Garden City site is 4th...

Super collider site is narrowed to six

AUSTIN (AP) — Six finalists were selected from a pool of 14 contenders for the "super collider" atom smashing project, with officials expecting to make a final decision this week.

A Dallas-Fort Worth site emerged as the favorite Monday, but the Texas National Research Laboratory Commission said it might submit more than one site in the national competition being conducted by the Department of Energy.

The commission, which is overseeing the state's efforts, selected sites in the Austin area, a region near the Sam Houston National Forest north of Houston, Garden City, Lubbock, and the Panhandle region near Amarillo.

The massive super collider project, to be completed in the 1990s, would include a 52-mile underground tunnel in which atomic particles would be accelerated and then smashed together to probe the building blocks of matter.

"I think we have some good sites for the commission to work on," said Fred Bucy, chairman of the commission's advisory council.

But Bucy told the commission the number of negative aspects of an area would play a larger role in the DOE's site selection than the positive aspects.

"This is a battle right now of minimizing the negative rather than emphasizing the positive," Bucy said.

Each site was considered on the basis of one of eight criteria set by the DOE.

Areas bidding to be considered for the project were required to submit by May 5 an eight-part proposal outlining the site.

Suspect flees DPS wrong way

A one-hour chase down U.S. Highway 84--with the suspect briefly heading the wrong way in the highway's south-bound lane--ended Monday night with the arrest of a 19-year-old San Antonio man.

He was being held in the Scurry County Jail Tuesday morning in lieu of bond set at $30,000 for charges of unauthorized use of a motor vehicle.

Shawn Keith Fey was arrested in Garza County just south of Post around 11 p.m. Monday following the chase involving locally-based highway patrolmen.

At 9:57 p.m., they initially attemped to stop a 1987 Jeep Wagoneer driven by Fey in the westbound lane of 84 near the Ennis Creek Road intersection.

Fey stopped the vehicle at that

New tax consolidation plan surfaces

Non-binding 'straw vote' could prompt agreement

By DONNY BROWN
SDN Managing Editor

A new option to allow Scurry County voters a voice in the consolidation of tax collection servives here was proposed and endorsed Monday by the Western Texas College board of trustees.

Board member Roy Baze proposed a "straw vote" on the issue with representatives of the county's six taxing entities giving their "gentleman's agreement" that they would voluntarily follow the results of the ballot.

In this way, local entities could sidestep the legal question of the constitutionality of such consolidation elections--an issue raised as a result of a Parker County district judge's ruling involving a local case there.

Since the results of the referendum election proposed by Baze would be non-binding, it would not violate the court's decision, he noted.

It would also give local tax payers a chance to voice their preference and allow taxing entity boards to honor these decisions.

At the heart of the question is what local taxing officials have called a clear duplication of services--one which they estimate is costing local tax payers an unneeded $60,000 annually.

Currently, the Scurry County Appraisal District collects taxes for three of the six and the county tax office collects for the other three.

"I'm personally convinced either agency could do a satisfactory job," Baze said Monday when proposing his plan to the full college board.

He noted also the straw vote could be added to an already scheduled election--the August ballot which will see local voters decide if they want to allow the addition of a sales tax percentage to offset county ad valorem taxes.

Since the wording regarding the tax collection services could be included on the ballot, the straw vote would essentially be expense-free.

As proposed, the wording would ask voters to decide which entity they would prefer to collect their taxes--the appraisal district or the county tax office.

The motion unanimously approved Monday reads:

"WTC wishes to clarify its position on the matter of tax collection by stating that one of the college's main objectives is to eliminate the current duplication

COLLEGE RESURFACING — Crews from J.H. Strain and Sons of Tye began work Monday "roto-milling" a 1.8 mile section of College Ave. — Texas Highway 350 — from 27th St. to the south Snyder city limits. After the rougher road way is ground down, a new asphalt surface will be applied. Officials are estimating all work on the street should be completed within 60 days. (SDN Staff Photo)

Roto-milling work begins on College

Work began Monday on the resurfacing of some 1.8 miles of College Ave. — Texas Highway 350 — from 27th St. to the south Snyder city limits.

Crews from the J.H. Strain and Sons construction company of Tye began "roto-milling" the five-lane street Monday morning.

According to Roy Roberson of the Abilene office of the Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation, the section of College Ave. is to be milled down, then resurfaced with an asphalt mix.

Roberson noted that the project was exactly like the resurfacing project done last summer on U.S. Highway 180 (25th St. and East Highway) through the city.

No exact completion date has been set since the current work is part of a package of projects — including some in Taylor and Jones counties — that are to be completed by September.

The contractors are expected to finish the College Ave. work before moving on to the next project, however.

The milling process now underway is expected to take about four days.

Once it is done, the resurfacing could begin at any time and, according to Roberson, it should be completed at least within 60 days.

WTC mulls dormitory telephones

A proposal to add telephones in each of the 96 dorm rooms at Western Texas College received an initial preview Monday with board members indicating they would consider detailed bids for the project in later weeks.

The addition would involve an initial outlay estimated at some $38,000, an amount which could be recouped through a $40 per semester add-on to dormitory fees charged students.

It would replace the current system of having telephones located in the dormitory hallways plus pay phones in the dorm stairwells.

The major advantage of the change would be improved and easier communication between students and their parents, noted Dr. Harry Krenek, WTC president.

He noted it would also provide easier communication on campus between staff members and students.

Board questions related to the proposal centered on how to guard against "abuses" of the system, such as damage to

Aid plan aired for college basketball

Retired Judge Wayland G. Holt, a longtime supporter of the basketball program at Western Texas College, proposed to college board members Monday a scholarship fund-raising plan to augment the local athletic program.

Holt, who is currently serving a third term as president of the WTC Boosters Club, suggested the board consider allowing the organization to set up a program to raise the scholarship money.

He said he believes such groups have been successful in other conference schools to include Midland and Odessa College and South Plains College in Levelland.

"I'm really just throwing out an idea," he told trustees, "It may not work, it may not get off the ground, but we don't know until we try."

He said he felt any money raised for a scholarship program could be used to replace funds budgeted for the athletic department, specifically for the mens and womens basketball programs.

He singled out these because, as he noted, "My understanding is the other two (rodeo and golf programs) are in pretty good (financial) shape."

Joe Jackson, vice president at American State Bank, was one disappointed fellow Sunday. Joe had big plans to take his wife out for Mother's Day dinner.

Jackson recently played in the Heart Association benefit golf tournament. In a drawing for prizes, Jackson was winner of a steak dinner for two.

The tournament was held on Saturday, and Joe informed his wife, Cynthia, of his plans to treat her to a big steak on Mother's Day.

