Peaceful Evacuation Of Chrysler Sit-Downers Is Sought

Mutual Pledge Of Opponents To Be Urged

Basis For Negotiations Said To Include Written Promise Of Corporation Board Head For Plant Suspension

Writs Not Served

Barricaded Squatters Express No Apprehension That Guard Detachment Be Pressed Into Immediate Service

(By The Associated Press)

DETROIT, March 19. — Intensive efforts toward peaceful evacuation of 6,000 Chrysler sit-down strikers whose arrest was ordered today, were in progress tonight, centering about the red-headed mediator of Michigan's automotive labor disputes, Governor Frank Murphy.

One report, without confirmation in official circles, was that the basis for negotiations was this:

Evacuation of eight Chrysler automobile plants here tomorrow in return for a written pledge from Walter P. Chrysler, chairman of the corporation's board, that no attempt would be made to operate them pending negotiations; that no dies or machinery would be removed, and that Chrysler executives conferring with union leaders would get down to "bed-rock" negotiating on the union's demand for exclusive bargaining rights for 67,000 employes.

Have Rejected Proposals

Throughout more than two weeks of conferences, representatives of the Chrysler Corp., have flatly rejected all proposals demanding exclusive bargaining recognition.

James F. Dewey, United States department of labor conciliator who aided Governor Murphy in the long conference that ended the General Motors strikes a month ago, again headed for Detroit tonight.

K. T. Keller, Chrysler president, and corporation attorneys conferred late today with Circuit Judge Allan Campbell, whose injunction against the sit-down strikers, issued last Monday, was ineffective in clearing the plants.

Sit-Downers Unconcerned

Defiant union members, solidifying positions behind barricaded factory gates, expressed little concern at the possibility that a sheriff's force of 120 deputies might try to serve writs for their arrest.

Sheriff Thomas C. Wilcox conferred with the governor, a few hours after Circuit Judge Campbell ordered the arrests, but both said that no request for National Guard assistance in serving the writs had been made. The sheriff's office in-

Sandstorm Strikes Panhandle Friday

Borne by one of the strongest winds experienced here in many months, sand from West Texas and New Mexico dealt misery to this area's population Friday.

Velocity reached a maximum of 48 miles an hour, said Municipal airport.

Visibility was reduced to a near-minimum by the driven sand, averaging one-eighth mile and, at times, approaching zero.

Wind and sand interrupted outdoor activities, putting to temporary end farming and construction, and causing postponement of the county interscholastic league meet here.

Temperature ranged from a high of 64 degrees in the early afternoon to a low of 44, recorded early Friday morning. The reading at 11 o'clock at night was 45 degrees, said main line station of West Texas Gas company.

WEDDING ANNOUNCED

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., March 19. (AP)—Dr. and Mrs. William Turner Wootton of Hot Springs announced tonight their daughter, Mrs. Martha Wootton Collings, would be married here Monday to Col. Lawrence Westbrook, Washington, chairman of the national WPA advisory board.

Harry L. Hopkins, national WPA administrator, will act as best man.

Bobbitt Outlines Highway Policies

County Officials Of West Texas Hear Highway Chief

TEXAS Highway commission policies were outlined by its new chairman, Robert Lee Bobbitt, in an address to 325 West Texas County Judges and Commissioners association members and others in a Hilton hotel banquet last night.

The commission, he declared, will be operated without a deficit, will build roads where the most people can be served, will build those roads as rapidly as possible, and will work with all the citizens of the state in a spirit of friendliness and cooperation.

Was Banquet Speaker

The former attorney general was the principal speaker at the banquet, where Alvin R. Allison, Levelland, presided as toastmaster.

Saturday program:
County judges and commissioners will assemble in the ballroom of Hilton hotel at 9 o'clock this morning for their closing program.
At 9:50 o'clock, Attorney-General William McCraw, chief speaker, will make an address.
Other speakers will be Mrs. Viola Perkins, assistant relief director, and former Judge Bob Ogden of Dallas county.

West Texas County Judges and Commissioners association, in the largest convention since its organization here in October, 1929, will choose its next semi-annual host city from among Abilene, San Angelo, and Mineral Wells this morning and will adjourn at noon.

Hilton hotel ballroom is convention headquarters.

Three hundred eighty-four persons had registered last night, and many others were attending.

Dance Follows Banquet

Concluding the opening day's program was a dance in Lubbock hotel ballroom.

In emphasizing the highway commission would operate without a deficit, Bobbitt referred to a sixteen million dollar deficit of the general fund, caused, he said, "by government not administered as it should have been."

Following his address, he explained he was referring "to the whole works—the citizens who are primarily responsible, and those who represent them in the administration of the affairs of the government."

The present policy of the highway commission, he said, arose when the department "was recovering from the depths of graft,

Dallas Woman Offers Reward For Mother-In-Law's Slayer

DALLAS, March 19. (AP)—Mrs. Lillian Knox today offered a $500 reward for the arrest of the slayer of her wealthy, 91-year-old mother-in-law, Mrs. Mary Knox.

Announcement of the reward was made during the first interview the daughter-in-law has given since she surrendered last Sunday on forgery warrants in connection with the alleged forging of her mother-in-law's name to checks totaling to more than $1,000.

County League Contests Will Be Held Today

Literary Events In Grammar And Grade School Divisions Of County To Be Conducted; Athletics Postponed

Honors in literary events in the grammar and rural school division of the Interscholastic league in Lubbock county will be sought in contests beginning at 9 o'clock this mornning at Junior High school.

Although the number will not reach near the total of approximately 800 who came here for athletic events scheduled Friday, several hundred will compete today, said A. L. Faubion, New Deal superintendent and director-general of the county meeting.

Athletic Events Postponed

A raging sandstorm prompted coaches to postpone all athletic events except volley ball until Saturday, March 27. The events were to be held Friday at the Tech field.

The county meet began Thursday night. Rural and grammar school competition, except for the athletic events, will end today, and Class A and B school contests will be held here Friday and Saturday of next week. Total attendance of contestants and visitors at all county contests is expected to be between 1,500 and 2,000.

Today's events are:

Amelia Plans Her Second Hop Today

HONOLULU, March 19. (AP) — Continuing her daring flight around the world, Amelia Earhart said she probably would take off about 1 a. m. tomorrow (5:30 a. m. central standard time) for tiny Howland island, 1,532 miles southwest in the broad Pacific, never before covered by an airplane.

Miss Earhart decided to begin her hop then in order to assure a daylight landing at the unlighted island.

With her will go as navigator Captain Harry Manning and F. J. Noonan, who with Paul Mantz accompanied her here yesterday on the 2410-mile flight from Oakland, Calif.

Engineers found today what they said was a potential disaster threat lurking in Miss Earhart's plane.

Wilbur Thomas, motor expert, said an examination disclosed the propeller bearings were almost dry when she sped in to Honolulu yesterday.

He asserted the condition might have forced Miss Earhart down at sea had she taken off yesterday as originally planned.

The expert, who came here especially to check the plane's motors, said improper lubricants at Oakland, starting point of the world flight, caused the dangerous situation.

INJURED MAN DIES

GRAND SALINE, March 19. (AP)—A man, tentatively identified as W. C. Williams, who was struck by a car on the highway west of here last night, died shortly after noon today.

Justices Turn Down Offer To Present Views

Invitation Extended By Chief Opponents To FDR's Plan To Reform Court Are Declined By Court Members

Proposal Favored

University And Law School Men Give Views In Favor Of Plan; Retired Justice Is To Speak On Radio Monday

(By The Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, March 19. — Justices of the Supreme court declined today an invitation to give the senate judiciary committee their opinion of the Roosevelt court reorganization proposal.

Leading members of the opposition group in the senate, eager to obtain testimony from the justices, had extended the informal invitation. They reported with disappointment that the justices prefer to keep aloof from the current controversy.

Might Testify Later

A possibility remained, the senators said, that some members of the court might testify later on the purely procedural aspects of the president's bill, although they thought this prospect a doubtful one.

This disclosure was made at the end of a day, in which the committee went ahead with a list of witnesses from the law schools and universities favoring the bill.

California Urges Passage

Dr. Charles Haines of the University of California at Los Angeles urged passage of the measure "to remove some of the shackles which the justices have forged to obstruct and confine governmental authority," and to end what he said was the "court's present role of censor over the policy and expediency of legislative action."

William D. Lewis, former dean of the Pennsylvania university law school and now connected with the American Law Institute, asserted that "under the court as it is now constituted there are few acts of congress regarded by the majority in congress and by the president as not only constitutional, but vitally necessary to public welfare, which will not be annulled by the decision of a divided court."

At the outset of the senate's session, Senator Robinson of Arkansas,

James Roosevelt Says Court Has Taken Advantages Of Circumstances To Hold It Aloof From People

(By The Associated Press)

ATHENS, Ga., March 19.—James Roosevelt, administrative assistant to the president, his father, charged tonight the federal judiciary "has been able to take advantage of circumstances to set itself aloof and apart from the will of the people."

Defending the chief executive's federal court reorganization plan at a belated Democratic "victory dinner," young Roosevelt added that the judicial branch of the government "has failed in its obligation to remain within its own sphere of action. It thus has failed to cooperate in a democratic form of government."

Draws An Analogy

The speaker drew an analogy between the nation and a watch.

"The watch is running today, but it may stop," he said. "Why? because there are still abroad in foreign lands, uncontrollable, unpredictable forces; because we will have several million unemployed in our own country; because there are signs of the reappearance of false speculative values; because forces are at work which tend to throw

The weather bureau promised spring temperatures for much of the country and spring rains in several sections, including most of the east, California and the Pacific northwest.

Actual Cost Of Living Has Increased About 6 Per Cent In 3 Years, Index Reveals

WASHINGTON, March 19. (AP)—The actual cost of living has increased about six per cent in the past three years according to an index compiled by the labor department.

Dr. Isador Lubin, commissioner of labor statistics, gave the house appropriations committee the figure at hearings on the labor department supply bill. His testimony, revealing that a nation-wide survey of living costs has been completed and will be published soon was made public today.

Lubin said the survey showed that "the worker must have $1.06 now to buy what he did two years ago for $1."

He said that food expenses total 32 per cent of the average budget, clothing 12 per cent, and transportation 9 per cent.

Sorrow Reigns Over Stricken Little Village

Gas Flares From Forest Of Oil Derricks Cast Into Eerie Relief Scene Of Disaster; Building Shell Silent

Homes Saddened

Bright Lights Burn And There Is Much Activity In Funeral Homes Over Area; Relatives Arrange For Services

(By The Associated Press)

NEW LONDON, March 19—Gas flares from the forest of oil derricks surrounding this city of sorrow cast into eerie relief tonight a scene of quiet strangely at contrast with the frenzied activity last night when a thousand men borrowed through wreckage seeking their dead.

Exhaustion from a day and night of feverish labor kept some within their homes. Sorrow at home and sympathy for neighbors held many more.

Shell Lays Silent

The shell of the New London consolidated school building where 425 died yesterday in a disastrous explosion, lay silent, its steel and bricks and shards of tile scattered over a vast area as workers sought to rescue the living and found the dead.

Occasional muffled sobs of anguished parents, most of them shut in their homes with their grief, broke the funeral quiet.

Around the scene of the blast itself, where last night men groaned in anguish and tremendous labor, and machines clanked through the grim task of uncovering bodies, the only activity was an occasional visit by authorities or residents seeking to ascertain the cause of the appalling destruction. Searchers quit work in the debris in mid-afternoon after convincing themselves the wreckage had given up all its human contents.

Funeral Homes Busy

But there was light and activity in funeral homes where the dead were receiving last ministrations. Such lights burned far into the night at Tyler, Longview, Kilgore, Overton, and Henderson — all through the oil belt.

Not so brightly lighted were the hospitals where remarkably few injured were taken for treatment. Doctors said that in many cases that treatment would be unavailing.

Relatives Make Arrangements

Nearly all the work of embalming and identifying bodies was finished, but relatives trudged in and out of mortuaries over a 50-mile area, selecting caskets and making arrangements for final rites.

Most parents had found their living children, some in the hospitals and others lost in the excitement of rescue work.

The rain which pelted down on searchers in their last hours of labor ceased tonight. A half moon shone down on the stunned com-

Mother Dies Of Attack As She Views Girl's Body

KILGORE, March 19. (AP) — Mrs. Alma Stroud, 40, died today of a heart attack as she viewed the body of her 16-year-old daughter, Helen, victim of yesterday's school disaster.

The mother, whose 13-year-old son, J. W., also was injured critically in the explosion, had spent the entire night in visiting temporary morgues before locating the body of her child in Overton.

Father Identifies Son By Half-Soled Shoes

OVERTON, March 19. (AP) — A father stood by a sheet draped figure in the Overton American Legion hall, temporary morgue for the victims of the disaster. Piece by piece, a legionnaire showed the man the boy's clothing, the only means of identification.

He brought out a pair of worn shoes, half soled at home.

"That's my boy," the father mumbled. "I soled the shoes myself."

Even Doctors And Nurses Are Sickened At Sight

DALLAS, March 19. (AP)—Ambulance Driver Speck Estep, haggard and worn, returned home today with stories of horror at the scene of the New London school disaster.

"I found a pair of girl's stepins and a blouse and a skirt in the tangled mess" he related. "And the only evidence that they had been worn was part of an arm which was still in the blouse. Never have I seen anything so sickening as some of the torn-up bodies I handled. Grown people have to die anyway—but they were just kids, damn it!"

Dr. Tom Kelley, who accompanied Estep from the city emergency hospital here, said that scenes in the undertaking establishments and temporary morguaries were such that even doctors, nurses and ambulance drivers became sick. He said there were children with their faces sliced of as if with a huge knife, small bodies with gaping wounds, and mangled bodies which were little more than pulp.

A Scream--And Another Mother Finds Her Child

(By The Associated Press)

OVERTON, March 19. — A shriek, half of anguish, half terror, echoed in the American Legion auditorium. Another mother had identified her child among those who died in the London school explosion.

The improvised scene was described today by a visitor, Mrs. James F. Laughead:

"Mattresses spread row on row bore the mangled, smashed and torn bodies of 116 victims —children and adults.

"Through the big hall shuffled a crowd of men, women and children hoping against hope they would not find a loved one among the corpses stretched on the mattresses.

"Now and then a woman screamed and listeners knew she had come upon her child among the dead.

"In an undertaking place sheets covered 35 or 40 bodies. Along with the frantic parents and relatives who sought their kin were curious onlookers. Some lifted the sheet-shrouds.

"In the great crowds that gathered wherever bodies had been taken screams and wailings were heard."

Every Child Suffered Severe Skull Fracture

By JAMES F. LAUGHEAD
Associated Press Photographer

NEW LONDON, March 19. — Doctors at various hospitals where victims of the London community school blast were taken told me today that almost without exception every child suffered a severe skull fracture. I made a hasty tour of hospitals in nearby towns. Each was a scene of watchful waiting by parents, mothers weeping freely at bedsides of mangled children. Fathers sat in grim silence. Surgeons worked frantically to save some of the children but admitted their efforts in most cases would be in vain. At one hospital an anxious father inquired if a "black haired girl, about 7," had been brought there. There was none of that description.

As he left the room a doctor told me he knew the child was in a nearby morgue, crammed into a small room with some 20 additional children. "I simply cannot tell another parent his child is dead," he said. "He will have to go to the morgue to find out."

In a morgue in Henderson 40 embalmers labored over 140 bodies. I have photographed many saddening scenes, including the bodies of 327 convicts charred in the Ohio penitentiary fire, but none compares to the stamp of horror sealed on the faces of these children battered by the debris of the once proud school building.

Community Is Preparing To Bury Victims

University Of Texas Man Says Force Of Blast Might Have Been Generated In Walls Of School Building

No Mass Funerals

Individual Services Will Be Held Today, Sunday; Parents Still Wandering From Morgue To Morgue

(By The Associated Press)

NEW LONDON, March 19.—An expert opinion that the blast which snuffed out the lives of some 425 school pupils and teachers near here yesterday may have been generated in the very walls surrounding their classrooms spurred investigation of the disaster tonight as the community prepared to bury most of its next generation.

Dr. E. P. Schoch, University of Texas chemistry professor who is rated as an expert on gas explosions, said he had a "positive opinion" as to the cause of the blast.

From Basement Or Walls

"It (the explosion) came from either the basement or the hollow tile walls which are excellent gas chambers," he told newsmen.

"I am reasonably certain in which one of these sections it occurred and have very little evidence to support an explosion in the other."

