Allies pound convoy

Saudis retake Khafji; Iraqi casualties heavy

■ Troop movements indicate another, bigger Iraqi assault might be in making.

N.Y. Times News Service

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia — As Saudi troops backed by American marines drove Iraqi invaders from the coastal town of Khafji near the Kuwaiti border Thursday after a 36-hour struggle, allied bombers pounded a 10-mile enemy armored column apparently headed for Saudi Arabia.

Almost two days after the fighting near Khafji began, Iraqi artillery was still shelling the area, and door-to-door searches were under way in the shell-pocked town along the Persian Gulf in an effort to root out isolated Iraqi snipers.

There were strong indications that another, bigger Iraqi assault might be in the making.

Front-line Marine commanders near Khafji reported that five or six Iraqi divisions, a force of some 60,000 troops, had gathered near the Kuwaiti town of Wafra, center of an oilfield about 35 miles west of Khafji.

Senior officers here discounted the possibility of a fresh attack on that scale, but Pentagon officials acknowledged that there were sizable Iraqi troop movements.

Thursday night, the commander of a squadron of Marine Harrier jump jets, Lt. Col. Dick White, said 800 to 1,000 Iraqi military vehicles were moving south toward the Saudi border with Kuwait.

Expecting what he called "a turkey shoot," he told pool reporters at an airbase in northeastern Saudi Arabia that "there is no sign of the Iraqis retreating."

A pool reporter with the British Fourth Armored Brigade said he had watched all day as U.S. B-52 bombers passed overhead, refueled and then pummeled the Iraqi column.

He spoke of fierce fighting spread across a front stretching more than 150 miles inland from the sea and quoted intelligence reports as saying 100 Iraqi tanks had been wiped out.

An Iraqi communique asserted that men and women from the American ground forces had been taken prisoner near Khafji.

The U.S. command in the region said two soldiers, a man and a woman, were missing on "a transportation mission," but said their disappearance was unconnected with the fighting at Khafji, the toughest of the war so far.

Reports from the Khafji area said that the two were attached to a motor transport unit based in Dhahran and that they had strayed into the town on Wednesday afternoon and disappeared. A Marine

Raid exposes vulnerabilities of allied force

N.Y. Times News Service

OUTSIDE KHAFJI, Saudi Arabia — In the end, the United States and its allies won The Battle of Khafji. But not until after 36 hours of helter-skelter confusion that at one point saw the Saudi tanks careening in a chaotic midnight retreat because brother Arab forces were accidentally blasting their position.

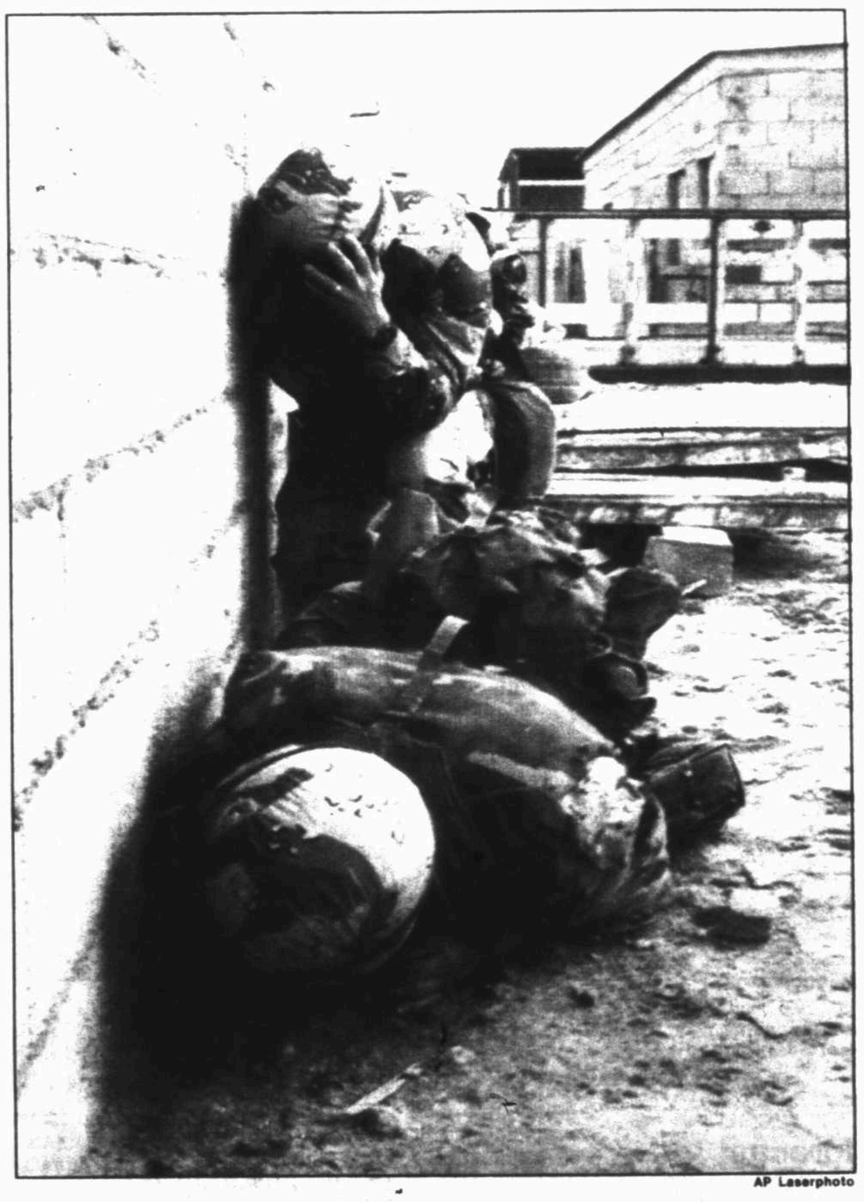

You have to hand it to Saddam: the Iraqi tanks clearly caught the American-led alliance unprepared. After rumbling into this northernmost Saudi oil hamlet Tuesday night, they managed to keep fighting inside the town for long enough to claim victory in the first ground combat of the war. Then an Iraqi relief column fought in from the north and successfully extracted some Iraqis still holding out inside Khafji.

"It could be a great political victory," acknowledged the U.S. Marines artillery commander, Lt. Col. John Garrett, who helped the Saudis pound the Iraqi tank invaders into retreating back into Kuwait. "If what he wants to do is convince everyone on his side of his manhood, look, there is the evidence that he did it."

Besides exposing some of the vulnerabilities of the alliance's complex multinational command setup, the Battle of Khafji also provided a telling bit of evidence of how truth can be tailored at official military briefings to present a positive spin on how the allies performed.

Correspondents visiting two forward Marine outposts without military escort on Thursday got an unvarnished account of the battle that did not always comport

'It's all coming back' for Vietnam vets

PITTSFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Just as the money was running out for the Veterans Outreach Center, the old soldiers started showing up, needing to talk about the demons unleashed by the Persian Gulf war.

One day this week, Will Rodgers was one of about a half-dozen veterans who wandered into the barren pair of rooms where the smell of tobacco hangs heavy in the air.

It's not much of a place, but it's the one sanctuary that helps Rodgers get a grip, albeit a tentative one, when things get crazy, the way they have been since hostilities broke out in the gulf.

"It's all just coming right back. Sometimes I just can't sleep," Rodgers said, his hands twisting the front of his navy blue sweater. "I just heard about the artillery warfare going on there. That's just something that just really gets me."

As he spoke, a television set blared a steady stream of war news into the windowless center where a huge U.S. flag dominates one wall. Those who took a seat on the office's battered couch or one of its mismatched vinyl chairs invariably turned to the action.

"It never started bothering me until I started watching this," said 57-year-old George Bird, who served in Vietnam in 1967 as he waved his hand in the direction of the set. "I find it hard to get away from. I guess maybe I watch it as much as I can."

Although it helps to be around other vets with similar problems, the veterans are waging very private wars. Some, like Rodgers, have been talking for years about what Vietnam did to them, but they still can't quite get at the heart of the darkness.

Task force arrests 12 on drug charges

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

The Permian Basin Drug Task Force had arrested 12 people on drug-dealing charges as of 10:30 p.m. Thursday in Midland's first task force narcotics bust in about a year, officials reported.

Another 13 people sought in the roundup remained at large Thursday night as law enforcement officers served the remainder of 37 sealed indictments.

The "bust out," a result of undercover drug buys — from six months to six days ago — by the task force officers, had netted 12 arrests with 14 indictments served as of 10:30 p.m.

All those arrested were booked in the Midland County Detention Facility.

"It will make a dent in the dealers out there," said Tom Finley with the task force.

"It's also a deterrent to everybody dealing drugs. If we don't get you on this one we'll get you on the next

Chairman: Bank insurance fund may need another $10 billion

Seidman

WASHINGTON (AP) — The insurance fund protecting the nation's bank deposits may need an additional $10 billion to stave off insolvency, but a taxpayer bailout likely will not be necessary, the head of the fund said Thursday.

In a new forecast, Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. Chairman L. William Seidman said even a mild recession would reduce the fund to $3.9 billion by the end of this year and $2.4 billion by the end of 1992.

If the recession drags into next year, the fund would sink to zero at the end of this year and would be $5.6 billion into the red, absent an infusion of cash a year later, he warned.

Even if the recession ends this summer, the fund will need to bolster its reserves by about $10 billion in 1991 and 1992, over and above what it expects to collect from banks in insurance premiums.

He did not say how the money should be raised, but suggested a number of alternatives, including borrowing the money from financial markets.

"At this point, I don't see any likelihood that we will have to go to the taxpayer," Seidman said.

Archbishop retires, issues plea for truth

LONDON (AP) — Archbishop of Canterbury Robert Runcie, retiring from an 11-year primacy troubled by clashes with conservatives, said Thursday that "conflict is inevitable but truth must always be paramount."

Runcie spoke at Church House near Westminster Abbey in his last public speech before retiring at midnight as spiritual head of the Church of England and leader of the world's 70 million Anglicans, including 2.5 million U.S. Episcopalians.

The liberal-minded archbishop made no direct reference to his difficulties in a decade that coincided with Margaret Thatcher's three terms as prime minister.

But Runcie, whose defense of tolerance and outspokenness for

CNN out, poll says

More than 87 percent of the nearly 1,100 callers to the Community Pulse poll this week feel that the Cable News Network should stop broadcasting from Baghdad.

Between Sunday morning and Wednesday night, 957 of 1,090 callers — 87.8 percent — voted in favor of the broadcasts being stopped. The remaining 133 supported continued coverage, despite rigorous censorship by the Iraqi government.

"I think Peter Arnett's Wednesday morning broadcast of Iraqi propaganda was particularly disgusting. These broadcasts are an insult to the American people," commented Fred Fowler on the majority view of discontinuing the broadcasts.

Midlander John McDaniel added, "I think what CNN is doing is tantamount to treason."

The minority view was represented by callers like Todd Cirrincione, who said, "I favor CNN's continued coverage from Iraq because if CNN stops broadcasting, it will only add fuel to the Iraqi propaganda fire, in that Saddam can say that the U.S. is not interested in unbiased reporting of the war.

"The way it is now, everyone is aware of CNN's reporting restrictions and the censorship imposed on them and take those reports with a grain of salt."

Other supporters of continued reports cited possible insights into Saddam's actions and motives that could be gleaned from reports, as well as forcing Americans to realize the impossibility of "the most intense aerial bombardment in history without killing and wounding Iraqi civilians, no matter how surgical the strike."

Opponents of the coverage, used words like "manipulation," "being used," "playing into the hands of this madman," in arguing for stopping the broadcasts.

Many callers were generally critical of the media's handling of war coverage, saying it is "too thorough," "sensationalized" and "sick and uncalled for."

The Reporter-Telegram appreciates the participation of all callers to Community Pulse.

A new bi-weekly topic will be announced Sunday, Feb. 10.

Get ready: Blue skies ahead

Staff Report

The National Weather Service forecast for today calls for sunny skies with a high near 70. Winds will be from the south at 10 to 20 mph. Tonight should be clear, with a low in the low 30s.

Saturday is expected to be sunny, with a high near 70.

Thursday's high was 61, compared to the date's record of 80 set in 1963. Thursday's low was 26. The record low for today's date is minus 8 degrees, set in 1985.

STATE

A warming trend began Thursday across Texas as a high-pressure system moved into northern regions, bringing sunny skies that burned away traces of sleet from a midweek storm.

Skies were also clear across almost all of South and West Texas, with afternoon temperatures ranging from the 50s to high 60s statewide.

The warmer weather was in contrast to the first 10 days of this month, when freezing rain, sleet and snow fell in North Texas.

With a low-pressure trough developing in northwestern regions, winds were mostly southerly and southwesterly at 5 to 15 mph and light and variable in the south, with northeasterly breezes at 10 to 15 mph along the upper Gulf coast and gusts to 30 mph at Guadalupe Pass.

The warming trend was expected to continue today and Saturday, with highs ranging from the 60s to the 70s statewide with mostly sunny skies.

Lows tonight should range from the mid-20s in the Panhandle to near 50 degrees in South Texas. Some late-night and early-morning fog was expected through Saturday in North Texas.

NATION

Winds howled through the Rockies and in the East, where snow also fell Thursday, while the mercury rose to record high temperatures in Florida.

High wind warnings were posted for the Montana front range of the Rockies and the upper Yellowstone Valley, and warnings for gale force winds were in effect along the northern Atlantic Coast, as well as across Lake Erie, Lake Ontario and the Laurel Mountains of southwest Pennsylvania.

Storms in New York state produced as much as 15 inches of snow in Oswego County. And by midafternoon, 6 inches of new snow had fallen at Ashtabula, Ohio. Snow depths of 4 to 7 inches were common in northeast Ohio and ranged up to 11½ inches at Burton, Ohio.

Midland statistics

Sunny skies today, high near 70. South winds 10 to 20 mph. Clear tonight, with a low in the low 30s.

CONVOY: Front stretches more than 150 miles

(From 1A)

rescue attempt reportedly failed.

It was the first time in American military history that a woman serving as a soldier in the American armed forces had been officially listed in wartime as missing.

Officials in Washington said a U.S. Air Force AC-130, a four-engine turboprop gunship, had been shot down over Iraq.

An unconfirmed report said that as many as 20 American troops were aboard, but Pentagon officials in Washington declined to confirm or deny that report, saying such information could interfere with search and rescue operations.

The mopping-up operations at Khafji marked the end of the first sustained ground fighting of the two-week war, which began Tuesday night.

After a four-pronged Iraqi attack, involving four battalions totaling about 2,000 men, the allies said they had inflicted heavy casualties on the Iraqis in Khafji and in related fighting near Wafra.

U.S. officials said that 161 enemy prisoners had been taken and that 42 tanks and 35 other vehicles had been destroyed. They said 11 marines, not 12 as reported Wednesday, had been killed in the western sector.

All of the marines killed were riding in light armored vehicles that were hit by enemy gunfire, said Lt. Gen. Thomas Kelly, the chief of operations for the Pentagon.

Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, the allied commander, tried to play down the significance of the Khafji engagement, saying it was "about as significant as a mosquito on an elephant."

But at the front, allied officers paid tribute to the tenacity of a force of about 150 or so Iraqis who managed to penetrate 10 or 12 miles into Saudi Arabia, hold part of Khafji for more than a day and then withdraw to Kuwait with some of their armor intact.

"You couldn't tell what way they were coming from," a Marine sergeant said of the Iraqi attackers. "It seemed like they were everywhere."

The Baghdad radio called the battle, despite its limited size, "a sign of a thunderous storm blowing across the Arabian desert," and said it indicated that the forces of President Saddam Hussein had taken the initiative.

Clearly trying to put Arab troops in the spotlight for political purposes, the American briefer in the Saudi capital, Riyadh, Brig. Gen. Pat Stevens 4th, said soldiers from Saudi Arabia and the gulf kingdom of Qatar had finally driven the Iraqis from Khafji, and he insisted that Marine ground forces "were not engaged" there.

In fact, however, reporters saw marines firing artillery in support of the Arabs and moving into and out of the city on foot and in armored vehicles.

In addition, Marine AH-1 Cobra helicopters played a major role in rooting out the Iraqis, and Marine TOW anti-tank missiles were fired.

In one episode, a marine firing a shoulder-launched missile destroyed one of the Iraqi armored personnel carriers that had been holed up in the town.

with the version offered up at the daily military briefing in Riyadh.

From the opening moments of the Iraqi raid into Khafji, the United States and its allies were in hotter water than they disclosed at the time. The reason was that two six-man Marine reconnaissance teams were stuck in the middle of Khafji while the Iraqi tanks were shooting all around them.

With the Marine scouts pinned down in buildings by 50-caliber machine gun fire, the allied commanders on the scene decided they could not afford merely to surround the Iraqis and await their surrender.

They had to go on the attack — even if that meant destroying millions of dollars worth of recently constructed office buildings and homes in and around the Port of Khafji.

After dark on Wednesday, the Saudis — accompanied by an American military adviser — decided to mount an Arab counterattack to help relieve pressure on the stranded American Marine scouts.

The Saudi tanks were to take the lead. Their allies from the neighboring Persian Gulf country of Qatar were supposed to provide covering fire from their tanks.

The trouble was the Qataris didn't know exactly where the Saudis were heading. This was a formula for failure.

"Some Saudi units moved in there at night," said Marine Capt. Kevin Monahan of Redwood City, Calif. "Obviously this was their first attack, the first fire fight of the war. It was at night and there was some friendly fire."

The Saudis had punched their way back into the fringes of Khafji by late Wednesday, at which time they started taking "incoming" from their own allies. The Saudi commanders ordered an immediate retreat that left the Iraqis in full control overnight of the center of Khafji.

By the account of several U.S. Marine officers who spent the night outside Khafji, the "friendly fire" came from the Qatari armored unit assigned to protect the Saudis from the rear. Though it is officially known as the army of Qatar, some of its front line troops told journalists they are contract soldiers from Pakistan, India or Somalia.

words. You're going through something you shouldn't have to go through," said Rodgers, 43. "Maybe it's something you got to go through, but it's just a nightmare. It's crazy."

Rodgers left Vietnam an alcoholic, an addiction that stayed with him 16 years and cost him a wife. Now, he's afraid of losing a second.

"I live by myself now, I don't have anybody living with me. They couldn't live with me," he said.

Daniel Denault, center director, tries to calm the vets, a job made harder these days because of his own nervousness about the future of the center. But Denault, a sergeant in the Army 4th Infantry from 1968 to 1969, banished some horrors of his own with a reunion visit to Vietnam last year. And he relies on those experiences to help talk to troubled vets.

