NEW PRESIDENT PROMISES "ACTION" Texas Legislature Enacts Bill to Meet Banking Crisis

HOLIDAY END IS ASSURED IMMEDIATELY

AUSTIN, March 4.—The legislature tonight passed the state banking moratorium measure, limiting withdrawals of deposits and placing the limitation in the hands of the banking commissioner after the senate agreed to a house amendment striking out April 30 as the limit on the bill's life.

Agreement on the measure was reached in conference late in the afternoon. As passed by the house the original bill made the act indefinite as to time. The senate bill, however, limited the almost dictatorial authority to be placed in the hands of the commissioner, to a period ending April 30.

The measure allows limitation of bank deposit withdrawals.

With passage of this measure Texas is practically assured that its banks will reopen next Wednesday earlier with protection against any situation that might result from the current moratorium or from actions in other states.

The bill permits the banking commissioner, with the approval of the state banking board and the governor, to declare a banking moratorium, or a period in which withdrawal of bank deposits may be limited, if he sees fit.

Many bankers in conference here favored letting Banking Commissioner James Shaw and bankers in each community determine the percentage of withdrawals to be allowed in each.

BANK MORATORIA RATION-WIDE

NEW YORK, March 4.—A protective paralysis descended today upon the harassed financial organism of the United States.

Banking and trading in securities was suspended in almost all important centers, while millionaires and clerks, left alike with their funds frozen, looked to the incoming administration at Washington for relief.

New York state and Illinois, embracing the two financial capitals of America, today joined the territories in which banking operations are suspended. As news of the new York and Chicago actions spread, other states rapidly fell into line.

Trading Suspended.

Repercussions of America's bank holiday were felt around the world. Trading in dollars, exchange was suspended in London and other European capitals, and banks declined to cash dollar checks or letters of credit for American tourists and residents.

Since the New York holiday was the second banking day, only today and Monday, there seemed to be reason to suppose financial authorities had confidence that some measure of national relief would be arranged between the administering of the oath of office to Franklin D. Roosevelt today and the scheduled resumption of business Tuesday.

CHICAGO BOARD OF TRADE SUSPENDED

CHICAGO, March 4.—The Chicago Board of Trade, the leading market for world, suspended operations today for the first time since 1884. The suspension was until further notice.

MURRAY CALLS TROOPS ENFORCE BANK HOLIDAY

OKLAHOMA CITY, March 4.—Gov. W. H. Murray today called upon his militia to enforce the Oklahoma bank holiday which he had proclaimed to protect depositors in 3 banks.

PORT WORTH EXCHANGE CLOSING

PORT WORTH, March 4.—The Port Worth Grain and Cotton exchange suspended operations today for an indefinite period. Cattle markets remained open. Livestock sales continued business, using cash or checks as preferred.

WEATHER

East Texas — Probably showers today. Colder west and north central portions.

West Texas — Sunday probably fair and colder.

Honest Liquor Runner Found

PALESTINE, March 4.—Deputy Constable J. W. Neel of this city found an honest liquor runner.

Driving up beside a car parked at a filling station near here Neel asked the occupant of the machine what he was hauling.

"Liquor," was the reply.

Neel investigated and found 24 gallons of contraband, he told authorities here.

PREXY CLARK IS BACK FROM COLLEGE MEET

President Lee Clark of Randolph college, who has returned from Kansas City where he attended the thirteenth annual meeting of the American Association of Junior Colleges, reports that the attendance at the meeting was the greatest that it has been in four years.

Representatives were present from colleges in 24 different states. President Clark says that the junior college movement has taken a firm hold on America and that there is evidence that it is a permanent feature of the national educational system.

Faculty Team Wins Randolph Tournney

Demonstrating the value of a higher education, the faculty at Randolph college laid down their brief cases and spectacles and took up their rackets long enough to give the professors their second tennis championship of the college this year.

Dean E. B. Isaack and Coach Garrett defeated their youthful rivals in the finals of the men's doubles, 6-love, 8-6, and 6-2.

In the girls preliminaries in the singles, El Dora Cooper defeated Audrey Gentry, 6-4; and Rozelle Phippen won from Jennie Lee Matthews, 6-3.

CITY NOISES BLAMED FOR WEAK HEARTS

By CECIL B. BROWN
United Press Staff Correspondent

LOS ANGELES, March 4.—If Americans would live longer, let them soft-pedal noises of their cities.

Shocks from modern noises, radars, automobiles, street cars and telephones — the whole crashing crescendo of a day in a modern city — are responsible for the tremendous increase in heart disease.

These were the contentions of Dr. Franz M. Groedel, German heart specialist at Bad Nauheim, professor of cardiac treatment in the medical school of the University of Frankfurt.

Strain of these noises and resultant nerve shock caused hardening of the arteries and all the kindred ills which followed, Dr. Groedel said. The German specialist offered his panacea for heart trouble.

"Eat often, but not too much at a time; smoke as much as you wish, but avoid strong tobacco; mild and good alcoholic liquors are relatively harmless." Take a siesta of half an hour to an hour in the middle of the day's work. Rest two full days a week. Don't worry. Don't hurry. Don't force yourself beyond your powers."

He explained that one of the best treatments for heart trouble that his experience brought him was the use of baths and physiotherapy, resulting in lessening of the nerve strain and consequent strengthening of the heart.

COUNTY STOCK SHOW REVEALS NEW INTEREST

Tired, but content, officials of the Eastland County Livestock show rested today to contemplate the most successful exposition of its character that has ever been presented here. The curtain fell upon the second and final day of the event last night after a gusty afternoon during which many hundreds of visitors milled about the arena at South D avenue and Tenth street to view the 300 and more entries which had been collected from all over the county.

Judging, delayed by the classification of the unexpected number of exhibits, was completed Friday afternoon, leaving Saturday free for entertainment features of the program and for the district Future Farmers contest. The latter drew more than 100 boys from 12 of the 14 schools in the district who competed in judging poultry, dairy cattle and beef cattle and in plant production and soil conservation contests.

A series of boxing matches presented from an outdoor ring erected in the center of the arena, was the main attraction of the Saturday afternoon program. A team pulling contest was another.

Large crowds, both of Cisco people and of visitors from the rural sections of the county, attended the show both Friday and Saturday.

Excellent Quality.

The class of animals exhibited was unusually good, ranking with exhibits in much larger expositions. Evidence of the new emphasis which is being placed upon livestock in this section was seen in this quality.

Lambos were particularly in evidence. There were 75 of these in the class of about 25 sheep. The list of dairy cattle entries numbered approximately 35 with more than 15 dairy cattle, 30 goats and a large number of horses and mules. Hogs were likewise numerous, exceeding 75 animals.

The buildings formerly occupied by the Wilkinson Lumber company were used for the stalls and these were crowded to their capacity.

E. H. Varnell, Cisco vocational agriculturist and director of the show, was well pleased with the results, and declared that it was the biggest and best that has ever been held here.

Winners in the various divisions were announced as follows:

Beef Cattle.

Bull, 18 months and over—First, Dr. F. E. Clark; second W. L. Parmer; third, E. N. Strickland.

Bull, under 18 months — First, Dr. C. C. Jones; second, T. E. Hayden; third, E. N. Strickland.

Bull, under six months—First Dr. F. E. Clark; second, Dr. F. E. Clark.

Cow, over two years—First Dr. F. E. Clark; second, Dr. F. E. Clark.

Heifer, under two years—First Dr. F. E. Clark; second, Dr. F. E. Clark.

