GOVERNOR ESCAPES IN WRECK

Midland And Northwestern Fight Resumed

T. & P. PLEADS FOR EXPLANATION OF THE LAST RULING

ASKS SPECIFIC FINDINGS OVER JURISDICTION OF I. C. C. IN ARGUMENT

(By The Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, July 15.—The long "jurisdiction" controversy over proposed abandonment by the Texas and Pacific Railway of the Midland and Northwestern, a 45-mile line from Midland to Seminole, Texas, was handed back again today to the Interstate Commerce Commission. The commission has held on occasions that it had no jurisdiction and that the proposed abandonment and salvaging of the material was not an abandonment within the meaning of the transportation. In a motion filed today, the Texas and Pacific asked that "further findings and conclusions be stated in support and explanation of the decision."

Damage By Cotton Pest Slight; Flea Found In Dawson

There is damage being done to cotton in Lubbock County by some insect, according to County Agent Eaton, and from all indications, it is the work of the "cotton hopper" or flea, which has been doing much damage in Central and South Texas. However, the damage is not yet thought to be alarmingly over, and if the crops are watched closely in order to catch the first trace of work done by the hoppers, there is at present no cause for fear.

Mr. Eaton has not received word from the State department of Agriculture in regard to his joint investigations with them; but he is watching the situation closely.

There are several vicinities in the county which show the depredations of the fleas, without a doubt; especially in a section just east of Lubbock, a few miles. Yet north and east of Lubbock, there is no trace of their work. This widely scattered location of the damage follows closely the history of the flea, and lends strength to the theory that it is this pest at work. Meanwhile, preparations should be made by the farmers to begin the fight on them at any time the hoppers appear, since they are doing extensive damage as far north and east as the country surrounding Vernon.

Even closer home is the damage being done in Dawson County by what has been positively identified as the hopper. It is not known just to what extent the cotton has been injured, but the insect is very plentiful there, and extensive infestation of fields.

Fund Shortage Halts Goode Reward Payment

AUSTIN, July 15. (AP)—Depletion of the law enforcement fund is the reason given by Governor Miriam A. Ferguson to E. B. Spiller, of the Texas Cattle Raisers association for temporary inability of the State to pay a reward of $300 for the capture of Milt Good, R. E. Franklow, one of the Governor's secretaries, said today. The money probably will be available in September.

Good, serving a long term for the killing of two government cattle inspectors, escaped last Fall from the penitentiary at Huntsville. DOCTOR AND WIFE HELD IN DEATH OF GIRL AT BOSTON

ILLEGAL OPERATION IS CHARGED AFTER BODY FOUND MUTILATED

(By The Associated Press)
BOSTON, July 15.—Warrants charging murder were issued today for Dr. Thomas E. Walsh and his wife who were alleged to have performed an illegal operation on Miss Edith L. Greene, state ward, whose dismembered body was found yesterday.

James V. Ford, a 21-year-old shipping clerk, was arrested after he assumed blame for the condition of Miss Greene.

Ford said he had taken the girl to the doctor. He received an urgent call from the physician on Sunday, he said, and upon reaching his office found the girl dead. He said he refused to assist in the disposition of the body which was subsequently discovered near a cemetery wall.

The police last night raided the office of the physician in the South end but both he and his wife had disappeared. Ford, sweetheart of the dead girl, told police that he took her to Dr. Walsh last Friday and that the physician told him on Sunday she had died after an operation. Police said they would prefer charges as accessory against Ford.

Dr. Walsh is well known to the police. He has been convicted of practicing without a license and has been arrested on other charges. In May 1912, he was held for a time as a suspicious person with an abortion case, and in 1918, after he had been indicted for an alleged illegal operation, his case was placed on file and he was not prosecuted. A little later he was found not guilty of violation of the narcotic law. In September, 1912, following a complaint by the State Board of Registration in Medicine that Walsh was holding himself out as a practicing physician without a license, he was convicted and fined $200.

Campaign Expenses For Ferguson And Davidson Given Out As Candidates Go On With Race In Southern Part Of State

Seaman's Death Recalls SHIP WRECK IS RECALLED

Gripping Epic of Sea

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., July 15. (AP)—"Captain" Fred Clough, 80, died yesterday in a humble lodging house on Kearney Street and his passing recalled another gripping epic of the sea.

Sixty years ago the "Captain" was a sailor on board the clipper ship Hornet, in the California gold trade. On the ship was Henry Ferguson, Bible student. The Hornet caught fire in the South Pacific and was burned to the water's edge. The crew took to the small boats. All were lost but the 16 who were in Clough's boat. Ferguson was among the saved.

For 43 days they drifted. Their food and water gave out. Some of them died, half mad, and their bodies were eaten by the survivors. A sail was spread to catch the water from the sudden tropic storms. Ferguson sickened and died rapidly. Clough, horny-backed sailorman, piloted the diving men's head in his last and eat with him through the long days and nights, while he himself fairly burned up with thirst.

Clough brought Ferguson through while the others died about them. They finally drifted onto an island in the Hawaiian group. Mac Twain, who was visiting on the islands at the time, heard of them and sought out Clough to hear his story. From it Twain made one of his famous yarns. Ferguson died a few days later as a result of exposure, but a brother of the student, a noted preacher in Maine, heard of Clough's sacrifice and made out an annuity of $100 to him, which he enjoyed to the end.

Men said to be hired by Griffing remained on the outside of the house to seize the property the minute an opportunity presents itself.

WHAT'S SECRET OF LONG LIFE? EIGHT PEOPLE NEAR OR OVER CENTURY MARK, CAN'T AGREE

Living to a ripe old age isn't a matter of diet, exercise, outdoor life or anything like that; you just sort of have to hang on.

Here, gathered at random, are likenesses of eight oldsters from this country, all of whom have attained distinction by living close to or past 100 years. And no two of them agree on the recipe!

Maj. S. Willard Sexton, of Washington, D. C., who is 96 years old, smiles a faint smile when asked how he stays fit.

"It's hard to tell," he says, "But I don't fatal abstemiousness. I've always like my today—moderate, but regular."

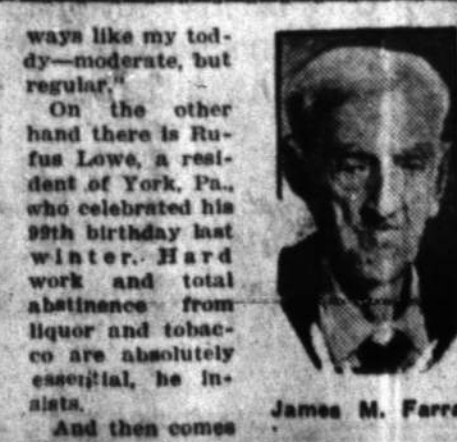

On the other hand there is Rufus Lowe, a resident of York, Pa., who celebrated his 93rd birthday last winter. Hard work and total abstinence from liquor and tobacco are absolutely essential, he insists.

