"Any issue that is of interest to the public" is on the agenda, Mrs. Burroughs said.

Anxiety grows as rains fail to come

By KEELY COGHLAN
Staff Writer

In the driest spring on record, Howard County and other nearby county farmers are waiting and hoping for rain as the planting season is nearing its end.

Talking about rains which fell in the area late last week, Howard County Agent Don Richardson said, "This rain's just enough to cool the land off and wet the dirt. 'It's not enough to plant.'"

According to Larry Shaw, a Knott farmer, the driest year on record was 1917, "and we got about 4 1/2 inches through April then."

With Friday's rain, Howard County now has slightly more than an inch of rain — 1.10 for the year, according to Bill Fryear at the Big Spring Agricultural Experiment Station.

Farmers to the west — near Midland and Odessa, and east of a line from Haskell to Monahans and Pecos — received about three inches of rain during the last week. Those farmers are in pretty good shape, local farmers say.

But farmers in Martin, Mitchell, Glasscock, Borden and Dawson Counties are suffering from lack of rain. Farmers and agricultural experts say they need much more rain soon — about four to five inches to soften the ground up and plant — if they intend to have a cotton crop this year.

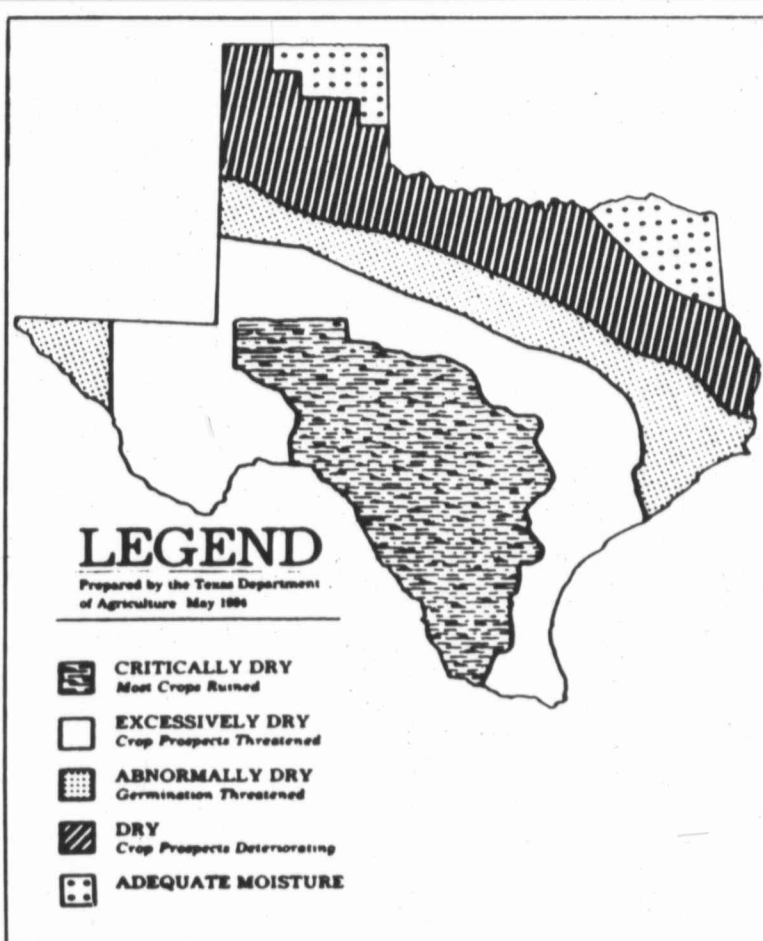

Farmers have begun to dry plant their cotton, a not unusual method of planting in the area. But dry-planting — planting cottonseed and hoping the rain will come — causes the soil to erode faster and damages the land, Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service official Tim Hall said.

"Dry-planting now is like stirring up a flour box," Coahoma farmer Paul Allen said. "You stir it up anymore and get a wind, and it will be a flour box."

But farmers are dry planting to meet federal deadlines which require cotton planting to be finished by June 10th. To participate in any federal loans, disaster aid — Howard and the surrounding counties have been declared disaster areas by the federal government for quite a while, Hall said — or federal crop insurance benefits, farmers must meet the deadline.

Fear that this year will decide the fate of many ranchers and farmers — Richardson and Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service official Tim Hall call this year "a boom or bust year" — has caused many farmers

Armed robbery reported Woman stabbed, jewelry stolen

A Watsonville, Calif., woman was stabbed Saturday night during an armed robbery in the parking lot of her hotel in which the robber took more than $5,000 worth of gold jewelry.

Dr. Aghavni Copenhagen was in the parking lot of the Desert Sands Hotel in the 2900 block of W. Highway 80 when she was assaulted by an unknown Hispanic male, according to police.

Ms. Copenhagen was treated and released Saturday night at the Malone-Hogan Hospital emergency room, according to a hospital spokeswoman.

She suffered a one-inch stab wound on her right arm during the robbery, according to police reports.

Taken in the robbery was a $50 brown purse which contained $5,000 of gold jewelry, and $1,300 in $100 bills, according to the police report.

The stolen jewelry includes nine solid-gold bracelets, three solid-gold necklaces and six gold rings, four containing precious stones and two containing coins, the report stated.

According to Police Lt. Jerry Edwards, Copenhagen was carrying the jewelry and the cash with her because "she was afraid to leave it in her room."

Police are still investigating the robbery, Edwards said.

Report says America is getting older

The nation's median age has reached its highest point ever, climbing to 30.6 years as of 1982.

— U.S. Census Bureau figures

the Depression and World War II.

Low birth rates were also recorded in the 1960s, resulting in a continued decline in school-age children today. But in the last few years a so-called "echo" has occurred as baby boom children had babies of their own, with the result that the population under age 5 is no longer declining, as had been the case prior to 1975.

"From 1980 to 1982 the number of children under 5 grew by 6.3 percent," the report noted.

Overall, the profile recorded

233,267,000 Americans as of Jan. 1, 1983, an increase of 6,206,000 since the national head count on April 1, 1980.

The profile also found that "the proportion of the total black population living in central cities declined for the first time in many decades."

In 1982, about 55 percent of the nation's blacks lived in central cities, down from 59 percent in 1970. The number of blacks living in suburbs jumped by 2.3 million between 1970 and 1980, the report said.

More than half of women aged 20 through 24 remain single, the report also disclosed, up from 36 percent in 1970. And for men, the share aged 20 through 24 that have never married grew from 55 percent to 72 percent in the same period.

"While many of these men and women simply have postponed marriage, the changes suggest that an increasing proportion may elect never to marry at all," the report commented.

