$50 billion in budget cuts advised

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan's budget advisers are recommending that he cut spending by $50 billion in fiscal year 1986, but are likely to leave decisions on where the cuts will come in the president's lap, according to an administration official.

The official, speaking only on condition he remain anonymous, said late Sunday that a high-level budget group is likely to recommend that Reagan cut the federal deficit from its current level of 5 percent of the Gross National Product to 4 percent in fiscal 1986, 3 percent in 1987 and 2 percent in 1988.

That apparently translates into a deficit target of roughly $160 billion in 1986, compared with an estimated 1986 deficit of $206 billion if no further action were taken.

Under this plan, the deficit would be reduced steadily to just more than $100 billion in 1988, down from the currently projected $210 billion deficit at the end of fiscal year 1985 in October.

As the budget debate swirls among his aides, Reagan is spending a Thanksgiving vacation at his ranch, "resting and rejuvenating himself for the second term," said deputy White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater.

The budget group, made up of 12 high-level administration officials, met for more than 12 hours last week in an as-yet unsuccessful effort to agree on ways to recommend the budget savings in the 1986 budget now being prepared.

The official said it appeared likely that instead of presenting Reagan with one recommended way of achieving the budget savings, the highly splintered group would instead force the president to choose how to reduce the federal budget when he returns to Washington after his vacation.

That would be a sharp departure from past practice, in which Reagan ususally receives a consensus recommendation that has been hammered out at a lower level. This time, such consensus appeared impossible, the source said.

Although Reagan pledged during his 1980 campaign to balance the federal budget, aides acknowledged last week it was highly unlikely that could happen until the 1990s, after Reagan has left office.

Part of what makes it difficult for the president's budget advisers to reach agreement, the source said, is that Reagan has promised not to raise taxes or cut Social Security or defense. Reaching the budget goals means either breaking a promise or making all the required savings among remaining programs, which make up only one-third of federal spending.

The source also said that preidential counselor Edwin Meese III handed out at a Cabinet meeting last week galley proofs of a to-be-published Heritage Foundation budget document suggesting where government programs could be cut.

Some officials at the session worried that distributing the work of the conservative policy center at a Cabinet meeting was tantamount to announcing the government was considering cutting programs suggested by the foundation. Fitzwater said the document "has no official standing."

The New York Times and the Washington Post reported that the document's recommendations included cutting Medicaid payments to states deemed to have "excessive" health care costs.

Reagan, who arrived at his secluded, century-old adobe ranch in the Santa Ynez Mountains on Saturday, launched immediately into ranch chores.

Fitzwater said the president was on vacation, with no meetings or public appearances scheduled. After the rain-drenched trails on his 688-acre spread dried a bit, the president went horseback riding Sunday and began work on an underground sprinkler system for a pasture near the small ranch home.

Nancy Reagan, who visited her mother in Phoenix, Ariz., over the weekend, flew to Los Angeles for some private appointments and was spending the night there before arriving at the ranch today.

On Thanksgiving, three of Reagan's four children, his brother, Neil, and all of their spouses were driving up narrow, winding road to the ranch for a traditional turkey dinner with all the trimmings.

Miami residents show their appreciation to 'Dr. Monty'

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

MIAMI — When S.J. Montgomery set up his doctor's office here in February, 1934, he had no intentions of staying more than two years. After 50 years, he has no intention of leaving.

Miami honored its only general practioner and his wife, Lucille, Saturday night at its annual Community Thanksgiving Dinner. The Miami Chamber of Commerce and Ministerial Alliance felt the Thanksgiving meal was the appropriate time to honor the 79-year old physician.

The more than 400 people who have been delivered, treated, healed and consoled by "Dr. Monty" through the years felt the dinner was the least they could do to comemorate their 50-year friendship.

But the meal was not the only way Montgomery was honored. His three children were brought in from Bay City, Garland and Denton to share in the honors.

Roberts County Judge Newton Cox presented the doctor with a plaque comemmorating his 50 years as county health officer.

First State Bank president Max Faulkner presented the sports-loving couple with an all-expense paid trip to the Super Bowl football game Jan. 21 in Palo Alto, Calif.

Miami resident "Jub" Thompson looked over the roomful of dining dignitaries and residents and observed that there were several families there who had five generations under the doctor's care.

"And there are a bunch of fourth generation families," Thompson said, speculating that there may also be a sixth-generation Montgomery patient there.

"He's not only been our doctor, but our friend and neighbor," Thompson added as he shared highlights of the doctor's career.

Born in the Flint Hills of Kansas, Montgomery began his career in 1927 in Howard, Kans., where he met his wife. After several years in Lubbock and Dalhart, he set up his Miami office in 1934. Since then, Thompson said, Montgomery has proved he is more than a country doctor.

"Many a time he would come to my house and not only minister to the sick. But he ministered to the families to help them know about the disease," he said. "Once the telephone rang at the store. My wife said 'Butch swallowed a penny.' But the doctor said don't worry about it too much. Just watch for the change."

Thompson told how Montgomery could make a diagnosis, and other doctors with their second opinions would make the same diagnosis and recommendations "word for word."

He also told of a former Miami resident who always insisted on returning to Dr. Montgomery to treat his ailments because "Dr. Monty was the only man he trusted."

"Thanksgiving is the perfect time to honor Dr. Monty," Faulkner added.

Montgomery seemed to agree. "This is Thanksgiving," exclaimed the doctor as he emotionally accepted the honors. "We just wanted to come and help you and you accepted us and you helped us raise our children."

He turned to his wife Lucy as he spoke and praised her devotion.

"When I got here, you accepted me as a doctor. But I was not a doctor," he said. "I had the training and education in anatomy and medicine. But people make doctors."

"I've been in solo practice, but I was never alone," he said.

Montgomery shared with his friends and former patients some memories of his early years in the profession.

He arrived in Lubbock in the early 1930s with all his posessions in his Model A. He set up his office.

"Then the dust storms came," he remembered. "A fire destroyed our office and we lost what we had."

Discouraged in Lubbock, they came north through the dust to Channing, then to Miami.

"In those days, doctors were poor people," he said, adding that doctor's office calls were $1 to $1.50. House calls were $3 and births were $20.

Montgomery is the school's physician as well as the county medical officer. With no city or county medical service, he is also the only doctor in the 50 miles between Canadian and Pampa.

Still, he does not see much of a need for a city or county ambulance service.

"An ambulance service has been talked about," he said after the banquet. "But we do have trained paramedics, and it's 20 miles to Canadian and Pampa."

"It's so much better now," he said. "There's been changes in medicine. And Medicare has helped a lot of people who can't afford services of private insurance."

He observed that improved transportation makes things easier for the small town doctor.

Still, he admits that community practicioners are vanishing because of heavy demands and light money.

"Young doctors don't want to commit to working 24-hours a day for seven days a week," he said.

After the dinner, the residents lined up around the walls of the old gym to pay tribute to the doctor. Montgomery and his wife, Lucy, returned their love with hugs, handshakes and exchanges of greetings.

During district meeting

Pampa Kiwanians given recognition

Two Pampans were honored during the Division VI meeting of the Texas-Oklahoma District of Kiwanis International at Boys Ranch Sunday.

The Tablet of Honor was presented to J. B. Massa. A check for $1,000 was given to Fred Thompson. Both are members of the Pampa Downtown Kiwanis Club.

The honors were made in recognition of two gifts to Kiwanis Educational Charities.

The presentations were made during a banquet Sunday evening, hosted by the Pampa Downtown Kiwanis Club. Presiding at the meeting was Lt. Gov. Warren Hasse of Pampa.

Special guest was Chester E. "Chet" Ferguson of Oklahoma City, Okla., 1984-1985 governor of the Texas-Oklahoma District. Ferguson was making his official visit to the division.

Massa's honor was given in recognition of a gift by his wife, Lucille, to the Kiwanis International Foundation. She made the gift in honor of Massa's membership in Kiwanis for more than 52 years.

Massa has served the Pampa club as president in 1938, as a delegate to numerous district and international conventions, and as an ambassador to Kiwanis clubs in more than 15 countries.

He also has had a strong interest in the youth Key Club activities through his service as advisor to the Pampa Key Club and as regional Key Club advisor.

The Pampa Key Club selected Massa as its Community Leader of the Year in 1968.

The check to Thompson was made by the Kiwanis clubs of Division VI to honor his long service to Kiwanis, extending back to his joining the Pampa club in March, 1932. The money will be given to a Kiwanis Educational Charity of Thompson's choosing.

Thompson has the status of being the oldest active past governor of the Texas-Oklahoma District. He served as governor in 1941 and is the only governor from the Texas and Oklahoma Panhandle area comprising Division VI.

Thompson also has served as lieutenant governor for the division and numerous positions in the local club, including president. Thompson was recently honored by the local club for his 48 years of perfect attendance.

Division VI includes Kiwanis clubs in Pampa (Downtown, Top o' Texas and Golden K), Amarillo (Downtown, North and Western), Borger, Canadian, Perryton, Shamrock, Stinnett, Vega and Wheeler and Guymon, Okla.

Texas education reforms lauded

DALLAS (AP) — The State Board of Education needs to be "aggressive and pushy" in seeing through the reforms that the Texas Legislature adopted this summer, the outgoing U.S. education secretary says.

Terrence H. Bell calls the education reform package one of the five best enacted in recent years and says the Texas board should not "turn tail and run" when it begins getting complaints from interest groups.

"Powerful groups are going to be coming at the (board members) and trying to persuade them — both parent and teacher groups," Bell told the Dallas Times Herald Sunday. "You need leadership that's going to hang in, and that's going to be aggressive and pushy."

Bell, 63, who said he will resign his Cabinet post at the end of the year, said the Texas school package was comparable to the outstanding ones in California, Florida, South Carolina and Tennessee.

Bell said the Texas board should find a strong-willed person to replace Raymon Bynum, the former education commissioner.

He also suggested that Texas students learn another language.

Oklahoma residents survive crash here

A group of businessmen from Tulsa, Okla., survived the crash landing of their single - engine plane about 7:15 this morning in a sorghum field south of Pampa.

Jeff Hauser, 27, the pilot, and brothers Ben, 18, Joe, 25 and Chris Grisel, 32, all of Tulsa, escaped from the wreckage of a rented Cessna 172 that went down in a thick blanket of fog and icy temperatures. The men were treated for minor cuts and bruises at Coronado Community Hospital and released.

