FURIOUS GALE HALTS RESCUE OF SUB'S CREW

SIX KNOWN ALIVE IN SHIP'S HULK AFTER SATURDAY CRASH

Six of the forty men trapped in the crippled submarine S-4 on the ocean's floor off Provincetown, Mass., were still alive today, but a wintry gale prevented almost every chance of saving them.

The latest message from the submarine, which was rammed and sunk late Saturday afternoon was tapped out by Lieutenant Graham Newell Fitch, one of the four officers aboard, early today.

A 45 mile wind and a rolling sea combined to make continued operations of divers impossible and though salvage crews and ships were converging on the scene of the disaster from several points, nothing could be done to help the imprisoned sailors until the storm abated.

Lieutenant Fitch asked that an attempt be made to send supplies through the torpedo tube. He asked for both food and oxygen, indicating that the men were faced with the real fate of starvation and suffocation.

The furious gale which swept Cape Cod today forested the rescue fleet assembled on the scene of the S-4 disaster to suspend all activities until 4 p. m. Coast guardsmen at the Race Point station radioed Admiral Frank H. Brumby aboard the diver's ship Falcon that their instruments indicated that the wind might die down at that time.

It was reported that the naval tugs Sagamore and Iuka bringing pontoons from the Brooklyn, N. Y., navy yard were to be in Buzzards bay, but this could not be confirmed. Their delay in reaching here will surely handicap efforts to effect the release of six men known to be alive aboard the submarine and the determination of the fate of the 34 others aboard.

The wind was blowing from the northwest at 45 mile rate, the coast guard said. The sea was rough and the temperature was low. Every unit in the rescue fleet was blanketed with ice from the spray.

Reports which came ashore from the Falcon stated that the sea was so rough that it was impossible to lower a diving platform over the side. Early this morning two navy tugs were sent out to the Falcon from other rescue ships. The high

(By Associated Press) MARSHALL, Texas, Dec. 19.—Preliminary hearing for Charley Ford, arrested Sunday after the fatal shooting of G. C. Jenkins, witness in a recent trial of Ford on a bank robbery charge, will be held Tuesday. Jenkins was shot four times.

The shooting occurred at the home of King Foster. Ford and Jenkins went into the kitchen to "settle some business," Foster said, and a few minutes later as he opened the door, the shooting began. One bullet grazed Foster's hip.

Was Out Under Bond Ford was under bond pending an appeal of a four year penitentiary sentence imposed by a jury at Carthage, after Ford's conviction on a charge of robbery in connection with the holdup of the Rockville state bank last July.

Ford, Jenkins and two others were indicted for robbery of the bank. At Ford's trial, Jenkins was a state witness.

King Ben Dies And Body, Undisturbed, Slated For Resurrection Third Day

(By Associated Press) BENTON HARBOR, Mich., Dec. 19.—Benjamin Purnell, king of the House of David is dead. He died at 11:30 last Friday morning and today, the third day after his death, his body still lay in the bed where he had died.

Colony officials, believing in the teachings of Purnell that the faithful could not die, have refrained from summoning an undertaker and have made no announcement of their leader's death.

Rumors of Purnell's demise began to spread through the city early this morning and Dr. C. N. Sowers, colony physician, was sought for verification. At first he said any announcement must come from the colony.

Statement issued Told that Purnell's death was already known outside the colony, Dr. Sowers issued this statement: "Benjamin died at 11:30 last Friday morning, December 16. I did not make any public announcement of his death, out of deference to the religious convictions of the colony. They believe Benjamin will undergo a resurrection as Christ did and they are holding the body for three days."

Few in Colony Know Early this morning only a comparatively few of the colony, who reside at the headquarters colony on Britain avenue knew that Benjamin had died. Many of those who heard that death had come to the 66 year old "seventh messenger" refused to believe it.

Those who accepted Dr. Sowers' word that Benjamin lived no more were confident that he would arise as Christ arose on the third day.

This is the third day of Benjamin's demise. Under the state law regarding the handling of the dead Benjamin must be moved within 72 hours, if he is to be buried.

Born In Kentucky

Born in Kentucky March 27, 1861, Purnell had only the most meagre education. When he was sixteen he married Angelina Brown, the daughter of a Greenup county farmer. According to her story on the witness stand, Purnell always was shiftless. He liked to lie around in the sun, or go visiting where all he had to do was "eat and sleep." In two years he deserted her and their child. "He just went away and never came back."

ACTION DELAYED ON SOONER PLEA FROM GOVERNOR

(By Associated Press) OKLAHOMA CITY, Dec. 19.—Action on Governor Henry S. Johnston's application for a permanent injunction against the self-convened impeachment session of the legislature was delayed today until Wednesday by the three district judges who are considering it.

Postponement was granted upon application of J. R. Keaton, attorney for session proponents, for time in which to prepare an answer to an amended petition filed late Saturday.

Asks Enforcement The new petition presented by Warren K. Snyder, Oklahoma City, who is a co-plaintiff in the governor's action, and C. H. Stuart, counsel for Governor Johnston, asked the district court to enforce its temporary restraining order which members of the legislature disregarded in meeting secretly last week and voting charges of impeachment against the governor and two other state officials.

SECOND ENVOY OF GOOD WILL TO MEXICO OFF

(By Associated Press) DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 19.—Mrs. Evangeline L. Lindbergh, probably the first woman ambassador of good-will, took the air at 10:15 a. m., eastern standard time today on the first lap of the flight which will carry her to Mexico City and a Christmas holiday with her son, Charles A. Lindbergh, America's hero of aviation.

Pilot Brooks announced that with the continuance of clear weather the route to St. Louis, the first leg of the journey, would lead through Indianapolis, with a probable stop in that city for lunch. "After we get to St. Louis it is up to Mrs. Lindbergh whether or not we will continue the trip today," he said.

TRIO BELIEVED NOT GUILTY AS HUNT GOES ON

CALIFORNIA IS STIRRED AS THOUSANDS SEEK FIEND MURDERER

(By Associated Press) LOS ANGELES, Dec. 19.—Not a single hopeful trail that might lead to the capture of the fiend extraordinary who tore apart the body of little Marian Parker, 12, had been found by Los Angeles police detectives up to 8 a. m., today. This was the candid statement of Herman Cline, detective chief, directing the greatest man hunt in the history of southern California.

Ad 10 pt lead—TRIO BELIEVED... Though the two men and one woman still were held as suspects in the brutal crime, Chief Cline said that he did not believe either had any connection with the case.

Names Are Given The woman held is Mrs. Lillian Padley. The two men are Earl Smith, 22, and Gaylor Barnaman, 24.

