West German leaders study spy scandal

By NESHA STARCEVIC
Associated Press Writer

BONN, West Germany — Chancellor Helmut Kohl opened an emergency Cabinet session today to review West Germany's widening spy scandal, and prosecutors announced that they had begun investigating a sixth person.

Following the Cabinet session, the government was to report to Parliament on the spy affair, which some politicians call the worst espionage case in the history of the federal republic.

Prosecutors announced that an investigation was opened against an employee in the Koblenz-based military procurement office, the sixth case of suspected spying revealed since the beginning of August. They would provide no more information on the investigation.

The chief government spokesman, Friedhelm Ost, also said the Bonn government has been in contact with East Germany over the defection of Hans Joachim Tiedge, a top counter-spy, because of concern that his flight may have been "a panic action." Interior Ministry sources have said Tiedge drank heavily, was deep in debt and suffered from depression.

But the influential conservative newspaper Die Welt quoted unidentified East German sources as saying Tiedge had no interest in meeting West German representatives because he had been a longtime East German agent.

However, Die Welt said Bonn security officials had not determined Tiedge's length of service for East Germany. Officials "have not excluded" the possibility that Tiedge may only have been a spy for about two years, and fled in an "emotional crackup" over security checks ordered after a new director took over the counter-intelligence service in August, the newspaper said.

Officials said Monday that Tiedge, who had been in charge of West German counter-intelligence against East Germany, may have been an undercover Communist agent for 19 years — the length of his employment in the Constitutional Protection Office, West Germany's primary counter-espionage agency.

"In theory he could have been a spy since 1966," Interior Ministry spokesman Michael-Andreas Butz told The Associated Press.

Butz said that as soon as East Germany's official ADN news agency announced Tiedge's defection last Friday, Bonn warned its agents abroad that they are in danger of exposure.

Government officials have said privately that intelligence experts were hastily arranging to bring some of their undercover operatives out of the Soviet bloc out of fear they would be exposed by Tiedge.

Butz said Margarete Hoeke, a secretary in President Richard von Weizsaecker's office arrested Saturday in connection with the spy scandal, had access to secret reports and cables from West German embassies.

Upholding of sodomy law makes gays 'criminals'

By CANDICE HUGHES
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — As many as 1 million homosexual Texans are "criminals again" after a federal appeals court upheld the state's controversial sodomy statute outlawing their sexual behavior, a civil rights advocate said.

The ruling Monday by the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans marked the first time since 1979 that a federal court has upheld the law, which bans certain sexual acts deemed to be deviant.

"A million Texans are now criminals again," said Tom Coleman, an attorney and president of the Texas Human Rights Foundation, which organized and financed the challenge to the sodomy law.

However, an official of the group that kept the long-running lawsuit alive after a three-judge panel last year upheld a lower court's opinion striking down the law said Monday's 9-7 ruling was "the right decision based on Judeo-Christian law."

"I think it's a real turning in our courts," said Keith Thornton, a dentist and official of Dallas Doctors Against AIDS.

Acquired immune deficiency syndrome, a deadly disease whose victims most often have been homosexuals, was not part of the original case. Both sides made it an issue in the appeal, however the 5th Circuit judges did not address the issue in their written opinions.

The decision upholding the 1974 sodomy law reversed the decision of a three-judge 5th Circuit panel and of a Dallas federal judge, who said the law was unconstitutional.

The nine judges in the majority said the law is constitutional "in view of the strong objection to homosexual conduct, which has prevailed in western culture for the past seven centuries...."

However, Judge Irving Goldberg, a member of the three-judge panel, said in the main dissenting opinion Monday: "If ever there was a constitutional right to privacy, Texas has violated it by blatantly intruding into the private sex lives of fully consenting adults."

Coleman said the decision did not surprise him, partly because "Ronald Reagan chose these judges. Ronald Reagan has never been a supporter of civil rights. He is clearly on the record as opposing rights for gays."

Six of the nine voting to uphold the law were appointed by President Reagan.

Coleman said the ruling would be appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court.

"Obviously this was a case involving somewhat of a liberal-conservative issue," said Dallas lawyer Charles Bundren, who represented the appellant in the case, Potter County District Attorney Danny Hill. "I obviously think the makeup of the court is very important."

Hill gave Dallas Doctors Against AIDS credit for the legal victory and for persuading him to appeal the case after Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox opted to drop it after the law was overturned in 1982.

Hill and Bundren said they think the law will deter homosexual conduct.

"We are very very excited about the opinion. I think it will discourage this type of conduct. I also believe it will signal to the community at large that this type of conduct is unacceptable," Bundren said.

But Bill Nelson, president of the Dallas Gay Alliance, rejected the notion of deterrence and said that making homosexual conduct illegal will hamper the fight against AIDS, not help.

Nigeria's military government toppled

ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast (AP) — An army brigadier general announced on Nigeria Radio today that the military government of Maj. Gen. Muhammadu Buhari had been toppled because it abused power and failed to implement needed economic reforms.

The general, who was identified as Joshua Dogonyaro, declared a dusk-to-dawn curfew in Lagos and all state capitals. He said the country's air and sea ports would be closed until further notice.

Nigeria's land borders have been closed since shortly after the Dec. 31, 1983, coup in which Buhari ousted the civilian government of President Shehu Shagari.

British Telecom in London said all telephone service to Nigeria had been suspended. It was impossible to obtain independent verification of the radio report.

Dogonyaro said in a broadcast monitored in the nearby Ivory Coast that the Supreme Military Council was being replaced because "the wishes and aspirations of the people as expressed in the media have been ignored."

The general, claiming to speak on behalf of the Nigerian military forces, said they had acted to replace the Buhari government because of "the slow pace of reform" in overcoming economic difficulties.

He said Buhari's government could no longer be allowed to blame all of Nigeria's problems on the previous civilian government. The broadcast said the Supreme Military Council, headed by Buhari, had been rendered ineffective because "a select few" were taking all the power.

Nigeria, once an island of prosperity in West Africa because of its large oil reserves, has been plunged into debt by falling oil prices. Its free-wheeling economy also has been mired by mismanagement and corruption.

In June, Finance Minister Onaolapo Soleye estimated Nigeria's debts at about $10.3 billion.

After ousting Shagari, Buhari's government arrested hundreds of former public officials, businessmen and some members of their families, charging them with corruption and currency violations. Many have been tried by military courts, but visitors say corruption has not disappeared.

Dogonyaro accused the Buhari government of doing little to improve the economy, which he said was suffering from daily increases in inflation. Under the 1985 budget, the government had pegged inflation at 30 percent.

When Buhari took power, vowing to clean up government and get the economy moving again, there were unconfirmed reports in Lagos that he had acted to forestall a power bid by rebel junior officers.

Dogonyaro said Nigerians welcomed the coup that toppled Shagari, but nearly two years later it had become clear that Buhari's government was plagued by the "by stubborn and ill-advised unilateral action" of a few members charged with day-to-day operations.

"Because this generation of Nigerians and indeed future generations have no other country but Nigeria, we will not stay passive and watch a small group of individuals abuse power to the detriment of our national aspirations and interest," he said.

Hospital hooked on sore decor

SOLDOTNA, Alaska (AP) — When the salmon spawn in Kenai, the "combat fishing" casualties begin limping into the hospital emergency room here.

Along with checks, insurance forms and the odd piece of skin, dozens of hapless fishermen leave a little something else behind: Fish hooks.

Enough fish hooks plucked from various spots on their bodies to fill a big felt board put together by emergency room workers at the Central Peninsula General Hospital.

"They're all little owies," emergency room worker Charlotte Green says of this summer's hook collection.

Owies? We're talking pain — with a capital P. Forget bear stories. Bears just bash you around and eat you. We're talking big, fish-goo-covered, barbed hooks imbedded in every imaginable spot.

How much pain? Pat McCrum, a recent visitor from Sand Point, Idaho, was hustled into the emergency room with a heavy metal lure dangling from his nose. Not the outside; the inside. The ever-so-tender septum.

His wife had nailed him in the schnoz as he stood behind her. Then she gave it a few yanks, trying to get it unsnagged.

"It hurt so bad I couldn't even yell," McCrum said.

Then there's the woman who showed up with a large hook through both lips.

"It was horrible," said nurse Judy Schell. "That was one of the first ones this year."

Between May and October every year, thousands of fishermen from all over the world make the trek to this little town of 3,600, which sits about 160 miles southwest of Anchorage on the Kenai Peninsula.

The rivers and streams are spawning grounds for king, silver and red salmon, and Soldotna sits near some of the best accessible fishing in the state.

That kind of accessibility in a mostly inaccessible state has a price. Fishermen stand shoulder-to-shoulder in places, flailing the waters in unison to avoid tangles — combat fishing at its finest. Sometimes it works. When it doesn't, somebody gets to meet the staff at Central Peninsula where wire cutters and pliers are standard pieces of emergency room equipment.

Most patients are adults, Schell says, and while some hooks are removed from areas not normally exposed to sunlight, most are found in hands or heads.

Will Greenpeace incident break down ties?

WELLINGTON, New Zealand (AP) — Prime Minister David Lange today denounced as inconsistent and "transparent" a report clearing France of involvement in the bombing of the Greenpeace flagship, and said France should recall its ambassdor.

Lange said a French government report issued Monday on the explosion that sank the Rainbow Warrior and killed a crew member in Auckland was a "flamboyant declaration of a breakdown in the relationship," between New Zealand and France.

New Zealand's "minimal position" is that France owes it an apology, he said in a radio interview.

"The French have a remarkable flair for getting out of New Zealand in a hurry," he said. "They've demonstrated that recently. Perhaps the same principle could apply to the diplomat."

However, he said he would make no formal moves until after French Premier Laurent Fabius makes a statement later today. Fabius' office said no precise time had been set for the statement.

He said it would inconceivable that the French would not recall their ambassador, Jacques Bourgoin, for consultations.

The report by French investigator Bernard Tricot, said the French government had spied on the Greenpeace environmental unit in New Zealand. But it said France was not involved in the July 10 bombing of the Rainbow Warrior that killed a Greenpeace photographer.

The Rainbow Warrior had been preparing to sail to French Polynesia to protest French nuclear testing in the South Pacific.

Tricot said six French secret service agents had the vessel under surveillance, but were not responsible for the attack.

Two of the agents, identified in the report as Capt. Dominique Prieur and Maj. Alain Mafart, have been charged in New Zealand with murder, arson and conspiracy. They are in jail.

Midland's Sakowitz store among five to be closed after Christmas

From Staff and Wire Reports

The Midland Sakowitz store is scheduled to be closed after Christmas because of unprofitability, said Marvin Gaspard, public relations director for the Houston-based high-fashion specialty store.

"The profit was just not in Midland. It's an unfortunate thing," he said. "However, there may be an opportunity where employees in Midland could to transfer to our four remaining Houston stores if they'd like to remain with the company," he said.

John Wheeler, Midland Park Mall manager, said he had suspicioned that the Sakowitz store would probably close. "I've been told that this Sakowitz has been one of their most successful. But because of the distribution problems, it would be too expensive to keep it open."

Firm makes video games with little girls in mind

By MICHAEL BASS
Associated Press Writer

RICHMOND, Va. — Move over, Tarzan of the Jungle. Here comes Jenny of the Prairie.

Jenny is the protagonist of the first video game created by Rhiannon Software, a Richmond-based company that bills its products as "computer games for girls." She and her counterparts — Clair, Chelsea and Lauren — think their way out of problems rather than shoot their way out.

The company is the brainchild of Elizabeth Stott and Lucy Ewell, who surveyed the video game market and decided the industry wasn't paying enough attention to girls.

"The problem seemed obvious to us," Ms. Stott said. "The programs were steered to boys and men, mainly because that's who were designing them."

Playing Jenny of the Prairie, Cave Girl Clair, Chelsea of the South Sea Islands and Lauren of the 25th Century requires drama rather than action, rationale rather than reflexes.

Jenny of the Prairie follows the travails of a girl separated from her parents' wagon train as it travels west in 1842. Until the next wagon train, she must use her intelligence and ingenuity to build shelter, gather food and fend off coyotes and snakes.

Clair is set in the New Stone Age, Chelsea takes place in the 1840s, and Lauren is set in a futuristic northwest African desert.

The programs themselves may be fun and games, but Ms. Stott and Ms. Ewell design them for a serious purpose: making computers accessible to girls.

"The problem seemed obvious to us. The programs were steered to boys and men, mainly because that's who were designing them."

— Elizabeth Stott, game developer

Sexual stereotypes and societal pressures discourage girls from embracing the computer revolution even though they have the same aptitudes for computers, Ms. Stott said. "We believe girls ought to have an equal crack at careers. We didn't want them to get tuned out before they were 10 years old."

Ms. Stott, a counseling psychologist, and Ms. Ewell, a systems designer, began Rhiannon in 1982. They have since struggled against established notions and industry traditions, pushing an idea they think is ahead of its time.

Actually, Ms. Stott conceded, the idea's time may never come.

"It's a struggle business-wise," she said. "The games are so different from the Space Invaders prototype.... There's been a lot of resistance with the established system."

When the women looked for money to start the business, banks agreed to lend it only if their husbands co-signed the loan. When they borrowed again to expand, Ms. Stott had to turn to her father as a guarantor.

"They would loan it to the men, although they had nothing to do with the company," she said. "We figured if that's what we had to do, that's what we had to do."

Although a venture capitalist made them a preliminary offer of $1 million, Ms. Stott said, they decided that starting too big would only lead to a bigger fall. They began with $30,000 and expanded with another $50,000.

"We had what we needed, and we broke even the first year," she said. "It's small compared to other companies, but it's a rate of growth we are comfortable with."

Marketing remains a problem, despite an advertising push by publisher Addison-Wesley and a recent nationwide tour by Ms. Stott and Ms. Ewell.

"We've gotten a tremendous kind of personal response from people who have tried the games," Ms. Stott said.

But not many people are trying the games, she said. One reason might be that people are turned off by the perceived feminist slant of the games.

"We're clearly feminist," Ms. Stott said. "It's just that people misinterpret what that means. There's this remedial effort needed. We're going for the girls."

Soviet Union fights continued alcohol abuse with price hike

By ALISON SMALE
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW — Soviet authorities announced immediate price increases Monday on vodka, champagne, fruit wines and beer as part of a anti-alcohol drive that has cut demand for liquor by up to 25 percent.

The price hikes, announced on the national television evening news, had been rumored for two weeks. Lines during the day had lengthened at crowded liquor stores.

The increases take effect Tuesday and will boost the cost of vodka from 25 to 35 percent.

An interview with a Soviet official published Monday in the government newspaper Izvestia confirmed reports that some alcoholics, their supplies restricted by previous measures, have turned to perfume and industrial liquids containing alcohol as a substitute for liquor.

Under the new prices, a half-liter of vodka or cognac (just over a pint) will cost 1.5 rubles ($1.85) more.

Strong grape and fruit and berry wines go up an average 20 kopeks (25 cents) a bottle and beer 5 kopeks (6 cents) a bottle.

The three most popular brands of vodka had sold for 4.7 rubles ($5.78), 5.3 rubles ($6.52) or 6.2 rubles ($7.62) a half-liter.

The cheapest bottle of cognac cost 10 rubles ($12.30).

Berry wines averaged 3 rubles ($3.70) a bottle and beer 45 kopeks (55 cents) a bottle.

Champagne, which had cost 5.50 rubles ($6.76) a bottle, went up the equivalent of $1.23.

The price hikes were the first announced for alcohol since vodka prices went up in September 1981.

A decree in mid-May began the current anti-alcohol drive and warned of price increases as part of the push to reduce drunkenness and alcoholism. That decree cut back the sales hours at liquor stores, raised the drinking age from 18 to 21 and imposed stricter penalties for being drunk in public.

It put liquor store hours at 2 p.m. to 7 p.m. instead of 11 a.m. to 7 p.m., and said those stores near schools and factories would be closed.

In Moscow, many wine stores and "rumychnayas," where drinkers could buy vodka in shot glasses, shut down. Hundreds of people frequently lined up outside liquor stores during the shortened hours, with police supervising the lines.

Restaurants have stopped serving drinks before 2 p.m., and some no longer offer liquor.

Monday's decree said the price of wine, spirits and beer would not be increased in restaurants, which are not major drinking spots for most Soviets.

Anatoly M. Belichenko, the deputy national minister for the food industry, said in an article published Monday in Izvestia that the anti-alcohol drive has cut demand for beer by 25 percent in Moscow.

He said the Moscow wine and champagne plant was working at 20 percent of previous capacity, the production of vodka, wines and beer was down, and reductions were running ahead of schedule.

The Izvestia interviewer mentioned the drinking of perfume and industrial liquids by alcoholics in a question to Belichenko, saying doctors reported "the cases of poisoning are sharply increased." He gave no figures.

Belichenko said factories that once produced alcholic beverages would gradually be turned over to making soft drinks, mineral waters, frozen fruits, mayonnaise and vinegar.

Plans already exist for changing over 649 former liquor factories, he said.

Grandson's arrest called 'calamity on top of calamity'

FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP) — The founder of a tobacco fortune says he prayed evidence wouldn't point to his grandson in a car bomb blast that killed his daughter and one of her sons and seriously injured her daughter.

But last Thursday's arrest of Steven Benson, 34, of Fort Myers, on charges of murder and attempted murder came as no surprise, said Harry Hitchcock, founder of Lancaster Leaf Tobacco Co., in a telephone interview from his Lancaster, Pa., home Monday.

"It was the evidence, that circumstantial evidence, that was damning," Hitchcock said. "Nobody knew this was going to happen and then suddenly the evidence was building up and I kept praying this wouldn't happen, it wouldn't be Steven.

"It was a calamity on top of a calamity," Hitchcock said.

Benson is accused of setting two homemade pipe bombs that destroyed the family's Chevrolet Suburban outside their Naples home July 9 because he feared his mother planned to cut him out of her will.

Margaret Benson, 63, and her adopted son, Scott Benson, 21, died in the explosion. Her daughter, Carol Benson Kendall, 40, of Brookline, Mass., was seriously burned and was recently released from a Massachusetts hospital.

Before the blast, Steven Benson allegedly stole $2 million from his mother's Dean Witter account. In retaliation, Mrs. Benson called a lawyer to draft a new will excluding Steven from her $10 million estate, according to court records.

Hitchcock said he had not talked to Steven since the arrest.

"I'd give everything I own in this world if I could just undo what's been done," Hitchcock said. "I read about these things happening to other people. I'm 88 years old and I've never had anything approaching a disaster like this in my lifetime."

The Benson family wealth came from a tobacco warehousing business started 44 years ago by Hitchcock and expanded by Mrs. Benson's late husband, Edward.

Hitchcock described his grandson as a man whose drive for success was pockmarked with failures.

"He was ambitious, extremely ambitious," Hitchcock said. "His father had been successful, his grandfather had been successful and he wanted to be successful."

Hitchcock said he knew of no bad feelings between his grandson and daughter.

"She loved him and he loved her, so that's the reason this is a puzzle to me," he said. "There's nothing in the past to explain this."

Hitchcock also founded Lancaster's Christian Fellowship Prayer Breakfast. He said he was not impressed by his wealth and was philosophical about success.

Video industry urges store owners to sell, not rent

By BILL McCLOSKEY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Leaders of the home video industry are trying to convince store owners that customers can be talked into buying rather than renting video cassettes.

But at $75 and above for a hit movie, store owners aren't buying that pitch any more than their customers are buying the high-priced movies.

At sessions this week in Washington, members of the Video Software Dealers Association are giving store owners suggestions ranging from establishing a "sale only" policy for newly released tapes to setting up bargain bins where customers can buy used rental cassettes.

But the dealers, as measured from the laughter that could be heard during one filmed presentation on possible sales ploys, are going to be difficult to convince.

"Most people, once they've seen it once or twice in their homes" have seen a tape all they want to, said Virginia E. Adams, of Home Video Library in Milford, Ohio.

Millie Robert, who has five Video Today stores in the Holland, Mich., area, says there is price resistance among her customers.

"If we get under $20" she said, sales might take off.

She told a reporter the companies that market the cassettes are beginning to offer hundreds of titles at $24.95 or less. She agreed the manufacturers are getting the price message.

But an examination of Billboard Magazine's chart of video cassette sales in the last 12 months indicates little correlation between price and sales.

Prices for four of the 10 tapes that hit No. 1 during the year were above $75 in retail stores.

Only one, a special "We Are The World" video, was below the $20 figure at $14.95.

The overwhelming percentage of the video cassette business is in rentals — a fat pie that the makers of motion pictures do not share because of the so-called First Sale Doctrine. Under that rule, which filmmakers have been urging Congress to repeal, an author or film distributor gets nothing from a book or a movie after its initial sale — in this case to a video cassette dealer.

Noting that video dealers rent a movie repeatedly after buying just a few copies of that title, motion picture distributors say they have to keep the prices of their video cassettes relatively high in order to make a profit.

But Austin Furst, keynote speaker for the convention and chairman of the board of Vestron Video, said sales could become a larger factor in the video cassette business if dealers were more aggressive.

"Start to tell the story that the consumer can buy video," he said. "The consumer doesn't know."

He compared the video rental business with the owner of a book rental library in his hometown when he was growing up.

"When the paperback arrived in town he dismissed it as a passing fad," Furst recalled. He said the bookstore owner didn't believe paperbacks would sell because, "Who wants to read these books twice anyway?"" Furst said the store closed very quickly when the inexpensive paperbacks swept through town.

When the dealers weren't listening to speeches they were prowling the exhibit halls in two hotels listening to sales pitches from representatives of tape manufacturers selling everything from "Ghostbusters" to "Amadeus," the 1984 winner of the Academy Award for best picture. Thousands of X-rated films also lined display cases.

In the lower price ranges were hundreds if not thousands of children's titles, some specially produced for the home market, others simply tape copies of TV shows or cartoons.

The exhibit floors were lined with movie houses selling old movies, some of them beyond their copyright protection being marketed with a suggested retail price of $19.95 or $9.95.

HOOKS

Hookings are most frequent in mid-summer, when red salmon are running. "There's more people fishing and fishing in closer. During the red season, it's not uncommon to see one a day, or even more," she says.

Just to make embarrassed newcomers feel more at home, the folks in the emergency room put together their hook display.

"That's not all of them. People take home about half of them," Schell said.

The hooks range in size from a tiny trout fly — which was removed from the iris of an eye — to a heavy metal lure with a huge treble hook.

Most hook victims are released immediately to resume their pursuit of the wily salmon, but emergency room manager Kathie Rowland says a couple of victims who caught hooks in their eyes had to be hospitalized for a few days.

She doesn't recall anyone ever coming in twice the same day.

Haydon may have an infection

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Doctors suspect an infection is the reason for fever that has troubled artificial heart recipient Murray P. Haydon for the past several weeks, a spokeswoman at Humana Hospital Audubon says.

Haydon's temperature has been as high as 102 degrees, but has been running about 100 recently, Donna Hazle said Monday. Normal is 98.6.

Haydon, a 59-year-old retired Louisville auto worker, has clear lungs, indicating he has recovered from pneumonia he contracted in late June, she said.

While doctors have been unable to pinpoint the cause of the fever, they believe an infection outside the lungs in the chest cavity may be the reason, Hazle said.

A second infection, at the skin surface near holes for the plastic drive lines that channel compressed air to the mechanical pump, is too minor to be the cause of the fever, she said.

Haydon has been isolated during the course of the infections and has been unable to maitain his regimen of physical therapy. The only exercise he is getting, she said, is from walks around his room.

