JAMES FERGUSON PROMISES MONEY IS FORTHCOMING

EX-GOVERNOR ISSUES AN EMERGENCY FUND OF $500,000 MORE

In spite of the fact that legislative appropriations for the expenses of operating the Texas Technological college have been a great deal short of the total needed Texas' newest educational institution will not be hampered through lack of funds, James E. Ferguson, speaking for Governor Miriam Ferguson, told a delegation of Tech officials last week in Austin. To add weight to his words Mr. Ferguson signed a deficiency warrant for $500,000 and turned it over to R. M. Chitwood, the college business manager, to be applied immediately on current expenses.

Mr. Chitwood, who with Regents Moses Newman, of Sweetwater, and John W. Carpenter, of Dallas, called on the ex-Governor of the capital told the Journal Tuesday that Mr. Ferguson had promised to sign other deficiency warrants up to $200,000 upon the close of the fiscal year on August 31, thus assuring adequate funds for the opening of the school's second year. In as-much as these funds are to be used during the second year of the school signing the warrants during the present year would be illegal, Mr. Chitwood pointed out, so the $500,000 warrant, which was signed Friday, will cover expenditures necessary during the present fiscal year.

The recent issuance of funds through the signing of warrants is the second time which Mr. Ferguson has come to the aid of Texas Tech, he having signed a warrant for $73,150 last October. Both Mr. Chitwood and President Hogg are highly elated over Mr. Ferguson's active interest in the institution and are now able to go ahead with the school's large and varied program unhampered by a shortage of funds.

Because so many more students enrolled in the school during its first year than were expected the money set aside by the state legislature was inadequate, and had not Mr. Ferguson come to its rescue the college would have been forced to turn away many students when the school opens for the fall term in 1926.

Including the $500,000 and the $73,150 warrants, $1,473,150 voted for building and equipping the college, and $1,198,450 for the first year's operating expenses coming from the same source, the Tech has thus far been awarded a total of $2,671,600.

EDUCATOR HERE TALKS AT TECH

Dr. David S. Hill, President Of N. Mex. University, Is Visitor In Lubbock

Dr. David S. Hill, president of the state university of New Mexico, addressed the students of the Texas Technological college here this morning, using as his subject "Commanding the Mideast." An hour's time was devoted to the general convocation, of which Doctor Hill's address was the feature.

Doctor Hill stopped off in Lubbock to visit with President Horn, of the Tech, while enroute from his home in Albuquerque to Baton Rouge, La., where he will address a gathering of educators sponsored by the University of Louisiana. From there he will go to New Orleans, where he will address the members of the faculties of the public schools and from the Crescent city will go to Chicago to make still another address. Doctor Hill is one of the outstanding educators of the country.

Impressed by Tech's Growth Doctor Hill was greatly impressed by the Tech and the growth and development of both the college and this section of the state. He praised the "far-sighted people who made the college possible and who superintended its construction" and said that Texas was a monument to Texas and an example of this state's belief in higher education.

While still a young man Doctor Hill has been on a number of college faculties, including Tulane university. He is also an old schoolmate of Dr. John C. Granbery, of the Tech.

PLANS FOR FARM SOLUTION GIVEN TO LOWER HOUSE

REPORTS OF SOLONS SUGGESTING FARM AID ARE HEARD

(By Associated Press.) WASHINGTON, April 27. — Widely different plans for solution of the surplus crop problem were submitted to the House today by members of its agricultural committee, which has been delving into the situation for several months without reporting an agreement on any single measure. The plan which has the endorsement of Secretary Jardine, was reported by Representative Tincher, republican, Kansas. It would provide a special agency with a $100,000,000 loan fund to aid cooperative marketing associations in disposing of surplus crops and that Mr. Tincher said, would "bring about the stabilized price and the orderly flow of farm products into consumptive channels through machinery set up, operated and managed by the farmers themselves."

Representative Aswell, democrat, Louisiana, presented the Curtis-Awell commodity marketing bill, which calls for an appropriation of only ten million dollars to establish national and subsidiary sectional marketing associations owned, controlled and operated by farmers. This plan, he urged, provides for permanent rather than temporary relief and contemplates a national rather than sectional system of organization.

Chairman Haugen, of the committee, introduced his bill to authorize a revolving fund of $375,000,000 to stabilize prices of basic farm commodities. He said it was evident the farmers could not at this time acquire funds necessary for the purpose.

Former City Secretary J. R. Germany, who late Monday afternoon was indicted by the Lubbock county grand jury upon counts alleging misappropriation of the funds of his office, will plead "not guilty" to the charges, the Daily Journal was advised Tuesday.

Through his attorneys, W. H. Bledsoe, J. E. Vickers, W. W. Campbell and W. F. Schenk, Mr. Germany made the following statement to the Journal:

"I have been an official of the City of Lubbock since 1919. During that time I have discharged the duties of my office conscientiously and fairly to the city. I have at all times accounted for every dollar of the funds coming into or through my hands, and in every way regret the publicity that has been given to the suit that has been filed against me, as well as the indictments returned against me. "I am sure that upon the trial of these cases my every act will be vindicated and I ask that the citizens of this city withhold their judgment with reference thereto until a full investigation has been had. This publicity has been a source of much embarrassment to me, as well as grief to my wife and baby, and all that I ask of the good people among whom I have lived and labored, is a fair and impartial hearing at their hands, and that they do not pre-judge the cases against me. This is but fair to any man and I am entitled to this at their hands. "I have no doubt whatever that when the facts are fairly presented

Work Of Principal Players In "Charm School" Excellent

The dramatic work of Ross McWhorter and Miss Elna Howard, who have the leading roles in the "Charm School," Little Theater play which is to be presented Thursday evening, has always met with approval in their local Little Theater work and in college dramatics. Miss Howard is a former student of Oklahoma A. and M. College, where she studied dramatic work. Her playing in "Nice People," a Little Theater play here, was enthusiastically applauded here and since that time she has appeared in a number of dramatic productions, always with almost sensational success.