James Madison Farrar, aged 103 by actual count, who lives in Birmingham, Ala. He declares that corn whiskey and corn-cakes will make any man live longer.

The secret of good living is contentment," he says. "And liquor—if it's good liquor—and tobacco."

IS HOUSEWORK FAL-DE-ROL?

I would not have believed it if I had not read it with my own eyes. Said she: "Housework is more disagreeable than any other occupation—It is a hard destiny, an exhausting treadmill. Love of housework is not inherent in femininity. Women inherit tastes and talents from their fathers as well as from their mothers. I wonder who it was that made housework the complex, silly, insane thing it is!"

And she added: "Women have gone on for centuries waiting strength on fal-de-rol and the complexity of housekeeping grows more and more simple."

Her argument is not all wrong, of course. Housework is not particularly pleasant.

But I am afraid that she is unforgotten or she would not mention the complexity of present-day housekeeping in the same breath with the day-light-vision, wood-chopping, spinning, milking, butter-making, preserving, quilting, dress-making, lamp cleaning, and carpet weaving days of our grandmothers.

It is more than a matter of words to make over housekeeping. As long as there are mouths to feed, babies to bear, bodies to clothe, and families to bring up, I am afraid there is nobody but the woman to see about it. And it isn't going to comfort the millions of women who have to do it, with or without help, to be told that it is fal-de-rol.

Work has been simplified some by labor-saving inventions, but the responsibility of the home cannot change. By every law of nature it is woman's duty to look after the home. If a special providence releases her, then may "father's talents" have full play!

Vegetable Buying Has Become Housewife's Big Problem

When we go to market and particularly a roadside market, we sometimes wonder how much to buy. Or when our grocer tells us peas are so much a pound, we wonder how many pounds it will take to serve our family.

And when we buy for canning with the sole idea of economy, if we have no idea how many cans we should get from a bushel we sometimes find our endeavor pure extravagance.

Perhaps these calculations will help you, but you must remember that the condition of any produce you are buying is a large factor in determining how much the material will yield when cooked.

One pound of green or "string" beans measures approximately one quart and yields about 2½ cups of cooked beans. This will serve 5 persons.

Two pounds of green peas in the pod measure about 2 quarts. After shelling there will be about 2½ cups. This amount will serve 3 or 4 persons, depending somewhat on the manner in which they are prepared. If the peas are cooked dry and buttered, only 2 persons can be served, but if milk or cream is added 4 can be taken care of.

One pound of clean, tender spinach will serve 4. Market men figure that a bushel of spinach weighs from 15 to 20 pounds, with a good average of 18. If you are canning spinach it will take about 14 pounds of spinach to make a pint can.

Baby beets vary greatly in size, but it's safe to calculate on 12 serving 4 persons. It will take from 12 to 15 to make two cups or fill a pint can.

The average "bunch" of new carrots will serve 4 or 5 persons.

Four small ears of corn, such as "golden bantam," will cut to make 2 cups or one pint can. A large variety needs only 3 and sometimes fewer ears to make a pint can of corn.

There are 3 medium sized potatoes in one pound. This will make about 2 cups of mashed potato. One bushel of potatoes weighs 40 pounds.

Four rather small tomatoes weigh about 1 pound. A bushel of tomatoes will give about 18 quarts or 36 pints of canned tomatoes.

One bushel of peaches will yield about 18 quart cans.

These are all averages, of course, but may give you some sort of a working basis from which to reckon.

GEORGIA OPENS PROBE AS BANKS BEGIN TO CLOSE

BANKERS TRUST COMPANY BLAMED FOR MAJORITY OF CLOSINGS

(By Associated Press)

ATLANTA, Ga., July 15.—The Georgia State Banking department today continued investigation into the affairs of 48 financial institutions which have closed their doors since Monday.

At the same time, Federal Judge Samuel H. Sibley heard a petition for Bankers Trust company, operating company for 120 state banks, for which a temporary receivership was named in county court here yesterday.

The embarrassment of the Bankers Trust company was blamed by the banking department for the majority of the closings this week. The department emphasized that the closings were not due to local conditions and did not indicate any unsoundness or lack of stability of banks in the state.

Commenting on the affairs of the Bankers Trust company for which a receivership was asked by the Bank of America, Fla., the department declared that it had been advised that the condition was brought about by the failure of several banks in Florida.

with which the corporation was connected, rendering it unable to finance the Georgia banks, for which it acted as fiscal agent.

The bank of America alleged that the Bankers Trust company obtained $491,500 from it to be placed on investment. It claimed the money had been distributed among the Florida financing companies to finance banks in Florida and among Georgia banks for the corporation and to one bank not a member of the chain.

The petition charged that $23,000 of the money was retained by the Bankers Trust company for its own use and that only $76,000 of the loans has been paid. It declared the corporation.

Cincinnati and St. Louis continue to surprise in the National League.

With the season half over, these two clubs are showing the way in the senior organization.

What makes the play of the Reds and Cardinals all the more surprising is the fact that both have labored under severe handicaps since the opening of the season.

It has been baseball precedent, more or less, that a club with a rookie at the all-important position of shortstop, could not be given serious consideration as a pennant contender.

Cincinnati has been up against that proposition. A recruit, Frank Rimmer, has held down shortstop, but the club is out of front.

On the other hand, the St. Louis Cardinals have kept within striking distance of the leaders, even though the two outstanding batters of the club, Rogers Hornsby and Jim Bottomley, have been way below form all season.

If these two great hitters get going, keep your eye on the Cardinals. Their work during the last two weeks makes it seem as if they were on the way.

Decided changes have been announced in the program governing the National amateur golf championship to be held in September.

The changes are for the better and prove that the governing body is willing to listen to reason.

For the first time, a seeded draw will prevail. Incidentally, the number of qualifiers has been increased to 32, the old quota, instead of 16, as was the case last season.

In an effort to make the field less unwieldy, the number of qualifiers was cut to 16 last year. It so happened that quite a few of the stars failed to make the grade because of tough breaks, thereby immediately removing much of the interest in the event.

However, going to the seeded draw that has for years been the rule in tennis tournament play is even more important. It is sure to make for sustained interest to the very end.

Instead of Bobby Jones and Jess Sweetser meeting in the first or second round and one of them being eliminated, they will clash near the close of the event, provided they play their game.

If the Yankees had run true to the form the experts predicted this spring, the American League would now have a great race on its hands.

The Yanks proceeded to upset the dope by losing the remaining series of 16 out of 18 games, and by playing 500 ball the rest of the time, have retained the advantage gained by the two strikes of success.

Thus far it has been a race for second place with the Yanks so far out in front. The closeness of the battle for the place position is also the result of form reversal.

Washington, the pennant-winner of last year and Philadelphia, the runner-up, have come back to the rest of the field. Instead of playing up to form, both have slipped considerably from their showing of last season.

Detroit has also faltered a trifle, while Chicago and Cleveland have about run true to form.

The chart of past performances has meant nothing so far in the 1926 pennant race in the American League.

