U.S. won't recognize Lithuania

■ Bush administration claims its course is the right one, while Baltic-Americans remain disappointed with current policy.

By MARK J. PORUBCANSKY

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush spurned appeals from Baltic-American leaders Wednesday to recognize the renegade government in Lithuania. He declared support for its struggle for independence but voiced concern about the impact on the Soviet Union.

"Our policy, we believe, is the correct one and it does not involve recognition," White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said.

Anthony Mazeika, director of the Baltic American Freedom League, said, "We are disappointed with the official policy of the United States" not to recognize the government of Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis.

Mazeika had urged Bush to extend "de facto" recognition of Landsbergis' government, one step short of formal recognition.

Bush met for more than an hour with 13 Baltic-Americans representing the interests of Lithuania, Estonia and Latvia, which were forcibly incorporated into the Soviet Union in 1940.

Members of the group said they had been seeking a meeting with Bush since January, recognizing that a crisis was looming in Lithuania's drive to secede from the Soviet Union and Moscow's refusal to let it go.

"We have a lot of very good contacts on the lower- and mid-levels of the State Department. It's just the White House we haven't been able to penetrate," said Mari-Ann Rikken of the Estonian-American National Council. "We used to wear out the threshold of the previous administration."

Yet, members of the group said the mere fact that Bush met with them will be seen in the Baltic states as a positive step.

Ms. Rikken said, "Mr. Bush had a failure with China. He does not want to see a similar kind of thing happen in the Baltic states.

"He's very concerned," she added. "He wants to find a way out, a way out of the Soviet Union for the Baltic states that will not result in a cataclysm for the Soviet Union and that will not result in a blood bath for the Baltic states."

Fitzwater said Bush told the group "the U.S. must avoid taking actions that would inadvertently make Lithuania's task more difficult by inflaming the situation" and stressed the importance of quiet diplomacy.

Bush said he did not want to see a situation akin to 1956 when the United States encouraged Hungary's revolt for democracy but then stood by helplessly as the Soviet Union crushed the uprising

Senate panel takes up oil production gap

■ New Mexico senators and government officials discuss the ability of the U.S. oil and gas industry to deliver these increasingly scarce resources.

By John Paul Pitts
Business & Oil Editor

ROSWELL, N.M. — The gap between increasing oil imports and decreasing U.S. production was a topic of prime concern at a field hearing of the U.S. Senate Subcommittee on Mineral Resources Development and Production at the Eastern New Mexico University Roswell campus Wednesday.

Participating in the Senate hearing were New Mexico Sens. Pete Domenici, a Republican, and Jeff Bingaman, a Democrat who acted as chairman of the proceeding, which included statements from industry and government leaders.

Domenici expressed concern that the national energy policy to be officially unveiled later this year attempt to halt increasing oil imports and decreasing U.S. production.

"The public has to understand," said Domenici, "that the U.S. is being held hostage to oil imports." The senator said 40 percent of the U.S. trade deficit is the result of oil imports, and noted the oil industry needs incentives to produce more domestic oil.

"Do we want to remain dependent on foreign crude?" asked Domenici.

Bingaman noted U.S. production declined by 500,000 barrels — or nearly seven percent — in 1989, and said the level of imports was likely to increase to 10-11 million barrels daily by 1995.

"At that time," said Bingaman, "the cost of our imported oil will exceed the present cost of our trade deficit."

Bingaman said the purpose of the hearing was to explore the ability of the domestic oil industry to actually produce and deliver the U.S. natural gas and petroleum resource base.

Michael McElwrath, deputy assistant secretary for fossil energy for the U.S. Department of Energy agreed with Domenici and Bingaman that the falling production and increasing dependency on foreign oil was only likely to get worse, but offered hope that the rates might be slowed.

Odessa tries to rebuild 2020 Foresight panel

By Chris Van Wagenen
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Odessa College President Dr. Phil Speegle said he was surprised to learn last week that the implementing committee of the community's 2020 Foresight had disbanded after its chairman left town.

Today, Dr. Speegle and two other original steering committee members were expected to meet at the college to discuss salvaging the 30-year community development plan.

"We're going to try to get the original committee back together," said Speegle. "I didn't realize it until I heard about it a week ago. ... Somebody's going to have to grab the stick and fly this thing."

2020's follow-up committee was headed by Tom Mennell, executive vice president of Texas Commerce Bank-Odessa. But Mennell hadn't called a meeting since last fall and later was transferred out of town.

The city's three-decade blueprint, which was funded by the Junior League of Odessa, was the first comprehensive report of its kind which addressed goals for the city between 1989 and the year 2020 for which the committee was named.

Dr. Lee Buice of Odessa College, another original member who will meet with Speegle, also expressed surprise about the developments surrounding the follow-up committee.

"Our concern now is finding a person with enough knowledge of the project. ... We're the ones right now who will have to pick up the ball and run with it."

Buice said a "tremendous amount" of work went into to producing the 50-page document of goals — some of which have been carried out.

For example, in one of its mission statements, the committee called for development of a plan that would link together all human service agencies for the benefit of the needy.

2020 FORESIGHT

According to Speegle, that has now been taken on as a project of the United Way of Odessa.

"But someone needs to check and see just what hasn't been done," said Speegle.

Several of 2020's goals involved the city Midland to one degree or another.

Among them were:

■ Stronger joint economic development activities between the two cities.

■ Formation of a single U.S. Census Metropolitan Statistical Area by 1992.

■ Support of Midland International Airport, including the Foreign Trade Zone and expansion as needed.

■ Improving regional transportation by extending Interstate 27 south from Lubbock to Interstate 20 and Interstate 10 routed along Farm-to-Market Road 1788 adjoining Midland International.

Narita Holmes, purchasing agent for Ector County and another original member, vowed that 2020 wouldn't fall through the cracks.

"I talked to several people on the committee and I understand he (Mennell) hadn't called a meeting in months," said Holmes. "Dr. Speegle and all of us are in agreement that something will be done ... We'll have this back together real soon."

Richards, Mattox say they'll work together

AUSTIN — Ann Richards and Jim Mattox made peace Wednesday after months of mudslinging, as Richards said she looks forward to debating the issues with Clayton Williams, the Republican nominee.

Richards, seeking to become only the second woman governor in the state's history, received 57.1 percent of the Democratic runoff vote Tuesday to beat Mattox, who received 42.9 percent of the 1.1 million votes cast after a bitter campaign that included accusations of drug use and ethical lapses.

"Our immediate task is to unify the party," Richards said Wednesday afternoon at a rally with Democratic legislators, including Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, on the Capitol grounds.

She said she thanked Mattox earlier Wednesday for his "very gracious and kind" concession statement Tuesday night. "I told him that we needed him in the fall, that we need his supporters and he agreed that he will be there to help," she said.

Williams' plan to run his campaign on the issues "really will be welcome," she said, as she looks forward to debating him on issues such as abortion, education, environmental protection, ethical standards, health care and economic development.

"I think the voters said very clearly yesterday that they are tired of negative campaigns and they are ready for a discussion of the real issues," she said.

"We're anticipating a very straight-forward, clean-cut, hard-fought campaign, and we also anticipate another great victory in November," she said.

Richards, a recovering alcoholic, said the election put to rest questions about drug use in her past. Mattox later agreed that voters did not seem to care as much about it as the news media and he did.

She also said she expects the State Democratic Executive Committee to

High in mid-70s expected

Staff Report

Rain may be more scarce today and tonight than the clouds.

Forecasters at the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport call for partly cloudy skies today, late-morning southerly winds at 15 to 25 mph and gusty, and a peak temperature in the mid-70s.

For tonight, increasing cloudiness and a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms are forecast. The low temperature tonight is to be in the upper 40s.

A 20 percent chance of thunderstorms is forecast for Friday, when the high temperature will return to the mid-70s.

Wednesday's peak temperature was 72 degrees, and the overnight low was 48 degrees. The record high for April 11 is 95 degrees in 1982, the record low for April 12 is 30 degrees in 1957.

STATE

A ridge of high pressure continued to dominate the weather across Texas Wednesday afternoon, bringing sunny skies state wide. Skies were partly to mostly cloudy over the coastal bend, lower coastal plains and northern Panhandle.

North to northeasterly winds blew across the eastern half of the state while south to southeast winds swept over much of west Texas. But in the Edwards Plateau and Hill Country, winds blew from the east.

NATION

Snow was scattered Wednesday from the northern Rockies across the upper Midwest and Great Lakes to New England, where up to a foot of snow accumulated.

Snowshowers also were scattered over north-central Wyoming, south-central Montana, west-central Minnesota, central Iowa, northern Illinois, eastern Wisconsin, much of Michigan, northern Indiana, from south-central Pennsylvania across eastern West Virginia, and over northeastern New York state.

Rain fell along the northern Pacific Coast, as well as over southeastern Virginia and northeastern North Carolina.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

WIPP critics speak out at hearings

SANTA FE (AP) — Critics of the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant asked the state Environmental Improvement Board Wednesday to consider taking a stand against transportation of nuclear waste in New Mexico.

"The board is in a unique position to send a message to the state and federal governments that it is time to realign our priorities," said Bill Boaz of Santa Fe, the 51st and final witness to testify at a Santa Fe hearing on designation of WIPP transportation routes. The hearings move to Albuquerque on Thursday.

Boaz said taking a stand against transporting nuclear waste in the state would send such a message.

Transuranic waste destined for WIPP should be left in place at 10 defense facilities nationwide, and no more radioactive wastes should be produced, he said.

Harry Rider of Santa Fe echoed the point.

"The problem is you have unsafe hazardous waste. It's unsafe wherever you put it," Rider said. "Why even move it? It's dangerous where it is. You don't solve the problem by moving it elsewhere."

Rider said New Mexico should "stop being a patsy for the federal government."

Louis Rose, attorney for the Environmental Improvement Division, said that if the EIB does not act, then the U.S. Department of Energy will select which interstate highways and other roads will be used.

Richard Miller of Santa Fe, a director of Concerned Citizens for Nuclear Safety, testified that the EIB has been asked to make an impossible decision: "To decide on safe routes for DOE to move an unsafe material."

Miller asked the board to consider five questions in designating routes:

- If transportation of nuclear waste is so safe, why is there so much opposition across the country?
- Why hasn't the DOE testified at the hearing?
- If the board were to decide that route designation is premature, what would happen?
- How would the board feel about taking a stand in support of protecting the public health and safety?
- Has there been any testimony in favor of waste transportation?

Santa Fe attorney John Jasper, the hearing officer, said he didn't recall receiving any testimony favoring waste transportation during the first three days of the hearing.

The hearing continues Thursday and Friday in Albuquerque and in Roswell next Monday and Tuesday. If necessary, the Albuquerque hearing will extend through Saturday and the Roswell session into Wednesday.

Four members of the five-member EIB were present Monday and Tuesday during the hearing in Santa Fe but none attended the final session Wednesday.

David Vanstrum of Santa Fe objected to holding the hearing without at least one board member being present.

Jasper replied that there is no requirement that board members be present for a public hearing, but the board must review the record of the hearing and make a decision based on the record.

WIPP is a DOE facility designed to store plutonium-contaminated, defense-related waste 2,150 feet below the surface in rooms carved out of salt beds 26 miles southeast of Carlsbad.

nominate Morris Overstreet, a Potter County court-at-law judge, for an unexpired term on the Court of Criminal Appeals after Overstreet narrowly lost a race for another seat on the court Tuesday.

Frank Maloney, an Austin criminal defense lawyer, won the Place 1 race with 50.1 percent of the vote as Overstreet, who is black, lost by 2,660 votes out of 894,416 cast in the race.

But party officials will place candidates on the general election ballot for the unexpired term of Judge M.P. "Rusty" Duncan, who died.

Republican Gov. Bill Clements recently named Louis Sturns, a Fort Worth district judge who also is black, as interim judge on the court.

At his own Capitol news conference Wednesday afternoon, Mattox volunteered to work on behalf of the entire Democratic ticket.

"I'm a very strong Democrat and a very loyal Democrat," he said.

"I did what I could do to win, and I didn't win. Losing is painful to me. It's painful to my family," he said, but he accepted the decision of voters.

"I offered to the people what I thought to be very strong aggressive leadership," he said. "The people chose not to accept that kind of leadership."

Richards rallied women to win nomination

By MICHAEL HOLMES

AUSTIN (AP) — In her waltz across Texas, Ann Richards rallied women to her "cause," enjoyed surprising strength in all regions and showed that Jim Mattox's drug charges may have backfired.

Swamping Mattox in the Democratic gubernatorial runoff, Ms. Richards not only got all of her primary voters back to the polls — she gained votes.

Ms. Richards received 63,014 more votes than she did a month ago while Mattox dropped off an almost identical number, 62,855. Ms. Richards' total rose from 576,112 on March 13 to 639,126 on Tuesday. Mattox plunged from 542,239 to 479,384 as total turnout dropped from 1.4 million to 1.1 million.

"She had an extraordinarily dedicated and motivated core of followers who stayed with her," said Ed Martin, executive director of the Texas Democratic Party.

"There were renewed efforts by her organizational people. A lot of her vote turnout ran ahead of last month, which is unusual for a runoff," said Jerry Polinard, a University of Texas-Pan American political scientist.

George Christian, Austin political consultant, said Ms. Richards appeared to do well with former Gov. Mark White's supporters, even though White had said he would "never" vote for her.

"I'm sure a lot of Mark White supporters didn't vote this time. But she was able to reach out and collect some voters who may have been for White or even Mattox in the first primary," Christian said.

An Analysis

Ms. Richards' strong feminist credentials certainly helped.

Throughout the campaign, and during her victory speech, Ms. Richards talked about her race as a movement. "You were giving your days and hours and money to a cause that we believe is a just cause," she told supporters.

Observed University of Houston political scientist Richard Murray: "The gender factor was huge."

Mattox blamed his first political loss since 1966 on the strength Ms. Richards enjoyed among women.

"I just think we were caught up in the phenomenon of women wanting to put a woman in the governor's office — didn't matter about the qualifications or experience or anything else," Mattox said.

Not surprisingly, Ms. Richards disagreed with him.

"Women don't vote for women just because they're women," she said. "They will support a woman if they feel roughly all things are equal. But I can't have a win like I did tonight just because women supported me. I had men and I had women and I had people of all walks of life."

Christian said 1990 may be the year of women in Texas politics.

GAP: DOE seeks to stop wells' early abandonment

(From 1A)

He said U.S. petroleum demand would increase by about one percent per year during the 1990s and that production should go down by about the same percent.

"Department of Energy projections show that we may hit 60 percent dependency by the year 2000, but that projection may be too conservative," warned the former Midlander.

McElwrath said a prime concern of DOE now was to halt the abandonment of oil wells.

"We need near-term research that can get into the field immediately and be used to keep marginal wells and fields open."

One bit of research he offered as an example was a soft plug that could be easily drilled out of oil wells and would replace present cement plugs that normally necessitate drilling new wells.

"When that technology is fully developed," he said, "it can have an immediate effect."

If current prices prevail, up to 70 percent of the wells in the U.S. could be plugged by the end of the decade, he said.

The Department of Energy is beginning the well-saving research immediately as part of the National Energy Strategy because the premature abandonment of oil wells is an issue that cannot wait, the former Midlander said.

McElwrath said the objectives of the program would be t› identify reservoirs with large re naining reserves that stood to be abandoned, then to develop the technology to keep them open.

"When we have the technology available, we will then get the knowledge immediately to operators in other producing regions with similar reservoirs," explained McElwrath.

He noted that some of the reservoirs to be studied would probably be in the Permian Basin.

"This is where we have some of the largest and most mature reservoirs. I would expect that of the top five reservoirs to be studied at least two would be in the Permian Basin," he said.

Both Bingaman and Domenici stated that a key to increasing U.S. domestic production was increasing exploration and development activity, but others said that a critical shortage of qualified oil field workers could severely restrict an increase in activity.

"We need more activity," said Bill LeMay, commissioner of the New Mexico Oil Conservation Commission, "but we just don't have the personnel to handle it."

LeMay said the industry had been severely hurt by the flight of qualified workers to other fields and the early retirement of seasoned veterans in the industry.

BALTIC: U.S. policy walks fine line

with force, Fitzwater said.

Ms. Rikken said Bush was "very, very worried about what happened in Hungary" and that "he kept bringing this up during the meeting."

She said, "Our job is to convince him that letting the Baltic states go could be the best thing that would happen to the Soviet Union."

Fitzwater said, "We believe that our present position is the correct one and the president did not indicate that we were willing to change our position."

The meeting fell one month after Lithuania's March 11 declaration of independence.

Since then, the administration has been walking a narrow diplomatic line, endorsing Lithuania's aspirations for self-determination but refusing to recognize the new government.

While emphasizing that the United States never recognized the Soviet takeover of the Baltic states, the administration argues that Lithuania does not control its own territory.

Lithuania's determination to secede has posed a major challenge to Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, who is struggling on other fronts to carry out his programs of economic and political reforms, known as perestroika, and openness, known as glasnost.

While admonishing Moscow not to use force in Lithuania, Bush credits Gorbachev as a driving force behind the democratic reforms in Eastern Europe and changes within the Soviet Union.

Fitzwater said Bush, in meeting with the Baltic-Americans, "pointed out in forceful terms that the United States approaches this problem with many ramifications to consider.

"He did say that we support glasnost and perestroika," Fitzwater said. "He pointed out that we have had these dramatic changes in Hungary, Czechoslovakia and Poland. And, indeed, we have the atmosphere whereby Lithuania could consider its future in a different light because of glasnost and perestroika."

Fitzwater said Bush shared the concerns of the Baltic-Americans and reiterated his support for the right of the Baltic states to self-determination.

Health insurance study shows coverage lacking

WASHINGTON (AP) — One in eight Americans has no health insurance, the Census Bureau reported Wednesday.

The study concluded that 26.5 percent of Hispanic Americans weren't covered in 1988, while the figure was 20.2 percent for blacks and 11.7 percent for whites.

The report comes as the Senate is considering a proposal to assure that all Americans have private or public health coverage.

The Census estimate of 31.5 million people, or 13 percent of all Americans, without health coverage is similar to estimates from the U.S. Bipartisan Commission on Comprehensive Health Care.

The plan includes a potential $65 billion annual price tag. In addition to people without any insurance coverage, the commission estimated that as many as 20 million have what it calls inadequate health coverage.

The age group least likely to have insurance protection was 16 to 24, with 21.9 percent lacking coverage. About 16.2 percent of those 25 to 34 were uninsured and 15.3 percent of people under 16 lacked coverage.

In the 35 to 44 bracket, 11.2 percent of people don't have insurance, while the rates are 10.5 percent for those 45 to 54 and 9.3 percent in the 55 to 64 group.

Only 0.3 percent of people over 65 lack coverage because of the federal Medicare program.

The new Census figures are based on a surveys of three groups of households that were interviewed periodically in the bureau's Survey of Income and Program Participation.

The three groups included from 11,500, to 13,400 households with as many as 36,500 people interviewed in the various groups. The margin of error for a sample that size would be 1 percentage point or less.

Horse 'scents' trap suspects

SACHSE, Texas (AP) — Two accused horse thieves landed in the pokey after running afoul of a lawman whose nose knows manure — he can tell horse from the cow variety.

Police Cpl. Steven Craighead was on patrol early Tuesday in this Dallas suburb when he spotted a pickup truck pulling a new trailer similar to one a friend had bought Friday.

After stopping the vehicle for not having a license plate, one of the things that didn't make sense to Craighead was the scents.

The trailer was carrying three horses, but it had cattle manure in it, says Craighead. He also knew that his friend had hauled cattle in his new trailer.

"The driver of the trailer told a lot of stories that didn't jibe, and our dispatcher was able to confirm that the truck hauling the trailer was stolen out of Dallas," Craighhead said.

A 20-year-old Dallas man and a 19-year-old Garland woman were in jail Wednesday awaiting arraignment on burglary and theft charges.

Suspect in fire at social club enters innocent plea in court

NEW YORK (AP) — A man charged in an illegal nightspot fire that killed 87 people pleaded innocent Wednesday to 174 counts of murder and other charges.

Julio Gonzalez, 36, was guarded by four armed court officers as he was arraigned before Judge Burton R. Roberts in trial-level state Supreme Court.

Gonzalez, who spoke to the court through a Spanish translator, mumbled "no culpable" when asked how he pleaded on the charges.

The judge told attorneys that under state law, Gonzalez could serve only a single 25 years-to-life sentence even if convicted on all charges.

Significant global ozone increase expected

NEW YORK (AP) — Average global levels of the air pollutant ozone may increase 21 percent to 50 percent by the year 2020, making local efforts to control the pollution harder, a study suggests.

Local controls might have to be more stringent if the projected increase takes place, because local ozone readings reflect this background level as well as local pollution, said study co-author Adrian Hough.

About 100 areas in the United States fail to meet federal standards for ozone levels, including essentially all major cities, according to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

But the projected global increase would have only a minor impact on American cities because local pollution is the main cause of their ozone troubles, said scientist Brian Ridley of the National Center for Atmospheric Research in Boulder, Colo.

He also said that such projections should be considered uncertain.

Ozone is a form of oxygen that plays a Jekyll-and-Hyde role in the environment. At high altitudes in the atmosphere it shields Earth from solar rays that can promote skin cancer. But near the Earth's surface it is a pollutant that irritates sensitive lung tissues and harms crops.

At ground level, ozone is produced from the combination of nitrogen oxides and hydrocarbons that come from automobile exhaust and industrial sources.