The plane was scheduled to land at the Perry Lefors Field but crashed in the field of sorghum stubble about 13 miles south town.

The victims reportedly couldn't open the doors of the heavily - damaged aircraft and had to break its windshield and crawl out. The men walked about a half mile to the home Greg Acker, who took them to the hospital.

"They were awful lucky to get out of it alive. The pilot looked like he was still in shock," Acker said.

He said the pilot told the brothers that he was "real sorry" about the crash, to which one responded, "What do you mean, 'sorry,' you got us down on the ground alive."

The men told hospital personnel that ice built up on the plane's wings as it approached Pampa, sending them to the ground. Fog was heavy at the time, but the poor visibility didn't contribute to the cause of the crash, the victims reported.

Nation's jail population soars

WASHINGTON — Spurred by the same get-tough attitude that has packed prisons, the number of jail inmates in this country grew 41 percent in five years to reach a record 223,551 in 1983, the Justice Department says.

Reporting on the first census of local jails since Feb. 15, 1978, the department's Bureau of Justice Statistics said Sunday the rate of incarceration in jails grew by 29 percent, from 76 out of every 100,000 persons to 98 out of every 100,000 as of June 30, 1983.

The growth appeared during a period when the population of prisons run by the state and federal governments rose to a record of more than 400,000.

Attorney General William French Smith attributed the increase in jail inmates to what he called a public demand for tougher treatment of criminals.

Noting that eight million people were admitted to jails, while 7.9 million were released, in the 12 months preceding the census, Smith said increased jail incarceration may have contributed to the decrease in reported crime in the last 2½ years.

The 1983 census figure represents a count of the total number of people in jails across the country on the date of the census, June 30, 1983.

Slightly more than half the jail inmates had not been convicted and were awaiting arraignment or trial, as was the case in 1978. Convicted inmates included those serving a sentence, awaiting sentence and probation and parole violators.

Local governments spent $2.7 billion to run and build jails in the 12 months preceding the census, producing average operating expenditures per inmate of $9,400. That compared to $5,600 spent per inmate in 1969, after the 1969 figures are converted to 1983 dollars to eliminate the impact of price inflation, the bureau said.

The per-inmate costs ranged from highs of $25,444 in Alaska and $24,297 in New York to lows of $5,384 in Georgia and $5,218 in South Carolina.

The study examined facilities run by city or county governments in 45 states and the District of Columbia. Jails in Connecticut, Delaware, Hawaii Rhode Island and Vermont were excluded.

VIOLENCE CONTINUES—A thin line of helmeted police are silhouetted by street lights in Denaby, England, early Monday morning as they face a line of striking miners, background, on picket duty in the village northeast of Yorkshire. Gas processing complex explodes near Mexico City

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A series of explosions at a natural gas processing complex triggered a huge fire today in a suburb of the Mexican capital, sending smoke and flames miles into the air and wrecking nearby homes. Early reports said 21 people were killed and hundreds were injured.

Alfonso Olvera Reyes, mayor of Tlalnepantla, where the explosions occurred, said by telephone that "nearly 400 people were injured and 21 killed."

Red Cross officials, however, said they had no preliminary figures on casualties. Ambulances were seen moving in an out of the area northeast of the capital.

Red Cross spokesman Thomas Grunes said by telephone from Red Cross headquarters, "We have injured, quite a few, but we don't have the count yet."

An air force pilot, Captain Gonzalo Sciler, told a television interviewer he flew over the area and "the fire was spreading everywhere."

Hundreds of residents were evacuated, and dozens of nearby houses were wrecked, residents said.

Salvador Del Rio, spokesman for the state-owned oil monopoly PEMEX, said a gas truck exploded and the resulting fire spread to the installations of the Unigas company and then to the Pemex installations where natural gas for two nearby refineries is stored.

The explosions began at 5:42 a.m. (6:42 a.m. EST). Residents said the blasts were heard up to two miles away and smoke could be seen at least four miles away. Huge columns of fire could be seen from several miles away.

"It felt as if there was an earthquake, it shook the earth and then a huge flame shot up," an unidentified resident told the Televisa television network.

Personal income rises slightly

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans' personal income rose 0.6 percent last month but consumer spending dipped 0.1 percent, the poorest showing on the spending side in eight months, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said the 0.1 percent drop in personal consumption spending, which includes virtually everything except interest payments on debt, compared to a 1.7 percent spending surge in September.

That increase followed two months in which consumer spending had posted no gain at all and gave analysts hope that the economy was finally rousing from its summer doldrums.

However, a variety of other economic statistics have signalled that the current slowdown in growth may be a prolonged one, although few economists believe the economy is about to tumble into a recession.

The government will revise its estimate of overall economic growth for the July-September period on Tuesday. Many analysts expect the new figure will be lower than the 2.7 percent current estimate. That growth rate is less than one-third the 8.6 percent rate turned in during the first half of the year.

Guard helicopter crash being probed

BELTON, Texas (AP) — Army aviation investigators on Sunday examined the wreckage of a helicopter that crashed near Belton, killing a Texas National Guard pilot and his co-pilot.

Capt. Larry G. Carter, 36, of Austin, and Chief Warrant Officer David R. Ammerman, 38, of Lewisville, died in the crash.

They were flying an AH-1G Cobra helicopter from Waco to Austin when the craft struck a power line Saturday night and hit the ground, said Maj. David Cottom, public affairs officer for the Texas Guard.

Weather conditions were "very poor and deteroirating, and visibility was bad," Cotton said.

Attorney wants teen's trial for carrier's killing moved

HOUSTON (AP) — Attorneys for a teen-ager accused of murdering a female letter carrier say the trial should be moved to another city because of publicity generated since the youth's parents were jailed for refusing to testify before a grand jury.

Attorney Jack Zimmermann said he would ask State District Judge I.D. McMaster today for a change of venue.

No trial date has been set, but prosecutors have said they hope to start the proceeding early next year.

David Port, 17, is charged in the shooting death of Debora Sue Schatz, 23, who disappeared June 7 while delivering mail in the affluent west Houston neighborhood where the Port family lives. Her body was found two days later in a wooded area north of Houston.

The teen-ager remains free on $20,000 bond.

The case has been highly publicized in recent months because the youth's parents, Bernard and Odette Port, refused to testify before a grand jury investigating the slaying and were jailed Sept. 12 on contempt charges.

Bernard Port was released Nov. 9 after he answered the panel's questions. Mrs. Port also appeared before grand jurors, but McMaster ruled her testimony was insufficient to purge her of the contempt charge.

Mrs. Port, the teen-ager's stepmother, was the first to arrive home the day of the killing. Investigators searching the couple's home say they found bullet holes in the stairwell and blood on the stairs.

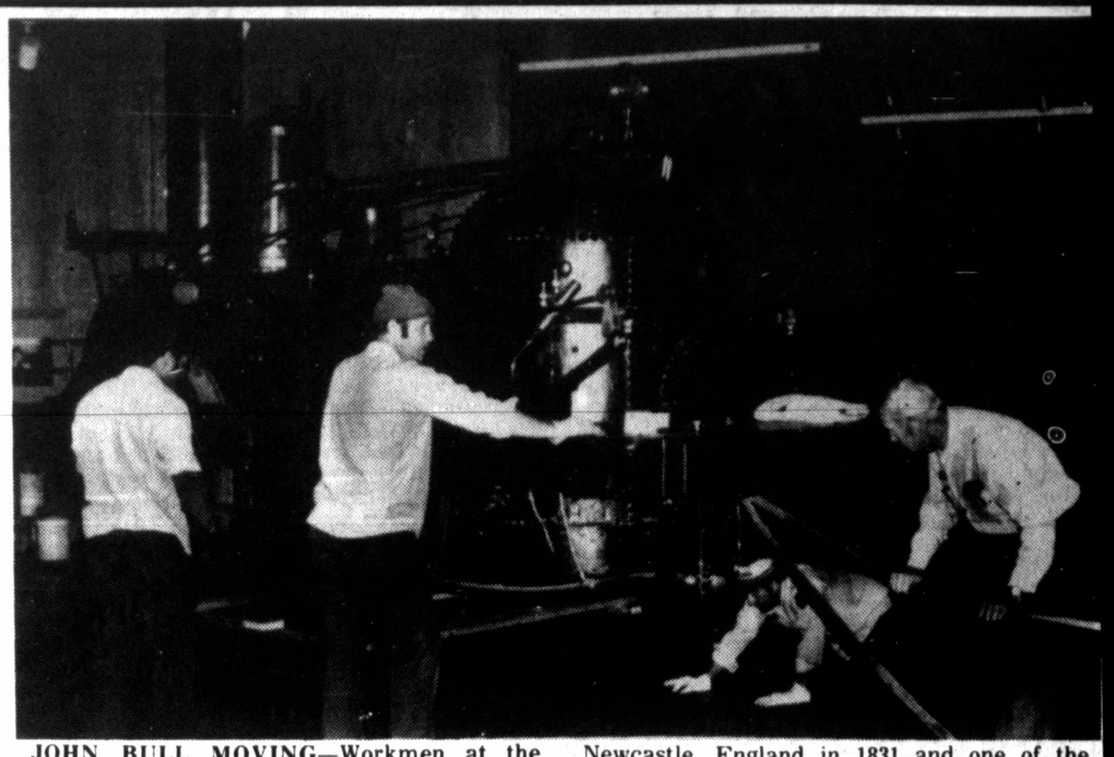

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals has asked to review transcripts of Mrs. Port's testimony to determine if she should be freed.

The Ports have argued they should not be forced to testify in the investigation, citing a parent-child privilege similar to a state law that allows spouses not to testify against each other. Texas law does not provide for a parent-child privilege.

The victim's mother, Barbara Schatz, said the couple's claims to a parent-child privilege anger her.

"It makes me awfully mad at times. I feel my parent-child relationship has been taken away," Mrs. Schatz said in a Houston Post interview published Sunday.

Mrs. Schatz said her daughter "didn't have a chance to talk about her rights" before she died. "She was doing her job. Next thing she knew her rights and her life were gone."

Official wants prison rodeo roped

AUSTIN (AP) — Just because the Texas prison rodeo — dubbed "the Wildest Rodeo Behind Bars" — has been a tradition for 53 years is no reason to keep it going, a Texas Board of Corrections member says.

