South Africa warns of severe response

WASHINGTON (AP) — South African Foreign Minister Pik Botha telephoned four senators to warn that U.S. grain imports will be cut off if the Senate overrides President Reagan's veto of punitive sanctions against his white minority government.

Botha's tactic, coming Wednesday on the eve of a scheduled Senate vote on the override issue, caused Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, to accuse him of using "intimidation and bribery" to prevail in the override fight.

The Senate was to vote late this afternoon to settle the sanctions issue, which has prompted active lobbying by President Reagan to try to stave off a major foreign policy setback.

Lugar said the senators who were lobbied by Botha were called off the Senate floor to a telephone in the Republican cloakroom by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C. He called Helms' action "inappropriate."

Lugar identified two of the lawmakers as Sens. Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb., and Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, both of whom come from farm states. Helms confirmed that and said a third was Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., a personal friend of Reagan.

'Dirt poor' to receive care

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

The program may benefit only "the dirt poor," but Gray County commissioners Wednesday authorized County Judge Carl Kennedy to execute an indigent health care contract with Coronado Community Hospital.

CCH Administrator Norman Knox discussed the proposed contract agreement Wednesday with the commissioners during their regular session.

Knox said the agreement had been drafted by an Austin attorney, based on a model provided by the Texas Association of Counties under the state-mandated indigent care program.

Kennedy said similar agreements will probably be drawn up with local physicians, pharmacists and other health care providers in the county to meet the state requirements. He noted the county already has had several eligible participants since the program was initiated in September.

Knox noted state guidelines for those eligible for the indigent care program "are much below the federal standards for poverty."

He explained the state's standards are only about a quarter of the federal levels.

"These people are poor," Knox stressed.

Under the guidelines adopted by the county in accord with state requirements, an individual qualifying as eligible for the indigent care must earn less than $75 a month and have less than $1,500 in assets.

Shots fired at Gandhi

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A young man described by police as an eccentric fired gunshots today about 20 feet from Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi and President Zail Singh, but neither leader was injured, officials said.

"Everything is OK. There is nothing to tell," Gandhi said on television shortly after the incident, which occurred as he and Singh were leaving a ceremony marking the 117th anniversary of the birth of Indian independence leader Mohandas K. Gandhi.

It was not clear if the gunman, who was arrested, had fired at either of the two leaders.

Rajiv Gandhi's mother, then Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, was shot and killed by members of her personal bodyguard on Oct. 31, 1984.

Police spokesman Sajan Singh said the man fired from behind some bushes about 20 feet from Gandhi and Singh, and that four spent shells were found.

The United News of India news agency reported that shots were fired at the 42-year-old prime minister, but police officers said the rounds were fired in the air by an "eccentric" who wanted to draw attention to himself.

The man, described as in his early 20s, was not identified.

The police officers, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the man had used a homemade pistol and was dressed in an army uniform.

Rammohan Rao, head of the government press office, said: "The prime minister and the president are absolutely safe."

An official government statement said there were no injuries. But police at the scene, who refused to be identified by name, said they believed two people were injured.

They said they were not certain whether those hurt had been wounded by bullets or injured in some other way. UNI also said two people had received slight injuries, and that a second man allegedly involved in the shooting escaped.

New Delhi Vice Police Commissioner Rajendra Mohan said the first shot was fired about 30 minutes before the prayers ended at the Rajghat, or "The State Memorial" on the Jamuna River in New Delhi.

"We did ask our boys to look everywhere when we heard that single shot," Mohan told reporters. "But the search yielded nothing."

One police source, however, said the first shot was mistaken by security personnel for the backfire of a motorcycle.

Rao said the man arrested did not belong to any "extremist organization," a phrase usually used in India to indicate Sikh separatist groups.

Mrs. Gandhi's assassins were Sikhs. Militant Sikh nationalists have called for the secession of Punjab state, where they form a majority, and the establishment of an independent Sikh state there.

Singh, who as India's president performs chiefly ceremonial functions, is a Sikh.

Indian police arrest unidentified Gandhi assailant.

Whites mark occasion with Panhandle stops

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

BORGER — Gov. Mark White and his wife Linda Gail could have picked a more romantic activity to celebrate their 20th wedding anniversary Wednesday.

The governor made a "non-political" visit to Borger to break ground for a ranch-market road and praise the accomplishments of the just-completed special legislative session.

Meanwhile, Mrs. White went barnstorming through Miami, then on to Pampa to tell a small, albeit vocal, group of teachers about her husband's accomplishments in education reform.

The Whites briefly passed each other Wednesday evening, with the First Lady visiting Borger and her husband winging his way back to the state capitol.

In a visit arranged in part by the local newspaper, Mark White flew into Borger Wednesday afternoon to break ground for a road running from the Stinnett Highway to the Phillips Golf Course Addition. The road, with a cost of about $337,000, was built partly to provide access to a development for relocated Phillips residents.

White's visit was billed as a non-political one, but that didn't stop the governor's praising the temporary sales tax and gasoline tax increases just passed in a special session of the Texas Legislature.

The governor also found time to visit a crowded Hutchinson County Democratic Headquarters.

In the special session, which ended Tuesday, the Legislature approved a 1.25 cent sales tax increase (to 5.25 percent) and a 5 cent increase in gasoline taxes. The taxes will be effective from Jan. 1 through August of 1987.

"Nobody likes to see a tax increase," White said in Borger Wednesday, claiming that the increase was necessary to prevent cuts in public education and higher education.

White said that without the $872 million in funds generated by the higher taxes, "we would have to tear down schoolhouses and tear down roads."

Asked if there could have been any other way to raise revenue, White declared "we could rob a bank."

"That's what my opponent (Republican former Gov. Bill Clements) wants to do," he said. "He wants to dip into the permanent school fund. And we set that aside for our children, and I am not going to break that promise."

The Legislature's special session also produced a spending cut plan that would trim the budget by $582 million, eliminate nearly 2,000 state jobs and delete a planned 3 percent state employee pay raise. As White had hoped, public and higher education remained untouched by the cuts.

"I don't know that they could cut anymore," White said.

At a festive reception in a Borger Airport hangar, which featured the Borger High School Band, a community choir and Indian dancers, White continued to praise the Legislature's efforts and expressed his support for an oil import fee.

He said it was a tough decision to "call the legislature into a special session just a few months before an election."

"We just put more into public schools because we are in world competition," White said, reporting an apparent increase in student achievement test scores this year.

Two area legislators who were not impressed with White's acceptance of the tax increases were state Reps. Buck Buchanan (D-Dumas) and Foster Whaley (D-Pampa), both of whom voted against the hikes. Buchanan, Whaley and Sen. Bill Sarpius were all invited to the groundbreak, but only Buchanan managed to show up.

"I still think there can be cuts in higher education, and he didn't touch that," Buchanan said.

Buchanan said he has no intention of meeting with his opponent, Canadian rancher and school

County adjusts expenditures in '87 budget, bridge project

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

Gray County commissioners on Wednesday adjusted the 1987 county budget by $33,058.

Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy explained the additions will raise the overall budget total to $4,210,715. But the added items will not affect the tax rate, he said.

The adjusted items concern federal revenue sharing funds, longevity pay for employees' retirement system and other areas.

The adjustments mainly needed commission approval for recording in the minutes, Kennedy explained.

In other matters, the commission awarded a bid to Pampa Insurance Agency Inc. for coverage of county equipment. The premium will be $4,735 with a $1,000 deductible for the equipment valued in excess of $800,000.

Engineer Gene Barber reported on progress involving runway improvements at Perry Lefors Field. He said the major part of the asphalt and concrete work has been completed on the taxiway and apron.

The work on the main runway is about one-third complete now, Barber said, with the recent rains having delayed the work some. He said he hoped the project would be completed next week, weather permitting. The temperature is "still good" for proper setting of the materials, he said.

"I think things are going well now," Barber said. "We've got it moving now. We're still in a good, safe range," adding that there should be no problems as long as the temperature remains above 40 degrees and as long as there are no more major rainstorms.

The new surface should last 25 years or more as long as preventative maintenance work is done regularly "at nominal cost," he explained. There shouldn't be any need for sealcoating for a long time, he added.

Commissioner Ted Simmons expressed some concerns about the delays and requests for extensions on the project. He suggested that if there were any more, the county should require a bond to be posted.

The commission also approved an emergency expenditure for bridge construction on Johnson Road.

Simmons explained that recent rains had created problems in pouring concrete for the bridge, with expenditures running to approximately $5,900. Kennedy said that amount exceeds the $5,000 limit allowed without having to submit the work to bids.

Since the work is already in progress, the commissioners court needed to approve the additional costs to satisfy the county treasurer under law, Kennedy explained.

Simmons said the original estimate was under the $5,000 limit. That amount would have been within range if it hadn't been for the rains, he said.

In other business, the commissioners:

- awarded a bid to Peek Industrial Tractors of Amarillo for $14,000 for a highway mower for Precinct 1;
- authorized advertising for bids on two pickups and a motor grader;
- authorized advertising for bids for a county depository for 1987 and 1988;
- authorized advertising for proposals to provide an independent audit of county expenditures for 1986;
- recognized completion of a justice of the peace training course last month for Justice of the Peace R.C. Parker;
- approved a request by First National Bank to release and exchange securities for county funds;
- approved initiating paperwork for the formation of a Gray County Bicentennial Commission to help celebrate the 200th anniversary of the signing of the U.S. Constitution; and
- approved payment of salaries and bills, time deposits and transfers as recommended by the county auditor.

Poor

A typical family of four is eligible if net monthly income is below $226. Liquid assets for any applicant cannot exceed $1,000, and the equity of a motor vehicle greater than $1,500 is counted against the $1,000 limit. Personal property and homesteads are exempt.

County residents can apply for eligibility at the county judge's office to avoid having to worry about seeking care at the time of a medical need.

Knox said the agreement with the hospital sets up specific procedures both for those with and without predetermined eligibility by the county.

If there's "a true emergency, we'll go ahead and treat them," then decide upon the eligibility "and argue over who's going to pay," he said.

Knox said the agreement specifies Coronado Community Hospital will provide "some of the health care services" as mandated by the state for the indigent program. He explained the hospital just does not have some of the specialists on its staff or health care services in some areas.

If the hospital cannot provide the needed care, then transfers to other physicians or other hospital facilities will be arranged, he said.

Kennedy said the state mandate requires payments to be based on Medicaid rates. He said the Medicaid rates are to be used as guidelines. "Are we bound by that?" he asked Knox.

Knox said the payment guidelines may change. In general, the Medicaid scale will be used, though higher payments can be set "as long as limits are placed on the rates."

He said the hospital will bill the patients as though they are private patients. But the hospital will have to accept the set rate based on payment schedules being prepared. Knox explained there are still some rule changes going on regarding the payment scales.

The initial contract, which lasts through the end of this year and then through the 1987 calendar year, will be based on Medicaid schedules prepared through the Department of Human Resources.

Knox noted that the contract does request payments at the end of the year for other patients exceeding the indigent care guidelines.

He explained that if, at the end of the year, the county still has money left over in its indigent care fund after all eligible indigent patients have been taken care of, then the hospital can submit requests for payments for those meeting the federal poverty guidelines.

Knox said the payments, if granted, would not exceed the amount set aside by the county for its indigent care program. He said the hospital would then be able to recover some of its costs for those not able to make payments, whether qualifying on the state or the federal guidelines.

"We're not going to ask the county to exceed its limit," Knox said.

Other sections of the agreement set up billing procedures, payment rates, limitations on county liability and similar matters.

The commissioners, noting they have already discussed details of the program with the hospital in past months, authorized Kennedy to proceed with execution of the contract.

Kennedy said he was planning to write a letter to the area's state legislators asking for an amendment establishing specific county residential requirements.

Those receiving county funds for the program "should be one of us," he said, someone actually living in the county and not just someone passing through or looking for a good place to receive free care.

Definite residence requirements should be set up for the program, Kennedy said.

He invited the other commissioners either to join him in writing the letter or to write their own letters.

South Africa

Helms rejected Lugar's characterization of Botha's conversations with the senators and said he had nothing for which to apologize.

"Apparently he became fearful the president of the United States may win this vote tomorrow," Helms said of Lugar.

Helms said that in bringing senators to the telephone he was merely doing a favor for Botha, whom he described as a friend of 10 years.

To Lugar's criticism of the action, Helms responded, "If I may paraphrase Shakespeare, methinks Mr. Lugar doth protest too much."

Lugar quoted Zorinsky as saying Botha told him, "the moment that you override President Reagan's veto, South Africa will immediately ban U.S. grain imports."

Lugar said Botha also declared that South Africa would react to the override of the veto by barring from its ports U.S. grain shipments bound for the so-called frontline black African nations, some of which are landlocked and all of which are largely dependent on South Africa for transportation facilities.

"I believe that all Americans, and especially American farmers, will condemn foreign bribery and intimidation to change the votes of the U.S. Senate," Lugar said.

He said South Africa has turned to the American grain market and increased purchases of U.S. grain in the aftermath of sanctions imposed by Canada and Australia, which also are major grain exporters.

"We are being bribed because others have had moral courage and done what they should have done," Lugar said. "I find this action to be despicable."

But he said he believed Botha would have little weight in the Senate decision.

"I cannot imagine a senator would be influenced by what I call bribery and intimidation," Lugar said.

"I agree with Senator Lugar," said Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass. "This is bribery, this is intimidation. We should not let the bullies and thugs of Pretoria threaten the Senate of the United States."

During an evening of debate, Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said senators might legitimately consider the possible adverse impact of sanctions on their states.

Authorities fear 50 miners killed in Brazilian disaster

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — A mudslide trapped at least 50 miners at Brazil's largest gold mine, and police said today all were feared killed.

A federal police agent told The Associated Press by telephone from the Amazon jungle city of Maraba that the mudslide occurred this morning at the nearby Serra Pelada mine.

The officer, who gave only his last name, Vidal, said he did not know how many workers were at the mine at the time of the mudslide. Radio reports in Rio de Janeiro said it had been raining heavily in the region.

Serra Pelada, 1,900 miles north of Rio, is Brazil's largest gold mine. Unlike other gold mines where miners work in deep underground shafts, the miners at Serra Pelada mine the ore from huge piles of earth and mud.

trustee Dick Waterfield. "Why give him free publicity," he said, adding that he certainly wouldn't run from a confrontation with Waterfield.

Whaley, who showed up at Mrs. White's teacher meeting at the Pampa Club, was less impressed with the tax increase and with White's refusal to cut education.

"Anytime you set something up as a sacred cow, it's an invitation for scrutiny," he said, adding that he still intends to fight the career ladder merit pay program.

"I've only had one school superintendent praise House Bill 72," he said. "It has been a $90 million failure."

Linda Gail White's visit was considerably smaller and less cordial. She spent the first half of her Pampa meeting talking about her husband's accomplishments in education reform. She said the mounting paperwork teachers are facing is not the result of HB 72 but from earlier legislation calling for beefed up curriculum and "mastery of essential elements" that was passed during the Clements administration.

But some of the eight Pampa teachers present were not satisfied.

"The Texas Education Agency creates most of the problem," Pampa High School Counselor Bill Potts said. "I don't question the motives of the governor or the Legislature, but by the time it gets through the TEA, you don't recognize it."

Before her Pampa visit, Mrs. White showed up at the Roberts County Courthouse where met with about 75 people.

Comptroller: debt remains

AUSTIN (AP)— In 53 days of budget-cutting and tax-raising, state legislators failed to eliminate the deficit, leaving a shortfall of nearly $1 billion when they left the Capitol, Comptroller Bob Bullock says.

Bullock reported Wednesday that despite all the budget juggling by the Legislature in its back-to-back special sessions, the budget is $983 million short of balancing.

