Fall temperatures haven't arrived yet

Waiting for those mild autumn temperatures? Longing for those brisk, cool days? Don't hold your breath. According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, there's still six to ten days left of mid-80 to low-90-degree temperatures. While dreaming of crunching leaves, Midlanders will have to withstand fair and warm days today and Sunday. The solar disc should moderately heat Midland in the mid-80s today, but it is expected to cool down to the mid-50s tonight — autumn dreams. Sunday's high should be a repeat of today with the high reaching the mid-80s. Westerly winds are expected to breeze through at 5-15 mph. Friday's high wasn't too far off the mark from the record high of 98-degrees set in 1951, but the overnight low fell short of the record overnight low of 42 set in 1955.

Disney's 'new dimension' opens to large crowds

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — Epcot Center, the Walt Disney empire's $800 million showplace of technological wizardry and foreign cultures, opened Friday amid pageantry and praise for a "new dimension in entertainment." "We are blessed to be among people who dream what can be and convert that dream into reality," Florida Gov. Bob Graham said of Disney's innovative blend of entertainment and education. Before the day began, Disney officials estimated an opening-day crowd of about 10,000, about the number attracted to the Magic Kingdom when it opened in 1971. But by mid-afternoon it appeared the number perhaps would be double that; vehicles crowded the huge parking lots outside the gate and thousands of people were arriving by monorail from other Disney World attractions. Hundreds of birds and multicolored balloons fluttered in the sunny skies above an 18-story silver geosphere as Graham joined Disney Chairman Card Walker and the official "first family" of visitors outside the entrance. Rooftop trumpeters heralded the occasion. A Goodyear blimp hovered above, and a continuous stream of cars on an eight-mile-long monorail rolled silently overhead, bringing crowds from the Magic Kingdom at Disney World, some three miles away. "Epcot is a showplace dedicated to entertainment with a purpose," said Walker, who started with the company 45 years ago along with its namesake founder. "We want to entertain, inform and inspire all who come here." Walker said Epcot was the culmination of 25 million hours of effort by thousands of people "propelled by the power and force of an idea of one man — Walt Disney." Disney died in 1966. Three years in the making, the giant exposition blends fun, fiction and fantasy with education in two theme areas, world showcase and future world. Fifteen major pavilions feature ride-through adventure shows and visual attractions from nine countries and eight U.S. corporations.

Child dies after being shot in the head by jobless father

NAPLES, Texas (AP) — A man despondent because he lost his job shot each of his four children in the head Friday night, killing a 5-year-old boy and critically wounding three other children, police said. He then killed himself. "The mother had been there. There had been an argument and she had left and went to her parents' house," said Police Chief Loyd Martin. "He then shot the kids." Morris Sheriff Joe Skipper said the dead man left a note, but did not know the contents. "I understand he was not employed," Skipper said. Geary Henderson, 26, was pronounced dead at the scene by Peace Justice D.W. Betts. The mother returned to the house after the shooting and took one of the children to a Naples hospital, only a half-mile from the home. "She took one of the kids herself to the hospital with a neighbor — the neighbor drove," he said. Two children were taken by ambulance and one by police car, he said. The man was armed with two pistols, Martin said. Frederick Abraham, 46, died en route to a Texarkana hospital, Martin said.

Secretary cancels university talk

WASHINGTON (AP) — Education Secretary T.H. Bell abruptly canceled a speech at Bob Jones University at the request of the White House because of the sensitivity of the dispute over tax exemptions for schools that discriminate against blacks, a Bell aide says. The White House had known for months about Bell's plan to speak at the fundamentalist, predominantly white campus in Greenville, S.C. But it waited until Thursday, the eve of his scheduled appearance, to ask Bell not to go. Bell agreed to call off the trip in a conversation with Craig Fuller, the secretary of the Cabinet and the fifth-highest ranking official in the White House. Fuller said Friday that although Bell's department did not notify the White House long ago about the speech plans, "I didn't learn about it until Wednesday."

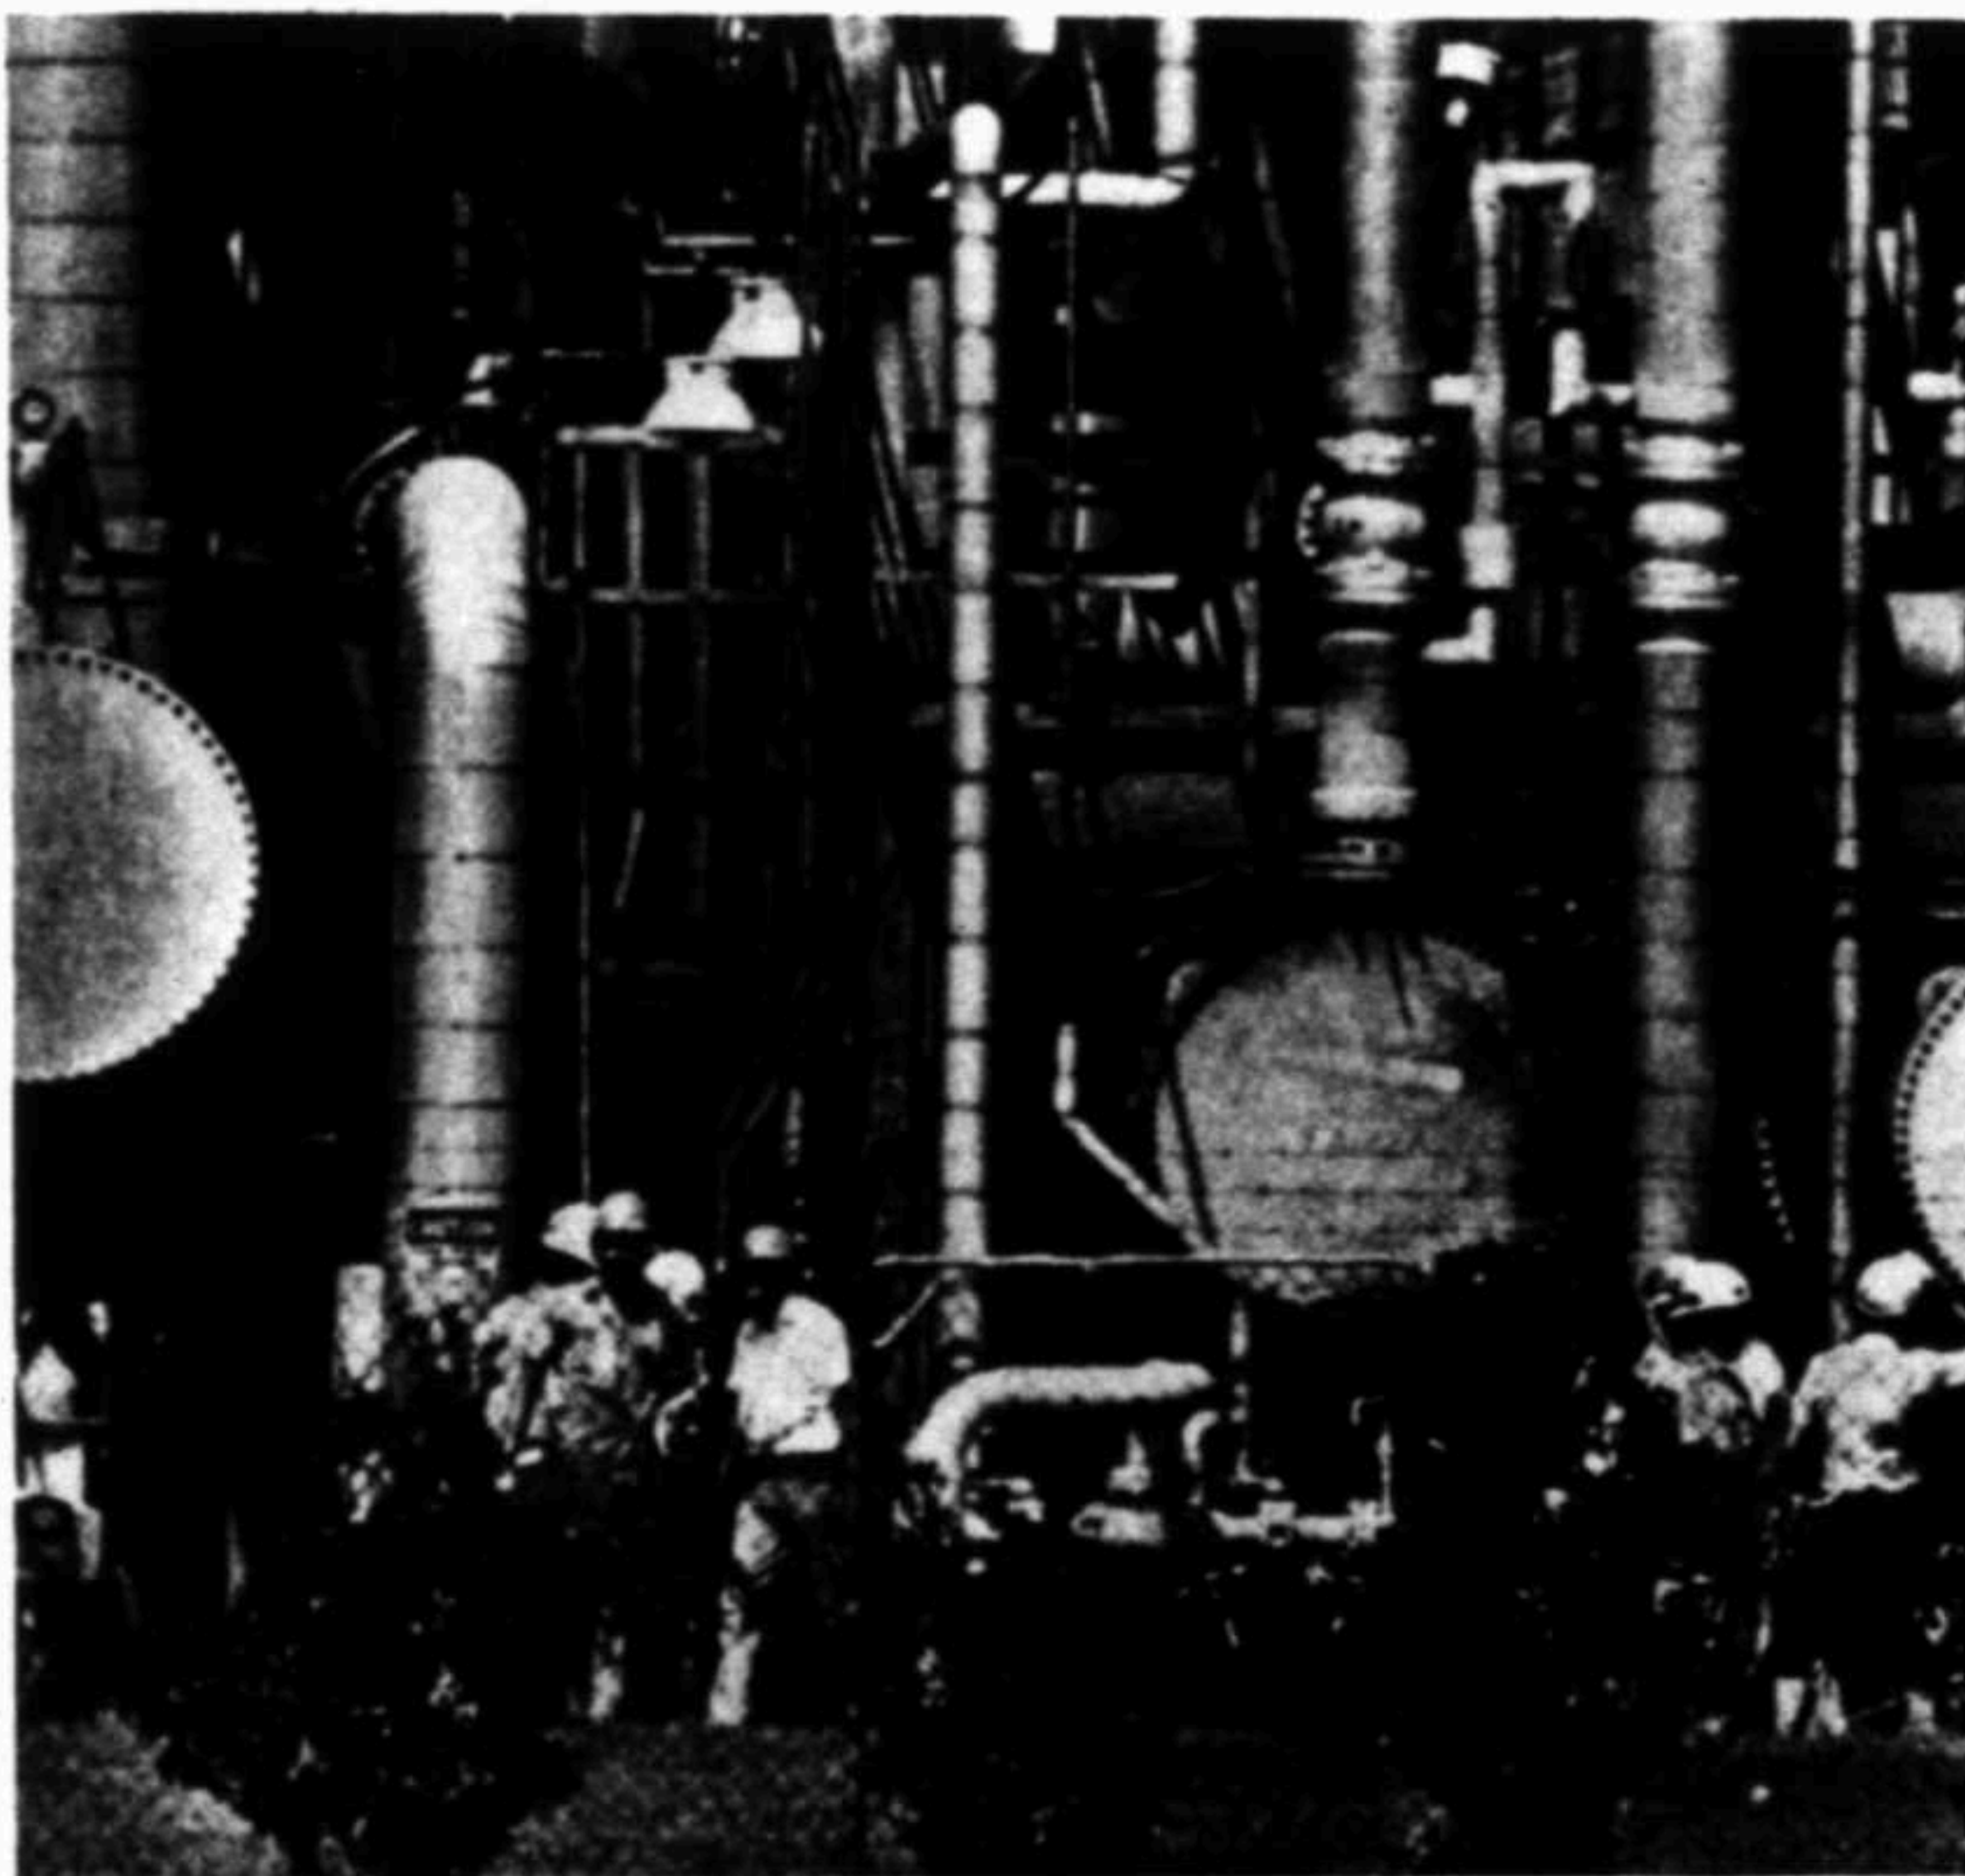

"I TALKED TO TED to find out what he was doing..." Fuller said. "We were concerned because of the pending (Supreme Court) case. The Justice Department also had some concerns." Fuller said he and Bell agreed it was best to cancel the speech. Fuller said he never talked about the matter with President Reagan, but "I raised it with (counsel Edwin) Meese and he concurred." A dejected Bob Jones III, the college president, said Thursday in an interview in Greenville, "It just leaves us having to cancel a very important occasion that we had looked forward to so greatly." Jones criticized President Reagan's handling of the tax exemption case, now pending before the Supreme Court, but had only kind words for Bell, whom he called "a fair man and a man of integrity." The 6,000 students and faculty at the fundamentalist campus in Greenville, S.C., had planned a special convocation to hear Bell Friday night.

JONES SAID of the cancellation, "I hope (it) will not hurt Mr. Bell because I think a lot of him and I would not want him to be embarrassed in any way because of us." Bell's special assistant, Sharon Schonhaut, said Bell got the call from the White House Thursday morning. She said the press of budgetary and congressional business was also a factor in Bell's not going. "There was a White House request that the secretary not go because of the pending Supreme Court case..." she said. "It's a very sensitive item. He should not be appearing on campus right now." The Supreme Court will hear oral arguments Oct. 12 in the fight by Bob Jones University and Goldsboro, N.C. Christian Schools to regain tax exempt status that they lost under a 1970 Internal Revenue Service policy banning exemptions for schools with racially discriminatory policies. Bob Jones admitted married black students in 1971 and unmarried blacks in 1976, but it bans interracial dating and marriage. Goldsboro, a 510-student school affiliated with the independent Second Baptist Church in Goldsboro, does not admit blacks. Both schools cite religious reasons for the policies. Last Jan. 8, President Reagan ignited a firestorm of criticism in Congress when he announced that he was revoking the IRS ban and restoring tax exemptions to Bob Jones and Goldsboro.

WITHIN DAYS, administration officials were saying they had goofed and merely were trying to rein in an agency — the IRS — that had overstepped its bounds. Reagan sent Congress a proposed bill that would ban exemptions for schools that discriminated by race, but key lawmakers in both parties said it was unnecessary. The administration also reversed its legal strategy. It had asked the Supreme Court on Jan. 8 to throw out the court case pitting Bob Jones and Goldsboro against the IRS, but a month later it urged the justices to decide it. The court, in an unusual move, appointed a special advocate, former Transportation Secretary William T. Coleman Jr., to defend the IRS policy. Reagan himself spoke at Bob Jones University as a presidential candidate in 1980. The college president said Thursday, "The Reagan administration has made a lot of problems for us in this case." Jones said he invited Bell a year ago to make the speech. It has been on Bell's official schedule, which is routinely sent to the White House for clearance, for months.

Draft registrees not notifying officials of address changes

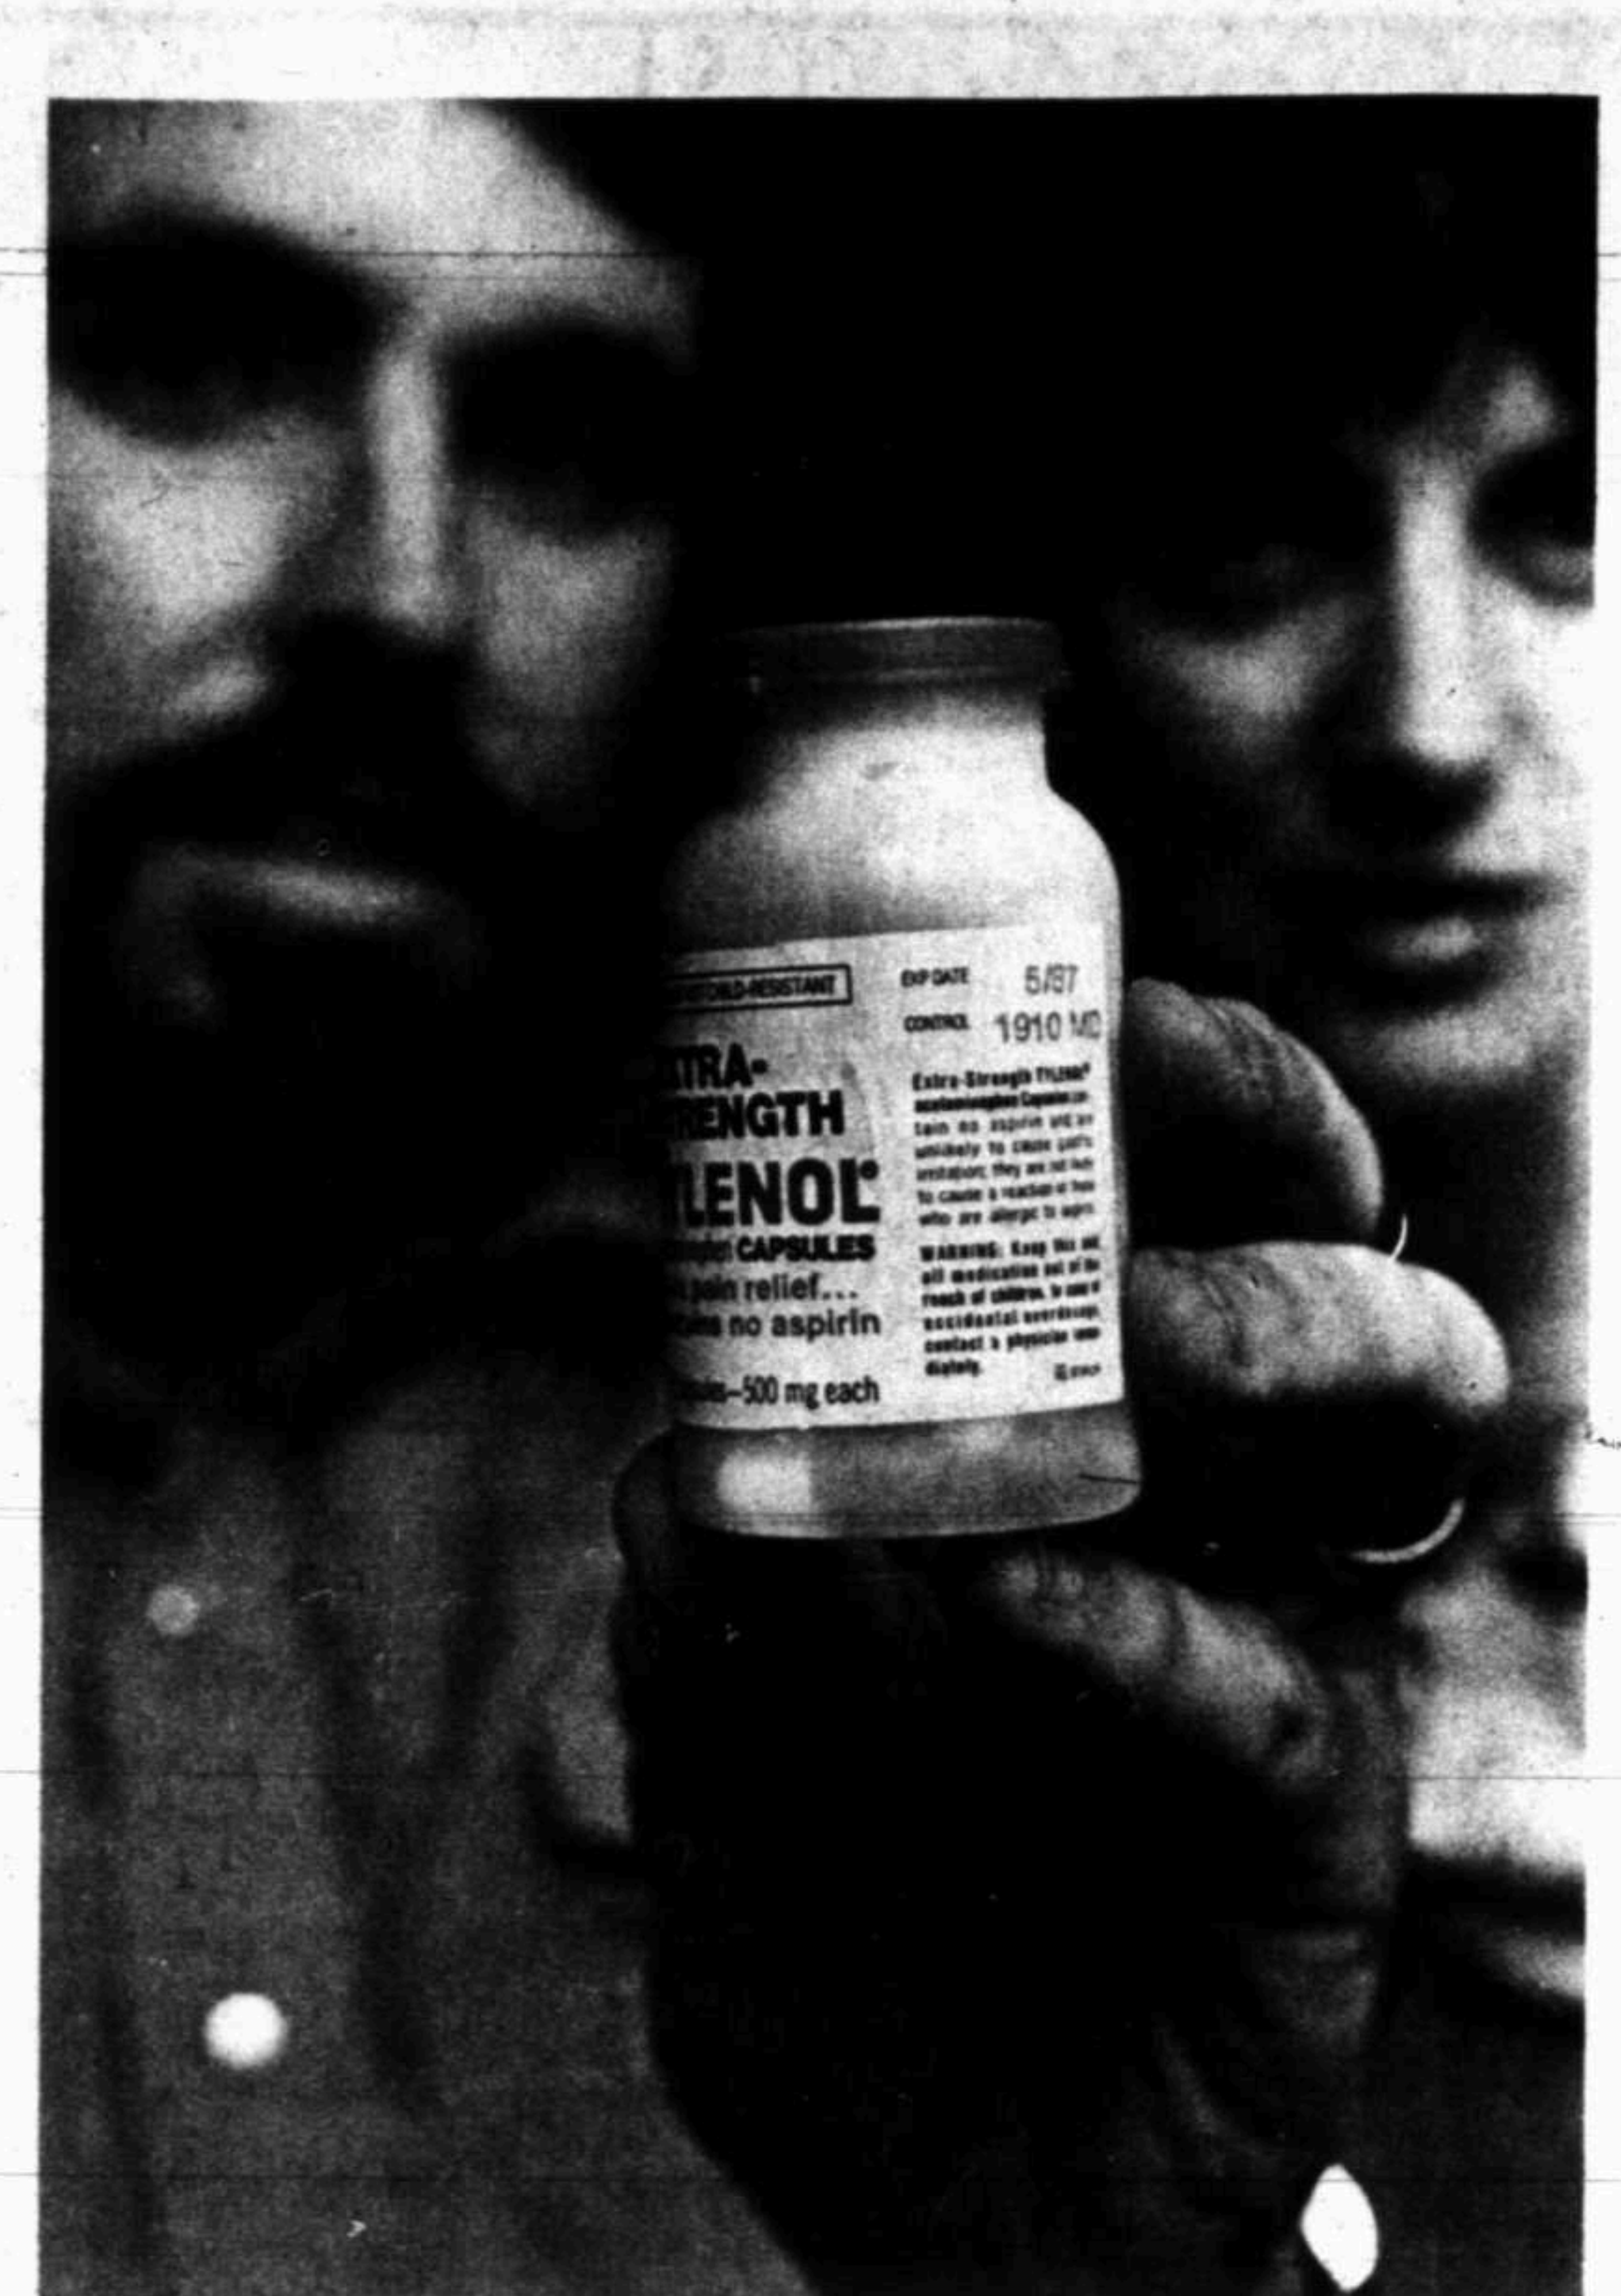

WASHINGTON (AP) — About 85 percent of the young men who moved after registering for the draft in 1980 failed to report their new addresses to the Selective Service System, the General Accounting Office says in a new report. "As a result," the congressional investigative agency said, "address information for between one-fifth and two-fifths of the registrants in the prime induction group — those to be called first in the event of an emergency — could be outdated." "At the end of eight years (the end of draft eligibility), almost three-fourths of the addresses could be outdated." In its report to Selective Service Director Thomas K. Turnage made available Friday, the GAO said many registrants apparently were not aware of their responsibility to report address changes and may be confused about the distinction between a current mailing address and a permanent address. A better explanation of the address requirement would do much to increase compliance, the report said. Should that not work, it might help to change the age of registration from 18, the current requirement, to 20, because any draft would be more likely to take 20-year-olds first. Failure to notify Selective Service of an address change is punishable by up to five years' imprisonment and a $10,000 fine. No one has been charged with this violation.

