Reno expands Gore investigation

■ Attorney general decides to expand Justice Department probe of fund-raising activities to 90-day preliminary investigation.

By Michael J. Sniffen
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Attorney General Janet Reno has decided to expand the Justice Department's probe of Vice President Al Gore's fund-raising telephone calls, The Associated Press learned Thursday night.

As Republicans chided Gore's acceptance of free legal help from a high-profile lawyer, it was learned that Reno has decided to open a 90-day preliminary investigation into the vice president's phone calls, the next step in a process that could lead to the appointment of a special counsel.

Gore has acknowledged making fund-raising calls from his office. Clinton has said he can't recall making such calls but acknowledged that he may have done so. But both Gore and Clinton have both argued that such calls are legal.

Ginny Terzano, a spokeswoman for Gore, said Thursday night that neither he nor his attorneys have been informed by the Justice Department of Reno's decision.

"We would not be surprised if this was extended to an additional 90-day review because we simply don't think there has been enough time to fully explore the matter," Terzano said.

Two senior White House officials, including an aide in Gore's inner circle, and one of Gore's attorneys also said they had not been notified of a decision by Reno.

A Justice Department task force investigating alleged campaign money illegalities in last year's election had recommended that Reno move to the next stage in determining whether Gore's phone calls warrant a special prosecutor. Reno has followed the task force's recommendations throughout its investigation.

Reno was to seek permission Friday to announce her decision from the three-member special court that actually appoints independent counsels and also convey it to Illinois Rep. Henry Hyde, the Republican chairman of the House Judiciary Committee.

Hyde had cited Gore's phone calls and President Clinton's use of White House coffees and overnight stays to reward political donors in seeking the appointment of a special counsel.

However, Reno decided that the coffees and overnight stays in the Lincoln bedroom did not warrant a preliminary investigation, it was learned. Reno has until Oct. 15 whether phone calls by Clinton from the White House soliciting funds warrant taking the next step along the path for seeking a special prosecutor.

Clinton said Thursday that Reno should make her decisions without pressure "from me or from anyone

Teen crimes down

WASHINGTON — Arrests of teen-agers for violent crimes plunged 9.2 percent last year, and Attorney General Janet Reno said the second straight annual drop was not "a blip" but a real trend away from the juvenile crime wave that rose steadily from 1987 through 1994.

Midlanders get chance to buy a bit of Durango

By Alice Ashmore
Staff Writer

The public will get a glimpse at the unique products from Durango, Mexico, today during the La Entrada al Durango trade exposition under way at Midland Center.

The products, which include furniture, pottery, marble, textiles, foods and arts and crafts, have never been seen before in Midland. Mexican vendors seek to establish trade relationships with local businesses.

"I think it is great," said Midlander Gloria Salazar. "Quality-wise, this is really nice stuff." Ms. Salazar was at the exposition's opening on Wednesday, which was designated for businesses only.

"This marble stuff is just gorgeous," Ms. Salazar said. She said she also admired the corn husk dolls shown by another vendor.

First 'La Entrada al Pacifico' sign unveiled

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

The first highway sign designating the La Entrada al Pacifico Trade Corridor was unveiled Thursday near the intersection of Interstate 20 and FM 1788.

Governmental entities in Texas and Mexico are teaming up to provide a trade route from U.S. Highway 87 at Lamesa, south through Presidio, continuing on through Chihuahua City.

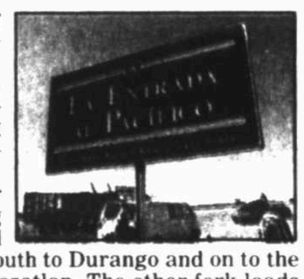

Members of MOTRAN and officials with the Texas Department of Transportation hosted the unveiling of the first sign, about 1/4 mile west of FM 1788 on Interstate 20, according to Charles Perry, president of MOTRAN.

With the efforts of Texas Rep. Tom Craddick, the state Legislature designated the corridor, which runs from Lamesa through Midland/Odessa to Fort Stockton and down to Presidio to the Texas/Mexico border.

House Bill 2115, signed into law by Gov. George W. Bush, also directed TxDOT to produce and post signs to designate the La Entrada al Pacifico along the length of the Texas portion of the corridor.

TxDOT has designed these signs and is currently fabricating enough to erect along the corridor. This will be continuing for the next few weeks, Perry said.

Present at Thursday's unveiling were Craddick and Maximiliano Silerio Esparza, governor of the state of Durango, Mexico.

South of the border, La Entrada al Pacifico follows existing highway through Chihuahua.

Here, the corridor forks, leading along already-established four-lane toll roads south to Durango and on to the deep water port of Mazatlan. The other fork leads west to the port of Topolobampo. Currently, only a railway leads the last 135 kilometers (about 90 miles) of the way to the Pacific Ocean port of Topolobampo.

A highway to connect this last leg has been proposed by the Mexican government. This will be the only avenue crossing the Sierra Madre mountain

Thunderbird squadron flies into town; pilots gear up for AirSho'97

Capt. Robert Givens is confident that his high-speed, high-profile job is about as safe as they come for one who flies supersonic aircraft in tight formation at all sorts of altitudes — up, down, all around.

Like a proficient piano player, Givens noted that success and survival depend on "practice, practice, and more practice.

"Beside practice, the next thing is concentration," said Givens, who is the "right wing" pilot in the U.S. Air Force Thunderbird squadron, a Nevada-based precision Air Combat Command unit that flies the F-16 Fighting Falcon.

WWII pilots inducted into hall of fame

Being among the first group of World War II pilots and aircrew members to be inducted into the American Combat Airman Hall of Fame is more than a "great honor" to Marine Corps ace and Medal-of-Honor winner Joseph Foss of South Dakota.

"Look at the rest of them," Foss said of the humbling experience of reflecting on his contemporaries, both living and dead, being memorialized. "I know every one of them, and those that are gone, I know. It's a high honor to get in their class."

Foss, a Grumman F4F Wildcat aviator who became governor of South Dakota in the post-war years, was among the honorees.

The hall of fame was established by the Confederate Air Force and by the American Airpower Heritage Museum at CAF headquarters at Midland International Airport.

Second car theory gains force as bodyguard prepares to leave France

PARIS (AP) — Crash survivor Trevor Rees-Jones remembered more Thursday but still not enough to provide a big break for investigators, who appeared to lean toward the theory that a second car was involved in Princess Diana's fatal accident.

The theory that a small car sideswiped Diana's Mercedes, possibly causing it to veer out of control, is "highly favored," an official with the national police told The Associated Press on condition of anonymity.

Bolstering that theory, another high police official said Thursday that police scientists have all but determined that traces of paint found on the Mercedes after the crash came from a Fiat.

That development is significant, because witness accounts have spoken of a small dark car in front of the Mercedes before it crashed and police found pieces of a tail light from a Fiat Uno in the tunnel, mixed with pieces of the Mercedes' headlight.

Rees-Jones, the 29-year-old bodyguard who was the sole survivor of the Aug. 31 crash, was questioned for a second time Thursday by police, who reported he'd taken "a step forward" in recalling the crash. But he still didn't remember the accident itself.

Specifically, the bodyguard was able to describe the moments after the Mercedes left the Ritz Hotel and before it arrived at the Rue de Rivoli a block away, a police official said. That could shed some light on the behavior of paparazzi tailing the Mercedes, and whether they bore any responsibility for the crash.

A hospital spokesperson, meanwhile, said Rees-Jones was likely to leave France on Friday for Britain.

"It's a probability," the spokesperson at the Pitie-Salpetriere hospital said on condition of anonymity, adding that a final decision "depends on the opinion of his doctors." Embassy officials said no timetable had been set.

Because Rees-Jones is a witness and not a suspect, investigators cannot prevent him from leaving. However, they could travel to Britain to question him again, if he agrees.

In any case, the bodyguard appears not to have given police the key information they need to crack the case. That information seems to be coming more and more from physical evidence.

The "second-car" theory holds that the Mercedes, speeding towards the tunnel, had to swerve to avoid a car probably entering the approach road from the right. The Mercedes then brushed the car and lost control, the theory goes.

In examining the theory, police are looking at the following clues:

- The witness accounts;
- The tail light and headlight shards;
- The paint traces, found on the Mercedes' front right side and on its side-view mirror. The revelation Thursday that the paint probably came from a Fiat made this evidence more important.
- Skid marks found in the tunnel. Judicial sources say 19 yards of marks were found leading up to the third pillar — veering to the left, which would support the idea that the Mercedes was swerving to avoid a car. Then, another set of skid marks 32 yards long was found, they say, leading to the 13th pillar, where the Mercedes crashed.

Another sign that investigators are taking the theory seriously is that during a partial reconstruction of the crash on Monday night, the investigating judge, Herve Stephan, had the wrecked Mercedes placed at three spots in the tunnel, including near the entrance.

A key question, though, is how a small car could have survived even a brush with the large, heavy Mercedes limousine.

Investigators also have been focusing on driver Henri Paul and his condition as a likely cause of the crash.

Confirming his earlier account, Rees-Jones told police Thursday that Paul seemed in "fine" condition the night of the crash, the police source said.

Tests have shown Paul — who died in the crash along with Diana and boyfriend Dodi Fayed — was legally drunk and on prescription drugs at the time of the accident.

They also showed he'd been drinking heavily for at least a week beforehand, and had been taking a drug used to treat the effects of alcoholism for several months.

Pope says no to intervention on possible Mother Teresa sainthood

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Pope John Paul II today ruled out any special intervention to speed up possible sainthood for Mother Teresa.

Speaking to reporters aboard the papal plane as he flew to Brazil, John Paul was asked whether he planned to change the Roman Catholic Church's rules for canonization. Five years must pass after death before the process can begin.

"I think it is necessary to follow the normal way," John Paul said. After Mother Teresa died last month, there was widespread speculation over whether the process would be speeded up.

President Fernando Henrique Cardoso was on hand to greet the 77-year-old pontiff at Galeao Air Base in Rio's harbor, where the pope's Alitalia MD-11 jetliner touched down at 3:45 p.m. local time.

A chorus of children waved green and yellow Brazilian flags and sang "A Dencao, Joao de Deus," Portuguese for "Bless Us, John of God."

In other comments on the plane, the pope indicated that a long-promised Church document on anti-Semitism and the Holocaust was still far from complete.

The document was promised in 1987 to Jewish leaders angered by the John Paul's reception of then-Austrian President Kurt Waldheim after his concealed past in the German army during World War II came to light.

John Paul was asked if the document would come out of a Vatican meeting this month of Catholic theologians to discuss the Christian roots of anti-Semitism.

The theologians must be listened to, the pontiff said, to "see what they say, and to decide what to do with the results."

He said the "attitudes at the time of the Holocaust are key," referring to the theme of the conference.

"One mustn't forget there were other holocausts," he added, without elaborating.

Ruddy-faced and speaking in a firm voice, John Paul came out of his compartment aboard the plane to speak to reporters about 3 1/2 hours into his flight to Rio, where he will spend four days. The tremor in his left hand was particularly pronounced.

In Rio, police took up positions in shantytowns and laborers scrambled to put the finishing touches on the city's preparations for the pontiff's arrival.

Congo park torn by war opens for badly needed tourist dollars

SABINYO MOUNTAIN, Congo (AP) — When war swept the former Zaire last year, human beings were not the only victims.

Ten rare mountain gorillas were killed in the Virunga National Park by soldiers and gunmen from Congo and Rwanda.

The park in this far northeast corner of what is again the Congo was closed due to poor security, shutting off funds vital for park maintenance, according to Vital Katembo, a conservationist with the Dian Fossey Gorilla Fund.

"It's so sad," said Katembo, who also works closely with the Congolese Institute for the Conservation of Nature. "I can tell you that the most fragile population of mountain gorillas is the one in this mountain range."

Some 350 of the world's remaining 610 mountain gorillas live in Virunga park. The rest are in the Bwindi Impenetrable Forest of Uganda.

Poachers, refugees, soldiers and rebels have ravaged the 3,200 square-mile Virunga park that straddles the borders of Uganda and Rwanda. Forests were depleted for firewood, and funds for conservation fell into the hands of corrupt officials under the regime for former President Mobutu Sese Seko.

Although armed insurgents from the former Rwandan army still roam the reserve, officials of the new government of President Laurent Kabila decided to reopen the park Sept. 10 to tourists ready to pay $120 each.

AP Photo

Lulenga, an eleven-year-old mountain gorilla, chews part of the roughly 30 pounds of foliage he eats daily in Congo's Virunga National Park in far eastern Democratic Republic of Congo.

One of the attractions is Lulenga, an 11-year-old gorilla who has cared for his family of 13 since his father, Rugabo, was killed by poachers two years ago.

Since 1995, 18 mountain gorillas have been killed, according to the International Gorilla Conservation Program.

One gorilla conservation official, who asked not to be further identified, said Congolese authorities were crazy to open the park with all the armed insurgents around.

But the visitors didn't seem to mind.

"It's not felt like a war zone at all," said Shona Ford of Australia, traveling with 28 other hikers through Africa.

During a recent nine-hour walk through dense forest and thick underbrush, the only assailants were stinging ants.

"If there was another wonder of the world, it would be the gorillas," Ford said. "It was magical."

The park has collected $15,000 from the 125 visitors who have shown up since early September, but park rangers, whose token salaries are less than 50 cents a month, have not been paid for a year.

Under Mobutu, only $8,450 of the average monthly tourist take of $140,000 went toward running the park, according to the ICCN, which manages Congo's eight national parks. The rest disappeared.

One of the first things Kabila did when his rebels captured Goma, the chief town in northeastern Congo, in November was to tell the African Wildlife Foundation that the safety of the gorillas was a priority.

But Katembo said nothing had changed since Kabila took over the country in May.

"Rehabilitation efforts have been slow in starting, and things are just getting worse in the meantime," he said. "The impact in terms of conservation efforts is terrible."

International agencies like the AWF provide equipment, uniforms and $20 monthly "bonuses" for park rangers.

Destruction of Virunga park began with the 1990-94 civil war in neighboring Rwanda.

In 1994, over 1 million Rwandan refugees fled to Zaire, settling at the foothills of the range of mostly dormant volcanoes.

They scoured the forest floor for food and cut down an estimated 36 million trees for shelter and firewood.

Local nurseries grew trees to replenish the supply. But last November the fighting that sent most of the refugees home hindered park rehabilitation.

"When we started, it was under very difficult conditions because we didn't know there would be a war," nursery manager Jean Bosco Sebazung said.

"But the war came, and we had no choice but to stop. Now we are trying to resume, but we fear something bad will happen again."

Katembo said Congolese soldiers admitted killing four of the gorillas out of fear. Others may have been shot by Hutu rebels for food, he said.

The presence of the rebels, he said, made it impossible to take a census of the gorillas or to track down an undetermined number of rangers who disappeared.

But he said despite the added danger to the gorillas that comes from exposing them to the possibility of human disease, he was encouraged by returning tourists.

"I feel like we've exploited them," said Chantal Russick of New Zealand. "But you want to go back now and sponsor gorillas and tell people about them. You want to do so much now."

Iraq blocks U.N. inspectors at suspected weapons sites

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Iraqis blocked U.N. weapons inspectors from three sites over the past few days, raising the prospect of new, tougher sanctions against Baghdad, U.N. officials said today.

Last June, President Clinton and Russian President Boris Yeltsin expressed their "firm intention to impose additional measures" on Iraq if the inspection team did not certify Iraqi cooperation when it reports to the Security Council this month.

The report is expected by Oct. 11.

A U.N. official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Iraqi authorities prevented inspectors "from even reaching the sites" last Saturday, Monday and again on Wednesday.

He said the team had left Iraq, and the chief inspector, Richard Butler, sent a letter to Iraqi Deputy Prime Minister Tariq Aziz demanding an explanation.

Another U.N. official said the Iraqis have not been sticking to their side of the bargain.

The inspectors must determine whether Iraq has complied with Security Council orders to scrap long-range missiles and mass destruction weapons under terms which ended the 1991 Persian Gulf War.

Until the inspectors certify full compliance, the council has refused to lift crippling economic sanctions imposed on Iraq after President Saddan Hussein sent his forces into Kuwait in 1990, triggering the Gulf conflict.

Report: Human rights routinely violated by Palestinian Authority

JERUSALEM (AP) — Human rights abuses ranging from jailhouse torture to denial of due process are widespread in Palestinian self-ruled areas, a New York-based watchdog group said in a report to be released Friday.

Human Rights Watch/Middle East called human rights conditions under Yasser Arafat's Palestinian Authority "deplorable" and urged quick action to ensure safeguards for the rights of suspects in custody and freedom of expression.

The findings echo reports by other international rights organizations as well as Palestinian groups, which have documented a pattern of abuse since the start of Palestinian self-rule in May 1994.

Arafat's spokesman, Marwan Kanafani, declined to address specific allegations in the Human Rights Watch report, but said any abuses were contrary to official policy. He also said concerted efforts were being made to improve human rights conditions.

"There are a lot of people working on this," Kanafani said.

For Palestinian leaders, the recurring criticisms have been an unwelcome turnaround from the years of the Palestinian uprising against Israeli rule, when widely reported mistreatment of Palestinians at the hands of Israelis helped win sympathy for their cause.

The report acknowledged the Palestinian authorities were hampered by lack of resources, training and experience.

It also noted the abuses occured while the Palestinian Authority faced enormous pressure from the United States and Israel to move against Islamic radicals responsible for terror attacks in Israel. The international community, it said, "must stop encouraging (Palestinian leaders) to address security demands without regard for human rights."

'Unless there is a dramatic shift in the (Palestinian Authority's) priorities...the abusive policies that prevail today will be the blueprint for the Palestinian future..'

— from report to be issued Friday by Human Rights Watch/Middle East

But external pressures were no excuse for "disregard for the rule of law," the report said.

The group's conclusions were based on a three-week fact-finding mission to the West Bank and Gaza Strip in July 1996, with follow-up work since then.

Among the findings:

■ At least 14 people have died in custody since 1994 due to ill-treatment.

■ Torture during interrogation sessions has become "routine," including methods such as prolonged and painful body positioning, beatings with fists, clubs and rifle butts.

■ Hundreds of "arbitrary detentions" have "violated defendants' most elemental due-process rights," including trials in secret summary proceedings.

■ Serious curbs have appeared on academic freedom and freedom of expression, such as the detention of a university professor who assigned students an exam question about corruption in the Palestinian Authority.

■ There has been interference with the Palestinian press, encouraging self-censorship and creating "a climate of fear and intimidation." This included the weeklong detention of a Jerusalem-based journalist who tried to provide uncut coverage of the Palestinian legislative council debating controversial issues.

Of great concern, the report said, is the danger that a pattern of abuse in the early years of Palestinian self-rule could set the stage for many years to come.

"Unless there is a dramatic shift in the (Palestinian Authority's) priorities ... the abusive policies that prevail today will be the blueprint for the Palestinian future," it said.

Canada recalls ambassador to Israel in protest

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Canada angrily denied involvement in an apparent assassination attempt by two suspected Israeli spies and said Thursday it was recalling its ambassador to Israel to protest the use of forged Canadian passports in the affair.

Foreign Minister Lloyd Axworthy said Canada had determined the passports were forged and that neither of the men were Canadian nationals. They were arrested last week in Amman, Jordan, after an apparent attempt on the life of a top official of the militant Palestinian group Hamas.

"There is no record whatsoever of any Canadian complicity in this matter," Axworthy said. "Canada had nothing to do with it."

Axworthy, who was in New York to attend the U.N. General Assembly debate, spoke to Israel's deputy foreign minister to relay word of the Canadian protest. He was to meet later with the Jordanian foreign minister.

Axworthy said that when Israeli agents use forged Canadian passports, it puts Canadian travelers at risk in the Middle East. He said Canada takes "great exception to the use of the reputation of Canadian passports for those kinds of purposes."

"We recalled our ambassador, which in terms of our relationship is a very serious step to take," Axworthy said.

According to Canadian reports, Israel had promised to bar agents from its Mossad spy agency from using Canadian passports after they were caught doing so in 1981. A former Mossad agent, Victor Ostrovsky, has written a book describing hundreds of blank Canadian passports stacked at Mossad headquarters in the 1980s.

Khalid Mashaal, political chief of the militant Palestinian movement, was assaulted last Thursday outside his office in Amman in what Hamas said was a botched assassination attempt by the Mossad.

Israel denies the charge.

12 killed in bus crash in France

MARSEILLE, France (AP) — A bus packed with Moroccan farm workers crashed through the security rails of an overpass in southern France and plunged onto a major highway Thursday, killing at least a dozen people.

The Operational Center for Fires and Rescues said 12 passengers died and 30 others were injured, several of them seriously. All the victims were Moroccan.

Rescue squads struggled for more than four hours to extricate passengers from the mangled wreckage of the mid-morning accident at a highway interchange north of this Mediterranean port. The bus crashed through security rails of the overpass near Coudoux and plunged 50 feet onto the A7 highway below.

Witnesses said the right front tire of the bus blew out as it climbed up the ramp of the overpass, sending the vehicle out of control.

State-run television France-2 said the bus was traveling from Casablanca, Morocco, to Italy, via Spain and France. It was not immediately known how many passengers were on the bus or which company operated it.

Promise Keepers prepare for multitudes of men to converge on Washington mall

WASHINGTON — Women are welcome to join the multitudes of Christian men who will congregate Saturday to pray and repent in the biggest rally in the nation's capital since the Million Man March, Promise Keepers leaders said Thursday.

"It's a man thing," said Phillip Porter, chairman of the board of the religious men's movement. "But an amazing number of women are coming with their husbands and children. Some will be in the crowd. There has never been any attempt to keep them out."

As the leading legions of the expected crowd of 700,000 men began to trickle into the city Thursday, Promise Keepers officials stressed that their focus was on outreach and reconciliation and denied any political ambitions. Some feminist and liberal groups accuse the seven-year-old movement of advocating submission of women and an ultra-conservative agenda.

"We're not marching or protesting," said Promise Keepers President Randy Phillips. "We're not politically motivated," he said, but rather seeking spiritual change.

Saturday's "Stand in the Gap" gathering on the grassy National Mall between the Capitol and Washington Monument is expected to be the biggest event yet for the multidenominational, multiracial Promise Keepers.

Founded by former University of Colorado football coach Bill McCartney, the group is named for the seven broad vows its male members strive to uphold with God's help. The men promise to follow Jesus Christ, make male friends, practice sexual and moral purity, love and support their wives and children, overcome racial and denominational prejudice, support their church and encourage other men to do the same.

Washington officials predicted that the gathering will be the largest since the Million Man March in October 1995, which by some estimates drew more than 800,000 black men for a "Day of Atonement." However, partly as a result of controversy over that crowd count, the National Park Service has stopped making official estimates. Promise Keepers leaders said they will neither predict how many followers will attend nor estimate the attendance.

However, the group has set up 12 huge Jumbotron TV screens, a village of teepees and 1,500 portable toilets, and said virtually all of the 90,000 hotel rooms in metropolitan Washington were booked for Friday night. The group has trucked in a million New Testaments of the Bible to give out to the crowd.

At a press conference on Thursday, African-American leaders of the movement stressed Promise Keepers' goals of racial reconciliation. The face of America's churches would change dramatically if "every Christian man will establish a committed relationship with one man of another race," said Raleigh Washington, a Promise Keepers vice president.

Because black and white Americans seldom attend the same churches, 11 a.m. on Sunday has been called the most segregated hour in the nation, he said. "Our goal is that by the year 2000, 11 a.m. Sunday will be the most integrated hour in America," he said.

The Promise Keepers were asked how their gathering differs from the Million Man March, which was organized by Muslim leader Louis Farrakhan stressed that African-American men take responsibility for their lives and actions.

This rally is Christian — founded in the belief that the only way to salvation is through Jesus — and the Million Man March crossed many religions, said Porter.

And the Day of Atonement focused on one group of — black men — while the Promise Keepers are calling all Christian men, said Washington.

