Herald trying a low-rub ink

The Big Spring Herald today is beginning a low-rub ink experiment with the hope that it will reduce the amount of ink that rubs onto readers' hands.

In today's test, only the "A" or first section of the newspaper will be printed with the new ink.

The Herald invites readers to compare the inks on today's two sections and report to the newspaper's office what differences, if any, are noticed.

Low-rub inks have been on the market for two or three years, but problems with their use haven't made them effective or cost-efficient, Herald Publisher John Brown said.

"If it works, if it proves effective, we'll start using it," Brown said. "So we need readers to tell us what they think," he added. The Herald phone number is 263-7331.

Brown said the low-rub ink is more expensive, but that the ink manufacturer claims it will print more newspapers.

"It has worked in some places and not in others," Production Manager Bob Rogers said.

McQueary choice of school board

BILL MCQUEARY
 ... to be named

By EDDIE CURRAN
 Staff Writer
 Big Spring school board members chose the candidate they knew best — Big Spring Assistant Superintendent Bill McQueary — to be the district's next superintendent.

Board President Bill Brooks said this morning that the Board had a second interview with McQueary Tuesday night in executive session, after which they offered him the position.

McQueary accepted, and his promotion will be made official at an emergency meeting at noon tomorrow. A secretary at the superintendent's office explained it was necessary to call the meeting an emergency because 72 hours prior notice would have been required otherwise.

Responding to a question of the legality of offering a job during an executive session, Brooks said the Board will not take official action on the matter until tomorrow's meeting, and that McQueary's actual appointment is pending that meeting.

County Attorney Tim Yeats, contacted this morning, said he didn't believe the Board was breaking the law, as long as the Board's offer to McQueary was "subject to official action." Such action is to take place at Thursday's Board meeting.

Brooks, in explaining the Board's decision, said: "Primarily, the reason that was brought up more than anything, is that Bill is in our system, he knows our system, and he's been doing a real good job."

"We know how he's done in the past, so we know how he'll do in the future. With somebody from out of town, it's kind of guesswork," he said, adding that McQueary had a "real good interview."

McQueary confirmed this morning that he had accepted the Board's offer, but declined to comment on his new position before Thursday's meeting.

McQueary, 43, received his bachelor's degree from North Texas State University, and his master's in education administration from Texas A&M. He has been in the education profession 20 years, he said.

He was the principal at Rosebud-Lott High School and New Caney High School before coming to Big Spring, where he was the principal of the high school from 1980-85. He has been the assistant superintendent for personnel and instruction since 1985.

Brooks said the Board interviewed six candidates, and rated those candidates from one through six. He said the Board decided to have a second round of interviews, to begin with the top rated candidate. He said the Board had decided that if it was satisfied with the top rated candidate's second interview, he would be offered the job.

Brooks said McQueary was the top candidate, and that all McQUEARY page 2A

Improper filing argued in suit for firefighters

By SPENCER SANDOW
 Staff Writer

The Big Spring Firefighters Retirement Board is not the proper party to file a lawsuit concerning firefighter salaries, according to a petition filed by attorney Drew Mouton.

Mouton represents the city, which the board is suing over a retirement-salary dispute.

Mouton said he filed a plea in abatement to the lawsuit in 118th District Court, stating the board has no right to file a lawsuit in a question he maintains is one of salary only.

The board was established by a state statute that defines its duties as concerning retirement benefits, and it has no authority in matters of salary, Mouton said.

He expects a hearing date on the question to be set today. The hearing will probably be in three or four weeks, he said.

If the judge rules in the city's favor, Mouton said, the firefighters could re-file the suit as a class action, in which one or two of them represent everyone in a similar circumstance; or all the firefighters in question could file; or they could drop the suit.

When that question is settled, the attorney said he will file to request a summary judgment in the city's favor.

Summary judgments are granted for cases in which there is no question of fact, and the only question is interpretation of the law, he has said, adding that summary judgments help avoid the delays encountered in a jury trial.

In a jury trial, the jury decides questions of fact — "who did what" — and the judge rules according to the law, he explained.