Teacher In Japanese School Makes Address At Methodist Church

Joe Mickel, a teacher in a mission school in Kobi, Japan, spoke of his work at a joint meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society and the Mary Helm Auxiliary of the First Methodist Church Monday afternoon. Mrs. W. O. Stevens presided at the meeting. The greatest missionary work in Japan can be done by the native teachers and church workers who have been trained by American missionaries, he said, because of the difficulty an American has in having a sympathetic understanding of the Japanese personality. Japan is now in a transition period and this can be seen in the ways they live. Some of their houses are Western in style and others are a mixture of the Eastern and Western. Costumes of ever description are worn there; native, American, a mixture of the two. European and virtually every other kind, he said. Many of their customs show the same combinations of Eastern and Western influences. There is a greater percentage of illiteracy in the United States than there is in Japan, he said. The Japanese are extremely anxious to learn English and the mission school has many students who are not Christian, he said. He teaches business administration in the institution, which is the largest mission school in Japan. While Japan is predominately an agricultural nation, many of the people are moving to the cities and this is creating labor questions, he said. The immigration law of the United States came as a great blow to the Japanese because the people are extremely sensitive and because they need to expand, he said. In discussing the possibilities of Japanese expansion into other countries, he said that Manchuria promises to be the place where most of the Japanese will go and this probably will be the next battle ground of the Japanese, according to the speaker.

Mr. Mickel is on a furlough to America this year. He formerly lived in Clarendon and married an Amarillo girl.

(By SISTER MARY)
Breakfast—Apple sauce, cereal cooked with dates, thin cream, ham toast, milk, coffee.
Luncheon—Baked codfish, brown bread and butter, new onions, drop mussels, can pears, milk, tea.
Dinner—Roast veal, potatoes en casserole, beet greens, new cabbage salad, prune cake with whipped cream, bread, milk, coffee.
Potatoes and flaked codfish are rubbed through a colander to make the luncheon dish. This is an excellent dish for children, one of the very few "made" dishes that is perfectly all right for them.
This prune cake is rather out of the ordinary but most delicious. It can be used for afternoon tea, as cake with fruit or with whipped cream as suggested here.
Prune Cake
One-half pound prunes, 1 1/2 cups sugar, 2 cups flour, 1 teaspoon baking powder, 1/2 teaspoon soda, 1/4 teaspoon salt, 1/4 teaspoon grated nutmeg, 1/4 teaspoon cinnamon, 1 cup sour cream, 2 eggs, 4 tablespoons soft butter.
Wash and soak prunes in on cup of cold water for two hours. Cook in this water until tender and water is evaporated. Remove stones and chop coarsely. Mix and stir dry ingredients. Add prunes and mix thoroughly. Stir in cream and add eggs well beaten. Beat in softened butter. Pour into an oiled and floured square pan and bake one hour in a moderate oven. Cut in squares and serve warm with whipped cream.

SECRET OF LONG LIFE LIES IN OWN GRASP

BETTER HABITS GREAT AID CENTENARIANS IN U. S. POINT OUT

(By the Associated Press)
NEW YORK, April 27.—The secret of long life that four hundred years ago eluded Ponce De Leon today lies in every man's grasp, say authorities. Five thousand centenarians now living in America could point out his mistake to Ponce De Leon, who died a broken old man because he would accept no substitutes for the fabled fountain of youth. Better habits of life, they testify, and modern science, to say nothing of the stimulus of radio, provide an ample substitute for the revivifying waters.

Average Life Lengthened

The lengthening of the average life span, to which the four centuries since Ponce De Leon have added 37 years, and the increase in the number of those who escape death up to the age 100, indicate, say longevity experts, that man may again achieve the healthy old age of Moses, who "was 120 when he died; and his eye was not dim, nor was his force abated."

Telephone service was resumed late Saturday. The latest casualty reported was from Wagener, where William Hendricks, a farmer, was struck by lightning as he was returning home yesterday. ## HITTING IN MAJOR LEAGUES PHENOMENALLY LIGHT, FIGURES IN PENNANT RACE TO DATE SHOW

CRICAGO, Apr. 27. (AP)—The major league pennant races are under way with all the fervor of other years but NOT the hitting.

Whether the light hitting is temporary and due to the irregular training of the spring or the result of a "slower" ball in use in the two big time circuits, to be reflected throughout the year, will be shown only as the season progresses.

The fact stands, borne out by cold figures, that the batting so far has been phenomenally light. Some few major leaguers have piled up unusually high early-season averages in their stick work but the teams, as teams, are hitting pretty well down in the column as averages go for this stage of the races.

Records of the first week of the season, and including last Wednesday's games, issued today, show the Phillies leading the National clubs with an average of .237 and the Yankees at the top of the American League standing with a .228 percentage.

The Giants show a team batting average of .245 to place second and Cincinnati comes third with .242. The world champion Pittsburgh Pirates trail them all with the extremely low team percentage of .187.

American League Reversed
In a virtually direct reversal of their final standings at the end of the American League clubs, next to the Yankees come the Cleveland Indians with a team average of .256 and Boston stands third with .272. The champion Washington Senators are last, with a rating of .217.

One of the few veteran leading batters near the top of the individual standing at this time is Rogers Hornsby of the St. Louis Cardinals, who holds his old post at the top of the National players with an average of .438. Next is Zach Wheat of the Brooklyn Robins with .417, made in six games at home. Chicago outfielder, is third with .391. Bottomley, St. Louis cardinal, who finished second among the hitters in his league last season, is down in thirty-second place.

Strangers in their posts held the ranking places in the American individual standings after the first week. Bennett of St. Louis had a rating of .399 out of five times at bat and Plagstead of Boston one of .516, as an active player. Dykes of Philadelphia being third with .485. Babe Ruth stands twelfth and that well above others of the veterans. Speakers of Cleveland, Simmons of Philadelphia, Hillman of Detroit and George Sisk of St. Louis placing well down. The battle-worn Ty Cobb didn't figure, having appeared only as a pinch-hitter.

Extra Base Hits Few
So far there has been an evident absence of extra-base hits and two circuit clouts stood as the home run record. Three National hitters made that many. Leach of Philadelphia, Williams of the Phillies and Bottomley of St. Louis, while in the American Pat Collins and Meusel of the Yankees tied with a pair each. Babe Ruth lifted one out of the playing field during the week.

Chicago of Boston collected 24 bases with his safeties in the American to lead both leagues, Wilson of Chicago topping the National with 22 to his credit. Ruth ran up a total of 11.

runs in the Yankees' games, Sand of Philadelphia faring best in the National games with 10 runs to his credit, a record equaled by both Combs and Gehrig of the Yankees.