The Promise Keepers hope that the mass rally will raise its profile in the national consciousness and also fill its depleted coffers. After initially budgeting $10 million for the event, the group has cut back by about $1 million.

Murder defendant wanted to know what killing felt like

WATERBURY, Conn. (AP) — An 18-year-old man recently discharged from the Marines allegedly bludgeoned a boy to death with a sledgehammer to find out what it feels like to kill somebody.

Todd Rizzo told police he struck up a conversation with 13-year-old Stanley George Edwards as the seventh-grader rode his bicycle by Rizzo's house Tuesday evening, then lured the youngster into the back yard by asking him if he wanted to hunt for snakes, prosecutor John Connelly said Thursday.

The boy knew Rizzo from the video store where Rizzo worked, Connelly said.

"Apparently he killed him for no other reason than to satisfy his curiosity about what it feels like to kill someone," the prosecutor said.

Rizzo was charged with murder and could get the death penalty. He was jailed on $3 million bail.

Connelly said that Rizzo was discharged from the Marines two weeks ago but that he did not know the circumstances. The Marine Corps said it had no immediate information on his background.

GORE: Reno calls for 90-day preliminary probe

The White House has accused Republicans of trying to force Reno's hand by threatening her with impeachment if she does not move against Clinton and Gore.

Expecting Reno to take the next step toward a special prosecutor, Gore last month hired two defense attorneys. One of them, James Neal, a Nashville, Tenn., lawyer who is also a former Watergate prosecutor, said Thursday that he would not charge legal fees — a move that drew instant criticism from the GOP.

"So-called pro bono or free legal services are supposed to be for the poor and the needy, not the vice president of the United States," said Republican National Committee chairman Jim Nicholson.

Expecting Reno to take the next step toward a special prosecutor, Gore last month hired two defense attorneys.

"Mr. Gore owes the American people an immediate explanation of this unusual fee arrangement: at the very least, it is a questionable exercise of the vice president's judgment," the Republican said in a statement.

Although Gore will not be billed for her services, Neal said he will charge the vice president for his expenses and for any time the law firm's associates spend on the case.

The Office of Government Ethics determined that "pro bono" legal work is a contribution that is excluded from federal gift bans. But the arrangement could open Gore to criticism that Neal might expect favors from the vice president or his staff in the future.

Vincent Falamony, an attorney with the ethics office, said the president and vice president are allowed to accept gifts — such as free legal work — if they don't solicit the gifts and don't do any favors in return. Another exception is when the gift is motivated by a longtime friendship.

Gore's office referred questions to Neal, who released a brief statement.

"The idea to volunteer my time to represent the vice president during this period was mine, based on my high regard for the vice president and my longtime friendship with his entire family," he said.

Falamony confirmed that an attorney in Gore's office sought and received clearance to accept the free legal work.

TRADE: Expo offers rare chance to find items in Midland purchase items from many of the vendors during the remaining two days of the trade exposition, said international trade specialist Fernando De Le Rosa of Midland.

Carlos Larralde, owner of Larralde Marble Art, is one of the vendors. He specializes in onyx, marble, and travertine stone work.

"We are the first factory on this continent to do this kind of work," Larralde said. His wares range from 12-foot-tall construction columns and marble tiles to lamps, vases, humidors for cigars, and decorative accessories.

Hank Heyn, the company's North American director said, "The marble rivals that of Italy." Larralde said the Laguna region of Durango is very similar to that of Carerra, Italy.

He said he exports much of his onyx to Asia. "The Japanese really appreciate the onyx," Larralde said. "They believe it scares the evil spirits away."

Larralde said he is thrilled to be in West Texas. "The Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce has been a beautiful host."

Maria Parra of Jericho Pottery has already had great success with her products during the trade fair. "As they were unpacking, someone came in and bought it all," said David Diaz, executive director of the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce. The pieces will remain on display, however, through the end of the exposition.

Speaking through Diaz, Ms. Parra said she hopes to have enough orders to ship another truckload of pottery to the Midland area. Ms. Parra is one of several pottery vendors at the trade fair.

Midlander Ruth Perry was looking at LoLo, a line of designer clothing for girls. "I think it is very well made and very well crafted," she said. Mrs. Perry said she was eyeing a dress or two for her daughter.

"The whole show has some very nice things; it has been great." she said. Mrs. Perry was especially impressed with the furniture, and by the cordiality of the vendors. "Everyone has been very friendly," she said.

A number of furniture manufacturers have made the trek to Midland to display their unique style of furniture.

The state of Durango is rich in natural resources, including iron, lumber and marble. The result is beautiful furniture that combines wrought iron with marble and wood. The styles range from traditional to colonial, and include leather and patio furniture also.

El Candil, a Durangoan manufacturer of wrought iron chandeliers, also makes wrought iron furniture. "We have been in business 40 years," said Claudia Valles. "My father started the company." Ms. Valles said her furniture is currently available in Florida, California and in Fort Stockton.

Gift items are also available at the exposition. Leidali Rojos, the owner of Sol De Papel, brought her line of handmade natural paper products to town.

The picture frames and stationery are made by hand, of all natural fibers and without chemicals. Flowers like gladiola, rose petals and carnations are incorporated into the paper for decoration.

Ms. Rojos said a local restauranteur is considering buying her paper for menus and wine lists.

Other gift items making their West Texas debut at the trade fair include metal picture frames, wood crafts, hand made candies and truffles, fruit preserves, spices, dolls and piñatas.

Gail Reilly, owner of Midland's Uptown Consignments, was pleased with the trade fair. "I hope they do very well," she said. "The prices are very reasonable." Her husband, Bill Reilly said the expo is "certainly good for businesses in the area."

The trade exposition is a cooperative project of the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, the Midland Chamber of Commerce, the Odessa Chamber of Commerce and the Midland Odessa Transportation Alliance (MOTRAN).

During the trade fair, the chambers have been "matchmaking" between the vendors and local businesses, in hopes of finding permanent outlets for Durango products in West Texas.

"I hope that the chamber keeps on doing these expos. The Mexican people are really eager to make alliances." Ms. Salazar said. She added, "The public needs to support it too."

The exhibition opens to the general public today and continues Saturday. Hours are 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. today, and from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday.

Interpreters will be available to facilitate communication, although many of the vendors do speak English, De La Rosa said. For more information, call the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce at 682-2960.

range.

Not only will the corridor give access to trade from the heavily industrialized areas of Mexico, good highways through to Mazatlan and Topolobampo would provide access to the global economic force of the Pacific Rim countries, Perry said.

North of the border, MOTRAN is pushing for the eventual upgrading of this highway system to a four-lane, divided thoroughfare, including access roads and bypass routes around cities so that traffic will not be stopped, Perry explained.

Such a highway would cost about $130 million — in addition to a $100 million project already on the books for upgrading the highway from Crane to Interstate 10, which is already on the designated "trunk system," Perry said.

All of the trunk system is slated to be upgraded to four-lane, divided status over the next 20 years.

Much of the roadway in Mexico is currently four-lane divided toll roads.

"It's a challenge for us to try and catch up with the Mexicans," Perry said.

Currently, the states of Arizona and New Mexico are aggressively competing for this Pacific-route trade, Perry said.

If Texas can get traffic moving faster along the corridor, it will bring the trade and attendant economic benefits this way, since much of the goods are heading toward the Midwest and East Coast areas.

"We've got a shorter route," Perry said.

FAME: Flying Tigers were noted for winning in 'early days,' says pilot just what has made this country great," Foss said late Thursday before his induction. "The way it is, too many people run by history. And they just think that all of these nice things that they enjoy today were (always) here, not realizing that men and women from the beginning of our country put their lives on the line and lost them. I represent, as do the other men, those that didn't get back."

Inducted into the hall of fame along with Foss were the late Maj. Shui-Tin Arthur Chin, a Chinese-American who flew for the Chinese Air Force beginning in the 1930s; Col. Francis Gabreski, a U.S. Army Air Forces P-47 Thunderbolt pilot in Europe and an Air Force F-86 jet pilot in the Korean Conflict; Col. David Lee "Tex" Hill, a pilot in the American Volunteer Group (or "Flying Tigers") in China; U.S. Navy Cmdr. Alex Vraciu, whose aerial victories in the Hellcat included kills in the "Great Marianas Turkey Shoot" carrier battle; Brig. Gen. Paul Tibbets, who commanded and trained the B-29 crews that dropped atomic bombs on Japan; and the B-25 aircrews of Jimmy Doolittle's squadron that bombed Tokyo on April 18, 1942.

"I feel quite honored to have the opportunity to represent the Doolittle Tokyo Raiders Association," said B-25 navigator Henry "Hank" Potter.

Gabreski, who scored more than 34 aerial victories in World War II and in the Korean Conflict, was unable to attend the ceremony.

Vraciu, who was the F6F Hellcat wingman of famed Medal of Honor winner Edward "Butch" O'Hare, "learned tricks from him that saved my life."

Vivienne Chin represented her late husband in the ceremony.

"We are very proud of him," said Chin's daughter, Susan Ennis of California. "He was very courageous," Matthew Chin of Virginia said of his father.

Hill noted that the Flying Tigers "got a lot of notoriety because we were the only ones (among the Allied forces) that were winning in the early days" of World War II.

From Tibbets' perspective, the "American people won the war," not the atomic bomb, "because it took the American people to build all the equipment to fight. We had the Marines, the Army, the Navy, all of those guys."

PLANES: Pilot says Thunderbird flight routine, unlike stunt flying, isn't dangerous

(From 1A)

He pays strict attention to "The Boss," Lt. Col. Ronald Mumm, who is the commander-leader of the Thunderbird squadron that is celebrating its 50th anniversary this year and at the weekend Confederate Air Force Fina AirSho'97 at Midland International Airport.

Givens, who flies to the immediate right of "The Boss" in the four-aircraft diamond formation, noted that "You have to have complete concentration while you are flying ... that close," which is from 18 inches to 3 feet apart wing-tip to wing-tip at speeds around 450 mph in most maneuvers.

"There are limits," he said, although the jet fighter is a Mach-2 aircraft that is capable of flying twice the speed of sound. The speed of sound is "normally" 600 to 650 mph.

The Thunderbirds' four-aircraft diamond-formation squadron is complemented by two solo F-16 aircraft.

Givens, who earned his wings in 1986 and who hails from Kentucky, is in his first season with the Thunderbird squadron.

"We don't call it 'stunt' flying," Givens, 32, said of the Thunderbirds' 75-minute routine, "because 'stunt' has such a connotation of being dangerous. And nothing we do is dangerous," since the squadron keys in on "practice, practice, and more practice" throughout its November-to-March training season before hitting the seven-month air-show circuit in April.

"We practice an incredible amount" in demonstrating the Air Force's air power and precision flying.

Givens, who is "excited" by jet aircraft, allowed that "I can hear an after-burner on one of these F-16s a hundred times a day and never turn my head.

"But I hear one radial engine from an old warbird, and I am looking for what it is."

For the Thunderbird pilots and their support and ground crews, Givens said that "It is an incredible treat for us to be able to take in an event like this in Midland with the Confederate Air Force," which flies 1939-1945 World War II combat aircraft.

"The heritage of those aircraft and the people that flew them, we can't even repay the debt that we have to those folks," Givens said. "It's just as exciting for me to be here to see that (the CAF) as I am sure it is for other people to see us fly."

Judge dismisses state murder charge against Ruby Ridge figure

BONNERS FERRY, Idaho (AP) — A judge dismissed a state murder charge Thursday against a man who allegedly killed a federal agent in the 1992 Ruby Ridge shootout.

Kevin Harris was acquitted of murder charges in federal court in 1993. In August, Boundary County prosecutors charged him with murder in state court. They also charged the FBI marksmen who fired the shot that killed Vicki Weaver, wife of white separatist Randy Weaver, with involuntary manslaughter.

Magistrate Quentin Harden ruled Thursday that the Idaho charges against Harris violate a state law barring prosecution of someone who faced the same charges in another "state, territory or country."

"To rule that the courts of the United States of America do not come under 'another state, territory, or country' would be an anomalous result — giving more credence to the courts of another country than to the courts of our own nation," Harden wrote.

Prosecutor Denise Woodbury, who charged both Harris and FBI marksmen Lon Horiuchi in August, had argued that the state double jeopardy law was meant to cover prosecutions in foreign countries, not the United States.

She declined to comment on Harden's ruling Thursday.

Harris, 39, of Republic, Wash., was accused in the shooting death of deputy U.S. Marshal William Degan and of shooting at another agent in the Aug. 21, 1992, shootout that sparked the 11-day siege at Weaver's cabin.

A friend of Weaver's, Harris was staying at the cabin during the shootout and was wounded by an FBI sniper's bullet.

Weaver's 14-year-old son, Sam, was killed in the gunfight. Vicki Weaver was later shot and killed during the siege by an errant FBI sniper's bullet.

Harden's ruling does not affect the involuntary manslaughter charge against Horiuchi, who has never been tried in any court. His lawyers have indicated they will try to move that case to a federal court.

Harris received the news that the murder charge against him had been dismissed at his job as a welder, said Diane Peters, his business partner at Eagle Industries.

"We were hoping what was fair and just would turn out," Peters said.

Harris did not immediately return a phone call.

Violent offenses by teens plunge

WASHINGTON (AP) — Arrests of teen-agers for violent crimes plunged 9.2 percent last year, and Attorney General Janet Reno said the second straight annual drop was not "a blip" but a real trend away from the juvenile crime wave that rose steadily from 1987 through 1994.

At her weekly news conference Thursday, Reno called on Congress to allocate more money for after-school programs "to make it stick." The Republicans who control Congress are writing bills that focus on trying more teen-agers as adults.

"This drop, I think, is real now," Reno said. "I don't think we can talk about it as a blip."

The drop during 1995 was 2.9 percent, and Reno said she had "worried since that it might be a blip. But now ... we are making real progress."

The FBI data also showed that arrests of teen-agers for murder dropped 10.7 percent in 1996, the third straight annual decline after a 169 percent increase between 1984 and 1993, when the juvenile murder rate peaked.

But Reno was not ready to declare victory in her top priority. More than any attorney general since Robert F. Kennedy, Reno has roamed the nation speaking on youth crime and calling for a balance between tougher penalties for wrongdoers and prevention programs to keep kids out of trouble and help young offenders return to society.

She thanked a reporter for noting that just Wednesday a Mississippi high school student was accused of killing three people and that last weekend a 15-year-old allegedly murdered a kid selling candy door-to-door in New Jersey.

"We still continue to hear of too many serious violent crimes committed by young people," Reno said. "We cannot be satisfied by this reduction in youth violence."

In 1996 for every 100,000 youths aged 10 to 17, there were 464.7 arrests for violent crimes, down from 511.9 in 1995 and 527.4 in the peak year of 1994, FBI figures showed.

This rate had spiraled up from 311.3 arrests in 1987 as drug gangs throughout the country recruited teen-agers as drug couriers and armed them.

"Then other kids they hung around with got guns, and then their friends and so on," said professor Alfred Blumstein of Carnegie Mellon University.

He attributed a major share of the decline in teen-age killing to police efforts to take guns from kids, such as aggressive searches in New York City, a gun bounty in Charleston, S.C., and voluntary gun searches in St. Louis.

Reno cited a combination of factors.

"The president's crime plan has provided more money and tougher laws," she said. "And communities across America and their police, their prosecutors, mentors in the community and young people themselves are working harder than ever to keep young people on the right track, to give them opportunity and to provide punishment and intervention when they stray."

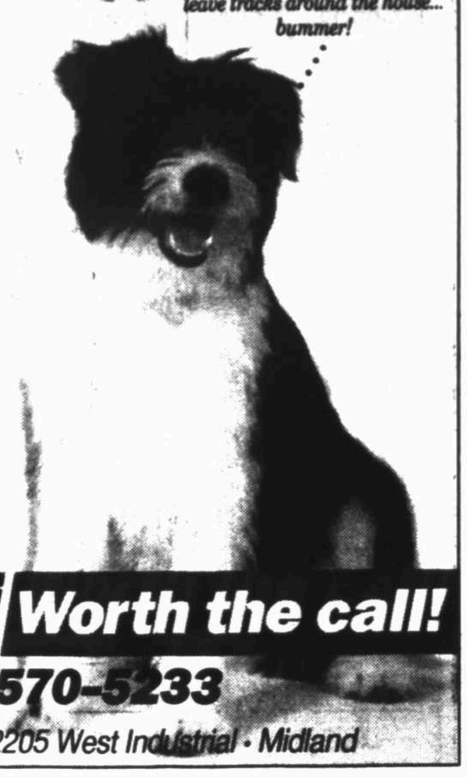

"Everybody deserves credit, because there's been a cultural revolution," said professor Jack Levin, who directs the Program for the Study of Violence at Northeastern University in Boston.

"It's not any one policy. We're putting violent kids in prison, putting at-risk kids in programs, finding after-school and summer jobs, forming partnerships between the police and community, taking guns off the street," Levin said. "Reno deserves credit for firmly planting the idea in the minds of Americans that they have to respond to youth violence."

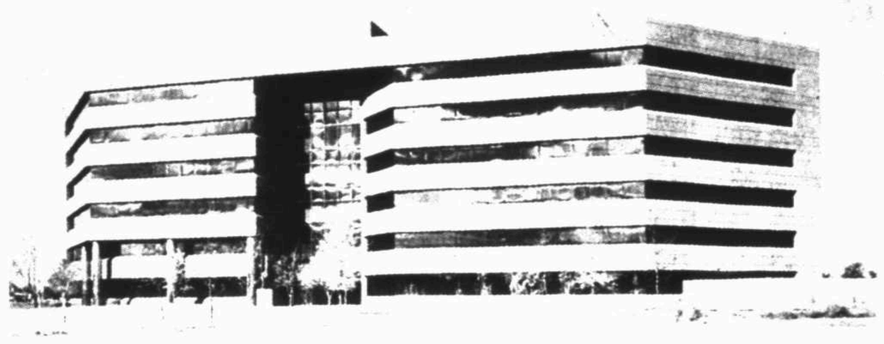

Based on a recent study of after-school programs in Massachusetts, Levin endorsed Reno's call for more resources. "The prime time for teen-age crime is between 2 p.m. and 7 p.m. after school is out but before parents get home from work," he said.

CAF AirSho'97 fetes both men and machines

This weekend's Confederate Air Force Fina AirSho'97 will offer all the excitement and thrills associated with any of the CAF's flying extravaganzas — vintage aircraft that won the war in the skies during World War II, the gleaming F-16 Fighting Falcons known as the Thunderbirds, and exciting recreations of air battles.

Since this year's show also coincides with the 40th anniversary of the founding of the Confederate Air Force, the organization responsible for all the vintage World War II aircraft that will be in the skies over Midland this weekend, the show takes on added prominence.

But there is a serious side to AirShow'97. It is being tied to the 50th anniversary of the U.S. Air Force and the 40th anniversary of the founding of the Confederate Air Force, two significant events in the history of aviation.

According to CAF Col. Joseph Nemmer, who is chairman of AirSho'97, the show will honor "all of our Air Force airplanes and the Army Air Corps airplanes" as well as the men and women who designed, built, flew, maintained and serviced them. AirSho'97 is not merely about a having a good time over the weekend. It is, rather, about the aircraft and the men and women who have devoted their lives to signifying their importance.

Since this year's show also coincides with the 40th anniversary of the founding of the Confederate Air Force, the organization responsible for all the vintage World War II aircraft that will be in the skies over Midland this weekend, the show takes on added prominence.

Of course, by its very nature the Confederate Air Force's AirSho definitely IS a good time and draws people literally from all over the nation to Midland for an excitement-filled weekend. It will be that, so go out and enjoy. You'll be glad you did!

Change for Mexico must begin at top

The rash of horrifying attacks on journalists investigating official corruption by police in recent months is a disturbing gauge of just how far Mexico has to go before it achieves true democracy. With each beating, harassment or threat to a journalist, Mexico takes another backward step.

In a democracy, journalists don't have to fear for their lives or those of their family or friends in doing their jobs. But that hasn't been the case in Mexico where political rhetoric about protecting the freedom of journalists has done little more than up the intimidation.

"We will not be intimidated," President Ernesto Zedillo declared recently in calling on Mexico City authorities to launch an extensive probe into the attacks on journalists and punish those responsible. Still, almost daily there are reports about yet more frightening attacks on journalists.

More troubling, with these attacks alleged to have been inflicted by Mexican police, who can be trusted to investigate?

As heartening as Mexico's recent election successes were, they pale in comparison to official corruption that still prevails. Nevertheless, electoral success cannot be discounted. It's a start. If Mexico does not elect officials who believe a free press is a critical and important foundation of democracy, change will not happen.

President Zedillo's denouncement of the attacks is welcomed. Change has to begin at the top.

CHARLEY REESE

House of Hope built on faith that made miracles

Down in Orlando, Fla., ground was broken recently for a boys facility for the House of Hope. An ordinary event? No, nothing about the House of Hope is ordinary. Nonbelievers who ventured there might think they had wandered into the Twilight Zone, where something supernatural is going on.

Reese

And Sara Trollinger, its founder, would agree, though it has nothing to do with spooks and the paranormal, just a faith in God that has worked what cynics would call miracles. Using my definition of "miracles" as highly improbable events occurring a highly improbable number of times, just consider this background.

Trollinger, a retired school teacher with no money and about as unknown outside her circle of friends as anyone, felt called about 12 years ago to provide a haven for hurting teen-agers. Now, would a banker lend an out-of-work schoolteacher on a small pension with only modest savings $180,000 to buy land for a non-moneymaking home for wayward children? Of course not. And none did.

But Trollinger, with serene faith, applied for a matching funds grant from a private foundation that had a history of never giving grants to organizations such as hers for purposes such as she had in mind. But the grant came through. The property was found. The matching funds were donated. Everyone but Trollinger was surprised.

In 1985 I met her and decided to write a column because I was impressed by the fact she would not take government money. The column appeared on a day when then President Ronald Reagan zoomed into Orlando for a quick three-hour event at a large attraction.

Now what are the odds that a busy president on a quick in-and-out trip is going to find a copy of the local newspaper? What are the odds that if he does, he will read a local column on the bottom of an inside page? Pretty darned high.

Yet President Reagan did find the paper, did read my column on his flight back to Washington, D.C.,and whipped out his personal checkbook and sent Trollinger $1,000 with a nice note. The next day I got calls from nervous White House staffers wanting to know who this Sara Trollinger was. Needless to say, I was surprised; Trollinger wasn't.

The Reagans maintained their connection with House of Hope. The president did what he wouldn't do for anyone else — he cut a tape in the White House endorsing the House of Hope. After his second term, he turned down a $50,000 speaking engagement to come to the House of Hope, where he spent an hour chatting with the girls and appeared gratis at a fund-raising dinner that cleared $250,000 for the House of Hope.

Do you see what I mean? It's all highly improbable that a retired schoolteacher, humbly religious, would interest presidents and tough-minded corporate executives, union workers and miscellaneous others in salvaging the lives of children. Improbable, but it happened.

And it keeps on happening. I won't tell you how the House of Hope got the 7 acres for the boys' facility. It might send you rushing off to church, and I don't want to be accused of proselytizing. Let me just suggest that someone higher than a president keeps an ear open and an eye on Trollinger and her teenagers.

Since the days of nothing but faith, 420 girls have gone through the residential program. They stay an average of 12 to 18 months. Unlike most social agencies, the House of Hope keeps up with its girls after they graduate. It has had a 95 percent success rate in reuniting the girls with their families. And these lives that have been turned around were not just mildly messed up — many were on the streets, into drugs, had been sexually abused, had attempted suicide. The House of Hope for most was their last hope. Now it will be able to work with boys.

Trollinger still has nothing much personally, and neither does her staff. It's not that kind of outfit. They don't beg. They make do with what they have or they do without. They always need help. But I don't go around there much. All that goodness, love and unselfishness make it hard for me to maintain my tough-guy composure.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

Promise Keepers offer cultural rebirth

We all know the persnickety type, surely: capable of flouncing away from a Grand Canyon sunrise because the horizon was insufficiently pink. Nothing is ever quite good enough for such folk, a lot of whom, it seems, earn their keep by dispensing free advice.