There was only one flaw in the plan....the restaurant went out of business the next day.

We disagree. We thought the young lady looked pretty attractive.

Johnny Carson said it best: "I'm glad we got sex out of the pulpit and back into politics where it belongs."

We doubt that Tom Machen could buy his wife, Frances, a nice enough present to make amends for a recent practical joke he played on her.

Frances, who works at The Hair Station, has been trying to quit smoking. Tom was encouraging her, but knew that she was sneaking into the bathroom during the night for a cigarette.

In an attempt to break the habit, Tom had perfected a plan to catch Frances taking a puff. Sure enough, a smoke detector, planted behind a pot plant, sounded a loud alarm in the dark house.

Tom did prove one thing...where's there's smoke, there was fire in his wife's eyes.

Border officials lift price ceiling on U.S. milk

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Mexican border officials — claiming it was "an error" — have lifted an 85-cent per gallon price ceiling on milk produced in the United States, a newspaper reported today.

The 1,000 peso price ceiling on U.S. milk in Nuevo Laredo border stores was ordered by area Mexican authorities about 10 days after officials in Mexico City had pledged to lift a milk import ban.

The price ceiling was lifted Friday — one day after U.S. Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter met with senior Mexican commerce and industrial development secretary officials in Mexico City, the San Antonio Express-News said.

"The senior Mexican officials were unaware that such price controls had been put in place and said that the border had traditionally been a free trade zone despite the use of milk price ceilings in Mexico's interior," a spokesman for Sen. Lloyd Bentsen said Monday.

Mexican officials enforced the milk price ceiling while Mexican milk sold for between 1,100 pesos and 2,000 pesos per gallon in Nuevo Laredo stores, buyers and dairymen said.

Fines imposed on 15 Nuevo Laredo merchants who defiantly sold American milk above the ceiling price are expected to be waived by Mexican authorities.

Enrique Bulas, president of the Nuevo Laredo Chamber of Commerce, said Monday the lifting of the price ceiling was announced during a meeting between chamber members and a secretary of commerce delegate assigned to Nuevo Laredo.

Healthy heart taken from live patient

BALTIMORE (AP) — Surgeons removed a healthy heart from a cystic fibrosis patient in order to give him a heart-lung transplant, then implanted his heart into a patient awaiting a donor, a Johns Hopkins Hospital spokeswoman said today.

The operation apparently marked the first time that a heart from a healthy person was used in a transplant, said spokeswoman JoAnn Rogers. It also was the first time that lungs, a delicate organ, had been removed from a donor's body and shipped from one hospital to another for such surgery, she said.

In addition, the cystic fibrosis patient was the first person with the disease to receive such a transplant, she said.

Cystic fibrosis is the nation's most common inherited disease, affecting some 30,000 Americans. Victims produce a thick, sticky mucus that clogs the lungs and digestive system.

Both transplant recipients today were reported in critical but stable condition, typical in such cases, said Rogers.

The operation began Monday after an unidentified accident victim died at the University of Maryland Medical System in Baltimore, said Hopkins spokeswoman Debbie Bangledorf.

The deceased person's heart and lungs were removed and, using methods developed by Johns Hopkins researchers, were transported on ice across town to Hopkins, where the 28-year-old cystic fibrosis patient had been waiting for weeks for a new heart and lungs.

Lungs typically have been transported in the deceased person's body because technology has not allowed safe shipment of the delicate organs, Ms. Rogers said.

Simultaneously Monday, the cystic fibrosis patient, whose diseased lungs could not be replaced without a heart, gave surgeons permission to take his healthy heart for transplant into another patient at Hopkins.

Surgeons removed the cystic fibrosis patient's heart and lungs. Two surgical teams then labored to implant the heart-lung into that patient and the living heart into the second recipient. The surgery lasted until early today.

Dear Abby

Daughter Hopes to Win Back Parents She Lost in Marriage

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1987 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My parents will be celebrating their 25th anniversary this summer and my brothers and sister are planning a big surprise party for them. My sister has requested $500 from my husband and me for our share of the expenses. I want to be in on the party, but my husband has flatly refused for the following reason: My parents haven't spoken to us in four months because one month before the wedding my fiance and I moved in together. My parents disapproved but they never asked me not to.

Prior to our living together, both my parents and my husband's parents had agreed to go 50-50 on our wedding expenses. Suddenly, one month before the wedding, my parents cut off all communication with us and refused to pay for half of the wedding.

I was very hurt because we always had a fairly good relationship. Also, my fiance and I had to come up with $3,000 for our wedding at the last minute. To top it off, my folks didn't even give us a wedding gift.

I realize I've hurt them, but I'm really hurting now. I have tried numerous times to make up with them, but they won't even speak to me. I'm praying that if my husband and I participate in the party, we can all get back together again. I need your help fast, because my sister is waiting for my answer.

BROKENHEARTED BRIDE

DEAR BROKENHEARTED: I vote with your husband. I see no point in participating in a party for people who won't even speak to you. Your parents appear to be very rigid and unfeeling to have cut you out of their lives as they have. You don't say how old you and your husband are, but if you're old enough to be married, you are old enough to choose your own lifestyle. I don't deny their right to disapprove, but to have punished you as they have is inexcusable and heartless. Forget trying to "buy" your way back in their good graces. It may take a grandchild, but I'm betting they'll come around eventually.

DEAR ABBY: I am on a weight-reduction program and all my friends know how hard I've worked to lose 50 pounds, but, Abby, this one says, "Oh, just one piece of cake or pie won't hurt," then somebody else says, "Please taste this dessert — you don't have to eat the whole thing."

Abby, please tell your readers to support anyone who is trying hard to lose weight — especially for health reasons. I've had serious knee surgery, and my doctor says if I gain back the weight I've lost, my surgery will have been in vain.

Thanks for listening.

Infection hampers repair of fracture

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Fourteen months ago I was in a motorcycle accident. I fractured my arm (which was pinned with a 6-inch screw) and developed osteomyelitis. The fracture appears to be healing, but I was told that this was impossible because of the myelitis. What is the truth, and what is the outlook for keeping my arm? How should I monitor it?

DEAR READER — Osteomyelitis (bone infection) is a troublesome complication of surgery to repair fractures. In most cases, the infection is introduced either during the injury or during the operation. A foreign body (such as a pin, a screw or an artificial joint) can act as a reservoir of bacterial contamination, because the synthetic material has no way of cleaning itself once it is in the body.

Ordinarily, an infected screw would have to be removed in order for the infection to be eradicated; bone healing may be delayed until the infection has been cleared up with antibiotics. However, in your case, the osteomyelitis appears to have been controlled, allowing the fracture to knit.

