Bell Loses Fight On Phone Rates

AUSTIN (UPI) — The state Supreme Court today ruled that the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. is not entitled to a $298.3 million statewide rate increase which was requested almost two years ago.

The court, in a 7-2 decision, said the Public Utility Commission had made some errors in calculating the rate increase due to the telephone company but had reached a reasonable result in awarding Bell a $57.8 million increase.

Bell has since filed a second request for a $214.3 million increase, and the Utility Commission has scheduled its final round of public hearings on that case later this week.

In another ruling involving Southwestern Bell, the Supreme Court today decided that a San Antonio trial court acted improperly in ordering the company to pay $1 million in damages for invading the privacy of former Bell official James H. Ashley and his wife.

The major dispute in Bell's appeal of the PUC decision on the rate increase was whether the commission used an incorrect rate base in determining the return Bell should be allowed on its investment in Texas.

The telephone company contended that the commission should have used the adjusted value of invested capital rather than basing its rate-making formula on the original cost, less depreciation of the company's investment.

The Supreme Court's majority opinion today agreed with Bell that the commission should have used the adjusted value of invested capital as the rate base.

"It is undisputed that the commission computed the return to Bell under its dual rate base theory, which we have held is an incorrect interpretation of the Public Utility Regulatory Act," the majority opinion said.

"We do not accept a dual rate base theory, but the commission purported to determine the monetary return based upon what we have held to be the correct rate base, the adjusted value of invested capital," the court said. "By using this method of fixing revenues for Bell in the alternative, the commission has acted correctly."

The Supreme Court said the $57.8 million increase authorized for Bell is within the limits prescribed by the Utility Regulatory Act, and is regarded by the court as a fair return on the adjusted value of Bell's invested capital in Texas.

The court said the Utility Commission also acted improperly in excluding from the rate base all land held by the company for future use, but said such action is not sufficient to alter the outcome of the PUC ruling.

In a phase of the case not affecting the rates, the court ruled Bell is not entitled in its appeal to have a district court conduct a full hearing on the evidence in its case, but must limit the appeal to a review of matters presented before the PUC in administrative hearings.

The Supreme Court, without written opinion, affirmed a Civil Appeals Court ruling that the Ashleys had failed to prove their allegations the telephone company had used wiretaps and electronic eavesdropping to invade their privacy during a time another suit filed by Ashley and the widow of former Bell vice president T.O. Gravitt was pending.

A San Antonio trial court had ruled Ashley's telephones had been tapped, and ordered the telephone company to pay $1 million in actual and exemplary damages to him and his wife.

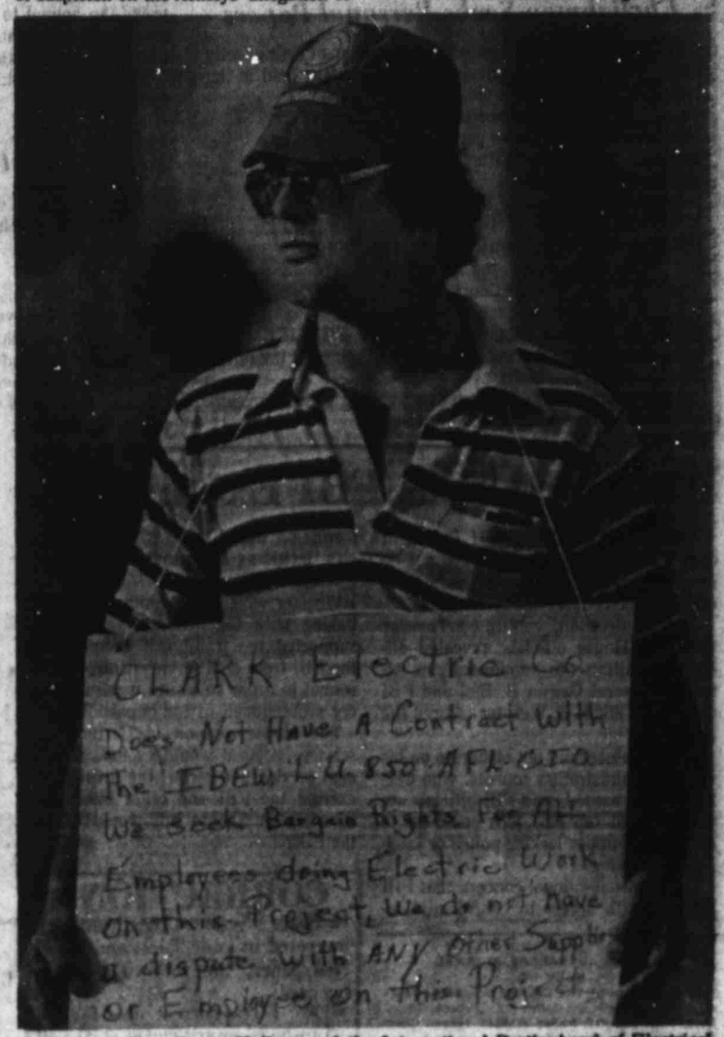

But the Eastland Court of Civil Appeals said Ashley's testimony regarding his conversations with Gravitt and other Bell employees concerning wiretaps should not have been admitted as evidence at the trial of the case.

"We have concluded the evidence creates nothing more than a mere surmise or suspicion on the Ashleys' allegation of eavesdropping and wiretapping," the Civil Appeals COurt said. "We find no evidence to support the jury finding."

Ashley, a Bell executive for 25 years, was suspended Oct. 1, 1974, and fired Oct. 31, 1974. T.O. Gravitt, Bell vice president for Texas and a friend of Ashley's, committed saicide Oct. 17 at his home in Dallas.

Ashley and Gravitt's widow filed suit against the telephone company, contend-

Texas House Nears Vote On Tax Relief

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas House members began work today on a constitutional amendments package that represents a diluted version of Gov. Dolph Briscoe's property tax relief plan.

Rep. Tim Von Dohlen, D-Goliad, the sponsor, acknowledged the proposals were a Texas response to the taxpayer revolt reflected in California's Proposition 13.

"Texas is not in the same circumstances as California, nor should our response be the same as California's — across the board property tax cuts," Von Dohlen said.

A Tuesday night decision by the House Ways and Means Committee moved the Peveto tax and uniformity bill to the House floor, but action on that measure is not expected until Friday.

Included in the amendments package are provisions instructing the Legislature to provide a homestead exemption from school taxes, allowing voters to repeal local property tax increases and taxing rural land on productivity, not market value.

Senators, meanwhile, received a compromise proposal similar to the one under consideration by the House.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said he thought the compromise constitutional amendment by Senate Dean A. M. Aikin, D-Paris, would get the required two-thirds vote in that chamber.

Aikin's proposal would:

— Remove the present constitutional requirement — which virtually all taxing authorities ignore — that intangible wealth is subject to property taxation.

— Tax rural land on its ability to produce income, not its worth on the real estate market.

— Exempt $5,000 of a homesteads value from school taxation, with another $10,000 exemption for persons 65 and over.

— Freeze school taxes at present levels for the 65-and-over age group.

— Require notice and hearings before property tax revenues could be increased.

In a night session, the committee voted 10-2 to kick the Peveto measure to the full House without a recommendation as to whether it should pass.

But this evidently will have little effect, and Speaker Bill Clayton said the measure might come up Friday — a day when some legislative optimists are predicting adjournment of the special session.

Rep. Wayne Peveto, D-Orange, forced his bill to a committee vote after complaining it was being bottled up by delaying tactics.

The key provisions of the bill would:

—Consolidate all property appraisals for tax purposes within a county in a single county-wide appraisal office;

—Establish a state property tax board, which would replace the present School Tax Assessment Practices Board, to set statewide appraisal standards and issue manuals and forms to guide local appraisal officials;

—Authorize voter repeal of tax increases above 5 percent per year;

—And, establish appeal procedures for property owners who believe their real estate has been unfairly appraised for taxation.

Committee members revised the bill 16 times, including addition of an amendment exempting firearms from personal property renditions.

Peveto said the only damaging amendment was one that eliminated the ability of taxpayers to obtain subpoenas in property tax appeal procedures.

"It's still a good bill. The only amendment that did damage was the subpoena thing," Peveto said. He said he would push on the House floor to make approval of property tax relief constitutional amendments contingent on passage of his bill and its signing by the governor.

Some of the amendments would provide mandatory homestead exemptions from school property taxes, and Peveto says these would be unequally granted without statewide uniformity of appraisals.

The committe also approved for floor debate a bill requiring notice and hearing before local property taxes can be increased, even by revaluation of real estate.

Panel Says IRS Forms Baffling

WASHINGTON (AP) — If any taxpayer needed official confirmation, here it is, from the General Accounting Office: income tax forms are too difficult for a lot of Americans to understand.

Both the long and short 1040 forms are "written at a reading level beyond that of many taxpayers," the GAO said in a 118-page report released Tuesday.

The Internal Revenue Service, said the GAO, is more concerned with having its forms precisely reflect the tax laws than making language understandable to the average taxpayer.

"Certainly, the accuracy of the forms and instructions has no value unless people understand what is being said," according to the report prepared for the Joint Congressional Committee on Taxation.

Another stumbling block for many taxpayers, the GAO said, "is the disorgaaized and cluttered design of the forms and instructions."

The report, noting that the IRS is working on making the forms and instructions easier to read, added, "even more can be done to improve readability without sacrificing technical accuracy."

The GAO panel of experts, which included a law professor, educators and a textbook publisher, recommended that the IRS establish a task force of writing and design experts to study improving the forms.

The IRS responded with a cautious endorsement, saying, "We agree that additional improvements can be made and that outside consultants may provide useful perspective and assistance ... We will take all appropriate steps to achieve further simplification within a balanced tax administration program."

The report cited this question from a form sent in all tax packets to determine whether poor working families qualify for help in paying for educational costs:

"Did you pay more than half the cort of keeping up a home in the U.S. in which you lived and which for the entire year (except for temporary absences for vacation, school, etc.) was also the home of (1) your child who was under 19 years of age or a full-time student, OR (2) your dependent child who is disabled (see pages 7 and 8)?"

The GAO suggested the question could be broken into three simpler questions:

"Did you pay more than half the cost of keeping up a home in the U.S.?

"Did you live in this home?

"Was this also the home of your child for the entire year, except for short absences such as vacation or school?"

Pickets Hamper Local Company

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. operations were hampered this morning as the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (IBEW) picketed a non-union contractor and 150 Communications Workers of America (CWA) honored the picket line at Bell's downtown headquarters.

A noontime conflict between the CWA and Bell was avoided at midmorning when the contractor, Clark Electric Co., agreed to discuss a new contract with the union and the line was removed at 10:10 a.m.

Sherry Lindsey, Lubbock president of the CWA, had said the two dozen or so members who came to work before the line went up at 7:55 a.m. would not come back after lunch, and Bell spokesman Jim Goodwin said the CWA was considered in violation of its contract and that the company was "considering what further action to take."

Contrary to what Mrs. Lindsey said, Goodwin said Wayne Doggett, Bell district manager of installation and repair, had told him the CWA had ordered its members back to the company at work this afternoon.

"The IBEW is affiliated with the AFL-CIO, and we are, too," Mrs. Lindsey said, "and any time a trade union puts up a contract picket, we will honor it."

Jack Merritt, IBEW business agent in Lubbock, reported at 10:20 a.m. that Clark executive Robert Mooty had called him to arrange for discussing a contract renewal and that the line had been taken down.

He said the IBEW contract with Clark lapsed June 1 and had not been renewed.

Western Electric Co., the firm that manufactures and installs Bell equipment, also honored the picket line. A Western management employee said outside the 1405 Main St. Bell headquarters in Lubbock that equipment installations there had been stopped.

Placards carried by picketing electricians, members of IBEW Local 850, said the union had no argument against the phone company or any of its employees.

"Our only complaint is with Clark Electric, and we would like the rights to bargain with their people," said picketer Danny Holloway.

Mrs. Lindsey said before the picket line was removed that the CWA has about 800 persons working for Bell in Lubbock but that only those at the headquarters building would go out.

Clark is in the process of doing minor electrical work throughout the building, Goodwin said.

Council To Ponder Plea For State Funds

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Lubbock City Council Thursday will consider asking the state Legislature to help provide some relief for city taxpayers.

Meeting in regular session beginning at 9:30 a.m. Thursday, council members will discuss sending a resolution to the Legislature asking that cities receive an additional penny of sales tax revenue.

Councilman Alan Henry said it would be up to the Legislature to decide if the sales tax would be increased from five to six cents on the dollar. Currently the city receives one cent of every five cents of tax collected in the city, with the state receiving the rest.

If such a measure were enacted, an additional $7 million could be generated in Lubbock. That would permit a 56-cent reduction in the $1.41 tax rate.

For the owner of a $40,000 home, that would mean a savings in city taxes of $134.

Henry emphasized the resolution was not an attempt to shift the tax relief burden from the city to the Legislature. "It's not in lieu of close scrutiny of each budget," he said.

The extra cent on the sales tax would allow cities to "move away from their dependence on property taxes," Henry said.

He said finding an alternate source of funding city operations had been a concern expressed to members of the council by numerous citizens.

And since the special session of the Legislature was called to provide tax relief for Texans, Henry said this seemed like a good time to forward such a resolution to Austin.

At Thursday's meeting the council also is scheduled to consider Mrs. R.L. Gibson's request either to have her East 61st Street residence annexed by the city or to have city water service extended to her house. She lives about one block outside the city limits.

Council members will consider for the second time a dispute over an ordinance requiring certain electrical wires to be enclosed in plastic conduits.

Henry Huneke, president of the West Texas Homebuilders Association, claimed at the last council meeting the conduits are too expensive for builders and do not protect wires from being cut accidentally.

An ordinance designed to cut down on the number of false alarms Lubbock police must answer should be put to its first council vote Thursday.

Council members also will discuss an ordinance which would require railroad companies to place cross arms and lights at hazardous railroad crossings.

Other council action is expected on bids for constructing a parking building at the Lubbock International Airport and bids for roadway and parking improvements at the airport. The parking building is expected to cost $1.6 million to construct.

Parking facilities at the airport have been overtaxed since Southwest Airlines started operations here last year and triggered a massive increase in boardings with bargain fares.

Former Maharani Regains Valuables

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The former Maharani of Jaipur, who spent five months jailed with murderers and thieves for allegedly violating laws restricting the ownership of gold and foreign currency, has regained some family valuables seized in 1975.

MRS. DEVI

The government on Tuesday told parliament that Gayatri Devi's family paid nearly $2 million in fines to regain a $1,250 gold parrot perch and other valuables.

Mrs. Devi, 59, once described the jail conditions as "uncivilized," "appalling" and "stinking."

The government said in 1975 that it had discovered more than $17 million worth of gold ornaments, bullion, silver and jewels in bank lockers, underground chambers and concealed crypts in family palaces at Jaipur, 150 miles south of Delhi.

Ehrlichman Seeks Personal Papers

WASHINGTON (AP) — John D. Ehrlichman isn't exactly sure how much of his private property is being held in the National Archives. But he asks in a federal suit for the chance to do an inventory and then remove personal papers that were stored after President Richard Nixon fired him.

EHRLICHMAN

Ehrlichman was fired in the heat of Watergate, on April 30, 1973. Nixon ordered his No. 2 aide's office sealed under FBI supervision, the suit filed Tuesday in U.S. District Court says.

Three months ago, Ehrlichman completed an 18-month prison term for his role in the Watergate coverup and the burglary of the office of a California psychiatrist.

Ehrlichman "needs to learn exactly what private property there is," says his lawyer, Stuart Stiller.

Nixon Criticizes Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Nixon is quoted as saying the Carter administration "is lousing up on so many things that we (Republicans) ought to have a great chance to make a comeback" in 1980.

House Republican Whip Robert H. Michel of Illinois, who is recuperating from a beating he suffered in a mugging last Friday, said Nixon made the political assessment during a get-well telephone call Tuesday.

He Has The Scoop

MIAMI (AP) — Some cities and states, in an effort to combat dog and cat litter, have passed laws requiring owners to scoop up after their animals. Inventor Franklin Temel has come up with the second generation device — a flush toilet for pets.

The Lighter Side Of Today's News

"When an idea like this hits you, you just light up like a firecracker," explained Temel, who spent eight years and $110,000 on his project.

He received his first patent on the dog-and-cat toilet in 1974 and the model he has in his house cost him $10,000.

The animal potty is a stall with a floor made of stainless steel slats. Underneath the floor are spray nozzles and a tank of water. It is surrounded on two sides by pipes, hoses and a fiberglass shell.

A bottled scent — a "terribly powerful stimulant" — attracts the animal to the toilet. Temel explained it took 18 months of observation, lab analyses and some personal sniffing to develop the right scent.

Temel estimates his animal toilet could be manufactured for under $250.

Cruise Needs More Work, Brown Says

SAN CLEMENTE ISLAND, Calif. (UPI) — Two cruise missiles, the weapon the Carter administration is depending on to fill in for more expensive weapons that won't be built, were test fired from a submarine publicly for the first time Tuesday, with Defense Secretary Harold Brown looking on.

Both flopped.

"We've just had a second complete failure," a Navy officer's voice announced over a loudspeaker to Brown and reporters, watching the test from a barren island off the coast of Southern California.

The second $1.7 million weapon had just splashed harmlessly into the ocean.

"That completes the events for the day."

Both missiles broke the water's surface, propelled by booster engines, but the cruise engines failed to ignite.

Designers said they apparently had not licked the problem of keeping salt water out of the rocket engine as it rises to the surface.

Webster Urges FBI Exemption

WASHINGTON (AP) — If President Carter has his way, the FBI will not be exempt from an administration bill to overhaul the civil service system.

Carter's decision, confirmed Tuesday by White House officials, revealed differences within the administration. Attorney General Griffin B. Bell and FBI Director William H. Webster favored the exemption.

While Webster did not elaborate on his views, administration sources, who declined to be named, said FBI officials are worried that top FBI jobs could go to federal executives lacking police or intelligence training.

There was additional concern that FBI officials with access to confidential information would transfer to other agencies, including some that may be under investigation.

Webster would only comment that he, "along with the attorney general, has supported the traditional exemption of the FBI from civil service control of personnel in order to assure maximum career professionalism and impartiality..."

The House version of Carter's civil service proposal would exclude the foreign service but permit the president to exempt the FBI and other intelligence agencies. A Senate bill would exempt the FBI.

Ruling Pleases Activist

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet court today gave Jewish activist Maria Slepak a three-year suspended sentence on charges of "malicious hooliganism" and said she could join her husband in exile.

Mrs. Slepak, 51, emerged from the courtroom in tears in the arms of her brother and sister and told Western correspondents the suspended sentence took into account her recent hospitalization for stomach ulcers.

"I can't believe it, I can't believe it," she said.

"This is the result because my people are supporting me," she told a about a dozen supporters, who were being watched by a score of uniformed policemen.

She said that during the 5½-hour trial the prosecutor had recommended a sentence of three years internal exile, two years less than her husband received in his trial on June 21.

Mrs. Slepak and her husband, Vladimir, a radio engineer, were arrested June 1 after they hung a sign from the balcony of their eighth floor apartment on Moscow's central Gorky Street demanding exit visas to Israel.

Slepak was convicted on June 21, but Mrs. Slepak did not stand trial with him because she was in a hospital with ulcers.

Her brother, Zinovy Rashkovsky, and her sister, Lilli, were admitted to the courtroom, but Western reporters were barred as they always are from trials of dissidents and would-be Jewish emigres.

Rashkovsky told correspondents the five-page indictment did not mention the wording of the Slepaks' placard. He said she was charged with hanging the placard, attracting a large crowd, disrupting traffic and refusing to take it down.

Mrs. Slepak could have been sentenced to five years in a labor camp.

The Slepaks have been trying since 1970 to emigrate to Israel. They were also associated with dissidents Anatoly Shcharansky and Alexander Ginzburg in the Helsinki group formed to propagandize the Soviet government's failure to comply with the human rights provisions of the 1975 Helsinki accords on European security.

Local Teen-Ager Loses Radio To Armed Man

In one of three armed robberies Tuesday, a 16-year-old Lubbock boy relinquished a tape recorder-radio after being confronted by a man wielding a chrome-plated .45 automatic pistol in the 300-block of Detroit Avenue.

The youth told police he was held up after he and two other teen-agers got off work about 10:45 p.m. from a 4th Street cafeteria.

The three employees reportedly were walking to a nearby convenience store when they were confronted by four or five black males traveling in a late model, red and white Monte Carlo.

While two of the employees kept walking, the youth said he stopped and a passenger in the car got out and flashed the gun, demanding, "give me that (the tape player), or I'll blow your head off."

The suspects fled the scene after taking the tape player-radio. The teen-ager described the man with the gun as about 25 years old, 7 feet tall, weighing approximately 140 pounds and having an afro haircut. He was wearing blue jeans but no shirt or shoes.

About an hour earlier, three women and a man were robbed by two armed teen-agers at the Neighborhood House, 2009 E. 13th St.

The victims, who reported a wallet and three purses stolen, were identified as Herbert Frederick Janssen, 29, of 3612 27th St.; Carolyn J. Anderson, 39, of 3102 81st St.; Connie Nall Kuratko, 24, of 4413 56th St.; and Juanita June Kuehn, 32, of 5410 25th St.

The four said they were leaving a meeting and walking to their cars when confronted by the suspects.

One of the teen-agers allegedly struck Janssen over the head with a stick, and the other suspect was said to have pulled a pistol and shot in the air.

Along with the wallet and three purses, $110 in cash was reported taken. The suspects were last seen heading north toward E. Broadway.

A pair of armed robbers got away with only about $6 in cash and a $30 watch after gagging and tying up one of the owners of a store at 811 Idalou Road.

Lillie Hollinsworth told police she looked down the barrel of a .22 caliber chrome-plated pistol and was told to give up her money after two men entered her business, Johnny's Bargain Store, about 2 p.m. Tuesday.

Mrs. Hollinsworth said the bandits threatened to kill her after she told them her husband had taken the day's receipts to the bank.

After taking $6 from her billfold, the suspects led Mrs. Hollinsworth to an office area where she was bound.

The victim said the robbers failed in their attempt to remove a ring from her finger. She said she called police after the suspects fled.

A Lubbock woman was arrested about 5:30 p.m. Tuesday after she told police she shot 22-year-old Wendell Owen Jones in the left shoulder. Jones of 2005-C 5th St. was treated and released at West Texas Hospital.

The shooting, the apparent result of a domestic quarrel, occurred in front of an apartment complex at 501 Ave. S., where police found Jones and the woman.

The suspect reportedly told police, "Here's the gun, I shot him." A .22-caliber revolver was found on the hood of the woman's 1967 Plymouth.

A 21-year-old Lubbock man was taken into custody after he answered police officers' knocks at his trailer home door with a pointed shotgun.

The officers were answering a disturbance call about 11 p.m. Tuesday in an Auburn Street trailer park.

After officer Darwin Tarter pulled the gun away, the man was arrested.

A color television set and silverware, totaling about $1,550, was reported taken in a house burglary at 6906 Ave. U.

The break-in apparently occurred sometime last week after the owner of the house, Leroy Paulger, left town. The burglary was reported to police by Paulger's son.

Bessie Washington of 1715 E. 1st St. told police her home was broken into between noon and 5 p.m. Tuesday and a TV set, money and tennis gear, totaling $330 was taken. Entry apparently was gained through a bedroom window.

A tail gate and tail light was reported taken off a new Dodge sitting on the lot of University Dodge, 7007 University Ave. The dealer, Joe Young, said the theft occurred between 8 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. Tuesday and the loss was estimated at $155.

In recently reported burglaries, Gordon Carey said someone took an $850 set of golf clubs from his car Monday afternoon while the vehicle was parked at 701 E. 34th St.

Robert J. Chaney of 1204 Broadway, No. 923, told police that whoever broke out the right rear window of his vehicle parked in the alley behind his residence made off with fishing gear and tools valued at $372. He said it would cost $50 to replace the window in his car.

Apartment manager George Paul said someone took a $200 stove from an apartment at 2505 Weber Drive.

Mindi Holloway said someone entered her car while it was parked at 4215 University Ave. Tuesday afternoon and took $100 in cash from her wallet that she left under the front seat of the car.

Convicted Burglar Gets Six-Year Prison Term

A Lubbock man, convicted by a 137th District Court jury after only five minutes of deliberation, faces six years in prison for his part in the burglary of a mobile home.

Phillip Lozano Acosta, 42, of 2110 Duke St., No. 101, asked for a probated sentence, but District Judge Robert C. Wright told the defendant he could not overlook Acosta's having driven the car involved in the crime "and watched your son participate."

The defense had argued Acosta played no part in burglarizing the home of Epifanio Cisneros of New Deal on March 30, 1977, but the prosecution claimed he was an active participant.

Fred Harkey, a New Deal farmer, testified that he began watching an automobile through his binoculars after seeing it drive near his barn. He told the jury the car finally parked near the Cisneros home, and the occupants began loading guns, a television set and other goods into the trunk of the auto.

Harkey said he followed the car when it left and managed to copy down its license number when the vehicle reached North University Avenue. He then called Lubbock County sheriff's deputies.

The car, with Acosta at the wheel, was stopped a short time later by Lubbock police. With him were five juveniles.

One of the juveniles served as a defense witness and said, in effect, that the break-in was done on impulse and Acosta remained in his car.

"You made no effort to stop (it)," Judge Wright told Acosta as he denied probation. He also referred to a 1964 burglary conviction and four-year probated sentence granted the man.

"You had been given a second chance," said the judge.

PLO BUILDING

MOSCOW (AP) — Palestinian guerrilla leader Yasser Arafat cut the ribbon to open a new building in Moscow this week for his Palestine Liberation Organization, Tass reported. The brief dispatch from the Soviet news agency said Arafat was on his way to Cuba. But it did not say when he arrived or when he would leave.

One Strike, You're Out!

SAN ANTONIO City Manager Tom Huebner will have earned a Hall of Fame all his own if he can make stick the firing of 106 unionized garbage workers who went out on strike in violation of state law.

"They're through as employes of the City," Huebner said as he began hiring replacements for the men who walked off the job in a wage dispute.

He said other employes who claimed they missed work because they were afraid or were intimidated by the strikers will be considered "on a case by case basis" for retaining their jobs.

Garbage trucks were rolling again, under heavy police guard, as the city manager and strike leaders continued to trade verbal shots this week.

IF HUEBNER STICKS to his guns, he will have performed a valuable public service.

The San Antonio strike is one of several that have plagued major cities over the country this hot summer. Firemen, policemen and other protectors of the public safety and welfare, in addition to garbage workers, have abandoned their duties.

Part of the problem in San Antonio, the city manager said, was that the employes believed they could stage their illegal strike without losing their jobs. Texas prohibits strikes by public employes.

Ten years ago, Huebner recalled, garbage workers were rehired as part of a strike settlement and he now believes that was a mistake.

It encouraged the employes to endanger public health again by refusing to work and thereby letting the garbage rot in 90-degree-plus heat, fully expecting to be rehired again.

GARBAGE WORKERS in San Antonio average about $500 a month, according to news reports.

This is certainly no magnanimous salary but it is well above the minimum wage scale and is in line with the pay for similarly unskilled labor in other fields.

Any person who wants to better himself, and who has the aptitude, has that opportunity in this land. In the case of policemen and firemen, however, it should be noted parenthetically that their pay and benefit packages are generally good.

The point that's important in all this, though, is one that's too often forgotten: Any person who is dissatisfied with his job on the public payroll is free to quit but he has no right to strike and leave the public unprotected.

That's the point San Antonio's city manager is making and we applaud him for that.

Castro 'News' Unfit To Print

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Kenneth May and One Man's Opinion will return after a brief intermission.)

WASHINGTON—A timely and politically explosive question—Are Communists manipulating an important part of the media?—is being raised by the highly respected Cardinal Mindzenty Foundation of St. Louis, Mo., a private organization devoted to promoting Christian living and opposing Communism.

The controversial issue was highlighted in the latest Mindzenty Report distributed on the same weekend that Cuba's Fidel Castro orchestrated an unprecedented campaign in the U.S. media against President Carter and Zbigniew Brzezinski, his national security adviser.

Foreign diplomats in Havana report that the Communist Dictator had two objectives.

THE FIRST WAS TO challenge the credibility of President Carter and his statements of Cuban involvement with Katangan rebels that launched the abortive invasion of Zaire's Shaba province from Angola.

The second objective was to make impossible for President Carter to support any covert operation, either by the CIA or another foreign government, against the more than 30,000 Cubans now in Angola.

While the Mindzenty Report was prepared before Castro's propaganda blitz, the document spotlighted previous favorable treatment of the Cuban Communist leader by a national U.S. TV network as an example of the public relations help Castro is receiving.

THE REPORT NOTES that Chicago Tribune Columnist Bob Wiedrich recently took ABC-TV's Barbara Walters to task for "letting herself be manipulated by sharpies bent on shaping world opinion to their own advantage, most notably by Fidel Castro."

In discussing Mrs. Walters' interview with Castro, which was conducted under rules set down by the Cuban Communist leader, Wiedrich wrote:

"The soft-soap quality of the Castro interview, with its almost total absence of hard-hitting questions, permitted Castro to play the role of the rational, soft-spoken, almost fatherly world leader, instead of the mass butcher and often publicly raving orator that he really is."

AFTER BEING ALERTED that Castro was ready to talk publicly on his terms, CBS first offered to do a live telephone interview between Castro and Walter Cronkite in New York so the Cuban leader could challenge President Carter's statement that Cuban troops were involved in the arming and training of the Zaire invaders.

This offer was topped by the arrival in Havana the next day of ABC's Walters so Castro decided that all three networks would have a joint interview with him. Newspaper reporters were barred from the joint interview.

All three networks carried Castro's "big lie" that Cuban had severed all relations with the Katangan rebels in 1976 and that Cuban troops had been ordered to avoid all contact with these guerrillas.

Although briefed in advance on Castro's private admission, that "Cuban is assisting liberation movements in South Africa and Rhodesia and we do not deny that," none of the TV interviewers asked the Cuban leader about this help.

WHEN ASKED ABOUT this oversight, an NBC official revealed that Castro had set limits on the questions the TV interviewers could ask although the TV audience was never informed of this.

Castro's successful use of the three major networks to present this African story was unprecedented, according to veteran U.S. intelligence officials who are experts in propaganda operations. They pointed out that the Castro operation was launched by using Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., to first raise doubts about President Carter's statement on Cuban involvement.

Castro sent his version of events to the senator via his mission in Washington and through "other friendly contacts in the nation's capital." McGovern then made public Castro's version, challenging the President, in a press conference.

The Cuban Communist leader also granted a lengthy interview with Rep. Stephen Solarz, D-N.Y., and Anthony Bellenson, D-Calif., who were in Cuban on invitations from the Cuban government.

THE LAWMAKERS COOPERATED with Castro by stating publicly after their talks with the Communist leader that they had doubts about President Carter's version of Cuban involvement in the Shaba invasion.

With the public stage set by the doubts expressed by these lawmakers and leaks from pro-Castro supporters in the State Department, Castro then moved to arrange for the controlled interviews with the three major U.S. TV networks.

With this free help from U.S. TV networks and lawmakers, Castro was able to put President Carter on the defensive despite the accuracy of his statement.

Holmes Alexander:

Will Yanks Please Go Home?

WASHINGTON—Back into the news, for reasons mysterious but welcome swims the 5-year deadlocked Vienna conference called MBFR (mutual and balanced force reduction).

Since 1973, thousands of NATO troops have been nose-to-nose with Warsaw Pact troops, and no set of diplomats has been referee enough to pull them apart.

The confrontation began at the Yalta meeting in 1945 where the three main anti-Hitler leaders were talking peace, not war.

Roosevelt said that "the United States would take all reasonable steps to preserve peace, but not at the expense of keeping a large Army in Europe, three thousand miles away from home.

"The American occupation would, therefore, be limited to two years."

CHURCHILL, ACCORDING to his history of the war (Vol. 5) "Triumph and Tragedy," was dismayed. He understood Russian perfidy.

If the Americans went home soon, the Soviet Union would take over Central Europe, the part now held by NATO, as well as East Europe which is satellite Russia. Stalin puffed his pipe and was silent.

Later Roosevelt told Gen. George Marshall that U.S. troops would remain "maybe two" years in Europe. Marshall's biographer, Forrest C. Pogue, commented:

"No one at the White House, the State Department or the higher levels of the Joint Chiefs of Staff contemplated a strong force glaring at the Russians for 25 years," which is now 30 years.

EARLIER THIS YEAR a friend of mine, William B. Prendergast, whom I last saw as a defense advisor at the Brussels headquarters of NATO, published a carefully done book, "Issues and Prospects" of MBFR. After reading the book, I got hold of Dr. Prendergast to seek out meanings.

He told me he had worked several years on the treaty, both in Brussels and Vienna, then filed away his notes.

But now the plot thickens. Brezhnev, for the first known time during his years of power, mentions MBFR as a matter needing attention. At his next press conference, Carter agrees with his Russian counterpart.

I asked Prendergast if he thought his monograph had prodded the Russians' attention, and he didn't know. I took his book to the State Department with the same questions and came away without any solid answers.

But some other inquiries suggested that it was nothing that any American has done to reopen the subject. Rather, it was the European NATO allies who expressed a strong interest, not in keeping American forces under arms in central Europe, but in getting rid of them after 30 years.

Some European leaders, from being afraid of Russian and confident in American protection, have reached the point where they think ground warfare can be averted, perhaps reconverted to the old concept of an intercontinental missile exchange, if the Yankees, weakened by defeat in Vietnam and by cancellation of bombers and artillery shells, will only go home.

One test, perhaps not insignificant, is to be tirelessly patient about Mutual and Balanced Force Reductions—a thinning out of forces on both sides until the confrontation falls apart.

As Dr. Prendergast says: "It is an idea whose time certainly has not yet come, but it may one day. If it does, history may conclude that the Vienna negotiations served a useful purpose."

After all, what is 30 years in our world's long history?

Varied Interest Plans Ease Mortgage Burden

GPM, RAM, VRM—a battery of new missile systems? No. These acroynyms stand for innovations in a much more prosaic and close-to-the-pocketbook sphere—home mortgage loans.

And they are among the variations developing of the traditional, fixed-rate, fixed-term, level-payment mortgage which has dominated the U.S. housing market for almost a half-century.

The major attraction of these "alternative mortgage instruments" (abbreviated to "AIM-ers") is that they are custom-tailored to fit your needs and pocketbooks in many categories of homebuyers.

But like many other products especially designed, these new home loans can cost more than conventional mortgages over the long-term. Consider, for instance, the GPM, or graduated payment mortgage.

THIS VARIATION IS custom-made for you if you are a young person with a relatively low income at this, the beginning of your career, with expectations of a higher income as the years pass.

Monthly payments on this type of loan follow the same pattern as your earnings: starting small, growing larger, then leveling off.

Say you're a buyer of a home with a $40,000, 30-year mortgage at 9 1/2 percent. Under one graduated payment mortgage plan, you would pay about $255 per month at first, with your payments rising 7 1/2 percent a year for the next five years, then holding.

The attraction: your initial monthly payments would be about $95 less per month than they would be with a conventional loan of the same size.

The drawback, once the five-year graduated payment span is over: you, the borrower, would be paying nearly $30 a month more for the remaining 25 years of the loan.

The net result: your total payments on this GPM loan would be $127,537 against $121,082 on a conventional mortgage, or a difference of $6,455 against you.

THE RAM, OR "reverse annuity mortgage," is at the opposite end of the life cycle—designed to meet the needs of older men and women who don't want to move out of their houses but who find it tough to keep up with rising property taxes and home maintenance costs.

Under the RAM, older homeowners borrow against the equity of their houses to obtain a regular flow of income. Proceeds from their loans are used to buy annuities from insurance companies or, with a reverse mortgage, the payments come directly from the lender.

At maturity—after, say, five, seven, 10 or 15 years—the loan can be refinanced or paid off when the house is sold from the borrower's estate.

THE VARIABLE RATE mortgage is probably the most common of the "AIM-ers." It is custom-tailored to the general facts of borrowing and lending in a prolonged phase of inflation rather than the financial needs of any class of borrowers.

With a VRM, the monthly payments, length of the loan or a combination of both move up—and maybe down—in tandem with key money-market interest rates.

The changes usually occur once or twice a year and there is often a ceiling on how high the interest rate can move. This customarily is 2 1/2 percent over the life of the loan.

If you borrow with a VRM, you frequently can choose to extend your pay-off period instead of increasing your monthly payments.

THE ROLLOVER OR renegotiable mortgage is another variation of the inflation-sensitive type of mortgage.

Changes in the loan rate are made much less often than with variable rate mortgages, generally every three or five years.

While the savings and loan industry is pushing hard for alternative mortgages—as an assist at a time of steep interest rates and threatened mortgage money shortages—so far, only state-regulated lenders are offering "AIM-ers."

There is growing interest in them in California, New Jersey, Ohio, Tennessee, Massachusetts, Wisconsin and New Hampshire, but federally-chartered institutions cannot move until federal regulations are changed.

And this is a change regulatory bodies are reluctant to make without a go-ahead from Congress. Until this nod comes through, conventional mortgages will remain dominant.

James J. Kilpatrick:

Do Reporters Belong In Jail:

WASHINGTON—The Supreme Court's opinion in the matter of Station KQED came down on June 26, but before it could be adequately covered, we were overwhelmed with the Bakke case on June 28.

Let me resurrect KQED. It involves some important issues of press freedom and public information.

Put in one way, the case involves a journalist's right to go to jail. That sentence is intended only to get your attention.

What happened in this case is that reporters for Station KQED attempted to gain access to a notorious prison, the Greystone section of the Alameda Jail in Santa Rita, Calif.

The sheriff gave them a run-around, refused to admit them, and finally made a generous offer: A reporter could join a trumped-up monthly public "tour" of selected facilities, limited to 25 persons, but the reporter could not bring camera or tape recorder along.

THE STATION WENT to court and won an injunction compelling the sheriff to give the press access to the whole of the jail at reasonable hours. The trial court wanted to facilitate "full and accurate coverage of the Santa Rita facilities."

The sheriff appealed, but the U.S. Circuit Court also found that the media have a right of access to prisons and jails.

The sheriff appealed once more, and last month he won. We of the press lost.

The Supreme Court reversed the lower courts with a sweeping pronouncement to the effect that newsmen have no more rights of access than the man in the street has. That proposition merits review.

It should be noted, first, that the Court's high-horse pronouncement came trotting forth on wobbly legs. Only seven of the nine justices took part in the decision.

CHIEF JUSTICE Burger could find only two of his brothers, White and Rehnquist, to go along with his opinion.

Stewart concurred in the judgment, but with so many reservations that he might almost have dissented.

Stevens, Brennan and Powell dissented outright. That added up to 4-3 for reversal, but if Marshall and Blackmun had participated, the case might well have gone the other way.

Now, those of us in the news business do not contend that the press has some unlimited right of access to every agency of government.

We have no right, in the name of the First Amendment, to rummage through the files of the CIA or to sit in on meetings of the National Security Council. Of course not.