Heifer, under 12 months — First Norvell and Miller; second, Dr. F. E. Clark; third, Jack Hardwick.

Steer calf, Jr.—First, Durwood Allen; second, Duvall Ryan; third, Clovis McCollum.

Champion bull—Dr. F. E. Clark.

Champion female—Dr. F. E. Clark.

Oldest Honor Man Inaugural Guest

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Francis A. Bishop, 91, of Retail, Wash., attended the Roosevelt inaugural today as the invited guest of Ray Baker, chairman of the inaugural committee on distinguished guests. Bishop is the nation's oldest recognized military hero and is the veteran member of the Legion of Valor by right of being the oldest holder of the Congressional Medal of Honor.

DEPRESSION HELPS TO FILL UNIVERSITIES

BIRMINGHAM, Eng., March 4.—The depression is filling the world's universities.

Boys and girls in nearly all countries are entering the higher seats of learning rather than increasing the ranks of the unemployed.

With little possibility of obtaining jobs, they are taking up courses which otherwise they probably would not have troubled about.

And this increase in university attendance and its resultant higher standard of education will, in time, produce a mentally better equipped young man or woman, and eventually a considerably more intelligent civilization.

University Report.

These are the suggestions contained in the report which Sir Charles Gran Robertson, vice-chancellor of Birmingham university, has made to the University council.

Commenting on the increase in Birmingham university's number of students, he says:

"That the universities have fully maintained and even in some cases increased their numbers during the two years of severe economic and financial depression has caused some surprise. On the Continent, and particularly in Central Europe, the congestion has become a really serious problem, and such figures as I have been able to obtain from the United States for their first-grade universities indicates a similar over-crowding.

Intensity of Crisis.

The British universities certainly are not congested, or over-crowded, and the difference in their position and the position elsewhere almost seems to be an index of the differential intensity of the crisis.

"The failure of industry to absorb the university product causes the young graduate to stay on for post-graduate work. It may well be that the universities are training up an intellectual proletariat; but of two evils, the creation of an intellectual proletariat, which has had three or four years of disciplined intellectual work, is preferable to the creation of an unemployed, untrained and unemployable youth, discharged from school at eighteen and remaining morally and intellectually undisciplined.

Not Sole Cause.

"But economic depression is not the sole cause for the universities being filled. The forces at work in the slow remorseless social revolution that has been going on since the great war are very subtle and complex.

"Everywhere, and particularly in our country and in Germany, it is being more and more recognized that in the epoch before us there is going to be no room for the untrained and unqualified man or woman. Whoever 'jobs' or 'successes' the future will have to offer will go to the trained and not to the untrained.

"Those who leave school at 16 will get what a training up to 16 can give—and no more; but if you do not wish to be up against the buffers at 23 with a body of adult physical development and adult physical appetites and aptitudes and an education and training that ended at 16, then you must have the training that will give you a mind of 23."

Cisco Scouts Attend Divisional Meeting

Twenty-four Cisco Boy Scouts, under the leadership of T. C. Williams, attended the meeting for the northern division of the Comanche Trail council held Friday evening at Eastland.

Various contests were carried on during the meeting, with the Cisco boys taking three first places.

EASTLAND CO. RED CROSS TO MEET MONDAY

The committee of the Eastland county chapter of the American Red Cross will meet at the chamber of commerce offices here Monday at 2 p. m. in annual session for the hearing of reports upon the work of the past year and organization for the ensuing year. Officers will be elected at this meeting.

Mrs. Cora V. Shuman, representing national headquarters, was here Saturday to make preparations for this meeting.

She urged the need of a greater response to the annual roll call of the Red Cross, pointing out that membership dues is practically the only source of funds left open to the Red Cross for financing the great relief demands that are now being made upon the organization. This year only 855 members were obtained in the county. "We want at least to meet last year's record," she said. "Every area is pleading itself to heroic efforts to this end."

"In this county National Red Cross has distributed this year 3-365 barrels of flour; 24,000 yards of cotton cloth; 585 dozen ready made garments; 149 dozen sweaters," she said.

Millions Spent.

Over the country as a whole National Red Cross has expended in relief work during the last fiscal year the sum of $3,179,000 for which no national appeal has been made, she said. Of this $339,000 was used to supply flour and $200,000 for the distribution of cotton products.

"It was realized that under the economic conditions that prevail it would be unwise to make a national appeal," Mrs. Shuman said. "The national chapter has expended $588,315.05 in the last fiscal year to assist chapters whose local funds were depleted. The services of the national organization must be maintained now largely through membership dues, and for that reason we are urging that the greatest possible efforts be made to keep our roll call response equal to last year's."

The Red Cross last year distributed 59,000,000 yards of cloth and 28,000,000 ready made garments for which 840,000 bales of cotton were used. This was distributed among 4,709,075 families over the nation.

Mrs. M. F. Lear, 76, To Be Buried Today

Mrs. Mattie F. Lear, 76, died Friday night at 11 o'clock at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Ed Townsend in Nimrod. Mrs. Lear was born in Illinois. Funeral services will be held this morning at 11 o'clock at the Nimrod Baptist church, and interment will be in Oakwood cemetery at Cisco, with Green Funeral home in charge.

Burial Saturday for Mrs. Montgomery

Funeral services for Mrs. J. M. Montgomery, about 75, were held Saturday morning, with Rev. J. Stuart Pearce, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, officiating. Mrs. Montgomery died Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the family residence on East Eighth street. She was a native of Mississippi. Interment was in Oakwood cemetery, with arrangements in charge of Green Funeral home.

Song Recital to Be Presented Monday

A song recital, under the direction of Mrs. Lee Clark will be presented Monday evening at 8 o'clock in the auditorium at Randolph college. Violin and piano pupils of Mrs. Clark will assist on the program. There will be between twelve and fifteen pupils taking part. The public is invited.

Welfare Ass'n to Meet Monday at 9

The United Charities and Welfare association will have its regular meeting at 9 o'clock Monday morning in the welfare building, according to Mrs. P. Pettit, secretary.

There will be some important matters for discussion, Mrs. Pettit said.

THE NEW DEAL

FRANKLIN DELANO ROOSEVELT, Who became President of the United States, yesterday.

Garner Bids House Adieu for New Post

WASHINGTON, March 4.—John N. Garner, one-time country lawyer, today became vice-president of the United States.

The Texan was sworn in today in the United States senate before a distinguished company, including President Hoover and the new president, Franklin D. Roosevelt.

As Garner promised, hand upraised to support the constitution there ended for him 39 years of uninterrupted service in the house which led in 1931 to his election as speaker.

Thunders of ovation had marked the close of his term today as presiding officer of the house. Shortly before the 72nd congress adjourned, the speaker was presented with a watch as a token of esteem and admiration from democratic members.

While the entire membership of the house stood and cheered, the white-haired Texan in a trembling voice expressed appreciation.

"There are times when words cannot express the soul of man," Garner said, and his strong voice trailed off into silence.

Car Stolen and Two Places Burglarized

Two minor burglaries and the theft of a car Friday night were reported Saturday by the police department.

A Ford cabriolet belonging to Lige Burnam was stolen from the live stock show grounds early in the evening.

Ballard Poultry yard was entered by thieves who stole an automobile casing and two chickens. The Huestis Brothers garage was also entered through a window by burglars who took about $2 in pennies and a small quantity of oil.

Drowning Victim's Funeral at Pioneer

Funeral services for Mrs. M. F. Katenbaugh of Pioneer will be held this afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Methodist church in Pioneer. Burial will be in the Pioneer cemetery.