Hough and Richard Derwent present results of a computer simulation they performed at Harwell Laboratory in Didcot, England, in Thursday's issue of the British journal Nature.

The increase of 21 percent or more by the year 2020 dealt with average concentrations at the Earth's surface, over land only, Hough said in an interview.

Another calculation focused on latitudes typical of the central United States. It found a rise in annual averages from about 30 parts per billion today to perhaps 35 parts or 45 parts per billion in the year 2020, Hough said.

Under EPA criteria, an area fails to comply with the ozone standard if it exceeds 120 parts per billion for more than an average of once a year over a three-year period.

New AIDS drug may reach fetuses

NEW YORK (AP) — Monkeys injected with an experimental AIDS drug produced newborns that carried the drug in their bloodstreams, suggesting the substance might keep AIDS-infected mothers from infecting their babies, a study says.

The drug reached the fetuses about as easily as a human mother's natural proteins do as they build up disease resistance within babies, researchers said.

"Our hope is that this special property of the molecule will make it particularly useful" in preventing perinatal AIDS virus infection, said study co-author Daniel Capon of Genentech Inc. of South San Francisco.

The drug, called a CD4 immunoadhesin, has shown promise against the AIDS virus in the test tube and entered early human studies, but its effectiveness in people is not yet known.

The standard AIDS drug AZT also can reach fetuses, crossing the placenta "quite well," said James Baisley of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases.

Researchers are testing AZT's safety in pregnant women and plan to test whether it can block perinatal transmission.

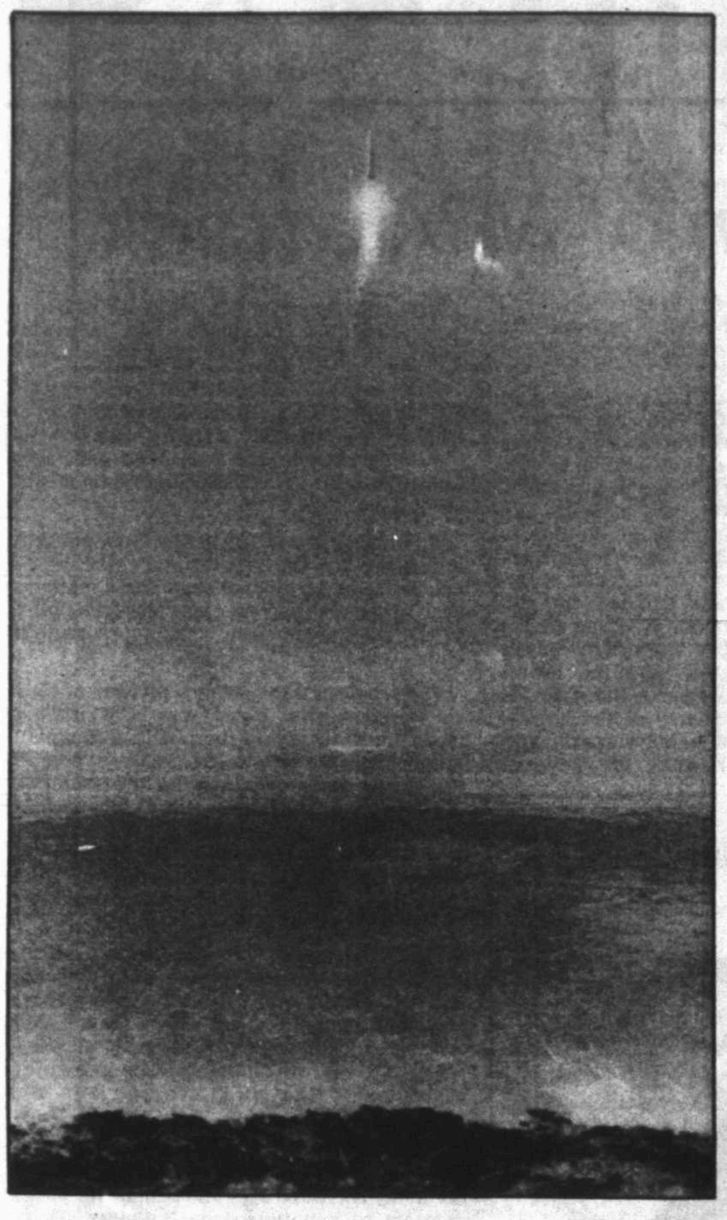
Research satellites replace warheads on Atlas



AP Laserphoto

Just seconds after liftoff, an Atlas E rocket carries scientific satellites into orbit from Space Launch Complex 3 on Vandenberg Air Force Base in California. Wednesday's mission is part of the Air Force's Space Test Program, a three-year research and development effort aimed at conducting scientific experiments in space.

VANDENBERG AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — A 29-year-old Atlas rocket that once was armed with nuclear warheads thundered into space Wednesday, carrying three small research satellites into a polar orbit.

"It took off quickly and was gone in an instant," said Air Force spokesman Maj. Tom Worsdale. "Everyone was pleased with the smoothness of the operation and the success of the launch."

The 91-foot-tall Atlas-E, topped by a 5-foot-tall Scout-Altair upper stage booster, blasted off the pad at Space Launch Complex 3 at 8 a.m. PDT, emerging from a low fog bank over this sprawling coastal military base 140 miles northwest of Los Angeles.

The liquid-fueled Atlas, similar to the rocket that lifted John Glenn to orbit Earth in 1962, flew south over the Pacific. Fifteen minutes after liftoff, the solid fuel upper stage separated from the payload, delivering the three satellites into a polar orbit 460 miles above Earth, Worsdale said.

The mission cost $22 million, said Ed Parsons, chief spokesman for the Air Force's Space Systems Division in Los Angeles.

One satellite will test new computer memory circuits and measure Earth's magnetic field to help make navigation charts used by ships and planes.

'It took off quickly and was gone in an instant. Everyone was pleased with the smoothness of the operation and the success of the launch.'

— Maj. Tom Worsdale, Air Force Spokesman

The others will test a new communications device and study phenomena in Earth's upper atmosphere that interfere with space-to-ground radio communications, said Capt. Mark Goodman, project manager.

The Atlas was built in 1961 by General Dynamics and once served as a nuclear warhead-tipped intercontinental ballistic missile at Forbes Air Force Base in Kansas. It was refurbished in 1987 for use as a launch vehicle.

The Air Force originally planned to launch the three satellites on a Scout rocket, but none was available. Atlas-E rockets normally launch larger payloads, such as weather satellites. The Atlas launched Wednesday had what the Air Force described only as "slightly degraded performance" that prevented it from lofting a heavier payload.

The uppermost satellite, named Polar Orbiting Geomagnetic Survey, contains a magnetometer to measure the strength of the Earth's magnetic field at various locations.

The data will be used to help draw new Defense Mapping Agency geomagnetic charts. Many ships and aircraft navigate using computerized versions of the charts, which are updated every five years as the magnetic field changes, Goodman said.

The satellite also contains the Solid State Recorder experiment, meant to demonstrate the use of high-speed integrated circuit designs as computer memory devices in space, and to make sure they can withstand the radiation in space, Parsons said.

The second satellite, named TEX, or Transceiver Experiment, will bounce radio signals of different power levels off the ionosphere, the part of Earth's upper atmosphere containing irregularities that can disrupt high-frequency radio communications.

The third satellite, the Selective Communications Experiment, will conduct similar studies by bouncing radio signals of varying frequencies off the ionosphere. The Air Force hopes to learn what power and frequency levels can be used to overcome disruption of radio communications.

Police, fire pay needs council OK

Following the release of a study earlier this week that showed pay for police and fire personnel in Midland and Odessa slightly below average for cities of this size in Texas, there's ample justification for Midland City Council to begin bringing those salaries up.

We agree with City Councilman Bill Williams' contention that "we expect them to perform a little bit better than average." Thus, the city must be willing to pay better than average salaries.

The study, performed by a City of Midland panel studying city salaries, compared figures for Midland fire and police personnel with their counterparts in Lubbock, Odessa, Amarillo, Abilene and Richardson. It found that salaries in both the Midland police and fire departments were slightly below average, while Richardson salaries typically were the highest of the cities surveyed and well above average.

It would be an entirely different matter if Midland's residents didn't expect their policemen and firemen to meet a certain level of professionalism and performance. But the residents do demand that exceptional level of performance and, thus, must be willing to pay above-average salaries to attract and keep qualified public servants.

Salaries in the two departments have been a matter of controversy since last summer when some personnel in the departments clashed with city officials over proposed increases. The city placed two referenda on the November general election ballot proposing salary levels which would have meant in excess of 10 percent increases for some policemen and firemen.

Voters soundly defeated the proposed referendums.

Although we opposed those proposed increases because of the impact they would have had on the city budget, it was obvious even at that point that fire and police salaries needed to be raised.

As longtime supporters of the law enforcement community and strong supporters of the fire and emergency service personnel, we recognized the need to show support for those departments and to support the city policy of hiring the best possible candidates for those services. But we also recognized the budget difficulties faced by the city officials.

Now it's obvious that the city should act to bring up the level of salaries in the departments.

Even with approval by the city salary panel, recommendations made to raise personnel in the two departments would not go before the City Council prior to May and, if approved, would not take effect until the 1990-91 fiscal year begins next October.

The council has ample time in which to consider the salary panel's recommendations and take action.

Much is demanded of Midland's police and fire personnel, and they deserve to be paid a salaries commensurate with those demands. We urge the city to work diligently to make the salaries in the two departments reflect the importance Midland residents attach to those essential personnel.

Supermarket's exit a dangerous place

I'm writing in an effort to inform Midlanders and hopefully city planners of a potentially dangerous traffic situation that exists at the Skaggs-Alpha Beta shopping center. The problem is the poor design of the southernmost exit onto Midkiff Road. Northbound vehicles on Midkiff turning east into the shopping center parking lot obstruct the southward view of westbound exiting autos from rapidly moving traffic traveling north in the center lane on Midkiff.

In just the period of a few months driving to my residence north of the shopping center I have witnessed numerous near-accidents at this junction. While these near-misses are often due to the impatience of West Texas drivers, the fundamental problem is the inadequate design of the parking lot.

Now with the building of a new high-volume restaurant on the west side of north Midkiff, traffic will undoubtedly increase and visibility will decrease, resulting in increased potential for a serious accident.

A short-term solution would be to make the current two-way shopping exit into a one-way exit or entrance. I hope this problem will be resolved soon and area drivers will be more attentive to the situation. In the meantime I offer this advice: Use turn signals and slow down.

The few seconds you might save by reckless, discourteous driving will surely all be spent waiting on the ambulance after the accident.

Secession suitable?

In view of the many polls which indicate that a preponderance (87 percent in one poll) of U.S. citizens believe ownership of firearms should be restricted, our president took the Russians to task for their proposal to disarm the Lithuanians.

I am wondering why the press has not been critical of one representing a constituent to stray so far afield.

Additionally, and of far greater import, is the Washington view that those Russian states that do not subscribe to the central government's policies have a right to secede from the union.

This is a significant change from the views of Washington politicians of the 1860's, but perhaps a welcome one. Now is an opportune time for those of us in Texas (or any other state) who do not subscribe to the profligate waste, redistribution of wealth to the entire world, and unreasonable constraints imposed on us by the federal government to correct the gross injustices of 1864.

Biden latest victim of NRA attack

WASHINGTON — The National Rifle Association is the master of the cheap shot. It attacks its enemies with a vengeance, but not necessarily with all the facts.

The latest victim is Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del. As chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, his name appears on the top of the mammoth Senate anti-crime bill — a bill that parrots President Bush's crime-fighting plan and responds to increasing public fear of violence in the streets.

Anderson

The bill includes provisions to ban nine types of assault weapons, which supporters think have no sporting or recreational use. Assault weapons are the arms of choice for snipers, drug peddlers and assorted thugs. And the NRA believes Congress has no business restricting the sale of those guns.

Biden has not been a traditional enemy of the NRA. He has toed the NRA line in many cases, supporting the rights of law-abiding gun owners. He even voted against a bill to impose a seven-day waiting period on gun purchases.

But that's old news for the NRA. The gun lobby has now targeted him as Public Enemy No. 1 on the assault weapon ban. A letter from the NRA to its members accuses Biden of trying to slip an "underhanded gun ban" through Congress. It says the senator is taking advantage of the wave of public support for Bush's anti-crime package. In perhaps the lowest blow of all, the NRA compares Biden to Michael Dukakis, an archenemy of the NRA.

"Sen. Biden is camouflaging Dukakis' gun ban ideas under the rhetoric of President Bush's popular crime-fighting ideas, so he can push through a federal gun ban before you and I can stop him," the NRA letter says.

Phrases like "before you and I can stop him" are vintage NRA hysteria. The group like to whip its members into a frenzy with the fear that Congress will take away their guns overnight without benefit of the democratic process.

Another recent victim of the NRA publicity mill is Rep. Fortney "Pete" Stark, D-Calif. He had the temerity to challenge a $4.6 million-a-year Army program that provides free bullets to civilian marksmen in Army-sponsored gun clubs.

The program is the Army's Division of Civilian Marksmanship. It sponsors 2,000 rifle and pistol clubs, supplying them with free ammunition. The purpose is to create a pool of marksmen who are suitable for the military if they choose to join. Many of the clubs are also affiliated with the NRA, and Stark questioned whether the Army should be so cozy with the gun lobby. The General Accounting Office looked into the program and pronounced it to be of "limited value" to the military.

The NRA benefits from the Army-sponsored gun clubs because they create an up-and-coming pool of gun enthusiasts. So, when Stark questioned the expense, the NRA came to its defense in a full-page newspaper ad accusing Stark of being inflammatory. The gun clubs, according to the NRA, are patriotic and honorable.

But are they a cost-effective way for the taxpayers to spend their money? Stark said the Army recruited only 200 people out of the program to join the Army last year. That's $23,000 per recruit. But the NRA claimed the number of recruits from the gun clubs was 3,000.

Who is right? The House Armed Services Committee went straight to the Army and asked for the number. It was 200.

Some people throw out water with the baby

Some people who believe that everyone should have babies tend to throw out the bathwater as soon as the baby is born.

Buchwald

"Who takes care of him?"

"Don't worry. He belongs to all of us."

"The baby is 1 year old. He needs some milk."

"That's not my department. I was only concerned with making sure he was born."

"The boy is 6 years old. He's awfully thin and not getting much nourishment. Would you send someone over with food?"

"How did you get this number? Let me tell you something. I don't have any use for welfare cheats. If he's able-bodied, he can go out and get a job in McDonald's."

"He's 9 now and he seems slightly backward in school. The doctor said it was lack of a balanced diet after he was born. Do you have any idea how that happened?"

"There is just so much I can do. Once a baby has his own latchkey, it's everybody for himself."

"I'm calling to tell you that there was an altercation at school. The child you sponsored picked up a knife and tried to stab his teacher. He needs some immediate psychiatric treatment before he goes off the deep end forever."

"I can't afford psychiatric treatment. The trouble with kids today is that they are coddled by society. Give him a taste of a hard knocks' school and he'll straighten out."

"The boy has just turned 16 and he's joined a gang. The police believe he is into dope. If you give us $2,000, we can get him out of the neighborhood."

"That's ridiculous. Why should I bail out this child?"

"We assumed that since you campaigned so hard for his birth, you might help him in his teen-age years."

"You had no right to think any such thing. He was a problem kid to start with. I saw it on his face in the hospital."

"He's 20 now. You probably read about him in the newspapers. The doctor who interviewed him said that he didn't have a chance. From the day he was born the boy felt that no one cared about him, and all he was trying to do was get even."

"You're not going to blame me for what that boy did. I haven't seen him since he was in the nursery."

"You fought so hard for him to see the light of day."

"I fight to bring a lot of children into the world — I couldn't take care of all of them even if I wanted to. That's the government's job."

"He got 15 years in prison. He still has no idea why he did it."

"What am I supposed to do?"

"Not too much. But it would be nice if you had a plan for a few of these children."

"I think you've got the wrong number. I'm with the 'Right to Life' not 'Right to Live.'"

Proposition to affect political atmosphere

LOS ANGELES — On June 5, a political era will be punctuated, perhaps with a period, perhaps just with a comma. The barometric vote, measuring the political climate, concerns not candidates but a proposition.

Will

Proposition III would ease the strict spending limits imposed on California in 1979 under the so-called Gann limit. It would allow a doubling of the gasoline tax from 9 to 18 cents a gallon, over five years.

California's governorship, the second-most glittering prize in American politics, is particularly important this time because of redistricting: In 1992, California — probably with 52 seats, an increase of seven — will elect almost one-eighth of the House of Representatives. So, intense interest attaches to the Democratic primary, from which former San Francisco Mayor Dianne Feinstein or California Attorney General John Van de Kamp will emerge to oppose Republican Sen. Pete Wilson.

But the fate of Proposition III will reveal the political atmosphere that will govern whoever is elected governor in November.

Feinstein has sprinted from far behind to a large lead largely on the strength of a commercial proclaiming her "the only Democrat for governor for the death penalty." In 1968, on the eve of the election in which the combined Nixon and George Wallace vote was 56.9 percent, Gallup polled on this question: "Is there any area around here — that is, within a mile — where you would be afraid to walk at night." The affirmative was: Nationally, 35 percent. Men, 19 percent; women, 50 percent.

Some Democrats saw the dynamite: Half of America's husbands had frightened wives. But most liberals regarded concern about crime as sublimated racism. Feinstein is a Democrat coming to terms with the fact that frightened voters vote their fears.

The most interesting convergence by the candidates is that all three favor Proposition III. Furthermore, even Gov. George Deukmejian, whose frugality is a byword, has broken the Wall Street Journal's conservative heart by endorsing Proposition III.

Why? California's gasoline tax has been unchanged during a decade in which 47 states raised theirs, some several times. In the next 25 years the number of California vehicles will increase 35 percent, but miles traveled will increase 68 percent, partly because housing costs (the median price is about $200,000) force young couples to live far from jobs. In booming, affluent Orange County, only two miles of new freeways were built in the 1980s. What else is booming? The cellular phone business for commuters gridlocked in congestion.

California ranks 49th or 50th in per-capita spending on highways (Los Angeles alone needs $1 billion for repairs) and that is just one measure of the infrastructure deficit. California is 50th in per-capita income spent on schools. In this decade, California's population will surge at least 4.4 million (approximately Maryland's present population). In the last half of the 1980s, elementary and secondary school enrollments increased 500,000; by 1995, 700,000 more students (more people than live in Memphis) will cost the state $1 billion each year. California schools already have the nation's highest average class size. Now the state needs 26,000 new classrooms in this decade.

San Diego must find $1.5 billion for sewage-treatment capacity to stop raw-sewage spills. San Jose's sewage capacity is so strained that the city government urged residents not to flush their toilets all at the same time during the Super Bowl halftime. California would have to spend $5.6 billion just to bring sewage treatment up to federal health standards.

California has shimmered in the West as America's cornucopia, a land of overflowing abundance. But suddenly scarcity is in the air, including a scarcity of clean air and of another fundamental: After four consecutive disappointing rain and snow seasons, and with Arizona exercising rights to additional Colorado River water, Californians face water rationing.

California's 1990 voting comes after 24 years of conservative governance — four Reagan-Deukmejian terms, and two Jerry Brown terms which were, in their quirky way, just as conservative regarding state spending. Conservatism swept eastward out of California, particularly from the Los Angeles-San Diego megalopolis. California conservatism set the tone of conservatism nationally with the passage in June, 1978, of Proposition 13, the property-tax-cutting measure that was followed a year later by the spending limits that Proposition III would ease.

NATION IN BRIEF

U.S., Czechs to sign accord

WASHINGTON (HNS) — A top Commerce Department official predicted Wednesday that U.S. trade with Czechoslovakia could double during the next two years as a result of a landmark trade accord to be signed here Thursday.

The accord to be signed by U.S. Trade Representative Carla Hills and Czechoslovakian Foreign Trade Minister Andrej Barcak is the first of its kind between the United States and an Eastern European country since the region's Communist regimes began to crumble last fall. An earlier accord with Poland was confined to the realm of investment.

The pact will extend America's "Most Favored Nation" trading status to Czechoslovakia. That status will eliminate tariffs imposed on Czechoslovakian imports under provisions of the Jackson-Vanik provisions of the 1974 trade act.

Thomas Duesterberg, assistant secretary of commerce for international economic policy, said he expected "overall trade with Czechoslovakia to double over the next two years" as a result of the accord.

Entities join census suit

NEW YORK (AP) — New York City and state sued the federal government on Thursday in an effort to boost an expected undercount of minorities in the 1990 census, which they claim uses "biased and unconstitutional guidelines."

The legal action was joined by the cities of Chicago, Los Angeles and Houston; Dade County, Fla.; the State of California; the U.S. Conference of Mayors; the League of Cities; the NAACP and the League of United Latin American Citizens..

Mayor David Dinkins, calling the undercount of urban minorities "a national disgrace," said that problem and other factors would mean "cities across the country will once again lose hundreds of millions of dollars in federal aid and dozens of seats in Congress."

Turkey Point shut down

MIAMI (AP) — Leaking hydrogen gas fueled a fire and explosion that shut down an oil-fired generator at the troubled Turkey Point power plant complex Wednesday, utility officials said. No one was injured.

Two nuclear power plants and another oil-fired plant at Turkey Point were not affected, spokesmen said. The fire was confined to an enclosure housing an exciter, a small auxiliary generator.

Plant operators took the Unit 2 generator off line when they detected a loss of hydrogen pressure, and the fire was discovered in the exciter about 15 minutes later, said Florida Power & Light Co. spokesman Gary Mehalik.

