Workday set Saturday for Snyder Neighbors Sharing work projects

The annual workday for Snyder Neighbors Sharing is scheduled Saturday with work to begin at 7:30 a.m.

The organization is still in need of workers as only about 35 have signed up. Interested volunteers need to contact Thomas Fogleman at 573-3538 or 574-8018 for work assignments.

The Snyder Senior Citizens Center will be headquarters for the day. Anyone not having a workplace assignment may contact the center on Saturday for addresses.

The board has selected seven applicants this year. Some work has already been completed by G&G Glass and three of the projects have been finished.

The organization will be painting two houses, roofing one and doing work replacing windows and doors on another.

Local restaurants and businesses will be furnishing food and drinks for the workday. Volunteers will be delivering food and drinks to the workers at each site.

Fogleman said donations and financial support have been outstanding this year as "just about every restaurant" has signed up to donate food. In addition, Lawrence IGA is donating items and Wal-Mart is donating soft drinks.

All four lumber yards in town are also assisting with the workday, Fogleman said.

Thus far, individuals from First United Methodist Church, Boy Scouts, First Baptist Church, Colonial Hill Baptist Church, Western Texas College, Trinity United Methodist Church, PennzEnergy and First Presbyterian Church have signed up as volunteers.

Two new prospects are revealed at DCOS gathering

Housekeeping items were the only action taken by the Development Corporation of Snyder board, meeting briefly Thursday afternoon.

Directors approved the monthly financial statements and the payment of bills before hearing the executive director's monthly report.

John DeLille, DCOS executive director, told the board about a prospect interested in locating to the local industrial park.

DeLille said it is early in the recruitment stage, but the firm could use yarn produced by Lorber Industries.

Board president Roy McQueen also stated that a food processing company had also expressed interest in locating in the industrial park.

"It was our goal to have a bonafide prospect by year-end," said McQueen. "It is possible that we could have two legitimate prospects by mid-year."

The industrial park was getting additional exposure today as two members of a California delegation in the area to attend the Texas, Mexico and Asian Corrider meeting in Sweetwater today at noon, this morning were given a tour of the industrial park and Lorber Industries of Texas.

DeLille also addressed the board on the announcement this week of the Snyder brick plant's plans to reopen.

"At this time, the firm has not asked the DCOS to do anything specifically for them," said DeLille.

DeLille did say that he expected the firm to seek an upgrade of some services, such as city water service and improvements to the Brick Plant Road.

It was reported that some additional information had been received from the brick plant investors, including the acquisition of a building to be the corporate headquarters.

A former auto dealership building at 1601 Coliseum Drive will be acquired from Forrest Wemken, who will also become the brick plant superintendent.

Officials have said this property will be remodeled and receive a new brick facelift. In addition to corporate offices, the facility will be used for a brick and masonary showroom, sales yard, and trucking and shipping center.

McQueen noted that the DCOS has no incentive agreements with Snyder Brick & Tile. He said the company could possibly qualify for training and job creation funds, but there have been no requests submitted to the DCOS.

Asked about possible tax abatements, McQueen noted that the DCOS has no authority over taxes and each taxing board would have to decide that question. "Tax abatements can not be given for something already on the tax rolls."

McQueen presided at the meeting and all board members were in attendance to include David Cotton, Gary Landes, Jack Gorman Jr. and Larry Anderson.

THE SDN COLUMN

The feller on Deep Creek says, "The reason there are so many Smiths and Johnsons in the phone book is because they all have phones."

Keeping tabs on our neighbors:

Danny Andrews, in the Plainview Daily Herald, agrees that kids do say the darndest things.

A physician told about her four-year-old daughter, who on the way to pre-school, found her mother's stethoscope in the car seat. As you might expect, the little girl picked it up and began playing with it.

The mother was delighted, thinking the youngster was destined to follow in her career path as a physician.

Then the child spoke into the instrument, "Welcome to McDonald's. May I take your order?"

Children on religion:

A mother was preparing pancakes for her two sons, ages five and three.

The boys began to argue over who would get the first flapjack. Their mother seized the opportunity for a moral lesson.

She noted that if Jesus were sitting at the table, he would suggest that he let his brother have the first pancake.

The older brother turned to the younger one and said, "Bubba, you be Jesus."

A student was asked to list the Ten Commandments — in any order. His answer was "3, 6, 1, 8, 4, 5, 9, 2, 10 and 7."

And finally, a wife invited some people to dinner. At the table, she turned to their six-year-old daughter and asked if she would like to say the blessing.

The youngster said she wouldn't know what to say.

"Just say what you hear Mommy say," the wife answered.

The kid bowed her head and said, "Lord, why on earth did I invite all these people to dinner?"

Stephen Henry, in the Levelland News-Press, told about a guy who flew into the coffee shop visibly agitated.

He looked around and demanded, "I want to know who painted my dog green?"

"I did," roared a huge monster of a man. "What about it?"

The guy, now more calm, replied, "I just wanted to tell you that the first coat is dry."

Seven local FFA teams set to compete at state meet

Once again, Snyder High School's FFA chapter will compete Saturday in the state contest at Texas A&M University. Seven local FFA teams have qualified by placing in the top five at the area II competition held recently at Texas A&M University.

Among those attending the state competition is the poultry team consisting of Dana Stribling, Laurie Huddleston and Marci Irvine. The poultry team placed first in the area contest. Huddleston, Irvine and Sarah Bryant (also a member of the area team) tied for high point individual, beating out over 150 other students. Stribling was the sixth overall individual.

The meats team featuring Brandon Williamson, Morgan Miller and Bradley Bynum placed fourth in the area contest. This team not only identifies retail cuts of meat but they also do several placing classes, a test on meat safety and standards and USDA grading.

Freddy Kirschner, Missy Hicks, Jeremy Miller and Zach Rollins will represent Snyder in the state dairy foods contest. This team placed second in the area contest.

Also competing at the state competition will be the horticulture team. Members are Russell Wall, Calli Pierce, Johnna Ferris, and Damon Early.

Other teams include the farm business management team consisting of Blake Bell, Brodie Pierce and Tanner Wood; the food science and technology team featuring Jeff Hernandez, Jacob Martinez, Tommy Gordon and Shannon Chambers; and the marketing plan team which consists of Riley Tatum, Missy Hicks and Cliff Beights.

Each of these teams will be competing for the chance to advance to the National Competition in Louisville, Ky. The Snyder FFA teams are coached by David Frazier and Jason Whitney.

Arts and Crafts Festival is slated for this weekend

The ninth annual Snyder Arts and Crafts Festival will be held Saturday and Sunday in the Scurry County Coliseum.

Artists and crafters from throughout the southwest will be on hand with original art and handcrafted items.

