Board head says Clements wrong

Lawmaker says insolvent thrifts will be closed

DALLAS (AP) — A Texas congressman said the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp., boosted by a $10.8 billion infusion earlier this week, could begin closing hopelessly insolvent thrifts this fall, contrary to charges by Gov. Bill Clements.

Clements said regulators were propping up unhealthy savings and loan institutions in Texas.

But U.S. Rep. Steve Bartlett, R-Dallas, said Tuesday the money infusion will "provide the mechanism to begin working our way out of the problem."

"The $10.8 billion will begin to close the worst of the deeply insolvent institutions," said Bartlett, a member of the House Banking Committee who helped negotiate the final version of the bill.

The money will be spread out over the next 2½ years, and Texas' share of the first installment could arrive within 90 days, said Roy G. Green, president of the Federal Home Loan Bank of Dallas.

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board oversees the FSLIC, the agency that insures deposits of up to $100,000 in 3,200 member thrifts nationwide.

Texas has about 280 thrifts and Bartlett said regulators estimate a half dozen to less than 20 are deeply insolvent. Clements, however, said 70 thrifts were insolvent.

WASHINGTON — The new chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board said Tuesday that Texas Gov. William Clements is guilty of "a complete fiction" in predicting that the government plans to pay depositors only 30 cents on the dollar if endangered savings and loan institutions go bankrupt.

"Congress has said that depositors are safe, totally safe, on everything up to $100,000" in federally insured thrifts and banks, bank board chairman M. Danny Wall said. He added that the principle of 100 percent recovery on deposits was restated in thrift bailout legislation signed into law Monday by President Reagan.

Wall said he was reacting to Clements' charges to head off a potential run on deposits in the already weakened Texas savings institutions. In a hastily called, 40-minute news conference Tuesday, Wall called Clements' charges untrue. "The governor is wrong — wrong on the basis of what he expects the FSLIC future to be and how he expects it to function in relation to troubled institutions."

He also said he wanted to reassure potential buyers of up to $600 million in 30-year bonds scheduled for sale next month. The bonds will be the first sold under the new $10.8 billion replenishment of the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp.

"You walk that fine line between overreacting and the risks of not responding," said Wall, who decided the risks were too high not to speak out in response to Clements.

The Amarillo Daily News on Tuesday published charges by Clements that astounded federal regulators.

"The federal government is finally going to belly-up to this problem and when they do," Clements said, "they're going to pay off those depositors like 30 cents on the dollar and give them a piece of paper, like a bond.

MISD board OKs workers' AIDS policy

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Midland Independent School District trustees Tuesday gave preliminary approval to a policy which outlines the handling of staff members stricken with AIDS.

AIDS is Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome — a disease which destroys the body's infection-fighting capabilities.

In 90 percent of the estimated 40,000 cases reported in the United States as of Aug. 3, AIDS victims are homosexual or bisexual males, or intravenous drug abusers.

A district policy for dealing with children with AIDS was developed last year, but it was instead a sixth grade Crockett Elementary teacher who gave the district its first hands-on experience with the disease last June.

Since then, trustees have been at work developing a AIDS policy for personnel which was unveiled Tuesday afternoon at the district's regular meeting.

The six-point plan hinges, however, on the hopes the staff member will report his or her case of AIDS to the district.

Supposing the staff member does report the disease, the policy states: "The employee's right to privacy will be respected, including maintaining confidential records.

"The number of persons who are aware of the individual's name will be limited to those with a need to know."

Procedures that follow include notifying the principal of the AIDS patient's school, the full MISD school board and administration, board president Fred Newman said this morning.

With written permission from the AIDS patient, staff members and all parents having children in the the school will then be notified, Newman said.

Fiery scene

A Midland firefighter sprays one of two grass fires that broke out Tuesday evening north of Midland on State Highway 349. The first fire was reported at 6:58, the second at 7:21, reports said. An hour later, firefighters were called to assist Martin County authorities when suspected lightning ignited two oil storage tanks. The tanks, just off Highway 349, 15 miles northeast of Midland Country Club, sustained moderate damage. No injuries were reported, according to reports.

Council adopts plan for Lamesa Road construction project

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

A Lamesa Road construction project advanced one step further Tuesday after the City Council adopted an engineering realignment plan.

The plan, which will connect Lamesa Road with its arterial south of U.S. Highway 80, was unanimously accepted by the council Tuesday.

Council member Katie Heck was absent during Tuesday's session.

The council Tuesday also "reallocated" a $20,000 contribution for a local effort to bring the superconducting super collider project to West Texas.

Lamesa Road project coordinator Nancy Vickrey said the construction will connect Lamesa with Loop 250 and Interstate 20 giving eastside Midland a major arterial street.

The construction is expected to double traffic in the area and boost economic development, Ms. Vickrey said.

However, about 15 homeowners, 14 renters and three businesses are expected to be relocated by the project, she said.

A building that will be removed for the project is one of the few remaining adobe structures — housing the Words and Music store — left in the city, state historical officials said.

However, the building at 803 E. Highway 80, was rejected by state officials last week as a candidate for the National Register of Historic Places.

Public Works Director Fred Baker explained that after the engineering firm Parkhill, Smith and Cooper discovered that the more than 50-year-old adobe building was in the path of the project and a possible candidate for the national register, an alternate route for the Lamesa Road was developed.

But when the building was rejected by the state historians last week, the city recommended the council choose the route that would require the destruction of the adobe building, Baker said.

While the building was rejected by the Texas Historical Commission, state officials asked the city to record the building's structure before it is torn down.

The alternate route would have "fragmented" several properties and involved the removal of two bars, Ms. Vickrey said.

When the homeowners and businesses to be moved by the project will have to pull up roots is still uncertain, with city officials predicting to take about four months to do title searches and property appraisals before right of way negotiations can begin.

The city is expecting to use about $767,803 in U.S. Urban Development monies to buy about 195 parcels of land needed for right of way, Ms. Vickrey said.

After the right of way is provided by the city, the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation is expected to throw in about $1.285 million needed to rebuild the road.

Midland's sales tax receipts down slightly

By RICK BROWN
Assistant City Editor

Adjustments due to 1986 misallocations in the State Comptroller's Office's monthly sales tax report make August's figures particularly difficult to analyze for both Midland and Odessa.

While a Comptroller's Office spokesman said receipts reported this month for the two cities are accurate, yearly comparisons are skewed because Midland received an extra $150,000 last August and Odessa's allocation decreased by the same amount.

However, spokesman Jack Haden said that the errors were unrelated.

In Midland's case, the office computer had been programmed to continue giving the city an unjustified $150,000 allocation in 1986 that had been justified in 1985, Haden explained.

As a result, comparisons with last August's figures should be calculated using a $791,753 base instead of $942,753 as listed in this month's sales tax report, he said.

Using the first figure, Midland sales tax receipts are down 2.45 percent not 18 percent, as the Comptroller's report indicated.

While the figure is lower than in preceeding months, Midland Director Finance Troy Gifford explained that the collapse likely comes because the oil patch economy had bottomed out by last August after falling considerably during earlier months.

Taking the adjustments into consideration, Gifford failed to see any concrete signs of recovery in this month's figures. But he remains convinced that "modest" improvements will be forthcoming because of the increasing price of oil.

Three U.S.-flagged tankers reach home port

■ Mines dilemma for Arab states — 3A

KUWAIT (AP) — Three American-flagged Kuwaiti tankers docked in their home port to begin loading oil today after successfully navigating the Persian Gulf with their U.S. Navy escorts.

A new mining threat outside the waterway prompted France and Britain to dispatch minesweepers.

A fifth mine was reported found today south of the Strait of Hormuz in the Gulf of Oman, previously considered mine-free and safe.

United Arab Emirate officials told The Associated Press two of the five mines were defused by United Arab Emirate coast guardsmen. The officials in Abu Dhabi, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the mines were picked up by patrol boats in United Arab Emirate waters about nine miles off the port of Fujairah. The area is not far from where a U.S.-operated supertanker, the 274,347-ton Texaco Caribbean, was damaged by a mine on Monday.

Earlier reports said four mines had been spotted in the busy coastal anchorage, some 30 miles south of the Strait of Hormuz, gateway to the Persian Gulf. U.S. Navy and Omani helicopters and Omani coast guard vessels carried out the search for the floating explosives.

In Washington, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said the United States was seeking support for an international minesweeping operation in the gulf "in the interest of all maritime nations." But France and Britain said their sweepers were sent to protect their own vessels.

Iran's ambassador to the United Nations, Said Rajaie-Khorassani, said his country would cooperate with U.N. peace efforts but added Tehran was not "accepted or rejecting" a Security Council resolution calling for an end to the Iran-Iraq war.

U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar said Iraq had accepted the resolution.

The Gas King, Sea Isle City and Ocean City left their U.S. escorts and arrived in port Tuesday, ending the second Navy-escorted trip through the gulf.

Bakker cousin fired as house director

FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — A cousin of Jim Bakker has been fired as live-in director of what Bakker had promoted as a home for handicapped children, and has been told to move out along with his wife and adopted son, for whom the home was named.

David and Ione Whittum and their three children are the only residents of Kevin's House, a lavish, 11-room home at PTL's Christian theme park, Heritage USA. Whittum said he earned $17,000 a year.

"The Whittums are officially dismissed today. And a place will be made for Kevin if he desires one," Jerry Nims, PTL chief executive officer, said Tuesday.

Nims called the house a "terrible misuse of funds."

Harry Hargrave, PTL chief operating officer, said previously the ministry might turn it into a bed-and-breakfast inn for handicapped visitors to Heritage USA.

Whittum said Hargrave told him Tuesday he had 30 days to move out. He said Hargrave offered the family several options of housing at PTL expense, including another home at Heritage USA, a home just off the grounds and one in nearby Tega Cay.

Hargrave also said PTL would pay for the Whittums to move back to Michigan, where they lived before moving to Heritage USA, Whittum said.

"At this point, we have not made up our minds as to which way we will go," he said.

Meanwhile, Bakker's parents, Raleigh and Furnia Bakker, who are in their 80s, agreed to a 50 percent cut Tuesday in the $17,000 salary each earns for greeting guests at the ministry's hotel, said Faith Stalnaker, a PTL attorney.

Reagan will give impressions of Iran-Contra hearings

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, breaking a long silence, will address the nation tonight with his "personal impressions" of the Iran-Contra hearings that documented discord, deceit and possible illegal actions by top White House officials.

In his third major speech on the subject, Reagan will speak from the Oval Office at 8 p.m. EDT, talking for about 18 minutes. ABC, CBS and NBC will interrupt regular programming for it, and Cable News Network also will carry it live.

White House officials said Reagan's address would include not only his views of the hearings on arms sales to Iran and the diversion of arms-sales profits to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels, but also his agenda and priorities for the remaining 17 months of his presidency.

Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Reagan would not discuss the subject of pardons for two former aides — John Poindexter and Oliver North — who have acknowledged being targets of criminal investigations.

Administration officials, speaking privately, said Reagan would say he accepts responsibility for the affair and that it's time to move on. Poindexter, who resigned as the president's national security adviser, had testified he shielded Reagan from information and that "the buck stops here with me."

On Thursday Reagan will fly to North Platte, Neb., to give a speech and then will continue on to California for a 25-day vacation.

Fitzwater said the speech was completed Tuesday, "subject to last-minute revisions by the president tomorrow (this) morning."

He refused to discuss its contents, saying, "This is a personal view... ersonal impressions" of the hearings. "It's too much a personal statement by the president" for other people to discuss it.

Reagan has offered varying opinions about the hearings, once dismissing the testimony as hearsay that would not be admissable in court. Another time, he said he had not heard anything that suggested that any laws were broken — but the White House modified that statement to leave open the possibility of criminal wrongdoing.

The whole affair has stained Reagan's presidency and raised deep questions about his credibility. Numerous polls show that most Americans believe he has not told the truth about the affair.

In large part, however, Reagan has been silent on the subject since a March 4 address responding to the Tower committee's investigation of the affair.

The sale of U.S. arms to Iran, conducted secretly since late in 1985, was made public last November when a pro-Syrian magazine in Lebanon reported that Reagan's one-time national security adviser, Robert McFarlane, had secretly visited Iran.

At the time, Reagan dismissed the story as having "no foundation" but, as evidence accumulated, was forced to acknowledge it was true. In the intervening months, the president has changed his story several times, rejecting and later accepting the notion that he traded arms for American hostages held in Lebanon.

However, Reagan adamantly has denied any knowledge of the diversion of arms-sale profits to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels, and there was no testimony in the 11 weeks of congressional hearings that contradicted that claim.

Poindexter, compelled to testify after receiving a grant of limited immunity, told Congress he never told Reagan about the diversion, but that he believed Reagan would have approved of it.

North, a former National Security Council aide and the key player in arranging the secret flow of supplies to Contra rebels, said he had assumed Reagan knew about the diversion, but never discussed it with him.

According to the testimony, Reagan ordered the White House staff to find ways to get around the congressional ban on military aid to the Contras.

The president insisted that information about the arms sales be confined to a small number of officials and signed an order in January 1986 instructing that Congress not be informed.

Secretary of State George Shultz and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger testified that they argued strenuously against the arms sales and thought they had prevailed, only to learn later that they were overruled by the president.

PTL

"The court has asked us to do this to trim our expenses. (The Bakkers) are amenable to this; they're comfortable with it," Ms. Stalnaker said. PTL filed for reorganization under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy act in June.

Raleigh Bakker said: "I think that due to the fact that expenses had to be cut...it's no more than fair that people try to save the ministry. It's much better than getting fired or laid off like a lot of (employees) had to be."

Ms. Stalnaker said there is "certainly no anticipation of terminating their employment."

Whittum said he was disappointed with the ministry's direction since Jim Bakker's downfall in a sex scandal in March but has tried to remain friendly with fellow PTL members regardless of how they feel about the leadership of the Rev. Jerry Falwell.

Kevin, 17, who has a rare bone disease, was very upset about having to leave the house which was named for him, Whittum said. An adopted daughter, Carolyn, also is handicapped, Whittum said.

The Charlotte (N.C.) Observer reported Tuesday that Bakker raised money for Kevin's House knowing the house didn't meet fire safety standards for its use as a group home.

The newspaper said Bakker's former top deputy, Richard Dortch, told building permit officials that Kevin's House would be the Whittum family home, while Bakker continued to refer to it as a group residence.

PLAN

In other action Tuesday the council also "reestablished" a $20,000 appropriation for a local SSC project.

Because a bill for the $20,000 allocation was not submitted until after the city's fiscal year last Oct. 1, the money has to be reappropriated for this budget year, Thomas said.

The city has contributed about $95,000 toward bringing the multi-billion dollar physics lab to Garden City. A public fundraiser reimbursed the city for about $48,885 of its donations, Thomas said.

Along with a $50,000 private donation being used by the Washington firm, ICF Technologies, to polish up the local SSC proposal, about $15,000 in individual donations have gradually seeped in, said Thane Akins today, SSC Garden City project manager.

Akins said the proposal will be submitted to the U.S. Department of Energy by Sept. 2.

TANKERS

This morning, reporters saw the 46,723-ton Gas King and the 79,999-ton Ocean City docked at Al-Ahmadi, Kuwait's main oil terminal, to begin the loading process.

The 81,283-ton Sea Isle City was anchored about a mile offshore, and a shipping source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said it would dock later today. The Gas King is to take on liquefied petroleum gas, while the other two will be loaded with naphtha and refined oil.

Also at anchor offshore this morning was the supertanker Bridgeton, which hit a mine on the initial U.S.-escorted convoy.

Shipping sources said the tanker, carrying a partial load of crude oil despite a gaping hole in its hull, is likely to accompany the three other tankers on their return convoy.

Eleven of Kuwait's 21 tankers are being registered as American ships so the U.S. Navy can protect them from attacks by Iran, which accuses Kuwait of supporting Iraq in the gulf war.

On Saturday, an American fighter fired two missiles at an Iranian jet after the jet ignored radio messages to steer away from a U.S. surveillance plane, Pentagon sources said. The missiles missed.

A U.S. Navy Aegis-class cruiser, the Valley Forge, and a U.S. Navy P-3 Orion surveillance plane tracked the Iranian F-4 Phantom starting from its takeoff at Iran's Bandar Abbas naval base, the sources said.

The confrontation occurred over the Strait of Hormuz when the Iranian jet began flying directly toward the unarmed P-3 aircraft, they said.

Asked Tuesday about Tehran's reaction to the incident, Rajaie-Khorassani told ABC News: "I think it has been something very casual. My personal reaction is that if we fire we're not going to miss, so I advise the Americans not to do it again."

Pentagon sources in Washington said the U.S. helicopter carrier Guadalcanal and its eight Navy mine-sweeping helicopters will not arrive in the Persian Gulf until next week because of problems with the Guadalcanal's electrical system.

The Soviet news agency Tass said the U.S. request for an international mine-detecting force was designed to convince Americans that Washington was not politically isolated in its reflagging operation.

Tehran radio quoted Hashemi Rafsanjani, speaker of Iran's Parliament, as saying the Iranian navy would be sent to the Gulf of Oman to clear mines.

The anchorage, 30 miles from the Strait of Hormuz, is being used as a staging point for the U.S.-Kuwaiti convoys.

CLEMENTS

"They're going to rationalize by saying, 'Well, I gave you 70 cents on the dollar on a piece of paper that's a bond, like a liberty bond or war bond or savings bond or whatever you want to call it and that's it's due 10 years from now...like an IOU.' "

Efforts early Tuesday by Wall and officials with the Treasury department and the Federal Reserve Board to get Clements to clarify his remarks were unsuccessful. Wall then called his news conference.

Two hours later, Clements issued a statement applauding "a reaffirmation by the federal government to stand behind the deposits of the savings and loan institutions across Texas."

He offered no explanation of his earlier comments. Aides, however, confirmed that Clements had been accurately quoted by the Amarillo newspaper.

In discussing the troubled thrift industry with the Texas paper, Clements said the federal government can't afford to pay depositors 100 percent on deposits of up to $100,000 in bankrupt savings institutions, despite federal guarantees they will do so. He predicted that only 30 cents could be paid on each dollar deposited and said this would amount to "an absolute fraud on the general public" by the government.

Asserting that there is no "forseeable solution" to salvaging the savings and loan system, Clements said the federal government expects Texas to kick in some bail-out money for the troubled thrifts but "there's no way we're going to do that."

Wall said the system is sound, especially with the new $10.8 billion for the insurance fund. If the $10.8 billion isn't enough, Wall said, more money will be sought from Congress.

Wall also said the government never has planned to ask the state of Texas to contribute to the thrift bailout.

Asked if Clements' remark had prompted a run on savings institutions by depositors, Wall said it was "too early to tell."

"Clearly there is nervousness," Wall said, "that's why we're here, to defray fears that we are going to do something different (under the new legislation)."

If a run did occur, Wall said, "liquidity will be provided," from the Federal Reserve and the bank board.

THRIFTS

Monday, in Amarillo, the governor predicted "the federal government is finally going to belly-up to this problem, and when they do, they're going to pay off those depositors like 30 cents on the dollar and give them a piece of paper, like a bond.

"They're going to rationalize by saying, well, I gave you 70 cents on the dollar on a piece of paper that's a bond, like a liberty bond or war bond or savings bond or whatever you want to call it, and that it's due 10 years from now...like an IOU."

Green said Tuesday that Clements's remarks had sparked an increase in withdrawals from Panhandle thrifts.

"It may be an immediate knee-jerk reaction," he said. "It's not something I would characterize as a phenomenal problem."

He said there was no question, however, that the increase in withdrawals was the result of Clements' comments, published in Tuesday's Amarillo Globe-News.

Green's comments came at a news conference in Dallas two hours after Danny Wall, the chairman of the federal Home Loan Bank Board in Washington, met with reporters to denounce the governor's claims as erroneous and assure consumers their deposits were safe.

Clements said Tuesday he regarded Green's and Wall's remarks as a "re-affirmation by the federal government to stand behind the depositors of the savings and loan institutions across Texas."

"I applaud the renewed commitment. The people of Texas have an absolute right to be re-assured that their deposits will be secure and guaranteed," Clements said.

"Gov. Clements is right about one thing — Congress did drag its feet in addressing the problem. Congress didn't pass perfect legislation," Bartlett said.

AIDS

"The employee will be observed daily by appropriate personnel for the presence of open, uncoverable lesions and/or breaks in the skin surface.

"Standard personnel procedures will be employed when direct contact with the lesions and/or breaks in the skin surface cannot be controlled or prevented," the policy states.

In a separate memo, the district stated it was forbidden by federal and state laws to discriminate against an employee with AIDS.

The stickler is getting the employee to report the disease, Newman explained.

The board president said of an AIDS privacy measure recently signed into law by Gov. Bill Clements: "It's a horrible law...that if I didn't know any better, I'd think some gay activist lobby had written."

The bill guarantees the patient's right not to disclose to an employer that he or she has AIDS.

"There is the dilemma. There's no way of us knowing," Newman said.

However, the school board, which recently converted to a self-funded health insurance program, now wears two hats — that of the employee's insurer and that of his employer.

Although the district could peruse the insurance files of an employee when a third-party was its carrier, MISD now will have its own personnel scanning employees' insurance claims, Newman explained.

"It kind of puts you in a precarious situation. You already have the information as soon as he files a claim," Newman said.

"But I can assure you, we will not be pretesting employees for AIDS or scanning the insurance files," he added. "We're just asking anybody who has the disease to come forward."

But at the trustee's meeting Tuesday, MISD Superintendent Joe Baressi said: "Our medical advisor tells us the health department can't tell the district if someone has AIDS."

The superintendent said advice from the district's medical advisor was to look at the insurance claims to see if a staff member has AIDS.

When asked where an AIDS patient's privacy rights collide with those of the personnel and children around him or her, Newman said the answer was a question of "values."

"We are in the business of educating the children...helping them learn to live and face reality and accept the consequences of our actions.

"But as a father, I want to control the environment my child is in and I do not want my child to fall into the trap of thinking an alternative lifestyle is acceptable. It's not in the world I live in," Newman said.

"The gays and the drug users may have individual rights, but when it comes to my children, I don't want my child exposed to it," he said.

A teacher present at the MISD meeting Tuesday spoke of his concerns of making public the evidence of a staff member with AIDS.

"I am questioning the protection MISD will give him or her," said Andy Baquera, a representative from the Classroom Teachers Association.

"I believe in my First Amendment right to privacy," Baquera said.

While Baquera maintained a teacher with any amount of "professionalism" would inform the board and administration if he or she had AIDS, he worried that the "news" would get out "as it did in the case of the Crockett teacher."

"Parents got irrational for no reason at all. We had qualified people there at the meeting at Crockett (between medical and MISD officials and about 200 parents), but the parents believed what they wanted to believe," Baquera said.

Baquera, who is based at the Cerebral Palsy Center, equated public condemnation with the district's June 13 press conference where it was first announced an MISD employee had AIDS.

However, Newman and MISD board member Mike Conaway maintained at the board meeting Tuesday the press conference was a good idea because it quelled fears, rumors and hysteria.

"I think the whole thing June 13 was handled very well," Newman said of the news conference to announce the Crockett teacher had AIDS.

"I'd handle it exactly the same way again," he said. "The idea is to not conceal anything. I don't want to impose my ideals, but I want to present the facts."

The board president did say that if the number of MISD employees stricken with AIDS rises, the need for press conferences would diminish.

And now that children will realize policies dealing with AIDS are intact for them and their teachers, Newman said a human sexuality class was next on the list of things to do.

Hopefully, sexuality classes applicable to all ages of MISD students will be in place by the end of the school year, Newman continued.

Texas Department of Health Disease Intervention Specialist Tommy Langham said today the number of cases of AIDS in the Permian Basin had reached 28.

Of that number, six are still alive, he said.

In Texas, there have been 2,640 cases of AIDS reported.

And in the Unites States, as of Aug. 3, 39,594 cases have been reported. Of that number, 22,747 have died, Langham said.

With AIDS, Langham said, there are no "absolutes" — only probabilities.

However, transmission of the disease is most likely going to occur through sexual intercourse and the sharing of infected intravenous needles, he said.

Gifford said that receipts to the city so far this year remain generally on track with predictions developed at the beginning of the fiscal year.

The city can expect to finish the year with about $6.6 million in sales tax receipts, a $400,000 shortfall from what was expected, he said.

The city so far this fiscal year has collected $4.657 million as its state sales tax share. The figure is 14.39 percent behind last year's pace, when Midland had received $5.441 million from the Comptroller's Office by August.

"We have been monitoring the situation for months, and we're not doing anything in response to the modest shortfall we're seeing," he said.

"Modest" again was how Gifford described an increase in receipts he predicted the city will see as the result of another factor.

The broadening of the sales tax based passed by the Legislature this summer should combine to fuel the upswing in sales tax revenue, he said.

The money represents the city's 1-cent share of the state's 6.25-cent sales tax. Checks received this month reflect taxes collected on sales made in June and during the second business quarter which were reported to the Comptroller's Office by July 20.

In Odessa's case, the Comptroller's Office recorded a 6.34 percent increase in tax receipts over August 1986. But after making allowances for the error adjustment, that figure is an actual 15.29 percent decrease.

Despite the negative indication, Odessa Director of Fiscal Services Frank Muser said he was encouraged by the size of the decrease because it represents a slowing of the Odessa's economic deterioration.

He pointed out that the sales tax figures are indicative of a city's economy 3 to 6 months past.

Adding August's $624,757 check, Odessa so far this fiscal year has received $3.912 million as its share of the state sales tax, a figure 16.17 percent behind last year's pace.

Of other West Texas cities, Andrews' year-to-date payments are running 21.27 percent behind last year's pace. This month's $56,631 payment to Andrews brought the year-to-date total to $341,664, compared $433,983 collected by this time last year.

A $49,539 payment to the city of Lamesa brought that city's year-to-date collections to $285,977, a figure 11.53 percent behind last August's to-date total $323,251, the Comptroller's Office said.

The city of Seminole received $21,542 from the office this month, bringing the total so far for the fiscal year to $133,574. By August 1986, the city had collected $172,826, reflecting a 22.71 percent decrease from last year.

In Big Spring, city administrators received a $187,438 Comptroller's Office check, bringing year-to-date collections to $965,360. The figure is 5.52 percent under the $1.042 million the city had collected by August 1986.

Mines outside gulf present dilemma for neutral Arab states

By RICHARD PYLE

An Analysis

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — The mysterious appearance of mines in waters outside the Persian Gulf has dramatically raised the stakes in the tense region, and given impetus to the creation of something resembling a multinational minesweeping force.

The mines also present new difficulties for the gulf's Arab states, which have tried to stay neutral in the 7-year-old conflict between Iraq and Iran. The Arab states fear antagonizing Iran, as two of their number — Kuwait and Saudi Arabia — already have done.

The floating menace came to light when the U.S.-operated supertanker Texaco Caribbean struck a mine in the Gulf of Oman's offshore ship anchorage on Monday. The explosion sent shock waves through shipping and oil industries already frazzled by 3½ years of "tanker war" in the Persian Gulf.

Omani coast guard vessels and navy scout helicopters, joined in the search by U.S. Navy choppers, discovered five mines in the waters south of the entrance to the Persian Gulf, officials said. Those waters in the Gulf of Oman had been considered safe.

Not the least rattled were seamen on other ships anchored nearby, who heard the blast when the Texaco Caribbean hit the mine.

Shipping sources said some crews expressed concern about moving their ships. However, within 24 hours, 33 of the 57 tankers and bulk carriers in the anchorage had weighed anchor and left.

"There's a little bit of panic out there," said one shipping official.

Iran was immediately suspected of being behind the mines, especially because the United States is using the Oman anchorage to assemble convoys of reflagged Kuwaiti tankers and their Navy escorts.

But shipping experts differed as to whether the mines could have floated into the area or been moored surreptitiously. Some experts even speculated an explosive could have been attached to the Texaco tanker while it was loading at Iran's Larak Island terminal on Sunday.

The target area, a vast offshore parking lot covering perhaps 600 square miles of Arabian Sea, is home to scores of tankers and other vessels on any given day.

It is the main staging center for ships transferring oil cargoes at sea or moving to and from the Persian Gulf. The Strait of Hormuz, the gateway to the gulf, is 30 miles to the north.

Shippers say a mine threat in the Gulf of Oman could force shippers to use harbors farther down the coast, at considerable expense in sailing time and oney.

The mines also could deliver an economic blow to the United Arab Emirates ports of Fujairah and Khor Fakkan, whose shipping supply and replenishment services are major local industries.

The U.A.E. has maintained a neutral stance in the Iran-Iraq war. Any actions it takes on its outer seacoast might trigger terrorist revenge or a response from Iran, little more than a missile shot across the gulf.

Kuwait has already incurred Iran's wrath by appearing to tilt toward Iraq, and Saudi Arabia is immersed in a bitter dispute with Tehran over recent bloody riots in Mecca. Washington agreed to reflag Kuwaiti tankers to protect them from Iran's attacks.