The proportion of Americans who are elderly has tripled since 1900, the report notes, and one of the fastest growing groups is that over age 85.

Those aged 85 and over total 2.5 million now and are expected to increase to 7.7 million by the year 2025, indicating "greater health, social and economic needs of the elderly in the future," the report states.

Other findings included: —The South and West accounted for 92 percent of the nation's population growth between 1980 and 1982.

—College enrollment of women aged 25 to 34 more than tripled between 1970 and 1982.

—Reported voted participation in congressional elections rose

Scattered rain expected

By the Associated Press

Widely scattered rain showers and a few thunderstorms were expected across North and East Texas today, in the wake of more than a half-foot of welcome rain that accumulated in the upper Gulf coast this weekend.

A weak cool front collided with moist Gulf air to produce dense fog in East Texas early today. The National Weather Service posted travelers advisories for the Lufkin area after reports of near-zero visibility were received.

Light showers fell across parts of North Texas early today under the influence of a low-pressure cell near Sherman. Rain also fell around Waco and Fort Worth as thunderstorms moved northward, the weather service said.

Skies were fair elsewhere in the Lone Star State, with mild temperatures and light variable winds.

Temperatures were mainly in the 50s and 60s west of the front, located on a line from Texarkana through College Station and Cotulla. Low readings south of the front were in the 70s.

Winds were northerly at 10 mph along the coast, pumping in moist air from the Gulf.

More precipitation was expected as the front becomes mainly stationary over North and East Texas. Skies elsewhere should be fair to partly cloudy.

Highs were expected to range from the 80s in the north to the 90s in the south.

Tax appraisal board meets

Members of the Howard County Consolidated Tax Appraisal District board held a special meeting at 2 p.m. today to discuss the 1984 district re-appraisal.

An agenda for the meeting was posted about 10:30 a.m. today, according to Margaret Ray, county clerk.

District re-appraisals have sparked controversy in the county with more than 300 appeals on file. To date, 156 persons have scheduled to meet with the tax board for appeal hearings, according to Ruth Mitchell of the tax appraisal district office.

The Howard County tax appraisal board is scheduled to meet at 9 a.m. May 29 for a discussion and approval of public hearing dates, Mrs. Ray said.

Local Demos want primary

Delegates at the County Democratic Convention Saturday night passed a resolution requesting that the presidential preference be put back on the ballot in four years.

Such a move would end the Texas caucus system and move the state back to the primary system.

County Democrats met in the District Courtroom to elect delegates and consider several resolutions. All other resolutions were tabled, Margaret Ray, county clerk, said.

About 150 people, including observers and delegates, attended Saturday's meeting.

Some confusion arose during the evening when it was noted that one precinct had elected more delegates than they were allowed. The precinct met again shortly before the convention convened and corrected the error.

Doggett criticizes Hance

AUSTIN (AP) — Democratic U.S. Senate candidate Lloyd Doggett today accused runoff opponent Kent Hance of voting against Social Security benefits in the U.S. House.

"Although Kent Hance's TV commercials claim a commitment to Social Security, the record shows that Kent voted against Social Security on no fewer than three separate occasions," Doggett said.

Doggett finished fewer than 300 votes behind Hance in the May 5 primary, and they meet again in the June 2 runoff election.

He said Hance's support of the Gramm-Latta tax bill was a vote to trim minimum benefits and cut survivor's benefits and some others.

He said Hance voted in 1979 to cut benefits to the disabled and in 1983 to cut the program by $40 billion.

to apply for federal crop insurance.

Only about three percent of local farmers took out federal crop insurance in 1983, according to Federal Crop Insurance Corp. District Director Dottie Sampley. This year, 85 to 90 percent of Howard County and Martin County farmers enrolled in the program, she said.

Most area farmers refused to enter the program in the past, claiming it was too costly, prohibitive, they said. This year, farmers are viewing the crop insurance as a marginal means of hanging on, Mrs. Sampley said.

Vincent farmer David Barr, Allen and Shaw and other farmers said they participated in the insurance program for the first time this year.

"It's the first time I ever insured any of my crops and I wouldn't have but I haven't made any money for the last four years," Allen said.

Allen is holding off dry-planting for a few days, hoping for more rain. Others have started, gambling that the rain won't be four or five inches when — and if — it comes. That much rain would wipe out the land they have already planted, they said.

"A farmer who waits is going to hurt himself by waiting," Hall said. "It could be just as dry on June 15th."

Farmers are penalized 10 percent of possible benefits for every five days they postpone planting past the deadline.

Some farmers are working with U.S. Rep. Charles Stenholm's office to try to extend the deadline or drop the requirement for planting, but the U.S. Agriculture Department has not taken any action on their requests so far.

Mrs. Sampley said she has notified her Washington office of the situation, and of the possibility of more damage being caused to the land by blowing if farmers plant now.

But from an insurance standpoint, the farmers must plant, she said.

"The reasoning behind it is that we can't insure it if it's not planted. Until you buy a car, you don't need insurance on it. It's the same thing with planting," Mrs. Sampley said. Meanwhile, the farmers are still waiting. And time is running out.

the increased risk the missiles pose to their own countries.

It is futile for the United States to hope that new missiles or plans for "the establishment of a comprehensive anti-missile defense of the U.S.A." will make the Soviet Union agree to unilateral concessions, he said.

Ustinov said U.S. offers to resume arms reduction talks, which the Soviets broke off after the NATO deployment began, are "mere words," belied by actions such as the push to develop the MX missile.

"Talks are impossible on such a basis," he said.

The present situation with the talks at a standstill is "abnormal and dangerous," he said. "The situation should and can be changed for the better."

The conditions he offered for improvement — withdrawal of Pershing 2s and cruises already deployed and a halt to further deployment — have been repeatedly rejected by the West.

State Department spokesman Joe Reap said the department had no new comment on Ustinov's speech.

Navy Secretary John F. Lehman Jr., told reporters in February that there had been a "substantial surge in Soviet missile submarines in the Atlantic." No similar activity had been detected in the Pacific, he said.

But Lehman and the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Army Gen. John Vessey Jr., said they saw no cause for alarm. "The primary purpose of these redeployments is political," Vessey said in a letter to Rep. Charles Bennett, D-Fla., chairman of the House Armed Services seapower subcommittee.

The warrants were for two incidents that occurred about two months ago, Lt. Jerry Edwards said.

Jones also is under investigation for other incidents, some of which happened in the county and some occurring in the city, Edwards said.

Police are still investigating reports of shooting in the streets at 4 p.m. Saturday at the intersection of N.W. Fifth and San Antonio Streets.