Mrs. Padley was arrested at 450 south Manhattan place, a few doors from the spot where the kidnaper tossed the mutilated body of little Marian at the feet of Perry M. Parker, her father, just after the latter handed over a ransom of $1,500 that was to have saved a life.

Smith, son of a dentist with offices on the east side is said by police recently to have been disowned by his parents. He was at home, however, at the time of his arrest.

Smith's description fits generally that of the slayer. He is known to have been well acquainted with the Parker family and to have played with the twin daughters of the bank official until the parents of the victim of the fiend banned him from their home.

Barnaman is believed to be deranged mentally.

Formal Verdict Is Given By Coroner

(By Associated Press) LOS ANGELES, Dec. 19 (AP)—A coroner's jury sat in solemn judgment today over the remains of little Marian Parker and ruled: "We find that the deceased came placed in the zoo at the county park, at the East Broadway entrance of the city.

Although its captors violated the law in running the deer down they were ignorant of the statutes and will not be prosecuted, Mr. Parks said. They reported the capture to authorities immediately following the chase, which took place last Thursday. A number of Lubbock people have viewed the animal since it was lodged in the Payne barn last night. The buck is somewhat gentle but if approached too closely will make an effort to gore a person. Aside from being stiff as the result of the chase the deer is in perfect physical condition, Mr. Parks reports.

PROSPECTS FOR TENNIS TEAM AT T. C. U. NOT GOOD

FORT WORTH, Dec. 19.—With only two letter men and one other of conference experience out for tennis, indications are that Coach John Baker, of Texas Christian University will have a hard time building a team which can compete with other conference schools. J. D. Tomlinson, of Hillsboro and William C. Ewell of Colorado City are the two letter men returning. Weir McDermid, of Fort Worth, who played in many matches last year, will also be out for the team. Besides these men there are three other netters who will work out with the squad. They are William Atkinson, Cartwright, Walter L. Lemons (Cleo), and Charles Proctor, Palestine.

Many Good Teams

The coming season will see some of the best teams that have ever represented conference schools clash in what should be great matches. Texas University, with Wilmer Allison, national intercollegiate singles champion at their head, will be the most dangerous team in the conference. However, Appel at Rice will lead a well balanced team and St. M. T., even though John Barr is out of college competition, has a good fighting bunch of netmen.

The weakest teams in the conference will be Baylor, T. C. U., and the Texas Aggies. Since the time when the Park brothers defeated all comers for T. C. U., the Frogs have been unable to end the jinx which hovers over them in tennis. If the Frogs are successful in obtaining the coaching services of Hackney, of the Meadowmere Country Club, their prospects will be much brighter. Baker and Hackney together might accomplish the impossible and produce a championship team.

Row Figure

LILLIE MAE BOWMER

Claiming she left Los Angeles without fulfilling certain A. A. U. requirements, the Royal Palm swimming team of that city is seeking to prevent Lillie Mae Bowmer, co-holder of the world record for 50 yards, from transferring her allegiance to a Honolulu swimming team. Miss Bowmer denies the charges. Her manager, Frank Hohobrow, says he will bring charges against her at the next A. A. U. meeting.

1923, when warrants were sworn out by two former members of the colony for alleged crime carrying with it life imprisonment, Purnell retired to a hiding place and remained a fugitive until the fall of 1925, when state police seized him in an unexpected raid upon the colony.

Grand Jury Probe

A grand jury investigation, three warrants issued by former grand jurors charging criminal assault, suits by the state to break up the colony and against the wealth Purnell was alleged to have piled up, damage suits for alleged fraudulent conversion of the property of cult members and other litigation piled up after 1924.

Witnesses in the dissolution suits charged Purnell with being a gayer, more instead of the spiritual leader he pretended to be. Faithful colonists, on the other hand, branded the testimony as false. They insisted Purnell could not die, nor be harmed by the hand of the law, because he was the "Seventh Messenger" who would lead the faithful to immortality.

100 NEW LIGHTS ARE TURNED ON AT BROWNFIELD

BROWNFIELD, Dec. 19.—About one hundred new street lights were turned on for the first time last week although they were installed several weeks ago. A delay in the receipt of a transformer from the factory prevented their use until this time. The residential section served by them presents a very different appearance at night and it is stated by officials of the city, that immediate arrangements are expected to be made for lighting all other portions of the residential section. Brownfield is in a better position to have adequate street lighting than many other towns as the plant is city owned and has a present capability to serve a town of several times greater size.

NATURE'S PLAN MAY DESTROY GRASS HOPPER

HAIRWORM IS FEATURE INSTRUMENT IN ITS ANNIHILATION

BY FRANK L. WELLER (Associated-Press Farm Editor)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—An elaborate process so intricate that nature alone can guide it to perfection is credited for the survival of American agriculture.

Tremendous Scheme

The tremendous scheme, revealed by Dr. N. S. Cobb, federal chief nematologist, is built around the subtle function of the Mermis submicroscopic, commonly called the hairworm. Years of study and investigation have convinced Dr. Cobb and his associates, whose work has been assisted by approximately 150 of the nation's foremost zoologists and entomologists, that grasshoppers, in limitless hordes and a thousand species, would devour practically every farm crop but for hairworm parasitization.

An avicious enemy, the nematode enters the grasshopper's body when it swallows eggs of the hairworm, matures there, and bores its way out. The grasshopper dies from the wound.

Details Correlated

Nature has perfectly correlated every detail. The nematizing process is as ruthless and deliberate as premeditated murder. Instinct forces the grasshopper to feed several inches from the ground, on the exposed surface of plant leaves.

To make sure the victim is trapped, the female hairworm is so constituted that she cannot lay eggs in a shadow. Emerging from the ground in the spring, she ascends to a position well lighted by the sun, irrevocably the spot on which grasshoppers feed.

Each egg is equipped with polar filaments that become entangled with the "fur" of young leaf hairs spread apart, the eggs become sufficiently scattered to keep the grasshopper from getting more than two or three eggs during the entire feeding season.

Contents Of Canal

The contents of a grasshopper's alimentary canal are eliminated approximately once every hour. In that time the hairworm larvae must work from the egg into cavities of the victim's body, there to thrive on the food it has digested. Again nature is prepared. The equatorial region of the nematode is composed of a substance soluble in less than an hour.

An even more astounding circumstance, leading scientists to believe environment may be responsible for determination of sex, enters nature's colorful scheme. Female hairworms, growing from half an inch to six inches in length in six weeks, usually are many times larger than male nemas. Whether it is because of limited room to develop in the grasshopper's body or because of insufficient food supply, the hairworms, regardless of the sex propensity in the larvae, always become male when a large number of eggs are swallowed and as invariably are females when the number is limited.