GOP gets word from 'front'

■ At a Midland luncheon Wednesday, Modesta Williams says she'll hit the campaign trail on her own to campaign for her gubernatorial candidate-husband, Clayton Williams.

By Brenda Masengill
Staff Writer

After months of handshaking, a callous is beginning to form on the right hand of potential Texas first lady Modesta Williams.

Still, her campaign scars don't yet match that of husband Clayton, whose own callous wraps around the right thumb, she said.

Mrs. Williams, who was the guest speaker Wednesday at a meeting of the Midland Republican Women's Club, told the Reporter-Telegram, if nothing else, the gubernatorial campaign has taught her "how big Texas is. I didn't know (campaigning) was this stressful."

Nonetheless, Mrs. Williams said she has enjoyed "getting to renew old acquaintances and friendships" as she travels the state for her husband. "I'll be traveling quite a bit more on my own" now that the showdown between her husband and Democratic nominee Ann Richards is set.

Joining Mrs. Williams as a guest speaker at Ranchland Hills Country Club was Catherine Mosbacher, whose husband Rob is the Republican candidate for lieutenant governor.

Local candidates for the Midland School Board — Adela Marmolejo, Clarence "Putty" Zachery, Jim Buitla and Jackie Hamilton — and two Midland City Council hopefuls — Mary Kniffen and Tom Johnston — also gave short remarks before a large turnout of members and other guests.

Beverly Shilling/Reporter-Telegram

Houston attorney Catherine Mosbacher addressed Midland County Republican Women on behalf of her husband, lieutenant governor candidate Rob Mosbacher.

Mrs. Williams told the audience that her husband has "traveled thousands and thousands of miles ... listening and learning about what Texas wants, about what Texas needs." Most people he has found, said Mrs. Williams, are "optimistic about the future of Texas."

Williams has become a successful businessman because of his "motivation and strong leadership" traits, she said.

Once he has set his goals, "he surrounds himself with the most knowledgeable people he can find" and "this is the way he will run the governorship," she said.

After the oil bust, "we found ourselves $500 million in debt. We were so determined to honor our committment" to lenders and employees.

"We paid back every bit of that debt," she noted, adding that she was not bragging, but rather offering an insight into the candidate who she described as "honest and dedicated."

One of the most important issues facing Texas is the war on drugs, Mrs. Williams said, reminding the audience that she and her husband have experienced the pain of drug use in their family. Referring to her son, now 19, Mrs. Williams told those gathered that the teenager "is all right now; he's working himself back into the mainstream," but "it was devastating."

The candidate has developed a 25-point plan to combat the war on drugs that includes stronger punishments, but also expanded treatment opportunities.

Another key issue, she said, is education. Williams is determined to turn educational systems "back to the local level."

Mrs. Mosbacher, a Houston attorney, told audience members that "Texans are looking for new leadership, new ideas."

Mosbacher's father, Robert Sr., serves as U.S. Commerce secretary. However, her husband's name is not as well known in Texas as his opponent, state Comptroller Bob Bullock, Mrs. Mosbacher said.

Nonetheless, "it's going to be another Republican victory" in November, she said, because "we are going to have such a strong ticket."

Beverly Shilling/Reporter-Telegram

Modesta Williams was both a speaker and attentive listener during Wednesday's luncheon at Ranchland Hills Country Club.

$28 million awarded local heart surgeon

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — Attorneys for a San Antonio television station say they likely will appeal a jury's $28 million libel award to a heart surgeon now living in Midland who claimed his medical practice was ruined by stories that he performed unnecessary surgery.

Dr. Sudhir Srivastava, formerly of San Antonio, filed the libel suit against KENS-TV and Harte-Hanks Television in 1985 after the station broadcast a series of reports alleging a ring of physicians performed unnecessary surgery on elderly patients for profit.

"We're elated," Srivastava, surrounded by his wife and two children, said after the verdict Tuesday. "Finally justice came through."

Srivastava operates his Midland practice at 2300 W. Michigan Ave.

In the series, KENS-TV journalist Ed Gonzalez reported Srivastava lost his privileges to practice at Santa Rosa Hospital and the Baptist Memorial Hospital System amid claims of unnecessary surgery.

The doctor contended the series ruined his San Antonio practice. His malpractice insurance skyrocketed and he was forced to move to Midland, where he now practices at a loss, said lawyer James Branton, who represented Srivastava.

Eleven jurors — one more than needed to validate the decision in civil court — voted to award the doctor $28 million after hearing two weeks of evidence and deliberating six hours.

Afterward, the doctor shook hands with each juror, and forewoman Deborah G. Bamberger gave him a congratulatory hug.

"They saw the truth," Srivastava said. "They saw all the evidence that was there and the facts convinced them."

KENS-TV lawyer Mark Cannan said an appeal is likely.

"Adverse jury verdicts against the media are not uncommon," Cannan said. "But this is just round one."

Dallas lawyer Chip Babcock, who represents the Dallas Times Herald and KDFW-TV in Dallas, said the verdict is one of the big-

'Beer runs' no fun

■ Midland convenience store clerks are having to cope with a new twist on the old shoplifting game.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Two young men enter a convenience store late on a Saturday night and ask the clerk for a pack of cigarettes. She looks up from her search and sees the men bolting out the door, each with a 12-pack of beer under his arm.

Before she has time to react, they're gone.

She has just witnessed a typical "beer run," — a relatively new, but increasingly common local phenomenon.

Lt. Earl Luckey of the Midland Police Department said he began seeing a sharp rise in convenience store beer thefts about two years ago.

Beer runs seem to be a new twist on the old shoplifting game. A case of beer is too large for a youngster to discreetly slip under his jacket, so the grab-and-run technique works, Luckey said.

Although beer is the most popular item to take, other small items also are snatched, area convenience store managers said.

"They take cigarettes and a general variety of things," said a manager who asked not to be identified.

Bidding success takes time, chamber told

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

The Midland Procurement Assistance Center is gradually making itself known, but it could be a couple of years before its true impact is felt.

MPAC Director Jim Slaton cautioned directors of the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, which founded the project as a major diversification effort, that it could take two to three years for area businesses to see real success from bidding for government contracts — creating new jobs and expanding the Permian Basin economic base.

Slaton and Joe Arredondo have received most of the materials from the Department of Defense and have been calling on local businesses, explaining MPAC and how it works, and how it could help them. He noted MPAC is currently working with 38 clients.

A special guest at the meeting was Angelina Gilbert Davis, director of the Neighborhood Housing Services, who was seeking support of the program and to drum up participation for an April 28 neighborhood meeting at De Zavala Elementary. A board will be named at the meeting to help decide on loans and set interest rates for participants.

The program offers low interest home purchase or home improvement loans and, according to City Councilman John Castro, has the

Ex-First City executive faces 5-year sentence, $5,000 fine

Jeffrey Paul Longbotham, former vice president for commercial loans for First City, Texas in Midland, pleaded guilty in federal court on Wednesday to misapplying bank funds by making a loan to a bank customer and then getting a 100 percent kickback.

Longbotham, 30, had made the $5,000 loan to Jonathan Kinnison in February 1987 and then received "back all of the loan proceeds," according to the federal complaint against him.

Latest Armey cause to end farm subsidies

By Bill Modisett
Staff Writer

U.S. Rep. Dick Armey, whose Dallas-based Institute for Policy Innovation actively promotes conservative alternatives to entrenched Washington approaches to problems, says the governmental decision-making process is being undermined by the distortion of "facts."

"If you destroy your basis for information, you do more harm that you can any other way," said the congressman whose landmark bill in the 100th Congress shaped the closing of military bases around the nation and garnered the support of conservatives and liberals alike. Armey spoke at a private luncheon Wednesday at the Midland Petroleum Club.

Now Armey has a new cause. He says most agricultural subsidies should be abolished, a move which would mark a significant change in the nation's agricultural policy.

While agribusiness interests have lined up against Armey's proposal, he supports it by citing Iowa where corn subsidies have virtually eliminated the time-proven method of rotating crops. Single-crop planting has resulted in farmers relying more heavily on chemical fertilizers, a practice which has brought out the environmental concerns, he said.

Agricultural policy today is not being totally determined by producers, but to an extent by consumers. It's also being determined by some individuals whose influence is highly questionable, the congresman contended.

In discussion of a farm bill several months ago, actresses Sissy Spacek, Jane Fonda and Sally Field came to Washington, D.C., to talk about farm policy. They ended up testifying on the farm bill before Congress.

"I was so impressed," grimaced the congressman, "that I recommended we have Christopher Reeve come in to testify on aerodynamics." Reeve portrayed "Superman" in a series of movies.

Asserting that both a preferential capital gains tax and a rollback of the Social Security tax would create jobs and stimulate additional tax revenues, Armey said that his primary purpose in office is to fulfill a campaign promise — to provide a more rational government. That government, he said, would mean less interference in the businesses and daily lives of Americans.

"I'm building a database because you can't trust those varmints in Washington," Armey said. Without adherence to factual data in the best interests of the American people, such politicians are not making the future brighter for the next generation.

Julius Durham Sr.

Funeral services for Julius Durham Sr. of Midland are set for 2 p.m. today in the Macedonia Baptist Church.

Burial will follow in the Fairview Cemetery under the direction of Thomas Funeral Home.

Durham died Sunday in Big Spring following a lengthy illness. He was preceded in death in 1983 by his wife, Lillie.

Durham was born May 20, 1918, in Ennis. He lived in Midland for 40 years. He was a veteran of World War II.

He is survived by five daughters, Judy Massingill, Linda Williams and Lilly Rose Durham, all of Midland, Sharon Hill of Inglewood, Calif., and Gladys Edwards of Los Angeles; two sons, Julius Durham Jr. and Carl Durham, both of Midland; one sister, Hattie Roberts of Sacremento, Calif.; 14 grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren.

Russell Fidler

Russell Fidler of Midland died Monday at a local hospital.

He was born May 29, 1962, in Houston, where he grew up and worked with his father in the family business, Fidler Sales & Service. He was in the process of moving the business to the Midland area.

Survivors include his wife, Sara Fidler of Midland; a son, Charles E. Fidler of Houston; his parents Charles E. Fidler of Houston, and Barbara J. Marlin of Webster; three sisters, Pamela Jose Fidler and Tina Terise Fidler, both of Houston, and Holly Ann Fidler of Phoenix, Ariz.; and a grandfather, Russell Quinn Fidler of Houston.

Survivors include: two daughters, Joanne Breed of Monahans and Connie Pecore of Texas; one son, John Pelletier of Texas; one brother, Harry Hill of Texas; four sisters, Floye Shipley of Texas, Lorene Cunningham of Texas, Hazel Colt of Las Vegas and Luanne Janes of Las Vegas; and four grandchildren.

Former bank tellers sentenced

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Two former bank tellers in Midland and Odessa wept Tuesday at their sentencing even though U.S. District Court Chief Judge Lucius D. Bunton gave both women probation.

The judge admonished them for violating the trust of the banks by embezzling money in 1989.

Bunton sentenced Sheri Lynn Allison, 23, of Odessa and Holly Jeanne Kinney, 28, of Midland each to probation for five years; ordered them to serve not more than 90 days in the Alternative House II, an Odessa halfway house designed for both rehabilitation and punishment, and to work 50 hours in community service.

In mid-March, Mrs. Allison pleaded guilty to misapplying $7,920 from Texas Commerce Bank of Odessa, and Mrs. Kinney pleaded guilty to misapplying $6,000 from NCNB Texas National Bank of Midland.

Additionally, Bunton ordered Mrs. Kinney to make restitution in monthly installments to the Midland bank. Mrs. Allison already has paid restitution to TCB-Odessa.

Under federal sentencing guidelines, the judge could have sentenced each woman up to eight months in prison.

"I know I did wrong," said Mrs. Allison, who had asked the judge for probation so that she could be with her two daughters. Her attorney, David Greenhaw of Odessa, noted that "full restitution has been made."

In sentencing Mrs. Allison, Bunton said that he "certainly can understand your concern for your family."

However, the judge told her that "Your actions have not shown you were a good parent ... at the time you committed this offense.

"You violated a trust of the people who hired you," Bunton said. "They thought you were totally trustworthy. They thought they could depend on you. You weren't trustworthy, and you weren't honest."

In her appearance before the judge, Mrs. Kinney admitted "what I did was wrong.

"I'm sorry for what I did," she lamented and then wished: "If I could go back" in time, she would not have taken the money.

Her attorney, Ray Moudy of Midland, said that Mrs. Kinney had cooperated with NCNB officials, with U.S. Attorney prosecutors and with FBI agents who investigated the Allison and Kinney cases and that Mrs. Kinney had "confessed" the embezzlement to the president of the bank.

"She wants to get this behind her quickly and start anew," Moudy said. "She wants to be a good mother."

The judge reminded Mrs. Kinney that she had "violated a trust" with the bank.

"They thought they could trust you," Bunton said, "and they couldn't. You were dishonest." And when she was stealing the bank's money, Mrs. Kinney was "not thinking of your daughter," the judge said.

"Anytime we make mistakes, we would like to go back" to correct the misdeeds, "but we can't," Bunton said. Once mistakes are made, "We can't go back. When you make a mistake, you must pay for it."

gest libel awards against a Texas news organization.

KENS-TV President and General Manager Michael J. Conly said: "The verdict relates to a newscast that ran over five years ago. We are amazed and very disappointed by it.

"At the same time, we know media companies frequently lose verdicts at the jury level, for whatever reasons, but then win on appeal because the law recognizes the crucial role the media plays in educating the public and protecting our democratic institutions," Conly said.

Branton described Srivastava as a promising young surgeon who had performed more than 2,000 open-heart surgeries by the end of 1984. He also claimed the station was "out to get someone" during a ratings period.

BEER: Number of thefts a problem

(From 1B)

Sgt. Kenneth Moten of Midland police said it's beer that makes the crime a problem.

"It's a problem because of the number we're having — at least one a night on average," Moten said.

Luckey said, "They are just trying to get the beer more than avoiding payment. About 80 percent are by minors who can't buy it anyway."

Both police and store clerks said they believe beer runs started after the the legal drinking age in Texas went from 19 to 21 years old in September 1986.

People who make beer runs don't do so just because they are underage, Moten said. The majority occur after midnight on weekdays and 1 a.m. on weekends after legal sales hours, he said.

Rip Horkey, general manager of Friends convenience stores in Midland and other Permian Basin cities, said, "They're usually already drunk. Video cameras ... nothing seems to deter them when they want it."

Moten said beer runs usually occur more during summer months, holidays, and during special activities that involve children.

It may sound like fun and games, but law enforcement officials are not taking beer runs lightly.

Midland County Attorney Mark Dettman said those caught are usually charged with a Class B misdemeanor, punishable with a maximum $1,000 and 180 days in jail. Dettman said his office has prosecuted a couple dozen in the last year.

But Luckey noted what begins as a misdemeanor can take a turn for the worse.

"It can turn into robbery if they knock someone down while running out," Luckey said.

Moten said youngsters don't even need to knock someone down to commit a felony. Threatening a clerk with serious bodily harm can be enough, he said.

Moten estimated that about one out of every 30 beer runs turns from a misdemeanor theft into a robbery.

Despite actions taken by police and the stores themselves, Luckey said he believes the offense is on the rise. "There is a continous increase all the time," he said.

Wes Hargrove, human resource manager for Southland Corp., which owns Seven-Eleven convenience stores, agreed, "Overall it's a very frustrating situation."

Hargrove said his company instructs clerks to be aware of their customers and report all incidents to police rather than risk their lives stopping a thief.

But law enforcement officials said this isn't enough. They suggested locks on beer coolers after sales hours and doing away with beer displays located in the front of the store.

Dettman said some stores are harder hit than others. He said stores along Midland Drive have the biggest problem.

backing of five local banks: NCNB Texas, Team Bank, First City Texas-Midland, ClayDesta National, and Texas Commerce Bank. The program also has a pool of $2 million to loan to Midlanders, based on their income. The program is open to all Midlanders.

Both Castro and Davis stressed that this program is run by the community, and that greater community participation will enable the program to better serve Midlanders' needs.

Other topics discussed at Wednesday's meeting included:

■ Roger Robles, chairman of the Eastside Economic Development Task Force, reported the task force is looking for a person or company to conduct a study to determine if a proposed shopping center at East Highway 80 and Lamesa Road could generate a feasible cash flow. He told members the study should be done before any additional steps are taken on the center.

■ Members of the chamber are preparing to attend this month's quarterly meeting of the Texas Association of Mexican-American Chambers of Commerce (TAMACC) in Mexico City, where MHCC Executive Director Elvia Hernandez will meet with representatives of Aeromexico in an effort to attract the airline to provide service from Midland International Airport. The chamber has also received five candidates from the Mexican Consulate in Midland for consideration as a sister city.

■ The chamber is also preparing to participate in Small Business Week by participating in Expo '90, a trade show set for May 10 at Midland Center.

■ That same week — on May 9 — the chamber will hold a dinner meeting at La Bodega, where the Hispanic Businessman and Businesswoman of the year, Corporate Member of the year and Member of the Year will be named. These four winners will compete for state honors at the July 26-28 state TAMACC convention in Victoria. The meeting speaker will be Price Arredondo of the Texas Department of Commerce.

■ Linda Ford of Mobil Oil reported that her company and the MHCC, which have jointly adopted Crockett Elementary, will meet April 27 with students, teachers and administrators to help determine needs and set programs for the school, which will go into effect this fall.

LOAN: FBI to continue probes

(From 1B)

However, Longbotham had made $220,000 in loans to five customers, including Kinnison, from 1987 to 1989, and in turn had received $119,500 from those customers, according to federal sources.

Longbotham, who is being represented by San Antonio lawyer Jerry Goldstein, is to be sentenced May 15 by U.S. District Court Chief Judge Lucius D. Bunton. The maximum sentence for the offense is a five-year prison term and a $5,000 fine.

In recent years, federal law enforcement officials have heightened investigation and prosecution of white-collar crimes.

"We're hammering on bad stockbrokers and bad bankers," said Assistant U.S. Attorney Bill Torrey, who is prosecuting the Longbotham case. "That's why I was hired" by United States Attorney Rod Ederer of San Antonio. "White-collar crime is a top priority."

The federal Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery, and Enforcement Act of 1989, also known as the White-Collar Crime Act, has increased penalities for white-collar crimes committed after Aug. 9, 1989, according to Tom Kirspel, supervisory senior resident FBI agent in Midland.

"It enhances the penalities" from five years imprisonment and $5,000 in fines to 20 years imprisonment and $1 million in fines, Kirspel said.

Further, the act doubles the statute of limitations on prosecuting white-collar crimes from five years to 10 years.

"Cases like this is what the act was directed at," said Kirspel. Congress increased FBI and U.S. Attorney's office funding to hire to agents and prosecutors to investigate and prosecute criminal cases.

"We'll continue to pursue violations such as this," Kirspel said.

But a "glitch" in the criminal-justice system comes in the shortage of federal judges to try the cases, said Torrey.

"You've got to have more federal judges."

City students 'dig' this week

Staff Report

Gov. Bill Clements has proclaimed this as the second annual Archeology Awareness Week in Texas.

Schools, museums and municipalities — including Midland — across the state are pitching in to focus attention on Texas' outstanding and diverse prehistoric and historic archeological heritage. This event stresses the urgent need for public support for archeological site preservation and for appropriate scientific investigation of these sites.

"We need to make people aware of the important archeological sites," said Midlander Dave Swenson, director for Region 10 of the Texas Archeological Society.

"Almost all of the local areas of Texas have important sites that are being lost through vandalism, development, road and pipeline construction. When areas are developed, we need to record the sites before they're lost."

Swenson, along with members of local archeological societies in his 23-county area, have distributed material promoting the week to schoolchildren.

Locally, Swenson and other members of the Midland Archeological Society have distributed more than 3,500 bookmarks on Archeology Awareness Week to seventh-graders in Midland and Odessa through their Texas history teachers. The volunteers also have given posters, resource lists and Texas Historical Commission booklets to more than 175 junior high and elementary classrooms in the two cities.

"Last year the response was great," Swenson said. "This year it has grown. Many more activities have been promoted throughout the state. We're hoping it will continue to grow in interest."

The current "Turquoise and Tobacco" exhibit at The Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., also is part of Archeology Awareness Week.

Clements appoints Craddick to panel

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements announced the appointment of a Midland woman to a state board Wednesday.

Christi Craddick of Midland was appointed to the Texas Guaranteed Student Loan Corp. for a term expiring Jan. 31, 1993. Ms. Craddick, who fills the panel's student position, is an undergraduate at the University of Texas at Austin.

Geologists' theory called 'far out'

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — A volcanic eruption, earthquakes and the geysers and hot springs of Yellowstone National Park can be traced to a meteorite that hit the Pacific Northwest 17 million years ago, a scientific theory holds.

The hypothesis was presented in mid-March by scientists from the University of Montana at a meeting of the Geological Society of America in Tucson, Ariz.

James Sears, one of the scientists, conceded in an interview that the theory was not widely accepted.

'Numbers crunchers' to counsel lawmakers

By Rick Brown
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — House and Senate conferees today will meet for the first time on the school finance problem, but lingering questions over costs may delay substantive talks until Monday.

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur and chairman of the Senate delegation, said he hopes today's organizational meeting will help pin down costs associated with a measure House members endorsed this past Monday.

Parker, quoting sources in the Texas Education Agency, said the bill's first-year price tag is closer to $600 million than the $450 million originally estimated.

The senator said he is unsure of the logic behind the increase, but he hoped testimony from TEA "number-crunchers" today would help clear up the questions.

