President promises more aid

■ Bush receives warm, emotional welcome during five-hour visit to Poland's capital.

WARSAW — President Bush, making a five-hour election-year visit to the Polish capital, offered Poland moral support and a modest expansion of U.S. aid on Sunday to help underwrite the nation's fledgling free enterprise system.

Bush warned the Poles in a speech that "reaching your dream will be difficult." However, he exhorted the Poles to stick with the tough economic reforms begun in 1989 after the fall of communism.

"Poland's time of trial is not caused by private enterprise, but by the stubborn legacy of four decades of communist mis-rule," Bush said. "Make no mistake: the path you have chosen is the right path."

His Polish audience gave Bush a warm, emotional welcome. "Only the pope could gather such a crowd here," said Polish President Lech Walesa after Bush finished his remarks.

Bush's visit to Poland was designed to buttress efforts by Walesa to continue the harsh economic reforms designed to win the confidence of international investors. Inflation and unemployment are raging in Poland.

The nation also is immersed in a political crisis, with politicians trying to form the fourth non-communist government in three

Trucks collide

EL PASO — Two people were injured and the roadway melted Sunday after an 18-wheeler carrying gasoline collided with a pickup truck and exploded. The drivers of both vehicles were treated for minor injuries, according to police Officer Val Zarate. Thomas Lester, the driver of the pickup, told the El Paso Times he was in the outside lane when the tanker "just hit me with his tire and I went out of control." Lester and an unidentified passenger crawled out of the overturned pickup and started "running for our lives" as the fireball slowly started to rise, he said. Tanker driver Jose Carlos Acosta, age and address unavailable, was treated and released at Thomason Hospital. The Border Highway between Midway and Fonseca will be closed for several days as road crews repair the devastated asphalt. "The impact, it just melted down the highway," Zarate said.

Prize pooches

HARBOR SPRINGS, Mich. — Bubba wore a straw hat and Amanda dressed as Bo Peep. Bubba, you should know, is a poodle. Amanda, his owner, is a 12-year-old girl. It was the dogs' day on July Fourth during a contest for shortest tail, perkiest ears and best behavior. The crowd at the weekend fund-raiser for the Little Traverse Humane Society voted on the pooch and the person dressed most alike. Bubba, a toy poodle in a straw hat, and 12-year-old Amanda Woodworth, a.k.a. Bo Peep, were the top pick. Morgan, a harlequin great dane, had the perkiest ears. Chryse, an Afghan Hound, had the shortest tail. But when Kari Lewis took her pet up to collect her prize, its tail was clearly 2 feet long. "I guess we missed it when the dog was laying down," said an organizer, Hi Hall.

World leaders gather for economic summit

■ IMF announces deal has been reached on aid to Russia.

Associated Press

MUNICH, Germany — Leaders of the world's richest nations gathered Sunday for their 18th annual economic summit as negotiators for Russia and the International Monetary Fund cleared a major obstacle holding up billions of dollars in Western aid for Moscow.

The breakthrough set the stage for a more harmonious session when Russian President Boris Yeltsin meets Wednesday with President Bush and the leaders of the other summit countries — Japan, Germany, Britain, France, Canada and Italy.

Yeltsin's appearance was expected to dominate the 18th annual economic summit, although other issues ranging from a feeble world economy and stalled global trade talks to a bloody civil war in Yugoslavia were certain to compete for attention.

Bush was one of the last leaders to arrive in Munich, stopping first for an emotional visit to Poland, where he told flag-waving crowds to persevere in their economic reform efforts despite short-term hardships.

Once in Munich, Bush wasted no time getting about the business of the summit, holding a working dinner with French President Francois Mitterrand.

At the conclusion of the dinner, French officials reported no specific breakthroughs in the impasse between the United States and France over farm subsidies and said Bush and Mitterrand had discussed the issue for only 10 minutes.

Lawmen capture Arizona convict after 7-week hunt

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. (AP) — A convict who eluded an intense, seven-week manhunt using Rambo-style survival techniques was captured early Sunday, cocky to the last, posturing for reporters as he was led to jail.

Danny Ray Horning, who ran bloodhounds in circles and taunted his pursuers with notes during the search of the Arizona wilderness, was cornered under a back yard pavilion in a ritzy resort subdivision.

"He said that it was really a fun chase and that he enjoyed it," said Coconino County Sheriff Joe Richards.

Horning, 33, who was serving four life terms for a bank robbery last year and is suspected in a dismemberment-slaying in California, appeared in court Sunday and seemed surprised when bail was set at $2 million.

Perot attributes his business success to working for his dad

EDITOR'S NOTE: Ross Perot has never held public office. Skepties say he has no track record. This three-part series — excerpted by Universal Press Syndicate from Tony Chiu's new No. 1 best-seller, "Ross Perot: In His Own Words," — draws from three decades of Perot's interviews, speeches and articles to reveal a complex, articulate and compulsively candid self-made American. His own words provide a full portrait of Ross Perot: his past, his personality and his opinions.

Fully half of today's Americans were as yet unborn when Ross Perot last ran for office. The campaign was for the presidency of his senior class at the U.S. Naval Academy. The diminutive (5-foot-6) Middie, with hair cropped closer, than a putting green and wind-flapping ears that could prop up a 20-gallon hat, won and was invited to the White House to shake the hand of his commander in chief, the recently inaugurated Dwight D. Eisenhower.

That was precisely four decades ago. Today Perot is no taller. His hair is grayer but not much longer, his ears still jugged. The only dramatic change is in his financial comfort: Since getting in on ground zero of the computer revolution at the end of Eisenhower's second term, the son of a Texarkana cotton trader has built a net worth hovering around $3 billion, give or take.

Perot, a proponent of activism, has backed causes from inner-city schools to high culture to international adventures like sending a commando team to rescue employees imprisoned in Iran. He is no stranger to the corridors of American power. But he has not run for office since leaving Annapolis.

Until now.

In promising to wage a "first-class" campaign should the presidential petition drives succeed, Perot said, he would commit in the neighborhood of $100 million. Consider the fact that just two years earlier, such a sum would have paid for the entire national advertising budget — all television, radio and print — of Pepsi, with enough left over to pick up a quarter of Nike's bill that year.

Perot

"Never once in my life have I referred to myself as H. Ross Perot. I think H. Ross sounds ostentatious and now a huge part of the population thinks I call myself H. Ross. My friends don't call me H. Ross. Even my enemies don't call me that." — The Wall Street Journal, Aug. 18, 1988.

Man's advice to son becomes best-seller

By Teresa M. Walker
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — H. Jackson Brown Jr. thought his college-bound son could use a little advice before setting out on one of life's adventures. So, over three weeks, he wrote down 511 tips.

His wife, Rosemary, typed up the list, which included gems such as these:

- Overtip a waitress at breakfast.
- Compliment three people a day.
- Plant a tree on your birthday.

"When he moved into the dorm room, I handed him the 32 pages in a green binder bought at Walgreen's," Brown recalled.

"I said, 'This is what your dad knows about living a rewarding life.' We shook hands and hugged each other. We thought that would be the end of it."

But it wasn't. To his surprise, Brown's musings became the best-selling "Life's Little Instruction Book."

WEATHER SUMMARY

Today's high to top 100

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies with a high near 102 and south winds at 10 to 20 mph. Tonight should be fair with a low near 70, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tuesday should be sunny with a high near 100.

After an overnight low of 70, Sunday's high reached 97 compared with the record high for that date of 104 set in 1971. The record low for that date is 57 set in 1931.

STATE

Isolated thunderstorms popped up Sunday in the Panhandle as the bulk of the state sizzled under hazy, humid skies.

The mercury topped 105 in El Paso and at Reese Air Force Base, west of Lubbock. The state's low mark at 5 p.m. was 87 degrees at Palacios.

An upper-level high pressure system stayed in place over West Texas. Skies were mostly sunny.

High pressure built, meanwhile, in South Texas, bringing sunny skies. High humidity pushed the heat index into the 100s.

North Texas skies were clear areawide as the upper-level high pressure system tightened its grip. It was hazy across the eastern half of the region.

Wind gusts hit near 30 mph.

NATION

A cluster of thunderstorms rumbled across the eastern half of the nation Sunday between Kansas and the Carolinas. Dry weather prevailed across the rest of the nation, with sunny skies over Florida and from Southern California to Texas.

Strong thunderstorms developed in Arkansas, Kansas and over the northern Rockies. Severe thunderstorms were forecast for Wyoming, Iowa and Missouri.

Thunderstorms moved ahead of a cold front over the Middle Atlantic coast by afternoon and rolled through the Tennesse and Ohio valleys.

Clouds and rain kept temperatures in the upper 50s and 60s in the Northeast.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

SUMMIT: Yeltsin to attend meeting

summit host, said in a television interview that he did not expect the three days of talks to make any major progress on trade.

French officials, speaking on grounds of anonymity, said that Bush and Mitterrand spent most of the evening discussing plans for creating a French-German military corps whose formation the U.S. government fears would undermine the role of NATO.

Mitterrand's government is seen by the United States as the chief roadblock to a successful conclusion of talks aimed at liberalizing world trade because of its objections to cutting farm subsidies.

The summit was to begin today at a former royal palace in the center of this 800-year-old city. Security was extremely tight as the city put 9,000 police officers on patrol and took other precautions to avoid the terrorism that marred Munich's last moment in the world spotlight, the 1972 summer Olympics.

Just as last year's summit in London was dominated by the first-ever appearance of a communist leader, then-Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, at capitalism's most exclusive gathering, this year's summit was preoccupied with how the West should respond to Yeltsin.

Bush and Kohl announced in April a $24 billion Western aid package. However, much of that money was contingent on Russia receiving approval from the IMF for its economic reform efforts.

Sunday's announcement did not represent full IMF approval for Russia's reforms. That is not expected to come until later this summer. However, the IMF had already said that it was prepared to extend a $1 billion advance to Russia if it could reach a preliminary agreement on the direction of Russia's reforms.

That was the deal announced Sunday in a joint statement by Russian Prime Minister Yegor Gaidar, the chief architect of Yeltsin's reform program, and IMF Managing Director Michel Camdessus.

"We are pleased to announce that we have agreed on a set of economic policies which we both believe will strengthen the economic reform and stabilization program" of the Russian government, the two men said.

Camdessus arrived in Munich from Moscow on Sunday and was expected to brief finance officials from the seven countries this afternoon. He said before leaving Moscow that he would recommend that the IMF board of directors approve the initial $1 billion loan to Russia in early August.

That would represent 25 percent of the $4 billion Russia is expected to receive from the IMF over the next 12 months if it is able to get the IMF's final blessing on its reform efforts.

The official announcement did not go into detail on the agreed-upon policies or mention the decontrol of energy prices, which had been the biggest obstacle in the talks.

On Saturday, Yeltsin had said his country would rather forgo the entire $24 billion aid package than agree to immediate decontrol of energy prices, which he said would cause undue hardships for ordinary Russians by increasing inflation 10-fold.

In what may have been a bargaining ploy, Yeltsin said that he would not allow the IMF to "force us to our knees for this loan."

Yeltsin said he would ask the summit countries to endorse a two-year deferral of interest and debt payments on $68 billion in foreign debt run up by the former Soviet Union.

Kohl on Sunday spoke disapprovingly of Yeltsin coming in with a list of demands, saying "no one should impose conditions for the others." And the Japanese continued to seek support among the other summit countries for a go-slow approach on the question of Russian aid until Yeltsin agrees to return four islands seized from Japan after World War II.

Masamichi Hanabusa, the chief spokesman for Japan's foreign ministry, said Sunday that "substantial financial assistance would not be supported" by Japan until the Kuril islands are returned.

CAPTURE: Man caught after 7 weeks

(From 1A)

Judge H. Jeffrey Coker.

Arraignment was scheduled for this morning on charges including four counts of kidnapping, two counts of armed robbery and three counts each of attempted murder and attempted kidnapping.

State law mandates that all criminal defendants have bail set in court, but sheriff's Sgt. Charlie Wong said if Horning posted the money he would then be returned to prison.

He surfaced Saturday, allegedly taking two British women hostage in Grand Canyon National Park and sneaking past a 400-person posse in the tourists' rental car.

Authorities said Horning left the women unhurt but tied to a tree 45 miles south of the park, then attracted the attention of a state police officer by speeding on an interstate.

He allegedly fired one shot during the chase, then pulled off Interstate 17 south of Flagstaff, dumped the car and took to the woods and canyons above Sedona, a resort town 80 miles south of the park and 100 miles north of Phoenix.

A Sedona homeowner reported an intruder in his yard about 10 p.m. Saturday and bloodhounds found Horning "burrowed" under a neighbor's gazebo at 2:13 a.m. Sunday, said Yavapai County Sheriff Buck Buchanan, who was there for the capture.

Though tired, Horning managed a wisecrack about the quality of the cars his pursuers used, Buchanan said.

"He had, I would describe, a sense of bravado about him," Buchanan said.

Horning was taken to jail in Flagstaff in Coconino County, where most of the search took place. As he was led to jail, barefoot and shackled, he appeared to enjoy the attention from about 10 reporters and photographers.

"I would have liked to have prolonged it," he said, responding to a shouted question about how it felt to be captured.

