Syria warned about shooting at U.S. jets

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is telling Syria it faces almost certain retaliation if Syrian gunners continue shooting at American aircraft flying reconnaissance patrols over Lebanon.

Robert McFarlane, President Reagan's national security adviser, said Sunday that while a war with Syria is unlikely, Damascus should take a "sober view" of the U.S. commitment in Lebanon. He cited the invasion of Grenada as an example of U.S. determination to protect American lives.

McFarlane also suggested that the administration might support an invasion by other Central American countries against the Sandinista regime in Nicaragua if they decide on such an action. He said, "That's right," when told he seemed to be leaving the question open.

Syrian gunners fired unsuccessfully at U.S. jets on reconnaissance missions over Lebanon on two successive days last week. McFarlane, who appeared on the CBS-TV program "Face the Nation," said U.S. forces cannot "be attacked with impunity" anywhere.

"The United States has made clear recently in other contexts, in the Caribbean, that we take very seriously threats to American lives," he said. "I think that the United States by demonstrating that, and if need be in the future, will make very clear that this simply cannot become a matter of policy, whether it is Syria or some other country."

Two Navy F-14 fighters and two crew members were lost at sea over the Mediterranean last week but the Pentagon says the planes had not been the target of hostile fire. Both planes were from the aircraft carrier John F. Kennedy. One crashed Tuesday with a loss of both crew members; the other crashed Friday but both crew members were rescued.

The Pentagon said Sunday neither plane was on a reconnaissance mission and both crashes were being investigated.

McFarlane also said speculation that El Salvador, Guatemala, Panama and Honduras are planning a joint invasion of Nicaragua "is a little overdrawn...it isn't quite that dramatic at this point."

The New York Times reported last week that the military leaders of the four countries, which make up an organization called the Central American Defense Council, met late last month in Honduras to consider the legality of a joint military action.

But McFarlane said their "talks with each other are devoted to how they can be supportive of one another and how they can do the tactical kind of things that enable countries militarily to cooperate with one another."

"Yes, we support them," he said in response to a question. "Yes, we support what it takes to assure that independence (of the four nations) in the future. To the extent that Nicaragua exports revolution, tries to subvert this process, we oppose that. How that support is expressed under given circumstances, I'd rather wait until we get those circumstances."

Politicians discuss detention

ST. GEORGE'S, Grenada (AP) — Two Grenadian politicians imprisoned by Prime Minister Maurice Bishop say they spent most of their time locked in their cells, passing the days by talking to walls and writing poems on toilet paper.

■ OAS ministers discuss Grenada, Page 2A

Lloyd Noel, 48, a former attorney general and friend of Bishop, spent 2½ years in a 6-by-9 foot cell, 22 hours a day, until freed from Richmond Hill Prison on Oct. 26, the day after the U.S.-led invasion of the Caribbean island.

"The only way I could see the sun was through 34 tiny holes at the top of my cell. I counted them every day ," Noel said in an interview after his release.

Winston Whyte, 39, said he spent 4 years, 11 days at Fort Fredrick, an army installation on Richmond Hill where several dozen political prisoners were held. He said he was beaten during the first three weeks of confinement and that he knew of several people who were tortured.

At age 24, Whyte was a minister in Sir Eric Gairy's government, which was overthrown by Bishop in March 1979. Later he broke with Gairy, formed the relatively conservative People's Action Liberation Movement and was imprisoned six months after Bishop's Marxist government took power.

Bishop, who was killed during a Oct. 19 military coup by more radical Marxists, had defended the jailing of his opponents by saying it was more humane than killing them — which he said was the only other alternative for a revolutionary government.

Reagans return from Asia trip

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, declaring "it's great to be home," ended his Asian tour today and said it brought stronger partnerships and better prospects for a more secure peace.

■ North Korea calls tour 'criminal trip'

Reagan returned to the United States after leaving behind a renewed commitment to South Korea's security and a public reminder by Secretary of State George Shultz that the threat from communist North Korea must be kept in mind when assessing progress in human rights to the south.

Air Force One also carried two ailing Korean youngsters from poor families to the United States for heart surgery in New York. The children roamed about the airplane, giggling at tape recordings of their singing voices, and sitting on Nancy Reagan's lap.

In a statement prepared for delivery at a White House welcoming ceremony upon his return from the 15,650-mile, 6½-day journey, Reagan said that in Japan, an agenda for progress on a variety of economic and security issues was set, with plans made to deal with trade barriers, auto industry problems and investment.

In Seoul, he said, "I reaffirmed to the Korean people America's commitment to their peace and freedom. And I encouraged them to develop further their democracy." This was a reference to the president's comments on human rights issues in several speeches.

Tapeworm causes cyst to form on man's brain

Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO — The seizure blasted Thor Kauffman's brain about 5 a.m. one morning last month. His body vibrated out of bed, with his head smashing into the nightstand as he thrashed to the floor.

Several minutes elapsed before the seizure stopped, leaving the 23-year-old feeling like "someone had hit me in the head with a baseball bat."

Angela Kauffman, 22, called paramedics for her husband, who was rushed from their North Park home to Kaiser Foundation Hospital in San Diego.

Doctors there soon made the diagnosis: Kauffman had in his brain a golf ball-size cyst caused by the larva of a giant pork tapeworm.

Kauffman had fallen victim to a disease that is rare in the United States, but occasionally found in Mexico, where Kauffman was born and continues to visit.

Two days after it was discovered on Oct. 19, neurosurgeons removed the cyst from Kauffman's brain. Each day he is regaining more strength. The paralysis on his left side is almost gone. He is expected to make a full recovery and return soon to work as a furniture mover.

It isn't known when or where Kauffman picked up the tapeworm larva.

Doctors speculate he may have ingested infected pork or contaminated vegetables years ago when he lived in southern Mexico. Or he could have gotten the larva in Tijuana, where he had been buying his groceries for several months, and where he loved to eat pork at roadside stands.

However the infection occurred, it has frightened the Kauffmans, causing them to alter their eating habits.

Kauffman's plight is an indication of the insidious bugs one can get in other countries.

Many people are familiar with trichinosis, a disease contracted when people eat pork infected with tiny parasites and insufficiently cooked, causing muscle pains and fevers.

People can avoid problems with the tapeworm larva that struck Kauffman by cooking pork extensively before eating it, doctors say.

FDIC head will speak at breakfast

By JULIE FAUBEL
Business-Energy Writer

A breakfast meeting featuring Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. Chariman William Isaac will be Nov. 23 at 7:30 a.m. in The Midland Hilton, said Grant Billingsley, executive vice president of the Midland Chamber of Commerce.

The breakfast is open to the public; tickets will cost $8 and can be purchased at the chamber office, 109 N. Main St.

Isaac will be talking about the FDIC's current involvement in liquidating assets from the failed First National Bank of Midland. The FDIC was named receiver of the bank on Oct 14. As a result of that action, the FDIC assumed loans totaling more than $1 billion and will be responsible for liquidating any loans that RepublicBank First National Midland does not buy back.

Isaac's visit to Midland was prompted by concern among the area business community about the FDIC's liquidation procedures. Isaac was invited to Midland earlier this month by Sen. John Tower, R-Texas; Rep. Tom Loeffler, R-Hunt; and Rep. Kent Hance, D-Lubbock; in response to appeals from area businessmen.

Accompanying Isaac will be Loeffler and a representative from Tower's office.

Alan Whitney, spokesman for the FDIC in Washington, said last week the meeting would be informal and that Isaac would be interested in hearing comments from the community.

He explained the FDIC will try to work out acceptable payment schedules for loans they keep. In doing this, FDIC hopes the actions won't disrupt the community.

Since the collapse of First National, the FDIC has been involved with two area businesses. Most recent the FDIC closed Regency Motor Cars, the Rolls-Royce dealership, and confiscated its vehicles. Earlier this month the FDIC attempted to take posession of certain assets of Midland Home Lumber. In response, the lumber company sought protection under Chapter 11 of the Federal Bankruptcy Code to reorganize. The FDIC was then ordered to return the company's assets and Midland Home Lumber was allowed to reopen.

Midland, Odessa sales tax rebate checks increase from last month

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Midland, Odessa and other Texas cities received their sales tax rebate checks a week earlier than usual. But it didn't help the two West Texas cities overcome losses from the previous year.

Midland surpassed Odessa on the amount received. The Tall City's was written out for $914,080.64, which fell below the payment for the same time last year of $1,072,204.61. Odessa's check was for $860,543.72, compared to last year's payment of $994,500.48.

November's checks, however shot up from last month's payments. Midland received $383,867.37 while Odessa's check was for $409,931.43.

The November checks reflect sales made in September, also the last month in the reporting quarter. Some retail outlets don't report the sales tax until the last month of a quarter, thus the higher figure.

On a comparison of those quarterly months, Midland dropped below the previous figure. In August, the city received $977,000.

Payments for the year to date in both cities still fall short of last year's totals. Midland's checks figure up to $6,576,678.30, a 24.52 percent drop from last year's $8,713,513.97. Odessa's total this year of $6,648,584.05 is 29.12 percent below 1982's payments amounting to $9,380,705.87.

The city sales tax rebate is the 1 cent added by each municipality to the 4 cents charged by the state. The money is collected by the State Comptroller's Office and rebated monthly back to the cities.

The early checks were a result from a change in the deadline in reporting the amounts to the comptroller's office. Starting this month, all taxpayers will be required to file by the 20th of the month rather than by the last day.

"We're sending these checks early because 134,000 Texas taxpayers paid before the deadline," said Comptroller Bob Bullock. "This kind of cooperation among taxpayers is helping us avoid new and higher taxes. It's obvious this change will help local governments put these tax revenues to work faster in their cities."

The earlier deadline was set by the Legislature and should bring in $500 million more for the current state budget without a tax increase, according to a release from Bullock's office.

Investigation continues into derailment

MARSHALL (AP) — Investigators are hoping a shattered section of rail will reveal how five railroad cars on the Amtrak Eagle derailed deep in the East Texas woods, killing four women and injuring scores of other people.

National Transportation Safety Board workers said Sunday that a preliminary investigation of Saturday's accident — the second-worst in Amtrak's 12-year history — showed that the passenger cars derailed when they hit a separation in the track.

However, NTSB member Donald Engen said the broken section of rail will be sent to a Union Pacific laboratory in Omaha, Neb., for further tests and a final report may not be ready for four months.

NTSB spokesman Bob Buckhorn said the rail was broken in several places, causing the separation.

"The track breaks and the broken piece of rail comes up and is hit by the oncoming truck, which is the technical word for the set of four wheels," Buckhorn said. "You can say that the train derailed because of the break, but there's probably more to it. A train can pass over a break in the rail without derailing."

Engen said the shattered rail was the same section Missouri Pacific Railroad crews had been working on within two hours of the accident. After the repair crews finished, two freight trains had passed over the rails befoe the two-engine, nine-car Eagle, an Amtrak spokesman said.

On Sunday, torn pillows were strewn along the tracks and disposable coffee cups littered the ground near the accident site, but the only other sign of the accident was a Missouri Pacific railroad crew sitting by a campfire after replacing the 700 feet of mangled track.

Cars of the Amtrak Eagle lie on their sides after the train derailed near Marshall.

Buses carried 101 of the 145 passengers on board to Dallas and San Antonio following the accident. Workers unloaded baggage into a truck Sunday morning and the train was righted, put on repaired track and moved to a Marshall railyard where federal investigators sealed it off and began their examination.

Harvey Edwards, a Chicago art photographer who had been taking the train to Dallas, said it was not the sight of the mud-spattered, crumpled train that scared him, but rather the sounds he could still hear.

"When you remember the sounds — that's when it really gets to you," said Edwards. "It's the screams and the moans I can still hear."

"There were people crawling all over the top of the cars; electrical lines were all over the place; people were crying, people were in shock," said volunteer firefighter Randy Minatrea.

Officials said 24 people were admitted to three hospitals, and scores of others were treated for minor injuries and released.

The accident was Amtrak's worst since June 10, 1971, when 11 people were killed at Salem, Ill., said Cliff Black, a spokesman for the rail network in Washington. Amtrak was formed May 1, 1971.

A data recorder aboard the train, which was headed for San Antonio from Chicago, showed it was traveling at 73 mph when it derailed, said Missouri Pacific Vice President Richard Davidson. The speed limit for passenger trains on that stretch of track is 75 mph.

William Grimmer, the general superintendent for Amtrak's Midwest division, said no defects had been found on the Eagle, which carried a crew of 17.

Texas Department of Public Safety spokesman David Wells identified the dead as Sybil Fisher, 59, of Mineola; Dorothy M. Blask, 77, of Milwaukee; Alma Zahn, 69, of La Crosse, Wis.; and Carol McDonald, 74, of Richardson.

Marshall Memorial Hospital administrator James Pears said 21 people remained hospitalized Sunday, two critically injured.

One person was hospitalized at Marion County Hospital in Jefferson and two at Good Shepherd Hospital in Longview.

Grenada politicians discuss confinement

Whyte said he spent a 560 consecutive days in solitary confinement, writing poetry on toilet paper, reading the Bible and the Koran and devising a calendar and a code to communicate with other prisoners.

"Sometimes I walked up and down the cell and spoke to great crowds...just looking at the walls," Whyte recalled in a recent interview in Kingston, Jamaica.

Whyte and Noel are two of the estimated 100 political prisoners Bishop kept locked up in various detention centers. All have been freed from jail.

Whyte estimates more than 3,000 people passed through the prison system during Bishop's 4½ years in power. Grenada, a tiny island in the eastern Caribbean, has a population of 110,000.

Noel said he was never beaten or directly abused in prison, but the "psychological and emotional" punishment was intense.

He said the prisoners got out of their cells for one hour in the morning for bathing and another hour in the afternoon for exercise.

His family could visit twice monthly.

"We met through a cage. We could touch fingers through the wire, but not hug or even shake hands," he said.

Noel said there was bread and milk for breakfast, canned pig feet from Cuba for lunch and fish or chicken wings for dinner.

Despite the long confinement, both Noel and Whyte are considering participating in Grenada's elections, expected to be held within six to 12 months.

Noel, who studied law in London with Bishop, joined the New Jewel Movement formed in 1973 by Bishop and other young, educated Grenadians to challenge Gairy's government.

But he quit the government after becoming alarmed at its Marxist rhetoric and close ties with Cuba and the Soviet Union.

"We had always read Marx and talked about Marx, but that's not what we sold to the people. ...We were not the same animals the people had supported," Noel said.

He publicly criticized the government and was imprisoned one month after joining 25 other activists, journalists and businessmen in publishing an independent newspaper.

Noel is considered the "dark horse" in the election campaign because he has no political party but is believed capable of drawing support from a slightly left-of-center grouping.

Whyte described himself as "socialist-oriented" and said he would support the Grenada Democratic Movement, an organization of exiled intellecutuals, businessmen and early members of the Bishop government.

Reagan says tour brings prospect for peace

During the visit, however, several political dissidents were said by colleagues to have been taken into police custody or placed under house arrest by the regime of President Chun Doo-hwan.

"I know I speak for Nancy and everyone when I say — oh, my, it's great to be home," the president said.

"Working as partners to make tomorrow better and more secure is what this trip was all about," Reagan said, adding "I'm pleased to report some good news: America's partnerships are stronger, and prospects for a more secure peace and prosperity are better today than a week ago.

"Those who disagree with the United States get plenty of publicity," Reagan said. "But one thing becomes more plain to me each time I travel. Across the globe, America is looked to as a friend and as a leader in preserving peace and freedom.

"Coming home from Korea and Japan, all of us bring with us renewed energy and renewed commitment to our fundamental goals: building a new era of peace and prosperity."

Reagan said his visit Sunday with "our brave troops" in the demilitarized zone between South and North Korea was "one of the most unforgettable experiences in my life."

"If you could have been with me, you would have been at the church service we had with our soldiers in an open field less than a mile from one of the most tyrannical regimes on Earth," he said.

"There's more than symbolism in the danger to our American soldiers helping to guard the border of the DMZ, often in weather that leaves them freezing from their heads to their toes," he said.

"I was honored to meet our men, and I promised them I would tell the American people how crucial their jobs are — not just to the people of Korea, but to people everywhere who love freedom," he said.

Reagan ended his visit to Japan and South Korea with a farewell call on Chun, who accompanied the president and Mrs. Reagan on the 12-mile ride to Kimpo International Airport.

The streets were lined with tens of thousands of Koreans, waving U.S. and Korean flags.

Tapeworm causes brain cyst

But there are additional sources for pork tapeworm infections, particularly vegetables (lettuce, cabbage and strawberries are cited) that can be infected with the tapeworm larvae.

Thoroughly washing vegetables helps limit the possibility of becoming infected with the tapeworm parasite.

The pork tapeworm larva that disrupted Kauffman's life is called taenia solium. The larva of taenia solium is what develops inside a host's intestine into a tapeworm. Usually these tapeworms are from two to four meters long, but they have been reported as long as eight meters.

During a stage of larva growth, they burrow through the intestinal wall and get into the host's bloodstream. The larvae have an affinity for brain tissue. Once a larva gets into the brain, a cyst then develops as the brain tissue becomes inflamed by the larva's presence.

That is what happened to Kauffman. He was sleeping, then he was jolted by the seizure caused by the cysticercosis, as the cyst disease is known.

Kauffman was born in Chiapas, Mexico, a state bordering Guatemala. His now-deceased father was an artist from New Jersey who moved with his wife to Mexico "to get away from the bills." The area he settled in had good wood for his artistic carvings, Kauffman said.

Kauffman moved to San Diego about seven years ago.

North Korea: Tour meant 'to ignite aggression'

TOKYO (AP) — As President Reagan returned home today, North Korea called his tour of Japan and South Korea a "a criminal trip to ignite a new war of aggression."

In a series of dispatches monitored in Tokyo, North Korea's official Korean Central News Agency also described South Korean leaders as "colonial stooges."

It said Reagan, during his visit to the demilitarized zone, "heaped a string of abuses on the northern half of Korea before soldiers of the U.S. imperialist aggression forces and ordered them to keep a war posture against us."

In a speech Sunday to U.S. troops stationed at the tense 38th parallel separating North and South Korea, Reagan said, "The communist system in the North is based on hatred and oppression. It brutally attacks every form of human liberty and declares those who worship God to be enemies of the people."

KCNA accused Seoul of inviting hostilities by playing host to Reagan and added: "The South Korean puppets, typical colonial stooges who cannot surive a single day without the patronage, manipulation and 'aid' of the U.S. imperialists, are bluffing, extolling to the skies even their criminal scheme to plunge the whole country into a holocaust of a nuclear war, with all belly-crawling and bootlicking before the master."

Tensions have mounted on the Korean peninsula since the Oct. 9 bomb attack in Rangoon, Burma, that killed 17 South Koreans accompanying South Korean President Chun Doo-hwan on a state visit. Four were members of Chun's Cabinet.

Burma said an investigation showed North Korean agents were responsible for the blast and broke off diplomatic relations with Pyongyang. North Korea denied the charge.

The Japanese government, meanwhile, said it welcomed the American military commitment to South Korea reaffirmed in a joint U.S.-South Korean statement issued today.

A Japanese Foreign Ministry spokesman said the statement by Reagan and Chun expressed the two countries' interest in using "political and diplomatic means" to lessen tension on the Korean peninsula. This corresponds with Japan's position, the spokesman said.

But the Japan Socialist Party, Japan's leading opposition party, called the U.S. pledge to strengthen the capabilities of American forces in South Korea a threat to the peace in the region.

A Socialist spokesman said the U.S.-South Korean partnership aggravates North-South tensions.

OAS to be discussing Grenada situation

WASHINGTON (AP) — As Organization of American States foreign ministers assembled here today, U.S. officials say the Reagan administration is preparing assurances that it wants a political solution in Central America despite its decision to intervene militarily in Grenada.

Central America and Grenada were expected to be the dominant issues as the 30-member hemispheric body prepared to hold its annual foreign ministers meeting.

When the OAS permanent council met shortly after the Grenada invasion, the United States was the target of widespread criticism among many of the larger Latin American nations. But American officials believe hemispheric sentiment has shifted over the past three weeks.

"There is a much more favorable situation in the hemisphere now," said one American official, drawing a comparison with the mood when the OAS permanent council took up the Grenada issue on Oct. 26, the day after the U.S.-led invasion.

The official, who asked not to be identified, attributed the changed atmosphere to the subsequent disclosures of Cuban military involvement in Grenada and of the request for outside assistance from Grenada's Governor General, Paul Scoon.

There have been widespread fears among some countries, particularly Nicaragua, that the Reagan administration might try to repeat its military success on Grenada in Central America. But the officials said Secretary of State George Shultz, when he addresses the OAS on Tuesday, will reaffirm the American commitment to a political solution in that region.

Specifically, Shultz will reiterate U.S. support for the Contadora mediation group — Mexico, Colombia, Venezuela and Panana — which has been pursuing a negotiated settlement to the turmoil in Central America since January, the officials said. Shultz was scheduled to return with President Reagan from their trip to East Asia today.

At the time of the Oct. 26 meeting, the OAS was divided on the Grenada issue, with the United States and most East Caribbean nations aligned against many of the larger Latin American nations.

So divided was the sentiment that no nation offered a resolution on Grenada. This contrasted sharply with the mood at the United Nations, where the General Assembly voted 108-9 to oppose the invasion.

American officials believe it is highly unlikely that this week's OAS meeting will be able to agree on a resolution, although Mexico and a number of other nations are expected to reiterate their disapproval of the American action.

The officials see Grenada as essentially a side issue, with much of the discussion over the next five days centered on how to advance the Contadora process. The foreign ministers of the four Contadora countries are expected to use the OAS meeting to lend a sense of urgency to their deliberations.

