GERALD FORD IS SWORN IN

The SDN Column

Keeping tab on our neighbors:

This has been a dry year, one that requires a sense of humor of the type that only West Texans can produce. So, it was not surprising to read some of the remarks attributed to Dawson County farmers in Walter Buckel's column in the Lamesa Press Reporter. You will recall that Dawson County was the No. 1 cotton producer in the world last year, accounting for around 315,000 bales, if our memory serves us well, which means that the drought this year has presented a sharp contrast in the cotton fields there.

Anyway, Buckel said he had heard such remarks as these recently:

"Dawson County cotton is no threat to the synthetic industry this year."

"It's so dry west of town the cows are giving powdered milk."

"Even the boll weevils have declared Dawson County a disaster area."

Of course the ability to take these setbacks and still maintain a sense of humor is what "made" this part of the country, and as Buckel observed..."the county will bounce back."

Western Texas College can look for some stiff competition in the rodeo arena from Howard College the coming year, according to a story in the Big Spring Daily Herald.

"Howard College has prospects for an unusually strong rodeo team for its second season of competion in the sport, according to Byron Hedges, coach," the Herald reported.

"Hedges said he has high hopes for the men's group to capture the region, and that he thinks the women's team has a chance to grab top national honors."

That would really be vaulting into the limelight at a fast pace.

Orlin Brewer of the Vernon Record has been assembling information on Jack Teagarden, a nationally-known "big band" leader who was born and grew up in Vernon, and he has already received some information in response to requests which likely is of interest to people who remember that era of popular music.

"For instance....that Mr. Teagarden was born in the quarters of the old Vernon Cotton Oil Mill, where his father was employed; that Mr. Teagarden played for local concerts at the Hill Crest Country Club Aug. 12, 1941, Nov. 19, 1945 and returned for a final concert at Wilbarger Auditorium Dec. 11, 1960, only to be virtually snowed out," Brewer reported.

Also he noted that Jack Teagarden died alone in a New Orleans hotel room suffering from bronchial pneumonia and unattended by a physician. He said a doctor suggested that the death was unnecessary and if a physician had been available, only two or three shots would have brought about Teagarden's recovery.—WACIL McNAIR.

Tearful Nixon Bids Cabinet, Aides Farewell

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A tearful Richard M. Nixon performed the final acts of his devastated presidency today, bidding sorrowful farewell to his Cabinet and aides, telling them that only a man in the deepest valley can know "how magnificent it is to be on the highest mountain."

Then at 10:16 a.m., he flew off to San Clemente, Calif., in the "Spirit of 76," the presidential aircraft that had taken him to so many memorable events in his 5½ year presidency.

His wife, daughter Tricia and her husband Ed Cox were with them as they left for a home that is the Western White House no more. The younger daughter, Julie and her husband David Eisenhower stayed behind to help pack the family's belongings.

The Nixons had trod a red carpet from the White house to a waiting helicopter for the short hop to Andrews Air Force base and the presidential plane. The flight to California would take five hours.

One last time, as he stepped into the helicopter, the resigning President waved the two-handed V-for-victory sign he had flashed so many times before from hundreds of political platforms.

And at precisely 10 a.m. EDT, the helicopter rose into the misty Washington morning. His Cabinet and several hundred administration aides heard his East Room farewell, and saw him go.

His successor, Gerald R. Ford, watched the takeoff.

Nixon's last White House words:

"And so we leave in high hopes, in good spirits and in deep humility and with very much gratefulness in our hearts. We come from many faiths, we pray perhaps to different gods but really the same God in a sense.

"But I want to say for each and every one of you — not only will we always be grateful to you, always you will be in our hearts and in our prayers. Thank you very much."

The Nixon aides, many of whom had wept as did their departing leader, stood in applause.

Nixon's farewell to those closest to him was in marked contrast to the solemn formality of his resignation address to the nation Thursday night. It was intensely personal and intensely emotional.

He spoke of his parents, saying his father was a great man though never a man of renown, that his mother was a saint who nursed two of his brothers and watched them die of tuberculosis.

He told of reading, on his last night in the White House, the words of young Theodore Roosevelt upon the death of a daughter.

"TR in his 20s thought the light had gone from his life forever, but he went on," Nixon said. " ... He was a man. And as I leave, let me say that's an example I think all of us should remember.

"We think sometimes when things happen that don't go the right way, we think that when you don't pass the bar exam the first time ... we think that when someone dear to us dies, we think that when we lose an election, we think that when we suffer a defeat that all is ended.

"We think as TR said that the light had left his life forever. Not true. It's only a beginning, always.

"The young must know it, the old must know it. It must always sustain us because the greatness comes not when things go always good for you, but the greatness comes when you're disappointed, when you take some knocks.

World Reaction Is Favorable

By The Associated Press

The dominant reaction around the world in the hours after Richard M. Nixon closed the curtain on his presidency was admiration for the American democracy and relief that uncertainty in Washington was over.

In some troubled corners of the globe, leaders voiced apprehension for the fate of policies Nixon had championed. But most were confident that Henry A. Kissinger, to continue as secretary of state in the Gerald R. Ford administration, would assure the continuity of Nixon's foreign initiatives.

Many governments — including Britain, West Germany, Mexico and Brazil — ducked official comment on what they termed "internal matters of the United States."

In Saigon, President Nguyen Van Thieu ordered a military alert throughout South Vietnam in fear the Communist command would take advantage of Nixon's resignation to launch a general offensive.

In Egypt — which more than any other Arab state put its trust in the Nixon administration to end the Middle East crisis, and where last spring Nixon was greeted as a national hero — the press carried stories about Nixon under black banners, a usual sign of mourning.

Israeli leaders refused comment, but government insiders said Premier Yitzhak Rabin is confident that Kissinger will continue his effective foreign policy.

Officials of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization privately expressed relief and confidence that Ford would inject the coherence and decisiveness they said was lacking under a beleaguered Nixon.

Millions of Europeans stayed up into the small hours of the morning to watch Nixon's address, relayed by satellite to 13 European countries. Evening programming was thick with

As 38th President Of United States

By GAYLORD SHAW
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gerald R. Ford became 38th President of the United States today and told the nation "our long national nightmare is over."

"Our Constitution works," Ford said as he assumed the office of the resigned Richard M. Nixon. "Our great republic is a government of laws and not of men."

At 12:03 p.m. EDT, Ford pronounced the oath of office Nixon was accused of violating in the Watergate scandals.

Ford was President already; Nixon's resignation was delivered at 11:35 a.m. EDT, and with it the powers of office passed automatically to Ford, a plain man who promised plain talk to the nation.

Ford said he would ask to appear before a joint session of Congress Monday night to discuss "my views on the priority business of the nation."

"As we bind up the wounds of Watergate, let us restore the Golden Rule to our political process," Ford said.

He spoke, too, of Nixon, who at the moment of transition was flying over the Midwest on the way home to California and private life."

"May our former President who brought peace to millions find it for himself," Ford said.

Ford said his first speech as President would be no political oration, "just a little straight talk among friends." He said it will be the first of many.

" ... I assume the presidency under extraordinary circumstances never before experienced by America," Ford said. "This is an hour of history that troubles our minds and hurts our hearts ..."

Never before had a president resigned; never before had an appointed vice president succeeded to office.

"I am acutely aware that you have not elected me by your ballots, so I ask you to confirm me as your President by your prayers," Ford said.

While he will make what amounts to a State of the Union Address to Congress Monday, Ford settled into the work of office at once, asking congressional leaders to go from the oath-taking ceremony to meet privately with him.

The East Room ceremony was nationally broadcast and televised. Ford's voice was firm, but there was a quaver when he spoke of the departed Nixon's quest for peace in the world.

Ford promised the nation that quest will continue.

"America will remain strong and united, but its strength will remain dedicated to the safety and sanity of the entire family of man," Ford said.

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger administered the oath of office.

"Are you prepared to take the oath of office as President of the United States?" the black-robed Burger asked.

"I am, sir," Ford replied.

"Raise your right hand and repeat after me," Burger said. Then, a phrase at a time, he read the oath and Ford repeated the words every president since George Washington has spoken.

Senate Pledges Cooperation

By CARL P. LEUBSDORF
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate passed today a resolution calling Gerald R. Ford "a good and faithful friend" of Congress and pledging cooperation as he assumes the presidency.

By voice vote without debate or dissent, the resolution was passed and sent to the House.

It was offered by Republican leader Hugh Scott for Democratic leader Mike Mansfield, assistant Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd and assistant GOP leader Robert P. Griffin "on behalf of the membership of the United States Senate."

The resolution declared that Congress extends Ford "its sincere best wishes, its assurances of firm cooperation and its fervent hopes for success in office."

Relieved by Richard Nixon's resignation, Democratic and Republican congressional leaders said they look forward to an era of national reconciliation under Ford.

John Connally Pleads Innocent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Treasury Secretary John Connally of Texas pleaded innocent today to charges of bribery, conspiracy and perjury in the milk fund affair.

Chief U.S. District Judge George Hart Jr. released Connally in the custody of his lawyer, Edward Bennett Williams, and gave him unlimited travel rights.

No trial date was set. Williams asked and received four to five days to file motions that he said might affect the trial date.

Connally was indicted last week and charged with taking two $5,000 payments from the nation's biggest dairy cooperative, Associated Milk Producers, Inc., in return for his help in getting President Nixon to raise federal milk price supports in March 1971.

He also was charged with two counts of perjury and with conspiring illegally to obstruct justice by covering up the alleged bribe with a phony story.

Hart asked Connally if he intended to plead innocent to the indictment. "Yes, your honor, I do," the gray-haired Texan said in a loud voice.

The entire proceeding took only five minutes. At the end, a lawyer from the Watergate Sepcial Prosecution Force said he wasn't sure that Connally had pleaded to all counts. "If there's any doubt, your honor, I plead not guilty to all counts," Connally said.

Connally's one-time friend, Texas lawyer Jake Jacobsen, pleaded guilty Wednesday to a charge of bribery and told the judge he had given Connally the two $5,000 payments.

The former general manager of the milk producers, Harold S. Nelson, has admitted in court that he authorized the $10,000 payment to Connally. Former co-op lobbyist Bob A. Lilly has testified that he gave the money to Jacobsen to pass on to Connally.

Connally has consistently denied receiving any bribe since reports of the accusation first surfaced last November during the Senate Watergate Committee's investigation.

Mom will meet her halfway if she'll only ask

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a senior in high school. My boyfriend goes to college out of town, so we have been writing to each other regularly.

My mom and I have a communication problem. I mean, I don't tell her a whole lot, although I really don't have all that much to hide. Well, I had a hunch my mother was going into my drawer and reading the letters I got from my boyfriend, so I did something that wasn't very nice. I wrote notes like, "Hi, Mom, what are you looking for?", and I stuck them into the envelopes with my boyfriend's letters.

I know she saw them because she has been very cold to me lately, but she can't very well say anything about these notes without admitting she was snooping.