Bomb search continues; Little risk seen

BAYTOWN, Texas (AP) — Authorities searched a Gulf Oil Chemicals Co. petrochemical plant for more bombs Friday, a day after experts found five bombs believed planted by an extortionist and detonated one harmlessly. "We see a very minimal risk of explosion at this point," Gulf spokesman O. Keith Owen III said. He added some volatile products had been burned off. "All of this makes the plant as safe as possible," he said. Another spokesman, Kirk Vogeley, said a few workers are still on duty, maintaining the plant. The plant normally has about 1,100 workers. Vogeley said the shutdown "is designed to remove the volume of potentially volatile material from the facility." Gulf spokesman Barry Smyth said all Gulf's non-manufacturing offices around the country would be closed over the weekend "as a precautionary measure." He said he didn't know how many offices were involved but that mostly janitorial and maintenance workers would be affected. Gulf and FBI officials refused to comment on news reports that a letter had said 10 bombs would be set off unless $15 million was paid by about noon Sunday. A federal investigator's source in Washington, who declined to be identified, said the demand appeared to be aimed solely for profit. "Initially we thought it might be macist at Medical Center, said "there have been two or three calls from people with the same lot numbers as the cyanide Tylenol." "We had one call from someone in Big Spring with the same number as the recall," he said. Farren added the hospital has been in close contact with McNeil Consumer Products Co. in Round Rock where one of the lot numbers — 1910MD — was manufactured. A spokesperson from McNeil Products Co. in Pennsylvania said any person possessing Extra-Strength Tylenol with lot numbers 1910MD or MC2880 should mail it to McNeil Products Co., Campbell Road, Fort Washington, Pa., 19034. As of Friday afternoon, the McNeil spokesperson said there had not been any reports of cyanide-tainted capsules in any of the bottles found in Texas bearing the same lot numbers. But, reports from the Food and Drug Administration Friday night stated that FDA chemists were checking those bottles suspected and results would be made public today. MMH Public Relations Director Arlene Strickland said Friday Midland's hospital also had received phone calls from residents reporting bottles with the 1910MD lot number. "We have had some calls and some lot numbers have turned up in Midland," she said, adding that MMH only stocks unit doses, individually wrapped tablets, and they are not among the recall product. A Parkview Hospital pharmacist said none of hospital's Tylenol was pulled because capsules bearing the same lot number were not found. Nevertheless, some local store managers and druggists have removed all Tylenol products until "this mess is cleared up." "We've pulled all Tylenol products off our shelves to assure safety of the consumer," said Keith John, district manager of the 7-Eleven convenience stores. "We instructed our people to pull the product off the shelves until we are notified by the Tylenol manufacturer." Joseph R. Crook, manager of Walgreen's pharmacy, said "we removed all Tylenol products from the shelf." Rochelle Traylor, Walgreen's employee, said she began clearing her shelves — drugs and remedies — "as soon as we heard about it." A representative from Albertsons said his people began clearing the shelves of the published lot numbers on Thursday and "will hold them until the company contacts us."

Wild well partly under control

SCOTT, La. (AP) — Troubleshooters diverted natural gas spewing from a wild well Friday and set it on fire so it could not pose the threat of deadly explosions while they try to cap the hole. The well, which forced the evacuation of 360 residents of nearby homes when it blew wild Tuesday, was thus brought under partial control. There was no definite word on when the people would return home. Lt. Mike Fincher of the Lafayette Parish sheriff's office, said he expected the evacuation to be maintained for about 12 hours after the well is capped, as a safety precaution. Jets of fire roared 30 feet high above six 25-foot-tall flare "stacks" at the well. Salt water also blowing up the hole was taken out of the gas before it hit the stacks. "This is the best news we have had in the last four days," said Wayne Melancon, drilling manager for May Petroleum Inc. of Dallas, owner of the well. Melancon said the stacks would be blowing fire for some time but it would not pose any danger to people in the area. It was estimated the well was blowing about 20 million cubic feet of gas a day. A slick film of light oil and other petroleum products covered everything for a mile around the rural site, about a mile out of Scott, a town of 1,800 people.

Conservatism much of Kohl's makeup

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Helmut Kohl, West Germany's new leader, is a staunch conservative politician who rose from local and state office to become chancellor.

Parliament voted 256-235 Friday to oust Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, the Social Democrat who had governed for 8½ years. The vote gave Kohl, head of the Christian Democratic Union, a parliamentary majority and he was sworn in as the nation's new leader several hours later.

"The first and most important thing is the strength of our country, to stimulate the economy and fight unemployment," Kohl told reporters after the vote in Parliament and before his inauguration.

"THIS WAS a great day in the history of Parliament," Kohl said. "If living democracy presents itself as it did today, it is an advertisement for freedom."

He also said he plans to call elections March 6, as he previously announced, saying, "I am quite certain that I do not have to fear the judgment of the voters."

His friends say the foremost qualities of the 52-year-old Kohl are honesty and reliability. Detractors say he is mediocre and unexciting.

"My biggest asset," he said recently, "is that people would buy a used car from me without hesitating. That may sound old-fashioned and unprogressive. But it's all the same to me."

Kohl has kept in close touch with leaders of other conservative parties in Europe, such as British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, and in 1981 met President Reagan at the White House. But critics say he lacks a thorough knowledge of international affairs. Kohl says he would gather top aides around him to help "implement good policies with courage, decisiveness and moral authority."

The strong-willed Helmut Schmidt said of Kohl: "I have nothing against generalists." But he added: "Anyone who refuses to work out details cannot make decisions and choose a proper course."

KOHL JOINED the Christian Democratic Union in 1947 at the age of 17, while he was a student, and became a member of the party's executive committee in his native Rhineland-Palatinate state in Germany's wine-growing region.

He was too young to serve in the military during World War II, and was above the draft age when the post-war German army was formed in 1955.

Kohl received a doctorate in political science in 1958, and went to work for the giant chemical firm BASF in his native Ludwigshafen.

In 1959, he was elected to the state parliament, became floor leader for the party at the age of 33 and state party chairman at 35.

At the age of 37, in 1969, Kohl became state governor, a post he held until 1976. In 1973, he was elected chairman of the Christian Democrats, and in December 1976 he became opposition floor leader after giving up the governorship.

In the 1976 national elections, the conservatives made an impressive showing, with 48.6 percent of the vote, but Schmidt was chosen chancellor in a coalition with the small Free Democratic Party.

KOHL EPITOMIZES of the Christian Democrats, a conservative group that stands for united action of the country's Protestants and Roman Catholics to rebuild West Germany on a Christian basis. About 49 percent of the population is Protestant while about 45 percent is Roman Catholic.

Kohl is a Catholic, married and the father of two sons. Throughout his career he has stressed family values and patriotism.

In 1976, he urged people to vote for his party "out of love for Germany" and to opt for "freedom instead of socialism" offered by Schmidt's Social Democrats.

He also expressed concern about the possibility of communists getting into the governments of France and Italy.

"NATO can only make sense and be carried in the hearts of the people if it remains an alliance of free people," he said. "I think the spirit of the communists is incompatible with these ideals and the values of the free world."

Helmut Kohl is sworn in as the new West German chancellor in Bonn's parliament Friday afternoon following Friday's vote ousting former Chancellor Helmut Schmidt. Parliament President Richard Stuecklen has his back to the camera.

He told Reagan during the White House meeting that the United States could count on the Christian Democrats and West Germany. The two spoke through an interpreter. Kohl — unlike Schmidt — does not speak English.

Last year, when Reagan visited Bonn, Kohl helped organize a pro-American demonstration in Bonn.

In keeping with the German tradition began by Otto von Bismarck, Kohl believes in a welfare state, but argues that the Social Democrats have overdone it, and are running the state coffers dry.

Soviets may fear increased German conservatism

MOSCOW (AP) — Worried Soviet leaders fear West Germany's new conservative government will become a more rigid supporter of the Reagan administration's policies, diplomatic sources said Friday.

Western informants with access to top Soviet thinking said the Kremlin is particularly jittery about how Chancellor Helmut Kohl, who ousted Helmut Schmidt on Friday, will deal with the controversy over the Siberian gas pipeline.

The Soviets fear Kohl's government may be more responsive than Schmidt's was to U.S. pressure to stop West German participation in the project, the sources said.

Tass, the official Soviet news agency, reported the election of Kohl, the leader of the conservative Christian Democratic Party, without comment.

But one senior Western analyst said the Soviets "are extremely nervous about the change. They have become very comfortable about the Social Democrats. They see them as the people who opened the door to Moscow. But they also were concerned when Brandt left."

Willy Brandt, the first chancellor from the slightly leftist Social Democratic Party, forged the policy of detente with the Soviet bloc. Schmidt, his successor, carried it on despite the Reagan administration's campaign to penalize Moscow because of its military intervention in Afghanistan and the imposition of martial law in Poland.

The Soviets are also worried that Schmidt's departure could doom their hopes of preventing deployment of new U.S. medium-range nuclear missiles in Western Europe.

Luxembourg authorities hold crashed plane's pilot, copilot

LUXEMBOURG (AP) — Luxembourg authorities arrested the pilot and copilot of a crashed Soviet airliner Friday for refusing to answer questions about the accident in which six people died, a government spokesman announced.

He said Pierre Werner, prime minister of this tiny duchy, told a Cabinet meeting the two Aeroflot crewmen were under police custody because, "they don't want to make a statement. They don't want to say one word."

The spokesman, who asked not to be identified, said the pilot, who was unhurt in the crash Wednesday, was placed in a cell at the central police station late Thursday night. The slightly injured co-pilot was put under guard at a hospital.

"The magistrate is totally in charge," said the spokesman who requested anonymity. "It's like an automobile crash. The driver of the car has to give the facts to the prosecutor. They (the pilots) just refuse."

Investigator Jean-Mathias Goerens told The Associated Press in a brief telephone conversation, "I am a Luxembourg authority. I am trying to interrogate the pilot."

Advertising's legal games continue

NEW YORK (AP) — Budget Rent-A-Car did it to Hertz. Cuisinart did it to Robot-Coupe. And now, McDonald's and Wendy's are doing it to Burger King: taking the competition to court over advertisements they claim are misleading.

The $20 million worth of Burger King ads which hit America's TV screens this week claim that a customer survey concludes people prefer the taste of Burger King burgers to those of Wendy's and McDonald's.

McDonald's suit, which seeks an injunction to block the ads, was filed before the first commercial had aired. On Wednesday, Wendy's International Inc. followed with a $25 million lawsuit seeking damages and corrective advertising.

COMPANIES HAVE been questioning competitors' claims for years. Until recently, most disputes were settled behind closed doors, often by the National Advertising Division of the Better Business Bureau, an ad industry watchdog created in 1971.

"Up until a few years ago, most competitors came to us, the Federal Trade Commission, the state attorney general, or the networks," says NAD Director Ronald Smithies. "But since the late 1970s, going to court has become the thing to do."

Burger King has promised to turn over videotapes of its controversial commercials to McDonald's attorneys without delay for litigation purposes. The next hearing on the case is not scheduled until November, by which time the commercials will have been extensively televised.

Last spring, Budget Rent-A-Car filed a $10 million suit against Hertz, accusing the company of falsely claiming it had lowered its rates to meet Budget's.

Last year, Cuisinart Inc., the Connecticut company that introduced food processors to America, sued rival Robot-Coupe, claiming false advertising and misappropriation of Cuisinart's reputation. It succeeded in blocking some of Robot-Coupe's ads.

ALSO IN 1981, Twinoaks Products, makers of a toilet bowl cleaner, went to court to stop Vanish commercials that claimed long-lasting in-tank toilet bowl cleaners such as Twinoaks' 120 Automatic Bowl Cleaner are harmful to plumbing while Vanish is not.

"Competitors get roused when their product gets named in an ad in which the world gets told that the other guy's product is better than theirs," Smithies says.

So-called "competitive challenges," in which one product is compared to another by name, became popular during the mid-1970s, when the networks accepted them for the first time, Smithies says.

He says the ads have resulted in an increase in complaints by companies that are taking the competition to court in record numbers.

"The largest single category of complaints made to the NAD come from competitive challenges — more than 40 percent of the decisions published this year," he said.

CONSUMERS OFTEN raise questions about ads too, and the FTC has forced companies to yank or modify ads that make false claims.

In 1978, the FTC ordered Listerine to say in $10.2 million worth of ads that "Listerine will not help prevent colds or sore throats or lessen their severity." The order followed a half-century of ads by Warner Lambert Co. touting Listerine as a cold remedy.

Last year, the FTC ruled that Anacin ads could no longer claim the product "contains the pain reliever most recommended by doctors" — unless it also revealed that the pain reliever is aspirin.

The NAD, which publishes about 150 decisions a year, also initiates its own investigations, and has settled disputes involving everything from bug sprays to lemonade mixes to pizza.

In one recent case, resolved by the NAD in February, General Foods, makers of Country Time Lemonade Flavor Drink Mix, battled Coca-Cola, which makes Minute Maid Lemonade Crystals.

FIRST, Coca-Cola objected to a Country Time ad featured a grandfatherly figure standing in a lemon grove, pointing to the outer peel of a lemon. "The richest flavor in the lemon is right here," he says. "That's what makes Country Time taste like good old-fashioned lemonade."

Coca-Cola pointed out that while Country Time does contain lemon oil, derived from lemon peel, it contains no lemon juice.

NAD found in favor of Country Time.

Country Time then took issue with a Minute Maid ad in which consumers are told that Lemonade Crystals contain the juice of 20 lemons, while Country Time contains the juice of no lemons.

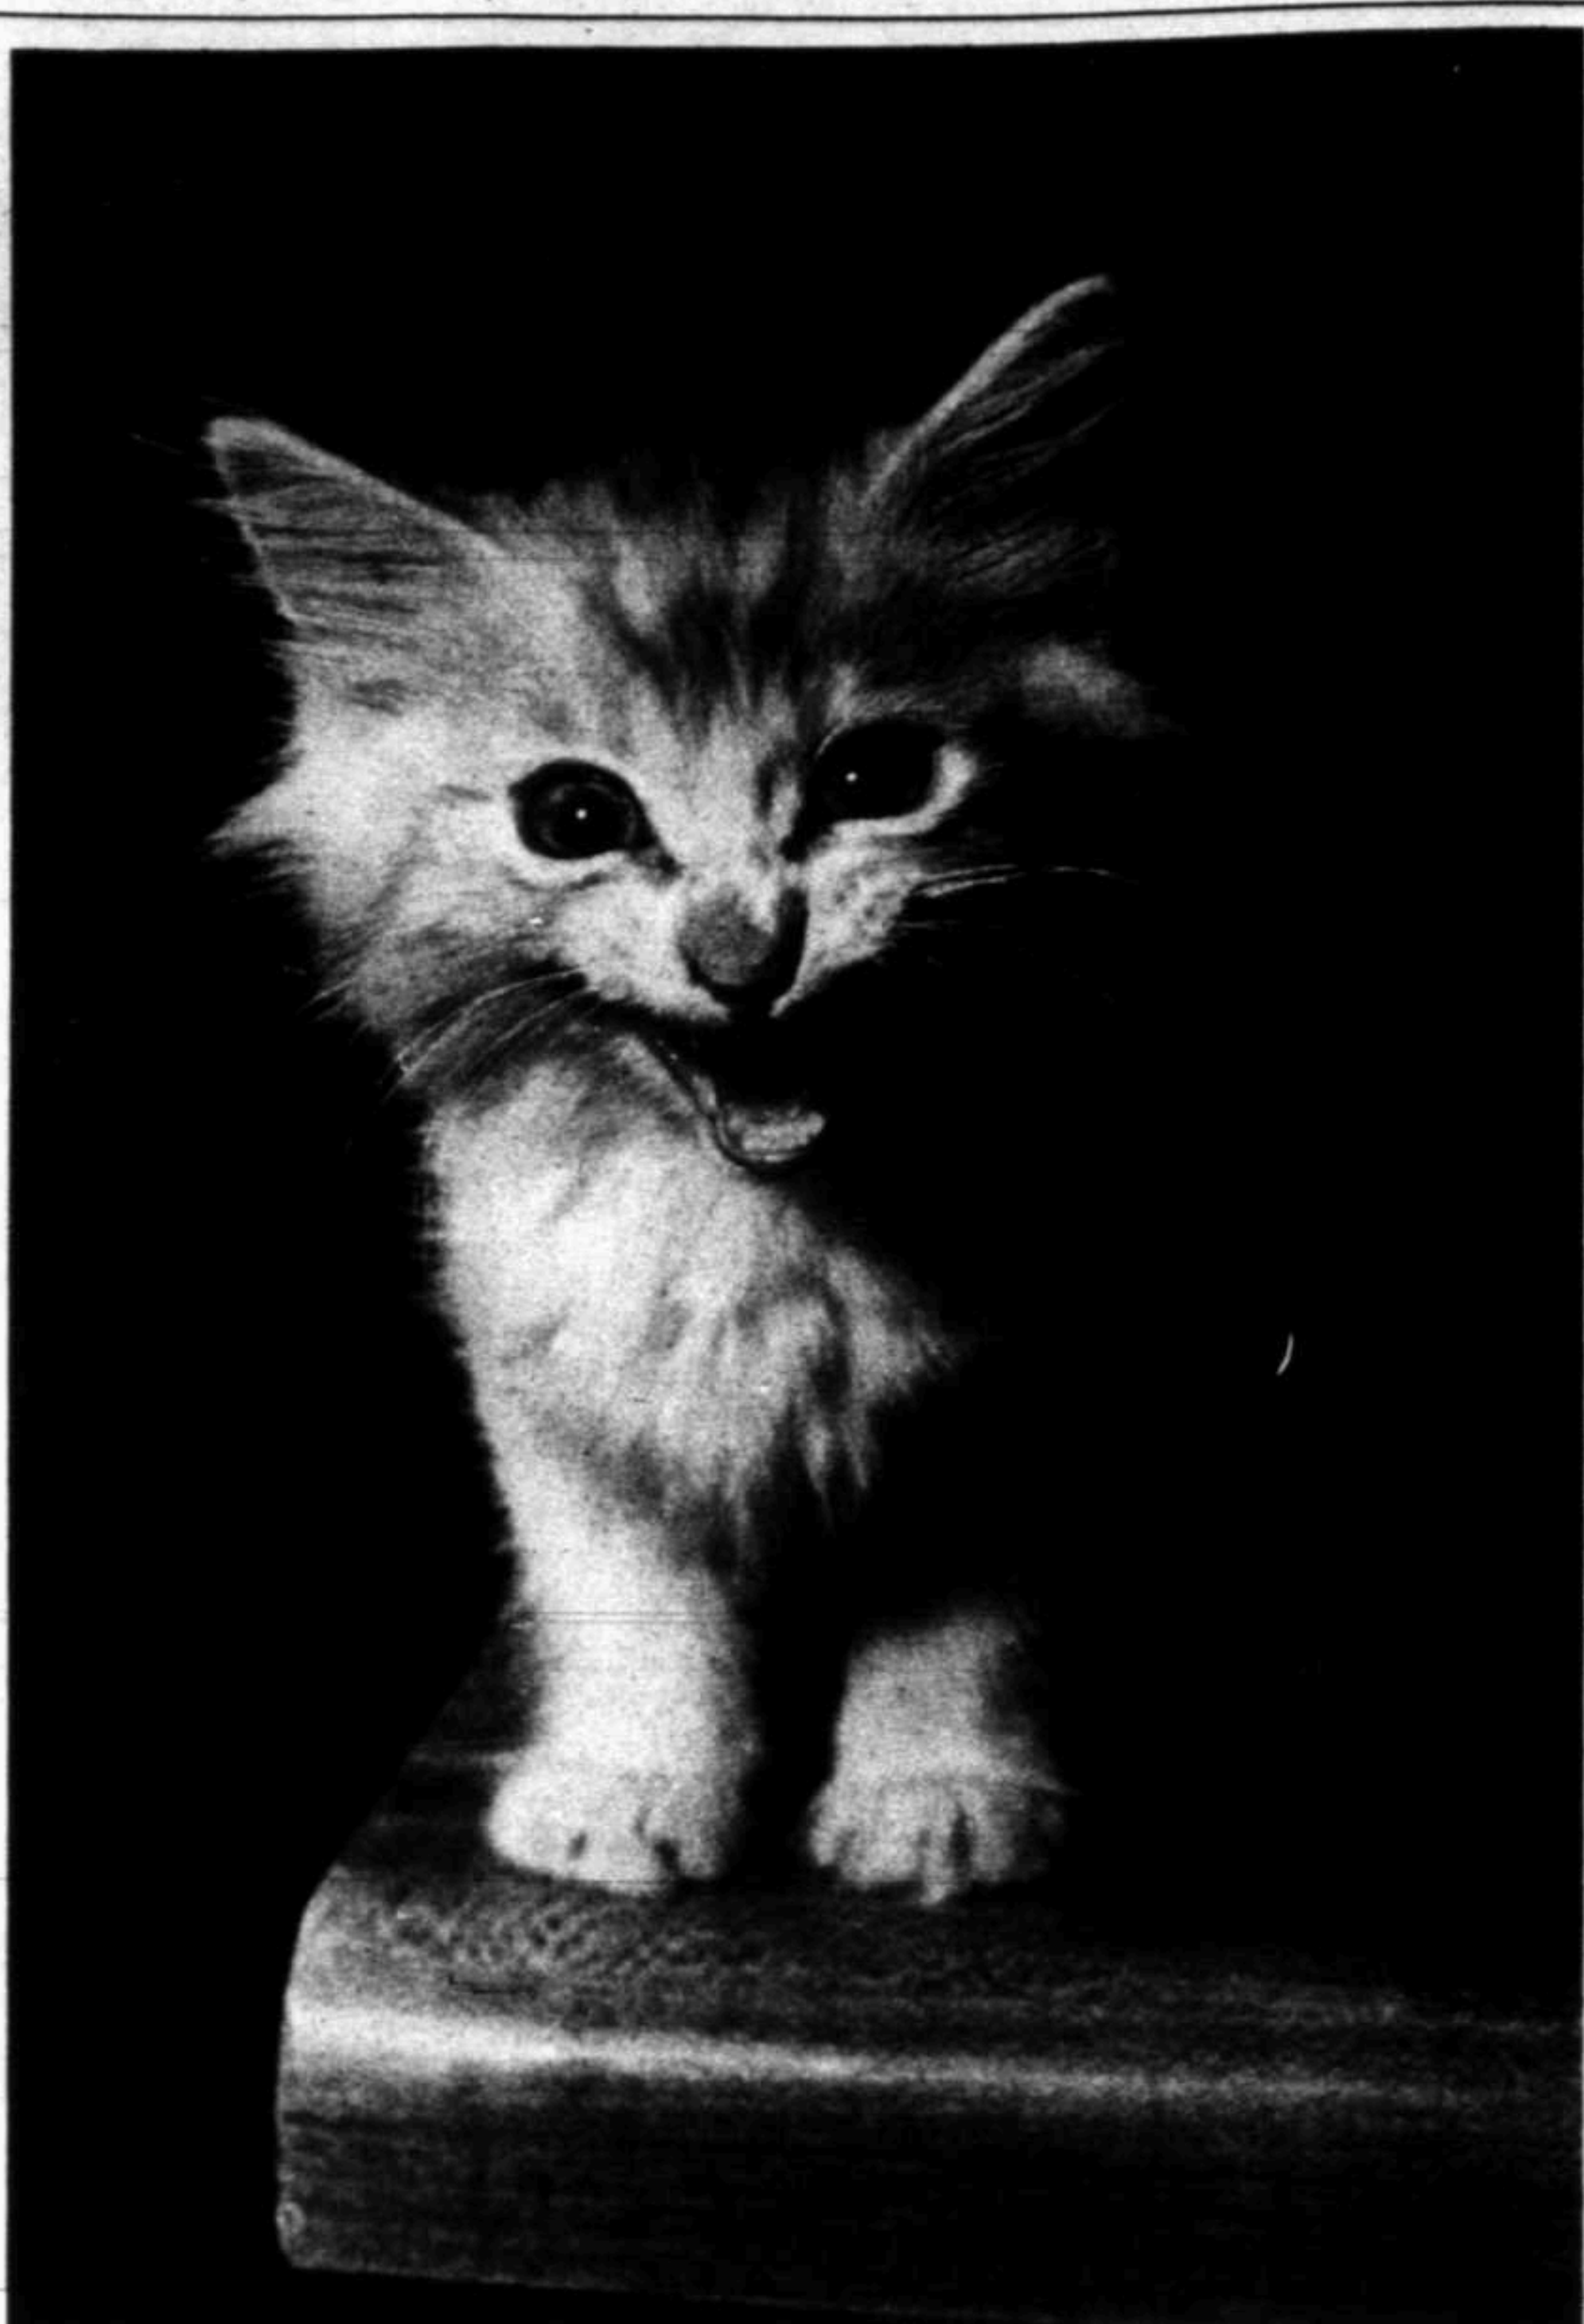

Minute Maid discontinued the ad. Next came a Country Time ad that ran in the newspapers: "COLD FACT," it said. "Country Time Frozen Drink Concentrate tastes better than Minute Maid."

NAD ASKED for proof. Country Time provided results of a blind taste-test in five cities showing its drink mix was preferred by 55 percent of the drinkers.

By then the ad had run its course. "The majority of our cases are resolved within six months," says Smithies, who says slight changes in wording often are all that's required.

Other ads must be discontinued, such as a Godfather's Pizza commercial that stated: "Now I'm gonna lift a slice from a five-pound Godfather's Pizza. Five pounds...You're looking at five pounds of paradise."

The problem, according to the NAD, was that consumers actually were looking at only 4.22 pounds of paradise.

The shelter, at 1411 Orchard Lane, also has three- to six-month-old and adult cats that can be adopted. Dogs are also available at 1601 Orchard Lane. All animals can be adopted for a fee from noon to 2 p.m. Saturdays and 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. weekdays.

'Playgirl' decides to let older man take it all off

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — A 50-year-old grandfather will bare all as the centerfold in the November issue of "Playgirl," reflecting what the magazine calls a trend among young women toward older men.

Bill Tunberg, an artist used to directing female models, said Thursday he posed because he wanted to see what it would be like on the other side of the camera.

And, he said, he wanted to get "some additional exposure — pardon the pun — as an artist."

Tunberg's full frontal nude photo represents the first over-30 centerfold by the magazine in its nine years.

"Our readers have been asking to see older men for the last two or three years, and we've been looking for a long time to find the right man," said executive editor Dianne Grosskopf. "Now we have him."

Tunberg, who has a 32-year-old live-in girlfriend, a 24-year-old daughter and a 6-year-old granddaughter, keeps his 6-foot-2-inch frame at a steady 174 pounds by exercise and a strict diet that includes raw vegetables, fish and fiber and no red meat or sugar.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Singer Helen Reddy has been granted a preliminary divorce decree from her husband and former manager Jeff Wald, but the couple still must settle disagreements on property and custody of their son, her attorney says.

Helen Reddy

Superior Court Judge Billy Mills granted the order, known formally as an interlocutory divorce decree, on Tuesday after Ms. Reddy reaffirmed her wish to be divorced at a brief hearing, attorney Gary Olsen said.

Under California law, Ms. Reddy — who filed for divorce June 28 — must wait 60 days after the interlocutory judgment to file for a permanent dissolution of her marriage of 14 years.

Still to be resolved are various claims by both Ms. Reddy and Wald that the other should be held in contempt for alleged violations of temporary court orders pertaining to disposition of property and custody of their 9-year-old son Jordan.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A series of awards named in honor of former U.S. Rep. Barbara Jordan will be given annually for outstanding media coverage dealing with the handicapped, the state's first lady has announced.

Announcement of the awards, underwritten by private organizations and individuals, was made by Rita Clements at a luncheon Thursday of the Texas Governor's Committee on Employment of the Handicapped.

Mrs. Clements said the awards, three-inch bronze medals bearing the likeness of Ms. Jordan, who is now a University of Texas professor, will be first presented next February.

She said more than 65 nominations have been received so far from television, newspaper, radio, film, publishing, advertising and public relations organizations.

Janet Gaynor off critical list, in serious but stable condition

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Actress Janet Gaynor was removed from the critical list Friday at San Francisco General Hospital where she is recovering from extensive injuries suffered in a Sept. 5 auto crash.

Miss Gaynor, 75, was listed in serious but stable condition and will remain in the intensive care unit for at least two weeks, said Linda De La Ysla, a hospital spokesperson.

Miss Gaynor, who in 1928 was the first person to win an Academy Award for best actress, suffered a setback two weeks ago when she developed an abdominal infection and partial failure of her liver and a kidney.

Ms. De La Ysla said the infection is now controlled and Miss Gaynor's liver and kidney functions have improved. However, the actress will remain on a ventilator to assist her breathing for several days.

Miss Gaynor, Broadway star Mary Martin, 68, her business manager Ben Washer, 76, and Miss Gaynor's husband, producer Paul Gregory, 62, were en route to a Chinatown restaurant when their taxi was broadsided on California Street by a van. Washer was killed and Miss Gaynor, Miss Martin and Gregory were seriously injured.

Nancy's fall campaign one for the bookstores

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nancy Reagan is spending this election season campaigning — not for Republican candidates, but for her new book about the foster grandparent program.