Hours for the show are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and noon to 5 p.m. Sunday.

There is no admission charge.

Participants in the upcoming show will feature a number of items ranging from original paintings to unfinished furniture.

Also available will be decorative ceramics, clothing, "grandmother" shirts, candles, barnwood frames, over-the-sink shelves, country crafts, tole-painted furniture, painted signs, soft sculpture, jewelry, cedar chests, cabinets and framed prints.

Others will have religious carvings, beef jerky, floor lamps, floral arrangements, table lamps, coat racks, kitchen and bath accessories, broomstick skirts, dolls, hand-turned wood pens, stained glass, glass lamps, sun catchers, plant stands, jewelry boxes and quilt racks.

The Snyder chapter of the American Business Women's Club will be in charge of the concession. Funds raised during the weekend benefit scholarships for Scurry County students.

Eighteen SHS students ready for UIL contests

Eighteen Snyder High School students will compete in regional UIL events Saturday at Angelo State University. One student will compete tonight. They advanced at district by placing first through third as individuals or as a member of a first place team.

Vanessa Jones will compete in spelling and vocabulary. She was third at district.

Lisa Moore and Melinda Langham are entered in informative speaking. Moore was third and Langham placed second at district.

Others entering speech events are Suzanne Bogard, poetry interpretation; Nickolas Means and Lyndell Lee, persuasive speaking; and Katy Cooper, prose interpretation.

At district, Bogard was second; Means, first; Lee, third; and Cooper was second.

In journalism events, Haley Elkins will compete in editorial writing and Randi Haggard in feature writing. Elkins was first in district competition and Haggard was third.

In accounting, Trevor Kerr, Brett Gibson and Cara Best will compete individually and as a team in accounting. They were first in district as a team and individually Kerr was first; Gibson, second; and Best, third.

Erin Kirk who placed first at district, willl compete in computer applications.

Trey Gorman will compete in computer science, slated for 7 tonight. He earned second at district.

Nickolas Means will also compete in current issues and events. He came in second at district.

Laura Greenwood will compete in literary criticism. She finished third at district.

Senate divided on new voucher bill

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate standoff over a pilot proposal for taxpayer-funded private school tuition took a new twist Thursday, with the bill sponsor saying he would scale it back to win support and an opponent denouncing it as a raid on public funds.

The so-called voucher bill is backed by Republican Gov. George W. Bush. But opponents say they have enough votes to block the measure from being considered by the 31-member Senate.

"In trying to convince members of the Senate to vote for the bill, we tried to listen to their concerns," said Senate Education Committee Chairman Teel Bivins, R-Amarillo, bill sponsor.

"That was a concern expressed by actually a couple of the senators — that is, the size of the project."

His bill would create a five-year voucher program targeting public school students in six counties — Bexar, Dallas, El Paso, Harris, Tarrant and Travis — who have failed a state standardized test and qualify for the free- or reduced-lunch program targeting low-income students.

The Dallas Morning News first reported Thursday that a revised proposal would affect just two urban school districts that would be chosen by the education commissioner, and that it wouldn't be limited to low-income students.

Even with only two districts, Bivins said, "If they're urban school districts, I think we would have enough students to have a statistically significant experiment. ... That's just something I'd be willing to do if those members will agree to vote for the bill."

Bivins has said he wants to test the voucher idea, which is touted by supporters as a way to improve education and give parents a choice.

Opponents say vouchers would drain badly needed money from public schools.

Sen. Carlos Truan, a leading voucher foe, took an opportunity to speak against the idea of diverting public funds to private schools during Thursday debate on a separate bill by Bivins.

The separate bill — which was passed and sent to the House for consideration — would allow open-enrollment charter schools to have access to bond money to build facilities.

Charter schools are publicly funded but operate independently of local school districts, may be run by private entities and don't have to follow many state regulations.

Truan, D-Corpus Christi, and five others opposed the bond bill even though Bivins said it wouldn't extend any additional public money to charter schools but only give them the same bond-financing mechanism that private schools can use.

"I am extremely concerned about this," Truan said. "We need to be careful of what we're doing with respect to any kind of endorsement of, in this case, charter schools and in another case, taking monies to those schools in the so-called urban areas."

Truan warned lawmakers to be careful about voting for bills "however well-intended" that could "give the appearance that we're in favor of the diversion of public monies for private schools."

"I say this even though this is not the specific piece of legislation that is doing that. It is the appearance of impropriety ... that I am talking against," Truan said.

Truan said later in an interview that even if Bivins' voucher bill were scaled back, he would remain opposed to it.

"Cancer can be diagnosed as starting only in a small part of your body. Before you know it, it's going to spread. So I look at vouchers like cancer," Truan said.

The charter-school bond bill is SB1343.

The voucher bill is SB10.

Comptroller Rylander also...

Some lawmakers pushing for school violence reporting bill

AUSTIN (AP) — The massacre at a Colorado high school underscores the need to give parents detailed data on the number and type of violent crimes at their children's schools, Comptroller Carole Keeton Rylander and lawmakers say.

"I feel very strongly school districts should notify parents of the policies and procedures that are in place to protect children in school," said Ms. Rylander, a former public school teacher.

Ms. Rylander urged lawmakers to require school districts to document the number and type of violent crimes that occur on each campus.

Those records would be made available to parents annually.

About 75 percent of Texas public school districts — those participating in the Safe and Drug Free Schools programs — already report similar data to the Texas Education Agency, Ms. Rylander said. But that information is calculated districtwide, not by campus, and is not distributed to parents.

Given the information, parents could help school officials prevent incidents like Tuesday's shootings at a Littleton, Colo., high school, she said.

Her plan is included in a bill pending before the Legislature. The measure also would allow schools districts to implement violence prevention and intervention plans, including anger management

Sen. Rodney Ellis, D-Houston, is sponsor of the bill in the Senate and Rep. Dawnna Dukes, D-Austin, will be the sponsor should it reach the House. Lawmakers end their regular session on May 31.

Already approved by the Senate Education Committee, Ellis' bill is scheduled for consideration by the full Senate next week.

"The fact that school shootings are even a part of American history — that the fear is something our nation's children must live with daily — seems absurd," Ms. Dukes said.

Violence on campuses in Texas is a growing problem, Ellis said. According to Texas Education Agency statistics for the 1996-97 school year, more than 500 guns and nearly 8,000 knives and weapons were confiscated from students. The agency also reported nearly 9,000 incidents of gang-related violence.

Ms. Rylander said she didn't know if Ellis' bill could prevent someone from walking into a school and start shooting.

"If we could answer that question we wouldn't be standing here ... It assures that parents and communities around those specific schools are involved," she said.