Your orthopedic surgeon can best monitor your progress. To do this, he or she will require serial X-ray examinations to document the formation of new bone at the site of the injury. In addition, the surgeon probably will base much of his or her judgment on whether your arm is gaining strength and whether you are free of pain.

Sometimes doctors use special blood tests, such as white blood cell counts, to assess whether osteomyelitis is persistent.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Could my acne rosacea be caused by the three cups of coffee and two large diet colas I drink daily?

DEAR READER — Rosacea is a chronic form of acne in adults that causes dilation of blood vessels in the skin of the cheeks, forehead and — especially — the nose. It is not related to the consumption of coffee and cola drinks, except in the rare person who may be allergic to substances in these drinks.

Severe rosacea on the nose causes a peculiar and disfiguring redness and overgrowth of tissue called rhinophyma — the W.C. Fields type of puffy, bulbous nose. Some heavy drinkers seem to be predisposed to this unfortunate skin condition. Acne rosacea can be treated with antibiotics; for rhinophyma, plastic surgery may be necessary.

Bentsen raises Arkansas funds

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, raised $50,000 at a luncheon put on by Sens. David Pryor and Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., but says he may need $10 million for his 1988 re-election campaign.

Bentsen raised the money at the $1,000-a-plate affair Monday for his campaign for a fourth term. Bentsen said the $10 million figure, which he estimated based on recent Texas statewide political contests, is an "outrageous amount of money."

Bentsen is chairman of the Senate Finance Committee of which Pryor is a member.

Pryor said Bentsen is a "personal and professional friend and a friend of Arkansas," adding that Bentsen helped him raise money in 1984 and supported him for his Finance Committee seat.

Those attending the luncheon at the posh Capital Hotel were served cocktails in the second-floor lobby before eating a lunch of green salad, chicken breast, fresh broccoli and asparagus, rice pilaf, and fresh strawberries with cream and white wine.

Earl Jones of Little Rock, a businessman and lobbyist, said he attended to show respect for Pryor and Bentsen, adding that Bentsen had been of help to Arkansas.

Makeup artist gets 5 to 15 years

NEW YORK (AP) — A 25-year-old model, her face scarred from a razor blade attack, sat in the front row as the man convicted of arranging her slashing was sentenced to the maximum five to 15 years in prison and fined $5,000.

After makeup artist Steven Roth received the sentence Monday, model Marla Hanson was asked if she thought the sentence was just.

"What is just?" she replied. "How can you pay for something like this?"

Roth, 28, was convicted Dec. 22 of first-degree assault for hiring two men to cut Miss Hanson's face with a razor blade shortly after midnight June 5 on a Manhattan street.

Prosecutors said Roth set up the attack because Miss Hanson rejected his romantic advances and demanded an $850 deposit he owed her on a cooperative apartment she had rented from him.

While Steven Bowman held her down, Darren Norman sliced 15 wounds into Miss Hanson's face. She required almost 150 stitches to close the cuts, some of which, permanently scarred her face and ruined her modeling career.

Roth maintained he was innocent of engineering the attack.

ABWA honors boss

The Scurry Charter Chapter of American Business Women's Association met April 23 at Martha Ann Woman's Club for the annual business associate banquet. Judy Bynum was hostess with 24 members and 26 guests present. Gary Landes led in the invocation and the pledge of allegiance.

Becky Bynum provided dinner music. Faye Layne welcomed guests.

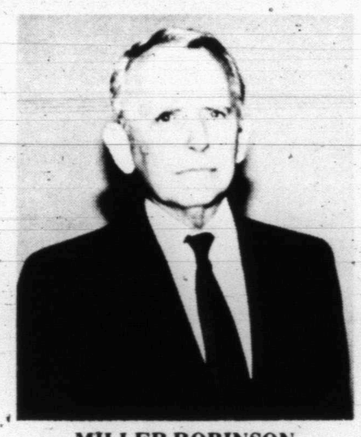
Anita Felan gave a short talk about the growth and history of ABWA. The Scurry Charter Chapter began Sept. 6, 1960 with Pat Hinshaw as president. Charter members are Mary Starnes, Inez Teaff, Clara Mae Noah, Maxie McNew and Ileta Hall.

Barbara Scrivner introduced the vocational speaker, Janet Brown. She and her husband, Jim, opened Snyder Travel Agency in 1981. They have two employees, Betty House and Darla Huddleston. They arrange cruises, car rentals, honeymoons, provide tickets and other travel services.

Miller Robinson, pastor of Colonial Hill Baptist Church, was the featured guest speaker. He and his wife, Sandra, have been Snyder residents for 23 years. They have two sons in college.

Robinson pointed out that there are three ways to fail: worry, want something you can't have and be afraid. His advice for those affected by the local economic conditions is to be friendly, visit friends, enjoy one's family, nature and other people.

Judy Bynum introduced Eddie Johnson of American State Bank as Boss of the Year. He was nominated by his employee, Pam Murray. She stressed that Johnson has a professional attitude and expects the bank to be handled in that manner. She also pointed out that he treats all his employees as though they were members of his family.



MILLER ROBINSON
...guest speaker...

Johnson likes for his employees and spouses to get together for picnics or parties several times a year, encouraging the unity of his employee "family."

Johnson came to Snyder some three years ago and he is involved in many organizations. He has been a director of United Way, a member of the Industrial Economic Development Committee for the Chamber of Commerce and a member of the Business Development Committee for the Chamber.

Murray said that Johnson is a member of Colonial Hill Baptist church and lives his faith in his daily life.

AAUW installs officers

The American Association of University Women met Wednesday at The Shack. The highlight of the meeting was the announcement of the Outstanding Woman in the Community, Elizabeth Potts, and the Outstanding AAUW Woman of the year, Peggy English.

Potts is the mother of five sons and has four grandchildren. She served as a cub scout den mother for 14 years in Neosho, Mo. and Snyder. She was the board director of United Way from 1975 to 1982 and the drive chairman for 1980.

She was on the board of directors for the Snyder Chamber of Commerce from 1979 to 1982 and was on the advisory council of the Senior Center and Viva from 1970 to 1982. She has been the chairman or co-chairman of the White Buffalo Festival which is sponsored by the women's committee of the Snyder Chamber of Commerce.

Potts has been on the board of the advisory council of Senior Citizen, Inc. for the Snyder housing project from 1982 to the present. She was the recipient of the Wm. Vestal Mayor Award for community service during 1982.

She received the Southwest Baptist University Alumni Association Life Service Award for 1984 in Bolivar, Mo.