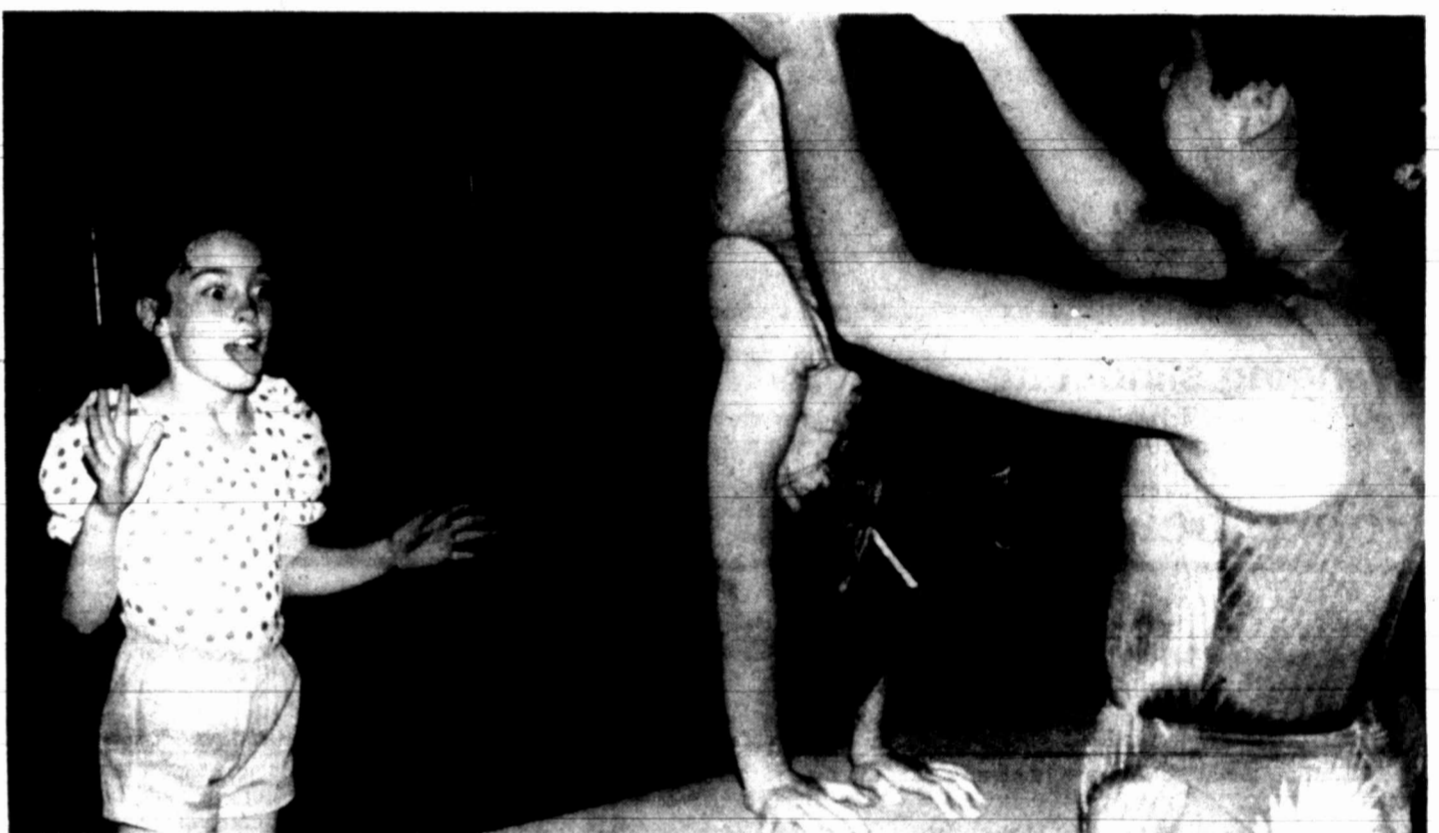

The major question in this case involves interpretation of the law, he has said.

Attorneys representing the firefighters had filed earlier this year requesting a summary judgment in their favor. Mouton said he expects a trial within three or four months.

The Big Spring Firefighters Retirement Board claimed in its September suit that City Hall violated the Texas Revised Civil Statute in regard to firefighter retirement benefits.

The action is one in a feud simmering for more than a year between the city and firefighters over how much money the city should put into the firefighters' retirement fund.

Firefighters say the city is obligated by state law to FIREFIGHTERS page 2A

Enthusiasts talk April Christmas

By SPENCER SANDOW
 Staff Writer

Big Spring citizens were enthusiastic about establishing a Christmas in April volunteer program Tuesday. A board for the effort to repair houses of the needy elderly and handicapped is expected to be named next month, according to Chamber of Commerce Executive Vice President LeRoy Tillery.

More than 20 people attended a presentation Tuesday by Midland program board president Bobby Trimble, Tillery said.

Invitations were sent to Chamber directors and committee chairmen, local government representatives, churches and civic clubs, he said.

The program is being conducted by the Leadership Big Spring Alumni, which plans to meet in May with participants in the current Leadership Big Spring class to choose a board of directors, he said.

Alumni co-chairmen are Tammy Stripling and Sandy Burroughs.

Tillery said the group's goal is to begin the repair program next spring — and gathering funds, equipment and volunteers in the mean time.

Trimble said that program volunteers repaired 205 houses while spending $133,000 on materials last year in Midland. Approximately 3,000 volunteers worked 24,000 on the houses, he said.

All aid recipients are at least 60 years old or are handicapped so they cannot earn a living. They live on small, fixed incomes and own or are buying their homes, he said.

Tillery said the Chamber has had at least one inquiry from someone seeking aid.

Trimble showed slides, including "before" and "after" pictures of houses repaired under the program.

He said the program began in 1973 in East Midland as a YMCA project, repairing 17 houses. It got its name when a beneficiary exclaimed, "It's just like Christmas," he said. Since then, 1,402 houses have been repaired, he said.

In addition, the idea is spreading — Wichita Falls, Beaumont, Cisco, Pecos, Amarillo, Washington, D.C., Tuscon, Ariz., and Kansas City, Mo., have established Christmas in April programs, he said.

Tillery said anyone interested should contact the Chamber at 263-7641.

ESP Prepared to use it?

By SPENCER SANDOW

Everyone has psychic abilities and can learn to use them, according to Barbara Wallace of San Antonio, representative of the Inner Peace Movement.

Wallace will give a free lecture on that topic at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the Park Inn off Interstate 20, to reach interested persons.

Such groups exist in Midland, Odessa and San Angelo, and people have requested the lecture be brought to Big Spring, she said.

Wallace said psychic talents can be classified under four abilities, and that everyone has all four, with one predominant:

"Prophecy," an inner knowledge that gives hunches about people and dreams coming true. People whose gift of prophecy predominates are night owls, good planners and good executives because they know how to delegate, she said.

"Vision" or clairvoyance is "like seeing pictures" of things not visible. People whose gift of vision predominates think in pictures, have a photographic mind and dream in color, she said. They tend to be good designers and artists.

and need an attractive environment.

"Intuition" or clairaudience is hearing the small voice within. People whose gift of intuition predominates are born leaders, say what they think, are more introverted with few friends, and are concerned with facts and understanding things, she said.

"Feeling" is the gift of healing, and is common among doctors and nurses, she said. People whose gift of feeling predominates are warm and friendly and enjoy detail work and working with their hands, she said.

In the lecture Thursday, Wallace said she will reveal tools and techniques involved in using psychic talents, with goals toward helping them learn to overcome fear, make decisions, meet long-term goals and "find their own answers and solutions" to problems.

Wallace has been involved with the Inner Peace Movement 15 years, she said, and made psychic predictions as a hobby before she joined. She said her gift of intuition is predominant.

Her lecture Thursday is part of a tour of Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana, Arkansas and New Mexico.

Pipeline presenting little danger to city residents

By KERRY HAGLUND
 Staff Writer

Big Spring does not appear to be in danger of experiencing a crude oil pipeline explosion similar to one in north Odessa Saturday that destroyed nearly a dozen mobile homes.

Although two miles of pipeline lie within the city, the line is used to transport water, officials say.

A 5½-inch Fina line runs between the former Webb Air Force Base to Cosden Refinery. It follows a path along North Second Street and under a railroad crossing at Presidio Street, explained Ross Westbrook, manager of industrial relations at Cosden Refinery.

It's a products line that carries water from several wells at the former base to the refinery, Westbrook said. City Manager Mack Wofford speculated that it carried fuel to the air force base when the base was in operation.

Bill Marshall, engineering technician with the Texas Railroad Commission in Midland, said a products line can carry such materials as crude oil and natural gas.