Later he inspected the tangled wreckage from which a thousand men hauled their dead last night, and asserted he found many of the gas radiators without proper flues.

One Satisfactory Vent

Of six radiators left intact after the explosion, Dr. Schoch said he found only one with a satisfatory vent.

"It's simple," he said. "The walls were filled with gas that had no other exit. Then there was a spark, and the walls burst.

"The condition of the bodies of those children bears that out. They were blown (he emphasized the word) to death—not burned to death.

Same Throughout Structure

Capt. Z. E. Coombes of the National Guard who accompanied the chemist on his inspection trip, said he had talked with the architects and contractors of the building and added that they reported the installation of radiators was the same throughout the structure.

There were 72 radiators, each individually gas fired, in the building, 36 on each floor.

Dr. Schoch said that the natural gas produced here in quantities simply burns when ignited, but when mixed with air, even in a ratio of one part of gas to 10 parts of air, causes a powerful explosion.

"Wet" Gas Was Used

Dr. Schoch explained that "wet" gas, such as was used in the radiators at the school, must be mixed with air if its heating power is to be kept constant.

He said he learned from school officials that prior to the disaster the institution switched from "dry" to "wet" gas.

"However that is no cause for criticism," the scientist added.

All authorities abandoned a theory that dynamite might have caused the tragedy. Lieut. Col. C. E. Parker, commanding the National Guard unit, said 14 sticks of dynamite found in an undamaged portion of the building had been placed there in storage during dynamiting of rocks on a football field.

A few hours before Dr. Schoch, sent here by Gov. James V. Allred to conduct one of three official investigations, made his inspection, the last of an army of rescue workers left the ruins of the school

DEATH in the afternoon — one minute the quiet that prevades a school house just before the bell rings to release young things for the open air—a moment later a blast, flying debris, dead and dying children. Life, then death, in a split second.

The horror of the New London tragedy is one that has affected the entire nation, casually through excellent radio and newspaper reports, actually because the hundreds of homes that were visited by sorrow are represented by kin and acquaintances in possibly every state in the United States.

Even Friday, when a real old-fashioned sandstorm rent havoc with smooth coiffures and set gardeners back in their careful toil in the soil; when sufferers with sinus endured fresh agonies and housekeepers were troubled at the tiny flying particles, naturally enough we heard small complaint because everyone was thinking and talking of the fate that so suddenly cast gloom over the little East Texas hamlet.

A long time ago a kind man said, "A little child shall lead them." Perhaps before, certainly since then, where little children are concerned the most hard-headed men and vainest women have been softened. It is as if invisible bands of steel had bound towns together as individuals and agencies are offering their time and money to help in a cause where innocent little children were blotted out of existence much as if victims of war explosions.

ON RECKLESS DRIVING

AND speaking of little children, we'd like to offer the suggestion that they be educated in the national safety campaign, which is being endorsed by the American Legion. Many adult automobile drivers are complaining that Lubbock children who are scarcely able to see over the steering wheel are endangering the lives of other drivers and pedestrians through their recklessness.

It isn't that the youngsters don't care, because if they should hit someone they would be terribly sorry but being sorry won't bring life back into a crushed body nor will it mend broken legs and arms. Parents should stress upon the minds of their children the danger, as well as the delight, there is in driving. If they realized that when they speed down congested streets and through traffic lights they are just as much potential killers as if they carried guns, the boys and girls would develop a consciousness in their driving.

ON MAKING RUGS

FOR MAKING rag rugs from discarded hose, assemble the hose and sort them according to colors. Although light hose may be dyed they will often give the desired light note to the rug if they are left as they are. Cut off the feet and then, beginning at the top, cut around the hose in a strip that is an inch wide. Long strips are much easier to handle than shorter ones sewed together.

Gifts For Orphan Packed At Social

An Easter box for an "adopted" daughter in a Methodist orphanage at Waco was packed by members of the First Methodist Sorosis class at a monthly party Thursday night in the church parlors.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Hale of Plains were shoppers here yesterday.

Miss Myrtle Porter Is Honored At Dinner And Miscellaneous Shower

Three Friends Are Hostesses

Wedding To G. P. Cunningham Is Scheduled For Sunday Morning; Easter Is Theme For Dinner Motif

Miss Myrtle Porter who is to be married at 8:30 o'clock Sunday morning to G. P. Cunningham of El Paso was complimented at a dinner and miscellaneous shower in the private dining room at Hotel Lubbock by Mrs. W. O. Harbison and Misses Myrtle Ewell and Erma Dene Hefner Friday night.

A horseshoe shaped table was arranged for the dinner. The curve was centered with a large Easter rabbit and eggs. Arrangements of Easter hens and chickens centered the ends of the table. Colored eggs were place cards.

After dinner the hostesses announced a hunt, explaining that all findings should be turned over to the person whose name was written on them. They all were labeled "Myrtle Porter."

Guests were Misses Jynatha Harbison, Mary Lois Thompson, Marguerite Whipp, Naomi Owens, Florence Hackel, Halcyon Campbell and Porter and Mesdames C. L. Hale, H. B. Earthman, Brooke P. Stephens, Sam Rosenthal, Fred Hackel, Wright Kerr, R. W. Badger, Ruby Stewart, Bonnie Croxton, Sherrill Boyd and C. M. Sparkman and Quinton Bellomy of Littlefield.

Organization of Entre Se (Among Us) club was perfected Thursday afternoon in the home of Mrs. W. K. Cooper, 1211 Fourteenth street. Mrs. James Mickie made high score and Mrs. Robert Cooper second high in games of bridge which followed the business period.

Mrs. Mickie was elected president and Mrs. Charles Spencer was elected secretary-treasurer of the club, which will meet on every other Thursday.

Miss Mary Margaret Mackay was a special guest. Other members attending were Mesdames Guy L. Wheatley, Ben L. Jenkins, and Hugh Newton.

Miscellaneous Club Meets With Husbands For Bridge

A bridge party was given for members of the Miscellaneous club, their husbands and two other couples, Messrs and Mesdames R. W. Flanagan and W. K. Johnston, Thursday night in the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Cagle, 2316 Tenth street. The Easter motif was featured in all appointments.

Members who attended with their husbands were Mesdames J. W. Gray, Jess West, Jim Cawthron, Homer Moore, Mrs. D. G. Ridge also attended.

Progress Is Shown On Paving Project

About half of excavations on the street paving project on Fifteenth street have been completed, district Works Progress administration officials said Friday.

Curbs and gutter already have been built on the street from Avenue Q to College avenue.

The project also includes paving of Avenue X from Fifteenth street to Broadway and construction of curbs and gutter on that avenue will start soon, officials indicated.

The project is sponsored by the city and at present 65 government laborers are employed on the project.

Operation of the federal agency's project on highway 24 from Lubbock west to the Cochran county line also is progressing rapidly.

Sponsored by the state highway department, the project includes laying of a caliche base on more than 10 miles of the highway. Laborers already have completed nearly five miles. The project is complete to within half a mile of the Carlisle school.

With eleven trucks, laborers moved 785 cubic yards of caliche Wednesday. Thursday a dozen trucks handled 817 cubic yards, according to figures from the district office.

BRAZEN AX THIEVES

WINCHESTER, England (AP)—Thieves with a flare for art, in quantity form, have made off with 21 bronze-age palstaves (axe-head) from a wall case on the first floor of the Winchester City museum. It's another mystery. There's no sign that the case has been tampered with.

Did You Think Friday's Wind Was Bad

Well, Just Listen To Old-Timers Talk And You'll Change Your Mind; Some "Tall Tales" About Early Days Spun

"Now this wind it isn't much of a wind—not like the kind we used to have in this country when I first came here 50 years ago," said George C. (Tildy) Wolffarth, former county and district clerk who was here when Lubbock county was organized in March, 1891. He settled himself in an easy chair in his office in the Myrick building, rested his feet on the window sill and watched a traffic light swing to and fro.

"Take that light down there," he said pointing to the swaying signal. "If it was swinging straight out, instead of up and down, it would be too windy to go out. Those were the kind of winds we had when I was a youngster here.

Too Windy To Work?

"We had an old fellow and his two sons, who were working around their place, one day like this when a stranger came along. 'Too windy isn't it, to work out?' he said.

"'Nope' said the old fellow as he shifted his chew of tobacco. 'Stranger, see that post out there. See that log chain hanging on it. Well—when that chain sticks straight out, then it's too windy for me and my boys to work.'"

"Remember—the time Bert McWhorter found that meteor?" broke in Charlie Pierce. "Well, they were living out on a farm and he found a big one that he later sold for $1,000. Well, he kept it about his place and they used it as a sort of wash stand, when they had to do the family wash.

"Well, one day, Mrs. McWhorter was washing and put a nice, new dish pan on top of the rock. A sudden-like wind came and sent the pan up into the air. Bert chased it and chased it; when he came back he had run it so far the pan was about the size of a plate. Rolling along so much had worn it down."

Mr. Wolffarth recalled when he was president of the Citizens National bank, located in a frame building where the present bank now stands. On windy days when the gales were going good, the frame building would contract and expand, like a tired horse.

One day, during a wind storm, the cashier decided to go home. All he had to do was to step out of the back door and head straight across vacant lots for home. He went out, found half of the shingles in town swirling over his head, so he came back.

"Well, we were all there, including a Scotchman from down near Seminole," continued the ex-banker. "There were four of us—we heard a loud noise. The other three men made a dive for the vault. I don't recall if I even got up at first. Then I went to the window and looked out.

Wall Blown Down

"They were building a new bank building for the Lubbock State bank, down on the corner of Main street. There was a big cloud of dust. When it cleared, I saw that the wind had blown down the cement wall."

About that time Charlie Pierce rose to the occasion.

"Do you recall the time Mrs. G. O. Groves decided to wash just before a sandstorm came?" he asked. "Well, she lived out near what is now Grovesville. It was back about 1898 or 1899, I guess.

"She built a fire of cow chips out under the big iron kettle they used to boil water for washing in, in the yard on the farm. By the time the fire had gotten a good start, along came this wind and swept the burning cow chips out from under the kettle, just like that.

"Well, an hour later, the fire had reached Crosbyton. The canyon over there stopped it. That wind had blown the burning chips all over the country east of here and set fire to the grass."

The reporter stumbled for the door and got down on the street to get a breath of fresh air.

House Group Asks Funds For Boundary Commission Work

WASHINGTON, March 19. (AP)—The house appropriations committee asked congress today for $2,535,000 for three international boundary commission projects along the Rio Grande.

It proposed these expenditures:

Rectification project near El Paso, $875,000; flood control work along lower river, $1,250,000, and for completion of a diversion dam in the upper river, $400,000.

The committee declined a request of the state department and L. M. Lawson, American member of the commission, for $1,100,000 to begin a canalization program.

Clerics In Germany Fear Ban To Be Laid On Old Testament

Ardent Nazis Seek To Change Bible; "Jesus No Jew," Say Members Of One Group Who Charge "Bad Translation"

BERLIN, Mar. 19. (AP)—Is the Old Testament the Jonah of the storm-tossed German churches? Can it be thrown overboard?

Militant Protestants insist on "The Bible, the whole Bible, and nothing but the Bible." A Catholic pamphlet distributed to German youths maintains: "We dare not disdain the Holy Scriptures because their authors were Jews."

But an important Protestant clerical group holds that the Old testament could be relegated to the background and emphasis concentrated on certain New Testament books.

Jesus Changed

In conformity with this view, pastors led by Heinz Weidemann, Evangelical Bishop of Bremen, recently published a revised version of the Gospel of St. John. By translating the word Judea literally, as "Jewland," an attempt is even made to indicate Jesus did not belong to the Jewish race. Thus:

"And when He heard this, Jesus departed from Jewland and returned to his home country of Galilee."

Perhaps the sorest spot in the Old Testament is the Book of Esther. It describes a movement in ancient Persia analogous to that of the Nazis today which was frustrated by the beauty and bravery of Esther and the astuteness of the Jewish leader, Mordecai. To realize how offensive this book must appear to an ardent nazi, one need only read it with modern Germany instead of ancient Persia in mind.

Jewish Triumph Told

Haman is described merely as "the enemy of the Jews," who tells King Ahasuerus that "there is a certain people scattered abroad . . . and their laws are diverse from those of every people. . . . Let it be written that they be destroyed."

And the king so ordered, but Mordecai finally turned the tables and instead of being exterminated the Jews "slew of them that hated them seventy and five thousand."

Not only was the anti-Jewish leader hanged on the gallows he had built for the leader of the Jews; even the ten sons of Haman, in conformity with the special request of gentle Queen Esther, were also hanged.

This story of the Jews' triumph in Persia can be bought yet in any German bookstore, but there are churchmen who fear that the Old Testament may join the list of banned books.

NEW GERMAN CHURCH

Even church architecture has changed in Germany as the new Gustav - Adolf Evangelical church building in Berlin indicates.

Protests Made On Proposed Deep Oil Test In Gulf Area

GALVESTON, March 19. (AP)—Delegations from Galveston, Houston, Beaumont and Port Arthur today protested a proposed deep oil test in the Gulf of Mexico. The Humble Oil & Refining Co. planned to drill one mile off shore and about 33 miles east of here.

Measured by special apparatus, the speed of a driver when it touches a golf ball is 70 to 125 miles an hour, according to experiments performed in England.

Five Cities Interested In Appeal In Parking Meters

FORT WORTH, March 19. (AP)—The appeal of W. R. Harper from a district court ruling which denied him an injunction to restrain the city of Wichita Falls from operating parking meters today attracted legal counsel of four cities to the second court of civil appeals.

Attorneys from Houston, Dallas and Fort Worth were present, in addition to T. A. Hicks and Thelbert Martin, city attorneys from Wichita Falls. Supplementary briefs were filed by legal counsel for the other cities, which also are interested in a high court ruling on the legality of cities operating the meters.

CHECK BOOK MISSING

AMHERST, March 19. (Special)—A check book has been missing from the Halsell Cattle company office here and is believed to have been stolen.

The checks, numbered from 870 upwards, are payable to the First National bank of Vinita, Okla. A warning was issued not to cash checks of that number unless throughly investigated.

Coyotes, once almost eradicated in western Oklahoma, are becoming plentiful again despite continued "hunts" waged to destroy them.

Chief Of Police Johnston Says Blast Couldn't Have Been Caused By Seepage

"They won't make me believe that place blew up from gas that seeped in from the field about it," Said H. L. (Bud) Johnston, Lubbock chief of police, in reference to reports scientists had intimated such seepage as cause for Thursday's horrible school blast at New London.

"I know that place so well I can see it now. For 15 months I worked in that rich section of the East Texas oil field—sort of patroling it from Henderson and Overton to Shreveport, La.

Follows Least Resistance

"Gas doesn't go around hunting windows and doors or cracks. It follows a line of least resistance. Gas in the immediate vicinity of the big new school would seep into creeks and depressions that pock mark and cut that hilly, rolling section.

"The school is on higher land than the surrounding section and should not be a gas trap.

"Once when I was in that country, just before I came back here in May of 1934, gas that collected in creek beds and canyons caught fire when a party started a fire, and the persons were burned almost instantly and the whole canyon was blazing.

"Several persons were injured at other times, in similar ways. Property damage was continually noted."

Protected Pipeline

Chief Johnston was employed by Atlas Pipeline company along with numerous other ex-sheriffs and rangers to protect pipeline propetry after pump stations and carrier lines had been dynamited in several places.

"We went all over the field and had to know it," he said. "The field is probably the richest in the world. New London is situated right in the heart of it. Originally, there was only London, a settlement of a few hundred persons. When oil was struck at from 3300 to 3500 feet in the rich sand the Humble established its big camp at New London, a mile away, and a little village of cafes and stores to serve the oil influx sprang up.

"Oil made the little school district formed to embrace the two Londons possibly the most fabulously rich of any rural district in the world. Most of the students were of oil families.

"This thing has hit me between the eyes—no less than if I were still there. Many of my friends live there and I'm afraid to read press editions. I'm afraid of what I'll see."

Bobbitt Gives Order For Aid

Chairman Of State Highway Commission Instructs His Department To Give Every Possible Aid In Disaster

A message to Commissioner John Wood and to all department heads of the state highway department, Austin, authorizing them to furnish "and continue to supply every possible resource and service to the authorities in charge of relief and service at New London and vicinity," was sent from Lubbock late Friday by Robert Lee Bobbitt, chairman and Harry Hines, member of the commission.

Governor James V. Allred was advised at the same time of the message and was sent a copy. The order was issued in order that every department official might be advised of the emergency and that they might render prompt service.

