COWBOYS FAVORED TO WIN BY THREE POINTS, SAY WAGER OFFERERS: 150 BACKERS OF SCARLET AND BLACK ARE NOT DOWNHEARTED

(Special to the Journal) ABILENE, Oct. 15.—The Texas Tech special arrived in this city at 11:45 today, and players and fans were greeted with the announcement of 3 points in favor of Simmons University. Most of the Tech followers took encouragement as the Matadors are badly crippled in the backfield with Walker, Woolridge and Cappelman, three prominent players missing.

Although the line is still in good condition, the absence of the three players will be felt. The Matadors, however, are expected to put up a good defensive game. It is known that Simmons has a strong team and this will be one of the Tech's most hard games.

Mexican Pickpockets Ply Trade in Prison

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 15 (AP)—The tight fingered gentry of Mexico ply their trade even behind prison walls, and apparently show no discrimination between ordinary persons and criminal court judges and lawyers. Prisoner pickpockets inside the famous Belem prison, Mexico's principal penitentiary, have taken the watches of Judge Pino Camara of the criminal bench and Gonzales Pastor, counsel for an alleged murderer, while they were on their way through the prison yard to the hospital to question the lawyer's client. At all times the judge and the lawyer were in plain view of the wardens. They discovered the loss of their time pieces before they left the prison and notified the head warden. An extensive search failed to find the watches.

Man Loses $300 In Cash; He's Smarter

Lubbock has three perfectly good banks, but there are a lot of people in this city who think their money is safer in their purse than anywhere else. That is why one man is now looking for his purse that contained something like $300. He went into a bank and cashed a large check, and instead of depositing the money carried it with him. Later he missed his purse and since that time he has been wondering where his money is. He has offered a liberal reward; but officers told him it would take a pretty honest man to return the purse.

Menu For Today

BREAKFAST—Grape fruit juice, bacon and potato omelet, bran muffins, milk, coffee.

Luncheon—Scalloped mushrooms, carrot, celery and cabbage salad, peanut butter bread, apple now, milk tea.

Dinner—Pot roast of beef, browned potatoes, baked squash, tomato and cream salad, graham bread vanilla ice cream with fresh fruit, milk, coffee.

The following recipe for scalloped mushrooms is so very much worth while that even if it isn't quite ideal for small children you will want to use it. A B the mushroom flavor is found in the dish a few mushrooms can be "stretched" to serve several persons and the sauce adds much caloric value.

Scalloped Mushrooms

Two cups mushrooms, 2 cups coarse stale bread crumbs, 1/2 cup melted butter, 1-3 teaspoon tobacco sauce, 2 eggs, 2 hard cooked eggs, 1 cup rich milk, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1-3 teaspoon pepper. Remove stems from mushrooms and peel. Two cups Sprinkle gills of each mushroom lightly with salt and pepper and let stand while making sauce. Spread crumbs in a dripping pan and heat in a hot oven. Add tobacco sauce to butter and mix crumbs and butter being sure each crumb is thoroughly coated. Sprinkle a layer of crumbs in a well buttered baking dish. Add a layer of mushrooms cut in thin slices and the sliced white of hard-cooked eggs. Continue layer for layer of crumbs and mushrooms until all the mushrooms are used, reserving enough crumbs for the top of the dish. Mash yolks of hard-cooked eggs and stir in yolks of raw eggs. Slowly add milk, stirring constantly. Season with salt and pepper and pour this mixture over the combination in the baking dish. Distribute sauce as evenly as possible while pouring and then shake the dish to be sure the sauce is all through the mixture. Sprinkle top with remaining crumbs, cover dish and bake twenty minutes in a moderately hot oven. Remove cover for five minutes and broil top.

The Woman's Daily Editorial

IF LIFE PAYING YOU A DIVIDEND? I heard a group of women discussing another woman whose various activities in club and social work had aroused their curiosity and wonder. "She cannot possibly do it," said one, "without neglecting her family. You can't tell me that any woman with a house the size of her's and two active children and husband can have time for committee meetings and club work and social affairs every day in the week. Something has to go wrong here." "Her children always appear to be well dressed and they certainly look healthy," said another one of the group. "Her husband doesn't look neglected, either." "It concedes the point," admitted the first, "that I still maintain that something has to be neglected. It probably is her pantry shelves." A third woman now spoke up. "Ladies," she said, "I've been in Mrs. B's kitchen more than once and it would give you no reason to take

PETTY THEFTS NUMEROUS HERE

Officers find stealing is on up grade in Lubbock; one washing is 'lifted'.

Petty thefts are growing more numerous in Lubbock and there are few days officers are not asked to make a search for stolen goods. Automobile casings are the most popular articles known to the criminal world, many have been stolen in this city during the past month. Those guilty of thefts are growing more bold, for only last night they went to a home on 8th street and tool casings off of a car parked in the driveway.

Wash is Stolen. Night before last a woman on 10th street left her wash on the line, and when she arose yesterday morning the family's clothing supply was missing. Not an article was left. Her husband traced the tracks of the thief to an alley at the back of the home, but because of the heavy rain which fell shortly before daybreak he was unable to go any further. Officers warn people to keep a close watch on their property and not to leave anything out that might tempt a burglar.

Plains Ginners Join In Effort To Assist Farmers

As various agencies, both individuals and organizations throughout the South are engaged in an attempt to better the situation brought about by the low price of cotton, ginners of the Plains, in session here late Thursday evening, voted unanimously to do their bit in the fight to help the farmer, by reducing the price of ginning from 40 cents per hundred pounds to thirty cents for picked cotton, and from 50 cents to 40 cents per hundred on snapped cotton.

Approximately 50 ginners, members of the Plains association, were in attendance at the session that was presided over by Charles Felmk, president of the organization, but the agreement carried a proviso that if the price of cotton reaches fifteen cents, the former prices for ginning will be again in effect automatically. It was also agreed that no shelled cotton will be ginned, that the price for bagging and ties will be 32, and that ginners will pay the full market price for seed. It is estimated that this move on the part of the ginners will save the farmers of the Plains at least $450,000, as it is figured by cotton men that the crop affected will total around 20,000 bales. The savings amounts to approximately $150 per bale.

Toy Pistol Called Dangerous By Cops

Two boys strolled into the police station this morning, one carrying a small toy pistol loaded to the hilt with blank cartridges. The young man had evidently been instructed by some good Samaritan to go to the station and make inquiry as to whether this said gun was lawful to be used on the streets. The blank cartridges were large enough to carry a BB shot and the passage in the chamber was large enough to admit the passage of the shot. The cartridge contained enough powder to send a shot with considerable force from the barrel. The young man was instructed to not use the gun as it was very dangerous and especially if the shot should be pressed into the blank cavity of the cartridge.