Mrs. Katenbaugh, despondent since the death of her daughter, Miss Ruth Katenbaugh, a month ago, was found drowned in a water tank at her home near Pioneer Friday morning.

SAYS PRIMARY TASK TO PUT MEN TO WORK

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Franklin D. Roosevelt became president of the United States today with an exhortation of the "money changers" and a promise he might have to adopt war-time measures to combat the financial crisis now enveloping the nation.

With uplifted hand the advocate of "new deal" was sworn in by Chief Justice Hughes before thousands of operators on a white painted stand in front of the capitol.

As the solemn voice of the chief justice echoed across the vast throng Mr. Roosevelt took from the shoulders of Herbert Hoover, the heaviest burden of peace-time responsibility that any president since Lincoln has faced.

Speaking to the hushed thousands, Mr. Roosevelt dealt frankly with the "grim problem" facing the nation. "The money changers," he said, have fled from their high seats. Then he declared:

Action Wanted.

"That nation asks for action, and action now."

He quieted the cheers with a broad wave of his hand and told how he hoped prosperity could be restored to the nation which, he said, had lost confidence in itself through unreasoning fear.

The banking crisis, breaking as the climax of the long depression, threw a pall over the historic scene. Biting raw winds swept the crowds. Cold gray skies chilled spectators who had been waiting for hours.

"The greatest primary task," Mr. Roosevelt declared, "is to put men back to work."

It can be accomplished, he said, by direct recruiting of the government itself, treating the task as we would treat the emergency of a war.

Scores "Money-Changers."

"There must be an end to a conduct in banking and in business which too often has given to a sacred trust the likeness of a callous and selfish wrong-doing," he declared.

"Practices of the unscrupulous money-changers stand indicted in the court of public opinion, he declared as he set forth his lines of attack.

1. "There must be a strict supervision of all banking, credits and investments.

2. "There must be an end to speculation with other people's money.

3. "There must be provisions for an adequate, but sound currency."

Renews Recommendations.

Mr. Roosevelt renewed his campaign recommendations for, first, land utilization; second, prevention of farm and home foreclosures; third, drastic reduction of government costs—federal, state and local; fourth, unification of relief activities; and, fifth, national planning and supervision of all transportation, communications and other utilities.

Concluding, he reaffirmed his faith in democracy.

"We do not distrust the future of essential democracy. The people of the United States have not failed. In their need they have registered a mandate that they want direct, vigorous action. They have asked for discipline and direction under leadership. They have made me the present instrument of their wishes."

PUBLIC UNDERSTANDS.

The generally calm manner in which the people of Texas have accepted the banking holiday proclaimed by Governor Ferguson is a heartening indication of the confidence they have in the financial institutions of the state. It is said that Texas banks are in better condition generally than those of the other states in the union. The holiday came as a surprise not only to the public but to many of the bankers who were experiencing no difficulties and were conducting their institutions in a normal manner.

The purpose of the holiday seems to be well understood by the public. When the close interdependence of the national business and commercial life is considered it can be well appreciated why and how repercussions of such a nature as waved out from the Michigan banking "moratorium" affect a state so remote from that area as Texas. It can be understood then that the Texas proclamation was a matter of protection purely, designed to prevent heavy withdrawals of Texas deposits to those states where such moratoria were already in effect for various reasons. Passage of a new law by the legislature to place a discretionary power of limiting bank withdrawals in the hands of the banking commissioner will take care of the situation which the holiday was invoked to meet. Briefly, it will insure that Texas, as one of the bright spots on the banking map, will not be victimized for the benefit of other areas in a less satisfactory condition. It will help Texas bankers to preserve Texas credit resources and thus protect Texas business against a drain of needed financing. We in Cisco cannot understand the importance of this as it is understood in Dallas, Fort Worth and other large state centers, but we should eventually feel the effects as much as they.

The holiday, then, should be welcomed as a benefit and restrictive legislation not as a burden or hindrance, but as an insurance. Business is going to go on as usual. That is the prime purpose behind this temporary inconvenience.

PETROLEUM INDUSTRY "ON THE SPOT."

There is something new bobbing up in the petroleum world every day. The federal trade commission is making a study of the resolution adopted by the senate asking investigation "into conditions in the oil fields." Officials of the trade commission announced they would be prepared quickly but the investigation could not be begun until an appropriation was made by congress to finance it. Money talks.

Texas legislative investigators are busy. It is said that "hot oil" is sold openly in many cities of the state, that the gasoline tax measure is evaded at a loss to the general revenue fund of more than a million dollars a year. Railroad Commissioner E. O. Thompson has evolved as well as recommended a new oil taxation plan. There is a crush of business engaging the minds and brains of the lawmakers and there will be a wild jam in the closing days of the session.

BANKRUPTCY BILL GIVEN RIGHT-OF-WAY.

Credit should be given the lame ducks of the senate as well as to the lame ducks of the house. A sweeping bankruptcy relief measure providing machinery for individual and farm debtors to obtain extension or cash settlement and for railroads to readjust downward their capital structures and avoid receiverships was passed by the senate. After passage it was sent to the house which has enacted a bill on the same subject but radically different. The two proposals were sent to conference for composition of differences, "but whether an agreement can be reached before March 4 is uncertain." Opposition to the bill in the senate centered principally on

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

NIA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—The immensity of the Roosevelt administration and the general failure of congress to meet national problems has continued to inspire, in this capital city at least, an increasingly furious speculation as to the ability or willingness of Mr. Roosevelt to assume dictatorial powers. Much of this is uttered by conservatives who want Roosevelt to be held enough to jam through measures dear to them—usually on the theory that budget-balancing, sales tax and drastic reduction of veterans' expenses are essential to recovery—or by liberals who hope he will be held enough to make congress "soak the rich" and adopt a vast public works program. Everyone, however, raises the question as to the possibility that Roosevelt can and will become the great national leader which everyone who discusses the matter agrees the country needs. Regardless of whether we should be led to the left, right or straight ahead, the question whether we are to be led anywhere at all remains a guessing game and Mr. Roosevelt is at last on the spot.

NEITHER in his pre-convention campaign, in his election campaign or in the months of the lame duck Congress has Roosevelt aroused any enthusiastic conviction that he is a Moses suddenly popped up in the wilderness. Hence no one is able to be over-optimistic or profoundly discouraged about him. And a hundred million persons want to know what kind of a president he is going to be.

Someone must grab Congress by the neck and make it move. Of course, the only person who can possibly do it is Roosevelt. And advisors will try to pull him in one direction or another, but only a vigorous, strong man, standing on his own feet with a driving will to smash through obstacles when persuasion doesn't suffice, can make much headway in any direction. Everyone hopes—although some doubt—that he will be able to exert complete mastery over the Democratic leaders of the new Congress as well as over the huge majorities of Democratic members. That feat is likely to take everything he has, and perhaps more.

His chief weapons will be the patronage power, the possibility of appeals to the country for support and the iron in Roosevelt's system which many admirers have thought they saw behind his almost perpetual grinning good nature. The head-waggers are now basing their lugubrious fears on the failure of Roosevelt to exert any important influence on the dying lame duck Congress. His only apparent efforts to intervene in any way were seen in his conference with Democratic leaders at New York, which developed into a fiasco, and in his effective effort to kill off Democratic proposals for a sales tax. The one big job Congress did—passage of the prohibition repeal amendment—was accomplished without his intervention, although he might have put it over and won the credit.