He said the special sessions "improved but did not solve" the state's financial crisis.

"The tax bill and spending cuts and bookkeeping maneuvers have chiseled away at the problem," Bullock said.

However, he said, the regular legislative session in January will have to deal with the remaining income shortfall brought on by the falling price of oil.

"They face the prospect of seeing taxes and finances top their agenda when the regular session starts in January," the comptroller added.

Before the special sessions began, Bullock estimated that state government faced a $2.3 billion shortfall in its major funds, and a bottom-line deficit in all funds totaling $2.8 billion.

Several estimates have been given of what reduced oil monies will mean for the 1988-89 fiscal years. Lawmakers have been told that the deficit for that biennium could run between $3 billion and $6 billion.

During the special sessions that were convened on Aug. 6 and Sept. 8, the Legislature made a variety of financial moves. Chief among them were:

— An $872 million increase in sales and gasoline taxes, to be in effect from Jan. 1 to Aug. 31, 1987.

— Spending cuts which legislators pegged at about $510 million.

— Elimination of a 3 percent pay raise planned for state workers, saving another $70.7 million.

— Shifting state workers' pay day from the end of the month to the beginning of the next, which results in a one-time savings of $197 million.

— Delaying until February the government's payments to teacher and state employee retirement funds. That provides about $64 million a month for cash-flow purposes that lawmakers said would help keep the state from writing bad checks in December.

"The Legislature has given the state some breathing room by narrowing the budget gap," Bullock said in a statement.

Gov. Mark White was traveling Wednesday and not immediately available to comment on Bullock's new report, his press office said. On Tuesday night, when the second special session ended, White called it a success.

"Texas has taken swift action and I'm very proud of the fact that we've maintained our fiscal integrity and we have preserved the educational quality we established in 1984," White said.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby called the twin sessions "damage control" and said the regular session's goal "will be one of damage repair."

Republicans assailed White and Democratic legislative leaders for failing to make deeper spending cuts.

Sen. John Leedom, R-Dallas, said state spending had increased 20 percent in two years and that the cuts could have been significantly larger without damaging services.

"We did not reduce spending," Leedom said, calling the legislation to move employee pay days and delay contributions to retirement plans nothing more than "financial shell games."

Economist: oil at $15 per barrel won't revive economy

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP)— Even if oil prices remain stabilized around $15 per barrel, Texas will continue to feel economic repercussions for some time, a Texas A&M University, finance professor says.

"It's not likely that the present level of oil prices will stimulate major new exploration expenditures," said Dr. S. Kerry Cooper. "The prospect for a sufficiently large upswing in price to spur another exploration boom in Texas before the mid-1990s is not good."

Cooper spoke at a statewide conference Wednesday called "Shaping the New Economy of Texas." The conference was intended to showcase university research that can have a direct impact on revitalizing the state economy.

A specialist in international trade, Cooper said that as a major exporting state, Texas has been shaken by international trade developments as well as the oil price slump.

Both Texas manufacturing industries and agriculture have experienced large losses of foreign markets as the result of the over-valuation of the dollar, he said.

At the same conference, researchers said cultivating a native desert shrub known for its rubber content would create jobs in West Texas and lessen U.S. dependency on Asian sources for rubber used in bus, truck and airplane tires.

The desert plant, called guayule after the Indian name for "tree gum," could easily be grown in the expanses of the Trans Pecos area if current cost evaluations are favorable, said Texas A&M biochemist Dr. C. R. Benedict.

The cost of growing guayule is not economically feasible now, but Benedict said studies will attempt to raise production to offset those costs.

Researchers said agricultural science may outpace the importance of even medical technology because of its potential to boost crop yields, feed more people and create new jobs in the hamstrung agricultural sector.

People at the conference also heard that research is under way aimed at developing new technologies that will result in millions of dollars in new resources from the sea and savings from damage by storms and other natural disasters.

Scientists said their work may mean getting additional oil from the ground, more minerals from beneath the sea and even prepare for natural disasters such as hurricanes and tornadoes.

Dr. Chris Mathewson, director of the Center for Engineering Geosciences, discussed a project called HAZMAP that, with the help of computers, can predict the movement of hurricanes, storms, or tornadoes and alert emergency preparedness teams to help minimize harm to people and property.

And Dr. Thomas Hilde, director of A&M's Geodynamics Research Institute, spoke of new developments under way that can map broad areas of the sea floor in much the same way that satellites allow mapping the surfaces of Earth's continents and other planets.

Earlier Wednesday, development specialists said that state officials could improve the Texas tourism industry by promoting natural resources.

"The economic value of Texas' wildlife, fisheries and related natural resources has increased dramatically in recent years but remains under-exploited," said Dr. Lonnie L. Jones of A&M's Department of Agricultural Economics.

Jones said resources range from waterfowl in the coastal regions to wildlife in the southern and central regions and also includes exotic game species.

Judge: malpractice awards limitations unconstitutional

DALLAS (AP)— A Texas law limiting medical malpractice awards to $500,000 violates provisions of the state and U.S. constitutions that allow injured people to recoup damages, a federal judge has ruled.

U.S. District Judge Jerry Buchmeyer's decision came Tuesday in connection with a lawsuit filed by the father of a man who suffered brain and nervous system damage when anesthetized for knee surgery in May 1983.

Because of the patient's asthma, the selection of anesthetics was improper, the suit alleged, and caused immediate cardiac arrest and induced a coma.

Buchmeyer's ruling follows similar findings by three intermediate appellate courts in Texas, but the law stands because the state Supreme Court reversed those decisions in July.

The state's high court side-stepped the constitutional issue, however, ruling instead that the lower courts wrongly took up the issue.

Buchmeyer's decision, the first by a federal judge on malpractice award ceilings, is binding only on the upcoming trial in his court and technically has no precedent-setting power over any other cases.

But it could affect rulings on the question by judges in future cases, since a federal judge's opinion is considered more influential than findings of state judges, officials say.

The trial, scheduled for Oct. 14, is to resolve a suit by Dennis C. Waggoner, who sued Dr. Burney W. Gibson and Presbyterian Hospital of Dallas for damages to his son, John M. Waggoner.

The son entered Presbyterian in May 1983 for routine surgery on his right knee. After a coma that lasted several months, he is now totally disabled, Buchmeyer said.

In his opinion, Buchmeyer wrote the Texas law unfairly discriminates against malpractice victims who suffered the worst damage.

"It raises no distinctions between malpractice victims to whom $500,000 would be a boon and those to whom $500,000 would barely be a beginning," he wrote.

Despite protests, dam on course

BRECKENRIDGE, Texas (AP)— Despite local protests, officials say they are completing plans for a $300 million dam near South Bend that would flood land in Stephens County.

Mike Bukala, Brazos River Authority administrative assistant, said Wednesday that preliminary plans call for a reservoir and dam to be built where the Clear Fork and the Brazos River join north of South Bend.

He said the proposed South Bend Project reservoir would cover 29,000 acres of land — 12,000 more acres than Possum Kingdom Lake west of Fort Worth.

Local residents showed up Wednesday to object to the dam at the Stephens County courthouse in Breckenridge, where the official announcement was made.

Several ranchers complained that their land is more valuable than the proposed reservoir. They also objected to most of the lake's water not being intended for local use.

Bukala said the fact most of the proposed reservoir's water would be used downstream is not a good argument against building it and that the site was chosen to alleviate flooding in Graham.

He said BRA officials first considered South Bend as the site for a new reservoir after a flood in Graham in 1978. That city has a contract for future water use from the proposed reservoir, but most of the water would be used downstream.

The BRA hopes to begin building the dam by 1991.

Ax murders suspect was let out of jail despite his boasting of being a killer

LANCASTER, Texas (AP)— The prime suspect in the knife-hatchet slayings of three women was freed from a jail 100 miles away even after he boasted that he had killed somebody, officials said.

A few hours after he was booked into the Leon County jail on a drunken driving charge about midnight Saturday, David Martin Long bragged to cellmates that he had slain someone, county sheriff's dispatcher Bob Gresham Jr. said Wednesday.

Long "didn't come out and say, 'I killed three girls,'" Gresham said. "The jailer said that guy out there was talking about killing somebody, as in past tense. But people say that sort of thing all the time."

Lancaster Police Chief John Whitehead said Long had $3 cash when he was booked and had a previous conviction for drunken driving, which would make a second offense a felony.

"We had one hell of a foul-up in Leon County," Whitehead said. "I didn't know there was a county anywhere that would release a man with a felony charge, who was a transient, on a promise that he will appear. That's like telling somebody, 'Goodbye, get out of my county.'"

A murder warrant was issued Wednesday for the 34-year-old Bay City man, who police say was staying at the house in this Dallas suburb where a blind invalid, her cousin and a transient were hacked to death.

Long, who left the house Saturday in a station wagon owned by one of the slain women, was charged with capital murder in a warrant signed by a state district judge in Dallas, Lancaster Assistant City Manager Steve Harris said.

It was Monday morning, 36 hours later, before the grisly murder scene was discovered. By the time an all-points bulletin could be released with a description of the stolen car, Long had been released from jail in Centerville, halfway between Dallas and Houston.

The 6-foot, 190-pound mustached man is believed to have hitchhiked to Houston after his release about 10 a.m. Monday.

Leon County Sheriff Royce Wilson said his department didn't know about the triple slaying when it freed the man, that the car hadn't been reported as stolen and that it isn't uncommon to release DWI suspects with the eight-cell county jail is crowded.

Whitehead said Leon jailer George Ward told Lancaster investigators that Long "started banging on the cell" early Sunday and demanded to see a police officer.

"The jailer said, 'Why do you want to see a police officer; you're arrested for DWI,'" Whitehead said. "He (Long) said, 'I killed three women.'"

Whitehead said the jailer told investigators that he then woke up his sheriff who told him "to forget it and go back home."

But Wilson says "nobody called me about anything like that. I'd remember. If they call and tell me someone killed three people... I'd remember, sure. That's my business."

The slaying victims were identified as Donna Sue Jester, 37; her cousin, Dalpha Lorenne Jester, 64, who was blind and bedridden; and Laura Lee Owen, 20, a transient whom Donna Jester picked up hitchhiking and brought to the house.

McDaniel issues statewide election directive

DALLAS (AP)— Allegations of ballot-tampering have prompted Secretary of State Myra McDaniel to draw up a directive to all county elections officials designed to ensure accuracy and guard against fraud.

"We found across the state we did not have in place a system where everyone was assured the (voting) system was working properly," Ms. McDaniel said Tuesday. "I really would like the citizens to basically feel their votes will be counted accurately, and whoever they select will indeed be chosen."

Ms. McDaniel said allegations of tampering in the 1985 Dallas mayoral election, as well as questions raised nationally about the system, prompted her to issue the guidelines for the Nov. 4 election.

The guidelines will be issued in a memorandum to election officials in all counties that have automatic vote tabulating systems, she said. State elections Director Karen Gladney said the directive — which is not complete — will:

— Outline procedures to ensure that unauthorized persons do not have access to computer systems.

— Require counties to provide a "translator guide" for its system of tallying votes, so the general public can understand the system.

— Require counties to produce reports of vote totals at specified intervals during election night.

Current law only requires a print-out of vote totals, but many counties have begun interval reports on their own.

McDaniel's directive comes after six months of reviewing voting systems in Texas and visiting with election officials, Ms. Gladney said.

Bentsen wants nuke dump search stopped

WASHINGTON (AP)— Congress should shut down the search for the nation's first nuclear waste dump site until the Department of Energy agrees to resume a search for a second site, U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen said Wednesday.

The investigation was sparked by allegations of fraud in the 1985 mayoral race, lodged by Terry Elkins, former campaign manager of unsuccessful Dallas mayoral candidate Max Goldblatt.

"Most nuclear waste is created in the East, yet the department wants to drop plans to have a repository in the East," Bentsen said.

Deaf Smith County in the Texas Panhandle is the location of one of the proposed sites.

Nature, like man, best left alone

A bunch of well-intentioned folks were running around Yakutat, Alaska, spending a great deal of time, money and effort to save Mother Nature from herself.

Then came the news that, for all the best efforts of the humans, the problem had been solved without their assistance.

There's a lesson here for all who would rush in to right what they see as wrongs without first taking a critical and unemotional look at whether outside intervention is warranted — or even desired. Perhaps it's just human nature to want to offer assistance, but without that critical assessment, the offer may turn out to be more hindrance than help.

Take the case of the seals trapped by the sudden surging of Alaska's Hubbard Glacier. The glacier blocked the ocean entrance of Russell Fiord, trapping the salt-water animals in what is fast becoming a fresh water lake.

Biologists and environmentalists from around the country fussed and fretted over the fate of the trapped creatures. A rescue effort was launched by teams from California and Washington, financed by $35,000 in donations and free use of Coast Guard aircraft.

What they found was that the seals were smart enough both to recognize the potential danger and to take steps to solve it. The humans who had come to lift the seals across the glacier discovered the critters had already begun climbing up the blocks of ice and wriggling their way back to the open sea. All by themselves.

That's exactly what several naturalists, who perhaps understood the resourcefulness of the seals far better than the outsiders, expected would happen. The seals, no different from humans in their capacity for self-preservation, are perhaps that much better off for having solved the problem themselves. That's what Darwin's theory of evolution is all about.

There is a vast difference between answering a legitimate cry for help and offering help where none is required. Making the distinction between the two can be difficult, but it is essential, whether the case at hand is rescuing seals or making welfare payments that actually inhibit self-responsibility.

The lesson here is for all of us, not just environmentalists or politicians. The adage, "Think before you leap," should go hand-in-hand with the thought that God helps those who help themselves. Keeping those in mind, many of the so-called problems that confront us these days might not loom quite so large.

Unwelcome hands will pay

WASHINGTON — Recent months have seen significant legal developments affecting sexual harassment in the workplace. Both public agencies and private employers — not to mention employees themselves — would be well advised to catch up on the changing law.

Until the U.S. Supreme Court decided Meritor Savings Bank vs Vinson this past June, it was generally understood that a woman (or a man) complaining of sexual discrimination would have to prove exactly that: outright discrimination. There would have to be evidence that an employer had refused to hire, or to promote, or to grant or deny certain privileges on account of sex. Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 expressly prohibits this kind of thing.

Then came the high court's unanimous decision of June 19 in the Vinson case, and now the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals has added its weight to the proposition that discrimination comes in various forms.

The important thing about the Vinson opinion is that it flatly rejected the argument that the only prohibited discrimination is economic discrimination. Speaking through Justice William Rehnquist (the same William Rehnquist who is supposed to be so anti-feminist), the court ruled that sexual harassment itself is discriminatory. In the Vinson case, the complainant charged that her manager at the branch bank had led her into sexual relations, had fondled her in the presence of other employees, and in other ways had created a kind of sexual tension.

It is not necessary under Title VII, said the court, to prove actual physical harassment. It is enough to show that a "hostile or offensive working environment" has been created. Women have a right under the law to a working atmosphere "free from discriminatory intimidation, ridicule and insult." Merely occasional incidents are not actionable. The harassment must be "sufficiently severe or pervasive to alter the conditions of the victim's employment and to create an abusive working environment."

On Aug. 28, the 7th Circuit handed down its opinion in the case of a woman who had been discharged as a fire department dispatcher in East Chicago. The employer in this case was a public employer. The case thus turned not on Title VII, but rather on the requirement of the 14th Amendment for equal protection of the law.

Speaking through Judge William J. Bauer, the court ruled that the dispatcher "was the victim of sexual harassment that amounted to sex discrimination under the Equal Protection Clause." The woman had suffered "many instances of sexual harassment and often complained of them through official channels, but nothing was done."

"Harassment was the general, ongoing and accepted practice of the department, and high-ranking, supervisory, and management officials knew of, tolerated, and participated in it."