Mustangs And Longhorns Have Chance To Increase Southwestern Prestige In Foreign Competition Saturday

(By the Associated Press) DALLAS, Oct. 15.—A golden opportunity to enhance the gridiron prestige of the Southwest Conference will be presented Saturday to the Southern Methodist University Mustangs and the Texas University Longhorns.

Coach Ray Morrison's Mustangs will meet the powerful Missouri University Tigers at Columbia, Missouri, and Coach "Doc" Stewart's Steers will attempt to turn back Dan McGughey's Commodores at Dallas.

Aggies Meet New Mexico The Texas Aggies will meet the University of New Mexico at College Station, T. C. U. will take on Austin College at Fort Worth; Rice Institute will meet the St. Edward's University Saints at Houston; the Baylor Bears will engage the Trinity University Tigers at Waco; and Arkansas University will play Hendrix College at Fayetteville.

Interest of Southwest Conference fans, however, will center on the battles to be fought by the Ponies and Longhorns.

The clash of the Mustangs against Coach Quinn Henry's Tigers is expected to be one of the most brilliant engagements fought out in the Missouri Valley this season. In their three games thus far, the Mustangs have scored 32 points and have not been scored on by any of their opponents.

Offer Strong Offensive "Doc" Dawson and "Doc" ends are likely to match the Tiger ends in brilliance, despite the fact that Henry is playing Edgar Lindenmeyer, all-American tackle of last year, and Captain Carl Baehus on the exterior lines.

Unless the Tigers have let down too much from their great form of the Nebraska game, they should nose out the Mustangs, particularly as they will be playing on their home gridiron.

Coach Henry's starting backfield combination likely will be composed of Stuber, Clarke, O'Sullivan, and Flaminik. This combination is speedy, three of its members being track men.

Henry From Southwestern It is not generally known that Coach Henry's prowess as a player has been so outstanding at Missouri, is one of the outstanding athletes turned out by Southwestern University, Georgetown. In his college days, Henry was a great sprinter and football performer.

The eleven that Coach Stewart will send against the Vandy Commodores will be inspired by the knowledge that on the fair park stadium gridiron in 1923 a Longhorn eleven trounced a mighty Commodore combination, 16-0.

The Longhorns of 1923 were defeated 13-3 by the Kansas Aggies, and the Commodores lost, 19-5, to Coach Wade's Alabama University team. Each eleven gave an excellent account of itself, the breaks being decidedly against the losers.

With the forward walls of the teams fairly well matched, the issue in the Commodore-Longhorn game likely will be decided by which team flashes the best aerial offensive.

Against Kansas, the Longhorns were impotent to break up the short passes of Coach Johnny Backman's crew, and thus far the Steers have not shown a formidable aerial attack.

Saxon at Quarter Captain Mack Saxon, one of the outstanding backs of the Southwest, especially from a defensive standpoint, likely will be at quarterback for the Longhorns, with Ross Stalter and Ford at half, and Rufus King at fullback.

However, there is a possibility that either Joe King or Ed Beular will start at quarterback, in which event Saxon would take Ford's place at halfback. The Steer offensive would be strengthened, if either Joe King or Beular is in condition to stand the gaff. Both are excellent punt handlers and elusive in the broken field.

Saxon and Stalter are far ground gainers off-tackle, while Rufus King is a line plunger of merit. King usually is at his best in a big contest and should be a valuable performer Saturday.

The Longhorn forward wall likely will line up as follows: ends, "Ox" Higgins and Sloner; tackles, Gooch and Moore; guards, "Red" Wray and "Tignor" or Cowley; center, McCullough.

One of the most hopeful features of the Longhorn play has been the outstanding work of "Tiny" Gooch, 210 pound tackle from Ennis. Gooch is playing his third year on the squad but heretofore failed to take the gridiron game seriously enough. This season he is showing the aggressiveness most gratifying to his coaches and estimates. The Vandy forwards may find this big fellow a tough customer.

Line Is Good Higgins is a smashing wing, while Mervyn Moore of Electra, line-captain and tackle, is well able to take care of himself.

Sloner, former Austin College player, who worked in the Longhorn back field in 1924, will do the punting. He gets fair distance on his boots.

McCullough, a former pupil of Coach Paul Tyson at Waco High School, is a light, though heavy performer at the pivot position, and will be flanked by guards playing their first year of college football.

One of the best games turned in by a Longhorn eleven was that of 1923 in which the Longhorns defeated the Commodores. The victorious eleven was the first orange and white combination coached by Stewart.

The "big noise" of the Vandy game was Oscar Eckhardt, 185 pound Texas back, who won honorable mention for all-American. Eckhardt, abetted by Captain Lane Tynes, Jim Marley and Bobby Robertson, the other backs supplied the punch that downed the Commodores.

Robertson's place kick from the 42 yard line gave the spectators a thrill. Among the Longhorn forwards who played in that memorable game were: Nig Bradley, center; Cotton Dayvault, guard; Blue Bluestein, tackle.

CLOVIS GAME IS CALLED OFF DUE TO BAD WEATHER

GAME MAY BE PLAYED ON SATURDAY AFTERNOON COACHES SAY

Again the weather has interfered in South Plains sports activities, and the scheduled tilt between the Lubbock high school Westerners and Clovis high school for this afternoon was made the victim. Roads are in such condition that the Clovis aggregation could not negotiate them, and Westerner coaches were advised about noon today that the game would have to be postponed.

It is possible that the tilt may be played tomorrow afternoon, but pending further developments, this is uncertain, coaches said. Announcement will be made late today or early tomorrow regarding this.

The Westerners have been through some of the stiffest drill ever shown them during the past week in preparation for the game, and it was expected that this would be one of the hardest games of the season. Clovis presents a championship squad, with a good record of wins in clashes with many New Mexico schools.

One of the features of the contest this afternoon was to have been a reunion of former Lubbock high school athletes who had been under the tutelage of "Shorty" Galbraith, former coach who is here now resting up from a severe attack of pneumonia poisoning with which he was afflicted earlier in the year.

Galbraith has been instructed by his physicians that he must not work this year, and that he could not even attend school, as he had planned after the first verdict, so he is passing away the time visiting among his former charges and other friends. He was mentioned in earlier news items, and for a time it was feared he would not recover. He is now on the road to recovery, however, minus many pounds of flesh, and expects to be normal again in a few weeks.

While the Westerners are held idle here by the heavy rains that have fallen over this part of the state, the Tech college Matadors are in Abilene in a contest with the Simmons University Cowboys. The special train carrying the team and many rooters left here early this morning.

