U.S. Asks Soviets About Cuba Force

'Concern' Noted Over Combat Unit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration, in a sudden re-evaluation of intelligence, said Friday it has determined that a Soviet combat unit of 2,000 to 3,000 troops has been stationed in Cuba.

State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said the administration has expressed "concern" to the Soviets and has asked for more details on the troops and their mission. But American officials, speaking privately, said no decision has been made on whether to ask the Soviets to withdraw the troops.

"As currently configured and supported, the unit poses no threat to the United States," spokesman Carter said. The officials privately added that they saw little chance that the Soviets could quickly be persuaded to withdraw it.

Withdrawal Asked

Nonetheless, there were immediate calls for the troops' withdrawal from senators who said the SALT II treaty should not be ratified unless that were done.

Spokesman Carter acknowledged that while the U.S.-Soviet agreement on Cuba reached with the Soviets after the 1962 missile crisis forbids Russia to station offensive weapons on the island, "ground forces per se did not figure in our understandings."

Asked about the development, President Carter, spending the Labor Day weekend in Plains, Ga., had no comment. He said he had discussed the matter with the State Department and preferred to let officials there respond to questions. Neither he nor national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinksi planned to interrupt their vacations, aides said.

Opposes Soviet Base

Spokesman Carter reiterated the administration's determination to oppose any Soviet military base in the Western Hemisphere. But he said he did not wish to characterize the present troop emplacement as a base.

However, Sen. Richard Stone, D-Fla., said flatly that the Soviet troops constitute a miliary base, and said the United Staes should demand its immediate withdrawal.

"No Soviet military base is admissible in this hemisphere," he said, adding that Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance plans to discuss the matter with Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin at the United Nations this fall. But he also said that the Carter administration is not being forceful enough in its dealings on the subject.

Dramatic Change

The new intelligence evaluation represented a dramatic change from the public estimates given by the administration in recent weeks.

On July 27, Vance responded to a query from Stone with a denial that there were Soviet combat troops on the island.

"There is no evidence of any substantial increase in the Soviet military presence in Cuba in recent years or of the presence of a Soviet military base," Vance wrote. "Apart from the military group advising Cuban forces for the past 15 years, our intelligence does not warrant the conclusion that there are any other significant Soviet forces in Cuba."

On Aug. 7, the Defense Department said, "there might have been a very modest increase" in the Soviet military presence in Cuba. U.S. intelligence sources said then that estimates indicated 2,000 military advisers and between 4,000 and 6,000 civilian technicians and advisory personnel were in Cuba.

But by Wednesday, the estimate had changed. The department summoned a Soviet diplomat to express its concern and to request an explanation. The department declined to identify the American official at the meeting, but said it was not Vance.

On Thursday, members of the Senate were briefed, and on Thursday eening, Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, made the information public in a Boise, Idaho, news confrence.

A Soviet embassy spokesman said there would be no comment on the reports. He said no response has been given to Vance as yet.

In Havana, the Cuban government had no comment. Speaking unofficially, however, a government spokesman expressed doubt at the statement, saying, "The United States has been wrong many times beyore."

He said the fact that the State Department disclosed the alleged presence of the troops on the eve of the nonaligned summit meeting in Havana suggests a U.S. effort to discredit Cuba's position within the movement. But spokesman Carter denied that the United States engineered the incident to embarrass the Cubans by showing their dependence on the Soviets.

Administration officials said they had

Official Cites Need For Interest Boost

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

ALTHOUGH THE supply of mortgage money in Texas is more plentiful with the increase in the state's interest ceiling this week, the commissioner of the Texas Savings and Loan Department said the ceiling needs to be abolished or raised even more to keep home loan money flowing in Texas.

L. Alvis Vandygriff, in Lubbock for the opening of a savings and loan office, said the Texas Legislature might raise the ceiling another percentage point if Gov. Bill Clements calls a special session.

During the most recent session of the legislature, the 80-year-old 10 percent ceiling on home loan interest rates was allowed to increase for two years, up to a maximum of 12 percent.

That law became effective on Monday and Vandygriff said there is "some evidence of additional loans being made, particularly conventional loans."

Vandygriff is charged with setting the maximum allowable interest rate for each month by averaging the interest paid on a 10-year note in the preceeding month and adding two percentage points. That computation produced a maximum rate for September of 11 percent, he said.

But Vandygriff expressed concern that the range will not allow Texas lenders to compete successfully in the secondary money market.

Because there is inadequate capital in Texas "to meet the full demands of building requirements," Vandygriff said, lenders "are going to have to be in the position where they can meet the nationwide market."

Without the ability to sell home loans to other financial institutions, lenders are confined to making loans from deposits they receive.

"There has to be some comparison between the cost of money and what the mortgage portfolio will produce," Vandygriff said. "We're moving in a very close field.

"Several places already have an interest yield at above 11 percent," he added.

There is concern among those in the lending industry and allied businesses, Vandygriff said, "that even the two percentage points above the rate on a 10-year note is not sufficient to meet the real cost of money."

Although Vandygriff said he'd like the legislature simply to abolish the interest ceiling and allow the interest rate to float, it is more probable the lawmakers would agree to increase the maximum rate by a percentage point, he said.

Despite the controversy over raising the 80-year-old ceiling, Vandygriff said "the ice has been broken now" and legislators will "accept the challenge and do what's necessary."

"I think the legislature will answer

Young Aide Named As U.N. Envoy

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — President Carter chose Andrew Young's soft-spoken deputy, Donald F. McHenry, on Friday to replace Young as American U.N. ambassador. McHenry told a news conference here he was "extremely pleased and delighted," and hoped to "build upon the work" of his predecessor.

He added that he would carry out the tasks of head of the United States U.N. mission in his own way, and "I don't feel that I have any shoes to fill."

At a half hour news conference at the U.S. mission opposite United Nations headquarters, he said he had always had "a very warm and close working relationship" with Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance.

"Dictates Of Conscience"

But when asked if he favored pitting his own judgment against the State Department, he replied: "We also have to follow the dictates of our own conscience in pursuing policy objectives and I believe every diplomat faces the point where he has to decide how a particular policy goal should be accomplished, and also to face the music if he must."

Young resigned Aug. 15 after 2½ years as chief U.S. delegate, under fire for talking to a Palestine Liberation Organization representative contrary to regulations, and then misinforming Vance about the nature of the conversation.

In making the announcement in Plains, Ga., Carter said Young "highly recommended" McHenry as his successor.

PLO Talks "Necessary"

Asked how he stood on talking to the PLO, McHenry said talking to Palestinians "is necessary for us, as was made clear in the Camp David agreements." The PLO is barred from talks on Palestinian autonomy in Israeli-occupied Arab territory now going on beteen Egypt and Israel under the accords.

McHenry declined to say whether he

Tech Due Windfall Via Ruling On Veto

By CANDY SAGON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

TEXAS TECH University stands to gain between $100,000 and $200,000 in new construction funds next year as a result of a ruling Friday by State Attorney General Mark White.

White ruled invalid Gov. Bill Clements' veto of $50 million in college construction money. The attorney general said the governor lacked the authority to veto an item that would be funded by state property tax revenues.

The $50 million earmarked for college construction was collected under the 10-cent per $100 valuation tax imposed by the Texas Constitution and allotted to the 17 state colleges and universities.

"Since these funds are appropriated by the constitution, they are not subject to veto," White said.

According to a Texas Tech financial spokesman, White's ruling will mean from $100,000 to $200,000 will come Tech's way "assuming a conservative amount" of taxes are collected by the end of fiscal year 1980.

The money, however, is restricted to construction of new buildings.

Tech, along with the 16 other state colleges and universities, lost a major source of construction funds during the last legislative session with the enactment of a bill eliminating most of the ad valorem tax fund.

In the last few days of the 1979 Legislature, lawmakers approved a bill which effectively repealed the property tax by reducing the assessment rate from the 10-cent per $100 valuation to .0001 percent of the property's value.

That rate of taxation will produce only about $25,000 annually, when it goes into effect in 1981, compared to the $40 million collected under the old rate.

The state attorney general's opinion also invalidated the governor's vetoes of

Successes In Acquiring, Racing Horses Mixture Of Luck, Skill

By JOHNNY HOLMES
Avalanche-Journal

DIMMITT — It takes only a casual glance into Dr. Bill Lee's office in the High Plains Clinic here to tell where his interests lie.

Stacks of quarter horse magazines almost obscure the medical books on his shelves, and racing forms and statistic sheets are piled in the corners next to his American Medical Association journals. One wall is covered with medical school diplomas, certificates and proclamations (after all, the man is a doctor), but the others are laden with glowing portraits of his 3-year-old pride and joy — a quarter horse named Oh Shiney.

Lee's affinity for his 10 racehorses is second only to his devotion to medicine, and with a horse like Oh Shiney in the corral, it's easy to understand the good doctor's feelings. In the two years since Lee plunked down $7,500 for the yearling, Oh Shiney has won more than half his races, has run in the Triple Crown for quarter horses and has collected nearly $150,000 in prize money.

Second In A Series

Simply put, Oh Shiney is one of the finest quarter horses ever to race from West Texas, member of a select group that includes Three Oh's from Abilene (Shiney's father, by the way), who won the 1968 All American Futurity at Ruidoso Downs and was the leading money winner among the nation's quarter horses that year, and Hot Idea from Estelline, who won nearly half a million dollars with a first place finish in the 1977 All American.

"I feel very lucky to have gotten a horse like Oh Shiney," Lee admits. "We buy them young, before they've ever run, and you're never real sure how they're going to do. But this is really one special horse."

Oh Shiney is officially listed with the American Quarter Horse Association as a bay colt, but to leave the description at that is unfair. Standing in his stall at Ruidoso, the horse matches his name — shiny. His full, fiery eyes take on a determined look when he cocks his ears and studies the visitors to his space.

Fairly tall for a racehorse at 16 hands (about 5-foot-4 at his shoulder), his rich brown coat is underscored by jet black skin and highlighted by a sharp white crown on his forehead. And, like most racers, his lean, spindly legs look almost out of place attached to his muscular chest.

Oh Shiney has enjoyed an injury-free career, for which Lee is very thankful, considering the fragility of most racehorses. It is indeed an ironic twist that the very specialty racehorses are bred and raised for is also the most dangerous life they can lead. The grueling pounding of the races causes nearly 40 percent of all racehorses to injure themselves in some way and end their racing careers prematurely.

"It's really not fair to the horses that they are so easily

Airlines Authorized Basic Fare Boost

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Civil Aeronautics Board gave the nation's airlines authority Friday to raise their basic fares to cover rapidly rising fuel costs, an action that will mean a 4.5 percent increase in the cost of most airline tickets.

The CAB said fares can go up to 9.5 percent above their ordinary base levels. Since the board earlier allowed — and most airlines imposed — a 5 percent increase above the base rate, the action translates into a 4.5 percent increase for most airlines.

Under the new order, which is effective today, carriers can file for higher fares on a 24-hour notice. Some filings are expected on Tuesday, after the Labor Day weekend.

Carter Takes Stroll In Downtown Plains

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — President Carter, apparently mindful of reports of a dwindling tourist trade in his hometown, made a three-hour journey downtown Friday and visited every business establishment.

"I have never seen him do all these things," White House advance woman Sharon Metcalf observed as the president, clad in bluejeans, was accompanied by his wife Rosalynn on the walking tour.

A mob of Secret Service agents, White House staff, tourists and reporters pressed around Carter during the marathon tour under a broiling sun. But many old hands commented that they had never seen such a sparse tourist crowd during a presidential visit.

There have been recent reports that proprietors dependent on tourist trade in this tiny hamlet have been losing money, and that land values that skyrocketed after Carter became famous have now plummeted.

Favorable Weather, Plenty Of Gas Forecast During Weekend

Lubbock residents looking forward to three-day weekend as most public agencies and some private organizations observe Labor Day should encounter favorable weather, plenty of gas and open retail stores.

Lubbockites, however should do their banking business before noon today and should have completed government dealings Friday, to avoid being taken by surprise Monday, when they find those institutions closed.

All banks and savings and loan institutions will be shut down, as will all city, county, state and federal government offices.

Students attending Lubbock public schools will enjoy their first vacation Monday, after sitting through three days of classes this week.

Classes for Texas Tech University students will not be affected by the holiday because classes do not start until Tuesday, but Tech offices will be closed for the holiday. Lubbock Christian College students will attend classes on Labor Day.

If holiday observers prefer to fill empty hours shopping, South Plains Mall will be open 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., three hours shorter than usual business hours.

Although the U.S. Postal Service will maintain regular business hours today, no residential, business or rural deliveries will be made Monday.

Motorists planning to travel in Texas, New Mexico, Colorado and Oklahoma should find about half of the service stations in that area pumping gas, according to figures of the American Automobile Association. Some stations also are expected to remain open 24 hours along major routes.

Weather conditions over the holiday weekend generally are favorable for outdoor activities, although those venturing outside should be willing to bet against a 20 percent chance for scattered showers in the Lubbock vicinity today and tonight.

Otherwise, temperatures should rise from morning lows near 70 to the 90s range in the afternoons through Wednesday. Winds today should be southerly at 10 to 15 mph.

Partly cloudy skies and mild temperatures which dominated the Lubbock area's weather pattern Friday, are expected to continue through midweek, although the forecast calls for a slight chance of afternoon and evening thundershowers across West Texas through

Westinghouse Strike Could End Soon

PITTSBURGH (AP) — About 25,000 workers at the strikebound Westinghouse Electric Corp. could return to their jobs next week if a tentative agreement in the 47-day walkout is ratified.

The accord was reached Thursday after two days of around-the-clock bargaining in the presence of a federal mediator.

Voting by the rank-and-file began Friday after co-International Unionunited Electrical Workers and the International Union of Electrical Workers recommended that union members accept the agreement. The boards are made up of local officials from around the country.

McCrory Returns To Tell Jurors Of Murder Plot

FORT WORTH (AP) — David McCrory testified Friday that Cullen Davis told him to hire a killer to "throw grenades" or gun down his ex-wife, Priscilla, with an automatic rifle and "kill her and whoever was with her."

During McCrory's second day on the stand he also told jurors that Davis outlined several other ways to engineer the deaths of 15 people he wanted killed. Those named on the alleged "hit" list, McCrory said, included District Judge Joe Eidson, District Judge Tom Cave, W.T. Rufner, Gus Gavrel Jr., Gus Gavrel Sr., Beverly Bass, Davis' adopted daughter Dee Davis, and his younger brother Bill Davis.

the 45-year-old Fort Worth millionaire Davis is charged specifically with soliciting the murder of Edison, 61, the jurist presiding over Davis' divorce from Priscilla.

"He (Davis) said at one point, 'Anytime they can get Priscilla, that's what I want ... anytime,'" said McCrory. "He said that you could dig a hole on his property across the street from where the driveway opens onto Hulen and have a guy lay down in it.

"When she (Priscilla) drove out, he could throw grenades at the car or have an automatic rifle and just riddle the car and kill her and whoever was with her."

McCrory said Davis told him he wanted Cave dead because he "hated the son of a bitch and that he personally was going to be there and watch him get it slow."

Cave presided over the first Davis murder trial, which ended in a mistrial after eight eeks becase of jury misconduct. Davis later was acquitted in Amarillo of killing his 12-year-old stepdaughter, Andre Wilborn.

Andrea was one of two persons killed in a midnight shooting spree at the $6 million Davis mansion Aug. 2, 1976. In that shooting, Priscilla and Gavrel Jr. were wounded.

Gavrel's girlfriend, Beverly Bass, testified in Amarillo that she saw Davis shoot her boyfriend, and that the gunman chased her off the mansion grounds as she fled screaming for help.

McCrory said Davis wanted Ms. Bass dead because "she was the only one who the jury believed ... he said he couldn't afford to let Beverly Bass get on the stand against him again."

Gavrel would have to die, McCrory said Davis told him, because he "had a big, fat lawsuit pending against him" and jurors might be sympathetic if Gavrel showed up in court on crutches or in a wheelchair.

Gavrel was paralyzed by the shooting and has a $13 million damage suit pending against Davis.

Friday afternoon, McCrory testified that he met with FBI agent Ron Jannings on Aug. 17, 1978, telling him "The entire story from beginning to end."

After the meeting, McCrory said he went home and "tried to figure out how to solve the problem."

"My first option was to run. To pack up Martha and the kids and take off," McCrory said. "Next, to wait and see what happened with the FBI. I didn't think he believed me.

"Third, to try and give Cullen back his money and if that didn't work ... kill him."

McCrory testified Thursday that Davis once said he had committed murder, touching off a brief defense flurry that ended in a denied motion for a mistrial.

McCrory said Davis told him "I've gotten away with it once."

McCrory also said Davis suggested that Ms. Bass, Gavrel Jr., his father Gus Gavrel Sr., and Dee Davis be killed all at once. McCrory said Davis wanted Gavrel Sr. dead because he was afraid the older man would "grab up his shotgun ... and come after Cullen" if Miss Bass and Gavrel Jr. were killed.

Eidson should be killed, McCrory said Davis told him, because the industrialist "thought that Priscilla's (divorce) attorneys were in cahoots with Judge Eidson."

"He wanted to have Eidson taken care of as soon as possible," McCrory said. "He (Davis) thought he (Eidson) was trying to break him."

McCrory said Davis told him to have the killer plant a brown beret and the identification card of a Mexican-American near Eidson's body so police would blame the slaying on a Chicano activist group, the Brown Berets.

Davis wanted imitation sugar and heroin planted near Miss Bass, McCrory said, so it would "look like a dope-related killing."

During a meeting in early July, McCrory said Davis showed him a picture of a .22-caliber pistol and said he wanted McCrory to get him one "just like it."

"He said he had previously had an automatic pistol with a silencer, but he had to throw it away and he wanted another one," McCrory said. "He wanted to know if I could get him one."

A pistol and silencer were found near the Trinity River shortly before the 1976 mansion shootings, and police traced the pistol to Roy Rimmer, a Davis business associate.

In late June, McCrory said, Davis gave him $50,000 and told him to "launder it in Las Vegas." McCrory said he and his wife Martha, went to Las Vegas where he lost some of the money gambling and later returned a portion of it to Davis.

Prosecutor Jack Strickland asked McCrory why he kept $5,000 of the money for himself.

"I stole it," was McCrory's reply.

McCrory's testimony was punctuated with frequent objections from lead defense attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes, but most were overruled by Judge Gordon Gray.

McCrory and Davis had been pool-shooting, beer-drinking buddies for some time before McCrory said Davis approached him to do "investigative work" in return for a job. McCrory later went to work for a Davis-owned company but said his role "changed from investigative work to hiring a killer."

In mid-August, McCrory took his story to FBI agents, who launched a three-day investigation that culminated with Davis' arrest last Aug. 20.

During the operation, McCrory was wired with a secret recorder, and hidden FBI agents filmed the pivotal meeting on the parking lot of a Fort Worth restaurant.

Run EMS Like A Business

ONE OPTION THAT is open for reduction of the operating deficit associated with the EMS ambulance service here has not yet received the attention of the Lubbock County Hospital District.

That option is to include lucrative patient transfer service in the operation.

When the tax-supported Emergency Medical Services was established, it in effect took over the money-losing end of the ambulance business here while leaving the profitable end untouched.

That is not, to say the least, the businesslike approach—and the Board of Managers has made loud noises about applying businesslike principles to the operation of Health Sciences Center Hospital and other activities over which it has responsibility.

THUS FAR, THE BOARD has focused its attention on (1) more tax revenue for the Hospital District itself or (2) more tax revenue from the City and/or the County of Lubbock to help cover the EMS deficit.

Consultants have said that first-class emergency ambulance service will always be a losing proposition and if the people of a community want that kind of protection they'll just have to come up with the money.

The transfer of patients between hospitals, or between hospitals and their homes, is one way to come up with the money. It is a very profitable operation.

It has been argued that for an EMS system to go into the patient transfer business is for it to go into competition with free enterprise. That's like saying the government should take over the money-losing end of every business but leave the profitable side untouched.

ONE CLEAR PARALLEL can be drawn from the Hospital District's own concern that community hospitals are allegedly "dumping" indigent or non-paying patients on its teaching hospital.

The HSCH should not take all of the charity patients and refuse to "compete" with the other hospitals by turning away paying patients. Similarly, EMS should not leave the paying end of the ambulance business exclusively to someone else.

If the Hospital District wants to run its business like a business, it can stand just so many "loss leaders" without making up the loss somewhere else in its operating revenues.

Texas Message On Gasoline

A SCALE MODEL of what would happen if American oil producers were to be freed to produce was unwrapped in Dallas the other day.

Gasoline prices came down. Fractionally, but down.

Go back a couple of months. Gasoline was in short supply. Fast-growing cities like Dallas didn't get allocations large enough to meet demand.

Motorists panicked. Instead of waiting until they needed gasoline, they "topped off" their tanks. This worsened the supply situation.

Lines at service stations grew longer. Dealers escalated prices and cut hours of operations. The situation got so bad that Gov. Bill Clements ordered an odd-even system of gasoline rationing in Dallas and surrounding counties.

SO, THE SITUATION eased. The lines disappeared from the stations. Dealers began getting more gasoline than they could sell.

Free enterprise worked. Competition returned. Service improved. Prices were lowered.

"There's definitely a softening of prices," one station manager told the Dallas Morning News. "I'm not saying it will lead to an all-out price war, like there used to be, but I definitely have to consider my competitors' prices now that the lines are down."

"You won't see gas wars as long as there is a shortage," a spokesman for one of the major oil companies said. "Nobody will cut prices on a short supply."

Nevertheless, gas war or not, the News' survey found that even an alleviation of the shortage had caused the upward pressures on at-the-pump prices to disappear.

IF CONGRESS AND the President would learn from that message, they'd forget about imposing high taxes on increased oil company revenues and, instead, give producers every incentive to drill for and produce more oil.

Taxes already account for the largest share of the price of gasoline, including taxes on corporate profits and federal at-the-pump taxes, so increased domestic production would automatically increase federal revenues.

With incentives to produce, the oil companies would get back to the business they enjoyed for so many years: Giving Americans the cheapest energy on earth.

We won't get back to 40-cent-a-gallon gasoline, but neither will we be paying $2 for it if the free enterprise system is encouraged rather than penalized.

And we'll have all of the gasoline and oil we need until alternate energy sources can be developed.

ART BUCHWALD:

Friends, Countrymen Lend Me Your Fears

MARTHA'S VINEYARD—President Carter has promised he would take one day a week and go out and talk to the "people." In this way he can find out what Americans are "really thinking."

Then he can return to Washington and make presidential policy based on what he has heard.

I thought this was hyperbole until the other day when a bunch of us were sitting on the Hackney porch, rocking back and forth, drinking iced tea and peering out at the Vineyard sound.

Suddenly two secret servicemen appeared and started to look under our chairs. Then they crawled under the porch.

After that they went into the kitchen and searched around. Finally one said to the other, "It looks clean to me."

HE GOT on his walky-talky and said, "Sparrow Two, this is Sparrow Seven. We found a home in Vineyard Haven with fine God-fearing Americans who have hopes and fears and dreams, though they now suffer from a malaise. Tell Eagle One it's safe for him to come."

In less than 10 minutes a cavalcade of cars came tearing down the road. A sandy-haired man with a big grin on his face stepped out of a bullet-proof Cadillac.

He was accompanied by a lady and a little blonde-haired girl.

"Hi there," he said. "I'm Eagle One and this is my wife, Eagle Two, and my 11-year-old daughter, Eaglelette. I have come to visit you so I can find out what you are thinking.

"You see, those of us who live in Washington are isolated from the real America and the only way I can help you is to visit in your homes and find out why you have lost faith in our country.

"DO NOT hesitate to speak frankly because I know that you are all filled with pessimism and despair and fed up with promises that Congress refuses to keep. Please tell me what is on your mind."

"I'll tell you what I don't like about this country," Wallace said. "It's the humidity. It weighs down on you so you don't want to do anything. I perspire all the time."

"I know how you feel," Eagle One said. "Even in Plains, Ga., we had humidity and nobody liked it. My staff is now working on a plan to make sure that if there has to be humidity everyone gets his equal share."

Virginia Durr said. "The thing that gripes me the most is the Styron's dog. He's over in my tomato patch all the time. How can we have hope for the future when Styron won't tie up his dog?"

EAGLE ONE turned to his aide. "There you are. If I hadn't left Washington I would never have known about the stray dog problem."

Elizabeth Hackney, age 15, said, "I can't stand my brother. He's a spoiled brat and gets to do anything he wants to, while I have to do everything I'm told. Why should I believe in a country that permits brothers to make the quality of life for sisters so miserable?"

The sandy-haired man said to his aide, "Why hasn't anyone briefed me on this problem before?"

"Washington has lost touch," the aide said.

Brustein said, "I'll tell you what has made me lose faith in the American dream. I like blue fishing. Every time I think I have one on the line it turns out to be seaweed or an old shoe.

"I haven't caught a fish in weeks, so why should I vote in the 1980 elections?"

EAGLE ONE grinned and got up to leave. "I can't tell you how helpful you've all been in speaking out in this forthright manner. I will now return to Washington a wiser and more humble leader, aware of my mistakes and willing to try once again to make a better world for all of you.

"I can only be a good President if I know what the people expect of me, and you can only have your faith restored in our government by telling me what you want me to do. God bless you one and all."

He got back in his car with his wife and daughter. The TV men packed their gear and the reporters got on the press bus to rush back to the airport.

As the cavalcade disappeared into the sunset Williams hit himself on the head with his hand. "Damn it! I forgot to tell him my septic tank doesn't work."

Overheard: "When the preacher told a friend he was the biggest sinner in the church, he didn't know whether to repent or to reduce."

'You Pour And I'll Flush'

GEORGE WILL:

Bloom Off WCC Rose

WASHINGTON—The World Council of Churches, a purportedly religious and relentlessly political organization, is famous for both the intensity and selectivity of its indignation.

It is quite polite in dealing with Communist governments, but catalogues 116 varieties of "repression" in Latin America, including a form of "cultural repression" described thusly:

"Distraction of public opinion by means of football, sports events, etc. to inhibit attention to the grave problems of the community."

This calls to mind the Irish politicians who, in 1826, assured voters he would tell them of 500 grievances "which they had previously known nothing about."

Compare the WCC's concern about repressive football with this cheerful assessment, in a WCC document, of the Soviet Union:

"From the day of its inception the Soviet state has attached great importance to the question of political rights, (which are) guaranteed by the right to vote and the right to stand for election."

Recently the WCC has gone from vapidness to viciousness, subsidizing terrorist organizations such as the one that killed 35 members of missionary families in Rhodesia.

Fortunately, a counterattack against the WCC has begun.

Ernest Lefever of Georgetown University has written a history of the WCC's slide into leftist extremism.

And Edward Norman, dean of Peterhouse and lecturer in history at Cambridge University, in "Christianity and the World Order" (Oxford University Press) has dissected the theology that underlies the politicization of religion.

AS NORMAN says, the history of European politics since Constantine's conversion is a history of Christian involvement in politics. But the "politicization" of religion is different.

It is the reduction of religion to social morality. As Norman says, "Modern Church leaders are all tolerance when it comes to departures from traditional religious doctrine."

But they are ferocious when it comes to departures from the orthodoxy of the left on political questions.

Today's controversy is not about "quietism" versus "activism" in Christian life. It is not about whether Christians may be politically active, or whether their faith should inform their action.

Of course they may, of course it should. But Christians have identified, in good faith, with a wide variety of regimes and causes.

CHRIST WAS, to say no more, impatient with this world, and he urged his followers to have only provisional attachment to any part of it, including any regime or social system.

But this does not mean that Christianity is "inherently" revolutionary, or that Christians can casually undertake or underwrite upheavals.

Revolutionaries usually invest in politics a kind of expectation that Christians consider not just unrealistic but unseemly, even impious. The first Christian insisted that there were things his followers must render unto Caesar.

And when Peter enjoined the faithful to "fear God, honor the king," the king, it is well to remember, was Nero.

A permanent purpose of Christianity is to place spiritual distance between its adherents and the culture of the day, any day.

AS NORMAN warns, if the content of Christianity "is drained away into the great pool of secular idealism," Christianity may "identify itself so closely with secular ideas that its fate will be inseparable from theirs."

That is dangerous because "the orthodoxies of thought within Western liberalism now rise and decline with remarkable rapidity, dragging the perpetual reinterpretation of the content of Christianity along with them."

Today a Christian figure familiar in fact and satire is the Trendy Cleric who will let no "progressive" parade pass unjoined.

There are many clergymen for whom theological interests are peripheral and political interests are central, or who insist that politics "really" is theology carried on by other means—means more "appropriate" to the times.

THE WCC is dominated by vaguely religious but intensely political intellectuals who are remote from real political experience.

Regarding various theories of "secular redemption," and especially regarding Marxism, Christianity of the WCC's sort has, as Norman says, "an extraordinary propensity to regard its own replacements with benign approval."

Because it once was recklessly attacked by the likes of Joe McCarthy, the WCC has enjoyed a kind of "innocence by association," by association, that is, with McCarthy's innocent victims.

The WCC may once have been innocent of wrongdoing. It is no longer.

Nowadays it seems the main reason for holding elections is to find out if the pollsters were right.

ANDREW TULLY:

No Order In Order

(Repeated by Request)

WASHINGTON—A friend who just may be the country's leading authority on ancient Greece returned from a scholarly seminar the other day to report a revival of the notion that Congress should pass legislation establishing a "democratic" nobility for individuals of special achievement in various fields—not, presumably, including the undertaking dodge.

The argument is that the Medal of Freedom is the only decoration bestowed on civilians by a grateful government, and that it would be fitting to set up a knighthood of distinguished citizens, most of them, I gather, from academe. Proponents say it would encourage selfless initiative to the benefit of the commonweal.

BUT I DON'T know. Aside from our pretension that we operate a classless society, there is the danger a union of nobles would be corrupted by its own apartheid.

That is pretty much what happened in Great Britain, where folks still take knighthood seriously even though many of its sirs and ladies are jockeys and stripteasers, and where admission to the nobility has often been used to make a fast buck or steal a plot of land.

A typical example of such gimmickry was the establishment of the Order of the Garter, most famous of the lot. As might be logically assumed, it was named after a lady's accessory, back around 1344 A.D. when Edward III, a notable ladies' man, was King of England.

EDWARD WAS partying one night, dancing with the Countess of Salisbury, when her garter dropped to the floor. Naturally, this caused the Countess considerable embarrassment because girls in those days rarely displayed their underitems in public. But Eddie stooped down, picked up the garter, and put it on his royal leg, pretending it was his own.

This created quite a stir. People went around saying things like "We sure got a chivalrous king," and "Gadzooks, we ought to form a club called 'Ye Olde Garter Association.'"

Sure enough, the next time Eddie led his troops into battle he dropped that same garter as a signal to attack and later issued free membership in the Order of the Garter to those of his officers rich enough to rank as gentlemen.

IN ENGLAND, knights have always been required to be respectful toward women, courteous and loyal. But history notes that they made a show of being chivalrous only to dames whose fathers were rich.

Knights also made a good living selling their daughters off to the highest bidders. History is crammed with tales of impoverished knights and even barons complaining they had to sell their female offspring in a falling market.

I suggest that the British experience should be a warning to those ambitious Americans who yearn for an Order of—say—the Pantyhose, on this side of the Atlantic.

I do not wish to wake up some morning to discover that Sir Jerry Brown had given Sen. Teddy Kennedy a taste of steel.

VIRGINIA PAYETTE:

Lifestyle In Pinch

DALLAS—It's getting plainer every day that the Carters are having as much trouble changing their lifestyle to "sacrifice for the future" as the rest of us.

You remember what the President said. Who can ever forget those ringing tones, that clarion call to duty, the stern forcefulness of his speech on inflation and the energy crunch?

We must make do with less, stop indulging ourselves, tighten our belts, practice prudence and thrift in the coming recession.

It was all there. All very inspiring. And all darn near impossible. Especially that bit about "thrift."

TIME WAS when we'd have rallied bravely—turned out lights and substituted tuna and hamburger casseroles for steak.

But now the electric company raises the rates when the meter readings go down, and fish and ground chuck cost as much as sirloin used to.

Carter found that out for himself a few days after his call for sacrifice. Called in the food-marketing folks, told them he was very upset over the fact that farm prices were going down, but Rosalynn's grocery bills weren't, and how come, fellas?

He got the same double-talk we all get when we do our squawking in the supermarket. (The only one who answered up was McDonalds, who announced a 10-percent cut in the price of their basic hamburger.)

But the rest of us have been trying, Lord knows.

WE LAID off our social secretaries, our press representatives and our private chauffeurs the minute Jimmy went into his belt-tightening routine.

I mean, with a depression coming and all, it was the least we could do for our country.

For the duration, we will struggle valiantly to keep our social calenders straight ourselves, maybe even buy a datebook (a cheap one, Jimmy) to record which neighbors want us for dinner which night, and what weekend we're having them in for our famous soybean chili.

When we plan to make a speech or entertain a foreign dictator, we will pick up the phone and call the newspapers and TV stations ourselves. We'll miss having a media spokesman to call press conferences, but what the heck, these are tough times for everybody.

AS FOR the chauffeur, well, with the price of gas these days, there wasn't much for him to do, anyway. Having him around just to ferry us to the bus stop was clearly an extravagance. A profligate waste of energy that Jimmy would have frowned on.

Whether he'd pat us on the head for those other sacrifices is another question.

It might land him in Rosalynn's doghouse, seeing as how she's just hired herself a new girl to help out around the house.

A chief of staff, no less, and if you think $30 a day, plus cartare, for a cleaning woman is outrageous, how do you like shelling out $200-plus a day?

That's what Edith Dobelle, former chief of protocol at the State Department, will be paid for "coordinating" the First Lady's activities.

THAT COMES to $56,000 a year, which is exactly what we pay Zbigniew Brzezinski to advise Jimmy on how to run the world. (Good help is hard to get anywhere these days.)

Rosalynn may fret about her food bills (which she has to pay herself), but she's not losing sleep over the tab for her personal staff (which she doesn't). The count is up to 19 now, and they're not getting what you'd call a minimum wage.

Under Chief of Staff Dobelle, there's Mary Hoyt, who pulls down $45,000 as press secretary. Under her there are four press assistants. Then there's a social secretary, who has three assistants, five schedulers (whatever that is), three project coordinators and three personal assistants.

Jimmy, on the other hand, has managed at least one small economy. Gerald Rafshoon is leaving next month to go back to his public relations business and, presumably, work on the Carter campaign again.

HE HIRED on last year, at $56,000, to pull up Carter's ratings in the polls. (Well, you can't win 'em all, can you, Jimmy?)

