Barbara's mishap

WASHINGTON — Barbara Bush broke a bone in her left leg Sunday when she hit a tree while sledding at Camp David, the White House said. The mishap occurred on an icy hill while the first lady was in a sledding party with President Bush, several grandchildren, actor Arnold Schwarzenegger and other guests. The 65-year-old Mrs. Bush was taken by ambulance to a hospital in Hagerstown, Md., where X-rays revealed "a non-displaced fracture of the left fibula bone," said her press secretary, Anna Perez.

VA asked to help

DALLAS — Veterans Administration and civilian medical centers across the country will be asked for the first time by the U.S. Department of Defense to help in caring for casualties if war erupts in the Persian Gulf. In Texas, the Dallas and San Antonio VA medical centers are among 80 veterans hospitals nationwide designated to receive patients suffering from conventional warfare injuries and combat-related emotional problems.

A royal tiff?

British tabloids are speculating that it was a tiff with her husband that caused Princess Diana to turn off her beeper, stomp out of the house (the 250-or-so-room place at Sandringham) and drive off alone to the beach at Snettisham on December 31. The princess walked on the shore for about an hour, alone but for free-lance photographer Jim Bennett, who had followed her when she drove away in her Land Rover. "In all my years of covering the royal family," Bennett told People magazine, "I have never seen any one of them out at such a lonely place without at least three policemen." The Mirror of London opined that the princess had "risked her life on a solitary walkabout," and a security officer said that the Queen would be asked "to remind her children how dangerous it is to go off somewhere without proper protection."

Bush decries Kremlin's use of force; relations may chill

■ Related story/3A

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush condemned the Kremlin's lethal crackdown in Lithuania Sunday and said it "threatens to set back or perhaps even reverse" the new U.S.-Soviet relationship.

He appealed to Soviet leaders to stop using force to quell the independence movement in the Baltics.

"We condemn these acts which could not help but affect our relationship," said Bush upon returning to the White House from Camp David. "There is no justification for the use of force against peaceful and democratically elected governments."

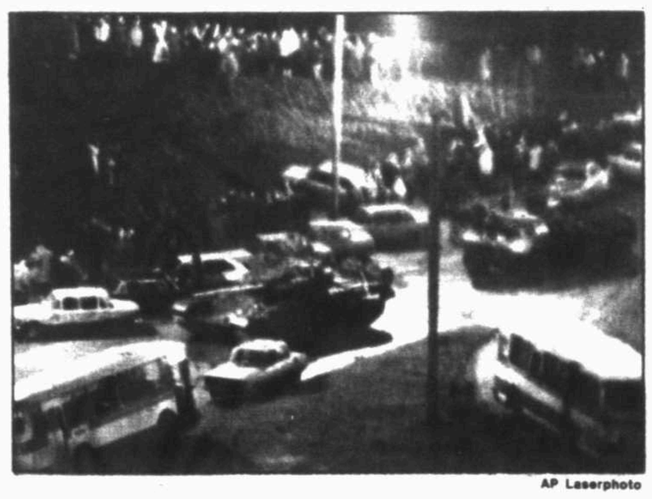

Bush said he couldn't say whether he still would go to Moscow Feb. 11-13 to sign a nuclear arms treaty if the crackdown continued.

"The progress of reform in the U.S.S.R. has been an essential element in the improvement of U.S.-Soviet relations," said Bush. "Events like those now taking place in the Baltic states threaten to set back or perhaps even reverse the process of reform which is so important in the world and the development of the new international order."

But Bush said it would not jeopardize Soviet support for the United Nations resolution demanding Iraq's withdrawal from Kuwait.

And Secretary of State James A. Baker III, after meeting with British Prime Minister John Major in Alconbury, England, said the violence in the Baltics

War? 'Only God knows'

Worshipers pray for one thing: peace

Associated Press

A broad spectrum of faiths joined in prayer this weekend, seeking divine help to avoid war in the Persian Gulf.

"God can make a way out of nowhere. He can make hope where there is no hope," the Rev. Michael R. Bean said Sunday from the pulpit of St. Paul AME Church in downtown Columbus, Ohio.

Clergy nationwide urged world leaders to find a peaceful solution to the Persian Gulf crisis. Some offered prayers for U.S. soldiers should war break out after Tuesday's deadline for Iraq to leave Kuwait.

The horrors of war were clearly on the minds of those at the First United Methodist Church in Plano, Texas, where the altar was festooned with barbed wire.

■ U.N. secretary-general returns from meeting with Saddam; world 'a hairsbreath' from war, French foreign minister says.

U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar met Sunday with Saddam Hussein in a bid to avert war, but said later that "only God knows" if there will be war. Saddam said any last-minute peace overture is up to the Americans.

In an earlier radio broadcast, the Iraqi leader reiterated that his country is ready to fight to keep conquered Kuwait.

State plants, airports go on terrorism alert

DALLAS (AP) — With the threat of war looming in the Persian Gulf, Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport and TU Electric are on special alert for terrorist activities.

Locally, Marcy Blauvelt, supervisor of Midland International Airport administrative services, said the airport also will have increased levels of security. She said further details will be released this week.

But travelers won't notice most of the precautions, DFW officials said.

"Right now, if you and I were to go out to the airport, you probably won't see much change, but that doesn't mean measures aren't in place," airport spokesman Joe Dealey said.

The U.S. State Department has begun an anti-terrorist watch nationwide. That watch includes enhanced security at airports and warnings to nuclear power plants.

TU power plants, including Comanche Peak nuclear plant in Glen Rose, went on alert last week, said company spokesman Dick Ramsey, who added that security at nuclear installations normally is tight.

Rollback survey continues

On Saturday, Midlanders will vote on a tax rollback for Midland County Hospital District. Trustees approved a 19.6 percent increase last year to cover rising costs of care for indigent patients.

Because the increase was greater than 8 percent, the tax proposal was subject to a citizen rollback petition. Citizens Against Taxpayer Abuse secured the signatures necessary to call Saturday's election.

If the rollback is rejected, the $9 annual tax increase on an average $53,180 Midland home would stand.

If voters approve the rollback, the $9 annual savings would be realized and room rates and other hospital charges would eventually have to be raised to make up the difference, MCHD officials say.

Referendum vote heats up Corpus Christi abortion battle

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — The fate of an amendment that declares human life begins at conception will be decided this week, bringing to a head the abortion battles that have consumed this Gulf Coast city for more than a year.

Voters will decide Saturday whether to include the "Human Family Amendment" in the city charter. The proposal has its share of weighty supporters in this predominantly Roman Catholic and Hispanic city of 300,000, whose name is Latin for "body of Christ."

They include Catholic Bishop Rene Gracida, who has excommunicated two abortion clinic employees and a doctor who performs abortions; and Sheriff Jim Hickey. Last year, Hickey announced that he never would send deputies to assist city police removing anti-abortion protesters from clinic doorways, and during one such protest he prayed on the sidewalk while his wife was being arrested nearby.

Abortion opponent Rex Moses, who brought his crusade here from Austin in November 1989, says the referendum's outcome carries "profound spiritual implications."

"I don't know if there are more demons or angels loose in Corpus Christi," he said.

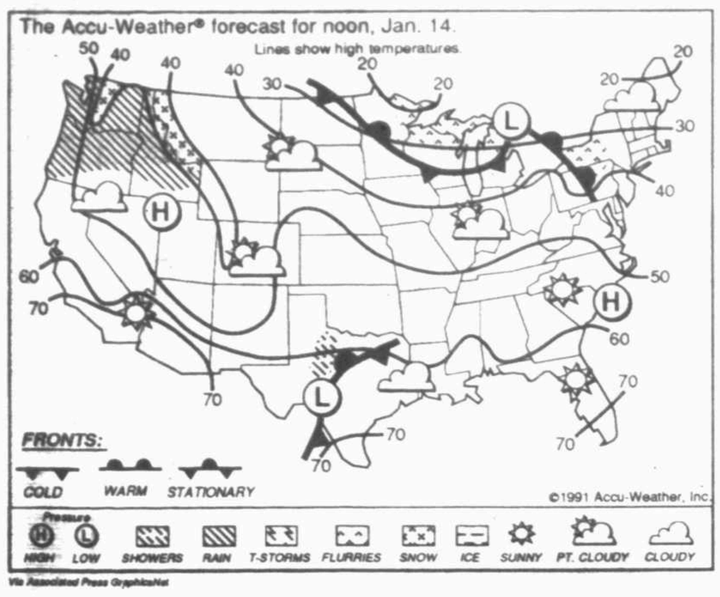

The amendment's supporters say they regard it as nothing more than a statement affirming human rights. Opponents see it as an attempt to insert religion into government.

Amanda Stukenberg, president of South Texans for Choice, a Corpus Christi-based abortion rights group, said "statements about one's philosophies or religious beliefs do not belong in the city

Partly cloudy forecast

Staff Report

Today's forecast is partly cloudy with a high in the low 60s and northwest winds 10-20 mph, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

Tonight is predicted to be partly cloudy with a low in the low 30s.

Tuesday's forecast is partly cloudy with a high in the upper 50s, the NWS said.

Monday's high was 66, compared to the record high of 80, set in 1957.

The record low for today's date is 13, set 1982.

STATE

Sunshine bathed much of Texas on Sunday, but there was snow on the ground in the Panhandle with a chance of new snow by Monday night.

The snow cover was holding temperatures at Amarillo and Dalhart in the 40s, but readings were generally in the 50s and 60s elsewhere.

Highs in the 50s and 60s are expected throughout West Texas on Monday, with lows ranging from the 20s in the Panhandle to the middle 30s elsewhere.

Temperatures in the 60s also were reported Sunday throughout South Texas. The National Weather Service said skied should be partly cloudy Monday in South Texas with widely scattered showers.

Today's lows in South Texas should range from the 30s in the Hill Country to the 50s in the Rio Grande Valley. Highs in the 60s and 70s are anticipated.

Temperatures were in the 60s all over North Texas on Sunday under mostly clear skies.

Winds were mostly southerly at 5 to 15 mph, but in places as high as 15 to 25 mph.

The weather service said there was a chance of rain for central and eastern portions of North Texas tonight. Highs Monday should be in the 50s and 60s, with lows from the middle 30s to the middle 40s.

NATION

The storm that dumped more than a foot of snow on some parts of the Northeast headed out to sea and another that battered the Pacific Northwest with high winds and heavy rains over the weekend began to fizzle Sunday.

Light rain lingered in the Northwest and showers were scattered from the coast into parts of Montana and Nevada.

Snow and freezing rain fell over the north central United States, including parts of North Dakota, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Illinois. Snow showers sprinkled the lower Great Lakes and the upper Ohio Valley.

Dry weather prevailed across the rest of the nation, but skies were cloudy in many areas, including South Carolina, Georgia, Texas and Arizona.

Earlier in the day, fog hovered over the Mississippi Valley, western sections of the lower Ohio Valley, the southern and central Rocky Mountains region and parts of California.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

BEE SMART

The Reporter-Telegram will sponsor the 1991 Regional Spelling Bee April 6 at Midland College.

School spelling champions from Midland, Martin, Glasscock and Upton counties will compete for the top prize of an all-expenses-paid trip to the National Spelling Bee in Washington, D.C.

This daily column on words, their spellings, meanings and origins will be published through March 30. These words are typical of those used in bees but may not necessarily be used in competition.

bel' fre

belfry (noun) — A "belfry" today is associated with a steeple or cupola, which houses a bell, but the original definition of belfry had a less peaceful meaning. Belfry is derived from ancient Greek, "pyrgos phoretos," which meant a portable siege tower used to attack walled cities. Soldiers would wheel these towers up to the wall and then deploy infantry over the battlements. In Old French it became "berfrei," meaning "that which watches over peace." The word was adopted into English and was eventually modified to "belfray" because of the connection between towers and bells.

line for Iraq to withdraw from Kuwait or face possible attack.

"I have always said that I am neither optimistic or pessimistic but always hopeful. I could not have been a secretary-general if I was not hopeful," Perez de Cuellar told reporters in Baghdad.

Asked if there would be war, he responded:

"It is a question, if you believe in God, only God knows. If you don't believe in God, who knows."

Perez de Cuellar said he could not give details of the talks but would inform the U.N. Security Council of the Iraqi position when he meets with the council in New York today.

"I can say that I have a very good idea of their position and I represented some ideas of my own, all in the sense of finding a peaceful solution to this problem," he said. Perez de Cuellar had said Saturday he carried no specific proposals to Saddam.

The U.N. chief, who arrived in Paris early Monday on a flight from Baghdad, was to meet with President Francois Mitterrand later in the morning and then leave for New York.

Luxembourg Foreign Minister Jacques Poos, who holds the rotating presidency of the European Community, was reportedly to fly to Paris to meet with Perez de Cuellar before a Monday meeting of EC foreign ministers in Luxembourg.

Talking to reporters upon his arrival at Le Bourget airport north of Paris, Perez de Cuellar was asked whether he felt there would be war or peace. "Both possibilities are unfortunately still open. Peace is still a possibility, and war is still a possibility," he said.

The Iraqi leader, speaking after the talks, said any last-minute peace initiative would be up to the Americans "because they are the ones now raising the slogan of war."

In the remarks to Iraqi media officials, carried by the official Iraqi news agency, Saddam also said that Perez de Cuellar was encouraged to return to Baghdad "if there is a desire to search for the means to peace."

However, in the remarks reported by the BBC, he insisted there must a link to the Palestinian issue. U.S. officials have rejected any tie between the two issues.

French Foreign Minister Roland Dumas said in a television interview in Paris that the world was "a hairsbreadth" from war. He said he might travel to Baghdad depending on what Perez de Cuellar said.

Secretary of State James A. Baker III met with officials in Ankara, Turkey, on Sunday and reportedly discussed use of an air base near the Iraqi border in case of war.

He later flew to a British air base north of London, where he met British Prime Minister John Major. Baker said he was "troubled" by Soviet military action in Lithuania but that it would not affect military action in the Persian Gulf.

"It is desirable to move sooner rather than later," he added.

Iraq has said that if attacked by the U.S.-dominated multinational force, it would strike first at Israel. Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Arens said Sunday that Israel would respond to any Iraqi attack, despite reported U.S. appeals for it to exercise restraint.

Washington has reportedly urged restraint because it wants to keep together the alliance against Iraq, which invaded Kuwait on Aug. 2. Arab states such as Saudi Arabia, Syria and Egypt are part of that alliance.

SOVIETS: Bush condemns Kremlin's crackdown should not affect the administration's Persian Gulf policy.

Bush said he did not know whether President Mikhail S. Gorbachev had ordered the Soviet tanks and paratroopers to storm the Lithuanian television station in Vilnius, with a reported loss of 13 lives. He said Gorbachev had assured him in a telephone call on Friday that he wanted a peaceful solution.

"I am concerned about the internal affairs there. And (Gorbachev) himself is very much concerned about that. But let's hope there will be a return to peace, no more use of force and that they can peacefully negotiate their differences," said Bush.

Others in the administration and Congress expressed concern about how the crackdown might change warmer relations between Moscow and the West.

"This crackdown certainly jeopardizes the capacity of the Soviet Union to continue to receive support from ... Western Europe and the United States," White House Chief of Staff John Sununu said on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation."

And Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell said "This brutality could seriously harm recent progress made in U.S.-Soviet relations,"

"It is a sharp break with the general pattern since Gorbachev took power and it is deeply disturbing," said National Security Adviser Brent Scowcroft.

"Violence is incompatible with the solution to this problem, it's incompatible with perestroika and it's incompatible with the move of U.S.-Soviet relations toward partnership," Scowcroft said on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press."

Scowcroft likened the action to the Soviet tanks that crushed the Hungarian revolution in 1956 — a crackdown that occurred during the Suez crisis, just as the growing turmoil in the Baltics has been overshadowed by the showdown with Saddam Hussein's army in Kuwait.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney, who was skeptical two years ago about Gorbachev's chances for survival, said if the Soviet leader "has decided to resort to force to maintain control over the Baltic republics, to let the tanks rolls if you will, that clearly sends a very terrible signal about the prospects for future democratization and reform of the Soviet Union."

He was speaking on ABC-TV's "This Week with David Brinkley."

The Baltic states, forced into the Soviet Union against their will in 1940, declared their independence last year and sparked secessionist moves in Georgia and other Soviet republics.

The United States, which never recognized the forcible incorporation of Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia into the U.S.S.R., has defended their right to self-determination while counseling both Baltic and Kremlin leaders to show restraint and negotiate a peaceful outcome.

Bush and Gorbachev discussed the Baltic situation just last Friday in a telephone conversation that dealt primarily with the gulf crisis. Bush also saw the Soviet ambassador twice Friday.

Bush last month agreed to provide the Soviets $1 billion in food credits to help Gorbachev meet shortages and pull the ailing superpower through the winter.

The United States has counted on the Soviet Union for key support in marshaling the international response to Iraq's invasion of Kuwait.

Although the Soviets haven't sent troops or ships to support the international forces arrayed in Saudi Arabia and the gulf, they offered pivotal support in the United Nations Security Council for anti-Iraq resolutions, including the one threatening to use force if Saddam doesn't pull out of Kuwait by Tuesday.

PRAYERS: Worshipers seek divine help to avoid war

(From 1A)

New York's Roman Catholic Cardinal John J. O'Connor, participating in the nationwide prayer for peace, recalled watching five men die in Vietnam and said it has haunted him since talk of war in the Persian Gulf began.

"War is not inevitable. Peace and honor and justice is possible. We must pray like we never prayed before and let us pray with our deepest sincerity," he said during Mass at St. Patrick's Cathedral.

In California, faithful turned out at churches of all denominations, including a large gathering at St. Vibiana's Roman Catholic Church in downtown Los Angeles. In Redondo Beach, 2,000 parishioners attended Mass at St. Lawrence Martyr Catholic Church.

"Inspire their decision so that the crisis in the Middle East is resolved peacefully and all peoples of the world learn to walk in ways of justice, love and peace," the Rev. Michael Lenihan prayed, referring to President Bush and Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein.

"Bring us all, oh Lord, to our senses," prayed the Rev. Don Adickes, a former Army chaplain and retired colonel, as he closed services at St. Luke's Lutheran Church in the Dallas suburb of Richardson.

"War is a stupid, foolish irresponsible solution to problems among nations," Catholic Bishop Paul Dudley said during mass at St. Joseph's Cathedral in Sioux Falls, S.D. "Violence is never a solution."

Pope John Paul II said in Rome Sunday that world leaders should not give up on a peaceful solution to the gulf crisis and pressed for an international conference to discuss all Middle East problems.

"It is an appeal that I direct to all interested nations so that they organize, on their part, a peace conference that contributes to resolving all the problems of peaceful co-existence in the Middle East," John Paul said.

At the Bible Church of Little Rock, Ark., the congregation paused in silent prayer after the Rev. Jeff Kinley told them: "The threat of war seems inevitable."

Kinley urged his congregation to besiege God with prayer.

"We see the storm clouds gathering. None of us understands ... how you will use the coming week in your plan for the nations, but God we know this — that our hope is in you," he said.

The First Baptist Church of Olympia, Wash., added prayer services Monday and Tuesday. Sunday morning, the Rev. Robert Reid stood at the pulpit and waved the church bulletin, which contained a list of prayer requests for family and friends in the Mideast. There were 23 names listed.

"We're not talking about sending troops to the Middle East. We're talking about John, Rowdy, Charles, David and Ralph," Reid said. "Be in prayer for them, if you will."

In Chicago, the Rev. Barry Moriarty asked Catholic parishioners at St. Vincent's to pray for peace. "The reality is that we the people at the beginning of a new year find ourselves moving toward destruction, moving towards carnage, moving toward a loss of lives," Moriarty said.

"The hour is indeed midnight," said the Rev. Sheldon W. Bennett at the historic United First Parish Church Unitarian in Quincy, Mass., where presidents John Adams and John Quincy Adams were lifelong members.

"The ethical dilemma we as religious men and women must deal with is how to realize the ideal of love in the midst of the struggle for justice," he said.

At synagogues, concern for Israel dominated sermons. Rabbi Steve Weiss of Ahavath Achim Synagogue in Atlanta on Saturday compared Iraqi President Saddam Hussein to the pharaoh of Egypt who enslaved the Jews centuries ago.