And we understand that in matters of private property, involving fires or criminal violence, we have no rights of access at all and must proceed on sufferance.

IN EARLIER CASES, the Supreme Court has said as much, but the earlier cases did not go nearly as far as Burger went for the Court in the case of KQED. The chief justice, it has to be said unhappily, has a fierce antipathy toward the press.

He actively dislikes and mistrusts newsmen as a breed, and his testy prejudice threaded a way through his opinion.

What was involved in the KQED case was access to a prison. Burger held not only that the press has "no special right of access to the Alameda County Jail."

He also held generally that neither the Fourteenth nor the First Amendment "mandates a right of access to government information or sources of information within the government's control."

He rebuked the press for the unarticulated but implicit assumption that newsmen "are the best qualified persons for the task of discovering malfeasance in public institutions."

That assumption, he said, finds no support in the decisions of this Court. No one can quarrel with that.

THE DISSENTERS HAD a more reasoned and practical view of the problem. Newsmen may not be "the best qualified persons" to expose conditions in a rotten jail, but they often are the only persons ready, willing and able to do so.

Grand juries, legislative committees and citizens' task forces are cumbersome bodies that ultimately must depend, in any event, upon the media to publicize their findings.

The KQED decision was one of the Court's feebler efforts in the term just ended. It tracked half a dozen other decisions that will hamper the press in doing its job.

Yes, without apology, we do ask for "special privileges," but only to get at the facts the people are entitled to have.

Pilot Draws Praise After Plane Mishap

KALAMAZOO, Mich. (AP) — The left wing was ripped off and the fuselage was cracked. Windows were broken and fuel streamed into a muddy cornfield.

The aftermath was a mess, but only two people were hospitalized and the pilot drew praise for a "beautiful job" after belly-flopping his plane to an emergency landing Tuesday.

Government investigators today were attempting to determine why one of the engines on a North Central Airlines propjet with 40 passengers aboard failed shortly after takeoff from Kalamazoo Airport.

The aircraft missed a farmhouse by 200 feet and a stand of trees by 200 yards as it came down.

The pilot, Harold Moe, 33, of Holman, Wis., was quoted later as saying he could not see the ground until 30 seconds before the landing because of fog.

Co-pilot John McFarland, 30, of Chicago and a passenger, Gerald Auerbach, 58, of Kalamazoo, were in fair condition at Bronson Methodist Hospital, McFarland with a broken back and Auerbach with a broken pelvis.

The plane, a Convair 580, was bound from Kalamazoo to Detroit and Cleveland with many business passengers and a crew of three when the pilot radioed that he had lost an engine.

Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Dennis Feldman said in Washington that air controllers cleared the pilot to land at any airport he could find, including a small field at adjacent Portage.

In Minneapolis, North Central spokesman Rolland Little said the pilot was trying to return to the Kalamazoo airport about two miles from the cornfield.

A witness said the plane was coming down at a sharp angle when the pilot banked up and to the left to avoid trees, then brought the aircraft in wheels-up in the 100-acre field.

"The pilot did a beautiful job," said passenger Conrad Bos of Kalamazoo. "A stewardess told us to get out, to get away from the plane. We got out the emergency doors and ran. We were all pretty shook up, scared."

Another passenger, Dave Barton of Three Rivers, said he lost his glasses, but added, "I've been in worse auto crashes."

Strike Ends In Capital

WASHINGTON (AP) — A half-million bus and subway riders rode to work in normal rush-hour traffic today after transit workers ended a week-long wildcat strike.

The Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority said all buses and subways were running for the first time since Thursday, when mechanics walked out in a pay dispute.

While all subway runs and most buses were operating for Tuesday's evening rush hour, there was another massive traffic jam since thousands of uncertain motorists already had driven to work.

A U.S. District Court judge established an accelerated arbitration schedule to settle the pay issue, a 20-cent hourly cost-of-living raise that employees said was due them a week ago.

Also apparently contributing to the strike's end was a ruling by U.S. District Judge Thomas Flannery, who said 23 employees suspended for strike activities could return to work pending review of their conduct.

Man Rejected Offer To Kill King

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — A man whose brother-in-law served in the Missouri Penitentiary with James Earl Ray says he once turned down $50,000 to arrange the death of the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., The New York Times reported today.

The Times said Russell G. Byers has told the House committee investigating King's April 4, 1968, assassination that he rejected the offer in late 1966 or early 1967. The Times said Byers' claim has spurred an "intense inquiry" by the committee.

The alleged offer came from two St. Louis area businessmen, the newspaper said, one of whom, John H. Sutherland, was once a leader of the White Citizens Council of St. Louis. Sutherland and the other man named, John R. Kauffmann, are now dead, and their wives told the Times they do not believe the story.

According to Byers' account, Sutherland, a prominent patent attorney, and Kauffman approached Byers with the payment, which they said was from a group of businessmen. Sutherland and Kauffmann owned a small water company in Imperial, just south of St. Louis, the Times said.

Byers, who reportedly was out of town today and could not be reached for comment on the Times story, is the brother-in-law of John Spica, who was serving a sentence for murder at the same time Ray was an inmate at the Missouri State Penitentiary in Jefferson City.

Ray, who escaped from the prison before the King assassination, is now serving a 99-year sentence in Tennessee on his plea of guilty to shooting the civil rights leader in Memphis. He recently has denied killing King and asked for a new trial.

"Although no evidence has yet been produced that establishes a direct link between the alleged proposal to Byers and the death of King," the Times said, "this is the first of many conspiracy allegations that leads directly into the Missouri prison.

"At the prison, it was widely rumored in 1966 and 1967 that a conservative business group was willing to pay a large sum of money to anyone who would murder King."

The Times said House investigators plan to give Ray a lie detector test as a result of the Byers report.

Byers, 46, told the Times he had not informed his brother-in-law until recently about the rejected offer to arrange the murder of King, but said word of the bounty on King's life could have reached Spica through other sources.

The Times said investigators declined comment but "it is clear ... that they are trying to determine whether the information adds up to a true conspiracy, or whether they have merely come across a chain of casual acquaintanceships in a criminal setting."

The newspaper said Byers has been granted immunity in the case and testified under oath in Washington. Byers told the Times he told of the offer after King was shot to an unnamed informant of the FBI, but the bureau never followed up on the report.

An FBI spokesman in Washington told the Times the information had been received by the bureau's St. Louis office in 1973 and came to light in March of this year. It since has been forwarded to FBI headquarters, he said.

The newspaper said Spica once worked with Ray in the prison bakery and had a cell near Ray's. Spica was released on parole in 1973, but when Times reporters tried to question him on the story, he refused, adding angrily, "I'll blow your head off" if they would not leave his fruit store, the Times said.

Byers, a former auto parts dealer, was implicated in the theft earlier this year of several statues from the St. Louis Art Museum, including "Bronco Buster," a bronze by Frederic Remington. The statues have been recovered and all charges were dropped.

Kauffmann's widow told investigators her husband had known Byers for nearly 20 years and that she believed Byers made up his story to "help himself get out of the art case."

Muggers Draw Solon's Wrath

WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressman who was severely beaten by muggers says he would like to find his assailants "to get in a few licks before I turned them over to the law."

Rep. Robert H. Michel, R-Ill., his eyes so swollen they sting when he watches television, said this week he would like to "run them up against the wall with my car and have them pinned and then just ask them a series of questions — 'Do your mom and dad know where you are?'

The 55-year-old GOP whip held a news conference to describe his beating by two muggers early Friday in an alley behind his Capitol Hill townhouse.

Michel was released Monday from Bethesda Naval Hospital after having stitches in his tongue and treatment for his badly swollen face.

He said he was attacked silently and without warning from behind. The muggers took $100 and other valuables.

Question Of Ethics Arises In Medical Study

By PATRICK A. MALONE

BOSTON (UPI) — In a recent study showing the ability of aspirin to prevent fatal or crippling stroke in men with stroke symptoms, some volunteers died.

They died not because they were taking a dangerous drug, but because they were taking something worthless, a placebo. If they had been taking aspirin, they might have lived. But if no one in the study had taken the placebo, the researchers could not have found out that aspirin cuts the risk of death or paralyzing stroke in half for men who've had minor strokes.

That, researchers point out, is the dilemma of medical research. Gambles must be taken, and some people must lose.

"It's a very tough ethical issue," Dr. Judith Swazey, who teaches ethics to Boston University medical students, said in an interview.

The 585 people who participated in the study at two dozen Canadian hospitals had one thing in common: desperation.

Each had sufferad at least one small stroke. Their doctors had warned them they could have a big stroke — and die or be partly paralyzed — at any time.

They were told about the study. Two drugs — aspirin and Amturane, an anti-gout drug — had shown some hint of helping stroke patients. If they wanted to volunteer, they would receive either aspirin, or Amturane, or both together, or neither, a placebo.

The decision would be made by chance, and only the people running the study would know how to break the coded number on the pill bottles which indicated what drug was inside.

Their progress would be watched for two years by their personal doctor and by researchers at McMaster University and the University of Western Ontario.

Few people chose not to take the one-in-four chance of getting the placebo.

Some just asked for the aspirin or the anturane, and they were kept out of the study.

Dr. Henry J.M. Barnett, who directed the study, had some ideas of how it would turn out based on earlier studies.

"I would have said, with no hesitatiom, that aspirin would be ineffective, and I was convinced in my mind that sulinpyrazone (Amturane) would work," he said in a telephone interview. In fact, aspirin was thrown into the study only as an afterthought, he said.

But Barnett was happy to prove himself wrong about both drugs. He said it shows the importance of that kind of study.

"If we hadn't done the study, people would have taken a drug of no value to them (Anturane) for who knows how long," he said. "It was expensive, and other drugs might be denied to them."

But such studies take a long time, are expensive and often wind up controversial when they come up with unexpected results. A good example of that was two recent studies in Great Britain in which heart attack victims were either admitted to a hospital's coronary intensive care unit or sent home.

Some prominent heart surgeons demanded the study be stopped, saying patients who were sent home were handed a death sentence. But the studies showed the people sent home had just as good a survival rate, apparently because of the less anxious atmosphere at home.

Anturane had not been firmly entrenched as a stroke preventive, so studying it did not carry the problem of studying some surgical procedures which became popular with no scientific proof. It's hard to get people to agree not to have the surgery if many others with their condition are getting it, Barnett said, adding this is true even when the surgery might be more dangerous than doing nothing.

"Doctors and patients are impatient to get on with magic cures and not prepared to wait for scientific study," Barnett said. "But I think it's more unethical to perpetuate myths of value than to submit these things to scientific scrutiny."

Dr. Swazey believes one of the reasons few people refuse to volunteer is that sickness "makes us child-like. We want to be told what to do." She said that raises the issue of whether any seriously ill person can give genuinely "informed consent" to participate in a medical experiment.

Another ethical issue is when to stop the study. If people continue receiving placebos in a study when it's already been shown that they would definitely benefit from getting something else, that would be immoral, Swazey and others in the field believe.

Barnett said this is answered in the way studies are set up under rules for federal medical grant money. Their results are reviewed every few months by an independent team which has the power to stop the study as soon as there's solid evidence that the drug or procedure being studied either is strongly helping or strongly hurting the volunteers.

The bottom line, as Barnett sees it, is: "patients should never be denied anything of proven value."

Major Drug Dealer Flees After Error

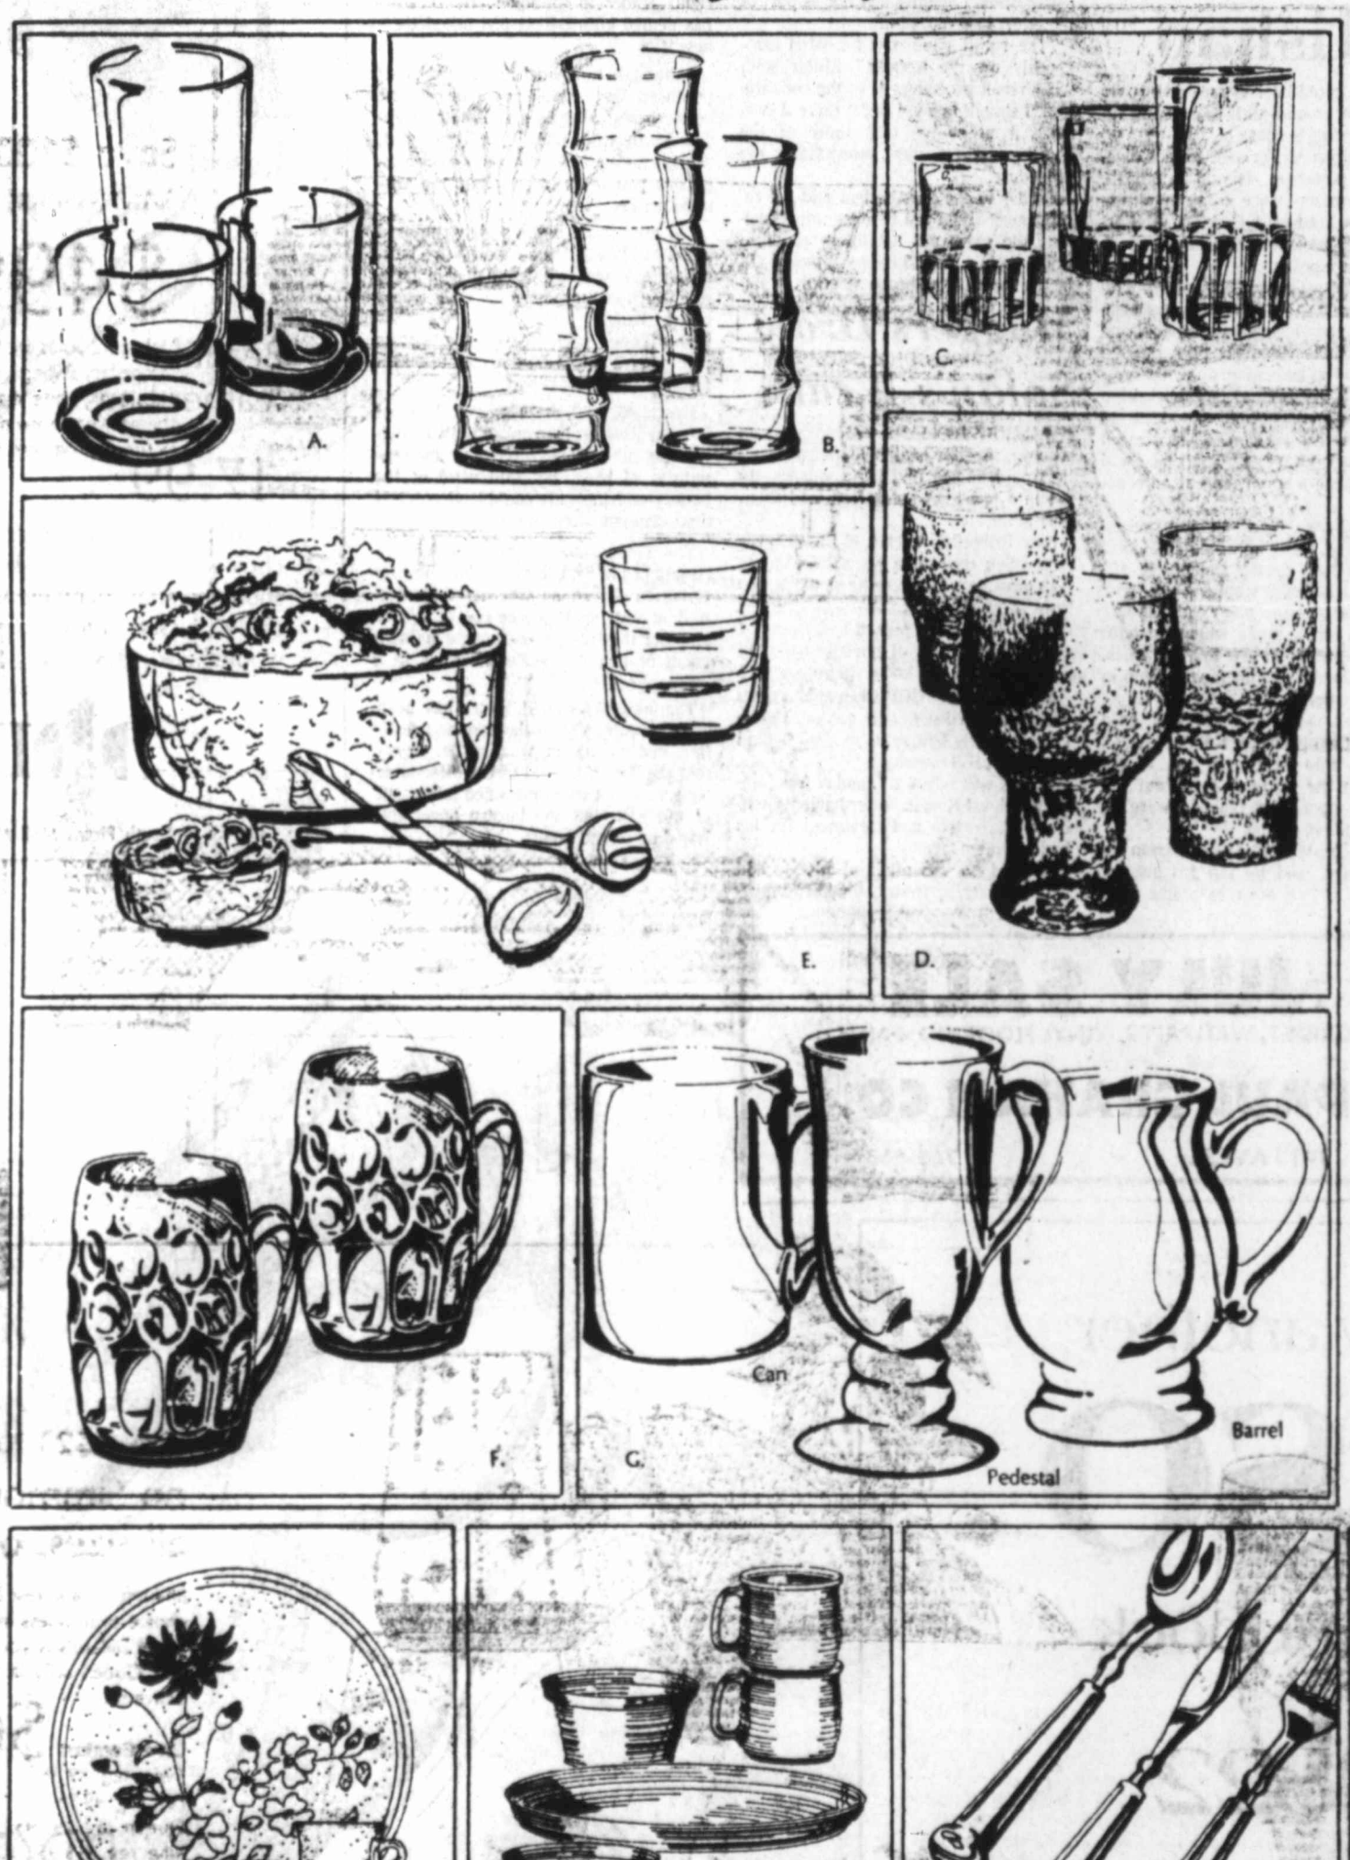

NEW YORK (AP) — A major narcotics dealer serving a 12½-year prison term on federal charges took advantage of an "administrative error" at Sing Sing prison and fled from custody, authorities said.

The July 6 escape of Luis Sotomayor, 46, of Queens, N.Y., was disclosed Monday in a Manhattan U.S. District Court complaint to support a fugitive warrant. The complaint was signed by special agent Edward J. Kelly of the federal Drug Enforcement Administration, who said he learned that Sotomayor was mistakenly released from the state prison at Ossining after he was taken there for a parole violation hearing.

Elderly Woman Shows Pride In Walking Horses

By RICHARD H. GROWALD

BIG ARM, Mont. (UPI) — The decoration sign behind the counter in the Big Arm Restaurant-General Store-Post Office reads "Four things a Woman Should Know."

It goes on: "How to look like a girl. How to act like a lady. How to think like a man. How to work like a dog."

It serves as art of a kind on the western shore of Flathead Lake, the biggest body of fresh water west of the Great Lakes and populated by summer vacationers, depopulated by a penguin winter and home to nothing as pretty as a Marlboro man.

Life does not necessarily mirror art in big Arm. The sign might be telltale of a man's world. But, then, the two lambs, their fleece as gray as slate and making ba-ba-ba noises by the gates, flee around the corner of the white building and the screen door slaps open and pow-pow-pow across the wooden floor comes the woman called Horse.

Pearl Tompkins is beautiful.

She is 73.

A Mixmaster might have done her gray hair.

Never a John Wayne, Clint Eastwood, Roy Rogers or Gene Autry would have worn a hat like that. More like something Chester Proudfoot or Fuzzy St. John might have dragged along the trail.

Her figure Is Henry A. Kissinger off his diet.

Her blue shirt is something not even the Tee Pee West Wear shop in nearby Polson might carry. The blue denim pants are as unique in these Rocky Mountains as a pine cone.

Mrs. Mary Anderson, restaurant proprietor, and Mrs. Toni Bronson, waitress, look up with pleasure. A cowboy at the counter rises and, Hopalong Cassidy couldn't have done it better, doffs his hat.

"The horse woman," Mrs. Anderson announced, the chamberlain proclaiming the entrance of royalty. "The woman called Horse."

A tenderfoot might look for guns. Pearl Tompkins carries none. Her words are an adequate defense.

"Don't call me Miss or Missus I'm just plain Pearl Tompkins," she says.

"I was born back in the North Dakotas and came out here 40-some-odd-years ago and I wouldn't like it back there if they gave it to me. This," she said, waving a ringless hand and speaking through a Mount Rushmore face devoid of makeup, gesturing to the 30-mile lake and the snow-crested Rockies, "Is the most beautiful place in the world."

No one in the restaurant disagreed. A woman from Paris, a summer visitor, sat at a table as still as a Flathead osprey. No one disagrees face to face with the woman called Horse.

"I came out here with nothing. Worked myself up to 800 acres. Now I've sold it all — my son Clyde's got 800 acres up on the nameless mountain yonder — and just got a few cows and only just about 18 or 20 walking horses."

That, in the kingdom of the Tennessee Walking Horse, is like saying all you have is 20 bags of gold.

"I've had quarterhorses, thoroughbreds, American saddlers. I've had all the horses, but, uh, the walkers," she said.

She dropped her chin, as if in prayer of thanks. In Nashville, the capital of walking horses as well as country music, a portrait of Pearl Tompkins' horse, Go Shadow Go, is being mounted on a wall at Opryland, a mid-South Disneyland.

Go Shadow Go won the 1972 blue ribbon at the northwest Tennessee Walking Horse Futurity at Salem, Ore., and helped Pearl Tompkins win southern acknowledgement that the breed flourishes to the Canadian border and beyond.

But the life she leads is not all show and ribbons. "Some folks bark about last winter, But remember '61. So much snow that even the bulldozers got stuck.

"My horses were in the fields of snow, three-quarters of a mile from feed. They couldn't make it any closer than a quarter-mile to the barn.

"So I had to crawl out there in the drifts and under the barbed wire and I reached old Annie. Good horse. I got atop old Annie and led the rest of the horses out to where the hay was. I got over a fence and pitched the feed over to them."

Pearl Tompkins examined a cup of coffee. She delivered a housewife's aside on the insanity of coffee prices but said tea was not for her and life is hell so another cup of coffee, please, Mary Lou.

"Other horses had it bad in the snow. Mine got through fit," she said.

Pearl Tompkins began remembering the early days, when the inauguration of a power dam opened up the land.

"Just came for the dickins. And the dickins I got," she said. Her face broke into a smile. She was remembering Blue.

"Old Blue. My first horse. Now I don't want to brag. But there was a time when I would have put Old Blue and myself up against any horse and man. There wasn't anything Old Blue and I couldn't do."

She described the herding, the range riding, the cattleperson's life.

"I loved Old Blue." The smile went.

"He was 32 when we finally had to shoot him. His teeth were ulcerating bad through his gums. Maybe some wouldn't understand you have to shoot something you love. But you shoot a Blue because you love him."

Mrs. Toni Bronson offered another cup of coffee.

But it was bad thoughts that tumbled through the mind of the woman called Horse.

"The Indian Question," she said, she spoke it like Secretary of State Cyrus Vance might announce strategic arms limitation talks with the Russians.

Big Arm sits on the Flathead Indian Reservation. Pearl Tompkins said some of her best friends are Flatheads.

"It's the blue-eyes, the blond-heads who call themselves Indians who are in trouble," she said.

She pronounced against "the government in Washington" building "$30,000 to $40,000 houses for the Indians on the reservation. My tax money."

She pronounced against reservation lawyers trying to block completion of her son's marina boat harbor on the lake.

She proclaimed for the Flathead Defense Fund to "pay the lawyers battling the Indians' lawyers who are paid millions by the government."

She talked tough about man. But, the cup drained, she returned to her love and Pearl Tompkins talked about beasts. About horses.

There is Go Shadow Go (Joe), being readied for the show won by her father in 1972.

There was the stud horse, property of a neighbor, who was let loose on Tompkins' land and chased a horse named Sadden by Pearl Tompkins' daughter-in-law.

"A stud will sink its teeth into anything. That rotten stud upset my daughter-in-law's horses and she was thrown and still ain't over it."

There is Tony, "Old Tony who misses the cattle at times. A walking horse will do anything any other horse will do but will do it longer. It's a pleasure watching him work. It's interesting.

"I was out in the pasture this morning and there was Old Tony, shy an I guess he knows that horses fetch 25 cents a pound now. Old Tony shook his tail.

"I reached up and I patted him. I told him don't worry, don't you worry, Tony, about that 25 cents a pound. You're with Pearl Tompkins. Don't you worry."

The woman called Horse hesitated she had to go. She rose to walk to her pal

Chinese 'Miracle' Grain Yield Good

HONG KONG (AP) — China last year harvested 4.4 billion pounds of hybrid rice from 3 million acres cultivated with the "miracle" grain, the Hong Kong Communist newspaper Ta Kung Pao reported Monday.

The paper said one-sixth acre needs only 2.2 pounds of the hybrid seeds, while normal rice needs 22 pounds. The grain, a hybrid of two or more kinds of rice seeds, contains more protein than normal rice.

Soviet Reporters Confused In 'Discussion' Of First Amendment

By ARNOLD SAWISLAK

WASHINGTON (UPI) — You may have noticed earlier this month that Jody Powell invited a group of Soviet reporters assigned to Washington to drop by his office for a chat with one of his White House press staff.

None of the participants had much to say about what was said, except one of the Russians said the White House staffer went over "all of the things available to us; documents, briefings, press conferences ... all that stuff."

Well, we weren't there, but we have just received a report on the meeting from the Proverbial Fly On The Wall. According to this well-placed informant, the meeting went very well until the White House man broached a subject that sent the Russians into culture shock.

Here is a reconstructed and totally fictional transcript of the discussion:

White House Official: Now, there is one other item we ought to go over in regard to your privileges here in the united States. We call it the First Amendment.

Soviet reporter: Oh, yes, we have been briefed on that. As I understand it, the First Amendment permits your press to engage in hooliganism, political sabotage and personal vilification of public leaders.

W.H.O.: Well, we don't look at it quite that way. The purpose of the First Amendment is to ensure freedom of the press and guarantee the right of free speech.

S.R.: Very nicely expressed, sir. But please don't insult us by assuming that we are greenhorns who don't know anything about this country. After all, we remember 1974 when your so-called freedom of the press was used to pound your president out of office. You may call that freedom, but where we come from it is called treason.

W.H.O.: I can see we are having a communications problem. You see, we don't believe that it is treason to criticize the government or its leaders. We have this theory that the country belongs to the people, not to the government ... and certainly not to the leaders of the government.

Analysis

S.R.: That is the most absurd statement I have heard since leaving Moscow. Why, a radical theory like that could undermine authority. It could never happen in Russia.

W.H.O.: Yes, I know. That's why I brought it up. As you know, two American reporters im Moscow recently were charged with slandering Soviet television. I just wanted to tell you that would be most unlikely here.

S.R.: You mean you can't slander American TV?

W.H.O.: I mean that it is a treasured American tradition to disagree with what you raad in the paper or see on television.

W.H.M.: Well, we really aren't getting anywhere. What I really wanted to say is that you Soviet journalists also are free to use the First Amendment here in ... Sir?

Are you all right...?

(Sound of thump, followed by sound of telephone receiver being lifted.)

... Infirmary? Yes, this is the press office. Could you send someone up with some smelling salts?

Tribal Divisions Causing Problems For Indians

By BOB BONEBRAKE

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Nearly all of America's approximately 300 Indian tribes cling to a unique history and set of traditions, but according to one Indian leader this "diversity" is now causing problems.

J.R. Cook, founder and executive director of a growing organization of Indian youth called United National Indian Tribal Youth, Inc. (UNITY), says efforts to win better conditions for his people have been hindered by the tribal divisions.

"Unlike other minority groups, we have found it difficult to get together to fight our problems," the 39-year-old mixed-blood Cherokee said. "Each tribe has its own language, customs and traditions, then there are the reservation, urban and off-reservation Indians and even those tribes recognized by the federal government and those not recognized.

"These differences have aided the government in keeping us weak," he insisted. "As long as they have just had to deal with small individual tribes they have found us easy to control, but if they had to deal with all Indians — that would not be so easy."

Speaking from his group's Oklahoma City headquarters, which was formerly the home of Andy Payne, a Cherokee who captured international attention by winning a Los Angeles to New York footrace in 1928, Cook claims his group is working to pull Indian youth together.

"More than half the total U.S. Indian population is under 25 years of age," Cook said. "And most of the young people suffer from strong negative peer pressure.

"I'm not certain why, but for some reason when an Indian youth begins to make strides other youth begin putting him down. They see him as trying to be an apple — red on the outside, white on the inside."

The former high school basketball coach said his group began nearly three years ago and now has members in about 13 states, with the majority coming from Oklahoma and New Mexico.

Although the group began with a government grant, Cook is currently trying to wean the group away from government aid.

"We have to worry a lot about finances," he said. "But we are trying to make UNITY self-supporting. We don't want to rely on the federal government or even charity."

Cook and activities coordinator Bob Tarbell, a Mohawk-Onondaga from Syracuse, N.Y., run the organization, but it is under a national board of directors that includes All-American quarterback Sonny Sixkiller, a Cherokee; Creek Jan English, the wife of Oklahoma Congressman Glenn English; and Navajo actor Ray Tracey.

Among the UNITY general membership is current Miss Indian America Gracia Ann Welsh, a Mohave, Chemehuevi and Yavapai Indian from Parker, Ariz., and the former titleholder Deanna Harragarra, from Yukon, Okla.

A former student at the University of Arizona at Tucson who plans to enter "tribal government," Miss Welsh echoed many of Cook's thoughts when she said recently, "Indians and the white man have a bitter history. But we have to let bygones be bygones."

Economists Predict Inflation Slowdown

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans can look forward to relief from double-digit inflation in the second half of the year, top economic advisers to President Carter and Congress said today.

Charles Schultze and Alice Rivlin said that while prices will continue to rise in the next several months, the increase will not be as great as the current annual pace of 10 percent.

They based their prediction in part on a belief that the worst of the food price increases are over. "The rise of food prices should slow substantially," Schultze said.

Both economists made their statements to the Senate Budget Committee, which is holding hearings in preparation for recommending binding spending ceilings for the fiscal year which begins Oct. 1.

Schultze, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers, offered no firm inflation prediction for the remainder of the year, saying only that improvement should be "considerable."

Administration officials have been saying in recent weeks they expect inflation to be about 7 percent for the year. That is up by more than one percentage point from what the administration was predicting at the beginning of the year.

Mrs. Rivlin, head of the Congressional Budget Office, said she expects prices to rise by an estimated 6.8 percent to 7.8 percent for the entire year, "substantially" above the 6.6 percent inflation rate in 1977.

She also predicted inflation would be somewhere between 6.2 percent and 7.2 percent for 1979.

Government figures show prices have been rising at an annual rate of 10 percent between December and May, causing Carter and his economists to label inflation as their top economic problem.

Schultze reiterated that the administration opposes a large cut in the capital gains tax, although it believes a "substantial business tax cut" is needed to stimulate investment.

"I would like to make clear, however, that a large reduction in capital gains taxes, as has been proposed by some members of Congress, is not an effective substitute for the reductions in business taxes proposed by the president," he added.

The proposal to slash capital gains tax has wide support in Congress. More than 60 senators are co-sponsoring a bill to cut the maximum capital gains tax from its current 49 percent.

On another subject, Schultze and Mrs. Rivlin said they don't expect an economic recession in the next several months, despite predictions from some private economists that one looms ahead.

Carter's economic adviser said the administration looks for an increase in the Gross National Product of between 3.5 percent and 4 percent for the year and roughly 4 percent the following year, assuming Congress enacts the president's proposal for a $15 billion tax cut. The GNP measures the nation's output in terms of goods and services.

Mrs. Rivlin was slightly more optimistic about predicting economic growth, estimating it would be between 3.5 percent and 4.5 percent for 1978 before slowing somewhat next year.

Both based their predictions on assumptions that there would not be significant further tightening of credit markets.

On unemployment, which has dropped sharply in recent months, Mrs. Rivlin said joblessness will likely be between 5.2 percent and 6 percent by the end of next year. Schultze said he expected unemployment to remain close to its present level of 5.7 percent.

Schultze also repeated a call, first made before the committee on Monday, for additional cuts of about $5 billion in spending from the administration's proposed budget for next year.

He said the administration favors spending of about $491 billion to $492 billion for the fiscal year which begins on Oct. 1.

Earlier this month, the administration said its proposed budget included estimated spending of about $496.6 billion and a deficit of about $48.5 billion. Those figures were down themselves from proposed spending of $499.4 billion presented when Carter outlined his proposed budget last winter.

But James T. McIntyre, director of the Office of Management and Budget, told the panel on Monday there is a need for "generally tightening down" federal spending in part to deal with inflation.

Solons Support Tax Deductions

WASHINGTON (AP) — House taxwriters today veered away from their dispute over taxing capital gains in an effort to reach agreement on limiting deductions for business meals and other entertainment.

The House Ways and Means Committee defeated, 24-13, an amendment that would have forbidden a business host to deduct his own portion of a business meal or other entertainment.

The committee then voted 25-9 to set aside discussion of proposals to deny deduction for entertainment of government officials or employees, including members of Congress and their staffs.

The panel appears bogged down on capital gains, a topic that has delayed President Carter's $15-billion tax cut package for three months.

The committee voted 21-16 on Tuesday in support of Texas Republican Rep. Bill Archer's unexpected amendment that is designed to take inflation into account when taxing the gains resulting from sale of certain assets — but only after 1980.

Unlike a capital gains provision that has been sailing through the committee, the Archer proposal does nothing to relieve taxpayers with capital gains already accumulated.

The surprised proponents of a measure that would set a maximum 35 percent tax on capital gains, past as well as future, had claimed support of a solid majority of the committee. This provision, drafted by Rep. James R. Jones, D-Okla., is backed by Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., committee chairman, and Rep. Barber B. Conable of New York, the senior Republican.

There was no immediate agreement as to whether the newly-adopted Archer proposal would be added to the Jones-Ullman-Conable proposal or substitute for all or part of it. The main supporters of the 35 percent provision voted against Archer.

The 21 votes supporting his amendment cut across party and ideological lines, suggesting that at least some members saw it as a possible opportunity to sidetrack the 35 percent maximum tax provision, or perhaps overload it, reducing its appeal.

Archer's plan would apply to capital gains from sale of corporation stock, real estate and personal property such as industrial machinery.

Long-term capital gains, which already receive special tax treatment, are the profits from the sale of assets held at least a year. The profit is the difference between what the owner paid for the asset and what he sells it for.

Effective in 1980, the Archer amendment would provide that the base — the original purchase price — be increased for tax calculations by the equivalent of any increase in the consumer price index, the principal government measure of inflation. Thus the taxable gain would be cut.

Treasury representatives at the committee session said it was not immediately possible to estimate the cost of the Archer proposal in terms of lost revenue, but that since it would apply only to future capital gains, the effect would be minimal at first. One of Carter's principal objections to other proposals to reduce capital gains taxation has been the cost. The administration also has been fighting reductions in the tax on the grounds that it would aid the wealthy only.

After the vote, Jones told a reporter that the Archer amendment, as it stands, must be regarded as an addition to his proposal. He said it would not necessarily stand, even though Archer used parliamentary devices to nail it into the bill.

"There are a number of things we can do," Jones said. "There is plenty of time still."

During a long session Tuesday, the committee rejected all other proposed amendments, including one that would have provided an income tax credit to offset part of the higher Social Security taxes taking effect next year.

The offset would have been 5 percent of taxes, estimated to be worth $30 to the average taxpayer with a $10,000 income, $22 more than his Social Security tax increase; $60 to one with $20,000 income, $22 less than the increase he faces.

U.S. Trade Gap Sliced

WASHINGTON (AP — The United States recorded the smallest trade deficit in more than a year last month as U.S. businesses sold a record $12.1 billion in products to other countries, the Commerce Department said today.

The June trade deficit of $1.6 billion was encouraging because the growing trade gap had contributed to inflation at home and the decline of the dollar overseas.

Americans bought $13.7 billion in goods from overseas, a 2 percent decline from May, the department said. Oil imports, the biggest cause of the trade deficit, dropped from $3.32 billion in May to $3.29 billion in June. Steel imports also dropped markedly.

Exports, totaling $12.12 billion, were an increase of 3 percent from May, mainly because of strong sales overseas of U.S. aircraft, automobiles, machinery, coal, meat, cotton and steel.

The June trade deficit of $1.6 billion was smaller than the $2.2 billion deficit in May and the $2.9 billion deficit in April. Deficits have been posted for the last 25 straight months

The report indicated the U.S. trade picture in June was the best since a $641-million deficit in May 1977.

In the first half of this year, U.S. imports have exceeded exports by $16.4 billion. If that continued all year, the trade deficit would be $32 billion, well ahead of the record $26.5-billion deficit in 1978.

However, the Carter administration says the monthly deficits should become smaller from now on. Assistant Treasury Secretary C. Fred Bergsten said last month that "U.S. exporters have not suffered any noticeable loss in price competitiveness against other industrial company suppliers."

Califano Backs Flu Program

WASHINGTON (AP) — HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. appealed to medical specialists today to help him rebuild public confidence in flu immunization that was shattered by the swine flu fiasco in 1976.

The head of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare asked his audience at a conference to scrutinize federal proposals for public programs to immunize the elderly and chronically ill against this winter's expected flu outbreak.

The House shot holes in Califano's plan to start a regular, annual program of flu immunization for the elderly and chronically ill. Last Thursday, it voted 266-127 to refuse to support flu immunization programs by the states.

Califano said that whatever stand the government takes, "private physicians will administer 12 million flu shots this winter ... it is an accepted medical practice."

He said there are "deep public and congressional skepticism and misgivings from the swine flu backlash," and that this "legacy of distrust" can only be eliminated gradually.