But the President can't make too many husbandly noises about Rosalynn's expensive payroll. His own is so fat he's hoping you'll forget all that campaign blather about cutting down on the "imperial presidency."

He has 350 people officially working for him, and 50 of them get at least $40,000 a year.

Nine of his key advisers, including Mr. Brzezinski, his own chief of staff Ham Jordan, and press secretary Jody Powell, are pulling down $56,000. And they don't ride the bus to work. Which is why a lot of taxpayers do, so they can afford those non-imperial salaries.

Changing your lifestyle, it would appear, depends a lot on where you live.

L.M. BOYD:

...Pass It On

UNDERSTAND THE science folk are working on a drug to improve your memory. Or more specifically, your short-term memory. So you won't forget where you left the car keys. Or how much you promised to pay the yard boy. A drug might help.

Still, what if it made you remember everything? Needlessly. Every scowl. Each cut. The foul litter in the lingo. Blood, drop by drop. Nettles. Nightmares. It would be a world where no garbage ever decomposed. Those potion pushers better be careful.

Q. What's the thinnest watch on the market now?

A. The Concord Delirium I. It's one-sixteenth of an inch thick. That's about like a dime.

Q. How do you tell a male penguin from a female penguin?

A. You don't. An autopsy can determine it. But otherwise, only another penguin can tell.

Name of that family in Breda, Iowa, that had seven daughters and eight sons was Mr. and Mrs. Stork.

Mark Twain said of himself: "Twenty-four years ago, I was strangely handsome. In San Francisco in the rainy season I was often mistaken for fair weather."

THE BOTTOM LINE IS WE CAN HELP YOUR BOTTOM LINE

We're a business bank pure and simple ... our location, the experience of our talented personnel, our association with a statewide group of banks with total assets of over $8,000,000,000 (eight billion) dictates that we primarily serve business and professional people ...if you're involved in a business or profession, if you work downtown or for a business we serve, doesn't it make sense that we can serve you better than a bank that attempts to be all things to all people?

Carter: No Linkage With Oil, Mideast Policy

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — President Carter says he will let no Arab nation blackmail the United States and that he foresee no link between his Middle East policies and oil supplies.

The president also said in an interview that despite their public pronouncements, no Arab leader he has met has in private "professed a desire for an independent Palestinian state."

The president's comments were released by the White House press office in Americus, Ga., Friday while the president was on the first day of a four-day weekend.

Carter, speaking to a group of Florida newspaper editors in what one observer said became an angry session, adamantly denied that blackmail played apy part in his decision to approve a single shipment of kerosene to Iran last month.

"I have never been the subject of a threat and I have the same attitude now that we had when the Barbary pirates were in war: millions for defense but not one cent for tribute. I wouldn't let you blackmail me and I would not let an Arab country blackmail our nation. We don't have to take that," the president said.

The president then told a second questioner that he would be greatly surprised if Crown Prince Fahd of Saudi Arabia sent word to the United States that "If you don't expedite the resolution of the Palestinian question, we will cut off your oil."

The questions on the president's responses went directly to the heart of two problems he has been unable to tackle successfully.

The question of the U.S. policy toward the Palestinians and future oil supplies has threatened to sour U.S. relations with Israel.

In a related move on Friday, Carter announced in a statement that he had chosen Donald F. McHenry to replace Andrew Young as the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations. The issue of the Palestinians and Israel was Young's undoing.

The interview took place in Tampa, Fla., where the president had held a town meeting. Carter also made an appearance in Atlanta before coming to his hometown here to spend the Labor Day weekend.

The president, apparently mindful of reports of a dwindling tourist trade in his hometown, made a three-hour journey through downtown Plains on Friday, visiting every business establishment.

The crowd of tourists in the small town was sparse by past standards, but the relatively small crowd meant that most of those tourists who did appear had a chance to shake Carter's hand, say a few words and even snap a picture.

In the Florida interview, Carter told the editors that most Arab leaders were publicly committed to an independent Palestinian state.

"But the privately diplomatic tone of conversations is much more prosper than is often alleged by the press and by others," he said.

Asked specifically about a Saudi decision in July to temporarily increase oil production by about a million barrels a day, the president said that there was no linkage between that action and progress in the Middle East.

As for the shipment of kerosene to Iran, which for a week Carter has been calling a good investment to help that nation overcome a shortage caused by sabotage to a refinery, the president stated: "We have not been blackmailed. There was no threat, whatsoever, issued to me or implied to the Iranians or any other intermediary."

The president answered the question only after arguing that it was "extremely biased" in that it presumed the president and the nation had been blackmailed.

Asked what he could do to protect the nation's supply of oil from Arab nations, the president said, "I cannot tell you that we could go to war" to protect the supply. But he did say he would take "whatever action was necessary to defend the security of this country."

On other points in the interview, the president defended the decision to hire at $56,000 a year a chief of staff for first lady Rosalynn Carter.

He said large groups visit the White House weekly to talk about a variety of issues and that while his wife does not arrange the meetings, as the White House hostess she is responsible to make sure that the visitors "have maybe light hors d'oeuvres or some lemonade or tea or something of that kind."

He said the first lady's staff arranges banquets, helps her answer mail and makes travel arrangements "so" she needs somebody that is competent."

As part of the White House shakeup, it was announced earlier in August that Kit Dobelle had been hired to direct the first lady's office.

The president also said he did not "begrudge" Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., the admiration and respect paid to him.

Ban On Booze Aimed At Hungary's Drunks

BUDAPEST, Hungary (UPI) — The police armored car screeched to a halt in front of a darkened doorway and two officers trained their machine guns at a seedy character sipping a bottle of beer.

The above scenario, from a cartoon in the government daily Magyar Hirlap, echoed the worst nightmares of the capital's tipplers Friday as Budapest's new "no boozing in public" regulations went into effect.

The ban on booze, aimed at reducing Hungary's high alcoholism rate, prohibits the consumption of alcohol "at work places and their environs," on bridges, city buses, staircases and in doorways, courtyards and abandoned construction sites.

Anyone caught taking a stray sip faces an on-the-spot fine of up to $90.

There was a lot of grumbling on the first dry day on the streets of Budapest — a city once famous for having "a drunk on every corner."

"Looks like I'm going to have to find a new job," said Gaspar Torocsik, 35, only half-joking. "I work near a liquor store and those are the areas where the police will be keeping the sharpest lookout."

Tibor Hulak is also unhappy about the new ruling even though, at 16, he doesn't drink much himself.

"This is going to cut into my income," he said. "I make a pile in tips carting bottles of beer to construction workers at noontime."

Carter Says Arabs Anti-Separate State

PLAINS, Ga. (UPI) — President Carter says despite their public declarations, Arab leaders privately do not favor establishment of a separate Palestinian state, according to a White House text released Friday.

As the president wound up his summer vacation at home in south Georgia, his office released the text of his discussion with a group of Florida editors in Tampa Thursday night.

After conferring with Secretary of State Cyrus Vance about the stationing of Soviet troops in Cuba, Carter and his wife Rosalynn took a three-hour meandering stroll through downtown Plains before an afternoon of fishing and an evening party.

The account of Thursday's session quoted Carter as telling the editors:

"I have never met an Arab leader that in private professed a desire for an independent Palestinian state.

"Publicly, they all espoused an independent Palestinian state, almost all of them, because that is what they committed themselves to do at Rabat," Carter said.

"There has never been any allegation made to me or any insinuation made to me by an Arab or other foreign leader that if you don't do so and so, we will cut off your supply of oil. I have never been the subject of a threat," Carter said.

Carter said the U.S. policy of supporting U.N. resolution 242 dated back to President Richard Nixon "and I will carry it out."

The resolution calls on Arab states to recognize Israel's right to existence as well as its return to its pre-1967 boundaries.

Carter said he had asked the leaders of Jordan, Syria, Saudi Arabia and Egypt to induce the Palestine Liberation Organization to recognize Israel and accept resolution 242 and "in most instances those Arab leaders said they thought they could accomplish that."

"They have not been able to," Carter said.

In their extended tour around his tiny hometown, the Carters made a brief stop in the Carter Warehouse, one of the few times he has visited it since the business was placed in trust after the 1977 inauguration.

Among old acquaintances he greeted on Main Street was Rachel Clark, 89, his nanny as a child and what he described as a prodigious cotton picker.

"She was the best cotton picker I'd ever seen," Carter said. "She'd pick up 400 in day. I could only do 200."

"He loved to tote my cotton," Mrs. Clark said.

In his antique store, State Sen. Hugh Carter welcomed his cousin the president who asked "How bad is business?"

"It's pretty bad," cousin Hugh replied. "But it's a lot of factors. We're not in the news now. We do only a third as much as in 1977."

During the campaign and early presidency hundreds of persons swarmed the town. Friday, however, there were about 25 journalists —and an equal number of tourists and townspeople.

President Agrees To Wage Hike Demands

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bowing to inflationary pressures, President Carter agreed Friday to grant a 7 percent pay raise to the nation's 3.5 million military and civilian federal workers.

The decision reversed Carter's previously stated intention to hold federal pay hikes to 5.5 percent as an "example" in the administration's battle against inflation.

It also represents a victory for organized labor, which has strongly opposed the 5.5 percent pay cap.

In a statement released at the White House, Carter rejected a recommendation from a pay board for an even higher pay raise for federal workers. He said he considered the 7 percent level "appropriate in the light of economic conditions."

Kenneth T. Blaylock, president of the American Federation of Government Employees, said federal workers were willing to accept the 7 percent raise as "their fair share of the burden of sacrifice," but that the 5.5 percent pay hike had been unreasonable.

"President Carter's decision ... is evidence that he has been persuaded by us on persistent representations to him on this point," added Blaylock, whose union represents 700,000 federal employees.

Upset that many private-sector workers were receiving pay hikes above 5.5 percent, the federal employees union had staged a nationwide protest on June 14. The union also has organized a boycott of U.S. savings bonds.

The administration has asked private industry to hold pay hikes to 7 percent. But with inflation running at a near 13 percent annual clip, the guidelines have not been strictly followed. This has forced a current review of those standards.

The Advisory Committee on Federal Pay had told Carter that to achieve "comparability" in federal pay — that is, to make government pay equal to salaries of private-sector workers doing similar jobs — would require a 10.4 percent raise.

However, Carter dismissed that proposal, noting that "inflation continues to be the single greatest threat to our economy."

John P. White, deputy director of the Office of Management and Budget, said the 10.4 percent raise would have cost about $6 billion, compared with the $3.2 billion originally budgeted for the 5.5 percent raise.

White said the 7 percent raise would cost the federal government $940 million more than the 5.5 percent level in Fiscal 1980, but with other savings, might be held to $500 million.

Also, White said the 20,000 lowest-paid federal employees — those earning under $8,900 a year — would receive pay raises above 7 percent to reflect the higher pay granted comparable workers in private industry.

A cap on pay increases for top level government officials will also prevent those earning $47,500 or more from receiving the full 7 percent increase.

Congress has 30 days to review the 7 percent proposal, but under existing law, if either the House or Senate overturns it, federal workers would receive the 10.4 percent pay hike recommended by the pay board.

Carter held federal workers to a 5.5 percent pay raise last year, despite the pay board's recommendation for an 8.4 percent increase.

In a question-and-answer session with a group of government employees last May 21, Carter appealed for support of his latest 5.5 percent proposal.

The president told the workers he didn't think the 5.5 percent raise was "toogreat a sacrifice to provide an example and also to let the people who support us with their tax monies have confidence that we ourselves are willing to take action to control inflation in a time of trouble and challenge to our nation."

Carter reportedly decided to give federal workers the extra pay gain late Wednesday.

Vanderbilt Gets Death By Injection

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Former Amarillo police officer Jimmy Paul Vanderbilt should die by lethal injection for the murder of a teenager, a jury decided Friday.

The seven-woman, five-man jury deliberated less than a half hour Friday after being sequestered Thursday night because it could not reach a verdict.

That same jury convicted Vanderbilt of capital murder Wednesday for the April 1975 murder of 16-year-old Katina Mover, the daughter of former state Rep. Hudson Mover.

Vanderbilt was assessed the death sentence following conviction in his first trial in Amarillo in 1976.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals overturned that conviction, saying prosecutors obtained statements from Vanderbilt by promising they would not seek the death penalty.

State District Judge Larry Gist barred those statments from Vanderbilt's retrial. The case was moved here on a change of venue from Amarillo.

Dad With Broken Arm Delivers Baby

LEEDS, England (UPI) — Paul Hochstrasser called an ambulance with a one-armed phone call when his wife Maureen announced their baby was on the way. He didn't have much choice — his broken left arm was in a sling.

Then he dashed upstairs and realized at once the ambulance wouldn't get there on time.

So Hochstrasser, 30, delivered seven-pound Helen with one hand.

"It all began to happen so quickly I didn't have time to worry," he said Thursday.

"The trickiest moment was just after Helen was born and she didn't seem to be breathing. I held her upside down with my good hand and thumped her on the bottom with my broken arm.

"She bit my finger and started to cry immediately, and I knew then everything would be all right.

Unreported Tax May Cost U.S. Billions Yearly

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government may be losing $26 billion or more each year in tax revenues because people fail to file returns or don't report the full amount of their income, according to a new study released Friday by the Internal Revenue Service.

The finding, said a high-ranking IRS official, represents the federal government's "first attempt to estimate the amount of unreported income comprehensively."

And it is coupled with a series of proposals to step up IRS vigilance over collections.

The 166-page report is the product of 18 months of research into tax reporting in 1976, the most recent year for which complete data was available, said the IRS official, who spoke under ground rules that prohibited his identification.

The official said he did not want to have his name used because he did not want "a show that would pre-empt" the impact that Congress may have with September hearings on the subject.

According to the report, individuals "failed to report about $13 billion to $17 billion in income tax due on about $75 billion to $100 billion of unreported income from legal sources" in 1976.

In addition, "$6 billion to $9 billion in taxes was not paid on $25 billion to $35 billion of unreported individual income from criminal activities in narcotics, illegal gambling and prostitution," the report said.

The highest figures would produce unpaid taxes of $26 billion in 1976, or about 18.3 percent of the total $142 billion in individual income taxes actually collected on more than $1 trillion income.

Americans are expected to pay $181.8 billion in taxes this year for 1978 income, according to IRS estimates. If the same proportion of non-compliance continued, the U.S. Treasury will lose out on more than $33 billion in tax revenues.

That's slightly more than the amount by which the Carter administration expects the federal budget deficit to grow this fiscal year.

The issue of lost tax revenues has long been of concern to the federal government, not only because of its impact on the Treasury but because of the implications for the nearly 90 million Americans who do file tax returns.

In fact, the report indicates that "about 92 percent to 94 percent of income from legal sources is reported."

The biggest group of tax scofflaws involves self-employed persons, whom the IRS estimates failed to report between $33 billion and $39.5 billion in income in 1976. Other shortfalls involved under-reporting of wages and salaries, including tips, of up to $27 billion; interest of to $9.4 billion; and dividends of $4.7 billion.

Unreported income from illegal sources included up to $23.6 billion in drug dealings, $5 billion in bookmaking, $3 billion in numbers, $2 billion in "other gambling" and $1.6 billion in prostitution, the report said.

The report included no estimates on how many persons were short-changing the government on taxes.

The IRS spokesman said, however, that he agreed with a recent report from the General Accounting Office indicating that between 5 million and 6 million Americans fail to file federal income tax returns on legitimate income each year.

The IRS report said it was unable to determine if non-compliance with the U.S. tax laws was increasing or decreasing.

But it promised that "in fairness to those who report their income and pay their tax, the IRS will strengthen its efforts to discover and tax unreported income."

The report pointed out that "voluntary reporting of income is very high where incomes are subject to withholding" and much lower "where incomes are subject to neither withholding or information reporting."

As a result, it concludes, "if withholding and information reporting are expanded, the reporting gap will decrease."

Among the IRS proposals were these:

•Better use of "information documents," such as those filed by a waiter on his tips, during IRS audits of tax returns.

•A model program to help investigators determine who is most likely to fail to file income tax returns.

•Support for a Treasury Department proposal to withhold 10 percent of the payments businesses make to independent contractors.

Decision Pending On Last Charge Against Pagano

MEDIA, Pa. (AP) — A decision likely will be made sometime next week on whether to pursue criminal charges against the Rev. Bernard Pagano, a Roman Catholic priest charged in the "Gentleman Bandit" robberies, prosecutors said Friday.

Ronald Clouser, who confessed on Monday to the attempted armed robbery in Glen Mills for which Pagano has been charged, underwent polygraph testing on Friday in an attempt to verify his story, said Robert DiOrio, Delaware County assistant district attorney. Results of the testing were not immediately released.

A decision on the Pagano prosecution probably will be made by next Wednesday or soon after, DiOrio said.

The Pennsylvania charge is the last pending against Pagano in a series related to the so-called "Gentleman Bandit" holdups in northern Delaware and Pennsylvania late this winter involving a mild-mannered, gun-toting bandit.

Pagano, 53, was arrested in February while he was assistant pastor of St. Mary Refuge of Sinners church in Cambridge, Md. He was first identified as a suspect on the basis of a composite sketch.

Amarillo Salesman Robbed At Southside Motel

An Amarillo salesman told police he was robbed at his motel room early Friday.

Alton Martin Carpenter, 58, said he awoke about 3:50 a.m. when someone knocked on the door of his motel room, located in the 5200-block of Avenue Q.

When he answered the door, the victim said the caller first said someone was burglarizing the salesman's truck. Then the bandit showed a chrome-plated .25-caliber automatic pistol and demanded money.

After the victim gave the gunman $477.36, he was ordered into the bathroom. The man left after turning out the lights and threatening to shoot Carpenter if he followed him, reports showed.

The suspect was described as a white man, between 20 and 25, medium build with short blond hair. He was wearing a red and white cap, and light-colored shirt and pants.

In other activity, the owner of Lee's Lounge, 2900 Ave. H, told police that someone broke into the business early Friday and stole money from the cigarette machines and juke box, and 160 turquoise rings, valued at $1,600.

Entry to the business was gained by knocking a hole in a wall. Police said they found fingerprints at the scene that may belong to the burglar.

Ernest W. Sharritt, 31, of 2101 10th St. told police someone broke into his home early Friday and stole a rifle, stereo and jewelry, all valued at about $3,600.

A 36-year-old man was arrested Thursday after he allegedly shot out his estranged wife's car tires and threatened to kill a Lubbock County sheriff's deputy who was watching the whole thing.

The suspect was in county jail this morning booked on suspicion of aggravated assault, unlawful carrying of a weapon and public intoxication.

Deputy Lonnie Bright said he had stopped in the 5600-block of 45th Street about 7 p.m. Thursday when he saw a man across the street drive his car into a yard.

Bright, who was off duty at the time, said the man got out of his vehicle wielding a pistol and ran over to a woman and her children who were pulling away from the residence in a car. Reports indicate the man started to strike the woman in the face, but that one of the children intervened.

Bright said he ran inside a neighbor's house and retrieved a gun after seeing the suspect point his weapon at the occupants of the vehicle. In the meantime, the man reportedly shot out two tires on the woman's car.

The woman and her children leaped out of the car while the suspect went to the other side and shot out the remaining two tires, according to reports. Bright he was approaching the suspect when the man pointed his weapon at the deputy and said, "I've got two shots left. Don't get in my way or I'll kill you."

The deputy said he backed off because the children were between him and the suspect. The man pointed his pistol in the air, jumped back into his car and sped off west on 45th Street, city police were told.

The woman said the man was her estranged husband who "did something crazy" every time he got drunk. Police located the suspect later in the day in the 4200-block of 40th Street and took him into custody.

Two employees at a club in the 800-block of North University Avenue were arrested about 2:40 a.m. today for allegedly serving alcoholic beverages after the city's 2 a.m. curfew.

Police said they arrested the club's manager, 33, and a 24-year-old employee, and ticketed six patrons who they said were drinking inside the nightspot.

Bobby Ray Barker of 4206 18th St., Apt. 37, said he returned home from a six-day trip about 10 p.m. Thursday and discovered his place had been burglarized and $2,607 in property stolen, including televisions, stereo equipment and jewelry.

A neighbor told police he saw two women and a man acting suspiciously around Barker's residence while he was gone, but thought little of it and did not report it.

Famed Fan Dancer Sally Rand Dies

GLENDORA, Calif. (UPI) — Sally Rand, whose fan dance scandalized the 1933 Chicago World's Fair and still delighted fans 40 years later, died Friday of a heart attack at the age of 75.

She had been treated for a heart condition at Foothill Presbyterian Hospital since Aug. 23 and suffered a heart attack Wednesday night. She was unconscious until her death at 2:30 a.m. PDT, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Funeral arrangements were incomplete.

Petite and still trim in her later years, Miss Rand celebrated her 70th birthday on Jan. 2, 1974, with a fan dance at the Los Angeles Music Center.

Miss Rand once said she had been "going barefoot up to her neck" since living on her grandfather's farm in the Ozarks.

When asked if she wore anything behind her five-foot wide ostrich plumes, she usually would reply, "Come and see the show" or "The Rand is quicker than the eye."

The five-foot blonde appeared at fairs, nightclubs, carnivals and the burlesque stage during her career, and a few times in court.

During those appearances, she was accused of wearing nothing at all behind the swirling fans, and on a few occasions she admitted it.

She was born Helen Beck in Hickory County, Mo., Jan. 2, 1904, and after she left the Ozarks she appeared in circuses and carnivals and then in silent films, including "King of Kings" and "Getting Gertie's Garter."

When the depression hit, she changed her name to Sally Rand, taking the surname from the atlas publishers, and went to work in speakeasies in Chicago.

In 1934, she scandalized St. Louis society with a Lady Godiva horseback ride, "wearing only my long blonde hair."

"It was my form of social protest," she said. "People were starving during those depression days and here the aristocratic women were spending a thousand dollars for a dress to go to a party."

At the age of 61 Sally Rand was arrested in Omaha, Neb., for dancing nude behind the large ostrich fans.

She, along with the owner of the night club, was booked and released under $300 bond after a vice squad officer reported her dance "went beyond the bounds of propriety." After her release she went back for the second show of the evening.

She told newsmen her act was still the same, six minutes an act, the same music, "Clair de Lune" and Chopin's "Waltz in C-Sharp Minor."

She had been arrested three times previously, in Chicago in 1933, in San Francisco and Los Angeles in 1946. She was never convicted.

In later years she lived in Glendora, 30 miles from Los Angeles, with her mother and son, Sean. She had been married three times, to Turk Greenough, Harry Finklestein and Fred Lall.

1933 World's Fair Delight

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Sally Rand died Friday and just about everyone who knew her had to feel a sense of loss.

If you hadn't know Sally, you might have thought she was one of those unsavory characters who cavort at dingy nightspots these days.

Sally Rand was class.

She was 100 percent show business and was sheer genius in promoting her act.

Nearly five years ago, at age 70, Sally earned $1,500 in a week for a few 10-minute dances at a suburban Newport, Ky., club.

Just before opening night, she held court with reporters at the club. Compared with other dancers who stood gawking in the wings, Sally sparkled like a diamond.

Sally knew reporters were looking for crisp quotes and she was always ready, explaining for example that she was neither a "stripper" nor an "exotic" dancer.

"A stripper must take something off, I don't," she said. "Exotic means strange or foreign. Well, I'm not strange. I like men. And I'm not foreign. I was born in Missouri."

She explained that at age 70 she was doing "exactly the same fan dance" that originally brought her fame at age 29 at the 1933 Chicago World's Fair. There, she danced, apparently nude, behind two ostrich feather fans that she skillfully maneuvered in front of her.

"And why not the same fan dance?" she asked. "I'm the original, when you say fan dancer, you don't think of Tillie Tish. You think of Sally Rand." And even though she was in her 70s, Sally looked magnificent.

She dressed to the hilt for her interview. She wore a beautiful, black crushed velvet dress, high heels, a pink scarf and a gigantic feathered hat topped with pink bows. The purse she carried was shaped like a fan. Her face was nearly wrinkle-free and her body lean and trim.

"I've got to stay in shape," she said. "I'm touring 40 weeks a year. This is a physical thing. People wonder why I just don't do a couple of weeks in Vegas each year. Well, if I don't do it every day, then I can't do it at all."

She proudly passed around photographs of her grandchildren for reporters to admire. But then, sensing that the reason for the interviews might be slipping away, she quickly began talking about the oft-asked question of whether she really was nude behind the fans.

And for the answer, she just winked and repeated her most famous statement, "The Rand is quicker than the eye."

Nightspot Injunctions Targeted

By KAY BELL

Only one hearing was held Friday on temporary restraining orders issued last week against 12 clubs alleged to be breeding grounds for violence in Lubbock County.

Yvonne Faulks, civil division chief for the criminal district attorney's office, said this morning agreements have been reached for temporary injunctions in the remaining 11 cases.

Originally, hearings on the cases were scheduled to be held Friday in all five Lubbock district courts.

Attorneys for five of the unlicensed clubs have agreed to 120-day temporary injunctions prohibiting club owners from selling alcoholic beverages, said Mrs. Faulks.

Those club owners agreeing to the temporary injunctions operate Ernest's Pool Hall, 705 Broadway; The White Stallion, two miles east of the city on E. 19th Street; El Rancho Grande, 13th Street and Avenue F; Cleo's Joint, 2200 E. 37th Street; and an establishment at 319 Ninth Street operated by Leroy Perkins.

Attorneys for two other unlicensed clubs named in the suits filed last week — Chocolate City, 308 Idalou Highway and El Fronteriso, south of Lubbock on the Tahoka Highway — have asked for postponements of hearings on the temporary restraining orders, Mrs. Faulk said.

She said attorneys for the four licensed clubs named in the suit have agreed to 60-day injunctions prohibiting the club owners and managers from allowing persons with weapons on the premises. Those clubs are Dos Amigos, 407 Quirt Ave.; The Sweet Retreat, 1818 Texas Ave.; El Tropical, 202 Municipal Drive; and El Monte Carlo, 355 Ave H.

After a brief hearing in 99th District Court Friday, Judge Thomas L. Clinton issued a temporary injunction against the Zodiac Club, 1911 E. Broadway, prohibiting club owner Sanco Nash Jr. from selling alcoholic beverages for 120 days.

Nash, who represented himself during the hearing, told the court his club has not been open for the last two months, but that he hoped to reopen it sometime in September after remodeling efforts were completed.

Nash said the club had been operated primarily as a dance hall and patrons had brought their own liquor.

However, Alcoholic Beverage Commission Inspector J.C. Welch, called to the stand as a prosecution witness, said the ABC has filed one charge against The Zodiac Club for selling alcohol without a license.

Enter your own permanent numbers in the chart in the bottom right-hand corner. To figure your own permanent numbers, follow these three steps:

Step 1: From the year chart, find the numbers corresponding to your year of birth. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21; Emotional 17; Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

Step 2: Now find the corresponding number for the month you were born. If your month is February, and your year numbers were preceded by a B, your month numbers would be 8 for Physical, 3 for Emotional and 31 for Intellectual. Enter your own numbers in the figure chart for Step 2.

Add the three columns to derive your permanent biorhythm numbers for your Physical, Emotional and Intellectual cycles. Now you can refer to today's rhythms.

Brundage Widow Part Of Suit, Countersuit

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — She was the widow of millionaire sportsman Avery Brundage, and his estate had not been settled.

Donald R. Pate was a friend who offered her and her mother a place to stay until some of the financial matters could be worked out.

So within two months of her husband's death in 1975, Mariann Brundage and her mother moved into Pate's home where they remained for more than a year.

Now Pate and Mrs. Brundage are adversaries in court, each suing the other for more than $150,000.

Mariann Charlotte Katherina Stefanie Prinzessin Reuss Brundage says Pate asked her to marry him but that he later broke off the engagement. Pate says she took over his life and drove away his friends.

Prinzessin means princess in German, and Mrs. Brundage is a descendant of German nobility, among whom long names like hers are traditional.

In a suit filed in Santa Barbara Superior Court, Mrs. Brundage claims that Pate owes her $155,500 that she gave him in varying amounts ranging from $1,500 to $40,000 between August 1975 and September 1976 — money she claims was paid out "in contemplation of marriage."

"The factual basis is he has $155,500 and she wants it back," says James G. Patillo, her attorney.

Mrs. Brundage also claims that part of the money was used to pay for Pate's fashionable Rametto Road residence — which he described in court as a refurbished 21-room estate — and a 1976 Rolls Royce.

Meanwhile, Pate, a middle-age wealthy insurance man who operates agencies in 11 California counties, has filed a counter-claim seeking $160,000 that he said he paid to cover the expenses of Mrs. Brundage and her mother, Stefanie Reuss. He claims these expenses included liquor, food, servants, jewelry, medical expenses, and parties.

In his countersuit, he maintains that she was a tenant in his home and should pay him rent and that her mother gave him money, as a gift, towards the purchase of the Rolls Royce, which has since been sold.

Pate also seeks to end her claim on the Rametto Road estate.

The non-jury trial is in recess and resumes Oct. 8.

Mariann Prinzessin Reuss, a citizen of West Germany, was active in West German Olympic efforts and met Brundage through her work. She was 36 when they married in June 1973 in the German town of Garmisch-Partenkirchen. Brundage was 85.

Brundage died just shy of their second anniversary.

Shrimp Fishermen Fear Influx Of Vietnamese

PALACIOS (AP) — Truyen Van Trhn stood calmly before an angry group of 125 Texas fishermen in this sleepy little fishing community and told them what they least wanted to hear — he had just bought a fishing boat.

"I borrowed the money from my father and my brothers," the Vietnamese refugee said at the meeting Thursday night. "I've had it for about two weeks, but I'm not doing too well."

Trhn stood as the lone representative of his countrymen before a hostile, angry crowd, wary and fearful of their new competitors. The refugee fishermen have become the focal point of loud protests from native fishermen who claim the foreign influx will force them out of business within five years.

Trhn sat quietly in the rear of the Palacios Recreation Hall and listened as veteran Texas shrimp and crab fishermen discussed ways to end the migration of Vietnamese fishermen to this area.

They said they were afraid their fishing grounds would be depleted by the refugees.

Bo Cunningham, spokesman for a group called "PISCES," said, "We understand there will be about 600,000 vietnamese coming into this country next year, and it seems like they are all coming to Texas."

"At the present rate of escalation, within the next five years you're going to see people who were born and raised in this industry looking for other jobs."

Another fisherman, Ed Lambright of Port O'Connor, said the refugee fishermen did not observe common courtesies normally practiced by native fishermen.

"We have what you call a gentlemen's agreement that we don't crowd each other," Lambright said. "But the Vietnamese will pull right across our rigs, and this is the type of thing that causes bad feelings."

Lambright charged that his civil rights were being violated because the Vietnamese were cutting into his income.

At a nearby trailer park, where most of the Vietnamese refugees live, Dang Lan Ba talked quietly while watching his countrymen mend their nets.

"We don't want any trouble," he said. "We just want to live here peacefully and live by the rules."

At the meeting, H.M. Forester broached a subject that had been raised by others in private. "I'd like to know how these people can come in here and in five years buy a boat when it took me all my life," he said.

"I fought in World War II and didn't even get the GI Bill."

That question was addressed earlier in the day by U.S. Rep. Joe Wyatt, D-Texas. He said there has been plenty of talk about the Vietnamese receiving subsidies or low-interest loans to buy boats but, "I could find that they are getting no preferential treatment," he said.

Tensions between local and refugee fishermen passed the boiling point early last month at nearby Seadrift. An American fisherman was shot to death, and two Vietnamese were charged. Vietnamese boats were burned, and feelings in the area continue to run high.

Anti-Nuke Protest Due To Bank Loans Results In Arrests

BOSTON (AP) — Police arrested 16 anti-nuclear demonstrators who took over a board room of the First National Bank of Boston on Friday to protest the bank's investments in the Seabrook, N.H., nuclear power plant.

The nine women and seven men, demonstrating against loans to build plant, were dragged from the bank building by Boston police. The facility, itself the site of numerous demonstrations, is still under construction.

There was no violence or injuries. One demonstrator handed police a bouquet of flowers after she was put in the police wagon.

Police said they would be charged with trespassing.

Kirk Stone of Chester, N.H., a spokesman for the group calling itself the Manhattan Project, said the 16 slipped into the board room early Friday mrning in attempt to meet with First National President Richard D. Hill.

Stone said the group wanted to discuss the bank's loan to the Public Service Co. of New Hampshire to build the nuclear plant.

Luci, Pat Nugent End 13-Year Marriage

AUSTIN (AP) — Luci Nugent, daughter of the late President Lyndon Johnson, was granted a divorce Friday from Patrick Nugent, ending a marriage that began 13 years ago.

State District Court Judge Hume Cofer signed the divorce decree after attorneys agreed on a property settlement, which was not disclosed.

The couple has four children, Patrick Lyndon, 12, Nicole, 9, Rebekah, 5, and Claudia Taylor, 3.

Mrs. Nugent, 32, issued a brief statement after the decree was signed.

"After over a year and a half of separation, an amicable resolution was reached and divorce was granted for Luci and Pat Nugent. Those involved would like to express to friends within and without the media their appreciation for their consideration toward us during this time of personal pain," she said.

Mrs. Nugent filed for the divorce in January under Texas's no-fault divorce law that cites no grounds other than that the marriage had become "insupportable" because of discord.

Nugent, 36, and the younger of Johnson's two daughters were married Aug. 6, 1966, in a wedding attended by thousands of prominent persons in the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception in Washington, D.C., followed by a White House reception.

It was the first wedding in Washington of a president's daughter since Alice Longworth Roosevelt was married while her father, Theodore Roosevelt, was the nation's chief executive.

Anna Roosevelt, Franklin D. Roosevelt's daughter, was married inconspicuously on Jan. 18, 1935, while her father was president. That wedding, her second of three, was in New York.

Board Seeks Authority To Dismiss Teachers

By The Associated Press

The Oklahoma City school board headed for court Friday seeking authority to fire about 1,000 striking teachers. Little progress was reported in that dispute or in other contract disputes that have sent a total of 8,500 teachers to picket lines in eight states.

Some 200,000 students have been affected by school strikes this week in Louisiana, Michigan, Vermont, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, as well as Oklahoma.

Attorneys for the Oklahoma City board had an afternoon date with a three-judge panel expected to rule on whether it is legal under state law to bargain with the American Federation of Teachers.

The board also intended to ask the court if it can legally fire the teachers — about half the city's 2,300 educators — who went on strike Aug. 22 demanding higher pay.

School officials said 1,354 teachers showed up for work Friday — 34 more than the day before — and 90 percent of the students were in class.

In Jefferson Parish in suburban New Orelans, talks remained deadlocked in a six-day strike by more than 2,000 teachers. Roofing nails dumped in parking lots punctured a number of automobile tires at two parish schools where non-striking teachers and substitutes showed up for class.