Becomes Sterile

In every case, Dr. Cobb says a parasitized grasshopper immediately becomes sterile. Tests have shown that fields attacked by nematized grasshoppers are free of the pests in following years or until unfinished grasshoppers from adjacent territory invade them. That, he says, explains "grasshopper waves" in this country.

SUB DISASTER

sea smashed them against the side of the Falcon and their occupants were pulled on to the deck from the Falcon with great difficulty.

Fishermen Refuse Plea

The hardy fishermen on this port refused to move their vessels from the dock to carry newspaper men to the scene of the disaster. They said their small boats could not live through the gale. Several other craft which attempted to go out turned back before reaching the outer harbor.

The S-4 was sent to the bottom Saturday when it was struck by the coast guard destroyer Paulding. It was a fight against time today, in which every minute was precious and the odds were admittedly against the slowly suffocating survivors in an almost impossible ratio.

Desperate Cry Rings Out

In the ears of every officer and man of the rescue fleet from Rear Admiral Brumby down to the rawest recruit, rang the desperate cry of the unfortunate men, laboriously pounded out by hammer in the metallic dots and dashes of the morse code to a diver alongside on the sandy bottom.

The messages follow:
Diver—Is Gas bad?
Submarine—No; but the air. How long will you be down?
Diver—How many are there?
Submarine—There are six. Will you be long now?
Diver—We are doing everything possible.

The message that told the fleet that men still lived on the S-4 came from the torpedo room. From the other compartments there was no encouraging word.

Giant Hole Ripped

A great hole ripped through the heavy steel plates starboard at midship just forward of the ship's four inch gun. Little doubt of the fate of officers and men on duty there when the speeding prow of the Paulding clove its way into the submersible's side.

Aft of the conning tower there was silence too, but there was also hope, however slight. Divers had been unable to elicit a response to their tappings because of the mass of wreckage which obstructed the decks.

Message Received By Mine Sweeper

BOSTON, Dec. 19 (AP)—A message from the men trapped on the submarine S-4 was received by the mine sweeper Falcon early today. On the arrival of the Falcon here from the scene of the rescue operations off Provincetown Lieutenant Commander Edward Ellsberg said that the message tapped out in the Morse code asked if the rescuers could send oxygen and emergency food supplies to the six men still alive on the submarine through the torpedo tubes.

The messages were sent by Lieutenant Graham Newell Piteh, one of the four officers aboard the S-4.

Air Pumps Stopped

Pumping of air into the S-4 was stopped and rescue work at the scene was at a standstill. Rear Admiral Frank M. Brumby reported upon arrival at the Charleston navy yard on board the Falcon.

The air hose through which pumping of air into the submarine was started yesterday broke away from the submarine, and it was believed that it was cut by some of the wreckage of the sunken craft.

Heavy seas this morning prevented divers from going down to repair the break. As a result the submarine was again cut off entirely from the rescuers.

Sinking Of Sub Is Held As Accident

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19 (AP)—The sinking of the S-4 by the coast guard destroyer Paulding was described today by Admiral Charles F. Hughes, chief of naval operations, as a "legitimate accident," for which the coast guard was not being blamed. He believed the accident unavoidable.

Thought For Today

Judge not according to the appearance.—John 7:24. A Man may smile and smile, and be a villain.—Shakespeare.

Just A Convict!

A writer on The Los Angeles Record who annually holds a Christmas party for poor children received this letter from a convict in the Nevada state penitentiary:

"I am sending you this note hoping that the articles contained may find a place in your approaching Christmas distribution. Perhaps the work on the breads part of the best. It really is not my trade, but they may make some poor little girls retain their childhood in St. Nicholas, and that's a pretty good item."

"Please don't get a wrong impression from this letter. I'm merely one of the many who live behind prison walls, but I am not on the hunt for a favor, neither do I desire anything. You had the genuine pleasure of helping at your Christmas celebrations, some time ago, and as I have considerable time on my hands I thought I'd help, if I could in breaking up a few smiles in the old home town."

"The you know that had as conviction unshakably as I've never met one who had such love enough to want to kill off old Santa Claus. In case you think the little head chains will help fill any stockings satisfactorily, and would care for them, I'll gladly fix 'em for you. I'll be glad that they reach you by Dec. 17."

"I hope you can use them, and I'm mighty glad to be able to do this small as it is I'll not sign any name. If you would care for more just address, Your Elmer, Box 607, Carson City, Nev."

The letter tells its own story. Goodness can live in man's heart, though he be chained like a beast for the blackest of crimes. There is something fine, something beautiful, something noble in the Nevada state penitentiary. We hope it carries high into some share of this earth's happiness after his time is up.

How Is It Done?

Wherever you go, city or country, you see well-dressed girls. All have silk, have many have fur coats, their hair is neatly trimmed and curled, their hats and shoes attractive.

How do they do it? Part of the secret is revealed by Miss Lillian Locke of Boston Teachers' college. She has made a survey of 2,000 girls and announces that girls are dressing well on a salary of $22 a week, spending $210 a year on clothing and grooming.

In 1921 when girls' earnings averaged about $6 a week they spent $72 a year on clothes. Now the average working girl earns $1148 a year, but the clothing she buys is higher priced.

Miss Locke's budget allows $44.75 for a winter coat and $27.74 for a spring coat or suit. The girl may buy three pairs of shoes a year at $7.94 each and two hats at $2.95 each. In 1925 she could spend $40 for cosmetics, hosiery, permanent waves, perfumes.

She is allowed a silk crepe dress at $17.47, a satin dress at $12.74, a combination afternoon and evening dress at $13.74 and an everyday dress at $2.95.

She is allowed six pairs of silk hose, three pairs of gloves, articles, a bathing suit and a handbag.

How do they do it? It seems by knowing how to buy.

A Flower

"A tear and a flower for poor America, which in the month of December pockets 276 millions of dollars for war debts."

That is taken from one of the newspapers published in Rome, Rome. The paper calls attention to the fact that with the approach of Christmas the usual spirit of goodness and peace on earth is saddened by the fact that the December payments of Europe's debts have to be made in Washington.

A tear and a flower for Europe, too, that can not pay a debt without crying over it!

THE PLAINSMAN

Says:

That Girl on Broadway says stenographers are not the only girls who use the 'touch system.'

The Los Angeles fiend, who kidnaped and murdered and then mutilated the body of 12-year-old Marian Parker may never be apprehended and brought to trial by it is The Plainsman is confident of a defense plea of 'temporary insanity.'

The Plainsman has no doubt that a reputable attorney and his aides will plead with the jury to place that arch-criminal in an insane asylum—that is providing the defendant has the necessary where-withal—where he may some day escape or be pronounced 'cured' and be turned out again to prey upon society.