States' Greatest Tragedy

"Realizing that this is one of the greatest tragedies in the history of the nation, the state highway commission is confident that the good citizens of Texas will want their department to cooperate to the limit, and in every possibl manner to assist the people of the district," Chairman Bobbitt said in commenting on the messages.

Two members of the body were here. Gibb Gilchrist, state highway engineer, had gone to Morton during the early aftern on, before the messages were sent, Mr. Hines explained. Otherwise, he would have signed the orders.

Message Is Reported

The message to department heads and to Mr. Wood, the only member of the commission now in Austin, reads:

"You are hereby authorized and instructed to furnish and continue to supply every possible resource and service to the authorities in charge of relief and service at New London and vicinity, as the result of the great tragedy there on yesterday. Let every step and expenditure be in accordance with law, but do not delay nor hesitate one moment on account of technical rules or by reason of so-called lack of authority. Act promptly and definitely and in case of doubt as to any request made of any of you, telephone Chairman Bobbitt, Hotel Lubbock here immediately."

The message to the governor added "of course we understand that ev member of the department has already clicked in to assist in every possible and proper manner in connection with the tragedy at New London. In order however, that there may be no misunderstanding in any direction and in confirmation of every proper and legal thing that had been done or may be done, the commission has issued an order."

TEXAS MINISTER GIVES VAN-TAGE HIGHEST PRAISE

Ordained Methodist Clergyman In 1896! New Medicine Relieves His Affliction And He Says, "I'm Just As Pleased As Anybody To Give My Statement!"

Literally thousands of people in This General Section are now taking—and praising!—the "Amazing New Mixture of Nature's Roots and Herbs and Other Splendid Medicinal Agents," known as VAN-TAGE, which is now being introduced in this city at Mark Halsey Drug Store, 1219 Broadway. Some of the Best-Known people are coming forward with their statements, telling what this Great Compound did for them. For instance, just a few days ago, The Rev. Mr. William H. Lathrop, of 1512 Milam St., Houston, Texas, made the following statement about Van-Tage. The Rev. Mr. Lathrop was ordained as a Minister of the Gospel in the Methodist Church at Corsicana, Texas, in 1896, and for more than 40 years he has taken a leading part in Church Work throughout This State. Read this Prominent Man's statement, which follows:

Had Gas, Constipation And Sluggish Kidneys

"I had been suffering with constipation and stomach gas and my kidneys were in a weak condition and my sleep was broken up frequently all night. My system must have become contaminated in general as I began to have severe aching in my joints and hips. I obtained the best Medical Advice I could find and tried several medicines, but I never got much relief. Then, recently, I heard about Van-Tage, and I started taking it. I have derived such splendid relief from the troubles I enumerate above that I am just as pleased as anybody to give my public statement."

21 Great Natural Herbs In The Van-Tage

VAN-TAGE contains 21 Great Herbs, and nearly a dozen other Splendid Ingredients, which help cleanse bowels, clear loads of gas from stomach and liven up liver and kidneys action so that people say they feel different IN GENERAL. Due to the immense volume in which it sells, the price is reasonable, so get Van-Tage—TODAY—at Mark Halsey Drug Store, 1219 Broadway. Adv.

No Special Appeal To Be Made By Red Cross For School Blast Sufferers But Contributions For Aid To Be Accepted

"In view of recent generous response to flood relief appeal, no special appeal will be made for this disaster," said a telegram from Wm. M. Baxter, jr., manager of the National Red Cross office at St. Louis, to Mrs. J. S. Johnson, chairman of the Lubbock county chapter of the organization, in reference to the New London blast.

"Rusk county chapter with assistance of chapters in adjoining counties is working effectively in meeting the emergency," the telegram continued. "Number of medical and nursing personnel now on the ground is adequate to care for the injured. Albert Evans, director, and other experienced members of the national disaster staff arrived at New London at 4 o'clock this (Friday) morning and are assisting the local chapter officials.

"The Red Cross will provide funds needed for relief purposes. It is not intended to deny those wishing to contribute to this disaster the privilege of so doing, however. Chapters should indicate readiness to accept and transit such contributions to this office."

Lubbock county chapter recently oversubscribed several fold a quota set for relief to flood sufferers, even after the original goal had been increased several times.

Juanita Crow is now the night operator. She says she took it for a "good job."

Easter Buying Best In Years

Dun & Bradstreet's Report Is Optimistic, Giving Grins Of 2 To 6 Per Cent In Nation During Past Week

(By The Associated Press)

NEW YORK, March 19. — The generous response of buyers to early offer has led retailers to anticipate the best Easter business in seven years, Dun & Bradstreet reported today in the weekly review.

The agency said temporary hesitation in some branches was generally viewed as preparatory to more progress as the spring season advances.

"Volume in some wholesale lines was restricted only by the inability to meet specified deliveries," the review said. "As last minute orders items could not be filled, buyers turned to April requirements."

The review estimated retail sales for the country as a whole at from 2 to 6 per cent ahead of the preceding week.

Suggestions For Safe Driving

CURVES AND TURNS

No matter how perfect the condition of the car, the DRIVER is the most important factor in safe driving.

Be careful when passing cars, especially if another car is approaching.

Passing cars on turns and corners involves additional as passing a string of cars 300 feet long.

Don't "wonder" if you can make it—take no chances.

Passing cars on turns and corners involve additional dangers.

Turning curves on highways that are not "banked" increases the hazards.

You can't take liberties with natures laws of momentum and centrifugal force. Study them.

District Amateur Boxing Champs Decided In Fast Fisticuffs At Tech Arena

Seven Qualify For State AAU Go At Houston

Golden Gloves Champs March Toward Other Titles; Babe Wins By KO; Terrell Given Technical Decision

From the smoke and dust and blood of a dozen battles, fought to the accompaniment of steady cheering, razzing and booing, there emerged seven young scrappers to claim district A. A. U. boxing championship trophies last night at the Texas Tech gymnasium.

Approximately 1,200 spectators turned out to make the first AAU tournament here a financial success.

The seven champions—there were no entries in the bantamweight division—qualified for the state A. A. U. tournament to be held in Houston next Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

According to the weight divisions, these are the district champs:

Flyweight—Lewis Terrell of Lubbock High school.

Featherweight—Elton Terrell of Texas Tech.

Lightweight—Pete Nochlinger of Texas Tech.

Welterweight—Benny Burrola of Roswell, N. M.

Middleweight — John Buck of Crosbyton.

Light heavyweight — Bert Tankersley of Brownfield.

Heavyweight — Babe Ritchie of Lubbock High.

And this is how it came about:

Knockout Starts It

To start last night's final show, young Elton Terrell waded into Malcolm Smith of Texas Tech and registered a quick knockout with a terrific right punch to the base of the Smith ear. It happened after a minute and 35 seconds of the first round, and was a clean kayo.

It got Terrell into the final round, and he won that by forfeit when H. W. Bradley, slender Littlefield youth, was declared in no condition to fight. He sustained a bad eye injury Thursday night in the prelims, and could not see with his left orb last night.

The booing, of which there was considerable, started after the second fight on the card. Pete Nochlinger, after losing the first round to Laurence "Fly" Thornton of Littlefield, rallied in the second to win a draw in that round. They slugged it out slowly in the third, and the decision went to Nochlinger. It was an unpopular decision. The Avalanche-Journal scorecard gave the first round to Thornton, called the second even and gave the third to Thornton by a shade.

Jack Lovin Loses

Nochlinger came back later, fresh and fit and in a better fighting style to win a popular decision over Jack Lovin of Lubbock in perhaps the best battle of the evening to settle the lightweight title.

Lovin and Nochlinger went after it hammer and tongs, breaking from clinches to land solid blows to body and head. Lovin won the first round by a shade. Nochlinger staggered him with a straight right to the face in the second, then flogged him for nine counts to win the round handily. Lovin showed a lot of fortitude in the slow but tough third round, coming off the ropes and the floor to finish the fight, but nearly out at the finish.

Benny Burrola, the Mexican welterweight from Roswell and only out of state scrapper in the finals, decisioned Virgil Griner of Lubbock and Texas Tech in a semi-final fight that saw considerable mixing. Griner won the first round on aggressiveness, but was rushed in the second and went down for a count of 5. He was slower in the third, knocked down for a two-count and the decision was popular.

Then The Noise Started

The same Burrola figured in one of the most unpopular decisions ever recorded here when he later came back to fight Lloyd Henry of Slaton for the welterweight championship. Tired from the first fight, although never knocked down, Burrola was given a rush by the fighting Henry, who flailed his way out of the ropes and corners where the Mexican's "body blocking" and "head pushing" had forced him. There were no knockdowns, and everybody was sure the belting Slaton youngster had won.

The judges were divided, Cy LeMaster voting for Burrola, Sam Rosenthal for Henry. Referee Sexton indicated Burrola, and the booing broke out. So loud was the "cheering" that quiet could not be restored for the next fight, and the disgruntled patrons kept it up until the show was over. Some of the more displeased Slaton fans followed the judges from the hall.

The big noise made impossible the introduction of Bert Tankersley of Brownfield and Primo McCurry of Lubbock, who started throwing fists in a hurry. It lasted 23 seconds, that fight did, ending with McCurry sprawled on the canvas after taking a hard right to the kisser. The blow won the light heavyweight title for Tankersley.

Terrell Pulls Punches

Lewis Terrell, the district and state Golden Gloves flyweight scrapper, had not enough opposition in his final bout, and Referee Sexton stopped it for "lack of action." Terrell was opposed by young John D. Smith, a willing but outclassed school mate. Terrell pulled his punches in the first round and the fight was stopped. Sexton ordering the boys to fight or get out. They came up for the second round, and after an early flurry the fight lapsed again, and Sexton "called" it, giving the decision to Terrell, after one minute, 30 seconds of the second fall.

Babe Ritchie, the other Golden Gloves champion, had even less opposition in his heavyweight title fight, winning with a knockout in 1 minute, 20 seconds, from Earl Hopson of Brownfield. Hopson was many pounds lighter, and considerably less experienced. He went down three times for short counts, then for the toll of ten.

Crosbyton Boxer Wins

Middleweight honors went to John Buck, the experienced Crosbyton scrapper, after two fights. He decisioned Louis Alexander in the final after knocking out Sherman Nelson of Texas Tech in 1 minute, 37 seconds of the first round in a semi-final bout. Buck was too much for Nelson, who was batted about quite badly.

Louis Alexander, the Texas Tech footballer, pulled through the semi-final round with a decision over Perry Moss of Slaton. It was quite unpopular, since Moss had showed a comeback to win the second round after losing the first. Alexander carried the fight in the third round for a victory.

Buck had considerable trouble with the Texas Tech Indian in the final. Alexander was knocked down several times, took hard blows to the jaw and kidney, but always bounced back up to keep fighting. It was a clear cut victory for the Crosbyton lad.

Lloyd Henry, the Slaton scrapper who lost to Burrola, was awarded a trophy by the Texas Tech lettermen's association, sponsoring body of the tournament, "for his fighting spirit during the tournament."

Royal Mail Wins Grand National 'Chase As Half-Million Look On; Only 7 Horses Finish Rough Race; Mail Pays 100 To 6

All American-Owned Horses Eliminated Before Finish

AINTREE, Eng., March 19. (AP)—Leaping Aintree's forbidding fences and brooks like a stag and running light-footed as a fawn on the sodden flat, Hugh Lloyd Thomas' Royal Mail, a handsome black gelding, today won the 99th running of the Grand National steeplechase.

A crowd estimated at a half-million, including the king and queen, saw the four and a half mile course take a terrific toll of the 33 starters including six American-owned horses and Dorothy Paget's Golden Miller, 8 to 1 favorite. Only seven survived the 30 treacherous fences.

Cooleen Is Second

Never farther back than fourth, Royal Mail was earmarked as the winner from the time he stepped confidently into the lead, shortly after completing the first circuit.

Although no mares have won the classic in several generations it remained for one of them—Jimmy Rank's Cooleen—to give Royal Mail the only competition he had—except from the doggedly persistent riderless runner, Drim—in the last half-mile.

Cooleen was right at Royal Mail's flank at the final jump but she couldn't stand the pressure in the closing drive and finished three lengths back.

Another lady of the turf E. W. W. Bailey's Pucka Belle, was third ten lengths back of Cooleen. Then came Sir David Llewellyn's Ego, R. Strutt's Crown Prince, A. Pilkington's Pencraik and S. Wilkinson's Don Bradman.

In winning the purse of $50,250 in slow time of 9:59.9, Royal Mail paid his backers—and they were legion until he ran two bad races a few weeks ago—100 to 6.

Rough On Americans

Cooleen was a rank outsider at 33 to 1 while Pucka Belle was well backed at 100 to 6.

All six American-owned entrants failed to finish and one of them, Frank Gould's American-bred What Have You, was left at the post.

Mrs. F. Ambrose Clark's Flying Minutes, a son of the 1925 Kentucky Derby winner, Flying Ebony, made the best showing. With his 16-year-old American born jockey, Bobby Hobbs, Flying Minutes looked like trouble for Royal Mail before he fell, five jumps from home.

Texas Tech Tennis Team Leaves Today For Southwestern Tourney At Austin; To Play Southern Methodist At Dallas

Accompanied by its coach and director, Prof. James Allen, the Texas Tech tennis squad leaves today for a nine-day tour of Southwest conference strongholds and the Southwestern intercollegiate invitation tournament at Austin.

The Red Raiders of the net game will play Southern Methodist university's team and work out at Dallas during the early part of next week, arriving in Austin for the tournament scheduled Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Dr. D. A. Penick, famous tennis coach at the Longhorn school, has arranged the tournament, in which players from about 24 colleges and universities will compete. It is the first tourney of its kind, and has for its purpose the centralizing of collegiate tennis in the Southwest.

No. 1 man on the Tech team is Harry Jordon, who plays both singles and doubles. No. 2 is Wilson Chapman, who probably will team with Jordan in the doubles. Two veterans, H. A. Boseman and Fancher Upshaw, and a junior, Aubrey McCarty, round out the squad of five.

Horton Smith And Partner Advance In Best Ball Go

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., March 19. (AP)—Horton Smith of Chicago and Fred Haas of New Orleans advanced to the semi-finals of the National Amateur-Professional best ball match play golf tournament today.

They won 3 and 1 over Victor Ghezzi of Deal, N. J., and Ray Lenahan of Providence, R. I.

Henry Picard of Hershey, Pa., and Frank Ford of Charleston, S. C., downed Denny Shute of Miami and Bill Stark of Jacksonville 3 and 2.

A 4 and 3 victory over Wiffy Cox of Washington and Frank Strafaca of Brooklyn advanced Harry Cooper of Chicago and Paul Leslie of Baton Rouge, La.

Frankie Parker Wins Title In Bermuda Tennis Tourney

HAMILTON, Bermuda, March 19. (AP)—Frankie Parker, who pushed ahead of Bitsy Grant into the No. 2 spot in the United States tennis rankings today succeeded the "mighty mite" from Atlanta as Bermuda men's tennis champion. Parker routed Robert Murray of Montreal, former Canadian Davis Cup player, 6-1, 6-0, 6-2, in the final.

Mrs. Frederick McBride of Short Hills N. J. and Ernie Sutter of New Orleans upset the favorites, Mme. Sylvia Henrotin of France and Wayne Sabin of California in the mixed doubles final, 6-2, 3-6, 7-5.

Yankees Are Installed As 4 To 5 Favorites To Keep Title; Cards Set At 2-1

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., March 19. (AP)—Jack Doyle, broadway betting commissioner, installed the New York Yankees 4-to-5 favorites today to repeat their 1936 American League pennant victory this season, as a result of Lou Gehrig's signing.

Doyle also made the St. Louis Cardinals 2-to-1 choices in the National League with the champion New York Giants dropped to third. He quoted the Chicago Cubs at 2 1-2 to 1, and the Giants at 3 1-2 to 1.

On The SIDELINES

By Charles Gramich

NEW YORK, March 19.—Fistiana is a strange world where the king is a pauper and the paupers think they're kings.

The king, of course, is James J. Braddock, as hale and hearty an Irish dock-walloper as you'll ever see and a grand guy to a long queue of gimme guys.

The king is busted—all he's got left is the crown—but better times may be just around the corner. All they've got to do now is find a way to get around that corner.

Madison Square Garden says it can't be done and intimates that the king is a welsher. The Garden crowd usually doesn't "play rough" but it's getting ready to, now that the Mike Jacobs crowd has swiped the championship bout right out from under the Gardeners.