The fever may be coming down because of antibotics given Haydon or because his body is fighting the infection naturally, Hazle said. Haydon continues to use a respirator to help him breathe and will remain on the device until the fever disappears, she said.

He has been confined to the coronary-care unit for all but a few weeks since receiving the Jarvik-7 heart on Feb. 17. He recently was given a new room at the end of the unit to "stimulate him with new surroundings," Hazle said.

STORE

He said Sakowitz has been an asset to the mall, and he plans to find another fashion department store to replace it.

Sakowitz announced Monday it plans to close its downtown Houston store which has been open for more than three-quarters of a century and four other stores.

The downtown store and another in Gulfgate Mall will shut before Nov. 10 as Sakowitz contracts to a third of the size it was before filing for reorganization a month ago under federal bankruptcy laws.

Stores in Midland, Tulsa and Dallas are scheduled to shut down after Christmas and as late as February and another store in Scottsdale, Ariz. may be sold or closed.

"We're not sure if any of out-of-Houston stores will ever be reopened," Gaspard said. "So much depends on the court."

Sakowitz filed for protection from creditors under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy code Aug. 1, blaming its financial problems on the energy recession in the Southwest and an influx of aggressive retailers. Trade reports pegged the company's losses at $2 million on sales of about $120 million last year.

The store closings will leave the posh retailer with four of its more profitable Houston locations, officials said.

Suitor's sack leads to big trouble

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — When Mike Mulligan put a bag over his head for a joke as he visited his sweetheart's office, six gun-toting sheriff's deputies and a helicopter swooped down on him.

Someone who saw him leave his car, put on the bag and pick up another containing flowers for his girlfriend called the authorities, thinking he was up to no good.

"He was just going to be cute and come back and say 'Flowers for Stacey,' then take the bag off his head," said his girlfriend, Stacey Herrell. "It's all so dumb. He was just trying to be nice.

"Whoever called the cops was really stupid. It's real embarrassing."

Mulligan, 26, of Orlando, could face misdemeanor charges. A 1951 state law passed to control activities of the Ku Klux Klan prohibits anybody over 16 from wearing a hood on someone else's property without permission.

"Somebody could have gotten killed," said Sheriff's Sgt. Gary Durrance. "Everyone thought it was a big joke, but it wasn't funny. If someone had anything that looked like a gun, it could have been devastating."

Juan White, a salesman for the company, M & M Rust Co., said he realized what was happening and walked outside to let deputies in on the joke when he, too, was seized.

"All I heard is a guy say, 'Don't move,'" a shaken White said. "He was about 25 feet away with a shotgun. The thing looked like a cannon."

White said it was good to know police could arrive so quickly, but Ms. Herrell said she thought police overreacted.

"There were shotguns all over the place," she said. "They could have hurt someone."

Judge to weigh lifting injunction on reservoir

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal judge today was scheduled to consider a request that he lift a 1973 injunction he issued halting construction of the Wallisville Reservoir, which is three-quarters completed.

U.S. District Judge Carl Bue issued the injunction after environmentalists filed a lawsuit alleging the $37.8 million project would bring more harm than good to the area's natural resources.

The 5,600-acre project, which is located about 50 miles east of Houston, was proposed in 1979 by the Army Corps of Engineers and authorized by Congress in 1983.

Bue's injunction called for construction of the project to stop until the engineers corp could assess its effect on wildlife and natural resources.

Environmental groups such as the Sierra Club and National Audubon Society claim the could destroy Galveston Bay's $40 million-a-year fishing industry.

However, proponents of the project — who want the court injunction lifted — say the reservoir would decrease subsidence in the Houston area because 50 percent of the area's water supply comes from pumping groundwater. Subsidence, the sinking of land, has been blamed for much of the Houston area's flooding problems.

The Army corps released an environmental impact statement in 1981 that said the project would cause an estimated $980,000-a-year loss in fish and wildlife resources.

But in 1982 the corps issued a report saying the project would bring an annual net gain of $122,000 in wildlife resources.

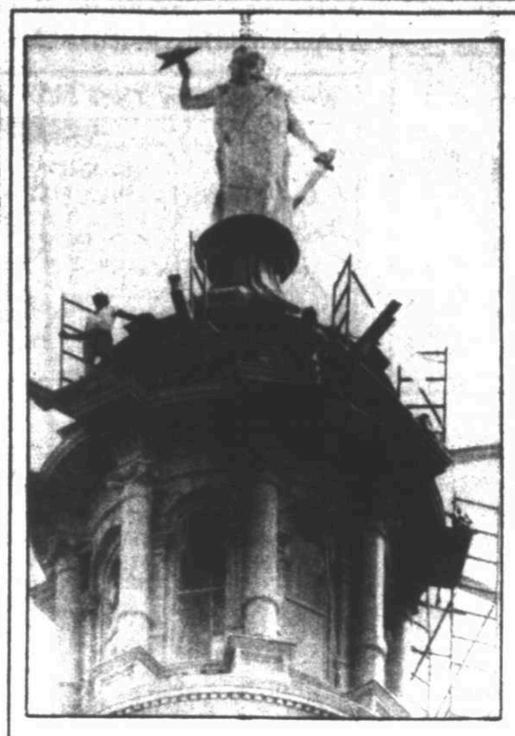

Bob Bass, marine biologist for the corps, told the Sierra Club in pretrial testimony that in 1982 he refused a request by his superiors to compile a new report that would indicate the project would increase wildlife resources.

Bass testified that other corps personnel produced the 1982 study.

A Sierra Club brief filed in court claims the second report demonstrated the corps' "consistent pattern of 'selling' the project."

The club contends the corps violated the National Environmental Policy Act.

But a memorandum filed by the U.S. Attorney's office and briefs submitted by the city of Houston and the Trinity River Authority deny the corps violated the act.

Goddess may leave perch after 97 years

AUSTIN (AP) — Workmen are erecting scaffolding that will allow experts to closely inspect the 97-year-old Goddess of Liberty statue atop the Capitol dome.

The 18-foot-tall zinc statue, which stands more than 300 feet above street level, has developed cracks and other possible structural problems.

Roy Graham, Capitol architect, Monday said that once the scaffolding is in place, metallurgists, architects and other experts will inspect the figure and its fastenings.

The statue was installed on the Capitol dome in 1888. About 1½ years ago, painting contractors working on the building called attention to cracks in two areas of the figure and rust stains which experts said may indicate corrosion of the interior support.

Graham said Washington University Technology Associates Inc., a subsidiary of Washington University at St. Louis, Mo., would perform an inspection of the statue once the scaffolding is in place.

Whooping cough cases increase in South Texas

By SHEILA ALLEE
Associated Press Writer

One of the worst whooping cough outbreaks in at least 10 years has hit South Texas, but at least one health official says the outbreak may have been nipped in the bud.

There have been at least 128 cases reported in South Texas, with the bulk of the victims in Del Rio and San Antonio, the state Department of Health reported.

"I wish I knew" what caused the outbreak, said Tom Griffith, head of the 21-county Region 9 of the state health department.

"We were just going over the statistics this morning," he said Monday. "I hope we've got it nipped in the bud but we're not positive."

Region 9 includes an area bordered by Del Rio to the west, Seguin to the east, Cotulla to the south and Gillespie County to the north.

Griffith said 67 cases have been reported in Val Verde County and 50 in Bexar County.

Of the cases reported in Texas this year, Griffith said 90 percent have been in South Texas.

The totals, he said, are 'the most Region 9 has had in its history or at least in the last 10 years."

Bob Crider, director of the immunology division of the state health department, said there were 60 pertussis cases reported last year in Texas. Of those, three died, he said.

Griffith said the health department advertised free inoculation clinics in Del Rio last week. Free shots also have been available in San Antonio.

There have been no deaths officials could link 100 percent to whooping cough, also called pertussis, Griffith said.

One 25-day-old Del Rio baby who died last week at a San Antonio hospital was diagnosed as having pneumonia. But Griffith said doctors suspected the infant may have had whooping cough.

Lab tests for the disease, characterized by a heavy, whooping-type cough, are not 100 percent conclusive, doctors said.

In Val Verde County, pertussis cases have been concentrated at Laughlin Air Force Base.

The Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta has sent an epidemiologist to study the situation at the base.

Dr. Robert Chen said there have been reports of up to 75 cases with possible pertussis symptoms in Val Verde County. That total, Chen said, refers to the number of cases showing pertussis symptoms.

"We didn't come in because an outbreak was getting out of control," Chen said. "Part of the reason we came in was to study the epidemiology of pertussis."

Chen said Laughlin presented a somewhat controlled environment for epidemiological work.

Whooping cough, Chen said, is much more common than most people realize.

"It's the kind of disease that if people look hard enough, you'll find it," he said.

Symptoms of the illness, he said, are similar to a cold — runny nose, nasal congestion, a cough and fever.

Many times, especially in adults, pertussis is not diagnosed because of its similarity to the common cold, he said.

Chen said he had not reached any conclusions about the increase in whooping cough this year.

There was a shortage of the diphtheria-tetanus-pertussis vaccine earlier this year, but that problem has been alleviated, he said.

The number of reported pertussis cases has declined sharply in the past 40 years, he said. In the 1940s, there were about 200,000 cases annually. Last year, there were 2,187 cases reported nationwide.

The disease can be fatal, especially to infants younger than six months.

Rice president doesn't fit previous tradition

HOUSTON (AP) — George Erik Rupp, the new president of Rice University, says he declined four previous invitations to become president because he didn't fit Rice's tradition of previous leaders.

"It all added up that he was a successful young man and would certainly be a college president someday," said Ralph O'Connor, chairman of the selection committee. "We had to persuade him to come to Rice in '85."

A visit to the campus in January and meeting with the university's trustees changed Rupp's mind, he said.

"I got very intrigued about Rice and what Rice could do — which is a lot," he said.

Rupp became Rice's new chief, replacing retiring president Norman Hackerman, 73, on July 1.

He has been head of the university for almost two months, but his background is unlike that of most of his predecessors.

While Rice's presidents traditionally were scientists or mathematicians, he is a scholar in Christian theology.

And at age 42, Rupp also is younger than many of the university's past leaders.

Rupp previously was dean of Harvard University's Divinity School. He is a New Jersey native, an ordained Presbyterian minister and spent one year studying Buddism in Sri Lanka to broaden his theological education.

"I think it is safe to say my background was something of an obstacle in my selection," Rupp said.

Beaumont mayor could face recall election

BEAUMONT (AP) — Voters may get a chance to vote in November on a long list of initiative, referendum and recalls of the mayor and council members.

City clerks have dealt with seven different petitions this year. For the first time in 12 years a recall election appears possible.

Two different petitions seek to recall Mayor Bill Neild.

"People are frustrated and I can understand their frustrations," Neild said. "Things aren't going to get better until the economy improves." The Beaumont area has had one of the highest unemployment rates in the state.

City Clerk Myrtle Corgey this week may validate a recall petitions with 2,400 signatures submitted by a member of the striking Service Employees International Union Local 706.

The strikers say Neild refused to help them settle their dispute with the A.W. Schlesinger Geriatric Center.

A second group, Citizens United for Responsible Government, is circulating a petition to recall Neild and a petition to recall Councilman Wayne Turner. The group contends the two have been unresponsive to public comment.

If the signatures on the petitions are validated, Neild has five days to resign; if he doesn't, council will set a recall election in November, Ms. Corgey said.

Already on the Nov. 5 ballot are two issues dealing with the renaming of streets for slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King.

Voters have twice before rejected naming a street for King.

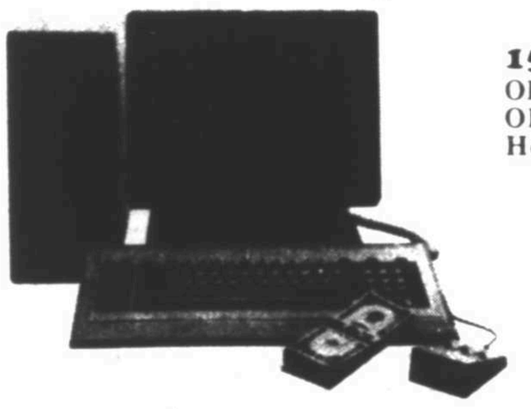

But this time the Beaumont chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People is trying to rescind an ordinance passed by the City Council renaming a series of streets after King.

The NAACP wants different streets named after King, not the ones chosen by the council.

The striking nursing home workers also are circulating a petition for an initiative vote to establish $4.10 as minimum wage in Beaumont. The group has been on strike since July 1 when the home proposed a wage cut.

Herbert Oswald, 46, also is circulating a petition to cap wages for city employees at $40,000 a year.

Opening lead: Two of ♡.

No one will claim that South ended up in the best contract. But few will dispute that his play was top drawer.

After East's three heart preempt, it became all but impossible for North-South to reach their optimum spot of three no trump. At five clubs, South had to produce an unusual safety play to secure his contract.

West led the two of hearts, and as soon as dummy hit the table, declarer saw that he would have no problem if West held the ace of spades. However, if East held that card the contract was in jeopardy unless West could be kept off lead until dummy's diamonds were established to take care of at least one of declarer's spades.

All would be well if declarer could duck a diamond into East. Since East had at least seven hearts, though, he rated to be short in diamonds. Declarer found an elegant method of disposing of his unwanted third diamond.

He played a low heart from dummy to the first trick! East won the ten and returned the suit. Declarer completed his exchange of tricks by stuffing a low diamond while winning with the ace on the table.

The contract still required considerable care. Declarer drew just one round of trumps before cashing the ace and king of diamonds. When East showed out on the second diamond, declarer's thoughtful play was rewarded. He ruffed a diamond high, crossed back to the board with the nine of trumps to ruff another diamond and set up a long card in dummy. He was still able to return to the board with a trump to pitch one spade on the 13th diamond. In all declarer lost only one heart trick and one spade.

Christine returning to her craft

Craft

NEW YORK (AP) — Christine Craft says she may soon be a television news show anchor again after two years on the college lecture circuit and writing a book about her court battle with her former employer.

"I'm looking for a job and I may have found one. I'll know some time next week," Ms. Craft said Monday at a rally for equal pay for women doing the same work as men.

Ms. Craft said she did not want to reveal any details until the job offer was final. "You don't want to let the cat out of the bag," she said. "You might jinx it. It's in California and it is an anchor job."

In a lawsuit against her former employer, Metromedia Inc., which operated KMBC-TV in Kansas City, Ms. Craft charged that she was asked by station management to change her on-the-air appearance.

Two jury verdicts in her favor were reversed on appeal, and she is planning an appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Wyeth

NEW YORK (AP) — Artist Andrew Wyeth, who paints in a starkly realistic style, says he once had a friend X-ray him from head to toe so he could accurately paint a fleshless self-portrait.

The painting, a birthday gift four years ago for his wife, Betsy, shows Wyeth as a skeleton, clad only in an 1812 Navy coat, sitting atop a lighthouse watchtower, looking out to sea.

But the bones could not belong to just anyone. "Oh no," the 68-year-old artist said in an interview with Arts & Antiques magazine, "those are my bones."

Instead of relying on a fake skeleton given to him when he was a child by his father, Wyeth used his own. He is so precise, in fact, that he even painted his own ribcage, spine and hip beneath the Navy longcoat.

"You take the coat off and you'll see the whole thing," he said. "If you X-ray it they'll find them."

MANSFIELD, Ohio (AP) — Singer Pearl Bailey said she was surprised when fellow passengers recognized her during the confusion on an Amtrak train that crashed into a stalled truck, derailing half the cars and injuring 53 people.

Miss Bailey, 62, who was en route from Los Angeles to New York for an appearance as chairwoman of the American Lung Association, said she was reading in her sleeper car when the accident occurred Monday night.

Some of her 324 fellow passengers on the Chicago-to-New York train and rescue workers credited her with keeping tempers cool after the accident.

The singer said she was surprised when fellow passengers looked at her face and asked, "Is that you, Pearl?"

"I guess it's just love, honey, you can't call it nothing else," Miss Bailey said.

The singer — clad in a nightgown, robe and sneakers — addressed fellow passengers through a bullhorn offered by a rescue worker.

"I just said, 'This is Pearl, honey,'" she said later in an interview at the downtown Holiday Inn, where she and her husband, drummer Louis Bellson, spent the night.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Actor Tony Curtis, with more than 50 movies to his credit, counts an accomplishment off screen as one of his greatest. Curtis, who is starring in "Insignificance" as a senator who has a passing resemblance to the late Sen. Joe McCarthy, said overcoming a drug problem last year had changed his life.

The star of films such as "Some Like It Hot" and "Sweet Smell of Success," underwent treatment at the Betty Ford Clinic in Rancho Mirage, near Palm Springs, to kick his habit.

"For the first time in many years, my system is clean," he said in a recent interview. "Free of toxins, I'm 60 years of age and I feel wonderful. There's a lot to look forward to."

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Singer Dionne Warwick has canceled an appearance Wednesday night at the Minnesota State Fair because she is undergoing jaw surgery, a fair official said.

Jerry Hammer, director of public relations for the fair, said Ms. Warwick's agent notified officials Monday she would not be able to appear. Hammer said he had no information about when the surgery was scheduled or why.

Joan Saltel, a spokeswoman for Ms. Warwick's booking agent, Buddy Lee Attractions in Kansas City, said the singer had planned for at least two months to have the surgery and had turned down an offer from the Nebraska State Fair next week because of it.

"Evidently, it had to be pushed up," Ms. Saltel said, adding she didn't know the reason for the surgery.

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A British weightlifter described as a major illegal dealer of anabolic steroids to U.S. athletes has been arrested as he prepared to flee the country to avoid prison on smuggling charges, authorities say.

Richard Anthony Fitton, 36, was arrested Saturday in Albuquerque, N.M., after a five-month manhunt through Alabama, New Jersey, Chicago and New Mexico, Assistant U.S. Attorney Phil Halpern said Monday.

Fitton, who pleaded guilty in Feb. 10 to conspiracy to illegally import steroids, importation of steroids and lying to federal officials, fled April 10, the day he was to be sentenced. He faced 15 years in prison.

Steroids, used as strength-enhancing drugs, are not a controlled substance in the United States, but it is illegal to import them. The hormones are suspected of causing liver damage, heart disease and other disorders.

ORANGE, Calif. (NYT) — The obstetrician who delivered septuplets to Sam and Patti Frustaci last May believes that the three survivors should be regarded as the medical triumph of a pregnancy that "nobody would have given a damn for."

Further, said Dr. Martin Feldman of Orange in a recent interview, widespread criticism of Pergonal, the fertility drug that created the pregnancy of Patti Frustaci, is "totally unwarranted."

Feldman, who did not begin to treat Mrs. Frustaci until more than two months into the pregnancy, said that rather than making a moral issue of the use or possible misuse of the drug, the experience should be used to create greater public awareness of the importance of careful administration and monitoring of Pergonal treatments.

BOSTON (AP) — Donald B. Sinclair, a pioneer in radio engineering who worked on radar defense during World War II, died Saturday of cancer. He was 75.

Sinclair devoted much of his professional life to measuring properties of high-frequency electrical circuits. He spent most of his career at General Radio Co. in Concord, where he was chief engineer, vice president and finally chairman of the board. Sinclair also served several terms as president of the Institute of Radio Engineers.

U.S. Embassy personnel in Moscow have long been accustomed to the infinite variety of surveillance devices with which the Russians keep track of the staff's comings and goings and their contacts outside the compound. The Soviet's latest trick, however, has raised understandable concern because of the possible health threats it poses.

The Soviets are accused of sprinkling a little-known chemical on the clothing, automobiles and other objects used by U.S. Embassy personnel. The barely visible powder, identified as nitrophenylpentadienal, is easily transmittable to other persons and places and can be detected by ultra-violet light.

The embassy has been aware of the Soviet practice for some time but the discovery that the substance is possibly carcinogenic has prompted a strong protest and a demand by the U.S. government that its use be immediately halted. Meanwhile, embassy personnel are being instructed in cleaning methods to be followed if they suspect they have been dusted with the chemical.

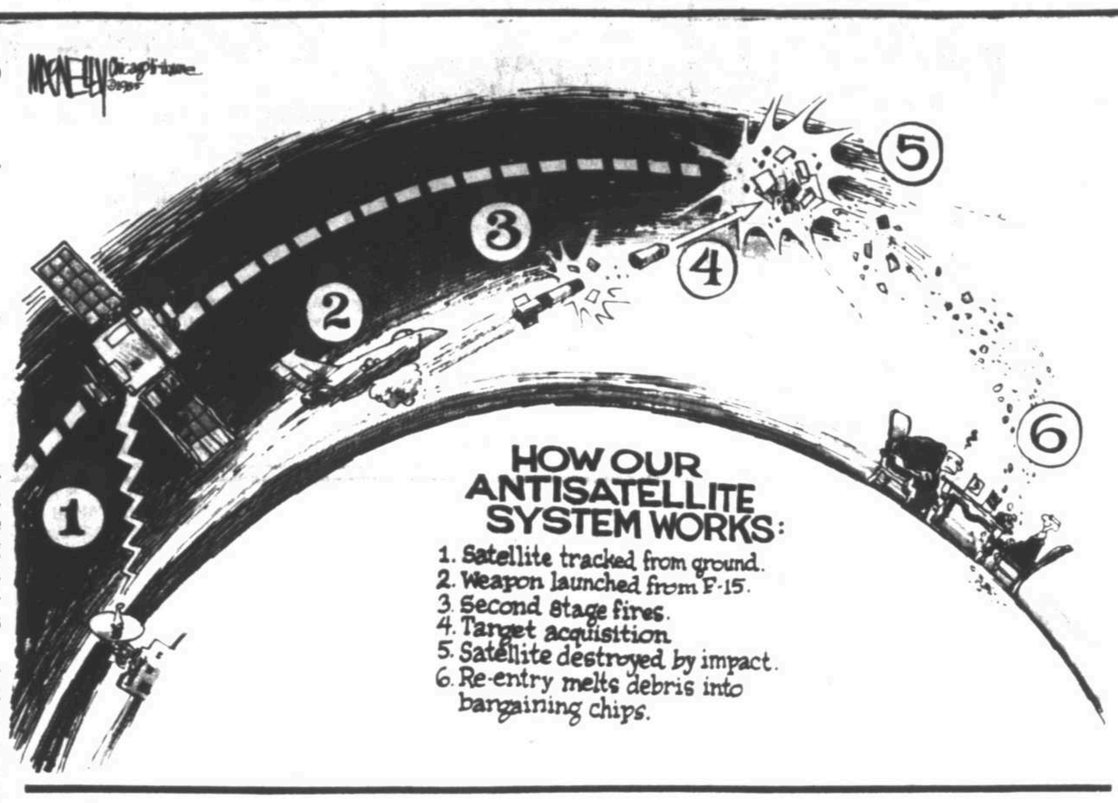

This is not the first time that a potentially health-threatening device has been used by the Soviets to spy on the embassy. Protests have been raised on at least two occasions in the past nine years over the Russians beaming microwaves on the building. An investigation determined, however, that no adverse affects were caused among personnel.

Because of the embassy's alertness, it is extremely unlikely that the Russians were able to collect any important data with this clumsy chemical contrivance. But a spokesman has indicated that the president intends to bring up the matter with Mikhail S. Gorbachev at the Geneva summit conference in November.