Horning escaped May 12 from the state prison in Florence, 50 miles southeast of Phoenix, by walking out the gates disguised as a state medical worker.

He was serving four consecutive life sentences for robbery, kidnapping and aggravated assault in a 1991 bank robbery in Winslow.

Horning also is named in a California murder warrant in the 1990 slaying and dismemberment of a man whose home he allegedly robbed. And Alaska authorities investigated him in the 1991 sinking of a fishing boat after he was fired as cook. No charges were filed in that case.

After escaping, Horning eluded helicopters and dog teams in the desert around Florence and made his way north to the Mongollon Rim escarpment to hide in rugged mountains and forest he explored as a youth in Winslow.

Horning earned the grudging admiration of his pursuers as he got away from huge posses twice in June by using tricks learned during 11 months of Army reconnaissance work. He walked in circles and figure-eights to confuse the bloodhounds and traveled in the daytime to ensure he didn't leave tracks.

Horning is charged with taking a man and a woman hostage in Flagstaff on June 25 and forcing them to drive to the Grand Canyon park, where he spent the night with them at the expensive El Tovar hotel.

Horning left a note and an audio tape in the couple's car that detailed a plan to kidnap a family and swap them for $1 million and his imprisoned brother.

He left the man and woman after a foiled attempt to take a family of six hostage, then is charged with stealing another car at gunpoint and abandoning it after firing shots at park police officers who nearly caught up with him.

The manhunt closed various sections of the park all week.

Authorities said Horning broke into at least two cabins, taking food, a gun and keys to a truck and leaving notes signed "Danny Ray" authenticated by handwriting analysis.

"Thanks for the use of your home!" he wrote. "You can tell the cops to send my backpack to my folks' house. And stop following me."

tracks, and the tramps would jump off the trains and come up to our house, looking for food. They were really dirty and tough-looking, but my mother would feed them. People showed up every day, and she never turned anybody away. One day a man came by and said, 'Lady, do a lot of people come through here looking for food?' And she said, 'Yes.' And he said, 'Don't you know why?' And she said, 'No.' And he said, 'You're a mark.' He showed her where the tramps had made a mark on the curb in front of our house. That was a sign to other tramps that they would be fed there. After the man left, I said, 'Mother, do you want me to wipe that off?' She said, 'No, leave it there. Those people are just like you and me. The difference is, they're down on their luck.' " — Dallas Times Herald, Feb. 9, 1986.

"My business success stems mainly from having sat in my dad's cotton brokerage office, watching him build trust and confidence among the farmers. After a while he started letting me trade horses and cattle. I had to buy and sell the same day. 'You don't take 'em home,' he said, 'because then you've got to feed 'em.' Under his tutelage I really learned how to negotiate." — Life, February 1988.

"One year my father sold one of his horses in order to have enough money for Christmas presents and Christmas dinner. That really bothered me because I knew how much he loved that horse. But it also showed us how much he loved us." — The Washington Post, April 12, 1987.

"If you had stopped me and said, 'Son, what do you want to do when you grow up?' I'm sure I would have said I want to get enough education so I can work indoors. I know that much." — Todd Gold's "Perot: An Unauthorized Biography"

"You ever see that movie 'Places in the Heart'? That's the town I knew." — The Washington Post, April 12, 1987.

At the Naval Academy in Annapolis, Perot had to get used to a new pronunciation of his surname (instructors and classmates alike ignored the East Texas PEA-row, preferring the p'ROE of his French forebears) as well as a heavy academic workload.

"I'd have to say that I was an average student, subject to very difficult subjects. I really didn't have the background or preparations for those predominantly engineering subjects." — D Magazine, January 1984.

Academically he finished No. 454 in a graduating class of 925. Perot was more successful outside the classroom, said his yearbook: "What Ross lacked in physical size, he more than adequately replaced by his capacity to make friends and influence people." In fact, he won the presidency of his junior and senior classes as well as the lifetime presidency of the Annapolis Class of '53.

On June 27 of that year, the freshly minted ensign shipped out on the Sigourney. Before the destroyer could take up station off Korea, an armistice was declared; the ship ended up on an extended around-the-world cruise.

"When you go to sea for a year, that's like 10 years of short cruises. There were 300 of us on board. We were together in cramped quarters 24 hours a day, and we were at sea for six and seven weeks at a time. That's the best practical experience in management and leadership that I could have gotten anywhere in the world. And it was a heck of a trip for a kid who had never been anywhere but Fort Worth — 17 seas and oceans, 24 countries." — Dallas Times Herald, Feb. 9, 1986.

At sea, Perot worked with some of the ship's computers.

"In the land of the blind, the one-eyed man is king. I had touched a computer at a time when very few people had." — The Dallas Morning News, June 29, 1986.

Thus, when he met an IBM executive fulfilling his naval reserve obligation aboard the carrier Leyte, the two struck up a conversation. By that time, Perot had begun to chafe under both the command of a particular superior and the Navy's lock-step system of promotion.

In 1957, after four years of service and a successful job interview with IBM, Lt. Perot left the Navy. (Though the Navy never left him: In the mid-1970s, on the eve of the Middies' annual football showdown with Army, he was caught inside the West Point chapel banging out "Anchors Aweigh" on the chimes.)

He and his new bride, Margot Birmingham, a Goucher grad from western Pennsylvania whom he'd met on a blind date, drove their Plymouth cross-country to Dallas, where Perot began selling computers.

"Things were so good in those days at IBM that a salesman could get rich as long as he didn't get drunk during the day. It didn't take a miracle worker to get somewhere." — The Washington Post, April 12, 1987.

"If I'd stayed at IBM, I'd be somewhere in middle management getting in trouble and being asked to take early retirement. When I got up to the bite-your-tongue level, that's when I would have gotten in trouble." — The Washington Post, April 12, 1987.

BOOKS: Father's advice to son becomes best-seller

(From 1A)

He followed that with "Live and Learn and Pass It On," which also appears on advice-book best-seller lists. Still, Brown doesn't really see himself as an author. He has run an advertising and marketing company for 23 years.

"I'm keeping my day job," he says. "But the books are becoming more and more important, taking more and more of our time.

"There's enough financial reward for it to be a full-time job, but like I say, I enjoy the other part of my life."

"Life's Little Instruction Book" was the No. 1 best seller among "Advice, How-to and Miscellaneous" books listed in Sunday's New York Times. It was No. 1 in trade paperback sales for the year in 1991, according to Publisher's Weekly.

Brown's writing career began in 1988 when he wrote "A Father's Book of Wisdom" and published it himself. But his big break came in the fall of 1990 as his son, Adam, packed for the University of Tennessee.

"A book has never started with more humble beginnings," Brown said. "It's just a kind of conversation on paper, father to son. I thought me and Rosemary would be the only ones to see it."

"Live and Learn and Pass It On" had similar beginnings.

On his 51st birthday, Brown decided to list some of the things he had learned so far in life. Soon friends gave him their own lists, and a questionnaire was sent to people ranging from kindergarten pupils to the elderly asking for their life lessons.

The books have been turned into posters, calendars and greeting cards, and are being translated and sold around the world. Talks are under way for a television project.

Brown is contemplating a sequel to "Life's Little Instruction Book." He's been keeping a list of tips he forgot to include.

"People ask 'Why are there 511 things in the book, is that all you know? "Well, I had to wind this thing up. Adam was going to school the next day."

POLAND: Bush offers moral support, expanded aid

"Free government and free enterprise have helped Poland overcome a crippling past," Bush said. "Free government and free markets will bring Poland a bright future."

Walesa appealed for "more time" to forge democracy and free enterprise. "Do not ask me if we will make it now that we face so many difficulties," Walesa said. "We shall overcome them. We shall certainly succeed."

Bush proposed to convert a three-year-old, $1 billion currency stabilization fund set up by 17 nations into a loan fund for Polish enterprises. The U.S. share of the fund is $200 million.

Bush flew on to Munich later Sunday for the three-day economic summit with the leaders of the seven largest industrial democracies where he indicated he would urge the other world leaders to go along with the loan fund proposal. Bush will go to Helsinki later in the week for a two-day European security summit with the leaders of 52 nations.

The Poles warmly embraced Bush with the same blend of nationalism and centuries-old religious ritual that spawned the Solidarity movement, which ignited dissent across Eastern Europe in the 1980s.

Tens of thousands of flag-waving Poles crowded into the cobblestone plaza in front of the historic Royal Castle, where Poland's first constitution was approved in 1791 to kneel, sing and murmur prayers during funeral services for Ignace Jan Paderewski.

Paderewski, the musician and diplomat, died in exile in New York City in 1941. His remains were held at Arlington National Cemetery for 51 years until his coffin could be laid to rest in a free homeland.

"Today is the end of a ceremony that began in Washington in 1941 and ends today in Warsaw," Cardinal Josef Glemp told his countrymen in a service broadcast from St. John the Baptist's Basilica in the Old Town section of Warsaw.

Bells tolled from village churches across the nation of 35 million, the largest in Eastern Europe, as Paderewski joined what Glemp called "the pantheon of the nation."

Paderwiski's coffin was made of wood from a 1,000-year-old American tree, Glemp told the invited guests in the cathedral.

Intoned a priest assisting in the service: "Pray for an America that will grow forever. Pray for our country to develop in peace and true freedom."

Walesa, the father of the Solidarity movement and winner of a Nobel Peace Prize, during a private meeting, invited Bush to join leaders of Central and Eastern European countries at an economic and security conference in Warsaw this fall at which Poland, the largest country in Eastern Europe, could serve as a "stabilizer in the region" for political, economic and security affairs.

Bush did not immediately accept the invitation. Nor during his visit did he outline additional direct U.S. assistance. He tied Poland's access to the new borrowing fund to compliance by Poland with requirements by the International Monetary Fund that Warsaw make greater payments on its massive foreign debt.

Poland has failed to make the required payments for nine months.

Despite the modest assistance, Poles appeared heartened by the president's second visit to the troubled country. His personal support in an election year promised not only to pay dividends among the more than 8 million Polish-Americans back home, but also here where Poles perennially worry about being squeezed between a powerful Germany and the nations that formerly made up the Soviet Union.

Said Zbigniew Bielawski, 62, a civil engineer who has retired in Warsaw after a career building water projects across Africa: "Your president is supporting us with our efforts."

Bielawski demurred when asked about U.S. assistance, saying: "It is difficult to say anything about money," adding: "I'm not a businessman."

Anna Podniesinska, 53, a general director of Intercam Co. Ltd., a firm she said was one of Poland's 10 largest operations, hailed Bush for "supporting us in these hard days."

Podniesinska, who said her company has a joint venture with the American courier DHL, with 17 branches in Poland, said she was "happy that we have a great free country to host free companies," adding: "There is lots of space for American companies to join us."

She too was reluctant to second guess the size of U.S. assistance, saying: "It's not nice to talk about money. Of course we still need more money but we need more other things to support us, like specialists."

Bush did not escape reminders that even here in Poland, people know of his election travails back home. Someone in the midst of the crowd held aloft a sign: "Ross for boss," a reference to independent challenger Ross Perot. Another sign proclaimed: "Bush, the environmental president — Not."

As Bush left the plaza, however, the crowd spontaneously broke into a song calling for Bush to live "a hundred years." And others chanted "Long live Bush."

His motorcade enroute to the airport outside Warsaw passed thousands of Poles gathered at intersections, in some cases three or four deep. Many waved American flags and handkerchiefs. Others threw flowers in the path of his limousine. Many Poles videotaped the passing convoy.

Country club evicts grizzly

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — A 200-pound grizzly bear apparently wasn't good enough for the Kananaskis Country Club.

Provincial wildlife officers escorted the grizzly from the premises Sunday, trapped and tranquilized, after the 3-year-old bear took up resident on the links more than a week ago.

The bear was captured in a snare set in densé bush, said Rocky Hornung, the district wildlife officer. It was taken to a remote place 465 miles north of Kananaskis.

At first, officers tried to get the bear to leave by firing cracker shells, which make loud noises, and even shooting it once with a rubber bullet. But the beast wouldn't take the hint.

It had never threatened anyone at the course, 44 miles west of Calgary, but could have become a problem if it became to accustomed to people, Hornung said.

Course director Brian Bygrave said the bear had become popular with the club's members.

"The majority of golfers thought it was a real treat to be that close to a bear which they could watch and take pictures of with very little fear," he said.

Smoking victims get day in court

The tobacco industry has made extravagant claims over the years, but what topped them all was its claim that Congress had given it immunity from lawsuits by sick, dying or dead smokers and their families. The Supreme Court has now ruled that Congress gave the industry no such blanket exemption.

The welcome result is that victims can at least get a hearing, even though one would never know it from the new industry whopper: "Philip Morris considers today's Supreme Court decision as a significant victory." Warning to the industry: Your news releases can be hazardous if you believe them.

Cigarette manufacturers persisted relentlessly in claiming that their product hasn't ever been proved unsafe. Nevertheless, they've sought refuge in the 1965 and 1969 federal laws requiring them to warn the public on each pack that smoking is dangerous to health. And they persuaded five federal courts of appeals that those laws preempted state-based liability laws.

But after the highest state courts in Minnesota and New Jersey ruled otherwise, the Supreme Court took up the issue. Only two justices, Antonin Scalia and Clarence Thomas, found for blanket pre-emption. The majority found considerable vitality in state laws, including those against fraud and deceit. That means that plaintiffs in tobacco cases probably can get their cases before juries.