Board member Harry Whittington says the rodeo serves no meaningful purpose and has urged his fellow board members to re-evaluate the costs and legal risks involved in the every-Sunday-in-October rodeo that began in 1931 in Huntsville.

"I don't think there's any way in the world that you can justify it except we've always done it," Whittington said. "At this time I have no reason to support it."

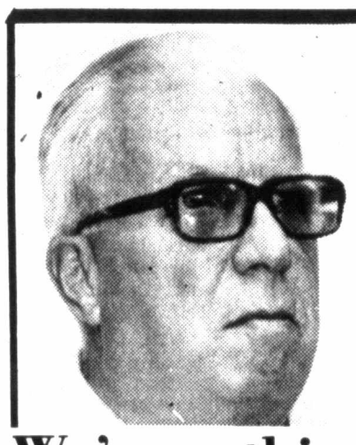

Texas Department of Corrections officials say that with good weather, the rodeo usually makes a profit of $200,000 to $250,000.

But the prison finance office said that because of this year's bad weather, the rodeo brought in only $70,000. Prison officials also want to subtract from that amount the cost of giving prison employees time off for the overtime that they put into the show.

The rodeo's $10 per day stipend and cash prizes are the only way inmates can earn money, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported Sunday.

The rodeo's supporters say the event is one of the few times inmates get the chance to escape the prison routine and allows tourists to visit Huntsville.

But Whittington is concerned that the rodeo dominates the attention of many prison administrators and says it costs more than previous accounts suggest.

We're nothing but numbers

At the rate we are going, it won't be many years before we won't be using a name, only a number.

American people, possibly without realizing it, are becoming more and more involved with the use of various numbers to identify themselves.

Before we were able to obtain our first fulltime job, we had to have a number issued by the federal government — that all important Social Security card with its grouping of a total of nine numerals. For the remainder of our life this number will identify us to our employeer and to those federal bureaucrats who take an ever increasing chunk of our hard earned salary and promise to return some of it when we are retired — if we live long enough and the government remains solvent.

At about the same time we obtain the Social Security number, or maybe even earlier, we acquire a different number: the one on our driver's license. This number is issued by the state government. In some states a person must have a Social Security number prior to obtaining a driver's license, since both identification numbers appear on a driver's license. These states want to make sure they know who you are, even though they still take the trouble to print that old-fashioned name on the license.

But, this is only the beginning of the numbers we must contend with on a daily basis.

Some of us are old enough to remember when telephone numbers had four or less numbers. Then, as more telephones were installed the numerals increased to five and later the first two letters of a word prefix were added. These letter prefixes were changed to numerals and then along came direct dialing, adding three more numerals to the long list of numbers we must remember and dial.

For those of us who dial foreign countries, there are additional numbers for the countries and sections of the countries, with the numbers growing longer and longer.

And, the United States Postal Service, while trying to convince us they were becoming more efficient and delivering the mail faster, created what they called ZIP codes, identifying the postal area we live in, the town and the section of the town. When delivery of mail became even slower than it was in the olden days when all we used for an address was a street number, the town and the state, those efficiency experts running the mail service decided to add four more numerals which are supposed to tell our postman the exact location of our house or post office box.

Have you ever wondered why it takes even longer now to receive your mail? Could it be it takes more time for the postman to read all of those numbers.

Now let us consider our bank account. This critter has a distinctive number which identifies us to the bank. Without this number we cannot deposit money in our account, withdraw funds or write a check. Oh, the glory of those fancy, computerized bookkeeping machines which eliminated the days we only had to scribble our names on a piece of paper to get our money.

In recent years the automated banking machines have come along and we now also have a small piece of plastic with still another number on it. But, we can now drive up to one of those banking machines in the middle of the night, use the plastic card and withdraw our money if we remember a four - digit, secret access code. If we accidently push the wrong number or have forgotten the access code the machine could "eat" our little card or do other wierd things.

Lest we forget, there are those wonderful plastic money cards, otherwise known as credit cards — each of them has a different number. Then we have numerous numbers for charge accounts, utility company accounts, life insurance policies...and the list goes on, depending on the various business transactions each of us undertakes.

I bet you didn't know that each subscriber of this newspaper now has an individiual identification code in our circulation department's computerized listing.

It is impossible to remember all of the various numbers which enter into our lives each day.

As long as we continue to have all of these various numbers assigned to individual identification cards, addresses, bank accounts, charge accounts and various other activities, I'm not overly worried.

But, when our benevolent government decides in all of the wisdom which politicians and bureucrats possess that we should only have a single number to identify us for Social Securty, driver's license, telephone number, mailing address, bank account, credit cards and other items it will be time for all of us to worry.

For when that time comes we will have lost our individual names and will be known by only a number. I wonder how long it will be?

Adopted teen-age girl finds that she is an illegal alien

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — After the troubled days that clouded Lori Burr's birth, she was adopted by an El Paso missionary couple and lived happily for nearly two decades.

But now her past — her adoptive parents say she was the daughter of a Mexican prostitute — has come back to haunt her since she has discovered she is an illegal alien who could be deported.

William and Roberta Burr say they were deceived by a Mexican attorney who advised that the girl could be adopted simply by declaring her as their natural born child.

U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service officials now say the adoption is not recognized by law.

But Henry McGehee, deputy district director of the El Paso INS office, said a decision on Miss Burr's deportation has not been made.

"(Deportation) is not one of the priorities right now," he said Friday. "With cases like this, there's such tremendous appealing humanitarian factors present where we would not want to deport them."

The law gives local INS agencies the discretion to keep cases like Lori's in indefinite limbo, he said.

"I think about it once and a while," Miss Burr, an 18-year-old high school senior, said of her predicament. "I try not to let it bother me."

The Burrs had been missionaries of the Independent Christian Church, living in Chihuahua City, Mexico, when they heard through another church member about a prostitute named "La Guera" (the Blond).

The prostitute gave birth to a baby she didn't want. The father was unknown.

The Burrs found Lori when she was 2 or 3 weeks old — weak, dirty and subsisting on tea instead of mother's milk. Her weight had dropped three pounds since her birth.

"You could hardly hear her cry, she was so weak," said her mother, Roberta Burr, 47.

The Burrs had an older daughter, but feared Mrs. Burr would be unable to bear another child. They wanted to adopt and "La Guera" was willing to give her baby away for a small fee.

A Mexican lawyer, however, told them Chihuahua state law allowed adoptions only for childless couples at least 40 years old. Both Burrs were 28 years old at the time.

"(The lawyer) said since we might run into some problems that we should adopt her in the common practice, the Mexican way, to register her as our own natural-born child and get a couple of witnesses," Burr told the El Paso Times.

U.S. State Department investigators eventually caught up with the falsehood.

But Burr said he was told "not to worry" about U.S. citizenship papers for Miss Burr until they moved to the United States.

The Burrs decided to move to El Paso when the girl was 6, and when Lori applied for a Social Security card last spring, she rediscovered the legal problems with her citizenship.

Youth who killed parents at 14 is approaching freedom

DALLAS (AP) — David Randall Keeler was 14 when he shot his parents to death in their wealthy North Dallas home.

That was three years ago, and Keeler, who will turn 18 on Dec. 29, is about to be released from an exclusive psychiatric facility.

Those who know him say the youth is a lot like any other high school senior approaching graduation. He thinks about attending college and wonders what the future might hold for him.

But Keeler is the family outcast. His relatives speak to him only through lawyers. They want him to go to college only if it's far away.

Keeler was a handsome honor student at St. Mark's School of Texas when he shot his parents following a scolding by his father over his hairstyle and failure to make his bed.

The deaths of William A. Keeler, president of Arco Oil and Gas Co., and his wife, Anita Faye Keeler, on July 12, 1981 shocked the couple's friends. They described the parents as devoted to their youngest child.

Health experts say the father's criticism unleashed an uncontrollable rage in his son that had been building for years.

Texas law did not allow Keeler when he was 14 to face charges as an adult and doctors advised against sending the boy to the Texas Youth Commission. Instead, they recommended that Keeler be committed to Timberlawn Psychiatric Hospital.

The recommendation was followed by state District Judge Craig Penfold.

In an interview with the Dallas Morning News, Penfold said he is convinced that Timberlawn was the proper place to send Keeler because of the limted resources of the state youth commission.

The judge said he believes society has been protected and that the youth's restricted lifestyle at Timberlawn has served to punish him.

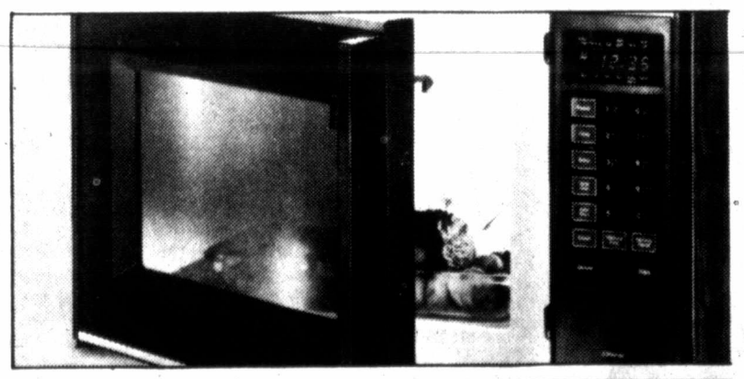

"He also has to live with what he did for the rest of his life," Penfold said. "That may be the worst punishment of all."

On his 18th birthday, Keeler will declared an adult not subject to control by juvenile authorities. His juvenile record can be sealed and he cannot be prosecuted in adult court for the slaying of his parents.

Unless his family tries to have him declared mentally incompetent to manage his own affairs, Keeler will also be emancipated from a legal guardianship imposed on him by a Dallas probate court judge.