Iowa Town Barbers Scrip for Corn

Piled high in temporary cribs, corn literally filled the streets of Clear Lake, Ia. Farmers brought it in, 3600 bushels of it in one day, responding to a plan of the Commercial Club. The club buys the corn, giving 25 cents a bushel in scrip certificates, which are exchangeable for goods in the local stores. The merchants hope later to auction off the corn for money.

the railroad feature. This was approved 44 to 16. Minority Leader Robinson of Arkansas and Sen. Couzens of Michigan argued the roads were badly in need of legislation "if wholesale receiverships were to be avoided."

National lawmakers as well as national leaders of finance and industry very late in the day are coming out of their trance. They realize that all interests and classes and callings demand action in order that a road may be blazed for the return or restoration of confidence and prosperity to the American people. These are not partisan issues that are bobbing up in nation and state. They are economic life or death issues. They call for patriotic effort of the highest order and not the personal aggrinding of selfish individuals who are ever in evidence when a crisis comes in the affairs of commonwealth or country.

Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE

When you see Henry Drumwright and other business men going around with their faces smeared with red paint today, don't get the idea that they have just come from an Indian war dance. On the contrary it is an evidence that they had succumbed to the Thespian streak that is ingrained in most of us. They were part of the cast which presented the American Legion's comedy "Henry's Wedding" at the high school Thursday and Friday.

Now for Henry's ready compliance the "make-up" artist played him a dirty trick. He can't wash the rouge off. Instead of using a temporary rouge to make him up for the part the said "artist" used permanent rouge. Now Henry will be in character for several days, much to his disgust, for while he may have looked pretty in full make-up, he looks like the last rose of summer with half of it off and the other half scrubbed into a smear.

About the most "human" explanation of reasons for the present banking "moratorium" proclaimed by Governor Ferguson, is contained in an interview given, out by T. W. Waggoner of Fort Worth, the richest man in Texas and one of Fort Worth biggest bankers.

Many of you may have read it in yesterday's morning paper, but just the same I am going to present it in full here for the benefit of those who may not have read it and of those who may wish to read it again. "The action was wise and should have been taken. The banks of the 30 states that are under a holiday provision or enforcing restricted withdrawals could easily withdraw millions of dollars a day from Texas banks, and yet Texas banks could not offset or replenish with funds they had and were entitled to withdraw from such other states. "On the whole, Texas banks are absolutely sound and are safe places and depositories for our money. Our banks are managed by capable and patriotic men. It is bad business—more than that, it is unpatriotic—for the people to pull their money out of banks and put it in safety deposit boxes. "If my bank gets worried and its patrons get disturbed, I don't draw my money out. I go and get some more money and put it in. "I am not alarmed nor worried about the present situation. The money is not gone from this country. There is more money in the country now than any time in its whole history. The trouble is the people who have money ought to have more confidence and they ought to put their money back to work in the business of the country. "There is a sort of nervous disease that the doctors call 'neurasthenia.' That is a fellow that thinks he is hurt, or thinks he is sick, when actually there is not a thing in the world wrong with him. All he needs is something to make him 'snap out of it.' "Hoarders of money and safety box depositors need a good treatment for neurasthenia. I think, for a while, there ought to be a provision made for restricted withdrawals of money from banks. This won't hurt anybody and we will get along all right. In 1907 we had to do this and we didn't hurt from it. It didn't create more than a ripple. "We can have a plan of limited withdrawals and go right on with business. I have complete confidence that the legislature of Texas now in session will promptly give us a wise law that will steady and stabilize our temporary difficulties and smooth out these rough spots. "Texas should not worry. It should be happy. We raise everything we need to eat, and plenty of it. We can't think of a thing that a human being eats that is not raised in Texas in large quantities. We raise everything we need to wear, and plenty of it. And, after all, why should we need any more, or why should we want any more. "I have stood guard lots of nights of my life around a herd of cattle. The darkest hour is just before the sun comes up. The murky settling fogs of night are always dispelled by the rising sun."

Mrs. Virgil Heyser contributes the following advertisement from a newspaper of almost 100 years ago, which she points out is quite appropriate reading in these times of forced sales and mortgage foreclosures. Some of the items listed may be puzzling to the modern reader who thinks of "hoops" as an item of that ridiculous dress which was worn when women could be embroiled and keep the fact to themselves. But "hoops" as they are enumerated below refer to the wooden circles which keep barrel staves in place.

For Sale

"Having sold my farm, I am leaving for Oregon Territory by ox team, and will offer March 1, 1849, all of my personal property, to wit: "All ox teams, except two teams, Buck and Ben and Tom and Jerry, two milk cows; 1 gray mare and colt; one pair of oxen and yokes; 1 baby yoke; 2 oxen; 1 iron foot of poplar weatherboard; a plow with a wooden moldboard; 900 to 1,000 three-foot clappboards; 1500 ten-foot fence rails; 1 60-gallon soap kettle; 85 sugar troughs made of white ash timber; 19 gallons of maple syrup; 2 spinning wheels; 30 pounds of nut-tallow; 1 large loom made by Jerry Wilson; 300 poles; 100 split hoops; 1 32-gallon barrel of John Miller whiskey, 7 years old; 20 gallons of apple brandy; 1 40-gallon copper still; oak-tanned leather; 1 dozen red books; a hand book; 3 scythes and cradles; 1 32 calibre rifle, bullet mold and powder horn, rifle made by Ben Miller; 50 gallons of soft soap; hams, bacon and lard; 40 gallons of sorghum molasses; 6 head of fox bounds, all smooth-mounted except one; "At the same time I will sell my six negro slaves—2 men, 35 and 50 years old; 2 boys 12 and 18 years old, and two mulatto wenches 30 and 40 years old. Will sell all together to some party as will not separate them. "Terms of sale, cash at hand or note to draw 4 per cent interest with Bob McConnell as surety. "My home is 2 miles south of Versailles, Kentucky, on the McComb's ferry pike. Sale begins at 8 o'clock. Plenty to drink and eat. "J. L. MOSS."

FIRST WHITE DIED.

KEMMERER, Wyo., March 4. —James Harmon, said to be the first white child born in Uinta County, died here recently at the age of 65. For several years prior to his death, Harmon lived in Lincoln County near Tulsa, north of Kemmerer. He was a freighter for many years.

sloner that reasons are being sought why he should act twice. He is entitled to his place, if at all, on the contention that his appointment was not to fill a "vacancy." This may answer the question about taking the oath.

He is reported to have taken the oath first early on Feb. 15.

Cone Johnson, Tyler, whom he will succeed, was seriously ill. Bedside bulletins reported Johnson in bad shape. If Johnson had died before Denison took oath, there would have been a "vacancy" and it could have been filled only with consent of two thirds of the senate.

Photography is about to become a lost art, Texas photographers assert in a preamble to a bill they are asking the Texas legislature to pass. Despite all the startling developments of the movie camera, color, sound and long distance transmission, the Texas Photographers' Association takes a drab view of the outlook for the profession.

Here are some of its complaints: unskilled photographers are selling imperfect and unpermanent photographs that are to be found faded, discolored and disintegrated though the owners paid for good ones; solicitors canvassing from house to house, purporting to be representatives of reliable firms and submitting samples, sell coupons which purport to entitle the holders to work at much less than its actual cost.

"These solicitors are often impudent, insistent and sometimes abusive in their efforts to sell their wares to a reluctant prospect, especially if the potential customer should be the lady of the house," says the association resolution.

The association asks that photographers be licensed. Photographers for newspapers or periodicals and other persons not taking pictures for sale, would be excused from the license requirement.