The Plainsman likewise has no doubt that a group of Los Angeles self-appointed will band together to use their influence to save this beast-man from the death at the hands of the law which he so justly deserves. It's the way of this land of ours.

When looking for a reason for the laxity of justice in the United States it's a hard matter to place a finger on the cause. Some say it is the jury system, others say that the laws have become so tangled that almost any case is likely to be reversed by a higher court or others attribute it to the fact that our laws are not respected like they used to be and still others blame the attributes of the general public.

The Plainsman believes it most likely that all of these reasons contribute to our admittedly slack system of justice. It is impossible that any one of them could have brought about the decadence of our code of right and wrong and the punishment warranted by its infractions. It thus becomes incumbent upon us all to do our share to set the nation back upon the right track in this regard. We will do well to remember these things the next time we are called upon to serve on a jury the next time we are asked to sign a pardon petition, the next time we are asked by the Legislature to bring about the acquittal of some ratty party because of defense twaddle. The solving of this question is of national importance. None of us can shrink it and live up to our inheritance as freeborn American citizens.

That Man on Avenue Q says that the reading of the trials of Hugh Snyder, Mrs. Liffendahl and Becky Rogers he has come to the conclusion that the ladies would like to have equal rights everywhere BUT in the courtroom.

It's all the same to the West Texas Gas company The Plainsman would like to see the meters placed somewhere else besides in front yards. Although these meters are synonymous of a great convenience—one which Lubbock is really enjoying—it seems that they do not add to the beauty of our thoroughfares.

The Plainsman doesn't do any detective work in the matter. He doesn't have the slightest idea why some of the meter-boxes are placed in front yards in fact he can see no reason for it. Whatever be the cause it cannot be said that the placing of meter boxes on front lawns adds to the appearance of our city—the point of the whole matter which interests The Plainsman the most.

American juries might do well to consider that a gun in the hands of a beautiful woman can kill just as dead as if it were fired by a man.

If you do that Christmas shopping tomorrow you'll not only do yourself a favor but you'll also help some of our boys and girls. Every year there are too many of us who wait until the last moment then rush up town, grab up a few articles which still remain on the counters, and expect already worn-out sales-people to fix us up in a hurry. Common sense tells us the choice of purchases is limited by the number of purchasers and that it is easier to find what we want in a full stock than in one depleted by many sales. Common sense also tells us that sales-people can more easily wait upon a thousand customers in ten days than they can in one day. Make those purchases tomorrow and do a favor to everyone concerned.

The Plainsman doesn't know how much money is set aside each year for the maintenance of the city's streets and alleys but whatever the sum is it is inadequate.

The pedestrian who affixed a klaxon on his walking stick has proved again that it is sometimes well for a man to blow his own horn.

When schools opened up again it breaks my youngsters' hearts. Their line vacations over but their when poor mother's starts.

Permanent Peace Is A Permanent Problem As Long As Powers Remain Imperialistic, Is Opinion Of Dutcher

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—They are going down the headlines of New York again in search of Santa Claus.

Soon on the street corners, will stand bewhiskered fellows in gay uniforms of red and white. They will think they hold and call upon the city to help the poor. Children will stop and hold out little hands, crying out in glee. The children will not look behind the whiskers into the hunted, hungry eyes; nor will they look at the shoes and notice that the heels are run over and that the soles flap a bit in the sooty rain. It is enough for their illusion that the figure before them conforms to their favorite symbol.

THE headlines of Manhattan are given first chance at the Santa Claus job. It is one of the great city's most sardonic gestures. Men who have not known where their Christmas dinner was coming from; men without homes, without hopes, without jobs find suddenly that by playing the role of the merriest character in all the holiday calendar they may find a temporary way out.

I STOPPED the other day at one of the stations where Santa Claus are rigged out and sent forth to tinkle bells at the city's corners. It was a drab, cobwebbed street, that smacked of squalor. Two or three rusty tables, made of boards and saw-horses, were piled high with cast-off clothing.

About the tables swarmed, like birds picking seeds, the threadbare folk from the tenements who were hoping to find something to wear, rather than something to decorate their bodies.

AFTER a time a scout came in with half a dozen potential Santa Clauses trailing after him.

One by one they were questioned in an effort to find which was most in need—for, after all, a Santa Claus can make $3 or $4 a day for three or four weeks.

They all belonged to that class of defeated men who stand with shoulders slumped, in lines before the employment bureau. They were all hanging looking men, most of them fast getting past mid-life. A couple seemed still in their thirties. They talked in monosyllables, as if words came to their tongues with difficulty, as though they were not used to conversations with their fellows. You can see them by the hundreds on the New York side, straggling silent men, standing alone while the world goes chattering by.

HALF an hour later four men walked from the little storehouse dressed in the gay trappings of Santa Claus. Four more, shrugged their shoulders and walked dejectedly back into the street. Almost wearily the more fortunate ones picked up their "Merry Christmas" signs and ambled off toward Broadway.

Such, then, are the purveyors of Christmas cheer in the New York City.

Old, you!—afterward one of the coats told me a little story. "Ya know that first guy," he

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—From all the international discussion in recent weeks of the possibility of abolishing war, comes no indication that the world will do more than nibble at the edges of the problem of permanent peace.

The situation boils down to the question of how war can be ended and why it won't be. There are certain fundamental causes of war which are generally recognized when a war gets going. Imperialism, inspired by greed for trade, natural resources and territory, has been named as the worst.

EQUALIZED reduction of all armaments if ever achieved, may be a step in the right direction and will save money during peacetime, but the prospects of a fight-are just as good, whether each of several men have one gun or two.

The league has done good work in heading off some small wars, some of which might have spread into major ones, but its efficiency in the face of another world war like the last remains to be proved.

Pacts binding nations to buy-arms, the aggressor nation in future wars have been suggested, but nations always claim to fight only for defense and even the question of war guilt in the great European struggle which began 13 years ago remains unsettled.

Anti-aggression pacts might force the United States to abandon its neutrality even in cases where only a 30-30 rifle existed between aggression and non-aggression. They seem to leave the way open for and even to encourage all sorts of camouflage and skulduggery by scheming nations.

SOVIET Russia's proposal at Geneva for universal disarmament was too good to be true. No other nation has embraced it and it is to be considered in the light of the fact that Russia herself always is happy to stir up a bloody international class war elsewhere.

Imperialistic nations have too much at stake to agree to anything like that, and imperialistic nations are in the saddle. At best they would demand an enforced permanency of the status quo.

Could Britain withdraw from China, India, Egypt and other lands rather than wage war against native populations demanding autonomy?

Could Japan and France stand territories or spheres of influence where they now hold their positions by armed forces?

Could the United States even accept the proposal scheduled to be made at the Havana Pan-American conference forbidding armed occupation of one American republic's territory by another?