She has been on the board of directors of the Snyder Chamber of Commerce from 1986 to the present and is the present president of the chamber.

Potts is a member of the Industrial Economic Development Committee, First Baptist Church, Atheneum Study Club, Musical Coterie Club, Scurry County Historical Commission from 1986 to the present and was co-chairman of the Scurry County Sesquicentennial Committee during 1986.

She has been a realtor for 17 years and owns Elizabeth Potts Realtors.

English teaches social studies, including an honors world history course, at Snyder High School. She has four children and seven grandchildren.

She has been an AAUW member for a number of years and has served on the telephone, program and finance committees. She was the club public information person and has prepared the club scrapbook with her duties as club secretary for 1986-1987.

She belongs to the Scurry County Historical Society.

Phyllis Smith, outgoing president, installed officers for the coming club year as follows: Brenda Cox, president; Kay Hopper, first vice-president in charge of programs; Annette Williams, second vice-president; Peggy English, secretary and Tammy Wesson, treasurer.

A surprise baby shower was given to Tammy Wesson in honor of her baby, Kalli Dee, born April 2.

Members exchanged gifts as the secret sisters for the year were revealed.

Tobi Stephens was presented the WTC scholarship for 1986-1988.

No one has yet written a book on how to defend against a double squeeze, but one of the important principles is to attack that suit in which the declarer has a high card in dummy and a high card in his own hand. That breaks up the communication so necessary in such plays. Of course, first you have to recognize the impending danger.

South really overbid when he jumped to two no-trump, trading extravagantly on his two diamond stoppers. He took dummy's diamond ace at trick one and played the club king. His silent prayer was that the defenders would not play spades. East took the ace of clubs and played the K-Q of hearts (both ducked by declarer). He then cashed the king of diamonds and exited with the club 10. Declarer won in dummy and cashed two more clubs. West discarding two spades while East shed a diamond on the last club. Next came the ace of hearts. East had to throw a spade to keep the jack of diamonds guarded. When the queen of diamonds next hit the table, West had to throw in the towel. He had to keep his high heart. When he let a spade go, declarer discarded the little heart from dummy and played A-K of spades, and the last spade in dummy was a winner.

That was a lucky nine tricks, but East had many chances to break it all up by playing spades earlier. Even after holding the second heart trick, a spade play before the diamond king would allow him to play a second spade after taking the diamond king, dooming the contract.

Dark Star upset Native Dancer in the 1953 Kentucky Derby but his career was ended when he broke down in his next start, the Preakness.

Parrish refuses to 'knuckle under'

CLEVELAND (AP) - Larry Parrish believes the best way to hit a knuckleball pitcher is to pretend the pitch doesn't exist.

"Act as if it's a pitch you like to hit, like a fastball or a slider, and attack it just as you normally would," Parrish said Monday night after he homered, doubled and singled to help the Texas Rangers beat Phil Niekro and the Cleveland Indians 6-3.

The game was called because of a thunderstorm that hit just as the Indians finished batting in the bottom of the fifth inning. Lighter showers had delayed the game twice previously.

The victory ended the Rangers' nine-game road losing streak and gave them a 2-10 mark in away games.

"It took a rainout to do it, but at least we got a win on the road," said Parrish, who was 3-for-3 with three runs batted in.

Parrish hit a two-run homer to start the Rangers' four-run second inning against Niekro, 2-2, who failed in his bid for a 314th career win. The knuckleballer is in 12th place on the all-time list, one victory behind Gaylord Perry.

"Phil made a mistake with the fastball," said Indians Manager Pat Corrales, whose team has lost seven of its last eight. "He wanted to throw it for a ball, and he didn't."

Parrish lined the errant pitch off the right-field foul screen for his seventh homer. Jerry Browne drove a two-run double to left center later in the inning for a 4-0 Texas lead.

Cleveland got within a run at 4-3, scoring twice in the third on an RBI single by Julio Franco and Joe Carter's run-scoring forceout and once in the fourth on Carmen Castillo's solo homer, his third. Castillo has hit all three of his home runs in his last 11 at bats.

Ron Meridith, 1-0, replaced Texas starter Mike Mason after a rain delay in the fourth and struck out the only batter he faced to get the victory.

Niekro left with two on and none out following a rain delay in the top of the fifth, and Frank Wills gave up an RBI single by Parrish and a sacrifice fly by Steve Buechele that put the Rangers ahead 6-3.

Ranger reliever Mike Loynd then pitched a scoreless bottom of the fifth for his first save. He retired Brook Jacoby on a double play to end the inning - and, as it turned out, the game - moments before the third storm drenched the infield before the tarp could be rolled out.

Texas Manager Bobby Valentine said he was encouraging Loynd to work quickly in the fifth inning before the anticipated third storm arrived. If the Indians had been unable to complete their turn at bat, the game would not have been official.

"I told Mike, 'You've got to throw strikes,'" Valentine said. "When he started throwing over to first with (Cleveland's Julio) Franco over there, I said, 'Whoa, let's get the hitter.'"

Loynd may take Mason's next turn in the starting rotation, Valentine said. Mason has not made it past the sixth inning yet this season.

Bosworth likes Raiders; nixes Oilers and others

NEW YORK (AP) - Brian Bosworth would like to play for the Los Angeles Raiders because their rebel image fits his.

And he wouldn't mind playing for either New York team, although he'd rather be with the Jets as opposed to the Super Bowl champion Giants because the Jets are probably hungrier.

But don't ask him to play for Green Bay, Buffalo, Indianapolis, Houston and 12 other NFL teams he will ask not to choose him in the supplemental draft he opted for Monday.

The All-American linebacker from Oklahoma, who passed up the April 28 regular draft rather than be selected by a team he disdains, officially made the announcement that he will pass up his senior year at Oklahoma and turn pro. The vehicle will be a special supplemental draft to be held in the next month. All 28 teams will have a shot at him and selecting Bosworth would cost the team the corresponding selection in next year's regular draft.

But Bosworth, who became eligibile for the supplemental draft when he graduated from Oklahoma last weekend, is already trying to make sure it's a team he wants, not just a team who wants him.

At a news conference Monday, he said he would write "more than half" the teams in the league telling them not to choose him should they get the top pick in the weighted draft.

"It's absolutely better for me," he said of the supplemental draft. "It puts the advantage back on my side instead of theirs."

Bosworth made his announcement with his agent, Gary Wichard, whose retention makes him ineligible to play for Oklahoma next sason.

NFL officials have not yet set a date for the next supplemental draft, several of which are held between the regular draft and the start of the season.