"By any measure, Iran is a regional superpower and the Arab states don't consider themselves immune from its retribution," said an Arab diplomat, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The United States dispatched minesweeping helicopters after the government of Oman, the reclusive sultanate overlooking the Straits of Hormuz, appealed for help in searching for explosives along the coast it shares with the U.A.E., diplomatic sources said.

Within hours, Britain and France announced plans to send minesweepers to the area.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger told reporters in Washington that he "would hope we could look forward to an international minesweeping force" to clear the gulf.

In London, Defense Secretary George Younger said the four British minesweepers would protect the four warships of the Persian Gulf-based "Armilla patrol."

Labor unrest threatens Korean economy

By EDWIN Q. WHITE

An Analysis

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — A sudden surge of labor unrest has swept South Korea, threatening its export-driven economy, as workers follow up a successful campaign for more democracy with protests for more pay and freer unions.

Hundreds of sit-ins, walkouts and rallies have broken out since last month, involving involving tens of thousands of workers in industries ranging from pop music to coal mining. Some strikes have turned violent, and police firing tear gas have clashed with workers in a few instances.

Authorities have said there will be no government intervention unless strikers use violence to disrupt public services.

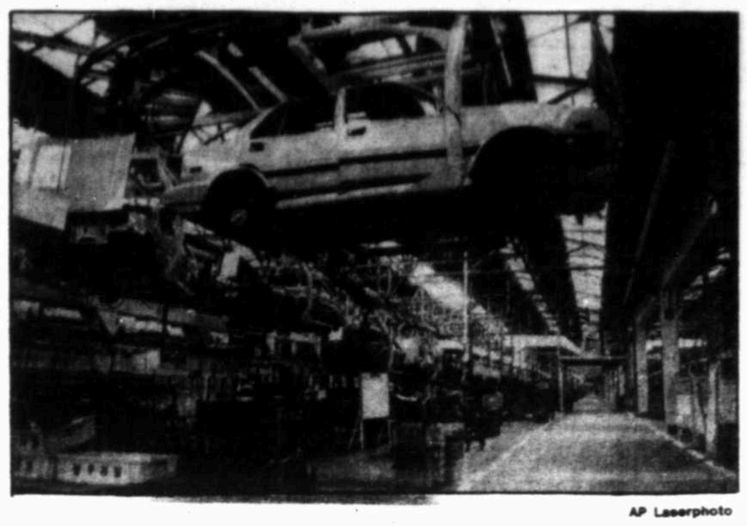
Opposition leaders have called for a peaceful struggle.

The strikes forced Hyundai Motor Co., an integral part of the country's economy, to close assembly lines this week for the second time. Hyundai, which has launched a major sales drive in the United States and other parts of the world, was forced to close down because of strikes at plants that produce parts.

Bus and taxi drivers have abandoned their vehicles to take part in protests. Stevedores and fishermen have joined in. Textile workers have held defiant rallies.

On Aug. 1, 2,000 singers affiliated with the Korea Singers' Association went on strike, demanding higher television performance fees. That strike ended after just half a day, when the nation's two networks agreed to 40 percent fee increases.

The clashes have pitted strikers against police, and activist workers against pro-management employees.



AP Laserphoto

Hyundai Motor Co.'s Ulsan, South Korea, plant sits unmanned and idle today because of labor troubles. Hyundai is the nation's largest automaker.

Along with demands for higher pay and increased bonuses, strikers are demanding the right to form their own free unions.

Since the late President Park Chung-hee kicked off South Korea's major economic development plan in the early 1970s, the country has emphasized development of big industries, with little regard for the individual laborer.

No industrywide or nationwide unions have been allowed, although some pro-government federations exist.

Wage and bonus levels vary widely. But official figures report worker productivity has nearly doubled since 1980 while pay has lagged far behind.

The pro-government Federation of Korea Labor Unions lists average wages at less than $370 a month. Some entry-level workers in fields such as textiles and footwear manufacturing say they earn less than $120 a month.

The work ethic is strong in South Korea and long hours are common. But the blue-collar ranks have become increasingly unhappy, although this once poor, war-torn country is rapidly becoming a major economic power.

The surge of worker unrest followed President Chun Doo-hwan's announcement in July that he would bow to opposition demands for wide-ranging democratic reforms, ending weeks of violent anti-government protests.

There are no accurate estimates of how many people are on strike across the nation, and new protests flare up daily while others have settled. Newspapers have put the total number of strikers at about 40,000.

Hardline military factions are said to be unhappy with the wave of strikes. But while the labor unrest poses serious problems to management and economic policy planners, it does not appear to be an immediate threat to the government itself.

Labor Minister Lee Hun-ki declared this week that if labor disputes "are further aggravated to threaten the national economy and social stability, the government will take tough actions against them."

At the same time, he called again for labor and management to reach compromises.

Some administration critics view this hands-off policy as part of an effort by the government to portray itself in the best possible light as the nation moves toward presidential elections later this year.

One Korean executive with close government ties said: "There will be problems, but the Korean worker is smart. They know they haven't had a fair shake and they want it, but they also know things could get to a point where their jobs and their families could be hurt. They don't want that."

Blind sailor will 'ride out' storm 65 miles off Bermuda

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Blind sailor Jim Dickson today prepared to ride out a tropical storm at sea, rather than trying to reach Bermuda ahead of the storm.

Dickson was 65 miles north of Bermuda at 6 a.m. EDT today and reported the weather was already deteriorating, said spokesman Paul Petronello. Tropical Storm Arlene was about 350 miles west-southwest of the island, and a line of rough weather and squalls stretched far ahead of the storm, the National Weather Service said.

"He's going to prepare the boat for a storm," Petronello said.

Petronello had said Tuesday night that Dickson planned to sail all night in an effort to reach harbor before the storm.

By this morning, however, it appeared more prudent to take down the sails and await the storm's approach at sea, the spokesman said.

The center of the storm packs winds of 50 mph with higher gusts, but is not likely to increase in strength, the weather service said.

Petronello said he planned to leave for Bermuda today with Dickson's mother and sister.

Although Bermuda is a detour in Dickson's plan to become the first sightless person to sail solo across the Atlantic, Petronello said the 650-mile voyage from Portsmouth to Bermuda also will be a victory.

Conservatives seek Hansen's release

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group of conservative activists is staging a radio advertising blitz seeking the immediate release of former Rep. George Hansen, R-Idaho, from a federal prison where he is incarcerated for filing false financial disclosure statements.

Singing their own version of a children's Mickey Mouse jingle, staff members of the Conservative Action Foundation taped a musical appeal to "let George Hansen go" which was broadcast about 200 times on half a dozen local radio stations during a recent 10-day period.

In addition to the $3,000 radio campaign, the foundation published two full-page ads in The Washington Times at a cost of $7,000 to plead for Hansen's freedom.

Research director Bonner Cohen said the foundation plans to broadcast a new set of taped free-Hansen appeals for another week or 10 days this month if enough money can be raised to buy the air time.

Hansen is scheduled to be released Sept. 23 from a medium-security federal prison at Petersburg, Va.

None injured in three airline incidents

Associated Press

A jetliner with 83 people aboard made a hard turn to avoid hitting a small plane, a single-engine plane came within a few feet of a corporate jet, and five tires blew out on a Concorde in a bumpy landing, officials said.

No one was injured in Tuesday's incidents, which occurred respectively in Los Angeles, Chicago and New York City.

The two near-collisions were under investigation by the Federal Aviation Administration.

Among the 93 passengers on the Concorde were singer Engelbert Humperdinck and Mark Thatcher, the son of British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, the New York Post reported today.

Five of the Concorde's 10 tires blew out as the supersonic jet touched down at New York's Kennedy Airport. The blowouts occurred on both sides of the plane, said British Airways spokeswoman Deborah Bernstein.

Humperdinck told the newspaper he said a prayer during the bumpy landing.

"It looked like we only had a short distance to go before the marshland when the plane was brought to a halt.... It was scary," he said. "With the skill of the pilot and the guidance of God we made it safely."

At Los Angeles International Airport, an American Airlines Boeing 737 on landing approach made a "violent turn" to avoid an unidentified aircraft that came within 100 feet, said Dick Hallen, an FAA duty officer.

"The captain looked up and saw the bottom of a small aircraft passing in front of him," said airline spokesman Russell Mack.

Virginia Akre, a passenger on the jet, said: "First it dropped. Then it lurched to the side. It happened so fast."

"He finally righted the plane. Everyone was in shock," she said. "It happened over a populated area. If we would have crashed, we would have hit all those homes."

"I was petrified," added Cathy Karpow, a passenger from Anaheim Hills, Calif., on the flight, which originated in Seattle and stopped in San Francisco. "I don't know if I will fly again."

Just hours before Tuesday's near-collision, the FAA said it wants to expand the controlled airspace over Los Angeles International to reduce the chance of crashes there. Eighty-two people were killed last August, when an Aeromexico airliner collided with a small plane and crashed over suburban Cerritos as it approached the airport.

The FAA proposed raising the ceiling for the terminal control area, or TCA, from 7,000 feet to 12,500 feet and extend the area to up to 30 miles in some directions where it is only 25. Implementing the plan could take two years because of hearings and reviews, FAA officials said.

In TCAs, pilots must maintain radio contact with air traffic controllers while observing restricted airspace right-of-way.

Over Chicago's Midway Airport, the pilot of the Learjet owned by a Green Bay, Wis., paper company "told the tower that he had to dive, he had to go down, quick down" to avoid hitting a Piper Cherokee, said FAA spokesman Mort Edelstein.

The pilot of the Learjet, which was on landing approach, reported the other plane was so close, "I could read his number," Edelstein said.

"Now that's close," Edelstein said. "I've flown a lot, and I've never been that close to another plane."

An air traffic controller at Midway had sighted the Piper and radioed its pilot in an attempt to head off a collision but got no response, the spokesman said. There was no controller error, Edelstein said.

Edelstein said he did not know how many people were aboard the planes.

On Monday, a Delta Air Lines jet was forced to veer sharply to avoid colliding with an unidentified single-engine plane near Fort Worth, Texas, the FAA said. The aircraft came within about 300 feet, spokesman Mitch Barker said.

No one was injured. Delta spokesman Jim Lundy said he did not know how many people were aboard the jet.

Termite-fighting chlordane taken off market

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chlordane, a termite-fighter used on 30 million homes and now considered a probable cause of cancer, is being pulled off the market temporarily and federal regulators say it may never come back.

The manufacturer, Velsicol Chemical Corp. of Rosement, Ill., has agreed not sell any more while it tries to find a way to satisfy the Environmental Protection Agency that long-term indoor airborne exposure can be eliminated.

Already two prominent pest-control firms, Orkin Exterminating Co. and Terminix International, have stopped using chlordane and its chemical cousin, heptachlor, because of public concern. Heptachlor is often mixed with chlordane.

John A. Moore, EPA's assistant administrator for pesticides and toxic substances, said Tuesday that distributors and exterminators may use inventories already on hand. He estimated that most have only a two-month supply.

After that, safer but more expensive substitutes are likely to be used, officials say.

Chlordane acts not by killing termites, but by keeping them away from the house. It usually is injected into the soil around a foundation as a barrier to the termites, and a single application may be good for 40 years.

Since 1981, four substitute compounds have appeared that pose trivial or no risk of cancer, EPA says. But those chemicals may cost $60 more per application than chlordane and they may have to be applied once every 10 years, said Moore.

The agreement with Velsicol was reached in recent days as the agency moved to cancel the company's license to sell chlordane, Moore said.

If the agency had gone ahead with cancellation proceedings, chlordane still could have been used while the action was contested. Moore said EPA is satisfied to have avoided "a year or two years of administrative hearings and litigation."

However, eight consumer, environmental and other activist organizations have sued EPA seeking an emergency ban to take chlordane off the market immediately.

"If it's unable to take decisive action on a chemical such as chlordane, we fear the inability of this agency to protect the public," said Jay Feldman, coordinator of the National Campaign Against the Misuse of Pesticides, which is leading the court action.

Moore said he did not think the agency could have produced findings to justify an emergency ban. An emergency ban also would have required EPA to spend $53 million to buy up existing stocks of the chemical, but Moore said that prospect played no role in his decision.

EPA's National Pesticide Telecommunications Network will help people who wish to locate a laboratory capable of testing indoor air for chlordane. The toll-free number is 800-858-7378.

105 of 106 bribe offers accepted in New York 'sting'

NEW YORK (AP) — A bribe-dangling undercover FBI agent's payoffs were accepted 105 times in 106 offers, a prosecutor said in announcing the arrests of 58 people, including 44 past and present officials in 15 upstate counties.

The sole refusal, U.S. Attorney Rudolph Giuliani said Tuesday, came from an official who said the offer wasn't enough. That official, who was not identified, was being charged with accepting other bribes, Giuliani said.

"It is not an overstatement to say, compared to other states, New York is a much friendlier place to corrupt politicians, crooked businessmen and organized criminals," Giuliani said.

The charges included conspiracy, mail fraud, perjury and bribe promotion. Involved in the investigation were 48 cities, towns and villages in 15 counties from suburban Westchester County to the Canadian border.

The charges stemmed from "Operation Double Steel," a 2½-year undercover probe in which an FBI agent posing as a steel products salesman offered bribes and kickbacks to officials involved in purchasing materials and equipment, said Thomas Sheer, head of the FBI's New York City office.

Gov. Mario Cuomo's chief spokesman, Gary Fryer, said the governor did not know the details of the charges, but said the administration would determine if the state has any role in the case.

Among the officials charged were 36 present and former highway superintendents; the director of purchasing for Yonkers, Peter Fokine; his assistant, John Papa; the Port Jervis director of public works, Richard Onofry; and the public works commissioner of Mount Vernon, Ronald Iaboni.

Thomas Burke, a former highway superintendent in Carmel, was charged with perjury for allegedly lying to a federal grand jury investigating corruption.

Sheer said the undercover agent, who was not identified, handed out a total of $40,000 in bribes.

Ending MIA issue a necessary step

The emotional issue of the MIAs — those 1,700 American servicemen still listed as missing-in-action in the long past Vietnam War — hangs like a cloud over thousands of Americans. They understandably want to know what became of their loved ones so that they can put their memories to rest.

But in the decade and a half since the last American troops left Vietnam little has been learned of the MIAs. Occasionally the remains of a few servicemen will be released by the communist government. Movies and books periodically attempt to make a case for the rumored inhumane detention of the MIAs even now, but little in terms of hard evidence is ever offered.

Yet the question nags at the memory of those close to the issue: Are Americans still held against their will in Vietnamese hell-holes? If not, where are they or their remains? Those are questions that will continue to haunt the American conscience until the issue is resolved.

Along that line, the talks that resumed recently between the United States and Hanoi should offer at least a glimmer of hope that the MIA issue will be brought up once again and, hopefully at least, resolved. It's understandable that Vietnam wants to normalize relations with this nation. It has much to gain in the way of economic assistance, diplomatic stature and trade, and little to lose.

What the Vietnamese are forgetting is that the American public still holds a high level of hostility toward them as a result of the MIAs and that government's refusal to cooperate in resolving the question. Until it is put to rest, that hostility will not be diminished and relations should not be normalized.

As Gen. John Vessey, former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, continues his negotiations with Hanoi he should keep in mind that he is not only representing the families of the 1,700 MIAs but an entire nation of people who have suffered humiliation and insult as a result of the ongoing issue. It is time to put the issue to rest, but in doing so, it must be a two-way street. The interests of the American people and the families of the MIAs must be fulfilled.

Midland's many streams

What do the following locations have in common? Garfield and Castleford, Tarleton north from the Lee campus, Wadley eastfrom Tarleton to Ward and from Garfield to "I," north and west from Wadley and Big Spring, both Billingsley and Midkiff streets just north of Loop 250, south and east from Garfield and Neely, Tennessee and Baird, and others.

Right on! These are Midland's low-water crossings where we ford running streams as we drive our daily rounds. Ah Midland, city of a thousand springs. And don't think these are just trickles either. Heck, I have caught trout in smaller streams than ours when they are in flood stage.

Yes, nuisance water is still with us in defiance of City Ordinance 6671 which declares unlawful such wasteful and damaging practice. Nuisance water, the main reason for dirty cars and numerous potholes, is part of the Midland scene.

Said uncontested, at-large incumbent Katie Heck when returned to the City Council, "This is going to be a just-taking-care-of-what-we-have kind of time. We're going to have to be pretty hard-headed" (Midland Reporter-Telegram, April 5, 1987, pg. 2A).

So let's start by taking care of our streets. The folks in code enforcement are doing the best they can, but there are only three people down there to monitor the whole city. They have advised me that they investigate every reported violation and offenders are fined after the first warning.

Come on, folks, let's help them out and let them know where the wet spots are. Pick out your favorite splash point, call 683-4281, and ask for code enforcement. You will get a courteous response and your car will stay cleaner for your trouble. In addition, the city will spend less on pothole repair and some of us won't get upset every morning on the way to work.

Here's a question for the city attorney: When streets get icy next winter from nuisance water, perhaps causing an accident resulting in property damage and injury or death, can the property owner running nuisance water be held liable?

Unless we stop nuisance water, someone is going to find out.

Animals being dumped

As I am sure Midlanders are aware, the residents of Midland County who live outside the city limits have a severe problem with stray and/or sick animals being "dumped" on us. We also have very little choice of what to do about the problem. It seems our choices are:

1. Shoot the animal (which is illegal unless it is attacking livestock or persons, etc.);
2. Let it "roam" and hope it finds a "home" somewhere else;
3. Attempt to catch the animal and take it to a facility;
4. Take it into their own already-growing group of animals.

It is my understanding that the County Constable's office is supposed to "handle" any calls of complaint on strays. It is also my understanding that the constable's office lacks the manpower, holding facilities, and training/equipment for proper handling of these animals.

I want to try to do something about this problem. I would like to make my telephone number and address available to anyone who would like to express problems they may also have had. I cannot change this by myself and need to hear from others with the same problem.

My address is Route 1, Box 144-W, Midland, 79701 and my telephone number is 685-1493.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, Aug. 12, the 224th day of 1987. There are 141 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On August 12, 1898, Hawaii was formally annexed to the United States after Congress passed a joint resolution. Hawaii was granted territorial status in 1900, and became the 50th state of the union in 1959.

On this date:

In 1851, Isaac Singer was granted a patent on his sewing machine.

In 1867, President Andrew Johnson sparked a move to impeach him as he defied Congress by suspending Secretary of War Edwin M. Stanton.

In 1898, the peace protocol ending the Spanish-American War was signed.

In 1915, the novel "Of Human Bondage," by William Somerset Maugham, was published.

In 1941, French Marshal Henri Petain called on his countrymen to give their full support to Nazi Germany.

In 1953, the Soviet Union conducted a secret test of its first hydrogen bomb.

In 1955, President Dwight D. Eisenhower signed a bill raising the minimum wage from 75 cents to $1 an hour, effective the following March.

In 1960, the first balloon satellite — the Echo I — was launched by the United States from Cape Canaveral, Fla.

In 1962, one day after launching Andrian Nikolayev into orbit, the Soviet Union also sent up cosmonaut Pavel Popovich. Both men landed safely Aug. 15.

In 1985, the world's worst single-aircraft disaster took place as a Japan Airlines Boeing 747 crashed into a wooden mountain range during a domestic flight, killing 520 people.

JACK ANDERSON

CIA knew companies dodged rules

WASHINGTON — In a highly sensitive report seen by only a few U.S. leaders, the CIA three years ago identified five Japanese trading companies it suspected of engaging in illegal sales of Western high technology to the Soviet Union.

Jack Anderson

Among the five was C. Itoh & Co., the giant trading firm that helped arrange the illegal sale by Toshiba of sophisticated propeller-manufacturing machinery to Moscow. This enabled Soviet submarines to run more quietly and thus be more difficult to detect. If the CIA's 1984 warning had brought a crackdown on C. Itoh, the sale of some of the high-tech machinery might have been prevented.

The CIA report was produced by the Technology Transfer Committee, a special CIA bureau created during the Reagan administration to monitor the legal and illegal flow of Western technology to the Soviet bloc. The report on Japan was one of a series focusing on various countries that sell to the Soviets. It is still classified "Secret/Noforn," meaning "no foreign dissemination," even to U.S. allies.

We reviewed the secret report as part of a lengthy investigation in Tokyo and Washington by Dale Van Atta and our associate Michael Binstein that began in 1984.

"In practice, some Japanese trading companies will resort to illegal practices and some will not," the CIA report observed. It then went on to identify five Japanese companies, large and small, that the CIA had reason to believe were making at least questionable — if not outright illegal — sales of high technology to the Soviets.

In addition to C. Itoh, the Japanese companies named by the CIA were Mitsubishi, Mitsui, Marubeni and Tairiku. These and other Japanese firms have used a variety of stratagems to sell high-tech items to the Soviets without incurring the scrutiny of the Japanese National Police, according to the report.

A favorite device, the report says, has been to set up subsidiaries in Singapore and Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, to make the actual sales.

The secret 1984 report provided a remarkably prescient description of the skullduggery unmasked three years later in the Toshiba scandal.

"Various methods have been used within the context of illegal trade to facilitate the transport of embargoed goods to end users in Russia," the report noted. It explained that to circumvent restrictions imposed by COCOM, the coordinating committee of the Western allies and Japan that sets export rules, "Japanese firms often establish small, expendable dummy organizations to act as their intermediaries with Soviet and East European clients. ...

"The dummy firm is expendable if the deal falls through for whatever reason. The Japanese parent is able to distance itself in a legal context from financial losses or possibly illegal activities of its surrogate."

This is similiar to what Toshiba tried to do, pinning all blame on an "independent" subsidiary. But Congress didn't buy this transparent effort to avoid responsibility, since Toshiba owned 51 percent of the subsidiary. Toshiba had to accept the blame, and both its chairman and president resigned as a result.

A surprising aspect of the Toshiba scandal is that C. Itoh has escaped with a slap on the wrist. The Japanese government banned C. Itoh from exporting machine tools to communist countries for — incredibly — three months.

Meanwhile, Japanese authorities plan to prosecute Toshiba, and the U.S. Congress has been drafting punitive measures against the company. The $17 million transaction may eventually cost American taxpayers billions of dollars as the Pentagon tries to overcome the advantage the Soviets gained in evading U.S. undersea detection technology.

COKE AND CORRUPTION: How do the drug lords operate with such arrogant license in Colombia? A classified Drug Enforcement Administration report gives the disquieting answer: It estimates that drug traffickers pay more than $100 million a year to corrupt officials so they'll look the other way when drugs are being processed and shipped out of the country.

At times, the DEA report charges, the payoffs have reached into the Colombian presidential Cabinet. In some cases, when civil servants initially resist temptation, the drug dealers make an offer that can't be refused: threats of bodily harm to the targeted official or his family. This usually works, since the cocaine czars are known to have no qualms about murdering those who stand in their way.

All this has made the Colombian public cynical. There's a popular joke that a drug dealer first buys a Mercedes, then a large estate — and then a politician.

MINI-EDITORIAL: We've been waiting with some trepidation for a surge of support for New Hampshire Gov. John Sununu's cure for what he calls the "drastic overcentralization of power in Washington." His solution is a constitutional amendment that would permit the nullification of federal laws by a vote of two-thirds of the states. Sununu evidently has heard of the Civil War and more recent developments, since he said federal civil rights laws aren't his target. But if it's federal control over federal money that bothers the governor, there's a much simpler solution, of course. Just don't take any federal funds — and wait for the recall petitions.

TOM WICKER

All sides could find benefit in peace plan

NEW YORK — Peace in Central America is not yet "at hand." The Arias plan agreed upon by the five nations of the region suggests, however, that the Sandinistas now may be more open to a settlement, and that President Reagan might salvage some of his goals without financing more war in Nicaragua.

The Arias plan envisages a regional peace settlement, and may be likelier to fail in El Salvador than in Nicaragua; but the Reagan administration's proxy war against the Sandinistas is most immediately affected. Negotiations to put the plan into operation will delay and perhaps remove the necessity for Congress to renew or reject military aid to the "contras" fighting that war.

Another important effect of the agreement is that it will test the protestations of both sides. The Sandinistas insist that their repression of civil liberties and increasing militarization of Nicaragua, as well as their heavy dependence upon aid from the Soviet Union and Cuba, have been forced by the Reagan-sponsored insurgency. If they did not have to fight a civil war inspired from Washington, they argue, they could relax internal controls, reduce dependence upon outside help, and devote more resources to developing Nicaragua's economy.

The cease-fire envisioned by the Arias plan would end the fighting. If the Sandinistas reacted as they promise, and as agreed with the other Central American nations, President Reagan would have gained at least the greater degree of democracy in Nicaragua that he always cites among his goals. Nicaragua's links to the Soviet bloc also might be weakened.

On the other side, the Reagan administration contends that it prefers a negotiated settlement in Nicaragua, but that the only way to bring the Sandinistas to accept such a settlement is to keep military pressure on them, through the contra insurgency. So Reagan's sincerity, too, will be tested.

If he really wants a negotiated settlement, and the Sandinistas carry out their part of the Arias proposals, Reagan would have no reason to insist upon further military aid to the contras — or even upon their existence as an organized body. In that event, as envisioned in the regional pact, the contras and their leaders could participate freely in Nicaraguan politics. (Reagan could even claim, rightly or wrongly, that it was pressure from the contras that brought the Sandinistas around.)

What supporters of the president's proxy war are asking, if the Sandinistas allow just enough democratic reform for just long enough to put the contras out of business under the Arias plan, then renege and crack down again? It's a good question and that's why it's important that this is a regional agreement. If Nicaragua openly violated a solemn treaty with its neighbors, it would be up to those neighbors — not to unilateral Yankee intervention — to enforce the pact, with the certain support of other nations in the hemisphere.

The Arias agreement makes it clear that no Central American nation favors the contras — whatever lip service some may have paid them out of fear of Washington. To be rid of this latest intervention from the north was a unifying factor among five usually contentious nations; and to prevent future U.S. intervention would be a strong motive for the states surrounding Nicaragua to monitor its behavior.

Another point being raised against the Arias agreement is that it would curtail U.S. aid to the contras when a cease-fire was reached, but that Soviet and Cuban aid to Nicaragua could continue. The one side, however, has been aiding an insurgent force, and the other a recognized government — two different things. No treaty could bind an independent government not to seek or receive aid from any country it might choose.

If the insurgent war were ended, however, Nicaragua would have no legitimate need for helicopter gunships and the like, nor would the Russians have any legitimate reason to supply them. In those circumstances, Moscow — which is under its own economic pressures and seems to seek better relations with the United States — would have little reason to offend Washington and most of the Western Hemisphere by continuing to send expensive and unneeded arms to Nicaragua.

If, however, excessive arms shipments did continue after a cease-fire, and did threaten either Nicaragua's neighbors or the establishment of a Soviet military base, the United States — with hemispheric support — would have good reason and ample means to put a stop to it. The contras were never needed to cope with such threats, nor could they ever be a useful instrument for guarding hemispheric security.

Class reunion brings bad old past to present

News Item — Dr. Jack Sparacino, a psychologist, says the difference between people who attend school reunions and those who do not isn't based on the status they hold today, but the status they held while in school.

Art Buchwald

"Herman, darling, are you going to your high school's 30-year reunion?"

"Why should I? They'll only start calling me 'Inky Squid.'"

"Is that what they called you in school?"

"Yeah, except for George Hankoff. He called me 'Squishy Squid.'"

"But that was years ago. You now own the largest land development company in the United States."

"That won't cut any ice with Billy Mahler. He'll still step on my foot and say it was an accident."

"You know you're exaggerating. I'm sure they'd love to see you. After all, you're the chairman of the board of a Hollywood motion picture company, and you're probably the only one who married a movie star."

"Maybe so, but I'll bet you Audrey Zoeller still won't dance with me."

"Who is Audrey Zoeller?"

"She was our high school's leading pompon girl. She used to stand on Jack Minderman's shoulders and yell 'DEEEEEEE-FENSE' whenever the other team was threatening to score. One time I asked her to go to a prom with me and she said, 'I don't dance with Inky Squids.'"

"Maybe she'll change her tune when you arrive at the airport in your private Lear jet."

"Milton Stevens will just laugh and say, 'Who would have thought that stupid Inky, with his shirttail always out, would own his own airplane? It shows you what a mess this country is really in!'"

"You're making those things up, Herman. After all, I'm sure you are the only one in your class who has a university library named after him."

"Milton never forgave me for dropping a fly ball in the ninth inning to rob him of a no-hit game."

"I never knew you played baseball on the high school team."

"I didn't. It was a sandlot game in Hollis Woods, around the corner from where I lived."

"But now you own a national league baseball team. Milton will certainly be impressed with that."

"It won't give him back his no-hit ball game."

"Well, it's no big deal to me if you go or not. I won't know anybody anyway."

"You're lucky — you don't know what they're really like."

"Isn't there someone in the class that was nice?"

"Fern Haggerty never called me Squid."

"Well, you'll be glad to see her."

"Yeah, but she was built like the Goodyear blimp."

"Maybe Fern went to Weight Watchers. She may be a very beautiful woman now."