VOTE: Yearlong battles come to a head Saturday

Drawing on language from the Declaration of Independence, the proposed preamble to the charter states: "All members of the human family, regardless of age, development, physical or mental condition, race, or national origin, are created equal and are endowed by their creator with the inalienable rights to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. Human life begins at conception and continues until natural death."

The referendum is the latest salvo by an association of anti-abortion groups whose operations center is a two-story office building provided by attorney Cliff Zarsky. Zarsky, a former councilman, was sentenced Wednesday to 30 days in jail for trespassing after he was arrested protesting at a clinic where abortions are performed.

Another ally is Tracy Cassidy, chairwoman of the Human Family Committee, which sponsored the petition drive last summer to force the vote. She acknowledges that while the preamble would have no legal weight, it would give legal recognition to "unborn children."

"Our politicians ... will see that the pro-life population is something to be taken seriously," she said.

Gracida was one of the first to sign the petition drive, and the bishop has urged parishioners to support it. In less than two weeks, the petition obtained more than the required 6,500 signatures.

Moses said he formed his Body of Christ Rescue group after losing the support of religious leaders in Austin. He was convicted three times there of criminal trespassing for blocking access to clinics offering abortions.

One of his first actions in Corpus Christi was to organize a "rescue." Twelve people were arrested for trying to keep patients and staff out of one of the city's two abortion clinics.

Moses was not arrested then, nor in more than a dozen local clinic blockades in which he has participated, and police have arrested only a handful of his protesters.

Police Chief Henry Garrett said only those who assault police officers or force their way into the clinics will be taken into custody. Mass arrests would only give the protesters more publicity, he said.

Elva Bustamante, who formally was excommunicated in November by Gracida because she directs the city's New Women's Clinic, said religious rather than civic forces are the driving force behind the referendum. More than 100 abortions are performed at the clinic each month.

Mrs. Stukenberg said she found it more than coincidental that anti-abortion TV commercials coordinated by the bishop began airing about a week ago.

The commercials promote the 5-month-old Gabriel Project, in which 50 Protestant and Catholic churches offer housing and help with medical care and other expenses to keep women with unwanted pregnancies from having abortions.

Mrs. Stukenberg said the amendment also could open the city to a spate of lawsuits to test its legal weight.

Saying human life "continues until natural death" could bring lawsuits from people who fear their "living wills" asking not to be kept alive by artificial means might be invalidated by the charter, she said.

are a lot more stringent than for other plants," Ramsey said. "It's a lot tougher than going through an airport. You have to have security clearance, and the whole plant is surrounded by fencing and barbed wire."

Ramsey said none of TU's power plants has received threats.

Stan Garrison, TU Electric customer service manager for the west region, said power plants in Midland are not on alert. "Nothing is happening at this time," he said.

DFW also has been working with federal officials to safeguard its facility, Dealey said.

"Even before the Iraqi invasion (of Kuwait), DFW Airport had a reputation of working closely with local, state and airline officials to maintain a high quality of airport and airline security," Dealey said.

The increased security is not visible now, but that will change if war starts in the Persian Gulf, Dealey said.

"In the event hostilities break out, there are levels of increased law enforcement that will become quite visible," he said. "The most noticeable change initiated will probably be more uniformed police in security areas."

Also, only passengers will be allowed past security checkpoints and some traffic in the terminals may be restricted, Dealey said.

If the airport is threatened, security checkpoints may be set up near entrance toll booths on the highway leading to airport terminals, he said, adding that the airport has received no such threats.

Saudargas: We're abandoned

Foreign minister ready to create in-exile regime

N.Y. Times News Service

WARSAW, Poland — Lithuania's foreign minister on Sunday bitterly accused Western nations of abandoning his country and said he was ready to create a government-in-exile if his republic's elected authorities were ousted by force.

Saudargas

"If this democracy is killed now, I doubt if anyone in the West will have the right to pronounce the word democracy again," the minister, Algirdas Saudargas, said during an early-evening news conference.

Saudargas contended that the United States had sacrificed Lithuania to maintain the unity of the international coalition against Iraq, which has received support from the Soviet Union. "We are warning that at the time when the world is waiting for the war in the Persian Gulf, in Lithuania the Second World War has not yet ended," he said in a separate, somber appearance on Sunday night on Polish television.

"We have had no influence on events in Moscow for a long time now," Saudargas said at the news conference. "The West did have influence, and these naive games played by the West resulted in what we have in Lithuania now — all these sufferings.

Police, protesters clash in Bucharest

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — Police and protesters clashed in the capital Sunday after a peaceful rally by about 8,000 people supporting strikes in the western city of Timisoara.

Club-swinging police waded into a crowd of about 200 demonstrators blocking traffic in University Square, the city's main intersection, and some of the demonstrators threw home-made gasoline bombs. No arrests were reported.

The police attacked several journalists covering the event, witnesses said. No one was seriously injured.

On Saturday, in a similar clash at the same location, police severely clubbed Agence France-Presse photographer Andre Iliescu.

Peru corruption could cost

N.Y. Times News Service

LIMA, Peru — With Peru facing a March 1 deadline for the possible cutoff of approximately $100 million in American anti-drug aid, officials here are working to fashion a new strategy to cut exports of the raw material of cocaine.

Despite millions of dollars in American aid money spent over the last three years to eradicate coca bushes, Peru's cultivation increased by 25 percent in the same period, reaching roughly 450,000 acres at present.

Charging that Peruvian corruption has undermined eradication and interdiction efforts, some American drug officials are arguing in Washington that President Bush should not certify to Congress on March 1 that Peru is cooperating in the drug war.

Without this certification, Peru would fall into a sort of bureaucratic outlaw status.

Peru would lose $100 million in United States economic and military aid scheduled for 1991. By law, the United States would have to vote against loans for Peru in multilateral banks.

WORLD in brief

Talks between Greece, Albania fail to end crisis

TIRANA, Albania — Talks between Greek and Albanian leaders failed Sunday to resolve the crisis that has led to an exodus to Greece of more than 6,000 Albanians.

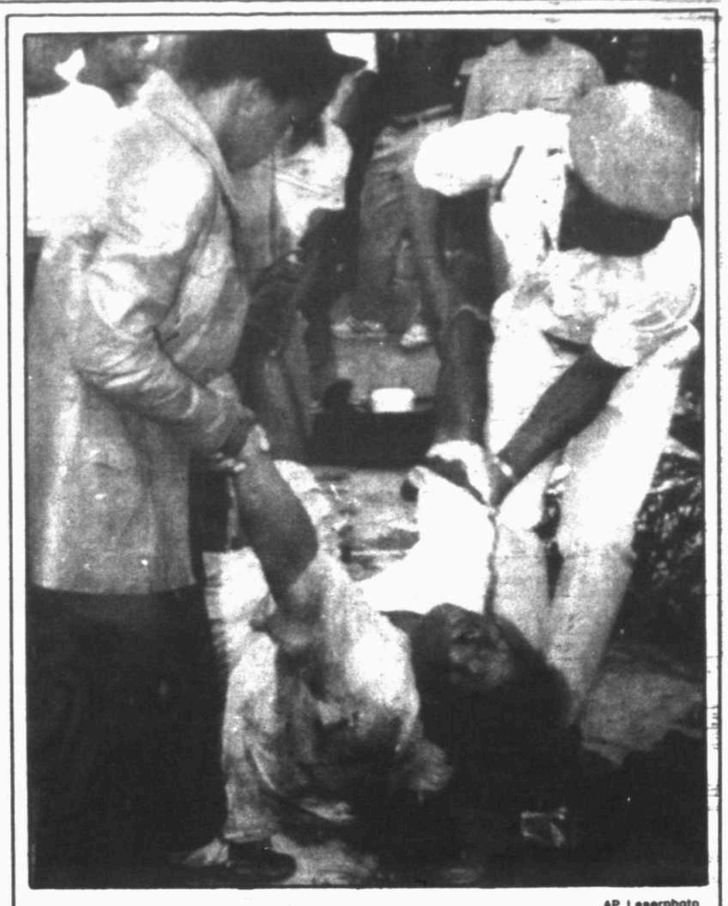

The differences were apparently so serious that Prime Minister Constantine Mitsotakis of Greece, the first Western leader to visit Albania since the establishment of the orthodox Communist regime in 1944, declared he was uncertain whether his visit "will bring better or worse developments."

The Greek prime minister's two-day visit to Albania was intended to reach an agreement ending the tension over the flood into Greece of Albanian refugees, most of them ethnic Greeks.

Serrano shakes up army

GUATEMALA CITY — In an effort to give his government a free hand at negotiating with leftist guerrillas while they retain their weapons, President-elect Jorge Serrano is replacing a hard-line general as defense minister.

Serrano, who will be inaugurated tomorrow (Jan. 14), said he had decided to name Gen. Luis Mendoza as defense minister, replacing Gen. Juan Bolanos.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

MONDAY, JANUARY 14, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You will want to make several important changes in your lifestyle now. Go for it! New insights result in a reordering of priorities in April. A rewarding romance will greatly influence your outlook on a wide variety of subjects by June. Do what you can to increase the value of your property and investments by September. A personality conflict with a difficult colleague should not be allowed to develop into open enmity next fall. Play a waiting game.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: Dr. Albert Schweitzer, actress Faye Dunaway, actor Jason Bateman, journalist Andy Rooney.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your work associates will fulfill their promises. Teamwork enables you to accomplish twice as much in half the time! Pursue community activities or other outside interests.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You get a second chance to achieve a career goal. Supportive friends give you inside information that will help you clinch a financial deal. Try to become more organized at home.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Take steps to protect your assets. Someone who has your best interests at heart gives you valuable moral support. A friend with extravagant tastes describes a personal dilemma.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Step up activity in communications today. Now is the ideal time to acquire and transmit information. A work relationship improves when a burden is lifted. A loan could ease household tensions.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Devote more time to fulfilling your family obligations. Make it clear that your mate comes first. Catch up on a backlog of paperwork. A trip could help you cement an important alliance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): The spotlight is on travel and a stimulating personal relationship. Strive to improve the lines of communciation at work. Do not be afraid to move with the times.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Do not let jealousy get the best of you. Hard work is the perfect antidote for depressing thoughts. A positive attitude chases the blues away! Curl up with a good book tonight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Apply yourself to the job at hand and it will not take nearly as long as anticipated. A loan is granted. Get in touch with professionals who can help you achieve a secret goal.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Welcome an opportunity to make important decisions. Romance may have to take a temporary backseat to your career. A letter or message contains a valuable hint.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Calling on the vast resources of other people will help you finish an important project. You are not alone in your desire to change things. A caring mood prevails on the domestic scene.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your special talents could lead to new financial benefits today. To truly get ahead, you must meet a challenge. Help a teen-ager who has a tricky problem. Health items are priced right.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your talents receive wider recognition now. Your business associates rely heavily on your decisions. Revise your personal plans to accommodate your loved ones' needs. Cash flow resumes.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠K9 ♡AQ ◇KJ5 ♣K107652
What is your opening bid?
A.—If you choose to open one club, what do you intend to rebid over partner's probable major-suit response? Neither one no trump nor two clubs expresses the strength of the hand, and two no trump is a distinct overbid. A jump to three clubs on such a weak suit is a poor choice. You can avoid this dilemma by opening one no trump. Change a low club to a low spade and we wouldn't even have posed this problem.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQ7 ♡AK ◇AK76 ♣9754
Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one club.
What action do you take?
A.—It's a choice between double and one no trump. While we know a lot of players who would bid one no trump with this holding because of shortness in the majors, our preference is for double. The hand is too rich in prime values not to probe for a suit contract.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQ7 ♡AK ◇AK76 ♣9754
The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
1 ♣	Dbl	Pass	1 ♡
Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—Still no good solution. One no trump would play from the wrong side; two clubs could launch the auction into orbit without a safe landing place; pass is ugly. The least of evils seems to be a bid of two diamonds, which describes the strength of your hand and only slightly distorts your suit length.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AK ♡762 ◇AQJ6 ♣AKQ10
What is your opening bid?
A.—We know all about having all four suits stopped to open two no trump or its equivalent—until we picked up this hand. Since any other opening is even worse, our choice is two no trump if we play 22-24 points, two clubs followed by two no trump if our range is weaker.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AQ762 ♡832 ◇K984 ♣6
The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
Pass	Pass	Pass	3 ◇
Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—First, let's dispel all thoughts that partner is preempting—he would have thrown in the cards with a weak hand. His jump must be based on sound values, but with shortness in the majors; thus a desire to make it difficult for the opponents to enter the auction. Our vote goes to five diamonds, with no guarantee it will make.

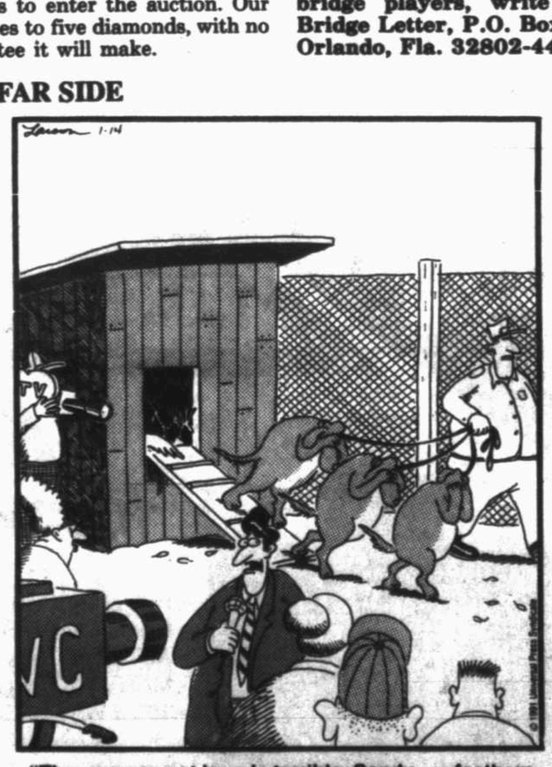

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠95 ♡J62 ◇K762 ♣A853
The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
1 ◇	Pass	Pass	1 ♠
Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—In the balancing position, partner's suit bid doesn't promise much—with a really good hand, he would have reopened with a double. Therefore, you have nowhere near enough to venture one no trump. Pass, and see what develops.

Rose may help inner-city kids get on, off their school buses

CINCINNATI — Pete Rose begins his stint as an elementary school gym teacher's assistant this week as part of his sentence for federal tax offenses.

Rose

Rose, 49, was to report Monday morning at Heberle Elementary School. He is expected to assist gym teachers and could be assigned to supervise students boarding and disembarking buses.

The former Cincinnati Reds manager, baseball's all-time hits leader, will work rotating assignments at Heberle and four other inner-city elementary schools until the academic year ends.

Rose, banned from baseball for misconduct including alleged gambling, will live for the next three months at Talbert House, a halfway house to which he was released Jan. 7 after serving five months in the federal prison camp in Marion, Ill.

"Obviously, the next three months will be a lot more fun than the last five," Rose said last week. "I'm really looking forward to working with the kids."

U.S. District Judge S. Arthur Spiegel last year ordered Rose to perform 1,000 hours of community service as part of a sentence for two felony counts of failing to report taxable income.

LOS ANGELES — Actress Sally Field says she knows her new film, "Not Without My Daughter," could kindle strong feelings against Iran.

Field

"Is it possible to come out of this movie without some anti-Iranian sentiment? I'd have to say, 'no,'" she said.

Miss Field stars in the film as Betty Mahmoody, an American who escapes from Iran where she is held against her will with her daughter, played by Sheila Rosenthal.

"If you watch the movie closely, however, you'll see that while the Iranians are the villains, the heroes in the movie are also Iranians," she said.

"People can't believe a white guy would grow up like I did, but I did grow up in the streets. That's where I learned to rap. That's where I learned to be-bop. That's where I learned to dance. If you can't see that plain as day, you're blind. . . . Because the majority of white people do not have much rhythm."

Rapper Vanilla Ice, denying recent charges that he made up his street-smart past to appeal to black audiences. Ice appeared on "Good Morning America" on Friday.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — A judge has refused country music singer Lynn Anderson's request to disqualify her ex-husband's attorney in a court battle over custody of the couple's two children.

Anderson

Circuit Judge Muriel Robinson Rice declined Friday to bar Jim Doramus as attorney for Miss Anderson's former husband, Harold "Spook" Stream III.

Miss Anderson's lawyer wanted Doramus disqualified from the case because he was a partner in the same Nashville law firm that represented the singer in an 1983 custody dispute with Stream.

Rice ruled there was no proof Doramus was involved in the 1983 custody case.

Clock's ticking for Bush, Hussein

President George Bush and Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein have bristled and threatened, postured and played to the TV cameras, and even hinted at negotiating a way around war. But now the hours are ticking away toward the Jan. 15th United Nations deadline for Hussein to pull his military forces out of Kuwait and there is little hope left that war can be averted.

This test of wills has proven, if nothing else, how fragile peace can be and how subversive can be the dogs of war. It all seems so senseless to rational people. One is left asking is there nothing than can be done to avoid this war? Did we learn nothing from Korea or Vietnam about how to navigate around the precipice of war? Do these 400,000 American lives have to be jeopardized and hundreds of thousands more back in the United States disrupted? Why? What is gained?

Some would say there are ample justifications — from both perspectives — for the United States and Iraq to be in a facedown over Iraq's invasion of Kuwait on Aug. 2. The long history of warfare in the Persian Gulf means that Iraq's claim to Kuwait as its "Province 19" is ostensibly valid from the Iraqi view. Yet President Bush has the United States' interests in mind, as well as the interests of the rest of the industrialized world, in asserting that Hussein's oil grab of Kuwait cannot stand. Neither can his quest for the nuclear bomb.

Beyond that fact is Iraq's proximity to Israel, and the Iraqi assertion that if war comes, it will launch an attack against the Jewish state. Ties between the United States and Israel date to 1949 when the United Nations created Israel supposedly to resolve age-old warring. It's quite clear that the move by the United Nations to end the warring was far less than effective.

But if there is a way around the senseless shedding of blood, it must be attempted now by both Bush and Hussein before the first shot is fired. They should resume the talks broken off last week, aimed at avoiding warfare. Reason, not violence, must rule the post-Cold War world. But they must act quickly.

The clock is ticking.

LETTERS

Outlying counties need to do more

May I amend my letter in regard to Midland Memorial Hospital and its indigent fund? In the letter I told of a patient and his bankruptcy which I attributed to his bill as a cancer patient at the hospital. Checking further into that particular situation it appears that the hospital account may not have been significant in that case.

Regarding the indigent care program, which I am told is the only account charged to the taxpayers at this time, it would appear that the hospital is doing a generally good job with indigent patients. I am told that the cutoff point for an individual with no family, who has no insurance and who appears to have little prospect of paying his way at the hospital, is an annual income of $7,250. Though 30 years ago that was a very good income, with the federal deficit-created, declining dollar of today, it is not very much.

I also learned that even with Medicare, the hospital loses on most patients, due to federal and state guidelines. Even when a patient has both Medicare and private supplemental coverage, the federal-state ceilings only allow so much for particular care under some hundreds of mandated categories for types of treatments.

We should possibly go ahead with the proposed tax increase for now. But it would not be wrong for the hospital board and administration to make concerted efforts to get other counties of the Permian Basin to do more on paying the way of their indigent citizens who come to Midland Memorial Hospital. The various hospitals of the region attempt to work together on specialization of patient care, referring patients between hospitals — and paying for them — so as to get the best care. But on indigent patients who come directly to Midland Memorial Hospital our board's legal opinion has been that there is no way to require that an indigent patient must have any residency time in Midland County before receiving care at Midland Memorial Hospital. Thus indigent patients can claim Midland County as their homes just after arriving here.

It would not seem wrong to encourage indigent patients to pay what they can and when they can, though not making this at all a requisite for their care.

It would also seem well for the hospital board, or boards, to make continuing efforts to inform the public fully on financial operations, plans, and needs of the hospital. The people of Midland County have the capacity to know and to understa[illegible]

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, Jan. 14, the 14th day of 1991. There are 351 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Jan. 14, 1784, the United States ratified the peace treaty with England that ended the Revolutionary War.

On this date:

In 1639, the first constitution of Connecticut — known as the "Fundamental Orders" — was adopted at a meeting in Hartford.

In 1742, English astronomer Edmond Halley, who observed the comet that now bears his name, died at the age of 85.

In 1898, the Rev. Charles L. Dodgson — better known as author Lewis Carroll — died less than two weeks before his 66th birthday.