YANKEES RALLY IN LAST FRAME TO BEAT TIGERS

SCORE FIVE IN NINTH TO THE GAME THEN WIN IN TWELFTH

(By the Associated Press)

The New York Yankees are having a reaction from late inning failures which have cost them many a game this season.

They went into the ninth inning against Detroit yesterday five runs behind and two men out, speedily, the great Ruth striking out. Then his bench to appear and the game was tied, 6 and 6. The teams fought for three more innings before Gehrig sent forth a triple which scored Ruth with the winning run.

Chicago gained a 10 to 2 decision over Washington. The other teams in the circuit were rained out. Clevelask and Morrell gave up 13 hits to the White Sox. The New York Giants gained ground in the National by beating Pittsburgh twice, 12 to 8 and 5 to 2. They were outslugged in the opening encounter, the Pirates piling up sixteen safeties to 13 for the opposition, but four of the world champion runs came in a futile ninth inning effort.

Pittsburgh announces that Eddie Moore, infielder, had been fined $100 and Emil Yde, left-handed pitcher, $50, for indifferent playing in the games with the Giants.

Cincinnati added a game and a half to its lead through Carl Mays' 5 to 1 verdict over the heavy-hitting Phillies. The Boston Braves scored four times in the opening inning and won 6 to 4, although Benton was hit hard.

Dean McWeeny, pitching strongly except in the sixth, when two runs scored, accounted for Brooklyn's victory over the St. Louis Cardinals, 5 to 2. Southworth of the Cardinals hit a home run.

MR. AND MRS. J. B. SHELLY, OF McCleary, Fisher county, were in Lubbock this morning for medical treatment for their infant child.

KIWANIS AND ROTARIANS ARE READY FOR TILT

LAST MINUTE CHANGES IN LINEUP ANNOUNCED; UMPIRES NAMED

With both teams displaying a "do or die" spirit, and the arbitration talents of J. B. (Red) Hamilton and Chester (Whitten-Up) Shepard assured, the baseball teams representing the Kiwanis and Rotary clubs were set to "tear off" at four-thirty this afternoon at Merrill park, in their annual "Comedy of Errors."

Last minute changes of line-ups were the feature of today's activities and when the bell rings to open the initial round, the positions will have been diagnosed as follows:

Kiwanis—Herb Stubbs, pitcher; Edgar Ivey Hall, catcher; I. F. Holman, first base; Amos Howard, second base; Frank Pierce Jones, short stop; Norton Baker, third base; "Casey" Stangel, Kenneth Klapp and George Brewer, outfielders.

Rotary—"Big Un" Freeland, pitcher; Benny Hilburn, catcher; Fletcher M. (Sled) Allen, first base; Charles Guy, second base; "Judge" Riley, short stop; Homer Grant, third base; Oscar Seabach, Edgar Imman and Harry Roberts, outfielders.

The game is expected to go at least five innings before anyone is exhausted. The winner of today's tilt will meet the Exchange club entry for the civic club championship of the city at a later date.

DIAMOND DISPUTES DECIDED

By BILLY EVANS

Catcher in throwing to second in an effort to get a runner stealing, comes into contact with the umpire. The throw is wild, the ball going to right field. Runner continues on his way and is retired at the plate trying to score from first. What about it?

This is one of the few plays where the ball becomes dead because of an act of the umpire in interfering with the play.

The moment the catcher came into contact with the umpire as he started to throw to second, play should have immediately been suspended.

No consideration should be given the wild throw that resulted or the fact that the runner was ultimately retired at the plate on his way.

The runner should merely have been sent back to first, his original base.

WEIGHTS GIVEN

NEW YORK, July 15. (AP)—Paul Berlenbach, champion, weighs 174 1-4 and Jack Delaney, challenger, 168 1-4 for their 15-round light heavyweight title contest at Ebbetts Field tonight.

The NUT CRACKER

by Joe Williams

Dope on two big league races has taken on esthetic aspect of Joe Beck's law. It is taking an awful mauling around.

The Pirates in the National figured to spread eagle the field like a dough-boy's marching boot overshadowing a sidewalk ant. It was to be a parade. It has developed into a panic.

A year ago the high-faloots in the press coop were acclaiming the Pirates as greatest ball club since Connie Mack's celebrated Athletics. Everybody said they'd still be winning championships long after Abbe's Irish Geranium had been forgotten.

It was proper and pert to compare them to Connie Mack's Athletics, but the suspicion is growing that the boys got mixed up in their years.

There wasn't much difference between the A's of 1912 and the A's of 1916. Not any more than there was between the bank balance in June of your friend Mr. Ponzi and your friend Mr. Ford. (Oh, call him your friend, anyway.)

And look at the Yanks up there on top in the American League like the smallest jay in a head-balancing act! Seventh last year and first this. Is that doing right by our little Nell? Answer us them, Maggie, dear.

Three clubs were picked to make the race in the American, the Athletics, Washington and White Sox. They are fulfilling the race comical for Miller Huggins and his gang.

A number of otherwise normal persons have devoted the worst part of the year to explaining bolsterous resurrection of the Yanks who finished the 1925 travesty with about as much life as a stuffed moose head.

There are three reasons why they are out in front like the tip end of Abbe's better. (1) Babe Ruth, (2) George Herman Ruth, (3) The Bambino. Otherwise, the entire situation is all cluttered up with confusing debris.

The ancient Mr. Mack is enjoying his usual summer of bitter disappointments. It seems that he's destined always to be an usher but never a groom.

Washington has folded up like a pair of rubber crutches, and the old town once more is just a place where visitors can be amused, either by visiting the zoo or Congress.

Even John McGraw, master mind, has nothing to say in the season's hurly burly. And when John has nothing to say it seems absurd for us to keep on trying to say something.

HELPFUL HINTS By GOLFING STARS

PHIL J. GAUDIN Clubs Must Fit

Clubs should be fitted to the golf player with as much care as a suit of clothes is fitted by a tailor. An ill-fitting dress suit is no more out of place than an ill-fitting set of clubs. One might rent the dress suit and consequently be able to return it. An ill-fitting set of clubs is an absolute bar to material improvement in one's game.

The professional or golf supply store should be able to fit the player with the proper clubs. In the beginning, this is important—the prospective player will be properly advised to buy one club at a time, beginning with a mashie, or perhaps a putter. With the mashie as a measuring tape, it is possible to add exactly the right clubs as fast as they are needed.

A difference of a half-inch in length of shaft or a half-ounce in weight is a very important matter in the choice of clubs; equally important with choosing clubs of the right lie to fit the player, or the right whippiness of shaft.

BERLENBACH WILL DEFEND TITLE TONIGHT

NEW YORK, July 15. (AP)—The light heavyweight champion of the world will defend his crown tonight against the men many think should wear it. Paul Berlenbach, of New York, product of amateur wrestling, is the champion. Jack Delaney of Bridgeport, Conn., who once flattened Berlenbach in four rounds, is the challenger. Fully 50,000 persons are expected at Ebbetts to see the encounter which is scheduled for 15 rounds, although few expect it to go that distance. The financial returns will approximate half a million dollars.