All this added up to the very kind of hostile environment condemned by the Supreme Court in the Vinson case. Said Judge Bauer: "Creating abusive conditions for female employees and not for males is discrimination. Forcing women and not men to work in an environment of sexual harassment is no different than forcing women to work in a dirtier or more hazardous environment than men. Such unjustified unequal treatment is prohibited by the Equal Protection Clause."

The two judicial opinions, taken together, should prompt prudent employers into protective action. The cases make it clear that an employer has a duty to establish — and enforce — a companywide policy against sexual discrimination in any form. Ways must be provided for complaints of sexual harassment to be fairly handled. In Vinson, Rehnquist emphasized that a defense of "voluntariness" is no defense at all; it is immaterial that a woman tolerates sexual innuendoes or consents to actual physical relations. Is the environment offensive? Are the relations unwelcome? If so, a claim for damages will lie.

Let me add my own hooray for the two decisions. Almost everyone agrees with the proposition that it is wrong — as well as unlawful — to pay a woman less than a man for identical work. As more and more women enter the marketplace, a principle of economic equality must be observed. Beyond the economic boundaries is a subjective realm, and it is here that some of the gravest damage can be done by innuendo, by little embarrassments and humiliations, and by a kind of psychological hazing. Women don't have to put up with this nonsense. Thanks to the courts for saying so.

Beehives atop heads again

The big fashion news is the beehive hairstyle is back for women. There was a story about it in the papers the other day, and I am told Women's Wear Daily did a feature on the beehive comeback in its September edition.

(Note: When my last wife moved out, she took her subscription to WWD with her. As a result, I am usually several months behind on fashion news.)

For my younger readers it should be explained the beehive was a popular hairstyle for females in the late '50s and early '60s.

Imagine what the coneheads from "Saturday Night Live" would look like with a collie puppy on their pointed noggins and you have the beehive.

As a nostalgic, I am keenly interested in this development because almost all the girls I knew and loved back in a simpler time wore beehives.

Kathy Sue Loudermilk, the sex symbol of my hometown, first broke the local fashion barrier by turning up at school one day with a beehive. "What happened to Kathy Sue's hair?" the boys all asked one another.

"I saw hair that looked like that once," said Alvin Bates, the teacher's pet who always got to see the new National Geographic first when it arrived at the library, and usually was ahead of the rest of us on such matters as exotic tribal rites.

"All I know," said my boyhood friend and idol, Weyman C. Wannamaker Jr., a great American, "is this is the first time anybody has paid attention to Kathy Sue from the neck up since she was in the third grade."

Soon, practically every girl in school had herself a beehive hairdo, including the rotund Cordie Mae Poovey, who later wrestled professionally under the name "The Masked Hog."

Cordie Mae was already as big as a train wreck, and twice as ugly, and with her beehive, she looked like something that could frighten the scales off the "Creature from the Black Lagoon."

"They dug up something that looks just like you in Peru, the other day," Alvin Bates said to Cordie Mae, laughing. "I saw pictures of it in National Geographic."

Cordie Mae, never one to be trifled with, rendered large lumps on Alvin's head for his feeble attempt at humor.

The girls, including Cordie Mae, all had their beehives done at Pearlene Holcomb's Kut 'n' Kurl Beauty Salon, located in the living room of Pearlene's double-wide mobile home.

Alexander of Paris is given credit for inventing the beehive, but it was Pearlene Holcomb who perfected it.

Ladies and girls came from as far away as Sharpsburg and Snow Hill to have Pearlene work on their hair. She made so much money on beehives, she sold the double-wide, left her husband, Newt, and moved off to Florida with a traveling hairspray salesman.

Even today, legend has it, that on a dark and rainy night, you can look through the fog and mist and see a large figure with a pointed hairy head moving near where Pearlene's double-wide once stood.

It's Cordie Mae, who eventually hung up her wrestling tights and moved back to the trailer park with her husband, Alvin Bates, whose own head has remained lumpy to this day.

Disaster shows nuclear energy's price

By Don Graff

BONN, West Germany (NEA) — The Soviet nuclear disaster at Chernobyl continues to cast a long shadow over Europe.

The fallout has been political as well as radioactive. Long-building concerns about nuclear energy have intensified since May's events demonstrated how high the price can be for this supposedly "cheap" energy source.

The West German government very sensibly decided to address the issue scientifically rather than emotionally. It commissioned two thoroughgoing studies by separate research institutes which would approach the issue from different aspects. This would ensure, according to the government, that the resulting conclusions and recommendations would not be one-sided.

Surprise. Different approaches reached pretty much the same conclusions.

The report of the Eco-Institute in Freiburg was pretty much what everyone, including most certainly those in the government who commissioned the study, expected. The organization's thing is ecology.

The finding of the Rhine-Westphalia Institute for Economic Research in Essen was not expected. Instead of warning that there would be grave economic consequences if nuclear energy was abandoned, Essen essentially agreed with Freiburg that a gradual nuclear phase-out was entirely possible without undue economic stress. The Essen group found that even a short-term withdrawal, within two years, would not create unbearable dislocation, although it would probably cause an increase in environmental pollution from fossil fuels.

The experts' accord has shaken the government, which prefers to look at the nuclear question in the very long term. That means that a cutback and possible total withdrawal may be studied, but no date-setting, please. Actually, the "gradual" scenario could be considered plenty long term by hard-line opponents of nuclear power. The deadline could be as late as 2010. According to Essen, this would mean that, until 1989, plants currently under construction would be allowed to come on line. But after that, no more. And reactors reaching the end of useful service — 20 years — would not be replaced.

Meanwhile, power generation from other sources would steadily increase, with proper environmental precautions. The nuclear contribution would decline until it was phased out completely and economically painlessly.

Or so the experts say. They don't appear to have changed any government minds, however. Despite obvious political discomfort, the Cabinet says it intends to hold to its very long-term course.

It may be some comfort that the nuclear issue has also shaken up the opposition. A spokesman for the environmentalist Greens recently let it be known that the party might compromise, specifically as to the timing of a nuclear withdrawal.

Daniloff wants to cover the US-Soviet meeting

WASHINGTON (AP) — Journalist Nicholas Daniloff is so anxious to get back on the job that he's signed up to report on next week's meeting between the superpower leaders in Iceland.

Daniloff's name appeared on a trip sign-up sheet at the White House press room Wednesday, the same day he and his wife spent 40 minutes talking with President Reagan.

Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, whom Daniloff covered as a Moscow correspondent for U.S. News & World Report, will hold talks Oct. 11-12 in Reykjavik, Iceland.

James Killpatrick, a U.S. News senior editor serving as a corporate spokesman, said Daniloff's future assignment is "a little indefinite," but he'll probably report on the summit for U.S. News if he gets credentials.

The Iceland meeting was arranged as part of the deal that allowed Daniloff to leave the Soviet Union, where he was arrested Aug. 30 on what the Reagan administration has called trumped up espionage charges.

The 51-year-old correspondent began his first full day back in the United States with a rousing welcome at the magazine's Washington headquarters and then going to the White House.

In a brief appearance with Reagan in the Rose Garden, Daniloff told the president that if he had not taken a "very deep and personal interest" in his case "it would probably be some years before I could stand in front of you and say, 'Thank you, Mr. President.'"

Daniloff was allowed to leave Moscow on Monday in the arrangement that also called for the release of accused spy Gennadiy Zakharov to the Soviets. Zakharov, a Soviet employee at the United Nations, flew back to Moscow after he pleaded no contest to espionage charges.

"I don't think there's caving in at all," Reagan said of the arrangement with the Soviets.

Asked whether U.S.-Soviet relations are back on track with Daniloff's release, the president said, "We'll find out in about 10 days," referring to the Iceland meeting.

Daniloff praised the "mini-summit," saying he believes contact with the two sides is always beneficial. Although there is always a chance of miscalculation, he said he was optimistic about future superpower relations.

Daniloff, speaking to reporters after his meeting with Reagan, said he and the president discussed "a whole lot of things," including the nature of Soviet society and "male chauvinism in Russia."

Ruth Daniloff, the reporter's wife, brought that topic up with the president, her husband said. Also attending the meeting were Nancy Reagan, Chief of Staff Donald Regan, National Security Adviser John Poindexter and Jack Matlock, the Soviet specialist on the National Security Council.

Reagan "had a lot of funny stories," Daniloff said.

Daniloff, who referred to himself as a "former hostage," said he felt particularly sympathetic to the American hostages in Lebanon.

"I hope that that situation could be improved," Daniloff had intended to write a book about one of his relatives who opposed the Czar in 1825, but that project may be set aside temporarily, Killpatrick said.

Numerous residents of Bixby, Okla., were forced to evacuate their homes Wednesday after waters from several creeks in the area flooded the town.

Floodwaters surge through Midwest; 15,000 evacuated

By The Associated Press

Floodwaters surged through the nation's midsection today, swelling Lake Michigan to a record level and keeping more than 15,000 people homeless, and officials urged residents in flooded areas of Chicago to boil drinking water.

Saturated areas of the central and southern Plains may get more rain tonight as Hurricane Paine, located off of Baja California, begins to combine with a storm system over the Great Basin, the National Weather Service said.

"We're in trouble," said Fred Beeler, a weather service forecaster in Oklahoma City. "Unfortunately, we just can't break the wet weather pattern we're in."

Barge operators on the upper Mississippi River scrambled to beat rapidly rising water that is forcing the Army Corps of Engineers to close locks and dams, effectively halting river traffic.

A partially ruptured dam in Wisconsin, meanwhile, remained standing but leaking, and hundreds were believed still away from their homes in flooded northeastern Montana, but the water was receding in some communities.

One man was killed Wednesday after he was swept from his stalled pickup on a bridge in Oklahoma, and another was missing and presumed dead in Illinois. One weather-related death was reported last week in Montana.

Thunderstorms have dumped up to 15 inches rain on northeastern Oklahoma since Monday; southern Missouri got 5 inches of rain Wednesday, and heavy rain fell in Indiana and Ohio. Nearly 16 inches has fallen on northeastern Illinois since Sept. 1, most during the past 10 days, the weather service said.

About 2,700 people were homeless in Illinois, mostly in the northern part of the state, where floodwaters ranged from 18 inches to 6 feet, officials said.

Minor flooding was reported in Chicago's northwestern section, but city health officials issued their warning about boiling drinking water because of possible contamination from overflowing sewers.

Flood damage in the state was estimated Wednesday at $30 million to $40 million, said spokesman Gregg Durham of the Illinois Emergency Services and Disaster Agency.

Runoff in Illinois, Wisconsin and Michigan has bloated Lake Michigan to a record 581.48 feet above sea level, the Illinois Department of Transportation's water resources division said. The lake had reached a record 581.2 feet in June, then fell during the summer.

In Wisconsin, a hole in the earthen portion of a dam on Lawrence Lake near Westfield expanded Wednesday, then stopped growing as the lake level dropped after floodgates were opened.

Nearly 200 of the town's 1,000 residents were allowed to return home Wednesday, ordered out again in the afternoon, then left back home again after the hole stopped growing.

US optimistic over meeting

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration's four-point agenda for next week's superpower summit in Iceland was prepared over the last several months with growing expectation of success in two areas: arms control and U.S.-Soviet relations.

There is considerably less optimism, however, that headway will be made in the two other categories: human rights and Third World conflicts. "They don't like to hear about it," a U.S. official said Wednesday of persistent American pleas for better treatment of Soviet citizens. "But at least they know they've got to listen."

Despite distractions over the case of American reporter Nicholas Daniloff, the two-day meeting Secretary of State George P. Shultz held here Sept. 19-20 with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze confirmed the impression there was a basis to go ahead with the mini-summit in Reykjavik.

Much of the discussion centered on the agenda, not on Daniloff, although his release was a precondition for agreeing to the meeting Gorbachev had suggested in the letter Shevardnadze delivered to Reagan Sept. 19, the official said, speaking only on condition of anonymity.

New U.S. proposals approved by Reagan for missile reductions promised to close the gap with the Soviet positions at the arms control talks in Geneva that resumed Sept. 18. Unless there is a snag in Iceland, the two leaders will instruct their negotiators to push ahead.

And apart from this issue, which is of overriding importance to Gorbachev, talks held intermittently through the year between lower-level officials here and in Moscow established that cultural exchanges could be widened and consular offices expanded as part of a general improvement in U.S.-Soviet relations.

"There are some interesting prospects," another U.S. official said Wednesday, taking an overall look at the agenda.

But while the two sides have established what he called "an extensive dialogue" on guerrilla wars in Afghanistan, Angola, Cambodia, Ethiopia and Nicaragua, the Soviets have shown no interest in Reagan's suggestion that they work together to end the conflicts.

The prospects on human rights are also dim. The package deal that freed Daniloff brought prominent dissident Yuri Orlov and his wife, Irina, out of the Soviet Union, but no others.

FBI revamps leak squad, adds agents

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI, concerned that the sources of news leaks receive thorough investigations, has assigned some of its more experienced agents to a special unit that is probing unauthorized disclosures to reporters.

The new unit began six months ago, building on the four agents who had been previously assigned to look into the leaks, Milt Aherlich, deputy assistant director for congressional and public affairs at FBI headquarters, said Wednesday.

Aherlich said the new team still has four agents, but they are more experienced and have been made a part of the Washington field office's domestic terrorism squad.

Aherlich said the unit was "revamped" to "ensure proper handling of these sensitive investigations."

"My understanding is that there were certain changes in personnel to make sure that each and every one" of the agents assigned to the unit was experienced, he said.

He declined to say what prompted the reorganization, or whether it was linked to any specific case or leaks to the news media.

Intelligence officials have said they are trying to prevent news reporting of some secrets already obtained by the Soviet Union, because it might corroborate data from spies the Soviets mistrusted and also tip off less sophisticated adversaries. However, the reorganization of the special leak squad occurred before controversies over recent, highly publicized spy cases.

While the specialized squad is new, bureau agents have long been involved in investigations of unauthorized disclosures to the news media. Such disclosures are considered violations of U.S. espionage laws.

President Reagan has said his administration is obligated by law to prosecute anyone, including reporters, who make information public that could harm national security.

In today's editions, The New York Times reported that the team was created because of concern that such investigations needed to be better organized and assigned to highly experienced agents.

The Times said congressional and Reagan administration officials said the team was formed mainly in reaction to criticism that inquiries were handled by agents who worked too slowly and lacked sophistication in complex national security issues.

The newspaper said the Washington squad was at work on about a dozen cases. However, it said the FBI declined to say whether the number of cases under investigation was higher than usual.

Congress wants to get tough with asbestos in schools

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress, in what could be a tough pre-election test of the Reagan administration's anti-regulation philosophy, is poised to order a stepped-up federal drive to rid the nation's schools of deadly asbestos.

Battle lines were drawn Wednesday when House and Senate negotiators agreed on legislation to require the Environmental Protection Agency to order states and school districts to get tough on asbestos.

Supporters say this will put teeth into EPA's much-criticized effort against the cancer-causing substance found in an estimated 30,000 public schools attended by about 15 million children and staffed by 1.5 million employees.

The compromise, fashioned from House and Senate bills, was approved quickly by the House and sent to the Senate, where Sen. Robert Stafford, R-Vt., predicted easy passage in the final days of the 1986 session.

"This is landmark legislation," said Stafford, chairman of the Environment Committee. "This will be a big victory for the country."

The chief House negotiator, Rep. James Florio, D-N.J., called the package "the sleeper environmental legislation of the year. We've been able to get it with bipartisan support and cooperation."