Both Valentin Quintana of 1505 Robin and Pedro Cantu of 505 N.W. San Antonio said they were shot at by two Hispanic males in the 500 block of San Antonio, according to police reports.

Quintana reported the shooting when he was arrested at 4:10 p.m. for fleeing and eluding arrest. The arrest report noted that his car had several gouges and that the rear window was missing.

Cantu was not arrested. No one was injured in the shooting, but "several shots were fired," Edwards said.

Mrs. James Ward of 805 Baylor told police at 5:20 p.m. Sunday that someone had taken two Lhaso Apso dogs from her house at 10 a.m. Sunday.

Both dogs are female. One is three years old, is white, silver and gold, and had a pink collar. The other dog is six months old, is black and has a white chest. The dogs are valued at $500.

Reynolds passes out

LOS ANGELES — Actor Burt Reynolds, who passed out from pain in a Florida hotel, definitely has a kidney stone and faces "a lot of tests," his manager says.

Reynolds, 48, flew back to Los Angeles on Sunday after fainting at a hotel in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. He has a new restaurant in the resort.

Manager David Gershenson said Reynolds was at home Sunday evening and coping with pain that "comes and goes. Sometimes it's excruciating, then he'll be fine for a while."

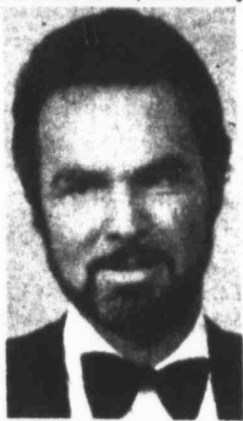

The actor was to seek treatment today, he said. Reynolds and actress Loni Anderson arrived in Fort Lauderdale on Saturday afternoon for the opening of Burt and Jack's restaurant. Reynolds also owns the Burt Reynolds Dinner Theater in Jupiter.

The actor had been suffering from a kidney infection for five days and was running a high fever, Gershenson said.

He passed out about an hour before the scheduled opening and a doctor was called to Reynolds' room at the Pier 66 hotel.

Miss Anderson returned with Reynolds to Los Angeles on Sunday, but Gershenson said she wouldn't be able to stay with him because she films a television series in San Francisco on weekdays.

Reynolds missed the restaurant festivities attended by such Hollywood celebrities as Dom DeLuise, Ernest Borgnine, Esther Williams, Robbie Benson, Jim Brown, Ricardo Montalban, George Segal and Paul Williams, said Jack Jackson, Reynolds' business partner.

Reagan is well dressed

ATLANTA — A man who admits his wife has to coordinate his outfits has been named one of America's best-dressed men, joining the tasteful company of President Reagan, Michael Jackson and Frank Sinatra.

John P. Imlay Jr., chairman of Management Science America, was named the best-dressed man in American business Sunday by the Fashion Foundation of America in the organization's 43rd annual survey of custom tailors and designers.

"My wife will like that," an amused Imlay said Sunday when a reporter told him of his selection. "I'm color blind and my wife has to pick the ties and do the coordination."

Imlay, 47, said he buys his suits off the rack. "It's not that I have a tailor ... the salesman will be very happy," he said.

This was the second straight year that Reagan was named best-dressed statesman and third for Sinatra as best-dressed entertainer.

Others winners were: —New York Archbishop John J. O'Connor, best-dressed ecumenical figure.

—New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, best-dressed government official.

—Former Vice President Walter Mondale, best-dressed in public affairs.

—WNBC-TV weatherman Frank Field, best-dressed in communications.

—Concert violinist Isaac Stern, best-dressed musician.

Tornado slashes through small Louisiana town

CAMERON, La. (AP) — This isolated southwestern Louisiana town, located in the center of Hurricane Highway, recovered today from a predawn Sunday tornado that destroyed a new Knights of Columbus hall, a partially finished convenience store and several other downtown buildings.

No one was seriously hurt, but Sheriff James R. "Sno" Savoie said it would not surprise him if damages of more than $1 million were left behind by the 5:10 a.m. twister. He said there was a widespread power outage, but electricity was restored to most customers by 6 p.m.

The National Weather Service said the tornado, moving northeast at 20 miles an hour, touched down less than an hour before a tornado watch came down at 6 a.m.

The costliest destruction was at the new Our Lady Star of the Sea Knights of Columbus Hall.

"It was worth $400,000 yesterday, but not a penny today," said Knights of Columbus spokesman Black Carter.

The Cajun Foods convenience store, also located downtown, was leveled to its slab. The store was to open in a few weeks, said owner Pete Picou Jr., who also is Cameron Parish Civil Defense director.

Picou said three mobile homes also were destroyed, as well as a game room and the Cameron swimming pool. Two people reportedly were treated for minor injuries and released from South Cameron Hospital.

One resident, Donald Kelly, said the tornado's impact sounded like an explosion. Kelly said he had to kill six ducks and 14 rabbits whose backs were broken when the twister destroyed their cages.

Winds also caved in the windows and porch of a nearby home, built on pilings and owned by Johnny Cope.

SUSPECT KILLED — Alaska state troopers pull into Manley Hot Springs on the Tanana River with the body of Mike Silva. Silva, 25, suspected of killing nine people in the small town was killed in a gun battle with troopers when they tried to arrest him.

Drifter suspected of killing 9 persons dies in gun battle

MANLEY HOT SPRINGS, Alaska (AP) — As authorities dragged a muddy river for bodies, townspeople spoke quietly of the "weirdo" drifter with a long knife who wandered in last week and is believed to have killed nine people before being gunned down by police.

"Nobody will feel better until they can get some bodies out of the river," said Cleo Schnorf, a resident of this backwater mining town of 80 people about 90 miles west of Fairbanks. "Nobody will get any rest until they do."

Michael Silva, 25, drove to this community of log cabins on the Tanana River at the end of the Elliott Highway about a week ago and set up camp at a boat launching area about three miles from town.

On Thursday, six residents of the village went to the boat ramp for one reason or another. None was ever seen again.

Silva, shot to death Saturday by state police after he killed a trooper in a helicopter pursuing him, also has been linked to the death of a trapper in this rugged central Alaska wilderness, and was a suspect in a slaying last month in Fairbanks, officials said.

A pregnant woman and a 2-year-old child are among those who vanished and are presumed dead. Residents said Sunday they are certain they were killed and thrown into the river.

Authorities presume the missing people were killed, Sam Barnard, a homicide investigator with the Alaska State Troopers in Fairbanks, said Sunday night. Dragging for bodies was to resume today.