It looks as though there's going to be a lot of process-serving ere Braddock and Joe Louis climb into that Chicago ring in June.

All the trouble dates back to the advent of Mike Jacobs as a promoter. He had been a silent partner of the late Tex Rickard back in the golden decades. Tex was the front guy. Mike was the fellow who dealt out the tickets and watched the ducat market with an eagle eye. Mike still has a flourishing ticket brokerage shop on West 49th street. He is a smart business man and the report is that he has a million dollars cash laid away in a safety deposit vault—for use just in case a lot of securities don't pan out.

Them As Has, Gits

NOW any business man can tell you that that people who handle the money make the money. Others in the business, farther removed from the incoming flow of gold, make less money. Mike Jacobs is wealthy; Tex Rickard died broke, they said. Rickard was nothing more than a front—and a great ballyhooer. Mike Jacobs is a case-hardened business man. He advanced to the upper brackets the hard way. Once he was a sodapop and hot dog hawker on the Hudson river boat lines. He was just "team-boat Mike."

Perspicuity being one of the virtues of a promoter, Jacobs shoots all the angles. When Max Schmeling was booked to fight Joe Louis last summer, the sports writing fraternity went whole hog for Louis. None considered the possibility of a Schmeling victory.

But crafty Mike, who thinks of everything, wasn't caught short. When Schmeling plastered Joe Louis on the canvas, it was discovered that Schmeling had signed with Jacobs for a subsequent bout in the event he beat Joe Louis.

Assistant Master-Minder

JACOBS wears a brother-in-law lawyer in his hip pocket and this in-law relative, one Sol Straus, does some of the master-minding too. Anyway, they slipped upstate and got Schmeling's "Johann Heinrich" on the well-known dotted line.

Schmeling refused a large chunk of currency for a return go with Louis and almost got a title chance against Braddock. The champ's sore finger cancelled that and the two signed for next June in New York.

Having won the title from Max Baer under Garden sponsorship, Braddock was tied up to his first championship defense under the same auspices. Therefore, the Garden and Mike Jacobs, who operates as the Twentieth Century Sporting club, inc., had to get together, which they did—ostensibly.

Then came the run-out on Schmeling, which is explained away by Braddock Manager Joe Gould as merely a choice of the best spot for his champ. "You can bet your lungs that Braddock will fight Louis in Chicago and won't lose," boasts Gould. He likes to say, "You can bet your lungs."

That's the way things are in Fistiana, where the king is a pauper.

Patty Berg Wins Aiken Tournament

AIKEN, S. C., March 19. (AP)—Patty Berg, the Minneapolis school girl, wound up her Southern campaign today by winning the Aiken invitational golf tourney in easy fashion for her fourth title of the winter season. The sturdy redhead beat blonde Barbara Bourne, of New York, 6 and 4, in the 18-hole final round over the Highland Park course here.

Beaumont Exporters Defeat Texas Aggies In Opener 8-4

COLLEGE STATION, March 19.—The Beaumont Exporters of the Texas League defeated the Texas Aggies 8 to 4 in the first of a two-game series today.

Beaumont scored all its runs in the first five innings, blasting Kyle Riddle for nine hits and profiting from Aggie errors. The Aggies went hitless four innings. They scored four runs in the eighth off two hits and four walks at the expense of Bob Harris, relief hurler.

Dynamite Dunn, Exporter first baseman, hit a homer and double.

Score by innings:

Beaumont	311	030	002	—	8	10	3
Aggies	000	000	400	—	4	5	5

Ehrenberge, Day Harris and Parsons, Hankin; Riddle, Welch and Dowling, Pythian.

Only a nose prevented Cavalcade, now retired to stud, from registering a Kentucky Derby-Preakness double. The nose belonged to his stablemate, High Quest, which beat him in the Preakness.

Grimm Figures Cubs To Place In Flag Chase

Good-Time Charlie Is Pleased With Boys On Island; Uses Same Lineup In 1937—'And We'll Be Near The Top'

By ROBERT MYERS

AVALON, Calif., March 19. (AP)—Manager Charlie Grimm of the Chicago Cubs believes the National League pennant chase will be a race between five clubs, one of which will be the Cubs. "—and we'll be fighting it out at the top," he declared.

New York, Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Cincinnati and the Cubs—those are the five, though with no attempt to name the finishing order.

Charles J. Grimm, still a good-time Charlie in a sense but a little more serious as he begins his fifth season at the helm of the Cubs brigade and his first as a non-player, speaks without hesitation.

From Toast To Goat

He knows it's a long haul from spring, when the breezes drift lightly over the Santa Catalina island training camp of the Cubs, and summer fall, when the winds blow hot and cold over the National League circuit.

He knows, too, that those winds turned his team for a championship outfit in 1935 to a runner-up finisher in 1936—the toast of Chicago one year but burned to a crisp the next after the city series with the White Sox.

Yet—

"We'll be in there, wait and see," said Grimm, "and with just about the same club we had last year."

BETTER FARM YEAR

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP)—Gross income of California agricultural producers will be about $600,000,000, A. A. Brock, state director of agriculture, estimates. Substantial increases have been shown every year since 1932, when gross income sank to $372,148,000, Brock said.

GREEN CELERY ADVOCATED

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP)—Declaring that celery grown in its natural greenstate is just as tender and green as the familiar bleached type, the state department of agriculture is encouraging farmers to experiment with new crop. The green variety is known as Utah celery because it first was grown commercially in that state.

Ho Hum, Dizzy Signs Card Contract; The Shows Over --And Nobody Really Cares

Balks At First But Finally Signs At $25,000 Figure

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., March 19. (AP)—Dizzy Dean signed his 1937 contract with the St. Louis Cardinals tonight after a stormy session with the management.

The ace pitcher, who will receive a reported $25,000 for his services, first balked on a "good behavior" provision.

He walked out after a conference with Sam Breadon, club president, and said "it's all off." Later he went back to talk with Breadon and signed.

Breadon said he had "exacted no promises and made no conditions. He signed a straight baseball contract."

Dean, who insisted all winter he would not play this year for less than $50,000, said he was satisfied with the terms.

The pitcher talked to Breadon last night by long distance from his home at Bradenton. Both said they had reached an agreement and Dizzy drove here today.

"Don't Heckle Players"

Two conferences followed. Dean said Breadon wanted him to promise to mind his own business, to refrain from heckling his teammates and to obey Manager Frankie Frisch's orders without questioning the latter's authority.

Old Diz said he asked Breadon why he wanted such a promise.

"I always have done what Frankie told me to do," Dean declared. "I always have given the team everything I had and I haven't heckled the players."

Sooner Team Meets Denver

Bartlesville Oilers Triumph Over Kansas City Trails, Denver Safeways Beat Stars From Hollywood

DENVER, March 19. (AP)—Weathering a stern second-half rally, the Phillips Oilers of Bartlesville, Okla., defeated the Kansas City Trails, 43 to 35, tonight to advance to the finals of the National AAU basketball tournament.

The Oilers will meet the Denver Safeways in the final game. The Denver club defeated the Hollywood Stars, 28 to 16, in the other semi-final tonight.

Inability to sink free throws cost the Kansas Oilians their chance to defeat the pre-tournament favorite. Nerves taut; the Trails made only five of 21 free throw chances.

In the first half they scored six field goals to six for the Oilers, but the Oilers held a 19 to 14 edge at the intermission. It was the same story in the last half, only the Trails scored two more field goals than their opponents.

Play Cautiously

It was a battle between teams of master craftsmen, each passing sharply, breaking like a streak when opportunity offered, and each forming a blanket on defense.

So cautiously did they play at the five minute juncture the Phillips teams held only a 4 to 3 edge, and at the 15 minute mark the Oklahomans were ahead 12 to 10.

The 19 to 14 edge at the half was boosted to 25 to 14 within two minutes after the start of the second period as Ebling got around Comer for two buckets in the first 30 seconds and Browning sank a brace of free throws.

It Was Getting Tiresome, And Scribes Said So

By PAUL MICKELSON

BRADENTON, Fla., March 19. (AP) Sometimes a kick in the pants is a most charitable act.

Dizzy Dean got a few swift ones that came in the nick of time to derrick him out of the ash heap of fallen idols.

The great St. Louis pitching star cut to the quick by information that he was boring his bosses and baseball writers with his annual holdout fairy tales, is a very subdued young man today.

Dizzy has discovered at the early age of 26 that baseball is pretty big business that can't fold up because one man decided to give it the go-bye. The great Babe Ruth was past his prime when he made that discovery. Lou Gehrig found it out only a few hours ahead of Dizzy by agreeing to sign.

All Fed Up

The two boots that hurt Dizzy the most were delivered by Sam Breadon, owner of the Cardinals, and stories by baseball writers to the effect that they were getting all fed up.

When Dizzy capped his greatest holdout battle in years by asking Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis to place him on the voluntary retired list, Breadon shocked his pitcher by agreeing that it was a swell idea.

Mrs. Dean, advisor-in-chief to her husband, was partly to blame for the final, torrid blast the weary baseball writers levelled at him. When three New York writers attempted to get a good sound interview from Diz last Wednesday, Mrs. Dean broke it up by honking the automobile horn. The result was the writers wrote the real low down on Diz' holdout act, stripping it of all hokum and romance.

"That's a fine story to write," Mrs. Dean shouted to me. "Now you've got him blaming me for all his troubles."

Diz, downwright crestfallen, did not say much for a while. Then, he obliged a photographer by posing.

Henry Armstrong Wins From Aldo Spoldi In Garden Tiff

NEW YORK, March 19. (AP) — Henry Armstrong, a relentless chunk of ebony fighting fury from Los Angeles, stepped out of his class tonight to administer a thrashing to Aldo Spoldi, Italian lightweight, in the 10-round feature match at Madison Square Garden.

Armstrong, scaling 126 1-2 to his rival's 135, easily scored his second victory in as many weeks in the Garden ring.

Track Records May Tumble In Ft. Worth Tilt

Finals In Five Divisions Set Today; High School Squads Begin Action Friday With Preliminary Trials

FORT WORTH, March 19. (AP)—With sights leveled on the carnival's 68 records, a gaily clad army of young athletes will run, jump and toss things in the fifteenth Southwestern Exposition track and field meet here Saturday.

A full schedule of 13 events will be run off in five divisions—university, college, junior college, prep school and high school. In addition, there will be strong competition in the many pentathlon section which has a record entry this year.

More than 400 high schoolers got an early taste of competition Friday afternoon when preliminaries were run off. With one exception, all of the schoolboy races were narrowed down to the finale leaving the field open Saturday morning for the necessary preliminaries in the other sections. All finals will be contested in the afternoon starting at 1 o'clock.

No exceptional performances were turned in Friday afternoon. Johnnie Stewart of Grand Saline sailed over the high hurdles in the best time of the prelims at 17 seconds flat. The record of 15.8 appears in little danger, however.

Qualifiers in the high school division Friday included:

High jump: Groseclose, Breckenridge; Wood, Brownwood; FORD LUBBOCK; Fenton, Brady.

Discus: Hughes, Lamesa; Thomason, Brownwood; Jackson, Paschal; SIMMONS, LUBBOCK.

220-yard dash (semi-final Saturday morning): SIMMONS, LUBBOCK; Blogg, Brownwood; Dye, Brady; Moser, Stephenville, Stallings, Dallas Tech.

Cunningham Races San Romani Again

INDIANAPOLIS, March 19. (AP)—Glenn Cunningham, king of American milers, has another chance tomorrow night to prove he's a better man at that distance than little Archie San Romani of the Emporia, Kans., State Teachers college.

Cunningham and San Romani will continue their rivalry in the feature mile run of the fifth annual Butler indoor relays.

Twenty-four colleges and universities have entered more than 400 athletes in the relays. Qualifying trials for the dashes and hurdle races will be held tomorrow afternoon. All final events will be tomorrow night.

John Cain, Southwestern Louisiana's new mentor, was one of the greatest kickers ever developed at Alabama. Against Tennessee in his senior year, Cain averaged 49 yards per boot—in a downpour.

Foreign Powers Express Sympathy To U. S. Over Tragic London School Blast

Germany First To Send Note

Expressions Of Grief Given By Representatives Of Five Governments; Experts To Go To Scene For Probe

(By The Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, March 19. — Foreign powers expressed sympathy to the United States tonight over the tragic school explosion at New London, Texas.

The German government, which only a few days ago protested that Adolf Hitler had been insulted in this country, was the first to send an expression.

Luther Transmits Message

Ambassador Hans Luther transmitted the following message to Secretary Hull:

"I have learned with the deepest grief of the terrible disaster in New London, Texas, which has resulted in the loss of the lives of so many promising American children. On behalf of the German government as well as my own behalf I have the honor to express to the government of the United States my profoundest sympathy."

Similar expressions were received later from representatives of France, Poland, Norway and Canada.

Heard In Capital

Expressions of sorrow and concern were heard also at the temporary White House at Warm Springs, Ga., in congress and many official departments.

President Roosevelt ordered the Red Cross and government agencies to "render every assistance in their power to the community to which this shocking tragedy has come."

Individual expressions came from many members of congress.

"It's horrible—terrible," said Vice President Garner.

Connally, Sheppard Speak

Senators Connally and Sheppard of Texas spoke on the senate floor.

"The heart and sympathies of the people of Texas are profoundly moved by this stupendous calamity," said Connally. "I know their feelings are shared by the people of the nation."

"I feel that I can speak for the entire senate," Sheppard added, "in extending sympathy to stricken families, stricken cities and stricken towns."

The Red Cross and federal agencies acted to provide relief and assist in determining as far as possible the exact cause of the explosion.

Experts Sent To Scene

Five government experts on the causes of explosions have been ordered to the scene. They are Dr. David J. Price, dust-explosion specialist of the department of agriculture, sent by Secretary Wallace following a request from Gov. James V. Allred; and the following bureau of mines specialists—D. J. Parker of Salt Lake City, G. W. Jones of Pittsburgh, and H. B. Hill and Gustave Wade of Dallas, Texas.

Officials ordered regional executives of the Works Progress administration to supply what aid they could.

Red Cross officials said Dr. William De Kleine medical director, left the Capital this afternoon by plane (American Airways) to take charge of medical relief at New London. They said he expected to reach Dallas at 10:14 c.s.t. tonight.

Admiral Cary T. Grayson, chairman of the Red Cross, reported to President Roosevelt that the organization had finances and other facilities to meet all relief needs.

Tragedy Glance

of youngsters lie in tragic rows. It takes courage and strength for these anguished mothers and fathers to carry on the search, for the terrific force of the blast ruthlessly battered and lacerated the young bodies, once so alive.

To the pain of each heart is added the sorrow and burden of other hearts as women and men seek to comprehend the extent of the tragedy and sense the desolation and grief gripping friends, neighbors, strangers every one.

I arrived at the London school yard about an hour after the explosion and the scene at first seemed one of wild confusion. Out of the confusion rose a concerted and desperate effort to unearth the children. Women stared with eyes which could not comprehend the picture before them. This could not be the fine new school grovelling in the dust like a stricken animal.

The men of the community, heads of sorrowing families, moved with strength among the weeping women folk, seeking to comfort them.

One of the most thoughtful expressions uttered in this veritable pit of despair was spoken by a middle-aged oil field worker, whose face was lined heavily with new sorrow.

"If every mother and father in this country could see this picture," he said, "they would thank God every minute of their lives for having spared them this terrible thing."

Thursday Dr. R. C. Campbell, Dallas, executive secretary of the Texas Baptist convention and former Lubbock Baptist pastor, and Dr. C. E. Hereford, pastor of the Lubbock First church, were among the speakers.

School Blast Cause Probed; Toll Of Deaths Set At 425

building convinced it had given up its last body.

Funeral Services Planned

Meanwhile, bereaved parents laid plans for mass and individual funeral services for their children.

A group service for an undetermined number was planned at the New London Baptist church tomorrow, and there was the possibility of a mass service at Henderson.

Military authorities set the opening of their formal inquiry for 9:30 a. m. tomorrow.

End of the grim task of extricating mangled bodies from the twisted wreckage was signalized by the terse comment of Col. E. E. Parker, commander of National Guard forces which held this territory under martial law:

—Maybe More

"The job is finished. "We estimate 425 bodies were lifted from the ruins—maybe more."

Dripping wet from a pouring rain and the perspiration of their Herculean exertions, an army of oil field workers—many of them seeking their own children or already knowing them dead—filed out of the tangled debris as the National Guard officer called their task complete.