Mueller of the St. Louis Cardinals led the way in base stealing, pilfering four in eight games. Frisch of New York slipped by for three in National contests while several players in both circuits made two each without assistance.

With the new sacrifice rule in effect, there were a large number of such hits in the opening series. Meusel of the Yankees and French of the Athletics led with four each, several National leaguers hitting sacrifices three times.

Leading National Hitters in Six or More Games: Hornsby of St. Louis, .438; Wheat, Brooklyn, .417; Heathcote, Chicago, .391; Johnston of Boston, .389; Sand of Philadelphia, .387; Bressler of Cincinnati, .385; Leach, Philadelphia, .379; Frisch of New York, .364; Fournier, Brooklyn, .364; Felix of Brooklyn, .360.

Leading American Hitters in Six or More Games: Bennett of St. Louis, .699; Plagstead of Boston, .516; Dykes, of Philadelphia, .485; Spurgeon, Cleveland, .484; Collins, New York, .469; Taverner of Detroit, .469; Fothergill, Detroit, .467; Summa, Cleveland, .467; Duncan of New York, .390; Burns, Cleveland, .390.

The light hitting in the majors was not reflected in the first week of the American Association's twenty-fifth anniversary season. Five clubs hit over .300 and 13 players made .400 or better for their averages. The Louisville Colonels topped the team standing with a percentage of .369.

Each of Toledo outdid everybody in the circuit for a neverage of .516 in 8 games and 21 times at bat, a remarkable record. Duncan of Minneapolis hit for a leading total of 23 bases and tied with Guyon of Louisville for the high run total, 13. Duncan also went far ahead on home runs, collecting six.

Lebourveau of Toledo set the pace on the base paths, pilfering five sacks. Well over 10 sacrifice hits were recorded in the first week's play.

Heavy Hitting Rules Western
Heavy hitting, by teams and individually, ruled in the Western League, five clubs averaging above the .300 mark in their batting efforts and Berly of Wichita, although at bat but five times in as many games, hit for an even .300 percentage. Thirty-three other league players batted .300 and above. Cozington of St. Joe leading the real heavy hitters with .567 out of 39 at bats.

Sturdy of Tulsa crashed out five four-baggers to lead in that line and also in total bases, 33, and most runs, 12. While four stolen bases was the highest one-man record, speed was reflected in the total of 69 bases pilfered during the first week's encounters.

Leading Hitters: Berly, Wichita, .500; Cozington, St. Joseph, .567; Zwilling of Lincoln, .538; Brickell of Wichita, .500; Sturdy, Tulsa, .482; Funk, Oklahoma City, .480; F. Moore of Oklahoma City, .489; Hughes, Des Moines, .421; Moran of Denver, .414; Fitzpatrick of Oklahoma City, .409. Tulsa lead team percentage with .326; Wichita, second, with .324; Oklahoma City, third, with .315.

Early Season Hitting In Majors Exceptionally Strong As 4-Hit Games Hold Forth; Resin Assists

(By The Associated Press)
Early season pitching in the major league baseball leagues has proved exceptionally strong, with and without the resin ball. Four-hit games have been produced daily.

But yesterday Joe Shaute of Cleveland, serving in a league that does not recognize the little mesh bag, stood out with a six-hit victory over the St. Louis Browns. His conquest was easy for his mates pounded the ball for 12 scores, the highest total of the day. Home runs came from the bats of Sewell, Summa, and Jamieson. The Browns made five misplays, three of them by Lamotte.

Senators Win Easily
Washington found the Red Sox easy with Dutch Heather accounting for his third straight victory by a six to two score. Goslin led the attack with four singles while Bluege inserted a brace of doubles. Ehmke, knocked out of the box by the Yankees last week, was the Senator's victim.

Manush's homer in the opening was the best Detroit could do against Chicago and the White Sox won, 5 to 1. The Chicagoans bunched their safeties in the fifth and eighth. Harris drove out three hits.

Fletcher's Phillies, with Mitchell serving his left-handed spit ball, triumphed over the New York Giants, 5 to 5, in an 11 inning tussle at Philadelphia. Cy Williams registering a homer in the first inning. Frank Frisch, with a triple, double and single, was the only Giant to trouble the veteran south-paw.

Pirates Regain Hitting Eye
The Pirates regained their hitting eyes after a long lapse and slugged out an 8 to 6 victory over the Chicago Cubs. Cuyler hit safely three times and Traynor, Wright and McCluskey each scored. Meadows and Oldham did the huriling for Pittsburgh and Cooper, Hery, Blake and Root for the Cubs. Cincinnati defeated St. Louis in 10 innings on seven hits, 2 to 2. Walker Hill, husky speed ball artist, who has not lost a game this season.

CLARENDON MEETS TECH MATADORS TOMORROW

The Tech College Matador diamond crew will meet the Clarendon College Bulldogs on Tech field tomorrow in the first of a two game series that is expected to bring a couple of the best games to be seen here this season. The second game of the series will be played Thursday, each game to begin at 3:30 p. m.

Very little is known here of the strength of the Bulldogs, beyond the fact that rumor has it that the club is one of the strongest that Tech will be called upon to meet this year.

Tech, with her record of only one loss and one time game out of eight starts thus far this season, is admittedly hard to handle, and will give the Bulldogs a real scrap for diamond supremacy. The Matadors have shown constant improvement since they first appeared on the field wearing the scarlet and black, and especially in hitting. The infield is yet a little erratic at times, but this is usually to be expected more or less during first year performance. The outfield, which appeared so ragged in earlier season, is gradually working out the kinks and is beginning to field the ball with accuracy.

Coach Freedland had not fully decided early this afternoon who would be called upon to carry mound duty in tomorrow's contest, but intimated that he probably would call upon Volney Hill, husky speed ball artist, who has not lost a game this season.

EARLY DAY FIGHT IN TEXAS LEAGUE IS RECALLED

HOUSTON, Texas, April 27. (AP)—A sports writer here digging back into the history of opening days of the Texas League, in connection with the annual race to Benningville now well under way, found considerable criticism of Fort Worth's refusal to permit telegraph wires to be strung into Panthers Park in 1889.