They are held for players who have become eligible to play in the NFL for reasons such as early graduation. League spokesman Joe Browne said the most likely date would be early June, although he didn't rule out a draft at league meetings in San Diego May 20-21.

Pressure greater as Tigers return to state golf tourney

Sometimes it's best to be the underdog.

"Last year we went and really weren't planning on winning. We just wanted to play our game and do the best we could," said Snyder High School senior Lea Ann Thompson, who will be joining Angie Lay, Leslie Light, Camille Reed, Kristi Neill and alternate Missy Trull for a repeat performance at the Class 4A State Golf Tournament which begins Thursday at Jimmy Clay Golf Course in Austin.

Snyder wasn't expected to win state in 1986 because it had finished runnerup both at district and region. With the pressure off, the Lady Tigers went out and captured a state championship.

This year, Snyder was once again runnerup in district and region. The situation is different, however.

"There's more pressure on us because we're the defending state champions," said Thompson, an all-district performer for Coach Jan Kruse's team. "We're just all happy to get to go. We know we're capable of doing it but we know it will be tough, too."

If there is an advantage, it will be experience and the fact that three of the Tiger girls - Thompson, Lay and Light - have played the course in state competition before. Reed was an alternate last year.

"That course is so long. Maybe it will help that we've played on it because it can be real tough on you," said Lay.

The girls have set goals. Thompson wants to break an 83 - which is what she shot at state last season - while Lay wants to shoot "in the 80's."

"If everybody can play to their ability, we believe we can win it again," said Lay. "We're hoping to shoot lower than a 340 for the team."

Snyder finished runnerup to Andrews again this season and the Mustangs figure to be the favorite at state. But the Tigers received confidence earlier this season when they defeated the Lady Mustangs 342 to 347 in a district tournament, setting a SHS school record in the process.

Snyder's Neill tees off first for the Tigers, at 8:37 a.m. Thursday. The Tiger girls will be playing with girls from Sulpher Springs, Raymondville and Silsbee. Other schools at the 36-hole meet will be Andrews, Belton, Brenham and Justin Northwest.

Andrews, which took third place last year, is the favorite. Brenham, second to Snyder in the 1986 meet, is also expected to be strong.

LITTLE LEAGUE

Braves 14, Cardinals 13

The Braves held off a 10-run Cardinal rally by scoring four of their own in this game, played Monday evening.

Charles Richardson slammed a home run and a single while Eric Neves added two doubles and a single for the Braves, now 4-0. Also hitting were Matthew Byrom, three singles; Adrian Sneed, two singles; Jeremy Wells and Jimmy Henry, a double each; and Cedric Thomas, one single.

Richard Morris was the winning pitcher.

For the Cardinals, 2-2, Randall Thomas slapped a triple and a single; Craig Lang hit a double; and Damon Kennedy and Chris Winter chipped in a single apiece.

FARM LEAGUE

Cardinals 17, Braves 16

The Cardinals mounted an early lead, then held on to defeat the Braves. Jacob Rodriquez hit a home run and Steven Crawford banged a triple for the Cardinals, 1-3, while Aaron Watson smacked three singles. Getting one single each were Neal Canon, Eric McDorman and Paul Landon.

For the 0-4 Braves, Kevin Shifflett powered a triple, a double and a single and Brandon Hill knocked a triple and a double. Also getting hits were Jason York, three singles, and Dexter Robbins, Ricky Post, Benito Ruiz, Don Herrera and Tyson Shifflett, one single each.

Yankees 16, Cubs 9

The Yankees remained undefeated while handing the Cubs their first loss in this game played Monday.

For the Yankees, Daniel Fish hit two doubles; Brandon Roberge popped one double; Jeffery Armstrong hit two singles; and Aaron McGuire, Mike Remington, Lonzo Deere, Chad Walker, Jason Shannon, Jackie Sherrod and Chris Roemisch scattered one single apiece.

For the Cubs, Todd Iglehart smacked a double, Kyle Lewis added two singles, and Justin Speer, Tony Lopez, Brandon Cox and Bryan Gantt popped a single apiece.

Addition

In Friday's Farm League game between the Cubs and Braves, the Cubs' Todd Iglehart was credited with two home runs.

8-9 YEAR-OLD LEAGUE

Yankees 12, Indians 8

Patrick Jordan smashed a home run and a double and Robbie Huestis powered two doubles and two singles as the Yankees, 2-1, defeated the Indians.

Also getting hits for the Yankees were Kevin Lacik and Matt Parker, three singles each; Waylon Jackson, a double; John Purcell, Heath Porter, Johnathan Tovar and Jay Holley, two singles apiece; and Clark Church and Stephen Thompson, one single each.

Hitting for the Indians were Marlowe Riggins, two home runs; Ramsey Castillo and Kyle Mueller, a double and a single each; Teddy Murray and Shayd Martin, a double each; Jason Sealy, two singles; and Jason Stearmer, Carl Strelecki, Cory Helms, Blanden Chism and Ryan Raborn, one single apiece.

Athletics 24, Giants 14

There were 44 hits recorded in this contest, played Monday.

Hitting for the Athletics were Tony Terrazas, a double and two singles; Josh Rambo and Andy Leyva, a double and one single each; Chris Mackey, Jeff Carson, Scott McDow, Danny Menges, Clayton West, Eric Davis and Jim Hill, two singles each; and Daniel Hernandez, Dale Beard, Troy Allen and Clay Triplett, one single apiece.

Hitting for the Giants were Ben Wells, a triple and a single; Chris Clifton, two doubles and a single; Broc Gard, a double; Josh Kornegay, Jesse Hernandez and Billy Luna, two singles each; and Banyan Winkler, Christopher Ramirez, Jeremy Clifton, Lindsey Gordy, Jeffrey Levens and Jayson Cloe, one single apiece.

SIGNS UP -- Pampa standout Jackie Reed signs a scholarship to play basketball for Western Texas College as Pampa coach Albert Nichols (left) and WTC's Kelly Chadwick look on.

Chadwick signs Pampa standout Jackie Reed

Western Texas College coach Kelly Chadwick has signed Jackie Reed, a 5-10 player from Pampa.

Reed is one of several new recruits Chadwick will be announcing in the next few weeks.

"She's the kind of player that can play inside or outside," said Chadwick of Reed, who averaged 9.4 points, 10.1 rebounds, 6 assists and 3 steals per game as a senior. "She's very quick, strong and a tremendous competitor. I think she'll be a great defensive player when she learn to play defense at the college level. She's been a strong rebounder even though she's only 5-10. And, she is a pretty good ballhandler for a 5-10 girl that has played post, which leads me to believe she can play outside."