President Reagan certainly should do that. It isn't likely that the Soviets are going to show any remorse over potentially endangering the lives of American embassy personnel, of course. It's more or less understood that embassy personnel will encounter extraordinary job-related risks. That's part of the "game" played by the Americans and Soviets.

But Reagan certainly can and should use this latest bit of Soviet unconcern for human life as an ace in the hole when the Russians begin to howl about U.S. plans to test this country's antisatellite weapon.

Turnabout is fair play.

Not front page news

I read Lana Cunningham's front page Thursday article, "Midland student gets close look at Africa," expecting to find an interesting and informative account of African life.

I was disappointed to find that after a period of seven weeks in Gambia with the Operations Crossroads program, Miss Dyer has returned to deliver such generalizations about Africans as: "Africans don't form emotional ties with anyone" ... African values are "bribery, lack of deep love, no initiative ... if there is any affection among Africans, it is reserved for the family, but that is limited to how much — in money, food or other commodities — is given to the one asking for it."

Miss Dyer's keen observation that Africans do not enjoy American standards of diet and sanitation was about the only valid observation I could find in the article. Rather than being informative and interesting, this article seemed to be written with the intent to exploit a young girl's ignorance and bigotry and to embarrass the organization that sponsored her trip.

There may be a context in which a young girl's supremacist attitudes are considered newsworthy, but I doubt it rates being treated as a front page item. Furthermore, Cunningham's concluding statement, "Miss Dyer returned with a better understanding of the African people," is a matter of that reporter's opinion that should have placed this entire article on the editorial page.

Too quick to judge

In an educated society that is capable of making its own decisions, I am surprised that people involved in the Aug. 4th ad against The Esteem Machine would be so quick to judge a production few have ever seen.

I, too, am a concerned citizen and have seen The Esteem Machine. I came away with very positive feelings about parent/teen relationships. I laughed, I cried, and I wished I was a teen again.

Most quotes used in the ad were from publications not used by Planned Parenthood of the Permian Basin. I have read Bridging the Gap and saw an excellent magazine that honestly deals with all adolescent concerns. What few quotes used from this source were clearly taken out of context, and used in such a manner, do not give an accurate meaning of the author's idea.

As a member of First United Methodist Church, I am glad that my church, as well as other private foundations, are supporting this program. What a tremendous asset to our school system the production would be ... a troupe of teens trying to help their peers with information about concerns they face every day!

Similar teen theatres are well received all over the United States. Judge for yourself, Midland; observe The Esteem Machine in action. I have a feeling you will be pleasantly surprised. I'm proud to have them represent my city.

Where are materials?

Last year the Sheriff's Department, with the County Commissioner's Court in accord, purchased some $130,000 of fencing materials for the proposed "stockade jail," now stored at the County Barn. This amount of investment would have paid for over six months' prisoner transfer.

The County Commissioners now say that the county is in a financial bind. What present plans exist for the use of this material? The taxpayers have a right to know, unless jail policies bar us from this form of knowledge.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, Aug. 27, the 239th day of 1985. There are 126 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

Senators pushing boondoggle

WASHINGTON — For years we've been pointing out a surefire way to bring the federal budget deficit down: Stop costly pork-barrel projects before they get started.

Jack Anderson

That's exactly what the Interior Department tried to do last year to the Army Corps of Engineers' grandiose plan to build a pair of huge jetties at the Cape Hatteras National Seashore, a fragile strip of barrier islands running for 70 miles along the North Carolina coast.

The jetties were intended to keep sand from filling in Oregon Inlet, a channel used by fishermen going to and from the Atlantic Ocean.

Interior refused to grant the Corps of Engineers a land-use permit to build the jetties. But now North Carolina's two Republican senators, Jesse Helms and John East, have sponsored legislation that would override the department's veto.

Experts familiar with the plan predict that the jetties would turn out to be an environmental disaster. They also argue that even if the project did what the Engineers claim it will — which is debatable — the cost (more than $100 million) would far outweigh the benefits. And they accuse the Engineers of cooking the figures anyway.

Fifteen specific complaints were expressed in a letter to the Engineers by a top White House budget officer. Our associates Donald Goldberg and Corky Johnson obtained a copy of the letter. Here are the highlights:

— "Our review of the economic analysis prepared by the Corps of Engineers disclosed the use of inappropriate study methodologies, questionable assumptions and lack of documentation," the budget official stated. "The supporting data shows that the project costs will substantially exceed its benefits if more generally accepted procedures and reasonable assumptions are applied."

— The Engineers hyped the projected benefits by using the highest possible estimated cost of dredging, the alternative method of keeping Oregon Inlet clear for fishing boats, the official charged. "Using a more realistic assumption, such as the historical average dredging costs, would show the project to be uneconomic," the letter stated.

— The White House official was also skeptical of the Engineers' cavalier brushoff of environmental problems the jetties could cause. "We are concerned about the divergent opinions of the Corps and ... the team of coastal experts retained by the National Park Service, as to the environmental impacts of the project," the letter stated. "Should the project not work as modeled by the Corps, there could be significant adverse environmental impacts which could add substantially to the total cost of the already expensive project."

— In a parting shot, the budget official observed dryly: "We are concerned that submission of such a defective report may indicate that the internal review processes of your office and of the Corps are ineffective."

The Engineers, secure in their historical role as provider of pork for members of Congress, responded to the White House letter by haughtily dismissing the criticisms as "totally unsupportable."

But the Engineers may have a fight on their hands this time. In an Aug. 15 letter, William P. Horn, assistant Interior secretary for fish, wildlife and parks, reiterated the department's opposition to the Oregon Inlet jetties.

"Our continuing concerns about this proposed project have not been altered," Horn wrote. "(It) would result in permanent adverse impacts to National Park and National Wildlife Refuge lands under the jurisdiction of this department."

WHO'S NEWS: Twenty-five years ago, young Dorothy Godlewski surprised her father in Detroit with a long-distance birthday call from Moscow, where she was working as a secretary in the American Embassy. This past weekend, she was the one who was surprised — with a 50th birthday party thrown by several hundred friends here in Washington, where she's office manager of the President's Office of Consumer Affairs. Decorations included posters and buttons of Ms. Godlewski's face superimposed on the Statute of Liberty, in accordance with the party theme, "Save the Lady."

MINI-EDITORIAL: In its obsession with the seemingly indestructible drug traffic, Congress sometimes behaves as irrationally as the junkies it's trying to save. The House, for instance, recently slipped a provision into the Defense authorization bill that would allow Navy personnel to arrest dope smugglers overseas. Not only would this require extensive training in law enforcement for the sailors selected, but it would mean they'd have to be on call for long periods for any resulting court cases, instead of on duty with the fleet. All things considered, it would be wiser to leave the war on drug smugglers to civilian landlubbers.

Reagan tangled by sanctions

WASHINGTON — His South African policy in disarray, unexpected Republican pressures are mounting on President Reagan not to veto the sanctions bill — a step that would raise fresh difficulties in his effort to help Pretoria reform its way out of apartheid.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Conceivably, a dramatic but wholly unexpected new initiative by State President P.W. Botha could impel the president to follow his own heart and veto sanctions. But he seems more apt to heed word from Republican leaders that the GOP-controlled Senate would convincingly override a veto.

Viewed by Republican politicians as outweighing policy considerations, the White House has been warned a veto would turn off millions of young voters who voted for Reagan and who erroneously equate being against sanctions with being for apartheid. That argument is pressed by moderately conservative Republicans such as Sens. William Roth of Delaware and Mitch McConnell of Kentucky, whose support would be essential to sustain a presidential veto. Their word to the Reagan White House: South Africa is a major issue, all right, but not one on which to risk party realignment.

With the sanctions noose knotted around the presidential throat, Reagan's task in nudging Pretoria toward reform becomes truly formidable. His leverage on the South Africans diminishes if he signs the punitive legislation. Botha, no longer able to defend reforms by pointing to his great friend in Washington, becomes vulnerable to pressure from the right.

That pressure comes from the Conservative Party, formed in 1982 as an offshoot of the ruling National Party after charging Botha with "selling out to the integrationists" when he proposed his first constitutional reform. The Conservatives undercut Botha's mildest reforms, and their power may be growing.

To neutralize the South African right, the Reagan administration must persuade the Botha government that each serious move it takes toward reform — such as ending the system requiring blacks to carry passes — will be rewarded by the U.S. That must be done without Botha seeming to appease Washington to stop sanctions, whose avowed purpose is to destabilize the South African economy, from taking effect in 18 months.

The state president brought it on himself. If Botha's much-advertised speech in Durban had lived up to its billing, Reagan might have been able to send the sanctions bill back to Congress with a soft veto message. He could have said the path to ending apartheid does not lie through the minefield of punitive legislation. Indeed, if Botha's reform plan had found support from creditable black leaders in South Africa, the president might conceivably have been able to get the Senate bill withdrawn.

The opposite has happened. Botha's suggestions of an end to the black homelands and citizenship for all blacks were couched in murky rhetoric and an Afrikaaner style overtly hostile to blacks and to the West. Thus, there is no tangible administration plan to strengthen fading Senate opposition to the sanctions bill.

When Congress began its summer recess, the Senate put off consideration of the House-passed sanctions compromise until Sept. 9 because of a substantial filibuster threat. It no longer seems so substantial because of Botha's disappointing speech and the soapbox reaction of American politicians, black and white, to use it for maximum personal political gain.

Only Sens. Jesse Helms and Steve Symms (who sent an aide to Pretoria last week on a two-week study mission for the sanctions battle) are ready to play a major role in sustaining a filibuster. Less than a dozen other Republicans seem ready today to vote against sanctions. One staffer who helped plan the anti-sanctions strategy told us he regretted the filibuster threat ever had been made, saying that "it may not even turn into a one-night stand."

Reps. Vin Weber of Minnesota and Newt Gingrich of Georgia, leaders of the Conservative Opportunity Society (COS), declined to even discuss possible changes in their pro-sanctions positions with White House aides. Such conservative populists, who voted in favor of sanctions in the House, have no intention of pulling back from overriding any veto.

Hope in the White House that conservative lawmakers might be influenced by the Rev. Jerry Falwell's all-out support for Botha (but not for apartheid) died in birth. Rep. Connie Mack of Florida, a COS member who voted against sanctions, told friends that Falwell probably did more to help than hurt sanctions.

While sanctions will put little immediate economic pressure on Pretoria, they complicate the Reagan administration's already intricate relationship with the Botha regime. The immediate problem is to prevent them from becoming a new weapon in the hands of South Africa's white ultras that would render reform even more difficult, and that today is an uphill task for Washington.

Laws only suggestions for behavior

There's nothing like a drive along an interstate highway to remind you of the limits of the law.

Charley Reese

In the artificial environment of urban America, many people grow up with the mistaken notion that laws regulate human behavior. What can you expect of people who have never seen a cow except in the form of a hamburger or as an image on a screen or a page?

Actually, laws only do what Aristotle said they ought to do — suggest proper behavior, but words on paper are powerless to control anyone's behavior. Law enforcement is always after the fact and always very, very selective.

Take the interstate highway system, for example. Here our government has spent umpteen million dollars per mile to construct a highway as safe as safe can be. It has passed laws suggesting how we should drive on these highways.

Yet every day people work assiduously to convert a safe highway into a hazard for themselves and their families. There is no reason under God's sun for people to crash their cars on an interstate highway but they manage to do it anyway.

One common mistake is driving in the passing lane. Some people are under the impression that if they are obeying the speed limit, they may obey it indefinitely in the passing lane. They think it serves those speeders behind them right. Actually, these self-righteous types are scoff-laws themselves because they are not supposed to drive in the passing lane except to pass.

But they do and then people behind them allow their emotions to override their judgment. They zoom to within three feet of the offending car's bumper, hoping to intimidate the driver into getting out of the passing lane.

Now, human laws are ineffectual but the laws of physics are not. A car traveling 60 miles per hour is scooting along 120 feet of pavement per second. With only a few feet between front and rear bumpers, crashes logically follow the sudden deceleration of one of the cars in the mad procession. That's one of the ways people convert a safe highway into a hazardous place.

I'm not writing this because these drivers annoy me. They don't. I enjoy watching human behavior even on a highway. I'm merely using it to make the point that no legislature or Congress has ever succeeded in changing human nature or in regulating human behavior. The law is mainly an educational tool and if people would realize that, they wouldn't defeat the purpose of laws by making so many of them that not even a lawyer can know them all. It's easy to break laws these days you don't even know exist. In my home state, it costs half a million bucks a year just to publish the new regulations and the revisions of the old ones. Regulations grow like bacteria in bureaucracies.

Government and laws are useful and necessary things for people who wish to live in groups. Still, both have their limits; neither is a cure-all. You can't sober up a drunk by passing a law. You might make it socially unacceptable to drink and drive and thus deter some people, though not all, from doing it.

The root causes of most social problems lie outside the reach of the law. If you fall into the trap of thinking that once you pass a law, the problem is solved, then you will be frustrated. That's not good for your digestion. Even in a totalitarian society like the Soviet Union, which uses the law 10 times more severely than we do, crime and corruption survive.

Except for a tiny minority with physical brain dysfunctions, human beings are not born criminals or bigots or fanatics or drunks or drug addicts.

That tells us that the home, more than government, shapes society. To be sure, both government and the culture of our society influence the home, too. I think the culture has more effect than the government. Most people don't have much contact with the culture as reflected by television and publications.

That's why some religious groups have a point in protesting the sleaze on television. It's a little more difficult to convince children they should be moral and upright when millionaire sleazebags and bubbleheads are constantly treated in the media as if they were important and respectable people.

But it wouldn't do any good to pass a law against sleaze on television. You can't legislate taste anymore than you can common sense in drivers who use the interstate highways. The solution to sleaze on the screen is already in every living room. It's called the on/off switch.

Polish Catholics take stand

CZESTOCHOWA, Poland (AP) — Roman Catholics will not support the communist government or perform their civic duties unless authorities stop spreading atheism, the leader of the Polish church told an estimated 200,000 believers.

Cardinal Josef Glemp issued one of his strongest defenses of church values in years at an outdoor Mass on Monday honoring the Black Madonna, Poland's most revered icon. It is kept at a 14th-century monastery in Czestochowa, about 120 miles south of Warsaw.

"The believer who is to build the future of the atheistic homeland feels like someone who is cutting the tree he is sitting on out from under him," Glemp said.

Glemp condemned Marxism as a system whose "inspiration is based not on the force of thoughts but on the notion of force."

He said that although Poland's government was less repressive toward religion than other Soviet bloc nations, it only was trying to postpone the "final confrontation."

However, he sought to reassure authorities that the church was willing to coexist with the Marxist government.

"We want to assure all that the church in Poland does not threaten any institution, but seeks the good of every human being," he said. The church will not be a tool of any political institution, he said.

Glemp's remarks, some of his bluntest since he became or leader of Poland's Roman Catholic Church in 1981, reflected the preachings of Pope John Paul II, a native of Poland. More than 90 percent of all Poles are Catholics.

"There won't be any funeral for the church in Poland," Glemp said in a sermon interrupted eight times by applause from the crowd gathered in fields in front of the Jasna Gora Monastery.

Many Roman Catholics resisted their civic duty to serve the Marxist state because the government intended to destroy religion by spreading atheist values, he said.

The cardinal did not specifically mention the Oct. 13 parliamentary elections, but his remarks implied that many Roman Catholics had doubts about voting. The outlawed Solidarity free trade union movement has urged Poles to boycott the elections.

The crowd waved more than a dozen banners written in the flowing red Solidarity script. One read: "Christians, Remain In Solidarity Against Evil."

The 55-year-old primate said conflicts between the government and the church existed in many fields, including the state school system where he said society could not "in a legal way" change the "educational line imposed from above."

He said the authorities were not justified when they charged clergy with "intolerance" for protesting the removal of crucifixes from state-run schools.

The primate also expressed regret that the church's efforts to assist Poland's private farmers were "not completely fruitful."

The remarks were an apparent reference to the church's attempt to set up a foundation to channel millions of dollars in Western aid to Polish farmers. The government has delayed approval for the fund.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Goal of visit demanded

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The government has made an urgent demand that three Common Market foreign ministers clarify the goals of a visit to South Africa, saying they may not be welcome if they intend to push for an end to apartheid.

For the first time in a year of racial unrest that has left an estimated 620 people dead, police headquarters today refused to issue a summary of violent incidents.

A police spokesman said in Pretoria that senior officers had ordered him not to release a situation report. The officer, who may not be identified under department policy, said he did not know whether the decision was permanent or temporary and could provide no reason for it. Police had reported the deaths of two black men on Monday.

The foreign ministers of Italy, the Netherlands and Luxembourg are to arrive in South Africa Wednesday and report to a Sept. 10 Common Market meeting on possible sanctions against the white-minority government.

South Africa already has rejected their request to meet with Nelson Mandela, the imprisoned leader of the outlawed African National Congress guerrilla movement. He is serving a life prison term on a conviction for plotting sabotage.

Artillery fire exchanged

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Moslem and Christian forces traded artillery and rocket barrages today, and police reported renewed kidnappings on the only open crossing between east and west Beirut.

As shelling continued, Christian and Moslem radio stations reported that France may send truce observers to reinforce the crumbling Syrian-sponsored cease-fire.

Police said one civilian was killed and four people, including a Lebanese soldier, were wounded in overnight sectarian battles.

CBI aid 'disappointing'

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — A document released Monday by the 25-nation Latin American Economic System said the $350 million Reagan administration aid plan for the Caribbean Basin has been disappointing during its first year.

It said the Caribbean Basin Initiative (CBI) has done little for the 21 nations named as beneficiaries, while excluding Nicaragua, Guyana, and Surinam for political reasons.

"In spite of the so-called benefits of the CBI, the countries of the Caribbean Basin have fared worse, and their future is not promising," Henry Gill, the economic system's special advisor for Caribbean affairs, said.

Cloûdy skies may cool Basin some

From Staff and Wire Reports

Partly cloudy skies are expected to hang over the Midland area Wednesday cooling temperatures slightly, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Forecasters are calling for fair skies with a low near 70 tonight becoming partly cloudy Wednesday afternoon with a high in the mid-90s. Winds will be light and southerly tonight, increasing to five to 10 mph Wednesday.

Monday's high of 100 was three degrees below the record set in 1964. This morning's low was nine degrees above the 1961 record of 61.

STATE

Thunderstorms developed early today over the western section of North Texas from the Red River near Wichita Falls southward to northeast of San Angelo.

Other showers were occurring over the South Plains from Lubbock to Snyder while heavy thunderstorms rumbled offshore along the upper Texas coast.

Elsewhere, skies were fair to partly cloudy as high pressure in the upper levels of the atmosphere remaind the primary weather feature. South to southeast winds were the rule across most of the state at speeds generally in the 5 to 15 mile an hour range.

Statewide temperatures were mostly in the 70s and low 80s except for readings in the 50s over the mountainous southwest. The early morning extremes ranged from a cool 54 degrees at Marfa in the Davis Mountains to a warm 84 degrees at the Naval air station in Corpus Christi.

The National Weather Service said widely scattered thunderstorms were likely tonight in the Panhandle and South Plains. Afternoon temperatures in the 90s and low 100s were expected for most of the state.

NATION

Much of the nation was under fair skies today but rain was scattered in patches from New England to the Rockies.

Showers and thunderstorms lingered over the Rockies and thunderstorms rumbled across eastern New Mexico and northwest Texas.

Showers and thunderstorms dotted southern Florida, the east Florida coast, central Gulf Coast region, the southern Appalachians and the region from New York across southern and central New England.

Midland statistics

Tonight: Fair with a low near 70 and light and variable winds. Wednesday: Fair with partly cloudy skies in the afternoon and a high in the mid-90s. Winds from the south at five to 10 mph.

Golden Cranes ready to fly again

White surrounded by lettermen

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is one of a series of previews on area high school football teams. Today, a look at the Crane Golden Cranes. Tomorrow, Lamesa.

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

CRANE — Coach Rickey White of Crane's Golden Cranes is surrounded with familiar faces this season as he enters the 1985 District 7-3A football race, quite a change from summer drills in 1984.

White must have felt like a stranger last season as he was faced with replacing nearly every starter from a fine senior class that took him to the playoffs with an 11-1-1 record. Now, White has 23 lettermen back from a squad that was a disappointing 1-8-1 last season and he likes his chances for a repeat trip to the playoffs in 1985.

"We expect to be in the playoffs this season, it will be an awfully competitive district, but we fell we can get there," White says.

"I COULD put 11 returning starters on the field both ways if I wanted to. But we have some underclassmen that are giving it a heck of a battle for some spots. We had to play so many kids last season because of the class before them when we had to replace 22 positions. We lost everybody."

White, entering his fifth season as the Cranes' mentor, will field what he calls his most talented team, returning 23 letterman from last season, but it won't be an easy ride into the playoffs.

Crane will have to compete with the strong passing attack of defending district champ Ballinger, an improved Coahoma squad and last season's runner-up Colorado City to get there. Ozona and Sonora round out this 3A district.

Area Football

MAKING THE trip this season a little more comfortable for Golden Cranes supporters is the return of some excellent skill players, including the multi-talented Kenny Walker.

Walker will line up at split end on offense and at 6-3, 205 and with blazing 4.5 speed in the 40-yard dash makes an inviting target in both long and short distance situations. Walker is perhaps best suited for defensive end, however, where several major colleges have expressed more than a passing interest in him. Walker was also an All-Stater in basketball where he averaged more than four dunks a ballgame.

Senior quarterback Abel Sena (6-0, 155) returns this year and with him comes the rest of the backfield, including the speedy Gerald Mitchell (6-1, 185) at tailback. Just a junior, Mitchell ran for more than 800 yards as a sophomore and will continue to carry much of the load for this run-oriented offense.

SENIOR DWAYNE Tarpley (5-10, 145) and junior split back Carl Claunch (5-8, 150) fill out the backfield and also have speed to burn.

"Our backfield can run," White says flatly. "We also have most of our offensive line back and we seem to be bigger this year, too."

Center Dewaine Lee (6-3, 238), guards Reese Curfew (5-9, 175) and Mark Walters (5-10, 170) and tackles Rod Wilson (6-1, 190) and Devin Beardslee (6-1, 250) complete the blocking unit.

Speed seems to carry over to the defensive side of the football as well where safety Mark Velasquez returns for his fourth straight starting season. Velasquez (5-11, 180) has not missed a start since enrolling as a freshman. Tarpley, Mitchell and Claunch round out the secondary.

The Cranes' linebacking crew also packs some punch in returning seniors Richy DeCraffenried ((5-8, 175) and Will Sutherland (6-0, 185). Up front Lee anchors a formidable and experienced line that includes Darin Guy (6-0, 180), Wilson, Walker and junior Tommy Bacon (5-9, 180).

Even with so many returners back, Crane won't find themselves back in unfamiliar territory next season as several juniors have made their way into this season's starting lineup.