COTTON RISING MARKET SHOWS

But Government Report, Which May Come Tomorrow, May Change Situation

The cotton market has been making steady gains since Friday of last week, and unless the government report which is due tomorrow throws another bomb into camp even greater advances may be expected. On October 1 the government estimate was 16,627,000 bales, but the last four estimates have shown increases. In the fifth show a larger number a sudden fall is sure to follow.

Cotton sold on the streets of Lubbock Friday for considerably better than 12 cents. The grade is poor and will be poor until the rainy season is over. Cotton closed Thursday night with advances of about 15 points, and at noon Friday another seven points had been added with the market steady.

Because of continued rains in the south gin receipts are considerably lower than at this time last season.

'Can Press Agent' Is Advice Of Big Editor

DELMONTE, Calif., Oct. 15. (AP)—Charles Sommers Young, publisher of the San Francisco Call, favors "firing" all press agents. He told the convention of the California real estate association here yesterday, that "nearly all worth while, newspapers of today the slogan has been sounded: 'Can the press agent'."

The publisher said that real estate men and others should take up their problems with the newspapers direct. "Don't pay any money to press agents," urged Mr. Young. "Don't send boxes of cigars or any other gratuities to the editors. Newspaper workers are in no more need of charity than workers in other walks of life."

MATADORS OFF FOR TILT WITH SIMMONS TEAM

150 BACKERS ACCOMPANY TECH WARRIORS TO ABILENE TODAY

Leaving with a crippled eleven—with a new backfield and new wingmen—the mentors of the Matadors, Freeland and Higginbotham, refused to make any comment on the game with Simmons this afternoon other than "we are going."

The Matadors are a crippled eleven—Walker, Woodbridge and Cappelman in the backfield are injured—white Jennings and White are crippled ends. With these valuable men out of the lineup it is going to be a tough day for the Matadors.

Simmons and Tech are playing their first football game against one another and the game is causing much interest throughout west Texas.

Some 150 followers of the Matadors accompanied the team to Abilene this morning, when the special train left for Abilene.

HASKELL GETS FINE STADIUM

October 27 Will Be Opening Day For Indians' New Athletic Field

LAWRENCE, Kans., Oct. 15.—The poor Indian hath built himself a stadium just like his white college brothers. It is located at Haskell Institute and every penny of its cost was contributed by Indians, over 50 tribes being subscribers. White money was offered but refused.

It is to be dedicated here Oct. 27 to the dedication ending with an inter-sectional clash between Haskell Indian School and Bucknell College.

The dedication will show a big contrast in Indian affairs to the observer. While the girls in "tom-boy" skirts (but with the young Indian shells on the Haskell campus during the ceremonies their dedication in buckskins and feathers) will be incamped in a huge village on the reservation near the stadium.

While the most notable Indian of the Kaw tribe, the Honorable Charles E. Curtis of Kansas, Republican leader of the United States Senate, is making the speech of dedication, interpreters will tell some of his fellow tribesmen what he is saying.

A small herd of buffaloes is to be brought here from a government game preserve in Oklahoma and barbecued for the occasion. A band of Comanches has begged permission to shoot the bison with bows and arrows for old-time sake.

The world's championship Indian dancing contest will be held in the stadium, illuminated by 60,000 candle power of light.

This big war dance will bring together tribesmen from far and near. Some will put on the buckskins for the first time in years, while others will enter the dance dressed in the only way they know. The rhythmic beat of the tom-tom drums and high wail of the singers will strike some Indian ears as a foreign sound while to others it will be a commonplace event.

A band of Potawatomis will dance the Eagle dance, one of the most beautiful bits of Americana in the Indian dancer's repertoire. A band of Blackfeet, the most primitive of the United States Indians, in all the regal splendor of tribal costume, will come from distant Montana to see their young Braves meet Bucknell, to eat again the buffalo meat and to dance the dances of olden days.

Coming Flyweight Signs For Battle

MERCEDES, TEXAS, Oct. 15. (AP)—Fidel La Jara, touted as the world's coming champion fly weight fighter, has signed an agreement to meet "Kid" Lencho of San Antonio, somewhere in the Rio Grande Valley, Armistice Day, Nov. 11. J. "Scotty" Robinson, promoter, has announced.

Mission seems to be favored as the scene of the fight.

Lencho, Robinson says, has defeated fly weights regarded as first class and including such men as Leroy Dougan and Rommy Ryan.

East Or West, Football Is The Same Says Ernie Nevers, Ex-Stanford Star

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of a series of 12 articles written for the Journal and NEA Service by Ernie Nevers, St. Louis Browns pitcher and All-American fullback in 1925. Nevers is one of the best gridironers ever produced in the United States. His articles will appear daily on the Journal sport page.

BY ERNIE NEVERS All-American Fullback, 1925

Since graduating from Leland Stanford University and coming out to play professional baseball with the St. Louis Browns of the American League, no question has been put to me more often than this one:

"Is there a wide difference between the style of football played on the coast and in the east?"

For some reason the impression exists that football as played on the Pacific coast varies greatly from the football of other sections of our country. Such an impression is entirely erroneous. The game of football is much the same east, west, south or north.

Of course certain coaches have their own plays. Some are more original than others in devising new formations, but the fundamentals of the game are the same everywhere.

Football enthusiasts who never have had a chance to see coast eleven in action, and who hold to the belief that the style of play is widely different, would soon reach a contrary decision if they coldly analyzed the situation.

The football coaches largely define the character of the game played. A majority of the coaches of the leading colleges on the Pacific coast are former eastern football stars, who learned the game under eastern coaches in most instances.

What is more natural than that these coaches should instruct their athletes in the style of game they know best—eastern methods?

For years the University of California achieved great success under the late Andy Smith, who learned his football at University of Pennsylvania.

At Stanford, I received instruction from Glenn Warner, who for years won fame and glory in the east as coach at Cornell, Dartmouth, and the University of Pittsburgh.

At the University of Southern California in Howard Jones, a Yale man who, prior to coming to the coast, did big things at University of Iowa, a member of the Big Ten conference.

I want to go on record as busting the myth that football as played in the east, west and south varies greatly from the Pacific coast brand.

It's the same old game everywhere, with slight variations, of course according to the originality and ingenuity of the coast.

THE REFEREE

What was the outcome of the bout between Willie Harmon and Frank Mitchell, staged last year—C. H. J. Harmon and Mitchell fought twice last year, both being no-decision bouts of 12 and 19 rounds.

How long has Charley Jamison been with Cleveland and did he ever pitch?

D. N. A. Since 1919, started as pitcher with Buffalo in International League in 1912 but after a few seasons switched to the outfield.