The first lady has shown a disinclination to get involved in the November contests, going so far as to refuse to answer political questions on a recent trip to Mississippi.

But while President Reagan takes to the stump in behalf of his fellow Republicans, his wife's October schedule is heavily loaded with media interviews, parties and other events to promote the book entitled, "To Love a Child."

Sheila Tate, the first lady's press secretary, said in a recent interview that 60,000 copies of the book will be printed by Bobbs-Merrill Co., and the royalties will be given to the federally aided foster grandparent program. The book, which will be available in bookstores on Nov. 1, costs $14.95.

The first lady's promotional tour begins next week, when she travels to Los Angeles to tape a Merv Griffin show to be aired the week of Oct. 18. At least six other media interviews are scheduled this month.

But the major promotional event will occur at the White House on Oct. 19. Some 600 foster grandparents and children have been invited for a picnic on the South Lawn, Mrs. Tate said, and Frank Sinatra will sing a song he has recorded to go along with the book.

On Oct. 27, the first lady will go to New York for a book party sponsored by the publisher.

Though Mrs. Reagan is billed on the cover as the author, the book actually was written by California free-lance writer Jane Wilkie. Mrs. Tate said the first lady edited the chapters as they were written.

Mrs. Reagan dedicated the book to "the foster grandparents of America, who truly know how to love a child."

Under the program, elderly Americans become "foster grandparents" to children with special needs, most of them institutionalized. The grandparents are paid $2 an hour tax free and spend 20 hours a week on the job.

The book consists of 33 case histories of individual foster grandparents and how they have helped the children they worked with.

In the foreword, Mrs. Reagan said she has worked to expand the program since she became acquainted with it in 1967, when Reagan was governor of California.

"The foster grandparent program is my baby, and my involvement during the past 15 years has been like watching my child grow up," she wrote.

The program now has 18,000 foster grandparents serving 54,000 children on any given day. Jack Kenyon, director of the program, said Friday he hoped the book would increase participation. He said he'd like to see a million volunteers helping the "millions and millions" of needy children.

"I think it's a success because it relies in the main on the wondrous rapport between widely separated generations," the first lady wrote.

"There is something about the love of grandparents that transcends the parent-child relationship; it seems a fact of nature that the very young and the very old cannot resist the warmth offered each to the other."

Aykroyd says he's coping better with Belushi's death

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Actor-comedian Dan Aykroyd says that he's no longer "emotionally crippled" by fellow comic John Belushi's death.

"He's not always there in my thoughts, not the way it was in the beginning when I would wake up and think of him immediately," said Aykroyd, who has been noticeably silent about his friend, who died March 5 of a drug overdose.

"I know when I go back to my house on Martha's Vineyard I will pass his grave, and I will have to go there and eat a chicken and drink a six-pack," he said.

Aykroyd said that he supported the Los Angeles County grand jury investigation into Belushi's death. "I think it might discover that he didn't die of heroin but of natural causes," he said.

"John lived twice as much as most people," Aykroyd added. "He had lived the equivalent of 66 years when he died, not 33. He was always nonstop, full-out from the first time I met him."

Chesapeake Bay deteriorating under flood of pollutants

By CHRISTOPHER SULLIVAN

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Chesapeake Bay stretches more than 180 miles from above the Susquehanna River in Maryland to below Hampton Roads in Virginia.

But, according to a federal report, the nation's largest and richest estuary, home of blue crabs, oysters and rockfish, is slowly deteriorating under an abundance of pollutants.

"Things have changed for the worse," said Kent Price, one of 100 scientists who contributed to the $27 million Environmental Protection Agency study. "It would appear that the bay is showing certain signs of human activity."

That activity has added items like kepone, DDT and a flood of fertilizers and farmland sediment to the water. It has also contributed to the decline of certain freshwater fish and the disappearance of many aquatic grasses at the bottom of the estuary's food chain.

Canvasback, redhead and goldeneye ducks, among other species, "have declined almost one-to-one with the bay grasses," said bay researcher Michael Kemp.

MIGRATING WATERFOWL THAT arrive 800,000-strong each fall have come to represent the bay — in craft and sport and lore. "When there's no grasses,"

Kemp said, "that part of the culture of the Chesapeake Bay becomes history."

It wasn't always like this in the bay, which produces about $75 million worth of oysters, crabs, finfish and other seafood a year, according to the Maryland Department of Economic and Community Development.

Indians had hunted and fished in the bay for 10,000 years before its European discoverer, Captain John Smith, in 1608, described in his log, "an abundance of fish, lying so thick with their heads above water, as for want of nets...we attempted to catch them with a frying pan..."

The new study describes "nutrient enrichment" and contamination by heavy metals and other toxic materials in the upper half of the bay and in certain tributaries.

Research and regulatory officials said they are awaiting recommendations in the final report, which will be issued Sept. 30.

The EPA's regional administrator in Philadelphia, Peter N. Bibko, said some officials reviewing the agency's data have concluded that fertilizer runoff from Pennsylvania farms in the Susquehanna basin may be harming the bay at large.

THE FERTILIZERS CAUSE explosive growth of algae, which in turn sops up oxygen from the water.

As an estuary — an inlet or arm of the sea — the Chesapeake survives because of stress: the constant trading of river freshwater and Atlantic salt-water, the tug of tides, the special strains of winds and storms.

The mighty rivers that feed the Chesapeake — the James, the Potomac and, above all, the Susquehanna, whose flooding formed the estuary 15,000 years ago — flush away many harmful elements, some bay watchers observe.

Price, however, called that an "unwarranted conclusion," noting that heavy metals and some other pollutants do settle in the bay bottom and remain for years.

"There haven't been any pristine conditions since John Smith found the place," said W.R. Taylor, head of Johns Hopkins University's Chesapeake Bay Institute.

Taylor pointed to polluted feeder streams and mini-estuaries, especially in the northern bay. "If you don't look at these tributaries and try to get them cleared up, then I think the main part of the bay might be threatened."

"THERE'S ONE HARD QUESTION that's going to come out of all this," Bibko said. "Suppose the report shows that discharges in state A are exceeding water quality standards in state B... The question arises: What can state B or the EPA do to clamp down on state A?"

A 1979 study by the Army Corps of Engineers forecasts the region's population will double by the year 2020.

President blames Democrats for ills

By ROBERT E. THOMPSON
Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON — The purpose of Ronald Reagan's first press conference in two months became obvious Tuesday night the moment the president began his opening statement: Shift all responsibility for the nation's economic trauma to past Democratic presidents and Congresses.

The Reagan political strategy quite clearly is to be on the offensive rather than the defensive in a year when his economic policies are likely to be the decisive issue before the electorate.

With the 1982 campaign heating up, Reagan sought to turn criticism for continuing recession and the highest rate of unemployment since the Great Depression from his presidency to Democrats who have controlled the Congress and the White House in the past.

He even indirectly informed his two most recent Republican predecessors, Richard Nixon and Gerald Ford, that they were "handcuffed" by Democratic-controlled legislatures.

ALTHOUGH HE HAS been in the White House for nearly two years and has won close to 100 percent approval of his economic initiatives from the current Democrat-dominated House and Republican-controlled Senate, Reagan declined to accept any blame for the economic problems of the nation.

When asked if he bore any responsibility for the economic situation, Reagan laughed and replied, "Yes, because I was a Democrat."

Contending that he found America in a "worst economic mess" since the days of Franklin D. Roosevelt, Reagan claimed his program had brought the nation "back from the brink of disaster."

Essentially, Reagan reiterated the rhetoric that served him well in the 1980 presidential campaign against Jimmy Carter and which he has voiced time and time again since entering the White House.

The president, faced with probable Republican losses in the upcoming election, obviously wanted to make a strong political statement on national television.

ALTHOUGH HOUSE Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill and the House Democratic leadership provided the votes needed for passage of his $98.3 billion tax increase two months ago, Reagan was totally partisan in his discussion of the economy.

All of today's economic problems, the president contended, are the product of government mismanagement prior to his presidency.

He expressed his compassion for the working mother, the farmer, the small businessman "caught in the financial crunch."

"What hurts and angers me the most about this suffering is the fact that it didn't have to be this way," said Reagan. "We could and should have solved and prevented these problems years ago by the simple exercise of responsibility in government."

As he spoke, the old actor's voice trembled a bit and his face took on a sombre demeanor.

CLAIMING THAT important strides have been made toward economic recovery, Reagan challenged Congress to "spur recovery" by acting now to keep inflation and interest rates coming down and to help create public jobs to approve appropriation bills, a constitutional amendment to mandate a balanced budget, an export trading bill, and a private sector jobs training bill.

With cutting ridicule, Reagan declared, "To those who are sitting on these bills pretending all problems began Jan. 21, 1981, I must ask if these modern day Rip Van Winkles really sleep through the America of the 1980? Don't they remember the unprecedented misery of double digit inflation, climbing unemployment and record interest rates?"

ALTHOUGH HIS COMMENTS about the economic situation were highly partisan, Reagan expressed the wish that those "who bear such a heavy burden for overspending and taxing us into this recession" could resist politics and work with him toward achieving lasting recovery.

The job of the people in the current campaign, Reagan suggested, is to cut through the "demagogery and political rhetoric" of his opponents and look back to who was minding the store before he became president.

The president was intent upon making a political statement — and he achieved his objective.

Postmaster doesn't want to close 7,000 post offices

WASHINGTON (AP) — Postmaster General William F. Bolger says the public interest would not be served by rapidly carrying out a General Accounting Office recommendation to close 7,000 small post offices serving mostly rural areas.

"In our view, it is clearly in the public's interest to maintain an effective and convenient universal service, and this is not accomplished by rapidly changing the structure of our mail system as the GAO report indicates," Bolger said.

He made the statement in a report issued Thursday by the GAO, the investigative arm of Congress.

Agriculture department says it's lowering interest rates for farmers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says that starting today it is lowering overall interest rates charged for most loans issued by the Farmers Home Administration.

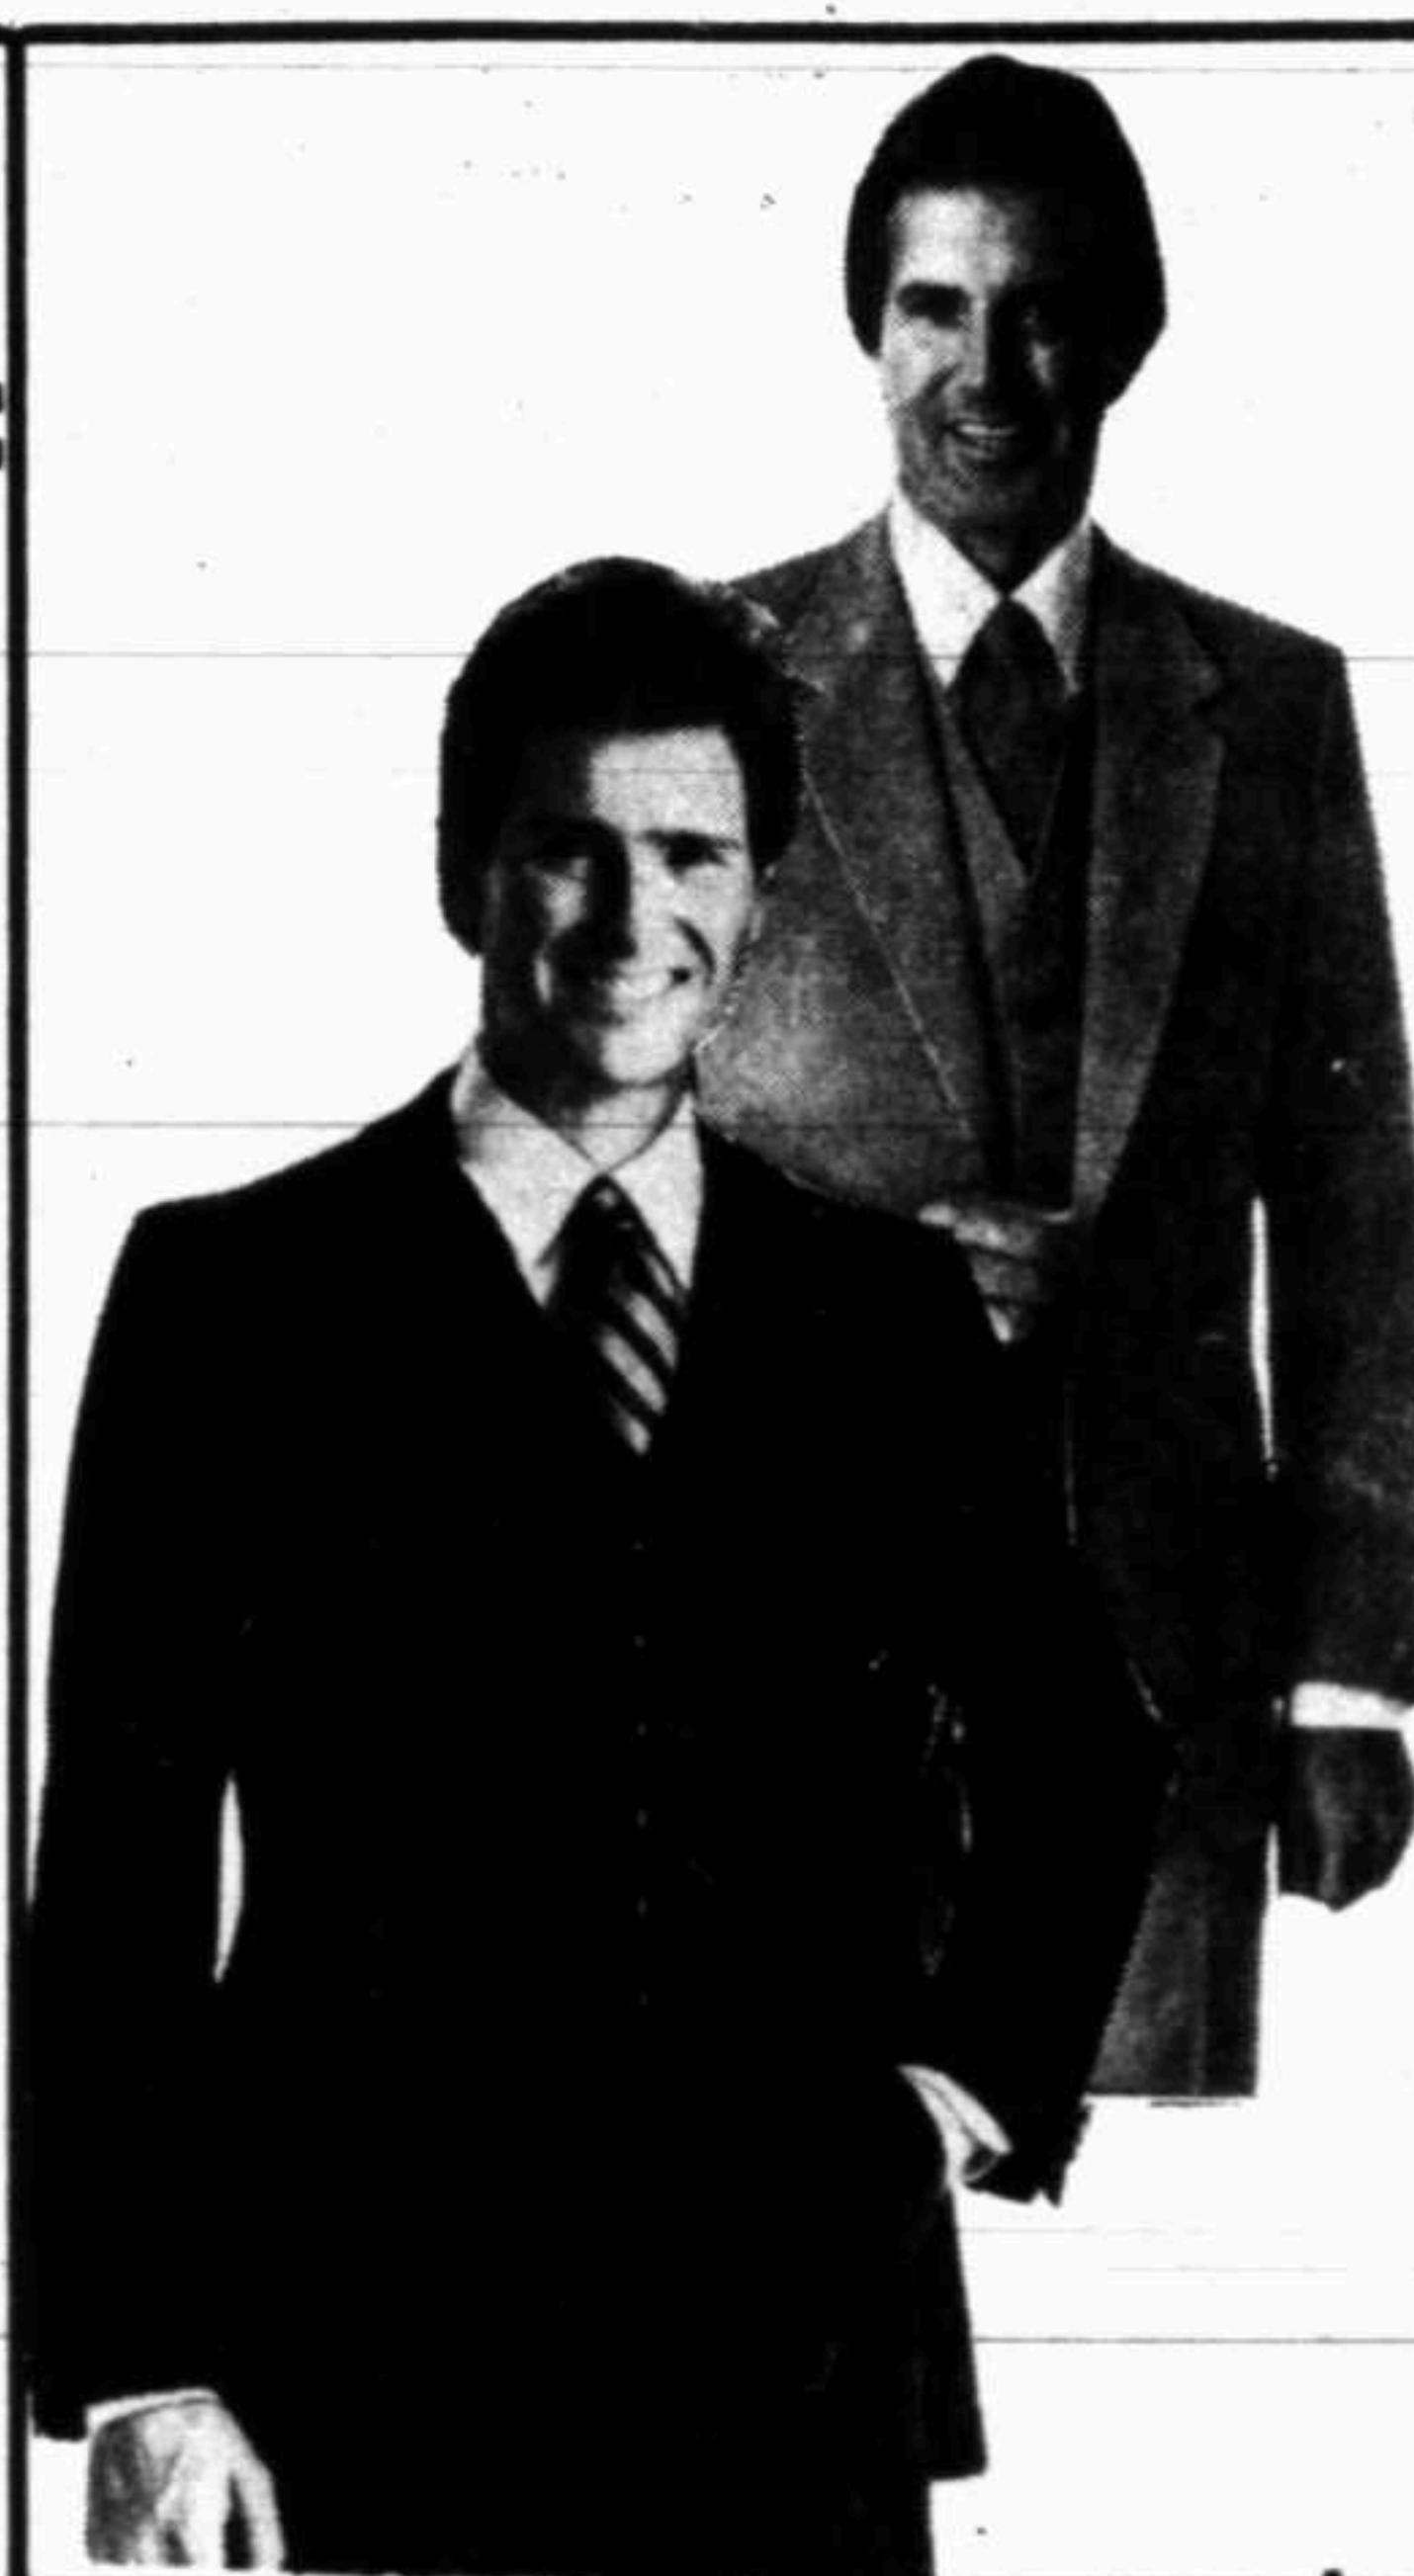

Agriculture Secretary John Block said Thursday that the rate for farm operating loans is dropping a full percentage point to 13.25 percent, while the rate for long-term loans on farm ownership, soil and water, recreation, grazing association, irrigation and drainage and Indian land acquisition is falling from 13.25 percent to 13 percent.

School prayer battle shifts to Congress

By The Associated Press

As the battle over prayers in public schools shifts to Congress, which is considering a constitutional amendment to permit them, actions on state and local levels have largely subsided.

This doesn't suggest any lessening of enthusiasm on the part of prayer advocates. It's just that efforts on those levels to institute prayer have consistently run into unfavorable court decision, and the disposition lately has been to await the outcome of congressional debates.

In the meantime, school boards generally have been backing off further litigation, a spot check around the country indicates.

Polls have consistently shown that between two-thirds and three-quarters of the American public disagrees with the Supreme Court decision of two decades ago that outlawed school prayer. President Reagan, prodded by New Right activists and some religious leaders, sent to Congress in May a proposed constitutional amendment that would allow non-sectarian prayer in schools.

"I think you'll agree with me. We need a prayer amendment, we need it badly," the president told the Knights of Columbus in Hartford recently. "We are to have freedom of religion, not freedom from religion."

Yet courts almost always rule that any sort of public, spoken prayer violates the constitutional separation of church and state and infringes the rights of students who don't wish to take part.

'Good Time Charlie' also effective congressman

WASHINGTON — Rep. Charles Wilson may have seemed unlikely as the first American official in Beirut at the end of this summer's Israeli siege.

But there he was, after giving a lecture at a Jerusalem university, observing what he called a "sort of surrealistic" scene.

"You'd be having lunch on a hillside in East Beirut and watching the bombing just down the hill," said the Democrat from Lufkin, who is expecting next year to begin his 11th year in Congress. "The waiter would ask if you wanted some more wine, and I'd say, 'Wait, I want to see where these rockets hit.'"

Law cracks down on child pornographers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — To neighbors, Cathy Stubblefield Wilson was a well-to-do divorced mother of five who packed some of the kids into her Mercedes Benz or Rolls-Royce each morning for the drive to a prestigious private school.

Mrs. Wilson, 43, seemed to have the best of everything — fine clothes, two other expensive cars and a triplex she shared with her mother.

But the source of her income was a mystery to the neighbors until recent headlines brought the shocking news: Mrs. Wilson was arrested and accused of being the nation's largest, most sophisticated dealer of child pornography.

Authorities alleged in court that Mrs. Wilson, operating with European connections, netted about $500,000 a year from her "kiddie porn" business while also collecting welfare payments.

When officers swept into her suburban Wilshire home with a search warrant, they said they found stockpiles of films and magazines depicting sex between children, adults and even animals.

Los Angeles Police Sgt. Don Smith says they also found mailing lists of 30,000 names scattered throughout the Wilson home.

Under her baby's crib, he said, officers found the alleged "golden list" of 7,000 subscribers nationwide who craved extremely deviate material — the more depraved, the better.

MANY OF THOSE people are under surveillance by police as possible child molesters. Confiscation of a similar list in a 1970s child pornography raid resulted in about 150 arrests nationwide, Smith said.

"She decided she would handle it because no one else did," said Smith. "You won't find it in adult bookstores, and I know of very few mail-order companies that handle it. But when there's a demand, there is always someone who will fill it. And there is a demand."

Mrs. Wilson is being represented by Deputy Public Defender Roy Mason who declined to discuss the case or allow his client to be interviewed.

Prosecutors say a 42-year-old Westwood man who allegedly shared a mailing list with Mrs. Wilson has agreed to testify against her. In an arrangement with the District Attorney's office, Richard Eugene Trolie pleaded guilty July 21 to one count of distribution of child pornography.

Deputy District Attorney Lael Rubin says nine similar felony counts will be dropped when Trolie is sentenced to one year in the county jail on Oct. 18.

POLICE CREDIT Trolie with a tip that led to Mrs. Wilson's arrest on May 6. She is charged with 13 felony counts of distributing child pornography and two misdemeanor counts of distributing obscene material. If convicted, she faces up to eight years imprisonment.

Smith alleges that Mrs. Wilson, who was on probation for a 1980 "kiddie porn" offense at the time of her arrest, controlled 80 percent of a product considered untouchable by most pornography dealers because of the heavy legal penalties attached to it.

Authorities were not aware at the time of her 1980 arrest of the scope of Mrs. Wilson's enterprise. She was given a suspended two-year prison sentence, fined $3,750 and placed on three years probation, despite the protest of the prosecutor who said she deserved jail time.

At the start of her probationary period, Smith said, Mrs. Wilson appeared to be out of the kiddie porn business. However, late last year vice officers spotted advertisements for child pornography which seemed to bear her trademark, he said.

Smith's team spent six months tracking Mrs. Smith, answering ads for child porn, then staking out the addresses from which the material was mailed. They also traveled to other cities and learned that the trail led abroad.

He said she eluded detection by funneling orders through a Denmark mailing address and scattering her funds in foreign bank accounts from Switzerland to the Grand Cayman Islands.

Their big break came when they spotted a courier at a post office box who led them to Trolie.

CHARLES KOCZKA, a U.S. Customs Service agent, recently told a New York state Senate committee on crime that children as young as 1 year old have been featured in pornography produced in the United States and distributed overseas in a flourishing underground child-obscenity network.

Displaying pamphlets titled "Baby Sex" and "Bambina Sex," the special agent told the committee that the amount of material confiscated was "only a fraction of what gets by us."

But Smith and others in law enforcement say recent tightening of laws — highlighted by a U.S. Supreme Court decision permitting states to ban child pornography — may be cutting off the flow of kiddie porn by making the risk of imprisonment greater than the profits.

For example, Massachusetts Gov. Edward J. King recently signed a law calling for up to 20 years imprisonment and $50,000 fine for those producing or distributing pornographic materials involving children under 18. Distributors may also be fined an amount equal to three times their profits.

Even such one-time centers of kiddie porn as Denmark and Amsterdam have been cracking down on producers and distributors, wiping out the majority of overseas producers, authorities say.

In the United States, the stiffest blow to kiddie porn came last month when the Supreme Court, referring to the "serious national problem of child pornography," allowed an exception to First Amendment protections in order to issue the outright ban.

The justices noted that adult obscenity laws, which are less absolute, seek to protect the audience viewing sexual conduct, while child pornography laws try to protect children who are forced to participate in the sexual conduct.

PSYCHOLOGISTS SAY such children usually are damaged for life.

"The terrible effects may not show for a while," says Dr. Roland Summit, assistant clinical professor of psychiatry at UCLA and a specialist in the study of sexually abused children. "But there's a lot of psychological wreckage left behind."

Sexually exploited girls often grow up to be prostitutes, authorities say, and molested little boys frequently become molesters in their manhood.

Summit says pedophiles have several reasons for craving sexually explicit photos of children.

"At one level, they are a source of excitement and sexual gratification," he says. "Also they become an item of barter between pedophiles who correspond by mail — a way of showing good faith and establishing a bond.

"At another level, they are used to break down the inhibitions of children," Summit says. "The child is shown a picture of other children engaged in sexual activity and is told, 'This is what children do.'"

Deputy District Attorney Jacqueline Connor, who heads the Sexually Exploited Child Unit, says the most powerful kiddie porn used by the pedophile to entice children features pictures of famous children such as Brooke Shields in erotic poses.

ALTHOUGH AUTHORITIES say the production of new child pornography has dwindled, the arrest of Mrs. Wilson revealed a booming underground market for kiddie porn supported by a network of aficionados here and abroad who would pay well for even old, recycled material.

At the time of the arrest, business was so brisk that she was allegedly planning an expansion into sales of videotapes, said Smith.

"The names on her mailing lists were from all over the nation. She also sold to customers in Canada, England, France and other countries," he said.

"There are international associations of pedophiles with mailing lists all over the world," says Summit, the UCLA psychologist. "They are covert penpals who exchange pictures by mail."

Summit notes that pedophiles do not consider themselves sick and usually don't want treatment — "They think they are doing the child a favor."

Pedophilia appears in all social strata, he says. A Los Angeles police internal memo notes that pedophiles "may be rich or poor, ignorant or well-educated, married or single."

One New York-based group, which calls itself the North American Man-Boy Love Association, issues press releases on its own letterhead and held a convention in 1979.

DEPUTY DISTRICT Attorney Rubin, the prosecutor who is handling the Wilson case, says society should be concerned about the existence of pedophile groups and the demand for magazines and movies with titles like "Lolita," "Torrid Tots," and "Nymph Lover."

"If we start from the premise that someone who uses this stuff is sick, then we have to wonder what are they going to do with it?" she said.

"Are they going to go out and molest children? Or is this going to create some other weird need? We don't know; we really don't know."

Miner wins, hands down

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo. (AP) — It takes more than a broken left hand to keep miner Ron Cole from competing in a contest to defend his title as the state's best all-around miner.