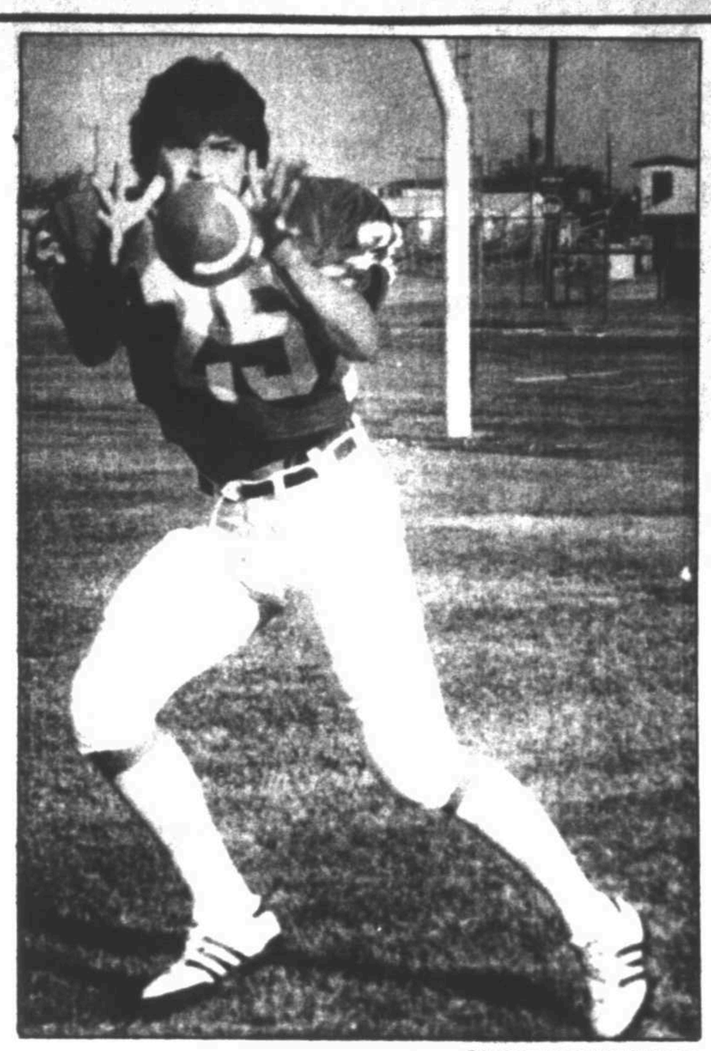

"WE'LL START five or six juniors, most of whom started last year as well, so we won't have that same problem again for a while," White said.

"What I'm impressed with most so far this season is our attitude. Our attitude is just great. We're not a good football team yet, but we have a chance to be."

With last year's disaster under their belts, the Golden Cranes are ready to fly back to old heights in 1985.

Braves call on Wine to help finish season

ATLANTA (AP) — Outfielder Claudell Washington called it a positive move when the Atlanta Braves fired Eddie Haas as manager and replaced him for the remainder of the season with third base coach Bobby Wine.

"This was a dead ballclub," Washington said after learning of Monday's move by owner Ted Turner.

"I just think he was overmatched, wasn't the right man for the job," Washington said of Haas, an organization man who was in his first stint as a major-league manager after 14 seasons as a minor-league skipper.

"This is not a Triple A ball club," Washington said. "You can't manage it like one."

Haas, 50, was told of the change Monday morning by General Manager John Mullen, who had been instructed by Turner to make the move. Turner had said a week earlier that he wouldn't make a change until the season was over.

Haas was unavailable for comment. Mullen said Haas told him he planned to return home to Kentucky for a week. Mullen said there would be a job in the organization for Haas as long as he wanted one.

The Braves were mired in fifth place in the National League West, 22 games behind the Los Angeles Dodgers. They lost their last six games under Haas and 12 of their last 13.

Wine's debut was a winning one Monday night as the Braves defeated the Pittsburgh Pirates 2-1. But they still remained 22 games back of the Dodgers, who beat the New York Mets 6-1.

"As I said earlier, we'll do whatever is necessary to get the job done," Wine said after the game. "We'll be playing some hardball, as we used to call it. It doesn't matter what league it is, what town it is, or what team it is, it's good to win."

Wine, 46, said he thought the Braves "maybe even gave up a little" as things turned sour this season.

"But a lot of things can happen in six weeks," he said. "We're not just going to die."

Wine said he planned to have an aggressive team, one that would steal, bunt and take the extra bases.

"I think I'm a pretty good communicator with players," Wine said.

The new manager said he planned to let the players know their role, what was expected of them.

"That's called communication," pitcher Len Barker said. "You need that or things don't run right."

Relief ace Bruce Sutter said he didn't think all the blame should fall on Haas.

Dallas survives Bears' fists, 15-13

IRVING, Texas (AP) - When Mike Ditka sends his Chicago Bears against his old boss, Tom Landry of the Dallas Cowboys, even a National Football League exhibition game takes on fist-flying intensity.

Non-combatant Rafael Septien got the game-winner with a 24-yard field goal with three seconds to play as the unbeaten Cowboys (3-0) nipped the Bears (0-3) 15-13 in Monday Night at the NFL Fights.

LAST WEEK, Septien kicked a 47-yard field goal in overtime to beat San Diego.

The left hooks and right crosses started in the first period.

Dallas defensive tackle Randy White was ejected in the first period after taking unfair advantage.

He yanked off the helmet of offensive tackle Keith Van Horne and used it as a clubbing tool on several Bears.

"That's an automatic ejection when you do that," said Club Presidnt Tex Schramm, who is on the NFL Rules Committee.

Sporadic fights broke out in every quarter, with the harried officials declaring each outbreak a draw with offsetting unsportsmanlike conduct penalties.

"It was an interesting night," said Landry. "I've never seen that many fights. It was a tough football game"

THE FIERY Ditka, who played and coached under Landry, said neither team would back down.

"The fights were kind of silly," said Ditka, making his first return as a coach to Texas Stadium. "We don't teach it. We should be smarter than that, and they should be smarter.

"I guess they have heard the Bears are tough guys. Dallas is tough too. Nobody wanted to back down."

Lost in the flurry of fisticuffs were the returns of holdouts Dallas running back Tony Dorsett and Chicago middle linebacker Mike Singletary.

Dorsett gained 36 yards on nine carries, while Singletary was in on six tackles.

Dallas wide receiver Duriel Harris setup the winning field goal when he took an eight-yard Steve Pelluer pass away from cornerback Ken Taylor at the Chicago 24.

"The defensive back had the ball first, but wasn't able to tuck it in," said Harris. "I just slid my arm in there and pulled it away."

Chicago grabbed a 13-12 lead with 6:29 to play on a 10-yard touchdown pass from rookie Mike Tomczak to rookie James Maness.

Tomczak of Ohio State completed his first NFL touchdown pass. Maness of Texas Christian, who had been held out with a hamstring injury, made his first NFL catch with 6:29 to play.

Dallas quarterback Gary Hogeboom, playing three quarters because of a rib injury to Danny White, hit 17 of 37 passes for 182 yards.

Friday, 1 p.m., is deadline for MHS season tickets

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

The sale of season football tickets for Midland High will end Friday at 1 p.m., according to Janelle Dozier, Midland's athletic secretary.

There are no season tickets left for Midland Lee home games as all 2,812 available seats for season ticket sales have been sold.

To date, MHS has sold 947 tickets, up from the 912 sold last year. Of course, Lee's season ticket total is a record for the school. The MHS record was established in 1981 with 1,027 season tickets sold.

The Bulldogs are just 80 season tickets shy of the record mark, and Dozier points out, "We always have people wanting to purchace season tickets after the deadline, but we won't be able to do that. When we come in Tuesday morning after Labor Day, we will start selling tickets for the Lee game, which is in Lubbock against Lubbock Coronado. On Wednesday, we will start selling tickets for the Midland High-Lubbock Monterey game, which is here."

Season tickets for Midland High can be purchased now through the noon hour Friday at the Memorial Stadium ticket office, located at the northeast corner of the stadium.

A Midland High season ticket can be purchased for $20, which includes five home games. MHS fans are also given the option of buying an extra ticket to attend the Lee-MHS game for an additional $5. Midland High will be the visiting team in that game this year and is not included in the season ticket package.

There has been some confusion among Lee football fans. Dozier said that many people think that "all of the tickets are sold out for Lee this year and that's not true. We have sold all tickets available on the West side of the stadium, but we will have tickets available on a weekly basis for Lee home games on the visiting side."

There will be no tickets to sell for the Lee-Permian contest and there will be a shortage of available tickets for games against San Angelo and Midland High. Still, some tickets will be available the week of the San Angelo and MHS contests.

The Memorial Stadium ticket office will close at 1 p.m. Friday in order to process the final season ticket money received. MHS fans will not be allowed to purchase season tickets after the office closes on Friday.

Midland golfers steam over Hogan operating costs

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

It costs half a million dollars more to operate Hogan Park Golf course than it does any private course in Midland and the Tall City's municipal course doesn't fare so hot when compared with public courses of other West Texas and New Mexico cities.

The comparisons were presented by a special committee, which was seeking to offer an alternative to proposed changes in Hogan Park golf fees for the coming year. The recommendations, as approved by a critically and suspiciously vociferous and sometimes angry group of golfers, faced with the loss of their annual greens fee privileges, will be presented to the City Council Sept. 10.

EDWIN NIXON, Midland Schools athletic director, chaired the meeting and made the presentation to the golfers attending the open forum in the Hogan snack bar.

With the golf course operating at a substantial annual loss, the elimination of annual greens fees for all but senior and junior players has been proposed, triggering the latest Hogan Park insurrection. The daily and weekend greens fees of $9 and $11.50 are already tops in West Texas.

Although it was emphasized that "We don't want any increase", the committee received overwhelming approval on its " recommendation under duress" to submit a proposal that would increase the annual fee to $450 a year from $300, but there would be no surcharge such as the current $1.50 per round. Daily greens fees would be $8 for weekdays and $10 for weekends.

Approval was overwhelming, but far from unanimous, after listening to a report on the HPGC budget, jumping a whopping 45 per cent, was reviewed. That's up from a 14 per cent increase the year before.

As one dissenter groused, "Why give 'em more money when they are abusing the money we already give them."

Hurried research since last week's meeting at the City Parks and Recreation meeting proved to be an eye-opener for golfers. Hogan's proposed budget for next year is $931,000. That compares with an operating budget of $385,000 at Ranchland Hills, $400,000 at Odessa CC, $400,000 at Midland CC and $497,000 at Green Tree, like Hogan, a 27-hole course.

That comes out $18,000 a year per hole at MCC, $22,000 at RHCC, and $34,000 at Hogan.

Last year Hogan's budget was $641,305 and the year before $563,678.

THE 36-hole operation at Lubbock's Meadowbrook, a public course, was $467,964. And, unlike Hogan, it even showed a profit with a $330 annual greens fees and $5.50 daily and $7 weekend.

The 36-hole Ross Rogers public course in Amarillo had an operating budget of $394,000 with a $325 annual greens fee, $200 senior and daily fees of $6 for weekedays and $8 for weekends.

At Hobbs, N.M., greens fees were $200 and $100 (seniors) annually and $3.50 and $5.50 daily and weekend.

AMONG other recommendations of the committee was the hiring of a full-time Golf Director. "He should be someone who can devote full time to the course." said Nixon, who pointed out that due to other duties, George Logan, City Parks and Recreation Director, can give Hogan, a million dollar operation, no more than a couple of hours of his time a day.

The committee also recommended disassociating the actual operation of the course from the pro shop, snack bar, and cart rental.

By taking away the underwriting of the carts by golfers, the snack bar, pro shop and the leasing of a dump truck and loader (at $5,000 a month), it would be a gigantic step toward narrowing the gap between revenue and the proposed budget.

That would lower the proposed budget to $626,333.

Instead of hiring starters and a marshall, as proposed, Nixon said, "Members of the Association would volunteer their services in exchange for free golfing privileges." That would eliminate another $16,000.

With greens fees of $8 and $10, an estimated $453,000 would be raised. With the annual fees of $450 for resident and $550 for non-resident accounting for the rest, the deficit would be reduced to $66,000 and, according to Nixon, Councilman Gordon Marcum said at the last meeting that he "could live with anything under $100,000."

OF COURSE, that doesn't explain why the budget is so completely out of line with other course operations.

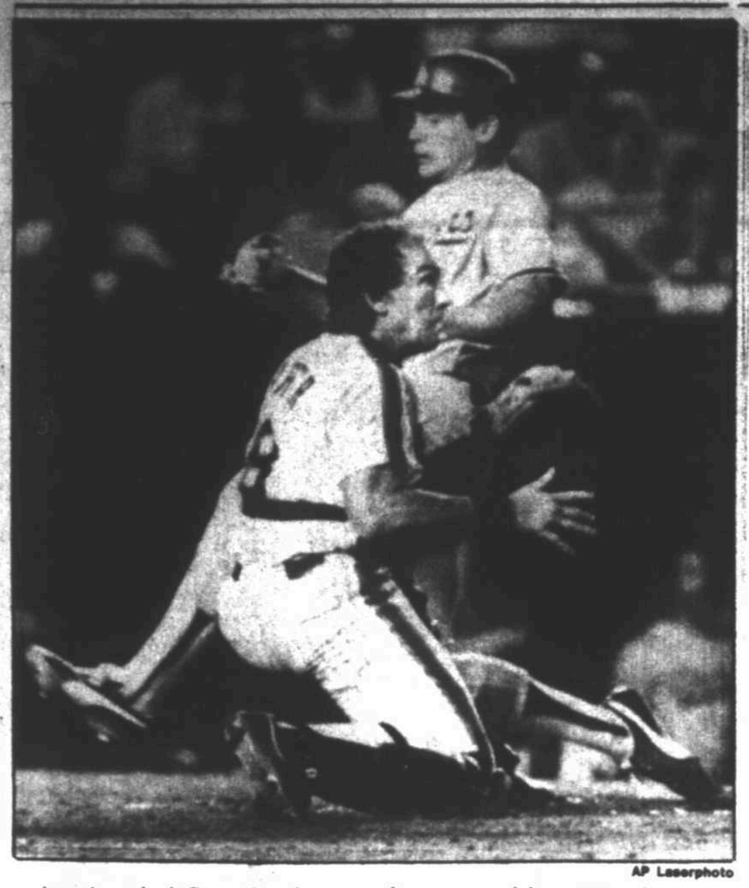

It was pointed out that the 13 employees who maintain the course will receive $348,000 of next year's proposed $931,000 operating budget.

Someone did a little quick figuring and announced "that's $29,000 an employee." Another voice said, "No one in this room makes that much. "

However, the salaries are based on the City system of service and qualifications. While there was no quarrel with that, a golfer wanted to know "if we are expected to pay for the city's system."

Mark Philpy, speaking in behalf, of the City Council, pointed that two courses of action have been considered in an effort to establish Hogan Park on a sounder financial footing: 1. Drop the annual greens fees and drop the daily greens fees to $8 and $10. 2. Up the surcharge on the annual greens fee from the present $1.50.

Birds' Murray knocks in nine with three blasts

Associated Press

Eddie Murray hit three home runs and knocked in nine runs, leading a seven-homer attack Monday night that powered the Baltimore Orioles over the California Angels 17-3.

Murray, in the most productive game of his productive career, drilled a three-run homer in the first inning, hit a solo shot in the fourth and crashed a grand slam in the fifth.

The three homers and nine RBI tied Baltimore team records. Murray, who has hit three homers in a game three times, now has 24 home runs and 102 RBI this season. He has three grand slams this year and 12 in his career.

Murray also had an RBI single in the second inning, flied out deep to right with a runner on base in the seventh and then drew a walk from Luis Sanchez on a 3-1 pitch with a runner on first in the ninth.

John Shelby hit a solo home run, his third, in the second inning for visiting Baltimore. Floyd Rayford drilled his ninth homer and Gary Roenicke followed with his 12th in the third inning, and Rick Dempsey added a two-run shot, his ninth, in the ninth.

Juan Beniquez and Bobby Grich homered for California.

Murray's first-inning homer came while batting right-handed off John Candelaria, 2-1. Murray's next two homers came while batting left-handed against reliever Allen Fowlkes.

It marked the sixth time in his career that Murray has homered from both sides of the plate in the same game.

Dodgers 6, Mets 1

Fernando Valenzuela won his ninth straight game and Pedro Guerrero added three hits to lead Los Angeles past New York.

The victory moved the NL West-leading Dodgers 7½ games ahead of San Diego, while the Mets dropped two games behind first-place St. Louis in the NL East.

Valenzuela, 16-8, allowed 10 hits and pitched out of a bases-loaded jam in the ninth inning.

Guerrero's one-out single in the sixth started a string of five straight hits of Ed Lynch, 10-7, as Los Angeles scored four times and erased a 1-0 deficit. Guerrero singled home one of two seventh-inning runs.

Cardinals 3, Reds 0

Danny Cox continued his season-long mastery of Cincinnati, scattering six hits as St. Louis won its sixth straight game.

Cox, 14-7, has given up just one earned run in three starts covering 27 innings against the Reds this year.

One of the hits against Cox was a first-inning single by Pete Rose, pulling within 11 hits of breaking Ty Cobb's all-time record of 4,191.

Braves 2, Pirates 1

Gerald Perry singled home the winning run in the bottom of the ninth inning, helping Atlanta break a six-game losing streak in its first game under Manager Bobby Wine.

Dale Murphy opened the Atlanta ninth with a walk, was sacrificed to second and scored on Perry's single off Pittsburgh reliever Don Robinson, 4-9.

Giants 7, Expos 4

Chili Davis drove in three runs, two with a home, as San Francisco won in Montreal.

Dave LaPoint, 7-11, got the victory and reliever Scott Garrelts got his 12th save and also doubled home two runs.

Blue Jays 4, Twins 3

George Bell homered for the fourth consecutive game, helping Toronto hold off Minnesota.

Bell, who hit two rooftop home runs at Chicago's Comiskey Park during the weekend, hit his 27th of the season in the sixth inning to give the Blue Jays a 4-1 lead.

Baseball Roundup

Phillies 4, Padres 3

Juan Samuel singled with the bases loaded and one out in the bottom of the ninth inning, driving home Tom Foley from third base and giving Philadelphia its victory over visiting San Diego.

Foley singled with one out and Greg Gross and pinch-hitter Tim Corcoran walked. Samuel's hit came off rookie Lance McCullers, who lost his first major-league decision after four saves.

Cubs 10, Astros 4

Rookie Steve Engel pitched Chicago's first complete game since June 30, and also hit a three-run homer and an RBI single.

Engel, 1-2, making his fourth start for the Cubs, allowed seven Houston hits. Engel's first major-league home run highlighted a five-run uprising in the sixth inning that broke a 2-2 tie at the Astrodome.

A's 3, Yankees 2

Dave Collins beat out an infield hit with two outs and the bases loaded in the 15th inning, driving in pinch-runner Steve Kiefer and giving the Oakland A's a 3-2 victory.

Collins' game-winning hit was a slow roller down the third-base line and he beat Mike Pagliarulo's throw to first. The A's loaded the bases on Donnie Hill's leadoff single and bunts by Mickey Tettleton and Tony Phillips.

Royals 9, Rangers 2

George Brett homered for the fourth straight game and drove in four runs, pacing Kansas City past Texas.

Willie Wilson had three singles, scored three runs and stole three bases for the host Royals.

Brett hit a three-run homer in the sixth, his 21st of the season.

White Sox 7, Red Sox 6

Greg Walker hit a solo home run with one out in the 10th inning, leading Chicago over Boston.

The Red Sox had taken a 6-5 lead in the top of the eighth on Dwight Evans' 16th homer of the season, but the White Sox tied it when Carlton Fisk led off the bottom of the eighth with his AL-leading 33rd homer.

Indians 4-3, Brewers 3-8

Charlie Moore's RBI single keyed a tiebreaking, three-run eighth and Cecil Cooper hit a two-run homer in the ninth that led Milwaukee to a second-game victory and a split of their doubleheader in Cleveland.

Jerry Willard hit a sacrifice fly in the bottom of the ninth inning of the opener to give the Indians a victory and a season-high five-game winning streak. Andre Thornton homered twice for the Indians in the first game.

Tigers 6, Mariners 3

Juan Berenguer gave up one run on four hits over seven innings and Darrell Evans hit his 29th home run to lead Detroit past host Seattle.

Evans hit his two-run homer in the eighth. Lou Whitaker also drove in two runs for the visiting Tigers.

Longhorns dismiss reserve back Survia

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Longhorn reserve defensive back Allen Survia has been dismissed from the football squad for disciplinary reasons, according to Coach Fred Akers.

A spokesman for the athletic department said Akers had declined to give the specific reason for the dismissal.

Survia, a former schoolboy player at Marshall, was redshirted as a freshman in 1984.

Angels face Chicken night

From Staff Reports

Midland's Angels return home at 7:30 p.m. tonight to play the San Antonio Dodgers in the final homestand of the season.

Featured in tonight's opener of the five-game series will be the San Diego Chicken, making his first and only appearance at Angels Stadium. Business Manager Bill Davison says, "Bringing the Chicken to Midland is our way of saying thanks to the Midland fans for their loyalty this season."

Davison said only 2,500 tickets will be sold for the game and no exchange tickets will be accepted.

The Chicken also will be at the Kentucky Fried Chicken on North Big Spring from 4 to 5 p.m. today to pose for pictures and sign autographs.

Although it's the final series and both the California and Los Angeles farmhands are out of the pennant contention, last place in the Texas League West will be the peril both teams would like to avoid. And for the Angels, the final week will determine whether or not the club will set a new Midland Texas League home attendance record.

The Angels got a taste of San Diego's Chicken in El Paso Monday night and they didn't like what they tasted since they lost a 13-7 decision to the El Paso Diablos in the last game of the last road trip of the season.

The Angels held a 6-3 lead heading into the bottom of the seventh before falling apart. El Paso's Joey Meyer started a two-inning, 10-run rally with a grand slam homer in the seventh. It was Meyer's 37th homer of the year.

El Paso catcher Dave Huppert drove in four runs with a single and triple and Jesus Alfaro drove home three runs with a single and double, helping send the Angels to defeat for the fourth time in the five game road trip.

The late rally spoiled the offensive showing of Midland's David Heath, who doubled and homered twice to drive home three runs for the Angels. Midland also got a homer from Billie Merrifield, a two-run shot in the first inning.

Julio Gonzales, who got a victory Sunday against El Paso, was charged with the loss when he was touched for three runs in the seventh. He also allowed two runners to score that starter Ken Angulo put on base to start the seventh.

Brian Kemmerling was rocked for five more runs in the eighth, giving up four hits and two walks in the inning.

The Chicken drew a crowd of 4,690 in El Paso Monday as the Diablos continue to celebrate their Western Division championship.

San Antonio, Midland's opponent tonight, dropped a 7-5 decision to the Beaumont Gators before moving on to Angels Stadium.

Ricky Coleman's bases-loaded single drove in two runs in a four-run ninth inning that gave the Golden Gators their triumph. Mark Wasinger had tied the game with a two-run double.

Mark Williamson, 10-9, got the victory over Balvino Galvez, also 10-9.

Beaumont won despite being outhit, 12-10. Both teams committed two errors.

In other Texas League games Monday night, Jackson shutout Arkansas 1-0 and Tulsa got past Shreveport 5-4.

Arkansas pitcher Ray Soss threw a wild pitch in the bottom of the ninth allowing Jackson catcher Barry Lyons to score.

The Mets, playing their final home game of the season, improved to 40-25 with the victory, while Arkansas fell to 29-37.

SWC goes to dart board

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS — The Southwest Conference has entered the "dart board pick 'em" era.

Take a dart firmly in hand and hurl it at a map of Arkansas and Texas.

If the missive sticks near Fayetteville, select the Arkansas Razorbacks as the 1985 football champions.

Should the feathered missile strike near Waco, gaze intently into a crystal ball and predict the Baylor Bears will be the next champion.

This is about as scientific a method as any. It sure beats burning your brain out studying schedules, returning lettermen, and depth of desire.