"Fort Worthians today saw the pony express in action for the first time in 29 years," the sports editor of the Houston Post said April 4, 1889, the opening day of the season. "The Panther Park management refused to permit the telegraph company to lay wires on the ground and thus desecrate the spot where the Panther lies. Boys on horseback carried the results of each inning to the telegraph office."

The league at that time was composed of Austin, Galveston, Dallas, Houston, Fort Worth and Waco.

Setting was accepted as a matter of course, both in the park and in the bow rooms. The sports editor's remarks that in a close game between Dallas and Houston, "Galveston sports don't let patriotism get the best of their betting judgment. They are as cold as a fish when it comes to cool cash."

Thirty-seven years ago Sunday Austin was in the cellar and it was remarked that the position of the Senators was due to the habit of legislators of buying hard liquor in large quantities for the Austin performers.

April 25, 1889, the league standing looked like this:

	P	W	L	Pct.
Houston	14	10	4	.714
Galveston	14	10	4	.714
Dallas	15	8	7	.533
Fort Worth	14	7	7	.500
Waco	15	7	8	.466
Austin	16	2	14	.125

Billy Evans Says

There was a rather strange coincidence in the 1925 pitching debuts of Joe Bush and Tom Zachary. Last winter Washington traded the veteran southpaw, Tom Zachary, to the St. Louis Browns for the experienced right-hander, Joe Bush.

The two pitchers made their first start for their new clubs on the third day of the season. Both were knocked out of the box.

Zachary opposed the Chicago White Sox. He failed to last out the first inning. He was relieved after allowing four hits, giving two bases on balls and making an error.

Chicago made eight runs before the inning was over, winning the ball game then and there.

Bush lasted three innings against the Athletics, four runs resulting on five hits and four bases on balls.

So in the debut of the two veteran pitchers the trade was all even.

Scott's Value
Two things are certain to make Shortstop Everett Scott far more valuable to the White Sox than it seemed when he was signed to a Chicago contract.

Unquestionably the ball has been slowed up over the one used late last season. The heavy ball was tough on infielders beginning to lose some of their speed afoot.

The new ball in use this year will lack some of the speed with which the ball traveled through the infield and will permit the players to do a little more footwork.

In addition, the infield at Comiskey park is one of the slowest in the American League. The condition of the soil is responsible. The New York American infield is at least 30 per cent faster.

Working on a slow infield, with a lively ball, it is certain to make the veteran Everett Scott a much more valuable ball player to the White Sox.

The Chicago leader admitted that much to me when I discussed the possibility of his club at the Shreveport (La.) training camp.

"For several years I have had recruit players at shortstop. That made it necessary for me to assist them in every way possible; in a sense, position them on most every man that came to bat.

"Watching the other fellow keeps you from concentrating on your own work, so that at times I felt my play suffered because of the attention I had to give the various recruit shortstops tried out by the club.

"With Scott at shortstop all I will have to do is take care of second base. It will take a lot of worry off my shoulders."

"While it is hard to see how the play of Collins could be much improved there is no doubt as to the logic of his statement.

Belated Debut
This fellow Joe Pate is going to win a lot of ball games this summer for us.

The speaker was Cy Perkins, backstop the Philadelphia Athletics; the place Ft. Myers, Fla., the club's training quarters.

"None of the experts figure Pate in doping our chances but he is sure to be a big help. He has good stuff and knows how to pitch.

It didn't take long for the judgment of the veteran catcher to be verified.

Joe Pate, making his major league debut at 33 years of age, a time when most pitchers are slipping, scored the first victory of the season for the Athletics over Washington.

After Baumgartner had been knocked out of the box, Pate relieved him, holding the American League champs to two hits and no runs in six innings, the Athletics finally winning, 9-3.

WASHINGTON, April 27. (AP)—Walter Johnson thinks the use of resin by baseball pitchers is only of psychological value to them. "I've never used it and never felt that I needed it," he said today in reply to reports that certain of the Philadelphia Athletics felt that the speed ball king had discovered the ball during the recent Washington-Philadelphia series.

"I believe resin benefits those addicted to its use only mentally," he said. "There may be some pitchers who imagine it increases their effectiveness and who are mentally handicapped if they have no powder on their hands."

WET AND DRY

Old-timers do not remember many times when the Brownwood country genuinely desired a period of warm, dry weather; but this is one of the times. There has been an abundance of rain, and a couple of weeks of warm, dry weather would be worth as much as a rain is worth in a drouthy period.—Brownwood Bulletin.

It is a fact that West Texas seldom wants a dry spell; that is to say, a dry spell of some duration, but this time matters have changed up and such is the case. Of course, no means have yet been found whereby the weather can be regulated, and until that time arrives—which will not very likely be in this generation—folks have to make the best of weather conditions and the rainfall and all.

What this has to do with his not having one I don't know. The automobile industry would be ruined if many people allowed themselves to be influenced by what they can or can't afford, in the matter of owning machines.

The same street car brought the senator and me down town the other day, dangling from adjoining straps. Borah has an interesting face to study. It has a bulldogish look. Not that it's unamiable. A bulldog, unaroused, is an amiable animal, but his visage is blunt, stubby, rough-hewn, with a slight tendency of the upper lip to twitch back occasionally, disclosing an ominous eye-tooth.

Even so with Borah. His face, in repose, isn't fierce, but it suggests a face which, if it grabbed you by the leg, would take a crowbar to pry loose.

CROP PROSPECTS

The two banks of Anson in their called statements of the 12th inst., show deposits of $1,231,914.37, less of course than deposits for December call. The Stamford Leader quotes the total deposits of the three banks of that town at $1,741,044.04, and the Leaders bank at $46,985.23. The Hamilton deposits were $791,556.27.—Western Enterprise (Anson).

It can be seen from the above that the banks in the Stamford and Anson sections are in mighty good condition. It reflects the prosperity of the section and now with the recent heavy rains, crop prospects in that part of this territory are declared to have never been better. The chances are the best in the world that big yields of all kinds of crops are to be made and Jones county will again come to the fore in the number of bales of cotton raised. In fact, Jones county is one of the best cotton producing sections anywhere in the United States.—Abilene Reporter.

WISDOM FROM A BOY

Here are words out of the mouth of a boy of 10. They are written about his hero and in their simplicity lies the unadorned eloquence of sincerity.