The Central American countries, with the encouragement of the Contadora group, have agreed to a broad statement of principles aimed at resolving the conflicts in the region. These include a curb on the arms buildup in Central America and pledges of non-intervention.

But since those principles were agreed to last September, battlefield activity has increased, prompting Nicaraguan Foreign Minister Miguel D'Escoto to complain last week that "anti-dialogue" forces were gaining the upper hand over those favoring a peaceful settlement.

First U.S. cruise missiles arrive in Great Britain

LONDON (AP) — The first U.S. nuclear cruise missiles to be deployed in Western Europe arrived in Britain today, Defense Secretary Michael Heseltine told Parliament.

Heseltine, shouting to make himself heard over howls of protest from opposition legislators, made the long-awaited announcement in the House of Commons five hours after anti-nuclear demonstrators watched a U.S. C-141 Starlifter touch down at U.S. Greenham Common Air Force Base.

"I have to inform the house that earlier today the first cruise missiles were delivered by air," said Heseltine.

The North Atlantic Treaty Organization plans to deploy 572 cruise and Pershing 2 missiles in Western Europe starting next month to counter hundreds of Soviet SS-20 missiles already in place.

Heseltine did not say how many missiles had arrived — but observers at Greenham, 50 miles west of London, said they saw two crates unloaded from the transport plane which landed just before 9.00 a.m. — 3 a.m. CST.

"Much work remains to be done, including the final assembly, testing and personnel training before the missiles are operational," said Heseltine.

Amid cheers from members of the governing Conservative Party, he said the deployment in no way lessened Britain desire to see a superpower nuclear arms control agreement at talks in Geneva.

"We hope the Geneva talks will go on and produce a satisfactory result," Heseltine said.

Nine Pershing 2 rockets are scheduled for arrival later at a U.S. base in West Germany and 16 cruise missiles are to arrive in Italy.

The Soviets have said they will suspend the Geneva arms-control talks with the United States if the NATO deployment proceeds. NATO officials have said that arrival of the missiles in Europe does not constitute deployment.

The C-141 Starlifter was the first such plane to land since equipment for Europe's first shipment of cruise missiles began arriving at Greenham Common Nov. 1. Other flights, on larger C-5A Galaxies, have brought control equipment and missile launchers.

The plane's arrival came a day after police made 137 arrests during anti-nuclear protests in Britain and Australia.

In Alice Springs, Australia, police reported 111 arrests after hundreds of women protesting swarmed over a fence at a U.S.-Australian intelligence post, demanding that the facility be closed. The protest continued today at the Pine Gap base as the arrested women began appearing in court.

Protesters said they were commemorating the death of Karen Silkwood, an American concerned with worker safety at a nuclear fuel plant who was killed in a mysterious car crash nine years ago.

Police Sgt. Darryl Menzie said 10 of the women arrested for violating a restricted area identified themselves as Karen Silkwood and were charged with giving a false name.

Syria warned against shooting jets

Told he seemed to be leaving open the question of whether the United States might help with an invasion, McFarlane said, "We support people who are trying to defend themselves. That's right."

Asked about the possibility of a U.S. war with Syria, McFarlane said, "I don't think it is likely. I think Syria can take a fairly sober view of our serious commitment to Lebanon and that it is enduring and will remain so."

Meanwhile, Secretary of State George P. Shultz said for the first time that Washington opposes a Syrian takeover of the Palestine Liberation Organization. Until last week, when it called for an end to the fighting, the administration hadn't commented on efforts by Syrian-backed PLO dissidents to defeat forces loyal to PLO chief Yasser Arafat.

But in an appearance on the the ABC-TV program, "This Week with David Brinkley," Shultz said, "A Syria dominant over the PLO, dominant over that region and exerting itself in a negative way on peace with Israel, would be, in my judgment, a bad thing."

Woman says train trip will be her last

MARSHALL (AP) — Alma Helena Zahn had told a friend that her trip Saturday aboard the Amtrak Eagle would be her last train journey.

The 69-year-old La Crosse, Wis. resident was one of four women — two Texans and two Wisconsinites — killed Saturday when the nine-car train derailed in a wooded East Texas area.

Elaine Wencka of Dallas said she befriended Mrs. Zahn and another woman Friday as the train rolled south from Chicago.

Saturday morning, Mrs. Zahn "told me she hadn't slept well and she told me, 'From now on I'm flying. This will be my last train trip.' I just can't quit thinking about that," Mrs. Wencka said.

She said the women had returned to their coach after breakfast.

"I had put a cigarette in my mouth and I got up to go to the restroom," Mrs. Wencka said. "I felt a funny shaking feeling, like a nervous feeling. Then the train fell on its right side.

"The two women I had become friends with were lying on top of me. There were chairs, luggage and debris flying all around."

Mrs. Wencka said Mrs. Zahn was lying face down on her other friend's chest.

"The woman was unconscious or dead," she said. "She started turning blue."

A young man and woman began giving the woman mouth-to-mouth resuscitation, but "they couldn't get a heartbeat ... They would breathe in her mouth and she kept turning bluer," she said.

Finally, some of the people broke one of the doors at the front of the car, Mrs. Wencka said. Different people breathed into the woman's mouth to try to keep her alive, to no avail.

Mrs. Zahn's husband, John L. Zahn, said she took the train rather than a plane to Texas to visit her children and grandchildren because she had a sore leg and did not want to walk the long concourse at Minneapolis-St. Paul International Airport.

Another Wisconsin woman who died in the accident, 76-year-old Dorothy Blask, was a retired secretary for The Milwaukee Road railroad line.

Relatives said Miss Blask and her sister, 80-year-old Mattie B. Gigl, were moving from Milwaukee to be near Mrs. Gigl's son.

Mrs. Gigl received minor injuries in the accident, said her daughter-in-law, Donna Gigl of Dallas.

"All I know is (Miss Blask) took a severe blow to her head," Donna Gigl said. She said her mother-in-law "was hospitalized for a short time. She was banged around, I guess."

Ruth and Tom Giles of Bartlett, Ill., were on the same car with the sisters.

"We could see that one of the women was hurt real bad," Mrs. Giles said.

Amtrak passenger remembers sound of deadly accident

MARSHALL(AP) — Harvey Edwards wanted to retrieve his luggage from the wreck of an Amtrak train, but memories of the grinding accident forced him to leave quickly.

Edwards, who was riding the train to Dallas when it derailed Saturday, said he wasn't scared by the sight of the mud-spattered, crumpled train cars.

Rather, it was the sounds he could still hear as the train left the track, throwing him against the ceiling.

"When you remember the sounds — that's when it really gets to you," said Edwards, an art photographer from Chicago who was traveling with his wife to a show in Dallas.

"It's the screams and the moans I can still hear. First when it happened, there was dead silence and you didn't know if anyone was alive or dead," he said Sunday. "Then the screams started and you knew that you had to get your head together and get out or you would be dead."

Four people died and scores were injured when the nine-car train jumped the tracks deep in the East Texas woods Saturday. Federal officials said Sunday that an investigation was focusing on a section of rail that had shattered.

Edwards' face was cut and his head was bumped and his wife, Eleanor, suffered a neck injury when the couple was thrown against the top of the dining car.

He said he had returned to the train to find his luggage because the clothes he was wearing Sunday — the same he was wearing Saturday — were "all I've got."

Red Cross volunteers shoveled dirt and gravel out of the once-overturned cars at a Missouri Pacific railroad yard in Marshall. The sides of the last three cars were caked with dirt in some places and doors and windows had been sheared off their hinges.

Railroad officials say tracks vulnerable to structure, climate

DALLAS (AP) — Rail lines that weave through East and Central Texas along the Missouri Pacific Railroad are inspected almost daily, but remain vulnerable to structural flaws and climatic conditions that can cause derailments, officials say.

National Transportation Safety Board officials said a track separation probably caused the derailment Saturday of an Amtrak train on a Missouri Pacific track near Woodlawn in East Texas.

Williard Schultz, public relations director of Missouri Pacific, told The Dallas Morning News that climate usually causes expansion or contraction of steel tracks. But he would speculate on Saturday's accident, which occurred on a line that moves up to 20 freight trains each day.

"In the summertime, heat expands the rail, and this can break the line of the gauge of track conditions. If a train should come along, and the gauge is not properly aligned, there is going to be a derailment," he said.

The same can happen when winter temperatures cause contraction, Schultz said. Structural flaws at joints or within steel pieces — also can trigger derailments, he said.

Maintenance regulations vary throughout the state's track mileage, depending on what speeds the rails are allowed to accomodate by federal standards, Schultz said.

"One thing I can tell you for sure is that the standards of Missouri Pacific's line are superior to those set by the (U.S.) Department of Transportation," he said.

Onlookers gather on the tracks where a nine-car train derailed about 10:10 a.m. Saturday. Four were reported dead and 33 reported injured.

Union officials agreed that the major rail lines carrying heavy traffic usually are kept in good shape, but that some are maintained better than others.

"Union Pacific, Burlington Northern and Norfolk Southern come to mind (as well-maintained railroads)," said Ole Berge of Detroit, international president of the Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employees.

Last year's merger of Missouri Pacific with Union Pacific was "so recent that they haven't had the opportunity to upgrade MoPac (Missouri Pacific)," Berge said. "Generally speaking, the track that Amtrak operates on is in good condition."

When the Bell System splits up, your phone bill won't.

Beginning January 1, different companies will provide different parts of your phone service. It's due to the break up of the Bell System.

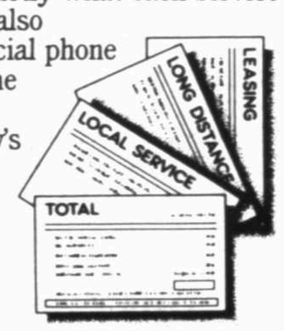
But you'll still get only one bill each month at your home or office.* Because all of the services previously provided by the Bell System will be billed through Southwestern Bell Telephone, except for purchases of new telephone equipment from AT&T.

So you'll continue to make just one payment each month to Southwestern Bell Telephone as you now do. But the way your phone bill looks will change. It'll have more pages.

For example, local service from Southwestern Bell Telephone will be on one page, long distance from other companies will be on another page and leased equipment on an additional page.

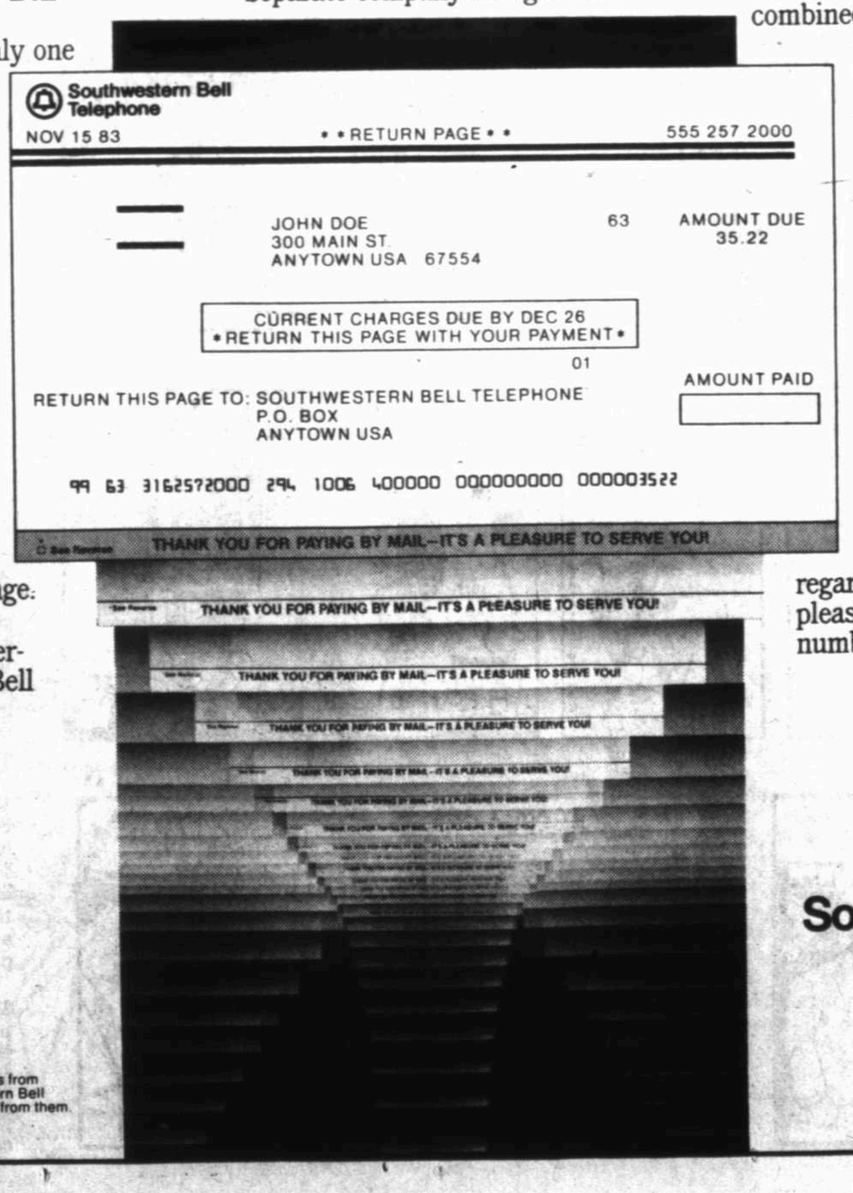
You'll also see a separate page for some long distance charges from Southwestern Bell Telephone. These would be for long distance calls made within your surrounding area which Southwestern Bell Telephone will continue to handle. Outside that area, though, long distance will be provided by other companies. And all long distance calls and charges will be itemized as always.

Separate company charges will show you exactly what each service costs. There also will be a special phone number on the first page of each company's section that you can call for questions about that part of your bill. That's important, because each company will be responsible for handling questions concerning its services.



Southwestern Bell Telephone has combined all of these separate service charges into one bill to make it easier for you. And to show you exactly how much each part of your total telephone service costs. It's one more way we're working to keep your telephone service, even with all the changes, what most people think is the best in the world.

If you would like to find out more about your new bill format, call 1 800 555-5000, toll free. We'll be glad to answer your questions. For questions regarding specific charges, please refer to the phone numbers on your bill.



*If you have long distance or other services from companies other than AT&T or Southwestern Bell Telephone, you will receive a separate bill from them.

Network TV neglects children

NEW YORK (AP) — Once upon a time, in the days when television had more social responsibility, the family viewing hour had prime-time programs that didn't require exploding, acrobatic cars to get airborne.

Now, with the exception of tonight's "Boone" on NBC, not a single dramatic series on the networks offers the kind of wholesome, non-violent fare that may be considered enjoyable and meaningful to Mr. and Mrs. Average American Family and their offspring.

For example, this week, viewers searching for early evening entertainment that is educational or representative of real life beyond the portrayals of Hollywood and Madison Avenue could choose only among programs on public television, in syndication or on cable.

Tonight, public TV offers the usually cogent "Nova" science series and, on Wednesday night, "Don't Eat the Pictures: Sesame Street at the Metropolitan Museum of Art," a perfect illustration of how creative minds can produce programs for kids, even pre-schoolers, that don't insult them or their parents.

This week, syndicated networks feature an original episode of "Fame," which was canceled last season by NBC, and "Capital Cities Family Special: The Breadwinner," a dramatically bland but credibly heartfelt story of a family struggling with poverty after the steelworker-father loses his job.

"The Breadwinner," starring Pat Hingle, Lee Meriwether, Lance Kerwin and Quinn Cummings, will be syndicated over 140 stations, beginning tonight in some markets.

And for kids lucky to have cable, Nickelodeon has such regular programming as "Mr. Wizard's World," specializing in down-to-earth science, and "Against the Odds," documentaries that make history homework a pleasure.

There may never have been a good ol' days for children's programming in prime time, but the past certainly was better. Peggy Charren, president of Action for Children's Television, blames the Reagan administration's push to deregulate.

In the mid-1970s, the Federal Communications Commission set guidelines requiring certain numbers of hours of children's programming and, when that practice was nixed by the Supreme Court, continued to pressure the networks for more meaninful shows for children.

Under the chairmanship of Reagan-appointee Mark Fowler, however, the FCC has looked the other way while the networks practice child neglect and cater only to viewers with money to spend. Fowler has said that if viewers want more children's programming, it's up to them to persuade the networks.

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KJ72 ♡K954 ◇J10762 ♣
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	?

What action do you take now?

A.—What started out as a moderate hand has improved tremendously because of the double fit. We feel that anything less than a jump to three spades does not come close to doing your hand justice. Naturally, we prefer the major suit since we need only ten tricks for game instead of 11 in clubs.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AK ♡AK9763 ◇AQJ ♣92
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
2 ♡	Pass	2 NT	4 ♠

What action do you take?

A.—First, you cannot bid four hearts — partner might have nothing, and you can't guarantee ten tricks in your own hand. Once you realize that, your course of action is obvious — pass. Since your opening bid was forcing, partner cannot pass. If he has no offensive values, his only recourse is to double four clubs. That might be your only plus score.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AQ6 ♡A105 ◇93 ♣Q9852
Partner opens the bidding with one spade. What do you respond?

A.—You have the values for a jump raise to three spades, but you should avoid taking that action with only three-card support if you have any reasonable alternative. Make the temporizing bid of two clubs — you can jump raise spades at your next turn.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable with 60 on score, you hold:
♠AQ6 ♡A105 ◇93 ♣Q9852
Partner opens the bidding with one spade. What do you respond?

A.—Now a bid of two clubs would not be forcing, because that would complete the game. Since clubs might be an inferior contract, you cannot take the risk of partner passing. We would make the slight underbid of a raise to two spades. Partner should allow for the fact that you could be a bit heavy for your response. If he has a very good hand, he is still free to make a move toward slam. Naturally, you will be glad to cooperate.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K8 ♡A10952 ◇AK96 ♣Q7
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 NT	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
3 NT	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—Your hand is too good to give up on slam just yet. You should continue searching for the best spot to play the hand by bidding four diamonds. If partner raises to five diamonds, we would continue to slam. If he signs off with four no trump, we would make one more try by raising to five no trump.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AK109 ♡AJ ◇8 ♣KQJ983
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	3 ♡	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Partner might not have much in the way of high cards, but he certainly has at least six hearts. Therefore, we would raise to four hearts. There is no need for more aggressive action. Partner heard us make a jump shift, so if he holds the king-queen of hearts and an ace, he will bid again.

U.S. fights back

It did not take the United States long to respond to a Soviet Union proposal that curbs be placed on freedom of the press throughout the world.

The scene was Paris, where the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization is holding its 22nd General Conference. As at previous such conferences in recent years, representatives of the Kremlin lost no time in suggesting that UNESCO become involved in monitoring the gathering and dissemination of news. What they would do would be to have UNESCO pass judgement on news organs, a process which in plain language is censorship.

It was here that the United States fought back, also in plain language. The American delegate to the Paris assembly is Edmund Hennelly. Mr. Hennelly spoke not only as a spokesman for his own country but for the entire Free World when he addressed these words to the Russians:

"We vigorously oppose any measures which would attempt to harness the free press in the name of any goal or objective, which would increase state control and censorship of the media."

That was a good weekend's work, but we know from past experience that it will not end Russia's mischievous maneuvering. The United States and the Free World have two courses of action to meet UNESCO's press-curb threat. They can outvote the Kremlin and the other would-be press managers. Or they can clip UNESCO's wings by cutting its $386 million dollar budget, a proposal the United States supports.

In any event, the Kremlin must not be allowed to call the shots.

Political blackmail

Both the House and Senate have voted for an $8.4 billion additional American contribution to the International Monetary Fund. But final Congressional approval has been delayed. The IMF bill has fallen hostage to a fight over a proposed new federal subsidy for the housing industry.

What does the IMF money have to do with housing? In a word, politics. Democrats in the House want to ensure that President Reagan will not veto construction subsidies to contractors who agree to build low-income housing. They therefore have made enactment of the IMF funding contingent on approval of a $900 million housing bill.

The use of this legislative bludgeon amounts to political blackmail which, unfortunately, may succeed. Mr. Reagan so urgently wants to sign the IMF bill that he already has acceded to another condition. The president has sent a letter of thanks to each of the 145 House Democrats who voted for the IMF bill. He thus has been put in the embarrassing position of rebuking his own party's congressional campaign committee. The committee had accused the Democrats of approving IMF loans to communist nations.

The IMF bill, or any legislation, ought to rise or fall on its own. Even if the housing measure had merit, it should not be tied to the IMF funds. No subsidies, however, are needed by the housing industry. Housing has helped lead the way out of the recession. Moreover, it is questionable how much the poor have been aided by direct subsidies to builders. A far superior and more direct method of helping the poor would be rent vouchers as proposed by Mr. Reagan.

Proponents of the IMF bill say it would prevent a possible default by a major developing nation, an event that might precipitate an international financial crisis. Opponents of the legislation assert the IMF should reform its lending practices before the United States increases its contribution. Regardless, Mr. Reagan should not endorse linkage of the IMF and housing.

Agreement by the president to approve the housing bill undoubtedly would salvage the IMF legislation. But it would only encourage future attempts at legislative blackmail.

Crying for Argentina

Although Argentina has taken an historic leap in the direction of democracy by electing Raul Alfonsin as the next president, it will be some time before the dark clouds of the political past evaporate. Two pressing problems face the incoming administration, solutions to which demand immediate attention.

—First, a new governmental machinery must be created, one that is geared to rule by the people rather than rule by the military.

—Second, Argentina's precarious economy, which includes a monumental debt of about $40 billion, must be dealt with.