Stocks And Money

TRADE BALANCE GOOD

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15 (AP)—The United States had a favorable trade balance of $105,000,000 for September, when exports reached $450,000,000, the largest in any September in the last five years, the commerce department announced today.

WALL STREET REPORT

NEW YORK, Oct. 15 (AP)—Renewed selling of most shares and liquidation of minor specialties unsettled the stock market at the start today. Hudson fell back to 50 and Studebaker and Chrysler were under pressure. Railroad shares held fairly steady. Although the Van Sweringen issue, with the exception of Chesapeake and Ohio, failed to profit taking.

Encouraged by success in halting the recent recovery, professional speculative sellers resumed their attacks against all classes of stocks. Motors were the principal targets as fears of further price cutting in the industry and of disappointing earnings were aroused. Mack Trucks and Hudson Motors tumbled to the lowest prices of the year and General Motors sagged to 157 1/2 points under yesterday's high. Dupont broke more than seven points and East Iron Pipe dropped nearly six points in the first half hour, while large offerings of American Can, Pillsbury, U. S. Steel, International Harvester and Union Carbide were thrown on the market at prices several points below the previous close. Rail shares also began to slip, with Delaware and Hudson and Chesapeake and Ohio joining the decline. Foreign exchanges opened steady although a reaction of 1/4 points took place in Spanish pesetas.

Altogether, the market is buoyant, the hand-to-mouth buying policy upon the part of the New York goods trade gives evidence of having been overdone, in view of the present rush to buy wool, which manifestly is against current orders in goods. Turkey Mobilizing In "Threatened Region"

LONDON, Oct. 15 (AP)—A dispatch from Constantinople says the newspapers there report that Turkey has mobilized four army corps in the "threatened region." The dispatch does not explain where the "threatened region" is or give any further details. The report is not taken seriously in London's official circles, being considered probably a reaction to the recent rumors, were discounted by official denial. It is believed that the "threatened region" mentioned in the dispatch possibly means Smyrna, upon which Greece and Italy are supposed to have been casting fond glances for some time.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct. 15 (AP)—It was authoritatively stated today that there is no foundation for the rumor that Turkey has mobilized four army corps.

CAMPUS REBELS

BY VIRGINIA SWAIN COPYRIGHT 1926 NEA

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE
 JUDITH MARTIN, young, red-haired, beautiful, arriving to teach in Pendleton University meets an earnest man who rescues her baggage on the train, but refuses to enter into conversation with her. As she steps from the train at Pendleton station, a strange young man, giant, green-eyed, seizes her, kisses her and without a word thrusts her into a taxi and vanishes.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER II
 The taxi was wheeling into the main street when Judith first dared to glance out the window. For a moment her heart stopped, as a light topcoat came round the corner.

But the coat swung from puny shoulders less than five feet from the ground. And then the sidewalks seemed lined with light topcoats of many descriptions. The owner of the green eyes and the broad shoulders and the strong arm evidently was not to be identified by his coat.

The car left the business district and swung into an avenue lined with old trees and large houses of frame and ancient brick, set far back in spacious lawns.

The driver stretched his head through the opening toward her. "You say 512 College, miss?" he asked.

She nodded, and the man, after a quick glance at her white face, turned back to his wheel.

A few moments later, they turned a corner and the car shot up a driveway. "Fifty cents, miss," the driver said, when he had nonchalantly set Judith's baggage on the grass by the drive.

"You've been paid once," she retorted. "And kindly carry my bags to the door."

The man grumbled as he followed her up the wooden porch steps. On the top step he threw down her bags and departed.

Music and laughter drifted out from the reception hall as Judith fumbled for the knocker. She found, instead, an antiquated bell operated by a thumb screw, which sent a leassy peal through the house.

The door opened and a youth in a white apron stood before her.

"Is this Mrs. Stedway's house?" she asked, almost petulantly, for the youth stood silent and frozen.

"Yes," he drawled.

"I have rented a room here. I suppose I may come in?" Judith found her voice growing brittle.

He pushed open the door, making no move to take her bags. The piano banging in the next room stopped, and a pale, blond girl stepped between the folding walnut doors.

"I am Mrs. Stedway's daughter, Lillian. I'll show you to your room."

They went up the stairs in silence, and the pale Miss Stedway pushed open a door into a bed room. "You're Mrs. Martin, of course. The rest are all here. Supper will be ready in fifteen minutes. You'll hear the going." She turned and descended the stairs.

Just inside the door, Judith stopped and leaned rather weakly against the wall. The room was plainly furnished, and the white walls, rising indefinitely heavenward, added to its barrenness. But the five windows promised light and air and the counterpane on the white-enameled bed looked clean.

Near the head stood a large packing box bearing the name of the firm from which Judith had ordered her blankets and bed linen. She inspected the bed more closely. There was nothing between counterpane and mattress. All other necessities had been left for her to supply. Even the golden oak dresser lacked a scarf. It was scathed on top with rings from many perfume bottles, and covered with dust.

Judith set down her burdens and rather listlessly walked toward the bed. Without stopping to unpack the blankets, she lay down on it and closed her eyes.

Some time later she was awakened by a gong sounding somewhere below, followed by a burst of noise in the hall and on the stairs. She sat up with a start and glanced at her watch as the light glared and lay down.

Her tongue of light dancing over the wall had ceiling. "Noisy night," she murmured, as she lay waiting at them, in a panic. Then she glanced to the window and saw a procession of whooping young men leaping up the street a rickety and only in his underwear, and brandishing red torches as they ran.

Every window in the Stedway house went up simultaneously, and Judith heard shrieks of laughter as girls recognized friends in the procession.

"Hi, Jimmy, throw him in the fish pond for me. That's one of the things every young freshman should know." This in a feminine squeak from the porch downstairs.

A sound behind her made Judith turn suddenly. The reflections from the torches were still careening riddily around the room, and their intermittent light struck against someone leaning against the closed door. A pin point of fire burned beside the figure.

Red gleams caught in the black folds of the person's garments and then flickered off. "Who is there?" Judith's voice caught a little.

The figure at the door stretched out a hand and pressed the light switch. Judith saw a black-haired girl of 19 or 20, wrapped in a black satin lounging robe, and holding a lighted cigaret in her hand.

"Sorry if I'm bothering you," the girl said indolently. "I am Myra Aldrich. I just came in to see what all the fuss is about. My windows are on the side."

She walked to the window, gazed a moment and shrugged her shoulders.

Then she moved, with curious swaying stride, to Judith's bed, climbed upon it and stretched herself out, with her head against the wall. She was still puffing at the cigaret.

"I also wanted to give you this," she said. "It was stuck under my door by mistake. You ARE Judith Martin, aren't you?" She held out an envelope.

Judith glanced at it and laid it on the table. Then she looked at her guest again.