Clarence Ousley, for many years one of the most noted editorial writers in Texas, once told a legislative committee that, though he had followed the writing trade for more than a quarter of a century and pride himself on some knowledge of words and skill in their use, he did not pretend to say what a word meant when put in a law.

So pertinent is this comment, that a large per cent of the laws now being offered in the legislature take no chance with legal construction of the words. Acts open with a mini-ture dictionary telling just what words in them mean. Punctuation still offers a judge a chance to construe the meaning as he deems best, but he can no longer fall back on a distinction between "or" and "and." Most of the laws now use conjunctive phrases in duplicate.

Therefore a bill reads like this: "Any person who engages in the business of buying and or selling x x x" Sometimes they write it "and or;" sometimes "and-or," and sometimes "and cor."

Which suggests the next lexicographer might as well include a new word "and-or."

IN FEBRUARY, 1915, Roland Garros, French war ace, devised the method of firing a machine gun through the revolving blades of an airplane propeller. Later on, the Germans came out with a greatly improved model, a gun with a trigger that was synchronized with the motor, so that no bullets could leave the muzzle while the propeller blades were in the way. These guns were put into use by the allies as soon as they captured a German plane so equipped, and copied the mechanism.

RS. HALEY ENTERTAINS

OR MERRY MATRON CLUB.

Jig-saw puzzles proved highly entertaining to Merry Matron club members on Thursday afternoon when Mrs. Ray Haley was hostess to the club at her home on West seventh street. Each guest was given a puzzle to work during the afternoon, and Mrs. Haley, as member, presented a lovely gift. St. Patrick's day theme was artistically carried out in room decorations, and was suggested in the refreshment course, consisting of green sandwiches, green pickles, olives, mints, and lime ice cream with green cherries. A short business session was held during the afternoon.

Those enjoying this occasion were Mesdames A. L. Filler, Ed Caudle, E. Price, R. W. Smith, Jr., Charles Under, Ocie Leveridge, Elsworth Van Gardener, and the Misses Mrs. Ocie Leveridge will entertain the club next Thursday afternoon at her home 1215 N. avenue.

RTS CLUB MEETS

WITH MRS. PRATT.

A Texas Day program was given at the regular meeting of the First Industrial Arts club on Thursday afternoon when the club met at the home of Mrs. J. B. Pratt on West sixth street. Featured on the program was a talk on Texas folklore given by Mrs. P. P. Shepard, and a review of Dorothy Scarborough's "The Scorching Smiles" which was given by Mrs. Hubert Seale. A short business session preceded the program. Delightful refreshments were served during the afternoon.

RS. BOSWORTH HOSTESS

TO FIDELIS MATRON CLASS.

Gifts were exchanged between "Pals" at the regular monthly meeting of the Fidelis Matron class of the First Baptist Sunday school which was held Friday afternoon in the home of Mrs. V. H. TEA GIVEN BY WEDNESDAY STUDY CLUB.

In memory of Texas heroes and in commemoration of Texas Independence day, members of the Wednesday Study club were hostesses at one of the loveliest affairs of the early spring season when they entertained on Wednesday afternoon with a tea at the home of Mrs. Paul M. Woods, 806 West Fourteenth street. Guests were greeted at the door by Mrs. Woods, Mrs. Edward Le, president of the club, Mrs. James Moore, Miss Blanch Van Horn, Miss Ester Hale, Mrs. H. Brandon, Mrs. Leon Maner, Mrs. Don Burger, Mrs. W. R. Smith, and Mrs. Rigdon Edwards were in the receiving line. Mrs. Jack Cabaness met the guests and ushered them into the living room where Mrs. Rex Carrothers, Mrs. J. D. Lauderdale, and Miss Ora Bess Moore were stationed. Mrs. Allen Wood and Miss Eileen Wilson rendered piano selections throughout the afternoon. Mrs. W. J. Leach, Miss Marian Chambliss, and Miss Travis Watson assisted in the dining room where the tea table was presided over by Mrs. T. F. O'Brien and Mrs. A. D. Anderson.

Club colors of green and white were used in every detail of appointment. A bouquet of white snapdragons fashioned a lovely centerpiece for the dining table which was laid with a gorgeous lace cloth over green. Tall white tapers in silver candelabra stood sentinel at either end of the table, and were used on the buffet and in the living room. A profusion of beautiful cut flowers used throughout entertaining rooms, lent a touch of floral charm to the lovely setting. Sandwiches and cake were served on the attractive refreshment plate, where tiny scrolls, tied with green and white, as place favors, proclaimed the purpose of the Wednesday Study club in paying tribute to Texas heroes, and told interesting events in Texas history. About one-hundred guests, including several visitors from Rising Star, called during the afternoon.

CISCO YOUNG PEOPLE

ATTEND M. E. RALLY.

Cisco was well represented at the district Methodist Young People's rally which was held Friday evening in DeLeon. In a three act play, in which young people from all over the district took part, there were several participants from the Twelfth Street Methodist church, Cisco, including Mildred Fay Farmer, Pearl Ayers, and Charlie Lee Garrett. A delectable meal was served preceding the program.

There were about 110 young people present, including the following from the First Methodist church of this city: Mae Statham, Lloyd Le Witten, Metra Clarkson, Fay Clark, Lucille Clark, Willard Gaskins, Carl Siddall, Loraine Siddall, and Clifford Blumberg. Mrs. Wilson and Rev. O. O. Odum accompanied the group.

MRS. FRANKLIN DELANO ROOSEVELT POSES IN HER INAUGURAL GOWN

Inauguration will be a "blue" day for Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt! For the costume she will wear at the ceremony will be of blue shades that have been named for her, and the above pictures, especially posed by her, show how she will appear when she becomes the First Lady of the Land. The gown (left) is of Eleanor blue crystalline velvet — a two-piece peplum dress with an unusual double-draped surplice front. The long sleeves taper to tight cuffs. The skirt, straight-line, but flaring slightly at the bottom, is ten inches from the floor. The gown and coat, as well as the matching accessories, were made by Arnold Constable, New York, and the above pictures are copyrighted by that firm. The coat (shown right) is made of a darker shade of crystalline velvet, called Anna blue. It is three-quarter length with shirred scarf collar and equiset shoulders. The hat is of Anna blue Milan straw, and purse and pumps are of matching blue kid.

Your Income Tax

Extension for Filing Returns and Payment of Tax

It is important that the taxpayer render on or before the due date—March 15, if filed on the calendar-year basis—as complete and final return of income as possible. However, when by reason of illness or absence from home additional time is required, a reasonable extension of time may be granted. Application should be made to the collector of internal revenue for the district in which the taxpayer files his return, together with a full recital of the causes for the delay. Except in the case of taxpayers who are abroad, no extension may be granted for a period of more than six months.

An extension of time for filing the return does not extend the time for payment of the tax, or any installment thereof, unless so specified in the extension. Application for such extension should be made to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue through the collector of internal revenue for the district in which the taxpayer's return is filed. The applicant should set forth under oath the specific reason for desiring an extension and should clearly indicate what hardship, if any, would result if the extension were not granted. The amount for which the extension is desired should be stated. The commissioner will not consider an extension of time of payment unless made on or before the due date of the tax or installment thereof. If the extension is granted, interest at the rate of 6 per cent a year is collectible from the date the payment should have been made if there had been no extension to the expiration of the period of the extension.

In the spirit of the gift I accept it." Jubilant democrats came by the thousands to hail their unprecedented victory of last November, when they swept all except six states. With bands, flags, brilliantly uniformed military escorts, they packed the broad avenues of Washington.