Many of them will still lose. For whatever the tobacco industry's transgressions, most jurors may find, in part because of the federal warning, that the smoker knew the risks. Still, the court was right to give smoking's victims their days in court.

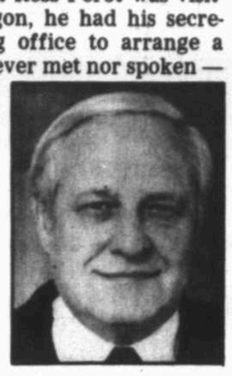
Armitage speaks out on Perot witch hunt

WASHINGTON — When Richard Armitage heard that Ross Perot was visiting the Pentagon, he had his secretary phone the visiting office to arrange a meeting. The two had never met nor spoken — all Armitage knew was that Perot was engaged in a high-intensity campaign to smear him, and he wanted to confront his accuser.



Anderson

Perot's bill of particulars against the then Assistant Secretary of Defense in charge of POW-MIA affairs consisted of more fumes than facts. From the White House to Capitol Hill, Perot had become obsessed with Armitage's brief relationship with a Vietnamese woman.

Perot and some MIA fringe groups scripted an Oliver Stone-sounding conspiracy theory, weaving together Iran-contra, gun-running, the CIA and living American MIAs in Vietnam.

"My own picture of what Perot has said is very scattered, but generally the word conspiracy is there," Armitage said. "He has told reporters and others privately all kinds of things. The relationship with this woman is only one. ... he's all over the place."

In a rare interview, Armitage told us about the 1987 meeting with Perot.

"We had not a disagreeable conversation," Armitage recalls. "I just said that I heard you have been saying some things. What's the problem?" Perot raised a letter Armitage had written on Defense Department stationery on behalf of a Vietnamese woman friend who had been arrested on gambling charges. "The general thrust was he said that having written this letter for the Vietnamese woman I somehow compromised myself," he recalled Perot charging.

Armitage pressed Perot, "Is she a spy? What is your charge? What is the point?"

Perot told Armitage he thought he had exercised bad judgment. Armitage agreed. He believes the letter to the judge written on Defense Department stationery was "dumb." He told Perot that he had offered his resignation to then Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger, but Weinberger rejected it out of hand.

Armitage informed Perot he hadn't seen or spoken to the woman "long before the Jack Anderson columns (revealing the letter in 1986) came out. Once I wrote the letters I learned from her attorney she had a serious criminal problem with gambling, and I just ceased all communication. ... I was out of even a friendship relationship with her before any of this became public. ...

"Last of all, I said I didn't know how his family life was but I had a good one, and I had a very open conversation with my family about what might or might not have happened. I left it at that."

Perot repeated that Armitage should resign, and the meeting ended.

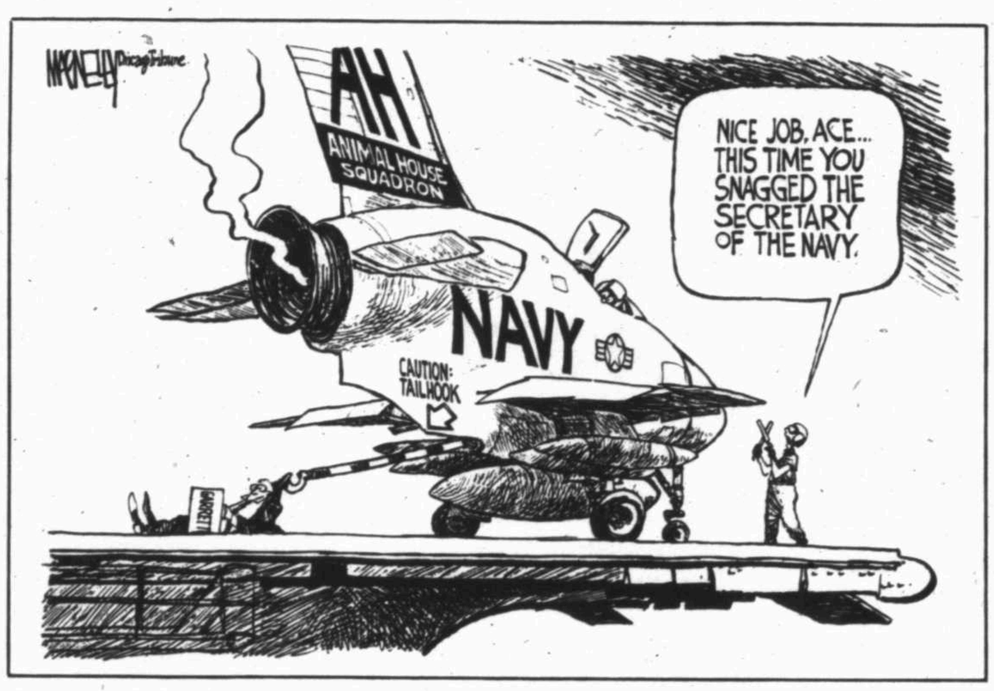
With Perot as judge, jury and executioner, life for Armitage has become a nightmare since the Texas billionaire became a probable presidential candidate. "It's very embarrassing, very debilitating in terms of being able to concentrate on your work, and it's a constant source of conversation and tension in the family," Armitage explains.

Perot passed his information on to the FBI when Armitage was up for Secretary of the Army in 1989. "It had to do with MIAs and drug trafficking and his connection with a Vietnamese woman and her connection with Oriental organized crime," one FBI official told us. "He (Armitage) was connected to this woman from a standpoint of a 20-year friendship but none of the other allegations had any substance to them."

While Perot constantly implores the media to get its facts straight, his own vendetta against Armitage — the vindictiveness and disregard for fact — is emerging as a central character question about Perot. Perot's office did not respond to our interview requests or written questions.

From the right to the left of the political spectrum, Armitage's character has been attested to. Colin Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said he would trust Armitage with his life. Rep. Steven Solarz, D-N.Y., who has investigated the POW-MIA issue for nearly a decade, condemns Perot's conduct as a "McCarthyite outrage."

Jack Anderson's and Michael Binstein's column is distributed by United Feature Syndicate.



OTHER VIEWS

Idea is worth considering

At a time when the U.S. military is struggling to adjust to post-Cold War realities, the focus should now be on finding new missions, not new enemies. Last week, Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, came forth with an intriguing mission proposal for military personnel that merits serious consideration.

Recognizing that the armed forces will be called upon less to protect the U.S. from external threats, Mr. Nunn smartly proposed using the military to help address a variety of urban problems plaguing our cities today. Military specialists in various disciplines would assist private and government service organizations in filling the gaps that exist in providing social services. It makes perfect sense.

The military brass probably will resist broadening the mission of the armed forces in such a dramatic fashion. But, in reality, military service personnel are increasingly becoming involved in non-military assignments, such as their participation in this nation's drug war and their role in providing humanitarian assistance to refugees.

By providing the military with a new role in the post-Cold War era and offering assistance to our cities, this proposal is one that deserves support at the Pentagon and on Capitol Hill as well, especially if the transition could take place without an appreciable increase in budget costs.

AMA likes to ignore ethics

Want to attack the tobacco industry? The American Medical Association has a plan. High-speed chases? Cut 'em out, the AMA says. Fireworks? Get rid of 'em, the good docs demand.

But what about dealing with problems of medical ethics and high health-care costs? No thanks, the AMA says.

That seems to be the gist of the action from the 434-member House of Delegates (the policy-making body of the 290,000-member AMA).

The AMA will continue to push for exemption from antitrust laws, ostensibly to allow collective bargaining for fees — but raising a more frightening specter of price-fixing.

And the delegates decided not to encourage medical providers to post their prices. It even softened its stance against doctors sending patients to clinics in which they have a financial interest.

Is it any wonder socialized medicine is gaining support?

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, July 6, the 188th day of 1992. There are 178 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On July 6, 1885, French scientist Louis Pasteur successfully tested an anti-rabies vaccine on a boy who had been bitten by an infected dog.

On this date:

In 1483, England's King Richard III was crowned.

In 1777, during the American Revolution, British forces led by Gen. John Burgoyne captured Fort Ticonderoga.

In 1854, the Republican Party came into being at a convention in Jackson, Mich.

In 1917, 75 years ago, during World War I, Arab forces led by T.E. Lawrence captured the port of Aqaba from the Turks.

In 1928, a preview was held in New York of the first all-talking feature, "The Lights of New York."

In 1942, 50 years ago, the American League beat the National League 3-1 in the All-Star Game played at the Polo Grounds in New York.

In 1944, nearly 170 people died when fire broke out in the main tent of the Ringling Bros., Barnum & Bailey Circus in Hartford, Conn.

In 1945, President Truman signed an executive order establishing the Medal of Freedom.

In 1957, Althea Gibson became the first black tennis player to win a Wimbledon singles title, defeating fellow American Darlene Hard 6-3, 6-2.

CHARLEY REESE

It's time to get to the truth about POWs

Now that the issue of Missing in Action is back on the front burner, here's a little guide to help you analyze the situation and wade through the propaganda.

We start in 1973. One and only one of two propositions must necessarily have been true: 1) No living POWs were left in the Southeast Asia or 2) some living POWs were left behind. If one proposition is true, the other cannot be.

Reese

Now, in 1973, the U.S. government officially announced to the American people that no living POWs were left in Southeast Asia. They were all dead. That was the official statement.

There exists three possibilities: 1) The government was correct — all unaccounted for POWs were dead; 2) the government was mistaken — it thought all were dead but they weren't; or 3) the government lied — there were POWs left alive and the government knew they were alive.

The existing evidence points decisively to the third possibility: there were POWs left alive and the government knew there were living POWS and it lied to the American people. Many people have long argued this.

Now Sen. John Kerry, chairman of the Senate Select Committee on MIAS/POWs, has told the Wall Street Journal: new information discovered by the committee will soon be disclosed that will show that "... some folks who were presumed to be dead were probably alive over there, that we knew it and that they were not accounted for in the early aftermath of the war." The vice-chairman, Sen. Bob Smith, has said publicly the evidence is decisive that some living POWs were left and that the government knew it.

It follows then that some in the government, which has consistently and still maintains no living POWS were left behind, have a vested interest in maintaining this lie. The truth exposes their wrong-doing. That's why Russian President Boris Yeltsin's comments that some POWS may have been moved to the Soviet Union was greeted, not with joy or pleasure but with anger by some politicians and officials.

It was this issue — the discovery of government dishonesty on this question — that caused Ross Perot to break with the Reagan-Bush administration. So now there is an even more intense vested interest in maintaining the lie as the truth will vindicate Perot's actions.

Remember, too, there has been no perestroika in Vietnam. It remains the same hardline communist, Stalinist-style government that systematically tortured American POWS and ruthlessly murdered anyone who got in its way.

It's nonsense for an American politician to say: "Oh, the Vietnamese are now cooperating and they let me look at their prisons." No American guided by Vietnamese around a prison can tell anything conclusive. He cannot even tell if he has been shown the whole prison. The Vietnamese are famous for their tunnels and underground facilities.

In a totalitarian society, it is likewise foolish for any American to suppose he can question ordinary citizens and receive any answers that the government does not approve. These governments always employ a wide net of informants so that no citizen feels free to express himself in a way that would anger the government.

Furthermore, it is not in the self-interest of Vietnam to tell the truth. That government, with its economy in a shambles, wants the U.S. to lift trade restrictions. If it admits it held back POWS, that they either died or were executed, that it lied for years, then it will not likely get what it wants — U.S. investment.

So you have to recognize as a matter of logic both the Vietnamese government and some elements of our government share a vested interest in maintaining the lie that no POWs were left behind in Southeast Asia.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Contest time is here again, all you jokers

It's time once again for the Lewis Grizzard Clean Joke Contest. This will be the second such event. The first, held some time in the '80s, I forget the exact year, was a resounding success.

I received over 5,000 jokes from all over the country, not to mention parts of New Jersey.

Grizzard

The joke I like the most went like this:

A lovely girl moved into a small town and told a local young man if he would take her to the drive-in theater the following Saturday night, she would show him a little glimpse of heaven, but he had to have protection.

The young man, anxious to practice safe sex as we all should, went to the local pharmacy Saturday morning and asked the druggist for a condom.

The druggist smiled knowingly and sold him one.

When the young man appeared at the front door of his date's home that evening, she invited him in to meet her parents, who were playing Monopoly.

The young man said, "I love to play Monopoly. Instead of going to the drive-in, let's stay and play Monopoly with your parents."

The young woman was puzzled indeed. After several hours the young man rose, said goodbye to everyone and walked to his car.

The young woman, quite angry, followed.

When they reached the car, she snapped, "Well, I didn't know you were such a fan of Monopoly."

"Yeah," the young man replied, "and I didn't know your daddy was a druggist."

I realize there is a sexual theme here, but it still qualifies as a clean joke since you don't have to say any really bad words to tell it.

I've decided to hold a second Lewis Grizzard Clean Joke Contest for a couple of reasons.

1. I firmly believe a really good, clean joke is the best kind of joke, but few people ever tell me any really good, clean jokes.

People come up to me and say, "Here's a joke you can use in your routine," and the first three words would gag Eddie Murphy.