So he tore off the cast and won the Colorado State Mining Championship for the second year in a row.

About a week ago, as Cole, 26, was practicing for the competition, an 8-pound hammer slipped and landed on his hand. Although the hand was broken, Cole won the hand-mucking contest with a state record time of 32:59.5, then followed with a victory in hand-steeling, the specialty of the molybdenum miner.

Hand-mucking requires a miner to shovel a half-ton of ore — sand was used in the contest — into an ore car, push it 15 feet down a rail track, return it and dump it.

In hand-steeling, contestants using a succession of steel spikes pound a hole into a slab of granite for five minutes. The deepest hole wins.

His hand was swollen and admittedly hurting, but his wallet was $1,500 heavier, and Cole said, "It was worth it." For one thing, it'll help pay for the doctor's appointment he had today to have the cast put back on.

Man acquitted of attempted murder

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — A reputed hit man has been acquitted of attempted murder in the case of a man who was shot four times and left for dead.

Bernard Barton Hunwick was identified by the victim, Allen Chafin of Athens, Ga., as having abducted him while Chafin was in the area to collect a $190,000 debt. Chafin testified Hunwick and Robert Reid Hawley took him to a secluded area and shot him.

A jury in Broward County Circuit Court deliberated for 2 1/2 hours Thursday in acquitting Hunwick of charges of attempted murder, armed robbery, burglary and kidnapping. Hawley, who faces the same charges, is still missing.

Researcher says Homo erectus may not have evolved in Africa

NEW YORK (AP) — Despite the large number of human fossils found in Africa, a researcher says new evidence suggests that human beings did not evolve there, but in Europe, Asia or the Middle East.

Charles Repenning of the U.S. Geological Survey in Menlo Park, Calif., said Thursday that the human ancestor known as Homo erectus apparently inhabited Israel before Africa.

That doesn't necessarily mean that Homo erectus evolved in Israel, Repenning said in a telephone interview.

"It's conceivable that he evolved elsewhere and was on his way to Africa when he died in Israel," he said.

Repenning has determined that Homo erectus lived in Israel 500,000 years before it lived in Africa.

David Pilbeam, professor of anthropology at Harvard University, called Repenning's finding "surprising." Pilbeam said he has not yet seen Repenning's study, which appears in the current issue of Nature magazine.

Pilbeam said the finding is "feasible," but that it is contradicted by a substantial body of circumstantial evidence that hominids — humans, their direct ancestors and their extinct cousins — evolved in Africa.

Repenning agreed that the australopithecines — the ape-like ancestors of Homo erectus — evolved in Africa. "But they got out of Africa and Homo evolved somewhere else, according to the Ubeidiya story," he said.

Repenning proposed his theory on the basis of a new analysis of an archeological site in Israel called Ubeidiya, near the Sea of Galilee.

Stone tools associated with Homo erectus have been found there and judged to be about 700,000 years old. Similar tools thought to be 1.5 million years old have been found in excavations in Tanzania and Kenya. The explanation has been that Homo erectus, who presumably made those tools, lived in Africa hundreds of thousands of years before he eventually migrated to Israel.

Repenning and his collaborator, Oldrich Fejfar of Czechoslovakia, say animal fossils found at Ubeidiya must be at least 2 million years old, and that the stone tools — so-called Early Acheulean tools — therefore must also be that old. That puts Homo erectus in Israel 500,000 years before the first evidence of the creature in Africa.

The age of the animal fossils has been determined by establishing the age of the geological formations in which they have been found around the world, Repenning said.

Repenning and Fejfar are among perhaps a dozen people in the world who study the fossilized ancestors of microtine rodents — mouse-like animals including lemmings and muskrats. One such ancestor, known as Lagurodon, has been found in excavations of material about 2 million years old, Repenning said. "It becomes extinct long before 700,000 years ago," he said.

Fossils of Lagurodon were found at Ubeidiya near tools made by Homo erectus, Repenning said, so those tools should also be about 2 million years old — 500,000 years older than similar tools found in Kenya and Tanzania.

Repenning and Fejfar then examined many other animal fossils from Ubeidiya — including primitive bears, hyenas and saber-tooth tigers — to confirm his date of 2 million years for the site.

William Farrand, a University of Michigan geologist, said in a telephone interview that "an age of 2 million years is really out in left field as far as the conventional wisdom is concerned." He said radioactive dating of lava flows at Ubeidiya has been used along with other evidence to establish the conventional date of 700,000 years ago.

Repenning said the dating of the lava flow means only that Ubeidiya is more than 700,000 years old. "You have no idea (from the lava) how much older," he said.

Kibbutzim are economic engine of Israel

KIBBUTZ AFIKIM, Israel (AP) — Yesterday's "kibbutzniks," the spartan socialists whose hardscrabble farm communes helped open up the Palestinian hinterlands, are becoming a comfortable landed gentry in today's Israel.

But they are an egalitarian elite with a qualm of conscience.

Here at Kibbutz Afikim, an Olympic-size swimming pool sparkles in the sun amid lush greenery and tennis courts. A 1,000-seat amphitheater offers the latest films. A beauty salon keeps coiffures a la mode. Computer terminals tie together the 1,400-member community's financial operations.

The success of Afikim, one of the biggest and richest of the kibbutzim, in many ways reflects the success of the kibbutz movement. After 73 years, these voluntary agricultural collectives have industrialized and become an economic engine in tiny Israel.

But the prosperity is flawed — much of it has flowed from the sweat of labor hired from outside the kibbutz, a violation of the kibbutzniks' socialist principles. And friction has grown between the prosperous kibbutzim and the neighboring towns housing their employees and other less affluent Israelis.

AT THE SAME TIME, some kibbutz members fear that changing lifestyles — televisions, kitchens and children in the home — are breaking up the kibbutz's old forms of communal living.

Now that the material struggle is over, kibbutzniks are asking where they go from here.

"We definitely need new ideas, new motivation, new blood," says Bosmat Shapira, Afikim's secretary, or community leader.

The 120,000 Israelis living on 250 kibbutzim — from here in the northern Jordan Valley south to the Negev Desert — are not about to pack up and move into Israel's urbanized, essentially capitalist society. Kibbutzniks long ago learned to adjust.

"These are not revolutionaries on the barricades," explained David Twersky, a New York-born writer and member of Kibbutz Gezer, near Tel Aviv.

"There are three or four generations that have grown up on the kibbutzim. This is a way of life, where ideals have to compete with real life."

AT THE MOMENT, the ideals are making inroads against the realities in one area — the kibbutzim are cutting down on the hiring of outside workers.

But traditionalists are losing the battle against the tide of color TVs, telephones and spacious homes that are transforming kibbutzim into visions of suburban life.

The kibbutz movement — the word means "group" in Hebrew — was launched by idealists, mostly from Russia and East Europe, who combined their socialist zeal with the Zionist belief in establishment of a Jewish homeland in Palestine.

The kibbutz still retains the founding principle — "From each according to ability, to each according to need."

Private property is limited. All land, capital and buildings are commonly owned, homes and services are provided according to need, all meals are served in communal dining rooms, and schooling is universal and excellent.

In the early days, kibbutzniks rotated from job to job, generally farming tasks. As the communes have modernized, kibbutzniks have specialized, as factory managers, accountants or educators, for example. But the one-for-all touch remains — Mrs. Shapira, like most of Afikim's members, must take her turn on kitchen duty in the dining hall.

THE KIBBUTZIM have long been in the forefront of Israeli agricultural innovation and production. Kibbutzniks, only 3 percent of the population, account for 40 percent of Israel's farm output.

Decades ago, however, the scarcity of good land and water forced the kibbutzim to branch out into other industries. Kibbutz factories now produce electronic equipment, plastic goods, furniture, appliances and processed foods — 7 percent of Israel's industrial exports.

Kibbutzniks also operate tourist hotels, run cruise boats on the Sea of Galilee and sell their services as consultants. One of Israel's most popular singing groups, Hagevatron, plows its earnings back into its home kibbutz.

"I remember when I came to Afikim, industry was looked down upon," said Don Shalit, a teacher who joined this 1,000-acre kibbutz in 1960.

Afikim workshops now manufacture electric carts, dairy meters and other innovative equipment, but the big money-maker here is a plywood factory, which produces more than two-thirds of the kibbutz's income. About 200 of the 300 workers at the plywood plant are outsiders.

Throughout Israel, about one-third of the 15,000 kibbutz industrial workers are wage-earning outsiders, perhaps 2,000 of them Arab.

SHALIT EXPLAINED that in the 1950s, after the founding of Israel, then-Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion asked the kibbutzim to give work to some of the hundreds of thousands of Jewish immigrants pouring into the country.

"So we did it for Zionist goals," Shalit said. "But it went against our principles of socialism."

In recent years the kibbutz movement has pressured individual kibbutzim to eliminate hired labor — by selling off their factories or by offering to take in the outside workers as partners.

"How can we be employers and socialists at the same time?" asked Arnon Tamir, spokesman in Tel Aviv for the Federation of Kibbutz Movements.

"The answer is automation," he said — making kibbutz industry so mechanized and computerized that it can be operated by kibbutz members alone.

Twersky's kibbutz has just installed an automated grape-picking system in its vineyard, and Afikim has built a highly mechanized chipboard plant that requires no outside labor.

BUT A FULL-scale transition could be financially painful. Mrs. Shapira says replacing Afikim's profitable plywood factory will be a long-range task — "for the next generation."

"People are not ready to reduce their standard of living," she said.

The standard at Afikim is good — increasingly roomy townhouse-style homes, black-and-white televisions that are being exchanged for color, and soon telephones in every home.

A supermarket offers a wide range of goods, and a clinic the latest in dental care. Bicycles, not automobiles, are used within the kibbutz, but cars are available for outside use. A monthly computer printout gives each member a rundown of time worked and credits expended in this largely cash-less society.

Afikim kibbutzniks say the greatest lifestyle change was the decision seven years ago to abandon the old "children's house" method of communal child-rearing and to bring the children into the parents' home — now the practice at about half the kibbutzim.

The children, the TVs and the ever-improving apartment kitchens have enriched domestic life, but possibly at the expense of community spirit. Shalit estimates barely 100 of Afikim's more than 800 adult members attend the semi-monthly general meetings these days.

"IT SEEMS there's always a favorite show on television that night," he said.

Kibbutzniks are not apologetic about their increasingly comfortable lives.

"Fifty years ago, the women wanted to get out into the fields to work with the men. Today they want better kitchens, they worry about having their hair done," Mrs. Shapira said with a laugh.

"But there's nothing wrong with that. A kibbutz is not an Indian reservation. It's a reflection of the outside society."

What does worry many kibbutzniks — who are predominantly European-descended — is their growing alienation from the surrounding "development towns," most of whose residents are non-European Jews.

This friction has political as well as ethnic overtones. During last year's election campaign, Prime Minister Menachem Begin, whose Likud bloc has strong support among non-European Jews, derided kibbutzniks as "swimming-pool millionaires."

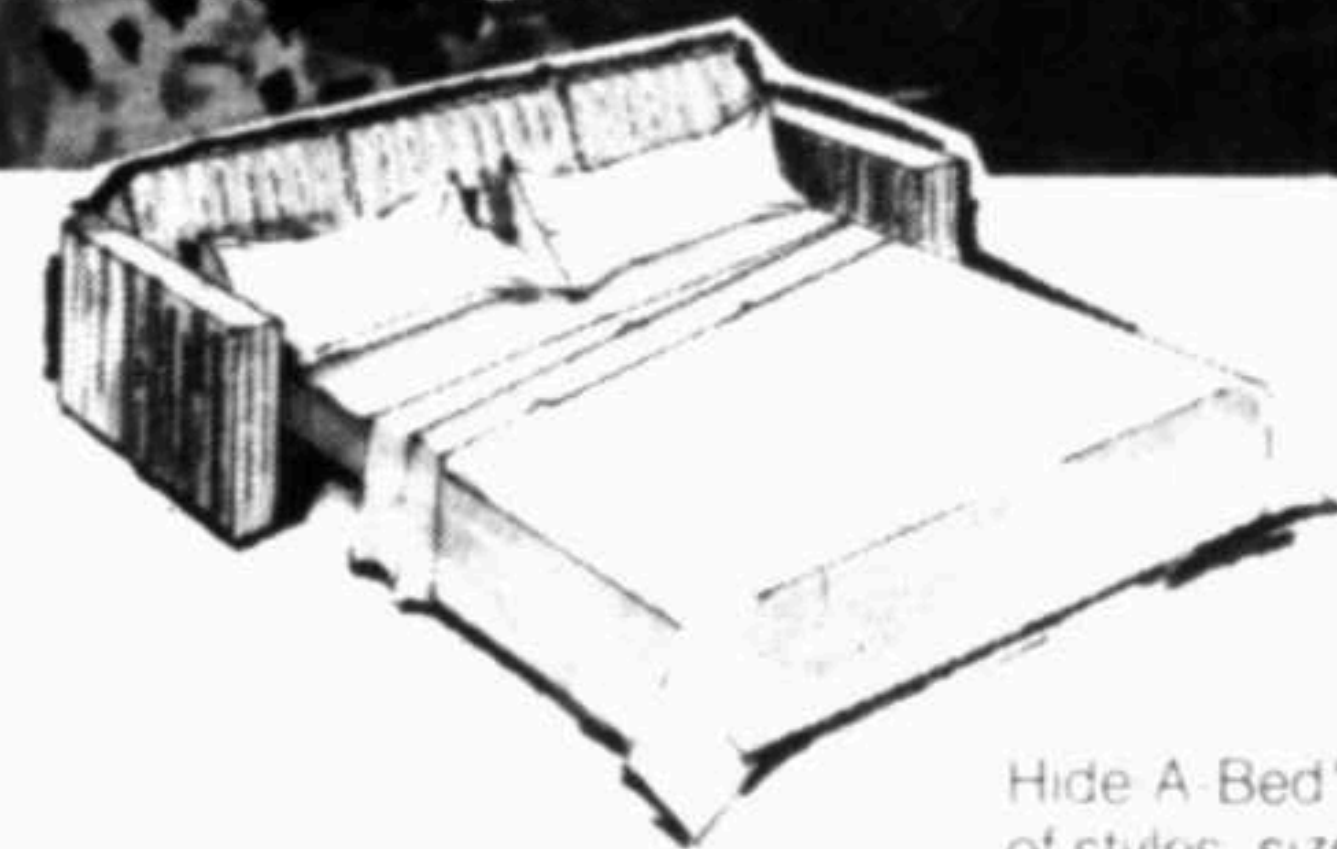

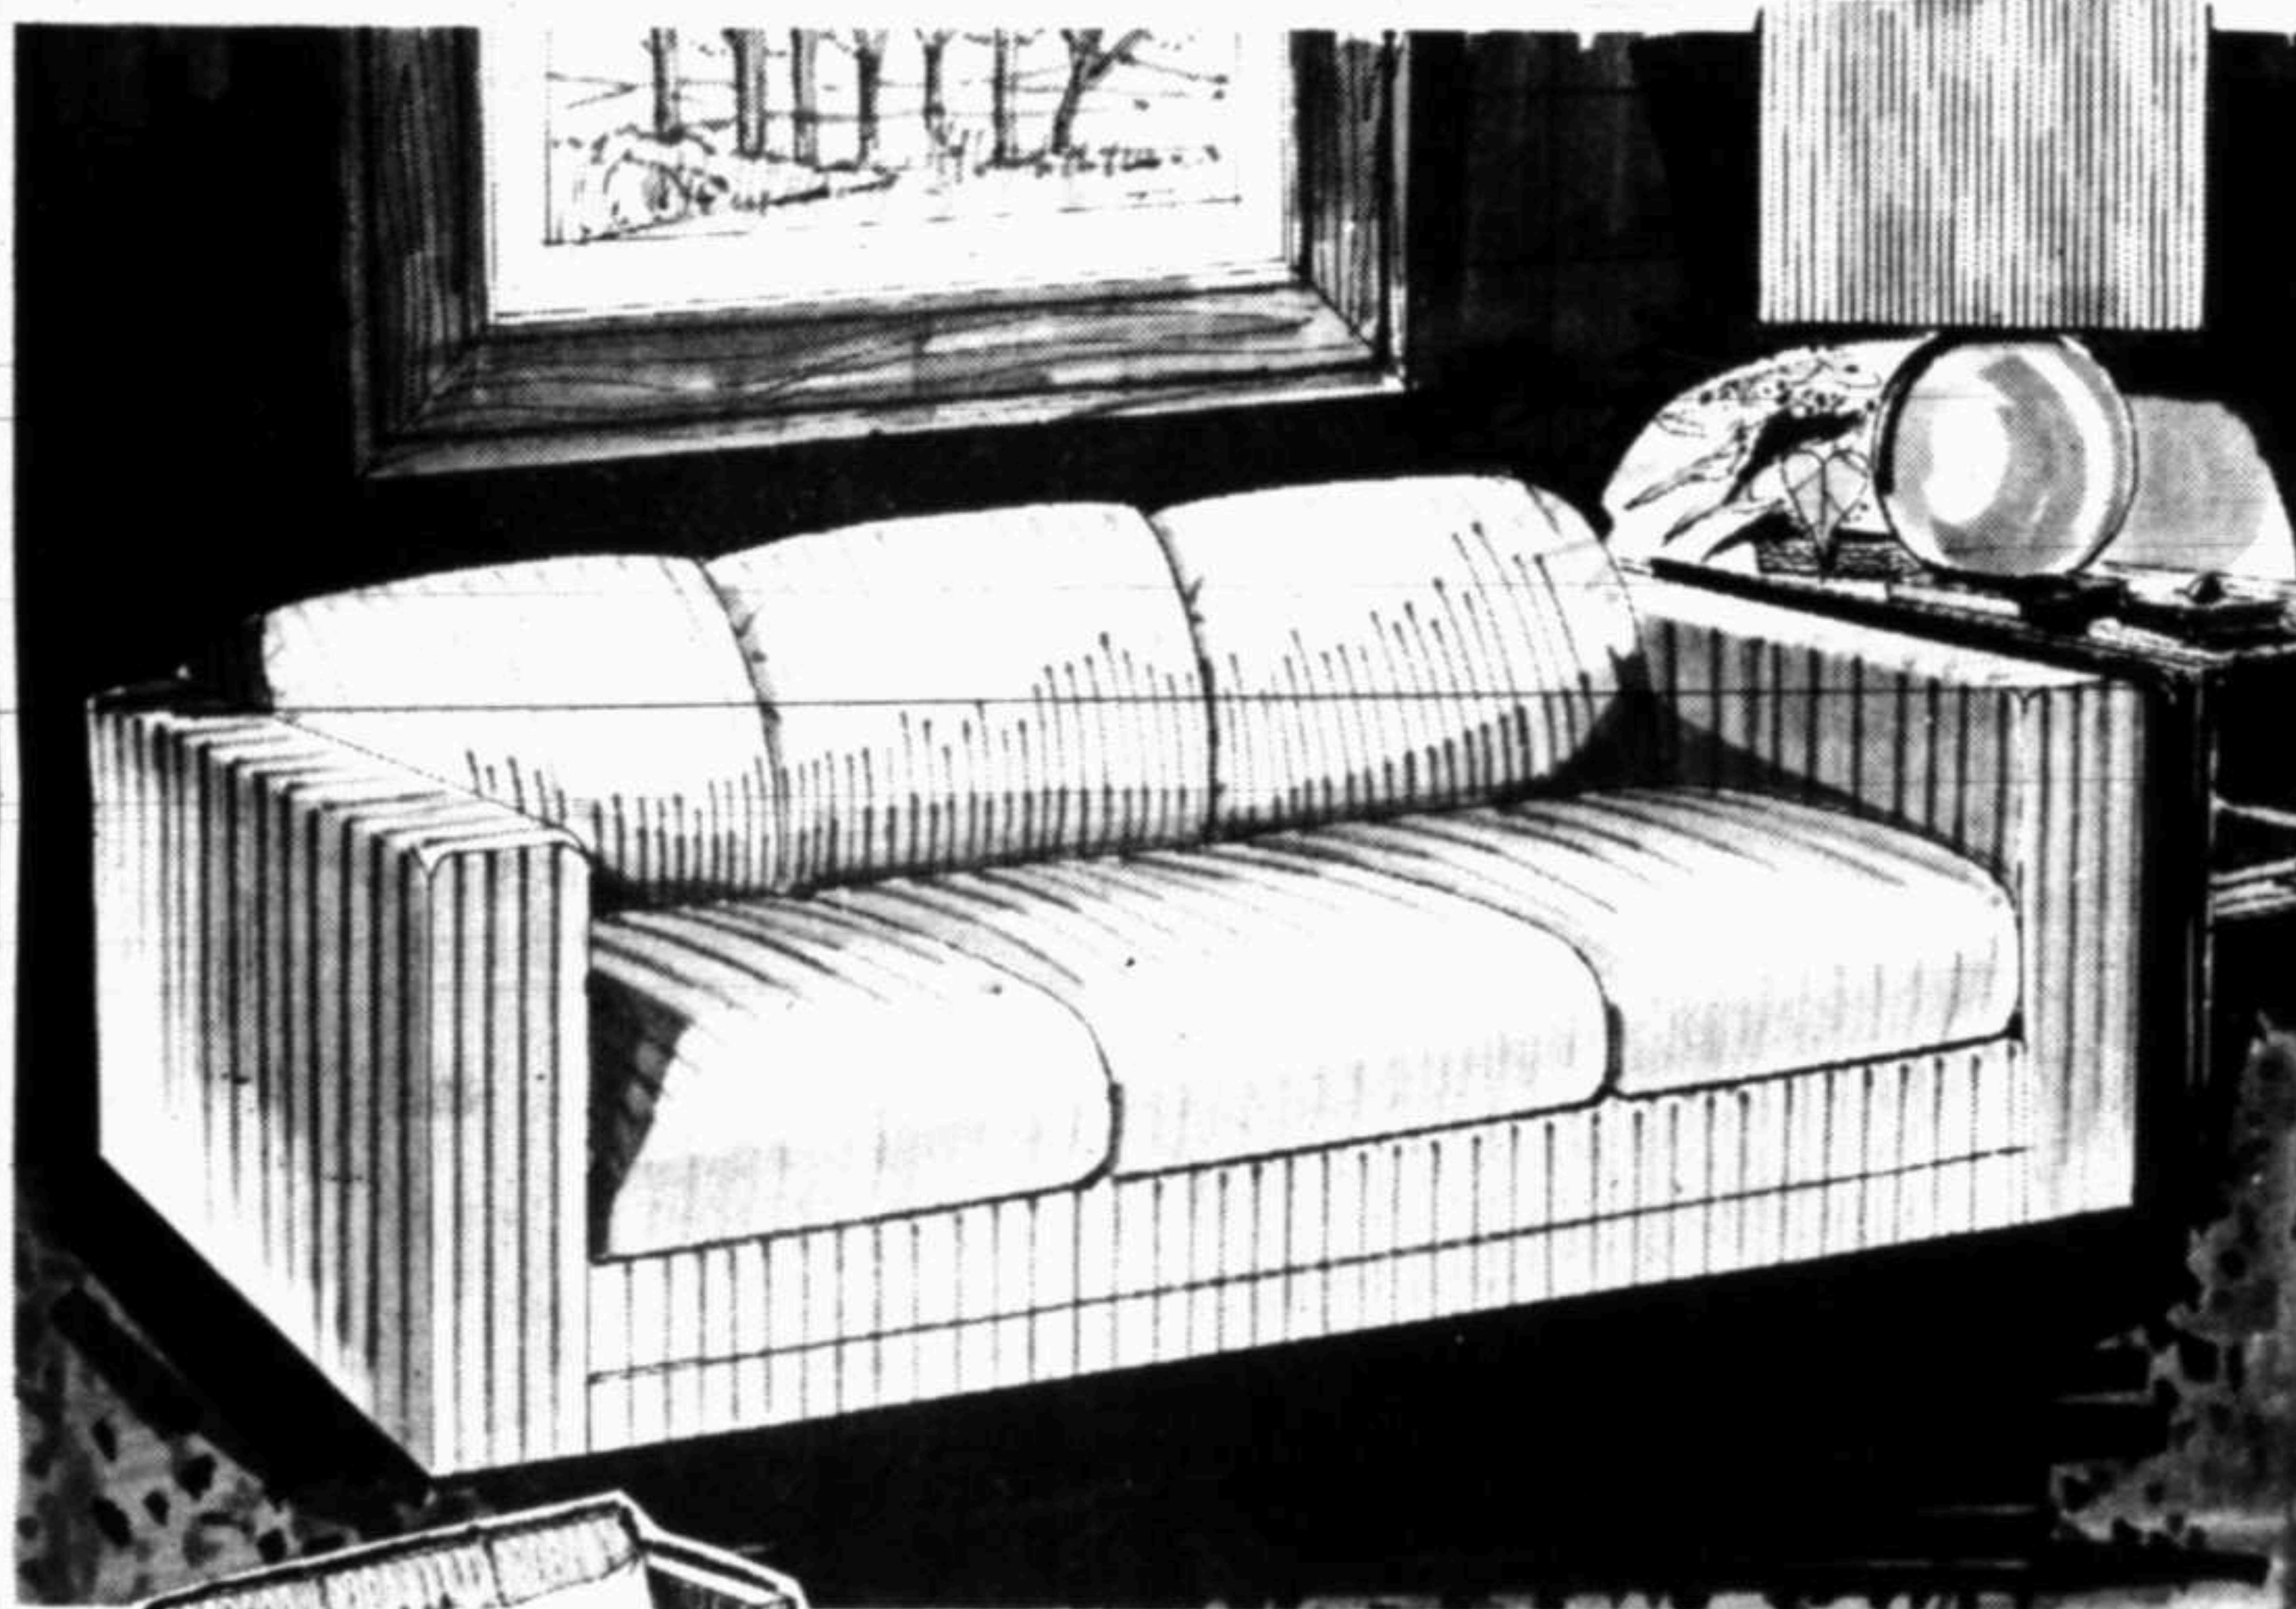

KIBBUTZ MEMBERS, who traditionally support the opposition Labor Party, dismissed Begin's attack as political hyperbole. But it set off a flurry of charge and counter-charge about kibbutz "exploitation" of other Israelis.

"The relationship between the now-wealthy kibbutzim and the disadvantaged development areas surrounding them is in some ways a living contradiction of kibbutz socialist ideology," writes educator-author Moshe Kerem, a kibbutz member. "Can it continue without exploding?"

But traditionalists are losing the battle against the tide of color TVs, telephones and spacious homes that are transforming kibbutzim into visions of suburban life... Kibbutzniks also operate tourist hotels, run cruise boats on the Sea of Galilee and sell their services as consultants. One of Israel's most popular singing groups, Hagevatron, plows its earnings back into its home kibbutz.

Private museum houses artifacts from world over

By The Associated Press

Dinosaur footprints, cannibal war clubs, Chinese hand puppets and giant spiders are just a few of the thousands of items on display at the most unusual new museum in New Hanover County in North Carolina.

George Tregembo's life's collection, a storehouse of ancient and contemporary artifacts collected from throughout the world, has opened in a small building on U.S. 421 between Wilmington and Carolina Beach.

A collector of oddities for nearly a half-century, Tregembo, 61, describes himself as a "collectorho."

"I've been collecting most all my life. I've waited pretty near 30 years to set this up," he said.

"Many of the things I am showing are now unobtainable, because the countries this stuff came from have changed," he said, surveying his collection with pride. "When I was in Guinea in the '40s there were very few roads and headhunters were still around."

"See that picture there?" he said, pointing to a photo of a fierce-looking man holding a 6-foot spear. "He was a headhunter, and that knobby wooden club in the case is like what he used... Of course that's completely outlawed now."

Primitive cultures are well represented at Tregembo's museum, with memorabilia such as ancient Indian swords, African lip plugs and wooden Eskimo snow glasses displayed in sealed glass cases.

Another case filled with 2,000-year-old Roman artifacts contains a large coin with the value to purchase "one slave and a horse of good quality." In the same room, examples of the world's largest shells, eggs from the world's largest birds and specimens of the world's largest insects are displayed.

"You get a lot of people who walk through the museum and don't see a thing," Tregembo said. "But one in 10 is a real buff. Maybe it's someone who likes to see the shoes of the world, or knife collections from different cultures, or original Australian artifacts. There's a little something here for everybody."

Admission to the museum is included in the admission price to the adjacent Tote-Em-In Zoo, which Tregembo and his wife, June, have owned and operated since 1951. From a collection of 21 animals, it has grown to more than 130 species, making it the largest privately owned zoo in North Carolina.

Tregembo's love of collecting animals and artifacts began at the age of 12, when he converted an old hen coop into an exhibit for some of his mother's antiques. He then set about acquiring animals for a small zoo, trapping a gray fox, a breeding pair of gray squirrels and a couple of skunks in the woods surrounding his Vassalboro, Maine, home.

"That was during the Depression, and everybody was very poor," he said. "It was a way for me and my friends to have fun, and we even made a little money — maybe 30 cents on a good day."

Tregembo returned to Maine after serving in the armed forces during World War II, but seven years of harsh winters eventually drove him and his wife to a warmer climate.

The Tregembos' business has remained a family operation, with his son Robert and daughter-in-law Doris working full time caring for the zoo animals.

While most of his life's collection was acquired during the war while serving in the South Pacific, trading and buying have supplemented his exhibition.

Runaway lovers' sojourn ends in crash

HOUSTON (AP) — Two runaway teen-age sweethearts from Ohio were in custody of Harris County juvenile authorities Friday after they crashed their car into a savings and loan building, ending a police chase and their month-long spree.

The 15-year-old girl and 16-year-old boy were arrested Wednesday after being treated for cuts and bruises they suffered when the 1977 Chevrolet Camaro they were driving crashed into the building following a high-speed chase about 9:15 p.m., police said.