EPA issued a statement supporting the bill's goals but expressing reservations about its "many regulatory requirements." EPA said it would decide in the next few days whether to recommend a veto to President Reagan. The legislation is not a favorite at the White House. In August, the Office of Management and Budget sent Congress a list of disliked provisions in the measure, none of which were changed in the final bill.

"The administration believes the bill unnecessarily and improperly imposes federal asbestos standards on local school systems, which clearly violates the administration's position on federalism," OMB said.

Cocaine lab stirring fears among Costa Rican officials

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — For more than a year, Costa Rica has been an unwilling but important bridge in international drug trafficking, unable to halt its use as a transit point for U.S.-bound cocaine from South America.

But the discovery of a cocaine-processing laboratory last week in the isolated mountains of southern Costa Rica has stirred fears that this country could be on the verge of joining the ranks of cocaine-producing nations.

Seven Colombians, nine Costa Ricans and a Panamanian were arrested in that raid.

"The war against drug trafficking is just beginning in Costa Rica. So far, we have done nothing more than scratch the surface," Interior Minister Guido Fernandez said recently. "There are suspicions that there are other labs."

The interior minister controls this Central American nation's Rural Guard, a police force of about 4,000 whose duties are similar to sheriffs' deputies in the United States.

The lab is the second discovered in the region. Last year, a similar cocaine-processing facility was found in neighboring Panama.

"Indications are that something is happening in Costa Rica — something big," said a foreign law enforcement analyst who has been closely observing the country's attempts to halt its use by drug smugglers.

The analyst, speaking on condition of anonymity, said drug traffickers have been attracted to Costa Rica in recent months because of stricter enforcement efforts in Bolivia, Colombia, the Bahamas and south Florida.

Those efforts include the use of U.S. Army troops and helicopters in Bolivia.

Soviet envoy says Afghanistan among urgent problems at superpower meet

OTTAWA (AP) — Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze said arms control will top the agenda of next week's superpower meeting in Iceland but that the Kremlin is also ready to discuss its military intervention in Afghanistan.

Shevardnadze made the comment in a banquet toast to Canadian External Affairs Minister Joe Clark at a state dinner in Ottawa Wednesday marking his first official visit to Canada.

"I can assure you that the Soviet Union, more than anyone else, has an interest in the resolution of that problem," he said of the Afghan issue.

The Soviet Union sent troops into Afghanistan in December 1979 and replaced the existing communist government with another.

An estimated 115,000 Soviet soldiers now are in the country to help the 40,000-man Afghan army fight a widespread Moslem and anti-Marxist insurgency.

The intervention by the Soviet armed forces prompted the United States, Canada and other Western nations to boycott the 1980 Moscow Olympics, and soured East-West relations.

Clark, welcoming Shevardnadze's remarks, said: "We hope we have detected a willingness to withdraw Soviet forces from an increasingly devastated Afghanistan."

He also pressed his guest on Moscow's reluctance to grant exit visas for family reunifications, and to sign a five-year grain purchase agreement initialed last year.

The Soviet Union is Canada's biggest grain market, and Ottawa is worried that the farm subsidy war between the United States and the 12-nation European Common Market could undermine future sales.

Shevardnadze said he could give no guarantees, but hinted that the grain pact might be signed today along with economic, science and technology agreements.

Moscow has expressed concern over its trade deficit with Canada, largely caused by purchases of Canadian wheat. Canadian exports last year totaled $1.2 billion, while only $20 million worth of Soviet goods were imported.

Shevardnadze, in his dinner address, foresaw progress on the control of nuclear and space weapons at the Oct. 11-12 meeting in the Icelandic capital of Reykjavik between Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev and President Reagan.

Shevardnadze also said Moscow respected what he called Canada's independent stance. But Clark, who spoke first, underlined Ottawa's alliance with Washington.

"Let us be frank," he told Shevardnadze. "Canada is a founding member of the North Atlantic alliance and defends the North American continent in partnership with the United States. We are not neutral and do not wish to be."

Business, labor vying for rescue money share

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Even before the final touches are put on a $12 billion rescue package for Mexico, business and labor leaders have begun explaining how their respective plans for using the money could best help the economy.

Labor leaders said Wednesday the money should be used for creating jobs and raising the minimum wage, which stands at 2,062 pesos or about $2.66 a day at Wednesday's exchange rate of about 775 pesos to the dollar.

To business leaders, who have found credit unavailable or prohibitively expensive this year, the loans mean a possibility of getting new credits for plant and product improvement.

The loans come at a time when Mexico faces difficult economic problems, including inflation expected to hit 100 percent this year, the peso's decline against the dollar and public and private foreign debt expected to reach $103 billion by the end of 1986.

The rescue package was announced late Tuesday in Washington after commercial banks agreed in principle to provide $6 billion in new loans over 15 months and to stretch out payments on Mexico's $43.7 billion public debt over 20 years.

An additional $6 billion in new aid was arranged earlier with the International Monetary Fund, the World Bank and other international agencies and industrialized governments.

Mexican treasury officials must still reach full accord with the banks. However, an IMF official in Washington said he foresaw no problems that could jeopardize the agreements.

The new indebtedness has yet to draw response from critics, chiefly labor groups, who have urged a moratorium on foreign debt payments while Mexico deals with its internal economic problems.

But Rafael Rivapalacio, head of the Labor Congress, said his group would be satisfied with the loan accords if they meant a wage increase and new jobs.

Workers are already scheduled to get an emergency wage hike in October. The size of the increases has not been decided yet, however, and in the past two weeks unions have issued strike threats to thousands of businesses as a way of pressuring employers to support a large raise.

Rivapalacio said he "hoped the public will see soon the benefits (of the new money)."

"But for there to be real solutions it is necessary as soon as possible to raise the buying power of the majority," he said.

The director of the Mexico City branch of the government-affiliated Revolutionary Federation of Workers and Peasants, Roberto Castellanos Tovar, also urged authorities to put the new aid toward higher salaries, housing and job creation.

On the other side, businessman Bernardo Ardavin said the economy could best be served by improving the means of shipping products to market. The head of the Employers' Federation of the Mexican Republic said the new loans could provide money for public investment in shipping.

The president of the 76,000-member National Chamber of Manufacturing Industries, Juan Jose Moreno Sada, called for more credit for improving factories and converting products to export use.

Moreno Sada rejected the idea of a national wage hike and said workers should earn raises through higher productivity, which he said would also help the national economy.

Meanwhile, U.S. economists said Mexico's debt problems are not over.

DOT OKs Texas Air takeover of Eastern

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas Air's takeover of Eastern Airlines won final government approval Wednesday and its plans to buy People Express moved a step forward when the Justice Department said it won't object to the acquisition on antitrust grounds.

The Transportation Department, which gave the Texas Air-Eastern merger its tentative endorsement Sept. 18, announced final approval of the $676 million merger, saying all competitive problems had been resolved.

The acquisition of Eastern by the Houston-based Texas Air Corp. "would not substantially reduce competition in any market," the department said.

Texas Air, which already owns Continental Airlines and New York Air, will become the largest airline holding company in the country with nearly 20 percent of the air travel market with the purchase of Eastern and the expected approval of the People Express acquisition.

The Transportation Department said its only concern with the Texas Air-Eastern deal — competition in the Whittington-New York-Boston shuttle market — had been resolved with the emergence of Pan American World Airways as a direct competitor to the Eastern shuttle.

Pan Am on Wednesday began 15 flights a day in the Washington-New York-Boston market in direct competition with Eastern.

The Transportation Department also will have to say on whether to approve Texas Air's purchase of People Express and the assets of Frontier Airlines. Frontier, a subsidiary of People Express, is no longer operating.

The Justice Department's antitrust division's decision not to oppose the Texas Air-Eastern merger came in a letter from Deputy Assistant Attorney General Charles Rule to the Transportation Department.

Rule said Justice won't object to the deal because it "is not likely to lessen competition substantially."

People Express has its primary hub at Newark, N.J., where New York Air also has a large part of its operation.

Rule said the purchase of Frontier's assets "raises somewhat different questions from those raised by the acquisition of the rest of People", but he added that it also could not be established "that the Frontier acquisition substantially lessens competition."

Alan Pollock, a spokesman for the Transportation Department, said the department would have no comment on the Justice Department finding. The Justice position would be considered along with comments by other parties on the merger application, he said.

Texas Air announced Sept. 15 an agreement to buy People Express for about $125 million in securities.

The B-1 bomber has gone operational the Air Force announced Wednesday.

B-1 bomber squadron now on full alert status

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — The B-1 supersonic bomber fleet here is on full alert today, putting the controversial plane into regular operation for the first time since its resurrection five years ago.

The Air Force Systems Command officially activated the nation's first operational B-1 squadron Wednesday, and one of Dyess Air Force Base's bombers now will be on full alert at all times.

Col. Robert E. Dempsey, commander of the 96th Bomb Wing at Dyess, called Wednesday the "payoff time for all that money the nation has invested in the (B-1) program."

The B-1 is the first long-range strategic bomber to be developed by the United States in 30 years. The swing-wing, four-engine jet can fly at supersonic speeds and is also equipped with sophisticated navigation and radar systems that allow it to hug the ground and evade radar.

At a cost of more than $200 million each, the 15 B-1s now at Dyess are worth a total of $3 billion, and Dyess is to get 29 of the planes by year's end.

"The important revitalization of our bomber force continues on track," Gen. Lawrence A. Skantze, the commander of the Air Force Systems Command, said in Washington. "Achieving this initial operational capability in only five years is a major accomplishment."

No formal ceremonies were held to mark the activation of the 337th Bombardment Squadron, Dempsey said, because "nothing we could devise would really match the significance of this."

But the presence of several armed guards and sophisticated electronic warning devices around the fully fueled and armed B-1 — as well as the proximity of its alert crew — belied the activation status.

The families of the four-man alert crew can come for visits during certain hours, but the men won't be able to leave the base until they are relieved by the next alert crew on Oct. 8.

Starting in the late 1980s, the Air Force plans to begin retiring the aging B-52 bombers that now form the heart of the nation's bomber force. They will be replaced by 100 B-1s and 132 of the new radar-evading "Stealth" bombers, which are now in the final stages of development.

Former President Jimmy Carter canceled the B-1 program in 1977, opting instead to improve the capabilities of the B-52 bomber force by developing and deploying air-launched cruise missiles.

President Reagan reversed that decision in October 1981, saying the nation's strategic arsenal required not only the cruise missile but also a new bomber force.

Skantze acknowledged Wednesday that the Air Force had problems introducing the B-1 to the active force.

While all 15 of the planes now at Dyess could fly in an emergency, three still await some of their sophisticated electronic jamming equipment and two are having tiny fuel leaks repaired, he said.

Air Force officials disclosed two weeks ago that the initial batch of planes delivered by the Rockwell International Corp. were repaired over the past few months for small fuel leaks that developed in their wings or fuselage.

The Air Force has described the problem as minor, saying such leaks could almost be expected once the planes were subjected to the stress that accompanies flights at high speed and low altitude.

Each bomber carries a crew of four, and 16 crews trained to fly the plane at Dyess, Skantze said.

The Air Force says the addition of the B-1 to the nation's arsenal will restore a capability to send manned bombers over Soviet territory in the event of a war with confidence the planes can surmount Russian air defenses.

The first B-52 joined the Air Force inventory in 1955. More than 250 still remain in service, but the newest was delivered in 1962.

Reagan praises Carter, but seems reluctant to use his experience

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
AP White House Correspondent

ATLANTA (AP) — As he sat, perhaps a bit uncomfortably, next to his predecessor and bitter adversary, Jimmy Carter, President Reagan heard what Carter already has learned about being a former president.

"One comes away from even a cursory view of the lives of former presidents with a chilling sense of a wasted resource," Warren Christopher said in his address dedicating the new Jimmy Carter Presidential Center and library.

Christopher, a California lawyer who as deputy secretary of state was Carter's principal negotiator in freeing the American hostages in Iran, observed that "the historical record reveals a longstanding ambivalence about former presidents."

"On the whole, their experience was undervalued and their advice too little sought," Christopher said, noting that only five of the 30 presidents who survived their terms found significant post-presidential roles for themselves.

Former presidents, he suggested, "have been touched by history and possess a wisdom that we urgently need. And it's a wisdom that they would readily give, for most presidents — nearly all — leave office with an Olympian patriotism, a rarified love of country that is possible when ambition has lost its object and partisanship its edge."

Carter, who celebrated his 62nd birthday at the ceremonies on Wednesday, is teaching, writing, helping his church build houses for the poor — and still searching for some contribution he can make, particularly in the Middle East, where he achieved most as president.

Last year, after completing a book about the Middle East, he let it be known, as graciously as he could, that he would be willing to serve as a special envoy for Reagan in an effort to rejuvenate the peace process in the troubled region.

But Reagan, six years after drubbing Carter at the polls, is still campaigning against his old adversary and shows little inclination either to recognize or use any talent Carter might have to offer.

Christopher attributes the reluctance of presidents to tap the wisdom of those before them to a "partisan zeal" that does more than merely waste a resource.

Soviet envoy says Afghanistan among urgent problems at superpower meet

OTTAWA (AP) — Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze said arms control will top the agenda of next week's superpower meeting in Iceland but that the Kremlin is also ready to discuss its military intervention in Afghanistan.

Shevardnadze made the comment in a banquet toast to Canadian External Affairs Minister Joe Clark at a state dinner in Ottawa Wednesday marking his first official visit to Canada.

"I can assure you that the Soviet Union, more than anyone else, has an interest in the resolution of that problem," he said of the Afghan issue.

An estimated 115,000 Soviet soldiers now are in the country to help the 40,000-man Afghan army fight a widespread Moslem and anti-Marxist insurgency.

The intervention by the Soviet armed forces prompted the United States, Canada and other Western nations to boycott the 1980 Moscow Olympics, and soured East-West relations.

Clark, welcoming Shevardnadze's remarks, said: "We hope we have detected a willingness to withdraw Soviet forces from an increasingly devastated Afghanistan."

He also pressed his guest on Moscow's reluctance to grant exit visas for family reunifications, and to sign a five-year grain purchase agreement initiated last year.

The Soviet Union is Canada's biggest grain market, and Ottawa is worried that the farm subsidy war between the United States and the 12-nation European Common Market could undermine future sales.

Shevardnadze said he could give no guarantees, but hinted that the grain pact might be signed today along with economic, science and technology agreements.

Moscow has expressed concern over its trade deficit with Canada, largely caused by purchases of Canadian wheat. Canadian exports last year totaled $1.2 billion, while only $20 million worth of Soviet goods were imported.

Shevardnadze, in his dinner address, foresaw progress on the control of nuclear and space weapons at the Oct. 11-12 meeting in the Icelandic capital of Reykjavik between Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev and President Reagan.

Shevardnadze also said Moscow respected what he called Canada's independent stance. But Clark, who spoke first, underlined Ottawa's alliance with Washington.

"Let us be frank," he told Shevardnadze. "Canada is a founding member of the North Atlantic alliance and defends the North American continent in partnership with the United States. We are not neutral and do not wish to be."

Business, labor vying for rescue money share

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Even before the final touches are put on a $12 billion rescue package for Mexico, business and labor leaders have begun explaining how their respective plans for using the money could best help the economy.

Labor leaders said Wednesday the money should be used for creating jobs and raising the minimum wage, which stands at 2,062 pesos or about $2.66 a day at Wednesday's exchange rate of about 775 pesos to the dollar.

To business leaders, who have found credit unavailable or prohibitively expensive this year, the loans mean a possibility of getting new credits for plant and product improvement.

The loans come at a time when Mexico faces difficult economic problems, including inflation expected to hit 100 percent this year, the peso's decline against the dollar and public and private foreign debt expected to reach $103 billion by the end of 1986.