Abby, I don't think I should have to hide my things or lock them up. I mean, if a girl can't trust her own mother, who can she trust?

I would really like to have a better relationship with my mother, but I need to know how to get out of the doghouse first.

SORRY IN OHIO

DEAR SORRY: For openers you can quit writing "notes" in an attempt to trap and embarrass her. I do not condone snooping, but most mothers who snoop do so because they want to know more about what's going on in the lives of their children.

Apologize to your mother for the smart-alecky notes, and tell her you want to build a better relationship with her. Believe me, she will meet you halfway.

DEAR ABBY: What would you think if you had a relative (a very close one) who told you he was sorry that he couldn't offer you the hospitality of his apartment because he had only one bed, and then you accidentally discovered that the sofa in his living room folded out into a "hide-a-bed?"

MAD

DEAR MAD: I'd think that this relative didn't want the pleasure of my overnight company.

DEAR ABBY: I am German-born, but have lived in the U.S.A. for the last 24 years with my American husband. My mother still lives in Germany, as do my brother and sister. I keep in touch with them about once a month with letters. I saw them two years ago when I visited Germany.

Yesterday, I received a letter from a so-called friend of my sister's in Germany. (I met this lady only once when I visited Germany, and it is a mystery to me how she got my address.) She wrote, "I think you should know that your mother is going blind, and her general health is very, very bad. They say she hasn't got much longer to live. I told your sister to notify you of your mother's condition, but she said she didn't think you would be interested and probably couldn't make the trip anyway, but I thought you should know."

I immediately telephoned my mother in Germany. She answered the phone and said that her eyesight was failing, but otherwise she was fine for a woman of 77. I was greatly relieved on one hand, but furious at this "friend" of my sister's for writing such a letter.

How would YOU handle it? Or should I let it go?

FRAU S.

DEAR FRAU: Send the letter you received from your sister's so-called "friend" to your sister, and let HER handle it.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Offer Photography, Journalism Courses

Several general and specialized courses in journalism and photography designed for both resident and commuter students will be offered the fall semester at Western Texas College, Mike McBride, assistant professor, has announced.

Principles of Journalism 131 is an introductory survey of the field of journalism arranged to acquaint students with the profession. A basic approach to news writing and reporting as well as examination of the function of newspapers, magazines, radio, and television in today's democratic society will be provided.

The class will meet 11-12 MWF or may be taken on an independent study basis. Students interested in the latter plan will meet at specified periods during the term, at times to be arranged, to discuss assignments and to be evaluated.

News Editing 231, a more specialized course, emphasizes analysis of copy editing for errors of fact and style. Such topics as proofreading, page makeup, layout and design are included.

The class will meet 10:30-11:50 Tuesday and Thursday or may also be arranged on an independent study basis.

Either Introductory Photography 130 or Advanced Photography 230 may be taken Wednesday evenings, from 6:30-9:30. The courses are not designed for independent study, unless approved by the instructor.

The first course covers the photographic process, including exposure and composition as well as simple and adjustable camera operation, film developing and picture printing. Practical lab assignments may be completed in college darkroom facilities.

The second course will provide a basic approach to photojournalism in addition to advanced camera handling and electronic flash use. A continuation of Photography 130, this course will also utilize practical lab assignments to be completed outside the classroom.

Any part-time or full-time students interested in participating in college publications will be accepted. Newspaper and magazine volunteers are invited, or students may elect to receive college credit by enrolling in the appropriate Publications 111, 112, or 113 lab. Times may be arranged individually, if necessary.

All courses are designed as electives for nonjournalism majors and as experiences in enrichment and personal growth for others, as well as core offerings for majors in the field.

For further information, contact McBride in the WTC Student Center, or call 573-8511, ext. 273, or 573-8536.

Texans Soften Criticism

By The Associated Press

Texans passed judgment on President Richard Nixon Thursday by softening their criticism of his domestic failures with recognition of his accomplishments in foreign affairs.

But most agreed that Nixon's resignation, in view of his admission of participation in a cover-up of the Watergate scandal, was a good thing for the country.

Some of the bitterness that divided the pro and anti-Nixon groups, however, showed through in a few of the reactions expressed by Texans to Nixon's announcement that he was relinquishing the presidency, the first President to do so in the history of the United States.

Walter M. Lee, 58, of Dallas, a retired Air Force man from Fort Worth, said, "The country will be much better off. Maybe the sellout to big business will be slowed down since he was the number one patron of big business."

Mrs. Polly Sowell, vice chairman of the Texas Republican party, said in McAllen that Nixon went out "in a most magnanimous and graceful way. I don't think he thought he was doing what was in the best interest of the country."

Also in McAllen, businessman Dan Hartshorn said it was a sad situation for the nation to have a presidential resignation. He said Nixon resigned because "he was defeated and he knew it ... he had been found out ... He made some mistakes, but there is no question that he did great things for the country ... I think he has been punished enough by being humiliated before his family and the American public."

Most Texans agreed with Gov. Dolph Briscoe, who said that the resignation "demonstrates the democratic system can stand any strain."

"Now it is time to look at the future," Briscoe said. "We cannot allow ourselves to become paralyzed by a crisis, no matter how severe."

Texas State Republican Chairman Jack Warren said in Tyler: "Out of this tragedy we must be sustained by the knowledge that our constitution is a viable and working document."

"Only time and history can place in perspective the Nixon administration weighed against the misfortune of Watergate," he added.

There were those who felt Nixon should be punished for what his actions caused to those who worked with him and trusted him. "I just hope when people are crying over Richard Nixon's resignation, that they remember the lives of all the people he has wrecked," said Ruby Pemberton of Dallas, referring to the Nixon assistants indicted for their participation in the Watergate scandal. "Those young men believed so strongly in Richard Nixon, and now their lives and the lives of their families are wrecks," she said.

Reaction

Nixon retrospectives and analyses of his career.

"As friends of the American people, we are glad this nightmare is over," said Norway's Premier Trygve Bratteli.

The Dutch government viewed the resignation as an affirmation of democracy as a form of government.

"What is important is the democratic process which led to this resignation — a process which upheld the equality of each citizen before the law," a government statement said.

There was no word from Peking, but the Japanese news agency Kyodo said Chinese leaders were hoping the resignation would not affect China-U.S. relations.

"What should happen has happened," declared Japan's Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka.

The Soviet and East European media gave only brief announcements that Nixon — warmly welcomed in Moscow only 44 days earlier — had resigned. No reasons were given.

Radio Liberty and Radio Free Europe, the two U.S.-financed stations that beam into Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union, stayed on the air long past normal closing time to carry Nixon's broadcast.

The Cuban news agency Prensa Latina announced Nixon's resignation with a bulletin and termed it his "political death."

GM Hikes Price Of '75 Models

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors announced today that prices on its 1975 model cars and trucks will go up an average $480 next month.

The auto giant said the new prices will reflect a flat $130 hike for emission control equipment and an average rise of $350, or seven per cent, to cover rising costs experienced by the company.

The large increase compares with an average $73 price hike GM put through on its 1974 models at introduction last September. The increase also is just $54 less than the average $534 GM raised prices during the 1974 model year.

The increase would raise the base price of a subcompact Chevrolet Vega about $300, from $2,505 to $2,800.

Including popular options, state and local taxes and dealer preparation charge, the cost of a Vega — GM's lowest-priced car — would be more than $3,000.

Nixon Resigns Without Immunity

By MARGARET GENTRY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard Nixon quits the presidency without immunity from prosecution, leaving him vulnerable to a host of criminal charges.

The lead role in bringing an indictment against Nixon after he leaves office would fall to special Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski, who said Thursday night there has been no deal sparing Nixon prosecution in exchange for his resignation.

Congress could pass a resolution urging that no charges be brought against Nixon. Such a resolution is not binding by law; it only expresses the feelings of members of Congress.

Nixon's resignation may have squelched what little support there was for such a resolution.

The chief sponsor, Sen. Edward W. Brooke, R-Mass., said Thursday night he would withdraw the resolution unless Nixon makes a "full confession" of his involvement in the Watergate and related scandals.

By resigning, Nixon apparently saved himself from impeachment by the House and trial in the Senate. Congress has the authority to proceed with impeachment even though Nixon no longer holds office, but House leaders said Thursday night there is no need to carry it through.

"The House may have to take some action, but the President having resigned, the proceedings will have to come to an end," Speaker Carl Albert said.

Nevertheless, Albert and Judiciary Committee members were moving toward a House vote on the committee report detailing the allegations against Nixon.

Gerald R. Ford, upon becoming president, is the only other person who could block the trial of his predecessor.

Ford gave no hint of his intentions. Rep. Paul N. McCloskey, R-Calif., said, "I know that Jerry Ford would never promise to pardon him as a condition for his resignation."

McCloskey predicted that Nixon "will be indicted very shortly" but said nothing about the basis for his forecast.

An agreement that Nixon would leave office as the price of immunity seemed a possible option in light of the bargain that led to Spiro T. Agnew's resignation as vice president. Agnew pleaded no contest to a single tax evasion charge and prosecutors agreed not to press other, more serious, charges.

Nixon's resignation strips him of the shield of office that once apparently blocked his indictment on charges of conspiracy and obstruction of justice.

The Watergate grand jury named Nixon as an unindicted coconspirator when it indicted his former White House and campaign aides for conspiring to cover up the Watergate scandal and obstruct the original investigation.

The same grand jury remains at work. But legal experts say no indictment could survive unless signed by Jaworski, or if he refuses, by Atty. Gen. William B. Saxbe.

Saxbe said on Wednesday the decision to immunize Nixon rests with Jaworski, whose charter of office gives him "full authority for investigating and prosecuting ... allegations involving the President." Through a spokesman, Saxbe declined comment Thursday night.

Seems Little Unreal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gerald R. Ford enters the White House favoring revenue-sharing, a high level of military spending, national health insurance and Nixon-style foreign policy.

He opposes busing, a tax cut now, economic controls and amnesty for draft evaders.

He says inflation is world public enemy No. 1, a threat to peace and order as well as the pocketbook.

These are clues to the man's political beliefs drawn from his recent public statements. Most of them were made as Richard M. Nixon's spokesman, but they are no different from the philosophy he expressed in 25 years in the House of Representatives.

Ford favors optimism and compromise. He became minority leader in the House, where give-and-take is a way of life.

Here is a sampler of his statements since he was picked to be vice president last October:

On foreign policy: "President Nixon has innovated and carried forward a bold and courageous foreign policy that history will credit in due perspective." June 4.