Residents said the bearded Silva arrived about a week ago in a brown sedan with a canoe lashed to its roof, and camped by the river.

"He was scraggly and he acted really weird. ... This is the end of the road. All the weirdos end up here," said Patricia Lee, who with her husband Bob operates the Manley Roadhouse.

Another resident, Teresa Conger, said that in her only meeting with Silva he could not stop fussing with a knife.

"He had a huge knife that he just kept sharpening and sharpening," she said. "He was just obsessed with that ... knife."

By Friday, townspeople had noticed that six people were missing and called state police for help. Troopers arrived at 2 a.m. Saturday.

They found marks at the blood-splattered boat landing indicating that objects had been dragged down to the edge of the muddy river, still clogged with ice from the spring breakup.

Silva, already being sought for questioning in the April 28 slaying of Robert Culp of Fairbanks, was soon identified as the suspect, said Lt. John Myers of the troopers Fairbanks detachment.

"We were actively investigating that homicide when we learned he (Silva) was here," Barnard said.

Six state troopers in two helicopters found Silva at a slough on the Zitiziana River about 25 miles from Manley Hot Springs, where he had beached a boat and the canoe he was towing.

When the helicopters closed in, Silva opened fire with a rifle and fatally wounded Trooper Troy L. Duncan, 34, of Fairbanks, said Myers.

Duncan's companions returned fire, killing Silva, Myers said.

The troopers said the boat and one of the several weapons found at the scene belonged to Fred Burke, a trapper on the nearby Kantishna River who also has vanished.

Congress faces a long week

WASHINGTON (AP) — While negotiators for the House and Senate prepare to fashion a compromise "down payment" on the federal deficit, both chambers tackle separate legislation this week to raise the national debt limit and keep the government from exhausting its line of credit within days.

And the House will resume on Wednesday its debate on the Pentagon's spending bill, with challenges in store for the B-1 bomber, space weaponry and the Pershing and cruise missiles. Last week, the chamber cut $1 billion, largely by trimming President Reagan's request for 40 MX missiles to just 15 — and then only if Moscow refuses to return to arms talks.

Leading off the week's agenda was House debate today on a compromise measure, tacitly supported by the tobacco industry, calling for tougher warning labels on cigarettes. A bill crafted by Rep. Albert Gore Jr., D-Tenn., would require packages to carry one of four labels — that smoking causes lung cancer; a warning to pregnant women; advice that quitting reduces health risks, and a warning that cigarette smoke contains carbon monoxide.

The Senate had an uncertain schedule, but debate was expected early in the week on a measure to establish standards for giving disability compensation to veterans exposed to Agent Orange.

The Senate calendar also was likely to include consideration of the nomination of J. Harvie Wilkinson III to be a judge on the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va.

The nomination was opposed by civil rights and feminist groups who questioned Wilkinson's philosophy, and pointed out that Wilkinson, 39, a former law professor and clerk of Supreme Court Justice Lewis F. Powell, has never had a client and never tried a case in court.

On Thursday, the Treasury Department says federal spending likely will run up against the current debt limit, $1.49 trillion. Without an increase, the government would be unable to continue borrowing to meet its obligations and would be left operating on a cash-only basis.

Mondale mum on VP

WASHINGTON — George McGovern, a dropout in the race for the Democratic presidential nomination, said Sunday that a Walter Mondale-Gary Hart ticket would be the "quickest way to heal" the animosity of the campaign, but Mondale refused to commit himself.

Hart, meanwhile, said he would consider the Rev. Jesse Jackson, the third Democratic presidential candidate, as a possible running mate if he changed his views on the Middle East. "I think he has earned the right to be considered as a party leader, including vice president," Hart said on a California interview show. But he added, "I think for Rev. Jackson to be considered with me he would have to change his positions on the Middle East."

Mondale declined to comment on prospective running mates.

"I think it's presumptuous to pick a vice president now," the former vice president said, although he stated unequivocally that he will get enough delegates to win the nominee.

Group blasts El Salvador

LONDON — Amnesty International today accused El Salvador's government of ordering the executions of many of the estimated 40,000 people murdered there since 1979 and interfering with investigations of the deaths.

The London-based human rights group said there had been "blatant failure" by El Salvadoran authorities to investigate the killings, and charged that the "authorities themselves lie behind the wholesale extrajudicial executions."

"The Salvadoran criminal justice system appeared to have totally collapsed" as far as the killings were concerned, said Amnesty, which won the 1977 Nobel Peace Prize.

In a 48-page report on El Salvador's 4½-year-old civil war, Amnesty said the authorities' manipulation of evidence, refusal to cooperate with international agencies seeking to identify the killers, and intimidation of lawyers, medical examiners and witnesses all pointed to government involvement in the deaths.

Without police investigations, the government's claim that the killings were carried out by right-wing extremists or the left-wing opposition couldn't be verified, the report said.

Iran accused of attacks

Arab foreign ministers accused Iran of aggression in its alleged attacks against oil tankers in the Persian Gulf, but Iran's president said his country is prepared to disrupt all gulf shipping as long as its own oil exports are jeopardized.

The speech by President Ali Khamenei was reported today by Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency after foreign ministers of the 21-nation Arab League adopted a resolution accusing Iran of attacks on Arab tankers.

The resolution was approved in Tunis, Tunisia, on Sunday despite opposition from Syria and Libya, Iran's only Arab allies in its 3½-year-old war with Iraq. The resolution did not mention attacks around Iran's Kharg Island for which Iraq, a league member, has claimed responsibility.

Also Sunday, diplomatic sources said Arab nations in the gulf have increased their military surveillance in response to the recent attacks on ships.

Khamenei, in a speech delivered in Tehran, said, "If the United States takes part in the adventurous games in the Persian Gulf, it will receive a slap far harder than the one it got in Lebanon."

He apparently referred to the withdrawal of a U.S. Marine force from Lebanon following a suicide bomb attack that killed 241 U.S. servicemen.

"The oil routes in the Persian gulf are either safe for all or unsafe for all," the IRNA report, monitored in Nicosia, Cyprus, quoted Khamenei as saying.

'Briefinggate' is teapot tempest

Beyond the clumsiness of the response of the Justice Department, there is probably a lot less to what has awkwardly been dubbed "Briefinggate" than meets the eye. White House Chief of Staff James A. Baker III and Budget Director David Stockman, among others, have acknowledged that during the 1980 presidential campaign they had received what Stockman called "filched" copies of papers that were used to brief President Carter for a debate with candidate Ronald Reagan. Baker said his copies of the Carter papers had come from William J. Casey, then chairman of the campaign and now director of the Central Intelligence Agency. Casey has denied all that.