The rescue package was announced late Tuesday in Washington after commercial banks agreed in principle to provide $6 billion in new loans over 15 months and to stretch out payments on Mexico's $43.7 billion public debt over 20 years.

An additional $6 billion in new aid was arranged earlier with the International Monetary Fund, the World Bank and other international agencies and industrialized governments.

Mexican treasury officials must still reach full accord with the banks. However, an IMF official in Washington said he foresaw no problems that could jeopardize the agreements.

The new indebtedness has yet to draw response from critics, chiefly labor groups, who have urged a moratorium on foreign debt payments while Mexico deals with its internal economic problems.

But Rafael Rivapalacio, head of the Labor Congress, said his group would be satisfied with the loan accords if they meant a wage increase and new jobs.

Workers are already scheduled to get an emergency wage hike in October. The size of the increases has not been decided yet, however, and in the past two weeks unions have issued strike threats to thousands of businesses as a way of pressuring employers to support a large raise.

Rivapalacio said he "hoped the public will see soon the benefits (of the new money)."

"But for there to be real solutions it is necessary as soon as possible to raise the buying power of the majority," he said.

The director of the Mexico City branch of the government-affiliated Revolutionary Federation of Workers and Peasants, Roberto Castellanos Tovar, also urged authorities to put the new aid toward higher salaries, housing and job creation.

On the other side, businessman Bernardo Ardavin said the economy could best be served by improving the means of shipping products to market. The head of the Employers' Federation of the Mexican Republic said the new loans could provide money for public investment in shipping.

The president of the 76,000-member National Chamber of Manufacturing Industries, Juan Jose Moreno Sada, called for more credit for improving factories and converting products to export use.

Moreno Sada rejected the idea of a national wage hike and said workers should earn raises through higher productivity, which he said would also help the national economy.

Meanwhile, U.S. economists said Mexico's debt problems are not over.

Harvesters tangle with quick 3A Friona

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Editor

Friona may be a Class 3A school and a notch below Pampa, but Harvesters' head coach John Kendall isn't about to take the Chieftains lightly.

Especially when Friona has a 3-1 record and is rated a 1-point favorite (Harris Ratings) over the Harvesters in the non-district clash at 8 p.m. Friday night in Friona.

Kendall compares Friona to Perryton, an annual Class 3A

powerhouse in the panhandle area.

"Friona plays the same brand of football. They've got a real quick club, quicker than any team we've played," Kendall added.

The Chieftains have wins over Olton, 27-15, Portales, 41-0, and River Road, 21-13. Their lone loss was a 9-7 thriller to Idalou.

"They have a real quick team, quicker than any team we've played," Kendall added. "They have two fast backs (Lonnie Phillips, 155-pound senior, and Jimmy Williams, 185-pound senior) and a good, lefthanded quarterback (Daniel Echols, 155-pound junior)."

Phillips, a second-team all-district pick a year ago, is Friona's leading rusher with 489 yards and 7.4 yards per carry. He's also scored five times.

However, the player college scouts have an eye on is 240-pound tackle Jeff Chaney, who goes both ways on the line. Chaney was first-team all-district last year and an All-South Plains selection.

"He's a major college prospect and a very quick player for his size," Kendall added.

Friona coach Tommy Moss is just as impressed with the Harvesters, despite their 0-3 record.

"Pampa is a lot bigger and a lot faster than us. We're going to have to play with a high level of intensity," Moss said. "We don't have a whole lot of physical ability, but the players have a good attitude and they play well together as a team."

The Chieftains play well together largely because of experience. Seven offensive starters and six defensive starters are back from a 6-4 club. All-district safety Shy Burney (165-pound senior), and all-district linebacker Peter Malouf (185-pound senior), give Chaney plenty of help on defense.

Moss feels the Harvesters' 0-3 record is misleading. He knows about their close losses to Amarillo High (16-14) and Hereford (36-28).

"I just hope they don't come in here and blow us out," Moss added.

The Harvesters are expected to be at full strength with the twisted ankles of junior swingback Brad Abbott (hurt in Borger game) and sophomore lineman Cam Moore (hurt in practice this week) reported to be in good condition. Senior fullback Rodney Kelly has missed practice because of the flu, but Kendall says the 180-pounder should be ready for the game. Kelly rushed for 55 yards to lead Pampa rushers in the 13-0 loss to Borger last week.

Kendall said practice has went well this week despite the rainy weather.

"There's been a lot of slipping and sliding around, but we've come out of the practices in good shape," Kendall said.

Senior tailback Mark Williams leads Pampa's ground attack with 180 yards and is the team's leading scorer with 14 points.

Senior quarterback James Ellison has throw for 275 yards and two touchdowns. Senior tight end Joel Farina has caught eight passes for 115 yards and a touchdown while senior split end Billy Butler has six catches for 114 yards.

Sophomore punter Dustin Miller is averaging 44.3 yards per kick, including a 62-yarder against Hereford.

Dustin Miller....averaging 44.3 yards per kick.

Rodney Kelly....ready to play.

UIL strikes Unbeaten team placed on probation

By JACK KEEVER

AUSTIN (AP) — The undefeated Blanco football team was publicly reprimanded and put on three years' probation for making its players report to a summer weight-lifting program, officials say.

The University Interscholastic League Wednesday was so upset over the practice — one that it said gave Blanco an unfair advantage over other schools — that it considered disqualifying the team even if it should win all its games.

But the motion to reprimand the team publicly and put it on probation carried with seven votes of the 12 members present.

An anonymous letter said Blanco Superintendent Larry Moehnke had organized summer workouts with an attendance check.

"He told my son he must attend these workouts," said a letter that included a typed workout schedule that said team captains "are responsible for knowing why their group members are missing from weight workouts."

UIL Athletic Director Bill Farney and staff member B.J. Stamps investigated July 16 and found athletes in the weight room and a clipboard for signing in.

New coach and athletic director Alan Fisher was in the next room, according to the players, Stamps' report said. Stamps said Moehnke was told to stop the weight program.

"We never did intend to violate any rules," Moehnke told the UIL committee Wednesday. "What we've done was done through oversight."

Moehnke, whose son is a junior fullback on the Class 2A team, said he was "embarrassed" by the incident and had spent a "lot of sleepless nights" over it.

He denied telling any student-athlete he had to attend the workouts and said, "Please don't punish the kids...punish me."

A motion to reprimand Blanco publicly with only one year of probation failed 5-7, and a motion to disqualify the team for district honors this year never came to a vote.

Committee member Mike Day said the weight program was intended to give Blanco an advantage over other teams and was a clear violation of UIL rules.

It's Hurricanes in a breeze

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Football Writer

When Tulsa defeated Houston 24-14 last Saturday it marked the 18th anniversary of a memorable game.

Back in 1968, Houston routed — to put it mildly — Tulsa by a score of 100-6, the most points ever scored against a major-college team.

What brought that game to mind are two games on this week's schedule in which the 100-point mark probably could be threatened if the coaches so desired.

Northern Illinois, 0-5, visits No. 1-ranked Miami and there is no point spread. Last week, Northern Illinois lost to Division I-AA Western Illinois 10-0.

Earlier, Western Illinois lost to Kansas State 35-7, which lost to Division I-AA Northern Iowa 17-0, which was tied by Division II Mankato State 16-16, which lost to Division II North Dakota State 48-0 — you get the picture.

"There's no easy answer," says Northern Illinois Coach Jerry Pettibone. "Miami definitely has a great chance to win the national championship. They'll play Penn State in the Orange Bowl for the national title; that's my prediction.

"All we can do is go down there and just play as well as we can. The best thing for me to do is call (Miami Coach) Jimmy Johnson and plead my case."

Don't worry, Jerry. Johnson remembers the good old days when you coached together on the same Oklahoma staff in the early 1970s... Miami 63-0.

The other likely blowout finds Oklahoma, smarting after last week's 28-16 loss to Miami and subsequent fall from first place to sixth in the Associated Press poll, a 51-point favorite at home against Kansas State.

Tway prepares for Southern

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — Bob Tway has won more than $600,000 this season on the PGA Tour but the second-year pro has three good reasons for playing in the $350,000 Southern Open golf tournament.

"I've still got a few things I would like to accomplish this year," Tway said Wednesday as he prepared for today's opening round of the 72-hole tournament over the par-70, 6,791-yard Green Island Country Club course.

The 27-year-old Tway, who has won four tournaments this year, is seeking to capture the Vantage Cup competition, the money title and Player of the Year award.

"It looks like I'm going to win the Vantage and I'm hoping I can get the other two as well," Tway said. "I'd really like to get another victory this year."

Tway has 3,054,167 points in the Vantage race which is worth $500,000 to the winner. Andy Bean is second at 2,420,429 points.

Tway, who won the PGA on one of golf's most spectacular shots, is second on the money list to Greg Norman, trailing the Australian by only $9,650.

He also believes he can win the Player of the Year award from Norman who has won three tournaments this year, including the British Open.

"I feel like I'm playing pretty good and hopefully I'll play well here," Tway, who finished third here last as a rookie, said.

Tway said he cannot explain the difference between 1985 when he finished in the top 10 in four tournaments but failed to win and his success in 1986.

"There's a very fine line between winning and not winning," he said. "When you're playing well you get good breaks. You make things happen."

"Last year I had a couple of chances to win golf tournaments and didn't play well enough on the last day to win," Tway said.

"Maybe the difference is I've got more experience down the stretch and hit better shots."

"The better you play, the more you win, your expectations are higher and you've got more confidence. I've won so I think I can win."

Others in the field include defending champion Tim Simpson, eight other players in the top 20 on the money list and previous Southern Open winners Hubert Green, Jerry Pate, Ed Fiori, Mike Sullivan, J.C. Snead, Bobby Clampett and Ronnie Black.

Tiger League results

The Rams defeated the Packers, 6-0, and the Colts won over the Raiders, 7-0, Tuesday in Tiger League football action.

Bradley Bass scored the winning TD for the Rams. Justin Cornelien played outstanding defense for the Packers.

For the Colts, Jason Brantley scored the touchdown and Jason Johnson ran the conversion.

Games Tuesday pit the Colts against the Packers at 6 p.m., followed by the Raiders versus the Rams at 7:30 p.m.

Pampa's Invitational Tournament is scheduled for Oct. 18. All four Pampa teams will compete in the tournament. Teams from Borger, Amarillo, Dumas and Perryton are tentatively scheduled to compete.

The regular-season ends Nov. 4 and the city tournament is set to begin Nov. 8.

7th graders lose to Borger team

Borger downed Pampa, 18-6, in a seventh-grade football game played Tuesday.

Pampa's only touchdown came on an 8-yard run by Joe Yurich. Pampa now has a 1-2 record and will host Canyon at 6 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 7.

Record Receiver

San Diego wide receiver Charlie Joiner, already the NFL's all-time leader in pass receptions, goes into Monday night's game against Seattle just 19 yards shy of becoming the league's all-time receiving yardage leader.

Cocaine lab stirring fears among Costa Rican officials

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — For more than a year, Costa Rica has been an unwilling but important bridge in international drug trafficking, unable to halt its use as a transit point for U.S.-bound cocaine from South America. But the discovery of a cocaine-processing laboratory last week in the isolated mountains of southern Costa Rica has stirred fears that this country could be on the verge of joining the ranks of cocaine-producing nations. Seven Colombians, nine Costa Ricans and a Panamanian were arrested in that raid. "The war against drug trafficking is just beginning in Costa Rica. So far, we have done nothing more than scratch the surface," Interior Minister Guido Fernandez said recently. "There are suspicions that there are other labs." The interior minister controls this Central American nation's Rural Guard, a police force of about 4,000 whose duties are similar to sheriff's deputies in the United States. The lab is the second discovered in the region. Last year, a similar cocaine-processing facility was found in neighboring Panama. "Indications are that something is happening in Costa Rica — something big," said a foreign law enforcement analyst who has been closely observing the country's attempts to halt its use by drug smugglers. The analyst, speaking on condition of anonymity, said drug traffickers have been attracted to Costa Rica in recent months because of stricter enforcement efforts in Bolivia, Colombia, the Bahamas and south Florida. Those efforts include the use of U.S. Army troops and helicopters in Bolivia.

Soviet envoy says Afghanistan among urgent problems at superpower meet

OTTAWA (AP) — Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze said arms control will top the agenda of next week's superpower meeting in Iceland but that the Kremlin is also ready to discuss its military intervention in Afghanistan. Shevardnadze made the comment in a banquet toast to Canadian External Affairs Minister Joe Clark at a state dinner in Ottawa Wednesday marking his first official visit to Canada. "I can assure you that the Soviet Union, more than anyone else, has an interest in the resolution of that problem," he said of the Afghan issue. The Soviet Union sent troops into Afghanistan in December 1979 and replaced the existing communist government with another. An estimated 115,000 Soviet soldiers now are in the country to help the 40,000-man Afghan army fight a widespread Moslem and anti-Marxist insurgency.

The intervention by the Soviet armed forces prompted the United States, Canada and other Western nations to boycott the 1980 Moscow Olympics, and soured East-West relations. Clark, welcoming Shevardnadze's remarks, said: "We hope we have detected a willingness to withdraw Soviet forces from an increasingly devastated Afghanistan." He also pressed his guest on Moscow's reluctance to grant exit visas for family reunifications, and to sign a five-year grain purchase agreement initiated last year. The Soviet Union is Canada's biggest grain market, and Ottawa is worried that the farm subsidy war between the United States and the 12-nation European Common Market could undermine future sales. Shevardnadze, in his dinner address, forecast progress on the control of nuclear and space weapons at the Oct. 11-12 meeting in the Icelandic capital of Reykjavik between Soviet leader Mikhail S. The B-1 bomber has gone operational the Air Force announced Wednesday.

B-1 bomber squadron now on full alert status

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — The B-1 supersonic bomber fleet here is on full alert today, putting the controversial plane into regular operation for the first time since its resurrection five years ago.

The Air Force Systems Command officially activated the nation's first operational B-1 squadron Wednesday, and one of Dyess Air Force Base's bombers now will be on full alert at all times.

Col. Robert E. Dempsey, commander of the 96th Bomb Wing at Dyess, called Wednesday the "payoff time for all that money the nation has invested in the (B-1) program."

The B-1 is the first long-range strategic bomber to be developed by the United States in 30 years. The swing-wing, four-engine jet can fly at supersonic speeds and is also equipped with sophisticated navigation and radar systems that allow it to hug the ground and evade radar.

At a cost of more than $200 million each, the 15 B-1s now at Dyess are worth a total of $3 billion, and Dyess is to get 29 of the planes by year's end.

"The important revitalization of our bomber force continues on track," Gen. Lawrence A. Skantze, the commander of the Air Force Systems Command, said in Washington. "Achieving this initial operational capability in only five years is a major accomplishment."

No formal ceremonies were held to mark the activation of the 337th Bombardment Squadron, Dempsey said, because "nothing we could devise would really match the significance of this."

But the presence of several armed guards and sophisticated electronic warning devices around the fully fueled and armed B-1 — as well as the proximity of its alert crew — belied the activation status.

The families of the four-man alert crew can come for visits during certain hours, but the men won't be able to leave the base until they are relieved by the next alert crew on Oct. 8.

Starting in the late 1980s, the Air Force plans to begin retiring the aging B-52 bombers that now form the heart of the nation's bomber force. They will be replaced by 100 B-1s and 132 of the new radar-evading "Stealth" bombers, which are now in the final stages of development.

Former President Jimmy Carter canceled the B-1 program in 1977, opting instead to improve the capabilities of the B-52 bomber force by developing and deploying air-launched cruise missiles.

President Reagan reversed that decision in October 1981, saying the nation's strategic arsenal required not only the cruise missile but also a new bomber force.

Skantze acknowledged Wednesday that the Air Force had problems introducing the B-1 to the active force.