Joe Santana, assistant director of the Harris County juvenile detention center, said the couple was to be returned to Ohio Friday or Monday.

The two, described by relatives as "madly in love," left Canton, Ohio, Sept. 5. The boy's father said the pair set out on a motorcycle but abandoned it in a rural area of Ohio after it developed engine problems.

"I can't believe they made it that far," the father said. He said his son, a champion high school wrestler, was a "perfect child."

The father said he had no idea where the two were before Thursday.

"They were just on the run," he said. "We thought we'd never see them again."

Police reported that officers tried to stop the car, stolen out of Ohio, for a traffic violation on a downtown street Wednesday. But the pair fled, driving as fast as 95 mph in an attempt to elude police.

The boy lost control of the car, which leaped the center median and crashed through the wall of the savings and loan building, police said.

for failing to make monthly payments of $840 to support his six children by two former wives.

Judd could be sentenced to up to 10 years in prison and fined $5,000 if his probation is revoked. A hearing was set Oct. 15.

Train derails after crash

SOUR LAKE (AP) — Twenty-one cars of a Missouri & Pacific freight train derailed Friday afternoon in a tangle of metal after the train collided with an 18-wheel truck near this South Texas town, officials said.

The driver of the truck was hospitalized with a broken leg after his vehicle slammed into the train at a crossing on Texas Highway 326 about 1 1/2 miles south of Sour Lake.

Officials still were investigating the cause of the accident, a railroad company spokesman said.

The highway, about 20 miles from Beaumont, was closed for three hours while wreckage and freight was removed.

The Missouri & Pacific spokesman said the derailed cars, accounting for about half of the train, were carrying lumber, polyethylene beads and assorted freight.

About 10 of the 21 derailed cars were badly damaged, the spokesman said.

The train's engineer told police the truck tried to stop before crashing into the intersection about 4 p.m. Friday.

Ronny Ray Humble, 22, the driver of the truck owned by Permian Tank Co. of Odessa, was hospitalized in Beaumont after being thrown from the cab upon impact, officials said.

AUSTIN (AP) — State officials have gone to federal court to try to block the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers' plan to close or partially close 47 parks at 15 lakes.

The suit was filed in federal court here by Attorney General Mark White, who said in a Friday release the closings would mean, "Texas' many sportsmen and nature lovers will be denied access to many places they have previously enjoyed."

White said the proposed closings include "important East Texas fishing lakes such as Sam Rayburn Reservoir and Lake Lewisville."

The suit claims the National Environmental Policy Act requires federal agencies to prepare environmental impact statements before tackling actions which "significantly affect the quality of the human environment."

The closing will harm that environment by causing overcrowding at parks left open, White said.

U.S. Rep. Charles Wilson, D-Lufkin, is conducting a Saturday hearing in his hometown to hear complaints about the planned closings.

Corps of Engineers officials have said the closings are necessary because of a 15 percent budget cut for 1983.

apathy in 1978 when Clements upset Democratic nominee John Hill.

"It is extremely likely it will be the pivotal vote in this election," he said.

Montoya said the Bonillas are wrong about Hispanic support for White. Oscar Moran, state LULAC director, has commended Clements' efforts on issues of interest to Hispanics.

The Republican governor has built Hispanic support by appointing Mexican-Americans to important positions, including state judgeships and spots on the Texas Employment Commission, Texas Industrial Commission, the College Coordinating Board and Board of Corrections, according to Montoya.

He also said Hispanic voters have not forgotten White's opposition to the Voting Rights Act.

"The Hispanic community sees through his all of a sudden endorsing the Voting Rights Act after it has already passed," he said.

But Tony Bonilla said Hispanic support of Republican candidates has nothing to do with issues.

"The Republican Hispanics are those who are the most affluent within the Hispanic community, those who consider it social status to be invited to the Governor's mansion to sip some tea, those who consider it social status to be appointed to some board or commission without any real authority," he said.

"They enjoy the atmosphere of being around someone who is rich and arrogant."

White remains jail-free, thanks to blood pressure

GALVESTON (AP) — High blood pressure kept the man accused of kidnapping three people, including one buried alive for four days, out of jail for another day Friday, authorities said.

Ronald Floyd White was taken from his hospital bed at Brownsville Medical Center and flown to the prison ward at John Sealy Hospital here just hours after a justice of the peace advised him of the three aggravated kidnapping charges against him.

Justice of the Peace Alex Perez said he set White's bond at $200,000 on the charge involving the man buried alive, and $100,000 each on kidnapping charges stemming from the abduction of two other men in Montgomery and Lone Oak counties.

Department of Public Safety spokesman Sherwood Hamilton in Harlingen said a DPS plane flew White from Brownsville to Galveston Friday afternoon.

Dr. Gaston Magrinat, a Brownsville cardiologist, said White is "still improving, but I think he needs another day in the hospital."

"He hasn't improved as fast as I thought he would," said Magrinat.

The doctor has declined to discuss the specifics of White's ailment without the patient's authorization, but Hamilton said authorities were told White suffers from high blood pressure.

White, 38, was arrested after a high-speed chase Wednesday night on an aggravated kidnapping warrant issued in the abduction of Michael Baucom, 20, of Santa Fe, Texas.

Baucom was buried for four days in a narrow box while his kidnappers demanded a $75,000 ransom.

White also is accused of abducting Houston firefighter Coby Garland Hamilton in Montgomery County and Robert Cameron at the Lone Oak County town of George West, said DPS spokesman Larry Todd.

Over 70 picked for jury pool

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A total of 72 people had been qualified for the jury pool when jury selection in the U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr. murder trial recessed Friday for the weekend.

U.S. District Judge William S. Sessions said 22 of the panel of 41 people summoned to the courthouse Friday remained to be questioned and that another group of 50 would be called on Monday.

Sessions indicated shortly before recess that he may qualify as many as 100 people for the pool before the final selection process begins. He asked attorneys to inform him when court reconvenes at 9 a.m. Monday whether additional prospective jurors should be summoned for Tuesday.

Sessions said if jurors continue to be qualified at the same rate as the first four days, "we may well obtain a panel of nearly 100 people from questioning the balance of the 72." A minimum of 46 are needed to impanel the jury, but the judge said he wanted to make sure extra panel members are available if others are disqualified during the final questioning process next week.

The judge individually questioned 113 people over four days in the tedious process and had disqualified 41 of them who had formed opinions based on extensive pretrial news coverage of the sensational contract killing of Wood.

White given Hispanic endorsement

AUSTIN (AP) — Tony and Ruben Bonilla, Hispanic leaders who have opposed Mark White in the past, said Friday that Mexican-Americans will give White the crucial votes needed to beat Gov. Bill Clements in November.

Rick Montoya, director of the Hispanic division of Clements' campaign, said the Bonillas' statements show how out of touch they are with Mexican-American voters.

The Bonilla brothers announced their support for White at a Capitol news conference.

"Mark White and the Bonilla family have been friends for many years and there have been many instances when we disagreed with positions he had taken as attorney general," said Tony Bonilla, national president of the League of United Latin American Citizens.

He said those past differences on issues like the Voting Rights Act and bilingual education have been set aside "because we think this is one of the most important elections in the country."

"In Bill Clements we have a governor who, true, has appointed many Hispanics. But while he appoints Hispanics to different positions he opposes the programs that are essential for Hispanics to help improve our lot in this society," said Tony Bonilla.

Ruben Bonilla said over 800,000 Hispanics are registered to vote in Texas. He said much of that traditionally Democratic vote was lost to overconfidence and apathy in 1978 when Clements upset Democratic nominee John Hill.

"It is extremely likely it will be the pivotal vote in this election," he said.

Montoya said the Bonillas are wrong about Hispanic support for White. Oscar Moran, state LULAC director, has commended Clements' efforts on issues of interest to Hispanics.

Employers tax rate set at $28 per worker

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas employers tax was set Friday at a minimum of $28 per worker for 1983 instead of the $210 that would have been charged if the Legislature had not changed the tax formula last month.

The bad news is that employment officials estimate the state will have to borrow $300 million from the federal government to keep the state's unemployment trust fund solvent through January.

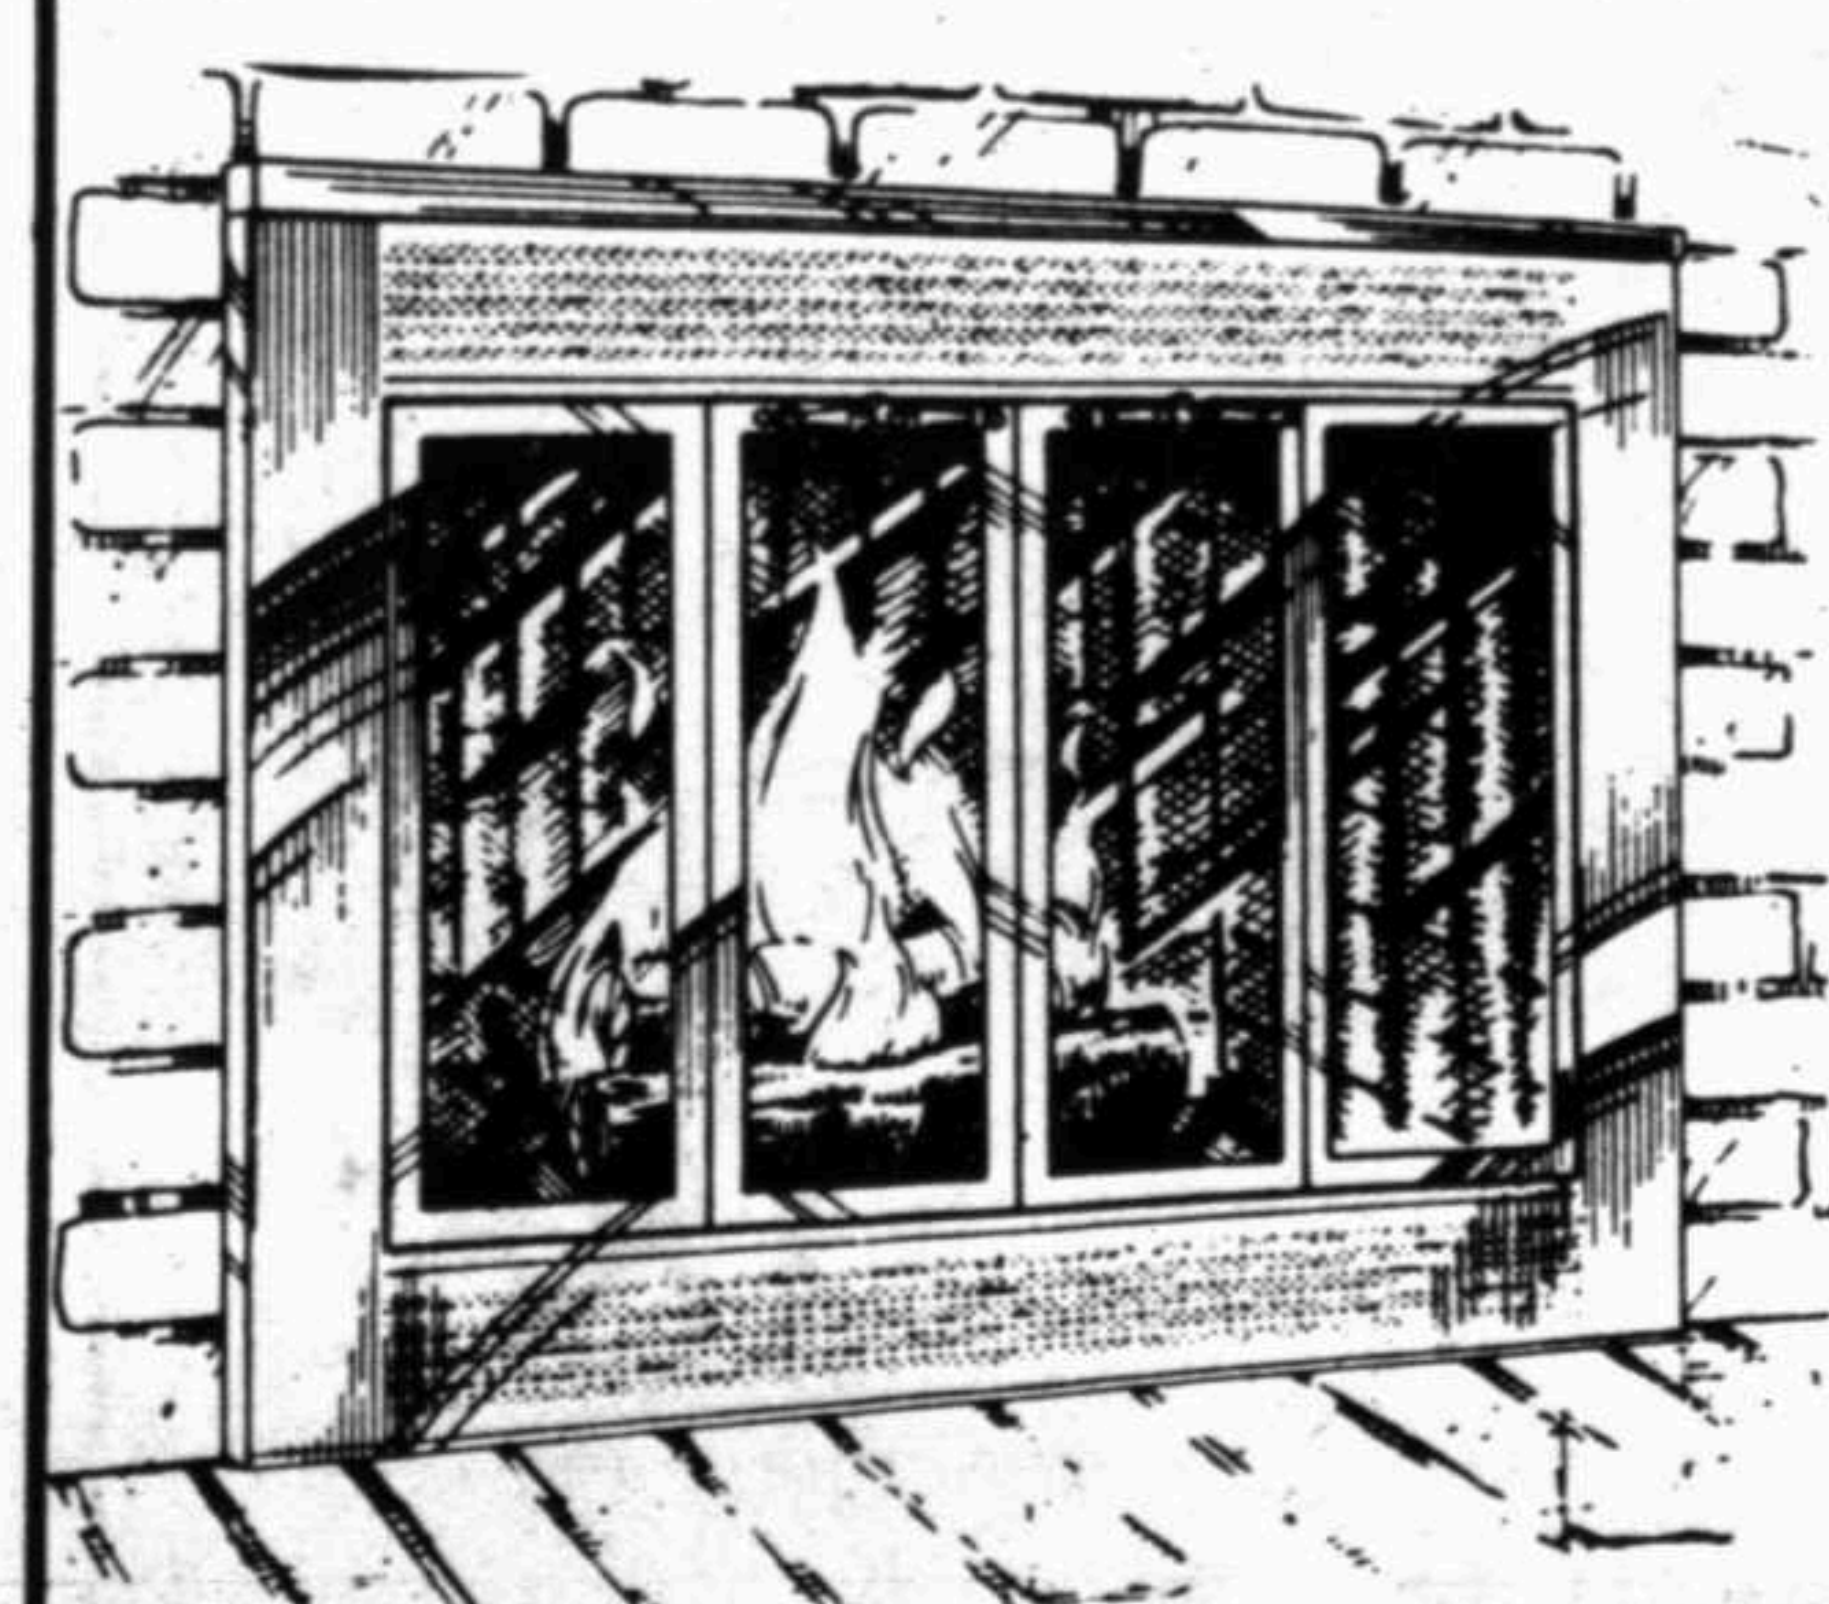

The Texas Employment Commission set the new tax rate, which goes into effect in January, based on a new formula that increased the tax by 0.3 percent instead of the 3 percent it would have risen under the old law.

Gov. Bill Clements called a special legislative session to change the formula after the TEC warned that the state's $225 million fund was going bankrupt. Bankruptcy of the fund would have resulted in a 2,000 percent rise in employer taxes, TEC officials said.

Texas employers now pay a minimum of $6 per worker.

Assassin's capture reported

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The newspaper of the Phalange Party of assassinated President-elect Bashir Gemayel said Friday that the killer has been arrested and that he has linked the killing to "foreign quarters."

The report in Al-Amal came from the Central News Agency, a new organization with strong links to the Phalange Party. It did not identify the assassin or the foreign connection.

The report said the assassin testified he did the killing on behalf of another man who was in contact with "foreign quarters." It said the liaison belonged to an "ideological organization" and was known for his "friendships with influential persons abroad."

The assassin was apprehended by the Phalange security wing, the report said.

Al-Amal reported the arrest in banner headlines. The report also was carried by the independent newspaper An-Nahar, the leftist As-Safir and the conservative Al-Bayraq.

Gemayel was killed by a bomb explosion at a Phalange Party headquarters in Christian east Beirut's Ashrafiyeh neighborhood on Sept. 14, nine days before he was to have been inaugurated.

The report quoted the alleged assassin as saying he planted a 77-pound bomb on the second floor of the headquarters Sept. 12.

A highly advanced Japanese-made detonator was used to spark the blast that caved in part of the three-story building, killing Gemayel and more than 20 party members, the report said.

It added that a high frequency detonator was needed to avoid interference in the operation by the radio wave of the nearby Phalange Party radio station.

The report said the detonator was capable of being used from 2 1/2 miles away, and it quoted the assassin as saying he detonated the device from Al-Nasrah, which is near Ashrafiyeh.

The assassin led the investigators to a vacant lot where he discarded the detonator, the report said.

Monthly market bills post decline

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Supermarket bills declined during September in the fourth monthly drop of 1982, an Associated Press market-basket survey shows.

The 14-item survey also shows, however, that the increases so far this year heavily outweigh the decreases; today's market-basket bills are a little more than 4 percent higher than they were at the start of the year.

The AP drew up a random list of commonly purchased food and non-food items and priced the list at one supermarket in each of 13 cities on March 1, 1973. Prices have been rechecked on or about the start of each succeeding month.

Among the latest findings: —The marketbasket bill went up last month at the check-list store in six cities and down in seven. Overall, the marketbasket bills dropped an average of six-tenths of 1 percent during September. Prices also declined during February, April and August.

—A look at prices today and at the start of the year shows that the marketbasket bill has increased in 11 cities and decreased in two.

Fireball created by tanker car explosion

LIVINGSTON, La. (AP) — A tank car loaded with chemicals exploded into a vast orange-and-white fireball and mushroom cloud Friday, touching off more fires in the wreckage of a chemical freight train that derailed Tuesday, officials said.

"It was just one of those 43 ticking time bombs we had been watching all week," said Lt. Ronnie Jones, a state police spokesman. "We hope that this at least to some degree justifies why we have not let people back in the area today."

About 2,700 of the 3,300 people evacuated have had to remain away from their homes since the 43 cars of a 101-car Illinois Central Gulf train derailed, triggering explosions and a tenacious fire.

Jones said he heard the explosion at 3:22 p.m. Friday — the fourth since the derailment — and saw an orange-and-white fireball rising in black smoke several hundred feet in the air.

The fireball was about 300 feet in diameter, he said. The mushroom cloud expanded as it rose. It started out the size of the fireball, then expanded significantly as it rose and dissipated into the atmosphere."

"We have gotten calls from miles around from people who saw the fireball and heard the explosion," he said.

Jones said police were not certain which car exploded. But he said, "it may have been what we call car No. 1, a vinyl chloride car which had been untouched previously."

Before the car exploded, the first close look at the wreckage had found that the only fires left were puddles of flame and a blowtorch-like blaze jetting from the pressure relief valve on another tank of vinyl chloride.

Distinct possibility Arafat will deliver U.N. speech

The Hearst Feature Service

UNITED NATIONS — The PLO's envoy to the United Nations, Zehdi Labib Terzi, said today that he is "70 percent" sure PLO leader Yasser Arafat will come to New York in the next two weeks to deliver a major U.N. speech that for the first time may affirm Israel's right to exist.
"I would say there is a 70- to 30-percent chance he will come," Terzi, who is the PLO's permanent U.N. observer, said in an interview. "If he does, it will be for something of concrete and substance, not just the trip," he added.
There has been an intensive behind-the-scenes effort by the United States, France and Great Britain to get the PLO leader to formally accept U.N. Security Council resolutions 242 and

Israelis daredevil drivers

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — "Drive Slowly," croons Arik Einstein, Israel's top pop singer. Einstein is in a hospital following a car crash, and radio stations are playing "Drive Slowly" over and over to remind Israeli drivers how dangerous they can be.
Einstein was seriously injured, but was luckier than the 16 people who died in accidents in the same week his car was hit by a bus in downtown Tel Aviv.

Israel's small population makes it especially sensitive to every Jewish death, and road fatalities often make frontpage news.

Drunken driving is not a problem. "The social problem that manifests itself most obviously on our roads is aggression," says Moshe Amirav, head of the Road Safety Council.

As in most Mediterranean countries, macho bedevils Israeli highways. Drivers tend to take offense at being passed or trapped behind slow vehicles. The 56-mph speed limit, though rigidly enforced with heavy fines and license suspensions, is frequently disregarded.

Another problem is the heat. Few cars are air-conditioned, and drivers are reluctant to stop and bake in the sunshine. Moreover, many roads are narrow, badly marked and inadequate for the rising number of cars in Israel, which has doubled in the past decade to one for every three families.

Israel has the world's highest accident rate, although not the worst death rate. It has half as many deaths as the United States, but a third of the number of cars per capita, according to Transport Ministry figures. Britain has the same fatality rate as Israel but has 2 1/2 times more cars.

More than 14,000 Israelis have died on the roads between 1948 and 1981 — 1,500 more than were killed in wars and terrorist attacks.

Some Israeli experts point to a sharp increase in road deaths immediately after every Mideast war. They say battle stress could be a factor, or the fact that many civilians, just released from reserve military service, have trouble shaking off the lawless habits they pick up in battle zones.

"We are very concerned to protect our people on the battlefield but not adequately concerned by the war on our roads," Amirav said in an interview. He said the national preoccupation with defense had put traffic problems low on the national agenda.

He pointed to figures showing that Israel spends only $14 per person on road safety, and $2 of that sum on improving roads. U.S. figures are more than 10 times higher, he said.

"Israel's roads are a disaster," he said. He said there were 16 outdated two-lane roads linking major cities and carrying 10,000 cars a day. A five-year road improvement plan was rejected by the Treasury as too expensive, he said. Meanwhile, road accidents cost the economy 5.2 billion shekels ($186 million) in state funds in 1981 alone, he said.

He said Israeli road safety experts were trying to imitate Japan, whose massive campaign for road improvement and safety awareness had brought a 50-percent drop in road fatalities in 10 years. Japan has twice as many cars per person as Israel, and its road death rate is lower.

338 which call for recognition of Israel's right to exist within secure borders in exchange for the return of Arab territory captured in the June, 1967, war.

Terzi told The Hearst Newspapers that the speech Thursday by Secretary of State George Shultz to the U.N. General Assembly marks a "very significant advance" in the peace process.

Shultz came closer than the U.S. ever had before to conceding the right of millions of Palestinians to a state of their own, declaring that the Palestinian refugees "need and deserve a place with which they can truly identify."

Shultz said "the Palestinian claim is undeniable." But he added the Palestinians must give Israel "what it so clearly has a right to demand, to exist in peace and security."

It's love, hate at first sight of new building

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — It stands brashly like a giant, multi-colored jukebox on the Portland skyline. It's called the Portland Building, and it's making architectural waves across the country.

"Either you love it or hate it," said Sara Roberts, an employee of the Portland Development Commission, the building's first tenant. "It's different. That's about all I can describe it as."

The tan, square, 15-story building has a blue base and looks roughly like an Egyptian temple. Concrete geometric designs in relief on the outside are painted in shades of blue and burgundy. The windows are square.

Archetype magazine has called the building "one of the most discussed works of architecture in this decade. It has enchanted and enraged architects and critics as well as politicians and citizens."

The building has been praised and castigated in such publications as Time magazine, Newsweek, The New York Times and the Wall Street Journal.

The building's creator is 47-year-old Michael Graves, a Princeton, N.J., architect who was the winner in a competition sponsored by the city of Portland for design of a building to consolidate many of the city's far-flung offices. It is his first major building, although he has a larger effort in progress in Louisville, Ky.

"He's very happy with the way things turned out," said Nick Gonser, Graves' assistant. "There are obviously things he would like to change. We wouldn't do the same things, exactly (again), but it was a big first step for us."

"There are many modern buildings that are exceedingly bland," Graves has said. "They've become blander and blander, cleaner and cleaner. There's less to love."

The city of Portland had something much less romantic in mind.

"What we were doing was rather mundane," said Earl Bradfish, director of Portland's Office of General Services. "We were trying to build an office building that we could afford."

Only Graves and one other architect brought in designs that met the city's price tag. The finished structure, including furnishings, cost $27.2 million.

From the beginning, the "post-modern" design raised the hackles of the architectural establishment. With its garlands and its art-deco appearance, it just didn't look like an office building. To top it off, the building will feature a statue of a woman called Portlandia over the entry.

Portland architect Richard Norman called the building "the funniest thing I have ever seen."

But, with the support of Mayor Frank Ivancie, the design was approved, with a few minor alterations. And the almost-finished product is to be dedicated this weekend.

Bradfish said he wasn't always pleased with the unconventional design, but "I can understand much better now what Graves was trying to do. He would like to include the craftsmanship of ancient architecture, but we don't do that anymore. We can't afford it."

So, Bradfish said, Graves substituted cheaper materials but stuck with the "post-modern" design.

The mayor is one of the building's biggest admirers. "It goes back to kind of a classical design," Ivancie said. "It incorporates color in the design."

Amerasians gain world experience

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — The 11 Amerasian children heading to new homes in the United States were excited at their first stopover here, mixing play and television-watching with getting vaccinations and U.S. passports.

The children, offspring of GIs and other Americans stationed in what was South Vietnam before it fell to the communists in 1975, are scheduled to leave Saturday for Hong Kong, then Los Angeles and separate flights to their new homes in five states and Washington, D.C.

Traveling with the children are nine Vietnamese relatives. They left Ho Chi Minh City, formerly Saigon, on Thursday in an arrangement coordinated by eight U.S. volunteer agencies. Twenty-six more children and 21 Vietnamese relatives are to leave Oct. 7.

Jean Marie Tanous, 15, whose father Gary Tanous went to Ho Chi Minh City for the flight, was excited about seeing her picture on the front page of a Bangkok newspaper Friday.

Jean Marie, who speaks little English, is the only child of Tanous, who met Jean Marie's mother while a civilian contractor in Vietnam. Tanous, now living in Vancouver, Wash., is divorced from Jean Marie's mother. His former mother-in-law is emigrating with Jean Marie.

Seven-year-old Khieu Thi My Phillips, a pretty girl with brown eyes and blond hair, typified some of the traumas that split families during the American evacuation of what was then Saigon.

She was born a few days before the city fell to the communists and was too weak to travel, according to adults in the group.

Her father and mother had to leave Khieu behind. She will join the Phillips family in Fairburn, Ga.

Khieu said through an interpreter that she enjoyed literature at school, and she thinks American children must be very happy. She said she is happy she is going to see her parents, but she doesn't really understand what is happening.

Nancy Yvonne Foster, 7, her mother and grandmother, were given two weeks notice that they could join Wendell H. Foster in Marietta, Ga. He was a U.S. government defense attaché during the war, and had to leave behind Nancy and her mother, who was too weak to travel after giving birth.

The mother, Trinh Thi Thai, had to let their house in Ho Chi Minh City revert to the state because she had no time to sell it, she said.

Kenneth Linh Brooks, a 14-year-old girl, is another child who has little firsthand knowledge of her father. She was visiting an aunt in the south of the country when Saigon fell.

Her mother, father, sister and brother are in Washington, D.C. Kenneth stayed with her grandmother, who received letters and money from her relatives in the United States. But Kenneth has never communicated directly with her parents.

The 11 children are all documented American citizens. Estimates vary on the number of American-fathered children left in Vietnam. The lowest estimate is about 8,000 and the highest 50,000. Many of those children were the result of fleeting liaisons.

Legislation pending in Congress would open a new category for those children who are not certified as being U.S. citizens, making it easier for them to leave. The Vietnamese government has said the United States has the responsibility to take every Vietnamese-American who wants to emigrate.