Packing the court ot an easy task uring the campaign. Walter Mondale complained t if President Reagan was re-elected he might have opportunity to appoint as many as five new U.S. reme Court justices who share his conservative osophy. Left unsaid, of course, was how liberal ndale's nominees would be if he were elected.

o be sure, presidents can try to shape the Supreme rt to their ideological image. But history shows they e seldom been successful in doing so because few itutions are as independent as the high court. The ices have lifetime tenure that provides latitude to ak ranks with the president who appointed them. is, new appointees have frequently dismayed the ite House with their unexpected rulings.

ssociate Justice William Rehnquist said as much ently in his speech before the University of Minnesota lege of Law. He recalled that President Lincoln's ointment of Salmon Chase as chief justice was gely to insure that the court would uphold the islation by which the federal government had inced the civil war. Yet, it was Chief Justic Chase who ote the court's opinion that found the Lincoln inistration's financing to be unconstitutional.

lmost without exception, Mr. Lincoln's successors e had similar problems with their appointments to high court. Theodore Roosevelt, for example, was sperated with Oliver Wendell's Holmes' dissent in the thern Securities antitrust case. Earl Warren's icial activism angered Dwight Eisenhower. And hard Nixon's appointees rebuked him on numerous ngs, including the famous White House tapes decision t drove him from office.

o conclude that President Reagan will "pack" the reme Court is unrealistic. Although the White House influence the long-range course of the high court rugh a philosophic selection of nomineess, precise and nediate results are unpredictable.

"Good news! That CIA manual is nothing more than a book of ETIQUETTE."

William Murchison

If they keep thinking that...

An oddly subdued Gov. Mark White calls the presidential election "a very unfavorable comment about the national Democratic structure." Well, yes: the same way a tornado might be called a spanking breeze.

The Nov. 6 election did more than blow away Walter Mondale's presidential hopes; likewise it jarred the very foundations of Democratic hegemony in Texas. Notice White's allusion to the "NATIONAL Democratic structure." Not much wrong, in the governor's eyes, with us Democrats here in Texas, who have much broader support than does the national party.

How, then, account for the fact that Reagan carried nominally Democratic Texas almost 2 to 1; and that Phil Gramm beat Lloyd Doggett for the Senate by nearly as handy a margin; and that the GOP picked up four congressional seats while holding Gramm's seat in the once - Democratic - populist Sixth District; and that Republicans gained seventeen seats in the Legislature and, in Dallas County, won almost monolithic control of the courthouse?

For two solid years, White has seized every possible chance to run Reagan down: scolding the president and his party like a male Geraldine Ferraro. And still the state goes Republican! Whatever can be wrong?

The governor has a piece of the answer. The national party, says he, should broaden its base. It should "have an appeal for small - business people," and for "the jobholder, not just the unemployed." White thinks "we've done it in Texas." Which doesn't necessarily follow; because if "we" have done it, why, in the clutch, did so many "jobholders" vote Republican at so many different levels?

A tentative answer: Whatever White thinks Democrats have to show the jobholder, Republicans apparently have more. In which context, the Phil Gramm victory is wonderfully illuminating.

Gramm made himself a traveling salesman for Reaganomics, whooping up its splendors at every whistle stop. He gloried in the tax cuts of 1981; he touted the spending cuts effected in the famous Gramm - Latta budget; he hymned the praises of opportunity and enterprise. The president himself sold Reaganomics no more zestfully - he may have sold his less zestfully - than Gramm.

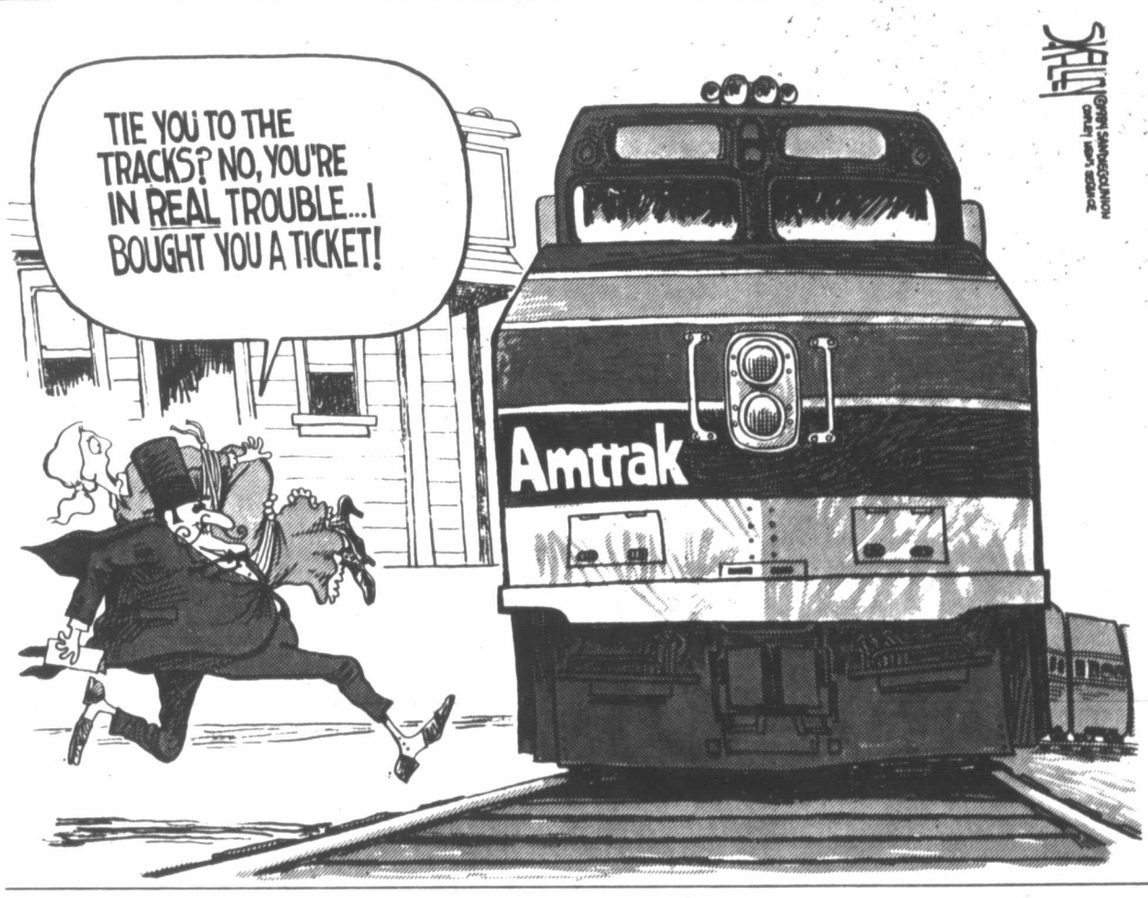

Nor did Gramm's success stop at the senatorial line on the ballot. The congressman exhibited coattails as strong as they were long. In the end, it probably was Gramm, and his dishing of Doggett, that put over the four new Republican Congressmen. Whatever, Gramm amply demonstrated that capitalism sells.

Like White, Gramm knows that a successful political party must accommodate "small - business people" and "jobholders" under its roof. Except that Gramm says it with so much more punch and conviction, as if accustomed to saying it: which in fact he is, and most Democrats aren't.

What happened in Texas on Nov. 6 is emblematic of what happened through much of the Prosperity Belt (a more descriptive term than Sun Belt, it suddenly occurs to me). The Prosperity Belt, happy enough with things as they are, hopeful of their becoming even better with another four years of Reagan, voted massively for opportunity.

Fifty years ago, Democratic orators liked to talk about The Forgotten Man -- put - upon, downtrodden and poor. By the late '70s it was clear that we had a new Forgotten Man (or Woman) -- put - upon, downtrodden and middle - class: hankering for a well - being that the high - tax, high - spend policies of the central government seemed forever to be shoving out of reach.

Our Forgotten Person deems himself in 1984 to have been discovered - ah, but not by Democrats; rather, by Republicans. You know, those old wing - collared country - clubbers. Except that, strange, it's the Republicans who are out there selling opportunity and the Democrats who are disparaging it. A certain kind of Democrat seems reluctant to learn any lessons from the late debacle. Phooey, quoth he, the people didn't vote for opportunity, they voted for Reagan's smile. Just keep thinking that, the discoverers of the Forgotten Person smile; just keep thinking that.

Today in History

Today is Monday, Nov. 19, the 324th day of 1984. There are 42 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Nov. 19, 1863, President Abraham Lincoln delivered his Gettysburg Address to dedicate a national cemetery at the site of the Civil War battle in Pennsylvania. "We here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain; that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth," Lincoln said.

On this date:

Ten years ago: President Gerald R. Ford was formally welcomed to Japan by Emperor Hirohito and Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka.

Five years ago: Iran released three of the hostages — two black Marines and a woman secretary.

One year ago: The Justice Department said it would appeal a federal court ruling denying the government access to the medical records of a severely handicapped infant in New York known as Baby Jane Doe.

Thought for Today: "To conquer without risk is to triumph without glory." — Pierre Corneille, French dramatist (1606-1684)

The leaders have lost touch

Union membership, even by their own audit, is dwindling. And there is evidence that some unions are not reporting "the whole truth" about how much their membership has decreased.

Union efforts to influence last election were the least in 40 years.

Forty years ago organized labor would boast that it represented 35 percent of our nation's non - farm work force. Today they represent barely 19 percent.

Unions affiliated with the AFI - CIO have seen their membership shrink by 1.2 million just since 1981.

Most of the erosion was in the smokestack industries. Union efforts to take up the slack by organizing the new high - tech industries have met much resistance.

Major union contracts the first half of this year provided for wage incrases averaging 2.8 percent where three years ago they were able to negotiate increases of 6.6 percent.

Today non - union workers make higher wages than union workers. Have unions been "misled"? Apparently.

Leaders should always look back once in a while to be sure their followers have not turned the corner back there somewhere.

This appears to be how most of today's union leaders lost touch with their own constituency.

Example: Union leaders, seeking to influence national politics, have been contributing most to those members of Congress who vote against defense spending.

Congressmen rated "zero" on defense appropriations nonetheless received an average contribution from the AFL - CIO of $36,285.

The AFL - CIO gave even more money to supporters of the Zablocki nuclear freeze resolution: $37,443, on average.

That is how union leaders voted with union money.

Meanwhile, union members -- the rank - and - file -- have been voting "conservative."

Seventy - two percent of these union members are opposed to cuts in defense spending.

Again - the labor federation supports mostly members of Congess who vote against the "peace - through - strength" concept, while their own unions' members favor the concept.

Similar disparity is apparent in response to other issues but "defense spending" is the most readily definable.

Union leaders are still inclined to "blame labor law" or to "blame the times" for their own shortcomings.

Their own shortcomings include misuse of union dues, complicity with mobsters, tardy recognition of women, misdirected political action and losing touch with the dues - payers.