Forty-five million Americans received swine flu shots in 1976 at the urging of the Ford administration. The discase never materialized, and the vaccinations were halted after several hundred persons became ill from the shots.

Federal health officials and experts from outside government said the risks of dying from influenza are far greater than the threat of dying from a disease caused by the vaccination.

Dr. Kenneth McIntosh, a professor of pediatrics at the University of Colorado Medical Center, told the meeting, "Influenza vaccines are not perfect ... but they deserve to be used."

He said one person in 5,000 dies from complications caused by flu, compared with one in two million who may die from the Guillain-Barre syndrome, a rare paralyzing disease believed to be caused — in rare cases — by flu vaccination.

McIntosh said flu vaccines can prevent people from getting the flu for one to two years in seven out of 10 cases. He said the benefit-to-risk ratio is favorable, particularly among the elderly and chronically ill.

Califano called some 100 medical experts, public officials, drug manufacturers and consumer representatives to the conference to conduct a final review of HEW's recommendations on the flu program.

A similar session last Jan. 30 resulted in the call for flu shots for the elderly and chronically ill to protect them against three strains of flu — Russian A, Texas A and Hong Kong B — that could break out in the United States this winter.

Califano said the conference would review the latest information on Russian flu, consider the results of clinical trials on the flu vaccines, and discuss what states should do if the federal funds are not forthcoming.

Califano may still try to get the Senate Appropriations Committee to provide the $15 million that a subcommittee rejected last Wednesday, one HEW source said.

During debate, critics wondered if the program's risks would outweigh benefits, particularly in view of the $775 million in damage claims pending against the government from the ill-fated swine flu campaign of 1976.

That campaign resulted in lawsuits claiming that 120 persons died after receiving swine flu shots, some of them from Guillain-Barre syndrome.

Federal health officials now say any flu vaccination increases a person's small risk of contracting Guillain-Barre. One person in 100,000 who get shots is expected to get the disease, and one in 2 million to die as a result. The risks are even greater for the elderly.

But the health officials say flu poses a far greater threat to the elderly and chronically ill, with 200 persons dying among every 1 million stricken.

Heavy Guns Jolt Areas Of Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Heavy weapons fire engulfed a southeast suburb between the presidential palace and Beirut airport today, shattering a two-day lull between Syrian peacekeeping troops and Cristian rightist militiamen.

President Elias Sarkis maintained indirect contact with both sides in an attempt to end the worst Syrian-Christian clashes since fighting raged through the Christian eastern half of Beirut early this month, government sources said.

Sarkis also was striving to implement a plan to send Lebanese army regulars to another trouble area — south Lebanon — for the first time since the 1975-76 civil war, the sources said.

They said the move, partly the result of pressure from the U.N. peacekeeping force, might be delayed due to the Beirut flareup.

Rightist officials said at least 30 people were killed and more than 56 wounded in the sudden escalation Tuesday evening in Hadath, in the hills just southeast of Beirut. No Syrian casualty figures were released.

Right-wing Phalangist Party radio reported more than 1,500 artillery, rocket and mortar hits in "buildings, schools and hospitals in the Hadath area" by the early today.

The broadcast said that by dawn, the shell and rocket fire had subsided, but sporadic sniper fire continued with most residents staying in makeshift basement shelters.

The latest fighting also sprayed sniper fire on the road to Beirut airport for the first time since the civil war and several rifle bullets struck a runway near a cargo terminal, police sources said.

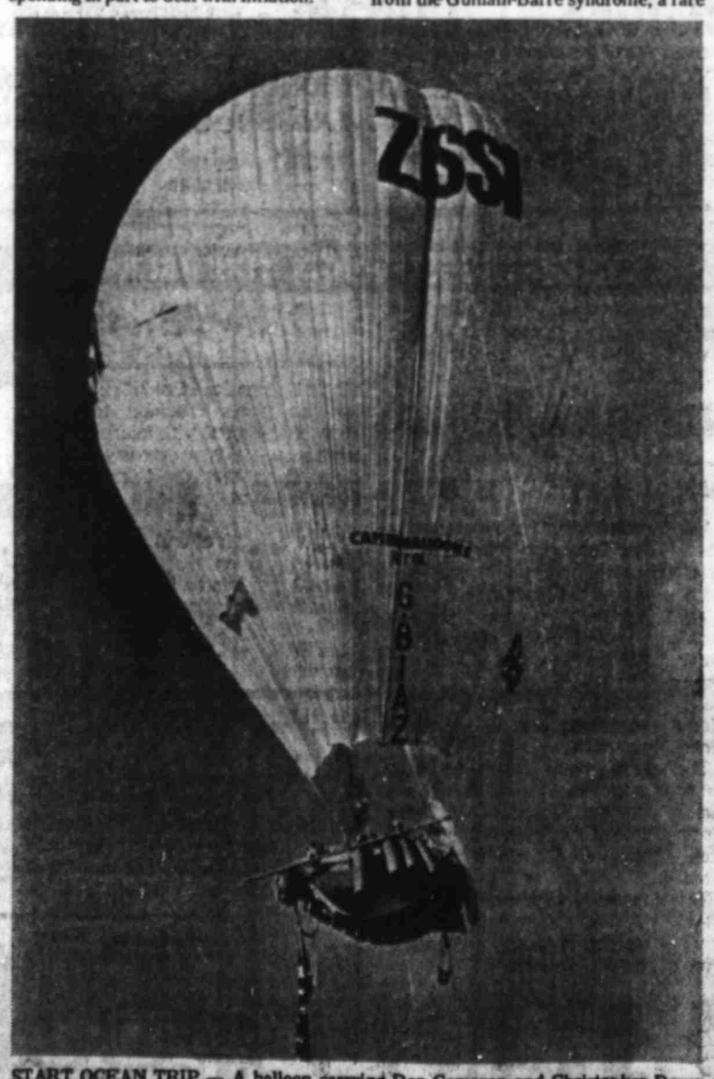

Palestinian guerrilla sources reported one woman killed and several other people wounded when several shells hit the Palestinian refugee camp of Bourj Barajneh, near the airport.

The Phalangist radio asked the Syrians whether "these civilians are responsible for the loss of Palestine," a clear reply to Syran denunciation of the militias' links with Israel.

A Syrian statement charged militiamen had been shelling and sniping on the peacekaeping troops for three hours before the Syrians finally "retaliated against specific targets where heavy machine gun fire was originating."

Rightist officials said the Syrians unleashed unprovoked shell and rocket-propelled grenade barrages on Hadath's twisting residential streets, and said most of the cauualties were in Hai al Naoura, the town's main residential area.

There had been day-long sniping by both sides, a period of relative calm after weekend heavy weapons fire that drove many inhabitants north to Christian coastal areas early Monday.

Dollar Hits Skids Again

TOKYO (AP) — The ailing dollar hit another low in Tokyo today, promising more woe for tourists with greenbacks and American buyers of Japanese television sets and cars. Rates in European trading were mixed.

The U.S. currency zigzagged up and down in heavy trading on the Tokyo foreign exchange market, dipping to 194.50 in the early afternoon and closing at 195.05. It closed at 195.525 Tuesday.

Volume was high at $870 million dollars, with the central Bank of Japan accounting for possibly $200 million of that in an effort to brake the rsie of the yen, bankers said.

The dollar plunged through the psychologically important 200-yen barrier Monday, and one trader at a Japanese bank commented today: "There aren't any psychological barriers left. The next level will be 190 yen."

Tourists were getting 192.90 yen at major hotels for their dollars, a two percent decrease in 48 hours. The cheapeast single rooms at hotels used by foreign travelers are about $75, while a dinner for two of prized Kobe beef costs slightly more than $100.

The national tourist organization said the average tourist stay is now about nine days; it was two weeks in 1974. The dollar has declined more than 46 percent in the last seven years and 26 percent since last September.

In Europe, the dollar improved against the West German mark and the French franc but slipped against the Swiss franc.

The pound sold in London for $1.9250, virtually unchanged from $1.9245 late Tuesday.

On the London bullion market, gold was quoted at $194.25 an ounce.

ing Bell had slandered them and driven Gravitt to suicide by harassment.

Ashley filed the invasion of privacy suit Jan. 23, 1976, contending Bell has used the wiretaps in an effort to defeat the initial suit filed by Ashley and Gravitt's widow.

Ashley testified during the trial of the invasion of privacy suit that he was an expert on wiretaps, and could tell his telephone was tapped. He said several Bell employees, including Gravitt and two district managers, had told him the company was eavesdropping on his conversations.

Ashley said his supervisor, C.L. Todd, told him, "We have everything. We know every call that you made, local, long distance, pay station, neighbors."

In San Antonio, attorney Jack Paschol said Ashley would ask the Supreme Court for a rehearing in the case.

Bell also is appealing a $3 million award to Ashley and Gravitt's survivors in another suit charging wrongful death, on grounds Bell security forces hounded Gravitt to his death.

Fedorenko Will Keep Citizenship

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — A federal judge today allowed Feodor Fedorenko to retain his U.S. citizenship despite accusations that he whipped and shot Jews as a guard at a Nazi death camp and failed to tell immigration authorities about it. He has denied committing any atrocities against Jews.

Calling Fedorenko a "victim of Nazi aggression," U.S. District Judge Norman C. Roettger ruled that the prosecution had not proven the accusations against the native Ukranian. He had been accused of lying on his naturalization papers when he became a U.S. citizen in 1949.

"The record on Fedorenko's conduct 35 years ago is inconclusive," Roettger wrote in his opinion. The judge did not show up in court; his ruling was read by the clerk.

U.S. District Judge Norman C. Roettger released his 54-page opinion five weeks after an emotional trial during which six Israeli survivors of the infamous Treblinka death camp tearfully testified that they saw Fedorenko torture and kill Jewish prisoners.

But at least two of the elderly witnesses vacillated on their identifications, and at one point the judge said he wondered if some witnesses had been coached.

Fedorenko, 71, was never formally charged under U.S. law with atrocities at the prison camp. But had he been stripped of his citizenship, he could have been deported and forced to stand trial in Europe on war-crimes charges.

During the trial, Fedorenko admitted he lied to get U.S. citizenship by claiming to be a Polish farmer forced to work as a laborer for the Germans. He said he served as a guard at Treblinka but denied killing or torturing Jews. Defense attorney Gregg Pomeroy argued that Fedorenko lied because he didn't want to return to the Soviet Union.

Fedorenko is one of a number of persons recently charged by federal officials with falsely concealing Nazi pasts when they entered the United States.

A Polish immigrant, Frank Walus, was recently found guilty by a judge in Chicago of lying to U.S. authorities about his activities as Gestapo agent who took part in several murders. He has been stripped of citizenship and is now subject to deportation proceedings, but he has appealed the conviction.

Rhodesians Announce Decision To Hold December Elections

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Rhodesia today set dates in December for the country's first popular elections and announced that neutral observers will be invited to watch.

The four-month biracial government has promised the country's 6.7 million blacks majority rule by the beginning of next year through universal suffrage elections. Whites number 260,000.

December 4-6 were the dates set for polling throughout Rhodesia, including vast areas infiltrated by two guerrilla armies fighting to topple the government.

Announcing the dates, two cabinet ministers said observers from the United Nations, the 49-nation Organization of Africa Unity, Western powers and "any other organizations" would be invited to witness the elections.

At a news conference, the black and white co-ministers of manpower, Rowan Cronje and Gibson Magaramombe, in charge of elections conceded the 6,000 or more guerrillas inside the country may wreck the plan.

Guerrilla leaders Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe, excluded from a constitutional settlement accord reached five months ago between moderate black leaders and the previous white minority government, have vowed to attack polling booths and disrupt elections

Cronje told reporters he believed an election will be possible, but added: "...I believe it will be wrong to have a chaotic situation simply for the sake of an arbitrary date. We are working toward Dec. 31 and if we can achieve it by then, that is exactly what we will do."

Cronje and his Magaramombe faced a series of questions on the feasibility of persuading some 3 million black voters — many in remote tribal reservations — to vote while guerrillas contine to operate.

"I think the indications are that there has been a breakthrough in the ceasefire," said Cronje, referring to ongoing efforts to arrange an unconditional truce with the insurgents. "Hopefully progress will have escalated and we will have a dramatic cease-fire by that time."

Asked what voter turnout would be considered satisfactory to foreign powers which refuse to recognize the government, Magaramombe quoted from the British opposition Conservative Party. The Conservatives, more sympathetic to the Salisbury leaders than the ruling Labor Party, has warned that less than 60 percent would be unacceptable.

The administration, citing time, expense and the security situation, has already announced that black voters will not be registered and the country will not be divided into constituencies.

The plan is for black voters to produce identity documents which will be marked to prevent double voting.

House Passes New York Loan Bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — "What this legislation does is save a city," said Rep. Mario Biaggi, D-N.Y.

Critics said it was more a case of subsidizing a city's continued mismanagement of its own affairs.

That was the debate as the House Tuesday gave its final approval, 244-157, to a compromise bill providing New York City with $1.65 billion in federal loan guarantees.

The Senate was expected to follow suit today, sending the measure to President Carter for signature.

But a separate appropriations bill and legislation waiving regulations to allow New York's municipal employee pension funds to lend more money to the city still must be passed before the guarantees can take effect.

"I'd like to save New York City," said Rep. Robert Bauman, R-Md., "but, like a stern parent, I believe the best way is not to indulge the child further."

"They'll be back again," Bauman warned, saying he had issued the same warning in 1975 when Congress provided the seasonal loans for the city. These expired June 30.

Rep. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, asked, "Why should the federal government step in to guarantee the obligations of a city whose management is clearly so far out of line that credit markets remain outside its reach?"

Rep. Richard Kelly, R-Fla., said if it weren't for the Senate, which insisted on attaching more stringent conditions to the guarantees than the House had proposed, "we'd be melting down the dome to send the remains to New York City so they could continue mismanagement there."

Manpower Trial Near Conclusion

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — The theft trial of Brownsville insurance man Robert Massey could go to the jury this afternoon or early Thursday after defense lawyers finish presenting their case.

Prosecutors spent only part of Tuesday attempting to prove Massey stole insurance funds from a Harlingen plumbers union.

Massey was one of the 19 persons indicted by a Cameron County grand jury following a controversial court of inquiry in Brownsville into local use of federal manpower funds.

Unlike other defendants, Massey is charged with theft of private funds, not federal monies.

The charges stem from Massey's business dealings with South Texas labor leader Don Gray, who is the business manager of the Harlingen-based Plumbers and Pipefitters Union Local 823.

Massey and Associates Administrators Inc., a corporation formed in 1975 to administer union health and welfare funds, contracted with various Texas locals of the Plumbers Union to manage health funds.

Massey, who is the majority stockholder in the corporation, is charged with diverting about $10,000 of insurance funds from the Harlingen local's bank account into his business account.

Prosecutor Joe K. Hendley relied heavily on Massey's own testimony at the December and January court of inquiry in presenting his case Tuesday, despite strong objections from defense lawyers.

"The purpose of this (evidence) is to show Mr. Massey incriminated himself at the court of inquiry," Hendely told State District Judge Harry Lewis.

At the inquiry, Massey changed his testimony at least once after being recalled to the witness stand by State District Judge Darrell Hester, who charged Massey with commiting perjury.

Massey also admitted at the inquiry to using the $10,502.17 belonging to the union for business expenses incurred by Massey and Associates Administrators.

But Hendley and Massey's defense lawyers differed sharply in their interpretation of how the money was used. The state calls it stealing. Defense lawyers say the money was legally spent by the corporation, not by Massey personally.

Massey's lawyers also have criticized Hester for assuming "the role of prosecutor" as well as judge during the inquiry.

The first witness to appear for the defense Tuesday, Brownsville attorney Jack Sanchez, agreed with their assessment of the inquiry. Sanchez represents Massey's business dealings and accompanied him to the first session of the court of inquiry in December.

"It became evident they were after him," Sanchez said describing Massey's first appearance. "Judge Hester was very antagonistic and jumping all over him with both feet."

Charge Names Mother Of Dead Youth

DALLAS (AP) — The mother of a 12-year-old boy who was slain five years ago by a Dallas policeman has been charged with threatening an officer with retaliation for the death.

Bessie Rodriguez, the mother of Santos Rodriguez, was arrested for public intoxication about 2:30 a.m. Tuesday by officer Jesus Trevino who said she was a passenger in a car he saw weaving down a street.

Trevino said Mrs. Rodriguez asked for his name and badge number and he gave the information to her.

Then Trevino quoted Mrs. Rodriguez as saying she wanted to know "because I'll need it. You're one of my people and you are working for those people who killed my son.

"I'm going to have you killed," Trevino claims Mrs. Rodriguez told him.

Mrs. Rodriguez was jailed and charged with retaliation (threatening an officer), a felony. Additionally she was charged with public intoxication. She was released Tuesday night on $2,000 bond.

The Justice Department recently refused to reopen the case involving the slaying of the woman's son in 1973 by then-police offier Darrell Cain. Cain was convicted in state court of murder with malice and is serving a 5-year prison sentence.

The statute of limitations for filing federal civil rights charges against Cain, as demanded by some Mexican-American leaders, expired at midnight Monday.

Panel Approves New $1 Coin

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Susan B. Anthony has advanced a step toward becoming the first woman to have her image on a coin of the United States.

A House subcommittee, voting Tuesday to authorize a new $1 coin, agreed the famous suffragette — rather than the symbolic Miss Liberty — should be on the coin.

The Treasury Department pushed Miss Liberty, but women's groups lobbied vigorously for the image of an actual woman.

The House subcommittee on coinage and historic preservation approved the Anthony authorization 6-1.

The full banking panel is expected to consider the bill before Congress recesses Aug. 18.

The Treasucy estimated that issuance of the coin will save the government millions of dollars annually in printing costs. The new metal dollar will replace the unpopular Eisenhower version. It will be smaller than a half dollar but larger than a quarter.

Standard Oil To Build Line

SACRAMENTO, Calif.(AP) — Standard Oil Co. of Ohio has been granted permission by the federal government to build a pipeline on federal land to take Alaskan oil from Long Beach, Calif., to Midland for distribution to the Midwest.

Approved Tuesday, the permit will allow construction of about 50 miles on federal land in California, Arizona and New Mexico, according to Jack Lahr of the Bureau of Land Management here.

According to Lahr, the completed project could "alleviate the glut of oil on the West Coast" by making it available by way of the Midland to the Midwest.

SOHIO eventually plans to construct a 1,026-mile pipeline to Texas. The firm's next step is to reach agreement with El Paso Natural Gas Co. and Southern California Gas Co. for SOHIO to operate 800 miles of existing pipeline.

Both federal and state approval is then necessary for SOHIO to convert the existing natural gas pipeline to crude oil.

The firm applied for the federal permit in September 1975, and Robert Schaadt, a SOHIO representative in Long Beach, said, "This underscores the long lead time involved in getting these permits, and I think it raises serious questions about how the entire process could be shortened."

Softball Meet Will Benefit Latin Group

The Parks and Recreation Board reluctantly has agreed to sponsor a slow-pitch softball tournament to benefit the League of United Latin American Citizens women's scholarship fund.

Meeting under the trees at the Buddy Holly Recreation Area, board members approved the request of Irma Guerrero for the tournament.

The board's reluctant decision to approve the tournament stemmed from parks and recreation department rules stipulating that only the department is permitted to hold tournaments at city parks.

John Alford, parks and recreation director, explained that before the rules were implemented the city lost money on the cost of lighting the softball fields, on preparation of the fields and on personnel required to be in attendance at a tournament.

Besides, he said, groups usually lost money when they sponsored a tournament.

"I don't think anybody should profit at the expense of the city as a whole," he said.

But board members decided to make a "one-time exception" for the LULAC tournament after learning that the Jaycees had been allowed to sponsor a fast-pitch tournament the past four years.

Alford said the civic group had been notified this was the last year it could hold the contest, but board members said that if one exception had been made, another wouldn't hurt.

"Let's make another exception, then stick to what we're supposed to do," board member Adolphus Cleveland said.

Deputies Make Drug Arrests

While making arrests in a forgery case about 3 p.m. Tuesday, two sheriff's deputies confiscated an unknown amount of what is believed to be narcotics.

The substance, discovered on the persons of two out-of-towners in a Parkway Drive motel room, was being analyzed this morning at a Department of Public Safety laboratory, said deputy Ernest Rector, who along with deputy Alton Hobbs, arrested the couple.

The arrests originally were to be in connection with the May 22 theft of 492 checks from the Lubbock-Crosby-Garza County Medical Auxiliary. Some of the stolen checks were thought to still be in circulation.

The suspects, a 28-year-old man and 23-year-old woman, were being held today on suspicion of forgery and possession of narcotics, Rector said.

Obituaries

Lillie Mae Ethridge

TAHOKA (Special) — Services for Lillie Mae Ethridge, 78, of Tahoka, will be at 10 a.m. Thursday in Sweet Street Baptist Church here with the Rev. Elmer Tyler, pastor of Assembly of God Church here, officiating.

Burial will be in Peaceful Gardens Memorial Park under direction of White Funeral Home.

Mrs. Ethridge died Tuesday afternoon in Lynn County Hospital after suffering an illness several weeks.

She was born in Mills County, attended school at Mullen, and married Thomas Floyd Ethridge in Goldwaithe Nov. 24, 1923.

They settled in the Edith Community in 1926, coming from Bradshaw. The couple later moved to Tahoka. Mr. Ethridge died in 1973.

She had been a longtime member of the Assembly of God Church here.

Survivors include two daughters, Margie Snowden of Abilene and Mary Wagoner of Bluefield, W. Mrs. Wiley Sandlin Services for Mrs. Wiley B. Sandlin, 61, of 506 Quirt Ave. will be at 2 p.m. Thursday in Pioneer Park Church of Christ with Walter Rogers, minister, officiating.

Burial will follow in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Rix Funeral Directors.

Mrs. Sandlin died at 4:15 a.m. Tuesday in Methodist Hospital after a lengthy illness.

She was married on Feb. 14, 1935, in Greenville. The couple moved to the South Plains area in April 1948, from Hunt County. They lived in Abernathy for a time and then moved to Lubbock in 1958. She was a member of the Church of Christ.

Survivors include her husband; two sons, Wiley O. of Saint Libory, Neb., and Ivan of Monahans; a daughter, Mrs. Theron McGuire of Levelland; three brothers, Earl Stevens of Saltillo and J. H. Stevens and Bennie Lee Stevens, both of Detroit, Tex.; a sister, Mrs. Ethel Anthony of Paris, Tex.; and five grandchildren.

Roxie Myrtle Sims

Services for Roxie Myrtle Sims, 94, a longtime resident of Fort Worth who has been visiting a daughter in Lubbock since May, will be at 2 p.m. Thursday in Forest Hill Presbyterian Church in Fort Worth.

Burial will be in Everman Cemetery at Everman under direction of Gause-Ware Funeral Home.

Her body will be at Gause-Ware Funeral Home until service time. Lubbock arrangements are by Rix Funeral Directors.

Mrs. Sims died Tuesday morning in West Texas Hospital of an illness.

She was a member of Forest Hill Presbyterian Church where her father had been a former minister.

Survivors include three sons, Robert W., of Brownwood, Max W., of Fort Worth and Jack W., of Frisco; four daughters, Mrs. S.D. Sprinkle of Dallas, Mrs. James Crayton of Fort Worth, Mrs. Jim Fenly of Euless and Mrs. Peggy Dillard of Lubbock; a sister, Mrs. Uta Findley of New Orleans, La.; two brothers, Ward Collier of Alvarado and Reed Collier of Fort Worth; 12 grandchildren, 14 great-grandchildren and two great-great-grandchildren.

The family suggests memorials to the building fund of the Covenant Presbyterian Church in Lubbock.

Senator Wants List Of Dead Appointees

AUSTIN (AP) — Sen. Oscar Mauzy, D-Dallas, suggested to Gov. Dolph Briscoe's press secretary on Tuesday that all future lists of gubernatorial appointments indicate whether the appointee is dead.

A list of more than 600 appointments submitted to the Senate for confirmation last week included the names of four appointees who had died since Briscoe appointed them.

Press secretary Bob Bain said even though they were dead, the Senate needed to confirm them to validate actions they had taken.

Obituary Briefs

Services for Arthur L. Vickers, 52, of Andrews are pending with Singleton Funeral Home in Andrews. The former drilling foreman for Atlantic Richfield died after a sudden illness at 5:30 p.m. Tuesday in Permian General Hospital. Survivors include his wife and two children.

CB Radio Gives Crippled Woman Chance To Visit Outside World

WELDON, Ill. (UPI) — Judy Mix has endured enough in her 37 years to kill the spirit and courage of most people.

Yet, her cheerful voice on the Citizens Band radio is a source of inspiration to the 550 residents of Weldon, Ill., and the many motorists who travel through the central Illinois area.

Better known by her CB handle — "Miss Judy" — she was stricken by three types of polio when she was 12. It left her paralyzed from the neck down and almost totally dependent on an iron lung to do her breathing.

Miss Judy has spent most of the last 25 years in an iron lung and is just six years short of the world survival record.

Without hesitation, Miss Judy said receiving her first CB radio at age 20 changed her life.

"On the CB, it's like visiting people. It's like being other places and hearing about what goes on there," she said.

"That's her outside world," said her mother Velda Mix. "She loves it."

Judy spends much of her time talking with friends and other radio contacts, sometimes giving information and aiding motorists in trouble. She operates her CB microphone by pressing an attached shoe horn with her cheek.

Many of the people she meets via the radio stop at the Mix house to visit with Miss Judy and her mother. Neighbors say she has become a celebrity of sorts.

"We all love her," offered Gina Leischner, who with her husband, Scott, recently organized a fund-raising benefit for Miss Judy. The money will help finance an emergency generator to run her iron lung in the event of a power failure.

About $2,000 was raised at the benefit, which also gave Judy a chance to leave the house for the first time in nine months and meet in person many of her CB friends.

"It was just great to get outside again," she said as she lay in her airtight iron lung, cooled only by an electric fan at her head. "I love the outdoors."

"It was really remarkable, all the people who came (about 1,000)," she added. "I had talked to so many, but never met them face to face."

Judy said she was a healthy, enthusiastic seventh-grader when she was afflicted with respiratory, spinal and bulbar polio in 1953. Her first symptom, she said, was a bad headache. Within one day, she was unable to walk.

The paralysis moved quickly through her body, stopping at her head. Before a bout with pneumonia, she was able to sit upright in a wheelchair and even participated in her high school graduation ceremonies.

DR. LAMB

Procedure Saves Lives

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — In one of your columns in answering a letter about heart attacks you mentioned that all adults should know how to aid someone who is having a heart attack. Do you think you could send me information on how to do this or discuss it in your column? I'm sure this would be important to millions of people if they knew how to administer first aid to a person having a heart attack. I believe you stated it would save a great many lives.

DEAR READER — Yes, I have mentioned that and I'm sending you The Health Letter number 7-4, Save a Life: Heart and Lung Arrest. Other readers who want this issue describing the simple mechanics of the first aid procedure for heart attack victims can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

This issue describes how to maintain the circulation if the heart stops pumping effectively and also what to do about providing mouth to mouth respiration. We sometimes call this tne A, B, C's of respiration and circulation. I do think every adult should have an awareness of how this procedure is done. In addition, most communities either through the Red Cross Chapter or their local heart associatin ofter course for adults to learn how to do this procedure.

I would strongly encourage all of my readers to investigate this possibility and learn what to do in the case of an emergency. It has already been proved that in communities where most of the citizens know how to do this, the death rate from heart attacks before people get to the hospital is cut in about half. That's because no matter where a person is when he has a heart attack, there is usually someone nearby who is able to provide adequate first aid assistance until competent professional help can be obtained.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Is it possible for a woman who had a sterilization opertion to have it undone? According to her the operation was done through her navel which in the end sealed her tubes. She said that there is an operation that can undo this and I said there isn't. Now this has become so out of hand that I would appreciate it if you will kindly settle this matter with an answer.

DEAR READER — She's right at least up to a point. We do know that when the tubes are tied or sealed that they can be operated on surgically and the blockage removed or the cut ends reconnected.

The highest success rate with this has been with microsurgery where the surgeon can actually observe what's going on under a microscope. It's fairly delicate surgery and not all such operarions are successful. Successful results may occur in only one out of four such operations.

There is always the problem of scar formation that occurs around any cut and the tubes must heal open for the operation to be a success. But technically it does happen in some cases.

Because of the unpredictability and difficulty in obtaining success, any woman who has a sterilization operation should consider it as a permanent birth control procedure and not something that she can have reversed at will at some later date.

Park Officials Voice Concern Over Deaths

GRAND CANYON, Ariz. (AP) — Two people have fallen to their death in the Grand Canyon this summer, five have been killed in plane crashes, and one disappeared.

In all, 43 visitors have been killed in western national parks, prompting the National Park Service to plead for sanity on the part of guests.

The number of fatalities is not unusually high, with more than a million visitors so far in parks such as Grand Canyon and Yosemite, said Dick Wilburn, park service safety officer for Arizona, California, Nevada and Hawaii.

"We do have a problem with visitors getting in trouble and getting killed," Wilburn added. "We've had a larger than usual number of drownings."

Many of the 24 visitors who drowned were surprised by the heavy, post-drought flow in California mountain streams, Wilburn said. On Lake Mead, the combination of fatigue and alcohol have been deadly.

"The kind of person who lives around Los Angeles, buys a new boat and drives three hours to the lake may see a warning sign for strong wind, but he's going to launch his boat anyway," said Wilburn.

Alcohol also was involved in half the drownings in the park service's southwest region, stretching from New Mexico to Louisiana, said safety engineer Dick Pippenger.

Amistad Recreation Area near Del Rio records six deaths from boating accidents and drownings so far this year — double last year's total.

At Grand Canyon, lack of fuel and overloading were blamed for two light plane crashes which killed five persons.

Jeffrey F. Ridenour, 63, of Yucaipa, Calif., disappeared May 28 after he was warned not to hike a rugged Grand Canyon trail alone, said Roger Giddings, park spokesman.

"Scrambling around" caused the deaths of two visitors who fell from the canyon rim, said Lloyd Hoener, law enforcement chief.

Billye Kendrick, 45, of Vero Beach, Fla., and Ruben Rodriguez, 22, of Depue, Ill., "were not on the trail," Hoener said. "They were just scrambling around. If you stay on the trail you won't get in trouble."

Handicapped Man Robbed Of $54

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Police are looking for two or more men who offered to push a paralyzed man home in his wheelchair, but instead robbed him of $54 he had made selling small trinkets.

Earl Wesley, confined to a wheelchair for at least 25 years, had been at a sidewalk sale, selling trinkets to make his living, police Sgt. Vernon Langley said. Two or more persons offered to push him home, but after they got away from the crowd they took his money bag. Complete descriptions of the theives were not available.

Mastodon's Remains Unearthed

SEQUIM, Wash. (UPI) — Archeologists say they have unearthed the first conclusive evidence that humans used stone tools to butcher the elephant-like mastodon in North America 12,000 years ago.

Carl Gustafson, a Washington State University anthropology professor directing an excavation of the remains of a mastodon, said this week the team had uncovered a stone butcher's tool at the site.

"It's a very crude kind of tool," Gustafson said. "It appears to be made of some metamorphic granite."

He said the round, two-inch stone apparently was used "in the initial dismembering" of the animal.

Gustafson said two similar finds were made previously in South America.

The remains of the mastodon, which apparently got stuck in a bog and was killed by humans, were first noticed last year by farmer Emanuel Manis, who found the tusks while digging a pond in his field.

LIGNITE TEST

AUSTIN (AP) — The Railroad Commission has given Texas A&M University an administrative okay for a lignite gasification test facility in Milam County. A &M proposes to drill an ignition well to a lignite seam about 14 feet thick and about 273 feet below the surface.

Agency Suspends Activities

GENEVA (UPI) — After just two years, the World Senior Citizens Organization has been forced to suspend activities through lack of funds and volunteers.

Letters of encouragement still pour in, most of them from retired people who enclose $10 for annual membership.

Each letter is ackowledged and the money meticulously returned by Olivier Jan, the 46 year-old Frenchman who founded the organization with a group of friends in 1976.

"There's been a lot of interest but unfortunately nobody has been sufficiently concerned to offer meaningful help," said Jan, an airline sales agent.

"While the International Red Cross provided free office space, none of the multinational companies, government agencies and other persons we approached were interested enough to help meet the costs of a secretariat or even mailing expenses."

It was also impossible to find anyone in Geneva, a wealthy city, prepared to come in for a few hours each day to lend a hand in answering mail, keeping files and other office chores.

Jan's latest letter came from Sen. Frank Church, chairman of the U.S. Senate's Special Committee on Aging. Church is supporting the idea of a U.N. World Assembly on Aging proposed for 1982 and sought the backing of the World Senior Citizens Organization.

Jan had to reply that the organization, while still in existence, has had to suspend activities due to lack of financial support.

The group was established by Jan and his friends when they realized that their parents, although retired, were unhappy at no longer being active members of society.

"With the number of retired people increasing every year, this is going to be an even greater problem," Jan said in an interview.

"Perhaps it won't be long before politicians realize that retired people can still vote," he said with a touch of bitterness.

The main aims of the group were to provide a central clearing house for data on problems faced by the elderly, act as a link between national senior citizen associations around the world and act as an advisory service for governments and international agencies.

The non-profit organization also was intended to help retired people take vacations they could otherwise not afford by arranging for them to exchange their homes for holidays.

"Hundreds of people around the world asked about this opportunity but we haven't had the means of providing such a service," Jan said.

"We also received a lot of correspondence from airlines but none of them offered any special fares for the elderly apart from their normal excursion rates."

Many national and regional retired persons associations asked about affiliation with the group. Some of them, however, showed signs of jealousy and fear of competition, Jan said.

One letter from the National Retired Teachers Association-American Association of Retired Persons of Washington told Jan to "avoid giving the impression, either to the press or in any other form" that any cooperation exists between itself and the Geneva-based group.

Jan believes his organization will at some time be urgently required, which is why he intends to keep it alive although inactive.

U.N. projections show that the 60-plus population of the world is growing faster than the population as a whole, in percentage terms.

There were an estimated 291 million people aged over 60 years in 1970. This number is expected to increase by 100 percent to 585 million by the year 2000. The world population as a whole, meanwhile, is expected to increase by 80 percent, from 3.6 to 6.5 billion.

In the developed countries, the entire population will rise by 33 percent in the same period, but the 60-plus segment will increase by 50 percent.

This trend will be even more pronounced in the developing nations, the U.N. predicts, with their overall population due to increase by 98 percent between 1970 and 2000 with the over-60 group rising in number by 158 percent.

"This demographic explosion means that people of the third age face a slow though disguised persecution and unless they are to depend on fancy speeches based on empty purses, they will have to resume or continue an active life," Jan said.

Smoke Closes Two Runways in Rome

ROME (AP) — Smoke drifting in from a nearby forest fire forced the closing of two of the three runways at Rome's Leonardo Da Vinci Airport for one hour Monday, police said.

Airport authorities said incoming and outgoing planes had to use the third runway because of reduced visibility on the other two. The fire, whose cause was not immediately known, was brought under control by airport firemen after one hour.

Trustee Proposes Cut In Tax Rate

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

School trustee Lynn Stafford proposed Tuesday a 23-cent cut in the Lubbock Independent School District tax rate. Her colleagues seem to concur in principle, but they disagree over the mechanics of the tax-slash plan.

Mrs. Stafford suggested achieving the tax cut — the largest in recent local history — primarily by depleting the district's reserves. Her proposal also includes 10 percent pay raises for school employees, 3 percent more than originally budgeted.

Some other school board members, notably Harold Harriger and Giles M. "Buddy" Forbess, object to tapping the reserves for such tax relief and higher salaries. They want to see Superintendent Ed Irons cut proposed expenditures instead.

At any rate, after a four-hour work session on the coming year's budget, it appeared likely that the school board would knock 20 cents to a quarter off the district's current tax rate of $1.58 per $100 valuation.

The board was scheduled to reconvene today at 3:15 p.m. on the matter.

On Tuesday, trustees were talking in terms of a 13-16 percent cut in local school taxes. That's a savings of about $55 on a $40,000 home — provided, of course, that the home has not just been revalued for tax purposes.

In the city's southwest quadrant, houses have been reappraised this year, going up an average of 50 percent. Under Mrs. Stafford's proposal, instead of increasing a like amount, school taxes would rise only about 27 percent for those homeowners.

The school district is in a good position to cut taxes because of huge "carryover balances," or surpluses, in its general fund and debt service fund. Irons projects that if the tax rate stays the same, the district will have an extra $2.5 million and $2.6 million respectively in those accounts by August, 1979.

Mrs. Stafford would provide tax relief from these surpluses.

She proposes that the combined $5.1 million surpluses be cut to $1.5 million — $1 million for the general fund and $500,000 for the debt service fund.

This would free up $3.6 million. Of that, Mrs. Stafford proposed giving each teacher a $300 raise on top of 7 percent pay hikes already recommended (cost: $660,000); and classified employees an extra $15 month on top of previous hikes ($70,000 cost).

The remainder, $2.87 million, would be used to reduce local taxes. Mrs. Stafford noted that this would translate into a cut in the district's rate of about 23 cents.

Other trustees said they agree with the magnitude of the tax reduction. But Harriger and Forbess want to see the money

School Board Eyes Salary Schedule

For the second straight year, Lubbock Independent School District teachers may be getting pay raises of 10 percent. Only this time, the money would be coming mostly from the district's treasury, not the state's.

The school board Tuesday authorized administrators to draft new pay scales along those lines. How the raises are computed takes some explaining.

The state sets minimum salary schedules for all Texas school systems. Those schedules are designed so that as teachers move up the experience ladder, they get more pay.

In addition, Lubbock provides "local increments" — a supplement to the state minimums. Currently, the local increments range from $500 to $1,000.

Last summer, the state legislature adopted a school finance bill that gave teachers raises of about 10 percent. Without changing the local increments, Lubbock school trustees passed this pay hike on to teachers here.

For the coming year, the state minimums are being raised only slightly. Most teachers will get $80 to $150 from this increased base.

However, all teachers — except those on the top rung of the experience ladder — also move up a step on the pay scale. This step means an additional raise, primarily from the state, of $280 to $580.

All told, if local increments are not raised, teachers would be getting from the state pay hikes of about 4.5 percent. (The exception is that top-experienced teachers would get only about 1 percent.)

Originally, Superintendent Ed Irons proposed that local increments be increased by $200 to $300. This would give teachers an extra 2.5 percent hike, for an overall raise of around 7 percent. Irons would have changed the local increments to run from $700 to $1,250.

That would cost local taxpayers about $470,000.

On Tuesday, the school board asked to see figures that would give teachers a $300 raise each on top of Irons' recommendation. In essence, the local increments would be raised even further, ranging from $1,000 to $1,550.

This would cost an additional $660,000. In effect, local increments — already costing about $1.4 million — would be raised another $1.1 million.

And when all the raises are combined,

Police Guard Trash Collectors

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Beleaguered city officials, faced with increasing violence by more than 175 dismissed striking garbagemen, dog catchers and airport maintenance workers, have assembled a special police task force to guard today's trash collections.