Strikes also continued in 11 Michigan school districts, involving 3,100 teachers and 60,000 students.

In Highland Park, Ill., a North Shore suburb of Chicago, elementary teachers walked out Friday after nogotiations came to an impasse at 2 a.m. A strike continued in the Elmwood Park district, but teachers agreed to return to the bargaining table.

Department Releases Housing Figures

WASHINGTON (AP) — South Texas home buyers apparently are paying less than their counterparts elsewhere in the state, new figures from the Department of Housing and Urban Development indicate.

The lower prices, however, may be offset by the smaller square footage the department found in the typical homes in that part of the state.

Prices in West Texas generally were next to the lowest.

The prototype housing cost figures researched by each HUD field office are being published for the first time this year as a congressional requirement.

HUD spokesman Andy Gasparich said the figures are intended to help consumers learn what kind of deal they are making.

"It's just supposed to be a guide to people," he said. "I think it's more like the EPA mileage thing — here's what you should expect, give or take."

The Environmental Protection Agency twice a year publishes estimated gasoline mileage for each make and model automobile.

Gasparich cautioned that the housing cost figures are six to eight months old, so inflation should be taken into account.

Each field office reported representative sales prices for three types of homes, rated low, medium or high range. The department said each area included urban and rural homes in the study.

The low range home included three bedrooms and one full bath; the medium range included three or four bedrooms and two full baths; and the high range contained three to five bedrooms and two or three full baths. The study included land and site improvements in the price.

The San Antonio field office said low range dwellings had 900 square feet, medium 1,140 square feet and high 1,680 square feet.

The lowest costs were in the San Antonio market area itself, where low range homes sold for $27,500, medium range for $38,400 and high range for $50,000.

High range homes sold for slightly less in the Corpus Christi area, where the price was reported as $49,400. Costs for other types of dwellings were higher in than San Antonio. The Corpus Christi figures were listed as $28,800 for low range and $38,500 for medium range homes.

Homes in the Austin area sold for $28,000 in the low range, $38,800 in the medium and $50,500 in the high.

The Lubbock field office reported figures for low range homes with 1,060 square feet, medium range with 1,390 square feet and high range with 1,700 square feet.

The El Paso market area claimed the lowest prices, with low range homes reported at $30,500, medium range at $44,600 and high range at $50,800.

Amarillo followed on the list. Low range homes in the Panhandle area sold for $31,000 and medium range for $45,400. High range homes, however, at $52,200 were listed for $300 more than in Lubbock.

Prices for low range homes in the Lubbock area were $31,300. The medium range figure in Lubbock was $45,800.

The prices in the Midland-Odessa area were the highest reported by the Lubbock office, with $32,00 for low range homes, $47,000 in the medium range and $54,500 for high range dwellings.

The Fort Worth field office listed low range dwellings at 1,400 square feet, medium range at 1,600 square feet and high range at 2,200 square feet.

Homes in the Brownwood area sold for $34,500 in the low range, $40,200 in medium range and $68,000 in high range.

The San Angelo area listings included low range homes for $33,200, medium range for $51,800 and high range for $70,300.

In the Abilene area, the price for a low range home was $36,400. Medium range homes were listed as $52,600 and high range as $70,300.

The price for a low range home in the Wichita Falls area was $44,300. Medium range homes sold for $52,500 and high range for $69,700.

In the Fort Worth area the figures were $44,600 in the low range, $52,400 in the medium and $69,500 in the high.

The Dallas field office reported the top prices for high range homes in the state, but with 2,390 square feet in the category it also listed the greatest square footage.

The low range homes contained 1,090 square feet and medium range homes were listed at 1,600 square feet.

In the Dallas area the prices were $36,000 for low range homes, $56,500 for medium range and $76,600 for high range.

The figures for the Waco area were $36,500 for low range, $51,400 for medium range and $74,900 for high range.

The price for a low range home in the Tyler area was $35,500. Medium range homes sold for $48,300 and high range for $75,400.

The Houston field office, reporting for six areas, listed square footage as 1,090 for low range, 1,620 for medium range and 2,150 for high range.

The most expensive homes in the Gulf Coast and East Texas parts of the state were in the Beaumont area, where low range homes sold for $41,900, medium range for $55,800 and high range for $70,000.

In the Houston area, figures were $40,500 for the low range, $53,500 for medium range and $66,700 for high range.

Br'er Rabbit Didn't Attack Says Carter

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — President Carter says he did not beat the "banzai bunny." Nor was he attacked by the rabbit.

The president tried to clear the air Friday of reports and rumors about the rabbit, which he encountered while fishing on a small pond in nearby Webster County last April.

"It was a fairly robust-looking rabbit who was swimming, apparently with no difficulty," the president told reporters while walking through his hometown.

He chased it away from his boat with a paddle after he realized the rabbit was going to attempt to climb in.

"I determined this would be an unpleasant situation for me and the rabbit," the president said.

On Thursday evening, he told Florida newspaper editors interviewing him in Tampa that he guessed the rabbit had been startled by some dogs or other animals "and had jumped in the pond and was just looking for a dry place to crawl."

In a transcript of his comments made available Friday, the president said, "I took the boat paddle and hit water at the rabbit and he eventually and reluctantly turned away and went to the shore."

"The rabbit, I don't think, was trying to attack me," the president said.

He said he gave no thought to the incident until once ashore a Secret Service agent asked what animal tried to enter the boat.

"I said, 'It was a rabbit,'" the president said. "Immediately all my Georgia friends said rabbits don't swim, it isn't possible for it to be a rabbit."

But the president said a blow-up of an official White House photograph showed "it was plainly a rabbit."

Army Recruiting Investigation Widens

ARMY SAYS NO MORE "SKINHEADS" — Shaven skulls gleam in the sun as new recruits gather at Fort Jackson, S.C. in September, 1977. But the Army has announced that from now on new recruits will be able to keep their hair. (AP Laserphoto)

WASHINGTON (AP) — A widening investigation of alleged improprieties by recruiters may result in punitive actions in a majority of the 57 recruiting districts across the country, Army officials said Friday.

They disclosed that investigators are due to move into Nashville, Tenn., on Tuesday to look into suspected improper actions by recruiters there. Investigating teams previously concentrated on districts headquartered in Boston, Charlotte, N.C., Chicago, Dallas, Texas, and Montgomery, Ala.

The officials, declining to be identified publicly, did not name any of the other districts which they said "will be hit." They indicated instead that only one or two recruiters might be involved in improprieties in many of the affected districts.

The Army has assigned about 5,000 soldiers to recruiting duty. So far, it has relieved 50 sergeants from recruiting duty, filed charges against four and removed the commander of the Charlotte district.

The investigation began after accounts of irregularities in the Charlotte area were published in the Charlotte News earlier this year. Most of the punitive actions have been taken there.

The probe has centered on allegations that recruiters coached potential volunteers so they could pass entrance examinations.

Officials said this led the recruiting command at Fort Sheridan, Ill., to order a study of computer records. That study turned up what were termed "abnormal patterns" in the results of vocational aptitude and other tests.

The widening investigation comes at a time when the Army is straining to fill its ranks. The probe has gone beyond alleged test-coaching to other forms of cheating and malpractice.

The officials mentioned falsifying high-school diplomas and "overlooking" arrest records of prospective volunteers, among other possibilities.

The Marine Corps and Navy also have experienced some episodes of improper and illegal actions by recruiters.

INDIAN ARTIFACTS

AVON, Conn. (AP) — A Central State College archaeological team has unearthed the remains of a 2,000-year-old Indian village along the Farmington River floodplain. Also found were artifacts dating back 5,000 years, said Kenneth L. Feder, who heads the team. Feder said a cover of soil several feet thick had protected the site and left it almost "totally undisturbed."

Private Schools Deny Growth Due To Integration

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Lubbock private school officials say the bulk of any growth in their enrollments since implementation of desegregation in the public schools was not caused by white flight.

Spokesmen for several private institutions say that enrollment increases reflect normal growth patterns or are due to specific features of their schools.

Christ the King Elementary School is one that grew in attendance this year with a 33-student increase over last year. But Dr. Gonzalo Cartagenova, administrator of Christ the King schools, said the increase reflects a nationwide growth trend in private schools.

"I think throughout the nation private schools are experiencing a tremendous revival," Cartagenova said. "I think it's because of two things. It's a reaction against the lack of (religious) values of the public school system. Parents who want a religious-oriented education will come to us."

The administrator said that schools who "do not have a religious commitment cannot teach religious values."

He said he believes the growth in private schools attendance is also due to academics. "I have a tremendous respect for public schools," he said, "but they have to accept everyone. Because of the selectivity of private schools, academics are much better in general than in public schools."

Cartagenova said Christ the King received "many applications" from parents who wanted to transfer their children because of the public school busing situation. But the school elected last year not to expand its enrollment but only to fill vacancies so it would not become a haven for flight from busing.

The school also instituted a screening process to attempt to eliminate any applicants who came to escape desegregation.

The school continued its screening process this year, but did open its enrollment and expanded facilities. Cartagenova said that in order to grow and improve the school "has to enlarge its base."

He said "it would be difficult to say no one came" to escape busing, but added, "we tried hard" to screen out such applicants.

Harvey Tefertiller, superintendent of Lubbock Christian School, said the institution actually dropped in enrollment this year by about 100 students, mostly due to a 27 percent increase in the cost of tuition.

He said the school did gain about 60 students last year — the first year the Lubbock public school integration plan was implemented — but said the gain reflected "very normal growth" for the school. He said he had expected a sizable increase because of busing, but said many people probably did not come because when "the Lubbock plan came out, it was found a practical plan and not so bad."

He said that some people had even put down deposits on tuition at Lubbock Christian "and then didn't show up."

Tefertiller said the school has received some "phone contacts" from people who are checking into private school education "just in case" public schools must implement a systemwide integration plan.

He said "it is fair to say there is still some concern" about the busing, but said, "We don't exist as a white flight school. Our goal is a Christian education. We exist as an alternative to public schools not as a competitor."

On the other hand, said Tefertiller, "We respect the parents' right to choose" between private and public education.

Western Hills Baptist Academy has also experienced an increase in enrollment, but Linda Church, wife of the academy administrator said she believes the growth is a combination of normal increase plus an improved athletic program.

Mrs. Church, who receives most inquiries about enrolling in the school, said the school has about 50 more students this year, but said any growth this and last year was not "the busing so much. Each year we experience some growth."

She said that she received a few calls last year and this year "because parents don't want their children to be bused. But it seems most put their children in the academy because they are seeking a Christian education for their children."

Mrs. Church added that a private education "is very expensive, so I think there has to be more reason than just the busing" for parents to opt for the alternative to public school education.

Boys Ranch Rodeo Performances Set

BOYS RANCH (Special) — The 35th annual two-day Boys Ranch rodeo will open Sunday at 2:30 p.m.

The second rodeo performance is scheduled for 2:30 p.m. Monday.

About 150 boys will compete in bareback bronc riding, and also will be trying for the best time on Brahma bulls, steers, calves and stick horses.

Barbecue will be available at $2 a plate.

The rodeo also serves as a reunion for many of the approximately 3,000 boys who spent their youth at the ranch during the years since it opened in 1939.

Lower Spine Operation Longer Than Expected

BALTIMORE (AP) — Surgeons at University of Maryland Hospital said Friday night that an operation to replace a 33-year-old woman's lower spine was taking much longer than expected and blamed part of the delay on the patient's weight.

Doctors had hoped to wind up the surgery by late afternoon. But by 9:15 p.m. EDT, there was still no word on how far the operation had progressed and a hospital spokesman said the best guess on a completion time would not be before 10 p.m.

Terri Sullivant, a spokeswoman at University of Maryland Hospital, said Friday night that surgeons had encountered problems with fatty tissue in Jesse Thomas' back, making it more difficult to perform the delicate procedure.

Mrs. Thomas weighed 230 pounds when she entered the hospital in May. Miss Sullivant could not say how much she weighed at the time of surgery.

Miss Sullivant said Mrs. Thomas was in stable condition on the operating table while surgeons carefully removed excess tissue before implanting a metal replacement for the missing vertebrae, believed to be the first of its kind in the world, Sullivant said.

Miss Sullivant had said earlier in the day that the operation was taking longer than expected because doctors had found that tissue had grown around the woman's spinal cord since the vertabrae were removed six weeks ago.

The metal device the physicians were implanting was designed to protect the spinal cord and serve as a temporary spinal column while a bone graft develops.

Mrs. Thomas has been lying motionless in a special stretcher since the July 17 operation to remove her vertabrae, which followed the discovery of a rare bone tumor the size of a cantaloupe.

Doctors found the tumor after Mrs. Thomas became paralyzed in May. Dr. Charles C. Edwards, chief of orthopedic surgery and head of the surgical team, said that with the replacement, she has a remote chance of being able to walk again.

"None us can know how many of the nerves in the spinal cord will survive," Edwards said. "This procedure was developed to enhance and speed recovery to a good quality of life."

Without the replacement, he said, Mrs. Thomas would have to remain completely immobile the remainder of her life. Doctors said her tumor was malignant and is normally considered inoperable and fatal.

The operation involved placing two steel rods on the back of the woman's spine to prevent the spinal column from twisting, followed by the implantation of the metal prosthesis, Edwards said. The final step involved removing a section of the pelvic bone and grafting it to the front of the spinal column.

Man-made materials don't last forever," he said, adding that the bone will eventually grow, connect the remaining vertabrae and serve as a permanent spinal replacement.

Edwards engineered the prosthesis and the tools to implant it.

PEOPLE PLACES THINGS

Collecting Scales Pays Off

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A compulsion to collect things and an interest in scales has turned into a lucrative hobby for Chris Steele.

Steele's love for the old-fashioned penny scale started in 1969 in Columbus' former train station.

"I fell in love with the scale," the 30-year old artist said. "I wrote them (the company) a letter and about six months later they wrote back. I went to their warehouse in Pennsylvania and bought 10 or 15 scales."

His collection continued to grow.

"When I passed 20 I thought it was unbelievable. I have 75 now. In the next year or two I should have up to 100."

Steele displayed 29 of his scales at Ohio State University in a show that concluded this week.

"I've kept my collection a secret until this year," he said. "I wanted to keep the prices down and run around without any competition for awhile. Now everybody and his brother are collecting these as a hedge against inflation."

Scale prices have climbed in the last few years, Steele said. Some in his collection are worth more than $5,000, he said.

"It depends on how rare it is. You can still find bargains. But a couple of hundred bucks is usually the bottom unless (the sellers) don't know what they're doing."

Racer's Car Towed Away

JAMES HUNT

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) — British international race driver James Hunt found himself walking after police towed away his automobile for a parking violation.

Police said Hunt left his luxury auto Thursday night in a parking spot reserved for taxis while he attended a party at Munich's Vier Jahreszeiten hotel.

Police presented him with a towing charge the equivalent of about $65, in addition to a $25 fine.

Thief Repents In 30 Years

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — The note and a $50 money order sent to the governor for the state cafeteria was signed simply, "A Thief."

Written in an unsteady hand, the note said the money was to repay "some money I stole from you 30 years ago."

The letter, with a Livingston, La., postmark, was sent to Gov. Edwin Edwards and forwarded to the state treasurer.

"There aren't many people like that around," Deputy Treasurer Joel Deville said.

After 30 years, the cafeteria is still in the basement of the Capitol. But the management has changed and it is now operated by privatecontractor.

For that reason, Deville said, the money won't be turned over to the cafeteria. Instead, it will be put in the state's general fund with a notation that the source was "miscellaneous."

Deville said he isn't sure, but thinks the state operated the cafeteria 30 years ago.

Reservists Abandon Ship

DULUTH, Minn. (AP) — The only injury was to the pride of the Navy Reserve on Friday when a fireboat sank in Lake Superior and the crew of five reservists was forced to abandon ship.

The 40-foot craft owned by the St. Louis County Civil Defense organization had been moored at the Duluth Arena Auditorium dock after escorting the U.S.S. Fairfax County, a Navy tank landing craft, into the harbor.

The sinking occurred in full view of the crew of Navy regulars aboard the Fairfax County, the first Navy vessel to visit the Duluth harbor in many years.

Only a mast-top antenna was visible as the fireboat settled to the lake bottom in about 20 feet of water.

The Naval Reserve Center said the sinking apparently resulted from failure of a check valve in an exhaust manifold. The malfunction permitted water to enter the engine compartment.

Mayor Rips Dog Story

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Mayor Frank Rizzo is growling about a published report implying a city official scheduled a business trip to California so he could pick up a puppy the mayor had bought.

FRANK RIZZO

The story is doggone wrong, Rizzo insists.

"It's the cheapest cheap shot of my life," the mayor said of a Philadelphia Journal article published Thursday under a headline that read, "Rizzo's Dog Cost You $$$$."

Rizzo said he bought the dog from a woman in Hawthorne, Calif., and had city Aviation Director Donald Angell bring it back with him from a July business trip to Los Angeles.

"When I heard that this little puppy — he was born April 24 — would have to ride in a box in a freight plane, it sounded cruel to me," Rizzo said. "So, I called Angell and said, 'Maybe you know a pilot on the planes who could bring it back in the cabin.'

"Angell said, 'Mayor, in two or three weeks I'll be going out there.'"

"The trip was already set," Rizzo said.

The trip was for a business conference with airline officials about scheduling flights to Philadelphia International Airport, according to Angell. City Controller Eugene Chett said Friday he is trying to verify the business trip.

The Journal quoted unidentified high-level city sources as saying documentation of the business trip was prepared after the newspaper began its inquiry.

Swedish Prince Baptized

STOCKHOLM (AP) — Swedish Crown Prince Carl Philip, a boisterous 3½-month-old, was baptized Friday before a distinguished group of 700 guests, among them a king, two queens, a president, a prime minister and several princes and princesses.

The prince, whose first claim to the Swedish throne will be set aside when a constitutional amendment takes effect next year, is the second child of King Carl XIV Gustaf, 33, and German-born Queen Silvia, 35. Their first phild, 2-year-old Princess Victoria who will become heir to the throne, also was present.

Record Kielbasa Attempted

CHICOPEE, Mass. (AP) — The Chamber of Commerce will try to put this city in the Guinness Book of World Records next Wednesday when it unveils this year's version of "the world's largest kielbasa."

The exact dimensions of the meat have not been disclosed. But Chamber President Frank Desmarais said Wednesday that the kielbasa — the centerpiece of the city's annual Kielbasa Festival — would be the largest ever produced anywhere.

Security is tight, as it has been each year since 1977, when someone walked off with the festival's star kielbasa.

Gregory, Others Arrested

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Civil rights activist Dick Gregory and 67 others protesting the closing of a city hospital's inpatient services were arrested when they sat down in a highway intersection.

GREGORY

Gregory, a former St. Louis resident, led a march of about 150 persons Thursday from Homer G. Phillips Hospital on the city's northside to City Hall. They carried signs that called for retention of Phillips as a full-care facility and for a boycott of downtown businesses.

The 68 persons arrested, including alderman Freeman Bosley, were released several hours later after being ordered to appear in court on charges of failing to obey a reasonable request of a police officer, authorities said.

Mayor James Conway has led the move to combine the services of Phillips and City hospitals. He said $6 million a year could be saved. Opponents are seeking a court injunction to reverse the combination.

RHODESIAN CHARGED

SALISBURY, Zimbabwe Rhodesia (AP) — Police have arrested a former co-minister of defense and charged him with incitement to murder in connection with the July 1978 slayings of five political rivals. John Kadzviti is to appear in court Sept. 13 to answer the charge. He could be hanged if convicted. Police said Kadzviti, an aide to opposition leader Ndabaningi Sithole, ordered auxiliary forces loyal to Sithole to seek out party dissidents and kill them.

Robberies Spur Extra Police Surveillance

NEW YORK (AP) — Police cars began spending part of their patrols outside hundreds of the city's banks Friday in an effort to stem a record number of holdups, but three more bank branches were robbed to bring the total for the month to 140.

Police Commissioner Robert McGuire issued the order for police cars to "pay special attention" to banks following robberies at 11 banks Thursday.

Calling the holdup men "brazen," McGuire said, "They've got to be caught."

But he conceded: "You can't win in this town. That is the bottom line. I've got a problem. You do the best job you can."

As if in answer, three more banks were robbed. No police cars were at the branches, authorities said, but a woman thought to be involved in one of the holdups was arrested when she returned to the bank.

In a separate incident Friday morning, three gunmen overpowered two guards from a payroll truck outside a Bronx electronics company, making off with the guards' weapons and $125,000 in cash, police said. There were no injuries or arrests.

McGuire's order requiring "all available patrol cars" to stand guard outside the banks was sharply criticized by the president of the police officers union, who contended it would endanger lives.

Samuel DeMilia, president of the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association, accused McGuire of being "more interested in protecting money than lives."

"We don't have a sufficient force to protect the public now," DeMilia said.

Nations Remember World War II Beginnings

Forty years ago people awoke on the first day of September to the news that Germany had invaded Poland and the sickening knowledge that the world was at war again.

Those who fought and suffered through World War II have begun to grow old and with them memories of those years of endless slaughter. And yet the war will never be forgotten.

Nor the memory of the blitzkreig, the lightning war that struck without warning and spared nothing as it swept across the broad Polish plains, checked only by the speed at which the vast mechanized armies could advance. Against them the Poles fielded an army of unprotected infantry and cavalry.

In the last days of summer and of the Polish nation, the Polish cavalry charged the German tanks, wave after wave dashing to their deaths beneath the grinding iron treads.

Six million Poles, more than one in five, would die before the returning tide of war swept the Nazis from their country in 1945. Across the globe 55 million people, only some of them soldiers, would perish in those six years.

After futile pleas to the Germans to withdraw, Britain and France glumly went to war. Only months before they had assured the Poles of swift help if war ever came. Now the French army told its government that it would take two years to prepare an offensive.

Haunted by the memories of another world war and caught in a conflict they had struggled to avoid, the dispirited Allies waited behind the Maginot Line, a system of fortifications touted as France's invincible shield.

In the early summer of 1940 the Germans struck again, invading enemies and neutrals alike. Denmark fell in a day, Holland in four, Norway in a week.

French resistance evaporated as the Germans simply drove around the sprawling border fortifications, lunging to the Atlantic in a week. At an inquiry after the war, a French general thoughfully said that more carrier pigeons might have helped.

As each country fell, the roar of the guns gave way to the volleys of countless firing squads, weeding Europe of the Nazi's enemies and the "sub-human" peoples they had declared a separate war on. Later vast extermination camps were erected to butcher millions as nations were ransacked and turned into giant slave camps to serve Europe's new masters.

At the center of the carnage stood Adolf Hitler, whose bloody journey across the face of history will never be explained. An American journalist who watched Hitler's rise from the gutters and soup kitchens of Vienna said later that he seemed to unlock in men the dark savagery of the primeval forest.

Long before he came to power, Hitler had outlined in a thousand speeches his creed of a Germanic master race destined to rule the world or destroy it. Only his followers had listened until his first astounding victories and then Hitler found eager allies and the war spread far beyond Europe.

Mussolini, the dictator of Italy, obsessed with creating a second Roman Empire despite his countrymen's reluctance, said, "To make a people great it is necessary to send them into battle even if you have to kick them in the pants."

For three years the tide of conquest flowed unchecked across half the world, nations falling by the handful, as helpless as Poland had been. Even the United States, seemingly safe behind thousands of miles of ocean, found itself at war overnight amid the blazing wrecks of Pearl Harbor.

And then the blitzkreig began to falter. The Russians, who had lost 650,000 men in a single battle when the Germans first invaded their country, halted the enemy and then began to drive him back. In Asia and the Pacific allied troops gradually forced the Japanese back towards their homeland.

Allied aircraft carried the war to Germany and Japan. Thousands of bombers poured bombs and incendiaries with unhurried precision into the hearts of cities. In a single night in Dresden and Hamburg, thousands were dragged to their deaths in the giant fires stoked by the bombs and the 60-mile-an-hour winds that fanned the blazes.

The vast, latent military and industrial might of the Allies began to tell. America became a giant foundry where factories turned out aircraft by the minute. For every enemy soldier its troops killed, the United States spent $800,000.

But when peace returned to the shattered world, there was little rejoicing. Hitler's vow at the war's beginning — "we may be destroyed, but if we are, we shall drag a world with us, a world in flames" — had been all but realized.

In Europe alone 1,700 cities and 70,000 villages lay in ruins. It was estimated that 10 freight trains 50 cars long would take 16 years to clear the rubble from Berlin.

From Japan, where the last battles were fought, came word of the atomic bomb whose searing flash could destroy tens of thousands in a moment. Eying the charred remains of Hiroshima and Nagasaki, the allies of one war uneasily watched each other and began to plan.

Newcomer Startled By Massachusetts Drivers

BOSTON (UPI) — Massachusetts drivers are not known for being bashful. Any new resident of the state quickly finds that out.

John C. Whitmarsh recently moved to the Boston area from Chicago, and it wasn't long before he "noticed considerable differences in driving technique and automotive etiquette between the two cities.

"Based on close — dangerously close — observation of Massachusetts drivers," he said in a letter to the editor of the Boston Globe that he assumed the Massachusetts Driver's Handbook includes these directives:

•Directional signals are considered optional equipment on all vehicles.

•If directional signals must be used, employ them half way through the turn instead of before it.

•Improve traffic flow by driving down the middle of the road instead of in one lane or the other.

•Yellow lights do not mean slow down. Step on it.

•Flashing green lights, peculiar to Massachusetts, are designed to confuse drivers at dangerous intersections, weeding out the men from the boys and turning orderly traffic flow into a game of chicken.

•Under no circumstances will a licensed driver look when pulling into traffic. You might hit someone.

•Save energy. Avoid using headlights at night.

•Park using the braille method. Bump the car ahead and smash the car behind until your vehicle comes to a complete stop.

•Never feed a parking meter.

•"One Way" actually means traffic may proceed in two directions.

•U-turns across four lanes of traffic are permitted anytime and encouraged during rush hours.

Q. When does "Dixie Green" need to be planted?
A. Anytime during the next three months, but the earlier, the better.
Q. How is "Dixie Green" planted?
A. A person wanting to seed over an existing lawn should scalp the lawn, and apply "Dixie Green" with a spreader, and water thoroughly. In a new yard, level ground and loosen soil, apply with spreader and rake thoroughly.

Dominican Republic Hit By Shifting Hurricane

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — Hurricane David turned abruptly from its open sea course Friday and slammed ashore in the Dominican Republic with winds up to 150 mph, weather officials reported.

They said the erratic killer storm, which already has strewn death and devastation among other Caribbean islands, thundered into the Dominican Republic just southwest of the capital, Santo Domingo.

Winds in Santo Domingo surged from 55 mph to 120 mph in late afternoon, weather officials said, uprooting trees, sailing rooftops like playing cards, and toppling utility poles. Torrential rains inundated the capital and nearby towns.

No Casualty Report

There was no casualty report.

The hurricane had been moving about 50 miles south of the Dominican Republic, heading for Haiti, when it suddenly turned north, threatening the lives of thousands of Dominicans who huddled in shelters from the huge waves and terrifying winds. The two nations share the island of Hispaniola.

David was blamed earlier for 14 deaths on Puero Rico and at least 18 on the tiny Caribbean island of Dominica.

The U.S. National Weather Service in Miami reported its measuring devices in Santo Domingo registered winds in excess of 100 mph "before the equipment blew down."

Probable Course

The hurricane should move westward over Hispaniola during the night and emerge off Haiti's west coast this morning after pummeling all the island, including the north coast.

It should lose strength in Hispaniola's high mountains, but regain force as it returns to the sea, with hurricane-strength winds possibly hitting eastern Cuba this afternoon. There was no forecast of its direction after that, and no way of knowing if it might turn north toward the United States.

Ana Reyes, a Red Cross spokeswoman in Puerto Rico, said 11 of the deaths on that U.S. commonwealth island were reported in flooded Toa Baja, 25 miles west of the capital of San Juan. Gov. Carlos Romero Barcelo flew over the zone in a police helicopter Friday to assess the damage.

News reports from Barbados said the death toll on Dominica could reach 26 and about 60,000 of the population of 81,000 were homeless. Officers of the British navy frigate Fife, leading a rescue mission, estimated as many as 4,000 residents of Dominica were injured.

In Port-au-Prince, Haiti, officials said earlier that the southern coastal city of Jacmel, with 70,000 residents, appeared to be directly in David's path. Emergency supplies and trained relief workers were disptached to Jacmel, linked to the interior by only one twisting mountain road. Haiti, the most impoverished country in the western hemisphere, is on the western end of Hispaniola.

Weather agencies reported another hurricane developing in the south Atlantic and said a tropical storm in the Gulf of Mexico was nearing the Texas coast.

In Santo Domingo, the Dominican capital and major port, towering seas crashed ashore. The city's streets were deserted save for emergency vehicles or military patrols guarding against looting.

Dominican soldiers had herded many residents into civil defense shelters and away from low-lying areas before high winds began ripping the capital at about noon.

The storm, one of the century's most severe with winds of 150 mph, was spotted late Friday as being 18.2 degrees north latitude and 70.5 degrees west longitude, just west of Santo Domingo.

Electricity was cut off as a safety precaution in all Dominican cities and water was cut off in the capital. Citizens were urged to keep food and candles handy.

President Antonio Guzman went on national radio and television in the hours before the storm approached, urging citizens not to panic and to follow the directions of the national guard. Constant weather bulletins were issued.

Sources in Haiti said the government radio station in the capital, Port-au-Prince, was broadcasting storm warnings and Red Cross officials said amateur radio opeators in various locations were supplied with portable generators for emergency communications.

In the Gulf, Tropical Storm Elena's broad center was 125 miles southeast of Galveston, Tex., and moving west-northwest. Warnings were in effect from Morgan City, La., to Port O'Connor, Tex., and the Weather Service said the storm would reach the Texas coast by this morning.

Interest Rate Still Too Low, Official Says the call and make rates competitive," he said.

Although Clements has not agreed to include discussion of the interest ceiling in the agenda for any special legislative session, Vandygriff said the governor is "fully aware of the situation we're faced with."

Vandygriff said there had been some "temporary resistance" to the higher interest rates by consumers, but said so long as there is a demand for housing buyers will pay what the market demands.

Although he doesn't see interest rates going down anytime soon, Vandygriff isn't predicting any large increases either.

"I think it will remain a pretty steady level figure," he said of the state's interest ceiling, and predicted the prime interest rate will "peak out pretty soon."

However, "it will be some time before we see a decrease in interest rates," he said.

Soviet Buildup In Cuba Noted

little choice but to release the information, despite its potential impact on the SALT ratification vote. They said they felt certain the information would be leaked if they did not release it themselves.

A retired intelligence officer, Lt. Gen. Daniel Graham, said some analysts had picked up evidence of the combat unit several months ago. But it was only recently that the "intelligence community" concluded that the evidence represented a combat unit and not military advisers.

Spokesman Carter said "elements" of the combat unit have been in Cuba since 1976. Other sources said the entire brigade may have been in Cuba for as many as four years without intelligence sources being aware of its numerical strength and capability. They said the evidence did not indicate a recent influx of troops.

The administration sources said they still did not know what the mission of the brigade was. Some speculated that it might be a "trip wire" force requested by Cuban Premier Fidel Castro as a deterrent to potential attackers, who would not want to engage Soviet forces.

Although they felt it was unlikely the Soviets would take such a risk, the officials said they could not rule out the possibility that the Soviets might intend to use the troops elsewhere in Latin America. That was also a concern voiced by Church, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

"It is one thing for Russians to engage in such activities in places like Angola and Ethiopia. It is quite another thing to move into what always has been regarded as our own front yard," he said, adding, "The president must make it clear. We draw the line on Russian penetration of this hemisphere."

Obscenity Law Delay Granted

HOUSTON (AP) — A preliminary injunction granted Friday by a federal judge exempted dealers of adult films and literature in nine counties from a new state obscenity law that took effect at midnight.

U.S. District Judge Norman Black granted the delay to give defense attorneys a chance to study their briefs and develop their arguments.

The case involves three suits consolidated by Black that were filed by 41 pornography dealers against officials in Harris, Dallas, Tarrant, Travis, Bexar, Galveston, El Paso, McLennan and Hidalgo counties.

They are challenging the constitutionality of two 1979 statutes that increase the amount of penalties and simplify the prosecution of obscenity cases.

White Shoots Down Four Money Vetoes

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Mark White shot down four of Gov. Bill Clements' state spending vetoes Friday, restoring expenditures totaling $90 million.

White's opinion was issued one day before the start of the fiscal biennium for which the Legislature appropriated the money.

The governor's lawyer, David Dean, said Clements' options include filing a suit to challenge the attorney general's opinion.

"We wouldn't preclude the possibility" of going to court. "All our options are open," said Dean.

White said Clements exceeded his authority in vetoing riders in the 1980-81 general appropriation bill that:

— Authorize construction with about $40 million in federal funds of a new building to house the Texas Department of Human Resources and the Texas Youth Council.

— Appropriate proceeds of the 10 cents per $100 valuation state property tax for construction at 17 colleges and universities outside the University of Texas and Texas A&M systems. The amount is estimated at $50 million.

— Require the State Board of Control to raise state employee parking fees to between $6 and $16 instead of the present $3 per month. White said, however, the rider itself was unconstitutional and told the board it could set whatever fees it wishes.

— Permit the University of Texas system to spend earnings from its dedicated oil lands to improve the Sun Bowl on the campus of UT-El Paso.

White said expenditure of the state property tax on college buildings is directed by the Texas Constitution and Clements has no authority to interfere.

The money can be spent for nothing else.

"Since these funds are appropriated by the constitution, they are not subject to veto," White said.

In the case of the other three nullified vetoes, White said the Texas Supreme Court has held governors may veto line item expenditures but not special provisions, commonly called riders.

Jon Ford, Clements' press secretary, said White's opinion left intact other vetoes totaling $162 million — "still by far the largest amount ever vetoed from a two-year budget."

The previous record, he said, was $27 million cut from the fiscal 1976-77 budget by former Gov. Dolph Briscoe in 1975.

Dean said that before taking any action, such as filing a court case, the governor and his staff would "look at and examine" White's opinion.

"Obviously, we persist in our belief the governor's actions were proper and appropriate," he said.

Besides a court test, Dean said Clements' options include requesting a new opinion from White and "visit with board members" of the Department of Human Resources and the colleges in an effort to persuade them not to spend the money he tried to veto.

Clements issued a statement echoing Dean's remark that all options remain open, including a legal challenge to the opinion.

He referred to the proposed building for the Department of Human Resources and the Texas Youth Council as a "$40 million Taj Mahal to house the welfare bureaucracy."

