Number 43.

CONCRETE BUSINESS HOUSES IN JUNCTION.

Ground was broken Monday morning on the lots just west of the State Bank for two more concrete business buildings that are to be erected by Messrs. W. P. Riley, C. T. Holekamp and H. O. Denman. The land on which the buildings will be located was recently purchased from a Mrs. Wilson in San Antonio, and includes, besides the sites of the buildings, the land between the new building and the bank and the lots just south of the Patterson building.

The buildings will be of reinforced concrete, with stucco fronts, the one on the west being 22x55 feet, while the other will be 19½x55 feet, inside dimension.

While the two buildings will be adjoining, the partition wall will be the same as the outside walls, 6 inches.

Each will have a center entrance at the front, with 7x6 feet and 6x6 feet plate glass. The one on the east will have two east doors and one east window. Awning similar to that used in the recently constructed buildings, will be provided and there will be a transom across the front of both, allowing ample light from the north.

Each will have a concrete curb and the side walk and curb will be extended west from the bank.

For several days, Messrs. Holekamp and Denman have been busy getting bids on the material from Menard, Kerrville and San Antonio, and Saturday accepted the bid of the Junction Hardware Co., as the best and most satisfactory bid received.

R. H. Mayfield and wife of Llano were visiting friends in Junction Tuesday of last week. Mr. and Mrs. Mayfield and Charles will leave within the next few days for Hebbronville, where they will make their home. Robert is working in Llano and Albert is in Austin.

CHAIRMAN ANNOUNCES MEMBERS OF COMMITTEE

A. O. Lawler, chairman of the Kimble County Democratic Executive Committee, has made the following appointments for the boxes shown, to serve as members of that committee.

A member for the Junction Box has not been decided on as yet, and will be announced at a later date.

Telegraph, Bascom Stevenson; Roosevelt, Capt. H. W. Rieck; Bear Creek, Ben F. Joiner; Gentry, Burt Reese; London, Claud Weaver; Noxville, Skip Gammel; Segovia, I. O. Weldon; Murr, J. C. Graham.

Mark Riley, State Supervisor of Fish Hatcheries, spent Wednesday night in Junction, enroute to Kerrville to look over the hatchery work there. Mr. Riley has spent several weeks in East Texas on business for the Department. In talking with The Eagle reporter, Mr. Riley stated that since he had been with the State Department, he had had occasion to visit more sections of East Texas than ever before and was disappointed in not finding any real playgrounds over that way. He says we have the world beat out here and he always enjoys his trips here. We are always mighty glad to have Mr. Riley visit Junction. He was doubtless responsible for the location of the State's biggest Fish Hatchery in this section of the State, and has always been a friend to Junction and this entire country.

McDonald-Fleming.

Luther McDonald and Miss Velma Fleming were united in marriage at the Baptist parsonage on last Saturday evening, by Rev. Dekle.

Shortly after the ceremony they left for a few days visit in San Antonio.

The groom is a son of Wm. McDonald and was reared in the 700 springs community, and for some time has been in the employ of the Wahl Brothers & Jordan garage.

The bride is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ollie Fleming. The family home is near Telegraph, but for some years they have lived here where Miss Velma attended and was graduated from the local high school. She spent one year in Baylor College, and for the past few months has been teaching the Cleo school.

The will make their home in Junction.

Messrs. Geo. W. Fry and E. V. Sellers of Abilene were here this week on business connected with the West Texas Utilities Company. The company's architect from San Antonio met them here and it is expected that the erection of their office and sales room will be under construction within a short time. The West Texas Utilities Company have an enviable reputation as town builders and with the co-operation of the business interests and citizens of Junction generally, they are going to assist in the unprecedented development that is sure to come to Kimble County. Both Mr. Fry and Mr. Sellers are enthusiastic as to the future possibilities of this immediate section and the company they represent, with its vast resources, is going to play an important part in our future growth. The fact that the Utilities people are investing more than $100,000 here is ample proof of their confidence in the town's future, and The Eagle predicts that they are not going to be disappointed.

SOUTH LLANO NEWS.

Singing last Sunday night at Mr. Kendrick's was well attended and enjoyed by all.