Tanous said the Vietnamese "have been very humanitarian and hope we will be the same." He says he spent $30,000 in a two-year campaign that led to the Amerasian airlift.

The Vietnamese-Americans are destined for Georgia, California, Arizona, Texas, Washington and Washington D.C.

Scrutiny afforded Northern California police department

A police department already under a federal court decree to improve its treatment of minorities has been accused in the chocking death of a black suspect — the fourth controversial death of a black involving police in two years.

The death Tuesday of Willie Lee Drumgoole came as Richmond is defending itself in federal court against wrongful death allegations in the shootings of two blacks by members of the Police Department.

And it follows several years of racial tension in this economically depressed industrial city, a half-black urban core 10 miles east of San Francisco.

"They consider this place the Mississippi of the West," said Oliver Jones, regional attorney for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

"Why should a city of 80,000 have such a disproportionate number of these police shootings?" Jones asked Friday.

"It's a police department which is virtually out of control," he charged.

A state report in April, prompted by attacks on black families in the suburbs in 1980 and 1981, sharply criticized city police and the Contra Costa County sheriff's office for their community relations with blacks.

A federal consent decree in 1981 settled 27 allegations of Richmond Police abuses. The department agreed to change its policies on use of force, to hire and promote more blacks and to improve activities with the black community.

...while in Garland, Texas, the Reighard family, Dang, bob and eight-year-old Brian, wait for Bob's 10-year-old son, Michael, to arrive from Vietnam. The Reighards have been trying for the past 10 years to gain the release of the boy, who was born in Vietnam.

Family anxiously awaits addition

DALLAS (AP) — A father who had to leave his Amerasian child behind during the American evacuation of South Vietnam said Friday even though he hasn't seen his son in 10 years, he knows him well.

Bob Reighard, a Rockwell International engineer at Dallas Love Field who lives in suburban Garland, said he was one of the last to flee South Vietnam when he was stationed in Bien Hoa with the Air Force.

"There was a time factor of less than two hours. My wife was undecided whether to come or not. Michael was only three months old at the time," Reighard said.

Michael was with his grandparents, too far way to reach before Reighard had to flee.

"We figured we could get him back. That's the toughest decision we've ever had to make," said Reighard.

Michael and 10 other children, all offspring of GIs and other Americans stationed in what was South Vietnam before it fell to the communists, are scheduled to leave Saturday for Hong Kong, then Los Angeles and separate flights to their new homes in five states and Washington D.C.

Michael will arrive Sunday at the Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport, Reighard said.

The children left Ho Chi Minh City, formerly Saigon, on Thursday in an arrangement coordinated by eight U.S. volunteer agencies. Twenty-six more children and 21 Vietnamese relatives are to leave Oct. 7.

Post-Paul cleanup under way

CULIACAN, Mexico (AP) — Cleanup crews worked Friday to open western coastal highways and clear debris left by Hurricane Paul, which killed eight people, left 24,000 homeless and destroyed an estimated $70 million in crops.

Coastal Highway 15 was cut by floodwaters in three places between Culiacan and Los Mochis, a city of 250,000 people 150 miles to the north, where the hurricane hit the mainland before dawn Thursday.

The Culiacan newspaper Noroeste said 3,000 to 5,000 stranded travelers, including American tourists, were waiting for the highway to reopen late Friday or early Saturday.

Humberto Millan, a spokesman for Sinaloa Gov. Antonio Toledo Corro, said eight people were killed in Guamuchil, 60 miles north of this state capital, when the bar where they were drinking was leveled by winds of more than 100 mph.

Millan said the storm destroyed the homes of 15,000 people in northern Sinaloa, including 5,000 in Los Mochis, the hardest hit area.

Guillermo Tapiz, deputy director of the Red Cross in La Paz, capital of South Baja California, said the number of homeless in that state exceeded 9,000. He said no deaths were reported.

Market exists for electronic data in home

NEW YORK (AP) — A two-year experiment by The Associated Press and 11 of its member newspapers has shown there is a substantial potential market for electronic home information services, according to a study released earlier this week.

The study also shows, however, that the market is still a highly specialized one and says more work must be done to improve the delivery and marketing of the information and to make it easier to use.

The report, by RMH Research Inc. of Fair Lawn, N.J., looked at several aspects of an experiment started in July 1980 by the AP in conjunction with CompuServe, a Columbus, Ohio, company which provides information on a variety of subjects to subscribers via home computers.

Among the key findings: — "About one out of six of all consumers nationwide are serious and current prospects for a service like CompuServe."

— "The potential market is greatest among young males in the high income group with above-average experience with computers, often as a result of their jobs."

THE TEST WAS DESIGNED, in part, to explore the potential for the electronic delivery of newspapers to the home and the impact such delivery would have on conventional readership habits. It found that in current form, services like CompuServe do not seem to affect readership of newspapers. Nor do they affect radio usage. The services do, however, cause a decrease in television viewing. (As currently designed, CompuServe requires the simultaneous use of a computer terminal, a television screen for viewing and a telephone to hook up with the central database.)

There were two major groups of participants in the study — regular CompuServe subscribers who paid for the service and a special test panel of approximately 100 people who were given free computer terminals and free use of the service for a limited period. The test panel was selected to represent the public at large from among a group of individuals who had indicated they accepted the concept of information delivered to the home electronically; slightly less than one-third of the test panel decided to continue the service on a paid basis.

The participants had access to more than 150 databases, including games, electronic editions of the newspapers involved, the AP report, business information, personal computing services, shopping materials, etc. The RMH study focused mainly on the use of the informational portions of the service.

RMH RESEARCHERS SAID "the desire to be better informed, the novelty value...and the perceived convenience of electronically

Older Americans facing higher bills for health care due to tax increase

By The Associated Press

Older Americans face higher health-care bills as a result of inflation and the recently passed tax increase.

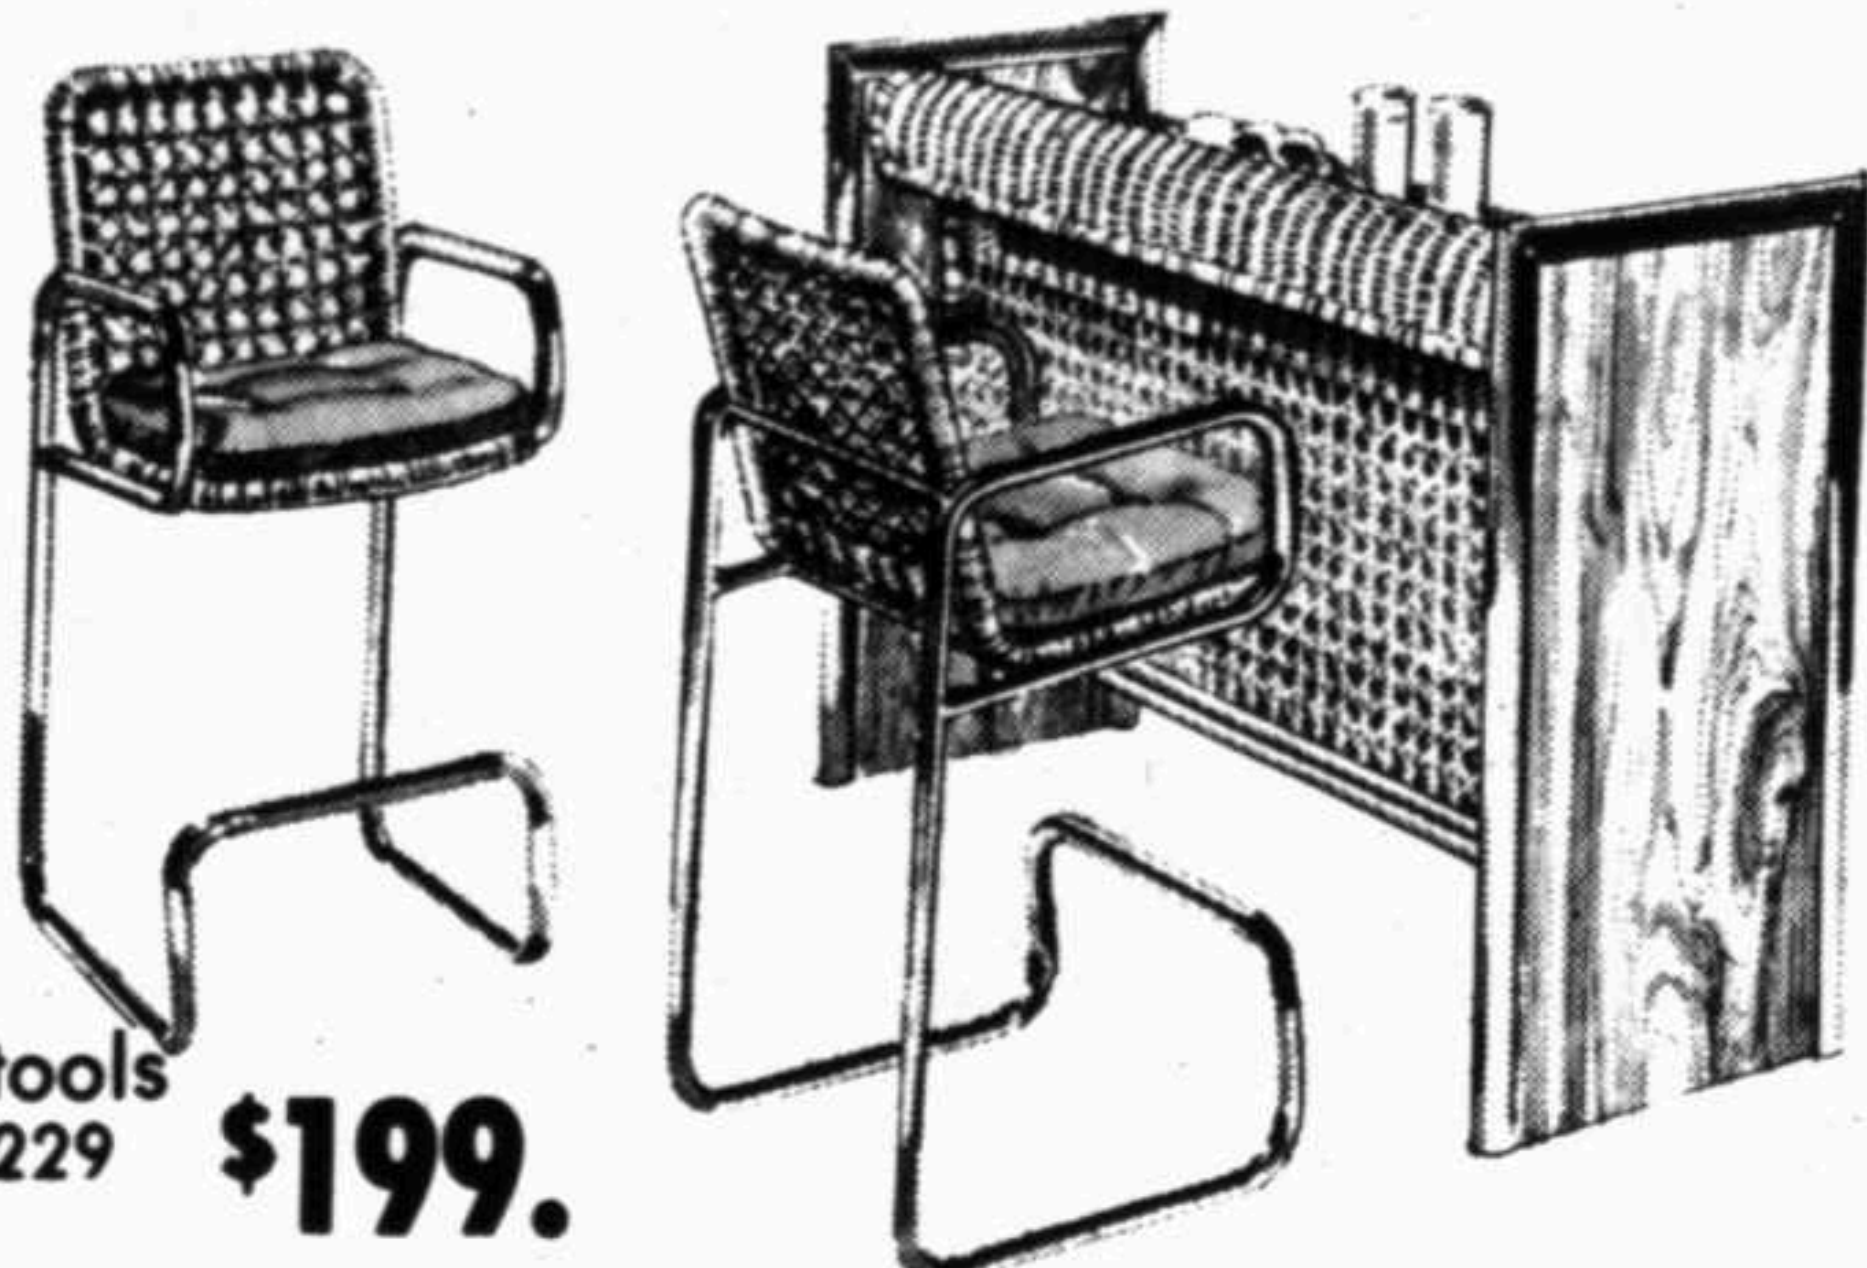

Most of the attention focused on the 1982 Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act has centered on the tax increases in the law. But the measure also included $15.2 billion in spending cuts over three years and the biggest chunk of the cuts affects the Medicare program.

Medicare is the federal government's health insurance plan for people 65 or over. It also covers people with permanent kidney failure and certain other disabled individuals.

Studies by public and private groups have shown that Medicare generally pays somewhere in the range of 40 percent of the health-care expenses for the elderly.

There are two sections to Medicare — Part A, which provides hospital insurance and Part B for medical coverage. You are eligible for hospital insurance at age 65 if you have worked long enough to be insured under Social Security or the railroad retirement system or you are entitled to monthly Social Security or railroad retirement benefits. You also are eligible under special conditions if you are disabled or suffer from kidney failure. If you meet the eligibility standards, there are no monthly premiums.

Senate committee OKs economist

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Banking Committee is endorsing President Reagan's nomination of Martin S. Feldstein as new chief White House economist even though Republicans as well as Democrats on the panel oppose his controversial positions on Social Security and housing.

By a strict party-line vote of 7-5, the Republican-controlled committee recommended Thursday that the Senate confirm the conservative Harvard professor's appointment as chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers.

The Senate is not expected to act on the nomination, until it returns in November from its election recess.

Democrats who voted against the 42-year-old Feldstein complained he is a foe of Social Security and the housing industry and a millionaire who is out of touch with average working Americans.

Even Republicans who supported the nomination said they do not endorse Feldstein's views on such sensitive subjects as Social Security.

Feldstein has proposed in the past that the growth of the retirement system's benefits be slowed. With the congressional elections little more than a month away, no senator seemed eager to embrace such a politically treacherous position.

Committee Chairman Jake Garn, R-Utah, said he was supporting the nomination mainly because Feldstein is well qualified for the post. "I don't agree with everything he says," Garn added.

Sen. John H. Chafee, R-R.I., said he supports the nomination because "the president should have the latitude in selecting advisers."

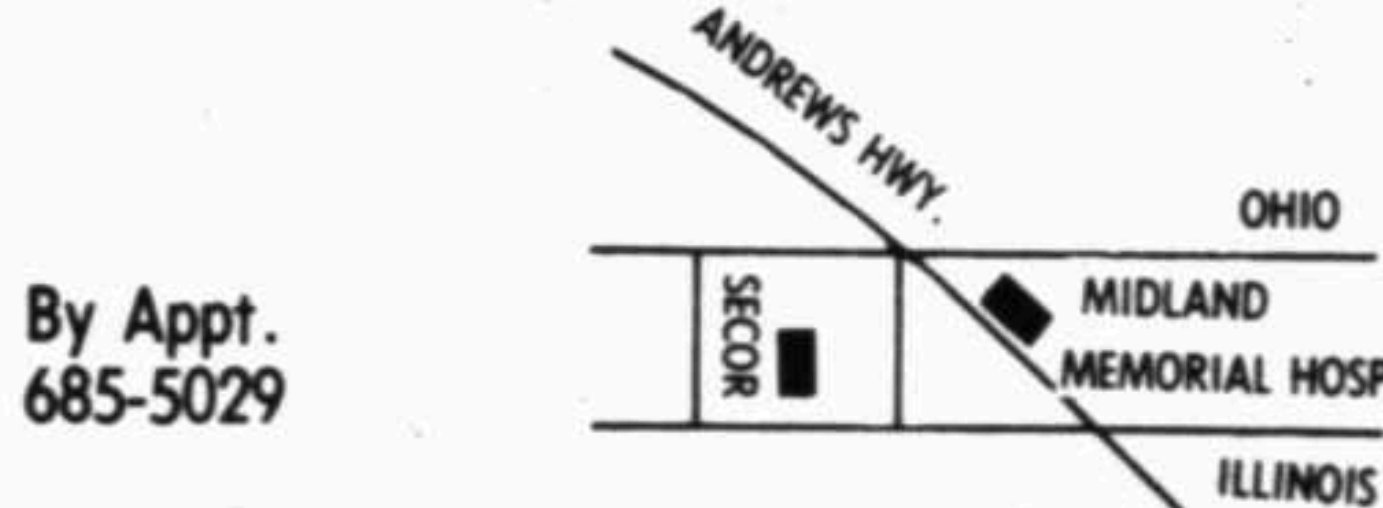

"In voting for him, I'm not endorsing his views on Social Security and housing," Chafee added.

Feldstein, regarded by other economists as one of the brightest economic thinkers in the country, would succeed Murray L. Weidenbaum.

THE STUDY SHOWED several concerns among CompuServe users and said research suggested that "cost per se may not be the issue, but rather value."

It said there is evidence that "the CompuServe product as currently configured does not measure up to consumer expectation," and said that resistance to price might decline "if the benefits desired by consumers could be identified and adequately addressed by the service."

Rate on 'all-savers' certificates still falling from record low

WASHINGTON (AP) — The interest rate on tax-exempt "all-savers" certificates, already at a record low, is falling again.

The Treasury said Thursday that beginning Sunday and continuing through Oct. 31, the rate will be 7.48 percent, down from the current 8.15 percent. When the one-year certificates were introduced last October, the rate was 12.61 percent.

"All-savers" interest is limited to 70 percent of the average annual investment yield on one-year Treasury bills, which are auctioned every four weeks. The yield in Thursday's auction was 10.68 percent, down from the 11.64 percent of the Sept. 2 auction.

CHURCH OF GOD

Midland woman honored at St. Marks

Mrs. O.M. Lutton, a 41-year resident of Midland who played a role in several Midland organizations, will be honored for her 85th birthday at the 10:55 a.m. worship service of St. Mark's United Methodist Church, 1701 N. Main, on Sunday.

Although her birth date is three days later, church members chose this time to pay homage to "Miss Ellie," as she is called. At the close of the service, friends will have a chance to greet her.

Arrangements are being handled by Mrs. Lutton's church group, Wesleyan Circle, with June Chapman as circle chairman. Assisting is the Dorcas Sunday School Class, of which Mrs. Lutton is a member. Carrie Jo Miller will make a presentation.

This week, the First Wednesday luncheon of St. Mark's will dedicate its day to her, and all women of the church and her friends are invited. The noon meal will be served in the Fellowship Hall and the charge will be $3 per person. Reservations must be made by noon Tuesday with the church office, 683-3339.

Kathryn Tyra is chairman of the luncheon committee.

Mrs. Lutton, who resides at Trinity Towers, has held offices in numerous organizations and served on committees promoting Midland.

She was on the first board of the Midland Youth Center and helped draft plans for the initial Community Chest, which was the forerunner of the United Way. She was on the YMCA board to raise money for the building. Mrs. Lutton served as president of the Business and Professional Women's Club, president of the American Legion Auxiliary, president and treasurer of the En Amie club and was active in the American Association of University Women.

She is a life member and past officer in the United Methodist Women at First United Methodist Church where a circle is named for her, and at St. Mark's. She was a teacher of the Boone Bible Class at First Methodist and also taught the Dorcas Class at St. Mark's.

Alamo Heights Baptist Church's new sanctuary will be used for the first time Sunday. It houses 850 persons and was built at a cost of about $650,000.

Alamo Heights to open new sanctuary

Alamo Heights Baptist Church will hold its first service in its new sanctuary Sunday morning.

Alamo Heights started as a mission outreach of the Glenmore Baptist Church, beginning its work in borrowed space at Alamo Junior High School. Its first full time pastor was named in May 1960.

The church grew from its borrowed space at Alamo into its own building in 1961. Since that time the church has experienced an almost continuous growth.

In 1962, the first addition was added in the form of Sunday School space. In 1965, the Fellowship Hall was built, with the Youth Building being added in 1971. In 1974, the nursery wing, additional bathroom facilities and an office complex were built. In 1978, the additional Sunday School space to the south of the main building complex was constructed.

Majority of this work was done by donated labor of the church men directed by Bobby J. Trimble, chairman of the Long Range Planning and Building Committee. Other members of the committee are Paul Long, Kenneth Marks, Gene Butler, Charles Hill and Carroll Nall Sr.

Because of the church's continued growth, in 1981 Alamo launched a "Together we Build" program to erect a new sanctuary. The program was directed by the church's pastor, the Rev. Milo B. Arbuckle. This new facility will house 850 people at an estimated cost of $650,000.

St. Luke's Methodist to offer courses

Classes ranging from a course in comparative religion to one in creative cooking will be offered at St. Luke's United Methodist Church during the church's 1982 Lay Academy.

Fate of Raoul Wallenberg still unknown

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
Associated Press Writer

An unsung hero in a time of horror, he was once virtually unheard of in America. His name still is unfamiliar to many. Yet he's now seen as a champion of life in the midst of massive assaults on it. His own fate has become a strangely persisting mystery.

Some think he still lives, and seek to find out.

The question has been raised increasingly lately both in Christian and Jewish circles, in honoring a man whose deeds blazed with courage and compassion in the period of Nazism, a man named Raoul Wallenberg.

"One of the most saintly and self-sacrificing men of our time," said a recent U.S. convention of the Rabbinical Assembly, crediting him with saving the lives of about 100,000 Hungarian Jews.

The assembly urged the U.S. government "to exert every diplomatic effort to determine the true fate of this unique 'righteous man of the gentiles.'"

He was "once completely forgotten, but he now is very much alive everywhere," says his half-sister, Nina Lagergren, noting a spreading movement in the world to find and free him.

At a Lutheran college in Minnesota, Gustavus Adolphus College, which last month conferred an honorary degree in absentia on Wallenberg, British poet Stephen Spender called him a "shining example" of sanity in a time of insanity.

The U.S. Congress has granted honorary American citizenship to Wallenberg, an honor given only to one other person — the late Winston Churchill.

And the puzzle persists, amid sporadic, indirect clues, that Wallenberg still is alive somewhere in the Soviet prison system.

It would seem nearly impossible after 37 years, writes Harvey Rosenfeld in a new book, "Raoul Wallenberg, Swedish Angel of Rescue," but adds: "However, Raoul Wallenberg is an extraordinary individual whose deeds were seemingly impossible."

Just who was this belatedly but now much honored man, this hero looming out of the past?

Wallenberg was a young Swedish Lutheran who knew his Bible and studied it regularly. Although a Christian, his maternal great-grandmother was of Jewish descent, converted to Christianity in the 18th century.

In his youth, he lived for four years in the United States, studying architecture at the University of Michigan from 1931-35. On return to his homeland, he became a builder and businessman.

But in the throes of World War II, the Swedish government enlisted him at the age of 32 into diplomatic service. He was sent to Budapest, Hungary on July 9, 1944, in the midst of Nazi drives to round up Jews and transport them to death camps.

Over the next seven months "at great risk to his life," he "worked tirelessly to extend protection to some 20,000 Jews by means of special protective passports," read the citation from Gustavus Adolphus College.

It said efforts by him and some other diplomats, by contrived documents or otherwise, enabled another 100,000 Jews to escape the Nazi slaughter.

Rosenfeld's new biography says Roman Catholicism's papal nuncio in Budapest at the time, Msgr. Angelo Rotta, collaborated with Wallenberg by also providing thousands of protective passes.

Private, handwritten letters from the late Pope Pius XII are cited, urging the nuncio to "do everything in his power" to protect and shelter the persecuted.

Board member to give talk

Patricia Lyeth Webb, a member of the Christian Science Board of Lectureship, will give a free lecture at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the First Church of Christ Scientist, 1001 W. Tennessee at C Street.

The lecture on "Christian Science: The Healing Power of Prayer" deals with why Christian Scientists place so much reliance on prayer for healing.

The public is invited.

Women witness prayer's power at pivotal moments in their lives

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Life has its crossroads, its searing intervals when a person momentarily isn't sure which way to go or what to do, but in which situation compels a choice. Out of experiencing such crises, four noted women say the answers come through prayer.

"In faith, you turn to the source in times of stress and there'll always be direction," says Coretta Scott King. "It may not be what you asked for, but it's what God wants you to do."

She says that was the determining factor, after a 1966 fire-bombing of her home where she and her first child were alone, that forged her initial, fateful commitment to the civil rights cause led by her late husband, Martin Luther King.

Shaken directly by the danger of it, "I had to do some deep soul searching about my commitment to the struggle. I knew I would have to be as committed as my husband." Then and there, in earnest prayer, cradling her child outside their blasted bedroom, she made her commitment, "prepared for whatever might take place."

"It ultimately did," she adds of the 1968 assassination of King. She and the other three women appeared on a panel at the recent Episcopal Church convention here, describing differing critical times in their lives when they say they found God's guidance through prayer.

The others were Margaret Dehqani-Tafti, who with her husband was nearly killed in Iran and whose son was slain there; Louisa Kennedy, whose husband was among U.S. hostages held in Iran, and U.S. Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor.

Mrs. Dehqani-Tafti, wife of the Anglican bishop in Iran, told of his being marked for death by the revolutionaries there and of three Iranian gunmen crashing into their bedroom late one night as they slept.

"God gave me the power at that moment to throw myself over his body," she said. Five shots were fired, all of them missing. "In that instant I was aware of the concerned prayers of thousands around the world."

Afterward, she said, "we realized that God still had some work for us." They managed to get out of the country, but their only son was slain by assassins, "an act of revenge because they had missed his father," she said.

Man who has built custom guitars now building dream

By BILL POTEAT

MORGANTON, N.C. (AP) — He has built custom guitars for Barbara Mandrell, Tex Ritter, Buck Owens and Glen Campbell and he has made music in Hollywood and Nashville recording studios.

Now, however, he is building a dream in Jonas Ridge, fashioning what was once a school and then a community center in the small mountain hamlet into a gospel entertainment and education complex.

Outward manifestations of Semie Mosley's dream are already apparent: the large, red-lettered "Gospel Encounters Music Hall" sign which hangs on the front of his building; the newly carpeted floor of the old auditorium; the installation of an elaborate sound and light system.

These improvements represent just the beginning of what Mosley hopes will grow into an established concert hall, a school with classrooms and dormitories, a recording studio and a custom guitar production center.

THE STORY OF HOW Mosley came to purchase the old Jonas Ridge school building and begin his work there is one of opportunity combined with luck, and of tragedy overcome by faith.

A native of Arkansas, Mosley moved to California as a child and knew at an early age that the making of music, particularly gospel music, was to be his calling in life.

He left school and joined his first gospel singing group in the 7th grade. Later, he got a job in a California guitar factory where he learned to build custom guitars but was fired when he began to make his own instruments.

Mosley went into business for himself, but he felt he was destined to do other work.

"I always had a desire and a vision to build a gospel entertainment and educational center," he said. "I wanted a school that would teach drama, music, the arts and production techniques."

Mosley had his dream, but he had no place to locate it. A visit to Jonas Ridge in the summer of 1981 changed that, however.

"MY WIFE WAS BORN in Jonas Ridge and went to school here for two years but I had never been here," Mosley recalled. "She told me, 'I want to show you North Carolina.' So we loaded up the car and came here, not planning to stay very long."

At the same time, the Jonas Ridge Improvement Corporation, which had owned the old school building since the late 1960s, was looking to sell the structure, built by the Works Projects Administration during the Depression and completed in 1939.

After discussing the matter with his wife, Mosley agreed to an option to buy the building for $45,000. After presenting a concert in August, Mosley and his wife began the drive back to California, planning to return to Jonas Ridge as soon as possible.

The future, Mosley remembered, looked very bright as they began the journey west. He had found the building he wanted and had just signed a contract with a Japanese firm to produce 500 guitars.

Rev. Dilday to preach at Crestview revival

The Rev. Donald G. Dilday of Navasota will be the preaching evangelist in a fall revival at Crestview Baptist Church, 3300 Thomas Ave., beginning Sunday.

Dilday, a native of Amarillo, is pastor of the First Baptist Church at Navasota. A graduate of Baylor University and Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Fort Worth, Dilday was vice president of the Baptist General Convention of Texas. He currently serves as a member of the Sunday School Board of the Southern Baptist Convention.

Dick Baker, well-known music evangelist and minister of music at Prestonwood Baptist Church in Dallas, will be leading the singing. Since 1956, Baker has been involved in an international ministry including crusades with Billy Graham.

The public is invited. Services will be held Sunday at 8:30 and 10:50 a.m. and 7 p.m. and Monday through Wednesday at 7:30 p.m.

Hearing of his troubles and his plans, an old friend of Mosley's in the music business loaned him the money to make the down payment on the building and in December 1981, as the harsh cold of winter was descending upon the mountains, Mosley and his wife returned to Jonas Ridge.

Israel's U.S. ambassador, Moshe Arens, tough, credible

By DONNIE RADCLIFFE
The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — On Friday, Sept. 17, Israeli Ambassador Moshe Arens and Prime Minister Menachem Begin skipped their regular midnight call. It was Rosh Hashanah, the Jewish new year, and the beginning of the High Holy Days.