Eagerly they cocked hungry glances toward the great government buildings where thousands of them hope soon to have jobs.

But over the scene hung the sobering thought that the new administration comes into power at one of the critical moments in the nation's history, with the country entering the fourth year of its worst depression. The wild bullets fired to all the sharp consciousness of the troubled times and there was a visible note of anxiety on many faces today.

Extra heavy guards, more than at any previous inauguration, were thrown about the downtown section here, around the white house and the capitol building. Dozens of precautions not usually taken were effective.

Every hotel and hundreds of homes were bulging with visitors.

Long before noon the court of honor, recently erected in front of the white house, the central portion of which is a replica of federal hall in New York, where George Washington took the oath as the first president, was packed with spectators. Stands erected on the east front of the capitol building were likewise crowded. Constitution and Pennsylvania avenues, connecting the white house and the capitol building, were crowded with spectators.

Fellow Custom.

According to custom, the outgoing president and Mrs. Hoover arranged to meet them in the blue room. Then, accompanied by a congressional escort committee, the program called for their arrival at the capitol shortly before noon, so that Mr. Hoover would have time to sign belated bills passed during the last few hours of the closing session of the 72nd congress.

Previously, a proclamation by President Hoover called the senate of the new congress into session at noon today. The outgoing vice-president, Charles Curtis, by custom, swore in his successor, John N. Garner, who had laid down the gavel of speaker of the house to assume the more eminent, but less powerful, post.

After this brief ceremony, the president, the president-elect, the supreme court in black robes, the diplomatic corps in brilliant scarlet and blue gold braided full dress, senators in their Sunday swallow-tails, congressmen, and a whole army of wives, daughters and other relatives gathered in the stands outside the capitol for the inauguration of Roosevelt as president.

Deal in Items, Not Generalities, Advice To "Back Home" Gov't Economy Seekers

By RAY H. NICHOLS
Texas Press Legislative News Service

AUSTIN, March 4.—An interesting aspect of the legislative situation with respect to matters of taxation and revenue is that, while everybody seems to be agreed that the cost of government must be reduced and the burden of taxation on property and business must be eased, efforts at reduction and readjustment meet with influential and determined opposition, once specific items in the state budget are brought up for action in the legislature.

Items Seem Negligible

The tax dollar is a favorite expression of those who discuss taxation. When reduced to this small unit, the various items appear negligible. To say that a certain service is costly only two cents of the tax dollar makes it appear unimportant. But the tax dollar by the time it reaches the state treasury, becomes approximately a hundred million dollars, and thus the item of two cents becomes one of two million dollars.

Obviously, if the sum total of appropriations is to be reduced, reductions must be made in individual items that go to make up the total, unless the legislature makes very radical reductions in some one or two of the major items in the state budget, such as public free schools or higher education. These are the two big items of cost that are met out of general taxation revenues.

The highway department activities account for about forty per cent of the state expenditures, but its funds are derived from gasoline taxes, automobile license fees and grants of federal aid.

Plain citizens, lobbyists and members of the legislature all employ the methods described when some favored institution or branch of the government is reached in the list of appropriations. The well known principle of reciprocity of support is effectively employed. The friends of widely different services will make common cause by combining their influence. This practice is generally described as logrolling by which it is meant that, "I'll help roll your leg if you'll help roll mine." These methods are employed both by private citizens, interested in certain institutions, and members of the legislature who come from districts in which important state institutions are located or who may be especially friendly to some particular branch of the state government.

Special Groups

Every service and branch of the state government has its special group of partisans. No matter how unimportant it may seem to the average citizen, it represents to some a sort of golden calf or sacred cow. To touch it is sacrilege. Hence, the attitude is that reductions must be accepted by other services but the favored one must be treated with consideration bordering on reverence. Tax reductions are very much desired. There seems to be universal agreement on that point, but it is always some branch of government, other than the one under immediate consideration, that must be reduced or some other line of business that must be taxed in order to provide needed revenues.

One of the most ingenious arguments advanced in support of demands for liberal appropriations is to cite the relative unimportance of the appropriation asked, as compared with the total cost of the state government. Some who are especially interested in higher education are

Japanese Columns Reach Their Goal

CHENGTEHSU, Jehol, March 4.—Smashing through the last Chinese resistance, Japanese troops occupied Chengtehshu, capital of Jehol today, practically completing the subjugation of the great province seven days in advance of their program.

Advance columns arriving at the outskirts of the city during a blizzard, found the city practically undefended. The imperial army entered the city proper at 10 a. m. today.

Oklahoma City Field Closed With Troops

OKLAHOMA CITY, March 4.—Gov. W. H. Murray today issued a military executive order closing the 1,004 oil wells in the Oklahoma City field.

JANET HILL is engaged to ROLF CARLSON but they do not have enough money to marry. Janet is secretary for BRUCE HAMILTON, advertising manager of Every Home Magazine, and Rolf works for the Atlas Advertising Co. Janet insists they must have $500 in a savings account before they can be married.

HOWARD CRISSEY, another employee of the magazine, tries to make dates with Janet but she discourages him. She hurries home from the office one Saturday to prepare a surprise birthday dinner for Rolf. On the way she sees a couple entering the fashionable Brewster Hotel Coffee Shop and at first thinks the young man is Rolf. Afterward she decides she was mistaken.

The dinner party is a success. Janet and Rolf are at the table when he says, "There's something I want to talk to you about."

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER III
ROLF said slowly, "There's something I want to talk to you about."

The girl looked up. "Something you want to talk to me about? Why of course—what is it?"

He touched the lapel of his coat, an impatient little gesture of which he was entirely unaware. The motion flipped his coat back, revealing a vest pocket. It brought sudden remembrance to the girl.

"Why, I forgot!" she exclaimed. "It's your birthday and I forgot the most important part. I was so busy getting dinner ready and on the table that I didn't even think about it!"

She was on her feet, crossed the room and returned with a slim white package wrapped in white.

"It's your present," Janet said smiling. "Your birthday present."

The slim white package emerged from its wrappings to become an oblong box. Rolf raised the lid. Within, side by side, resting in ridges of black satin lay a pale green pencil and a pale green pen.

"Why, Janet?"

"I hope you like them—you can change them if you don't. They came from Hayslip's."

Janet was fidgeting the fountain pen. "You knew I lost my pen, didn't you?" he said. "It's a swell present, Janet. Thanks a lot." He slipped the pen and pencil into his vest pocket. "Just what I wanted. It's swell of you to go to so much bother—cooking dinner and everything."

"It wasn't bother. It was fun."

"Maybe, but it was a lot of work. You—well, it was darned nice of you."

"But I wanted to do it! I've planned it for weeks. Oh—but what was it you were going to tell me? You said there was something you wanted to talk about."

"Oh!" Carlisle's voice broke off vaguely. "I—oh, it wasn't anything important. It wasn't anything at all." He hesitated, suddenly smiling that quick, winning smile. "Listen, we'll have to hurry if we make the 8:15 show! It's almost eight now. Come on—I'll help with the dishes. Let's get at them!"

THEY didn't wash the dishes. Janet let him help clear them from the table. She put away the food and stacked the dishes on the kitchen shelf. They didn't want to miss the 8:15 show! It wasn't any fun if you came in after the opening of the picture.

The Neighborhood Theater was only two blocks away. At the Neighborhood feature picture that had been shown six weeks before at the big downtown theaters were exhibited—with prices correspondingly reduced.