Mrs. Jack Hubbelle and children were shopping in Junction last Saturday.

Mrs. Dupuy is the owner of a new Dodge sedan.

A number from the river were courting in Junction last week.

Mrs. F. M. Hodges was quite ill last week-end, but is able to be up some at this writing.

Jim R. Hodges returned from Brady and Calf Creek last Monday, after spending the week-end with relatives and friends.

Howard Hampton, special correspondent for the Dallas News, was in Junction Wednesday morning gathering some data for some publicity that will be given this county in the News. Mr. Hampton was on his way to Rocksprings for the Good and Shown Raisers' meeting today. While the Dallas News has only a limited circulation in this part of the State, it has given Kimble County some valuable publicity in the past and no doubt Mr. Hampton's story will tell the East and Central Texas people something about Texas that they had not known before.

MRS. BUCK ENTERTAINS.

Saturday afternoon Mrs. W. W. Buck complimented the members of the Ladies' Attention club and a few guests, with a bridge party at her ranch home on South Llano.

Miss Fae Taylor proved to be the best guest player of the afternoon and was presented with a pretty guest towel, while Mrs. Carl Wolf made high club score and was awarded the club pendant.

Congraded fruit salad topped with whipped cream, potato chips heart-shaped patties filled with cream chicken, saltine flakes, olives, fruit cake and hot tea were the refreshments of the afternoon. The place favors were little red rose buds filled with toasted pecans.

MORE POLL TAXES THAN EVER BEFORE

Candidate for office will have more voters to meet this year than in any previous one, as the total poll taxes paid for the year amounts to 1,359, not including exemptions, which will likely place the voting strength at about 1,500.

In 1924 the total poll taxes paid was 1,237, and in 1925, on off election year, the total was 1,124. All boxes gained over last year, but Noxville, Bear Creek, and Roosevelt lost as compared with 1924, while Telegraph remained the same.

The following tabulation will show the poll taxes for the years 1924 and 1925:

Voting Box	1924	1925
Junction	475	550
Telegraph	55	55
Roosevelt	159	121
Bear Creek	84	68
Gentry	63	87
London	188	223
Noxville	130	120
Segovia	83	92
Murr	(1925) 31	43

Total car license paid for the year was 732, and total trucks, 193.

E. T. Brown and wife of London were here Wednesday. Mr. Brown is very optimistic since the recent rains and says conditions down his way are excellent.

Rev. J. T. Tracy, of Miles, father of Postmaster Tracy, was taken to Temple for an operation. He had previously undergone an operation at Badinger which was not successful, and, while his condition is serious, it is not thought to be critical. Mrs. Tracy is with him.

MISCELLANEOUS SHOWER.

Mrs. Joe Fritz and Mrs. Slater-Fleming were joint hostesses last Friday afternoon when they honored Mrs. Jerec Hogsett with a miscellaneous shower at the Fritz Hotel.

The large dining room was decorated with beautiful hot house plants. The baskets and hats having been draped with the pink crepe paper which carried out the color scheme.

Little Joyce and Preston Wright entered the room carrying an immense laundry basket covered in the pink crepe paper and presented it to the honoree, as her laundry.

After the many pretty and useful gifts were unwrapped, refreshments of pink cream puffs topped with whipped cream and hot chocolate was served.

AT THE METHODIST CHURCH SUNDAY.

At both the morning and evening services, Sunday, February 14th, the pastor, Rev. Davis, will preach on the subject, "The Modern Dance," from the Old Testament text, "Thou Shalt Not Commit Adultery," and the New Testament text, "I say Unto You, Whosoever looketh upon a Woman to Lust After Her, Hath Committed Adultery Already in His Heart."

Rev. Davis, while uncompromising in any degree on his subject, will present the matter from a practical and everyday standpoint, giving statistics, opinions of eminent authorities, both converted and unconverted, and a history and present status and effect on the individual and on society at large.

While no effort will be made to put on a soft pedal, all are cordially invited to attend these services and hear the facts, and are assured that there will be no personal criticism or abuse that any fair-minded person could take offense at.

Neal Coldwell, a Gallant Texas Ranger.