World trade: "One great responsibility is the need to seek a more open and equitable world trading system. Another is to assure a fair chance in the world's markets.... Trade is essential to consolidate the great strides that we have made in the last five years toward a new world partnership." (July 6)

Isolationism: "There has been a tendency of our people to turn inward .... (but) I cannot imagine that we will withdraw from the world." (July 1)

Military spending: "There are forces in Congress that want to gut it, cut it, reduce it — at the wrong time." (June 5)

Arms reductions: "It is essential to maintain adequate force levels and a technological lead while negotiations continue.... If negotiations fail and the Soviet Union seeks military advantage, the United States must be prepared to increase its forces quickly and effectively." (Feb. 11)

Inflation: "... World's public enemy No. 1. Unless something is done, the cancer of inflation could prove fatal.... A major threat to our free economy and our form of government." Opposed any tax cut and encouraged individuals to curb buying of scarce goods. (April 26)

Economic controls: "Temporarily, they were helpful, but they proved, as they have in the past, to be no long-range solution. (April 26)

"I am opposed to the monolithic government which claims to have all the answers. I prefer to rely on the decision-making power of 211 million Americans, exercising their choices in the market place, and the ability of industry to respond to their needs." (Jan. 8)

Big oil: "Let me here just briefly affirm the administration's belief in the absolute necessity of reasonable profits." (Jan. 31)

Revenue sharing: "Be prepared to fight for it (revenue sharing)." (May 24)

National health insurance: "If we do nothing to provide national health insurance ... we are issuing an invitation to those favoring outright socialization of medicine." (June 28)

Busing: "I feel very strongly that to deal with integrated schools by busing is very superficial and very counter-productive.... (When) individuals can move and live where they want to. That's the basic way to deal with the problem." (July 25)

Amnesty: "Unconditional blanket amnesty to anyone who illegally evaded or fled military service is wrong." (Aug. 5)

Marijuana: "I am not yet convinced we ought to legalize marijuana. (My children) keep telling me that marijuana is no worse than drinking a martini or a scotch and soda." (Jan. 10)

Newspapers: "I ... read the sports page first, 'cause you got a 50-50 chance of being right on the sports page. When you read the front page, the odds are a little tougher." (Jan. 10)

Reporters: "They are seekers after truth. They are motivated by the same emotions that inspire the rest of us — love of country and dedication to what's right." (Nov. 5, 1973)

On the possibility of becoming President: "I think I've had a reasonable training ground and I have no fear.... I'll do the best with the background I have and I have no apologies for it." (May 6)

On Nixon: "I believe the President is completely innocent of all charges, and will remain in office and complete his term," (June 18)

"There just isn't any evidence." (June 14)

"I still believe the President is innocent of any impeachable ofense." (Aug. 5)

MR. AND MRS. T. FRED BRYCE

Bryce's Celebrate 70th Anniversary

BY DOROTHY BOLDING COX

"August 10, 1904 is when it all started," stated T.F. (Fred) Bryce of 101 Twenty-fifth, as he recalled the date he and Miss Annie Bell Moore were married, and on Saturday they will be celebrating the 70th anniversary of that happy occasion.

Fred, born April 19, 1886 in Williamson County married Miss Moore at Georgetown, and came to West Texas in 1907. They settled first at Roscoe, and then in 1948 they came to Scurry County and bought a farm near Ira which they farmed with teams of horses.

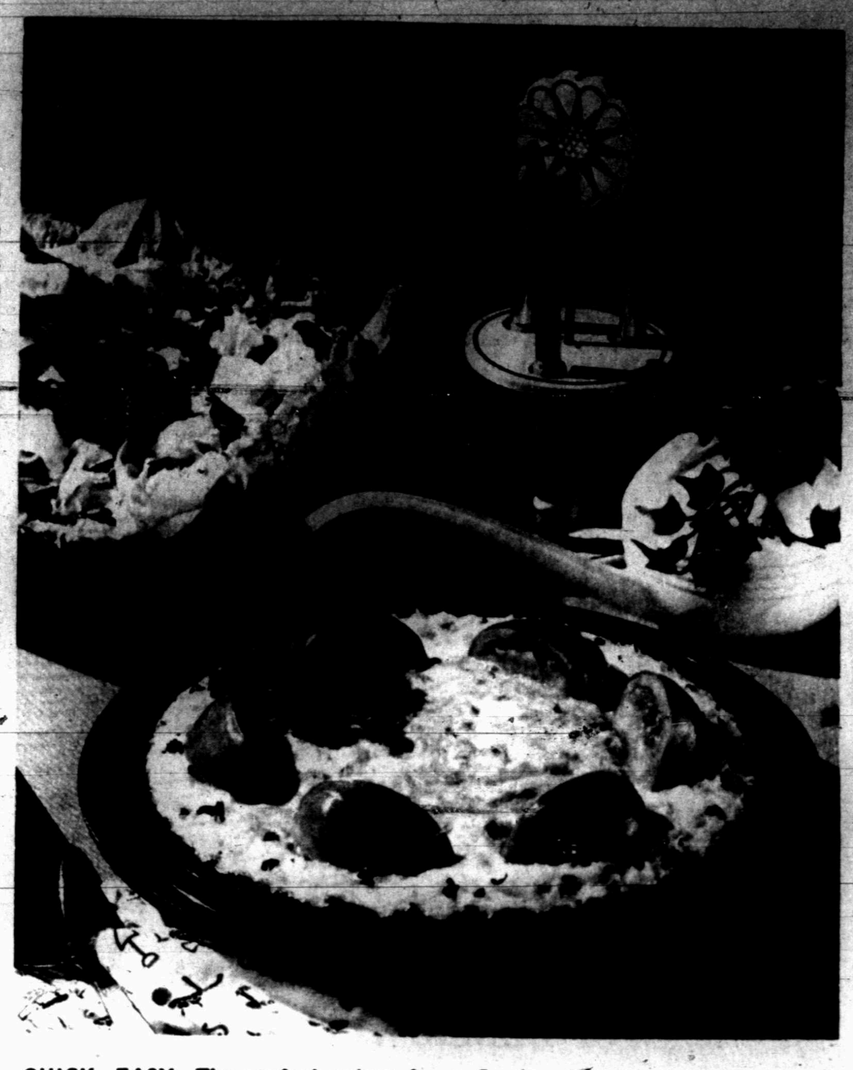

"We just got the West Texas fever," Mr. Bryce replied when asked why they came to this part of the country, "so my four brothers and I we just hitched our horses to covered wagons and started out. There was four wagons in all and we didn't have pavement to travel on either- but if there had a been we couldn't have traveled on it because it would have hurt the horses feet. Took us 8 days, but we had a lot of fun. Made it alright. We'd stop early, build us up a campfire and cook some meat we'd brought along, or maybe somebody would kill a squirrel or a rabbit and we'd cook and eat that, then set around there and act silly and tell jokes, and when it got bedtime we'd crawl in the wagons and go to bed."

Mr. Bryce does not recall how long he lived at Ira before he and Mrs. Bryce moved into Snyder, but while he lived there he helped build the building where the Church of Christ now meets, and where he and his family worshiped. He was an elder in the church and led the singing for many years.

"I really enjoyed it," Mr. Bryce recalled. "I liked to sing. Still would, but now I can't sing on account of...of course my voice is not like it used to be, but I could sing a little if I could see, but I can't read fast enough to sing."

The Bryce's were blessed with six children. They were Leslie (deceased), Lester, Lillie, Ina Lee, Annie Bell, and Eutha Faye, but Mr. Bryce lives alone now. Mrs. Bryce is a resident of Leisure Lodge after having suffered a stroke about three years ago, but she hopes to be able to help celebrate their 70th wedding anniversary Saturday.

"The 70 years were here before I knew it," Mr. Bryce said, "but of course we've had our ups and downs like ever body else. You can't expect to go 70 years without something happening. But we made it all right. Like I say, we've had our ups and downs..,we started out with nothing and I guess we'll die with nothing the way it looks now. It sure takes money to live now days. Oh I won't starve...I haven't got any kick coming."

Man's Best Friends Treated Like Humans

By ROBERT GLASS
Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Spot, a mongrel, has his blood filtered 100 times every five hours through a life-sustaining kidney dialysis machine.

In the emergency room, veterinarians diagnose a sedated 9-year-old German shepherd watchdog for a respiratory ailment.

A sad mutt with jaundiced eyes lies unable to move on an examining table under a huge X-ray machine.

Treatment for these dogs at the University of Pennsylvania's Veterinary Hospital is remarkably similar to human patient care. The hospital operated by the School of Veterinary Medicine accepts animals with every conceivable disorder, from malnourishment to cancer.

About 50 per cent of the animals are referrals from private clinics and are of particular interest because of their research value, according to Dr. Kenneth C. Bovee, chief of medical services. Other cases are accepted routinely at costs comparable to private vet clinics.

Large animal research and treatment is done at New Bolton Center, a 750-acre complex in Chester County, 32 miles southwest of Philadelphia. Among the facilities at the site are a clinic and hospital for large animals, research laboratories and orthopedic and rehabilitation centers.

Because domestic pets are treated at the small animal hospital in the city, it receives wider public exposure. Dealing with the pet owners is a persistent and often frustrating part of the routine at the hospital.

"A funny thing happens when people get into trouble with their pets," explains Dr. Bovee. "They need help, and they'll do anything to get it. After the animal gets well or dies, they forget you."

Occasionally, the hospital will provide extraordinary treatment at costs well beyond the reach of most pet owners for the sake of research.

For example, Bovee says, arrangements may be made to treat an animal with the kidney dialysis machine, a procedure that can run into thousands of dollars. "All we ask is for the people to bring the animal back every six months. They say they will and then they never come in."

Research at Penn's veterinary school is one of the main reasons for operating elaborate hospitals such as the small animal clinic and New Bolton Center.

Dr. Robert Marshak, head of the veterinary school, is responsible for the only veterinary school research program on bovine lymphosarcoma, a disease affecting cows' blood.

Pennsylvania established the first comparative cardiovascular studies unit in the country, which has been designated as the international training center for such diseases by the World Health Organization. Veterinarians here were the first to implant a pacemaker in a dog for therapeutic purposes.

Penn's is the second oldest of the 19 veterinary schools in the country and entrance requirements are identical to those at the medical school. In the fourth and final year of study, students work exclusively in the small animal hospital and New Bolton Center. Two students are assigned with a veterinarian to follow the progress of each animal until it is released or dies.

Referral Service Gets Good Results

By CHRIS CONKLING

NEW YORK (AP) — Lila Burkeman is one of a select group of persons who know where to get bagels in London on Sunday.

In many careers she has had during her 30-odd years, Mrs. Burkeman has been everything from fashion model to literary agent. Last January she combined her varied experiences to create "Everything You've Always Wanted to Know About London and Didn't Know Who To Ask," a referral service for the American in London for business or pleasure.

For a yearly subscription fee she and her one assistant will answer questions about London that would likely stump the Queen: What to do with your mother; Where your dog can get a whirlpool bath; Where to get a landau in a hurry; How to rent a screening room; Who is Michael Caine's agent; and practically everything else you may think to ask. Mrs. Burkeman will also plan any type of party, move you into a house, escort you around the city personally and, she promises, "save you money." Non-subscribers can be helped for a special fee.