"I work very slowly with them and try to talk them into coming down to us," he said. "But the money. It makes me mad. I won't close down. We will find a way."

Denault and his assistant, Gary Novak, have been working without a salary since November, victims of state budget cuts. Part of the bills have been paid with $1,200 from private donations; the rest is coming out of personal savings. Denault just can't see quitting now.

War in the Persian Gulf has prompted about 50 calls to his offices, 20 of them from vets troubled by the memories being evoked. Visits to his offices, tucked in a corner of downtown, have doubled.

Veteran centers across the country say calls from former GIs have increased as much as tenfold since the war began, from Atlanta to Bismarck, N.D., where up to 30 people a week are seeking counseling at the Vietnam Veterans Center.

As the day wore on and news of ground fighting intensified, worry, fear and a touch of bravado filled the center office as veterans urged each other to "Hang in there," and "Keep the faith."

TRUTH: Archbishop has defended use of force

the underprivileged often drew fire from Mrs. Thatcher's supporters, said he regretted the emergence of party strife in the policy-making synod of bishops, clergy and laity.

Debates in the synod, which has politicians among its lay members, often echo what is said a short distance away in the House of Commons.

"The synod sometimes failed in not recognizing the complexity of the world around it," the archbishop told his crowded audience. He urged them: "Think more clearly and feel more passionately."

"There will never be uniformity. Conflict is inevitable but truth must always be paramount, although it is sometimes difficult to recognize what is true," he said.

"To recognize goodness and sometimes sanctity in those with whom we are in frequent and fundamental disagreement has always been an Anglican gift that must not be lost," Runcie said.

He made special mention of his envoy Terry Waite, who helped free three U.S. and seven British captives in the Middle East and disappeared in Beirut Jan. 20, 1987, on his fifth mission there.

"The story of his (Waite's) remarkable ministry in the early days remains to be fully told but his return to us has been my constant concern and will remain so," Runcie said.

Runcie, who was decorated for bravery as a tank commander in World War II, has defended the use of force to evict Iraq from Kuwait.

FUND: Taxpayer bailout unlikely, chairman says

(From 1A)

The Treasury Department had been urging the industry to pay $25 billion into the fund over three to five years, but bankers say that would drive too many marginal banks into insolvency and would worsen the so-called credit crunch.

Borrowing $10 billion would place considerably less immediate strain on the industry. Banks would have to contribute only an extra $1.1 billion a year to the FDIC to pay off the borrowing over 20 years, according to figures supplied by Seidman.

He and Treasury Department officials met privately Wednesday with 20 bankers representing five trade associations, including the largest, the American Bankers Association.

Seidman is trying to persuade industry leaders to agree on a method to replenish the insurance fund and also to create a new fund that would invest in weak banks, hoping to prevent their failure.

Bankers are deeply divided about the second proposal. Executives of smaller and healthier institutions do not want to pay to rescue ailing large banks.

However, bankers in depressed regions of the country, particularly New England, say the economic downturn will get worse unless weak banks get assistance to keep lending.

Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan told the House Banking Committee that the shortage of credit was becoming progressively a problem and was having a significant impact on the economy.

In an interview published in The New York Times, Greenspan suggested a change that would help stimulate lending by adding roughly $1.5 billion to the banking industry's profits at the expense of the general taxpayer.

He suggested that Congress allow the central bank to pay interest on reserves that banks are required to deposit with the Fed's 12 regional banks. That would reduce the Fed's earnings, which are forwarded each year to the Treasury, and thus increase the budget deficit.

Seidman's projection is slightly less pessimistic than one offered earlier this week by the Congressional Budget Office.

one," Finley said.

The majority of indictments in Thursday night's raid were for dealers within the Midland city limits, officials said.

"They are in all sections of town," said Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter.

And a variety of drugs were named in the indictments although cocaine was apparently the drug of choice.

"It's a cross-section of what is out there," Finley said.

Of the 37 indictments, 27 were for delivery of cocaine, three for delivery of heroin, two for delivery of marijuana, and five for delivery of simulated substances.

Finley said the undercover work up to the roundup went well and stressed a cooperation between law enforcement agencies. "This really went smoothly with a lot of cooperation," he said.

In addition to task force agents, Midland police, sheriff and adult probation officers, and the Andrews County Sheriff's officers, which provided a narcotics dog, assisted in the round-up.

The last task force drug raid in Midland occurred about a year ago, Finley said.

The Midland County Detention facility reported the following people arrested Thursday night in connection with the "bust out": Joe Granado, 29, two indictments for delivery of cocaine, two bonds at $20,000 each; Alton O'Neal, 38, one indictment for delivery of cocaine, $30,000 bond; Barbara Freeman, 29, one indictment for delivery of a simulated controlled substance, $20,000 bond; Joe Rodarte, 21, one indictment for delivery of cocaine, $20,000 bond; Carol Hickey, 39, two indictments for delivery of cocaine, two bonds at $10,000 each; Anthony Adams, 26, two indictments for delivery of cocaine, two bonds at $10,000 each; Craig Ellis, 29, one indictment for delivery of cocaine, $15,000 bond; Israel Bonilla, 29, one indictment for delivery of cocaine, $15,000 bond; Antonio Sanjuan, 41, one indictment for delivery of cocaine, $10,000 bond; Kelly Harmon, 27, one indictment for delivery of marijuana, $10,000 bond; Tonya Hayes, 28, one indictment for delivery of cocaine, $10,000 bond; and Kathryn Reyes, 28, one indictment for delivery of marijuana by constructive transfer, $5,000 bond.

PRACTICE: Students arrange extra study time

others elect to start school early, during zero hour (the hour before school officially begins), to attend the sixth-period program.

"Some days we do math, other days we work on calculators, chemistry or physics," Ms. Bryant said. "Math just seems to be the weakest field for most students."

The teacher said the "trick" in solving math problems mentally involves applying a concrete meaning to numbers.

"Numbers are more than just symbols," she said. "They all have concrete meanings. Students have to learn to visualize them and exercise that part of the brain which allows them to hold numbers in their heads. It's just like an actor memorizing a script or a musician memorizing a long piece of music."

As students concentrated on their work Thursday, Ms. Bryant watched the minutes tick off on a watch. "I am really like a coach for these kids," she said. "I give them the work and they run with it."

Ms. Bryant, an LHS chemistry teacher for seven years, said she has always been willing to go the extra mile to help students who want to be challenged with extra work.

"This is the first time students organized everything themselves, though," she said. "They wanted to practice and they found the time to get the job done."

Ms. Bryant's 15 students have used their new-found skills to compete in area competitions. "We will have two practice meets in February," Ms. Bryant said, "one in Lubbock and one in San Angelo."

The teacher said "the real thing" the students are aiming for is the district United Interscholastic League meet March 28. "Students who win in that league will go on to regional, then state meets," Ms. Bryant said.

Barbara Hogan, a member of Math and Science Boosters who has visited the sixth-period class, described the students as "super motivated." Ms. Hogan applauded Ms. Bryant for "putting on the extra hat of coach."

"Oh, this is not a big deal, really," Ms. Bryant said. "This is no more than most teachers would do if asked by their students."

The teacher is quick to give all the credit for the program to her students. "They are just brilliant students," she said. "They need the challenge."

She said some students take tests and practice on their own at home. "They only come in to get more tests or get help with something they don't understand," the teacher said.

Ms. Bryant pooh-poohs the notion that her lunch hour should be used for anything other than taking the "numb" out of numbers. She also said that keeping her classroom doors open during the sixth period affords students a haven to practice math or science. "What else would I do sixth period?" she said. "My conference period is during zero hour."

Well, because her work day officially is over at the end of fifth period, the teacher could go home.

"What? Go home?" she said, clutching her hand to her chest and laughing.

Clarification

A quote in Thursday's edition should have indicated that delays since construction on the Lamesa Road bridge began have all been due to weather. Any delays attributable to work by contractors on other projects occurred before the site was prepared for construction.

U.S. puts diplomats in Baltics

MOSCOW (AP) — The United States has stationed diplomats in the Baltic republics and U.S. officials are encouraging separatists there to hold popular votes on their independence declarations, Baltic officials said Thursday.

Estonia's parliament decided Thursday to hold a referendum on March 3, two weeks before the date set by Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev for a nationwide vote. Lithuania has scheduled a vote for Feb. 9, and Latvia is expected to consider one soon.

U.S. pressure for a peaceful resolution of the Baltic crisis increased after Soviet troops killed 13 unarmed civilians in an attack on the Lithuanian television station on Jan. 13, American and Baltic officials say.

Since then, with the additional deaths of five Latvians and one Lithuanian in Soviet attacks, the United States has kept two diplomats in each of the three republics to "act as a check on Soviet behavior," a U.S. official said. Expelling them would signal a renewed crackdown, he said.

Nations adopt global plan for 1990s

PARIS (AP) — The world's wealthiest industrialized nations on Thursday agreed to a five-point plan to protect the environment on a global scale through the 1990s.

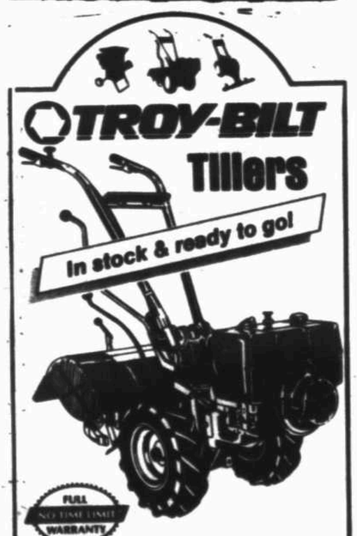

Environment ministers of the 24-nation Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development said only international coordination can cope with current threats to the environment.

The ministers adopted five measures that will serve as guidelines to governments in charting environmental policy over the next decade. The OECD is a policy-planning institute and cannot enforce the acts.

"(We are at) a dramatic juncture in world history and the fate of the environment," Italian Environment Minister Giorgio Ruffio, chairman of the two-day meeting, told a news conference.

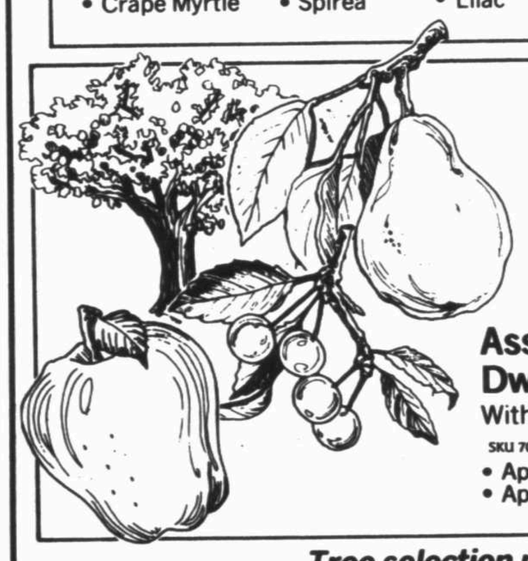

"There are problems that affect the whole of spaceship Earth and threaten the life of this planet," he said.

Polish judges rule restoring religious study constitutional

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — A constitutional tribunal has ruled that an order restoring religion classes to post-Communist Poland's public schools does not violate the law.

A government ombudswoman appointed to represent Poles opposed to the classes had argued that the Education Ministry could not unilaterally restore religious education to schools without first submitting the move to a Parliament vote.

The judges ruled in favor of the Education Ministry late Wednesday, with at least three of the 12 judges dissenting. The final vote was not released.

More than 90 percent of Poles consider themselves Roman Catholic. But opinion polls and letters published in newspapers show many Poles opposed the religious education order, which was issued last August, because it threatens the separation between church and state in Poland's new democracy.

The judges ruled the order was consitutional because a 1961 law making schools secular was canceled by a 1989 law, passed by Poland's fledgling democracy, that establishes a relationship between schools and the Catholic church.

Three of the dissenting judges made their views public, arguing that Parliament has never repealed the law removing religion from schools, the Gazeta Wyborcza newspaper reported Thursday.

The Education Ministry order does not make religion classes mandatory and grades do not affect a student's advancement. However, prayer is permitted in the presence of all children, regardless of their beliefs. Lay religion teachers are paid from public school budgets and participate in the councils that determine if students will be promoted.

Parents opposed to the religious classes argued that students who did not attend them would be ostracized by their peers and said they feared the classes would contribute to religious intolerance in Poland.

They also said that non-Catholics, although permitted to organize their own religious education programs, would not have the resources to make it practical.

According to the Education Ministry, about 95 percent of students have been attending the religion classes since they were reintroduced. Religious education was a tradition in Polish schools before World War II and continued into the 1950s in some districts until being banned by the Communist regime.

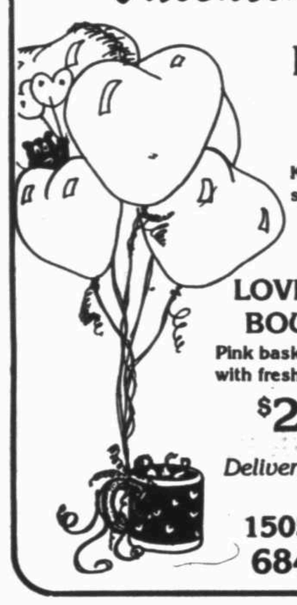

"The tribunal's decision is reasonable," Deputy Education Minister Anna Radziwill told the official PAP news agency. "Another ban on teaching religion would bring more evil than good."

But one education ministry official, Miroslaw Sawicki, conceded the order restoring religious education to schools was "introduced in a revolutionary way" and would be reviewed before the next school year.

He said he knew of special classes being organized for Orthodox Jews and Jehovah's Witnesses in the province of Suwalki, near the Soviet border in northeastern Poland.

Denver: Airport cutbacks shouldn't affect others

NATION

DENVER (AP) — Officials say the problems that forced cutbacks in the city's new international airport shouldn't adversely affect other cities considering expansion of their airports.

Mayor Federico Pena announced Wednesday that the $2.3 billion project is being reduced because the gulf war has sent oil prices soaring, driving two airlines out of business and creating uncertainty in the financial markets.

The city trimmed five full runways to four runways and a commuter strip, cut the number of gates from 94 to 75 or 85, and eliminated one of three planned passenger terminals.

Pena urged other airports to pursue their expansion plans, despite Denver's difficulties, but cautioned them to take the same approach Denver did — build new airports in modular stages, so engineers can respond quickly to changes and make cutbacks if necessary.

Pena said Wednesday he has been in close contact with officials in San Francisco, Chicago, Austin, Texas, and Arizona about Denver's progress, after they indicated a desire for expansion projects of their own.

Pena said when the Denver airport was being planned, there were no forecasts of recession or a war in the Middle East that would drive oil prices through the roof.

"I would advise other cities, 'Sure, go ahead and build a new airport,' " Pena said Wednesday. "The country needs more airports. ... We need a more efficient system with fewer delays to better compete with the unification of Europe in 1992 and the Far East.

"I would also urge flexibility. These projects take so long to get done. We have a national recession we didn't have four or five years ago, or a war," he said.

Pena still promises the entire airport will be completed as planned, but not by opening day in 1993.

The Denver airport is the first major airport to be built in the United States since the Dallas-Fort Worth airport was completed in the mid-1970s. Construction of the facility 17 miles northeast of Denver began last summer.

Other airports around the country considering major expansion projects have been keeping a close eye on the Denver airport project, and so have investors.

The Federal Aviation Administration also has keen hopes for the success of the Denver project, saying airport expansion around the nation is badly needed to meet anticipated demands into the next century.

Questions over the success of Denver's gamble escalated after the city issued $900 million in airport bonds rated BBB by Standard & Poor's, just slightly above non-investment grade. Last month, $700 million of those bonds were placed on Standard & Poor's CreditWatch.

City Councilman Ted Hackworth said Denver will have to settle for less than the full project now. Councilwoman Stephanie Foote says the goal is to get planes landing so the city can begin collecting revenue.

Aviation Director George Doughty says there will have to be six runways at some point so the city can collect all $500 million promised by Congress.

The city says the cutbacks will save $150 million. There also are suggestions that the city may eliminate the commuter runway, saving another $50 million.

Pena says despite upheavals in the airline industry, airline traffic will continue to surge.

"Airlines are going to prosper. By the year 2000, traffic will double. There will be more international business than we've ever had. Most of that will be by air travel, not through ports," he said.

"By the year 2020, world travel will double again. Assume I'm off by a decade, that still means a lot more people flying," he said.

Pena denied suggestions from critics that he decided not to run again for mayor in April because of doubts over the project's success, so that if the project failed, he couldn't be blamed.

"I've worked on this project for seven and a half years, and I will work another five months until the next administration takes over," he said.

Postal rates still purchase plenty

The cost of a first-class stamp will increase from 25 cents to 29 cents effective Sunday, an increase that in light of the cost of comparable services still is surprisingly small.

For that 29 cents, a letter can still be mailed coast to coast in the United States, a fairly remarkable achievement at the end of the 20th century.

The cost of postage isn't so reasonable in many other nations, although they're much smaller than the United States. For example, a first-class stamp costs 67.2 cents in Germany, 62.3 cents in Italy, 54.8 in Norway, 47.9 in Austria, 46.6 in Japan, 45.5 in Belgium, 45.4 in France, 44.7 in the Netherlands, 44.6 in Sweden and 42.5 in Great Britain. A first-class stamp also still costs more in Switzerland, Canada and Australia than in the United States.

Midland Postmaster Stan Sartain also pointed out that during the past decade while the cost of movie tickets was climbing from an average $2.78 to the $4.45 charged today — a 60 percent increase — and the cost of national magazines was jumping from $1.50 to $2.50, reflecting a 67 percent increase, postal rates have only increased by 45 percent with the 4-cent increase.

The postal service delivered 160 million pieces of mail to 117 million different addresses last year, a significant increase over the 61 million pieces of mail it was delivering two decades ago.

It's easy to complain about the postal service when you have to wait in line at the post office longer than a few seconds to buy a first-class stamp, but postal delivery is still remarkably efficient and inexpensive in this country.

That isn't to imply that the postal department is being operated as well as it might be. Privatization of particular postal service functions has helped to hold costs down and keep the mail flowing smoothly. Even more services might be turned over to the private sector to help hold costs down and to make the postal department operate more like an independent business, improving customer satisfaction.