In 1914, Ford Motor Company greatly improved its assembly-line operation by employing an endless chain to pull each chassis along.

In 1943, during World War II, President Franklin D. Roosevelt and British Prime Minister Winston Churchill began a conference in Casablanca.

In 1952, NBC's "Today" show premiered, featuring Dave Garroway as host, with Jack Lescoulie and newscaster Jim Fleming.

In 1978, the body of former Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey lay in state at the U.S. Capitol, one day after his death.

VA ill-prepared for war's casualties

WASHINGTON — If war erupts in the Persian Gulf, those who play numbers games in the Pentagon say as many as 30,000 American soldiers could come home in boxes. Among the living could be 10,000 injured soldiers with serious head wounds. They will be given a hospital bed and precious little else.

Anderson

The U.S. military, which promises lifetime medical care for veterans, has no head-injury rehabilitation units in its hospitals. There will be no therapy for the impairments that plague a soldier with Iraqi lead in his or her skull.

The common American health insurance policy will cover head-injury rehabilitation for civilians, but a soldier who risks life in the desert must simply lie in bed and hope for recovery.

Our associates Jim Lynch and Paul Parkinson examined this gap in medical coverage offered to American soldiers.

The Pentagon is inexcusably behind the times. Private hospitals have had head-injury programs for years — long enough to persuade insurers to finance the care. But the Pentagon remains skeptical, calling the therapy "unproven," and often refusing to pay for it unless that therapy will return a soldier to active duty.

Thousands of Vietnam veterans are victims of this policy. Many had their heads patched up as though doctors were treating broken ankles, and then were sent back to active duty, some with a handful of pain killers.

Richard Shannon was shot in the head in Vietnam in 1968. When he returned to active duty, "I couldn't even remember how to spit shine my boots." Shannon was placed on kitchen duty and dropped in rank. Finally he was booted out of the Army and told to check into a Veterans Administration hospital. There he got drugs to control seizures. He lived for years on a $160-a-month disability check from the government.

In 1983, Shannon got a good look at his medical files. He learned that a piece of his brain had been surgically removed 15 years earlier as part of the initial treatment for the bullet wound. "If they had just helped to re-teach me to do simple things," he told us. "I'm not nuts."

The VA agreed to re-evaluate Shannon's case and gave him compensation for 100 percent medical disability.

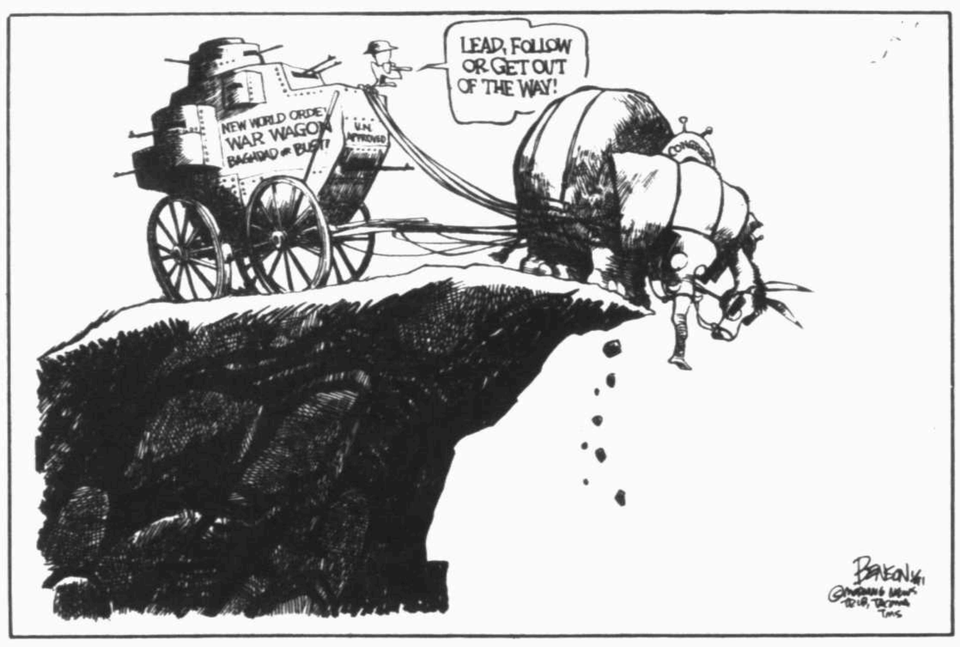

Other Vietnam vets are still trying to get access to modern therapy. Thomas Murphy survived a bullet in his head during his first combat mission in Vietnam. The only "therapy" he got was a psychiatric drug called Haloperidol. Not until 1987 did the VA agree to pay for therapy from a private head-trauma program.

Murphy was making progress, and then the VA told him it planned to cut off financing for the therapy last fall. Only after Sen. Bob Kerrey, D-Neb., and Rep. Thomas Carper, D-Del., intervened on his behalf and the Vietnam Veterans of America organization protested, did the VA change its mind and agree to continue paying, at least for the time being. Murphy doesn't know when the rug will be pulled out from under him again.

"When soldiers join the military, they think they have cradle-to-grave medical coverage, but they don't," said Dr. Andres Salazar, director of the Vietnam Head Injury Study.

Not only does the government shortchange its vets with head injuries, but for the past 10 years, federal funding of head-injury research in general has been almost non-existent.

The bright spot on the horizon is Dr. James Holsinger, the new chief medical director of the VA. He has put head-injury rehabilitation facilities on the top of his priority list, but it will take years to bring the VA up to speed. Holsinger says that for a Persian Gulf war, he could supply 17,000 beds within 72 hours. The head injury victims will be taken care of, but not as well as the VA should be able to treat them a few years into the future.

MINI-EDITORIAL — The people who make Virginia Slims cigarettes try to spiff up their image by sponsoring a tennis tour, but if the players used the product, the tournament would have to be renamed the "Cancer Classic." No one is fooled by this bit of public relations hooey. But it is disconcerting to see the National Park Service being part of the hooey. The Park Service has agreed to turn over its tennis courts in Washington D.C.'s beautiful Rock Creek Park for a 1991 Virginia Slims tournament. The national parks are supposed to symbolize America at its healthiest and most invigorated. Banners advertising cigarettes have no place in that picture.

What you didn't know about the gulf crisis

One day the Persian Gulf Crisis or Persian Gulf War, whichever, will join the intellectual debris that passes for popular history and show up in games and TV shows in the form of trivia questions.

To help prepare you, I've assembled a few miscellaneous facts and other intellectual odds and ends.

Reese

For example, who referred to American servicemen as their white slaves? Answer a high-ranking official from one of the Gulf Arab states. The quotation is to be found in the Dec. 28 issue of the Wall Street Journal on page 4 in a story by Geraldine Brooks and Tony Horwitz. Here it is:

"You think I want to send my teenage son to die for Kuwait?" asks a senior Gulf official. He chuckles and adds, "We have our white slaves from America to do that."

So think President Bush's faithful allies.

Next question is which of the president's sons has a financial stake in the Persian Gulf which would probably be lost if Saddam Hussein had his druthers?

Answer is the oldest son, George Bush Jr., who is a director, a large stockholder, and a $120,000-a-year consultant to Harken Energy Corp. of Dallas. In 1986, Harken Energy merged with Bush's Midland oil company, Spectrum 7 Exploration Corp. In January of 1990, Harken signed an agreement with Bahrain, about 200 miles southeast of Kuwait, for the exclusive right to explore for, develop, produce, transport and market oil and gas throughout most of Bahrain's offshore territories.

At the time, Forbes magazine, in an article which never mentioned Bush, quoted an analyst as saying, "This is an incredible deal, unbelievable for this small company." You can thank a crack reporter, Pete Brewton of the Houston Post, for uncovering this fact.

Now, which oil-producing country took care not to patronize the Rockefeller empire banks which, according to Prof. Murray Rothbard, financed George Bush's first oil company?

Answer, Iraq.

Which Arab leader, in February 1990, advised fellow Arab leaders not to allow the United States to dominate their oil production and to invest their money in the burgeoning new democracies of Eastern Europe, rather than in Western banks?

Answer, Saddam Hussein.

Which Arab family owns a large chunk of British Petroleum and also keeps enormous and most welcome deposits at Rockfeller-oriented Chase Manhattan and Citibank?

Answer, the Al Sabar family of Kuwait.

Which former close associate of George Bush has participated in a windfall profit from the Persian Gulf crisis?

Answer, Craig Fuller, former chief of staff to Vice President George Bush, who now is a big shot with Hill & Knowlton, a high-powered public relations firm. In just five months or so, Hill & Knowlton received $5.64 million from the Kuwaitis to carry on a public relations campaign on behalf of the ex-ruling family, the Al Sabars. I wonder how they got the account.

Finally, here's an amusing anecdote being told in Arab circles. In the last of a series of meetings between Iraqi and Kuwaitis over the disputes about oil and loans and boundary, the Kuwaitis insulted the Iraqi delegation and among other things said, "Next time, you'll see us in Kuwait City." This was an insult, implying the Iraqis would have to come to the Kuwaitis and plead for another meeting.

When the delegation reported this to Saddam Hussein, he said: "Okay, go see them in Kuwait City — tonight."

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Sometimes lies take on a life of their own

The story I am about to tell has to do with adultery. Let me say, however, that by telling this story, I am in no way condoning adultery.

Adultery is one of the major-league thou-shalt-nots, and adultery can be the cause of major-league pain.

Grizzard

But it does happen, and one of the things that is always on the mind of a person who cheats on his or her spouse is, "What would I do if I got caught?" There are several theories of how to handle such a frightening experience.

One says never to admit anything, no matter how much evidence there is against you — the old it's-my-story-and-I'm-sticking-to-it routine.

Another idea is to put the blame on the accuser.

Say, "I wouldn't have the need to go to somebody else if you didn't come to bed every night with your hair in curlers."

Or, in a case where the wife is the cheater, "I wouldn't have the need to go to somebody else if you would bathe more often."

I thought I had heard all the ways to deal with being caught until I heard the following story.

The two individuals who told it swear it is true, and I have no reason to doubt them.

Here it goes: This man lived with his wife in one town but had a branch office, for which he was responsible, in another town, a four-hour drive from his home.

Four or five times a month, he would go to the other town on business, and on one of his trips, he became involved with another woman. After that, his trips to the other town became more frequent and lasted longer. His wife became suspicious.

So the man left one day by plane on another of his trips.

The next day, his wife got into her car and drove the four hours to the other town. She did some excellent detective work and came up with the name and address of her husband's lover.

She drove to the apartment and knocked on the door. Her husband answered it. There they stood, face-to-face.

The man never hesitated. Without speaking a word, he slammed the door behind him, locking it and leaving all his possessions. He ran past his wife, got into his rental car and drove away.

He went directly to the airport and caught a flight home. He ditched the clothes he was wearing and changed. When his wife returned home hours later, he asked indignantly, "Where in the hell have you been?" She said, "You've been having an affair. I saw you at your lover's apartment."

He said, "Are you crazy? I got back home this morning. How could you have seen me there when I was here?" The man stuck to his story, never wavering. According to the people who passed the tale along to me, the man's wife, probably wanting desperately to believe him, finally accepted his innocence. He never went back to see his lover, and the marriage continued.

If you are currently having an affair, you might want to store this away because you're eventually going to get caught. All who cheat eventually get caught.

It's God's way of telling you to find another hobby.

PERSIAN GULF CRISIS

One step closer, Israel shows air power

RAMAT DAVID AIR FORCE BASE, Israel (AP) — Moving further onto a war footing, Israel showed off its air power Sunday and renewed its vow to respond if attacked by Iraq.

Thousands of foreigners flew out of Israel, among them 70 wives and children of U.S. diplomats. The army handed out more gas masks in case of an Iraqi chemical weapons attack, and Israelis sealed windows of their homes and stocked up on emergency food supplies.

U.S. Undersecretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger met with Israeli leaders amid reports Washington was urging Israel to stay out of a Persian Gulf war, even if Iraq carries out its threat to attack the Jewish state.

But Israel "made clear to the Americans it maintains its right to act in its defense if it is attacked," a government statement said.

"There is no lack of agreement," between Israel and the United States on the issue, added the statement issued by Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's office.

"Israel will never give up its right to decide when and how to react in order to defend ourselves," Health Minister Ehud Olmert, an influential member of Shamir's government, said earlier.

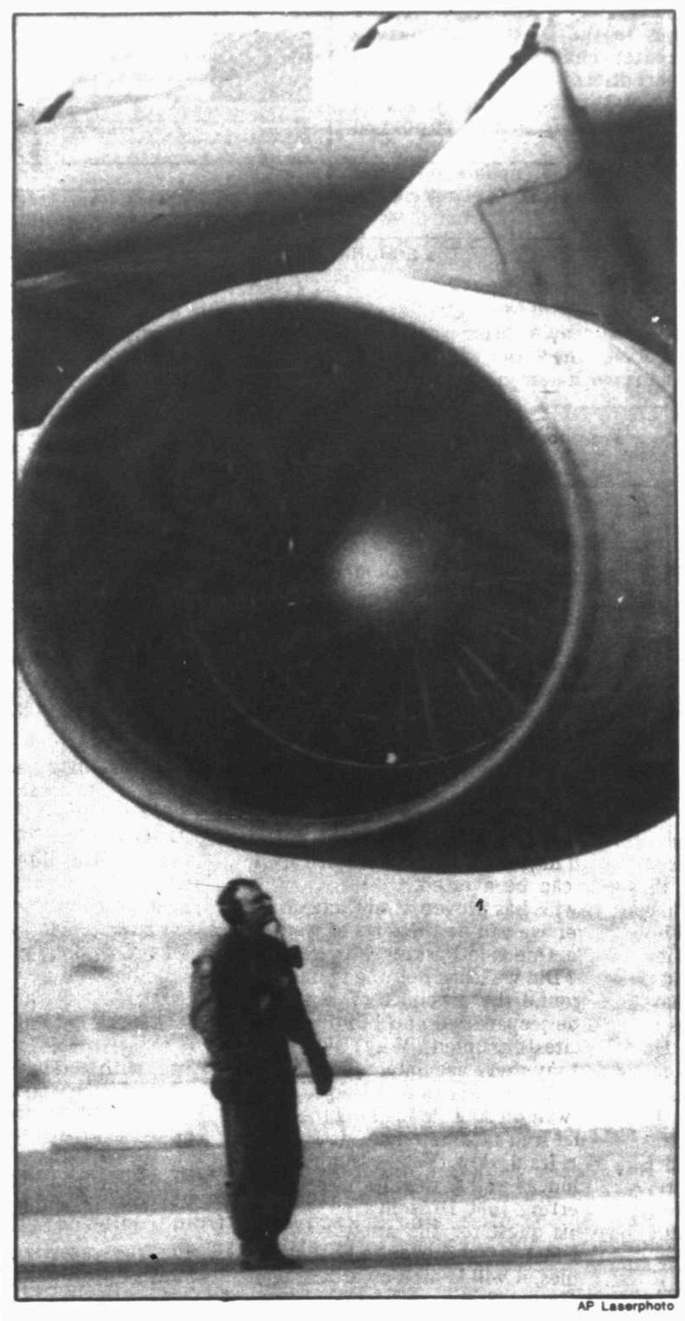

Labor party leader Yitzhak Rabin, a former general and prime minister, said Israeli retaliation need not be automatic. The best solution would be for the U.S. air force to flatten missile batteries before Iraq fires a shot, he said.

"We are prepared to defend ourselves and we will give a good account of ourselves," Defense Minister Moshe Arens said. "We are hoping we will not be involved, but if we are attacked we will respond."

Arens spoke to Israeli and foreign reporters who were invited to Ramat David, an air force base in northern Israel, to watch ground crews arm two U.S.-supplied F-16 fighter-bombers.

Working at top speed, the men took less than three minutes to arm each camouflage-painted jet with two Sidewinder air-to-air missiles, a dozen 550-pound bombs and extra fuel for long-range flight.

"We want the citizens to see their air force, which is today in a high state of preparedness and will give the best possible account of itself if we are attacked," Arens said when asked why the event was so heavily publicized.

Leaders give bleak picture of prospects

WASHINGTON (AP) — Saddam Hussein will be "making a tremendous mistake" if he refuses to give up Kuwait next week, President Bush declared Sunday as congressional leaders predicted the nation will unite in war.

Returning to the White House after a day at Camp David, Bush told reporters he had no official word on the talks between Saddam and United Nations Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar.

Asked if he had a message for the American people as he considered sending the nation to war, Bush said: "I tell them the same thing I tell the American people over and over again — I say we've got to do what we have to do."

Bush said it is unclear what Saddam would do as the midnight Tuesday deadline nears. The Iraqi leader Sunday broadcast a radio address is which he pledged to hold tight to Kuwait, which he occupied Aug. 2.

"That doesn't surprise me but they're making a tremendous mistake," Bush told reporters on the White House lawn.

The president summoned his top advisers — Defense Secretary Dick Cheney, National Security Adviser Brent Scowcroft, Gen. Colin Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and Bush's own chief of staff, John Sununu — to the White House Sunday night for a meeting.

Grim mood settles over nation's capital

WASHINGTON — In the capital city of the United States on the chilly, gray weekend just past, there was a feeling of sadness and of the inevitability of war.

Ordinary people seem to think that it may have been the last weekend of peace and that war will come tomorrow at midnight or soon afterward.

"I pray to God we don't have to go to war," said Duwayne Moen, who came home from his own war, in Vietnam, on a January day exactly 20 years ago. "With this guy Saddam Hussein over there I get the feeling, yes, there will be a war.

"I get the impression he does not care for lives. Our lives or his own people.

"Is it worth another war? To protect the American people, yes, yes it is. But not to go to war and kill GIs and walk away with nothing."

Moen, who is 40, had come to Washington from his home in Montevideo, Minn., to visit the Vietnam Veterans Memorial, where the names of 58,132 Americans who never came back from the last war are inscribed.

Thousands take to streets

BONN, Germany (AP) — Tens of thousands of anti-war protesters took to the streets in countries across the world Sunday for a second straight day to demand dialogue and not war in the Persian Gulf.

The demonstrations, from Germany to Turkey to Mauritania, came as U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar met with Saddam Hussein in Baghdad just two days before the U.N. deadline for Iraq to pull out of Kuwait.

In the Bonn diplomatic suburb of Bad Godesberg, about 1,200 demonstrators formed a nearly two-mile human chain linking the U.S. and Iraqi embassies.

"We wanted to link the two major parties that are now starting toward war," said 41-year-old Gerd Greune. "We wanted to link them symbolically and say, 'Please link yourself in non-violence. Violence will not solve any problem.' "

Heart death rates highest in South, lowest in West

NATION

SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP) — Americans in the Deep South have a greater chance of dying from heart disease than Americans west of the Mississippi, the American Heart Association reported Sunday.

In its annual update on heart disease statistics, the association also reported that women, who have nearly as many heart attack deaths as men, are far less likely to receive bypass surgery.

The state with the highest death rates for heart disease was South Carolina, where the rate was 258 deaths per hundred thousand people in 1987. The next highest states were Mississippi, West Virginia, Louisiana and Georgia.

The states with the lowest heart disease death rates were Hawaii, with 160 deaths per hundred thousand people, followed by New Mexico, Colorado, Minnesota, Montana and Arizona.

Michigan and Ohio also had high death rates, and Florida's death rate was among the lowest, the heart association said.

The figures were based on 1987 data, the most recent available, from the government's National Center for Health Statistics.

Authorities disagreed about the meaning of the regional differences.

"These trends have persisted for quite a while and they probably reflect the influences of lifestyles and socioeconomic factors," said Dr. Lewis Kuller of the University of Pittsburgh.

He said the differences could be explained in part by regional variations in cigarette smoking, cholesterol levels, diet, income and education.

Dr. William Kannel of Boston University was skeptical about the meaning of the variations, saying they could be due to differences in the reporting of heart disease deaths.