Even if all the basic allegations were true — if someone inside the Carter campaign, maybe even a Reagan "mole," had made copies and supplied them to the Reagan staff — it wouldn't amount to much more than a middle-size embarrassment.

Yet somehow, Attorney General William French Smith, in refusing to ask for the appointment of a special prosecutor to investigate, and now, in challenging the order of U.S. Judge Harold H. Greene that he do so, is making the affair look more serious than it probably is.

It may be that the federal courts do not have legal authority, under the special prosecutor law passed after Watergate, to order the government to do what Judge Green just told it to do, but it shouldn't have come to that in the first place.

Olympic theory

WASHINGTON — Soviet withdrawal from the Olympics explodes another fatuous dogma dear to the right-wing admirers of Ronald Reagan. Now going up in smoke is the notion that the Russians will lie, cheat, steal, murder, etc., to advance communism.

For the Olympic decision was an irrational action which, as the Russians know, helps Reagan's chances for reelection. It shows, as Ambassador Arthur Hartman indicated during his recent Washington stay, that Russian behavior depends far more on inner Soviet politics than on events in the outside world.

Konstantin Chernenko, the Brezhnev protégé who succeeded Yuri Andropov as general secretary when the former KGB boss died last fall, is the starting point. Chernenko is in good political health and his picture appears daily on Soviet TV and in the press. While he suffers from emphysema, Moscow-watchers do not believe the malady is soon apt to prove fatal.

But when it comes to asserting himself and taking charge of business, Chernenko has limited his influence to easing up on a few of the anti-corruption actions taken by Andropov at the expense of the party wheel-dealers. But he has not pushed forward with even modest reform of the economy. In international affairs he has left everything up to the inner gang of hard-liners grouped around Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, Defense Minister Dmitri Ustinov and the military brass.

The inner foreign policy group has long taken the most dire view possible of Ronald Reagan. They believe he wants to achieve military superiority over Russia in order to unravel the Soviet revolution and all its achievements. They read his talk of the "evil empire" as a challenge to Soviet legitimacy. When he talks peace, they discern mainly a device to drug opposition here and in allied countries, and to lull Russia, while the U.S. re-arms.

Brezhnev managed a little easing of tension over their opposition, but had lost the initiative by the time he died. Andropov tried to keep a line open. But his effort collapsed in the wake of the Soviet shooting down of the Korean airliner in September, and the sour interpretation of the U.S. reaction forced by Gromyko and Ustinov.

The expectation in Moscow was that as a Brezhnevite, Chernenko would try to revive the détente approach. Instead he has systematically backed down before the Gromyko-Ustinov lobby. The Olympic decision is a case in point.

The basic Soviet approach to the games was positive. Russian athletes figured to do well and make a rare score for communism on the world stage. Similarly with many East European countries. So the Russians plunked down cold cash for tickets, and several East European countries made it plain they were going to the games.

But many Soviet sports authorities nursed some doubts, based on reports that right-wing American groups would harass Russian athletes and maybe even try to force defections. These doubts were reported up through the Central Committee to the Politburo. In the Politburo discussions, Gromyko and Ustinov argued that Russia risked a humiliation at the Olympics. Since Reagan in their view was going to be reelected anyway and would continue with his anti-Soviet policies, there was nothing to lose by affronting U.S. opinion. Chernenko let them have their way. Thus did Russia decide to forgo the Los Angeles games.

Chances for an early improvement of Big Two relations seem slim. The Russians, convinced that Reagan is an implacable enemy, are not going to do him any favors. Since they see little chance of a Democratic victory, they are not even going to dangle the bait of good things to come if Reagan were off the scene. On the contrary, Moscow now seems determined to avoid any arms control negotiations that might limit its capacity to stay abreast of the U.S.

But if nothing very good looks likely, neither is the landscape so frightening.

Still one thing can be done to prevent matters from getting worse. Andrei Sakharov, the saintly scientist whom the Russians have exiled to Gorky, is on a hunger strike that could threaten his life. His death, besides being a crime in itself, would demoralize and discredit the thin band of Westerners who still feel it is important to work out some kind of understanding with Moscow. So while awaiting changes in leadership in Washington or Moscow, it makes sense to do something positive for Sakharov. Perhaps one of the leaders due to visit Moscow in the next weeks — notably French President Francois Mitterrand — might be able to bring Sakharov back for medical treatment in the West.

Presidency for profit in Mexico

WASHINGTON — Mexican President Miguel de la Madrid, who meets with President Reagan in the White House today, has amassed a multimillion-dollar fortune since he took office, according to highly classified U.S. intelligence documents.

Self-enrichment is a tradition among Mexican presidents; it may also be perfectly legal under Mexican law. The presidential salary is secret, and the single political party's only rule, according to one insider, is: "Don't rock the trough."

Perhaps in deference to his country's precarious financial situation and the extreme poverty of its people, de la Madrid is believed to have collected a secret "salary" far more modest than his predecessors'. It is, nevertheless, huge.

One high-level administration source with regular access to ultra-secret intelligence reports told my associate Dale Van Atta that in one series of transactions in the four months after he took office in December 1982, de la Madrid salted away $13 million to $14 million in a Swiss bank.

Another source with access to CIA and National Security Agency data cited one report last fall, based on cable intercepts of international bank transactions, that put the total of de la Madrid's "take" during his presidency at $162 million — minimum. At the CIA, the six-year presidential term is referred to jokingly as the "golden parachute" that carries every president safely to a sizable fortune.

Efforts to reach de la Madrid for comment were unsuccessful, but a spokesman at the Mexican Embassy said the U.S. intelligence information was wrong — "absolutely out of the question." He pointed out that de la Madrid has been mounting an aggressive anti-corruption campaign.

That too is an honored presidential tradition in Mexico. De la Madrid's immediate predecessor, Jose Lopez Portillo, went through the same ritual, calling corruption "the cancer of Mexico." Yet Lopez Portillo, who ruled during the heady days of Mexico's short-lived oil prosperity, amassed a personal fortune. By the CIA's estimate, he salted away a staggering $1 billion to $3 billion.

The symbol of Lopez Portillo's wealth is the luxurious, 32-acre estate he built overlooking Mexico City. It is nicknamed "Dog Hill," in mocking reference to Lopez Portillo's statement that he would "fight like a dog" to defend the shrinking value of the peso.

While many of his countrymen live in adobe or corrugated metal hovels, Lopez Portillo and his family have bathrooms of marble and gold, according to Mexican press accounts. Some floors are made of jade; one is transparent, with a detailed model of the Acropolis visible through it.