For example, nobody thought the Houston Cougars would be playing in the Cotton Bowl on New Year's Day and they did (with two league losses, no less). You could have been a big hero if your dart had hit a map near the Houston campus.

So here goes my 1985 toss. It comes down in Dallas where there have been a few darts thrown recently by the NCAA.

Of course, SMU can't win the SWC title because of probation but their games against league opponents will count.

The PICKS:

X-(1) SMU — Nobody loves the Mustangs but close friends and relatives, which should put this talented, probation-stung herd on a stampede. Don't forget they are the second winningest team in college football over the last three years. It could be Bobby Collins' strongest outfit. Hard times can breed tough-minded football players. Remember how well SMU played after probation in 1981?

(1A) ARKANSAS — A favorable schedule and rugged defense make these Razorbacks as rowdy as some of their teams in the 1960s and early 1970s.

(2) TEXAS A&M — The Aggies closed strong by whipping Texas Christian and Texas last year. Now Coach Jackie Sherrill must find a way to get them out of the gate quickly in a tough opener on the road against his alma mater, Alabama. This game could dictate A&M's fate for the rest of the season.

(3) TCU — If the Horned Frogs solve the problems of an inexperienced offensive line, Coach Jim Wacker could have purple flying from the Cotton Bowl mast with "unbelieeeeeevable" printed on it.

(4) HOUSTON — They are the defending Cotton Bowlers and Bill Yeoman will have them in the thick of the fight again.

(5) BAYLOR — Beware of the Bears if Grant Teaff's defense becomes respectable.

(6) TEXAS — The Longhorns could jump to the head of the herd if they overcome the psychological damage of closing routs by Baylor, Texas A&M and Iowa in the Freedom Bowl.

(7) TEXAS TECH — Jerry Moore needs a miracle season from his Red Raiders if he is to survive as head coach. A "miracle" in this case could be defined as a .500 campaign.

(8) RICE — Watson Brown's undermanned crew won a game last year. They'll need all the lucky bounces to double that total this season.

X — Ineligible to win the SWC title but they'll claim it anyway.

Houston or LSU for Tito Horford?

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Athletic officials said they hoped to clear up the mystery today surrounding a visit to Louisiana State University by Tito Horford, one of the most highly recruited high school basketball stars in the country.

Horford, a towering 7-foot, 245-pound prep star from Houston, had been expected to announce that he would be attending LSU at a news conference scheduled for Monday afternoon.

But LSU Athletic Director Bill Brodhead said he called the session off after consulting with the NCAA.

"In our opinion, Tito's interest in attending LSU was not a signing of a letter of intent, but upon our contact with the NCAA office, they said an announcement in news-conference format was not permissible and would not be so until Tito was in fact enrolled in school," Brodhead said.

Brodhead said athletic officials then canceled the news conference and said they hoped to have a "more clear understanding of Tito's eligibility sometime Tuesday afternoon."

"If at that time everything is clear, we are hopeful that he will be registered for classes," Brodhead said. "He has in fact been on our campus for the better part of the day talking with Coach Dale Brown and myself about his interest in attending LSU."

Horford had signed a national letter of intent with the University of Houston last fall while playing with Houston's Marion Christian High School.

Schools which have been reported to be seeking Horford include Kentucky, Oklahoma, Kansas, UCLA and Florida State. Horford has acknowledged that UCLA and Florida State have made an effort to sign him.

Dollar up

LONDON (AP) — The dollar rose against all other major currencies in early European trading today.

Gold bullion was traded at around $335, little changed from the previous day's level in New York.

Currency dealers in Frankfurt, West Germany, said the dollar was being underpinned by short covering in the Far East and in early European trading. Short covering occurs when a trader buys dollars either to limit losses or cash in on an earlier decline in the currency.

Midmorning dollar rates compared with levels in Europe late Monday included:

—2.7835 West German marks, up from 2.7577

—2.27525 Swiss francs, up from 2.2553

—8.4965 French francs, up from 8.4220

—3.1255 Dutch guilders, up from 3.1030

—1,863.50 Italian lire, up from 1,850.75

—1.36035 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3564

A London dealer described the bullion market as quiet and said reports of a coup in Nigeria had no noticeable impact on trading.

London's five main bullion houses fixed a recommended midmorning gold price of $335.25 a troy ounce, up from $333.75 Friday. Gold and silver markets were closed in London Monday.

Gold also traded at a bid of $335.25 in Zurich, down from $337 late Monday.

Earlier in Hong Kong, gold was bid at $335.06 up from $333.79 Friday. Hong Kong markets were closed Saturday and Monday for a holiday.

Gold was bid at $335.65 in New York late Monday.

Silver was traded at $6.30 a ounce in London, up from $6.25 Friday.

Nuclear power costs 'risky business' in Texas

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — The soaring cost of nuclear power is so high it threatens to wreak havoc with Texas' traditionally good business climate, a new study of nuclear plant finances contends.

"In Texas, we are at the brink of economic disaster in regards to the expense of nuclear power and what it will mean to the state's economy," argues the report issued Monday by Public Citizen, a Ralph Nader-organized research project.

The report — entitled "Risky Business: The Impact of Nuclear Power on Economic Growth in Texas" — says additional costs of nuclear-generated electricity over conventional fossil-fuel plants will be $600 million annually for the 30-year lifespan of the four plants that are to serve Texas.

Such a financial drain will use up money that could have created up to 1.2 million new jobs, the report says.

"The huge financial commitment of Texas' leading electric utilities to four nuclear power plants risks increasing those energy costs to levels that put that national (business climate) ranking and the state economy in jeopardy," the report says.

Nuclear industry backers say the power plants can operate more efficiently than conventional facilities and can save consumers money through lower fuel costs.

They also have blamed changing regulations issued by the federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission for much of the cost increase.

The Public Citizen study considered the four nuclear plants being funded at least in part by Texas utilities — the South Texas Nuclear Project at Bay City, the Commanche Peak plant at Glen Rose, the Palo Verde plant near Phoenix, Ariz., and the River Bend plant near St. Francisville, La.

The study says the plants originally were estimated to cost a combined total of $3.1 billion, but that pricetag has soared to more than $16 billion.

"If all or a significant percentage of these costs are absorbed by Texas ratepayers (utility customers), the state will join a growing list of communities and regions as a victim of the high price of nuclear electricity," the report says.

Although smaller nuclear power plants once were economically feasible, the 1,000 megawatt plants now under construction are in jeopardy of becoming white elephants, said Jim Schermbeck, author of the "Risky Business" study.

"By any reasonable standard, we're paying far too much," he told a news conference. "The stakes are very high at this point, and the cost is very clear. The issue is continued economic development for Texas."

Michael Twombly, Texas director of Public Citizen, said the study was done as part of a call for a complete reassessment of nuclear financing in Texas.

"The bad news is we are seeing only the beginning of a 30-year drain which we believe will have disasterous consequences as Texas seeks to maintain a competitive edge in national business circles," Twombly said.

"Electric rate reform means stopping the flow of consumer dollars into nuclear construction and operating costs. It means walking away from poor investments to cut our losses," Twombly said.

Lawmaker urges Mattox to reject request

AUSTIN (AP) — A legislator who supports construction of the South Texas Nuclear Project has urged Attorney General Jim Mattox to reject a request to assess public utilities for the costs of expert witnesses in rate cases.

Jim Boyle of the Office of Public Utility Counsel said the witnesses would be selected by his office to testify in rate cases before the Public Utility Commission.

Rep. Lloyd Criss, D-La Marque, wrote Mattox, "We cannot have a public utility paying for reviews concerning its own business, especially when such audits or analyses are to be used in determining the rates chargeable by the utility or its management policies or decisions.

"A dangerous precedent would be set if this practice were condoned by your office or the state of Texas."

Criss noted in a letter released Monday that Mattox's Opinions Committee is considering an opinion request by Boyle, who represents individual ratepayers and small companies before the PUC.

Criss said he had "several serious concerns" about the request.

"I cannot imagine a person whose home is near a nuclear facility being vastly comforted by the fact that utility-paid 'experts' say the facility is safe," Criss said.

Boyle said since his office would select the experts, and presumably would be reimbursed by the utilities, the witnesses would not favor the utilities.

Even if utilities added the cost of ratepayer witnesses into their cost of doing service, Boyle said, "It could be money well spent."

He mentioned vast sums of money spent by Houston Lighting & Power in support of the nuclear project, and said, "There needs to be a better balance between ratepayers and utilities."

Criss predicted ratepayers "would end up holding the bag."

"We (legislators) gave Boyle a budget, and it's up to him to use it the best way he can. Anything added to that will be passed back to the ratepayers," Criss said.

Companies call 'white oil' wells an 'utter scam'

AUSTIN (AP) — Companies supporting a state order to retest "white oil" wells in the Panhandle Field claim the wells as counterfeit and say they are part of a scam in the oil and gas industry.

The Railroad Commission in May adopted a staff recommendation to test wells equipped with refrigeration units to see if they can qualify as oil wells.

Numerous white oil operators sued in state district court to overturn the commission order.

They submitted a brief earlier this month claiming they had invested $250 million in the 1.5 million-acre Panhandle Field as a result of commission "actions and inactions" and are entitled to protection from the order that could shut down their wells.

The trial is set for Sept. 6, and Phillips Petroleum Co. and others have responded to white oil operators with their brief to State District Judge Harley Clark Jr. They are aligned with the commission, which is represented by the state attorney general.

Phillips contends that some operators are using "LTX" units to chill vapors to as low as minus 20 degrees to produce a water-white liquid that the operators call crude oil, although the liquid "bears no resemblance to Panhandle Field crude oil."

This "scam" was started in 1978 by TUCO, Inc., Phillips alleges, but "was not copied by other operators until some time later."

By counting the liquid as crude, an operator is able to maintain his well as an oil well, which has certain advantages over a gas well, according to the Phillips' brief.

On a 640-acre section, an oil operator can drill up to 64 wells but a gas operator is limited to a single well. Also, under Panhandle Field rules an oil well can produce up to 500,000 cubic feet of gas a day, but Phillips says a gas operator can produce perhaps only 220,000 cubic feet of gas per day.

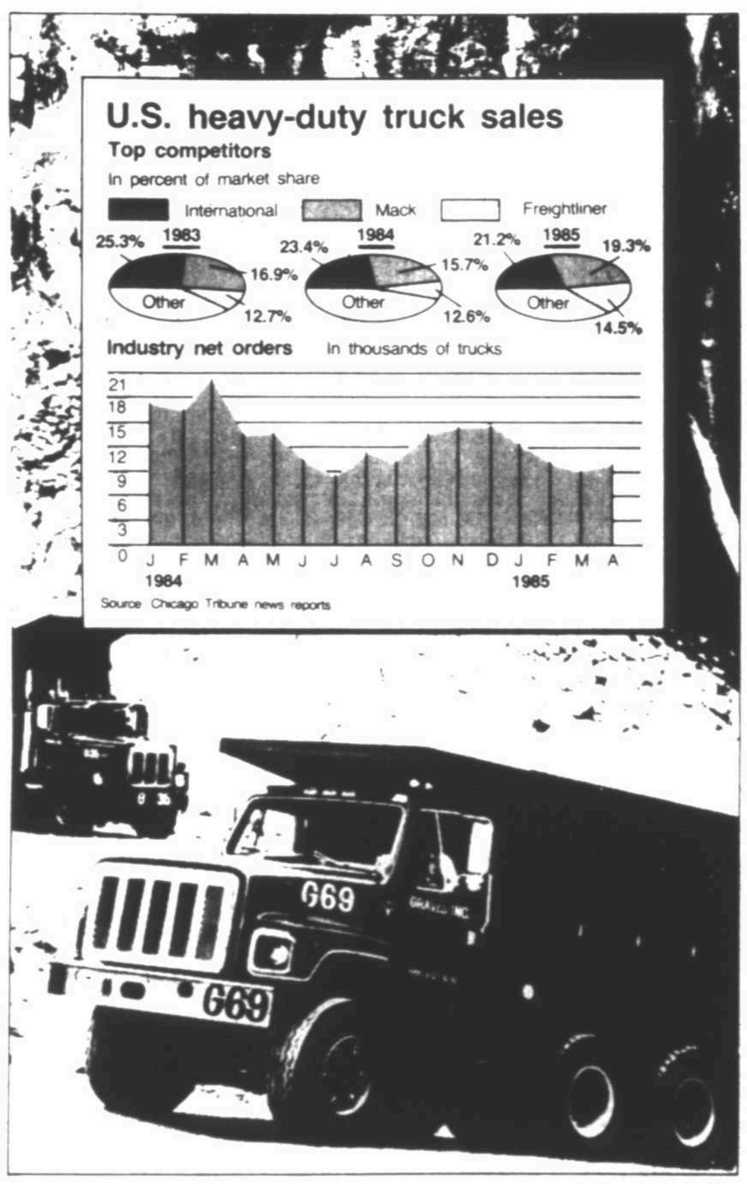

Phillips' brief said white oil operators are producing from the same depth as gas wells owned by Phillips and others and are "pirating enough gas to turn a handsome profit" from gas reserves in the field, which underlies eight counties.

Even producing 400,000 cubic feet of gas a day, an operator could net $357,700 a year, the brief said.

It said the LTX units are wasteful in that they lose up to 70 percent of the total liquids extracted.

"The undisputed evidence in this case demonstrates that LTX wells produce almost no crude oil," with gas-oil ratios ranging as high as over 1.8 million to 1.

State law defines an "oil well" as a well that produces one barrel of oil to less than 100,000 cubic feet of gas. A gas well produces over 100,000 cubic feet of gas per barrel of oil.

Dallas top-ranked in surplus offices

HOUSTON (AP) — Dallas ranks second and Houston third among U.S. cities in amount of surplus office space, according to a national leasing group's survey.

Chicago led the nation with 40.5 million square feet of available office space, followed by Dallas with 39.2 million square feet and Houston with 38.1 million, the Office Network Inc. said.

Los Angeles ranked fourth with 34.3 million square feet of surplus space, followed by Washington D.C. with 27.6 million, according to the semi-annual survey.

Washington led the nation in net absorption of office space with 11.9 million square feet leased during the past year, followed by Dallas and Los Angeles with 6.6 million square feet each, Boston with 6 million, and Houston with 5.3 million, the survey said.

The Office Network includes 22 leasing companies across the country that compile office space figures twice yearly and submit them to Houston-based The Horne Co. for analysis.

Mesa reorganizes; no more takeovers planned

NEW YORK (AP) — T. Boone Pickens Jr., whose takeover tactics helped reshape the U.S. oil industry in the 1980s, says he wants to remove Mesa Petroleum Co. from the ranks of corporate raiders and transform it into a limited partnership.

Instead of looking out for undervalued oil companies to take over, Pickens said Mesa would concentrate on reducing debt and distributing the proceeds from its oil and natural gas wells to shareholders.

Pickens also denied speculation that he would use the move to part ways with the company he founded 21 years ago.

He said his contract commits him to remain with Mesa at least until the end of 1989 and that with more than 90 percent of his net worth tied up in the company, he does not plan to leave.

With $4.2 million in salary and $18.6 million in deferred bonuses stemming from takeover fights, Pickens was believed to be the nation's highest-paid executive last year.

On Monday, Amarillo, Texas-based Mesa announced its board had proposed a two-step transaction under which Mesa would become a master limited partnership and cease to exist as a corporation after 1987.

Under a limited partnership, cash produced by the company's petroleum assets would not be subject to corporate income taxes before being available for distribution to shareholders.

"The basic move is a sound one" from the perspective of shareholders realizing the underlying value of the company's assets, said Thomas Petrie, an oil industry analyst at the Denver office of First Boston Corp.

Wall Street's initial response was to push Mesa stock up $1.62½ a share Monday to close at $17.12½ in heavy trading on the New York Stock Exchange. Nearly 1.3 million shares changed hands.

Alan Edgar, an analyst who follows Mesa for the Dallas securities firm Schneider, Bernet & Hickman Inc., said: "I think he (Pickens) realizes Mesa has gone as far as it can go" in a petroleum market depressed by overcapacity and falling prices.

Pickens said in a telephone interview that the move represented a fundamental shift in direction for Mesa, which launched hostile takeover bids for such oil industry giants as Gulf Corp. and Phillips Petroleum Co. and then pocketed hundreds of millions of dollars in profits when the target company was either bought out by a higher bidder or repurchased its own stock.

"We're looking at an industry with real problems," he said. "There are limited investment opportunities."

Asked if new takeover bids were on the horizon, Pickens replied: "I don't see it."

Drilling permits jump 13.8 percent from previous week

DENVER — A total of 1,803 permits have been issued to drill for oil and gas in the U.S. during the week ending August 16, an increase of 13.8 percent from the previous week's total of 1,558, according to Petroleum Information Corp.

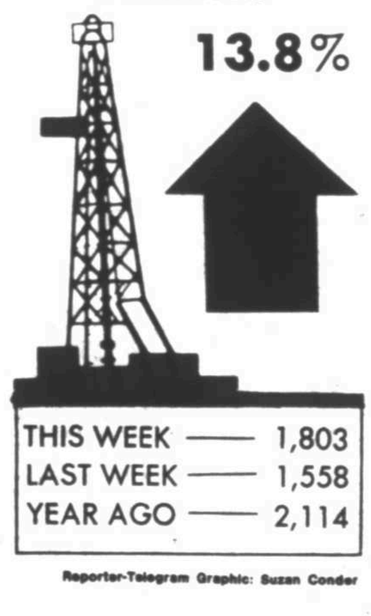

A year ago during the same week, 2,114 permits were issued.

Permits to drill oil and gas are monitored on a nationwide basis by PI.

For the year, 56,704 permits have been issued. That compares with 64,948 permits issued at the same time a year ago, a decrease of 12.7 percent. New field wildcat permits total 5,906, compared with 6,437 a year ago — total 6,232 for the year, down 14.1 percent from the 7,113 permits issued in that category one year ago.

Development drilling permits total 43,756 for the year, compared to 51,398 at this time one year ago, a drop of 14.9 percent.

Among the most active states for permits issued during the week were: Texas, 512; Kentucky, 260; Oklahoma, 218; Louisiana, 173; and Kansas, 108.

Experts say Reagan's shoe decision may provoke legislation

Associated Press

President Reagan's apparent decision against strong action on shoe imports could provoke support in Congress for quotas on shoes and many other imports, according to congressional and manufacturing industry officials.

Sources said Reagan has generally decided against either increasing the 8.8 percent tariff on imported non-rubber footwear or imposing quotas.

George Langstaff, president of Footwear Industries of America, said Monday a decision by the president against imposing curbs on shoe imports would force footwear manufacturers and other U.S. industries harmed by imports "to look to Congress for legislative remedy."

Meanwhile, a real estate group said single-family home sales rose 1.6 percent in July, the highest gain in five years; short-term Treasury securities yields fell in Monday's auctions to their lowest levels since mid-July; and the American Iron and Steel Institute reported that U.S. steel production increased 2.8 percent to 1.623 million tons in the week ended Aug. 24.

Agriculture Department officials said sugar prices are so low some large processors may forfeit millions of pounds of sugar to the government instead of repaying federal price support loans taken out on 1984-crop inventories.

Legislation to cut shoe imports by half, sponsored by Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine, with 33 co-sponsors, will be "pursued vigorously" in light of the president's reported decision on shoes, said Robert Tyrer, an aide to Cohen, whose state is a major shoe producer.

The president was expected to announce his decision later this week.

Meanwhile, the National Association of Realtors said single-family home sales rose 1.6 percent to an annual rate of 3.11 million units from June's 3.06 million. It was the fastest pace since October 1980 and the largest gain since a 5.2 percent March rise.

"With effective interest rates on long-term mortgages now below 12.5 percent, thousands of potential buyers and sellers who waited out the high interest period in 1981 and 1982 are entering the housing market," said David D. Roberts, president of the Realtors association.

Mortgage rates are now at their lowest levels in about five years.

Meanwhile, the Treasury Department said it sold $7.2 billion in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 7.07 percent, down from last week's 7.14 percent. Another $7.2 billion was sold in six-month bills at an average discount rate of 7.21 percent, down from 7.28 percent last week.

The rates were the lowest since July 15, when three-month bills averaged 7.06 percent and six-month bills sold for 7.20 percent.

The American Iron and Steel Institute said steel production was at 63.7 percent of capacity during the week, vs. 61.9 percent the week before. But estimates for the year to date showed production at 57.586 million net tons, a decrease of 9.9 percent from the 63.912 million net tons in the previous year.

Also Monday, Ross Ballard of the USDA's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service said a worldwide glut of sugar and the lowest prices in 15 years have put pressure on the U.S. support program, which guarantees higher prices for domestic sugar. At the same time, import quotas restrict the amount of foreign sugar that can enter the U.S. market.

According to agency figures, the department's Commodity Credit Corp. has loans outstanding on 484.3 million pounds of refined beet sugar at a national average support price of 20.76 cents per pound for a total of more than $100 million. Loans on 919.3 million pounds of raw cane sugar at 17.75 cents a pound total $263.7 million.

Thus, in all, processors owe around $364 million in loans made by the CCC on about 701,800 tons of sugar, based on holdings as of Aug. 21.

On Aug. 29, sugar for future delivery on the New York market in November was 20.41 cents per pound.

The government's "market stabilization price" or objective under the program is 21.57 cents a pound. According to USDA economists, sugar market prices need to be at the stabilization level or higher to prevent sugar from being forfeited to the government.

Mesa Petroleum announces plans to reorganize into partnership

NEW YORK (AP) — Mesa Petroleum Co., an oil patch middleweight from Texas that has taken on the super heavyweights of the industry in rough-and-tumble takeover battles, said its board has approved reorganizing the company into a limited partnership.

Under a limited partnership, cash produced by the company's oil and natural gas business would not have to be subjected to a corporate income tax before being available for distribution to shareholders.

Amarillo-based Mesa proposed that shareholders receive one unit representing an interest in the partnership for each share of Mesa stock. The units will be publicly traded.

Instead of quarterly stock dividends, there would be quarterly distributions of nearly all of the available net cash flow.

Mesa said that it planned to make the first of two distributions of units of the partnership in December and that it planned for Mesa's existence as a corporation to end in 1987, following the second distribution.

After the first distribution of partnership units, the company's stock and the partnership's units would trade independently in security markets.

The plan is subject to approval by Mesa's stockholders at a meeting planned for December. The company also must clear the proposal with its lenders and federal regulators.

T. Boone Pickens Jr., the founder and chairman of Mesa, would head the partnership.

"Transfer of assets to the limited partnership will provide Mesa shareholders a more direct economic interest in the company's primary asset — its oil and gas reserves," Pickens said. "Net available cash flow from the properties, unburdened by income taxes at the corporate level, will be available for distribution to unit holders and will provide substantially higher cash flow than Mesa's current common stock dividend."

Mesa stock shot up $1 to $16.50 a share in the opening hour of New York Stock Exchange trading today following the announcement of the reorganization plans.

Mesa said the 14.6 million shares of Unocal Corp. it aquired in an unsuccessful takeover bid earlier this year and certain other assets would be retained by the company after the first distribution of partnership units and sold within a year.

Tenngasco Exchange reports decline in natural gas prices

HOUSTON-(SWN)-Tenngasco Exchange Corp. has posted a price of $2.17 per million BTU for spot market natural gas delivered in September 1985 at either Tennessee Gas Pipeline at Vinton, LA, or the Tenngasco-controlled facilities at Tivoli, Texas.