"If she is, she won't talk to me, and if she does, she'll probably call me Squid."

"So I take it you're not going to the reunion."

"Not if Arnie Krasner is there."

"All right, what was your relationship with Arnie Krasner?"

"He was my best friend until he told everyone in class I slept on a rubber sheet."

PHILADELPHIA TODAY

Today was clear and pleasant, with a median temperature of 79.

Jacob Hiltzheimer "went to church fore and afternoon. My daughter Kitty went with Mr. William Standley to Oxford Church to hear Mr. Pilmore preach."

CONFEDERATION TODAY

Nathan Dane wrote from New York to Rufus King to report on congressional affairs.

"We shall probably have a Congress to-morrow-and I believe for the first time not one New England State upon the floor. I wish you would inform me as soon as you conveniently can, what prospect there is of our States being represented and when. I am, now the only member of Congress from the eastern states.

"There are now before Congress several objects respecting Indian affairs, etc., respecting Mr. Adams' return to America, and directing in what manner the affairs of our legation at the Court of London shall be conducted after his return.... It is evidently the object of several gentlemen to put the affairs of our Legation in London into the hands of Mr. Jefferson. This is a thing we can by no means agree to."

CONVENTION TODAY

The Convention was enjoying its customary Sunday recess.

In the week since its 12-day recess, the Convention had received, studied and worked on the draft Constitution prepared by the Committee of Detail and had blocked an effort to refer the draft to a Committee of the Whole. Agreement had been reached upon the preamble, and on a government of supreme legislative, executive and judicial power. The delegates had also gone almost all the way through the articles pertaining to the composition, election, and privileges of the legislature.

The more optimistic members were planning on a mid-September end.

LOOKING BACK
Pierce Butler

Born in County Carlow, Ireland, third son of the 5th Baronet Cloughran, Butler had had a commission as major, purchased for him at age 11. In his teens he had served against the French in Canada returned to America in 1765.

On Jan. 10, 1771, he had married Mary Middleton, of the South Carolina Middletons (the cousin of Mrs. Charles Cotesworth Pinckney), and an heiress of large estate. By 1787, they had five children living. A sixth had burned to death at age 2.

By 1776, Butler entered public service in South Carolina as a justice of the peace. Beginning in 1778, he was regularly elected to the state legislature. He also served as the state's adjutant general, working closely with Gov. John Rutledge. While Butler escaped the capture of Charleston, his plantations and his family had been captured, and his family had spent much of 1782 in Philadelphia. His wife had accompanied him to Philadelphia for the Convention but found the climate unbearable and had gone on to New York.

Butler was an active member of the Convention from the beginning when he made the motion that the Convention maintain secrecy. One of the few members with no prior experience at the national level, he nevertheless supported the basic concepts advanced by James Madison and the Virginia Plan while seeking adjustments to safeguard the interests of South Carolina.

He favored a single executive; proportional representation in both houses of the legislature based on relative wealth; favored federal control of the militia; and longer terms for the executive and Congress. He feared taking too much power from the states, and wanted senators to be dependent on the state legislators. He wanted the seat of the federal government fixed (at some place other than New York City) by the Constitution. He tried to get slaves counted one for one in determining representation, and introduced what became the fugitive slave clause.

NATION IN BRIEF

Lonetree's attorney sees 'no real crime'

QUANTICO, Va. (AP) — Prosecutors are accusing Sgt. Clayton Lonetree of a variety of motives for betraying his country because there was no real reason and no real crime, say defense lawyers in the Marine's espionage trial.

The accusation came during opening arguments Tuesday, when lawyers on each side charged their opponents with trying to mislead jurors.

The chief military prosecutor, Marine Maj. David L. Beck, said in his opening argument that Lonetree gave secrets to the Soviets after being motivated by sex from a Soviet lover, cash payoffs from the KGB and revenge for the U.S. government's treatment of Indians.

Nurse's aide confesses

CINCINNATI (AP) — A nurse's aide has confessed to killing at least 34 people, primarily at two area hospitals, a television station reported Tuesday.

Donald Harvey has been charged with aggravated murder in the March 7 cyanide poisoning of John Powell, a 44-year-old patient who suffered severe injuries in a motorcycle accident.

Harvey, who pleaded innocent and innocent by reason of insanity after his arrest in April, is being held in a Hamilton County jail.

WCPO-TV in Cincinnati said Harvey, the subject of a special Hamilton County grand jury investigation, has confessed to police that he killed 23 people as a nurse's aide at Drake, five people while he worked at the Veterans Administration Medical Center in Cincinnati and six others outside the hospitals.

The station, which did not identify its sources, said prosecutors deny that Harvey has made a confession.

Burger supporting Bork

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — President Reagan's nomination of Robert Bork to the U.S. Supreme Court has enthusiastic support from retired Chief Justice Warren Burger, but a key oppponent says Bork faces a difficult Senate battle.

"I don't think in more than 50 years since I was in law school there has ever been a nomination of a man or woman any better qualified than Judge Bork," Burger said Tuesday at the American Bar convention.

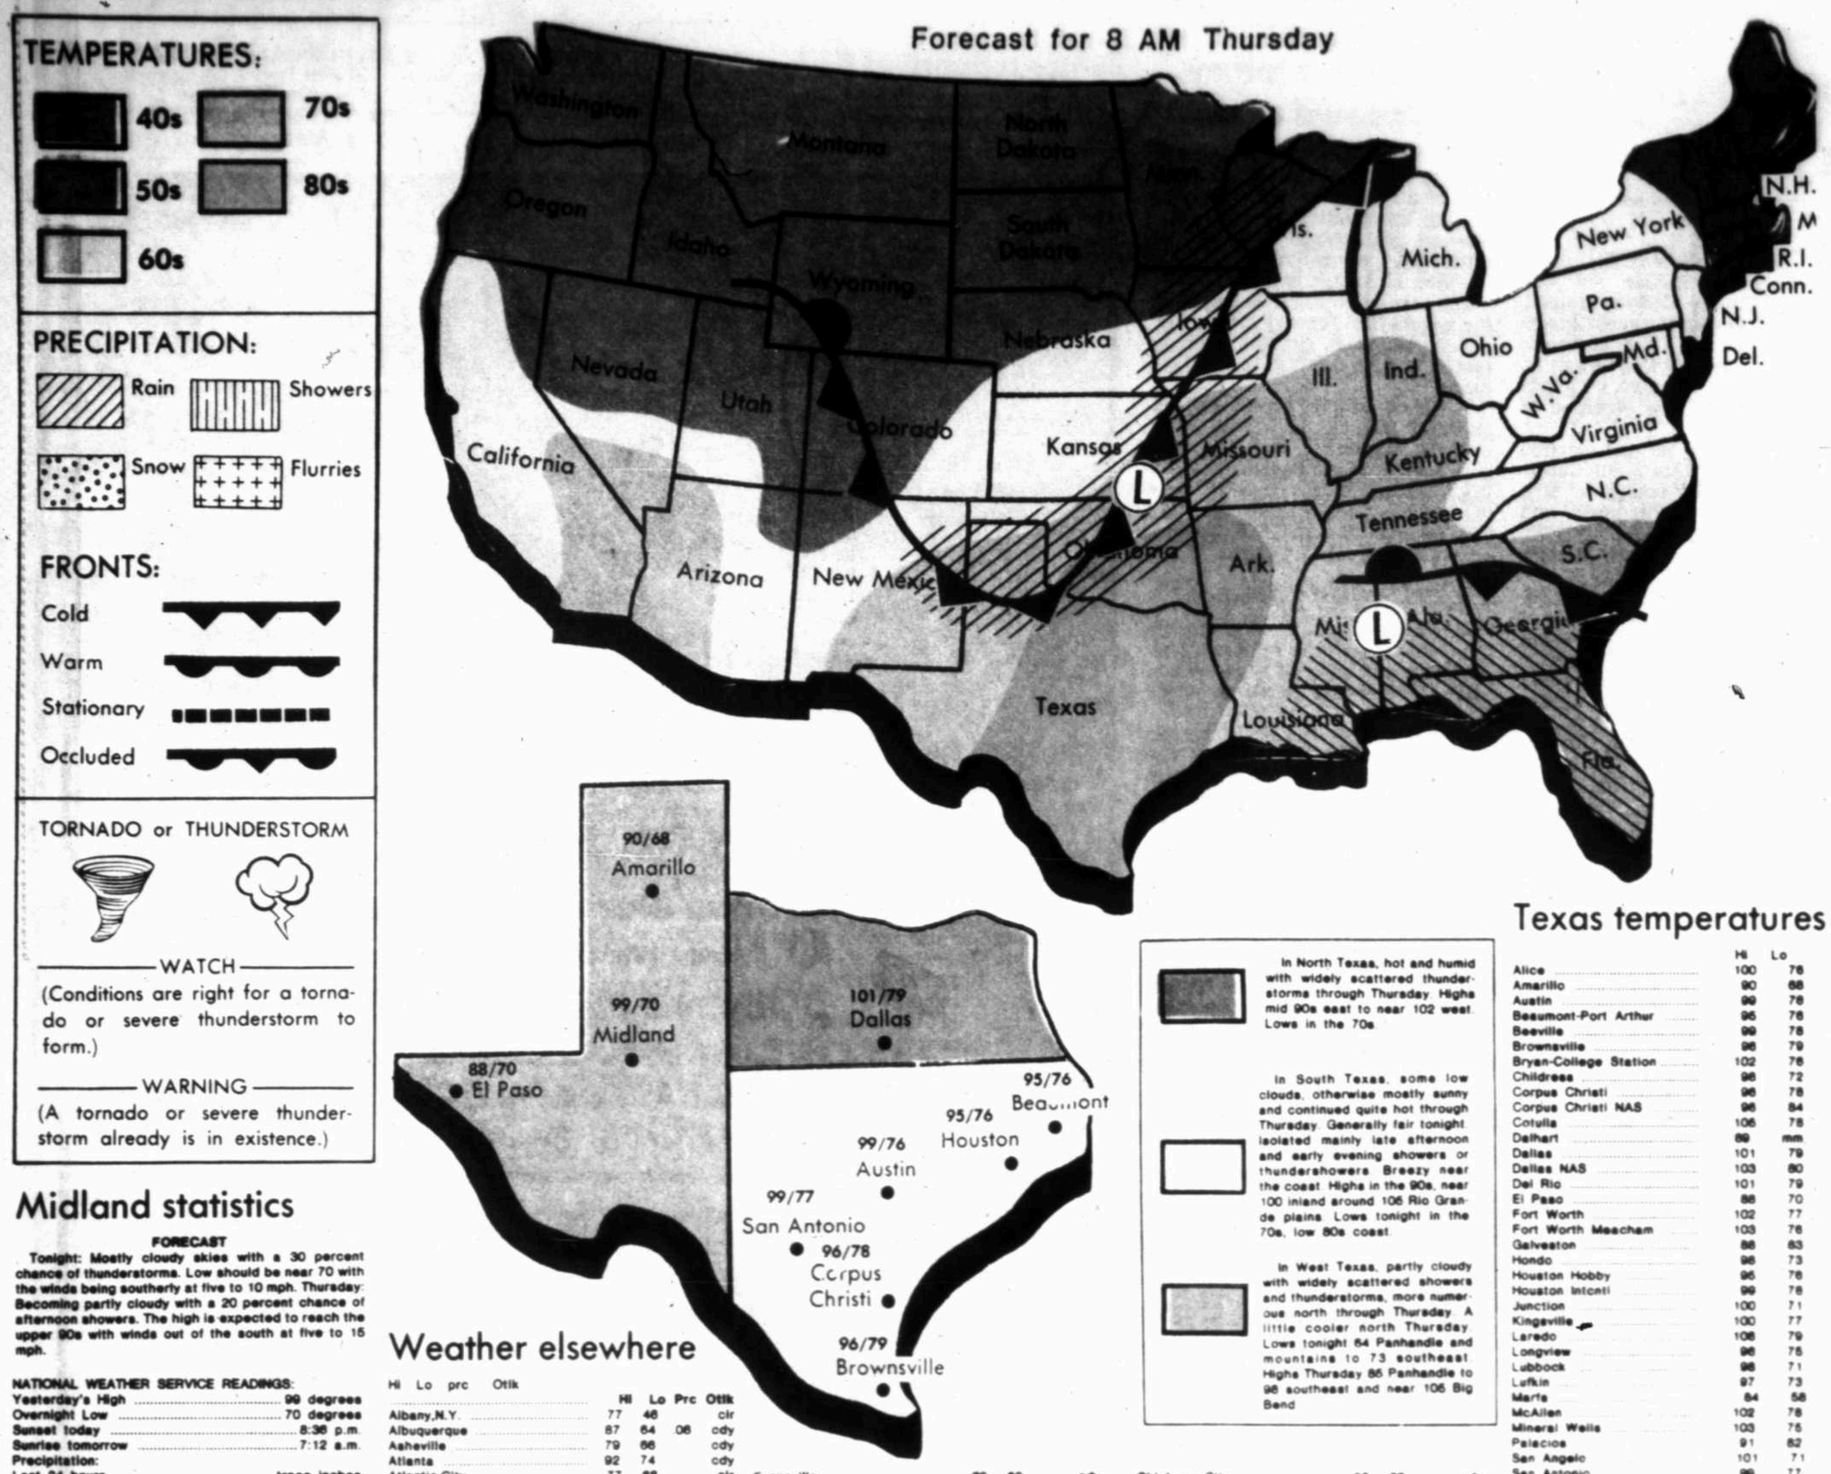
WEATHER SUMMARY



Thunderstorms in forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

Mostly cloudy skies and a 30 percent chance of thunderstorms, as predicted by the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, are in the forecast for the Midland area tonight. The low should be near 70 with southerly winds being five to 10 mph.

Skies will become partly cloudy for Thursday with the chance of afternoon showers diminishing to 20 percent. The high should reach the upper 90s with winds continuing to be out of the south at five to 15 mph.

Tuesday's high of 99 was seven degrees below the record high of 106 set for that date in 1964. Today's low of 70 was 10 degrees above the record low of 60 set for this date in 1931.

STATE

Widely scattered thunderstorms are possible across most of Texas through tonight as hot weather continued statewide.

Scattered showers and thunderstorms were reported at dawn today along extreme western portions of the state, mainly in northwest sections of the Panhandle, western portions of the South Plains and in Southwest Texas. The activity was being triggered by a low pressure system.

At least one tornado was reported Tuesday as moist, unstable air and afternoon heating combined to produce scattered thunderstorms, including some described as heavy from North Central Texas into the Trans-Pecos.

An off-duty Department of Public Safety trooper reported a small tornado on the ground about two miles east of Brownwood near the Brown County community of Early, Keith Mitchell, DPS communications officer in Brownwood, said.

The twister report prompted the weather service to issue a tornado warning for Brown County as a severe thunderstorm moved across the area.

NATION

A cold front brought more rain and thunderstorms to the southern Plains and the Rockies today, after storms piled foot-deep hail in Wyoming and whipped up a tornado in South Dakota.

Showers and thunderstorms dampened parts of Minnesota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Colorado.

A thunderstorm early Tuesday evening pounded northeastern Wyoming with 2-inch hailstones. Snow plows cleared foot-deep hail from State Route 24 south of Hulett.

"I never have seen a storm like it and neither has my dad. It was different," said Don Mercer, a farmer whose winter wheat crop was damaged by the storm.

Stacy Dam 'prepped' for drainage tunnel

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

BALLINGER — Blasters this week were continuing their dynamiting though Permian limestone, readying to dig a drainage tunnel for the two-mile long earthen Stacy Dam.

"It's what the world sits on," said resident engineer John M. Arthur.

The quarter-mile tunnel, which Arthur said was "not unique at all," will run below the earthen mound — the dam — and will drain off underground water, including casual and artesian water, to prevent a failure in the dam. Arthur called the tunnel a "drainage gallery."

"Believe it or not," said Joe Pickle, secretary-treasurer of the Colorado River Municipal Water District (CRMWD), "that (underground) water tends to lift the structure and cause the dam to slip, and there she goes." The upstream side of the dam will be protected by 90,000 cubic yards of rip-rap. Rocks making up the rip-rap are to be about 24 inches in diameter.

The horseshoe-shaped tunnel, which will be 10 feet tall and eight feet wide, will be at the centerline of the dam. Tunneling, which is to begin next week, will be into the Permian limestone about 70 feet from the surface. The cutting of the tunnel with a tunneling machine is to take about three months.

"It's something new for us," Pickle said of the tunnel. "We're getting into the big league."

Neither the E.V. Spence Reservoir dam at Robert Lee nor the Lake J.B. Thomas dam near Snyder utilizes the tunnel concept because of different approaches to dam construction.

CRMWD, which is owner-operator

"...It's (the tunnel) something new for us. We're getting into the big league."

— Joe Pickle

on the project is Freese & Nichols of Fort Worth. Completion date, based on a 33-month timetable, is late 1989 or early 1990.

Just how long it will take for the 30-square-mile basin to fill up with water after the dam is completed is uncertain.

"I have referred all of those questions to God Almighty," said Pickle.

"Our response to that," noted Earnest Lillard, CRMWD engineer and project coordinator, "is how much is it going to rain?" Based on the 40-year average rainfall in the reservoir runoff area, the fill date would be in five years, Lillard said.

Ron Hayes, Brown & Root USA's dam project manager, said the project — now in its infancy — seems to be on schedule.

"You're either on schedule or you're not on schedule," Hayes quipped. "You can't hardly tell when you're only two months into the project."

Observed Pickle: "If they (Brown & Root) are going to make any money, they are going to have to finish on time. That's the name of the game."

The Stacy Reservoir, which will of the Stacy Dam and Reservoir project, has contracted with the Houston-based Brown & Root USA to build the dam and spillway for $30.7 million. Consulting engineering firm augment CRMWD's Lake Thomas and Spence Reservoir water supplies, will sell water to contract cities of Midland, San Angelo and Abilene and to CRMWD member cities of Big Spring, Odessa and Snyder.

Midland, San Angelo and Abilene each has agreed annually to buy 15,000 acre feet or 16.54 percent of the reservoir's annual "safe yield."

Cost of the project is about $68 million and includes dam and spillway construction; land purchases; relocation of roads, houses and cemeteries; land clearing; protection of archaeological finds, and safe habitats for the endangered Concho River snake. Cost of pipelines and pump stations will be additional costs.

John Taylor, CRMWD board president, said the board has been "tremendously impressed" with the work of the engineering firm, Freese & Nichols, and with the work of the dam contractor, Brown & Root USA Inc., an engineering-construction company which is an arm of the Houston-based Brown & Root Inc. Brown & Root, a subsidiary of the Dallas-based The Halliburton Co., has been building dams worldwide since the 1930s.

"So far, it has been as smooth as silk," Taylor said of the project. "Everybody is just working hand in glove. I'm tremendously impressed with what we've seen here today (Tuesday afternoon)."

The afternoon Taylor and others, including the press and broadcast media, toured the construction site was unusually cool and not "woolybugger" hot, as Hayes had described Monday's searing temperatures.

"I didn't know Pickle (who organized the tour) had enough stroke that he could get the overcast and shower," quipped Taylor.

Probe of deadly revolver may give insight into accident

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Tests on a 44-caliber Magnum revolver and its ammunition may help investigators determine why the gun fired unexpectedly at a shooting range Sunday, killing the 33-year-old wife of a Midland police officer.

"Hopefully, the tests will give us the answers to many questions," Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter said. "We're looking primarily at the ammunition, but also at the gun itself. We're not sure exactly what happened with the round that went off."

Colleen Rene O'Bryant, wife of police Sgt. Milton O'Bryant, 34, was killed when the gun suddenly fired at the West Texas Sportsman's Club. Moments earlier, Mrs. O'Bryant had fired what she thought were six rounds from the powerful handgun.

She then handed the weapon to her husband, and as he prepared to eject the shells, a delayed reaction occurred and the unfired sixth round fired, investigators said.

The woman was struck in the back of the head and killed instantly, police said.

The gun owned by O'Bryant, the spent cartridge that jacketed the fatal round, and other ammunition that was to be used were sent to a forensics lab in Dallas for tests, Painter said.

The tests may detect what caused the accident, the sheriff said.

O'Bryant, a five-year veteran of the department, is co-coordinator of Midland Crime Stoppers. He and his wife had gone to the range Sunday afternoon to practice shooting, according to the club's manager, Gene Love.

The death was ruled accidental by Justice of the Peace Keith Jobe.

However, Painter has launched a formal investigation into the shooting to comply with departmental policy

Family's ferrets cast as outlaws

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Four months ago, Suzanne and Walter Nikolsky moved to Midland with their family — Igor, Catty, Tanya and Daphine — four ferrets.

But now the family may have to be broken up because the Nikolskys were unaware of a city ordinance outlawing the animals.

"They are our kids," said the 46-year-old Belgium native, Ms. Nikolsky, who was "shattered" by the news that she would have to get rid of the animals or move outside of city limits by Sept. 10.

Animal Control Director Coy Willis said the ordinance banning wild animals — ranging from snakes, bobcats to ferrets — was passed in October 1984 because people were abandoning the pets on city streets.

About 20 ferrets a year were picked up off the streets before the ordinance was enacted, he said.

Also the animals have been involved in three bite cases during the past year in Midland, Willis said.

Because the small weasel-like animals are in the skunk family they can carry rabies, and no rabies vaccine has yet been approved for ferrets, said Greg Adkins of the Shannon Animal Hospital.

Ms. Nikolsky's one neutered male and three spaded females were vaccinated against rabies with a feline vaccine in Casper, Wyo., she said.

But Adkins predicted Ms. Nikolsky might have a hard time vaccinating her pets again in Texas. He explained the state only allows vets to give shots to animals with vaccines "labeled" for each species.

Ms. Nikolsky is asking the City Council to reconsider the inclusion of ferrets in their wild animal ordinance and if they choose not to change it, grant her a special permit to keep the pets.

Mayor Carroll Thomas said Tuesday the council will consider Ms. Nikolsky's request at the next City Council meeting Aug. 25.

Ms. Nikolsky contends that ferrets are popular pets which should be licensed by officials concerned about controlling them — not lumped in with other wild animals and banned.

"The ferret is here to stay. I had them for six years and when these are gone I'll get others," she insisted.

Officials acknowledge Ms. Nikolsky is probably a good ferret caretaker.

"I'm sure she's a very good owner. But the next person might tell me that and not be. So down the line you're not going to have everybody exactly adhering to the law," Willis said.

Before her husband — a processing geophysicist — was transferred to Midland from Casper, Wyo., Ms. Nikolsky said she called the Texas Department of Agriculture and was told ferrets were allowed in the state.

However, Willis explained that while the state allows the animals within its borders, several cities have banned the ferret.

The Nikolskys said they weren't aware there was a problem until July 21 when a neighbor — not realizing the animals were banned — "inadvertently" told an animal control officer about the ferrets.

"Suddenly I become a criminal," said Ms. Nikolsky relating how the animal control employee first told her she would be able to get a license and then called back with the bad news.

She said she has been searching for a house to rent outside of the city, but has been unsuccessful in finding a new home for her family which along with the ferrets includes a poodle and cat.

And while Ms. Nikolsky said she is attracted to ferrets because of their intelligence and affectionate nature, she admits the animals are not pets for everyone — particularly children who seem to make up most of the ferret bite victims.

If the council decides to stick with their wild animal ordinance, the Nikolskys would not be "outlaws" in Odessa, animal control officials there said.

Please see FERRETS, Page 2B

Jerry Mennenga/Reporter-Telegram

Unless the City Council decides to revise their wild animal ordinance or grant a special permit, Suzanne Nikolsky has until Sept. 10 to get rid of her four ferrets or move out of Midland's city limits.

Occupancy tax for Odessa hotels, motels could go up

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The cost of a hotel or motel room in Odessa could increase by as much as 3 percent Oct. 1 as a result of an ordinance considered for the first time by city council members Tuesday.

The proposed increase in the Hotel-Motel Occupancy Tax rate, from 4 percent to 7 percent, would generate an estimated additional $215,000 per year, increasing total annual revenue to about $515,000 if approved by the Odessa City Council when it meets in regular session Aug. 25.

However, a group of Odessa area hotel-motel operators are expected to appear before the council to air their opposition to the proposed 75 percent increase in the occupancy tax.

According to Greater Odessa Chamber of Commerce officials, the increase will simply bring the city's rate in line with that of other Texas metropolitan areas.

The revenue generated by the tax is used to fund activities of the chamber's Convention and Visitors Bureau and the Odessa Cultural Council.

One percent of the tax is allocated to the Odessa Cultural Council for promotion of the arts and historical preservation that directly enhances tourism activity. In the 1986-87 fiscal year the council received $65,000.

Life, death of Elvis hard-felt, influential piece of America

Ott

Has it really been 10 years?

Elvis Presley has been dead a decade? My, how time flies.

Like most people, I suppose, I remember exactly where I was when I first heard the news of his death — in my car, a yellow Monte Carlo, somewhere near Jackson, Miss. I was on my way back to Texas following a two-week visit with in-laws in Gadsden, Ala.

I was married at the time.

My ex-wife and I were having a heated argument, a hobby of ours, on a terribly impoctant subject — whether or not to replace the kitchen wallpaper in our house — when a news bulletin came on the car radio.

It said, "The king is dead."

Then there was silence.

I turned to my ex-wife, who was in the process of making a passionate plea for the new wallpaper, and said to her, "I wonder which king died."

She seemed irritated by my inquiry and said, "Oh, probably some looney-tune freak who rides a camel and considers a bedsheet proper attire."

I giggled. Despite our differences, she could always make me laugh.

The radio report resumed. Elvis Presley was dead at the age of 42. The radio announcer, who seemed choked with emotion, supplied the early details. They were sketchy at best.

Still, the news was shocking. Elvis Presley dead. It didn't seem right. But the radio report continued. More facts were becoming available.

Then the DJ came on the air and said for the next two hours only Elvis Presley songs would be played. The first one was "Blue Suede Shoes."

Elvis Presley was never one of my favorites. I was a little too young to be personally affected by his sudden arrival on America's consciousness, though I do have a vague recollection of the controversy created by his appearance on the Ed Sullivan show.

He seemed a little weird to me.

I never liked greasy-looking hair and ducktails. Like I said, I was a little too young to be affacted.

But when someone famous dies, it always leaves an impression. Some hit harder than others, of course, but that's just human nature.

John Lennon's death, for example, was a crushing blow to me. That's because the Beatles had a major influence on my life. Best I can tell, Elvis Presley did not.

Elvis influenced many other people, however. Lewis Grizzard, a newspaper columnist, wrote a book not too long ago and called it, "Elvis is dead and I don't feel so good myself."

A person has to have been a pretty major part of your life for you to name a book after him. Elvis was that to a lot of people.

There are some exceptions, but most of the people heavily influenced by Elvis Presley are probably on the other side of 40 by now. A high percentage of them are women.

I asked some of those people what Elvis meant to them. Here are three of their answers:

— "You've got to remember what it was like in America at that time. It was the '50s. Ike was president. It was a quiet and conservative period in our country's history. Then all of sudden here comes Elvis singing rock and roll and shaking his thing. Our parents didn't know what to think. But we loved him. He became our hero."

— "Elvis' influence is still being felt today. People talk about Bob Dylan and the Beatles changing the course of history. But, really, Elvis made it possible for them to be accepted. He didn't sing about politics, but he blazed a trail that made it easier for others to follow. Everybody who ever sang a rock song owes a little something to Elvis."

— "Elvis represented freedom. It was kind of like the James Dean craze. He dared to be different. The girls really loved him. I remember when he first burst on the scene, I fixed my hair just like his. My dad hit the ceiling. He made me go to the barber shop and get a flat top right then and there. We didn't speak to each other for days. We laugh about it now, but it was serious business back then. Of course, I have a son now and he wears a spike haircut. I think he looks dumb as hell, but he loves it. What can I say? We all go through those phases. It's all part of growing up."

Electronic monitoring of probationers both 'praised, criticized'

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Attorney General Jim Mattox' official approval of electronic monitoring of probationers won praise Tuesday from probation officials but drew harsh criticism from the Texas Civil Liberties Union.

In a letter to the Texas Adult Probation Commission released Tuesday, Mattox said electronic devices that ensure probationers stick to their curfews "could be effective rehabilitative tools for probationers and very important to law enforcement." The attorney general said the high-tech instruments pass constitutional muster relating to privacy rights and cruel and unusual punishment.

"It's a management tool that expands the probation officers' supervision techniques," said Debbie Bartles, information officer for the Adult Probation Commission. The devices, she said, "free up some of the people time involved" in ensuring that probationers abide by the conditions of their sentences.

Probation departments in Jefferson and Harris counties have been using the devices — most of which use an electronic device worn by the probationer and connected through the phone lines to department offices — on an experimental basis. Bartles said other counties have been "waiting for the blessing" from Mattox.

"I haven't seen any reason not to continue the program," said Judge Leonard Giblin of the 252nd District Court in Jefferson County. "It gives you a real good idea of what these people are doing when you can't see what they're doing."