Myra was quite at ease. "I like your room, Miss Martin. Mine's much smaller and sorer. You see, I didn't decide to come until the last minute and had to take what I could get."

Judith nodded politely. "It will do very well, when I have found some chintz to take away the hospital-look. I like these windows."

Myra said, "It's rather queer for me to be here. I don't usually care much for strangers. But this house is pretty beastly, and I got lonely. Have you seen the collection of boarders?"

Judith shook her head. "I didn't go down to dinner."

Myra whistled. "Just wait. But you and I'll have to be friends. I've got to have somebody to talk to—especially when I'm in love."

Judith looked at her quizzically. "And are you in love now?" she queried.

Myra nodded casually. She had thrown back her robe, and its cardinal red lining deepened the richness of her skin. Her eyes lighted on the packing box.

"Your bedding has come, hasn't it? I'll bet mine doesn't get here for a week. It was only ordered Saturday."

"But you can't sleep without blankets on a cool night like this," protested Judith.

"Have to. Mrs. Stedway hasn't any to lend, she says." Judith looked at the single bed. "Come in and sleep with me," she said, impulsively. "We can manage."

Myra displayed no embarrassment. "Very well, perhaps I shall. You haven't had any dinner. I have a chicken sandwich and a slab of chocolate cake in my room. I'll get them if you like."

Myra's departure for the refreshments gave Judith a chance to open her letter.

"Dear Miss Martin," it ran. "This is to advise you that members of the faculty of the college of liberal arts will meet at 2 o'clock Wednesday at the administration building." It was signed "Timothy Brown."

"You eat and I'll smoke," said Myra, as she came in with the sandwich and cake. "I'll also talk. I feel the need of conversation this evening." She stopped suddenly and looked sidelong at Judith. "But, look here! I'll bet you won't go to talk to. But you've never been kissed." She smiled at Judith impudently.

BEGGARS MUST GO SOMEWHERE ELSE TO WORK

THAT IS EDICT HANDED DOWN BY POLICEMEN IN LUBBOCK

"Street beggars are getting too numerous in Lubbock," said Mayor Parrish Friday, "and something must be done to keep these undesirable out of the city. We have our Red Cross and other civic organizations, and they will care for the needs of the worthy poor, but most beggars are not in need."

One man who has been begging in Lubbock for some time told a friend he had one house paid for that was bringing him $50 a month rental, and that he had another that would soon be paid out. He made the money begging.

Pink is Active

A cripple—one legged man recently applied to the mayor for aid. The mayor asked him if he could work, and he said, "yes, if I had a job." The mayor got him a place to work and the man backed down—said he couldn't hold it. He was invited to leave the city.

A woman recently applied at the Red Cross headquarters for aid. Her story of a sick mother was pitiful, and Miss Mae Murfee "fell" for the tale of woe. It later developed the girl's mother was not sick, but that the girl was trying to raise money so she could run away from home. Another woman asked for money to feed her hungry baby, but as she looked pretty healthy Miss Murfee wanted to know if she would like to work. She replied that she would and was sent to a Lubbock hotel where her services were needed. She did not go to the hotel, but returned to Miss Murfee and stated she could not get to the place. She was lying, for she had been followed and it was known she had never entered the hotel.

No Aid Given Her

Naturally no aid was given her, but she was again followed. It developed that she was a member of a band of beggars camped near the city limits. The baby was not hers, but that of another woman, and had been "loaned" to her in order to gain sympathy of those who were to be her intended victims.

Lubbock is known far and wide as an "easy town" but as the city has an ordinance against begging that is going to be enforced it is likely many prosperous beggars will give the city a wide path in the future.

W. S. Clark To Open J. P. Office Today

W. S. Clark, recently nominated for Justice of the Peace, Precinct No. 1, place 2, will take his oath of office this afternoon and in the future Lubbock will have two justice courts. The constitution allows a justice court for every 10,000 inhabitants or fraction thereof, and Lubbock has long since passed the 10,000 mark. The new justice will have his office on the first floor at the court house for the present, though larger quarters will be arranged at a later date. Judge W. E. Johnson's court will remain the same, and it is up to the individual which court they patronize in civil matters.

and insisting that exaggerated reports about conditions were being sent out by neighboring towns. He said no one in Borger had asked for rangers.

Zweifel Stands Pat

Zweifel who is at Amarillo attending federal court with Federal Judge William Atwell said that he has joined District Attorney J. A. Holmes and County Attorney Walter Allen in asking the governor to send rangers to Borger.

He said that Borger is an oil boom town, not much different from any oil town, but that it contained every class of human being, and that it was what is known as a "wide open oil town."

Allright said that after diligent investigation he had been unable to learn the personnel of a delegation reported to have appealed to Judge Atwell to clean up the town.

Meeting Is Denied

"There has been no meeting of citizens of Borger, no appointment of any committee, and no official representation sent to anyone asking that Borger be cleaned up," said Allright. "If any delegation did wait on Judge Atwell we have been unable to find out who they were.

"No official of Borger has asked for the rangers. Sheriff Joe Onaby said he would be glad to cooperate with them if they were needed.

"This town has no more lawlessness than the average town. The whole situation is due to wild stories from the outside."

Two Murder Suspects Held

Allright said two suspects were being held today in connection with the shooting of Miss Mildred Toptman 15 year old girl who was killed by highwaymen last Tuesday night. The sheriff he said had not established their guilt.

Zweifel in his statement over the telephone to the Associated Press said that a delegation had waited on Judge Atwell several days ago asking that he take steps to rid Borger of outlaws. He said information of who composed this delegation would have to come from Judge Atwell. Judge was busy in the court room and could not be reached at the time.

Zweifel said his telegram to the governor gave his opinion about the conditions and that he had nothing to add.

Good People There

"There are good people in Borger," he said. "They are there to make money. There are strangers from everywhere, and they represent all classes of people, and all working hard to make money. No one pays much attention to what his neighbor is doing."

Allright insisted that the shooting of Miss Toptman had no connection with the normal conditions in Borger. He said it was a plain case of robbery with fire arms the kind that happens everywhere.

Borger is about eight months old and has about 10,000 residents according to Allright. The first building was constructed last March.

Thieves Take Wash From Clothes Line

Watch your clothes line if you do the family washing and hang the clothes out over night is the admonition from police. Desk Sergeant Innon. A local man went home early and assisted his good wife to put out the family wash. The clothes were hung on the line and allowed to hang out over night (so they thought) sometime during the night someone else had another thought, which led them to this particular clothes line. The night being dark and the clothes white seemed to cause a cohesion of the parties and the clean clothes. The entire washing was missing in the morning and no trace can be found of them. If you are going to wash at night, better put the clothes under lock and key.

