage, that he will spend the remainder of training camp developing his reserve players for the upcoming season.

"We have a lot of film on our veteran players and we know what they can do," Landry remarked. "But we still have to decide who our back-up people will be at several positions."

That will indeed be a problem. Never have the Cowboys had so many talented young bodies battling for jobs, both offensively and defensively. Landry's cup runneth over.

There is one nagging question in the minds of some observers, however. Since so many of the young players are rated virtually equal in ability, at this stage, do the Cowboys have a bunch of future All-Pros or just a herd of players with average ability?

Only time will tell.

THE OFFENSIVE BACKFIELD offers an interesting situation. All of the fellows who ran and passed the Cowboys to the Super Bowl victory are back for another season. Tony Dorsett, Preston Pearson and Doug Dennison provide talent and depth at tailback. Robert Newhouse, Scott Laidlaw and Larry Brinson were more than adequate at fullback in '77.

Now the running backs are looking over their shoulders at two new challengers — No. 2 draft choice Todd Christensen from Brigham Young and No. 4 pick Alois Blackwell from Houston. Plus a face out of the past named Charles Young, who was a No. 1 draft choice a few years ago and has been hobbled by injuries.

Christensen looks like a cinch to make the final roster. He has 6-3 x 230 size and 4.6 speed, on his good days. He catches the ball like a demon. If he doesn't develop into a fine player, then Dallas superscout Gil Brandt will attempt suicide with a dull knife.

Blackwell, who performed so well against Texas Tech the last couple of years, has come on strong after recovering from early training camp injuries. But who is he going to beat out — Dorsett, Pearson, Dennison or Christensen?

OFFENSIVE LINE COACH Jim Myers also has more warm bodies than he knows what to do with, despite the retirement of veteran tackle Ralph Neely. The Cowboy dressing room ain't gonna be the same without Ralph scowling at the news media. Ralph scowls easily.

Pat Donovan has moved into Neely's spot at left tackle, with the once-great Rayfield Wright making a comeback try on the right side. The starting guards and center last year — John Fitzgerald, Tom Rafferty and Herbert Scott — are alive and well in the interior of the forward wall.

The bind comes in the ranks of the subs. Jim Cooper and Greg Peters, a pair of 260-pounders rated as top prospects, are making strong bids for back-up spots, as is Andy Frederick, the former New Mexico star. Jim Eidson has been tabbed as a potential great despite injury problems.

Burton Lawless, who started at guard as a rookie in 1975 and never has lived up to expectations since, is in a fight for survival.

The Cowboys also have come up with a surprise in tackle Dave Kraayeveld of tiny Milton College in Wisconsin. Dave was signed as a completely unknown free agent, but has amazed Cowboy coaches with his talent and determination. Dave has the ability to play in the NFL.

But can he win a job with the Cowboys against the competition of Cooper, Eidson, Peters and Frederick?

We will know about Sept 1.

Wallace Stands Pressure To Win City Golf Crown

BY SCOTT SUDDUTH
Avalanche Journal Sports Staff

However, Sunday, not only did he play but Wallace won the Men's City Championship golf tourney at Meadowbrook golf course.

Wallace matched last year's winning score with a two-day total of 140. The two-under par score was not dazzling but it was enough to edge the first-round leader, Kevin Heise, by one stroke.

"I was kinda suprised, especially after the first round on Saturday, I thought my one-under score was good but I expected someone to come in with three or four-under par," explained Wallace.

And Wallace only needed some long-range putts to manage the victory, including a 30-footer on the 20th green to save par and turn his game around.

"He's a super putter," acknowledged Heise.

Playing in the same group as Heise, Wallace managed to sink another pressure shot only moments after Heise barely missed tying the leader with a 20-foot putt.

This time, he calmly dropped an 8-footer to save his par while his wife cringed and admitted "I hate watching him play in pressure situations." His putt made a sharp hook on the sloping bumpy green and sent Wallace down the final fairway with the one stroke cushion.

Both players parred the 18th green as Wallace finished with a final round 70 and Heise collected a 71 to offset his first-round 69.

"My short wedge shots and putts just weren't falling," remarked a disappointed Heise. "Ben played a super round."

A third-year law student at Texas Tech, Wallace's "super round" included an eagle on the first green he encountered. He added six birdies and five bogies on the 18-hole layout.

"I've entered partnerships, but this was my first individual tourney—I'm pretty surprised," Wallace said.

A field of 263 golfers participated in the two-day city championship.

Vanderbilt Considers Patterson

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Vanderbilt University has reportedly narrowed its list of candidates for athletic director to two and is expected to name Clay Stapleton's successor this week.

The Tennessean Sunday identified the two finalists as Texas Tech assistant football coach Bob Patterson, a former Vandy assistant, and Central Michigan head football coach Roy Kramer.

Vanderbilt President Emmett Fields will make the final decision. The school's screening committee was said to be evenly divided on its support for the candidates.