The Mexican government installed a power plant for what a Mexican magazine called the "walled medieval fortress overlooking the capital." The public works agency spent $33 million on the access road, sewage and water lines for Lopez Portillo's estate.

The ex-president's largesse reportedly extended even to a high-level government official who was his alleged mistress. Her house is said to be so large that one of the closets measures 27 feet by 100 feet and has a mezzanine.

Despite the blatancy of Lopez Portillo's self-enrichment in office, U.S. and Mexican sources doubt that he will ever be a target of his successor's cleanup campaign. Instead, de la Madrid has moved against some officials of the former president's regime, including the former head of the national oil monopoly and the former chief of Mexico City's police.

Sin is like devastating fire

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: There is a woman in our office who has left her husband and children and run off with another man (who also is married). She says she knows it is wrong, but God will forgive her so she doesn't worry about it. Would you comment on that, please? — W.N.

DEAR W.N.: She does not understand either the seriousness of sin or forgiveness of God, and she is in a very dangerous condition spiritually. It is an error to think we can sin and live any way we want to, thinking all we have to do is confess it to God and he will forgive it anyway. That is somewhat like saying it is all right to set fire to your house, because the insurance company will rebuild it anyway. But, of course, they won't rebuild it if they discover you have deliberately set fire to it.

Sin is like a fire that devastates all it touches. When we deliberately sin against God and his moral laws, we hurt ourselves and others around us as well — both now and in eternity. Think of this woman you mentioned. She has wrecked two homes, possibly scarring the lives of her children with bitterness and insecurity for life. Some day she also is going to find out her own life is not as happy as she thought it would be. After all, if her husband was willing to leave his first wife for someone else, what assurances does she have he won't do the same again to her?

Yes, God can forgive sin — that is the thrilling and wonderful message of the Bible. He can forgive it because he sent his only Son, Jesus Christ, to die on the cross. Sin is that serious — only Christ's death could take it away.

But how does forgiveness come? It comes as we turn from our sins in repentance, and then turn by faith to Christ for forgiveness.

Swan song

How can there be any good in goodbye.
— from The Music Man

This is my swan song. At the stroke of 5 p.m. on Wednesday, my two-year and nine-month career at the Big Spring Herald will end. I then will leave for Aggie and a new job at the Bryan-College Station Eagle where I will be news and wire editor.

It would be comfortable for me to stay here, but I have always been a believer in risk-taking. New challenges build character. One is forced to examine just exactly who he or she is. I never want to be a person who moans "I should have done that."

However, leaving means saying goodbye. And I hate saying goodbye. There is no real and complete way to bid farewell to the special people I have worked with during my tenure at the Herald. All those moments of laughing, crying, complaining and arguing are what made it all worthwhile. Those experiences will be with me always. I shall remember them fondly.

Ex-staffers like Cliff Coan, Mike Downey, Carol Daniel, Richard Horn, and Linda Adams are like family members. So are present veterans Carol Baldwin, Keith Briscoe, Tina Steffen, and Rhonda Woodall. And had I worked longer with the newer people, they would have joined this list.

I hope the readers of this Monday column will miss me. If they do, then I will have done an adequate job. I have always tried to write something with feeling in it. I know many of these screeds have failed, but I hope I have occasionally touched someone out there.

I hope those I worked with as a reporter respected my work. I tried to be as fair and objective as was humanly possible. I am indebted to the lessons and information those persons shared with me.

It is said we pass this way but once. I'm glad this place was on my roadmap.

Opinions expressed in this column are those of the staff writer and do not necessarily reflect the views of the newspaper's management.

Reye's syndrome

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Just a reminder to you that Reye's syndrome can occur in a young adult. Recently, in a discussion in your column, you referred only to "the child." At 18, as a senior in high school, my sister had Reye's syndrome and her doctor was hesitant about acknowledging the fact. Please widen the spectrum of awareness to include this age group also. — C.H.

You're quite right. Reye's syndrome has been seen in a wide range of ages, from infants of a few months to adults as old as 51. However, the peak age for this illness ranges from 11 to 14 years.

Perhaps this is a good time to repeat the symptoms of Reye's which are much the same in any age group. However, since the child is the usual victim, let me again refer mainly to children.

The common setting is this: A child has had a viral illness, especially chicken pox or the flu. He seems to be recovering, but begins to vomit. He has changes in behavior or acts confused or drowsy. If those changes are noted, the parent should call the doctor for guidance.

Incidentally, the person usually has no fever at this point (while these changes are occurring). And often, all the symptoms are not present. There may be only a noticeable alteration in general behavior. If a well-adjusted child who has just recovered from a viral illness becomes belligerent or acts odd, the suspicion of Reye's is raised. When you couple that with overt physical symptoms, like vomiting, the suspicion is even stronger that he might have Reye's.

Your point is well made, however. Reye's while often considered so, is not exclusively a disease of children.

NOTE TO READERS: I have been asked to clarify the difference between the terms "occupational therapist" and "physical therapist." Because training for each is different, I should do so.

Physical therapists are trained to help with exercises that strengthen muscles and increase joint movement. Occupational therapists are trained to help disabled people perform everyday activities, such as grooming, driving and eating. If I have not made this clear in past references, I am deserving of reprimand from these groups.

Dear Abby

Indian medicine can cure woes

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago you had a letter from a woman who for many years thought she had a wonderful marriage, then her husband died suddenly, and some evidence turned up that made her believe her husband had been having an affair with another woman. The poor widow then worked up an intense hatred for her husband's memory, making her bitter and miserable.

I have been practicing Native American medicine and healing for many years, and I know that most sicknesses begin in the head. Anger, jealousy, fear, resentment and bitterness — all emotional reactions create physical ailments: headaches, ulcers, heartaches, etc. I believe that certain types of cancer are caused by emotional stress.

I help people cure their sickness by having them go outside, dig a hole in the earth, lie down on their stomachs and speak all their angry thoughts into the hole, cover it over with the dirt and leave it there. That way, they actually "bury" all the negative, stressful emotions within them that made them sick. It works, Abby.

SUN BEAR IN SPOKANE, WASH.
DEAR SUN BEAR: "Getting all the garbage out" is the basis for all healing. Indeed, it's the principle of psychoanalysis, which takes longer, and costs more.

DEAR ABBY: Pity I can't claim authorship to this little verse; it's just my type:

My typist's away on Vacation
My typist's away by the sea
She left me to do all the typig
O bRing back my typist to me
Md typizm is aw-py on vaction3
a fact gou can easily zee —
IT's odd how thees letirs get mixzed up.
O brine back my tyspit to me;?