SAINT AND SINNER

By ANNE AUSTIN

COPYRIGHT 1926 NEA

It was just before two o'clock when the telephone called Faith from her...

"It's me, Faith!" Cherry's excitement-thrilled voice came over the wire...

"At Parks!" Faith echoed, dismayed. "Why, Cherry, how in the world could you afford to buy even one roll there?"

"Hold your horses!" Cherry laughed. "I had lunch with Mr. Clony and when I told him I had to go shopping for wallpaper, he insisted on coming along, and he had it charged to him."

"Oh, Cherry!" Faith wailed despairingly. "You know you shouldn't accept things from him."

"Why not?" Cherry asked pertly. "Don't grouch, darling. Won't we have a peach of a time sloshing paste about? They're sending enough cheesecloth too. I thought we ought to rip off all those layers of old paper and do the job up right. Don't you think so?"

"I suppose so," Faith said helplessly. "I'll do all I can this afternoon, but I promised Aunt Hattie I'd help her with her black and white veil. She's to be here at two. Oh! Here she is now. Good-bye."

Faith felt as if her feet were weighted with lead, as if her heart had turned to stone in her breast, as she walked slowly into the dining room, where her aunt's voice was raised in staccato greeting of her sister-in-law.

Any fool could profess that she would not content herself with the love of an old man, no matter how rich he was. What were they all thinking of to allow her to do it?

Faith stood in the doorway for a minute her somber brown eyes fixed upon her mother, seated at the window, her complaining sighing voice droning on monotonously of her ailments.

The girl felt, for a moment that she hated her mother—the woman who for years had done nothing for her family but rule down with the tyranny of tears and the threat of death by heart failure.

Then pity for her mother rose up in her throat, and she was ashamed. After all, who could blame her mother for loving Cherry with an idolatrous worship? Wasn't Cherry the spice of her dull, discontented, sickness-ridden life?

"Hello, Faith! Pity you can't speak to a body!" Aunt Hattie deposited her packages with a bang upon the dining table. "What's this? I hear about you giving that nice Pruitt fellow the gate?"

"I don't know, Aunt Hattie," Faith smiled affectionately at her aunt. "What do you hear?"

"Joy told the kids at school and that little Cattle boy told me that he'd proposed and you'd turned him down. Well, what I say is, there ain't no fool like a young fool. Guess you're walkin' for a Rockefeller. Turned him over to Cherry, I reckon. Just like you! Hear she's sportin' a diamond big enough to choke a pig."

Faith made frantic gestures to silence her aunt, frowning toward her mother to indicate that she had not yet been told of Cherry's engagement.

"Don't believe all you hear, Hattie," Mrs. Lane shook her head dolefully. "If Cherry'd been engaged to anybody, she'd a-told her own mother I reckon."

"Of course she would. Mother, Faith breathed a quick sigh of relief. "She's just telephoned me that she's sending out some wallpaper for the living room and dining room. Do you know how to make wallpaper paste, Aunt Hattie?"

"Think I was born yesterday?" Aunt Hattie sniffed disdainfully. "I'll mix the stuff and get it on to boil, while you peel them walls. But it looks to me like this brown oatmeal's good enough for anybody."

Her head pressed in a towel, her dress almost hidden under a soiled old bungalow apron, Faith was slashing at the living room walls with a paring knife when the doorbell rang. Without descending from the step-ladder she shouted a "Come in!" expecting to see the delivery man from Park and Sons' Interior Decorating company.

"You look like the goddess of wrath!" George Pruitt voice laughed at her from the doorway.

"What's the idea?" "Good heavens, George! This is a fine time of day to make a call!" Faith flushed with annoyance and embarrassment. "We're papering—or getting ready to."

"In the best little paper hanger in twelve counties," George Pruitt grinned at her. "I jammed my studio in New York, and it was the talk of the town—absolutely! The cubists used to gather there and wrangle over the motifs. Where's an apron? You look adorable, darling—positively edible, dust and all."

He helped her descend the ladder, then, without warning, flung his arms about her and held her hard and fast against the breast. "Faith honey—oh, Faith!"

Because she was so grateful for the tiny flicker of a thrill that quivered along her nerves—a ghost of a thrill that somehow made her decision to accept him seem a little less wrong—Faith laid an arm around his neck and did not flinch when he tilted her face to his.

"Faith, there ain't half enough flour—oh, excuse me! Good Lord! Don't break the clinch, because I built that somehow made her decision to accept him seem a little less wrong—Faith laid an arm around his neck and did not flinch when he tilted her face to his."

Faith withdrew herself from George's arms with a slight, embarrassed laugh, then turned her face away from Aunt Hattie's. For Faith knew that there was no glory of love in her own eyes.

"I haven't said 'yes' yet, Aunt Hattie. George'll run over to the store and get some flour, won't you, George? Oh, that must be the wallpaper man! You go to the door, Aunt Hattie. I look a sight." To herself she was praying a frantic little prayer: "Oh, Lord, I can't, I can't! Show me some other way to help Cherry, dear Jesus! I can't, I can't!"

AUSTIN, Texas, Oct. 15. (AP)—F. J. Chudej, formerly of Seaton, whose membership in the state text book commission has been attacked in the 52d district court of Travis county by Attorney General Dan Moody, resigned yesterday.

A. I. Lave, attorney of Austin who represented Chudej when the attorney instituted legal action against him, told Assistant Attorney General R. B. Cousins, Jr., that Chudej had resigned and his resignation had been accepted by Governor Ferguson. Cousins was seeking to take a deposition, he said, from Chudej, when Lave told him that Chudej had resigned.

Judith flushed. Then she smiled sheepishly. "Yes, I have—and no longer ago than this very afternoon." Then, seeing Myra's face light with curiosity, she added hastily, "But that's another story. Go on and tell me your tale of woe."

Myra lay back with eyes half closed and puffed smoke between scarlet lips. "Well, it's just this. I'm in love with the handsomest young Viking that ever breathed—and the most fickle!"

AT THE END OF THE ROAD

Chimeneau of France who as "The Tiger" was the thunderous voice of France during those red years between 1914 and '18, had a birthday a few days ago. The tiger was 52. He spent his birthday in work, toiling with a translator over the American edition of his new book, "Civiliation."

NOT USELESS

A German historian has just presented a new and intimate account of the career of former Kaiser Wilhelm II of Germany. His portrait is hardly flattering even though his treatment of the deposed emperor is sympathetic. He shows how Europe again and again was led to the verge of war because of Wilhelm's passion for playing the "great power" game.

IN NEW YORK SEE-SAWING UP AND DOWN BROADWAY

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—Random notes from a Manhattan ramble:

The old fellow who dances in the subway trains. They call him "Lightfoot." They say the name was given him here in 1886 or thereabouts.