Although the latest school shooting occurred in a high school, documenting violent incidents at all grade levels is important, Ellis and Ms. Dukes said.

"Our intent is to involve parents from the very beginning, even at the elementary school level," Ellis said.

The school violence records bill is SB1724.

Senate approves bill to aid colonias

AUSTIN (AP) — A bill meant to allow more colonia residents to have access to electricity and other basic services and to prevent more of the substandard neighborhoods from springing up along the border was approved Thursday by the Texas Senate.

The bill by Sen. Eddie Lucio Jr., D-Brownsville, goes to the House for consideration.

"It just allows a lot of deserving people to have basic services that they've been struggling to have for a long time," said Lucio.

Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi, called it "landmark legislation."

The bill would change a current law that, in its effort to prevent the sprawl of colonias, keeps some residents of existing neighborhoods from hooking up to utilities. Lucio's measure would allow water, wastewater, electric and gas service hookups in existing but unplatted colonias that have water service.

Among other items, according to Lucio's office, the bill would:

— Authorize state agency coordination on colonia initiatives, including allowing the appointment of an ombudsman in each of six border counties.

— Increase enforcement of regulations concerning colonias. Among other changes, the bill would make existing regulations apply to subdivisions of two lots or more rather than four lots or more.

— Give authority to the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission to award resource conservation or environmental protection grants.

— Allow counties within 50 miles of the Texas-Mexico border to hire a subdivision inspector and charge a fee for inspection of property.

"A lot of people right now are in dire need of services — water, wastewater, electric and also gas hookups. This bill will bring that opportunity for people to get basic services that all of us enjoy if we live inside of city limits," said Lucio, who heads the Senate Special Committee on Border Affairs.

The colonias bill is SB1421.

Bill targets speed limits

AUSTIN (AP) — Automobiles and semi-trailer trucks cruising down Texas highways could adhere to the same speed limits under legislation given tentative approval Thursday by the House.

A bill by Rep. Carl Isett, R-Lubbock, would allow heavy trucks as well as cars to travel at 70 mph during the day and 65 mph at night on numbered highways outside an urban district. Under current law, semi-trailer trucks have limits of 60 mph during the day and 55 mph at night.

Isett said that equalizing the speed limit for cars and heavy trucks would create a safer driving atmosphere, as accidents occur more often when trucks go slower.

His bill was met with opposition, however, from Rep. Fred Hill, R-Richardson.

"You all travel down the highway just as much as I do and know that even though their limit is 60 mph now, trucks go 70," Hill said, adding that setting their limit higher would only result in a speed increase in turn.

His amendment to charge drivers of heavy trucks twice as much when caught speeding as other drivers failed when Rep. Warren Chisum, R-Pampa, killed it on a procedural point.

The essence of Isett's bill was offered as an amendment to other legislation on Wednesday but was withdrawn after it incited debate from other members.

The other bill, by Rep. Pete Gallego, D-Alpine, would raise from 70 mph to 75 mph the daytime maximum speed limit for cars, motorcycles and light trucks on state and federal highways outside urban districts.

As amended, Gallego's bill would also raise the speed limit from 75 mph to 80 mph on interstate highways traveling east to west in counties with populations under 25,000. All of those changes would be subject to approval by the Texas Department of Transportation.

Gallego's bill was given final approval Thursday and now heads on to the Senate. Isett's bill now awaits final House approval.

Isett's bill is HB 676.

Gallego's bill is HB 3328.

Police ID dead children, search for mother

GEORGETOWN (AP) — Authorities investigating the slayings of two toddlers found lying in a creek earlier this week entered Thursday armed with an important break in the case: the identities of the children and their missing mother.

Capt. Linda Bunte, the lead investigator for the Williamson County Sheriff's Office, said the critical information came late Wednesday afternoon from workers at an Austin day care center.

"They recognized the sketches and called us," Ms. Bunte said.

Police identified the children as Dominick Logan Cornelius, 2, and Amanda Lee Miller, 3. Their mother is Tina Marie Cornelius, 22.

Dominick and Amanda had last stayed at the center, which she refused to name, on April 14, Ms. Bunte said.

"We have not been able to find her and speak to her in regard to her children," she said.

Ms. Cornelius' relatives told detectives they had not seen the woman or her children since a week ago — roughly four days before the toddlers were found dead along a quiet creek near Hutto, 20 miles north of Austin.

Investigators Thursday said they were not considering Ms. Cornelius a suspect, and said she might be in harm's way.

"She may be in danger, but we don't know," Bunte said. "Anything's possible."

The family had lived in the greater Austin area for about two years, but Ms. Bunte said she was uncertain where they lived before then. Her current address was unknown, and her last known address — more than a year old — was an apartment in north Austin, Ms. Bunte said.

The Associated Press has learned that Ms. Cornelius recently stayed on occasion at an apartment complex on Interstate 35 in Round Rock, just north of the capital city.

A neighbor, when shown a photograph of Ms. Cornelius, said she recognized the woman in the picture as the same person who stayed in a neighboring apartment.

"She was there sometimes with her children, a little boy and a little girl," said the woman, who asked not to be identified. She saw Ms. Cornelius last week, she said.

However, a man who answered the door at the apartment said he did not know anyone named Tina and did not recognize the woman in the photo. A police source later confirmed that they had been told Ms. Cornelius had been staying at the apartment.

Police divulged few other details about Ms. Cornelius, but the AP has also learned she worked as a dancer at a south Austin strip club called Expose.

A dancer, who requested anonymity, and several other employees of the club said that Ms. Cornelius had worked there for about three weeks. The dancer said she had not seen Ms. Cornelius in more than a week.

"She said she was going away and was going to leave her kids with some friends for the weekend," the dancer said.

Police said Ms. Cornelius might be driving a white 1990 Pontiac Grand Prix with a Texas license plate of ZPC-70M.

The children have different fathers, and investigators said they had identified them but were so far unable to locate them.

"We think they may be out of state, but we don't know," Texas Department of Public Safety spokeswoman Tela Mange said.

Meanwhile, police continue to search for acquaintances of Ms. Cornelius, Ms. Bunte said.

"We have numerous other people we want to interview to try and determine what may have happened in the last few days of their lives," Ms. Bunte said. None were considered suspects

Anyone with information regarding the whereabouts of Ms. Cornelius is asked to call the Williamson County Sheriff's Office at 512-943-1313.

Man ruled incompetent to stand trial

WASHINGTON (AP) — The man accused of slaying two Capitol Hill police officers is not competent to stand trial, a federal judge has ruled.

Russell Eugene Weston Jr. told a psychiatrist appointed by the court that he opened fire in the Capitol last summer because he was after "the ruby satellite," a device he said was kept in a Senate safe and is key to ending cannibalism, the Washington Post reported today.