Fatalities in hospitals and in ambulances en route to emergency stations were expected to push the total number of dead past the 450 mark. Those who lived after the eruption that scattered human beings and tons of debris are maimed, physicians said, and fractures are evident in almost every case.

No Mass Burials Planned

Ministers from throughout East Texas and Louisiana began notifying authorities of their readiness today and burials will held throughout the derricked oil sector—largest in the world—tomorrow and Sunday. No mass burials were planned.

At Austin, state capital, legislators passed resolutions in both houses calling for a legislative investigation even as Governor James V. Allred's military court of National Guardsmen assembled here to conduct a court of inquiry into the cause of the tragedy.

Major Gaston S. Howard, assistant adjutant general, stood in a deluge of rain as the last of the bodies was carried tenderly from the scene of Texas' greatest disaster since the Galveston flood, and mapped plans for the military inquiry.

Dr. Schoch Summoned

He summoned Dr. Schoch to appear before the military authorities tomorrow, lending emphasis to the prevalent belief that explosion of gas from the oil that called the school and its surrounding communities into being had wiped out the school and with it the next generation of its communities.

Major Howard indicated his belief that accumulated gas, gathered in the crannies and hollow tile of the building's basement, was the basic cause of the disaster.

He appointed Col. H. H. Carmichael, director of the Texas Public Safety department; Captain Ed Clark, Col C. E. Parker, Captain C. P. Kerr, and Captain Z. E. Coombes, all of the National Guard, to the board of inquiry. Captain Coombes will preside as judge advocate at the meeting, thrown open by Governor Allred to "bona fide" newspapermen. Major Howard disclosed Ross Maddox, general contractor for the "world's wealthiest school," and E. M. Roberts, electrician on construction of the building, had been asked to appear before the court. Major General Herbert J. Brees, commander of the Eighth Corps area at San Antonio, arrived shortly afternoon but Major Howard said he was "here only to aid and assist."

Rain Hampers Final Work

Hard, driving rain in the early morning hours made the final few hours of work of digging for bodies a difficult matter. Workers, stripped to the waist, passed bricks and debris along a hand-to-hand chain, using peach baskets. Footing was easy on the rocky surface but huge truck had not traction on the rain-sodden ground and cables snapped frequently with beams in mid-air. Youngsters darted about in the rain, picking up school books blown hundreds of feet away and carting them away in tin buckets. Coffee in huge buckets was passed around among fatigue-sodden workers.

Just before dawn Mrs. Tracy Tate, a school teacher, was lifted alive from the bottom of wreckage piled 30 feet high. Said worker K. G. McDonald: "I put my hand on her leg as I helped haul her from the debris and I felt the muscle of her leg twitch. She died as they placed her in an ambulance."

Estimates Of Dead Vary

Various estimates of the dead and maimed came from semi-official sources. Production Superintendent H. S. McGarry of the Humble Oil and Refining company, estimated, after a company survey, that 450 perished.

Arrival of Albert Evans of St. Louis, disaster relief director for the American Red Cross, started quick organization of relief agencies. He went directly to the scene to confer with Red Cross leaders.

Evans came here from Little Rock, Ark., where he had been engaged in flood relief work, he plunged immediately into the arduous task of compiling an accurate list, of dead and injured from scattered and uncollected lists strewn over East Texas.

Work Halts In Field

Work halted in the vast East Texas oil belt and schools were shut tight.

The Reverend M. Hendrickson, pastor of the Pentecostal Church at nearby Turnertown, volunteered for service and told a story of deep tragedy.

"I live four miles from the school. I heard a detonation and looked in the direction of the building. There was a white pillar of smoke surging up into the sky. I joined several men passing and rushed to the school. The sight I met there was indescribable in its horror."

His eight-year-old son, Henry, attended the London school last year. This year his father decided to send him to Gaston school. A trifle closer to home. "Thank God for that decision," murmured the pastor.

Parents Still Seek Children

Tonight, better than a day after the appalling explosion, red-eyed parents still plodded between morgues and makeshift funeral homes in search of their youngsters. Officials estimated nearly 50 of the victims were still unidentified.

The task of identification itself was one of the most difficult presented by the disaster and was the cause of scenes of pathos unparalleled in memory here.

Long lines of the bereaved plodded wearily through improvised morgues, peering with fearful eyes to pick their missing loved ones from the rows of sheeted bodies laid end to end in dance halls, skating rinks, churches—anywhere there was shelter.

Trembling fingers plucked at sheets, tugging them back gently to uncover mangled features that might be those of the son, or daughter, or brother, who went away to sch.. yesterday and didn't come home.

Morticians from Dallas, more than 100 miles away, and from greater distances, hurried here to care for the dead. One of that number, Jerome Crane of Dallas, returned there with the expressed belief that at least 20 to 75 unidentified bodies he saw at one time in an Overton mortuary never would be fully identified.

"Unless parents are able to do so from remnants of clothing," he added.

Embalmer Describes Bodies

Telling of personally caring for 17 bodies with the aid of Barton Beatty, another Dallas embalmer, Crane said:

"They were the most horribly mangled remains of human beings either of us had even seen. With the m.. badly dismembered remains all we could do was to saturate them in embalming fluid and wrap them in cloths for final disposition."

Crane said that when he left New London there was widespread talk of the possible necessity of cremation.

Too Much For Calmness

As in the case of Crane, the horror of scenes created by the disaster proved too much for calm acceptance by persons accustomed by their daily duties with death and suffering.

Everywhere telephones shrilled with anxious inquiries, long delayed by wire congestion. And as often as not the answer went back in a choked voice, something like this:

"We have found Mary, mother. No, I don't think she suffered much. Her face had a sort of smile on it."

Or if the suspense had not yet turned to despairing certainly:

"Can you come tomorrow, Tom? They haven't found the boy yet."

Generally there were few tears. The tragedy was still too fresh, the magnitude of the loss, both personal and community, too vast for immediate comprehension. Then, too, these are a hardy and in many cases undemonstrative people. A majority of the bereaved ones are actual field workers among the oil rigs and pipelines. The men are inured to hard work and the sudden flash of danger, the women to uncertainty.

Traced To Oil Operations

Most theories as to the cause of the explosion traced back of the oil operations on which the communities served by the school depend.

The most detailed possible explanation was offered by Al Dechman of San Antonio, former investigator for the Texas Railroad commission, oil regulating body, who suggested "hot oil" runners might be responsible.

Dechman explained that in regular opeartions the gas which comes up with the oil is piped some distance from the casing head and burned in flares.

Such flares, however, show that the well is in operation and persons reducing oil above their allowable permits sometimes operate with out the flames, allowing the gas to escape.

Ignited In Basement

Bechman's theory was that gas thus freed collected in the basement and was ignited there in some manner.

Free gas, being heavier than air does collect in low spots in the oil fields, sometimes in dangerous concentrations.

School authorities said the odor of gas had been unusually noticeable in low parts of the school building in recent days. The odor, however, sometimes strong and sometimes weak, is omnipresent through the producing areas.

Superintendent Shaw Concurs

Superintendent W. C. Shaw, subscribed to the unburned gas theory but did not go into detail as to how it may have collected.

T. Roy Ainsworth, Houston architect whose firm designed the school building, emphasized the terrific force of the blast with the statement that it was one of the finest in the nation. Nothing but an explosion of unusual proportions would have wrecked the two-story steel-framed brick and hollow tile structure, he said.

AUSTIN WOMAN DIES

AUSTIN, March 19. (AP)—Mrs. C. D. Wade died today from effects of burns in a kitchen fire 17 days ago. Her husband, slightly burned in trying to extinguish her clothing, is a former Houston newspaper man.

POPE CELEBRATES MASS

VATICAN CITY, March 19. (AP)—Pope Pius XI, remaining on his feet about 30 minutes, today celebrated his first mass since December 5, when he was stricken with a partial leg paralysis.

News Briefs...

Business matters, including a report on the recent Texas Technological college band concert sponsorship, were discussed at the American Business club luncheon at the Hilton at noon yesterday. Dr. M. M. Ewing, president, presided. Will M. Ewton, pianist, played several numbers on the entertainment program. William Collins, vice president, was program chairman. Two new members, T. H. (Bo) Williams and Frank (Mickey) McGuire, were introduced. Claude Thompson, Tech student council president, reported about $600 was needed to purchase uniforms for the Matador band. The club sponsored the concert that cleared approximately $1,691.

Garnet Reeves of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce, formerly publicity director of the chamber of commerce here, was in Lubbock Friday attending the County Judges and Commissioners association convention.

Miss Fern Babcock, Southwestern regional secretary of the YMYWCA, will visit the Texas Technological college association March 30-31 and April 1, said Dr. Archie J. Bahm, sponsor of the association. She will meet with the cabinet, faculty advisory group, and the entire group. She will assist in "Y" program arrangements.

An instructed verdict for the defendant was authorized this afternoon by Judge E. L. Pitts of 99th district court in the civil action of John F. Schriever and others against M. F. Klattenhoff and others, suit for an accounting. Hearing of the case began Monday afternoon.

Body of Mrs. L. E. Stephenson, 89, of Monroe was buried in Abernathy cemetery after services at the residence in Monroe Friday afternoon. Elder John T. Smith of the Lubbock Church of Christ was to officiate. Mrs. Stephenson died at her home at 11 o'clock Thursday night after several months' illness. She had lived in Lubbock county 19 years. Sanders Funeral home reported services.

The American Hereford association has advised the chamber of commerce it will pay one fourth of all premiums at the Lubbock Quality Meat show March 29-31, on Hereford calves entered in the show, where the premium is $4 and more.

Local junk dealers, with ports blocked by embargoes on shipments of junk metals to foreign nations, are seeking domestic markets, it was said yesterday. Exporting had been the chief outlet for some time as foreign markets for junk became higher than the domestic market. It is expected some shipments to eastern and northern mills will begin soon.

Location for a wildcat oil test in section 420, Yoakum county, six miles west of Plains, was staked Wednesday, W. J. Hale, Plains, said yesterday. It is on the Shook land.

What Fire Chief W. E. Twitty said was "a sort of unforseen condenser" caused firemen to make a 3 o'clock run Friday afternoon to the 1602 Avenue H residence owned by T. T. Carpenter. There was no damage. The "condenser", the chief said, was found in a "peculiar sort of construction." There had been a galvanized iron roof laid on shingles. Below the shingles were other conductors. The shingles acted as a nonconductor, or dielectric. Smoke, sparks or dust coming out of a vent pipe caused the alarm to be sounded, he said.

A 17-year-old youth who had been placed in Lubbock county jail Thursday was removed by W. E. Renfrow and Weldon Lawson, highway patrolmen, Friday to Dickens. Wanted for automobile theft, he will be given over to Wichita Falls authorities there. He was brought to Lubbock from Mulechoe, said the officers.

Eleven chickens and a tire and rim were reported stolen in reports made to police Friday by J. F. Therman of 2620 Twenty-first street and Chester Hufstedler of 2306 Tenth street, respectively.

At least two persons had identified radiator caps stolen from their automobiles, said the sheriff's department, which had placed the property where the public could inspect it. Several other caps, taken from cars of various makes and models, have not been claimed. They were seized in a liquor raid this week.

Detention of an out-of-county man in connection with investigation into asserted theft of a heavy automotive motor, Friday night was announced by city police. His arrest was by Grady Harrist, deputy sheriff, and Don Reeder, police identifications officer. One person is under bond in connection with the motor, which had been recovered, said authorities.

None was injured in two crashes of automobiles Friday night, said police. One mishap was at Eighteenth street and Avenue H, the other at Texas avenue and Seventh street.

Three boys from Hobbs, N. M. and two girls from Ralls Friday night were reported missing from their homes. One of the boys was said to be 13 years old, and the other two, as well as the girls, were listed as 14. The boys were believed to be headed for Arkansas. They ran away from school Friday. The girls left Ralls at 4:30 o'clock and, an hour later, were seen leaving Idalou for Lubbock. Both have light hair.

Three Children In One Family Escape Fatal Blast

DALLAS, March 19. (AP) — Three children in one family were saved from death or injury in the New London school blast because of three different sets of circumstances, their Dallas uncle said today.

H. E. Sanders, the uncle, recited these circumstances:

Vitra Jaunita Sanders, 17, was taken from the London school classrooms by a shorthand examination in Henderson.

Glenn Sanders, jr., 15, was playing baseball behind the school's gymnasium when the building blew up. He had planned on going into the school to take part in a program.

Robert Sanders, 8, was at home, ill.

Graham Girl, Teacher In School, To Be Buried Today

GRAHAM, March 19. (AP)—Mattie Queen Price, music teacher killed in the New London school disaster, will be buried here tomorrow.

Surviving are her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Nat Price, and three brothers, W. W., Robert Lee and Bud Price.

Disasters Could Be Averted By Gas-Alarm System

WASHINGTON, March 19. (AP)—Disasters like the New London, Texas, school explosion might be prevented in the future through development of a gas-alarm system, a government official said today.

Dr. David J. Price, dust-explosion specialist of the department of agriculture, outlined the possibility before departing for the scene to aid local investigators.

Efforts have been under way for some time to develop a simple alarm system which automatically would warn of the presence of dangerous concentrations of combustible gases, he said.

Such a device, Dr. Price added, might be similar to alarms now in use which measure the pressure of carbon monoxide in the air down to very low concentrations.

The alarm might sound a warning or speed up ventilating fans to reduce the concentration below the danger point, the explosion expert said.

Grim Flashes Relate Brief But Poignant Stories

Additional death messages, all of them conveying the same grim brevity, were received Friday by Lubbock and other South Plains persons—when identification of bodies dragged from New London's blasted school building continued.

Friday morning brought information Miss Louise Arnold, 31, former student of Texas Technological college, had been numbered with the dead. She was a faculty member there.

Miss Arnold, of Arp, had attended Tech in the summer terms of 1934 and 1936, and had planned attendance at the college next summer and the following long term.

She would have completed work for her degree within less than a year, said Miss Margaret Weeks, dean of the home economics department.

Relatives and friends said additional telegrams from the stricken town came to James Still, L. A. Bates, Mrs. Frank Easley, all of Lubbock, and to B. C. Meere of Ropesville, manager of the Farmers Cooperative Gin company.

Mr. and Mrs. Moore and a daughter, Miss Lena Mae Moore, a student of Texas Tech, left for there after learning one relative had been killed and that another was in a hospital.

Earl C. and Wilbur F. Knipe of 514 avenue N left when they learned their youngest brother, a high school student, had been killed.

Friday morning had come information Miss Louise Martin, junior in the ill-fated school and a niece of Walter H. Jones, Lubbock Chiropractor, was missing in the ruins. Miss Martin, a junior, visited here last summer.

Contributions made up in the city schools totalled $100, and will be continued, said Dr. Kenneth E. Oberholtzer, superintendent.

"It is not our policy to take collections in the schools," he said, "but in this case I believe it is justified." No campaign was conducted, but all donations from a penny up were accepted. Funds will be sent to New London for relief.

Bus and rail ticket sales reflected a continued exodus of stricken relatives from throughout the South Plains.

Indianapolis Printers Vote To Return To Work

INDIANAPOLIS, March 19. (AP)—Union printers voted here tonight to return to work on the three Indianapolis newspapers, ending a 24-hour strike which left this city without a local paper. The vote on returning to work was 207 to 18.

Rev. J. H. Crockett Is New Minister In East City Circuit

Rev. J. H. Crockett, a former Texan but, recently pastor of the Methodist church at Las Vegas, N. M., is the new minister of the East Lubbock circuit of the Methodist church, Rev. W. M. Pearce, presiding elder, said yesterday.

The new minister succeeds Rev. F. R. Pickens, who moved to Las Vegas, where he is now in charge. Reverend Crockett preaches his first sermon Sunday at New Hope, where the presiding elder will hold a second quarterly conference in the afternoon.

Canyon, Posey, Monroe and New Hope comprise the circuit. The circuit parsonage is at 1611 Avenue L.

One Killed, Another Hurt In Tornado In Louisiana Section

EPPS, La., March 19. (AP)—One person was killed and another seriously injured late today in a tornado which demolished eight or ten houses in the Monticello community eight miles east of here.

L. J. Smith, 30-year-old farmer, was killed when his home was razed, and his wife suffered a fractured collarbone and concussion of the brain. Mrs. Smith was taken to a sanitarium at Delhi. Smith's neck was broken.

The storm, accompanied by torrential rain, struck swiftly. So far as was known the Smiths were the only victims.