Gov. Bill Clements Wednesday also found fault with the House measure, which prior to Monday's debate was estimated at a total cost of $5.5 billion over five years.

Clements, who continues to stick to a "no new taxes" stance, said actual costs could reach as high as $8 billion, which he called "a huge sum of money."

The governor's own plan has a five-year price tag of $4.3 billion, while the program the Senate endorsed would cost $1.2 billion its first year in effect and total $5.3 billion over three years.

With just over 2½ weeks remaining before a May 1 deadline set by the Texas Supreme Court, the conference committee will hold its first meeting at 9 a.m. today.

The court this past October ruled the current school finance system unconstitutional and discriminatory against students in districts with poorer tax bases.

Conferees will have to settle the costs issue before moving on to negotiating differences between the two measures.

"It's kind of hard to reach a compromise if you don't know exactly what each bill costs," said Parker.

While the Senate bill uses a dollar allocation formula similar to current state law, the House measure attempts to give all distircts the same access to money as those whose wealth is in the top 5 percent.

Although the House mechanism received overall approval, some members have complained the formula makes predicting the amount of money needed on a year-to-year basis difficult.

Suit accuses LULAC of profiteering

EDINBURG, Texas (AP) — National leaders of the largest U.S. Hispanic organization are accused in a lawsuit filed Wednesday of trying to profit from a South Texas bus accident that killed 21 students.

The lawsuit widens a rift between the San Antonio-based national leadership of the League of United Latin American Citizens and LULAC leaders in the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

Two Valley LULAC leaders, Noe Torres and Aguie Pena, on Wednesday sued San Antonio residents Jose Garcia De Lara, national LULAC president; De Lara's special LULAC counsel, Ruben Sandoval; and Sandoval's law partner, James Perkins.

Torres and Ms. Pena accuse Sandoval, De Lara and Perkins of conspiring to solicit potentially lucrative wrongful death and personal injury suits from families of bus wreck victims.

'As far as I am concerned, they were trying to get cases.'

— Aguie Pena, LULAC social service director, McAllen, Texas

A Hidalgo County grand jury last week indicted Sandoval, two other attorneys and a law firm secretary on charges they violated the state barratry law by illegally soliciting lawsuits after the Sept. 21, 1989 bus accident in the city of Alton.

Torres, who is regional LULAC director for the Valley, and Ms. Pena, director of a LULAC social services office in McAllen, contend in their civil suit that De Lara used his authority as LULAC president "to create a pretext wherein (Sandoval and Perkins) would be able to come into direct contact with the families of the injured for the purpose of illegally soliciting cases, contrary to the laws of the state of Texas."

Sandoval and De Lara visited the Valley shortly after the bus accident and announced they were there to protect families from unscrupulous lawyers.

Torres and Pena allege that the national LULAC officials' true purpose was to gain lawsuit business and that they damaged the Valley officials' reputations by associating them with the activity.

"They were trying to get cases," Ms. Pena said. "As far as I am concerned, they were trying to get cases."

Torres said Sandoval offered him from $50,000 to $75,000 if he could sign up a family to hire Sandoval's law firm in litigation against Valley Coca-Cola Bottling Co. Inc., whose truck collided with the school bus, knocking it into a water-filled pit. Torres said he refused.

The suit contends that after Ms. Pena and Torres publicly criticized De Lara and Sandoval, the San Antonio residents filed a slander suit against the Valley officials and threatened to expel them from LULAC.

De Lara and Sandoval said they welcomed Wednesday's lawsuit, because they said it will help expedite the discovery phase of their slander case against Torres and Ms. Pena.

Bounty reportedly offered in Camarena case

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — The federal Drug Enforcement Administration may have paid a $50,000 bounty for the abduction of a Mexican doctor wanted in the U.S. for the 1985 murder of DEA agent Enrique Camarena Salazar, a newspaper reported Wednesday.

Humberto Alvarez Machain, 42, was arraigned in Los Angeles Tuesday on charges of conspiracy to commit violent crimes in aid of racketeering, conspiracy to kidnap a federal agent, committing violent crimes in aid of racketeering, kidnapping a federal agent and murdering a federal agent, said Grace Denton, spokeswoman for the U.S. Attorney's office.

U.S. District Judge Edward Rafeedie ordered Alvarez held without bail pending trial May 1. He was arrested April 3 in El Paso.

A Mexico City newspaper last week claimed the DEA offered a bounty for Alvarez's return. The El Paso Herald-Post, quoting federal sources, said Wednesday the DEA paid $50,000 to a pilot and an assistant who flew Alvarez to the U.S. from Mexico.

The plane landed at the El Paso international airport just long enough to hand over Alvarez, the newspaper said, then flew back to Mexico.

Rey Sepulveda, DEA agent in charge in El Paso, told the Herald-Post he had no knowledge of money being paid for the capture of the Mexican doctor.

"However, it is generally known the DEA pays reward money for information," he said.

Manuel Medrano, chief federal prosecutor in Los Angeles in the Camarena murder investigation, had no comment.

Surrounded by U.S. marshals, Alvarez was flown to Los Angeles early Tuesday. At a detention hearing later in Los Angeles, the Guadalajara physician was ordered held without bond.

He is one of 18 people accused in the kidnapping and murder of Camarena.

Prosecutors say Camarena, a U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration agent, was tortured and killed by members of the Guadalajara, Mexico, narcotics cartel, an organization that allegedly distributes tons of marijuana and cocaine.

STATE IN BRIEF

Dallas INS investigated

HOUSTON (HNS) — Federal investigators are probing charges that the regional and Houston directors of the Immigration and Naturalization Service tried to punish Houston anti-smuggling agents for turning to Congress for help, sources said earlier this week.

In a Justice Department report that may be released this week, sources said investigators will address allegations that Regional Director Stephen H. Martin directed Houston Director Ronald Parra to get back at the anti-smuggling agents for filing formal complaints against agency procedures.

Congressional and federal investigators also continue to pursue possible criminal charges that may stem from other probes into alleged fiscal and management irregularities in the Dallas regional office.

Coggeshall loses

GALVESTON (AP) — Longtime Galveston Mayor Jan Coggeshall, who stepped down in December to run for county office, was trounced in a runoff bid for Precinct 2 Galveston County Commissioner.

The popular mayor, who served 10 years on the City Council and in the Mayor's office, lost to Galveston businessman Eddie Janek in her attempt to win the Democratic nomination for the commissioner's spot.

Mrs. Coggeshall, 54, attributed her poor showing in part to fears among voters in the seven mainland precincts that she would favor Galveston Island over their part of Precinct 2.

Judge found guilty

CLOVIS, N.M. (AP) — Clovis Municipal Judge Russell Muffley was found guilty Wednesday of providing alcoholic beverages for minors and fined $300.

Muffley was found guilty of the misdemeanor charge of selling or giving alcoholic beverages to minors.

An arrest affidavit filed in Curry County Magistrate Court on Jan. 11 accused Muffley of mixing daiquiris and supplying a keg of beer for teen-agers attending a party for his son last Nov. 24.

Goat kills banned

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army no longer will shoot goats at Fort Sam Houston in San Antonio to train doctors in treating gunshot wounds, a physicians group that sought the moratorium said Wednesday.

The Physicians Committee for Responsible Medicine said 800 to 1,000 goats a year were being shot at Fort Sam Houston. The practice, however, continues at Fort Bragg, N.C., and as many as 1,200 goats are involved, the committee said.

Neal D. Barnard, M.D., a psychiatrist and president of the organization, said the physicians group sought the moratorium in part after specialists such as radiologists and psychiatrists, who normally don't treat trauma victims, were being told to participate in the training at Fort Sam Houston.

Dallas has 'lift'

EASTON, Pa. (AP) — The great roller-coaster controversy coasted to a not-so-thrilling stop Wednesday.

During a 2½-hour meeting, Pennsylvania's Dorney Park and Six Flags Over Texas settled their argument over which has the world's highest wooden coaster.

The agreement: Six Flags' Texas Giant has the highest lift and Dorney's Hercules has the longest drop.

"Who goes on a roller coaster for the lift?" said an ecstatic Harris Weinstein, chairman of the board of Dorney Park and Wildwater Kingdom outside of Allentown.

Houston in turmoil over police shootings

HOUSTON (AP) — Ku Klux Klan members were among more than 100 citizens who packed City Hall chambers Wednesday to display their interest in a former police officer fired after shooting a black man to death.

Most of the 50 people who spoke to the council during the audience portion of its regular meeting wanted to ensure former Officer Scott Tschirhart is not reinstated to the Houston Police Department.

Tschirhart, 27, fatally shot off-duty security guard Byron Gillum, 24, on Nov. 15 during a routine traffic stop near the University of Houston. Gillum was shot eight times — four in the back.

Former Police Chief Lee Brown fired Tschirhart in January after an internal affairs investigation. Tschirhart told investigators he believed Gillum was reaching for a pistol. A gun was later found on the car seat.

But last week, a Harris County grand jury declined to indict Tschirhart for murder, sparking protests throughout the black community. Tschirhart is white and Gillum was black.

"We believe that this is a healing process necessary to help a grieving community," said Justice of the Peace Al Green, head of the local NAACP chapter.

But several KKK members wearing black T-shirts carried placards outside the council chambers supporting Tschirhart. One sign read: "Negroes Threaten Violence; The Klan Promises Order."

Gillum was the third black man shot to death by Tschirhart in his seven years on the force. Grand juries declined to indict the officer in either of the other two shootings.

Tschirhart is appealing his firing to an independent arbitrator, but Mayor Kathy Whitmire said last week she would personally work against his being rehired by the force because it would undermine public confidence in police officers.

Meanwhile, members of the Ida Lee Delaney/Byron Gillum Justice Committee have called for a second grand jury investigation, a federal Justice Department probe and a civilian review board for officer shootings.

Mrs. Delaney, also black, was shot to death in the early morning hours of Oct. 31 after she was chased on a freeway by three off-duty Hispanic officers.

Former Officer Alex Gonzales faces a murder trial in Dallas Monday. He and the two other officers were fired by Brown and are appealing to an arbitrator for their jobs. Neither of the other two were indicted for the slaying.

Dental Implants Do.

Good Morning, Midland. LUCKY NUMBER 20528

The Implant Alternative.

If you've been disappointed in conventional solutions to your missing teeth, you should know about an important new alternative: dental implants.

A dental implant is a tiny cylinder which is surgically implanted in your jaw to replace the root of the tooth. Once in place, your natural jawbone bonds to the implant, making it a stable foundation for replacement teeth, a permanent bridge, or anchored, removable dentures. Dental implants are fixed so securely, in fact, they can actually restore the feeling you had with your own natural teeth. As well as your ability to eat just about anything you want—confidently.

Dental implant, actual size.

Call to learn more about dental implants. They'll help restore the feeling, and the freedom of your own natural teeth.

Peres given time to form coalition

JERUSALEM (AP) — Labor Party leader Shimon Peres won additional time to put together a governing coalition after the last-minute defection of two religious lawmakers Wednesday spoiled his immediate hopes of becoming prime minister.

Shouting matches erupted in Parliament after attempts to form a new government failed. The breakdown renewed anger in Israel over the disproportionate influence of small right-wing religious parties, which serve as kingmakers in any attempt to form a governing coalition.

"Whoever says this is democracy is speaking nonsense," said Amnon Rubinstein of the left-wing Shinui Party. "We can't continue with this method."

President Chaim Herzog granted Peres 15 more days to pull together a government. Peres has vowed to make peace negotiations with Palestinians his first priority.

He ruled out a return to the Likud-Labor government, which collapsed March 15 over peace moves. The right-wing Likud refused to accept U.S. proposals paving the way for Israeli-Palestinian talks in Cairo.

"Let's never forget that the government fell on the issue of peace. Let's remember that the issue of peace should be the major consideration," Peres told reporters.

Peres had planned to present his coalition to the Knesset, or Parliament, for approval Wednesday. He was counting on the support of 61 of the 120 legislators, including five from the ultra-Orthodox Agudat Israel party.

But hours before the vote, Agudat lawmaker Avraham Verdiger announced that he had resigned from Parliament. Party colleague Eliezer Mizrahi then said he would vote against Peres.

Lawmakers shouted at the top of their lungs, pounded on tables and wagged fingers at each other when it became clear Peres lacked a majority. Each speaker was interrupted repeatedly.

Abdul Wahab Daroushe, an Arab parliamentarian, demanded that Knesset speaker Dov Shilansky "denounce those who rule out Israeli Arabs from taking part in the decision-making process."

Hard-liner Eliakim Haetzni jumped up from his seat and lunged toward Daroushe but was restrained by guards.

Mohammed Miari, another member of Parliament, screamed at Haetzni: "You're a racist, you're a murderer!"

Both Verdiger and Mizrahi are political hard-liners opposed to the center-left Labor Party's philosophy of accepting territorial compromise in exchange for peace.

When he announced he was quitting, Verdiger said he had sought the advice of the Lubavitcher Rabbi Menachem Schneerson of Brooklyn, N.Y., a leading Hasidic figure with great influence in Israel although he has never been to the Jewish state.

"The rabbi said that nothing has changed in his position on Eretz Israel," Verdiger said on Israel radio. Schneerson has written that the biblical land of Israel, including occupied territory, was given by God to the Jews and must not be surrendered.

Rubinstein responded with anger and said the defections strengthened calls for electoral reform including direct election of the prime minister.

"We want to ask the country which prime minister they want," Rubinstein said on Israel Television. "Is this not better than asking some rabbi who is sitting in Brooklyn?"

Herzog warned that the political maneuvering surrounding formation of a coalition has raised "piercing questions about our system of government and our political culture."

Mother Teresa's Career

Born: Agnes Gonxha Bojaxhiu
August 27, 1910
Skopje, Yugoslavia

Nov. 1928: Joined the Sisters of Loretto, an Irish religious order operating missions in India at the age of 18. After a year of training in Dublin she took the name Teresa. The order sent her to Calcutta for 17 years at St. Mary's school, where she taught geography and served as principal.

April 12, 1948: Granted permission by Pope Pius XII to move out of the convent to minister to the poor of Calcutta. Her work expanded from teaching to include caring for the sick and dying as head of the order, Missionaries of Charity, founded in 1950. She abandoned traditional nun's habits for an Indian peasant's sari with a blue sash and a small crucifix. The children began calling her Mother Teresa and the title remained with her.

1965: Pope Paul VI granted her Missionaries of Charity recognition as a society of pontifical right, enabling it to operate worldwide. The order rapidly grew.

Dec. 1979: Won Nobel Peace Prize.

June 1985: Won Presidential Medal of Freedom.

April 1990: Resigns as head of the religious order she founded.

Nun no longer to lead order she founded

CALCUTTA, India (AP) — Mother Teresa, the frail Roman Catholic nun who won a Nobel Peace Prize for her work among the sick and dying, said Wednesday she was stepping down as head of the religious order she founded in 1950.

"I have been leading the Missionaries of Charity for 40 years," Mother Teresa said with a smile as she bustled about her home and office near the Calcutta slum where she started her work.

But the 79-year-old nun would not comment further on her decision to step down as the order's superior general.

In Italy, a Vatican spokesman said Pope John Paul II had accepted Mother Teresa's resignation. Deputy Vatican spokesman Monsignor Piero Pennacchini said Mother Teresa was retiring for health reasons.

In September, Mother Teresa suffered a heart attack and serious infection and surgeons implanted a permanent pacemaker on Dec. 1.

Since then, Mother Teresa has been unable to leave Calcutta to visit missions in other parts of the world. She seldom leaves the second floor of her home, which doubles as the order's headquarters.

Since its founding, the Missionaries of Charity has spread to 87 countries and is staffed by 3,000 nuns.

Asked who would head the organization, Mother Teresa raised her hand toward the heavens.

"We will act the way He leads us," she said. A superior general will be elected by the order in September, Pennacchini said.

The next superior general of the order is likely to come from the order's council of six nuns.

Sister Agnes Das, a 60-year-old native of Calcutta and Mother Teresa's first disciple, is next in command. But news reports say Sister Agnes also is in ill-health.

Jewish settlers move to Arab East Jerusalem

JERUSALEM (AP) — About 150 Jews moved into the Christian sector of Jerusalem's Old City Wednesday, sparking Arab outrage at the the first Jewish presence in the area in 54 years, Arab and Israeli sources said.

Angry Christian Arabs threw stones at the settlers and Greek Orthodox bishops arrived at the site to question the legality of the move, Arab sources said.

There were no reports of injuries and police spokesman Uzi Sandori could not confirm any violence.

Settler Shifra Blass, a spokeswoman for the Ataraot Cohanim Yeshiva, or Jewish seminary, said the families moved into a building in the Christian Quarter as part of an effort to expand the Jewish presence in Arab areas.

"We are doing the worthwhile job of advancing the avowed government policy of Jewish settlement throughout the city," Blass said.

Mahdi Abdul Hadi, director of an Arab think tank on foreign policy in East Jerusalem said the settlers were "escalating the confrontation by provoking Palestinians in their daily life."

"They are threatening the present and future existence of the Palestinians in this city," he said.

Benny Elon, an official at the seminary, said the institute legally purchased the building in the Christian Quarter in a secret deal with an Arab resident. He would not say when the purchase was made.

Officials at the Greek Orthodox church said the building is church property and was illegally acquired.

Sandori said a police investigation concluded that the purchase was legal.

Almost 50,000 Moslems live in the Old City, along with 7,000 Christians and 4,000 Jews.

More than 3,000 of those Jews live in the Jewish Quarter. The Moslem Quarter is home to 40 Jewish families and two seminaries including Ataraot Cohanim.

The two-story building under question is near the Jewish Quarter and is in an area that was a thriving Jewish commercial center in the nineteenth century.

Guard escapes rioting inmates

LONDON (AP) — A prison guard escaped Wednesday from inmates holding him hostage in a Scottish jail and the prisoners then gave up, government officials said.

Twelve British prisons have been wracked by disturbances this month, beginning April 1 at Strangeways Prison in the northern English city of Manchester. Three more prisoners surrendered there Wenesday, leaving fewer than 15 on the loose.

Guard Jim Rankin, 30, escaped unharmed after being held 20 hours by rampaging inmates at Shotts jail, the Scottish Office said. The 40 inmates involved in the disturbance surrendered shortly after the officer escaped, said the office, which runs Scottish prisons.

Dartmoor prison in southwest England was hit by another disturbance Wednesday night when three prisoners got onto the roof of a prison wing.

DENTAL IMPLANTS
FOR BETTER LIVING!
When natural teeth are lost, the bone structure designed to support your teeth starts to shrink. This is due to lack of use and pressure from the overlying denture. It is now possible to replace teeth with strong, durable titanium or surgical stainless implants, which support natural looking teeth. These implants also return function to the bone; help retain bone density; and help prevent the premature loss of remaining teeth. The result is improved oral health, and improved chewing. Proper chewing is the first stage in digestion.
You can be freed from the pain and aggravation often caused by partial and full dentures or from missing teeth. Many are able to eat corn-on-the-cob, nuts and apples again--and even smile at the world with more confidence!
Why should you consider dental implants? To feel better. To eat what you want. To enjoy life...with a wide, happy smile!
We use a variety of implant types and are not restricted to the limitations of just one type of implant system. Therefore, if you have been told your bone is inadequate to support an implant, please call us for a second opinion.

Dairyman's wife raises funds for school ice cream machine

WINDTHORST (AP) — There are more dairy cows than kids in this North Texas agricultural town, but believe it or not, some of those youngsters don't like to drink milk with their school lunches.

When Bertha Mae Schenk, who is serving her second year as Windthorst Associated Milk Producers Inc. ladies auxiliary president, learned this from School Superintendent Howard Neeb, she decided to do something about it.

Her suggestion was an ice cream machine for the school's lunchroom so the youngsters who didn't drink milk could get some calcium.

The timing couldn't have been worse for the community and the school system. It was late summer in this small German-settled dairy community 25 miles south of Wichita Falls. The thermometer was hitting 100 degrees and milk production was in the summer slump. This meant milk checks to the dairymen were down.

It was time to prepare to plant wheat and get the kids ready to start to school.

It wasn't the time to try to raise $10,000 for an ice cream machine.

Neeb told her he would love to have such a machine, but there just wasn't enough money in the school budget.

Mrs. Schenk, wife of dairyman Dillard Schenk of nearby Scotland, couldn't be discouraged. She told Neeb she would get the AMPI auxiliary to start a special fund with a $500 donation and then offered to head a drive to raise the remaining money. The auxiliary members really enjoy promoting dairy products, she said, and offer information booths and dairy snacks such as cheese at public functions throughout the year.

After they started the ice cream project, they located an almost new second-hand machine that could be purchased for $7,000. All they needed was to find the other $6,500.

Mrs. Schenk said just before she began calling people for the donations, she had a feeling it was a bad time to approach dairymen for money. "But I thought about how much the students needed the machine and I just believed it could be done," she said.

Within a month, Windthorst dairymen and businesses had contributed the funds to buy and install the machine that uses milk products to make soft ice cream.

Neeb said he is proud of the machine. The school sells the ice cream for 25 cents a cone.

"We offer it every other day so they don't get tired of it," he said. He said the machine is simple to maintain and clean.

It dispenses vanilla, chocolate and a swirl, mixing the two. It now provides dessert at school three days a week and is available for community projects.

Neeb said the machine has been a hit with school children in the town of about 500 people.

Aging process not stopped by lotions

By Donna Kato
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — In the quest for an eternally youthful appearance, Americans spend millions of dollars each year on cosmetic products touted as being effective barriers against time.