According to unsealed court records cited by the Post, Weston fatally shot the two officers because he believed they were cannibals intent on keeping him from the satellite.

U.S. District Court Judge Emmet Sullivan ordered the Federal Bureau of Prisons to place Weston, 42, in a facility that offers mental health services for a "reasonable period of time, not to exceed four months."

Sullivan set a conference for Sept. 9 to evaluate Weston's treatment and its effect on his competency.

"Russell Eugene Weston Jr. presently suffers from a mental disease or defect that renders him incapable of understanding the nature and consequences of the proceedings against him," Sullivan said. The judge also said Weston is unable to aid in his own defense.

"That's absolutely correct," said Weston's attorney, A.J. Kramer. "You can't have a rational conversation with him about the case. He's totally delusional."

Weston is charged with murdering Capitol Police officers John M. Gibson and Jacob J. Chestnut in the Capitol on July 24, 1998. He has not entered a plea.

The gunman was wounded in the exchange of gunfire after running through a private entrance to a suite of offices occupied by House Republican Whip Tom DeLay of Texas. Gibson was assigned to the Sugar Land, Texas Republican.

The English day of fire

Today, the English commemorate their patron saint, St. George. He is renowned for slaying a dragon, but G.K. Chesterton seems to have had inside information on the famous day because he wrote, "St. George he was for England, And before he killed the dragon, He drank a pint of English ale, Out of an English flagon."

This deal occurred in a match between England and its westerly neighbor, Wales. How would you play in six spades after the lead of either the diamond eight, ducked to your nine, or the heart jack?

There are many routes to six spades. In this auction, South bids out his shape with four hearts, simultaneously expressing slam interest. (With no slam aspirations, he would settle for four spades.)

The diamond lead ducked to South's nine makes life easy. The declarer ruffs his queen-jack of diamonds in the dummy and loses just one spade trick.

After the more testing heart lead, it is tempting to assume spades are 3-2, when you can draw trumps and concede a club trick. Yet you must be careful. In case the spades are 4-1, win trick one with the heart king. Take two top trumps, but when the bad split is revealed, play a club to the ace, then lead the club queen for a ruffing finesse. (If East covers, you ruff; if he plays low, you discard.) With this layout, you win 12 tricks.

Perhaps you think that finessing against West for the club king is a better percentage play. Agreed, but even if the finesse wins, you still aren't home. Yet if the ruffing finesse works, you are.

Nontraditional Wedding Ring Doesn't Carry Traditional Weight

by Abigail Van Buren

© 1999 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I'm a desk clerk at a hotel in Arizona, and I get hit on a lot. I think the reason probably is that I do not wear a traditional gold wedding band. I am not into diamonds and gold. My husband and I prefer simple silver and turquoise rings.

You would not believe how many rude comments I receive about my ring. When I pointed to my ring and told one man I was married, he said in an exasperated tone, "But that's not a wedding ring!" Says who? I wanted to sock him.

A co-worker referred to my husband as "your husband, your boyfriend — whatever." I said, "Husband! We're married." He said, "Well, where's your wedding ring?"

Abby, women are the worst. Once I mention I am married, I see their eyes glance to see what kind of "rock" I have, and a mixed expression of revulsion, pity and disbelief washes over their faces. It makes me feel uncomfortable and angry. Sometimes I feel like hiding my hands to avoid this treatment. Why should I have to feel ashamed of my wedding ring?

I have considered trading in our silver and turquoise rings just to please the crowd. Abby, short of toting my wedding certificate around in my backpack, what can I do to fend off this rudeness?

MARRIED (REALLY!) IN ARIZONA

DEAR MARRIED (REALLY!): There is nothing you can do to curb the rudeness and thoughtlessness of co-workers and hotel guests, but don't let their comments get to you.

I see no reason why you should replace the ring your husband placed on your finger. Nor should you have to carry around a copy of your marriage certificate. A better way to get your message across would be to keep a small, framed wedding photo nearby to present when words fail you.

DEAR ABBY: I have read your column for years but have never written. However, I felt compelled to do so after reading the letter from Donna R. Berryman, stating: "Bookstores are just what the name implies — stores."

Abby, my husband and I own a bookstore. We do research and place special orders for our customers as well as provide many other services. We have a terrific staff consisting of teachers, math and science majors, and other college students.

Our store works hand-in-hand with a local library, and we have donated books to it as well as sent customers their way. In return, they refer people to our bookstore.

I ask that Ms. Berryman not pass judgment on bookstores. I also invite her to visit ours — we welcome the opportunity to show her how we compare with a library. I think she would be impressed.

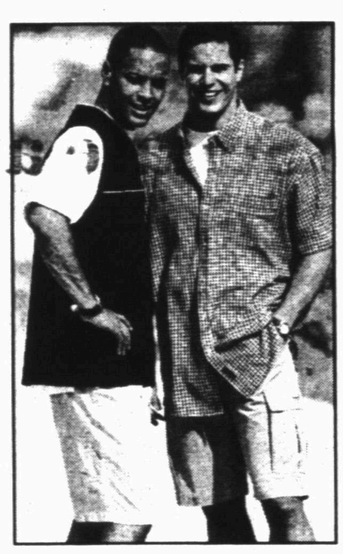

SUZANNE E. LAYFIELD, LITTLE PROFESSOR BOOK CENTER, MC KINNEY, TEXAS

DEAR SUZANNE: It sounds as though you have a wonderful bookstore. Many people find it helpful to use both bookstores and libraries for their needs. Over the last 10 years, bookstores have become increasingly diverse, dynamic and customer service-oriented. However for those who cannot afford to buy books, or need help researching what they need, the library is an invaluable resource.

Judge to decide SHS opponent

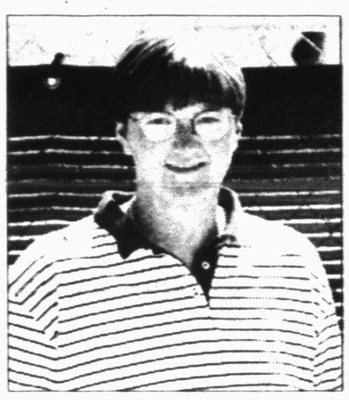

With a victory over Big Spring on April 13, the Lady Tigers clinched their fifth consecutive postseason berth.

But now, 10 days later, the SHS softball squad is still uncertain of when they'll open their playoff run, and who they'll face in the first round.

A Travis County judge issued a court injunction on behalf of Crowley High School on Thursday, putting a temporary halt to all postseason contests involving District 6-4A teams. The Lady Tigers were scheduled to face 6-4A's third-place finisher, Burleson, on Saturday in Abilene.

Crowley ISD attorneys, along with University Interscholastic league lawyers, were to have met in court at 2 p.m. today in Travis County, home of the UIL.