Jim Harrington, legal director for the Texas Civil Liberties Union, complained that Mattox's OK will deprive some probationers of their constitutional right to privacy. "Sounds like big Jim has become Big Brother," Harrington said.

In his opinion, Mattox wrote that probationers "are subject to limitations of their constitutional rights" because of their "special status." Those restrictions, he said "can be justified only to the extent actually required by the legitimate demands of the probation process and necessary for the probationer's reformation and rehabilitation."

Harrington said Mattox's decision does not adequately balance those rights and could lead to further computerized intrusions. "It's wrong for the state to get into a position of being able to keep track of people through these mechanisms," he said.

DEATHS

Peter B. Tyson

Peter B. Tyson, of Midland, who would have been 68 today, died Tuesday at a local hospital.

Graveside services will be 11 a.m. Thursday in Fairview Cemetery with the Rev. Bob Porterfield, pastor of Kentucky Street Baptist Church, officiating. Ellis Funeral Home is handling the arrangements.

Tyson was born Aug. 12, 1919, in Tiaban, N.M., spending his early life in Tyler. He attended the Oklahoma Military Academy and the University of Texas. During World War II, he served in the Army and was a captain in the Cavalry stationed in Italy. Following his discharge, he returned to the University of Texas and graduated. He moved to Midland and became an independent landman. Throughout the next few years, he also lived in Montana and Denver, Colo., returning to Midland in 1958. At that time, he became employed with Superior Oil Co., where he worked until his retirement.

Survivors include his wife, Mary Tyson of Midland; one sister, Lucy Lawson of Midland; one nephew; and four great-nieces and nephews.

The family requests memorials be directed to Hospice of Midland, P.O. Box 2621, 79702.

Virginia E. Southard

LAMESA — Virginia Evelyn Southard, 80, of Hobbs, N.M., died Monday at a Hobbs hospital after a lengthy illness.

Funeral services will be 10 a.m. Thursday in the Branon Funeral Home Chapel in Lamesa, with the Rev. Truman Hayes and the Rev. Kalith Brown, both of the Church of Christ in Welch. Burial will be in Lamesa Memorial Park.

Mrs. Southard was born July 2, 1907, in Montague. She was a homemaker and a member of the Church of Christ.

Survivors include three sons, Luther Southard of Kemp, Vernon Southard of Sunray, and J.M. Southard of Irving; five daughters, Juanita Nickelson of Mabank, Marian Dallas of Andrews, Bertha Boggan of Lamesa, Dorothy Howell of Spokane, Wash., and Essie Ragsdale of Hobbs, N.M.; 16 grandchildren; and 13 great-grandchildren.

Carl Lee Cakl

ODESSA — Services for Carl Lee Cakl, 49, of Odessa, will be 3 p.m. Thursday at the St. Elizabeth Ann Seton Catholic Church.

Father James Bridges will officiate. Burial will follow in Sunset Memorial Gardens.

Cakl died Monday at an Odessa hospital.

He was born April 8, 1938, in Wagner, S.D.

He married Jania Faye Ross Nov. 20, 1970, in Odessa. He was a maintenance supervisor for Permian Distributing Co. and a Catholic.

He is survived by his wife Jania Cakl of Odessa; two sons, Joseph Cakl and Ross Cakl, both of Odessa; one daughter, Susan Cakl of Odessa; his mother Marie Cakl, of Midland, two brothers Joe Cakl and Edward J. Cakl, both of Midland and one sister Mary Cakl, of Midland.

Republican judges seek FBI nominee's position

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Four Republican district judges — and possibly a fifth — elected on a reform ticket want to succeed U.S. District Judge William Sessions if he receives Senate confirmation as FBI director.

Meanwhile, Sessions is planning a trip to Washington to speak with FBI officials, but first he'll take off next week for a vacation.

"There are no phones there," a smiling Sessions said Tuesday in declining to reveal his vacation destination.

The four judges who said they have applied are Susan Reed, David Berchelmann Jr., John Cornyn and Tom Rickhoff.

U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, has sent the judges applications, which ask 26 questions about their personal background and professional experience in civil and criminal matters, Gramm spokesman Larry Neal said.

At least one other Republican district judge, David Peeples, was unavailable for comment because he was on vacation. But the San Antonio Light reported today that Peeples filled out an application before leaving.

Sessions was nominated by President Reagan to succeed William Webster as FBI director last month. Webster has been named CIA dicector.

Sessions said his meetings with FBI officials in Washington should help to prepare him for his Senate confirmation hearings scheduled to begin Sept. 9.

"We'll talk about the operation of the bureau," he said.

Sessions' departure from the bench could cause problems for other federal judges in San Antonio and for U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton III, who is in line to replace him as chief judge of the Western District of Texas.

"The problem is that everybody had a full load before he (Sessions) leaves,' Bunton said. "But we'll handle it."

Bunton said Sessions' criminal caseload already has been reassigned to District Judges H.F. "Hippo" Garcia and Ed Prado.

Sessions' civil cases have not been reassigned, but if the 5th Circuit Court of Appeals approves a request to allow Sessions' law clerks to remain during the vacancy period, they would monitor those cases and keep other judges informed of deadlines.

No one is sure how long it would take to fill the vacancy, but Neal said 20 attorneys already have applied for the opening. He wouldn't release names of the applicants.

"The senator hopes to be ready with a specific recommendation (to the president) by early fall," Neal said.

Bentsen discovers it's better to give back and receive

New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — They say you can't unscramble an egg. But Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas seems to have come fairly close,

He has managed to open up, and close down, a special club for campaign contributors, to return their money and then get much of it back again.

Bentsen disbanded his $10,000-a-member breakfast club last February, calling it "a doozy" of a mistake. He had been roundly criticized for offering to meet monthly over breakfast with lobbyists and directors of political action committees that gave the maximum contributions to his 1988 re-election campaign.

"I really blew it," Bentsen, a Democrat who is chairman of the influential Senate Finance Committee, said at the time. He then refunded the $92,500 collected by his club, officially named the "Chairman's Council" but dubbed "the Eggs McBentsen show" by some.

Even without the eggs, though, cash is flowing back into the senator's campaign coffers.

In recent months the same lobbyists and political action committees that got refunds from Bentsen have turned around and made out new checks directly to the senator's re-election campaign.

Of the $92,500 refunded, $54,000 has been returned to Bentsen by the original contributors. And the senator's aides hope to recover the full amount.

"I would expect that all of the same people will contribute again, but not through the Chairman's Council," said Jack R. DeVore Jr., a spokesman for Bentsen. "They will contribute to Senator Bentsen's re-election campaign."

Those who received refunds have not been approached again by the Bentsen re-election campaign, but DeVore left open that possibility. "There's no reason not to solicit these people," he said.

Asked why Bentsen refunded the donations, only to accept money again from the same contributors, DeVore said: "I'm not sure of that myself. It was purely a question at that time of appearance."

In the first six months of this year he collected $3.7 million in contributions, including $1.1 million from political action committees, far more than any of the other 32 senators facing re-election in 1988. Bentsen has collected more cash this year than his colleagues who sponsored similar exclusive clubs and did not dissolve them.

Bentsen has been particularly successful at raising funds from a range of political action committees, particularly those sponsored by corporations, because of his position on the Senate Finance Committee. Several lobbyists said they considered Bentsen one of the most powerful senators because of his committee post. He is also considered responsive to the needs of business on tax, trade and other issues.

In addition, Bentsen is a senior member of the panels on commerce, taxation and intelligence. He became known for his skill at soliciting contributions in the 1984 elections, when he was head of the campaign committee for Democratic senators.

"We decided long before there were periodic breakfasts that we were going to contribute the legal maximum to Senator Bentsen," said Richard F. Goodstein, Washington lobbyist for Browning-Ferris Industries, which is based in Houston.

"And," he said of the breakfasts thesmelves, "the scrambled eggs weren't anything out of the ordinary, believe me."

A political action committee may give a candidate $5,000 in a primary and $5,000 in a general election. The Browning-Ferris PAC had already given Bentsen $2,000 when the breakfast club was formed. Then, in early February, the PAC gave him $8,000.

One month later Bentsen refunded the $8,000. But by April the PAC wrote out to the re-election campaign new checks totaling $8,000.

The Browning-Ferris PAC was not alone. So far, seven lobbyists and eight political action committees have contributed again to the Bentsen campaign after receiving refunds from the breakfast club.

"He didn't handle the breakfast club right, but I happen to like Bentsen personally," said Tom Nemet, chairman of the Auto Dealers and Drivers for Free Trade PAC on Long Island. "On our issue he's no good. But when somebody's on a Finance Committee, it is always important that all doors are open."

DPS seeks applicants for state trooper posts

From Staff Reports

The Texas Department of Public Safety is accepting applications for the position of state trooper for the DPS Academy that starts in Jan. 1988. Applicants must be 20 to 35 years old.

Applicants must also have 60 semester hours of college credit, or two years of military service with an honorable discharge, or two years of commissioned law enforcement experience.

Qualified applicants who are accepted and complete an 18-week training academy for recruits will be assigned to the Highway Patrol, Drivers' License Service, License and Weight Service, or Vehicle Inspection Service.

Recruits can be assigned to any location in Texas, but consideration is given to recruits' choice of a duty station.

Once a new employee has served in DPS, advancement is possible to Trooper II, Trooper III, Sergeant, Lieutenant, or Captain. Advancement is also possible to the Safety Education Service, Aircraft Operations, Criminal Intelligence Service, Narcotics Investigators, Motor Vehicle Theft Service, and the Texas Rangers.

Troopers also are eligible, if qualified, to be considered for positions in DPS administration. Promotions are based on competitive examinations and oral interview boards.

The monthly salary of DPS employees is set by the state Legislature. Recruits are paid during training. After graduation from the DPS Academy, the salary will be increased. Another salary boost is possible after six months' service, and again after a year of service.

For more information, Trooper Tony Matos with the Midland DPS office should be contacted at 697-2211.

Three people die, two injured in house fire

DALLAS (AP) — A fire caused by the overheated engine in an evaporative cooler left three people dead and two others injured when burglar bars trapped them inside a burning house.

The south Dallas blaze occurred a day after four children died and two other people were injured in an apartment fire in suburban Arlington, the deadliest such incident in that city's history. It also was the second in Dallas in less than a week when burglar bars impeded rescue efforts during a fire.

Neighbors were spraying water hoses on the blaze when firefighters arrived shortly after 5 a.m. Tuesday, but burglar bars on the front and rear doors hindered the victims' escape, fire department spokeswoman J.J. Howe said.

Lillian Chambers, 64, died at the scene, and her niece, 18-year-old Lisette Williams, who alerted the family to the fire, died later in Parkland Hospital.

Ms. Chamber's mother, Jesse Castile, 86, also died at Parkland. She suffered third-degree burns over 93 percent of her body, said hospital spokeswoman Catherine Ellis.

Two other victims at Parkland were Clyde Castile, 48, in serious condition, and Ruth Williams, 62, in fair condition, Ms. Ellis said.

The family was asleep when the fire broke out in the living room where Lisette Williams was sleeping. She woke her mother, Ruth, who apparently ran with a key to unlock the burglar bars at the front door, Ms. Howe said.

But Ruth Williams droped the key in the chaos, so she ordered the family to follow her to a window at the rear of the house. She broke the window, cutting her hand, and leaped to the ground, followed by a nephew, Glenn Johnson, 42. But other family members were unable to escape.

A neighbor, Charles Wiggins, said he and others pulled at the burglar bars to try to loosen them, but flames and popping electrical wiring hampered their efforts.

Police identify suspect in auto vandalizing spree

From Staff Reports

Midland police are trying to find out who vandalized at least 20 vehicles within a two-block area early this morning, according to reports.

Police have identified a suspect in the spree, in which the tires of the vehicles were slashed within a two-block area of 3000 West Kansas Avenue.

Police said no estimate of the damage to the vehicles was available.

The suspect in the vandalism was described as a white man, five feet eight inches tall, with blonde hair, wearing dark clothing.

Police Roundup

In other reports, an AM-FM cassette stereo valued at $300 was reported stolen from a vehicle parked in the 1200 block of East Hamby Avenue. The burglary occurred between 10:30 p.m. Monday and 6 a.m. Tuesday, police said. Damage to the vehicle was estimated at $700, according to reports.

A microwave oven valued at $500 was reported stolen from a residence in the 1400 block of West Francis Avenue, reports said. The burglary occurred between Sunday and Tuesday, police said.

FERRETS

Odessa Animal Control Supervisor Freddy Belis said ferrets are allowed with a $25 permit and if the owners can prove the animals will be secured in a cage.

However, like Ms. Nikolsky, Belis suspects many Odessans are unaware of the ferrets special status because only one permit has been issued.

The council's decision will be difficult, Thomas said.

"Invariably when you draw a line, it's tough," he said.

"When we elect to come together and live in a community, you have to have some guidelines of conduct."

REVOLVER

"It has been ruled accidental, but now we have to try and piece together whatever we can," Painter said. "It is just our policy to pursue each and every death like this that is unattended by a physician."

Painter said he did not know how long the investigation would take.

Police Chief Richard Czech said he did not order an internal investigation because "there was no need."

If the shooting had occurred within the city limits, an investigation would have been necessary, Czech said.

Results of the sheriff's department investigation will be reviewed by investigators and District Attorney Al Schorre and could be referred to a grand jury for review, Schorre said.

"There is no indication at this point that it was anything other than accidental," Schorre said.

"If the (investigating) officers feel there is nothing to gain by going to grand jury, we won't pursue it," he said.

Unlike Sunday's incident, shootings involving on-duty lawmen are automatically referred to a grand jury for review, Schorre said.

O'Bryant was interviewed at the scene by officers, and will be interviewed again for purposes of the investigation, Painter said.

"It will be better to interview him after the trauma has somewhat passed," he said. "The investigation has not been completed, and we are going to keep working on it."

Atheists to picket pope

AUSTIN (AP) — Pope John Paul II will be the target of demonstrations by atheists at some of his American stops next month, says Madalyn Murray O'Hair.

"If you don't say anything, he thinks you're agreeing with him. So there must be dissent shown. Someone must show a dissent, otherwise we're in agreement with him," Ms. O'Hair said in an interview Tuesday.

Ms. O'Hair, a founder and president emeritus of the Society of Separationists Inc., played a key role in the early 1960s lawsuits that led to banning mandatory prayer and Bible reading in public schools.

She said Tuesday that the American Atheists organization, which is affiliated with the society, intends to demonstrate during the upcoming papal visits to Miami, New Orleans, San Antonio, Detroit, Phoenix,, Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Likening the pope's message to that of television evangelists Jim and Tammy Bakker, Ms. O'Hair said she didn't believe the planned ceremonies were proper public events.

"That's worse than giving this kind of reception to Jim and Tammy. Would we do that (preparations) in San Antonio just for them? Or in Miami? No, we would not," Ms. O'Hair said.

"I wouldn't waste my time on that. But I'm wasting my time on this because there are several things," she said.

TAX

The Convention and Visitor's Bureau last year was allocated nearly $345,000. Chamber officials this year, however, have asked for an increase of $70,000, which they say would be used to fund a full-time sales force to solicit additional convention business for Odessa.

Estimates indicate each visitor to a convention held in the city spends an average of $75 each. Based on the number of conventions held in the city during the current fiscal year, chamber officials estimate about $4.9 million were spent in the city.

Most of the Odessa council members have indicated they favor the occupancy tax rate increase.

Midland's occupancy tax rate last year was 6 percent. It, too, is expected to be increased to 7 percent for the coming fiscal year.

TRC to enforce federal hazardous materials standards for railroads

By DAVID PLESA
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Railroad Commission has adopted new regulations that will allow the agency to enforce federal hazardous materials standards for railroads.

The new rules are a response to an increasing number of dangerous incidents involving hazardous materials on the state's rail system, Commissioner John Sharp said.

"More carloads of hazardous materials roll over Texas rails each year than in any other state," Sharp said. "Our action today will step up the pace of safety inspections in Texas and help stem the tide of rail incidents involving hazardous materials."

Under the new regulations, state inspectors will focus mainly on the train yard and whether railway companies correctly apply federal safety standards when handling hazardous materials, said agency spokesman Brian Schaible.

State inspectors will check for proper loading, handling and storage and whether train cars carrying hazardous materials are properly marked to identify their cargo, Schaible said.

Violators of the new rules could face a maximum fine of $5,000, he said, which the commission would seek through the attorney general's office.

Another division in the commission handles the more severe accidents, such as derailments involving hazardous materials, he said.

Commission statistics show 146 rail incidents involving hazardous materials occurred in Texas in 1986. About 79 percent of the 13,000 miles of railway track in the state carries hazardous materials each year, the statistics said.

"Last year, we had more rail incidents involving hazardous materials than in any other state, some 90 percent more than the number two state of Illinois," Sharp said.

But, he said, adding state inspectors to help enforce federal safety regulations will help improve the state's accident record.

Currently, four federal inspectors have the onerous duty of trying to enforce hazardous material regulations in Texas and in three other states, New Mexico, Louisiana and Oklahoma, Schaible said. Plus, he said, the officials spend most of their time inspecting shippers of hazardous materials and companies that manufacture containers.

"They are spread too thin," he said. "We can fill the gap."

Schaible said state budget restraints will prevent the commission from initially assigning more than one inspector to the new program. The commission hopes to add more inspectors later, he said.

Kennedy exhibit elevator tower OK'd

DALLAS (AP) — Construction of a controversial 60-foot elevator tower to take visitors to a proposed exhibition on President John F. Kennedy's assasination in the former Texas School Book Depository Building has been approved by the Dallas Landmark Commission.

But the project is opposed by the city of Dallas planning staff and an advisory group to the commission, both of which object to its size and the precedent it might set in the West End Historic District.

Lee Harvey Oswald allegedly shot Kennedy on Nov. 22, 1963, from a sixth-floor window in the building as the president passed below in a motorcade.

"We've spent 10 years on this project," said Lindalyn Adams, president of the Dallas County Historical Foundation, which organized the project.

"It has the unanimous approval of the Texas Historical Foundation and has been complimented by the National Park Service, but we are being stymied by our local groups," she said Tuesday after the commission approved the tower concept.

James Hendricks, the architect who designed the tower with its connecting skybridge and entrance pavilion at the base, called it " a subtle, sensitive solution."

"We're in complete compatibility with what's in the West End," he said.

A report by the West End Task Force, the commission advisory group, called the tower's scale monumental and inappropiate for the area. The report said that if tower were built, "...additional requests would be received for similar elements which would dramatically change the architectural characteristic of the historic district."

The exterior elevator tower concept was approved in 1983 with a comment from the then-Landmark Committee that interior elevators were preferabled and should considered seriously.

But Dallas County officials, who bought the building in 1977 and renovated it as an county office annex, oppose interior elevators as a potential disruption of county business.

"The principal historic significance of this building is on the inside, not the outside," County Judge Lee Jackson said Tuesday.

Atheists claim they're excluded from jury duty

AUSTIN (AP) — Atheists have filed suit in U.S. District Court, alleging that they have systematically been excluded from serving on juries in Texas over the past decade.

Representatives of the Society of Separationists, Inc., which operates as American Atheists, Inc., said they have been dismissed as prospective jurors because of their refusal to take "so help me God" oaths.

The atheists' suit alleges that the oaths are unconstitutional.

The suit, which was filed Tuesday, challenges the card used to summon prospective jurors because it requires a person to state his or her religious affiliation or preference.

It also contends the "God" oath of office for Texas judges violates the federal and state constitutions.

Representatives of American Atheists told a news conference that a motion would be filed later to extend the legal challenge to federal judicial oaths.

Madalyn O'Hair, founder and president emeritus of the Society of Separationists, said the 10-year period covers personal experiences. She said she had been summoned six times for possible jury service and had been dismissed each time.

Prison population still up

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — The state prison system will remain closed today because of a higher than allowable inmate population, officials said.

As of early Tuesday, the population of the statewide system stood at 38,838, or 95.86 percent of capacity, according to Texas Department of Corrections spokeswoman Linda McKenzie.

The count left the prison system 387 inmates above the 95 percent population limit set by the state, Mrs. McKenzie said.

On Tuesday, 156 inmates were released, but the releases were not believed to be sufficient in number to bring the count below 95 percent before the next prisoner count was taken, she said.

The 26-unit prison has been closed since Thursday because of swollen inmate counts, she said.

Poor not entitled to care?

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — A Republican congressman from North Texas says that not all U.S. residents are entitled to equal health care.

"The least among us is not entitled to the same medical treatment as the richest person in America," U.S. Rep. Beau Boulter, R-Wichita Falls, said a town hall meeting here Tuesday.

"I do not want to get socialized medicine because then nobody will get excellent medical treatment," he said.

Boulter said everyone is entitled to good medical service, but hospitals must get paid.

"Fewer and fewer working people are supporting more and more non-working people," Boulter said. "While we should provide good health care to everybody, we are not going to be able to provide the same type of health service for everybody."

Gatherings part of program to help neighbors, police fight crime

Associated Press

McGruff the crime dog made appearances around Corpus Christi with a police escort, while block parties and a loud mass rally were held in Bryan-College Station to mark National Night Out in Texas.

The Texas gatherings were part of a nationwide program intended to help neighbors get to know each other and discuss ways to help police fight crime.

The National Town Watch Association, which organized the event Tuesday night, said residents in 5,500 communities nationwide were expected to sit in front of their houses, meet neighbors and turn on outside lights to deter criminals.

After a parade during which children carried National Night Out banners in Corpus Christi, several dozen people gathered at a barbecue where McGruff entertained children.

The anti-crime dog then travelled with a police escort to the city's Pebble Park development, where about 462 homes had been contacted to participate, said Janet Scott, secretary of the Pebble Park Neighborhood Association.

"It's a newly developed park and a newly developed organization," said Mrs. Scott. "We're just trying to get people out to get to know each other."

Thousands of Brazos County residents gathered for the evening's highlight: a solid minute of noise that was broadcast live over all seven of the community's radio stations and transmitted by ham radio operators to Matt Peskin, national coordinator of Night Out, in Philadelphia.

"We had a real good time," said Officer Tony Taylor, neighborhood watch program coordinator for the Bryan Police Department.

"We had somewhere between 1,500 and 2,000 people at our rally site on the Texas A&M campus," he said. "They formed a chain of people that stretched about a mile long."

Free ice cream bars were passed out to the crowd, and additional ice cream bar sticks were combined to form what officials called the world's longest ice cream stick.

"We laid 'em end to end, and it stretched over a mile long," Taylor said.

After the mass rally, city council members and police officials toured neighhood and block parties across the adjacent cities of Bryan and College Station. Businesses blocked off their parking lots for parties and gave away ice cream.

"The one thing that's been accomplished is that this is a joint program of all four police departments — Bryan, College Station, Texas A$M, Brazos County Sheriff's Department," Taylor said. "That's never been done before."

Plane crash in Munich claims seventh victim

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) — A seventh person died of injuries from an airplane crash that destroyed a McDonald's restaurant and a city bus, police said today.

Investigators said it could take weeks to determine the cause of Tuesday's crash because the light airplane did not carry a flight recorder.

"We can't determine the airspeed of the plane," said Peter Schlegel, a spokesman for the central Federal Aviation Accident Investigation Office in Braunschweig.

"We won't know quickly whether the engines were running or not. They will probably have to be disassembled," he said.

Munich police said in a statement that a young man, whose identity was not released, died of severe injuries early this morning in Murnau hospital in southern Bavaria.

The victim apparently was walking near the McDonald's in a busy neighborhood about one mile from Munich's Riem airport when the plane smashed into the restaurant's roof. Debris then shattered the bus.

Both the restaurant and bus were engulfed in flames and destroyed.

The other dead were three people on board the plane, a bicyclist and two people in the McDonald's parking lot. Police spokesman Guenter Scholz said 13 people were injured, including 10 riding the bus.

Police said some of the injured were in very critical condition.

A McDonald's spokeswoman, Karen Zettier, said all 30 people inside the restaurant, including 12 employees, got out safely.

Initial reports on the type of plane, identity of the pilot and point of origin of the flight were contradictory.

Tuesday, Munich police spokesman Richard Scherer said the plane was a Piper Cherokee. However, Schlegel said today a check of the plane's registration showed it was a twin-engine Piper Cheyenne. Munich police spokesman Wolfgang Prestele said an examination of the wreckage confirmed this.

First reports also said the plane was flown by a student pilot practicing takeoffs and landings.

But a spokesman for the aviation security office in southern Bavaria, Klaus-Peter Schmitt, said the pilot was a professional flyer working for the Lech Air company based in Landsberg, and that he had flown for various aviation companies for many years.

WORLD in brief

Filipino high court rules for Enrile

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The Supreme Court today ordered election officials to proclaim opposition leader Juan Ponce Enrile the winner of a contested Senate seat.

Enrile will be only the second opposition member in the 24-seat Senate. He said he was "happy about this turn of events," and called the court ruling a victory for "the entire system under which we live."

President Corazon Aquino, meanwhile, dismissed speculation she would order detentions without charge to curb nationwide violence.

In the latest violent incident, communist rebels killed a militiaman, his 9-year-old daughter and 5-year-old son in an attack today on their home in Batangas province, 60 miles south of Manila. The militiaman was a member of a civilian group that receives weapons from the military to defend villages against rebels.

The Commission on Elections proclaimed winners in 23 Senate races after May 11 elections, but left the last seat vacant pending court challenges by Enrile and Augusto Sanchez, a former labor minister under Mrs. Aquino.

Immigration discussed

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The United States' new immigration law was aimed less at controlling the U.S. borders than at giving the U.S. government more control over Mexican workers, a California professor told a conference on the law's impact on Mexican-Americans.

Professor Bert Corona, who also is director of the National Committee for a Fair Reform of the Immigration Law, said the law was unlikely to halt the flow over the border of Mexican workers, whom he said had contributed to virtually every aspect of U.S. development.

Corona, of the Chicano studies department at California State University at Los Angeles, spoke Monday night at the first session of a conference called "Principal Demographic, Social, Political and Cultural Aspects of the Mexican-U.S. Community."

Mexican and U.S. sociologists and immigration experts were taking part in the conference, sponsored by the Mexican Interior Department.

Corona noted that some U.S. lawmakers have characterized the immigration law as anti-Mexican and a threat to the unity of families. Immigrants in the United States were regarded as "colonists" in the 18th century and as "newcomers" in the 19th, but Mexicans are called "illegals," he said.

Haiti boycott continues

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Buses carrying students to final exams ran nearly empty for a second day as young people boycotted the tests to protest the military-dominated government.

Most businesses joined a general strike to support the student boycott, which began Monday and was to last through the exam period, which ends Thursday.

The show of support for students shut down the capital's businesses Tuesday. Public transportation was halted when bus drivers went on strike to protest a government increase in gasoline prices.

Students who miss this week's testing must wait until next year to take the graduation exams, according to the Education Ministry. The exams determine college eligibility, but few Haitian students can afford to pay private university fees and there are no state-run colleges.

Heavily armed soldiers were posted in front of schools and several truckloads of soldiers could be seen patrolling downtown and suburban streets.

Mafia boss' wife killed

CATANIA, Sicily (AP) — The wife of a reputed Mafia boss was shot dead in front of her house in what may be the first instance of the Sicilian Mafia deliberately killing a woman, police said.

Police said Lucia Nastasi, 55, was sitting with her family early Tuesday when three men jumped from a car and gunned her down.

The woman's husband, Domenico Alleruzzo, has been in jail since February on charges of Mafia association. Police said he is believed to be head of a Mafia clan operating near Mount Etna.

The clan has been locked in a rivalry with another family in which about 50 people have been killed, police said.

Injured list mounts as Cowboys saddle up

By JERRY MAGEE
Copley News Service

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. — Anyone else might kick and scream and beat despairingly upon the ground. Tom Landry merely smiles — he does smile, except on Sundays — and says, "I have a lot of patience."

That, and a new three-year contract. Good thing. The first month of his 28th year as coach of the Dallas Cowboys hasn't been a whole lot of fun for Landry.

"Our problem," he said Tuesday, "is our injuries are just about as long as your arm."

— Item: Within a week, the Cowboys had seven receivers hurt. Four are out for extended periods, among them Mike Sherrard, who has been lost for the season with a broken right leg.

— Item: First-round draft selection Danny Noonan, a 282-pound defensive lineman from Nebraska, is unsigned and has missed 24 practice days. Because the Cowboys' defensive schemes are complex, Landry now doesn't anticipate that Noonan can be useful until midseason, at the earliest.

— Item: When Karl Powe, a second-year receiver, went down with a shoulder wound, one of the trainers pulled a hamstring rushing to his aid.

— Item: Tuesday, Brian Baldinger, a first-team guard filling in at center, suffered an injury to his left knee of undetermined severity. At center, Baldinger was replacing Tom Rafferty, idled with an injury to his right ankle.

— Item: At 35, quarterback Danny White is having to learn how to throw without snapping his wrist. His right wrist was broken last Nov. 2 against the Giants. The break has healed, but when the operation was performed, it wasn't detected that White also had suffered ligament damage in his wrist.

SEVERED LIGAMENTS require immediate attention, or they wither. White's impaired ligament has withered.