Cosden Refinery would be required to seek a permit from the Railroad Commission, however, to use the pipeline for oil or natural gas, Marshall said.

Refinery officials would be required to test the line as if it were a new line, and the commission probably would conduct its own safety tests on the line, he said.

If anyone in Big Spring has a pipeline under his house, signs would notify him of it, said Tom Tuckett, Petrofina administrator of public relations and advertising in Dallas.

Petrofina owned the Odessa pipeline that burst, although Arco last operated the line March 29 with Phillips crude being passed through it, Tuckett said.

Although no one was killed in the blaze that took more than four hours to control, a visitor to the mobile home park was treated for burns and a firefighter was treated for a head injury.

Wofford and Building Official Dewey Byers said they don't know of any crude oil pipelines within the city. Most are located south of the city, Byers said.

In addition, the city's natural gas lines are prohibited from lying beneath a structure, Byers said.

"City codes don't allow natural gas lines under a concrete slab," Byers said, because it prohibits detection of leaks and makes

Demos differ with 'big spender' label

AUSTIN (AP) — Democratic lawmakers say they don't agree with Gov. Bill Clements' characterization of them as "big spenders" during his anti-tax tour around the state.

"I don't consider us big spenders. I think we're very conservative," House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, said Tuesday.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, leader of the Senate, said Sen. Hugh Parmer, D-Fort Worth, is coordinating plans for a legislative "truth squad" to hit the road to counter the Republican governor's message.

"I'm not encouraging them," Hobby, a Democrat, said of the squad. But asked if he had his blessing, he replied, "Of course."

Lewis said he wouldn't be joining the truth squad, either.

"He (Clements) is on his program and I think we'll continue doing what we think is necessary here," the speaker said. Clements is visiting 17 cities in the next three weeks to seek taxpayer support for his "bottom-line" state budget, which would increase taxes $2.9 billion in the 1988-89 fiscal years.

In Waco Tuesday, Clements vowed to veto any tax bill that would bring revenues into the $39 billion range.

He said a recent count by his staff showed 75 House members would vote to support his veto of a spending plan he termed "bloated," and predicted law makers would have to come back in summer special sessions to finish their work.

The governor has said "big spenders" in the Legislature aren't telling the truth when they claim his $36.9 billion, two-year budget would reduce some essential state services.

But Lewis and Hobby said the state has continued to grow despite its current economic problems — and the demand for services has grown, too.

"I hope that the governor's trip will give him the opportunity to see on a first-hand basis what will be the consequences of the things he's advocated," Hobby said. "I don't think he (Clements) has been well informed."

"Those of us who serve in government pay taxes also, just like everyone else," Lewis said. "We recognize that things have to be done that are not popular. Sometimes, you just have to stand up and say this had to be done for the future of this state."

The speaker said the House Appropriations Committee's spending plan, which is about $1.5 billion higher than the governor's budget, should be debated within the next two weeks. If the House votes to exceed Clements' "bottom line," so be it.

Weather

State

Scattered light rain fell today on parts of the Trans-Pecos and the middle Rio Grande Plains.

The National Weather Service attributed the precipitation to a weakening upper level low pressure system over Mexico.

An area of High Pressure at the surface was located over the south plains. This high pressure area was causing clear to partly cloudy skies over the northern third of the state.

The wind over Texas was generally light at 5 to 10 mph and from the northwest or northeast.

Scholarships

awarded to five Howard students

The Permian Honor Scholarship Foundation, Inc. has awarded scholarship grants to five Big Spring area residents. The four-year awards will enable these students to attend Howard College for two years and complete their degree requirements at UT Permian Basin, Linda Conway, dean of admissions reported.

Howard College recipients include Big Spring High School graduate Joanna L. Hamilton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John P. Hamilton and a chemistry major.

Coahoma High School graduates D. Kent Ballard, Tina K. Robertson, and Dixie L. Shaw are also four-year award winners. Ballard, son of Bill Ballard and the late Enola Ballard, will major in music. Robertson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry A. Robertson, plans to major in business administration, while Shaw, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David H. Shaw, plans to major in chemistry.

A Permian Presidential Scholarship has been awarded to Letty J. Martin, a Forsan High School graduate who plans to major in business administration. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benny Martin. Permian Presidential match as much as 9 percent of salary deductions assigned to retirement. The city matched that amount, but only after decreasing the firefighters' base salaries to do so.

The city argued that it intended an across-the-board municipal pay increase of 3 percent. To give firefighters a salary boost plus an additional 3 percent for their retirement fund amounted to a 6 percent pay raise, officials argued.

The city had been matching a 6 percent salary deduction for retirement. But in April 1986, firefighters voted to increase the deduction to 9 percent, the maximum matching percentage allowed by state law.

The city responded by trimming firefighters' pay 3 percent, in line with a city ordinance drafted earlier specifically to deal with such a scenario. The ordinance was passed April 22, 1986, along with the mid-year budget.

Firefighters' attorney Craig Deats of Austin contends that the city's action, in effect, is making firefighters pay 12 percent of their salary toward retirement, while the city pays only 6 percent — a violation of the statutes.

The suit asks the court to award retroactively all lost pay and benefits, and that the city be ordered to rescind the disputed ordinance.

McQueary

members of the Board were pleased with his second interview.

"I would like to add that we did have six candidates, and that out of those six, four of those were top-notch people. We were really happy with the group of candidates we had for this job," Brooks said.

The board president said the Board "weighed heavily" their different options. He said McQueary's qualifications and familiarity with the Big Spring schools outweighed the idea of bringing someone in who might have "new ideas."

Brooks said the Board offered McQueary a three-year contract with an annual salary of $57,800, plus a car allowance. He said it is the same as Hise's salary. McQueary is now paid approximately $49,000 a year, Brooks said.

Brooks said Hise officially retires June 12, and that he expects McQueary to become superintendent at that time.

Hise said this morning he agreed with the Board's choice.

"Mr. McQueary has been here seven years, and has certainly done a good job with the district. He served us very well as high school principal and the last two years in personnel and instruction," Hise said.

Hise added that prior to becoming Big Spring superintendent, he like McQueary, was the assistant superintendent of personnel and instruction.

"I can recall how helpful it was to me, having been in personnel and instruction, because I personally knew every teacher," said Hise. He is in his 21st year in the Big Spring school system, and his 10th as superintendent.