Even a prescription acne cream and an over-the-counter hemorrhoid medication have been endorsed as possible solutions to facial wrinkles and sags.

They come in pretty packages and smell heavenly. The active ingredients often have scientific-sounding names like liposomes, microsomes and microspheres.

Some include elements such as sheep fetus cells, vitamins and seaweed.

Smoothing it on is not enough in some instances; one concoction requires the user mix the cream in the palm of her hand right before application, using a tiny spatula to helps burst and activate the "time release" capsules.

But doctors and scientists say there is no magic formula for keeping skin supple and preventing the external ravages of age and no way to reverse aging short of plastic surgery.

The most that lotions, creams, masks and moisturizers can do is hydrate, or soften the skin with a combination of water and oil-based substance, thus lessening the appearance of lines and a dry complexion.

Yet consumers — especially women — continue to search for the perfect potion, according to the Cosmetics, Toiletry and Fragrance Association. Their hunt might end when they find a product that they like, but more times than not, it is renewed as new.

CNS Graphic

THE DESIRE for a luminous, youthful complexion is a universal desire that cosmetic companies have focused upon to sell skin-care products.

They have enlisted the help of Madison Avenue experts to come up with appealing names such as Firmagel, BioAdvance, Capture and Time Zone for their formulas. Their labels are spiced with words and catch phrases such as "rejuvenation," "age proofing," "regeneration," "anti-aging emulsions," "prevention serum," "moisture recharging" and "energy-boosting nutrients."

Who can resist when it all sounds so important and convincing?

Apparently, that is the reason the Food and Drug Administration stepped in two years ago and has continued its close watch today to make sure cosmetic claims do not cross the boundary and portray products as repairing or affecting the structure and function of the human body — claims considered medical yet on the market without going through the tedious and mandatory FDA approval process required of new drugs. (The agency does not approve cosmetics as it does drugs.)

In regulatory letters sent to the presidents of more than a dozen multimillion-dollar cosmetic companies in April 1987, the FDA warned that their labeling and advertising claims were in serious violation of the drug-labeling provisions of the Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act.

"It's an ongoing thing," said Heinz J. Eiermann, director of the division of colors and cosmetics for the FDA, who hints that new letters may be going out in the mail any day now.

THE 1987 letters also specifically cited the individual language that was questionable and implied the products might be seized or pulled off the market unless the companies changed their labeling or went through the necessary procedures to secure a New Drug Application by proving the efficacy and safety of each of the cited products.

"Some have cleaned up their act, some have modified their wording, some have disappeared and reappeared," said Eiermann. "This is no longer just a consumer issue; it is also a legal issue these days."

Still, the products continue to multiply and sell, many at astronomical prices in tony stores and salons.

It is clever packaging and labeling that initially gets the customer's attention, but with the loyal following some of the brands have, it seems many women believe the products help their skin's appearance and texture.

The problem, women say, is that finding the right product takes a lot of money and time.

Consumers must be aware that there is "no fountain of youth in a bottle," and "no special ingredient or formula that is the answer to perfect skin," said Dr. John Renner, a longtime health-fraud watchdog and director of the recently formed Consumer Health Information Research Institute in Kansas City, Mo., an educational center for physicians and the public.

"So much of what we buy into is based on rumor or clever advertising," he said, citing Retin-A (a prescription acne ointment) and Preparation H (a hemorrhoid reliever) as two non-cosmetic products that were rumored to reduce puffy eyes and crow's-feet wrinkles.

When used by someone with sensitive skin, both products are potentially dangerous, causing skin irritation, an allergic reaction or minor burns, Renner said.

EVEN SOME of the ingredients highlighted in the expensive formulas, such as collagen, elastin, placenta cells, Vitamin E and seaweed extracts, can cause skin reactions, he added.

Evaluating the merits of various cosmetics is difficult because so much is based on a subjective viewpoint, according to physicians and scientists. What works well for one person may not have the same results for another.

"Different people like different products; there's no one moisturizer or emollient that's going to be the best for everyone," said Dr. Carl S. Korn, a Los Angeles area dermatologist and an assistant clinical professor of medicine at USC.

Dehydration of the skin's natural moisture over time is the main reason that it becomes drier with age and eventually wrinkles, he said. It is a combination of water and oil that hydrates and plumps the outer layers of skin, including the lines and crevices.

"The lotion may puff the skin and reduce the appearance of wrinkles and dry skin scales, but they're still there," he explained.

Products should be non-irritating and non-comedogenic (won't plug pores) and used after faces are washed with soap or a cleanser and lots of water, Korn said, adding that the wipe-away cleansers that do away with rinsing make him nervous.

PHYSICIANS, GENERALLY skeptical of expensive or new skin-care products, say consumers should choose carefully what they put on their skin and not be star-struck by sexy-sounding additives, gimmicky application techniques and authoritative literature and labels that sound almost medical.

Collagen, elastin and hyaluronic acid, for example, are natural building blocks of skin and do break down with age. However, rubbing them on your face or body will not replace them because the molecules are too large to penetrate the skin.

Even a statement such as "anti-aging" may mean the product simply has sunscreen in it.

Cosmetic companies are required by law to list ingredients on their labels but can choose to keep their recipes a secret.

"We believe that while nothing can stop the aging process, good skin care — the faithful use of efficacious treatments such as Scientific Skincare products developed by the Estee Lauder Laboratories — can certainly help diminish the dryness and fine lines that are associated with aging ... and help delay the appearance of aging signs," said Marguerite Barney, a company spokeswoman who described Time Zone as the first multiple-function moisturizer formulated to "re-energize and re-supple the skin."

BILL SOMA, a chemist and founder of the Southern California firm Tyra, thought enough of his skin-care line to protect it with a U.S. patent.

"I found a way to put water into the skin with a chemical formulation that breaks the surface tension of the skin and hydrates below it," said Soma.

Meanwhile, consumers can count on seeing more products to entice them into buying, or at least considering, a new bottle or jar.

Japanese women look west for sophistication

By Shigeru Suzuki
N.Y. Times News Service

TOKYO — Japan has seemingly become a country of nouveau riche who readily spend cash on a plethora of luxury goods.

It is not uncommon to see women carrying the social badges of refinement, such as Louis Vuitton handbags and other designer apparel, in very casual situations.

Now, many of Japan's young women are turning to imported finishing schools in efforts to purchase the deportment to match their outfits.

Such schools, which emerged in Japan during the latter half of the 1980s, teach Western table manners, polished party etiquette, European flower arrangement, gift wrapping, fashion and the proper application of cosmetics as well as techniques for graceful posture and walking.

The schools stress the need for women, whether they are working, preparing for marriage or are already married, to polish their manners, culture, handling of interpersonal relationships, and fashion coordination.

The U.S.-based John Robert Powers School, whose graduates include Princess Grace of Monaco and Betty Ford, opened its first Japanese branch in 1986 in Fukuoka. It now has schools in Osaka, Tokyo and Hiroshima.

Some hold a harsh view on the burgeoning popularity of the finishing schools in Japan. Literary critic Naomi Watanabe says true culture and refinement cannot be bought.

"True sophistication cannot be translated into money. Rather, people with true grace and class look down on money," he said.

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Dear friends of ours, "Sue" and "Don," are in the process of getting a divorce after 37 years of marriage and three children. We have been best friends for nearly 50 years. My husband and Don were Army buddies, and Sue and I were childhood friends and are very close.

Van Buren

Now I feel that I no longer want Don in my house as he is the one who instigated the divorce. My husband, however, insists on remaining friends with Don, saying, "He needs friends more than ever now."

I totally disagree and think my husband should terminate his friendship with Don instead of feeling sorry for him. My husband says, "Sue got the beautiful house, and poor Don is living in a dinky little apartment and needs friends to stand by him."

I say: "Sue has been a good wife and mother and didn't deserve this."

My husband says: "Don did his duty and tolerated Sue all these years for the sake of the children, and now that they are grown, he deserves some peace and happiness."

This is causing a great deal of disruption in our house and we need a clearer head to settle this. Your opinion, please. — A DIFFERENCE OF OPINION

DEAR DIFFERENCE: So your friends are divorcing, and you took Sue's side and your husband took Don's side. Fair enough, but the home in which you are living is your husband's home, too, and you have no right to bar Don from your home; neither have you the right to ask your husband to terminate his friendship with Don.

DEAR ABBY: Last Christmas we were at my grandmother's house for supper. The kids were asking when we were going to open the presents because everyone had finished eating except Grandma. We were told, "As soon as Grandma finishes eating."

Well, just as Grandma was lifting her fork to her mouth, my 10-year-old cousin, "Bobby," walked over to Grandma, took her plate away from her and threw the food into the garbage!

Bobby's mother said, "Well I guess Grandma should have eaten a little faster."

I wanted to say something, but didn't want to start an argument.

Abby, Grandma is 75 years old, and I was taught to have respect for my elders. I thought about getting Grandma another plate, but she probably would have said she was finished anyway.

Did I do the right thing by keeping quiet? — ANOTHER GRANDCHILD (AGE 13)

DEAR GRANDCHILD: A child as rude and undisciplined as Bobby might have hit you over the head with a drumstick, so you probably were wise to keep your mouth shut. However, one of the adults should have taken Bobby to task for his rudeness. And also Bobby's mother for not having stood up for Granny.

AT WIT'S END

By Erma Bombeck

Throughout the years my view on traveling with children has always been from the front seat. It's a biased opinion, tilted in my favor because (a) I'm a parent and (b) I have my own column.

Bombeck

I've suspected that the kids in the backseat have a completely different viewpoint of the same trip, but no one has come forward with it — until now. This is "Beckie's" version of a vacation with her parents:

"When a person has acquired 17 years of living she can pretty much figure out the procedure of using a public facility — the restroom. For some reason, my parents treat me like I'm still in potty training. Mother carries the Lysol spray and plenty of Kleenex while telling me not to put my hands on anything.

"Trailing directly behind my parents in the backseat are enough pillows to make a mattress for King Kong, bushels of bananas that soon turn rotten, bags of Fig Newtons and peanut butter. Imagine going a hundred miles with these delightful odors as your father lectures you on the history of the state you are passing through.

"Imagine riding through America while your father switches the radio from station to station blasting your ears with the back speakers, then leaving it on a station with Reverend Goody preaching on the evils of high heels.

"After getting settled in the hotel room, the game of what-do-you-want-to-see-on-TV begins. My father flicks channel to channel for 30 minutes, then decides on some show that's half over.

"I wait until 11:30 to turn on my own channel. Then my mother says, 'Your daddy can't sleep. Turn it down.' I watch a silent movie. When I finally snuggle down in the warm covers to dreamland, I hear this noise. Father is snoring and Mother joins him. I put the two pillows over my head, but only a brick wall could keep their noise away, so I go to the bathroom with my pillow and sleep in the tub."

On the other hand, maybe Beckie's parents travel with her like the rest of us — under sedation.

Fish oil Rx for painful arthritis

By Jean Carper

Does eating the oil in fish actually help people with rheumatoid arthritis? There's new evidence it can, says Dr. Joel Kremer, associate professor of medicine, Albany (N.Y.) Medical College and a leading expert in the field.

Carper

In his latest study of 49 people with rheumatoid arthritis, those taking fish oil daily for six months showed improvement on 24 different measurements; for example, they had fewer tender and swollen joints and less pain and fatigue.

Additionally, according to Dr. Kremer, three other recent studies — from Harvard, Australia and the Netherlands — confirm the arthritis-fighting activity of fish oils.

Fish oil acts as an anti-inflammatory agent, but it also benefits the immune system directly, Dr. Kremer found.

The big question for Dr. Kremer now is to find the best dosage. In his new study, higher doses of 5 or 6 grams of fish oil daily were more effective than 2 or 3 grams. Five to 6 grams equal 7 to 9 ounces of raw Atlantic mackerel.

Interestingly, in the study, olive oil also helped relieve some symptoms of rheumatoid arthritis for unknown reasons. But it was not as effective as fish oil, says Dr. Kremer.

Cholesterol's double whammy

When you reduce your cholesterol, you may get an unexpected bonus: lower blood pressure.

Doctors have long suspected a physiological connection between high cholesterol and high blood pressure. But how it might work was a mystery.

Now Swiss investigators have come up with a surprising new theory. They claim on the basis of new studies that LDL cholesterol — the bad type you want less of — actually packs a double whammy in heart disease.

It's already known that LDL cholesterol helps clog arteries. But Agapios Sachinidis, a biochemist at University Hospital, Zurich, now says LDL cholesterol also can act like a hormone that directly triggers rises in blood pressure.

This may help explain why high levels of LDL cholesterol and high blood pressure go together, as documented by the famous Framingham Heart Study. Previous studies have also shown that lowering cholesterol cuts odds of high blood pressure. In an expansive California study, men who took a cholesterol-lowering drug were only 75 percent as likely to develop high blood pressure as men with high cholesterol who didn't take the drug.

New danger to bones

That's what New Zealand researchers have found. Eating a high-sodium diet caused a group of nine elderly women to excrete nearly 30 percent more calcium. Thus, the calcium was not available to be deposited in their bones. This could be detrimental at any age, but especially to elderly women who are at high risk of the crippling disease osteoporosis and bone fractures.

In the study, researchers put the women first on a low-salt diet (1,600 milligrams of sodium daily), then switched them to a high-salt diet (3,900 mg daily). Although they ate the same amount of calcium on both diets, one-third more of it was ushered out of the body during the high-salt diet.

In another study, researchers found that not only women, but men tend to lose bone mass as they age and therefore are also vulnerable to osteoporosis. The 86 men in the study at Oregon Health Sciences University ate lots of calcium and took a calcium supplement. Yet, they still lost bone at a substantial rate (2.3 percent a year) notably in their vertebrae.

Head-trauma rehab slow, costly, lacking

By Chris Carola

TROY, N.Y. (AP) — The question is simple. It wouldn't stump a child. But for the people in this bright room, nothing is simple.

"What do you call two pieces of bread with something in between?" the therapist asks eight, mostly young adults.

Nearby, another therapist holds a piece of white cardboard with the word "January" written in large black letters in front of a young man in a wheelchair. His head is slumped forward, as if he were dozing.

In a large dining room, Sam Been sits at a baby grand piano, playing one of the tunes he composed during 18 months at the New Medico Rehabilitation and Skilled Nursing Center, which specializes in the treatment of head injury victims.

Been and the others at New Medico's Troy facility are among tens of thousands of Americans who each year suffer debilitating head injuries. Many will need specialized care and rehabilitation the rest of their lives.

The federal Department of Health and Human Services in 1988 established a task force to address the needs of people with head injuries. The task force found most medical, legal and social systems ill-equipped to deal with victims of traumatic brain injury.

And its report, issued last year, said the medical and legal costs and related economic losses for head injury victims approach $25 billion per year.

Among the task force's recommendations to the House and Senate appropriations committees were encouraging the establishment of state and local head injury groups to provide leadership and coordination, and creation of a national network of regional head injury research centers.

"Jerry Lewis isn't out there pushing for head injury children," said Dr. Samuel Kasoff, chairman of the neurosurgery department at Westchester County Medical Center in Valhalla.

The foundation estimates that more than a million people suffer some degree of head trauma each year. Some 100,000 die from their injuries. Of those that survive, 70,000 to 90,000 are left with impairments that prevent them from living normal lives.

> 'Jerry Lewis isn't out there pushing for head injury children.'
> — Dr. Samuel Kasoff, Westchester County Medical Center, Valhalla, N.Y.

Motor vehicle accidents account for more than half the head injuries, according to the NHIF. Twenty percent are caused by falls, 12 percent by violence, and 10 percent are suffered during sports or recreation activities.

Increased use of helmets and seat belts and better emergency medical treatment have resulted in more people surviving head injuries, said trauma surgeon John B. Fortune.

"We're a mechanized, mobile society. We go very fast and get into accidents. Unfortunately, one of the organs that gets injured a lot is the head," said Fortune, director of the Northeastern New York Regional Trauma Center at Albany Medical Center Hospital.

With more survivors, demand grew in the 1980s for rehabilitation.

"Ten years ago when we were formed there were about five rehab facilities like New Medico. Now there are about 600," said Silvana Guerci-Lena, spokeswoman for the NHIF, a Southborough, Mass.-based advocacy group.

For victims of severe head injury, rehabilitation can be long and painful, with no guarantees.

When Been arrived at New Medico on Sept. 1, 1988, six weeks after a car accident, he could not walk or talk. He suffered memory loss and became easily distracted and agitated, common symptoms of traumatic brain injury.

"There's parts of my life I don't remember," he said. "It's hard. I used to cry a lot. Then I make the best of what it is, and say, 'Thanks, let's go on.'"

About 50 head injury patients, ages 16 and older, occupy New Medico's two floors, said spokeswoman Kathryn Rockenstire. A nearby center opened in 1989 and specializes in treating children.

Antiviral AZT inhibits HIV replication

By Robert P. Studer
Copley News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — Early treatment with zidovudine (ZDF, also called AZT), the antiviral drug for patients infected with the human immunodeficiency virus but have not yet developed its symptoms, can delay progression of the disease, a UC San Francisco-directed national research study has confirmed.

The antiviral drug inhibits the replication of human immunodeficiency virus (HIV), which attacks the human immune system, the study found — specifically T-helper (CD4 cells that guard the body against infection.

The findings were achieved in a random, double-blind test designed, the scientists said, as two separate sub-studies with patients who had T-helper cell counts either above or below 500 per cubic millimeter of blood.

The research team leader, Dr. Paul A. Volberding, UC San Francisco associate professor of medicine, who designed and coordinated the national trial, said AZT was given in a three-arm study to the two subgroups, using a dosage of either 500 mg or 1500 mg a day or a placebo.

Published in the Thursday (April 5) issue of the New England Journal of Medicine, the study began in July of 1987. By August of 1989, he said, it had become clear that treatment with AZT at the lower dosage of 500 mg a day was delaying progression of HIV disease with patients who had T-helper cell counts below 500.

In the three treatment groups, he said, the rates of progession to either AIDS or advanced ARC were 7.68 percent for those on the placebo, 3.6 percent for those on the 500 mg dose and 4.3 percent for those taking 1500 mg a day.

It was Volberding's report of the findings to the U.S. Federal Drug Administration last January that prompted that group's approval of AZT for use in HIV-infected asymptomatic patients on March 2.

Volberding also is director of the AIDS program at the UC San Francisco-affiliated San Francisco General Hospital.

AZT, he said, has been the most effective treatment for patients with AIDS or AIDS-related complex (ARC) since March of 1987, when trials found that patients given the drug lived longer and the frequency and severity of their opportunistic infections were significantly decreased. The FDA approved use of AZT at that time for patients with advanced HIV disease.

This new study, Volberding said, was part of the largest AIDS clinical trial ever conducted. It enrolled more than 3,200 volunteers at 32 medical centers that are members of the AIDS Clinical Trials Group of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases.

Anti-viral drugs like AZT work by interfering with the life cycle of a virus. They prevent the virus from entering the cell or inhibit the production of new viruses. AZT is the only anti-viral treatment for HIV infection that has been shown to prevent HIV replication in the brain, he said.

Gregg named AD

DALLAS (AP) — Southern Methodist athletic director Doug Single, hired three years ago to rebuild a scandal-scarred program, resigned Wednesday and football coach Forrest Gregg was named as his replacement.

Gregg

Single, who came to SMU after the NCAA ordered the football program shut down for two years after finding numerous violations, left to head up Special Olympic International.

The 56-year-old Gregg, hired by Single two years ago, will remain as football coach for the 1990 season before giving up his coaching duties to serve only as athletic director.

"In very few places has it ever worked successfully for the same person to be head coach and athletic director," SMU president A. Kenneth Pye, said. "Forrest brings integrity and the confidence of the alumni in his new jobs."

Pye also praised Single, who was in Washington, D.C. for a news conference to announce his new post, for restoring progress to SMU's athletic programs.

"I'll miss the players and the coaches and it will be tough for me to leave coaching," Gregg said about his decision to give up coaching after the 1990 season. "I thought I'd be coaching the rest of my career but this job will present a tremendous challenge and I look forward to it."

Trivia Teaser

Thursday's Question — New Oklahoma State coach Eddie Sutton is at his fourth NCAA Division I school. Previous stops include Arkansas and Kentucky. Where did Sutton first coach on the NCAA Division I level?

Wednesday's Answer — Oakland Athletics pitcher Dave Stewart is the highest-paid non-first baseman in the majors with a annual salary of $3,500,000.

Hyde lands in regionals

■ Midland High's top linkster qualifies in medalist play while San Angelo claims third straight girls district golf title.

By Joe Wyatt
Staff Writer

ODESSA — San Angelo's Lisa Balsch stroked a sterling 77, overtook Midland High's Jenny Hyde and repeated as District 4-5A's top female golfer at Odessa Country Club Wednesday. But the Bulldog senior will get another crack at Balsch when the pair meets at the Region I tournament in Lubbock.

Hyde, a two-shot leader going into the final league round, balooned to an 88 Wednesday for a 333 total. While she slipped to second place with the effort, she did win a spot in the regional showdown at Shadow Hills golf course April 27-28.

"I don't know what the competition is like at regionals," Hyde said, a newcomer to postseason golf. "I just know I'm going to have to work really hard."

Balsch, meanwhile, turned in the best round of district play and finished with a 324 that helped sweep her team to the district title for the third consecutive year, this time with 1,405 strokes.

Abilene Cooper earned the other regional berth, posting 1,445 strokes, 33 better than third-place Midland High.