Reed was a three-year starter for Pampa. She was second-team all-district in 1-4A, which included the state's No. 1 and 2 Class 4A teams, Levelland and Canyon. She was all-tournament at Abilene and was a Channel 10, Globe News Player of the Week.

"We're really going to miss her jumping ability and ball handling. She's a tremendous passer and she sees the floor at the widest angles of any kid I've ever coached," said Pampa Coach Albert Nichols of the player, who was her team's MVP for two years.

Reed was recruited by over 20 colleges, according to Nichols.

Interim prison director gets promoted to prison director

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — The interim director of the Texas Department of Corrections for the past four months was promoted to director of the nation's third-largest prison system.

James Lynaugh, 47, was named Monday to succeed O.L. McCotter, who resigned in January under pressure from Gov. Bill Clements.

Prison Board Chairman Alfred Hughes said Lynaugh won out over a dozen candidates for the $68,289-a-year job.

Unlike recent predecessors, Lynaugh has no expertise in corrections. His previous experience has been in the state Comptroller's Office in Austin, which he joined in 1965. He became deputy director of finance for the corrections department in May 1984.

"TDC needs someone with good accounting skills," Hughes said. "We talked with a number of candidates from around the country and we felt very comfortable with the job he was doing."

Clements met with Lynaugh about a month ago and was satisfied with the choice, Hughes said.

"The director's job in TDC is really not one of administering correctional units. That's left up to the wardens," Lynaugh said.

"The TDC really is a $400 million-a-year operation. That's a business."

Lynaugh becomes the fourth man in five years to head the beleaguered system, which has more than 38,000 inmates and is operating under federal court orders to improve living conditions for prisoners.

Prison officials, including Lynaugh, last month convinced U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice that they were moving ahead with the reforms and that the state should not be fined some $800,000 a day.

Lynaugh said complying with those court orders would be the most difficult challenge he faces.

Asked to deseribe his style, the new director said, "I try to look for solutions to problems rather than try to find out who screwed up to cause the problem."

Hughes said his only mandate to Lynaugh was to run the department as economically as possible.

Lynaugh said he was reluctant at first to take the job.

"I really and truly did not (want it)," he said. "I didn't believe I had the support of the wardens."

But he said he was led to believe otherwise and plans to give the wardens more authority.

In other action Monday, the board asked for proposals from private corrections firms to build four 500-bed facilities to be put in major population centers in Texas.

Hughes said that although the state Legislature has approved the idea, they have yet to come up with the money.

"We're just waiting on the Legislature to see what they want to fund," he said.

In order to be accepted, the proposals must show the facilities will cost at least 10 percent less than if the state would build them.

"If it's less than our cost, then we're going to do it," Hughes said.

He expected it would be at least a year before the facilities could begin accepting inmates.

Hughes also said the annual prison rodeo, scrapped two months ago, probably would not be rekindled because of lack of interest in Huntsville, where it has been held for more than 50 years. Discussion of the rodeo was on the board agenda but the subject never came up.

"TDC has bigger issues to focus on," he said.

Poor southern counties see riches in nuclear dump site

IAEGER, W.Va. (AP) — Along U.S. 52, where down-on-their-luck West Virginians hawk everything from used bedspreads to second-hand clocks, there's talk of salvation from the bonds of poverty — a nuclear waste dump.

Proposals to open a nuclear disposal site arouse of chorus of objections in most communities. But in McDowell County, where the jobless rate is estimated at 36 percent, things are so bad that local officials are actively recruiting such a facility.

For those miners who still have jobs and are willing to risk cave-ins and black lung disease for a weekly paycheck, a potentially radioactive work site doesn't look all that bad.

"I know of coal miners who would leave the mines to work in a place like this," said Mike Goode, the county clerk and Wyoming County Economic Development Authority chairman. "Jobs are so scarce and the economic situation is so bad that people here are willing to take anything."

The project has its opponents, including U.S. Sen. Jay Rockefeller, D-W.Va. Rockefeller says the stigma of a nuclear disposal site would repel economic development, not attract it, and he says technological demands would require the hiring of highly skilled workers from out of state, not unemployed coal miners.

But along U.S. 52, those concerns are of little merit to the unemployed.

"I'm in favor of it," Iverson Justice said from his roadside stand in McDowell County. At 44, Justice is another casualty of the bottom dropping out of the coal mines.

"I got crippled up in the mine and they wouldn't let me go back," he said.

A few times a week, Justice parks his pickup truck at the side of the road along the Tug Fork River and, along with his wife and son, hawks saws, slightly used bedspreads, and wooden Indians and Virgin Marys.

Justice said he will try to hang on so his family can remain in their home near Hurley.

At another makeshift roadside stand, just across the line in Mingo County, another former coal miner, Woody Sutphin, has thrown in the towel.

"I don't want to leave but I'm going to have to," Sutphin said as he puffed on his pipe and offered to sell a visitor a used clock or perhaps some second-hand auto brake lights.

Sutphin, 55, of Iaeger also favors plans to lure a nuclear fuel rod repository to the area.

"If they go by government specifications, it'll be safe," he said.

Sutphin has been unable to find work for six months. He said he will receive his final unemployment check next month.

"In the past five years, I've been on unemployment more than I worked," he said.

Sutphin said that next month he and his wife will become part of the exodus from West Virginia.

"In McDowell County, there must be at least five or six families a day leaving," Sutphin said.

The scene is the same in Wyoming, Mingo, and Logan counties. It's a repeat of what happened in the West 100 years ago when the gold and silver mines went from boom to bust. But this time around, politicians and businessmen are using nuclear fever in an attempt to keep their communities from turning into ghost towns.

Members of the Economic Development Authority in Wyoming County are firing off letters to Washington, D.C., in hopes of luring up to 1,000 jobs they say would accompany the Monitored Retrievable Storage Facility.

The facility would be a temporary repository for spent nuclear fuel rods from power plants. The U.S. government wants to build the disposal site in the next few years so it will have a place to keep the highly radioactive waste until it can be permanently deposited in a a permanent facility to be built in the Western United States.

"I don't think there's another area in this country that needs it as bad as southern West Virginia," said Harold L. Wright, chief executive officer of First Community Bank in Pineville.

Despite the efforts of local leaders, government officials say the repository probably will end up in a state that doesn't want it. The leading candidate is Tennessee's Clinch River Breeder Reactor site, and Tennessee officials have waged a long court battle with the U.S. Department of Energy to keep the multi-billion dollar project out. The U.S. Supreme Court, however, decided on March 31 not to hear the case.

While Tennesseeans continue to fight the project, a four-county task force has been formed to look for ways to lure it to southern West Virginia.