— Item: Herschel Walker won't be available until the Cowboys' final preseason game because of strained ligaments in his right knee. Dallas' other redoubtable running back, Tony Dorsett, had arthroscopic surgery on both knees during the offseason, and there are questions concerning how fit he will be.

"The kind of injuries we're getting are hard to understand, because they're all happening with nothing happening," Landry said. "We lost three receivers in three or four days, and none of 'em were in any kind of contact."

Ray Alexander fell and broke a wrist. A fifth-round draft selection, Everett Gay of Texas, twisted both an ankle a knee while cutting. Then there was Sherrard's injury, suffered in a pass skeleton drill last week against the Chargers.

"He kicks himself in a play that's not even his way. Just clicked his heel," Landry said. "Those are hard to understand."

Sherrard was important. In Landry's judgment, the former UCLA athlete might have been a Pro Bowler in his second NFL season. He was the focus of everything the Cowboys were seeking to accomplish with their passing game.

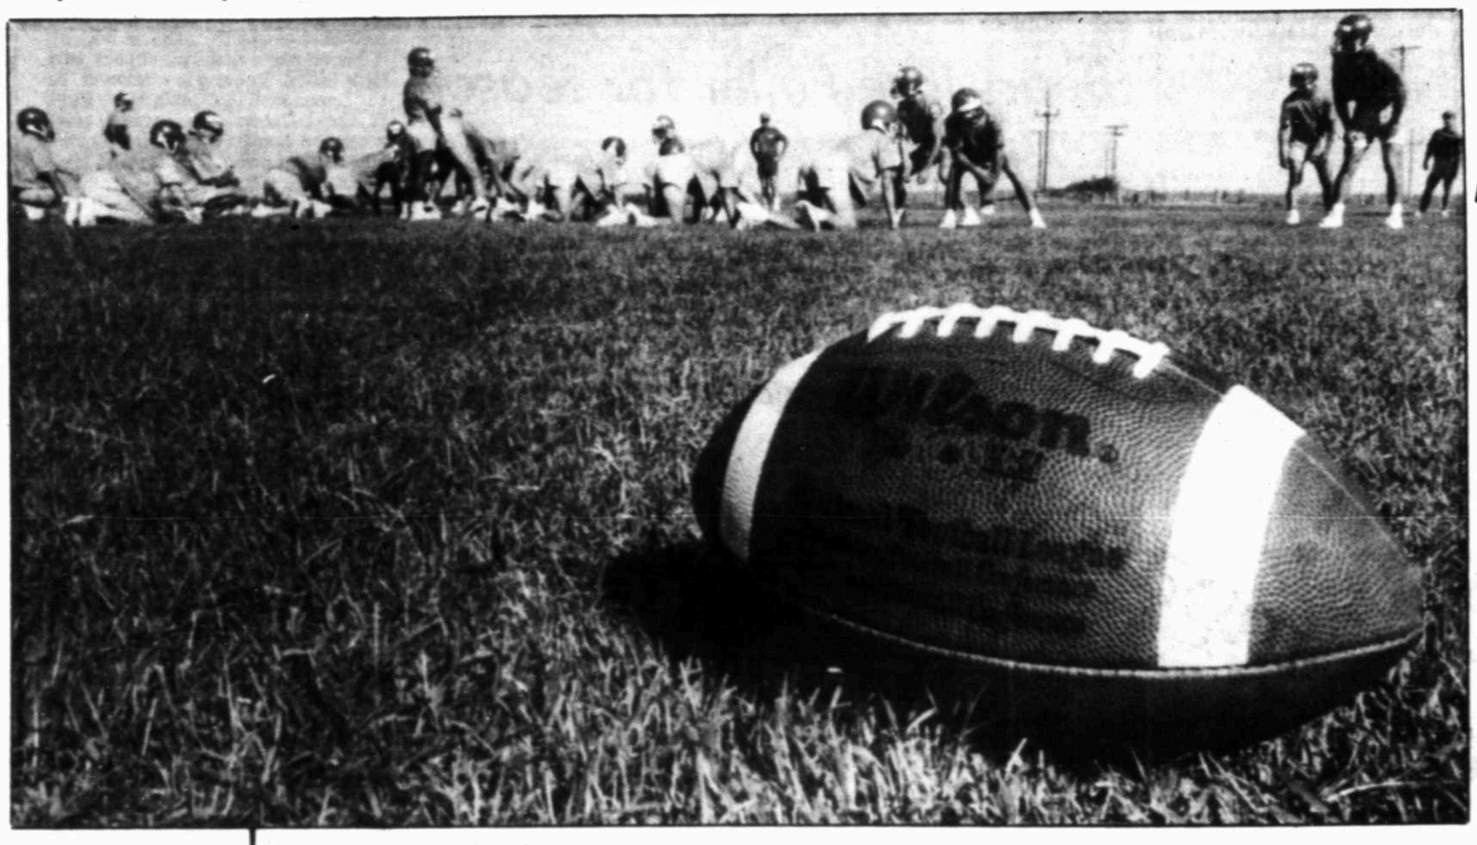
Landry doesn't pretend that Sherrard can be replaced as the Cowboys move to re-establish themselves following their 7-9 finish a year ago — the club's first losing record since 1964.

"I don't think you can make it up in the receiving corps," the coach admitted. "The thing we think we have, if they're healthy, is the best running backs in the business (Walker and Dorsett). So we must run the ball very well, we must play a little better defense, and we must have a better kicking game. If we can do all those things, then we can offset losing Sherrard."

"When you lose those kind of players," he said of Sherrard, "it makes it harder. But I think we still have a chance to get on the right side of .500, if we don't get any more injuries and White holds together."

UNTIL WHITE was hurt last season, the Cowboys were advantageously placed. They were 6-2 entering that fateful game against the Giants; without White, they finished 1-7, their only victory a 24-21 escape against San Diego.

"We had a passing game that we had put in for the first time that really only a White could run, with his experience," Landry said. "If he had stayed in there, we'd have had a winning season, and I think we'd have come fairly close to the playoffs again."



Cruz ends skid with pair of home runs

NL Roundup

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Jose Cruz, the veteran outfielder who has been starting for the Houston Astros on a part-time basis, could have changed that with the two homers he hit in Tuesday night's 7-3 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

"Jose has hit Mike LaCoss well. That's one reason he played. I know he'll be in the lineup tomorrow. He's the type of player who can get hot and carry a club for a while," Manager Hal Lanier said.

Houston ended a four-game losing streak by beating the Giants, who were on a five-game winning streak. The Astros' pitching ace, Mike Scott, was ready to go against the Giants today in the third game of the series between the National League West contenders.

Cruz homered for the first time in a month when he connected in the third inning off LaCoss, 10-7. His 10th homer of the year, with two men on base in the seventh, came off reliever Craig Lefferts and made the score 7-2.

The Giants have the National League's hottest hitter, Will Clark, who hit his 26th homer in the sixth inning off Jeff Heathcock, 2-1, to create a 2-2 tie. Clark has at least one RBI in each of the last nine games, tying a San Francisco record he now shares with Willie Mays, Orlando Cepeda and Willie McCovey.

"I had a 3-2 count on him and didn't want to walk him, but I didn't want to give in to him, either. I threw a sinker that was a pretty good pitch but up a little. He's hot right now and he hit it," said Heathcock, who has a 5-0 career record against the Giants.

"We battled back to tie it up. The pitch that hurt the most was that 0-2 one Cruz hit," Manager Roger Craig said. "We had a good shot at them but left a lot of men on base."

The tie was broken with Craig Reynolds' leadoff homer in the seventh. It was his third homer of the season and all are off LaCoss.

"I could have been a little tired by the seventh. I don't know. Those things happen," said LaCoss, who left the game two batters later.

Heathcock gave up a pinch-hit homer by Joel Youngblood in the bottom of the seventh and left in the eighth with two men on base and one out. Juan Agosto came out of the bullpen to strike out Clark, and Larry Andersen got the last four outs, all on strikeouts, for his third save.

"Heathcock gave us the innings we needed. The bullpen has been tired," Lanier said.

The bullpen also is short-handed because of the absence of Dave Smith, the reliever with 19 saves and a 1.17 earned run average. Smith has been bothered by a sore elbow, and Tuesday night he felt ill three hours before gametime and was taken to a hospital for an examination before returning to Candlestick Park.

Padres 7, Braves 6

Tony Gwynn, the NL's leading hitter with a .368 average, broke out of a mini-slump with five hits in five at-bats and four runs scored, including the game-winner when Benito Santiago singled in the ninth inning.

Gwynn singled to open the ninth and stole second, his career-high 37th steal of the season, and went to third on a sacrifice bunt by Marvell Wynne.

Gene Garber, 8-9, then walked

Angels lose, hang on to 1st

From Staff Reports

SAN ANTONIO — Dodger pitchers Dave Eichhorn and Doug Hartley combined on a five-hitter Tuesday as San Antonio shut out the Midland Angels, 3-0.

However, Midland remained in first place as El Paso split a doubleheader with Wichita, pushing the Angels' lead back to one-half game.

Left fielder Domingo Michel provided most of the punch for the Dodgers, starting a second inning rally with a lead-off triple and opening a two-run sixth with a double.

And though the Angels never put two hits together in one inning, they had a chance to win it in the ninth.

Eichhorn, 3-6, worked into the ninth without ever being threatened, but a lead-off single by Jim Thomas and a walk to Bill Geivett brought on Doug Hartley. Two outs later, Hartley walked Stan Holmes to load the bases for Reggie Montgomery. Montgomery nearly cleared the bases with a long fly to left, but Domingo Michel came down with it to end the game.

Phil Venturino, 11-5, allowed Michel to triple to open the second and Joe Szekely followed with an RBI single.

In the sixth, after Michel doubled, he scored on a sacrifice fly by former Angel Jeff Schaefer. Szekely, who walked, came around on a hit by Juan Bustabad.

The series will resume with two games tonight. Midland will sent Mike Romanovsky, 8-5, and Chris Collins, 4-5, against Barry Wohler, 6-10, and Fred Farwell, 2-0.

Pigskin Fever Hits Stanton

Midland's pros are holding their own

A few thoughts on the subject of...

BASEBALL: Randy Velarde, who was an infamous "player to be named later" in a Chicago White Sox-New York Yankee swap this spring, is with the Yankees' AAA farm team in Columbus. And, he's having a good year.

Brundage

In 38 games with the International League team — after a promotion from AA Albany of the Eastern League — Velarde, a 1981 Midland Lee grad, has been the Clippers' everyday shortstop.

In 146 at bats, Velarde has 48 hits, including eight doubles, four triples and four home runs for a .329 average and 26 RBI. On the field he's committed 14 errors protecting the Clipper middle.

Two Midland High grads are also learning about life on the professional baseball hill, Mike Stanton, 1985, and Mike Timlin, 1984.

Both Bulldogs are left-handed starting pitchers with similar backgrounds. That is to say, neither pitched much nor did very well while in high school. Yet, both were drafted this year as pitchers.

Stanton has made tremendous gains in his brief Rookie League experience. In fact, it seems he now has the stuff MHS boss Tim Whalen hoped for but never found back in '85.

After losing his first four games with the Pulaski (West Virginia) Braves of the Appalachian League for an earned run average as high as 7.45, Stanton has come back to improve his numbers to 3-5, 3.75 in 48 innings of work.

Timlin, however, hasn't fared as well, but the high hopes are still there. In 44 innings, Timlin has posted a 2-5 record and an ERA of 6.34 with the Medicine Hat (Alberta) Blue Jays of the Pioneer League. He's struck out 36 batters while walking 17...

FOOTBALL: Two Midland High grads have moved north of the border to continue their football careers, Wesley Williams and James Zachery.

Williams, a 1981 graduate, was the Bulldogs' last 1,000-yard rusher. Since leaving MHS, the speedy back is well traveled, from Angelo State University to Bologna of the Italian Football League, to the Ottawa Rough Riders of the Canadian Football League.

However, since returning to North America, Williams hasn't had much luck. First he had a tryout and was cut by the Washington Redskins and, on the first full day of training camp in Ottawa he strained knee ligaments and was placed on the 60-day disabled list.

According to the Rough Riders, Williams will be coming off the DL Aug. 17. He's working out with the team now and attending all meetings but hasn't yet returned to full contact drills.

Note, Williams played on the same football team that produced two NFL hopefuls, Washington's second round draft pick Wally Kleine and San Diego Chargers' 11th round pick Joe Goebel. So far, both are still in their respective camps.

Zachery is playing defensive end for the Edmonton Eskimos and is having a great season. In the Eskimos last game, a victory over the Winnipeg Blue Bombers, Zachery had three quarterback sacks and was named CFL defensive player of the week.

Harris turning it around

Associated Press

MILWAUKEE — Greg Harris, the starter, isn't the same pitcher in August that Greg Harris, the reliever, was in April.

Just ask the Texas Ranger righthander or the Milwaukee Brewers.

"When I'm a starter they see a little different me. I'm not the same when I'm relieving," Harris said Tuesday night after scattering seven hits over seven innings in a 7-1 Ranger victory.

As a short reliever in April, Harris struggled, especially on Easter Sunday when he gave up two ninth-inning homers that rallied the Brewers from a 4-1 deficit to a 6-4 victory. That win was Milwaukee's American League-record 12th straight to start the season.

"Easter Sunday is long gone, it's old stuff," Harris said after raising his record to 5-8, including 4-4 since becoming a starter in June. "If I was at my best and got beat, then I'd question it, but I was struggling, really battling and trying to find myself."

"His biggest plus was that he had command of four pitches," said Milwaukee's Paul Molitor, who had three hits, extending his hitting streak to 26 games — longest in the majors this season.

Molitor passed Wade Boggs, who had a 25-game hitting streak earlier. Molitor's current streak is also the longest in the majors since Boggs hit in 28 straight in 1985.

The Rangers' victory was only their second in 11 meetings with the Brewers this season and was propelled by a five-run outburst in the first two innings of Milwaukee loser Mark Knudson, 2-3. Ruben Sierra had a pair of run-scoring sacrifice flies and the Rangers bunched five straight hits in a three-run second.

And although Molitor kept his hitting streak alive, he had another another one stopped when he was thrown out stealing after a first-inning single. He had stolen 14 straight bases before Mike Stanley cut him down. The play also ended a string of 39 straight steals against Rangers' catchers, including 27 in a row against Stanley.

AL Roundup

Mariners 8, Athletics 2

Mark McGwire set an AL rookie record by hitting his 38th home run, but Seattle's Alvin Davis and Jim Presley provided enough offense to offset McGwire. Davis, who hit a two-run homer, and Presley drove in three runs apiece.

McGuire broke the AL rookie record of 38 set by Al Rosen in 1950. McGwire is now tied for the major-league homer record for rookies established by Wally Berger of the Boston Braves in 1930 and matched by Cincinnati's Frank Robinson in 1956.

Mike Moore, 5-14, gave up seven hits, including home runs by McGwire and Tony Bernazard. Moore struck out four, walked none and won his second straight decision at home after starting his season 0-6 at the Kingdome.

Davis hit a two-run homer in the first inning. It was Davis' 18th home run and seventh in his last 14 games.

Royals 8, Yankees 5

Bret Saberhagen became the first 16-game winner in the major leagues and Kansas City used a six-run first inning to defeat New York.

Saberhagen, 16-7, had lost all four of his starts since July 11. He gave up five runs on 10 hits in six innings and Jerry Don Gleaton relieved for his fifth save.

Ross Jones hit a two-out, two-run single and Larry Owen followed with a two-run double to cap the first-inning outburst against Ron Guidry, 3-6.

Blue Jays 8, Red Sox 3

Jesse Barfield's 24th home run broke a 3-3 tie in the sixth inning and Jimmy Key won his fifth straight decision as Toronto beat Boston.

Key, 14-6, gave up nine hits in the first four innings but allowed just two more in his seventh complete game.

Tigers 9, White Sox 6

Alan Trammell hit a three-run homer and sacrifice fly and Lou Whitaker had three hits and scored three times as Detroit won in Chicago.

Frank Tanana, 13-7, gave up five runs in six innings yet still beat the White Sox for the fourth time this season. He has a 20-12 lifetime record against Chicago.

Scott Nielsen, 3-5, was raked for three runs in the first inning and four in the second.

Twins 7, Angels 2

Frank Viola won for the seventh time in his last eight starts and Gary Gaetti homered as Minnesota beat California for its fifth straight victory.

Viola, 13-7, gave up nine hits in eight-plus innings and defeated the visting Angels and John Candelaria, 6-4. Candelaria, who began the game with a 4-0 record against the Twins, had outdueled Viola twice this season.

Tom Brunansky hit an RBI double in the second inning and Mark Davidson hit a two-run double later in the inning. Gaetti hit his 24th home run in the sixth.

Indians 6, Orioles 3

Mel Hall and Cory Snyder each rapped three of Cleveland's 12 hits and the Indians won in Baltimore. Hall drove in three runs and Snyder hit his 26th homer.

Larry Sheets hit two homers for the Orioles. He has three two-homer games in his last five.

U.S. outslugs Venezuela, 14-7

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The last thing the United States baseball team needed was a tough game and a long night.

But they got both against Venezuela Tuesday, and Coach Ron Fraser said the Americans have no one to blame but themselves.

"We let them off the floor," Fraser said after his team blew most of a 9-0 lead but came back to win 14-7. "We botched it up quie a bit for a while out there. I am disappointed."

Canada beat Nicaragua 10-5 and the Netherlands Antilles defeated Aruba 12-2 in earlier games at Bush Stadium.

The United States got a home run, two doubles and four RBI from Ted Wood of Chagrin Falls, Ohio, a homer and four RBI from Tino Martinez of Tampa, Fla., and a homer and three RBI from Ty Griffin, also of Tampa, but still struggled at times.

The Americans led 9-0 after five innings. They scored three times in the third on a two-run double by Wood and another run-scoring double by Rick Hirtensteiner of Ventura, Calif.

In the fourth, they seemingly broke the game open when Griffin drilled a three-run homer. One out later, Martinez and Griffin hit back-to-back homers to make it 8-0.

There was a brief brushback incident when Venezuelan reliever Jesus Lopez knocked down Mike Fiore of Coral Gables, Fla., with a pitch after the home runs. Both benches cleared, but order was restored after Lopez was warned by the umpire.

Venezuela came back against U.S. starter and winner Joe Slusarski of Springfield, Ill., to score two runs in the sixth and four more in the seventh.

But the United States put the game out of reach in the seventh with five runs, three on Martinez' double.

Bears lose Fuller for season

PLATTEVILLE, Wis. (AP) — Chicago Bears quarterback Steve Fuller has decided to undergo shoulder surgery, Coach Mike Ditka said Tuesday. The development means Fuller is expected to miss the upcoming NFL season.

"Fuller's going to have surgery in a week," Ditka told reporters at a news conference.

Fuller tore loose scar tissue in his right shoulder while lifting weights July 27 at the Bears' Lake Forest, Ill. practice site. He had separated the shoulder twice in 1984.

The quarterback took a few days this week to consult with doctors and decide whether to have the surgery. He was not at training camp Tuesday.

Fuller, 30, started two games last year — at Minnesota and home against the Los Angeles Rams.

Schmidt leans toward another year in 1987

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike Schmidt, who had suggested this could be his final season, is showing strong signs of continuing his Hall of Fame career for at least one more year.

Schmidt has indicated to friends he will play in 1988 for the Philadelphia Phillies, provided the team does not try to cut his $2,127,333 salary.

"I wouldn't come back for less than I'm making. You can take that to the bank," Schmidt said.

The Phillies say they want Schmidt back, yet have told him and his agent Arthur Rosenberg they do not want to talk about a new contract until after the season ends. But Phillies President Bill Giles says money will not get in the way.

Publicly, Schmidt has avoided discussing next year. He says he wants to concentrate on baseball now and his future later.

But, all indications are Schmidt will definitely return. Even he gives an increasingly sly smile when asked whether he will play again.

Schmidt's knees, which have undergone three operations, are holding up fine and not causing him any pain. When Schmidt said late last season that 1987 might be his final year, he said his physical condition could be the determining factor.

"They're fine," he said about his knees. "No problem."

Schmidt, who turns 38 next month, has been adamant about not hanging on past his prime. He has continued his level of production this year, batting .294 with 22 home runs and 76 runs batted in.

"I haven't had one of those great streaks," Schmidt said. "But it's been a consistent year."

A rib cage injury earlier in the season cost him about 85 at-bats, and without that problem his numbers would be even more impressive. He hit his 500th home run in April and got his 2,000th hit in May.

NL

John Kruk intentionally and hit Chris Brown to load the bases, setting the stage for Santiago.

Reliever Mark Davis, 7-6, who pitched out of a bases-loaded jam in the ninth, got the victory, the 10th in 12 games for the Padres.

Cardinals 6, Pirates 5

St. Louis maintained its 5½-game lead in the NL East as Todd Worrell stifled a Pittsburgh rally in the bottom of the ninth after the Cardinals scored twice in the top of the inning.

Ozzie Smith's fielder's choice grounder off Rick Reuschel, 8-6, drove in the go-ahead run in the ninth and Tommy Herr followed with a sacrifice fly, giving the Cardinals a 6-4 lead. The Pirates then loaded the bases with no outs in the bottom of the ninth, but scored only one run as Worrell got his 24th save in relief of Ken Dayley, 7-2.

Mets 6, Expos 2

New York kept pace with St. Louis as Terry Leach pitched a six-hitter for eight innings against Montreal and won his 10th game without a loss.

Leach, who has seven victories as a starter and three as a reliever, struck out two and walked two as he passed Detroit's Jack Morris for the longest winning streak in the majors this year.

Keith Hernandez drove in three runs for the Mets, two with a first-inning double and one when he was hit by a pitch with the bases loaded in the second.

Dodgers 7, Reds 2

Bob Welch held Cincinnati to two hits for five innings and two relievers completed a seven-hitter for Los Angeles after Welch left the game with a groin injury.

John Shelby had two hits, scored two runs and drove in two with an RBI single and a sacrifice fly for the Dodgers.

Welch, 11-7, had to leave the game when he strained his right groin muscle going after Cincinnati pitcher Jeff Montgomery's ground ball up the third base line in the fifth inning. Welch finished the fifth, but could not continue, and Tim Crews and Matt Young held the Reds to five hits and an unearned run in the final four innings.

Phillies 9, Cubs 8

Philadelphia came back from 6-3, 7-6 and 8-7 deficits to beat Chicago on Milt Thompson's single with one out in the bottom of the 13th inning.

Luis Aguayo lead off the 13th with a single off losing pitcher Bob Tewksbury, 0-4. A sacrifice and an error moved Aguayo to third, and Thompson followed with a single, his fifth hit of the game in seven at-bats.

Kevin Gross, 7-10, who is appealing a 10-day suspension for having sandpaper in his glove, pitched the 13th inning for the Phillies and was the winner.

Gross can't understand why union will appeal

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Philadelphia Phillies pitcher Kevin Gross, who admits he was caught with the goods when umpires inspected his glove, says he can't understand why the Players Association is appealing a 10-day suspension he is willing to serve.

Gross, kicked out of a game with the Chicago Cubs when umpire John Kibler found sandpaper glued to the player's glove Monday night, received a 10-day suspension on Tuesday from National League President A. Bartlett Giamatti.

The suspension was to have been effective immediately, but was then delayed when an appeal was filed.

"I don't know why they are appealing," Gross said. "All I know is that they decided to appeal."

Don Fehr, executive director of the Players' Association, said Tuesday that Gross had full knowledge of the plan to appeal the suspension. Fehr said his office had been in contact all day with Gross or his agent.

"I was caught with sandpaper in my glove," Gross admitted Tuesday. "They (the umpires) thought I was supposedly scuffing the ball and I was ejected. I was not scuffing any ball in the game last night."

He said he was just "fooling with" the sandpaper.

National League spokeswoman Katy Feeney said Tuesday that sandpaper and an unidentified sticky substance were found on Gross' glove, which was shipped to the NL office by the umpires. Also sent along was the ball in play at the time of the ejection. The ball, Kibler said, was clean.

Gross is the second pitcher ejected in the last 10 days. Joe Niekro of the Minnesota Twins was thrown out of a game against the California Angels last week for carrying an emery board and sandpaper in his pocket. American League President Bobby Brown suspended Niekro for 10 days without pay. Niekro appealed but the suspension was upheld.

Gross' situation puts Phillies' Manager Lee Elia in something of a predicament. Elia said that, had the suspension begun immediately, he would have gone to a four-man rotation until Gross returned. Now the Phillies' pitching is as unsettled as the Gross case.

On Tuesday night, for instance, Gross was called out of the bullpen to pitch the 13th inning against the Cubs. Gross, 7-10, picked up the victory when the Phillies scored in the bottom of tne inning to win it 9-8.

During the fifth inning Monday night, Cubs Manager Gene Michael asked home plate umpire Charlie Williams to check Gross' glove. Williams was joined at the mound by Kibler, chief of the umpiring crew. Gross was ejected when the sandpaper was discovered, but the ball was clean.

QB tandem makes 'Hogs dangerous

By HARRY KING

SWC Preview

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — University of Arkansas opponents will know quarterback Quinn Grovey is around even when Greg Thomas is taking the snap from center.

Grovey's availability means the Razorbacks can be more free-wheeling in play selection.

"It's the kind of situation we always like to have," UA Coach Ken Hatfield said. "Two quarterbacks you can run the same type offense with. And the players respond equally well to both."

Thomas, the most experienced returning quarterback in the Southwest Conference, took virtually all the snaps for the Razorbacks during a 9-3 season that included an Orange Bowl loss to Oklahoma.

Thomas, a graduate of San Angelo Central, completed less than 40 percent of his passes as a sophomore, but threw only two interceptions. Last year, he completed 62 percent and had only one interception.

Those interception figures are phenomenal, says quarterback coach David Lee.

"He doesn't give anything away," Lee said. "Last year he played so much and took such a pounding, he lost a little of his speed as the season progressed. Still, he ran well. This year we should be able to keep him fresher and that should help his quickness late in the year."

Grovey, a redshirt freshman, has 4.5 speed — the fastest quarterback Arkansas has had since Hatfield brought his flexbone to Fayetteville in 1984.

DURING SPRING practice, Grovey got virtually all of the work on the option; Thomas concentrated on his passing.

"Greg's been hit enough," Hatfield said. "There are only so many hits in his body."

Hatfield is quick to point out the poise that Grovey demonstrated during the spring.

"He traveled with us for a year," Hatfield said. "He's been in on all the quarterback meetings, he's been on the sideline when we were making changes during the game.

"He can get to the corner and make something happen. He could give us a little spurt of freshness, especially if Greg's played for a while."

Hatfield said he will depend on the flow of the game to decide when to insert Grovey.

Another plus for the Razorbacks is the return of James Rouse, the SWC's Newcomer of the Year as a freshman. He led the Razorbacks in rushing that year and scored nine touchdowns, but played in only two games last year because of a broken bone in his leg.

HE WAS tentative at the beginning of spring practice, but got back in the groove after the first week. "We're anticipating a great year from him and if he stays healthy, he could be among the best in the country," Larry Brinson, running back coach, said.

Offensively, Hatfield said, the Razorbacks have more skill and speed than in the past. The Razorbacks must replace a left guard and left tackle. Rick Apolskis is the frontrunner at tackle while John Stitten and Mike Benson — both 300-pounders — are the contenders at left guard.

"To make it all happen, those guys must learn to communicate with the others and be able to handle the things they see," Hatfield said.

Defensively, the Razorbacks return nine starters.

Chargers ink Bernstine; Wright could be next

NFL Camps

Associated Press

With his contract hassle behind him, tight end Rod Bernstine, the San Diego Chargers' first round draft choice, is anxious to get going.

"Rod said, 'It's time to play football,' and both Ort and I knew we had to get it done," Bernstine's agent Ralph Cindrich said Tuesday after completing negotiations with San Diego's director of football operations Steve Ortmayer.

The agreement, reportedly worth as much as $1.53 million over four years, brought to end an 18-day holdout.

"He is a very welcome addition to the San Diego Chargers," Ortmayer said of Bernstine, the 24th overall pick in the NFL draft out of Texas A&M...

Holding Out

The St. Louis Cardinals, disgruntled over contract talks with No. 1 draft pick Kelly Stouffer, say they have withdrawn their latest offer.

Cardinals owner William V. Bidwill said he would restructure the offer and likely would ask Stouffer to accept a five-year deal instead of the reported four-year, $1.8 million contract the team had previously offered.

"Obviously, they aren't interested in getting it done," Bidwill said of Stouffer and his agents, Frank Bauer and Michael Blatt.

Bauer and Blatt are seeking a four-year, $2.2-million deal for Stouffer, a quarterback from Colorado State who was the sixth pick overall in the draft...

Published reports say Green Bay Packer quarterback Randy Wright is expected to end his holdout today.

The two sides are between $20,000 and $25,000 apart in contract negotiations, according to reports in the Milwaukee Sentinel and Green Bay Press Gazette.

"We're pretty close on this thing," said Tom Braatz, the Packers' executive vice president of football operations...

