Ma...der prosecution to Lubbock

By DONNY BROWN
SDN Managing Editor

The prosecution phase of murder charges against Arthur Lee MacLeod will be moved to Lubbock County following an agreement reached Thursday morning between local District Attorney Ernie Armstrong and Lubbock DA Jim Bob Darnell.

The decision follows a hearing Wednesday in Lubbock during which testimony indicated the suspect made statements immediately after his arrest that he had killed his wife Evelyne Feather MacLeod and that the act had taken place in that city.

Armstrong said the decision regarding jurisdiction was made around 10:30 a.m. Thursday following a telephone conversation between he and Darnell.

While noting that the decision was "always subject to later review," Armstrong commented, "Either one of us can try it and both are more than willing to try it. But to quickly resolve the jurisdiction question, we agreed that at this time Lubbock County should exercise jurisdiction and seek a grand jury indictment there."

He added that he and Darnell "agreed that the jurisidiction question should not be a factor that hinders the prosecution of this terrible crime."

As part of the agreement, Armstrong said he will dismiss the murder charge against MacLeod here.

From his conversation with Darnell, he said the Lubbock DA will seek a murder indictment against MacLeod at grand jury proceedings scheduled in Lubbock Monday.

Charges of murder were filed against MacLeod in both Lubbock and Scurry Counties following the May 21 incident.

He was arrested in Lubbock after the body of Mrs. MacLeod, the head and both hands removed, was found earlier the same day in far northern Scurry County.

Wednesday's hearing was called as an examining trial — a legal maneuver often used by defense attorneys to gain information regarding evidence against their client — and a bond reduction hearing.

At its conclusion, the $250,000 bond set in Lubbock County against the suspect remained intact. The $100,000 bond he faced here in connection with the local charge was not addressed.

The hearing also included objections from MacLeod's court-appointed defense attorney, Quinn Brackett of Lubbock, who claimed his client's statements immediately after his arrest were made without his being fully informed of his rights.

According to area news reports, the question of MacLeod's rights surfaced as a result of his questioning by two Lubbock County law enforcement officers at two points during his initial arrest and incarceration.

During this phase, MacLeod

A — Yes. Beginning with Sunday's editorial page, such a list will be printed in the SDN.

In Brief

Note decline

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's main economic forecasting gauge decreased 0.2 percent in April, marking the first decline this year and signaling that the lagging economy has yet to feel the effect of lower interest rates.

The Commerce Department report issued today was generally in line with the expectation of market analysts, although they had been split over whether the index of leading indicators would move up slightly or down slightly.

Interest rates have been driven lower in recent weeks, first by reduced demand for credit as business executives scaled back their activity and then by the Federal Reserve's lowering of its discount rate in an effort to stimulate an economy that grew at an annual rate of only 0.7 percent in the first quarter.

Nuke suit

HOUSTON (AP) — Brown & Root Inc., former builder of the South Texas Nuclear Project, has agreed to pay $750 million to four Texas utilities in what attorneys termed the largest cash settlement in U.S. history, the companies involved announced today.

The Houston-based construction company, a unit of Dallas-based Halliburton Co., will pay $630 million to Houston Lighting & Power, San Antonio City Public Service and Central Power and Light.

WTC signup at 530

As classes began Wednesday for the summer term at Western Texas College, Registrar Dan Dever reported some 530 students signed up.

He said he expects another 100 students to register for classes before Monday. College officials indicated Thursday that registration for all classes will be permitted through Monday.

"Some classes won't begin until then," Dever said, "so we decided to expand the cutoff date for all until that time."

State funding for junior colleges is based upon student enrollment numbers figured every other year.

The summer fall spring terms just completed at WTC will be used for the next state funding allocation rather than totals figured for the 1985-86 school year.

Health care plan okayed...

Legislature adjourns session

AUSTIN (AP) — Acting in less than two minutes, the Senate today gave final approval to a health care plan for the poor, then adjourned to end the Legislature's brief special session.

Senators endorsed the $70 million plan on a voice vote after Sen. John Traeger, D-Seguin, said minor amendments added by the House on Wednesday had improved the bill.

"I am delighted," Traeger said after the legislation was approved.

Gov. Mark White, who watched as the Senate passed the bill, thanked the Senate "for an outstanding special session."

"I look forward to seeing you in January of 1987," when the next regular session is scheduled to begin, he told them.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, who many lawmakers credited with finally getting the bill passed, said its approval indicates a mood of concern among lawmakers for the needy.

"It's recognition of basic equity," Hobby said.

The House passed the plan on a 90-54 vote Wednesday after conservative members unsuccessfully sought to delay most major aspects of it for two years.

Speaker Gib Lewis, who cast a dramatic tie-breaking vote Wednesday to kill conservatives' efforts to dilute the bill, sent House members home after the vote.

The House vote came on the second day of the special session, which White had piggy-backed onto the regular session that ended at midnight Monday without a final vote on the health plan.

The plan sets aside $70 million in state money — without a tax hike — to help provide health care for the poor. Repeal of the state law against Sunday shopping will provide $40 million for the program.

Under the plan, if a county without a public hospital spends over 10 percent of its taxes for indigent health care, the state would cover 90 percent of additional expenses. There are 132 counties without public hospitals.

The initial vote on the substitute bill offered on behalf of the Texas Conservative Coalition was 73-71 in favor of killing it. But a roll call verification wound up 71-71.

"Show the chair voting aye," said Lewis, stifling the conservatives' effort by using his power to break ties.

"You just do what you have to do when you have to. ... You always hope you don't have to," Lewis said later.

Dallas Rep. Jesse Oliver's health care bill had died while being debated as the regular session ended. Senators quickly approved the measure Tuesday, shortly after the special session began.

Rep. Alan Schoolcraft, R-San Antonio, pushed the conservative alternative, a package that included postponing most of the state money for two years.

"We're trying to jump headlong into a program with no cap on it and will grow and grow and grow," Schoolcraft said.

"We're not saying write it off, forget it, never," he said, adding that the indigent health care issue needs further study.

Oliver's plan was the product of a 71-member task force that studied the topic for two years.

"If we continue to study we will be impacted negatively by the pain and suffering and death of children who will be born handicapped," Oliver said.

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Be kind to politicians because many of them are doing the work of three men--Curly, Larry and Moe."

We can't argue that there may be too much violence on TV, but to characterize The Three Stooges as bloody is a little hard for us to comprehend.

However, a TV station in New York City has banned the showing of the Three Stooges because the famous eye-poke has been deemed too violent for even folks in the Big Apple.

Moe's infamous poke in the eye has been around for 50 years, but the TV station has determined that the station's anti-mayhem policy is violated by the more harsh aspects of even slapstick comedy.

New Yorkers who grew up watching the trio poke at each other are protesting the removal of their childhood favorites. TV viewers will have to tune into Ted Turner's station in Atlanta to see pokes and jabs.

A 23-year-old computer operator, in a letter to the TV station, said all his years of watching the Three Stooges had never caused him to sock anyone in the eye.

Surely we can find someone or something more dangerous than the Three Stooges. Never once did we hear Curly, Moe or Larry say, "Go ahead, make my day."

Speaking of violence, have you ever heard some of those hard rock sounds passed off as music. Everytime you hear the top 20 tunes, you can get the shakes just thinking what the bottom 20 must sound like.

Lynn Wilkerson, owner of the Sign-tist, sent us the following note after returning from Minnesota where he visited his father-in-law who is supervising a construction project there.

"I've been hearing about OSHA for years now, but it wasn't what I thought it was. My father-in-law informed me it was a protective coating made by half baking a mixture of fine print, red tape, split hairs and baloney--usually applied at random with a shotgun. Imagine, I had always thought it was a small town in Wisconsin."