Could she withdraw from Haiti and Nicaragua and promise never to do it again? Would Italy abandon?

"Say, talk about tonight! I checked up on his yarn. Went to a joint over by East River and there was three kids and all they had in the house was a bottle of sour milk and some stale bread. The wife was in bed—him, and white-like and folk to have another baby and the old man had been out of work for weeks. So we give him the breaks on the job."

"He should make a pretty good Santa Claus, don't you think?"

A GOOD MIND

Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, America's aviation hero, has delivered again. He is in Mexico City, the latest of President Calles of the southern republic and of United States Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow having completed his third history-making flight in less than a year.

And as long as we look on Lindbergh as a hero, it is well enough to long a little about the splendid luck the young colonel has had. Not one serious accident has marred his flying since the day he took off from San Diego last May and since which he has covered approximately 25,000 miles in the Spirit of St. Louis. The wonderful officer has just made one serious blunder in all that time.

That the greatest thing of it all is that he has not made one serious blunder is a little surprising, considering that in France, England, Belgium, in this country and now in Mexico, he has conducted himself not only like the gentleman born, but like a thoroughly schooled diplomat as well.

It is safe to say that all history does not contain the name of a private individual who has been cheered and honored as Col. Lindbergh has been. How many men could withstand the honors that have been thrust upon young Lindbergh without permitting it to set the better of his judgment?

Lindbergh's head has not been turned yet and there is not the slightest indication that it ever will be. In this respect, as in many others, he is truly a remarkable man.

Col. Lindbergh is certainly one of this country's most valuable citizens.—Hunger Times.

Lindbergh has always been a great man. Even when he was a child, while not by a physical giant, he has had ever present in him the elements that were bound to develop when the right time arrived. He was no doubt born with a distinct clear brain and with unusual ability. He was no doubt naturally a studious youngster, and gave much time to study. He was refrained from dissipation, which no doubt accounts for much of his success. There is nothing that will impede a man more or quicker than the continual dissipation of life. Lindbergh has never been a dissipated man, as was suggested by it, and neither has he been a drunkard and a rascal or drags of the various kinds. He has an far as his record has been revealed, lived a temperate life.

His natural ability, and trained skillful mind has enabled him to do what has never been done in a wonderfully successful way, and has made him the hero of the world in this art. He too, is using this success not only to his own profit, but he is using it for the benefit of his nation. He could do all of these things, and more, if he were not so busy. He is so busy that he has no time to do anything else. He has an idea that we are not their friends and warm up their friendship to a point of being respect for this country.

Old Master's SHE is not fair to outward view. Her loveliness I never knew. Until she smiled on me: Oh! then 'I say her eye was bright, A well of love, a spring of light.

Her Fascist dreams of power and territorial expansion? A general affirmative answer is impossible. The great powers cannot yet be expected to give up the old game of gobbling the weak which has been played since the beginning of time and to complete disarmament would mean their loss of a large part of the world now ruled as conquered territory.

SENATOR BORAH proposes treaties between nations outlawing war. Either this system of a single international treaty among the great powers appears to be as practical and effective a means as is at all likely to be acceptable, but almost any plan put into effect would only be experienced. Some of the best authorities believe that Britain and America will before long engage in an unwritten agreement providing for Anglo-American peace and cooperation. Acting together, they can control the world for a long time. At war, they are likely to wreck it.

FARM ANIMALS ARE TOOLS USED IN CROP HARVEST

COLLEGE STATION, Dec. 18.—Farm animals are the tools which we market our crops and much of our farm crops," Dr. Jay L. Lush, animal husbandman, breeding investigator, Agricultural Experiment Station, A. & M. College of Texas, who will be one of the speakers on the program of the special livestock short course to be held here January 9-13, has pointed out.

"The better our tools the better the job we do," he said. "There are two ways of making our farm animals better. We can give them better care as they grow up and we can breed better animals by making the proper matings of the parents. Both processes go hand in hand. The most important thing for the breeder to know is what

BRUTAL MURDER

Frenzied Woman Is Held After Raid

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 19 (AP)—A frenzied woman was charged with suspicion of murder and a man was held for questioning in connection with the kidnaping, murder and mutilation of 12 year old Marian Parker when police this morning raided a mysterious house near the place where Perry Parker, father the girl, paid her abductors $1,500 and received only the torn body of his little daughter. "I didn't kill her! I didn't kill her! They did!" Officers Swarm To Place These words, said to have come from the lips of the woman as she raced up and down the street in front of the house, brought a swarm of officers to the place in the early morning hours.

The woman, Lillian Padley, 23, and a man who gave his name as William Long, were taken into custody but Long was released after questioning.

About the time of the raid officers in another part of town arrested Gaylord Barnaman, 24, who was tentatively booked on a charge of grand larceny pending an extended investigation. He was taken into custody because he had telephoned radio stations in an attempt to have broadcast a message from "George Fox" the name which the abductor—slayer used in some of his letters to Parker.

Heel Prints Found

Heel prints sharply outlined in what appeared to be blood stains and a group of bloody towels led the police to advance the theory that the house may have been the one in which the little girl was killed, dismembered and dismembered. Other towels were found which had been recently washed in an attempt to remove similar stains. Several razor blades and a crudely drawn picture of Judas Iscariot enhanced the belief of police that they were approaching a solution of the crime which has been called the most atrocious in the history of the Pacific southwest. The kidnaper mentioned razor blades as possible weapons in disposing of little Marian and also referred to Judas Iscariot in speaking of Parker.

Rewards Total $50,000

The early morning raid was one of a series of climaxes in the greatest man hunt ever staged in southern California. There is a price of more than $50,000 on the head of the kidnaper-slayer whose letters and actions have shown him to be as cunning as his adopted name—"The Fox"—signifies.

Over Fifty Arrested

The net result of the huge police operations has been the arrest of more than half a hundred persons, but only four of these are being held. The Padley woman, Barnaman, Lewis D. Wyatt, who was taken into custody at Las Vegas, Nevada, and a man whose name police refused to make known are the four.

A mocking detainee note which had been placed on a fire alarm box was delivered to the police last night by firemen who answered a false alarm turned in there. It purported to be a note written by "The Fox" and threatened death to Marian's twin sister, Marjorie because he had been traced by the police in his early dealings with Parker.

Second Kidnaper Held

The second kidnaper failed to elude the law and was cornered by a posse in the hills section east of Pasadena. Police said his description did not tally with that of the slayer of Marian Parker. The Pasadena suspect gave his name as Jesse Cobb, 23. His finger prints were taken and hurried to Los Angeles for checking as a precautionary measure. He was returning to Pasadena when cornered by the officers. The Swapp girl told the authorities that he had attacked her. The car driven by Cobb was said by the officers to have been stolen and the police said he faced a charge of grand larceny, in addition to other possible accusations. The kidnaper of Marian Parker struck last Thursday morning. While Marian and Marjorie were on their way to school a stranger watching them from a coupe attempted to speak to them.