Pittsburgh Coach Chuck Noll suggested that if Rod Woodson, the Steelers' top draft choice, continues to run in European track meets, he can forget about being the team's starting right cornerback this season.

"I haven't even seen this kid," Noll said. "I saw him run in what amounted to his underwear. He looks good in his underwear, but so do a lot of Hollywood stars, and they can't play football."

Woodson, the 10th overall pick in the draft, has yet to sign. His agent, Eugene Parker, said the former Purdue cornerback will return to the United States as soon as he has a contract with the Steelers, but until then, plans to keep running the 110-meter hurdles in Europe...

Mike Junkin, Cleveland's first-round pick, reported to camp Tuesday after signing a four-year contract worth an estimated $1.9 million Monday. Junkin made one hard hit on blocking back Major Everett during a drill but otherwise seemed to be concentrating on getting familiar with his new job...

COOL CLASSICS

Updated For Summer With The Season's Freshest Fruits

(Clockwise from top) Cool Pear Vichyssoise, California Plum Flan, Frozen Amaretto Zabaglione, Fresh Peach Margarita

Every culture's cuisine boasts specialties—England's Yorkshire pudding, Sweden's fruit soups. Here are four such classics appropriate for hot days of summer, each served cold and updated with refreshing California Summer Fruits®.

Use ripe fresh Bartletts in Cool Pear Vichyssoise. The original vichyssoise was created by Louis Diat, Chef at the New York Ritz Carlton. This version, enhanced with the buttery taste of California Bartletts, is easy to prepare and adds an elegant touch to a summer dinner party on a warm evening.

California Plum Flan is a lesson in the art of deception. A variation on the Latin American baked custard, this flan relies on yogurt for the creamy custard and sliced fresh plums brushed with apricot preserves for the sweet taste. A prepared pie crust cuts down on the preparation time of this stunning dessert.

Frozen Amaretto Zabaglione is a rendition of the traditional Italian specialty. This egg-based ice cream captures the flavors of California nectarines and almonds. The flavor combination works, perhaps because this fruit and this nut are distant cousins!

Fresh Peach Margaritas complete this collection of cool classics. This icy party drink furnishes a delicious way to capitalize on the California peach crop peaks which occur mid-May to mid-June and mid-July through August. Puree plenty of fresh ripe peaches, freeze in ice cube trays and you're ready to whip up a margarita at a moment's notice. Peach Margaritas are just as tasty as a "mocktail" by substituting orange juice for the liqueur and omitting the tequila.

Capture the classics while they last—fresh California peaches, plums and nectarines in season from May through September, Bartlett pears from mid-July into November.

Cool Pear Vichyssoise

4 large fresh California Bartlett pears
1/2 cup apple, pared, coarsely chopped
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1/2 cup cooked potatoes, coarsely chopped
1/2 cup celery, coarsely chopped
1/4 cup celery leaves, chopped
1 tablespoon onion, minced
1/2 teaspoon each salt and curry powder
1 can (14-1/2 ounces) chicken broth
3 cans half-and-half or milk
Nutmeg

Pare, halve and core 3 pears; coarsely chop to measure 3-1/2 cups. Toss pears and apple with lemon juice to prevent browning; combine with next 7 ingredients in saucepan. Bring to boil, reduce heat and simmer uncovered 10 minutes. Turn into blender; process until smooth. Pour into bowl and let cool slightly. Stir in half-and-half. Coarsely chop remaining pear and add to soup; chill thoroughly. Serve with sprinkle of nutmeg. 12 servings, 1/2 cup each.

Nectarine Creme fraiche

2 medium fresh California nectarines, sliced
1 cup plain low-fat yogurt
Few drops almond extract
Honey or sugar (optional)
1 envelope unflavored gelatin
2 tablespoons water
Mint sprigs (optional)

Combine nectarines, yogurt and almond extract in blender. Whirl until smooth. Add honey or sugar to taste. Combine gelatin and water in small saucepan. Stir over low heat until dissolved. Add to mixture in blender. Whirl 10 seconds to blend. Chill until it begins to thicken. Spoon into stemmed glasses and chill until set. Garnish with additional nectarine slices and mint sprigs, if desired. 4 servings.

California Plum Flan

1 pie crust stick (5-1/2 ounces)
Yogurt Custard
2 cups fresh California plums, sliced
3 tablespoons apricot preserves, sieved

Prepare pie crust according to package directions. Roll out pie crust; line bottom and sides of 9-inch flan pan. Turn edge under and flute. Prick bottom and sides with fork. Bake in 400°F oven 15 minutes or until golden. Cool. Pour Yogurt Custard into cooled shell; return to oven 8 to 10 minutes or until barely set. Chill. Arrange plums decoratively over flan. Brush with apricot preserves. 6 servings.

Yogurt Custard: Beat together 1 cup plain low-fat yogurt, 2 egg yolks, 1/4 cup sugar, 2 tablespoons flour and 1/4 teaspoon orange zest.

Peach Cobbler

1 cup flour
3/4 cup sugar
1-1/2 teaspoons baking powder
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 cup butter
1/4 cup milk
1 egg
4 teaspoons cornstarch
1/4 teaspoon cinnamon
5 large fresh California peaches, pitted, sliced (5 cups)

For cobbler dough, combine flour, 2 tablespoons sugar, baking powder and salt. Cut in butter with pastry blender until mixture is in coarse crumbs. Add milk and egg, stirring just to moisten. Set aside. For filling, combine remaining sugar and remaining ingredients in saucepan. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until peaches are tender and syrup thickens, about 5 to 7 minutes. Pour into 9-inch square pan. Drop cobbler dough by spoonfuls onto hot fruit filling. Bake in 400°F oven 20 minutes or until golden. Serve warm. 6 servings.

Frozen Amaretto Zabaglione

3 fresh California nectarines
1-1/2 cups sugar
3 cups half-and-half
6 egg yolks
1/2 cup Amaretto liqueur
Chopped almonds (optional)

Puree nectarines to measure 2 cups. Combine sugar, half-and-half and egg yolks in saucepan. Heat, beating constantly with wire whip until slightly thickened and lemon-colored. Do not boil. Stir in nectarine puree and Amaretto. Pour into ice cream cannister. Churn-freeze in hand-crank or electric ice cream maker according to manufacturer's directions. Pack into freezing containers; freeze firm. To serve, allow frozen Zabaglione to soften somewhat, then scoop over extra nectarine slices. Sprinkle with chopped almonds, if desired. 4 servings.

Pear Strawberry Sherbet

3 fresh California Bartlett pears, quartered, cored
1-1/2 cups buttermilk
1/2 cup sugar
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 pint fresh strawberries
1 egg white

Combine 2 pears with buttermilk, sugar, lemon juice and vanilla in blender. Whirl thoroughly until smooth. Pour mixture into 9-inch pan and freeze until slushy. Finely chop remaining pear and strawberries. Whip egg white until stiff. Fold into frozen mixture along with pear and strawberries. Freeze until firm. Makes about 1 quart.

Fresh Peach Margaritas

9 Frozen California Peach Cubes
2 ounces tequila*
2 ounces orange-flavored liqueur* (Cointreau, Orange Curacao or Triple Sec)
1/4 cup lime juice
2 tablespoons sugar
Cracked ice
Salt (optional)

Combine all ingredients except salt in blender. Whirl until smooth. Dip rims of 5-ounce glasses into shallow film of water, then into small dish of salt. Pour margarita into prepared glasses. Makes four 5-ounce drinks.

*For non-alcoholic version, substitute 1/4 cup orange juice for tequila and orange liqueur. Use only 5 ice cubes. Pour into glasses.

Frozen Golden Peach Cubes: Pit and slice 3 large (or 4 medium) fresh California peaches to measure 3 cups. Combine in blender with 1 tablespoon freshly squeezed lemon juice; puree. Pour into ice cube trays. Freeze. Makes 18 cubes.

Fresh cobblers bring out flavors of summer fruits

Copley News Service

While we've always been particularly partial to pies, experimenting with these wonderful summer fruit cobblers has just about turned us into cobbler converts! The absolutely delicious results, achieved with absolutely minimal time and effort, prove to be a practically irresistible combination.

Since the beauty of this dessert is in its simplicity, we prefer to sweeten the already ripe and luscious fruit with a minimum of sugar and to bring out its inherent flavor by adding a little lemon juice and grated lemon zest. Vanilla is a subtle complement to blueberries and we love the hint of sweet spices with nectarines.

BLUEBERRY COBBLER

3 cups blueberries
½ cup sugar
½ teaspoon grated lemon zest
2 teaspoons lemon juice
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 tablespoon butter
Cobbler Dough
1 cup flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon sugar
2 tablespoons cold butter
⅓ cup heavy cream
Powdered sugar for dusting

Preheat oven to 425 degrees. In mixing bowl, toss berries with sugar, lemon zest, lemon juice and vanilla. Place fruit mixture in 1-quart baking dish such as a 7-inch square pan or 9-inch glass pie dish. Dot top of fruit with tablespoon of butter.

Measure flour, baking powder, salt and sugar in workbowl of food processor and pulse twice to sift. Cut cold butter into pieces, arrange it on top of flour and pulse 8-10 times until mixture resembles coarse meal. With motor running, slowly pour cream through feed tube. Stop motor as soon as dough begins to clump.

Remove steel blade from workbowl and gather dough into ball with hands. Turn out onto lightly floured surface and roll into shape that is slightly smaller than interior dimensions of baking dish and about ¼-inch thick. Trim edges and crimp with fingertips or fork, if desired. Place dough over fruit and cut several deep slashes in cobbler top so that steam can escape. Bake in preheated oven for 20-25 minutes until crust is browned and fruit is tender. Place on rack to cool. Serve warm or at room temperature. Sift powdered sugar over top before serving.

Note: To mix by hand, place dry ingredients in mixing bowl and stir well. Cut butter into pieces and rub with fingertips until mixture resembles coarse meal. Add cream all at once and stir with fork to make dough. Turn out onto lightly floured surface and knead 30 seconds. Roll out as above.

SPICED NECTARINE COBBLER

3 cups thinly sliced nectarines (about 3 medium nectarines)
¼ cup light brown sugar
¼ teaspoon grated lemon zest
2 teaspoons lemon juice
½ teaspoon cinnamon
⅛ teaspoon nutmeg
1 tablespoon butter
Cobbler Dough
1 cup flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon sugar
2 tablespoons cold butter
⅓ cup heavy cream
Powdered sugar for dusting on top

Preheat oven to 425 degrees. Slice nectarines without peeling them and toss in mixing bowl with sugar, lemon zest, lemon juice, cinnamon and nutmeg. Place fruit in 1-quart baking dish such as 7-inch-square pan or 9-inch pie dish. Dot top of fruit with tablespoon of butter.

Measure flour, baking powder, salt and sugar into workbowl of food processor and pulse twice to sift. Cut cold butter into pieces, arrange on top of flour, and pulse 8-10 times until mixture resembles coarse meal. With motor running, slowly pour cream through feed tube. Stop motor as soon as dough begins to clump together. (See Blueberry Cobbler recipe for instructions on making dough by hand.)

Remove steel blade from workbowl and gather dough into ball with hands. Turn out onto lightly floured surface and roll into shape that is slightly smaller than interior dimensions of baking dish and about ¼-inch thick. Trim edges and crimp with fingertips or fork, if desired. Place dough over fruit and cut several deep slashes in cobbler top so that steam can escape. Bake in preheated oven for 20-25 minutes until crust is browned and fruit is tender. Place on rack to cool. Serve warm or at room temperature.

Oriental tossed salad combines pea pods with greens

ORIENTAL TOSSED SALAD

½ of a 6-ounce package frozen pea pods
4 cups torn salad greens
½ of an 8-ounce can sliced water chestnuts, drained
1 tablespoon sesame seed
3 tablespoons salad oil
4 teaspoons vinegar
4 teaspoons dry sherry
2 teaspoons honey
2 teaspoons soy sauce

In a colander rinse pea pods under cold water to thaw. In a salad bowl place pea pods, torn greens, water chestnuts and sesame seed.

For dressing, in a screw-top jar combine oil, vinegar, sherry, honey and soy sauce. Cover and shake well. Pour over salad; toss to coat. Makes 6 servings.

WHAT'S COOKING

Cook's talents include drama, singing, baking

EDITOR'S NOTE: This series of "What's Cooking" interviews will feature nonprofit organizations that have published cookbooks. This is the second article in a six-part series of interviews with members of the First Baptist Church.

By MYRA LEE SALCEDO
Lifestyle Writer

Gail Storrie, a self-ascribed "old-fashioned cook," said she enjoys spending a lot of time in the kitchen.

"I don't care if it takes all day to prepare something special," she said. "I use tried-and-true recipes and I know the extra preparation will be worth the time."

Mrs. Storrie has been a Midlander since 1956 when her husband, Jim, a geophysicist for Chevron, came to Midland to work. Mrs. Storrie enjoys cooking whenever she isn't doing something for First Baptist Church or her family.

The couple recently returned from a trip to Ireland and Britain on a partnership mission. "Our church has an exchange ministry set up, where our minister preached in the Andover Baptist Church in England and Sion Mills Baptist Church in Northern Ireland, and their ministers have preached in our church," she said. "The mission was a volunteer effort. We did some sightseeing, but the church related activities were the highlight of the trip."

Before the trip, in the early part of summer, the Storries celebrated two graduations on the same night in the family.

"My daughter, Anne, graduated from Midland High School and my son, David, graduated from Baylor Univeristy in Waco, both on the same night," she said. "Since my husband and I couldn't each attend both graduations, we had a family celebration later, at Padre Island."

A graduate of Texas Women's University in Denton with a bachelor of science degree in speech education, Mrs. Storrie puts her speech and drama expertise to use as the drama director for the church.

"I organize everything, including the music and costumes, for the annual living outdoor navtivity scene. Our church puts it on for three consecutive nights prior to Christmas," she said.

Mrs. Storrie also teaches a young married woman's Sunday School class and she contributed recipes to the most recent cookbook published by First Baptist Church.

"I've often baked cakes and bread to send to my boys — David at Baylor University in Waco, and Jimmy at Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Fort Worth," Mrs. Storrie said.

She said that baking in quantity saves her time. "I bake pies and bread loaves four at a time. My coffee cake recipe (Margaret's Cinnamon Coffee Ring) is a family favorite, and the recipe makes four coffee rings, which freeze very well."

Mrs. Storrie and her husband are both members of the First Baptist Church Choir, and she has been with the Midland Symphony Guild's Symphony Singers for four years. The Storries also teach Bible study for young people.

Mrs. Storrie enjoys reading and sewing, and she swims three times a week. "I also work part-time at a boutique for a friend, but I always find time for home cooking. My husband comes home for lunch. Also as a family, our dinner meal together is very important."

Some of the family's favorite recipes are included below. Mrs. Storrie suggests using two crepes for each enchilada of the Enchilada Crepes Recipe.

MARGARET'S CINNAMON COFFEE RING

2 cups milk scalded
2 packages active dry yeast dissolved in ½ cup warm water
1 cup butter flavored vegetable shortening
1½ teaspoons salt
2 sticks butter or margarine, melted
2 eggs, beaten
6 cups flour (add more if necessary to make dough easy to handle)

CINNAMON MIXTURE: Mix 2 cups sugar and 2 tablespoons cinnamon.

Add shortening to milk and stir. Add sugar, salt and eggs; add yeast and flour. Knead to make soft dough. Place in greased bowl, cover and let rise until doubled. Roll dough ¼ inch thick; cut circles of dough with 2½ inch biscuit cutter.

Dip into melted butter, then into cinnamon-sugar mixture. Stand dough up in well-buttered ring molds until filled. Let rise until light. Bake at 350 degrees for 25 minutes. Remove from pans, cool, wrap in foil.

These freeze well. Yield: 4 rings.

ENCHILADA CREPES

CORN MEAL CREPES:
1½ cups milk
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
3 eggs
1½ cups flour
½ cup corn meal
⅛ teaspoon salt

Place indgredients in blender in order listed. Cover and blend on high until smooth. Prepare crepes in crepe pan, set aside.

NOTE: flour tortillas may be substituted, but the texture will be more course.

CREPE FILLING:
2 cups grated sharp cheddar cheese
1 pound ground meat, browned, seasoned with salt and pepper to taste
1 teaspoon salt, if desired

Mix ingredients thoroughly.

ENCHILADA SAUCE:
2 tablespoons minced onion
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
1 can (1 pound, 4 ounce tomatoes, drained (reserve liquid)
1 clove garlic, minced
2 tablespoons chili powder
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon Tabasco sauce
½ teaspoon sugar

Brown onion in hot oil. Stir in flour. Then stir in remainder of ingredients. Add remainder of reserved tomato juice. Simmer until thickened.

Dip crepes or flour into melted oil, dip into enchilada sauce. Place large spoonful of tortilla filling on each, roll up. Arrange in serving dish. Cover with hot sauce and sprinkle with cheddar cheese, if desired.

Bake at 375 degrees for 20 minutes.

CHILI RELLENO

2 10-ounces cans whole green chilies
½ pound sharp cheddar cheese
½ pound Monterrey Jack cheese
4 eggs
½ teaspoon flour
½ teaspoon salt
1 large can evaporated milk
1 8-ounce can tomato sauce
Dash tabasco sauce

Drain green chilies and place in greased casserole. Grate all cheese and sprinkle over chilies. Beat eggs, flour, salt and milk. Pour over chilies. Bake at 375 degrees for 35 minutes. Remove from oven, pour can of tomato sauce over top of mixture, spreading evenly. Return to oven; bake 5 more minutes. Can be used in large squares as a main dish, or cut into small pieces and served as appetizers.

HUNTER'S CHICKEN

4 chicken breast halves, skinned
1 small jar (4.5 ounces) sliced mushrooms
¼ cup thinly sliced onions
½ cup white cooking wine
1 cube chicken bouillion dissolved in 1 cup boiling water
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
¼ cup green pepper, chopped
1 cup cherry tomatoes, sliced in halves

Saute chicken breasts in skillet until light brown, remove. Add mushrooms, onions, and green pepper; saute one minute, then add wine and cook one more minute. Add bouillion mixture, parsley and tomatoes.

Place chicken halves in greased casserole dish, pour vegetable mixture over and place in 350 degree oven (covered). Bake for 45 minutes. Serve over rice. Serves 4.

SHRIMP CREOLE

1 cup chopped onion
1 cup chopped green pepper
1 cup chopped celery
2 cloves garlic, minced (or use garlic powder)
6 tablespoons salad oil
4 cups canned tomatoes or tomato puree
1 8 ounce can seasoned tomato sauce
1½ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons sugar
1 to 1½ teaspoons chili powder
2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
Dash Tabasco sauce
1 teaspoon cornstarch
24 ounces cleaned raw shrimp

Cook onion, celery, green pepper and garlic in hot oil until tender, but not brown. Add tomatoes (or puree), tomato sauce, and seasonings. Simmer uncovered 45 minutes. Mix cornstarch with ½ cup water; stir into sauce. Cook until mixture thickens. Add shrimp. Cover and simmer until done, about 5 minutes. Serve in rice ring.

MARY'S BUTTERMILK POUND CAKE

1 cup shortening
2 cups sugar
4 eggs
1 cup buttermilk
3 cups flour
½ teaspoon each of soda, salt and baking powder
2 teaspoons lemon extract

Combine all and beat for three minutes on high. Pour in floured and greased tube pan. Bake one hour at 300 degrees. Remove from pan immediately onto oven safe plate or pan. Glaze and return to oven for three minutes.

GLAZE: Mix 2 cups powdered sugar with 4 tablespoons lemon juice.

Summer-proofing picnic fare for hot weather easy

Associated Press

When the sun shines and the temperature climbs, American families pack a basket and head outdoors to eat.

Unfortunately, summer weather increases the possibility of food contamination. Here are some tips to help prevent contamination of your picnic foods:

PREPARATION — Choose foods that are least likely to spoil, including breads, hard cheese, chilled hard-cooked eggs in the shell, canned meats, baked beans, packaged luncheon meats and fresh fruits and vegetables.

Keep all work surfaces, utensils and your hands immaculate during food preparation so harmful bacteria won't be transferred to the picnic foods. Stir bottled mayonnaise into salads and sandwiches at home rather than at the picnic spot; the acid in commercial mayonnaise helps prevent spoilage.

Cool home-cooked food at room temperature just until the food stops steaming. Then refrigerate it and let it chill thoroughly.

PACKING — Pack well-chilled perishable foods in an insulated cooler with ice. Use block ice because it lasts longer than ice cubes. Avoid dry ice; it causes freezer burn if it touches the food or you.

Put tightly wrapped and well-chilled fried chicken, baked ham and raw meats for grilling in the bottom of the cooler. Pack your cooler so that food to be eaten first is on top. This way you avoid unpacking and repacking the food outdoors.

A FINAL NOTE — Don't carry home leftovers; discard them. Any food that has been exposed to sunshine or warm temperatures for hours can be harmful, even though it still may look appetizing.

Texas chefs showcased in Public Television series

AUSTIN (AP) — Keep your VCR primed for the new 26-part public televison series, "Great Chefs of the West."

The programs showcase hot cooking in six states, but Texas chefs dominate the series, which is filmed by Great Chefs Television Productions Ltd. of New Orleans. More than half the 110 dishes are prepared by Texas chefs and down-home cooks.

Chili champ Ray Calhoun tells how to make a mean bowl of red. Mary Trevino of El Mirador in San Antonio stirs refried beans. Stephan Pyles of Routh Street Cafe in Dallas roasts wild turkey with blue cornmeal stuffing. Jack Laurenzo of Ninfa's in Houston makes enchiladas verdes. Dean Fearing of the Mansion on Turtle Creek in Dallas does a mapie, pecan and sweet potato pie.

And it's fine company these Texas food folks are keeping in the series. The list of chefs' names reads like a who's who of cooking in Los Angeles, San Francisco, San Diego, San Antonio, Houston, Phoenix, Tucson, Aspen, Lake Tahoe, Denver and Dallas.

Central Texas shines in this filmed-on-location series whose first episode shows Bertie Varner of the Y.O. Ranch whipping up a pot of ranch beans. The first show also features Jimmy Schmidt of The Rattlesnake Club in Denver making blue corn blini and Mark Miller of the Coyote Cafe in Santa Fe, N.M., stirring up Ibarra chocolate cake.

Later in the series, chefs Gert Rausch and Bernd Voll of Austin's Courtyard Restaurant step into the spotlight to demonstrate a peach mousse with raspberry sauce and a Hill Country mixed grill with jalapeno spaetzle. Raymond Tatum of Jeffrey's shows how to make lamb loin with turnip sauce. Jeff Blank and Robert Hughes of Hudson's-on-the-Bend stuff a pork loin with chorizo, accompanied by apple chutney.

OTHER CENTRAL Texas cooking experts get their turn in the kitchen, too. Revealing the secrets to lip-smacking barbecue, peach cobbler and chicken-fried steak are cooks from The Salt Lick in Driftwood, the onion Creek Lodge in Buda and Kreuz Market in Lockhart.

Texas is a hot culinary region, said Terri Landry, "Great Chefs" producer and writer, who spent last summer traveling the Southwest, checking out chefs and locations. "First we identified the important cities and states," she said. Then food experts in each of the cities were called for restaurant and chef recommendations. The chefs were contacted and invited to participate in the program. Most accepted but some declined, Ms. Landry said.

Later in the series, chefs Gert Rausch and Bernd Voll of Austin's Courtyard Restaurant step into the spotlight to demonstrate a peach mousse with raspberry sauce and a Hill Country mixed grill with jalapeno spaetzle. Raymond Tatum of Jeffrey's shows how to make lamb loin with turnip sauce. Jeff Blank and Robert Hughes of Hudson's-on-the-Bend stuff a pork loin with chorizo, accompanied by apple chutney.

The chefs were asked to submit five dishes for consideration for the show, two appetizers, two entrees and a dessert. It was Ms. Landry's task to juggle and balance the menus and subject matter for the "Great Chefs of the West" series, the fifth national cooking series the New Orleans Company has produced. Previous ventures included "Great Chefs of San Francisco," "Great Chefs of Chicago," and "Great Chefs of New Orleans" (I and II).

Last fall the Great Chefs crew hit the road for four months of filming in 13 cities in six Southwestern states. With 500 pounds of equipment, the seven-person crew spent about a day in each restaurant and more on the road, countering the hassles of travel — a stalled van on a flooded road near Buda, a flat tire on Interstate 35, an airport security guard wary of the need to carry a branding iron (used in the intro to each tape) aboard a plane.

"WE WORK more like a documentary crew," Ms. Landry said. "We don't ask the chefs to perform, just cook. We tell them to talk if they want to. If they don't a commentator will describe what they are doing in the show."

"Most of the chefs are so nervous," Ms. Landry said, "and I would be, too."

Cooking in front of a camera is major pressure, said Robert Hughes, under chef at Hudson's-on-the-Bend. "I get so nervous when a camera is on me ... I poured the cream into the mousse without whipping it first. Fortunately it thickened up enough. But I was so angry at myself that day. I didn't even want to talk about it for three or four days."

EACH SHOW is 28 minutes and 30 seconds long, and features an appetizer, entree, dessert and down-home dish from chefs in defferent cities. Ms. Landry said all the recipes have been home-tested by the "Great Chefs" crew and food-loving friends, and compiled in a 240-page companion cookbook, "Southwest Tastes: From the Great Chefs of the West Television Series" (HPBooks, $19.95)

The "Great Chefs of the West" has already begun airing in many parts of the country.

Cucumbers sauted

Associated Press

Cucumbers, usually confined to the salad bowl, make a surprisingly delicious cooked vegetable, too.

CUCUMBER SAUTE

2 cups sliced fresh mushrooms
¼ cup chopped onion
1 clove garlic, minced
1 tablespoon margarine or butter
2 medium cucumbers, thinly sliced (about 3 cups)
1 tablespoon snipped fresh dill or 1 teaspoon dried dillweed

In 10-inch skillet cook mushrooms, onion and garlic in margarine until tender. Add cucumber slices. Cook and stir about 5 minutes or until cucumbers are crisp-tender and liquid is almost evaporated. Stir in fresh dill or dried dillweed.

Cake made in microwave

Associated Press

Cakes baked in the microwave oven often have a slightly wet surface, even when they're done inside.

MICROWAVE APRICOT AMARETTO CAKE

½ cup sliced almonds
1 cup flaked coconut, toasted
½ cup packed brown sugar
3 tablespoons margarine or butter, softened
1¾ cups all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking soda
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup margarine or butter
¾ cup packed brown sugar
3 eggs
½ cup apricot preserves
¼ cup dairy sour cream
½ cup Amaretto
⅔ cup snipped dried apricots

Generously grease 10-inch microwave-safe fluted tube dish. Sprinkle almonds over sides. Combine coconut, ½ cup sugar and 3 tablespoons margarine; press onto bottom of dish; set aside.

Stir together flour, soda and salt. Beat ½ cup margarine with electric mixer 30 seconds. Add ¾ cup brown sugar and beat until fluffy. Add eggs, preserves and sour cream, beating well (mixture will look curdled). Add flour mixture and Amaretto alternately to beaten mixture, beating after each addition. Fold in apricots.

Transfer batter to prepared dish. Micro-cook, uncovered, on 50 percent power (medium) for 12 minutes, giving dish a quarter-turn every 5 minutes. To test for doneness, scratch the surface with a wooden toothpick. The cake should be cooked underneath. If not done, cook on 100 percent power (high) 30 seconds to 2 minutes more or until done. Cool on rack 5 minutes. Invert and cool on platter.

Foreign flavors tasty in nation's capital

By KAY JARVIS-PROKOP
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — What is the first thing you say when you get off a plane in a strange city? If you are like most people, you say, "Where do we go to eat?"

That says a mouthful, not only about the quality of airline food but also where one of the primary vacation passions lies for most of us. Monuments and cathedrals have their wonders, but coming home with a terrific little restaurant find will probably interest your friends more.

The surprise might be that rather than going armed with half a dozen restaurant guides, I rely on the kindness of friends and most especially people who live in the particular city.

This time around, a New York Times photographer attending a book convention turned out to be my best source.

"What do you want, glitter or interesting food?" he asked.

It is always the latter for me, so he went on at great length to describe what he sees as "the liveliest neighborhood in Washington. Georgetown has some good restaurants, but it is where all the tourists go and you will find a real mixed bag. Go to the Adams-Morgan area."

I did, and found an engagingly cosmopolitan mix of ethnic restaurants that could keep a restless food adventurer busy for months. Adams-Morgan is undergoing gentrification. Most of the action is on 18th Street bordered roughly by Florida and Columbia streets.

BUILDINGS IN need of repair snuggle against the first few bright boutiques and bookstores. Every other doorway has a restaurant sign. If you go only once (parking seems viciously competitive, so take a cab — they are cheap) give Meskerem a try.

One of several Ethiopian restaurants in the area, Meskerem is bursting at the seams with business and should not be missed. Taking the lead from a couple at the next table who knew the menu by heart, our party began with Sambussa, which turned out to be thin shells of dough-filled green chilies, lentils and subtle herbs. Our waitress, who wore a gauzy, white dress splashed with vivid color, suggested St. Pauli Girl beer as the best for the rich food.