So I need some new really good, clean jokes.

2. We don't laugh nearly as much as we used to in this country because of the new sensitivity where too many people get their panties in a wad too often because they've forgotten how to laugh, especially at themselves.

Perhaps if I can get a lot of people to start thinking about clean jokes again, it will bring at least a little more humor to a world that sorely needs it.

Here are the contest rules:

1. If you are unable to type your joke, try your best to write legibly. I've gotten some great set-ups to jokes before and then couldn't make out the punchlines.

2. Nobody is going to make any money out of this except maybe me if I use your joke on an upcoming album and it sells. However, I will put your name as a contributor on the album cover.

3. I will use as many of the good jokes that will fit in a follow-up column and give you credit if I happen to use one of yours.

4. The person who sends the joke that I select as the best one will receive a valuable premium, which I haven't decided upon yet, but it will be something you'll be able to wear, drink, eat, or hang on your wall.

Address your good, clean jokes to the Lewis Grizzard Clean Joke Contest, care of King Features Syndicate, 235 East 45th St., New York, N.Y. 10017.

And remember to laugh once a day. It's better for you than any laxative known to man.

Lewis Grizzard's column is distributed by Cowles Syndicate.

Asia becomes world's nuclear flash point

Thomas Wagner
Associated Press writer

NEW DELHI, India — Now that Russia and the United States are dismantling their nuclear arsenals, Asia is the world's nuclear flash point.

India and Pakistan appear to have become the only enemy nations in the world with the ability to produce nuclear bombs on short notice.

China, concerned about growing U.S. power after the collapse of European communism, conducted what the State Department called its largest underground nuclear test.

North Korea, China's Communist ally in Asia, recently signed the nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty and allowed an inspection, but U.S. officials believe it concealed evidence of a secret nuclear weapons program.

Japan, which is not developing nuclear weapons, is being criticized for plans to import a kind of plutonium that can be used for nuclear weapons. Experts say other nations in the region have tried to obtain this kind of plutonium, which Japan intends to use to produce energy.

Troubling trends are evident in a part of the world where Washington has weak relations and little influence. Some American disarmament experts now refer to Asia as their top priority.

"If you look around the world, the greatest risk of nuclear war today is in South Asia, because India and Pakistan could lose control of the border situation and end up fighting," said Gary Milhollin, director of the Wisconsin Project on Nuclear Arms Control in Washington.

"If they did, neither side knows what would happen to the nuclear arms: whether they would be used, whether they would be targets or whether India and Pakistan (would) figure out some way to have a small war without using them."

The two countries have gone to war three times since Britain partitioned the subcontinent in 1947 to make two nations — India, predominantly Hindu; and Pakistan, officially Muslim. They remain at odds over Kashmir state, which was divided and is claimed by both countries.

India denies conducting a nuclear weapons program, although it exploded a nuclear device in 1974, but is thought to have such arms or be capable of making them. It pursues advanced ballistic-missile and space-launch programs, and has said it must keep the nuclear option to deter Pakistan and China.

Pakistan's foreign secretary, Shahryar Khan, admitted to Washington in February what his government had long denied, that it has the components and technology to assemble a bomb.

Both countries have refused to sign the nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty.

Although the Indian subcontinent is the most volatile region of Asia, proliferation watchers worry about others.

In May, North Korea allowed the International Atomic Energy Agency, the U.N. nuclear watchdog, to make its first inspection. The agency reported no evidence that North Korea was close to building a bomb, but officials said one facility under construction could be used to produce plutonium.

U.S. officials and arms control experts suspect North Korea has nuclear arms factories and may have stockpiled weapons-grade plutonium.

Aid, U.N. leader arrive in Sarajevo

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — The commander of U.N. peacekeepers in Yugoslavia tried to shore up a shaky truce in Bosnia's capital Sunday as his troops guided in nine more relief flights during a lull in the fighting.

Gen. Satish Nambiar said he received renewed promises to abide by a cease-fire for the airport area from leaders of the Bosnian government and of ethnic Serbs battling to block the republic's secession from Yugoslavia.

As more emergency supplies were unloaded at the airport, food packets were distributed to about 50,000 of the battered capital's nearly 400,000 people, said Peter Kessler of the U.N.'s refugee commission.

But even after three months without regular food supplies, many people are too frightened to venture out of shelters to collect rations, Kessler said.

"Our problem is sniper fire," he said. "We are getting bottled up at the warehouses because people don't come to pick up the food."

Rocket fire resumed over the city Sunday night. By day, those pedestrians who ventured out sprinted across intersections known to be snipers' targets, and drivers sped across exposed bridges.

Under an accord reached June 29 on opening the airport, the Serbs besieging Sarajevo and the capital's Muslim-led defenders were to put all heavy weapons within range of the airport under U.N. monitoring.

But a surge of fighting before dawn Saturday and the gunbattles and spurts of shelling that followed brought U.N. threats to stop the aid flights.

"Both sides have violated the agreement," Nambiar said at the end of his daylong visit to Sarajevo. "They have not abided by agreements to report their artillery weapons to U.N. observers."

He said that Lt. Gen. Ratko Mladic, commander of the Bosnian Serb forces, and Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic had both said they would try to bring their troops into compliance.

Nambiar said the airlift could continue even with shelling elsewhere in the city.

Report shows U.S. reluctance to pursue war-crimes issue against Saddam

WASHINGTON (NYT) — A report by the U.S. Army documenting the administration's case that President Saddam Hussein committed war crimes has been stuck in the Pentagon bureaucracy for five months, reflecting the administration's reluctance to pursue the issue, according to Pentagon officials who want the evidence made public. The crimes are said to have occured during Iraq's invasion and occupation of Kuwait in 1990-91.

The document is based on intelligence and operational reports, interviews, and debriefings of hostages and prisoners of war, according to officials who described it to The New York Times. Compiled by two teams of Army lawyers working from Washington and Saudi Arabia during and after the Gulf crisis, it concludes that Iraqi war crimes were "widespread and premeditated" during the invasion in August 1990 and the ensuing occupation.

A strong argument against a war-crimes trial is that it is unlikely that the United States could take physical custody of the Iraqi leader. But those who say there should be some kind of judgment argue that at least the report could be made public or could be used as the basis for a U.N. resolution or other action condemning Saddam.

President Bush issued a public warning in October 1990 to Saddam Hussein that he could face a war-crimes trial, and administration officials insist publicly that the issue is still under review. The Army is charged by statute with pursuing war crimes.

But senior administration officials acknowledge that there is no enthusiasm in the administration for initiating a complicated process like the Nuremburg trials of Nazis after World War II. They describe Bush's warning as primarily an emotional response to what the president called the "ghastly atrocities" against Kuwait.

The Army's report, which is 80 pages long, describes the taking of Kuwaitis and others as hostages and their forcible deportation; the torture, rape, and murder of civilians; the looting of cultural property; the launching of Scud missiles against cities rather than specific military targets; and the destruction of property, including the sabotage of oil fields and the release of oil into the Persian Gulf.

The report also says a number of babies died as a result of forcible removal from hospital incubators, but human rights organizations have disagreed about whether Iraqi soldiers removed babies from incubators.

Dental Update
In the interest of better dental health

LIKE YOUR SMILE?
I see some people today with crooked, spaced or stained teeth who are perfectly happy with their appearance. The self-confidence that some people have regardless of their appearance is admirable. We should all like ourselves. But if we do not like ourselves with the smile we have then modern dentistry offers many options to change this.
Ask yourself if you are self conscious about smiling in front of other people. Do you wish your teeth were whiter, straighter, or that they were shaped differently? Are you satisfied with the way your gums look? Are your teeth crooked, broken, or discolored?
We live in a health and beauty conscious society. You cannot change society, but you can change your smile. Appearing healthy and attractive has always been important to those who work in the eye of the public. But today cosmetic dentistry is within the reach of almost everyone. Today's society not only endorses good looks and the attendant impression of good health, but advocates it as a measure of self respect. Psychological studies support the belief that looking your best has nothing to do with self indulgence, but shows that an individual is better received by others when an attractive appearance is part of the package.

Vice-presidential hopefuls send out unmistakable signals of interest

By John King
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The first rule about running for the No. 2 spot on a presidential ticket is that no one, for the record, runs for the No. 2 spot on a presidential ticket. No one, that is, except Jesse Jackson.

But there's always a lot of interest, and with Bill Clinton's convention but a week away, some would-be vice presidents are sending unmistakable signals.

Sometimes it's a subtle game in which prospects avoid talk of their interest but allow aides to discuss it privately. Sometimes it's all in the open, as in the case of Indiana Rep. Lee Hamilton.

"My record is a solidly moderate position, and I think that's where the Democratic Party is positioning itself in this election," Hamilton said Sunday on "Meet the Press," speaking highly of Clinton but offering views on family leave and abortion that clash with those of the certain Democratic nominee.

For all the conventional wisdom, long lists and short lists, there are often surprises. Take, for example, Dan Quayle's quiet but aggressive effort to get then-Vice President George Bush's attention four years ago.

Things are no different this year.

There are long lists and shorts lists and dream picks galore, but Clinton's thinking remains largely a mystery as his decision nears.

For the record, (see rule No. 1 about being No. 2) no one is running for the spot. Jackson's spring declaration that he deserved to be considered fell on deaf ears in the Clinton camp. Still, the competition is well under way.

Some people — like New York Gov. Mario Cuomo and New Jersey Sen. Bill Bradley — are automatic prospects. Their luxury: they can deny any interest — which both Cuomo and Bradley have done repeatedly — knowing they will be considered.

Others, like Nebraska Sen. Bob Kerrey, need to send signals. After all, when he was running against Clinton in the primaries, Kerrey said Clinton didn't stand a chance in the fall, that Republicans would split him open like a "soft peanut."

But recently, Kerrey has praised Clinton's new economic plan and his criticism of rap singer Sister Souljah. After last week's Supreme Court abortion decision, Kerrey's line mirrored Clinton's: "Roe itself is jeopardized if President Bush has the opportunity to appoint another justice," Kerrey said.

It's no mystery why most politicians covet the No. 2 spot. Being vice president can improve one's chances of someday being president, as Bush could testify. Even on a losing ticket, the national campaign experience can prove invaluable to someone who might want to try again.

Because of Clinton's requests that such conversations be kept confidential, few of the prospects are saying much. But they are sending hints, and their actions are being closely watched for signs of whether they meet Clinton's criteria.

Lawmakers fear December surprise for banking system

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some lawmakers, economists and consumer activists are starting to talk about the possibility of a "December surprise" in the banking system.

They are drawing parallels between the 1992 election year and 1988. Four years ago, candidate George Bush barely breathed a word of problems in the savings and loan industry but, a week after becoming president, asked Congress to spend $50 billion in taxpayers' money to protect the industry's depositors.

Administration and regulatory officials vigorously deny suggestions, raised last month by Senate Banking Committee Chairman Donald W. Riegle Jr., D-Mich., that they are trying to play down the true condition of the nation's banks.

But academic experts and others are starting to raise the same questions as partisan Democrats.

Economist Edward J. Kane of Boston College flatly told the House Banking Committee that he believed a cover-up may exist.

This year, administration officials and William Taylor, the chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., say they believe a $30 billion line of credit granted from taxpayers to the FDIC's bank insurance fund late last year will be enough to handle losses in failed banks.

Taylor also told the committee he believed the FDIC fund would be able to collect enough in insurance premiums from banks to repay the borrowing within 15 years.

Kane, however, said a truer reckoning of the FDIC bank fund, if it set aside reserves to cover all likely losses rather than just known losses, would put it at negative $53 billion, not the $7 billion the FDIC reported recently.

Hello, Dollies

This doll made by Carolyn Gilland has a unique personal touch; the hair is Ms. Gilland's.

A table top lined with unfinished dolls wait for adornment.

Ms. Gilland has a cellar stacked with molds for making dolls.

Carolyn Gilland's house is all dolled up with stone-faced beauties.

Dozens of dolls, some dressed in delicate silks and Swiss batiste lace, others nude, and some in various states of repair, crowd every available space in one bedroom of her country home, located several miles west of Midland.

The dolls vie for space with doll body parts and detached heads waiting for the paintbrush and Ms. Gilland's steady hand to fashion their fine eyelashes, drawn onto the porcelain faces thin as a whisper and a hairbreadth apart.

The artist's skill in painting her fragile figures has garnered her handfuls of ribbons from regional and national dollmaking competitions. She has earned four blue ribbons from the Doll Artisan Guild competitions in New York City and the guild's master of dollmaking degree.

"The main thing they judge is head painting — getting the eyelashes the right length with just the right curve and distance apart. They also judge the set of the eyes, that the exact amount of white shows in each eye," Ms. Gilland said.

The dollmaker concentrates her efforts into replicating traditional porcelain dolls of the past. She collects antiques and copies details onto her new creations, including exacting shades of paint and fabric.

Surprisingly, Ms. Gilland, a woman in her 60s, never owned a porcelain, bisque or china doll as a child, and never had one handed down from her mother or grandmother.

"I never even heard of them until I got involved in ceramics in 1980," she said.