University Of Texas Co-Ed Is Killed In Crash Near Houston

HOUSTON, March 19. (AP)—A girl student of the University of Texas was injured fatally and three other students were hurt tonight when their automobile crashed into the rear end of an oil truck loaded with iron pipe near Alvin. Miss Wink Steck, 18, of Austin was killed. She was pronounced dead on arrival at a hospital here and ambulance attendants were unable to state whether she had died en route from the scene of the accident.

Heavy Snow Falls Friday In Three Far Western States

DENVER, March 19. (AP)—Heavy snow fell in Wyoming, western Nebraska and northeastern Colorado today, leaving valuable moisture for farmers to draw against.

Temperatures were generally well above freezing. The snow melted rapidly in most sections. Skies cleared.

FORTY THOUSAND AT SHOW

FORT WORTH, March 18. (AP)—Approximately 40,000 persons, the largest attendance in the history of the show, flocked to the Southwestern Exposition and Fat Stock show today when school children were admitted free.

Taxpayers Group To Be Organized

Preliminary steps looking towards formation of a district and local group of the Texas Taxpayers association will be taken today at a meeting of the executive committee of the Lubbock Real Estate board at 9:30 o'clock in the office of R. C. Hopping. At the suggestion of President R. A. McKinney of the board, the meeting was called.

J. C. Mytinger, state president of both groups, is to meet with them. He was the chief speaker last night at a meeting in the district court room.

Mr. McKinney introduced Mr. Hopping, who presided over the meeting. Some 50 persons, including a number of delegates to the county judges and commissioners convention, heard him.

Before the address, George W. Dupree, Lubbock attorney, spoke briefly, urging an organization of taxpayers. He advised his hearers to "keep out of politics."

Mr. Mytinger gave figures on the present tax situation in the state, showing taxes collected, indebtedness both bonds and warrants and delinquent taxes.

County Officials

we have and have to go over and apologize to the state auditor, I'm going to take my resignation with me," he declared.

"We're going to build better roads where they will serve the most people and as promptly as possible," he said. "As I read the record of the highway commission I find there a determination and a spirit of friendliness, and a desire to do things which ought to be done and as quickly as possible.

"Be Frank With Us"

"Be frank with us, criticize us right across the table," he invited. "We have no desire to take your business, your money, your employes to do with them anything not for the benefit of the people of Texas.

"Next to the public school system," he pointed out, "the highway system touches the lives of more people than any other department of your government."

He warned against attempted diversions of highway funds, of "flimflammers, note-shavers, and scoundrels who are trying to skin the taxpayers on scrip."

Chairman Bobbitt referred frequently to Harry Hines, Wichita Falls, commission member, and Gibb Gilchrist, state engineer, who were guests of honor at the banquet.

Bean, Pitts Introduced

Judge Allison, president of the West Texas association, introduced Judge E. L. Pitts, former president of the regional association and of the state organization, who introduced Robert H. Bean, former Lubbock county judge. Bean, Lubbock attorney, was credited with founding of the West Texas unit.

Other guests introduced included: William J. Lawson, executive secretary of Texas Park board; Col. Ike Ashburn, executive manager of Texas Good Roads association, Houston; Adam R. Johnson, chairman of the state relief board; Claude Teer, chairman of the board of control; Comptroller George H. Sheppard; Sam Richardson, Democratic executive committeeman of the 30th senatorial district, Lamesa; Highway Commission Member Hines; Mrs. Joe Y. Boyd, Mrs. W. H. Bledsoe, and W. Russell Nelson, Panola county judge and president of the Texas association.

Judge Nelson in turn presented Chairman Bobbitt.

Entertainment Offered

Entertainment was provided by Larrymore and orchestra, Betty Caldwell, Yvonne Westmoreland, W. D. Holley, and a group of students of Larrymore School of Dance.

Invocation was given by Rev. C. E. Hereford, pastor of the First Baptist church.

The commissioners and judges opened their 17th semi-annual convention Friday morning, with Judge Allison presiding.

Several Speakers Heard

The afternoon session included addresses by Secretary Lawson of the park board, Dr. W. A. Jackson of Texas Technological college department of government, Comptroller Sheppard, J. W. Chapman of the extension service, L. E. Bracy of the state health department, and Colonel Ashburn.

Doctor Jackson, whose subject was listed "General Observations and Reflections of American Politics," spoke chiefly of "debunking the bunk in politics" and of local government.

Among oft-repeated statements which Doctor Jackson declared were "the bunk" were: "rotation in office," "a politician should not politic," "anything else would be better than what we've got," and "take us back to the good old days."

"I am tremendously interested in local government," he said in a mere serious vein. "Because I can see a tendency to do away with local government. "I am interested in strengthening local government."

Development of the state parks system was outlined by Lawson, who detailed some of the plans for the Big Bend International Peace park.

The Big Bend sector, he declared, "was intended for a national park when it was created."

Mounting costs of Texas administration were mentioned by Comptroller Sheppard, who declared, "It costs more to administer an empire than a small place."

He urged commissioners and judges to study carefully every bill introduced by the legislature affecting county administration.

Discusses Soil Conservation

Soil conservation, which had been called more violently to the visitors attention by a West Texas sandstorm, was discussed by Chapman. He declared the farm is the only place where soil erosion and floods both can be stopped. He discussed proposed legislation on soil conservation.

The barrier between terracing and contour furrowing is lack of available machinery, he said.

Bracy told of a proposed bill which would divide Texas into 12 public health districts. His topic was "West Texas, a Good Place to Live."

Urges Shifting Of Burden

Chairman Teer of the board of control Friday morning had urged officials to assume locally the burden of charity and social service.

"This may sound like old stuff, but we're having too much centralization in government," he declared.

Judges and commissioners applauded.

Other speakers on the morning program were George W. Dupree who welcomed visitors; Judge Homer T. Bouldin of Albany, who responded to the welcome; Judge E. L. Covey, Knox county; Highway Engineer Gilchrist, and Miss Lidia Cooper, district agent of the extension service, College Station.

R. A. DeFee, Channing, is association vice-president, and Omar Burleson, Jones county judge, is secretary-treasurer.

Resolutions committee was named as follows by President Allison; W. O. Puett, Wheeler county judge, chairman; Judges A. F. King; Mitchell, county, L. R. Crockett, Lamb county, and Dave Miller, Tarrant county, and Commissioner Waldo McLaurin, Lynn county.

Convention hosts are Lubbock county commissioners court, Judge J. J. Dillard, and Commissioners P. B. Penney, Ben Manaker, T. L. Holt, and B. O. McWhorter, and Lubbock Chamber of Commerce.

Matter Of Minutes

Change In Decision Fatal At School

NEW LONDON, March 19. (AP)—Forty-five minutes separated some 400 school children from death and life and yesterday.

School officials had planned to dismiss the entire student body of the senior and junior high school of the London consolidated school several minutes early so they could attend a county track and field meet. Minds were changed and only participants were allowed to cut the last class.

They were among the few survivors of the explosion that goes down as one of America's most appalling school child tragedies.

The president—the "repairman" of the national "watch," young Roosevelt continued, explained the situation in 1936 and asked "the people of our nation if he was to finish the job . . . the people gave their answer . . . a vote of confidence and a mandate that the watch must be fully repaired . . .

"And if you found that government itself was made up of three parts—executive, legislative and judicial—and that only the last was blocking your efforts at complete repair, wouldn't you add a drop of oil to lubricate the hesitating part?"

'The Moving Finger Writes'

THERE is not much that can be said about the awful catastrophe of Thursday afternoon which turned the smartly modern London Consolidated school plant into heart-rending shambles.

Events sometimes occur in the lives of men when words mean nothing: when even those far removed from the scene and with no personal connection are struck dumb with sorrow.

Such an occurrence was the East Texas school explosion which swiftly wiped from the face of the earth all that was human of hundreds of boys and girls—the flower of the youth of the oft vaunted "greatest, richest oil field in the world."

The physical horror of the accident will, of course, fade with time, that great leveller of all things.

But the memory of the catastrophe, the terror of it, the sadness which it brought to thousands, will hold on and on and on, so long as those who saw it and who were hurt by it remain upon this earth.

It is true that the hearts of millions go out to London and New London in the incalculable loss and misery sustained.

It is true that the world joins with all of Texas with bowed head and almost unbelievable sorrow.

Yet all our sympathy, all our feeling of kindred ties, all our grief seems, and must be, futile in the face of what disaster has wrought.

Yes, there are times when little of value can be said and the London Consolidated school explosion marks one of them.

We may, with tear-dimmed eyes and a trembie in our throats, ask "why?": but it will avail us nothing.

All we know, or ever can know, is that it is a part of life, sometimes, for tragedy, which stuns and burns, to hold the stage despite mankind.

"The moving finger writes, and having writ, moves on."

NO SURPRISE HERE

The people of the South Plains, where religion and church affiliation happily are of vital import and integral parts of our every-day world, will be interested to learn that Russia's famous anti-religious campaign is in a bad way.

According to a recent news dispatch, enrollment in the "Militant Godless League" has fallen from 5,000,000, in 1933, to less than 2,000,000. In many centers the league has ceased to exist. The commissariat of education has recently closed five anti-religious museums, and anti-religious lectures in villages and factories have been dropped.

This, to the government newspaper Izvestia, is "intolerable"; but it ought not to be in the least surprising. For the religious instincts is one of the most deeply-rooted forces in the human soul. Under communism, capitalism, or primitive savagery, men will grope blindly for answers to the great riddles of human existence—even as thousands are doing today in the case of the East Texas explosion—and failing to find them will turn to a higher power.

That a few years of propaganda have not quenched this instinct is not surprising. It would have been the greatest surprise of all history if they had.

WITH OUR CONTEMPORARIES

"Our opinion," W. D. Starcher points out in the Dickens County Times, "is that many of us would not be as good in directing governmental affairs if we had the job, as we are without it."

* * *

"Richest man in the world is the Nizram of Hyderabad," Morley Drake says in the Lamb County Leader. "Even in India, where the treasure hoards of the native princes all contain fabulous wealth accumulated over countless generations, His Exhaulted Highness Sir Mir Osman Ali Khan, grand commander of the Order of the Star, in India, honorary lieutenant-general of the British army, overshadows them all in the size of his fortune. He is reputed to own gold in bars worth 260 million dollars, and diamonds, rubies and other jewels valued at two thousand millions."

* * *

"Our new golf course is well under way," Forrest Weimhold boasts in the Sudan News. "Sunday a few of us got out and cut the turf off for four greens, and this week different ones have been working on the course."

Today's One-Minute Sermon

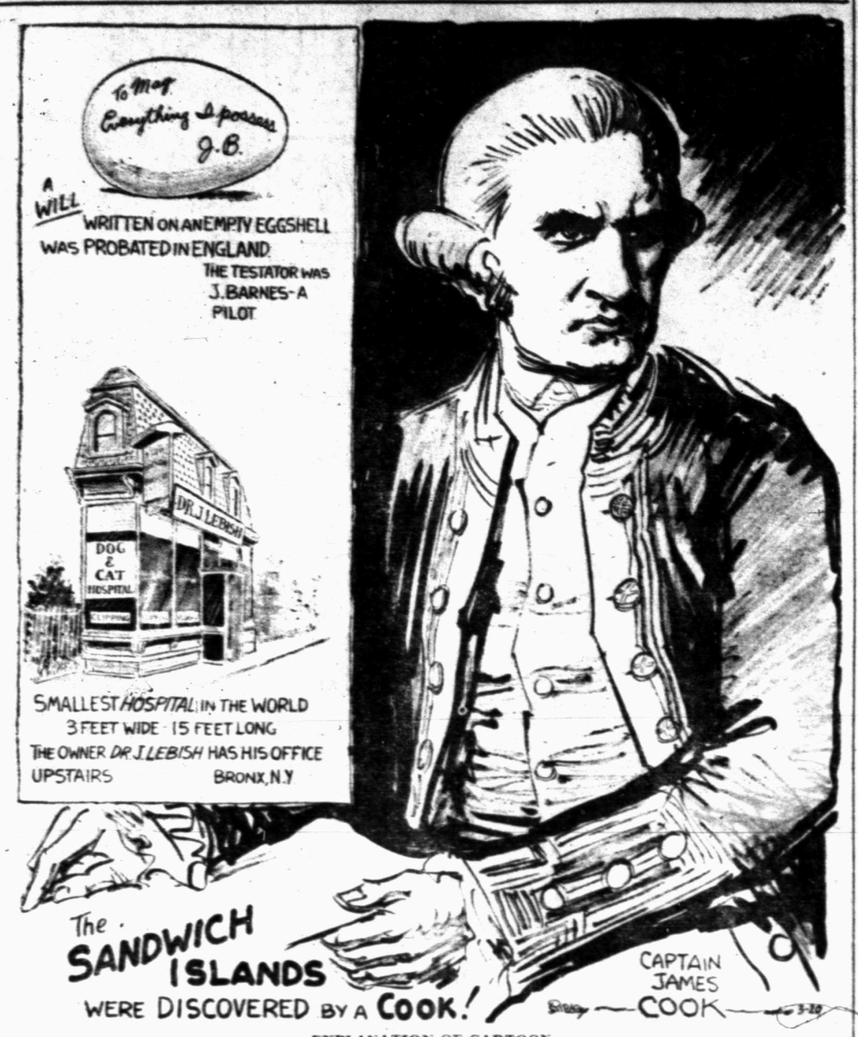

A soft answer turneth away wrath: but grievous words stir up anger.

The tongue of the wise useth knowledge aright: but the mouth of fools poureth out foolishness.

The eyes of the Lord are in every place, beholding the evil and the good. Proverbs, XV: 1-3.

By Marie Blizard. (Copyright 1937, NEA Service, Inc.)

BEGIN HERE TODAY

When DAPHNE BRETT took her younger sister JENNIFER, under hand in an effort to launch her on a successful career in New York, difficulties immediately arose between the two. Jennifer resented any such interest and promptly defied Daphne.

She was ready to elope with TUCKER AINSLEY, wealthy playboy, and would have eloped had not Daphne stepped in in time to prevent the wedding. Next, Jennifer had made a play for the affections of LARRY SMITH, attractive young architect, with whom Daphne is in love.

Weeks dragged on in which the sisters became increasingly estranged. Then Daphne sent Jennifer to a shore resort for vacation and Jennifer met GORDON HERZBERG, famous theater producer. Immediately she found a new interest in this field and seemed to lose her old bitterness.

At the same time Daphne, who has been asked by Larry to become his wife, is sent on a two-months' sales trip across the continent. Happy, because she knows this will give her enough money to see Jennifer safely married, she calls Larry.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XVIII

"So I'm selfish, am I?" Larry placed a box of white flowers on Daphne's table, fished a box of candy from one pocket, a toy dog from another and from an inside pocket, took out a very small, white box.

"I didn't mean it. I didn't mean it. I didn't mean it," Daphne said and slipped from his arms. "You're the sweetest, most generous person in the world and I love the dog. I've always wanted one just like this."

"But why don't you put him down and give me a little of your attention while I tell you my news?"

"Consider it all yours but first I want to know if you are going to ask me to marry you because if you are . . ."

"I'm not as a matter of fact. I'm telling you that you are going to marry me."

"Oh, so that's the way it is! You're going to be the Magnificent Brute, are you? Well, listen to me."

"I thought I had the floor."

She looked properly subdued.

"You are not only going to marry me but you are going to marry me tomorrow. Hand in hand we are going down . . ."

She captured one of those hands. "Darling," she pleaded, "don't lose your breath. Take it easy and tell me what this all means."

"It means that we are going to build castles in Spain."

"That's exactly what it sounds like to me. You're very lucid, Mr. Smith."

* * *

"If you'll sit on my knee, I'll be very lucid. There! Well, I'm—we're—sailing for Spain on Friday. You and I, Mr. and Mrs. Smith. Is that clear?"

"Not very. Hadn't you heard there is a war in Spain?"

"Yes, but not all of Spain is battlefield. The point is that our firm is going to bid in on the Spanish Village for the next World's Fair and I'm going over to look around and get some ideas. And you're going with me. Darling, we'll stand on the road to Granada and look across to the shores of Africa. We'll see the twilight that falls at midnight. We'll . . ."

Daphne took a deep breath as though she were about to plunge into something very cold. "Larry, must you go now? Can't you put it off another two months?"

He appeared puzzled. "But why should I? Things are getting hotter in Spain and I want to get over and get my stuff before it is too late. Two months from now it may be."

Daphne got off his lap and walked over to a table. She fingered the petals of the white blossoms.