Once he danced to crowded theaters on the great white way from which he darts into the half-lit subway station. Once he danced with applause and he took his bows gracefully.

And sometimes it is well that this is so. For old "Lightfoot"—ironic sobriquet—finds it his livelihood. And the street rams who sneak subway rides as urchins elsewhere jump on the back of autos or as, when I see a limo, we slide rides on slugs.

It took four hits to demolish a heavy Mark-V British tank. A 150-millimeter high explosive shell cut a chunk out of its armor. Fifteen pounds of "triton" broke its track and disabled it. A 155 H. E. shell tore out its bottom and demolished its engine.

Journal Jobs

A joke is said to travel around the world in sixty-seven days. The distressing thing is that it doesn't seem to know when to stop going around.

Our own faults are to be preferred to the virtues of other people.

Somebody has tried to write a rule for telling after-dinner stories. Here's ours—"Don't."

To the pessimist tomorrow will be rent day; to the optimist, pay day.

It's great to get up feeling fine. All full of life, and laughter. But it certainly is more than tough. To arise on the 'morning after.'

Stewart's WASHINGTON LETTER

TANK IS STRONG, BUT A CHARGE OF TNT IS STRONGER, MUCH STRONGER

By CHARLES P. STEWART, NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—Thirty pounds of TNT in its vitals are too much for any tank's digestion. There was a peculiar idea—tanks were practically invulnerable. The fallacy of this theory has been amply demonstrated in the last few days at the Camp Meade (Md.) tank school.

Even at a distance of two blocks, approximately the range from which the firing is done, the officer who pushes the button dives for cover the minute he's pushed it.

Colonel Cooper had no tanks left when he had finished.

It took four hits to demolish a heavy Mark-V British tank. A 150-millimeter high explosive shell cut a chunk out of its armor.

A single 155-millimeter shell under-neath a nice little French Renault tore it in two lengthwise and distributed it all over the adjacent landscape.

On your lives, don't kick anything," warned the officer who guided a party of spectators to see the Camp Meade experiments.

"You see," he explained, as the guests looked their surprise, "quite a few live shells are lying around. They failed to go off but they're still potential. We haven't found 'em all. Try to kick one out of the way and you're liable to join the angels."

A pleasant spot, truly. Camp Meade was a big camp in wartime. Today it's the most dilapidated wreck in southern Maryland. Nevertheless it's home to the tank experiments. Their grub is good, if their quarters are awful.

A philosopher is a man who writes a book to prove that when you face the south, your back is toward the north.

Helpful Health Hints

SUN'S RAYS FOR TUBERCULAR MUST BE GIVEN CAREFULLY

BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEEIN, Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene the Health Magazine

The emphasis which advisers in health matters place on the use of sunlight for the promotion of a sound body has, no doubt, caused many to expose themselves unduly to the sun's rays.

Those who use this medium regularly in the treatment of tuberculosis in the southwestern portions of the United States are careful, however, to avoid the giving of overdoses of this remedy.

Regulating Exposure

The use of sunlight in the treatment of tuberculosis has been most widely developed in Switzerland by Rollier, who outlined a definite plan for beginning the treatment with slight exposure of portions of the body, gradually increased as the skin of the patient becomes sufficiently tanned to establish resistance.

With Our Contemporaries

GOVERNMENT COTTON REPORTS

That the Department of Agriculture is doing the country a real service in the cotton reports that are given out by them appears to be true. Although the reports which have gone out during the opening of this season have cost thousands of dollars, it is well to reflect that if there were no government agency reporting at all, what the report would be, or what price cotton would be set down to on the basis of private reports.

The buyer always has a considerable advantage over the seller in whatever line. Everybody who has anything to sell knows this from experience. If they will reflect on it, it might be well to reflect that it is better to have a reliable government report showing near six million than to have private reports that might show twenty million.

We do not recall that the government report has ever been far wrong on the close of the season. For years it has been something real to tie to, and should serve both buyers and sellers of cotton better than most any other arrangement.—Eloyd County, Heppelcan.

GIVE US MORE NATHAN HALES

On September 22, 1776, a 21-year-old captain in the Revolutionary Army waited to be hanged as a spy by the British. With the rope around his neck he said quietly: "I only regret that I have but one life to give to my country." The life was that of Nathan Hale, martyr, hero.

On the anniversary of his death in his birthplace in South Coventry, Conn., citizens assembled to honor his 150th anniversary.

A message from President Coolidge was read.

"There is no finer record of high character and patriotic devotion, of unselfish service and of a spirit unquenched and majestic in death than that of Nathan Hale. The hero's story should be taught to every child in our schools. . . ."—Plainville Herald.

Flapper Fanny

An open mouth is no sign of an open mind.

the mother bird begins to get when she lays the first egg and the young are hatched at intervals. Arctic hares, ptarmigan and lemmings—these are the food of the young owls, and in due time, if all goes well, they are able to fly and each learns to catch its own food.

Go on Long Journey

It is now August. The flowers have gone to seed and already many of the summer birds are starting on their long journey to their winter homes. But the snowy owl loves to well his home and stays as long as he can. Snow storms come, small ones at first just whitening the barren hills, and soon melting.

Then comes one which does not melt. The ptarmigan no longer can find food and they go southward where the willows grow thickly and furnish a bountiful supply of buds.

Food is Scarce

The lemmings are under the snow and the great white hares are scarce. So southward they go, too, into the great stretches of spruce and poplar woods. Here is a smaller hare, white like the other. He is the prey of those other large owls, the great gray and the great horned. But the hares are in myriads and there are enough for all.

So our arctic owl picks out some thinly-wooded section, close to some wide stretch of river and gravel bar now plike covered with snow, and thus reminding him of his beloved arctic waste, and here he is happy passing the time until the sun of spring has once more bared his ancestral nesting ground.

they are in connection with any other method of medical treatment.

There seems to be no doubt that tuberculous infections outside the lungs respond most promptly and easily to sunlight treatment. But infections of the lung must be divided into classes according to the amount of lung tissue that may be involved, and the nature of the infection.

With this caution in mind, the physician is able to outline for the patient the amount of treatment that he may take as a beginning experiment.

Then the patient is regularly studied as to whether or not he develops increase in temperature, cough or other symptoms following the treatment, and the dosage is definitely regulated in relation to this response.

In many instances, the presence of fever is considered an absolute contraindication to the use of the sun treatment. Others use the methods experimentally, sometimes with good results.

The important fact to remember is that the sunlight is a powerful agency, and that it is not to be considered a matter for self-treatment that are powerful and poisonous drugs used by physicians to advantage in properly selected cases.