Stapleton stepped down as Vandy's athletic director June 22 after five years at the Southeastern Conference school. Both he and head football coach Fred Pancoast came under fire earlier this year after two dismal football seasons. Some Vandy alumni took out full-page newspaper advertisements calling for their removal.

During the past two seasons, Vandy managed to win only four football games —none in the SEC—while losing 18.

Patterson was an assistant at Vanderbilt for 12 years and curreptly serves as defensive line coach and administrative assistant to Texas Tech head coach Rex Dockery.

Kramer, a graduate of Maryville (Tenn.) College, has compiled an 83-32-2 record at Central Michigan.

Boston's Boom Remains Silent

By The Associated Press

Those booming Boston bats are silent, having produced just three runs in the last 46 innings, and Manager Don Zimmer is baffled as to how to solve the problem.

"When you're in a slump, you're in one," said Zimmer, sounding a bit like Yogi Berra after the Red Sox were beaten by the Kansas City Royals 2-1 Sunday for their 10th loss in the last 12 games.

"I never thought I'd see a period like this one with this ball club," added Zimmer, whose team's .277 season batting average is the second-best in the major leagues. "Our pitching hasn't been all that bad, we're just not getting a hit when we need one."

Sometimes a manager will shake up his lineup to snap a team out of a slump, but Zimmer says he can't do that because of the back injury that has veteran team captain Carl Yastrzemski on the sidelines indefinitely.

Brewers 10, Blue Jays 5

The Brewers collected 10 extra-base hits in beating Toronto, as Dick Davis homered to break a 5-5 tie in the eighth inning, Tony Muser added a bases-loaded triple with two out in the eighth and Jim Wohlford had an RBI single in the ninth.

Yankees 4-0, Twins 3-2

Jim Spencer's pinch-hit double in the eighth inning drove in Graig Nettles with the winning run in the opener. Ron Guidry struck out 10 in 6 2/3 innings, the seventh time he's fanned 10 or more this season, although the Yankee starter failed in his bid for his 16th victory.

Angels 4, Orioles 2

Brian Downing hit two run-scoring singles and Joe Rudi and Lyman Bostock had one apiece as California beat Baltimore.

A's 5, Indians 4

Cleveland blew a 4-3 lead as Oakland scored twice in the ninth. Dave Revering doubled and scored on a single by Taylor Duncan, who came around to score on a two-out single by Jeff Newman.

Tigers 5, Mariners 4

Steve Kemp hit a pair of run-scoring singles and Milt Wilcox won for the fourth time in his last six starts as Detroit defeated Seattle. It was the fifth victory in the last six games for the Tigers.

White Sox 5-4, Rangers 4-2

Chicago scored three runs in the eighth inning to erase a 4-2 deficit in the opener. Lamar Johnson drove in the tying runs with a bases-loaded single and Claudell Washington scored the winning run all the way from first when Texas center fielder Juan Beniquez misplayed the ball for an error.

Ralph Garr was the hitting star of the second game for the White Sox with a single, double and triple and one RBI.

Rose Eyes 'Imaginary Playmate'

By The Associated Press

Sydney who?

Don't bother with the record books or Baseball Encyclopedia. He's Pete Rose's imaginary playmate.

The goal-oriented Cincinnati Reds third baseman already is looking past the all-time National League mark of 44 consecutive games in which Wee Willie Keeler hit in 1897. After that, all he can see is the magic mark of 56 by Joe DiMaggio — until he conjured up another target.

"Right now, I'm going after Sidney Stonestreet's 48-game streak," Rose told a puzzled group of sports writers who had just watched the Reds captain hit in his 43rd consecutive game. "You probably never heard of him. I just made him up."

Rose went 2-for-5 Sunday, getting both hits off Philadelphia starter Larry Christenson, as the Reds downed the Phils 5-3.

Expos 19, Braves 0

Montreal's offensive explosion tied two major league records, broke a league mark and broke a club record. The Expos' eight home runs — three by Larry Parrish — tied a major league record previously held by six clubs, three in each league. Andre Dawson tied another major league record held by 18 others by hitting two home runs in one inning.

Giants 4-1, Cubs 2-0

San Francisco's double-header sweep gave the club sole possession of first place in the West after falling into a tie with Los Angeles Saturday.

Pirates 5, Dodgers 3

Padres 3, Cards 2

San Diego extended its winning streak to six games when Gene Richards doubled home Derrell Thomas with the winning run in the seventh inning. Gaylord Perry, 12-4, needed two innings of relief help from Rollie Fingers to get the win. Fingers got his 23rd save.

Astros 4, Mets 3

Wilbur Howard's pinch-hit ninth inning single gave Houston its sixth straight victory as the Astros rallied to beat New York.