"Larry, don't you think it would be better if you went alone? Then, when you've got everything . . . I mean your material, we could . . . could have a real wedding and a honeymoon."

Silence. Perplexed silence.

"Don't you want to go, Daphne?"

Very quickly she said, "Of course I do but . . . but . . ."

"Are you going to give me any more of that line about my responsibilities and not being able to afford a wife?"

"Oh, no," she said and took two of the flowers from the bowl. She studied the effect carefully.

"Can you give me any good reason why you don't want to go?"

"No," she said. "Only . . ."

Silence. Hurt silence.

* * *

She put the flowers back in the bowl. "Larry, please don't ask me why, only please don't ask me to marry you before you go. I'll marry you later if you still want me to."

"Daphne!"

She couldn't answer that cry. She knew if she did she'd tell him her real reason and she didn't want him to know that. She didn't want him to know that she had to have that money before she could marry him. Better for him to wait a little while without knowing.

"Yes, Larry," she said after a while.

"Don't you want to tell me why you want me to wait?"

"Well," she said brightly, "You know my job . . . that is, you know how hard I've been working on the Georgian account?"

He didn't say anything.

"Larry, my campaign has been approved. That is, the one suggesting the tour across the country. Now, they seem to feel that I know more about it than anyone else and so they want me to manage it. That means that I will have to go."

"I see," he said tonelessly. "You can't, of course, let your agency down."

If Daphne's nerves hadn't been on edge she would have understood his sarcasm. As it was, she said, "There is that point. After all, I do owe my company something. It has supported me, and Jennifer, for six years now. And I am responsible for the success of that account. I can't very well let them down."

Larry stood up, picked up his hat. Something inside Daphne cried out, don't let him go. Tell him that you aren't what you are trying to make yourself out to be. And something else inside her said, he should understand you, his love should be big enough to accept what you say, he should know you are not selfish.

"Well, I guess I should have known what you've been trying to tell me for the last three months, Daphne. You haven't ever given me a reason for not accepting me, have you?"

She stood there calmly enough while her heart rocked.

"It was stupid of me not to have seen that you cared more for your job. I wish you success. I hope its a great trip. Are you still going to make it?"

For one minute she looked back at him but he didn't know her eyes were pleading with him to tell her that he had to know why. He didn't.

"Yes," she said. "I've got to do it."

"Then I guess it's goodby." Without another word to her he went out the door.

Daphne didn't cry. She went into her bedroom and began emptying the drawers of her dresser. She piled her lingerie in neat little bundles. She washed her collars and cuffs and packed the things she thought she'd need on her trip. She straightened out her check book and polished the set of silver bowls. And all the time she was saying, all lovers have quarrels. Larry will telephone me tonight and we'll both break down and he will understand and it will be all right.

But Larry didn't call that night. Or the next day. Or any of the days that followed until it was time for Daphne to leave.

Larry had meant it when he said goodby.

Daphne wrote and tore up a score of notes. If he loved her, he would love her when next they met.

A month later, Anne Cockrell wrote to her at Detroit.

". . . I met Larry today," she wrote. "Just spoke to him for a moment. Has anything happened between you two? I asked him if he was looking so wan because you were so far away and he said it was nothing but disappointment. Not being able to go to Spain, he felt that the war was a personal injury. I congratulated him. Things are bad over there, aren't they? By the way, you're a poor correspondent. Even Larry couldn't tell me any news of you . . ."

Announcements To Be Mailed Today

Announcements will be mailed today to 740 owners of beauty shops of West Texas and New Mexico from the chamber of commerce here inviting them to attend the fifth annual West Texas and New Mexico Trade Show to be held in the Lubbock and Hilton hotels March 29, 30, and 31.

Invitations already have been sent to shop owners and operators by Russell Morrison company, sponsor of the event.

Miss La Vada Isbell, hair dresser of Fort Worth, and Paul Compan, usually known as Paul of Hollywood, will lecture and give demonstrations during the three-day show. Compan will give demonstrations twice daily. Operators and owners wishing to attend classes are asked to make reservations early.

Complete arrangements of the program will be announced later, directors of the event said.

MAN ELECTROCUTED

BEAUMONT, March 20. (AP)—Walter Klenk, 28, was electrocuted here today when his hand came in contact with a high voltage wire in a restaurant.

Authorities said the victim, whose home was given as Corpus Christi, was working in the restaurant in return for a meal.

The News Behind The News

WASHINGTON
By Ray Tucker

IN AN unguarded moment House Democrats warned President Roosevelt that their secret sympathies, no matter how they may vote if he forces the issue, are enlisted against his streamlined government reorganization plan.

The new Guffey Coal Control bill, which was slipped through the lower chamber without a roll call, strikes directly at the heart of F.D.R.'s program for centralization of authority. It sets up a seven-man commission that runs counter to his plea for small, closely-knit, independent agencies. Only two other agencies have larger personnel—the Interstate Commerce commission and the Federal Communications commission—and both bodies have frequently incurred presidential disfavor for their inability to get things done speedily. I.C.C. delays helped to precipitate Mr. Roosevelt's request for closer White House control over independent commissions.

The revamped measure also ignores the President's demand that civil service be extended throughout all governmental annexes. All the fat jobs will be at the mercy of the patronage-mongers. The boys behind the bill hope that Mr. Roosevelt will take the hint and not press his own scheme.

REVISED: Foxy "Uncle Dan" Roper has quietly scored two notable triumphs over his cabinet rival, the redoubtable Cordell Hull, while the latter was so deep in world problems that he couldn't fight back.

First Mr. Roper obtained a thorough-going revision of the famous "coordinating agreement" under which he couldn't write to one of his foreign commercial attaches without State department handling and censorship of his letter. Hereafter an American manufacturer's request for a report on the Hungarian market for hairpins will be routed directly to Mr. Roper's emissary at Budapest. It will go through State department channels only when diplomatic questions are involved.

Mr. Roper has also broken through the wall of secrecy formerly surrounding negotiation of reciprocal tariff agreements. American manufacturers have repeatedly complained to the Secretary of Commerce that they first learned of agreements affecting their interests from newspaper headlines. Now they can appear and present their viewpoints and statistics. Important fact is that they can run to their Congressmen and newspapers and turn on the light—or heat—in the thick of the palaver.

ENCORE: These incidents explain why President Roosevelt retains the mild but persistent optimist from South Carolina in the face of internal rows and faulty management within the Department of Commerce. "Uncle Dan" performs tradesmen's tricks which temper the "Big Boys" animosity towards the New Deal.

Sometimes, however, the administration's salesman grows too expansive, claims too much, takes in too much territory. Recently he shepherded a delegation of business men to the White House, and from his lips there rolled round words setting forth the love and admiration which these minor "economic royalists" felt for F.D.R. Stuffing the strange document in his pocket, the Secretary of Commerce concluded: "And may I say, Mister President, that this statement is representative of thought in the business community."

The President's eyes twinkled and a smile amused itself by playing around his lips. He leaned across the desk and said softly: "Tell me another one, Dan." Funny part of it is that the irrepressible "Dan" will "tell another one" some day soon.

OSTRACIZED: Capitol Hill politicos still wabbly on the court issue are wrinkling their statesmanlike brows over the strange case of Senator Tydings of Maryland. His cloakroom account of how the New Dealers hazed him has aroused suspicion that Democratic bolters have marked for slaughter.

At the request of the Democratic National committee, Mr. Tydings undertook the assignment of delivering a "victory dinner" speech at Raleigh, N. C.—a state whose two Senators oppose F.D.R. on the judicial reform. Mr. Tydings gave what he thought was an old-fashioned party talk, although he did insert a few words about "dictators" and regimentation." Next day an extremely pro-Roosevelt editor denounced the Maryland man for disloyalty to the President. Harold Ickes, a Republican, was rushed to Raleigh as clean-up man, and he did. He proclaimed that HE had finally "brought glad tidings."

That wasn't all. Few days later the hitherto non-commital Senator Radcliffe of Maryland (and Mr. Roosevelt's former insurance employer) ordered the Annapolis legislature to swing behind the White House. It did, leaving Mr. Tydings out on a lonely, judicial limb. He runs next year—and last fall the Free State rolled up a record-breaking majority for the President.

ENDORSED: Discoverer of C. A. Dykstra—Glenn Frank's successor at the University of Wisconsin—was none other than Franklin D. Roosevelt. Talking with friends, the President soared into superlatives in praising the Cincinnati city manager's executive genius.

"I talked with him every night during the floods," said Mr. Roosevelt. "I would say: 'Now, you have two minutes to describe the situation in Cincinnati.' And then, without a wasted word, he would snap out details on food supplies, housing facilities, law enforcement, the water's rise or fall, the city's prospective needs. When I put down the phone, I knew as much as if he had submitted a 10,000-word report. He's a wonder."

NEW YORK
By James McMullin

HIGH industrial and financial sources are working behind the scenes to engineer a showdown with the administration on the illegality of the sit-down strike. It is known that the White House has expressed strong private disapproval of the technique as an indefensible invasion of fundamental property rights. Attorney General Homer Cummings and Secretary of Commerce Dan Roper have echoed this attitude publicly. But that doesn't satisfy the business leaders. Their aim is to get the President on record personally.

Relief via the courts is slow. It can also be unpleasantly messy if the sit-downers are firm in their resistance. Condemnation of the technique by "labor's best friend" would be a much more effective weapon, and it would apply nationally as against the limitations of local injunctions.

Mr. Roosevelt, however, shies away from siding openly with capital against labor even in a matter where he is reported to feel that labor is in the wrong. Business insiders confide that the most really hope for is presidential sponsorship of legislation which would make labor unions legally responsible for their actions and give labor contracts a two-way enforcement status. Prospects along this line are promising, and such an outcome would be generally satisfactory to industrialists. They figure that the law could be phrased in such a way as to outlaw sit-downs. Watch for developments along this line.

TEST: A good many labor officials themselves have qualms about the legal status of sit-down strikes, particularly since the Chrysler court order. This applies to Committee for Industrial Organization chiefs as well as to A. F. of L. leaders. It is feared that the spreading use of questionable tactics is gradually alienating public sympathy, on which in the last analysis union progress largely depends.

It is significant that John Lewis maintains a discreet silence on the subject. It is reasonable to deduce that he would jump to the defense of the sit-down technique if he thought it could be defended successfully. Instead he leaves attempts at justification to subordinates, such as Homer Martin of the United Automobile Workers. He doesn't intend to be caught out on a limb.

The mounting uneasiness about sit-downs in high labor circles should help promote some solution of the problem. Only trouble is that rank-and-file strikers are delighted with the innovation and it may be very difficult for their own leaders to unsell them on it. A severe test of union discipline is in the making.

John's Picture Of The Crucifixion

Text: John 19: 4-9, 14-18, 25-30

International Uniform Sunday School Lesson For March 21

By Wm. E. Gilroy, D. D., Editor Of Advance

THE crucifixion of Jesus is not unique in history, in the fact or manner of His death. Other men have been put to death, and multitudes have experienced the cruel death of the cross. Two men, in fact, were crucified with Jesus, one on His right hand, and one on the left.

Nor does the uniqueness of the crucifixion of Jesus lie entirely in His innocence. Other men, innocent of charges against them, have been executed.

What does make the crucifixion of Jesus unique and significant as the most tragic and challenging event of all history is the purpose of His death, the yielding of Himself to die in fulfillment of a mission of love and redemption.

It was the supreme goodness of Jesus, revealing in His earthly life the divinity of a God of love, and revealing in His death the fullness of the divine sacrifice that men might know the richness of grace, and be drawn toward God's redeeming love.

COULD Jesus have avoided the cross? We cannot tell. There was a point in His life where the temptation to seek avoiding it was almost overwhelming. At the beginning of His ministry, there were temptations to turn from His divine mission to some scheme of earthly conquest or vain glory. The devil had lured Him with a vision of all the kingdoms of the world and the power that He might exercise over them.

At a later stage, there must have been an occasional temptation to lead a popular movement of revolt, such as many Jews wanted. And then, during the hour in the garden of Gethsemane, there came the earnest, agonizing prayer that, if it were possible, the cup might pass.

It was too late. The hour of destiny had come, but it did not find an unwilling victim. Deeply in that spiritual conflict Jesus had triumphed.

In His anguish, He had said, "Nevertheless, not as I will, but as Thou wilt." The words that some had mockingly said of Him as He hung on the cross, "He saved others, Himself He cannot save," were literally true. It was the last supreme sacrifice of love and devotion to the truth.

FOR us the spiritual reality of the crucifixion depends to some extent upon the vividness with which we are able to reproduce the scene. In our contemplation of the suffering victims on the crosses, the Master and the two thieves, we perhaps are apt to forget that, standing by the cross among other women, was His mother.

Can we think of what that means? Mary, in the fullness and richness of her love, had followed her son even to the last agony. What deep and striking troubles she had experienced since the days when wise men had come honoring her newborn babe, and she had "pondered all these things, and kept them in her heart."

But motherly devotion had stood the test of the years, and there could hardly have been an anguish of the cross deeper than the anguish of the mother who stood by her suffering son.

There is tenderness and beauty in the thought of Jesus for His mother as He turned to John and said, "Woman, behold thy son."

The most human picture of the crucifixion is this in John's Gospel, and the significance of the divine event, the tragedy of glory, is made all the more real in its human setting.

TARZAN AND THE MAYAN GODDESS, No. 54

By Edgar Rice Burroughs

As the hostile arrows were fixed upon him, Tarzan lifted his hand in a gesture so commanding, so masterful, that the archers withheld their fire. After all, a slight delay was not important. Then the ape-man turned to Tohua. "Ask them why they would kill me."

The Indian chieftain answered: "Because you have conquered our god, the Great Destroyer!" "Then," said Tarzan, "I am mightier than he. You should honor me, not seek to kill me. I, too, am a destroyer, but I destroy only those who harm me or my friends."

"He is one of the great Chanes," cried Ula Dale, who was familiar with Mayan folklore; "one of the great white chiefs who led your people in ancient times." "Chanes!" the Indians shouted, and bowed down before him. "I'll explain later," Ula whispered to Tarzan.

George was bewildered, but at least all was well now. He hastened to retrieve his abandoned talisman. "Excuse me, rabbit's foot," he beseeched; "you worked good after all." Tarzan smiled grimly. "I wish I were sure your charm would save us from the perils ahead!"

WALL STREET REPORT

NEW YORK, March 19. (AP)—Stocks did their best to rally in today's market but aside from rails and a few specialties most were unable to get going on the upside.
Trading contingents were still under the influence of diverse opinions regarding business boom warnings and continued unsettlement in the ranks of labor.
Carriers gave a brief but rather buoyant demonstration when the interstate commerce commission decided to maintain emergency rates on 19 commodities and last week's car loadings total disclosed a more than seasonal upturn.
Steels had their moment in the buying limelight, but they fell back at the finish.
The Associated Press average of 60 issues was unchanged at 72.1.

Cotton

NEW ORLEANS REPORT

NEW ORLEANS, March 19. (AP)—A reaction from recent high levels carried cotton off a dollar a bale today.
The market was under pressure for the entire session, and aside from a temporary uptrend at mid-day, the tendency was definitely lower.
Both old and new crops were sold freely, bringing the May option down to 13.84, July to 13.69, Oct. to 13.30 and Jan. to 13.22.
Spot cotton lost 22 points, dropping middling to 14.26 at New Orleans.
Sentiment was less bullish than it had been for nearly a month, a development attributed in many quarters to Washington warnings against expectations of higher cotton prices. Liverpool sold off on administration advices relative to the American crop, and this lower tone carried over into the opening at New Orleans.
Long liquidation and profit taking sales were the main selling factors, but when it developed that buying orders were scarce the market slipped off abruptly.
Final prices in most instances were the low levels of the day.

NEW YORK REPORT

NEW YORK, March 19. (AP)—Cotton reacted about $1.00 a bale today under foreign selling and liquidation. July eased from 13.90@13.78 and closed at 13.79 with final prices 19 to 23 points lower.
The market opened 11 to 16 points lower in response to easier Liverpool cables and declines at Alexandria and Bombay. Foreign selling on narrower differences was more active.
Stop orders were uncovered as May declined below the 14-cent level. The market encountered trade buying and covering on declines but there was little follow-up to the demand and renewed selling developed on partial rallies. Final prices were at the lows for the day.
Today's decline carried the market 49 to 59 points under the highs of Wednesday. More or less nervousness continued over prospects for larger increases in cotton acreage this spring than previously expected.
Exports today 18,460, making a total of 4,469,550 for the season thus far. Port receipts 19,171. U. S. port stocks 1,961,386.