He said he hoped the three-member citizen board that sets policy for the human resources agency "will take another look at plans to build a $40 million building at a time when citizens are demanding that our resources be devoted to effective service rather than bricks and mortar."

White's Ruling

a new state welfare building, improvements to the Sun Bowl in El Paso and higher parking fees for government workers.

White said these items were riders, not items of appropriation, and the Texas Supreme Court has ruled in the past that the governor's authority to veto state expenditure items does not extend to riders.

Astronaut Hopefuls Complete Classes

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group of 35 astronaut candidates, including the first women and minorities selected for U.S. space training, have completed their classes nearly a year ahead of schedule and are ready for flight assignments, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration reported Friday.

The group was selected in January, 1978, and reported for training at the Johnson Space Center in Houston the following July.

The training period was to have lasted two years, but organizers were able to trim it as it progressed. As a result of lessons learned, NASA said all future astronaut-candidate classes will be scheduled for one year.

With the graduation Friday, the 35 earned the right to be called astronauts. In the group are six women, three blacks and an Oriental. Fifteen of them are now eligible for selection as pilots and 20 as mission specialists aboard the space shuttle, America's next generation spaceship which is to make its first orbital trips next year.

There now are a total of 62 men and women in the U.S. astronaut corps. NASA plans to name a new group of candidates each year.

Young Aide Named U.N. Ambassador

agreed with Young that U.S. policy of not talking to the PLO was "ridiculous." But speaking in general terms, he said, "I would hope that one of the things we would continue to work for would be the opening of channels of communication."

McHenry's nomination is considered likely to ease black leaders' anger over the departure of Young, the highest-ranking and best-known black in the Carter administration. McHenry, 42, also is black.

Asked if he thought his appointment would decrease tensions between blacks and Jews that have surfaced since Young's resignation, McHenry said, "I would hope the appointment is not aimed at that. I would also hope that the American people and those of you in the media would look on my appointment as that of somebody who has been working in the field of foreign policy for a long time, and on the basis of that."

McHenry played a highly visible role in the recent Kennedy Airport negotiations with the Soviet Union concerning Bolshoi ballet dancer Ludmilla Vlasova after her husband, Alexander Godunov, defected to the United States.

"Familiar With Issues"

"He's a highly qualified professional, thoroughly familiar with the major issues that confront the United Nations," Carter said of McHenry. The president is vacationing in Plains, his hometown.

McHenry "has been highly recommended to me by Ambassador Andrew Young" as well as Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and others, Carter said.

In an apparent reference to the ballet negotiations, Deputy White House press secretary Rex Granum said Carter feels McHenry "has demonstrated" "both toughness and coolness under fire" as well as "strng and forceful negotiating skills."

Indicating the nomination means no shift in U.S. policies, Granum said the new ambassador would be "in a very good position to continue to develop the relations established by Ambassador Young at the United Nations."

"Symbol Of Determination"

"He will be a symbol of the president's determination to continue the process of bridge-building to the developing nations, particularly in Africa, because of his close association with the existing American policy," Granum said.

McHenry, who first joined the State Department in 1963, left in the early 1970s, working with the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace and serving as a guest lecturer at Georgetown University.

He worked on Carter's transition team after the 1976 election and subsequently was appointed Young's deputy.

He also taught college English before going to work for the government, and Young sometimes calls him "the professor," for his background and demeanor.

In contrast to Young, whose remarks often stirred controversy, McHenry is known for his quiet, careful use of language in diplomatic matters.

Though he received warm praise from Carter, he does not have the same relationship with the president as has Young, an early and important political supporter of his fellow Georgian.

McHenry would receive a salary of $57,500 a year in the ambassador's post compared with $50,000 as deputy. The nomination is subject to Senate confirmation.

Bazargan Wants Out, Asks Khomeini Rule

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Prime Minister Mehdi Bazargan asked to be relieved of his duties Friday and called on the the people of Iran in a midnight television address to ask Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini to take the reins of government.

"I have tendered by resignation a long time ago. I would be pleased to be relieved of my post so that I can go home to relax and give others the chance to come and take over the government," Bazargan said in his hour-long nationwide telecast.

"I plead to the people to request Ayatollah Khomeini to come to Tehran and take over the responsibilities of the affairs of the country," said the 72-year-old former university professor, who has been sharply criticized recently for the bloody fighting in the northern province of Kurdistan.

Moslems Keep Authority

Spiritual leader Khomeini, 79, established his base in the holy city of Qom, 100 miles south of the capital, after he inspired the Islamic uprising that overturned the monarchy of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi in February. Khomeini appointed Bazargan to head a provisional revolutionary regime, but he and his Moslem clerical supporters retain supreme authority.

"Even religious preachers and (speakers) in funeral orations for revolutionary guards (who died fighting in Kurdistan) seem to have no other subject but to criticize the government for fumbling and lack of decisiveness," Bazargan said.

Looking depressed and lacking his usual buoyant style, he said: "Unfortunately, everyone in the country is not aware of the fact that we have a war cabinet which holds regular sessions on Kurdistan. The government is watching events carefully there. But the fact is the government has been a knife with no blade."

Kurdistan's 4 million Kurdish inhabitants have been demanding home rule for the province. Insurgents have clashed repeatedly with government forces since March, leaving hundreds dead on both sides and towns and villages partially destroyed by the fighting.

"True, we have an army, regular and state police. Not only were their arms taken away, but many groups even opposed their existence right from the outset of the revolution. To add to the flames of criticism, newspapers and television which operates with government funds, attack and criticize the government," Bazargan said.

He added that if he remained silent against the criticism, "it would be considered as accepting it."

"Not Revolutionary"

Referring to charges by Khomeini that his government has not been revolutionary enough, Bazargan said, "We have not acted in a revolutionary way.... But if acting in a revolutionary manner means going against all international standards and disregard of laws, I accept the accusation."

Bazargan concluded that he and his colleagues in the government "are not trying to hold on to our positions."

The Kurds have told Khomeini and the government that "Kurdistan will be your graveyard if you continue to brutally suppress the aspirations of the Kurdish masses."

Khomeini ordered the rebellion crushed and said if the Kurds obeyed his commands, they would be immune from revenge and persecution.

Bazargan Undermined

Bazargan was chosen by Khomeini to restore order in Kurdistan, but Bazargan's government has repeatedly been undermined by Khomeini and his appointed Islamic revolutionary committees.

Earlier Friday, Khomeini accused the Kurdish rebels of seeking to create a "heathen Communist state," and another influential cleric warned that if armed resistance continued "we shall eliminate them no matter what the cost."

The outlawed Kurdish Democratic Party accused Khomeini of ordering the massacre of innocent Kurds.

Despite the strongly worded statements, both sides appeared determined to avoid a major military confrontation. A Kurdish goodwill delegation remained in the Iranian capital, and the government and rebel forces exchanged prisoners.

The official news agency Pars said 64 government soldiers were released by the rebel comvand in the Kurdish stronghold of Mahabad, and 36 revolutionary guards and a like number of rebels were exchanged in the Kurdish town of Paven.

Mexican Talks Hit Impasse

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A U.S. diplomatic mission and Mexican officials met for two days, but failed to reach agreement on the purchase of Mexican natural gas and other key issues between the two countries, a Foreign Ministry statement said Friday.

It said Presidents Carter and Jose Lopez Portillo will meet Sept. 28-29 in Washington despite the differences "since the two are firmly determined to keep in close contact and devote their personal attention to the strenghtening and widening" of relations.

On the talks with the U.S. team headed by Undersecretary of State Warren Christopher, the statement said, "No agreement was reached on the sale of Mexican gas to the U.S." Foreign Minister Jorge Castaneda led the Mexican negotiators.

A U.S. diplomatic source said, "I just don't know if you could call them an absolute failure or not. I just don't know how to characterize the talks." The diplomat, who asked not to be named, added, "All the issues were sensitive and discussed in closed-door session at the Foreign Ministry on Wednesday an Thursday." Christopher and his delegation returned to Washington Friday.

hurt," Lee said. "If your race car breaks down you can just fix it, but you can't just slap a new tire on a horse and send him back out. You've really got to be careful."

Some horses can take the incessant thudding, like Easy Jet from Roswell, who won 22 races including the 1969 All American Futurity as a 2-year-old, but the stories of gorgeous racehorses cut down by injury are as plentiful as the wildflowers growing behind Shiney's stall at Ruidoso.

A prime example is Oh Shiney's father, Three Oh's, who, after winning the 1968 All American on his way to the national quarter horse prize money title, was forced into early retirement by bone chips in his legs.

Lee is acutely aware of the spectre of injuries and goes to great lengths to prevent his horses from suffering because of too much strain. "If you get greedy, you won't get anything. If you run a horse that hard and he can take it, you'll become a millionaire, but if he can't you come up empty, and it's just not worth it.

"We try to run our horses early just to see if they're going to be racehorses," he continued. "If they show some promises, we'll lay back and point toward the races we really want to win. In fact, we'd give up a shot at a Triple Crown to keep a horse fresh for the All American."

Perhaps the most difficult part of horse racing is choosing the racers of the future. Most horses are bought as yearlings, before they've ever run a race and, despite a pedigree as royal as the Queen of England's, there's no guarantee of success. Lee knows this well.

"We bought two horses last year. One is a bleeder (a horse so fragile it bleeds when it runs) and the other looks terrific but it couldn't beat a fat man down hill. You just never know, but I guess that's part of the challenge. They can't all win the All American."

Oh Shiney didn't win the All American, either, placing fifth last year after stumbling a bit at the start, but he is healthy, thanks largely to Lee's policy of racing him sparingly. Oh Shiney has run only four times this year, yet he has won three of those, and his fifth place finish in the All American last year was his only finish out of the money.

Lee is planning on taking his prize horse to California for the winter season to race as a 4-year-old, after which Oh Shiney will most likely be brought back to stud. With his bloodlines, racing record and clean bill of health, he should make a dandy one.

And Lee, always thinking ahead, has some plans for that time when Shiney will no longer race. He leans back in his chair, grins and admits, "Well, I've got this new horse called "Color Feature."

Nicaraguan Publishers Give Junta Full Marks

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Nicaragua's "independent" newspapers, subject to periodic censorship and harassment under the ousted Somoza government, say they are publishing freely under the Sandinista junta that now runs the country.

Some openly criticize the new government and ask it to correct what they regard as the revolution's shortcomings. The criticism has not been harsh.

"I have never felt this calm and without fear in publishing our newspaper," said Javier Chamorro, managing editor of La Prensa. "We have been publishing our newspaper without any coercion, without any pressure from the government and with full and complete freedom."

He is the brother of Pedro Joachim Chamorro, La Prensa's publisher who was shot and killed on the street here Jan. 11, 1978. Six men were arrested by the Somoza government and still are awaiting trial on charges of murdering the publisher. Somoza officials denied charges that the government was behind the slaying of Chamorro, whose newspaper was in the opposition camp.

The new government has emphasized that freedom of the press would be a cornerstone of the revolution. After a 30-day emergency period following the fall of President Anastasio Somoza on July 17, it allowed independent newspapers and radio stations to begin publishing and broadcasting. Newspapers and broadcast outlets linked with Somoza have not been allowed to return and are not believed likely to.

The government and the Sandinista National Liberation Front maintain three official news outlets — the newspaper Barricadas, Radio Sandino and the Voice of Nicaragua. All are supportive of the government and avoid any kind of criticism of it.

Somoza's handling of the print media included censorship during times of crisis. La Prensa and Diario Centroamericano in Leon shut down their presses in May and June rather than sumbit news articles to censors. The Leon newspaper is expected to resume publication shortly.

The Chamorro brothers were imprisoned several times and sent into exile once. Many La Prensa reporters and local representatives of foreign news organizations sometimes were threatened by anonymous callers.

On several occasions, before La Prensa's plant was destroyed in national guard rocket attack during the June fighting, unknown gunmen fired shots into the building.

In the present situation, the left-wing newspaper El Pueblo has issued some of the sharpest criticism of the new government. It condemned a government move banning the use of 500-and 1,000-cordoba banknotes in the belief that former Somoza officials had stockpiles of these and could reap benefits from them. El Pueblo claimed, however, the ban harmed many people who were not involved with Somoza.

La Prensa's criticism has been in a constructive tone. In one editorial entitled "Three Problems," Pedro Joaquin Chamorro Barrios, son of the slain publisher, criticized the government's immigration policy as too restrictive, said that continued roadblocks in some areas disrupt traffic and condemned the high absenteeism in the labor force.

The newspaper has given prominent coverage to several mysterious killings and headlined one story about the murder of businessman Herman Vogel as "a crime that must be solved."

It also published letters from readers complaining about alleged illegal takeovers of their property by popular militias or Sandinistas.

"We are maintaining an independent, democratic and politically pluralistic position while continuing to give critical support to the government," Chamorro said.

Chamorro called the new government's press law "just" and said journalists had been instrumental in drawing it up.

The press law says freedom of information "is one of the fundamental principles of an authentic democracy" and called on all news media to disseminate the truth. It banned advertisements for liquor, tobacco, pornography and anything that degraded humanity.

Violators of the press law can be charged by the government or "any citizen who feels offended." The law stipulates the case goes to a civil court where the accused can defend his or her case, but if found guilty is subject to a fine determined by the court or imprisonment of not less than six months and not more than three years.

One section of the law which has caused some concern, however, says the news media must "take precautions to defend the gains of the revolution."

About 10 radio stations are back on the air with news programs and it is still unclear how independent they will be. Under Somoza, a "black code" was in effect, that prohibited the broadcast of any news "detrimental to the public order."

Labels May Make It Easier To Compare Energy Efficiency

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

The federal government is putting the finishing touches on a plan to make it easier for consumers to compare energy efficient appliances.

Regulations expected to be issued in their final form later this month will require energy labels on seven major appliances: refrigerators, freezers, dishwashers, clothes washers, water heaters, room air conditioners and furnaces.

The rules were drawn up by the Federal Trade Commission after more than a year of study and public hearings. They stem from the 1957 Energy Policy and Conservation Act.

Andrew Wolf, a commission attorney who has been working on the program, said the black and yellow "Energy Guide" tags should start appearing in the stores in January, after manufacturers test products and prepare labels.

All the appliances except the air conditioners and furnaces will be labeled with an estimated annual operating cost — based on a national average electricity rate — and with the range of operating costs for similar competing models.

Air conditioners and furnaces will be marked slightly differently, Wolf said, because their use varies so widely depending on geographical location.

Their labels will include an Energy Efficiency Ratio or EER, already in use by many manufacturers on a voluntary basis. The EER tells you how much heating or cooling you get for a given unit of energy; the higher the EER, the more efficient the appliance. Wolf said charts listing usage and utility rates will be provided on the labels so consumers can make their own cost calculations.

The labels should help shoppers get the best value for their dollars. Usingthe label you can compare total costs, the model that seems more expensive initially may wind up cheaper in the long run because of lower utility bills.

The labels also should encourage energy conservation. Energy consumption, however, depends not only on the appliance but also on the user. Seventy percent of the energy we use in our homes goes for heating and cooling, 20 percent is consumed in producing hot water, and the remaining 10 percent goes into lighting, cooking and running small appliances.

Small steps can add up to substantial savings. Look at your water heater, for example. The Department of Energy notes that most water heaters are set for 140 degrees Fahrenheit or higher. Unless you have a dishwasher, you probably don't need your water that hot.

A setting of 120 degrees can provide adequate hot water for most families and cutting the temperature 20 degrees can cut energy consumption by 18 percent. (To determine temperature, draw water from the heater through the bottom faucet and test it with a thermometer.)

Other energy-saving suggestions from the government include:

•Use cold water to operate your food disposal unit. Cold water often is recommended for this type of appliance. Not only does it save energy, but it helps solidify grease so it can be ground up and washed away.

•If you cook with electricity, turn the burners off a few minutes before the cooking time is up. The heating element will stay hot long enough to finish the cooking for you without using electricity.

•Don't keep your refrigerator too cold. The recommended temperature for most models is 38 degrees to 40 degrees Fahrenheit. The freezer compartment of your refrigerator can be kept at 5 degrees.

•Consider refrigerators and freezers that can be defrosted manually. The extra effort could cut electricity consumption by more than 5 percent.

•Use fluorescent lights. They produce about four times as much light per watt of electricity as incandescent bulbs. Where possible, use one large bulb rather than several small ones. A single 100-watt incandescent bulb, for example, produces 50 percent more light than four 25-watt bulbs and uses no more energy.

Cooper Graduate Receives Scholarship

Holly Vardeman, a 1979 graduate of Cooper High School, has been awarded a $1,000 Clark Foundation scholarship from the Texas Interscholastic League Foundation.

The Clark Foundation provides funds for 60 grants, awarded by TILF on the basis of participation in UIL literary and academic contests, and other school and community achievements.

Miss Vardeman earned eligibility for the scholarship by placing second in the 1978 state meet one-act play contest, and reaching the 1979 persuasive speaking finals. She also qualified for the 1977 state meet persuasive speaking contest and was a state meet runner-up for the 1979 state meet one act play contest.

Crews Rush To Clean Up Oily Texas Shoreline

FIRST TURTLE CASUALTY — Mustang Island Park Superintendent Tommy Hicks removes an oil covered sea turtle. This is the first turtle to wash up in the park dead from the Mexican oil spill. (AP Laserphoto)

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Coast Guard officials predicted Friday that cleanup crews will have some beaches ready for Labor Day vacationers but long sections of the South Texas shoreline will likely remained soiled by brown Mexican oil this weekend.

"It doesn't look too good on the beach," said Sylvia Castillo of the South Padre Island Tourist Bureau. "Hopefully, they will get it cleared up."

Coast Guard Captain Roger Madson could not promise 100 percent oil-free beaches but said work crews should clear several hundred yards along the section of South Padre Island where tourists normally crowd to enjoy summer's last holiday.

"The beach cleanup is progressing, and we hope they will be in pretty good shape for the Labor Day weekend," Madson told a daily news briefing.

The oil spill has cut the South Texas island tourist trade by at least 50 percent, officials estimate.

Bad weather has hampered scouting operations this week. A 25-mile-long stretch of heavy oil landed at the Padre Island National Seashore Thursday and pushed work schedules further off course.

Frank Sturgis of the state water resources department said quite a lot of oil remained on South Padre beaches Friday morning.

"I wouldn't want to spend my Labor Day weekend here. I don't think we're going to see many people," he said.

The oil on the beaches of South Padre stretch from the water's edge to about 30 yards to 50 yards inland.

This still leaves another 30 yards to 50 yards of beach for sunbathing before reaching the sand dunes.

The strand of oily beach runs from the south tip of the island northward.

Cleanup crews were fighting a losing battle as the oil came ashore about as fast as it could be picked up on isolated spots.

Tropical storm Elena turned into a boon for federal crews fighting the oil spill as it continued blowing any oil-ladened waters away from shore with counter-clockwise winds, Madson said.

The largest oil accumulation threatening Texas beaches is a one-mile-long stretch of light film floating about 60 miles southeast of Cavallo Pass, which leads into Matagorda Bay.

"If Elena moves in at Matagorda Bay, it could come across that patch and could be a natural dispersion which could help us," the Coast Guard captain said.

Beach visitors should find fairly clean conditions at the Nueces County park on Mustang Island north of Corpus Christi where about three-tenths of a mile of beach has been stripped of its oily coating.

Other sections of Mustang Island remained fairly covered with blotches of oil extending about 100 feet from shoreline at low tide.

South Padre Island hotels are keeping maintenance crews busy removing globs from their beachfront and report shorelines are fairly clean.

Many feet-cleaning stations have been set up for surf frolickers who step in the greasy oil.

Madson said vacationers probably will have more problems stepping in old oil already on shore than with any crude washing up in the waves.

The team battling the oil spill is more concerned with the crude's threat to wildlife breeding grounds than with the beaches that protect the sensitive areas in bays and backwaters.

However, scientist Nancy Maynard said Friday early surveys show "a number" of dead oil-covered clams and crabs along beaches north of the Port Mansfield cut. Oil appears to be slowing down the crustaceans' movement. It also has invaded their habitats and burrows.

The Port Mansfield cut and several other entrances to the Laguna Madre are being checked for any oil that may have seeped past any artificial floating barriers.

The Laguna Madre harbors numerous wildlife species and is a breeding ground for shrimp, oysters and other seafood.

Scientists said Friday it appeared that a 14-foot whale that washed up and died on Mustang Island probably was not a casualty of the oil spill.

"I couldn't find any oil on it," said Steve Rabalais, a University of Texas researcher who conducted early tests of the pregnant mammal at Port Aransas.

Runaway Mexican oil from a damaged well in the Bay of Campeche continues to threaten wildlife and the Texas tourism industry. The thick crude has spilled into Gulf waters since June 3 and workers indicate it should be at least mid-September before they can cap the well, which is spewing about 10,000 barrels of oil per day.

Texas Counties Declared Disaster Area

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seven Texas counties were declared a disaster area Friday as a result of oil washing up on their beaches from a runaway Mexican offshore well.

The Small Business Administration said the declaration covers Aransas, Cameron, Kenedy, Kleberg, Nueces, San Patricio and Willacy counties.

Texas Gov. Bill Clements requested the disaster declaration, which will make the area eligible for economic injury loans from the SBA.

Each loan will be limited to $100,000 at 7⅜ percent interest. The deadline for applications is June 2.

Skiing Fanatics Make Switch To Grass During Summertime

By DONALD J. FREDERICK
National Geographic News Service

WASHINGTON — The onset of summer once sent snow skiers into a green funk — all that grass and nowhere to go.

But now many downhillers are finding that the greener a slope the better, as long as it's not strewn with rocks or scarred by ditches. Growing numbers of grass skiers across the country are extolling runs down unslippery slopes.

In the East some resorts are keeping their chairlifts operating all summer to accomodate the new sport. "It's the answer to my dreams," said an aficionado. "I'm able to keep fit in what was once an off-season, and I don't have to fight long tow lines or pray for fresh snow every day."

Enthusiasts claim that grass skiing is every bit as demanding as the snow variety. Pros in Europe have been clocked at 50 miles an hour on a downhill run.

The experts will show their stuff Sept. 8-9 at the first World Grass Ski Championship at Bryce Mountain near Basye, Va. Teams from the United States, France, Italy, Switzerland, West Germany, Austria, England, and Belgium — 75 skiers in all — will compete in slalom and giant slalom races.

Josef Kaiser, a West German skier, is credited with creating the first grass skis in the mid-1960s.

His idea caught on and soon national teams were formed to compete in the burgeoning sport.

Varying from 25 to 31 inches long, the skis are propelled by a nylon belt that rotates around plastic rollers fitted to a steel frame. A standard ski boot is attached to the frame.

"When I first tried out the things," said one beginner, "I felt like the biggest kid in the block going down hill atop two toy army tanks."

Despite the clumsy appearance of the skis, experts say that the sport is relatively easy to learn and gives novices an advantage when they tackle winter slopes.

"Grass skis are very unforgiving since they don't slip or slide," explained Horst Locher, a professional ski instructor and former member of the West German national team. "So by being forced to make precise 'carved' turns, the grass skier is well ahead of most beginners when switching to snow skis."

Beginners also learn caution. Because they're so short, grass skis usually don't produce the serious breaks and sprains sometimes caused by snow skis. But they can lead to nasty tumbles.

As one youngster pointed out, "There's less hot-dodgging than on snow, because the ground's harder than you think under that green cover."

Collisions between skiers are rare, however. When they pick up steam, grass skis sometimes sound like miniature power mowers. "You can always hear someone coming up behind you," said a veteran racer. "It gives you a real incentive to move."

'Indian Fighter' Recalls Days As Posse Rider

By LEE JUILLERAT

ALTURAS, Calif. (NEA) — Ottie "O.D." Van Norman is a Yankee Doodle Dandy born on the Fourth of July in 1876.

While celebrating his 103rd birthday recently, he opened a card, read it (without glasses) and nearly fell out of his chair. The card was signed by Jimmy Carter.

Van Norman is mighty proud of that card. But receiving it was not the high point of his life. That came back in 1911.

Van Norman was then "buckarooing" — that is, tending cattle — in the lonely sagebrush deserts of western Nevada and northeastern California.

In January of that year, the region was shaken with the news that four men had been killed by Indians in Little High Rock Canyon, about 35 miles southeast of the scenic California town of Eagleville. Some settlers feared it was the beginning of a full-scale Indian uprising.

Van Norman was one of the many who left work to join the party that searched for and found the dead men. He was also one of the 21 men who took up rifles and galloped off in search of the Indians nearly a month later in the posse that became known as the "Eagleville Boys."

And Van Norman was there when the posse caught up with the straggling band of Indians led by one "Shoshone Mike" and launched a three-hour attack that left all of the Indians dead except for a squaw and two youngsters.

"I drawed a pretty good bead on one and he piled up right there," recalls Van Norman. "I was a pretty good shot at that time."

Now in retirement at a convalescent home, Van Norman almost automatically recites fragments of the episode:

"I was with the posse and followed them all the way to the east of Rabbit Creek. We ran into those old Indians just before noon — old Shoshone Mike and the rest of them.

"When we run into them, we had an Injun and he told them to throw up their hands and we wouldn't hurt them.

"But that old Shoshone Mike, he said: 'No, we're going to die right here. We ain't going to stop for nothin.'"

While the battle raged, Van Norman and George Holmes, another posse member, chased a breakaway group down a gully.

"When we got right up there close to them, they took six shots at us. I could feel them bullets whizzing past my head.

IN AMERICA

"I asked George Holmes if he'd been hit and he said no. He asked me if I'd been hit and I said no.

"We fell off our horses in a pile of snow . . . We cleaned 'em up, the whole works of 'em, in a little bit."

When it all ended, Van Norman was among the celebrated. Just how much that helped is not known, but he was married in Eagleville the next year. He returned to his job, where he worked for 33 years, before moving on.

The events before and after Van Norman's joining the posse have been lost over the years.

"Went right on with the job that I had," he says, struggling to remember fragments of life after the massacre. "I worked there several years after that . . . started a little business and run horses . . . raised a family, three sons and one daughter . . .

"Cowhand? Yeah, buckarooed all my life. I've been a-buckarooing ever since I could get on a horse."

Van Norman's reputation as an "Indian fighter" — he is the only member of the posse still alive — has given him a status that few men who spent a lifetime tending cattle have achieved. He was grand marshal of the county parade in 1972 and has been called on through the years to remember his part in squelching the threatened Indian uprising.

The story of Shoshone Mike and the Eagleville Boys has been written about many times in newspapers and books. Most recent is Dayton "Hawk" Hyde's "Last Free Man," which evokes some understanding of the Indians' plight.

During the last five years, Van Norman has been in and out of and back in the convalescent home. But he still has the look of the outdoorsman with his barrel chest, shock of white hair and costume of flannel shirt, denim jeans and leather belt with longhorn-decorated belt buckle.

Of all Ottie Van Norman's 103 years, it's those few turbulent weeks in 1911 that for him remain, if not fresh, at least alive.

Invention Grabs Power From Unkown Source

NEW BRITAIN, Conn. (AP) — John F. Ferraro says he has an invention that, at least in preliminary tests, harnesses a mysterious "natural" power to boost battery currents.

If appearances prove to be true during the next three years of testing, Ferraro allows, "it has the potential of going a long way to solve our energy needs."

Xtec, a small firm created this year to develop the energy amplifier and other creations of two Connecticut inventors, has applied for a patent on the device. Ferraro heads Xtec's operations.

The amplifier is a relatively simple device that uses a recognized phenomenon: that an antenna with certain features can pick up energy from an unknown source.

Xtec scientists suspect that the power source is a pulsating electromagnetic field existing in nature. When "received" by the antenna, much as a radio antenna receives radio waves, it combines with the battery current in the amplifier's electrical components to boost the battery power.

"We are not creating power, we are capturing existing energy," Ferraro said.

He added that the "natural" power source could be low-frequency ground currents but he said that is not likely.

The inventors of the amplifier have created a working model that captures enough of the mysterious power to boost current from flashlight batteries and propel an adult tricycle carrying a 200-pound man or drive a metal lathe, says Ferraro.

He refused to give details until international patent protection is secured.

If research substantiates what the tests have shown so far, the energy amplifier could conceivably be used to pow-

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

There is a simple but expensive way to play today's hand.

South wins the heart, plays his king of diamonds, continues the suit, finesses dummy's jack and winds up down three since he never gets a trick out of dummy. As the late Hal Sims once said, "He has played the hand like a millionaire."

There is a slightly complicated and far better play. South does go after diamonds at trick two, but he doesn't lead his king. Instead, he leads his four spot to dummy's jack.

Now if East takes his queen, as he probably will, South winds up with four diamond tricks and his contract. He will even score an overtrick if he bothers to take the spade finesse.

Suppose East is brilliant enough to duck that diamond. Now South does take the spade finesse. After it works, he returns to dummy by overtaking his king of diamonds with dummy's ace. A repeated spade finesse gives him three spades plus two tricks in each of the other suits and he can go home with the rubber.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR FRIENDS:
We recently asked for hints to help the handicapped and your response has been truly heartwarming.

I have always said my readers are the grandest, best, and most sharing people in the whole world and you've proven me right once again.

Not only did you write in but some great folks at the United Cerebral Palsy Association, Inc., sent in several terrific tips as well.

They suggest that suction cups (available at hardware and variety stores) be glued to the bottom of plates and bowls, etc. Less danger of them slipping and tipping.

Wrap tape around a spoon to provide a larger handle for better gripping.

Place small sections of traction tape (the kind used to mark smooth cement steps) at intervals to provide a better "grabbing surface" on handrails (stairs, porches, etc.)

Another tip these caring people offered was to place an old plastic webbed lawn chair in the shower. Makes a great chair for one to use while showering. Inexpensive, too.

In forthcoming columns, as space permits, we'll pass along more of their hints and the ones you sent us as well.

Please continue to submit those hints which help you the most, and watch the column for the ones which perhaps are new to you. — Love, Heloise

DEAR HELOISE
I think I have found the perfect solution of what to do with the empty five-pound peanut butter pails after the peanut butter is gone.

Use it for a child's lunch bucket.

It will hold a sandwich, drink, fruit and/or dessert and a small bag of chips very nicely.

My children think it's great and I don't have to worry about anything breaking as I use a plastic glass with a tight-fitting lid for the drink.

I fill the glass the night before (leave room for expansion), put it in the freezer and the next day at lunchtime they have a cold drink. — Wilma Dochstader

HINTS FROM HIM

DEAR HELOISE:
When using a carton of cottage cheese, take out what is needed, wipe off the lid before replacing, then "burp" it.

Place a plate over it (in case of leakage) and turn the carton upside down before refrigerating. The cottage cheese will keep for a long time. — Bert

DEAR HELOISE:

They'll have fun nibbling the cereal off later.

Or give them your silverware and the silverware tray. Have them sort the silver.

(Clean hands for both of these projects, of course.) — Ventura

DEAR HELOISE:
First, I want to tell you that I enjoy your column very much. Perhaps you can use this little ditty.

My 5-year-old daughter returned from kindergarten with a note from her teacher. I read the note to her, which stated that each child was to bring to school, the next day, something that they loved and cherished very much.

I asked her what she would like to take. She said, "Mommie, can I take you?" — Mrs. Gordon Nelson

What's up in films?

Filmgoers appear to be staying cool despite new energy-conservation regulations raising theater temperatures to 78 degrees. That's because of the chilling plots of many of the summer's top-grossing movies.

What's up in politics?

Election of a woman president is no longer a laughing matter. A recent newspaper poll showed that 87 percent of the electorate would vote a qualified woman into the nation's highest office.

Assuming that election of the first female president is still a decade or two off, Us magazine has compiled this list of likely prospects "just beginning to generate political energy."

Carol Bellamy, 37, who as president of New York's City Council is the second-highest elected official in the nation's largest metropolis.

Jane Byrne, 44, mayor of Chicago.

Olympia Snowe, 32, first-term Republican congresswoman from Maine.

Yvonne Brathwaite Burke, 47, former California congresswoman and newly appointed member of the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors.

"Some of them may seem like long shots now," notes the magazine, "but remember that two decades ago Ted Kennedy had just passed the bar exam in Massachusetts, Gerald Ford was a greenhorn Michigan congressman, and Jimmy Carter was the chairman of the Sumter County, Ga., school board.

President Schroeder?

Move over, Reggie!

What do first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra Doriot Anthony Dwyer, Olympic skier Suzy Chaffee and the late anthropologist Margaret Mead have in common?

Their likenesses are prominently displayed on the new baseball-type trading cards called "Supersisters" which feature contemporary women of achievement.

The series was developed under a grant from the New York State Education Department, and plans are in the works to distribute them nationally to schools in the fall.

Doriot Anthony Dwyer loves her card and comments, "Can't you just see the day when budding feminists will be trading a Lee Mazzilli (N.Y. Met outfielder) for a Gloria Steinem?"

Wanted: Old type westerns

Pay attention, you would-be Zane Grey's. Twentieth Century-Fox and Bantam Books have arranged a $25,000 First Western Novel competition to encourage the writing of "the kind of Western fiction that has entertained readers and moviegoers for decades."

The winning novel — the contest is open to all U.S. residents who have not previously published a novel — will be published by Bantam in the fall of 1980 and the film rights sold to Fox. The author will receive a $5,000 contest prize, $10,000 as a publisher's guaranteed advance against royalties and $10,000 as Fox's price for the film rights.

If a movie is actually produced from the novel, the author will receive an additional $20,000 bonus, plus profit points in the film.

Entries, which must be between 50,000 and 75,000 words, will be accepted Sept. 1 through March 31, 1980. The winner will be announced next June.

Details and rules are available from Bantam Books-20th Century-Fox First Western Novel Competition, Boulder, CO 80306.

What's up in resumes?

With many economists foreseeing increased unemployment, you might be well advised to get your resume in order.

Here are some tips for writing a winning resume from executive-search consultant John S. Studwell:

— Don't feel you must have your resume professionally prepared. Such resumes often look and read too much alike. The resume you prepare yourself is more likely to be the most effective and reflective of you.

— Don't use offbeat formats, type or paper. Use a clear typeface in black ink on letter-size paper. A printer can easily offset 100 or 200 copies from a clean master.

— Don't make careless errors in grammar or spelling.

— Don't lie about such vital facts as education and job experience. Statements in your resume are likely to be checked closely — even after hiring. If an employer discovers that you falsely claimed a degree or job title, you may be fired immediately.

— Don't write in vague generalities or boast at length of accomplishments that have little bearing on your career. Stick to an easy-to-follow format. For example: name, address and phone; personal data; education (omit elementary and secondary school); experience (listing your most recent job first and working back); other data, such as hobbies and association memberships.