While all 15 of the planes now at Dyess could fly in an emergency, three still await some of their sophisticated electronic jamming equipment and two are having tiny fuel leaks repaired, he said.

Air Force officials disclosed two weeks ago that the initial batch of planes delivered by the Rockwell International Corp. were repaired over the past few months for small fuel leaks that developed in their wings or fuselage.

The Air Force has described the problem as minor, saying such leaks could almost be expected once the planes were subjected to the stress that accompanies flights at high speed and low altitude.

Each bomber carries a crew of four, and 16 crews trained to fly the plane at Dyess, Skantze said.

The Air Force says the addition of the B-1 to the nation's arsenal will restore a capability to send manned bombers over Soviet territory in the event of a war with confidence the planes can surmount Russian air defenses.

The first B-52 joined the Air Force inventory in 1955. More than 250 still remain in service, but the newest was delivered in 1982.

DOT OKs Texas Air takeover of Eastern

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas Air's takeover of Eastern Airlines won final government approval Wednesday and its plans to buy People Express moved a step forward when the Justice Department said it won't object to the acquisition on anti-trust grounds.

The Transportation Department, which gave the Texas Air-Eastern merger its tentative endorsement Sept. 18, announced final approval of the $676 million merger, saying all competitive problems had been resolved.

The acquisition of Eastern by the Houston-based Texas Air Corp. "would not substantially reduce competition in any market," the department said.

Texas Air, which already owns Continental Airlines and New York Air, will become the largest airline holding company in the country with nearly 20 percent of the air travel market with the purchase of Eastern and the expected approval of the People Express acquisition. The Transportation Department said its only concern with the Texas Air-Eastern deal — competition in the Washington-New York-Boston shuttle market — had been resolved with the emergence of Pan American World Airways as a direct competitor to the Eastern shuttle.

Pan Am on Wednesday began 15 flights a day in the Washington-New York-Boston market in direct competition with Eastern.

The Transportation Department also will have final say on whether to approve Texas Air's purchase of People Express and the assets of Frontier Airlines. Frontier, a subsidiary of People Express, is no longer operating.

The Justice Department's anti-trust division's decision not to oppose the Texas Air-People Express merger came in a letter from Deputy Assistant Attorney General Charles Rule to the Transportation Department.

Rule said Justice won't object to the deal because it "is not likely to lessen competition substantially." People Express has its primary hub at Newark, N.J., where New York Air also has a large part of its operation.

Rule said the purchase of Frontier's assets "raises somewhat different questions from those raised by the acquisition of the rest of People", but he added that it also could not be established "that the Frontier acquisition substantially lessens competition."

Alan Pollock, a spokesman for the Transportation Department, said the department would have no comment on the Justice Department finding. The Justice position would be considered along with comments by other parties on the merger application, he said.

Texas Air announced Sept. 15 an agreement to buy People Express for about $125 million in securities.

Reagan praises Carter, but seems reluctant to use his experience

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
AP White House Correspondent

ATLANTA (AP) — As he sat, perhaps a bit uncomfortably, next to his predecessor and bitter adversary, Jimmy Carter, President Reagan heard what Carter already has learned about being a former president.

"One comes away from even a cursory view of the lives of former presidents with a chilling sense of a wasted resource," Warren Christopher said in his address dedicating the new Jimmy Carter Presidential Center and library.

Christopher, a California lawyer who as deputy secretary of state was Carter's principal negotiator in freeing the American hostages in Iran, observed that "the historical record reveals a longstanding ambivalence about former presidents."

"On the whole, their experience was undervalued and their advice too little sought," Christopher said, noting that only five of the 30 presidents who survived their terms found significant post-presidential roles for themselves.

Former presidents, he suggested, "have been touched by history and possess a wisdom that we urgently need. And it's a wisdom that they would readily give, for most presidents — nearly all — leave office with an Olympian patriotism, a rarified love of country that is possible when ambition has lost its object and partisanship its edge."

Carter, who celebrated his 62nd birthday at the ceremonies on Wednesday, is teaching, writing, helping his church build houses for the poor — and still searching for some contribution he can make, particularly in the Middle East, where he achieved most as president.

Last year, after completing a book about the Middle East, he let it be known, as graciously as he could, that he would be willing to serve as a special envoy for Reagan in an effort to rejuvenate the peace process in the troubled region.

But Reagan, six years after drubbing Carter at the polls, is still campaigning against his old adversary and shows little inclination either to recognize or use any talent Carter might have to offer.

Christopher attributes the reluctance of presidents to tap the wisdom of those before them to a "partisan zeal" that does more than merely waste a resource.

Paleontologist researches bones in Texas, Jamaica

By JAY JORDEN
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — A retired Southern Methodist University paleontologist who began researching bones of early Texas mammals and other fossils about 25 years ago is headed for Jamaica to continue his work.

Bob H. Slaughter, who has traveled as far south as the Panama Canal area to study fossils in search of the common ancestor of all mammals, said he's been about as busy these days as before he retired from SMU in 1983.

Slaughter, whose work has concentrated on a geologic period of time about 1 1/2 million years ago called the Pleistocene, said he has researched similar-aged animals, including peccaries or wild pigs, around the world.

"So we're thinking about going down the first part of October to Jamaica and do a little preliminary excavation," Slaughter said. "And then we plan to get together with some other people and perhaps put together a book on Jamaica."

"My wife and I were down there the February before last, trying to find some sites where they (peccary and other creatures) might have been," he said. "The sites we did find, from all the roads on the island, were a little inaccessible. But we checked into it a bit, and found part of a monkey jaw in a cave. We didn't initially know what he was or where he came from. It would be interesting to find some more of him."

He said extensive archeological and paleontological work has not been done in Jamaica since British colonization. The island nation, about 480 miles south of Florida in the Caribbean Sea, was a British colony for about 300 years, until 1962.

The destination for Slaughter and his wife, Julianna, will be Portland Cave on a southern peninsula, south of Jamaica's Cockpit Country.

"All the animals we are looking for in Jamaica became extinct on the islands when man upset the ecology," said Slaughter, who taught at SMU for 22 years. "These were shrew-like animals that lived up to 4,000 to 5,000 years ago. We have been researching this for about six months."

He said that, if the find proves valuable enough, he will organize an expedition with SMU graduate students to recover the fossils.

"You find lots of bones in caves. I always wonder what kind of bones there are that we find. Owls bring some of these in," he said. "Peccaries go inside and they get feisty because some of these caves are animal traps. Some of them are bone bonanzas. One they found in Wyoming had so many bones that the University of Kansas had to open up another storeroom for all of them."

In 1963, Slaughter and Dr. Ernest L. Lundelius Jr. of the University of Texas at Austin found peccaries and other fossils in Laubach Cave, now called Inner Space, near Georgetown. Highway crews constructing an Interstate 35 overpass drilled into the cave.

"Ernie was in Australia when that Inner Space was found and we thought it was going to be sealed back up. That's what the highway department said. They were going to plug it and build the highway and that was that," said Slaughter. "So I got hold of them and told them to hold off as long as they could. And it turned out later that that was a gold mine."

One explorer "showed me a picture of three perfect peccary bones, all of which were extinct. They were just laying out in the open and you didn't have to dig for them," he said.

Slaughter's search for a common mammalian ancestor took him to Egypt, Lebanon and Panama in the 1960s and 1970s to research rodent fossils. "Marsupials or placentals — all living modern mammals belong to either of these two categories, except of course for the duck-billed platypus," he said. "So we were looking for the common ancestors of marsupials and placentals; we thought we'd find him about 200 to 210 million years ago, because after about 100 million years ago, we started seeing both opossums and insectivores."

In further research, Slaughter and his graduate students went to the Glen Rose area of North Texas and brought about 260 tons of dirt containing rodent fossils back to SMU. They processed the dirt through a sieve to extract tiny rodent teeth.

"That was not glamorous work, but it needed to be done," he said. "It is all part of paleontology."

Slaughter's fascination with bones has taken an artistic twist. He has created sculptures with bone castings. One rests on the front porch of his house in the Lakewood section of Dallas.

Some say downturn in price of oil equipment near end

By LAURA TOLLEY
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — The value of oil drilling equipment tumbled along with oil, but machinery prices are beginning to climb from the rock-bottom depths reached earlier this year.

At a recent auction in Houston, Phillip Rivera bought the major components of an oil rig for about $280,000. He initially made a $175,000 bid for the entire rig — but the auctioneers considered it too low.

"Of course we thought we would steal it," Rivera said. "It was an OK deal, but it wasn't a steal. Eight months ago, we were stealing a lot of stuff for 4 cents on the dollar."

Equipment at the Sept. 4 Houston auction sold at least 15 percent higher, he said.

"Anytime the price of oil goes up, it always creates a situation of more buying," he said. "I think it is on the upturn, but not a huge upturn."

Gary Bergman, partner in Superior Auctioneers and Marketing Inc., the San Antonio-based firm that conducted the auction, said he believed prices for equipment bottomed out about a month ago.

"It's not necessarily an indication that the boom is back, but prices are better now, and there are more buyers than speculators," Bergman said. "We're just looking for anything positive."

The company primarily auctions oil drilling equipment for other companies and keeps a commission on the profits, he said.

Officials note that at an August 14 auction in Beaumont, a 5-year-old rig sold for $239,000, while the same brand and quality rig went for $167,000 in June.

Rivera, partner in the Houston firm Rigs (R) Us, buys oil rig equipment at bargain basement prices and then resells them, generally to foreign buyers. He once manufactured and sold rigs.

Foreign buyers, especially in China and India, are interested in buying because prices are cheaper than the some $5.5 million to $6.5 million they have had to pay for new rigs, he said.

"We've been doing real well," he said, adding that the firm has purchased major components of 30 to 40 rigs in the last 1 1/2 years.

"I'm a big speculator," he said. "There's tons of money to be made in this type of business."

Rivera said it also is potentially profitable for him to sell rigs overseas because each rig that leaves the country widens a market for manufacturing rigs if and when the oil industry recovers.

But Rivera is only one of many taking the risk on buying equipment at low prices in hopes of reselling them for more money.

Roy Oliver of Oklahoma also buys and resells oil drilling equipment and has noticed prices increasing in the past few months.

"Two-to-three cents on the dollar has been about the worst. That was about three or four months ago," he said.

George Brazil, general manager of Discovery Drilling Co. in Houston, said the year-old firm buys oil equipment for its own use, not for resale.

"There for a while, there were so many auctions that the bottom (of prices) fell out completely," he said, referring to spring and early summer auctions.

Although Brazil cautioned that prices may have increased at the Houston auction because no other auctions had been held recently, but added he believed there is more optimism about the industry and that oil prices will stabilize.

Brazil built rigs from 1979-81, but had to close his business because of the slump in oil prices. The new company has purchased two rigs and is looking at more.

"One of these days it's going to be good — if you can just buy them and hang on to them," he said. "You just need the capital. One of these days this equipment will be valuable again."

By buying rigs at low prices, Brazil said his company can compete with other companies that paid more for their equipment and who are having trouble making the payments, he said.

"It's really sad, but we can't sit around crying about it," he said. "I guess there's good and bad in everything."

Craftsman practices dying art from pioneer days of Texas

LA FERIA, Texas (AP) — Most of the time Paul Smith works in the high-tech environment of a radio station, but in his leisure time, he often picks up the tools of pioneer days to work a dying craft.

Shingle splitting is hard work, he says, but he loves it.

"It's a dying art, that's why," he says. "It's the stuff people used to do because they had to."

Oak is a good wood for splitting, Smith says, because there are few knots to bend the grain. The logs are cut and split green because it's easier than working with dry wood, he says.

The shingles made from green wood must be dried for up to a year before use to prevent rotting, and the remaining bark must be trimmed off to discourage insect borers, Smith says.

Throwing his heavy boot alongside the log waiting to be split, he pounds with a rough wooden mallet on the splitter blade.

One, two swipes and the iron bites in. With a gentle twist the log suddenly splits and he holds up two shingles.

"As simple as that," he says.

Smith, who lives in La Feria, learned how to split shingles from people "getting up in age," members of the dwindling ranks who still practice skills used by settlers during Texas' pioneer days.

"Nobody's doing it by hand now," he said. "You just can't make a living out of it. Hydraulic machines can make the shingles thinner, cheaper and faster."

Smith says he believes it is important that the skills are carried on, even if they have no place in present-day building.

And he likes to demonstrate his craft. At 13 of the last 15 Texas Folklife Festivals in San Antonio, he has shared the simple secrets of making the wooden roof tiles.

The shingles made this year from East Texas oak logs by Smith and his brother, Rick, a tractor dealer in San Antonio, are stacked into neat "riffs" for drying.

The shingles will be used to demonstrate pioneer building techniques at next year's festival.

Man's tale of music in his ears has the ring of truth

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for printing that letter from "Hearing Things." For years I've been hearing "Old Man River" over and over again just as I had heard it sung in "Showboat." Once in a while I hear old-time gospel music, which I have always loved. And during the holiday season I hear "Silent Night" sung by the Mormon Tabernacle Choir. These songs are always heard in exactly the same way — as though they were recorded in my brain.

I suppose I should be grateful I am not hearing rock music, which I hate. I have never told anyone about what I've been hearing all these years because I honestly thought they would carry me off and lock me in a mental ward.

CELIA IN DALLAS

DEAR ABBY: "Hearing Things" wrote that in addition to continuous ringing in his ears, he sometimes heard musical compositions. The ringing in his ears could be, as you suggested, "tinnitus," but the music is an entirely different problem. "Hearing Things" is having seizures or spasms in the part of his brain that stores musical memories. He should see a neurologist who will

Dear Abby

prescribe anti-convulsants to stop these seizures, which are otherwise known as musical epilepsy.

The complaint is a valid one. Those with this problem, like "Hearing Things," are afraid to talk about it for fear others will think they are "crazy."

PAM WINEGAR, OAK RIDGE, TENN.

DEAR ABBY: The problem described by "Hearing Things" sounds remarkably like two case histories described by Dr. Oliver Sachs, a professor of clinical neurology at Albert Einstein College of Medicine in New York.

Dr. Sachs described two women with similar problems, one of whom was having epileptic seizures in the temporal lobes of her brain. She was placed on anti-convulsants and the "musical seizures" stopped.

The other patient went to her otologist who, after finding nothing wrong except usual deafness, referred her to a psychiatrist who, upon finding nothing psychiatrically wrong, sent her to Dr. Sachs — who discovered she had had a small stroke in her right temporal lobe. As her body recovered from the stroke, the music subsided.

By the way, I am not partial to any specialist. I am married to a psychiatrist and formerly worked as a secretary for a group of neurosurgeons. "Hearing" may want to ask his family physician about a referral to a neurologist. I just hate to see patients go from doctor to doctor trying to pinpoint their problems. It's a waste of time and money.

'Image' may be the key word when it comes to appearance

By DONNA BRAUCHI
County Extension Agent

If you had to pick a key word for the 80's, you might be tempted to select the word "image". It has become a rather multi-purpose word!

Exactly what is your image? There are many definitions of image — an exact likeness of an individual or object, a mental picture of something, an impression. Image is the picture others have of you. It is the total appearance you present to the world. Image is not something you put on in public. Image is who you are. All of us have the potential to present a positive image to the world.

When thinking about image, it helps to remember that research studies show that people's impressions of us are based about 7 percent on what we say, about 38 percent on how our voices sound, and around 51 percent on nonverbal image. Other research indicates that first impressions are based 95 percent on clothing and 5 percent on the person.