After moving into her present residence in 1980, Ms. Gilland said a friend of hers made her a reposing ceramic lion for a mantel. "I wanted a ceramic lamb to lie beside it," she said. "So I went to my friend to have her pour me

DEATHS

Woodrow Wilson

Services for Woodrow "Woody" Wilson, 75, are set for 9:30 a.m. today in Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Lucian Rudd officiating. Burial is to follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

He died Sunday at his home.

He was born Feb. 18, 1917, in Sherwood. He moved to Midland with his family as a child and had been a resident ever since. As a teen-ager he worked on local ranches. He enlisted in the U.S. Army on Dec. 28, 1942, and served in Germany during World War II. Upon his discharge he returned to Midland.

He married Geraldine Baker in Midland on March 9, 1945. He worked for several Midland businesses before joining Deerings West Nursing Home in Odessa, where he worked in the maintenance department. He retired in 1982.

He was preceded in death by a son, Kenneth Jay Wilson in 1979.

Survivors include his wife; four daughters, Delila Martin, Dorothy "Dottie" Wilson, Cecelia Stewart and Connie Wade, all of Midland; a sister, Bessie Pirtle of Midland; six grandchildren, four great-grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

Memorials may be directed to Hospice of Midland.

Robert Grant

CORPUS CHRISTI — Military graveside services for Robert G. Grant, 71, are set for 11 a.m. Tuesday at Memory Gardens with the Rev. Milam Brantley officiating. Services are under the direction of Cage-Mills Funeral Home, Everhart Chapel.

He died Friday at a Corpus Christi hospital.

He was born June 3, 1921, in Wheeling, W.Va. He moved to Corpus Christi in 1968. He was a member of the Confederate Air Force and had been active in the Victoria Wing and the Rio Grande Wing of Brownsville. He was a U.S. Air Force veteran and served in World War II, the Korean War and Vietnam. He was a member of the National Disabled American Veterans and of St. Bartholomew's Episcopal Church.

Survivors include his wife, Pauline Grant of Corpus Christi; three sons, Raymond Grant of Houston, Ronald Grant of Corpus Christi and Russell Grant of Garland; one daughter, Sherly Canales of Corpus Christi; one sister, Margaret Polk of Pennsylvania; and six grandchildren.

Clifford Washburn

A memorial service for Clifford Washburn, 43, is set for 1 p.m. Tuesday at Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with Jerry Ray Murphy officiating. Arrangements are with Ellis Funeral Home.

He died Friday at a local hospital.

He was born July 26, 1948, in Joinerville. He moved to Midland as a child and attended Midland schools. He married Kathy Cox in Midland on Oct. 31, 1976. He was a mechanic for several car dealerships.

Survivors include his wife; two brothers, Lelland Washburn of Midland and Curtis Washburn of Sulfur Springs; four sisters, Bobby Von Rosenburg of Midland, Hazel Kaizer of Sulfur Springs, Jaunel Coleman of Sterling City and Laverne Tilly of Big Spring; and several nieces and nephews.

Jewell Jones

Services for Jewell E. Jones of San Marcos are set for 11 a.m. today at Midland's Dellwood Baptist Church with the Rev. Bob Morris officiating. Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

She died Thursday at a San Antonio hospital.

Pallbearers are to be Robert Darrell Wilkinson, Monroe Michaelis, Darren Wayne Wilkinson, William Dean Wilkinson, Kenneth Ray Wilkinson and John Charles Williams.

Birdie Crutcher

Ellis Funeral Home is in charge of local arrangements

She died Saturday at a local hospital.

DOLL: Dollmaker strives for authentic details

a lamb and said: 'I want a lamb, I don't want to look at any other greenware (unfired ceramic or porcelain pieces)."

Dozens of molds and hundreds of dolls later, Ms. Gilland said, "I always fuss at my friend for getting me involved in this. It costs so much, but it's so much fun."

Since her art consists of painstakingly recreating the fragile, translucent dolls of the 1800s and 1900s, the dollmaker said she is baffled by the lack of interest in authenticity by the buying public.

"When I started making these as authentic as possible I thought everyone would want to buy one," she said. "But not many buyers want antique reproductions. Everyone seems to want a popular baby doll which has a soft body and weighs about four pounds."

Rather than conform her style of dollmaking to the market, Ms. Gilland said she chooses to please herself. "I make these as a work of art," she said. As for her adherence to creating a line of dolls which harken back to French and German originals, she said, "None of my kids or grandkids care a thing about it."

Nonetheless, other dollmakers and some collectors appreciate her artistry, and have expressed an interest in her latest technique of embossing or painting raised detail work on porcelain.

Ms. Gilland employs the embossing technique — typically used to decorate porcelain eggs — to paint beaded necklaces or embellish porcelain molded collars, hair accessories on dolls with molded porcelain hair or tiny flower petals and leaves on boots.

She said her favorite doll mold is the French Mirage mold. The mold forms a doll "with a receding chin and a sweet face."

Her basement shelves groan under the weight of row after row of molds. "Every time a mold is used it loses detail. You can get about 50 dolls per mold."

Ms. Gilland uses a porcelain which looks like wet cement in the liquid state. She pours in into a mold, lets it set and then pours the composition out, so the shell of the head is cast and the head remains hollow.

"This is an expensive hobby," she said, noting that she works at her craft when not working full-time as a lab technician at Odessa's Medical Center hospital.

It is also a time-consuming hobby since a "rush job" for Ms. Gilland is making a doll in 10 days. "I never make one doll at a time though, I pour several heads and bodies at a time."

She said doll molds can cost about $60 each and the composition about $100 per bucket. "But I may pour 12-14 bodies from each container since I pour most of the composition back out of the molds and use it again." She said making batches of dolls is much cheaper than buying the porcelain parts already made, which can cost about $70 per doll.

When it comes to hair, Ms. Gilland prefers molded or mohair — which was used on antique dolls.

She said area dollmakers in West Texas pay ranchers to allow their mohair goats to grow their hair long. "They also have to keep the goats out of wet grass so it doesn't stain the hair on their bellies," she said.

A lot of contemporary dollmakers prefer acrylic wigs, but Ms. Gilland said mohair is preferred for antique doll competitions.

"And for me, I just enjoy it when my dolls are just as authentic as they can be," she said. "There's a lot of detail involved, but I love it."

Health food seizure leaves advocates irate

AUSTIN (AP) — A national crackdown on questionable health food claims has resulted in the seizure in Texas of many foods sold for decades in store shelves, leaving health food advocates outraged.

Products seized this year by the State of Texas have ranged from aloe verasalves to dietary supplements that claim to bolster the immune system.

Officials of the Texas Department of Health said the products are being removed from stores statewide because of labels illegally claiming wondrous drug-like effects on diseases ranging from AIDS to arthritis.

A health food consumer group in Tacoma, Wash., says its members are irate at the Texas action and are planning to lobby Gov. Ann Richards and members of Congress over what they perceive is an increasing trend.

"We've had over a thousand letters and calls from consumers in more than half the states who've heard about the Texas situation," said Alexander Schauss, director of the National Organization of Citizens for Health.

"They want to know what they can do and if it will come to their state. People are saying 'What's wrong? My grandmother used this stuff.'"

Joe Dixon, a supervisory investigator for the Texas Health Department's food and drug division, said the seizures are part of a national crackdown by the federal Food and Drug Administration on health food quackery.

"There's a nationwide push on health fraud claims and the FDA's involved. I would pretty well say that, in the future, those products won't be on the shelves," Dixon said.

"It's not something we're targeting. It's just routine work. We just do it when (complaints) come up," added Dennis Baker, director of the division.

Products seized since January from Texas stores owned by Whole Foods, Sun Harvest Farms and Ye Seekers Horizon have been placed "under embargo, a detention," to discourage the stores from selling them until illegal labels are changed, Baker said.

David Mathis, president and chief executive officer of the Southwest division of Whole Foods Market Inc., said dozens of products have been seized in simultaneous raids on the chain's 12 Texas stores.

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Police unearth woman's body

Staff report

Officers in Dawson County Saturday unearthed a body discovered alongside County Road 2051 and arrested a Lamesa man on charges of murder about an hour later, according to police reports.

Police believe the body is that of 17-year-old Connie Norton, who was reported missing on June 9.

At 10:15 a.m. Saturday, a Department of Public Safety trooper noticed a piece of carpet and a "hand or foot" protruding from the ground on County Road 2051, five miles south of Lamesa, according to reports.

Fernando Lopez, 27, who had joined several of the searches for Ms. Norton since her disappearance, was charged with murder. He remains in the Dawson County jail on a $500,000 bond, according to reports.

An autopsy is to be performed in Dallas on Tuesday to verify identification of the body.

Midland fire officials investigate blaze

Midland fire officials are investigating the source of a blaze at Saddle Club Apartments Sunday night that caused no injuries but diverted traffic on Loop 250 for about one hour, officials said.

Several units were damaged in the fire — some were heavily damaged — but officials did not have a total damage estimate.

Six fire units responded to the 8 p.m. call at 5101 N. "A" St.

State has plans to recruit teachers from military

DALLAS (AP) — State education officials have announced plans to aggressively recruit from the thousands of military personnel who will become civilians over the next few years because of defense cutbacks.

The Texas Education Agency has applied for a $352,000 federal grant that would enable the state to recruit U.S. military personnel worldwide and train them to fill teaching slots in Texas school districts.

The ranks of the nation's armed forces will be reduced by about 350,000 soldiers to just above 1.6 million in the next four years, according to Department of Defense figures.

Joey Lozano, spokesman for the education agency, said an Army survey found at least 12,000 soldiers who were interested in teaching.

The grant is being sought from $6 million in federal money earmarked for states to develop more alternative certification programs for displaced defense workers.

Texas' project is twofold. It hopes to meet the need of jobs for military personnel re-entering the civilian world and the increasing need for teachers.

During roughly the same time as the downsizing, the country will need an additional one million teachers, Lozano said. Colleges and universities are expected to produce just half of that amount.

Education officials are looking to alternative certification programs to fill the void. Business professionals with college degrees could become teachers without going through the traditional four-year college programs.

Recruits could enter any of the 21 alternative certification programs around the state that provide training and classroom preparation.

The state's proposal almost mirrors one from Fort Bliss top brass to develop a Texas Education Corps.

DEAR ABBY

Viewing whole tape brings King verdict into better focus

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: So, you have some doubts about the jurors' verdict in the officers' trial in the Rodney King case?

Please read these letters from the Houston Post's "Sound Off" section, and be enlightened. — M.W. DAURA, BELLAIRE, TEXAS

Van Buren

"I was in a Colorado hotel room with cable TV that carried 'Court in Session,' a live broadcast of current court cases where television was permitted, much like C-SPAN carries congressional sessions.

"The Rodney King trial was on for six hours each day. I saw a total of 40 hours. I heard and saw videotapes and testimony of the normal effect of stun guns — police-in-training receiving a stun gun shot, and falling like poleaxed steers — yet Rodney King only blinked and kept coming at the officers.

"I heard testimony of Mr. King's throwing officers — two at a time — to the ground like rag dolls. All this was in the 20 minutes before the famous one-minute 'bite' that was all most of the media and a segment of our population saw.

"The media explained the looting, burning, beating and killing as 'rage' over the verdict. I'm sorry, but it's happened too often, and appears to be simply a carefree opportunity for looting, burning, beating and killing. (Examples: Watts, Miami, the St. Croix looting after Hurricane Hugo, and others.)" — GLEN SWENUMSON, HOUSTON

"All my life I've supported a free press and appreciated the role it serves in keeping the public informed. But today I am angry. I feel that television has taken me for a ride.

"For 13 months I've seen a 90-second clip of videotape that shows a man face down on the ground and four police officers taking turns hitting him with batons.

"It wasn't until 3 a.m. on Friday, on CNN, that I was finally given the opportunity to see the tape in its entirety. Here I saw a man who had been hit four times with 50,000 volts of electricity continue to fight and resist police. I saw him lunging at a policeman. I saw him defying all normal reaction to pain, and behaving as if he could feel no pain.

"I saw a brief moment when he lay still, and at that moment one policeman reached for his handcuffs. Then the man was up on his hands and knees again.

"I wonder, who decided to limit the public's access to the entire tape?" — JULIE R. WISE, HOUSTON

DEAR M.W. DAURA: Obviously, the jurors saw all the videotape. The public, including me, saw only the edited one-minute "bite," believing that was the entire story, which it was not.

Thank you for sending the above letters. They answered my question, "What was in the minds of those 12 jurors who delivered a unanimous verdict of 'not guilty' after having seen the videotape of Rodney King being beaten mercilessly at the hands of four uniformed Los Angeles police officers?"

DEAR READERS: A limerick I described as "slightly suggestive, but quite witty" was sent to me by a reader who did not know who wrote it. After it appeared in my column (sans author's credit), I heard from the author, who had read it in The Kansas City Star, asking for due credit. So thank you, Mary Owen Rank Kelly, for the following:

Said a potentate gross and despotic,
"My tastes are more rich than exotic.

Gunman was investigated for 16 instances of sexual abuse, police say

FORT WORTH (AP) — An Illinois prosecutor says as many as 16 cases of sex abuse have been investigated involving last week's admitted gunman who fired on a Tarrant County courtroom, according to a newspaper report.

Assistant State Attorney Jim Owens said his office has looked into all 16 cases accusing George D. Lott of sexual abuse in Texas and Illinois, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported Sunday.