New story of old country

MUSCAT, Oman (NEA) — Out there, not many miles to the northwest, is the Strait of Hormuz.

Through that narrow stretch of water, 40 percent of the non-communist world's oil passes. It is that geographic fact — and the consequent strategic possibility that the protracted conflict between Iraq and Iran might wash through the strait, cutting the supply — that makes Oman a potential world headline.

They are, however, a fact and a possibility Oman prefers not to publicize.

So our subject will be what Omanis see as their country's real story — its ambitious development effort. Correctly, I believe. But also, who am I — here as a guest of the government — to go around biting hands?

It is quite a story. In little more than a decade, dating from the accession of the present sultan, Oman has metamorphasized from near medieval isolation into a rapidly developing modern nation.

Old cities have been rebuilt and new ones are being built. (Although with due respect for tradition. The contemporary architecture invokes the country's Islamic heritage, and Muscat's old city wall, which had to be breeched, is being rebuilt — in concrete, but faced with antique-appearing cut stone.)

A network of paved highways is reaching out into a country the size of New Mexico that in 1970 had 17 miles of unsurfaced roads.

A school system providing universal and free education has been created from scratch. A university, now under construction, will open in 1986.

All of this is being funded, as might be expected given Oman's location, by oil revenues. That these are, however, distinctly modest by the standards of their neighbors is seen by Omanis as something of a blessing.

They can't afford to throw money at projects, but must plan and budget carefully.

The visitor, taking in the extent and scope of projects underway simultaneously, might be inclined to question that. But the consensus among resident Western observers is that the Omanis have their development act pretty well together, learning from many of their neighbor's mistakes.

They also see no signs of the Iran disease — rejection by tradition-oriented elements of the population of a modernization program perceived as going too far and too fast.

Which brings up another aspect of the Oman story necessitating some polite nibbling on at least an index finger.

A sizable share — 40 percent in 1983 — of government expenditures goes into a military establishment undergoing rapid modernization. Trained and to a considerable extent still officered by the British, the Omani army, navy and air force are judged among the most effective in the area.

Dug in on the Musandam peninsula, 23 miled south of the clearly visible Iranian coast, Omani forces keep watch on Hormuz.

And just in case, there is an agreement with the United States that under specific conditions and at Oman's request would give American forces access to Omani facilities.

It is a case that, in the Omani view, may be less likely the less it is discussed and the less, therefore, it attracts Iranian attention. If you can't choose your neighbors, you can your policy — which, militarily speaking, is to maintain a low profile.

Does that also apply to Oman's spectacular development in other fields?

Hardly.

As one eminent Omani put it to me, "When you know you are playing a good game, you appreciate applause."

Dear Abby

Man can find lost love by following her Oregon trail

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: This is for "In Love in Oregon," who went to Harris Beach, Ore., and met a girl from Grants Pass. He said it was love at first sight and they spent a fabulous weekend together, but they said goodbye before he could get her last name. He asked you to help him find her.

If he's sincere, he should have no trouble finding her. He could go to Grants Pass and knock on doors, asking, "Does Mary live here?"

Or he could place an ad in the local newspaper saying, "Mary, I love you. Call me!" (And give his telephone number.)

Or he could get copies of the local high school yearbooks for the appropriate years and find her picture.

He could also have fliers printed saying, "MISSING. THE GIRL I LOVE. FIRST NAME 'MARY.' PLEASE HELP ME FIND HER!" and tack the fliers on telephone poles.

Of course, if he feels that the time and expense aren't worth it, he doesn't deserve to find her.

PORT RICHEY, FLA.

DEAR PORT: If he places an ad in the Grants Pass newspaper saying, "Mary, I love you. Call me," and gives his telephone number, he may have more marriageable Marys than he knows what to do with. He might even meet another "Mary" and fall madly in love with her at first sight, too.

There's even an outside chance that his Mary is already married, or going (or living) with someone, and she's hiding.

DEAR ABBY: Your recent column in which you made a pitch for handgun control was a lot of bull. You said: In 1980, handguns killed 77 people in Japan, eight in Great Britain, 24 in Switzerland, eight in Canada, 23 in Israel, 18 in Sweden, four in Australia and 11,522 in the United States. You said we must be doing something wrong.

I can tell you what we're doing wrong. In foreign countries, criminals are stopped after their first crime because bleeding-heart liberals haven't forced the judicial system to put the rights of the criminal before those of the victim.

If people really want to get rid of handguns, they should put the criminals behind bars where they belong. Then the rest of us won't have to carry guns to protect ourselves and loved ones.

DEAR B.H.: Voltaire, the famous 18-century French philosopher and author, is reported to have said: "I disapprove of what you say, but I will defend to the death your right to say it." I'm with Voltaire.

DEAR ABBY: I'm hoping that you or perhaps one of your readers can help me. I am a cross-country skier who froze the tips of two toes the winter before last. This past winter, they were very sensitive to the cold and did not take long to freeze. I was miserable.

I have even considered having these toes amputated, one to the first joint and the other to the second joint, but I'm afraid they will feel like they are still there, and frozen.

Does anyone have any suggestions about how to keep these toes warm and from freezing?

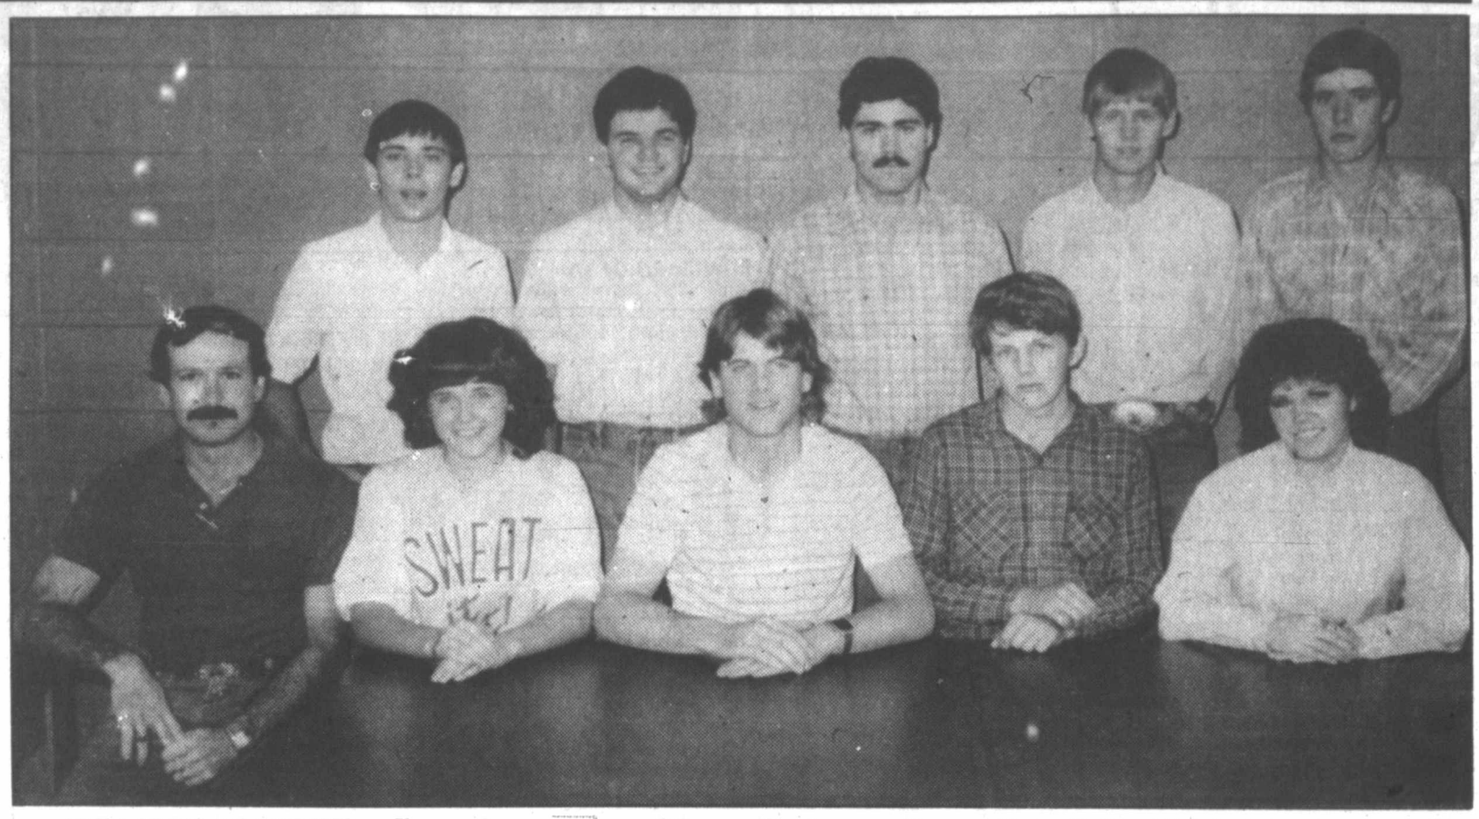

I've asked in ski shops, and no one has come up with a solution.

DEAR LOVES: Please, do not consider amputation! See your physician. Surely he or she can come up with a suitable solution.

Credit life can be worthwhile

SMART MONEY
Bruce Williams

DEAR BRUCE WILLIAMS — My wife and I just ordered our first new car.

It will be about nine weeks before it's delivered and we have to decide whether or not we want credit-life insurance included on our monthly payments. It's only a few dollars a month. Is it a good idea? — R.V., HOUSTON, TEXAS.

DEAR R.V. — Credit-life insurance makes a whole lot of sense. Or let me rephrase that: Life insurance to retire your debts makes a whole lot of sense.

But more often than not, the so-called credit-life that you have described — the kind that's included in your automobile payments, furniture payments or whatever — is the most expensive term insurance that you'll ever purchase.

I have no quarrel with the notion that it's wise to carry insurance to take care of obligations in case you are not in the picture.

But rather than buying it through your automobile dealer, I would suggest seeing a competent insurance broker or agent.

For the same number of dollars that you'll spend on decreasing term insurance that the credit folks are selling, you'll find that you can buy substantially more term insurance to protect your family.

One point is worth mentioning: In most situations, there is little or no underwriting or investigating involved with credit-life insurance.

For those people who might have difficulty buying insurance on the open market for reasons of health, heavy smoking and so forth, credit-life offers an avenue of obtaining insurance where there is little discrimination because of the things I've mentioned. This is worth keeping in mind.