Rural county mobile home burglarized

Scurry County sheriff's officers are investigating a rural residential burglary reported Wednesday afternoon.

James Davis, who lives just east of Snyder on U.S. Highway 84, reported the incident at 1:24 p.m.

His residence is located some ¾ of a mile north of the U.S. Hwy. 180 interchange.

He reported returning to his mobile homa at that location shortly after 1 p.m. and discovering the residence had been entered.

No report was available Thursday morning as to the type or value of property taken from the residence.

Spying...

Charge 3rd family member

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP) — A former Navy officer with "secret" clearance admitted joining a spy ring that included his brother and nephew and confessed that he was paid $12,000 for confidential information going to the Soviet Union, the FBI said.

Arthur James Walker, 50, was arrested at his Virginia Beach home Wednesday night without incident, the FBI said. He was to appear today before U.S. Magistrate Gilbert R. Swink Jr. in Norfolk.

John Anthony Walker Jr., 47, a retired Navy communications specialist and Arthur Walker's brother, and John Walker's son, Michael, a seaman aboard the carrier Nimitz, were formally indicted on espionage charges Tuesday by a federal grand jury in Baltimore. They were arrested last week.

Officials have called the case one of the most serious breaches of Navy security in history.

Arthur Walker admitted during questioning last Friday that "on a number of occasions, beginning in approximately September 1980" he turned over to his brother U.S. Navy defense plans for delivery to the Soviet Union, according to an FBI affidavit.

Arthur Walker was paid $12,000 for the material he provided, said the FBI affidavit, filed late Wednesday in U.S. District Court in Norfolk.

The retired Navy lieutenant commander whose expertise was in submarines and anti-submarine warfare carried a "top secret" security clearance while in the Navy and still holds a "secret" clearance for his work with a defense contractor, the FBI said.

The FBI said Arthur Walker worked as an engineer for the Chesapeake branch of VSE Corp., a defense contractor that does business with the Navy. His work at VSE involved "United States Navy carrier and ship maintenance planning," the FBI said.

On Wednesday, Michael Walker was ordered held without bond to await arraignment on espionage charges.

Attorneys for John Walker and Michael Walker have said the two would plead innocent.

Federal officials have said they believed the Walkers' motives for the alleged spy activity were financial.

Arthur Walker had served as president of a neighborhood civic league in Virginia Beach.

"He, his wife and children are just the all-American likeable family," said Meyera E. Oberndorf, a resident of the neighborhood and a city council member. "That's the only way to describe them."

"I am surprised, I am shocked, and I hope and pray that this turns out to be totally inaccurate," she said.

Federal court asked to remove dump site

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A federal appeals court has been asked by the State of Texas to remove a Panhandle site from consideration as a potential high-level nuclear waste dump.

The request Wednesday concerns the choice of Deaf Smith County as one of three primary sites under consideration by the Department of Energy as a site for the nuclear repository.

On Tuesday, Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox released a statement in which he said this suit "is also over the Department of Energy's failure to follow the law governing the selection of a permanent respository for dangerous high-level nuclear waste."

An earlier suit was filed by Mattox in the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on Dec. 19, the day before the DOE announced Deaf Smith County as one of three top contenders for the dump. The other sites are in the states of Nevada and Washington.

Texas Gov. Mark White said the Energy Department "selected the dump site prior to establishing guidelines that are to be used for that very purpose.

"The guidelines are wholly inadequate to determine the impact that the dump would have on water supplies and agriculture in the Panhandle," White said in a statement.

The attorney general said the lawsuit contends the DOE guidelines were "seriously flawed" because they did not take into consideration "the largest underground body of water in the nation and the second most agriculturally productive county in Texas."

The first suit alleged the DOE should not be looking in Texas at all because of an alleged failure to follow the law in choosing specific areas for consideration. The first suit is still pending in the court.

Fraud Victim Finds Out Her Pen Pal Already Behind Bars

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I started to correspond with a gentleman whose name I found in a magazine. He had advertised for a mature woman to be a pen pal.

I will not go into detail because I feel foolish and I don't want to identify myself, but after sending this man "gifts," which he asked for in a roundabout way, and several hundred dollars as "loans," I learned that I was writing to a man in prison!

My question to you, Dear Abby, is this: Why does the law permit prisons to use names and addresses that intentionally conceal the fact that they are prisons?

I think that when a prisoner wants to correspond with a stranger, he or she should not have the protection of a phony address.

What is your opinion?

DEFRAUDED IN FLORIDA

DEAR DEFRAUDED: Same as yours. I have been aware of this for some time, and have commented on it in this space. But thus far I've been unable to learn the justification for this blatant coverup. Readers?

DEAR ABBY: About a month ago, we lost our beloved pet. She had been a constant companion and friend for 13 years. I can't believe how her death has affected me. Most people have a very hard time understanding that she was as much a part of my life and family as my husband and children, and I grieve for her as I would for any family member.

I feel as though I may need some sort of counseling, but I don't know where to turn. I'm having a difficult time getting on with my life. I feel heartsick and depressed. Some mornings I don't even want to get out of bed.

We have other pets, and though we love them very much, none can take her place.

Can you help me, please?

GRIEF STRICKEN

DEAR GRIEF STRICKEN: The pain one feels from having lost a beloved pet should be handled in the same way one copes with a human loss—through counseling. Ask your veterinarian to put you in touch with a therapist who specializes in animal grief. There may even be a "pet-loss support group" where you can express your grief without embarrassment or fear of being put down for "carrying on" as though you had lost a child.

Animal-loss counseling is relatively new, so if it's not available in your area, regular counselors are also trained to help the grief stricken. Meanwhile, please accept my sympathy.

DEAR ABBY: So you don't think making little kids walk 14 miles a day is child abuse? Shame on you! If this had happened in my town and I knew about it, I would have called the child abuse hot line and reported those parents.

Yes, I know, in the olden days people walked that far and didn't think a thing of it. My great-grandfather used to tell how when he was young he walked 10 miles a day with snow up to his hips, but as the years grew, so did the story. The last time I heard it, he had walked 30 miles a day with the snow up to his chin!

Settlement reached in STNP suit

AUSTIN (AP) — A $750 million settlement will be announced today by three South Texas Nuclear Project partners who filed a multimillion-dollar lawsuit against the power plant's former builder, The Associated Press learned.

Houston-based Brown & Root will pay $750 million to San Antonio City Public Service, Houston Lighting & Power and Central Power and Light, said the source, who spoke only on the condition that he would not be identified.

Official word of the settlement will come today at news conferences in the home cities of the partners. CP&L is based in Corpus Christi.

The money will be paid in proportion to partner's share in the nuclear project near Bay City. San Antonio is a 28 percent owner, Houston Lighting & Power is a 30.8 percent owner and Central Power & Light owns 25.2 percent.

Sheriff opts for quitting

KAUFMAN, Texas (AP) — The way Roy Brockway figures it, a judge's bench is a lot more comfortable than a prison bunk.

The six-term Kaufman County sheriff said Wednesday he has opted for quitting his job instead of spending a year in jail for beating up a prisoner. That way, he said he can bide his time selling real estate until 1986, when he plans to run for county judge.

U.S. District Judge Jerry Buchmeyer ordered Brockway Tuesday either to give up the sheriff's job by June 12 or face a year behind bars for violating Dallas County resident Timothy Barrickman's civil rights in 1983.

The judge said in his opinion the beating, for which Brockway was convicted last year, "was not an isolated incident." Barrickman, who suffered cracked ribs and facial cuts, was being questioned about some tractor thefts on which he never went to trial.