"I know the Board worked hard," Hise said. "They've gone through a lengthy process, and they spent a lot of time and effort. They should be recognized for their hard work and effort."

"Certainly, I am pleased with the results," he said.

Lott given five years

A Big Spring man was sentenced to five years in the Texas Department of Corrections for the stabbing assault of 19-year-old Ida Mae Jeffery.

Lonnell Lott, 26, 809 Ohio, pleaded guilty in 118th District Court Tuesday to aggravated assault with a deadly weapon.

His victim, Jeffery, of 1002 N. Main St., was hospitalized in October 1986 after being stabbed in the abdomen at the Lott residence, according to police records.

She reported the assault at the police station where an ambulance was called, Lt. Jerry Edwards said.

Lott was sentenced to seven years in prison in 1983 on a burglary charge and was released on parole in November of 1985, District Parole Officer David Harman said.

His parole was revoked in December and he returned to the Texas Department of Corrections, Harman said.

Lott was arrested on a grand jury indictment for aggravated assault shortly after his April 2 release and held in the county jail on a $15,000 bond until Tuesday's plea.

Jeffery, the victim of the assault, was arrested Tuesday by the sheriff's office on suspicion of aggravated assault, unrelated to the Lott case, according to sheriff's records.

Wolf named conservationist

The winner of the Outstanding Conservation Award was announced and elementary school poster contest winners were named at the Howard Soil and Conservation District annual awards banquet Tuesday.

Vernon Wolf, Borden County commissioner who is served by the District, received the Outstanding Conservation Award.

The poster contest theme was "Our Land: Our Future." Winners are:

Coahoma Elementary School — Jessica Geeslin, daughter of Gary and Cecilia Geeslin of Coahoma.

Bauer Magnet School — Neiman Talbot, son of Guy Talbot, 814 W. 17th St.

College Heights Elementary School — Michael Calvert, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Calvert, 708 W. 16th St.

Kentwood Elementary School — Ryan Schwertner, son of Ronald and Patricia Schwertner.

Marcy Elementary School — Ronnie Rivera, son of Rudy and Marcela Rivera, 3312 Abilene St.

Moss Elementary School — Jeffrey Moss, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ron Moss, 1 Courtney Place.

Janna Burrow of Ira High School spoke at the banquet.

Guilty plea nets five years

Thomas Lujan Jr., 26, 1509 S. Main St., pleaded guilty in 118th District Court Tuesday on a parole violation and was sentenced to five years in the Texas Department of Corrections. Lujan was arrested by city police April 2 outside of Marco's Liquors, 605 LaMesa Highway on suspicion of public intoxication and unauthorized carrying of a weapon on licensed premises. According to sheriff records, Lujan attempted to commit suicide while in jail on April 2.

Ida Mae Jeffery, 19, 1002 N.

Main St. Apt. 13, was released Tuesday on a $2,000 bond set by the city. She was arrested April 18 on suspicion of aggravated assault, according to sheriff records.

Barry Kent Jones, 36, Colorado City, was released on bonds totaling $2,000. He was transferred from the police department after being arrested Monday in the 400 block of West Ninth Street on suspicion of driving while intoxicated and driving while license suspended.

of all pipelines located in the Howard County Consolidated Tax Appraisal District.

Any easements probably would be identified on a person's property deed, Wofford said.

Although Tuckett said people were aware of the pipeline situated beneath the north Odessa mobile home park, residents have stated on television news reports that they never saw the warning signs.

Pipes that cross highways have a pipe sticking up with red, yellow or blue markings, Pereira said.

"These oil companies are very conscious of safety," he said.

According to 1986 appraisal office records, 20 companies have oil or natural gas pipelines in the district, which includes Howard County and part of Mitchell County.

Several lines run through the unincorporated town of Sand Springs, Pereira said, but he noted that records show only one line within Big Spring city limits.

Toad poison kills pets

TAMPA, Fla. — Three-pound toads that secrete a poison powerful enough to kill animals are multiplying in Central Florida, north of their usual habitat, biologists say.

The bufo marinus toads, which can grow as long as 12 inches, are native to South America and are common in South Florida. They were introduced there in the 1930s in an attempt to control pests in the region's vast sugar-cane fields.

Glands near their eyes contain a poison which can kill animals, including dogs and cats, that ingest the fluid while trying to eat the toads.

"They're ferocious predators," said Henry Mushinsky, a biologist at the University of South Florida in Tampa. "They'll eat other frogs, lizards, even small mice and maybe small birds."

Mushinsky says their population in Central Florida is multiplying, especially since Florida has had several mild winters in succession.

Soviet jets buzz near

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Air National Guard jets have intercepted four Soviet warplanes during the past week flying over international waters as close as 190 miles from the East Coast, officials said.

"They were performing some kind of anti-submarine warfare maneuvers," said Lt. Col. Isiah James of the 125th Fighter Interceptor Group in Jacksonville.

The Pentagon reported two weeks ago that the Soviets were conducting their largest submarine exercise off the East Coast in two years.

Sovereign U.S. airspace extends three miles off the coast, said Capt. Tom Christie, a spokesman at Langley Air Force Base in Virginia. But when U.S. military radar detects any unidentified aircraft entering a zone extending about 300 miles off the coast warplanes scramble to make visual contact.

Bush aide probe topic

BOSTON — Congressional investigators believe an adviser to Vice President George Bush may have played a significant role in orchestrating private support for the Contras when such activity was prohibited, The Boston Globe reported today.

The newspaper, quoting unidentified sources, also said investigators were trying to determine whether Donald P. Gregg, Bush's national security adviser, knew about the reported diversion of funds to the Nicaraguan rebels from Iran arms sales.

The sources said they had no information yet on that, but had strong evidence indicating that Gregg was involved with the extensive private network that provided logistical and material support to the Contras, the newspaper said.

Sri Lankan nurses change a bandage on a wounded worker early this morning in Colombo General Hospital. A major terrorist bomb blast late Tuesday afternoon killed 106 people and wounded 295, according to an official announcement.

Toll mount

Crowd seeks news of injured

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — Government warplanes today pounded Tamil separatist strongholds in retaliation for the terrorist bombing of Colombo's main bus station, and the two-day civil war death toll rose to more than 220.

Near Trimcomalee in eastern Sri Lanka, Tamil rebels detonated a bomb under an army vehicle today, killing 15 soldiers and wounding another 60, according to a military officer.