(From Frontier Times)

"In 1876 another company was organized with Captain Coldwell as commander. Their scouting territory was the same as before, and they did a great deal of it. On one scout of ten days, while returning, they came upon some cattlemen at Paint Creek on the South Llano who were carrying a herd to Kansas. They informed the rangers that the Indians had made a raid on another cow outfit at Green Lake, six miles above, and captured 11 head of horses. Captain Coldwell at once repaired to the scene with his scouts and took the trail, their only chance for carrying water was in canteens, and as the Indians had gone out thru a dry country, the captain cautioned the men to be saving with the water. It was warm weather in April, and the water soon gave out. On the second day, at night a dry camp was made in a draw, and the men were suffering very much with thirst. They looked bad—skin dry and lips swollen. During the night they were very restless, and moaning in their sleep. Some arose and scratched in the dry gravel of the draw, trying to find moisture. Aleck Merritt, the trailer, had walked a great deal in following the trail, and had long since used up all of his water, and was suffering more than the others, who had ridden their horses. Captain Coldwell and Dr. Nowlin were lying on their blankets together, a little apart from the rest, and were commenting on the long distance Merritt had walked and trailed and expressed an opinion that he was certainly more thirsty than the balance. The captain had preserved some water in his canteen for an emergency, if it came, but now called Merritt and made known to him the fact, and offered him some of the water and explained to him the reason. The unselfish and true Texas Ranger refused it, because he thought it would look wrong in him to accept it when the other boys had none, and went back to his pallet and suffered on through the long night and until 9 o'clock the following day. When water was found the men could not very well be restrained, and many of them drank until they were sick. Eighteen Indians had camped here the night before, as was indicated by the imprint of their bodies in the rank grass where they slept. Just below in the same little valley, a like number had spent the night and held a bunch of horses there. It is likely well enough for the rangers that they did not come into contact with this band, numbering 36 to their 12, in the famished and weakened condition they were in. The scout was held here two days.

"George Beakley's horse had given out and was not able to keep on the trail of the Indians, and the captain did not want to leave him alone, so a return towards camp was made, Beakley riding a pack mule and slowly leading his jaded horse. The captain had flankers on both sides while on the move, and one of these, William Layton, became lost from the command. He was seen during the greater part of the day, but finally he was missed and the command was halted. The captain got on an elevated place and searched for him with a spy glass, but could not discover him. He hated to leave the man, but it was useless to go back and hunt for him, as they could not even guess where to look. The grass was fired with the hope that the smoke might be seen by him and to some extent guide him, and the scout moved on. The men would soon be out of water again, and it was 25 miles back to it. Provisions were left in a tree, so that if the lost ranger should strike their trail he could find it. Two nights passed before anything was seen or heard of him and he was about given up as lost in fact, when on the third day he overtook them. He had crossed the trail of the rangers once and did not see it, and turned back when he discovered he was going too low down the country. His horse took the trail when he came to where the grass was burned, and followed it as true as the needle in the pole. It was at the next water hole that the provisions were left in the tree, and by the time he had reached that place they were very acceptable to the hungry ranger. Layton had not been in the service very long. An old time Texas Ranger would have not gotten into such a scrape as that.

"In the following December Captain Coldwell was put in command of Company A, which acted as escort to Major Jones, and was almost constantly employed in going from one post to another, inspecting, paying off, etc.

"In 1877 Major Jones, with Captain Coldwell's command, Pat Dolan's and Frank Moore's companies were ordered to concentrate. Captain Dolan was of Nueces Canyon and Captain Frank Moore was on the Llano, where Junction City now is. The purpose of assembling the rangers was to round up the whole country around the heads of Nueces and Llanos, and arrest every man in it. This part of the country had become headquarters for all the desperadoes, outlaws, horse and cattle thieves, and fugitives from justice, in the whole Southwest, and from the East, and the intention of apprehending every man was to be certain to get the right ones, as the rangers could not distinguish the guilty parties. Each man was examined and he had to give satisfactory account of himself before he was turned loose. Forty men out of this round-up proved to be the persons wanted, and they were carried to Junction City and there confined in shackles in a place called the "bull pen." Junction City was just being laid off. There were only a few houses there—no jail or court house—although it was designated as the county seat of Kimble County. Judge Blackburn had arrived there to hold court, and the rangers remained to give protection in case any of the outlawry kind gave trouble. But these at the time were all in durand vile in the "bull pen" and everything passed off very smoothly during this first term of court in Kimble County.