"Well, I'm going to let them have it (the sheriff's post)," the 53-year-old sheriff, who was first elected in 1965, said Wednesday. "I did what I did, and I have no hard feelings for anyone."

Brockway, who has never lost an election in this county just east of Dallas County, added that "no one — not even the federal court — has mistreated me."

In January, Buchmeyer sentenced Brockway to one year in prison, but said the sheriff could stay out of jail if he resigned and kept out of law enforcement for a probationary period of five years.

Brockway appealed that decision to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, and Buchmeyer at first agreed to let him postpone a decision on his resignation pending a ruling by the appeals court.

But Buchmeyer reversed his decision Tuesday, saying he had studied similar cases and was convinced Brockway would lose his appeal. In addition, Buchmeyer said, Brockway's beating of Barrickman "was not an isolated incident."

Buchmeyer said in his written ruling that nine other complaints were made against the sheriff and that Brockway "received formal warning in 1972 from the Department of Justice that 'verbal provocation' does not justify assaulting a prisoner, and criminal prosecution (of Brockway) could result."

Brockway said he has dropped his appeal and that finding a replacement for him will be up to the county commissioners court.

"I've had one of the most wonderful times you've seen in your life," he said of his years as sheriff. "But it's over."

Hughes Tool now sees less drilling

HOUSTON (AP) — Hughes Tool Co. lowered its 1985 drilling activity estimates for the second time in nine months, citing uncertainity about federal tax policies, weak natural gas prices and unstable crude prices.

The Houston-based oil field equipment manufacturer predicts the number of active rigs in the United States this year will decline 8 percent from 1984, bringing drilling activity to its lowest level since 1979.

The number of active U.S. rigs averaged 2,123 during the first four months of this year, a 10.3 percent decrease from the same period in 1984, Hughes spokesman Jim Montgomery said Tuesday.

Hughes' original 1985 forecast, released last August, predicted an average 2,750 rigs would be working, a 5.5 percent hike from the 2,428 rigs active in 1984.

But the company revised its estimates in December to show it expected an average of 2,550 rigs.

This week's active rig count is 1,848, a 20 percent decline from last year's figure of 2,322, Hughes reported.

Montgomery attributed the reduced estimates to uncertainty over federal tax policies, weak natural gas prices and unstable crude prices. Also, oil company mergers and restructuring have resulted in lower drilling expenditures than originally planned, he said.

Hughes Vice President I.C. Kerridge Jr. said the revised figures are based on the assumptions that crude oil prices will remain stable or decline by only 5 percent this year and that Congress will not pass a tax simplification bill during this session.

The figures also are based on the expectation that natural gas prices will be lower for a short while but will rise before the end of the year, Kerridge said.

Lawrence A. Crowley, vice president of the brokerage firm Rauscher Pierce Refsnes Inc. in Houston, said the revised figures now reflect the sluggishness in the drilling market.

Lunch bill is signed by White

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White says a bill he signed to guarantee teachers a work-free lunch period will keep the momentum rolling on school reforms the Legislature started last year.

"Clearly, the kind of education we seek to offer these young people cannot be achieved without giving attention to the working conditions of the people who are charged with the important task of teaching," White said Wednesday.

White signed the bill during a ceremony at an Austin elementary school. It was sponsored by Rep. Bill Messer, D-Belton, and Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi.

"Throughout the history of Texas and the United States, it has been commonplace to bring the teacher an apple. Yet until today, the state has not guaranteed the teacher time to eat the apple," White said.

The legislation says teachers are entitled to at least a 30-minute lunch period, "free from all duties and responsibilities connected with the instruction or supervision of students."

The governor noted that only in "the more progressive districts" have schools given teachers a work-free lunch period.

"Today, all teachers in all districts will receive the recognitition that has been reserved for a relatively small number," he said.

After signing the bill, White said he was disappointed that the Legislature failed to enact some "fine tuning" school reform bills, but hinted that he will urge the State Board of Education to enact the changes by rule.

"I have several plans I will announce in the next week or so ... We have a solution," he said.

The governor also said he hasn't decided about opening up the special session that began Tuesday to other topics.

Veterans should know benefits before traveling

With nearly half a million veterans residing overseas and with thousands more planning vacations in foreign countries, the Veterans Administration is encouraging veterans to know how their benefits may be affected, E. H. (Dan) Dever, Jr., Scurry County Veterans Service Officer, said.

Veterans with service-connected disabilities, for instance, should obtain a statement of the disabilities from the VA office that maintains their medical records. The statement will enable the veteran to obtain emergency treatment or hospitalization paid for by VA when proper application for medical benefits and the statement are presented to the US embassy or counsular office in a foreign country.

Only veterans who are retired from military service are eligible for medical benefits at overseas military hospitals and clinics.

Certain VA education benefits are available overseas to eligible veterans, their spouses and children. Details on these benefits should be obtained in advance.

Veterans interested in information about VA benefits are invited to contact Dever in his office at Western Texas College. The college can be reached by telephone at 573-8511.

Arrests break up major cocaine ring

DALLAS (AP) — Federal agents said the arrests of eight people, including the co-owners of a Dallas oil company, have broken up a ring that was one of the major suppliers of cocaine to the United States.

Among those arrested Wednesday on various counts of conspiracy to distribute cocaine and marijuana were Joe Bill Bennett, 39, of Dallas and James Jefferson Bennett Jr., 32, of Carrollton, owners of Bennett Resources Inc., and at least one of their employees, authorities said.

Phil Jordan, a special agent with the Drug Enforcement Administration in Dallas, said multi-kilo quantities of cocaine and marijuana were shipped from South America and Mexico into Dallas and then distributed to Austin, McAllen, St. Louis and New York.

"Dallas was one of the major cities," Jordan said. "These people are significant violators." He said the group was suspected of trafficking "multi-kilos of cocaine and tons of marijuana."

Jordan said DEA agents last year joined an investigation that local and state officials began eight years ago.

The arrests followed a 19-count indictment. The indictment, which named 13 people, will remain sealed until the whereabouts of at least four suspects still at large could be determined, officials said.

Authorities declined to publicly identify the others who were indicted. However, a federal source who asked to remain anonymous said one of the five is in federal custody under another sealed indictment that alleges drug crimes. The source identified the man as Jose Luis Ramirez Hernandez of Mexico.

The eight arrested were brought before U.S. Magistrate John B. Tolle for a preliminary hearing Thursday. He denied bond on seven of the suspects, but allowed the eighth, Peggy Onstatt Baugh, 50, of Grand Prairie, released on her own recognizance.

During a morning raid near Addison Airport, agents seized a twin-engine airplane registered to Joe Bill Bennett and kept at Million Air, an aircraft ground servicing company that also contains an office for Bennett Resources Inc.

"The whole thing came as a surprise to us," said Carl Paris, director of operations at Million Air. "We don't normally watch what they do. It's no concern of ours."

He said he did not know how long Bennett had been a tenant at Million Air, a luxury hangar facility that opened in the spring of 1984.

A receptionist at Bennett Resources said no officials were available to discuss the indictments.

Agents also seized three Cadillacs at various locations and another airplane in St. Louis, officials said.

Six of those arrested — including the Bennett brothers — remained in Lew Sterrett Justice Center late Wednesday. The others are Leigh Souther Hankins, 24, a Dallas homemaker; her husband, Robert Carl Hankins, 38, of Dallas, an employee of Bennett Resources Inc.; Brenda Kay Baxter, 26, a real estate agent; and Ronald Keith Norman, 33, a farmer.

William Dru Landrum, 35, a vice president of Texas Hospital Insurance Exchange in Austin, also was being held in federal custody without bond late Wednesday.