The department needs to adopt an innovative and gallant spirit and to compete with private industry to give postal customers the best possible service for their 29 cents. That's the spirit that took the mail across the the Great Plains during pony express days, made it the envy of the world, and will keep it viable in the demanding economic times still ahead.

Smugglers enter safely in Brownsville

WASHINGTON — The border town of Brownsville, Texas, is at the front in America's so-called "war" on drugs. Some authoritative sources say it is also a sieve for cocaine and marijuana.

Anderson

Customs employees who have observed the Brownsville scene for years have tried in vain to alert the U.S. Customs Service that its Brownsville inspection operations are flawed and possibly even corrupt.

Last year a sister agency, the Drug Enforcement Administration, warned Customs that it had received information that an average of three-fourths of a ton of cocaine a day was crossing into the United States at Brownsville, in produce, equipment or cattle trucks. But Customs insists it doesn't have an employee problem in Brownsville.

Interviews with Customs sources, and internal documents obtained by our associate Dean Boyd, point a finger at the Brownsville Customs office of Inspection.

"In a nutshell, the situation is completely out of control down there. Not only are they letting drugs across, but all sorts of other contraband," says Mike Busby, a former Customs inspector at the Brownsville port.

We reported last month on the case of two Corpus Christi, Texas, Customs agents who claimed they found evidence of corruption in Customs while they were investigating a major drug ring. The two claimed that once they began to press for an internal investigation, they were harassed and threatened by their superiors. One of the agents was vindicated in a federal personnel grievance.

Additional documents we have seen echo the claims of those two agents.

In a September 1990 memo to the Inspector General's office of the Treasury Department, which oversees Customs, one employee complained that Brownsville border employees were getting cozy with the wrong people. The whistleblower referred to "the buildup of criminal associations and intermarriage between Customs personnel and organized drug runners," and said there was "gratuity taking on a large scale." The memo told of Customs officials "passing loads of cocaine and marijuana in return for large monetary payoffs."

Last April, in a report to Southwest Regional Customs Commissioner James C. Piatt, the same whistleblower documented some of the ties between Customs employees and drug smugglers, and said that some of the information was obtained from personal knowledge and "informants in Mexico."

In a sworn affidavit to the Customs office of internal affairs in McAllen, Texas, former inspector Busby said he also had seen Brownsville employees let contraband into the United States.

Another Customs agent in Texas told us that the situation is hampering the drug war. "We spend so much time covering for ourselves, we don't have time to fight any war on drugs. You can imagine how effective we are."

Although the Brownsville Port has seen some management changes in the past year, Busby said "many of the same gangs continue to work down there." Another former Customs agent told us the changes were "largely cosmetic."

George Flores became the chief Brownville Port inspector nearly a year ago after his predecessor was indicted, and then later acquitted, on charges of smuggling liquor and saddles across the border. Flores says the latest allegations about the Brownsville operation "sound far-fetched. We have a good group of people here and we're tired of being beat up with these accusations."

That indignation goes up the ranks. Regional Customs spokeswoman Donna De La Torre told us, "Based on the information we have been given, we have not been able to substantiate these allegations." She said the information was so general, "I would be surprised if they could substantiate them."

WILLIAM MURCHISON

Schools may gain freedom to inspire

Just before war broke out in the Persian Gulf, the U.S. Supreme Court came down with an attack of common sense. May the virus multiply and spread!

The court held, 5 to 3, that judicial supervision of court-ordered desegregation plans is not forever and always; that, yes, redemption is possible. A school district that complies in good faith with a desegregation order may be released in good faith.

Murchison

The decision concerned Oklahoma City's schools, but hundreds of other districts could be eligible for emancipation ... from the courts. Not necessarily from the comfortable shibboleths behind the busing decisions of the past 20 years. How long before we are liberated from the notion that public schools are the great social sausage grinder — no matter how the meat looks when it goes in, it all comes out the same?

This facile notion isn't unlike the idea behind segregation in education. No Jim Crow theorist ever said, we think blacks will learn more advanced algebra and Shakespeare in black schools than in white ones. Segregation was about race control, pure and simple.

Neither has busing much to do with education. Busing was — is — chiefly about racial balance: another form of social control.

Segregation and forced-busing have roots in good old American egalitarianism — nobody here but us interchangeable widgets. Segregation type-cast blacks as threats to the social order who had to be disconnected from white society. Forced busing makes race — again — the touchstone of effective (and constitutional) education.

We certainly weren't concerned with individual achievement — with elevating Tom and Mary and Sue to intellectual distinction. We just wanted mass achievement. We wanted everybody marching in lockstep.

And, yes, they're marching — right off the educational cliff. Whereas education used to be pretty good for whites and not so good for blacks, today it's sub-par — save in selected pockets — for everybody. Now there's equality for you — most people mediocre, comparatively few alert, attentive, or, heaven forbid, inspired.

Yet still we have the egalitarian itch. We can't seem to help it. We don't like to talk of legitimate distinctions among human beings — smart, smarter, smartest; dumb, dumber, dumbest. These are admittedly the extremes. Most students lie somewhere in between. These, too, we lump together — one unvariegated pudding.

The hour is late. We have to conquer this egalitarian fixation — this sausage grinder approach to education. Federal judges and, perforce, local school boards, still worry more about irrelevancies like classroom racial mix than about a teacher's skills or a student's motivation.

We may be getting away from this sublime pinheadedness. The Supreme Court's Oklahoma City decision suggests so. Likewise the burgeoning interest in school choice — that is, in letting parents enroll their children in whatever publicly supported school they think best suits Johnny's and Susie's individual needs.

Excelsior, excelsior! The public schools need not roll in egalitarian mediocrity like a pig in mud. Let us aspire again; let us challenge, provoke, and prod. Let us acknowledge that there's no absolute equality anywhere, no two people are just alike — and wouldn't it be a boring world if they were?

CHARLEY REESE

Arab-Americans as group deserve trust

Suppose, after Jonathan Pollard was convicted of espionage, the FBI had announced that it would be contacting American Jews around the country to seek their help in ferreting out other Jewish spies for Israel.

Reese

Well, Congress, the president, the Anti-Defamation League and everybody else would have been raising heck with the FBI, and I would have been right there raising heck, too. If you want a simple definition of bigotry it is leaping from the acts of one or more individuals to a belief about a whole racial or ethnic group. That's what prejudice is.

For that reason, Arab-Americans have a right to be incensed when the FBI announces its going to be contacting them for assistance in thwarting Iraqi terrorism — and to question them about their political beliefs.

Implied in that action is a question about their loyalty. Arab-Americans are as a group intensely loyal and patriotic Americans just as are Jews, Cuban-Americans, Puerto Ricans and every other immigrant group.

You are neither liberal nor tolerant if you are tolerant of some groups and bigoted about others. Morality, like liberty, is an indivisible thing. Arab-Americans immigrated to this country to escape people like Saddam Hussein. What happens overseas is not their fault and they have no control over it. Arab-Americans for years have served like others in the U.S. armed forces and are doing so now.

Iraq may have a few agents in the U.S. Practically every other foreign country in the world does, since ours are the most open and easily penetrated borders on the planet. But that has nothing to do with Arab-Americans.

Unfortunately, Arab-Americans get the fallout from stereotyping. For awhile, they made convenient villains for action-adventure stories in the movies, though recently Hollywood started leaning toward South Africans as villains. In writing fiction, you have a hero and he has to fight somebody. For awhile, Arabs — especially Palestinians — were elected by the scriptwriters.

In fact, however, of all the acts of international terrorism committed between 1968 and 1984, only about 7 percent were committed by Palestinians. As the authors of a textbook on terrorism put it, "For those who have become accustomed to equating terrorism with the Palestine Liberation Organization, this statistic is a shocker, but there is no reason to challenge it, as it comes from the respected Jaffee Center for Strategic Studies at Tel Aviv University."

Prejudice, of course, breeds like bacteria on ignorance and is often fertilized by propaganda. I don't know how many times I've heard people say Muslims believe they will go to paradise if they kill an infidel, which is a distortion of Islamic teachings.

Islam, you may be surprised to learn, teaches peace and tolerance. It enjoins war only in self-defense or in defense of the religion from physical attack. It is no different in that respect from the Christian teachings about a just war. It has the same prohibitions against murder as Christianity and Judaism.

We are a nation of people who came from somewhere else or whose ancestors came from somewhere else. Many people who come to this country leave family and friends behind and they retain an interest in their loved ones. Some of my Arab-American friends are worried about war because they have relatives where the bombs will be falling. Some of my Jewish friends are worried for the same reasons.

But concern for family or fond memories of a childhood home are not acts of disloyalty and it is absolutely outrageous that the FBI should imply that. With the burden of this war, we have enough to worry about without acting stupidly and ignorantly on the home front.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Speech Police need new material for patrol

Washington humorist Mark Russell was on one of those network morning news shows, and he was asked if he thought he could get away with humor based on the war with Iraq.

Grizzard

He said something like, "As long as I aim it at the enemy."

When he gave that answer, there was no war. The marshal (us) and the gunslinger (them) hadn't cleared leather yet. They were still standing in the empty street staring at one another.

But I thought the question was a good one.

You can't get away with very much anymore in a newspaper column, on stage, in a movie or on radio and television without fear you'll say or write something the Speech Police won't like.

The Speech Police are on constant guard against remarks — humorous or otherwise — they consider to fall into those odious categories such as sexism, racism, xenophobia (the fear of foreigners) and homophobia (the fear of turning on Donahue and hearing guys complain because they can't get a marriage license and marry one another).

The Speech Police is made up of do-gooders, minority leaders and the media.

They are the ones who want us to say "chairperson" instead of "chairman," and I'm still not sure if it's "black" or "Afro-American" now.

I once had a shortened version of "Japanese" which was popular in World War II thrown out of a column because, "it would be offensive to the Japanese community."

I argued, "But I haven't forgiven them for sneaking up on us at Pearl Harbor."

I was told the fact I would use the term "sneaky" showed my xenophobia and even racist tendencies.

As far as homophobia goes, I've made it a policy never to refer to any sexuality that isn't hetero ever again. It's the only sort of sexuality I'm vaguely familiar with anyway.

But what happens now that there is a war with Iraq? What if thousands of American soldiers die trying to run Saddam Hussein out of Kuwait?

Isn't it OK to hate and fear Saddam Hussein now that he has brutally paraded our captured pilots?

You've noticed Jane Fonda hasn't said a word in behalf of Hussein and Iraq. If Hanoi Jane isn't backing them, then it must be OK for us to hate them and fear them and demean them.

Can I call Saddam Hussein an "arrogant, egotistical, savage 'towel head,'" and sneak it past the Speech Police?

What if Hussein's soldiers attack Americans with chemical weapons and some of them die in an awful, painful death in the desert?

Can I call them "cowardly camel jockeys" and get that past the Speech Police? There are precedents.

We had a name for both the Japanese and the Germans in World War II, and they were freely used in the public domain.

We laughed at Italy's soldiers and their cowardice. My father used a "g" word in referring to the people he fought in Korea. The same term was a Vietnam favorite, too.

And can I make jokes about Saddam Hussein and his miserable country?

How about, "What do you get if you cross Saddam Hussein and a pig? Nothing. The pig would never agree to it."

And on top of that, does the Iraqi foreign minister, whose name sounds like a bowel disorder, wear one of those fake glasses, nose and mustache gags, or is he just naturally that ugly?

I'll be waiting to hear from the Speech Police.

Newlywed astronauts may be on same shuttle flight

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Astronauts Mark Lee and Jan Davis will become the first married couple to fly in space if NASA does not break up the new husband-and-wife shuttle team.

Lee and Davis were assigned 1½ years ago to a Spacelab scientific research mission scheduled for September 1992. They were married about three weeks ago.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration is reviewing the matter.

"We have never assigned a couple that is married to each other to the same crew," NASA spokeswoman Barbara Schwartz said Thursday. "It's just been kind of like an acknowledged policy.

"I don't know if anything is going to happen one way or another. It is a unique situation."

However, there are other astronaut couples.

There are Robert Gibson and M. Rhea Seddon, and William Fisher and Anna Fisher, although William Fisher resigned effective Thursday. Steven Hawley and Sally Ride, the first American woman in space, were married but divorced. Bonnie Dunbar is married to an astronaut in training, Ronald Sega.

Lee, 38, an Air Force lieutenant colonel, was selected as an astronaut in 1984 and made his first shuttle flight five years later. He is to serve as payload commander for the Spacelab mission aboard the new shuttle Endeavour.

It would be the first shuttle flight for Davis, 37, an engineer who became an astronaut 2½ years ago.

The newlyweds are turning down all interview requests because they want to keep a low profile, Schwartz said.

They have begun working on experiments for the mission, a joint venture between the United States and Japan.

The flight already has two other firsts: scheduled to be on board are Mamoru Mohri, the first Japanese to fly on the U.S. shuttle, and Mae Jemison, the first black woman to venture into space.

NASA's position is that each crew member should be an equal member interacting with all the others "and that would give couple crew members a special relationship," Schwartz said.

16 hurt in plane crash

BECKLEY, W.Va. (AP) — A twin-engine commuter airplane skidded about 4,000 feet in a crash landing, starting a fire in the plane's cabin. No one was killed, but at least 16 of the 19 people on board were injured, officials said.

Luggage was strewn hundreds of yards along the runway as USAir Flight 4743, en route from Charlotte, N.C., crashed late Wednesday at Raleigh County Memorial Airport, officials said.

"We were coming in over the runway and it just went down," said passenger Blair Frier. "It was like the plane hit an air pocket or something."

Federal Aviation Administration officials began Thursday to investigate the crash of the turboprop Jetstream 31 aircraft, said Mike Holcomb, a spokesman for CCAIR, which operates USAir's commuter flights out of Charlotte.

A National Transportation Safety Board investigator also was en route, said airport manager Jerry Fink.

The plane caught fire after crashing, but the fire was immediately put out, Fink said. The wings and propeller buckled and the plane's tail broke loose from the fuselage, he said.

Iraqi ambassador staying in Vienna with 'sick' wife

Hearst News Service

■ More gulf war news/ 1D

WASHINGTON — Mohammed Mashat, Iraq's ambassador to the United States, sought and received permission from Austria to remain indefinitely in Vienna, fueling speculation here that he has no intention of returning to Iraq.

Senior U.S. and Austrian officials here confirmed Thursday that Mashat, who on Jan. 23 was granted a temporary one-week visa to remain in Vienna, now has been given an "extended" visa, which allows him to remain as long as he chooses in the Austrian capital.

U.S. officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Mashat told Austrian authorities he wanted to stay in Vienna because his wife had taken ill.

But Friedrich Hoess, Austria's ambassador to the United States, said Mashat had approached his embassy here in mid-January requesting a visa to stay in Vienna instead of continuing through on a flight from New York to Amman and Baghdad.

Mashat took the Royal Jordanian flight, which left New York on the evening of Jan. 22. The plane made a one-hour stopover in Vienna before continuing to the Middle East. A passenger intending to continue on the flight would not have needed an Austrian visa.

Hoess said Mashat "originally wanted to stay in Vienna for two days or so. Then he extended it (his stay) for a week."

A high-ranking Arab envoy here said that he believed Mashat would soon seek political asylum in either Austria or Switzerland. The envoy, who also asked not to be identified, said he believes Iraqi President Saddam Hussein had become suspicious about his American envoy.

The Arab diplomat said an Iraqi Embassy colleague here had told him that Mashat, while an outspoken champion of Saddam Hussein on countless television programs, was privately critical of his nation's policies.

"If this diplomat was aware of it, Saddam also must have been," the envoy said.

He also recalled that Mashat resented an earlier order from Hussein forcing him to divorce his first wife, an American, if he wanted to remain Iraq's ambassador here. Mashat divorced the American and married his current wife Summer, an Iraqi, 16 months ago.

The U.S. officials said they did not know the nature of Mrs. Mashat's illness or whether Mashat, who served for 18 months in Washington, intended to return to Baghdad.

Asked about a report that he had already approached the Swiss Embassy in Vienna seeking political asylum, the officials said they did not know.

But a senior intelligence source commented, "It is quite possible. Our sense is he clearly doesn't want to go home. There's already a demonstrable hesitation (to return to Baghdad) being shown here."

Of the report that Mashat's wife was ill, the source said: "No one believes that. It is our understanding that he's been ordered back to Baghdad by Saturday. A lot of people have stayed in Vienna for extended periods depending on how 'ill' their spouses are.

"Let me put it this way. I don't think that (his wife's illness) will bode well for him."

Mashat has three children by his first wife, Mary. His current wife is said to be a distant relative of Saddam Hussein. "It was an arranged marriage," the Arab envoy said.

Americans back more control on war reporting

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most Americans believe the military should increase its control over reporting of the Persian Gulf war, according to a new poll.

The Times Mirror Center for The People & The Press asked people whether they thought the military should exert more control over how news groups report about the conflict.

Fifty-seven percent said yes, 34 percent said the decisions should be left to the news organizations and 9 percent said they didn't know.

The poll, released Wednesday, was conducted Jan. 25-27 by telephone among 924 adults. Princeton Survey Research Associates, which directed the poll, said it was subject to a sampling error of plus or minus 4 percentage points.

Asked whether they believed the military was hiding bad news, 78 percent said they did not. Similarly, 72 percent believed news organizations were trying to give an objective picture of the conflict. Sixty-one percent said the coverage has been accurate for the most part.

Sixty-four percent of the women said the war depressed them, compared with 33 percent of men. Among women, 21 percent said they had trouble sleeping because of the war. Among men, it was 4 percent.

By a margin of 75 percent to 7 percent, the respondents thought television reporters were digging harder to get the news than newspaper reporters.

Cable News Network was named by 61 percent as the network doing the best job of covering the war, compared with 12 percent for ABC and 7 percent each for CBS and NBC.

Express service to Denver 'looks good'

By Brian Pearson

Prospects for a commuter airline route between Midland and Denver are highly favorable, a spokesman for the New Mexico-based Mesa Airlines said Thursday.

Mesa's turboprop aircraft could be toting passengers to and from Denver as early as June, said John Ornstein, vice president of planning for the airline.

"From our end we're going to do something in West Texas," Ornstein said. "We have not reached a final conclusion at this point, but things are moving in the right direction."

Mesa's venture into Midland would be the payoff for extensive negotiations between city officials and the airline since last November.

Midland Mayor Carroll Thomas and Odessa Mayor Lorraine Bonner joined forces about three months ago to try to lure Mesa and other airlines to crank up operations at Midland International Airport.

"We're still into the negotiations and we're still walking it through," said Marcy Blauvelt, Midland International administration operations supervisor. "It still sounds positive. It still looks good."