Walking beside Rolf, glancing up at him now and then, hurrying a little to keep up with his swinging stride, Janet Hill thought, as she had innumerable times before, that he was certainly handsome. She was always proud to be seen with Rolf. Janet, of course, hadn't had time to do much about her own appearance. She had just pulled on her wraps and come as she was.

They made the two blocks almost in silence. Janet was tired—pleasantly tired—for it had been a full day. She was glad Rolf didn't want to talk, glad to sink into the comfortable seat in the darkened theater and glad that the music a screen orchestra was playing was a soothing, melodic waltz.

At first she paid little attention to the picture. It was a romance of a girl who worked for her living and a wealthy young aristocrat. From time to time the pretty blond heroine sang the waltz song. The plot became complicated, the hero and heroine had a misunderstanding and parted.

Janet, sitting beside Rolf, listening to the music, pictured herself in the heroine's role and Rolf as the hero. She grew interested. When at last the screen actor took the leading lady into his arms, when all their difficulties had been swept away and a long life of happiness stretched before them she felt that it was her own future that was assured. Her future and Rolf's.

"I loved it!" she told him as they left the theater. "I thought it was a wonderful picture!"

"Not bad."

IT did occur to Janet as they walked home that Rolf was unusually quiet. Generally she was the quiet one and he did the talking. Generally he had plans for the next day.

As it turned out, Rolf did have plans. They had almost reached her door when he said casually, "By the way, Janet, I may not be able to come around tomorrow. Follow I used to know in school is going to be in town. I promised I'd look him up—don't know what he'll want to do. Of course if I can break away early I'll give you a ring."

Janet said she didn't mind. It wasn't true but she knew it was what Rolf expected her to say. And of course if he could break away from this friend he'd give her a ring.

"Thanks for the swell birthday party," he told her with that careless smile. "And the present. It was a big surprise—and a grand one! You're sure you don't mind about tomorrow, honey?"

"Of course not. Only I hope you'll call."

"I'll try. Well—take care of yourself."

That was Rolf's good-night. He always said it. "Take care of yourself." Janet had heard it so many hundreds of times. It was a joke because Rolf always said it with a grin that made it one.

A hasty kiss—they stood in the entrance of the rooming house and of course it had to be a hasty one—and then he was gone.

Janet went upstairs. She entered her room, switched on the light. There was the table just as they had left it. Already the rosebuds were beginning to wilt. Ashes from Rolf's cigaret made a dark smudge in the little pottery tray. The dishes, stacked unwashed, looked dreadfully untidy. Should she wash them tonight or leave them until tomorrow? Janet considered—and her housewifely instinct won. As 6:57 to 6:58 they now as in the morning. She tied the blue and white apron about her waist and set to work.

She was rinsing glassware in a pan of steaming water when there was a knock at the door.

"Who is it?" Janet called.

A rumpled yellow head appeared in the doorway. "It's me—Mollie," said a husky voice. "Mind if I come in?"

"Of course not."

THE girl who entered wore a orange colored flannel bathrobe, pink pajamas and bright red heelless slippers. She held the collar of the bathrobe tightly about her throat and just as she was about to speak again she was overwhelmed by an enormous sneeze.

"Heavens, Mollie—what a dreadful cold!"

The other girl sank into a chair. "It's awful!" she moaned. "I wonder if you could let me have a couple of aspirins? Mine are all gone. I've taken so many different cold cures in the last three days it's a wonder I'm alive. My head feels as big as a tub and it aches and my nose—"

Janet interrupted. "Here's the aspirin," she said. "Wait—I'll get you some water. But you ought to be in bed, Mollie. You ought to stay there all day tomorrow."

Mollie Lambert occupied the room across the hall from Janet's. She was a bookkeeper in an office on Center street. The two girls were not particularly friendly but occasionally one of them would drop into the other's room to borrow matches, coffee for breakfast, a nickel for a phone call or perhaps to loan a new magazine.

Having taken the aspirin tablet, Mollie leaned back in her chair. "Been stepping out with the boy friend?" she asked.

"We went to the Neighborhood. There's an awfully good picture there."

"Yeah, I know. Saw it at the Century. Oh, say—have you met the new man?"

"New man? Who?"

"I saw him talking to Mrs. Snyder. Name's Grant. He's a big fellow, sort of good-looking, too. Going to have that front room on the next floor."

Janet said she had not met the new roomer. She was not interested. Newcomers came and went frequently at Mrs. Snyder's. She told Mollie her own way of curing a cold, urged her again to spend the next day in bed and promised to bring in her breakfast. A few minutes more and Mollie, grateful, had gone.

Janet washed the dishes and put them away. She undressed, got out a pink bathrobe, towels and soap and went down the hall to the bathroom. The price she paid Mrs. Snyder each month did not include the luxury of a private bath.

Half an hour later Janet slipped between the covers of her bed. She should have been happy; the birthday party had been a complete success. And yet somehow Janet wasn't happy. She was thinking that tomorrow would be a long day. Rolf wouldn't be there unless he could escape his unwelcome friend.

"I wonder," Janet thought just before she dropped to sleep, "what it was Rolf was going to tell me. It seemed to be important—and then he said it wasn't. I wonder—"

Janet slept. Better for her that she did not know the answer to that unspoken question. She was to know soon enough.

DON'T QUOTE ME

WASHINGTON, MARCH 4 - What to do with Eddie is another one of those problems the incoming democratic administration must settle.

Eddie is Edward Augustine Savoy, the 75-year-old Negro messenger "boy" who has been receiving the hats and sticks of diplomats at the state department for the last half century.

He was retired two years ago because of his advanced age, but Eddie wouldn't quit. So Secretary of State Stimson has been paying Eddie's salary out of his own pocket, to the disgust of the other Negro messengers, who see no sign of promotion so long as Eddie is on the job.

Eddie knows more diplomats, perhaps, than any other living man. And in the course of his duties, which began when Hamilton Fish was Secretary of state, Eddie has learned to be something of a diplomat himself. A couple of examples:

When Sackville-West, who was British Minister several years ago, returned to England it was Eddie's duty to deliver him his passport and obtain a receipt for it.

Eddie realized that it wasn't good form to be asking British ambassadors for receipts.

So Eddie handed the minister his passport, then pulled a piece of paper from his pocket, and said: "Mr. Minister, I've always admired you plenty, sir. And now I wonder if you would give me your autograph?"

The minister supplied the autograph - and so Eddie was enabled to return to the state department the receipt with the Minister's signature attached thereto.

Only recently Eddie avereted what might have been diplomatic catastrophe.

The Japanese minister was calling at the state department, and had left his hat and coat in the diplomatic reception room. All was peaceful until Eddie spied the Chinese minister coming up the hall.

What to do? What to do?

Eddie thought for a moment, then scurried into the reception hall, retrieved the Japanese husbands, and saved the day. When the Japanese minister appeared, Eddie was there to hand him his hat, and bid him speedy god speed.

When the Chinese minister entered the reception room, thanks to Eddie, the Japanese minister had vanished.

DEMOCRATIC STANDARD BEARERS MEET FOR FIRST TIME SINCE OPENING OF CAMPAIGN that Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt, the party's presidential nominee, had met his running mate, Speaker John Garner. And here you see them—Governor Roosevelt at the left —as they stood together on the speaker's stand during a cornerstone laying ceremony for a new armory at Peekskill, N. Y. Afterward they conferred on arrangements for the campaign.