A bond hearing for the eight will be held in Tolle's courtroom at 1:30 p.m. Friday. Formal arraignment is scheduled June 6 in the court of U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders.

Texans give $300,000 for relief of hunger

AUSTIN (AP) — Project Tejas, the farmer-organized effort to send surplus Texas grain and powdered milk directly to African famine victims, has raised considerably more money than expected.

Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower said Wednesday the project so far has raised $300,000, adding that the amount "will buy an enormous amount of food. It's certainly more than we ever expected to raise."

Hightower said $300,000 would buy enough food "to feed 215,000 starving African children for a month.

"Such a gift of basic human kindness should fill the hearts of all those who have given with satisfaction — and thousands of Texans have given to Project Tejas," he said, adding that the project's new goal is $350,000.

Project Tejas began on March 1. It will extend until June 30.

The 23 sponsoring agricultural organizations are asking for tax-deductible contributions of $35, which will purchase about 10 bushels of Texas grain and feed 100 children for a week.

The money raised so far will purchase nearly 2,000 tons of surplus grain and powdered milk, Hightower said.

The agriculture commissioner said he was surprised at the large amount of contributions received.

"When the farmers and ranchers of Texas launched Project Tejas ... contributions began trickling in at the rate of $100-$200 a day. Initially, we felt really excited about raising $10,000-$20,000 for a most worthwhile and deserving cause," he said.

Explosion blasts through ice plant

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Arson investigators poking through the remains of a gutted ice manufacturing plant were uncertain what caused an ammonia explosion that killed four people and injured at least 21 others.

Deputy Fire Chief Jim Miller said the explosion Wednesday afternoon evidently was caused by an ammonia leak at the plant owned by Lone Star Ice and Food Stores and Southern-Hemlke.

All but one of the injured were treated for inhalation of fumes and released from two area hospitals. Firefighter Delfino Munoz 31 was at Downtown Baptist Hospital overnight for observation, hospital spokesman Ruben Garaneuay said. Munoz was one of at least 15 firefighters hurt at the explosion site.

One of the dead was identified as Mercadio Martinez 58 of San Antonio said Julia Rosendend a spokeswoman for Santa Rosa Hospital. Identities of the others were unconfirmed late Wednesday night said Joseph Rosales a police investigator who was at the Bexar County Medical Examiner's Office.

The blast scene just southeast of downtown looked like a war zone said Dennis Cooper district superintendent for Lone Star who arrived five minutes after the explosion that left a gaping 40-foot hole in a wall.

Cooper said the plant used ammonia pressurized in a piping system as a coolant to make ice. Officials said a pipe apparently gave way in the blast.

Alfred Lozano a paramedic with the Emergency Medical Service said he watched as his co-workers pulled bodies from the building.

"There wasn't a whole lot to work with," he said. "They were pretty well burned up."

Mayor Henry Cisneros toured the scene shortly after the 3:20 p.m. incident.

"It's a very serious situation," he said. "Thank God it's stabilized and we don't have more to worry about at this instant."

Authorities sealed off a two-block area surrounding the plant, but did not evacuate residents in the surrounding neighborhood.

The plant is just a few blocks from the site of Hemisfair '68 world's fair.

Allen Lander, an official with the ice company, emerged from the plant with a red rag over his face to protect himself from the fumes.

Convict granted one stay

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — G.W. Green says he was discussing final arangements with his brother when word came that his execution had been delayed.

"I was relieved, obviously," Green said Wednesday, the day that had been scheduled for his execution for the 1976 killing of a Montgomery County juvenile probation officer during a burglary.

A federal judge in Houston granted a stay of execution last Friday.

"A few minutes after midnight I looked at the time and thought that I was hallucinating or had been resurrected," Green said.

"I knew if there was any justice in the world, I'd live to see the Celtics kick ... the Lakers," he said, referring to the current National Basketball Association championship series between Boston and Los Angeles.

But Green said he was certain the stay was only temporary and that "I'm going to get whacked for sure. I really expect to be executed."

He was one of two inmates to get delays in death dates last week.

Johnny Frank Garrett, convicted of the rape-slaying of an Amarillo nun, had been scheduled to die early today but also won a reprieve from a federal judge.

Garrett declined interview requests Wednesday, the only day of the week reporters are allowed to speak with death row inmates.

The stays left three of the state's 205 capital murder convicts with active execution dates, including Charles Milton on June 25, Henry Martinez Porter on July 9 and John Michael Lamb on July 22.

Lamb, 27, the only one of that trio to grant interviews Wednesday, faces death by injection for a February 1983 robbery-slaying at a Greenville Ramada Inn.

"I'm sure I'll get a stay," Lamb said.

The San Jose, Calif., native, however, said he had no attorney yet and would seek help from the NAACP Legal Defense Fund.

"I've still got two months to go," he said.

Lamb said he confessed to the slaying after making a deal with prosecutors who offered him a prison term. Authorities later reneged on their offer, he contended.

Lamb was arrested in Florida driving the murder victim's car.

"I'd rather not say," he replied when asked how he obtained the car. And when asked if he knew who committed the killing, he said, "If I did, I wouldn't say."

Texas prison officials this year have executed three inmates, the last of whom was Jesse de la Rosa, put to death earlier this month.

"I believe Jesse de la Rosa was innocent," Lamb said. "But here everybody's going to say they're innocent."

Cities, states crying 'double taxation'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Raising the cry of double taxation, governors, mayors and other officials are protesting a key part of President Reagan's tax overhaul plan — ending the federal writeoff for state and local taxes.

This portion of the plan is tax shifting, not simplification, said John Bragg, a Tennessee representative and president of the National Conference of State Legislatures. Eliminating deductibility would be a crushing blow to state and local governments.

Reagan's proposal in the name of tax simplification would eliminate the federal tax provision allowing taxpayers to deduct the money they pay in state, county and city taxes. It's a provision as old as the federal income tax itself.

In announcing the plan this week, Reagan called the writeoff a subsidy for the high-tax policies of a handful of states.

Yet the deduction is the most common one claimed by taxpayers — even more than the popular home mortgage interest deduction that would be kept under the Reagan plan, according to the National Governors Association, one of the groups opposing the change. Without change, the deduction is expected to be worth $33 billion next year to taxpayers.

While losing the deduction for local taxes, individuals would see their federal income tax rates lowered. But some questioned whether that would be enough to offset the lost deduction.

Under Reagan's proposal, California taxpayers will pay more, not less, in federal income taxes, said Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley.

State and local officials fear taxpayers won't be as willing to pay local taxes when they are unable to write them off on the federal form.

Every dollar they spend on local taxes will be a real dollar. It won't be a 50-cent dollar as it has been, said Matthew Coffey, executive director of the National Association of Counties. You're going to put more pressure on local governments to limit taxes.

Nowhere was opposition more vocal than in New York, a high-tax state that figures to be hard-hit by such a change. Gov. Mario Cuomo said, "It punishes states that are trying to provide essential services in the face of massive federal spending cuts."

Boarding a 62-foot sloop on the East River, New York Republican Sen. Alfonse D'Amato and Democratic Rep. Mario Biaggi staged a mock Boston Tea Party to protest the deduction elimination, throwing into the river empty cartons labeled "No Double Taxation."

In Massachusetts, Democratic Gov. Michael S. Dukakis said the plan was worth a look and that the Treasury Department's earlier version — more sweeping than the plan Reagan has offered — "was a major plus for Massachusetts taxpayers."

Truck-train...

Railroad files suit in crash

EASTLAND, Texas (AP) — A flurry of lawyers seeking clients in the aftermath of last week's train derailment has led the Missouri Pacific Railroad to file suit against the construction company whose truck ran into the train, railroad officials say.