Mesa officials visited the airport about two weeks ago to examine the facilities and appeared to like what they saw, Ms. Blauvelt said.

She said a decision is expected from them within four weeks.

Ornstein said that based on studies of passenger interest, a route between Midland and Denver would be justified. "Overall, I think we're impressed," he said.

An airport poll conducted through the Midland Reporter-Telegram in early 1990 showed that 92 percent of the 380 respondents want non-stop service to Denver. They indicated that they would make a combined 1,816 round trips annually.

American and America West airlines offer indirect Denver flights through Dallas and Phoenix, respectively.

Ornstein said it has not been determined whether a Denver-Midland route would be non-stop. The aircraft may stop in Amarillo to "pick up a few more passengers," he said.

"It's still under review," he said. "It may be better served if we do that, but we would probably do it non-stop at first to see how it works."

Last December, city officials said Mesa indicated that service may start as early as April 15.

But Ornstein said the airline is still waiting to get a new airplane, which might not be ready for service until June.

Mesa would use an Embraer 120 Brasilia turboprop which could carry 30 passengers along with a three-member crew of the pilot, co-pilot and stewardess. The service would operate under the name United Express.

Flights between here and Denver would take a little more than two hours, compared with the more than four hours it takes on America and America West indirect flights.

Ms. Blauvelt said local business people, especially those in the oil industry, would benefit the most from a direct route between here to Denver.

City officials said Mesa might make as many as two round trips

■ A five-month-old drug-alcohol detoxification center offers area residents treatment options.

By Erin Blair

ODESSA — Dennis realized that alcohol was poisoning his body and ruining his mind but he didn't have the financial resources to enter a treatment program.

"I came off the streets in Midland," he said. "I was degenerate, indigent, at the lowest point in my life for three years. Then I was referred to the Turning Point by someone who knew about it."

Dennis, who uses only his first name as part of Alcoholics Anonymous' code of anonymity, has been a resident of Turning Point, the Permian Basin Community Centers for Mental Health and Mental Retardation's detoxification center in Odessa, for 29 days.

He said it has changed his life.

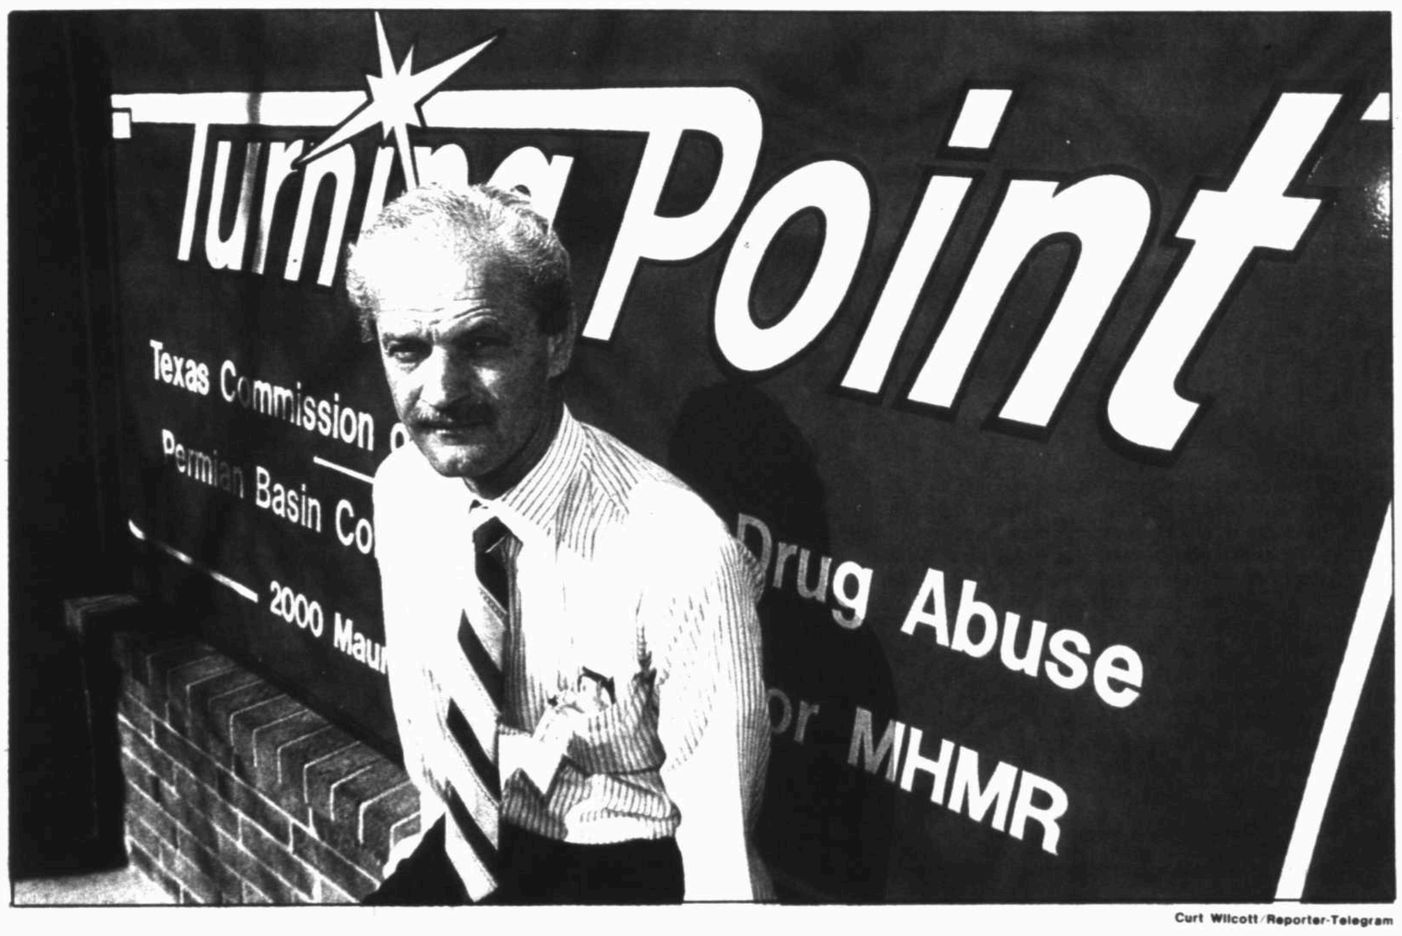

"I've been giving a good hard, cold look at myself since I've been here," he said. "I had no self-esteem or self-worth — that's something alcohol seems to do to you. All I had was self-pity. This program showed me how negative my attitude and actions were."

"Alcoholism is a feelings disease — you don't want to remember the hurt and pain, but when you stop drinking all those feelings and emotions and stress come back. This place teaches you coping skills to deal with them."

Dennis Wilson, Turning Point's program coordinator, said the five month-old facility exists to serve people like Dennis.

"Our clients are typically 30 to 40 years old and use alcohol and other drugs, with cocaine and heroin the most prevalent ones. Most of them are males — about 85 percent of them right now," Wilson said.

Clients pay for their treatment on a sliding scale based on their last year's income. The most they'll pay per day is $75, compared with up to $500 for private treatment facilities, but those with no money are not turned away, Wilson said.

Curt Wilcott / Reporter-Telegram

Dennis Wilson is the program coordinator for Turning Point, the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation's new non-medical drug detoxification program in Odessa. It serves Midland, Ector and Pecos counties.

Turning Point
■ What: Detoxification center operated by Permian Basin Community Centers for Mental Health and Mental Retardation
■ Where: Odessa, at West County and Maurice roads

The program is funded by the Texas Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse.

Most clients are referred by Alcoholics Anonymous groups, Mental Health and Mental Retardation community programs, their families or probation or parole officers. The program serves Midland, Ector and Pecos counties and can house up to 46 clients.

When they enter Turning Point, most clients go "cold turkey" in the non-medical detox program for three to 14 days.

"There's a stigma attached to detox — they say you can tell a program's there because you can smell the restroom," Wilson said.

"We're not like that. We don't have a bunch of sick people lying around puking and gagging.

"We keep them very busy with chores like cleaning the floors and kitchen. They get up at 6 a.m. and go to bed at 10 p.m."

Wilson said the facility's regimen is as theraputic for the clients as the counseling is.

"When an addict's using (drugs), he has no discipline in his life at all, so we hit them with the schedule and they rebel and kick and fuss a lot, but deep down inside, they really want someone to put some

Bunton rules to overturn jury's finding

By David Morris
Staff Writer

A federal judge signed an order Thursday dismissing former Rankin store-owner Mary Turner's claims against Upton County District Attorney J.W. Johnson Jr., court records show.

Ms. Turner sued Johnson, Upton County, former Upton County Sheriff Glenn Willeford and drug informant Walter Woolf for allegedly conspiring to convict her on false drug charges.

In a civil trial earlier this month, a jury ordered Johnson to pay $1.5 million in damages for his supposed part in the conspiracy.

But Judge Lucius D. Bunton, who presided over the trial in U.S. District Court, reversed the jury's decision in an order dated Jan. 31.

"There is no evidence that defendant Johnson entered into or participated in a conspiracy to deprive plaintiff of civil rights," Bunton said in the ruling.

The order goes on to say that "all claims stated against defendant Johnson...are dismissed with prejudice and all relief, both legal and equitable, sought by the plaintiff...is hereby denied."

However, Ms. Turner's claims against Upton County, Willeford and Woolf still stand. Jurors awarded her $500,000 in damages from the county, $1.5 million from Willeford and $100,000 from Woolf.

Woolf, reportedly serving a term of probation near Houston, did not attend the trial. Attorneys for Willeford and the county have vowed to appeal the jury's decision and have requested a new trial.

Johnson could not be reached for comment Thursday afternoon. However, his attorney, R.C. "Eric" Augesen of Odessa, said Judge Bunton made the right decision.

"I think we're seeing the other side of the coin here," Augesen said. "I think that J.W. went

MARC facility will be a first

By Michael Kashgarian

Twenty years ago, senior citizens with mental retardation were shuffled away oftentimes to large, impersonal mental-health institutions.

That situation is improving, however.

At a groundbreaking ceremony Thursday, the Midland Association for Retarded Citizens (MARC) announced the building of a six-bed facility where seniors with mental retardation will reside as part of the community.

Dale Stice, president of MARC's board of directors, described the facility as being the most normal, integrated setting possible.

'This is the first six-bed facility for senior citizens with mental retardation in Texas.'

— Dale Stice, president Midland Association for Retarded Citizens board of directors

"It's to allow these people to move into the community they live in. Would you rather live in a state school with 600 people or in a community with other people?" Stice said.

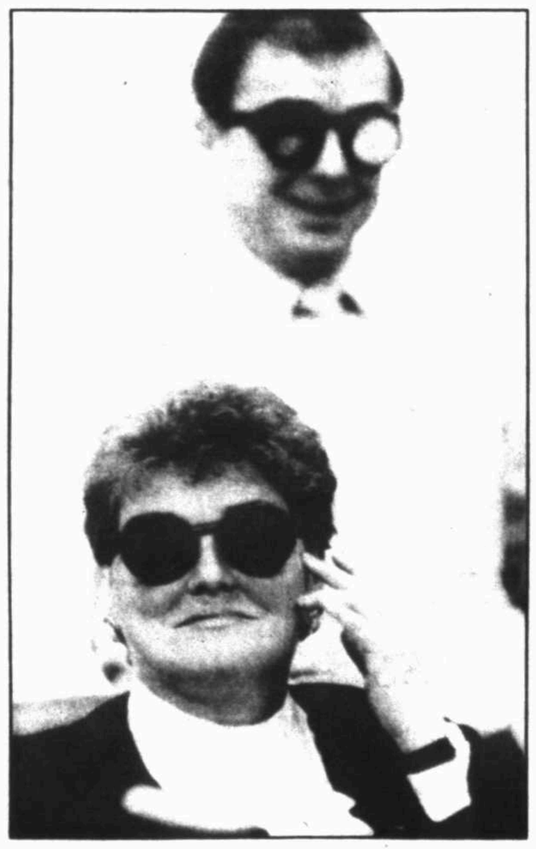

"The facility will blend into the neighborhood," Stice added.

The facility is under construction at Camarie Avenue and Garfield Street and the style will be similar to other homes in the area.

The home setting for the seniors signifies a change in traditional services across the country, and MARC is in the forefront of such advances.

Insurance panel puts off ruling on premiums

By John Powers
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — In a surprise move Thursday, an insurance industry attorney asked state regulators to delay a decision on automobile insurance rates until the state can verify the accuracy of rate-making data the industry provides.

The State Insurance Board accepted the offer of Richard S. Geiger, general counsel for the Texas Automobile Insurance Service Office, to send staff members to the industry's statistical service headquarters in New York and Illinois.

The board recessed hearings on auto rates until March 14, but it will continue to hear testimony on rates for commercial vehicles Feb. 14.

Gov. Ann Richards at a Jan. 16 hearing asked the board to put off a decision until it could audit the insurance industry statistics.

Ms. Richards said Thursday in a prepared statement she was pleased the board was following her suggestion, but that she was concerned the audit might be "superficial and rushed," so she was sending state ombudsman Annette LoVoi to accompany the audit team.

The governor, who has called current requests for rate increases "outrageous," said proper data are the foundation of rate making, and "rate payers should not be asked to foot the bill for insurance lobbyists, exorbitant advertising and losses due to poor investments."

The auto insurance industry is asking for a statewide average rate increase of 29.1 percent. The state's Office of Consumer Protection is recommending an 11.4 percent premium hike, and the State

Midland-Odessa join forces for U.S. forces

Staff Report

Midlanders will be able to show their support of the troops in Operation Desert Storm through a giant card exclaiming, "Midland, Texas — To our men and women of Desert Shield: We are with you 100 percent."

So will Odessans.

Two cards — both about two by four feet in size — will be available in each city for the next two weeks for "anyone and everyone to sign."

Beginning at noon today the cards will be accessible to the public at two Sleep Rest stores: the Midland card at 4400 Midland Drive and the Odessa card at 2727 Andrews Highway in Odessa.

"This is not politically oriented or endorsing the war. It is to show we're behind our troops 100 percent," said Glen Berry, general manager for Sleep Rest Corp.

"It will be mailed to the Desert Storm armed forces," Berry said.

In addition to the public signatures, an official signing will take place 10 a.m. today at the Odessa store. Representatives from both cities' Chamber of Commerce, the VFW, the American Legion, Confederate Air Force, and Vietnam Veterans are expected to be at the signing.

Everyone who signs the card will be given a free American flag decal, Berry said.

The cards were donated by Jack Brady of Permian Signs.

through a lot of grief for something he had no control over, something that was not his fault, and that's basically what Mary Turner went through."

Augesen added that he didn't doubt Ms. Turner was a victim of injustice.

"We had an unfortunate set of circumstances. There wasn't anyone who would say that this woman hadn't been done wrong. The question is, really, by whom?"

John E. Gunter, Ms. Turner's attorney, said he wasn't sure that Bunton's decision was final and said he would request a hearing on the matter next week.

"I contend that he (Bunton) should go by what the jury said," said Gunter, who added that he may appeal the judge's decision if hearing results are unsatisfactory.

Ms. Turner, now a legal assistant working in Midland, declined to comment on Bunton's ruling.

In her lawsuit, filed in 1989, Ms. Turner claimed that Willeford paid Woolf $500 in August 1985 to plant about a gram of methamphetamine in her Rankin convenience store, Turner One Stop.

Jurors evidently agreed with the claim, and also held Johnson liable for allegedly conspiring with Willeford and Woolf to convict Ms. Turner on drug charges stemming from the planting scheme.

However, Johnson dropped the charges against Ms. Turner during her 1987 trial in 112th District Court in Rankin.

"J.W. didn't do anything in the case except try the case," Augesen said. "And he dismissed the case. That's the only connection there was to J.W. Johnson."

structure and responsibility in their lives," he said.

Turning Point's program is based on the 12-Step program used by Alcoholics Anonymous.

"It's been working for over 50 years and nothing else has been as successful," Wilson said.

It is named for a passage in the AA "Big Book": "We stood at the turning point."

Most of its counselors are in recovery from substance abuse themselves. Wilson said he has been sober for 6½ years.

After spending 45 days in the residential treatment program, during which time clients are taken to AA meetings in their home towns, they graduate and return to their families or enter an MHMR halfway house, such as Johnson Center in Midland.

"We've graduated six fellows so far and of those six, five have completed a 90-day halfway house program," Wilson said.

"We encourage them to continue to attend AA meetings but they have to leave here and face the fear of the unknown because it is part of the growth process," he said.

"We tell them this is like kindergarten and when they leave it's the real test. We tell them they'll be in recovery one day at a time for the rest of their lives."

Wayne, another Turning Point resident, described the program as "family-style."

"We can tell people we've never known before things we can't tell to our own families," he said.

"We work as a wolf pack," Dennis said. "We're only as strong as each other, but through understanding, acceptance, honesty, care and love instilled through the (AA) steps, something beautiful happens."

The Permian Basin Community Centers for Mental Health and Mental Retardation and the Texas Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse will host an open house at Turning Point today at 4:30 p.m.

The facility is located at the corner of Maurice and West County roads in Odessa. For more information, call 337-0211.

MARC officials said they expect the home should be ready in about two months.

Funds to maintain the licensed facility will come from residents' benefits provided by the state and federal government.

Construction of the MARC facility was made possible by private contributions from the Abell-Hanger Foundation, Meadows Foundation, Mabee Foundation, O'Shaughnessy Foundation, Permian Basin Area Foundation, the Davidson Family Charitable Trust, and other contributors.

Cost to open the home to residents will be $218,000.

Board of Insurance's staff has recommended a 23.3 percent increase.

Individual rates would vary depending on the amount and type of insurance purchased, type of car, driver's record and where the driver lives.

Not all companies would need to raise their rates that much, and individual firms can come before the board to ask permission to set lower rates.

In other action, Richards appointed Austin attorney and consumer advocate Claire Korioth to the insurance board to succeed Jo Ann Howard of Austin, whose term expired Thursday.

Woman faces 5 charges of robbery, theft

Staff Report

ODESSA — An Odessa woman an charged with one of a series of five recent aggravated robberies on Tuesday was served with warrants for the remaining four on Thursday, police officials said.

Kim L. Shirel, 23, was arrested Tuesday for shoplifting at the Thriftway in the 700 block of Grant Avenue and a subsequent investigation led to her being charged with the Jan. 25 robbery of a 7-Eleven store.