The Promise Keepers rally in Washington today has been drawing the attentions of just such critics. Don't tell them all these big bad men are serious about faithful, fruitful relationships with women and racial minorities. No way! What these guys are after is restoration of the good old days, when the husband snapped his finger and the wife smilingly presented the cocktail tray.

Murchison

National Organization of Women's Patricia Ireland knows. Boy, does she know! "They're like the Taliban in Afghanistan," Miz Ireland cheerfully explains. "They want to push women back behind the veil." They want women to "give up equality. ... They do things they should be doing anyway, and we go back to the 19th century." The whole thing is a plot to restore male dominance and headship, a la St. Paul.

That's what makes modern America great all right — the level of rational discourse. Hundreds of thousands of men congregate, pledging to "practice spiritual, moral, ethical and sexual purity," and all that feminists of Ireland's ilk can see in the occasion is the Massing of Oppressors.

The brotherhood thing is one of NOW's cardinal grievances. What, no women? NOW questions whether men should be doing anything by themselves, save hanging their heads in shame.

As it happens, Promise Keepers' founder, Bill McCartney, is quick to affirm men's culpability in the national "integrity shortage." He writes in Policy Review, the Heritage Foundation journal, "Men are more likely than women to break their marriage vows through adultery, violence or abandonment. Men are impregnating young women in record numbers and leaving them to deal with the consequences. Men are also more likely to abuse drugs and alcohol and then engage in a wide range of criminal behavior. What America desperately needs today are men who take responsibility for their actions, who are faithful to their families, who keep their word even when it's difficult or costly."

Hence Promise Keepers and the "national sacred assembly," the "day of heartfelt confession and prayer" it plans to bring off. "We believe," writes McCartney, "that God is again looking for a few good men who desire to honor Him in every area of their lives. In so doing, such men will refuse to abandon their wives during the tough times. They will balance their obligations at work with those at home; they'll gladly lose sleep to calm a child who hears ghosts under the bed."

Awful people, clearly! Why don't we just line 'em up and let Ireland have at 'em with the business end of a broomstick?

Because a better program commends itself — a program in the gentlemanly spirit that Ireland finds so fetching. The program is to smile and pass on, recognizing that Promise Keepers is on the cultural cutting edge, while NOW is, um, yes, well ...

Cultural revolution is what Promise Keepers proposes. Yes, it's revolutionary, in our me-contemplating age, to put duty over pleasure, restraint over self-expression, honor over the wholesale breach of solemn promises. But such is Promise Keepers' interest, such is its commitment.

Wouldn't the world be a better place if the Promise Keepers had their way? Only those who like cultural chaos could say otherwise. Chaos permits a man — and, for that matter, a woman — to do anything that fancy indicates. How about a divorce? Fine with the culture. Sex whenever, wherever, with whomever? Groovy, says the culture. "Culture," indeed! We used to use the word for higher purposes, as signifying the basic distinctions separating men and women from animals.

Well, who knows? Talk enough big bad men into keeping their promises in a spirit of self-effacement and obedience, and anything can happen. Keep your eye on Washington, D.C., this weekend for signs of cultural rebirth.

Readers sending letters that both enlighten, excuse

If El Nino steers blizzards to Georgia, I can stay warm by burning letters. The stack of unanswered ones looks like an Eskimo's woodpile.

I love mail, treasure many of the letters, but for the life of me can't figure when to deal with correspondence. One day I'll be organized. But for now, the pile grows with my guilt.

A dozen of you recently wrote to question the Ie Shima burial spot of reporter Ernie Pyle. He was first buried near where he perished on Ie Shima. Then, a few years after his widow died in 1945, Pyle's body was exhumed and moved to the National Memorial Cemetery of the Pacific in Punchbowl Crater, Hawaii. That's where many have visited the gravesite.

Johnson

Whenever I mention music, the mailbox overflows with passionate testimonials for one artist or another. Most of you know a lot more about music than I do, so reading these letters always is a learning experience.

Julian B. Marcum, 88, of Oak Ridge, Tenn., for instance, has a collection of 44 recordings of "Stardust," Hoagy Carmichael's tune. He wrote me all about it after I mentioned Willie Nelson's version.

"Incidentally," Mr. Marcum says, "the music has no 'bridge,' which is a rarity."

I looked it up. A bridge is "a musical passage linking two sections of a song or composition." Hoagy knows best.

A lot of you didn't get my recent joke about Hank Williams' son not becoming a musician. One reader was downright angry because "any self-respecting Southerner should know the name and music of Hank Williams Jr."

They say if you have to explain a joke, it's weak. Let me explain: I know about Junior. I meant Junior's so-called music stinks.

Readers not only enlighten me, they excuse me. A delightful letter from Helen McCain Cargo of Tuscaloosa, Ala., says it's perfectly all right for me to tell my 9-year-old niece a joke about kudzu that uses the word "hell." I was in trouble with my sister because Chelsey repeated the joke and the word at a Brownie function.

"It is a forceful, descriptive word that appears frequently in the Bible to frighten people about what might happen if they do certain things – and that includes planting kudzu," Ms. Cargo writes.

"Perhaps 'Run like hell,' might prove to be a more effective admonition to the young than 'Just say no' has been," she adds.

A lovely letter from Susan Larson of Lilburn comments on a column about books that shaped my life. Many were children's books, because it is as a child that your undimpled brain takes a form.

For her own 50th birthday party, Susan is illustrating 50 poems that influenced her life. The party theme is "Garden of Verses."

A friend questioned her use of so many children's poems, and Susan got a tad defensive. "When I was 6, the only Milton I knew was Berle," she writes.

Her feature poem, by the way, will be "Warning" by Jenny Joseph, which begins like this: "When I am an old woman I shall wear purple/With a red hat which doesn't go, and doesn't suit me...."

When I am an old woman I'll take half a day to answer a great letter like that, and spend the other half looking for a stamp.

Police say family allowed toddler to starve to death while maintaining insurance payments

PADUCAH, Ky. (AP) — Police investigating the death of 2-year-old Jeffrey Mitchell walked through the living room of the family's home. Nice furniture. VCR. Stereo. Golf clubs.

Then they looked in the kitchen and found little more than a bottle of cooking oil, a spice rack and trays of ice cubes.

Jeffrey had died of starvation, and his gaunt parents are charged with murder and wanton endangerment.

"You saw his distended stomach and bones and that was it," said Tim Kaltenbach, the county prosecutor. "It was like something out of the Third World."

Investigators say the family went days at a time without eating, yet had enough money to keep on paying the premiums on their children's life insurance and lived in an immaculate apartment in one of the better neighborhoods of this western Kentucky city of 27,000.

Investigators were at a loss to explain why it happened. They were investigating the father's claim that he had lost his job and had fallen into debt.

"I've never seen anything like it," said Detective Bruce Watson, an 18-year veteran and father of three sons. "We had a lot of grown men crying after what they had seen. This kind of thing is not supposed to happen in the United States."

Billy Gene Mitchell, 45, and his wife, Susan R. Mitchell, 37, pleaded innocent Wednesday. Bail was set at more than $1 million apiece. The couple, both unemployed, said they couldn't afford lawyers.

Inside the couple's apartment, disgusted detectives found two surviving siblings — ages 3 and 6 — also suffering from malnutrition. Jeffrey's 3-year-old sister, Melanie, weighed less than 17 pounds and couldn't hold her head up without help.

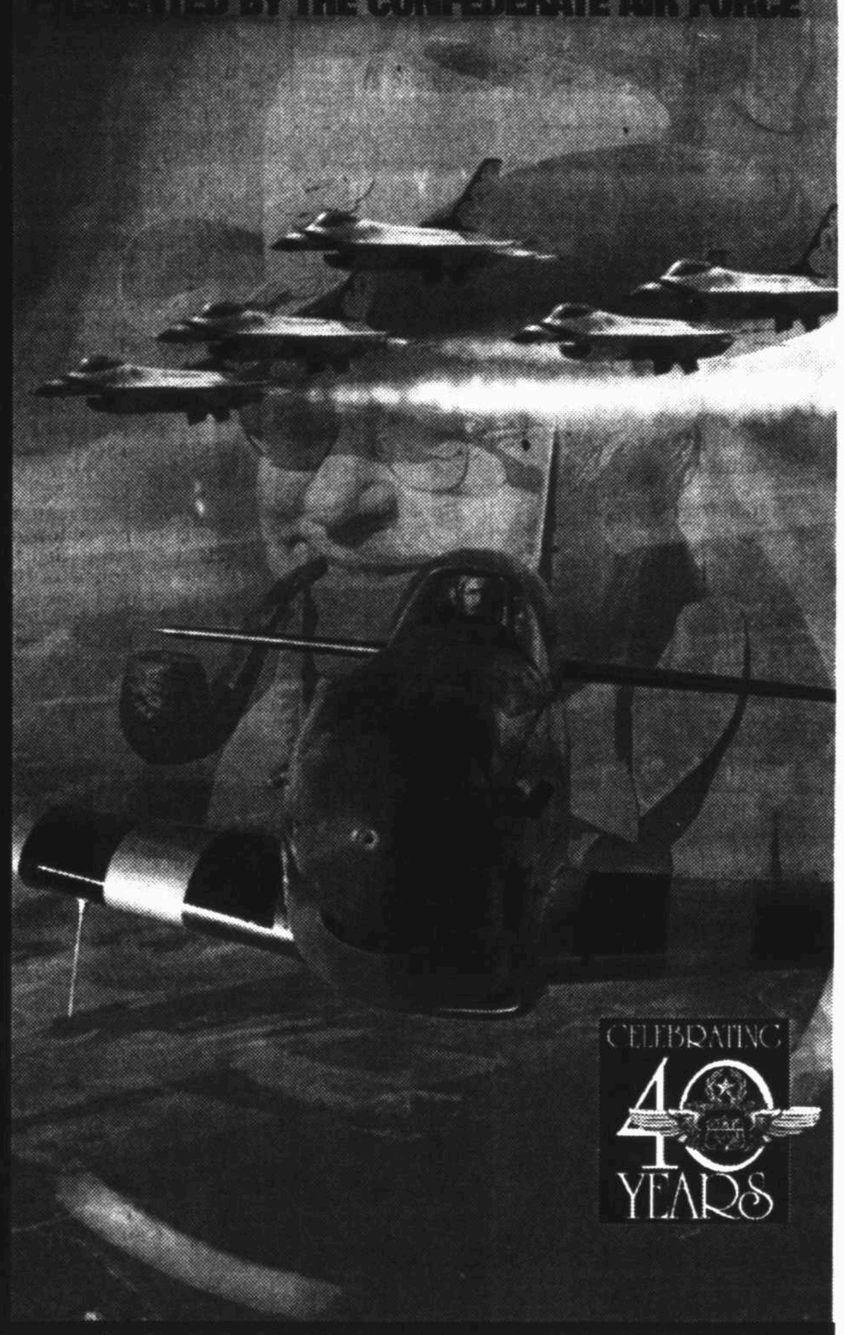

Detectives said the family's kitchen was empty, with only a jar of water and two trays of ice cubes in the refrigerator. It appears the family went days without eating and fed the children nothing but water for the last week, police said.

Mitchell, who retired from the Air Force as a technical sergeant in 1994, told police that he didn't know where to turn for help and that welfare agencies told him last year that his pension — $1,400 a month — disqualified him for food stamps or other benefits.

"He just kept saying he didn't know who to contact," Watson said.

Turf war between banks, credit unions heads for Supreme Court

Cox News Service

WASHINGTON — When Torpedo Specialty Wire in Rocky Mount, N.C., joined a credit union two years ago, Brenda Dickens jumped at the chance to move her money out of a local bank and stop paying nearly $20 a month in bank fees.

The bank tried to hold on to her by offering lower checking fees, she said, but Dickens, 36, a document control coordinator, refused to be swayed. "With the bank, I couldn't even get a line of credit and I'd been with them 14 years," she said. Now she has a checking account, savings account, car loan and line of credit with Freedom Federal Credit Union.

But the battle for Dickens' money — and that of millions of other consumers — is far from over.

On Monday, attorneys representing credit unions and banks will face off in the U.S. Supreme Court in a case that could affect the way families across America handle their money. A ruling in AT&T Family Federal Credit Union v. First National Bank & Trust Co. is expected by next summer.

At issue? Just how far afield credit unions can go shopping for members.

The banks argue credit unions should stick to their original charter: to provide financial services only for employees of the single company that sponsors them and to target low-income people who might not get bank services. Otherwise, the not-for-profit credit unions, which typically offer customers lower fees and better interest rates than banks, have an unfair competitive edge, the banks claim.

"It's unbelievable the government would set up someone to compete directly with me and give them a tax break," said Michael C. Miller, president of First National Bank & Trust Co. in Asheboro, N.C., where the case now before the Supreme Court originated. Bankers say the average credit union member, far from being nearly penniless, earns more than the average American.

The credit unions, which began broadening their customer base more than a decade ago to stay healthy, say consumers should have the right to choose where they put their money. The banks, they claim, are just being greedy. Nationwide, credit unions have about 70 million members but only a 2 percent share of the financial services market, compared to the banks' 27 percent, according to industry officials on both sides.

"Credit unions just are not a threat to banks," said Dennis Lindsey, a spokesman for Georgia Credit Union Affiliates. "We are the moral equivalent of a stone in the shoe of a Mafia boss ... a minor irritant."

But banks already face powerful competition in the lucrative commercial market from brokerage houses, insurance companies and other financial services firms. The threat that credit unions pose to their consumer market is not one they can afford to ignore, analysts say.

Federal credit unions first sprang up in the mid-1930s when lawmakers tried to help Americans reeling from the Great Depression. The goal of the Federal Credit Union Act of 1934 was to provide loans for people with "small means," and the law limited membership to "groups having a common bond of occupation or association or to groups within a well-defined neighborhood, community or rural district." That meant members of each credit union typically came from the one particular company or community that sponsored it.

But when major industries started downsizing, merging and going belly-up in the 1970s and early 1980s, they stranded their affiliated credit unions. In 1981 alone, 222 federal credit unions failed, according to the National Credit Union Administration 1/8NCUA 3/8.

In 1982, NCUA — the agency that regulates federal credit unions — began allowing them to reach out to companies outside their sponsor. Once an outside company joins the credit union, its employees can become members.

Since then, 3,569 of the 7,244 federal credit unions have branched out to add more than 10 million new members, according to the credit union industry. Credit union leaders say they want to be able to add members from among the 62 million people who work for companies too small — those with fewer than 500 workers — to start credit unions of their own.

There also are about 4,600 state-chartered credit unions. The Supreme Court case is not likely to have a direct impact on them, but some are facing similar local challenges. For instance, a bill pending in the Georgia state legislature seeks to prevent state-chartered credit unions from expanding.

When it came to expansion, AT&T Family Federal Credit Union in Winston-Salem, N.C., was a classic example.

The core of its "family" once was AT&T. Then, in the 1980s the company started closing offices, shifting business to other parts of the country and laying off workers.

But the credit union is not struggling. In 1987, it started shopping for new members, signing up Pharr Yarns, a textile plant an hour down the road from Winston-Salem. In the decade since then, it has added about 320 more companies, from soda bottlers to concrete pourers, and its operation reaches from North Carolina to Florida to Ohio. Its membership has grown from about 35,000 to 163,000 and its assets from $175 million to $525 million, according to a financial statement filed with NCUA.

"What you're looking for is diversity," said Rick Miller, AT&T Family's senior vice president of corporate development. "It can be scary being dependent on one company."

What's scary, says First National Bank & Trust Co.'s Miller, is watching the credit union gobble up potential customers. His bank was one of five local banks, along with the American Bankers Association, to sue NCUA and AT&T Family.

The credit union "came into our community ... took our top 10 list (of employers) and literally started at the top," Michael Miller said. "They cut us off at the pass. We're fighting for the same customer."

Navy F-14 crashes off East Coast

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP) — A Navy F-14 Tomcat fighter jet on a routine training flight crashed Thursday in the Atlantic Ocean off the East Coast. The Navy said one crew member was rescued and a search was under way for another.

It was the seventh military plane crash since Sept. 13. The six earlier crashes happened within a week and led to a one-day break in training flights for a safety review by all the services.

The Navy jet went down about 4 p.m. about 65 miles east of Elizabeth City, N.C., said Coast Guard Petty Officer Harry Craft.

Craft said a Coast Guard helicopter rescued the plane's radar intercept officer.

"We have recovered the backseater and he supposedly was in good shape, and we're still on scene now looking for the pilot," Craft said.

The plane was training with another aircraft when it went down, said Mike Maus, a Navy spokesman.

Both crew members ejected from the plane, Maus said.

The fighter was assigned to the Oceana Naval Air Station at Virginia Beach. The Navy said three of its ships were within 40 miles of the crash site and, along with aircraft from the Navy and Coast Guard, were participating in the search.

Lt. Joe Walker, a Navy Atlantic Fleet air force spokesman, said the plane belonged to fighter squadron 101 at Oceana.

Mystery writer Joan Nixon hit publishing jackpot on 13th try

By Georgia Temple
Staff Writer

Joan Lowery Nixon held to her resolve to find a publisher, despite receiving 12 rejection letters. The 13th letter arrived. Would they or wouldn't they publish her manuscript?

"We love your book, and we want to publish it, and if you had put your phone number in, we would have called you up," the letter began, sealing the fate of the "Mystery of Hurricane Castle."

That was in 1964. Since then, whispers and ghosts are all that remain of the original publishing house, Criterion, which has changed hands many times over the years, and the books the house published — her first five — are out of print. However, she's not.

"In 1994, my 100th book was published," said the former Midlander who now lives in Houston.

Called "the grande dame of mysteries for young readers" by School Library Journal, Mrs. Nixon is currently president of the Mystery Writers of America. She is the recipient of, among others, four Edgar Allan Poe Awards, two Western Writers of America Spur Awards, 18 awards in various states that give Children's Choice awards — where the children vote for the books — and a Texas Institute of Letters award for the children's book, "The Alligator Under the Bed," in 1974.

Mrs. Nixon will present a "Writing to Sell" seminar, sponsored by Midland Kappa Delta Alumnae Association, from 8 a.m. to noon Saturday at First United Methodist Church Fellowship Hall.

"It's for all writers," Mrs. Nixon said. "I'm going to emphasize three different types of books that publishers are looking for. One is the chaptered book for children, and one is the adult mystery, and the third one is the memoir." She credited the popularity of memoirs to the public's interest in other people's lives.

"The memoir is not just an autobiography. It's a novelization of your life. Not a straight telling, but telling it with dialogue, setting up a scene, telling it with characterization, the whole bit."

Cost of Saturday's workshop is $35 at the door. Proceeds go to Centers for Children and Families. Topics include "Tricks of the Pros,"

First 12 rejection letters caused her to "shed a few tears," Nixon said, but she remained determined.

Wenner paid $2 for the $1 ticket at a Pennsylvania hardware store that was selling tickets for a company called Pic-A-State. HELPING ONE OF THEIR OWN

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

Scott Almy, general manager of the Olive Garden, Laura Moore, sales manager, and employees of the restaurant are raising money for Cissy Gibson, a co-worker who suffered a brain aneurysm and has no health insurance.

Employees pitch in to help uninsured co-worker

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Employees of the Olive Garden restaurant are banding together to help one of their co-workers.

Cissy Gibson, a divorced mother of two, went to Memorial Hospital and Medical Center Friday with what she thought was a migraine, only to discover it was a brain aneurysm.

Laura Moore, the restaurant's sales manager, said doctors are hopeful they won't have to operate. Ms. Gibson — who was moved from the Critical Care Unit to a private room earlier this week — should be in the hospital another week to 10 days. Her children are staying with their father.

"Emotionally, she's shocked and stunned, as we are, at what happened," Ms. Moore said. "We had just seen her the night before; nothing prepared us for the phone call we received Friday."

Ms. Gibson is still suffering some severe headaches but is eating well and talking about returning to work, she said.

Meanwhile, the restaurant staff is working to ease one of Ms. Gibson's concerns — her medical bills.

She didn't have insurance, so Olive Garden employees are making donations, including portions of their tips, and the restaurant has made a donation from its monthly incentive fund.

Ms. Moore said she thought about what the restaurant could do to help, and discussed the situation with the regional director who oversees eight stores. She said he was responsible for expanding the effort and now Olive Garden restaurants in the Dallas region and as far west as Arizona are sending contributions — whether from store incentive funds or portions of tips from the waitstaff.

"Right now we've raised close to $1,300," Ms. Moore said.

Employees have also set up a trust fund at the Norwest branch at Loop 250 and Midland Drive. Ms. Moore said customers have been inquiring about the trust fund, and a Norwest Bank official said there have been some deposits made to the account.

Fantasy can come true at fire academy

By Rick Lopez
Staff Writer

Ever wonder how much a firefighter's protective gear weighs, or what it is like to extinguish a house in full blaze?

"I think everybody's wanted to be a firefighter at one point of their childhood," said Midland Fire Department's Training Chief Monty Mansell. "This is their opportunity."

Midlanders who are willing to spend 13 weeks in the rubber boots of a firefighter are encouraged to enroll in the Citizen's Fire Academy, which starts Oct. 16 and continues every Thursday thereafter except on holidays, Mansell said. Each class begins at 7 p.m. and ends at 10 p.m.

Mansell said the program is free of charge and open to anyone 18 or older. Application forms will be printed in the Sunday edition of the Reporter-Telegram. Only 25 people will be allowed to participate.

He said that Oct. 5-11 is National Fire Prevention Week and the Fire Department will hold activities throughout the month.

Meanwhile, those who attend the classes will learn about fire suppression techniques, emergency medical services and the dangerous and crucial situations the Fire Department is exposed to everyday.

"We do it all," Mansell said. "If someone is in trouble, they call the Fire Department. If they need more help, they call the Police Department."

A different unit of the department will be highlighted during each session, Mansell said. Though each session begins at the same time, the location where class is held varies. Mansell explained that some of classes are held at the 9-1-1 Communications Center, some at the Midland International Airport and some at the MFD Drill Field.

Highlights of this year's class include a tour of the communication center, where calls to the municipal fire and police departments and Midland County Sheriff's Office are directed. The communications center is vital for coordinating a plan for the natural disasters, Mansell said.

The students will also be afforded the chance to participate in a free CPR class.

"If everybody knew CPR, the chances of survival would be a lot better," Mansell said.

Visiting organist knows how to push all the right buttons

By Georgia Temple
Staff Writer

Organist David Higgs has traveled over a million miles by air to hit the right buttons at the right time.

"The buttons are not always in the same location on each organ," said Higgs, who is to perform on the pipe organ 7:30 p.m. Monday at First Presbyterian Church. "Each organ is unique and each acoustic is unique, so it takes a lot of time trying out the different sounds and choosing the best possible sounds for a particular passage."

He is working with 21 students at Eastman School of Music, where he is head of the Organ Department. "It seems like I'm always leaving something. Something isn't done. I never have a time when I can say all my little jobs are done or all my phone calls are returned."

All told, the department has around 40 organ majors and about 15 secondary organ students.

"It's a good-sized group," said Higgs, agreeing that the number of organ students has increased in recent years. Studying organ "went through a lull in the late '80s to mid-90s. A lot of the smaller organ programs in colleges closed up. Now I'm seeing them open

Abstinence is answer, speakers urge parents

By Richard Enos
Staff Writer

A local non-profit agency brought the message of abstinence-only sex education to Midland parents on Thursday, in the hopes that they'll pass the word on to their teens.

Judy Rouse, executive director of the Crisis Pregnancy Center, and guest speaker Dr. Patricia Sulak, told an audience gathered at Midland's Holiday Inn Convention Center that's there a clear need for abstinence education across the nation.

Ms. Sulak is an obstetrician and gynecologist with Temple's Scott and White Hospital and Clinic. She presented parents with a slide show of facts on sexually transmitted diseases and teen pregnancy.