The officer, who commented on condition of anonymity, also said Tamil separatists attacked an army camp at Kankesamurai, 12 miles north of Jaffna, and killed 14 soldiers and three policemen late Tuesday. He said eight rebels were believed killed.

Today's violence raised to at least 360 and perhaps more than 450 the number of people killed in ethnic violence since Friday.

So far 106 have been confirmed dead in Tuesday's bus station bombing, which the government blamed on the rebels. But one official said the toll could exceed 200.

Hospital officials stood behind the locked iron gate at the emergency ward entrance to Colombo General Hospital today and read a long list to the distraught crowd pressing against the barrier.

Two women in saris — one young, the other middle-aged — wept and hugged each other as the names were called of those injured in Tuesday's bomb blast at the capital's main bus terminal.

"Where is my mother?" the young woman wailed. Almost chanting, the older woman intoned, "My sister, where is my sister?"

Inside the hospital, wards were crowded with burned, broken and lacerated men and women. Ward 49 was so crowded that six patients were outside on a porch, sitting or lying on straw mats.

Walagama Senaratna, a 32-year-old hotel worker, lay on one bed, his chest and face burned and a bloody bandage on his left arm.

He said he had been waiting for a bus with his brother when the blast ripped through Colombo's main bus station.

"There was a loud explosion," he said. "I lost consciousness for a while. When I awoke I saw shops on fire and people carried me to a van."

Police kill rail strikers

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Police said they fired on striking black railway workers at a downtown train station today, killing five and injuring an unknown number of others during an "illegal gathering."

The police statement said a riot squad officer was stabbed and a constable apparently was shot when railway workers attacked a police detachment that had tried to disperse the crowd with tear gas. Police then opened fire, the statement said.

Dolphins die offshore

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil — Nearly 2,000 dolphins, mainly females and babies, have died off northeastern Brazil's coast over the past four days, a biologist said.

The dolphins' bodies have been found in the water and on shore near Itacare, a remote fishing community 890 miles northeast of Rio de Janeiro, said Eliana Simas, coordinator of the Fish Development Superintendency.

"We have no idea what has caused the mass death," Simas told The Associated Press in a telephone interview Tuesday from Salvador, 230 miles from Itacare.

"We only found out about this late Tuesday and can't even speculate before water and specimen tests are complete," he said.

Iran jails American

NICOSIA, Cyprus — An Iranian court sentenced American engineer John Pattis to 10 years in jail for alleged spying, Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency reported today.

Pattis, 50, was arrested in June 1986 while working as a telecommunications project engineer at the Asadabad communications center 200 miles southwest of Iran's capital, Tehran.

He was arrested after an Iraqi air raid temporarily knocked out Iran's communications with the outside world.

In an interview broadcast by Iran's state television in October, Pattis confessed to portions of seven charges linked with spying activities and using a forged passport.

The Iranian news agency, which is monitored in Nicosia, did not say when Pattis' trial took place.

Busman foils robber

GOTEBORG, Sweden — A bus driver outsmarted a would-be thief by slamming on the brakes, toppling the assailant and kicking him out the bus door, police said.

The assailant, a man in his 30s, was the only passenger late Sunday when he pulled a knife on the driver and demanded cash, a police official said Tuesday. After knocking the attacker out the door, the unidentified driver drove off and alerted police.

The police official said no suspects have been arrested.

High court upholds death penalty case

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, in a crushing defeat for opponents of capital punishment, today ruled that state death penalty laws are constitutional even when statistics indicate they have been applied in racially biased ways.

By a 5-4 vote, the justices upheld Georgia's death penalty law.

They said statistics showing that killers of white victims draw death sentences far more frequently than killers of black victims do not establish that the Georgia system violates the Constitution's equal-protection guarantees.

The closely watched Georgia dispute, perhaps the most important capital punishment case in a decade, had been hailed as the last sweeping attack against the death penalty.

Death penalty opponents fell one vote short of casting into doubt the fates of hundreds of the nearly 1,900 men and women on death rows nationwide.

Writing for the court's majority, Justice Lewis F. Powell said the statistical study of Georgia's death penalty system "at most indicates a discrepancy that appears to correlate with race."

The ruling upheld the death sentence given to Warren McCleskey for the 1978 murder of an Atlanta policeman.

McCleskey's hopes to avoid death in the state's electric chair had been pinned on a study by a University of Iowa law professor, David Baldus.

In his study, Baldus examined every Georgia murder conviction from 1973 to 1978 and found that those who killed whites were 11 times more likely to receive the death penalty than were those who killed blacks.

Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist and Justices Byron R. White, Sandra Day O'Connor and Antonin Scalia joined Powell's opinion.

Koop rightfully put health first

Surgeon General C. Everett Koop has surprised conservatives and liberals alike by vociferously advocating the use of condoms to control AIDS. We are a bit surprised that some people are surprised.

Koop, remember, is a dedicated physician. He's also the nation's top public health officer. It's perfectly normal for him to tell the nation about the value of condoms in preventing the spread of the fatal disease, just as it was normal for him to warn about the health hazard of tobacco.

Koop also is an evangelical Christian with socially conservative views. Therefore, some of his co-religionists think he should promote only one method of preventing AIDS — namely, abstinence from all sexual activity outside marriage.

While there's no denying the effectiveness of extramarital chastity in preventing AIDS, public health officials would be irresponsible if they failed to promote other methods. The AIDS contagion, after all, is an emergency.

Many liberals have been pleasantly surprised at Koop's action. Apparently they had mistakenly assumed that his opposition to abortion meant that he would support socially conservative views across the board.

That strikes us as mindless stereotyping. People on all sides of the divisive abortion issue have a wide range of opinions on other subjects.

The good thing about Koop's approach to the AIDS problem is this: He's not bound by other people's notions of philosophical consistency. Instead, as surgeon general, he lets health considerations dictate his actions.

Businessman defends telemarketing

To the editor:

As a telemarketer, I would like to respond to Steve Chapman's article, "Telemarketers deserve no solicitude," published on April 17 in the Big Spring Herald.

As the owners of Rainbow International Carpet Dyeing & Cleaning Co., we find it advantageous to our customers to do telemarketing.

The increased sales provided by telemarketing allows us to give free estimates and eliminate the home visit service charge of $40-$50 charged by most vendors for home service. Because of the higher volume, we also charge lower prices for our services.