So it was that the first Arens knew of the Beirut massacre was from the newspapers he read before he left for the synagogue on Saturday.

"At that point," Arens said later, "there really was not much more than an inkling. It didn't sound good."

After the five-hour worship service at Adas Israel Synagogue in Washington, Arens and his wife, Muriel, joined Rabbi Stanley Rabinowitz for a small, private luncheon at his home.

"At the luncheon table we talked about the massacre at length," recalled Rabinowitz. "The ambassador was obviously distressed and we didn't press him. The facts were not in."

During lunch, Arens was summoned to the telephone and told that Secretary of State George P. Shultz wanted to see him at the State Department. When Arens left, he went directly to the embassy and called Defense Minister Ariel Sharon.

THAT WAS WHEN HE "got the first information about the dimensions of the tragedy and the circumstances of it," he said.

The meeting with Shultz lasted nearly 30 minutes, and afterwards, Arens drove home, where he again telephoned Israel. This time he spoke with Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir, passing along Shultz's demand that Israel withdraw from Beirut immediately. Throughout the evening he worked with his staff on the official statement to the press, which began, "Israel expresses its dismay and shock at the killing in Beirut..." and he concurred with a decision to turn down a television appearance the next morning on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley."

"We figured it was better to wait for more information," said press counselor Nachman Shai.

For the second night in a row, despite the rumblings of a growing storm in Israeli-American relations, the Israeli ambassador went to bed without speaking to his prime minister. It was the second night of Rosh Hashanah.

In his seven months here as Menachem Begin's ambassador, Moshe Arens has weathered some stormy moments in Israel's traumatic history: the return of the Sinai, the invasion of Lebanon and now the Beirut massacre.

ARENS, WHO IS ONLY THE seventh ambassador from Israel to the United States, its most steadfast ally, talked about the massacre in an interview last week.

"We have before us an event of unparalleled tragedy," he said, sitting in his second-floor office at the Israeli Embassy. "Since the creation of Israel in 1948, I don't remember one that was itself so terribly painful and the cause for such horror."

As Israel's man on the spot charged with explaining the actions and policies of the increasingly controversial Begin government, the 56-year-old Arens has earned a reputation for coolheaded credibility. He is a political hawk who eschews the emotional for the more clinical approach in interpreting Israeli events and policies. Yet that day, as accusations against the Begin government were mounting, even he seemed somewhat shaken.

"We've never had that kind of tragic event, with the ramifications and the things that were said between the United States and Israel, between Americans and Israelis," he said. "In that sense it's a singular event in (the) relationship."

Asked whether he thought Begin would resign if it turned out that a member of his Cabinet was implicated, Arens replied, "I doubt it." But, he added, "If in parliament it became clear to a majority of members... that the government had not acted effectively, that the prime minister had not, it would bring the government down."

UNHESITATING IN HIS AMERICAN ENGLISH, perfected as an adolescent growing up in New York City's Washington Heights, he rushed on.

"We don't have all the details... I think there is every reason to believe it was stopped as early as it possibly could have been stopped... I don't know if it will become apparent that some sergeant knew about it maybe six hours before the Israeli army went in to stop it. But it's not a sergeant who can stop this sort of thing... the United States Marines had left, the French Foreign Legion had left. Had it not been for the action of the Israeli army, I guess it would have been far more horrible, if we can imagine such a thing."

Whatever the circumstances, Arens continued, he was certain that in Israel all the facts would come out.

"It's a very free and open society," he said, perhaps an understatement in light of the massive demonstrations that soon followed in Israel. Expressions of outrage and demands for an independent investigation have shaken the country and culminated in the largest protest rally in Israel's history.

ARENS' PERFORMANCE SINCE HIS arrival in Washington has earned him admiration. Despite his businesslike approach — some have called him humorless — he is regarded as an ideologue with a streak of independence and a firm grasp of Begin's policies.

"He's under enormous pressure and in great demand, yet there is an ease about him, a neatness in how he handles things. I've seen him field a lot of questions, yet people don't feel threatened," said Warren Eisenberg, a director of the B'nai B'rith International Council, one of a number of American Jewish groups in recent days seeking clarification of Begin's policies.

"He is very straightforward, very tough and never beats around the bush," said ABC-TV's "Nightline" anchorman Ted Koppel. "He is also there to protect Israel."

Arens was a guest on Koppel's show the night Lebanese President-elect Bashir Gamayel was assassinated.

Koppel: "It's been suggested that this creates something of a vacuum in Beirut and Israel may now feel the need to move in and fill that vacuum."

Arens: "It isn't Israel's job to move in and fill that vacuum. It is Israel's objective as it is the American objective, as I understand it, that an independent, sovereign Lebanon be reconstituted..."

KOPPEL SAID LATER THAT EITHER Arens did not know the Israelis were at that moment moving in on West Beirut or he was not going to say, "But I don't think any ambassador ever comes on 'Nightline' unless he perceives it in his country's best interest."

The Israeli Embassy called it "a misunderstanding" and then began to limit Arens' television and radio appearances on grounds that it was "premature" for him to give interviews. Between Sept. 9 and Sept. 24 he had made nine appearances on television and two on radio.

"If there's a misunderstanding, then certainly the people who are responsible for transmitting messages in both directions carry a good share of the responsibility. That's myself, the United States ambassador in Israel and some of the other actors in the drama, though I don't mean to lay any blame here on Sam Lewis (U.S. ambassador to Israel), who is a good friend of mine," said Arens.

He cited two recent examples:

— Israel never intended to say that its military operation in Lebanon would be limited to an imaginary line drawn 40 kilometers north of its borders.

— Neither did Israel intend to make an absolute commitment that its army would never enter West Beirut.

HE SAID THAT IN NEGOTIATING the evacuation of Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas from West Beirut, nobody foresaw the assassination of the Lebanese president-elect, or raised the question of whether under such circumstances the Israeli army would move in.

"So you can begin to make some excuses for the people involved," he said. "A lot of misunderstandings have to do with second-guessing future circumstances that really are not fully envisaged."

Major-domo of 'Dynasty' has commanding screen presence

By Dorothy Treloar
Hearst Feature Service

HOLLYWOOD — One of the most intriguing characters on "Dynasty" is Lee Bergere, who portrays Joseph, the major-domo. He has a commanding presence.

There's that rather eerie pause and mysterious look that he gives before he delivers his lines. I ask Lee if Joseph has something on the Carrington family that will bring this plot to a boiling point in some future episode.

The tall, dark and handsome actor answers with an infectious laugh. "Oh, I hope so. I really don't know what's coming up in that area, but on our new season I end up with a daughter I haven't seen in years. She will be played by a beautiful actress, Kathleen Beller, who made such a hit in her movie, 'I Never Promised You a Rose Garden.'

"Strange you should mention my pauses," Lee says. "At first, our director thought I might want to rush into my new found daughter's arms. I think we have one of the most poignant scenes ever filmed of this sort. I'm just not one of those actors who rushes into anything, whether it be a scene or a job. I think it's paid off."

Ex-baseball player scores in new film

Hearst Feature Service

NEW YORK — Jim Metzler — ex-professional baseball pitcher, ex-sports writer and present-day actor — couldn't be happier if he won the Pulitzer and the pennant simultaneously.

Metzler's new movie, "Tex," opened the prestigious New York Film Festival this week — the first Disney film ever for the festival — and New York's normally caustic film critics haven't purred so contentedly over a film since the first screenings of "E.T."

While a predictable amount of attention has gone to teen idol Matt Dillon in the title role, Metzler's perfor-impressed. I waited for a week and finally called Lasko, who said, 'We're not pursuing it,' so I began telling him how good I thought the script was. Lasko finally got through the message that it was me that they weren't pursuing," Metzler remembers, with embarrassment.

A MONTH LATER, Metzler got a call from Lasko to come back for another reading.

"I was pretty bad, but Lasko worked with me for an hour and a half on the script, so I'd feel more comfortable for the reading with Penn the next day. It still didn't seem like a break-through audition to me," he says, "but it was."

Among film buffs, "Four Friends" proved to be one of the most talked-about film of the season, but audiences stayed away in droves. "It was a very grim portrait of young people in the '60s, and it came out at Christmas, which certainly didn't help," Metzler remembers. But the third-billing screen credit served as Metzler's resume and won him his job in "Tex" with only two readings.

With a screen career moving into high gear from a major performance in what may be the season's most critically-approved movie, Metzler has made the breakthrough denied most young actors. But what about baseball?

"I miss it," he admits. "Acting is my 'second' first love."

Peter Fonda glad to be in Henry Fonda's shadow

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Peter Fonda, who fought so hard to establish his own identity as an actor, says if anybody asks him now if he's Henry Fonda's son he will answer, "You bet. That's who I am."

Prior to the death of his father on Aug. 12, he said he'd say, "It's a biological fact, but it's not fair of you to label me because of it."

"Now, with Henry's death, all that's blown away like ash from the table."

"For the rest of my life, my fate is sealed," Fonda said. "I'm Henry's son."

mance as Tex's older brother has won the type of bankable notices that any actor would prize.

Metzler plays a 17-year-old in "Tex" — his second film — and is reluctant to reveal his real age, which probably is in the high 20s. His handsome, wholesome features mark him as the refreshing "ordinary hero" type of screen presence that hasn't been seen much since Henry Fonda's early screen portrayals.

BORN IN ONEONTA, N.Y., Metzler grew up in a series of small towns on the east coast, moving as his father — a Sears executive — was transferred. Metzler was captain of the baseball team at Dartmouth College. On graduation day he moved to Elmira, N.Y., for his first season of minor league pro ball.

As that season drew to a close, Metzler found himself in Newburgh, N.Y., where he had lived for several years as a child. As luck would have it, he ran into the sports editor of the Newburgh Evening News and Metzler's second career was born.

"The sports editor ran all the baseball leagues and had given me a lot of press when I was 11, so he remembered me, and offered me a job as a sports reporter," Metzler says.

The job lasted five months until Metzler reported for spring training in Winter Haven, Fla., with a Boston Red Sox farm team. But four months later he was released and returned to Newburgh for a year as a sports reporter before deciding to become an actor.

METZLER MOVED TO New York City and appeared in "two off-off Broadway plays that probably were seen by a total of 200 people." Things were grim economically, but his acting teacher, Eulalie Noble, was working at the time with film director Arthur Penn at Actors' Studio, and Penn asked her to pass along any of her promising students as possibilities for a new film called "Four Friends" that he was casting. Noble recommended Metzler.

Metzler's first step was a meeting with Gene Lasko, the casting director. "He gave me a script, told me to pick a scene and come back later to do a monologue. So I did, reading for him and Penn, but they weren't

Vengeful Hogs await Froggies

By Associated Press

As if things weren't tough enough for Texas Christian Coach F.A. Dry, he has to play a team Saturday with a grudge against the Horned Frogs. "I was in Arkansas this summer and everyone I ran into said the Razorbacks were going to get even with us for what happened last year," Dry said.

What happened in 1981 was TCU driving 99 yards in the final minute of the game to beat Arkansas 28-24.

It was the first time the Razorbacks had lost to TCU since now retired Dallas Cowboy Bob Lilly was a sophomore for the Horned Frogs.

"It was a totally humiliating experience," recalls Arkansas defensive end Billy Ray Smith. "I'll never forget it."

TO MAKE sure the Razorbacks don't forget it, the defensive coaches wore T-shirts this week with "99 yards" on them.

Arkansas was a 12-point favorite to get sweet revenge on TCU in a 7:05 p.m. kickoff to be televised by Ted Turner's WTBS Cable.

It's just one of three Southwest Conference games to be televised over the weekend on a $1.5 million payday for the schools in the league.

Baylor was a one-point pick over Houston in their 11:30 a.m. matchup in Waco to be televised over ABC.

THE TEXAS AGGIES were 13-point favorites to whip Texas Tech at College Station in a 2:45 p.m. game over CBS.

In games that have to be attended to be seen, Texas was a 21-point favorite to blast Rice in Houston while Southern Methodist was a three-touchdown selection over North Texas State in the only non-conference game.

The SWC is 13-9 in intersectional games and an SMU victory would assure the conference its 11th straight winning non-conference season.

Baylor and SMU are tied for the lead atop the SWC standings with 1-0 records.

The only remaining unbeaten SWC teams are SMU, Texas, and Arkansas.

BAYLOR COACH Grant Teaff told his Bears not to be deceived by Houston's 1-2 ledger.

"This is a very typical Houston team," Teaff said. "They have an experienced offensive line and some tough running backs. And the team that has won this game has won the SWC the past four of six years...so it's a very big ballgame."

Their first two games were against top-ranked teams but they didn't have (quarterback Lionel) Wilson at full throttle in those games either. He was full throttle last Saturday against Lamar."

The Tech-A&M game is expected to be a wild passing show.

"We have not seen the caliber of quarterback this season that we will be seeing Saturday," said Tech Coach Jerry Moore, still looking for his first SWC victory. "We expect him to throw 40 to 45 times."

The Aggies, last in the SWC in pass defense, expect the same kind of passing blitz from Tech quarterback Jim Hart.

"I would think Tech will come out throwing after looking at films of our previous games," said A&M Coach Jackie Sherrill. "We need to get better quick."

SMU WILL not know until kickoff whether quarterback Lance McIlhenny will be able to start because of a sprained arch suffered in last week's 16-13 victory over TCU.

Jeff Courtland will get the nod if SMU's All-SWC junior can't play.

Rice will be looking for its first victory after losing to three Louisiana schools, Southeastern Louisiana, Tulane and LSU.

Rebels upset Bobcats to stay alive in 4-5A, 20-14

Lee knocks off fourth-ranked team in Texas

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

SAN ANGELO—Fighting their way back to life in District 4-5A football player can be a hazardous assignment, but the Midland Lee Rebels did just that here Friday night with an upset-minded 20-14 victory over the highly-talented San Angelo Bobcats.

This wasn't just any victory, it was over San Angelo, the No. 4 ranked team in the state, and in their own backyard. It didn't come easy, but the win vaulted the Rebels right back into the thick of the 4-5A chase after a 10-7 loss to Odessa one week ago in the league opener.

Now, San Angelo heads for a dire meeting with Odessa Permian next week in Odessa and the league is again a topsy-turvy mess.

"If it's any harder to get back into the race than what we went through tonight, we're just not going to make it," said an elated Lee Coach Spike Dykes with about 20 Rebel well-wishers hanging from his neck.

AND IT wasn't easy. No. 4 San Angelo didn't get the ice pick in the heart until the clock read 0:00 at the Lee 37 with Rebel defenders Scott Ackroyd and David Hastings dropped around Bobcat fullback Bevans Hoffman.

It was finally over and San Angelo had returned to the land of mortals.

Trailing 20-6, San Angelo scored on a one-yard Hoffman plunge with 4:26 left in the game and narrowed it to 20-14 when Trey Wright converted two points by running through Lee's Leonard Freeman and Luther Johnson.

The Bobcats got the ball back at their own 20 with 1:25 left and marched as far as the Lee 34 before Hastings and Ackroyd put an end to it all.

"The Bobcats showed a lot of heart and they were trying until the end. It was one of those games where you hate to see anyone being the loser," Dykes said.

LEE GAINED a 20-6 lead in the fourth period after leading 13-0 at half, and it was a Bobcat turnover that provided the margin of victory for the Rebels. In fact, the Rebels converted two Bobcat fumbles into points, and that was the big difference.

Lee's Gregg Woodberry recovered a Hoffman fumble at the San Angelo 30 from where the Rebs marched winward in eight plays with quarterback Mike Mercurio getting the final yard over center Kerry Robertson and Robertson, who missed his second extra point try of the night, converted for the 20-6 lead.

It was then that San Angelo began to rally behind quarterback Jeff Schkade. They marched 84 yards in 14 plays to make it close, but lost their last gasp effort to the clock and Rebel defense. Schkade completed 11 of 19 passes for 147 yards and the Bobcats added 178 rushing. Lee countered with 188 rushing and 19 passing, but the Rebels never trailed in the game, facing most of their problems in the final period.

However, San Angelo showed it wouldn't lay down and die after marching 69 yards with the second half kickoff for its first score, a one-yard plunge by Hoffman. Wright, who led all rushers with 97 yards, did most of the damage on a patented San Angelo sweep. Junior fullback Isaac Garnett, who led Lee with 89 yards rushing, knocked the cobwebs out of the Lee offense on Lee's first possession of the night. Lee marched 64 yards in nine plays for a 7-0 lead with Garnett carrying seven times for 56 of those yards, including runs of 39 and 11 yards.

Midland High Bulldog Alex Mata (21) has Big Spring quarterback Adam Rodriguez (11) by the shirt sleeve while teammate Gary Russell (50 on ground) goes for the ankle Friday night at Memorial Stadium. Meanwhile, Bulldogs Bobby Hillin (68) and Jody Williamson (40) give pursuit.

Steers win as turnovers do in Bulldogs

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Four second half turnovers, three interceptions and a fumble, stopped Midland High's offensive attack Friday night as the Bulldogs lost to District 4-5A opponent Big Spring by a 9-6 count at Memorial Stadium.

The turnover that did the most damage in the second half came midway through the third quarter with Big Spring leading 9-2. The Bulldogs opened the quarter kicking off to Big Spring and tallied its first points of the game when the Steers' return man, Lou Collins, fielded the kick inside the five-yard line and ran into the end zone where he downed the ball for a safety, the first of three for MHS in the game.

On the ensuing free kick, MHS started a drive from its own 37-yard line and methodically moved the ball 58 yards down field until, on a third-and-four situation on Big Spring's five-yard line, the Steers recovered quarterback Mark Page's fumbled pitchout on the nine.

But the "Dawgs" were there. With the ball deep in their own territory, the Steers picked up a quick first down when fullback Danny Stephen picked up 19 yards to the 28. With the help of a 10-yard penalty and a behind-the-line-of-scrimmage tackle on Stephen, the Steers were pushed back to the 15.

Quarterback Adam Rodriguez attempted a pitchout that went sailing into the end zone where he caught up with the ball and fell on it for another safety. There was 4:59 left on the clock.

On their next possession, with the ball on MHS' six-yard line, Rodriguez lost the snap from center Emmitt Bartee through his legs and the ball rolled out of the end zone for the third safety of the quarter with 1:03 left in the frame.

DEFENSIVELY, MIDLAND High was all over Big Spring in the second half, allowing only 17 plays for 15 yards, but the offense wasn't there.

Three times in the fourth quarter Midland High was able to break into

Big Spring territory to threaten and three times the Bulldogs were turned back, once on a missed fourth down and passing attempt and twice on interception. A third interception was hauled down by Big Spring near mid field.

The Steers took advantage of Midland High's offensive mistakes early in the game when defensive back Jay Prikle picked off his first of two interceptions on the night at the Bulldog 30-yard line and ran it into the end zone for a touchdown and a 6-0 lead. MHS got a break when kicker Carl Green's point-after attempt hit the right upright and was deflected away from the target.

Green made up for his missed PAT in the second quarter by kicking a 40-yard field goal to put the Steers ahead 9-0. It was the only drive Big Spring was able to put together on the night and it covered 66 yards in nine plays. The Dawgs were three seconds away from halftime when the kick was made.

That drive also produced most of the Steers offensive yardage in the game. Rodriguez, who was 8-of-18 for 96 yards, completed 4-of-8 passes for 71 yards (Big Spring was hit with a five-yard penalty) including a 32-yard completion to wide receiver Robert Porras that set up the field goal.

ON THE night, Midland High held Big Spring to 131 yards of which only 15 were given up in the second half. The Bulldogs were able to move the ball against the Steers, but not enough to overcome the turnover ratio of 5-0. On the ground Midland High gained 114 yards led by Raymond Chambers with 59 on 16 carries and Ricky Madrid with 15-for-44.

Tight end Chuck Dickenson caught four of Page's five completed passes for 58 yards.

The loss dropped MHS to 1-5 on the season and 0-2 in 4-5A play while Big Spring improved to 3-2 and 1-1.

Next week the Bulldogs begin a tough two-week road schedule, meeting Abilene Cooper at P.E. Shotwell Stadium next week followed by Odessa High at Ratliff Stadium.

Panthers, Bronchos only teams unbeaten in 4-5A

The District 4-5A all ready has the two front runners for the two available spots in the State Playoffs, and both teams are from Odessa.

Friday night, last year's defending district champion, Odessa Permian scored a 30-0 victory over previously unbeaten (in league play) Abilene High while Odessa High blitzed 0-1 Abilene Cooper 34-8. The victories, combined with losses to Abilene High and San Angelo leave the Odessa schools as the only unbeaten in 4-5A play.

Permian's Mike Troglin led the scoring for the Panthers with two 18-yard touchdown runs while Britt Hager tallied one from two yards out and John Hamilton scored one from 30. Kicker Bobby Knott added one extra point in three attempts but made up for the misses bonuses with a 47-yard field goal. Permian got its first points of the game in the opening quarter on safety from a bad snap on a AHS punt attempt.

Odessa High put on an offensive display in Ratliff Stadium against Cooper with a 480-yard performance of which 342 were gained on the ground.

The victory gives Odessa High a 4-1 record overall and a 2-0 league mark while Cooper is 0-2 in 4-5A play.

Crane loses battle, wins game, 23-14

BY CHAD PUERLING

MCCAMEY — It was an old story as McCamey won the battle but lost the war 23-14 to Crane. The Badgers won the statistical battle but lost the important numbers, the ones on the scoreboard, in dropping their second straight game, both to a class AAA school.

McCamey rolled up 328 yards of offense while limiting the Golden Cranes to 259 yards, but four lost fumbles and a pass interception was too much to give to a team like Crane.

"Turnovers lost the game for us," McCamey head coach Larry Nabors said. "You just can't give a team like Crane the ball that many times and expect to win."

The victory gave the Golden Cranes a 5-0 mark, a delight after last year's 0-10 season.

"Last year we cried alone," said Crane head mentor Rickey White. "This year the whole school and city celebrate with us. It's a good feeling."

Crane scored the first time they had the ball when Junior Sena broke for a 22-yard scamper to cap off a 55-yard, five play drive.

McCamey came back with a nifty 75-yard drive in five plays when Robert Day plunged over from the one, tying the score 7-7.

The first quarter was an offensive show as both teams score two touchdowns with Crane falling behind by one point when McCamey's Bucky Watson blocked the PAT.

McCamey took the lead when quarterback Ray Zarate scored from the one-yard line after Jodee Stephens intercepted a Eugene Morris pass, giving the Badgers a first down on Crane's 36-yard line.

But on the following possession the Golden Cranes drove 64 yards in nine plays to draw within one. Quarterback Morris handed off to Jeff Pinkston who faked the run then returned the ball to Morris with a perfectly thrown, 18-yard scoring pass. Junior Bishop's PAT attempt was blocked.

Crane took the lead for good when Bishop kicked a 20-yard field goal with 4:10 left in the half.

On Crane's first play from scrimmage in the second half, tailback Ramirez went 42 yards for the TD on a pitchout.

Roswell defeats Portales

PORTALES (AP) — Two touchdown runs by Darin Robertson and a raft of Portales turnovers helped boost No. 2-ranked Class AAAA Roswell to an 18-6 victory over the No. 1-ranked Class AAA Portales Rams in high school football action Friday night.

The loss brings the Rams' record to 3-2, while Roswell remains undefeated.

Portales scored in the first quarter on a 17-yard pass from quarterback Ed Loehr to Rod Simon. The six points were the only ones the Rams were to earn.

The Coyotes held the Rams to 89 yards rushing, but Portales made up for it in passing, gaining 122 yards.

Durango 38, Goddard 7

ROSWELL (AP) — Tailback Mike Maynes ran for a trio of touchdowns and 108 yards Friday night to lead unbeaten Durango, Colo., to a 38-7 romp over Roswell Goddard in state prep football action.

Maynes scored on runs of 3, 29 and 6 yards as Durango ran its record to 5-0. Goddard dropped to 0-4.

Artesia 7, Fabens 6

FABENS, Texas (AP) — A late four-quarter touchdown run by quarterback Scott Runyan and the conversion by kicker Leroy Richards lifted struggling Artesia to a 7-6 prep football win over Fabens, Texas Friday night.

Artesia, which had lost four straight games, went into the fourth quarter trailing 6-0. Fabens had built the shaky lead on field goals of 36 and 42 yards by Martin Renteria.

Fabens had a chance to win the game in the final seconds, but a 26-yard field goal attempt by Renteria was blocked by Artesia's defense with six seconds left.

Carlsbad 9, Alamogordo 0

CARLSBAD (AP) — No. 3 ranked Carlsbad, behind a Jeff Gray field goal and touchdown run by Jimmy Townley, wore down stubborn Alamogordo for a 9-0 non-district win Friday night in prep football action.

Red Devils massacre Buena Vista, 62-0

RANKIN—Halfback Dennis Black scored five touchdowns and passed for a two-point conversion as Rankin's rampaging Red Devils massacred Buena Vista, 62-0, in a District 6-A football game here Friday night.

Black scored Rankin's first three touchdowns on runs of eight, 64 and 22 yards as Jesse Hernandez, who converted six times, kicked the extra points.

Quarterback Quad Midkiff then broke the monotony by throwing a 10-yard touchdown pass, to Black, naturally.

Wingback Frank Quiroz scored on TD runs of 10 and six yards while fullback Todd Ratliff tallied on a couple of two yard runs.

Rankin scored four times in the final period, with Black contributing a 47-yarder.

Statistically, the game was just as one-sided as the score with rolling up 24 first downs to three and 309 yards rushing to none. The Longhorns threw 15 times, completing two to fellow Longhorns and three to Red Devils.

Greenwood 'kicks' Robert Lee, 14-12

ROBERT LEE—A couple of extra point conversions by quarterback Stewart Burleson gave Greenwood's Rangers their first victory in five games this season here Friday night, a 14-12 win over Robert Lee in District 7-A action.

The win evened Greenwood's league record at 1-1.

Burleson scored from a yard out with 3:52 left in the first period and Lee quarterback Eddie Hood countered with a 52-yard scoring gallop with 13 seconds gone of the second period. However, the kick failed.

Greenwood made it 14-6 at halftime on Halfback Garrett Mattson's nine-yard run and Burleson converted for the second time.

Greenwood had an opportunity to take it out of reach in the third period, but stalled after marching to the Lee 10.

The Steers then struck with 11:03 left in the game on a 15-yard run by Hood, but the run for two failed.

Alpine defeats Reagan County

ALPINE—Alpine's Fightin' Bucks exploded for 21 fourth period points to defeat Reagan County, 35-6, here Friday night in a non-district game.

Greg Thomas scored two touchdowns to pace the Bucks, opening the scoring with a 34-yard run with 1:01 left in the first period. His next TD launched the fourth period barrage and came from one yard out.

Quarterback Sammy Ramos fired a 35-yard pass to Jacob Wright for the second fourth period score while Peter Garcia uncorked a 45-yard TD run.

Reagan averted a shutout when Gregg Fisher punched in from the one with 9:14 left in the half. The loss gave Reagan an 0-3-2 record.

NFL strike talks bog down in trivia

WASHINGTON (AP) — Negotiations aimed at settling the 11-day old football strike dragged on Friday with the two sides unable to agree even on issues peripheral to the main point of contention — the union's demand for a wage scale.

The two sides spent much of the day discussing the players' access to medical records and grievance procedures, but progress in them appeared to be almost as slow on progress on the key financial issues.

Mike Fuller, the Cincinnati Bengals' player representative who was at the sessions as an observer, said that the management negotiators "are not taking us as players seriously."

"They've shown a total lack of concern over these issues," Fuller said.

ED GARVEY, the chief negotiator for the union, withdrew from the start of the session, then returned to the table in late afternoon.

One union source said Garvey, executive director of the NFL Players Union, was working on "alternative ideas" with staff members at union headquarters.

America's Team, well, Midland's Team, anyway

Debate rages over whether or not they are really America's Team, but it seems painfully evident that they are Midland's team.

You'd have thought the Russians were playing the Americans in the finals of Olympic hockey, the way the phone rang off the hook Thursday morning.

The Braves and Dodgers battled 12 innings Wednesday night and since the game started at 9:30 p.m. and Thursday was a working day, a lot of fans just couldn't stick around for the finish.

When the fans began calling in Thursday morning, most were apologetic for not sticking it out. One said, "Well, I almost made it. They scored the winning runs the inning after I fell asleep around 1 a.m."

OUT OF curiosity, the identity of the winner (Braves 4-3) was withheld until the caller confessed his allegiance—Dodgers or Braves?

Without exception, the fans were Braves. With this kind of support, they'd never have had to leave Boston, but that's another story.

Of course, it could be the Dodgers' fans stuck it out until the bitter end. Or maybe there's just a built in hostility to the Dodgers, since in the Texas League they are the enemy and, what's worse, the guys that never seem to lose.

At any rate, it seems, the Astros and Rangers have surrendered Texas to Georgia. Ted Turner's Braves, thanks to cable TV, have taken subscribers by storm.

It's the only "home" baseball we have. The Rangers and Astros offer only token TV in West Texas and no radio, until after dark when one can pick up a Fort Worth station.

THE DECLINE in interest was evident all summer at the R-T by the number of requests for information on Houston and Texas home games that were not made. The usual call-in question was, "Will the Braves be on TV tonight?"

An Eastern Airlines ad offering two roundtrip tickets for the price of one, two Braves' game tickets for the price of one and hotel accommodations for two, at the price of one, generated more phone calls for a team more than 1,000 miles away than the two major league teams within the state.

OF COURSE, the interest in the Braves in the Per-

Austin, Turnbull triumph

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Top-seeded Tracy Austin ousted 16-year-old Camille Benjamin, 6-1, 6-4, Friday to reach the semifinal round of the U.S. Women's Indoor Tennis Championships.