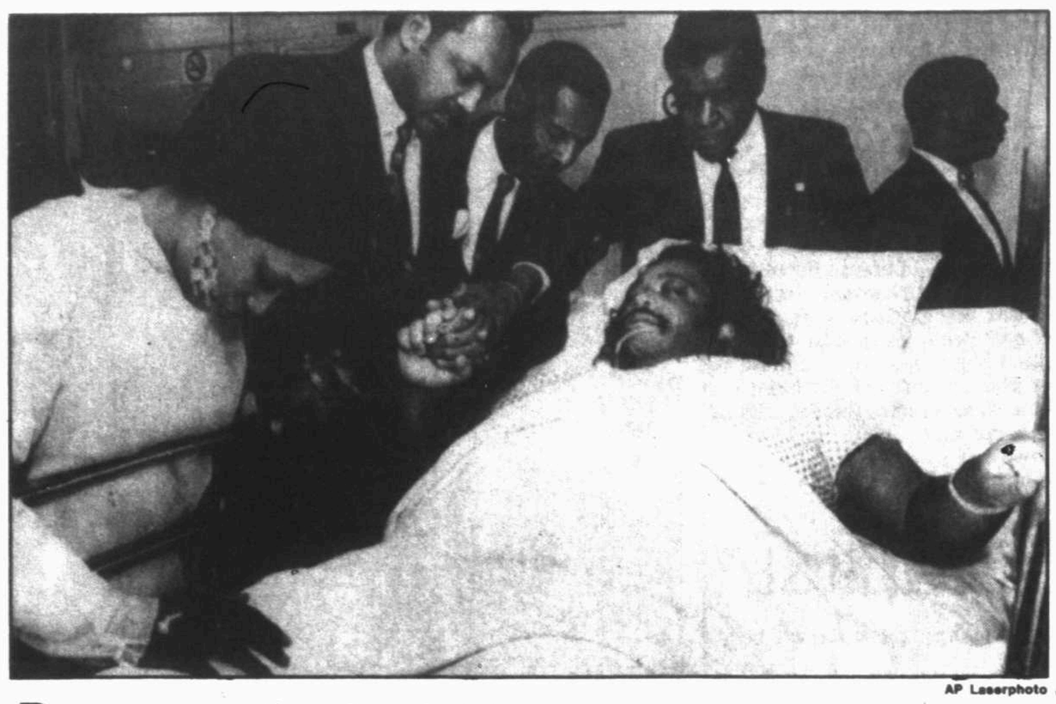

"If cardiovascular mortality truly varies by location, it may be the result of environmental and geographic influences and risk factors," Kannel said. "But no one really knows, and it would be very hard to prove."

American women suffer some 244,000 heart attacks each year, compared to 268,000 for men, the association reported. Yet figures from 1988 show that 83,000 heart bypass operations were done in women, compared to 270,000 in men.

Women who smoke and use birth control pills are 39 times as likely as other women to have heart attacks and 22 times as likely to have strokes, the figures showed.

Overall, however, the heart association reported an encouraging trend in heart disease.

Between 1978 and 1988, the death rate from heart attacks declined 29 percent, while stroke deaths fell by 33.2 percent. Deaths from high blood pressure declined 20 percent.

Gas prices fall due to lower winter demand

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gasoline prices across the nation fell an average of nearly 7 cents at the pump in recent weeks, reflecting the traditionally lower winter demand, a survey released Sunday showed.

The average price for all grades of gasoline at full and self-service stations was 133.43 cents per gallon on Friday, a drop of 6.85 cents since Dec. 21, according to the biweekly Lundberg Survey.

Since Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait, gasoline prices hit a high of 147.09 cents on Oct. 19, up from a pre-invasion price of 117.71 cents a gallon on July 20, said oil industry analyst Trilby Lundberg.

"Combined with the leveling off of year-end demand, about 63 percent of that (post-invasion) price hike has been corrected," Lundberg said in a telephone interview.

The Donald sells Ambassador for $48 million

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Cash-strapped Donald Trump is giving up the historic Ambassador Hotel property where he once boasted plans to build the world's tallest building.

Trump and a group of partners agreed to accept a nearly $48 million deposit the Los Angeles Unified School District had put down as part of a lawsuit to gain the property.

"By withdrawing the deposit, they concede our right to take the property," district attorney Richard K. Mason said. "From our perspective, that is a major victory. It is not a sale but it a concession."

Luke Richards had all of one year's experience in the business of raising animals for the Midland County Livestock Show, but he has learned much in that year.

With a second-place ribbon under his belt from last year's show, the Greenwood Elementary School fourth-grader had his eyes on a first-place finish for his lamb this year.

But the annual show, which ended this past weekend Sunday, has been more than a chance for Luke, 9, to show off his faunal wares.

"It's neat and it's fun," Luke said. "You get to play with other kids and see all the other sheep."

But raising the sheep he entered in the 39th annual show also has been an experience in learning responsibility, he said.

He spent every day for almost four months raising the lamb.

"You've got to take the time with the animals," Luke said. "It's a lot of work."

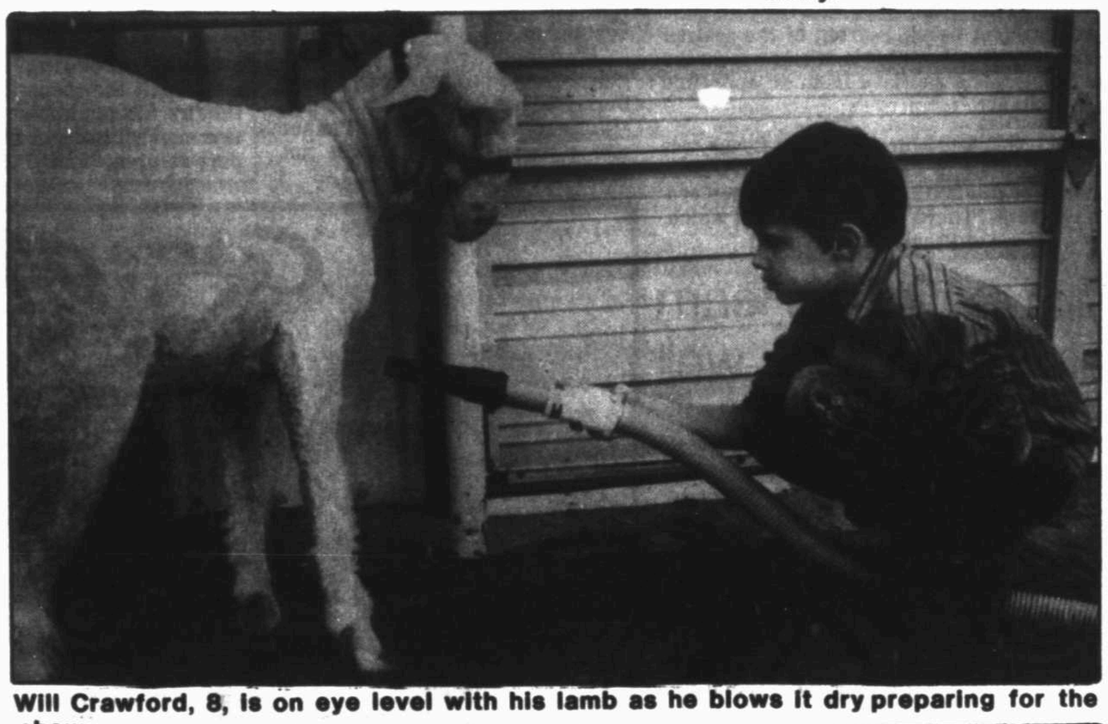

Charles Green, president of the Midland County Livestock Association, said the event has a positive influence on the youth involved.

"It's a family project that keeps the youngsters and family together," Green said. "It keeps the kids around the right kind of folks.

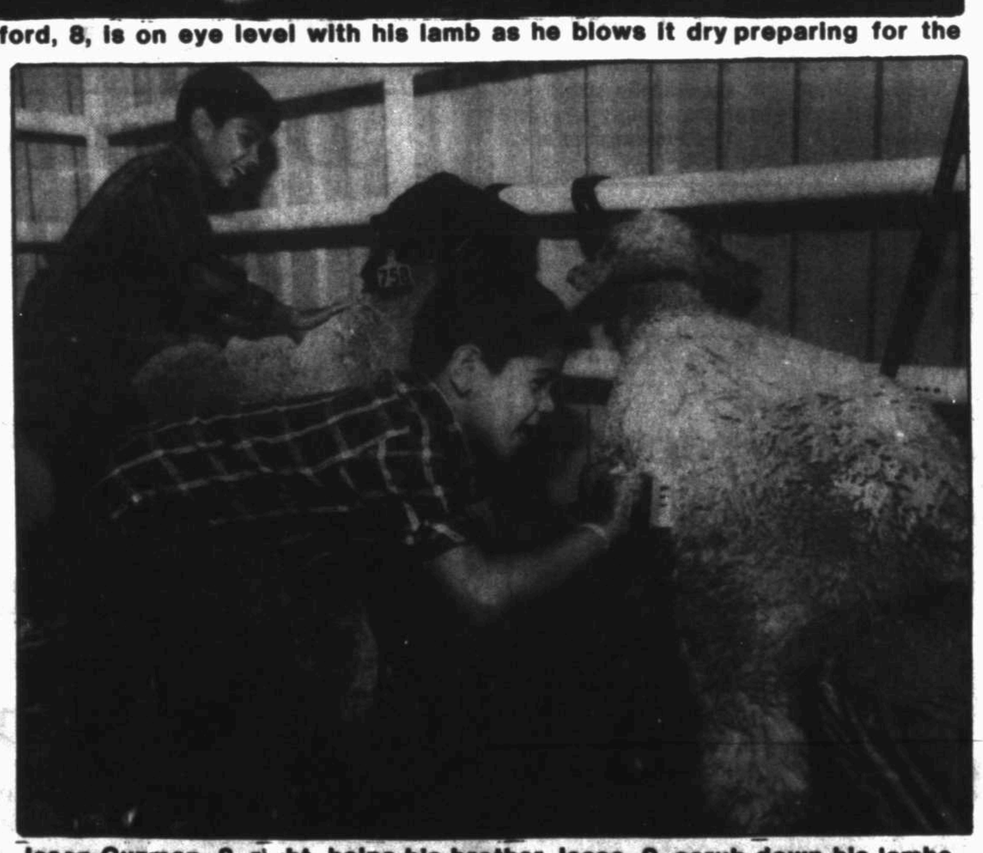

"It keeps them fully occupied. It keeps them from getting in with the wrong crowd."

About 250 children raised animals for this year's livestock show, while only 200 youngsters took place in last year's event. Participants

Parker family murder trial heads to court

■ The murder case pitting members of the 'Old West' family has been a mix of mystery and intrigue from the outset.

By Mike Cochran
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANGELO — An heir to a star-crossed ranching empire goes on trial this week accused of killing his nephew on a remote Hill Country road 15 months ago.

Doyle Parker, 76, a Kimble County rancher, is charged in the slaying of Bruce Parker, 41, the second of three Parker men killed by gunfire in 1989.

All were members of a pioneer ranching family that traces its ancestry back to the Alamo. It is a family described by Bruce Parker's widow as "Old West, Big Ranch."

Jury selection is scheduled to begin Monday in state district ourt. District Attorney Ron Sutton of Kimble County said he expects testimony to start by Wednesday.

Conviction carries a maximum penalty of life in prison.

The murder case against the elder Parker has been a mix of mystery and intrigue from the outset, largely because of a judicial gag order that silenced principals in the case.

Even the victim's widow, Linda Parker, a state employee and former Texas legislative candidate, refused to discuss the affair in depth or reveal more than a vague motive for the shooting.

"All of this will come out in court," she said.

In a series entitled the "Scarlet Bloodline," The Associated Press reported last March on the bizarre events before and after Bruce Parker's death and explored the family's legacy of violence.

On June 10, 1989, four months before the slaying, Bruce's cousin Jesse "Jett" Parker was shot to death. Investigators said robbery was the motive and charged a fugitive Mexican alien with murder.

On Dec. 3, 1989, five week's after Bruce's death, his uncle Raymond Parker died of a gunshot wound to the head. Raymond, 66, Doyle's brother, apparently took his own life. But investigators said the suicide was linked emotionally to Bruce's death and the murder charges filed against Doyle.

"There's something about this Parker thing that is not adding up at all," said Kimble County historian Frederica Wyatt, referring both to the family's history of violence and the 1989 episode.

"It just goes on and on."

Since 1935, at least five other Parkers have died violently, including two in a murder-suicide.

Raymond and Doyle Parker and Bruce's father, Cecil, were three of five children born to Jess and Lorena Parker, known widely as "Big Daddy" and "Big Mama."

The patriarch died in 1986 at age 97 but his widow still lives at the "Old Ranch" outside Harper near the Gillespie and Kimble County line.

Before being muzzled by the court, Sutton and other investigators spoke of the bad blood among family members. They said the disagreements stemmed at least in part from the distribution and use of the land.

"It's a very ticklish and sticky situation ... that goes back many years, even before my time," said Bill Beard of Harper, a Gillespie County deputy sheriff.

Former Kimble County sheriff Pat Davis put it this way: "The family got larger and larger and the land smaller and smaller."

On a rainy Sunday in 1989, two days before Halloween, Bruce Parker left his rustic two-story home and drove across Parker ranchland to a road along and above the Little Devil's River. Although this land was owned by his uncle Raymond, Bruce had leased the hunting and fishing rights.

Linda Parker, who was not at home when her husband left, returned from town and was preparing dinner when she received a telephone call from "Big Mama." The matriarch told Linda only that Bruce was hurt.

In all probability, Bruce already was dead. His body lay in a pool of blood beside his pickup truck on a scenic bluff overlooking the river. He had been shot once in the upper chest.

For reasons still not clear, the fatal shot initially was reported as self-inflicted or accidental.

Alarmed, Linda Parker appealed to the Texas Rangers to investigate the shooting. A Hill Country Ranger named Joe Davis looked look into the matter. In mid-November, more than two weeks after Bruce's death, a grand jury in nearby Junction indicted Doyle Parker for murder.

He was released on $25,000 bond.

Saying only that his case is "circumstantial and complex," Sutton, one of the state's most successful prosecutors, has steadfastly honored the gag mandate. But he was unmoved by the defendant's advanced age.

"His mother's in good shape at 92 and his father lived to be 97," Sutton said. "These people live forever down there, unless they get shot."

Big-city murder case fascinates small-town residents

FREDERICKSBURG (AP) — Residents in this small Hill Country town have become fascinated with a big-city capital murder trial moved here because of publicity in Houston.

It's the town's first murder trial since 1984, when a Bandera County case was moved to Fredericksburg on a change of venue.

Now, Carl Wayne Buntion is on trial for the June 27 shooting death of Houston police officer James Irby. The police officer was gunned down after a routine traffic stop.

So far, the courtroom has been the sight of jury selection, two hearings to remove State District Judge Bill Harmon from presiding over the trial and a bitter feud between one member of the defense team and the judge.

Testimony is scheduled to begin Monday. The whole process is something that just doesn't happen very often in a small town.

Each day, spectators promptly enter the courtroom at 9 a.m. after first passing through a metal detector to watch the proceedings.

Some are dressed in jeans, while others look as if they've stopped in on the way to the office. They are as varied as a former district attorney, a retired Houston businessman and a blacksmith.

Chris Harty owns a horseshoeing business in Fredericksburg. He has spent more than a few days watching the trial and finds the whole process exhilarating and educational.

"I get excited when they get you on that witness stand," he said. "You're just like a piece of meat."

Former Gillespie County District Attorney Raymon Kneese said he comes because watching the proceedings keeps him sharp.

But many seem to come for lack of something better to do.

Harty said he plans to continue to stop by the courthouse because he expects "a good fight" once testimony begins. He said he thinks other residents will do the same.

"I think it's because it's kind of fascinating," he said. "When you get to the trial it's kind of like dog eat dog."

'There's something about this Parker thing that is not adding up at all.'

Galveston works on its coastline

■ After years of wishing and talking, plans seem to be gaining momentum for rebuilding Galveston's beachfront.

GALVESTON (AP) — Erosion has devoured much of Galveston's beach at the base of city's 10-mile-long seawall, but officials hope a plan that rebuilt the shores along Miami Beach will restore the strand to its glistening past.

More than 100 miles of Florida beach, including 10.5 miles in Miami Beach, have been "nourished," or rebuilt since 1975, mainly with sand pumped from offshore deposits.

Like Miami Beach 16 years ago, Galveston now fights to save its ever-dwindling resource. Precious little beach remains at the base of the city's seawall, and from the wall's west end, erosion relentlessly eats the remaining 20 miles of the city's unprotected West Beach.

But after years of wishing and talking, plans seem to be gaining momentum for rebuilding Galveston's beachfront.

Success hinges on a number of factors, including the Legislature's adoption and funding of a coastal-management plan that will make Texas eligible for a share of more than $500 million in federal coastal management funds.

Because it has no such plan, Texas is the only coastal state to which the federal money has been unavailable.

While many are skeptical about ever seeing a wide beach fronting the seawall again, members of the Galveston County Beach Preservation Association say the restoration march is on in earnest.

"There are so many stars in a line right now that we're very confident and we expect it to be within the next two to three years," said businessman Russ Eitel, co-chairman of the association.

Area federal and state legislators, Galveston City Council and county commissioners, business leaders and the Texas General Land Office all are excited about beach nourishment and rapidly improving erosion control methods, Eitel said.

He also thinks the election of Ann Richards bodes well for the effort.

"We have a governor now who is sensitive to coastal issues," Eitel said.

Houston's Dannenbaum Engineering Corp. is conducting a $200,000 study of the county's erosion problems along the shores of Galveston Bay and the Gulf of Mexico, and the technology available to deal with them.

Along the Gulf shoreline, the seawall area, West Beach and a seriously eroded area of Bolivar Peninsula east of Rollover Pass are high on the critical list.

For the seawall area, Eitel envisions a 200-foot-wide beach that would fill the areas between the rock groins, or jetties, that extend into the Gulf of Mexico. A huge cache of sand that has accumulated over the years at the island's east end would be hauled or pumped to the area.

Although a 1985 U.S. Army Corps of Engineers study pegged the price of nourishing a 4.5-mile stretch of seawall beach at about $12 million, Eitel said private dredging firms have estimated that they could do the job for about $1 million a mile today.

Sand would have to be added to the rebuilt beach periodically because of natural erosion, Eitel said. In the 1985 study, officials estimated this would be needed about every eight years.

Area federal and state legislators, Galveston City Council and county commissioners, business leaders and the Texas General Land Office all are excited about beach nourishment and rapidly improving erosion control methods.

Under current budget restrictions and federal regulations, the Corps can't finance 50 percent or more of a beach nourishment project.

To build political support, Galveston officials are sponsoring a Jan. 17 forum dubbed "$and Dollar$."

"The meeting's main goal is to inform the public of the economic benefits of beach nourishment," Eitel said.

No one can accurately predict the economic boost a 200-foot beach in front of the seawall would give Galveston. But in Miami Beach, the new beach was a reprieve from an economic death sentence.

"Before the nourishment, Miami Beach was almost in a state of decay," said Brian Flynn, manager of the Dade County, Fla., beach erosion program. "There were instances in which, after sections of beach were restored."

MLK memorial slated today

Staff Report

An hour-long hike from 4-5 p.m. today will honor Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday. Although King's birthday is Tuesday, and the official national holiday honoring his birthday is Jan. 22, the hike was planned for today since children are out of school for teacher in-service day.

The hike will begin at Emerson and continue through the campuses of Goddard Junior High School and Midland College. Participants are asked to fill bags with litter along the way. Bob Cornell, hike organizer and Emerson teacher, said King's marches "included being peaceful, clean and with a purpose."

Cornell said he organized the hike to honor "one of the greatest Americans of the 20th century."

The hike will include such sights as the "little people goal post," the "waterless river," the "noisy pooch" and "cement grass."

The public is invited to participate.

New L.A. drug czar not ruling out DPD opening

DALLAS (AP) — A Los Angeles Deputy Police Chief said he remains a candidate for Dallas police chief despite his new post as Los Angeles' drug czar.

William Rathburn, 49, said his new job is not a promotion and he still is interested in filling the Dallas job left vacant after City Manager Jan Hart fired Mack Vines in September.

"It's a lateral move to a position I've never served in before," Rathburn told the Dallas Times Herald. "It doesn't mean at all that I'm not still a candidate. This will not cause me to drop out."

Bedroom gutted in Sunday night fire

Staff Report

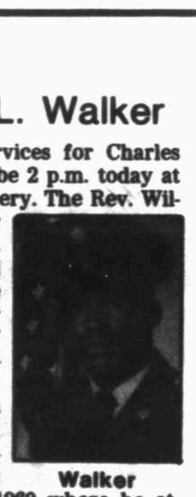

The Midland Fire Department responded to a structure fire at 301 Golf Course about 9:50 p.m. Sunday night. One bedroom, apparently the source of the fire, was completely destroyed.