President-elect Alfonsin and his advisers know all this of course, and it is encouraging to all who are cheering Argentina's turn from dictatorship to democracy to know that remedial action is underway.

No sooner had the sun set on the election returns, which gave Dr. Alfonsin a 52 percent majority, than the winner and his aides hied themselves to a ranch outside Buenos Aires to pick a cabinet. They also have been working on overall political and economic programs. It is expected that one of Argentina's bankers, Bernardo Grinspun, will fly to New York soon to see what he can do about renegotiating that fat foreign loan.

As for the defeated military power brokers, they are in disarray. Three top generals seem to have given up completely by resigning their commissions shortly after the elections.

One of those fading generals was quoted in the Buenos Aires Herald, an English-language daily, as saying "that as far as the army is concerned the very worst possible candidate won." That is high praise indeed for Raul Alfonsin, and bodes well for progress as he tackles the troubles of Argentina in a democratic fashion.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Mismanagement goes high-tech

WASHINGTON — In past columns I've reported that the federal agency created to help minority businesses was rife with political cronyism.

Now I've seen a draft report, still unreleased, prepared by the Commerce Department's inspector general. It concludes that the Minority Business Development Agency's seven-year program to help minority businesses market new high-tech products has been badly mismanaged and has little to show for the millions of dollars it has spent.

Jack Anderson

The agency has shelled out some $5.6 million to 10 "technology commercialization centers," which were supposed to bring clever and useful new products to consumers. In its slick publications, the MBDA has claimed the program is responsible for marketing 28 products and has generated more than $40 million in financing and sales for minority firms.

But the inspector general's report says the MBDA's Washington headquarters "has seriously mismanaged the program (and) failed to adequately monitor the centers' program accomplishments." As a result, "centers have failed to achieve the purpose of the program and have misused federal monies."

Investigators checked out 22 of the agency's 28 success stories and found that the claimed accomplishments were "grossly exaggerated." That's putting it mildly.

Ten products weren't ever put on the market, though the MBDA claimed they were. These phantom achievements included an energy controller for light fixtures, a hydraulic oil pump, a water-saving flush toilet and a bun toaster.

Nor could the investigators find any evidence that a portable fluoroscope, a solar-wind energy generator, lightweight concrete, or a naval target device were ever commercialized.

The draft report also understated the case when it termed "inappropriate" the now-defunct Baltimore technology center's claim that it successfully commercialized a concealed stereo system and a flame retardant chemical "since the firms manufacturing the products were owned by...the center."

The former director, Dr. Melvin Butler, told my reporter Laurie Siegel: "I started the firms from scratch in order to get the products on the market. This was part of the center's mission. We did what that contract called for.... Obviously, the auditors didn't know what commercialization involved." Butler denied the companies were set up for his gain.

But a Commerce Department memorandum notes that on one project Butler spent $5,800 of grant money "to defray his personal expenses," such as department store bills and apartment rent. He also executed "$21,000 worth of checks payable to 'Cash,' " and spent $6,150 in grant funds "to rent a convention hall and bar lounge" for office space.

The same memo cited the Baltimore center's "apparent misuse of grant funds and failure to perform adequately" as reasons to cut off its funding.

The inspector general's report concluded that 43 of 56 current MBDA projects are "unrelated to technology-based growth industries," which the program is supposed to encourage.

For example, the agency spent seven months and $9,000 in consultant fees on "The Circle Ball" — a baseball attached to a line, designed for a child to swing at. Another product with "weak potential" was a "Do-Not-Disturb Doorbell."

Footnote: Commerce Department officials responsible for the program would not comment. A department spokesman said a 200-page MBDA response to the inspector general "totally refutes, by documentation, the charges made." But a meeting to share this document with my reporter was canceled at the last minute.

CONCURRING OPINION: More than a year ago, I accused the Social Security Administration of "blackmail" in its attempt to snoop into the tax records of some 4 million elderly, blind and disabled pensioners. To catch suspected cheaters, the agency sent out letters threatening to cut off the benefit checks if the recipients didn't sign forms allowing government snoops to rummage around in their income tax returns.

I'm gratified that the U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington, D.C., agrees with me. A unanimous decision in a case brought by the National Senior Citizens Law Center told the Social Security bureaucrats that their threatening letter was improper.

"The form itself contained poorly veiled threats that the recipients' benefits would be terminated if they failed to sign the forms," Judge Abner Mikva wrote. "The language of the form was thus likely to coerce individuals, who depend on Social Security for their subsistence, into giving up their right to confidentiality."

After my initial report, Carole Pope, a Social Security official in Florida, wrote a lengthy diatribe accusing me of distortion and irresponsibility. Care to comment on Judge Mikva, Ms. Pope?

INSIDE REPORT:

Volkernomics vs. Reaganomics

WASHINGTON — A secret session of the Senate Finance Committee with Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker not only explains the recent spasm of tax increase fever but deepens concern whether the Reagan recovery will last through the presidential election.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Senators left that Oct. 26 meeting with the nation's chief central banker trembling, believing that only a major "deficit-reduction" package containing painful tax increases can prevent newly-escalating interest rates. Since President Reagan promptly and predictably shot down higher taxes, cooler heads outside the Senate fear Volcker will prove a self-fulfilling prophet by keeping money tight.

Such fears are voiced by non-political economists at the Treasury and non-economic politicians at the Reagan campaign committee. They are well-founded. Not only did the president last June in his single most important appointment extend Volcker as chairman without getting a clear policy commitment from him; there still has been no unambiguous expression to him of Reagan's desires for growth, not austerity.

The distance between Volckernomics and Reaganomics was measured at 11 a.m. Oct. 26, when the chairman quietly slipped into the private conference room back of the Finance Committee hearing chamber for an unannounced meeting. The senators were not permitted to bring staffers and were told the meeting was strictly off-the-record.

Volcker's prose, as usual, was enveloped in cigar smoke and ambiguity. Nevertheless, Volcker was unequivocal in predicting interest rates would climb unless the deficit goes down. While throwing out his usual caveat of preference for spending cuts over tax increases, his formula for the best way to boost taxes was more specific than in his public declarations.

His first choice, Volcker said, would be a consumption tax. Told by the senators that is politically impossible, the chairman stressed that higher revenue must come from lower-middle to middle-income taxpayers rather than upper-bracket investors. He then suggested scrapping Reagan's cherished plan to index brackets to protect ordinary taxpayers from inflation (coupled with similarly austere treatment of indexing for Social Security and other entitlements).

Not surprisingly, some — though not all — Finance members left the meeting with this message: If they wanted Volcker's Fed to ease money, they had better get cracking with tax increases. Shortly thereafter, Finance Chairman Robert Dole unveiled a $55-billion tax boost which would cut back indexing and impose a surtax on individual income taxes. Closely fitting Volcker's soak-the-middle-class formula, it was rolling toward committee approval until derailed by the president's promised veto.

Apart from the questionable propriety of the central banker playing tax lobbyist against the president's program, the incident raises apprehension about Volcker's intentions. His words to the senators gave no hope for relaxation of the tighter money policy begun by the Fed in May.

That policy is viewed at the Treasury as "extremely tight" today, with failure to create new bank reserves keeping high the federal funds rate (inter-bank borrowing). According to Treasury analysis, only statistical and seasonal aberrations save the Fed from falling under the money-supply target range. That reflects Volcker's overriding fear of inflation to the virtual exclusion of concern with economic growth.

His attitude was manifest eight hours after his session with the Finance Committee when he dined with Jude Wanniski, the supply-side economic consultant. As related in a Nov. 2 letter to clients, Wanniski failed totally to convince the chairman that the falling price of gold is an alarming deflationary signal that calls for easing by the Fed.

According to Wanniski, Volcker claimed the futures index and spot index of commodity prices were rising when, in fact, they were dropping. "We are now on the same path we were on during the summer of 1982, with the price of gold falling and pulling in its train the other sensitive commodity and industrial prices," Wanniski told clients. Only Mexico's threatened bankruptcy forced the Fed last year to ease and let the recession end.

The recovery that Reagan's political managers consider indispensable to a narrow re-election victory is now imperiled by a central bank that mistakes present deflation for future inflation. We reported in August that administration officials wanted a Reagan-Volcker summit to prevent the Fed from aborting the recovery. No such meeting has been held as 1984 approaches and Volckernomics threatens to engulf Reaganomics.

CHARLEY REESE

Why run when you can't win?

The Rev. Jesse Jackson, the newest entry in the Democratic presidential nomination race, is about as sincere as a used car television advertisemrnt. He's so far out in left field it would take him an hour to reach home plate at a dead run. And, of course, he has no chance of winning.

Charley Reese

For all that, Jackson is the best stump speaker of the bunch and has more charisma than his competition. The fact that the nation's big media political reporters cover a political campaign as a sports event wil play to Jackson's advantage.

Jackson's campaign will be a spear in Walter Mondale's side and probably tip the nomination toward John Glenn or even former Florida Gov. Reubin Askew if Askew survives Iowa and New Hampshire.

Furthermore, because none of the Democrats has the intestinal fortitude to challenge the hogwash that is peddled in the name of civil rights these days, Jackson's populist rhetoric will probably push them toward the left.

Former President Jimmy Carter as well as innumerable actors and singers prove that achievement and competency, let alone integrity, are no longer required for fame in America. Thus the fact that there is nothing in Jackson's background to recommend him even for the job of a small town city councilman is no disadvantage. He will be treated as if he were a serious candidate and even fawned over by some.

Jackson is one of those black leaders who manage to cure their own poverty while doing virtually nothing for the people in whose behalf they preach. The liberal magazine, "The New Republic," caught the essence of Jackson with a recent cover drawing of him, captioned, "I have a scheme." He certainly does and it will benefit neither black Americans nor America.

Of course America and Americans are two missing ingredients in recent presidential campaigns. If you don't happen to be a member of some identifiable, politicized clique, the candidates will hardly give you a glance.

One of my fellow pontificators-for-hire has pontificated that this year's crop of Democratic candidates is one of the best in many years. Somehow that seems to me not a very nice thing to say about the Democratic Party.

Nevertheless, I would be relatively comfortable with Glenn, Askew or Fritz Hollings in the White House. They are all sensible men, even though I disagree with them in some issues. If by chance Mondale, Alan Cranston or George McGovern ended up at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, I would be torn between the desire to emigrate immediately and the urge to open up a franchised chain of Russian language schools.

At this stage in the presidential campaign, I can offer you only two thoughts, one pessimistic and one optimistic. First, the pessimistic. I once asked a cynical reporter who was going to win a certain political race he was covering. "I don't know who's going to win," he said, "but I can tell you who's going to lose — the people."

Now the optimistic. A frustrated British aristocrat — no friend of ours — once complained, "God takes care of fools, drunks and the United States of America."

I think he's right, so even with Jesse Jackson in the race, don't worry.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, Nov. 14, the 318th day of 1983. There are 47 days left in the year.

In 1906, Theodore Roosevelt arrived in Panama, making him the first sitting president to visit a foreign country.

And in 1935, President Franklin Roosevelt proclaimed the Philippine Islands a commonwealth and pledged independence by 1946.

Ten years ago: Britain's Princess Anne was married in Westminster Abbey to a commoner, Capt. Mark Phillips.

Five years ago: A 2-week-old strike by Iranian workers at oil refineries and offshore oil installations collapsed under pressure from the shah's military government.

One year ago: Polish labor leader Lech Walesa returned to his home in Gdansk after 11 months of government internment.

Today's birthdays: Composer Aaron Copland is 83. Comedian Morey Amsterdam is 69. Actor Brian Keith is 62. Britain's Prince Charles is 35.

Dole: Deficit spending may be beyond solution

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Robert Dole says the overwhelming problem of deficit spending — past, present and future — may be simply beyond political solution. He says the country may have enormous deficits for years to come and have to learn to live with the consequences.

Events last week underscored the deficit dilemma. As Dole sought an acceptable formula for reducing the deficit, President Reagan made it clear he will not abide tax increases and House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. said he will not accept further deep cuts in domestic spending — the two key elements in the ideas Dole has floated.

The Kansas Republican heard himself hailed last week by a colleague as "the great compromiser," but so far compromise has eluded him.

In an interview, Dole, who chairs the Senate Finance Committee, was asked if it could be that the problem simply defies solution.

"I think that's a possibility," he said. "I'm afraid it could be a real possibility because there's a tendency in Congress and in the executive branch to delay, put things off, hope they get better, appoint a commission. And that's partly, I must say, because we get all these pressures from our constituents, who want more but don't want the deficits to go up."

But he isn't giving up, Dole said, and he's impressed by the concern of colleagues who come to him saying, "we've got to do something."

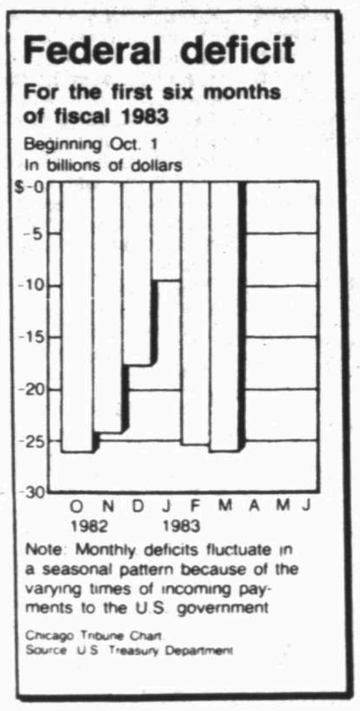
Dole's plan calls for cutting deficits by $150 billion over three years by spending cuts and tax increases contingent on the cuts actually being made. In addition, Social Security's cost-of-living adjustments would be lowered but the money saved there would go into the Medicare trust fund, which otherwise faces potential bankruptcy.

When Reagan campaigned for the presidency, he promised to balance the budget in fiscal 1983. In each year of his term so far, the deficit has been at least $50 billion higher than the year before.

Dole rejected the administration's forecast of a turnaround in deficit growth this fiscal year.

The Treasury says the deficit for the current fiscal year will be $179.7 billion — below the $195.4 billion of fiscal 1983. But Dole said he expects the new deficit again to be higher than the old one.

"We've got an economic recovery, things are looking good, unemployment's down, interest rates are down, inflation's down — there are a lot of good signs," the senator said.



"But unless we attack the deficit head on — and that means spending reduction and some more revenues — it's going to continue to go up. In fact, it's already projected by the Congressional Budget Office to be in the neighborhood of $280 billion by the end of 1988."

He was asked if events have proved that Reagan's claim was wrong when he said in the 1980 campaign that he could give the country a tax cut, a defense buildup and a balanced budget simultaneously.

Dole defended Reagan. "The one factor he didn't foresee was a rather long and a very deep recession," he said. "And that took its toll on revenues to the government...Government costs went up and government revenues went down because of the recession and it's pretty hard to fault the president for that."

Nonetheless, he said, deficits pose a threat to prosperity.

"Just look at the interest we're paying on the debt," he said — at the rate it is increasing, it will reach $250 billion a year in five or six years.

That's money, he said, which "doesn't help a single American, doesn't build any homes, doesn't build any highways, doesn't help any farmers, doesn't help any working people, it's just interest on the debt."

Legislators hope to go home soon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislators hope to adjourn the first session of the 98th Congress this week after last-gasp attempts to subdue runaway budget deficits and to restore the government's borrowing authority, which lapsed Nov. 1.

Congress was returning to work today after meeting on Friday's Veterans Day holiday and again on Saturday to complete work on a compromise emergency spending measure necessary to keep a variety of government agencies operating.

President Reagan was set to sign the measure today after he returned from a trip to the Far East.

Both the House and Senate were expected to put in long hours this week in hopes of adjourning until January. If not, they could return before or after Thanksgiving, despite Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker's warning that to do so could mean staying "until Christmas Eve."

A backlog of minor bills and several major matters await action:

—Proposed legislation, due for Senate action today, extending the life of the Civil Rights Commission and transforming it into a hybrid panel with half its eight members named by the president and half by Congress. The compromise proposal was worked out last week.

—Senate confirmation of the president's nomination of William P. Clark as secretary of the interior, succeeding James G. Watt.

—Possible House action on a tax bill that would reduce the deficit by about $8 billion over three years. The measure has been stalled by opposition to a provision restricting the use of tax-free industrial development bonds for such private purposes as building retail stores and fast-food restaurants.

—Senate action on a $28 billion deficit reduction package consisting of $14.6 billion in spending cuts and $13.4 billion in tax increases.

Congress adopted a budget outline in June that mandated three-year spending cuts of $12.3 billion and tax increases of $73 billion to shrink the budget deficit, which was $195.4 billion in the fiscal year that ended Sept. 30.

So far, the only substantive action toward that goal has been House passage of a $10.3 billion package of spending savings last month.

But the president and House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., have refused to compromise on their differing ways of dealing with the problem.

"The main player on the ballfield isn't there, and that's the president," said Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee. "I don't think the Congress can set the pace or direction with which we're going to attack the problem...Without the participation of the president in every facet, we're just not going to be able to do anything about it."

Sen. Robert J. Dole, R-Kan., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said, "Unless we have the two giants in this town (Reagan and O'Neill) on board, we aren't going to have a deficit-reduction package."

Both men made their comments Sunday on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley."

Most legislators involved in discussions of deficit-reduction legislation agree that if there is no action this year, political considerations during the 1984 election year will delay further efforts until 1985.

Dole has been working for weeks to whip up support for a three-year, $150 billion package equally divided between tax increases and spending cuts.

But the president has ruled out tax increases and O'Neill has ruled out further domestic spending cuts, specifically a provision of Dole's plan that would lead to a reduction in cost-of-living increases paid to Social Security beneficiaries.

"No way is the Dole bill going through this House," O'Neill declared last week.

Government saved from shutdown by passage of emergency bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government was open for business as usual today after the House and Senate spent part of the holiday weekend passing an emergency spending bill that President Reagan is expected to quickly sign.

Much of the government has been technically without money since midnight last Thursday due to congressional inaction on five of 13 regular annual appropriations bills.

In this case the midnight Thursday deadline was met at 12:40 p.m. Saturday, when the Senate gave final congressional approval on a voice vote. Earlier Saturday, the House approved the measure 173-136. There were 126 House members absent and not even enough senators on hand for a roll call in that chamber.

Despite the lapse in funds, there had been no noticeable impact on federal operations because Veterans Day, followed by the weekend, gave federal workers three days off. The indication that the president would sign the legislation upon his return from Asia today was sufficient to allow government agencies to open today.

The emergency bill will provide money for the operations of the departments of defense, state, justice, commerce, treasury and agriculture as well as the Postal Service and various smaller agencies for the remainder of the fiscal year — which ends Sept. 30, 1984 — if a regular appropriation is not enacted.

A veto confrontation over the bill was averted when Democratic leaders in the House backed off on nearly $1 billion in additional education and social spending and settled for 10 percent — $98.7 million.

As with previous emergency measures that are required to avert a shutdown of government operations, the legislation headed off a scramble among legislators who eagerly lined up to tack on pet projects that, under ordinary circumstances, would have little chance of enactment.

Feminist's husband back on witness stand

GRETNA, La. (AP) — The prosecution returns the former husband of Ginny Foat to the witness stand today in an attempt to fortify his testimony against the California feminist, who is accused of killing an Argentine businessman in 1965.

Defense lawyer Robert Glass ended a two-day grilling of John Sidote on Saturday, when the witness refused to look at Ms. Foat and tell her that she killed Moises Chayo in a holdup 18 years ago.

"I'm not going to follow your instructions," Sidote said. "I don't want to be here, Mr. Glass."

Sidote, 45, is the main witness against Ms. Foat. He is an admitted alcoholic who has confessed to this murder and another in which he says Ms. Foat took part.

Ms. Foat, 42, of Los Angeles, was president of the National Organization for Women's chapter in California when she was arrested Jan. 11 for the Chayo killing. Once considered a contender for NOW's national presidency, she did not seek re-election in July.

In testimony Friday, Sidote said both he and Ms. Foat clubbed Chayo to death with a tire iron after she lured him to a remote spot in suburban New Orleans from the bar where she worked as a go-go dancer.

On Saturday, defense lawyers pointed out that in his 1977 confession to New York police, Sidote said only Ms. Foat hit Chayo.

Asked about the inconsistency, Sidote said, "I have not rehearsed any of the testimony."

Ms. Foat contends Sidote has falsely implicated her to avenge her leaving him in 1970.

Asked why he refused to testify against Ms. Foat in 1977, when he went to trial for another murder he said they committed in 1965, Sidote said:

"I didn't want to harm her. I wanted to take my sentence and let justice be served."

Sidote, who has agreed to testify in exchange for immunity from prosecution, described in detail Friday how Ms. Foat allegedly helped kill Chayo, a toy manufacturer, for the $1,400 bankroll he carried.

Assistant District Attorney Gordon Konrad asked him, "Did the two of you do it?" and Sidote replied, "Yes."

Two Korean children travel to U.S. on Air Force One

ABOARD AIR FORCE ONE (AP) — Two young Korean children headed for heart surgery in the United States sang a song for television cameras today and then giggled when they heard their own voices played back.

The children, 4-year-old Lee Kil-Woo and 7-year-old Ahn Gi-Sook — flew to the United States with a presidential party returning from a 6½-day trip to Japan and South Korea.

At Nancy Reagan's suggestion, the children flew on Air Force One to draw attention to a nine-year project to bring poor children from their native countries to a Roslyn, N.Y., hospital for heart surgery. Lee suffers from a condition known as a ventricular septal defect, while Ahn suffers from a tetralogy of follot.

"Have you seen my children?" Mrs. Reagan asked reporters aboard the presidential aircraft. "They're darlings."