Lawyers for the UIL will present a case to uphold its ruling, and that of the 6-4A Executive Committee, allowing all contests to continue as scheduled.

Carmen Bohannon

CISD will present a case in favor of letting the injunction stand, forcing a 6-4A playoff to be held Saturday. Should the judge rule in favor of Crowley, the Lady Tigers' bi-district game would be postponed until Monday or Tuesday.

Snyder coach Carmen Bohannon has been preparing her troops this week for either outcome.

"We're just going on about our practices as usual. We're not letting this get in the way of our preparation for the playoffs," Bohannon said Thursday evening, before the injunction was granted.

"The girls have asked some questions about it, but pretty much they're just focused on winning the game, no matter who it's against or when it is."

The 6-4A controversy stems from a three-team tie for second place between Joshua, Burleson and Crowley. With the district minutes unclear as to how the ties should be broken, the 6-4A executive committee ruled that head-to-head competition during league play would decide the advancing teams.

When the ruling left Crowley out of the playoffs, CISD filed appeals with the committee and with the UIL. Both governing bodies upheld the committee's original decision, leading to Crowley's petition for a court injunction.

Regardless of when or who Snyder will face in the playoff's opening round, the Lady Tigers are in the midst of one of their most successful campaigns in recent years.

In their second season under Bohannon, the Lady Tigers are 22-10, counting tournament pool play games. With a year of head-coaching experience under her belt, Bohannon is enjoying her squad's success.

"This year has been more fun," the Snyder coach said. "I have more confidence in my abilities as a coach and in our team. Plus, just getting off to a good start made a big difference. The girls have practiced hard and played hard all year. They've already had a good season, and now they want to keep it going."

Tigers ready for key district game

With the District 5-4A baseball season heading down the home stretch, the outcome of each contest begins to carry more and more weight.

Tonight's 7:30 rematch between the Snyder Tigers and Big Spring Steers at Moffett Field is certainly no exception.

With a victory, the Tigers can move within one win of clinching the runner-up spot in the standings, give coach Roland Herrera his 100th career victory, and avenge an earlier loss to the Steers.

With so much riding on the line, the Tigers might have hit their stride at the right time. Snyder broke out of a slump Tuesday with a dominating performance on the road at Sweetwater, blanking the Mustangs, 7-0.

With players rounding back into form, the SHS ballclub got another piece of good news Thursday night when junior Sonny Cumbie was given his medical release.

Cumbie, in his third season on the varsity squad, has been sidelined since the season began due to a broken arm. The three-sport athlete will be available to pitch tonight, if needed.

The Tigers, 17-9 on the season and 4-3 in district play, currently share the second slot in the standings with Lake View. Snyder can clinch the No. 2 seed for the playoffs with a win tonight and a victory Tuesday at Lake View.

The Steers handed the Tigers their first league setback back on April 6, cruising to a 7-1 decision. Big Spring enters today's contest with a season mark of 4-17 and a league tally of 3-4.

Herrera, now in his fifth season as the Tigers' skipper, began the year with 82 varsity victories under his belt. Herrera could reach the century mark in career wins, with a Snyder victory tonight.

Pippen arrested for DWI

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Rockets forward Scottie Pippen has denied being drunk when police pulled him over for running a red light.

"I was not intoxicated when arrested after the game last night and I'm confident the evidence will support me in the end," Pippen said in a statement issued by his agent after his arrest early Thursday.

The officer who stopped Pippen around 1:30 a.m. said the NBA star had run a red light. A member of the department's DWI task force was called after suspecting Pippen was intoxicated, said police spokesman Fred King.

Pippen, 33, did poorly on the field sobriety test and was taken into custody, where he was videotaped and given the opportunity to take a Breathalyzer test, King said.

After he refused the Breathalyzer, Pippen was booked on suspicion of DWI and released on $500 bond just before 7 a.m. His arraignment is set for next Thursday before Harris County Court-at-Law Judge Sherman Ross.

Pippen has not formally hired a lawyer, but Houston lawyer Rusty Hardin said he is set to meet with Pippen next week.

Teammates supported Pippen during a brief practice Thursday before jetting to Los Angeles for a game with the Clippers on Friday. Pippen didn't attend the workout, but coach Rudy Tomjanovich said he would accompany the team.

"I'm hoping it won't be a distraction," Tomjanovich said. "We are trying not to make any assumptions. It would be unfair to comment when nothing has been established. I'm sort of used to unexpected things happening. You just try not to lose your composure."

Houston, currently the No. 4 seed in the Western Conference playoffs, was upset by the Dallas Mavericks 109-95 Wednesday night, keeping the Rockets from clinching a spot in the playoffs and snapping an 11-game losing streak to the Rockets.

Pippen had four points and three rebounds and was repeatedly beaten defensively in one of his worst games as a Rocket.

Rangers regroup for 6-4 win

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — When Matt Lawton's right shoulder slammed into the left side of Ivan Rodriguez's face, a rough stretch seemed about to get a lot worse for the Texas Rangers.

The Rangers had lost four of five heading into Thursday night's game at Minnesota. Their starting pitching had been dismal, and their imposing lineup mostly punchless.

Then it looked like they might lose their seven-time All-Star catcher for a significant amount of time.

But instead of a serious facial injury, Rodriguez was diagnosed with a slight concussion, and instead of another loss the Rangers regrouped for a 6-4 victory over the Twins.

Aaron Sele turned in 5 2-3 solid innings, rookie reliever Jeff Zimmerman extended his career-starting scoreless streak to 10 innings and four players supplied the power as Texas avoided a three-game losing streak.

"As long as we keep it at two all year we'll be fine," manager Johnny Oates said. "Aaron threw really well early in the ball game, the bullpen did the job and we had that one big inning (eighth), which has been the case for us a lot this year. That's the type of offense we have. We get going and we can put a crooked number up there pretty quickly."

That's the key for the Rangers: If they get going. Their 8-8 record still is good enough for first place in the AL West, and they have done it with one of the AL's worst pitching staffs and 1998 MVP Juan Gonzalez stuck in a deep slump.

Gonzalez, who set a major league record with 36 RBIs last April, hasn't driven in a run in seven games and hasn't hit a homer all season after hitting at least 42 each of the last three years.

It appeared Thursday that they might have lost Rodriguez, too. But X-rays showed no serious injury. He was diagnosed with a slight concussion and a bruised left cheekbone and is listed as day-to-day.

Oates refused to speculate on when Rodriguez might return.

"It was one of those things you hate to see happen, but that's the way to play the game of baseball," said Lawton, who also left the game with a right shoulder injury.