He writes, "He pitches his best all the time, whether he is winning or losing. He plays a clean, square game all the time. He is the same kind of a fellow off the field as when he is on the field. He lives a clean, healthy life, which helps him in anything he does. He does not take all of the glory, but gives others their share. That is why he is my favorite player and I will always try to be like him."

Thus Edwin Marshall, the boy, writes about Walter Johnson, the ball player.

A credo, if you will, of the boys of America.

Something to be pondered and discussed by all of us old heads who are worrying about the younger generation.

STEWART'S WASHINGTON LETTER

By CHARLES P. STEWART

NEA Service Writer.

WASHINGTON. — Senator William E. Borah of Idaho is a strap hanger. He says he can't afford an automobile.

What this has to do with his not having one I don't know. The automobile industry would be ruined if many people allowed themselves to be influenced by what they can or can't afford, in the matter of owning machines.

From the Boston Transcript: Suitors—I'm in love with your daughter, sir.

Her Dad—What are your prospects? Suitors—Fine! She's accepted me.

A Timely Change.

From the Washington Star: "A wise man will change his opinion occasionally."

"Whether he changes his opinion or not," answered Senator Borah, "he will know when to change his line of talk."

Honesty.

Judge: Yes, I give you a job. You can gather the eggs for me if you are sure you won't steal any.

"You can trust me with anything lady. I wuz manager of a bath house for fifteen years an' never took a bath."

Borah's get-up resembles a prosperous farmer's—an old-time farmer, when there were some prosperous ones left.

Look closely and you see that he's well dressed, but he doesn't give that effect. He doesn't wear his clothes stylishly. Even just after he's had a shave, he gives the impression of needing one.

As he swung from his strap, he held his black slouch hat in his free hand. He has a round bald spot on the crown of his head, about three inches in diameter. He could cover it up if he'd brush some of the rest of his hair over it, but he doesn't seem to care.

"Yes," said the girl, dabbing at her nose with a handkerchief, woefully. "Of course I do."

"Well, maybe we've got you one," Nona frowned and bobbed her head at Morton. "We can frame it so she can take my place in the show, can't we?"

The girl looked up, profoundly interested. The tears still were streaking the powder on her cheeks, but she had ceased sobbing.

"I think that if you HAVE to quit," said Morton, slowly, looking at Nona, "that I could speak to the manager about this young woman."

"So can I," said Nona. "Maybe we can slide her in right away. We'll try, honey," she added to the girl.

"Let me tell Joe," cried the young woman, and ran to the telephone. In a few moments she had the number she sought. "Oh Joe! I'm up in Nona's room and she has a job all framed up for us! Can you go to work right away!"

There was a bit more excited babble, and she hung up. Her eyes were aight, and her form had lost its pathetic droop.

"Joe'll be so happy to get to work again," she said. "This long lay-off has been terrible for him!" She fingered her handkerchief, uncertainly. "If I work, can I lend him money to get along on?"

She opened the door and started out. "I'll think about it," she said, as she went away.

"Poor little darned fool!" sighed Nona. "She's stuck on that bum—and he'd ditch her in a minute!" She gets a little money hoarding sometimes. One of these big companies has her on the list to entertain out-of-town men, and generally they tip her pretty well. Joe takes it all away from her.

"Nice chap, this Joe," observed Morton. "Charming character."

"Take this and use it for her," he said, filling out one of the check blanks. "See that she gets some regular meals, and buys her a dress—she ought to look well when she sees her manager. But don't give her any of the money."

He handed the check to Nona, who

THESE WOMEN

BEGIN HERE TODAY
HARRY MORTON, wealthy, unmarried, middle-aged, immensely attractive to women, has a problem in his adopted daughter, AUDREY. She is madly in love with him. To divert her attention from himself, he throws her into the company of his secretary, JOHN PARRISH, whose ideas are prim. He also lets her see him in company with NONA, Chicago stage girl, who also is in love with him.

Audrey makes preparations to dance in cabaret revues, so she can learn how stage girls manage to attract Morton. Parrish disappears. She hires a young man to be her dancing partner. Morton goes to Nona, to ask her to drop her own engagement and herself be Audrey's stage partner. Nona, consenting, suggests another girl who had tried to blackmail Morton earlier in the story. Morton has lived for 15 years in Peoria, without gossip there ever learning his part or the source of his wealth. He maintains also an expensive apartment in Chicago.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
(The names and situations in this story are fictitious.)

CHAPTER XXVI

"Come on in, you little fool!" called Nona, and reaching out the door, seized her visitor by the arm.

The girl, at sight of Morton, had started to retreat. Now, yielding to Nona's steady pull upon her arm, she entered, reluctantly, her eyes fixed in fright upon Morton.

He watched as Nona propelled her to a chair, shutting the door behind her.

With a touch of irony he asked: "Back from London so soon? The last I remember about you, I sent you the money to take you and that dancing partner of yours abroad."

She hung her head.

"She's not a bad kid," interposed Nona. "I got her into that mess, when she played the 'badger game' on you. She never did anything like that before."

Morton looked understandingly at the newcomer's face. Her eyes were hollow, and her neck sank in thin hollows behind her jaws. Blue veins showed in her temples.

"Been hungry lately, haven't you?" he asked. "Haven't paid the rent; landlord wants you to move; that partner of yours borrowed your last piece of jewelry and pawned it, and didn't give you any of the money?"

The girl looked up in surprise. "How did you know?"

"Nona pointed the girl on the shoulder. 'He knows things like that without being told,' she explained.

"I've seen you, and I've seen your dancing partner," Morton supplemented. "What did he do with that money I sent you?"

"Lost it all shooting craps," she said, dropping her head again. "But it wasn't his fault—they trimmed him."

Morton leaned back with his arm upon the piano keys, and waited for her to go on. She did so, after a moment. "He just has hard luck. It's nice to me, though—he bought my dinner yesterday, and he had hardly any money himself."

"And," asked Morton, easily "what did he borrow from you when he bought your dinner?"

"He borrowed her ring—the only one she had left, and hooked it," snorted Nona, indignantly.

The girl began to cry.

"Did you call me down here just to 'razz me'?" she sobbed.

Repentantly Nona patted her shoulder again. "Don't cry, babe," she soothed. "Listen, do you want a job?"