STEVE MARTIN's one-week engagement at Las Vegas' Riviera Hotel, which starts Sept. 6, may topple the box office record now shared by Kenny Rogers and Barry Manilow. "This has been amazing," says maitre d' Rudy Guerrero. "They call from places like Ohio, Georgia and Maassachusetts. One group in Texas said they wanted to bring in a planeload if we could assure them of rooms and show reservations. We took care of them."

Olivia sells

Olivia Newton-John has become an instant movie star as a result of her Capricorn points — perfect harmony in "Grease," but in the next few weeks she'll be playing more theaters than when that film was in full release — and she's not even getting billing.

Miss Newton-John is the latest pop singer to take advantage of the newest tool of the record industry — mini-movies of mini-concerts, which are in effect commercials to promote record sales.

Totally Hot" is the name of Miss Newton-John's film, which cost as much per minute to produce as the average motion picture. The promo piece is being released to theaters and television to coincide with her new single of the same name. Whether the name fits the product remains to be seen.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY DR. PAUL G. DONOHUE

Dear Dr. Donohue: I would like to see a comparison between acetaminophen and aspirin. I see sharply conflicting claims and your comments would be appreciated by millions of sufferers from arthritis, bursitis, etc. — H.R.R.

Acetaminophen, which is sold under several trade names, has certain advantages and disadvantages, but is not a substitute for aspirin in all cases. The chief points to remember are these:

1. Acetaminophen is equal to aspirin in relieving pain and lowering elevated temperature.

2. Acetaminophen has no value in reducing inflammation from conditions such as arthritis. Aspirin has.

3. Acetaminophen usually does not cause stomach irritation. Aspirin may, in large doses over a long period, in some people.

4. Acetaminophen does not interfere with blood clotting. For this reason it is recommended, instead of aspirin, for patients with bleeding problems or for those taking anticoagulants and in pregnancy.

5. A potential disadvantage of acetaminophen is liver disturbance in high doses, especially in the young.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Please send the booklet on headaches. I have sinus headache, or at least I think that's what it is. How can you distinguish this kind of headache from another? — Mrs. P.B.

Sinus headache results from the inflammation or infection of the air spaces of the skull (the sinuses). The aching is usually localized at that point. For example, one might have severe aching about one eye. Headaches are difficult to categorize from symptoms, however. With sinus headache, relief comes from clearing the decongestion of the sinus spaces or after draining a swollen sinus.

Actually, sinuses must be acutely inflamed to cause headaches. Some patients have needless surgery on their sinuses when their headaches have other causes. The booklet will answer your other questions. Other readers can obtain a copy by sending 35 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Donohue, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611. Ask for "How to Tame Headaches."

Dear Dr. Donohue: I am 17 years old and have a problem with my breasts. My nipples are inverted, which I know is not normal. Could you tell me what causes this and what I should do about it? Is surgery necessary? I am very worried. — P.R.

If you've always had this and your breasts have been examined closely by a doctor you need not worry. Sudden breast changes of this kind ARE of concern and should be looked at promptly. Later on, if the problem is terribly embarrasing, you can have surgery to correct matters.

Dear Dr. Donohue: My mother, who is 86, has high blood pressure, also she has bubbles in her urine. Do you think the bubbles are caused by too much acid in her system or from something else? — A.C.H.

The passage of air bubbles in the urine is known as pneumaturia. It may represent an abnormal connection (a fistula) between the bowel and the urinary bladder. Air enters, hence the bubbles. This occurs occasionally in persons with diverticulosis of the colon (lower bowel). Have your mother checked for this problem — the fistula. I am not referring here to the foaming of urine, but the presense of air bubbles while urinating.

Dear Dr. Donohue: My daughter, 26, has breast enlargement at the time of her menstrual period. She complains of chafing from her bra. I tell her to do what I do, have two bras, one an extra size larger to wear at these times of the month. It solved her problem. Thought it would help to pass this along, since I know that many women who write you about this kind of enlargement probably have the same trouble. -Mrs. H.H.

A sensible solution, yet one many women might overlook.

What can vitamins really do for you — and what can't they do? In his new booklet, Dr. Paul Donohue separates the common sense from the nonsense about this controversial health aid. For your copy of "Vitamins: Facts You Need to Know," send 50 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Donohue, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Author Suggests Several Methods For Tagging Sale Merchandise

EDITOR'S NOTE: Although time-consuming, putting price tags on every item you hope to sell at your garage sale makes things easier for the buyer and protects you, the seller, from quoting too high or too low prices. And this fourth in a five-part series details do's and don'ts on your tagging system.

By James Michael Ullman

The most important preparation for your garage sale is to put price tags on everything you hope to sell.

Some sellers fail to price and tag their merchandise because they're lazy. Others tend to make price tags but don't allow enough time. Still others don't tag their things because of an odd notion that they may get higher prices by forcing buyers to make the first offer.

Nonsense. For each "better deal" you may get that way, you'll lose dozens of sales you could have made if your prices were marked.

The reasons for pricing everything are:

1) To make it easier for people to buy.

You can't expect people to seek you out to ask "how much is this" each time they see an item that interests them.

2) To identify bargains.

Many people who visit home and garage sales regularly are there simply in hopes of finding bargains. The only way to let them know that an item they didn't dream they wanted is a bargain is to put a price tag on it.

3) To encourage buyers.

Many people are timid about asking prices. Other people may assume that the absence of price tags means you're trying to put something over on them.

4) To protect yourself.

If you must quote prices off the top of your head, you'll risk making mistakes. If you quote too high a price, you'll kill the sale, and if your price is too low, you won't get as much as you should.

5) To make the sale go smoothly.

If you've tagged all your merchandise, you won't have to spend all your time answering questions about how much this-or-that costs. You can concentrate on much more positive aspects of selling as greeting arrrivals, stressing an item's strong points and completing sales.

Many first-time sellers underprice their merchandise. Usually this is because they are ignorant of the value of what they are selling. This is especially the case with elderly people who don't realize that some of the "everyday" things accumulated in their younger years are now desired by collectors.

But a more common mistake made by inexperienced sellers is to set prices too high.

They've seen a certain item priced at x dollars at a store or antique shop, they assume that a like item which they are selling is "worth" that, too.

But it isn't. The main thing to remember is that you are not competing with retail stores and antique shops; you are competing with people running other house and garage sales.

People will not pay retail prices for things they buy from strangers in basements and garages.

To be truly competitive, your prices must be substantially below store prices. House and garage sales are part of a wholesale market that supplies retail antique and junque shops. Although they may not identify themselves, some of your customers will be the owners of antique and resale shops.

It's true you can violate pricing rules and make some sales at high prices to uninformed buyers, but your total sales volume will be less than if you priced your merchandise realistically.

Of course there are special circumstances under which you may be able to buy items at retail, and turn around and sell them at your garage or house sale at a profit. These include items bought at genuine discount or "going out of business" sales. They also include things acquired in other sections of the country where price levels may be lower or where you can obtain merchandise not available locally.

When your sale starts, you can suspect that many of the items eagerly snatched up in the first hour probably were priced too low. And when it ends, you can conclude that much of the merchandise still unsold was priced too high.

Here are two good general pricing rules:

1) Try to set prices at less than people would pay for an item at a store, but much more than you'd get for it if you sold it to a dealer.

2) Try to set the highest price at which people can't resist buying the item even if they don't need it.

Some people who come to your sale will offer to buy items for less than the prices on your tags. Haggling is part of the game to them.

How you handle them depends on your ability and willingness to engage in bargaining sessions.

If you'd rather not haggle, then set a "firm price" policy and stick to it. Most people who make offers won't be offended if you turn them down in a courteous way. If your price is fair and they want the item, they'll probably buy it anyhow.

Certainly the safest policy would be to set your tag prices at or not too far above your "rock bottom" price. Of course you'll have more pricing leeway on some items than on others. You should decide before the sale starts how far you'll be willing to lower your prices in bargaining sessions.

Much of your time in the day or so before the sale will be spent setting prices and tagging merchandise.

A lot of people use ordinary masking tape to make their "price tags." This is the cheapest tagging system.

But masking tape is the slowest method. If you have several hundred items to tag, it takes a lot of extra time to pull tape off the roll and hand-cut each "tag" with scissors. What's more, not all writing instruments mark effectively on masking tape's rough, somewhat absorbent surface. It's also the sloppiest-looking way to tag merchandise, and if you're using an indelible marker, there are circumstances under which the item could be damaged. The marker fluid can penetrate masking tape and adhere permanently to some surfaces. The glue on the tape itself is also more likely to cause damage than is true with most other types of tags.

By all means, do NOT use conventional gummed mailing labels. They are very difficult to remove and can permanently damage some surfaces.

With some types of marking instruments, prices can be marked directly onto glass, metal, procelain, pottery and other hard, washable surfaces. But if you do this, be sure you are not using an indelible marker.

One satisfactory way to mark items is with paper fastened by transparent tape. While cumbersome, this system is inexpensive and relatively safe.

If you're willing to spend a dollar or two, invest in a box of self-applicating adhesive tags, available in larger stationary and office-supply stores. The more items you must tag, the more this investment will pay for itself in time and convenience.

Tags of this type are easy to apply and relatively easy to remove. Your customers will appreciate that and so will you. As your sale progresses, you may decide to change some prices. Switching tags is easier and quicker with these tags than with any other marking system. And when the sale is over, it'll be easy to remove these tags from your unsold merchandise.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I are a very average couple. Why we get invitations I don't know, but we do get a few. But after an evening out, I am always depressed.

For example: This morning I am asking myself, why did I talk the ear off a man I know only slightly? I went on and on about my children, their lives, my life, etc. That poor guy must have been bored to death and glad when the dinner ended.

Sometimes I talk to another woman — whoever is stuck with me — and I always talk too much. I try to psych myself up before we leave the house. I tell myself: "This time, dummy, LISTEN!" I start out fine, but if I happen to get with someone who is not much of a talker and I'm asked a question, off I go, telling more than I should, certainly more than anyone wants to hear.

It's not that I never get to talk except at parties. I do have a couple good friends and I talk them to death.

I'm so mad at myself I could cry. I AM crying. That's why I'm writing. How can I learn to SHUT UP? Why, when someone listens politely, do I have to talk, talk, talk? — Mary Lou

Dear Mary Lou: Many people talk because they find silence embarrassing. Others talk because they're afraid if they don't, people will think they are stupid. Clip this column and carry it in your purse. When you feel yourself going off on a verbal binge, go to a powder room and read it. I hope it helps.

Dear Ann Landers: I am eight years old and already I am writing to you with a problem. Since I was very young I have been saving pennies. I now have over 1,000 pennies saved up.

My mother said she is going to put them in the bank. I don't want her to because I like to play with my pennies. I would miss them. Please say you are on my side. It would help. — Waiting To Hear

Dear Waiting: One thousand pennies is $10. If you put them in a savings account, the bank will pay you interest. This is a good way to make money. Also, money kept at home can be stolen. So find something else to play with, honey, and ask your mother to take the pennies to the bank. I am glad you wrote because a lot of adults can use the same advice.

Dear Ann Landers: Our daughter is 16. We cannot afford to buy her many clothes, but what we do get is of good quality. They should last a long time, but they don't.

The problem: Our big-hearted daughter is forever loaning her clothes to friends. They keep the garments for weeks and she usually ends up going after them. Several blouses, sweaters, dresses and skirts have been washed improperly, and have faded or shrunk. Many of her better things have been torn.

I have pleaded with her to say no when friends ask if they can borrow her clothes, but she can't seem to do it. Is there a solution to this costly problem? — A Mother Who Can't Get Through

Dear Mother: Advise your daughter that from now on she must tell anyone who asks to borrow clothes that her parents won't allow it. Period. If the girl were paying for her own things it would be different. Since she is not, you have every right to forbid her from lending her wardrobe.

Smaller Engines, Autos Headed For Show Rooms

DETROIT (AP) — A familiar monster, the 400-cubic-inch internal combustion engine, has become a victim of the trend to smaller cars.

The last of those big engines will fade away with the 1979 models. The biggest engine offered in a 1980 car will be 10 percent smaller, a 360-cubic-inch, or 5.9-liter, motor offered in some Chrysler models.

As has been true for several years, the shrinkage brings cars with more plastics, more aluminum, more electronics and more diesels.

Three-way catalysts will be used to meet tougher emission standards.

American Motors Corp. is bringing out the U.S. industry's first four-wheel drive cars — as distinguished from trucks like AMC's Jeeps. You can tell one when you see it because it sits about 3 inches higher off the road than AMC's regular cars.

The biggest break in years from the rectangular or fastback styling themes comes with Cadillac's all-new, front-wheel drive Seville, whose trunk sweeps down from the roof like a fastback, then bulges out like some Rolls-Royce models of the 1930s.

Several lines will offer halogen headlights, which give more light with less power — and less weight.

This is the year each manufacturer's average fuel economy must hit 20 miles a gallon or better. All say they will do at least that well, even though they may no longer count their captive imports.

Prices are going up. Look for increase of about 3 1/2 percent over final 1979 prices, which should not last long. The industry now raises prices in small but frequent steps instead of holding prices for an entire model year.

Here's a look at the parade:

GENERAL MOTORS

The newest GM cars, the front-wheel drive "X-body" compacts, were designated 1980 models on their early introduction in April and will see few changes for the official model year.

Cadillac's radically changed Seville will be based mechanically on the front-wheel drive Eldorado and will make the 350-cubic inch (5.7 liters) diesel the basic engine, with gasoline engines optional. One of those also uses throttle-body fuel injection. TBI, unlike ordinary fuel injection squirting fuel directly into cylinders, uses injectors to place precise amounts into the engine's incoming air stream.

Nameplates in the rest of the full-size family — Chevrolet Impala-Caprice, Pontiac Bonneville-Catalina, Buick Electra-LeSabre and Oldsmobile 88-98 — shed another 200 pounds in a major sheet-metal change. Lockup automatic transmissions are being added for better highway fuel economy, and diesels are extended to Pontiac.

The fastback intermediates, Oldsmobile Cutlass-Buick Century, all sales disappointments, have what GM hopes will be a more appealing notchback cousin.

The subcompact Monza-Sunbird-Starfire-Skyhawk line loses its last five-speed transmissions in its last year before front-wheel drive. Chevette gets new rear quarter panels for better aerodynamics and Pontiac Firebird gets a turbocharger option with its smaller engine.

FORD

The Lincoln Continental, Mark VI, Mercury Cougar and the Ford Thunderbird are all new, with the Lincolns losing as much as 1,000 pounds.

Ford is using a new electronic engine control system for which it has only conditional certification from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, and a sophisticated four-speed overdrive automatic transmission.

The luxury cars will offer dashboards with several digital displays and a keyless door lock that uses a code on five buttons below the driver's window.

The rest of Ford's lineup sees more modest changes. The Fairmont-Zephyr family gets a smaller V-8, 4.2 liters or 250 cubic inches against 5.0 liters or 300 cubic inches, and the optional turbocharged-four introduced last year on the Mustang-Capri line.

Pinto-Bobcat and Fiesta, all of which will be replaced by the "Ericka" front-wheel drive development in 1981, are virtually the same, except the V-6 option will be dropped.

CHRYSLER

As a result of dealer demand, the Plymouth line gets a full-size car for the first time since 1976. The Gran Fury name will be revived for the car, which will be a near-twin of the Dodge St. Regis.

The Cordoba-Magnum stablemates are completely redone, with Dodge dropping the Magnum name in favor of a new one, Mirada. About 400 pounds have been shed from the older models. The Mirada will be pitched at buyers of "road cars."

The bread-and-butter compacts, Aspen and Volare, get a face-lift in the last year on the market before replacement by front-wheel drive models in 1981.

The first fruits of the Italian design connection undertaken by Chrysler's new executives last fall show up in a Dodge Omni trimmed by Alejandro De Tomaso of Modena and a Plymouth Horizon Tourismo model.

AMERICAN MOTORS CORP.

AMC's four-wheel drive Eagle sedans and station wagons are aimed at doctors, farmers and others who want a car for all weathers and all terrain. Except for its higher stance, it's similar to the Concord. AMC calls it an "automobile;" the government calls it a truck. The only thing like it is a Subaru station wagon.

V-8 engines are being dropped from cars, though not Jeeps, and the Pontiac "Iron Duke" four-cylinder engine will replace VW's four-cylinder motor in AMC vehicles.

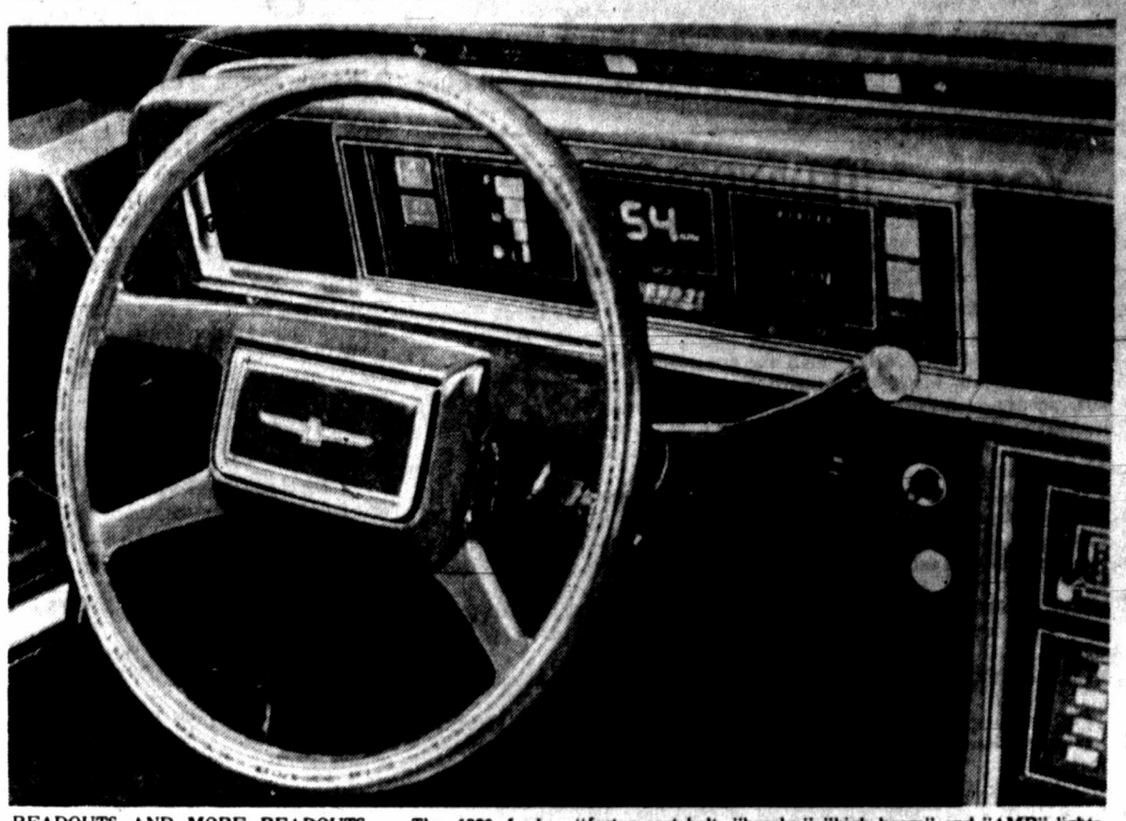
VOLKSWAGEN

The hard-to-get diesel-powered Rabbit will be built at the New Stanton, Pa. plant this year instead of being imported from Germany. VW also could introduce a pickup truck based on the Rabbit.

VW's cars are so popular the company is stepping up production and looking for another assembly location.

IMPORTS

The best-selling import, Toyota, will bring out Corolla models with new sheet metal and suspensions, including its first front-wheel drive for the United States market. In the other important Japanese lines, Honda Civic, already front-wheel drive, will offer a station wagon. Datsun is reworking its 280-SX and will put four-wheel drive on its popular small pickups to compete with Toyota and Chevrolet.



READOUTS AND MORE READOUTS — The 1980 ford Thunderbird will feature an optional electronic instrument panel that includes digital speedometer, an electronic fuel gauge, a digital electric clock and lighted graphics for the "fasten seat belt," "breaks," "high beam" and "AMP" lights. If this isn't enough, one may also get the keyless doorlock — punching a code on a set of five buttons beneath the driver's window gains entry into the vehicle. (AP Laserphoto)

Six Women Among New U.S. Astronauts

JOHNSON SPACE CENTER, Texas (AP) — NASA officials announced Friday the addition of 35 persons, including the first women in the United States space program, to its list of space shuttle astronauts.

The new astronauts, who began training in July 1978, include 15 pilots and 20 mission specialists, said George W.S. Abbey, director of flight operations at the space center.

The six women named as mission specialists included Anna Fisher, 30, San Pedro, Calif.; Shannon Lucid, 36, Bethany, Okla.; Judith Resnik, 30, Akron, Ohio; Sally Ride, 28, Encino, Calif.; Rhea Seddon, 31, Murfreesboro, Tenn., and Katherine Sullivan, 27, Woodland Hills, Calif.

The new astronauts had been scheduled to undergo a two-year training period. Abbey said, but their swift progress allowed NASA to cut the time in half.

"We are pleased with this newest group of astronauts' performance and their adaptation to the space shuttle program," Abbey said.

Based on the performance of this group, he continued, training and evaluation programs for future astronaut candidates also will be held to one year.

Abbey said the total strength of the astronaut corps now stands at 62.

Mountain Climbing Accidents Causing Concern

By JOSEPH A. REAVES
United Press International

Not long ago, mountain climbing was a sport reserved for eccentrics and adventurers, but those days are gone. Nowadays, more people than ever are scaling peaks across the world — and more people than ever are dying doing it.

A single accident in the French Alps July 18 killed eight men and seriously injured four others. Seven men died in an accident in the Soviet Union a week earlier and five West German boys died Aug. 22 in a climbing accident in Italy.

Altogether, more than 300 people have died in climbing accidents in Europe this summer. Thousands more have been injured or rescued.

In Austria alone — a country smaller than the state of Maine — Alpine rescue teams have been called to the aid of 132,751 mountain climbers in the past 33 years. That averages to more than 4,000 rescues a year, or 11 a day, and the number of accidents is increasing all the time.

"There is not a weekend without several fatal accidents in the Alps," said a spokesman for the Austrian Alpine Rescue Team. "The increasing number of mountain accidents is alarming."

Dennis Gray, general secretary of the British Mountaineering Council, agrees the numbers of deaths and accidents are rising, but he says the figures are far from alarming.

"It's just the growing popularity of outdoor activities," says Gray. "All the outdoor sports — some more than others — are enjoying a tremendous boom.

"In mountaineering, you're talking about much bigger numbers of climbers. It's a high-risk sport, but the risk isn't as high as one would think. It's only rare when something goes far wrong."

Still, more and more things are going wrong this year. In the French Alps, for example, 80 people have died in climbing accidents since June. That is just six shy of the death count for all last year and already higher than the 60 killed during 1977 and the 49 who died in 1976.

"The number of accidents mounts each year because more and more people try mountain climbing," said Pierre Verte, who has worked with the mountain patrol rescue squad in the French Alpine resort of Chamonix for 20 years.

"It's like car accidents: the more people on the roads, the more accidents there will be."

But in mountain climbing, unlike driving, many of the newcomers have not bothered to learn the rules of the road. Novices simply join a group and begin scaling a mountain.

"Climbing school is not a very popular or widespread thing," said Martin Green, manager of one of the four climbing equipment shops in London. "Climbing tends to be done in clubs. The vast majority of people will just get with a club and go."

It is that lack of experience that causes many of the deaths.

"There are so many accidents because of the imprudence of the climbers," said Verte. "They are well equipped, generally, but they don't know how to use their equipment.

"Mountain climbing is a wonderful sport, but it can be deadly unless you know what you are doing."

The worst accident so far this year occurred in Verte's region at Mont Blanc, Europe's highest mountain. Eight climbers died and four were seriously injured when they fell from the 12,234-foot Tour Ronde, a peak of Mont Blanc.

That accident apparently occurred like many others Verte described where "someone in the chain (of climbers) loses their footing or their handle and then falls on the others."

A British teen-ager was charged with six counts of manslaughter in the Mont Blanc accident, despite a provision of French law that exempts climbers from liability in accidents to members of their climbing party. The youth was accused of causing the deaths of six members in the party following his.

The vast majority of accidents occur in the Alps, simply because the Alps are the most climbed mountains in the world. But this year, part of the problem in the Alps has been the weather — it's been too good.

"The snow conditions have been perfect and that tempts people," Verte said. "You get more people coming out."

Gray said part of his job at the British Mountaineering Council is keep track of Britain's 60,000 climbers and increasing numbers of them have gone to the French Alps this year because of both the weather and the proximity to England.

"If you would go to Chamonix at Mont Blanc right now, you would find tens of thousands of people from all over the world camped there," Gray said.

But while officials say good weather this year is luring more people to their deaths on the mountains, they admit the number of persons killed in mountain climbing accidents has been on a steady rise for the past several seasons. Last year, when a record number of climbers died in the Alps, the same officials blamed the figures on bad weather.

"The fact is, that it gets back to the growing number of people climbing," Gray said.

Middle Of Road Methods May Enhance Education

By the Editors of Psychology Today

An effective junior high or high school does not take special facilities nor Draconian discipline.

Rather, it has a staff that concentrates on such middle-of-the-blackboard techniques as starting lessons promptly.

That counter-faddish finding comes from a thorough study of 1,400 pupils in 12 nonselective secondary schools in central London. Recently published in this country, the study was done by a group headed by child psychiatrist Michael Rutter, of the University of London.

The list of factors that seemed unrelated either to student achievement or to discipline was long. It included: whether a school was as small as 450 or as large as 2,000, whether it was co-ed, whether its buildings were Victorian or modern, whether it operated on one site or two, whether parents would have made the school their first choice if they had been allowed to choose, and whether the school gave prizes to top achievers.

"Cuffing" and corporal punishment seemed to make behavior worse.

Students learned and behaved best, the study showed, in schools where teachers more often planned their lessons jointly and started teaching promptly when classes began, without spending large amounts of time distributing books and papers. The teachers were less casual about letting out classes early, and put more emphasis on academic achievement.

In the effective schools, teachers also gave and checked more homework assignments; students made more use of the school library.

Yet the effective teachers were far from being authoritarian martinets.

They more frequently encouraged pupils, and put up good work on the walls; pupils felt they could consult the teachers about their personal problems. The effective schools also gave pupils more responsibility for taking care of materials, participating in meetings or holding various posts and offices.

The good schools did not have disproportionate numbers of superstar teachers. Instead, combinations of good leadership and the school's "ethos" made it much easier, the researchers concluded, "to be a good teacher in some schools than others."

Another important factor was having a student body sprinkled with children who had high ability, and who came from homes where parents were engaged in occupations not involving manual labor.

The presence of such children raised the performance and behavior of all children in the schools where they were. And the top children were not dragged down by high proportions of children who were less bright or from less prestigious backgrounds — a finding that has also turned up in studies of integration in U.S. schools.

Vacationers Enjoy Excursion Without Using Much Gasoline

TYSON, Vt. (AP) — You don't need much gasoline to vacation away from home — and travel to your heart's content.

You can do it with the world's most efficient machine — the bicycle, which needs no gasoline, goes as far as you want (within your level of fitness), does not pollute the air and is just about noiseless.

"Love it, love it, love it!" said Bert Wegener, a secretary from Milford, N.H., one of a group of 10 cyclists who toured recently in Vermont.

She's a member of the Granite State Wheelmen, New Hampshire's largest recreational bike club, which arranged the tour.

"Time spent wading in the brooks was great — what I hoped we would take time to do," she said, adding the trip was "a dream come true." At the end of the tour she was photographed kissing her bike.

Helen Head, a paralegal aide from Concord, said on the second day of the tour, "It happened today — I fell in love with my bike." Previously she had said she only "liked it a lot."

The group, five men and five women, swished on bicycles along well-macadamed roads, grunting up the occasionally tougher hill, such as Hysteria Hill in Plymouth Union.

But for every climb there is a downhill coast. On Route 100, the tortuous grind up Terrible Mountain begins in Weston. At the crest it turns into an exhilarating, six-mile glide reaching 40 miles per hour into Ludlow.

"One hell of a good time," said Gil Hoss, a pharmacist from Hampton. "I find it hard to believe a week went by so quickly.

"It was not a macho, gut-busting tour, but a real vacation-type of trip. I hope to do it again."

Distances between inns ranged from 12 to 45 miles, with side trips to a cheese factory in Healdville, a gondola ride up and down Killington Mountain, evening diversions to discos in Woodstock and Bridgewater, and beergardens, shops and galleries back across the Connecticut River in Hanover, N.H.

A bicyclist sees much more from the saddle than a tourist from behind the wheel of a car. The cyclist can't help but observe the scenery in detail, whether it be a goat nibbling along the roadside, a boy fishing in a stream or the absence of billboards, banned in Vermont years ago.

The accompanying van, called a "sagwagon," was driven by a different member of the group each day. The rest cycled. The van carrried a cooler for beer, wine, cheese and similar goodies, clothes, and bicycle tools.

The van's stereo provided appropriate music for lunchtime, always picnics. The music also was used to put the group through fitness exercises every other morning.

Including gasoline for the sagwagon, drinks, food and bed, the cost averaged $35 per cyclist, per day.

The vacationers' cycling abilities ranged from novice to expert. But the relaxed pace and the only schedules being those of arriving at the next inn before dinner allowed the cyclists to pedal in ease and comfort.

"It was very nice not to hear someone say, 'Hurry up, Marsha!'" said Marsha Baker, a librarian from Peterboro.

But riders such as Linda Gould of Bedford, a strong cyclist who wanted to run up extra miles, occasionally departed from the group to extend the tour to their own speed, distance and liking.

Depending on their Honda or Mercedes moods, some of the cyclists dressed for dinner, others wore jeans.

Jeanette Anderson, a nurse's aide from Peterboro, said she appreciated "the casualness in the group ... the helpfulness of everyone, willing to fix bikes, etcetera."

City Of Cleveland Heading For Second Default In Year

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cleveland had some more big bills it couldn't pay Friday and was headed into default for the second time in less than a year in what one official called a "planned catastrophe."

"We can't avoid it," said city Law Director Jack M. Schulman, who placed the blame on continued feuding between the City Council and feisty Mayor Dennis J. Kucinich.

The city had until midnight Friday to either repay or refinance $3.3 million in loans from its waterworks contingency fund, a reserve for unanticipated construction expenses.

Schulman could not predict the impact of the default, but said it would certainly jeopardize the city's efforts to retain its $500 million water system, Cleveland's largest asset. No layoffs of civil servants or cuts in city services were expected, however.

"It's another planned catastrophe," said Schulman, a Kucinich appointee. He accused the City Council of contriving the latest default in an attempt to embarrass Kucinich and weaken his chances in a re-election bid this fall.

Council Majority Leader Basil M. Russo, a challenger for mayor, has said Kucinich could have averted default on his own.

Cleveland has yet to recover from or repay $14 million in defaulted notes owed to six local banks since Dec. 15, 1978, and faces a third default Oct. 6, when another $14.1 million must be paid to the city waterworks construction fund and the airport surplus fund.

"This problem cannot be analyzed in normal financial terms, it is a political problem," said Schulman. "The market seems to recognize this is just a manifestation of political strategy being implemented by the council."

Analysts from Moody's Investors Service and Standard & Poor's have not said the latest default is an indication the city cannot hammer out its problems. But both services said the city's already low credit rating would probably not be further reduced.

Last fall, Cuyahoga County Common Pleas Judge George J. McMonagle stripped the city of its two million-customer municipal water system and ordered it turned over to a regional authority. The system serves Cleveland and 35 surrounding communities. McMonagle's order has been appealed, and the city has yet to lose the waterworks.

The judge complained that the water system was neglected and in need of emergency repairs. He criticized the city for diverting funds from the utility to help Cleveland through cash shortages in past years.

Russo said the city has already lost its waterworks. He also said Kucinich had plenty of money at his disposal to avert default and make payments on the defaulted bank notes.

He cited a 50 percent increase in municipal payroll taxes approved by voters in February. Kucinich said in campaigning for the tax that it would cure the city's financial ills.

"If the administration were acting in good faith, it would be using the tax funds to repay the notes to remove the stigma of default," Russo said.

Last week, the council repeatedly refused to act on the mayor's proposal to extend the repayment period on the waterworks contingency fund notes for another year.

Lone Ranger Fans Threaten Movie Boycott

By BILL GARDNER
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lone Ranger fans across the country took to their phones Friday to express outrage over a court decision forbidding actor Clayton Moore to wear the Lone Ranger mask he has worn for the past 30 years.

"I'm just inundated. I can't get off the phone," said Arthur Dorn, Moore's agent. "It's absolutely incredible."

The 64-year-old Moore was ordered Thursday by Superior Court Judge Vernon Foster not to wear the mask in public appearances. Foster granted a preliminary injunction at the request of the Wrather Corp., which owns the rights to the western hero and is filming a Lone Ranger movie with a new actor in the starring role.

Dorn said he had received 250 calls in a four-hour period and that other calls poured in to newspapers and radio stations across the country.

"There is so much fan sentiment around the country," Dorn said. "They've got slogans like 'Save the Lone Ranger' and 'Keep the Mask On.'

"I've even had calls from a couple of film distributors in the Midwest who said they wouldn't distribute the new Lone Ranger film," said Dorn. "People are saying they won't go see it."

One of the callers, Mary Jo Wade, 27, of Memphis, Tenn., said she and about 20 to 25 friends plan to send a petition to the judge.

"I have grown up with the Lone Ranger and I am just shocked Mr. Moore is not allowed to portray the Lone Ranger anymore," she said. "We are not going to take this lying down."

Another, Lee Bielecki, 22, of Chicago said he, too, planned to start a petition. "I think it's a rotten thing they have to make him give up the mask," he said. "He got a raw deal."

Dorn said they are trying to design a new mask that will be different enough from the Lone Ranger mask to allow Moore to wear at public appearances without violating Judge Foster's order.

Meanwhile, Jay Silverheels, who played the Lone Ranger's faithful Indian sidekick, Tonto, was up and around at his Los Angeles home Friday — not confined to a wheelchair or hospitalized, as had been previously reported.

Last month, Silverheels became the first Native American to have his star placed in Hollywood's Walk of Fame.

Clements Among Texans Traveling To Russia

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Gov. Bill Clements and 35 other Texans interested in agriculture leave today for a three-week trip to see how farming is done in Russia and four Eastern European counties.

The delegation, a part of the People-to-People travel program, will visit Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Poland and Yugoslavia as well as the Soviet Union.

Heading the delegation list, in addition to the governor and Mrs. Clements, will be Dr. Jarvis Miller and Clyde Wells, president and chairman of the board, respectively, of Texas A&M University, with their wives.