The company filed suit in Eastland County's state district court Tuesday, just four days after the fiery wreck sent six people to the hospital and forced the evacuation of more than 1,000, MPR spokesman Mark Davis said Wednesday.

The wreckage burned for days after a tank truck struck the second engine of a Missouri Pacific freight train at a crossing Friday morning. Hazardous chemicals that leaked from a damaged rail car forced the evacuations, police said.

The crossing was protected by flashing red warning signals that were operating at the time of the accident, Davis said.

Missouri Pacific's suit alleges that negligent acts contributed to the accident and seeks unspecified damages from B.C. Construction Co. of Ranger, Texas, its owner Bob Carroll and Gaylon Nelms, the truck's driver.

Nelms remained in serious condition at Hendrick Medical Center in Abilene Wednesday with first- and second-degree burns over 20 percent of his body, authorities said.

Davis said Missouri Pacific, a subsidiary of Union Pacific Railroad, decided to file suit after determining that attorneys from outside the Eastland area were seeking to represent potential damage claimants.

He said some of those attorneys might try to have any claims arising out of the incident resolved in courts outside the Eastland area.

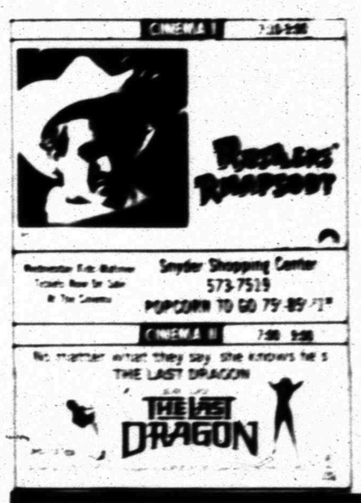

"We firmly believe that any future judicial determination should be made here in Eastland," said William C. Dowdy Jr., Missouri-Pacific general solicitor.

The accident occurred in Eastland that is where the witnesses reside, and where the people directly affected also live," he said. "It would be patently unfair to ask jurors, perhaps hundreds of miles away, to decide claims arising out of this accident."

Heither Carroll nor any other B.C. Construction Co. official returned calls from The Associated Press Wednesday.

Secretary of State Abel Upshur, Navy Secretary Thomas Gilmer and three others were killed in 1844 when a gun exploded on a Navy ship during an excursion down the Potomac.

Astronauts Elliot See and Charles Bassett were killed in 1966 when their jet trainer crashed into an aerospace plant in St. Louis.

Razorbacks getting ready for College World Series

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) - The Arkansas Razorbacks under Norm DeBriyn finished second in their only other appearance at the College World Series, so DeBriyn has an idea of what it takes to capture a national baseball title.

"The competition is so keen and the teams so good, you have to be hot and have some things go for you to win," DeBriyn said as Arkansas prepared for this year's National Collegiate Athletic Association championship, which begins here Friday.

"There is an aura with the media, the attention, all the activities that are there," DeBriyn said. "It takes some concentration. You've got to have your head screwed on right."

In 1979, DeBriyn brought a Razorback team to Omaha, winning three and losing two, including a 2-1 championship game with Cal State Fullerton.

DeBriyn has all new faces on his 49-13 team that opens the double-elimination tournament against 47-20 South Carolina at 4:10 p.m. CDT Friday.

In other first-round games, Oklahoma State, 57-14-1, meets Mississippi State, 48-13, at 7:10 p.m. Friday, while Stanford, 47-13, faces Miami, 59-15, at 4:10 p.m. and Texas, 60-12, meets Arizona, 47-20, at 7:10 p.m. Saturday.

Here are capsules on each of the CWS tournament teams:

Arizona

Coach Jerry Kindall's Wildcats carry a .321 team average and 5.13 team earned run average into the tournament. Todd Trafton leads the team with a .375 batting average, 74 runs batted in and 103 hits. Joe Magrane, 13-7, heads the pitching staff. Kindall says his team isn't overpowering but has lots of heart.

Texas

Greg Swindell, winner of two CWS games a year ago, is 17-1 with a 1.66 ERA for the Longhorns. Texas' team ERA is 3.18, the best in the tournament. Dennis Cook, Dodd Johnson, Bill Bates and Bobby Behnsch hit .350 or better for a team with a .318 average.

Arkansas

DeBriyn is one of few coaches who can claim to have had Texas' number this year. The Razorbacks won four of five against the Longhorns. Hitting and defense are team strengths with a team batting average of .324. Dave Patterson leads the team at a .373 clip and six players have 40 or more RBI. Fred Farwell, 10-1, is the top pitcher with a 3.10 ERA.

South Carolina

A hard-hitting team, South Carolina has a .322 team batting average, including .397 for Rob Rinehart and .359 for Jeff Barns. With good power, the Gamecocks have 144 team homers, led by Joe Datin's 23. Mike Cook, 16-2, has a 2.03 ERA in 18 starts

Others are:

Miami

Coach Ron Fraser brings his seventh team in eight years to the CWS. Pitching has made the difference with junior left-hander Dan Davies at 15-1 with a 2.63 ERA. Bullpen ace Rick Raether is 5-2 with an ERA of 1.57 and 19 saves, just two away from an NCAA season record. Gone is last year's power but Jon Leake's .348 and Mike Fiore's .333 head an offense that has a .299 team average

Mississippi State

Pitching is Mississippi State's strength with Gene Morgan, 13-1 and 1.89 ERA, paired with Jeff Brantley, 17-2 and 2.17. The team ERA of 3.22 is second in the tournament only to Texas. Will Clark is hitting .416 for a team that averages .295 at the plate

Oklahoma State

Offense sums up Oklahoma State with a team batting average of .342, 124 homers and 774 runs scored in 72 games. The main gear in the power machine is Pete Incaviglia, who boasts a .466 average with NCAA season records for 47 homers and 140 RBI. Nine players hit over .315 but the pitching staff has a team ERA of 5.54

Stanford

Stanford is sparked by Rick Lundblade's .402 average, 24 homers and 89 team-leading RBI. The team hits at a .317 clip with 78 homers. Jeff Ballard is 14-2 in 19 starts on the mound and has a 3.92 ERA. Rick Dietz picked up eight saves with a 2.37 ERA out of the bullpen.

Balance helping Bird, Celtics in NBA series

BOSTON (AP) - Larry Bird finally has run into a team that can stop him. It's his own Boston Celtics.

He hasn't had to score as much as usual because his teammates have been shooting well, and many times his chief competitors for rebounds have been Celtic big men Robert Parish and Kevin McHale.

Though, while Bird's scoring and rebounding statistics have dipped from the National Basketball Association's regular season to the playoffs, his performance hasn't fallen much, said Boston assistant coach Jimmy Rodgers.

"You have to have production out of your other people, and I think that's exactly what's happened," he said Wednesday after the Celtics practiced with an eye toward taking a 2-0 lead tonight in their best-of-seven championship series with the Los Angeles Lakers.

"Our team is moving the basketball. Everybody's involved in our offense," Rodgers added. "Larry would be the first one to say 'I'll do whatever it takes to win. If I have to score 30 points, I'll look to score 30.' Right now, I think he recognizes that we have got that kind of balance going."

Scott Wedman, who made all 11 field goal attempts, and McHale, who hit 10 of 16, led Boston with 26 points each in Monday's 148-114 rout in the series opener. Bird and Danny Ainge scored 19 points apiece.

Bird's shooting was off in the Eastern Conference final against Philadelphia, when he made 41.9 percent of his field goal attempts. Before sinking 8 of 14 shots Monday, Bird had made just 38.7 percent of his attempts in his previous four games.

In track and field prelims...