The doctor supported abstinence education's argument that the only certain protection against disease and teen pregnancy is abstaining from sex until marriage.

Ms. Rouse led off the seminar by saying that the costs of teen sex are high for society.

"We are under quite a crisis of teen pregnancy, out-of-wedlock pregnancy," she said. "Also consider that we're in an

Moonflower becoming herbal high of choice for basin youth

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

With current emphasis on New Age, herbal healing, some West Texas youth are turning to the plant kingdom for some holistic highs — sometimes with fatal results.

Two El Paso teen-agers were hospitalized recently for ingesting a hallucinogenic tea brewed from jimson weed, also known as loco weed.

In Midland and Odessa, however, the hallucinogenic plant of choice appears to be the moonflower — which is related to the morning glory.

There have been three cases of moonflower poisoning in Midland and Odessa in past months, according to Leo Artalejo, director of the three-year-old West Texas Regional Poison Center, which serves the Permian Basin.

Cases of moonflower, morning glory or jimson weed poisonings also have been reported in Big Spring, San Angelo and Sweetwater, Artalejo said.

While moonflower and morning glory seeds contain a hallucinogenic compound similar to LSD, various compounds in the seeds can be very toxic and damaging to internal organs, Artalejo said.

Most manufacturers of seeds cover them in a foul-tasting fungicide or fumigant, making any tea brewed from them extremely unpalatable.

The jimson weed, sometimes known as thorny apple, is native to West Texas and its toxic alkaloid chemicals have profound effects on the body, he said.

The jimson weed is loaded, stem, leaves and all, with scopolamine, atropine and other dangerous chemicals commonly used in modern medicine.

In high concentrations, however, these chemicals can cause death as well as a hallucinatory experience.

About three years ago, two El Paso youths died after drinking jimson weed tea, Artalejo said.

"They tend to focus on the hallucinations without consideration of the toxic or lethal effects," Artalejo said.

The toxicity of the jimson weed plant varies widely with changes in its growing conditions — so that a given amount of plant might cause a hallucinatory experience one time and death another, he said.

Mixing any of these plants with alcohol accentuates their toxic effects and therefore increases the danger, he said.

The West Texas Regional Poison Center is the only such center in the United States that is staffed 24 hours a day with both English- and Spanish-speaking personnel.

For questions relating to any drug or toxin ingestion, call the center at 1-800-POISON-1, (1-800-764-7661).

NIXON: 'Believe in yourself,' author tells writing students

(From 1B)

"Markets You Can Break Into" and "How to Get Published."

"There are moments of discouragement, and a book can be rejected for any of a dozen reasons. ... One thing I tell people when I'm teaching a writing class — believe in yourself."

Mrs. Nixon, also a writer of nonfiction for adults and a co-author with her husband, Hershell, admitted she had "shed a few tears" over rejections. Each of her first 12 rejection letters made her feel "terrible," she said. "But I was determined."

The Nixons and their now grown children, Kathleen, Maureen, Joe and Eileen — lived here from 1970 to 1974. "I had kids in San Jacinto, Edison and Midland High School," said Mrs. Nixon, who taught creative writing at Midland College.

A writers conference inspired her to consider becoming a writer. Her children convinced her to become a novelist.

"I had two preschoolers and two kids in elementary school when we moved to Texas — Corpus Christi. I told my family, 'I heard two people speak about writing for children, and it sounds so interesting.' The two in school, Kathy and Maureen, got together, and they came to me and said, 'Momma, if you are going to write for children, then you have to write a book, and it has to be a mystery, and you have to put us in it.' And I did."

HELP: Workers offer emotional support

(From 1B)

The restaurant's employees are grateful for community support.

"We don't have a goal in mind," Ms. Moore said. "Whatever we can get we will be happy with. She doesn't have any insurance and will be out of work about a month, if she even gets to come back. I don't know what the stipulations will be."

In addition to financial support, Ms. Gibson's co-workers are offering emotional support, visiting her and taking her pasta, rubbing her feet and doing whatever else they can for her.

It is, Ms. Moore said, the least they can do for such a devoted coworker.

"She has worked here right at a year in November. She's a devoted employee, always willing to help out. If we need someone to come in on their day off, she'd volunteer. She's always very happy. And right now she needs all the support she can get."

Depression Awareness Month announced

From Staff Reports

October is National Depression Awareness Month, according to Glenwood Hospital officials in Midland.

This marks the sixth year that the American Psychiatric Association, National Institute of Mental Health and other associations have set aside October for depression awareness. Depression, according to Dr. Ravi Medi, a member of the Glenwood staff, is "very treatable." The key, of course, is to recognize the symptoms.

"There is help available for individuals experiencing depression and who feel as though there is no hope," Medi added. "When depression disrupts an individual's life, it affects the family as well."

Next Thursday is National Depression Awareness Day for the Permian Basin area. Free screenings will take place at two sites in Midland and one in Odessa. The screenings will primarily help participants to identify symptoms of depression.

Individuals and families are urged to go by one of the free screening locations on Thursday. Those sites, and times, are:

— Glenwood Hospital in Midland, 10 a.m. to 7 p.m.

— Westwood Medical Center in Midland, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

— Odessa Regional Medical Center, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

For additional information, call Cassie Coker at Glenwood, 563-1200, or toll free at 1-800-527-4901.

Jury acquits Smith on theft charges over check

From Staff Reports

A Midland jury deliberated for three hours Thursday before acquitting Lloyd Wayne Smith on theft charges. Smith, 30, was accused of stealing more than $75,000.

"It was a single financial transaction, a check, involving two people from Alpine," said Assistant District Attorney George Patterson.

Patterson tried the case before 142nd District Court Judge George "Jody" Gilles.

"We are very disappointed," Patterson said after the verdict was returned. He said he felt the state had a strong case against Smith. "But we respect the decision of the jury," Patterson said.

"Putting Trash In My Neighbor's Basket?"

Of course not. At least not knowingly. Maybe I toss a limb over his fence once in awhile but it really came from his tree anyway. But we do know better.

So here goes a pet peeve that keeps appearing in my daily travels around the city. Driving in a well kept residential area, you'll see workers for a lawn service finishing up their art, and residents of well kept homes doing their weekly chore of yard work. Neat job, And, here they are blowing the grass clippings and trash into the street! Drive down the road a bit to a vacant west side area, and someone's left an old couch. Drive up the street to a friend's house, and he's picking up the beer cans tossed into his yard the night before. "Who cares?" you say. Only me or you if we get the trash. If you toss it or blow the trash out in the street, somebody ends up with it. God tells me to "love my neighbor as myself." Matthew 22:39. Enough to keep my own trash, and properly dispose of it. A little boy, remembering that great Bible prayer but a bit confused, prayed, "God, forgive us for our trash baskets and forgive those who put trash in our baskets!" Or something like that!

Twisted 'U-Turn' a Stone's throw away

Film's message: Weird hicks could lurk at every turn

Sean Penn gets turned around in Oliver Stone's twisted new movie, "U-Turn."

By Ted Anthony
Associated Press

■ Review

Let's make one thing clear from the outset— something much of movie-viewing America undoubtedly already knows: Oliver Stone, it's evident, needs a therapist. Or at least a high colonic.

That said, the best art of any age typically comes from the dysfunctional artist, and "U-Turn" is just that — Stone's oddball glimpse into a shadow America that no one wants to believe exists but that undoubtedly does.

Stone has been quoted as saying he wanted to make a movie that wouldn't be reviewed in the editorial pages as "JFK," "Nixon" and "Natural Born Killers" were, and "U-Turn" will probably succeed. He is adept, as always, at making America his collective therapist, and millions will absorb his angst as he chronicles a few days in the life of a hapless visitor to the washed-out desert town of Superior, Ariz.

Bobby Cooper (Sean Penn), armed with a duffel bag full of cash, just wants to get to Vegas to pay off a debt when his red "1964 1/2" Mustang breaks down on a blistering, cracked Arizona highway. The nearest town, Superior, is three miles away, so he makes a U-turn and heads on in.

And the nightmare begins — a tions of what viewers really like, and what they really, really don't like.

Some early signs have already been smudged. After Week 1, for example, it looked as if NBC had severely dented CBS' four-comedy block on Monday with its "League of Their Own" lineup of female comedies. But the early news from Week 2 was that NBC's Monday comedies, most of which are despised by critics, fell backward in a big way.

That was the second bit of unhappy news for NBC, which sailed through much of the first week looking as if it was heading for an ever more dominant season. NBC threw a monster Thursday NBC at its competitors, with live "ER" and a new "Seinfeld" that actually set records for that now venerable show.

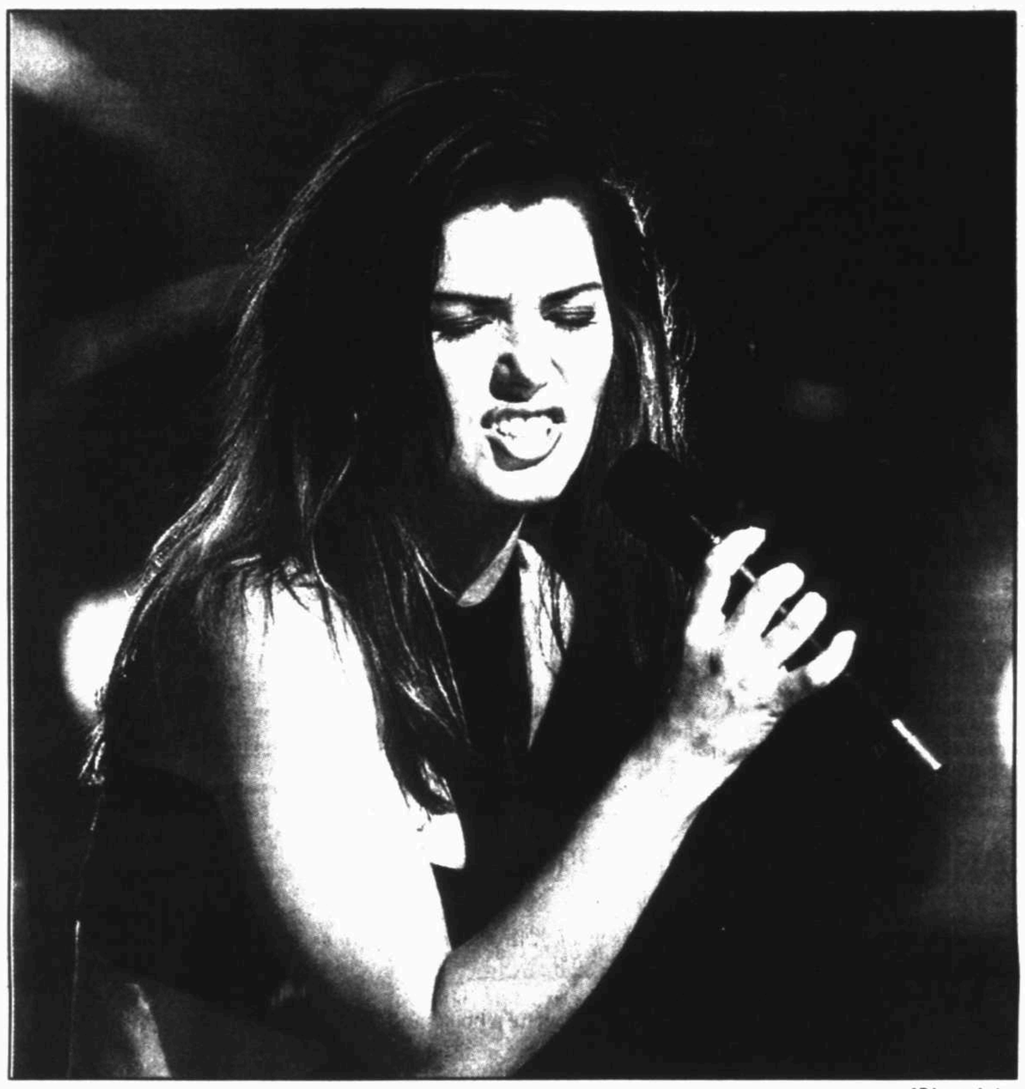

But Sunday night NBC's new comedies, "Men Behaving Badly" and "Jenny," trailed all three other networks, even among the young viewers NBC has declared the Holy Grail of television. Still, it was far from the worst network news of the week.

ABC lost several million viewers from its premiere week last year.

That network did have one new comedy, "Dharma and Greg," which scored hit-like numbers its first time out. But ABC got clobbered on Saturday, its Tuesday was hit hard by NBC, and Thursday went completely to the devil. The network's widely praised new drama about a Catholic priest, "Nothing Sacred,," was the lowest-rated show on any network. Just to rub it in, four more advertisers, responding to protests from conservative Catholic groups, announced this week that they were pulling their commercials.

CBS had the most up-and-down week of any network. Depressed after Monday, CBS was pleased with how well its "Country Music Awards" did Wednesday and thrilled by how "Promised Land," another religious-themed show, buried "Nothing Sacred" on Thursday. Then came Friday, where CBS' expensive gambit of buying two former hits from ABC's TGIF lineup is floundering. The results improved slightly for a second week of CBS' best new series on the night, "The Gregory Hines Show." But CBS returned to strength on Saturday and Sunday and was buoyed by a comeback for its comedies on Monday, which easily beat NBC's.

That left Fox, whose performance has been basically steady, especially with those precious younger viewers. Fox's most promising new show, "Ally McBeal," has declined, but is still doing better than comedies Fox had last year. But "The Visitor," its new sci-fi show on Friday, sagged badly in its second outing.

Independence, daring common themes for Twain, soon to release new album

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — It's great to be a girl, says country singer Shania Twain.

As an idol of young American women, the Canadian singer preaches her own brand of feminism. In her videos and songs, Twain keeps making the point that a beautiful woman can be strong and smart.

"I spent my whole teen-age life flattening my breasts, wearing triple shirts, always worried about those things," Twain said in a telephone interview to promote her new album, "Come on Over," set for release Nov. 4.

"Teen-age girls, they need to learn to grow up confident about these new things that are growing on their chests. It's very important that girls grow up with a sense of confidence about the fact that they're women."

Twain, 32, has overcome her inhibitions. Her videos showcase her curvaceous body as she insists on being treated with deference ("Any Man of Mine") and makes it clear she knows the way to the door if she doesn't get it ("I'm Out of Here").

With a sound that combines classic rock with elements of country, Twain sold more than 12 million copies of her second album, "The Woman in Me."

"They were just so NOT typically commercial country," she said of the songs on 'The Woman in Me.' They were unpredictable, they had a very funky attitude and a sense of humor that I love to play with. And they were a little bit daring, quite daring for country music at the time."

Twain says the success gave her confidence while working on the follow-up.

"You just pick up on what works on the last album, and then you go forward with it," Twain said. "You've sort of been given a ticket to go forward with that kind of stuff."

Sonically, that means more of the supersonic fiddles recorded like guitars on a rock album, courtesy of Twain's producer and husband Mutt Lange. Lange, who has made hits with Def Leppard and Bryan Adams, also co-wrote with Twain new songs that continue to promote strong women. They include:

Creative success follows Hubbard's drinking problems

CHICAGO — Ray Wylie Hubbard is focused on his songwriting.

"I didn't write these songs because I had a record deal," he says of his new album. "I just wrote 'em. There's something really great when you're writing and all of a sudden you can feel it working."

Hubbard

After years of drinking when he could have been writing, years of playing Texas honky-tonks when he could have been touring, since 1992, Hubbard has emerged with three increasingly strong albums.

"Dangerous Spirits," released in early August on Philo, is as fine an album as any singer-songwriter has released this year. But back in the early 1970s Hubbard was considered one of the leaders of the "progressive country" movement that helped launch the careers of Jerry Jeff Walker, Waylon Jennings and Willie Nelson.

Jessica Lange, in "A Thousand Acres."

Jessica Lange: From settled, stolid to vulnerable, volatile

By Douglas J. Rowe
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — She's best playing women rawly volatile or vulnerable, yet Jessica Lange seems so settled, so stolid — a mom, raising her kids near where she grew up, surrounded by family, comforted by familiarity.

It's as if she's getting all of her mercurial proclivities out of her system when she's in front of the camera.

Actually, she is.

"I think that probably has made a difference over the years, playing these kind of volatile characters. There's a tremendous amount of release in playing those kind of characters, especially the ones who tip over the borderline into craziness, because you can explore all those avenues with none of the repercussions," she says. "You do it. It's the end of the day; you go home to your own normal, little, wonderful, quiet simple life.

"So maybe in some odd way, having that possibility of expression playing these kind of characters has made me much more normal in my real life.

"But I have to say, more than anything, this thing of having children has kept me really on an even keel. I think it would be difficult without kids. I like the fact that they keep me really grounded and present in dealing with everything that on the surface is ordinary but is what really matters in my life."

The 48-year-old Lange has three children: 16-year-old Alexandra (daughter of Mikhail Baryshnikov, whom Lange was involved with for several years starting in the mid '70s); 11-year-old Hannah Jane and 10-year-old Samuel Walker, her kids with playwright-actor Sam Shepard, with whom she's been hooked up since 1982.

On screen, though, the two-time

U-TURN: Don't mess with small-town America

twisted ride during which we see Billy Bob Thornton play Twister with himself, Joaquin Phoenix eat a bus ticket and Nick Nolte do his very best Lee Marvin impression.

The plot, in brief: Bobby, no matter what he does, can't get out of Superior. At every turn he is thwarted, whether it be by delicious, dangerous siren Grace McKenna (Jennifer Lopez), bottom-feeding mechanic Darrell (Thornton), psychotic dandy hick Toby N. Tucker ("They call me TNT") or the brooding Sheriff Potter (Powers Boothe). Along the way he gets sucked into a vortex of conspiracy, lurid sex and death.

This kind of approach could come off quite cliche, sort of a "Mayberry RFD" meets "Blue Velvet" in which Opie gets his ear cut off and Barney Fife ends up sleeping with Aunt Bee. But under Stone's adept ministrations — and a self-restraint he rarely exhibits — "U-Turn" truly works.

As is Stone's style, he draws from a melange of cinematic traditions, from the topsy-turvy photography of Russ Meyer's 1960s soft-porn exploitation films to the quick cuts, off-dialogue stylism, narrative jumps and oblique diagonals of MTV's "Real World."

Stone also delves more deeply into themes he touched upon in "The Doors" and "Natural Born Killers" — the American outback, once frontier, now desiccated and desolate but crawling with the dormant malevolence of dead-end lives — a malevolence that Penn's character exacerbates. An unsettling, memorable soundtrack by Ennio Morricone chronicles the ride.

Penn's Bobby undergoes a remarkable transformation, from cockiness embodied to broken anti-hero. He starts out chastising Darrell: "That's the difference between you and me. That's why you're living here and I'm just passing through." By the end, he is broke, bawling and blubbering, desperate to get out of Superior any way he can.

Jon Voight makes an unlikely but effective blind Indian, dispensing reluctant wisdom while sitting next to his dead dog. "Are you a human being, or just some hungry ghost out there?" he asks Bobby. Nolte as Jake McKenna, a man whose bookshelf includes "Sporting Arms of the World," represents, like many of the movie's characters, both evil and truth. Lopez, never sexier, is a desperate woman to be avoided at any cost.

Superior itself is a star — a real decaying town rebuilt by Stone into a movie-set community where everybody drives pre-1975 American cars, scorpions lurk in the water spigots and it's 85 degrees by midmorning. This must be the town Norman Bates' motel was on the outskirts of.

"U-Turn" is ultimately unrepentantly violent, a cinematic monster under the bed that conveys utter despair and paranoia at the state of our nation. None of its characters is likable, but none is boring.

In the end, after it drifts into gross comedy and absolute appalling callousness, it offers an important message for post-McVeigh America: Don't dismiss small towns as irrelevant and full of hicks. It could prove fatal.

And "U-Turn," the journey to that message, holds the key to Oliver Stone's success — a bubbling cauldron of hodgepodge that comes together into genius and tells us a bit more about who we are.

LANGE: Actor plays roles with her heart

(From 3B)

Academy Award winner has played a manic-depressive, sex-obsessed wife in "Blue Sky"; a rebellious, left-wing, proto-feminist actress who's eventually lobotomized in "Frances" and an emotionally delicate soap star befriended by a transvestite in "Tootsie."

Another great thing about playing those kinds of characters — including Blanche DuBois in "A Streetcar Named Desire" on Broadway and television — is "you don't have to be concerned with the logic of it, the rational side of creating a character. You can kind of take those great flights of fancy," she says. "The boundaries are very fluid ... You don't have to worry: Is this making sense to the character?"

These days, Lange can be seen in the new film adaptation of the 1991 Pulitzer Prize-winning novel, "A Thousand Acres."

It's a role that the movie's director, Jocelyn Moorhouse, sees as a change of pace for Lange.

"Jessica often plays these vital, almost wild characters and here she is playing someone who is very repressed and introspective, kind of on a slow burn," Moorhouse says. "I don't think she's done that before, not to this degree."

Lange herself disputes any thoughts that she's simply reprising a role from another trouble-on-the-farm picture, "Country."

"This is really a family story, a story about a family just kind of blowing apart," she says, whereas her 1984 film "was about saving something, a farm and a way of living that was being systematically eliminated from the American landscape."

She does agree, however, with the assessment that she approaches characters from the heart, not the head.

"Certainly, my way into a character has always been through her emotional life, rather than try to get too intellectual about it. In fact, I really don't like intellectualizing or discussing characters or reactions or why they do things. I don't like to arrive at playing it that way. Because I think in talking about it you somehow dispel the immediacy. It becomes an idea, rather than a reaction to a moment.

"Sometimes a director will say to me ... 'He's going to try to —' And I'll always say, 'Just don't tell me. Don't tell me what he's going to do. Don't give me any information ahead of time.' Because that's what acting is: It's acting, reacting — that moment when something is fresh and happens for the first time and your reaction to it is absolutely real and pure; it's not shaded by a thought you had sitting in your dressing room or the night before about how you wanted to play this moment or how you wanted to orchestrate this scene."

HUBBARD: Singer sober for nine years

(From 3B)

Why has it taken so long for Hubbard's prodigious talent to emerge?

"It's a long, sordid story, really," he says with a laugh and a shake of his head. "There were two paths, and I took the one of least resistance."

"Up Against the Wall, Redneck Mother," a song Hubbard says he wrote as "a goof," became Walker's signature song in the 1970s and inspired a legion of beer drinking good ol' boys.

It brought Hubbard some measure of notoriety but, as he points out, "the problem with irony is not everybody always gets it."

Next came "Ray Wylie Hubbard and the Cowboy Twinkies."

"It just was a horrible album," he says while poking at a salad before a recent show at a club here.

Hubbard's tale will be familiar to many musicians. The band made an album it thought had a pretty good sound. While the group was touring, its record company added female singers to all the songs, remixed the vocals and put rope letters on the cover.

"We were heartbroken. You wait all your life to do a record and all of a sudden it comes out and you say, 'This isn't us,'" Hubbard says.

"To steal that Hunter Thompson line, under the advice of my attorney, I started drinking heavily."

And he didn't let up, not until nine years ago, when he decided, at 41, to get sober.

"I came out of a honky-tonk fog and kind of woke up to the fact of what was going on in my life," Hubbard says.

Maybe that's why the songs on "Dangerous Spirits" so often concern themselves with the possibility of redemption or, as Hubbard prefers to put it, awakening.

"I kind of like that idea of the phoenix coming up," says Hubbard, who is also fond of the mythology of the Old West, the Knights of the Round Table and the poet Rainer Maria Rilke. References to any of them are likely to turn up in his spiritually charged songs. On stage, he jokes about not reading anything more sophisticated than comic strips. Off stage, the author of "Up Against the Wall, Redneck Mother" professes a fondness for the writings of the Dalai Lama.

TWAIN: Assertiveness no problem for singer

over her shoulder and saying, 'Wow, this feels great, wonderful, I never have to experience that again,' " Twain said.