In earlier quarterfinal-round play, Wendy Turnbull of Australia stopped Wendy White, 6-2, 4-6, 6-1, and will face the winner of Friday night's quarterfinal between third-seeded Pam Shriver and fifth-seeded Mima Jausovec of Yugoslavia.

mian Basin was aided and abetted by a surprisingly strong showing while Texas teams slumped dreadfully. The Astros, contenders the last two years, lost the pitching that made them one while the Rangers, despite the great expectations with the advent of Eddie Chiles as owner, were never lovelier—er lousier.

The Rangers created some news with the mid-summer crucifixion of Don Zimmer, but it cost Eddie his media support. Zimmer was fired at a luncheon meeting on a Wednesday, which, in the tradition of managerial firings, was vigorously denied, perhaps even by a vote of confidence statement.

The firing finally was admitted a couple of days later and, this is what the Metroplex media really mad, completely contrary to baseball tradition, Zimmer was asked to manage three more games after his dismissal until a successor could be named.

EDDIE, AS is his wont, got mad when the writers gave him "what for" over the handling of the Zimmer thing, and suddenly Chiles' credibility as an owner was suspect. Before that he had been "the best thing that ever happened to Ranger baseball."

Still, there's nothing like winning, and there was genuine grief in Texas over the Braves 21-game tailspin in early August.

Now, with the National League West race barreling into its final weekend, Midlanders obviously are pulling for Atlanta to make the playoffs. In fact, one wonders if some of them are even aware there's a strike going on out there somewhere.

Jay Haas looks on in disgust as a putt comes up short on 16 after rimming the cup.

Jay Haas fires 67 to keep Texas lead

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Jay Haas, who hasn't made a bogey in the golf tournament, shot a solid 3-under-par 67 and retained a one-stroke lead Friday after the second round of the $250,000 Texas Open.

"I hit every green, but I really didn't have it all that close to the hole and I didn't give myself a lot of birdie opportunities," said Haas, who completed two trips over the 6,525-yard Oak Hills Country Club course in 130 — 10 strokes under par.

"I kind of set a goal for myself to get it 10 under, get it in double figures today, and I accomplished that. I'd like to have been a couple of more under, but I'm very pleased with my play."

Considerably less pleased with their efforts were PGA title-holder Ray Floyd, defending champion Bill Rogers, Lanny Wadkins and Jerry Pate. All of them missed the cut for the final two rounds. Floyd was 71-144, Pate 71-145, Rogers 69-141 and Wadkins 71-141.

Floyd's failure to qualify, the second time he'd missed the cut in as many starts, virtually eliminated him from any chance of overtaking Masters champion Craig Stadler on the money-winning list. Stadler leads by more than $54,000 and will add to that margin this week. He had a second-round 71 and was six strokes off the pace at 136.

Curtis Strange, a former teammate of Haas at Wake Forest, D.A. Weirberg and Keith Fergus shared second at 131, a single stroke back of the leader. Strange and Fergus each shot a second-round 66 despite complaints of inconsistent putting.

Mayer, McEnroe post wins

PERTH, Australia (AP) — Gene Mayer and John McEnroe each won singles matches Friday to give the United States a 2-0 lead in a Davis Cup semifinal marked by another of McEnroe's running squabbles with officials.

Mayer, playing his first Davis Cup, topped John Alexander 6-4, 3-6, 6-1, 6-2 after McEnroe had taken three hours to dispose of Peter McNamara 6-4, 4-6, 6-4, 6-2.

The McEnroe-McNamara match, played at a high level of skill, entertained the crowd of 5,000. McEnroe, constantly sniping at linesmen, was twice warned for misconduct by French umpire Patrick Flodrops. He annoyed both the fans and U.S. Captain Arthur Ashe. Ashe has consistently criticized McEnroe's on-court conduct in Davis Cup play.

City, not Drew, fumbled ball

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The City of San Antonio — not Dallas Cowboys wide receiver Drew Pearson — fumbled the ball on a renovation project at St. Paul Square, a Bexar

County commissioner says.

Commissioner John Steen made the remark in reaction to a $37,500 default judgment entered against Pearson earlier this week.

FORD SAVES MOST FUEL

Detroit Testing Laboratory conducted an impartial test to determine which of these comparable 14-foot backhoe-loaders was best digging trench. Certified results:

	Ford 555 Special	Case 580D	Deere 310A
Trench length (ft)	152.20	140.00	137.50
Soil moved (cu yds)	56.69	49.14	50.04
Cu yds moved/gal fuel	32.45	31.60	28.30

As you can see, the Ford 555 Special dug from 12.5 to 14.7 feet more trench than its competitors during the same time... over 6 cubic yards more soil... and moved more soil per gallon of fuel.

To eliminate any variation in operator skill, impartial union operators were rotated for equal time on each machine. A summary of official test results is available on request.

Sudden-death NL playoff possibility

BASEBALL—The Chicago White Sox suspended Ron LeFlore without pay for the final three games of the season, one day after the outfielder was charged with possession of a controlled substance. "The White Sox feel that LeFlore's presence with the club for the final road trip to Minnesota under these circumstances would be inappropriate," said spokesman Ken Valdesirri. "The consideration of any further action concerning this matter will be deferred pending a full investigation and developments relating to the criminal charges pending against LeFlore."

Major league baseball broke the all-time attendance mark Thursday of 43,550,386 in 1979 with a 1982 total of 43,550,386 through Thursday.

The prospect of a tie involving Atlanta and Los Angeles or San Francisco in the National League West sets up the following one-game baseball playoff possibilities: Atlanta at Los Angeles, Los Angeles at San Francisco, or San Francisco at Atlanta. The home sites were decided by coin flips last month.

GOLF—Japan's Norio Suzuki, aided by a hole-in-one, shot a 4-under par 68 Friday and moved into a two-way tie for the second-round lead in the $188,679 Gene Sarazen Jun Classic at Tochigi, Japan, sharing first with Terry Gale at 137, 7-under-par.

FOOTBALL—Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, introduced legislation Friday aimed at ending the NFL strike, requiring the players return to work and then enter into mediation with the owners. If mediation is unsuccessful, then compulsory and binding arbitration would be required. Total time involved for this procedure would be a maximum of 30 days.

Mars Hill College interim football coach Billy Simmons says he expects his team to survive although most players have voted to boycott the rest of the season in support of their fired former coach, Joe Gibson. Gibson was fired from his job of 10 years Monday. Mars Hill President Dr. Fred B. Bentley cited "incompatibility" between Gibson and school administrators. Gibson angered Bentley by saying publicly the administration did not support the football program, that he overspent his budget and that he constantly clashed with Mike O'Brien, dean of students. Saturday's game against Newberry has already been cancelled.

Randolph County District Court officials delayed until Nov. 5 a trial for two North Carolina football players charged with vandalism. Gene Samuel Key Jr., 21, linebacker from Asheboro, and Ron Laraway, 21, quarterback from Westlake, Ohio, were charged with injury to real property, a misdemeanor, after windows worth $500 were broken out of a house belonging to John H. Wrape Jr. of Asheboro on Aug. 8.

TENNIS—Yannick Noah defeated Chris Lewis 6-3, 6-1, 7-5 in the Davis Cup semi to give France a 2-0 lead over New Zealand.

BOXING—Trevor Berbick meets Renaldo Snipes in a heavyweight fight on ABC-TV 5 p.m. Saturday. Since losing a 15-round decision to WBC champ Larry Holmes — he was the only one of 12 challengers to last the distance with the champion — Berbick has knocked out Conroy Nelson in two rounds and scored 10-round decisions over Muhammad Ali and Greg Page to give him a 21-2-1 record. Since being stopped by Holmes in 11 round Nov. 6, Snipes has fought an unimpressive draw with Scott Frank and lost Tim Witherspoon for a 22-21 record.

HOCKEY—Edmonton center Ken Linseman was suspended for four games for grabbing the eyes of a Toronto player during an exhibition game Sept. 26.

Houston (1-2, 0-4 in SWC) at Baylor (2-1, 1-0 in SWC), 11:35 a.m. — This series has produced SWC champ or co-champ four of last six years. Houston leads it 4-2. The Bears clinched Grant Teaff's 100th career coaching victory last week by topping Texas Tech 24-23. Houston defeated Lamar 48-3 last week with the return of QB Lionel Wilson from pre-season injury. Wilson is tied for SWC lead in NCAA passing efficiency formula, while Cougar ground game is strong test for Baylor defense. Bears rank last in SWC rushing defense and Cougars are third in rushing offense. Cougar Dwayne Love rushed for SWC-leading 192 yards vs. Lamar to rank third in conference at 112 per game, while Baylor's Alfred Anderson is averaging 96 yards.

Texas Tech (1-2, 0-1 in SWC) at Texas A&M (2-1, 2-45 p.m. (CBS-TV)) — A&M holds 23-16-1 series lead, but Raiders are on top by 11-9-1 since joining SWC in 1980. The Aggies beat La. Tech 38-27. Baylor nipped Tech, 24-23, in Raiders' second consecutive one-point decision. A&M paces SWC in total offense and passing offense behind Gary Kubiak's conference-leading total-offense mark of 282 yards a game. Aggies top SWC rushing defense with 94 yards per game, but are ninth in both total defense and pass defense. A&M running game is major question as top three running backs — Earnest Jackson, Johnny Hector and Thomas Sanders — are all doubtful for Saturday due to injuries. Raider QB Jim Hart is fourth in SWC total offense. Tech defense showing improvement after giving up 946 yards in first two games, allowed Baylor only 286 yards total offense. Leonard Harris leads SWC in punt returns and ranks fifth in nation with 18.7-yard average.

North Texas (0-4) at SMU (3-0), 7 p.m. — Final non-conference game for Mustangs, ranked seventh nationally. A Mustang victory would assure SWC 11th straight winning non-conference season and give SMU fourth perfect non-conference record in six seasons. SMU defeated TCU 16-13 last week. Mustangs' Eric Dickerson leads SWC and is second nationally in rushing at 168.3 yards per game. Craig James third in SWC at 111.7 in Mustangs rank second nationally, 376.7 yards per game. Eagles played Baylor close, 21-17, in Corky Nelson's head-coaching debut, but since have lost to Oklahoma State, NE Louisiana and SWLouisiana. Rusty Hill took over at QB in second half last week, hitting 12 of 24 for 201 yards, including TD throws of 72 yards to Tony Merriweather and 29 yards to Marvin Walker. SMU holds 23-21 series lead.

TCU (1-2, 0-1 in SWC) vs. Arkansas (2-4, 0-0 in SWC) at Little Rock, 7:30 p.m. (TBS) — Razorbacks seek to improve on No. 10 in AP ranking, while Frogs seek back-to-back victories over Hogs for first time since 1955-56. Frogs' 28-24 victory last year ended 22-year domination. Razorbacks one of three SWC teams gaining more than 400 yards a game (400) and are No. 2 in rushing defense (100 yard a game). TCU running game has improved from 74 yards a game last season to 174 per game through first three '82 starts. TCU's Marcus Gilbert has averaged only nine carries a game, but boasts 6.8 average a carry, while Arkansas' Jessie Clark has taken up offensive team's injury slack with 70.3 yards per game. Frogs' Stanley Washington pushed career receptions to 102 in 16-13 loss to heavily-favored SMU last week, now tied for 11th in all-time SWC catches and needs 70 in final eight games for record.

Texas (2-0, 0-0 in SWC) at Rice (0-3, 0-0 in SWC), 7:30 p.m. — Texas shut out Missouri, 21-0, allowing Tigers just 13 yards rushing and 204 total in recording first shutout in 24 games and the fourth for current senior class. Rice coach Ray Alborn will start junior Phillip Money at QB and plans to shake up secondary in effort to gain first win over Texas since 1965, the longest current SWC member-vs.-member win streak. Owls fourth in SWC against the rush (118.3 yards per game) and fifth in passing (134 yards per game). Owls' Deron Miller tied for third in SWC receiving with 11 catches and Vince Courville leads kickoff returners (27.2 yards). Owls allowing 211.7 yards passing but Texas has averaged only 16 passes a game. Texas boasts SWC's No. 2 rushing offense (277.5) and nation's second-best defense against scoring (six points per game). Horns' Darrel Clark is second in SWC rushing and fourth nationally (145.0 per game) Texas has started 3-0 last five seasons and has won 24 straight games preceding Oklahoma game. Last time Texas lost the game before OU was 1957 to South Carolina, 27-21. Texas leads all-time series 47-20-1 going to 69th meeting, with 19-12-1 edge in Houston. Texas ranked 15th by AP.

Kuhn sees big loss for majors

NEW YORK (AP) — Commissioner Bowie Kuhn says major league baseball could lose millions of dollars if entrepreneur and television station owner Ted Turner is allowed to televise championship games over his Atlanta-based "superstation."

Kuhn testified in U.S. District Court here Wednesday in an effort to persuade Judge Mary Johnson Lowe to bar Turner, who also owns the Atlanta Braves, from going ahead with his plans to televise the league playoffs games if the Braves qualify.

The commissioner claimed Turner's plans would violate a contract in which American Broadcasting Companies Inc. bought exclusive rights to televise the games over its national network.

Northwestern risks streak against Iowa

By Associated Press

The Northwestern Wildcats, losers of 34 of their last 35 games, put a one-game winning streak on the line Saturday for the first time since 1979 and Coach Dennis Green won't be shocked if they make it two in a row.

"We are excited about our third Big Ten game," says Green, whose team snapped a major college-record 34-game losing streak last week by defeating Northern Illinois 31-6.

"I think our players are getting a special feeling about Northwestern football. We'll come out ready to play and fighting to win. I've never been sold that we were a bad team."

Green doesn't have much support, however, and the Wildcats are 25-point underdogs against a 1-2 Iowa team which has put only 31 points on the scoreboard thus far.

"We knew when we came here 20 months ago that it was going to be a tough job," Green says. "At times, it was very difficult and we were disappointed sometimes, but we never got discouraged. We always believed in ourselves."

NORTHWESTERN garnered its share of the headlines a week ago. A second straight victory could take some more of the spotlight away from Top Twenty matchups like No. 14 West Virginia at second-ranked Pitt and eighth-ranked Nebraska at No. 20 Auburn.

Elsewhere, No. 1-rated Washington plays host to San Diego State, No. 4 Florida entertains LSU, fifth-ranked Alabama meets Arkansas State under the lights in Birmingham, No. 6 Georgia visits Mississippi State, North Texas State is at No. 7 Southern Methodist for a night game, No. 9 UCLA visits Colorado and No. 10 Arkansas is in Little Rock for a night game with Texas Christian. Third-ranked Penn State is not scheduled.

In games involving The Associated Press Second Ten, No. 11 Notre Dame is at Michigan State, Georgia Tech at No. 12 North Carolina, Kansas State at No. 13 Arizona State under the lights, No. 15 Texas at Rice for a night game, Oregon at No. 16 Southern California, No. 17 Miami at Louisville under the lights, Temple at No. 18 Boston College at night and Illinois at No. 19 Minnesota, also after dark.

WHILE WASHINGTON warms up for the Pac-10 race against San Diego State, Pitt and West Virginia will be knocking heads in another of those frenzied neighborhood brawls.

"Frankly, it should be pretty easy preparing for Pitt," says West Virginia Coach Don Nehlen. "They have the best team in America right now and the best players in America. If our guys don't go up there ready to slug for 60 plays and give their best shot on every snap, we're going to get killed; it's as simple as that."

Pitt Stadium will be sold out, as it usually is when West Virginia comes to town.

"Naturally, emotions play a great deal in this game," says Pitt Coach Foge Fazio, who was born in West Virginia but grew up near Pittsburgh and has been a player, assistant coach and now head honcho at Pitt. "And that Don Nehlen is sitting down there in Morgantown, smiling away, keeping quiet, when, in fact, he's got outstanding personnel this year. It's his personnel that makes the big difference."

"The Mountaineers are for real. You can't beat Oklahoma and Maryland and not be for real. West Virginia is now on a par with Pitt and Penn State."

LSU, with romps over Oregon State and Rice to its credit, will learn more about itself against Florida in its first real test.

"Those were like exhibitions," says quarterback Alan Risher. "The first two games were confidence builders for us, but this is THE game this week."

FLORIDA HAS beaten Miami, Southern Cal and Mississippi State and Coach Charley Pell laments that the schedule "just keeps throwing teams at us who are at emotionally high peaks. LSU is very underrated by many observers, and this worries me. They have more team speed than any other team in the (Southeastern) conference, and this speed in a new multiple offense will stretch our defense and make us cover the entire field."

"From what we've seen and from the people we've talked to, we believe this LSU team is more like the old, great LSU teams. They are very physical and have great team pursuit. That is a compliment, comparing them to the traditional LSU team."

Coaches Bear Bryant of Alabama and Larry Lacwell of Arkansas State both hail from Fordyce, Ark. The Bear played high school football with Lacwell's father, and when the rainy season came to Moro Bottom, he would spend the night with the Lacwells.

HERSCHEL WALKER, who leads Georgia against Mississippi State in a key Southeastern Conference game, is only 241 yards short of the SEC career rushing record of 4,035 yards by LSU's Charles Alexander (1973-76).

Nebraska will try to rebound from its last-second 24-21 loss to Penn State (actually, there were four seconds left) against Auburn.

The first year's payment and buyer qualification will be calculated equivalent to a rate of 9 7/8% for 90% loan to value. Interest will be charged at a rate of 14 1/4% for the first 6 months of the loan. After the first 6 months interest will be charged at the most recent Treasury Bill rate plus 4 1/2%. Payments on these mortgages are graduated so as to increase the principal and interest payments 7.50% each year for the next 4 years. At the end of the first 5 year period, the graduation in payments will cease. A new payment schedule will be computed using a variable rate mortgage to amortize the remaining balance over the remaining 20 years of the mortgage based upon the then current Treasury Bill rate plus 4 1/2%. The 7 1/4% maximum increase can be more if the original loan principle exceeds 125%. At each 5 year anniversary date, the payment may be adjusted to allow the remaining payments to fully amortize the loan. ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE APPROXIMATELY 16 1/4%.

GAS, CLEAN ENERGY FOR TODAY AND TOMORROW. FHA/VA financing available.

WANT THE BEST FOR YOUR FAMILY?

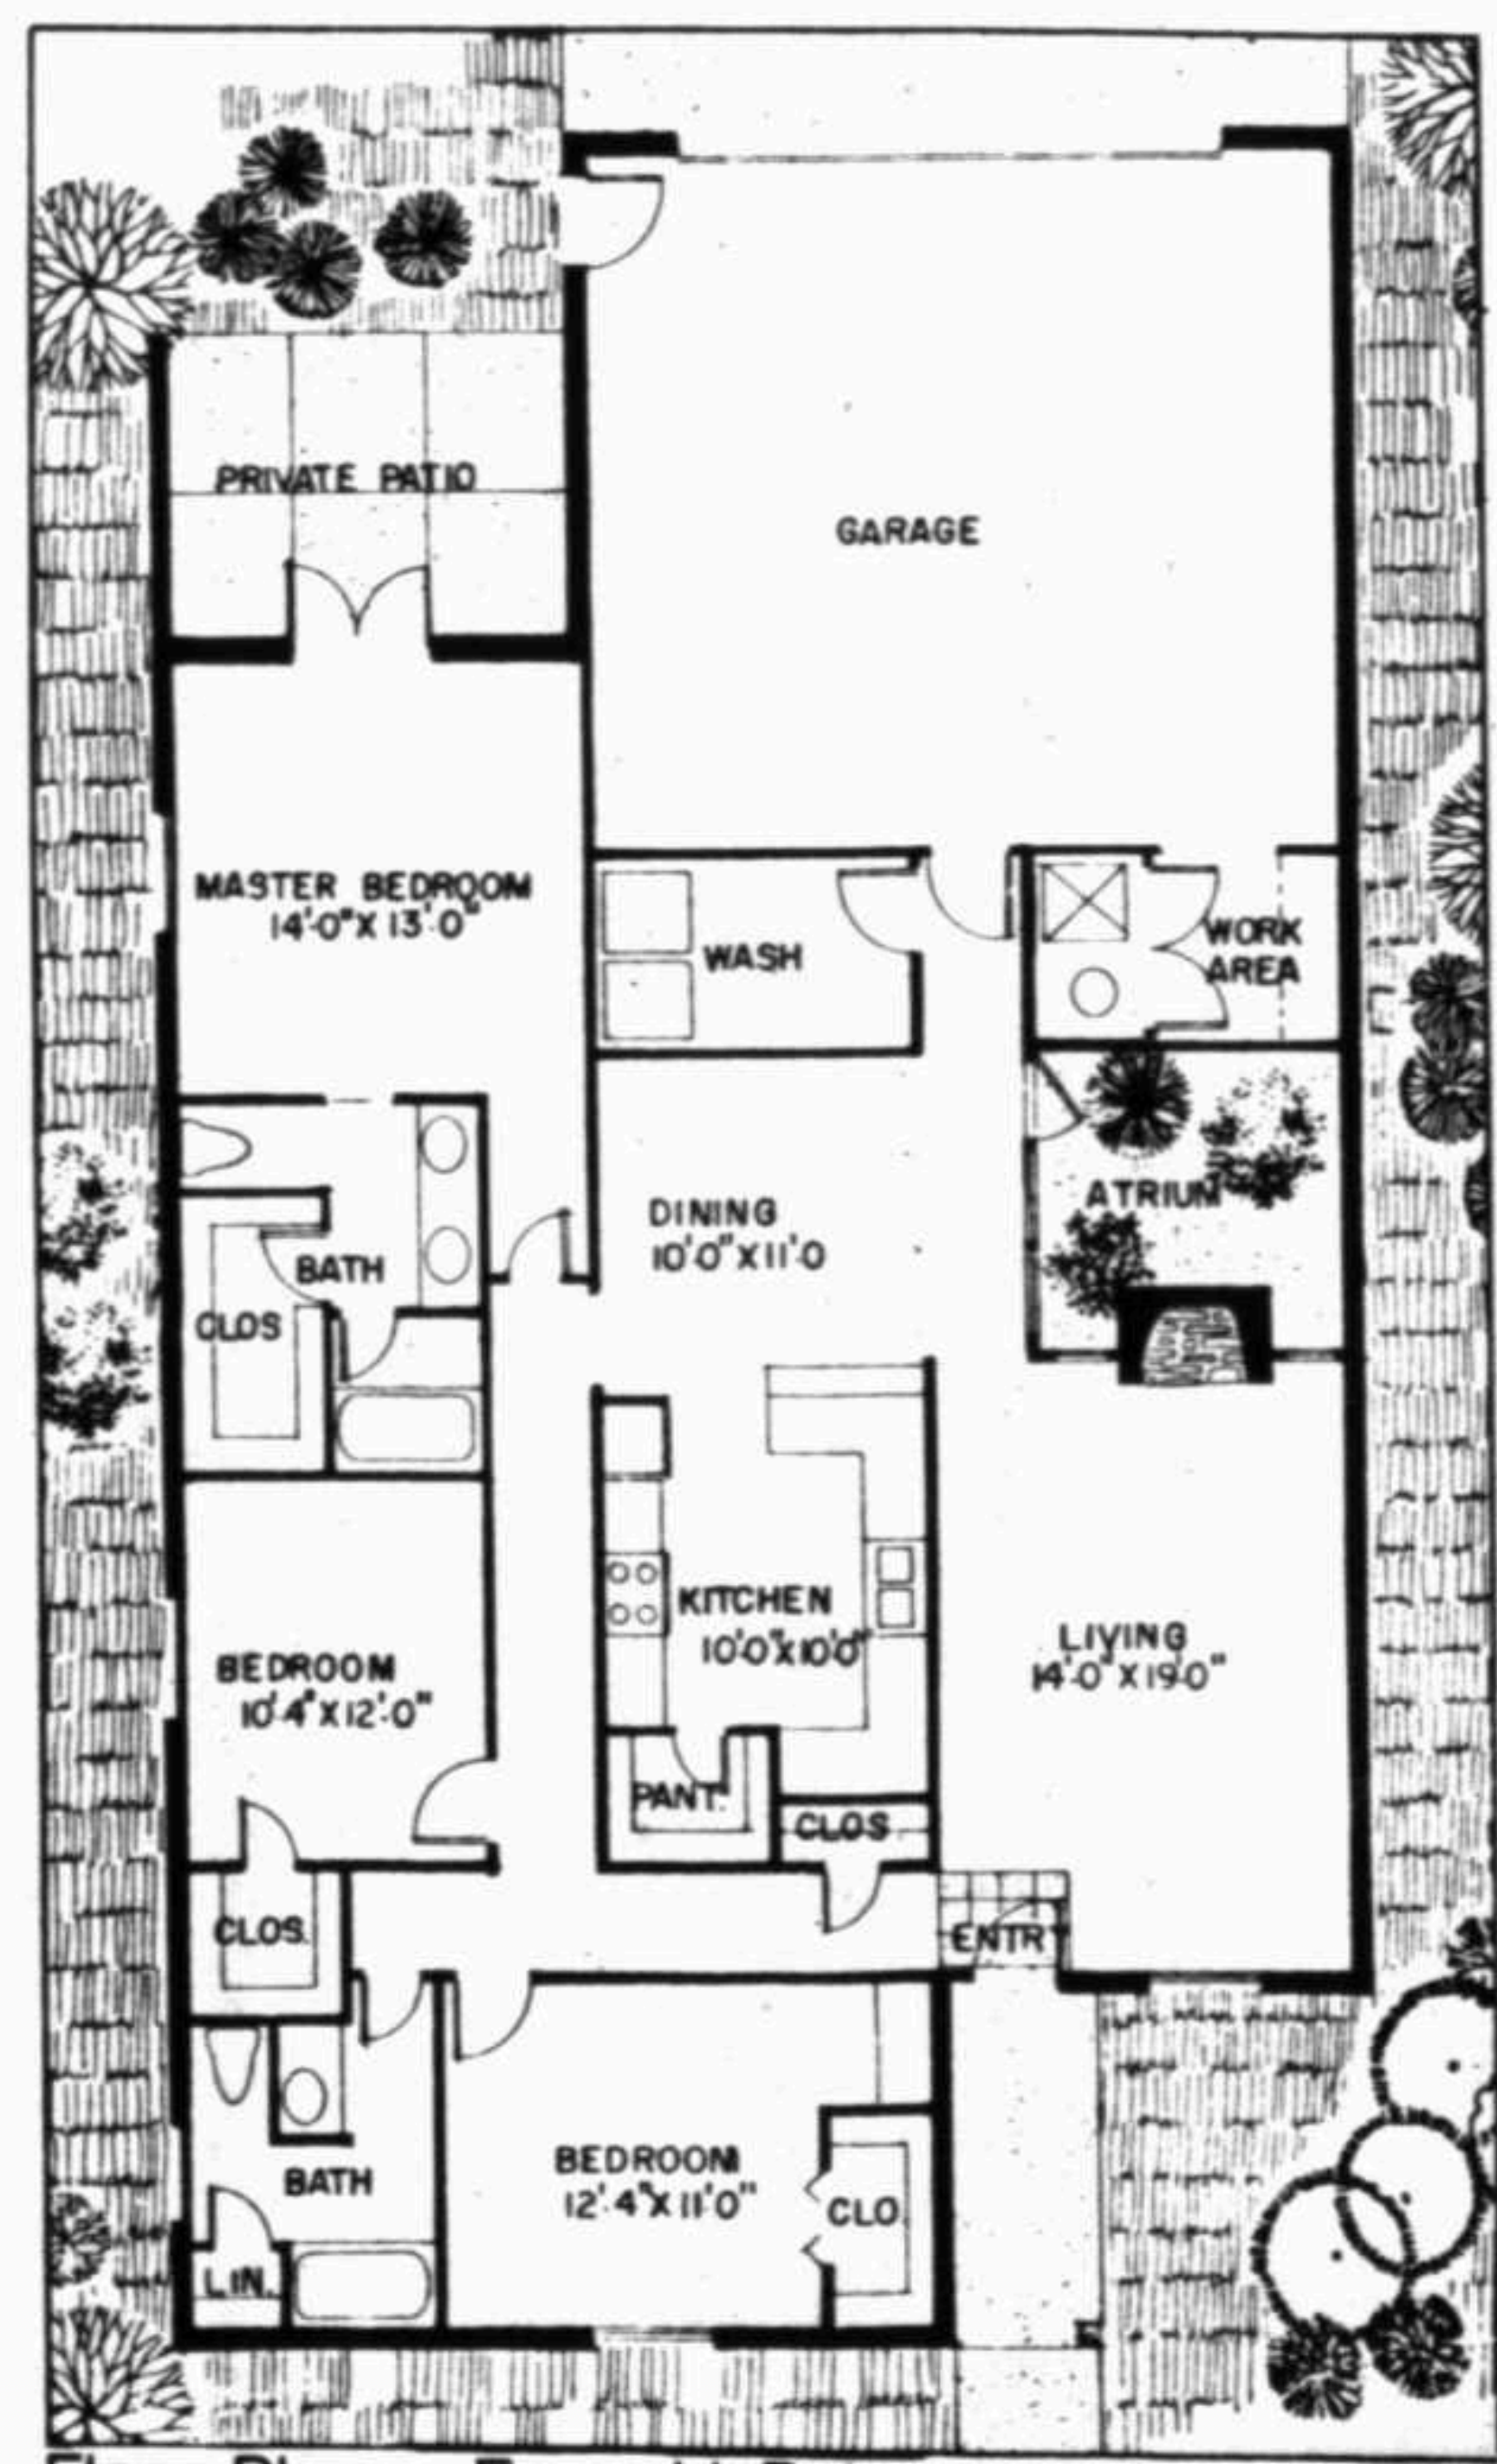

Of course you do!
So come to BROOKEHAVEN!

Some construction firms build houses randomly in our city without regard to the effect on our community. We don't build that way. A totally planned addition to the city works best for all of us. It's best for your new neighborhood, it's best for your city. And it's good business for Tabor Construction.

A sense of "coming home" greets you as you enter "Emerald Point." The sunken living room overlooks an enclosed atrium; French doors open off the master bedroom to a private patio, and the garage sports a work area for the hobbyist in the family!