The Exchange's September price is nine cents below the August posting. The company cited competition for the available markets and excess gas supplies as reasons for the decline in prices.

Tenngasco said gas volumes on the exchange averaged 1117 million cubic feet a day in August.

Commissioners vote 7.9 percent tax hike

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Midland County commissioners Monday proposed a 19.9-cent tax rate to finance 1986's $14.3 million budget and in doing so hiked the effective tax rate by 7.9 percent.

The commissioners were tempted to push the tax-rate hike over 8 percent but to do so would invite a possible roll-back election. And in trying to limit the tax increase, the commissioners were scrounging for funds to afford a 2 percent pay raise for the county's 350 elected, appointed and hired employees and funds for surplus to build a buffer in the eventuality of "unexpected expenses."

"It isn't that we don't need the money to operate on today's economic climate," said Commissioner C. Wallace "Wally" Craig. "I don't like any kind of a tax increase, but if we're over 8 percent, we're asking for this likelihood (of a rollback election)."

Further, the commissioners expressed "the worst possible fears" that the county's work force might have to be trimmed if the county got into a financial bind next year.

The proposed 1986 budget is a 9.1 percent increase over the the 1985 budget of $13 million. In setting the 1985 budget last year, the commissioners voted in a 7.14 percent increase in the effective tax rate and gave the county's employees a blanket 4 percent pay increase.

"AND WE JUST felt it's not judicious or worth the expense of having an (rollback) election," Craig said.

The 7.9-percent increase, proposed in a motion by Craig and seconded by Commissioner Durward Wright, was approved in a 4-0-1 vote. Only Commissioner Scott Welch abstained due to "lack of info, lack of info," he explained.

The budget increases came in part due to the 1985's "unexpected expenses" of transferring prisoners to other West Texas county jails at a cost now approaching $6,000 a week," Wright noted. The overcrowdedness of the Midland County Jail and its maximum quota of 85 inmates, set by the Texas Commission on Jail Standards, have led to the transfer, which became effective last April 23.

"It's going upward," said Wright. "It's continuing to spiral."

"We do know that we are spending thousands of dollars transporting prisoners," Craig said. "That has to be part of the problem.

Craig said he doubted the commissioners would call another jail bond issue "on its own."

"If there was a great public outcry for another bond issue to build a new jail, we (commissioners) certainly would be responsive in some way. But we are not going to make that decision. We tried it."

EARLIER THIS year, the voters rejected a $9.9 million bond issue to build an $8.4 million jail apart from the courthouse but instead authorized a $3 million bond issue, which includes about $2.4 million to renovate the existing jail, which is on the fifth floor of the courthouse.

To keep the tax-rate increase just a fraction below 8 percent and possibly to provide the county's work force a 2 percent pay raise in 1986, the commissioners authorized County Auditor Floyd Jarnagin to pare down the $6.76 million non-salary line items in the budget of each of the county's 25 departments by 2 percent.

"It's most difficult thing," Jarnagin said.

In addition, the county's end-of-year surplus in 1985 likely will be virtually nil and will afford little if any carry-over funds into 1986.

"We can't keep creating money," noted Wright. "We never did have a printing press."

Wright said the "only thing that scares me about this whole budget is that we've budgeted right down to the end of the year."

"And we've got a a bunch of deserving employees," he said. "We've got a bunch of employees that really need a raise....And I don't see how we can...afford a raise." He said he favored a cost-of-living raise for employees but that seemed most unlikely to pass.

Jarnagin said if "it came down to a priority between a piece of equipment and a salary raise," then he said he felt "there's no question that they (department heads) would go for the salary raise."

"I'VE HEARD people say, 'I'd cut equipment before I'd cut a salary increase,' " Jarnagin said. The auditor said he would "hate to contemplate something that severe (terminating employees to keep the budget out of a deficit). It's not an impossibility."

Craig suggested it was "natural" for department heads as employers to be protective of their workers and to ensure that they are reasonably paid.

But, Craig noted that if the budget woes get "worse," then "I suppose at that point we would have the option of saying, 'We're sorry; the only place we can cut is people...and I'm hoping we don't have to."

The commissioners have budgeted $6.55 million in salaries for 1986; $6.76 million for other expenses, and almost $1 million for the debt service to make up the $14.3 million proposed budget for 1986. The commissioners tentatively have set a public hearing on the proposed tax rate at 5 p.m. on Sept. 5 in the Commissioners' Courtroom in the downtown courthouse. They are to adopt the tax rate and have a hearing on the budget on Sept. 20.

"The severity of the problem governs the severity of the tax cutbacks," Craig said.

"If the money's not there to pay them (employees), we're in trouble," Wright said.

"I think we'll find it," said County Judge Bill Ahders.

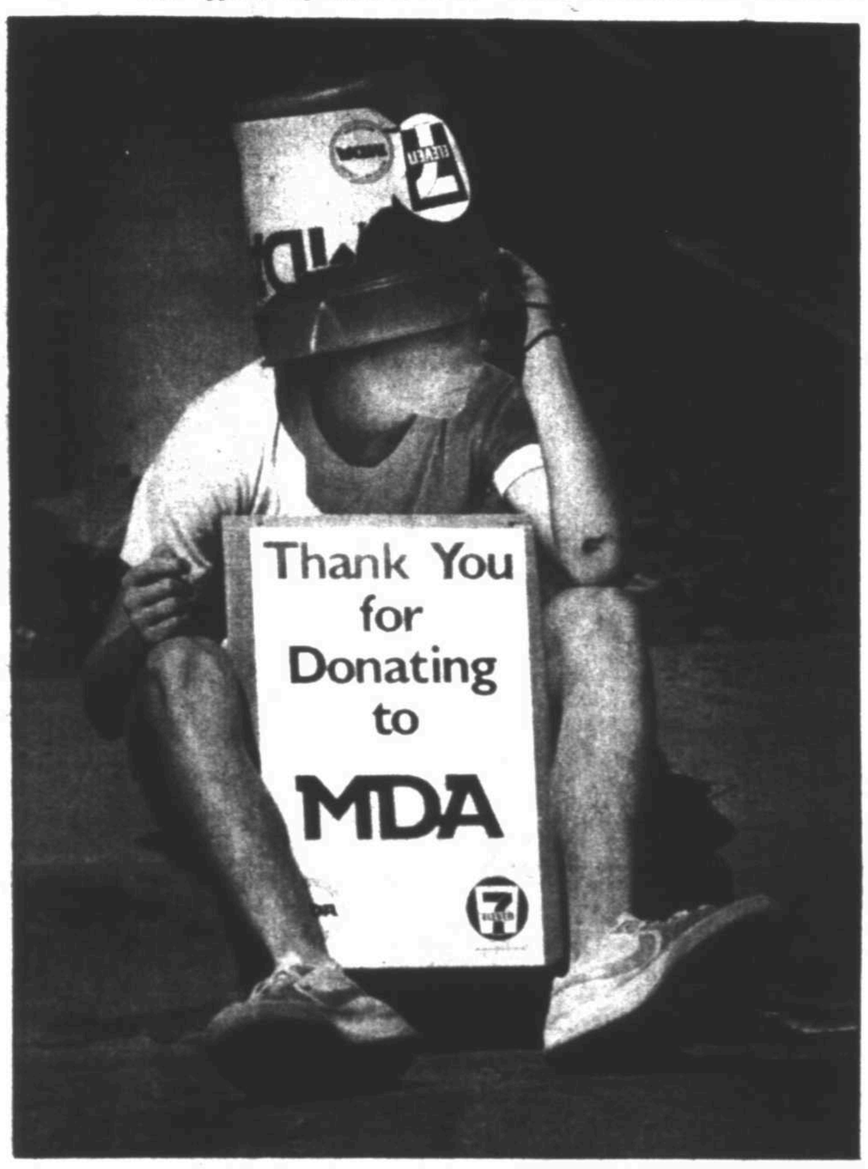

Commissioner Win Brown said "if salaries are going to be there," then there must be a "corresponding" cutback in non-salary budget items.

"Elected officials ought to be leading the pack," said Brown, who at one point suggested that elected officials be bypassed on salary raises. That notion was rejected.

Ector County officials hear opposition to sale of animals

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Ector County Commissioners Monday spent nearly two hours hearing from citizens opposing the sale of animals from the county animal shelter to the Texas Tech research center where animals purchased are used in biomedical experiments.

Two Midlanders were among those appearing to voice their opinions concerning the sale of dogs and cats to the Texas Tech research center.

Midge Erskine, who rehabilitates birds, suggested Texas Tech should use university funds to obtain more expensive animals for research purposes, if that's what it would take to end the practice of using pound animals for experimental purposes.

She said up until four or five years ago, biology students at Midland high schools were required to provide their own cats for dissection purposes. This led some students to steal cats right out of front yards. There were finally enough protests that the practice of requiring students to provide their own dead animals was ended and schools were forced to use their own funds to obtain more expensive animals.

Dalton Byerly, former head of the Midland animal shelter, now affiliated with the Midland SPCA, stated biomedical research is a complex subject.

Acknowledging that biomedical experiments are necessary for human welfare, Byerly questioned why Texas Tech and other such research facilities couldn't use "colony breeding" to produce the animals needed for experimental purposes.

He said keeping detailed records on such animals would allow researchers much closer control of prospective laboratory animals.

DENISE NORMAN, who first launched an effort to block the sale of animals to Texas Tech from the county animal shelter, and Opal Dunigan, who raises pit bulls, each presented petitions signed by persons largely opposed to the practice of selling dogs and cats for laboratory research purposes. Both women are strongly opposed to the practice of using dogs and cats from the animal shelter for experimental purposes.

Art Jensen, one of those involved in research at Texas Tech, stated that animals used in medical research projects are treated humanely. They are anesthetized to prevent them from feeling pain, he said.

Jensen stressed the importance of using dogs and cats in biomedical research, adding that drugs developed through such research have aided the recovery of burn victims by reducing their susceptibility to infection, improved the prognosis of heart disease patients and provided relief to sufferers of arthritic pain and chronic headaches.

Jensen also said if Texas Tech and other research centers are prevented from obtaining animals destined to be euthanized it would mean research centers would have to resort to using commercial dealers and breeders.

Following complaints from some of those attending the court session that some animals were not being kept the required period of time before being sold for research purposes, Judge Jan Fisher ordered animal shelter director Melinda Tindle Willis to provide the court with all information relevant to how animals are handled at the shelter, how long they are held, what method is used to put them to sleep and how long it takes.

JUDGE FISHER ended the discussion by calling for initiation of a contract with the Texas Tech research center that would stipulate that, before stray animals could be sold to Texas Tech, they must be first offered for adoption. The contract would require owners turning animals into the pound to agree to the use of the animals for medical research purposes. Otherwise, if not adopted, they would be disposed of in the normal manner.

The contract would also require a research center oversight committee at Texas Tech to continue to have at least one member from the Humane Society to assure animals are treated humanely.

In other action, commissioners spent some five hours behind closed doors receiving information from a sheriff's investigator and county auditor Dan Ramirez concerning an investigation of the County Data Processing Department.

Emerging from the closed session about 6 p.m. Monday, Judge Fisher said the investigation into alleged wrongdoing in the county data processing center has been virtually completed, adding that she and the commissioners had heard the results of about a two-week investigation by Sheriff's Lt. Jerry Davis and an audit by county auditor Ramirez.

She stated there would be a full report aired in public during the next regular session of Commissioners Court and that Davis and Ramirez would be available to answer any and all questions relevant to the investigation.

THE INVESTIGATION was initiated after a former data processing employee, Tana Stewart Perry, filed a lawsuit in a Travis County District Court alleging she was fired by then-data processing manager Mike Holden because she attempted to call attention to what she believed were wrongful practices occurring on the office.

During Monday's lengthy closed session, commissioners also heard from a former animal shelter employee, Stephanie LaPorta, who claims she was fired "for speaking out about the way the shelter was run and for complaining about the conditions the animals were exposed to."

Ms. LaPorta presented commissioners with about four-and-a-half typed pages detailing her allegations that "the Director fails to properly and uniformly operate and maintain the Animal Shelter facility in a way beneficial to the need of the public community or to the needs of the animals confined within."

Commissioners took no action on her complaint when they emerged from their executive session.

Fire prevention now becoming part of regular curriculum

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

This fall, thousands of Midland children will participate in a new educational program which H. Ross Perot had nothing to do with.

For years, Midland firefighters have been conducting fire-prevention programs in the schools. But this year, fire prevention will become part of the curriculum for about 7,000 students from kindergarten through fourth grade.

"This is something new this year," said Frank Marlow, director of elementary education for the Midland Indendent School District.

According to Marlow, the district has always taught fire prevention as part of its safety-instruction program, but new materials obtained from the National Fire Safety Council will enable teachers to go into more depth.

"It's set up for different grade levels," said Fire Marshal Jerry Petree of the program, which is provided free of cost to MISD and the Fire Department by the NFSC, a Michigan-based organization associated with the National Child Safety Council.

"We have a research-and-development team — all they do is create materials for these officers to work with," said the NCSC's H.R. Wilkinson, who said both organizations are funded by private donations.

According to Petree, children playing with matches are the fourth-leading cause of fires in the United States, and one fourth of all fire deaths involve children. But fire-education has had an effect on these grim statistics:

"About 4,000 died (in fires in 1984). This is a drop of 14 percent from (1983), and that was attributed to fire-prevention education and smoke detectors," said Fire Inspector Lon Dominguez.

"Fire-prevention education is cutting down on fire deaths in our country," added Petree.

The program includes fire-safety guide books, booklets, folders, posters, brochures and films designed to stimulate children's awareness of the fire hazards they encounter each day, Petree said.

Odessa council expected to OK budget

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Odessa city council members this morning were expected to approve a city budget of slightly more than $47 million for the 1985-86 fiscal year, which includes a tax rate increase of about .02 cents per $100 of assessed valuation.

Budget approval is not expected to come, however, until council members decide how $165,000 is to be cut from the proposed budget to bring expenditures in line with anticipated revenues.

The tax increase proposed would add nothing to operating revenues but would be used for debt service purposes only.

Councilman Sherman Cox Monday night during a final budget study session proposed the council accept $111,880 in suggested cuts by City Manager John Harrison and transfer $54,000 from the city's reserve fund to cover the balance.

Cox's proposal came as Council member Melissa Hirsch argued that she wanted a cap of $25,000 on the Teen Court budget, which was about $22,000 in the 1984-85 fiscal year. The Odessa Junior League, which sponsors the program with the city, has asked that the Teen Court budget be increased to $30,300.

Cox argued that the budget for Teen Court should be allowed to stand as proposed because the program has been overwhelmingly successful, drawn national attention to Odessa and helped a great number of the city's youth.

RON GILMORE

Would Aunt Bea have left recorded message?

When did the telephone become such a pain? It used to be such a subtle thing.

No longer. The days when the purpose of the telephone was to sit on the kitchen counter until called upon to be used are over. The 80s are the "Age of Communications."

When did it happen? In Donna Reed times the phone was no more important than the toaster. I can't imagine Aunt Bea leaving a recorded message.

No, the need to have constant communication, an uninterrupted flow of information, has strengthened the umbilical cords attached to the giant mother telephone companies and produced a wizard's gaggle of gadgetry designed to monitor any call, anywhere, anytime, anyway and everywhere. Our fingers do more walking than our feet.

I guess I just don't care if the phone rings. There are some precious private times when I would like to punch out anyone who dared to "reach out and touch."

Telephones have taken on a ridiculous importance. Call anyone and the chances are good that you'll be answered with a taped recording, usually cutesy, telling you to leave your name and number. Sorry, I can't be bothered.

In today's hectic world of two-career families, the "missed call" has taken on a gargantuan status. As far as I'm concerned, worrying about missed calls is like worrying about plane crashes. Statistics say that one out of 500,000 scheduled flights will crash. I wouldn't hesitate to guess that the percentages for a missed call being truly important are much different.

Take me back to the days of Sarah, the operator, on Petticoat Junction and Green Acres. If it was important, she'd find you. And if you truly needed to get ahold of someone, she'd get them for you, instead of going through a metallic-sounding operator, who adds 50 cents to your bill as you speak.

Nope. This telephone thing has gotten out of hand.

Look at the ads.

Famous actors urge you to choose a particular company when making a long distance call. If Madison Avenue doesn't confuse you with their appeals, the government's break-up of AT&T sure has, with its ominous warnings to choose a company before it chooses you. Scary.

Fact is, I want the telephone to be put back in its place. Granted, they did all right when they put the little square buttons on front versus the rotary dial. Goodness knows, it alleviates a lot of worry, should there be an ax murderer in the house. They can't hear you dial and it's twice as fast.

But all this hubbub over such a nuisance (except in the case of the ax murderer, of course) has me wired.

I remember a time in my life during my poverty-stricken college years, when there was no phone in the house. (Thanks largely to my ignorance of just how far away places like Cairo and Sydney really are).

I found out that I did just fine without the phone.

I also discovered who my friends were. And I confirmed who the conversational acquaintences were. My sleep was never rudely interrupted with a jarring jangle.

I got out of the house more, because I tended to go out and visit or take a walk, rather than lay on the floor gossiping or waiting on a call.

I wonder what peace of mind the Ozark hillbillies must have known, when a simple walk out the front door and a "holler" across the way was the only occasional intrusion.

Although the phone manufacturers are probably planning against it while I speak, there is one simple solution to this rude racketmaker. Pull the cord.

Texas couple spends lots of time defending their turf

NEW WAVERLY, Texas (AP) — John and Sue Jones spend an inordinate amount of time defending their home turf.

No, there aren't any bats. Yes, there's plenty of sunlight.

"It's hard convincing people you don't have critters clinging to the walls, hanging by their toes," quips Jones. "It's like any other house."

Well, almost.

While neighbors are replacing shingles on their roofs, the Joneses are usually mowing and watering theirs. It is part of the maintenance regimen when you live several feet underground.

"People have this mental block. They think we live in some cold, dark cave," Jones says. "I just tell them, 'Come by and see it for yourself.' "

Many do, not all expected.

From this secluded dirt road near New Waverly, the back, sides and roof of the house appear to be nothing more than a large, odd-shaped grassy mound.

Its curious shape gets the best of some motorists.

"You'd see 'em driving down the road with their necks all turned around trying to figure out what that big mound is," says Jones, a pawn shop owner. "They don't know it's a house till they circle around to the front. Then you hear some tires squealing."

The unconventional look of an earth-sheltered home was one attraction to subterranean living. But it was common sense that buried the Joneses and their two sons beneath several thousand pounds of concrete and sod.

"I hate utility companies. A $464 electricity bill doesn't set well with me," Jones says. "When you predict what the bills will be in 10 years, it's astronomical. When you retire on a fixed income, what happens then?"

With this in mind, they went digging for answers. History provided the best solution.

"Our forefathers lived in sod houses. Earth-sheltered, underground homes are recorded back thousands of years. They keep you warm in the winter and cool in the summer. I thought, 'Why not?' "

The Joneses drew up the blueprints and an East Texas company specializing in underground homes started construction. Several thousand bags of concrete and dirt later, their earth-sheltered, dome-shaped home was nes tled in the side of a hill on the outskirts of New Waverly. Only the front of the dwelling, made of Texas iron ore rock, is exposed.

It took five months to build the home, constructed of three concrete domes. Once the concrete was laid, it was coated with a rubberized waterproofing substance and inch-thick layers of plastic foam to provide insulation and keep out moisture.

Depending on the angle of the roof, anywhere from four to eight feet of dirt covers the structure.

Lest anyone think the roof might crater under that weight, think again.

"Our roof is built like an overhead freeway system on bridges," boasts Jones. "The roof will hold something like 25 million pounds. We had 156,000 pounds worth of bulldozer sitting on top of it after construction. I'd say that's structurally sound."

But the solid concrete walls make picture-hanging a new experience. "You couldn't put one up with a hammer. And you wouldn't want to put a fist through our wall," he says.

They plan to retire here, overlooking their four-acre lake, pond, garden and a menagerie of cats, dogs and ducks. They now are minus one horse.

"He preferred the St. Augustine on our roof to his hay."

Midland man listed as 'fair' after accident on Loop 250

From Staff Reports

A 32-year-old Midland man was listed in fair condition in Midland Memorial Hospital this morning after losing control of his Chevy Bronco on Loop 250 Monday night, according to hospital and police reports.

Harry Foster Lear, 3100 Caldera, lost control of his vehicle about 11:05 p.m. while travelling east on the Loop just west of Big Spring Street. The vehicle struck a guard rail and overturned, and Lear was taken to MMH with lacerations to his face and head, reports said.

In other hospital reports, Jody Hudson Schlabs, the 27-year-old Midland woman seriously injured early Monday morning in an accident on West Highway 80, remained in critical condition this morning, an MMH spokeswoman said.

Ms. Schlabs, 3609 Caldera, suffered chest and abdominal injuries in the 12:01 a.m. accident, which occurred when the driver of the car she was riding in turned left in front of an oncoming car, according to the Department of Public Safety. The other three people involved in the accident were treated Monday and released, the spokeswoman said.

A 17-year-old Midland woman injured Sunday morning in a one-car accident on the Loop was listed in satisfactory condition this morning, the hospital spokeswoman said. Lorie Davis, 4415 Northcrest, had been hurt about 6:18 a.m. when she lost control of her car and overturned on the Loop near Garfield Street, police reports said.

Sonia Atyia, 57, 4723 Spring Meadow, was released from the hospital Monday, the spokeswoman said. Ms. Atyia had been injured Sunday afternoon in a hit-and-run accident on the Loop near Ward Street, according to police reports.

The 20-year-old Midland woman shot at her home Aug. 16 was listed in satisfactory condition this morning, the spokeswoman said. Mary Martinez, 404 E. Estes, was shot through the door of her home about 4 a.m. that day. Two Midland men have been arrested and charged with aggravated assault in the incident, according to police.

Stanton names new police chief

From Staff Reports

STANTON — Former Midland policeman Mike Adams agreed last week to become the new Stanton police chief, according to Mayor Danny Fryar.

Adams, who assumes his new duties next week, replaces Rickey Kennedy, who left Aug. 9 to work for the Pecos County Sheriff's Department in Fort Stockton.

"Looks like we're going to be without a chief for about a month," said Fryar, who has supervised the three-man department in the interim.

The 30-year-old Adams, now a farmer in the Stanton area, once worked as a patrolman in Midland and as a captain in the Lamesa Police Department. But the fact that he was reared in Stanton was as important as his previous experience, Fryar said.

"He's a local boy — he was raised here," said the mayor. "He knows the people and the way they do things."

Adams, who was chosen from among 15 applicants, told the Big Spring Herald he was "excited about working to help the people I've known all of my life."

ODESSA

"I think $30,300 is little enough to invest in Odessa's youth, especially when the program works," said Cox.

Ms. Hirsch said she had talked with Narita Holmes, a Junior League member who was instrumental in helping start the Teen Court program, who said she believed the program should be able to continue operating with the budget it had last year.

Kathy Shelton, the Junior League member responsible for overseeing the Teen Court program until recently, said although Mrs. Holmes had helped start the program she had no idea how it has grown and the new demands created by expanded service. She pointed out that the program has handled more than 1,000 juvenile offenders since it was initiated slightly more than a year ago.

Ms. Hirsch continued to criticize dental insurance coverage the city provides for employees, saying that, contrary to statements by personnel director Jim Hall during the budget session Aug. 19, she had checked with local employers and found only one that provides dental coverage for employees.