CNS Graphic

Since we were novices, our new friends at the next table suggested the combination platter and warned us from ordering too many additional dishes. A good thing. A platter nearly covering the table was brought. An enormous, spongy pancake laid on the platter was covered with arrangements of spiced lamb, sauced beef, a sort of barbecued chicken centered with hard-boiled eggs, cold sliced tomatoes, marinated chick peas, boiled potatoes and lentils. Grand aromas of cumin, garlic, chilies and hints of vinegar and spices came wafting.

No utensils are provided; instead, plates of the warm bread were brought to tear apart and use as scoops for the various foods. There are many contrasts in texture and flavor, all of them remarkably good. It was fun to eat, the crowd was interesting and the cost was $8.50 per person. When we left at 10 p.m. there was a line waiting outside the door. Meskerem, which is the name of the first month of the Ethiopian calendar, means "new life, joy and renewal of hope."

THERE ARE now 30,000 Ethiopian refugees living in Washington, reportedly the largest number outside their homeland. Find Meskerem at 2434 18th St. NW.

Frankly, I could have happily worked my way through that menu of lamb, kale, split peas, onion-stuffed peppers and other wonders, but the area also offers everything from Peruvian, Guatemalan and French to East Indian, Chinese, Salvadoran and Japanese.

Lauriol Plaza, on the edge of Adams-Morgan, has a huge outdoor dining area for those very warm Washington nights and offers a grand mixture of Latin-inspired dishes. Yes, you can find tacos filled with beef and cilantro, but take the waiter's advice and try, for instance, the Cuban-style chunks of tender, roasted pork accented with the sharply flavored Seville oranges.

It is served on rice and accompanied by crusty hot rolls and scallion-topped savory black beans. Big pitchers of white sangria with floating chunks of fresh fruit seemed to be the drink of preference, but there is a most respectable margarita and some Mexican beer.

Lomo Saltado turned out to be tender strips of steak served with a Peruvian sauce incorporating fresh tomatoes, peppers and cilantro. Boiled new potatoes and carrots were served in addition to the black beans. Chicken was roasted crisply and lavished with onions in the Spanish style and for the truly adventurous palate a Portuguese dish of beef tongue simmered in Madeira wine is available.

FLOUNDER IS wrapped in banana leaves for cooking and mussels are enhanced with a sherry wine and fresh ginger sauce. This is a perfect place to get the flavors of Latin cooking in one stop, but if you are homesick, there are also those tacos, enchiladas and tamales. No reservations here. Address is 1801 18th St. NW. Prices for entrees average $12, a la carte about $7.

Phyllis Richman, restaurant critic of The Washington Post, has been exploring Adams-Morgan for a while and calls it the grandest area for ethnic food in Washington. Although I did not go there, she recommends Enriquetta's for Veracruz- and Jalisco-style Mexican food (emphasis on fish preparation). It is at 1832 Columbia Road NW.

Hamburger versatile meat, in all languages of world

By ELAINE WIKSTROM
Hearst News Service

So, you've been looking for a better pljeskavica. You don't have to go to Yugoslavia, where that translates as hamburger, to get one. "The Burger Book" by Honey and Larry Zisman brings any number of hamburger options to you.

Take the Truffle-Shallot Burger, a specialty at the Ritz-Carlton in Boston. Not your style? Maybe the Cranberry-Curry Burger will be the one for you. And to reassure your family that you're making an effort to cut down on red meat, tell them how good the Tofu Burgers you made last night were.

The Zismans have turned out a book that can keep the most ardent hamburger lover eating for a month without ever repeating one single taste bud-bursting experience. Make that three months. This paperback has more than 90 variations on the basic burger.

Here are two of the book's recipes to keep you going until you can get your own copy.

HOT CHILE CON CARNE BURGER

1½ cups chopped onion
½ cup chopped green pepper
½ cup chopped red pepper
1½ tablespoons cooking oil
2 pounds ground beef
¼ teaspoon pepper
1½ teaspoons dried oregano
1 teaspoon ground cumin
1 tablespoon crushed garlic clove
2 tablespoons chili powder
2 cups tomato sauce
1 tablespoon wine vinegar
¼ teaspoon hot pepper flakes

Saute onion, green peper and red pepper in cooking oil, cooking until onion is soft and transparent.

Combine sauteed onion and peppers, meat, pepper, oregano, cumin, garlic and chile powder, mixing thoroughly. Shape into six patties. Broil.

Combine tomato sauce, vinegar and hot pepper flakes. Baste hamburgers several times with mixture while broiling.

CORDON BLEU HAMBURGERS

½ cup bread crumbs
¼ cup milk
2 pounds ground beef
¼ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon celery salt
1 egg
6 slices ham
6 slices Swiss cheese

Soak bread crumbs in milk until softened. Combine softened bread crumbs, meat, pepper, celery salt and egg. Shape into 12 thin patties.

Place one slice of ham and one slice of cheese on top of each of six of the patties. Cover with remaining patties, gently pressing edges together to seal the ham and cheese inside. Broil.

DEAR ABBY

Round robins continue journeys

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR READERS: Florence Brayton of Muscatine, Iowa, asked if her round-robin letter of 57 years duration makes her eligible for the "Guinness Book of World Records." I'm afraid not. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: The Yocom-DeWees family letter was started in 1854 by the eight children of Thomas and Sarah DeWees Yocom. It has been making the rounds for 133 years! It now encompasses 45 families, and takes about a year to make one round. We believe it to be the oldest continuously circulating round-robin letter in the United States. — SALLY C. YOCOM, COLUMBUS, OHIO

DEAR ABBY: Our family circle letter has been circulating for 120 years! It started when my great-grandfather's daughter went away to school during the 1860s. Some letters were written during the Civil War. There are now 15 families contributing to our "family letter." We include newspaper clippings and pictures to keep family members informed and in touch. — NANCI K. ROWE, LAGUNA HILLS, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: The Gibson family letter began in 1908 when Charles and Susan Gibson, who lived near Girard, Ill., wanted to keep in touch with their eight children who had married and left home. The Gibson chain letter is now in its 79th year and circulates annually. Susan has passed on, but Charles has just celebrated his 99th birthday. — HAROLD E. GIBSON, NORMAL, ILL.

DEAR ABBY: The Schenck family's round-robin letter has been making the rounds since 1903. This was written up in "Reader's Digest" in September 1981. The Schenk family reunion has met annually for the last 75 years. — DOROTHY ELLISON WESTPHAL, LINCOLN, NEB.

DEAR ABBY: The Mason family circle letter has been circulating for 99 years. It was started by my great-great-grandparents, John Lane and Sarah Deel Mason. This could be some kind of record. — CELIA O'CONNOR, SAN DIEGO

DEAR ABBY: In 1907, my mother went from Marlboro, Vt., to Montezuma, Iowa, to live with an aunt and attend high school. She started a family round-robin so all family members would be aware of what was happening in the lives of relatives. Mother died in 1984 after writing faithfully for 77 years. Now in its 80th year, our round-robin flies annually from California to Colorado to New York to Vermont to Wyoming. — ELIZABETH BRADLEY CASE, FORT COLLINS, COLO.

DEAR ABBY: My mother's round-robin letter began in 1914 when eight high school chums from Pomeroy, Iowa, desired to keep in touch. The letters continued until Mother died in 1978 at the age of 82. By that time, only two members were living. What a treasury of information about her life and mine were contained in those letters. — J.J. KNELL, LOS ALTOS, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: Thirteen of us girls graduated from the U. of Neb. in 1923 and started a round-robin letter. Six are still living as are two husbands. An interesting fact: All 13 girls were married and there have been no divorces! — BLANCHE GRAMLICH CAMPBELL, LOS ANGELES

DEAR ABBY: Eight classmates who graduated from the U. of Cincinnati in 1917 started a round-robin. Today there are three survivors, and we still keep in touch. I am 91. — LAURA McINTYRE BROWN, LAKELAND, FLA.

THE BUTCHER

'Butcher's butcher' provides recipes of favorite dishes

By MERLE ELLIS

Mel Grimes is a butcher's butcher, a far cry from the man who comes out from behind the three-tier meat-case when you ring the red bell at your local supermarket. Mel knows the meat business from one end to the other. At 14, he was grinding and stuffing country-style sausage and making scrapple after school for Schriber Brothers, the largest retail butcher in Baltimore. At 17, he was the youngest piece work boner on the floor for Armour and Company in the Union Stock Yards in Chicago. In Kansas City, before World War II, he and two partners ran their own successful hotel and restaurant meat supply company, and after a stint in the military he was general manager of a $12 million-a-year meat brokerage firm buying and selling meat all over the country.

I first knew of Mel, though I didn't really know him then, in the early 1950s when I was in the Army, stationed at Ford Ord, California, defending the beaches of Carmel-by-the-Sea. Mel then operated a beautiful little meat market in Carmel.

I met him again, and really, recently at a C.A.M.P. (California Association of Meat Processors) convention. We reminisced about Carmel and I told him that I thought he made the best pate de campagne that I had ever tasted and a sauerkraut salad that almost used to bring tears to the eyes of a country boy from Nebraska.

The recipes that follow arrived in the mail a week or so ago. Thanks Mel!

PATE DE CAMPAGNE

Ingredients:
1 pound boneless pork butt
1 pound boneless veal
¾ pound fresh pork fat (from the loin, fresh ham, or shoulder)
½ cup dried mushrooms
¼ cup amontillado sherry
1 pound chicken livers, trimmed
6 cloves garlic, coarsely chopped
3 eggs - large
¼ cup heavy cream
½ cup cognac
3 teaspoons salt
2 teaspoons white pepper
½ teaspoon allspice
½ teaspoon cinnamon
½ cup flour
½ cup pistachio nuts, coarsely chopped
¾ to 1 pound of bacon
Parsley sprigs or watercress to garnish

Soak mushrooms in sherry for a minimum of 20 minutes. Packaged dried mushrooms can be bought in most markets. In fact, retail meat markets, delicatessens, and retail sausage kitchens should stock them.

Grind together the pork, veal and pork fat with the mushrooms, adding any unabsorbed juices surrounding the mushrooms through the ground meat plate.

In an electric blender, place the chicken livers, garlic, eggs, cream, cognac and puree. Gradually add to the blender about one-third of the ground meat mixture.

Blend in the seasonings and combine the blender contents with the rest of the meat mixture in a large mixing bowl. Blend or mix thoroughly.

Sprinkle in the flour, mixing well and stir in the pistachio nuts. Line the bottom of a 10-cup loaf pan (10x5x4-inch) with bacon slices. Line the long sides, then the short sides, letting the ends hang over. Reserve some bacon to complete the covering of the top of the loaf.

Pour the mixture into the bacon-lined pan carefully, gently patting to avoid air holes. Cover tightly with a double thickness of foil. Place in a larger shallow pan filled with hot water to come halfway up the sides of the loaf pan. Set in a preheated 400-degree oven for 3 hours. Replace hot water as it boils away. Remove the foil and continue baking until top is lightly browned, 15 or 20 minutes.

Remove from oven. Do not pour off juices. Place a clean oiled piece of foil lightly on top and weight with a brick or a slightly smaller pan with some heavy objects in it. When loaf is completely cool, remove weight, cover well with foil and refrigerate for two days. To unmold, run knife around edges, hold pan briefly in inch or two of hot water. Slide onto platter brown side up.

MEL'S SAUERKRAUT SALAD

2 (15-to-15-1/2 oz.) cans sauerkraut, drained
1 cup chopped fresh green peppers
1 cup chopped green onions, white and green parts
1 small can sliced water chestnuts
1 small jar or can pimentos, chopped, or fresh sweet red peppers

Mix all the above ingredients together in a suitable container.

Bring to a boil a mixture of ⅓ cup water, ⅓ cup oil, ⅔ cup vinegar, and 1¼ cups sugar. Turn down and simmer for two or three minutes.

Pour over vegetables, mix and cool. Will keep for several weeks and flavor improves.

'Concasse': Flavorful relish accents meats, poultry

Associated Press

A concasse is similar to a relish — an intensely flavored fruit or vegetable mixture. Like a relish it's served in small amounts with meat or poultry.

TOMATO CINNAMON CONCASSE
1½ pounds ripe tomatoes (4 medium), peeled, seeded and chopped
1 tablespoon dried minced onion
1 tablespoon parsley flakes
1 tablespoon red wine vinegar
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon sugar
¼ teaspoon ground cinnamon
⅛ teaspoon pepper

In medium bowl combine tomato, onion, parsley, vinegar, salt, sugar, cinnamon and pepper. Let stand at least 10 minutes to blend flavors. Serve at room temperature with meat, poultry or fish. Store, covered, in refrigerator. Makes about 2 cups.

Nutrition information per serving: 10 cal., 2 g carbo., 72 mg sodium. U.S. RDA: 10 percent vit. A.

Fruit tops melon

Associated Press

Here's a summer dessert that's full of contrasts. The fruit is both warm and cool; the sauce is both sweet and tart. The combination is spectacular.

HONEYDEW MELON WITH SAUTEED FRUIT
3 tablespoons margarine or butter
1 tablespoon lime juice
1 tablespoon honey
2 medium bananas, bias-sliced into ¼-inch pieces
2 peaches or 4 apricots, peeled, pitted and coarsely chopped
½ of a honeydew melon or cantaloupe, peeled, seeded and cut into thin slices
Lime peel (optional)
¼ cup pine nuts or slivered almonds, toasted

In 10-inch skillet melt margarine. Stir in lime juice and honey. Add bananas and peaches. Heat and stir about 2 minutes or until heated through. On 4 plates fan melon slices. Top with fruit mixture, lime peel and nuts. Makes 4 servings.

Country singer makes 'corny' career move

New York Times News Service

ATLANTA — Not so long ago, singer-songwriter Diane Pfeifer scored with her own record on the country music charts.

Now she's crossed over to pop. Popcorn, that is.

The proof is in the pudding or, more precisely, the popcorn mixed with Greek olives or chow mein noodles that she recommends in her new book, "For Popcorn Lovers Only" (Strawberry Patch/Marmac, $11.95).

Whether the offbeat cartoon-illustrated book turns out to be Pfeifer's recipe for success remains to be seen. But she has succeeded, at least, in dishing out a plethora of other recipes all designed, as one wag put it, to transform the date-bait of movie houses into genuine yuppie chow.

Consider, if you dare, her tempting, deep-dish "Chicago Pan Pizza Pop," with popcorn replacing the usual doughy crust. Dream (or even have nightmares) about her delicate "Georgia Peach Crunch," a baked mixture of peach preserves, brown sugar, butter and, of course, popcorn.

The 36-year-old creator of these corny concoctions is best known around Atlanta as an entertainer who started her career crooning in restaurant bars. But once the idea for the book popped into her head, she put all other projects on the back burner.

AFTER ALL, Pfeifer explained one recent morning, popcorn has been a lifelong passion, maybe even more than a lifelong one. Just last Christmas, she said, her mother confided "that when she was pregnant with me and my twin sister, she craved popcorn instead of pickles."

Four months — and 75 pounds of popcorn — later, she started writing, and although just now going out to chance to perform at Opryland in Nashville, Tenn.

That exposure led to a nine-month stint as a touring backup singer for country great Tammy Wynette and eventually a solo album — appropriately called, "Diane Pfeifer" — on the Capitol label.

Her single, "Play Something We Could Love To," broke into the Top 40. But since then, she has scored even larger successes as a songwriter with more than 40 of her 300 songs selected stores around the nation, the book already has garnered favorable reactions, at least in places that count like Vinton, Iowa, the popcorn capital of the world. Sponsors of the annual Popcorn City Days festival there were so impressed that they invited the writer to serve as honorary princess for their June bash.

Among the recipes in the 153-page volume, "The Godpopper," made with garlic and Parmesan cheese sauce, is the author's favorite. But the biggest hit with her friends, she said, is "Texas Chili Toss," a dish to be eaten only by people who have memorized the fire department's phone number beforehand.

FOR MOST of her adult life, however, Pfeifer has aimed for different kinds of hits — musical ones. As a college undergraduate in St. Louis, she began performing with her twin, Suzanne, in an all-girl rock 'n' roll band, The Sweet Young Things. When she moved to Atlanta in 1973, she turned to music full time. Singing in area bars for five years, she shifted toward a country sound and, in 1978, won a WPLO radio "Search of the South" talent contest and a recorded by major stars from Paul Anka to Roy Clark. Two — "Perfect Fool" and "Free to Be Lonely Again," both sung by Debbie Boone — have soared into the charts' Top 15.

For others who, like Diane Pfeifer, are glad that someone recently popped the question, here's how to make a Wedding Popcake.

The ingredients are simple: eight cups of popcorn and one 16-ounce can of prepared vanilla icing.

Then, as Pfeifer writes:

Place popcorn in large bowl.

Melt 1 cup icing in medium saucepan over low heat.

Pour over popcorn. Stir to coat evenly.

Press into well-greased 8-inch cake pan. Refrigerate 1 hour. Turn out onto plate. Frost sides and top with remaining icing. Place miniature wedding couple on top. Make more layers for bigger weddings.

The author says the recipe yields 8 to 10 slices.

With most of her dishes, she includes suggestions for cutting calories. But with this one, she writes, "Hey, you're married now. Why worry about calories?"

Turkey cold cuts tasty

By JONATHAN PROBBER
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — We know that even when you are in the most desperate hurry, you do not buy those packaged cold cuts that are the province of convenience stores and refrigerated meat sections of supermarkets. Why, you're probably so righteous that you roast turkey for sandwiches, use red-leaf lettuce instead of iceberg and bake your own bread for sandwiches.

But if you should ever buy packaged cold cuts (say your mate is being held by terrorists who demand a quick salami sandwich), remember that some meats are better choices than others. Generally speaking, these will have labels trumpeting the fact that the product is lower in fat than regular packaged cold cuts. Often these products are turkey disguised as something else.

Louis Rich seems especially adept at this, using turkey to imitate a variety of cold cuts. Swift-Eckrich markets a similar line of all-turkey cold cuts under the Butterball label. Turkey products can at least save you fat and sometimes salt, the chief enemies lurking in slices of pink meat.

A 28-gram slice of bologna made of beef and pork (Oscar Meyer in this instance), has 90 calories, 72 of those from fat. That same slice also has 300 milligrams of sodium and 15 milligrams of cholesterol. Clearly, this is not a sandwich meat to make a life with if diet is any concern.

Smoked turkey breast from Oscar Meyer, on the other hand, contains 20 calories in a 21-gram slice, with less than half of those calories from fat. Salt is still a problem though, at 290 milligrams of sodium.

Despite its high sodium content, you still have to admire what can be done with turkey. Louis Rich's Turkey Cotto Salami has that flecked, mottled look characteristic of salami, but it is made of turkey, turkey hearts and water, plus the usual variety of spices and preservatives. A 21-gram slice has 40 calories, 27 of those from fat. The Louis Rich turkey bologna has 45 calories in each 21-gram slice, 36 from fat.

The calorie-cutting champion is turkey ham, made from cured thigh meat. A 21-gram slice (about ¾ ounce), has 25 calories, 9 of those from fat.

Turkey meat has also found a home in the hot dog. A typical turkey dog is about 100 calories, compared with about 145 calories for a hot dog of beef and pork. But read the labels carefully; many turkey dogs derive the same percentage of calories from fat as do standard hot dogs, or approximately 75 percent.

Remember that processed cured meats (cold cuts, bacon, hot dogs and the like), contain sodium nitrite, which inhibits the growth of botulism and provides the red color we associate with cured meats.

Sodium nitrite also combines with stomach chemicals and chemicals in other foods to form nitrosamines, which are known to cause cancer in animals.

And cured meats often contain vitamin C (ascorbic acid) or a substance called erythorbate, both of which inhibit the formation of nitrosamines.

If you wish to skip the salt and nitrites, the best route may be to buy a fresh whole turkey or turkey breast, roast it yourself and set it in the refrigerator.

Once ensconced on its shelf, it will be sliced, picked at and torn apart for sandwiches, snacks, cold salads or whatever else you can imagine. Not as easy as snatching a little package off a hook in the refrigerated section, but you get points for effort.

NOW APPEARING BARBARA HUMPHREY

The best way to describe this beautiful, blonde entertainer is style...And maybe energetic, sensitive, animated, creative, flirtatious, and last but definitely not least, talented.

Miss Humphrey's repertoire extends a vast selection of material from the 40's to the 80's. Perhaps her forte is the gusty blues and jazz tunes of such greats as Billy Holiday, Fats Waller, Nat King Cole, Dinah Washington and Gershwin. But her style translates equally as well on renditions of her favorite Motown artists: Sam Cooke, Marvin Gaye, Odis Redding and Aretha Franklin, not to mention such country greats as Patsy Cline and Hank Williams. Barbara loves to sing the soulful sounds of the 80's from artists like Whitney Houston, Anita Baker, Al Jarreau and Sade. Undoubtedly though, Miss Humphrey shines her brightest when performing her own original material. Lyrically moving and musically "finger-snappin' and foot-tappin'" good.

Dollar mixed

LONDON (AP) — The dollar turned in a mixed performance in light European trading early today. Gold bullion prices were little changed.

Selected midmorning dollar rates in Europe compared with rates late Tuesday:

—1.8964 West German marks, down from 1.8970

—1.5760 Swiss francs, down from 1.5770

—6.3280 French francs, up from 6.3275

—2.1355 Dutch guilders, up from 2.1350

—1,374.50 Italian lire, unchanged

—1.3300 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3282

The British pound dipped to $1.5709 from $1.5715.

The dollar edged up in Tokyo, closing at 151.40 Japanese yen, compared with 151.17 yen Tuesday. In London trading later today, the dollar was quoted at 151.35 yen.

GOLD

London's major bullion houses fixed a recommended gold price at midmorning of $461 a troy ounce, unchanged from late Tuesday.

Gold was bid at $460.25 in Zurich, down 25 cents.

Earlier, the metal fell to a closing bid of $460.49 in Hong Kong, down from $464.28.

Silver bullion was quoted in London at a bid of $7.79 a troy ounce, up 2 cents from late Tuesday.

STOCKS

Dow soars

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market's dizzying ascent into the record books accelerated in a stampede of buying Tuesday, sending the Dow Jones industrial average to its seventh record close in 11 sessions.

The closely watched index soared 44.64 points to close at 2,680.48 as traders swarmed to buy just about everything in sight, fearful that they might miss out on a rally that shows no sign of letting up, analysts said.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange hit a stunning 278.13 million shares. That was second only to the record 302.39 million shares that traded hands on Jan. 23 this year, and far above the 266.54 million shares of April 14, now the third-highest trading day in history.

Monday's Big Board volume totaled 187.20 million shares.

On the NYSE, advancing issues outpacing decliners by about 2 to 1, with 1,034 stocks up, 562 down and 401 unchanged.

FDIC nearing completion of First City holding firm rescue

By NATHANIEL C. NASH
New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Federal regulators are close to finding a buyer for the troubled First City Bancorporation of Texas in a deal that could include a federal financial assistance package worth almost $1 billion, government officials said Tuesday.

The officials, who asked not be identified, said the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. was in the last stages of negotiations with several investor groups that have expressed interest in buying the $12.5 billion institution, which is experiencing heavy losses on real estate and energy loans.

The kind of arrangement described by the government officials is a new approach by the FDIC to dealing with large troubled banks.

For any purchase of First City, a substantial infusion of capital by the FDIC would be included, but that does not mean the agency would pay $1 billion out of its $18 billion fund. Rather, a large portion of the rescue package would be made up of guarantees against possible future losses. This approach is similar but not identical to arrangements the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. has made in many cases in the past.

Formerly, the FDIC usually removed all the bad loans from an insolvent bank and sold the remaining good loans to an acquiring investor. But more recently, as the FDIC has become burdened with liquidating these troubled assets, the agency has sought to get the acquiring institutions to take on that responsibiluty in return for an assurance from the FDIC against some losses on those assets.

According to one official, this is one type of arrangement under consideration for First City. The official expected the FDIC to announce a final agreement "within a few days."

Alan Whitney, a spokesman for the agency, would not comment on the negotitations. A rough outline of the rescue plan was first reported Tuesday in The Wall Street Journal.

For months, the government agency that insures deposits of up to $100,000 at the nation's commercial banks has been trying to find a buyer for First City. It has been considerably hampered because a law giving it authority to sell a large insolvent bank across state lines had expired.

But on Monday, President Reagan signed into law a banking bill that reinstated those emergency regulatory powers.

In addition, the banking law also permits the FDIC to operate a failing bank for up to three years, while it finds a buyer and begins to sort out the problems of the institutions. The agency welcomed this provision because it will avoid so-called fire sales of banks and give the FDIC and prospective buyers more time to calculate the real financial condition of an insolvent bank.

Among the investors named as currently negotiating with the FDIC to purchase First City are A. Robert Abboud, former chairman of the First Chicago Corp.; the Bank of Scotland, and MCorp, another troubled Texas bank holding company based in Dallas.

Citicorp is also said to have expressed interest in First City.

Officials also said that an investor group advised by William M. Isaac, former chairman of the FDIC, was actively involved in negotiations for the bank. A colleague from Isaac's Secura Group denied reports that Isaac was part of an investor group, but would not elaborate.

Last spring, First City announced that in any merger agreement, it would need hundreds of millions of dollars in new capital to restore the banking institution to health.

After reporting a $402 million loss in 1986, it posted a $160.9 million loss for the first half of 1987, and its nonperforming loans doubled, from 6.3 percent of loans a year ago to 11.4 percent, or $1.07 billion.

The bank increased its loan-loss reserve to $321.2 million, from $292 million at the end of last year. First City has $394 million in shareholder equity, a 60 percent decline from $974 million at the end of 1985.

Anderson honored as PBPA's Top Hand

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

Two New Mexico residents will play key roles in the presentation of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association's Top Hand award at the association's annual meeting, Aug. 20.

New Mexico Gov. Garrey Carruthers will present the distinguished award to fellow New Mexican Robert O. Anderson, chairman of Diamond A Cattle Co. and Hondo Oil & Gas Co. of Roswell, N.M.

The Top Hand Award, characterized by a bronzed work glove mounted on a wooden plaque, is awarded each year to an individual who shown unusual dedication to the petroleum industry.

Anderson, retired chairman and CEO of Arco Oil & Gas Co., has been a force in the petroleum industry since 1939 when he started with American Mineral Spirits Co., a division of Pure Oil Co. In 1941 he acquired a substantial interest in the refinery at Artesia, N.M. During the next 15 years, he bought and expanded six refineries and purchased the Wilshire Oil Co. of California which he later sold to Gulf Oil Corp.

The original name of Malco Refineries was changed to Hondo Oil & Gas Co. in 1959 when Continental Oil Co. acquired the Artesia Refinery. On Oct. 1, 1963, Atlantic Refining Co. acquired all the outstanding stock of Hondo of which Anderson was president. He was elected to the board of directors of Atlantic Refining Co. (now Arco) in 1963; was named chairman of the executive committee the following year and in 1965 was elected chairman of the board of Arco. He remained chairman and CEO until 1982, when he resigned to form his own independent oil company in New Mexico.

Anderson has also served the petroleum industry and business world as chairman of the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas and as a board director of Chase Manhattan Bank and Colombia Broadcasting System, Carter Hawley Stores Inc., Weyerhaeuser Co.

In political affairs, he has served as a member of the National Petroleum Council and was a member of the Republican National Committee.

Gov. Garrey Carruthers is a native New Mexican and assumed office in January of 1987. He has a PhD in economics, and was a White House fellow under President Gerald Ford, and was later appointed to serve on the White House Fellow Screening Commission.

Returning from the fellowship in Washington, he served as Director of New Mexico Water Resources Research Institute until 1977, when he was elected chairman of the New Mexico Republican Party.

Two years later he returned to Washington D.C. to serve as Assistant Secretary of Interior under President Ronald Reagan. He remained in that position until 1984, when he returned to New Mexico to seek the Republican nomination for governor.

Previous winners of the Top Hand award include: Stanley Moore (deceased), president and founder of Drilco; Jno P. Butler, chairman emeritus First RepublicBank Midland; Eddie Chiles, chairman Western Co.; Ben Alexander, president DA&S Well Service; Ed Thompson, former executive vice president PBPA; Charles Perry, founder Perry Gas Companies; John Reid, Shell Oil Co. retired.

MMS expects better results at offshore sale

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — More oil and gas companies are turning their attention to new waterbottoms for exploration because of the promise of higher prices for natural gas prices and lower prices for acreage, officials say.

The Minerals Management Service opens bids today for federal leases on waterbottoms off Texas.

"It looks like a good sale," Barney Congdon, a spokesman for MMS, said Tuesday. He said more than 80 companies were expected to make bids.

This is the fifth time this parcel of 5,079 blocks offshore Texas has been up for bid in an areawide lease sale. A lease block typically covers 5000 acres.

The government estimates reserves could be as high as 1.87 trillion cubic feet of natural gas and 130 million barrels of oil.