"So far I've not been stumped," reports the vivacious brunette, who looks much like Barbra Streisand, though she admits she herself cannot sing. There's good reason for her being an aficionado of London life. Her life began there, and she has lived it all there, through a marriage which ended in divorce, two kids and a slew of odd jobs, including a year as assistant to Broadway and Hollywood producers and directors working in London.

The referral company evolved out of boredom, Mrs. Burkeman explained in an interview here. "It started seven months ago," she said. "I had been a literary agent for three years and I hated it. It offered so little creativity.

"Also, I knew many people in different businesses who came over from New York and wanted me to help them set up work in London. I got to thinking there must be some way I could formulate a service to help people who are not native Londoners to get around the city."

Mrs. Burkeman set up shop in her home on Abbey Road. "Before I knew it," she remembers, "the London Times heard about it and the Times' 'Diary,' which everyone reads, did a piece on me. Then I did a BBC television show, a few radio shows, and some magazine interviews. With all this publicity, plus the word-of-mouth of my subscribers — I've got a lot of big-mouthed subscribers, thank God — the service was a going thing."

This woman who knows everything about London displays a natural enthusiasm for England's capital city. "I'm not flag waving at all," she maintains. "I love London. I'm a big fan of hers and it's not a phony thing.

Quick And Easy Elegant Quiche

Call to order the first meeting of the flower show planning committee at your home. What to serve for your Garden Club luncheon—perhaps an elegant entree like quiche, France's famous meal in one dish.

The quiche is basically a large open-faced tart filled with unsweetened custard and cheese, meat or seafood. This Cheddar-Tuna Quiche is certain to delight your committee with its impressive appearance and delicious flavor contrasts. And you'll appreciate the convenience in preparation.

Earlier in the morning you can prepare the rice pie crust...so buttery light it seems to melt-in-the-mouth leaving the slightest hint of pert parsley. The filling ingredients can also be prepared and stored in the refrigerator until you're ready to combine them. After the committee arrives, and the busy exchange of beautifying ideas has begun, return to the kitchen to fill the rice pie crust with these two flavor friends—sharp Cheddar cheese and tasty tuna. Topping the Cheddar-Tuna layers is a bubbling blanket of fluffy custard made with protein-rich milk and eggs. A garnish of ripe, red tomato wedges colorfully contrasts with the golden custard.

Delicate and delicious Cheddar-Tuna Quiche is far more nourishing than your guests would ever guess. All you need to balance this warm winter luncheon is a cool garden salad for a refreshing touch of Spring and the usual unusual table centerpiece.

CHEDDAR-TUNA QUICHE

2½ cups cooked rice (¾ cup uncooked)
4 eggs
2 tablespoons butter, melted
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
1½ cups (6 oz.) shredded Cheddar cheese
1 can (7 oz.) tuna, drained, broken into pieces
1¼ cups milk
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon dry mustard
⅛ teaspoon pepper
6 tomato wedges (about 1 small)

Combine rice, 1 slightly beaten egg, butter and parsley; turn into 9-inch pie plate. Firmly press mixture against side and bottom of plate building up outside edge. Sprinkle ¾ cup cheese over rice crust. Top with one-half the tuna; sprinkle over remaining cheese. Beat together milk, 3 eggs, salt, mustard and pepper; pour over cheese-tuna mixture. Sprinkle remaining tuna on top. Bake in preheated 375 degree oven, 25 minutes. Arrange tomato on top and return to oven for 5 minutes or until a knife inserted near center comes out clean. Allow to stand 10 minutes before serving. Makes 6 servings.

Sift together the flour and ¼ cup of the sugar. Beat egg whites, cream of tartar and vanilla until foamy; gradually beat in the remaining ½ cup sugar and continue to beat until stiff peaks form. Gradually sift in the flour mixture, folding it in as you do so. Turn into an ungreased 9 by 5 by 3 inch loaf pan; cut through batter with a rubber spatula to remove air bubbles. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until cake springs back when lightly touched — 30 to 35 minutes. Invert pan by hanging it between 2 other pans and cool completely — about 1 hour. Market Activities To Serve As Barometer

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) - The Stock market will attract a lot of attention during the coming weeks and almost all the interpretations of its activities will refer to it as a barometer of public attitudes.

The upsurge in prices Monday through Wednesday, for instance, was attributed generally to a sense of public relief that the continuing tragedy of Watergate might soon be put i , the past, leaving the future unencumbered.

But the question remains: Is the market a barometer of public opinion?

Those who follow the market have understood for a long time the significance of Needham's statement. Exchange figures show that in 1960 more than 60 per cent of all volume was by individuals; at the end of 1973, just 27 per cent.

In 1966-1967 a significant change in the character of transactions took place, with institutions overtaking individuals as the dominant traders. The gap has been widening since then.

The question then is this: Do mutual and penions funds, insurance companies, bank trusts and the like constitute "the public?"

A further investigation of recent trading activity reveals some other items that throw doubt upon the casual assignation of mysterious, mind-reading powers to the stock market:

-The portfolio managers of funds and insurance companies have never been seen or heard soliciting the views of the masses who supply them with money. They act completely independently of their public.

-These same institutions have enormous amounts of money with which to trade. They concentrate their attention on a relatively few stocks. Many of these stocks are in the Dow Jones Industrial Average, the best known measure of prices.

As a result, the DJIA has a pronounced tendency toward wider swings than, let us say, five or six years ago. And sharp price changes in themselves attract more attention.

-Many of these institutions have what is called fringe or play money. That is, they have certain amounts ready for quick action on important, market-exciting news, such as a government price report - or a resignation.

So much for the institutions and their role in the "public market." Then there are the speculators of all sorts who attempt to rip off a few points from the characteristically sharp rises and falls.

And there are the short traders, those who put their money on the down side of stocks, hoping to repay shares they have borrowed with shares purchased at a lower price. The difference is theirs.

All these and probably a good many other factors must be considered when you use the stock market as a barometer of opinion or attitudes or belief in the future. If it is the public, it's a strange one, and it acts even stranger.

Agnew Offers 'No Comment'

CROFTON, Md. (AP) — Former Vice President Spiro T. Agnew offered a terse "no comment" when asked about President Nixon's downfall.

Agnew, Nixon's 1968 and 1972 running mate, has avoided publicity since he resigned last October after a no contest plea to evading federal income tax charges.

The former vice president, now a budding export-importer, emerged from his office Thursday dressed in slacks and a pullover knit shirt, following what his secretary told reporters was "a working day just like any other."

Carrying a briefcase and tennis racquet, he glanced at the rainy sky and made his way to his car, avoiding answering newsmen seeking comment on President Nixon's resignation.

Agnew lives 20 miles from here in a new $160,000 home.

Consumer Behavior Changing

COMMERCE, Tex. (AP) — An expert on why women do the things they do says she concludes that they are looking to the government these days to protect them when they enter the supermarket.

Women once were their own consumer experts—shopping with care, experience and a jaundiced eye.

Now, with half the women in the labor force, they simply do not have time to shop carefully and at length, says Dr. Suzanne McCall, East Texas State University faculty member specializing in marketing and management.

"I see a terrific move of consumerism where the government will be the 'watch dog' because the function is no longer being fulfilled by women," she said after a survey of 391 women in Dallas. The survey was part of her doctoral dissertation.

Dr. McCall also found that working women may shift their values away from their husband's if they are in different sorts of work.

"Women have traditionally taken the social class of their spouses," Dr. McCall said. "Now working women identify with their working place or with co-workers."

She said many women have white-collar jobs while their husbands are in blue-collar work.

"These women are still more inclined to identify with white-collar values than the blue-collar ones of their husbands," she said.

What about the woman working part time? She is more like the non-working woman in consumer behavior.

"This would substantiate the fact that the time factor affects a woman's life style more than the act of work itself," said Dr. McCall.

And women aren't seeking values like they once were, said the researcher. "Value orientation comes with need and is not a factor in today's affluent society," reported the doctor.

Some of the trends she sees are expected to change advertising approaches.

"Women are seeking more individualism," she said, "which will reduce the mass marketing approach."

This will cause less interest in style variation of known products and result in more demand for new products and services. "I also see advertising pushing the service of the product rather than the product itself," commented Dr. McCall.

Some of her other conclusions:

Women know very little about credit purchasing and they can obtain credit easier than they believe.

There is a move toward one-stop shopping.

A shorter life for products is due because of trends toward disposables and technical advances.

The market for leisure goods and services will accelerate.

Junior Editors' Quiz on PENGUINS

QUESTION: Do Penguins have fur or feathers?

ANSWER: Feathers. Penguins are interesting flightless birds of Antarctica. There are 17 species existing today although fossils of 35 other species have been discovered. They are medium sized to large, black and white diving birds with strong bills. Their wings no longer used for flight are adapted to swimming. They are expert divers and catch fish under water. On land they walk in an upright position. Nature has provided them with dense stiff feathers to protect them from the cold. Their feathers also secrete an oil which repels the icy waters or makes them waterproof. An extra insulation is a layer of fat under the skin. The Rockhopper Penguin has soft and silvery breast feathers, almost fur-like in texture. Furriers once used these feathers to make muffs and collars.

Strike End In Sight?

By The Associated Press

All those marginal rookies and free agents who have been riding high for the past few weeks may be singing their swan song this weekend.

The National Football League appears — for the first time since March—to be on the verge of getting down to serious business on the field as well as at the bargaining table.

All 26 NFL player representatives have reportedly been summoned to Washington for a meeting. It is not certain when a meeting off all player representatives could take place, but reports were the meeting was called to vote on a new contract offered by the owners.

But Ed Garvey, executive director of the NFL Players Association, denied that and said it's just to reassess the NFLPA's demands in the 40day strike. And the NFL Management Council confirmed that it has offered no new contract proposal.

If it turns out that the dispute is, indeed, on the threshhold of being ended, near-capacity or full houses may be the order of the day a week from now when NFL teams swing into the third week of preseason play.

But for now, it'll still be more empty seats than full ones in most of the parks. Baltimore and Washington will find out just how empty — or full — tonight.

The Colts open their exhibition schedule against the visiting Detroit Lions, who will start Bruce Arthur at quarterback. Arthur, who played at the University of Toledo, was out of football last season. The Colts will counter with Tom Pierantozzi, who spent his 1973 rookie season on the inactive roster after playing in one preseason game.

The Redskins, who played their first preseason game a week ago before 16,403 fans in 54,374-seat RFK Stadium, host the Houston Oilers.

And Washington's game may not be the only one in town. Fans may get an opportunity to see plenty of veterans from the Redskins and other teams — playing touch football outside RFK Stadium in a parking lot. "It will be free and a lot better than the game inside," one striking player observed.

The NFL is extending its policy of giving refunds to exhibition ticket holders on a week-to-week basis, depending on the progress of the negotiations.

On Saturday, Atlanta plays Oakland at Berkeley, Calif., Philadelphia is at Cincinnati, New Orleans visits Miami, St. Louis faces Green Bay at Milwaukee, Minnesota is at Denver, Los Angeles hosts Dallas and the New York Jets play at San Diego.