■ "Man! I Feel Like a Woman!" cheerleads for the gender. "It's just celebrating how fun it is to be a woman," Twain said. "We have this sense of freedom that, almost, men don't have any more. It's kind of weird what this liberation has done to us and for us."

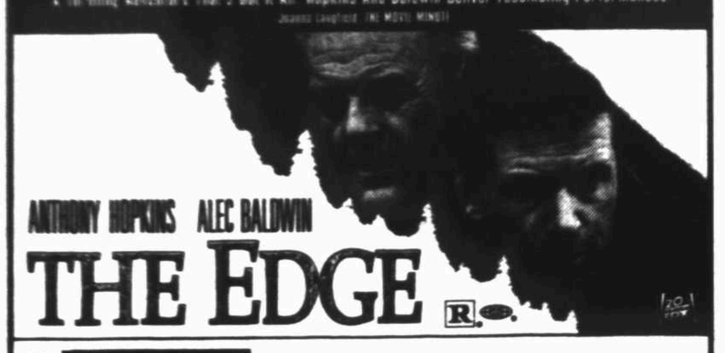

■ "If You Want to Touch Her, Ask." Said Twain: "It's about controlling yourself and taking a sensitive approach and a more respectful approach, and then that's what you'll get in return."

Twain says "If You Want to Touch Her, Ask" is her kind of feminism: getting a point across without losing her sense of humor or femininity.

"I think a lot of what's being stripped from us these days is the fact that we need to be more masculine to fit in in the world," Twain said. "And that pressure is not coming from men. That pressure is coming from women.

"Not everybody has to go out there and downplay their femininity or their sensuality to be taken seriously."

FAMILY MATTERS

Parents upset by teen-ager drawn to bad crowd

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: Our 14 year-old daughter is about to drive us all to the nut house. She's in with a bad group of friends that smoke and drink and we can't stop her from being with them. No matter what we do she finds a way to get with them.

May

Last Friday night I had a feeling something was going on so I set my alarm and got back up at 1 a.m. to check on her. She had stacked her pillows so that it looked like she was in bed but she had snuck out. My husband went driving around looking for her and happened to see her with her friends at an all-night convenience store. He made her come home with him and she's been grounded ever since.

We don't know what to do next. She says that the sneaking out was her idea and that they were just driving around. She claims that it was no big deal and can't understand why we are so upset about it. Well we had a news flash for her, we are still very upset and she will probably be grounded the rest of the semester. She's not happy about it but she's already acting better towards us. Are we doing the right thing? Are we doing enough? CONCERNED PARENT

DEAR CONCERNED: You and your husband are to be congratulated for caring enough about your daughter to take positive and direct actions to help her. The primary task for adolescents is to answer the question of "Who am I?" Unfortunately, they most commonly answer that question through their selection of a peer group. Your daughter has identified an undesirable peer group to help her define "self." Your difficult task is to help her let go of that peer group and find a more appropriate peer group.

As a general rule, parents can rarely stop a child from seeing their friends. I would encourage you and your husband to discuss the situation with your daughter in a calm, problem-solving meeting(s). Acknowledge that she does like the friends she has chosen but point out the data that suggests to you that these friends are inappropriate — for examples smoking, drinking, late night telephone calls, sneaking out, lower grades, dress, etc. Try to get her to agree to at least make the effort to make new friends.

Also acknowledge that this will probably be the hardest thing that she has ever attempted in her life — and it usually is from the teen's perspective. Tell her what specific things you and your husband are willing to do to help her in the process. For example, inviting desirable friends to go do an activity and you will take and pick them up; taking her to any church or any youth-related activity like Young Life or Christian Bible Study; providing her with lessons for musical or athletic pursuits; doing volunteer work with her, joining school clubs, and so on. It is NOT easy but what you are counting on is — that through constant positive exposure — your daughter will meet someone appropriate — and it only takes ONE!

You and your husband may also want to discuss establishing new family rituals that include her. Often adolescence interrupts the family's long-standing rituals such as eating at least one meal a day together. We must be flexible when we eat in order to accommodate the teen's school activities schedule. However, I believe that maintaining eating and celebration rituals are a critical part of instilling the family's values in the adolescent. In order to influence the teenager we must take every positive opportunity to communicate with her.

I would encourage you AND your husband to read Dr. Mary Pipher's wonderful books "Reviving Ophelia," about adolescent girls. Life is much harder for them than most adults imagine. As with any crisis, this can be a positive time of growth for teen and parents. However, you cannot expect yourself and your husband to know everything about "right" parenting. Read and talk to other parents about their experiences. Be good to yourselves. This will NOT go on forever. Happily, this is a developmental phase that will pass. I hear many, many success stories from parents when suddenly their teenager finds an appropriate peer group or special friend and "becomes human" again.

Throughout this challenging time, teenagers especially need the constancy of God in their lives — even though they protest just the opposite. The bed-rock teaching of "God loves you" answers a critical need in the teen to be viewed as acceptable for who they are and not for what they look like or own.

THE FOLLOWING TIPS ON ALTERNATIVES TO DISCIPLINE MISTAKES ARE OFFERED BY THE CENTERS FOR CHILDREN AND FAMILIES:

■ Yelling — The behavior rarely changes and kids become hostile. It is better to delay action until your anger is under control and then discuss the situation with your child.

■ Demanding Immediate Compliance — Children rarely respond well to the "Do it right now!" commands. It is better to make a respectful or firm request. Then praise and reward good behavior.

DEAR ABBY

Wife can't get husband out from under mom's thumb

by Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: For 15 years, my marriage and family were fairly normal. Then we moved back to be near my in-laws and help while my father-in-law was ill. Two years ago, he died. And I have now lost my husband (I'll call him Jack) — to his mother! He has become mama's little boy again.

Van Buren

My mother-in-law is an energetic, bright and creative woman. Even when we lived far away, she tried to run his life, and that of our family. Now that we live nearby, she completely runs and ruins everything. She buys the attention of our children with things that we can't afford and really prefer they not have. She has time to cook elaborate meals, take the kids on trips, etc. She criticizes my cooking, my housekeeping, the way we discipline the children —everything. And my husband, though he can manage a corporation, has never been able to stand up to his mother.

Almost every night she has something "new" to show one of the children. Every night she has some little chore for Jack to do. On weekends, she has already made plans for herself, my husband and the children. She makes it abundantly clear that I am not welcome to participate. I have suggested counseling for us, or at least talking to our pastor. Since his mother doesn't like our pastor, that got shot down.

If I were to leave Jack, it would be my fault, of course. Abby, what does one do when the "other woman" is a man's mother? — CHARLOTTE IN NORTH CAROLINA

DEAR CHARLOTTE: If I were you, the first thing I'd do is start looking for another man — for your mother-in-law! With all that energy, she needs an outlet other than her son and grandchildren.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 19-year-old girl and my best friend, Cliff, is 21. We have been best friends for about three years and even tried dating, but it never worked for us. We agreed a long time ago that if we didn't get married, we'd be in each other's weddings.

Well, Cliff is getting married next spring and has asked me to be his "best man." I accepted. He was originally going to have a male friend for his best man, and I was going to serve cake or take care of the guest book. But Cliff decided he wants me to have the honor.

My problem is that my mother doesn't approve. She and my dad were married in 1967 and still believe in the traditional way of doing things. I called several bridal shops and was told that I won't be the first woman to be a "best man." Cliff's fiance, his mother and the rest of the wedding party are all for it.

Cliff adores my parents. He calls them "Mamma" and "Dad." He values their opinion as much as I do, but we both want me to be his best man.

Abby, what do you think? Is it appropriate for a woman to be a groom's best man? — BEST FRIEND IN KENNESAW, GA.

DEAR BEST FRIEND: It is unusual but not inappropriate for a woman to be a "best man." That honor usually goes to the groom's brother, his closest friend, or even his father if they are very close.

Since you are Cliff's best friend, and there is no objection on the part of the bride or her family, you certainly qualify.

DEAR ABBY: Regarding the letters in your column about fractured Spanish: Some years ago my wife and I were in the airport in Madrid, Spain. They had a grill with hotdogs on it, and I was hungry!

I asked the cook three times for a hotdog. No response. Then I said, "Caliente woof-woof, por favor."

I got my hotdog, pronto! — MARVIN RUBENSTEIN, SCOTTSDALE, ARIZ.

Elderhostels a learning experience

Associated Press

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Who spends vacations studying?

Elderhostelers do.

These are seniors, many of whom have been away from the classroom for decades. They come on holiday in a quest for enrichment and entertainment.

What they find is a weeklong experience that puts them back at a desk and offers an opportunity to socialize with peers.

"We are getting to meet other folks and at the same time getting mental stimulation," said 86-year-old Arnold Corbin, finishing up a week at Eckerd College with 35 other hostelers.

"If you don't use it, you lose it," added Corbin, a former president of the American Marketing Association.

Corbin, who sports a white handlebar moustache, and his wife, Claire, a former treasurer of the association, were working their way through a 12-hour day. In the morning, their studies concentrated on British playwright, actor and composer Noel Coward. Later in the day, they visited historic Tampa Theater, had dinner and took in a synchronized swim show.

The Corbins are retired university professors who say it is their way of relaxing because they like being exposed to new ideas.

The Elderhostel program began in this country in the mid-1970s. Two decades later, it caters to 300,000 seniors in the United States and Canada, according to the national Elderhostel Inc. office in Boston.

Although the package is directed at those over 55, the average age of the hosteler is 68 and most come from professional backgrounds, said Jackie Mallory, who has shaped Eckerd's program for seven years.

For $350 a week, a person gets room and board, classes, field trips and entertainment. Ms. Mallory says the concept appeals to people who are still excited about life and lifelong learning.

And, of course, they must like to travel.

Age is no barrier.

Annually, Eckerd's Elderhostel and Senior College programs entice nearly 4,000 hostelers with 75 program offerings.

COMMUNITY CONNECTIONS

Local AARP to celebrate with full day of activities

By Alexandria L. Rose

AARP DAY (American Association of Retired — many members are not retired — Persons) has been proclaimed by the governor of Texas, George Bush, as being October 25, 1997. Communities across the state (in which more than 1.9 million AARP members reside) will be hosting special events to make our state aware of the dynamic presence of this organization to the service of each local community emphasizing the AARP Motto, "To Serve and Not To Be Served."

Texas is currently being served by 392 Texas Chapters of AARP and 218 Retired Teacher Units (a program of AARP). Nationally, AARP has a membership of over 33 million the largest senior organization in the world.

Now let's talk about what happens locally. We have two active chapters in Midland, Chapter 256 and Chapter 4816. Chapter 256 meets bimonthly at the Midland Senior Center, 6:30 p.m., the first and third Mondays for dinner, sharing of their community projects and a program. Chapter 4816 meets at noon the third Thursday of the month, at the Southeast Senior Center. They meet after lunch for a business meeting and program.

In addition to these two current chapters, a new chapter is being born of 50 and 60 year olds who would like to take advantage of what AARP has to offer and work to help our community. You may express your interest to John Slyker at 694-1447.

October 25, 1997, will be AARP Day in Midland. Mayor Bobby Burns will issue a proclamation designating this special day in Midland. A full day (8 a.m. to 6 p.m.) is being planned at the Midland Park Mall consisting of speakers, informational materials, and entertainment...all of which is free to the community. Speakers from our state capitol, Austin, and speakers from other states will highlight AARP insurance, telemarketing fraud, and the many programs of AARP. Other organizations in our community who serve the 50 and over senior population will be represented. This should be a great day of fun and learning.

Don't miss this extraordinary day!

Umpire still running the bases at 79

N.Y. Times News Service

SARASOTA, Fla. — It's 95 degrees, the humidity's 100 percent, and Atlantans like Harold Halpern are watching in amazement as their sons on a metro-wide all-star baseball team hustle around the diamond during a recent tournament.

They're not amazed at how their kids are handling the blistering heat, but at the 79-year-old umpire, Bert Shepard, whose light blue suit shows nary a dark hint of perspiration.

"What's his secret?" asks Halpern, a 41-year-old accountant, after his son Josh sprinted to second. Shepard hot on his heels. "I don't think I could be doing that at 41. I'd be dying."

It's even more amazing, notes Halpern, because Shephard is running like a kid the morning after he'd donned heavy pads to call balls and strikes behind the plate.

Shepard didn't just luck into his good health, he's been working at it all his life — eating right, exercising, steering clear of cigarettes and alcohol — all things experts advise to head off debilitating diseases of old age like osteoporosis, a bone-thinning condition generally associated with elderly women.

But it's also a disease that commonly keeps most men Shepard's age from being active and limber. Two million American men have osteoporosis, and the National Osteoporosis Foundation says another 3 million are at risk, though most don't know it.

They also don't know, the foundation says, that one-third of men with osteoporosis suffer hip fractures, and a third of those won't survive a year. The foundation has launched an aggressive campaign to get out the word not only that the disease strikes men, but it's one of the most underdiagnosed, underreported and inadequately researched conditions of aging.

What's more, researchers say it's men Halpern's age who need to start taking steps to ward off osteoporosis down the road. While women are four times as likely to develop the disease, experts say men may have a better chance than women of preventing it, in part because women lose bone mass rapidly in the years after menopause due to loss of estrogen.

But a recent Gallup survey of 1,000 men between 45 and 75 found that 70 percent considered osteoporosis a women's disease and only one in four could define it, even though it's the reason 32 percent of men over 50 aren't able to participate in athletic activities.

Furman Gardner, a 57-year-old Atlanta advertising exec, also was impressed after his son Jonathan smacked a homer, watching Shepard trotting along to make sure all the bases were touched.

"The guy is amazing," Gardner says. "I hope I can do that at his age."

"I plan on doing this for a long time," Shepard said.

Overuse of aspirin may result in gastric problems

By Dr. Michael L. Freedman
Associated Press

NEW YORK — By almost everyone's definition, aspirin would rank as one of the safest medicines available. Yet the news that the federal Food and Drug Administration wants to put a warning notice on aspirin and its chemical relatives should be noted by those who take a lot of aspirin.

Officially, aspirin is a member of a family of medications called nonsteroidal anti-inflammatory drugs, or NSAIDs. Other members of the NSAID family include ibuprofen, naproxen and ketoprofen which, like aspirin, are easily available without prescription and commonly taken for headaches and other minor pains.

Too commonly, for many people. Each year, some 76,000 Americans are hospitalized for problems caused by the overuse of aspirin or another NSAID. Almost all those hospitalizations are due to gastrointestinal problems.

The problems start with dyspepsia, the formal medical name for gastric discomfort. They include small lesions in the stomach that can develop into ulcers in the lining of the stomach or gastrointestinal tract and cause bleeding and other complications.

It's estimated that at least half of all patients treated for gastrointestinal bleeding have overused aspirin or another NSAID. Most of those patients go home after the problem is treated, but there is a small but serious risk of severe health problems, even death.

There are some common-sense ways to avoid that risk. The simplest is to use as little aspirin (or any other NSAID) as possible. Another suggestion is to take a non-NSAID painkiller, such as acetaminophen. Anyone who has to take large amounts of aspirin, or another NSAID, for medical reasons should consult his doctor about damage-preventing measures, such as switching to another drug that can protect the gastrointestinal tract from danger.

Dr. Michael L. Freedman is the Diane and Arthur Belfer Professor of Geriatric Medicine and Director of Geriatrics at New York University School of Medicine.

McLaren's ploys hinder presiding judge

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — The primary defendant has sued the people he's accused of plotting to kidnap, another has appeared before the judge in "warpaint" and none of them will recognize the court's authority.

With at least a month yet to go, the trial of Republic of Texas separatists who were involved in an armed standoff with police is already shaping up to be a unique trip through the criminal justice system.

As always, group leader Richard McLaren's belief that he is an ambassador for an independent Texas is at the core of the sometimes bizarre legal maneuvers, including odd motions that no attorney would recognize.

"They're just very lengthy. They're boring. Most of them have no substance and they have no application to the charge against him now," District Attorney Albert Valadez said. "He keeps imagining that he is some kind of foreign diplomat and that he's on foreign soil."

The one troubling motion so far has been a request this week for presiding Judge Kenneth DeHart to recuse himself, leaving him unable to set a time or place to try McLaren and co-defendant Robert "White Eagle" Otto.

DeHart said he doesn't want to rule on a change of venue motion, which he was forced to enter himself, until another judge rules on the recusal. Two others, Gregg and Karen Paulson, are scheduled for trial Oct. 27 in Alpine.

FIRE: Participants get to take on simulated blaze

(From 1B)

Class members will also have the opportunity to witness a simulated aircraft rescue, wear protective gear, which weighs about 40 pounds, ride in a fire engine and tour the EMS labs. They also learn the importance of fire alarms and fire safety.

"We try to expose them to as many aspects of the Fire Department as possible," Mansell said.

The academy's final challenge is when participants don bunker gear and try to extinguish a staged house fire at the practice tower, Mansell said.

"They get to see things firsthand," he said. "They all look forward to that. It's probably the most popular (event)."

At least one person who attended the academy, Rusty Welch, has pursued a career in fire suppression, Mansell added. Welch was a member of one of the first classes held. Other graduates of the class join the fire academy alumni or the reserve fire department, Mansell said.

"Some of the alumni work the first aid booth at the AirSho," Mansell said, adding that reserves could also be called to assist in natural disasters.

For more information on the academy, call 685-7332, Monday through Friday between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m.

SEX: Program urges abstinence as solution to numerous problems epidemic of sexually transmitted diseases in our teen-agers."

Ms. Rouse said teens are also apparently becoming sexually active at younger ages these days.

"I know at the center we've seen children as young as 10, with a possible pregnancy or STD," she said.

"Our children are not being educated," Ms. Rouse said. "This is about empowerment, this is about knowledge."

Ms. Sulak followed by telling parents that many parties in society share blame for the lack of education, including the medical professional and the media.

"Everyone needs to start coming together on this," she said. "We don't need a right wing, we don't need a left wing."

Ms. Sulak presented facts from the 1993 U.S. Department of Human Services' survey on sexual health and information from the Centers for Disease Control.

She said about 12 million Americans each year are infected with sexually transmitted diseases. About two-thirds of that number, she said, are people under the age of 25.

Some common infections include herpes, syphilis, chlamydia, gonorrhea, human papilliom virus (HPV) and HIV, the AIDS virus.

In many cases a victim can acquire the diseases from someone with no visible symptoms, she said. And a pregnant mother can easily pass STDS onto her child.

"Almost all of these can be passed on to an innocent bystander, the baby," she said.

Some STDs — bacterial infections like syphilis and chlamydia — can be cured with powerful antibiotics. But in the case of viral infections like AIDS and herpes, there's no known cure, she added.

In many cases, she said, women suffer more damage from sexually transmitted diseases than men.

The diseases can cause pelvic infections, pain and infertility in many women, she added. Men generally suffer less serious problems.

That doesn't mean men shouldn't take responsibility and have monogamous relationships, she said.

"If they respect women, they're not going to have sex with five of them before they marry one," she said.

Ms. Sulak said in her field she's talked with both middle school- and high school-age children. High school girls are less receptive to abstinence, she said.

That's different for younger teens, who are willing to tell their boyfriends they want to wait.

"You talk to young girls, they don't want to have these problems. They want a guy to treat them right," she said.

BUTTONS: Planning concert is like planning meal, Higgs says again because of another groundswell of interest from young people.

(From 1B)

"And I think part of the reason for this is the heroic efforts on the part of the American Guild of Organists, who sponsor each year a week-long event called the 'Pipe Organ Encounter.'

"They go after high school students who may play the piano and may have some interest and bring them for a week of organ lessons and concerts. And these kids who think maybe there is no one else like them in the world meet a lot of peers who have the same interest. And we see, in many cases, where that's directly responsible for organ students in colleges across the country."

Higgs, who first served as a church organist when he was 10, also toured as a keyboardist and singer with several rock/gospel/soul groups when he was a teen-ager.

"I used to play black gospel and soul music, but I don't do it very much anymore. Growing up in the Bronx, I went to a private Lutheran school run by German immigrants, but most of the students were black so I was immersed in both cultures — the German Lutheran tradition and the black gospel/pop tradition.

"I had to decide I was going to devote my life to one or the other — doing either takes all your life. I still love all kinds of pop music."

Recent appearances by Higgs include the inaugural series for the new organ at St. Stephen's Cathedral, Vienna; five concerts with the Chamber Music Society of Lincoln Center at Alice Tully Hall, New York City; the Piccolo Spoleto Festival; the Bermuda Festival; and the International Congress of Organists, Cambridge, England.

The main selection for Monday's free recital, which is sponsored by the West Texas Chapter of the American Guild of Organists and partially funded through a grant from the Arts Assembly of Midland and the Texas Commission on the Arts, is Julius Reubke's "The Ninety-Fourth Psalm," written just before he died at the age of 24.

"The rest of the program is going to be shorter pieces written anywhere from the 16th century to last year," Higgs said.

Composers include Conrad Susa, Jan Pieterszoon Sweelinck, Cesar Franck, David Conte, Leo Sowerby and Felix Mendelssohn Bartholdy.

"It's a little bit like a good meal," Higgs said of planning the program for a concert. "You have a good welcoming and then think of different courses in the meal."

SMU Suspension

DALLAS — Southern Methodist sophomore defensive end Karon Riley has been suspended for Saturday's game against New Mexico for misusing the athletic department's long distance telephone code, the school said Thursday.

Riley was one of five football players found to have misused the code, a discovery made through a normal review of telephone bills, athletic director Jim Copeland said.

"We reprimanded the student-athletes and concluded that restitution was required in all cases, except one in which restitution and a one-game suspension was appropriate," he said. "With the exception of one case, the value of the phone calls was less than $20 for each of the other student-athletes."

Copeland said the NCAA has accepted the school's actions as appropriate.

Baylor fullback out

WACO — Baylor fullback Anthony Overstreet will miss 3-to-4 weeks with a rib injury, the school said Thursday.

The junior was hit in the back during practice on Wednesday and X-rays revealed a fractured left 12th rib.

This season, Overstreet has carried 20 times for 142 yards and two touchdowns, both against Fresno State.

Video Peeper

SEATTLE — The Kingdome employee accused of putting a video camera in the SeaGals dressing room didn't get any pictures of the Seattle Seahawks cheerleaders. But he took a good shot of himself.

King County prosecutors on Thursday filed a misdemeanor charge of second-degree criminal trespass against Randal Jay Palmer, 37, an electrician who works in the Kingdome maintenance department.

He is accused of hiding a video camera in a light fixture in the room where the SeaGals change. The camera was hidden on the morning of Sept. 21, a few hours before a Seahawks football game against the San Diego Chargers.

A SeaGal spotted the camera lens and notified authorities.

While police were investigating, Palmer approached his supervisor and admitted what he had done, court documents say. The defendant then confessed to a detective, saying "I just thought the SeaGals would be nice to film," according to prosecutors.

Investigators later reviewed the tape from the video camera. Court documents give this account:

"The tape shows the defendant looking up at the ceiling in the changing room and using a remote-control unit to turn on the camera — apparently, unbeknownst to the defendant, the camera was already recording. When the defendant thought he was turning on the video camera, he apparently ejected the tape. The tape does not show any of the SeaGals."

Rebels host happy Bronchos

By Stewart Doreen
Assistant Sports Editor

Many questions surround tonight's District 4-5A game between Midland Lee and Odessa High.

LEE

Questions like: Will the Bronchos come down from the clouds after defeating Permian for the first time in 32 years? Will this be the dominating Lee offensive attack that most people have been expecting for most of this season?

There are many questions about what will happen, but there is no uncertainty about what this game means. Plain and simple, the winner of the game — tonight at 7:30 p.m. at Memorial Stadium — will be leading the district, and even though the district season is still in its infancy, the outcome could be a very telling sign.

"I don't know who is good and who is not good, but this week will clear up something," Parchman said. "I think you are seeing more balance in the district from top to bottom. However, one of us will be leading district, and that would be nice."

Both Lee and OHS won their district openers last week and join Cooper at the top of the district standings at 1-0. Cooper has the open slot in the 4-5A rotation and their game with Amarillo High will not have an effect on the district standings.