The children, who do not speak any English except counting to 10 and reciting the alphabet, sang their song about a rabbit in Korean. Harriet Hodges, coordinator of children's programs for the International Human Assistance programs in Seoul, flew with the children to act as a translator.

Late senator awarded 'Shield'

NEW YORK (AP) — The late U.S. Sen. Henry Jackson, Soviet dissident Yosef Begun and former French Cabinet minister Simone Veil have been named to share the first Shield of Jerusalem award for "defense of the rights of the Jewish people."

Jackson, a Democrat from the state of Washington who died Sept. 1 of a heart attack, earned a long record of support for Israel and defense of Soviet Jews. His share of the $100,000 prize will go to his widow.

Church rejects 'free divorce'

ROYAL OAK, Mich. (AP) — A lawyer who offered a "free divorce" as an auction item to help his Roman Catholic parish raise money had to drop the idea after a storm of protest.

"There were enough eyebrows raised that we asked (the auction committee) to withdraw the item," said the Rev. Dennis Duggan, assistant pastor of the Shrine of the Little Flower in suburban Detroit. "It remained on the list, but it wasn't sold."

Numerous phone calls from angry parishioners persuaded the church to take the action before the weekend event, Duggan said.

Attorney Patrick O'Connor, a church member, said he was "a little disappointed" the item was not auctioned.

Syrian militia shell Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syrian-backed militiamen shelled Beirut's Christian sector today for the first time since a cease-fire took effect seven weeks ago, and U.S. jets resumed reconnaissance flights after Syria was warned not to fire at them.

Formations of F-14 Tomcat interceptors scrambled off the aircraft carrier USS Dwight D. Eisenhower to stage repeated runs over Beirut and the surrounding mountains before midnight and at dawn, according to Lebanese police.

The flights followed a stern warning by the Reagan administration to Syria against firing at U.S. planes over Lebanon. Syrian batteries fired at U.S. planes last week, but police said today's flights drew no ground fire.

The late night sorties by the F-14s coincided with a meeting between President Reagan's new Middle East envoy, Donald Rumsfeld, and Lebanese President Amin Gemyel. A presidential palace statement said they discussed "existing conditions and the latest developments in Lebanon and the Middle East."

Shortly after the meeting ended at midnight, police said Druse gunners in the central mountains fired artillery and Soviet-made Grad rockets into east Beirut.

At least 13 Grads crashed into Christian residential neighborhoods, Christian-controlled radio stations said. No casualties were reported.

ONE ROCKET slammed into the parking lot of the city's electric power station, setting a truck and crane ablaze.

There were no new reports of casualties or major battles from northern Lebanon, where Yasser Arafat and his loyalists in the Palestine Liberation Organization are trying to hold off a force of Syrian-backed mutineers. More than 1,000 people have been killed since the PLO fighting began Nov. 3 around the city of Tripoli.

No reason was given for the overnight shelling barrage in Beirut. Druse militiamen of Lebanon's Socialist Progressive Party frequently shelled the Christian sector during civil warfare last September. But since the Sept. 26 ceasefire, they have refrained from hitting the capital.

The three-week civil war pitted Syrian-backed Druse and Shiite Moslem militias against the Lebanese army and rightist Christian irregulars of the Phalange party. The fighting frequently caught the U.S. Marine base at Beirut's international airport in the crossfire.

U.S. Marine spokesman Maj. Robert Jordan said the Marines could hear the shelling this morning but did not come under any fire themselves.

On Sunday, efforts to reconcile Lebanon's warring factions hit another snag when the government said Syria had asked Gemayel to cancel his planned trip to Damascus today to meet with Syrian President Hafez Assad. It reported the Syrian Foreign Ministry said Assad was ill and hospitalized, but did not specify his ailment.

LEBANON'S STATE radio said the Syrian president had to undergo an appendectomy.

An official announcement today said Syrian Foreign Minister Abdel Halim Khaddam will instead come to Beirut on Thursday for talks with Gemayel.

Beirut radio said one Lebanese soldier was killed Sunday in clashes in mountains overlooking Beirut. The Israeli military command in Tel Aviv said a booby-trapped car in the southern city of Tebnit killed two Lebanese civilians.

In Seoul, South Korea, U.S. National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane warned Syria that the United States will respond if Syrian gunners continue shooting at American aircraft over Lebanon.

"The reality is that whether in Syria or elsewhere in the world that it cannot become a precedent that American citizens or American forces can be attacked with impunity," he said on the CBS-TV program, "Face the Nation." President Reagan was completing a trip to Japan and South Korea.

The Lebanese government said a second round of reconciliation talks among Lebanon's warring factions, scheduled for today in Geneva, has been postponed so Gemayel can consult with officials in other countries on efforts to get foreign forces out of Lebanon.

SYRIA HAD BEEN the first scheduled stop on Gemayel's trip. It was not immediately known how delay of that trip would affect the reconciliation talks.

Archbishop notes persecution of church in Central America

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The head of the Roman Catholic Church in El Salvador says 220 people died in combat and political violence last week, including 34 murdered by right-wing death squads.

San Salvador Archbishop Arturo Rivera y Damas also said in his Sunday homily that "irrational violence" threatens Catholic priests in Guatemala and El Salvador while the leftist Nicaraguan government harasses the church in that country.

"The church is, and will continue to be, persecuted as long as it does not accommodate itself to the caprices of totalitarian systems, whether of the right or the left," said Rivera y Damas, whose country has been wracked by four years of civil war.

In another Central American development, Reagan administration officials discussed sending U.S. military engineers to several Central American nations to assist civilian workers in such projects as road building, according to White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes.

Speakes was commenting on published reports that combat engineers would be sent to Costa Rica. He spoke today aboard Air Force One as President Reagan and his entourage returned to the United States from a six-day trip to Japan and South Korea.

Meanwhile, Foreign Minister Bernardo Sepulveda of Mexico said Central American peace-seeking efforts were in a crucial stage, and he hoped to receive written proposals in Washington from five Central American nations, the Mexico City news service Excelsior reported.

Sepulveda commented before leaving Sunday for Washington, where there will be meetings this week of the Contadora group and the Organization of American States.

The Contadora nations — Mexico, Panama, Venezuela and Colombia — have been trying since January to find peaceful solutions to conflicts affecting Nicaragua, Honduras, El Salvador, Guatemala and Costa Rica.

The OAS this week also will be discussing problems in Central America, where the leftist Sandinista government of Nicaragua finds itself under attack from rebels based in Honduras and Costa Rica. Both El Salvador and Guatemala are struggling against leftist rebels.

Sunday night, Costa Rica's foreign minister, Fernando Minister Fernando Volio, who was supposed to attend the OAS meeting, announced he has resigned the post he has held for 19 months, effective next month.

Volio said he decided he could not carry out his job well "because of an accumulation of interferences that have made my work very difficult." He refused to elaborate.

Previously, Costa Rican President Luis Alberto Monge has said he and Volio share the same ideas on foreign policy, but that Volio's style and approach are different from his. Neither of the two would elaborate Sunday on the differences that led to the resignation.

In San Salvador, Rivera y Damas condemned the "vicious circle" of violence affecting civilians and priests in the region.

Zimbabwe detains 1,000 'prostitutes'

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) — At least 1,000 women, including teen-age students and foreigners, have been detained in a government crackdown on prostitution that critics are denouncing as random harassment of women.

Among those seized were five British schoolteachers picked up in Gweru, 140 miles south of Harare, by soldiers toting submachine guns who shoved them into a truck and took them to the local precinct house.

The Britons were released several hours later, but a spokeswoman said today the British Embassy was "very concerned" and would seek an investigation.

The teachers estimated that at least 1,000 women were detained over the weekend in Gweru alone, including schoolgirls as young as 14. The government has provided no figures, but church leaders said several thousand women may have been detained nationwide.

The U.S. Embassy said it knew of no Americans who were detained.

Zimbabwe's largest newspaper, the Sunday Mail, reported received hundreds of telephone calls from angry husbands who had to produce marriage certificates so police would release their wives.

Police have not said what criteria they used to detain women in the crackdown, which began Oct. 28 in Harare and expanded into a nationwide campaign over the weekend to round up prostitutes who had fled the capital. Police denied they are randomly harassing women, and there were no reports of sexual molestation by officers.

In the past, the government has fined prostitutes the equivalent of $50 to $100. Judicial sources said few women were ever jailed for prostitution.

Moderate left winner in Peru

LIMA, Peru (AP) — The moderate left headed for control of Peru's city halls today, handing President Fernando Belaunde Terry's party a major setback in municipal elections that went smoothly despite threats from guerrilla terrorists.

"It is a moment of recognition and I am glad the country had the opportunity to say so," Belaunde said after left-wing and center-left candidates won the majority of Sunday's elections.

Official results in the races for 1,600 mayoral and city government posts were not expected for about 10 days.

The defeat was the first for Belaunde's centrist Popular Action Party, which propelled him to the presidency twice in the past 20 years.

Belaunde, 71, was president from 1963 to 1968, when he was overthrown in a military coup. He restored civilian government to Peru in 1980 after 12 years of military rule.

The elections were held under threats from the Maoist Shining Path guerrilla movement, which had warned Peruvians they might be killed if they voted. Police with machine guns and soldiers with bayonets guarded more than 40,000 polling places.

No violence was reported at the polls but, after they closed Sunday night, there were eight explosions near the Lima headquarters of the United Left coalition. There were no known casualties, but a police official said the blasts caused some damage and four suspects were arrested.

The United Left, which included Peru's Communist Party, won the mayor's race in Lima with more than 33 percent of the vote. Alfonso Barrantes, a lawyer, polled only 2 percent less that Belaunde's candidate did three years ago.

"We represent the hope of the people who have been deceived too long," Barrantes, 53, told a cheering crowd before the explosions near the coalition headquarters.

Nationwide, the center-left Social Democrats, lead by Alan Garcia, won the bulk of the city halls.

Lee, Permian decoy foes for 5A victories

Midland Lee did it with its leading rusher Isaac Garnett as a decoy while Odessa Permian's big man Britt Hager played second fiddle to backup teammate Dal Watson as both 4-5A teams moved into the second round of the Texas Schoolboy football playoffs with resounding victories Saturday.

While Amarillo was holding Garnett to an uncharacteristic 67 yards, Walter Jones and Tyrone Thurman combined for 144 yards rushing to lead Midland Lee to a 30-3 win over the Sandies.

Watson rushed for 94 yards and threw a 32-yard touchdown pass while Hager, held to 40 yards rushing, still scored three touchdowns and made a key interception in Permian's 40-13 romp over Hereford.

This week the 9-2 Rebels host El Paso Irvin at 8 p.m. Friday in Midland's Memorial Stadium while 10-1 Permian hosts El Paso Eastwood at 2 p.m. Saturday.

In other Region I games, Trinity plays Trimble Tech at 8 p.m. Friday at UT-Arlington Stadium and Wichita Falls Rider plays Newman Smith at 8 p.m. Friday in Wichita Falls. The Lee-Irvin winner plays the Trinity-Trimble winner and the Permian-Eastwood survivor will face the Rider-Smith winner.

TRINITY beat MacArthur last week and Coach John Reddell, former Midland High coach, said, "I saw Trimble on Friday and they are big and fast as the wind. We're not looking forward to anybody." Trimble beat Denton, 24-14.

Newman Smith, a team that started the season 0-3, beat L.D. Bell, 41-7. Wichita Falls, 7-4, a surprise state finalist last season, played a 21-21 tie with Fort Worth Southwest and advanced on penetrations.

Beaumont West Brook junior quarterback James Guidry completed 11 of 17 passes for 211 yards and two touchdowns as the defending Class 5A state champions drove to an easy 21-14 victory over Aldine MacArthur.

The Bruins, ranked No. 2 by AP, Associated Press Schoolboy Poll, improved their season record to 11-0 and lengthened their unbeaten streak to 19 consecutive games in the bidistrict contest.

Third-ranked Plano stomped Dallas Pinkston 35-7, fourth-rated Temple stung Longview Pine Tree 41-7, seventh-ranked Houston Yates blasted Houston Waltrip 20-7 and ninth-rated Brazoswood pulverized Austin LBJ 21-9.

The Bruins meet Dickinson in a second-round playoff bout at 11 a.m. Saturday in the Astrodome.

Blue-chip West Brook senior Johnny Norwood caught six passes, four from the Bruins and two of MacArthur's. Norwood leaped for interceptions at West Brook's 2- and 8-yard lines.

Norwood's snag of a 45-yard Guidry pass set up the Bruins' second score, an 8-yard touchdown run by tailback Jackie Ball. Norwood then caught Guidry's 32-yard touchdown pass for a 21-7 lead with 8:21 to play.

Melvin Collins scored on runs of 42 and 28 yards as Temple used a three-pronged rushing attack to subdue the Pirates.

Temple, now 11-0, will advance against Cypress Creek, the 7-5 winner over Conroe, at a time and place to be determined.

The Wildcats scored 20 points in the second quarter. The Temple backfield, which featured Collins, Vance Blunson, and William Broadus, was almost unstoppable.

Blunson made a 62-yard scoring run. Broadus was good for 73 yards on 19 carries.

Rodney Jones scored on a 43-yard run. The Wildcats, who used 11 ballcarriers, pounded out 433 yards rushing and 25 first downs.

A pair of interceptions, the first by Boo Arnold and another by Robert Milo, kept the Pirates at bay through the remainder of the third and early into the fourth quarter.

Friday, top-ranked Highland Park blitzed Dallas Samuell 27-14, sixth-ranked Converse Judson whipped San Antonio Clark 24-21, eighth-rated Stafford Dulles blasted Austin Reagan 15-9 and 10th-place El Paso Irvin squeezed by El Paso Bel Air 22-20.

Class 3A action saw first-ranked Littlefield lambaste Dalhart 49-0, No. 2 Navasota clip Cameron 30-9, third-place Daingerfield humiliate Clarksville 43-0, No. 4 Pflugerville fall to Brookshire Royal 14-7, No. 5 Waco Robinson nip Waco Jefferson 14-7 and sixth-place Sanger slip against Springtown 30-7.

Other 3A play saw seventh-place Post defeat Frenship 25-0, No. 8 Ballinger bombard Fabens 28-0, ninth-place Kaufman edge Alvarado 16-13 and No. 10 Van Vleck vanquish Bandera 27-7.

Dry hole Oilers finally Luck out

By Associated Press

The Houston Oilers snapped a 17-game losing streak with a 27-17 victory over Detroit.

Second-year quarterback Oliver Luck, making his first NFL start, tossed two touchdown passes.

"It's only one win, it isn't redemption," Oilers interim Coach Chuck Studley said. "Today, we literally rose from the dead. The team made up their mind that this thing had gone long enough."

The Oilers last previous victory was on Sept. 19, 1982, when they defeated Seattle. And the streak-breaker kept the Oilers from tying the club record of 18 straight losses set during successive 1-13 seasons in 1972 and 1973.

In other games, it was: Chicago 17, Philadelphia 14; St. Louis 33, Seattle 28; Buffalo 24, New York Jets 17; Kansas City 20, Cincinnati 15; New England 17, Miami 6; Green Bay 29, Minnesota 21; Cleveland 20, Tampa Bay 0; Pittsburgh 24, Baltimore 13; Washington 33, New York Giants 7; San Francisco 27, New Orleans 0 and Los Angeles Raiders 22, Denver 20.

Tonight, the Los Angeles Rams are at Atlanta.

Luck replaced veteran Gifford Nielsen at quarterback for Houston and threw 13-yard touchdown passes to Mike McCloskey and rookie Chris Dressel.

"The first thing I thought about was last year winning the national championship," Penn State rookie McCloskey, who scored his first pro touchdown, said after the victory. "It feels good to see so many guys and fans happy."

Besdies the TD passes, Houston scored on rookie Larry Moriarty's three-yard run and field goals of 47 and 21 yards by Florian Kempf. Running back Earl Campbell, upset last week when he sat out more than half the game, rushed for 107 yards against Detroit.

The Lions relied on Billy Sims, who scored on a one-yard dive and helped set up a 35-yard field goal by Ed Murray and a 10-3 Detroit lead in the second quarter. Detroit also had a 17-10 lead when quarterback Gary Danielson threw three yards to James Jones.

"We feel terrible that it had to happen to us," Detroit Coach Monte Clark said of giving up Houston's first victory after 10 losses this season. "We both played some good football, but when they needed to make the big play they did, and when we needed to make the big play we didn't."

St. Louis quarterback Neil Lomax and Roy Green teamed up for four touchdown passes — three coming in the seocnd quarter — and Neil O'Donoghue booted a 33-yard field goal as the Cardinals edged Seattle. Lomax outdueled Seattle's Dave Krieg, who threw three touchdown passes.

Two touchdown passes by Jim McMahon and Bob Thomas' 22-yard field goal boosted Chicago past Philadelphia. Thomas' kick, with 12:24 remaining in the game, snapped a 14-14 tie.

Joe Cribbs grabbed a pass from Joe Ferguson at the 5-yard line and fell into the end zone with 22 seconds left to boost the penalty-plagued Buffalo Bills over the New York Jets. The Bills moved 75-yards in five plays in the last minute of the game for the winning TD.

Bill Kenney passed for one touchdown and ran for another to pace Kansas City over Cincinnati, while Steve Grogan ran for one touchdown and set up another with a 44-yard completion to lead New England past Miami.

Green Bay moved into a first-place tie in the National Conference's Central Division as Lynn Dickey passed for two touchdowns, Jan Stenerud kicked two field goals and Greg Boyd sacked Minnesota quarterback Steve Dils for a safety.

Mike Pruitt ran for two short touchdowns and the Cleveland defense turned in its first shutout since 1974 as the Browns blanked Tampa Bay. The Buccaneers also lost running back James Wilder, who suffered two broken ribs and will likely miss several games.

Cliff Stoudt threw two touchdown passes as Pittburgh remained unbeaten on the road and extended the NFL's longest current winning streak to seven games.

The Washington Redskins, behind two two-yard touchdown runs by John Riggins, moved into a first-place tie with Dallas in the National Conference East. Riggins tied a NFL record for consecutive games with a touchdown run — 11 straight regular season contests, a mark set in 1964 by Lenny Moore — while Mark Moseley kicked four field goals in the easy victory.

Chris Bahr's 39-yard field goal with four seconds remaining lifted the Los Angeles Raiders past Denver. The Broncos had taken a 20-19 lead on a four-yard TD run by rookie quarterback John Elway with 58 seconds remaining before the Raiders moved 48 yards in five plays to position themselves for Bahr's winning kick.

Fred Dean sacked New Orleans quarterback Dave Wilson six times and Joe Montana threw three touchdown passes as San Francisco rolled to its victory. The victory snapped a two-game losing streak as the 49ers took the lead in the NFC West race with a 7-4 record.

Cowboys pay for '80 loss

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The San Diego Chargers haven't forgotten a bitter loss to the Dallas Cowboys in 1980, and Coach Don Coryell didn't want to see another one slip away.

"The last time we played Dallas we had a 24-14 lead at halftime (before losing 42-31). We all reminded ourselves of that," Coryell said after San Diego held on for a 24-23 upset victory over the Cowboys Sunday.

"We reminded ourselves they are a great comeback team. They have great poise and so many weapons, they can score a bunch of points in a hurry," he said.

But Sunday the Chargers came up with ways to score in a hurry and forged a surprising 24-6 lead early in the third quarter.

Rookie Derrie Nelson opened the flood gates with an early 21-yard blocked punt return for a touchdown and beleaguered quarterback Ed Luther produced his best outing as a pro by passing for 340 yards, completing 26 of 43 attempts. He had one touchdown pass and one interception.

"We had a good game plan and shot the whole works," said Luther, a four-year pro who had been under fire for his inability to generate any offense since veteran Dan Fouts was injured four games ago.

"This is a great feeling. Seems like it's been ages since everyone has been happy," Luther said.

Dallas Coach Tom Landry said the Cowboys, 9-2, hurt themselves with a poor first half, commenting, "We didn't block or stop them enough. This loss will make us play a little better next time."

San Diego, 4th graf prvs

San Diego had scored only two touchdowns in the last three games before stunning the Dallas defense.

The Chargers, 4-7, snapped a four-game losing streak.

The return by Nelson was San Diego's first blocked punt return for a score since 1961. It came after Miles McPherson blocked a punt by Danny White at Dallas' 22-yard line. It was the Chargers first blocked punt since 1972.

White threw two fourth-quarter touchdown passes, the second to Billy Jo Dupree with 8:13 remaining, but San Diego's much-maligned defense, playing one of its best games of the year, held the Cowboys at bay to preserve the victory.

The setback denied Dallas its best-ever start.

White finished with 31 completions in 47 attempts for 300 yards. Running back Tony Dorsett, who needed 130 yards to crack the 1,000-yard mark, had 58 yards on 17 carries.

San Diego built a 17-6 halftime lead behind Luther, who attacked the Cowboys' defense with short passes. Luther caught fire in the second quarter, igniting an 81-yard, eight-play drive to give the Chargers a 14-0 lead.

Chuck Muncie's 2-yard touchdown run came after Luther completions of 13 to Wes Chandler, 21 to Charlie Joiner and consecutive strikes of 16 and 30 yards to Pete Holohan, putting the ball at the Dallas 3-yard line.

The Cowboys, held to 37 yards rushing in the first half, got to the Chargers' 33-yard line with 1:45 left, but Rafael Septien was short on a 50-yard field goal attempt.

However, two plays later, Cowboys cornerback Rod Hill intercepted Luther and returned the ball 12 yards to the San Diego 30, setting up a 16-yard TD toss from White to wide receiver Drew Pearson with 55 seconds remaining.

Septien's extra point kick was wide to the left.

The Chargers, refusing to sit on a 14-6 lead, stormed downfield on Luther's passing and tacked on a 37-yard field goal by Rolf Benirschke with eight seconds left in the first half for a 17-6 margin.