On Sunday, the Giants are at New England and, in three Monday night games, it's Chicago at Pittsburgh, San Francisco at Cleveland and Buffalo at Kansas City.

Renfro, Harris Are Back In Fold

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — All-Pro cornerback Mel Renfro and three other veterans, two of them starters, checked into the Dallas Cowboys training camp Thursday night.

Reporting along with Renfro were Cliff Harris, a starting free safety; John Fitzgerald, starting center; and Rodney Wallace, who is expected to battle Ralph Neely for the starting left tackle position.

The Cowboys also said they expected tight end Billy Joe DuPree, wide receiver Drew Pearson and second-year defensive end Harvey Martin to report this morning.

The four who reported Thursday night brought the number of veterans in camp to 26, 15 of them regulars.

The Cowboys said Henry Abadi of Clemson was traded to the Chicago Bears for a draft choice and Ralph Chavez of Arizona State was released on waivers.

Redskins To Host Oilers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Washington Redskins, still without a returning starter because of the National Football League players strike, host the similarly depleted Houston Oilers tonight in an exhibition game expected to draw a light turnout to RFK Stadium.

The Redskins management said it expected about 15,000 fans to show up at the game, although 6,152 ticket-holders took advantage of a chance to get a refund earlier this week.

In their pre-season openers last week, the Redskins lost to New England, 21-16, while Houston defeated the New York Giants, 16-7.

Washington Coach George Allen said he planned to remain with the same starting lineup, led by Joe Theismann at quarterback. Jim Foote, a 17th-round draft choice of the New York Jets in 1973, will be the Houston signal-caller.

Striking Washington veterans plan to picket the stadium once again tonight.

Logjam Of Hopefuls Are Near Top In PGA

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

CLEMMONS, N.C. (AP) — How many shots can a tournament golfer hit in anger before the reservoir runs dry?

"There's a limit," Sam Snead said 10 years ago. "A man has only so many tournaments and so many shots in his system. Jack Nicklaus started so young. He will burn himself out before he's 30."

This prediction came home to roost for the 62-year-old hillbilly wonder today as Snead and the great Nicklaus found themselves tied at 69, just one stroke off the pace going into the second round of the 56th PGA Golf Championship.

Nicklaus not only has not burned himself out but has amassed 14 major titles — an all-time record, and at 34 appears only to be getting his second wind in the game.

And old Sam himself is a living contradiction of his own thesis — still a masterful shotmaker and a PGA title threat after 84 tour victories and 40 years on the tough professional circuit.

"I guess it all depends on whether you can keep on liking the game," Snead acknowledged embarassedly. "I'm still playing because I keep at it. I love the game. You've got to say the same for Jack."

The sweet-swinging veteran out of Hot Springs, Va., and the brute strong Nicklaus were the key personalities as a logjam emerged from the opening round of the pros' private house party with three men tied at two-under-par 68, Snead and Nicklaus bunched with four others at 69 and 10 bracketed at even par 70 — only three shots blanketing 19 competitors.

The knee-deep rough and rain-soaked greens of the 7,050yard Tanglewood course could scatter the traffic snarl today.

But Nicklaus' stock as a probable repeater soared after the opening round, which saw South Africa's Gary Player stumble to a 73 with a double bogey on the finishing hole.

The tournament leaders, at 68, are hefty Ray Floyd of Miami, who skipped four of the last seven weeks on the tour because of his wife's pregnancy; caustic Hubert Green of Birmingham, Ala., and star-gazer John Schlee, who is sure his destiny is determined by the signs of the Zodiac. He is a Gemini.

Hobnobbing with Snead and Nicklaus, one shot back at 69, are Bobby Cole of South Africa, Tom Watson, Leonard Thompson and rookie Eddie Pearce, the last a native of Tampa, Fla., who played under an Arnold Palmer scholarship at neighboring Wake Forest College.

Palmer, 44, still believing he can win the only major title that has evaded him and thus end a 10-year drought of major victories, took a large section of gallery on a rain-dampened tour of the scenic course and bogeyed the last hole for a 72.

Johnny Miller, the season's leading money winner, bogeyed the final hole and shot 71, where he was tied with seven others, including Chi Chi Rodriguez and former PGA winner Dave Stockton.

Clowning Is Relaxing To Wimbledon Champ

By JOHN SHURR
Associated Press Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Wimbledon champ Jimmy Connors, whose playful antics entertained the crowd at the $130,000 U.S. Clay Court Tennis Championships again Thursday, says a little bit of clowning "helps me relax."

"It's just the way I play the game," the 21-year-old superstar said after teaming with Ilie Nastase of Romania for a 6-0, 6-4 doubles victory over Peter Fleming, Chatham, N.J., and Patrick DuPre, Birmingham, Ala.

Connors' petite, attractive fiancee, Chris Evert of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., is more serious when it comes to tennis, Jimmy added.

"That's her game to be businesslike — to concentrate on every shot and all," Connors explained.

The Connors-Nastase doubles combo, seeded No. 1 in the tourney, had little trouble handling their less-experienced opponents in the first set, but had to rally in the second from a 20 deficit.

At one point in the fourth game of the first set, Nastase, ranked second behind Connors in men's singles, was called for a foot fault on his first service.

Connors sent chuckles through the crowd when he turned to his Romanian partner and said: "I told you about your foot faults."

The top-ranked doubles pair also had their fun with lobs. Connors finally got his comeuppance when DuPre blasted a return shot between the two, prompting Connors to say to Nastase only after the ball had already gone out of play: "Yours."

The Connors-Nastase lobbing received another setback in the first game of the second set when DuPre again put one past Jimmy with a well-placed corner shot.

The undaunted Connors kept on going toward the Indianapolis Racquet Club's stadium court bleachers and sat with the fans for a brief moment.

In other action Thursday, No. 5-seeded Terry Holladay of La Jolla, Calif., was upset by Gail Chanfreau of France, 6-1, 6-2. Mrs. Chanfreau, a former Clay Court champion, lost the first game of the first set, then took the next six games and the next three in the second set.

Jeanne Evert, No.3 women's seed from Fort Lauderdale, rebounded for a 6-4, 6-4 win over Natalie Fuchs of France. Miss Evert's older sister, top-seeded Chris, swamped Roberta Stark of Jacksonville, Fla., 6-2, 6-2.

Sam Snead has played in the last 35 Masters golf tournaments.

Rudi Leads A's Over Rangers

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Joe Rudi knocked in five runs with two singles, a double and a home run Thursday night to lead the Oakland A's to a 10-2 rout of the Texas Rangers and embellish his flashy offensive figures.

"Baseball people know he's a solid player, although I've heard he's underrated," said Oakland Manager Alvin Dark.

"It doesn't worry me about the lack of publicity," said Rudi, who is hitting .310 with 72 RBI and 13 home runs.

In the other American League games, the Milwaukee Brewers stopped the Boston Red Sox 5-3; the California Angels stopped the Chicago White Sox 6-4; the Detroit Tigers nipped the Cleveland Indians 43 and the Minnesota Twins beat the Kansas City Royals 3-2 in 14 innings.

Jesus Alou also had a good night for the A's. He opened the game with a first-pitch home run and added two singles, driving in two other runs. The homer was Alou's first of the season.

Jim "Catfish" Hunter breezed to his 16th victory against nine losses, scattering nine hits.

The A's bombarded young David Clyde with an eight hit attack in the four innings the young lefty lasted. Clyde is now 3-8.

Brewers 5, Red Sox 3

Don Money's double keyed a four-run third inning as Milwaukee whipped Boston to snap a string of six straight complete-game victories by Luis Tiant, 17-8.

The Brewers had lost eight of their past nine starts, including three to the Red Sox.

Angels 6, White Sox 4

Doug Howard singled to drive in the tying run, then scored on Ellie Rodriguez' single in a three-run eighth inning that carried California past Chicago.

Tigers 4, Indians 3

Jim Nettles singled home one run and two more runs scored on consecutive errors by pitcher Tom Buskey and first baseman Tom McCraw as Detroit rallied in the ninth inning to beat Cleveland.

Twins 3, Royals 2

Tony Oliva drove in a run with a sacrifice fly in the 14th inning to lead Minnesota over Kansas City. Rod Carew opened the 14th with a single and moved to third on a one-out base hit by Larry Hisle before scoring on Oliva's sacrifice fly off relief pitcher Joe Hoerner.

National League scores: Montreal 3, St. Louis 2; Philadelphia 2, Chicago 1; Pittsburgh 4, New York 3 and Atlanta 1, Houston 0.

Ozark Has Title Race Figured

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Manager Danny Ozark of the Philadelphia Phillies has the National League East championship race all figured out.

The Phillies moved to within one-half game of first place St. Louis Thursday night, nipping Chicago 2-1 for their third straight victory over the Cubs. Afterwards, Ozark analyzed his club's situation.

"All we have to do is what we did today, yesterday and the day before," said Ozark.

And what would that be, Danny? "Win," he said. "Forget about the other guys. Just keep winning. Eventually, we'll get to where we're supposed to be."

That seems to be exactly the strategy being employed by the hard-charging Pittsburgh Pirates,, who moved to within 3½ games of the top by defeating the New York Mets 4-3.

Elsewhere in the NL Thursday, Montreal trimmed St. Louis 3-2 in 13 innings and Atlanta shut out Houston 1-0. San Francisco, San Diego, Los Angeles and Cincinnati did not play.

Philadelphia's victory was the fourth straight and fifth in six games for the second place Phillies, who kept the pressure on front-running St. Louis. It was not, however, easily accomplished.

Ron Schueler of the Phillies and Chicago's Bill Bonham were tied at 1-1 in the seventh inning when Mike Anderson walked, stole second and reached third on a wild pitch. Then with two out, Dave Cash bounced a grounder up the middle that hit the seam of the artifical infield and skipped past shortstop Don Kessinger for the winning hit.

Pirates 4, Mets 3

Richie Zisk's ninth inning home run gave Pittsburgh its victory over New York and completed a three-game sweep for the Pirates.

Zisk connected against Jon Matlack for his 12th homer of the season and made a winner of Jerry Reuss, who pitched a six-hitter.

The Pirates come from behind, wiping out an early 3-0 Met lead by scoring three runs in the fourth inning.

Expos 3, Cardinals 2

The Cardinals and Expos struggled into the 13th inning before Hal Breeden's bases-loaded, two-out, pinch single broke it up and gave Montreal the victory.

Bob Bailey opened the Expos' 13th with a single and moved up on a sacrifice. Walks to Ron Woods and Barry Foote sandwiched around a strikeout, loaded the bases and set the stage for Breeden's winning hit.

McAshen Leads Sharks In Win

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Coach Bud Asher said he knew all along that Eddie McAshan would be a great quarterback for the Jacksonville Sharks.

And Sharks' owner Fran Monaco agreed, calling McAshan "another Johnny Unitas," after the rookie from Georgia Tech led Jacksonville to a pair of fourth quarter touchdowns and a 21-14 victory over the Hawaiians Thursday night in the World Football League's nationally televised game.