She remained in Ector County jail Thursday on a $75,500 bond for three counts of aggravated robbery and one count of theft, jail officials said.

A Crime Stoppers tip and Joe Commander with the Ector County District Attorney's Office aided the Odessa police detectives in an investigation that led to Ms. Shirel being charged in the robberies.

Bullock foresees 'large' state tax

■ With speculation flying as to the size of a state income tax, Gov. Ann Richards on Thursday signs into law a slimmed-down state budget.

AUSTIN (AP) — Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock predicted a "rather large" tax increase will be required to meet the state's needs over the next two years, while Gov. Ann Richards refused to speculate on the matter Thursday.

"I have no idea, and I'm not going to pre-guess it," Richards said when asked if the state can get by without a tax increase.

House Speaker Gib Lewis called discussion of a tax increase premature.

Bullock said, "I don't see any way around it ... The possibility of not having a tax bill is very, very remote if Texas is going to move ahead in the future."

That's despite a bill passed by the Legislature and signed by Richards Thursday to carve $139.5 million from state spending and to audit state agencies to see if more money can be saved.

It was the first bill passed this session, and the first signed by the new governor.

The state faces a projected budget shortfall of $4.6 billion through fiscal year 1993.

There is an estimated deficit this fiscal year of about $265 million, mostly in welfare services, that the budget-cutting bill will help cover.

The rest of the immediate deficit could be made up through funds expected to be left in state coffers when the current fiscal year ends Aug. 31, lawmakers said.

The bill includes about a 1 percent budget cut for state agencies, with some exceptions, and the transfer of unspent funds from several accounts. It replaces a previous proposal to freeze state spending.

Richards said the bill should assure Texans that "we have done everything that we know to do to make sure that the taxpayers are getting their money's worth."

Before a tax increase is considered, Richards said she would like to see the audits proceed, a state lottery pass and a committee set up to recommend tax changes, particularly in the state franchise tax.

A Texas Supreme Court order to provide more equitable funding to poor school districts makes the question of a tax increase "dicier and more difficult," she said.

Bullock also cited the court order, along with state welfare needs that could demand another $1 billion and an estimate that 10,000 more prison beds are required.

He said his staff is looking at tax options, but he wouldn't speculate on how large a tax increase might be needed.

"It's as big as the House and Senate want to make it, and it's as big as the needs of Texas are," Bullock said.

Judging from current needs, he said, "I would imagine it'll be a rather large one."

Speaker Lewis, who has predicted a 50-50 chance for a tax increase, said: "It's going to be very difficult for us to make ends meet."

A G.I. Family's Prayer

Hour of Power seen each week
Sunday 7 a.m. KTPX-9
Saturday 8 p.m. KMLM-42

Hear, Lord, my prayer for my G.I., so eager to live — too young to die.
Beneath an alien blistering sun,
he faces a dangerous enemy gun.
The storm clouds gather, the horror of war,
my soldier stands bravely guarding the door.
Defending justice, peace, and freedom,
to his Commander-in-Chief give Holy wisdom.
From war's alarms, bring swift release.
Hasten the day of honorable peace.
On land and sand and sea and air,
I back my soldier with this prayer:
"No matter how far he's forced to roam,
just bring, I pray, my G.I. home."
Amen

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 1, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Getting a business back on track will give you both special pleasure and a larger income. Changes in the work environment in May will accrue to your benefit. Your associates become more cooperative. The best time to travel is early fall, after a long-term project is finally finished. Family members will develop a deeper sense of what they mean to each other in December. Plan a sentimental journey!

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor Sherman Hemsley, Princess Stephanie of Monaco, actor Clark Gable, football's Dexter Manley.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Be prepared to deal with obstacles or intricate details. A change in office personnel puts you in line for a promotion. Follow your game plan, displaying your talents to best advantage.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Differences of opinion with your coworkers could lead to a stressful situation. Diplomacy helps you avoid a scene. Watch the stock market carefully but leave investing to the experts.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Putting more effort into your work will be royally rewarded. Avoid all forms of financial speculation. Those in love look forward to announcing an important date. Share good news with relatives.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Travel is highly recommended now. Keep expenses in check and save receipts. Self-improvement projects will boost your confidence. Romance intensifies. Real estate is still an excellent investment.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Distant affairs become more profitable. A chance encounter with a member of the opposite sex could lead to happy romance. Co-workers could be testy — give them space.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Give others the benefit of the doubt, but keep a tight hold on your purse strings. Your powers of concentration are excellent. Ask important questions of experts. A new approach may be necessary.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): The spotlight is on your relationship with someone who makes you feel comfortable. A member of the opposite sex offers constructive advice — follow it to the letter.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Impulsive acts could lead to embarrassment. Consult a lawyer regarding contracts. An energetic, forceful person helps you put your affairs in order. Go slow in romance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Refuse to be pushed into making a promise. Unexpected developments involving a relative or neighbor could affect your business dealings. Keep your professional and personal affairs separate.

The secret of winning wars, said a Northern general during the Civil War, is to "git thar fustest with the mostest." Chess players have long known that to squander a tempo could mean the loss of a game. The same can be true in bridge if you surrender the lead to the enemy at the the wrong moment.

As is often the case, South let the 100 honors overrule judgment. Having already described a good six-card suit by jumping to three hearts, there was no reason, with an essentially balanced hand, to remove three no trump to four hearts. Played by North, three no trump would have required East-West to conduct a letter-perfect defense to lay the contract low.

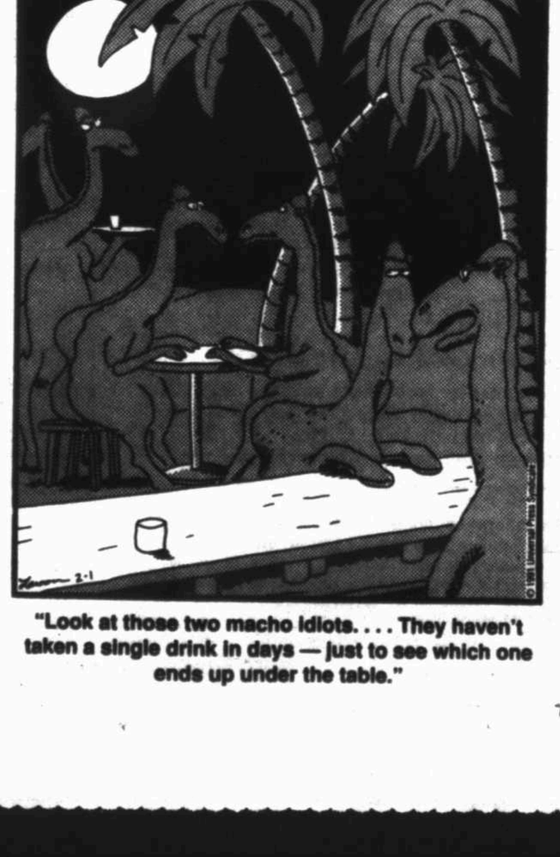

Declarer won the first trick in dummy and immediately finessed the jack of hearts—the correct technical play if you consider the trump holding in isolation. West won and continued with a low diamond. East took the queen and the club shift was not difficult to find. Eventually the defenders ended up with one trick in each suit—just enough to fulfill their mission.

Declarer's miscue was in taking the heart finesse. At that point, declarer was a tempo ahead and South should have maintained the timing by spurning the finesse in favor of cashing the ace and king of trumps. When the queen does not fall, declarer must abandon trumps and go about setting up a long spade.

The defenders can take the ace of spades whenever they like and score a diamond trick, but they won't get a club as the cards lie. Declarer can win the ace of clubs and take a club discard on the long spade as West ruffs. For this line to succeed, declarer needs either to drop a singleton or doubleton queen of hearts, or to find a 3-3 spade break or the defender with the master trump to hold four or more spades as well. Without delving into the percentages, that feels to be superior to a straight finesse.

Farmers support Willie as lawyer buys house

AUSTIN — Singer Willie Nelson may be able to keep his Hill Country house and ranch thanks to a group of farmers who say they know how it feels to lose their homes.

Nelson

Lawyer John Arens of Fayetteville, Ark., who bought Nelson's house and 44-acre Dripping Springs ranch at an Internal Revenue Service auction this week, said he plans to give the place back to Nelson, a founder of the Farm Aid movement.

"When you represent broke farmers, you don't have excess dollars," said Arens, whose firm represents farmers facing foreclosure. "But I just determined that I had to make it happen, if it meant selling my home."

Nelson's property in several states was seized by the IRS last November to help pay off the $16.7 million he owes in back taxes and penalties.

Arens was able to buy the Dripping Springs ranch for the minimum required bid of $203,840 after about 30 farmers from around the country came to the auction to discourage others from bidding.

Most were members of the American Agriculture Movement, who came from as far away as South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri and Arkansas, said David Senter, executive director of the group.

"He's just given so much to rural America til I felt it was very important that some friends stand up for Willie while's he's in this difficulty with the IRS," Senter said.

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. — Mayor Sonny Bono says the city must develop first-rate golf resorts to save its sagging tourist industry.

During his State of the City address, the former pop star said vacationers want to tee up within easy walking distance of their hotels.

Bono

"Our options for tourists now are to go shopping and buy some T-shirts. That's just not enough," Bono told about 150 people during a Wednesday morning breakfast gathering sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce.

Bono, whose duets with former wife Cher topped pop music charts in the 1960s, has been mayor since 1988.

He said five major resort complexes with golf courses are in various stages of planning. "If all that happens, stand back because Palm Springs will be in a leadership position," he said.

Bono, who owns an Italian restaurant, has a personal stake in luring tourists away from other desert cities.

"Last month, I probably had the worst month I've ever had as a merchant," he said.

BREWSTER, N.Y. — Diane von Furstenburg was clocked driving her 1991 Jaguar 77 mph in a 55 mph zone, and when police checked the fashion designer's license they found it had been suspended nine years ago.

As a result, the 44-year-old von Furstenburg of New Milford, Conn., has a date in Putnam County court next week to answer charges of speeding and unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle.

State Police Trooper Jennifer Lindner, who arrested von Furstenburg on Monday, described her as "very cordial and pleasant."

The Belgian-born designer even signed autographs at the barracks while getting together $60 for bail, Lindner said.

MARQUETTE, Mich. — Timothy Leary, who pioneered the use of psychedelic drugs in the 1960s, took on the former director of the federal Drug Enforcement Administration for a college audience.

Leary, 70, drew the more raucous applause Tuesday night when he squared off against Peter Bensinger at Northern Michigan University.

Bensinger recited statistics showing the adverse effects of drug use while Leary appealed to the overflow crowd's emotions.

"I invite people to be rowdy, to think for themselves," Leary said. "The same folks, those right-wing, fundamental kooks, that brought you the government's war on drugs now brings you the war on oil."

"Drug abuse continues to be a major, critical problem for the productivity and vital health of this country," said Bensinger, who ran the DEA under presidents Ford, Carter and Reagan.

"Who are they to tell me what to do with my body?" countered Leary.

Drug abuse in the work force drains U.S. industry of $100 billion a year, said Bensinger, who since 1981 has headed a consulting firm.

Leary acknowledged that not everyone can safely use psychedelic drugs. But he said: "As a dissident philosopher, it is my job to encourage and to emphasize the individual's right to think for themselves and to question authority."

DETROIT — Professional golfer Lee Trevino has switched from Toyota to Cadillac, not necessarily to drive, but to pitch.

Trevino, a member of the Senior Professional Golf Association Tour, had been a spokesman for Toyota Motor Corp. for six years. His contract with the Japanese automaker expired Dec. 31.

FAMILY MATTERS

Friend baffled by co-worker's fear of job promotion

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: One of the women who I work with really needs help and nothing that I have tried has done any good. My friend is a very hard worker. She just does everything perfectly and on time. She has done so well that a new position is coming open and we all think that she will get it. The problem is that as soon as we started telling her that we thought that she would get the promotion, she get depressed.

May

We had lunch yesterday and she told me that she was looking for another job! When I pushed her to tell me why she wanted another job with this promotion staring her in the face, tears started running down her face in the restaurant. I didn't say anything else until we got into the car and she finally told me that she was afraid that she might get the promotion. She said that all her life she had been afraid that her bosses would know that she didn't do as good of work as it looked like she did.

I told her that was ridiculous, that she did better work than anyone there. We talked for a long time, but I know that I never convinced her. Can you tell me anything that I can do to help her? I am afraid that she will quit and just go somewhere else and be unhappy. We all really like her at the office and don't want to lose her as a co-worker and as a friend. BAFFLED

DEAR BAFFLED: Without more background, I can't give you a detailed answer but I can share some general ideas with you.

Adults who were raised by critical or non-approving parents (or parent) often spend their lives: (a) seeking the approval of others, and (b) afraid if other people really knew them, they'd know how dumb (bad, stupid, etc.) they really were.

These people often work very hard and tend to be perfectionists out of fear of failure or disapproval. While they make good employees up to a point, usually a time comes when they can become a problem. If their fears get the best of them, they often seek another job or a transfer, only to repeat the pattern again. If they stay, they may become tyrants, projecting their unfounded fears on their employees and co-workers.

Talk to your friend about the sources of her fear. Help her get in touch with feelings. She may find Robert Ackerman's book, "Perfect Daughters," to be of help in this process. We do not have to continue following the rules of the past.

DEAR FAMILY: In a recent column you said something about journaling as a tool you used to help yourself. Would you send me a copy of what you use? I am a faithful reader and truly do enjoy your column. FAITHFUL

DEAR FAITHFUL: Thank you for your kind letter. Several people have written requesting the process that I use to bring out feelings through journaling, so I'd like to share this process with them.

I believe journaling offers us a chance to release the feelings that are locked within us. Although it is only one tool for releasing feelings, it can be powerful and private. Here are some suggestions:

- Get a spiral notebook that is for your eyes only. I use the smaller spiral notebook because it is easier to carry when the situation warrants it.
- Keep the notebook in a safe place. Tell your spouse (and family if applicable) that he or she is not to ever read the notebook because it contains your private feelings.
- Try to write in your journal daily, because even if nothing happened that day we need to know that we do have good days.
- Do not edit your writings, just write. Do not permit your conscious mind to be concerned about spelling or sentence structure. It is just free-form writing.
- When I am stuck or have some feelings for a specific person (living or dead) I write a letter to that person. These letters are never sent and remain in the notebook.
- If you get upset while you are writing, keep writing. Let the feelings out — give them a voice!

Jim May is the director of the Family Wellness Center.

DEAR ABBY

Women's best security is learning marketable skill

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a professional counselor at a large, urban community college. I am greatly disturbed by the number of women with few marketable skills whose husbands have left them after several years of marriage.

Van Buren

Forgetting the moral issues involved, almost every woman has told me that either she was discouraged by her husband from obtaining meaningful employment, or she believed that the marriage would last forever and she would be well taken care of. In any event, few were prepared for more than a minimum-wage job that wouldn't even pay for child care.

I emphasize this when talking to female students, but I might as well be talking to a brick wall. Abby, please encourage your readers, especially the young females, to realize that their marriage has a 50-50 chance of breaking up, and that they should complete their educations BEFORE they have children so if their marriages fail, they can at least support themselves in a decent fashion. — FRED EMERLING, Ph.D., FRESNO CITY COLLEGE, FRESNO, CALIF.

DEAR DR. EMERLING: I have been harping on that theme for as long as I have been giving advice.

I repeat: Young women — LEARN A SKILL, so you will never have to ask your husband, your father, your boyfriend or your government to take care of you.

DEAR ABBY: I just had a minor argument with my brother. Several weeks ago, I lost my wallet. It contained the usual contents — credit cards, Social Security card, driver's license, I.D., etc., and $20 in bills.

Today, the wallet was mailed back to me. It contained everything but the $20. Believe me, I was thankful and satisfied, as it would have been very inconvenient to replace all of the cards.

My brother thought the person who returned it was dishonest to have kept the $20. I say just having it returned to me was well worth the $20. What do you say? — GRATEFUL IN PHOENIX

DEAR GRATEFUL: I'm with you. However, the person who returned the wallet may not have been the first person who found it. It's possible that another party found the wallet first, removed the $20 and discarded it. Then some Good Samaritan picked it up and sent it to you.

DEAR ABBY: Your suggestion to "Ruth" to take her 3-year-old, beautiful, bright, friendly and loud-talking daughter to an audiologist was good advice and brought forth a chuckle as well as a memory.

As a concerned father, I took my beautiful, bright, friendly 3-year-old to a hearing specialist who, after testing her, looked me in the eye and said, "You've just got a LOUD kid!"

Nineteen years later, my daughter, a Wellesley graduate, remains beautiful, bright, friendly — and loud! - HER DADDY IN TUCSON

Women should plan for retirement

By Terry Lee Goodrich
N.Y. Times News Service

They wanted to call the book "Beating the Bag Lady Blues," but their publisher nixed that idea.

"Too strong for some parts of the country," explains financial planner Judith Martindale, 43, co-author of a book on retirement planning for women.

So it is that the book wound up with the more circumspect — and lengthier — title "Creating Your Own Future: A Woman's Guide to Retirement Planning."

The revised title may be gentler, but the 244-page book ($14.95 in paperback, Sourcebooks Trade) nevertheless makes it clear that retirement can be very stark for women — bag ladies or not.

The simple and unpleasant reality is that women generally live longer than men and have to do so on less money.

Consider:

■ The average age at which a woman is widowed is 56, and married women have an 85-percent chance of facing their later years without a mate.

■ Seventy percent of the older poor are women.

■ Seventy-five percent of all nursing home residents age 65 and older are women. The average annual cost of nursing home care is $25,000, while the median income of women over 60 (including Social Security and pension) is $6,300.

SURE, RETIREMENT planning is important for everyone, but these statistics from the Census Bureau and the American Association of Retired Persons show it's especially needed for women of all ages, say Martindale and co-author Mary Moses, a California educator.

Women generally have shorter work lives — and fewer years to contribute to a retirement plan — because of time out for child-rearing. They usually earn less than men, so they have less from which to draw for a retirement fund.

And women are more likely than men to work for smaller companies that don't have pension plans, Martindale said, speaking by phone from San Luis Obispo, Calif., where she hosts a weekly financial segment on the CBS/KCOY-TV evening news.

Grim statistics, it's true, but Martindale and Moses caution women against a hopeless, "poor little me" attitude.

They say that in interviewing dozens of women for the book, a frequent response to the process of financial planning is, "I have so little, why bother?"