Defending champs suffer set backs

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Don't inscribe "Arkansas Razorbacks" on the 64th annual NCAA Outdoor Track and Field championship trophy just yet.

The heavily favored Razorbacks, seeking to become only the second team in history to win the NCAA cross country, indoor, and outdoor in the same year, suffered a series of setbacks during Wednesday's qualifying in Memorial Stadium.

They'll get a chance to bounce back today as qualifying continues in the meet which runs through Saturday night.

"I still don't think we're in bad shape," said Arkansas Coach John McDonnell. "We thought it would be close all the way, anyway."

Mike Conley, the Razorbacks' seven-time NCAA long- and triple-jump champion, boosted McDonnell's morale by leading the qualifying in the long jump and 200-meter dash.

Conley ran a wind-aided 20.12 seconds in the 200-meter dash in a race in which Olympic bronze medalist Thomas Jefferson of Kent State failed to qualify.

The NCAA record of 20.15 by Mike Miller of Tennessee still stands because the wind on Conley's run was over the allowable.

Conley also led the long jump qualifying with an effort of 26 feet, 6½ inches.

"Conley had a good day for us," said McDonnell. "But we expected either Joey Wells or Michael Davis to qualify in the long jump. I was counting on three getting into that event.

"It also was disappointing to barely miss qualifying Marty Kobza (in the discus) and Fred Cleary (in the 400-meter hurdles). It was especially disappointing for Fred. It was the second straight year he was ninth (the top eight qualify). He missed qualifing for the finals by two-hundreths of a second."

Also, Mark Klee of Arkansas failed to make the opening height in the pole vault qualifying.

Conley also ran a great third leg on the Razorbacks' 400-meter relay team which qualified second in 39.21 behind behind Baylor's 39.20.

The Arkansas team was already hurting because sprinter Wallace Spearman suffered a strained hamstring in the Southwest Conference meet and was not available to anchor the 400-meter relay.

There were several other major disappointments on Wednesday.

Nawal El Moutawakel of Iowa State, who won the Olympic gold medal for Morocco in the women's 400-meter hurdles, failed to qualify in the event. Latanya Sheffield of San Diego State led the qualifying with a meet-record time of 55.39 seconds, eclipsing Moutawakel's old standard of 55.84.

Jackie Joyner of UCLA led the qualifying with 56.91 seconds but then shocked her followers by failing to make it in the long jump. She finished 16th with an effort of 20-5½, a half-inch back of the last qualifying leap. Olympian Carol Lewis of Houston led the qualifying with 21-8¼.

UCLA is seeking its third women's title in four years.

Jenkins qualifies for NCAA finals

Dale Jenkins, standout pole vaulter for Abilene Christian University and a native of Snyder, qualified for Friday's finals of the NCAA outdoor track and field championships.

The championships are being held this week in Austin.

Qualifying along with Jenkins on Wednesday were Eric Forney, Terry Womach and Joe Dial of Oklahoma State, Kory Tarpenning of Oregon, David Hodge, Todd Cooper and Mike Shafe of Baylor, Chet Clodfelter of Purdue, Lane Lohr of Illinois, Daren Pahl of Murray State, Doug Fraley and Mark Heppner of Fresno State, Scott Huffman of Kansas, Rob Dandino of Mississippi State and Greg Likens of Oregon State.

All vaulters cleared 17-6.

Second round of arms talk begins

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — U.S. and Soviet negotiators today began a second round of arms control talks that the Soviets say are threatened by U.S. research into a space-based defense system.

The U.S. delegation headed by Max M. Kampelman arrived at the Soviet mission, where they were greeted by the Soviet delegations headed by Victor P. Karpov.

Karpov, before the U.S. delegation arrived, told reporters he was a "practical optimist" about possible progress at the talks. The "common goal" of the superpowers is "not allowing an arms race in space," Karpov said. "Now our countries should practically agree how to do so."

Kampelman faced Karpov across a negotiating table and said, "Let's hope this session will be a constructive one."

The meeting was a joint plenary session of all six key negotiators and their aides, comprising 42 people..

The resumption of talks follows a five-week lapse during which both sides returned to their capitals for consultations after a first round that showed little progress.

In Moscow on Wednesday, Communist Party leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev called for a renewal of superpower detente. However, he said U.S. research into a space-based missile defense could lead to "the scrapping of every prospect for an end to the arms race."

The U.S. research program, known as the Strategic Defense Initiative, has been dubbed "Star Wars."

Karpov said Wednesday as he arrived in Geneva that the Star Wars program "sharply reduced" chances of an agreement."

He urged the United States to scrap the program in order to "open the way to radical reductions in nuclear arms and, ultimately, to ... complete elimination of nuclear arms everywhere."

The Soviets have charged that the United States is using the arms talks as "camouflage for its military preparations." The United States has said it will not give up research on the project while arms negotiations continue, and the issue is thought to be the main stumbling block in the talks.

U.S. officials have said the Soviets have prevented progress in the arms control talks by backtracking on positions they took in previous negotiations.

Kampelman avoided making accusations in his arrival statement, but he said he was disappointed with the "slow pace" of the first round.

Gorbachev has been quoted as saying the first round was "completely fruitless."

MacLeod case has 1st hearing

also reportedly signed a waiver of rights before telling deputies where he had buried the head and hands of his wife. These were recovered in the couple's backyard at their residence at 2011 29th St.

His defense attorney's challenge revolved around testimony from Lubbock County Deputy B.J. Green that he had recited the Miranda warning to MacLeod from memory, informing him he had the right to remain silent, have an attorney present and have one appointed if necessary, and the warning that anything he said could be used against him.

This warning omitted the right that MacLeod could terminate the interview at any time.

The interview with Green took place after MacLeod had been arraigned before a Lubbock justice of the peace. He was also advised of his rights immediately following his arrest by Lubbock County Sheriff's Captain Dean Bohannon, who testified Wednesday he stopped his questioning of the suspect after he requested to see an attorney.

Green said during this testimony before the court that he was not informed MacLeod wanted a lawyer present.

VA benefits are explained

Children of veterans who are permanently and totally disabled due to conditions incurred in military service may be eligible to enter courses of education beyond the high school level, E. H. (Dan) Dever, Jr., Scurry County Veterans Service Officer, said.

Also eligible for these benefits are children of veterans who were totally disabled at the time of death or whose deaths were caused by service-connected disabilities.

An eligible child may attend the school of his or her choice as long as it has been approved for VA programs. The child can enroll for full or part-time programs and will be paid accordingly. The monthly benefit for a child enrolled in a full-time course of training is presently $376.

Children or parents seeking information on eligibility for VA benefits should contact Dever's office in the Western Texas College administration building.

Snyder police officers logged eight misdemeanor arrests Wednesday including charges against a 17-year-old man who faces a total of 10 warrants for various unpaid misdemeanor fines.

He was jailed at 9:57 a.m. after a routine traffic stop in far west Snyder, A records check turned up the multiple warrants for no liability insurance, no drivers license and several other traffic-related violations.

Four of the other suspects were charged with public intoxication while two were jailed for driving with suspended licenses.

Another individual jailed Wednesday was arrested on a single traffic warrant issued here.

Since the facility opened in January, it has been operating under a temporary license. THDR officials visited the facility twice during that period--once unannounced and once announced.

According to Rogers, "everything has been in order" for each of the visits and Friendship Home each time was found to be in "compliance with all regulations."

TG&Y installs new registers

TG&Y in Snyder has installed an automated cashiering system designated to provide faster customer service. The project, tagged POS (Point of Sale), was implemented last week and will assist management in having ample stock in all merchandise as it captures sales of individuals items.