Court was held under a large live oak tree, and to give color to this primitive court of justice in the wilderness, a swarm of wild bees were working in the tree under which were assembled judge and jury, lawyers and witnesses. The arrested men were all turned over to the civil authorities.

"After this Captain Coldwell went to Frio Town and operated surrounding counties, capturing outlaws and desperate characters in that part of the country. During his service he and his scouts apprehended more than forty men and brought them to justice.

"The last rangers were different from the first—the Indian fighting rangers. Many of them were detectives from other States and different parts of the State. The first ones were of the cowboy style—good riders, trailers, and shots, wearing leggings, many of them buckskin. The last ones, however, did splendid work in their line, which was fraught with as much danger as fighting Indians. This service was continued by Captain Caldwell until 1879.

Governor Roberts was in the executive chair during the last mentioned date, and Major Jones was made Adjutant General, and Captain Caldwell was made Quartermaster of the Frontier Battalion. His business was to make tours of inspection, furnish rations, and recommend changes of men or companies from one place to another. During this service information was received that lawless characters were operating south of Fort Davis, in the Chenati Mountains, where there were no rangers. General Jones ordered Sergt. Ed Sieker to take four men and one Mexican guide and repair to the scene. As these men figure in a fight with the outlaws, in which one of them lost his life, their names will be given as follows: Sam Henry, Tom Carson, L. B. Caruthers, —, Bingham, and the Mexican, name not known. At Fort Davis, Sergeant Sieker learned that the most daring of the desperadoes were four in number, one of whom was Jesse Evans, from New Mexico. They would rob stores in daylight in Fort Davis and terrorize the citizens generally, and the latter had offered a reward of $500 for their capture. The rangers learned through a negro named Louis, who occupied a neutral position between the two parties, that the outlaw's stronghold was in the Chenati Mountains. He also told the latter that the rangers were after them. They believed the negro was wholly on their side, and that their position was not known. They told him if only four rangers came to hunt for them he need not put himself to the trouble to inform them, but to keep them posted in regard to a larger force.

"From the fort the rangers went south about 80 miles to near the Rio Grande, on a little creek in the Chenati range, and there, while hunting for trails, discovered four men on horseback above them. As this corresponded to the number of men they were hunting, and in their range, they turned and started towards them. The outlaws, for such they were, turned and ran, and soon commenced firing at the rangers who were in pursuit. This settled their identity, and Sergeant Sieker and his men put their horses to the utmost speed to overtake them, firing as they went. The chase lasted two miles, until the outlaws came to a mountain which was flat on top, but on the opposite side was a ledge of rock four feet in height which ran around the circle of the mountain. The fugitives went up the mountain, across its flat crest, down the ledge to near the base, and there dismounted, tied their horses, and came back to the ledge and took a position behind it to fight the rangers. When Sergeant Sieker and his men arrived at the mountain and found out the position of the desperadoes, they went up near the crest, dismounted, tied their horses, and advanced to assault their position on foot. The Mexican had stopped back with the pack mule. The rangers deployed as they went, but were soon fired on, and a desperate charge was made across the open ground, in which Bingham was killed. His comrades were charging straight ahead and did not notice his fall. The bullets flew so thick along the rim of the ledge that it was death to an outlaw to get his face above it.