Without telemarketing, we would have to charge a service charge and possibly double our prices. When we do telemarketing, we focus on one area at a time. This allows us to give a 25 percent discount, because we do not spend our time on the road or waiting for calls.

When we call people, they usually are friendly and courteous. However, if someone does hang up, we are not offended because we do not intend to inconvenience them.

Many people buy our service or refer us to someone that would like it. We do not call unlisted numbers or people that tell us they do not want to be called. We consider the telephone another medium to reach potential customers, just like the radio, television, newspaper, etc.

When telemarketers call me, I listen to what they say and buy it or hang up.

We feel that we are providing a valuable service to the people of the communities we serve. We also feel that it would be unprofessional and immature to respond negatively to a potential customer who hangs up on us.

We are here to provide a high quality service at a reasonable price, and telemarketing enables us to do so.

Softball player discusses fee use

To the editor:

First of all, a golfer doesn't have to ride, he can walk. As for the green fees, they are to help maintain the golf course. The softball fields were mowed once and watered none. The fees are to be put in the general city fund from softball.

As for the cost per ball game, it costs $1.67 per person, while the golfer can play any day 365 days at $6.1 a day. By the hour, the ball player still is at $1.67 an hour, but the golfer says about .20 an hour for 18 holes.

The problem is not the fees on softball, but the amount and where they go. I can definitely see the need to pay for water, lights and maintenance, but for what are we (softball players) paying for?

Family appreciative of concern

To the editor:

On Thursday, April 9, my father suffered a fatal cardiac arrest in the restroom of a gas station in Big Spring. A gentleman, who was a customer, helped my mother get in, and a lady, also a customer, performed CPR while waiting for paramedics to arrive.

He was taken to a local hospital, but could not be revived.

My mother was treated with kindness and compassion by persons at the Nalley-Pickle & Welch Funeral Home. She was visited by the owners of the gas station, who most graciously offered her the use of their home because my parents were traveling.

I am writing to you because I do not know the names of the persons who helped my mother, or that of the gas station, its owners, the hospital, its staff and the paramedics.

I wish to express my and my family's deepest, heartfelt thanks and appreciation to all of those people who helped and showed such caring and compassion. It is people like these who live and work in Big Spring that make such a tragedy a little easier to bear.

May God bless you all.

Agency awards 18 percent of grant monies to insiders

By JACK ANDERSON and DALE VAN ATTA

WASHINGTON — The Commerce Department's inspector general recently found "evidence that insiders are more prone to benefit from special awards" by the Minority Business Development Agency. These non-competitive "special awards" amounted to 18 percent of the agency's budget in fiscal 1984 and 1985.

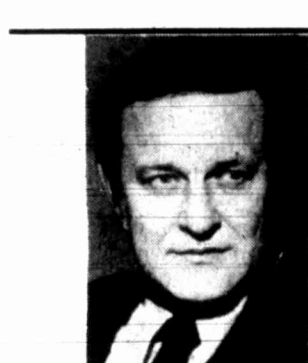

We previously reported charges by an agency official that the special grants were being used to lure blacks and Hispanics into the Republican Party. Agency Director James Richardson Gonzales denied that politics were behind any of the special awards made at his discretion.

Inspector General Sherman Funk told our associate Stewart Harris that Richardson Gonzales was cleared last September of any criminal wrongdoing. And Funk's report stops short of accusing Richardson Gonzales of playing politics with the grants, but says the award process provides evidence of insiders benefiting and raises questions about favoritism.

The director conceded that improvements should be made in management of the special awards. He doled out $13.1 million worth in 1984-85. The agency's budget for those two years was just less than $80 million.

The agency "has used scarce federal funds on projects rather common and often costly," the inspector general reported, "and activities that, in many instances, duplicated established programs."

An example cited by the inspector general involved a proposal by Richardson Gonzales to make a special award of $203,427 to a Sherman Oaks, Calif., company, ARVCO, to provide services the inspector general said were essentially the same as those already provided by a minority center in the area.

"The director's recommendation was especially distressing because the recipient may not have been the best qualified firm to manage the project," the inspector general wrote. In an earlier competition to run a minority development center, he explained, ARVCO had finished behind four other applicants.

ARVCOI was also identified in an affidavit by MBDA's San Francisco regional director as one of the groups that benefited from Richardson Gonzales' alleged use of agency grants as a Republican Party recruiting tool. The head of the company, A.R. Villalobos, is prominent in the California GOP. He could not be reached for comment.

Richardson Gonzales withdrew his award of a special grant to ARVCO after the inspector general's objections. But since then the proposal has been re-submitted with what the inspector general considers only one major change: a $90,000 increase in the amount.

For the future, the inspector general recommended that the Minority Business Development Agency set up a review panel to pass judgment on proposed special awards before they are sent to the director for approval.

The agency should be more selective in the grants it hands out, the inspector general warned. Of the 15 special projects his investigators studied, eight either conflicted with the agency's charter or duplicated services already being provided.

In addition, the inspector general's report faulted the agency for funding overpriced projects. One shocker was a grant of $288,388 for five one-day seminars to make young Hispanics aware of private enterprise's possibilities. This amounted to $1,068 for each student's day of instruction.

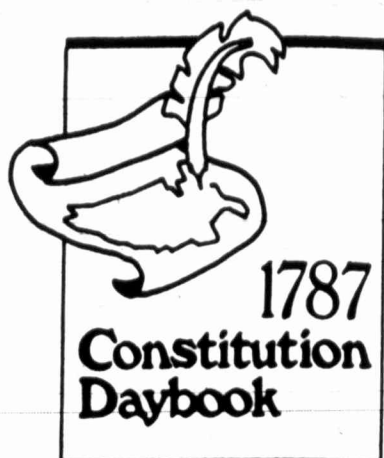

"We learned that private industry charged fees ranging from $50 to $195 per student for similar one-day seminars," the report states.

In another example of extravagance, the investigators found that one grant recipient leased wastebaskets in California for $29 each per year. The wastebaskets' original price was about $7.

HEY, LOOK US OVER!: The Justice Department confiscated from drug busts and other criminal enterprises $440 million in money and property in 1986, and the department's flacks think it should get more publicity.

An internal memo urged that Attorney General Edwin Meese and other top officials be available for public ceremonies at which checks are presented to state and local governments for their help in the arrests. About $30 million was turned over last year.