"My past experience really helped me today," said Balsch, who finished third in state last year. "I knew coming in that I had to break 80 to have a chance. When I had trouble on a couple of holes, I just held my nerves and pulled it together."

Hyde, who played in the same threesome with Balsch throughout district competition, saw her game go in the opposite direction. The 88 was her worst effort in loop links.

"I just had no touch," Hyde said. "I couldn't seem to get on the greens, and when I did get on them I left all my putts short.

"But I'm happy to be going (to regionals). I'm very excited about it."

So is her golf coach, Quinn Eudy. The Bulldog mentor would also have enjoyed seeing his entire team off to regionals, but even on a day when three members of the team turned in their best scores of the season, they could not overtake second-place Cooper.

"I'm truly excited for Jenny," Eudy said. "I'm sure she's excited too. This wasn't her best round, but she's going to Lubbock and that's the main thing.

Brewster eyes coaching career

■ Gary Brewster has decided to turn to the world of instructor, where experience from his playing days can pay off.

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

Gary Brewster never really cared for being in the limelight, but it always seemed to be shining directly on him.

As a senior at Midland High in 1972, Brewster paced the Bulldog basketball team to a 31-3 record and a trip to the state semifinals, where San Antonio Jefferson downed the 'Dogs 54-52.

The 6-8 Brewster continued his hoops career at Texas-El Paso under the tutelage of legendary coach Don Haskins, and scored 1,212 points from 1973 through 1976.

Those efforts brought him to the brink of NBA competition before an injury forced him back into the "civilian" world. As a result of his career as a Miner, Brewster was recognized Feb. 24 as one of the UTEP fans' 15 favorite players of all time.

That honor puts him in some pretty elite company, as Nolan Richardson, Nate Archibald and Tim Hardaway were also among those 15 honored.

"I thought that was really neat because it came from the fans, not just a bunch of coaches or something like that. It did come as kind of a surprise, because I was a real quiet type of person and kept kind of a low profile on campus," Brewster said.

More than likely, the El Paso basketball rowdies were less concerned with Brewster's profile than they were with his defensive efforts.

He held eight opposing centers scoreless one season in Haskins' defensive system.

"We were a defensive school. We couldn't run with a bunch of the teams that we played, and Coach Haskins knew that. We concentrated on defense and a slower offense. It obviously worked, because we played three or four teams with All-Americans and beat them all," he said.

Being one of the Miner fans' favorites adds another notch to Brewster's belt of honors, one which also contains induction into the Texas High School Basketball Hall of Fame two years ago.

"When I found out about that I though it was a prank. Gen Iba (current head basketball coach at Baylor) is a friend of mine, and if he hadn't been the person to call me and tell me, I wouldn't have believed it," he said.

The numbers he put up in his senior year at MHS could hardly be considered "prankish," though. In 1972, Brewster averaged 18.4 points a game for a team that featured Brewster, 6-10 Ronald Taylor and only one starter shorter than 6-0.

"When we walked into a gym on the road, people thought we were a

SAN ANTONIO — Missions' shortstop Luis Martinez had three doubles to lead San Antonio over Midland for the second straight night, 3-1.

The Angels fell to 0-2; San Antonio is now at 2-0.

Mark Holzemer, who took the loss for the Angels, was tagged by a Henry Rodriguez home run in the Missions' fifth. Rodriguez' first blast of the year drove in Martinez who was on second after his final two-bagger.

San Antonio's first run came in the third when Martinez doubled in Eddie Pye who had reached on a triple.

The Angels scored their only run of the evening in the fourth when Mark Davis reached after being hit and came in on a two-out double to left-center by

Cowboys lasso Sutton

Associated Press

STILLWATER, Okla. — Eddie Sutton, out of basketball for a year after his forced resignation from Kentucky, was hired as the Oklahoma State coach Wednesday.

Sutton said he dreamed as a college student at Oklahoma State of coaching the Cowboys. "I always had a dream I might some day come back to my alma mater ... I've always thought of Oklahoma as my home," Sutton said.

The board of regents met for almost 90 minutes and voted 7-1 to hire Sutton as the school's 16th basketball coach. The only dissenter, John Montgomery, said he had no problem with Sutton, but felt the search process was not as thorough as it could have been.

The vote came shortly after university president John Campbell spoke in favor of Sutton, an Oklahoma State graduate who played for the Cowboys in the late 1950s. Sutton has been considered the frontrunner for the job since Leonard Hamilton left last week.

"I proudly recommend Eddie Sutton be employed as basketball coach at Oklahoma State," said Campbell, who interviewed Sutton during the weekend.

He recommended Sutton be hired with an annual salary of $85,000 and that a five-year contract be drawn up.

Sutton and his wife, Patsy, were on hand when the regents voted.

"To both of you, welcome home," said regent L.E. "Dean" Stringer.

At a news conference a short time later, Sutton's college coach, Henry Iba, introduced him, saying, "This is a great day for me and for Oklahoma State."

"I'm so happy they're here and back home where they belong," Iba said of Sutton and his wife, who also is an Oklahoma State graduate.

The 54-year-old Sutton brings a career record of 430-164 in 20 years of college coaching, with previous stops at Creighton, Arkansas and Kentucky.

Sutton has been out of coaching for the last year, since stepping aside at Kentucky under pressure.

During the news conference, Sutton addressed the problems at Kentucky and also took time to address reports of a past drinking problem.

"We had a horrible experience at the University of Kentucky," Sutton said.

"Believe me, I learned a lot there. I'm going to supervise

Caps drop Devils

Associated Press

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — John Druce snapped a 1-1 tie in the second period and the Washington Capitals defeated the New Jersey Devils 3-1 Wednesday night to even their Patrick Division semifinal series at two games apiece.

The best-of-7 series resumes Friday night at East Rutherford, N.J.

Washington goalie Don Beaupre, making his first start of the series, stopped 23 of 24 shots. The Capitals limited the Devils to seven shots in the final period and Beaupre's best save came with 6:21 to play when he smothered Kirk Muller's shot from right in front after a goalmouth scramble.

Druce gave the Capitals the lead for good just 15 seconds after New Jersey tied the score 1-1 on a goal by Muller at 13:02. John Tucker sent a centering pass from the left corner into the goalmouth that Druce deflected over goalie Sean Burke.

Bruins 6, Whalers 5

Dave Poulin scored the first and last of a four-goal third-period rally, getting the game-winner with 1:44 left as the Boston Bruins rallied from a three-goal deficit to defeat the Hartford Whalers 6-5 and even their Adams Division semifinals at two games apiece.

The best-of-7 series in Boston on Friday night.

Poulin and Dave Christian each had two goals apiece for Boston and Poulin assisted on Christian's tying goal at 8:10 of the third period.

Ten minutes later, Poulin scored the winning goal when a pass from Randy Burridge deflected off his skate and between the pads of Whalers goalie Peter Sidorkiewicz.

The Bruins, who had the best record in the NHL during the regular season, trailed 5-2 entering the third period and were in danger of falling behind three games to one. But Poulin started the comeback when he stuffed in his own rebound at 1:28 of the third period. Bob Beers and Christian scored 1:28 apart to tie the game.

The Bruins rallied after goalie Reggie Lemelin, who was beaten five times on 22 shots, was pulled for the third period in favor of Andy Moog. Moog made several key stops in third period, including a save on a point-blank shot by the Whalers' Scott Young late in the game.

Ray Bourque, Boston's All-Star defenseman, missed his second game of the series with a deep hip bruise. He is expected to return for Friday's game.

Hartford's Dean Evason started the scoring with the first period's only goal at 1:18. Brad Shaw made it 2-0 at 2:04 of the second period when his 30-foot back-hander beat Lemelin to the glove side.

The Bruins scored at 4:35 when Christian took a pass from Craig Janney and fired a wrist shot past Sidorkiewicz. But the Whalers increased their lead to 4-1 on goals by Kevin Dineen and Yvon Corriveau 1:27 apart.

Glen Wesley scored for Boston at 10:24 and Hartford's Ron Francis made it 5-2 when he stole Jim Wiemer's pass and scored an unassisted goal at 16:50. Francis had gone eight playoff games without a goal dating back to April 12, 1988.

Sabres 4, Canadiens 2

Pierre Turgeon's first two goals of the playoffs led the Buffalo Sabres to a 4-2 victory over the Montreal Canadiens on night to even their Adams Division playoff series and regain the home ice advantage.

The best-of-7 Adams Division semifinal is tied 2-2 with the next game scheduled for Friday night in Buffalo.

Turgeon broke a 2-2 tie when he took Rick Vaive's pass from behind the net and beat Montreal goalie Patrick Roy on a quick shot with only three seconds remaining in the second period. He then jumped on a loose puck in a scramble after a 2-on-1 break and lifted it over Roy at 1:02 of the third period.

Owens inks with USF

Staff Report

BELLAIRE — Midland College forward Tim Owens was one of two nationally-recruited players to sign a letter of intent with the University of San Francisco Wednesday.

Owens signed the letter from his home in Bellaire, near where he played high school basketball at Houston Jack Yates.

Also signing for USF was Owens' high school teammate Darryl Johnson.

"(Owens) is extremely quick and a tremendous athlete," USF head coach Jim Brovelli said. "These two men, and the three freshmen we signed last fall are exceptionally talented."

Owens, a first team all-leaguer in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference, averaged 18 points and 17 rebounds per game through 31 games during the 1989-90 campaign.

Owens was also being chased by Oregon, Baylor, Texas A&M, North Texas, Texas-San Antonio, Georgia Southern and Memphis State.

Johnson, a 6-6 forward from Houston, is described by Brovelli as "a big time rebounder who is among the best recruits we have signed."

Brovelli also described his '89-'90 signees as the Dons' "best recruiting class ever."

Midland set to host 4-5A tennis tourney

Staff Report

It is no coincidence that Midland High netters Elizabeth Ameel and Harper Essex will be the top seeds when their school hosts the District 4-5A tennis tournament Friday and Saturday. Each has won impressive singles victories this season, most recently at last week's Abilene Invitational.

"I expect both Harper and Elizabeth to advance to regionals," said Bulldog tennis coach Steve Hoover.

Essex, a member of the MHS doubles team that captured state gold in 1989, has already bested the best of the 4-5A competition this season. So has Ameel, and that includes an easy 6-1, 6-1 victory over last year's district champion, Allison March of San Angelo, at the Midland Invitational in March.

The Bulldogs will also be looking for gold in boys doubles when Leo Oei and Lanny Temple take the court. The duo reached the semifinals of the Abilene Invitational before losing a tight match to a team from Hurst L.D. Bell.

Odessa Permian's Kathy and Mary Burian are top girls' doubles seeds while Cooper's Sheri Gilreath and Tracy Broyles are seeded second in that division. Boys' doubles seedings will be announced after match play begins.

Matches begin at 9 a.m. Friday morning at the MHS tennis courts.

Floyd tries to recover from Masters loss

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Three days after what he called the most devastating loss of his career, Raymond Floyd said he has put his sudden-death defeat at the Masters behind him.

"It was a very difficult thing for me," Floyd said Wednesday. "It's a difficult defeat to put aside. But I think I put it in perspective and things are really all right. It's behind me. I'm over it. I'm playing well. I hope to have a good week here."

The 47-year-old Floyd a 4-stroke lead with six holes to play and appeared ready to become the oldest player to win the event. But Nick Faldo, also playing the Heritage Classic, made a late charge and went on to win his second consecutive Masters on the second hole of the playoff.

Afterward, Floyd said the loss was "the most devastating thing that's happened to me in my career."

But Floyd said Wednesday he's not feeling sorry for himself — and he doesn't want anyone else to, either.

"I didn't lose a child or my wife, it wasn't life threatening," he said. "Sport gives you such a down and an up. Sport is such an emotional thing. When you win, it's the most satisfying thing. You get lifted so high.

"In a loss, it's the opposite. You go down. But we have to put these things in perspective. There are a lot of folks that never get the chance. You know, we haven't lost life or limb. It's not too bad. We can get over these things."

Even in defeat, Floyd said he still passed his own competition test.

"I made a schedule through June and what I wanted to do was to find out if Ray Floyd was a competitive player any longer," Floyd said. "And I've played seven events and I've got a second and a third. So I'm very pleased to find that I am competitive.

"I feel now that I can win a golf tournament. I know that I can go out and compete. And that's a nice feeling.

staff members a lot more closely than I did there. ... I don't ever want to go through an investigation again, and I know this university doesn't."

Sutton was not named in infractions that led to Kentucky being placed on NCAA probation. The principal complaint cited by Kentucky officials concerned Sutton's management of a program with flaws dating to the previous regime.

He stressed that the NCAA cleared him of any wrongdoing.

As for any past drinking troubles, Sutton said, "I recognized three years ago there was a problem. I dealt with it."

He said he thought his experience dealing with that will help in coaching at Oklahoma State.

"I feel better prepared today to coach Oklahoma State University than at any other time I might have had that opportunity," he said.

Sutton said he expected this to be his last coaching job.

Trevino wants to stay close to Bear

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. (AP) — Lee Trevino said his task is simple to identify. But not easy to accomplish. Not at all.

His mission, he said, is to "stay close to Jack Nicklaus."

"If you're close to Jack, you're close to winning," Trevino said Wednesday after a final practice round for the 51st PGA Seniors Championship.

But knowing what has to be done and doing it is something else, Trevino said.

"He's the hardest man to beat I've ever seen. And he is the man to beat. No question about that," Trevino said. "Any time Jack Nicklaus shows up, any tournament Jack Nicklaus plays in, he's the man to beat."

Trevino was the man to beat earlier this season, winning three of four starts on the Seniors Tour before Nicklaus made his first start among the over-50 set.

Nicklaus, who made a run at a seventh Masters title before fading on the final nine holes last week, will be making his second Seniors appearance this week. It will be a rare, third consecutive week of competition for the man who has played a restricted schedule for more than a decade.

"I haven't done this in years and years and years," said Nicklaus, who won a Seniors title immediately before the Masters. "I'm tired. I played like I was tired today.

"But remember when we used to have the Tournament of Champions right after Augusta? I won there several times after winning at Augusta.

junior college team. We had some talent, but the real reason we won so many games was because of the coaching of James Cagle. He was a great coach and knew the game so well."

With all the recent honors serving as constant reminders of his past glories, Brewster, who is a Midland painting contractor, found it hard to stay away from the court. A short stint as a land man in the oil business during the early 1980s fell through with the oil bust. After that he considered returned to UTEP to earn a master's degree and begin a career as a collegiate coach.

That plan was delayed, however, by his family's desire to stay in Midland until a more opportune time. Brewster decided this week that the time is now.

"The only way I can do this is if Coach (Haskins) helps me out. With all the health problems he has had (Haskins missed the latter part of the season and the NCCA tournament because of a severely sore throat), nobody's even sure how long he will be coaching out there.

"I hate to leave Midland. We have talked about it before, but we were involved in church and school and just didn't do it. It's going to be hard because Midland's always been my home. But we finally decided to make the step."

One thing Brewster has done to bring out the coaching instinct and help Midland youth before he leaves is offer his services from time to time to a local 15-year-old team.

"I just showed them a little defense. Their coach is Dale Pond, and what they will do is tour the country this season, playing teams from places like Memphis, Tenn., until they lose."

So Brewster has already begun to hone the edge that may eventually influence many young men, just as his life was so heavily touched by Cagle and Haskins.

Hawks foil Buck plans

Associated Press

ATLANTA (AP) — Glenn Rivers and John Long scored four points apiece in a 12-2 fourth-quarter surge as the Atlanta Hawks prevented Milwaukee from clinching a playoff berth, beating the Bucks 106-94 Wednesday night.

The victory helped Atlanta in its battle with Cleveland for the final playoff berth in the Eastern Conference. The Hawks lead by a percentage point. Dominique Wilkins scored 27 points, Rivers 23 and Long 16 to give the Hawks their second victory in a row.

Ricky Pierce came off the bench for the Bucks, who had won four straight games, to score 31 points for the second night in a row. Brad Lohaus added 19 points and 12 rebounds.

Pistons 98, Nets 93

Mark Aguirre scored 13 of his 22 points in the fourth quarter, including seven straight as the Detroit Pistons beat New Jersey 98-93, handing the Nets their 25th straight road loss.

It was Detroit's 11th straight victory over the Nets dating back to Jan. 30, 1988. The loss, which extended New Jersey's franchise record for road futility, was its 17th in 19 games overall.

Isiah Thomas scored 21 points for the Pistons, Vinnie Johnson added 14 and Bill Laimbeer had 13 points and 13 rebounds. Joe Dumars scored eight points in his second game back since missing seven with a broken left hand.

Chris Morris and Purvis Short scored points 19 each to lead New Jersey. Jack Haley added 17 points, Lester Conner 11 and Charles Shackleford and Pete Myers 10 each.

After Morris hit a free throw to tie the game at 78 in the fourth quarter, Aguirre made two jump shots and a 3-pointer to put the Pistons ahead 85-78 with 6:42 left.

Detroit led by as many as nine points in the first quarter and 10 in the second.

Bulls 107, Cavaliers 86

Michael Jordan scored 22 points as the Chicago Bulls won their eighth straight game, beating Cleveland 107-86 to drop the Cavaliers behind Atlanta in the race for the final Eastern Conference playoff berth.

The victory, Chicago's 14th in 16 games, improved the Bulls' home record to 33-5. By losing, Cleveland dropped a half-game behind Atlanta, which beat Milwaukee 106-94.

John Paxson, Scottie Pippen and Bill Cartwright had 15 points apiece for Chicago. The Cavaliers were led by Brad Daugherty and Winston Bennett, with 17 points each.

Frogs pace SWC signings

Associated Press

Texas Christian University started replenishing its depleted basketball squad Wednesday, the first day of the national signing period, by signing two junior college players to letters of intent.

The Horned Frogs, which lost seven players since the 1989-90 school year began, signed Dan Dore, a 6-3 guard who helped lead Central Florida Community College to the Mid-Florida Conference Championship last season.

Dore averaged 13.5 points, 2.7 rebounds and two assists. The two-year starter from Fajardo, Puerto Rica will be a junior at TCU next season.

The national signing periods ends May 15.

TCU also signed Jody Bentley, a 6-6 forward from Aquinas Junior College in Nashville, Tenn. Bentley averaged 19 points and 8 rebounds a game last season.

"This is a good start for our 1990 recruiting class," said Moe Iba, TCU head coach. "Both of our incoming juniors have the ability to step in an contribute immediately."

The Baylor Bears signed a trio of players, including Willie Sublett, a 6-4 forward from Martin High School in Arlington.

Sublett averaged 16.9 points and 10.5 rebounds to help lead his team to an impressive 30-5 record and a trip to the region semifinals this season.

"Going into spring recruiting our main objective was to look for two or three solid small forwards and adding Willie today puts us right on track to achieve that," said Gene Iba, the Bears' head coach.

Baylor also signed 6-6 forward Herb Baker from Sam Houston High School in Houston and 6-7 forward David Hamilton from Shawnee Mission, Kan. Baker averaged 16.3 points and 9.7 rebounds a game during his senior year.

Arkansas, the Southwest Conference champs, signed three more recruits. The Razorbacks signed Isaiah "Butch" Morris of San Jacinto Junior College, Pine Bluff's Ken Biley and Corey Beck of Memphis Fairley.

So far, 17 players have committed to Arkansas, and Yugoslavia native Davor Rimac of Fayetteville was expected to sign Thursday.

Morris, 6-9, 230-pounder from Richmond, Va., averaged 13.7 points and 7.4 rebounds while averaging 22 minutes a game for San Jacinto last season.

Biley, a 6-6 forward, averaged 23.1 points and 15.1 rebounds a game last season in leading the Zebras to the Class 4-A and overall state championships. Nolan Richardson, Arkansas' head coach, compared Biley to Lenzie Howell, a San Jacinto product and one of three seniors on this year's Razorback team.

Beck, a 6-2 guard, averaged 19.5 points, eight rebounds and six assists as a high school senior.

Texas A&M added one playing, signing Gabe Ramirez, a 5-10 point guard from San Jacinto Junior College. Ramirez averaged 9.2 points and 7.1 assists a game last season.

DETROIT (AP) — William Reedy, preparing his sports bar for opening day at nearby Tiger Stadium, was sidetracked Wednesday by his conflicting accounts of the Christmas Day accident that killed manager Billy Martin.

Reedy told one newspaper that Martin — not he — was driving the pickup truck that crashed near Martin's upstate New York farm, killing the feisty former manager of the Yankees, Detroit Tigers and three other teams.

Reedy told the Detroit Free Press he lied, telling police he was driving, to protect his friend. He said he didn't realize at the time that Martin was fatally injured.

Interviewed later by The Detroit News, Reedy denied making the statements to the Free Press.

Reached Wednesday at his bar, Reedy's Saloon, Reedy did nothing to clear up the conflict. "I'm not giving any more statements," Reedy said.

His attorney, Jon Blechman of Binghamton, N.Y., also declined comment on who was driving. "That's something the prosecution is going to have to prove, and there's a place for that," he said.

Broome County District Attorney Gerald Mollen said Tuesday that Reedy would be charged only with driving while intoxicated when Martin's truck slid into a culvert at the end of his driveway.

Blechman said prosecutors lacked evidence to warrant more serious charges against Reedy, such as vehicular manslaughter. "They found no evidence to show that William Reedy is criminally responsible for the death of Billy Martin," he said.

Reedy, who suffered a broken hip in the wreck, was quoted in the Free Press as saying he didn't realize the extent of Martin's injuries.

"I thought he was knocked out," Reedy said. "I'm going to plead not guilty to driving while intoxicated, or even to driving.