"The leader, Jesse Evans, kept his head above, and was fired at by Sergeant Sieker, who was charging straight toward their position, but his first ball hit the rock in front of him too low. For an instant the outlaw ducked his head and then raised it again, but only to receive a ball between the eyes from the Winchester of the Sergeant. The other three became rattled when he fell and ran around under the ledge, keeping their heads below, and almost ran against the muzzle of Tom Carson's gun, who had charged to the brink of the ledge and was looking over, with his gun cocked and finger on the trigger, trying to see them, before he could fire, they begged for for their lives and began to throw down their guns. The rangers congregated at this point, and Sergeant Sieker ordered them to hand up their guns and pistols, and come out from under the ledge. This all happened in a very short time, and now for the first time it was discovered that Bingham was killed. The others wanted to kill the prisoners, but was prevented by the Sergeant. The sad duty of burying the dead comrade consumed several hours as they had nothing to dig with but Bowie knives. The horses of the outlaws were brought up, on which they were mounted, securely tied, and the rangers took their departure, leaving the dead desperado under the ledge where he fell. The trip back to Fort Davis was made without further incident, and the captives put in jail there.

"To take into consideration the disadvantages under which the rangers had to charge across open ground upon the sheltered position of desperate men, armed with the best repeating guns, and the numbers nearly equal, and the rapidity with which they made themselves masters of the situation, this fight has but few equals in any warfare.

"The jail at Fort Davis was of Mexican model, and was a regular dungeon. The main building was square and made of adobe, with rooms in the center and doors opening on the outside in the courtyard. The jail was in one corner of the building, and blasted out of solid rock to a proper depth and then covered over the top by strong timbers, securely fastened. The egress was by a trap door. No light was in there. Into this place of utter darkness the captured outlaws were placed.

"At this time Captain Caldwell had just arrived, having been sent down there by General Jones to ascertain if any more men were needed at that place. Finding the necessity General Jones was informed of the fact, and Captain Chas. L. Neville and his men were sent. The rangers were quartered at the court and jail enclosure, and some of them stood guard there all the time. The citizens of this place and Fort Stockton greatly rejoiced at the changes which had been wrought, and had a great respect and admiration for the Texas Rangers. Before this they were afraid to open their mouths in condemnation of the lawless acts which were constantly being committed in their midst. They were murdered by these desperadoes on the least provocation. The $500 reward which they had offered for the apprehension of the four leaders of this gang they cheerfully paid to the five rangers, or to the four survivors of the desperate battle. Of course such service as this was expected of rangers, without any compensation except their monthly pay, and it was not for any reward that they ran the bandits down and captured

This will be the last issue of The Eagle before the election next Wednesday, at which time the voters of Common School District No. 1 will decide whether they will continue the same rate and make it necessary to cut the school term, or whether they will raise the rate to a sufficient amount, not exceeding 75 cents, that will provide funds for a nine months term, and with some additional for insurance and other necessary expenses. The Eagle is for any forward movement and we sincerely believe this is not only a forward move, but that it is a very necessary one, and we believe that it will carry, and we do not believe the additional tax will work a hardship on any one—our taxes, as compared with the vast majority of towns and counties, is very low. We want to keep it as low as possible, but not at the expense of needed school facilities.

Improved Star Four Coupster An All-Purpose Car

One of the most interesting and useful developments in automobile body designs is embodied in the "Coupster," an exclusive product of Durant Motors, Inc. This car, which made its debut in 1925, has been further refined in the Improved Star Four line.

In the Coupster, closed car protection has been combined with the breezy informality and low price of an open model. A permanent top covered with black, brightly finished, ribbed artificial leather, water proofed, has full sized, flexible, transparent windows that disappear into the top, but can be closed in a few seconds for full protection against the weather.

Two important features of the Coupster are its commodious interior, seating three adults comfortably, and the roomy rear deck, which provides 19 cubic feet of luggage space.

The Coupster body is beautifully proportioned and has the perfectly blended stream lines common to all improved Star Fours.

Refinements of the improved Star Four Coupster are one-piece ventilating windshield, automatic windshield wiper, rear vision mirror, cowl ventilator and 29x4.40 balloon tires.