Why struggle to stay in fashion, to look healthy, to present a good appearance all the time? First, if we are comfortable with the image we project, it adds to our sense of satisfaction and our self-confidence. Second, image helps us get what we want out of life. Image affects the responses we

Homemakers' News

get from strangers. It helps determine who our friends are and what kind of jobs we get. It can add to or detract from what we teach others in clubs, churches, and other community activities. Your image is a tool that you can use to become more successful and more effective in whatever you do.

If image is really you, how do you use it as a tool? You can enhance the effect of your personality and your characteristics, projecting a strong image, or you can subdue your image by your choice of clothing and make-up. Develop your image so that changes you make are in harmony with your personality. Ask yourself these questions whenever you are thinking of change: (1) Do I honestly know myself — my assets as well as my faults? (2) Are all the parts of my image in harmony with each other? (3) Is my image in harmony with my environment?

To enhance your image, select colors and styles that make you look your very best. These should be the basics of your wardrobe. Assemble a wardrobe that matches your lifestyle. Select styles that give you the best overall appearance rather than dwelling on individual assets or faults. Remember that although your total appearance should be similar to the appearance of others whom you admire and wish to be like, you must be true to yourself.

There may be times when you prefer to direct attention away from yourself. If so, select colors that are subdued, preferably neutrals, and avoid drawing attention to yourself through glittery jewelry or vivid make-up. There are some events where you may want to use your image to let people know who you are. When you are shopping, at parties, or at a sporting event, your image should let others know that you have pride in your appearance and confidence in your abilities.

Harvesters tangle with quick 3A Friona

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Editor

Friona may be a Class 3A school and a notch below Pampa, but Harvesters' head coach John Kendall isn't about to take the Chieftains lightly.

Especially when Friona has a 3-1 record and is rated a 1-point favorite (Harris Ratings) over the Harvesters in the non-district clash at 8 p.m. Friday night in Friona.

Kendall compares Friona to Perryton, an annual Class 3A

powerhouse in the panhandle area.

"Friona plays the same brand of football. They've got a real quick club, quicker than any team we've played," Kendall added.

The Chieftains have wins

over Olton, 27-15, Portales, 41-0, and River Road, 21-13. Their lone loss was a 9-7 thriller to Idalou.

"They have a real quick team, quicker than any team we've played," Kendall added. "They have two fast backs (Lonnie Phillips, 155-pound senior, and Jimmy Williams, 185-pound senior) and a good, lefthanded quarterback (Daniel Echols, 155-pound junior)."

Phillips, a second-team all-district pick a year ago, is Friona's leading rusher with 489 yards and 7.4 yards per carry. He's also scored five times.

However, the player college scouts have an eye on is 240-pound tackle Jeff Chaney, who goes both ways on the line. Chaney was first-team all-district last year and an All-South Plains selection.

"He's a major college prospect and a very quick player for his size," Kendall added.

Friona coach Tommy Moss is just as impressed with the Harvesters, despite their 0-3 record.

"Pampa is a lot bigger and a lot faster than us. We're going to have to play with a high level of intensity," Moss said. "We don't have a whole lot of physical ability, but the players have a good attitude and they play well together as a team."

The Chieftains play well together largely because of experience. Seven offensive starters and six defensive starters are back from a 6-4 club. All-district safety Shy Burney (165-pound senior), and all-district linebacker Peter Malouf (185-pound senior), give Chaney plenty of help on defense.

Moss feels the Harvesters' 0-3 record is misleading. He knows about their close losses to Amarillo High (16-14) and Hereford (36-28).

"I just hope they don't come in here and blow us out," Moss added.

The Harvesters are expected to be at full strength with the twisted ankles of junior swingback Brad Abbott (hurt in Borger game) and sophomore lineman Cam Moore (hurt in practice this week) reported to be in good condition. Senior fullback Rodney Kelly has missed practice because of the flu, but Kendall says the 180-pounder should be ready for the game. Kelly rushed for 55 yards to lead Pampa rushers in the 13-0 loss to Borger last week.

Kendall said practice has went well this week despite the rainy weather.

"There's been a lot of slipping and sliding around, but we've come out of the practices in good shape," Kendall said.

Senior tailback Mark Williams leads Pampa's ground attack with 180 yards and is the team's leading scorer with 14 points.

Senior quarterback James Ellison has throw for 275 yards and two touchdowns. Senior tight end Joel Farina has caught eight passes for 115 yards and a touchdown while senior split end Billy Butler has six catches for 114 yards.

Sophomore punter Dustin Miller is averaging 44.3 yards per kick, including a 62-yarder against Hereford.

Dustin Miller....averaging 44.3 yards per kick.

UIL strikes Unbeaten team placed on probation

By JACK KEEVER
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — The undefeated Blanco football team was publicly reprimanded and put on three years' probation for making its players report to a summer weight-lifting program, officials say.

The University Interscholastic League Wednesday was so upset over the practice — one that it said gave Blanco an unfair advantage over other schools — that it considered disqualifying the team even if it should win all its games.

But the motion to reprimand the team publicly and put it on probation carried with seven votes of the 12 members present.

An anonymous letter said Blanco Superintendent Larry Moehnke had organized summer workouts with an attendance check.

"He told my son he must attend these workouts," said a letter that included a typed workout schedule that said team captains "are responsible for knowing why their group members are missing from weight workouts."

UIL Athletic Director Bill Farney and staff member B.J. Stamps investigated July 16 and found athletes in the weight room and a clipboard for signing in.

New coach and athletic director Alan Fisher was in the next room, according to the players, Stamps' report said. Stamps said Moehnke was told to stop the weight program.

"We never did intend to violate any rules," Moehnke told the UIL committee Wednesday. "What we've done was done through oversight."

Moehnke, whose son is a junior fullback on the Class 2A team, said he was "embarrassed" by the incident and had spent a "lot of sleepless nights" over it.

He denied telling any student-athlete he had to attend the workouts and said, "Please don't punish the kids ... punish me."

A motion to reprimand Blanco publicly with only one year of probation failed 5-7, and a motion to disqualify the team for district honors this year never came to a vote.

Committee member Mike Day said the weight program was intended to give Blanco an advantage over other teams and was a clear violation of UIL rules.

It's Hurricanes in a breeze

By HERSCHEL NISSENON

When Tulsa defeated Houston 24-14 last Saturday it marked the 18th anniversary of a memorable game.

Back in 1968, Houston routed — to put it mildly — Tulsa by a score of 100-6, the most points ever scored against a major-college team.

What brought that game to mind are two games on this week's schedule in which the 100-point mark probably could be threatened if the coaches so desired.

Northern Illinois, 0-5, visits No. 1-ranked Miami and there is no point spread. Last week, Northern Illinois lost to Division I-AA Western Illinois 10-0.

Earlier, Western Illinois lost to Kansas State 35-7, which lost to Division I-AA Northern Iowa 17-0, which was tied by Division II Mankato State 16-16, which lost to Division II North Dakota State 48-0 — you get the picture.

"There's no easy answer," says Northern Illinois Coach Jerry Pettibone. "Miami definitely has a great chance to win the national championship. They'll play Penn State in the Orange Bowl for the national title; that's my prediction.

"All we can do is go down there and just play as well as we can. The best thing for me to do is call (Miami Coach) Jimmy Johnson and plead my case."

Don't worry, Jerry. Johnson remembers the good old days when you coached together on the same Oklahoma staff in the early 1970s ... Miami 63-0.

The other likely blowout finds Oklahoma, smarting after last week's 28-16 loss to Miami and subsequent fall from first place to sixth in the Associated Press poll, a 51-point favorite at home against Kansas State.

Tway prepares for Southern

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — Bob Tway has won more than $600,000 this season on the PGA Tour but the second-year pro has three good reasons for playing in the $350,000 Southern Open golf tournament.

"I've still got a few things I would like to accomplish this year," Tway said Wednesday as he prepared for today's opening round of the 72-hole tournament over the par-70, 6,791-yard Green Island Country Club course.

The 27-year-old Tway, who has won four tournaments this year, is seeking to capture the Vantage Cup competition, the money title and Player of the Year award.

"It looks like I'm going to win the Vantage and I'm hoping I can get the other two as well," Tway said. "I'd really like to get another victory this year."

Tway has 3,054,167 points in the Vantage race which is worth $500,000 to the winner. Andy Bean is second at 2,420,429 points.

Tway, who won the PGA on one of golf's most spectacular shots, is second on the money list to Greg Norman, trailing the Australian by only $9,650.

He also believes he can win the Player of the Year award from Norman who has won three tournaments this year, including the British Open.

"I feel like I'm playing pretty good and hopefully I'll play well here," Tway, who finished third here last as a rookie, said.

Tway said he cannot explain the difference between 1985 when he finished in the top 10 in four tournaments but failed to win and his success in 1986.

"There's a very fine line between winning and not winning," he said. "When you're playing well you get good breaks. You make things happen."

"Last year I had a couple of chances to win golf tournaments and didn't play well enough on the last day to win," Tway said.

"Maybe the difference is I've got more experience down the stretch and hit better shots."

"The better you play, the more you win, your expectations are higher and you've got more confidence. I've won so I think I can win."

Others in the field include defending champion Tim Simpson, eight other players in the top 20 on the money list and previous Southern Open winners Hubert Green, Jerry Pate, Ed Fiori, Mike Sullivan, J.C. Snead, Bobby Clampett and Ronnie Black.

Tiger League results

The Rams defeated the Packers, 6-0, and the Colts won over the Raiders, 7-0, Tuesday in Tiger League football action.

Bradley Bass scored the winning TD for the Rams. Justin Cornelsen played outstanding defense for the Packers.

For the Colts, Jason Brantley scored the touchdown and Jason Johnson ran the conversion.

Games Tuesday pit the Colts against the Packers at 6 p.m., followed by the Raiders versus the Rams at 7:30 p.m.

Pampa's Invitational Tournament is scheduled for Oct. 18. All four Pampa teams will compete in the tournament. Teams from Borger, Amarillo, Dumas and Perryton are tentatively scheduled to compete.

The regular-season ends Nov. 4 and the city tournament is set to begin Nov. 8.

7th graders lose to Borger team

Borger downed Pampa, 18-6, in a seventh-grade football game played Tuesday.

Pampa's only touchdown came on an 8-yard run by Joe Yurich. Pampa now has a 1-2 record and will host Canyon at 6 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 7.

Record Receiver

San Diego wide receiver Charlie Joiner, already the NFL's all-time leader in pass receptions, goes into Monday night's game against Seattle just 19 yards shy of becoming the league's all-time receiving yardage leader.

Wheeler gears for Panhandle

By DAN MURRAY
Sports Writer

WHEELER—Maybe the game doesn't have all the luster once anticipated, but when Wheeler travels to Panhandle for a 7:30 p.m. Friday duel it will still be a head-banger between two quality football teams.

Before the year started, both teams seemed certain to enter the game unbeaten and ranked in the Class 1A and Class 2A Top 10. Wheeler was, after all, ranked No. 1 in 1A and Panhandle was No. 9 in 2A, plus the two have long had reputations as a pair of the best programs in the Panhandle. But things haven't gone as expected.

Wheeler lost Dicky Salyer, then its first regular season game since 1983, and now sits at No. 8 in Class 1A. Injuries have plagued the 3-1 Mustangs, most recently with lineman Drew Thomas sidelined for three weeks with a dislocated shoulder.

Panhandle lost quarterback Tommy Kotara for two games, and was promptly upset by River Road and Sanford-Fritch, tumbling far out of the 2A Top Ten. Kotara returned last week against Stinnett and hit 11 of 17 passes for 169 yards to lead the 2-2 Panthers to a 25-15 win.

Both teams have good defenses, but Wheeler's offense has been struggling without Salyer, while the Panthers are much-improved when Kotara plays. The way Wheeler head coach Preston Smith sees it, the Panthers have the advantage. "The way it looks right now we'd have to be awfully fortunate to win the game," Smith said. "We've got a lot of kids bummed up. I hate to sell our kids down because they've always been over-achievers, but we'd have to have a lot of things go well for us to win.

"We're hoping it's a defensive game. That's our only hope. We've got to play a great defensive game to be in the thing. With our injury situation, we hope we're capable of playing a good defensive game."

That's the kind of game it should be, with Wheeler's Black Death defense pitted against what could be the best of all the good defenses Panhandle's had. It should be a hard-hitting, low scoring affair. The Harris Poll says pick 'em.

Smith says his offense has to find itself if the Mustangs are to stay in the game. Wheeler's sputtered without Salyer, and while the Mustangs beat Vega 21-0 last week, they also committed their first four turnovers and incurred eight penalties.

"We're going into the game searching," Smith said.

With Kotara, the Panthers' veer offense doesn't have problems. In the two games he's played, they've thrown for 278 yards and and gotten another 432 on the ground. And won.

Back Chris Koetting is a favorite target, while Jimmy Hays, who had 125 yards against Stinnett, leads the rushing attack.

Smith says his squad has its work cut out.

"The kids are excited about having a chance to play Panhandle," he said. "It's another week and they know they're gonna have to play as hard as they can play to keep from getting embarrassed."

Bucks entertain Spearman in 1-2A opener

WHITE DEER — The White Deer Bucks have gone back to the basics in preparation for their District 1-2A opener with Spearman at 8 p.m. here Friday.

Head coach Windy Williams felt his troops were fundamentally ragged during last week's mistake-riddled 21-0 loss to Sunray, so he's had the Bucks working to correct it.

"They shook their heads (when they saw the film)," Williams said. "We didn't tackle very well in the football game. We were out of position too much. We just didn't move."

"This week's been different in that it's been remedial workouts, correcting some thing, working on technique. But we've had good workouts. I think everybody's ready to play. They didn't enjoy that last game so they want to go out and correct the things they did wrong. That makes me feel better about it, too."

The Bucks had better be polished if they want one of 1-2A's two playoffs berths, for the district is rugged. There's Panhandle, Stratford, Stinnett and darkhorse Gruber to contend with.

"We're talking tough district" Williams said. First, of course, is Spearman.

The Lynx have been struggling thus far. They'll enter the game with a 1-3 record that includes a 16-6 loss to Stratford in last week's district opener. A loss to White Deer would almost certainly eliminate Spearman from contention.

"They got after Stratford real tough," Williams said. "Coach (Don) Mullins is a good coach, and he's just bringing 'em and bringing 'em."

The teams are comparable in speed, but Spearman should have a size advantage. The Lynx strength is in their lines, which are anchored by 230-pound Scott Swan and 240-pound Matt Tucker, and guard Jesse Lozano (5-8, 185).

"They're big and slow and we're just slow," Williams said. "We'll match up better with them than we have anybody else on our schedule. Hopefully our quickness will help."

Spearman's veer offense is operated by quarterback Brett Davis (6-0, 170), who's thrown for 352 yards thus far this season. Keith Benson and Jeff Gustin (6-2, 170) have been his favorite targets, while senior Dusty Hill gets most of the running back work.

Williams is more concerned about the Lynx' passing than he is the veer, of which he says, "We feel like that's what our defense is best suited for."

White Deer, with the exception of a couple of new wrinkles, will try to do what it always does, except without the mistakes of a week ago, when the Bucks picked up 107 yards in penalties. That's what they've worked on eliminating all week.

"We're still a good football team," Williams said. "Our kids are not down, we just hate to lose."

McLean faces Groom Friday

By DAN MURRAY
Sports Writer

McLEAN — You can easily pick the favorite when Class 1A's No. 9 team plays Class 1A's No. 135 team, as Top-Ten Groom will in McLean's homecoming at 8 p.m. here Friday.

But you can never tell what'll happen. Sometimes, your Syracuse's beat your Nebraskas.

McLean's coming off the toughest of 25 straight defeats, 6-0 to Motley County, but the Tigers, according to head coach Bill Phillips, are still the same 'ol kids.

Groom's coming off a 30-point win over Phillips, but Tigers' head coach Terry Coffee says their workouts "haven't been the best."