McAshan sat clutching an injured knee after the contest, but smiled through the pain and gamely predicted he will play against the Florida Blazers in Orlando next Wednesday.

"It doesn't hurt nearly as bad when you win," he said. Doctors will evaluate the injury in a day or two but believe it is only a bad sprain.

He suffered the injury after he dived the final yard for the winning touchdown with 20 seconds left on the clock. Going for a meaningless action point, McAshan went back to pass and was smacked by two Honolulu linemen.

Twice in the fourth quarter, he drove the Sharks 80 yards to touchdowns, hitting four key passes and sweeping both ends on option runs.

Another rookie quarterback, Reggie Oliver from Marshall University, led Jacksonville, now 2-3 on the season, most of the first half. He completed six of seven passes but could only set up a pair of field goals of 22 yards and 35 yards by Grant Guthrie.

Meanwhile, Norris Weese of Honolulu, the league's leading passer, took advantage of Sharks mistakes — a fumble at the 10 and a short punt that was returned to the Sharks' 42 — for a pair of touchdowns. The loss brought the Hawaiians record to 1-4.

Ecomomists Are Optimistic

By CHARLES WHITE
Associated Press Writer

Business leaders and economic experts are hopeful that the nation's fiscal picture will brighten in the wake of President Nixon's resignation.

But they coupled their optimism with a wait-and-see attitude towards the economic policies that the Ford administration will adopt.

James H. Needham, president of the New York Stock Exchange, said, "The rapport that Vice President Ford has with the Congress bodes well for the economy."

Predicting some improvement in the stock market and the outlook for investments was Hendrick Houtthaaker, a former member of the presidential Council of Economic Advisers who is now teaching economics at Harvard College.

However Houtthaaker said interest rates probably would not be affected — "A lot depends on what President Ford says about economic policy after he is inaugurated."

Ford has had no opportunity to comment on economic policy beyond expressing opposition to wage and price controls, said Houtthaaker.

"If he introduces a positive program, it is possible he will get a good deal of support, as part of the usual honeymoon a new president gets," Houtthaaker said.

Edgar B. Speer, board chairman of U.S. Steel Corp., said, "Being the great nation that we are, I am certain we will quickly adjust to a new administration without disruption of the country's economic and diplomatic life."

The president of the Bank of North America, A.W. Clausen, said, "With the air now cleared, we fervently hope the new administration, the Congress and the people of the United States will unite to concentrate on the Number One domestic threat, which is inflation."

University of Chicago economics Prof. Milton Friedman said the important question is whether Ford's new economic policies will increase the influence of the presidency, because government spending has been controlled by a Congress he described as reluctant to take strong anti-inflation steps.

"Nobody is willing to bite the bullet," he said. "I think the people are ahead of their political leaders. I think the public would welcome a strong policy. They are so fed up with inflation they would not panic."

Eight Deputies Take Fifth

DALLAS (AP) — Eight Dallas County sheriff's deputies took the Fifth Amendment Thursday when asked at a court of inquiry if they asked for or accepted gratuities for tracking down bond jumpers.

The deputies who testified at the inquiry which resumed after a recess of more than two months were Joe Pierce, V. J. Pavlu, R. L. Heard, P. D. Ryan, R. F. McKnight, G. W. Temple, Charles Turner and J. R. Womack Jr.

Part of the duties of all eight of the deputies is to apprehend bond jumpers after warrants have been issued for their arres.

"Has any bondsman or attorney ever approached you and solicited or offered to pay or give you money or any other form of consideration or benefit for your performance of the official duty of arresting a person pursuant to a capias (warrant)?" Asst. Dist. Atty. Harry Schultz asked each of the deputies.

Each invoked the Fifth Amendment right to refuse to testify on grounds of possible self-incrimination.

The deputies also refused to testify when asked if they had ever solicited payment for attorneys or bondsmen for the practice called "bounty hunting."

The court of inquiry at Dist. Judge Dee Brown Walker's court resumed today.

Also testifying Thursday was Fannin County Sheriff Raymond Taylor. He admitted he had certified a number of blank bail bonds brought to him by Fannin County rancher-investor Gaylen Murray.

Nixon's Resignation Address To Nation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Following is the text of President Nixon's resignation address to the nation Thursday night:

Good Evening. This will be the 37th time I will have spoken to you from this office where so many decisions have been made that shaped the history of this nation.

Each time I have done so to discuss with you some matters which I believed affected the national interest. In all the decisions I have made in my public life I have always tried to do what was best for the nation.

Throughout the long and difficult period of Watergate, I have felt it was my duty to perservere, to make every possible effort to complete the kind of office to which you elected me.

In the past few days, however, it has become evident to me that I no longer have a strong enough political base in the Congress to justify continuing that effort.

As long as there was such a base, I felt strongly that it was necessary to see the constitutional process through to its conclusion; to do otherwise would be unfaithful to the spirit of that deliberately difficult process, and a dangerously destabilizing precedent for the future.

But with the disappearance of that base I now believe that the constitutional purpose has been served and there is no longer a need for the process to be prolonged.

I would have preferred to carry through to the finish no matter the personal agony that would have been involved. And my family unanimously urged me to do so.

But the interest of the nation must always come before any personal consideration.

From the discussions I have had with congressional and other leaders, I have concluded that because of the Watergate matter I might not have the support of the Congress that I would consider necessary to back the very difficult decisions and carry out the duties of this office in the way the interests of the nation will require.

I have never been a quitter. To leave office before my term is completed is abhorrent to every instinct in my body.

As President I must put the interests of America first. America needs a full-time president and a full-time Congress, particularly at this time with problems we face at home and aboad.

To continue to fight through the months ahead for my personal vindication would almost totally absorb the time and attention of both the President and the Congress in a period when our entire focus should be on the great issues of peace abroad and prosperity without inflation at home.

Therefore, I shall resign the presidency effective at noon tomorrow.

Vice President Ford will be sworn in as president at that hour in this office.

As I recall the high hopes for America with which we began this second term I feel a great sadness that I will not be here in this office working in your behalf to achieve those hopes in the next two and a half years.

But in turning over direction of the government to Vice President Ford, I know, as I told the nation when I nominated him for that office 10 months ago, that the leadership of America will be in good hands.

In passing this office to the vice president, I also do so with the profound sense of the weight of responsibility that will fall on his shoulders tomorrow and, therefore, understanding the patience, the cooperation he would need from all.

As he assumes that responsibility, he will deserve the help and the support of all of us. As we look to the future, the first essential is to begin healing the wounds of this nation; to put the bitterness and the divisions of the recent past behind us and to rediscover those shared ideals that lie at the heart of our strength and unity as a great and as a free people.

By taking this action, I hope that I will have hastened the start of that process of healing which is so desperately needed in America.

I regret deeply any injuries that may have been done in the course of the events that led to this decison. I would say only that if some of my judgments were wrong, and some were wrong, they were made in what I believed at the time to be the best interest of the nation.

To those who have stood with me during these past difficult months, to my family, my friends, to many others who joined in supporting my cause because they believed it was right, I will be eternally grateful for your support.

And to those who have not felt able to give me your support, let me say I leave with no bitterness toward those who have opposed me, because all of us, in the final analysis, have been concerned with the good of the country however our judgments might differ.

So, let us all now join together in affirming that common commitment and in helping our new President succeed for the benefit of all Americans.

I shall leave this office with regret at not completing my term, but with gratitude for the privilege of serving as your President for the past 5½ years. These years have been a momentous time in the history of our nation and the world. They have been a time of achievement in which we can all be proud, achievements that represent the shared efforts of the administration, the Congress and the people.

But the challenges ahead are equally great, and they, too, will require the support and the efforts of the Congress and the people working in cooperation with the new administration.

We have ended America's longest war, but in the work of securing a lasting peace in the world, the goals ahead are even more far-reaching and more difficult.

We must complete a structure of peace so that it will be said of this generation, our generation, of Americans, by the people of all nations, not only that we ended one war, but that we prevented future wars.

We have unlocked the doors that for a quarter of a century stood between the United States and the People's Republic of China.

We must now insure that the one quarter of the world's people who live in the People's Republic of China will be and remain not our enemies but our friends.

In the Middle East, one hundred million people in the Arab countries, many of whom have considered us their enemy for nearly 20 years, now look on us as their friends. We must continue to build on that friendship so that peace can settle at last over the Middle East and so that the cradle of civilization will not become its grave.

Together with the Soviet Union we have made the crucial breakthroughs that have begun the process of limiting nuclear arms. But we must set as our goal not just limiting, but reducing and finally destroying these terrible weapons so that they cannot destroy our civilization and so that the threat of nuclear war will no longer hang over the world and the people.

We have opened the new relation with the Soviet Union. We must continue to develop and expand that new relationship so that the two strongest nations of the world will live together in cooperation rather than confrontation.

Around the world, in Asia, and Africa, in Latin America, in the Middle East, there are millions of people who live in terrible poverty, even starvation. We must keep as our goal turning away from production for war and expanding production for peace so that people everywhere on this earth can at least look forward in their children's time, if not in our own time, to having the necessities for a decent life.

Here in America, we are fortunate that most of our people have not only the blessings of liberty, but also the means to live full and good and, by the world's standards, even abundant lives. We must press on, however, to a goal of not only more and better jobs, but of full opportunity for every American, and of what we are striving so hard right now to achieve, prosperity without inflation.

For more than a quarter of a century in public life I have shared in the turbulent history of this era. I have fought for what I believed in. I have tried to the best of my ability to discharge those duties and meet those responsibilities that were entrusted to me.

Sometimes I have succeeded and sometimes I have failed, but always I have taken heart from what Theodore Roosevelt once said about the man in the arena: "whose face is marred by dust and sweat and blood, who strives valiantly, who errs and comes short again and again because there is not effort without error and shortcoming, but who does actually strive to do the deeds, who knows the great enthusiasms, the great devotions, who spends himself in a worthy cause, who at the best knows in the end the triumph of high achievements and who at the worst, if he fails, at least fails while daring greatly."

I pledge to you tonight that as long as I have a breath of life in my body, I shall continue in that spirit. I shall continue to work for the great causes to which I have been dedicated throughout my years as a congressman, a senator, a vice president and president; the cause of peace not just for America but among all nations, prosperity, justice and opportunity for all of our people.