LA cautious about series clinching tilt

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Although they are now a win away from clinching another Western Conference championship, the Los Angeles Lakers are taking nothing for granted against the Phoenix Suns.

Sunday's 126-115 victory here gave the Lakers a commanding 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven National Basketball Association playoff series. Game 5 will be Wednesday night at the Forum in Inglewood, Calif.

"It's not over. This is just one step," said Los Angeles center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who scored 22 of his 31 points in a decisive first half.

"We're a long way from having this thing over with," said Lakers Coach Pat Riley. "We've got the momentum and we want to close it out as soon as possible. I wish we were playing Tuesday night instead of Wednesday because by then the momentum will subside somewhat. We can't count Phoenix out yet."

Los Angeles had to stave off a furious fourth-quarter Suns' rally to take Game 4.

Behind 105-93 with 9:08 remaining, Phoenix used four points apiece by reserves Alvin Scott and Charles Pittman, plus Paul Westphal's jumper, to cut the gap to 107-103 with 6:16 left.

Earvin "Magic" Johnson, who had 20 points and 15 assists, converted a midcourt steal into a stuff and Abdul-Jabbar's three-point play made it 114-103 with 4:44 left.

The Suns never got closer than eight from there before a sellout crowd of 14,660 at the Arizona Veterans Memorial Coliseum, plus a national television audience.

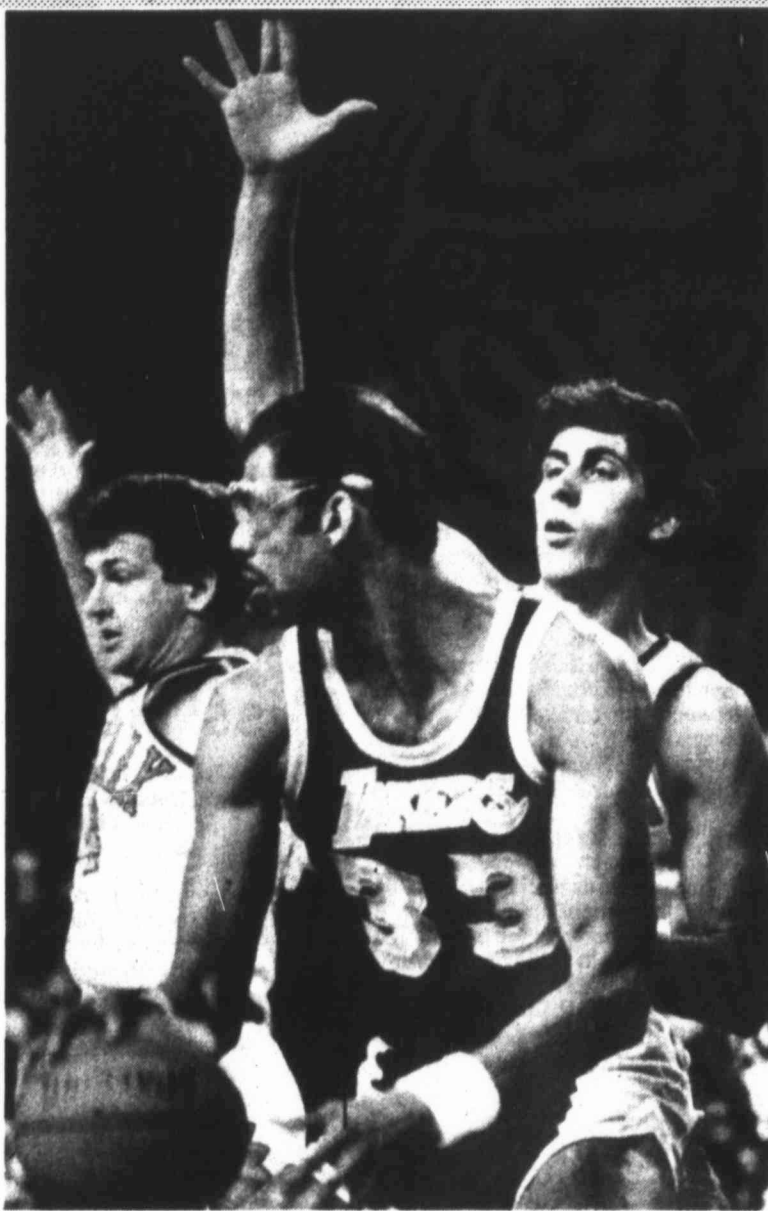

"We just went soft," Riley said. "We have a tendency sometimes to stop doing the things that got us the lead. Their lineup was quick and pressuring and we tried to hold them off instead of trying to attack. It almost looked like the last game all over again."

Los Angeles lost Game 3 here Friday night 135-127 in overtime and Riley said, "When we lose a big game and play poorly, we always come back strong. We have a tremendous amount of character. We were more intent and more focused this time. We wanted this one."

The Lakers shot 60.2 percent from the field — a playoff high for them. Their first-half field goal percentage was 71 percent en route to a 69-58 lead.

"We shot 63 percent and we're still down by 11. That's almost unheard of," Suns forward Maurice Lucas said. "They got us in the hole early and they never really let us out of it. Kareem played clutch basketball, just like always. Whenever they needed a hoop, they sent the ball down to the big guy and he produced."

The 7-foot-2 veteran poured in 12 first-period points to put the Lakers up 37-36 — the first time in the series they have led after one quarter.

DEFENSE — Los Angeles Lakers Kareem Abdul-Jabbar looks for room to pass while being guarded by Phoenix Suns Alvin Adams. Suns Paul Westphal (left) blocks the lane to lend a hand. LA went up 3-1, however in the playoff series by beating the Suns, 126-115.

Second career win sweet for Jacobsen

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — It was, for Peter Jacobsen, a splendid day of golf and intense emotion.

When Jacobsen beat Payne Stewart in a sudden death playoff for the $500,000 Colonial National Invitation golf championship Sunday, it was only his second victory since joining the PGA Tour in 1977.

But, that was not the reason the tournament had so special a meaning.

As the winning birdie putt on the first extra hole disappeared into the cup, Jacobsen said his only thought was of his father, Erling, critically ill with cancer and hospitalized in his hometown of Portland, Ore.

"Hey, this is for you, Dad," said Jacobsen, who learned of the illness just last week and, after an opening round of 64, vowed to win this one for his father.

Jacobsen ended the playoff with a 5-foot birdie putt after Stewart had bogeyed the hole.

Other celebs set to grace Pro-Am

In addition to players from the New Orleans on hand for the Signal Peak Shriners Pro-Am and Russell Erxleben Benefit for Steve Little slated to begin Thursday, there will also be several other greats and near greats from past and present in the world of sports.