She contends the city could save more than $191,000 if dental insurance coverage was eliminated from the employee benefit package.

Odessan held on indecency charge

From Staff Reports

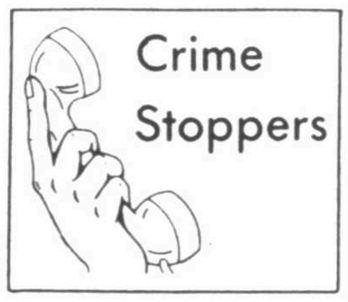

ODESSA — A 34-year-old Odessa man remained in the Ector County jail today in lieu of $50,000 bond on one count of aggravated sexual assault of a child and two counts of indecency with a child allegedly involving an 11-year-old girl.

Henry Charles Knezek, 907 Nimitz, was arrested Saturday on a charge of indecency with a child. He was arraigned before Peace Justice Jimmy Harris, who set bond at $15,000.

Sheriff's investigator Roy Gladden filed the aggravated sexual assault of a child charge and indecency with a child charge against Knezek late Monday afternoon. Harris set bond on the sexaul assault charge at $20,000 and at $15,000 on the indecency charge.

Gladden, who says additional charges may be filed against Knezek, said the incidents are alleged to have occurred during the last three or four months and may include other victims.

Crime Stoppers seeks information on burglary

This week Crime Stoppers is looking for information on a July 3 burglary at Lanny Foreman's L & L Automotive, 500 E. 3rd St., Odessa.

Sometime between 5:30 p.m. July 2 and the following morning, someone broke out a window on the west side of the building, took an assortment of automotive tools worth about $7,500 and escaped out the front door.

Crime Stoppers will pay $1,000 this week only for information leading to the arrest and indictment of the person or persons responsible for this burglary. Crime Stoppers will also pay cash rewards for information on other felony crimes. Call 694-TIPS in Midland or 333-TIPS in Odessa. Callers need not reveal their names to collect the reward.

Odessan's robbery trial begins

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A 161st District Court jury of eight men and four women has begun hearing testimony in the aggravated robbery trial of 18-year-old Larry Marquez Dutchover.

Dutchover is accused of three armed robberies that occurred during the month of February, twice at the Whataburger drive-in, 1900 E. 8th St. and Harrigan's Restaurant, Parkway and East University.

Three other men have also been charged in connection with one or more of the alleged robberies.

Dutchover's attorney, Steve Brannan, tried unsuccessfully during a July 24 pretrial hearing to persuade Judge Tryon Lewis to move the trial somewhere on a change of venue because of publicity surrounding the Dutchover name that would prevent Dutchover from receiving a fair and impartial trial.

MC offering drivers' education

From Staff Reports

The Midland College Community Services Department will offer driver education from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday beginning Sept. 3.

The course consists of classroom and behind-the-wheel instruction in preparation for Texas driver's licensing procedures. Students must be 15 years old on or before the first class meeting. The class is limited to 35 students and the fee is $120.

FIRE

"A lot of kids are dying needlessly," said Wilkinson, but increased education can cut down on those numbers.

"If you start with the young children and train them, as they grow into adulthood they will be more aware of the hazards," Marlow said.

"Hopefully, this will be something that will become part of them," said Dominguez.

And Petree noted that making children more aware of the dangers might help educate their parents, leading to more fire-exit drills at home, and greater use of smoke detectors.

"Hopefully, kids being exposed to fire-prevention education will take it home — that's what's going to save lives," he said. "And that's what it's all about — saving lives."

This seminar is designed to aid parents in successfully passing through this potentially turbulent time.

Leader of the seminar will be the Rev. Norman Godfrey, director of the center. It is being offered on Sept. 14, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. The fee is $20 per person or $35 per couple. For registration information, call Debbie Roberts at 563-4144.

MISD orientation set

From Staff Reports

Lewellen reminds you that time is running out for energy tax credit

Lewellen Construction now in new location

Lewellen Construction, now in its new location at 3000 South Midkiff, has been serving Midlanders for over three years. Permanently located in Midland, Texas, Bill and Joan Lewellen are striving to bring Midland homeowners the kind of materials and workmanship available only from a contractor whose goals and ideals are to produce the best. That's why this local company has become well known for quality storm windows, siding and patio covers at fair price.

Lewellen's Construction customers aren't hesitant to express how they feel about the work done by Lewellen. Here's what some customers have said:

"Thanks for a job well done."

"I am happy to go on record as one of your satisfied customers."

"Thanks Bill! for the excellent work and the manner in which you personally looked after the job."

"You are A, number 1 with us."

"I think you do a great job."

"I'm so proud of my home now."

"We have had many comments on our house and how it has improved the looks of our place. Keep up the good work."

Bill and Joan do plan to keep up the good work at their new location, 3000 South Midkiff, and at the homes of many Midlanders who want a good job done without a high pressure sales job.

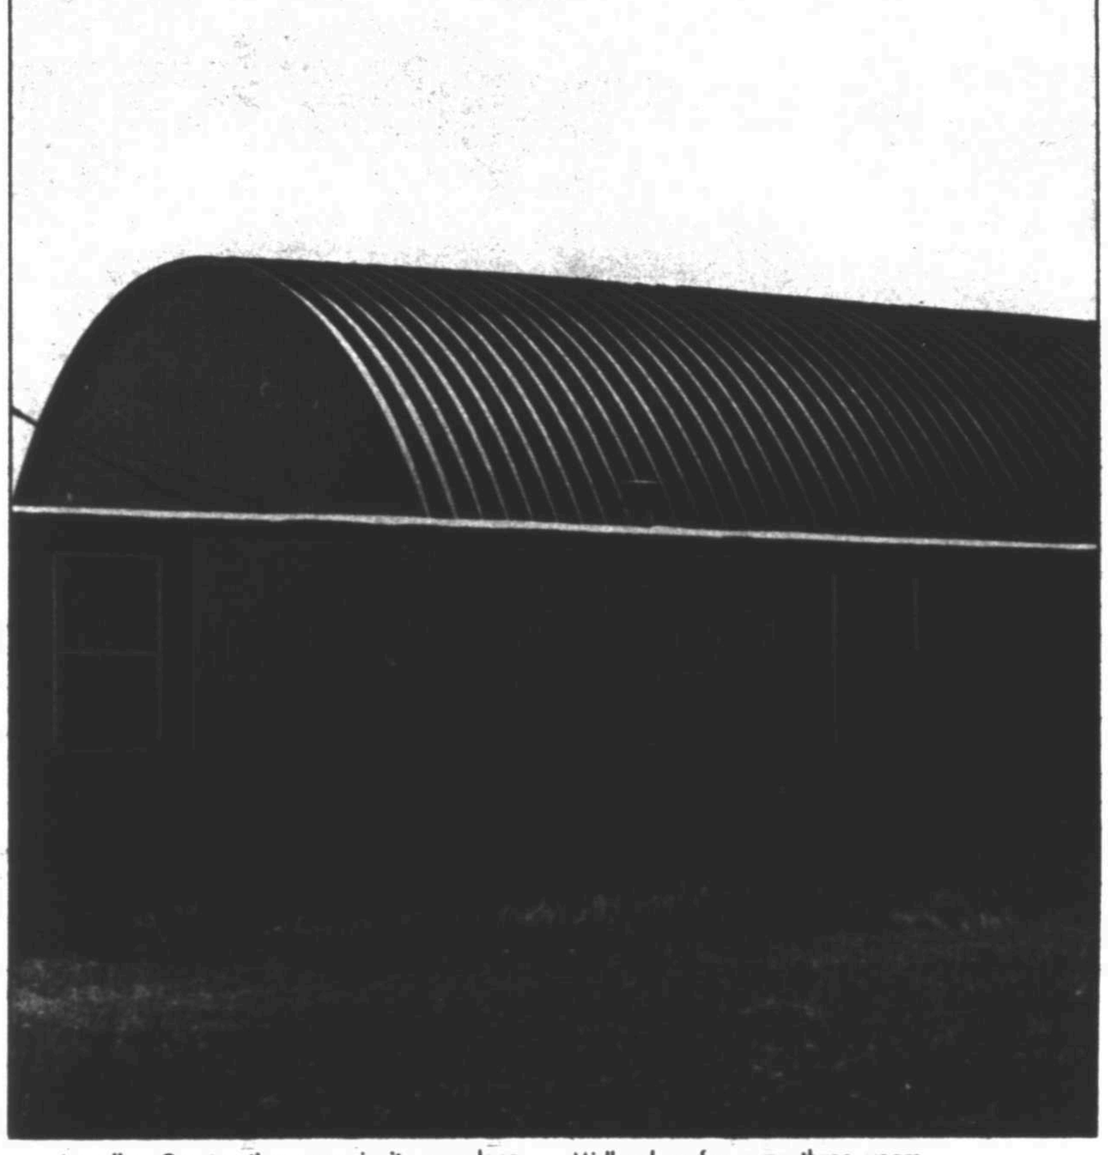

Bill reminds Midlanders that the law which allows a tax credit for the installation of storm windows is only scheduled to be in effect through the end of 1985. To qualify for the credit of 15 percent up to $300 (15 percent of $2000) your home must have been substantially completed by April 20, 1977. Now is the time to call 686-8007 and take advantage of the tax credit this year.

Then, for years to come you will enjoy the advantage of Diamond storm windows which lock out the cold of winter and the summer heat. All Diamond windows are custom built and are accompanied by a 15 year non-prorated limited warranty against defects in material and workmanship.

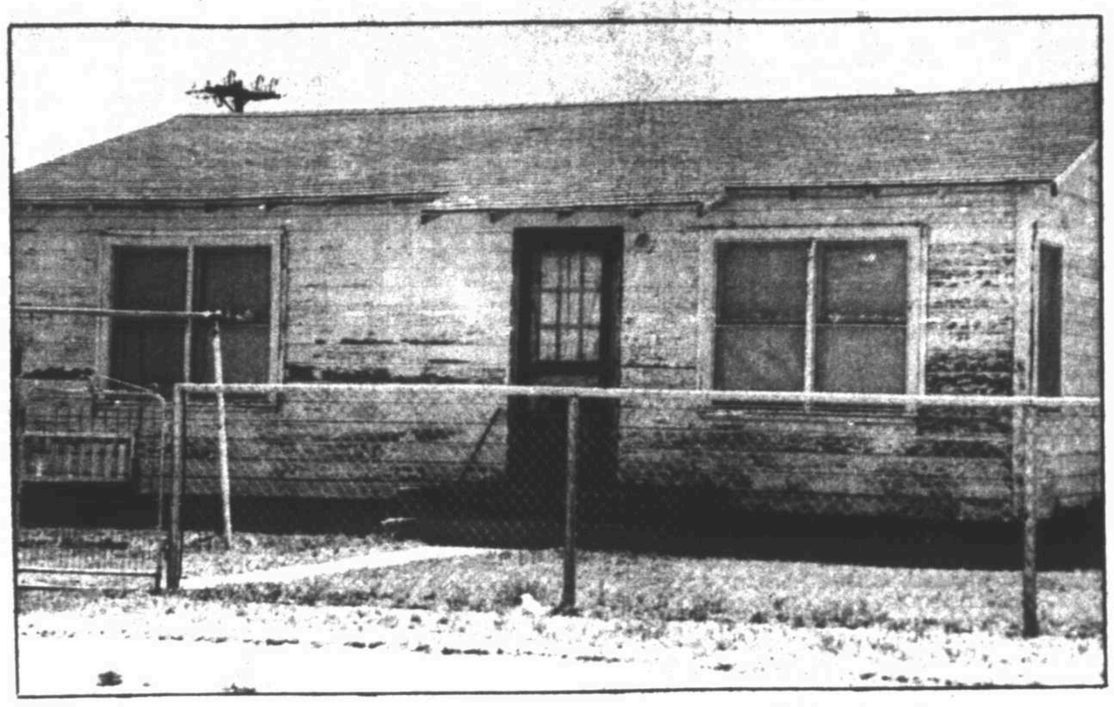

It is important not only to get quality windows, but to have those storm windows installed by a qualified company like Lewellen Construction. If the windows are installed incorrectly they won't be as effective.

Lewellen Construction does quality work at a fair price not only with windows, but also with steel siding, trim, fascia and soffit, along with replacement windows (metal and vinyl) and doors, Lewellen's also offers patio covers and carports.

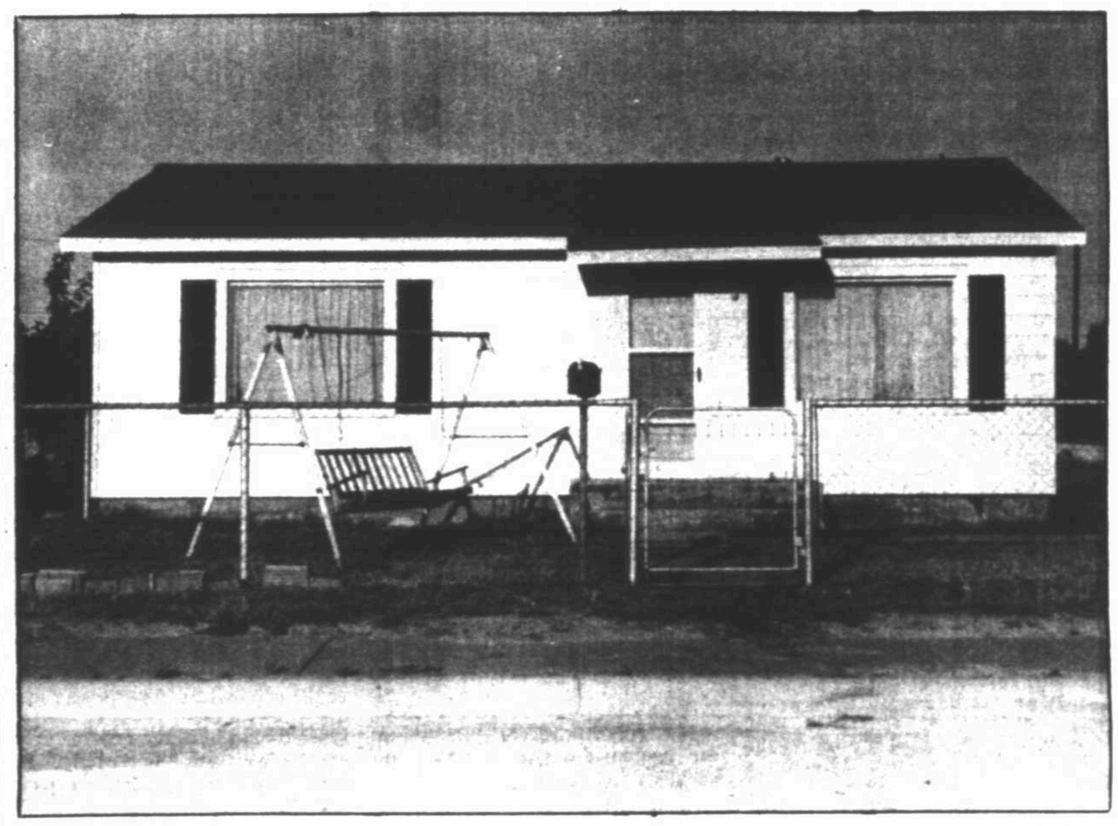

Call 686-8007 today or go by their new office at 3000 South Midkiff.

Lewellen Construction, now in its new location at 3000 South Midkiff, has been serving Midlanders for over three years.

Just a month ago this house at 1911 Bryant was in great need of a facelift.

The home took on a totally new appearance and maintenance free exterior as Lewellen Construction installed siding, soffit, fascia, replacement doors and windows. Now the owner says, "I am really enjoying everything. It's a job well done - just perfect. Call 686-8007 to find out what a difference Lewellen Construction can make in the exterior of your home.

National Video: the convenient, economical way to enjoy movies

National Video at 3323 North Midland Drive is an independently owned and operated franchise of National Video, Inc. which rents VHS and Beta video cassettes of movies as well as VCR's and video cameras.

Manager Bruce Davis explains that being part of a chain of 1200 stores in the U.S. and Canada, allows them to offer a number of special conveniences to Midlanders. National Video's Identification Card makes renting movies fast and easy at any National Video Store. Moreover, every card holder receives colorful newslettters which tell what movies will be available soon and what tremendous specials are in progress.

Davis also makes it a habit to enclose money-saving coupons in the high quality newsletters.

And the selection- it's unbelievable! This family store features top 20 movies, westerns, classics, cartoons, science fiction favorites, comedies, dramas, musicals and all the latest releases.

To make it easy for customers to find their favorites, National Video's movies are classified. And, with this store's system there's no confusion about whether a movie is available or already checked out.

The efficient staff is always ready to help customers, so you won't have to wait in any long lines at National Video. Better yet, card holders can call ahead and reserve movies. A computer system speeds the process even more.

When Davis says "We really believe in customer service," he means it!

While it costs $15 for two adults and their teenager to go to a theatre and see one movie, National Video makes it possible for a family to enjoy TWO movies in the comfort of their own home for just $5. Not only will you avoid treking across bubble gum dotted floors and taking a seat on chairs which are soiled with soft drink spills and greasy popcorn, you will also enjoy complete control over the movie you view. View it at your leisure - stop it, start it, reveiw portions. You set the showtime!

Right now, National Video is featuring a six pack offer. Select four movies, grab a two liter Coke and a box of Paul Newman popcorn for just $8.95 at National Video on the corner of Wadley and Midland Drive.

Right now, they are open Monday-Saturday 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. and Sunday from noon until 9 p.m. They will be open Labor Day from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. for your convenience. After Labor Day their fall hours will be Monday-Thursday 10 a.m.-9 p.m., Friday, Saturday 10 a.m.-10 p.m. and Sunday noon to 8 p.m.

Crystal Vend features delicious purified water for salt-free diets

Crystal Vend brings new meaning to the words "convenience" and "affordability." Twenty-four hours a day, seven days a week, you can get delicious, crystal clear drinking water for only 30 cents a gallon at six convenient locations in Midland.

Crystal Vend features Purified Water for salt free diets, along with their Crystal Clear drinking water.

Advance technology is Crystal-Vend's secret to clear drinking water. The blue cabinet houses a miniature, precision water purification system. Municipal water is first filtered to remove sediment particles and suspended dirt and sand followed by carbon filtration which removes unpallatable chlorine and dissolved organic impurities.

The filtered water is then demineralized to remove harsh disolved metallic salts and then exposed to ultraviolet light for bacteriastatic control producing a PURIFIED WATER (99.9 percent pure) for doctor ordered salt-free diets and all distilled water uses.

A trace of the minerals are retained in the CRYSTAL CLEAR drinking water for taste.

The CRYSTAL—VEND machines are based on state-of-the-art technology and as such, exceed capabilites of all other machines of this type.

Whether your need is for Purified Water for a salt free diet or Crystal Clear drinking water, you will enjoy the convenience of Crystal Vend. All you have to do is take your container by one of the convenient locations:

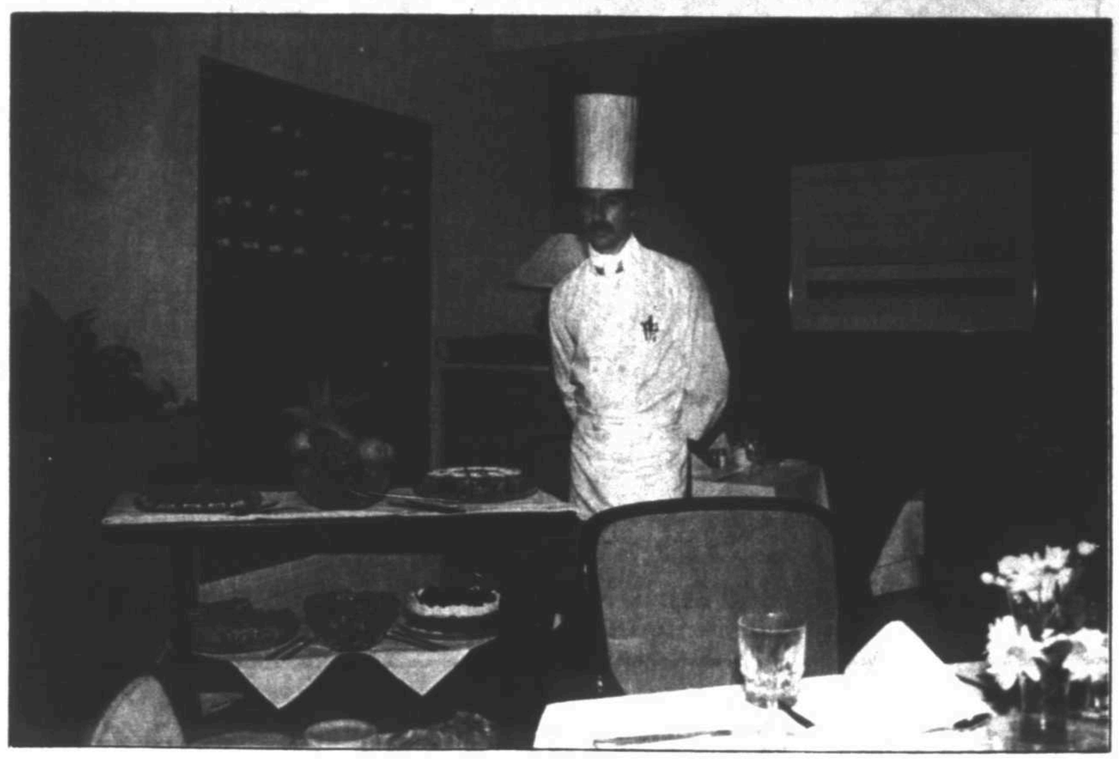

M System - 400 Midland Drive
M System - 2200 Rankin Hwy
M System - N. "A" and W. Scharbauer
Safeway - 4340 W. Illinois
Safeway-Wadley and Garfield
Walgreen's - 215 Andrews Hwy

Each machine is coin operated and is designed to accomodate containers of any size from one gallon to five gallons. All you have to do is position your container on the adjustable shelf, insert your coins and push the green button for CRYSTAL—CLEAR drinking water or push the blue button for PURIFIED water for those salt-free diets and distilled water uses.

Crystal clear water doesn't have to be expensive, so try Crystal Vend this week for just 30 cents a gallon.

Customers enjoy the 24 hour convience of Crystal Vend purified water for salt-free diets. For just 30 cents a gallon you have your choice of tasty drinking water or purified water which is suitable for distilled water uses.

Art Elvins recently joined the Midland Hilton staff as executive chef. General Manager Marshall Hill says, "He's the most qualified chef that we've ever been able to recruit."

Chef Elvins joins the Hilton and outstanding tradition of Charlie's

1985 has been a special year for the Midland Hilton. It's been a year of establishing new traditions.

In January they introduced a fine menu of American regional cuisine in Charlie's. Then, a few weeks ago Midland Hilton was awarded a four diamond designation by the American Automobile Association. Only 1200 establishments out of over 20,000 in America achieve this rating. It's a new tradition, General Manager Marshall Hill says, which the Midland Hilton intends not only to continue, but to improve upon. Five diamond designation is the next goal.

To help continue these fine traditions, Art Elvins joins the Midland Hilton as Executive Chef. Hill says, "We're very happy to have him with us. It was an extensive prolonged recruiting process... Before he came here we went through a very careful selection process due to the very demanding standards we set... Art's the most qualified chef that we've ever been able to recruit."

Chef Elvins introduces the story of his career this way, "I started out washing dishes in a small diner... I've always thought that people will eat and go out and entertain each other." Thus, he decided the restaurant business must be a good one; however, "I never thought I'd get this far," he says.