Lott remained in the Tarrant County Jail Sunday. He is accused of shooting five people, killing two, in last Wednesday's rampage. Lott turned himself in, saying he was angry over his divorce case and his ex-wife's child-molesting charge against him.

He is accused by his ex-wife of abusing their 4-year-old son Neal David Lott during weekend visits in Texas and Peoria, Ill.

Court records show Lott visited his son eight times at Peoria motels after his former wife, Margo Livesay, moved there in May 1991. Ms. Livesay was awarded custody of the child in 1990.

Owens said Ms. Livesay photographed examples of the child's injuries and reported the instances to Texas child authorities before moving to Peoria.

But Lott's visits continued until Dec. 26, 1991, when a Peoria juvenile judge barred the nonpracticing lawyer from seeing his son alone.

The Peoria court halted all visits May 19 after Lott was indicted in March of aggravated criminal sexual assault and criminal sexual assault.

Lead-based paint dust spans over wetlands, newspaper reports

HOUSTON (AP) — The state highway department is blasting lead-based paint off a bridge that spans environmentally sensitive wetlands in a demonstration project, The Houston Post reported Sunday in a copyright story.

The $3.5 million Rainbow Bridge project is intended to give the agency more information about removing lead-based paint from Texas bridges, a spokesman for the Department of Highways and Public Transportation said.

"The Rainbow Bridge project is actually one of the centerpieces of our research," said highway department spokesman Roger Polson. "We feel like this project is going to be extremely helpful in having to deal with this material in the future."

But local environmentalists expressed alarm about the project.

"We eat the shellfish there. There are people I know who fish and crab in the Sabine Lake," said Linda Gober, who heads the Golden Triangle Sierra Club.

Work on the bridge, which spans the Neches River between Port Arthur and Bridge City, began April 3 — nearly five months after the highway agency enacted a statewide suspension on removing lead-based paint from its bridges.

The moratorium on sandblasting-and-repainting projects was put into effect in December, after agency officials found potentially hazardous levels of lead in paint that covered downtown Houston overpasses, The Post said.

That job was suspended on Oct. 2.

Highway department officials have said that neither the environment nor public health is threatened by such projects.

Bridges are repainted frequently to protect the steel from corrosion, and the old paint was to be removed first.

Dollar rises

Stock prices fell on profit-taking in Tokyo and rose in London Friday, while the dollar moved higher in thin trading.

Most U.S. financial markets were closed in observance of Independence Day, and Treasury bond markets around the world were also shut. There was some limited currency trading in New York.

Stocks were higher on the Tokyo Stock Exchange until the last hour of trading, when profit-taking set in, sending the 225-issue Nikkei Stock Average down 39.85 points, or 0.24 percent, to end the week at 16,717.78.

On Thursday, the volatile average rose 432.56 points, or 2.65 percent.

The Tokyo Stock Price Index of all issues listed on the first section was up 1.86 points, or 0.14 percent, to close at 1,293.55. The TOPIX added 32.71 points, or 2.60 percent, the previous day.

In London, stocks were higher with the Financial Times-Stock Exchange 100-stock index rising 21 points to 2,497.1.

Foreign exchange dealers said trading was thin in advance of the upcoming meeting of the world's seven leading industrialized nations, which begins in Munich Sunday. The market also lacked leadership from Wall Street.

In Tokyo, the dollar fell to a closing 124.25 Japanese yen from 124.45 yen at Thursday's close.

In London, the British pound fell to $1.9080 from $1.9175 late Thursday.

Oil prices edged higher overseas. In London, North Sea Brent blend crude for August delivery rose 5 cents to $20.80 a barrel.

Crime seminar

The Small Business Development Center of the University of Texas of the Permian BAsin and the Midland and Odessa police departments will present a seminar on "Crime Prevention in Business: How to Stop Theft and Identify Shoplifters."

The seminar will be from 7 to 9 p.m. Thursday at the Center for Energy and Economic Diversification, Highway 191 and FM 1788.

The program is open to all business owners, managers and employees who have customer contact. Cpl. Harold Thomas of the Odessa Police Department will discuss business robberies and Ron Sartor, certified crime prevention specialist with the Midland Police Department, will discuss the "profiling" method of shoplifters.

The seminar is free. Participants should register by calling 563-0400.

Tandy in Mexico

FORT WORTH — Tandy Corp. said it plans to open as many as 250 Radio Shack outlets in Mexico during the next five years as part of a joint venture with a major Mexican retailer.

Tandy said it will team with Grupo Gigante, an operator of a variety of retail chains in Mexico, to expand Radio Shack south of the United States border.

The new joint venture, a 50-50 partnership between Tandy and Grupo Gigante, is expected to open as many as 50 Radio Shack stores in Mexico annually for the next three to five years, company spokesman Philip Bradtmiller said.

Grupo Gigante, which has had a license to operate Mexican Radio Shacks since 1986, now has 24 Radio Shack stores in Mexico. Those 24 outlets will be consolidated into the operations of the new joint venture.

U.S. exports more gas to Mexico

■ Even though Mexico has extensive gas preserves, the country lacks the capital to produce the fuel at the rate it is needed.

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Struggling domestic gas producers could get some relief from Mexico, which is turning to the United States for cleaner fuel to stoke the factories and electric utilities of its industrial north.

Gas exports to Mexico have grown from just a trickle two years ago to around 250 million to 350 million cubic feet a day this year, and forecasters believe today's sales volumes could triple by the end of the decade.

"If you think about it as a percentage of overall U.S. production, you could hardly find it," Joe Ramsey, senior vice president for marketing at Tenneco Gas, told the Houston Chronicle in Sunday's editions. U.S. gas operators produce about 52 billion cubic feet a day.

"But as supply and demand come back into balance, then the fact that you are exporting 300 million cubic feet to Mexico as compared to zero can get you over that balance point a little sooner," Ramsey said.

With a growing economy, an expanding petrochemical industry and a national mandate to resolve its air pollution problem, Mexico is looking to the United States for cleaner fuel.

Mexico has a lot of gas reserves, but it lacks capital, and the country needs a lot of gas fairly quickly because of air pollution afflicting border towns and major industrial cities.

Tenneco has sold as much as 50 million cubic feet a day to Mexico in recent months.

Other producers and marketers selling gas to Mexico include Amoco Production Co.'s domestic gas unit, Cmex Energy, Conoco, Mobil Natural Gas, Texas Gas Marketing, Citizens Gas Supply and Western Gas Marketing.

Pemex, the Mexican state oil company, is the biggest user of natural gas, mainly as fuel but also as feedstock for petrochemicals, a growing industry for Mexico.

Pemex consumed 44 percent of the 2.5 billion cubic feet a day used throughout the country last year. Factories used about 35 percent, and utilities used about 17 percent. The rest was burned in homes.

Four U.S. pipeline companies already have border connections, and other pipelines are under construction or discussion.

Pemex so far hasn't invested much money in its gas fields because of low gas prices, but some believe that will change when prices eventually rise.

Instead, the company has plowed its money into developing crude oil reserves, which fetch a better price and can be exported around the world and traded for hard currency.

U.S. producers and pipeline operators believe the export opportunity won't last forever, but they don't agree on how long the window will remain open for short term "spot" sales and how much natural gas prices will have to rise before Mexico begins to ply its own fields again.

Minority mortgage applicants have hard time, study shows

DALLAS (AP) — Blacks and Hispanics in Dallas can't get a mortgage as easily as whites and Asians, according to a newspaper study.

The Dallas Morning News' area analysis of the Home Mortgage Disclosure Act found that whites and Asians had better chances of getting a mortgage than minorities even if they have lesser-paying jobs.

The newspaper studied mortgage reports made available to lending institutions late last year.

"The numbers just prove something that we could only feel was true — that Dallas is in the prenatal stage of ensuring access to credit," said Barbara Cassel, Dallas executive director of the Enterprise Foundation, a non-profit group that helps first-time, low-income home buyers.

Ms. Cassel said the racial inequities could be worse because the report doesn't take into account those who are afraid to apply because of their low odds of being approved.

Helen Wyatt, a black mortgage broker from Oak Cliff, said he has faced the difficulties firsthand.

Despite being an established professional, her mortgage application was rejected because of prior credit problems she said lenders would have worked through for white customers.

"Any blotch on the application of an African-American will get you disqualified, it seems," she said.

But bankers say the raw statistics do not reveal the factors behind lending decisions, such as how minorities with whites and Asians compare in credit history and job backgrounds.

"Every case is different, and you must literally study the files themselves to see why a loan is denied," said Catherine Bessant, NationsBank Corp. community investment officer.

"We've studied our files and just don't see racism being a factor," she said.

A bad credit history, for example, disqualifies potential black borrowers twice as often as white applicants at NationsBank, Ms. Bessant said.

The newspaper said other institutions reported similar circumstances affecting their lending decisions.

"Lending is usually a matter of studying cold numbers — race doesn't play a role," said Mark Mesec, general counsel of Amwest Savings in Dallas.

The government research has sparked congressional hearings and government investigations into institutions that have favored white applicants.

Lenders have responded by encouraging more applications from low-income and minority neighborhoods, and some have changed their standards to allow more low-income borrowers to qualify.

Japan's trade surplus at record level

TOKYO (NYT) — After several years of reduction, Japan's trade surplus with the rest of the world is soaring again to record levels, a development that could increase unemployment in other nations and contribute to a new round of trade tensions.

It is also likely to be a main topic at the summit meeting of the seven leading industrial countries this week in Munich, where Japan is the only participant with a surplus.

"We've never seen a trade surplus like this in any country before," said Kenneth S. Courtis, chief economist and strategist for Deutsche Bank Capital Markets in Tokyo.

He said Japan's exports could exceed imports this year by $135 billion, well above the levels that followed the 1985 Plaza accord, under which the industrial partners agreed to raise the yen's value to reduce Japan's trade imbalance.

In Munich, the Japanese government is expected to tell its counterparts about a new plan to stimulate its economy by increasing public spending by $47 billion or more later this year, which could increase imports.

Economists say more fundamental changes are needed: Japanese consumers must spend more and the government must open its markets wider to foreigners.

In the 1980s, Japan used its surplus money it generated from trade to make long-term investments overseas in stocks, bonds, real estate and new factories.

But in the last year, Japanese companies, having been stung by unwise investments abroad and facing a recession, have sharply cut back on these investments.

Now, more foreign capital is flowing into Japan than Japanese capital is going out, as foreigners rebuild their positions in Japanese assets.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Company should help find missing stock

By Bill Doyle

Q: What recourse does a small investor have against a transfer agent? A bank in New York City is both transfer agent and dividend-paying agent for a stock of which I own 44 shares. I possess certificates for all those shares.

Doyle

At the time of the most recent dividend payment, I received a check for 39 shares. I returned the check to the bank and asked for an explanation. In return, I received a letter stating that one of my certificates for five shares was surrendered more than a month earlier.

That is not so. I have that certificate. I have not sold, transferred or placed it in a broker's name.

I have spoken to at least six people at the bank, have sent a letter enclosing photocopies of the both sides of the certificate and have faxed both sides to the bank. I keep getting the same answer: that it is very difficult to get into the vault and locate the certificate that was surrendered.

What do I do next?

A: Tell your story to the company whose stock is involved. Contact the stockholder relations department. If there is no such unit at that particular company, take your gripe to the office of the corporate secretary and, if necessary, to the company's chief executive.

As a stockholder, you are part owner of the company. As such, you're entitled not only to the correct dividend payments but also to some respect.

The yarns you have been getting don't wash. Canceled stock certificates might be tucked away in some remote vault, but the transfer agent should have a record of how and by whom your five-share certificate allegedly was surrendered.

Assuming you are not trying to pull a scam, things should be squared away, pronto. If they are not, retain a lawyer and sue. Then, attend the next stockholders meeting; stand up; tell your story to the world, including the reporters covering the gathering. Nothing embarrasses corporate brass more.

Q: I have stocks, bonds and cash at a brokerage firm and am not satisfied with the way my account is being handled. I want to close my brokerage account and get my stock and bond certificates, as well as cash, in my possession.

After reading in your column that I could do this by "ordering out" my securities and telling the broker to deliver the certificates and money to me, I did just that.

But the broker does not seem to want to part with anything. How do I go about getting my property back?

A: Give the broker written instructions, either by registered mail; return receipt requested, or by hand delivery with an accompanying receipt.

No matter how reluctant the broker is to part with your securities and cash, he or she will have to make delivery to you, or face major trouble.

If the latter turns out to be the unhappy story, file complaints with the National Association of Securities Dealers, any stock exchange where that brokerage firm is a member, the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission and your state securities regulatory agency.

Q: I have stocks and bonds on which the ownership is in my name and my sister's name as joint tenants. We also have a joint bank account. The dividend and interest checks show her name "and" my name, "as joint tenants."

Our bank accepts these checks for deposit in our joint account with one endorsement — hers or mine. However, when we wish to cash a dividend or interest check, the bank insists on both our endorsements. Isn't that a contradiction of the joint tenancy as indicated on the checks?

A: No. It's an affirmation of the joint tenancy. You both own the securities, so you both have to endorse a dividend or interest check to obtain cash. Similar checks deposited in your joint bank account are a different story. That money doesn't leave your joint ownership.