A former schoolboy star at BSHS, CHARLIE JOHNSON is among the star studded field playing. Johnson starred for the St. Louis Cardinals, Houston Oilers and Denver Broncos in the NFL.

Former Texas Christian University and Washington Redskins quarterback, "SLINGING" SAMMY BAUGH is coming in from his ranch near Roscoe. The former Sweetwater High School star passed the Redskins to the NFL championship in 1937. Ten years later he set a new passing record for the team and remained active in the sport until 1962 when he stepped down as coach of the Houston Oilers.

A player of a more modern era was COTTON SPEYER, one of the top split ends in University of Texas history and part of Texas' awesome era when the Longhorns won six straight Southwest Conference football championships from 1968 to 1973. Speyer was drafted and played several seasons for the Baltimore Colts.

TERRY TAUSCH will also make an appearance at the tournament. The native of New Braunfels was an all-star offensive lineman at the University of Texas before being drafted by the Minnesota Vikings in 1962 where he has blossomed into a steady performer for the NFL team.

DAVID STUDARD is a present Bronco lending his name to the event and TOM BRAHANEY a St. Louis Cardinal that hails from Snyder and the University of Oklahoma is one more pro star added to the list.

It's not too late for purchasing tickets

Gallery tickets are still on sale for the Signal Peak Shriners Pro-Am Golf Tournament that starts a two day run Thursday, May 24 at the Big Spring Country Club course.

For only $5, area golf fans can catch a glimpse of professional athletes working at a good cause — the proceeds of the tourney will benefit Shriners Childrens Hospitals and burn centers and Steve Little, the former Arkansas and St. Louis Cardinals kicker left paralyzed in an auto accident three years ago.

The $5 tag on tickets is good for all three days of the tourney that includes a Wednesday practice round and actual competition Thursday and Friday. Tee off times are 8:30 a.m. each day.

Tickets can be purchased at Skipper Travel, the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce or any radio station within the city.

A parade Wednesday, May 23 at 4 p.m. will get things kicked off. The parade will assemble in front of Big Spring Savings, continue up Third Street and back to Gregg St.

Each team will be made up of one club professional from the Big Spring area plus a celebrity and four amateurs. There will be 53, six-man teams.

In addition to Erxleben, several members of the New Orleans Saints team and coaching staff are expected to attend, including head coach and general manager Bum Phillips.

Gretzky figures Oilers' victory will spark changes in NHL style

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — Wayne Gretzky, in the afterglow of the Edmonton Oilers' first Stanley Cup triumph, believes that his team's victory could leave a significant imprint on the game.

"Over the last five years, the style of hockey has changed," said Gretzky, the record-shattering center who has been at the forefront of that change toward free-wheeling, high-scoring hockey. "Because we've won the Cup, it might change the game that much more."

"It's become more of a European style, with much more speed. Every team has it."

"I hope we've influenced the game. I know we put people in buildings and they enjoy the way we play. They go away from the rink excited. We've shown you don't have to fight all the time, or play dirty hockey. We've shown there's more to the game than that."

Oilers Coach-General Manager Glen Sather, the man most responsible for putting together the team that snapped the New York Islanders' four-year reign as National Hockey League champions, mentioned the meaning to his countrymen of Edmonton's four-games-to-one final-round triumph.

"I think Canadians are relating to this," he said. "It means a lot to have a Canadian team win the Cup."

"Our team put in a lot of hard work to get this far and people appreciate that."

Sather felt his team's grownup attitude made a big difference this year. Last spring, the Islanders swept the Oilers in the finals. This year, New York's drive to tie Montreal's record of five consecutive championships (1956-60) died at the hands of a faster, more resourceful and more mature opponent from Edmonton.

"Maturity and hunger made the difference," he said. "I don't know how hungry the Islanders were. They won for four years."

While the Oilers stand atop the hockey world, the Islanders promise they'll be back.

"We have a number of young kids — you saw them in the playoffs — like (Pat) Flatley, (Pat) LaFontaine, Brent Sutter, Greg Gilbert, 'Boots' (Paul Boutilier)," said Coach Al Arbour. "We don't have a major job to do."

"We did the best we could," added Islanders GM Bill Torrey, who built the dynasty from scratch. "We'll just get everybody healthy and we'll go back at it next year."

YMCA swim program being offered

The Big Spring YMCA and the Big Spring Herald are offering the 2nd Annual learn-to-swim program for youngsters between the ages of six and 10 May 29 through June 1. Wallace Gill, executive director of the YMCA said, "Swimming is one of the finest of all exercises, bringing into play every important muscle in the body."

He added, "Swimming also has the added advantage of being a sport one can begin at an early age and continue just about all one's life."

In the Y's special program, young participants will be introduced to the water, taught fundamentals of breathing, floating, swimming strokes and safety practices.

The classes are open to boys and girls who are both members and non-members of the Y. Advanced classes are offered to those who wish to learn more about swimming practices.

Registration begins at the Y each day at 9 a.m. and is free of charge.

For information on the Y's special swim program or regular swimming classes, call 267-8234 or drop by the Big Spring YMCA located at 801 Owens St.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, MAY 22, 1984

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The affliction of the Moon and the Sun may make it somewhat difficult to put some plans into motion. Nevertheless the daytime is good for thinking up grandiose schemes.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Contact good friends who can help you to gain personal wishes, and then talk with outside partners about having greater mutual success.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You can accomplish a good deal in the world of activity provided you do not let some private anxiety deter your progress.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You have new plans that are very good so put them in operation quickly in an up-to-date manner, and don't let anyone stop you.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Find some way of improving the relationship between you and your mate and forget any extra-curricular activity.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Avoid a demanding higher-up and cooperate more with an associate and then you can accomplish a good deal today.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You find it hard to make changes at your job so postpone for awhile when you have fewer interruptions. Be wise.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Make arrangements for entertainment later in the week even though delays may occur. You may have a problem to contend with.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) There may be some turmoil at home, so get out in the business world and accomplish a good deal. Be happy at home tonight.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Find the right way of making your relations with others more interesting and satisfying. Enjoy yourself socially.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Find the right way of getting your financial affairs in better order. Show your mate that you really care and be happier together.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You want to make real progress but find it difficult in the morning; don't get discouraged. Be with cheerful people and be happy.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Be sure you handle those private affairs although you feel you want to forget them. Show appreciation.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be one who can easily adapt new era ideas to standard ones and should be given a chance to do so. Give a comprehensive education since later years bring great happiness and success, and early training is important.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!