Jack Anderson's investigative report from Washington is distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

Sunday, April 22, 1787 PHILADELPHIA TODAY

Some of the books offered by Thomas Dobson, publisher, on Second Street, were: William Cowper's poem "A Task," Scott's "New Spelling," Stretches' "Beauties of History, or pictures of virtue and vice, drawn from real life," Lord Chesterfield's "Advice to His Son," Goldsmith's "Deserted Village," Robertson's "History of Ancient Greece," and Watt's "Psalms and Hymns."

Dobson was at work on an encyclopedia, which would be the first published in America.

William Temple Franklin, eldest of the Benjamin Franklin's grandsons, wrote to their old neighbor, M. le Veillard in Passy, France: "I am angry that Mr. Jefferson will not be a member of this Council, however useful he may be where he is... Mr. Jay also will not be there, because of his being employed by the Congress."

William Temple Franklin — Temple, as the family called him — was the son of William Franklin, former governor of New Jersey. Gov. Franklin remained loyal to the king in the late war, was imprisoned by the Congress in Connecticut and exchanged. He currently lived in London. His loyalty to the king alienated Gov. Franklin from his father.

LOOKING BACK

Presbyterians Plan Their Constitution

On May 16, 1787, the synod of New York and Philadelphia opened its annual meeting with 53 clergy and seven lay elders present.

The relatively small number of commissioners was easily accommodated in Second Church at the corner of Third and Arch streets. Considerably less than half of the Presbyterian ministers in the country were able to attend.

The synod had to receive and approve or reject reports from the presbyteries under its care. The Philadelphia Presbytery reported that it had ordained young Ashbel Green, as co-pastor with Dr. Sproat. The Presbytery of South Carolina noted that it "had cut off the Revd. Thomas Hill from membership with the same for contumacy." The Suffolk Presbytery requested to be severed from the synod's jurisdiction. The synod appointed a special committee (one of many created at this meeting) to respond to the Long Island brethren.

The church urged slaveholders to "give those persons who are at present held in servitude such good education as to prepare them for the better enjoyment of freedom." Masters were urged to make it possible for their slaves to purchase their freedom. The "final abolition of Slavery in America" was called for by the synod.

Chicago may 'return to normalcy'

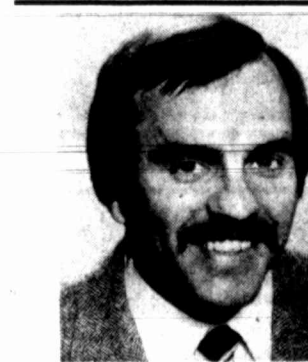

By STEPHEN CHAPMAN

Harold Washington's campaign slogan, "Chicago works," was intended to evoke memories of Richard J. Daley. Observations about this city's distinctive brand of politics generally begin, "Only in Chicago..."

Well, only in Chicago could the self-styled reformer who dismantled the white Democratic machine that had controlled city government manage (or want) to appropriate the mantle of the man who operated the machine for 21 years.

But the resemblances between Washington and Daley go beyond that slogan. Washington might have borrowed a slogan from Warren Harding: "A return to normalcy." After four years of the most extraordinary manifestations of democracy — who ever imagined that a city council could disagree with a mayor? — Chicago's government no longer will be characterized by perpetual civil war. Something more like the comfortable, cynical accommodation of the Daley era may emerge.

Harold Washington's two thumping victories give the aldermen, including many white ones, few options but cooperation. Four years ago, Chicago's machine politicians could explain away Washington's improbable victory as unreasonably lucky and impossible to repeat. The bitterness and narrowness of their defeat stirred rebellion in their hearts.

Looking at the wreckage, they could see how easy it would be to retire Washington in 1987: Just put up a single, strong white candidate and unite behind him or her. Nice in theory. In practice, this year's Democratic primary pitted Washington against a single, strong white candidate and the mayor won a comfortable victory anyway. Jane Byrne inspired many emotions, nostalgia not among them.

The regulars got another chance in the general election when Thomas Hynes withdrew, leaving Ed Vrdolyak to face the mayor head-on, with only the minor hindrance of a Republican candidate. But Washington won again, more easily this time. He calls to mind Muhammad Ali, who said he didn't mind giving defeated opponents a rematch because he didn't want them to have any lingering doubts.

Paradoxes abound in Chicago, and the most striking one is that Washington owes his re-election largely to the same white bloc in the city council that obstructed so many of his efforts. Vrdolyak and company no doubt figured that by making it impossible for Washington to govern, they would stimulate dissatisfaction with him.

Instead, they gave him the perfect alibi. Anything that went right was accomplished in spite of his council opponents; anything that went wrong was their fault, because they wouldn't let him run the city.

Had the council gone along with Washington the way it did with his predecessors, it would have laid on him the responsibility for the city's fortunes. By balking, it allowed him to escape that responsibility.

But Washington also helped himself. What his opponents didn't foresee four years ago was that disaster would not follow close on the heels of a black mayor. Crime didn't soar; property values didn't plummet; garbage collection in white neighborhoods didn't stop. By 1987, a lot of white voters disliked and resented the black man running the city, but few of them feared him.

They no longer had reason to — if they ever had. The city survived and, by recent standards, even prospered. The city government grew more efficient, thanks to substantial and overdue cuts in its notoriously bloated work force.

An inherited budget deficit was eliminated by honest, unpleasant measures. Only in Chicago would fiscal responsibility be inaugurated by a mayor who once spent time in jail because he couldn't be bothered to file income tax returns.

Some of the mayor's failings come from a management style that sometimes appears to have been borrowed unaltered from Ronald Reagan. He delegates much, supervises little and hesitates to get rid of people who are embarrassing him.

Like mayors before him, he also uses the city government to enrich his constituents. Daley and Byrne did it through patronage. Washington does it by allotting a good-sized chunk of city business to minority firms, an approach no less susceptible to corruption.

But the city's residents, who don't blanch at having an alderman run for re-election from a jail cell, can tolerate a measure of corruption. What they apparently couldn't stomach was unrelieved strife in City Hall. This election ensures that they will be governed more peacefully than in the past four years. They may be governed badly, but Chicagoans are used to that.