DEAR BRUCE WILLIAMS — I'm 68 years old and I own my own home, which is worth about $68,000. I really love my home, but I'm wondering if I can afford to stay in it.

My income consists of Social Security (about $6,000 a year) and $2,000 a year in dividends on my $20,000 in savings. If you were in my position, what would you do? — K.L., SEATTLE, WASH.

DEAR K.L. — Let's analyze this from an unemotional point of view, which is difficult when people talk about their homes.

If you were to convert your home into cash, you'd have approximately $65,000, which would give you an excess of $7,000 forever without touching the principle.

Maintaining a home such as you described — including heat, insurance, taxes and so-forth — could easily cost $3,000, and you have no tax advantages because you have no tax problems.

Therefore, the true cost of living in your home is between $9,000 and $10,000 a year. Shocking, huh?

Now what can we do about this? Suppose we convert your home to cash? The likelihood is that you could rent a very adequate apartment in the neighborhood of $400 to $450 a month, which would give you an exta $600 in cash every month for the rest of your life.

Some of the peripheral benefits are not to be sneezed at, either: No more lawns to cut, no more repair work. Not too shabby!

Obviously, there are other factors involved here: lifestyle, emotions and so-forth. These you'll have to deal with as best you can.

What the heck. Why not spend the money on you, instead of leaving it for someone else?

Handicapped students sought

Do you know a child with a handicap?

Every handicapped child from ages three through 21 has the right to a free education. It is a state law, but many people are unaware of this fact, said Jerry Pope, special education director for the Pampa Independent School District.

"If you know a handicapped child who lives in the Pampa, Lefors or Grandview - Hopkins school districts, please call 665-2376," Pope said. The telephone number is for the PISD administrative office for special education in Gray County.

Pampa, Lefors and Grandview - Hopkins have established a cooperative system to handle education needs for handicapped students.

Students with handicaps in hearing or vision or with physical, emotional and mental handicaps may be eligible for educational assistance, Pope said. Parents or guardians can contact the PISD Special Education administrative office for information.

New group helps youngsters cope with diabetes

WAYNESBORO, Pa. (AP) — For young people like Chad, Chris and Rodney, finding out they had diabetes seemed like the end of the world.

"I thought I was the only one and I was glad to know that other people my age had it," said Chad, a member of the recently formed Diabetic Youth Group.

Chad, 12, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard George of South Mountain, Pa., was diagnosed a diabetic at a health fair in April. His blood sugar count was more than 400; the normal level is between 70 and 120.

Sponsored by the local adult diabetic association, the Diabetic Youth Group was originated by Wanda Caldwell, patient instructor at the Waynesboro Hospital.

"It was hard to keep the attention of the young people at the adult group meetings and we knew there was a need for a group for the young people so they could discuss their problems," Caldwell said.

"Their problems are different from those of adults. They have to deal with kids who stare at them when they are snacking (to get sugar) in school and things like that."

She started in the beginning of the year sending letters to all young people she knew with diabetes from the adult group, and contacted the school nurses so they could inform the students with diabetes about the group.

The first meeting was held at the home of Chris Williams of Greencastle, Pa., who was diagnosed diabetic five years ago.

"The family room of the Williams' home was wall to wall with young people and their parents. About 27 gathered at the first meeting," Caldwell said.

Projects that you conceive or originate could work out fortunately for you this coming year. When you think you have a good idea, get it to people who have pipelines to the marketplace.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) An old, unresolved family problem may be resurrected again today. It won't help matters if you still refuse to alter your past position. Want to find out to whom you're best suited romantically? Send for your matchmaker set by mailing $2 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. Reveals compatibilities for all signs.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Make your imagination work for you today, not against you. Try to envision yourself a winner, instead of seeing yourself coming out on the short end.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Be on guard this evening so a dispute does not ensue with a pal over something material. Place friendship notches above worldly goods.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Evaluate your objectives and goals wisely today or you might waste a lot of time and effort struggling for something you may not need or want.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Friends may find you a trifle difficult to get along with today because of your reluctance to reveal what's really disturbing you. Be forthright.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be doubly careful if you have to conduct financial matters later in the day. If you're less alert, your chances for costly mistakes increase.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Have faith in your own abilities today but by the same token, don't underestimate your competition. Poor judgment could turn a winning situation into a losing one.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Confrontations can be avoided today if you're not too critical of others or try to remake them in your own mold. Let each express his individuality.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Don't allow yourself to be pressured by others today to abandon or lower your standards for their selfish purposes. Abide by your ideals.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) A failure to cooperate with one who has been supportive in the past could jeopardize this relationship or perhaps even sever it.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Keep a close eye on co-workers today who are using dangerous tools or materials. Be sure that they are taking sensible safety measures at all times.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Do not take wild gambles today in order to recoup previous losses. Foolish risks could put you deeper in the red instead of getting you out of it.

It was more than a football game

By MIKE COCHRAN

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Despite the outcome, the Southwest Conference showdown between Texas and Texas Christian was more than a football game for the fairy tale Horned Frogs.

It was a sellout crowd and regional television and tailgate parties and visions of a Cotton Bowl.

It was the New York Times and ticket scalpers and bowl reps from the Cotton, Fiesta, Sun and Bluebonnet.

It was the inimitable Jim Wacker, TCU's dynamic second-year coach, and memories of yesteryear when TCU and big games were almost routine.

It was autumn madness in a most uncommon setting, stoic old Amon Carter Stadium, dean of the SWC football fields but rarely the scene of late for league championship rumbles.

It was cold and gray and wet and foggy and nobody in purple seemed to notice. At least until near the end.

And then it was too much Texas tradition, too much Texas experience and, most of all, too much Texas fullback Terry Orr.

But it was great fun while it lasted.

First quarter: TCU fumbles. Texas scores on a 20-yard pass from Todd Dodge to Bill Boy Bryant. Texas fumbles. TCU's Ken Ozee kicks 27-yard field goal.

Longhorns 7, Cinderella 3.

"We can relax," said TCU sports publicist Glen Stone. "No matter what happens, our season is a success."

Indeed, the Frogs, coming off a 1-8-2 campaign in 1983, entered the game 8-1, atop the SWC with a 5-1 mark and ranked 12th in the nation.

"It is truly one of the great, remarkable turnarounds in college football," said ABC-TV producer Curt Gowdy Jr. "It becomes pretty interesting to see how Wacker has turned this football program around."

Second quarter: A Texas punt bounces off a Frog player's leg. Texas recovers. Jeff Ward kicks a 35-yard field goal. TCU's Tony Sciaraffa hits James Maness on a 44-yard pass, then wings him a 10-yard touchdown shot. Texas blocks extra point attempt as the rain returns.

Longhorns 10, Cinderella 9.

"This is the culmination of a dream," said TCU Athletic Director Frank Windegger of the Horned Frogs' season.

He says the Wacker charisma and motivation and his winning 1984 campaign have molded the TCU athletic program into a warm and close family — like the glory days of Dutch Meyer and Abe Martin.

"And it's been good for the city of Fort Worth," he added. "I said when I hired Jim Wacker, 'This guy will set the city on fire.'

"I figured it would take about four years for this thing to get ablaze, but the man has set this city on fire."

Third quarter: Dodge burns TCU with a 63-yard touchdown pass to Orr. TCU fumbles again. Dodge runs for 36 and Edwin Simmons for 10 and a touchdown. Ward misses extra point. Texas fumbles, TCU recovers. Sciaraffa passes 11 yards to Maness for touchdown.

Longhorns 23, Cinderella 16.

Despite the intermittent rain, only a small number of spectators head for the parking lot.

Tommy Love, TCU's ticket manager: "This hasn't happened in Fort Worth or to TCU in years. Besides being a good football game, this is an event ... People will want to be able to say, 'I was there.' "

Fourth quarter: Orr runs for touchdowns of 3, 82 and 38 yards as 10th-ranked Texas takes inside track to Cotton Bowl. Tony Jeffery scores from the 1 for TCU.

Longhorns 44, Cinderella 23.

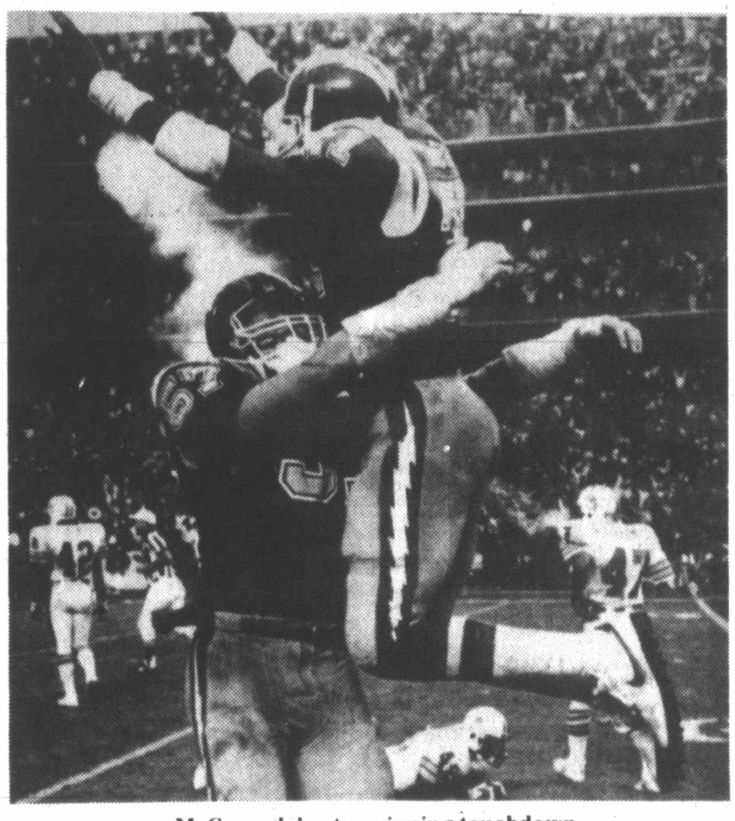

Ted Nance, Bluebonnet Bowl representative: "TCU's still our No. 1 choice."

Dolphins lose perfect record

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Miami Dolphins can now forget about 1972 and concentrate on 1984.