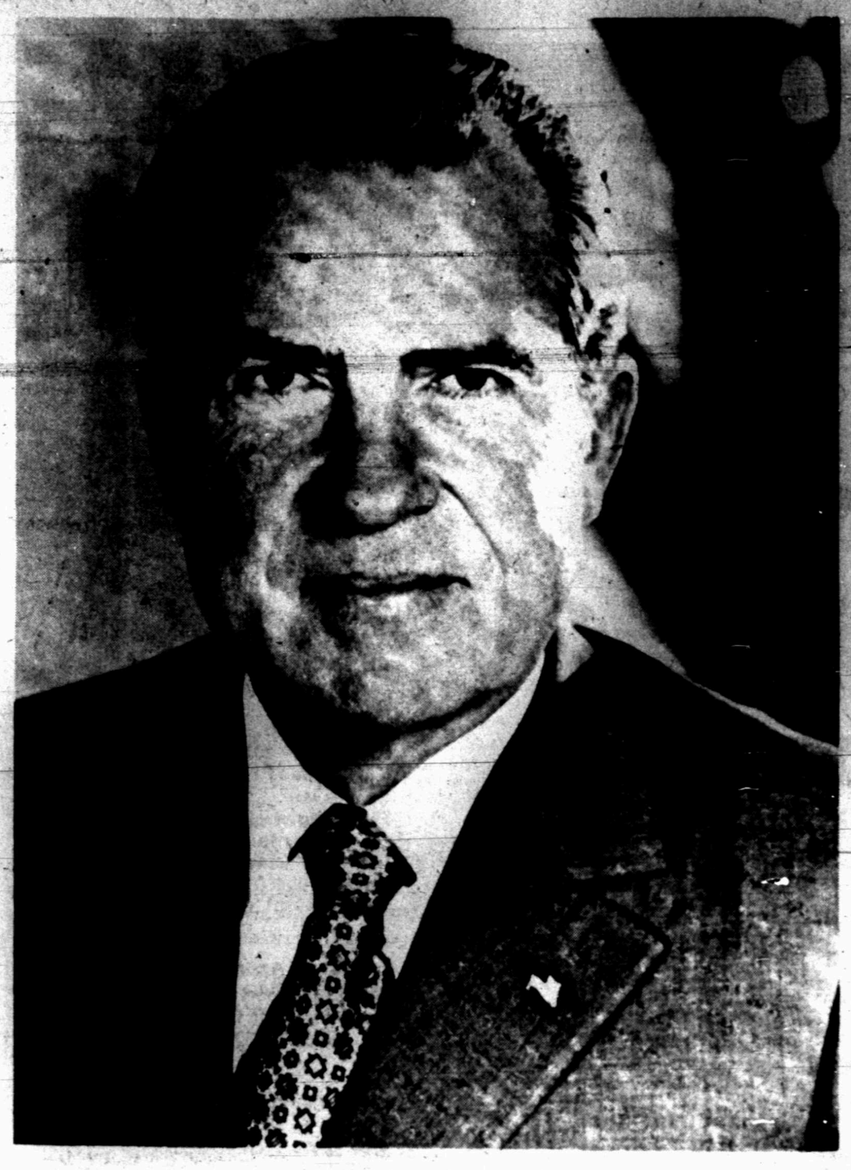

There is one cause above all to which I have been devoted and to which I shall always be devoted for as long as I live.

When I first took the oath of office as President five and one-half years ago, I made this sacred commitment: "to consecrate my office, my energies and all the wisdom I can summon to the cause of peace among nations."

I have done my very best in all the days since to be true to that pledge. As a result of these efforts, I am confident that the world is a safer place today, not only for the people of America, but for the people of all nations, and that all of our children have a better chance than before of living in peace rather than dying in war.

This, more than anything, is what I hoped to achieve when I sought the presidency. This, more than anything, is what I hope will be my legacy to you, to our country, as I leave the presidency.

To have served in this office is to have felt a very personal sense of kinship with each and every American. In leaving it, I do so with this prayer: may God's grace be with you in all the days ahead.

SEES TRIUMPHS REDUCED TO ASHES

Nixon Once Hailed As Political Worker

By FRANK CORMIER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Once hailed as a political miracle worker, Richard M. Nixon has seen his election triumphs reduced to ashes, leaving many Americans wondering if he really did have that sure touch for politics.

How could a smart politician permit the Watergate burglary, which seemed safely consigned as a footnote to history in early 1973, to mushroom into the most shattering disaster ever to overtake an American president?

Some observers questioned Nixon's credentials as a master politician even before Watergate.

Take the big "Nixon miracle" of 1968 when the onetime vice president captured the highest office just six years after seemingly renouncing all political ambition with the emotional declaration, "You won't have Nixon to kick around any more because, gentlemen, this is my last press conference."

He had, of course, just lost a race for governor of California and, in anger and frustration, pronounced his own political obituary — or so it seemed at the time.

The 1968 Nixon comeback indeed had its dramatic elements. But his campaign that year, against a Democratic opponent hobbled by close association with an unpopular Lyndon B. Johnson, hardly offered proof that winner Nixon was a politician with a sure touch.

In late September, with the campaign well under way, the Gallup Poll gave Nixon a 15-point edge over Democrat Hubert H. Humphrey. A landslide appeared in the making.

Nixon held a news conference at which he outlined a careful strategy to court the votes of key states and insure that his campaign "peaked" — a word Nixon has used often — precisely on election day.

It didn't happen that way. A cautious Nixon frittered away his enormous advantage as the campaign progressed. Election day found him the winner by less than 500,000 votes — an advantage measured as a fraction of one per cent of the 73 million ballots cast.

Many Humphrey partisans contended their man would have won had the campaign continued for another week with Nixon sticking to his play-it-safe strategy.

Similarly, Nixon appeared to toss away an excellent opportunity to win the presidency over John F. Kennedy in 1960. As the incumbent Republican vice president for eight years, Nixon came closer to being a household name and, at the start of the campaign, enjoyed a 53-47 Gallup Poll edge over Kennedy.

Perhaps due in large measure to a cocky but unwise decision to join the lesser-known Kennedy in a series of broadcast debates watched by an estimated 85 million Americans, Nixon saw his safe advantage erode until his challenger emerged the winner in the closest presidential election in 76 years.

Even as President, and quite apart from Watergate horrors, Nixon's political acumen was not above challenge despite his easy 1972 re-election by a historic margin.

Try as Nixon did, he never was able to generate public fervor for a broad package of domestic initiatives he variously labeled The New Federalism and The Second American Revolution.

While voters greeted most of his domestic legislation with a ho-hum attitude, aides said in Nixon's defense that such innovative concepts have no impact on individual voters until they are put in place.

Nixon had better luck in staking out positions on emotional issues that appealed to segments of his core constituency — opposition to busing to achieve racial integration and support for federal aid to parochial schools.

In the foreign affairs area, Nixon influenced voters in a way he couldn't manage in domestic policy. He showed finesse, and perhaps a good sense of timing, in working with Henry A. Kissinger to promote rapprochement with mainland China and detente with the Soviet Union — moves that would have aroused intense opposition a few years earlier.

Nixon brought to the White House a long-established reputation as a hard-nosed infighter from past campaigns. However, except for a brief and ineffectual fling in the 1970 off-year elections, he largely eschewed the harsh rhetorc of the past.

Tough campaign tactics — some critics called them dirty tricks — marked the early Nixon on the stump. He played so rough that the late Harry S. Truman threatened in the 1950s to punch him on sight. Nixon's tongue then was so barbed that Sam Rayburn, the late Democratic House speaker, once exploded, "So far as we are concerned, his name is mud."

Tallest Tree Falls

WASHINGTON (AP) — It was James McCord, one of the Watergate burglars, who predicted that before the scandal was over, "all the trees in the forest will fall."

The tallest fell Thursday night.

Richard Nixon, the first president in history to be driven from office by scandal, said he was leaving because "the Watergate matter" had eroded his support in Congress. He explained the erosion no further. Perhaps it was expecting too much of a departing president to acknowledge publicly that scarcely anyone in Congress believed him anymore.

It was a curious farewell in several ways. Once he had let it be known, through his daughter, that he would fight removal from office "down to the last vote to the Senate." At other times he has said, "I love the battle" of politics and the presidency.

Thursday night he said, "I would have preferred to carry through to the finish whatever the personal agony it would have involved ... but the interest of the nation must always come before any personal considerations."

He seemed to be saying he was giving up the agony in a higher cause. But then he also said he was giving up the fight "for personal vindication."

"Therefore...." Here Richard Nixon paused and swallowed. It was the one tiny visible moment where he appeared to reveal emotion that needed to be controlled. Then: "I shall resign the presidency effective at noon tomorrow."

Nixon's Cabinet Was Changeable

WASHINGTON (AP) — Only in small part because of Watergate, President Nixon's Cabinet was among the most changeable in American history.

Nearly two dozen men came and went as political heads of the vast federal bureaucracy.

Not one among the original Cabinet survived Nixon's term in office.

Except for Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, none among the present cabinet could claim to be a confidante of the President.

Four former cabinet members either pleaded guilty or were indicted on Watergate-related charges, among them two attorneys general.

Another attorney general, Elliot L. Richardson, resigned rather than carry out a presidential order to fire the special Watergate prosecutor.

Other presidents have looked first for advice to their White House aides, but none so exclusively as Richard Nixon. Before he was engulfed by Watergate, the President tried repeatedly to draw even more power toward the White House at the expense of his cabinet.

When his attempts to form a super-Cabinet, a kind of administrative umbrella for domestic affairs, met a stone wall in Congress, Nixon made many changes by simple executive order.

One Cabinet man, then-Treasury Secretary George Shultz, was given the additional title of presidential assistant.

Frequently, cabinet officers were left to answer to Congress and the public for policies they had little or no part in forming.

Former Secretary of State William P. Rogers and former Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird, two of Nixon's oldest friends, went time after time to Capitol Hill to testify on administration policies in Indochina. Both counseled privately against the widening of the war and other policies they were forced to defend publicly.

Even as Nixon concentrated his own power and those of White House assistants, he sought through revenue sharing to disperse federal services for the states to administer.

The effect was the same: Less influence, power and prestige for federal departments dealing with domestic problems. Some cabinet members like former Michigan Gov. George Romney, left in simple frustration; others were shuffled to different posts within the administration.

When Nixon took office in 1969, he chose men he knew well, old friends he felt he could trust. There was Rogers, remembered as a reliable ally from their days together in the Eisenhower administration.

There was John N. Mitchell, the enigmatic and reclusive New York bond lawyer, partner in the same law firm Nixon joined between runs for political office. Mitchell, since resigned as attorney general, was found innocent by a New York jury of influence peddling in the Vesco case. Other charges are pending.

Another with close personal ties in those early days was Robert H. Finch, the California lieutenant governor who became secretary of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Watergate Couldn't Be Stopped

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Watergate was merely a footnote on the Nixon presidency at first, an aberration in his re-election campaign. But it grew, angrily, into a scandal that stonewalling couldn't hide and presidential power couldn't stop.

While the skeleton of the story was unearthed piecemeal, the full involvement of the Nixon men in the break-in and cover-up was known only to themselves for nine months after five men crept into Democratic party headquarters to bug and pry.

But then, in the incredible months of March and April 1973, the silence was breached and the scandal burst over men in the highest councils of government, finally staining Richard Nixon himself.

The President might have ridden it out, like he did so many other personal challenges, had it not been for his fateful decision in 1971 to activate an unseen taping system designed to preserve every word said while he was in his offices.