PHILLIP JOSEPH

ation was appalling for the Captain and his party. Indians were all over the country, battles were being fought and men were being killed in various places. The driver was told to slow down his team. The Captain sat with his Winchester in his hand, admonished the men to keep cool, have their guns in readiness, and to keep close watch on both sides of the road; they were in for it, and must face the situation and get out of it the best they could. They arrived at Eagle Springs all right and reported the killing of the men in the buckboard. Baker was warned by the soldiers who had fought the battle near the water hole not to start on his trip, and they told him he was certain to be killed there. For four days Victorio's band swarmed along the road, and finally crossed it at Van Horn's Pass, and went in the direction of Rattlesnake Springs. The troops being informed of the route, went around them and laid an ambush at the springs. Here impatient men spoiled all, as is the case on so many occasions of ambushes. Firing commenced too soon, and the Indians turned back and recrossed the Rio Grande, at the same place where they did in coming over. Victorio was quite a general; he knew the Mexican troops were gone by this time, and the coast would be clear on that side.

"In the following winter Captain Baylor came down from Ysleta with his men to investigate the killing of one man and the wounding of another in the Quitman Pass. At the time Captain Neville came down from Fort Davis with his men, and the two companies met at Eagle Springs. The combined forces now, after finding the trail of the Indians, which were Victorio and his band, again followed in rapid pursuit to the Guadalupe Mountains, and here located the camp of the Indians by their smoke and surrounded them. A fight ensued, but the hostiles soon discovered that it was a considerable force of Texas Rangers that was upon them, and began to scatter and break through the cordon and got away. Six were killed on the ground and many wounded. One wounded squaw was captured and brought back. Some of the United States officers paid the rangers a compliment when they returned by saying they had done more good in ten days than the United States troops had all summer. Victorio was finally killed and his band scattered.

"Captain Caldwell's service ended on the frontier in 1883."

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

(By E. R. Waites.)

That some people have inflated ideas of their own importance?

That they usually think their way of thinking is the only way, and if everybody won't think their way, they won't play?

That in most cases the city can move ahead without them?

That usually a city will progress much faster if no attention is paid to those men. You cannot get work on constructive thoughts out of a swelled head.

That in some cities the people seem to be like a ship without a rudder? The city is full of heated arguments and backbitings and discord. They can never get anywhere as long as that unhappy condition exists. They must have the proper attitude of harmony or they will fall by the wayside long before they reach the goal of progress.

That sometimes people expect money to roll into their pockets without any effort on their part? They expect their city to grow without their lifting a helping hand. They get so narrow minded that they feel as though the home city owed them something and that prosperity should be theirs without effort. They feel that they should always be favored.

That their outlook on life gets so colored with their own importance they will not even meet half-way any progressive movement?

That they want to sit and sulk and make themselves believe that the world owes them not only a living but also great wealth?

A lot of the people will have a rude awakening some day?

How To Quickly Stop Bad Coughs

It is often surprising how quickly the heaviest cough disappears when treated by a remarkable new method.

Here is the method, based on the famous Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs: You simply take one teaspoonful and hold it in your throat for 15 or 20 seconds before swallowing it. The prescription has a double action. It not only soothes and heals irritation, but also loosens and removes the phlegm and congestion which are the real cause of the coughing. So the severest cough soon disappears completely.

Dr. King's New Discovery is for coughs, chest colds, bronchitis, spasmodic croup, etc. Fine for children, too—no harmful drugs. Very economical, as the dose is only one teaspoonful. At all good druggists. Ask for

OUR POLICY

We measure cost by the only sensible standard—most months per dollar. To obtain this, we use materials of high quality with genuine fast color. We have obtained a product with substance that shows the seasonal cost to where it should not exceed twenty cents at the most. We are establishing a service department for repairs of coats that may be accidentally torn. Purchase of a thousand coats places in use a unit of mechanical beltors that replace our power. Human strength has its limitations. It is costly and it fails so often. The world is measured by the application of mechanical energy to replace man of making, killing and a Goat Coat cannot fail. It need never rest.

The RIECK GOAT COAT, made of especially selected 11 ounce double filled duck, specially processed by our own method, with 40 per cent of the strength of one's own and will cost the coat for life and thirty days after Spring opening.

So Satisfying!

For that "twist-meal" emptiness, nothing is so satisfying as a rich, creamy dish of HEYMAN'S Ice Cream with a "dip" of your favorite syrup or fruit juice crowning its glory. When passing our place some morning, 9:30 to 11:00, or some afternoon, 2:30 to 5:00, drop in and try a dish.