The Rangers responded quickly to Rodriguez's departure. Rafael Palmeiro made it 1-0 in the second inning with his third homer, and Lee Stevens hit his team-leading fifth leading off the third for a 2-0 lead.

Sele (3-1) allowed only one runner past first through five innings, then left after allowing one run in the third. Zimmerman wiggled out of a bases-loaded jam after relieving Sele with two outs in the sixth, and then the Rangers added four runs in the eighth on consecutive two-run doubles by Roberto Kelly and Rusty Greer.

The Twins rallied with three runs in the ninth, including Torii Hunter's RBI triple, but John Wetteland got the final out for his fifth save. It wasn't the kind of dominating performance the Rangers expect, but it was a win and, as far as Rodriguez was concerned, it came without a significant long-term loss.

"We've had inconsistency from everywhere," Oates said. "But the good part about it is we've got a lot of time to get it all ironed out."

The Twins wasted a strong start by Eric Milton (0-1), who allowed just three hits through seven-plus innings. Two of those were homers, and he also allowed four walks as he gave up four runs.

Losing Lawton, who is hitting .522 in his last six games, took a lot of the bite out of Minnesota's lineup.

To keep fighting Milosevic...

Western chiefs open NATO's 50th anniversary with pledge

WASHINGTON (AP) — Western leaders opened a celebration of NATO's 50th anniversary today with a pledge to press on in the alliance's month-old fight against Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic. "NATO will not allow his campaign of terror to succeed," a draft statement declared.

As 19 NATO leaders debated the Kosovo crisis, Western leaders rejected a diplomatic overture from Milosevic to end the bombing, NATO's first-ever military offensive.

The overture did not meet a key demand — removal of Milosevic's forces from the Serbian province and an armed international peacekeeping force, leaders said.

"Milosevic must know there is no place for his policies in Europe on the eve of the 21st century," NATO Secretary-General Javier Solana said in opening the summit's first session, one devoted exclusively to the Kosovo crisis.

The alliance was expected to issue a statement later today repeating demands that Milosevic end the violent campaign against ethnic Albanians in Kosovo, remove his troops and accept an international peacekeeping force.

"We hold President Milosevic responsible for the safety of all Kosovar citizens," said a draft of the statement. "NATO is determined to prevail."

Earlier, President Clinton told NATO allies, "When we fight, we fight to prevail."

"We send a clear message of unity and determination to sustain our air campaign for as long as it takes," he added.

Meeting under extraordinary security, with several blocks surrounding the ornate Reagan Building sealed off and helicopters hovering overhead, NATO leaders were also expected to consider whether to deploy ground troops to Kosovo.

No final decision was expected. Milosevic's summit-eve offer to allow an international force in Kosovo, relayed through a Russian mediator, was roundly rejected as inadequate by the alliance. French President Jacques Chirac called it "totally insufficient."

"I am not saying that it is unuseful, but it does not correspond to the demands of the international community as they have been expressed by the NATO secretary-general."

The mediator, Russian diplomat Viktor Chernomyrdin, suggested today that Milosevic might agree to an armed force in Kosovo under certain circumstances. At the Pentagon, spokesman Kenneth Bacon said: "The fact that he's prepared to allow foreign troops in does not say nearly enough. He has to be prepared to take his troops out and stop the killing."

NATO spokesman Jamie Shea dismissed the latest version of Milosevic's offer. "It seems to fall well short of what we are looking for," he said. "The next time he gets in touch, it has to be a much more substantial offer."

Accident victims are improved

Three persons injured in a two-vehicle accident Wednesday afternoon were listed in satisfactory condition today in Lubbock's Universtiy Medical Center.

Effie Witte was the driver of a 1998 Ford Escort that was in collision with a 1994 Oldsmobile 88 driven by Mozell Roggenstein shortly before 4 p.m. Wednesday some 11½ miles northeast of Snyder.

Roggenstein, 88, died instantly.

Witte, 29, and two passengers in the Escort, four-year-old Catherine Witte and 68-year-old Geneva Smith, were first transported by Snyder EMS to Cogdell Memorial Hospital.

Both Effie and Catherine Witte were later airlifted to Lubbock's University Medical Center. Smith was transported by Snyder EMS to UMC.

The crash occurred at the junction of County Roads 146, 1113 and 1105.

One of the victims of a Tuesday morning oilfield fire near Snyder remains in critical condition today in UMC's burn unit.

Larry Keen, 40, of Colorado City is being treated for burns on 36 percent of his body.

A co-worker, Rene Garcia, 42, was burned on 10 percent of his body. His condition has been upgraded from critical to serious.

Woman arrested on felony charges

An 18-year-old woman was arrested Thursday on felony charges.

Deputies took Carlie Collins of 690 CR 137 into custody at 4:45 p.m. on a warrant for felony motion to revoke probation.

Two juveniles were also taken into custody Thursday and later transferred to the RECOR facility in Sweetwater.

A call was received at 9:33 p.m. reporting that two juvenile females were fighting. Officers were dispatched and a 14-year-old female was arrested and an offense report for assault/family violence was filed.

Then at 10:55 p.m., the mother of the juveniles requested an attempt to locate on her 15-year-old daughter in reference to her not coming home. An offense report for runaway was filed.

The 15-year-old was later located and transported to the police department where she was released to the juvenile probation officer to be sent to RECOR.

In other activity, an offense report for family violence was filed at 1:18 a.m. today.

At 1:31 a.m. today, officers arrested an 18-year-old male in the 100 block of East 37th Street for public intoxication.

Senate debates how to limit Y2K suits

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate has begun debate on what many feel could be the real Year 2000 computer crisis — the economic meltdown caused by thousands of lawsuits.

"This is a very, very serious issue," said Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., chief sponsor of legislation that seeks to limit litigation resulting from the so-called Y2K computer problem. "The potential drain on the nation's economy and the world economy is staggering."

One commonly cited estimate puts the litigation from Y2K at $1 trillion, far exceeding damages sought in breast implant or asbestos lawsuits.

McCain's bill would give companies up to 90 days to fix computer problems before having to face lawsuits, and would encourage mediation, put caps on punitive damage and limit class action lawsuits.

The bill, as it came out of the Senate Commerce Committee McCain chairs, was opposed by most Democrats and the Clinton administration, which said it undermined consumer rights and gave businesses an opportunity to avoid their responsibilities.

But Sen. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., has led efforts to improve consumer protections in the bill, and negotiations continue to make it acceptable to both sides. A vote on proceeding with debate is scheduled for Monday. A similar bill awaits House action.

Sen. Ernest Hollings of South Carolina, the ranking Democrat on the Commerce Committee, said he still opposed the bill because it was backed by businesses "interested in distorting the tort liability laws of America" to their advantage.