Last year 52 bids were opened during a sale that lasted 15 minutes and drew only 120 oilmen from 16 companies.

The sale in the Marriott Hotel Grand Ballroom was expected to last more than two hours.

Congdon said many smaller companies, known as independents, are participating in this sale because the government has lowered the minimum acceptable bid from $150 an acre to $25 an acre.

Economist Allen Brooks of Offshore Data Services, a Houston, Texas, newsletter service, attributed the interest to the outlook for the natural gas market.

"Everybody is betting the gas market will be a lot better in the next few years," Brooks said.

Wells drilled offshore Texas produce more natural gas than crude oil.

"We hope the gas bubble is getting close to bursting and prices will increase," said Monte Richards, regional exploration manager for Amoco Production Co.

Acreage in deeper waters, which companies can hold and explore for eight to 10 years.

Wagner, Brown manufacturing affiliate formed

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

Wagner & Brown have announced the formation of a new manufacturing affiliate, InstaMelt Systems Inc., which will be headquartered in Midland.

The thrust of the new enterprise, according to the Midland-based oil and gas partnership, will be to provide technology and equipment to the plastics industry. It will manufacture and market the InstaMelt rotary extruder developed by Granville Hahn, head of Big Spring-based Permian Research, a Wagner & Brown affiliate, to industry.

The rotary extruder is designed to take raw plastic resin and convert it to usable sheet form.

Roy Serpa, who has been involved in the plastics industry for more than 20 years, has been named president and chief executive officer of the new corporation. Serpa served as chairman of the board of Gulf Fabricated Plastics Products Co., a subsidiary of Gulf Oil Corp. in Houston, and as director of commercial development for Borg-Warner Chemicals Inc.

Serpa

A native of New Bedford, Mass., he received his BS degree in chemistry from Southeastern Massachusetts University and an MBA from the University of Pittsburgh. He currently serves as an advisory trustee to the Free Enterprise Education Center and is a member of the Management Advisory Board of the College of Business Administration at Texas A&M University.

Wall Street's herd instinct proves difficult to resist

By JOHN C. GIVEN

NEWS ANALYSIS

NEW YORK (AP) — When it comes to understanding the stock market, sometimes the best solution is simply not to try, simply go with the flow.

That's what increasing numbers of Wall Streeters have been doing lately, as the market has continued to resist the most fundamental law of gravity: that what goes up must come down.

Sooner or later, it's bound to happen, of course. But for now, analysts say, a number of factors have come together to create an irresistible upward force that has virtually taken on a life of its own.

And in doing so, this has generated a surge of stock prices that continues to confound even the most experienced observers.

Since Jan. 1, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks has increased by 784.53 points, or 41.4 percent, sending stocks to levels that, in previous times, would long have resulted in a corrective sell-off.

Capping the rally Tuesday was a 44.64-point runup to 2,680.48: the seventh record high in 11 sessions and the second-consecutive jump of more than 40 points.

Commerce to begin using Canadian trading figures

By TOM RAUM
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration has found a way to cut the nation's annual trade deficit by $10 billion. It will start using Canadian numbers.

Commerce Department officials said Tuesday that Canada does a better job of keeping track of U.S. truck shipments across the 3,000-mile land border than the U.S. Customs Service does.

So, beginning this week, the agency will begin plugging Canadian import statistics into its monthly tabulation of the U.S. merchandise trade deficit. The figures for June are due out Friday.

The result should be an immediate improvement of about $800 million a month in exports to Canada, at least on paper, said Robert Ortner, under secretary of Commerce for economic affairs.

The agency also is revising its trade figures back to 1970 based on a reconciliation of the U.S. figures with those from Canada. The result will be smaller official assessments of past U.S. trade deficits.

Thus, with the stroke of a pen, this nation's record 1986 trade deficit of $166.3 billion is now a $156.2 billion shortfall — still a record.

According to administration officials, U.S. truckers are more honest with Canadian authorities on what they're taking into that country than they are with the Customs Service on what they're taking out of the United States.

The statistical shuffling could have political repercussions as the administration seeks to soften trade-restraint legislation now before a House-Senate conference committee.

Travel skills now being taught in Midland

Pitts

Before, if you wanted training in the travel industry, it required going to a distant city and spending money on room and board as well as training. Now, one can learn the basic skills required by airlines, travel agencies, cruise lines, tour guides, rental car companies and hotels, right here in Midland.

Don Luttrell and Dorothy Blackwell, owner of Envoye Travel, have formed TRADEWINDS INTERNATIONAL ACADEMY, a travel training school, at 1301 W. Florida in the Blackwell Building. The academy will offer day and evening classes and will provide a foundation in the American Airlines SABRE computerized reservation system.

Training will also include an internship with a working agency, and one-on-one assistance in placement upon graduation.

The travel school will also offer a number of tuition options to interested students.

OTHER NEW BUSINESSES ON THE SCENE this week include: THE ROUND HOUSE DEPOT, 3720 Edwards, just south of The Midlander, says it will open Aug. 29 and will feature seafood and smoked prime rib. The owners are Sid and Samantha Clark who own Catfish Station in Odessa. According to management, the restaurant will also have an extensive oyster bar with fresh, ice cold oysters on the half-shell and jumbo shrimp in the shuck....Set to open sometime in September is SOUTH POINT SEAFOOD CO. at old Ocean's Seafood location on North Big Spring....A new sign spotted on Mission Square is that of ASSET PLUS, a management company which is apparently taking care of the place now days....Midlander Mark Kuzkas is leaving the scene to become an independent CHICK-FIL-A operator at Golden Triangle Mall in Denton. He has been manager of Walgreen's in Odessa since 1978....DAISY'S, a children's consignment store, has opened in the La Villita Shopping Center next to Designer Secrets. Owned by Daisy Hobson, the store offers children's pre-owned clothing from infant to pre-teens as well as maternity wear.

A new name is being planned for an old Texas company. THE HORNE COMPANY which manages four major properties in Midland, including One Petroleum Center, Western Building, Xerox Building and Garfield Plaza is being sold to CUSHMAN-WAKEFIELD, the nation's second largest commerical property managers. Terms of the sale are under negotiation and should be completed by the end of this month. Horne Company, which was founded in 1926 in Houston, employs 13 in Midland.

•••

This business has a new idea. Eddy Wilmon, owner of HAPPY DAYS-DAYLIGHT DOUGHNUTS at 315 Midland Drive is busy these days, carving himself a new niche in the local pastry market.

Cashing in on the growing health awareness, Wilson is producing no-salt, no-sugar yeast rolls and wholewheat yeast rolls for individuals on restricted diets. He already has orders from Midland Memorial and other local hospitals for the rolls, and is looking to expand in other directions.

"We had a lot of calls for these type of rolls, and set about to develop a receipe" says Wilson. Sweet teeth are satisfied by a liquid sweetner Wilson uses in the receipe.

•••

Looking to find the receipe for future sales, K MART, the nation's second largest retailer, has identified several emerging trends around the American home. Among those trends:

- Larger and more accessible kitchens are becoming the center of acitivity in the home, and despite fast foods, 88 percent of all meals are still cooked at home.
- More Americans, particularly baby-boomers, tend to practice what experts call "cocooning," or wrapping themselves in the security of home.

These trends, say K mart marketing experts, will have a real effect on the type of merchandise in demand. And to make sure it properly capitalizes on the trend K mart has become the first major retailer to hire its own home entertainment and lifestyle consultant.

Nationally syndicated columnist, and author of five best selling books, Martha Stewart, will join the retailer to advise women on lifestyle, cooking and home fashions.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Single-premium life one estate option

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I am told I can reduce the size of the taxable estate I will leave when I die by putting a large amount of money into single-premium life insurance. Is this true?

Doyle

A. Yes, assuming the insurance policy is set up properly. The proceeds from insurance policies on your life — single premium — or any other type — are not included in your estate for federal estate tax purposes, providing you have no ownership of the policy.

This means you can't have any of the policy's "incidents of ownership," such as powers to change the beneficiary, surrender or cancel the policy, transfer its ownership, revoke an assignment of the policy, or obtain a loan against the policy.

Summed up, in order to accomplish what you have in mind, you cannot own the policy or have any control over it. You can arrange things that way either by naming someone else as owner when you take out the policy or by irrevocably assigning the policy's ownership to someone else after the policy is issued.

If you have incidents of ownership in the policy at the time you breathe your last, the taxing authorities can claim the policy was part of your estate.

These rules apply to federal estate taxes, as well as to the inheritance and/or estate taxes of many states. Because "death tax" rules vary from state to state, it's impossible to print the regulations for all 50 states here. You would be wise to check your state's rules.

Unless you're going to leave a bundle to someone other than your spouse, you shouldn't be concerned about federal estate tax. A husband can leave to his wife everything he owns and a wife can leave to her husband everything she owns free from federal estate tax. Past that, you can leave up to $600,000 to other people, without any federal estate tax bite.

Also, surrendering all incidents of owners of a single-premium life insurance policy would negate the big appeal of that type of policy — your right to borrow the policy's earnings, without paying federal income tax.

Q. I am a 74-year-old woman in good health. I have six grandchildren I want to provide for after my death with insurance on my life. Should I take out six policies, one for each grandchild, or one policy to be divided among the six?

A. The cost of six policies almost certainly would be higher. If you go ahead with your plan, you should save premium dollars by getting one policy and naming your six grandchildren equal beneficiaries.

At your age, you might have difficulty obtaining life insurance. Even if you can get a policy, the premiums would be terribly high. If your good health provides you with an extra long life, you'll end up paying more in premiums than the policy pays out in death benefits.

Rather than put money into an insurance policy, I suggest you sock it away and leave it to those grandchildren in your will.

Q. My whole life insurance policy pays a dividend each year. I have never reported that dividend on my income tax return. One tax preparer advises me I am correct. Another tax preparer says I have to report that dividend as taxable income.

Which tax preparer should I believe?

A. The first one. That insurance dividend is not income. It represents part of your premiums being returned to you because the insurance company had good "mortality experience" — meaning fewer insured people died than the actuarial tables anticipated. Insurance critics contend that such dividends result from premiums being too high in the first place.

Do not confuse those dividends with interest on dividends. If you leave the dividends with the insurance company to earn interest, that interest is taxable income. The insurance company is required to send you and the Internal Revenue Service a Form 1099-INT each year listing the amount of interest you are required to report on your income tax return.

For the 50th time this year, the Dow Jones Industrial average closed at a record high on Tuesday, after rocketing through the 2,600 barrier on Monday, the average gained another 44.64 points, its seventh largest daily gain ever.

Trading volume on the New York Stock Exchange totaled a stunning 278.13 million shares, second only to the record 302.39 million shares trading hands on Jan. 23, and far above the 266.54 million shares of April 14, now the third-highest trading day in history.

"After 23 years in this business, I'm scared to death," said Jack Baker, who is in charge of block trading at the Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc. securities firm. "I must admit I've been through many cycles over recent times, and I can't remember anything like this kind of market stampede."

Analysts say that one major factor contributing to the rally has been an abundance of cash with nowhere to go.

They say stocks have become an attractive investment because oil prices are likely to inflame inflation, which hurts fixed-income securities, and interest rates likely are headed up.

This is especially true for foreign investors, who have become increasingly confident that the dollar has stopped falling, and thus will be unlikely to diminish the value of their holdings.

Texas bank fraud unit begins probe

By ANDREW MANGAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas clearly leads the nation in bank fraud, and a U.S. Justice Department task force in Dallas has begun what is expected to be a multi-year investigation of financial institutions in the state, FBI officials said.

The FBI has sent 20 agents to bolster the staff already assigned to the task force by the Dallas bureau and a Justice Department official said 15 prosecutors have been assigned.

"This problem has grown and our commitment to it has grown dramatically since the early 1980s," said Jeffrey Jamar, the FBI White Collar Crime section chief in Washington.

"Since 1982, the FBI has more than doubled its commitment and the number of cases has more than doubled. The number of convictions has also grown dramatically and will continue to grow."

Fraud cases are occurring nationwide, Jamar said, but they have been identified in areas that have experienced economic downturns, such as Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana, where the oil industry was rocked by a fall in price last year.

"During a boom time everything gets paid off, but when that boom ends everything comes crashing down," he said.

Kansas, where farmers have been hard hit in recent years, and California, where real estate values have taken a dive, are also high in fraud cases, but Texas is clearly in a lead position at this point, Jamar said.

"Dallas has over 200 cases that we consider major bank fraud cases. The arbitrary number we use to define a major bank fraud case is over $100,000," he said.

Investigators will be working closely with the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, which regulates thrifts, and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., which regulates banks, to identify fraud and prepare criminal cases.

Undercover operations, tips from the regulators and victims, and computer analyses of lending practices will be part of the federal assault on bank fraud, Jamar said.

One of the more common methods of fraud is the practice of making loans based on faulty real estate appraisals, Jamar said.

The term is "flip," where ownership of a certain parcel of land is changed several times and each time there is an appraisal that artificially increases the value of the property.

Another practice is to temporarily clean up balance sheets by trading off bad loans to another institution before an examination by federal regulators.

"The term they use is to get a cow for a dead horse," Jamar said.

A third common fraud practice is called "link financing," where an institution gets a large amount of money from a source to put on its books with the condition that it be lent to specified, usually unqualified, borrowers.

"And the money given is all in CDs (certificates of deposit), so that if the bank fails it's all federally insured," Jamar said.

Investigators are seeing both professional criminals and financial officers who are seduced by an opportunity to make quick money involved in the fraud cases.

Greenspan takes over as head of Fed

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the first time in eight years, America has a new head of its central bank, a position often described as the second most powerful job in the country.

Alan Greenspan, a respected conservative economist, was sworn in Tuesday as the 13th chairman of the Federal Reserve to replace Paul Volcker, who declined to be nominated for a third four-year term.

Greenspan, who took the oath of office from Vice President George Bush, was praised by President Reagan as an "economist's economist" who will "bring all his skill to bear to the task of promoting continued economic growth while keeping inflation low."

Greenspan, a millionaire consultant to some of the country's largest corporations, previously served in government as chairman of President Ford's Council of Economic Advisers.

Reagan used his brief remarks at the swearing-in to give a pitch for his pro-growth view that keeping the recovery alive and holding down inflation can both be accomplished.

"Keeping down inflation and sustaining economic growth is not an either-or proposition," Reagan said. "Today, low inflation and economic growth can and must go hand in hand."

Greenspan did not disagree with this view, but he did use his brief comments to joke about the variety of forces which at any time can buffet America's $4 trillion economy.

He said he foresaw an environment over the next four years of "inflation, which always stays put; the stock market, which is always a bull; the dollar, which is always stable; interest rates, which always stay low, and employment, which stays high."

Greenspan said he also wanted to thank "those who have the capability of repealing the laws of arithmetic" so that these sometimes conflicting goals can be obtained.

Greenspan said he was only sorry that former Fed Chairman Arthur Burns, "my mentor for 35 years," could not be present for the ceremony. Burns died recently after heart surgery.

Both Greenspan and Reagan praised Volcker for his accomplishments over the past eight years in subduing inflation, which was soaring at double-digit rates when he was appointed by President Carter in 1979.

The mention of Volcker's name brought sustained applause from the audience filling the East Room, which included many members of Reagan's Cabinet and top U.S. business leaders.

In addition to Volcker, other former Fed chairmen who attended the ceremony were G. William Miller, who turned the job over to Volcker in 1979 when Carter appointed him Treasury secretary, and William McChesney Martin, now 80, who served as Fed chairman from 1951 to 1970.

Greenspan was expected to spend the next several days meeting with Fed officials including Volcker, who has agreed to remain as a consultant for the next month to brief Greenspan.

The new Fed chief is expected to be as tough an inflation-fighter as Volcker. Officials said they don't expect any dramatic changes in Fed monetary policy over the next several months unless the dollar begins falling again or unless oil prices start to skyrocket because of trouble in the Persian Gulf.

His real test may not come until next year, many economists believe, when the Fed may be called on to dampen an overheated economy during a presidential election year.

Greenspan, a long-time adviser to Republican presidents, pledged during his Senate confirmation that he would resist any political pressure to pump up money growth when inflationary forces were building.

He is expected to follow a radically different approach than Volcker on the issue of banking deregulation.

During his Senate confirmation hearings, Greenspan indicated he would be much more willing to reduce or eliminate regulatory limits which restrict banks from entering into other areas of commerce such as insurance, real estate and securities underwriting.

However, Greenspan may not get the chance to carry through on his views for a while because of a provision in the new banking law which blocks further expansion of banking powers until March of next year.

Volcker, who has been in government for nearly 30 of the past 35 years, is expected to have offers to make millions of dollars on Wall Street, although he has made no announcement of his future plans beyond saying he will serve as the unpaid head of a new commission formed to promote government service.

Hispanics set menudo cookoff

From Staff Reports

The Midland Hispanic Chamber voted Tuesday night at its regular board meeting to sponsor a menudo cookoff in October.

Named the Mex-Tex Championship Menudo Cookoff, the cookoff will be a cross-cultural event designed to foster cooperation between hispanic and anglo groups, and to assist the Midland economy by bringing out-of-town contestants and visitors to Midland for a weekend.

Elvia Hernandez, executive vice president of the Hispanic Chamber, said contestants and represenatives from throughout the Permian Basin and Texas would be solicited for the cooking contest to determine the menudo champion of the Permian Basin. Menudo is a traditional mexican stew made with tripe, hominey and chilis.

Cookoff committee members are Jose Cueves, Jumburrito restaurants; Larry Carrasco, New Method Cleaners; Uly Pavon, Pacific-Texas Pipeline; David Dias, Western Auto and John Paul Pitts, Midland Reporter-Telegram.

In other business, Ciro Sanchez, chairman of the nominating committee, listed nominations for the upcoming election in September. Nominees were: Sam Flores, president; Felipe Morales, first vice president; Ruben Vargas, second vice president; Marta Perales-Reyes, secretary; Charlene Romero-Wurtz, treasurer; Enrique Farias, parlimentarian. New board directors nominated were Ed Gonzales, Darlene Gifford, Lucy Granado, Conrad Quiroz.

New officers will be installed October 24, at the Midland Hilton with Supreme Court Judge Raul Gonzales of San Antonio performing the installation ceremony. Speaker for the installation banquet and third anniversay celebration will be James Richardson-Gonzales, director of the Minority Business Development Agency of the Department of Commerce, who is the highest ranking hispanic in the Department of Commerce.

The Hispanic Chamber also announced its open house to be held October 20 from 5-8 p.m. at the chamber's office at 401 N. Weatherford. The public is invited.

Tipperary reports marginal profit

From Staff Reports

Tipperary Corp., Midland, Tuesday reported $98,000 net income on revenues of $4,988,000 for its third firscal quarter ended June 30, as contrasted with a net loss of $734,000 on revenues of $5,116,000 for the same period a year ago.

Income from operations totaled $126,000 in the quarter. A loss item of $28,000, essentially an accounting correction arising from an earlier quarter, was charged against net income to result in the $98,000 net earnings figure, according to Tipperary chairman Deane Stoltz..

Working capital generated from operations was $1,155,000 for the current quarter as compared to $195,000 in the comparable 1986 quarter.

For the first three quarters of fiscal 1987, Tipperary shows net income of $18 million as a result of last December's corporate restructuring. Over the nine month period, the company has had an operating loss of $373,000 which was more than offset by the $18.4 million extinguishment of debt those arose from the restructuring.

Operations have generated about $2.6 million in working capital during the first three quarters of the year. During the corresponding period of 1986, about $3.8 million was generated.

New part-time jobs quality positions

WASHINGTON (AP) — With new full-time jobs accounting for about 85 percent of the employment growth last year, the United States had 1 million fewer part-time jobs in 1986 than in 1982, new government figures show.

A record 125.8 million people, 69 percent of nation's working-age population, held jobs during all or part of last year, the Bureau of Labor Statistics said Tuesday in releasing data on work experience in 1986.

That represents a 2.3 million increase over 1985, with 2 million of them new full-time, year-round jobs, the bureau said.

"All we seem to have been hearing about is hamburger flippers," said Earl Mellor, a BLS economist. "But what we are finding in the numbers are more high-quality-type jobs. There are a lot more office buildings than hamburger stands being built."

JEANE DIXON'S your horoscope

© 1986, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

THURSDAY, AUGUST 13, 1987

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Stretch yourself in the year ahead and that promotion or hefty raise will materialize. October could be a big month for new financial and job opportunities. Your workload may increase, but so should your savings. You benefit if there is a fairer division of funds between partners. Travel brings you luck and some unusual adventures. Fend off ridiculous requests in September and January. A close relationship matures. Next June is the best time for a wedding.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: Cleveland Indians slugger Andre Thornton, Los Angeles Dodgers pitcher Tom Niedenfuer, the master of suspense Alfred Hitchcock, actresses Gretchen Corbett and Quinn Cummings, actor Pat Harrington, evangelist Rex Humbard, Cuban dictator Fidel Castro.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your co-workers may be thin-skinned today. Tread lightly. What people do not say can be more revealing than what they do say. Regular physical exercise will leave you feeling fit. Follow doctor's orders.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Taking a playful, lighthearted approach to a serious question works beautifully for you. You have the knack for defusing a potentially explosive business situation. You get your point across without inflaming anyone.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Self-discipline is the key to moving ahead now. You cannot paint someone into a corner and still expect to do business or stay friends with them. Awaited funds may be delayed.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You need to be challenged by your partner. You are the last person on earth who should try to take the easy way out. Promote creative ideas to those in authority. Pride motivates you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Do not rush in where others fear to tread. You are a leader who must learn when to stand on the sidelines and watch. Pursue romance more aggressively. Wear your heart on your sleeve.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A financial decision is influenced by how much support you can expect from home. A change of environment could be what you need. Think about ways to handle a relationship better. Keep your cool.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Every minute of your day will be fascinating if you make the right moves. Others want more of your time even though you are up to your neck with work. Be diplomatic.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): The answer to a problem may be right under your nose. A member of the opposite sex from the South captures your attention. If you can, postpone travel. Stick close to home.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Make some hard-headed decisions while you are in the mood. You may feel like abandoning a tough project. Hang in there! Now is the time to redouble your efforts.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Real estate sales are up and so are your spirits. Involvement in a good cause brings you special recognition. Travel will take its toll on you unless you get more sleep.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Work at your own pace and in your own style regardless of what others suggest. Higher productivity could bring a cash bonus. Give partner more freedom. Issuing an ultimatum would be a mistake.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You are able to tune in to what others are thinking today. Talking with a child or parent is time well spent. Stay as objective as you can when dealing with a co-worker.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ◇

Given that trumps are breaking 2-1 and that you have to lose two diamond tricks, what would you say were your chances of making four spades? If you knew that you were destined to lose a trump trick as well, would that change the odds?

The auction was quick and simple. North made a forcing-to-game jump raise of his partner's opening bid and, with a dead minimum opening bid, South had no aspirations beyond game.

The average player would probably stake everything on a finesse in each major, a theoretical 75 percent chance. The possibilities are complicated somewhat by the fact the heart finesse can be taken either way, which means declarer will still be faced with a guess.

However, the answer to the question we posed in the opening paragraph is that once trumps are 2-1, the contract can be guaranteed no matter who holds the king. And you can't do any better than 100 percent.

Let's assume the defenders start with three rounds of diamonds. Ruff the last of these, cash the ace of clubs and ruff a club. Return to hand with the ace of trumps and, when the king doesn't drop, ruff your last club in dummy. Now simply exit with a trump.

You don't care which defender wins his trick. Whoever gains the lead will be faced with losing options. The defender on play will either have to lead a minor suit and permit declarer to discard a heart from hand while ruffing on the table, or else break the heart suit and spare declarer having to guess which way to take the finesse.

Woman who made Wendy's 'Where's the beef?' famous dies in Chicago

CHICAGO (AP) — Clara Peller, the little old lady with the industrial-strength voice who gained celebrity and a footnote in political history bellowing, "Where's the beef?" in hamburger commercials, is dead at 86.

Mrs. Peller, who died Tuesday at home, was a manicurist and beautician when she was discovered in the mid-1970s by an advertising producer. She got her big break in 1984 in commercials for Wendy's International, the fast-food chain.

In the Wendy's ads, the 4-foot-10, white-haired Mrs. Peller was a consumer outraged by the puny hamburgers served by other fast-food chains. "Where's the beef?" she demanded.

The fast-food chain reported a 31 percent increase in annual revenue during the campaign as the line became a household phrase.

It even made it into the 1984 political arena when Democratic presidential candidate Walter Mondale used it to suggest a lack of substance in his rivals' proposals.

"If Walter Mondale could have said the line like Clara, he would have been our president," said Joe Sedelmaier, who directed and produced the commercials and discovered the crusty Mrs. Peller.

Mrs. Peller's voice helped her catch on, Sedelmaier said Tuesday. "You didn't expect this voice to come out of a little old lady," he said.

"She was always a character, and fame just made her more of a character," said her daughter, Marlene Necheles. "She loved the public. She was always happy when people knew who she was."

Sedelmaier met Mrs. Peller when he was filming a commercial and decided at the last minute he needed a manicurist's hands. An aide found Mrs. Peller at a Chicago barber shop, he said.

"She wasn't even on camera," Sedelmaier said, "and when I was done shooting the scene, I looked over at her and she...said to me, 'How ya doin'?' I thought, oh, just the way she said it...she's terrific."

The chance meeting brought Mrs. Peller small parts in regional commercials for several years before her big break, Sedelmaier said.

Mrs. Peller and Wendy's had a falling out in 1985 after she did a commercial for Campbell's Prego spaghetti sauce with meat in which she proclaimed, "I found it. I really found it."

The fast-food chain said the commercial implied Mrs. Peller found the beef at somewhere other than Wendy's restaurants.

There were "absolutely no hard feelings at all" toward Mrs. Peller, said Denny Lynch, a vice president of Wendy's, based in Dublin, Ohio. He added that her photo remained a fixture in many corporate offices.

Hart

NEW YORK (AP) — Donna Rice is back to doing her old job — modeling.

Rice, whose trip on the boat "Monkey Business" with Gary Hart ended his presidential aspirations, made her first television commercial Monday for a jeans company.

The New York Daily News reported her agreement with No Excuses sportswear, saying Rice was modeling jeans in the company's "junior" and "missy" line.

"It's an all-day shoot, but because Ms. Rice is very wary of publicity, we are not revealing the whereabouts of the shoot," a spokesman for the parent company, New Retail Concepts Inc., told the newspaper.

It was later learned the shoot took place in the Kaufman-Astoria Studios in New York.

Hart dropped out of the Democratic presidential race in May after the Miami Herald reported he spent part of a weekend with Rice in his Washington townhouse while his wife was in Colorado.

The pair and two friends also took a trip to Bimini together on the "Monkey Business."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Richard Dysart, who plays lawyer Leland McKenzie on NBC's "L.A. Law," plans to marry California artist Kathryn Jacobi on Sept. 5, and his character may start a TV romance, according to a published report.

The 58-year-old actor and Ms. Jacobi, 40, met two years ago, according to Tuesday's USA Today.

NBC spokesman Brian Robinette refused to confirm plans for an on-screen romance, but said it was possible.

"I like the idea of (McKenzie) having a woman friend because it's going to explore a relationship of non-yuppies," said Dysart. Most romances on the show involve young professionals.

Dysart's Broadway credits include roles in "The Little Foxes," and the Pulitzer Prize-winning "That Championship Season." His films include "Mask," "The Falcon and the Snowman," and "Wall Street," filmed during a break from "L.A. Law."

• • •

TORONTO (AP) — Bassist and singer-songwriter Roger Waters is suing members of the British rock group Pink Floyd, arguing that they should have stopped using the band's name when he left it in 1983.

"My reasons for not wanting them to use the name are straightforward," Waters said in a telephone interview from London. "I don't think you can describe the duo of David Gilmour and Nick Mason as Pink Floyd."

Waters, whose new Bleeding Heart Band will play the Kingswood Music Theater in Toronto Monday, said the suit in a British court won't be heard for more than a year.

Gilmour, Mason and Richard Wright plan to start a world tour in September under the name Pink Floyd.

Penn

LOS ANGELES (AP) — County supervisors want to know why actor Sean Penn was allowed to serve a jail term in a small rural jailhouse rather than the more crowded Los Angeles County Jail.

The County Board of Supervisors board Tuesday ordered the Judicial Procedures Commission, an advisory board, to look into the decision to allow Penn to serve 60 days in Mono County jail, 300 miles north of Los Angeles.

"A lot of people in my district spend time in the county jail, which is hot, crowded and inmates sleep on the floor," said Los Angeles County Supervisor Kenneth Hahn, who introduced the motion.

Penn, 26, was released Thursday after serving less than a week to allow him to work on a movie. He will return at the end of the month.

Penn was jailed for violating probation by punching a movie extra during shooting of the movie "Colors," and for reckless driving. The probation stemmed from a case in which he slugged a man he thought tried to kiss his wife, pop star Madonna.

Under an agreement with Municipal Court Commissioner Juelann Cathey, Penn is paying to be housed in the Mono County jail.