It appeared no one was at the residence at the time the fire started, according to firefighters at the scene. Cause of the fire was not known and the fire marshal had not filed a report at press time.

DEATHS

Charles L. Walker

Graveside services for Charles L. Walker will be 2 p.m. today at Fairview Cemetery. The Rev. William Palmer will officiate. Interment will follow at the cemetery under the direction of Warren Funeral Home.

Walker

Walker was born Dec. 28, 1957, in Levelland. He moved to Midland in 1960 where he attended public schools. He also served in the U.S. Army.

Survivors include his wife, Tina Walker of Midland; his son, James Walker of Midland; two daughters, Janette Walker and Jennifer Walker, both of Midland; his mother, L.E. Montgomery of Stanton; two brothers, Doc Davis of Dallas and Elmer Montgomery of Germany; four sisters, Ella Walker, Louise Rankin, Elizabeth Montgomery and Margaret Montgomery, all of Midland; six aunts and two uncles.

Lorne D. McCluskey

Funeral services for Lorne D. McCluskey are pending with Ellis Funeral Home. He died Saturday at a local hospital.

come from 4-H clubs and Future Farmers of America chapters throughout Midland County.

Susannea Bryant, 16, a Greenwood High School student, raised two steers and two pigs for the show.

Susannea is a five-year Midland County Livestock Show veteran, and she has numerous awards to show for her work.

"I love the animals," she said. "Through the shows, you get to learn about animals and you learn about people."

The Midland County Livestock Association, in cooperation with county agriculture agents, vocational agriculture teachers and 4-H and FFA clubs, sponsored the event.

Green said the show, started in 1952, is staged to recognize Midland County youths involved in feeding, fitting and showing livestock.

"We think it's probably one of the best ways to prepare youngsters for the challenges of the professional world they will eventually enter," Green said.

Mike Gutherie's image smiles back from a mirror in the diner he moved from Oklahoma and restored.

Artist feeds on abandoned eateries

By Carol Olten
Copley News Service

They sat on lonesome little corners in lonesome little towns across the Midwest. They were modern and slick for the 1930s and '40s, but their names and their ambience had homespun warmth. They were called Ethel's Cafe, Bob's or the Little Chef. The waitress had a way with gab. The food was basic, good, middle-class stuff.

If you said, "Burn one, take it through the garden and pin a rose on it," that meant a burger with lettuce, tomato and onion. "Nervous pudding" translated as Jell-O.

Such was the essence of thousands of diners built by the Valentine Dining Co. of Wichita, Kan., and transported to hundreds of little Midwestern towns. Many today have become ghost diners, removed from their original sites to rust and die in deserted fields. Most of those still operating are barely recognizable, weary survivors of countless remodelings and additions. Many no longer serve food. They have been revamped as photo drops or quickie loan offices.

Mike Guthrie, an artist who lives on a deserted dairy farm near San Ysidro, Calif., and grew up in the Midwest, became infatuated by Valentine diners about three years ago. He began to buy and preserve them.

So far, he has moved three vintage Valentine diners from Illinois and Oklahoma to restore them. Two have been completed and sold to a Palm Desert, Calif., resident who is giving them life again as small restaurants.

The third — a diner that once stood on the edge of Alva, Okla., rusted, abandoned and riddled with graffiti and bullets — has been resurrected with new paint, refinished stools and red Formica counter top and sits outside Guthrie's house.

"For me the diners are a romantic piece of American roadside architecture," Guthrie said.

VALENTINE BEGAN to build prefabricated diners and sandwich shops in Wichita in 1938. The company ceased production in the late 1950s when drive-ins and fast-food operations were beginning to steal much of their trade.

Unlike the popular Pullman diners of the East Coast, which had the streamlined look of a speeding train, Valentine diners were boxy little buildings, frequently with abbreviated flying buttresses at the corners. Unlike the larger Pullmans, they frequently had a more intimate seating capacity of eight to 10 stools around an L-shaped counter.

The Valentines' shiny skins of porcelain enamel and gleaming chrome-and-Formica interiors gave them a fresh look in small-town America.

"A lot of the diners were mom-and-pop operations that remained around for years," Guthrie said.

"A lot went through various ownerships and were remodeled with mansard roofs or other features, which pretty much destroyed them. The ideal situation for me is to find those that haven't been altered a lot even if they're in poor condition because you never know what you find under things."

Guthrie's initial interest in old diners was spurred by a trip back to the Midwest to visit family. He purchased his first diner from a woman named Ethel who had run a place called Ethel's Cafe for 29 years next to her house in Monmouth, Ill., near where his family lives.

The diner was lifted onto a semi-trailer truck and bolted aboard for the long ride to San Ysidro, Calif., where Guthrie had to hire a crane to hoist it off the truck.

SHORTLY AFTER the diner arrived, Guthrie and a friend went on another trip driving cross-country on a "diner hunt." They photographed diners throughout New Mexico, Arizona and Texas, not finding any particularly desirable ones for sale, but making contacts with owners. Then, about 150 miles out of Alva, Okla., they happened onto their first real find.

"We were sitting at this roadside bar having a hamburger talking about how we were looking for Valentine diners," Guthrie said.

"Pretty soon a guy at the end of the bar piped up that he thought he knew about one that had been abandoned for 15 years on the edge of Alva. We drove over there, arriving late one very cold night in December.

"Drove through town. Couldn't spot anything. Drove through again and put the headlights up and there it was, a diner so rusty it looked like a heap of abandoned farm equipment. But for me it was a complete adrenalin rush."

Guthrie, of course, negotiated the purchase. The diner belonged to a bank trust that couldn't believe someone had really come along with an offer. It's now the incredibly spiffed up one outside his house. Guthrie now is negotiating diner deals all over the Midwest, hoping to move and restore as many as possible in California.

An average restored diner usually sells for about $15,000. The deals, said Guthrie, aren't as much of a challenge as the cat-and-mouse games to be played with moving and trucking companies in getting the diners to California.

NEVERTHELESS, GUTHRIE has firm plans to continue hunting for diners and restoring them.

"Since the Valentine diners are small and seat only up to 10 people, it may not make the best sense to operate them as diners again. But they would be great as guest quarters on an estate or ranch, a little nostalgia shop or as an attraction inside a larger restaurant."

DEAR ABBY

Man's rape of daughters is haunting tale of horror

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I just read something in the Bradenton (Fla.) Herald, and I can't get it out of my mind. A man was found guilty of raping his three daughters over a period of nine years. They are now 17, 20 and 23 years old. He was sentenced to 30 years in prison. His wife got 15 years because she was aware of what was going on at the time. While her children were screaming and trying to fight their father off, she turned her face to the wall, pretending to be asleep!

Van Buren

The daughters were impregnated a total of 10 times, and their mother took them for abortions. Can you believe this? And now this animal and his wife will be living at the expense of the taxpayers.

Please print this, Abby. The public needs to know what's going on. — HURTING HEART

DEAR HURTING HEART: My heart is hurting, too, but this "animal" and his equally guilty wife were probably given the stiffest sentences allowed by law, which doesn't say much for our judicial system.

These people deserve to be locked up in a maximum security prison for the rest of their lives with absolutely no chance for parole.

DEAR ABBY: Are things so slow around your office that you decided to give an incredibly stupid answer just to see if we, your faithful readers, were paying attention, or were you typing with your eyes (and mind) closed that day? I'm referring to your response to "On the Fence," the bride-to-be who wanted to "disinvite" one of her bridesmaids who was rumored to be involved with a married man. This sent poor "On the Fence" into a tizzy — after all, it would be a "slap in the face to the institution of marriage" to have such a person in her wedding party.

Your advice was to disinvite her as a bridesmaid, but permit her to attend as a guest — wearing a scarlet "A" on her chest, I presume. At least you tempered your advice by suggesting she give the woman a chance to confirm or deny the rumor, but the Abby I had grown to love would not have said, "Get off the fence"; she would have said, "Get off your high horse, Sister."

What makes "Fence" so sure that all her other bridesmaids live up to her moral code? Besides, I thought bridesmaids were selected on the basis of friendship, not because they were sin-free.

As for the risk of having the institution of marriage slapped in the face by the presence of one wayward bridesmaid, the only people who can wound that institution are the two who are entering it. — ATLANTA

DEAR ATLANTA: To answer your question, I didn't give an "incredibly stupid answer" just to see if my faithful readers were paying attention; neither was I typing with my eyes (or mind) closed. (It was just one of my rare puritanical, holier-than-thou days.)

But, if it will make you feel any better, you weren't the only faithful reader who let me have it — pow, right in the kisser!

Thanks, Atlanta, I needed that to keep me human and humble.

What teen-agers need to know about sex, drugs, AIDS, and getting along with their peers and parents is now in Abby's updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." VA, private hospitals set to treat war-wounded

DALLAS (AP) — Veterans Administration and civilian medical centers across the country will be asked for the first time by the U.S. Department of Defense to help in caring for casualties if war erupts in the Persian Gulf.

In Texas, the Dallas and San Antonio VA medical centers are among 80 veterans hospitals nationwide designated to receive patients suffering from conventional warfare injuries and combat-related emotional problems.

"We pray to God we don't have to do this," said Leon Miller, a member of the emergency preparedness committee at the Dallas Veterans Administration Medical Center.

"It's comforting to know that there's this kind of care available for young men and women, but it's just not something that's pleasant to contemplate. It really is a tragic thing," he said.

The two facilities also are part of a smaller group of VA hospitals designated to treat chemical warfare victims.

In addition, 11 Dallas County hospitals and seven Tarrant County hospitals are among more than 1,600 civilian medical centers nationwide that have volunteered to accept war casualties if the veterans facilities become full.

Wounded soldiers would be treated and stabilized in military medical facilities on the ground or on board one of two hospital ships in the Persian Gulf region.

They then would be transferred to a U.S. military hospital in Europe for further treatment. If they could not return to battle soon, they would be flown to the United States for additional care.

In the United States, war casualties first would be sent to military hospitals, department spokesman Jim Turner said.

But in the years following World War II, the capacity of stateside military hospitals dwindled from 500,000 to 14,000 beds, said Tom Reutershan, director of the Office of Emergency Preparedness for the U.S. Public Health Service.

Military hospitals were able to handle Vietnam casualties without help because battle casualties were spread over a number of years.

In 1982, Congress passed a law designating VA medical centers as the main backup should military hospitals be unable to accommodate injured military personnel.

Under the law, 80 of the nation's 172 VA hospitals would receive soldiers wounded by conventional weapons if the military hospitals become full. In addition, 22 of the 80 hospitals would get victims of chemical warfare.

"I look at the VA as kind of a spare tire," said VA spokesman Kerry Cartier in Dallas. "If the Department of Defense hopitals can't handle the casualties, they use the VA as a backup."

So far, the casualty contingency plan has been only an exercise on paper.

Each day, participating VA hospitals report how many and what kind of beds they could have available immediately and within 24 and 72 hours.

The 800-bed Dallas facility includes 120 nursing home beds and 680 specialized beds to care for medical, surgical and psychiatric patients, Miller said. The Dallas hospital probably could have 40 to 50 beds available immediately for war casualties, he said.

Dallas-based retailer works harder to earn less in wartime

DALLAS (AP) — Many soldiers arriving at Saudi Arabian outposts carry identical shopping bags filled with candy, cookies and personal toiletries — thanks to a supply line that begins in Dallas and an entity known as "AAFES."

The Army and Air Force Exchange Service is a $6.8 billion retail operation with nearly 17,000 facilities worldwide. The outlets range from corner hot dog stands and bakeries to large, modern shopping malls.

Iraq's invasion of Kuwait last August provided the service's most challenging job since the Vietnam conflict. AAFES employees were on the scene just four days after U.S. troops arrived in Saudi Arabia.

Now, the Saudi desert is host to 11 "direct" facilities operated by 40 AAFES civilian staff members and more than 70 "field" exchanges run largely by military volunteers.

Troops in Operation Desert Shield have taken advantage the catalog operation, placing nearly 33,000 orders totaling $5 million.

"There is no organization closer to its customers," said Air Force Maj. Gen. Jeffery Kahla, who commands AAFES. "Most retailers could not have done what we did."

Then again, most retailers don't participate in desert terrain training exercises at the National Training Center at Fort Irwin, Calif. Most retailers also don't have a worldwide network of 25 distribution centers.

"Our strength is knowing what our customer wants — and customizing," Kahla said.

In the case of Operation Desert Shield, that meant enabling soldiers to go Christmas shopping for their families back home.

AAFES sent six laptop computers into the desert, complete with protective covers to keep out the sand. The computers allowed troops in the field to order from the catalog.

Some 90,000 holiday catalogs were sent to troops in Saudi Arabia, said Liz Hedge, chief of the AAFES marketing branch. Officials said orders from troops in the desert got first priority.

Throughout the organization, emphasis is placed on quality control and keeping on the cutting edge of retail trends, Kahla said.

"The expense of failure to us is just too high," he said. "We can't pick our customers. They pick us."

Kahla said he expects earnings for the AAFES fiscal year ending later this month will be approximately $35 million less than last year's earnings of $331.7 million. Sales for the year ended Jan. 22, 1990, totaled $6.8 billion.

Kahla attributes the decline to start-up costs in the desert and a downturn in sales in areas from which troops have been moved.

At an AAFES-franchised Burger King at Fort Campbell, Ky., monthly sales dropped 47.1 percent, from $288,263 per month to $152,438 per month. Fort Campbell was one of the first bases involved in Desert Shield deployments.

While AAFES is a military command, it also is a self-funded business, said spokeswoman Carol Habgood. It also employs 82,000 civilian employees and 100 military personnel. More than 2,000 of those employees work at the company headquarters in Dallas.

"Tax-dollar support to AAFES is minimal," Col. Habgood said. "We receive some transportation funding for goods shipped overseas, funds for military salaries, Autovon communications support and payment of utilities on bases overseas."

Because of its two-fold mission, the AAFES board approves policies and budget allocations other corporate boards would shun. And accommodating the day-to-day fluctuations in foreign currency in the business plan is an ongoing organizational challenge, Kahla said.

"We operate 300 'losers' intentionally," Kahla said. "We have to be where the troops are."

$798.83 million and counting

WASHINGTON (AP) — A review of major Pentagon ammunition, parts and hardware contracts awarded since mid-August shows large purchases of tires, track shoes for armored personnel carriers, helicopter rotor blades and ammunition.

Some of the major contracts include:

—$635 million to Raytheon, its fiscal 1991 payment for managing the Army's Patriot missile program, a vital ground-to-air defense system against Iraqi missiles in the Persian Gulf.

—$27.1 million to Olin Corp. for 18,450 120mm cartridges.

—$10.5 million to Honeywell Inc. for 21,475 120mm cartridges.

—$14.3 million to Aerojet Industries for 623,377 25mm cartridges.

—$24.6 million to Oshkosh Truck Corp. for 100 heavy tank trucks and 50 heavy wreckers.

—$22 million to two California companies for 77 lightweight aircraft shelters and 57 vehicle shelters for the desert.

—$5.7 million to Pirelli-Armstrong tire for 73,000 pneumatic tires.

—$7.23 million to United Technologies for 200 UH-60a helicopter rotor blades.

—$32 million to Raytheon for air-to-ground missiles for F15, F16 and F111 aircraft.

—$5.5 million to AGH Industries of Fort Worth, Texas, for sand confinement grids.

—$9.4 million to IBM for forward looking infrared units for the Navy's SH-60B light helicopters.

Mexico's Pemex to stay its oil-production course

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico plans to continue exporting 1.359 million barrels of crude oil a day for the rest of this year, the state petroleum monopoly Pemex was quoted as saying.

The independent news service Excelsior quoted unnamed sources at Petroleos Mexicanos S.A. — as the monopoly is formally called — as saying production will also remain steady at 2.677 million barrels a day.

Production of natural gas has been estimated at 3.642 million cubic feet a day for this year also, Excelsior said.

Mexico increased its export platform by an average of 100,000 barrels a day in mid-1990, in an effort to keep world prices relatively stable when the Persian Gulf crisis broke out.

Pemex plans to drill 76 new exploratory wells in search of both crude oil and natural gas, in an effort to increase production, Excelsior said.

'Give Peace A Chance' update to air Tuesday

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rock stars Peter Gabriel, Paula Abdul, Bonnie Raitt, Iggy Pop and M.C. Hammer are making a new version of John Lennon's anti-war song "Give Peace a Chance" with lyrics updated for the Persian Gulf crisis.

A video of the new song is set to debut Tuesday, the United Nations deadline for Iraq's withdrawal from Kuwait, said organizers for the video.

In the new version, to be sent to television and radio stations around the world, one verse reads: "Everybody's talkin' about Civil War, revolution, Armageddon, no solution, are we facing Vietnam? We don't want to drop the bomb."

Other scheduled participants are Lennon's son Sean.

Rogers reprieve

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Former Heisman Trophy winner George Rogers, charged with cocaine and marijuana possession, will enter a pre-trial intervention program and avoid a criminal record.

Two days before leaving office last week, former Solicitor James Anders agreed to put Rogers in the program. Rogers will have his record erased and he will avoid jail by performin g community service.

Rogers, who won the Heisman Trophy in 1980 while playing for South Carolina, was charged in April with possession of cocaine and marijuana with intent to distribute. He played for the New Orleans Saints and Wahington Redskins from 1981-1988.

Giants romp, Raiders eke

■ New York Giants quarterback Jeff Hostetler won his fifth straight game as the Giants' starter in a 31-3 romp over the Chicago Bears.

Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — The Giants turned to their Hoss and their horses Sunday and rode them into the NFC championship game.

Jeff Hostetler continued his perfect work as quarterback, leading New York to a 31-3 victory over the Chicago Bears. Hostetler, the long-time backup to Phil Simms, now is 5-0 as a starter.

"I could sense the guys had a lot of confidence in me to get the job done," Hostetler said after throwing for two touchdowns, running for another and making nearly every big play New York needed. "That helped settle my nerves."

Not that he ever looked edgy. Hostetler proved wrong all those critics who wondered if he had an NFL-quality arm and the overall skills to guide a team in the playoffs.

"I was hearing that stuff all week and it was getting old as the week

■ The Los Angeles Raiders must make a trip to Buffalo before returning to warmer weather, after beating the Cincinnati Bengals in their AFC semifinal.

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — It will take a trip through the snowbelt to get there, but the Los Angeles Raiders are just one step away from returning to Tampa, where seven years ago they struck the last major blow for Al Davis' "Commitment to Excellence."

With Marcus Allen rushing for 140 yards in 21 carries, Greg Townsend recording three sacks and Jay Schroeder breaking a 10-10 tie with a 41-yard fourth-quarter touchdown pass to Ethan Horton, the Raiders beat the Cincinnati Bengals 20-10 Sunday to advance to next week's AFC title game in Buffalo.

"We said all year that the road to the Super Bowl goes through Buffalo. We're just happy to be taking that path," said coach Art Shell, a Hall of Fame tackle from the Raiders' glory years.

Chaps visit highly touted Texans

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

The words being used these days to describe the South Plains College Texans are frightening. At least they should be for the other eight basketball teams in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference.

It goes without saying that the Texans, ranked No. 2 in the latest National Junior College Athletic Association Top 20 poll, are expected to make the Region V tournament in Waco this March. But some observers wouldn't be the least bit surprised to see SPC, 18-0 overall and 4-0 in conference, bring home the first national championship by a WJCAC team in nine years.

"They're awesome," said Midland College head coach Reggie Franklin, whose suddenly upstart Chaparrals meet the Texans in Levelland tonight at 8 p.m. "They're playing better than some major colleges."

SPC head coach Ron Mayberry usually shrugs his shoulders and tries to sidestep observations that he has a good basketball team. Not this year. Even he admits SPC is quality this time around.

"We've got a good ball club," Mayberry said. "We have good chemistry, and you can't match that."

Mayberry, though, added the Texans "haven't played as good lately as in the fall" and that he's "got too many freshmen playing," to be seriously considered one of the best teams ever in the conference.

Don't tell that to Clarendon coach Joe Mondragon, who had already seen enough of SPC after the Texans creamed his Bulldogs last month

"I've been in this league 12 years and South Plains is as good a team as I've ever seen," said Mondragon.