Clements said the Texans would look at typical food production and agricultural operations in the five countries, receive briefings at American embassies and will be guests of their occupational counterparts abroad.

"Just about every facet of Texas agriculture is represented in this group," Clements said Friday.

"In addition, President Jarvis Miller of Texas A&M University is interested in exploring the possibility of establishing an exchange between both students and professors in agricultural and animal husbandry matters between A&M and the Russian academic group.

"It is my hope that the trip may also point the way toward future development of important new markets for Texas agricultural products. Some of the delegates already have had experience in sales to Russia. So we look forward to building on that experience and expanding the sales of our products to the Eastern European countries and Russia."

Clements and the Texans leave Dallas-Fort Worth Airport by commercial airliner at 1:55 p.m. today and from New York at 9:55 p.m., arriving in Zurich at 10:30 a.m. Sunday.

From Switzerland the group goes on to Budapest, Prague, Moscow, Krasnodar, in the heart of a Soviet agricultural region; Rostov-on-Don and then to Warsaw.

On their return trip, they again will visit Prague and then go on to Zagreb, Belgrade and Dubrovnik in Yugoslavia. They fly back to New York via Belgrade and Copenhagen, arriving in the United States Sept. 22.

The People-to-People program was founded in 1956 by President Dwight Eisenhower, seeking to expose people in different societies to each other in hope of promoting broader mutual understanding and reducing hostilities.

Others making the tour are:

Mr. and Mrs. Jay Anderson, Eagle Lake; Mr. and Mrs. John E. Birdwell II, Lubbock; Mayor Othal Brand of McAllen and Mrs. Brand; Carrol Chaloupka, president of the Texas Farm Bureau, and Mrs. Chaloupka; James Clement, president of King Ranch Inc., and Mrs. Clement; Mr. and Mrs. Mason Crocker, Brady; Rep. and Mrs. Joe Hanna, Breckenridge; Libo Hinojosa, president of H&H Meat Products Co., Mercedes, and Mrs. Hinojosa; Gaylord Marshall, vice president of ContiCommodity, Dallas; Mr. and Mrs. Norman Moser, DeKalb; Robert Owen, vice president of Schneider, Bernet & Hickman Inc., Dallas; Lonnie Pilgrim, president of Pilgrim Industries Inc., and Mrs. Pilgrim, Pittsburg; Sen. and Mrs. Bob Price, Pampa; and Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Puett, Austin.

Libel Suit Against Author Reconsidered

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The California Supreme Court has agreed to hear arguments against reinstating a libel and invasion of privacy suit filed by a man mentioned in the book, "Helter Skelter," which chronicled the Charles Manson family crimes.

Four justices voted Thursday to grant a hearing to Vincent Bugliosi, co-author of the book and the former Los Angeles deputy district attorney who prosecuted defendants in the Tate-LaBianca murder cases.

San Francisco Superior Court Judge John Benson's had dismissed the libel suit filed by James Forsher, 22, an Oakland mental health worker.

But the state Court of Appeal voted 2-1 on May 30 to reverse that dismissal. Now the high court will review the appeals court's decision.

In addition to Bugliosi, defendants W.W. Norton & Co., Bantam Books Inc., Book of the Month Club Inc. and writer Curt Gentry are appealing the decision to reinstate the case.

Parts of "Helter Skelter" concerned Forsher's connection with attorney Ronald Hughes, who represented Leslie Van Houton, a Manson family murder trial defendant. Hughes disappeared during her trial and was later found dead.

Forsher alleges passages mentioning him are libelous and an invasion of privacy because he is mentioned in the description of circumstances surrounding Hughes' death.

The defendants have contended Forsher used innuendo to establish grounds for libel.

Scientists, Theologians Discuss World Issues

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Exponents of science and religion have found they have some close ties, that they need to share their values to safeguard a threatened planet and that both are sustained by nature.

These were among themes pointed up in 12 days of talks between scientists and theologians from around the globe.

"We see where we can work together," says Eastern Orthodox Metropolitan Paulos Gregorios of India, moderator of the World Conference on Faith, Science and the Future that ended last week.

Although there still are "gaps, walls and shiboleths" between the two fields, their interchange "has moved forward in a really tremendous advance," says Australian biologist Charles Birch, vice moderator.

"Both have stressed the importance of shifting from the view of the earth as a mechanism, a factory, to taking a more religious view of it as a realm of precious life on which both depend."

As one sectional report of the conference puts that point, "We are therefore to care for nature, as if it were the body of humanity. That is good theologically, and it is good biologically."

Characteristic Western thought, both in religion and science, commonly has divided reality into "dualisms" of subject and object, matter and spirit, knowledge and belief, intellect and intuition.

But in contrast to that dualistic view, a conference section report on humanity, nature and God stresses the inter-relationship between them as a "differentiated unity."

"Humanity and the non-human creation ... remain intimately bound together in an open-ended history," the report says. "Persons share with the whole of creation in the ultimate purposes which God has for it."

This intermeshing of matter, the processes of nature, humanity and their creative source was an oft-repeated note as the conference sought ways toward a just, sustainable society on an earth of damaged, shrinking resources.

"The dependence of human beings on non-human nature is becoming only too apparent as the sciences explore the natural world," said one of 10 sectional reports turned out at the conference.

"We should perhaps think of ourselves as the self-conscious intelligence of the whole created order, with authority to act with and for it, but not over it."

Theologian Donald Shriver of New York's Union Theological Seminary termed the interweaving of theology and nature a "new and astonishing note, difficult, challenging and inviting.

"It should take its place on the agenda of Christian social ethics."

The conference, sponsored by the interdenominational World Council of Churches at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, brought together 350 delegates from 59 countries, plus 550 accredited visitors.

The lengthy reports tackled a broad range of issues — Globe-girdling technology, the energy crisis, political systems, urban life, population and hunger problems, genetic manipulation, economics and links between religion and science.

Many of them called for continuing dialogue, regionally and internationally, between scientists and religious thinkers on the various issues.

"Never before has the human race faced the specific opportunity, responsibilities and perils that our generation faces," said one report. It and others stressed that modern scientific technology has brought both benefits and blight, requiring ethical guidance of it.

Cancer Forces Catholic Bishop To Resign Post

By CONNIE CHAPMAN
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Bishop Lawrence M. DeFalco, head of the Catholic Diocese of Amarillo since 1963, resigned Aug. 28 for reasons of health.

DeFalco tendered his resignation to Pope John Paul II through Archbishop Jean Jadot, Apostolic Delegate to the United States. The pope accepted the resignation and it became effective Tuesday.

Surgery early in July revealed that DeFalco has cancer of the pancreas which has already spread to other organs. Doctors advised him that chemotherapy would be ineffective.

After recuperating from surgery in St. Anthony's Hospital in Amarillo, the bishop has been at his home and has continued to administer the diocese through his vicar general, the Rev. James Sonderman, and his chancellor, the Rev. Norbert Kuehler. The condition of the bishop Thursday was reported as "very grave" by a chancery official.

DeFalco was installed as the fifth bishop of the Diocese of Amarillo (which includes the Lubbock area) on June 13, 1963. He succeeded Bishop John L. Morkovsky, who had been transferred to the Diocese of Galveston-Houston.

At a meeting of the diocesan Board of Consultors Thursday in Canyon, Monsignor L.T. Matthiesen of the Catholic Chancery Office in Amarillo was appointed to serve as interim administrator. Sonderman and Kuehler will continue in their posts. The monsignor presently is principal of Alamo Catholic School, the editor of The West Texas Catholic magazine, and pastor of St. Francis Church.

Matthiesen told The Avalanche-Journal Wednesday that it probably would be at least six months before another bishop would be named for the diocese. He emphasized that, while the appointment will be by the Pope, local Catholics, both lay and religious, would have an opportunity to make suggestions about the kind of person needed by the diocese. The Board of Consultors will assist the new interim appointee in the daily administration of the diocese.

During his tenure as bishop for this area, DeFalco instituted many ways of involving others in the diocese in its administration. In the wake of the Second Vatican Council which he attended, he established the Amarillo Diocesan Pastoral Council, one of the first in Texas. He also set up a Priests' Senate, a Sisters' Senate and a diocsean Permanaent Deacons' Senate.

The bishop approved the efforts of Catholic Family Services to work for the resettlement within this area of refugees from the Vietnam conflict. This area's program is one copied by many other areas.

Throughout his administration, DeFalco was a strong supporter of the Mexican-American apostolate, particularly of the Christian renewal movement and of its center in Lubbock, the beginnings of which he endorsed.

DeFalco took up his duties as head of the diocese at a time when the economy was beginning to go into a decline and changes in social and religious lifestyles were becoming noticeable. Problems which the diocese faced during his administration centered around a decline in available funds and personnel.

In 1974 the bishop named St. Laurence in Amarillo his cathedral church following the closing of old Sacred Heart Cathedral. He gave approval to the remodeling of St. Laurence, a pastorally oriented remodeling which subsequently led to St. Laurence Cathedral's becoming known throughout the United States.

Just before his resignation, DeFalco approved plans to build a retreat center in Amarillo to be staffed by the Redemptorist congregation of New Orleans and the Franciscan Sisters of Amarillo. Funding of the building cost and operation will be by the diocese.

Rural Churches Topic Slated

COLLEGE STATION (Special) — Rural churches remain a stronghold, "something to cling to," for many Texans in rural areas. But forces of change are at work that are affecting both rural communities and their churches.

Discussions on the nature and extent of these changes will highlight the 34th annual Town and Country Church Conference at Rudder Center, Texas A&M University, Oct. 4-5.

The theme of the conference will be "New Towns in Old Communities: The Conversion of Rural Texas."

"Church and community leaders are groping for new meaning and direction, and this conference will focus on the latest issues affecting church and community life," said Dr. Dave Ruesink, sociologist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service and conference chairman. The Extension Service is sponsoring the annual conference along with the Texas Agriculatural Experiment Station.

A highlight of the conference will be the presentation of the Texas Rural Minister of the Year Award by the Progressive Farmer Magazine during the final session.

Along with a host of speakers who will address the issue of rural change, the conference will acquaint participants with the many resources available to local communities through Texas A&M University, noted Ruesink.

Leading the list of speakers will be Calvin Beale, a demographer with the U.S. Departmet of Agriculture, who wil discuss national population trends in rural areas. Then Dr. Bob Skrabanek, Texas A&M demographer, will bring the issue closer to home by discussing population chaages in rural Texas.

Baptist To Dedicate New Building

The Metropolitan Baptist Temple will mark the dedication of a new building with special services Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, according to the pastor, Rev. Donnie F. Miller.

The church, located ½ mile south of Routes 62-82 in Wolfforth, was organized Oct. 8, 1978, with eight charter members.

The pastor will preach at the 10:30 a.m. service Sunday. At the dedication service Monday at 7 p.m., participants will be Spruce Derden of Carlsbad, N.M., Vince McClure of Snyder, Rev. Cecil Wagner of Farmington, N.M., Dr. Curtis Goldman of Albuquerque and Dr. I.W. Greer of Lubbock.

Church Planning Chinese Congregation

The Sunset Church of Christ has announced the beginning of a Chinese congregation under the leadership of Stephen Ma, a student at Sunset School of Preaching.

This is the first Chinese church of Christ in Texas.

Stephen Ma has previously established a Chinese congregation in Los Angeles. He conducts classes each Saturday afternoon in reading and writing Chinese. He speaks three dialects.

Christianity Reportedly Growing In Southern Asia

Christianity is growing rapidly in southern Asia, according to a statement by LaMont Francisco, pastor of Lubbock Seventh-Day Adventist Church.

"Our denomination has grown 400 percent in that region over the past 15 years," Francisco said. "About 30 percent are young people," he said.

Lubbock Adventists will study their church's mission program in the nations of India, Pakistan, Burma, Bangladesh, and Sri Lanka for the next few weeks. At the end of September an offering will be taken which will be used for the expansion of several schools in that region.

Public Hearing Set On Wastewater Disposal Permit

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Water Commission has set a public hearing for 10 a.m. Sept. 26 to consider applications by MBPXL Corp., of Plainview, to amend its permit for disposal of wastewater.

MBPXL is seeking to amend the application to allow discharge of up to 2,190,000 gallons of wastewater daily from its Plainview Plant. The water will be treated and stored in a playa lake and used to irrigate about 1,000 acres of land.

MBPXL also is seeking to substitute a clay-lined pond instead of synthetic lines to contain pickling, tanning and brine wastes.

The plant is located northeast of the intersection of U.S. 87 and FM 3183 about 1.5 miles north of Plainview in Hale County.

The hearing will be in the Municipal Building Conference Room, 509 E. Seventh Ave., Amarillo.

Interdenominational Worship Service Set

Morgan was formerly director of public relations and assistant professor of journalism at Wayland Baptist College. He recently retired from that post.

He is a Southern Baptist and served with the Texas state convention headquarters before going to Wayland.

Doug Metzgar, pastor of First Assembly of God, will preach the regular 11 a.m. service Sunday.

Treasurer Petitions Board For Larger Salary Increase

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal

County Treasurer Connie Nicholson today appealed to Lubbock County commissioners for a pay raise more in line with the 23-percent hike the commissioners have planned for themselves.

After hearing that her pay is well below a 15-county average in Texas counties of comparable size, Commissioner Jim Lancaster moved to pay her $18,000 next year instead of the $16,872 allocated in the 1980 budget as it stands now.

The motion died for lack of a second. However, Commissioner Coy Biggs of Slaton indicated he may support a raise for Mrs. Nicholson, who said the 15-county average for treasurers is about $20,500.

County Judge Rodrick Shaw said her request will be reviewed again in budget studies leading up to the scheduled Sept. 24 public hearing on it.

Mrs. Nicholson said the counties ranged in population from 85,000 to 401,000, and she added that population indicators currently show Lubbock County at 200,332 residents.

Her request for an extra $500 for office supplies was approved.

In other business, the commissioners court approved election precinct realignments drawn by the county election board Wednesday.

The realignments increase the number of election precincts, not counting the absentee ballot box, from 59 to 63.

Precinct 40 is merged into Precinct 39 with the polling place remaining at Roosevelt School.

A new Precinct 40 has been carved out of the south half of Precinct 6 with the polling place remaining at Posey School.

A new Precinct 51 has been created from Precinct 39, and Booker T. Washington American Legion Post No. 808 will be the polling place.

Precinct 59 is merged into Precinct 52, and 52 is enlarged to include all voters living south of 82nd St.

Precincts 9 and 47 were reduced in size for a new Precinct 59 to be created with its polling place at Hardwick School.

A new Precinct 60 was carved out of Precincts 12 and 48 and a Precinct 60 polling place established at Evans School.

A new Precinct 61 was created out of Precincts 27 and 30 with Nat Williams School as a polling place, and a new Precinct 62 was created from the overpopulated Precinct 27, with all of the new precinct lying outside Loop 289.

A new Precinct 63 was established to encompass northward city expansion with Indiana Avenue on its east and Ursuline Street on its south.

Commissioners To Join New Appraisal District

Lubbock County commissioners indicated Friday that they will join the countywide appraisal district called for in a new state property tax equalization law.

Counties have a constitutional option of joining or staying out of the districts, which will direct the reappraisal of property and set a standard valuation for all taxing bodies in the counties.

Tax-Assessor-Collector Frank A. Stuart has veto power against the county joining, but he told the commissioners court in a Friday meeting that he will not oppose county participation if the commissioners favor it.

Stuart has been critical of the new state law, best known as Senate Bill 621, because of what he says will be vast new powers over local government by the new State Property Tax Board and because of what he sees as a loss of local control under the new law.

Guided by a five-man appraisal board in each county, the new system will go into effect on Jan. 1, 1982, with several steps of gradual implementation to be taken in the interim.

County Judge Rodrick Shaw said the commissioners probably will vote on the matter during their Sept. 10 regular meeting.

In the meantime, he indicated, there might be an "informal meeting" of the 22 taxing entities in the county to determine if the simpler of the two available methods of choosing appraisal board members might be used.

Without the assent of three-quarters of the taxing bodies, County Clerk Frank Guess will supervise a complicated election by which the entities would be assigned a certain number of votes according to their percentage of the total county tax levy and each entity would offer candidates to be voted on by all the tax boards.

If three-quarters approve using a alternative "selection" process, they would simply meet as one group and choose the appraisal board members.

Under the new law, they have until Sept. 15 to decide whether or not to join and to notify the other taxing bodies of their decision if they want to join.

Stiff Term Given By City Jurors In Burglary

George Z. Archuleta was sentenced to 10 years in prison Friday by a 137th District Court jury that took only 15 minutes Thursday to find Archuleta guilty of an April 9 house burglary.

The panel deliberated 33 minutes Friday before returning with the prison term for the 22-year-old Archuleta of 2008 E. Fifth St.

One of the witnesses called during the two-day trial was victim Johnny Luttrull, who had worked at Methodist Hospital with Archuleta. Luttrull said that as he was driving home from work April 9, he passed Archuleta's vehicle, which contained two stereo speakers similar to the ones owned by the victim.

Luttrull said when he arrived at his 3507 21st St., rear, residence, he discovered the break-in and found his stereo equipment and a television missing.

Archuleta, who was represented during the trial by Tony Wright, was arrested by Lubbock police about three weeks later.

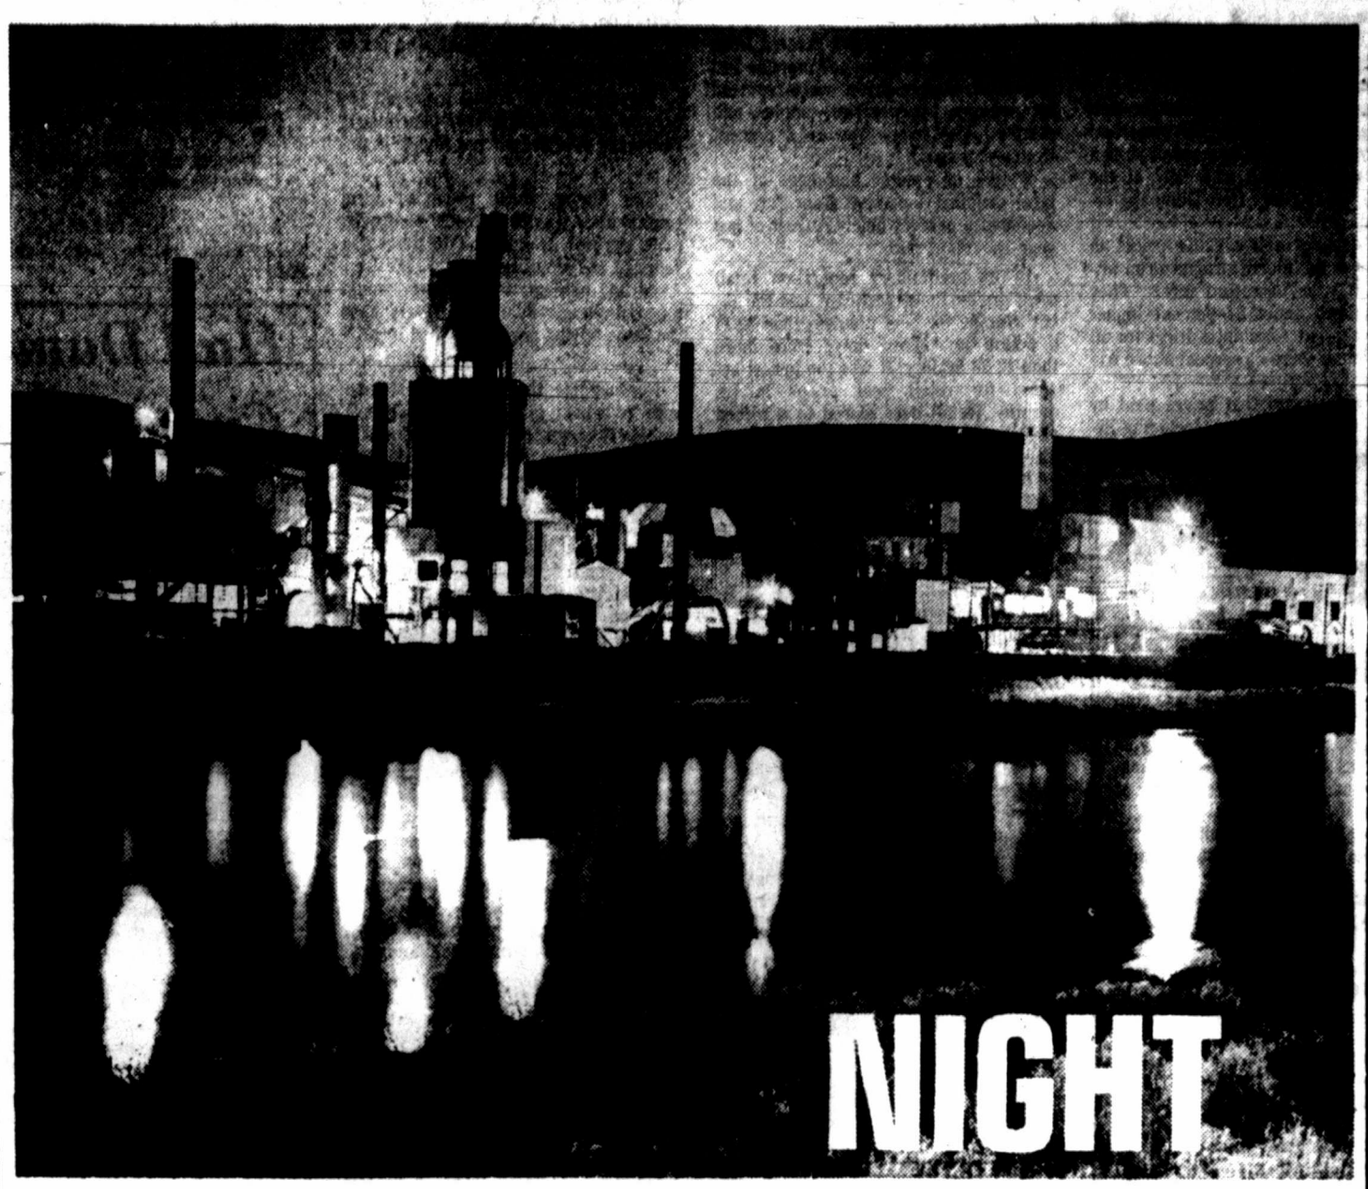
FIND STRENGTH FOR YOUR LIFE — ATTEND CHURCH



In mills and factories across the country, they never stop working. By night as well as by day, the wheels of commerce grind out the goods we need as a nation.

It's a twenty-four hour job, this business of production, and it's a vital job — to you, your family, your town, our whole country. Like most vital jobs, it can't be stopped.

Faith is a vital job, too. It isn't simply something that God gives you, free of charge, on Christmas and at Easter. You have to work for real faith. You have to earn it. You have to keep at it.

Fortunately, to help you gain and sustain this vital faith, you have the Church to guide you. Start attending every Sunday and there absorb the wonders of God's teachings.

Farm Statistics Show Drop In Product Prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — Prices that farmers get for raw products tumbled 4 percent from July to August, the sharpest decline in more than two years, the Agriculture Department said Friday.

The department's Crop Reporting Board said lower prices for cattle, soybeans, corn, oranges and hogs led the decline. Higher prices for lettuce, milk, lemons and tobacco softened the drop in the over-all commodity index, however.

According to the preliminary August figures, the index of prices at the farm for meat animals dropped 6 percent from July, signaling further breaks for consumers at meat counters in the near future if middlemen pass the savings on to shoppers.

In a related report, the department said preliminary figures for August show retail beef prices declined for the third straight month and pork for six consecutive months.

According to USDA officials, the 4 percent drop in the over-all index was the sharpest since June 1977 when it also registered a 4 percent decline.

Corn, the major feedgrain for animals that produce consumer meat and dairy products, was an average of $2.49 a bushel at mid-month nationally at the farm, down 15 cents from July, the report said.

The decline in live cattle prices in August was the fourth straight drop after five months of record levels. They still averaged about 24 percent higher than a year ago. Combined prices for all meat animals were 11 percent above August 1978.

The report said that prices paid by farmers to meet expenses, including living costs, held steady in August but still averaged 14 percent more than a year ago.

Fruit prices dropped 8 percent from July, including declines for oranges and grapefruit. Higher prices were reported for lemons, strawberries, apples and peaches. The index was up 2 percent from a year ago.

Prices of poultry and eggs at the farm dropped 4 percent from July and averaged 6 percent below August of last year, the report said.

In its preliminary report on retail meat prices, the department said the all-cut average for beef was less than $2.24 a pound in August, down from more than $2.32 in July. It was the lowest average for retail beef prices in six months. Retail beef soared to a record of more than $2.40 a pound last May before starting to drop.

Retail pork prices, at an all-cut average of less than $1.38 a pound against more than $1.42 in July, have been regularly dropping from a near-record of $1.57 last February.

The declines in livestock prices in particular have forced USDA economists to revise their forecast for net farm income this year. It now is expected to rise 7.5 percent from 1978 to around $30 billion. Earlier, they had indicated farm income might rise nearly 18 percent to about $32.8 billion.

Food prices over-all are expected to average around 11 percent higher than in 1978 when they gained 10 percent, according to department economists. Most of the increase occurred earlier this year before tapering off this summer.

Economists do not consider farm prices in a single month to be reliable indicators of future retail food prices.

For example, this year the index has increased in four months, dropped in three and remained unchanged in one. The revised index for July, incidentally, showed it unchanged from June. The preliminary figures a month ago for July showed a price index increase of 0.75 percent.

However, a steady pattern of farm prices over a longer period does have an impact on what consumers pay for food, if "middleman" costs, profits and prices follow normal patterns.

Farm prices in August averaged 134 percent higher than a 1967 benchmark. The index was 144 percent higher in July.

The August parity ratio for farm commodities was 69 percent, compared to 72 percent in July and 70 percent a year ago, the report said.

At 100 percent, the indicator would mean, theoretically, that farmers have the same buying power they had in 1910-14.

For example, the average actual farm price of wheat in August was $3.71 a bushel. That was 62 percent of the August parity price for wheat of $5.96 a bushel.

The report also said:

—Cattle averaged $61.30 per 100 pounds of live weight nationally in August, compared to $65.60 in July and $49.30 in August 1978. Those are average prices for all types of cattle sold as beef.

—Hogs averaged $35.50 per 100 pounds, compared to $37.90 in July and $47.40 a year ago.

—Corn was $2.49 a bushel compared to $2.64 in July and $2.01 in August of last year.

—Soybeans were $6.91 a bushel, compared to $7.37 in July and $6.21 a year ago.

—Upland cotton was 59 cents a pound on a national average, compared to 60.9 cents in July and 57.47 cents in August 1978.

—Eggs were 52.3 cents a dozen at the farm against 53.4 cents in July and 52.7 cents a year ago.

—Broiler chickens were 23 cents a pound, compared to 25.5 cents in July. They were 26.2 cents a pound a year ago.

Comparing August parity values with the preliminary average prices received by farmers in August and July, in dollars, the report included: August — July — Parity

Hail Damage Estimates Growing, Ag Chief Says

By KATHLEEN HARRIS
Avalanche-Journal Farm Writer

Monetary loss from acres damaged or destroyed during the Aug. 24 hail storm that ripped across the High Plains' cotton, corn, soybean, grain sorghum, sugar beet and sunflower crops may top $200 million, according to Reagan Brown, Texas commissioner of agriculture.

"Estimates of the damage are continually increasing," Brown told a press conference at the Texas Department of Agriculture offices in Lubbock after an aerial survey of the stricken acreage.

The commissioner said the TDA is working to get the area proclaimed a disaster to allow the Farmers Home Administration and Small Business Administration to loan money with a low interest rate.

In order for an area to be designated a disaster, Brown said, letters from each stricken county's county judge must be received by the govenor. Letters from only four counties had been received as of Friday, according to Brown.

Carl King of Dimmitt, president of the Texas Corn Growers Association, said the affects of the devastating storm will be felt in the trade areas from Lubbock to Amarillo.

"The hail storm was as bad as this country has ever seen," King said. "It will be a severe blow to High Plains agriculture."

"Those whose crops were damaged or destroyed need help," he added. "Farmers don't like to owe money, but it is a question of owing money or being out of business."

Only 200 acres of King's 1,400 acres of corn, soybeans and sugar beets were unharmed by the hail.

Brown said Hockley County was the hardest hit with about 200,000 acres damaged or destroyed at a loss of $35 million. The three other most damaged counties were: Lamb County, 94,000 acres, $23 million; Castro County, 83,000 acres, $15 million; and Terry County, 71,000 acres, $11 million.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

WHEN CONGRESS RESUMES ITS WASHINGTON sessions next week, legislation on a wide range of agricultural issues will be ready for House consideration.

House Agriculture Committee chairman Thomas Foley, D-Wash., has issued a review summarizing the committee's actions to date on measures ranging from grain supports to farm credit and on the outlook for the remainder of the year.

A bill approved by the committee and awaiting floor action would raise the federal support target prices for 1979 crops of wheat and other grains by 7 percent.

For wheat, this would mean the 1979 target now set at $3.40 a bushel would be raised to $3.63. For corn, the existing $2.20 a bushel target would be raised to $2.35.

Additional proposals dealing with possible increases in 1980 target prices are expected in September from both congressional and administration sources.

A SUGAR BILL ADOPTED BY THE ag committee and the Ways and Means Committee, now awaiting floor action, would raise the market price objective for the 1979 crop to 15.8 cents a pound, compared with the 1978 objective of 15 cents.

In addition, the legislation would supplement the market price with up to an additional half-cent federal payment, thus lifting total grower returns to 16.3 cents. Grower support would rise further in 1980 and 1981 if production costs continued to increase. The proposed payment would go only to farmers and would be limited to $50,000 per producer.

As part of a sugar bill, the ag committee authorized federal loan guarantees for plants converting sweetener crops — including corn — into alcohol fuel, with a loan guarantee fund which should provide guarantees of about $250 million. As part of a rural development bill, the committee authorized federal guarantees for up to $180 million in loans financing pilot plants to make alcohol fuel from farm and forest products.

The two bills are awaiting floor action, and the committee meanwhile has begun consideration of a broader gasohol bill.

A BILL TO CREATE A COUNTER-CYCLICAL beef import control system has been approved by the Ways and Means Committee, with backing from many other congressmen. This legislation, backed by cattle producers, would allow imports to increase when domestic production is low and would hold down imports when American supplies are heavy.

The Agriculture Committee has approved new ceilings for insured and guaranteed loans made by the Farmers Home Administration. This legislation would allow Congress, through its annual appropriation process, to consider expanding farm credit as demand grows and to expand credit for many small towns which need financing to build water and sewer systems. The bill also specifically authorizes the use of FmHA loans to develop new energy sources, including gasohol.

A bill approved by the ag committee and awaiting floor action would authorize an expanded government crop insurance program beginning with the 1981 crop year. The legislation includes authority for federal assistance to farmers covering a portion of the insurance premium charge on each policy.

The bill also would extend through 1981 the existing program of direct crop disaster relief payments for producers of grain, cotton and rice in any county in which the new insurance program is not available in that year. In some special situations, the disaster payments could be offered in 1981 as alternative aid even in counties where insurance is sold.

The Agriculture Committee has approved a bill putting a floor under the federal price support loan rate for cotton in 1980 and 1981 at the existing 1979 level of 50.23 cents a pound.

The House will convene Wednesday to continue work on a list of legislative priorities which were not considered before the recess. It will be at least several weeks before the Agriculture Committee's bills begin to reach the House floor.

COTTON FUTURES DRIFTED 45-60 POINTS lower Friday on scattered selling prior to the long Labor Day weekend.

Floor brokers reported little market apprehension about the danger of cotton drop damage from tropical storm Elena, brewing in the Gulf. Also discounted, they added, was Hurricane David, which was in the Caribbean Sea.

The hurricane contributed to short covering and some fresh buying earlier this week, analysts said. If there is no U. S. crop damage associated with it next week, some analysts said, the market may come under pressure from speculative long liquidation.

The market opened Monday with gains of as much as 131 points in October following severe hail on the High Plains after the close the previous Friday. Trade short covering was said to have been a prominent factor in the early market surge, and speculators later provided fresh buying.

By mid-week, open interest had climbed 2,411 contracts from the end of the previous week, when speculative long holdings already were at a hefty 71.7 percent. Some analysts theorize that a considerable portion of the addition in the open interest may have come from speculative buying at levels above or near where the market closed Friday. This, they theorize, could make the market vulnerable on setbacks.

But much will depend, they add, on weather developments, including those on the High Plains, over the long weekend.

Cattle Futures Close Higher

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures closed 142 points higher to 15 lower Friday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. December paced the advance with only distant December off in thin trade. Sales totaled 31,097 cars.

Good commission house buying after midday lifted futures to new daily highs. Some traders noted the firmer tone to cash beef at noon. Evening up ahead of the long holiday weekend accounted for most of the early trade.

Feeder cattle futures closed 27 to 130 higher paced by November. All months ended on or near daily highs. Volume was 4,968 contracts.

Spillover activity from the cattle pit and buying encouraged by the firmer tone to beef lifted prices. Early trade was mostly evening up ahead of the long holiday weekend.

Hog futures closed 115 higher to 10 lower. April paced the advance with only distant October down in thin trade. Sales totaled 8,278.

Commission house buying lifted prices to new daily highs after midday. Traders also noted some support on the firmer tone to the pork complex at noon. Much of the activity was considered evening up ahead of the holiday weekend.

Pork belly (bacon) futures closed 110 to 190 higher, paced by February.

That month posted a limit advance of 200 points in its closing range. March and August also were up the limit at one time. Sales totaled 10,068 cars.

Futures ran up to limit gains for the third day on active commission house buying. The firmer tone to cash bellies was noted as a buying factor. Futures traded unevenly early on evening up ahead of the holiday weekend. May and July posted a loss before rallying.

MONEY MEN ARRESTED

ROXBURY TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — Two Michigan men arrested Monday with more than $500,000 in the trunk of their rented car were released from the Morris County jail after posting $5,000 bail each. The money, which they denied knowledge of, was discovered during a routine search of the car, police said. Police still have the money. Police believe the money was to be used in a major illegal drug deal, said state police Superintendent Clinton Pagano.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Wheat and soybean futures were mostly lower and corn futures were mixed Friday on the Chicago Board of Trade as traders squared their books before the holiday weekend.

The weekend weather in the Grain Belt was expected to be favorable, encouraging some selling.

Kidnapper Overpowered Following Shooting Spree

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — A 23-year-old man who shot up six houses with a shotgun and took three hostages during a three-hour spree was overpowered by police and hospitalized, authorities said Friday. He had stripped himself naked by the time police seized him.

The man, Teddy Overgaard, was reported to be despondent about breaking up with his girlfriend.