San Diego opened the second half with a 72-yard touchdown drive, with Luther completing five of six passes for 68 yards, including an 18-yard touchdown pass to Holohan with 3:29 elapsed.

Benches emptied midway through the scoring.

The Quotebook...

Maryland Coach Bobby Ross, whose 11th-ranked Terrapins lost to No. 17 Clemson 52-27 but won the Atlantic Coast Conference championship because the Tigers, who beat all seven ACC opponents, are on probation and ineligible for the title: "I think this does tarnish the title to some extent."

Keeling coin gives Rebels home field edge

Has anyone told Midland Lee defensive end Eddie Kittle that the area football championship between the Rebels and undefeated El Paso Irvin Friday at 8 p.m. will be decided in Midland's dumpy Memorial Stadium?

Someone better have some smelling salts around when they do tell him. He was holding out for the Sun Bowl. Someone get him to the right stadium Friday. Maybe we can put Lee assistant coach Eddie Wolski in charge of that task if he isn't already in Juarez.

KITTLE WAS thrilled to be playing in Jones Stadium last Saturday. He noted, "This will be the first time a Lee team has ever been the home team in a good stadium."

As fate would have it, Kittle never had a chance at playing in the Sun Bowl. Lee head honcho Spike Dykes had a secret weapon that Kittle knew nothing about.

When it came time Saturday to flip the coin to see who would play host to the area championship, Dykes pulled out his coin and let Irvin coach Tony Shaw call the shot.

"I used Jimmie Keeling's coin. I threw it off the ceiling and let it hit the floor. Shaw called tails. It was heads," said Dykes.

For those with short memories, Keeling won five straight coin flips when the Bobcats made a trip to the playoffs last year. The Bobcats not only won the District 4-5A playoff berth with two flips, but also won the home field advantage for three straight weeks. Dykes' toss gave Keeling's coin a perfect 6-0 mark. See Eddie. No chance. It's back to second class.

Lee assistant David Browning said, "That coin is now the district coin. I hope someone doesn't lose it."

BUT YOU can't really blame the Reb players if they were a little disappointed at winning...or is it losing?...the coin flip. Even in advancement in the state's glory hunt, Memorial Stadium is a step down from Saturday and Jones Stadium.

Texas Tech greeted the playoff teams in high style Saturday. Above each player's locker was the player's name with a Texas Tech emblem on it. When defenive back Michael Johnson saw the lockerroom Saturday for the first time, he told Browning, "Coach, this is big time. I hope we play big time."

And the Rebels were big time in a 30-3 mauling of Amarillo High.

There probably won't be such greetings at "Tall City Memorial Dump" Friday night. One just hopes the lockerroom doors open. They probably selected Friday night so you couldn't see all the flaws as well as you could in daylight.

At any rate, Midland fans will miss the travel and Irvin's players will face a travel day. Hey, you got to make this one look good anyway you can. This is big time stuff in a small time atmosphere.

Lee's season ticket holders will get first shot at tickets Tuesday at 8 a.m. at the stadium ticket office, located at the northeast corner of Memorial "Dump" Stadium. The general public will get a crack at tickets at 8 a.m. Wednesday. Expect a sellout, so make plans to get there fast.

PRIOR TO finding out where the game would take place, there were some Lee players who didn't care where the game was played.

Lee fullback Isaac Garnett said, "We've got it going for us right now and I think we would play in the back of the YMCA if that's where they put the game."

Lee defensive tackle Pat Stevens said, "Isaac is right. The way we are playing right now, just find us a big backyard. That would be kind of like Memorial Stadium anyway, wouldn't it?"

Just a note about Irvin. The Rockets are 11-0 on the season and only once have scored less than 20 points. They won a 6-3 decision over rival Coronado to win the District 1-5A championship.

Irvin defeated Bel Air by a 22-20 score in bi-district play Friday to earn the right to meet Lee. Irvin had previously beaten Bel Air by a 35-14 count in the season opener for both schools.

Neither school has played a common opponent but Coronado dropped a narrow decision to Odessa Permian early in the year. The area matchup could prove to be a potent offensive fight.

And speaking of Permian. The Panthers won the home field advantage over El Paso Eastwood. They will play Saturday at 2 p.m. at Ratliff Stadium. I'm still wondering why they are snickering over there. They should be feeling sorry for us. Aren't these two communities supposed to be entering an era of cooperation?

Bucks defeat Seattle

Moncrief comes through at line under pressure

By Associated Press

At no time in a basketball game is a player more alone than when he goes to the foul line with no time left on the clock.

That lonely, pressurized situation had no effect on all-star guard Sidney Moncrief as he hit two free throws to give the Milwaukee Bucks a 108-107 NBA win over Seattle.

"I felt very little pressure to make the free throws," said the soft-spoken Moncrief, who finished with 30 points. "I knew I was going to make them."

Al Wood had given Seattle the lead at 107-106 with a baseline jumper with five seconds to go.

The Bucks' final play was to get the ball to Moncrief, who took a lob pass from Bob Lanier, drove under the basket and was fouled by Wood at the buzzer.

76ers 124, Clippers 116

At Philadelphia, the 76ers handed San Diego its sixth straight road loss this season and 19th in a row since Feb. 17 behind Moses Malone's 28 points and 16 rebounds.

Lakers 124, Utah 118

Earvin "Magic" Johnson had 30 points, 13 rebounds and 16 assists as Los Angeles won at home against Utah.

Suns 113, Warriors 98

Walter Davis scored 10 of his 16 points in the second period, when Phoenix took control of its home game with Golden State.

Purvis Short scored 24 points for the Warriors.

Blazers 135, Hawks 105

Jim Paxson, Wayne Cooper and Clyde Drexler led a first-half explosion at Portland that carried the Trail Blazers past Atlanta, which lost its fourth straight game. Paxson scored 12 of his 24 points and Cooper 10 of his 22 as Portland took a 37-24 lead after the first period. Drexler added 13 of his total of 20 in the Trail Blazers' 39-point second quarter that lifted them into a 76-55 halftime advantage.

BC, Irish in Liberty

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Notre Dame will play Boston College in the Liberty Bowl on Dec. 29, published reports said today.

The Commercial Appeal in Memphis quoted unidentified sources as saying the two teams were chosen Sunday.

"The only thing I can say is that we have considered a number of outstanding football teams for our 25th game. The only other thing I would say is that we are happy with the developments that have transpired," said Tim Treadwell, chairman of the Liberty Bowl selection committee.

Bowl invitations cannot officially be extended or accepted until Saturday according to NCAA rules.

The Boston College Eagles were upset by Syracuse 21-10 Saturday, while Notre Dame fell to Penn State 34-30.

"I'm thinking of converting, it sounds so good to me," BC coach Jack Bicknell said of the game that will pit two predominantly Catholic schools.

McEnroe beats strangely subdued Connors

From wire reports

TENNIS—John McEnroe defeated a strangely laid back Jimmy Connors 7-5, 6-1, 6-4 to win the Benson-Hedges tournament for the fifth time in six years. Near the end of a fiercely contested first set, Connors shouted out and was warned for an "audible obscenity." It was the second time this week he had been warned for obscenities, and Connors appeared to lose interest in the match after that. He hit loose shots, made flippant comments to the crowd and later renewed his criticisms of the strict way some umpires apply the Volvo Grand Prix Code of Conduct.

"They are taking all the joy and fun out of the game," Connors said. "If they go on like this next year, you won't see me around any more." Connors, fined $500 for an audible obscenity in a previous round, was fined $750 this time. He said to American tournament supervisor Keith Johnston: "The number of fines I've had from you this week must be enough to buy you a first class ticket home."

McEnroe, a model of good behavior throughout the tournament, sympathized with Connors. "He was distracted by what happened, and he never quite got back. I was a little surprised by his attitude in the last two sets. He has always given his best in matches against me before."...

Chris Evert Lloyd won the Lynda Carter Classic for the fourth straight year Sunday, battering third-seeded Bonnie Gadusek 6-0, 6-4...

FOOTBALL—Quarterback Tom Clements threw three TD passes as Winnipeg defeated Edmonston, 49-22, in the CFL Western semifinal and will play the BC Lions Saturday in Vancouver....

The Cats play Toronto in the finals this week...

The NAIA playoffs begin Saturday with No. 2 Baker, Kan., 10-0-0, against No. 8 Pacific Lutheran, Wash., 7-2-0 in Tacoma, Wash., sixth-ranked Findlay, Ohio, 8-1-0, is paired off against No. 5 Westminster College, Pa., 8-1-0 at Findlay. College of St. Thomas, Minn., which is ranked fourth and has a 9-1-0 record, meets No. 1 Northwestern, Iowa, 11-0-0 at Orange City, Iowa. No. 3 Wilmington, Ohio, 8-1-0, faces No. 7 William Jewell, Mo., 8-1-1 at Liberty, Mo. All games kickoff at 1 p.m. Saturday...

TED BATTLES

No need to disguise cage race

No matter how it has been disguised to prevent a deadly case of overconfidence, Midland College has been the obvious favorite in each of the last three Western Junior College Conference races.

Coach Jerry Stone would throw up a smoke screen about "how on any given night, anybody can beat anybody else," but it was more for the benefit of the troops...to keep 'em in line and their heads on their shoulders.

THE ONLY time anybody could beat the MC in the last three seasons was on a night when the Chaps were off in Kansas someplace on a dream trip.

This year, it's another story. Before the finals of the Chaparral Tournament Saturday night, Stone said, "We're just like Odessa, young and a lot of freshmen. We're not any better than anybody else this year. We have a chance of being a good team," but the inference was, "we aren't yet."

His point was emphasized when MC, playing on its home floor, barely won a 94-91 overtime thriller over the cross-Basin Wranglers.

"That's a sample of what it's going to be like this year," Stone said. "And there are better teams in the WJCC than either one of us at this stage."

OC's Jim Yeakel went home from the tournament content that his team can compete this year. "We made unforced mistakes and kept digging holes for ourselves. And then, too, we got into a half court game, we didn't do too good a job. But these are mistakes we won't make later in the season."

"I think it was a great tournament," said Yeakel. "We played three tight games and I can't think of a better way for a young team to come of age any faster."

IN WINNING, MC showed some of the strains of the 1981-82 team.

After shaking OC at 32-32 with a nine-point run to lead 48-38 at half, the Chaps squandered the advantage when the Wranglers outscored MC 10-2 to tie the game at 72 with 7:15 left and set up the down the stretch hysteria.

The Chaps apparently had it won again as sophomore Brian Essary sparked the team into an 88-83 lead with two minutes left, by converting key free throws, grabbing vital defensive rebounds, feeding Jackie Phinnessee and Teviin Binns for important goals in the final 2:20 and even scoring a bucket himself to give MC a 89-87 lead with 19 seconds to go.

It was enough to make a guy a hero under ordinary circumstances, but on this night it wasn't even enough to win the game.

1981-82 was the same way. It put its faithful through a ringer every time out by building up awesome leads in a twinkling and losing them almost as fast.

This team showed something, however, that that team never did. In overtime, it ran more than two minutes off the clock with its Four-Corner, Domino, Delay, whatever you want to call it. The 1981-82 team didn't run two minutes off the clock all season with a stall.

"That's not really true," said Stone when asked where he'd been keeping his Four Corner all these years. "We had a delay game, but no one ever threw a 1-3-1 defense at us before in that situation."

Of course, despite all the anguish that 1981-82 team caused its followers, and whether it had a stall or not, it did wind up with a national championship.

Georgia-UT in Cotton?

DALLAS (AP) — The Cotton Bowl apparently will have to settle on Georgia as the guest team in its annual New Years Day Classic.

Action taken Sunday in a conference hookup between representatives of Michigan and Ohio State indicated that the winner of next Saturday's game will go to the Sugar Bowl as an opponent for Auburn.

The Cotton Bowl also had wanted the winner of the Michigan-Ohio State game and a source close to the Cotton Bowl said the classic, which will be played Jan. 2, will have the Southeast Conference runnerup Bulldogs, who have a 8-1-1 mark this season, as the guest team to oppose the Southwest Conference champion

A source close to the Cotton Bowl said that Georgia was the fall back choice in case one of the two Big Ten teams couldn't be courted.

Georgia does not play this week, and officially can't sign with a bowl until 6 p.m. Saturday.

Iowa, another team in the Cotton Bowl picture, apparently is headed for the Gator Bowl.

Official invitations cannot be made until next Saturday.

A Sugar Bowl invitation to Michigan or Ohio State would mean Southern Methodist probably would have to settle for the Sun or Liberty Bowl.

The Liberty Bowl has a $600,000 plus payoff, and may be the bowl the Mustangs would choose if they could not receive a major bowl bid.

SMU Athletic Director Bob Hitch said Sugar Bowl representative Jim Higgins told him that "SMU is still the second team in the Sugar Bowl behind the Michigan-Ohio State winner.

"If they can't get 'em and we keep winning we should get a chance to get to New Orleans."

Higgins, the incoming president of the Sugar Bowl, said, "I was impressed with SMU. I think Auburn-SMU would be a good game."

However, Hitch admits, "It (a major bowl bid) doesn't look good for us."

The No. 7-rated Mustangs, who beat Texas Tech 33-7 Saturday, are 8-1 with their only loss coming to unbeaten and No. 2-ranked Texas, which survived TCU 20-13 Saturday.

If Texas defeats either Baylor or Texas A&M in its final two games then the Longhorns would become the host team in the Cotton Bowl.

SMU has games left against Arkansas in Little Rock and Houston in Tokyo (The Mirage Bowl) on Nov. 26.

Two Texas losses and two SMU victories would put the Mustangs in the Cotton Bowl and create all kinds of havoc among the holiday classics.

Mustang Coach Bobby Collins said if the Mustangs win the rest of their games and don't get invited to a major bowl "I'd use whatever pull I have to fight for a playoff system.

"How can you deny us if we win? How can you not take us?"

The Bluebonnet Bowl in Houston has increased its interest in Baylor with Missouri as a possible opponent. The Sun and Independence Bowls also have been looking hard at the Bears, who play in Austin Saturday.

Baylor has losses to SMU and Texas Tech and was tied by Texas A&M.

Group offers to buy Cowboys

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A group of Dallas businessmen has offered to buy the Dallas Cowboys of the National Football League from oilman Clint Murchison, perhaps for as much as $35 million to $40 million, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported today.

Tex Schramm, Cowboys' president and general manager, confirmed Sunday after a game against the San Diego Chargers that the team is for sale, the newspaper said.

'Boot' maker's profits defying gravity

By JOELLE COHEN
Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — The sport of hanging upside-down has become a downright upright idea for the manufacturer of "Gravity Boots."

The boots, which started as a fad in 1981, are beginning to sweep the country's personal exercise sporting goods market. What makes them even more inverted, sales-wise, is that they are being marketing directly to fitness buffs — not to gymnasiums or medical clinics.

The boots' manufacturer, Gravity Guidance Inc., saw gross sales soar from $1.3 million in 1981 to $12 million last year, and estimates $20 million in sales for 1983, despite continued resistance from the medical profession, for whose use the company's "Gravity Guidance System" originally was designed.

Gravity Boots were invented in 1965 by Dr. Robert Manatt Martin, now 73, a former circus gymnast who intended inverted hanging as an alternative to back surgery for some patients. After more than a decade of trying unsuccessfully to interest other physicians in the idea, Martin's sons — Bryce and Robert Jr., also an M.D. — decided to shift gears and take aim at the consumer.

With a well-timed boost from Hollywood — Richard Gere exercised with gravity boots in the 1981 film "American Gigolo" — the consumer-targeted company was off the ground.

GRAVITY GUIDANCE'S most unique inventions are the Gravity Boots, steel-and-rubber ankle cuffs with hooks that slip onto chin-up bars, and "Gravity Guiders," rotating steel-and-canvas cots with foot "handlebars" for the boots. The company also makes exercise bars, free-standing and for doorways.

This year, Gravity Guidance has introduced five new products in hopes of reaching more consumers and moving into medical and health-club markets: three low-cost versions of the gravity guider and exercise bars, and two new sturdy, multi-use apparatuses for clinics and institutions.

Though none of the equipment is within reach of the average jogger — the lowest-price boots fetch $75 a pair — sales have been growing rapidly, Martin said. Doctors, however, continue to be skeptical, and some articles have claimed inversion is dangerous, although Martin has letters from sports coaches extolling its virtues.

Inversion, he says, represents a whole new form of conditioning. While aerobic exercise tones the cardio-vascular system and stretching conditions your muscles, inversion — or hanging upside-down — relaxes your skeletal structure by relieving gravity's pressure on your joints, Martin said.

The medical controversy apparently is not over whether hanging benefits the spine and joints. Rather, the question is whether the circulatory system above the heart is capable of performing as legs and feet normally do — that is, whether they are capable of pumping blood back to the heart against gravity. Some doctors say no; Martin claims it's just a matter of getting used to it.

ANSWERING THE question to doctors' satisfaction is slow because statistically valid studies take time and results must be duplicated by impartial researchers, the younger physician said. For now, the company is being careful not to make medical claims in its consumer advertising and has advertised only three times in medical journals.

That will change this year, however, Martin said, with more advertising of products like the Professional Gravity Guider 1130, which at $996 is best suited to a doctor's office. Scoliosis, sciatic conditions and both rheumatoid and degenerative arthritis respond well to inversion, he said.

The company's profits — now running at "better than 4 percent," said Bryce Martin, president of the company — have been protected by special "pioneer" patents, which designate the products new inventions for which there was no precedent in function — not only in design, as most patents state.

"That means there was 'no prior art,' no method of full body weight traction before we invented the Gravity Boot," he said. The company has had some 30 imitators, he said, but is suing them "one at a time." He said it has won at least one of seven legal actions now underway, receiving an injunction against Inversion Health Systems of Minnesota.

That the sporting goods industry is changing is no secret, of course.

"All you have to do is look at the number of running shoes being sold," said Edward Weller, an analyst with E.F. Hutton in New York. "Exercise has become significantly more important to the American public than competitive games in the past few years."

Reagan leasing plan bringing in less revenues

By The Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — The Interior Department in the past 15 months has sold oil- and gas-exploration rights for 50 percent more of the Outer Continental Shelf than the Carter administration did in four years and has received less than half the price per acre.

Heartily embraced by the oil industry, the "accelerated" leasing program put into effect by departing Interior Secretary James G. Watt will give companies the chance to buy drilling rights for virtually all federally owned lands off the U.S. coast by the end of 1987.

The 7.7 million acres that Interior has leased since August 1982, not only surpasses the 5.3 million acres leased under President Carter but constitutes more than one-fourth of all federal offshore lands leased in the program's 30-year history.

However, while the Reagan administration boasts of receiving "record or near-record bonus bid totals" from its offerings, a breakdown reveals that Interior is selling offshore rights for an average of $1,092 per acre under its new program compared with $2,381 under Carter.

The 2.5 percent of the federally owned seabed now under lease has yielded 6 billion barrels of oil, more than 58 trillion cubic feet of natural gas and $58.5 billion in revenues to the Treasury through the end of 1982.

ENVIRONMENTAL and citizens groups contend that the Reagan administration, through its five-year plan to offer almost 1 billion acres for lease, is in effect "flooding the market" and denying the public a fair-market-value return for the nation's oil and gas resources.

"By offering all the acreage, it reduces the number of bidders per tract and gives private companies the opportunity to get the acreage they want at very low prices," said Edwin Rothschild of the Citizen-Labor Energy Coalition.

David Russell, acting director of Interior's Minerals Management Service, acknowledged, "It's true that with this larger area put on the auction block, on a per-acre basis we may get lower bonus bids."

The administration, he said, does not believe its objective should be to obtain "maximum return to the government" from the leasing program.

"The primary objective is to encourage oil and gas exploration offshore and therefore to increase production from federal lands and decrease our dangerous import dependence," Russell said. "It is not to eke out every cent in front-end money that we can from a particular tract."

BUT CONGRESS, also concerned about environmental implications of the administration's program, moved recently to slow the leasing by barring for one year the sale of rights to certain areas off California, Florida and Massachusetts.

While Minerals Management Service spokesman Donald R. Hannaford expressed fear that the action reflected a "not-off-my-shore" trend that could spread, the areas involved total only about 7 million acres, a tiny fraction of the federally owned seabed.

The administration, moreover, makes clear that it intends to press ahead with the program, under which oil and gas rights for some of the potentially richest producing areas off Alaska are to be put up for bids in next year.

The importance of the Outer Continental Shelf and the deeper area beyond it, known as the continental slope, lies in experts' belief that more than half of all future U.S. discoveries will be on federal offshore lands.

At a time when the nation's proved oil and gas reserves have been declining steadily, the Minerals Management Service estimates that 43.5 billion barrels of oil and 230.6 trillion cubic feet of gas — more than double this country's proved energy reserves — remain to be produced there.

AS MUCH AS two-thirds of the offshore oil, experts believe, may be off the Alaskan coast.

Yet until the end of the 1970s, drilling under the leasing program was concentrated almost entirely off Louisiana and Texas. Even today, no offshore oil is being produced anywhere in U.S. federal waters other than off those states and California.

The reason had much to do with the way the leasing system worked until 1978. Oil companies under that system would "nominate" offshore tracts that interested them to Interior, which put up for bids only areas the companies seemed most anxious to lease.

"This way, the public received what it was supposed to receive-fair market value," Rothschild said.

"But the result," said Bobby Hall of the American Petroleum Institute, "was that companies tended to go for the known geological structures.

"They didn't go for the frontier areas because if you went out there, drilled some wells, didn't hit anything but acquired some geologic data that gave you a lot better idea about the area, you never knew if you were going to get a chance to get back in there and capitalize on the knowledge you had," he said.