Three consumer groups, Consumer Union, Public Citizen and U.S. Public Interest Research Group, issued a statement last week saying the McCain bill and other Y2K litigation bills "would restrict the rights that individual and small-business consumers have under current law and would undermine incentives for companies to correct Y2K defects."

But the National Association of Manufacturers, in a letter, urged Congress to pass legislation, saying a flood of contentious litigation "could have serious consequences for consumers in higher prices, workers in lost jobs and our technology pre-eminence in the world."

Irradiation of precooked meats sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group of food safety experts wants the federal government to expand its proposal to allow meat irradiation to include ready-to-eat products like hot dogs and luncheon meats.

The current Agriculture Department proposal would permit — but not require — irradiation only for refrigerated or frozen uncooked meat.

"There is a clear benefit for irradiation of ready-to-eat meat products," said Dennis Olson, director of the Utilization Center for Agricultural Products at Iowa State University, citing the numerous recalls of contaminated ready-to-eat products.

Olson is part of the Food Safety Consortium, established by Congress in 1988 at the University of Arkansas, Iowa State University and Kansas State University to investigate meat and food safety.

Several companies have been forced to recall their luncheon meats and hot dogs in recent months due to possible contamination by Listeria monocytogenes bacteria. In December, Zeeland, Mich.-based Bil Mar Foods had to recall 15 million pounds of hot dogs and lunch meats after Listeria-contaminated products from the plant were linked to 100 illnesses in 22 states, as well as 15 deaths and six miscarriages or stillbirths.

"Irradiating those products may have helped prevent illnesses associated with some of those products," Olson said.

Olson and others representing the consortium said irradiation would provide "an additional layer of safety" for precooked foods.

During irradiation, low-level doses of gamma rays or electron beam irradiation are administered to kill bacteria.

USDA is accepting public comment on the proposal before issuing its final rule.

"We can no longer ignore the food safety benefits irradiation provides," said Dr. Richard Hunter, deputy state health officer for the Florida Department of Health. "The federal government needs to be more active and dedicate more resources to educating the public about the benefits and safety of irradiation."

The National Food Processors Association is preparing to petition the federal government to expand the proposed irradiation rule to include precooked meats, said spokesman Tim Willard.

Seattle teachers walk out in dispute with Legislature

SEATTLE (AP) — Teachers from Seattle and several other school districts walked off the job to protest skimpy pay raises.

The teachers walked out Thursday and called on legislators to work out a satisfactory plan.

About 5,000 gathered at Safeco Field, a new baseball stadium under construction that was made possible after the Legislature called a special session to craft a public-private financing scheme.

"We all know what the Legislature can do when it puts its mind to it," elementary school teacher Charles Hasse, a member of the board of the National Education Association, told the gathering. "We are standing in front of monuments to what they can do."

After the rally, the teachers boarded about 80 buses for a caravan to Olympia to lobby the Legislature for a 15 percent pay raise — the amount of buying power teachers say they've lost to inflation in the past six years.

Your Birthday

Saturday, April 24, 1999

Flexibility will greatly enhance your chances for success in the year ahead, so don't be hesitant to make necessary changes in order to fulfill your ambitious objectives.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Don't allow anything to cut into the blueprint you envision and things will go smoothly today. If not, you may have to kiss your plans good-bye! Trying to patch up a broken romance? The Astro-Graph Matchmaker can help you understand what to do to make the relationship work. Mail $2.75 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 1758, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Should you get off on the wrong foot today, especially concerning your work, it might be extremely difficult to get back on track, so start off well-organized and methodical.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be extremely selective regarding the people you choose to associate with today. The wrong types could not only cost you money, but drag you into arguments. You don't want to go there.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Your ability as a leader is without question, but you must take care not to let an aggressive individual usurp this role and get you involved in an uncomfortable situation today.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A poor attitude today could make life much tougher on you than it need be, so strive to be philosophical regarding events and don't make mountains out of molehills.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Should you have to deal with a tough "cookie" who knows how to push others around to get what she or he wants, be both courageous and firm in your dealings today.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) It's difficult to make good decisions when you are pressured, so don't let anyone put you in a position today where you feel you must come up with an instant answer.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Something you failed to properly attend to before may rear its ugly head today and demand attention. Get that burr out from under your saddle and take care of it immediately.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You could lock heads today with another strong-willed individual who has also filed claim to the territory in which you're dwelling. You may have to get very aggressive.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Trouble could ensue if you and your mate can't find a way to compromise over the way a common objective should be handled. If the discussion can wait, leave it for another day.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Should you shoulder a chip today and read more into what people say than they intend, your easy-going nature might desert you, and you'll come out verbally swinging instead.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Someone other than yourself might have his or her eye on your property or possessions today, so take extra care to secure your holdings in ways that you know they're protected.

Dr. Gott

By Peter Gott, M.D.

Be honest about eating disorder

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a 22-year-old woman with bulimia. I make myself vomit after eating and have been using laxatives for almost two years. Last year, my parents became concerned because I lost weight so fast. They took me to an internist. I was too ashamed to tell the doctor what I was doing. After a series of tests, he recommended exploratory surgery during which my gallbladder was removed. I really want to stop this destructive eating pattern, but I can't. What can I do?

DEAR READER: Bulimia is a common eating disorder related to anorexia nervosa. In your comments, you have provided a clear description of the ailment, which — if not treated — will progress to serious malnutrition and other health consequences. You have also communicated the feelings of helplessness, fear and loss of control that are central to the disease.

Obviously, you will not be able to obtain help as long as a sense of shame prevents you from being honest with your doctor and your family. Many illnesses — such as bulimia, anorexia, drug and alcohol addiction, and sexually transmitted diseases — are embarrassing. But they are, after all, merely diseases that can be treated once they are diagnosed.

I urge you to adopt an attitude of scrupulous self-honesty. You seem already to be at the point where you can look at your problem objectively. At least you are willing to acknowledge you have a problem and are helplessly in its grip. You have, without knowing it, taken the first important step toward recovery. I congratulate you on the courage it took to write me.

Your next step is to seek professional help. Be candid with your physician and ask for a referral to a practitioner, preferably a psychiatrist, who is qualified to treat eating disorders. You can be helped; however, you must ask for that help. Let go of your shame; it is nonproductive and will only stunt your emotional growth.

I might add that had you been honest with your doctor in the first place, you could have avoided unnecessary surgery.

To give you related information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Help II: Substance Abuse & Mental Health." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have been taking three teaspoons of psyllium for the past year or so to lower my cholesterol. It works. It also aids my elimination. Will I become dependent on it?

DEAR READER: No, you will not. Psyllium is a form of indigestible vegetable fiber that will add bulk to your stools (thereby aiding evacuation), as well as lower your serum cholesterol level. Your use of psyllium is both healthful and appropriate.