Angels unleash offensive fury

■ Holiday weekends have been good to the Midland Angels — especially when Wichita's in town.

By Joe Wyatt
Staff writer

On the heels of back-to-back wins before monster crowds, talk Sunday night in the Midland dugout naturally featured some references to a past holiday weekend.

Not the Independence Day weekend, mind you. Mother's Day. The last time Wichita and Midland clashed on a sunny Sunday at Angels Stadium.

That one ended in a 21-4 Angels' victory.

This one was no less ugly for the visitors.

"Yeah, the guys were talking about that Mother's Day game," said Pete Coachman, who led off the game with his first Texas League home run of the season as the Angels scored 11 times in the first inning, then breezed to an 18-7 romp over the Wranglers.

"It was just a matter of our coming out aggressive," Coachman understated. "We came out aggressive and we stayed that way."

And the Wranglers are grudgingly getting used to that style of play as the Angels have now won 7 of their last 10 games, which have all been against the Wichita club.

The Angels sent 15 batters to the plate in the first inning, making a quick loser out of Mike Linskey (6-4), who allowed nine earned runs before leaving with just one out recorded.

Mark Zappelli pitched five innings and improved his record to 5-1 for Midland, which held on to a share of first place in the Western Division along with El Paso, a 7-6 winner Sunday over San Antonio.

The Angels used nine hits and three walks to produce their 11-run inning, and the first four members of the lineup each scored twice in the inning.

Coachman, who didn't join the team until this side of Mother's Day, led off the game with a line drive that cleared the left-field wall in a hurry.

Jeff Kipila tossed in his league-leading 17th round-tripper, a two-run blast, and the big leftfielder added a

Gilbert wins playoff

MASON, Ohio (AP) — Gibby Gilbert out-dueled J.C. Snead in a twilight playoff to win the $600,000 Kroger Senior Classic on Sunday.

With darkness closing in following a 1-hour, 40-minute rain delay, Gilbert sank a 5-foot birdie putt on the second playoff hole, the 546-yard par-5 No. 18, to win his second straight Senior Tour championship.

Gilbert had a final-round 68 and Snead a 67 to finish the 54 holes at 15-under 198. Gilbert won the Southwestern Bell Classic last week with a 17-under score.

Sheehan wins again

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Patty Sheehan won the Jamie Farr Toledo Classic by a stroke Sunday to take her second title in a week and become the only two-time winner this season on the LPGA Tour.

Sheehan shot a 5-under par 66 to finish with a 4-under 209 over the 6,270-yard, par-71 Highland Meadows Golf Club in suburban Toledo.

Tied for second were Brandie Burton, Heather Drew, Tammie Green and second-round leader Deb Richard.

Sheehan earned $60,000 of the $400,000 purse. She also earned $60,000 last week for winning the Rochester International.

NBC cuts off tennis

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC gave tennis fans an extra hour of Wimbledon coverage Sunday, then cut away for the U.S.-Venezuela basketball game with the men's doubles final tied at 10-10 in the fifth set.

"We provided an hour extra of commercial-free tennis coverage when we could have left at three," network spokesman Ed Markey said. "We had a commitment to basketball and we made the decision to go to that."

NBC came back to tennis briefly with the United States leading 15-2 in Tournament of the Americas title game to show play being suspended with the doubles match — John McEnroe and Michael Stich vs. Jim Grabb and Ricky Renenberg — tied at 13-13.

On Saturday, NBC missed the last two games of Steffi Graf's win over Monica Seles in the women's finals, cutting away during a rain delay. The network had been off the air an hour and 20 minutes when the match resumed with Graf leading 4-1 in the second set.

"We had no way of knowing if they were going to resume play," said Markey.

Andre the Giant

Agassi finally has Grand Slam crown with five-set win over Goran Ivanisevic

Emotionally and physically drained, Andre Agassi collapses to the lawn after his Wimbledon victory Sunday.

By Steve Wilstein
AP Tennis Writer

WIMBLEDON, England — Once disdainful of Wimbledon and scared of grass, Andre Agassi broke his Grand Slam jinx in the most improbable place in the world.

He did it Sunday on Centre Court in five gutsy sets, 6-7 (10-8), 6-4, 6-4, 1-6, 6-4, in the face of a 37-ace onslaught by Goran Ivanisevic.

So stunned was Agassi at the end that he fell to his knees, mouthed the words, "I can't believe it," then sprawled face down in the grass, tears on his cheeks when he finally rose and embraced Ivanisevic.

"He was crying," said Ivanisevic, who served a record 206 aces in the tournament and the most in a Wimbledon final. "I told him, 'Listen, man, you deserve it. You played great, all these two weeks.' Nobody expected he was going to win Wimbledon."

Yet, Agassi's joy was tempered by regret.

"I am really kind of sad," he said of his three lost Wimbledon years, 1988 through 1990, when he stayed home in Las Vegas to play golf and scoffed at Wimbledon white, the antithesis of the colorful clothes he peddled.

"This tournament has offered me and my life so much. It is a shame that I didn't respect it a little earlier."

Agassi won his first Grand Slam title, amazingly, on the slick grass so foreign to the cement and clay he grew up on. He'd reached the finals on the hard courts of the U.S. Open in 1990 and the red clay of the French Open in 1990 and 1991, losing all three, and he came in here a longshot as the No. 12 seed.

"It is quite an irony," Agassi said. "I really have had my chances to fulfill a lot of my dreams, and I have not come through them in the past. To do it here is more than I could ever ask for."

He said if someone had told him at the start of the year that he would win Wimbledon, "I would have thought there were some strings attached there somewhere."

But there were no strings attached, and no fears in his mind about blowing another final.

"Interesting enough, you would think being the fourth Grand Slam final I would go into it almost with the same snowball mentality: 'I hope I don't lose the fourth one.' But I felt extremely relaxed and poised out there. I never felt tension. I just felt ability. I felt myself, like, overflowing with this desire to want to go out there and hit shots."

He won it, curiously, as a groundstroke specialist on a serve-and-volleyers' playground, bringing back memories of Bjorn Borg's five title runs through 1980.

He did it with thundering returns, when he could get his racket on Ivanisevic's 123 mph serves. He did it with risky,

Team USA wins basketball gold

Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. — Team USA left a new legacy in Rip City USA.

Venezuela became the sixth opponent ripped by the Dream Team, which led by as many as 55 points on the way to a 127-80 victory Sunday in the final of the Tournament of the Americas.

The U.S. team received gold medals for its victory in the Olympic qualifying tournament, but it was just a preliminary award for what Magic Johnson calls the race in Barcelona for "the big prize."

"It's like the difference between the NBA title and the CBA title," Johnson said.

The highlight of the game came when Larry Bird, who missed the previous four games with a stiff back, played the final two minutes and hit a field goal with 16 seconds left.

"Obviously, I wasn't going to go out there and get hurt," Bird said. "I wasn't going to run or jump, just shoot. I was almost asleep when Magic started to take my warmup pants off."

Malone scored the first four baskets of the game, starting the first of two 15-0 U.S. runs in the first half that ended 67-26.

The Dream Team made 67.5 percent of its shots from the field in the first half to 26.7 percent for Venezuela.

Ryan shows he's not finished

By Arnie Stapleton
AP Sports Writer

ARLINGTON — Without it, Nolan Ryan was winless and his skeptics unmerciful. They said it was over, this incredible career.

But Ryan has found his knee-buckling curve, the one they thought time may have stolen, and the 45-year-old king of the fastball is — what else? — almost unhittable.

With a stirring mix of uncanny curves, 96 mph heaters and crisp changeups, Ryan stifled the New York Yankees on three hits Saturday night. He struck out an American League season-high 13 batters as Texas beat the Yankees 4-1. He walked just one.

"That's as good of stuff as I've had this year," said Ryan, who won for the second straight time after enduring a career-high streak of 13 starts without a victory.

Ryan said his crackling curveball, always the last pitch to fall in place for him, started working flawlessly on June 17 at California, when he scattered seven hits and struck out eight but lost 3-0.

"Really, the last three games I've been flirting with getting it consistent," Ryan said. "I feel like I'm finally in a groove."

Ryan (2-3) extended his major league record by striking out 10 or more batters for the 214th time in his career despite throwing in humid, 92-degree heat and suffering muscle spasms in his back since the fourth inning. He received treatment between innings and threw 135 pitches.

Rangers' assistant trainer Ray Rodriguez, left, keeps Nolan Ryan cool during his Fourth of July outing.

According to research by the Elias Sports Bureau, Ryan, at 45 years, 6 months, is believed to be the oldest pitcher to ever strike out 10 or more batters in a game this century.

"When you can locate a fastball and have that kind of velocity to go along with a curve and a change, you'll make a lot of people look out of whack," said New York manager Buck Showalter.

Ryan gave up an infield single to

AGASSI: Two double faults doom Ivanisevic

(From 1C)

leaping forehands and two-fisted backhands that kissed the lines and corners for 38 winners.

He did it at a moment when his peers and fans were giving up on him, considering him much more image than substance, a junk-food addict and advertising pitchman who was squandering his natural talents.

Yet, here at ivy-covered Wimbledon, fortress of propriety, the 22-year-old with a glittery earring and flowing frosted hair earned a place of honor in tennis history.

Now he is a champion after only 13 matches on grass in his life, one in 1987 when he lost in the first round, five last year when he lost in the quarters, and seven this year.

Agassi brought squeals from teen-age girls everywhere he went during the fortnight. But the bettors weren't impressed. He was the lowest seed to win since Wimbledon began seeding players in 1927. The only greater longshot to win was unseeded Boris Becker in 1985.

Despite Ivanisevic's serving prowess, Agassi actually had less trouble holding serve most of the match, the result of Agassi's superior returning ability. Agassi's serves were about 10 mph slower, but Ivanisevic had trouble timing the kicks and spins that Agassi put on them.

Agassi faced only two break points in the first set, half as many as Ivanisevic, but both held all the way to push it to a tiebreaker. Agassi opened the tiebreaker with his fourth ace, Ivanisevic responded with his 10th. Agassi had a set point at 7-6, but Ivanisevic wiped that out with a second-serve ace up the middle. Ivanisevic finally took the set when Agassi's running forehand off a volley drifted wide.

Agassi jumped right back into the match by breaking Ivanisevic in the first game of the second set, ripping a forehand crosscourt past the 20-year-old Croatian. Three of Agassi's points in that game came on passing shots; the only point Ivanisevic managed was an ace.

"The game has moved toward a high-power serve," Agassi said. "I think I definitely have made a mark for those that do play like I do, and I think I have given them a bit of confidence. Y'know, I'm just surviving out there."

It is a style not much different from that of Borg more than a decade ago, and Jim Courier now, all of them blasting groundstrokes and coming in only to put away short balls.

Agassi repeated the formula in the third set, breaking Ivanisevic again in the first game. This time, though, Ivanisevic helped him along with errors.

A chilly breeze kicked up and gun metal gray clouds hovered overhead, replacing the bright sunshine of the middle sets. It seemed as if the weather had gone through three seasons since the match began about 30 minutes after a rain delay.

Each player held serve through the first nine games, Agassi ahead 5-4.

At that moment, though, Ivanisevic's most potent weapon simply abandoned him. Instead of aces, he double-faulted on the first two points, his sixth and seventh of the match. Service winners got him back to 30-30, but Agassi set up match point with a forehand approach crosscourt that whizzed by Ivanisevic.

Ivanisevic had little left, and Agassi wasn't about to give him a chance to recuperate. Agassi leaped into Ivanisevic's second serve on the next point and hammered a backhand return down the line. Ivanisevic charged after it, stretched for a backhand volley but watched it plop into the net.

As Agassi sank to his knees and collapsed on the ground, Ivanisevic leaned limply on the top of the net at midcourt, waited there a few moments, then stepped over to hug Agassi.

"Any time you are in a match that goes to five sets, where both of you are just doing everything you can just to stay in the match," Agassi said, "there is a bond that you develop out there that you cannot explain to anybody else except if you are an athlete and feel it in the heat of battle.

"You are both fighting so hard to kill the other one, yet you have so much respect for the other one fighting back."

RYAN: Texas pitcher once again making baseball fun

(From 1C)

Andy Stankiewicz in the second, a single up the middle to Charlie Hayes leading off the eighth, and Danny Tartabull's eighth homer of the year in the ninth. The homer came with Ryan one pitch away from his 20th career two-hitter.

Instead, he finished with his 31st career three-hitter. It was the 96th time in Ryan's 26-year major league career that he has issued four or fewer hits in a complete game.

The performance came just a week after a columnist in Detroit suggested Ryan should retire now to avoid sullying a Hall of Fame career.

During his early-season struggles, when Ryan went 75 days without his curve, he refused to look back, to acknowledge his string of bad weather starts, bad luck, bad back and bad bullpen. And he refused to listen to the skeptics.

"I don't think about those things," said Ryan. "When people suggest maybe I'm at the end of my career, I think those are natural reactions. I don't get offended by it, and I don't say I'm going to go out and try to prove something to somebody."

Satchel Paige said it first: Don't look back; something might be gaining on you. Now, it's Ryan heeding those words.

Since finding his curveball, Ryan has allowed just two runs on 12 hits — 11 singles — with 27 strikeouts in his last 23 innings.