OIL COMPANIES ALSO held back, industry and government experts agree, out of concern that by pinpointing specific tracts, they were giving competitors leads that might result in the original companies' being outbid for their own discoveries.

As a consequence, despite the rapid increase in world oil prices during the 1970s, U.S. offshore production declined 34 percent that decade.

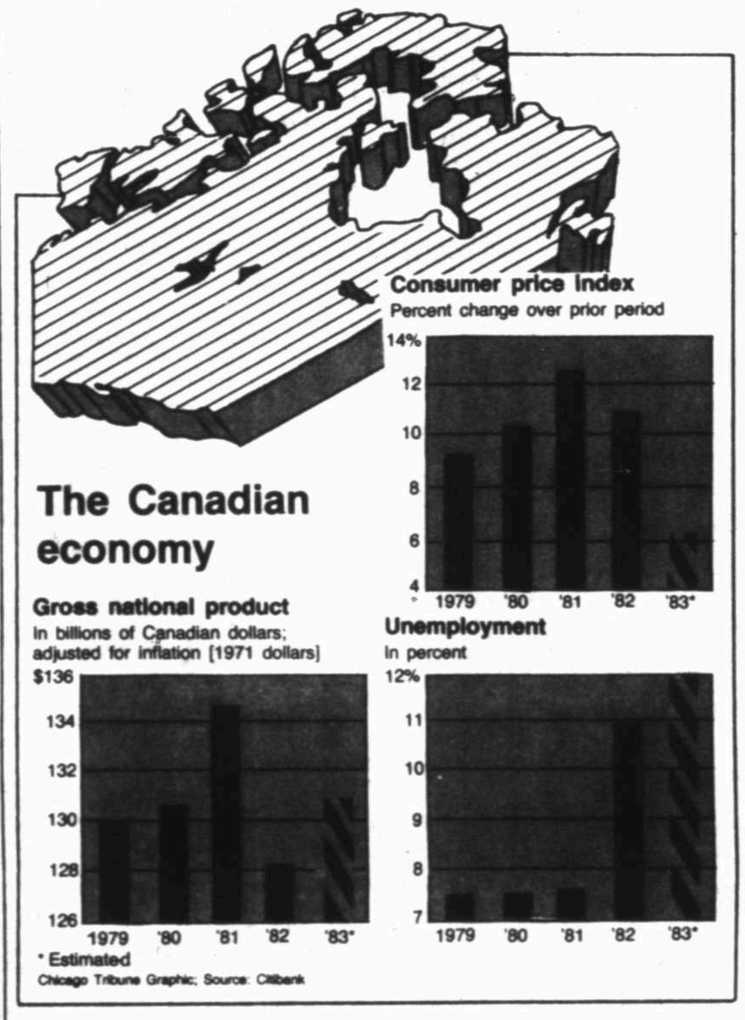
Alarmed by this trend, Congress in 1978 revised the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act to "promote the swift, orderly and efficient exploration of our almost untapped domestic oil and gas resources in the Outer Continental Shelf."

The original plan that resulted, formulated by Carter's Interior secretary, Cecil D. Andrus, failed to survive a court challenge by coastal states and environmental groups, but the U.S. Court of Appeals upheld Watt's revised plan last July.

"We call the plan inventory through leasing," Russell said. By leasing large areas never offered before, he said, a "comprehensive inventory of the nation's oil and gas assets" will emerge.

OPPONENTS OF THE program charge that, when it is inventoried in this manner, "the acreage no longer will be in public hands."

But government and industry experts said that even at the outside, no more than 50 million acres of the 1 billion being offered are likely to be leased in the five-year program.



Economist predicts more spending in '84

Special To The Reporter-Telegram

DALLAS — Consumer spending will increase in 1984, but consumers are unlikely to continue to lead the economic recovery, said Republic-Bank Corp.'s Chief Economist, William E. Gibson.

"After the recovery's initial surge of consumer spending, some slowing in growth typically takes place, and 1984 seems to be no exception. Though consumption will surge ahead next year, consumers are unlikely to continue to lead the recovery in 1984. Business spendng and investment will have to move ahead if the expansion is to stay on track," Gibson stated.

In his analysis of consumer spending, Gibson examined four determinants:

Income Trends - A slowdown in wage rate growth combined with increasng inflation will crimp growth in real disposal income, although this will be offset by volume increases in consumer spending brought about by rising employment.

Consumer Sentiment - Positive effects on consumer confidence resulting from declining unemployment will be offset by uncertainty about interest rates.

Thus, consumer sentiment will remain generally strong, but will not improve further dramatically.

Household Wealth - Two important factors are housing values, which should not experience the spectacular growth rates of the late 1970s, and common stocks, which probably will not see a strong surge in value in 1984. Consequently, household wealth most likely will not stimulate large consmer spendng increases next year.

Financial Positions — Based on high household liquidity and a reasonable ratio of consumer installment debt to personal income, consumer financial positions remain comfortable and supportive of further expansion in spending.

Additionally, both the savings rate and interest rates will have a large impact on consumer activity in 1984, Gibson said.

Savings Rate — the fraction of personal income that consmers do not spend will rise above this year's 4.9 percent rate, to about 5.4 percent, thus reducing the percentage of spending.

Interest rates which affect consumers heavily through savings, stock and bond values, house values and confidence, seem likely to firm early in 1984, although they could edge back down late in the year. Interest rates are not likely to be a positive factor for consmers except possibly late next year.

New cars cost more when bought in pieces

By The Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Serivce

Any dedicated do-it-yourselfer who wonders whether he could save money on a new car by buying all the parts for it and then assembling it himself is in for a rude awakening: The parts alone would cost him at least three times more than the sticker price of the car already assembled.

That is what the Alliance of American Insurers has found from annual studies of replacement-part prices. Each year the studies have shown that unassembled parts cost 3 1-2 to 4 times more than new-car dealers charge for the same parts assembled as a car, even though the assembled car includes the cost of labor. According to this year's study, all the parts, together with materials such as paint, for a fully equipped 1983 Oldsmobile Cutlass Ciera-LS two-door coupe with a suggested retail price of $10,121 total a whopping $35,230.

Automobile manufacturers defend their replacement-part prices, pointing out that fenders, hoods, doors and other sheet-metal parts commonly damaged in auto accidents require big investments in tool-and-die equipment to produce, and huge warehouses to store. They say shipping the parts is costly, handling them is labor-intensive and inventory is expensive because they often stamp out several years' supply at a time.

But insurance companies, whose policies pay for most of the crash parts purchased as replacements, consider the prices inordinately high. Says Murtha F. von Leer, director of material damage claims for the Kemper Group: "Crash parts prices aren't justified. They are one of the worst rip-offs of the public."

Whatever the merits of the argument, no one disputes the Alliance of American Insurers' conclusion that "the high cost of parts is a principal reason why auto-crash repairs are so expensive and, as a consequence, why auto insurance rates are so high." Parts, it turns out, account for 50 percent to 60percent of the cost of repairing collision damage, with labor making up the rest.

What is more, parts prices have been going up nearly twice as fast as labor charges. According to Allstate Insurance Co. surveys, labor rates charged by auto-body repair shops have risen an average of 33 percent since 1978. In the same five-year period, prices of 13 frequently replaced body parts for 20 representative car models have gone up 59 percent, State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co. calculates.

Ford Pintos illustrate the trend. Five years ago a Pinto front fender cost $88. Today, it's $174. A Pinto hood that was $112 in 1978 is $225 today. And a Pinto door that was $103 is now $352.

High parts prices mean that only a minor accident that damages a fraction of a car's parts can render the car uneconomical to repair. When the estimated cost of repairs, plus the car's salvage value, equals a car's pre-accident resale value, insurance companies typically declare the car a total loss and pay the owner enough, minus any applicable deductible, to buy a comparable replacement.

High parts prices help account for the high rate at which insurers are totaling the new breed of frameless "unitized" cars flooding the freeways. The reason: These lightly constructed cars with their thin body panels and vulnerable front-wheel-drive assemblies are particularly prone to damage that can be repaired only by replacing the damaged parts.

"With frame cars, you could repair almost anything, even crumpled sheet metal," says Connie Fandino, proprietor of Le Mans Auto Center, a body shop in Hollywood.

IPAA says it's good time for drilling wells

Special To the Reporter-Telegram

NEW ORLEANS — "There could not be a better time to drill wells," was the summary of the Independent Petroleum Association of America's Cost Study Committee which tracks the cost of drilling oil and gas wells and related activities.

In a report released at the IPAA's annual meeting in New Orleans, the committee reported "costs are down around 10 to 15 percent more than last year, material and supplies are described as 'more than ample,' prospects are better and returns are up."

The committee noted that steel shipments are off 8 percent in the first seven months of 1983, compared with the same period in 1982. Reported wells and footage drilled are down only 15-20 percent indicating the supplies of oil country tubular goods are coming from inventories. "The problem," the report said, "has been compounded by a 400-foot drop in the average depth of each well drilled in the first seven months of this year."

The committee learned that 5,273 rigs are currently available for drilling wells of 3,000 feet or more, but that only 48 percent of these available rigs were being utilized.

"Of particular significance is the large number of idle rigs found in the major gas drilling areas. Oklahoma, southern Louisiana and the southwest states had 1,060 idle rigs or nearly 39 percent of all U.S. idle equipment," the report continued.

WTGS sponsors course

The West Texas Geological Society will sponsor a six-hour continuing education course on Wednesday, Nov. 16, at the Midland Center. The course is titled "Practical Subsurface and Stratigraphic Methods of Exploration for Carbonate Reservoirs" and will be taught by John F. Harris, consulting geologist from Tulsa.

Harris received his B.S. and M.S. degrees in geology from the University of Tulsa in 1948 and 1959, respectively. Since 1959, he has been a consulting geologist.

Interested persons may enroll the course by obtaining a registration blank from the WTGS office at 109 Metro Building or by using the registration blank in the November WTGS Bulletin. Cost of course is $50.

Industrial report released

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States needs a more effective national industrial policy to help bolster its competitive lead in computers and key electronic components, according to a study by the congressional Office of Technology Assessment.

The study noted that "while IBM has abundant resources and technology to compete effectively against Japanese computer firms, other American manufacturers may face increasing difficulty in the future."

"Although the U.S. industry is not immediately imperiled, the federal government could help ensure future competitiveness through a better developed, more consistent industrial policy, particularly one supporting technology development and technical education," it said.

The OTA report was slated for release today at a hearing of the House Banking subcommittee on economic stabilization, chaired by Rep. John J. LaFalce, D-N.Y.

LaFalce said he was introducing a package of industrial policy bills aimed at enhancing the global competitive position of American industry.

"The simple truth is that the Reagan administration has an industrial policy, but it is ill-thought out, inconsistent and unacknowledged," the New York Democrat said.

One of the bills in LaFalce's legislative package would create a Council of Industrial Competitiveness, which the congressman called "the centerpiece of our program to shape existing policies into an integrated strategy."

Congressional Democrats have been eyeing industrial policy as a 1984 campaign issue, arguing that the federal government should take a more active role in efforts to spur U.S. high-technology firms and help offset the decline of traditional smokestack industries.

Reagan administration officials and Republicans in Congress have countered that while some limited steps may be advisable, more extensive government involvement in the economy is likely to hurt rather than strengthen America's industrial competitiveness.

The OTA report emphasized that while the competitiveness of the U.S. consumer electronics industry has "declined precipitously" since the 1960s, the United States remains the world's leader in computers and microelectronic semiconductors.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

'Flower bonds' bloom when bondholder's casket arrives

By BILL DOYLE

Q. My banker gave me a list of all the U.S. Treasury bonds now outstanding, showing interest rates, maturity dates, current prices and other statistics. I note that the Treasury bonds due to mature on Nov. 15, 1998, and paying 3.5 percent interest, are quoted at "91" — $910 for $1,000 face amount of bond.

That seems like an awfully high price for a $1,000 bond from which the owner collects only $35 a year interest — especially since the bond won't be redeemed at face value for 25 years. What's the story behind this?

A — It's that "Treasury 3½s of 98," as well as seven other issues of U.S. Treasury bonds, are "flower bonds." That's the nickname for bonds that come in handy when your casket arrives.

Doyle

If you own flower bonds when you leave this vale of tears, the Internal Revenue Service will accept those bonds at their face value in payment of federal estate tax. Let's say you buy $100,000 face value of flower bonds at 91 — a cost of $91,000. When you die, those bonds can be used to pay off $100,000 of federal estate tax liability you leave behind.

This makes flower bonds much in demand by very wealthy widows and widowers. The U.S. Treasury hasn't issued any flower bonds since April 1, 1971. The supply available in the marketplace keeps diminishing for three reasons: 1. Treasury bonds with flower provisions are redeemed when they reach maturity. 2. The Treasury redeems flower bonds presented to settle estate taxes. 3. Rich people who own flower bonds aren't likely to sell them.

The resulting supply and demand situation keeps the market prices of flower bonds high — much higher than they would be if bought strictly for the interest they pay.

• • •

Q. In what face amount sizes can flower bonds be obtained? What amount could I buy with an investment of $10,000?

A. Like all U.S. Treasury bonds, those with the flower provision come in face amount denominations of $1,000, $5,000, $10,000, $100,000 and $1 million.

As I put this through the typewriter, different issues of flower bonds are trading at anywhere from "91" to "94" — $910 to $940 per $1,000 face amount. At those prices, for $10,000 you could buy $10,000 face amount of flower bonds and have from $900 to $600 left over.

• • •

Q. What interest rate do flower bonds pay?

A. Their interest rates, as a percentage of face value, vary from 3 percent to 4.25 percent — depending on the particular bond issue. As I write this, their "yields to maturity" range from slightly below 4 percent to a bit higher than 8.25 percent.

Yield to maturity is a complicated calculation of annual interest payment divided by market price, plus an adjustment for the fact that those bonds are selling below the face values at which they eventually will be redeemed.

• • •

Q. Where can flower bonds be purchased?

A. Through almost any securities brokerage firm and many commercial banks.

• • •

Q. It seems to me it would be a good idea for every older person who has accumulated any wealth at all to buy flower bonds, thereby reducing the "death taxes" on his estate. Do you agree?

A. Nope. To begin with, the interest on flower bonds is much lower than the interest on other U.S. Treasury bonds and lots of other investments.

Then, there's the happy fact that federal estate taxes are not nearly as severe as they were a couple of years ago. One spouse can now leave to the other everything, free of federal estate tax. Besides what is left to your wife or husband, $325,000 of your estate is not subject to that federal tax. That number increases each year, to $600,000 in 1987.

Also, flower bonds can't be used at face value to settle state inheritance or estate taxes. Flower bonds really are suitable only for the ultra-rich.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Person can get infection psittacosis from pet bird

Dear Dr. Solomon: Isn't it true that a pet bird can cause a person to become sick? I have a bet with my brother on your answer. — Trudy, Newark, N.J.

Dear Trudy: Pet birds can cause an infection called psittacosis. A person who contracts this infection will have symptoms similar to those that accompany influenza — fever, headache, cough, and chills. All types of pet birds may be affected, but they are considered to be safe if they were treated with antibiotics before being sold.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am five feet, eight inches tall, of normal weight, and in good health. But one thing bothers me. Is there any kind of treatment you would recommend for a man whose penis is too small? — Sam, NYC

Dear Sam: Too small for what? I have occasionally had a patient who believed his penis was small but this invariably turned out to be his perception rather than a fact.

If you would like reassurance, I suggest you see a urologist. But in most instances where there is this kind of concern, the size of the penis is perfectly adequate for any purpose for which it can be used.

Dear Dr. Solomon: When I was a teen-ager, the guys I used to hang around with would say that girls felt more sexual just before they had their period. I never found out if this was true and now, 20 years later, I still don't know. What's the answer? — Freddie, Baton Rouge, La.

Dear Freddie: The answer seems to be that no one really knows since the available information is contradictory. Dr. William R. Keye, Jr., of the University of Utah Medical Center in Salt Lake City, says that various studies have indicated that women experience changes in sexual desire at different points in the menstrual cycle. What might be true abut one woman is not necessarily true of all or even of most women.

Dear Dr. Solomon: We hear a great deal of talk about the risk of a mother having a child with Down's syndrome if she is over 35 years of age. But what about the father's age? Isn't that as important? It still takes two to tango, doesn't it? — Mrs. J.G., Bellingham, Wash.

Dear Mrs. G.: While it is common knowledge that it takes two to tango, the significance of the father's age as a risk factor for Down's syndrome is controversial. Dr. Alvin Langer, of Northeastern Ohio University's College of Medicine in Canton, says he offers amniocentesis if the father is 45 years of age or older. He acknowledges, however, that evidence to support such a recommendation is lacking.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Is it possible for a 27-year-old man to have glaucoma? Also, aside from age, what other factors can cause someone to get glaucoma? — Eddie, York, Pa.

Dear Eddie: Although glaucoma usually occurs in people over 35 years of age, younger individuals may also be affected. In addition to age, risk factors for the disease include heredity, which is the most important, and diabetes.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have become aware that I sometimes have blood in the discharge after sexual relations. What is the cause of this? — Bruce, Glen Burnie, Md.

Dear Bruce: In most patients the cause of blood in the ejaculate is rarely determined. In most cases, however, the condition clears without treatment even though it may recur at some future time. I suggest you bring this to the attention of your physician so that you can be assured that there is no serious underlying problem.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Your column about the interaction between different drugs was very helpful. Now I have another question along those same lines. I am on the pill and sometimes I take a tranquilizer. Is there anything wrong with this practice? — Rose, New Orleans, La.

Dear Rose: Researchers from Tufts University School of Medicine have found that the effects of diazepam, a popular tranquilizer, are prolonged in women who are on oral contraceptives. As a result, it might become necessary to reduce the dose of diazepam in some cases.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am writing to get a second opinion. I am planning to do some extensive traveling and I went to my doctor to get some advice about what medicine I could take to prevent diarrhea. He said it would be better not to take anything in advance, but to wait to see if I got diarrhea. Wouldn't it be better to prevent it than to wait until after it has happened? — Mrs. T.V., Carlsbad, N.M.

Dear Mrs. V.: Prevention ordinarily is better than cure, but this generally must be qualified when the prevention carries the risk of adverse side effects. For some people, these side effects may be a bigger problem than the possibility of diarrhea occurring during a trip.

Dr. Herbert L. DuPont, of the University of Texas Medical School in Houston, recommends that antibiotics for diarrhea be taken in advance only by such groups as business people making very important short-term trips and military personnel on short-term but high-risk assignments.

For Maurice, Brookline, Mass.: Dr. William Bennett, of Oregon Health Services University, says that the excessive use of pain killers that contain aspirin or acetaminophen may cause kidney disease. This is another example of the adage that if something is good, it does not necessarily follow that more is better. Both aspirin and acetaminophen are valuable drugs when properly used, not abused.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column).

The statue on the grounds of Scurry County Courthouse in Snyder pays tribute to a rare albino buffalo killed nearby in 1876.

The mule which sentinels downtown Muleshoe bears witness to the animal's important role in the conquest of the West.

Statues

West Texans are a breed apart: rugged individualists who perceive themselves as hard-working, strong, brave, hardy and productive.

Perhaps that's why they've chosen to memorialize the wildlife they have.

Take an extended tour of the region and you'll discover a common theme pervading the communities of Muleshoe, Snyder, Fort Stockton and Odessa, as well as occasional sprawling ranches.

Statues. Bigger, they say, than anywhere else in the world. Bolder, they'll claim, than any other state would dare. Better, they'll assure, than anything up in Yankee land.

The symbol of labor — the mule — stands tall along U.S. 84 in downtown Muleshoe. Perhaps no other animal was quite as responsible for the opening of the frontier as this beast of burden. The offspring of a mare and a jackass, the mule had its mother's size and muscles and its sire's endurance and sure-footedness.

Strength was the forte of the American buffalo, a replica of which guards downtown Snyder from the Scurry County Courthouse square. Vast herds of these bisons, as zoologists call them, once thundered across most of West Texas. Bulls could stand 6 feet tall at the shoulders, measure 12½ feet from nose to tail and weigh 3,000 pounds.

What makes Snyder's memorial especially unique is that it is of a white buffalo, so chosen because one of only two albino buffalos ever slain in the state fell to the smoking rifle of J. Wright Mooar 10 miles north of the city in 1876. The hide was displayed at the St. Louis World's Fair in 1904 and is still preserved by Mooar's descendants in Scurry County.

No form of life more epitomizes bravery than the eagle, the metal wings of which sentinel the entrance to a ranch along Highway 163 near the Sterling County-Mitchell County line. Indians so revered this bird of prey they wore its feathers, believing its soaring courage would carry them through battle.

The roadrunner or chaparral exists solely because of its hardiness — and Fort Stockton residents have chosen that symbol to mark the downtown intersection of U.S. 290 and FM 1053. The swift-footed member of the cuckoo family thrives in arid regions, where it builds nests of sticks in shrubs and consumes snakes, lizards, mice and insects.

Ask a farmer and he'll swear to you that the goddess of productivity-fertility is a jackrabbit, and Odessans, tongue-in-cheek, have taken that animal with jackass-like ears and spring-loaded legs as its insignia. In the early years of Ector County, bounties were levied on jackrabbits, and Odessa still lays claim to being the site of the world's only jackrabbit rodeo, held in May 1932.

Double jeopardy an issue in Odessa court

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Although double jeopardy is a cornerstone of our criminal justice system, it's not often that the issue comes up in court.

Such a case recently emerged here, however, when the district attorney's office had to dismiss felony charges against a young Odessa man after his lawyer pleaded him guilty to misdemeanor charges filed in connection with the same offense.