Delaney is the favorite in betting by a bout six to five, which very likely will become even money at ring time. Some Wall Street brokerage offices have reported bets at one to three that Delaney will win by a knockout.

A rugged, unrelenting attack, featured by a terrific left hand, is the offering of the champion, while his opponent—despised with the right drive and with an improved left—is expected to stand off for a time, protecting himself by his cleverness of foot. Delaney will be awaiting the opportunity he found a year ago last winter the first opening in the champion's defense, to send that right home.

WATCH THAT BOY

That boy of yours—do you know what he does with his spare time? Do you know who his companions are, what he does when he goes out at night and what his natural trend of thought is in regard to right and wrong?

If you don't know these things you had better look into them now—before it's too late.

Wednesday afternoon four youngsters, all of them between the ages of 12 and 15, sat in juvenile court here before County Judge Charles Nordyke. These boys—none of them criminals, but all of them just ordinary American boys on the wrong track—were charged with the "borrowing" of nine automobiles and a number of petty burglaries. For a time it looked like the reformatory would open its gates and gobble up the balance of their boyhood.

County Judge Nordyke, a friend to all boys, with the consent of their parents, decided that a week of penance in the Lubbock county jail would straighten them out and may it be said to the credit of the parents of these boys that they were willing and anxious that the best step for the boys' futures be taken. Yet even if the light sentence does straighten them out, does return them again to the right track in life—can't it too bad that the youthful memories of those boys will be marred by that week of penance when a little guidance at home and at the proper time would have saved them the harrowing experience?

The parents of those boys, by their cooperation with Judge Nordyke, have shown that they realize that they have not kept in the proper touch with their children. If you could talk to them, privately, face to face, they'd tell you as much—they'd advise that you start now to keep that boy of yours on the right path. It's merely another case of "A stitch in time." Don't sit complacently back and say that your boy "won't get into trouble because he's not that kind of a boy" when you don't give him the proper care and guidance. All boys, fundamentally, are alike—the parental care and correction which keeps them in line and saves them the humiliation and grief which is almost certain to follow neglect.

In the bosom of every boy there beats—and beats strongly—an almost unquenching desire to be a man—a real man. There is nothing in the world more wonderful, more absorbing, more entrancing than the natural mechanism of a boy—the material from which a real man can and should be made.

Do your part now to make a man out of that boy. He may resent your correction and your discipline now but he'll thank you and God Almighty when he's past the danger stage and has made what his Creator intended him to be—a real man in every sense that the word implies.

JOHN D. AND HAPPINESS

On July 4, John D. Rockefeller, a little old man in Tarrytown, N. Y., passed his 87th milestone.

Rockefeller has made millions. He has known the struggle of poverty, the thrill of success, and has watched his money mount into uncounted piles.

But he has a human chord in him that responds quickly to the touch of progress or of need. The same hand that gives little children shiny dimes also has passed out $600,000,000 in donations to help make a better world.

Rockefeller has moved some of his mountains of gold to the task of increasing human knowledge about food supply, clothing, shelter, sanitation, public health, commerce and manufacture.

He has given part of his millions to help the onward march of government and law so that the hand of justice may reach farther. He has set aside sums for advancing language and literature, science and philosophy, art and refinement, morality and religion.

The Rockefeller Foundation, the Laura Spelman Rockefeller Fund and his various medical gifts offer a way to people to attain higher happiness in life. The basis of his charity is: Progress toward happiness. He has held out to the world a chance for better things. The people must help themselves to realize it.

Hal Cochran's Daily Poem

SWIMMIN' HOLE

Hey, Jimmy! Hey, Johnny! Come on, let's all go. Aw, gee, get a move on, an' don't be so slow. Jes' grab up your trunks, an' come trailin' along. Yea, those are the words to the swimmin' hole song.

It's down at the bend of a creek. Sakes alive, you'd marvel to see all the neighbor kids dive. They gather at noonday, and his for a swim, an' hang up their clothes on a hickory limb.

A dozen loud splashes, and fun starts away—an' that's why their mothers can't find 'em all day. They dive from the bank—an' the bank's kinda steep. They hold up one hand when they're shoutin', "So deep!"

A grown-up may pass, just to watch them—and then, he wishes that he, too, were young once again. I'll bet, among men folk, there isn't a soul, who never has long for the ol' swimmin' hole.

IN NEW YORK SEE SAWING UP and down BROADWAY

NEW YORK, July 15.—The business of "turning night-time into daytime" has overlapped the bounds of the joy palaces.

Just across the street from Grand Central station there now blazes an electrical sign on a shoe store reading: "Open all night."

A brisk all-night trade is enjoyed, the manager informs me. Many of the customers are new arrivals in Manhattan who, brushing the dust of the middle west from their shoes, decide to change to eastern styles. They notice the sign, glance in the window and go to their hotels with shoes in the "New York manner."

Among other customers, I was told, are men who decide at a late hour to "step out." They decide to get a pair of dance pumps or other dress shoes, rather than spend considerable time going back home for them.

It's the very early morning buyers that puzzle the manager. He admits he doesn't know where they come from or why they choose the hour of 4 o'clock in the morning, or thereabouts, to make a purchase.

Speaking of shoes, the summer styles for men seem particularly effeminate and those for women strikingly masculine.

Suede and cloth shoes in various shades of brown are to be seen everywhere along the avenue and on gents with all the earmarks of "he-men." While very mannish looking "sport shoes" of interlaced leather appear in the most fashionable shops for milady.

And while on the subject of masculine styles: the announcements from London that dinner jackets had been banned in favor of the good old "swallowtail" may have caused considerable consternation in upper New York, but it found the East Side all prepared.

The patriarchal Hebrews, ward politicians of Irish and Italian descent and other dignitaries of many lands have stubbornly refused to give up the swallowtail coat. Let fashions change, they have appeared in swallowtails on the slightest provocation.

And now, by virtue of London dictate, they will be months ahead of their "well" brothers of the up town club belt.

JUST A LITTLE

They thought he had a collar on. Of black—but no, by heck. 'Twas only where the kid left off. When scrubbing up his neck.

TOO MUCH CREDIT?

A prominent farmer in Missouri fails to the extent of $100,000 to $150,000, and involves two banks, two commission houses, a clergyman relative and many neighbors and friends.

"Too much credit and the irresistible fascination of trading in futures," were the self-advanced reasons he gave.

The system of trading in grain futures can hardly be blamed for his failure, nor can easy credit. If the futures were abolished, a man could always find a poker game or a Monte Carlo if he wished to exercise his gambling tendencies. And let us not rail at easy credit for it is an ideal of trust and faith that is commendable.

The sad fact is that the man has played and lost, with his own money and with other people's.

Stewart's WASHINGTON LETTER

NOW THE STAR OF LOWDEN RISES AS THE NEXT NOMINEE FOR THE PRESIDENCY

By CHARLES P. STEWART, NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON, July 15.—Frank O. Lowden of Illinois was a caller at the White House not so very long ago. He went in through the executive offices.