After the game, the 40,726 fans stuck around for the fireworks show.

"Isn't this what baseball is all about?" shouted a fan from the bleachers. Families having fun. Children running around and giggling, and Nolan Ryan making batters look foolish again, just like he has every summer since 1966.

Ryan spent 11 weeks struggling, hurting, wondering, searching. And somehow, baseball fans everywhere didn't feel so good themselves.

But Ryan has found his curve. And for another summer, the miracle of youth lives on.

Crenshaw wins PGA Western

LEMONT, Ill. (AP) — Ben Crenshaw broke one two-year streak and extended another one with his victory Sunday over Greg Norman in the Western Open.

Crenshaw used a late, two-stroke swing to leap-frog over Norman and claim his first victory since 1990.

"After not playing so well for a couple of years, you begin to wonder, to have your doubts," he said.

While Crenshaw's questions were answered and his mind eased, Norman's two-year non-winning string was extended with a second consecutive galling, frustrating runner-up finish in this event.

But it was far from a two-man battle.

Marathon doubles halted

Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — John McEnroe's latest bid to win a Wimbledon title ended in a dispute Sunday when the doubles final, in which he partnered Michael Stich, was halted because of darkness with the score at 13-13 in the final set.

Unseeded McEnroe and Stich were tied at 5-7, 7-6 (7-5), 3-6, 7-6 (7-5), 13-13 with No. 4 seeds Jim Grabb and Richie Reneberg.

With the light fading fast and after 4 hours, 27 minutes, officials stopped play.

The players clearly wanted to play on and McEnroe, who won four doubles titles here with Peter Fleming, stood at the center of the court discussing the issue with Wimbledon referee Alan Mills as cameras flashed all around.

When the officials insisted the players return Monday to finish the match, Mills was loudly booed by the fans who had stayed.

No. 2 seeds Gigi Fernandez and Natalia Zvereva won their second straight Grand Slam doubles title with a 6-4, 6-1 victory over No. 1 seeds Jana Novotna and Larisa Savchenko-Neiland.

The American Fernandez and her partner, a native of Belarus, won their first-ever title together at last month's French Open with a 6-3, 6-2 decision over Conchita Martinez and Arantxa Sanchez Vicario.

Prior to Sunday's match, Novotna, who hails from Czechoslovakia and the Latvian Savchenko-Neiland held a 2-0 career edge over Fernandez-Zvereva. The Novotna-Savchenko-Neiland duo has won seven career titles.

"I think the difference today is they haven't won a Grand Slam as a team and we won the French Open," Fernandez said.

Rahal wins; J. Andretti finishes 5th

Associated Press

LOUDON, N.H. — Bobby Rahal is having fun, and that's a bad sign for the rest of the IndyCar drivers.

Rahal won a high-speed duel with Michael Andretti after a day of darting in and out of traffic Sunday as he earned a key victory in the championship battle. The two-time series champion passed Andretti with 39 laps to go to win the inaugural New England 200 Sunday at New Hampshire International Speedway.

John Andretti, driving a Midland-based Pennzoil Special, rolled to a fifth-place finish.

"This is a place where you had to pass wherever you could pass," the grinning Rahal said. "I was up in the gray a few times making passes, but it was fun out there because my car was really handling well. It was really a lot of fun."

Rahal, who won by more than a lap, ended Andretti's victory string at two and added to his margin in the 1992 points race by leading 125 of 200 laps on the one-mile oval.

A year ago, Andretti won eight of the final 12 races to overtake Rahal for his first championship. He appeared to be ready to make the same kind of charge after winning at Portland and Milwaukee last month.

"You get sick and tired of being called Mr. Consistency," Rahal said. "You want to win and we needed to beat Michael. It was just a matter of who could get through traffic the best and then go like hell.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

MONDAY, JULY 6, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Happily, you do not have to go it alone. Support comes from friends, family and business associates. A dramatic emotional situation could arise in December. Refuse to renege on a commitment. New alliances make early 1993 a time of positive changes. Next March will find you exploring fresh business concepts. Romance looks golden in May. You could decide to relocate as summer approaches.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor Ned Beatty, the Dalai Lama, actress Janet Leigh, former first lady Nancy Reagan.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You may have to fight for your independence today. Make certain your associates understand your personal boundaries. A lesson learned in the past helps you solve a current problem.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The quiet atmosphere at work enables you to accomplish more than expected. Treat co-workers with the same respect and courtesy you demand. Remain optimistic about career changes.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Children are a source of pleasure today. Increased domestic harmony puts you in high spirits. A previously clear financial situation may blur a bit. Be patient while seeking a lasting solution.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Expressions of appreciation from a member of the opposite sex may hold hidden meaning. Financial considerations could be blocking romance. Set the record straight. A dream could prove prophetic.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Fun and games may be getting in the way of career progress. Settle down to work and make this a productive week. Someone in authority is evaluating your performance. Emphasize good work habits.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A public relations-minded person may affect the course of today's events. Member of the opposite sex may be growing impatient. Carefully review all your options.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Unexpected complications could arise at work. Some of your ideas may be ahead of the times. Hang in there! Show appreciation for your partner's or mate's efforts to lift your spirits.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You can buy yourself extra time today by being unavailable to certain people. The conditions for making a deal will be more favorable later on. Romance looks promising.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Romance is very much in the air. Make arrangements that will ensure greater financial security for you and your loved ones. Be certain you can live with any temporary spending restrictions.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Stick to what you know best. Financial affairs continue to be sensitive. Consult experts. A romantic interlude will restore your usual high spirits.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A profitable business venture comes your way when least expected. Move swiftly to take the initiative away from your competitors. Seek the cooperation of the entire family.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Working overtime can mean a fatter pay envelope but a limited social life. Tackle one thing at a time. A publisher shows interest in your writing. A good literary agent is essential.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are original thinkers, eager to try the new and exotic.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AK93 ♡AQ76 ◇AQ1072 ♣Void
Partner opens the bidding with one club. What do you respond?
A.—A very good hand indeed, but if you elected to jump to two diamonds you have accomplished no more than rob yourself of valuable bidding room you will need later. Take it easy until a trump fit has been located. Respond one diamond.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J3 ♡AKQ83 ◇94 ♣AQ107
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♣	Pass	2 ◇	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—Partner's bid of the fourth suit promises another bid, so there's no reason to do anything rash, despite a pretty good hand. We would simply rebid two hearts and wait to see where partner is going.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K984 ♡AJ63 ◇943 ♣83
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—Whether partner's bid was a genuine suit or a request for help in spades, you have ample values to insist on game—but in which suit? Let partner make the choice by raising to three spades.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠5 ♡AQJ52 ◇AQ6 ♣KQ63
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	1 ♠	Pass	Pass

What action do you take?
A.—The problem with bidding some number of clubs is that it is too unilateral—it rules out punishing one spade as well as a diamond contract. The correct call is double. Since partner has not yet bid, that is still for takeout, although North is free to convert to penalties with the right hand.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A10 ♡92 ◇AKJ1085 ♣K107
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	1 ♡	1 NT	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—This is not the time to count points. Your hand should produce from six to eight tricks for partner, and it will be easier for him to come to nine tricks opposite this holding than with some random 18-19 points. Bid three no trump.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQ10 ♡875 ◇82 ♣AQJ97
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 NT	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—You want to play in game, but don't know whether it should be in spades or no trump. Rebid three spades, and leave the decision to partner.

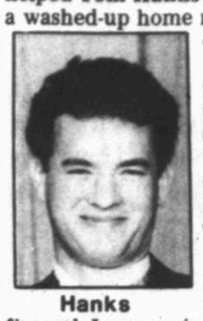
Dairy Queen helps Tom Hanks beef up for his role in 'League'

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Dairy Queen helped Tom Hanks get beefy for his role as a washed-up home run hitter in "A League of Their Own."



Hanks

"We were filming in the Midwest where there's always a Dairy Queen within three blocks," he said in an interview published Saturday in The Tennessean.

"I also discovered pork pit barbecue, which tastes great, but I figured I was using up about three days worth of arteries for every day I gorged myself," he said.

Hanks plays Jimmy Dugan, a former major league player given a last chance as a manager of a women's team in a league organized during World War II.

He said he drew the line when asked to chew tobacco.

"Fortunately we found a suitable herbal substitute. I knew exactly the jowly look I was looking for," Hanks said.

The movie also stars Geena Davis and Madonna.

NOBLESVILLE, Ind. — John Mellencamp entertained more than 20,000 fans at a holiday concert that was free, at least somewhat.

Fans were admitted at no cost if they held a ticket bought for one of Mellencamp's three shows earlier in the week. The concert Saturday at Deer Creek Music Center was carried live on 150 radio stations and broadcast later that day on ABC-TV.

Mellencamp was raised in Seymour and lives in nearby Bloomington.

PORTLAND, Ore. — Olympic gold medal skaters Bonnie Blair and Kristi Yamaguchi went two-on-one with Team USA's Larry Bird.

"I got two out of five, but hey, when Larry first started out, he was missing them too," Blair said after the July Fourth shootout at a picnic.

The speed skater and her figure-skating pal were in Portland to watch the Olympic basketball team compete in the Tournament of the Americas.

Yamaguchi hit three of five, but once Bird got on a roll he was unbeatable.

Magic Johnson backed out of the shootout, grabbing the emcee's microphone and entertaining the crowd.

INDIANAPOLIS — Boris Yeltsin III admitted not knowing much about the Fourth of July, but the 9-year-old grandson of the Russian president demonstrated a flair for diplomacy.

"I think it's a very important holiday," he said Saturday.

The young Yeltsin is on a 14-member tennis team sightseeing and traveling to junior tournaments in the United States. The group had lunch with city officials and watched fireworks on the Fourth.

The boy said he finds this country "very good," but temperatures in the high 80s made it "very hot."

• • •

RADNOR, Pa. — Walter Cronkite says the push for profits has forced television news to ignore important issues.

Cronkite

"The fact that the networks don't make more time for serious issues, especially in an election year, is awful," the former CBS anchorman said in the latest issue of TV Guide.

"The fact is, there's just no will to do it," Cronkite said. "And news departments won't be able to do it in half-hour news shows."

Tabloid shows — "you know, murder, rape, mayhem" — have influenced the networks in their push for profits, he said. "But they could take some of the profits from that and put 'em back into the news department."

COLCHESTER, Conn. — Former television talk show host Virginia Graham celebrated her 80th birthday by adopting this rural town.

"I was raised in Wisconsin in a place like this and I think my heart is happier in a place like this. And I hope I can come back many years," Graham said Saturday, her birthday.

Graham, who lives in New York City, said she fell in love with Colchester last year. The town of 11,000 in eastern Connecticut fell for Graham and decided to throw her a party.

Residents presented her with a dozen decorated birthday cakes. Graham danced on the town green's gazebo to "Ain't She Sweet" and signed red silk roses and copies of some of the six books she has written.

The former host of "At Home with Virginia Graham," "Food for Thought" and "Girl Talk" said she'll begin selling for cable television's Home Shopping Network on a show called, "Virginia Graham's Closet," on Aug. 24.

Tips On Writing EFFECTIVE Classified Ads

STICK TO THE FACTS

Prospective buyers need to know details, like the condition of the item for sale, the size, brand name, color and any other relevant information that would help them make a decision.

BE HONEST

Aside from being unethical, exaggerating or misinforming potential buyers won't help you make a sale, and may only serve to lose a prospective buyers' trust. Even if they come to look at what you have to sell, they'll be less likely to buy the item or trust you once they see they've been mislead.

SPELL IT OUT

Abbreviations are not easily understood by many people and may even confuse a reader. It only takes them a second to pass over an ad because it doesn't seem clear, why let it be yours because you abbreviated a description?

THE BOTTOM LINE

State the price. You'll save yourself the hassle of having to answer calls from prospects who, upon learning the price, are not really interested. Price is the first thing they'll look for when reading your ad, and when prospects know the price, you'll know you have a serious buyer on the line.

BE THERE

List the best hours to call and make sure you're at home. If you don't list a specific time, you could be flooded with calls any time of the day or night. And when you're not at home to take calls, most likely, they won't call back.

ASK US

If you aren't sure how to word your ad or what features to include, why not ask us? Our professionals on staff know how to create an effective ad that sells, they're always willing to help, and there's no charge!

160 Money, Loans Wanted

★★☆☆☆☆☆☆☆☆
Before signing a contract or sending money to an "Advance Fee Loan Broker" we recommend that you check with the Better Business Bureau of the Permian Basin. Be wary of any broker claiming the easy availability of thousands of dollars for loans at reasonable rates or the availability of "foreign" money.

WHAT! NEWSPAPER ROUTES?
That's right...one of the best part-time income supplements around. Doesn't conflict with your 'day job.' Doesn't require day care. And it's dependable income.

Fact: 95% of our Distributors NOW are ADULTS supplementing their income with Route Distributorships!

Fact: Our Distributors make from $400-$800 monthly AFTER expenses, some even more!

The catch? You've gotta be able to handle early mornings and weekends! And when you take a few days off, you'll need to find a substitute for yourself.

So...are you serious about MOONLIGHTING, or what? If you are, and you have dependable transportation and can put up a $100 deposit...

Call 688-2700 and start making that extra car payment today!