"There won't be any more comparisons now" with the Dolphins' unbeaten team of 1972, Coach Don Shula said Sunday after Miami's first loss of the season, a 34-28 overtime decision to the San Diego Chargers. "I guess we won't have to worry about that anymore."

Miami, 11-1, lost for the first time in 17 regular-season games dating back to last year. The Dolphins fell one game short of the National Football League record for consecutive regular-season victories set by the Chicago Bears in 1933-34, and also missed a chance to clinch the AFC East title.

Meanwhile, Buffalo shocked Dallas 14-3, Philadelphia stunned Washington 16-10 and the New York Giants defeated St. Louis 16-10 to throw the NFC East race into a three-way tie. The Cowboys, Redskins and Giants are each 7-5, while St. Louis dropped to fourth with a 6-6 record.

In other games, it was San Francisco 24, Tampa Bay 17; Denver 42, Minnesota 21; Los Angeles Raiders 17, Kansas City 7; Chicago 16, Detroit 14; Cleveland 23, Atlanta 7; Green Bay 31, Los Angeles Rams 6; New England 50, Indianapolis 17; Seattle 26, Cincinnati 6, and Houston 31, New York Jets 20.

New Orleans hosts Pittsburgh tonight.

Dan Fouts set San Diego records with 57 pass attempts and 36 completions while throwing for 380 yards in the game and four touchdowns during regulation play.

"We had our chances. We didn't score when we had to," said Miami quarterback Dan Marino, who threw for 338 yards and two touchdowns but could direct only one scoring drive in the second half.

Bills 14, Cowboys 3

Rookie Greg Bell scored two touchdowns, one on an 85-yard run on the first play of the game, as the previously winless Bills shocked the Cowboys. The Bills, 1-11, snapped a 13-game losing streak that extended back to the last two games of 1983.

Bell rushed for 206 yards on 27 carries in becoming the first player to run for 200 yards against Dallas since Jimmy Brown of Cleveland in 1963.

Oilers 31, Jets 20

Houston's Warren Moon threw three touchdown passes — two to Tim Smith — during a string of 31 straight points to lead the Oilers over the Jets. The loss was the fourth straight for the Jets.

Eagles 16, Redskins 10

Andre Waters returned a kickoff 89 yards for a touchdown and Paul McFadden kicked three field goals as Philadelphia stunned Washington.

Washington's Mark Moseley had given the Redskins a 10-9 lead on a 33-yard field goal with 5:26 left in the third period when Waters broke loose on the ensuing kickoff.

Giants 16, Cardinals 10

Ali Haji-Sheikh kicked three third-quarter field goals and Mark Haynes picked off two passes for the Giants.

The Giants forced four interceptions and two fumbles in the bruising battle. That gave the Cardinals 16 turnovers in their last three games.

49ers 24, Buccaneers 17

Fred Dean made two key defensive plays in his first game this year to help San Francisco beat Tampa Bay. Dean, the defensive end who joined the 49ers last Wednesday after settlement of a contract dispute, forced a wobbly pass by Bucs quarterback Steve DeBerg which resulted in an interception and eventually a touchdown. He also contributed a key sack in the closing minutes of the game that killed off Tampa Bay's final scoring threat.

Raiders 17, Chiefs 7

Linebacker Rod Martin returned one Kansas City fumble for a touchdown and forced a second that set up another Los Angeles score as the Raiders broke a three-game losing streak.

No. 1 ranking up for grabs

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

The New Year's Day bowls may not like it, but college football's national championship could be decided before Christmas.

After Saturday's weekly multitude of shockers, 11-0 Brigham Young is the only unbeaten team in the major-college ranks. The Cougars were third in last week's Associated Press poll and are hoping that the laws of mathematics — No. 1 Nebraska lost to No. 6 Oklahoma 17-7, No. 2 South Carolina was depth-charged by Navy 38-21 — will move them to the top of the list.

"I don't see how you can really determine who's No. 1, but I think we have as legitimate a claim as anybody," Coach LaVell Edwards said following BYU's come-from-behind 24-14 triumph over Utah.

After winding up the regular season against Utah State next Saturday, BYU will take its annual trip to the Holiday Bowl on Dec. 21. The Cougars' opponent is up in the air, although 18th-ranked Auburn, a 21-12 winner over No. 15 Georgia, is anxious to go.

Auburn could wind up in the Sugar Bowl even though fifth-ranked Florida clinched its first-ever Southeastern Conference championship by defeating Kentucky 25-17. The Gators are appealing a recent NCAA probation sentence and the SEC Executive Committee will meet Tuesday to decide their fate.

If it strips Florida of the crown, Auburn can go to the Sugar Bowl by beating Alabama on Dec. 1. An Auburn loss would turn the trip over to ninth-ranked LSU, which was upset by Mississippi State 16-14.

The Orange Bowl saw its dream of a 1-2 matchup go down the drain when Nebraska and South Carolina both lost. Nebraska detoured to the Sugar Bowl — while South Carolina settled for the Gator Bowl against the loser of next week's game between Oklahoma and No. 4 Oklahoma State, which shaded Iowa State 16-10.

The OU-OSU winner goes to the Orange Bowl against eighth-ranked Washington, which beat Washington State 38-29. If they tie, however, Nebraska would back into the Orange Bowl.

The Cotton Bowl lined up 13th-ranked Boston College and exciting Doug Flutie — the Eagles downed Syracuse 24-16 — to oppose the Southwest Conference champion, which probably will be Texas. The 10th-ranked Longhorns crushed No. 12 Texas Christian 44-23.

The Rose Bowl got some good news and some bad news. First, 11th-ranked Ohio State clinched the Big Ten championship by defeating Michigan 21-6. But seventh-ranked Southern Cal, which won its "trip" to Pasadena a week ago, stumbled and lost 29-10 to UCLA, which promptly was wooed by the Fiesta Bowl to meet No. 14 Miami, which was idle over the weekend.

Rounding out the Top Twenty, No. 16 Southern Methodist whipped Texas Tech 31-0, No. 17 Florida State whomped Tennessee-Chattanooga 37-0, No. 19 Virginia was tied by North Carolina 24-24 and Maryland hammered No. 20 Clemson 41-23.

Elsewhere, Liberty Bowl-bound Arkansas trounced Texas A&M 28-0, Freedom Bowl-bound Iowa lost to Minnesota 23-17 and Hall of Fame Bowl-bound Wisconsin defeated Michigan State 20-10. Toledo of the Mid-American Conference will meet Nevada-Las Vegas of the Pacific Coast Athletic Association in the California Bowl. Toledo beat Central Michigan 14-3 while UNLV trimmed Utah State 36-20.

Horns have best Cotton Bowl shot

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

The Cotton Bowl will have to wait two weeks to invite its Southwest Conference host team, but the Texas Longhorns have the inside track.

Official invitation day for the bowls in 6 p.m. next Saturday, when the Cotton Bowl will extend the guest invitation to bowl-ready Boston College.

Texas will be in Waco playing the Baylor Bears, who have upset the Longhorns from time to time in the past. The Longhorns will close out their season Dec. 1 in Austin against the Texas Aggies.

Texas struck midnight for Cinderella Texas Christian on Saturday with a 44-23 flogging in Fort Worth to take a game lead on Texas Christian, Arkansas, Houston and Southern Methodist in the SWC chase.

Arkansas blanked Texas A&M 28-0, SMU shut out Texas Tech 31-0 and Baylor overcame Rice 46-40 in other SWC games.

TCU is assured of at least a visit to the Bluebonnet Bowl, which loves the Frogs. The Liberty Bowl considers Arkansas its No. 1 prospect.

SMU is courting the Aloha Bowl.

Texas has now defeated Texas Christian 17 games in a row and the Horns did it with a crisp offense.

"The best way to beat TCU is just keep your punter on the bench and that's what we did," said Texas Coach Jim Akers.

Quarterback Todd Dodge, who had two touchdown passes after a miserable outing against Houston, said "We took a lot of abuse after the Houston game. We got tired of it."

SMU is hoping its seven victories will cause the Aloho Bowl in Honolulu to come calling.

"I sure hope this impresses somebody," said SMU Coach Bobby Collins. "If people realized we were on the road in Lubbock playing a pretty good football team, they'd have to be impressed with the final score."

SMU's chief Aloha Bowl opposition is Maryland which beat Clemson 41-23 on Saturday.

"Well," said a Liberty Bowl official, "we've found one team and now we have to look for the other."

The Liberty Bowl was a big fan of the Hogs after they took advantage of seven A&M turnovers to whip the Aggies.

The Police Department is sending about 50 officers — six times the usual complement of eight — to the event Tuesday, said Monique Moss, a spokeswoman for the Hollywood Trust, which administers the Walk of Fame program.

The trust expects about 5,000 fans to show up. "This will be the biggest," Ms. Moss said. "But the only thing special about it is the security."

Jackson, 26, will occupy a space between Lefty Frizzell and Lupe Vele. The Jacksons — the group consisting of Michael and five brothers — already has a star.

ASHEBORO, N.C. (AP) — Al "Lash" LaRue, star of numerous 1940s cowboy movies, says he's excited about his first major role in over 30 years, in a horror flick that will be filmed in Belews Creek and Kernersville.

Shooting of "The Dark Power" is scheduled to begin Nov. 26, said producer and director Phil Smoot of Asheboro, who has worked in various capacities on 24 feature-length motion pictures.

With the exception of a few minor walk-on parts it will be LaRue's first movie role in more than 30 years, and his first in which he isn't playing a cowboy.

"I think that the technical developments in films have been fantastic and I still hold the ambition of eventually directing and producing films," LaRue said.

REYE SYNDROME

Reye syndrome is a rare but dangerous condition that can develop from flu or chicken pox. It occurs mainly in children under 16, usually when they appear to be recovering. Watch for these signs:

- Persistent vomiting
- Fatigue
- Confusion and belligerence.

If your child displays any of these symptoms, consult a doctor immediately.

Some studies indicate that there may be an association between the use of aspirin for flu and chicken pox and the development of Reye syndrome. Further studies are being conducted on this possibility. In the meantime, the U.S. Surgeon General suggests that you check with your doctor before using aspirin or any medication when your child has flu or chicken pox.