Chairman of the task force, which includes representatives from McDowell, Wyoming, Logan and Mingo counties, is Welch Daily News Publisher David H. Corcoran.

The newspaperman says the need for jobs now is greater than the risk of nuclear contamination in the future.

"As publisher of this newspaper, I can't worry about what it will be like 10,000 years from now," he told his readers in a recent editorial.

Some of Corcoran's readers say they want to know more about the project, and many oppose it outright, but still others express Mike Krajc's opinion: "We need anything that would put people back to work."

Krajc, 43, of Gary also plans to leave the state this summer. He has a wife and family to support and no job in the coal mines.

Krajc said he might stay if he knew the nuclear project were to be located in the area.

Three-vehicle wreck worked

Police took reports for two minor traffic accidents Monday including one three-vehicle mishap.

It occurred at 3:09 p.m. in the 3800 Block of College Ave.

Involved in it were a 1982 Ford driven by James Robert Sparlin of Rt. 3, Snyder; a 1977 Chevrolet driven by Mary Marshall Jacobi of 4705 El Paso Ave.; and a 1980 Chrysler driven by Beulah Barbour Hooper of 3411 Ave. A.

No injuries resulted from that mishap.

Officers took a report at 9:53 a.m. Monday for a hit-and-run that occurred Saturday on the parking lot of Furr's.

Steve Crawford of 311 39th St. reported that his 1978 Chevrolet surburban had apparently been struck by an unidentified vehicle while parked at the store between 2 and 3 p.m.

Contamination defies fed inspection

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal inspection methods for the 4 billion chickens eaten by Americans each year offer little protection against the increasing danger from food poisoning organisms, says a National Academy of Sciences study released today.

Two disease organisms, salmonella and campylobacter, are responsible for an estimated 4 million cases of food poisoning each year. Not all come from poultry, but the organisms are often found somewhere along the poultry pipeline.

The number of reported salmonella cases alone increased from eight per 100,000 in 1963 to 19 per 100,000 in 1984, said a report by the academy's National Research Council.

Salmonella and similar organisms are commonly found in fecal matter, which frequently comes in contact with the skin and flesh of chickens during processing operations to remove organs and feathers.

"Many carcasses are heavily contaminated with fecal flora, even when the carcass is clean to the naked eye," the report said.

But study committee chairman Joseph Rodrick, of Environ Corp., Washington, D.C., said, "Poultry is nutritious and a desirable part of the diet. We don't want to discourage anyone from eating chicken."

No quick solutions were recommended, but the study said "risk assessments" by the Agriculture Department could be used to evaluate each step of the poultry production process.

Specifically, it urged USDA to include better microbial and chemical analysis of samples taken randomly at poultry plants.

The committee also urged the department's inspection agency to work with other agencies to monitor the feed, water and the production environment. It also suggested that USDA require labels on retail poultry products to alert consumers to the possible health risks and describe proper cooking and handling procedures.

As the law stands, the USDA must provide visual and manual examination of each federally inspected broiler, or fryer, as it moves along the processing line of a plant.

"The present system of continuous inspection provides little opportunity to detect or control the most significant health risks associated with broiler chickens," the committee said. "An inspector has between one and three seconds to examine a bird, depending on the speed of the processing line."

However, it added, microbial organisms and chemical residues that may cause illness in humans cannot be detected in this manner.

The committee recommended that the department's Food Safety and Inspection Service, which oversees federal meat and poultry inspection, shift from bird-by-bird inspection to random sampling, including close examination of the birds selected to detect microorganisms and chemical residues.

Church's nixes takeover bid

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — An investment group led by a former executive of Church's Fried Chicken Inc. failed to add enough spice to a $463 million takeover offer of the restaurant chain, Church's officials said.

The board of directors of the San Antonio-based restaurant chain rejected the offer made by a group led by Richard F. Sherman, former president and chief executive officer of the company.

"We just felt we would not have represented the shareholders if we accepted this offer," said Joe David Bamberger, Church's chairman and chief executive officer.

"We considered all the factors and rejected it all, not just because of any one thing," he said.

Sherman left his executive position in February to pursue a buyout of the company.

The group also included former Church's vice president and general counsel Stanley Faye, Shearson Lehman Brothers Holdings Inc., Citicorp Capital Investors Ltd. and C. Stephen Lynn.

Lynn is the president of Sonic Industries Inc., an Oklahoma City-based fast-food hamburger chain.

The group offered cash to acquire two-thirds of Church's common stock at $12.25 per share. Following a merger between the companies, the group would acquired each remaining share for $8.50 in cash and $3.75 liquidation value of redeemable preferred stock in the new company.

The San Antonio-based company has about 37.8 million shares outstanding.

Church's board met Friday to discuss the proposal, but did not release any information until Monday, saying in a statement the offer was not in the best interest of the shareholders.

The 35-year-old company had said the proposal was subject to getting commitments for a substantial part of the financing needed by the new company.

Church's also said the offer was contingent on its agreeing to pay the new company's financing commitment fees, advisory fees and other expenses if the new company did not consumate the merger.

"I don't think that it comes as a surprise that they rejected it, but I just found out about it this morning and I don't have much to say," Sherman said Monday.

Bamberger said the option now rests with the investment group.

With 1,500 outlets, Church's is the second-largest fried chicken restaurant chain behind Kentucky Fried Chicken, which is owned by PepsiCo Inc.

New theft case linked to man

Police have attributed another misdemeanor theft case to a 17-year-old suspect jailed last week.

Investigators said Monday they have recovered a tool box and some tools reported stolen Nov. 1 by Brian Walton of Rt. 2.

The tools were taken from Walton's pickup while it was parked at Snyder Lanes in the 1900 Block of 35th St.

Charged with that theft is Ruben Casteneda of 708 36th St.

He was initially taken into custody in connection with three other theft incidents last Friday evening.

He remained in the Scurry County Jail Tuesday morning in lieu of bonds which total $6,000 for three charges.

of effort by the two offices now collecting taxes and to effect savings to the taxpayers of approximately $60,000 per year through the consolidation into one office of all taxes for the six tax levying entities. WTC believes that either the appraisal district or the county tax collector can perform the tax collection service in a satisfactory manner.

"If the six tax levying organizations are unable to reach voluntary agreement on the matter of consolidation, WTC would be willing to follow the decision of the majority of voters in a county-wide referendum placed on a ballot provided such a referendum were held."

Basketball aid offered to WTC

Holt said he envisioned the fund as large enough that it could be invested and only the interest earned be used for actual expenses.

As one possible source of funds, he suggested individuals formerly associated with WTC's basketball program, particularly those who "to some extent owe where they are to their association with WTC."