Stranger Seeks Girl

During the noon hour a stranger appeared at the junior high school and told Mrs. Mary Ward Holt, attendance officer, that Marian's father had been hurt and was calling for her. It was a perfect piece of trickery and Marian was unwittingly released to a fiend who took her to a horrible death.

When Marian failed to return from school at the regular hour her twin sister told of the stranger and the search was begun. Shortly afterwards, two telegrams—one from Pasadena and the other from Ilhambra, both nearby cities—warned the father not to attempt to interfere with the kidnaper's plans.

Girl Makes Plea

Early in the afternoon there came a second letter—a pitiful handwritten appeal from the girl herself asking her father to do as her captor desired and to come and get her. Three times that afternoon the Parker telephone rang but as Parker answered he spoke only to an open wire. The caller had broken the connection each time.

Another Letter

A night and a morning of agony for the Parker elapsed before further word came. Then early Saturday afternoon came another letter. It contained another appeal in the girl's handwriting and two notes from the kidnaper voicing his anger at the father for permitting the police to see the trap. They threatened death to the girl if his instructions were not followed. The kidnaper's notes showed he had an accurate check on the police operations. The distraught father finally asked the police to withdraw. That evening he was instructed to drive to a spot not far from his home for a final rendezvous. Parker followed instructions and was met by a masked man in a small automobile. Beside the kidnaper was little Marian. The father asked for a glimpse of the girl. With a terse "she's asleep," the kidnaper, allowed Parker to peep into the car, then ordered him to hand over the $1,500. Parker surrendered the roll of $20 bills and the kidnaper informed him he would drive ahead and deposit Marian on a lawn. The father followed the mysterious car. In a moment the kidnaper cast the heavily wrapped girl from his machine and sped away.

Parker hurried to the side of the object and clutched it in his arms. Marian was dead.

He opened the bundle. The body of the little girl had been dismembered and horribly mutilated.

The arms were cut off at the elbows. The legs were cut off at the torso, which had been dismembered. The dismembered parts of the body were found yesterday scattered along the roadway in well wrapped packages. Apparently they had been tossed from the kidnaper's automobile as he sped away from the place where he had met Parker and later thrown the torso from his car.

Smoke is so thick over English industrial cities that experts estimate that 3,000,000 tons of soot fall on the soil every year.

REMEMBER THE VITAL SPOTS ON YOUR CHASSIS—

In faulty lubrication lies the cause of 80 per cent of all the repairs on your car. It's the 15 to 60 hard-wearing dust exposed chassis bearings below the body line that cause most grief.

Old-fashioned oil and grease cups were largely to blame, but today most manufacturers have given you a new method of lubrication—the Alemite System—now in use on 7,000,000 cars. Instead of grease and oil cups, the Alemite gun shoots fresh lubricant through each bearing and cleans out old, gritty grease at the same time, keeping the bearings clean as well as lubricated.

Our special equipment and the fact that we are the Official Alemite Service Station in Lubbock enables us to give you quick and thorough lubrication.

VALENTINO LOVED BY HIS AIDES AS WELL AS BY FILM FANDOM, COLLETTA, APPEARING AT PALACE, REMINISCES

BY BLANCHE E. BEAN
Journal Staff Writer
Rudolph Valentino, whose fame as a screen lover seems a thing almost eternal, was loved as well by those with whom he worked. "He was a prince of a fellow."

This is the sentiment expressed this morning by Colletta, diminutive danseuse and singer, who is appearing at the Palace Theatre. Colletta was one time dancing partner to the famous cinema star. "It is something to remember that one has been partner with the late Valentino and that one has known him," Colletta thinks, but when it comes to handsome partners, she remembers one, whose beauty far surpassed that of the screen star.

Liked Spaniard Best
A Spaniard—this man was one of fiery disposition. "I was quite struck with him at one time. But his temper was terrible! He could speak very little English and it was so funny when he got mad at me while we were on the stage." She imitated his broken speech and manner.

But the Spaniard's temper was too fiery one day and he threw Colletta in the orchestra pit, breaking her ankle.

He is now in Cuba. As she talked she hauled some of his photographs from a drawer filled with souvenirs and scrap books. And he was handsome enough to make one wish, almost to be pitched into the orchestra pit!

Gracious, unassuming and friendly with that naivety that "sells" her immediately, Colletta talks on while she is being visited.

"You are from the newspaper?" she questioned upon being introduced. And smiling, she added, "What do you want to know? About Valentino?"

Shows Her Scrap Book
"Perhaps you would like to see my scrap book," she offered, leading the way back stage to her dressing room, her mother, whom she had introduced, following and supplementing remarks to those of her daughter.

High patent boots a sport sweater and short skirt, with a red sun cocked over her brilliant black hair, Colletta was picturesque as she knelt before her wardrobe trunk and brought out her souvenirs. A native of Pittsburgh, Pa., she has been dancing since she was 16 years of age, and during that time she has met many famous persons.

Her greatest thrill was in knowing Jim Corbett, boxer, another man for whom she had a "crush" for some time, despite the fact that he is possibly three times her age. She laughs over this now. She has met "Peaches" Brown, although she does not know her personally. "She has the most gorgeous shock of blonde hair I have ever seen and friends of mine who know her, say that she is one of the most friendly and sweet-dispositioned persons with whom they have worked."

Brother in Troupe
Lettitia Ellsworth is Colletta's name and it was after she went on the stage that she assumed the name of Colletta Ellsworth. In her troupe is her brother, another young woman, Lillian Dawson, whose mother travels with her also, and two men, the revue making their trips in an automobile.

Colletta is as pretty of a morning as she visits the theater sans make-up as she may be before the footlights. A clear, olive skin goes well with her brown eyes and brilliant black hair.

She is singing now in "comedy stuff."

"I can't sing. There is nothing too terrible to say about my voice," she insists, and her mother protests that she is perhaps modest about her vocal abilities. Colletta reiterated her sentiment. "I can just sing this way for comedy and it seems to go over," she continued.

"Why, I can't carry a tune and my voice is terrible."

This may be, she hasn't sung yet in Lubbock, but she has received her encouragement in other places and pictures of her dancing, with stories from other cities, seem to prove that she has her abilities as an entertainer. And then, Valentino was perhaps careful about choosing his partner.

She May Marry
Colletta does not know whether she will leave the stage and marry. There is one man whom she may wed, but now they have quarreled and he does not know where she is. Two of his pictures have a prominent place on her dresser and in one of them a tiny Christmas card with love from "Phil."