CANDY REMOVED—The manager of a large West London food store clears the shelves of Mars bars before the shop opened Monday following claims by animal rights campaiigners that they have injected rat poison into Mars bars all over England. (AP Laserphoto)

Storekeepers remove candy from shelves in Britain

LONDON (AP) — British storekeepers cleared an estimated 10 million Mars candy bars from their shelves today after animal rights activists said they injected some with rat poison to protest the use of monkeys in a sugar-rich diet experiment.

About a dozen people, including some children, reportedly ate Mars bars before finding typewritten warning notes inside the wrappers, but there were no reports that anyone had been poisoned. Police said the heat-sealed wrappers had been punctured, probably by activists posing as shoppers in supermarkets.

Laboratory technicians were checking for traces of poison in bars found in at least six cities and towns, including Coventry, Leeds, Manchester, Plymouth and Salisbury, police said.

In a statement Sunday, Mars said that with the aid of storekeepers it was removing and checking all Mars bars on sale. It said there could be 10 million of them.

"These measures will allow our customers to continue to buy Mars bars with confidence," it said, adding that so far no evidence of contamination had been found.

A telephone caller to the London Broadcasting Corp., who identified herself only as Vivien, said the action was taken against Mars U.K. Ltd to protest the company funding dental researchers to discover if monkeys get tooth decay on a sugar-rich diet at Guy's Hospital in London.

The telephone caller said: "There will be actions of this sort by the Animal Liberation Front against all companies that abuse animals. It will continue to step up its actions in any way necessary to put these companies out of business."

"These people are lunatics," said farmworker Michael Phippen near Dorchester in southwest England. He said his family was terrified when he found a note in a Mars bar after his wife, Sandra, and 14-year-old daughter Chantelle, had each eaten one.

Mrs. Phippen, who opposes animal experiments, said she and her daughter apparently suffered no ill effects from the bars.

Britons buy 3 million of the chocolate, caramel and nougat Mars bars daily, the company said. The candy bar has been sold in Britain since 1932.

Mars said it pays $31,250 a year to fund the monkey research. Loxley Ryan, corporate affairs director, denied any cruelty to animals. He said the monkeys get Mars bars as part of their diet to see whether dental problems in children can be prevented.

3 convicted in underworld slaying

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The murder convictions of a reputed Mafia chieftain and two other men stemming from a bloody war over gambling, drugs and loansharking pierces "the myth of organized crime's invincibility," a prosecutor says.

Harry "The Hunchback" Riccobene, 74, and Joseph Casdia, 41, were found guilty Sunday of first-degree murder and conspiracy to commit murder in the May 13, 1982, contract slaying of Frank Monte. Vincent Isabella, 46, was convicted of third-degree murder and providing the hired killer with the death weapon.

Prosecutors claimed that Riccobene — described by the Pennsylvania Crime Commission as "an oldtime LCN (La Cosa Nostra, or Mafia) member" — had Monte assassinated after learning a contract had been put out on his own life.

The three main prosecution witnesses, two hired killers and Riccobene's half-brother, broke the underworld's oath of silence, testifying that Riccobene had ordered the killing and that Casdia and Isabella helped.

"We have shown that with good investigation and with pressure we can get members of organized crime groups to break the code of silence and testify against others," said District Attorney Ed Rendell.

"The myth of organized crime's invincibility — that it can shoot and kill with impunity — is over," Rendell said after the verdict, which came in the fifth day of deliberations after a six-week trial.

The defendants showed no emotion as they listened to the verdicts. Riccobene, wearing a dark red jacket and a full Santa Claus beard, cupped his chin with one hand, while Casdia and Isabella stared at the jury.

"Of course, I'm disappointed," Riccobene said. "I was railroaded."

Death sentences were ruled out before the trial began, but Riccobene and Casdia face mandatory life sentences under state law. Isabella, who was acquitted of conspiracy, faces a maximum 10-20 years in prison for murder and 2½-5 years for the weapons violation.

Confessed triggerman Joseph Pedulla testified that the killing was ordered by Riccobene, whom prosecutors said was seeking to wrest control of the mob from Nicodemo "Little Nicky" Scarfo.

Joseph Santaguida, who defended Isabella, said he hopes Judge George Ivins considers all the facts "and will be lenient" in sentencing. No sentencing date was set.

Israel rejects demands as talks on withdrawal resume

NAQOURA, Lebanon (AP) — Israel rejected Lebanese demands for the release of prisoners and the payment of up to $10 billion in war reparations as talks on the withdrawal of Israeli troops resumed today in this border town.

As the third round of talks opened, Israel's chief delegate instead stressed the need to agree on measures to protect Israel's northern border after an Israeli withdrawal from Lebanon, which it invaded almost 2½ years ago.

"In regards to the request for compensation of $8 (billion) to $10 billion, I wish to assert most vigorously that the Israeli delegation rejects this request outright," Brig. Gen. Amos Gilboa said, according to a statement distributed by delegation spokesman Lt. Col. Yonah Gazit.

"The reason for our presence in this forum is to discuss security arrangements which will insure the safeguarding of our northern border. It is not our role to discuss the irrelevant matter of compensation," Gilboa said.

During the second session of the talks last Thursday, Lebanon demanded the war reparations to offset the cost of repairing damage caused by Israel's invasion and occupation of south Lebanon.

Gilboa also rejected other Lebanese demands, including the release of hundreds of prisoners held by the Israelis at south Lebanon detention centers and the opening of key roads connecting south Lebanon with Beirut and the north.

"Israel at the present time cannot permit herself to make such gestures as long as the hostile activities against her continue," Gilboa said.

Israel had sought a cease-fire in south Lebanon but the offer was rejected by Shiite Moslem leaders.

Since Israel invaded Lebanon on June 6, 1982, to rout Palestinian guerrillas, 602 Israelis have been killed and more than 3,500 wounded in Lebanon.

An average of about 50 attacks a month have been reported this year against the Israeli occupation force, with the majority blamed on Shiite Moslems.

Israel's daily Haaretz newspaper said today that from the end of June 1982 until last week, there had been 1,010 attacks on Israelis in Lebanon. The newspaper did not cite any sources.

Libyan agents reportedly planned to hijack an F-16

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Libyan agents arrested in Cairo in a plot to kill a Libyan exile have confessed that they also planned to hijack a U.S.-built F-16 jetfighter and assassinate Egyptian leaders, Egypt's interior minister was quoted today as saying.

The weekly newspaper Mayo, published by the governing National Democratic Party, also quoted Interior Minister Ahmed Rushdi as saying the Libyan agents promised to introduce their Egyptian collaborators, who in fact were undercover security police, to the international terrorist Carlos.

Rushdi cited confessions made by Anthony Gill, 48, said to be the leader of the four-man team sent by Libya to Cairo to assassinate former Libyan Prime Minister Abdel-Hamid Bakoush, who has lived in Cairo since 1977.

Egyptian security used pictures showing Bakoush lying in a pool of blood to trick the team into believing the former prime minister had been killed last week. Bakoush appeared alive with Rushdi at a news conference Saturday.

Rushdi said Godfrey Chiner, 47, London, and two Maltese were also arrested in the plot.

"Confessions by the leader of the group showed that one of the principal aims was to gather information about the F-16 and to explore the possibility of hijacking one to Libya," Rushdi was quoted by Mayo as saying.

Egypt has received 80 F-16s from the United States and another 40 will be delivered by the end of next year, air force commander Gen. Abdel-Hamid Hilmy said.

Rushdi said Libyan agents also confessed that Libya "planned to assassinate some Egyptian leaders and blow up some vital Egyptian installations in a manner similar to what happened in 1976." He gave no details.

The Egyptians blamed Libya for explosions in 1976 in a government building housing several ministerial departments in Cairo and on an Alexandria-Cairo train.

Egyptian officials have said since the arrests that the Libyans were plotting to assassinate several world leaders, including West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl and British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

On Sunday, President Hosni Mubarak said evidence from the four agents pointed to Libyan involvement in the Oct. 31 assassination of Indira Gandhi, India's prime minister.

The Libyan news agency JANA carried a Foreign Ministry denial of Mubarak's allegations.

Rushdi met Sunday with the ambassadors of France and West Germany to brief them on information said to have been obtained from the agents.

Rushdi said Gill confessed that after assassinating Bakoush, he planned to establish an investment company in Egypt to serve as a cover for further terrorist acts.

Gill had been a "terrorist operative for the last 12 years" and had carried out terrorist operations in Britain and France, including the assassination of a Libyan dissident in Paris.

The non-voter: is he sending a message?

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Once again the American people held an election and nearly half of the people old enough to vote didn't.

Is that so bad?

The conventional viewpoint is that it's deplorable. But it can be, and sometimes is, argued that it isn't harmful at all, may indeed be helpful.

An AP News Analysis

Those who think everyone should vote say that going to the polls is the hard-earned right and solemn duty of citizenship.

The world is crowded, they say, with people who do not have the right to choose their own leaders. Over history, millions have died for that right and Americans should not be so indifferent about it.

In the presidential election Nov. 6, about 174 million Americans were old enough to vote and about 127 million of them had registered to vote, according to a study by the non-partisan Committee for the Study of the American Electorate.

The committee estimates that 92 million voted. That would be 52.9 percent of the adults or 72.4 percent of those registered.

Compared to four years ago, this was a slight increase — three-tenths of 1 percent — in the percentage of adults who voted and a 2.8 percent drop in the percentage of registered people who actually cast a ballot.

But 24 years ago, in the Kennedy-Nixon election, 62.8 percent of the adult population voted. The percentage declined in every presidential election since then, until this one.

The number of non-voters has doubled since 1960 while the number of voters has gone up by only a third.

Look at those figures one way, and they suggest that Ronald Reagan is the presidential choice of only one adult American in three. Two-thirds voted for someone else — or for none of the above.

Says the committee, which exists to study the cause and cure of low participation in American elections: "Non-votes are still winning our elections. If the true story were written about the results of this election for president, it would read: Non-voters 46.5 (percent); Reagan 31.2; Mondale 21.7 and that is a sad comentary on the state of American democracy."

But it could be that those who did not register or vote were expressing themselves, too.

Maybe they were expressing dissatisfaction with the choice before them. Or maybe they were expressing perfect satisfaction with the state of American democracy.

Could be they were saying they'd be happy to live with whichever president came out of the election. If so, that's not such a bad tribute to the system.

Voters driven to the polls by get-out-the-vote drives — people shamed into voting — aren't likely to give a lot of thought to their choices. Their votes could cancel out those who'd studied the issues and weighed their choices.