"All trucks will have police escorts," said City Manager Tom Huebner, who promptly fired the striking garbagemen, dog catchers and airport maintenance personnel after their walkout over wages. "We will take whatever means are necessary to quell any violence — as long as it is necessary."

City officials also obtained a 10-day temporary restraining order late Tuesday from State District Judge Fred Shannon to bar the former city employees from threatening working garbagemen or impeding trash collections.

Angry, rock-throwing ex-garbagemen ambushed three garbage trucks Tuesday afternoon, smashing the windshields and slightly injuring a non-striking driver and a new garbageman.

A non-striking worker was arrested Tuesday afternoon after brandishing a pistol at taunting ex-garbagemen. No charges were filed immediately. Officials also said threats had increased against remaining garbagemen.

Police cars accompanied some trucks Tuesday, but did not follow each one on its pickup route. More than 50 trucks — manned by about 85 new garbagemen and one garbagewoman hired Monday — covered about half of the 128 routes Tuesday in the nation's 10th largest city.

The damaged trucks were attacked on remote portions of garbage pickup routes in South San Antonio, said Public Works Director Frank Kiolbassa.

Huebner said Tuesday night that 60 police officers have been assigned solely to protect garbagemen. He said other officers also will beef up patrols along the routes.

"The men are arming on both sides, with guns and knives," said Councilman Rudy Ortiz, who says the mass firings are "irresponsible" and has called for the council to fire Huebner. "I told him (Huebner) I would hold him responsible for any violence."

"The potential for violence is very great," added Councilman Henry Cisneros, who also opposes the firings. "There has to be some safety valve established."

Huebner, however, has strong support from eight of 11 city council members and Mayor Lila Cockrell.

In the face of the increasingly volatile situation Tuesday afternoon, Huebner also established a five-man review board of supervisors and officials to possibly reinstate some of the fired city workers.

Twenty-two dog catchers, members of the striking San Antonio Refuse Collectors Association, were fired Tuesday by Huebner for walking out Monday.

SPOTLIGHT ON... Family News

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

For the last seven years I have made my home in the sun belt.

A couple of weeks ago I returned to my native Ohio to visit relatives and friends. The talk turned to the winter of '77-'78.

A couple of times I tried to enter the conversation, but it was clear they looked upon me with the same contempt as the man who professed to be a ski instructor during World War II and was innocent as to what was going on.

"Where were you when we wore coats to the dinner table?" asked a cousin. "Looking for the cap off your suntan lotion? Tougho. And what were you doing when we were digging our cars out from under an avalanche of snow? Having trouble with your refrigeration? And what about when we ran out of fuel and we took our sled to the store for food and they ran out? Let me guess. Someone threw you into the pool and your hair got wrecked. Well, we had kids home for weeks at a time making us crazy. And we tried to escape to the airports only to find out they were closed. And when we tuned in the news, do you know what we saw? A girl in the sun belt in a deck chair complaining she had shoulder strap burns from the sun!"

"I read in the papers about..."

"Listen to her. She read the newspapers. Well Bunkie, we WORE them to keep warm. Believe me, it was hell!"

When my plane touched down home, the temperature at 6:30 p.m. had dropped to 108. My wedding rings became soft...then solidified once more as they adjusted to the heat. My underwear turned into adhesive as I claimed my luggage. I slid into the car and started the motor. I smelled something. It was baked feet. The steering wheel was like a fire hoop.

At home, my husband informed me the air conditioner was broken, the kids couldn't go outside because it was too hot and we were limited on the amount of water we could use.

We watched the news. The forecast for the next day was 114. It showed a couple from Ohio riding their bikes on green grass with their sweaters on. They were breathing and everything.

Hell is relative.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: I am a 17-year-old girl who has been in love with a guy I'll call Donny since last summer. He broke up with me because he said I wouldn't let him go out with the boys as often as he wanted to.

I gave in to him a lot, but I was one of the lucky ones who didn't get pregnant. Donny would come and get me, and after he got what he wanted, he'd bring me home and take off to be with his friends. Abby, I never said no to him because I loved him a lot and still do, but he always was in a hurry to get away from me.

He treats me just great when we're together, but when I'm up to his house with his sister, he ignores me. I want to know what Donny really thinks of me, but he won't commit himself. I have told him I loved him several times, but he's never told me that. How can I get Donny back, Abby?

NO NAME, PLEASE

Dear No Name: I don't think you can get Donny "back" because you never really had him — for any longer than it took him to "get what he wanted" before taking off. He used you, dear. Now, be a wise girl and make up your mind to forget him. And never let another boy use you again — or you can expect one rejection after another.

DEAR ABBY: Recently our daughter was married to a young Californian. His parents came for the wedding and stayed at our home.

As is the custom, the groom's father hosted a dinner party the evening before the wedding. But being unfamiliar with Milwaukee restaurants, he asked us to make the dinner reservations for him, so we selected a famous German restaurant. When the check was presented to the host, we were embarrassed to find that the waitress had added a $25 "tip" for herself. When we questioned the practice, she said it was customary for parties of more than 10 people.

It was very awkward situation for all of us, and we felt especially embarrassed because we had made the reservation.

Have you (or anyone else) ever heard of such a custom?

BRIDES PARENTS

Dear Parents: Some clubs, hotels and restaurants routinely add "gratuities" to the bill for special services (group dinners, etc.). But when a waitress specified her tip on her own, I would ask for the management's confirmation — and schnell!

DEAR ABBY: I am married and the mother of six. My problem is dogs — seven of them! I like dogs, but not enough to let seven of them live in the same house with me. I can't get my husband to put them outside.

I can't keep my floors clean, and company will not come to my house because the dog odors are so strong.

Abby, those dogs even get up on my beds. I am just about nuts from those dogs, but my husband won't cooperate.

What should I do?

DOG PROBLEM

Dear Problem: You have a HUSBAND problem — not a DOG problem. Even a dirty dog deserves a decent place to live, whether it's inside or out, but seven sounds like six too many to me. Set up a howl!

The Slim Gourmet

Where food is concerned, we believe in reincarnation, especially for expensive, low-calorie delicacies like lobster or crab. Last night's lush lobster deserves to be born again, as an economical-but-delicious "Lobster Linguini." Those wonderful crabs you enjoyed over the weekend can have a second life as a creamy "Crab Bisque."

Nothing at all mystical. What we're talking about here is saving the shells, simmering them into a savory broth, and using the broth as the base for another night's dish. You probably do that already with leftover roasts like turkey, but most cooks overlook the reincarnation possibilities of shellfish. What a pity! Even the most thorough lobster-lover leaves behind lots of luscious but low-calorie flavor.

There is so much flavor in these shells that an Italian-style pasta sauce made with lobster broth can make a relatively inexpensive fish like cod or haddock taste like costly chunks of shellfish. That's what we've done with this recipe, and you must try it next time you have leftover lobster or crab. (If the "next time" is in a restaurant, don't be shy. Doggy-bag the shells. Tell the waiter you have a pedigreed cat with champagne tastes!)

LOBSTER OR CRAB BROTH

leftover shells from 1 large or 2 small lobsters (or 4 or 5 crabs)
½ cup dry sherry wine
3 cups water
1 bay leaf
1 onion, peeled and quartered
optional: 1 tsp. MSG
salt, or butter-flavored salt

Combine in a soup pot or pressure cooker. Simmer one hour (or 20 minutes under pressure, according to manufacturer's directions). Strain.

LINGUINI WITH LOBSTER OR CRAB SAUCE

lobster or crab broth (recipe given)
6-oz. can tomato paste optional: 1 clove garlic, minced, or ⅛ tsp. instant garlic
2 tsps. oregano or basil
1 lb. cod or haddock (steak or fillets), fresh or defrosted
6 ozs. (dry) protein-enriched linguini or spaghetti lemon wedges
fresh parsley, minced

Combine shellfish broth and tomato paste in a saucepan and stir smooth. Add garlic and oregano or basil. Cover and simmer for five minutes.

Cut cod or haddock into two-inch cubes. Stir into simmering sauce. Cover and simmer 12 to 15 minutes, until fish is opaque and flakes easily (don't overcook).

Meanwhile, cook linguini or spaghetti in boiling salted water until tender. Rinse in hot running water and drain well. Serve seafood sauce over hot, drained pasta, garnished with lemon wedges and minced parsley. Makes four servings, about 310 calories each.

LOBSTER OR CRAB BISQUE

shellfish broth (recipe given)
2 cups skim milk
2 tbsps. instant-blending flour
salt and pepper to taste
Paprika
few sprigs fresh parsley, minced

Simmer shellfish broth down to about one cupful. Stir cold milk and flour together and gradually stir into the simmering broth. Cook and stir over low heat until thick and bubbling. Season to taste. Sprinkle with paprika and parsley. Makes four servings, about 85 calories each.

MAIN COURSE BISQUE — Follow preceding recipe. Stir in the contents of a 6½ or 7-ounce can of water-packed tuna. Heat through. Makes two main-course servings, 285 calories each. (Cooked, canned or leftover lobster or crabmeat may also be substituted.)

Fish is brainy food, because it's nutritious and non-fattening. For more seafood slimmers, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope and 35 cents to SLIM GOURMET NEW ENGLAND FRESH FISH DISHES, in care of this newspaper. Sparta, N.J. 07871.

Fruit, Brandy Combinations Provide Light Summer Desserts

Fruit, Brandy Blend In Summer Coolers

Light, airy and elegant ... that's what brandied dessert souffles and mousses are all about.

These glorious combinations of fruit, and sweet seasonings gently folded into puffs of egg white, artfully laced with brandy, and then chilled to delicate shapes are delightful ways to end a summer evening meal.

Fast and fancy, they can be prepared a day ahead of time and ready on hand in the refrigerator for the serving. It's the light touch of brandy that adds classic sophistication to these dazzling dessert creations.

Brandied Pink Apple Souffle is an apple and brandy mixture generously seasoned with the flavor of red cinnamon candies. A Brandy Custard Sauce accompanies the souffle and with just a hint of brandy compliments the dish. Candied red apples provide an attractive accent to the top.

Brandy Apricot Mousse is a chilled pastel apricot creation textured with bits of apricot and spiced with the mellowness of brandy. Apricot halves and whipped cream stars evenly placed around the top make it a lovely dessert presentation.

Both a refreshing dessert and a delightful drink, Pineapple Brandy Frost is a surprising blend of pineapple juice, lemon sherbet and brandy served over crushed ice in a parfait glass and garnished with a fresh pineapple spear.

A perfect warm summer day sipper is Brandy Fruit Cobbler ... refreshing with just a hint of tartness. It is a combination of chilled apple cider, brandy and a touch of lemon juice and served with alternating peach and banana slices and strawberries on a skewer.

BRANDIED PINK APPLE SOUFFLE

1¼ cups apple juice
2 tbsps. red cinnamon candies
2 large or 3 med. cooking apples (about 1¼ lbs.)
½ cup sugar
½ cup brandy
1 envelope unflavored gelatin
3 large egg whites
⅛ tsp. salt
Brandy Custard Sauce

Combine 1 cup apple juice and cinnamon candies in large skillet and heat slowly until candies dissolve. Meanwhile, pare, core and slice apples. Add ¼ cup each sugar and brandy to skillet along with the lemon juice and stir until sugar dissolves and mixture reaches a boil. Add apples and simmer about 10 minutes, just until tender and translucent, turning once. Remove apples with slotted spoon, saving syrup. Set aside a few apple slices to decorate top of souffle. Blend or sieve remainder to make 1 cup. Sprinkle gelatin over remaining ¼ cup apple juice to soften. Turn the rosy cooking syrup into measuring cup. Add more apple juice or water, if needed, to measure ½ cup. Combine with softened gelatin, set over boiling water, and heat until gelatin dissolves. Remove from heat and stir in remaining ¼ cup brandy and the blended apple. Cool until mixture begins to thicken and jell. Beat egg whites with salt to soft peaks. Gradually beat in remaining ¼ cup sugar, beating to a stiff meringue. Fold into apple mixture. Chill a few minutes, until mixture mounds on a spoon, turn into serving bowl and chill firm. At serving time, decorate with reserved apple slices. Serve with Brandy Custard Sauce. Makes about 6 servings.

BRANDY CUSTARD SAUCE

Beat 3 egg yolks lightly in top of double boiler. Stir in 1¼ cups half and half, 3 tablespoons sugar, 1 teaspoon cornstarch and ⅛ teaspoon salt. Set over boiling water, and cook, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens and coats back of spoon. Remove from heat, and stir in 2 tablespoons of brandy and ½ teaspoon vanilla. Chill before serving. Makes about 1½ cups.

BRANDY FRUIT COBBLER

1½ oz. brandy
1 tbsp. lemon juice
3 oz. sparkling cider
Fruit skewer

Stir brandy and lemon juice together in 6-oz. glass. Pour in chilled sparkling cider and stir lightly. Decorate with fruit skewer, made by alternating 2 each peach and banana slices, and topping with a whole strawberry. Makes 1 serving.

PINEAPPLE FROST

1½ oz. brandy
2 tbsps. undiluted frozen pineapple juice concentrate
½ cup finely crushed ice
2 scoops (1/3 cup) lemon sherbet
Pineapple spear

Combine brandy and pineapple juice concentrate in blender jar and blend smooth. Add ice, and blend until ice is very fine. Add sherbet and blend smooth. Pour into 12-oz. glass and garnish with pineapple spear. Makes 1 serving.

BRANDY APRICOT MOUSSE

1 (16-oz.) can apricot halves
1 (6-oz.) can apricot nectar
1 envelope unflavored gelatin
4 large eggs, separated
½ cup sugar
¼ tsp. salt
1/3 cup brandy
1 cup whipping cream

Drain apricot halves. Set aside 3 halves for decoration. Turn remaining halves into blender, and blend to a puree (or force through a strainer). Turn nectar into top of double boiler and sprinkle with gelatin. Let stand 5 minutes to soften. Beat egg yolks lightly, and add to nectar, along with ¼ cup sugar and salt. Set over boiling water. Cook 5 to 10 minutes, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens and coats back of spoon. Remove from heat and stir in pureed apricots and brandy. Cool until mixture begins to thicken and jell. Beat egg whites to a fine foam. Gradually beat in remaining ¼ cup sugar, continuing to beat to a stiff meringue. With same beater, beat cream stiff. Fold meringue and cream into gelatin mixture. Turn into a souffle dish 6 inches diameter, 3 inches deep (about 5 cups capacity), fitted with a foil or waxed paper collar extending at least 1 inch above the rim of dish. Chill until firm, at least 3 hours. At serving time, remove collar and decorate top with reserved apricot halves. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

COTTAGE CLEAN—UPS

Here are some cottage clean-up tips: Cane, wicker and bamboo furniture cleans best with the dusting brush of your cleaner. To prevent summer furniture from drying out and splitting, wet it thoroughly once a year. Opening lead: King of ♡.

When your contract seems too easy to be true, that is the time to be most wary. A bad break has been known to sink even the best of contracts.

South was well within himself when he simply rebid three no trump. He devalued his hand somewhat because his high cards were in his short suits, which meant that his long spade suit might not be of any value in the play.

West led the king of hearts and declarer was absolutely enraptured about his prospects. It seemed merely a matter of how many overtricks he was going to make until he won the ace of hearts and tried to run the clubs. West's spade discard was a severe blow.

Declarer could not afford to give up the lead, for the defenders would cash enough heart tricks to defeat the hand. Yet without the club suit he had only eight tricks. The only hope for a ninth was to find diamonds splitting 3-3. When that failed to materialize, declarer had to accept a one trick set.

A pessimist would have allowed for the possibility of a 4-1 club break, and would have searched for additional chances. Diamonds were a live possibility. Even if the suit did not divide 3-3, there was a hope that one of the defenders had only a doubleton jack. But to benefit from that possibility declarer had to retain an entry to his hand.

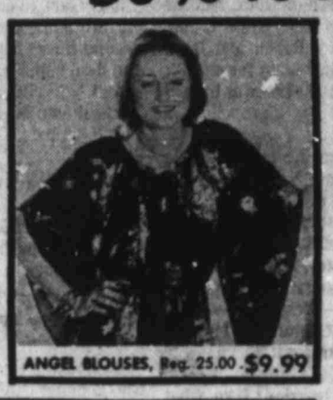

After winning the ace of hearts, declarer should first have cashed the ace and queen of diamonds. When the jack dropped, the contract was guaranteed no matter how the clubs divided. Declarer simply cashes the ten of diamonds, returns to his hand with the king of clubs and takes the king of diamonds.

Now he can go after clubs. If that suit splits normally, declarer will make three overtricks. But as the cards lie, declarer must settle for nine tricks—four diamonds, three clubs and two major-suit aces. Nevertheless, that is game and rubber.

Your play to the first trick could decide the fate of the contract! A writer once remarked: "There's no such thing as a blind opening lead, only deaf opening leaders!" Kennedy Center Draws Tourists, But Encounters Financial Woes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Kennedy Center has been a hit with tourists, but a flop at the financial box office, the center's board of trustees reports.

They asked Congress to write off more than $15 million in interest on government bonds issued to construct the building eight years ago.

The trustees also asked the National Park Service to take over maintenance costs for areas of the building that are open to the public, relieving the center of almost a half million dollars a year in expenses.

The requests were made in a report to Congress which said payment on the Treasury bonds which funded construction is set to begin in late 1979. However, the trustees said the center has been unable to set aside any money to make the payments.

With some help, the trustees said, the center can pay off at least the principal on the $20.4 million in Treasury bonds which was combined with $35 million in private donations to build the facility.

The Kennedy Center, designated by Congress as a living memorial to the late President John F. Kennedy, opened in September 1971. While huge crowds of tourists have come to see it, similar crowds haven't paid to attend performances.

Congress acted to relieve the center of maintenance of the memorial aspects of the building, putting them on the park service. However, Congress stipulated that the center should pay 23.8 percent of the total maintenance cost.

This now amounts to about $650,000 annually, and the GAO says it will increase shortly to more than $1 million.

Legislation the center asked Congress to enact would make the center responsible only for such areas as concessionaires and the backstage, estimated at somewhat more than $150,000 a year.

The center also would pay $510,000 annually on the construction bonds, enough to pay off the principal over 40 years. Together with the maintenance and utility costs, the center's annual payment would increase from about $650,000 to $688,000, the trustees said.

The trustees said in a summary of the prospects that officials of the Treasury, the Interior Department and the Park Service have agreed to support the proposal. They added that "the White House staff has informally concurred in the proposal."

Judge Throws Out Election Results

WELLINGTON, New Zealand (AP) — The chief justice of the Cook Islands threw out the election of Prime Minister Sir Albert Henry and seven members of his Cook Islands Party to the Legislative Assembly, cancelling Henry's majority and ousting his 3-month-old government.

The chief justice, after an investigation, reported there had been bribery and corruption in the March 30 election. He disallowed the votes of seven planeloads of Cook Islanders working in New Zealand who Henry had flown home at government expense to vote.

Dr. Tom Davis, a 60-year-old surgeon who at one time was the Cook Islands' only doctor, was asked to form a new government. In what remains of the assembly, his Democratic Party and Henry's party each hold seven seats.

HOUSTON (UPI) — The police department will have its first woman lieutenant if the City Council approves six more positions proposed by Chief Harry Caldwell. Dorian S. Myers, 28, a rape squad detective, would be appointed to the new position. The Rice University graduate is a six-year veteran and the only woman eligible for the job.

Glad You Asked That!

Q: How come Yogi Berra, (once the manager of the Yankees and now a coach for them) when asked to name his ideal All-Star lineup didn't name a member of the Yankee team! Don't they get along? —J. Denton, Denver.

A: Yogi's always been as honest as he is humorous. And he voted as he saw it; naming four Cincinnati Reds to his dream team: Joe Morgan, George Foster, Johnny Bench and Dave Concepcion. Rod Carew, voted to the All-Star team for each of his previous 11 seasons with the Minneapolis Twins, was the only American Leaguer to make Yogi's list.

Q: Wasn't Ben Vereen, a preacher before he entered show business? — Mrs. Thelma Kirk, Staten Island, N.Y.

A: Almost. Ben had a yen for that calling in '65.

"With no jobs in the offing and things getting real rough," he recalled "I went off to study for the Pentecostal ministry ... My father was a deacon and my uncle a minister, but if there was any inspiration involved, it was from my godfather, who was a great influence on me. Things were bleak — desperate — and I needed to be somewhere. But it wasn't the seminary. I stayed six months and then decided I wasn't cut out for it."

Q: Another Dolly Parton question, is she married? If so, what is her wedded name? — G.G.L., Homestead, Fla.

A: If she said it fast it would sound like a baseball pitcher — Dolly Dean. She has been married for a dozen years to asphalt contractor Carl Dean. He's been quoted as saying, when his wife signed with 20th Century Fox, "If you get in the movies the only thing I have to say is I just don't want you kissin' somebody else!"

Q: Who was it who said, "I am vitally interested in the future — because I am going to spend the rest of my life there?" Was it George Bernard Shaw or Linus Pauling? — Mrs. Miriam Williams, Buffalo.

A: Neither. It was Charles F. Kettering, the late and dynamic vice president of General Motors.

They said it:

Joe Garagiola: "One of the most amusing questions ever thrown at me was: 'How did you feel after you were traded the second time?' My answer was: 'Like I was going through life as the designated player to be named later — a blowout patch. It didn't help either when it was announced to the press that this trade should hurt both teams!'" Neil Simon, on what motivates him to write: "You send your wife out shopping in an expensive store."

Abigail Van Buren: "A good wife laughs at her husband's jokes — not because they're clever, but because she is."

Marlene Dietrich: "A woman is never more liberated than when she is on her hands and knees, scrubbing a floor for the man she loves."

Lee Trevino: "Sometimes you've got to change putters. You look at one so long you get tired of it, the way you do with your wife."

Albert Einstein: "I often feel among crowds like a prostitute who is under constant surveillance."

Paul Newman: "My epitaph will probably read — 'He was a terrific actor — until one day his eyes turned brown!'"

Rodney Dangerfield: "There are certain things I don't understand. Like, take my wife, we've been married 10 years. We've moved 14 different times to different states and yet we always have the same TV repairman!"

The Almanac
TODAY IN HISTORY

By United Press International

Today is Wednesday, July 26, the 207th day of 1978 with 158 to follow.

The moon is in its last quarter.

The morning star is Jupiter.

The evening stars are Mercury, Venus, Mars and Saturn.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Leo.

Irish playwright George Bernard Shaw was born July 26, 1856. American actor Jason Robards was born on this date in 1922.

On this day in history:

In 1847, Liberia, the only sovereign Negro democratic nation in Africa, was declared a republic.

In 1941, Gen. Douglas MacArthur was named commander of United States forces in the Philippines.

In 1967, four days of racial rioting in Detroit ended with 39 dead.

In 1971, Apollo 15 blasted off for the moon with astronauts David Scott, James Irwin and Alfred Worden aboard.

A thought for the day:

Irish playwright George Bernard Shaw said, "The test of a man's or woman's feelings is how they behave in a quarrel."

ADVERTISING CAMPAIGN

AUSTIN (AP) — Members of the Texas Industrial Commission will vote in Abilene Thursday on the 1978-79 advertising campaign promoting Texas' business climate.

A DAILY MESSAGE FROM The Newspaper Bible.

Mark 10: 27-40, The Living Bible

27 Jesus looked at them intently, then said, "Without God, it is utterly impossible. But with God, everything is possible."

28 Then Peter began to mention all that he and the other disciples had left behind. "We've given up everything to follow You," he said.

29 And Jesus replied, "Let Me assure you that no one has ever given up anything—home, brothers, sisters, mother, father, children, or property—for love of Me and to tell others the Good News,

30 Who won't be given back, a hundred times over, homes, brothers, sisters, mothers, children, and land—with persecutions! All these will be his here on earth, and in the world to come he shall have eternal life.

31 But many people who seem to be important now will be the least important then; and many who are considered least here shall be greatest there."

32 Now they were on the way to Jerusalem, and Jesus was walking along ahead; and as the disciples were following they were filled with terror and dread. Taking them aside, Jesus once more began describing all that was going to happen to Him when they arrived at Jerusalem.

33 "When we get there," He told them, "I, the Son of Mankind, will be arrested and taken before the chief priests and the Jewish leaders, who will sentence Me to die and hand Me over to the Romans to be killed.

34 They will mock Me and spit on Me and flog Me with their whips and kill Me; but after three days I will come back to life again."

35 Then James and John, the sons of Zebedee, came over and spoke to Him in a low voice. "Master," they said, "we want You to do us a favor."

36 "What is it?" He asked.

37 "We want to sit on the thrones next to Yours in Your kingdom," they said, "one at Your right and the other at Your left!"

38 But Jesus answered, "You don't know what you are asking! Are you able to drink from the bitter cup of sorrow I must drink from? Or to be baptized with the baptism of suffering I must be baptized with?"

39 "Oh, yes," they said, "we are!" And Jesus said, "You shall indeed drink from My cup and be baptized with My baptism, 40 But I do not have the right to place you on thrones next to Mine. Those appointments have already been made."

Hydrocarbons Worry Scientists

By PATRICIA McCORMACK

NEW YORK (UPI) — Halogenated aromatic hydrocarbons are turning up everywhere and there is increasing concern among scientists about the possible long-term health effects of this persistent class of man-made chemicals.

A major use of these chemicals is in pesticides. They also have many industrial uses.

One type is called PCBs — for polychlorinated biphenyls. Residues of PCBs are found in mother's milk, fish, birds, and other living things.

The World Health Organization, mapping PCBs on Earth, finds them everywhere.

Health detectives at a New York Academy of Sciences conference on environmental hazards said there is increasing evidence these chemicals may constitute a possible risk to the health of much of the United States population.

If left uncontrolled — in terms of their dissemination in the environment — these chemicals may have a greater impact on health than any class of chemicals, they cautioned.

The lexicon of halogenated aromatic hydrocarbons includes, besides PCBs, polybrominated biphenyls, PBBs; dioxin, TCCD; dibenzofurans, and other compounds. Also, DDT, no longer used in the United States.

Experts said exposure to this noxious class of chemicals can cause damage to nerves, skin and reproduction. They can cause cancer in high enough concentration.

Largely of World War II vintage, the halogenated (chlorine, bromine or similar elements) aromatic (ring structure) hydrocarbons (organic molecules containing hydrogen) began to be synthesized at a rapid rate to replace existing materials.

Science Today

Plastics, synthetic fabrics, and other man-made substances — such as pesticides — soon dominated industrial and commercial markets.

From phytoplankton to man, the compounds are not well metabolized for excretion and they wend their way up the food chain.

Scientists participating in the Academy conference said the persistence and accumulation, coupled with extensive use, poses significant societal problems.

Estimates are that 1.25 billion pounds of PCBs have been used in the United States with less than 5 percent degraded.

Remaining: 750 million pounds, primarily in electrical equipment: 450 million pounds in landfills and in air, water, soil, sediments.

Notable pollution accidents with the chemicals include these:

— July 10, 1976, the town of Seveso, Italy, near Milan, was contaminated with about one pound of dioxin. Severe, persistent skin disease was soon seen and the population evacuated. Medical problems continue.

— The Fukuoka province of Japan experienced PCB-dibenzofuran contamination of rice oil from pinhole vessel leaks in a so-called sealed system in the manufacture of rice oil. "Yusho" — rice disease — exists in more than 1,000 persons today, 10 years after the accident.

— The Hudson River ecosystem in New York state has been polluted over the years with PCB waste from two plants making transformers and capacitators.

— In Michigan PCB headaches are over an accident in 1973. A PBB—containing fire-retardent was mixed with animal feed inadvertently. First the animals became ill and then farmers and their families said they didn't feel well.

COYOTE POSES THREAT

AUSTIN (UPI) — The coyote is a serious threat to deer and other game animal polulations in Texas in some situations, Parks and Wildlife Department officials said. Charles K. Winkler, director of the department's big game program, said a gradual but steady expansion of the range of coyotes and an increase in their population constitutes a potential threat to both livestock and game animals.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You could be lucky in your commercial dealings tomorrow, but only if you keep those who don't belong out of your business.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Place the blame where it belongs. Don't collect guilt when a troublemaker tries to twist and distort your intent.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You might go against your better senses tomorrow and put yourself in a position where you'll have to pay for another's mistakes. Heed your inner voices.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Even though your intentions may be good, don't try to arbitrate an argument between a couple of friends. You might wind up as the scapegoat.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Problems that ordinarily wouldn't arise could pop up tomorrow if you take your mind off your duties in order to socialize with co-workers.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Social situations might be a bit more complicated than you'd like tomorrow. The right attitude will go a long way toward helping you through some sticky spots.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You're the one who can help out a situation that got a little out of hand at home. You'll do so in a manner that leaves no bent noses.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Early tomorrow you may lack direction and even appear moody, but at the first sign of someone needing assistance you'll show your stability.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You deserve to occasionally treat yourself for your hard efforts, but that doesn't mean you have a license to spend frivolously.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Although you'll be lucky socially tomorrow, you could generate some sparks with a business associate or on the home front.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Be careful what you volunteer for tomorrow. You could become caught in the middle of an insoluble problem and wind up holding the bag.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) It's generally good to attempt to go along with the majority, but tomorrow it's in your best interest to do things the way you feel they should be done.

Other Nations Catch Up To U.S. In Productivity

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — Sometimes a little says a lot, and clearly too, such as these three items currently in the news:

— In 1948, Japan was still clearing away the industrial and psychic debris of World War II, and was just beginning to rebuild its economy.

To do so, it borrowed heavily from the United States supply of technological know-how, which had played so important a role in the defeat of Japan. It would be the basis for economic recovery.

Technological innovation and its application is one of the foundations of industrial might, making it possible to produce more goods at less cost. The Japanese borrowed and applied well.

Now, 30 years later, a group of American industrial authorities and government policy makers has just returned from a tour of Japanese plants, where they studied advanced manufacturing technology.

Analysis

The National Center for Productivity and Quality of Working Life, a U.S. agency that helped put the tour together, explained:

"While in absolute terms the United States still holds the productivity lead, other nations have been challenging that position, and the rate of productivity growth, especially in the manufacturing sector, does not measure up well against the competition."

It certainly does not. Since 1967 the productivity growth rate in Japan has increased by 105 percent compared to only 24 percent for the United States.

Even that might not describe the full extent of the American decline. In the years 1962 through 1977, Japanese productivity grew at an annual average of 8.4 percent. U.S. growth averaged 2.7 percent.

How did some of the other competitors do? France rose an average of 5.7 percent a year, the Netherlands and Belgium 6.9, and Germany 5.5.

Much of the U.S. decline, explained George Kuper, executive director of the center, follows a fall in the real volume of investment, as a proportion of GNP, in new technologies, research and development.

— From about $8 billion in 1948, installment credit — the kind you pay back in monthly increments — rose to more than $215 billion by the end of 1977, and not all of it was caused by our inflated prices.

Over that period, says Morgan Guaranty Trust, the debt-to-income ratio climbed from 4 percent to nearly 15 percent. Unavailable before the war, credit flowed freely after it. It became a way of life.

In the first postwar decade, consumers financed about 60 percent of big ticket items, such as appliances, television sets and home improvements. On average, that is, they put 40 pecent down.

Between 1958 and 1967, such credit financed more than 80 percent of big ticket items. Still it grew. Over the latest decade, consumers have been financing about 90 percent of such purchases.

— Never before in the 30-year history of the Survey Research Center's consumer sentiment studies have they seen anything like it.

Confidence in the future of business usually correlates with willingness to buy. But for more than a year, the center has measured strong buying but growing pessimism about business expectations.

How do the scholars at the University of Michigan facility explain it? By insisting that people are buying in advance. In advance of what? Even higher prices, they say.

Executives Willingly Accept Transfers

By LeROY POPE

NEW YORK (UPI) — The reluctance of executives and top technical and professional people to accept transfer from one city to another has been exaggerated, says Theodore Bell of Employee Transfer Corp. of Chicago.

Bell bases his statement on 346 answers to a questionnaire sent by his firm to executives who had been transferred one to three times during their careers. Over 84 percent of these executives said they would not hesitate to make another shift and perhaps more importantly 80.6 percent of their families would be willing to move.

Bell said it is fair to point out that the overwhelmingly favorable response may have been influenced by the fact that "all of the executives surveyed had been served by our firm. When a company hires a firm like ours it means they have comprehensive and fair relocation policies."

But even taking this into account there was a big "if," Bell said. "Seventy-eight percent said they would not transfer again if the change entailed any real financial burden."

Bell cited an article published last year in the Personnel Journal by Prof. J.H. Foegen of Winona State University business school indicating that 42 percent of all employees appeared to be refusing out-of-town transfers.

"If Professor Foegen is right," Bell said, "then the employers of these persons who refuse transfers are not showing a willingness to attend fairly to their financial needs."

A transfer also entails other problems for the executive and his family — 69.1 percent said that even though they were willing to move it was a stressful experience. "The employer must be prepared to help ease those stresses," Bell said.

One of ETC's stress-easing obligations to the corporation retaining it is to make a non-obligatory offer to buy the transferred employee's house for cash — at a price based on three appraisals — so he can be sure of having money to put down on a new home.

Bell's firm does a package service on transfers as do other executive transfer consulting firms. It helps the transferred employee and spouse find a new house and, by interviewing them extensively to find their needs, usually succeeds in accomplishing this in one or two weekends.

The firm then arranges the moving of household goods, insurance and other necessary details.

Nearly all the work of Bell's firm is with intracompany transfers. However, he said that recently "we have been called in more frequently by companies to help people hired away from other companies to make moves."

The ETC questionnaire went to persons earning anywhere from $15,000 to over $50,000 a year. More than 97 percent of the respondents were married. And some 70 percent had two or more children. Around 76 percent had been with the same firm five years or longer.

Burglar Takes All But Sink In Home

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — A weekend burglar at the new home of John Sizemore took everything but the kitchen sink. He tried to take that.

Police reported that kitchen cabinets, light fixtures, and a dishwasher were pulled out of the home. Although pipes to the sink had been disconnected and the hot water was turned off, the sink itself remained.

With about $4,400 in goods missing out of his new place, Sizemore has postponed moving.

Man Faces Charge Of Stealing Ship

SAN DIEGO (AP) -Authorities say a 31-year-old man was jailed after he allegedly stole a $250,000 research ship while drunk, took it for an 11-hour joyride and ran it aground off San Diego's Mission Beach.

James A. Miller was charged with grand theft and booked into county jail Monday in lieu of $1,000 bond, Harbor Police said. The 52-ton Sea Otter, owned by Charles Otterman, president of U.S. Oceanography Inc. of San Diego, received minor damage. Otterman said Miller had worked for the oceanographic research firm for about six weeks before being fired three months ago.

Science Group Lauds City Lake Study

To take a twig, stick it into a wall of dirt and be able to say "That's 5,000 years ago" is something special.

That is one reason the Lubbock Lake Site is so important to the study of man on the earth, a representative of the National Scienc Foundation said in Lubbock Tuesday after touching layers of time back 15,000 years.

Lubbock Lake Site research is so important and the reputation of its director, Dr. Eileen Johnson, is so excellent, Mary Greene noted, that renewal of foundation grant monies has been no problem so far.

The foundation's associate director of programs for anthropology made her first official visit and reported satisfaction with the site, its research progress and its potential.

More than $300,000 of the funding to investigate the tracks of man left in Lubbock's layer cake of history has come from the foundation.

The overall importance of the early man site — "one of the major archaeology sites in the country" with a "tremendous potential for increasing man's knowledge of the past" — is enhanced by significant discoveries along the way.

Finds such as the recent discovery of a Plainview tool of 100,000 years ago are only the frosting on the cake, the easy way to justify expenditures.

Requests for more than 15 times the $6 million taxpayer dollars alloted to the foundation by Congress are received annually.

Competition is fierce, Mrs. Green added, noting that only one in five proposals can be funded with monies available.

Archaeological excavations are necessary, she noted, to extract the man element in history.

Man, she emphasized, cannot be manipulated in the laboratory to affect change. He responds to change in environment over a period of time, as drought and deluge cause change around him.

At the Lubbock site, changes in climate and culture show in the stratified walls; climatic changes may be observed in earth texture and tone; cultural changes are recognizable in tools and implements.

The evidence of mankind — from the mammoth hunter of 15,000 years ago to the buffalo hunter of a century past to today's tosser of tin cans — is found in sequence at the site. This stratigraphy plus the site' size amazed Mrs. Greene, an anthropologist with her own background in field research.

Thirty of the site's 80 acres are fenced, with only portion under investigation by project workers.

"The project is highly regarded by its peers," Mrs. Greene said, adding that other scientists were confident that Dr. Johnson "can get the job done."

Experts in the field are used by the foundation as a sounding board for fund proposals. Decisions are based on experts' recommendations.

Three full scale evaluations of the site have been made. Summer research will end Aug. 13, and Saturday will be the last day of tours for the public.

New York Times Will Appeal Decision

TRENTON, N.J. (UPI) — The New York Times intends to appeal a New Jersey Supreme Court decision upholding a lower court order sending a reporter to prison for refusing to hand over his notes in the case of a doctor charged with murder.

The state's high court ruled, 5-1, Tuesday against reporter Myron Farber and the Times. Only Justice Morris Pashman dissented from the majority.

But Farber was allowed to remain free pending an appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court. The state Supreme Court gave Farber and the Times until noon Friday to file the appeal.

Farber's notes are wanted by the defense in the trial of 51-year-old Dr. Mario Jascalevich of Englewood Cliffs, charged with killing five patients at Riverdell Hospital in Oradell, N.J., between 1965 and 1966 with lethal injections of curare, a muscle relaxant.

Farber's investigative stories on the mysterious deaths of 13 patients at the hospital led to Jascalevich's indictment.

New York Times Managing Editor Seymour Topping said the paper would appeal the ruling by Friday.

"We are now making efforts to reach one of the (U.S. Supreme Court) justices," he said.

"We are disappointed by the decision. We feel the sentences (against Farber) should be stayed until we have an opportunity to argue the merits of the case in New Jersey and U.S. Supreme Court," he added.

Soon after Tuesday's ruling, chief defense attorney Raymond Brown asked the trial judge, William Arnold, to suspend the trial until the U.S. Supreme Court decides whether to act on the case.

"The defense sits here virtually helpless," Brown said.

But Arnold denied the motion and ordered Brown to begin his cross-examination of Dr. Michael Baden, the New York City medical examiner.

Brown then took Arnold's decision to Pashman, but he, too, turned down the motion to suspend the trial.

Farber had spent seven hours in jail Monday before he was allowed out by Pashman, pending Tuesday's ruling.

Earlier Monday, Bergen County Court Judge Theodore Trautwein ordered Farber held in jail until he turned over his notes. He also was sentenced to six months in jail to be served after he complied with the court order.

A three-judge appellate panel in Newark, however, unanimously blocked the criminal penalties of six months in jail and a $1,000 fine against Farber and a $100,000 fine against the Times.