Police said after Overgaard shot at the homes he took an elderly man hostage and broke into a residence. The occupants fought him and took the shotgun, but he fled, broke into another home, seized an air gun and took two 15-year-old girls hostage. He was captured after leaving the house with the girls.

Cotton Shirt Makes Comeback

By FLOYD NORRIS
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — All-cotton shirts, nearly chased from the market a few years ago by permanent-press synthetic fabrics, are making a comeback thanks to new ways of making them wrinkle-free and the spiraling price of oil.

One producer thinks the all-cotton shirts wil grab 25 percent of the market this year, up from less than 5 percent a year ago, though still nothing like their domination of the market two decades ago.

The big difference is the wash-and-wear technology introduced this year by Arrow and Van Huesen and now available in numerous brands. But rising oil prices are playing their part by reducing the price advantage enjoyed by polyester.

"It looks as though the natural fiber has returned to the consumer's favor," said George Wino, the chief economist of the American Textile Manufacturers' Institute.

So far this year, orders for cotton fabrics are up 3 percent. Orders for synthetics are down 25 percent as the industry feels the effects of the economic slowdown.

Cotton shirts have long been popular for their comfort, but polyester and polyester-cotton blends took over the market because they could be treated in a way that made ironing largely unnecessary.

Cluett Peabody & Co., in conjunction with Dan River Inc., a South Carolina textile firm, developed the technology to treat cotton shirts to make them wrinkle-free, and introduced them last spring.

The initial shipments were immediately sold out, and strong demand is continuing.

"We are seeing evidence that repeat purchases, sometimes in great numbers, are the order of the day," said C.B. Supplee, a vice president of Cluett Peabody, which makes Arrow shirts and will introduce blouses using the fabric this fall.

Those strong sales came despite the fact the first shirts were not as wrinkle-resistant as shirts made from cotton-polyester blends. A Dan River official, John Emery, says the newest shirts, however, are almost as good.

"It was not comfortable, it was kind of heavy and it needed some ironing," said Jay Meltzer, a Wall Street analyst who bought one of the early shirts. But he says his newest ones are "comfortable and much better."

Cotton costs more than polyester, and the treatment of the fabric raises the price still more. Arrow charges about $2 more for each shirt, compared to its most expensive blends.

But cotton producers find good news every time the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries holds a meeting, simply because some materials used in the manufacture of synthetic fabrics are made from oil.

DuPont, a major maker of synthetics, estimates that every $1 increase in the price of a barrel of oil tacks on a penny to the cost of a pound of polyester fabric, but only 0.07 cents to the cost of a pound of cotton.

The Department of Agriculture says prices of cotton in July were nine cents a pound above those for polyester, down from a margin of 15-20 cents a year before. And polyester producers have announced a five-cent increase in September, further narrowing the spread. Arrow says an average shirt weighs about seven ounces.

That's good news for the cotton industry, but the volume of cotton used in shirts is relatively small, an increase to 25 percent of the shirt market would boost cotton consumption by less than 100,000 bales over last year's 4.3 million.

Investors Ignore 'Small Savers' Plan

NEW YORK (AP) — When President Carter decided something had to be done for the "small saver," the four-year savings certificate was the answer the bank regulators came up with. But investors are ignoring the certificates.

"We've had very little demand for them," says Michael James, a vice president of City National Bank of Charlotte, N.C., in a comment echoed by bankers from around the country. "I just don't think people want to tie up their money for four years at those rates."

Federal regulations governing the four-year accounts require no minimum balance and set an interest rate tied to — but less than — The rate paid on four-year Treasury notes.

The rate for September, just announced by the Treasury, is 8.2 percent at savings institutions and 7.95 percent at commercial banks. That is based on the Treasury's computation that it would cost it 9.2 percent to borrow money in the open market for four-year maturity.

When the federal government announced the new certificates, it pointed out that it was the first time savers were allowed to get better rates than are offered on passbook accounts without having a large amount of money to invest.

Part of the reason for the lack of popularity is that many banks are requiring minimum balances, ranging up to $500. And others have done little to promote the new accounts.

"I don't think people are familar with it. We haven't done a very good job of selling it to our customers," said Bernice Taylor, an assistant cashier of First National Bank of Peoria, Ill., where a $100 minimum is required and sales are "very slow."

But even where promotion has been heavy and there are no minimums, as at Home Savings & Loan Association in California, the response has been slight. Only $9.8 million of the new certificates were sold in the first month and $5.2 million in August — a tiny proportion of the association's $8.9 billion in deposits.

The refusal of savers to participate stands in direct contrast to the reception recorded six-month money market certificates, which pay the same rate the Treasury does on six-month securities, but require a $10,000 minimum. At Home, $186.2 million of those were sold the first month.

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board, which regulates federal savings and loan associations, says 20 percent of the funds deposited in savings and loan associations is in the six-month certificates.

Numbers on the four-year certificates haven't been compiled, but Richard C. Pickering, the FHLBB's chief statistician, says "the scattered information we get" is that "the volume is not very large."

Drug Company Opposes Ban Of Drug

By BETTY ANNE WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A major drug company opposed the government's request Thursday to ban a popular antibiotic used in treating respiratory ailments and disputed claims that the drug's risks outweigh its benefits.

The government had notified Eli Lilly and Company of Indianapolis that it wanted the manufacturer to withdraw Ilosone from the market voluntarily because of new evidence showing it is less effective than had been thought.

The Food and Drug Administration said it would take steps to forcibly end sale of the drug if it could not be arranged otherwise. But just one day after receiving the notice, Eli Lilly said there was no legal or scientific basis for moving against the drug.

Spokesman Ron Culp said his company would present evidence to the FDA showing why the drug should continue to be made available to doctors and patients. And he restated the company's belief that Ilosone is safe and effective.

The FDA's argument is that Ilosone is no more effective than other drugs of its type and carries a significantly higher risk of causing liver damage.

Ilosone is also known by its generic name, erythromycin estolate. It is used, as are other erythromycin drugs, in the treatment of Legionnaire's disease, pneumonia, syphillis, and for patients who are allergic to penicillin.

The FDA gave the company 10 days to respond to its withdrawal request. Formal opposition from the company will slow the process of removing Ilosone from the marketplace, for FDA would have to grant the company a hearing.

The FDA's action follows the completion of studies it commissioned which are said to disprove the old belief that Ilosone is absorbed in the blood stream more readily than other erythromycins. That faster absorption rate had been viewed as an offsetting factor when compared to the risk of liver problems.

Associate FDA Commissioner Wayne Pines also said that 93 percent of all liver ailments reported to the agency from the ethromycin group of drugs were Ilosone-related.

Public Citizens Health Research Group first petitioned the FDA for a ban on Ilosone in 1973. The next year the agency required a special labelling for physicians to warn that the drug was associated with a significantly higher risk of reversible liver ailments. Jaundice, with or without hepatitis, may occur in some persons who use the drug. The Ilosone warning label said malaise, nausea, vomiting, abdominal colic and fever may also occur. In some cases, severe abdominal pain may be developed and seem to simulate an abdominal surgical emergency.

About 7.7 prescriptions were filled for Ilosone last year at a cost of $60 million.

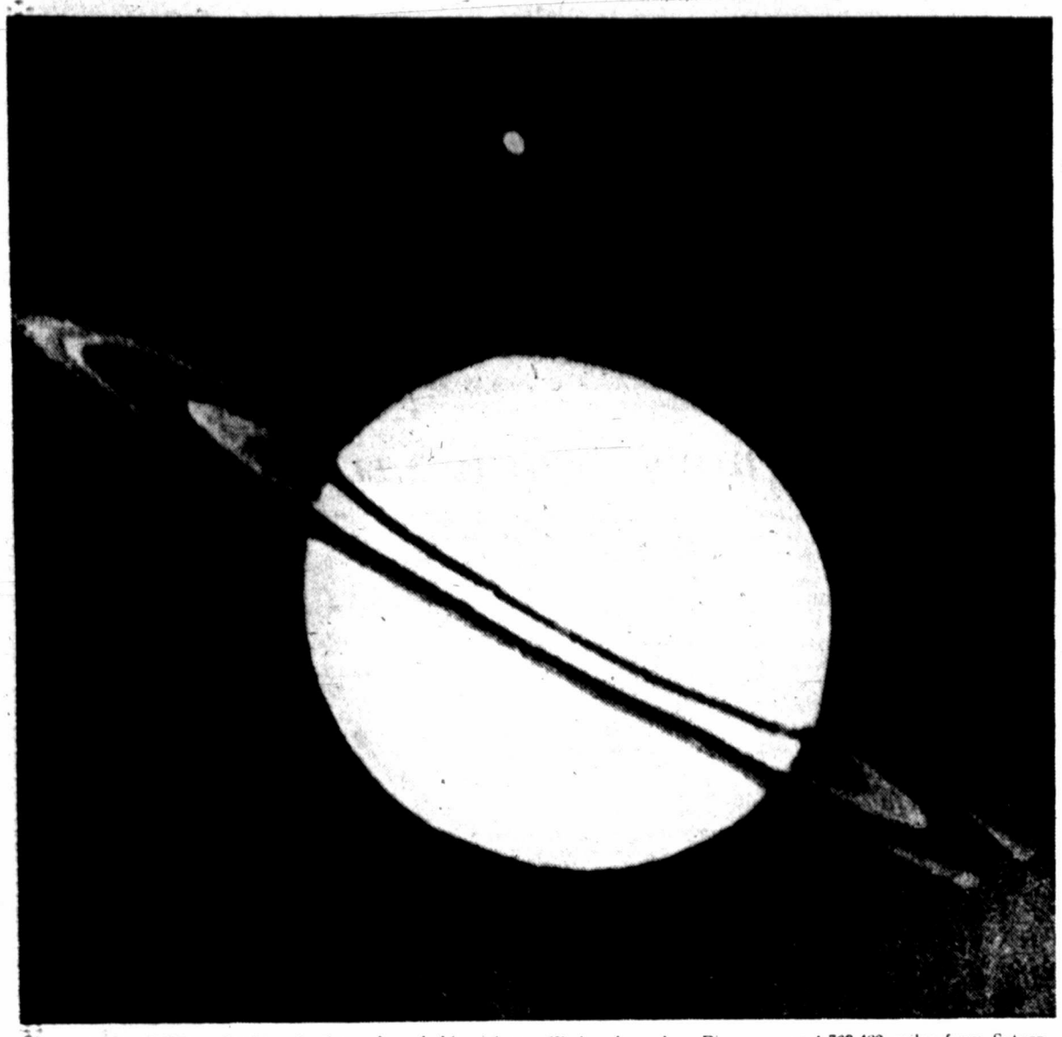
Pioneer Nears Danger Zone En Route To Saturn



VIEW OF SATURN — NASA scientists released this picture Thursday, calling it one of the best images from the Pioneer space vehicle as in approaches saturn. Saturn's moon Titan is the light spot above the planet. The image was made on Wednesday when Pioneer was 1,768,422 miles from Saturn. The image was produced by computer at the University of Arizona. (AP Laserphoto)

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. (AP) — Pioneer 11, its weak radio signals obscured by solar storms, faces perhaps the most dangerous moments of its nearly two billion-mile, 6½-year journey Saturday as it sails past the edge of Saturn's rings on its way to a historic rendezvous with the second-largest planet.

Racing along at 53,000 mph, the relatively tiny spaceship risks a potentially fatal collision with chunks of unidentified material thought to be floating beyond the wide, flat rings that encircle the yellow planet.

visible rings, giving scientists their best clues yet to the size and pomposition of the orbiting particles that make up Saturn's trademark.

Beyond the outer, visible rings seems to be a very, very faint collection of debris, which some scientists classify as a fifth ring.

"Therein lies the danger," said Bradford Smith of the University of Arizona.

Smith is one of the officials involved in the National Aeronautics and Space Adminstration project here at the Ames Research Center.

On Friday, Pioneer passed through the shock wave that marks the start of Saturn's magnetic influence. The bow shock, detected by the ship 900,000 miles from the planet, is the point where the solar wind, the stream of electrified particles from the sun, is deflected around Saturn's magnetic field.

Solar eruptions and storms over the past few days have been playing havoc with Pioneer's radio signals, according to project manager Charles Hall.

Because of the solar interference, "the loss of data in some experients was quite serious," he said. To remedy the situation, officials have reduced the rate of data transmission from the ship.

"I don't think this will mean fewer pictures andlit will not affect the resolution," Hall said. "It does mean we will be seeing smaller parts of the planet."

After skimming under the rings, Pioneer will continue to its historic meeting with Saturn, flying only 12,950 miles above the clouds that cover the planet's surface.

The 568-pound ship will then skim under the rings again on its outward-bound journey away from the planet and into the outer reaches of space.

Saturn, 10 times the diameter of Earth and 95 times as massive, is believed to be mostly a giant ball of hydrogen and helium, probably with a rocky core.

Pioneer's camera, which has already sent back the best pictures ever seen of Saturn, will examine the clouds that are Saturn's surface for a hint of the planet's composition, said NASA scientists.

"We will be getting pictures that may show us (for the first time) small scale details of what is going on between the belts and zones of Saturn's atmosphere and the forces that drive them," said Gary Hunt of University College in London.

Saturday's best pictures will show features as small as 30 miles across on Saturn.

The rings are at least four distinct, flat bands of icy particles, each no more than 1½ miles thick. The diameter of the rings is 170,000 miles, almost the distance between Earth and our moon.

Pioneer's passage through the dangerous area beyond Saturn's rings is set for 10:37 a.m. EDT Saturday. But scientists won't know whether it survived for another 86 minutes — the time needed for radio signals, traveling at the speed of light, to cover the 963 million miles to Earth.

The veteran spaceship was launched April 5, 1973. It has survived a perilous trip through the asteroid belt — an orbiting band of rocks and debris between Mars and Jupiter — and the 1974 encounter with the intense magnetic field of Jupiter.

As it approaches Saturn, Pioneer is reported operating well with only minor damage from its long voyage.

After Saturday's encounter, it will eventually drift out of the solar system for an endless journey through sapce. The ship carries a plaque with greetings to any other beings who might someday stumble across it.

Singer Kills Wife, Travels With Body

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Police say that singer-musician Gary Lynn Webster killed his wife here two years ago, then carried her dismembered body with him in an 'air-tight' box to bars around the country.

Webster, 32, was returned here from Garland, Texas, where the torso, arms and legs of his wife Betty, 18, were found in a mini-warehouse last month. He is scheduled for arraignment in Circuit Court Sept. 6 on second-degree murder charges.

Police at Garland said Webster told them that while he and his wife were arguing on Aug. 8, 1977, he put his hand over her mouth to keep neighbors from hearing, the hand slipped to her throat, and she died of strangulation.

Amplifier To Help Energy Situation

er electric cars, light large buildings, insure against loss of stored computer information because of power loss — serve in almost any situation using electric power.

"It has the potential of being something tremendous," Ferraro said.

But much more research and development must take place before any firm plans can be made for practical applications, he added.

Xtec is beginning a three-year test on the amplifier in hopes of identifying the natural power source and establishing the principle that makes the amplifier work.

A fixed, laboratory version of the energy amplifier uses an 80-foot four-strand antenna to collect the "natural" energy. The portable antenna used to power the tricycle was only about four feet long, but it also was less efficient.

Levelland Names New City Manager

LEVELLAND (Special) — Craig Lonon, administrative assistant of the city of DeSoto, was hired Thursday night as Levelland city manager in executive session of the city council.

Lonon, 26, who has a bachelors degree in political science, will officially begin his duties on Sept. 16. He is replacing former City Manager Mike Gibson, who resigned from his position in July.

Lonon, a native of Lancaster, was selected from among 20 applicants for the position because "of his overall qualifications," said Mayor Don Henderson.

The new city manager will receive an annual salary of $22,500.

He is working on his master's degree in public administration at North Texas State University.

SLATON (Special) — Purchasers of "Slaton's Story," a book about the heritage of Slaton, will have an autograph party at the Slaton Museum today from 2 to 7 p.m., according to Museum Society President Almarine Childers.

The book was compiled by residents of Slaton and organized by the museum society.

Childress Meals Program Said Shaky

A-J Correspondent

CHILDRESS — The Meals on Wheels program, started here four months ago, continues to roll somewhat shakily.

Co-ordinator Mrs. Barbara Mills is calling on residents for regular pledges to defray the community's share of the cost of the project, which provides hot lunches for the elderly.

"Every month we need $500 in local funding to continue the program," Mrs. Mills said. "It would be a tremendous help if residents concerned with helping support the project would sign pledge cards to contribute a certain amount each month. Then I wouldn't have to be out holding bake sales or raising the funds on a piecemeal basis."

Meals on Wheels in Childress currently is providing hot lunches for 50 residents. Of that number, 40 are receiving the service at no charge and the other 10 are financially able to pay a reasonable sum for their meals.

Chronology Of Oil Spill Spans 3 Months

By United Press International

June 3 — Mexican well Ixtoc I, having reached a depth of 11,900 feet in the Bay of Campeche, blows out of control; oil spills into Gulf of Mexico currents that drift west toward Mexican coast, then north toward Texas 500 miles away.

June 4 — Well fighter Red Adair of Houston called to try to control the blowout by Petroleos Mexicanos, Mexico's state oil company.

June 24 — Wellhead closed for a few hours, but the damaged bore cannot withstand the 6,000 pounds per square inch pressure.

Aug. 5 — Floating barriers called booms strung across Brownsville pass to keep oil out of Laguna Madre, prime nursery ground for gulf sealife.

Aug. 6 — Mexican tarballs confirmed in U.S. waters, beaches hit at South Padre Island, Texas. Divers discover oil as deep as 40 feet in the gulf. Booms placed across Port Mansfield Cut entrance to Laguna Madre.

Aug. 9 — Texas A&M University geologist disputes Mexican claim half the spill burns off at the wellhead, says flame burns only gas.

Aug. 10 — South Padre Island tourist executive complains media exaggerations of oil washups prematurely hurt business. Ocean scientists report "considerable mortality" from experimental exposure of young marine life to oil from the Mexican blowout.

Gov. William P. Clements jr., surveys beach, describes pollution as "a big to-do about nothing" but admits damage may worsen.

Aug. 12 — Adair in Houston says no one to blame for blowout he describes as part of the increased risk of drilling deeper for oil.

Aug. 13 — Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, tours beach and says "it could get bad." Coast Guard reports insignificant tarballs passing under booms protecting the narrow inlets to Laguna Madre.

Aug. 14 — First large patches of oil 6 inches thick complete 500-mile drift from the wellsite to Padre Island beaches. Booms placed across Fish Pass, east of Corpus Christi, and Aransas Pass, the entrance to Corpus Christi Bay.

Aug. 15 — Patch of oil sighted south of Louisiana, later dismissed as non-Mexican.

Aug. 16 — Successive waves of oil begin hitting as far north as Port Mansfield Cut, 40 miles from tip of South Padre Island.

Petroleos Mexicanos claims flow cut to 10,000 barrels a day by injecting steel and wooden balls and pieces of canvas into the well bore. Diver Allen Anderson killed while working to control the well.

Scientists say oil will plague Texas coast through the fall.

Aug. 17 — Tourist industry reports business cut 10 to 50 percent. Sheen penetrates Laguna Madre. Booms strung across Cedar Bayou near winter home of rare whooping cranes.

Officials say they may be unable to keep oil out of Matagorda Bay because its entrance is too wide and currents too swift to block off.

Aug. 18 — Fifty-mile-long strip of sludge stains beaches from South Padre Island to north of Port Mansfield Cut.

Aug. 21 — U.S. State Department spokesman says suing Mexico for damages is an option.

Aug. 24 — Mexico rejects U.S. request for financial assistance.

Texas House Speaker Billy Clayton tours beaches, now stained to within eight miles of Port Aransas, and says damage "worse than anticipated." Texas Attorney General Mark White says he is "sickened and dismayed" by Mexican refusal to pay, blasts Clements for saying U.S. should not sue.

Aug. 26 — Oil stains beaches north of Aransas Pass. Coast Guard moves to build dam across Cedar Bayou.

Tropical depression threatens to wash oil over or under floating barriers but storm diminishes before seriously testing oil spill defenses.

Aug. 29 — Clements asks U.S. Small Business Administration to issue a specially tailored disaster designation for oil stained areas. Governor tours oil-stained beaches again and says environmental damage small, but economic impact great.

Aug. 31 — Fish Pass is dammed with sand.

Prosecutor Says Eyewitnesses Should Prove Newton Guilty

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Four eyewitnesses will prove that Huey Newton shot and killed a young prostitute on an Oakland street five years ago, a prosecutor said Friday as the Black Panther leader's murder retrial began.

Newton's defense counsel countered that his client was nowhere near the scene of the shooting and had been "set up" by police and other authorities who were "out to get Huey Newton at any cost."

J. Ton Serra, one of Newton's attorneys, described his client as an internationally known "fighter for freedom from oppression" who lived an "exemplary life" as a writer, poet and Black Panther leader.

He said that at the time of the shooting Newton was an establishment target because of his efforts in the black rights movement.

Newton is being retried by a jury of seven women and five men in the killing of Kathleen Smith, a 17-year-old black prostitute who was gunned down on an Oakland street corner. The original trial ended in March with a mistrial when the jury deadlocked 10-2 in favor of acquittal.

Last fall, Newton was acquitted of 1974 charges that he pistol-whipped his tailor, Preston Callins. However, he was convicted on a related illegal weapons charge.

NORVAL POLLARD

Right Guy, Right Place

Dewey Turner is a happy young man. His beaming face reveals sheer delight in being enrolled at the University of Texas. And you can bet your bottom dollar Fred Akers — and all the folks 'round Austin just love having him around.

For Texas, Turner represents a wise investment in the future. A lot like beef, oil and foreign cars — his value is constantly on the rise.

For Turner, Texas is a ticket to the future. It's an education, an opportunity to play major college football and a four-year course in breaking away and growing up all rolled into one. Maybe now you can see why Turner is glowing.

Turner was an all-state tight end for Estacado High School's Class 3-AAA regional champion team last year. His tremendous size — 6-4, 280 — and a pair of wheels that cover 40 in 4.6 seconds made him a blue-chip college prospect. Many schools wanted him but in the end, Turner hung his hat at Texas. For him it wasn't a difficult decision.

"They win here, and that was important," Turner told me at Friday's final Southwest Conference press stop at the UT campus. "I felt I was an athlete with capabilities and I wanted to go where my capabilities would be realized and used."

Turner didn't have to tramp on anyone's toe to get their attention. The towering tight end has a way of catching the football and at the same time people's eyes. After a week of practice, he's the No. 3 tight end — behind sophomore Lawrence Sampleton and junior Steve Hill — on Akers highly-touted Longhorn squad.

"Right now, Dewey's in the same boat as a lot of freshmen in that he's still trying to learn how to get out of the huddle," Akers said. "He's a talented football player and a strong, strong tight end. Dewey can block, but he hasn't had much experience with the passing game.

"I can tell you he's catching on fast and he's going to play a lot for us this season."

Turner is head over heels about being a Longhorn and is aware that he could play a role on a possible conference and national championship football squad. But at the present he's lost in the excitement of football and the anxiety of being away from home for the first time.

"Everything is different and takes time adjusting to," Turner stated. "It's hard to adjust just like that. This is my second week here and I'm still learning."

As Turner glanced around the lettermen's room at Memorial Stadium and caught glimpses of the photographs of Bobby Layne, Steve Wooster, Earl Campbell, Tommy Nobis and the many other Longhorn greats his face lit up again.

"I'll tell you what. If I can learn my plays, I can help out. I am very excited. If I keep working hard maybe they'll start two tight ends sometimes. I know one thing, I have the same ability as the people who are playing in front of me. Lawrence Sampleton is good, I have to work hard just to play with him— not to beat him out — just to play with him."

Sampleton presents himself as a king-sized obstacle for Turner. The 6-6 235-pounder from Seguin is en route to a super career. Sampleton, who motors a 4.6 40, alternated at tight end as a freshman and snagged eight passes for 196 yards and one TD. He's been seeing some action at wide receiver during the early days of practice and the day may come when there's just not enough room at the tight end position for Turner and Sampleton.

"That defense is awesome — they hit a lot harder than they do in high school," said Turner. "And there are so many leaders on the team. I think this team is capable of winning a national championship," he added. "Everyone's a winner."

LCC Opens Grid History

By DON HENRY
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Jerry Don Sanders has tucked away his can of paste-wax. The wrenches and pliers and tuneup tools have been placed back in the rack.

If Sanders' bright, shiny new athletic machine is to run and hit on every cylinder, then he can do no more for it now.

"I think at this point, we're as ready as we can possibly be. We've done all the teaching we can do up to now," observed the Chaparrals' head coach.

Now, for the first time, Sanders will have a chance to test his football machine, the first one ever assembled at Lubbock Christian College. Sanders will LCC concerning the two games.

But, as these activities unfold, Sanders will be priming his Chaparrals for the battle.

His building process began in the spring with noncontact drills. This fall, it was his challenge to assemble the team, mould it, get it running and then add a touch of polish to prepare for today's Indian invasion.

"I think the guys are excited and anxious," Sanders said Friday. "I can't think of much more we could have done (in the way of preparation) by now.

"We've scouted McMurry (in a scrimmage), so we have a little to go on. We've had only a few injuries, so we're in pretty good shape physically.

"We'll just have to see what we can do."

The Indians will come in as the 15th-ranked NAIA Div. II team in the nation, after having posted a 7-3 record a year ago in the non-scholarship Texas Intercollegiate Athletic Association.

And McMurry coach Spud Aldridge acknowledges his team has prospects of another good season.

"Of course, but you never know until you play," Aldridge remarked this week, try it out against McMurry College in a game beginning at 2 p.m. today at Lowrey Field.

It's a season opener, but it's more than that. It's an inaugural, the first time ever that LCC has fielded a football team.

And the school is trying to make this inauguration a ball for its fans and history buffs.

Since Texas Tech opened its football history in a 0-0 standoff against McMurry in 1925, players and spspectators from that historic game have been invited back to join in LCC's festivities. About two dozen persons have indicated plans to attend and receive certificates from "but it looks like we have a pretty good team. We don't have much depth — but small colleges just don't have much depth.

"We have some pretty good running backs, although our all-conference tailback (Charles Johnson) is out with a knee injury and probably won't play against LCC. We have a couple more starters (cornerback and offensive guard) who won't play.

"But, our offense moved the ball pretty well (in a scrimmage against Abilene Christian)."

Against this, Sanders will be sending his untried troops into their first action. And, since it is the first action, he plans to use as many players as the game will allow.

"Sure, we'll play as many as we can, depending on the flow of the game. We want them to get a chance to gain some experience. We'll use about six running backs," observed Sanders, "and two, possibly three quarterbacks."

Robert McBride will open at quarterback, but Sanders plans to call plays and even send in the offensive instructions via alternates Curtis Dean and Kent Allison.

The opening running backs will be Marvin Wiley of Crosbyton and Ted Thornton of Sharyland.

If the gameplan holds, the Chaparrals will run about 60 percent of the time, Sanders indicated.

"We have some people to catch the ball (speedster Joe Green and Mike Moseley on the flanks) when we do throw," Sanders added.

McMurry passed for almost as much yardage as it gained on the ground, and the No. 1 quarterback from a year ago, Brett Lang, returns. Johnson was the team's leading rusher of 1978, but with his knee problems, the leader on the field could be fullback Dudley Woodard, who picked up 226 yards rushing last season.

SWC Focus: Texas

All Eyes On Texas To Take SWC Crown

By NORVAL POLLARD

AUSTIN — Southwest Conference opponents are holding their collective breath. And that anticipated sigh of relief may never come.

The University of Texas may possess the offensive capability to match that tremendous defense that coiled and waiting to strike anytime, anywhere and against anyone.

"Our offense is going to be improved," declared Texas head coach Fred Akers. "Our line is improved and our starting receivers are an excellent bunch. We hope to show better balance offensively by throwing the ball more than we did last season. We will be better."

There are no ifs, ands or buts when it comes to Texas' seasoned defense. Most of the starters (nine return from 1978's squad) on that unit are three-year lettermen and have started together for the past two seasons. They are a swarming type defense that is exceptionally tough up the middle. And many of the Longhorns' second and third team players could be starting elsewhere in the conference.

"We have an experienced, extremely capable defense," added Akers. "We have a great amount of potential defensively. If we can bring it to actuality, we could be a very fine defense. This is not the biggest defense around. We have fine size and decent quickness. We expect to be a very good football team."

The Longhorns have been picked as high as fourth in many national preseason football polls and hold a slight edge over the University of Houston in the latest SWC poll conducted by the sports-writers across the state.

There is little doubt that all of the potential in the world is alive and well in Austin. If it all comes together, well, the Longhorns could be in the thick of the fight for a national championship come New Year's Day.

There are no apparent weaknesses on the defensive side of the football for Akers. He has experience, leadership, talent, depth, strength and quickness — everything you always wanted in a defense. The Longhorns appear to have stacked the greatest number of superb athletes near the middle of the field.

The first in a long line of quality defensive personnel is senior free safety Johnnie Johnson, an all-conference and All-American selection during his junior season. Johnson (6-1, 185) has "lived up to everything that's been said about him," according to Akers. Johnson is an awesome hitter, has a knack for always being around the football and is one of many leaders on and off the field for Texas.

Senior Ricky Churchman (6-0, 195) doesn't receive the media attention that Johnson does, but he's considered one of the finest strong safeties in the college ranks. Churchman is a three-year starter and is very aggressive. He has improved his pass coverage enormously over the past season, according to Akers.

Experience is evident at the cornerback spots. Senior Derrick Hatchett (5-11, 183) has lettered twice at the left corner position and junior Vance Bedford (6-0, 170) is also a double letter winner at the right side. Derrick's brother Mike, a 5-11, 170-pound sophomore, and Adrian Price (6-0, 190), are pushing hard to start at the corners. Akers expects both to see playing time this season.

Akers is fortunate to have two middle linebackers who could start almost anywhere in the nation in sophomore Doug Shankle and senior Lance Taylor. Shankle (6-0, 220) replaced Taylor midway through the 1978 season when Taylor went down with a knee injury. Shankle is listed as the number one middle man, but Taylor (6-1, 224) is making great strides to regain his starting role. Akers calls Taylor "one of the top football players around."

An ankle injury to expected starter Bruce Scholtz has pushed senior Chuck Holloway into the spotlight at the strong-side linebacker post. Scholtz, a 6-6, 233-pound senior, may be healthy by the time the 'Horns open their season Sept. 22 against Iowa State but for now, Holloway (6-0, 222) is listed number one. The other outside linebacker spot is filled by junior Robert Sendlein (6-4, 225).

McMichael (6-2, 245) seems to have recovered from his early summer accident involving a car's fan blade. McMichael required 75 stitches in his left hand and has not regained complete usage of the hand. The all-conference and All-America candidate says the hand is 90 percent ready and has not given him any trouble during the first week of practice.

Acker (6-3 255) is anticipating his best season ever. Acker relies more on quickness while McMichael is the bull of the two and uses his strength to make the big play. The Longhorns can insert second-teamers Kenneth Sims (6-6, 265) and Steve Massey (6-3, 255) at tackles and the level of play does not drop, according to Akers.

Astros Win, Reds Lose, Race Tightens

By the Associated Press

Houston's Ken Forsch, pitching for the first time since Aug. 7, allowed one hit and retired 14 straight batters over five innings Friday as the Astros defeated the New York Mets 2-0 on a combined three-hitter by three pitchers.

Forsch, who pitched the season's first no-hitter on April 7, had been sidelined with a sore shoulder. Relievers Randy Niemann and Joe Sambito combined to allow only two hits the last four innings.

Forsch allowed a single to Frank Taveras in the first inning and retired the next 14 Mets before leaving for a pinch-hitter in the fifth.

Forsch, 9-6, was only scheduled to pitch five innings and was relieved by Niemann to start the sixth. Sambito came on in the ninth to get his 18th save.

Expos 8, Reds 7

Pinch-hitter Rodney Scott cracked a one-out single to right field in the bottom of the 10th inning to drive in Larry Parrish and give the Montreal Expos an 8-7 victory over the Cincinnati Reds Friday night.

Parrish led off the 10th with a double off Tom Hume, 9-7. Jim Mason then bunted and Parrish apparently scored when first baseman Dan Driessen fielded the ball and threw it wildly down the right field line.

But Mason was called out for running outside the base path and Parrish was sent back to second. Scott then hit for winning pitcher Woody Fryman, 3-5, and singled home Parrish.

The Expos had tied the game 7-7 with two runs in the ninth on a run-scoring triple by Andre Dawson and a sacrifice fly by Gary Carter.

The Expos' fifth run scored on Warren Cromartie's eighth homer of the season leading off the seventh inning. They also scored three runs in the fifth on an RBI double by Dave Cash and Dawson's 19th homer of the season, a two-run shot.

Red Sox 9, Rangers 6

Tom Poquette belted a three-run homer and Carl Yastrzemski moved closer to the 3,000-hit mark with a two-run shot Friday night, powering the Boston Red Sox to a 9-6 victory over the Texas Rangers.

Poquette capped a four-run second inning with his second homer of the season, a drive into the Boston bullpen in right-center.

Yankees 7, Royals 3

Tommy John won his 18th game of the season and Reggie Jackson drove in four runs with his 22nd homer and a single as the New York Yankees defeated the Kansas City Royals 7-3 Friday night.

The Yankees jumped on Paul Splittorff, 13-14, for three runs in the first inning. Willie Randolph walked, stole second, was sacrificed to third and scored on Lou Piniella's sacrifice fly.

George Scott then singled for the first of his three hits against his ex-teammates and also stole second before coasting home on Jackson's 362nd career homer, which put him one ahead of Joe DiMaggio on the all-time list.

Mourning Dove Look Promising

The mourning dove season that opens today for the North Zone of Texas will probably be a mixed blessing for dove hunters, according to a spokesman for the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

The North Zone mourning dove season daters are Sept. 1-Oct. 21, 1979 and Jan. 5-13, 1980. The South Zone dates are Sept. 22-Nov. 4, 1979 and Jan. 5-20, 1980.

The division line for the North and South Zone remains the same as for the 1978 dove seasons. Hunters planning to go after doves may pick up a free copy of the department's dove map where hunting licenses are sold. Bag and possession limits remain unchanged from last year at 10 per day and 20 in possession.

Longhorns Fit Bill As Favorite

'LAM' JONES

STEVE MCMICHAEL

JOHNNIE JOHNSON

Seniors Henry Williams (6-3, 240) and Ron Bones (6-4, 235) provide excellent defense at ends. Both have played a lot of football at Texas and are extremely aggressive players. They will be backed up by seniors Richard Slaydon (6-0, 219) and former all-SWC performer Tim Campbell (5-11, 202). Campbell led the Longhorns in quarterback sacks for three consecutive years, but missed 1978 with a severed Achilles tendon.