Store Manager David Polk stated, "By being able to know the exact quantities and items we sell each day, we can be assured of a good in-stock position on the merchandise our customers want. We are really excited about the opportunity to serve our customers better."

Employees have been trained on the new registers through attending a seminar at a designated regional training store.

38 people killed in soccer rioting

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The government said today it was considering banning British soccer teams from Belgium after a clash between British and Italian fans at a European championship match that left at least 38 people dead and more than 250 injured.

The Interior Ministry and a European soccer association started work today on separate inquiries to determine responsibility for Wednesday night's deadly riot.

Most of the victims were Italians trampled or crushed to death under a wall that collapsed when panicked fans tried to escape Brussels' Heysel stadium when the riot broke out before the match.

Terry Funk...

Wrestler lives fantasies in acting roles

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Terry Funk stays busy doing the thing most people only dream about — starring in a television show, making a movie with Sylvester Stallone and wrestling professionally before fanatical crowds.

"I'm living my own fantasies," he said. "I'm 40 years old, and I've never grown up. You take a 17-year-old kid and ask him what he wants to be when he grows up. I don't know how they do it to kids because I still don't know what I want to be."

Recently he completed filming the ABC western "Wildside" and returned to his 200-acre ranch south of Amarillo.

In the show he plays Prometheus Jones, one of an unlikely band of gunslingers turned Chamber of Commerce for the mythical western town of Wildside. Wildside actually exists on the Disney Ranch and studio backlot in Hollywood where the filming took place.

Funk has a few black and white photographs, some new Hollywood friends, a weathered leather cowboy hat and a head full of memories from the experience.

"Bill Smith, who starred in 'Laredo' and stars in 'Wildside,' made me aware of a lot of things," he said. "He took a lot of time with me, and I learned a lot from him. He said that in his 30 years of acting in 100 movies and in over 600 hours of television, he never had his own trailer. It reminded me that a lot of people have sacrificed.

"Not that I intend to step aside and let them have my spot, but it reminded me that the chances aren't many in this business.

"I love the show and love the work. How many times do you get a chance to hop on a horse and be a cowboy? The part is suited to me. Working with the Disney people is very much like working with Amarillo people. Lots of the people on the set are good cowboys and great ropers and I feel right at home."

The Disney connection seems appropriate because Funk get the part through a Cinderella story of his own.

During the filming of "Paradise Alley" with Sylvester Stallone in 1979, Funk portrayed a self-described crazy wrestler drawing on his 18 years of professional wrestling experiece. A casting director remembered the Amarilloan's role and began a series of telephone calls that led to the part.

"I was in the right place at the right time," Funk said. "They had tested 300 guys for the part. All the other parts were filled and they were holding up production until they cast Prometheus — I didn't make $35,000 the whole season!"

Funk also knows that show business can hold bad luck, too. One part in another Stallone film fell through three days before shooting was to start, and one movie project he wanted to film in Amarillo never got off the ground.

"I was disappointed, but looking back on that, I didn't know enough about distribution schedules, and it might have flopped," he said stoically.

"I learned from that never to announce anything until it happened in this business. When I got the part of Prometheus, I stayed in a motel for 10 weeks before renting an apartment, because every day I expected them to call me and tell me the scripts called for the character to die next week."

Funk plans to continue to call Amarillo home no matter what happens with his career. Amarilloans helped give him his first big break as a professional wrestler — part of the legacy of his father, the late Dory Funk Sr.

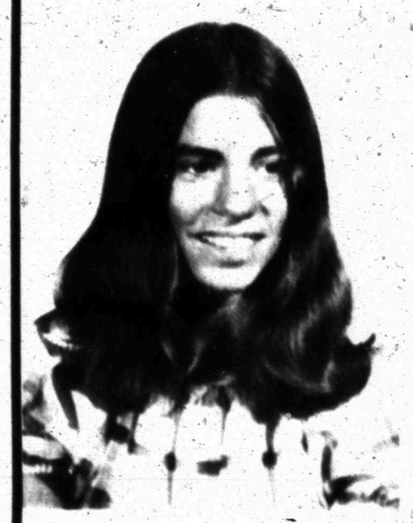

"Wrestling has been a great vehicle for me," he said with classic understatement. If the rating wars were a wrestling match, the former world champion would already have the networks pinned.

Few of his devoted wrestling fans know that Funk also has to his credit a rock-'n'-roll album produced in Japan that sold 50,000 copies and a Japanese book.

"I wrote that book that was translated and published in Japanese," he said. "I don't know it the translation says what I wrote, but it has my name on it."

Meanwhile, Funk lives out his philosophy of gathering up his nerve and trying to achieve his ambitions.

"I don't think people should be miserable their whole lives doing something they hate," he said. "I already figured out I'll never be the richest man in the world. Life is too short. I'm content to keep living out my fantasies no matter how ridiculous they seem to someone else."

Some bruises will linger

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I slipped and fell two weeks ago. The impact was all on my right leg. I developed a big bump five inches below my hip. It has not impaired my mobility and there are no cuts. Will this bump go away by itself?

DEAR READER — The blow to your leg probably produced bleeding into the muscle, a sort of huge bruise called a hematoma. The blood that leaked into the muscle will eventually be reabsorbed and reused by the body, but weeks may pass before the bump disappears.

In some people, calcium forms in large muscle bruises. Calcified hematomas are more painful and take longer to disappear.

If the swelling you describe is due to your fall, leave it alone and let your body take care of it naturally.

I should add that some people bruise abnormally easily because of defects in blood coagulation. If you bruise excessively in the absence of injury, check with your doctor for an exam and blood count. Ordinarily, however, bruising reflects a minor injury to the body and does not require medical attention.

Ice packs or cold compresses can reduce bruising if applied promptly at the time of the accident.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am 14 and overweight. When I try to lose weight by going on a diet, my brothers tease me and then I get depressed and gain back even more weight. How can I lose weight and not gain it back because of this teasing?

DEAR READER — Tell your brothers to bug off.

Sooner or later you will have to take responsibility for yourself, and the issue of obesity is a good place to start. Peer pressure probably gets more kids in trouble than does any other adolescent influence. If your brothers are so insecure that they have to project their bad feelings on you, they have a major problem. If you want to lose weight and you feel that decision is right for you, do it. By sticking to a decision and achieving a goal, you will gain self-respect. Your brothers might learn to respect you more, too.

One final word: You are not overweight because you are depressed. You are overweight because you eat too much. The depression is an excuse for overeating. I would be depressed, too, if my brothers were picking on me all the time. Once you exercise control over your eating habits and are able to slim down, your brothers will lose their hold on you — and your depression may evaporate.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My 8-year-old son has very offensive underarm odor. It just started this year. I keep him clean and bathed daily, but after only a few minutes in hot weather, the odor is unbearable. I use a deodorant soap, but it still happens. His doctor says he is healthy. What can I do?

DEAR READER — Check out the underarm areas of your son's clothes. Often, perspiration oils are not completely laundered out of the clothing, and with repeated wearing, the clothes themselves begin to smell from bacterial action. If special washing of your child's coats and shirts doesn't help the odor, you can try an underarm deodorant. Avoid antiperspirants; your son is too young for them. Is it possible that he may have recently changed his diet and be eating foods, like garlic, that could affect the chemistry of his perspiration?

Send your questions to Dr. Gott at P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101. Due to volume of mail, individual questions cannot be answered. Questions of general interest will be answered in future columns.

Commissioners will obey order

HOUSTON (AP) — Harris County Commissioners say a federal judge's order to increase staffing at the county jail has them "over a barrel" and could force them to raise taxes next year.

U.S. District Judge Carl Bue on Friday held county officials in contempt of court for failing to follow his order last December requiring them to come up with a plan to increase jail staffing.