There always are a good many politicians, packed there and Lowden knows numerous politicians.

Consequently, as soon as he appeared in the doorway, a score or more of those in attendance recognized him. Jumped up and clustered around him, shaking his hand, slapping him on the back and saying how d'ye do to him, and it obstructed traffic somewhat.

Suddenly, from outside, was heard the voice of somebody who was trying to get in but couldn't. "Who'd have thought that Frank O. Lowden would be so low to enter the White House?"

It may safely be predicted that he wouldn't be—so enter it as a tenant. Moreover, Lowden is being increasingly talked about at the capital as the next Republican presidential nominee.

Hardly six months ago hardly a whisper was to be heard of any name but that of President Coolidge for a renomination. It was accepted as a foregone conclusion that he could have it if he wanted, and few doubted, or doubt yet, that he will want it.

But today there is no such general agreement that he can have it.

The consensus of up-to-date opinion is that the presidential candidate who can win in 1928 must be a candidate acceptable to the mid-western farmers, and plenty of politicians are to be found in Washington now who believe Coolidge has antagonized them hopelessly, through sheer lack of understanding of their problems.

Vice President Charles G. Dawes is a convert to this view.

He proved it by coming out as openly as he did in favor of agricultural relief legislation which the farmers demanded, but which Secretary of the Treasury Mellon and the president denounced as "economically unsound."

Senator James E. Watson of Indiana is another convert. He proved it when he ran for a Senate renomination, in Indiana, and won, on a platform advocating just such farm legislation as Dawes advocates and as Mellon and Coolidge denounce.

But Dawes and Watson do not subscribe to the theory that Lowden is necessarily the only, or even the ideal, Republican presidential farm candidate.

As Dawes sees it, Dawes is the ideal nominee.

As Watson sees it, it's Watson. Neither has made any such formal announcement, but, even made it informally. But actions speak louder than words.

Nobody in Washington doubts that Dawes and Watson are extremely receptive candidates. On a ballot at the capital, however, there is little question that Lowden would prove to be regarded as the best bet of the three.

Dawes is a banker and the very word is anathema to the mortgaged farmer.

Watson, a lawyer, is agricultural only theoretically.

Lowden, as a practical, highly scientific farmer, really has done a great deal for agriculture and his fellow farmers know it. At the same time, an all-around man of affairs, he understands urban problems, and, like Coolidge, he knows the whole United States and not merely a section of it.

Chuckie Awhile

Curious.

It was a hot Sunday in May, in a little room on hard, wooden benches sat forty wiggling little humans. The hot sun poured through the windows, the teacher's inexperience added to her heat.

The lesson was the separation of the sheep from the goats. Calling on her imagination the teacher described vividly the wonders of Heaven and the horrors of hell. Ruth, aged four, on the front bench, listened enrapt, her eyes growing larger and larger.

"Ruth," ended the teacher, "where would you rather go, to Heaven or to hell?"

"I'd like to see both places," replied Ruth. Teacher, hastily: "We will now sing a hymn."—Pennac News.

So To Speak.

Bi-hop Warren of the Methodist Episcopal church does not believe in gentle preaching to the sinners. He says there are some pastors who go at it in this style. "Brethren, you must repent, as it were, and be converted, in a measure, or you will be damned, to some extent."

Ritualistic.

Mary Lou was familiar with many games at kindergarten, but church was a new experience. It was a ritualistic church and high at that. She looked deeply interested while the congregation went through the service standing, sitting, kneeling, and rising repeatedly. Then she decided to join in the game. The next time they knelt she popped on her knees in a flash and called out: "The last one down is a little nigger baby."—Harper's.

Helpful Health Hints

By DR. HUGH S. CUMMING

Director, General U. S. Public Health Survey

THE WAR ON TYPHOID

The application of such measures as improved methods in diagnosis and treatment, better reporting of disease, isolation, immunization, quarantine and disinfection, has very materially lowered the incidence of many of our communicable diseases.

Improved sanitary and living conditions, including better homes, and safer food and drink, a better and more abundant food supply, have had their share in disease prevention and health conservation.

Cutting The Rate.

As striking examples of how the death rates from certain of our communicable diseases have been lowered, see the chart herewith, showing the decrease in the death rate in the United States from typhoid fever, as reported in the original registration area from the year 1900 to 1923, inclusive. The figures represent the deaths per hundred thousand population. Figures for 1924 and 1925 were not available when this chart was made, but, while the rate for 1924 was practically the same as 1923, the rate rose somewhat in 1925, due, probably, in some measure to the fact that some of our departments of health did not have sufficient funds to prosecute their work properly.

Overcoming Obstacles.

At the beginning of the present century, the control of typhoid fever seemed almost as hopeless as does the control of influenza at the present time. The application of measures for the purification of water and milk supplies, the exercise of vigilance in protecting our foodstuffs, with prompt recognition and treatment of cases and carriers and, to some extent, vaccination against this disease, have together given a most striking object lesson of the results of intelligent effort applied to the protection of the public health.

QUEER QUIRKS OF NATURE

MR. CHICKAREE MAKES GOOD USE OF HIS TIME

By ARTHUR N. PACK, President, The American Nature Association.

"The mocking bird among the squirrels," was old John Muir called this spry of the pines and spruces, who lives in one form or another from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and from the tall conifers of Arizona north to dwarfed ones of northern Alaska.

In the wilderness and about the settlements alike he is at home, usually seeking only that some cone-bearing be abundant, and even in some localities being content among the oaks and hazels.

The normal home of chickadee is built on the strong limb of a forest tree, usually a conifer. If there be cedars about, their tough stripy bark is preferred to any other material, but the shredded bark of grapevines and other runners, grass, or any convenient medium will serve.

With it he builds a mound some times as big as a bushel basket, and in the center of this is his real nest, warm and snug, with a water-proof roof over it and a tiny door in the side just the right size.

We have intimated that the seeds of pine or spruce form chickadee's food, and unlike most squirrels he stores great hoards against the time of winter. Few there be who have seen a red squirrel cutting away his time.

Cones are cut in great numbers from the dizzy heights, and when he is tired of cutting he comes down and gathers them, storing them in piles beneath old logs or about the holes of the trees.

STYLES IN HOBOS

From no less a personage than J. Edna How, millionaire hobo and famous spokesman of the vagrant, comes the interesting information that the bo, who formerly traveled by "slide-door pullman" or legged it, now tours the country in his own second-hand automobile or depends on the generosity of motorists and truck drivers. Yesterday they stole rides on the rods. Today they "borrow" motor passage. The "motor bum" has another characteristic distinguishing him from his prototype. Whereas the pre-war hobo worked only under compulsion, made his bed in the haymow or under a tree and dined at hospitable backdoors, the modern variety takes a temporary job when the gasoline runs low, sleeps in his flivver and begs for food only when the savings from the last job are exhausted and the next job is unexpectedly delayed.—Coriandana San.