Mondragon went so far as to say the Texans are as good as the Paul Pressey-led, Nolan Richardson-coached Western Texas team that won the national

Emmons wins both singles and doubles

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

A tennis professional for only six months, 20-year-old Jessica Emmons added to her career earnings Sunday with a straight-set win over Christina Papadaki in the singles finals of the United States Tennis Association Women's Circuit of Midland.

Emmons pocketed $1,600 for her 7-5, 6-2 win over the 17-year-old from Greece.

It was Emmons' rushing of Papadaki that proved the difference in the match.

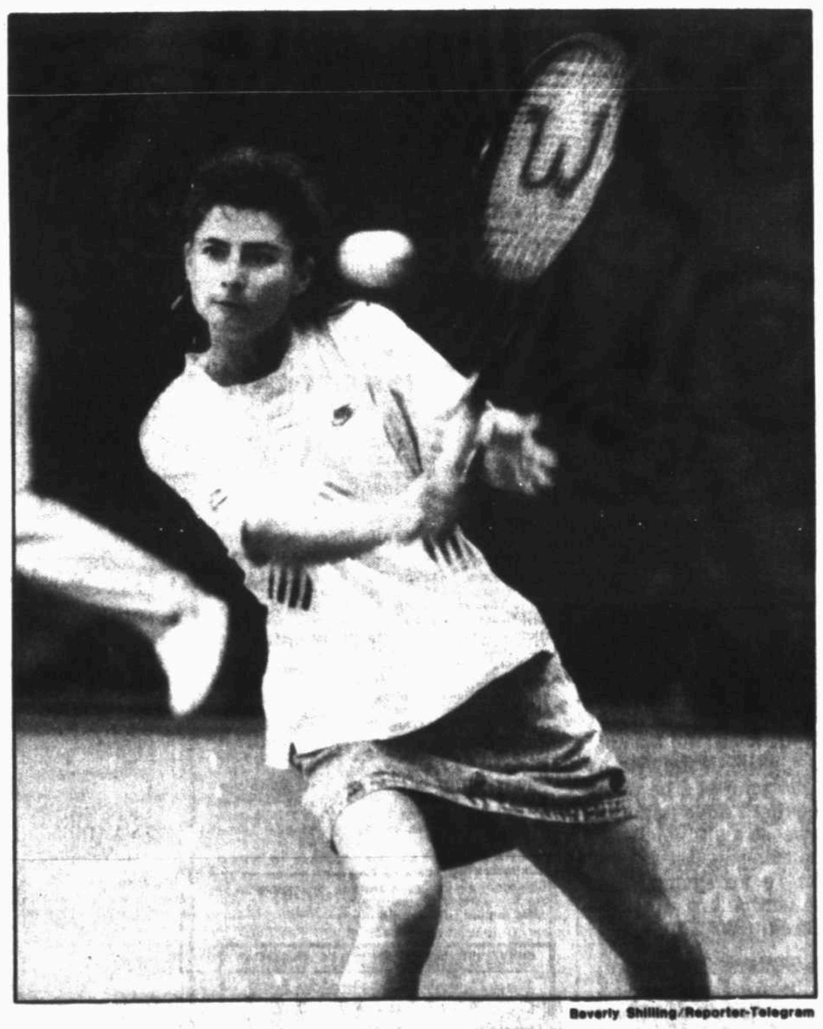

After an evenly matched first set – which featured three service breaks in the first three games – Emmons turned it up and put away Papadaki with barely a whimper in the second set.

"She's a big baseline player and they like to to get into a rhythm," Emmons said of her opponent. "I think I forced her out of her rhythm. I started putting more pressure on her by coming to the net more and forcing her to either hit a good shot or make a big error."

Papadaki agreed with Emmons' summation, more or less.

"A little bad day," was the way Papadaki described her performance. "The girl was good, also."

Sabatini opens Australian with victory

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — A year after Gabriela Sabatini left the Australian Open in a wheelchair she returned cautiously but triumphantly Monday to lead a charge on Steffi Graf's three-year championship reign.

Sabatini, the U.S. Open champion, kicked off her drive for a second straight Grand Slam title by beating dangerous newcomer Linda Harvey-Wild 6-3, 6-1 in a windblown slugging match on center court.

Sabatini, seeded No. 4, played tentatively in the first set, staying back more than she did in the U.S. Open, as she returned to the tournament where she sustained a severely sprained ankle in the third-round a year ago.

"It just came to my mind a few times, but it's nothing serious," said Sabatini, who's been taping her ankles heavily since that injury.

Harvey-Wild, a 19-year-old American making her first appearance in Melbourne, took advantage of Sabatini's caution and broke her in the first game. Sabatini grunted angrily at herself, bore down and broke back. Patroling the baseline and reluctant to rush the net, Sabatini didn't go for winners as much as she let her net-charging opponent make mistakes.

Typical of the dangerous young players popping up on the women's tour, Harvey-Wild turned pro last year after one semester at the University of Southern California and promptly upset went on," he said. "It was frustrating."

So he took out his frustrations on the Bears, who were so dominated that they had the ball for 21 minutes, 38 seconds.

"Jeff played like he was in a fantasy," said Stephen Baker, who caught a TD pass. "It was a dream come true. It was extraordinary the plays he made. Scrambling, throwing the ball, he was making plays out of what wasn't there."

With Simms out of the playoffs with a foot injury, Hostetler moved into the spotlight and became a star. The seven-year veteran led the Giants to season-closing victories over Phoenix and New England to cap a 13-3 season. Against Chicago, he was as masterful as Simms ever was and added spice to the attack with his mobility.

"He's an excellent quarterback," Bears defensive end Trace Armstrong said. "He's a great runner, but the thing I was most impressed with was that here was a backup who stepped in and played with the poise that he showed."

Hostetler threw touchdown passes of 21 yards to Baker and 5 yards to Howard Cross. He also ran for a 3-yard score and his scrambles kept alive several drives. The Giants finished the scoring on Maurice Carthon's 1-yard dive with seven seconds to go.

Cincinnati's Tim Krumrie tackles the Raiders' Marcus Allen by his face mask during the first quarter of Sunday's game.

AFC: Raiders score first playoff win in seven years

(From 1C)

"We played an excellent game in the sense that we didn't give up, we perservered even though we didn't take advantage of all our chances."

It was the first postseason victory for the Raiders since they beat Washington 38-9 in Tampa in the Super Bowl that followed the 1983 season, a game in which Allen was the MVP.

In fact, it was the first playoff game since 1985 for one of the NFL's proudest franchises, which rebounded from four mediocre seasons to win the AFC West title with a 12-4 record this season. That was responsible for a turnout at the Los Angeles Coliseum of 92,045, largest crowd in Raiders history and largest in the NFL this year.

But it wasn't easy against a Cincinnati team that was missing perennial All-Pro left tackle Anthony Munoz and left guard Bruce Reimers and got minimal play out of James Brooks, their best running back, who dislocated his left thumb. In addition, Brooks and quarterback Boomer Esiason, who completed 8 of 15 for 104 yards and a touchdown, played with the flu.

"This game was very tough," Allen said. "I know it may not have looked that way, but we had to play as hard as we could to win."

"On top of our injuries, we had Boomer come down with the flu," Cincinnati coach Sam Wyche said. "It was just unusual circustances. The weather was a little warmer than we would have liked."

Still, Cincinnati was able to rebound from a 10-3 deficit to tie the score 3:11 into the third period on an 8-yard pass from Esiason to Stanford Jennings at the end of a 71-yard drive led by Icky Woods. Woods led the Bengals with 73 yards in 11 carries.

Moreover, they could be with a hurting Bo Jackson when they return to Buffalo, where they lost 38-24 in the regular season after leading 24-14 early in the fourth quarter.

Jackson, who gained 77 yards in 6 carries, strained his hip when he was tackled by Kevin Walker after a 34-yard gain.

AUSSIE: Becker plays evening match

Arantxa Sanchez Vicario in the first round of the Virginia Slims of Chicago.

Harvey-Wild hit forehands and two-fisted backhands harder than Sabatini, but lacked the control of the veteran from Argentina.

"I started going a little bit more in (to the net) in the second set," Sabatini said. "When I needed to go to the net, I won most of the points. In the beginning I needed confidence."

Katerina Maleeva, seeded No. 5, beat Brenda Schultz 6-1, 6-3 and Amy Frazier, seeded No. 13, beat Kate McDonald in other early matches on the first day of play.

In men's matches, 12th seeded Jay Berger beat Magnus Larsson 6-3, 6-4, 6-0, and Lars Wahlgren beat 15th seeded Marc Rosset 4-6, 2-6, 7-6 (7-4), 6-3, 9-7.

In other featured matches today, men's No. 2 Boris Becker follows Graf at night against Britain's Jeremy Bates.

USTA: Emmons, Ludvigova win doubles

(From 1C)

Emmons had three aces on the day, but it was Papadaki's pair of aces that proved one of the more exciting aspects of the seven-deuce ninth game in the first set.

After falling behind love-30 in that ninth game, Papadaki scored three straight points to bring on the first deuce. Emmons blew five advantages in the game before Papadaki scored three straight points to win, and draw to within one game of Emmons.

Four points later – and after her seventh consecutive point – Papadaki won her fifth game to knot the first set up at 5-5, but it was then that Emmons began to pull away. Emmons won the final two games of the first set, then five of the next six before allowing Papadaki the sixth game of the second set.

"My ground strokes didn't work," Papadaki said. "And (Emmons) was consistent."

In the doubles finals, Emmons and Betsy Somerville defeated Virginia Humphreys-Davies of Britain and Lucie Ludvigova of Czechoslovakia, 6-4, 4-6, 6-2.

Emmons, a former three-time All-American at UCLA, is ranked 454th in the Women's Tennis Association international rankings; Papadaki is 550th on the same list. Neither was seeded going into this week's tournament.

Next stop for the USTA Women's Circuit is Mission, where play begins Tuesday. The ladies' final Texas stop is Jan. 21-27 in New Braunfels.

championship and finished 37-0 in the mid-70s.

South Plains is as good as they are largely because of the dominating play of Charles Outlaw, a sophomore forward from San Antonio.

According to WJCAC statistics released shortly before the Christmas break, Outlaw is at or near the top in several categories, including blocks (1st, 3.5 per game average), steals (1st, 5.9 average), rebounds (2nd, 11.0 average), field goal percentage (6th, 65.1 percent) and assists (9th, 3.8 average).

The two freshmen Mayberry alluded to just so happen to be two of the more highly sought after in the nation – post Dwight Stewart and off-guard Corey Beck, both of Memphis (Tenn.) Fairley High School, a team which was ranked eighth in the nation last year.

Sophomore point guard Byron Campbell and sophomore forward David Diaz are the remaining expected starters for the Texans, who average 111.2 points on offense, but allow an average of only 65.5 per game.

"They have power at every position," Franklin said. "Plus, they are two and three deep at every position."

Added Mondragon: "If Midland can take care of the ball and handle South Plains' pressure, they can be in ' e ball game."

Mayberry hasn't seen the Chaps since the SPC-McDonald's Classic in November, but doesn't like what he hears about the team of late.

"Everybody tells me they're playing as well as anyone in the conference," Mayberry said. "And that's what really counts, is how you're playing now. It doesn't matter how you play in the fall, it matters what you do in the spring."

Tonight's meeting is the 37th between the two schools. The Chaps hold a 27-9 overall advantage, but have lost two straight, including an 86-48 pounding in last season's game at the Texan Dome.

The game will be broadcast live on KCRS Radio (550 AM).

Redmen end UConn streak

Associated Press

STORRS, Conn. — It had been quite a while since Connecticut lost at home and it seemed to Malik Sealy like a long time since he had played well.

Both things happened Sunday as No. 10 St. John's, behind 26 points from the junior forward, ended No. 9 Connecticut's 22-game home-court winning streak with a 72-59 victory.

"The last two games I was sort of in a lull," Sealy said of his recent offensive slump which saw his team-leading average fall from 25.2 to 23.5 points per game. "I like to say I was down but not out. I was confident, the team was confident and our defense got us going."

It also stopped Connecticut, the last unbeaten team in the Big East, in its tracks.

The Huskies (12-2, 3-1), who last lost a home game on Dec. 12 1989 — 64-57 to Villanova — never seemed to get the shot they wanted and there weren't many second-chance opportunities.

"It was the same defense we always play," St. John's coach Lou Carnesecca said of the man-to-man style. "The kids motivated themselves. They knew how big this was. I don't know if I can ever recall any of my kids playing as well in all facets as my kids did today."

The Redmen (11-2, 2-2) had lost two of their last three games and didn't look good on the offensive end in any of them.

Sealy, who scored a season-low 11 points on 3-for-13 shooting in Wednesday night's loss to Seton Hall, acknowledged his offensive effort and then talked defense.

St. John's broke from a 33-30 halftime lead with a 13-5 run and Sealy had the final nine points of the run. His two free throws with 16:24 to play capped the run and gave the Redmen their first double-figure lead, 46-35.

N.C. State 90
No. 24 Georgia Tech 83

RALEIGH, N.C. — Rodney Monroe scored a career-high 48 points to help North Carolina State rally in the second half.

Monroe got within 9 points of the school single-game scoring record by former Wolfpack All-American David Thompson, who was on hand. Monroe also scored the most points of any N.C. State player in an Atlantic Coast Conference game. Thompson's record of 58 points came against Buffalo State in 1974.

N.C. State (8-3, 2-0 in the ACC) trailed 50-38 at halftime before Monroe went on his binge. He scored 31 points in the second half on 13-of-21 field goal attempts. N.C. State missed its last 14 shots of the first half and couldn't muster the defense to stop the Yellow Jackets inside.

Porter, Williams lead Blazers

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Terry Porter had 26 points and 10 assists and Buck Williams scored 24 points and led a third-quarter burst Sunday night as the Portland Trail Blazers stopped a two-game losing streak, beating New Jersey 116-101 and sending the Nets to their 10th straight loss.

The Nets led 63-62 with 6:53 left in the third period when Portland scored 12 consecutive points, six by Williams. The Trail Blazers led by at least six points the rest of the game.

Portland, which leads the NBA with 31 victories, has not lost three in a row. The Nets have lost 13 of their last 15.

Williams, formerly with the Nets, also had 10 rebounds and Kevin Duckworth added 22 points for Portland. Mookie Blaylock led the Nets with 23 points and 12 assists and Reggie Theus scored 22.

Lakers 106, Rockets 97

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Vlade Divac scored a season-high 22 points and James Worthy added 21 as Los Angeles handed Houston its 14th consecutive regular-season defeat at the Forum.

Seven players scored in double figures for the Lakers, who recorded their seventh straight home triumph — their longest such streak since capturing their final 13 home games of last season.

Otis Thorpe scored 24 points for the Rockets, who remained winless here in the regular season since Jan. 30, 1985.

Houston is 2-3 since losing center Akeem Olajuwon, and they won't see him back at practice for at least another eight weeks.

Amateur wins in Tucson

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Phil Mickelson escaped the chill embrace of a snowman in the desert and, with birdies on two of the last three holes, gained a little piece of golfing history on Sunday.

In golfers' parlance, a "snowman" is a score of 8 on a hole. And it was that ugly number Mickelson achieved after hitting two shots into the Arizona-Sonora desert and one into a bunker on the 14th hole.

From a one-stroke lead when he stepped on the tee, the handsome young man went to three behind and a tie for fifth when he left the green.

"I never thought I'd see anyone come back from something like that," said Corey Pavin, who played with Mickelson in the final group on the TPC at Starpass.

But the 20-year-old left-hander took advantage of a massive collapse by veteran pros and, with a victory in the Northern Telecom Open, became only the second amateur since 1954 to win a PGA Tour event.

Mickelson, a junior at Arizona State who already has matched one of Jack Nicklaus' amateur marks, scored this triumph over adversity with a closing 71 and a 272 total, 16 under par.

The numbers hardly tell the entire tale, however.

Mickelson's debacle from sand and scrub on the par-5 14th appeared to drop him out of contention and leave the struggle to Tom Purtzer, a 39-year-old veteran in his 17th season on the tour, and former PGA champion Bob Tway.

But Purtzer, playing well in front of Mickelson, blew the lead when he chunked his approach into the front bunker on the 18th hole, failed to get it out and took a double bogey.

Moments later, Tway, playing the 17th, missed the green and failed on a 10-foot par-saving putt.

That dropped each of them back to 15 under par, tied for the lead and one in front of the amateur.

Mickelson, steady and composed as a man twice his age, responded by lofting his approach within a foot of the flag on the 16th.

Almost incredibly, the birdie put him back into a share of the lead.

With a fine sense of drama, the youngster made a routine par on the 17th and saved the clincher for the final hole.

There, he hit his second shot about 8 feet to the left of the pin and — it seemed almost inevitable — made the winning putt, hugged his coach-caddy Steve Loy and strolled into the howling gallery.

"I went from having the biggest knot in my stomach to the greatest joy in a half hour," Mickelson said.

"He's a special kid," said Purtzer, who had closing 67 and tied Tway for second at 273.

"He's a kid you'd like to have as a son or brother," Purtzer said, then added, with a wry smile:

"I just want them to make sure he stays in school for two more years."

And that's his plan.

Mickelson said he intends to complete his degree in psychology in the spring of 1992 before joining the pro ranks.

"Money is not a problem," the native of San Diego said. "I'm on a scholarship and my folks help me."

Mickelson won the national collegiate championship as a freshman in 1989, repeated last year and added the U.S. Amateur title. He joined Nicklaus as the only men to win both the NCAA and the national amateur in the same season.

When he does turn pro, he will have a 1½-year exemption on the PGA Tour, a pass through the Tour Qualifying School and a "can't-miss" label awaiting him.

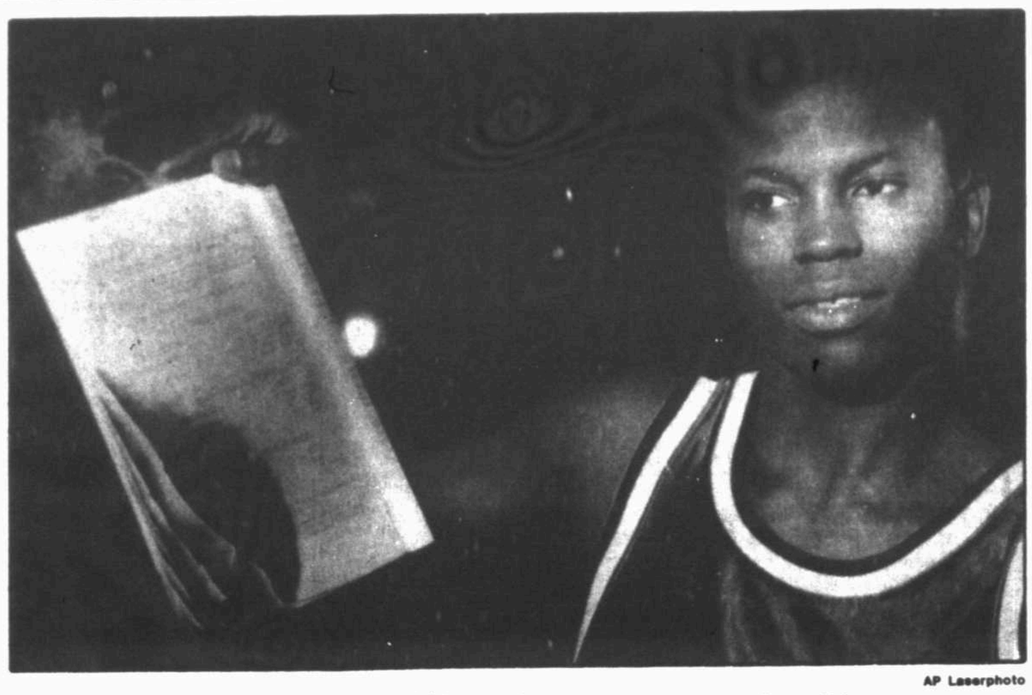

Those are the rewards of his victory.

But the money went elsewhere. As an amateur, he could not accept the $180,000 first prize.

Tway, who had a final-round 68, and Purtzer split the first and second place checks, each pocketing $144,000 from the total purse of $1 million.

Craig Stadler was fourth alone at 70-275.