"My gut feeling from conversation I've heard is that money is available here for basketball scholarships."

telephones and undocumented long distance calls.

Since dorm rooms are shared by two individuals, trustees questioned also how the billing problem of one telephone per room would be handled.

Overall, trustees expressed an interested in the plan and gave administrators a go-ahead to seek bids for the project. These are expected to be presented at either the June or July meeting of the board.

Trustees attending Monday's meeting included R.C. Patton, Bob Hargrove, John Gayle, Bill Wilson, Edwin Parks and Roy Baze. Howard Sterling was absent.

In other business, the board:

—Was informed of plans to use the strip of land fronting the college as a wildflower management area. To do this, mowing of the prairie area is expected to be limited to only twice yearly to allow for the natural seeding of the wildflowers. This is expected to occur annually after June 1 and after the year's first freeze.

—Approved a request for $4,245 in expenses for rodeo team members to travel to the national finals in Bozeman, Mont. It was noted that the team's trip to Bozeman last year, where they won the national finals, generated some $5,000 in sponsor scholarship monies for WTC.

—Approved repairs to be completed at the college swimming pool, work estimated to cost some $5,000. Repairs mainly involve fixing plaster cracks and breaks.

—Approved a joint bid for copier paper to be purchased with Snyder, Hermleigh and Ira ISDs. WTC's portion is 200 cases at a cost of approximately $18 per case.

—Approved the sale of three city lots to collect unpaid taxes, an action required of four local taxing entities since the purchase price will not retire the debt of unpaid taxes due against the property. The sale offer of $500 has been made by Russell Jones Jr. with total taxes said owed amounting to $855.

—Approved the 1987-88 catalogue, an action which in effect approves the school calendar for next school year. It was noted the college holidays will essentially mirror those of the public schools.

time and then sped away after patrolmen approached the vehicle on foot.

According to trooper John Land, Fey drove across the highway median and eventually headed the wrong direction on 84 toward Lubbock.

He said he was forced back across the median by oncoming traffic at the intersection of 84 and Farm Road 1611.

The suspect was finally stopped near the roadside park on 84 south of Post when he encountered a road block set up by law enforcement officers dispatched from that city.

The vehicle Fey was driving had been reported stolen in San Antonio earlier Monday. Bond for him on the unauthorized use of a motor vehicle charge was set Monday night in Post.

He was returned to Scurry County early Tuesday morning and additionally charged with misdemeanor counts of evading arrest and hazardous driving. Bonds on those charges were set at $750 each.

Brain, immune system speak common chemical language

CHICAGO (AP) — Mood seems to affect the strength of disease, and researchers say they have found a possible explanation: the brain and the immune system use many of the same chemicals to communicate.

"If we can begin to understand the biochemistry of these pathways ... we may be able to tap into the body's ability to regulate and heal itself," Dr. Andrew Miller of Montefiore Hospital in New York said Monday at the annual meeting of the American Psychiatric Association.

Martin Lowy of Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland reported his finding that certain immune cells called lymphocytes may mimic brain cell defects in some patients with depression.

Lowy said his research is part of a growing body of work suggesting that the immune system and the brain "share a common chemical language."

In a related finding, Miller reported that so-called tricyclic antidepressants, commonly given to treat depression, impair the disease-fighting activity of natural killer cells, the immune system's front line of defense against viruses and cancer.

Just as the brain can affect the immune system, the immune system has also been found to affect the brain.

Lymphocytes, a type of white blood cell, have been found to produce opium-like chemicals once thought to be produced exclusively in the brain.

These chemicals may serve as natural painkillers by virtue of their effect on the brain and central nervous system.

Lowy has shown that defects in lymphocytes can be related to abnormal levels of the hormone cortisol in the body, which in turn may play a role in the development of depression or Alzheimer's disease.

Many victims of depression and other psychiatric disorders, including Alzheimer's disease, are unable to suppress the production of cortisol when given a potent, synthetic form of cortisol called dexamethasone, Lowy said.

Normal people, on the other hand, cut production of cortisol when given what is called the dexamethasone suppression test.

Lymphocytes have "receptors" on their surface that can lock on to cortisol and thus help monitor cortisol levels, Lowy said. He found that patients who are unable to suppress cortisol either had defective receptors or too few receptors, or a combination of both.

Because lymphocytes and brain cells share many similarities, it is possible that such defects also occur in the brain and are responsible for the patients' psychiatric disorders, Lowy said.

Treatment of cancer produced symptoms

CHICAGO (AP) — Some patients receiving a widely praised, experimental cancer treatment suffered severe psychiatric side effects, ripping out their intravenous tubes and suffering delusions and hallucinations, a study shows.

The patients, victims of advanced cancer who were almost certain to die without treatment, received interleukin-2 at the National Cancer Institute as part of an experimental trial.

Fifteen of the 44 patients studied became so combative and aggressive that they often required restraints, Dr. Kirk Denicoff, a psychiatrist at the National Institute of Mental Health in Bethesda, Md., reported Monday.

Twenty-two of the patients suffered partial loss of mental function, agitation or severe disorientation, Denicoff said at the annual meeting of the American Psychiatric Association.

"During the treatment itself it is very clear that a number of the patients may experience very substantial changes in their cognitive functioning or their behavior," said Dr. David Rubinow, a colleague of Denicoff's.

Rubinow declined to describe the side effects as serious, but said, "They are significant."

He and Denicoff stressed, however, that the psychiatric side effects of interleukin-2 disappeared within a few days after treatment ended, and that there were no apparent long-term psychiatric consequences.

Some patients were so disoriented they pulled out their intravenous tubes, Denicoff said. "They can think they're at home and want to go to work. A number thought it was morning when it was evening."

Minister transferred to psychiatric hospital

DALLAS (AP) — Ten days after trying to commit suicide following the near-fatal choking attack on his wife, a minister has voluntarily entered a psychiatric hospital, officials said.

After being discharged Monday from Presbyterian Hospital, the Rev. Walker Railey was admitted to Timberlawn Psychiatric Hospital for "rest and recuperation from his ordeal," said Ralph Shannon, chairman of pastor-parish relations at First United Methodist Church.

Railey's attorney, Doug Mulder, told the Dallas Times Herald Railey would be questioned by police, possibly today, "assuming he is in good shape, which I've been told he is."

Last Thursday, police attempted to interview Railey but "he requested to have a counselor when we discussed the case with him," said Police Capt. John Holt. Mulder, who was hired by the minister's friends, was out of town and unavailable at that time.

According to inventor Thomas Alva Edison: "Show me a thoroughly satisfied man, and I will show you a failure."