"Yes," said the girl, dabbing at her nose with a handkerchief, woefully. "Of course I do."

"Well, maybe we've got you one," Nona frowned and bobbed her head at Morton. "We can frame it so she can take my place in the show, can't we?"

The girl looked up, profoundly interested. The tears still were streaking the powder on her cheeks, but she had ceased sobbing.

"I think that if you HAVE to quit," said Morton, slowly, looking at Nona, "that I could speak to the manager about this young woman."

"So can I," said Nona. "Maybe we can slide her in right away. We'll try, honey," she added to the girl.

"Let me tell Joe," cried the young woman, and ran to the telephone. In a few moments she had the number she sought. "Oh Joe! I'm up in Nona's room and she has a job all framed up for us! Can you go to work right away!"

There was a bit more excited babble, and she hung up. Her eyes were aight, and her form had lost its pathetic droop.

"Joe'll be so happy to get to work again," she said. "This long lay-off has been terrible for him!" She fingered her handkerchief, uncertainly. "If I work, can I lend him money to get along on?"

She opened the door and started out. "I'll think about it," she said, as she went away.

"You ARE a good woman, Nona," he said, soberly. "You're a sweet, affectionate, good-hearted girl—even if you do trot out a crap-shooting cabaret dancer once in a while to make it hot for me."

He whistled. "I'll have to hurry," he told her, as he hung up the receiver.

Parrish was away from the office, and Morton set a clerk to calling the various haunts of the theatrical producer, in an effort to locate him. The effort was a tedious one. The afternoon passed, and Morton went home to dinner. Audrey was gone—out with young Mr. Parrish, the butler explained—and Morton settled himself for an evening with his books.

It was almost bedtime when the door opened, and he had located his man. Morton took the telephone number, and finally got connection with Nona's employer.

"You'll be sorry," the manager told him, shortly, in answer to his query. "It'll come right away," Morton promised.

It was a warm spring night, and Morton wore no overcoat as he left the building and hailed a taxicab. As he rode, he glanced over a little batch of business and personal cards that he had taken from his desk in the apartment.

The manager, sitting in a small, smoky office off the lobby of one of the theatres, grunted when Morton introduced himself.

"Here," said Morton. He laid his collection of cards one by one before the manager. Each had a brief inscription on it, in ink or pencil. These folks are friends of yours. They're friends of mine, too. I brought these to introduce myself."

"In the profession?" asked the man, glancing over the pasteboards.

"No—just kind of a broker," Morton said.

"Backing some girl?" pursued the other.

"Morton chuckled. "Yes—in a way. No use for that sort of thing, crowded the manager, shoving the cards back to Morton. "I don't need any angels in my game."

"Wait a minute," Morton said. "Nona came in today and told you she wanted to quit?"

Instant wrath showed in the producer's face. Half rising in his chair, he thundered: "Yes, she did! She had some scrawny girl she wanted to take her place. Do you know what happened?"

He glared an instant. "That girl's dance partner came in and tried to hold me up for a hundred bucks advance money!"

BE YOUNG, CARRY ON!

Would you like to keep young? Then forget your birthdays and just keep working.

Chauncey Depew will be 92 years old on April 25. The other day he gave the following as his views on working:

"I consider that my best and most important work was performed between the ages of 75 and 90. Most of the active men I know who have died did so after they had quit working. It is much worse to rust away than to dry away."

Depew thinks it unfortunate that supreme court justices in New York state have to retire when they are 70.

"Often they are at the height of their usefulness at that age," said Depew. "Take the example of Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes of the United States supreme court. He is 85 and probably more active than any other justice on the supreme court bench, with the possible exception of Chief Justice Taft."

Depew is right. It is the looking forward, the having something to do on the morrow, the hopes and dreams of the future that we live best.

Toes Can Be Used For Fingers Says New York Doctor

CHICAGO, April 27. (AP)—Successful transplantation of a toe to replace a finger is reported by Dr. J. E. Fuld of New York, in the current issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

The operation, termed by Dr. Fuld as valuable not only in giving a more shifty hand, but in giving those whose occupation requires exceptional use of the fingers an opportunity to continue their work, was performed last third finger of a man was cut off while he was operating a bread slicing machine. Dr. Fuld was called promptly enough to find a favorable opportunity for transplantation.

Supreme Court Is Firm In A Denial For Case Reviewal

WASHINGTON, April 27. (AP)—The Supreme court today refused to review a case involving the taxability of dividends issued partly in stock in 1913 by the Gulf Oil Corporation in which Secretary Mellon and other members of his family were the largest stockholders.

The review had been asked for by the Federal government which lost in the lower courts in a proceeding against George S. Davison, a stock holder. The case grew out of the corporation's increase of its authorized capital stock from $15,000,000 to $50,000,000. Stockholders were invited to subscribe for 100 percent additional stock, and when this was paid for in cash, the company declared a dividend of 100 percent. The corporation called the dividend a cash dividend and stockholders had the right to apply it in payment for stock.

British Ambassador Airs Views On Locarno Pact In Talk Before Twentieth Century Club, Buffalo

(By The Associated Press)

BUFFALO, N. Y., Apr. 27.—The recent wrangle at Geneva over election of Germany to a permanent place on the League of Nations Council, rather than pretending an end of the Locarno policies, in the opinion of Sir Esme Howard, the British ambassador, served to show the growth of "the will to peace" throughout Europe.

Speaking before the Twentieth Century club of Buffalo and obviously referring to the refusal of Brazil to withdraw its candidacy for a permanent council seat in favor of Germany he observed: "It was the European powers which were agreed, whereas it was an extra-European power, whose motives I neither criticize nor blame—I only state a fact—which caused the postponement of a settlement."

He did not mention Brazil by name. With respect to Locarno and the League, he said: "No Desire To Quit"

"There is no desire on the part of great powers most integrated with to abandon the Locarno policies or to retire from and so break up the league, but quite the reverse, and there is no doubt that the people in the various countries approve and support this view."

"The value of the League simply as an agency for the expression of public opinion and particularly for giving the minor powers the opportunity of making themselves heard, which they never could do before, has become generally recognized in Europe and nothing short of a general cataclysm would now in my opinion break up the League."

"I have always said in speaking of the League in this country that people in Europe now entirely understand that the United States objects to joining the League and I think most well-informed people understand the why and wherefore of this attitude and accept it without question."