Police think two gunmen may have had help...

Colorado governor tours high school

LITTLETON, Colo. (AP) — The governor toured Columbine High School today and emerged saying investigators were all but certain that the two gunmen had help from others. Police said security cameras may provide crucial evidence of a conspiracy.

"There are backpacks with bombs in there everywhere," Gov. Bill Owens said. "The officers in there are convinced there had to be more people involved. There's just too much stuff in there."

Time-lapse security cameras mounted throughout the school do not run continuously. and each tape goes back about a week, said sheriff's Lt. John Kiekbusch. He said authorities had not yet reviewed the tapes and did not know if the cameras were running during the shooting.

"Ideally they would show the movement and also the actual placement perhaps of some of the explosive devices, prior to the incident," Kiekbusch said. "If that's the case we have got just very important evidence."

Officials returned to campus today to continue scouring for hidden explosives a day after the discovery of a powerful bomb made from a 20-pound propane tank heightened suspicions that Eric Harris, 18, and Dylan Klebold, 17, intended to destroy the school, and could have had help in assembling their arsenal.

"They may have had confederates," said sheriff's Sgt. Jim Parr.

Also today, President Clinton announced $1.5 million in federal aid to help victims pay for funerals, medical expenses, lost wages and counseling. In Littleton, students stayed away, frightened and mourning.

A total of 15 people, including gunmen Harris and Klebold, died in Tuesday's attack. Fourteen students remained hospitalized, including eight in critical or serious condition.

Explosives expert Sid Woodcock said propane explosives of the type found are "fairly sophisticated." Just one bomb "probably would have destroyed a good part of the school," he said.

"These subjects were not only on a killing rampage," said Sheriff John Stone. "They were going to burn the school up."

The bomb was set up with an egg timer, matches and a model rocket fuse, said Lawrence Bettendorf, an Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agent. When the timer went off, it would trigger the match, which would light the fuse and ignite a gas can next to the propane tank, He said he didn't know why it didn't work.

Aside from the large bomb, searches have turned up more than 30 homemade explosives, including pipe bombs and crude hand grenades. More may still remain hidden, authorities said.

Two sawed-off shotguns, one 9mm semi-automatic rifle and one semi-automatic handgun also have been found.

The weapons did not belong to either of the gunmen's parents, and may be difficult to trace because they may have passed through many hands before the teen-agers got them, Bettendorf said.

Meanwhile, documents said court-ordered evaluations of the suspects, compiled three months ago after they were caught breaking into a van last year, called Harris "a bright young man who is likely to succeed in life" and found Klebold had "a great deal of potential."

Columbine will be closed indefinitely. Other schools in the district reopened Thursday to tight security.

At rival Chatfield High School, jittery staff and students walked past armed guards to enter as classes reconvened. At one point, two bomb squad trucks sped to the school after an unattended backpack was found. Students needed parental permission to leave.

"You can't even go to the bathroom without permission, and then they time you," lamented Holly Bernside, 15.

Sea-launched cruise missiles strike electric power plants

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sea-launched cruise missiles struck two electric power transformers in the Belgrade area overnight, marking a further escalation of NATO's air campaign, the Pentagon said today.

"It is a new class of targets," Pentagon spokesman Kenneth Bacon said at a briefing at which he announced that allied warplanes flew 434 missions Thursday despite bad weather. The electric power transformers were struck by Tomahawk cruise missiles, which use satellites for precise guidance.

Bacon said the electrical power sites also served residential and business customers but were struck because they supply power to military command and control facilities linked to the Yugoslav army.

Bacon also announced that the Pentagon has decided not to add a second aircraft carrier to the NATO naval force attacking Yugoslavia. The USS Enterprise, sailing in the Mediterranean Sea, will return to its home port at Norfolk, Va., in early May as scheduled rather than join the fight over Kosovo, he said.

The Enterprise, with 75 aircraft and 5,500 sailors aboard, had been operating in the Persian Gulf.

"She's coming home," Bacon said.

Officials had been considering diverting the Enterprise to the Adriatic Sea as part of a strengthening of U.S. and allied air power for Operation Allied Force. The Navy prevailed in its argument that the carrier and its battle group of surface ships and submarines should return on time.

The USS Theodore Roosevelt battle group is operating in the NATO campaign, along with British and French carriers. Strike aircraft from the Roosevelt attacked a column of seven Yugoslav armored personnel carriers overnight and apparently inflicted heavy damage, defense officials said, speaking anonymously.

Obituaries

Mr. Roggenstein

1910-1999

Funeral service for Mozell Roggenstein, a lifelong resident of Scurry County, is set for 2 p.m. Saturday in the 37th Street Church of Christ.

Joe Reynolds will officiate, assisted by Homer Anderson and Leonard Waggoner. Burial will follow in the Snyder Cemetery under the direction of Bell-Cypert-Seale Funeral Home.

Mr. Roggenstein, 88, died Wednesday, April 21, in a two-vehicle traffic accident near his home in the Loyd Mountain area northeast of Snyder.

Born Dec. 18, 1910 in Scurry County, he married Glena Belle Witten on Feb. 25, 1936 in the China Grove community.

Mr. Roggenstein was a retired farmer and a member of the 37th Street Church of Christ.

Survivors include his wife, Glena Belle Roggenstein of the home; and numerous nieces and nephews.

Pallbearers will be Milton Stephens, Jady Gilbert, Fred Cross, Pete Browning, Robert Scott and Tony Haley.

The family suggests memorials to the Missionary Fund at the 37th Street Church of Christ, 2500 37th Street.

Torres found guilty; jury deciding fate

A seven-woman, five-man jury found Rafael Torres guilty shortly after noon Thursday in 132nd District Court.

Jurors were still deliberating at noon today. Torres, 33 of 1401 20th Street is charges with a Nov. 1 offense of driving while intoxicated.

The deliberations on his punishment began around 9:30 this morning.

Testimony began Tuesday as Snyder Police Sgt. Brian Haggard described to the jury his arrest of Torres near the Snyder Post Office.

Defense attorney Pete Greene called only one witness, Torres' wife, before resting his case.

The case is being prosecuted by District Attorney Dana Cooley and District Judge Ernie Armstrong is presiding.

Enter the red planet

Shortly after the sun sets during the next several months, the red planet Mars becomes visible in the eastern sky.

Rollin Swanson, Western Texas College planetarium director, says an extra bonus occurs Saturday when Mars reaches a position directly opposite the sun.

"This is called 'opposition' and at that point Mars will be a mere 54 million miles from Earth.

"While the planet Venus in the western sky continues to be the brightest at night, other than the moon, Mars now has become a worthy competitor for the attention of star gazers."