"I told them I was driving to try to protect Billy," he told the newspaper in an interview at his bar. "We've been friends for 20, 25 years, and Billy had put up with a lot of stuff from (New York Yankees owner) George Steinbrenner."

He denied he and the five-time New York Yankees manager were drunk, though he said, "We both had drinks."

Reedy's story changed when The Detroit News contacted him for an article, also published Wednesday.

"I never told (the Free Press) that," Reedy said. "It's crazy. That's the reason the attorney told me not to make any statements.

Raider fans buy up reserved seating

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The battle over the agreement to return the Los Angeles Raiders to Oakland got hotter Wednesday as backers said season ticket reservations have exceeded their hopes and opponents filed petitions that could kill the deal.

Fans eager to welcome the Raiders back to their original home have reserved 38,318 of the Oakland Coliseum's 57,000 seats, pledging $5.3 million during the past week, even though the contract with the team has not been signed, city and county officials said.

"The response has been overwhelming," said Don Perata, president of the Alameda County Board of Supervisors. "I think that's a remarkable commitment by the fans to the return of the team."

Officials marketed the tickets — including many expensive seats for several years — for one week in an attempt to show critics the deal would work. Under the agreement, the city and county would guarantee the Raiders $428 million in ticket revenue over 15 years.

"We have over $5 million of real money ... hard cash money as a deposit on seats to watch that team when they return," he said at a news conference.

Perata said demand for tickets was so good that the Coliseum already was close to the break-even point for 1992, the first season the Raiders would be back in Oakland. He predicted 95 percent of the stadium would sell out.

Meanwhile, opponents who fear taxpayers could end up with the bill if fans don't pack the Coliseum, submitted more than 30,000 signatures to put the Raiders' deal on a future Oakland ballot.

The issue could appear in a special election this summer or with other ballot races in November.

"The city should not be put at risk to guarantee ticket sales for what is a private enterprise," said Frank Russo, an Oakland lawyer who led the petition drive. "There's not a section of the city, not a part of the city, not an identifiably group of people that is not supporting us."

THURSDAY, APRIL 12, 1990

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Take advantage of any unusual opportunities that come your way. Romance is favored in June; some will marry. As business profits rise, you begin thinking about expanding your base of operations. Your choice of partner will determine the degree of success you enjoy in October. Consider a change of lifestyle in November. An addition to the family circle brings great joy. Reconciliations are possible in early 1991; family ties are strengthened.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: comedian David Letterman, dancer Ann Miller, opera singer Lily Pons, musician Herbie Hancock.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Give in to a creative or adventurous urge. Clients are willing to pay top dollar for original ideas. Share health-oriented activities with family. Finalize your social plans for the weekend.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Practicality is the key to making lasting financial gains. Exercise greater self-discipline. New avenues open up where your career is concerned. Partnerships are in the limelight. Get all promises in writing.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A morning disclosure could be upsetting. Seek a lawyer's advice if you have doubts about a contract or agreement. Welcome new responsibilities; they could bring more pay or greater public recognition.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A social event may not live up to your expectations. Welcome a unique opportunity to mix business with pleasure. You need to avoid going to extremes where spending or eating is concerned.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Some early-morning confusion is possible. Your loved ones' cooperation soon sets things right. A next-door neighbor could speak to you about a delicate matter. Be discreet. Keep your own counsel.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A phone call lifts your spirits early today. Romance is favored. Try to get more exercise. Mate gives you the strength to make the right decision. Your children will agree with your choice.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your intuition could be playing tricks on you. Do not bank on hunches. Postpone making an important decision until you have a chance to talk with others face-to-face. Your finances improve.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Welcome new information about a longtime situation. You can bury the past. A meeting with someone influential gives you food for thought. Teamwork will improve the bottom line. Move swiftly.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A "red letter" day for your personal relationships. Someone who talks your language has great romantic appeal. Plan entertainment that is both fun and inexpensive.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A conflict betweeen home and work must be resolved. A neighbor offers to baby-sit in an emergency. Do something special for this thoughtful friend.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A day full of surprises! New projects get under way. Give credit where it is due and you will make a lifelong friend. Someone with special gifts comes to your rescue in an emergency.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Make this a productive day. Original ideas count big with the powers that be. Others look to you for leadership. A get-together with friends will prove both fun and relaxing this evening.

TODAY'S CHILDREN listen attentively to advice and then do exactly as they please. They excel in geography and languages but may receive mediocre grades in mathematics and science. These Aries have strong artistic flair and can become accomplished artists or musicians if trained. They love to create their own world of fantasy. Many born on this date will become writers. They are happiest pursuing careers where they can work alone. Natural charmers, today's children have many friends and admirers.

Be wary if someone hands you a suit combination and asks: "How do you play this holding?" The correct response is: "For how many tricks?"

This hand illustrates the point nicely. The auction was accurate and fast. The play was as speedy, but way off target.

West led a spade, taken in the closed hand. Declarer finessed the jack of clubs, and East made an excellent play by letting dummy hold the trick. Not unnaturally, declarer returned to hand and repeated the finesse. When it lost and the suit broke 4-2, as was only to be expected, declarer found that, without an enemy error, there was no way to come to nine tricks. Down one.

Had declarer needed four tricks from the club suit, or had there been another entry to the table, his play of the hand would have been absolutely correct. But declarer had six tricks in the other suits, so three club tricks would have been enough for game. And there was only one side-suit entry to the board.

To assure the contract against anything but an outlandish club split, declarer should simply have ducked a club at trick two. Suppose East were to win the nine and return a spade. (No other return would make a difference.) Declarer wins and now takes the club finesse. East wins and clears declarer's last spade stopper, but declarer can get to dummy with the king of diamonds to take three club tricks and, with them, his contract. True, declarer might have taken 11 tricks with a successful club finesse and a lucky break, but why rely on Dame Fortune rather than winning technique?

1,500 say final goodbye to AIDS sufferer Ryan White

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — More than 1,500 friends and admirers, including first lady Barbara Bush and singer Michael Jackson, bid farewell Wednesday to Ryan White, the young AIDS victim who taught the nation a lesson in courage.

"Ryan and his family always believed there would be a miracle," the Rev. Raymond Probasco said in his eulogy. "But that didn't happen. I believe God gave us that miracle in Ryan. He healed a wounded spirit in the world and made it whole."

Ryan's mother, Jeanne, sat with her 16-year-old daughter, Andrea, and Jackson, who had befriended Ryan. Ryan's father, Wayne, who is divorced from Mrs. White, also attended the service at the Second Presbyterian Church.

Singer Elton John, who had maintained a bedside vigil during Ryan's final week of life, led the congregation in singing a hymn. He then accompanied himself as he sang his own composition, "Skyline Pigeon," about a captive bird yearning to be freed.

Ryan died Sunday of complications from the disease he had fought for more than five years.

Probasco noted that many celebrities had befriended the youth during his struggle with AIDS and his legal battle to attend public school. He said Ryan's life, like theirs, also was successful.

"He helped us to care and to believe that with God's help, nothing is impossible, even for a kid," said the minister, who is pastor at Center Chapel United Methodist Church in Muncie and has known the White family for years.

John, wearing a black sequined hat, served as a pallbearer with Los Angeles Raiders football player Howie Long, talk-show host Phil Donahue and three local friends of Ryan: Tommy Hale, Leo Joseph and John Huffman.

About 300 of Ryan's schoolmates at Hamilton Heights High School in Arcadia, 25 miles north of Indianapolis, came by bus to the funeral, which was carried live by Cable News Network.

A private burial service was held for the family and close friends in a cemetery in Cicero, the small town near Arcadia, where the Whites have lived nearly three years.

Gov. Evan Bayh ordered flags across Indiana to fly at half-staff in tribute to the youngster who not only confronted a devastating disease but helped to educate the world about it.

Former President Reagan, who with his wife, Nancy, joined Ryan in the youth's last public appearance two weeks ago in Los Angeles, remembered him in a newspaper column as a young man of patience and kindness who did not wallow in self-pity.

MAJOR LEAGUE BASEBALL

BOSTON (AP) — Dwight Evans homered in the fifth inning and singled home the winning run in the 10th to lead the Boston Red Sox past the Detroit Tigers 3-2 Wednesday for a sweep of their three-game series.

Boston has won 11 consecutive games against the Tigers since a 7-3 loss last June 14 in Fenway Park.

Wade Boggs singled to lead off the 10th off Jerry Don Gleaton, 0-1, Detroit's fifth pitcher. Marty Barrett sacrificed, Mike Greenwell was hit by a pitch and Ellis Burks popped out to shortstop. Evans, in his 18th major league season, followed with a grounder between Tony Phillips and the third-base line.

Greg Harris, 1-0, pitched the final inning for the victory as four Boston pitched limited the Tigers to seven hits.

Detroit tied it in the sixth off John Dopson. Alan Trammell blooped a one-out single off Randy Kutcher's glove in shallow right, took third as Billy Jo Robidoux let Lou Whitaker's sharp grounder go through his legs at first for an error and scored on Cecil Fielder's single.

It was the first major league hit since 1988 for Fielder, signed as a free agent for $3 million over two years after playing in Japan last season.

Rangers 11, Blue Jays 5

Pete Incaviglia homered and drove in five runs as the Texas Rangers built a 10-run lead in two innings and coasted past the Toronto Blue Jays 11-5.

The Blue Jays' streak of 41 straight sellouts at the SkyDome ended as just 35,031 fans attended. More than 49,000 saw Toronto beat the Rangers in its home opener a day earlier.

Incaviglia tied his career high for RBIs with a three-run homer and a two-run single as Texas scored five times in first inning and got five more in the second for a 10-0 lead. George Bell hit a grand slam in the Toronto third and Junior Felix homered in the Blue Jays' seventh.

Kevin Brown (1-0) allowed four runs on seven hits in six innings. Mike Jeffcoat finished for his first save since June 10, 1984, when he got his only previous major league save with Cleveland.

Twins 3, Athletics 0

Kent Hrbek hit a three-run homer in the first inning and rookie right-hander Kevin Tapani pitched six shutout innings as the Minnesota Twins beat the Oakland Athletics 3-0.

Mike Norris, returning from a series of drug and alcohol problems, pitched the last two innings for Oakland, his first major league appearance since Aug. 6, 1983, at Minnesota. It was his first relief appearance since Sept. 25, 1979, at Texas.

Yankees vs. Indians

Cory Snyder found the perfect way to play baseball in a snowstorm.

"You figure snow's white. You just look for the biggest snowflake," Snyder said after he had a home run and a double erased when the Cleveland Indians' opener against the New York Yankees was snowed out in the fourth inning.

Three games Wednesday were postponed because of snow.

New York plays to Viola's tune, Cubs snowed out

Associated Press

Shea Stadium looked a little bit like St. John's University on Wednesday. Redmen alumnus Frank Viola got the victory and fellow alumnus John Franco got the save.

Viola allowed five hits in 7 2-3 innings as the New York Mets rebounded from an opening day blowout with a 3-0 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Franco, acquired from Cincinnati for reliever Randy Myers, finished the six-hitter for his first save with the Mets.

"I grew up in New York and always wanted to pitch for the Mets," Franco said. "I use to pretend I was Tug McGraw."

Viola came home to New York in the trade with Minnesota last July 31. He struck out eight and walked none.

"He was so sharp that even if the hitters guessed what was coming they couldn't hit it," New York catcher Barry Lyons said.

Gregg Jefferies and Kevin McReynolds hit home runs for the Mets, who also had two homers in the opener.

Reds 5, Astros 0

Todd Benzinger's second-inning double gave the Reds the lead, and Eric Davis hit a two-run double in a three-run third inning.

Mahler pitched the final three innings for his first save since May 15, 1981, for Atlanta against St. Louis. Astros starter Mark Portugal allowed seven hits and five runs in 3 1-3 innings.

NL

Expos 6, Cardinals 4

Oil Can Boyd won his first National League start and Tim Raines hit a go-ahead sacrifice fly off Greg Mathews in the seventh as Montreal averted a three-game sweep.

Boyd, who left Boston to sign with the Expos as a free agent on Dec. 7, gave up four hits and three runs in six innings, struck out four and walked two. Tim Burke, the fourth Montreal pitcher, got the final four outs for his first save and finished the seven-hitter.

Giants 8, Braves 0
Braves 4, Giants 3

Kevin Bass and Robby Thompson homered as San Francisco opened its National League title defense with a shutout. The Braves won the second game, keyed by rookie Mark Lemke's second-inning single with the bases loaded.

Rick Reuschel gave up three hits in 5 2-3 innings of the first game and Jeff Brantley and Atlee Hammaker finished with hitless relief as the Giants won their sixth straight opener.

Phillies at Cubs postponed by snow

Wednesday's starters, Terry Mulholland of the Phillies and Steve Wilson of the Cubs, will pitch in the first game Thursday.

Senator predicts expansion

DENVER (AP) — A Colorado senator says he has it on "very good authority" that Denver and the Tampa-St. Petersburg area of Florida will be awarded National League expansion franchises by the end of the year.

But Democratic Sen. Tim Wirth, chairman of the Senate Task Force on the Expansion of Major League Baseball, declined to reveal his source for the information, the Rocky Mountain News reported Wednesday.

Major League Baseball has promised an announcement on a timetable for expansion within 90 days after a settlement was reached with the players. Wirth said an announcement might be made well before the June 19 deadline.

National League president Bill White told the Tampa Tribune Wednesday that the timetable study is complete.

"We have 13 cities and two corridors throughout the country that we feel should have an opportunity to come in and present their cases for major league teams," White said. Corridors are areas that have a good chance in to explode in population in the future.

Horn becomes latest Baltimore surprise story

By Murray Chass
N.Y. Times News Service

The Baltimore Orioles derived remarkable results last season from their collection of youngsters and reclamation projects. This season is only days old and already their system is working again.

This time it's a reclamation project named Sam Horn who has given the Orioles reason to feel good about their system. Horn, who was signed as a minor league free agent this past winter, hit a pair of three-run home runs and stroked two singles in Baltimore's opening-day 7-6 victory over Kansas City.

It's only one game, of course, but if Horn becomes as fruitful a development as Randy Milligan, the Orioles will have struck again. Horn and Milligan, interestingly, have followed parallel paths.

Milligan was a first-round selection of the Mets in the 1981 amateur draft and a productive minor league first baseman. Playing in the International League in 1987, he batted .326, hit 29 home runs and drove in 103 runs.

Horn was a first-round selection of the Boston Red Sox in the 1982 draft and a productive minor league first baseman. Playing in the International League in 1987, he batted .321, hit 30 home runs and drove in 84 runs in only 94 games.

Blocked by Keith Hernandez and the absence of the designated hitter in the National League, Milligan never got a chance to win a job with the Mets.

They traded him to Pittsburgh in 1988, but in 40 games, he batted .220, hit three home runs and knocked in eight runs. The Pirates then traded him to Baltimore, where he batted .268, hit 12 home runs and drove in 45 runs last season.

The numbers weren't overwhelming, but the Orioles liked what they saw and made him their regular first baseman.

Horn made it to the major leagues for 103 games with the Red Sox the previous three seasons, but he never hit lustily enough to gain a steady job. Deciding his future might be elsewhere, he left the Boston system as a free agent and signed with the Orioles.

"What Randy told me weighed in my decision to sign with Baltimore," Horn said. "We grew up together and played baseball against each other in high school. This past winter I talked to him and he said the organization was really good."

Horn had two problems to overcome this spring, one early, one late. In the early days in the Orioles' minor league camp, he faced competition from Randy Bass, who returned to this country after establishing himself as a star home-run hitter in Japanese baseball. Bass, however, suffered a knee injury and decided to retire.

Then early last week, just as the Orioles were going to summon Horn to the major league camp, he went home to San Diego, where his mother had suffered a stroke.

"I was pretty pleased about my performance," Horn said, speaking of the opener. "But I'm not thinking about that anymore. That's behind me. I'm just going to try and take advantage of it and see what I can do."

The way Joe McIlvaine, the Mets' vice president for baseball operations, sees it, the lockout that delayed the start of spring training had one positive aspect.

"We probably had better scouting coverage of high schools and colleges," he said. "The scouts who normally would have been scouting major league players for trades were sent to cover high schools and colleges."

McIlvaine himself went on scouting missions before major league camps opened, moving from one small Southern town to another watching high school prospects.

Oil futures up

NEW YORK (AP) — A flood of OPEC crude oil and weak demand for gasoline and home heating oil are responsible for the recent sharp slide in oil prices, analysts said Wednesday.

Oil futures veered lower, but by late afternoon had recovered the day's lost ground and rose above Tuesday's close.

Prices rebounded later in the session after rumors circulated that OPEC nations were consulting by telephone and considering calling an emergency meeting about the decline.

"The only thing that can turn this market around would be OPEC," said James R. Fiedler, a vice president at E.D.&F. Man International Futures Inc.

On Wednesday, the May contract for West Texas Intermediate, rose 38 cents to settle at $18.06 a barrel.

Dollar mixed

Gold traded in London at $374.75 an ounce. In Zurich, Switzerland, the bid for gold fell to $374 an ounce.

Oil leak cleanup fund gets rolling

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Water Commission has made the first payment from a new fund to help clean up contamination caused by petroleum spills or leaks from faulty storage tanks.

Rep. Glenn Repp, R-Duncanville, delivered the $20,682 check to the Weatherford Oil Co. of Wilmer at the commission's office.

Money from the fund established by the Legislature goes to tank owners and operators. It is paid for through a fee on the delivery of petroleum products.

■ The House Banking Committee holds hearings in Dallas to examine investigations of fraud in the savings and loan industry and learns the FBI is searching for fraud at 530 failed financial institutions.

By John A. Bolt

DALLAS (AP) — Federal agencies are searching for fraud at 530 failed financial institutions as part of the government's effort to find blame for the collapse in the savings and loan industry, FBI Director William S. Sessions said Wednesday.

"Although it was the general economic downtown in Texas that surfaced the problem, it appears to the FBI as if a pervasive pattern of fraudulent lending activity began much earlier," Sessions said at a hearing of the House Banking Committee.

The committee, chaired by Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, is holding two days of hearings in Dallas to examine investigations of fraud in the industry.

"Experience demonstrates that insider abuse is a major factor in almost all of our investigations involving failed financial institutions," Sessions said.

"This is not a problem that is limited to Texas, or even to the Southwest," Sessions said. "More incidents of insider abuse have been identified in Texas, however, because the Texas institutions are coming under closer scrutiny as they are being declared insolvent.

In North Texas alone, Sessions said, "The Dallas (Bank Fraud) Task force currently has 38 separate savings and loans institutions identified wherein major conspiratorial fraud is alleged. Over 500 subjects have been identified for investigation and possible prosecution.

"Potential financial loss exposure is $10.5 billion," Sessions said.

Gonzalez criticized the Bush administration for the pace of implementing regulations and safeguards adopted last year in bailout legislation.

"We gave the regulatory and the law enforcement agencies unprecedented power to deal with the crisis and the cleanup," Gonzalez said. "We intended that this effort have priority at every level — from the Oval Office of the White House, to the examiners in the field, to the agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and to the attorneys in the bureaucracy of the Justice Department."

"The recovery machinery at the Resolution Trust Corp., (the agency created to rescue thrifts) creaks along like some old Model T with many of its parts missing. The biggest evidence of life and vigor has been the outlandish bureaucratic infighting that has paralyzed and driven away the better people," Gonzalez said.

"The American people — judging from my mail and my telephone calls — are angry about what they see as 'business as usual' approach to a disaster that is costing them dearly," Gonzalez said.

Conoco unveils environmental plans

■ Conoco Tuesday broke rank with the oil industry in ordering double-hulled tankers, part of a nine-point environmental program.

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Conoco Inc. said Tuesday it was ordering two double-hull oil tankers as part of a measure designed to guard against spills like last year's wreck of the Exxon Valdez offshore Alaska.

Nicandros

The step was part of a nine-point environmental program Conoco unveiled that also included efforts to reduce toxic air emissions.

"We are in the business by the public's consent," said Constantine S. Nicandros, Conoco president and chief executive officer. "We are sincere in our concern for the air, water and land of our planet as a matter of enlightened self-interest."

Oil companies have faced increasing pressure from politicians and environmentalists to switch to double-hull tankers since the Exxon Valdez ran aground, gushing nearly 11 million gallons of crude into Prince William Sound in the nation's worst spill ever.

Many oil industry officials have argued against twin-hull vessels, however, claiming that they could be less stable than conventional tankers if their outer hull is pierced.

Conoco said it would order only double-hull tankers in the future and had placed an order for two such vessels.

As part of its plan, the company also said it would:

— Support the creation of citizen advisory councils at all major installations worldwide to monitor environmental performance.

— Reward top managers for emphasizing and implementing plans that benefit the environment and penalize lack of performance in the area.

— Provide double containment systems at all newly constructed and renovated gasoline outlets.

— Intensify research and development of fuels that improve the environment.

— Create yearlong environmental fellowships to let several outsiders work within the company on environmental matters.

Businesses plan more capital spending

■ A survey indicates U.S. businesses are shrugging off predictions of a recession and plan a record $503.4 billion in capital spending, up 7.6 percent from last year.

By Dave Skidmore

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's businesses, shrugging off economists' gloomy recession predictions, have significantly increased their plans for modernization and expansion this year, the government said Wednesday.

The Commerce Department said a survey completed in March found businesses planning a record $503.4 billion in plant and equipment spending in 1990, up 7.6 percent from last year.

Businesses had projected a much less optimistic 4.9 percent rise in an earlier survey released in December, when many analysts were forecasting the imminent end of the economy's seven-year expansion.