Give the obvious edge to Groom, but with homecoming and nothing at all to lose, give the mental edge to McLean.

"You play a football game to win it, but you play football because it's fun. McLean's players haven't won recently, but they go out week after week trying to, knowing some day they will."

"There's no noticeable difference in our kids," Phillips said. "They're still working their tails off and still having some fun. We're still going forward."

"I think our kids possibly got some negative publicity from the game last week. The kids lost a football game, but they're not losers. I'll back 'em 100 percent."

"All we ever asked 'em to do is the best you can do. Regardless of the outcome, if you can hold your head up high then there's nothing at all to be ashamed about...The kids are like, 'Well, we got beat, but we're not going to let it get us down. They're just such a joy to be around. It really says a lot for the kids that they can still have that enthusiasm and not really be having that much success with it. If the kids are trying to improve, I don't care if they're 0 for 8,000."

Phillips and Coffee are friends, and Groom's coach respects McLean's players and mentor.

"I think coach Phillips does a super job with those kids," Coffee said. "I know they had a lot of media attention with that game (against Motley County). Those kids are not losers or they wouldn't be out there to begin with. I think they really are giving it everything they've got. I know it's homecoming for them and I think they'll come out and give us a good game. Phillips got right after us and I think McLean'll get right after us."

"In my eyes those kids are winners 'cause they're out there doing what their coach wants 'em to do. It's not easy. It takes a lot of dedication and hard work."

So McLean, like all of Groom's other opponents thus far, has the unenviable task of trying to stop what Phillips calls "probably the two best running backs in Class A and probably any class this year."

That's Jack Britten and Bruce Thornton. "You just can't key on any one of them," Phillips said.

"If you did succeed in stopping both of them, that Williams kid (Paul) is gonna hurt you."

"They've got the talent to go a long way in the playoffs."

So Groom, like all of McLean's other opponents thus far, has the unenviable task of playing a team that's gonna put it all together some day, and doesn't care who against.

"It worries you," Coffee said. "Some day they're gonna do it."

Clemens suffers bruised elbow after being hit by line drive

By DAVE O'HARA
AP Sports Writer

BOSTON (AP) — At 5 p.m. Roger Clemens learned officially he would start for the Boston Red Sox in the opening game of the American League playoffs.

Less than three hours later, the 6-foot-4 right-hander and the Red Sox were scared out of their baseball wits, worried about his future, not just the AL championship series.

Three hours after that, hopes were high once again — although no one could say for sure when the fireballing pitcher would be ready to pitch again.

Clemens' 24-4 season, following a comeback from shoulder surgery, came to an abrupt halt Wednesday night when he took a line drive by Baltimore's John Stefero off his right elbow in the second inning of a game eventually won 11-7 by Boston.

Clemens grabbed his elbow as the ball ricocheted over second baseman Marty Barrett and into short right field for an RBI single. He was replaced by Tim Lollar.

"When you get as far as we have in a season and something like this happens, you're darn right it's scary," said Boston Manager John McNamara. "And you think of a man's career, too."

Boston's hopes for a pennant in a showdown with the California Angels appeared at stake as Clemens was escorted to the clubhouse, then taken to nearby Children's Hospital for X-rays.

After an hour, a period which seemed like an eternity to the Red Sox, Clemens returned to the clubhouse. The X-rays were negative.

Clemens was ordered to keep ice on the elbow, given medication and sent home.

The Red Sox were relieved, and optimistic. But only time will tell.

Dr. Thomas Pappas, the club physician, said he expected Clemens to be "throwing in the early playoffs," and McNamara said he had no intention of changing his pitching plans.

"X-rays showed no bone damage other than a bruise," Pappas said. "There was no crack, fracture, break or whatever you want to call it. Now we just have to wait until tomorrow to see how much swelling and discomfort there is."

Pappas said Clemens suffered "mild to moderate discomfort."

"The ball hit just above the elbow on the outside and there doesn't appear to be any muscle damage," the doctor added.

"It was very scary," McNamara said. "It was a very anxious time when he went to the hospital."

Dolphins compete in swimming meet

Ten Pampa Dolphin swimmers competed in a Pentathlon swim meet this past weekend in Altus, Okla. and brought home eight medals.

The Dolphins competed against teams from Altus, Lawton, Oklahoma City, Norman, Weatherford and Edmond.

The Pentathlon is a swim meet where the swimmer competes in five events and the total best time for all five events determines the winner. Swimmers compete in the freestyle, backstroke, breaststroke, butterfly and the individual medley, which is a combination of all four strokes in one race. The Pampa swimmers completed in four age groups and was first in three of them and second in the other one.

Two girls competed in the senior girls Division. Richelle Hill won all her events and was the gold medal winner. Renita Hill was second overall and brought home the silver medal.

In the girls 13-14 division, Pam Morrow also won the gold medal by winning four out of five of her individual events. Pam also improved all her times. Rhea Hill also competed in this age group and won the fourth-place medal.

Pampa had five girls competing in the 10 & under age group. Jamie Danner Hill improved all her times while winning four out of five events, which was good enough for a goal medal. Julie Forman won the fourth-place medal and also improved all her times. Talitha Pope won fifth place while Rene Hill finished sixth. Heidi Venal also competed in this age group, but did not place in the top six.

Seven-year-old Bobby Venal missed improving all his times by one-tenth of a second in one event and won the silver medal in the boys 8 and under age group.

The next meet for the Dolphins will be in Lubbock Oct. 18-19, and then they will compete at the Amarillo Aquatic Club Nov. 1-2. Also, the Dolphins are in the process of soliciting pledges for a swim-a-thon, which will take place Oct. 30 from 4:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. at the Pampa Youth Center pool. Money raised by the swim-a-thon will be used to pay pool rental and update worn-out swimming equipment. All money raised from this swim-a-thon is used to benefit the swimmers and the competitive swim program in this community.

"This program is a voluntary program and no money is used for salaries. Our swimmers are trying to contact as many people as possible for pledges, but we do not have enough members to contact everyone, so if you know of a Dolphin swimmer and would like to help out our team please contact them," said Dolphin coach Bob Hill. Also, our swimmers will be taking pledges at the Alco store Saturday, Oct. 11," Hill said.

Striking International Longshoremen's Association members stopped a truck entering the Port Security Terminal at Port Elizabeth in Elizabeth, N.J., Tuesday.

Dock strike in second day

NEW YORK (AP)—A strike by 30,000 dockworkers in 11 ports from Maine to Virginia entered its second day today after causing some violence and forcing luxury liner passengers arriving from England to tote their own luggage.

Dozens of ships were idled Wednesday as hundreds of union members picketed the ports. Industry officials said they feared the strike could cause long-term economic damage.

"Our customers are screaming and carrying on. They have scheduled sales which they cannot meet," said Frances Sherman, treasurer of Davies Turner & Co., a customs broker and foreign freight handler in Philadelphia.

Jack Brown, president of Mid-Atlantic Toyota Distributors, which delivers Toyotas to dealers in five states, said the strike was "shutting the company down. It is paralyzing our operations."

Tempers flared at Port Newark-Elizabeth, N.J., on Wednesday when about 150 bottle-throwing pickets, shouting "nothing in, nothing out," blocked the gate to a cargo area. Four police officers received minor injuries and one trucker required knee surgery. No other violence was reported.

Talks were scheduled this afternoon between Thomas Gleason, president of the International Longshoremen's Association; and William Detweiler, president of the Council of North Atlantic Shipping Associations, which represents stevedore companies in the ports of Hampton Roads, Va.; Baltimore, Philadelphia and Providence, R.I.

The management group is demanding a $3-an-hour pay cut for workers when they handle non-containerized cargo. Under the old contract, dockworkers got $17-an-hour for handling all kinds of cargo.

No talks were scheduled between the union and another major management group, the New York Shipping Association, which represents management in New York and Boston.

The NYSA had been willing to extend the old contract while talks continued, but the union said no.

"In effect, we're being held hostage," said Robert Calder, executive director of the Boston Shipping Association.

Although the contract that expired at midnight Tuesday covered ports from Maine to Texas, only 11 northern ports were struck.

Management groups in South Atlantic and Gulf Coast ports have gotten regional union leaders to accept a pay cut and Gleason has been unable or unwilling to stop it.

Union leaders in those ports say they had to face the reality of non-union competition as well as competition from other unions, notably the Teamsters, willing to undercut the ILA.

Report alleges secret U.S. deception targeting Gadhafi

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Reagan administration waged a secret campaign this summer to try to convince Libyan ruler Moammar Gadhafi that he faced the threat of U.S. bombing and a possible coup, a newspaper reported today.

The secret plan was described in a three-page memorandum sent to President Reagan by John M. Poindexter, the president's national security adviser. The Washington Post said. The plan was adopted at a White House meeting Aug. 14.

According to the Post, Poindexter's memo said "one of the key elements" of the strategy "is that it combines real and illusory events — through a disinformation program — with the basic goal of making Gadhafi think that there is a high degree of internal opposition to him within Libya, that his key trusted aides are disloyal, that the U.S. is about to move against him militarily."

The plan involved "a series of closely coordinated events involving covert, diplomatic, military and public actions," the newspaper quoted the Poindexter memo as saying.

White House spokesman Dale Petroskey, asked about the report Wednesday night, said, "We have no comment."

Administration sources told The Associated Press that planting false information in the American press was not part of the plan. But they said the United States sought to deceive Gadhafi into thinking another American raid was being planned against him.

The sources also said the plan was based on intelligence that Gadhafi was readying a new terrorist strike.

The Post said that beginning with an Aug. 25 report in The Wall Street Journal, the American news media — including the Post — reported as fact much of the false information generated by the plan. Published reports described renewed Libyan backing for terrorism and a looming, new U.S.-Libya confrontation, the Post said.

But U.S. intelligence officials actually had concluded that Gadhafi was "quiescent" on the terrorist front, the newspaper quoted the Poindexter memo as saying. The only "confrontation" was the one generated by the administration plan, the newspaper said.

The mid-August plan approved by Reagan did not specifically call for the planting of false stories in the U.S. media, the Post said. But a State Department planning memo did provide that the "U.S. government backgrounds media on (1) three-ring circus in Libya with infighting among groups jockeying for post-Gadhafi era, (2) threat of resurgent terrorism," the newspaper said.

An administration official familiar with the events said Wednesday night that the United States had a long-standing and previously announced plan to conduct a joint military exercise with Egypt in the Mediterranean and that there also was a regular timetable for shuttling reserve and Air National Guard units to Europe as part of annual summer training.

Names in the news

NEW YORK (AP)—Isaac Stern got a standing ovation at Carnegie Hall even though he had a hard hat atop his head rather than a fiddle in his hand.

Stern was cheered Wednesday at a pep rally for the 225 construction workers restoring the 96-year-old landmark concert hall.

"Hello, fellas," Stern said, as he looked out on the workers, whose standing ovation was sincere — despite the fact that the concert hall has no seats.

"Because you're doing what you're doing and the way you're doing it, you're able to be part of a legacy that you can tell your kids that you made Carnegie live another 100 years," said Stern, a violinist who is president of the concert hall.

The workers, who have been refurbishing the building since May 13, must complete the $50 million project in time for a Dec. 15 gala reopening concert.

Zaccaro reported indicted in Queens cable TV case

NEW YORK (AP)—A grand jury investigating bribery allegations in the awarding of cable television franchises has indicted John Zaccaro, husband of former vice-presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro, his lawyer says.

The sealed indictment was handed up in state court in Queens on Wednesday, said Robert Morvillo, the attorney for the Queens real estate businessman.

The indictment came shortly after an appeals court gave Morvillo the go-ahead to challenge the right of a grand jury to hear the case.

"We can only conclude that (the district attorney) was worried about his legal position and the legitimacy of his grand jury proceeding," Zaccaro said in a statement read by Morvillo.

Zaccaro has denied any wrongdoing.

The investigation reportedly focuses on allegations that he introduced cable television executives to former Queens Borough President Donald Manes in 1981 and later asked the company for a $1 million fee to secure a cable contract.

Mexican satellite antenna owners 'have no rights'

By CAM ROSSIE
Associated Press Writer

MONTERREY, Mexico (AP) — The thousands of satellite antenna owners in Mexico are discovering they have no legal means of descrambling channels. The U.S. government and motion picture companies stand in the way.

"In Mexico, we're fried," said Rodrigo Hernandez, whose company, Antec, manufactures and installs satellite antennas. "We don't have any rights."

U.S. law prohibits the sale of the MA-Com VideoCipher II descrambler outside the United States because its encryption system "uses technology which is controlled by the U.S. military and is not exportable," Larry Nelson, MA-Com executive vice president, said in a telephone interview.

The VideoCipher II decoder has been chosen by most satellite channels that are or will be scrambled.

Viewers here scoff at the U.S. government for trying to restrict the sale of a product widely available on the American market.

"It's just a series of integrated circuits," said Justo Eldoruy, whose popular "In Orbit" column on satellite viewing appears weekly in the Monterrey newspaper El Norte.

To make matters worse for Mexican satellite antenna owners, U.S. motion picture companies also are keeping a tight rein on their product.

"Programmers such as HBO, Cinemax and Showtime pay for the rights to the movies they show to the motion picture artists. They have the rights to those signals to rebroadcast them to the continental United States only," said Jerry Fischette, vice president of operations for SPACE, the Alexandria, Va.-based Satellite Television Industry Association.

"I don't believe they would refuse a paying customer if they had the rights," Fischette said by telephone.

Although some estimates go as high as 40,000, no exact count is available of the satellite antennas throughout the country.

An estimated 9,000 homes have satellite antennas in the metropolitan area of Monterrey, Mexico's third largest city just a three-hour drive from the Texas border.

The density of dishes in Monterrey's wealthy suburb of Garza Garcia, known locally as "the valley," prompted the magazine Satellite Orbit, the satellite viewers guide, to call it the "Valley of Dishes."

Yet, Fischette said one of the reasons the film producers have not dealt with countries like Mexico "is because they don't believe it has reached a size yet where it is a viable market."

Viewers spent as much as $5,000 for satellite dishes when they first became available in the early 1980s because the daily lineup on local television stations is dominated by soap operas and dubbed reruns of U.S. television shows.

Movie theaters, with rare exceptions, offer films at the same time they're available via satellite.

Hernandez said viewers also wanted more sports programs, scientific programs and a chance for their children to learn English.

"The people here are used to looking for more information. They want more news and culture," said Elorduy.

Mexican television, he said, "isn't an option."

Now, said Hernandez, people are being forced to watch helplessly as their expensive antennas are turned into "a mountain of garbage."

The alternative for antenna owners is to risk buying descramblers from smugglers or bringing them illegally across the border themselves. Then, using an address in the United States, they can get the descramblers programmed.

But, said Hernandez, "They're totally unprotected."

Elorduy said at least 15 people have complained of dealers in the United States who sold them descramblers along with a one-year subscription to HBO and Cinemax. After two months of viewing the channels, the signal was scrambled again.

"The dealers had paid just for two months and pocketed the rest of the money," Elorduy said.

Hernandez, a member of Monterrey's SPACE association of satellite dish manufacturers, sellers and installers, said the organization opposes selling the descramblers as contraband.

Mexico faces difficult economic times

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico faces difficult economic times ahead because it is experiencing a stagnant economy but it will take more than "good intentions" to overcome the problems, President Miguel de la Madrid said.

"This combination is difficult," the president said Monday. "I recognize that, but we must try. The solution is that which accommodates the economic realities and not just cabinet plans or good intentions."

He told members of the Mexican Regional Workers Federation the political solidarity of organized labor forms a "fundamental peace" of the fight against inflation and for bringing about economic recovery.