Lee, 2-2 overall, has been put in the position of having to play the Bronchos

MHS looks to duplicate OHS' feat vs. Mojo

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

ODESSA — Odessa Permian hadn't lost to cross-town rival Odessa High for 32 consecutive games — until last Friday.

Mojo

Now Mojo puts another long winning streak on the line tonight at Ratliff Stadium when some hungry Midland High Bulldogs come calling.

Since last losing to the Bulldogs 21-8 in 1973, Permian has beaten Midland High 23 consecutive times. But Mojo has never had to play a District 4-5A game following a defeat at the hands of the Bronchos. Just how Permian reacts to what is a devastating loss in the city limits of Odessa is the major question to be answered at 7:30 p.m. when the Panthers and Bulldogs tangle.

Permian coach Randy Mayes expects his team to react positively to this new-found situation, but he admits there is some concern on the mental aspect of tonight's game.

"We starting preparing our kids for this on Friday night after the loss," Mayes said. "If I could keep these kids in a bubble and away from the public, I wouldn't be concerned about it, but we can't do that. However, I think the parents of our kids understand the situation and have been giving them positive feedback at home.

"And it's not really the loss that concerns me most. We've got to quit living by the big play. We won two games with the big play and we lost two games with the big play. There is nothing wrong with producing some big plays, but we just can't live by it."

MHS coach David Browning has suffered watching his squad lose three games this year by a total of only seven points and doesn't take much solace in the fact that his team is playing Permian the week after the loss to Odessa High.

"Actually, we're both in the same boat this week," Browning said. "We lost to (Midland) Lee 21-17 and Permian lost to OHS by 20-17. Those are identical losses as far as I can see it. We are both in the same mental shape."

The narrow losses have to be taking a toll on an MHS team that is obviously better than a year ago, but Browning keeps pushing.

"It's been tough. There is no question about that," Browning said. "This is a mark of a team that hasn't done it before. If we can just get past this, we can turn this thing around. But you still have to look at the positive side. A year ago we were down 49-0 after the Lee game. We lost by four this year. That's improvement."

Mayes has been impressed with what MHS has done on the field this season, despite the Bulldogs' 1-3 record to date.

"I don't think there is any question that Midland is improved in every phase of the game from last year," Mayes said. "They've had a year under Browning's system and it's showing. It looks like their offense centers around (quarterback) Camar Jackson, and justifiably so. He can do so many things. And with both (I-back) Shemond Davis and (fullback) Ryan Stewart, they don't miss (Sam) Powell much.

"But their offensive line may be the best thing about them. They have (Stu-

Tribe rookie shows right stuff vs. Yanks

NEW YORK — Can someone please check this kid's birth certificate?

Jaret Wright, showing amazing composure for a 21-year-old rookie, survived a rough first inning and the Cleveland Indians overcame an early three-run deficit Thursday night for a 7-5 victory over the New York Yankees to even their AL playoff series at one game apiece.

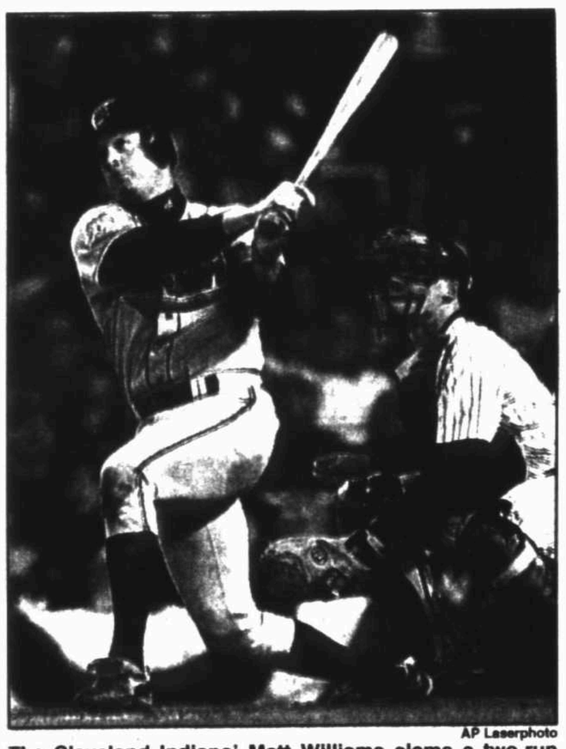

Wright, the son of former major league pitcher Clyde Wright, walked the bases loaded in the first inning when the Yankees took a 3-0 lead. But the right-hander, who said the day before his start he would be nervous taking the mound in Yankee Stadium, limited New York to three hits in six innings and allowed only one runner past first base after the opening inning.

Following a day off Friday, the best-of-5 series will resume with Game 3 Saturday at Jacobs Field where the Yankees are 15-5. David Wells will start for New York against Charles Nagy, who was 0-2 with an 18.00 ERA in three starts against the Yankees this season.

Matt Williams hit a two-run homer in the fifth inning off Andy Pettitte (0-1), who was tagged for seven runs and nine hits over five innings — almost identical numbers to his only other start against Cleveland this season.

Omar Vizquel went 3-for-5 as the Indians ended New York's five-game postseason winning streak that includ-

Audit reveals 76 ineligible athletes played for Tech

By Mark Babineck
Associated Press Writer

LUBBOCK — Six years of academic certification errors came to a head Thursday for Texas Tech, which released an audit that found 76 athletes in eight sports competed ineligibly over that time.

It will be up to the NCAA, which this month is expected to reveal results of a 1 1/2-year investigation into allegations of improprieties in the athletic program, whether teams must forfeit any victories or return postseason tournament money.

Athletic certification troubles have caused six athletes to miss playing time or be declared ineligible in recent months. The men's basketball team requested it not be considered for the NCAA tournament last season when two players were deemed ineligible during the Big 12 tournament.

"If nothing else, this audit indicates a clear pattern of unsatisfactory work, lack of attention to detail and a lack of a general understanding of NCAA satisfactory progress legislation," Chancellor John T. Montford said in a written statement.

4-5A features upset possibilities every week

All indications from the first four weeks of the football season lead us to believe that District 4-5A may be headed for one of the wildest shootouts in league history.

Williamson

No one, except maybe Abilene Cooper, has established enough consistency to this date where you can say a state playoff berth is in the bag.

In fact, teams appear to be so nip-and-tuck that each week could bring an exciting upset to the Saturday morning sports pages. Of course, telling when an upset occurs may be the hardest job for the fans this year. You never really are sure whether an upset took place. That's how even this league appears to be.

Right now, it appears that the Big Three (Cooper, Midland Lee and Odessa Permian) might be in for a shakeup. After all, Permian has lost to Odessa High while Lee produced an 86-yard fourth quarter drive to beat Midland High to keep its queasy position among the league elite. The Big Three have been playoff bound every year since 1993.

The very fact that this could be a wild, competitive race from top to bottom sent Tim McGraw scurrying back to find out when the league was last so balanced. For McGraw's money, the 1973 season was the most competitive in league history.

It was in 1973 when Lee, Big Spring and Abilene High all tied for last place. Odessa Permian won the league title that year and that was back in the days when only one team from each district earned entry into the state playoffs. Permian was 10-2 that season, losing to Arlington Sam Houston, 14-7, in the region round, which was the second round in those years. The Panthers lost 21-8 to Midland High that season.

It seems fitting then that MHS and Permian meet again tonight in the year when the league once again seems so balanced. We wonder if this is an omen for all concerned.

Under today's rules Midland High would have been in the state playoffs in 1973. Lee would not have been. However, Lee got its first playoff appearance the following season and went again in 1976 under the one-team format. Lee didn't return to the state playoffs until 1983. The Rebels have missed only once (1992) since then.

But tradition doesn't seem to play such an important role this season. That's why so much excitement abounds as we head into the meat of district play.

We own a 17-7 (.708) record in the District 4-5A picking game after a woeful 2-2 effort last week. But here is how 4-5A teams will perform tonight.

Midland Lee 28, Odessa High 24: What this amounts to is that Lee is at home, but so is OHS, still celebrating last week. This is one of the closest series in all of District 4-5A with Lee owning a 19-17 overall advantage. Lee has won the last two and OHS has won four of the last seven.

Midland High 21, Odessa Permian 20: This is a streak-breaking hunch off the cuff, so to speak. I keep bringing up how tough it is to win the next week after losing to a cross-town rival, but I still feel that Permian's loss to OHS is a major mental bridge for Mojo. MHS must score first, however, to put those Panther doubts on the board.

Abilene High 35, San Angelo 25: The Bobkitties make their district debut after a fine upset of Lubbock Coronado, but the Eagles have more talent in this one. San Angelo leads the series 24-10-2, but AHS has won two in a row.

Abilene Cooper 28, Amarillo High 14: Amarillo High owns the home field advantage and the series lead at 2-1. Those factors will help to keep this one relatively close, but the Cougars will win rather easily.

Wells wins bike title

PORTLAND, Ore. — Butch Wells, a former Midland Lee student, recently won the 1997 Oregon Downhill Bike State Championship and title at Mt. Hood, Ski Bowl near Portland recently.

His overall time beat 34 competitors who had qualified by having placed in other mountain bike races throughout Oregon this year in the 17-36 age group.

Wells, who moved from Austin to Portland, Ore., two years ago, began racing bikes in Midland at the age of 11 when he won his first race in the BMX racing circuit. He has earned numerous titles, trophies, medals and plaques since then. He loves the mountains of Oregon and the challenge of racing down ski slopes that are transformed into mountain bike trails during the off season.

Braves aim to complete sweep; Astros know comeback unlikely

By Michael A. Lutz
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON — Nice and quick. Bobby Cox would like a short, sweet stay in Houston.

"We want to win one more and do it as fast as we can," the Atlanta Braves manager said.

The Braves, having taken both games of their NL playoff at home, can complete a sweep of the Houston Astros on Friday.

After the Braves pounded the Astros 13-3 in Wednesday's Game 2, Astros manager Larry Dierker said sweeping the Braves in Houston was unlikely. On Thursday, he hadn't changed his mind. Only now, he's turning to the laws of probability.

"You play the Braves in here with 50,000 fans and I'd say we have a 50-50 chance and maybe slightly better," Dierker said. "If you win that one, then you've got a 50-50 chance the next game."

John Smoltz, the Braves starter on Friday, knows something about pitching a potential series-ender. He pitched against Colorado and lost in a similar situation in 1995.

"I learned some lessons in the Colorado division series," Smoltz said. "We were up 2-0 and I lost that one. We're in a commanding position now and I'd like to finish them off Friday.

"Colorado has the scariest lineup of the teams I've faced in the playoffs. Houston is a resilient team, but they don't scare you like Colorado."

If Smoltz can contain the Astros' "Killer Bs" — Craig Biggio, Jeff Bagwell and Derek Bell — as well as the Braves did in the first two games, the series is probably over. But Smoltz isn't dismissing the Astros.

"You don't want the 'Bs' to beat you," Smoltz said. "All our pitchers have concentrated on Bagwell, Biggio and Bell. It's like the NBA playoffs — you don't want to give away layups."

Bell, Bagwell and Biggio — the heart of the Astros' first playoff drive in 11 years — are 1-for-25 in the playoffs.

"I really look forward to Friday," Smoltz said. "I've pitched in every situation — up 2-0, down 3-1, tied — and you want to be the finisher.

"That's the best situation of all. If we can get a couple of extra days of rest while Florida and San Francisco are playing, that'll be to our advantage."

Shane Reynolds, who was Houston's ace to start the season but had to overcome mid-season knee surgery, will try to keep the Astros alive. Reynolds beat the Braves and Smoltz on opening day.

"He should be perfectly ready to pitch," Dierker said. "I haven't looked to see what he's done against the Braves but it doesn't matter. He's going to pitch anyway."

Reynolds is hoping to escape the problems that beset Houston's starters in Atlanta. Darryl Kile pitched a two-hitter in Game 1 and lost. Mike Hampton uncharacteristically walked seven batters in Game 2.

"We're not changing our game plan. I can't go out and be the hero and try to do too much," Reynolds said. "I've got to try and keep their speed off the bases, get some ground balls and let my defense work behind me."

The Braves have six consecutive playoff appearances and the Astros have only three players who have ever reached postseason. Handling the spotlight could be a factor.

"One advantage for us is we're used to all the questions," Smoltz said. "I'm sure the media and fans will be hounding the 'Bs.' They're frustrated. It's unfortunate the media will dwell on their failures, but that's the nature of the beast in the playoffs."

Dierker was still working on his starting lineup but Cox said he would return to his Game 1 lineup that will have Keith Lockhart batting second and playing second base and Michael Tucker playing right field and batting sixth. Jeff Blauser, who batted second in Game 2, will bat eighth.

"Tucker has some kind of virus but we think it's a one-day thing and he'll be ready," Cox said.

Cox doesn't think the series is over because of the Braves' 2-0 lead.

"We did it last year against St. Louis (after falling behind 3-1) and we felt confident that we could do it," Cox said. "It's huge but it can be done."

Orioles rip Mariners again

By David Ginsburg
AP Sports Writer

SEATTLE — An elbow injury did what the Baltimore Orioles couldn't do — knock Jamie Moyer out of the game.

And, as soon as the left-hander walked off the mound Thursday, the Orioles began their march to another lopsided victory over the Seattle Mariners.

Baffled by Moyer's offspeed pitches for half the game, Baltimore went ahead immediately after the 17-game winner was forced out with a strained flexor muscle in his left elbow. The Orioles rocked Seattle's struggling bullpen for six runs, and their second straight 9-3 rout sent them home with a 2-0 lead in the best-of-5 series.

Baltimore can advance to the AL championship series for a second straight year with a win Saturday in Game 3 at Camden Yards. The Orioles, who got homers from Harold Baines and Brady Anderson, are 9-4 against the Mariners this season.

Roberto Alomar was 0-for-2 against Moyer when he stepped to the plate with Baltimore trailing 2-1 in the fifth inning. Alomar couldn't believe his luck when Moyer left the game with a 1-0 count and two runners on, handing the ball over to Paul Spoljaric.

"Moyer was more a finesse pitcher that throws breaking balls on the corners, while Spoljaric likes to throw his fastball," Alomar said. "It seemed like when he went out everything turned around. The bats started coming alive and from that point on we played better baseball, hitting-wise."

The Seattle bullpen had a lot to do with it. Alomar hit a 3-2 pitch that glanced off the glove of a leaping Ken Griffey Jr. at the center field wall, a two-run double that put Baltimore ahead to stay.

"The guy's only human," Spoljaric said of Griffey. "I thought he was unbelievable that he got to the ball. I initially thought he had it."

It was the first of nine hits against the Seattle bullpen, which has a 10.80 ERA in the two games. Bobby Ayala was the main culprit Thursday, yielding six runs in 1 1-3 innings.

"Our bullpen threw the ball very well in September," Mariners manager Lou Piniella said. "Right now we're just not getting the job done, but that could change over the weekend."

Perhaps, but the Orioles are willing to take their chances at home against a Seattle bullpen that blew 27 save opportunities this season.

In the seventh, Anderson followed a walk to Bordick with a two-run shot off Ayala for a 5-2 lead. Seattle got a run in its half on an RBI-single by pinch-hitter Rob Ducey.

The Orioles pulled away with a four-run eighth. Ayala walked Baines intentionally to load the bases, then forced in a run by walking Lenny Webster on a 3-2 pitch. Bordick followed with a two-run single and Anderson greeted Norm Charlton with an RBI-double to make it 9-3.

At that point, the crowd of 59,309 began to boo the home team.

"You don't like to see that happen at home, naturally," Piniella said. "But you know about expectations. ... I'm sure they're frustrated a little bit."

Baltimore starter Scott Erickson allowed three runs and seven hits in 6 2-3 innings to earn his first playoff win in seven career appearances. He's 3-0 in four starts against Seattle this season.

Erickson faced 28 batters and threw a first-pitch strike to 23 of them.

LEE: Bronchos look to keep rolling

(From 1C)

(3-1) and Cooper, a 4-0 team ranked No. 4 in Class 5A by the Associated Press, back-to-back. However, the two-time district champs don't expect any eyes to overlook this game.

"The kids are really mature about this game," Parchman said. "They know what they have to do to win. They know this is a blue collar football team and we don't have that slash and dash. It is a workmanlike team, and they have the attitude that we have to get better."

Getting better might be a necessity if they are to slow down an OHS team that has won three straight games. In the last three weeks, OHS defeated a quality Lubbock Coronado team 17-10, thumped El Paso Eastwood 56-7 and defeated Permian 20-17 in the biggest of all wins.

The Permian win brings up the biggest question going into tonight's game. Where will the Bronchos' heads be? The game has brought much publicity to the team and to a side of town that isn't playing second fiddle to their neighbors in black. T-shirts were made commemorating the win, the game was rebroadcast due to the significance of the win and much media attention has been given to Randy Quisenberry's squad. The second-year coach knows that his team's mind has to be on this game.

"Watching Lee brought us back down," Quisenberry said. "If our minds are on last week's games, it will be a long Friday night."

Quisenberry points to Lee being a team like Permian — a team that "can say they have had enough, bow up and drive the ball down the field." Quisenberry says that attitude starts on offense with a huge offensive line, which outweighs OHS front four by average of 254 pounds to 190. He also talks about Josh Norman, who is one touchdown short of tying the Lee record for most career TDs.

"Their size is impressive and Norman is Norman. He is scary," Quisenberry said. "He is the premier running back and in a league of his own. I also like (quarterback) Jeremy (Deramus). No one gives him the credit he is due."

Deramus threw two touchdowns in Lee's comeback win over MHS last week, and along with Norman, the senior quarterback will be key in getting the Rebs balanced and on the board early, which is something that the Rebels have not done well this season.

In the past three games, Lee's opponents have scored 21 points in the opening period while the Rebs have put up just seven. That touchdown came against Waco High. At the time, the Rebels were down 14-0. In fact, during the last three games, Lee has not led in the first half.

A solid start would be even more beneficial for the Rebs considering how well they have finished games. Against Waco High, Lee was down 24-13 at one point before just falling 24-23. Against Midland High, Lee faced a 14-3 deficit but battled back to win 21-17.

"We would like to stick it to everyone early," Parchman said. "We would like that to happen but we are proud that they answered challenges. They have played for 48 minutes. Sometimes we have run out of time but never been beaten."

Defensively, Lee will face an Odessa High team with Rick Leach, the top passer in the district, and Freddy Espinoza, who has rushed for more than 95 yards in each of his last three games.

"They are a carbon copy of Cooper offensively," Parchman said. "They are more wide open although you see some Permian stuff raise its head. Espinoza is a guy you have to find. He hides behind that offensive line and then he is out there running."

Parchman says the OHS defensively is a mirror image of Lee. Of course, he probably wasn't talking about his defense's injuries. Lee linebacker Tim Villegas is out (knee) and will be replaced by Stuart Ledgerwood. The lack of depth defensively means that Stacy Jones is also expected to see time at linebacker in addition to his normal spot at fullback.

OTHER INJURIES: Linebacker Trey Atwater is out (knee) and defensive lineman Jose Primera is out (shoulder). Colby Marcum is out for the season.

STILL A REBEL IN WAITING: J.R. Norman's eligibility status was still up in the air as of Thursday evening. The junior is awaiting a decision from the UIL waiver committee on his eligibility. That could arrive as early as Friday, giving Norman the opportunity to suit up for Lee. If not, MISD officials expect a ruling by early next week.

Norman transferred from Permian in early September after his mother was laid off from her job in Odessa and moved to Haltom. Norman, who decided to live with his father in Midland instead of moving to Haltom, was not given his release by Odessa Permian, and an attempt to prove that the move was not for athletic reasons was turned down by the District 4-5A executive committee last week.

TRIBE: Rookie Wright stays composed

(From 1C)

ed the last four games of the 1996 World Series.

New York closed to 7-4 in the eighth, loading the bases off Paul Assenmacher and Jose Mesa, who hit pinch-hitter Mike Stanley to force in a run. Wade Boggs then hit a flare to left that shortstop Vizquel tracked down for the second out. Tim Raines' weak grounder to first ended the inning.

Mesa allowed a leadoff homer to Derek Jeter in the ninth then finished for the save.

On Wednesday, Cleveland manager Mike Hargrove described Wright as "a very young Roger Clemens" and it's easy to see why now. Relying mainly on his fastball, the burly Wright overpowered many of the Yankees, who were seeing him for the first time. He finished with five strikeouts, and his only walk after the first was intentional.

In Game 1, it was the Indians who blew a 5-0 lead after one inning. This time, it was New York which got the early lead only to see Cleveland rally by scoring five times in the fourth with four straight two-out RBI hits.

Leading 5-3 in the fifth, Vizquel got his second infield single, and with two outs, Williams hit Pettitte's first pitch over the 399-foot sign in left-center for his sixth homer at Yankee Stadium this season.

Wright, whom the Indians have described as unflappable, was his own worst enemy in the first. After starting the game by retiring Raines on a groundout, Wright issued the three consecutive walks.

Hargrove, catcher Sandy Alomar and third baseman Williams all visited the mound during the inning to offer encouragement to Wright, and Chad Ogea began warming up in the Indians' bullpen.

Wright took a deep breath before facing Tino Martinez, who slapped an opposite-field double down the left-field line to make it 2-0. Charlie Hayes followed with a sacrifice fly as the Yankees doubled the total of first-inning runs Wright had allowed in 16 starts this season.

The Indians, though, came back with the five-run fourth that started with Vizquel beating out a one-out infield single and taking third on third baseman Hayes' throwing error.

With two outs, Pettitte walked Williams and David Justice, Alomar and Jim Thome came through with RBI-singles to tie it 3-3. Fernandez then hit a line drive that froze left fielder Chad Curtis and rolled to the wall for a two-run double.

MHS: Bulldogs try to stun Mojo again

(From 1C)

art) Atnipp and (Laynce) Nix back and they are doing a great job. On defense, the move of (Erik) McCright to linebacker has paid huge dividends and no one has been able to run to the strong side against Nick Conder. We've got to find some way to put those people on the ground."

Permian's running game with Kofie Powell and the passing attack of quarterback Casey Waite concerns Browning.

"Powell is as good a runner as there is in the district and he can hurt you," Browning said. "The quarterback (Waite) has the big play capability. Permian's defense is as solid as ever and they've given up only 66 points this year. They're stingy in that area like always. One of the touchdowns they gave up to Odessa High was the return of a fumble."

Browning also thinks that the key to beating Permian is a game plan of perfection.

"The key for us is to play a game without any mistakes, play the best game we have this season and be solid in the kicking game," Browning said. "Other than that, it's an easy game.

"Permian is a well coached team and they play hard. They also have tradition on their side and MHS hasn't had much success in the past in this game."

And that brings up a couple of major hurdles the Bulldogs will face tonight. Permian owns a huge 35-3 advantage in the series, and Midland High has won only two of 15 games played in Ratliff Stadium. Both of those wins (1982 and 1987) came against Odessa High. MHS has never beaten Permian in Ratliff Stadium.

But the Bulldogs still don't own the longest non-winning streak against Permian even after the Bronchos' win last Friday. Abilene High hasn't beaten Permian since 1964. However, the Eagles have produced two ties during that stretch.

This year, however, it appears that parity has hit the league. Teams are finally taking the field with the outcome in doubt. Even against Permian.

"This is as balanced as the league has been in years," Mayes said. "Games can go either way on any night. This looks like another one of those nail-biters to me where it goes down to the final minute. All our games have been that way this year."

FRIDAY, OCT. 3, 1997

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Friday, Oct. 3, 1997:
Flow with the moment, and worry less. Creativity is subject to surges; during high periods, you come up with dynamic ideas. Confusion still lingers on the home front because of a parent or a personal situation. Your ability to think, take action and direct energy are at an all-time peak. Sometimes, however, you will forget the well-known Libran diplomacy. If you are single, boredom will not be a problem: The universe presents an amazing collection of potential suitors. If attached, your love life becomes more exciting than ever, adding to the intensity between you. SCORPIO can be possessive.