"You see, I don't expect to get anything from him this year. He just hunted up the card he used last year," she explained, picking up the thumb-nail photograph and brushing an imaginary fleck of trash from the picture.

He is blonde and large, qualities the small and dark Colletta does not admire.

Christmas this year will be spent in Breckenridge, by the Ellsworth family, that is all except "Daddy," who is in the East. There was a brightly lit box among the souvenirs flaunting admonitions about opening early, and Colletta showed a gift she had already received from a friend.

SEVERAL HELD IN SACK THEFTS AT COTTON OIL MILL

With a check-up being made today officials of the Lubbock Cotton Oil Mill estimate that approximately 9,900 sacks have been stolen from their warehouse in the past three months. Because of the large supply of sacks kept by the company, the loss was not discovered until Saturday and a number of negro boys together with a truck driver were taken into custody by officers. The driver escaped late in the afternoon by jumping through a window at the city hall and had not been found at noon today.

The company has a storage of from 50,000 to 100,000 sacks and the thefts have been going on, unintermitted, for the past three months. The loss is estimated at approximately $600. Entrance to the warehouse was gained through a window.

The Strait of Bah-el-Maneb, connecting the Red Sea with the Gulf of Aden, is called the Gate of Tears because there are so many shipwrecks there.

Flashes Of Life (By The Associated Press)

Jerusalem Dry
JERUSALEM—Rain would be a welcome Christmas gift. Because of prolonged drought prayers are to be offered in churches, mosques and synagogues.

Fit And Fancy
NEW YORK—After an arduous five-day regulating baseball affairs Mr. Landis is feeling fine. "Never better," he amplified. "I'm ready for Tuesday now."

Industrial Aid
WASHINGTON—Mr. Hoover believes that Henry Ford's latest activities will benefit the business situation of the entire country, having good effects on employment generally, both direct and indirect.

Gold And Cupid
NEW YORK—Cupid is getting help from this country for his activities in India. Shipments of gold aggregating $1,500,000 are largely for use as wedding gifts in the marriage season next spring.

He's Considerate
OSSINING, N. Y.—Warden Laws of Sing Sing apparently likes to have convicts go to bed in good humor. He deferred two executions for several hours so that the audience at a prison musical comedy emerging from the chapel would not meet an official party bound for the death house.

Pictures Banned
PARIS—Movie actresses, prize fighters and mere millionaires are now deprived of publicity they have been getting by having their pictures taken when laying wreaths on the tomb of the unknown soldier. The police have ruled that pictures may be taken only of official ceremonies.

Merry Christmas
NEW YORK—It will be a Merry Christmas for some 5,000,000 investors in American corporations. Santa has $400,000,000 in extra dividends for their socks.

Better Business
WASHINGTON—Directors of the United States chamber of commerce believe that increased buying power of the farmer will benefit general business next year.

"Modern" Revolt
NEW YORK—Notwithstanding a discussion of the "revolt of modern woman" that packed the Brooklyn academy of music there seems to be doubt as to whether she is in revolt. Mrs. Will Durant argued that woman is in revolt to an excessive degree and is becoming more and more masculinized. In view of Fanny Hurst American women haven't gumption enough to revolt. Mrs. Elizabeth Marbury said she had heard the same question discussed sixty years ago. Texas Guinan talked about the Prince of Wales and her night clubs.

Cat Ever Ready
CHICAGO—A cat of white tails is to be kept handy at police headquarters for use by any woman who identifies a man who has assaulted or robbed her. Chief Detective O'Connor thinks whipping will be better than sleeping, such as women have been doing when suspects have been lined up.

A NEW PATTERN IN REED & BARTON SILVER PLATE

This pattern, the newest by Reed & Barton's craftsmen, is a remarkable example of how much real beauty may be incorporated in silverware design in which the prevailing note is simplicity.

It is made in a complete line of silverware and hollow ware in the well-known, durable, Reed & Barton Silver Plate, that is actually "the next thing to solid silver."

ANDERSON BROS. JEWELERS

The Blazing Horizon

THE STORY THUS FAR:

The story begins in 1880, in the little saw-town of Caldwell, Kan., close to the Indian territory border.

TONY HARRISON, 13-year-old son of JEFF HARRISON, a handsome gambler, is orphaned when TOM BENTON, a cattle thief, shoots his father in a poker game.

The boy is befriended by GORDON W. LILLIE, then a restaurant waiter and later to be known as PAWNEE BILL.

JOE CRAIG, foreman of the Bar K ranch, who takes Tony to the Bar K to live, and by COLONEL TITUS MOORE, owner of the ranch.

Lillie thinks somewhat of being DAVID PAYNE, who is sitting for the opening of the Indian territory lands, but he gets an offer of a school teaching post in Pawnee and accepts it.

At the Bar K Tony Harrison meets RITA MOORE, spirited little daughter of Titus Moore, and she insists on making him accompany her on horseback rides. She is the cause of his getting a broken leg in a fall from a horse.

strate what he could do with his left hand. He had sent for a large supply of ammunition, which he invited the boy to use freely.

"There's more where that came from, Tony."

To his wife, who occasionally remonstrated with him that he was encouraging the boy to waste his time and blowing a dangerous toy in his hands, he replied that he was doing the same thing with Tony that he would do with a boy of his own.

"Besides, I want to humor him. I figure I owe him a lot. I don't like an apprentice on who might have happened to Rita if she'd ridden Outlaw."

Even after he had recovered from his accident, Tony found time to keep his hand in. His enthusiasm was boundless and Joe Craig never stopped marvelling at his surprising progress. The colonel had given him a belt and holster of black leather, which Tony kept pliable and soft, rubbing it religiously with oil.

"And so the days passed, and the weeks. The leaves on the trees turned brown and gold and then brown. The sun no longer beat down fiercely of an afternoon, but assumed a new benevolence. The fall roundup came and went and Tony accompanied Craig and his men when they drove a herd of steers into Caldwell.

It was his first visit to Caldwell since his father's death and it evoked bitter memories. By common consent the Bar K men avoided the Big Buffalo saloon and did most of their celebrating in Mag Tony's place. Tony's lips tightened as they rode past the Big Buffalo, but he said nothing and he and Joe Craig headed for the cemetery where Jeff Harrison had been buried.

Some of the cattle that Titus Moore had invested Tony's money in had been included in the herd they had brought to market. These Joe Craig had handled as a separate transaction. The day they left Caldwell Craig handed the boy five hundred dollars. "About a hundred of this I'd say was profit, Tony. Now, if you want my advice, I'd recommend real strongly that you cache it in the bank."

Together they went to the Stock Exchange bank, where Tony opened an account with Joe Craig as trustee and made the acquaintance of John W. Nyce, the assistant cashier.