Chef Elvins has learned much since that first dishwashing job. He is especially proud of the fact that he is an American-trained chef, having studied at the American Culinary School in New York.

Even with training from one of the finest culinary schools anywhere, this chef says, "A lot of my education has been informal."

Elvins was previously affiliated with Four Seasons in Albuquerque and with the Delmonte Hyatt in Monterrey, CA- both four diamond hotels. In 1984 he participated on an individual basis in the Culinary Olympics in Frankfort, Germany.

Now, Chef Elvins brings his experience and commitment to American Regional Cuisine to the Midland Hilton. He explains that American cuisine began to gain in popularity when the American Culinary Federation Team entered an American dish and carried away a gold medal in 1976. The Carter Administration also spurred the popularity of such dishes by serving American foods at nearly every formal dinner.

"A lot of people used to think, 'If it's European, it's better,' " says Chef Elvins. That, however is changing. In fact, since Charlie's adopted a menu of fine southwestern and northwestern dishes their food sales have increased by 58 percent.

This is not just a trend, according to Hill and Elvins. It's a new American tradition that will continue throughout the United States and, of course, at Charlie's in the Midland Hilton.

Olsten of Midland owner Amy Stewart (seated), Joan Pertree (left), and Joni Hodges (right) believe Olsten temporaries can help you cut your personnel-related costs. Call 683-5677 to find out more.

Olsten Temporary Services: the management tool that controls those hidden personnel costs

This chart, produced by the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, indicates the loss of productivity that results from long work hours. By using Olsten temporaries instead of your permanent personnel to fill your overtime needs, you can get efficient and alert people when you want them so productivity goes up, and costs come down.

With personnel-related costs accounting for approximately 75 percent of all business expenses, it is essential to control these costs in order to maximize profits. Amy Stewart, local owner and manager of Olsten of Midland, is confident that Olsten Temporary Services is the management tool that can help control those hidden personnel costs.

She explains that Olsten can help you maintain the right staffing level when work flow varies because of special projects, seasonal peaks, urgent deadlines, expansion or contraction of work force.

Permanent overstaffing to fill these needs is exceptionally expensive since benefits and fringes have increased tremendously in the last two decades. In fact, according to a recent study by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, a salary of $200.00 per week has hidden costs of $93.50 bringing the true costs of that salary to $293.50. Social Security, unemployment insurance, worker's compensation, disability insurance, administrative costs, vacation, holiday, and sick pay, as well as company benefits drive the payroll costs up, up, up.

Likewise, overtime is costly both financially and in terms of productivity. When employees work long hours payroll costs go up, error rates rise, performance is lowered, productivity decreases.

With Olsten you avoid the expense of overstaffing AND keep your permanent people free of increasesd pressures that can cause morale problems when you need teamwork most. By using Olsten temporaries instead of your permanent personnel to fill your peak production needs, you can get efficient and alert people when you want them - and for as long as you need them.

Olsten temporaries come in fresh and ready to revitalize your output. Yet, you pay only a straight hourly rate. So productivity goes up, and costs come down.

Ms. Stewart points out one other benefit of utilizing Olsten temporaries. Companies can save by reducing turnover and cutting unemployment claims when Olsten temporaries are used in those departments where turnover is particularly high - especially in entry level positions.

With Olsten you get efficient and effective personnel while you avoid rapid turnover and subsequent high unemployment costs.

Whenever you call on Olsten, temporaries are custom matched to your particular job requirements.

The Olsten Profiler System, developed exclusively by Olsten Temporary Services, is a unique data-gathering tool that will take the guesswork out of temporary personnel placement. The Olsten Profiler and the Olsten Job Profiler record specific information about your company and your individual departmental needs. This added dimension helps you get the right temporary for the job every time.

Olsten also has a Personnel Transfer Plan (PTP) designed for clients who, for a wide variety of reasons, need the services of certain personnel but choose not to have them on their payroll. Here's how it works; you refer those personnel to Olsten for employment. Once they qualify as Olsten temps, they will be made available to fill your assignment and Olsten will take responsibility for all the bookkeeping, record-keeping, tax, benefits and check-preparation.

While your company is saving time money and trouble by using an Olsten temporary, the temporary is enjoying Olsten benefit programs including bonuses, paid holidays, group insurance, and free gifts, along with "same week" pay day.

One phone call to Olsten of Midland at 683-5677 is all it takes to get the support you require. Olsten can supply you with help in over 100 different skill categories. Office services, office automation, accounting, light industrial, marketing, and technical tasks can all be handled by Olsten Temporaries. After six weeks if you decide to hire an Olsten Temporary on a permanent basis there is no additional release charge.

Hairstyles for fall bring back memories of '50s, '60s

CNS Graphic

CHICAGO (AP) — As fashion moves into a season where clothes will be as streamlined and body-conscious as lifestyles, women will be turning to hairstyles that top these looks with softness and frankly feminine accents.

Color, shine and texture are the all-important attributes that will bring hairstyles into the fall 1985 fashion scene with ease, according to the Helene Curtis Hairstylists Advisory Board.

Board member Victor Figueroa of New York City forecasts that "a new fascination with '60s fashion will call for a return to the longer, rounded hairstyles popular in the Beatles' era. But it's a softer look than those of 20 years ago, and takes advantage of the new styling tools designed to make hairstyling easier."

He points out that a perm is a "must have" for creating the look of back-combed hair reminiscent of "the bubble," one of the strongest looks for fall. "Today's perms give maximum volume without frizzy curl — exactly what's needed for the smoother, but still textured, styles," he points out.

Rocco Altobelli of Minneapolis-St. Paul sees longer hair for fall. "The trend is turning away from the short spikiness of the past several seasons," he says. "Smoother, close-to-the-head styles look fresher and have the right proportion to complement the '60s-inspired fashions."

Altobelli also sees increased use of new gels, glazes and styling sprays to create the new looks. "Gels and glazes give form to the hair, 'memorizing' the style line that's molded into wet hair and retaining the sleek texture of natural, healthy hair when dry," he explains.

Just how long fall hairstyles will go depends on the individual's preference and hair type, with lengths past the shoulders as much in vogue as ear-length bobs.

"Versatility is the key," says Mario Tricoci of Oak Brook, Ill. "Whether the style is a shaggy version of the Beatles' boyish cut or a long, sleek bob, it should be suited to the individual who wears it. A woman's hairstyle should take her through busy days and glamorous evenings, complementing everything she wears.

"Bangs will be a very important element in fall hairstyles because they soften the face shape and add interest to the hairstyle," notes Tricoci. "Bangs might be cut very short and wispy or in a shaggy combination of long and short lengths, depending on personal preference. They'll be worn on the face for a pixie look or slicked back with mousse or gel for sophistication."

Color, often in streaks or accenting spikes, will give a lightness to the overall haircut. Geri Mataya of Pittsburgh sees "bright, fun colors added to complement a particular outfit, or overall highlighting to soften a geometric cut."

The key to finding the right hairstyle this fall, board members agree, is to talk to your hairstylist. Just as you plan your fall wardrobe and buy new clothes that will work with what's already in your closet, you should discuss the hairstyling options available for your hair length and texture.

Decide how much time you want to spend on your hair at home each day, they suggest. Then, together with your stylist, work out a look that will suit your needs and enhance your overall fashion image.

Hairstylist prefers clientele of children only

Copley News Service

Getting your child's hair cut can be a hair-raising experience. Or not.

"So much depends on the attitude of the parent bringing the child here for a hair style," said Gail Horan, manager of "Heaven to Seven" hair salon in San Diego.

Notice that Horan uses the word "style," not "cut."

"That's important," Horan said. "Children associate the word 'cut' with pain, an 'ouch.' We call it a style, not so much so that we can charge a higher price. It's strictly child psychology."

Horan, 30, traded in her adult clientele for her current children-only assignment eight years ago.

"Children are a lot more relaxed and they're more fun," she said. "Rather than hearing sad tales about divorce and boyfriend problems, I hear tales all day about trips to Disneyland, ballet lessons and vacations."

That and the fact that children don't sit and simmer while not liking what's being done to their hair.

"A child will be open and honest about what he wants his hair to look like, and when you're doing something wrong, you hear about it immediately. Not so with adults. Adults tend to pout and never come back. Children get things done the way they want them done and walk away contented and happy."

But whether that early haircutting experience is a happy one or a sad one depends a lot on the adult accompanying the child.

Horan: "It's not smart to bring a child in for a hairstyle after a doctor's appointment that involves a shot. But so many mothers do. I guess they try to get several appointments done in one car trip. But a child who isn't feeling well — and most don't after getting a shot — isn't going to enjoy the experience at the salon. In fact, I can almost guarantee that it will be difficult for everyone involved — the mother, the child and the hairstylist."

DEAR ABBY

Suicide attempts recur if help not found

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: You frequently deal with many subjects that are socially taboo. May I bring to your attention one that is rarely mentioned: attempted suicide. For every successful suicide there are three to five failed attempts. Studies reveal that a person who makes one attempt is 10 times more likely than the average person to end up as a suicide statistic.

Adolescents and young adults are attempting suicide in alarming numbers. An attempt to destroy oneself is a desperate cry for help, an angry attempt to punish someone, or an effort to deal with feelings of intense pain, hopelessness, frustration and depression.

Some teen-agers who try to kill themselves have fantasies of being "reborn," denying the finality of death. Many expect to be rescued. But tragically, when they are rescued after a long delay, they suffer from oxygen deprivation and/or the toxic effects of an overdose, leaving the would-be suicide with irreversible brain, heart, kidney or liver damage.

Unfortunately, many first attempts are not taken seriously, and the underlying problem surfaces again to end with tragic consequences for victims and survivors alike.

Abby, please print this and sign me ... A CONCERNED PROFESSIONAL

DEAR CONCERNED: If attempted suicide is a part of an ongoing dialogue, then a successful suicide is a final message to which there can be no reply.

Parents, teachers and friends of teen-agers should be alert to the cry for help in any attempt at suicide, and do everything possible to respond to that message.

Trained counselors are as close as your telephone. Ask the operator for the nearest suicide hotline. Somebody will listen because somebody cares.

DEAR ABBY: Recently my husband and I had dinner at a very nice restaurant. When we gave the waitress the order for our appetizers, she said, "You got it, you guys!" After the dinner order was given, she said the same thing. After we ordered coffee, she said again, "You got it, you guys!" This went on through the whole dinner.

We are not oldsters, but we would have appreciated more respect than "you guys."

She was a good waitress. We didn't want to report her to the manager. What would you have done? — CUSTOMERS, NOT "GUYS"

DEAR CUSTOMERS: A friendly, tactful word of caution to the waitress would have been an act of kindness. The next customers she "you guys" may report her to the manager, costing her her job.

I probably wouldn't have tipped her off (pun unintentional) until I read this.

DEAR ABBY: There is a chap in our office who is 35 years old, lives at home and seems perfectly happy. His mother packs his lunch every day, does his laundry and cuts his hair. He says he never invites a young lady out until he introduces her to his "Mum."

Abby, he likes the way he lives, but is it healthy for a grown man to depend on his mother so much? — OFFICE CHUMS IN VICTORIA, B.C.

DEAR CHUMS: If he likes the way he lives, it's healthy, and will probably continue to be until he loses his mother, or she loses him.

The Space Shuttle Discovery lifts off from Pad 39-A with a crew of five aboard after two previous launch attempts were scrubbed by the weather and a computer problem.

Shuttle threads its way through stormy weather

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Shuttle Discovery found a hole in the clouds and rocketed away from Earth minutes before a rainstorm today to start a daring salvage mission in which space-walking astronauts will try to "hot-wire" a derelict satellite.

The weather conditions were the worst ever for a shuttle launch.

The twice-delayed shuttle mission began spectacularly as the 100-ton space plane thundered off its launch pad at 6:58 a.m. EDT and dashed high over the Atlantic Ocean, spewing a 700-foot-long tail of flame and lighting up the dawn sky.

"That's a black cloud," Discovery's commander, Joe Engle, radioed as the shuttle darted through a large cloud on its way to orbit.

Discovery got off just in time for a flight in which the five-man crew is to deploy three communications satellites and try to repair a fourth. Five minutes after liftoff, the hole in the clouds closed and heavy rain deluged the launch pad.

A tropical disturbance dumped rain on the space center throughout the early morning. The astronauts wore rain slickers as they left their crew quarters for the 8-mile ride to the launch pad.

"There were some holes in the system, some very large ones, in fact, 50 to 100 miles in diameter," said launch director Bob Sieck. "So we bet on the come that we would be able to thread the proverbial needle and get through a break in the weather during the launch window available to us."

Asked if the launch team had violated launch regulations that call for a 15,000 foot ceiling and no rain or lightning over the shuttle flight path, Sieck replied, "If you want to use the term push the limit, yes, but exceed the limit or violate launch criteria, no. It was obviously a marginal situation, but an acceptable one,"

He said the ceiling was actually 13,000 feet, but that the clouds at the lower level were thin and the astronauts could have clearly seen a runway here if they had to make an emergency return shortly after liftoff.

The launch had been set for 6:55 a.m., but when forecasters predicted a hole would be over the launch pad shortly after 7 a.m., the launch time was changed to 7:05 a.m.

The clock was counted down to nine minutes and was held there. The hole materialized early, the count resumed, and Discovery blasted into space, a pillar of fire against the dark sky.

Nine minutes later, Mission Control Center in Houston reported Discovery was in a secure orbit more than 200 miles high, racing at more than 17,000 mph.

A thunderstorm wiped out the first launch attempt Saturday and a failed spacecraft computer forced a second postponement on Sunday.

Samantha 'really nice person,' friends say

MANCHESTER, Maine (AP) — Samantha Smith, the 13-year-old advocate of world peace and aspiring TV actress who died in a plane crash, was a friendly, normal youngster who kept her celebrity in perspective, say schoolmates and friends.

"She was such a sweetheart. You couldn't ask for a nicer person," Sandra Small-Hughes, who had been Samantha's science teacher, said Monday. Other students "really either liked her or were in awe of her."

"She was a really nice person — a great friend," said Elizabeth Warren of Readfield, who shared a locker with Samantha at Maranacook Community School. "She didn't act like she was different from us, she acted the same as everybody else did."

But Samantha was different enough to ponder superpower relations at the age of 10 and write to then-Soviet leader Yuri Andropov about world peace. By 13, she had visited the Soviet Union, earned an international reputation as an ambassador for peace and embarked upon a career as a TV actress.

In her letter, written in the fall of 1982, Samantha asked Andropov, "Why do you want to conquer the whole world, or at least our country?"

Excerpts from the letter appeared in the official Soviet media, and Andropov wrote back in April 1983, saying his country wanted "nothing of the kind."

The Soviet news agency Tass reported Samantha's death Monday, saying, "She saw for herself the sincere desire of the Soviet people to live in peace and to prevent nuclear war."

"Samantha will remain in our hearts forever, in the hearts of millions of boys and girls who dream that the sun will shine forever above their heads," said the Communist Youth League paper Komsomolskaya Pravda.

It published a black-bordered article about Samantha with a photograph of her ringing a bell aboard a Black Sea tourboat, and a reproduction of the cover of her book, "Journey to the Soviet Union."

Samantha had been in London filming an ABC-TV action-adventure show, "Lime Street," and was returning home with her father when their Bar Harbor Airlines plane crashed and exploded Sunday night as it approached the Auburn-Lewiston Municipal Airport. All eight people on board were killed.

In the show, Samantha played the daughter of an insurance investigator, played by Robert Wagner. Wagner issued a statement from London saying that "She touched the world, and she touched us, too. We are quite simply devastated."

ABC-TV spokeswoman Sheri Nicklaus said today that the cast and crew of "Lime Street" planned a memorial service for Samantha in Gstaad, Switzerland on Tuesday. She said they were in Switzerland filming an episode of the show in which Samantha was not scheduled to appear.

"She was such a normal kid in light of all that fame and fortune," said her school adviser, William Preble. "But when she heard kids stereotyping Soviets, she'd say she met really nice people."

Preble said Samantha had "guts," taking on assignments like going to New York to speak before a large group of people.

In Augusta, a few miles from the Smiths' home in Manchester, Gov. Joseph E. Brennan said in a statement that Samantha was "an inspiration not only to the young, like herself, but to all of us.

"All of America has lost a very special little girl with the tragic death of Samantha Smith."

Samantha's mother, Jean, had been waiting at the Augusta airport Sunday night for the flight that never arrived. Monday, she recalled that her daughter had other ambitions besides her impending career as an actress.

Samantha dreamed of being a veterinarian, a journalist or a photographer, Mrs. Smith said. "I think she had lots of dreams; she was still interested in the people of the world living in peace."

Reagan 'just fine' as he readies for speech

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan, saying he feels "just fine" as he nears the end of his recuperation from cancer surgery, will kick off a busy post-vacation schedule with a Labor Day speech celebrating the pioneer spirit the president has so often invoked.

The White House announced Monday that on his return trip to Washington from his ranch near here, Reagan will speak at the 13th annual Santa-Cali-Gon Day celebration in Independence, Mo.

The event is named for the Santa Fe, California and Oregon trails, the three principal routes west for 19th century pioneers.

"Most of the westward movement of the 19th century had Independence as its starting point," White House spokesman Larry Speakes said. "And the celebration symbolizes the city's pride in its role in establishing the freedom and independence offered by the great American frontier."

Speakes said Reagan was spending his vacation time doing routine paperwork, clearing brush and riding horseback. He said the president has had no meetings at the ranch on the pending issue of restricting shoe imports, but will make a decision this week, possibly as early as Wednesday.

The president is likely to reject both quotas and increases in tariffs, according to administration sources speaking only on condition of anonymity.

The Independence speech will be the first since Reagan reached what doctors have said should be the final stage of his recovery from the July 13 cancer operation in which surgeons removed two feet of his colon.

Dr. Steven Rosenberg, chief of surgery at the National Cancer Institute, said two days after the operation that a normal recovery period would be six to eight weeks, after which the president "should return to the exact state he was in prior to this surgery."

In a telephone interview from his ranch with WHRC Radio of Miami on Saturday, six weeks to the day since the operation, Reagan said, "I feel just fine. I really do."

The Labor Day speech will be a prelude to a full schedule of speech making around the country which Reagan plans to undertake on behalf of tax overhaul plan.

The White House released transcripts of the interviews Monday, along with one in which the president told WSB Radio in Atlanta that the white minority rulers of South Africa "have eliminated the segregation that we once had in our own country — the type of thing where hotels and restaurants and places of entertainment, and so forth, were segregated — that has all been eliminated."

Speakes, asked whether the president believed that segregation had been eliminated in South Africa, said, "Not totally, no."

"I think the president is talking about in major cities."

Poverty rate drops to 14.4 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's poverty rate dropped to 14.4 percent in 1984, down eight-tenths of a percentage point from a year earlier, with the number of Americans below the poverty level declining by 1.8 million, the Census Bureau reported today.

At the same time, real median family income rose 3.3 percent to $26,430, the second increase in two years.

The drop in the poverty rate, from 15.2 percent in 1983, marked the first time it had fallen since 1976. The poverty threshold for a family of four last year was $10,609.

Some decline had been widely anticipated both in and out of government, due to the improving economy. Even Robert Greenstein of the private Center for Budget and Policy Priorities, a group often critical of the Reagan administration, had predicted a decline in poverty.

Other findings of the new study included:

— The poverty rate for whites dropped from 12.2 percent in 1983 to 11.5 percent in 1984, and the rate for blacks fell from 35.7 percent to 33.8 percent.

— The poverty rate among children under 18 declined from 22.2 percent in 1983 to 21.3 percent in 1984. The rate among people aged 65 and over dropped 1.8 percentage points to 12.4 percent.

— Both the number of people below the poverty level and the poverty rate declined in the South and the West, while there were no significant changes in the Northeast and Midwest.

In 1983, poverty had edged up 0.2 percentage points to the 15.2 rate, a disappointment to administration officials who had hoped for a decline.

While critics denounced the fact that poverty went up in 1983 — contending it was a result of cuts in social programs — White House officials considered the small increase a somewhat positive step.

In the 1980-82 period, poverty levels increased 1 percent or more annually.

The poverty rate last declined between 1977 and 1978, when it edged down from 11.6 percent to 11.4 percent.

A decline in poverty rates this year sounds promising, Greenstein said, but, he cautioned, the drop is largely a function of the economy, with the poverty rate declining as unemployment dropped in the last year.

Now, he warned, the economy has stalled, so this drop may be a one-step event, followed by a plateau without improvement in coming years.

NATION IN BRIEF

Shoe manufacturers wait for decision on imports

WASHINGTON (AP) — A decision by President Reagan against imposing curbs on foreign shoe imports would be a victory for U.S. consumers, say those opposing trade restraints.

But U.S. shoe manufacturers and congressional backers of protectionst legislation claim that such an announcement — expected later this week from the White House — could backfire on the administration and trigger strong measures by Congress to protect a variety of U.S.-made products.

Administration officials here and in Santa Barbara, Calif., where the president is vacationing, said Reagan is likely to reject proposals for either a quota on foreign shoes or an increase in the current 8.8 percent tariff.

Such a move would reject a decison by the U.S. International Trade Commission to impose a five-year system of increasing quotas on shoe imports to protect the battered U.S. shoe industry. It also would reject recommendations by some advisers for higher tariffs instead of quotas.

Pentagon defies panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — Eight months after it won a bidding war, a Washington state firm has finally received an Air Force contract because of a decision by Pentagon leaders to defy a House committee.

The decision to award an initial $3.8 million contract for a new bomb-loading forklift to Pacific Car and Foundry Inc. was finalized last week. The Air Force acted at the direction of Deputy Defense Secretary William H. Taft IV by using other funds within its budget, effectively bypassing a "hold" placed on the transfer of funds from another account imposed by the House Armed Services Committee.

The move prompted three Maryland lawmakers last Friday to protest the "extraordinary action" to Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger and to demand a probe by the General Accounting Office. But Pentagon officials maintained they did nothing wrong and that the Marylanders simply were trying to protect a local firm that lost out in the bidding.

"To have done otherwise would have sent all the wrong signals to industry," said one high-level Pentagon official who spoke only on condition of anonymity. "Congress told us to stage a competition, and you can't just ignore the results."

Overtime bill considered

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House is considering supporting legislation to override a Supreme Court decision on overtime wages that could cost cities and counties billions of dollars annually, local officials say.

The White House on Monday gave 150 representatives from cities and counties nationwide a hearing on the matter, and promised a decision next month on the question of support.

At issue is a high court ruling saying municipalities can no longer give employees compensatory time off instead of paying overtime, as has been the practice in many places.

"The evidence gathered by state and local officials about the damage to taxpayers and to local services has been impressive," Mitchell E. Daniels Jr., deputy assistant to the president and director of the office of intergovernment affairs, said following the meeting.

Daniels said the Domestic Policy Council of Cabinet officers would meet next week "and perhaps make a recommendation to the president."

Miller: Abolish Post Office

WASHINGTON (AP) — James C. Miller III, President Reagan's nominee to succeed David Stockman as U.S. budget director, says the Postal Service's monopoly on first-class mail should be abolished and private enterprise allowed to deliver letters "just as it did in the Old West."

"Few seem willing to consider the one action likely to have a real effect on the efficiency of the U.S. postal system: let others compete in the delivery of first-class mail," Miller wrote in an article in the current issue of the Cato Journal.