Said Martindale: "No matter how small the amount saved, a regular savings plan is essential to securing a woman's future.

"I think somewhere we think it's selfish to put money into an account for ourselves instead of buy designer jeans for the kids. But the best thing we can do for them is be financially independent when we're older," she said.

THE BOOK, which soon will be available in bookstores, advises:

■ It's never too early to start saving. In fact, the earlier the better. Start with regular amounts in your own name, no matter how small.

"One of the best things to do is to write down how you spend your money for a month or two," Martindale said. "It's tedious and a commitment, but go back when you're feeling committed and see what you can save. If you get a raise or pay off a car or loan, sure, you want to have some fun — but maybe take half of that to save and half to enjoy your lifestyle."

■ Get acquainted with the financial vocabulary.

"It's a whole language unto itself, so you can feel uncomfortable and intimidated by it," Martindale said. "In the book, we try to introduce women gradually to the jargon."

■ Develop a realistic vision of what you want your retirement years to be like. "If you're married, you need to talk to your spouse about the kind of lifestyle you want," Martindale said. "I had one client, a widower, who retired after working for an oil company. He sold his home, bought an RV and went across the country from fishing hole to fishing hole. He said, 'I catch almost all my dinners. I can't believe how cheap it is.'

"I was talking about him during a presentation, and there was a woman in the back of the room whose face got redder and redder. Afterward, she told me, 'I've been waiting all my life for my husband to retire, and we're not going fishing hole to fishing hole. We're going on a cruiser.'

"You need to talk to each other about whether you want a cabin in Washington, or to go on a cruiser."

■ Scrutinize your insurance — particularly health insurance, because its cost is rising much faster than inflation, Martindale said. If you don't understand it, talk to someone who does — someone who doesn't have a vested interest in your purchasing more.

"WE SPEND more money on insurance and know less about it than probably any other product," Martindale said. "Our eyes glaze over when we read about it because it's so dry. And the only person most people talk to is an agent, who wants you to buy it. Look at your policies, or talk to a financial planner."

■ Develop your own plan, with diversified investments, to augment Social Security. Martindale suggests a three-faceted plan: insurance, savings accounts and emergency cash as a foundation; atop that, such investments as bonds, certificates of deposit or T-bills; and finally, stocks or mutual funds.

■ Don't plan in a vacuum. If you're married, find out what your husband's pension or profit-sharing plan will mean to you, when it will become available and what happens if you get divorced or your husband dies.

The book also contains tables and worksheets to help women evaluate and plot their retirement.

Josephine Smith, a retired teacher who taught learning-disabled students in the Dallas-Fort Worth area, said that "through the school system, we were able to take out a tax-deferred annuity, and that's one of the first things I did. I would have liked to have started earlier than I did, but I had children. ... Each year, I tried to raise the amount I put in. I have teacher retirement and Social Security.

"One thing I'd do differently is I started taking out my Social Security when I was 62, and I'm sorry I didn't wait until I was 65. The amount would have been higher each month. So if you can, wait."

ANOTHER WITH advice to offer is Judith Brown of Minneapolis, a licensed investment advisor who wrote "A Second Start" in 1986 to help widows manage money ($7.98 paperback, Simon & Schuster).

"In light of what's going on in the Arab countries, it's harder to have the courage to invest right now," said Brown, a member of the board of directors of the American Association of Retired Persons.

"I suggest women diversify (investments) so that over a long period of time, they can take advantage of growth in the economy. We may be having a recession, but the hope is we'll come back and be stronger than ever."

A number of organizations offer seminars, brochures or handbooks to help women plan their financial futures. Two of them are:

■ The American Association of Retired Persons. It offers a free guide called "The Social Security Book: What Every Woman Absolutely Needs to Know." It explains how to apply for benefits, appeal a denial and how benefits are affected by marriage, divorce, death, widowhood, disability and retirement.

Klingler stays, Marinovich mum

■ Underclassmen must announce their intentions for the NFL draft today.

Associated Press

David Klingler is staying and it looks like Todd Marinovich is gone.

Klingler, Houston's record-setting quarterback, said Thursday that he will return for his senior season rather than enter the NFL draft. (see related story)

Marinovich, Southern Cal's troubled quarterback, also was expected to announce his decision on Thursday. But there was no official word on whether the sophomore would remain in school or turn pro.

The National, however, reported in Friday's editions that Marinovich formally petitioned the NFL for entry into its draft. The sports daily reported that a league official confirmed Marinovich completed the NFL paperwork on Thursday.

Underclassmen have until Friday to notify the NFL of their intention to enter the April draft. So far, 22 have applied. Last year, 38 players left school early to enter the draft.

NFL Draft

NFL spokesman Greg Aiello said the league won't reveal this year's final list until Monday. But several prominent juniors, including Notre Dame's Raghib "Rocket" Ismail and Virginia's Herman Moore, have already announced they are turning pro.

Marinovich was suspended indefinitely from the Southern Cal squad on Jan. 11 after failing to register for classes and missing a mandatory team meeting. Nine days later, he was arrested and charged with cocaine possession.

Marinovich also had problems during the season. He performed erratically, was suspended for one week for David Klingler meets the press Thursday in Houston.

■ Houston coach John Jenkins understandably welcomes quarterback David Klingler's decision to remain a Cougar.

HOUSTON (AP) — David Klingler, who set or tied 33 NCAA records last season, said Thursday he will return for his senior year at Houston instead of entering the NFL draft.

"I'll be back," Klingler said Thursday at a news conference. The quarterback said there were 23 reasons to stay at Houston, and only three to enter the draft.

"Those three mostly were money," Klingler added.

"But what was most important was taking care of my teammates and taking care of my coach. If I didn't come back these guys would win nine, 10 or 11 games. I want to be part of that. I want to win them all."

Mich. St. topples Ohio St.

Associated Press

EAST LANSING, Mich. — Michigan State wasn't quite ready to abidicate the Big Ten throne.

The defending champion Spartans handed No. 3 Ohio State its first loss of the season on Thursday night, 75-61, and worked their way back into the conference title picture.

"This is a great win for us," Michigan State coach Jud Heathcote said. "I don't know if we were inspired, or we caught Ohio State on a bad night, but this puts us right into a contending position. Now it is up to the players."

Michigan State (13-6, 6-3) was coming off a 34-point loss to second-place Indiana and the Buckeyes (17-1, 7-1) were coming off consecutive road victories and were one of the last two unbeaten Division I teams along with top-ranked UNLV.

Steve Smith scored 26 points, including the 2,000th of his career, for the Spartans and Mark Montgomery added a career-high 17.

Michigan State led 39-36 at halftime, and quickly expanded that lead to eight points on a dunk by Dwayne Stephens and a 3-pointer by Montgomery.

"Hitting that first shot really boosted my confidence," Montgomery said. "The guys told me to keep shooting, and I kept getting open shots."

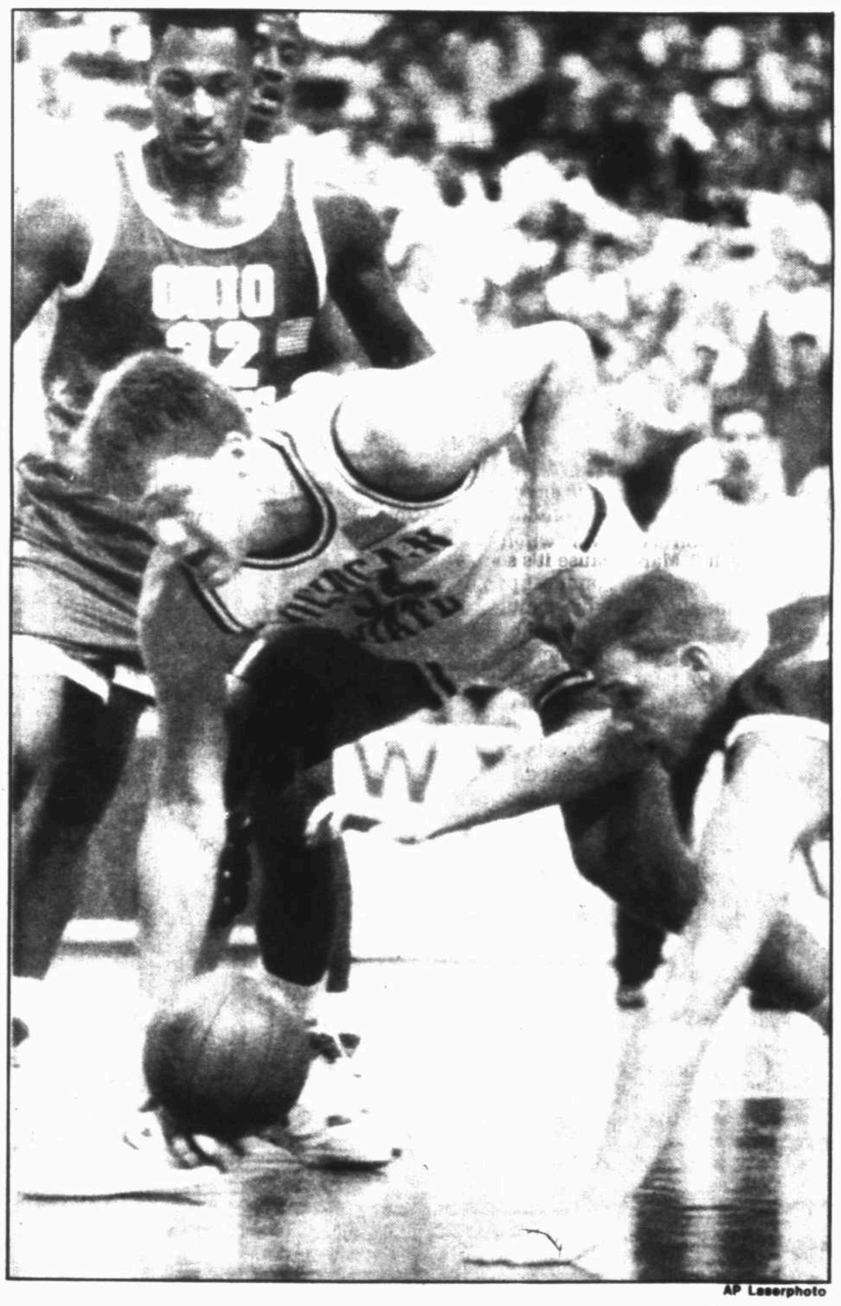

Ohio State trailed 58-52 with 9:29 to play and scored just one point in the next 5:55, allowing the Spartans to put the game away.

"You have to give Michigan State all the credit for our shooting," Buckeyes coach Randy Ayers said. "They took away our penetration, and they did a good job of controlling the tempo. We never got our offense into sync, especially down the stretch."

Chris Jent's three-point play pulled the Buckeyes within 64-58 with 2:09 to play, but Ohio State got no closer, as the Spartans made seven free throws in the final 68 seconds, four by Smith.

Smith moved into second place on Michigan State's all-time scoring list, passing Greg Kelser. He has 2,020 points, 125 short of Scott Skiles' school record.

"I know it is there, but I'm trying not to think about it," Smith said of the scoring milestone. "I'm trying to just concentrate on winning the games. After the season, I'll look back at it, and be happy."

Michigan State's Mike Peplowski, in white jersey, battles Ohio State's Chris Jent for a loose ball Thursday.

Mark Baker led Ohio State with 14 points and Jim Jackson added 12.

The Buckeyes used a seven-point run to take a 36-32 lead in the last minute of the half. With 58 seconds left, Parish Hickman made a layup and was fouled. Hickman missed the free throw, but Ayers was assessed a technical foul for arguing the call, and Smith hit both foul shots to tie the score.

Bulldogs control destiny

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

Even though Midland High's boys basketball team suffered a close 91-89 loss at Abilene High Tuesday, the Bulldogs can still control their playoff fate and may even have a chance at a piece of the District 4-5A title with a little help.

MHS will harbor those hopes as Odessa High comes to town for an 8 p.m. game today at the Chaparral Center. In another local high school game tonight, the Midland Lee girls will put a two-game winning streak on the line against the league's second-place team, Odessa Permian, at 8 p.m. in the Lee gymnasium.

In other district games tonight, the Lee boys play at Permian and the MHS girls travel to OHS, while the Abilene boys take their new-found playoff hopes to San Angelo Central. The Central girls visit AHS while Abilene Cooper's teams are idle.

The Bulldogs will put their 6-2 district record on the line against an OHS squad that is a deceptive 2-6 in 4-5A, but 14-12 overall. The Bronchos have taken plenty of close losses, including an 83-80 affair at the hands of unbeaten district front runner Central Tuesday in Odessa.

Guard Earl McDonald leads the current Bulldogs (15-10 overall) in scoring with an 11.2 point per game average. But that number is low compared with his more recent output. Since the loss of leading scorer Rodrick Hickey to grades four games ago, McDonald has come to the front with 16½ points a game.

Though no other MHS player owns a double figure average, Skeet Bowers is close with a 9.1 mark after scoring 25 points in the loss to Abilene.

MHS trails Central by 1½ games and, though it can maintain the No. 2 playoff seed, must rely on help in order to gain a share of the district title.

That help may come in the form of Abilene, which is seeking its fourth straight 4-5A title but trails MHS by a full game. The Eagles, however, have been on a hot streak after getting off to a slow start in the first half of the season.

The Lee boys are also finding their way after stumbling out of the 4-5A gate. The Rebels rolled up 90 points in a 90-63

Clearing out the ol' clutter... sort of

Thoughts designed to clear out a cluttered mind:

It's so nice that there was only one week between the conference championships and the Super Bowl, even though they ruined the effect (for me, anyway) by adding another playoff game. Whatever happened to the days when they got it all wrapped up by Christmas, or at least New Year's Day?

Hey, how 'bout that Super Bowl. Sure was nice to have a close one for a change. Note to those who bet on the Bills: (Hey, isn't that illegal?) Don't come down too hard on Buffalo kicker Scott Norwood. The Bills don't pay him to crank it up from beyond 40 yards. They pay Jim Kelly to get it a little closer to the end zone.

Grimes

Turning to TV criticism, The Grimes Scumbag Award for this year goes to CBS. That's right, the same yahoos who killed baseball's Game of the Week apparently want to do away with non-stop coverage of the first round of the NCAA basketball tournament. Black Rock took a bath on its baseball coverage. May the "Road to the Final Four" be laden with financial potholes for CBS.

Runnerup for the Scumbag Award is the NCAA, for signing the contract that let CBS get away with this affront to basketball junkies everywhere. You don't suppose that CBS would pre-empt As The World Turns to show a first-round NCAA game?

A pox on all who thought Gym Bice would be unable to make an impact on the junior college level at the beginning of last season. Not only did the former Andrews great finish last season as Midland College's starting point guard, but he's started the majority of games in a three-guard rotation for this season's Texas-El Paso cage squad. Bice averages only about three points per game for the Miners, but is second on the team in steals and third in assists.

On the local scene, shouldn't we be coming up with some cross-country coaches who do not also coach football? It's not fair to the runners that their "coach" is at football practice when they're doing their workout. Kind of hard to coach the kids when coach is absent, isn't it? And what if practice is early in the morning or after football workout? Still not fair. That would disrupt the schedules of too many families.

Perhaps you read about the possibility that the University Interscholastic League may eliminate soccer because of the lack of decorum exhibited by certain members of certain programs (none around here, so I'm told). Last time I checked, there have been sporadic breaches of said decorum at many different types of athletic events recently.

So why is the UIL picking on soccer with this ultimatum? I think we all know why. It would be a shame, especially since District 3 is one of the most competitive districts in the state — and since Midland Lee and Midland High have apparently developed a healthy rivalry.

I see where Odessa College is starting a baseball program. Wouldn't it be nice if Midland College would do the same (and add women's basketball and track as well.)?

Inactive list dotted with injured stars

Associated Press

The NBA's injured list reads like an All-Star lineup. In fact, it is.

Center Akeem Olajuwon and guards Isiah Thomas and Fat Lever are definitely out of the Feb. 10 All-Star Game with injuries, while forwards Larry Bird and Charles Barkley are questionable at best.

Thomas, Bird and Barkely were elected All-Stars, while usual All-Stars Olajuwon and Lever were injured so early in the season they weren't elected to the team.

Barkley, averaging 30.8 points, says his painful left ankle will probably keep him out of Philadelphia's next four games and the All-Star Game. The 76ers are 2-5 without him.

"I'm disappointed about that, but I'm more disappointed that I'm going to miss the next four games," Barkley said. "The Sixers are more important than that other stuff. I was hoping to come back Friday, but now, hopefully, I'll be back against Portland (Feb. 12)."

Bird, out for the last 12 games with back problems, says he feels better but is uncertain about his return. He practiced Tuesday for the first time since playing on Jan. 6.

"I feel probably better right now than I have before the season even started so I'm pretty excited about it," Bird said Wednesday. "But you just have to take it a day at a time. I'm at a stage where I'm just trying to work my way back."

The Celtics are 6-6 without Bird after a 26-5 start.

Thomas will be out at least until May after undergoing fusion surgery on his right wrist on Tuesday.

Doctors recommended that Thomas have the surgery now rather than after the season because of the danger of arthritis. During the 45-minute surgery, Thomas had a bone in his forearm grafted to a small bone in his wrist.

The Pistons, 4-0 without Thomas, hoped he could return for the start of the playoffs in late April, but doctors say he won't be out of his cast until March 19, and he can't play basketball for eight weeks after that.

Dr. Kirk Watson, who performed the operation, said he'd be "a little nervous setting him loose on a basketball court until I'm convinced he's ready."

Strickland outshines All-Stars

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — In a game that featured All-Stars David Robinson and Michael Jordan, it was Rod Strickland who starred in the stretch.

Stickland's six straight points in the final 1:39 sent San Antonio past the Chicago Bulls 106-102 Thursday night. The victory helped the Spurs avoid their first three-game losing streak of the season.

Horace Grant's jumper with 1:50 left gave the Bulls their last lead of the game at 95-94. Strickland, who finished with 22 points, hit a pair of layups and two free throws for a 100-95 edge with 1:16 left.

"We played harder tonight, especially in the second half," San Antonio coach Larry Brown said. "Rod really gave us a lift by playing an all around game. But of course David Robinson was again the key."

Robinson led the Spurs with 31 points and 17 rebounds. The Spurs trailed 82-75 after three quarters, but Robinson scored San Antonio's first nine points of the final quarter to pull even at 84.

"We finally came together in the final seven minutes," said Robinson. "They played really physical, but that's the type of game that I enjoy. I love to get into the flow of this type of game even though it does get a little physical."