There are undoubtedly some of us, perhaps a large number of us, who have no use for the hobo. We may be of the opinion that every man ought to get him a job, settle down and tend to his business and not bum about the country, working a day here or not working at all but begging enough to eat. We may have no patience with the habitual bum, who does not help any community and merely travels about the country. On the other hand, there is probably some among us who at one time or another in his life has not felt the call of the wanderlust; a desire, oftentimes a very strong desire, to pull up and just meander over the country with no certain place to go and nothing in particular to do; just go to be going and there would be none to tell you where to go or what you were to do. You would be traveling around, just to be fulfilling that wandering desire that you could not curb. But then most of us have no patience with the habitual hobo.—Abilene Reporter.

BEATING THE BUSHES

Now that the tickets have been made out and the candidates know their respective places thereon, until July 24th, these said office seekers will be beating the bushes and running for votes.

Of course, every one of them will have abundant proof to offer that he is better qualified than any other candidate seeking his particular office to fill that position sought, and, naturally, he will offer an endless argument to convince the voters of that fact.

There was a time when the average Littlefield voter took his politics far more seriously than he does now. When a candidate made certain claims or promises he believed it; when various forms of relief or improvement were promised, it was taken for granted that such would be forthcoming after a reasonable length of time such candidate got into office. Then, too, the franchise holders often voted regardless of promises—voted for a man simply because he happened to belong to a certain party, or because his father or before him had always voted that ticket.—Lamb County Leader.

JOHN and FAY MILBURN buy a home when their baby girl is born and the advertising agency in which John is partner and copy writer lands a new contract. Among their acquaintances are:

NOEL and VERA BOYD, whose marriage is strictly "modern."

PAT and MARIAN FORBES, who have three children and whose domestic life is unhappy because of Pat's roving tendencies. Previous chapters told how John was fascinated on meeting NELL ORME, of whom Forbes hints that she is having trouble with her husband.

Fay took JUDITH, the baby, to visit her parents in Houston, and during her absence John "ran around" a good deal. When Fay returned, gossip had related some of his actions and sharp quarrels followed, one of which drove John "out on a tear." Fay, learning he had been out with other women, threatened to leave him if it was repeated.

John finds that people are talking about him. NAT GRAHAM, his partner, charges his actions are damaging the firm's reputation. John later, by accident, meets Nell Orme at Vera Boyd's. He resolves not to see her again, realizing that she is carrying him off his feet, but he does, and the day comes when he takes her madly in his arms.

Fay, learning of it leaves John. He closes the house and takes an apartment.

PAUL DAVIDSON, a friend of John's surprises everyone with his sudden marriage to a woman of doubtful character.

John's chance to see Nat Graham at lunch with a member of a rival agency one day, and the next time Nat makes an allusion to his own bad habits, John lets fall a mysterious remark about some of Graham's actions being difficult to explain, too, and turns on his heel.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER LII

JOHN was not a little sorry that he had said what he had to Graham.

Paul, he thought, to be hinting about the ace he had up his sleeve. And yet he was a little disappointed that Nat had not pursued the thing further, had not demanded to know what John was hinting at.

The thought revolved in John's mind that he would like to buy Graham out and run the business himself. True, there were a lot of things about it he did not understand as well as Graham. Probably he would have a little rough shodding for a time, but still he could work tremendously hard at it and surely he could find some young man with sales ability to come in and help him.

He thought it would be for more pleasant without the censorious Graham and his continual complaining. But what chance did he have?

Supposing Nat were willing to sell out, how could he raise the money?

Surely, Graham would demand at least twenty thousand dollars for his share, and that was an impossible sum for John, saddled as he was with debt.

There was the house on his hands, he reflected. It was a virtual white elephant. And he had already eaten into the firm's reserve for an advance. And that idea he had of establishing his personal credit at the bank had gone up in smoke because of the quarrel with Blodgett. He had changed banks, of course, but at his new bank he was virtually a stranger and with his meager checking account hardly to be considered seriously in the matter of credit.

Perhaps, he thought, Nat would like to buy him out. Now, that would be more practical. Graham had saved his money, and doubtless could raise the required amount with no trouble at all.

But John refused to think of it any longer. There was something more than the work he had put in this business; it had grown to be a part of him.

Still, if Fay was going to go through with this thing, wouldn't it be better to forget and go off somewhere for a fresh start? It hurt him, the very thought of giving up the business he loved so much. What else did he have to cling to, now that everything else worth while had forsaken him?

There was a note one day from Nell Orme, a friendly little thing chiding him for his neglect of her and reminding him he shouldn't forget they were still friends.

He crumpled it up and threw it away, and didn't bother to answer it.

And for days afterward he kept telling himself that he hadn't acted that way. After all, Nell was not to blame if he found himself in this predicament, and he told himself, he still liked her—liked her tremendously. It was just that the flavor of it had gone, somehow, and the thing was no longer an adventure.

He was planning a layout one morning with Briggs when Paul Davidson, looking haggard as if from a long illness, came in and said hoarsely if John didn't mind he'd like to have him take lunch with him.

"Why certainly, Paul," and John as he grasped the other's hand and wrung it, felt sudden, biting pity for this poor friend of his.

What a change! Davidson's flippant, debonaire manner had gone entirely, and his shadowed blue eyes seemed to have sunk into his head.

Words rushed to John's lips, words of astonishment and concern and inquiry, but he checked them and said nothing other than to invite Paul to sit down and wait for him—"I'll only be a few minutes, Paul."

Paul was silent throughout most of the meal. If he had had it in his mind to say anything to John he must have thought better of it, or been afraid to come out with it.

"Why don't you look a fellow up?" John finally asked accusingly, and Davidson, puffing at his cigar, shrugged his shoulders in melancholy fashion and smiled—a smile so pitiful John thought that it sent sudden, darting pain through him. What a shame!

When Davidson had paid the check and was pushing back his chair, he paused to fix serious eyes on John. "Those who dance, you know, must pay the piper."

That was all, and John dared not ask the questions that were in his mind.

Together they made their way down the street, and when they had reached the Mercantile Bank building Davidson, glancing toward the windows of John's office, said mysteriously, "Graham and Milburn—well."

And then he suddenly confronted John and stuck out his hand.

"Thanks, John," he said, "for being decent enough not to ask any questions."

"Why Paul," John began in embarrassment, but the other silenced him. "No, no! Got to run along. Goodbye, old man, goodbye."

"Goodbye," John echoed after him. He stood for a short time, watching Davidson's figure, no longer swaggering, moving down the pavement, and he wondered why he felt so troubled in his mind about Paul, wondered at the vague premonition of tragedy that was intruding on his thoughts. "Goodbye," he was still whispering, half to himself.

The thing came as a surprise to nearly everyone else but John, and to him it explained something of the troubled fears he had felt over Davidson.

The papers came out with the story three days after they had lunch together. Paul had left town—had disappeared—and had left behind him a note to his wife saying that all his money and his automobile were here and their unborn baby's.

It was everything he had, the note went on, and he was sorry it wasn't more. But his bank books showed deposits of several thousand dollars and there was nearly ten thousand more in stocks and bonds.