Nixon's stubborn refusal to yield those tapes brought the first full-blown cry for his impeachment. And it was the tapes themselves, with their revelations of knowledge and subterfuge, that produced the most damning evidence against Richard Nixon and the men who surrounded him.

Watergate quickly became a code word for scandals that embraced a bewildering catalogue of alleged misdeeds, bringing Nixon's leadership and honesty into question. But it remained the poisonous core. Eventually a grand jury would find probable cause to believe the President was involved in a criminal conspiracy to thwart the Watergate investigation.

Nixon had promised cooperation with investigators, but yielded tapes and documents only when other alternatives had failed. He exhausted every avenue, from ignoring congressional subpoenas to fighting his case in the Supreme Court.

And after the House Judiciary Committee recommended an article of impeachment based on the subpoenas and the Supreme Court ruled against him, Nixon admitted he withheld three crucial tapes, "a serious act of omission for which I take full responsibility and which I deeply regret."

Until then, the President had continually asserted his innocence, battling a crisis of confidence that nibbled inexorably at his public support.

In August 1973, he spoke of a "backward-looking obsession with Watergate." In November, the nation had the spectacle of a defensive President declaring "I am not a crook."

In January 1974, he used the State of the Union message to declare "one year of Watergate is enough," and to assure the nation that "I have no intention whatever of ever walking away from the job that the people elected me to do for the people of the United States."

In his speech of Aug. 15, 1973, Nixon said "the time has come to turn Watergate over to the courts where the questions of guilt or innocence belong."

In the year that followed, 20 people who had worked at his side in the White House, or elsewhere in his administration or his re-election campaign, had pleaded guilty, been convicted or were awaiting trial for criminal offenses. Nine former White House aides, including top lieutenant John D. Ehrlichman, had been sentenced to prison.

The President's actions in the Watergate aftermath were the genesis of the first article of impeachment recommended by the House Judiciary Committee to the full House of Representatives. It said that Nixon "in violation of his constitutional duty to take care that the laws be faithfully executed, has prevented, obstructed, and impeded the administration of justice ..."

The story of the Watergate break-in is too well known to require extensive recounting.

Under the direction of two former White House aides, G. Gordon Liddy and E. Howard Hunt Jr., five men with CIA backgrounds twice broke into Democratic National Committee headquarters in the plush Watergate office complex. The first entry, on Memorial Day 1972, was to plant bugs and photograph files. The second, on June 17 — when the burglars were arrested — was to correct a transmitter malfunction and to copy more documents.

The burglars were found to have been paid with funds from the Committee for the Re-election of the President, which as a result won the popular acronym CEEP. The mission, according to some testimony, was approved by former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell, Nixon's one-time law partner and campaign director. The fruits of the wiretaps went to the committee and, again according to some of the testimony, into the White House.

Charles W. Colson testified that when Nixon learned of the break-in "he was so furious that he had thrown an ashtray across the room at Key Biscayne and ... was just outraged over the fact that anybody even remotely connected with the campaign organization would have anything to do with something like Watergate."

But the June 23 Nixon tape shows he ordered a halt to the FBI's probe of the break-in, didn't want to "second guess Mitchell and the rest." He said later, "I was aware of the advantages this course of action would have with respect to limiting possible public exposure of involvement by persons connected with the re-elecion committee."

Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler, with the President at his Florida home, described the incident at the time as "a third-rate burglary." But the chiefs of the re-election committee met in Washington to discuss their moves.

The President insisted from early on, "The White House had had no involvement in this particular incident." In August he said that was confirmed in an investigation conducted by counsel John W. Dean III.

Dean was to say later he conducted no investigation and that he worked overtime to thwart the probe.

In September 1972, seven men were indicted for burglary and wiretapping and conspiracy. Nixon complimented Dean on keeping involvement from the White House by "putting your fingers in the dikes every time that leaks have sprung here and sprung there."

By March, two of the seven had been tried and convicted, the other five having pleaded guilty. Reporters asked few Watergate questions; nothing was volunteered.

But that was to change.

On March 23, at a court session convened for the sentencing of the burglars, U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica disclosed a letter from James W. McCord Jr., alleging pressure on the defendants to plead guilty of perjury in the trial and of the involvement of others.

Unknown publicly at that time was that Dean had been telling Nixon the Watergate story, detailing the role that Nixon's aides — including himself — had in paying hush money to the defendants, suborning perjury, and of the planning sessions for the break-in. The President was told of E. Howard Hunt's blackmail demand and allegedly told Dean to meet it.

"Who can understand his errors?" Psalm 19:12.

Advertently or not, we make errors every day,
And some of them are comical
and others not that way.
A type of wrongful action and one of error's kin
Is a short, three-lettered, ugly word, burningly called sin.
We dub a sin experience if we are guilty of the act,
But if other persons are involved, we are so much more exact.

Guarding against sticking their necks out is an old precaution of weather predictors, the National Geographic says. "Poor Robin" wrote in his 1664 almanac: "We may expect some showers of rain this month, or the next, or the next after that or else we shall have a very dry spring."

Texas Officials Agree Nixon Did Right Thing

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Texas' elected officials, Democratic and Republican, generally agreed Thursday night that President Nixon did the right thing in resigning.

"Once again it has been demonstrated that our system—the greatest in the world—can withstand any strain," said Gov. Dolph Briscoe leader of the Texas Democratic Party. He added that "now is the time to look to the future. We cannot allow ourselves to become paralyzed by a crisis, no matter how severe."

"The climate in Congress was such that had he not chosen this option the country would have been subject to the wrenching experience of an impeachment trial which would have gone on for months and suffered the consequences of a probably leadership gap during that period," said Texas' senior senator, John Tower, top man and spokesman for the Texas Republican Party. Tower said he believed that "history will judge him (Nixon) well."

"I'm relieved," said Atty. Gen. John Hill, Democrat. "Now we can devote our total energies to working together to find realistic and productive solutions to our serious domestic problems."

Speaker Price Daniel Jr. said that Nixon "has obviously been burdened with the problems of Watergate and there has been too little emphasis and positive action on other domestic problems. It is "in the best interest of the country," Daniel, a Democrat, said.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, Democrat, said that "our prayers should be with Gerald Ford. We must unite behind him to bring the country out of this crisis."

Former U.S. Sen. Ralph Yarborough, Democrat, said "it goes against the grain for him (Nixon) to give up without a fight, the economy is crying for a stabilizing factor."

Ed Clark, Austin attorney who was former ambassador under President Lyndon Johnson and a Democratic party leader, said he was saddened and "heart-sore" but "this country is strong, we will prevail in the cause of good government, peace and goodness."

John Gronouski, University of Texas faculty member who was postmaster general under Presidents John F. Kennedy and Johnson, said the resignation will give new hope to many Republicans. "What might have been a pretty easy election for the Democrats in 1976 will be a very different story. It will be a real contest in 1976," he said.

State party chairman agreed with present and past officials.

"Richard Nixon's achievements, especially in the area of foreign policy, have brought the world to the brink of a stable peace," said state GOP chairman Jack Warren, Tyler, "Only time and history can place in perspective the Nixon administration weighed against the misfortune of Watergate."

State Democratic chairman Calvin Guest, Bryan, said "I join with all Americans of all political persuasions in the hope and prayers that the new leaders of our nation will be able to restore the confidence of the American people and our political system and in our economy."

Democratic National Chairman Robert Strauss said, "This is a momentous time for all Americans. However, our problems as a nation have not disappeared ... We Democrats hope to join with our new President in seeking common solutions to our nation's critical problems. Toward this end we give Gerald Ford our sincere pledge of support in his efforts to restore public confidence in the office of the presidency."

Mrs. Ann Armstrong, counselor to the President, said from Armstrong, Tex.; "I think the decision to resign was the right thing to do in the interest of the country. I have known Mrs. Nixon and the family and my heart goes out to them. I think our new president, Gerry Ford, will be a great leader and unifier for all Americans. His wisdom, confidence and absolute integrity are just what we need."

State Rep. Fred Agnich, Republican National Committeeman from Texas, said: "I listened to President Nixon's speech with sorrow and distress. I can understand the tragic nature that led to this resignaton. I hope the American people and future historians will look not only at Watergate but also at his achievements in reapporchment with Red China, an easing of relations with Russia and the solution of the Mid—East conflict."

Hearing Set To Stop Convention

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — An attempt to stop the State Democratic Convention from being held on a Jewish holy day will be heard at 10 a.m. Tuesday in federal court here.

U.S. Dist. Judge Adrian A. Spears Thursday issued an order asking the Democratic Executive Committee to show cause why it should not change its convention date.

The suit was filed Wednesday in federal court in Austin by 11 persons. U.S. Dist. Judge Jack Roberts, of Austin, is presently recovering from surgery.

According to the suit, the convention is scheduled to begin Sept. 17, which conflicts with Jewish High Holy Day of Rosh Hashanah. It is seeking injunctive relief.

The lawsuit was filed against the State Democratic Committee, the State Democratic party, Calvin Guest, party chairman, and Julian Cotten, secretary.

According to the suit, a final report submitted by the ad hoc committee on facilities stated "the overwhelming reaction to the proposed change has been opposing a change."

The committee further reported the change would "inconvenience several delegates and would favor Jewish delegates over others," the suit said.

The committee also stated the change "would set a bad precedent."

Those filing the suit claim the ad hoc committee meeting was "not announced and only four members were present for the meeting."

According to the lawsuit, calling the convention for Sept. 17 "constitutes an unconstitutional burden on Jewish Delegates" First Admentment rights under the U. S. Constitution.

Body Is Identified

ORANGE, Tex. (AP) — Orange county Sheriff's deputies identified Thursday the body of a Connecticut woman found on IH 10 and FM 1130 by a 15-year-old boy.

The partially-clad body of Claudia Marie Bierce, 23, of Naugatuck, Conn., was found shortly before 3 p.m., Charles Morvent Jr., chief deputy at Orange said.

County pathologist Oscar R. Griffin said an autopsy showed the cause of death was strangulation, probably with a leather necklace found around the woman's neck. He placed the death at 10 p.m. Wednesday.

Capt. John E. Wade said letters in a knapsack found nearby showed the woman was hitchhiking from Florida to Big Bend National park in Texas.

She was a registered nurse and was survived by her parents and 10 brothers and sisters.

Decoy Due In Court

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas police department's "prostitute in disguise" who nails unsuspecting males who offer her money in exchange for favors is scheduled to make her first courtroom appearance next week.

Four men are challenging their arrest by the policewoman who is assigned to work Dallas' bars and street corners. Police credit her with more than 70 arrests since July 1.

Prosecutor Stanley Channell said the trials will be held back-to-back Aug. 16 in the court of Municipal Judge William Bennison.

Channell said 20 to 25 other arrests by the policewoman have been disposed of through bond forfeitures or no contest pleas for reduced fines and that he suspected that most took that route to escape the glare of public trial.