Official: High Plains aquifer may remain

WASHINGTON (AP) — The cost of depleting the Ogallala Aquifer may save it, but not without running some farmers out of business, according to an Interior Department official.

"I think you're going to see some changes," said Robert Broadbent, assistant secretary for water and science, as the agency released a major report on the state of the nation's underground water supply.

"I think agriculture is going to be subject to the same economics that anybody else is," Broadbent said at a Wednesday news conference. "If you can no longer afford to buy the products you need to make agriculture productive, you're going to go out of business or go into dryland farming."

The Ogallala, known as the High Plains Aquifer, extends beneath portions of eight states. It supplies about 75,000 Texas irrigation wells, said the report, compiled by the U.S. Geological Survey.

In Texas, more than 80 percent of underground fresh water is used for irrigation.

"Unless effective conservation measures are implemented, the irrigated acreage will be decreased by slightly more than one-half of the present acreage by the year 2030," said the report.

In a case study of Floyd County, in the Texas Panhandle, the Geological Survey analysts said the depletion of aquifer was already slowing because of the increasing cost of pumping the water to the surface.

Between 1952 and 1981, the cost of pumping water in Floyd County increased 594 percent, without adjusting for inflation, said the report.

From 1945 to 1984, the water level in a Floyd County observation well dropped from 60 feet below the land surface to 245 feet below it, the report said.

In 1958, the annual irrigation withdrawal in Floyd County was 61.5 billion gallons. By 1969, it had increased to 103.5 billion gallons. But by 1979, withdrawals decreased to 57.7 billion gallons, the report said.

"I think economics is going to take care of it a lot," said Broadbent. "If you can't afford to pump it, then you're not going to pump the groundwater and the groundwater is going to stabilize and may even come up."

If West Texas farmers cannot irrigate, they have to give up crops like corn and cotton in favor of non-irrigated crops such as grain sorghum and wheat.

The report said the Houston area is also rapidly drawing water from the coastal aquifer system, which is causing land to sink.

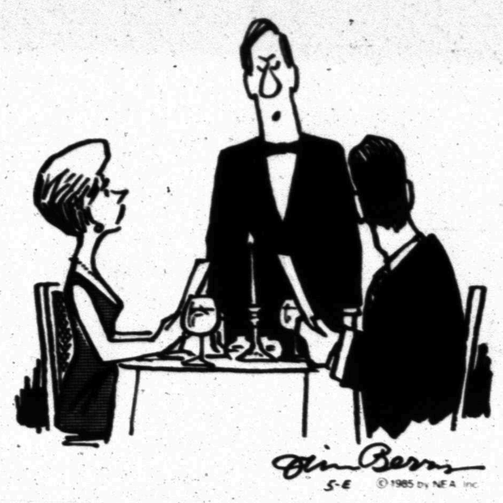

"Saltwater encroachment may occur in coastal areas because of large freshwater withdrawals," the report said.

Interior Secretary Donald Hodel was also present to introduce the report.

He said water is plentiful nationwide and that the federal government should leave management of underground water resources to the state and local governments.

The Texas Legislature has approved a $1.4 billion water package that must be approved by voters in a referendum. It includes a provision for voluntary local regulation of underground water.

School board to keep school open

MARFA, Texas (AP) — Rather than transport students more than 150 miles daily on a school bus through some of Texas' most mountainous territory, Marfa school trustees have announced they'll violate state regulations and keep an elementary school open in a small town on the Mexican border.

Because of a House Bill 72 requirement that a school must have at least one teacher per class, the Marfa school board voted in February to shut down the elementary school in Redford, which is 15 miles southeast of Presidio on the Rio Grande.

But that would have meant busing students 75 miles north to Marfa, and school trustees reconsidered and voted unanimously on May 14 to keep the school open after all, in spite of state regulations.

"We had time to think about it," Ann Rushton, vice president of the Marfa School Board, told the San Angelo Standard-Times.

"We had a lot of input from concerned citizens, and after considering it for a long, long time, we feel like we'll try it one more year. I have no idea about 1987."

The Redford elementary school has three classrooms and three teachers for 30 to 35 students in kindergarten through eighth grade.

"We were going to have some little bitty ones getting up early and coming home late. They would leave about 7 and get home about 5 or 6 in the afternoon. That's a long time for anyone to be away from home every day five days a week," Ms. Rushton said.

The school also could be in violation of a regulation that requires teachers to spend a given amount of time on particular subjects, Marfa superintendent Carl Robinson said. The three teachers currently must juggle time spent with each subject in each grade, he said.

Ms. Rushton said she did not know what disciplinary action, if any, the state will take against the school district and did not know what the school district will do if the state does act against the school district.

"I think that will be taken care of when it arises," she said. "We're having to educate children, and that's our main concern."

People living in Redford applauded the decision.

"It would have complicated my life," said Lucia Viramontes, who has two children in the school.

"My first reaction was, 'They're not going to bus my kids,'" she said.

"Would you want your kids bused a hundred miles every day to school? They wouldn't be able to study after getting up early and going through the trip in a bus without a heater and air conditioning. That's ridiculous," she said.

"There's very steep mountains on the way. It's dangerous in the winter," she added. "It was a ridiculous idea, I think."

Rosendo Evaro, parent of one child in the Redford School, said, "Imagine being 6 or 7 years old sleeping in the bus, getting headaches and vomiting. It would happen. In this heat, especially in the summer, it's a rough ride."

Wrong-tuned guitar caused voice strain

MERRILLVILLE, Ind. (AP) — A guitar tuned to the wrong key was blamed after singer John Denver strained his voice singing beyond his range at a concert.

Denver was performing Monday night at the Holiday Star Theater when a string broke on his guitar, said publicist Mark Stern.

"He reached for another guitar that was not properly tuned, sang the song in a different key that was out of his range and hurt himself," Stern said.

"I think he broke a blood vessel or something."

Denver, who was not hospitalized, was examined and told to take it easy for a few days, but Stern said he was uncertain whether Denver would be able to make a scheduled appearance today with Johnny Carson on the "Tonight Show."

Singer performs at women's prison

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Singer Ray Charles' soulful songs and shouts raised the spirits of a captive audience of about 1,400 inmates at a women's jail after the show was moved to an open field so that most of them could attend.

The women of the Sybil Brand Institute screamed and clapped to show their appreciation Tuesday as Charles belted out familiar hits like "Georgia" and "Hit the Road Jack."

Black votes for plan

AUSTIN (AP) — For Rep. Ron Givens, a legislative anomaly as a black Republican, the indigent health care proposal posed a possible benchmark vote.

Would he vote with the House's 13 other blacks, or with the Republicans who formed the core of opposition to the $70 million plan?

Democratic Rep. Jesse Oliver of Dallas, a black, sponsored the bill.

Republican Rep. Alan Schoolcraft of San Antonio led the floor fight against it Wednesday.

The House approved it 90-54. Givens voted with the blacks. His Lubbock district is 57 percent minority. It includes rich and poor.

"My constituency that would have to pay for the program knows that we have a problem. My constituency that needs the program, they know we have a problem," said Givens.

The extremes among his constituency made for many tough votes for the state's first black GOP lawmaker since Reconstruction.

"With that kind of district, with each vote you make someone unhappy. I get calls on each vote. When I vote for the issues for the poor, I get a call from the rich. When I vote for an issue on the rich, I get a call from the poor," he said as he sat in his back-row seat in the House.

"So I have to sit here and take all of this hot fire from both sides to push the philosophy of a minority in the Republican Party. That's what I came down here to do," said Givens.

The vote on the indigent health care program was not difficult, he added.