Akers' main concern on offense are the depth situation at running back, the amount of improvement in quarterback Donnie Little, and the maturity of a relatively young offensive line. The biggest of the three concerns would have to be depth at running back.

Sophomore A.J. "Jam" Jones led the 'Horns in rushing last season with 465 yards, but he is the only proven ground threat, and he has been bothered by a shoulder injury. Jones (6-1, 220) suffered a slightly separated shoulder during spring drills and reinjured the shoulder when he fell three stories off a scaffold.

Akers has been pleased with Jones' early movement during workouts, but is fully aware of the still-tender shoulder. Jones claims he'll be ready to go against Iowa State.

Joining Jones in the Texas starting backfield will be senior LeRoy King (6-2, 210). King has lost some weight since last season, but has improved as a runner and blocker.

There are several inexperienced runners playing behind Jones and King and it would be a wait-and-see proposition if Akers were forced to use any of them. They include sophomores Rodney Tate (6-0, 175) and Brad Beck (5-10, 212), juniors Rickey Hicks (5-8, 172) and Kermit Goode (6-0, 175) and freshmen Carl Robinson (6-1, 200) and Manuel de la Garza (6-2, 218).

Little is just a sophomore. The 6-1, 180-pounder holds the starting edge over junior Jon Aune (6-1, 196), senior Ted Constanzo (6-1, 191) and freshmen Rick McIvor, of Fort Stockton, and Herkie Walls.

According to Akers, Little has shown tremendous improvement in both his running and passing, and possesses the confidence and poise necessary to lead the Longhorns' offense. Akers is also pleased with the improvement Aune has shown. Akers says McIvor has a "rifle of an arm," and he and Walls could see some playing time this season.

The Longhorns definitely need to develop an improved passing attack if they are going to utilize the 9.2 speed of senior flanker Johnny "Lam" Jones. Jones was selected the Longhorns' most valuable player last season after catching 25 passes for 446 yards and five touchdowns. Jones (6-1, 185) reported in the best condition he's ever been in according to Akers, and the third-year mentor expects the Olympic sprinter to have his finest season. Sophomore Tommy Cox (6-0, 175) will spell Jones when he is getting a breather on the sidelines.

Junior Les Koenning will get the green light at split end. Koenning (5-9, 160) lettered last year and has excellent quickness. Junior Sanford Coggins (6-2, 180) and senior Mike Cordaro (6-3, 188) could also see some playing time at split end.

The Longhorns have a potential future all-conference tight end in sophomore Lawrence Sampleton (6-6, 230). Sampleton has 4.6 speed in the 40 and has been spending some time running wide receiver routes. His mere presence on the field should take some heat off Lam Jones and add more big-play capability to the Texas offense.

Listed behind Sampleton are junior letterman Steve Hall (6-3, 230) and former Estacado all-stater Dewey Turner (6-4, 245). Akers expects both back-ups to see playing time this fall.

If the offensive line jells, it may not matter who is running the ball for the 'Horns. Senior Craig Rider (6-1, 250) and sophomore Terry Tausch (6-4, 284) will start at tackles. Both started last season and performed well. Sophomore Kevin Burris and junior John Tobolka are second on the depth chart.

The starting guards will be sophomore Joe Shearin (6-4, 250) and junior Les Studdard (6-5, 240). Shearin started 11 games in 1978 and Studdard was switched from tight end to guard because of his great athletic ability.

Akers considers his starter at center, senior Wes Hubert, a good all-conference candidate. Hubert (6-4, 250) is a two-year starter who is the leader of the interior line. Hubert will be spelled by sophomore Mike Baab (6-4, 245), and senior Scott Huntington will handle all long snaps.

Phillies Fire Ozark

ATLANTA (AP) — Danny Ozark was fired Friday as manager of the Philadelphia Phillies, General Manager Paul Owens said. Dallas Green was named interim manager to guide the slumping National League club for the remainder of the season.

Ozark, 55, who guided the Phillies to three consecutive East Division titles prior to this season, was in his seventh year as the team's manager.

His departure came as Philadelphia had fallen 12 1/2 games behind the division-leading Pittsburgh Pirates. The Phils had dropped eight of their last nine games and five in a row.

"This change is an organizational move that owner Ruly Carpenter and I decided to make after two or three days of deliberation," Owens said. "We were disappointed in the way the club has performed the past few weeks and felt that something had to be done."

Green, 45, a former Phillie pitcher, has been in the club's front office for 10 years, rising to the post of director of minor leagues and scouting.

"They asked me to do the job the rest of the year, and I agreed to go down on the field and make every effort to get the athletes to believe in themselves and give the Philadelphia baseball fans the kind of effort they deserve," Green said.

LCHS 'Quiet Bunch' Competitive In '79

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Shed no tears for George Harper.

Sure, the Lubbock Christian High football coach did lose 18 seniors and almost all of his starters from last year's 9-3 and TAPS (Texas Association of Private Schools) state runner-up team. And yes, the enrollment at LCHS is down this year, making the Eagle squad one of the smallest (in number) in recent years.

But Harper is optimistic about the '79 Eagle outlook. "You know," says Harper. "Last year we had a lot of big-mouthed kids. They were seniors — and they were yellers and screamers. But this year's group — they're not loud.

"In fact, Coach (Jerry Don) Sanders (football coach at Lubbock Christian College) calls them 'The Quiet Bunch.'

"But," adds Harper, "this may be the scrappiest bunch I've ever coached. These kids will hit people."

Leading the Eagle "hit parade" are senior guards Gaeron Baker and Scott Hawley. Harper calls them the best he's ever had at that position. Both are small, but aggressive and quick.

But probably the best athlete on the Eagle roster would have to be senior wide reciever Shawn Williams. Last year Williams snagged over 1,000 yards worth of aerials — and 10 went for touchdowns. He was a second-team all-state TAPS selection.

"Shawn has tremendous leaping ability, and he's fast," said his coach. And at 6-3, Williams makes a good target. Now all the Eagles have to do is find someone to throw him the ball.

Right now the LCHS coach is looking at Randy Stumbo and junior Brian Manis. But it's just possible that Super Shawn may wind up in the QB spot.

"A guy like Shawn doesn't come along very often," says Harper. "So we want to use him as much as possible. He'll be returning punts and doing everything. If we have to, we'll move him to quarterback."

The Eagles are in good shape in the offensive backfield though. Steve Sikes returns at fullback and seniors Tim Williams and Jeff Lott both have ability at the other slots.

Curtis Furgeson and Rick Rickman should man the tackle spots while Lan Lackey will be snapping the ball.

Defensively, the Eagles will rally around noseguard Scott Hawley — who was also a second-team all-state TAPS selection.

"Scott is a great one," says Harper. "He's the kind of player who spends most of his time in the offensive backfield."

The secondary is in good shape with Super Shawn once again playing a key role. He picked off 10 passes last year from his cornerback position. Tim Williams will man the other corner. Lott, a transfer from Post, will play defensive end while Baker will be on the other outside position.

Sikes, sophomore Chuck Crouch and Rick Rickman are in the middle of the linebacking picture. Even though it's still early, Harper is pretty well set with his alignments.

"Well, we don't really have that many kids to choose from," says the coach. "But I'm real impressed with our senior leadership. And our kids are still pretty excited about the success we had last year."

LCHS, which is not a member on any district, plays quite a unique schedule.

"We play Class B schools all the way up to Class AAA," says Harper. "So we've got to be ready for anything. But we play to pretty big crowds, and we take a lot of people with us when we travel."

The only real rivalry during the regular season for LCHS is with Christ The King — Lubbock's other private school. And that is a fierce one. The two schools don't meet until Oct. 26 and you can bet that some of the Eagles' inexperienced athletes will have plenty of playing time under their belts by then.

Harper's 'Quiet Bunch' may just turn into the Wild Bunch.

Chiefs Boast Enthusiasm

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

FRIONA — Lonnie Phillips wasn't speaking with forked-tongue when he commented, "I've never seen so much enthusiasm from our kids going into a season."

As he was talking, members of the Friona Chieftain football team were slapping backs, hands and helmets. And this was just a practice session — the second time in pads, no less.

"I'll guarantee you," continued Phillips, "if we lined up right now and started running 100-yard dashes until dark, nobody would complain. We have a great group of kids here that want to work hard and win."

This year, the Chieftains, coming off a 4-6 season and 1-4 District 3-AA records, will rely heavily on seven offensive and defensive starters to carry much of the firepower.

Included in the offensive group are quarterback Joe Malouf (recently switched from a runningback position), halfback Rod Owen, and fullback Chuck Nichols. On the line, Phillips welcomes back center Kirk Frye, end Joel Hight, tackle Milon Dixon and end Bobby Thompson. Owen, Nichols, Hight, Dixon, Thompson, along with noseguard Jerry Harrelson and end Brett Moore are also returning defensive starters.

"We have a lot of overall quickness and our attitude is great," commented Phillips, "but where we'll be hurting is at our experience in the key positions."

Hoping to add a little strength to the depth department are guard Ben Landrum, back Mike Hubbart, back Tonny Jackson, guard Jeff Landrum and tackle James Clark. All five are expected to fill in at postions stripped clean by graduation.

"We really don't have any outstanding players on the team," commented Phillips, "but what we do have is a good team attitude.

"Another one of our strengths will be teamwork. I think we'll work extremely well as a team this year...everybody will work together."

Reeger Back With Buffs

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Maybe it just slipped his mind, but Reeger has a 38-10-2 record as boss man for the Buffaloes. Heck, that was three years ago though, he probably just forgot about his share in those two district championship teams of 1971 and 1974.

That trip to the state playoffs (in 1974, in 1971 Petersburg was co-champion with New Deal going to the playoffs) was probably just another oversight.

Take it easy on the new guy fellas, he's concentrating on this year.

Reeger, who was head coach at Class 3A Cleburne for the three years since then, has got plenty to concentrate on too.

His Buffs are rated as co-favorites with just about everybody else in District 4-A, mainly on the strength of a strong offensive backfield and returning All-South Plains end Quentin Berry.

Leading that backfield is stocky running back Mike Phillips. Though he's built along the lines of a fireplug, 5-11, 185, Phillips is considerably more mobile, turning a 9.8 in the 100-yard dash last year.

Right in front of him is returning starting fullback Jerry Don Bright. If Phillips looks like a fireplug, Bright is his fire truck — or maybe even the station house. He weights in at 200 pounds despite standing only 5-10.

The quarterbacking duties will be handled either by 5-8, 155-pound senior Eric Sell of 5-11, 160 Todd Shurbet.

Berry, a strapping 6-1, 185, has been shifted to wingback this year to take more advantage of his blocking abilities.

"We'll be running the wing-T this year," Reeger says, "it's more a power-type offense. I just hope we have the personnel to fill it."

Cumpton, Herd Face Rebuilding Season

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

PLAINVIEW — Plainview had to wait 58 years before winning its first-ever district football championship. But now, it seems, the Bulldogs may not have to wait 12 months before claiming their second title.

Most observors thought that after the Bulldogs, under then first-year coach Greg Sherwood, ended the 1978 season with an 11-2 mark the crew wouldn't be nearly at potent this time around.

But, according to Sherwood, that observation is wrong — dead wrong.

"I think we've got the talent coming back to have a very fine football team," said Sherwood. "It might take some time for the offense to come around, but defensively we should be strong ... maybe even stronger than last year."

Plainview, which waltzed to a 4-0 won-loss mark in District 4-AAAA play last year, returns three offensive and six defensive starters. Included in the group are all-state candidates such as running-back Ervin Davis, split end Kenneth Storey and linemen Kevin Igo and Kevin Wood.

Davis, recently switched from halfback to fullback, could be the best ball-carrier on the South Plains this year. The 6-0, 221-pounder rushed for 1,030 yards last year, despite carring the ball on an average of eight or nine times a game.

"I've been coaching for 20 years and I'd have to say Ervin and Royce Coleman (an all-stater last year) are in the top three I've ever coached."

Storey, a 7-0 high jumper as a junior, is also being highly recruited by college scouts, Sherwood said. "He can really catch the ball well," Sherwood said about the 6-2, 173-pound split end.

Sherwood is equally as quick to heap praise on Woods and Igo. Woods, a 6-1, 250-pounder, and Igo, 1 6-0, 201-pounder, are both "outstanding" linemen, Sherwood said.

Woods will anchor the defensive line from his tackle postion, while Igo is an offensive guard.

According to Sherwood, for the Bulldogs to be successful this year the defense "has to hang in there, until the offense begins playing as a team. Right now the defense is much further along that the offense. It's going to take them (the offense) some time — maybe a couple of games — before they can get going. We are particularly weak on the defensive line...that's a trouble spot. It's going to take some time before they (the linemen) start feeling comfortable in there."

Of all the positions, the offensive line was hit hardest by graduation. Five of the seven key players on the line are gone.

One of the most hotly contested jobs on the line is at the center position where Alan Adcock, Walter Daniels and Louis Rios are all battling for a starting berth. All three are around the 220-pound mark.

Another point of concern for Sherwood is at quarterback, a position played by the coach's son Scott last year. Presently Jeff Gould, Tay Hindman, Britt Mayberry and David Gallardo are all vying for the starting position. Gould is the only senior of the group. However, Mayberry (6-1, 192) was the third-team signal caller a year ago and Gallardo guided the PHS JV to a perfect 10-0 mark.

But all the question marks certainly haven't discouraged PHS fans. The Bulldog boosters turned out in record numbers and purchased 1,100 season tickets.

DON CUMPTON
...Herd Head Man

HEREFORD — Don Cumpton certainly hopes the "sophomore jinx" isn't as bad as the "first-year blues" because if it is then the Hereford Whitefaces are in store in for another long season.

During Cumpton's first year as the HHS head man, the Whitefaces slipped to a 3-6-1 won-loss mark, thanks primarily to a rash of injuries at key positions.

"Injuries killed us last year," said Cumpton. "For us to be successful this year, we've got to stay healthy."

And if they don't? "Well," said Cumpton, "we'll be in trouble."

The Herd returns four offensive and six offensive starters from last year's squad. And, according to Cumpton, all of them are "capable of playing good football. But overall we're lacking in experience...that's obvious," said Cumpton. "The players we've got back can play, but the rest of them will have to gain a lot of experience in a hurry."

Included in the group of starters are runningback Joe Walker, flanker Keith Adams, tight end Barry Morgan, back Joe Mitchem, safety Edward Dominquez, lineman Donny Lauderback, lineman Corey Christie and lineman Robbie Fish.

For Hereford to be successful this year, Cumpton also believes, the team will have to win a few of its early games. Hereford opens the season against Pampa and then plays Palo Duro, Borger, Canyon, Amarillo and Brownfield, prior to the start of District 4-AAAA competition.

"We need to establish a winning attitude early in the season," said Cumpton. "But even if we don't win, we can't afford to be beaten badly.

And while the offense is "coming around", Cumpton believes the defensive unit will "have to take charge early, that is, until our offense matures."

Perhaps the bright spot of fall workouts for the Herd, Cumpton said, was the overall size of the squad. And the coach isn't talking about poundage.

"We've about about 140 (players) out," said Cumpton. "And that just the upper three grades."

Commenting on why so many potential footballers have come out this fall, Cumpton commented: "We've been trying to sell them on our program all spring. I think they realize they have a chance to make the team, so they've come on out."

On defense, Cumpton says he needs to find a third lineman to "shore things up." Herbert Carrillo, along with Max Gonzales and Gilbert Gonzales are all back for another round in the trenches.

Connors Outlasts Open Opponent

NEW YORK (AP) — Jimmy Connors advanced Friday when his opponent, India's Vijay Amritraj, succumbed to heat and retired from their second-round match in the U.S. Open Tennis Championships.

Connors had won the first set 7-6, coming from 3-6 down in the tiebreaker to win it 8-6. And he had just won the second set 7-5 when his 25-year-old opponent informed the umpire he did not want to go on.

Amritraj had been playing beautifully, although he had lost hold of his racket three times, apparently because of heat-induced cramps in his hands.

Connors was disappointed that his match had ended so quickly.

"I was dodging bullets out there for two sets. If he was playing hurt, I'd hate to see him when he's healthy," Connors said. "The last six or seven games I played increasingly better but I don't know what would have happened if we had continued."

It was Connors' second confrontation with an Amritraj this week. He beat Anand, Vijay's older brother, in straight sets in the first round.

Fifth-seeded Evonne Goolagong Cawley breezed by American Rayni Fox, and No. 6 Wendy Turnbull defeated another American, Maria Fernandez, 6-4, 6-2.

NEW YORK (AP) — The wife of the president of the U.S. Tennis Association, his son and daughter-in-law fled the stadium in fear.

Tournament Director Bill Talbert was apprehensive lest the match turn into a Latin soccer-style riot with people throwing steel chairs and other objects onto the court.

Pushing and shoving fights broke out among well-dressed society types in the $1,800 box seats overlooking the center court of the National Tennis Center.

It was chaos and temporary alarm at the U.S. Tennis Championships — a price that the once stuffy, country club sport was destined to pay for going public and carrying its product to the baseball, soccer and bull ring crowd.

It happened Thursday night in the center's glistening new stadium in a second-round men's singles match between two of the game's most volatile players, Ilie "Nasty" Nastase and John "Superbrat" McEnroe.

After three hours and eight minutes alternating shot-making brillance and unharnessed confusion, which saw the match awarded to McEnroe by default and then resumed with the tournament referee in the chair, the third-seeded McEnroe was the victor, 6-4, 4-6, 6-3, 6-2. The end came at 12:36 a.m.

The 33-year-old Nastase, the mad Romanian who missed last year's event because of a suspension, went out in style — his style, with controversy swirling around his head.

This was the sequence of events:

The crowd was hostile toward McEnroe from the start, cheering when he missed his first service and applauding errors. Nastase, known for such tactics, carried on his private histrionics by stalling and carrying on conversations with the crowd.

The Romanian early became disturbed at the time McEnroe was taking on service. Once he fell to the ground, his racket resting on the back of his head, chatting with spectators.

In the third set with the score 2-2, 15-love, and McEnroe serving, Hammond, who has a reputation for toughness as well as theatrics in the chair, called a penalty point against Nastase.

The crowd reacted noisily. As the set progressed, the bickering between Nastase and the umpire intensified and Hammond could be heard over the microphone beseeching the Romanian to behave and play tennis.

In the fourth set, with the score 2-2 and McEnroe serving, Hammond again penalized Nastase for stalling and then failing to get a proper response, he penalized the Romanian a full game, and finally with the sound carrying through the stadium, he announced:

"Game, set, match."

The crowd let out a thunderous yell. This brought Talbert and Mike Blanchard, the tournament referee, onto the court and with Blanchard, substituting in the chair, the match was completed.

Hammond, an umpire for 32 years, called his sudden replacement "one of the worst things that ever happened to me."

"I was right," he insisted. We have specific rules about penalties "first a warning, then a point penalty, a game penalty and a fourth time, the match. I followed the guidelines."

Parsons Leads 500 Qualifiers

DARLINGTON, S.C. (AP) — Benny Parsons got his Chevrolet back in stride Friday and led 12 additional drivers who qualified for Monday's Labor Day Southern 500 stock car classic.

Parsons, fastest of 23 drivers who failed to qualify Thursday, was clocked Friday at an average 153.011 mph for two laps around the 1¼-mile Darlington International Speedway.

He will start Monday's race in the 13th position behind the 12 who qualified Friday. Sixteen other qualifying berths will be filled Saturday to complete the 40-car field.

Brothers Bobby and Donnie Allison won the 1-2 positions Thursday, both setting new qualifying records for the Southern 500, now in its 30th year and the nation's oldest major stock car race.

Tapie Leads B.C. Open

ENDICOTT, N.Y. (AP) — Allan Tapie overcame two bogies and shot a 4-under par 67 Friday to take the lead halfway through the $275,000 B.C. Open golf tournament.

Tapie was 10 strokes under par after the first 36 holes with a score of 132, good enough for a one stroke lead over 1977 B.C. Open winner Gil Morgan and Larry Webb, a beefy longball hitter struggling to stay on the Professional Golf Association tour.

"Right now I just want to get as far out as I can. I am playing a golf course, and I will shoot that and let everybody else do what they want," said Tapie, a 30-year-old pro from Laguna Niguel, Calif.

Tapie entered Friday's second round trailing Curtis Strange by one stroke. Strange, the 1974 NCAA champion from Wake Forest, had led the field with a first round 64, but faltered, shooting a 73 Friday and fell five strokes behind the leader.

Long-Awaited War Epic 'Apocalpse Now' Called Flawed Classic

FILMETER
A capsule look at cinema

FILMETER is compiled by Dick Kleiner in Hollywood and the N.E.A. staff in both Hollywood and New York.

NEW RELEASE

APOCALYPSE NOW (R) — Martin Sheen, Marlon Brando, Robert Duvall. (Drama) This is Francis Cuppola's long-awaited and very expensive epic — and worth the wait and the cost. It is a study of the madness of war, and Cuppola has created a procession of insane images of Vietnam and that terrible war to make his point. It is long and flawed, but must be rated an American classic. GRADE: A-plus

SUNBURN (PG) — Farrah Fawcett, Charles Grodin, Art Carney. (Comedy-detective) Obviously designed as a showcase for Farrah, nobody paid much attention to story, acting, direction or editing in this sorry film. It's about an insurance detective and the lady he hires to make like his wife, and all the alleged jokes are about at that level. It makes "Charlie's Angels" look good. GRADE: C-minus

GENERAL RELEASE

AMERICATHON (PG) — John Ritter, Harvey Korman, Fred Willard. (Farce) It's 20 years in the future and the country is broke. A 30-day telethon is expected to put the ol' USA back on its feet. This is a case of stretching a funny-seeming idea too thin. As the film sinks ever more into plodding or offensive gags, the audience grows more restless. Tries to be another "Groove Tube" and fails. Skip it. GRADE: D (Byrne-Dodge)

BREAKING AWAY (PG) — Dennis Christopher, Dennis Quaid, Daniel Stern, Jackie Earle Haley. (Romantic comedy) This is the kind of film the French do so well; warm, funny, a little romantic, tied up just right. It's set in Bloomington, Ind., a college town, the summer the local boys finally realize they don't mind being "townies." Briefly, it's the "Rocky" of bicycle dracing — but so much better. A fine job by these four young actors. GRADE: A (Byrne-Dodge)

CONCORDE: AIRPORT '79, THE (PG) — Alain Delon, Susan Blakely, George Kennedy and a cast of thousands. (Adventure) This time, it's the supersonic Concorde that's in trouble — one of its passengers is carrying a secret and the bad guy tries missiles, sabotage and everything else to bring it down. It's all exciting, but more sensible than earlier "Airport" films and this has some people you care about. GRADE: B

MOONRAKER (PG) — Roger Moore, Lois Chiles. (Spy Adventure). James Bond is back and that's about all you need to say. This one is the most illogical, ridiculous, senseless Bond film of all — but it's still great fun, stylish, witty and full of extraordinary gimmicks and special effects. Ignore the plot; just sit back and have a good time. GRADE: B

MORE AMERICAN GRAFFITI (PG) — Ron Howard, Cindy Williams, Candy Clark, Paul LeMat. (Comedy-drama) We re-visit most of the original "Graffiti" people several years later, to see what's happened to them. A neat idea, and it works well, but they've tricked it out with a self-sconscious camera stunt that looked good on paper but is very disconcerting to the audience. It's like a visit with old friends who live in a house with purple-and-green wallpaper. GRADE B

Film Grading: A — superb, B — good, C — average, D — poor, F — awful)

Conflict Of Values Emphasized In Cuban Film

HAVANA (AP) — When Fidel Castro called on Cuban women in 1966 to make "revolution within the revolution," he probably wasn't thinking of anything like the husband-and-wife slapping spat in a new movie playing to full houses throughout the island.

The film character Teresa, harried young mother, textile worker and volunteer in her factory theater group, has just been told by her husband that she is "neglecting her sacred duties as a wife and mother."

Pushed to the edge of frustration by a schedule that keeps her going from 6 a.m. to 10 p.m., she shouts, "What about my life as a human being?" and slaps him across the face.

Women in the theater cheer and men hiss and whistle as the couple goes after each other, slapping and kicking around the bedroom.

Four years after the promulgation of a family code that spells out the rights and duties of both partners in a Cuban marriage, "A Portrait of Teresa," directed by Pastor Vega, has sparked heated debate in private and public over the role of women in Cuba's revolutionary society.

"This movie is finally bringing out into the open what a hard job it is to be a good wife and mother and productive member of society at the same time," said Ana Maria Sanchez, a secretary. "Even today, men don't seem to realize how difficult it is for us to be all things to all people."

A 1975 survey of Cuban skilled workers indicated almost total support for inclusion of women in the work force, but the majority said women should work because the country needed them, not because it would be good for women.

Many things have changed in the life of Cuban women since Castro's revolutionary victory in 1959. Divorce has been made easier, contraception is readily available and child care centers are numerous. But public reaction to the movie indicates ambivalence over "the new Cuban woman."

A man on the street told a Cuban television reporter that women should contribute to improvement of the country by taking care of the home front. A woman psychiatrist wrote to the official daily, Granma, that Teresa was raising her three sons to be the "little machos of the future" by coddling them and not making them help around the house.

A Communist Party functionary in Teresa's factory says he knows she is being run ragged but gives her a fatherly pat and tells her, "We all can do a little bit more for the revolution."

"Sure," says Teresa, "but the day only has 24 hours, and the revolution hasn't changed that."

When the government and the Cuban Women's Federation urged women to help out during an economic crisis in 1969, most turned a deaf ear. Statistics show that 68.5 percent of the nation's able-bodied, working-age women did not hold jobs during that period. Seven years ago, the comparable figure for exiled Cuban women in the United States was 54 percent.

Cuban feminists are not happy with what they call an overly protective 1976 government list that prohibits employment of women in more than 300 job categories. But the average Cuban woman does not seem to mind.

After Castro gave the new family code to Cuban Women's Federation President Vilma Espin in 1975, she reportedly said the code should have been more explicit in requiring that men help out at home. Vilma Espin is the wife of Fidel Castro's brother, Raoul.

The government supports participation of women in all aspects of Cuban life, but there are no women in the key 13-member Communist Party political bureau. However, 25 percent of National Assembly members elected in the first 1976 elections were women. Women appear to be most active politically on the neigborhood precinct level.

In the movie, Teresa's husband leaves home after the fight, and she learns he is having an affair with another woman — who does work and has time to go to the beach and lie around reading women's magazines.

When she complains to her mother about the unfairness of the still-prevalent sexual double standard, her mother replies, "Men are men and women are women, and even Fidel can't change that."

ASLEEP AT THE WHEEL

PAVIA, Italy (AP) — Two policemen who fell asleep while guarding the residence of Interior Minister Virginio Rognoni have been charged by a military judge with negligence, authorities said Friday. Police said a passing patrol discovered Giuseppe Dori, 23, and Vincenzo Di Leo, 24, sleeping in their police car while they were supposed to be alert for terrorists. The policemen were quoted as saying they were relaxed because the interior minister was not home.

Gulf Coast Shrimpers Had Woes Before Oil Slick

By RAYMUNDO PEREZ

CORPUS CHRISTI (UPI) — Long before oil from the Bay of Campeche began filtering into the rich fishing grounds of the Texas gulf coast, shrimpers were experiencing economic woes.

Heavy rains in Louisiana and Galveston bays and estuaries sabotaged this year's shrimp crop.

"The main thing this year is that the bays were flooded with water," said Tim Chapman, president of the Aransas Shrimp Association.

And then, he said, the fuel crisis hit, driving diesel prices to $1 per gallon, twice what shrimpers were paying a year ago.

He said three years ago Mexico extended its fishing boundries to 200 miles. The gradual ban will be completed by the end of the year, and Texas shrimpers no longer will be allowed to fish off the coast of Tampico and the Yucatan Peninsula, further cutting into the catch.

Most estimates indicate shrimping is down at least one-third from last year's productive season. Through August, shrimpers had caught 52 million pounds of shrimp, 13 million pounds less than what was gathered during the same period last year.

Ralph Rayburn, executive director of the Texas Shrimp Association, said a usual midseason boost in shrimp production did not materialize this year.

"The first part of the season, compared to past years, didn't look all that bad," Rayburn said. "But where we expected the season to break — that's where the problem is."

The season didn't break and the oil spewed by Ixtoc I, the Mexican oil well that erupted on June 3, finally reached the Texas coast. Shrimping became more difficult, although scientists indicated from toxicity tests that the oil was not immediately lethal to adult forms of shrimp.

But the same scientists could not determine was the extent of sub-lethal affects the oil might have on marine life.

Rayburn said many shrimpers would continue their businesses and survive as best as possible. But he predicted many would be forced to anchor their boats by January.

"People appeared to be a little more reserved than they were last year," he said. "There is not a rush to build fleets or anything like that."

Duing his visit to the gulf coast last Wednesday, Gov. Bill Clements acknowledged the situation on the beaches had reached serious proportions.

But the governor indicated the problem would worsen and said Texans could expect to see oil on their beaches until the end of the year — even if the oil well was capped immediately.

Clements, during the visit, announced he had asked the Small Business Administration to relax regulations and provide help to businessmen suffering heavy financial damage because of the slick.

He also asked for Texas congressmen to try to pass legislation allowing interest free loans for victims of the oil spill.

But while most businessmen welcomed the help, many individuals waited to see what kind of help, if any, they could expect.

Officials from many of the small resort areas whose economies depend on the beaches told the governor they were concerned about their residents losing jobs for lack of tourism.

Glen McGehee, mayor of South Padre Island, told the governor he was concerned about the "far reaching affects, not so much on the environment, but on people."

"I'm talking about those people who work in the restaurants and hotels along the beaches. They're out of jobs. What can be done for them now?"

Clements told McGehee he was "sympathetic" to those peoples' problems and said his staff would continue to "monitor and audit" their plight. But Clements said he did not have an immediate answer to the problem.

Sales are down 60 percent and one of five employees has been laid off and the other four are working less hours.

Mrs. Hoover said she was perplexed about the oil slick and the lack of relief being given to victims.

"We can deal with disasters caused by God, but this one was caused by man. I don't think I really understand it."

Former Broker Wants 'Little People' To Fight

CORPUS CHRISTI (UPI) — On the surface, James Kirkland seems too angry, a bit too inflamed to make sense.

He almost carries a "I'm mad as hell and I won't take it anymore" attitude Peter Finch depicted in the movie "Network."

But the slightest investigation reveals that Kirkland, a former highly successful stock broker, merely wants people to take notice of the situations around him and band together to solve common problems.

The runaway Mexican oil spill that has stained the Texas gulf coast concerns Kirkland deeply. And he wants to rally people to fight the government over what he thinks is an unjust situation for average citizens.

"The issue is not oil. It's the little man," he said. "The issue is that the little man has no say in the matter."

Less than two years ago, Kirkland realized he had experienced enough of the cutthroat brokerage business. He accepted the fact that money was necessary, but also realized it did not motivate him.

He quit his job and returned to a more simple life.

Kirkland, 35, then formed a partnership with his wife and an attorney to form Stop the Ocean Pollution Inc. (STOP), a non-profit organization aimed at keeping the Texas gulf coast environmentally healthy.

Kirkland's main concern now is for the people, the innocent victims of the world's largest oil slick. He is disturbed that people are not fighting for their rights.

"We have to band together. There's no other way," he said. "One senator can't do anything, but a few thousand people can."

He wants individual victims of the oil spill — shrimpers and hotel and restaurant workers who have lost jobs — to demand assistance and to demand that the beaches be made clean and safe.

"Somebody should pay for it. This thing has taken food from people's mouths."

Kirkland is concerned and philosophical about America's problems. But he said the attitude of average citizens must be altered before America can move forward.

"We've been a benevolent country for too many years," he said. "We need to pull together.

"I used to walk around with my head up, but my head is down now. I'm not proud. Man has put himself back into slavery."

Kirkland worked for the brokerage firm that proclaims in its television ads that people listen when it speaks. That's the idea Kirkland has in mind for himself now.

"I want people to come together because I now know the difference between status and success. Status is making $250,000 a year and driving a Rolls Royce. Success is having people around who trust me. That's success to me — giving to another man."

Oil Firms Contemplate Eastern Exploration

NEW YORK (AP) — The U.S. Geological Survey says there may be a large amount of crude oil waiting to be discovered off the East Coast, but oil company officials said Friday that getting at the petroleum will be difficult and expensive — if it's there at all.

"It's a tremendously risky statement to say that there's a good chance of there being hydrocarbons there," said one industry source.

"The Baltimore Dome looked like a good chance too," the source added, referring to the geological structure off the New Jersey coast that after much hoopla produced no oil and little natural gas.

"I would be somewhat cautious about the whole thing," said Henry A. Hill, regional exploration manager for Conoco Inc. "It could also turn out to be all water out there."

The geological formation the USGS is excited about is an ancient coral reef that runs from Canada all the way down to the Gulf of Mexico, more than 100 miles offshore at the edge of the Continental Shelf.

A major problem in exploring for or producing any oil that might be in the area, however, is that the ocean floor in the area is 6,000 feet below the surface, and the oil is several thousand more feet below the floor. No oil has ever been produced in water that deep.

H. William Menard, director of the USGS, says the structure could contain as much as 15 billion barrels of crude oil — less than 10 percent of the amount beneath Saudi Arabia, but enough to supply the United States for about two and a half years.

"The best you could hope for is that it could be a Prudhoe Bay, and that is certainly possible," Menard said in a telephone interview from the USGS center in Wood's Hole, Mass. Prudhoe Bay is the large oilfield discovered on Alaska's North Slope in 1968.

The formation — nicknamed "The Yellow Reef" because of its color on USGS maps of the area — was identified by USGS geologists as a possible oil-bearing structure after several years of study of the area.

Oil industry officials said they've known about the possibilities of the structure for some time. But high costs, technological difficulties and lack of government encouragement have kept the companies from exploring the area, they said.

Menard said the government now wants to encourage exploration of the area, and said that leases for drilling tracts on the Yellow Reef would be made available in a federal lease sale in December 1981.

"We now find it promising enough that we would act as expeditiously as we can," he said.

Companies could begin exploring even sooner than 1981, he added, if they were willing to try drilling stratographic wells, which test the geography of an area.

"If the companies wanted to drill out there, if they wanted to pursue it, I think they could drill within a year."

Oil company officials, however, questioned whether it is currently possible to explore or produce in water that deep. The deepest exploratory well yet drilled was in about 5,000 feet of water; the deepest producing well in half that.

Equipment that could handle the Yellow Reef job is on the drawing board, but might not be ready for years, officials said.