The defendant, 18-year-old Abel R. Fino, was arrested Aug. 8, 1982, for burglary with intent to commit rape — a felony punishable by life or 5-to-99 years in prison.

Apparently unknown to District Attorney Mike Holmes' office however, police also charged Fino with the "lesser included offense" of criminal trespass — a Class-A misdemeanor.

On Sept. 28 of this year, Odessa attorney Richard Alvarado pleaded Fino guilty to the misdemeanor charge in County Judge Jan Fisher's court. In return for the guilty plea, Fisher fined the defendant $300 and ordered him to spend nine months on probation.

By contrast, DA prosecutors reportedly had talked about offering Fino 15 years "to do" in return for a guilty plea on the burglary charge.

About the first of October, Alvarado says he informed the DA's office that their case "was clinically dead" because he had pleaded Fino guilty in county court. Prosecuting him on the felony charge would constitute double jeopardy.

On Oct. 10, Alvarado filed a motion before State District Judge Ray McKim requesting the felony case against his client be dismissed because of the law against trying a person twice for the same offense.

McKim granted the motion the same day, thereby killing the felony indictment.

But the case isn't over yet.

On Nov. 3, Fino was re-indicted on attempted rape charges in connection with the same offense on which he was originally arrested.

Bond was set at $10,000 by State District Judge Joe Connolly and an arrest warrant was issued.

But, says Alvarado, "Their case is still clinically dead because of the speedy trial act."

Alvarado maintains that the speedy trial law — with some exceptions — holds that the state must be ready for trial within 120 days from the date of arrest or indictment, whichever comes first.

"They can't use the second arrest or indictment because the law says prosecution applies to all charges stemming from the same offense," he argues, adding:

"Since the original indictment was for burglary, not attempted rape, they can't try the rape case because more than a year has elapsed since Fino was first indicted."

Asked why the DA's office didn't originally seek indictment for attempted rape instead of burglary with intent to commit rape, Alvarado said, "I think it's because attempted rape is a second-degree felony, while the burglary case was first-degree."

Ector County Assistant District Attorney Anthony Foster said although he's not that familiar with the case, he thinks the attempted rape charges will hold up in court.

Citing recent changes in the complex "carving doctrine" of state law, Foster said, "The judge will decide if we're right or wrong, but our position is that attempted rape was a separate and distinct offense from burglary."

A trial date is pending in the case.

Addison man describes $1.5 million burglary

ADDISON (AP) — In the end it was family — not riches — that mattered, said a man who surrendered to police carrying a briefcase full of allegedly stolen jewelry, cash and diamonds.

"There came a point when I had to make the decision — take what I had, disappear and become somebody else, or come back," Wesley Don Crowder told the Dallas Times Herald in an interview published Sunday. "I gave up the merchandise and came back for my family."

Crowder, who is accused of stealing $1.5 million in valuables from a safe deposit rental company in this Dallas suburb, said his concern for his wife and three sons convinced him to surrender to police who had been looking for him for eight days.

He walked into the police station at 9 p.m. Friday, carrying a clothes bag, a shaving kit and a briefcase packed with stolen goods.

He started working at the safe deposit box firm Nov. 1 and disappeared two days later.

ADDISON POLICE Chief Rick Sullivan and investigator Grant Jack listened for hours Friday night as Crowder talked.

"I realized that what I did hurt a lot more people than myself," Crowder said. "I always knew that it could hurt me, but if I had realized how much it could hurt others ... I wouldn't have done it.

"I don't have the right to hurt other people," he said.

Crowder said he was bothered by news reports detailing the allegations against him.

"I felt like Jack the Ripper should move over," he said. "I've never been in jail before, never been arrested."

HE THEN paused a moment and said, "But I have to be a criminal or I wouldn't be here."

Since the burglary last week in Addison, police have been comparing notes on eight recent thefts in Dallas, Denton, Plano, Fort Worth, Marshall and Keller. In each case, business owners hired a man for a management position, only to have cash or merchandise disappear soon afterward — along with the new employee, police said.

"I did my homework," Crowder said. "That's all it took."

Crowder, described by police as a long-time area resident, didn't want to talk about his family, his educational or employment background.

"Nine months to a year ago, I had never done anything illegal in my life," Crowder said, declining to say what prompted the change. "I'd hate to say anything now that would haunt me the rest of my life.

"I NEEDED the money, but I could have gotten it by honest means," he said.

Crowder said he obtained the deposit box numbers of jewelry brokers by telling a secretary he was planning to market a new service to the customers. He was last seen on the evening of Nov. 3 when he sent the guard home. The next morning, guards found alarms and surveillance cameras deactivated and six deposit boxes rifled.

Crowder said he was "scared to death" when he left the business with the stolen goods.

Police said Crowder apparently spent the weekend at home. His wife said she took him to the Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport on Nov. 7 for what Crowder said was a business trip to Phoenix.

BUT CROWDER said he instead stayed in the Dallas area and, the next day, called a One Safe Place official to tell him that he was sorry and that the stolen goods could be found in an Irving office building.

Police recovered about $500,000 of the loot. Meanwhile, Crowder flew to Las Vegas, where police say he sold some of the stolen goods.

Crowder said he then took a bus to Los Angeles, but was tormented about leaving his family behind.

"He knew they were concerned for his safety and under a lot of duress," Sullivan said.

"I've got mixed emotions," Crowder said. "I keep thinking whatever sentence I get, I deserve ... But I don't want ... The thought keeps going through my mind. I enjoy my kids and I don't want them to grow up where I can't see them."

Police say Crowder is being held for investigation of two charges of theft over $20,000 and one charge of burglary with intent to commit theft. Bond was set at $750,000.

"The guy is smart," Jack said. "If he used his brains to dome something worthwhile, there's no telling what he could accomplish."

Administrative judge ending lengthy career

CENTERVILLE, Texas (AP) — After nearly one-half century on the bench, Max Maurice Rogers says he's going back to the Leon County ranch that his family has owned since the Civil War.

Rogers, 80, had served as judge of the 2nd Administrative Judicial District of Texas, presiding over 34 Texas counties and 106 district courts.

Rogers decided at age 10 that he wanted to be a lawyer.

He studied law at the University of Texas and went to work in 1927 at a Dallas firm. But he soon tired of representing "mostly one of the banks in Dallas in matters that were not of too much importance."

So he returned home two years later and was elected as district attorney for the judicial district that included Leon and Walker counties.

"That was the Clyde Barrow-Bonnie Parker era," Rogers said in an interview published in Sunday's Houston Post.

The notorious couple was instrumental in a 1933 prison break from the Texas Department of Corrections' Eastham Unit in which one guard was killed. Rogers tried gang members Raymond Hamilton and Joe Palmer and won their death sentences.

"Clyde and Bonnie helped them get out but they were not present when the break happened inside the unit. They were waiting in a car but there was no way of establishing the two with the killing of the guard."

As Hamilton and Parker waited on death row, they bribed a guard to bring them weapons. The pair, along with three other convicts, then shot their way out of prison.

Hamilton later was captured in Fort Worth and Parker was cornered in St. Louis. Both eventually were executed. Rogers prosecuted the prison guard, who received a 15-year sentence.

"We had lots of those things. That was the era when so many state banks were being robbed," Rogers said. "That's when the Texas Bankers Association posted a reward of $5,000 for every dead bank robber. They didn't want them captured or tried, they wanted them killed."

In 1937, Rogers became a state district judge and three years later was named to preside over the 2nd District, which then was composed of 33 counties and 23 district courts.

The job lacked the excitement that he knew as a prosecutor but the challenges were just as great, he said.

During his tenure as judge, Rogers helped resolve a challenge to the election authorizing the sale of bonds to finance constructon of the Houston's Astrodome and a suit to prevent drugstores from selling liquor.

In 1965, Rogers resigned as state district judge to demote full time to the increasing responsibilities as administrative judge.

As he ends his legal career, Rogers said the greatest challenge of the judicial system is making sure the cases move quickly through the courts.

Mother says she doesn't want to be on welfare

HOUSTON (AP) — Ann Martin says she doesn't like being on welfare, but she fears her dying son's Social Security and Medicaid payments will be jeopardized if she works out of her home.

Mrs. Martin supports her teen-age daughter and 10-year-old son on the $550 she receives from the government every month.

"We don't like being on welfare. It's not a good feeling," the 43-year-old mother said. "But the government doesn't encourage you to help yourself without losing what you have."

Three years ago her son, Leslie, began having emotional problems. Within six months, he could not walk, talk or sit up.

Leslie suffered adrenoleukodystrophy, a rare and fatal brain disease that strikes only young males. Only about 270 boys nationwide have been diagnosed as having ALD, and no treatment has been discovered.

"He sang beautifully and loved to dance. He loved sports, especially football, and liked to ride his bicycle," Mrs. Martin recalled.

Now her son weighs only 43 pounds. He is fed through a tube in his stomach and must have fluid suctioned from his throat up to 30 times a day.

He requires 24-hour-a-day care and needs dozens of prescriptions and injections to prevent muscle seizures, to help him sleep and to help his frail body absorb food.

Despite the lack of government money for home care, Mrs. Martin has vowed she will not put her son in an institution.

Fire damages hotel, house

In weekend fires, heavy damage was reported to one room of the old Park Place Motel at 1505 E. Front St. shortly before 10 p.m. Saturday. Five fire department units responded to the call and firefighters spent about an hour at the scene. Cause of the blaze was undetermined.

Five units also responded to a fire in a vacant house at 307 N. Dallas St. early this morning. Heavy damage to the building was reported and 1,250 gallons of water were used to extinguish the blaze. Cause of the fire wasn't determined immediately.

And a motorcycle belonging to Dale Clifton Wayne of Odessa was destroyed in a fire that occurred at Loop 250 and Interstate 20 shortly before midnight.

Funeral set for girl who waited for liver donor

CLYDE (AP) — A little girl whose futile wait for a liver transplant moved an American president to make a national appeal was to be buried today.

A funeral for 14-month-old Ashley Bailey was scheduled for 1 p.m. today at the Bailey Funeral Home in Clyde. She will be buried at the Hamby Cemetery near Abilene.

Ashley, who suffered from biliary atresia, an incurable disease that hardens the liver, died Friday in Fort Worth. Her futile 10-month-wait for a transplant prompted an appeal by President Reagan during his weekly radio broadcast on July 23.

The transplant was the only chance for survival and finding a donor liver was particularly difficult in her cause because she weighed less than 15 pounds for most of her life, said her physician, Dr. Robert Squires.

In July, thousands of mailgrams were sent out to hospitals around the country in an effort to locate a liver donor for the girl. A potential donor was found, but the liver turned out to be too large for Ashley.

Reagan asked the nation "to find Ashley a donor."

"Once one is found, an Air Force jet is standing ready in case immediate commercial transportation is not available," said Reagan.

"Time is running out," he said.

Marines also donated blood for the ailing girl.

Initial Enterprise checks completed

DALLAS (AP) — Attorneys, engineers and State Fair of Texas officials have completed their initial examinations of the amusement ride Enterprise and will determine if they need more tests.

One car from the Enterprise hurtled to the midway Oct. 17 at the State Fair of Texas, killing one youth and injuring 16 others.

Dismantling of the ride was completed Sunday, officials said, and it could be two weeks before experts determine if they need to conduct more tests.

Structural engineer Earl Walters, hired by an attorney representing one of the injured, said the cars' steel frames all were cracked in one or more places.

Texas has no record of houses it owns

AUSTIN (AP) — The state government of Texas does not have a central record of the homes it owns and lends to employees.

For years, the records have gone no further than the agency that used the facilities. That is changing, but, even with the help of computers, it's going to take a while.

The 1981 Legislature ordered the State Purchasing and General Services Commission to try to get a handle on which agency owns what and where.

"We do have, although it is not yet complete, a centralized data base of all real property owned by the state. Not all of the agencies have reported," said Gene Swanberg, director of automated services at the State Purchasing and General Services Commission.

Lawyer J. Tony Serra, 47, of San Francisco has successfully defended Black Panther Huey Newton, Symbionese Liberation Army leader Russell Little and the Hells Angels.

Lawyer emotes for the defense

By The Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — A reverent hush falls over the paneled courtroom as the trial begins in federal court. It is a major drug-smuggling case and the jury squirms expectantly as J. Tony Serra for the defense jumps from his chair and strides theatrically to the jury box.

The case is complex, involving villains and informants and boat loads of narcotics. Serra fixes his gaze on a woman juror and leans forward, almost confidentially. "There is this poem by e.e. cummings," Serra says softly, starting to recite. " 'Pity this busy monster....' "

The jury looks puzzled. Suddenly, Serra is moving. His hands are chopping the air like a sushi chef's. His hatchet face is bobbing up and down, and he seems to be dancing a jig.

SERRA IS ANGRY, he is meek, he is righteous. He sounds like a Shakespearean actor, each word painstakingly pronounced. He is vilifying an informer who betrayed former friends.

"He has given up the minnows," Serra thunders, holding the tiny, imagined fish so close that the jury leans back in horror, "and he has preserved the whale."

It is another bravura Serra performance, one of about half a dozen major cases Serra has defended in the last year from here to Baltimore. As usual, the courtroom gallery is filled with criminal defense lawyers, who, like disciples, have come to see Serra at work.

Serra has defended some of the most celebrated criminal defendants in California, including Black Panther Huey Newton, Symbionese Liberation Army leader Russell Little and the Hells Angels. He won all three cases.

IN A NATIONAL survey published last year, American Lawyer magazine gave Serra its "honorable mention" award for the best performance by a criminal defense lawyer, surpassed only by the Washington firm of Williams & Connolly for its successful defense of John Hinckley, the man who shot President Reagan.

BUT SERRA'S FOLLOWING among trial lawyers seems to stem as much from a stubbornly eccentric life style as it does from his growing national reputation as a defense attorney.

An unrepentant product of the Haight-Ashbury hippie revolution in the 1960s, the 47-year-old Serra displays contempt for most lawyers, delights in being a thorn in the side of the Establishment and strides into court with his steel gray hair pulled into a two-foot-long ponytail. (The only people he religiously excludes from juries are barbers.)

"Before there were hippies, there were beatniks, and before there were beatniks there were Bolsheviks, and before the Bolsheviks were the iconoclasts. Before that there were neo-Platonists — there has always been an antithesis — and that's me," Serra said. "I'll tell you this honestly, if I wasn't going bald, I would die my hair green or purple or red. I love the nihilism of the punks."

For all his eccentricities, Serra brings into the courtroom a formidable array of legal weapons: a photographic memory, a penchant for detail and a poet's feel for language, which he uses to beguile juries and judges in some of the most conservative jurisdictions in the country.

"Tony tries cases that look impossible and wins in cases that others thought unwinnable," said James A. Lassart, an assistant U.S. attorney in San Francisco who has tried more cases against Serra than any other prosecutor. "He is an excellent trial lawyer....Tony's appearance causes people to look at him and to pay attention. He is a master of language."

WATCHING SERRA PERFORM, especially when he is cross-examining a witness or making an impassioned speech to a jury, it is hard to avoid the sense of theater. Laurence J. Lichter, a Serra protege, recalled catching Serra shouting a closing argument to a motel room wall one night, like an actor rehearsing a solioquy. But Serra denies that he is acting.

"I got one small niche that I occupy all by myself. I emote. I'm the true believer. The true believer is the most dangerous man alive," he said. "I want the client in his most critical moment: the moment of pain, the moment of surrender, the moment of cowardice, the moment of bravery. I want to get that and shoot it into my blood like dope and feel that going around in my mind, and then I become him. I've got a little legal parlance in this other corner, so I can translate it into those metaphors. But I come then (to court) as him. I emote."

In court, Serra belies his seemingly relaxed manner. Nearly everyone who has worked with him, whether as part of a defense team or as a prosecutor, remarks on his fierce and often savage competitiveness, his desire to win.

Serra attributes his compulsiveness to growing up in the years after World War II, when "victory was inculcated," both as a student and an athlete. He was an all-city football player during high school in San Francisco and he won an academic scholarship to Stanford, where he competed in boxing (light heavyweight) and varsity football. He may have been the only first-string tight end who had a major in epistemological philosophy and a minor in 19th-Century English poetry.

AFTER BUMMING AROUND Europe (he wrote a newspaper series entitled "Europe on $1 a Day"), Serra returned to San Francisco and enrolled at Boalt Hall, the law school at the University of California, Berkeley, where he won scholastic honors.

Contrary to the iconoclastic image he now projects, Serra's first job after graduation was as a deputy district attorney in Oakland, Calif.. He wore a crew cut, favored blue pinstriped suits and pondered a political career as he aggressively prosecuted such transgressions as public drunkenness.

Serra's epiphany took place along the erupting streets of the Haight-Ashbury section of San Francisco, when the hippie generation was just coming into full flower. His career with the district attorney's office ended after just 11 months and, after a long sojourn in Latin America, Serra returned to the counterculture existence of the Haight.

"IT COMPLETELY CHANGED my life," he recalled. "It gave a lot of meaning where there hadn't been any meaning. Out of the mouths of babes these profound philosophies were being realized....I was 10 years older than all of them."

A VISITOR TO Serra's San Francisco offices can search in vain for the usual totems of the legal profession: There are no diplomas and degrees on the walls. Serra prefers gargoyles, African masks and carved monkeys. A cardboard box near his desk contains the bones and ashes of departed clients — saved from the crematorium as mementos.

Serra went to federal prison for four months for not filing income tax returns. ("The IRS is like the Gestapo," he said. He now files.) He had himself tied to a cactus in the Mexican desert so he could experience Christ's agony on the cross. He appeared on the cover of a legal journal smoking what seemed to be a joint — hoping, as usual, to shake up the legal Establishment.

Serra sees himself as a "semantic warrior," a gladiator of the courtroom who takes cases, usually political, that allow him to do battle with "ideas, philosophies and principles" that he opposes. If the case is particularly appealing, Serra will usually work for free.

"I HAVEN'T BEEN to China, and I haven't been to Cuba, but I have a hunch that right here in San Francisco, it's about as good as it gets," Serra said, puffing on a pipe. "You have a whole lot of basic freedoms. It's about as good as justice gets...."

Bird migrations puzzling

Hearst Feature Service

Capistrano has its swallows. Hinckley, Ohio, has its buzzards. Northville, N.Y., has its chimney swifts.

Every year, more or less on schedule, the birds find their way back to their familiar haunts. How they do it has fascinated and puzzled humans for centuries.

How do the birds know when it is time to leave? How do they know where they are going? And how do they find their way?

STONE AGE HUMANS took enough notice of the birds to carve them and draw them. Homer, the Greek poet, makes specific reference to bird migration. The Bible has a number of references to birds, and Aristotle, the Greek philosopher, not only recorded migration dates of numerous fowl but indulged in the first speculation as to the whithers and wherefores.

Those whithers and wherefores still intrigue bird watchers.

"The birds are still smart enough to fool us," says Dr. Kenneth Able, a biologist at the State University of New York at Albany. Able is one of the country's leading researchers trying to uncover the mysteries of bird migration. He has been engaged in a 10-year study of how birds respond to different combinations of direction cues, including sun, stars and wind.

One of the reasons birds migrate is food. "A lot depends on the food supply up north, even for birds that normally do not migrate," says Able. "If their food supply crashes, the birds fly south." For insect-eating birds, he adds, there are no options. "If any stay behind, it's over."

MOST OF THAT movement is at night. The large flocks of birds we see in the daytime are generally blackbirds and starlings, with some exceptions.

Why birds migrate at night, how they do it, and how they know how to select the right night is something that has fascinated scientists for years.

Able says it is believed that birds possess several internal compasses geared to the sun, stars and the Earth's magnetic forces. In addition, scentists think that birds have some kind of internal "map," which may be learned, that helps them arrive at a set wintering area and return to a predetermined nesting area in the spring.

"They seem to use a Gestalt-type of integrated learning, using all these things," Able says.

"WE KNOW THAT from banded birds, but how they do it, we don't know," Able says. "It's not enough to know the direction in which you should go. If you are blown off course by winds, as sometimes happens to migrating birds, you have to know where you are in relation to where you are going, so you can correct your position. You have to have some other information in addition to a compass, such as a map. We know that birds use the sun as a compass, as do insects and invertebrates, but we don't know much about these internal maps."

Able says studies with homing pigeons in Pisa, Italy, seem to indicate pigeons learn an odor map.

And while the swallows still return to Capistrano, Able says progress in the shape of "fast-food joints" and a general building-up in the area of the mission at San Juan Capistrano have had an effect on the number of cliff swallows that return here.

"IT'S A NICE idea, but it's not completely true. It's been blown out of all proportion. Their timing is very, very good. They do arrive within a specific number of days each year."

Similarly, the chimney swifts that return to the village of Northville from their winter sojourn in South America generally arrive within three or four days of the same date every year.

The American Heart Association, at an annual meeting Saturday, presented Una Loy Clark with a special Presidential Award citing her husband's contribution to heart care.

"It's a comfort to me to know you remember and care enough to honor him," Mrs. Clark said.

Clark, a Seattle dentist, died March 23 at the University of Utah Medical Center after 112 days on the polyurethane heart.

Prince Andrew

LONDON (AP) — Leading the life of both a prince and a pilot amounts to "being a conscious schizophrenic," says Prince Andrew, the member of British royalty whose social life keeps Fleet Street gossip columns buzzing.

Andrew, 23, is a sub-lieutenant learning how to handle Lynx helicopters.

In an interview Sunday with television host David Frost, the prince chuckled when asked if media coverage of his romantic life had spoiled the "candle-lit atmospheres."

"There aren't many candle-lit atmospheres to destroy," replied Andrew, whom his older brother, Prince Charles, calls the "one with the Robert Redford looks."