"It's the best way to see that little pile grows to a million, son," said Nyce, who afterward was to become mayor of Caldwell.

"That's what I'm telling him," said Craig. "I've been a total loss as my own financial adviser, ever chiefly to the fact that I won't listen to myself, but I sure hope to be more of a success with Tony. Whenever I do accumulate a little roll I generally take a flyer in stud poker and the results have been uniformly disastrous."

"When his capital is a little bigger," Nyce advised, "he might do worse than pick up a little real estate in Caldwell. You can buy corner lots cheaper now."

"That's worth thinking over," Craig replied. "For the present, the young man is trying up his money in call."

The Santa Fe extension from Wellington had been completed and the town swarmed with trail herders, some from Kansas, some from the Strip, others from Texas. The saloons and gambling halls were filled with cowboys bent on squandering their pay-as only those who for months at a time are deprived of the opportunity know how to squander it. They totted for 15 or 16 hours a day at one of the most exacting occupations in the world, and received much less than the average laborer who worked only half as hard. A cowboy had to have a working knowledge of blacksmithing and carpentry; he had to be able to break the meanest bronc to a saddle and to rope the wildest steer and throw him and brand him. All this and much more he did and did gladly, for he loved the work.

An when pay day came along the saloons and gambling halls got his money.

Joe Craig's eyes carefully scanned the crowds as he mingled with them in the streets and the saloons. But the face he was looking for was not there.

Then, an hour or so before he and his boys were due to start back to the Bar K, he came to an abrupt halt in the street and Tony saw him reach out with one hand and clamp it violently on the shoulder of a man who was passing. The man jumped and turned a pair of badly frightened eyes on Craig. It was one of the two men who had been with Benson the day he shot Jeff Harrison.

"Cashion," Craig shot at him through gritted teeth before the man could protest, "when I saw you last you were in bad company. I want to know where Benton is and I want to know right bad. You know when I mean a thing, don't you?"

The man almost cringed before the menace in Craig's blue eyes. "How do I know where Benton is?" he asked in an injured tone. "Him and I parted company."

"How long ago?"

"The next day after."

"Cashion, I believe you're a liar."

The man shrugged. "Ask anybody in Caldwell. Ask the marshal. He can tell you that I went to him two months ago and told him I didn't want to be identified as a friend of Tom Benton's any longer. Here comes the marshal now; wait and ask him." He seemed to gather courage as he talked. "I don't see why you tackle me as if I was a murderer or something. I can't help it, can I, if the man I happen to be with shoots another in a poker game?"

Craig gets nowhere in his quest for Benton, but he forms new suspicions.

Sale of both firearms and poison is rigidly restricted in Great Britain.

DRIVE STARTS ON CHRISTMAS TREES FOR U.S.

6,000,000 TO BE CUT FOR SANTA'S CAUSE EXPERTS ESTIMATE

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—In the forests of the Rockies, across the northwest and across the tree-crowned hills of New England, the woodman's axe is flashing in the annual harvest of Christmas trees. Six million fir, spruce, pine and cedar saplings will be used this year, authorities estimate, in the untold settings with which the United States welcomes Santa Claus.

Supply Still Holds

Yet despite the great demand for Christmas trees the supply is not diminishing and no dearth is anticipated so long as ruthless cutting is avoided.

The government forestry service views the cutting, if properly done, as a tremendous benefit to forests and pastures. Most trees come from heavily wooded lands, and their removal gives commercial timber room to grow. Where conifers grow in the hill lands their wind-blown seeds thrive on tilable soil, and farmers are glad to dispose of them at a profit.

Biggest Market

The biggest Christmas tree market centers in New York and the cities of New England, which use some 1,500,000 trees annually. They come mostly from New England, as do trees for Philadelphia, Baltimore and their vicinities. The woods of Michigan, Minnesota and Wisconsin supply Chicago and the middle west. Elsewhere the market is supplied by more local sources, although many spruce and fir are cut in the forests of the north and hauled by sled to railroad points for long-distance shipping, stacked high on flat-cars for rail transportation.

Range in Size

Christmas trees range from three-foot shrubs to a height of 35 feet and sell at retail at prices from a quarter to $35. Nurseries are encouraging the use of potted conifers and evergreens, and growing trees on thousands of acres are being transplanted to pots to fill the demand for live trees.

The balsam fir makes the best Christmas tree, particularly in northeastern and Great Lakes states. Mountain tops of North Carolina and Tennessee supply the Fraser fir, red cedar is used in localities to which it is native, and pines are employed extensively in the south. White fir is the most-used tree on the Pacific coast and scrub pine in Maryland and Virginia. Black and red spruce finds markets in the north. Fir, although abundant in Rocky Mountain states, is hard to reach for cutting and is giving way to lodgepole pine, Douglas fir and occasionally Englemann spruce.

OLD THEORY OF COLDS RAPPED BY PHYSICIAN

MOTTO IS "ENJOY THE COLD AND REMAIN HAPPY IN IT"

(By Associated Press)

PLYMOUTH, Eng., Dec. 19.—Dr. Leonard Hill, president of the Sanitary Inspectors' associations of England, has exploded a ton of dynamite under the old Victorian bug-aboo of wet feet and draughts.

"The motto is: 'Enjoy the cold and keep healthy,'" he said, "to draughts from an open window, to wet footgear, to cutting the hair in winter, and to saying good bye at an open door after coming from a warm room. But in an open air sanatorium where patients are exposed to cold all the time they don't catch cold. Patients get their feet wet in the garden and do not change all day, and yet suffer no bad effect."

"While it has been the custom of the Victorian age to fear the cold wind, to muffle up the throat, to put on overalls, etc., the lessons learned at the open-air sanatorium are to the opposite effect."

"Flying men, Alpine climbers, street-comer men, fishermen, ploughmen, shepherds, bakers going from hot ovens to cold streets, doctors going from warm beds to drive in cars to patients, winter bathers, Russians who after a steam bath roll in the snow, are not subject to catarrh or rheumatism through exposure to cold."

"The soldiers at the front in the great war, exposed in the trenches, and the sailors exposed in the North Sea to the severest winter conditions, were singularly free from catarrhal complaints and pneumonia."

"A man engaged in business severely suffered each winter from chilblains, and was fearful of the effect of exposure when called up to serve in the war. At the front he had no chilblains at all."

"The view has been commonly held that pneumonia results from exposure to cold, and the low necked blouses of women, when first introduced, were called 'pneumonia blouses.' There is little or no evidence in favor of this view."

BOLERO JACKET

A parakeet green silk marocain has an extra bolero jacket with a longer back line, making an ensemble of the peacock silhouetted frock.