"But I must say I am surprised at times to note that there are still people in this country who write and speak as if the League was an invention of the devil which should be combated by all honest men and the disappearance of which would be heartily welcomed. We in Europe who believe in the League have no wish to see this country adopt any policy which goes against the grain in regard to the League, but we cannot understand outside it, are not satisfied with that attitude of those who, standing but wish also to destroy it."

Philippine Case Is Turned Down by U. S.

WASHINGTON, April 27. (AP)—The Supreme court today refused to review the disbarment proceedings in the Philippine Supreme court against J. A. Wolfson, a Manila attorney. Wolfson was disbarred because of criticism of the court by a letter to Bowering & Company, New York City, his clients, after proceedings against Umberto De Polli had been decided against them. He claimed the letter was privileged, between attorney and clients, and that his disbarment deprived him of his constitutional right of freedom of speech without due process of law.

HOPKINS IS EASILY BEST PROSPECT OF LONGHORNS

AUSTIN, Texas, April 27. (AP)—Meredith Hopkins of Fort Worth, recently named captain of the Texas University freshman baseball team, promises to blossom into one of the most brilliant diamond pastimes ever developed by Coach Billy Disch, baseball wizard of the Longhorns. Coach Disch, conceded to be the outstanding college diamond mentor in the South, is authority for the statement that Hopkins is one of the likeliest prospects to come under his tutelage.

Hopkins played third base in high school, but he is playing the short field for the first year combination, and the Varsity infielders stand around and take pointers when "Hop" is in action. He is easily the most graceful and effective infielder now working out on Clark Field. The Fort Worth product stands around 3 feet 10 inches, weighs 145 pounds, and is 18 years old. He is due to take on at least 15 more pounds in attaining his full growth. He is very fast, has large hands—an indispensable item in the makeup of a "big time" infielder—and gets the ball away fast with a lightning swing. The freshman leader swings from the right side and stands up to the plate. His batting stance and form leave little to be desired, as he steps into the ball with the full weight of his body. Most of his hits are line drives just beyond the reach of the outfielders.

Already Longhorn fans are beginning to predict he will surpass the accomplishments of "Flop" Kibbie and "Heinie" Odum, two of the most brilliant infielders to play for Texas University within recent years. Kibbie is the property of the Boston Braves, but is now playing in the Eastern League, while Odum is with the St. Paul Saints of the American Association. These players had their best year with the Longhorns in 1924. Odum, playing shortstop and Kibbie second base. Their great play around the eyestone bag and hard hitting were important factors in the winning of the Southwest Conference championship.

Coach Vic Payne, of the Simmons College Cowboys, accompanied by ten of his hustling track and field athletes, arrived here late Monday afternoon from Abilene, and this afternoon on Tech field will meet Coach Higginbotham's Tech Matador club in a dual meet that will officially bring a close to the season for Tech.

The Cowboys took a light workout on Tech field immediately following their arrival and announced readiness for the meet, but Tuesday morning a portion of the Cowboys took a final light workout session to acquaint themselves with the track and surroundings. One of the hardest contested battles for supremacy in similar events is anticipated at the meet which opened this afternoon at 3:30, as the opposing camps each have a number of athletes that are recognized for their speed. Roy Stevens, Abilene athlete, who set such a hard pace in the state interscholastic league meet at Austin last year and the year before is one of the mainstays of the Cowboy offensive. Stevens is a dash man, and negotiated the 100 and 200 in almost record time, but he will be opposed by Walker for Tech who also carries honors in dash events.

Other members of the Cowboy squad who are here are: Lynch, Captain; Armour, Marshall, Doby, Fry, Sims, McCallum, Crabbs, and Hibborn. The Cowboys recently honored with a 10 count against the Howard Payne College Yellow Jackets, even though the Yellow Jackets broke into an early lead almost as heavy as the lead taken by the Canyon Normal Indians against the Matadors on Tech field just prior to this. The Cowboys however, rallied in the latter stages, and tied the count by winning the mile relay, the last event in one of the hardest races of the entire day.

The meet of the season for the official closing of the season for the Matadors, and though they have lost two or three meets, the record established is considered extraordinary for first year performance, and the schools within reach of Tech have been given an idea as to what kind of competition will be offered in this department of athletics next year.

What Our Neighbors Are Doing

With assurance you may contemplate the Nation, town or state, whose people own their hearthstone, whether homes be small or great. "The earth-wide need" of shelter, the inherent love of home—so says our neighbor Hollingsworth—"are truths that he'd have known. No greater boon to womankind the years have brought, than homes as they are built today, with skilful forethought wrought. Convenient homes of warmth and light, of charm and sanitation, are treasures for the wholesome mind and safeguards of a Nation."

A humble part in housing those who ask the best of life, is a pleasing opportunity we very highly prize. Good plans are here for all who build—our lumber is your safeguard. With care we meet your housing need—your interests always forward.

COTTON MARKETS NEW ORLEANS TRADING NEW ORLEANS, April 27. (AP)—The cotton market opened quiet and irregular, first trades being four points up to one point down. Liverpool cables were indifferent and early weather news indicated increasing cloudiness in the West. New crop months rallied after the call, but old crop positions remained unchanged from the opening, but four points up compared with yesterday's close. October however, traded up to 16.61c and December to 16.60c or 8 to 9 points above the previous close.

The market improved during the morning due to prospects for more unfavorable weather in the Southwest and to fears that the weekly weather report tomorrow will prove bullish. May traded up to 17.37c, July to 17.54c and October to 16.65c, or 8 to 13 points above yesterday's close. Around mid-session prices were steady at or near the highs.

The market continued to improve after mid-session due to fears that a low barometer over Arizona might bring another spell of weather in Texas. There was also much talk of extensive replanting necessary in the central belt. Prices made new highs with May at 17.90c, July at 17.55c and October at 16.65c or 11 to 16 points above yesterday's close. Prices remained at the highs up to the beginning of the last hour of trading.

NEW ORLEANS FUTURES NEW ORLEANS, Apr. 27. (AP)—Cotton opened steady. May 17.37c; July 17.44c; October 16.52c; December 16.64c; January 16.50c.