Frost did not ask the prince about his widely publicized romance with Koo Stark, an American who starred in erotic movies when she was a teen-ager. Photographers hounded the couple until Miss Stark went to Australia last summer.

Bob Hope

LOS ANGELES (AP) — At age 80, comedian Bob Hope certainly qualifies as a senior member of his craft, but to the University of California at Los Angeles, he's just another freshman.

Hope was made an "Honorary Freshman" at UCLA while taping a Thanksgiving television special. And to make him feel right at home with classmates 60 years his younger, Hope was presented with a UCLA cardigan, sweatshirt and cap and the orientation kit and notebook every entering freshman receives.

Hope is visiting seven campuses for the special, "Bob Hope Goes To College," which NBC will telecast on Wednesday, Nov. 23.

Hope never attended college, but he has been awarded 45 honorary doctorates.

Prince Charles

LONDON (AP) — Prince Charles turns 35 today, and one British newspaper says Princess Diana has been hoping to give him a special birthday present — the news that she is pregnant again.

Daily Mail columnist Nigel Dempster wrote that Charles and Diana, 22, "are hoping for another baby in 1984 and news of her pregnancy is the birthday present that the princess has been hoping to give her husband."

Friends expect the couple to have three children, fairly evenly spaced, Dempster reported.

Charles planned to spend his birthday at Highgrove, the family's country home 90 miles west of London, with his wife and their son, Prince William, born June 21, 1982.

NEW YORK (AP) — In his first public comment on his sister's death, Richard Carpenter says he's bitter about the treatment singer Karen Carpenter received in her eight-year battle with anorexia nervosa.

Carpenter, the other half of the singing duo The Carpenters, says that the shock of his sister's death from heart failure Feb. 4 was "tremendous."

"I knew she was ill, but not that ill," he writes in this week's issue of People magazine.

He was aware that his sister suffered from the eating disorder as early as 1975.

Fans still get turned on by radio

Nostalgia buffs attend convention

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — In a high-tech world of cable TV and video recorders, old-time radio fans say no new-fangled entertainment can turn them on like the crackling strains of "The Lone Ranger," "The Shadow" or "The Jack Benny Show."

The 150 nostalgia buffs who attended the eighth annual Convention for the Friends of Old-Time Radio over the weekend shared memories, listened to panel discussions and shopped at a memorabilia bazaar.

The convention, billed by organizers as the only one of its kind in the country, brought together actors from several programs with fans and collectors.

Jay Hickerson, publisher of a bimonthly radio nostalgia newsletter and one of the convention's co-chairmen, said the event attracted fans from California, Florida, Canada "and every place in between."

Hickerson, of Hamden, Conn., said he enjoyed radio because "it's all imagination — you don't see what you're hearing."

He said he specialized in collecting tapes of "Jack Benny Show" broadcasts and named his newsletter "Hello, Again," after Benny's famous opening line.

Seminars were offered on such topics as the career of Edgar Bergen, a review of the radio days of "Gunsmoke" and the collecting of radio logs. At a banquet Saturday evening, awards were given and cast members of "The Shadow" recreated an episode of that series.

The center of attention was a room where memorabilia dealers had set up shop. Collectors could purchase tapes of popular shows including "Amos and Andy," "Fibber McGee and Molly," "Dick Tracy," and those of lesser-known ones like "The Baby Snooks Show" and "I Was a Communist for the FBI."

Other dealers sold glossy photographs, serialized comic books and mimeographed scripts from the programs.

Among the actors present were Miriam Wolfe, who started in radio in 1926 at age 4 and appeared on "Let's Pretend" and "Studio One," and Jackson Beck, who acted in "Superman"and "The Cisco Kid."

One of the most popular tables was manned by Fran Striker Jr., whose father wrote and developed "The Lone Ranger" series, which branched out into books, film, comic books and eventually television after starting on WXYZ radio in Detroit in 1934.

Listeners waited in line to buy autographed copies of Striker's recently published biography of his father, who died in 1962.

Striker, of Lansdale, Pa., said his father came up with the idea of writing a western series while running a radio station in Buffalo during the 1920s. He began selling mimeographed copies of his scripts to other stations, and in a few years had 90 subscribers to his service, which also included science fiction and mystery programs.

After WXYZ offered the elder Striker a job writing dramatic scripts full time, "The Lone Ranger" resulted.

"It was a regular paycheck rather than waiting by the mailbox for the mailman. Those were Depression times and it appeared to be a good decision," the writer's son said.

Striker said that his father, who had never visited the West until "The Lone Ranger" became a TV series in the 1950s, developed the settings for the program "out of his imagination and his reading."

He studied maps, Striker recalled, adding that the name of Tonto, the masked man's Indian companion, came from a "hole in the desert" in Arizona called Tonto Springs.

'Hee Haw's Junior Samples dies

CUMMING, Ga. (AP) — Alvin "Junior" Samples, the slow-talking country comedian whose bib overalls and 300-pound frame were a familiar sight for 14 years on the popular television show "Hee Haw," has died at 56 after a long bout with heart disease.

Samples, who was first hospitalized for hardening of the arteries in 1981, died Sunday at Forsyth County Hospital after suffering cardiac arrest at his home, nursing supervisor Gayle Jones said. He had been relased from an Atlanta hospital, where he had been treated for a heart-related ailment, on Tuesday.

Samples' rise to stardom began when he severed the head of a red grouper, a salt-water fish, and claimed it was the remains of a world-record largemouth bass he had caught in nearby Lake Lanier. Jim Morrison, then with the Georgia Game and Fish Commission, recorded Samples' account of catching the fish, and the story made the radio before a biologist shot it down.

But it was a good yarn, Morrison said, and eventually he and Samples started appearing at country-and-western nightclubs.

A recording company made the story into a record, "The World's Biggest Whopper," in 1967. Next came an album, "The World of Junior Samples." Samples also recorded an album of ad lib humor with comedian Archie Campbell, "Bull Session at Bull's Gap."

That led to an audition with "Hee Haw."

Samples once said his appearances on the TV show "just 'bout ruint me" because his neighbors in Cumming, 30 miles north of Atlanta, took it for granted he was rich and "they want me to pay my bills."

"He was a simple, naive, but very loving type person," Sam Lovullo, producer of "Hee Haw," said Sunday night from his Los Angeles home. "His image was that he couldn't read or write. Certainly, Junior was smart enough to know how to read a check and smart enough to know how to sign one."

But the truth was Junior could barely read or write, Lovullo said. "He used to say, 'I'd rather be wise and act dumb than be dumb and act wise.'"

David L. Ward, a spokesman for "Hee Haw" in Nashville, said Samples finished his last taping for the show in October. The segment, called "Junior Used Cars," will air sometime between January and March 1984.

Before becoming famous, Samples lived with his wife and six children in a three-room, $25-a-month shack he paid for by working various jobs.

"I made liquor in every branch in Forsyth County and in a few chicken houses, too," he once boasted to a reporter.

With his new wealth he built a brick home, but otherwise, according to his sister, he spent much of his time as he always had: bass fishing on Lake Lanier.

"A lot of people thought Junior was dumb, but that's not true. He was just uneducated. But he spoke the language of the common man," said Morrison, now executive director of the Georgia Wildlife Federation.

Samples had "a natural comic way of speaking," Morrison said in a telephone interview Sunday night.

Services are set for 2 p.m. Tuesday in Cumming.

Survivors include his wife, Grace, six children, his mother, five sisters and three brothers.

Doctor not responsible for child-rearing costs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today refused to force a doctor to pay $200,000 in child-rearing costs because he tried but failed to sterilize the daughter of former Sen. Vance Hartke.

The justices, without comment, let stand a ruling that threw out the $200,000 judgment. But they upheld a $106,000 award to Sandra Hartke for medical expenses and pain, suffering, and mental anguish.

Ms. Hartke, 39, of Aldie, Va., underwent sterilization surgery in 1978 performed by Dr. William McKelway of Washington, D.C.

She had given birth to a daughter 16 years before, and because of a medical history of abnormal pregnancies feared that pregnancy and childbirth would threaten her life.

McKelway performed a procedure called tubal cauterization in which the ends of a woman's Fallopian tubes are burned to block them and prevent conception.

The operation is successful better than 99 percent of the time.

Ms. Hartke said McKelway did not tell her there was a slight chance the procedure would fail. Had she known the operation wasn't foolproof, the man with whom she was living and later married might have chosen to have a vasectomy to ensure against pregnancy, the couple said.

When she became pregnant despite the sterilization, Ms. Hartke decided to have the child.

A healthy daughter, Vanessa, was born in June 1980.

Ms. Hartke sued McKelway for negligence. A federal jury awarded her $200,000 to pay child rearing costs, $100,000 for pain, suffering and anxiety and $10,000 for medical expenses.

But U.S. District Judge Louis Oberdorfer reduced the medical expenses to $6,000 and threw out the $200,000 award.

Oberdorfer said Ms. Hartke was "entitled to be compensated for the physical and mental anguish she suffered as a result" of McKelway's negligence.

But he said, "To allow her to recover in addition the costs of raising this child would be to give her a windfall."

The judge said McKelway's "wrong against (Ms. Hartke) consisted in imposing the pain, suffering and mental anguish of a pregnancy on her, not in imposing the costs of a healthy child greatly cherished by its mother."

A federal appeals court here said last May that Oberdorfer properly concluded the evidence was clear that Ms. Hartke chose sterilization "for therapeutic, not economic, reasons and...prized the child she bore."

In her Supreme Court appeal, Ms. Hartke was represented by the Washington law firm of her father, a former Democratic senator from Indiana who briefly ran for the presidency in 1972.

The Hartke law firm said McKelway should not be excused from paying the full cost of child rearing merely because the unwanted child turned out to be a blessing.

Reagan refines arms-control proposal

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — President Reagan has decided to refine the latest U.S. arms-control proposal in one last effort to narrow differences with Moscow before new American missile deployments begin in Europe next month and before the Soviets walk out of the arms talks in Geneva.

Administration officials said Sunday that the key ingredient of the new U.S. plan is to propose a specific "global" limitation of 420 nuclear warheads for each side on medium-range missiles deployed in Europe and Asia.

The officials said that word of the president's decision, made in consultation with U.S. allies in Europe, has just gone out to those allies and that new instructions have been sent to Ambassador Paul H. Nitze, the chief U.S. negotiator at the intermediate nuclear force (INF) talks in Geneva dealing with medium-range nuclear missiles.

The new administration plan, which officials describe as "an elaboration" of an earlier proposal, will be laid out by Nitze in Geneva this week.

This will come just before a crucial debate and vote on the missile question in the West German Bundestag, or parliament, scheduled for Nov. 21-22.

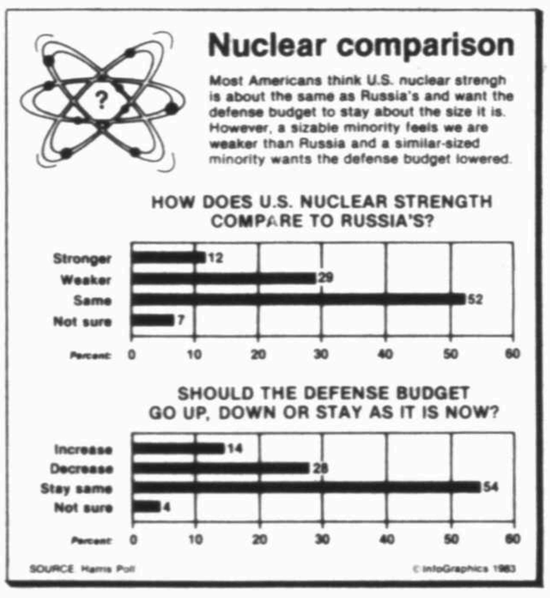
In a speech before the United Nations in September, Reagan offered a significant modification of earlier U.S. plans. The president essentially said the Soviets could have a larger total number of medium-range missiles than the United States in Europe and Asia, but that there must be parity in the missile forces of the two superpowers facing each other in Europe.

IT WAS EXPLAINED in September that if both sides would agree, for example, to allow each side 300 missile warheads globally and the Soviets put 200 in Europe and 100 in Asia then the United States would deploy only 200 missile warheads in Europe. The United States would retain the right to deploy the other 100 warheads elsewhere, but would not in fact do so.

In September, however, Reagan did not propose any specific numbers.

The Western European nations that are to receive the new U.S. Pershing 2 and cruise missiles — West Germany, Britain and Italy — are known to feel, however, that it would more sharply focus the arms-control negotiations if the United States put a specific number on the table.

The Geneva talks are rapidly heading toward a potentially explosive climax, with Washington seeking to retain the confidence of nervous populations in Western Europe that this country is negotiating in good faith, and with Moscow seeking to get those European populations to prevent any new U.S. missile deployment.



Although the conservative government of West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl is virtually certain to have enough votes in parliament to reaffirm Bonn's commitment to deployment, a further elaboration of the American proposal will undoubtedly be welcomed by Kohl as more ammunition in his battle with opposition forces who favor a delay in deployment.

NITZE HAS ALSO told the White House that a new American offer would be appropriate. He is known to have suggested that each side be allowed a total of 600 missile warheads globally, on 200 medium-range missile launchers. This would essentially allow Moscow to keep 200 of its modern SS-20 missiles, each of which carries three atomic warheads in its nose. The Soviets now have deployed 360 of these missiles, with 243 in Europe and 117 in Asia.

The United States has no comparable medium-range missiles deployed yet.

Administration officials say the Nitze formula was rejected because the number was too high.

At first glance, the new U.S. plan would appear to parallel the latest offer from Soviet President Yuri V. Andropov, but there are sharp differences.

Andropov offered to reduce the Soviet forces in Europe to 140 missiles, which, with three warheads on each SS-20, means 420 warheads. That is the same as the new Reagan figure.

But Andropov was talking about 140 missiles only for Europe, while Reagan is talking about 140 SS-20s in Europe and Asia combined. This means that the number in Europe would still have to be considerably lower than 140 SS-20s, since the Soviets almost certainly will want to keep some of their missiles in Asia.

Andropov also has continued to insist that no U.S. missiles be deployed and that the Soviets' 140 missiles be viewed as compensation for 162 British and French missiles. The United States and its allies flatly reject these Soviet demands, arguing that only American weapons can deter a Soviet attack in Europe.

BUT U.S. OFFICIALS say the Soviets have hinted informally that they might be willing to reduce even further, to about 54 missiles and 162 warheads in Europe, but still without any American deployment. Some U.S. officials expect the Soviets might officially come forth with a final offer at Geneva along such lines, as the battle for public opinion continues as the current round of talks is concluding later this month.

In September, Reagan had also offered to reduce proportionately the number of Pershing 2 missiles in relation to the number of cruise missiles and to discuss limits on aircraft capable of carrying atomic bombs.

Sources said these elements of the earlier proposal remain intact and have not been elaborated upon in this latest modification.

Of the 572 U.S. missiles scheduled for deployment in Europe over the next few years, 108 are the fast-flying, rocket-powered Pershing 2, all of which are to be based in West Germany. The Pershings are considered by Moscow to be the most serious threat. The 464 others are slower moving, jet-powered cruise missiles.

Communist Party leader says he'll run in 1984 if nominated

CLEVELAND (AP) — Perennial presidential candidate Gus Hall says he'll run again in 1984 if nominated by the Communist Party USA, which concluded its national convention with a downtown rally.

About 500 party members joined in a "Dump Reagan" rally Sunday, the final day of the 23rd national convention, where meetings were closed to the press and public. Party leader Hall, 74, said the closure was not in response to a U.S. State Department decree barring U.S.-based Soviet journalists from traveling to Cleveland to attend the convention.

The four-day gathering, during which party members called for mutual disarmament, withdrawal of U.S. troops from Grenada and Lebanon and a massive jobs program, was not a nominating convention. The party's central committee will pick its candidate later.

Man: Court should analyze vial

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A man jailed for civil contempt for failing to turn over an enormous gem he found says the court should analyze the powdery contents of a vial he submitted — what was left after he tried to cut the stone he believed was a 112-carat emerald.

When a woman sued Galen Shawver for money she said he owed, Superior Court Judge Herbert O. Phillips III ordered him to turn over the stone. Instead, he tried to cut the gem, which might have been worth $300,000 if it had been an emerald, and shattered it.

Shawver, now in his fourth week in a Manteo, N.C., jail said by telephone that the court should test the fragments and release him.

Hunter met by 40 protesters

LOXAHATCHEE NATIONAL WILDLIFE REFUGE, Fla. (AP) — A hunter who joined 21 others in a rare sanctioned deer hunt in this preserve said he just wanted "some peace and quiet in the woods," but was met by 40 angry protesters shouting "Murderers!."

"I guess they never ate hamburger," said a digusted Robert Cahl of Lantana, Fla., on Saturday, the opening day of hunting at the refuge west of Palm Beach. Officials, seeking to thin the deer herd by 10 percent, offered 100 hunting permits, but only 22 hunters showed.

CIA director owns controversial stocks

WASHINGTON (AP) — During his tenure as CIA director, William J. Casey has held stock in companies with both classified and unclassified contracts with the CIA, according to recently released CIA documents.

The documents show that Casey retained stock in firms with classified CIA contracts when he took office in January 1981, and that since then, he has acquired stock in firms with unclassified CIA contracts.

But the documents also show that CIA attorneys and government ethics officials have found no conflicts of interest between Casey's holdings and any of his official decisions.

Deleted from the documents are the names of companies with CIA contracts and the size of Casey's holdings.

Most of the documents, obtained in a Freedom of Information Act lawsuit, relate to CIA efforts to ensure that Casey's multimillion-dollar stock holdings do not pose any conflict.

Casey's finances have been the subject of several inquiries by the Senate and House intelligence committees, in part because Casey decided not to follow the procedures chosen by his two predecessors as CIA director and by other senior Reagan administration officials with equal access to secret government economic intelligence, including President Reagan, Vice President George Bush, the attorney general, and the secretaries of State, Treasury, and Defense.

All of those officials put their stocks into a blind trust except Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, who sold off stock in companies doing major Pentagon business.

Casey retained control over his holdings but has maintained that his long-time investment adviser decided what to buy or sell, except in two cases where Casey ordered sales.

In May 1982, the CIA established a screening procedure to be certain Casey did not make decisions substantially affecting his investments.

But within the last month, under additional pressure from Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., Casey put his holdings into a blind trust.

The CIA turned over the documents in the last two weeks to attorneys for the Center for National Security Studies, a liberal think-tank here, which sued to obtain any documents showing how much time CIA officials were devoting to screening Casey from potential conflicts.

The center released the documents Sunday. David Vladeck, an attorney for the center, said he believed they "show an enormous investment of resources at CIA in advising Casey (about potential conflicts of interest), diverting those officials away from their primary activity." He said center officials were deciding whether to ask U.S. District Judge Louis F. Oberdorfer to release some of the deleted material in the documents.

CIA spokesman Dale Peterson said neither he, Casey nor other CIA officials had any comment Sunday to add to the documents.

In an affidavit, CIA attorney Gary M. Chase said 168 documents relating to the screening process had been found and 19 were released in full.

He said all or part of seven documents were withheld because they identify companies Casey has stock in which also hold classified CIA contracts. He noted that the Freedom of Information Act and other laws allow the CIA to withhold data which could used by foreign intelligence agents to learn about secret CIA methods and sources.

Chase also said all or part of 13 documents were withheld because they identify Casey's investments in companies with unclassified CIA contracts. He said these identities could be used to help narrow any search for the companies with classified contracts, because before he moved to the blind trust, Casey had to publicly list all his stock holdings under the Ethics in Government Act.

In a memo to Casey a year after he took office, Deputy CIA General Counsel Ernest Mayerfeld said he had compared CIA contracts with a list of "holdings recently acquired by your investment adviser." Mayerfeld concluded in the Jan. 19, 1982 memo that the investments posed no conflict.

Chase's affidavit said a sentence was withheld from this memo because it "contains a listing of a small number of companies with whom the CIA had contracts which are not classified and in which William J. Casey had a financial interest."

U.S. may send engineers to Central America

ABOARD AIR FORCE ONE (AP) — The Reagan administration has discussed sending combat engineers to several Central American nations to help with civilian works such as road building, White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said today.

Speakes was commenting on a report in Sunday editions of The Washington Post quoting a top Pentagon official saying that U.S. combat engineers would be sent to Costa Rica. Speakes predicted more civilian work would be done in those nations because many of them have a need for basic construction, including roads.

Fred C. Ikle, undersecretary of defense for policy, said lack of mobility has slowed the Salvadoran army and that the United States must provide more money for helicopters and other equipment, the newspaper said. Ikle also said El Salvador should get more U.S. military aid because of problems in the Central American country's war against leftist guerrillas.

Speakes' comments were made aboard Air Force One as the presidential entourage returned to the United States from a 6½-day trip to Japan and South Korea.

Sending up to 1,000 combat engineers into Costa Rica would put nearly 5,000 U.S. military personnel inside Honduras and Costa Rica near their borders with Nicaragua.

In the interview, Ikle declined to estimate how much the administration will request for El Salvador in 1985, but he said it will clearly take "tens of millions" of dollars to buy needed helicopters. Congress has approved $64.8 million for El Salvador in a spending resolution. The administration had requested $86.3 million.

WHY BMW CHOSE TO CHANGE THE "QUINTESSENTIAL SPORTS SEDAN"

BMW does not annually reinvent the automobile. Instead they periodically refine it.

So after six years the sedan Car and Driver nominated "the quintessential sports sedan"—the BMW 320i—has evolved into a new car: the 318i. A machine with a totally redesigned, fully independent suspension system, new aerodynamics, new technology, and a new fuel injection system that delivers even greater torque.