BORN TODAY
Musician Lindsey Buckingham (1947), singer Chubby Checker (1941), writer Gore Vidal (1925)

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★ You are on a roller-coaster ride. A partner tries to stabilize the situation, but to no avail. The ride ends only when it is over, so hold on tight. The good news is that the weekend is coming, giving you plenty of time to dust yourself off. Tonight: Be gone!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★ Just when you thought all was well, the boss throws a tantrum and changes plans. There is very little control over these factors of your life, so just roll with them. A partner is a breath of fresh air. He helps you figure things out. Tonight: Let off steam with friends.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★ You are pushed in several directions and are unsure about what is going on. Do not leave matters up to Lady Luck. Take a firm stand. Seeking out an associate gives you renewed perspective. He is startled by what the recent events. Tonight: Ask for a massage.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ You need your good humor to handle the uproar around you. There are red flags in your direction, should you consider going to a partner, associate or institution for help. This is for you to work through. You can do it! Tonight: Your creative juices flow freely.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★ You are hard-pressed to stabilize a sinking ship. You cannot stop the inevitable. Just clear the decks, to minimize the damage. Your creativity surpasses any advice you gather. You come up with better, once you have the opening. Tonight: It's unusually resourceful.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Express ideas, explain your wishes and don't have great expectations! Anything that can go wrong now will. You have the energy to hurdle obstacles. Have faith in yourself, and you'll be all right. Tonight: Blow off steam with a loved one.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★ You have the best plans, and are put out when you see them fizzle. But this setback encourages you to take strong action and adapt your thinking. You like what you are creating more. Make calls, pass along news and ask for help. Tonight: It could be costly.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★ Take needed action. You are one of the few who can create more of what you want from a scenario. A family member appears unstable; for your purposes, he is. Right now, you have the power. Don't rely on anyone else. Tonight: Beam in what you want!

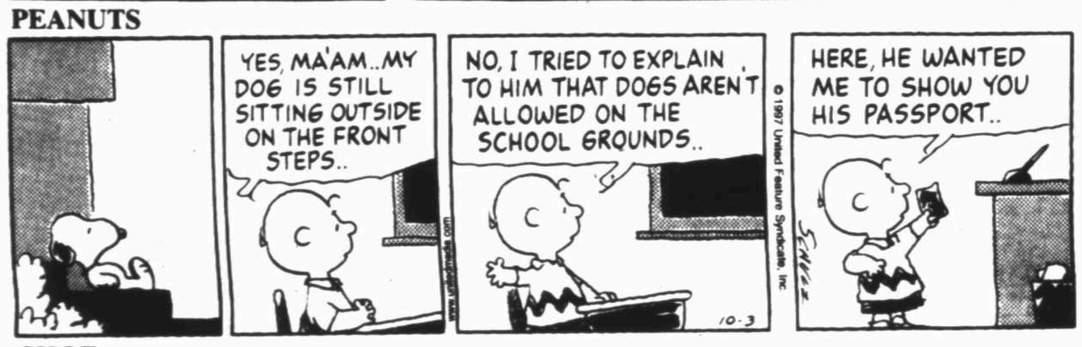

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★ Much is going on in your head. Stating it now is not the best idea. Consider what would work for you. This is a time to think, not act, though by evening you take a strong stand. Count on your resolve, power and strength. Tonight: Add mystery to the plans!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ Aim for what you want. You have a strong sense of direction and incredible inner resources. You are confused by all that's going on. Be careful with funds. The unexpected, for good or bad, could happen. Tonight: Relax with friends.

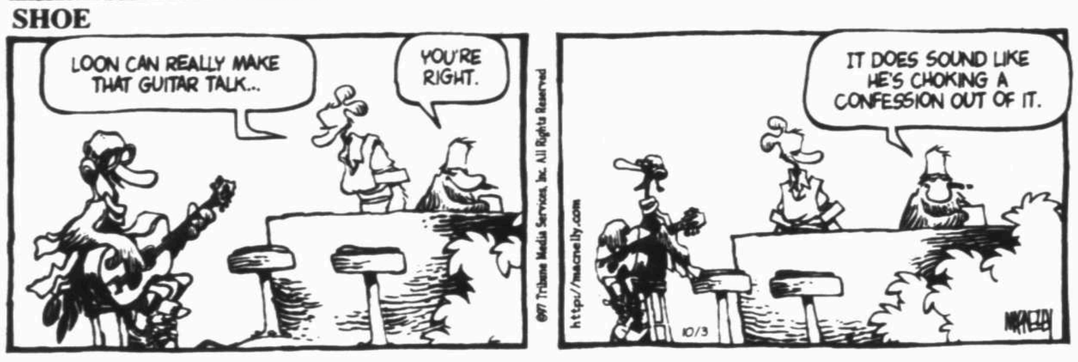

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★ If you think others are acting strange, hold up the mirror. Your actions appear flaky to them, even if you know where you are coming from. Allow feedback, and don't make any rash decisions. Stay focused on the goal. Get together with others. Tonight: The party starts now.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ Distance yourself from what you see. Others' reactions stun you. Listen, but don't follow another's advice. Emphasize the big picture. You can understand the currents of the day. Tonight: You are a strong force on the scene.

The bidding:

WEST	NORTH	EAST	SOUTH
2♡	Pass	3♡	4♠
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♡

Given the opening lead and heart continuation, the play of this hand is really quite simple. All you have to do is think about it for a moment.

East raised West's weak two-heart opening bid in an effort to keep the opponents out of the auction, but South was too distributional to be deterred. The decision to commit the hand to four spades, however, is too rich for this department. A simple overcall of three spades would have done justice to the holding, and would have left open the possibility of playing in a superior club contract.

West led the king of hearts and continued with the queen, overtaken by East as declarer ruffed. A diamond to the king provided the entry to run the jack of spades and, when that held, declarer repeated the finesse and drew the last trump.

Everything now hinged on bringing in the club suit while losing only two tricks. A low club was led to the queen and ace, and a third round of hearts forced South to ruff again. There was no problem if clubs were 3-2, but declarer found a way to protect against a 4-1 split as long as East held the club length. Declarer simply exited with a low club!

Down to nothing but minor-suit cards, East had a choice of ways to commit suicide. A diamond return would be into dummy's ace-jack, giving declarer two club discards; and a club would allow South to bring in the rest of the suit by taking the marked finesse of the ten. Game, set and match.

Elton John's tribute to Diana breaks record for the fastest-selling single

NEW YORK — Elton John's tribute to Princess Diana sold 3.4 million copies in the United States in one week and may surpass "White Christmas" as the biggest-selling single worldwide.

The "Candle in the Wind" remake that went on sale here Sept. 25 shattered the mark set by Whitney Houston's "I Will Always Love You" as the fastest-selling single since 1991, the year Soundscan began tracking music sales. Houston sold 632,000 copies in a week in 1992.

Elton John's tribute to Princess Diana sold 3.4 million copies in the U.S. in one week.

John's label, A&M Records, estimates that an additional half million people have bought the song through retailers who don't normally sell music and aren't counted by Soundscan, which would put U.S. sales at 3.9 million.

Worldwide, A&M said it has shipped orders totaling 26 million copies. The Guinness Book of Records estimates "White Christmas" has sold 30 million copies.

Lacking a more precise measurement of sales overseas, A&M considers the number of orders it fills tantamount to sales since it isn't taking any returns.

All profits are going to a memorial fund established in Diana's name.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Need an estate in Michigan? Try QVC and buy from Muhammad Ali.

Ali's 85-acre estate will be featured this week on the cable shopping network's late-night show "First Friday: Extreme Shopping," which airs monthly and tries to attract affluent shoppers with hard-to-get items.

The former boxer's wife, Lonnie, said the show, airing at 1 a.m. EDT on Saturday, will include a video tour of the $1.9 million estate in southwest Michigan.

"Whatever works, works — plus the faster we get to Louisville, the better off we'll be," she said.

The couple wants to move to Louisville, where Ali is from, to work on The Muhammad Ali Center, an interactive gallery and museum.

Last month, the show featured Engelbert Humperdinck's Hollywood mansion. Negotiations for its sale are under way.

MILAN, Italy — Giorgio Armani and Donatella Girombelli are canceling galas next week and donating the money to victims of two earthquakes in Italy.

Armani will donate $115,000 instead of holding a dinner at his mansion for fashion week in Milan. Jenny, the label for Donatella Girombelli, canceled a concert and announced a donation of $57,500.

The shows for the 1998 spring-summer ready-to-wear collections begin Oct. 9.

Other designers were expected to announce donations for the thousands of people who lost their homes in earthquakes last week in the central Umbria and Marche regions. The quakes badly damaged the Basilica of St. Francis in Assisi and other treasures.

———

NEW YORK — Susan Molinari was looking for a day job when she left Congress for TV.

"If there are going to be votes after midnight, and your daughter has a school play or you have a fever, it's still the U.S. government, and you've got to go," she said in the Oct. 5 Parade magazine.

Molinari, now co-host of "CBS News Saturday Morning," said the unpredictable hours and raising money were the worst parts of her job in Washington.

The best part: "The realization that you got your job because people made a decision to trust you with some of the most important decisions of their lives."

DES MOINES, Iowa — Robert James Waller, who sprang to fame on the strength of his best-selling love story "Bridges of Madison County," was recently divorced from his wife.

A court clerk in Alpine, Texas, confirmed that Georgia Waller filed for divorce and the decree was granted Aug. 15. Their only child, Rachel Waller, said the divorce became final just before the couple's 36th anniversary.

Waller, 58, now lives on one of his Texas ranches with Linda Bow, 34, who worked on the ranches as a landscaper, the daughter said.

Rachel Waller, 29, said her mother is living on one of two Texas ranches received in the divorce, while she is living on the other. She also said she hasn't spoken to her father in months and the decree prohibits her parents from talking to reporters about the divorce.

HOW TO READ THE MARKET IN REVIEW

Here are the 1,675 most active stocks on the New York Stock Exchange, 925 most active on the Nasdaq National Market and 405 most active on the American Stock Exchange. Stocks in bold are worth at least $5 and changed 5 percent or more in price. Underlining for 50 most active on NYSE and Nasdaq and 25 most active on Amex. Tables show name, price and net change, and one to two additional fields rotated through the week, as follows:

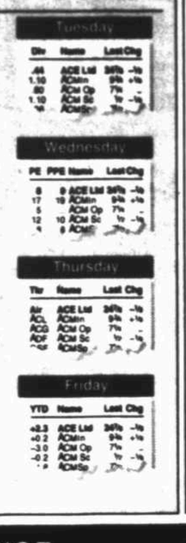

Name: Stocks appear alphabetically by the company's full name (not its abbreviation). Names consisting of initials appear at the beginning of each letter's list.
Last: Price stock was trading at when exchange closed for the day.
Chg: Loss or gain for the day. No change indicated by ...
YTD: Percent change in price since December 31.
How to use: The year-to-date percent change compares the most recent price with the company's price as of Dec. 31. The number is a good way to compare and track the performance of different companies in the same industry or the same town.

Benchmarks are important in investing and the year-to-date percent change can be a useful field of information when used as a benchmark. If you were considering investing in the automotive industry, for example, you could watch to see which auto stock was enjoying the best performance so far this year by looking at this field.

These numbers can be helpful in following stocks but as with all financial data are only one of many factors to use in determining how to invest. Consult your financial advisor before making any investment decision.

NEW YORK — Crude oil futures rose sharply Thursday after Iraq turned away United Nations weapons inspectors, raising concerns of U.N. retaliation.

Crude oil futures topped a Jan. 15 high on the New York Mercantile Exchange after Iraq barred the inspectors from entering suspected illegal weapons sites on three successive visits. The news prompted speculation sanctions, such as a halt to oil exports, could be imposed.

November crude rose 72 cents to $21.77 a barrel. The gains also boosted crude products. November heating oil rose 1.61 cents to 59.80 cents a gallon; November gasoline rose 1.53 cents to 61.43 cents a gallon.

Natural gas prices fell, with the November contract falling 1.1 cents to $3.113 per 1,000 cubic feet.

Dollar mixed

NEW YORK — The dollar rose against the yen Thursday as traders continued to react to signs of weakness in the Japanese economy.

The dollar eased against the mark as the German currency benefited from a mild flight from Italian lire. Stubborn market convictions that Germany will have to raise interest rates soon were also supporting the mark.

New York trading was quiet, however, as many investors were absent for the Jewish holiday of Rosh Hashanah. Others held back ahead of key employment data due out Friday.

In late trading in New York, the dollar was quoted at 121.65 Japanese yen, up from 120.90 late Wednesday. The dollar bought 1.7728 German marks, down from 1.7734.

The dollar was trading late in New York at 1,739.50 lire, up from 1,738.00.

In other markets, the British pound was quoted at $1.6160, up from $1.6152.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Wednesday: 1.4557 Swiss francs, down from 1.4595; and 1.3728 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3873.

Stocks nudge higher

NEW YORK — The Dow Jones industrial average tiptoed forward Thursday, holding above the celebrated 8,000 mark, while the S&P 500 and Nasdaq composite index returned to record levels.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 12.03 to 8,027.53 in mild trading. The blue-chip barometer remains up more than 24 percent in 1997, but has done little to threaten its Aug. 6 peak of 8,259.31.

Advancing issues outnumbered decliners by about 11 to 8 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 474.76 million shares, up from 597.89 million in the previous session. With many traders abandoning Wall Street for Rosh Hashanah, the Jewish New Year, volume was well below Wednesday's level.

The Technology-laden Nasdaq composite rose 12.07 to 1,702.37, topping its past high of 1,697.36, set Sept. 23.

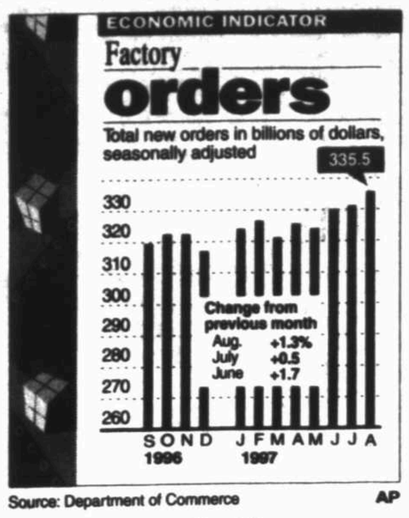

Elsewhere in the broader market, stocks posted modest gains and logged new records.

The Standard & Poor's 500-stock list rose 5.05 to 960.46.

The NYSE composite rose 2.35 to 503.43 and the Amex composite rose 1.69 to 704.96.

Economy seems strong, not overheated

■ Factory orders surge, unemployment benefit applications remain low.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Surging demand for electronic components and aircraft boosted manufacturing while unemployment benefit applications remained low, the government said Thursday in reports depicting a strong but not overheated economy.

"The reason everything is so wonderful is we're not in a boom. We've got solid moderate growth that therefore can be sustained," said economist David Orr of First Union Corp. in Charlotte, N.C.

Orders to U.S. factories jumped 1.3 percent in August to a seasonally adjusted $335.4 billion, the Commerce Department said. It was the third consecutive increase but overstated manufacturing's momentum.

The strength was almost entirely concentrated in two categories. Orders for electronic components such as semiconductors and circuit boards soared 76.9 percent, the largest increase since February 1960.

Aircraft orders jumped 30.8 percent, spurred by retooling at U.S. airlines and demand from foreign carriers.

Without those two gains, orders overall would have been down 1.7 percent.

Moreover, a report Wednesday from the National Association of Purchasing Management showed manufacturing momentum slowed in September.

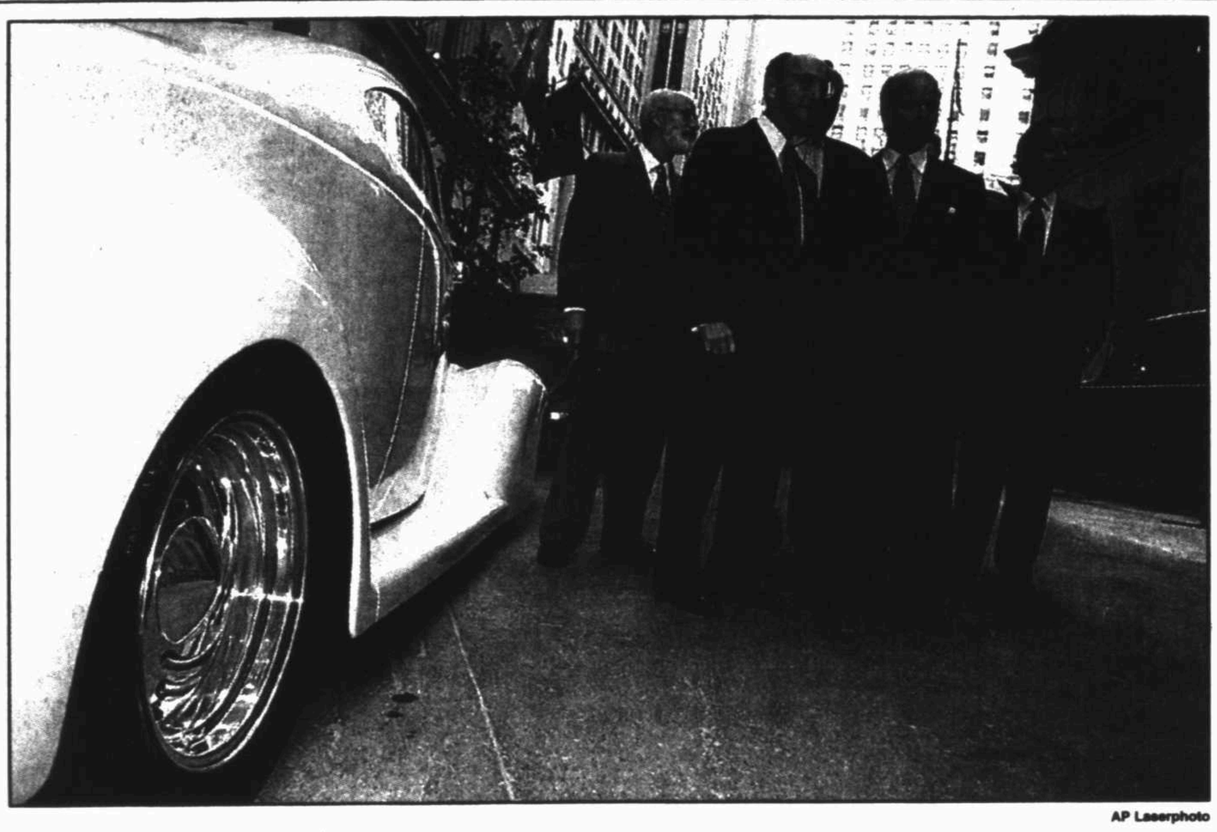

New applications for unemployment benefits inched up by 1,000 last week to 308,000, the Labor Department said. It was the first increase in a month but left claims at a level reflecting continued demand for workers.

A four-week moving average of claims, which analysts track because it smooths weekly fluctuations, fell by 4,250 to 308,750, the lowest since mid-August.

"It's certainly at a level that fits with the idea that labor markets are extremely tight," said economist Dan Laufenberg of American Express Financial Advisers in Minneapolis. "There's all kinds of help-wanted signs everywhere and special programs to attract workers, such as finders fees and bonuses."

Meanwhile, same-store retail spending in September rose just 0.4 percent over the same period a year ago, reported TeleCheck Services Inc. The Houston-based company compared the dollar volume of checks written at more than 27,000 locations.

William Ford, TeleCheck's senior economic adviser, suggested the increase was so small because Princess Diana's death and funeral kept many would-be shoppers home watching television.

New airline tax structure takes effect

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Remember when airline taxes just got you when you were going? Well, now the government is getting you coming and going.

Under a new law passed by Congress in August, airline ticket taxes were restructured as of Oct. 1. The new system replaced the $6 departure tax on international tickets with a $12 arrival and departure tax — meaning a round-trip ticket from New York to London has $24 in taxes.

In actuality, the airlines have been collecting those higher taxes for the government since Aug. 13 on flights booked for travel beginning Oct. 1.

At Garber Travel in Boston, Michael Sprague, director of leisure sales, said not many customers have complained about the extra fees.

"If you're going to spend $300 to $400 to $500 on a trip, spending an additional $12 to $18 on top of it has not got the consumer saying, "Oh I'm not going," he said.

As for domestic tickets, those changes only took effect Wednesday.

A 10 percent excise tax on most domestic tickets dropped to 9 percent, and an additional $1 fee is being charged per flight segment.

For instance, a person flying from Dallas to New York on a ticket that costs $685.32 would pay $61.68 in excise tax and $1 in a segment fee.

While that might have meant a slight savings under the law itself — a 1 percent fee on a $685.32 one-way ticket, for instance, would be $6.85 compared with a $1 segment fee, the major airlines started collecting that 1 percent as a fare increase beginning last Friday.

"This keeps the traveling public from receiving any tax break and the airlines get another windfall," said Tom Parsons, editor of Best Fares magazine.

Joe Hopkins, a United spokesman, said that while consumers are never pleased when costs rise, "there are still a lot of good bargains out there."

And since taxes are never simple, there are exceptions to the new law. Travelers heading to rural airports are exempt from the new segment fee. Their tickets will be taxed at 7.5 percent. And travel between Alaska and the U.S. mainland or between Hawaii and the continental United States will be taxed at $6 in each direction, plus the 9 percent tax.

Confused yet? There's more. As the tax law was written, the general domestic excise tax will be gradually phased down to 7.5 percent by October 1999, while the segment fee will increase each year until it equals $3 by the year 2000. These taxes bring in roughly $20 million daily into the Airport and Airway Trust Fund, which finances airport modernization.

And those who read the fine print will notice some other changes. A so-called "Aphis Fee" collected for the Agriculture Department on international tickets rose from $1.45 in September to $2.

Authorities probe Anheuser-Busch

■ Justice Department antitrust authorities probe company's distribution practices.

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Anheuser-Busch Cos., the world's biggest brewer, joined a growing list of dominant companies being scrutinized by federal antitrust authorities because of programs designed to reward distributors or retailers who favor their products.

The Justice Department's antitrust division has started a review of industry complaints about an aggressive program that gives cash incentives to distributors who favor Budweiser and other Anheuser-Busch products.

The Justice Department is looking into "our company's policies and practices in marketing and distribution," Royce J. Estes, Anheuser-Busch's vice president for corporate law, said in a statement.

"We are confident that all our practices are entirely legitimate and legal," Estes said. "We'll cooperate fully with the investigation."

Justice Department spokeswoman Gina Talamona confirmed that antitrust enforcers are "looking at the possibility of anticompetitive practices affecting the distribution of beer and other malt beverages."

News of the investigation was reported today by the Wall Street Journal.

Anheuser-Busch shares were unchanged at 45 in midday trading today.

The St. Louis-based brewer has been pushing its products for more than a year through a program called "100 Percent Share of Mind" under which the company rates distributors according to how much they concentrate on pushing Anheuser-Busch products. The company ties those ratings to a variety of incentives — such as discounts, marketing assistance and favorable credit.

That program has prompted some wholesalers to drop distribution arrangements with small microbrewers, according to Jay Nelson, a stock analyst with Brown Brothers Harriman.

In July several microbrewers filed private antitrust suits charging Anheuser-Busch with unfairly using its market clout to stifle competition. Anheuser-Busch is the brewing industry leader, commanding about 44 percent of the U.S. market.

Now, the Justice Department is taking a look at those same practices, increasing the pressure on Anheuser-Busch to make changes in the Share of Mind program.

"I think they're sort of putting these guys on notice that they're being watched," Nelson said. "They can maybe hope to alter practices without (filing suit)."

Federal antitrust enforcers have stepped up efforts recently to examine allegations that incentive programs, particularly by companies who dominate their markets, violate anti-monopolization laws.