46 STATES TO RATIFY REPEAL DIGEST SHOWS

The Twenty-first amendment for repeal of prohibition will probably be ratified as many states as the Eighteenth amendment was, according to analysis of The Literary Digest prohibition polls. to-morrow's issue of the magazine will state.

An analysis of the 1922, 1930 and 1932 nation-wide polls on prohibition, all of which had overwhelming majorities, discloses the forecast that forty-six states will endorse the new repeal amendment to the constitution, the magazine points out.

These deductions are based upon the proven accuracy of the magazine's straw balloting system in presidential election years, when the post-card returns have been compared with the official returns. In the last twelve years it is pointed out that The Literary Digest's presidential polls have forecast the winning candidate in all instances with an error of less than 5 per cent.

Assuming that the prohibition polls should be as accurate as the presidential polls, inasmuch as both were conducted in the exact same manner, The Literary Digest will state that the drys will be unable to muster more than one or two states to vote against ratification of repeal if the issue is put to a direct vote of the people.

A majority of the American electorate was wet in sentiment eleven years ago the magazine shows by a review of the returns in their 1922 prohibition poll, when Kansas and Oklahoma were the only two states to vote for the Eighteenth amendment.

"The opportunity for a direct voice on the bitterest issue since slavery comes to them almost a year after the great Literary Digest prohibition poll of 1932, the current issue states" which showed all but two states favoring repeal.

"The drys must hold thirteen states in line. Can they do it?" "Not more than two states, let alone thirteen, will vote against repeal of prohibition as shown by The Literary Digest's polls.

Kansas and North Carolina were the only dry states in the latest poll and this by scant margins.

"Our first prohibition poll, taken eleven years ago, showed a strong anti-prohibition sentiment, and the same was true of our 1930 poll. This The Literary Digest reflected the will of the people eleven years in advance of the legislators.

"At the risk of seeming to pat itself on the back, but with a high pride in the accuracy of its polls, whose integrity often has been attacked, The Literary Digest begs leave to point out how it has served as the voice of the people in this great issue.

"In 1924 it forecast the election of Calvin Coolidge as president with a margin of error of less than 2 per cent.

"In 1928 it was 95.6 per cent correct in forecasting the electoral vote for Franklin D. Roosevelt and 98.89 per cent correct in forecasting the popular vote.

"In view of this record and with the results of the 1932 prohibition poll in mind it would seem that the drys would be unable to get more than one or two states to vote against ratification of repeal."

Altho the drys are preparing to fight in every state, it has been announced, they count their chances best in sixteen states. Of these the only two voting against repeal in The Literary Digest's poll of 1932 were Kansas with a dry percentage of 50.23 and North Carolina, 50.05.

The wet percentage of the other states as they voted in the poll were: Oklahoma, 54.8; Iowa, 63.4; Georgia, 63.8; Utah, 69.6; Nebraska, 62.9; Kentucky, 67.4; Tennessee, 51.6; North Dakota, 76.5; South Dakota, 69; New Hampshire, 68.9; South Carolina, 60; Alabama, 55.4; Mississippi 56.2 and Florida, 74.9.

"Frisco Jenny" Now At Palace Theater

Cast in the mould of the pictures which have been Ruth Chatterton's most conspicuous successes, "Frisco Jenny," her latest First National production coming to the Palace Tuesday and Wednesday as feature unit of a new R. and R. road show unit program, ranks as her outstanding work to date.

"Frisco Jenny" is the story of a woman who ruled the vice element of a city. The sweep of the drama takes it across a quarter of a century of human life. Opening on the eve of the Great Fire that laid San Francisco waste in 1906—the days when the Barbary Coast flourished in all its lawlessness—the picture traces the colorful career of a daughter of the old underworld as it luridly weaves itself through the changing life of the New San Francisco to the moment of supreme sacrifice that crowns the story.

Running through the kaleidoscopic pattern of emotions and events as vivid and gripping a story of mother love as the modern screen has ever witnessed. It is the final inevitable clash between mother and son—the latter utterly unconscious of the real identity of the woman he sees as his prime adversary—that makes the overpowering denouement of the picture.

The scenes of the earthquake and the subsequent fire which completed the destruction of the city by the Golden Gate have been pronounced by marvels of realism and catastrophe. Old Chinatown lives again in all its sinister secrecy, with its miles of catacomb-like passages and dwellings. The reckless, tumultuous night life of San Francisco, unique among cities of the western hemisphere, is enacted so vividly that many an old-timer who has witnessed the previews of the picture has breathed a sigh for the glamor of those days.

Under the direction of William Wellman, an extraordinarily large and capable cast assisted Miss Chatterton in the portrayal of the drama. Donald Cook, Louis Calhern, Fat O'Malley, Jimmie Murray, Robert Emmet O'Connor, Helen Jerome Eddy, Hallam Cooley, Noel Francis, Frank McGlynn, Sr., J. Carroll Nash, Robert Warwick, Franklin Parker and Sam Godfrey are the important supporting artists.

To Defend Titles

Two champions who will be back at the Southwestern Exposition and Fair Stock Show to defend their world titles beginning Friday night, March 10. They are Tad Lucas, world champion all-around cowgirl and world champion trick rider among the cowgirls and Chester Byers, champion of cowboy trick ropers.

FORT WORTH, March 4.—The clank of spurs is being heard. The Old West is living again. It is being revived by the approaching date of the Southwestern Exposition and Fair Stock Show which will open Friday night, March 10, with the world championship Rodeo and Horse Show.

Boots, spurs, big hats—they are in evidence everywhere. Soon the thoroughbred livestock of many states will begin to arrive. Horses will be unloaded from the nation's finest stables. Aristocrats of the poultry pecten and rabbit sections will be here to face the critical eyes of the judges.

Railroads and bus lines have granted special reduced rates and with many cities planning to send special delegations—some special trains—heavy attendance is expected. Plans are almost complete for the first annual roundup parade which will be held in the business district at 3 p. m. Friday, March 10. The parade will be one of the largest ever held in Fort Worth. It will include numerous bands, floats from other cities, marching cadets of several cities, cowboys and cowgirls on horseback and a section for decorated floats that will depict the Old West and the new.

Saturday, March 18, the day before the show closes, has been designated R. O. T. C. Day and a special competitive drill will be held, open to the public, during the morning hours, by cadets from North Texas Agricultural college at Arlington, John Tarleton college at Stephenville, probably some other colleges, and from the Fort Worth high schools.

To the Voters of Cisco:

The administration of our municipal government is a complicated and tedious undertaking—and especially so during the present financial crisis. In order to accomplish the things most beneficial to our city, it is imperative that we have a city government composed of officers who are capable and willing to accept full responsibility for an efficient administration.

We believe that J. T. Berry, Joe Clements, and W. J. Foxworth measures up to these requirements, and earnestly request that you vote for them for Mayor and Commissioners, respectively.

She made a NAME for herself in 'FRISCO—and TRISCO made a NAME for her....It's

Frisco Jenny

starring RUTH CHATTERTON

FRISCO JENNY the girl who set her wedding day A MONTH TOO LATE!

FRISCO JENNY who organized the KIND OF WOMEN who are KIND TO MEN and reigned as EMPRESS OF VICE in new San Francisco!

FRISCO JENNY who could have EVERYTHING she asked for, but could not ask for the THING she WANTED!

FRISCO JENNY was not a fictitious character—she LIVED, LOVED and DIED... VIOLENTLY!

FRISCO JENNY whose entire life was ONE GRAND DRAMA crammed with EVERY EMOTION known to woman!

Nothing short of an earthquake should keep you from knowing her story!