"Don't worry about me," the note concluded. "Just forget me, for you'll never see me again. I'm awfully sorry."

Paul's wife had gone immediately to the police, and there was little of regret about her, so John afterward learned from one of his newspaper friends. "In fact," he told John, "he wanted to make sure that Davidson hadn't held anything back from her. What was behind it all, Milburn—is it true that he gave her his name?"

John nodded.

"Well, we've all got to admit that Davidson did the smart thing. Imagine leaving nearly fifteen thousand dollars with that cheap—"

he left the name unspoken. "I have given her the air and nothing more, if it had been me."

Alone in his room that night John felt a new loneliness.

"Neighbors' Wives"

New Paul was gone—Paul who, despite his liberal views on certain things and his contempt for conventions, was nevertheless, inherently so decent and so much the gentleman. Everything and everyone worth while, John told himself, was slipping away from him—nothing was left to him—nothing at all!

Of course, there was Dick Menefee, but he didn't want Dick's pity—didn't want anyone's.

And now John was to learn of some of the malicious gossip that followed in the wake of Davidson's strange disappearance. Partly because he himself had experienced the evil effects of this idle tongue wagging, and partly because of his own regard for Davidson, he felt called upon to repeat it whenever it reached him.

Noel Boyd, whom John hadn't seen in weeks and weeks—and hadn't particularly cared to see—encountered him on the street one day, and the first thing Boyd mentioned was the story about Paul.

"Couldn't stand the gaff, eh?" he laughed, and John found himself stifling. Why, he asked himself, did he shudder Noel Boyd so? He chose not to answer, and Boyd, his mouth distorted into that sneering smile of his, began to speak in a contemptuous manner of Davidson's "dramatization."

"A sucker—that's what he was. Well, he had it coming. He was always one of these birds who thought he knew it all. He got by with murder for a long time—eh?"

John felt that he would like nothing better than to smash the other and walk contemptuously away.

"Why don't you close your filthy mouth?" he cried in anger and exasperation. "If Paul did make a mistake once in a while, at least he did it like a gentleman. Let the man alone."

Boyd colored hotly and threw his head back with a sharp gesture. His fists doubled, his eyes, as they regarded the other, equaled until they nearly closed.

"It seemed for a moment that he would surely hit Milburn, but under John's contemptuous stare he evidently thought better of it; for suddenly he shrugged, and with a final hostile glance, turned abruptly away."

"I wish you had hit me, you dirty bug," John murmured, looking after him.

Nat Graham that afternoon kept looking at him with a half amused expression in his eyes, and toward five o'clock, squinted carefully over to John's desk and observed that it seemed as if another one of John's friends had disgraced himself.

Once again John had to restrain himself from striking out with his fist. He managed to fix Graham with a cold look and to keep his voice from rising as he said, "I've had to resent a statement like that once before today. But, and I'm quite ready to do it again."

His eyes never once left Graham's, and the other, not caring to arouse the wild fury that slumbered in this snooty partner of his, turned his back and found an excuse to leave the office.

And at night, alone again in his room. And he thought that he couldn't go on like this, forever carrying a chip on his shoulder and blaring out at people who irritated him.

"Oh, Fay," he groaned, "how could you do it?"

What was Fay doing at this very moment, as he sat, so dejected and forlorn, and tried to tear some comfort out of a strong pipe? Was she even then coolly contemplating her forthcoming divorce and her plans for the future? Didn't she miss him one little bit?

At that very moment, had he but known, Fay was alone in her room, and in her hands was a picture of John. Wistful tears were in her eyes as she studied it, and a half-strangled sob escaped her.

He could not know that Fay's heart was almost breaking, that his sin now seemed so insignificant as to be

Boy Scouts Of Lubbock Are Keeping Busy With Their Work, Reports From Various Troops Indicate This Week

TROOP 1
Troop one met at the high school Friday night at 8:00 p. m. First was the Scout oath. Frank Easley, who was in charge of the meeting gave several announcements from headquarters. Approximately sixteen, or more, will go to camp from our troop.

We planned to spend two nights at the C. W. Post Memorial Boy Scout camp next week. Frank Easley and Lennis Baker near joined the "boating commission" Friday night over a quarrel.

Harmon Jenkins and Bob Maxey Macey were late, and Billie Murray came in just as we dismissed.

FRANK MADDOX, JR., Troop reporter.

TROOP 3
Troop Three's usual Thursday night meeting was opened by pledging allegiance to the flag.

After inspection a few announcements were made followed by a short business session. We then had a drill practice. Following the drill practice a number of games were played which were interesting and amusing as usual.

The meeting was closed by singing "Taps."

CLARENCE WOODS, Troop reporter.

TROOP 4
"Always There"

Troop Four at its regular meeting last Friday night had a bow-drill contest and a baseball game in the second class requirements. Trent Campbell won the bow-drill and the Flying Eagle Patrol won the baseball game.

There was also an orange relay which netted the Raven Patrol an orange each.

Several members were given the knighthood for not wearing their shorts. Troop Four has adopted shorts for summer wear.

We had three visitors with us at our last meeting. They were Mr. Crenshaw and his twin sons which Mr. Clapp dubbed Ike and Mikey the minute he saw them. Mr. Crenshaw gave us a very enjoyable short talk on scouting and its benefits.

Mr. Clapp, Johnny Hopper, and Leland Mast went to Post Saturday morning to stay until about Tuesday. They will camp out at the new camp and go to church at Post Sunday.

Leland Mast has just returned from a visit to East Texas. Fort Worth, Dallas, and Naogoches and he told us a good deal about the scouting done in those towns. He visited relatives in Naogoches.

Woman and Child Are Murdered at Pawhuska

Apparently she had been dead for some time.

Officers are attempting to find the owner of a man's hat found near the body. In the hat band was part of a name of a Dallas newspaper to make it fit.

The woman was last seen, so far as could be learned, by relatives about 7:30 P. M. Tuesday.

Local Marine Bound For Pacific Island

PARRIS ISLAND, S. C., July 15.—After completing his preliminary training as a U. S. Marine, Samuel Lafayette King, of Lubbock, recently left this training camp for a tour of duty in Guam, a tiny tropical island far south in the Pacific. He will probably remain abroad for a year or longer before returning to the United States.

Samuel lived at the home of his father, Arthur A. King, State Route, Lubbock, before he joined the Marine Corps at Dallas, last March. For some time the local boy was stationed at the South Carolina camp, where he was taught the drills, customs, and duties of a marine. When a detail was organized here for duty in Guam, Samuel was one of the marines selected.

Guam was ceded to the United States shortly after the Spanish-American War. U. S. Marines are stationed there, guarding the naval base and living amid surroundings typical of the South Sea Isles. Supplies are furnished regularly, while moving pictures, athletic sports and entertainments help to vary the regular military routine.

SCOUTS PLAN FOR CAMP DESPITE FINANCES

Despite the fact that finances of the C. W. Post Memorial Boy Scout Camp Improvement fund have not reached the mark set by scout officials in charge of the camp, the camping program of the year will be carried out, according to word received from Scout Headquarters.