Last year, the Justice Department started a probe of marketing practices in the salty snack-food market after complaints that Pepsico Inc.'s Frito-Lay Inc. unit used unreasonably low prices and other methods to drive competitors off supermarket shelves.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Examine track record before subscribing to newsletter

By Eric Tyson

Q: I am interested in learning more about the stock market and some strategies that may help me invest for my future. Could you give me a list of the three best financial newsletters that are available to the public?

Tyson

A: Before I recommend any investment newsletter in particular, allow me to caution you about investment newsletters in general. Although their marketing materials often promise subscribers grandiose returns of 15 percent, 20 percent, sometimes 30 percent you should know that not a single newsletter, when risk levels are taken into account, has made recommendations that beat the market's overall return during the past 15 years or more.

That is hardly surprising when you consider that most newsletters advocate investing strategies based on market timing or short-term trading. Such high-turnover techniques consistently prove to be less effective than the more mundane strategy of buying and holding.

Of course, a serial publication can hardly afford to recommend that you buy a handful of stocks and sit on them for 10 years. You wouldn't need to subscribe to the newsletter.

Independent services that track newsletter recommendations' returns have pointed out that newsletters do not live up to their boasts. And those services do not even factor taxes into account. With all the trading that some newsletters advise, the after-tax returns generated by following their advice would be even worse.

There are no investing geniuses in the newsletter world, only marketing geniuses. The truly great investing minds out there are quietly managing money — which is far more profitable than publishing a newsletter telling you how to manage yours.

Before you subscribe to an investment newsletter, examine its historic track record through an objective, third-party source. In fact, the first investment newsletter that I'll recommend to you is the Hulbert Financial Digest, which tracks the recommendations of other newsletters. The Digest looks at the cold, hard facts and often finds that a newsletter's actual performance is a far cry from its inflated and unaudited marketing claims. You can get Digest information on-line at http: //cybersurfing.com/hfd/.

According to the Digest, one of the best stock-picking newsletters out there is the Value Line Investment Survey, which you can reach at (800) 634-3583. Although it does make stock recommendations, it is most widely respected for its individual stock reports, which condense down to a single page the key information and statistics on a stock and the company behind the stock.

I believe that investing in mutual funds — rather than picking individual stocks — is a much better way to go for most investors. A useful mutual fund newsletter is the No-Load Fund Analyst — (800) 776-9555 — which offers in-depth analysis of the better no-load funds out there.

Q: What do you think of forming an investment club for purposes of learning more about investing and actually buying good investments with like-minded people?

A: I think clubs are better for learning than they are for pooling investment money.

A large part of smart investing involves choosing investments that match your desire to take risk and your tax situation. It's unlikely you can find a group of people with needs identical to yours.

I've seen more than a few clubs disintegrate over differences of opinion and investing styles.

The best parts of clubs are the learning that takes place and the social contact.

You can get both of those benefits by meeting with others to discuss, for example, things that you've all read, such as helpful financial periodicals and books. Rather than an investing club, you can think of it as an investment READING club.

K-State doesn't give hoot about 'Huskers streak

Associated Press

Bill Snyder doesn't think Kansas State's 28-game losing streak against Nebraska will be a big factor when the teams meet Saturday.

"My experience with young people is when yesterday's gone, it's gone," the Wildcats coach said. "I don't think they give a hoot what happened last year or the year before."

This will be the third straight season that Kansas State has been undefeated entering the Nebraska game. The Cornhuskers easily won the last two meetings, 49-25 in 1995 and 39-3 last season.

No. 3 Nebraska and No. 17 Kansas State are both 3-0 going into this year's game in Lincoln, Neb. And both are coming off impressive victories.

Nebraska had a week off after beating then-No. 2 Washington 27-14, while Kansas State gained a school-record 638 yards in a 58-0 rout of Bowling Green last week.

"Looking at the remainder of our schedule ... Kansas State is probably the most dangerous team that we have left," Nebraska coach Tom Osborne said. "I don't see anybody that (plays) as good as the way they are playing now."

The game will feature two of the top rushing attacks in the nation. The Huskers lead the country with 407 yards per game on the ground, while the Wildcats are ranked 11th with a 268-yard average.

Kansas State defensive tackle Jerome Evans said beating Nebraska would give the Wildcats a big boost.

"In the media and the community, people say we have to beat Nebraska to become a regarded program," Evans said. "It's something that a lot of teams don't accomplish."

In other Top 25 games Saturday, it's Arkansas at No. 1 Florida; No. 2 Penn State at Illinois; Miami at No. 4 Florida State; No. 5 North Carolina at Texas Christian; No. 6 Michigan at Indiana; No. 11 Iowa at No. 7 Ohio State; No. 8 Auburn at South Carolina; Mississippi at No. 9 Tennessee; No. 25 Arizona State at No. 10 Washington; Minnesota at No. 12 Michigan State; No. 13 LSU at Vanderbilt; Miami, Ohio at No. 14 Virginia Tech; No. 15 Washington State at Oregon; No. 21 Texas A&M at No. 16 Colorado; Mississippi State at No. 18 Georgia; Notre Dame at No. 19 Stanford; No. 20 Alabama at Kentucky; Houston at No. 22 UCLA; and Citadel at No. 23 Air Force

TECH: Audit shows large scope of school's problems

specializes in NCAA compliance matters, the audit investigated records of 683 current and former athletes. The athletes' names were deleted from the report.

It found that since the 1991-92 school year, athletes competed ineligibly at one time or another in football, men's and women's basketball, baseball, women's soccer, men's tennis, men's track and women's volleyball.

All current athletes have been properly certified and are fully eligible, administrators said.

New compliance director Robert Burton said it wasn't clear whether the school would have to forfeit past games or return the $120,000 received for the men's basketball team's two NCAA tournament victories in 1996. Four players on that team were deemed ineligible.

The women's basketball program carried ineligible players in three seasons. However, the 1993 NCAA national championship squad checked out clean.

Additionally, ineligible players participated in four football bowl games and NCAA tournaments in baseball and men's tennis. The women's basketball team reached the regionals all three years it had ineligible athletes.

The audit also said 25 football players were ineligible to compete in 1993-94. Sixteen were found ineligible for the next season, the year the Raiders finished in a five-way tie atop the now-defunct Southwest Conference.

"The travesty of this situation is that neither the student-athletes nor the coaches had anything to do with the errors in certification or eligibility," Montford said.

Misapplication of revised NCAA regulations passed in 1992 were at the heart of most violations, auditors concluded. The two main problem areas were rules governing the minimum number of hours taken and minimum progress toward a degree.

Auditors determined a handful of administrators weren't aware of or didn't fully understand the complex rules.

Montford restructured the athletic department's certification and academic services divisions over the summer, hiring two high-level administrators, including Burton, and adding staff members.

"These mistakes from the past are unacceptable," Montford said. "Texas Tech is committed to student-athlete welfare and will not tolerate such mistakes in the future."

The report, prepared by the law firm of Bond, Schoeneck & King, also found that the school paid out too much scholarship money in baseball, football, men's golf and men's track.

The NCAA has accepted the audit as part of its 1 1/2-year inquiry, Burton said. The NCAA has declined to comment on the investigation.

Where was America's first free black town?

The ruins of Fort Mose are two miles north of St. Augustine, Fla. In the late 1680s, 11 slaves escaped from Charles Town in the Carolinas and struggled for hundreds of miles before reaching the Spanish stronghold, seeking sanctuary. The newcomers swore allegiance to the Spanish king, converted to Catholicism and took up residence.

By 1693, the Spanish were offering freedom and sanctuary to any slaves who could escape their British masters. Many came to St. Augustine and joined the town's Black Militia. The unit distinguished itself in fights with the British and Indians, after which the governor of Spanish Florida granted land in 1738 for an all-black settlement that was to become Fort Mose. More than 20 families lived there and defended their community from attack.

The British attacked in 1740 and were defeated but, in the process, Fort Mose was destroyed. It was rebuilt and thrived until 1763, when its residents relocated to Cuba with the Spanish. The site was named a National Historic Landmark in 1994.

Next, fill in Tiebreaker 1, the total points scored by both teams in the week's Cowboys game. If this step fails to produce a winner, the judges will apply Tiebreaker 2, total offensive yardage from scrimmage in this game. If a winner still doesn't emerge, a drawing will be held among those contestants still tied. Decisions of the judges are final. The weekly statewide winner of the contest will receive $1,000.
2. Any entry form that does not contain a legible name, address, etc., will be disqualified.
3. Entries that fail to forecast a winner from each and every game will be disqualified, as will entries that fail to distinguish between the Jets and Giants of New York and Pitt and Pittsburgh.
4. No points are awarded on tie games or in case any game is not played for any reason during its scheduled week.
5. Entering POWER POINTS constitutes permission by contestant for his or her name and photograph to be used for news and reasonable promotional purposes at no charge.
6. Employees of this newspaper and their immediate families are ineligible to participate.
7. Any inquiry about or protest of weekly results must be made by noon on the Friday following the announcement of winners.
8. No purchase necessary. Facsimile game entry forms will be accepted. Enter contest by dropping entry form into POWER POINTS container at participating co-sponsors.
9. Weekly deadline for entry will be 2 p.m. Fridays except when noted otherwise on weekly entry form.
10. Neither this newspaper nor any co-sponsor will be responsible for illegible entry forms or those lost, stolen or damaged in any way.
11. Limit: one entry per person per week. Each entry must represent the original work of one entrant. "group" entries, "systems" or other attempts to enter multiple entries will be disqualified. Filling out extra forms and putting your friends' and relatives' names on them violates this rule. Any such entries are destroyed prior to grading.
12. Contestants must have reached the age of eight (8) years by the Sunday of any week's play.

Longtime Midland resident Patsy Welmaker poses with Midland Mayor Bobby Burns in front of FiFi, one of the aircraft on exhibit at the Confederate Air Force. This photo was shot in the spring of '97 during the Midland Chamber of Commerce's "Sky's the Limit" membership drive. The Chamber of Commerce encourages everyone to visit AirSho 97.

Midland Reporter-Telegram October 1997

Confederate Air Force presents Fina Airsho 97

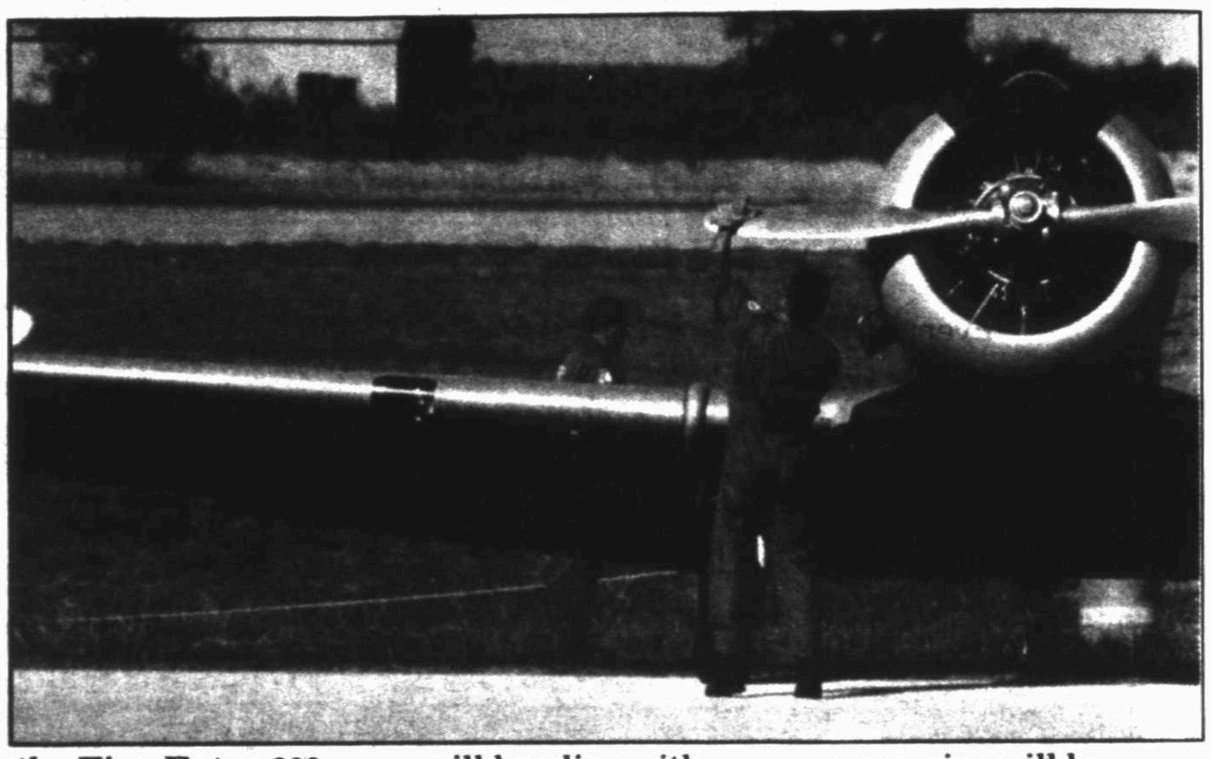

Aviation enthusiasts will soon be able to satisfy their cravings for "Warbirds and Thunderbirds" at the Confederate Air Force's (CAF) annual homecoming. FINA AIRSHO 97 is scheduled to take-off October 4th and 5th, with special guests the CAF's Ghost Squadron and the U.S. Air Force Thunderbirds.

FINA AIRSHO 97 will celebrate two significant anniversaries. The CAF's AIRPOWER DEMONSTRATION featuring the P-40 Warhawk, P-51 Mustang, P-47 Thunderbolt, P-38 Lightning, B-17 Flying Fortress, B-24 Liberator and the B-29 Superfortress will honor the CAF's 40th anniversary.

The U.S. Air Force's 50th anniversary will be celebrated with the Thunderbird's performance. Flying the F-16 Fighting Falcon, the Thunderbirds will demonstrate precision aerial maneuvers to exhibit the capabilities of this modern high-performance aircraft.

Among the many modern military aircraft scheduled to participate in FINA AIRSHO 97 are the U.S. Navy's F-15 Tomcat Demonstration Team, a Russian "Hind" attack helicopter and aircraft from the Korean and Vietnam eras. FINA AIRSHO 97 would not be complete without Jan Collmer's heart-stopping aerobatics in the Fina Extra 300. Flying Navy fighters both on active duty and in the reserves, Collmer will demonstrate the raw power of the Extra 300 and the precision flying skills of a seasoned naval aviator.

The CAF grounds will be alive with activities for the entire family. Tradeshow vendors with aviation-related items will be displayed throughout the hangar. official CAF and Thunderbirds merchandise as well as FINA AIRSHO 97 souvenirs will be available in the CAF Gift Shop.

For more information, contact DeAnna Howard, Public Relations Coordinator at CAF Headquarters (915) 563-1000. To order advance tickets call 800-CAF-SHOW.

Pilots display American airpower

NELLIS AIR FORCE BASE, Nev.--They take the combat skills every fighter pilot learns and transform them into an aerial ballet that inspires the young, instills confidence in the old, and makes Americans everywhere proud of their Air Force.

The pilots of U.S. Air Force Air Demonstration Squadron exhibit the capabilities of modern, high-performance aircraft, and the high-degree of professional skill required to fly them.

Four pilots with a combined total of more than 11,000 hours of flying time make up the 1997 diamond formation. Working together as one, they demonstrate the skills and techniques every U.S. Air Force fighter pilot learns in his or her initial training. This includeds everything from basic loops, rolls and formation flying, to advanced air combat tactics.

Lt. Col. Ron Mumm, in his second season as the team's commander, leads the diamond.

"I guide the team through each demonstration, establishing a platform for all formation flying and puttIng us where we need to be." the Boss, a former F-15 pilot said. "The rest of the diamond is focused on my aircraft and depend on me to be smooth so they can maintain their tight positions."

Relying on the Boss are three Desert Storm veterans who flew a combined total of 97 combat missions in the Persian Gulf.

"When the Boss moves, we move," Maj. Scott Cerilli, an F-16 pilot in his second year on the left wing, said. "From takeoff to landing, it requires complete focus and anticipation of the next maneuver to stay welded to each other's wings."

For safety reasons no one can fly any one else's position on the team.

"We fly the maneuvers together, but in a roll for example, I fly a profile that is the complete opposite of the right wingman's" Cerilli said. For me to change sides would be disasterous."

"We maintain an 18-inch to 3-foot distance between us and the lead aircraft," Capt. Rob Givens, a former A-10 pilot and first year right wingman, said. "This allows us to line up reference points and get the right look."

Stacked beneath and directly behind the lead aircraft, first-year pilot Maj. Paul Krause rounds out the diamond formation.

"In formation flying, we have to trust each other," the F-16 pilot said. "I fly right behind and below the Boss and pass very close under Rob and Scott during the different maneuvers. To do that, I need total confidence that they're going to hold a steady path."

In addition to showing the publc the skill of the Air Force's pilots, Thunderbird solo pilots demonstrate to American taxpayers the qualities of the aircraft they pay for.

S.A.L.T. offers valuable programs for seniors

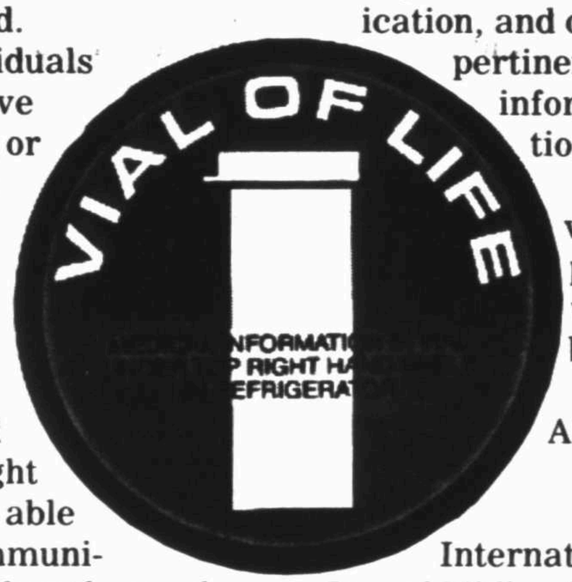

The name S.A.L.T. means Seniors and Lawmen Together, working to service our senior citizens and make their life safer. Our program includes *Vial of Life, *Senior Survey, * Free Smoke Detectors, H.E.A.T. and we are working to complete a program for free painted house numbers, front and back. Area Boy Scouts will paint the numbers with materials donated by Westlake Ace Hardware. The Police and Fire Departments encourage all home owners to have front and back house numbers to make their job easier when trying to locate an address. An example would be a prowler in the back yard and not being able to discover the correct address could delay apprehension of a prowler.

Vial For Life

Vial for life is an identification for emergency use by a rescue squad team if their services were ever needed.

Individuals who live alone, or might be alone for a certain period or might not be able to communicate when the need arises will be the primary users. It is also being used as a family vial.

You will keep the vial in your refrigerator, strapped under upper right hand shelf in a plastic capped vial. Inside the vial is information regarding resident's name, address, phone, age, physicians name, relative's or neighbor's name, past medical history, current medication, and other pertinent information.

The vial is provided by Altrusa International, Inc. of Midland.

The S.A.L.T. Council consists of up to twenty but not fewer than eight members. Members are ex-officio and at-large. Ex-officio members shall be the designated representatives of each of the Triad organizations: AARP, MidlandCounty Sheriff's Department and the Midland

Seniors can win a trip home for the holidays

Southwest Airlines and the Permian Basin Area Agency on Aging are partnering together again this year to provide an opportunity for senior citizens in ther Permian Basin to fly "Home for the Holidays," states Cookie Wetendorf, Director of the Area Agency on Aging. "Last year fifteen lucky winners from the Permian Basin got to spend Thanksgiving or Christmas with family and loved ones. Southwest flew more than 850 senior citizens home through this program in 1996" Wetendorf said. "I wish we could snap a picture of each senior as they arrive at the terminal when they are reunited with families and friends. This is one of those special programs that really makes a difference and we're so thankful Southwest makes this program available year after year."

The "Home for the Holidays" program provides each winner with a complimentary roundtrip ticket to any Southwest Airlines destination between the travel dates of December 1, 1997 through Janury 10, 1998. Applications will be judged by a review panel and the winners will be announced at a reception hosted by Southwest Airlines and the Area Agency on Aging.

Senior citizens who are at least 65 years of age before December 1, 1997 can call the Permian Basin Area Agency on Aging's toll-free number 1-800-491-4636 to receive an application in the mail or s pick one up from their local senior citizens center. All applications must be received by the Area Agency by October 17.

"Hearing aids are too loud" Not with Beltone's new Comfort Circuit

If you've been waiting for something better to come along before you do something about your hearing loss—this is it! Beltone has a totally new and vastly improved way to fit hearing instruments. It's called Loudness Growth Profiling. This new technique is designed specifically to increase your hearing comfort.

Using Loudness Growth Profile results and Beltone's exclusive computerized fitting system, we can personalize Beltone's new Comfort Circuit to help keep the sounds you hear in your comfort range.

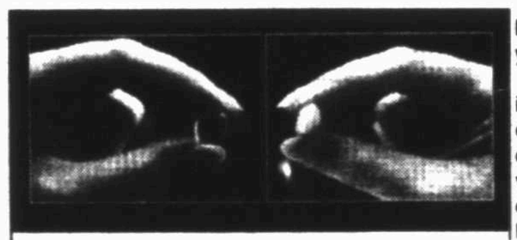

Beltone's "hidden hearing aid" has new, improved circuitry!

Invisa, Beltone's "hidden hearing aid," has something new. Invisa has been improved with an exciting advance called the Comfort Circuit. Beltone's Comfort Circuit makes better hearing more comfortable.

Beltone's Comfort Circuit is designed to adapt automatically as you move from one listening environment to another. It constantly adjusts both high and low frequencies to help keep loud sounds comfortable and make soft sounds easier to hear.

The trouble with ordinary hearing aids.

Ordinary hearing aids provide one preset increase in volume to all sounds, regardless of how loud they are, or how sensitive you may be to them. Hearing aids with Beltone's Comfort Circuit are designed to fine-tune the volume as your surroundings change.

Nobody notices when you wear Invisa.

Invisa hides deeply inside your ear canal, so it's almost completely hidden from view. That's why it's called the "hidden hearing aid." Benefits of hearing aids vary by type and degree of hearing loss, noise environment, accuracy of hearing evaluation and proper fit.

INVISA

More advanced, yet still small around as a soft contact lens.

CHROMIUM-This essential mineral maintains stable blood sugar levels through proper insulin utilization, and can be helpful both for people with high or low blood sugar levels. It also promotes the loss of fat and an increase in lean muscle tissue. A deficiency of chromium can lead to anxiety, fatigue, and an increased risk of arteriosclerosis. The average American diet is chromium deficient due to the lack of chromium in our soil and water supply, and by a diet high in refined white sugar, flour & junk foods.

Citizens on Patrol: Community Policing

Midland has embarked on a new course; the destination: achieving self-reliant neighborhoods, the vehicle: community policing. The police department is moving toward achieving this goal with the understanding that community policing is a philosophy and an organizational strategy that promotes a progressive partnership between citizens and police. It is with these three basic tenets in mind that the following proposal for a volunteer citizen's on patrol program is submitted.

1. Objective and Goal

a. With the citizens' perception that crime is seeminly multiplying at astronomical rates, it is imperative that something is done to return a sense of security and prosperity to Midland's neighborhoods. This program will place additional crime fighting deterrent eyes, ears and bodies where they are needed most ... in the community.

2. Method of Operation

a. Citizen's On Patrol should be a program of inclusion. We want to make as many citizens as possible feel that they can contribute to the restoration of their neighborhoods; therefore this program will be open to ages 18 and over. A system of participant screening will be implemented.

3. Method of Implementation

a. The Citizens On Patrol participants will be trained by police officers through sessions similar to those offered by the Citizen's Police Academy; however, it will be more intensive in selected subject areas because the trainees will actually be patrolling the streets. The curriculum will consist of 18 hours of instruction including courses on report writing, crime identification and prevention, legal issues, and field training. The Program Coordinator and the Liaison Officer will be responsible for designing and implementing the training sessions.