"The significance of this is it's one more piece of evidence we're not going into a recession," said economist Gordon Richards of the National Association of Manufacturers. "Capital spending ... (will be) providing some strength to an otherwise weak economy."

If the new projections are realized, spending would surpass the previous record of $467.8 billion set last year and would mark the fourth consecutive increase. Capital spending rose 8.6 percent in 1989, 8.9 percent in 1988 and 4.2 percent in 1987.

All the figures have been adjusted for inflation.

The surprisingly strong investment plans come at a time of generally sluggish economic growth and declining corporate profits.

Greyhound: 'Easter will help rebuild'

By John A. Bolt

DALLAS (AP) — The Easter holiday weekend could push Greyhound Lines Inc. over the top in its efforts to rebuild from a bus drivers strike, says President Frank Schmeider.

And another top executive predicts the company will be serving 95 percent of its pre-strike markets by the start of the busy summer travel season.

The five-day Easter travel period ending Monday is one of the five busiest times of the year for Greyhound, and Schmeider said the company projects revenue in the next few days will be between 70 percent and 73 percent of last year, an increase from current levels of between 63 percent and 65 percent.

"Seventy-three percent of revenue is cash break even, and when we do that, we figure we've turned the corner," said Schmeider, who on March 28 said the strike was "essentially over" in much of the country.

"They've been claiming the turned corners for the last six weeks," said Jeffrey Nelson, a spokesman for the Amalgamated Council of Greyhound Local Unions. "Their claims are preposterous."

The company's 6,300 drivers and about 3,000 of its office and maintenance workers walked out March 2 in an argument over wages and job security. Greyhound has been operating a reduced schedule since, using permanent replacements and drivers willing to cross picket lines.

Pre-retirement income impacts benefits

By Scott Burns

Q. In a recent column you wrote that, as a rule of thumb, you needed about 13 years of income in savings if you were to replace your income in retirement and didn't have a pension, etc. Can you tell us how Social Security income will affect this rule?

Burns

My wife and I are both 60 and expect to retire at 62. We both work and earn about $90,000 a year, have a $35,000 cost of living, and save the rest. We have $215,000 in savings and expect to have $275,000 by the time we retire.
D.C., Dallas, Texas

A. How Social Security income affects your retirement depends on your earned income before retirement.

Economists who deal with Social Security issues calculate a "replacement rate" — the percentage of pre-retirement income that will be replaced by Social Security benefits. The benefit payments are skewed slightly, providing relatively higher benefits for low income workers.

According to the Consumer Guide on Social Security, a $3.50 Signet paperback (and a book anyone thinking about retirement should read), a worker who always earned the minimum wage could expect benefits of $391 a month for retirement this year. That would be a replacement rate of about 68 percent of that earner's income, more if you consider that the worker paid employment taxes.

From there, the replacement rate declines. A worker who always paid at the Social Security wase base maximum, for instance, would be eligible for $795 a month in benefits in 1990, a replacement rate of about 21 percent. You can add half that amount again for spousal benefits, bringing the total to just over 30 percent. If family income is below the employment tax wage base, now just over $50,000 a year, you can expect Social Security to replace something OVER 30 percent of your pre-retirement income.

In effect, this reduces the years-of-income savings requirement by 30 percent or from 13 years to nine. A corporate pension would reduce it further, as would having paid off the mortgage on your home. Since 93 percent of all workers have incomes under the employment tax wage base, these figures apply to MOST Americans.

Your situation is different.

ANALYSIS

NEW YORK (AP) — Energy issues posted broad losses Wednesday while the rest of the stock market drifted aimlessly in a quiet session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slipped 1.35 to 2,729.73, marking the sixth consecutive session in which it rose or fell less than 10 points.

Declining issues slightly outnumbered advances in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 720 up, 762 down and 497 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 141.08 million shares, against 136.02 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 168.45 million shares.

In the credit markets, prices of long-term Treasury bonds edged upward, lowering their yields to the 8.56 percent-8.62 percent range.

That reversed an increase in rates Tuesday that occurred as a sale of 40-year savings institution "bailout" bonds drew an unenthusiastic reception.

But analysts said traders were proceeding cautiously as they watched the first corporate earnings reports for the January-March quarter come in.

The numbers are expected to be downbeat, for the most part, reflecting persistent weakness in economic growth.

In addition, brokers said, traders were expecting little action in the stock market until at least next week. After Thursday's session, the markets will be closed for Good Friday.

Energy stocks declined broadly, weighed down by recent weakness in world oil prices. Mobil dropped 1 to 59⅝; Amoco ⅞ to 50½; Texaco 1 to 57⅜; Atlantic Richfield 2¼ to 112⅛, and Phillips Petroleum ½ to 25⅜.

Among oil service issues, Schlumberger lost 1 to 50; Baker Hughes 1⅜ to 25⅞, and Halliburton ⅝ to 43½.

Oil prices rallied late Wednesday, finishing mixed after a sharp early decline. But brokers said that didn't do much to ease stock-market investors' doubts about the pricing outlook.

Buying interest showed up in some airline issues, which often move in the opposite direction from the oils given the carriers' position as large consumers of fuel. AMR rose 1 to 66¾ and Delta Air Lines 1⅛ to 73⅝.

Elsewhere, Federal National Mortgage climbed ⅞ to 35 on news of higher first-quarter profits.

FRAUD: Administration draws fire from members

Sessions, who led off the testimony, defended the agency's effort, recalling bank fraud investigations as far back as 1982. Sessions said limited resources and other demands on the agency, plus the complexity of the frauds, had limited the agency's ability.

"It is often difficult to distinguish failures that involve fraud from failures resulting from poor management and poor business decisions," Sessions said.

"The types of cases we are seeing in Texas frequently involve the looting of institutions for the direct financial benefit of officers, directors or major stockholders," he said.

Sessions said 276 of the failed institutions being investigated are banks, 234 are savings and loans and 20 are credit unions; 198 of the institutions, including one-third of the thrift cases, are in Texas.

In addition, Sessions said the FBI has more than 3,000 pending cases of traditional bank fraud and embezzlement involving $100,000 or more.

Other witnesses, which included former federal and regulators and other officials, testified about the regulatory climate in Texas and in Washington, citing refusals by both top officials and some congressmen to recognize the industry's problems in the mid-80s.

— William S. Sessions

The committee has asked four of the more prominent officials at some of the most notorious failed thrifts to testify, but only one, Thomas Gaubert, has indicated he will appear.

Gaubert, who has been acquitted once on fraud charges, was chairman of Independent American Savings Association. The three others asked to testify were Edwin T. McBirney, former chairman at Sunbelt Savings Association of Texas; Don R. Dixon former owner of Vernon Savings and Loan Association; and Jarrett Woods, of Western Savings Association.

All four institutions were recipients of multimillion dollar bailouts, and have been the target of federal investigations.

Wildlife Service wants review of plastics plant

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Federal officials concerned about endangered species on the Gulf Coast are seeking a complete environmental impact study of a plastic plant's proposed $1.3 billion expansion in Calhoun County.

When Formosa Plastics first announced its plans in October 1988, the expansion was touted as exemplary economic development. Public officials including Gov. Bill Clements and U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm eagerly took credit for attracting Formosa to Texas.

Few at the time questioned the company's ability or desire to safeguard the environment. But it has come under increasing scrutiny since then.

Last week, the Texas Water Commission staff proposed fining Formosa a record $244,700 for 54 alleged violations of its wastewater permit from January 1986 through September 1989.

DEVELOPMENT WELLS

■ DRILLING PROGRAM SET IN ECTOR. Rust Oil Corp. plans to drill six wells in the Cowden field of Ector County, three in the Cisco and three in the Penn Detrital. All six are in Block 43, T&P survey, four miles west of Odessa. Contract depth ranges from 9,000 to 9,500 ft.

■ HRUBETZ PLANS GARZA ACTIVITY. Hrubetz Operating Co., Dallas, plans to reenter three producers in Garza County and plug them back to the Rocker A field. All three are in Block 97, H&TC survey, 3.5 miles northwest of Justiceburg. Proposed plugback depth ranges from 2,800 to 2,900 ft.

■ THREE STAKED IN COKE FIELD. Three wells are set for the Jameson (Strawn) field of Coke County by Perkins-Prothro Co., Wichita Falls. Two are in the Jameson Strawn Unit, the third on the W.C. Blanks lease. All three are on BLock 2, H&TC survey, 20 miles northwest of Robert Lee. Contract depth is 7,000 ft.

BURNS: Variables set 'replacement rate'

(From 1E)

While we will see few heart-rending stories in the press, families with incomes between $50,000 and $100,000 a hear are most likely to experience a significant drop in purchasing power at retirement because their savings and/or corporate pension will be inadequate.

Your case, however, is different. Social Security benefits should provide a substantial part of your $35,000 budget, even retiring at age 62. And your savings, if they amount to $275,000, should close most of the gap. A small corporate pension will bring you even with your expenses.

Q. I recently read an article promoting "fee-only" financial planners because they have no conflicts of interest since they earn no commission on any of the financial products they recommend to clients. What do you think about this?
R.J., Dallas, Texas

A. The fee vs. commissions dilemma doesn't have a clean answer.

On the one hand people seeking investment and planning advice dont', for good reason, trust the only planners.

On the other, the same people really don't want to pay professional service fees. They don't want to pay the costs of seeking an accountant's advice, they don't want to pay the cost for a lawyer or planner. Ironically, most people declare, BY THEIR ACTIONS, that they would be willing to pay $2, $3, or $5 in commissions instead of paying $1 in professional service fees.

Is there a limit to the consultation approach?

Yes. There are products such as life insurance and annuities where a commission will be paid in any case. That can put you in the position of having to pay entirely unearned commissions. What some planners do is agree, up front, that they will tell you about all commissions and offset commissions against their hourly billing. In any case, there is full disclosure of what the planner is receiving for the services rendered. I believe that is a reasonable arrangement.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Saving for retirement takes work, discipline

By Bill Doyle

Q. My husband is tired of working and wants to quit later this year, when he will be 53 and I will be 52. Our house is paid for and we have no bills. We both have life insurance and medical insurance paid for the rest of our lives as the result of a previous forced retirement. We have a daughter, age 11, and an unmarried, working daughter, age 25, living at home.

If my husband retires, our annual income will be approximately $22,700 from pension and certificate of deposit interest. We have a $100,000 annuity from which we will start withdrawals in seven years. Our monthly expenses are roughly $1,900.

Our only large future expense would be college for our younger daughter and possibly a wedding for our older daughter.

We have always been frugal people. Do you feel we would have enough retirement income to enjoy life and a few extras along the way?

Doyle

A. You're forcing me to be the bearer of bad tidings. Unless you can be much more frugal and reduce your spending, the answer has to be a loud "NO."

Simple arithmetic shows that, at $1,900 a month, your annual expenses come to $22,800. That's $100 more than your estimated retirement income. Based on these numbers, there is no way you could enjoy life — much less the "few extras."

The hard financial facts are that your husband will have to keep working, most likely until you start receiving money from that annuity and possibly until he starts drawing Social Security benefits.

Even then, paying for your younger daughter's college will be a mighty tight squeeze. An expensive wedding for your older girl seems out of the question.

You and your husband will have to face up to retirement planning, by socking away as much money as possible while he is still employed. Good luck. Take scant comfort that you are in the same monetary pickle as many, many other families who didn't plan ahead.

Q. My husband is a journeyman carpenter foreman and grosses about $48,000 a year. I am a homemaker. We have three young children. Our problem is we never save money. It seems we always have just enough to pay our bills, feed the children, etc.

I'm content that we are getting by, but my husband wants something to show for all his hard work and some security for our future.

We are well intentioned, but not knowledgeable. Can you help us?

A. You really have to help yourselves, as does every family. You can save money and invest for your future, if you put your minds to it. There's no magic formula. For most families, it's just a matter of regimentation — tucking cash away on a steady basis.

About the best way to do that is have money taken out of paychecks through arrangements such as payroll savings plans for the purchase of U.S. Savings Bonds, mutual fund shares or other investments.

If no such plan is available through your husband's employer, you can sign up to buy savings bonds, via the bond-a-month program at many banks. Or you can arrange to have money shifted from your bank account to a mutual fund on a steady basis. If you go the mutual fund route, pick a no-load fund to save costs.

Q. I am a 71-year-old married woman who handles the family money, pays the bills and makes all the decisions. Our house is paid for. I put most of our savings of about $200,000 in bank accounts, such as certificates of deposit. I did buy some Canadian Maple Leaf gold coins. I have always been afraid to buy stocks and bonds.

Now, I am ready to do some speculating. What do you advise?

A. Don't do it. Stay on that almost straight and narrow investment path you have followed so far. You're in good financial shape. At your stage of life, there's no reason to take on the risk that goes with speculation.

Golden egg

Holding a miniature enameled portrait and a jeweled cabinet from inside the two-foot Argyle Library Egg is Paul Kutchinsky. The egg, unveiled in London in time for Easter, contains 33 pounds of 18 carat gold and approximately 20,000 pink diamonds. It took two years for Kutchinsky artists to create the object, valued at $11,480,000.

Bomb wounds 34 as separatist violence spreads to Bombay

SRINAGAR, India (AP) — The Moslem campaign for an independent Kashmir spread to Bombay on Wednesday with a bomb attack that wounded 34 people and brought Indian relations with Pakistan to a new peak of anger.

United News of India, a news agency, said frontier guards shot and killed seven Kashmiri militants who were trying to cross illegally into Pakistan, which borders the Kashmir valley.

Indian and Pakistan, which have in the past waged war over Kashmir, traded bitter words over the latest violence. Pakistani troops were put on high alert Wednesday after India's leader talked of war.

The Indian news agency quoted unidentified officials as saying the militants were killed while trying to escape a dragnet spread across the valley by security forces.

Authorities were cracking down in a search for killers of three men abducted last week by Moslem separatists demanding the release of three jailed colleagues. The bodies were found Tuesday in the far northern city of Srinagar, the hub of the secession drive.

Jammu-Kashmir state officials said 64 people were arrested during the searches, but it was not known if they were connected with the killing of the hostages.

The bomb rocked the train near Malad station on the outskirts of Bombay, about 1,000 miles south of Srinagar on India's west coast. Authorities said 34 people were wounded.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Colombian car bomb kills 16

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — A car bomb exploded on a highway bridge as a police patrol was passing Wednesday, killing 16 people and wounding at least 73, authorities said.

Ten vehicles and surrounding buildings were badly damaged, officials reported from that northern city, home of the notorious Medellin drug cartel.

Eight police and eight civilians were killed, said Carlos Palacios, a spokesman for the government in the Medellin suburb of Itagui.

There were conflicting reports of wounded. Radio reports placed the number at 109 while the police spokesman reported 73. The police spokesman, who refused to identify himself, said 60 civilians and 13 police officers were injured.

Palacios said many of the wounded were in critical condition. He said children were among the victims.

Burned ferry inspected

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — Fire doors malfunctioned and ventilation ducts were left open to fan the flames of the deadly fire that gutted the ferry Scandinavian Star, a fire inspector told a hearing Wednesday.

But the captain of the Danish ship told the inquiry that all the fire equipment and safety procedures worked, and that the crew performed well in the emergency.

Captain Hugo Larsen, of Norway, said he was awakened by a ship's officer at 1:55 a.m. Saturday and told, "Someone is playing arsonist," as the first of three fires was discovered aboard the ship.

In Oslo, police reduced the number of dead and missing to 168, as more missing passengers reported to police. At least one American was among the dead. Officials in Sweden, where the ship was towed, said they recovered 127 bodies and had estimated up to 200 may have died.

Nepal given conditions

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — The opposition movement that successfully campaigned for the restoration of multiparty democracy in this Himalayan kingdom set conditions Wednesday for joining a proposed interim government.

The centrist Nepali Congress Party and the United Left Front, a left-wing coalition, refused to join the interim government unless it was headed by either King Birendra or their own nominee.

The opposition groups said they would not accept a member of the non-partisan Rashtriya Panchayat, or national assembly, as prime minister.

Kosovo aides resign

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — The premier and five other Cabinet members of ethnically troubled Kosovo province have resigned after four months in office, citing pressure by Serbia, the official Tanjug news agency reported Wednesday.

The "irrevocable" resignations of Premier Jusuf Zejnulahu, Deputy Premier Mazlum Bega and the four others coincided with strong criticism leveled against Serbia's communist authorities Wednesday by a U.S. congressional delegation for alleged human rights abuses against ethnic Albanians in Kosovo.

Kosovo province, an administrative part of the Serbian republic, has been a scene of continuing unrest since Serbia assumed near-total control over the region the past year — virtually abolishing its former autonomy — and introduced a state of emergency to suppress huge protests by Albanians.

Ethnic Albanians comprise 90 percent of Kosovo's 1.9 million population. Tanjug did not make clear when the resignations were offered, but a newspaper said Zejnulahu offered his Tuesday. Zejnulahu, Bega and the other ministers are all ethnic Albanians.

Visit discouraged

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — The interim government on Wednesday appealed to exiled King Michael of Romania to postpone his return to the country he left 42 years ago, saying they were worried his visit could provoke violence.

In Geneva, the king's oldest daughter, Princess Margarita, said her father and mother, Queen Anne, will go ahead with their Thursday visit to Romania. Margarita, scheduled to join her parents in Bucharest, said the deposed monarch will visit as a private citizen and plans to attend Easter services.

It would be the first time King Michael has set foot on Romanian soil since he was forced into exile by the Communists on Dec. 30, 1947.

Withdrawal debated

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Mario Vargas Llosa has postponed a decision on whether to drop out of a runoff election for president following a disappointing showing in the first round, associates said Wednesday.

The celebrated novelist, who put aside his writing two years ago to campaign, was a strong favorite until a week ago to become president of this Andean nation.

Associates, speaking on condition of anonymity, confirmed Wednesday that the writer has considered stepping aside to allow Alberto Fujimori, the runner-up in elections Sunday, to become president-elect.

They said he wanted to save Peru, suffering from growing rebel violence and severe economic problems, from two more turbulent months of political campaigning.

Vargas Llosa's advisers said he would announce his decision Monday.

CLICK and CLACK TALK CARS

BY TOM AND RAY MAGLIOZZI

IDLE ARMS ARE THE DEVIL'S GARAGE?

Dear Tom and Ray:

I keep noticing that my tires are wearing on the outside edge of the tread. I felt it was a matter of keeping the front end in alignment. However, at the Sears Auto Center, I am being told that the idler arms are wearing out, that they cost $200 to replace and that the 1987 Chevrolet Astro Van has a problem with idler arms. The technician said they might only last about 11,000 miles. This sounds ridiculous to me. Have you heard of any such problems with 1987 Astro Vans? — Jerry

RAY: Let's start from the beginning. The wear on the outside edge of the tires really is an alignment problem. Normally, a wheel alignment would be the solution. But what your mechanic is telling you is that he CAN'T align the wheels because the idler arms are worn out.

TOM: The idler arms attach the moving parts of the steering apparatus to the frame of the vehicle. When the idler arms wear out, the steering parts won't "stay put." It's then impossible to align the wheels because the steering components are "sloshing around." It's like trying to thread a needle while standing in the bathroom of a moving Greyhound bus — or something like that.

RAY: We've replaced enough idler arms on Astro Vans to conclude that these parts were probably underdesigned (i.e., not heavy duty enough). Many cars get 100,000 miles out of an idler arm, and we've replaced idler arms on Astros with far fewer miles than that.

TOM: If you've got 50,000 or 60,000 miles on the van, just bite the bullet, spend the $200 and have the arms replaced. But if you've got significantly less than that, I'd write to General Motors and suggest they make a sizable donation to IARF — the Idler Arm Relief Fund.

Dear Tom and Ray:

I recently bought a 1985 Nissan 300ZX. The used-car dealer told me it had just been tuned up, but it runs roughly and makes white smoke first thing in the morning. After about three or four minutes, it runs great. Is this car just warmblooded or does it have a problem? — Rhonda

RAY: There may be something wrong with the "cold start" mechanism. My brother has that problem. The colder it is, the longer it takes him to get started in the morning. When the temperature falls below, say, 65 he doesn't get to work until noon!

TOM: Actually, the cold-start mechanism is the equivalent of a choke on fuel-injected cars. If it were malfunctioning, it could cause the car to run rough for the first few minutes.

RAY: The more serious, more costly and more likely possibility is that these are the early symptoms of a blown head gasket or warped head. If the head gasket were starting to come apart, a little bit of coolant could leak into one of the cylinders and cause the car to run on five cylinders until the engine warmed up. Once the engine warmed up, the gasket would expand and reseal the leak until the next time you shut off the car.

RAY: Have a Nissan dealer test the head gaskets. If that's the problem, it's going to cost you big bucks! And unless you've got a warranty on this car, not even the Beach Boys will be able to help you, Rhonda.

HOW TO PLACE A GARAGE SALE AD

(1) Decide the address and dates where the sale will be held.

(2) Compile a list of the major items you want to advertise (furniture, appliances, speciality items, specific sizes or types of clothes) along with a few smaller items (pictures, kitchen utensils, etc.) If more than one family will be participating in the sale, ask each family to write out a list of the items they want to sell.

(3) Combine the lists of items to be sold, the complete address, the day and times the sale will be held. Remember, the best days to advertise for your sale will be at least the day before and each day of the sale. The deadline for placing your ad will be before 5:00 the day before you need your ad to appear, Monday - Friday.

(4) NOW - Call Classified at 682-6222 with the days of the sale and the items you want to list.
We offer two types of ads: word ads and space ads.