The panel refused to stay the civil penalties Trautwein handed out, which forces the reporter to stay in prison until he agrees to submit his material, and which fines the Times $5,000 for each day the notes are not turned over to the judge. Pashman, however, did stay those penalties.

Man's Suit To Get Bone Marrow Fails

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The cousin of a dying man whose diseased bone marrow will not produce blood cells cannot be required to submit to a transplant, a judge ruled today.

"This would defeat the sanctity of the individual," Allegheny County Judge John P. Flaherty said from the bench.

"It would require forcible submission to the medical procedure. Forcible extraction of bodily tissues causes revulsion to the judicial mind," he added.

Robert McFall, 39, a former asbestos worker, filed suit to compel his cousin, David Shimp, 43, a crane operator, to donate the marrow if further tests reaffirm the two men are biologically compatible.

Flaherty said he had no other option in the ruling under Pennsylvania law.

Shimp reportedly underwent one test that indicated compatibility, but reneged on a commitment for further tests.

Doctors have failed to find a suitable donor among McFall's other relatives or the numerous people who responded to local news accounts of his plight.

"It's rare for a complete recovery if no transplant or chemical treatment is performed," Dr. Louis Petragallo told Flaherty during oral aguments Tuesday. "But there is somechance of indefinite survival."

A transplant would improve McFall's chances of surviving to 40 percent to 60 percent, Pietragallo said. McFall stands only a 25 percent chance of living a year without the healthy narrow, he said, adding that chemical treatment is available, but not preferred.

"The law of Pennsylvania says there is no legal duty to provide a transplant even if he (the donor) is assuming no risk" Shimp's attorney, John Studeny, argued. "There could be risks and there definitely are inconveniences."

McFall's attorney urged Flaherty to follow English law, which permits court-ordered transplants, and introduced evidence to show that the risks to Shimp are not great.

"The minor procedure will, at most, result in minor and temporary discomfort," attorney John Murtagh Jr. said in a brief. "It won't deprive the donor of anything other than his time."

Pietragallo said the transplant procedure involves 100 to 150 bone punctures in the pelvis, made by a special curved needle.

McFall's disease was diagnosed in June when he was hospitalized with a nosebleed. Doctors believe he developed the ailment because of exposure to asbestos in his work as an insulation installer.

Police Seek Tulsa Man

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A federal warrant has been issued for a Tulsa man wanted for questioning in the slayings of six workers at the Sirloin Stockade last week, the FBI says.

Police reluctantly confirmed that Dennis Edward Loane, 37, was being considered a possible suspect in their investigation of the July 16 murders.

"We had some information we had no intention of releasing," said police spokesman Sgt. Tom Mundy. "Obviously, there was a leak somewhere."

Loane was convicted about two years ago in a restaurant robbery in Muskogee and was a suspect in 15 other robberies, police said.

Oliver Revell, head of the Oklahoma FBI office, said Tuesday that Loane is wanted on a federal warrant of interstate flight to avoid prosecution.

Woman's Two Jobs Cause Of Probe

ALESSANDRIA, Italy (UPI) — If anyone wonders why the Italian mails are so slow or why the pension system is so cumbersome, the case of Anna Serra may provide a partial answer.

Judges told Miss Serra Tuesday they were investigating possible fraud charges against her after learning she worked for a year as a postal clerk in Soleto — and at the same time as a social security worker in Ivrea, 71 miles away.

Investigators said Miss Serra, 34, won almost simultaneous tests for the two jobs and took sick leaves from one to work in the other.

Miss Serra explained she is hesitant by nature and never could make up her mind which of the two jobs she wanted.

Last 'Sunset Shows' Scheduled In City

The final presentations of the Showwagon "Sunset Shows," sponsored by the parks and recreation department, will be held Monday and Aug. 4 in Wagner Park.

Monday, the Sweet Adelines and Singing Plainsmen will perform at 8 p.m. Folk music will be provided by Graham Warrick and friends.

On Aug. 4, a collection of folk music will be presented by Graham Warrick, Marianna Gibson and a variety of other performers at 7:30 p.m.

Admission is free.

Lubbock Man Charged In Store Heist

Charges of aggravated robbery were filed Tuesday against Hershel R. Irwin, 18, in connection with the midnight robbery of a Lubbock supermarket in which more than $300 was taken.

Irwin was arrested in the driveway of his home at 2132 70th St. about 12:30 a.m. Tuesday. Police had chased him several blocks after first recognizing his car as the possbie getaway vehicle and then observing the driver commit several traffic violations.

The Criminal District Attorney's Office recommended bond be set at $5,000 and Irwin was placed in Lubbock County Jail.

Diane Backner, a checker at Furr's Supermarket at 50th Street and Boston Avenue, said she was checking her cash when a ski-masked bandit walked in.

"Be quiet. This is a holdup," was all the man was able to say before the woman screamed and ran. The next thing she heard was glass breaking as the robber pushed a cart through the locked doors in order to get away.

Shortly after hearing a radio description of the robber and his car, police Lt. Bobby Duncan and Sgt. Bobby Barker spotted a likely suspect at 66th Street and University Avenue and watched as the car almost collided with another vehicle as it headed south. The chase then began with the suspect's car running a stop sign and a red light.

The officers caught up with the driver in front of what turned out to be his home. Police reported they recovered $310. A .22-caliber pistol also was found in the car. Investigators later recovered a ski mask from a dumpster near the robbery scene.

Yellow Diamond Found In China

HONG KONG (AP) — A pale yellow diamond weighing 158.786 carats has been discovered in China by a member of a commune in Shantung province, Hong Kong's two leading Communist newspapers report.

A dispatch from Peking said Wei Tsen-fang found the stone last Dec. 21 as she was digging in a field. She was rewarded with the equivalent of about $1,800. The diamond was named Chang Lin after he work group, and the group was given a 24 horsepower tractor, the report said.

Firm To Contest Ruling By FTC

WASHINGTON (AP) — A company that furnishes information on consumers to businesses says it "will vigorously contest" a Federal Trade Commission order that it divest itself of two credit bureau firms.

The commission ruled that the 1970 and 1971 acquisitions by the Atlanta-based Equifax, Inc., violated antitrust law because they could reduce competition in several areas of the country.

A MOVING EXPERIENCE — Pearl Lomax told of the horror stories she heard about the South when she was a youngster in Detroit. But when she moved to Atlanta in 1960, she found the stories told by blacks who moved north not exactly true. (AP Laserphoto)

Blacks Reverse Migration Toward South

By BRENDA MOONEY

ATLANTA (AP) — Pearl Cleage Lomax grew up in Detroit hearing horror stories from her grandparents about the lynchings and Jim Crow laws they and other blacks had escaped by leaving the South.

But when she moved with her husband to this Southern city in 1969, she found a different situation.

"I thought it was going to be very rigid, closed and pretty dangerous as well. When I got here, I found that fortunately was not true," she said.

In fact, Mrs. Lomax said, she has not found "that problems of race are more intense here than in Detroit or any other Northern city."

A newspaper columnist and the wife of a candidate for the Fulton County Commission, Mrs. Lomax is one of many affluent blacks who have moved to the South after living in cities in the North.

According to the U.S. Census Bureau, about 288,000 blacks moved away from the South between 1970 and 1975. During the same time, about 302,000 blacks moved to the South, census figures show.

The blacks reversing the migratory trend begun after the Civil War tend to be professionals or white-collar workers, said James Hefner, chairman of the economics department at Morehouse College.

"Originally the South was labor-intensive, but it's become quite capital-intensive, meaning an increasing demand for white-collar workers. There's an influx of white-collar blacks back to the South because of the changeover," Hefner said.

SNAKE EVICTED

WICHITA, Kan. (UPI) — A 4-foot snake is not what a person likes to wake up with. Police, called to the home of an unidentified woman recently to remove the reptile, said they discovered a "big and brown" snake hiding in a pair of shoes in the the woman's bedroom closet.

The economist said there are fewer opportunities for blue-collar blacks, but even workers are finding Southern cities "more palatable as far as personal relationships go."

Tony Axam, a black Atlanta attorney, was born here and received his law degree at Duke University in Durham, N.C. But when he finished school, Axam moved to Dearborn, Mich., to work for the Ford Motor Co.

Now, he's back in Atlanta.

"There's everything you could want in law in Detroit. It's a real bellwether city for law. But it isn't good to raise a family there. My roots are much stronger here in Atlanta," said Axam, the father of three children.

In large Northern industrial cities, Axam said, "there are two camps — white folks living in the suburbs and black folks living in the city. When I go to a shopping center in Detroit, women see me and lock the doors of their cars.

"But in Atlanta, you can talk to each other. It's clear that people are different," he said, "and life is just much slower here."

Jan Douglas once was a fund-raiser for a black research institute and lived in New York, New Jersey, and Ohio before moving to the South.

"I came to Atlanta for a meeting one summer and just stayed," said Mrs. Douglas, who now is the director of the city's Community Relations Commission.

"Atlanta's just a special town to blacks. There's still a sense of humanity in the black community. They look people in the eye, they stop if someone fals.

"Secondly, there is a strong potential for black development. It's not a city that people have abandoned," Mrs. Douglas said.

Other Southern cities seem to draw similar reactions.

"Living in the South is tremendous as far as space goes, as compared with the concrete cramp in Chicago. Down here you can also have a car. You needone, in fact. Up there, it'll cost you $5 just to park," said Jim Black, who moved six years ago to Charlotte, N.C.

Black, who works as a photographer and for a radio station, said it was difficult for a man of his race to get a job in Chicago.

"I'm not a college graduate and up there they seemed to be more degree conscious," said Black, who ran second on a four-man ticket for the Democratic nomination for mayor of Charlotte last year.

Jim Harris, a black college professor from Cincinnati, often visited his grandparents in Birmingham, Ala., during summer holidays. Now he and his family live in the Alabama city.

"There's been a tremendous change here, a remarkable change in attitudes. I feel t 1/4e difference even in driving through small towns. A white man at a gas station will say, 'Thank you.' It wouldn't have happened 20 years ago," Harris said.

Exhibition Helps Sell Giant Fans

NEW YORK (UPI) — When it comes to selling a piece of machinery that weighs up to 100 tons and is exceptionally bulky, a salesman may be up a tree.

How do you go about demonstrating the device? You can use motion pictures or even closed circuit TV to show the monster in operation, but that cuts things down in scale more than most engineers who are making the buying decisions find satisfactory.

Westinghouse Electric Corp.'s Sturtevant division at Hyde Park, Mass., has such a problem.

Sturtevant, founded way back in 1876, is the United States' top maker of giant power fans used by the electric utility industry. Some of these fans are 15 feet in diameter and have to move up to two million cubic feet of air a minute.

Westinghouse is the only company using all American components and design to make these fans, and has about half the market of $50 million to $60 million a year.

Babcock & Wilcox and Combustion Engineering also make such fans, but utilize foreign technology to some extent, according to Westinghouse.

Alan H. Shadgatt, marketing manager of Westinghouse Sturtevant, said the Japanese are eager to get a part of this market and so are European companies.

The big fans are used primarily to push combustion air flow into coal boilers, but have some other industrial uses.

Shadgett said the fans sell on technology, not price, and the sales problem is to demonstrate the technology most effectively in action.

In order to do this, Shadgett has had built a unique portable multi-medium display device called Sturtevant Standard that looks like a giant old-fashioned panorama exhibition or even like a miniature planetarium. It has been transported to 10 cities for demonstrations that avert the need to fly prospective customers to Hyde Park.

Demonstrations so far have been staged in Birmingham, Atlanta, Hartford, Chicago, Detroit, Pittsburgh, Kansas City, New York, Newark and Boston and more than 750 public utility executives have seen it in action.

Sturtevant works like nothing quite so much as theater-in-the-round, Shadgett said. It takes a dozen artists, writers, and editors to put together the program.

"Presenting it requires two computers, 30 projectors, 3,000 slides, an ambitious sound track and four technicians. Boss of the show while it is being presented is Chief Technician Jeff Whitney from Parkersburg, W.Va. He says the two computers do most of the work though because they are programmed to give 20 commands a minute to the projectors and audio devices.

"The only thing that can interfere with the operation is for a slide projector bulb to blow out," Whitney said. "That has happened a couple of times and it throws the computers off.

As many as 24 viewers in the center of the circular theater can watch the show. Although they sit in swivel chairs, they don't have to turn to watch the show. It revolves around the spectators. The program includes animation sequences, stills and special techniques to give illusions of motion.

Shadgett said a power fan may look like a "big dumb gadget" but if one fails it can cost a utility $150,000 a day.

Fire Guts Building

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A waterfront building, rooted in San Francisco's history so firmly that it withstood the 1906 earthquake, sits gutted by fire today as investigators try to determine the cause of the blaze.

Six firemen were injured in a five-alarm fire that began in the three-story, block-long building about 3 a.m. Sunday.

Fire Chief Andrew Casper said the fire was believed to have started in the basement of Dori's 21 Club bar, but the cause was unknown. Destroyed in the blaze were Riordan's Tavern, an old waterfront saloon, and Betty's Hof Brau restaurant.

Casper estimated damages at $250,000.

The mansard-roofed frame and brick structure with its nautical wrought iron trim was built in 1899 by an immigrant French businessman to imitate structures in his native Paris.

The building is located on The Embarcadero at the foot of Mission Street.

California Teacher Feels Effects Of Tax Revolt

By RICHARD H. GROWALD

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — On the teacher's wall is a portrait done on a typewriter and signed by the subject, Richard M. Nixon.

On the tax assessor's wall, by his desk and across the room from the eight-foot bull whip — "That's for the staff, not for the taxpayers," the assessor said, smiling — is a pencil portrait of the late FBI director, J. Edgar Hoover.

Possibly because San Diego is a fat city, bathed in eternal sunshine and an economy as pleasant, its voters ballot conservative and the pictures on the walls show more the political rule than the exception in America's southwestern corner.

But the two conservative individuals, the teacher who is a Navy Reserve commander and the assessor who for a generation was an FBI agent, are troubled by Proposition 13, the beast or the beauty that has flashed into the state whose residents — and others — regard as America's utopia.

For the first time this decade teacher Bill Chisum is not earning an 11th and 12th months paycheck; summer school is cancelled due to a shortage in property tax money dictated by Proposition 13, a referendum landslided into being by California voters last month.

For the first time in his decade in office, assessor E.C. "Chuck" Williams failed to get a majority of votes and is in a runoff campaign to hold his county office.

Said the teacher Chisum: "Hmmmmm." Said Assessor Williams: "Wow."

Chisum, 41, is wearing shorts and a T-shirt, on his knees on the wall-to-wall carpeting inside the front door of his stucco and wooden house in the San Carlos neighborhood, where this boom town has spread greenery and one-story homes on arid hillsides east of the costlier, crowded coast. The teacher is fixing a bookcase.

"Having no summer school to teach does give me free time. I'm catching up on some house repairs," he said. His English-born wife, Isobel, a school secretary also idled by this first Proposition 13 summer, smiled and said, "And Bill's rocked the garden. This is the coast and we're still pulling out the rocks."

Chisum rose and stepped across the carpet into his easy chair. Between the chair and the fireplace stood a heat-stretched soft drink bottle, an El Greco 7-Up bottle, a decoration as comfortable in middle class San Diego as the Frank G. Slaughter and Alistair McLean paperbacks on the coffee table in front of the sofa.

"We don't know what's going to happen in September" when school is kept but within the spending restrictions dictated by Proposition 13. "I had 33 students in my sixth grade class this past year. That's too many. I'd say 25 is the right number so a teacher can give attention to each student.

"What will Proposition 13 do to class size," he said. His hands opened. His palms showed, the who-knows symbol.

Chisum showed small fret about what Proposition 13 has done to him. A San Diego teacher is paid 10 months of the year; no summer school means no income for Chisum and his wife between June 5 and Sept. 30.

A spring storm — "It never rains in Southern California" is only a song — snapped 500 shingles from the Chisum roof. "To fix it now, we'll get a loan or delay it," Chisum said.

His wife, seated on a dining table chair and gazing over a sofa back at her husband, said, "We'll be cutting a few corners without the summer school pay. For meals, a little more of Hamburger Helper. Going to fewer plays around town, to fewer Padre baseball games."

Chisum said it would give him time to take his wife and his two sons, Bill Jr., 14, and Steve, 11, to visit his mother in San Francisco. "The cuts will be minor this summer," Chisum said. But the teacher was worried.

"I voted against Proposition 13. I was concerned about its effect on the essentials of fire, police and educational services. Knock on wood." He did, using a table top. "I can't see much danger of fire and police protection going down.

"But education...if education breaks down, we've got problems. Capital P. the lack of any summer school has some woe. Some children really need it for catching up. I can tell you that a 12-year-old's handwriting does not improve by a summer of idleness."

Chisum's hands clasped. "But what's going to happen in September? What will Proposition 13 do to schools?

"Education is the only place where it's relatively easy to cut down on expense. Easy but wise? Well, people are speaking against taxes, not against education.

"I'm for lower taxes, of course, but who's for lower education?"

Chisum rose. It gave him a sense of reassurance to touch on something of pride. He smiled at son Bill, an Eagle Scout at the unusually early age of 14. He lifted from the wall the signed portrait of former President Nixon.

On the back of the frame was fixed a White House letter from the Presidential deputy assistant who had, in pre-Watergate days, arranged the signing. The signature at letter's bottom was that of Dwight Chapin, one of the President's men who talked to investigators.

Chisum explained. His wife's brother is married to a woman whose sister is Chapin's wife. The teacher carefully put the Nixon portrait back on the wall. Nixon is shown smiling.

The teacher was more relaxed. "Well, one thing about Proposition 13 and no summer school. Parents are telling me, 'Hey, we got to babysit our kids this summer.'"

In the sunshine at his door the teacher's smile faded. "Right now Proposition 13 is a great gift horse for Californians. Less property taxes.

"But what's going to happen to the schools?"

In a smaller, leaner San Diego the Franklin D. Roosevelt administration built, as part of its Depression public works program, the county building. It sits facing the Pacific. Two white tuna boats richly moor in front. Over the front door of the building where officials struggle to live inside Proposition 13's tax cuts is implanted the words, "The noblest motive is the public good."

In his first floor office, under the portrait of Hoover and the hanging ship, county Tax Assessor Williams looks up from his struggle and nods toward a wall sign.

It reads, "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I shall fear no evil; for I am the meanest SOB in the valley."

Chuck Williams laughs.

"The tax assessor does not set the rate of tax. We just do a professional, technical job of assessing values. But we are blamed for everything," he said.

The blame showed last month.

For the first time since he took office in 1965 — he was called by backers from the FBI to succeed an assessor who committed suicide for woes for which seven aides departed, one to jail — Williams got less than a majority of votes. He won 35 percent of the balloting and faces a run-off in November.

The voters had just received higher tax assessments before the vote. "But the new, lower, post-Prop 13 assessments will be in the voters' hands by August.

"My hat by then will have changed from black to at least partly white," Williams said.

The election is not his only problem. County officials have proposed, first, firing 91 of his 96 appraisers and, later, at least chopping his 293 employees by 38.

"Departmental morale is low. I know that 46 or 47 of the appraisers are looking for jobs. But we're working all out," he said. An aide hurried in with a four-inch-high fresh stack of computer readouts.

"There are 532,000 pieces of assessible property in this county. Property tax pays some 27 percent of county costs. Prop 13 cut the tax rate from 2½ to 1 per cent.

"That means cutting back taxable value to the county from $4.5 billion to as much as $7 billion. A homeowner who paid $1,500 property tax on a $67,000 house last year is now going to have a bill of only $600.

"Of course, there are unusual cases. Under Prop 13 the tax assessment is based on its 1975 value plus an inflation factor. But if the property is sold, the assessment is based on the new sale price.

"So we have a case of two houses, built in 1973 next door to each other and valued at $18,000 each. One house sold in February for $90,000 so it has to be taxed, under Prop 13, at that price. While the other twin house, unsold, is taxed at a value of $18,000."

"The state government has this $5 billion surplus and is planning to use it to make up this year some of that the counties are losing under Prop 13's lower rates. That's fine for 1978.

"But what about 1979?"

He waved a hand at the map. There are 2,300 tax rate areas in this county. City tax areas. Tax areas for school districts, fire districts, irrigation districts, library districts and even a couple of cemetery districts.

In San Diego local officials are moving to start residents paying fees for garbage collection. Beach and park prices are going up. Burial in civic cemeteries will cost more.

"But you know," said Williams, "do you know how many questions the county supervisors have asked me about their likely tax base for the county will be next year? The answer is zero. They haven't even asked yet about what to expect next year."

Williams smiled. He rose and walked to a window and shut it. The summer breeze from the harbor was too strong, ruffling the computer read-outs.

"And do you know what? The county officials are going ahead with air conditioning this building. At a cost of maybe $7 million.

"Spending $7 million on air conditioning in San Diego after Proposition 13?"

The tax assessor raised his eyes toward heaven.

"For myself, what with the people realizing I only assess value and don't set tax rates and with their getting lower tax notices, I think that come November my hat will be all white."

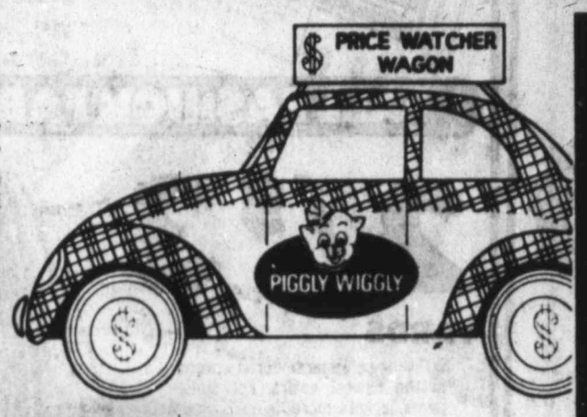

CLOTHESPIN DISPUTE

WASHINGTON (AP) — A government trade agency has ruled that China is disrupting U.S. industries with its exports of wood clothespins. The action was the first under a law penalizing Communist countries if they hurt American companies by expanding their sales too rapidly.

Aide Works On Carter's New Image

By JAMES GERSTANZANG

WASHINGTON (AP) — They have a new nickname these days for the spacious office Richard M. Nixon used as a hideaway in the Old Executive Office Building next door to the White House.

"Welcome to Television City," said a White House staff member to a visitor there.

It's now home to Gerald Rafshoon, the Atlanta advertising executive brought into the White House this month to help repair President Carter's sagging public image.

So, as Rafshoon, whose curly hair gives him the look of a man who gets going each morning by plugging himself into an electric socket, gets energized, look for signs of new efforts to present Carter as a man in control of the federal government.

There will be a focus on his work to reform the Civil Service, his efforts to cut the federal budget, tackle inflation and get a handle on East-West relations.

His impression does not seem to be shared by the public, but Rafshoon thinks Carter has done a good job and says the president's work in these areas illustrates his successes.

The latest Associated Press-NBC poll, taken in late June, found that 27 percent of those questioned thought Carter was doing an excellent or good job; 70 percent rated his job performance fair or poor, and 3 percent had no opinion.

"It's a bum rap, this perception that he's not competent, not in control," Rafshoon said of Carter. "I've known him 13 years and competence is his long suit."

The subject of polls is clearly a sore one at the White House these days. Carter, whenever asked, says he pays them no heed.

Rafshoon? Well, Rafshoon says "everyone debates why" the president's popularity has fallen. He says the fall is the result of high expectations and "the tough decisions" Carter has made on energy, inflation, and the Panama Canal, among others.

"I don't expect the polls to show a sharp upward turn" in the near future, he said.

Rafshoon is reluctant to tip his hand, to unveil any of the shows he's got planned to demonstrate Carter's "long suit" of competence.

There have been a few changes, however, around the White House:

—One recent Friday, when reporters and photographers trooped into the Cabinet Room to cover the opening of a Carter meeting with a group of editors from outside Washington, piles of paper were displayed near the president, who said they represented forms that small business operators no longer had to fill out following Carter-supported reforms.

—The president held a news conference at 8 p.m. last Thursday, his first prime-time, televised evening news conference since taking office. White House press secretary Jody Powell said the timing — an hour when the largest nationwide television audience would be available — was chosen because it was deemed "worthwhile to let the American public" listen to the exchange of questions and answers.

—There's even a new official portrait of the president. Rafshoon said he looked at one of three possible portraits before a final decision was made. "I didn't like the first one," he said of the picture taken 18 months ago. It showed a big grin on the president's face and the new portrait, described by a White House staff member as "more presidential," shows a more serious expression.

Carter's closest assistants have complained for some time that the president's message is not being heard unless he presents it himself. So, he favors regional news conferences and the so-called town meetings he has held with some success in his travels.

"I'd like to find ways of getting through this filter that encompasses the beltway," (the interstate highway that circles Washington and its suburbs) Rafshoon said. "They need to understand him better, to know him better."

For instance, he said, unemployment has continued to sink since Carter took office, "yet people don't realize he's had an impact."

"There are things that need to be repeated over and over, not just for the president's popularity, but for the people's own confidence in the goverment," he said.

Rafshoon attends a wide range of meetings with the president.

It was not considered unusual that when Carter spent 32 minutes chatting with Powell and Hamilton Jordan, the all-but-titled White House chief of staff, in his limousine in Bonn outside of the U.S. ambassador's residence, there was the curly-headed Rafshoon in the midst of the discussion.

"We were talking about where to go to dinner," Rafshoon said later.

State Department Studying Bolivia

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department says that U.S. relations with Bolivia are under review following the country's abortive attempt to return to democratic rule. Department spokesman Hedding Carter said relations with Boliva haven't been suspended but the administration is seeking "clarification" of the new regime's intentions.

In July 9 presidential elections, Gen. Juan Pereda Asbun led the vote count, but the National Electoral Court, citing allegations of fraud, decided to scrap the results and hold new elections. However, Pereda's supporters staged an uprising that led to his taking power after the resignation of seven-year President Hugo Banzer.

Letter Writing Brings Results

By SHARI LEWIS

A few weeks ago I wrote about how you can write letters that will make people do things that you want done (for example, to get the city to put a bike path or a playground in your community). Lots of people thought the letter writing was a very good idea, and they sent excellent suggestions on how to make your letters have real power. Let me share these really good ideas with you.

—Make your letters personal. Tell how the problem is affecting you and your friends.

—Tell about the problem in the opening paragraph, and ask the person you're writing to to write back and tell you how he or she feels about this problem. (That makes it harder to ignore you!)

—Address your letter to the person in charge. Then, even though the letter may be passed down to a member of the staff to answer, it will be treated with more respect, because it comes from the boss! This is true whether you're writing to the principal of your school, the mayor of your city or the head of your local television station. (Yes, if you want a program to be on the air, you can make wonderful things happen by writing to your local television station.)

—Sign your letter with your name, and put your return address on the letter itself, because envelopes are often thrown away.

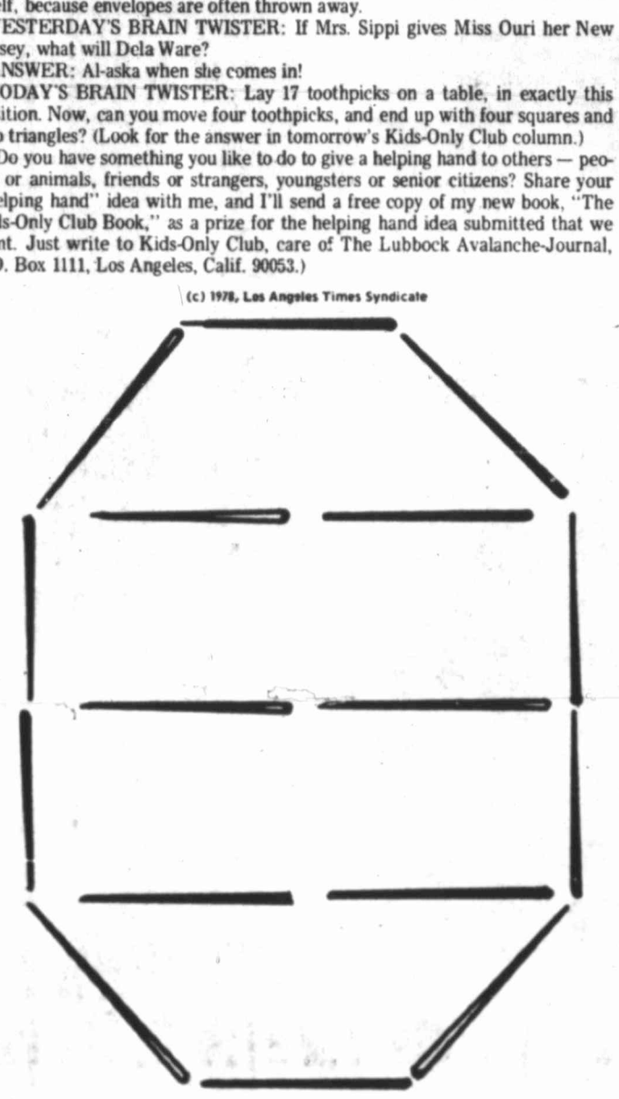

YESTERDAY'S BRAIN TWISTER: If Mrs. Sippi gives Miss Ouri her New Jersey, what will Dela Ware?

ANSWER: Al-aska when she comes in!

TODAY'S BRAIN TWISTER: Lay 17 toothpicks on a table, in exactly this position. Now, can you move four toothpicks, and end up with four squares and two triangles? (Look for the answer in tomorrow's Kids-Only Club column.)

(Do you have something you like to do to give a helping hand to others — people or animals, friends or strangers, youngsters or senior citizens? Share your "helping hand" idea with me, and I'll send a free copy of my new book, "The Kids-Only Club Book," as a prize for the helping hand idea submitted that we print. Just write to Kids-Only Club, care of The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, P.O. Box 1111, Los Angeles, Calif. 90053.)

NASA Sets Venus Spacecraft Launch

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A spacecraft is set to be launched from Cape Canaveral Aug. 7 to fire four instrumented probes into the thick, hot atmosphere of the planet Venus.

The craft is the second to be sent to Venus this year. Pioneer Venus 1 was launched May 20 and is now 15.6 million miles from Earth, due to swing into orbit around the cloud-shrouded planet Dec. 4.

Space agency officials said Monday the new craft, Pioneer Venus 2, is due to arrive five days later after ejecting the four probes. Each will dive into the Venusian atmosphere at more than 26,000 mph, to radio back top-to-bottom atmospheric measurements before crashing.

The two-shot mission represents the most extensive effort yet to examine the mysterious blanket of gases that surrounds Venus and give scientists some clues to the planet's evolution.

The Soviet Union also is expected to launch a Venus-bound spacecraft next month. American officials believe the Russian craft will attempt to land on Venus and expand surface studies carried out by earlier Soviet robots.

The four probes aboard Pioneer Venus 2 are programmed to spring away from the mother craft about 8 million miles from Venus. They will enter Venus' atmosphere at points up to 6,000 miles apart.

One of the probes is larger than the other three and has eight sapphire windows and one quarter-sized window shaped by diamond cutters in the Netherlands from a 205-carat industrial grade rough diamond.

The diamond window, weighing 13.5 carats, will be used by an infrared radiation sensor to measure the vertical distribution of radiation in that wave length and also detect cloud layers and water vapor. Diamond is the only material transparent to infrared light and still able to withstand the heat and pressure of the Venusian atmosphere.

The large probe also is equipped to measure the gaseous composition of Venus' atmosphere. Instruments aboard all four probes will measure the top-to-bottom pressures and temperatures of the atmosphere.

Postal Employees Back At Work

By The Associated Press

Postal Service officials said today that a walkout by postal workers at the New York Bulk and Foreign Mail Center in Jersey City was "virtually over" with nearly 80 percent of the employees reporting to work.

But officials declined to predict that operations would return to normal in the face of a New York regional union vote scheduled for Monday to decide whether to join wildcat strikers in New Jersey and California.

More than 120 persons have been fired by the Postal Service for their part in the illegal walkouts.

Several locals in other cities have indicated they might join a New York-initiated walkout.

Mail delays caused by the wildcat strike which began Friday have reached 2½ days, Postal Service spokesman Bob Martell said.

John Conti, spokesman for the Postal Service in New York, said the Jersey City walkout "is over for all intents and purposes." Conti could not provide exact attendance figures, but 1,200 to 1,600 employees normally work the morning shift.

No pickets were at the facility Tuesday because of a temporary restraining order by a federal judge.

In Richmond, Calif., meanwhile, wildcatting postal workers demanded their jobs back without retribution as a condition to end a walkout entering its fifth day today at the San Francisco Bulk Mail Center.

"They will not go back to work until amnesty has been granted for all striking employees," said fired mail handler Chuck Toombs, who said about 50 strikers unanimously adopted the position at a meeting Tuesday night.

A nationwide ratification vote on the tentative agreement reached Friday is not expected before mid-August.

The bulk mail centers in Jersey City and Richmond are among 21 around the country that handle large items of mail, small packages and sacks of second- and third-class mail. Movement of first-class mail is not affected by either walkout.

A nationwide ratification vote on the tentative postal contract is not expected until the middle of August. The agreement, reached early Friday in time to avert a nationwide strike, covers 554,000 workers in four unions across the country and provides an immediate 10 percent pay increase over three years, cost-of-living raises and a no-layoff guarantee.

In Baltimore, the local union executive board voted unanimously Tuesday to recommend rejection of the contract and to urge members to set up informational picketing seeking amnesty for the fired workers.

In Minneapolis, a straw vote Tuesday by the National Association of Letter Carriers branch unanimously rejected the proposed contract.

In St. Paul, Minn., and Portland, Ore., postal workers had voted informally to reject the proposed contract and support any nationwide strike.

Williston Surrenders Children

TEXARKANA (UPI) — A man whose three youngest children were found locked in a chicken-wire cage has given up all his children — including two unborn — to a special care home in Oklahoma where he spent part of his own youth.

In an emergency hearing two days prior to a scheduled custody hearing, James J. Williston, 57, of Hooks surrendered the three children found June 29 caked with their own filth in an outdoor cage. He also voluntarily gave up custody of four older children and relinquished all claim to two unborn children now being carried by his legal and common-law wives.

Two of the children found in the cage were 2 years old and the third was 3. The other four children by Williston's two wives ranged in age up to 12 years old.

Bowie County welfare officials said immediately after the hearing te children were taken to the Goodland Presbyterian Family Services center in Hugo, Okla.

Two weeks ago Williston appeared before a county grand jury investigating charges of child neglect. The grand jury, however, took no action in the case but indicated it would reconvene in September to decide if charges were warranted.

Assistant District Attorney Rick Rogers said Williston spent some time in Goodland as a youth. He said Wiliston cooperated with the state Human Resources Department in working out the agreement.

"It's something everyone feels is in the best interest of the children," Rogers said. "All concerned felt it would be better for the youngsters by removing them from that environment."

District Judge Bun Hutchinson issued the order officially removing the children from Williston and also enjoined him from future interference in their custody.

Williston maintained he kept the children in the cage while he, his wives and older children worked the farm.

"We put the babies in the pen to keep them from going on the road," he said at the time the children were taken away from him.

The children had been in foster homes since the welfare office took them into custody. Officials said the custody hearing was advanced by two days because welfare officials already had made arrangements to move the children to the Oklahoma center.

Agnes Batters Hong Kong

HONG KONG (UPI) — Tropical storm Agnes battered Hong Kong with wind gusts of more than 90 miles an hour today and headed on a course that would take it almost directly into the nearby gambling mecca of Macao.

The Royal Observatory said the season's first tropical disturbance to affect Hong Kong would sideswipe the British crown colony tonight and move inland 30 miles to the south, or about 10 miles from Macao.

The storm unleashed heavy rain squalls across Hong Kong during the daylight hours, closing most offices, all schools and disrupting flights from Kaitak International Airport, where wind gusts of more than 70 miles an hour were recorded.

A number of incoming international flights, including two from the United States, were diverted to Taiwan and the the Philippines. Others were canceled.

There were no reports of any serious injuries caused by the storm, but police said at least four persons ware hurt by falling trees or other objects.

The Royal Observatory's latest bulletin placed Agnes about 45 miles south-southeast of Hong Kong and moving west-northwest at about seven miles an hour.

International earth satellite service from the colony was shut down during the afternoon, but cable and telephone transmissions were not drastically affected.

Macao, a Portuguese enclave on the southern tip of China, has a population of nearly 400,000. Its casinos attract tens of thousands of visitors each week as well.

Plebiscite Slated In Puerto Rico

BAYAMON, Puerto Rico (AP) — Gov. Carlos Romero Barcelo says he will call a plebiscite on Puerto Rico's future political status but not until after he runs for re-election in 1980.

The governor said he was delaying the vote because he promised not to push the issue during his first term.

"The people will express their desire to become the 51st state in the American union," he told a cheering crowd celebrating Constitution Day Tuesday. It was the anniversary of Puerto Rico's becoming a U.S. commonwealth in 1952.

90-Degree Readings On Tap In Area

A-J News Services

Despite a few scattered showers on the South Plains this morning, weather forecasters say no rain is likely for the Lubbock area for the next several days.

The forecast called for clear to partly cloudy skies today, tonight and Thursday. Temperatures are expected to range into the mid-90s during the afternoons.

Little change is expected in the weather through Sunday, with highs in the 90s and lows in the upper 60s to mid-70s.

Southwesterly winds of 10 to 15 mph, becoming light and southerly tonight, were predicted.

Temperatures over the South Plains on Tuesday were mainly in the 90s. Paducah, with 101, was the only point to reach the century mark.

Early morning lows today were on the warm side in the area, with the temperature dropping to only 76 in Lubbock.

Early this morning, some small thundershowers developed near Clarendon and northeast of Plainview, but no significant rainfall was expected to result.

Weather over the state Tuesday night was almost a copy of the previous night's. A few light showers near Wichita Falls were reported although partly cloudy skies covered much of Texas.

Dallas hit 101 Tuesday as the heat wave resumed in North Central Texas, but Wichita Falls was the state's hot spot with 104.

Marfa was the coolest town in the state this morning, with a low of 63 degrees.

Elsewhere in the nation, widely scattered thunderstorms brought cooler temperatures to parts of the far West, Arizona, the southern Rockies and the southern Plains.

Heavy rain continued over the Atlantic Coast states from Virginia to Georgia and heavy thunderstorms persisted in the South.

The Pacific Northwest and the northern Plains had mostly clear skies and moderate temperatures near 70.

Fierce winds gusting up to 60 mph ripped through the middle Missouri Valley early today downing power lines and trees, and thunderstorms rolled through South Dakota and spread into Iowa and Minnesota.

Golf ball-size hail pelted Lake Andes, S.D. Powers lines and trees were toppled in Tea, S.D., and more than half an inch of rain fell in the Sioux Falls area.

The storms then crossed into southwestern Minnesota and northwestern Iowa. Power and telephone lines were knocked down by the 60 mph winds in Hawarden, Iowa, and Hardwick and Beaver Creek, Minn., leaving portions of the communities in darkness.

GSA Scandals Hinder Operations Of Agency

WASHINGTON (AP) — The General Services Administration is in trouble, with allegations of crime, bribery and fraud riddling the operations of the federal government's main landlord and central supply store.