John Cook, Brian Tennyson, Jeff Maggert and David Peoples tied at 276. Cook shot 66. Tennyson and Maggert each had a 69. Peoples, once tied for the lead, had a 73 that included four consecutive back-nine bogeys.

Huntsville guard Eathan O'Bryant has burned through foes this season.

Clements brothers aren't only passers in Huntsville

Prep Basketball

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — If you ever wondered what Magic Johnson could have done against high school competition, get a load of Eathan O'Bryant.

O'Bryant, a senior point guard for the Huntsville Hornets, is bringing more than passing recognition to a school known better for its football-flinging brothers — Steve and Chuck Clements.

In a Dec. 17 game with A&M Consolidated, O'Bryant recorded 20 assists — Texas' second-highest known total of assists at the Class 5A level.

"I was surprised," O'Bryant said after learning of his near-record performance. "I didn't think it was that good."

O'Bryant is rarely at a loss to set up a teammate for a dunk or easy basket.

"Sometimes you need a little bit of creativity to get the bench into the game and that gets them hyped up. We just get on another level after that," O'Bryant said.

Huntsville, a member of District 15-5A, was playing A&M Consolidated (District 21-4A) in the championship game of the Tigers' own tournament. A&M Consolidated was Class 4A's 18th ranked team the week of O'Bryant's effort.

Huntsville won the game 103-83. The line score on O'Bryant read: 10 points, 20 assists, four rebounds and three steals.

O'Bryant was taken out of the game with four minutes left having pocketed a total of 18 assists. With 1:30 left in the contest, Hornets' coach Jim McDaniel found out that O'Bryant was within striking distance of the school's record of 19 assists and O'Bryant returned to the court.

"I would have felt real bad if he had gotten hurt or not got the record," McDaniel said after the game. "But records are made to be broken."

"I knew that was why they put me back in," O'Bryant said. "(Assistant) Coach (Joe) Cammarata just told me to penetrate and get it back out to someone so they could score. I knew I could get it."

Only Fort Worth Dunbar legend Derrick Daniels has a higher known mark in 5A basketball.

Wildcat coach Robert Hughes said Daniels finished with 22 assists in a game and is the nation's all-time assist leader with 1,379. Daniels now weaves his way through the Southwest Conference as the University of Houston's playmaker.

"I don't remember the exact game or year, but I know he had 22 in a game," Hughes said. "I've got it on a score sheet around here somewhere.

"Our tallest player that year was 6-3 so we used a running game where we turned the guards loose. He would get a lot of assists on fast breaks."

O'Bryant's mark stands as the 12th highest number of assists in the history of American schoolboy basketball and the fourth highest in Texas, according to the National High School Records Book.

Although O'Bryant is averaging 7.1 assists per contest, he also leads the team in scoring (21.4), steals (2.87) and 3-pointers (32 for season).

Brian Katt coached his sons Elgin and Jerry into the record books as the top assist men in the history of Texas high school basketball.

At Saltillo, Elgin Katt handed out 25 assists in a game against Detroit. Elgin also had 22 assists against White Wright.

Saltillo competes in District 38-A.

While at Fayetteville Jerry Katt had 22 assists in a game against Round Top-Carmine. Fayetteville is in District 59-A.

All of the Katt brothers' records came in 1988.

"We spent a lot of time in the gym," said Brian Katt, who now lives in Splendora. "We ran the fast break a lot and would get a lot of assists off the break."

The University Interscholastic League keeps no high school basketball records, although for entry in the National High School Records Book, stat sheets must verified by the UIL's office in Austin.

Daniel Tirado has the national record for assists with 34. Tirado played high school ball in New York.

O'Bryant said he was playing basketball against state champions as long as 10 years ago.

Shoal Creek issue changes clubs

N.Y. Times News Service

Golf

It's still debatable whether what has come to be known simply as "Shoal Creek" sounded the death knell for the nation's exclusionary private golf clubs or was merely an annoying wake-up alarm that has left most of America's privileged reaching for the snooze button.

When the Shoal Creek Country Club, an all-white club near Birmingham, Ala., gave a black man an honorary membership last July as part of an agreement to head off picketing of the PGA Championship by civil rights groups, Arthur Ashe, whose recent three-volume work charts the progress of the black athlete in America, called it a major breakthrough.

"What happened at Shoal Creek is only 20 percent about sports," Ashe said. "It's about society, commerce and culture. It's the upper echelon of white society finally being forced to say, 'All right, it's time.' "

"We are going to see a veritable flood of quiet, muted but very significant invitations to blacks to join previously all-white clubs," Ashe predicted. "In two or three years, it's going to be completely different."

Six months later, a lot has happened, and some things are indeed different. Because of Shoal Creek, major professional golf will almost surely never again be played at clubs with exclusionary membership practices. Several prestigious clubs that hold tournaments, most notably Augusta National, now have a black member or are in the process of admitting one or more.

Increased attention has been focused on public figures and their relationship with these clubs. When Tom Watson resigned from the Kansas City Country Club recently because it refused membership to Jewish businessman Henry Bloch, it was news. (The club later reversed its decision, but Watson did not re-join.)

And it was news when Vice President Dan Quayle recently played Cypress Point, the highly exclusive club on the Monterey Peninsula that terminated its association with the PGA Tour rather than conform to a new anti-discrimination policy.

But a large question remains: How much has Shoal Creek actually changed the attitudes fundamental to the perpetuation of exclusionary or all-white golf clubs?

So far, this is still a matter of opinion. Many observers say six months is too short time to reverse or even measure a mind-set.

German breaks long-standing freestyle record

Swimming

PERTH, Australia (AP) — Joerg Hoffmann shattered one of swimming's longest-standing world records Sunday, chopping more than four seconds off Vladimir Salnikov's mark in the men's 1,500-meter freestyle at the World Swimming Championships.

Hoffmann, who won the 400 freestyle Friday, took the lead at the 500-meter mark and the German held off a challenge by early leader Kieren Perkins to win his second gold in 14 minutes, 50.36 seconds.

Salnikov presented a bottle of champagne to Hoffmann at the post-race news conference.

Perkins also was well under Salnikov's previous mark of 14:54.72. He came in at 14:50.58 after setting a blistering pace on a windy night. The two never were more than 1.01 seconds apart at any of the 100-meter splits.

"I knew I could swim this time because that is what I've trained for," Hoffmann said. "All I needed was someone like Perkins to push me along."

Prior to Sunday's race, only Salnikov and Australia's Glen Housman had ever been officially under 14:56.00. Housman had a 14:55.25 last year.

In addition, Housman had the world's fastest recorded time, a 14.53.59 at the Commonwealth Games last February. That was hand-timed, however, and only electronic timing is recoginized for world records.

Housman never was a factor in the world-title race, finishing fifth in 15:12.42 in the fastest 1,500 freestyle eight-man finish in history.

Tamas Darnyi broke the two-minute barrier in the men's 200 individual medley, his second world mark and second title of the meet.

Darnyi, defending world and Olympic champion, won in 1:59.36 to shatter the previous mark David Wharton set in 1989.

"I knew I was going to break the world record before the race," Darnyi said. "I didn't know I had it won for sure until the finish."

Wharton was not even in the race. He failed to qualify for the final, putting in the ninth-fastest time in morning heats and having to settle for a first-place 2:03.10 in the consolation race that followed Darnyi's world record.

"I did not swim well this meet," Wharton said. "If I knew what was wrong, I'd have done something to try to fix it."

Second to Darnyi was Eric Namesnik of the United States, in 2:01.87. Namesnik chased Darnyi home in a world-record 4:12.36 last Tuesday.

Third was Christian Gessner of Germany in 2:02.36.

Summer Sanders of the United States got her first gold medal after a silver and a bronze. She won the women's 200 butterfly in 2:09.24, almost two seconds better than runner-up Rie Shito of Japan in 2:11.06. Hayley Lewis of Australia, the 200 freestyle winner, was third at 2:11.09.

"My coach kept telling me that each race is going to get better and better as the meet goes on. This is a great way to end it — I'm real happy," Sanders said.

Zhuang Yong of China won the women's 50 in 25.47 seconds. Catherine Plewinski of France and Leigh Ann Fetter finished in a dead heat for second at 25.50, equalling Fetter's American record.

World record-holder Yang Wenyi of China tied for fourth with America's Jenny Thompson at 25.87.

Krisztina Egerszegi of Hungary won the women's 200 backstroke in a meet-record 2:09.15 seconds.

It was the fifth gold medal for Hungarian swimmers and Egerszegi's second. She also won the 100 backstroke.

Second was Germany's Dagmar Hase in 2:12.01, with Janie Wagstaff of the United States third in 2:13.14.

Arlington stadium vote too close to call

ARLINGTON (AP) — Residents here support a sales tax increase to fund a new stadium for the Texas Rangers, a recent poll shows, but a large percentage of undecided voters make Saturday's election too close to call, analysts say.

The Fort Worth Star-Telegram polled 729 registered voters Jan. 2-5 and asked voters: "If the election were held today, would you support the proposed half-cent increase in city sales tax or oppose it?"

Among respondents, 51.9 percent said they would approve the tax hike, while 34.7 percent said they opposed the increase. But 13.4 percent said they were undecided.

The poll had a sampling error of plus or minus 3.7 percent.

Baseball

"If I were asked to use these numbers to predict an outcome, I wouldn't dare; it's a toss-up," said Gerry Tyson of the Tyson group, a Fort Worth political consulting firm.

The Rangers say they need the $165 million ballpark, which would seat approximately 45,000 to 50,000, to compete in the American League. The current site, originally built as a minor-league park, seats 43,508.

One of the poll's most important findings was that most respondents believe Arlington will keep the Rangers regardless of Saturday's outcome, Tyson said.

West jumps on East early in Japan Bowl

YOKOHAMA, Japan (AP) — The West college all-stars did it all in the first 10 minutes.

Taking command behind the passing of Oregon's Bill Musgrave and a dominating defense, the West led 17-0 with 5:21 still left in the first quarter. The East never recovered.

Musgrave completed 12 of 18 passes for 154 yards as the West won 20-14, its 11th victory in 16 Japan Bowls.

"It was a pretty fun first quarter," Musgrave said. "We had a lot of good receivers to throw to."

After only three days of practice, West coach Don James of Washington said it "amazed me how well they played. We simplified the offense and defense, and they went out and played it."

Football

California's Robbie Keen gave the West a 3-0 lead with a 42-yard field goal. On the West's next possession, Musgrave led the team on a three-play, 61-yard scoring drive.

After Musgrave completed a 39-yard pass Colorado's Mike Pritchard and a 10-yard toss to UCLA's Scott Miller, Ricky Ervins of Southern Cal completed the drive with a 12-yard TD run.

The West got the ball right back when Stanford's Jono Tunney intercepted a pass and returned it 27 yards to the East 8. Three plays later, Iowa's Nick Bell scored on a 3-yard run to give the West a 17-0 lead.

Meanwhile, the East offense failed to get past midfield in the first quarter.

The East finally scored with 1:56 left in the first half after gaining possession on an interception by Florida's Richard Fain.

Insilco Corp. seeking reorganization

By John Paul Pitts
Business & Oil Editor

Midland-based Insilco Corp., owned by Wagner & Brown, a Midland oil and gas partnership, filed Sunday for reorganization under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code. However, the filing will have no impact on Insilco's normal operations or any financial impact on Wagner & Brown, said a spokesman.

Insilco Corp., a diversified manufacturer of specialty products for the automotive, telecommunications, electronics, defense, and consumer markets, employs 6,600 at facilities in 18 states and overseas. It employs 42 at its corporate headquarters in the Summit Building at Marienfeld and Illinois streets in Midland.

Spokesman Grant Billingsley said Insilco operations would continue as normal, and that the voluntary refiling would have no impact on employees.

"No plants or stores will be closed and no one will lose their job," he said. Under Chapter 11 terms, Insilco will remain the "debtor in possession" responsible for all operations. He said Insilco had developed close relationships with its vendors and expected their support to continue.

Billingsley stressed that Wagner & Brown's business, customers and employees will not be affected by the filing. "Neither will the filing have any substantive negative effect on the financial affairs of the two partners, personally or individually," he said.

He explained that, while Midlanders Cy Wagner and Jack Brown are the principal investors in Insilco and while Wagner & Brown provide services to Insilco under a management contract, all Wagner and Brown enterprises are entirely separate from and unrelated to Insilco.

"There is no liability imposed on the Wagner & Brown enterprises by Insilco and the two operations have always been operated as separate and distinct entities," he said.

Wagner & Brown purchased Insilco in 1988 for $812 million as part of an ongoing effort to diversify their energy-based business with non-oil-related enterprises. The purchase was made through a corporate entity in which both men invested personally.

While Insilco has maintained strong operations and a positive cash flow, excluding interest, declining financial performance resulting from an increasingly difficult business climate and a recessionary economy had made it unlikely that the company would be able to meet its ongoing interest and debt requirements. Debt expense for 1990 was estimated at $113.5 million.

For the nine months ended Sept. 30, 1990, Insilco reported a net loss of $52.4 million on sales of $501.3 million, with an operating income of $44.8 million.

The Chapter 11 filing was made only after more than eight months of negotiations with a steering committee of the

Electronics show offers new gizmos

■ The Consumer Electronics Show offers a wide variety of new gadgets, from a wristwatch that can record messages to a device that lets a camcorder follow its signal.

By John Antczak

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Need to jot a note but you don't have a pen? Tell your wristwatch. Tired of never being in your own home videos because you're operating the camera? Turn on your ultrasonic belt transmitter.

The 1991 winter Consumer Electronics Show offers among 800,000 square feet of displays a few products to pique the interest of a generation that might be on the verge of becoming blase about amazing little electronic boxes.

The wrist-mounted ChatterBox, promoted at the four-day show that began Thursday, can record voice messages up to 15 seconds long on memory chips and then play them back on demand.

For the other wrist there is Saitek Ltd.'s Sunwatch, which can be programmed with the wearer's skin type and protection factor of a sun screen lotion. It monitors intensity of ultraviolet light and indicates when "safe sun time" has expired.

A gizmo that will tug at camcorder enthusiasts is In The Picture. The device mounts between a tripod and a video camera and tracks the signal from a transmitter on a subject's belt, making the camera follow the signal.

For the audiophile with any space left on the rack, the Kenwood Co. is showing a prototype of a home compact disc machine that records on blank discs. The blanks can only be recorded once, but unlike other recording CD systems these discs can be played on any CD player. Professional systems are already being sold overseas to radio stations, but Kenwood did not indicate when the home unit might be marketed.

NEC is featuring TurboExpress, a handheld portable video game that is compatible with a home system.

Royal is exhibiting a Travel Translator, which translates travel-related words and sentences in six languages — English, Spanish, French, German, Italian and Dutch.

The industry's winter show at the Las Vegas Convention Center had more than 1,500 exhibitors. Major trends were obvious in huge displays of so-called home

U.S. produced, used less oil in 1990 as consumption falls

By Matthew L. Wald
N.Y. Times News Service

Driven by war fears, recession and the weather, the nation's petroleum consumption fell in 1990, the first year-to-year drop in seven years, the American Petroleum Institute said Friday.

Although the government has called for conservation, the institute said other factors were responsible this year.

Domestic oil production, meanwhile, fell to 7.2 million barrels a day — the lowest level since 1961. That is down 389,000 barrels a day, or 5.1 percent, from 1989.

Since 1985, production is down 1.73 million barrels a day. Victor A. Burk, an oil expert at Arthur Anderson & Co. in Houston, said that decline was equivalent to the prewar production of Kuwait, and its effect on the world oil market was "almost as if all the production from some of the OPEC countries had gone away."

Both use and domestic output are expected to fall further this year: consumption because of the weak economy and high prices, and production because American reserves are being pumped dry. The most attractive drilling prospects are now abroad.

The year-end report by the institute, the industry's main trade association, comes as the Energy Department is in the midst of an ambitious program to keep American production high because of the crisis in the Persian Gulf..

Washington's efforts, and higher domestic prices, may in fact have had a small effect. While the decline in domestic crude production last year was large, it was not as steep as in the previous year, when the drop was 527,000 barrels a day.

Despite the figures, analysts say that from an investor's point of view, this is not an industry in decline. The drop in domestic deliveries, the industry's main measure of consumption, was 2.1 percent, to 16.96 million barrels a day, or about 28 percent of world production.

George Friesen, an analyst at Deutsche Bank Group, said, "I don't think declines of that magnitude are going to have a significant impact on profitability in refining and marketing. Refinery utilization is still tight."

He predicted a further decline in 1991, of about 1.2 percent.

The decline in domestic production may not be bad news for the oil industry, said Michael L. Mayer, an analyst at Wertheim Schroder.

"The industry has to maximize profits and cash flows," he said. "If greater flows can be generated by exploring for and developing resources outside of the United States, then that's where they ought to go."

Companies used to give development prospects in this country the benefit of the doubt in comparison with those in foreign countries, because even if the geologic prospects were questionable, the political risk was low. But, Mayer said, "it's just not true" any longer.

"What's the risk of a Point Arguello?"

Snapper lays off 550 in Fort Worth

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Snapper Power Equipment Co. will close its Fort Worth plant and lay off 550 workers in a consolidation move projected to save $10 million annually, the company said Friday.

Workers were told of the closing at a meeting Friday morning. The plant operates on a four-day week of 10-hour days and is usually closed Friday.

A study done for Snapper's parent company, Atlanta-based Fuqua Industries Inc., recommended reconfiguring the assembly line at a plant in McDonough, Ga., and closing the Fort Worth plant and one in Beatrice, Neb.

About 55 workers will be idled in Beatrice. The plants will be closed by mid-March and the consolidation will be finished by the end of the year.

"It's an economic decision," said Donna Browning, vice president of public relations for Fuqua. "We can do a better job from a manufacturing standpoint by consolidating.

'Park' disk drives before moving them

By Dennis Sever

We are soon to reorganize our offices. This involves moving lots of equipment including our computers. We have several IBM Personal Computers and assorted IBM clones. Do you think that we could do it or should we hire a specialty firm to come move the computers? If so, then who?

Sever

I think that you could probably move the computers yourselves if you are willing to take some precautions. First park the disk drives.—'PARK' means to execute a program designed to position the disk drive heads over a special area of the disk surface. This prevents a bump, tilt, or other jarring motion from causing the disk read-write heads from coming into contact with part of the disk surface that is currently storing data. There are several programs of this type available in the public domain or from computer vendors. Second, if your computers have been stationary for some time, then you can expect some of the boards to work loose and these will have to be reseated before the computer works after it has been moved.—In other words, you can expect to have some problems with the computer after it has been moved. These problems can normally be corrected by simply opening the computer and gently removing, then reseating each of the boards. When you do this be sure that you ground yourself to discharge any static electricity that you may be storing before you touch any parts of the computer. Another precaution that I advise you to take is to cover the computer when it is not in use if there is any construction or even heavy duty cleaning going on in the immediate area.

Which is the correct terminology, 'micro-computer' or 'personal' computer?

What I tell my students is that any computer based upon the micro-chip technology is a microcomputer.—This includes personal computers as well as fuel and ignition system monitoring computers in new automobiles, guidance systems in jets, missiles, and space shuttles and traffic light controllers. Personal computers are those microcomputers that an individual user might use. There are new categories arising all the time, like desktop computers as opposed to towers, and file servers, and work stations, and super-micros. It can all get pretty confusing and I'm not sure that the lines are drawn real clearly.

If you were just entering college and you really liked working with computers what would you study?

It is virtually impossible for anyone to expect to go to college these days and not be training on computers and training to work with computers. If the objective of your study is computers then the first degree should be computer science, computer engineering, electronic engineering or information systems management. If you are just starting college, you shouldn't try to decide what you want to do in the freshman year, I promise that there will be computers involved in almost any career you choose.

Prices down

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices fell modestly on Friday, as traders were reluctant to place many last-minute bets on war or peace going into the weekend before Iraq's deadline to abandon Kuwait.

Gold advances

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar finished mixed in subdued trading on world currency markets Friday as investors retreated to the sidelines to await the U.N. deadline for Iraq to withdraw from Kuwait.

Gold prices advanced. On the New York Commodity Exchange, gold bullion for current delivery rose $1.20 a troy ounce to settle at $391.60, Republic National Bank quoted a late bid for gold of $391.35 an ounce, up 85 cents.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Thursday's rates, included: 1.5295 German marks, up from 1.5270; 1.2766 Swiss francs, down from 1.2825; 5.1855 French francs, up from 5.1810; 1,150.00 Italian lire, up from 1,149.00; and 1.1528 Canadian dollars, unchanged.