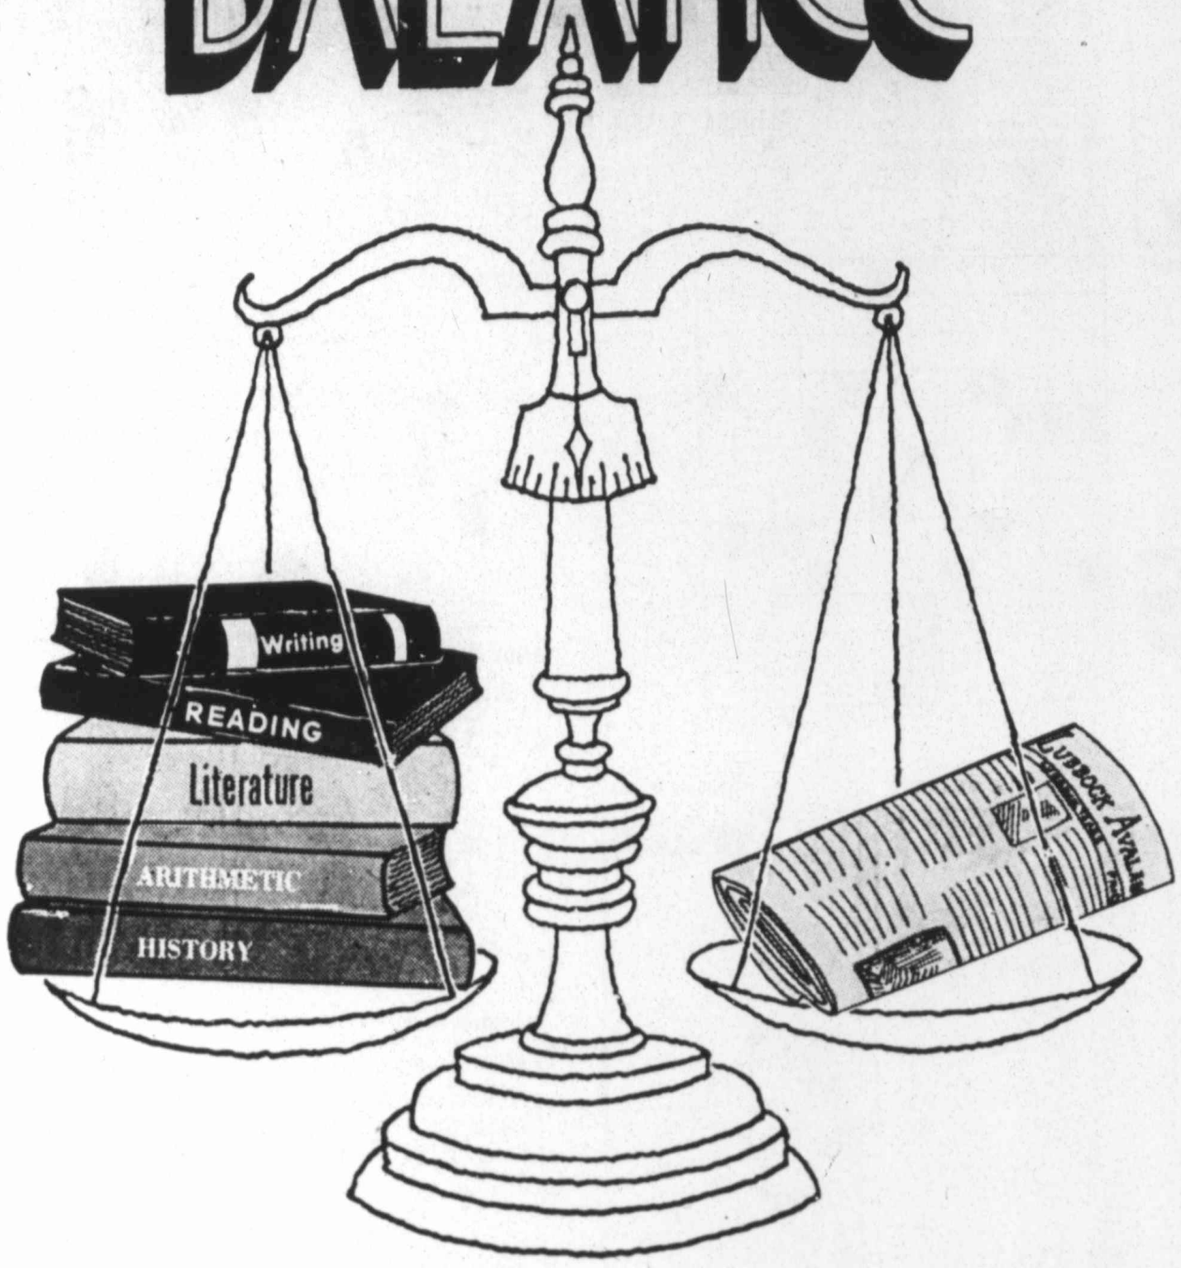
BALANCE



A textbook is a necessary part of classroom instruction, but it can't possibly cover an event or discovery that has developed in the past 24 hours.

Many teachers have found they can utilize a newspaper as a source for information not yet available in the textbook, thus providing a balance between yesterday and today.

If you're a teacher, you can find out how to put balance in your classroom, by attending Avalanche-Journal's 7th Annual "Living Textbook Conference", to be held August 8th, on the campus of Texas Tech University.