Investigators have turned up evidence of thefts, fraud, kickbacks, extortion and waste across the country that amounts to more than $100 million a year in the agency that has a $5 billion budget.

Hundreds of GSA workers are targets of investigations by at least two grand juries, the FBI, a congressional panel and an internal task force.

And spot checks by GSA auditors in recent months have shown that despite the investigations many of the abuses are continuing.

The investigations have been going on for months, but the full scope of the troubles is becoming clear only now. Examples abound.

—A contractor said one contract was for painting 40 miles of pipe in a Washington Veterans Administration building in which the pipes were behind plaster walls, and, as far as he knows, were not painted. The only way to get such lucrative — and fraudulent — contracts was to wine, dine and bribe middle-level federal employees, he said.

—Regional federal officials in Seattle approved spending $2.5 million for the design of a new office building in Anchorage, Alaska, even though they knew the design would be useless.

—A regional federal office in Boston was redone in teak, brass and expensive glass with the taxpayers facing a bill for $42,640 for what the auditors called an "extravagant interior."

Witnesses told a congressional committee that 500 employees of GSA and other federal agencies were involved in the illegal activities.

Others familiar with the situation say the losses could run to $500 million a year with more than 1,000 federal employees involved.

Efforts are under way to clean up the mess.

Federal indictments are expected soon in Baltimore and Washington, sources say. Investigations are going on in at least 12 cities, including Atlanta, Boston, Chicago, Detroit, Denver, New York and Fort Worth.

Jay Solomon, named to head the GSA by President Carter 15 months ago, brought in former federal prosecutor Vincent Alto to push internal efforts to root out corruption.

A Senate government affairs subcommittee headed by Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., has held a series of hearings on the GSA. Chiles now wants money for more auditors to join the agency's 90 experts.

The litany of problems is long: bribery, false specifications on contracts, misuse of the 80,000 government gasoline credit cards, rip-offs of tires and televisions, overcharging on computer services.

The GSA auditors in their most recent spot checks showed that despite the investigations, the GSA on numerous occasions continues to pay for work never done, investigators said.

The auditors, for example, found that in Houston the GSA paid for coats of paint that were never applied; in Philadelphia the agency paid for door handles that were never installed; in Seattle it contracted for cleaning one-third more carpeting than existed; and in Richmond, Va., paid for carpeting never laid.

Alto said that he was not surprised by the latest audit checks and added, "It strengthened my belief that this (abuse) is occuring elsewhere" beside the Washington area.

"The arrogance of these people is incredible," he said.

The problems do not stop with those under grand jury scrutiny, either, sources say. They say Alto's investigators are looking into the possibility of bribes that could involve high-level employees of GSA and elsewhere and mean millions in profits to businesses.

The problems developed over many years, said Solomon, a real estate and shopping center developer prior to 1977. "In the past, rules and regulations were allowed to go unheeded," he said in an interview.

Alto added: "There is hardly any discipline at all in the agency. People know they can get away with it ... And that's been the attitude for 25 years. It's not organized crime. Individuals were allowed to do it by the system. This is going to change."

"GSA needs a wholesale reshuffling and a whole lot of people sent away," Solomon said. "It's got to be reorganized or the president ought to break up the agency and scatter the parts."

Chiles' subcommittee heard about many of the problems in hearings last month, with some of the most interesting testimony coming from Robert Lowry, a painting contractor in the Washington area.

Lowry, testifying under a grant of immunity, said he was involved in payoffs of various kinds to GSA building managers.

"The contractors make a practice of paying off GSA building managers by taking them to lavish lunches, sponsoring parties, paying cash, picking up bills for their vacations, and in many cases, providing them with prostitutes," he said.

Lowry also told the story of the pipes: "There are 40 miles of pipe in the VA building. In order to find it, you have to take plaster walls down, so I don't know how it ever got painted."

In fact, he said, the pipes never were painted, as far as he knew.

Lowry said that after ending his involvment in the corruption in 1971, he tried to interest congressional and GSA officials in the problem but failed. He said he was forced out of business as a contractor because he no longer got government contracts.

Alto told the panel there "is a very cozy, corrupt relationship between some building managers and ... select contractors."

A GSA audit noted a $2.5 million bill paid for design work on a new federal building in Anchorage. An initial contract awarded by regional GSA officials resulted in a cost estimate of $104 million, far more than the $71.5 million authorized by Congress, but new contracts for detailed designs were awarded anyway.

"Available records do not explain why (GSA officials) entered into design contracts when they knew approved funding was inadequate or why design cost was not minimized by stopping the design process sooner," the GSA audit report says.

When GSA failed to get $33 million more from Congress, the building was redesigned — for $2 million — to match the available funds.

Another GSA audit told how $1,500 worth of teak paneling and glass put in an HEW agency's regional office in Boston wound up costing thousands more. Some regional officials liked it; so someone — no one will say who — gave the go-ahead to redecorate four rooms similarly.

The contractor submitted a bill for $42,640, which was cut in negotiations to about $36,000. But GSA and HEW continue to argue about the matter, with part of the bill still unpaid.

Solar Issue Slides By Senators

By PYE CHAMBERLAYNE

WASHINGTON (UPI) — What may be history's most ambitious solar energy program has passed the Senate as part of an obscure military construction bill without coming to the attention of more than a handful of senators.

Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., wrote the bill in a subcommittee and placed in it a section requiring solar energy devices on all new military housing and 25 percent of all new military construction.

Analysis

The bill requires solar energy only where it is cost-effective, but defines cost effectiveness as paying off in fuel or electricity savings over the 30-to 40-year lifespan of a building.

Hart's aides say the measure will pump between $52.5 and $200 million a year into an industry that had total sales last year of about $150 million.

By contrast, the Department of Energy's solar heating and cooling demonstrations cost $64.4 million last year. This year's request is for $36 million.

Departmental officials want to phase their program down and nearly out.

The solar energy section of the $4 billion construction bill was discussed only briefly on the Senate floor, and only by Hart. He says no more than a handful of senators knew it was in the bill, and a spot check of a dozen senators indicates he is right.

The bill passed by voice vote with no audible objection.

Hart says "the Defense Department is the ideal test bed for demonstration efforts and for large-scale buys of new devices such as solar collectors."

Such purchases, he believes, would "achieve market penetration, bring down unit prices, and foster public acceptance" of solar energy.

The devices would include rooftop collectors that feed hot water supplies and radiators, evaporative coolers, photovoltaic cells that produce electricity and — importantly — "passive solar design."

That means making buildings' main windows face south to trap winter sunlight and designing overhangs and planting trees and shrubs to shade the interior from summer sun.

The committee report explaining the bill says the committee expects the Pentagon to incorporate solar design into all new buildings, in addition to putting "active" solar devices in housing and other construction.

The report also notes that military bases are free from aesthetic covenants, local building codes and other institutional constraints that often hamper solar efforts.

Some Pentagon solar projects have been disastrous — one solar panel that should have cost less than $5,000 cost $70,000 to install. Hart hopes that an important side effect of his plan will be the training of efficient solar device procurement officers.

Another side benefit, he reasons, will be training of non-career corporals and sergeants as solar technicians who will bring their skills with them when they reenter the civilian economy.

Bakers Want U.S. Farmers To Grow More Wheat

WASHINGTON (AP) — Even with U.S. wheat stockpiles the largest since the early 1960s, some major grain users contend there is a supply crunch and are asking the government to encourage farmers to grow more wheat next year.

The Independent Bakers Association, which says it represents more than half of the nation's baking industry, has asked Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland to increase the "national program acreage" allotment for the 1979 crop by 8 percent to 10 percent.

According to the association, based on May 31 figures by the Agriculture Department, the leftover supply of wheat was more than 1.17 billion bushels. But the trade group says that so much of that wheat was under government loan or otherwise subject to government control that the "free" market supply was only 544 million bushels.

"When one deducts the 220 million bushels scheduled for the international grain reserve, the 'true' carryover is much lower," the association said in a letter to Bergland. "Also, added purchases by Russia and China in current markets is a factor that will bring the carryover still lower."

One reason that wheat prices have improved from their low points of last fall, according to USDA officials, is that farmers have effectively locked off the free market a major share of the excess wheat by placing it under government loan.

The centerpiece of this is the reserve program in which, as of July 21, 370.9 million bushels of wheat have been placed under extended loan for three years or until prices go high enough to trigger their release.

The international reserve of 220 million bushels referred to by the bakers involves a plan still in the congressional mill that would allow Bergland to buy that much wheat and hold it to meet U.S. emergency food aid commitments in distressed foreign areas.

Under current farm law, the USDA must set a national program acreage — formerly called a national allotment — for each year's wheat crop. That is the acreage calculated to be required to produce enough wheat for the coming year's domestic and export needs, including an allowance for adjustments in the inventory at the end of the marketing year.

Bergland, under law, must announce by Aug. 15 his plans for the 1979 wheat program, including a preliminary decision on whether there will be another acreage set-aside program — as there was for 1978 — to help curb wheat output further.

Howard Hjort, the department's chief economist and a farm program architect says that the current wheat reserve — the amount carried over when the new marketing year began June 1 — is an amount that "would have to be characterized as our fair share" of the world's grain stocks.

In an interview Monday with AP reporters, Hjort declined to elaborate further on the request by bakers to increase the 1979 national program acreage.

One USDA official, who asked not to be identified, said when told about the bakers' request that "they just want to see the price of wheat drop" so that their costs can be shaved a bit.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Corn and oats futures edged slightly downward, and wheat and soybean prices were mixed in light trading Tuesday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Continued favorable weather and fair to excellent crop reports for most commodities held the markets fairly steady despite reports of increased export demand for wheat and a decline in country wheat sales.

Cotton Futures

NEW YORK (AP) — Cotton futures No. 2 closed 80 cents to $2.25 a bale higher.

Concern over dry weather in Texas again prompted demand for contracts, brokers said.

The average price for strict low middling 11-16 inch spot cotton declined 80 points to 56.56 cents a pound Monday for the ten leading markets, according to the New York Cotton Exchange.

Corn Crop Rated 'Fair To Good'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's corn crop is still rated in "mostly fair to good" condition, although some fields are only in poor to fair shape in the Southeast, says the Agriculture Department.

Officials said Tuesday in a weekly weather summary that the soil moisture supply in the Corn Belt was "generally adequate" by July 23, and that 50 percent to 60 percent of the corn crop was in the tassling stage of development.

The soybean crop was rated "fair to good" nationally, although soybean development in the North Central region was well behind a year ago because of delayed planting this season.

CARTOONIST DIES

ATLANTA (AP) — Funeral services have been held for Thomas J. Hill, collaborator on the "Mark Trail" comic strip. Hill, 56, co-signed the daily and Sunday strip with its creator, Ed Dodd.

Grasshopper Plan Costly

WASHINGTON (AP) — It would cost the federal government about $185 million to undertake an immediate crash grasshopper spraying program on crops in nine states where the insects have been damaging wheat, corn and other crops, says the Agriculture Department.

The estimate was sent Tuesday to the Senate Agriculture Committee staff which had asked USDA to provide cost estimates for grasshopper spraying. The request was initiated by Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kans.

An existing program to spray grasshoppers on pastures and rangelands at the request of farmers and ranchers has been carried out for years by the department's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, APHIS, but has not been extended to include crops as many farmers and state officials have urged.

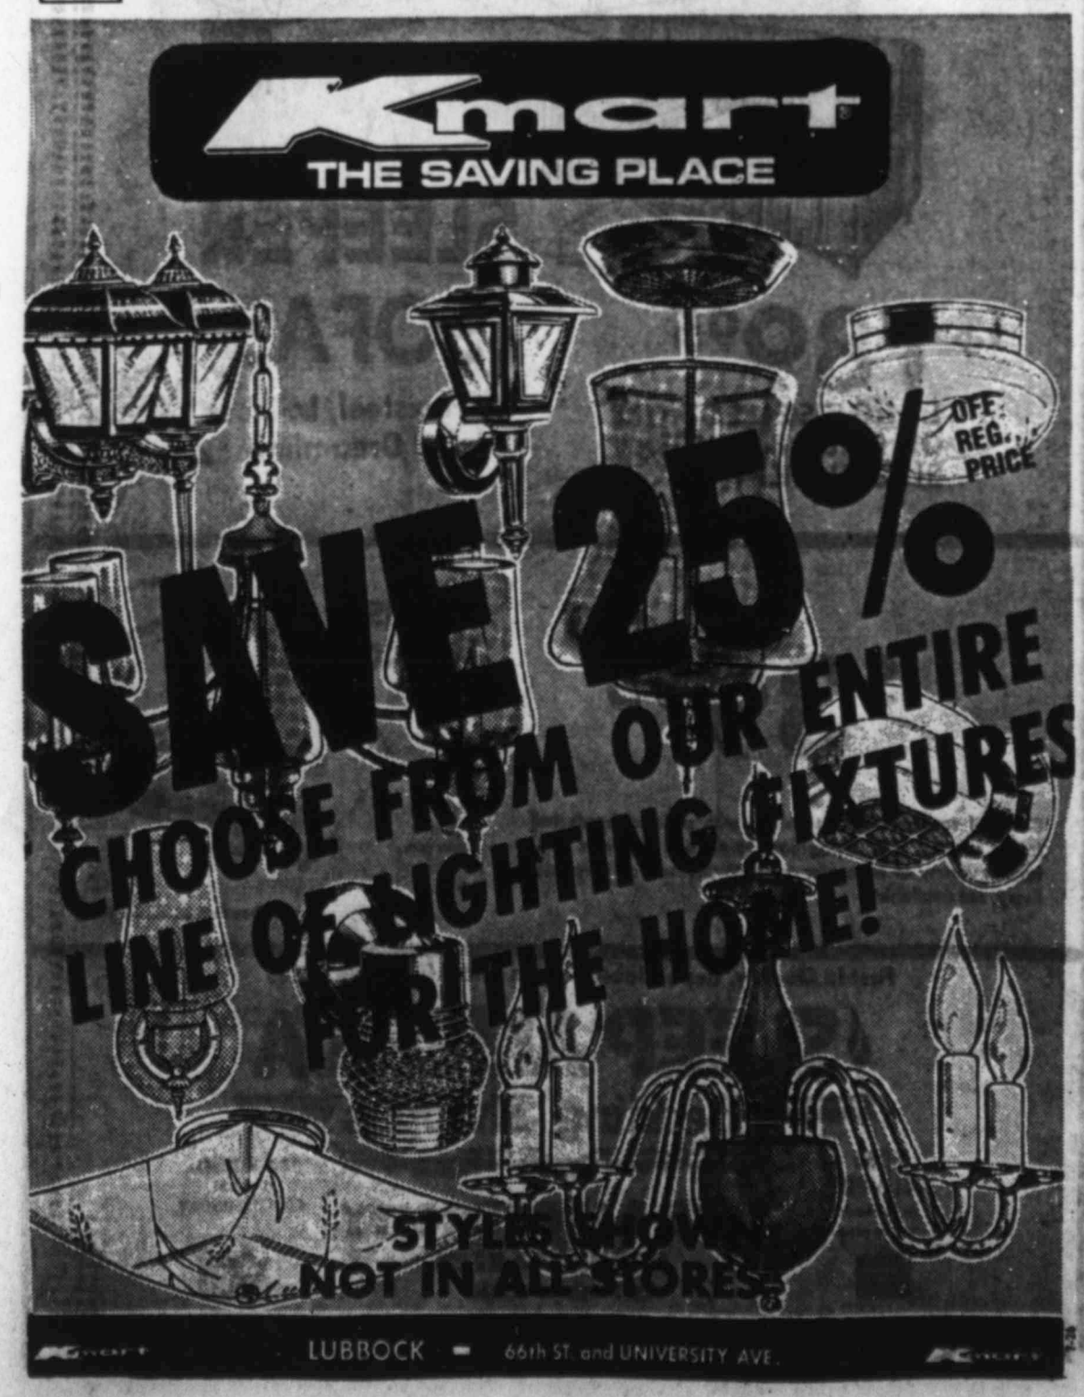

The agency said last week that it had no funds available for spraying crops and that this year's rangeland program had to dip into contingency funds to pay the federal spraying bill of almost $1.8 million, only 10 percent of what USDA says it would cost to spray cropland.

Federal money is used to pay one-third of the costs while farmers and ranchers pay the other two-thirds, but where state help is available, the bill is split three ways so that landowners bear only one-third of the costs.

Death Row Inmate Receives Stay Of Execution

A-J News Services

Supreme Court Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr. told Texas authorities Tuesday to postpone setting an execution date for a 23-year-old Dallas man convicted of robbing and killing a Texas Tech student in Dallas in April 1975.

Powell approved the execution stay for Ronald Curtis Chambers who was convicted by a Dallas jury of the slaying of Michael M. McMahan, a 22-year-old junior mechanical engineering student.

Though no execution date for Chambers had been set, Powell issued the stay of execution order to allow time for Chambers' appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court.

The death row inmate had been unsuccessful with a state-level appeal, in which he challenged the selection of his trial jury.

McMahan, from Kennewick, Wash., left Lubbock on April 8, 1975, with 28 other engineering students to attend a conference at the University of Texas at Arlington.

About 12:45 a.m. on April 11—the day he was to have returned to Lubbock—McMahan and his girlfriend of a year, Deia Karlene Sutton, 20, were accosted at gunpoint by two men on the parking lot of a Dallas nightspot.

Thereafter, Miss Sutton, a former Texas Tech student, and McMahan were driven around in McMahan's blue Camaro as two men debated the couple's fate. McMahan's car was followed by a second vehicle, occupied by two friends of the abductors.

Eventually, the two assailants—armed with a .22-caliber pistol and a .410 shotgun—ordered McMahan to drive to a deserted levee near the Elm Fork of the Trinity River in northwest Dallas. The second car followed.

At the levee, the couple was ordered to march to the river's edge and told not to look back. Seconds later two shots were fired. A .22-caliber slug ripped into Miss Sutton's neck and McMahan was felled by a shotgun blast to the lower back.

Two men scrambled up a hill and out of sight.

Their victims, however, were still alive.

McMahan, described by his friends as a man who cared about people, then made a fatal mistake. He raised up and asked Miss Sutton if she was all right.

The UTA student cautioned McMahan to be quiet, but it was too late. The assailants ran down the embankment, Miss Sutton told a jury later.

"Well, you're not dead, huh?" one of the men reportedly asked McMahan.

Miss Sutton testified she watched and heard the man pummel McMahan's skull with the shotgun barrel until the engineering student lay motionless.

A medical examiner later would testify the beating, not the gunshot wound, was fatal.

Meanwhile, a second man punched Miss Sutton three times, choked her and rammed her face into the mud hoping to drown her. The woman feigned unconsciousness and the assailants left.

After the pair left, Miss Sutton got up, walked about a mile to a nearby hotel and notified police. She survived the attack.

Testimony later indicated the men robbed both students, taking $5 and a wristwatch from McMahan and a wristwatch, $20, a purse and a coat from Miss Sutton.

From there, a witness said later, the two men—accompanied by friends—drove to a West Dallas apartment where they divided the stolen property and sat down to play dominoes.

Later that day, two of the suspects drove in McMahan's car to Houston where they attempted to sell the vehicle, but failed for lack of a title.

Driving back to Dallas, the men heard a news report describing the stolen vehicle, became alarmed and drove to Calvert, in East Texas, where they abandoned the car. Before they left the vehicle, however, the men set it ablaze.

After hailing a teenager, the men hitched a ride to the Calvert bus station where they purchased fare to Dallas.

Meanwhile, a citizen spotted the burning Camaro, notified police, who in turned alerted Dallas authorities that the stolen vehicle had been found. Officers also learned that the suspects were en route to Dallas on a Greyhound bus.

Dallas police waited at the downtown bus depot as the suspects exited the bus.

On April 12, a day after McMahan died alone at the levee, four men were arrested. The next day three were charged with McMahan's murder.

Just 66 days later, a Dallas jury took 15 minutes to find Chambers guilty of capital murder. A day later, the then 20-year-old was assessed the death penalty.

Clarence Ray Williams Jr., 26, of Dallas also was convicted of murder in connection with McMahan's death and aggravated robbery.

A Texas Department of Corrections spokesman said Tuesday Williams is serving two cumulative life sentences.

Bond Plea Granted By Judge Warnick

County Court at Law Judge J.Q. Warnick Jr. determined Tuesday that Municipal Court Judge Drew Littleton should accept an appeal bond which was denied.

Attorney Phil Brown brought suit against Littleton after the municipal judge refused to accept an appeal bond without the defendant's signature, then refused to accept the signed bond on the grounds it was not submitted within the required 10 days following conviction

At a hearing earlier this month, Brown contended the bond denial constituted "denial of equal protection and denial of due process."

The hearing suit followed the Mulnicipal Court conviction of Luther Johnson on March 28 when Johnson was fined $200 for a traffic violation.

Johnson's attorneys submitted an appeal bond for the defendant on the 10th day following the trial, but the bond was later returned because it was not signed by Johnson.

Signed Bond Submitted

On the 13th day following Johnson's trial, a signed appeal bond was submitted, but Littleton refused to accept the bond.

Warnick decided the first bond was "patently void," but said the second bond had been filed in time and should be accepted.

He based his decision on a Harris County case decided by the Court of Criminal Appeals which held the 10-day limit did not begin until the day following conviction, rather than the day of conviction.

Using that counting method, Johnson's bond would have been due on April 8.

However, that date was a Saturday and Warnick cited another Court of Criminal Appeals ruling that if the final day to post bond falls on a Saturday, Sunday or legal holiday, the time is extended until the next working day.

In Johnson's case the next working day was the day the signed bond was filed.

Decision Defended

In a letter to both attorneys on the case, Warnick noted "had I been Judge Littleton, I would have acted as he did" on the bonds.

"However, when you have an opportunity for research you find the law is different than that initial impression," he continued.

Littleton can appeal Warnick's decision to the Seventh Court of Civil Appeals in Amarillo.

School Tax

come from a combination of reserves and budget cuts — not from reserves alone.

They suggested that the district's proposed budget be raised from its original $41.3 million to a new total of $41.5 million. This would give Irons an extra $200,000 to work with.

If Irons can take that $200,000 and make other cuts to provide for the Stafford-proposed pay hikes, then "so be it," Harriger said. But Harriger believes the proposed pay raises are too expensive and can't be accomplished within his constraints.

The school board voted to ask the administration to come up with a budget that reflects Mrs. Stafford's proposed pay hikes but stays within a $41.5 million total.

Irons said he doesn't believe that can be done.

The board Tuesday already had made some significant cuts. Trustees reduced personnel rolls by 10 teacher aides and two assistant elementary principals. This will free up about $110,000.

Salaries

teachers would come out with about 10 percent more — 4.5 percent from the state and about 6 percent from local funds.

Teachers themselves have been asking for even larger increases. They wanted local increments to range from $1,000 to $2,200, at an extra cost of $1.5 million.

Irons' original proposal would have been about one-third of what the teachers requested. The school board's proposal is more than two-thirds of the request.

If the school board raise is approved, a typical teacher may get an extra $1,000 for the coming year; $100 from the state base increase; $400 from the "step" increase; $200 from Irons' original proposal; and $300 from the school board's proposal.

Work To Continue On Traffic Circle

Resurfacing of the traffic circle at the intersection of U.S. Highways 84 and 87 here will resume Saturday, State Department of Highways and Public Transportation officials said today.

Traffic will be routed through the construction area but may be temporarily delayed. Work will be suspended during the rush hours of 7 a.m. to 8 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday in an effort to minimize delays.

The resurfacing is expected to be completed by Aug. 3, weather permitting.

Farmhands Blast Briscoe

AUSTIN (AP) — A group of migrant workers Tuesday suggested staging a hunger strike to publicize its demands for collective bargaining after an unproductive meeting with Gov. Dolph Briscoe.

The governor met for 35-minutes with five representatives of the 45-member group, which had camped on the Capitol grounds Monday night.

"He promised us nothing," said Rosa Cuellar after talking with Briscoe.

Legislators from districts with heavy migrant populations have not helped either, she said.

"Legislators have been so unresponsive, and they're the people who represent us," she said. "We'll have to appeal to the people who elect them."

The Texas Farmworkers Union asked Briscoe allow the special session to consider legislation giving them collective bargaining rights. The migrant workers also favor repeal of Section 14-B of the Taft-Hartley Law.

The section allows states to pass right-to-work laws prohibiting labor-management contracts which require an employee to join a union as a condition of employment.

Antonio Orendain, director of the Texas Farmworkers Union, said Briscoe seemed receptive, but added the group did not expect the governor to modify his previous opposition to their demands.

"He (Briscoe) said he has a big list of things requested to be considered. He seemed receptive," Orendain said. "We have to keep doing our groundwork to see different representatives."

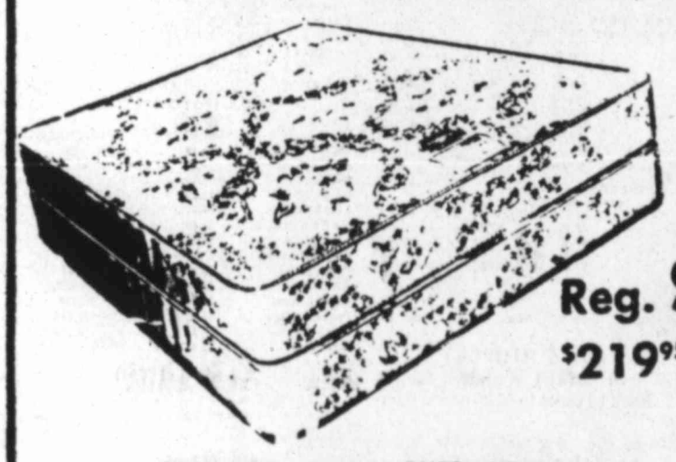

The farmworker leader said 15,000 migrant workers have signed petitions supporting his group's demands.

At least 99 percent of migrant workers live below the poverty line, he said. They sometimes make $1 to $2 a day in the fields.

The workers want a state board to oversee agricultural workers' collective bargaining, similar to the National Labor Relations Board, said Marcial Silea of Dallas.

"It's similar to a California law passed in 1975. The board would oversee elections, (investigate) unfair labor practices and hear grievances," Silea said. "The National Labor Relations Board doesn't apply to agricultural workers."

Sign Up For Independence

When young people sign up for newspaper route work, they are really signing up for independence. The kind of independence that goes with earning your own money, running your own business and dealing with people on a one-to-one basis.

Our carriers are young business men and women. They provide a vital service, handle their own finances and reap a handsome profit from their efforts. What better training to prepare them for the future?

If you are interested in stepping into the business world and declaring your own independence, contact our carrier manager right now. He'll give you all of the important facts about carrier work. Then, if you are still interested, he'll provide the pen and show you where to sign . . . even if your name is John Hancock.

First Test-Tube Baby In Excellent Condition

OLDHAM, England (AP) — Doctors say the 5 pound, 12 ounce British girl believed to be the world's first test-tube baby is "quite normal" and that mother and daughter are in excellent condition.

The baby, nine days premature, was delivered by caesarean section to 30-year-old Lesley Brown at 11:47 p.m. Tuesday in Oldham's red-brick general hospital.

The father, 38-year-old truck driver Gilbert John Brown, chain-smoked in a waiting room outside the fourth-floor operating room. Hospital officials said he was close to tears when told he had a daughter.

Because a blockage in Mrs. Brown's fallopian tubes prevented normal conception, the baby was conceived by removing an egg from one of her ovaries and fertilizing it in a laboratory with her husband's sperm. After five days of nourishment in the test tube, it was planted in Mrs. Brown's uterus to develop normally.

The birth was the culmination of 12 years of experimentation and research by Dr. Patrick Steptoe, one of Britain's leading gynecologists, and Dr. Robert Edwards, a Cambridge University physiologist. A hospital spokesman said Mrs. Brown wants to name the baby Patricia, after Steptoe.

The British government's Medical Research Council said as far as it knows, the Brown baby is the first born after conception outside the mother's body. A spokesman said there has never been any substantive proof of reports that three test-tube babies are alive, two in Britain and one in Italy. And the medical profession put no credence in the claim of an Italian doctor in 1961 that he developed 27 test-tube children.

The Daily Mail, which paid $600,000 for exclusive rights to the Browns' story, reported the father gasped when he was given a brief glimpse of his child and said:

"It's incredible, incredible. ... I'm not a religious man, but I thank God that I heard our little girl cry for the first time. No one can realize what this means to Lesley and myself."

Brown has a 17-year-old daughter by a previous marriage.

A hospital spokesman said the mother was "over the moon with joy." He said she and the baby would probably be able to go home to Bristol in about 10 days.

The doctors knew the baby's sex in advance from chromosomal tests, but Mrs. Brown told them not to tell her because "I don't want to be cheated of the final thrill."

The only problem that apparently arose in the latter stage of Mrs. Brown's pregnancy was a minor blood poisoning known as toxemia, but doctors said it was quickly brought under control.

The birth brought hope to thousands of women unable to have children because of irreparable defects in their physical makeup. But it was expected to rekindle a fierce philosophical and ethical debate on the morality of conception outside the mother's body.

When Steptoe and Edwards first successfully fertilized a human egg and produced a fetus in 1969, the Roman Catholic Church condemned it as an extension of "immoral" artificial insemination.

But amid talk that their work heralded an age of selective breeding along the lines of Aldous Huxley's "Brave New World," Steptoe said: "I'm not a wizard or a Frankenstein tampering with nature. All I want to do is to help women whose child-bearing mechanism is slightly faulty."

The British Medical Association's Ethics Committee also approved. The committee's secretary, Dr. John Dawson, said earlier this month, "Used responsibly, this technique offers no ethical difficulties for doctors. If Mr. Steptoe succeeds, it will be a valuable addition to the treatment for infertile women."

Mrs. Brown was suffering from a blockage of her fallopian tubes, which carry the egg from the ovary to the uterus and in which fertilization normally occurs. Surgery and other measures to remedy the defect failed, and about two years ago she went to Dr. Steptoe and Dr. Edwards.

In the technique that they use, the woman is treated with hormones to stimulate maturation of eggs in the ovary, then a needle is inserted into the ovary to draw them out. A ripe egg is placed in a dish of blood serum and nutrients and sperm is added for fertilization. When fertilized, the egg is transferred to another dish and divides into a blastocyst.

The woman then receives more hormone treatments to prepare the uterine lining.

TEST-TUBE PIONEER — Consultant gynecologist Patrick Steptoe, who with physiologist Dr. Robert Edwards, pioneered the test-tube baby technique which led to the birth of a 5 pound, 12 ounce daughter to Lesley Brown in London. (AP Laserphoto)

Onassis Wedding Causes Concern Among Greeks

ATHENS, Greece (UPI) — The forthcoming wedding of Christina Onassis, daughter of the late shipping tycoon Aristotle Onassis, to a Soviet official worries some Greek business and security officials.

Family friends revealed Tuesday the heiress to Onassis' $500 million fortune will marry Sergei Kauzoff, 40, an executive of the Soviet state shipping line, Sovfracht, by Monday.

Christina, 27 and twice divorced, met Kauzoff while he was on assignment in Paris last year and followed him to Moscow when he was called home, Onassis family friends report.

Confirmation of the long-rumored union brought to Athens from Moscow by former Onassis associate and shipowner Costas Gratsos, who said preparations for the wedding were complete.

Onassis died in March 1975, leaving most of his $500 million shipping, real estate, tourism and aviation empire to Christina, his only surviving child.

The rest of the Onassis estate went to his widow, Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, but later was bought out by Christina for $25 million.

A family friend said Soviet law provides for separate property holdings and will allow Christina to retain control of her fortune and enterprises. But it "still will be controlled from within the Soviet Union," he said.

Greek security officials voiced concern over the island of Skorpios off western Greece, which Christina owns outright after buying Jacqueline's one-fourth share.

"It is one thing for Onassis or Niarchos or any loyal Greek to have their own island, but the idea of a Soviet official controlling Skorpios poses several problems," a security official said.

Another apparent problem concerns Kauzoff's freedom to leave the Soviet Union after the wedding.

A friend of Christina's father, who asked not to be identified because of his official status in Greece, said "If they are allowed to live abroad there will be no problem, but if she has to live there all the time it will be sad."

"I hate to think that Christina will have to live in a two-room apartment in Moscow and that she will have to wash dishes," he said.

Christina divorced her first husband, California Realtor Joseph Bolker, a few months after their 1971 marriage. In 1975, within a few months of her father's death, she married Alexandros Andreadis, 34-year-old heir of a Greek shipping and banking magnate, but that also ended in divorce after 14 months.

Carter Cuts Official Contacts With Russia To Bare Minimum

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration is reducing official contacts with Moscow to a bare minimum until relations improve, a move that follows by seven days the president's decision to impose trade reprisals against the Soviet Union.

Citing the administration's "great concern" over Soviet treatment of dissidents and American reporters in Moscow, State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said Tuesday that all visits to the Soviet Union by high-level U.S. officials are being deferred on a case-by-case basis.

In the first planned visit to be affected under the new policy, spokesman Carter said, Assistant Housing and Urban Development Secretary Lawrence B. Simons canceled a 14-day visit to the Soviet Union scheduled to begin next week.

But Carter said that if American officials perceived "a better atmosphere on various issues affecting our relationship, we would allow exchanges once again to become more active."

And he said that arms control negotiations are not affected. Such talks, he said, are too important to be affected by Soviet performance on human rights matters.

Over the last two weeks, separate negotiations have been conducted on a strategic arms limitation agreement and on a pact to curb conventional arms sales to other nations.

In a nationally televised news conference last Thursday, President Carter said that no additional punitive measures were planned beyond his decisions Tuesday to cancel the sale of Sperry Univac computer to Tass, the Soviet news agency, and to require export licenses for all oil production equipment sold to Russia.

The president said his administration had not "embarked on a vendetta" against the Soviet Union.

Tuesday's cancellation was the third in less than a month of a senior-level mission to Moscow. The others involved a delegation from the Environmental Protection Agency and the president's science adviser, Frank Press.

All three missions had been scheduled in line with a series of agreements in areas of non-strategic cooperation signed by the United States and Russia. Most date from the early 1970s, the heyday of detente.

Discussing the canceled computer deal, Sperry Rand Corp. President J. Paul Lyet said Tuesday he was confused but not angry at Carter's decision.

Lyet told a New York news conference the company may decide it's not worth the time to try to deal with the Soviets if presidential approval becomes a routine part of the export process.

Still another irritant to U.S.-Soviet relations — Moscow's interference with letters and packages sent from the United States — was discussed at a House Post Office subcommittee hearing Tuesday.

Mark L. Schneider, a deputy assistant secretary of state, said the Soviet restrictions include a 30 percent tax on money sent to Soviet citizens from abroad, increased duties on gifts and a ban on mailings of matzoh packages to Soviet Jews.

He said the measure is designed to curtail support from abroad for dissidents and "refuseniks," those who have been denied permission to emigrate.

Aides Must Clear TV Appearances

WASHINGTON (UPI) — "Clear it with Jerry" is the new policy edict for White House staffers and Cabinet officials who are invited to appear on television.

That directive from imagemaker Gerald Rafshoon came to light after Rafshoon blocked a pre-arranged appearance by presidential assistant Midge Costanza on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America."

Her time slot on the program Tuesday morning was filled by Stuart Eizenstat, the president's domestic affairs adviser, who was on hand for his own previously scheduled appearance.

"We decided to let Stu tell the administration story," Rafshoon said when asked about his decision to cancel Miss Costanza's appearance. "He does it so well. Two people from the White House would have been overkill."

The Rafshoon order was communicated to the senior staff by top White House aide Hamilton Jordan at a meeting two weeks ago. Miss Costanza was on an out-of-town speaking engagment and missed the announcement.

Rafshoon said his aim, as the White House consultant on television and 9ther public appearances by the staff and Cabinet, is "better coordination and communication with the public ... to get as much mileage as possible. We're not telling them what to say."

He said Cabinet officials also would coordinate their appearances with his office.

Up to the present, White House officials have more or less been on their own to decide independently between the many requests they receive for appearances.

Rafshoon was appointed to improve Carter's public image, and to recommend ways the administration's programs and accomplishments could be communicated more effectively to the American people.

Miss Costanza said she agreed six weeks ago to go on the program, but Rafshoon called her early Monday night to cancel the appearance.

She quoted Rafshoon as saying: "Midge, I understand you're going to be on the David Hartman show. Didn't you know that I issued a directive that all White House senior staff appearances have to be coordinated through my office?"

She said she told Rafshoon, "I didn't get the message and I will not call David Hartman at this late hour." She suggested Rafshoon make the call.

"They called the producer of the show," Miss Costanza said. "I'm not upset with anyone. I know there is no one more brilliant or who knows more than Stu. He should have had both segments of the broadcast. But it was a sloppy way to handle it, and it should have been coordinated.

"There's nothing wrong with Jerry's directive or Eizenstat. I agree with the coordination, but I will never allow anyone in this White House to decide whether I go on or not."

General Says Action Helped Cut Dissent

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Retired Maj. Gen. John K. Singlaub says he feels there has been an effort by the Carter administration to reduce dissent, but it is nothing like the punishment given political dissidents in the Soviet Union.

Singlaub was recalled from Korea by President Carter last year for speaking out against troop withdrawal and was retired for speaking out against the administration stand on the B-1 bomber, the neutron bomb and the Panama Canal.

Singlaub said he feels actions taken against him were an effort by administration officials to stifle dissent because they were not sure their actions were correct. He said he fears such an attitude will result in the administration receiving bad advice.

"I don't know that it was an effort to stifle all dissent," he told a news conference Tuesday prior to an address to the Rotary Club. "I certainly do know it was an effort to reduce the dissent in the official family. I happen to be considered a member of the executive branch."

He noted Pentagon staff members considered too candid in expressing their opinions before congressional committees had been warned they were "apt to be Singlaubed."

"I worry now the decision makers are not going to get the best advice available," he said. "It gives me the impression that the current administration is so concerned about some of the logic and reasons for some of their decisions that they can't afford any criticism. If their logic were sound and their reasoning was good, they would be less concerned about a relatively insignificant major general speaking the truth as he saw it."

But Singlaub said there was a major difference between what happened to him and the trials in the Soviet Union for political dissidents.

"Nobody sent me to Siberia," he said, adding he considers himself free to speak his opinions now that he is no longer part of the Carter administration. But he said the incident had given many career officers the impression they were to "remain silent, salute smartly and do whatever we are assigned to do."

Singlaub's military career spanned 35 years and three wars and prior to his recall by Carter, he was Chief of Staff of the United Nations Command, U.S. Forces in Korea. His remarks April 27 to ROTC graduates at Georgia Tech giving opinions other than the administration viewpoint precipitated his retirement from the Army effective June 1.

GM Reports Sales Gain

DETROIT (AP) — Only one of the four major U.S. auto companies reported a sales gain for the mid-July period.

But the one on the plus side was giant General Motors Corp., enabling the industry to post an overall hike of 5 percent compared to the same period one year ago.

GM reported Tuesday that sales jumped 18.5 percent over year-ago levels in the July 11-20 period.

Overall, the domestic industry sold 261,870 new cars. The daily sales rate was fourth highest for the period and the performance continued the auto sales resurgence begun this spring.