THOUGHTS

If we would all devote our thoughts along "constructive" lines, instead of "destructive," things would look much brighter. At this time people are beginning to talk bad times, and really believing they are right. But they will be if it is consistently talked. While we are using our brains for thought, why not think constructively, be an optimist, and talk it. It is just as easy, if not easier, to talk positive, and optimism is to be negative, and talk negative all the time. Wait until you are really hurt. In the meantime, use Avalanche-Journal Classified ads for buying, selling or renting. Ads taken on the phone until 9 P. M.

KLAN PROBE IN INDIANA WANES

Stephenson Sent Back To His Cell And Jurymen Move To Complete Their Probe

(By the Associated Press)
 INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 15.—The Marion county grand jury yesterday speeded up its investigation into charges of alleged political corruption in Indiana to complete the taking of testimony within the next two or three days.

Thomas H. Adams, publisher of the Vincennes, Ind. Commercial, who originally made the charges of alleged harrasing of offices by public officials and D. E. Stephenson, named by Adams as a source of confirmation of the charges, have both testified before the grand jury and apparently only the gathering up of loose ends of testimony remained before the conclusion of the probe.

With Stephenson back in Indiana state prison after his trip to Indianapolis, the grand jury session divided interests with the possibility of the corruption charges becoming the subject of a hearing by the senatorial campaign funds investigating committee. St. Louis dispatches last night quoted a newspaper of that city as saying that United States Senator James A. Reed, of Missouri, chairman of the senate committee had called a meeting of its members in Indianapolis.

Earl Klenck, former body guard of Stephenson and who was acquitted last year when he was a co-defendant with Stephenson on the charge of murdering Madge Oberholzer of which the latter was convicted and is serving a life sentence in the Indiana state prison, was expected to complete today the testimony he started to give yesterday before the grand jury.

Election Trial Is Overruled By Court

AUSTIN, Texas, Oct. 15. (AP)—Holding he did not have authority to call a special term of court to try an election contest in which his own interest was involved, the supreme court today overruled the motion of Judge W. S. Moore of the 16th district for permission to file a petition for mandamus, compelling Judge Claude M. McCallum of the 101st district to try Moore's contest at a special term.

Rum Smugglers And Border Police Fight

LAREDO, Texas, Oct. 15. (AP)—After a battle lasting about twenty minutes with three border patrol officers and a customs inspector fighting four Mexican smugglers on horse back a distance of 300 or 400 yards away in the brush at a point about six miles from the Rio Grande and not far from Zapata on Wednesday morning about 7 o'clock, the smugglers escaped but three pack horses loaded with contraband liquor which they abandoned during the fight were still at large in a pasture near Zapata.

The four smugglers, mounted and heavily armed, each with his horse carrying a quantity of Mexican liquor with three pack horses also loaded with liquor, were observed by American officers while they were about near a tank. Called upon to halt, the smugglers opened fire, resulting in a pitched battle.

HEARST AND AL SMITH AT OUTS OVER POLITICS

HARSH TERMS USED WHEN GOTHAMITES DECIDE TO FALL OUT

(By the Associated Press)
 NEW YORK, Oct. 15. (AP)—Governor Al Smith and W. R. Hearst, who had sensational exchanges in New York's mayoralty campaign last year, are at it again. Such expressions as "admirer figure" and "rascally betrayers" are contained in their latest comments about each other.

Hearst is supporting Osgood Mills, republican candidate, for a fourth term, charges Hearst with "degrading the republican campaign to the usual Hearst level."

"It seems," said Smith in a speech at Hornell last night, "they have decreed that in every political contest in which it takes part there is the sinister figure of Hearst and all that he stands for in the eyes of the American public."

Others attacked. The type of campaign is the same Hearst employed to vilify and slander William McKinley, Grover Cleveland, Theodore Roosevelt, Elihu Root, Charles Evans Hughes, and practically every leader of both the parties.

"The plan is to make an utterly baseless and unfounded charge and then keep repeating it in the hope that by constant repetition somebody may begin to believe it."

Smith replied: "Hearst tells his side."

Governor Smith says I have criticized and abused Cleveland, McKinley, Root and Hughes, and he naively associates himself with these distinguished statesmen in the course of editorial activities. I also had occasion to criticize Mayor Van Wyck, of Ince trust fame, Secretary Fall of the oil trust, Secretary Aker of the beef trust, Ward of the bread trust and Baer of the coal trust. Why should not Governor Smith

Howard Accepts Appointment As District Attorney

L. A. Howard, County Attorney-elect of Lubbock county, who was recently appointed District Attorney of the 72nd judicial district to succeed W. C. Wiltcher, resigned, announced here late Thursday that he had accepted the appointment, and will be in charge of the state's prosecution during the October term of court here, which opens next Monday.

City To Collect Delinquent Taxes

A program for the collection of all delinquent taxes for the city of Lubbock was put under way here Thursday afternoon at a meeting of the City Commission, when the Secretary was instructed to send out notices to attorneys for bids on handling the suits. Many property owners in the city are behind with their tax payments. It was said, some of them for several years, and suits will be filed for collection in the near future.

Other business transacted by the Commission included acceptance of the oath of office of J. T. Lamon, newly appointed Desk Sergeant, instructions to the police force to halt the sale of papers and other periodicals in front of the postoffice building, and revision of the traffic ordinance creating the boulevard system. The ordinance was made a little more strict in regard to cars coming to a complete standstill on entering the boulevard, and instructions issued to the police department accordingly.

Date Of Halloween Decided Upon Here

Some little confusion, at least in one or two families, in connection with the celebration of Halloween, has been occasioned here, and unless the matter is straightened out, this day will probably be celebrated prematurely.

Inquiries were received by the Avalanche-Journal last night regarding the date of the "Spook show", and after some little discussion it was mutually decided that the show falls on the last day in October, which this year happens to be Sunday.

Howards Accepts Appointment As District Attorney

L. A. Howard, County Attorney-elect of Lubbock county, who was recently appointed District Attorney of the 72nd judicial district to succeed W. C. Wiltcher, resigned, announced here late Thursday that he had accepted the appointment, and will be in charge of the state's prosecution during the October term of court here, which opens next Monday.

Simultaneously with this announcement came a statement from District Judge Clark M. Mullican that a good portion of the October term will be given over to trial of criminal cases, probably the last three weeks, when an effort will be made to clear the docket that has become congested. During the past several terms the greater part of the time has been used in trial of civil cases, with little attention paid to the criminal docket.

Mr. Howard is now busy acquainting himself with the docket, and said that although he will be under a handicap due to not being conversant with the cases set for trial, the state will be ready for trial in all instances possible.