NEW YORK TRADING NEW YORK, April 27. (AP)—The cotton market opened steady at an advance of one to seven points in response to steadier Liverpool cables and covering after the declines of yesterday.

May sold off to 18.51c after the call under a little liquidation brought out by the circulation of notices estimated at about 4,000 bales. These near months offerings were readily taken by trade buying, presumably to fix prices, however, and the price soon rallied to 18.60c. October meanwhile sold up from 17.20c to 17.31c, the General list showing net advances of about 9 to 13 points at the end of the first hour.

NEW YORK FUTURES NEW YORK, April 27. (AP)—Cotton futures opened steady. May 18.51c; July 18.58c; October 17.22c; December 16.87c; January 16.78c.

Sales 5,000 bales, 4,200 American. Receipts 16,000 bales; American 4,000.

CHICAGO WHEAT CHICAGO, April 27. (AP)—Wheat jumped up quickly today after an early decline. Persistent adverse weather conditions, including a forecast for freezing temperatures acted as more than a counter-balance for initial declines that were due to unexpected weakness of quotations at Liverpool.

MANY LEADERS TO ATTEND ANNUAL SHORT COURSE

COLLEGE STATION, Tex., April 27. (AP)—Many of the outstanding leaders of agriculture and horticulture from Texas, as well as other states, will be present here from August 2 to 7, inclusive, in connection with the annual farmers short course, boys and girls club meeting and extension agents' conference. Director Charles D. Alvord of the extension department of Texas A. & M. College announced today. Last year approximately 2,000 persons were registered for the meeting and this year an increase in attendance is expected. Special programs are to be provided for the boys and girls, who will be divided into groups. A schedule is being made up that will be followed every day of the meeting.

Demonstrations in agriculture and home economics will be given for the farmers and their families under the direction of college teachers. Practical demonstrations and the application of science to the farm will be the principal feature in this session.

Many state-wide agricultural associations will hold their annual meetings at the same time. Among these organizations are the State Bee Keepers' Association, Cotton Breeders' Association, Rural School Superintendents, Editors of Rural Press, Executive Officers of County Fairs, and Shippers and Carriers' Association.

The Texas Farm Bureau Cotton association has arranged for a special meeting in conjunction with the short course. A large attendance of its members seems assured. Mr. Alvord's announcement states:

Reduced railway fares from all points in the state are being sought for the meeting. In order to further reduce the cost of attending the meeting, meals will be provided at the mess hall at actual cost and the visitors will be housed in the students' dormitories.

WILL QUIT CITY POST WHEN NEXT MANAGER CHOSEN

The Chamber of Commerce, the city's business and the Retail Merchants' association, Mr. Davis has filled all three places to the complete satisfaction of the board of directors and city commission. The big program, however, which is confronting the Chamber of Commerce at the present time, makes it necessary that he devote all of his time to that organization, and at a meeting of the chamber directors on Tuesday morning he made his decision known.

Members of the city commission heard his decision Tuesday afternoon in a called session in the City hall. They made no statement concerning the selection of his successor.

Has Outstanding Record
Mr. Davis, whose executive ability has enabled him to make an outstanding success while at the helm of the Chamber of Commerce here, told the Journal that he felt his work with the chamber of commerce was unfinished and that he could best serve Lubbock and this section by devoting all of his time to that organization and those allied with it, the Panhandle South Plains Fair Association and the Retail Merchants' Association.

With the railroad situation as urgent as it is, a convention of the Texas Commercial Executives Association in the office, a Good Roads Program demanding the attention of the entire section, a real diversified farming program to be carried out, the 1926 South Plains Fair just around the corner, and many other problems confronting the Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Davis' decision was greeted with the unanimous approval of the part of the Directors of the Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. Hamilton will continue operation of the business at the corner of 15th Street and Avenue K and will employ a specialist in interior decorating to replace Mr. Rausin, who is recognized as one of the best in West Texas. Mr. Hamilton will assume control of the business at once, the announcement said.

and understood by the citizens of this town. I shall be fully vindicated and my innocence established to the satisfaction of every one who believes in fair play.

"I know that I have not violated any law of this state, and it is with every confidence that I face the future, well knowing that in the end I will be fully vindicated when all the facts relating to this unfortunate controversy are presented and developed upon trial of these cases."

Indictments Are Given.
The indictments returned by the grand jury alleges that on February 24, 1925, $843.20 of the city's funds was converted by Mr. Germany and on May 18, of the same year, $1,733.38 was similarly used. The dates and figures were released as a result of an audit of the city's books by H. V. Robertson and company, of Amarillo, certified public accountants, who began their perusal of the city's books on March 1st, with D. D. Martin, senior auditor, in charge. The contract between the city and the Robertson company was entered into on February 15, as a result of action by the city commission and Mayor Floyd R. Friend.

Has Served Six Years.
Mr. Germany has been city secretary since August 12, 1919, after he had come to Lubbock to install a bookkeeping system for the city. C. R. Parks was mayor at that time, and J. O. Jones, Walter S. Posey, L. H. Simpson and George C. Woffarth were commissioners. Martin S. Ruby was city manager and R. A. Sowder was city attorney.

Is Civic Worker.
Ever since his arrival here Mr. Germany has been active in civic work and is at the present time president of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, after having served that organization as vice president and a director. He has also been active in the Rotary club.

Through its attorney, E. L. Klett, the city filed civil action against Mr. Germany on April 15th, in the district court, petitioning for the recovery of funds said to have been converted. Mr. Germany severed his connection with the city on April 8th.

Immediately after the indictment was signed Mr. Germany made bond in the sum of $2,000, seven prominent men signing it.

USE GOLDEN RULE IN PEACE MOVE BRITON ASKS

(By Associated Press.)
TORONTO, Ont., April 27. — An appeal for adoption of the golden rule in international politics, was made by Sir James Howard, British ambassador to the United States, in an address today before the Canadian, Rotary and Empire clubs of Toronto. There can be no peace, he asserted, if all nations are always bent on having their own way in international affairs and he urged that an attempt be made to understand the point of view of others, since some sacrifice "is almost always necessary in any fair and square deal."

Evolution of the British Empire, its relations with the United States, and the maintenance of peace in Europe, were described by the ambassador as the three greatest political questions of the near future and he looked to Canada to play a considerable part in keeping Anglo-American relations on a "sound, healthy and friendly footing."