CHICAGO REPORT

CHICAGO, March 19. (AP)—In a steep downward plunge of prices, accelerated by many stop loss selling orders, wheat dropped 3¼ cents a bushel, maximum today.
Kansas and Nebraska reports of heavy snowfalls, suggestive of big domestic winter wheat crop, were largely responsible, together with dearth of export demand for Canadian wheat, as well as an official denial that Argentina is planning to restrict heat exports.
A striking contrast after the day's wheat trading had ended was that the United States government's estimates of probable acreage to be planted this year were looked upon as bullish by some observers. The reason given was that this year's intentions on spring wheat other than durum were almost one million acres under intentions of a year ago, and on durum wheat 600,000 acres less.
At the close Chicago wheat futures were 2½ to 3¼ cents under yesterday's finish. May $1.36⅛@1.36¼, July $1.21⅝@1.21⅞, Sept $1.19⅝@1.19½, corn unchanged to 1 cent lower, May $1.09⅛@1.09¾, July $1.05⅛@1.05⅝, Sept 1.00⅝@1.00¾, oats ⅛ to 1¼ off, May 46½, and rye showing 1⅞ to 1⅞ setback, May $1.08⅜. Provisions results were 10 to 15 cents lower.

FORT WORTH REPORT

FORT WORTH, March 19. (AP)—Demand for grain was limited at Fort Worth today. Estimated receipts were wheat 18 cars, corn 3, oats 1, sorghums 1, and cane seed 1.

Motorists Failing To Cooperate With Planning Survey

Car owners of 12,925 licensed vehicles in Lubbock county have returned to the Highway Planning Survey only 914 postcards asking for information on which highway programs will be based.
The cards, which are self-addressed and require no postage, were handed to car owners when they paid their 1937 automobile license fees at the office of Hurley Carpenter, county tax assessor and collector.
Information being collected will be used by the highway department and the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads in planning for future construction and maintenance of roads and highways. Designation of federal funds for improving the secondary road system of Texas will also be based upon survey returns.
By returning the cards car owners may aid in securing better roads and more appropriations for Lubbock county and Texas.

COMPANY MAY REGISTER

NEW YORK, March 19. (AP) — American Light and Traction Co., a sub-holding company of the United Light and Power system, may register with the Securities & Exchange commission under the public utility holding company act, Charles S. McCain, president, indicated today.
American Light & Traction, whose subsidiaries serve Michigan, Wisconsin and Texas, reported 1936 net income of $5,450,125 after undistributed profits tax equivalent to $1.67 a common share. This compares with $4,503,524 or $1.34 in 1935.

Red Haired Newsboy Grows Up And In Center Of Fight For Green Millions; Used To Stare Wide-Eyed At His Car

WASHINGTON, March 19. (Special)—When, near the turn of the century, a freckled, red-haired newsboy watched with open-mouthed wonder the noisy progress of a "Stevens-Duryea" motor car which usually halted in front of an imposing "mansion" at Commerce and Harwood Streets in Dallas, Texas, nobody dreamed that three states would one day fight over a $10,000,000 interest in the driver of that car.
The driver was E. H. R. Green, son of the fabulous Hetty Green. He had lately been made a colonel on Governor O. B. Colquitt's staff; in Dallas and in Kaufman counties, he was a real figure. His special car on his own short-line railroad—part of the top of that car was glass—was the pride of the countryside.

Newsboy Bill McCraw

The newsboy was named Bill McCraw. Today McCraw is attorney general of Texas, and the author of a suit without legal precedent in which he seeks to have the U. S. Supreme court declare that Green was a resident of Texas, for tax purposes, when he died. If the court takes jurisdiction of that case as McCraw has urged; and if the court later determines that Green was domiciled in Texas when he died, that state will collect inheritance taxes estimated at more than $10,000,000.
When the attorney general of Texas and his assistant, Lewellyn Duke, presented their arguments to the Supreme court, they were allowed to tell the court none of the facts upon which Texas bases her claim concerning Green's legal domicile. The submission was confined to the strictly non-factual argument that the court should intervene to prevent an interminable litigation between Texas, New York, Massachusetts and Florida over inheritance taxes. Florida sided with Texas in the arguments.

Remembers Car Better

McCraw remembers Green's automobile much better than he recalls the Colonel himself.
"I passed by Green's house just about every day, mainly to catch a glimpse of one of those cars," he recalled. "It was a three-story house and certainly looked like a mansion to me then; today we probably would call it a three-story apartment house. It was right next to what is now the city hall, and on the corner was a church.
"Green was supposed to have had the first motor car in Dallas, and I'm hazy on what make it was; but I distinctly remember that he owned a Pope-Toledo at one time, and a Stevens-Duryear, and a Renault. To a kid peddling papers, they were pretty swellelegant, and worth going out of the way to see."

Never Believed Stories

The young newsboy never did believe the tales told to the effect that Col. Green had but one leg. So naturally did Green handle the artificial leg that it was hardly discernible, as McCraw recalls.
The loss, according to legend, resulted from an accident in early childhood, a few years before his mother, the incredible Hetty Green, sent her son to Texas to take a minor job on the shortline railroad in North Texas with which he is so definitely associated in the state.
His salary on that job, according to stories generally accepted in Texas, was so infinitesimal that workers on the line helped him along financially.

Was Astute Business Man

But when Col. Green came into his mother's fortune, he did not dissipate it. "He liked to spend money, all right; but he liked to make it, too. He enlarged what Hetty left him, and our researches indicated that he was an astute business man, always," McCraw declared.
To the day he died, Col. Green kept a room at Terrell, Texas. A few months before his death, in a letter to Garland Adair, who was then in charge of the sale of Texas Centennial coins, he protested that a certificate sent him by Adair did not show Terrell as his home. "I have never changed my legal address from Terrell," he wrote Adair.

Case Is Unique

In one respect the case is unique: No precedent could be found for originating a case in the Supreme court under the inheritance tax laws. In the first place, the inheritance tax law is comparatively new, and certainly the only precedents would be in this country, not in old English law. The cases of this country were combed with a fine-tooth comb without avail.
It is rare in that seldom has the Supreme court been asked to render a declaratory judgment. The judgment asked by Texas is that the court declare, for inheritance tax purposes only, that the domicile of Green at the time of his death was Texas.
However, that is not the precise question argued Monday and Tuesday. First the court must consent to take jurisdiction. Opposing the Texas plan were the States of New York and Massachusetts, which also seek the inheritance taxes. Siding with the Texans was the State of Florida. The other two defendants, the widow and sister, respectively of the deceased, have as their principal interest that the court does not take jurisdiction for the purpose of determining succession to the estate, for which they are rivals.
McCraw pointed out to the court that to allow Massachusetts and New York to seize the physical assets of the estate, as they are attempting to do, would be a revision to an "obsolete and barbarous practice" under which the local property of an alien could be seized by the soverign in whose territory he died.
"If such taxation is imposed by New York, where he died, and New York is not the true domicile, the effect will be to set up between the States the obsolete and barbarous practice which all civilized nations have denounced by treaty," said McCraw.

Improvement Of Staple Said Vital Need For Texas Cotton

GALVESTON, March 19. (AP) — Most of the new cotton countries are producing staple superior to that in Texas, Harmon Whittington, Houston, told the Texas Cotton association here today. Whitington, president of the association, said Texas must produce a quality product to meet foreign competition.
Johann Georg Lahner, a butcher of Frankfurt, Germany, invented the "hot dog" or frankfurter, in 1805. The name is derived from the town.

Area's Health Is Commended

L. M. Bracy Of State Department Of Health Says "West Texas Is A Healthy Place In Which To Live"

"West Texas is a healthy place in which to live."
That statement, made by L. E. Bracy of the state health department, was substantiated by figures showing that illness and mortality rates in West Texas are lower than in East Texas and South Texas.
"In the 128 east and south Texas counties the death rate for 1936 was 11.6 deaths per 1,000 population. In the 126 West Texas counties this rate was only 10. In other words, among your people there were 160 less deaths per 100,000 than in East and South Texas."

Nature Protects People

"Your almost 365 days of sunshine each year, your altitude, your sparsely settled districts, your pure air, make West Texas a splendid place to live, for nature has protected your people from disease," Bracy told the West Texas County Judges and Commissioners association Friday afternoon at the Hilton hotel.
"In 1936, of the 478 Texas deaths from malaria, only 26 occurred in your counties, with 12 of those in Dallas county alone. The malarial death rate for West Texas was last year only 1.1 per 100,000 as compared with 11.4 in the rest of the state."

Should Notice Malaria

With the increased population and with an ever increasing tide of immigration from across the Rio Grande, West Texas should take notice of shifting of the public health problem, malaria, however, he said. West Texas now includes only 13 per cent of negroes and 23 per cent of Mexicans, he said.
The 126 West Texas counties cover 147,536 square miles, or 56 per cent of the state's total area with 2,179,150 people or only 37 per cent of the state's population, he said.
"With 36 per cent of the state's population, West Texas had in 1936, 24 per cent of the total mortality from typhoid fever.

Few Pellagra Deaths

"Only 20% of the 657 pellagra deaths in Texas in 1936 occurred in West Texas.
"In truth West Texas is a good place to live, for of the baby deaths, only 23 per cent of the state's total was in your counties, and your rate was only 17.9 while the other counties showed a rate of 32.8."
Tuberculosis rate in West Texas for 1936 approximated 54.6, and the rate for the other 128 counties was near 76. "Tubercular patients with death staring them in the face at home flocked to West Texas," the nation knowing for more than 50 years that West Texas is a good place to live, he said.

Judge E. L. Pitts To Address Boys

Months of careful study of juvenile problems and judicial disposition will become articulate at 9:30 o'clock Sunday morning, when Judge E. L. Pitts of 99th district court addresses boys of high and junior high school age at a rally day service in the annex of the First Christian church.
Messenger boys and others within the age limit indicated are being asked to attend. One teleghaph company plans to release as many of its boys as possible so they can attend the services.
The address will be brief, but will include the findings of Judge Pitts as a student and an advisor of juveniles.

State Giving Aid To School

Governor Allred Offers Every Possible Assistance To East Texas Town Visited Thursday By Grim Disaster

AUSTIN, Mar. 19. (AP)—Officials of the state government, shocked at the horrible New London catastrophe, pooled efforts today to aid the little East Texas community where death had written one of the darkest chapters in Texas' history.

After declaring martial law and sending 200 national guardsmen to assist in maintaining order and furthering relief work, Governor James V. Allred planned conferences with other governmental chiefs looking toward additional help.

Probe Under Way

A military investigation into the cause of the disaster already was under way, another was promised by the state railroad commission, gas and oil laws administrator, and still others were looming, by the fire insurance department and possibly by the legislature, now in session.

Governor Allred's proclamation said "great confusion and congestion" existed and the local officers were unable properly to assist in removing bodies from the building.

Assistant Adjutant General Gaston S. Howard was ordered to assume supreme command of the troops.

Troops Called Out

National guard units called out were troop F, 124th cavalry, at Tyler, company A, 144th infantry, at Longview, and the headquarters company of the 72nd brigade, and battery F, of the 132nd field artillery at Marshall.

At the same time, the governor appealed for the public to stay away, asserting persons with no business there would be turned back by the troops.

The governor directed Major Howard and Edward Clark, secretary of state and an officer in the national guard, to set up a military court of inquiry and investigate all phases of the disaster without delay.

Two fingerprint experts from the state bureau of identification were sent in the hope of aiding in identifying the bodies.

The state health department announced available departmental doctors and nurses in the area were sent.

Yoakum Seeks New Highway

Route From Morton To Plains To Connect With Highway 51 Is Asked By Delegation To Session In City

Yoakum county officials were here Friday to contract state highway department officials and others about a road from Morton to Plains and thence south to connect with highway 51 between Seagraves and Semi.

It is proposed to secure additional right of way on a county road north from Plains that connects with Morton, now making it a standard width thoroughfare. The county has begun work on a county road from Plains to the Bennett ranch, where two oil wells are now located. It is extended south to the Gaines county line.

Seek Route West

Seagraves had been working on a road west from town to the northern part of Gaines county. It would give Plains residents and Yoakum county farmers better connection with Seagraves.

At the same time, oil field business from south of Seminole would have closer connections with operations in Yoakum and Cochran counties. There are two locations starting in Yoakum besides two wells and one in Cochran besides the Duggan producer to be served by the proposed road.

It is also planned to secure state approval and later designation of the highway to connect with Muleshoe Bailey county. Part of the work between Muleshoe and Morton has been started.

JUDGE IMPOSES SENTENCES

KANSAS CITY, March 19. (AP)—Judge Albert L. Reeves imposed sentences ranging from three months in jail to three years in a federal reformatory today on six persons convicted Monday in the third vote fraud conspiracy case here.

Two women who pleaded no defense were placed on one year's probation.

Weight of letters handled by the postal service in the 1936 fiscal year averaged slightly over four-tenths of an ounce.

Plains Enjoying A Regular Growth

Plains, Yoakum county seat, is growing some and has many prospective residents and business men seeking a location, said W. J. Hale editor of the Yoakum County Review yesterday afternoon.

The town has a regular population of about 150, he said. Some new buildings have been erected in recent months. Business is growing and oil development in the near future will greatly enhance prospects, he added.

"Many people come and look around for a location," Mr. Hale added. "They want to get in on the ground floor. All of the farms in the county are rented and there has been but little new land broken out, as I have seen."

Mr. Hale bought the paper last summer from Mrs. B. P. Moreland. He formerly owned the Ropes Plainsman, selling to the Richards twins of Anton.

EATS, SLEEPS GOOD STRENGTH RETURNS

Awful Rheumatic Pains Eliminated; Mrs. Terrell Feels New Gly-Cas Has Given Her A New Lease On Life; Entire System Regulated

"Too much praise cannot be given a medicine with the merit of this new Gly-Cas," said Mrs. Rosa Terrell, 325 South 21st St., Baton Rouge, La. "I cannot recall the number of years my stomach had caused me suffering. Attacks of indigestion followed each meal I ate. I would bloat until I could hardly get my breath, and I lost weight, became weak, had no strength and my resistance was so low I was sick continually. Rheumatism soon developed settling in my arms causing such pain I could hardly endure them. I got little sleep night and could scarcely get about to do my work. I had been met with such repeated failure that it was only with reluctance that I gave Gly-Cas a trial—but I soon found it was, indeed different."

"Gly-Cas removed the poisons from my system almost at once," she continued. "Soon I was eating the foods I had been denied for years, without any ill effects afterwards too. Those attacks of indigestion and bloating have been entirely eliminated. Every ache and pain of rheumatism has been driven from my system, sleep good, new strength and energy has been restored and I have really been given a new lease on life. Gly-Cas and Gly-Cas alone brought about this remarkable change in my condition."

Gly-Cas is sold by Mark Halsey Drug Store, 1219 Broadway, and by all leading drug stores in surrounding towns. (Adv.)

Oratorio Is To Be Heard Over Radio Tuesday Evening

Lubbock and South Plains residents this year may hear one of the outstanding local music events of the year while sitting at home, by way of radio.

The College chorus, under the direction of Julian Paul Blitz, will broadcast Dubois' oratorio, "The Seven Last Words of Christ" Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock over station KFYO.

As the broadcast is to take place in the Presbyterian church, space forbids invitation to the general public. Dr. Blitz is particularly anxious for the oratorio to be heard over the radio. All out of town students whose homes are within hearing distance of KFYO have written home urging their families to hear the broadcast and numerous radio parties will be held in Lubbock.

One hundred and fifty-three students compose the College chorus. This year the solo parts have been restricted to students of the voice department at Texas Tech. Miss Christia Cowan, soprano, and Messrs. Gordon Gaines, baritone, and Elton Plowman, tenor, will sing the featured parts.

FEED ENDANGERED

AMHERST, March 19. (Special)—Remainder of the feed crop of many farmers who have stored feed for summer and next fall has been endangered by wild ducks which have come into this section of Lamb county in huge numbers.

Scores of farmers have reported the wild game is eating up their stacked and ricked feed. In a few hours several hundred ducks can clean out a large sized rick.

Nearly every lake in the county has its quota of ducks.

Boy Scout Campaign Is Opened In Plainview; Officers Named

PLAINVIEW, March 19. (Special)—The north central district of the South Plains Boy Scout council held its sustaining club drive Thursday. Earl M. McClure of Lubbock is scout executive.