Michael Jordan led the Bulls with 36 but was held to only one field goal in the final 20 minutes by Sean Elliott and Willie Anderson.

NBA

Lakers 116, Hawks 103

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — A.C. Green, subbing again for James Worthy, had 20 points and 14 rebounds as the Los Angeles Lakers won their 13th consecutive game.

Worthy missed his third consecutive game for the Lakers, but they continued the longest winning of the NBA season despite the absence of their leading scorer. The loss was the fifth straight, all on the road, for the Hawks, who were led by Dominique Wilkins with 19 points.

Atlanta five of their first six field goals in the game and led 12-6 before losing their shooting touch.

Sonics 97, Rockets 94

HOUSTON — Sedale Threatt got 18 points, pacing Seattle's reserves to a 53-9 scoring edge as the SuperSonics ended an eight-game road losing streak.

The Sonics, who trailed by 16 points late in the second quarter, held the Rockets to just eight points in the final 5½ minutes. Seattle's Shawn Kemp missed four straight free throws in the last 16 seconds, but Houston's Vernon Maxwell missed a 3-point shot with five seconds left and Buck Johnson missed another at the buzzer.

Houston led 56-40 shortly before halftime and was ahead 88-82 late in the fourth period. Kemp's layup with 3:11 left tied it at 90.

Dale Ellis hit two straight baskets to put Seattle in front 94-92 with 1:58 to go and Seattle substitutes Dana Barros and Olden Polynice had the final three points.

Kemp finished with 17 points and 17 rebounds and Polynice added 12 points and eight rebounds. Johnson scored 23, Otis Thorpe added 20 and Maxwell 19 for Houston.

Bullets 107, Knicks 98

NEW YORK — Bernard King scored 23 of his 49 points in the fourth quarter as Washington posted its first victory at Madison Square Garden in three years.

The Bullets, who led for only 7 seconds of the first three quarters, took control in the final period behind King's unstoppable scoring. He was 11-for-14 from the field in the quarter and missed matching the Knicks' total by two points.

New York, which beat Washington six consecutive times here since April 15, 1988, was led by Patrick Ewing with 27 points and Kiki Vandeweghe with 16.

Jazz 105, Blazers 91

SALT LAKE CITY — Karl Malone had 24 points and 11 rebounds and John Stockton added 20 points and 14 assists as the Utah Jazz snapped Portland's seven-game winning streak.

The win continued Utah's home-court success over the Trail Blazers. The Jazz have won 22 of 27 games at the Salt Palace against Portland since moving to Utah in 1981.

Nuggets 123, Nets 119

DENVER — Michael Adams scored a career-high 45 points and also had 11 rebounds and 12 assists as Denver posted its fifth straight victory.

The Nuggets have won seven of their last nine games after a 6-28 start.

Golden State 135, Clippers 119

OAKLAND, Calif. — Mitch Richmond ended a spectacular month by scoring a season-high 40 points and adding a career-high six steals for Golden State.

War and recession worry Greenspan

■ Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan told the House Banking Committee that a prolonged war would dampen consumer confidence and deepen the recession, but he still believes recovery will begin by midyear.

By Martin Crutsinger

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan said Thursday that the nation could face a longer and deeper recession if a prolonged war in the Persian Gulf harms consumer confidence.

Greenspan

Greenspan's comments were his most pessimistic yet on the effects the war could have on the economy. Indeed, right after the war started, Greenspan was saying that the big decline in oil prices, if sustained, could point the way to an early end to the recession.

The chairman of the central bank insisted Thursday that he still held to a belief that the economy will be growing again by midyear with the economic rebound aided by a short war that did not seriously damage oil fields in Saudi Arabia.

But he noted that financial markets and consumers are closely watching events in the war and thus a long conflict could have a significantly adverse effect on consumer confidence.

"You risk consumer confidence deteriorating," Greenspan said during an appearance before the House Banking Committee. "This is an economy which is obviously subject more than at anytime I have seen in the recent past to changes in psychology."

Greenspan did not elaborate on what he meant by a prolonged conflict. However, in an interview published Thursday, Greenspan said that a conflict which lasted past mid-April could so jar consumer confidence that it would lengthen the recession.

"If you get beyond three months, you begin to risk consumer confidence erosion and that would abort any meaningful recovery," he told the New York Times.

"The risks that confidence will not come back sufficiently adequately to bring the economy out of its recession is

Specialty advertisers take to war look

■ Specialty advertisers are selling out of items with a patriotic theme, but some worry they may appear opportunistic.

By Evan Ramstad
AP Business Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Specialty advertisers, who'll slap a company logo on anything that doesn't move, are struggling to meet the demand for patriotic giveaway items like flag pins and desert drab teddy bears.

Many of the 1,000 promotional item suppliers at the winter show of Specialty Advertising Association International are displaying yellow ribbons and American flags on their booths and their products.

"There's a lot of Desert Storm merchandise down here. I've got a whole bag full of things," said David Cowley, a Minneapolis distributor.

"A year ago it was neon, neon, neon and you still see it. But now, everybody and their brother is doing Operation Desert Storm things."

Specialty advertising is a $4.5 billion a year industry in the United States known for its ability to quickly adapt to marketing trends.

About 10,000 distributors will attend the show this week at the Dallas Convention Center. Some will take anything with a patriotic theme because their customers, usually service-oriented companies who use the products as a promotional giveaway, are clamoring for the items.

"Normally this time of year for us is the slack season," said David Gilman, whose Kansas City printing company has been cranking out flag and camouflage Desert Storm stickers since the war began.

"The day after the war began we began to get calls asking if we had any stock bumper stickers or flags," Gilman said.

Home sales continue to plunge

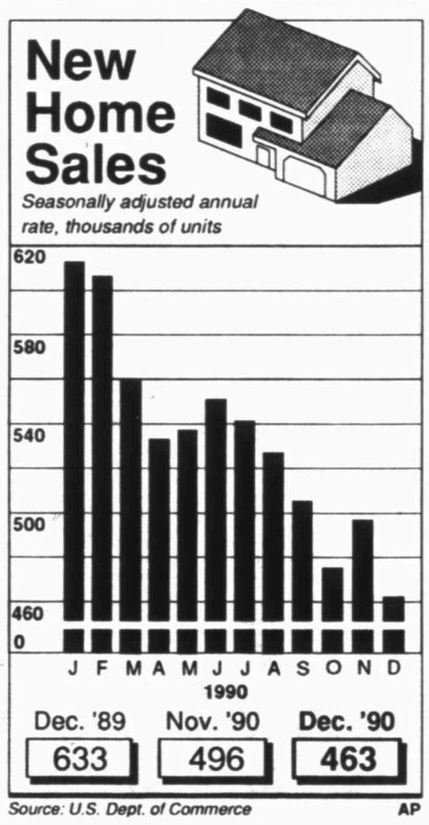

WASHINGTON (AP) — New home sales plunged 6.7 percent in December, dragging the year's national housing collapse to the worst level since the 1982 depths of the last recession, the government said Thursday. But analysts suggested a gradual recovery will begin by midyear.

The Departments of Commerce and Housing and Urban Development reported sales totaled a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 463,000 units in December, the lowest level since 407,000 homes were sold in August 1982.

New home sales in 1990 fell for the second consecutive year, down 17.5 percent to 536,000 units, the smallest number since 412,000 homes were sold in 1982.

American's pilots reject airline's final proposal

By Evan Ramstad

DALLAS (AP) — Federal mediators Thursday told American Airlines and its pilots' union to take a break until Monday and then resume negotiations on a new contract.

The directors of the Allied Pilots Association Wednesday rejected what the company said was its final offer, a four-year package that would raise American's cockpit costs by $1 billion.

The decision of the union leaders raised the prospect that the National Mediation Board would declare an impasse in the talks, starting a 30-day cooling period after which pilots could strike.

The mediation board instead told both sides to back to the table next week.

"We think anytime an impasse is not declared it's a good development," said Wally Pitts, an American co-pilot and union spokesman. "It has always been our intention and our primary goal to reach a fair and equitable deal."

American spokesman Al Becker said the company's negotiators will attend the session Monday and learn what's next. "There is just no way for us to know precisely what the mediator has in mind," Becker said.

He reiterated the company's disappointment at the union's rejection of the latest contract proposal.

American and the union, which represents the carrier's 8,700 pilots, have been unable since October 1989 to agree on a contract to replace the one that expired Jan. 1, 1990.

The union said American's package of base pay based on that of Northwest Airlines and bonuses tied to the company's financial performance would result in no raises during the last 17 months of the four years.

The union also objected to sharing the cost of medical benefits and prepaid retiree health care for active pilots. The value of benefits to retired pilots would also be reduced under the company's proposal, the union said.

Medical insurance here today, gone tomorrow

By Jane Bryant Quinn

NEW YORK–The world of medical insurance is so firmly split into "haves" and "have-nots" that it's hard to get the "haves" to pay attention.

Quinn

You're a "have" if you're swaddled in the welfare world of big-company benefits. "Have-nots" struggle (often unsuccessfully) to find decent small-company coverage or an individual policy they can afford to buy. But "haves" can be suddenly catapulted out of their privileged position. Suddenly, they discover how the other half lives.

Take Maryann Wlock, who worked in the business-management division of the nation's seventh largest accounting firm, Laventhol & Horwath. Last June, she had a mastectomy and has just completed chemotherapy. A health-insurance policy administered by Aetna was paying her bills after a $400 deductible.

On Nov. 21, while Wlock was still in treatment, Laventhol went bankrupt. As of the 20th, all coverage stopped (the company hasn't even had the money to cover all bills prior to the 20th). Wlock's New York department reorganized itself into a new nine-person firm, Joel Faden & Co. Its first order of business: group health insurance that would include Maryann.

Wlock's first thought for instant coverage was COBRA, the acronym for the federal law that protects employees' access to group-health insurance. If you work for a firm employing more than 20 people, you can generally keep the group plan, at your own expense, for 18 to 36 months, depending on why you lost your benefits. But COBRA doesn't cover liquidations in bankruptcy.

Her next line of protection, she thought, was state law. New York and many other states require insurance companies to offer individual health plans, with no medical exam, when group insurance ends. But no insurer was directly involved. Like many companies nowadays, Laventhol was self-insured. It paid the medical bills itself, employing Aetna to manage the plan.

State insurance laws don't apply to companies that self-insure. In fact, one reason a company chooses self-insurance is to escape state oversight. So even health-insurance "haves" aren't as well-protected as they think.

Aetna offered Wlock a policy anyway, starting Nov. 21. As is the case with all such "conversion" policies, the price is high and the benefits scant--because these policies are purchased only by the ill. She's paying $388 a quarter ($1,552 a year).

While Wlock was searching for personal coverage, insurance agent Brooks Komoroff was working on a group plan for Faden & Co., and it was tough. Faden couldn't get the history of its members' claims because Laventhol was in such upheaval. Furthermore, says Komoroff, most private carriers won't take a group if any member's claims exceeded $2,000 in the previous year. Wlock could have taken herself out of the group, but an individual, private coverage wasn't available at any price.

New York's Blue CrossBlue Shield takes all comers, at standard rates, regardless of health. But Wlock would have had to wait another 11 months before the Blues would cover her for cancer.

In New York, there is no state pool for the uninsured. Her company finally got a group policy, at standard rates, through the New York State Society of Certified Public Accountants and probably Blue Cross (the latter policy hasn't yet come through). Wlock is covered, although her pre-existing illness is excluded for a year. During that period, she'll stay with Aetna, which pays her bills this year regardless of what other insurance she holds.

The expenses associated with her cancer treatments may come to $5,000 or $6,000, she says, exceeding the high premium she has to pay. Her great fear is that cancer will recur while she's still subject to the low benefits in the Aetna plan, especially the $1,550 limit for surgery. Last year's operation cost $15,000. She also has no disability coverage.

"I spend my waking days thinking about medical insurance," she says. "It has changed my life, even more so than when I was diagnosed with cancer."

Oil rebounds

Oil prices recovered Thursday from Wednesday's decline.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, contracts for March delivery of West Texas Intermediate climbed 57 cents to $21.54 per barrel.

The move prompted local crude purchasers such as Permian Corp. and Texaco Trading and Transportation to increase their posted price for WTI to $20.25, up 50 cents.

Dollar, gold fall

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar weakened against most major currencies Thursday, particularly the German mark, following an unexpected boost in interest rates by Germany's central bank.

Gold prices continued to weaken in worldwide trading.

On the New York Commodity Exchange, bullion for current delivery settled at $365.80 a troy ounce, down $3 from Wednesday.

Currency dealers blamed the dollar's decline Thursday mainly on the German Bundesbank's surprise decision to raise its key official lending rates by half a percentage point.

The German discount rate rose to 6.5 percent, while the Lombard rate was boosted to 9 percent.

In New York, the dollar fell to 1.47695 German marks from 1.4880 marks Wednesday.

The dollar was weaker against the British pound from Wednesday. Sterling bought $1.9665 in New York, up from $1.9630.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Wednesday's quotes, included: 1.2578 Swiss francs, down from 1.2625; 5.0245 French francs, down from 5.0490; 1,111.25 Italian lira, down from 1,115.50; and 1.16325 Canadian dollars, up from 1.16035.

Gold dealers said prices were volatile largely because of thin activity.

Silver prices increased. On New York's Comex, silver bullion for current delivery settled at $3.830 a troy ounce, up from $3.805 late Wednesday.

Stocks up

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market rolled up another broad advance Thursday, extending the rally that has carried the market to five-month highs this week.

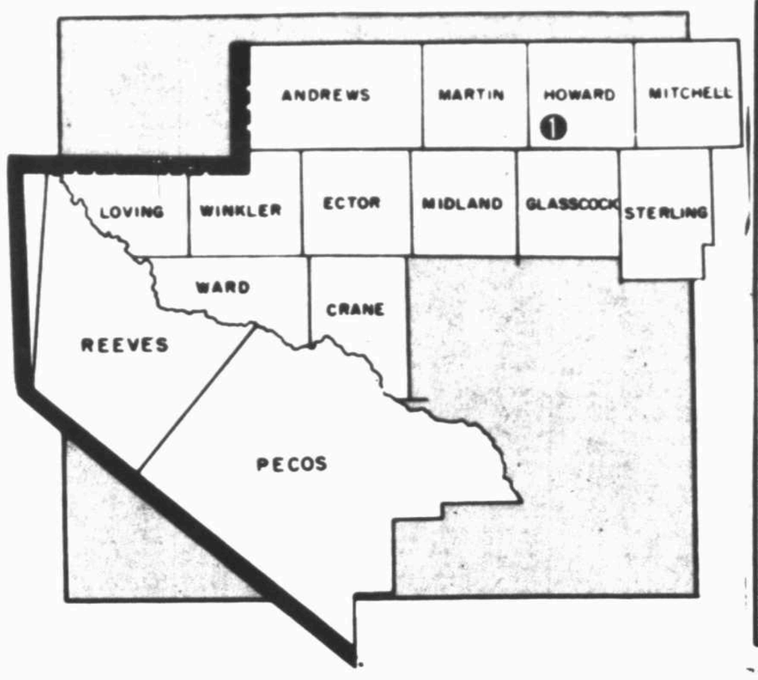

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 23.27 points to 2,736.39 on top of Wednesday's 50.50-point jump.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Bond exchange runaround

By Bill Doyle

Q. I'm having trouble exchanging my Series E and EE, U.S. Savings Bonds, for Series HH bonds. I called my credit union, bank, savings and loan association, as well as various other financial institutions, but no one could tell me anything. In fact, they didn't know what I was talking about.

Doyle

Then, because I live in Houston, I called the Houston branch of the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas and was told to call the Dallas Federal Reserve Bank. I did and was told to call Houston. When I told them I had, they said that was the best they could do for me.

I suggested I go to Dallas and exchange the bonds. They said, "No." I'm at a dead end. What can I do?

A. You talked to the wrong people or dunderheads — maybe both — on every call. Phone the Dallas Fed again and speak to an officer in the U.S. Savings Bonds department.

E bonds, EE bonds and U.S. Savings Notes with redemption value of $500 or more can be exchanged for HH bonds. By making that swap, you postpone the federal income tax liability on the accumulated E, EE and savings note interest until you redeem the HHs or the HHs reach final maturity, 20 years after their issue dates.

Unlike Es, EEs and savings notes, on which interest builds up, HHs are "current interest" bonds. They pay interest every six months. The annual interest rate on HHs issued since Nov. 1, 1986, is 6 percent.

Assuming your CU, bank and S&L are savings bond issuing agents, as virtually all are, they should have assisted you. Those issuing agents cannot make the exchange. But they can provide Form PD 3253 and should have enough know-how to help you fill it out.

After that form is completed, it and the Es, EEs and savings notes are sent to the Federal Reserve Bank, where the HHs are issued and mailed to you.

You can do this yourself by mail or by going to a Federal Reserve Bank or branch. If you use the mails, make it registered, return receipt requested.

Q. My semiannual Series HH bond interest checks arrive by mail. My brother tells me his HH bond interest goes into his bank account by direct deposit. When did that direct deposit start?

A. It's been mandatory for all HH bonds issued since Oct. 1, 1989. Interest on HHs issued on and after that date automatically goes into the bank accounts the owners specify.

Owners of HHs, as well as H bonds — the predecessors to HHs — issued before last October 1989 have the option of getting their interest either by direct deposit or by checks through the mail. That choice went into effect in January 1985.

You should have been aware of this, because the U.S. Treasury Department has notified H and HH bond owners of the opportunity to switch to direct deposit. Peter Hollenbach, spokesman for the Bureau of the Public Debt, says 30 percent of H and HH bond accounts now receive interest that way.

Direct deposit is really the better way to go. It eliminates worries about checks being delayed in the mail or stolen. Also, the interest reaches your bank account on the very day it is due.

Q. You wrote that HH bonds reach final maturity in 20 years and H bonds in 30 years. If you are correct, the government owes me money. I exchanged my E bonds for H bonds in 1970. They were automatically renewed in 1980 and 1990. But the 1990 renewal was at a lower interest rate. What information can you give me about this?

A. Your H bonds will reach final maturity in the year 2000 — 30 years after they were issued. Their original maturity was 10 years and they received two 10-year extended maturities. Depending on when the bonds were issued, they earned either 7.5 or 8.5 percent during their first extended maturity, from 1980 through 1990.

When they entered their second — and final — extended maturity last year, their interest rate was reduced 6 percent. That rate cut applied to every H going into an extended maturity in October 1986 and came as a great shock to many people.