Silver prices were mixed. On New York's Comex, silver bullion for current delivery settled at $4.130 a troy ounce, up from $4.099 on Thursday. But in London, the metal slipped to a late bid of $4.14 a troy ounce, from $4.17.

Market edges up

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market edged upward in quiet trading Friday as traders looked ahead to a weekend of suspense surrounding the Persian Gulf.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 2.73 to 2,501.49, trimming its loss for the week to 64.60 points.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 15 to 14 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 751 up, 701 down and 540 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 123.05 million shares, against 124.51 million in the previous session. Nationwide.

Bush supporter

Staff Report

Former Midlander and founder of Permian Corp., Walter Davis, placed a full page ad in the Washington Post Thursday, praising President Bush for his position on the Gulf crisis, according to a source with the Washington Post.

In the ad, which costs approximately $25,000, Davis called Saddam Hussein a threat to civilization, that comes just as the world is trying to reconcile on peaceful terms.

theater products and home office devices.

In addition, it clearly demonstrated the explosion of cellular telephones and accessories. The sponsoring Electronics Industries Association noted that cellular exhibit space had increased 50 percent over last winter's show.

The recession and threat of war in the Persian Gulf were acknowledged as industry challenges but not long-term problems.

Richard A. Kraft, president of Matsushita Electric Corp., noted in a keynote address that personal savings are rising and Americans are becoming thriftier.

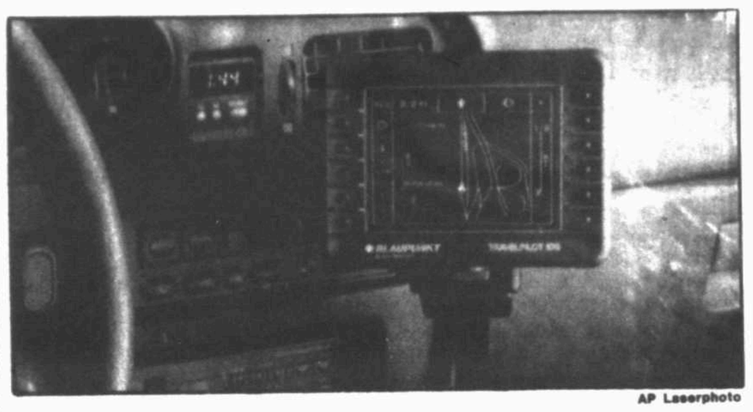

But Kraft suggested that consumers have only postponed spending, waiting for a better economic outlook that will unleash their "pent up demand."

The industry experienced double-digit growth in the mid-1980s. Growth has slowed to 3 percent to 4 percent a year, industry officials report, producing $33 billion in sales in 1990.

Like Kraft, exhibitors also are optimistic.

George Kunz, representative of electronics distributor Vistatech Ltd., showed off an Italian-made Roman-Cyrillic typewriter that switches between the two alphabets with the push of a button. It could do well at about $800 retail, he suggested.

"Today, with connections with Eastern Bloc countries, I think there will be a lot of use," he said.

OIL: Decline slows in '91

(From 5C)

"Chevron invested $2 billion there, and has produced zip."

Production at the Point Arguello field, off the Southern California coast near Santa Barbara, has been held up by fear of oil spills.

The decline in American output will probably be smaller in 1991, experts said, because of higher crude prices and other factors. Richard Nehring, president of NRG Associates, in Colorado Springs, said the decline would probably be 2 percent or 3 percent.

To spur production, the recent budget agreement included tax breaks for oil and gas drillers, but the industry has asked for more concessions, including access to offshore and Arctic areas closed for environmental reasons.

The National Energy Strategy, prepared mostly by the Energy Department and under consideration by the White House, is expected to call for more concessions, but critics have argued a "supply side" policy, which would reduce consumption in transportation and other fields by improving efficiency, would cut imports more.

The 20 percent loss in output in recent years, plus growth in demand, has been made up by imports. In 1990, however, imports were more or less flat. The import share of domestic deliveries was 46.9 percent last year, up from 46.2 percent in 1989.

Deliveries of all leading oil products declined, except for jet fuel, which rose about 3.6 percent for the year because commercial miles flown increased by about 5 percent, the institute said.

This was not good news for airlines, however, because they "added flights more quickly in 1990 than they added passengers," according to the institute's report.

Deliveries of gasoline, the biggest single petroleum product, fell 1.7 percent. Prices rose 30 cents a gallon between August and October, contributing to a fourth-quarter decline in consumption of about 3 percent, compared with the last quarter of 1989, the institute said.

Gasoline consumption has been moderated in the past by the gradual turnover in the nation's auto fleet, as newer cars, which get better fuel economy, replace older ones. But in the fourth quarter, the drop was large enough to suggest Americans had driven less.

The drop in use of other forms of oil was partly weather-related.

Meeting will explain RTC contracting

The Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring a luncheon for businesses interested in doing business with the Resolution Trust Corp.

The Resolution Trust Corporation, a private agency, contracted by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation to manage or liquidate millions of dollars of assets is looking for a wide variety of contractors, according to Elvia Hernandez, President.

Included are: contractors, temporary service agencies, movers, property managers, bookkeepers, accountants, realtors and many other professions, says Hernandez.

Becky Cervantes of the Resolution Trust Corp. will explain procedures for contracting with RTC.

The luncheon meeting will be Tuesday, January 22, at the Ramada Hotel. Cost is $10 per person and reservations may be made by calling the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce.

company's bondholders failed to yield an agreed restructuring of the company debt.

On May 1, 1990, Insilco had proposed a recapitalization that included exchange offers for outstanding senior subordinated notes and subordinated discount debentures and an equity contribution.

Said Billingsley: "After reviewing all available options, management concluded that a filing was necessary to preserve the assets and values of the Insilco operations and to protect the interests of its key constituents, namely our employees, suppliers, customers and creditors." He said management was confident that the Insilco companies could be rehabilitated in Chapter 11 and that a special management team will devote its full attention to reorganization.

Excluded in the Chapter 11 filing were the Insilco subsidary operations of DacEasy Inc., Stewart Connector Systems Inc., Taylor Publishing Co., and Valentec International Corp.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

The ins and outs of compensation plans

By Bill Doyle

Q. In 1988, the company I worked for offered a deferred compensation plan, with the money going into a mutual fund. I left that job in 1989, so I no longer can contribute to the plan.

Can I switch my money in that plan to the deferred compensation plan at my present place of employment or into my existing individual retirement account?

A. Whether or not you can move the money from one deferred compensation plan to another deferred compensation plan depends on the provisions of the two plans. Some will allow that move. Some won't.

Doyle

The only way you will learn if you can transfer that nest egg is by getting the details on the plans from the personnel departments at both your present and former places of employment.

Assuming the deferred comp plan at your old job meets Internal Revenue Service regulations as a "qualified retirement plan," as the vast majority of such plans do, you definitely can roll over that money into an individual retirement account.

But note this. Some IRA sponsors and custodians permit money rolled over from other retirement plans to be placed in a regular IRA, into which annual contributions can be made. Other IRA sponsors and custodians insist that rolled over money go into a separate rollover IRA. Check that out where you have existing IRA.

No matter which method you use, you will keep the money deferred from income tax until you make withdrawals, which you will be required to do after age 701/2.

Q. I am confused by the annual statements from the mutual fund in which I have deferred compensation plan from a former job. The value of the account and the number of shares keeps going down. I was informed an $18 custodial fee was being deducted from my account. It's that a high charge?

A. In many such plans, no custodial fee is charged while you are an employee but is levied after you leave. In that case, full and fractional shares equal to the amount of the fee are cashed out — reducing the number of shares in the account.

The fund you named in your letter has been a poor performer. Its share value has declined. The combination of fewer shares and drop in share value accounts for the lower total value of your account.

I'd say it's time for you to consider moving that account. Lots of mutual funds with far better performance records offer IRAs with annual custodial fees below $18. Many banks and savings and loan associations have IRAs with no fees at all.

Q. Brokerage firms offer mutual funds that hold government bonds of foreign countries. The high ratings and high yields of those funds, compared to funds holding U.S. government securities, look tempting.

Would you advise retirees to invest in foreign bond funds?

A. No, for two reasons.

You're mistaken about the bonds of foreign government and mutual funds holding those bonds being rated high "compared to" their U.S. counterparts. U.S. Treasury securities are the highest rated in the world. Bonds of some — repeat, SOME — foreign governments are, as the old expression goes, "Close, but no cigar." Most such bonds are rated way below Treasuries.

Secondly, by buying foreign securities, you take on foreign exchange risk. When the U.S. dollar weakens against other currencies, the values of foreign securities rise. When the U.S. dollar strengthens, just the opposite happens.

Sure, "dollar-bashing" is popular these days. But our currency has always recovered and I'm convinced it will in the future. Most senior citizens can't afford the risk of betting against the U.S. dollar.

Bankers wince at 1930s prospects

■ Bankers cringe a prospect of depression-style bank closings.

NEW YORK (AP) — At first glance, history appears to be repeating itself in the banking industry. Reports of bank failures, a weakened deposit insurance system, bank holidays, and images of angry depositors outside closed institutions conjure up the industry's worst days in the 1930s.

The Rhode Island credit union crisis and the federal seizure the failed Bank of New England on Sunday are the most recent illustrations of the troubles in the industry, where 734 banks with $102 billion in total assets have perished since mid-1987.

But bankers cringe at Depression-era comparisons. They say the latest troubles are due to tough competition from foreign banks, rising defaults in commercial real estate loans, heavy government regulation, and infringement on traditional lines of business such as credit cards from non-banking companies.

In interviews Monday, analysts acknowledged the deep economic problems in the Northeast but said the Rhode Island and Bank of New England crises — for now, at least — are aberrations.

"The failure of the Bank of New England didn't come as any surprise. The (Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.) has reserves for the type of assistance that it's providing," said Mark Burneko, spokesman for American Bankers Association in Washington.

Consumers can take comfort if their accounts have FDIC insurance, he said. The corporation guarantees deposits up to $100,000. In Bank of New England's case, the FDIC agreed to protect all deposits regardless of the amount because of the bank's strong ties to the region's economy. That decision is expected to add $300 million to the government's bailout.

"No one's lost a dollar in every federally insured deposit and there's no reason that they would be at risk," said Fritz Elmendorf, spokesman for the Consumer Bankers Association in Arlington, Va.

But a series of bank failures has drained the fund to $9 billion by the end of 1990. The Bush administration and the industry are advancing proposals to inject fresh funds into the bank fund without taxpayer assistance.

The government's takeover of the Bank of New England, the nation's 33rd largest, could wind up costing $2.3 billion, the FDIC estimated. Rhode Island's 45 credit unions and banks were closed temporarily Jan. 1 when a private deposit insurance fund became insolvent. On Monday, 22 credit unions reopened with new federal deposit insurance.

Burneko and others also said the banking industry remains profitable, though overall earnings are down from previous years.

In the first three quarters of 1990, commercial banks reported $15.41 billion in net income. The FDIC reported 89 percent of the nation's 12,399 banks earned money in the third quarter ending in September.

A few healthy banks are flaunting their solvency and safety as the fortunes of others decline. The Merchants Bank of New York, for example, is advertising that its portfolio lacks junk bonds, Third World loans, or large numbers of commercial real estate loans. The Bank of New England's aggressive commercial real estate lending in New England tight economy is widely believed to be its downfall.

"We're very proud of our status as a safe bank," said James Lawrence, president and chief executive officer of Merchants Bank. The bank has seen some interest from out-of-state depositors.

Despite Merchants' boasting, Lawrence said: "It's not over in the New England area. They are having some hard times, but I don't think everyone is running for new banks at this time."

Bank of Boston spokeswoman Connie Hubbell said the bank has received numerous inquries.

STATE IN BRIEF

Police canine disarms suspect

PLANO (AP) — The slogan "Take A Bite Out Of Crime" is being practiced by Blitz the police dog.

The canine stopped a possible shootout between a gun-wielding suspect and two Plano officers when he clamped his jaws around the man's arm, the dog's trainer said.

"Once the excitement was over, I looked at the dog and thought, 'This dog saved my life,' and I felt extreme joy," said K-9 Officer Rick McDonald.

Jerry Tarter, 47, of Plano was arrested and treated for a dog bite, then charged with two counts of attempted murder. He was being held in lieu of $200,000 bail.

The incident began when Plano officer Mike McCreary answered a "Peeping Tom" call about 1 a.m. Friday.

GED probe continues

AUSTIN (AP) — State officials are still investigation a security breach involving the high school equivalency exam, but testing has resumed at many of the state's 230 General Educational Development testing centers.

Each testing center ordered new materials from Washington to administer the writing portion of the GED test.

The security breach discovered in November, which shut down certification statewide, involved public disclosure of the exam's 200-word essay section. Officials said they cannot yet explain how it happened.

"In about a week, we might know something on that," said Texas Education Agency spokeswoman Jorjanna Price. TEA administers the test.

Whistle-blower suit filed

AUSTIN (AP) — A fired mental health worker sued the state under the Texas Whistle Blower Act, saying he was dismissed after he told a federal court monitor that Austin State Hospital improperly tried to medicate an involuntarily committed patient.

Edward Sledge, who was fired in October, wants to be reinstated with back wages.

Austin social worker David Pharis, who monitors state mental hospitals for U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders of Dallas, determined that the hospital followed correct procedure in giving medication to the patient.

"My finding was that the hospital had implemented the (drug) rule properly," Pharis said.

Sledge's lawsuit said he refused to participate in giving the patient medication against the patient's will because he thought it was unlawful.

Hospital Superintendent Kenny Dudley said he could not comment on why he fired Sledge.

But he said, "If he believes he was terminated because he told somebody something, the position I've taken with employees here is they can consult anybody or talk to anybody they want to."

Sledge's lawsuit names as defendants Austin State Hospital, Dudley, the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation, and MHMR Commissioner Denny Jones.

'Gun play' costs officer

AUSTIN (AP) — A police officer accused of jokingly pointing a revolver at a subordinate's head was suspended without pay for five days, officials said.

"It was horseplay. It was ridiculous ... and should never have happened," Assistant Police Chief Ray Sanders said Friday.

According to internal investigators, Senior Sgt. J.B. Talley was joking when he pointed a revolver at an officer under his command last November.

His gun did not have a shell in the chamber, but there were bullets in the magazine, Sanders said.

There was no answer late Saturday afternoon at a telephone listing for Talley, who has been on the force 26 years. He is a supervisor assigned to the downtown walking beat.

Sanders said several officers reported they saw Talley aim a 9mm automatic pistol at another officer's head.

He said Talley pointed the gun in jest after another officer typed an attendance record into the department's computer system and joked that he would put Talley's name on it. Talley usually typed the attendance records.

KKK rally uneventful

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — The Ku Klux Klan came and went peacefully Saturday afternoon during their second rally in six months on the steps of the Caddo Parish Courthouse.

About 10 Klansmen dressed in white robes and hats and carrying Rebel flags participated in the rally. The area was surrounded by Caddo Parish deputies and tactical officers.

The 40-minute rally attracted a small group of black and white bystanders.

After the rally a crowd of people standing across the street in front of the Shreveport Prayer Center sang "Jesus Loves the Little Children."

Students' 'bottle-dropping' experiment makes a splash

By Mark Smith

BRYAN (AP) — While walking her dogs along Florida's scenic east coast, Georgia Ketchum was startled to discover a brown wine bottle containing a note from Texas students more than 1,100 miles away.

"When you see something like that you don't pass it up," said Ketchum, 62, a teacher's aide at Osceola Elementary School in Vero Beach, about 150 miles north of Miami.

"I was real excited."

Unknowingly, Ketchum had stumbled onto a "drift" experiment by third-grade students at St. Josephs Parochial School in Bryan.

The Texas students, attempting to better understand ocean currents, sealed one-page messages with return addresses in corked wine bottles.

The bottles were tossed overboard from Texas A&M University's 180-foot research vessel, the Gyre, last October and November near Florida, the Bahamas and Panama and along the Gulf Coast.

The bottle drops were the fourth and fifth in a two-year period.

Ketchum was among more than a dozen people finding the bottles on beaches in the Gulf of Mexico and the Caribbean Sea.

They ranged from a "humble fisherman" in Mexico and a 14-year-old Panamanian rock 'n' roll enthusiast, to a surfer and a retired Nebraska police officer vacationing on the Texas coast.

Tyson Robertson, a fourth-grader at Ketchum's school, also found a bottle on a Florida beach. His class responded by writing a letter to the bottle-senders in Bryan, hoping pen-pal friendships would result.

Tyson's teacher, Reynold Gervasio, said students sent photos of their class and asked about life in Texas, but have yet to receive a response.

St. Josephs Elementary third-grade teacher Connie Carson, whose students sent the bottles, said her students plan to write to the Florida students, along with other bottle discoverers.

"I'm busy tracking how far the bottles traveled from their release," Carson said. "The neat thing is that the longer the bottles are gone there is hope the bottles are going crazy floating to even farther away locations. The whole thing is something right out of Gilligan's Island."

The experiment has spurred interest in geography, spelling and writing.

"It's real fun, but you also learn something about other people and places," said Sean Taylor, 8. "You could also learn another language.

"The work is worth it. You really get a lot of fun out of it."

Sean's father, a Texas A&M oceanographer, dreamed up the experiment two years ago in an attempt to spark children's interest in the ocean.

"Given school finances, it would be tough to corral and bring children down to the ocean," he said. "So I thought it would be nice to cook up an experiment to bring it to life for students cooped up in the classroom.

"The kids are situated so far from the ocean. Most have never seen it."

Taylor, who said state-of-the-art drift experiments rely on electronic "markers" tracked by satellites, called the third-graders' experiment a success.

"The kids are learning things without anyone trying to cram anything down their throats," Taylor said.

Many of the children agree.

"I feel so excited because I've never done this before," said Thomas Swanner, 9. "My bottle could go anywhere — maybe to South America."

Brook Werlinger, 8, said two of her messages were found along Florida's east coast.

Laura Prawdzik, 8, said she now better understands the shifting ocean tides and currents.

"It was real neat because the bottles travel through the ocean and you don't know where they will land," she said. "It's sort of like getting pen pals, but you don't know where ... It's a weird way of getting pen pals."

St. Josephs principal Marta Swanner said the students were not all optimistic their bottles would be found.

"I don't think the kids ever imagined they would get responses," Swanner said. "I think initially it was the fun of writing the letters."

Bottle discoverers often say the find "made" their day or vacation.

"I want you to know that finding a note in a bottle was a highlight of my vacation and I wanted to be sure and let you know I found it," wrote Connie Ross of Lawrence, Kan., after finding a bottle while vacationing last spring on Mustang Island.

"What a great experiment!" wrote Elizabeth Butler of West Mystic, Conn., after writing to tell the Texas third-graders about her discovery of a bottle on a Florida beach in November.

"Later days and better waves!" wrote Clint Buttler, a surfing enthusiast who found a bottle about 30 miles north of Corpus Christi.

Although most of the letters telling where the bottles were found are cordial, a Honduran man asked for a $50 reward for writing back after finding a bottle.

"I guess the guy has a little larceny in him," Taylor chuckled. "He might as well ask for $1 million."

COLONIAL BENCH

This handsome piece of furniture will fit any decor. The bench measures 42" long and 24" wide, and is a cinch to build with our full-size pattern. Trace the sides, back and ends onto wood, cut out, and assemble. Our step-by-step instructions, photos and materials list take all the guesswork out of building the bench. The legs are stock precut legs, easily available from any home center.

PART-TIME INCOME AVAILABLE

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several routes which need to be filled with qualified, responsible individuals. Now is one of the best times ever to obtain a route in your area!

Often asked questions:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current carrier force is already 65% adult and 35% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:

- •ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- •MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a carrier, you do not need daycare!
- •COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- •YOUTHS who are involved in afternoon school functions, but want to work!
- •SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

How much money can I make as a carrier?

Depending on the size of the route(s) from $200 to $600 monthly! Some motor routes make even more. Although no motor routes are expected to be available, depending on your service record, you may qualify to move up to a motor route later!

How long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the route(s). Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many carriers choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?

6 AM Monday - Friday and 7 AM on Saturday and Sunday

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, carriers do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!

RESERVE YOUR ROUTE NOW!