General Motors said it sold 143,758 cars during the period.

Ford Motor Co. was off 9.2 percent with sales of 79,937 cars. Chrysler Corp. fell 4.5 percent to 33,817 cars and American Motors Corp. dropped 4.3 percent to 4,358 cars.

Ford blamed its decline on an exceptional year-ago period, when a dealer sales contest gave the No. 2 automaker a rare 35 percent of the market.

Conversely, GM's totals a year ago were depressed because of a dealer letdown from a sales contest the previous period.

Though GM was up and Ford was down in mid-July, Ford's share of the market at 30.5 percent was above the company's year-to-date share while GM's, at 54.8 percent, was below its share since Jan. 1.

Both automakers said things would even out by the end of July. An industry analyst who asked anonymity called mid-July "very satisfactory."

Prairie School To Be Closed

KEARNEY, Neb. (UPI) — A one-room school house, founded 102 years ago on the south-central Nebraska prairie, will be closed because only two brothers are enrolled for the fall session.

The Hartman School District 34, located northeast of the city, will be consolidated with the Center School District 28, officials decided this week.

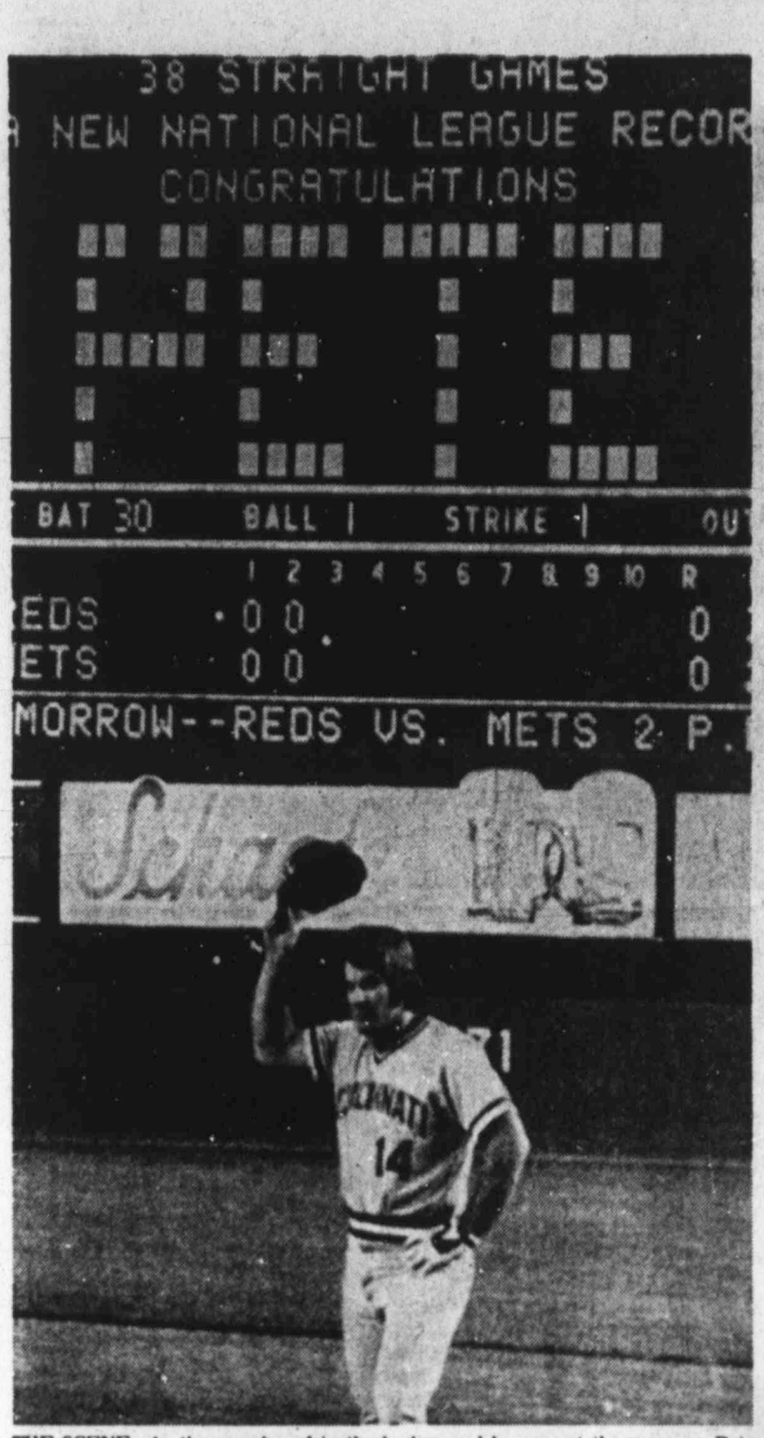

At its prime in 1936, the school had 10 grades and about 30 pupils.

It currently has seven grades, including kindergarten, but Devin and Dana Tompkins are the only two who were enrolled for the fall term. Devin, 9, is a fourth-grader and Dana, 5, is to start kindergarten.

Officials said 19 of 23 registered voters signed a petition to close the school.

Robert Cook, secretary of the district's board, said, "We hate to give it up, but it looks like we haven't any other alternative at this time. We're running out of kids."

THE SCENE—As the scoreboard in the background beams out the message, Pete Rose acknowledges the ovation from the crowd at Shea Stadium after reaching a new milestone in National League hitting Tuesday night. (AP Laserphoto)

Rose Finds 'Beach Ball'

NEW YORK (AP) — The plan was to let Pete Rose swing at anything, and to the devil with strategy.

It was, after all, his night.

Rose, the indominatable sparkplug of the Cincinnati Reds, made the most of his freedom at the plate Tuesday night, stroking two singles and a double to extend his hitting streak to 38 games, a modern National League record.

"I told you I'd be back tonight," Rose told reporters as he mounted the podium after his record-breaking performence in a 9-2 loss to the New York Mets. "The record feels great, but not the outcome of the game."

Rose broke the record in the third inning. With one out, he was greeted at the plate by a standing ovation from the crowd of 38,158 at Shea Stadium. He took the first pitch from right-hander Craig Swan for a ball. He fouled back the next pitch, and then he lashed a low line drive into left field.

"The first pitch was low and outside," Rose said. "Swan was throwing real hard, so I choked up another quarter of an inch. I fouled off the next pitch, but it felt better. On the next pitch, I just laid it out there in left field."

Rose doubled and scored in the fifth inning. Batting left-handed against Swan, the switch-hitting Rose cracked a 3-1 delivery into left center. It bounced over the fence for a ground-rule double and after taking third on a sacrifice fly, Rose scored on Joe Morgan's grounder to second.

Rose hit a weak, broken-bat single into right center in the seventh.

Before the game, Reds' manager Sparky Anderson vowed, "He'll hit tonight. . .I won't take the bat out of his hands. Even if it's a 3-0 pitch, he'll have the swing sign."

And swing he did.

Rose came to the plate four times, and for the fifth time in his streak, he got three hits. His only out of the night was leading off the first inning when he took a ball inside, then lofted a routine fly to Met left-fielder Steve Henderson near the foul line.

"Tonight, the ball looked as big as a beach ball," said Rose. "Tomorrow it may look like a golf ball."

After his third-inning single, the fans at Shea Stadium — where Rose once was the target of boos and flying beer bottles — gave him a three-minute standing ovation. Rose doffed his cap to the crowd and Tommy Holmes, the former Boston Braves' great whose 1945 record Rose broke, rushed out to congratulate him.

Met first baseman Willie Montanez said he "tried to give Rose the ball, but he said, 'No, no. Give it to the other guy (Holmes).' "

"Pete told me last night that if he gets the hit, he would give me the baseball," said Holmes. "But when he gave it to me on the field, I gave it back. It's his honor and his moment."

Asked if he would now give the ball to the Hall of Fame, Rose replied, "I'll keep the ball. I hit it, I'll keep it."

Rose was stranded on first at the end of the inning, but instead of bringing him his glove, as is customary, his teammates made Rose retrieve it himself.

"They didn't carry the glove out to me," said Rose. "They made me come in and get it so they could shake my hand."

Rose's record completely overshadowed a fine pitching performance by Swan, 3-5, who got his second consecutive complete game victory, scattering seven hits.

"I got the ball up to him," Swan said of the pitch that gave Rose his third inning hit. "I pitched pretty awful. On a ratio of one to 15, this was a 10. I didn't pitch well until the seventh inning, and that gave him (Rose) quite a chance."

Rose, who passed the 3,000-hit mark in May, now has 3,095 hits in his 16-year career, 10th on the all-time list. During his streak, the 37-year-old Rose has 61 hits in 160 at bats for an average of .381. He has one four-hit game, five three-hit games and 10 two-hit games in the string.

"This streak has been good for the club," said Rose. "It has stimulated the club the way people react. It's a hell of a lot better to play in front of 40,000 people than 14,000."

The Reds manager echoed Rose's sentiments. "We're used to having publicity, and then the Dodgers grabbed it all. This has been the greatest thing for this team," said Anderson.

Although this game had to be a milestone for Rose, the game that probably will be remembered most in this streak is the one that ends it.

"It's going to end sooner or later," said Rose. "I don't like to think of it that way though. There's a quarter of an inch difference between hitting good and hitting bad."

The next hitting streak in Rose's sights is that of Ty Cobb, who hit in 40 straight in 1911. George Sisler had a 41-game streak in 1922. A couple of pre-1900 players had streaks in the forties also. Bill Dahlen hit in 42 straight games in 1894, and Wee Willie Keeler had a 44-game streak in 1897. Keeler's string is recognized by history.

DiMaggio Conqueror Cheers For Pete

ATLANTA (AP) — Pete Rose has set his sights on Joe DiMaggio's major league record 56-game hitting streak and the man who stopped that streak hopes he makes it.

"If anyone breaks the record, I hope it's Pete Rose," said Jim Bagby Jr. as the Cincinnati star broke Tommy Holmes' National League record of hitting in 38 consecutive games Tuesday night. "I've always admired his hustle and 100 percent play."

Bagby was pitching for the Cleveland Indians on DiMaggio's last time at bat in the streak on July 17, 1941.

Bagby, 62, now a tool designer at Lockheed's suburban Marietta, Ga., plant, still recalls that day 37 years ago. He entered the game in a tough situation — New York leading 4-1, one out, bases loaded and DiMaggio at bat. Cleveland's starting pitcher, Al Smith, had retired DiMaggio twice on two spectacular fielding plays by third baseman Kenny Keltner and had walked him on DiMaggio's other time at bat.

"It was a hot day, and few expected DiMaggio's streak to end in that game," Bagby said in an interview with The Atlanta Constitution. "The next night he was to face Bob Feller, and that was built up as the real showdown.

"I can't remember my exact feelings, but I know I felt no pressure," he said of facing DiMaggio. "No nervousness. If there was any pressure, it was on DiMaggio. Frankly, I didn't care whether he got a hit or not; on the other hand, I certainly wasn't going to lay it in there and let him

Yankees Win Behind Guidry; Red Sox Fall Again

By The Associated Press

The next few games figure to be a lot harder for the New York Yankees and manager Bob Lemon. Ron Guidry, you see, won't pitch again until Sunday.

"It's nice to break in with a 15-1 pitcher going for you," Lemon said Tuesday night after his successful debut as Billy Martin's replacement — a 4-0 victory over the red-hot Kansas City Royals behind Guidry's six-hit pitching.

It was the slender left-hander's second straight shutout as he stopped the Royals' 10-game winning streak.

"I'd say he might just be the best in baseball right now," Kansas City manager Whitey Herzog reflected after Guidry whipped the Royals for the second time this season. "We can't complain too much. He just shut the door on us. He's pitched pretty good against everyone, not just us. The only team to beat him has been Milwaukee and they have a pretty fair hitting team."

"I kind of paced myself the first five innings," said Guidry. "Everybody knows the fast ball is my best pitch, but as good as my slider is they can't afford to take too many of them. They know I can blow the fast ball by them any time."

The Yankees scored the only run Guidry needed against Paul Splittorff in the third inning on an error, a stolen base and Willie Randolph's double. Thurman Munson, Roy White and Jim Spencer added run-scoring hits in the eighth.

Kansas City's biggest threat came in the first inning when George Brett and Hal McRae led off with singles, but Guidry struck out John Wathan, retired Amos Otis on a fly and got Darrell Porter on a grounder.

"He's got the best record, so I guess he's the best," said Brett, who had two hits. "What did he strike out — 10? Oh, just eight? He must have had a bad night."

Twins 5, Red Sox 2

White Sox 4, Brewers 2

Bob Molinaro broke an 0-for-12 slump with a fifth-inning homer and Fransico Barrios gained his first victory in eight starts. The White Sox took a 2-0 lead in the second inning on a walk, singles by Ron Blomberg and Tom Spencer and a double by Bill Nahorodny. Milwaukee tied it in the third but Chicago broke the tie in the third on Don Kessinger's single, an infield out and a single by Claudell Washington. Despite the defeat, the Brewers remained 5½ games behind first-place Boston.

Indians 5, Angels 1

Solo homers by Bernie Carbo and Johnny Grubb and a two-run single by Andre Thornton paced Cleveland's victory while Mike Paxton picked up the victory with 1 2/3 innings of relief from Dan Spillner.

Tigers 11, A's 2

Milt Wilcox fired a five-hitter and Tim Corcoran, Ron LeFlore and Alan Trammell drove in two runs apiece as the Tigers pummeled four Oakland pitchers for 15 hits.

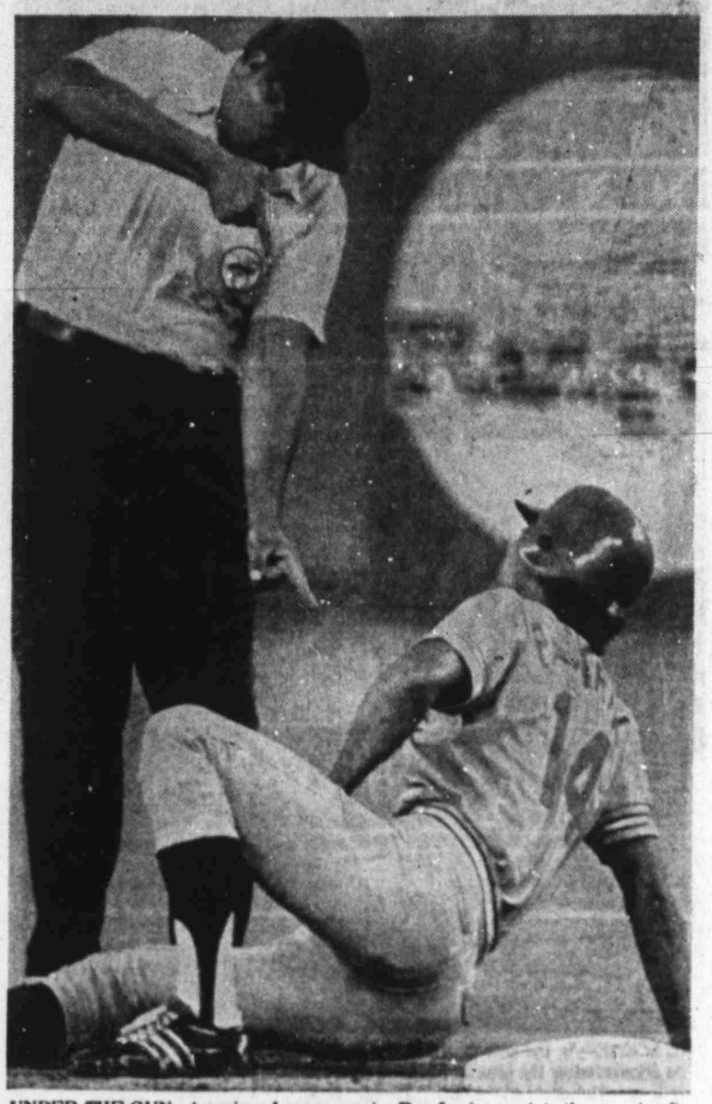

A's starter Steve Renko was upset at being lifted in the sixth inning after Steve Kemp's leadoff double with the A's trailing trailing only 2-1 and said he wants to meet with owner Charlie Finley to talk about it.

"He said he's not going to talk to us," Renko said of manager Jack McKeon. "He brings in a reliever when he comes out. He gives no explanation. When you've thrown 100 innings and have a good ERA he should at least explain why he's taking you out. . .

"It was so bad today that when Rusty Staub came up in the fourth inning, Jeff (catcher Jeff Newman) came out to talk to me. He said, 'Don't walk him or you're out of there.' He's just saying what he knows will happen, but that's a hell of a thing to think about in the fourth inning."

Mariners 4, Blue Jays 2

Leon Roberts' two-run homer in the ninth inning broke a tie after the Mariners tied the score in the seventh on Bob Robertson's solo home run. Rico Carty and Alan Ashby homered for Toronto.

UNDER THE GUN—American League umpire Ron Luciano points the accusing finger at Tom Paciorek of the Seattle Mariners, meaning that, in no uncertain terms, the man is out at second during Tuesday night's game at Toronto. (AP Laserphoto)

Lemon Takes Low-Key Path As Manager

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Bob Lemon had read most of the stories about the turmoil surrounding the New York Yankees and the various run-ins of the various characters in baseball's leading soap opera.

So before his first game as the team's manager Tuesday night, Lemon had a quiet meeting with his players.

What was said?

"Oh, it wasn't anything that would be good reading. Nothing earth-shattering," said the low-key Hall of Famer. "I tend to be lazy. It's a heck of a lot easier to have things go smoothly than to have to be on your guard all the time."

That, of course, was the atmosphere that followed the club through Monday, when Billy Martin resigned under pressure from New York management.

Lemon also had a 20-minute meeting with his staff of coaches, all of whom he said would be retained. "I just told them how I felt, my opinions on things," said Lemon.

"The players, he added, will be treated like men — as long as they let me. If they act like children, once in a while they'll get spanked."

But Lemon, who was Martin's pitching coach with the 1976 Yankees, would prefer to have things run quietly. The troubled waters appear to have calmed under the rocky Yankee cruiser, and that's fine with Lemon.

"I'm trying to come in with an open mind," said the new manager, who won 20 games or more seven times in his 13-year pitching career with the Cleveland Indians. "I have no wild plans. I'm not here to experience what the problems have been. I go by the way a person treats me — not by the way they treated anybody else."

They treated him well Tuesday night. Ron Guidry made the manager's debut a success by tossing a six-hitter for his second straight shutout as the Yankees won 4-0. It took only minutes for the phone to begin ringing in Lemon's office as he spoke with the media.

The first call came from a well-wisher and the second — to no one's surprise — came from principal owner George Steinbrenner.

"Now I can't lose them all," said Lemon into the telephone.

It was the end of an extremely long day for Lemon, who arrived from his Long Beach, Calif., home at 3 a.m., got some sleep and had a late breakfast meeting with Yankee president Al Rosen.

Lemon played with Rosen at Cleveland and managed the Kansas City Royals for three seasons under Cedric Tallis, who now is his general manager with the Yankees.

Terms of a contract have not been decided. "I don't know whether he's going to put me on a weekly, daily or monthly contract," said Lemon, who managed the Chicago White Sox last season and part of this one and was to be paid by the White Sox through the end of next year until the Yankee job came along.

"If it (the Yankee job) is interim," said Lemon, "I could just sit home and draw pretty good money (from Chicago) sitting on my butt."

Clearly, he intends to sit in the office of the Yankee manager as long as he can — even if Martin is "a tough act to follow.

"The guy won two pennants in a row, participated in two World Series and won one of them," he observed. "I don't know. To me, that's like playing behind Lou Gehrig."

LSA Sign Ups Set

Registration for the fall season in the Lubbock Soccer Association begins Saturday at the Clapp Park party house.

The soccer league is open to boys and girls age 4 to 18. The registration fee is $15 for children under 10 and $10 for those above 10-year-old.

The Clapp party house is located at 45th and Ave. U.

Rangers' Losing String Extended

ARLINGTON (AP) — Doug DeCinces walked into the Baltimore dressing room Tuesday night and was greeted by shouts of, "Horn! Horn! Horn!"

The red-faced DeCinces laughed. "Well, that's what you get when you've had your nose broken five times."

And what DeCinces gave the Texas Rangers and pitcher Doyle Alexander hurt worse than a busted beak.

He stroked two home runs, including the second grand slam of his major league career, as the Orioles nicked the Rangers 7-6 for their eighth consecutive defeat.

The homers may also have meant a spot on the bench for Alexander, who has the second worst earned run average on the Texas team. Ranger manager Billy Hunter announced he was calling up Paul Mirabelli from Tucson of the Pacific Coast League.

Besides inflicting defeat on the Rangers, DeCinces got revenge for the last time he broke his nose — against the Rangers on July 15 in Baltimore.

"I want to thank our hitting coach, Jim Frey, who changed my style in batting practice," said DeCinces. "I was turning too much and Frey got me straightened out."

DeCinces now has 15 homers for the year, which is only four below his all-time high for a season.

"I hit two low pitches out," said DeCinces. "I didn't think the grand slam ball was going out, it started out so low. I can sure tell you the last time I did it because you don't forget grand slams. I hit one in 1976 in Baltimore against Detroit."

Joe Kerrigan, making only his second start in the majors, earned his second victory against no losses although he yielded 10 hits in 5 1/3 innings. Tippy Martinez mopped up without allowing a hit to notch his fourth save of the year.

The loss by Alexander was his sixth in 13 decisions.

Alexander said, "I am 27 and I realize as much as anybody that I've been horse--. And if they don't think I can pitch for them, then maybe they'll trade me so I can pitch for someone else."

Baltimore has won 10 of 13 games since the All Star break.

Manager Earl Weaver said, "Everybody has really been chipping in. I'll tell you, DeCinces has the potential to hit 25 home runs a year. He is really starting to come into his own. And that grand slam shot he hit was something else because I thought it was too low to go out."

Ken Singleton also homered for the Orioles, while Juan Beniquez tagged a solo shot for the slumping Rangers.

Boston comes to Arlington Stadium tonight as the Rangers' disastrous home stand continues. Texas' Doc Medich, 4-5, meets Boston's Dennis Eckersley, 11-3, in the first game of the two-game series.

Expansion Plan For Local Sporting Goods Store

Cleveland Athletics announced this week plans for 4,000 sq. ft. additional warehouse space. Joe Lombard, Store Mgr. stated that due to plans for larger inventories for soccer, softball & baseball the new two story structure was needed. Work is to begin in early July at the 34th Street location between Slide Rd. & Loop 289.

Dixie Blanks Wolfforth In Finals

By SCOTT SUDDUTH
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Registering their second consectutive shutout, Lubbock's Dixie all-stars catapulted into the bidistrict playoffs with a 7-0 win over Wolfforth Tuesday night at Maxey Park's Southwest diamond.

Dixie will face the District 5 (Abilene) representive in the bidistrict round, to be held in Snyder next Saturday, beginning at 7:30 p.m.

Tuesday night, Dixie, as the home team, took the lead in the opening half of the first frame as Kevin Short scored from third base on an error by the first basemen.

Wolfforth threatened in the top of the second inning but winning hurler Chad Boykin succeeded in pitching his way out of a bases loaded jam. Wolfforth's all-stars aided the Dixie cause by leaving 11 potential runners stranded on base.

An explosive third-inning gave Dixie 4 runs and an unsurmountable lead in the ballgame.

Doubles were the key as Brent Rieger and Charlie Drigger plucked losing pitcher Steve Rodriguez for two doubles in the inning. Rieger's hit scored once and Drigger added 2 RBIs with his double. Short, the first baseman, followed with an RBI single to put the Dixie all-stars on top 7-0.

Boykin fanned six batters and allowed four hits. Short's totals for the series—including two games—were four singles, one home run and 4 RBIs.

In earlier action Tuesday, the Post defeated the Lubbock Northwest all-stars 8-2 for third place in the District 2 Tournament.

The winners posted 5 runs in the top of the fifth frame, and R.J. Greathouse was the winning pitcher.

Ponies Head For Pecos For Tourney

PECOS (Special) — Lubbock's Pony League all-stars will meet the El Paso all-stars here today at 6 p.m. to open the first round of the Regional Pony All-Star Tournament.

The Pecos all-stars will face Hereford in the nightcap contest. The winner of the double-elimination tourney will advance to the state tournament in Austin Aug. 3-5.

The Lubbock all-star team won the city championship with a 9-6 victory over the Southwest all-stars.

The Pony team played Southwest twice and Southern all-stars in a district tournament to decide the championship.

In the final win over Southwest, hurler Travis Walden fanned 14 batters, and Craig Smith and Jamie Hernandez collected home runs for the Pony all-stars.

Either Walden or Mike Reed will pitch for the Ponies in tonight's contest.

Gib Weaver is the manager and Bill Loper coaches the all-stars.

'White Shoes,' Oilers Argue At Distance

HOUSTON (AP) — Fans and friends say Billy "White Shoes" Johnson is the heart and soul of the Houston Oilers. Coach O.A. "Bum" Phillips says Johnson owes an obligation to the team.

Billy Johnson says he's expendable.

"Don't let anybody fool you, every man is expendable and that includes me," said Johnson, whose thrilling punt returns became an Oiler trademark last season. "I may wind up teaching school or going into some business venture that I wouldn't have done until after the season."

Johnson entered the fifth day of his contract holdout today, a tactic that is costing him $1,200 for every day he fails to report to the Oiler training camp at Angelo State University in San Angelo.

He says he'll remain out of camp until his contract dispute is settled, and he's prepared to accept the consequences.

"You can only take so much," said Johnson, one of the most popular Oilers in the team's history. "I guess I'm hard headed. I'd love to be in camp now, but I just can't go."

While fans and Oiler coaches bemoan the absence of the National Football League's leading punt returner, Johnson figures the Oilers will survive without him if he sits out the 1978 season because of the contract dispute.

"I'm optimistic that everything will get settled, but if they have to use other tactics this season because I'm not there, then I'm prepared to accept the consequences," said Johnson, who has gained 7,650 total yards during his Oiler career.

The Oilers broke off negotiations with Johnson Monday and said they would not resume talks until Johnson reports to camp. Phillips fined Johnson $500 daily for the first three days he missed camp.

Monday the price went up to $1,200, meaning Johnson will have to pay $5,100 if he fails to report today. It would be the largest fine in Oiler history.

Meanwhile, the Oilers continued workouts in preparation for their Aug. 5 opener against the Denver Broncos. Phillips also cut five more players, reducing the team's roster to 76.

Cut Tuesday were Chuck Sitton of Abilene Christian, Jackie Williams of Texas A&M, Thomas Williams of Angelo State, Abby Daigle of Oklahoma State and Oliver Barrett of Texas Southern.

NBC Event Start Slated For Thursday

The State NBC Tournament opens a four-day run at Mackenzie Park Thursday, and it will be difficult to pick a favorite from the eight-team field.

State NBC commissioner Dick Walker has allowed each team to add three players to its roster since completing play in the three regional tournaments, thus the unknown quality.

The Town Draw Brewers won the tournament here last Sunday, the Kerrville Kats won the meet at Kerrville, and Austin Family Life was the winner of the tourney at Brenham.

Other teams involved will be the Austin Senators, the Lubbock Z's (acting as host team), Bryan Bombers, runner-up at Brenham; Del Rio Mustangs, who finished second at Kerrville; and the Abilene Salta Bulls, who finished third here.

El Paso West Wind, which finished as runner-up to the Brewers, declined an invitation, thus Abilene got the invitation.

Action starts at 4 p.m. both Thursday and Friday. The Z's and Senators play the first game, followed at 6 p.m. by Bryan and Abilene, Del Rio and the Brewers at 8 p.m. and Austin Family Life and Kerrville at 10 p.m.

Friday, the losers will collide in the afternoon games, the winners that night.

Ticket prices will be $2 per session — four games — or $5 for a tournament pass.

There will be five games Saturday, beginning at 2 p.m., and the finals — one or two games depending on the way the tournament develops — will begin at 5 p.m. Sunday.

Martin Still In Line For Jobs

NEW YORK (AP) — If an executive was fired by General Motors, Ford and Chrysler for insubordination, do you think Volkswagen would take a chance on him?

Probably not, but the automobile industry seems to be run more rationally than the baseball world, which remains interested in Billy Martin even though the fiery manager has been canned by Minnesota, Detroit, Texas and the New York Yankees after conflicts with management.

"Owners and general managers always think they can reclaim lost souls," said Peter Bavasi, president of the Toronto Blue Jays. "That in itself is a commentary on baseball. Sometimes, because of our perceptions of the public and the media, we make decisions that are emotional and contrary to good business practices."

Bavasi was one of several baseball executives who said Tuesday that Martin's stormy past would not prevent him from having a stormy future. All the executives interviewed professed confidence in their current managers. Most of them also said they would consider one day handing Martin a lineup card to fill out.

Even Martin's knock of Yankee owner George Steinbrenner — he called him a "convicted" liar — wouldn't keep Martin from future managerial consideration.

"That wouldn't scare me off," said Bavasi. "My philosophy is to hire a good manager, give him good resources and coaches and leave him on his own to succeed or fail. I have yet to see Billy work in an organization where the free rein that he needs was given gladly.

"I don't think I'd hesitate considering Billy if we had veteran players who knew how to perform. He's the kind of manager who could bring a veteran team together. He's proven that."

Bill Veeck, principal owner of the Chicago White Sox, also thinks Martin is a top talent in search of the right situation.

"Four repetitions (firings) for much the same thing don't come out of the blue," Veeck said. "But at all those places, he came across a couple of fellows who had strong personalities themselves. That set the stage for collisions.

"If he were managing for me, I don't think it would result in head-strong confrontations."

Bavasi said Martin's intemperate remark against Steinbrenner was the result of their long-standing bad relationship. "If you have the proper management relationship," he said, "then there's no cause for employes to take pot shots."

But Bavasi agrees that a remark like Martin's blast at Steinbrenner called for extreme measures. "It had to be done, although I think the outburst came more from stress and emotion than intellect. In more pleasant surroundings I don't think it would happen. If I had an opening, I wouldn't hold that remark against him."

Brad Corbett, owner of the Texas Rangers, fired Martin in 1975 after several disputes over player transactions. Now, he says, he would hire him back — as an advisor.

"Billy and I have had our differences," Corbett said. "But we've squared them away and we're good friends now.

"I'd be interested in Martin but not as a manager. The timing's not right at the moment. I'm perfectly satisfied with our manager (Billy Hunter)."

The big thing in Martin's favor is that he's won with all four of his teams.

First 38 Just Start For Rose

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

Next please. Mr. Cobb? Step right up, sir. There's no waiting on this line. Mr. Rose will be glad to take care of you, now that he's through with Mr. Holmes.

What's that, Mr. Sisler? Don't forget you? Don't be silly. Mr. Rose knows all about you and Mr. Keeler, too. He may have overlooked Mr. Dahlen, but you can be certain he's well aware of Mr. DiMaggio.

Day-by-day, game-by-game, Pete Rose advances through the dusty pages of baseball history with a monumental hitting streak that now is the fourth best in modern major league history. He has hit safely in 38 straight games. Say that slowly, thirty-eight straight games and the man refuses to stop.

"I'm just starting now," he said Tuesday night after shattering Tommy Holmes' modern record of 37 games. "I've got half the building built, I've got to build the rest of it now."

The first half ended when he ripped a third-inning single — the first of his three hits against New York Mets right-hander Craig Swan — to push his streak to 38 games. That erased Holmes from the record books and left the path clear to some of baseball's biggies — Ty Cobb's 40-game streak in 1911 and the 41-game string pieced together by George Sisler in 1922.

"I'm glad Cobb's 40 and Sisler's 41 are in reach now," Rose said. "That give me something to shoot for."

Those two streaks sit like guardians at the gate of one of baseballs most cherished marks — the amazing major league record 56-game streak set by Joe DiMaggio in 1941. In between are two pre-1900 players — Willie Keeler, who hit in 44 straight games in 1897 and Bill Dahlen, who had a 42-game streak in 1894, but those two are more or less shrugged off by baseball statisticians, who prefer to begin their serious counting with the turn of the century.

Rose has given fair warning to the legendary names that lie ahead. "I'm swinging the bat good," he said. "I'll let you know when I'm not."

The streaks aren't the only things on Rose's mind these days as he commands the attention of the entire baseball world.

"I want to keep hitting the ball good and getting on base," he said. "I'm 10 points from the batting lead now, it would be nice to win the batting title at 37 then nobody could say I'm old."

Rose has a plan to reach his goals. "I have to stay aggressive at the plate, get the bat out in front," he said. "That's the secret of hitting. That and bearing down. I try to get a hit every time I come to bat. I think I bear down more than anybody. I have to. Sometimes when the score is 15-2 in the eighth inning, it's hard to do."

Rose believes in goals and that's why he likes the idea of Cobb and Sisler sitting up there ahead of him. Before Holmes and the NL mark, the goal was to keep his hitting streak alive at the All-Star break.

"I wanted to have a 25-game hitting streak at the All-Star game," he said. "That's good. Even Howard Cosell couldn't mess that up."

Once that was accomplished, there was Holmes to deal with. Now Rose looks ahead to Cobb. He's like a barber, welcoming new customers to his chair.

DiMaggio's record is 18 games away now that the schedule is on the soft side, with only a four-game series against Philadelphia interrupting a steady diet of Atlanta and San Diego following today's game against New York. Weather and opposing pitchers permitting, he could tie DiMaggio Sunday, Aug. 13 in San Diego and break it the following night in Pittsburgh.

You're next, Mr. Cobb. Just a trim you say? Why certainly, sir.

Thurman Munson played in ten World Series games in 1976 and 1977 and hit safely in each contest.

hit it. He'd have to earn it."

Bagby threw three fast balls — two balls and a strike. The fourth pitch was a low fast ball, and DiMaggio hit a bouncer to shortstop Lou Boudreau.

"Not as easy as it sounds," said Bagby. "Just before the ball got to Lou, it hit a rock or something and took a weird bounce. Boudreau caught the ball up around his shoulder, shuffled it to Ray Mack at second and Mack threw to first for a double play.

And DiMaggio almost got another chance in that fateful game. The Indians scored twice in the bottom of the ninth and were trailing 4-3 when Roy Weatherly, on third, tried to score on a tap to the mound. He was thrown out at the plate and Keltner then hit a fly ball for the third out.

"If Weatherly hadn't tried to score, he would have scored on Keltner's fly ball and the game owuld have been tied and DiMaggio would certainly have come up again," Bagby said.

Mentioned Briefly

BASEBALL

NEW YORK — Pete Rose of the Cincinnati Reds set a modern National League hitting streak record of 38 consecutive games with a third-inning single to left field against New York Mets right-hander Craig Swan. Rose broke the record of 37 set by Tommy Holmes in 1945 and now holds the fifth longest hitting streak in major league baseball history.

TENNIS

HILVERSUM, Netherlands — Tom Okker of the Netherlands and Corrado Barazzutti of Italy won their first-round men's singles matches in the Dutch Open Tennis Championships. Okker ousted Joaquim Loyo Mayo of Mexico 6-3, 6-2 and Barazzutti eliminated Belus Prajou of Chile 6-4, 6-2. In other matches, Bob Carmichael of Australia beat Rolf Tung of the Netherlands 6-4, 5-7, 6-2; Balasz Taroczy of Hungary defeated Louk Sanders of the Netherlands 3-6, 7-5, 6-1; Mark Edmondson of Australia downed Eric Deblicker of France 7-5, 6-1; Peter Elter of West Germany topped Junie Chatman of the United States 7-5, 6-1; Patrick Proisy of France disposed of John Fever of Great Britain 6-0, 2-6, 6-2; Buster Mottram of Great Britain whipped Ben Bishop of the United States 6-0, 6-1; and Uli Pinner of West Germany turned back Rolf Gehring of West Germany 6-2, 7-5.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Top-seeded Brian Gottfried headed the group of ranked players that scored first-round victories in the ninth annual $175,000 Louisville International Tennis Classic. Gottfried beat unseeded Trey Waltke 2-6, 6-3, 6-1. No. 4 seed Roscoe Tanner advanced to the second round by beating Peter Pearson 7-6, 6-2; fifth-seeded Harold Solomon made it to the second round by defeating Ricardo Cano of Argentina 3-6, 6-0, 6-3. Also advancing were sixth-seeded Dick Stockton, No. 7 seed Wojtek Fibak of Poland, No. 8 seed John Alexander of Australia, 10th-seeded Jaime Fillol of Chile, 11th-seeded Stan Smith, 13th-seeded Phil Dent of Australia and No. 16 Victor Amaya. Second-seeded Eddie Dibbs defeated unseeded Paul McNamee 6-2, 6-2 and No. 3 seed Manuel Orantes of Spain defeated South Africa's John Yuill 6-3, 6-3.

TRACK AND FIELD

ALGIERS — Henry Rono led a Kenya's sweep of the first three places in the 3,000-meter steeplechase at the African Games. Rono won in a time of 8 minutes, 15.8 seconds. Kenyan James Munyala took second place, while Kiprofich Roho finished third. Henry Rono also won the 10,000-meter race in 27:58.8.

2,100 Athletes Set For Sports Festival

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — A massive, ambitious new adventure, aimed at an eventual improvement of America's sliding Olympic fortunes, gets underway Thursday at a half-dozen locations around this Rocky Mountain city.

It's called the National Sports Festival and is sponsored by the U.S. Olympic Committee. In all, some 2,100 athletes will compete in 26 sports in the four-day affair that ends Sunday.

U.S. Olympic Committee officials frankly admit that not all sports feature the best this country has to offer. But they will be in the future. Plans are to make this an annual event — excepting Olympic years — and the United States' very best athletes will compete.

"For example, next year, the Sports Festival will serve as the qualifying event for many of our Pan-Am Games teams," said Baaron Pittinger, director of special events for the USOC and the man in charge of organizing this complex affair.

That does not hold true for the inaugural event.

"Essentially, we told the various sports federations to send us the best they could," one Festival spokesman said. "In some cases, because of the time element, they couldn't send the best. A lot of good track athletes, for example, already were committed to events in Europe."

There also were problems in swimming and basketball, in which previous commitments and-or federation rules prohibited participation by the top performers.

"Actually, what we have is a practice, training session for the athletes, as well as a screening process for coaches and officials," a spokesman said.

"I won't kid you," Pittinger said. "We've got problems. We'll have problems. But that's to be expected in a first-time situation. I'm sure it will all be more than adequate."

The competition is on a somewhat contrived basis: teams representing four sections of the country, East, South, West and Midwest.

But the competition figures to be very, very good, particularly in boxing and figure skating. Track and field will draw more than normal interest with the return of Al Oerter. He's the only man to win four Olympic gold medals in the same event and, at age 41, he's decided to try a comeback in the discus. He's been throwing up to 209 feet in practice.

Six national AAU champions are in the extremely strong boxing field. Among the standouts are welterweight Roger Leonard, the older brother of 1976 Olympic champ Sugar Ray Leonard. He very well could face Clinton Jackson, a Nashville, Tenn., deputy sheriff, in the finals.