Sorry, the government does not owe you any money.

LOOK: Give-aways help express support

(From 4C)

"There is really a groundswell of concern for the situation in the Gulf and people want to express it a number of ways," said John Lundsberg, salesman for a Minneapolis glassware maker.

"One of the ways is with dimensional advertising and promotional products that convey the message in a simple way and is something that can be kept, is useful and appreciated by the recipient."

One company printed camouflage boxer shorts with a "Kick Butt" imprint. A customer could have the shorts customized with their own logo.

Bill Gootnick, owner of a small California toy supplier, said he had twice as many orders for teddy bears in desert camouflage dress as for those decked in olive garb.

"Everyone has seen the bear. It's brought a lot of attention," Gootnick said. Customers can buy Gootnick's smallest bear for about $15 and imprint a message or logo on the bear's dog tag or uniform for a little extra.

"The hardest part about meeting the demand is finding the fabric in the desert camouflage colors," Gootnick said.

Gootnick and other suppliers are wary of appearing too quick to make a buck off the war. He is donating some of his profits to the International Red Cross.

"There was some mixed feelings on it. We didn't want to appear to be opportunistic," said Lundsberg, whose company is print flags and newspaper front pages on drinking glasses.

But he added, "There's no copyright on the American flag."

WORRY: Middle East affecting confidence

(From 4C)

regrettably higher than I would like," Greenspan said.

In his appearance before the committee, Greenspan said that evidence so far indicated that the conflict had undercut consumers' confidence about the future.

"The evidence we have is clearly fragmentary, but pretty conclusive," Greenspan told the committee. "We see consumers markedly affected by events in the Middle East."

The Bush administration, however, took issue with Greenspan's assessment, saying that it believed consumer confidence was beginning to turn upward.

"Right now, there are many indications that consumer confidence is beginning to rebound," presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater told reporters when asked about Greenspan's comments.

Plummeting consumer confidence in the months following Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait has been cited by many economists as the key factor which pushed the country into a recession.

The total economy, as measured by the gross national product, fell at an annual rate of 2.1 percent in the October-December quarter with the weakness led by a huge drop in consumer spending, especially on big-ticket items such as cars.

Consumer spending accounts for two-thirds of total economic activity and is the reason economists closely watch changes in consumer attitudes for clues about where the economy is headed.

"Consumer confidence is the major force driving this economy currently and the force that is likely to continue to do so in the months ahead," Greenspan said Thursday.

Pickens calls for federal CNG fleets

DALLAS (AP) — President Bush should have gone a step further with his call for a national energy policy by ordering the conversion of federal auto fleets to natural gas consumption, T. Boone Pickens said.

Pickens, managing partner of natural gas producer Mesa Limited, said the infrastructure can be put in place quickly and long-term savings would be achieved because natural gas is cheaper than oil.

Bush, in his State of the Union speech Tuesday night, said his 1992 budget would include "a comprehensive national energy strategy that calls for energy conservation and efficiency, increased development and greater use of alternative fuels."

"I wish last night President Bush had announced he was going to switch the federal fleet to compressed natural gas," Pickens said Wednesday.

"I don't understand why we don't go ahead and start that ball rolling," he said.

Some municipal and state agency fleets in the Southwest have converted their vehicles to consume CNG, which burns cleaner than gasoline.

Some leaders in Washington favor the change, but conversion costs are more than $1,000 per vehicle. Pickens said the short-term cost is worth the savings in the long run because natural gas, readily available in the United States, will reduce the nation's dependence on foreign energy sources.

"What we need is that one move by our leader to say 'Let's do it,'" Pickens said. "Once that's done, then I think you're on your way to pulling away from this dependency."

to faltering consumer confidence. But some took solace in a Conference Board survey that found confidence returning recently after tumbling immediately after the outbreak of the Persian Gulf war to its lowest level in 10 years.

"It's clear the weakness in December was not an interest-rate issue," said economist David F. Seiders of the National Association of Home Builders, who noted that mortgage rates had fallen to nearly 9.5 percent in December.

"The explanation has to lie in the extreme lack of consumer confidence," concurred Thomas Holloway, an economist with the Mortgage Bankers Association. "The consumer is concerned over the outlook for the economy — inflation and incomes. In large part, that stemmed from developments in the Middle East."

Many analysts believe the contraction in the housing industry will reach bottom during the current quarter, although sales could fall another notch in January.

"Interest rates will come down farther," Seiders said, which will help the market "pull out of this in the first quarter and have a gradual recovery."

"When we look at this report in conjunction with other recent economic reports, if we're not at the bottom, we're very close," Holloway said.

ANALYSIS

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market struggled ahead today, extending the broad advance that carried the market to a five-month high on Wednesday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 50.50 points on Wednesday, rose 5.69 to 2,718.81 by 2 p.m. on Wall Street.

Gainers outnumbered losers by about 3 to 2 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 890 up, 591 down and 497 unchanged.

Analysts said investors continued to take a positive view of news about the progress of the war in the Persian Gulf.

Another primary force behind the market's recent advance has been a series of economic reports suggesting that the recession might not turn out as long or severe as had been feared.

Those hopes were buttressed Wednesday by the Commerce Department's report that the index of leading economic indicators rose 0.1 percent in December, ending a run of four consecutive monthly declines.

Compaq Computer climbed 2⅞ to 69⅝ on top of a 3½-point gain Wednesday, when the company posted a 70 percent earnings increase for the fourth quarter of last year.

Xerox, which also reported higher fourth-quarter profits, jumped 3¾ to 47⅛.

Among actively traded blue chips, McDonald's rose ¾ to 28½; Boeing gained ⅞ to 48¾; Philip Morris slipped ⅛ to 55⅝, and International Business Machines lost ⅛ to 126⅞.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks gained .51 to 186.53.

Kilgore police officers are learning firsthand sights, smells of drugs

By Melinda W. Bigelow
Associated Press Writer

KILGORE (AP) — Kilgore is noted for its skyline of oil derricks and a world-famous dance drill team, but a new program at the East Texas Police Academy, which is part of Kilgore College, could soon be added to the list.

The Institution for Drug Education and its "hands on" policy to teach police officers about the making of illegal drugs may well be the only one in the nation, according to Bill Echart, chairman of the Protective Services for Kilgore College.

Why train police officers to make illicit drugs?

"The upsurge in the number of methamphetamine labs in East Texas is due to the rural location and the good ol' boy police who wouldn't know a meth lab if they saw one, so officers need training," says Les Ferguson, who joined the institution in December after five years as an agent with the federal Drug Enforcement Administration. He is one of 15 officers DEA has certified as a methamphetamine instructor.

Ferguson told a class about the time a police officer went to a house where methamphetamines were cooking. DEA agents who had staked out the house were concerned the officer would blow their operation. But he left, telling the occupants to have a good day, because he did not recognize the signs of illegal activity.

"How much does the average officer know about drugs, not much," Ferguson said. "The bad guys know what they are doing and the more knowledge police officers have, the better equipped they are to apprehend those breaking the law."

Since its inception Dec. 1, 1990, 295 law enforcement officers have taken the 10-hour class, which is an eye-opening and sinus-clearing experience.

The smell of chemicals used to manufacture the methamphetamines permeates the air.

The officers are instructed to wash their hands after every segment and to not touch their eyes, nose or mouth.

Officers begin the session by learning to manicure marijuana, separating the stems and seeds from the actual weed, then they try their hand at rolling a joint.

"If an officer went into a house on a domestic violence call and saw a dollar bill and a Sonic tray on a table, he or she might not know the significance if they had not received training," Ferguson said.

Trays placed on vehicle windows at drive-in fast food restaurants are often stolen and used for separating the seeds and stems.

Although marijuana was the drug of choice in the early '70s, the money is currently in methamphetamines, Ferguson said.

It takes approximately $2,500 to set up a methamphetamine lab and $50,000 is realized off the initial investment in 18-24 hours, he said.

Ferguson said an Upshur County laboratory netted over $1 million in five months.

The finished product sells for $100 a gram or $180,000 a pound.

Dismantling a methamphetamine laboratory costs the federal government approximately $50,000. DEA handles 95 percent of all labs, Ferguson said, since few law enforcement agencies are able to handle the expense.

Materials from a methamphetamine lab are considered hazardous waste, and DEA is annually allocated $2 million dispose of the materials, Ferguson said.

East Texas has the distinction of being the No. 2 methamphetamine region in the nation, trailing only California.

In 1987, there were 43 labs in the 28-county East Texas DEA region, 60 in 1988, and 140 in 1990.

"Meth labs aren't anything to be afraid of when you go in, just don't smoke, and as long as it doesn't overheat, you're OK going in," Ferguson told the officers.

One of the most useful tools for an officer in seeking a meth lab is his sense of smell to detect the distinct odor of phenol acetone or ether.

But a manufacturing method that uses red phosphorus can be deadly.

"If you get a whiff from a red phosphorus meth lab, it's too late, you're dead," Echart said.

Chemical pneumonia is another danger for officers raiding a drug lab, the instructors noted.

'The upsurge in the number of methamphetamine labs in East Texas is due to the rural location and the good ol' boy police who wouldn't know a meth lab if they saw one, so officers need training.'

— Les Ferguson, DEA-certified methamphetamine instructor

Equipment for the clandestine labs includes common items that are easily acquired, including reflux condensers, heating mantles, separatory funnels, Reostats and triple neck reaction flasks, Ferguson said.

Key indicators of a clandestine lab are a person who purchases a large amount of ice, strong or unusual odors, chemical cans, people coming outside only to smoke, unusual amounts of traffic, and people who come to the residence for brief visits. Other signs could be unusual barriers on buildings or new high fences when there is no livestock to contain.

Labs often are found in motor homes, motel rooms and storage sheds, and many of them are frequently moved to avoid detection.

Ferguson said [illegible] cocaine also is frequently found in East Texas.

Crack cocaine sells on the street for $200 a gram, Ferguson said.

The value of two and a half kilos of pure, pharmaceutical cocaine is $236,000 on the street, Ferguson said.

Crack is made by taking equal amounts of cocaine and baking soda, dropping the mixture in boiling water and cooling to make a rock, Echart said.

The effects of crack last up to 15 minutes, while the effects of a few grains of methamphetamines can last from six to eight hours.

Some people use illegal drugs out in the open.

"Adults in a coffee shop will pull out what appears to be a package of Sweet and Low or Equal and drop the contents in a cup of coffee, but they have slit the package and put in crack so the package is a hit and they are high," Echart said.

LSD is the No. 1 choice at an area university, Ferguson said.

"I would have never thought that LSD would have seen a resurgence since the long-lasting hallucinogenic effects of the drug are well documented," Ferguson said.

Heroin also was covered in the class. Black tar heroin, which was displayed in a small medicine vial, sells for $400 to $500 per gram, while China White costs the same but is 1,000 times more potent.

"Some heroin users who are accustomed to black tar do not know the effects of China White and die from the first use of the white substance, the instructor explained.

Some signs of a person who may be using drugs include dilated or constructed pupils, dark circles under the eyes, speed bumps (look like black heads or poison ivy on arms), permeation of drug or chemical odor, discoloration of fingers (will be green for marijuana), erratic pupils and clammy skin.

Ferguson said most people on drugs lose weight, but there are exceptions. For amphetamine use, they appear to have very poor personal hygiene, although they bathe regularly. Cuts on fingers are also a common sign.

Heroin users are not very violent, but in a euphoric state. In addition to the telltale needle tracks, some heroin users have bumps on the skin. The bumps are created when heroin is "skin popped" which is an injection just under the skin. If a heroin user's supply is low, they will often "skin pop" the drug for a sustained effect.

People being tested for alcohol intoxication are checked for horizontal eye movement, while drug users are tested in for vertical movement.

When officers completed the day of training, one officer commented, "I've been to a lot of schools but this is the best by far."

State property tax base grows

AUSTIN (AP) — The taxable wealth of school district properties in 1990 increased for the first time in five years, according to the State Property Tax Board.

Last year, statewide taxable property values totaled $641.6 billion, a 1.6 percent gain over 1989, the property tax board said Thursday. Previously, school district values had dropped annually since 1985.

"School districts' taxable values clearly are beginning to recover from the downturn observed during the late 1980s," Leon Willhite, executive director of the Property Tax Board, said.

Taxable values rose in 539 school districts and fell in 508, according to the preliminary 1990 study.

The Texas Education Agency uses the study to help determine how much state aid is allocated to each school district.

The increase was fueled by oil, gas and mineral values, which rose 13.7 percent to reverse a downward trend since 1983.

Single-family residences, which make up nearly 40 percent of school districts' wealth, gained 1.8 percent, while multi-family residences increased 4.1 percent. Industrial and utility values also increased.

Vacant properties, however, continued to drop in value, losing another 7.6 percent. Values for commercial property and agricultural land also fell.

The increase was fueled by oil, gas and mineral values, which rose 13.7 percent to reverse a downward trend since 1983.

An increase in tax exemptions and abatements — totaling $38.5 billion as compared with $35.1 billion in 1989 — prevented statewide values from rising more, the study said.

Homestead exemptions make up 90 percent of the total value lost to school district tax rolls in 1990. School districts also exempted $1 billion of "freeport" property, or goods in transit.

Trinity University officials allow flag flying

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Trinity University officials said Thursday students may fly American flags from dormitory balconies while the school reviews its policy on the matter.

School officials had said flags and banners were not permitted on balconies and walkways because residence hall contracts require them to be kept "attractive, neat, uncluttered and safe."

Not all letters have welcome news for GIs

By Charles J. Lewis
Hearst News Service

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia — Mail is the lifeblood of troop morale. GIs rush for the mail bags, sulk when they don't get a letter and treat the unit mail clerk like a hero.

But not all mail lifts the spirits. For example, take the "Dear John" letters from home.

Navy Capt. Ivan Fuller, a chaplain aboard the carrier USS Theodore Roosevelt, recently held a counseling session for soldiers who had received such letters.

"There is no more beautiful sound on this ship than when they say, 'Mail call,'" he said. "Unfortunately, mail does not always bring good news."

Fuller said some wives "wait until their husbands have left to tell them with a letter" the bad news about their marriage. "Dear John" letters are most common during the first month of a deployment, he said.

"It is an undue cruelty, especially at a time like this," he said. "For a lot of these men, their families are their lives. And then they get a letter from their wife and she says, 'John and I have decided that we love each other more than we love you.' Or, 'I have had an affair. I don't love you, but perhaps we should stay together for the sake of the children.'"

Fuller offers these tips to sailors and their families:

■ Because it can take two or three weeks for letters written aboard ship to reach home, sailors should write a dozen letters or so before they leave and ask a friend to drop one in the mail every day at the start of the cruise so that wives will know they are being thought of.

■ Sailors should visit florists before they sail and make advance arrangements for birthdays and anniversaries.

■ Mail addressed to "Any Service Member" is important but mail from families is even more so because "we like people back home to show concern and interest," Fuller said.

Barry S. Finegan, 21, from Placerville, Calif., a postal clerk aboard the battleship USS Wisconsin, says the most popular "Any Service Member" mail is written in a feminine hand.

However, this clue can be misleading, he warns, because many school teachers are young women. The result: sailors looking for romance in the mails instead have found notes from a kindergarten class.

Finegan says the most popular "Any Service Member" mail carries a few more hints, as in "Any Young Sailor" or, better yet, "Any Young Single Sailor."

One writer who will probably get no letters from the Wisconsin crew is Georgetta from Rockville, Ind.

Her letter to "Any Service Member," which is posted on a ship's bulletin board, tells how unhappy she was when her husband was "doing drugs."

She wrote: "I thought I could solve it by throwing gas and a match on him. He didn't die, but he has to live the rest of his life with the scars. ... That is how I know that Jesus is real."

It wasn't clear whether the woman was writing from prison.

Iraqis may treat women POWs well, some say

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — If an American woman soldier has been captured by Iraq, she is likely to be treated less harshly than her male POW comrades, Mideast experts said Thursday.

Dealing roughly with women prisoners would violate ancient Islamic strictures as well as spawn global outrage in a war watched worldwide on TV, several explained. Leniency, on the other hand, could be used for propaganda by Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, they predicted.

"Women are likely to end up with a softer treatment than men, particularly officers, would face," said Andrew Whitley of Middle East Watch, an international organization that monitors human rights violations in the region.

The issue arose Thursday after Baghdad radio claimed Iraq had captured "a number of male and female U.S. conscripts." While not confirming the report, U.S. military spokesmen said a woman was among two support-group soldiers missing in action near combat in Saudi Arabia. Their vehicle was found, but their weapons were gone and there was no sign that they had been injured.

Baghdad Radio said the alleged women prisoners "will be given good treatment in accordance with the spirit of lofty Islamic laws."

There are centuries-old written rules for conducting an Islamic holy war, said Peter Heath of the Center for the Study of Islamic Societies and Civilization at the Washington University of St. Louis. These include kind treatment for women, children, and the old and sick.

"It would be unusually shameful for any woman, regardless of nationality, to be mistreated or humiliated," said Salih Altoma, an Iraqi native and chairman of Near Eastern languages at Indiana University. "This would be true both in terms of Islamic religion and in terms of Arab values."

However, in the male-dominated Mideast, the rules of holy war hardly contemplate that females will be involved in the actual fighting.

"In Islamic tradition, you don't have women warriors," said Shireen Hunter, a professor at Georgetown University. "But in their culture, there is certainly no honor in mistreating a woman. It's a sexist society and women are considered weak."

Mistreatment of a woman POW "might play badly in the Arab world," said Ms. Hunter.

Iraq has a poor record in abiding by the Geneva Convention rules for humane treatment of POWs, said Whitley. And the bruised faces and stilted anti-war statements of downed allied pilots spurred charges of POW torture in the current conflict in the Persian Gulf.

However, the very notion of a woman prisoner is alien to the Arab world.

"There were no women POWs during the Iran-Iraq war" that lasted eight years, said Whitley. "We really have no reference."

"It is difficult to predict Iraqi behavior, but if they know their own interests, they will treat them well," said Ms. Hunter.

Within the Islamic world, Saddam Hussein might gain a propaganda advantage by showing a woman captive but treating her well, said Heath. "He could say 'look how desperate — or even crazy — the Western forces are to use women soldiers'," said Heath.

There are reasons for concern. Amnesty International reported widespread accounts of Iraqi soldiers raping women of various nationalities after taking over Kuwait. The report also listed cases of cruelty and torture of children. These abuses would violate the laws of Islam.