A careful investigation has been made, and it has been found that $2,500.00 is absolutely necessary to provide the bare necessities of providing for the two hundred fifty boys that are expected to be in the camp for the ten day period.

The date for the camp has been set as August 7-17. Preparations are going forward now for making the camp ready for the boys at that time. The services of a large number of scout men from over West Texas have been secured for the ten days.

E. A. Moore, of Colorado, and Scott Barcus, of Sweetwater, will have charge of the boys' work in tracking, nature study, leather working, molding, and such. It is expected that Chief Red Eagle, who was a genuine favorite with the boys last year camp at Rudoso, N. M., will be present and have charge of the Indian ceremonies, which are a part of the daily program.

An experienced Scout Camp cook will be employed to handle the "eats" part of the camp.

Absentee Voting Under Way Today

Residents of the city who plan to leave Lubbock before the primaries, on July 24th, are privileged to vote their ballot for seven days, beginning today.

According to information received from the County Clerk's office, where such voting will be done, ballots may be cast beginning ten days before the election, and not less than three days before.

A number of people are planning to take advantage of this privilege.

CRAZED FOREIGNER SETS OUT TO KILL EMPLOYER AFTER LOSING JOB

(By Associated Press)

CHICAGO, July 15.—The blind quest for revenge by an immigrant of a year ago who had lost a thumb in a machine lathe was revealed here as the indirect cause of a recent triple slaying in Cicero.

Three persons shot to death in the West Side suburb early Monday were innocent victims of his search for retribution, by the confession of James Crucius alias Grantha, who was captured last night.

Crucius was arrested within a few blocks of the scene of the killings when he returned in search of a fourth and his intended victim.

The 21-year-old immigrant had marked a life of Sol Schwartz, son of the owner of the American Plange and Manufacturing company, Young Schwartz, he said, made him work at a defective lathe which four weeks ago severed the thumb from his left hand.

Shortly afterwards, Crucius said, he was discharged and unable to obtain employment because of his maimed hand. He plotted to kill Schwartz.

Foreseeing that he would need money for his defense, he settled on robbery to obtain funds.

He obtained an automatic pistol and last week in a West Side "dop house" met Tommy McWaine, 26, just in from Muskegon, Mich., and also destitute. They lattered together for a time and agreed to become partners in robbery.

First they robbed an insurance agent, next a woman and her escort, and then on Sunday night, Crucius said, they set out on another foray. They halted a taxicab, overpowered the chauffeur, took his uniform and trusted him with the chains.

Proceeding a block, they stopped to rob Marie Blang, 23, and Frederick Hein, her escort, who had just driven to Miss Blang's home from church. Hein made a gesture of protest and a fusillade of shots killed both. Then Ludwig Rose, the chauffeur, attempted to escape and was shot down as he fled up the street. Crucius and McWaine fled in the stolen cab and wrecked it when they crashed through a railroad crossing gate. Crucius escaping while McWaine was caught.

Last night a patrolman noticed a passer-by with a missing left thumb and arrested him. An hour later Crucius had made his incoherent confession.

R. E. OVERSTREET IS CONVALESCING AT HOME

R. E. Overstreet, State Director on the Board of the Texas Farm Bureau Cotton association, and candidate for Commissioner Precinct No. 1, in Lubbock county, is convalescing at his home here on 15th street after an attack of blood poisoning that for a time it was feared might cause the loss of his leg.

Mr. Overstreet was able to get some Wednesday for the first time since he was stricken with the poison July 1, and was able to be propped up in bed. The poison set in through his system following the removal of an ingrowing toe nail from the large toe on his right foot, and it was feared by physicians for a time that his foot and possibly his entire leg, might have to be removed to stop the spread of the poison. But this was averted, and Mr. Overstreet is now on the road to recovery unless further complications set in.

Stricken soon after his announcement for County Commissioner, Mr. Overstreet said today that he had been unable to make the campaign he had planned, and will probably be unable to leave his home before the first primary, July 24, and therefore would be forced to depend upon his friends for support during the remaining of his campaign.

MRS. HARLEN MOORE, PIERCE City, Mo., are visiting this week in the home of Mr. Moore's sister, Mrs. Clifford H. Parry, of the McElroy apartments.

WOMAN IS HELD AT SAN ANTONIO FOR MURDER

SAN ANTONIO, July 15. (AP)—A San Antonio woman was under $1,000 bond Thursday facing a technical charge of murder after the death of H. O. Downey, earlier in the day. Although remanded without bond when she was arrested on the murder charge, before Justice of the Peace Anton Adam, she was granted bail on appearance with Judge W. W. McCrory in the Ninety-Fourth District Court.

Her arrest followed an investigation into the shooting of Downey at his lodge at Medina Lake Tuesday night. "It was accidental," Downey said before he lapsed into unconsciousness.

Mrs. Downey, however, told the police Thursday that her husband was leaning over the ice box on the porch of his lodge when the bullet struck him. It had been fired from an adjoining room in which a couple was quarreling, she told Chief Street.

The companion of the woman now facing the murder charge was questioned and corroborated Mrs. Downey's statement. The shot, according to police missed him and passed through a wall, striking Downey. The woman declined to make a statement.

Moody At Newton

NEWTON, Tex., July 15. (AP)—Charles that James E. Ferguson had asked for the highway department and made promises in its behalf, were made here today in a speech by Attorney General Dan Moody, candidate for governor.

Moody exhibited letters written on State stationery, purported to be signed by James E. Ferguson, in which the County Judge of Wharton County was asked to place $500,000 of county funds, the proceeds of a bond election, to the credit of the highway department.

Moody charged that these letters showed that Ferguson "had set himself up as speaker for the highway commission."

"This is just another indication of Fergusonism," said Moody. "It is because of just such things as this I have dedicated my campaign against Fergusonism."

"And he now has the effrontery to ask you to elect his wife in order that he may continue this farce of government."

Moody devoted a portion of his address to various planks in his platform, including tax reduction, high appropriation for public schools, safeguards about the highway commission, and management of the state prison system.

He speaks tonight at Jasper.

This year for our annual Clean Sweep Sale, we are in a position to offer the greatest value in our history. All through the season we have been adding to our stocks the new and the desirable as it appeared on the market. Now when sale time arrives it is this fresh new goods that bears the liberal discounts you will note throughout this ad.

It is our policy to have two REAL sales each year when we give you an opportunity to choose almost any item in our large stock at a liberal reduction. This is one of these times. A great amount of staple goods that have an all-season demand is included. Many items are offered at these low figures which we must immediately replace, in some cases at an advanced figure.

We are proud of the reputation we have achieved in regard to sales—that people know that it is not necessary to discount our statements at such times—that when we announce a Sale it means sweeping reductions on every single item. It's the only way we have ever had a sale—the only way we know how to conduct one. You will find no "bates"—now drawing contests—no extravagant language. It's a plain matter of fact event with real bone-fide reductions all along the line and a real opportunity to save.