Stampeders Ties British Columbians

VANCOUVER (AP) — Cyril McFall's fourth field goal of the game, with just two seconds left, gave the Calgary Stampeders a come-from-behind 19-19 tie with the British Columbia Lions in a penalty-filled Canadian Football League game Tuesday night before 26,643 fans.

Quarterback John Hufnagel, formerly of Penn State, drove the Stampeders from the Calgary 49 to the B.C. 25 in the last minute, hitting Tom Forzani with two key passes and James Sykes with another to set up McFall's 32-yard tying kick.

Calgary's only touchdown came on a 10-yard pass by Hufnagel to Willie Armstead in the first quarter. McFall converted for a 13-point night.

Lion quarterback Jerry Tagge, formerly of Nebraska, threw touchdown passes of 14 yards to Al Charuk and 15 yards to Terry Bailey, while Lui Passaglia converted both, kicked a field goal and two singles for seven points.

Mets Win Over Rose, Reds

By The Associated Press

"I'm over halfway there," said Pete Rose and few doubted he could attain the other half.

Actually, Rose is 38-56th of the way to Joe DiMaggio's major league record for hitting in 56 consecutive games. The Cincinnati third baseman extended his hitting string to 38 straight games Tuesday with a third-inning single off New York Mets pitcher Craig Swan. He broke the National League record of 37 games, set by Tommy Holmes in 1945.

Rose had three hits for the night off Swan, who gave up just four more safeties to the Reds in hurling the Mets to a 9-2 triumph.

While Rose was a one-man gang for the Reds, the Mets had everybody hitting. They scored five runs in the fourth inning on five hits, including an RBI double by John Stearns, a run-scoring single by Doug Flynn and a two-run single by Len Randle.

Giants 3, Cardinals 2

San Francisco won the type of game that has boosted them to the top of the NL West. Blue, 14-4, carried a five-hit shutout into the ninth, but two-out RBI singles by pinch-hitter Roger Freed and Mike Tyson put the Cardinals ahead 2-1.

But Larry Herndon singled with one out in the bottom of the ninth off Bob Forsch, 9-10, and Mike Ivie pinch-hit a game-winning two-run homer.

"When I came into the clubhouse Vida came up and hugged me," said Ivie. "The team feeling around here and the love that these guys have means so much more than hitting the homer."

San Francisco's Jack Clark extended his hitting streak to 26 games with a double in the fourth inning.

"Pete Rose got three hits and they lost," said Clark, who leads the NL in hitting. "I got one and we won. I'm pulling for Rose and I'm happy for him, but the only thing that really counts is whether you win or lose."

Braves 4, Phillies 0

Tommy Boggs, recalled from the minor leagues two weeks ago after posting a 1-5 record and a 6.75 ERA for the Braves earlier this season, blanked the Phillies on four hits.

"I was sent down last year by the Rangers," said Boggs, who came to Atlanta in a three-team deal prior to this season, "and I had the wrong attitude. I was upset and I pitched that way. This year I got my head together when they sent me down. I was determined to work hard and come back."

Biff Pocoroba hit a three-run homer to support Boggs. Regulars Greg Luzinski and Bake McBride sat out the contest for Philadelphia.

Astros 3, Expos 2

Jose Cruz homered with two outs in the ninth to tie the game, then Art Howe singled home Rafael Landestoy in the 13th to win it for Houston.

Ken Forsch, 6-4, picked up his fourth victory in the last 12 games.

Padres 2, Pirates 1

Dave Winfield's one-out single scored Gene Richards from second in the ninth inning to lift San Diego over Pittsburgh. Richards singled for his third hit of the game leading off the ninth and advanced on a sacrifice. Pirates relief ace Kent Tekulve walked Oscar Gamble intentionally and Winfield then got his hit.

Dodgers 3, Cubs 1

Tommy John made only his second relief appearance of the season and picked up his first save by retiring the Cubs in the ninth. Rick Rhoden, 8-5, was the winner for Dodgers and Rick Reuschel, 9-8, lost.

Davey Lopes led off the first for Los Angeles with his 11th home run, matching his career high. Reggie Smith doubled in a run in the fifth, giving him 16 RBI in his last nine games.

PAST AND PRESENT—As Pete Rose, the new National League consecutive-game hitting record holder, tips his batting helmet to the crowd, he is congratulated by Tommy Holmes, the former record holder, at Shea Stadium Tuesday night. After Rose set the record by getting a single in his 38th straight game against the New York Mets, the game was stopped, and Holmes, who is employed in the Mets' front office, could take part in the celebration. Buffalo's Receivers Run Different Routes

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — For several years, the passing attack of the Buffalo Bills has resembled a one-fisted boxer — quarterback Joe Ferguson to wide receiver Bob Chandler whenever the situation called for the Sunday punch.

Chandler caught 55 passes in 1975, 61 in 1976 and 60 last year, leading all wide receivers in the National Football League. But the former Southern Cal standout says the glitter of personal honors was jaded by two straight losing seasons.

This season, Bills' coaches and scouts anticipated placing another outstanding pass-snagger in the team's pro set to relieve some of the attention Chandler draws when he starts downfield.

There are signs the hope might be realized, but not by the player everyone had in mind.

If free agent Randy Simmrin, also a USC product, makes the squad and wins a starting job, he will complete a rags-to-riches story. But gifted Dan Fulton of Nebraska-Omaha is writing the story in reverse.

Norm Pollom, Buffalo's director of scouting operations, considered it a major coup when the Bills got Fulton in the third round of the draft. "I thought he was one of the best in the nation," he said of Fulton, who caught 67 passes for 1,581 yards in a spectacular 1976 season which won him all-America first-team honors.

However, Fulton is a holdout whose refusal to report to training camp has puzzled and angered coaches who awaited him.

Reached by telephone in Omaha, Fulton said he had not lost the desire to play in the NFL, but declined to comment on the hangup with the Bills.

He said he had no agent and was dealing directly with the front office.

"I work on my techniques all the time," he said. "I'm staying active, but I can't say right now when I'll reach an agreement."

Meanwhile, Simmrin, who was passed over in the 1978 draft despite a three-year starting role with the powerful Trojans, has been sensational in the first two weeks of camp.

Rams Lose Four Players To Walkouts

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Los Angeles Rams have lost four top players, who walked out of camp, in just five days of preseason training for the team's National Football League veterans.

Doug France, a starter at offensive tackle, is the latest to leave in a reported contact dispute, departing Monday night. A contract renegotiation hassle is behind wide receiver Ron Jessie's absence from camp for five days. All the absentees face fines of $500 per day.

Two defensive starters, linebacker Isaiah Robertson and cornerback Monte Jackson, also have left camp. Robertson was quoted as saying he needed "to get my head together" when he left the Rams' training camp at California State University, Fullerton, on Monday.

After the Rams sent Robertson to see a doctor about some headaches Monday, the Los Angeles Times reported the doctor prescribed a week's rest.

Rams coach George Allen said Tuesday he still hadn't heard from team doctors concerning Robertson.

Jackson left last Friday, and the Rams reported he was considering quitting footballalthough he might beseeking a trade.

"This is very disappointing. I might say it's a unique experience for me," said Allen, who is returning for his second round of coaching at Los Angeles after spending 1971-1977 with the Washington Redskins.

"In seven years at Washington, no one walked out," Allen said, "No question about it. This isn't healthy."

The Rams had six holdouts during preseason training a year ago and tried to trade one, linebacker Jack Reynolds. That trade was later voided and Reynolds rejoined the team in midseason.

"The irony is, a player does himself a disservice by walking out," Rams general manager Don Klosterman said.

HCC Tourney Begins Today

Hillcrest Country Club's women club golf tournament starts a three-day run this morning, but neither 1977 champion will be on hand.

Patty Janes won the 18-hole championship and Jackie Fry the nine-hole flight a year ago. However, they will not be defending.

Play begins at 8:30 a.m. The 18-hole match play golfers will begin on the No. 1 tee at Hillcrest, the nine-hole flight starting on the back nine.

Odds Long For Longshots

WILMINGTON, Ohio (AP) — Just because no rookie free agent has made the Cincinnati Bengals since Ken Johnson bucked the odds in 1971 isn't stopping longshots Gary Weinlein and James Edwards.

Neither has played college ball. But both come from semi-pro leagues.

Weinlein, a 25-year-old construction worker from Albany, N.Y., and Edwards, 26, brother of Bengals defensive tackle Eddie Edwards, never made it past the ninth grade.

General manager Paul Brown calls Weinlein "a tough nut from the beer leagues."

"I played in a beer league when I was 14," said the defensive safety. "All the other guys were 18 and older. My brother was 20. No pads, no helmets. When I get pads on now, I feel safe," Brown recalled.

Weinlein prepared for his shot with the Bengals by running sprints downhill with a 25-pound vest and wears "Rocky" t-shirts.

Edwards, whose parents separated when he was eight, has spent his life helping support the family until his mother was killed in an auto accident two years ago.

"I would have been here two years ago, probably made all-pro," said the 227-pound Edwards, who is seeking employment as a defensive end.

"He's catching on," Eddie said of brother James. "He needs a little help with his technique on pass rush. I guess he's not doing as much as they would like but you can see he's got the ability and quickness."

"If it doesn't work out here I feel I can try out at least until I'm 32 or 33, until someone gives me a contract to play," said James. He played the last two seasons for the championship Fort Lauderdale Rattlers.

Weinlein had an unsuccessful try out last year with the New York Giants.

Cowboys Pick Up Pace

Avalanche-Journal News Services

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. — Dallas coach Tom Landry pushed the Super Bowl champion Cowboys through two hard-hitting workouts Tuesday in preparation for the National Football League team's upcoming intrasquad game Saturday.

No. 1 draft choice Larry Bethea from Michigan State put in two practices for the first time since the early days of rookie camp when he suffered an ankle injury. Observers said Bethea appeared nearly recovered from the injury.

At the same time, offensive lineman Tom Rafferty, the Cowboys starting right guard last season, and Jim Eidson, a third-year tackle, missed the workouts with leg problems.

Rafferty strained his right calf Monday, and it stiffened up during Tuesday's practice and kept him out of action. Eidson, who is trying to come back from an idle 1977 season when he had knee surgery, had fluid on his injured left knee and had to sit out practice.

The hitting at Tuesday's workouts was fierce.

"The time for sparring is over and the hitting has begun," reported veteran linebacker D.D. Lewis after fullback Robert Newhouse's "cut block" sent linebacker Thomas Henderson flying through the air.

Landry indicated the Cowboys would not begin offensive and defensive preparations for the Aug. 5 exhibition opener against San Francisco until Sunday, following the intrasquad match. That game will be played at Texas Stadium.

Laotian Rebels Fight Vietnamese

By ALAN DAWSON

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — A Western scholar who spent more than a week recently with Laotian rebels said the rebels' small armed bands move with virtual impunity through the Laos countryside.

Their largest threat, he said in an interview, comes from thousands of troops from Vietnam who are the dominant force in the southern panhandle of the southeast Asian country.

In fact, he said, rebel leaders maintain their chief goal is to drive the Vietnamese from their land and establish a nontotalitarian government.

Intelligence sources in Bangkok estimate at least 30,000 Vietnamese soldiers are garrisoned in southern Laos, most of them targeted against Laotian resistance forces.

Villagers, according to the Western source, are told frequently that rice is often commandeered by government authorities to help feed the Vietnamese.

"It is explained that the Vietnamese are in Laos to help the government," he said.

Laotian peasants are forced to give up all but 100 kilograms (220 pounds) per person of their rice harvest, he said, with some villages cut to 90 kilograms per year. There is no compensation.

Both the rebels and the source criticized an American decision to donate $5 million worth of rice to Laos this year, along with continued United Nations food shipments.

They maintained Laotian authorities should first attempt to feed their own people — not Vietnamese soldiers — before asking for international aid.

The western scholar's report tends to confirm that by an American who visited resistance forces in the southern panhandle of Laos earlier this year.

He said his sojourn with a band of anti-government insurgents was possible because of lax border surveillance by Laotian authorities. Thai border patrols, he said, were highly effective by contrast.

The source said he found rebels had good morale, and had enough food — donated by the local population — and ammunition. Medicine, however, was in critical supply.

Members of the insurgency are a mixed bag of former rightist and Pathet Lao soldiers, led by former officers of the anti-Communist Laotian government army. "There is another group of former neutralists active in the same area," he said, with similar goals of ending Vietnamese domination in Laos.

In at least two hamlets he personally visited, the Communist-appointed village administration supported the insurgency, the source said.

Contrary to popular belief, the scholar said he found no indication of any foreign support for the rebels. Rebel leaders said they had no aid from the American CIA or Thai officials.

There is no authoritative source available to give an indication of how many Laotian rebels are openly working against the Laotian government. But persistent reports indicate the number is in the thousands.

Insurgents in the panhande attempt to ambush small Vietnamese patrols, while staying clear of larger sweeps aimed at wiping them out, the scholar said.

Arms and ammunition are obtained in the ambushes, and by theft and sales by rebel supporters among the population, he said.

He asked to remain anonymous because the Thai government frowns on contact with the rebels. Thai foreign policy calls for improving relations with the Communist Vientiane administration.

The source said the rebels move mostly at night, using both permanent and temporary base camps to rest during the day. Ambushes are usually carefully planned, three-day operations.

A small group with which he was travelling was ambushed by the Vietnamese soldiers, but there were no casualties.

A major source of worry for the rebels is the lack of foreign support, the scholar said.

He said it was possible that with Vietnam-China relations at a low ebb, it was possible Chinese advisers might contact the insurgents to give support, although he saw no specific signs of such a move by Peking.

Javits Claims Bill Will Damage GOP

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Republican Party would be courting political disaster in 1980 if it makes the Kemp-Roth tax-cut proposal the centerpiece of its platform, GOP Sen. Jacob Javits warns. The Republican National Committee has already endorsed the measure by Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., and Sen. William Roth Jr., R-Del., and urged GOP candidates to make it their major issue.

The bill proposes a plan to trim federal taxes by 33 percent in three years. Javits called the measure "opportunistic" and said it would not solve the nation's economic problems.

Posing For Photo Stumps Writer

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Our promotion people have asked me to supply a new photograph of myself to keep up with the changing times. It seems the old high school graduation picture is losing credibility among some editors.

"At 50," said George Orwell, "every man has the face he deserves."

Mulligan's Stew

I don't know what I did to deserve this one, which an Army psychologist down at the draft board once described as "pithecanthropoid," except he wrote it on the line marked "religion."

I looked the word up in the dictionary and there was a line drawing of a skull grinning out of a lantern jaw over the caption: "extinct genus of apelike men of the Pleistocene epoch of Java."

I didn't find out whether he rated intellectually ahead of Cro-Magnon Man or Neanderthal Man, also grinning out from the page at me from raw jawbones full of teeth, because frankly I didn't want to know.

This time I thought maybe I would have a picture taken of me like the one of Truman Capote on a recent cover of the New York Times Magazine. It certainly was an eye-catching photo.

Capote is standing there in a flowing white smock, ankle-length with long sleeves and a V-neck, almost like a wedding gown except it is made of some kind of mattress covering. Cambric, I think they call it, although my expertise in yard goods is limited to canvas I once bought for a patio awning that never got put up and Dacron sails for a boat I sold at the end of the season.

Anyhow, Capote has his hands folded behind his back and he is staring out serene and soulful from beneath the broad brim of a sombrero, or maybe a hat he borrowed from Bella Abzug.

The pose is all the more striking because he is standing in weeds up to his armpits. I couldn't tell where the picture was taken, but the article said Truman Capote lives in United Nations Plaza, a very posh place that evidently has let the lawn get even more out of hand than ours. Unless, of course, the photo session took place on Fire Island, where Capote often spends the summer, or down on the Mississippi Gulf Coast, the setting for so many of his early works and boyhood reminiscences.

I couldn't help placing Truman Capote in the context of Thomas Hood's famous lines:

"... breast-high amid the corn,
Clasped by the golden light of morn,
Like the sweetheart of the sun,
Who many a glowing kiss had won."

Or maybe Keats, comparing the nightingale's sad song to the biblical Ruth, homesick and in tears, "amid the alien corn." Except Truman, with that suggestion of a smile or maybe a smirk almost forming on his lipis, looked more like a recently kissed sweetheart of the sun than anyone lost in a cornfield.

Being in the column-writing business, however, I decided it might be best to avoid any associations with corn. Next, I thought I might have my picture taken brooding out over a typewriter through a thin veil of cigarette smoke, after the manner of Norman Mailer or Noel Coward on a book jacket. The trouble is I only smoke an occasional cigar on important anniversaries and occasions of state (meaning, when someone gives me one), and a cigar always makes you look like a ward-heeling politician or, if your suit is new, a bank director peering down from the board room on another real estate closing.

Since I covered quite a few wars for The Associated Press in Asia, Africa and the Middle East, the promotion people suggested something in a jeep or getting off a helicopter. There is one of me in a jeep, taken in Da Nang, except there are four or five chorus girls in miniskirts from the Bob Hope show also riding along.

That picture was difficult enough to explain at home the first time around, and I don't care to go into it again, since few people really appreciate the sacrifices correspondents have to make for a story. I could have gone out and covered the heavy action that day, maybe made a brace of front pages if we got into some real bang-bang, instead of obliging the editor by interviewing those dull show people.

There is also an action shot of me landing on the deck of the aircraft carrier Kitty Hawk, somewhere in the South China Sea, only I don't look too combat-ready. I got airsick on the flight out through some monsoon rains and that jolting landing on the deck didn't help any, hence the slight greenish hue to my complexion and the dreamy "never-again" look in my eyes.

I also have a picture taken of me with the Shah of Iran at that fabulous party he gave for all the crowned heads of Europe to celebrate the 2,500th birthday of the Persian Empire. Just one problem there, a waiter with a tray of caviar (golden Caspian, the absolute best) has blocked out part of my face and the shah has turned his head momentarily to chat with Princess Anne up on a camel beneath a parasol that unfortunately shades her royal features and the whole thing is a bit out of focus on account of that glaring desert sunlight.

The same luck held when I had that private audience with the pope. The light was bad in the papal apartments, and the 300 other pilgrims at the private audience kept pushing in front of me so that my face is partially obscured by a Swiss guard's halbred and a lady from Boston's plastic replica of the Pieta, which she held up for a blessing.

All in all, the old high school portrait has a lot to recommend: fresh faced, eager, eternally youthful. Almost in focus, too.

Book Gives Children Summer Activities

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
United Press International Writer

Any place in America these days you can spot the Moms of small to medium school kids: they're grown women who, by the end of July, are near the end of their rope.

It's a common seasonal strain caused by having the kids on the scene seven days a week. All day.

And by mid-July every year, the Moms are out of rainy day fun ideas; the kids are bored with treehouses, lemonade stands, and neighborhood carnivals (once you've been to one you've seen them all).

There may be help in a book just out — "Kids' America" (Workman, $6.95) by Steven Caney, tinkerer, inventor, acturer at the Harvard University Graduate School of Business and other high places, friend of kids and designer of the Boston Children's Museum.

The book tells boys and girls how to take a lot of things from what's around, reaches into the attics of America and shares secrets found there about play, first aid, recipes. And it explains such things us thinking caps, tells how to run a frog-jumping contest, instructs in the tricky art of ventriloquism.

With help like that, Mom might last until school opens.

"Everything in the book was tested by kids," Caney, of Carlisle, Mass., said in an interview.

The testers included boys and girls in the Carlisle public schools and at Sea Pines Academy, Hilton Mead, S.C.

Recipes include those for candles, soap, the medicul lotions and potions out of America's past include notions about how to cure hiccups, make warts vanish, treat insect bites, stings, bangs, bruises, poison ivy, and other kid-type ills.

Under "Guess What" are how to make a hex sign for your home or a four-poster canopy bed. If you live in a drought area, there are directions for dowsing for water.

The book addresses boys and girl's as nature's pioneers — by relating the ways children since Colonial times have used ingenuity, inspiration and the materials at hand to build, experiment, get the work done, to celebrate with all sorts of hijinks.

A few of the lotions, potions and strange potions came from Indians. Caney reminds kids (and Moms), however, "If you have a persistent problem you should see a doctor. They know a whole lot more today."

A sampling of remedies from early America:

— Poison ivy: Rub the affected part with the inside of a banana peel.

— Freckles: Collect a cup of rainwater which drips from the roof. Add to it a squeeze of lemon juice and 10 raisins. Stir the mixture every day for nine days, then use it to wash the freckles away.

— Hiccups: Have someone stare you in the eye and dare you to hiccup, or hold an icecube against the lobe of your right ear.

— Warts: Put a piece of raw bacon on the wart and keep it there for one day. Or each night before going to bed, rub wart with a fresh slice of potato. Or put a paperbag over the hand with the wart. The person who removes the bag will get your wart, or so superstition says.

For really rainy days there are sound effects to practice, the kind used in the early days of radio. For just hot, humid days, there's a section on hobo language that any kid, once mastering, can use to write secret messages to a pal willing to learn same.

For the gourmets among the kids, there are construction plans, complete with drawing, for making a one-pound submarine sandwich.

And, of course, cleaning up the kitchen after doing that will also help them busy.

Of course.

Examiner's Report Due On Rate Hike

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A hearing examiner's report is expected within a month on the application of Lone Wolf Electric Cooperative Inc. for a rate increase within Mitchell, Nolan, Fisher, Scurry, Borden and Howard counties.

The co-op is seeking an increase of $125,000, or 13.7 per cent, the PUC reports.

The PUC staff is supporting the proposed increase.

The proposed rates would consist of a $7.35 per month service charge and a $0.02 per kilowatt hour energy charge.

Lone Wolf has 3,260 members, the PUC says.

BALANCE

A textbook is a necessary part of classroom instruction, but it can't possibly cover an event or discovery that has developed in the past 24 hours.

Many teachers have found they can utilize a newspaper as a source for information not yet available in the textbook, thus providing a balance between yesterday and today.

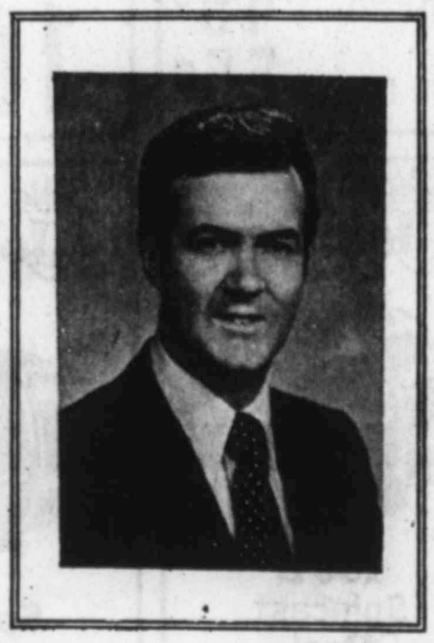

If you're a teacher, you can find out how to put balance in your classroom, by attending Avalanche-Journal's 7th Annual "Living Textbook Conference", to be held August 8th, on the campus of Texas Tech University.

Racing Yacht Set To Break Records

ROCKLAND, Maine (AP) — The 92-foot ketch Whitehawk, believed to be the largest ocean racing yacht built in 40 years, is set to begin the quest for two sailing records.

The sleek, $1 million-plus yacht was built for land developer Phil Long of Santa Monica, Calif. Long plans to try to shatter the speed records for crossing the Atlantic and for sailing from New York to San Francisco around Cape Horn. The latter mark, 89 days, was set by the clipper ship Flying Cloud some 125 years ago. The Whitehawk was set for launching Monday after three years of construction.

CBS Show Depicts 'Comic Era'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Better close that slow leak under your nose before I vulcanize it," the guy snarls. He's told: "I'll put so many lumps on you, you'll think you've got a skin full of teabags."

Yes, it's a film clip of Jack Benny and Fred Allen, close friends, in their famous "feud." And it's one of the best bits in "Funny Business," an oddly uneven CBS special airing tonight.

Narrated by Walter Matthau, made by film critic Richard Schickel, it uses some 100 film clips in its two-hour tour of the greats of movie comedy in the 1930s and 1940s.

It displays the Marx Brothers, Mae West, W.C. Fields, Laurel and Hardy, Abbott and Costello, Bing Crosby, Bob Hope, and samples of two ace comedy directors, Ernst Lubitch and Preston Sturges.

What it tries to show, in Matthau's words, is that with the advent of talk in movies, word-fun erupted in films and "the result was the richest comic era in the history of the movies."

Alas, the trouble with any look-back show like this is you often find yourself grumbling at the maker's use or choice of old film clips. We plead guilty to such grumbling here.

A few excerpts simply run too long, such as one, with a proper gentleman and a proper lady that seeks to show how Lubitch satirized amour but "always honored the romantic spirit."

It's slow and only mildly funny. You may wish Schickel had dropped it and opted for a shorter, livelier segment.

No problem though, with his Mae West study. The venerable sexbomb was thought quite racy in the '30s. But as Matthau notes, she "blew away a lot of the old Victorian attitudes about sex."

A fine sample of her famed one-liners is exhibited. Such as when a fortune-teller predicts "a change of position" for her. She raises an eyebrow and inquires, "Sitting or reclining?"

The Abbott-Costello piece, including their "Who's On First" bit, features a mild defense of their broad style. The case is weak.

But there's grand fun throughout the show's look at W.C. Fields as boozer, con man, card cheat, pool shark and victim of tots.

Watch for the clip in which Fields, as a store owner, gamely tries to cope with an old blind man who bumbles about, breaking things. It sounds cruel, but isn't. It's only mighty, mighty funny.

So is the clip where Fields, his neck in a noose, is asked if he has any last wishes, and drawls, "Yasss, I'd like to see Paris before I die."

The Hope-Crosby segment, with bits from their "Road" films, is okay, but runs too long, and not all the best bits are in.

And I wish there'd been more than a wild Jack Benny broadcast, his too-brief "feud" scene with Allen, and a lengthier study of Hope in the show's examination of radio's impact on movie comedy.

Oh, well, even though flawed, "Funny Business" has enough guaranteed belly-laughs to make it a fun time for viewers tonight.

Television Critic Raps NBC's Midday Show

By JAY SHARBUTT

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Reports on sunburn and fear of open spaces. A taste comparison. A denial of a gossip columnist's item. A Chevy Chase review of a review of his first film, "Foul Play."

Such was Monday's debut of "America Alive," NBC's new midday talk-and-information series, hosted in New York by Jack Linkletter. It seemed a one-hour effort to beat America's brains to powder.

Example: At the start, arts critic David Sheehan said he'll be "doing something other critics never do" — let those in film and TV shows he reviews respond then and there to said reviews.

Linkletter, who smiled a lot, called David "our rather blunt critic." He hoped Chase liked his review because Chevy was "going to be with him, kind of breathing down his neck."

Both critic's neck and star's breath were at the show's West Coast branch, outdoors at a restaurant near Burbank.

David faulted "Foul Play" for giving Chevy some stilted dialogue and not fully using the star's comedy style. Then Jack asked Chevy whether he thought this a fair review.

Chevy, who'd accidentally spilled coffee on David's script, said the review was "good," mugged slightly and got a laugh. Then Jack said he'd seen the movie and offered his own assessment.

"I think David's being too tough," said he, calling the movie's suspense parts "just super."

It just struck me: This amounts to three reviews. I am going on the wagon if this keeps up.

In time, a New York studio audience was allowed to grill Chevy. One inquired of his sex life, another of his secret fantasies. Co-host Bruce Jenner, the ex-Olympian, also checked in.

Jenner was there to report he would be seen today interviewing Miss Universe in Mexico. He also got to meet Chase.

In time, this gave way to "Gossip Check," wherein Virginia Graham said she'd gotten a nice note from gossip columnist Liz Smith. Then she proceeded to deny an item she said Smith reported.

Citing "my source," she said it was not true a Miss Barbara Howar of Washington, D.C., and a Hamilton Jordan of the White House "were having a hot and heavy you-know-what."

She also said it is not so that Bianca Jagger's latest beau — I missed his name — is plump and losing his hair.

Later, consumerist David Howorwitz ran a five-person taste test of butter vs. margarine. It was to check those TV ads where shoppers always pick margarine, then express surprise it wasn't butter.

Here, butter won 4-1. Whereupon Horowitz, without citing brand names or specific commercials, said he'd like to have those ads "show us the people who do not pick the (margarine) product."

A bit lightweight, this. But then, the first "America Alive" was so light it may be a new helium substitute. All that held it in place Monday was 24 commercials, including one for Parkay margarine where, it now can be told, "the flavor says, 'Butter.'"

Cher's Mother Makes Debut

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The crowd in the the Backlot Theater came to its feet in a standing ovation when Georgia Holt completed her final song in the dark, intimate nightclub.

The houselights brightened to reveal that most of the applause and shouts of approval were coming from a table in the center of the room occupied by Cher Bono Allman and her sister, actress Georganne LaPiere.

They were cheering their mother, Georgia, making her singing debut at age 51.

Well, not exactly a debut. Beginning at age 7, Georgia drifted around the country singing with her father during the depression years.

Because her father, Roy Crouch, could not afford an automobile, father and daughter hitch-hiked from city to city, playing third-rate, flyblown gin mills and sleeping in fleabag hotels.

Georgia last sang in the Manila Bar and Grill in Scranton, Pa., as a single. She was 17 and Cher was 7 months old. The pay was $75 a week.

Georgia was to be married and divorced six times in all, rearing Cher and Georganne as best she could working as a movie extra, stunt driver, cocktail waitress and model. She managed to keep a roof over their heads.

Now here she was, singing again almost 35 years later. Georgia is tall, slender and fair skinned. Her hair is light brown with blondish streaks. Many men would say she is prettier than either of her daughters.

She took bows in the spotlight of the Backlot Theater, acknowledging the presence of both her daughters, raising another cheer from the crowd.

Cher, grinning happily, said, "I really think it's beautiful that Mom's singing. Look at her. Mom's dressed like she's going to a prom. We have gigantic fights when we go shopping. I want her to dress like I do."

Cher had surprised her mother with black leather pants and motorcycle-like garb for her debut. Georgia exchanged the outfit for a long white print dress which revealed just enough of her figure to be modest and intriguing.

"It's wonderful Mom is doing this at the right time in her life," Cher said. "It's good for all women to prove they are sexy forever. I love her very much."

After singing an encore, which she dedicated to "my superstar daughter and my future superstar daughter (Georganne)," Georgia joined her daughters at the table, exhilarated by the crowd's enthusiasm.

Asked why she had told the audience her age at the beginning of her act, Georgia said, "I think my age is pertinent and important. I don't know of anyone else who started out to be a singer at my age.

"On my word of honor, I've been having more fun since I turned 50 than when I was in my 30s or 40s. What other idiot would have the nerve to do this?"

Georgia's speaking voice is almost identical to Cher's. Her singing voice, however, is altogether different. Cher describes her mother's voice as "a warm tone but not real smooth. Some people say it's sexy.

"When I was real little I watched her perform. I learned the fundamentals of singing from Mom and someday it would be fun to sing with her."

Inflation, TV Hurt Theater

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — The Fox Theater, one of America's last gilded, rococo movie houses, may become a white elephant.

James H. Arthur, 69, president of Arthur Enterprises, Inc., which controlled 40 theaters in the 1940s, announced this spring the Fox no longer would present weekly motion pictures. Instead, it would try to stay open with live shows and special attractions.

"In ancient days, 25 or 30 years ago, theaters were built in the central location of a city," Arthur said. "But there has been a tremendous movement out of the cities, and people now don't want to drive downtown to see a movie."

But what the moviegoers left behind is much more than a theater.

"What the Fox really is," Arthur said, "is mankind put to work, given the freedom because the money was available, to exert the greatest in artistic creation."

The Missouri Advisory Council on Historic Preservation recommended the Fox be registered as a national landmark, calling it "the last opulent movie house in the nation." The state's historic pgeservation officer said the Fox "has tremendous architectural significance."

The Fox was one of three theaters of almost identical design built in the late 1920s by William Fox, founder of the Twentieth Century-Fox chain. One remains in Detroit, but the third in San Francisco has been demolished.

At its peak, the Fox had more than 260 people on the payroll, a barber and tailor shop in the basement, and three organs — including a Wurlitzer that rose majestically from the pit in front of the stage.

Giant marble pillars line the lobby where guests confront a pair of gilded lions, their eyes twinkling with orange lights. A globe-shaped, 22½-ton chandelier is the central decoration of the 10-story-migh, domed ceiling.

A reporter covering the 1929 opening which featured one of the last of the silent films, "Street Angel," wrote:

"Cross-legged Vishnus and elephants of Cathay and Assyrian lions and turbaned Bashi-Bazouku looked down on the 5,700 persons who entered. Arabesque lattices, Hindu incanse burners, Burmese pagoda carving and fluting and Karmak-pillars of ruddy marble rounded the broad views."

The theater cost about $5 million to build. To duplicate it now would cost 10 times that amount.

But television, the race to the suburbs and inflation have hurt the movie palace.

"A theater like this can have an electric bill of $5,000 a month with no trouble," Arthur said. "When we heat it during a cold spell, you'll use $2,000 worth of oil in a week."

He glanced at peeling paint on the lobby ceiling and said, "You have to run a scaffolding up there. and it might cost $3,000 to do that."

But Arthur, one of five brothers who entered the movie business, said the Fox will not be razed.

"There's always a desire to retain these beautiful possessions," he said. "I think the most logical thing would be to maintain it as you would a beautiful church."

IMPORTING ARSONISTS

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — Filipinos in charge of failing businesses are importing arsonists, reportedly from Hong Kong, to burn down their shops for insurance, Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile has said. Enrile told a conference at Quezon city southeast of Manila that the "foreign" arsonists had set many of a recent rash of fires. then left the Philippines.

District Attorney Moves Ahead With Probe Of Movie Industry

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Hollywood, which has a good record for putting plots across, tried to sell an "un-plot" to the district attorney. The DA gave it a negative review.

The movie business, shaken by a series of scandals, told District Attorney John Van de Kamp there is no need for his investigation of the industry for widespread white-collar crime.

Jack Valenti, the former aide to President Lyndon Johnson who is the U.S. film industry's chief spokesman, called on Van de Kamp this week, calling such a sweeping probe unwarranted.

Van de Kamp refused to back off.

"If I thought the motion picture industry was cleaning up its act, we wouldn't be doing what we are doing," the district attorney told reporters after the meeting.

Valenti, president of the Motion Picture Association of America, met with Van de Kamp for an hour, and said afterward Hollywood will cooperate but there is less white-collar crime in the entertainment business than in other fields.

"No doubt there are thieves in the ... industry," but moviemaking attracts so much publicity that the opportunity for crime is lower than in other fields, he argued.

Van de Kamp launched the probe two weeks ago, saying the recent series of events created the suspicion the industry does not report white-collar crime.

Columbia Pictures President David Begelman was allowed to resign, then rehired, after he admitted forging studio checks for $40,000. Although the studio did not bring charges, authorities did and Begelman resigned again, pleaded no contest and was given probation. The studio rehired him as an independent producer.

Audrey Lisner, chief accountant for Screen Gems, has been charged with embezzling $250,000. There is an investigation into the possible embezzlement of more than $1 million from a film laboratory subsidiary of 20th Century Fox.

Van de Kamp said the probe would focus on allegations of kickbacks, embezzlement and drug use. He said the investigation would include both large and small companies, and would deal with craftsmen as well as entertainers and executives.

TODAY'S STOCK PRICES

Dow Jones Average Up 3.73

NEW YORK (AP) — News of a smaller June trade deficit than had been expected sent Wall Street on a buying spree today, pushing stock prices up in heavy trading.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, after surging ahead by as much as 5.02 in the early going, settled back somewhat later but held a 3.73 gain to 843.30 at noon.

Advances outpaced declines by a better than 2-1 margin on the New York Stock Exchange.

The most optimistic observers had expected the June trade deficit to be at least $2 billion. But the Commerce Department reported that the deficit had been only $1.6 billion, down from $2.24 billion in May. It was the lowest deficit since May 1977.

The trade deficit has been one of the main contributors to the dollar's recent problems in foreign exchange trading, and analysts said foreign investors were pulling out of the stock market as a result of the dollar's decline.

Pan American Airways led the most active list, up ⅛ at 7⅞ after reporting that second quarter earnings had almost tripled from year-ago figures.

The NYSE's composite index of more than 1,500 common stocks rose .21 to 55.48. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .51 to 152.77.

Volume on the Big Board was 16.72 million shares in the first two hours, well over the 10.54 million in the same period Tuesday.

The No. 2 stock on the most-active list was Polaroid, which rose 1⅛ to 47⅞. Polaroid has been rising in heavy trading this week following a favorable appraisal from a widely read analyst. The firm's chief competitor in the camera field, Eastman Kodak, was also a winner, rising 1⅜ to 60¾. Both companies recently reported rises in earnings.

LAS VEGAS ON BRANIFF

$137 Round Trip

Jimmy the Greek Snyder, Braniff's expert adviser on Las Vegas.

You save 40%

Now you can fly to Las Vegas from Lubbock all the way on Braniff. And save 40% off the regular Coach fare, too. Ask for the Couples fare. Only $137 round trip per person for two people traveling together, staying at least two days, purchasing tickets and making reservations five days in advance.

As Jimmy the Greek, Braniff's expert adviser on Las Vegas, would say, "Take your wife. That's one way to beat Las Vegas."

There's no change of airline when you make the Braniff-to-Braniff connection in the same terminal at the Dallas-Fort Worth Airport. And you get your seat assignment all the way through to Las Vegas when you make your reservation or when you check in at Lubbock.

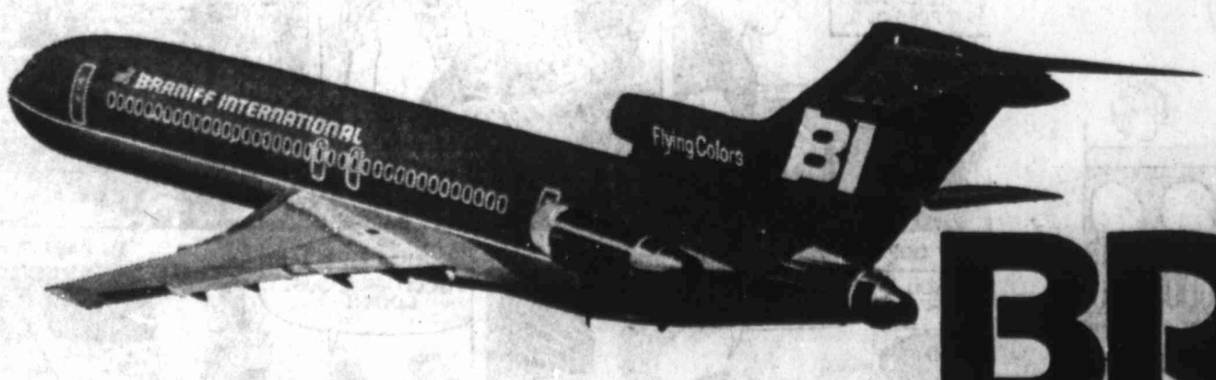

As Jimmy the Greek would say, "Deal yourself a winner before you go. That's one way to beat Las Vegas."

Note: Air fares are subject to government approval.