Singing beneficial emotionally, physically

CARSON, Calif. (AP) — If you don't sing, you may be missing out on an important aspect of life, says Dr. Hansonia Caldwell, dean of the California State University, Dominguez Hills, school of humanities and fine arts. "The American culture places music primarily as an appendage to its lifestyle. Some other cultures make music and art a central part of their lifestyles," says Caldwell, who is also director of the Dominguez Hills Jubilee Choir at the university. Singing can provide an intense emotional release, she notes. It is a communication tool through which people can express emotions. "Music with words tends to be heightened language," she says. "It takes the impact of language to a higher level, at which the language makes a greater impact on the person experiencing it and the person hearing it." Singing also provides a means of expression beyond the narrow confines of speech, she explains. The melodic line gives shape and deeper meaning to the words. This is why popular music tends to focus on themes that have significance to the ordinary person, such as love and sorrow, she observes. The words of a popular song may make such an impression on listeners that they may hear only the melody and not the harmony or rhythm. "It's really not the music, it's the marriage of music and words that grab people's attention," she says. The unifying effect of music and singing can be used in physical as well as emotional therapies, Caldwell points out. "If you have to move your arm up and down, it's easier to do it to music," she says. "The rhythmic aspects of music are frequently used as an organizing tool. That's why you see the army marching to a rhythm." Beyond providing an emotional escape mechanism, singing can also enhance your physical well-being, Caldwell says. "When you learn to sing, you learn how to breathe properly. You learn what's going on inside of you. You can feel your breath coming in and out." A singing session promotes proper breathing and relieves tension, she adds. "I work with amateur choirs," she says. "They come in after work at 7:30 p.m. and they are exhausted. But within five minutes of rehearsal they are transported outside themselves. It stops them from centering on their hurts. Nobody cares if your feet hurt while you sing." "Mentally, singing provides still other benefits. One reason music is used in elementary school is because it's an attention-focusing device. Because it's enjoyable, it leads to the expanding of a person's attention span." Singing in a choir setting also teaches youngsters collaboration and cooperation, she adds. Caldwell, who believes singing should be a home activity, suggests turning off the radio news stations and using that time more productively in singing. "As you listen to news, your blood pressure goes up," Caldwell says. "When you listen to music and you sing, your blood pressure goes down. Singing gets your psychological state at a more peaceful level." At home, singing can add another dimension to play and be used as part of the learning process. It can also provide another bond between parents and children, according to Caldwell. "Parents are so separate from their children. They need activities that bring them together. This is something that comes from within. It doesn't require going out to a restaurant." Finally, people in musical ensembles are always striving toward perfection, a fact that will make their performance better and bolster their self-confidence. "I really encourage everybody to take the opportunity to sing," she says. "Schools and colleges have choirs. Many churches have choirs. You don't necessarily have to be going to school to participate."

Digital technology offers wide range of features

By VIDEO MAGAZINE Only a short time ago television viewers would have been satisfied to view a clear picture on their sets. Now, through the magic of digital technology, some TVs and their accompanying videocassette recorders offer a wide range of amazing features. These include picture-in-picture, known as PIP, which enables the viewer to display two different images on the screen at the same time, and picture swap, which switches signals between the inset and the main screen. There are also special effects such as mosaic, posterization and picture strobe, as well as more familiar features such as slow and fast motion. But today's new digital effects have barely scratched the surface, according to the editors of Video magazine. With digital technology, microprocessor chips are used to convert conventional analog video signals into electrical pulses represented by the numbers zero and one. These numbers form an accurate binary map of the video signal that can be used to reproduce a picture with no loss in quality. The map can also be altered with no damage to the original signal, thus allowing for all sorts of enhancements and special effects. Current features can be put to multiple uses. With PIP, for example, a viewer can watch one television program, like a football game, while monitoring another that is digitally inset into the main screen.

Malignant Hypertension can be an emergency

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Please elaborate on "malignant high blood pressure," which my husband has. He has had it for many years. He sees his doctor about once a month. The doctor keeps changing his medication. My husband is in his late 40s. — Mrs. R.

Malignant, as used in the term "malignant high blood pressure," has special meaning, three meanings really. The term is used to describe a rapid and dangerous rise in blood pressure. The rise is so dramatic that it threatens immediate damage to the eyes, brain, heart and kidneys unless brought down quickly. If not, blood vessels may burst in the eyes or brain, and kidneys may fail.

That's an emergency situation, of course, and calls for use of potent intravenous drugs. Obviously, this is not the meaning of the term in your husband's case.

A second meaning applies for him. His blood pressure is high and continues that way despite efforts to bring it down. Although not desperate enough to classify as an emergency, it poses long-term problems of the same kind, but at a more gradual rate of progression. The doctor tries to find the particular drug or combination of drugs to lower the pressure, as you husband's physician is doing now. Sometimes, the blame does not lie entirely with the medication. A failure to control salt intake can negate the effects of drugs. Or obesity and other factors, like continued smoking or alcohol abuse, can create barriers to drug-therapy effectiveness. I hope your husband is paying attention to such contributors.

Finally, high blood pressure can be malignant for factors that have nothing to do with drugs or lifestyle. I am thinking of such things as adrenal gland tumor, which if present would be treated surgically. Almost always a drug combination can be devised to lower pressure. Granted, some of these drugs may be sufficiently potent to have unpleasant side effects, and for this reason they are reserved as a last resort.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am going bananas. I hope you can answer this. If a child needs blood, can its natural mother or father donate? Many years back, our daughter needed blood. My husband at the time wanted to donate, but after testing they did not let him. It did not seem important to me at the time. But he was the natural father, and it is my information that he should have had the same kind of blood she has. The question now is, is he the natural father of this girl? I would appreciate any kind of answer. — V.M.

A natural parent can donate blood to a child if the blood types match. A child does not automatically inherit the same blood type as its parents. Thus, it's not unusual for a father to be unable to donate blood when one of his children needs it. I'm glad you didn't ask me to give you the mind-boggling genetics of the matter. Whenever I attempt to do that, my editor tells me I generate more confusion than enlightenment.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have myasthenia gravis. One of the neurologists treating me wants to use the Tensilon test. Just what is Tensilon and how dangerous is it? — T.Y.

Myasthenia gravis is a nerve-related muscle weakness. Tensilon is a drug that helps diagnose the illness and assess how other drugs are controlling it.

Tensilon, a very short-acting drug, increases the numbers of nerve signals getting through to muscles. It acts within a minute after injection, during which time the doctor can observe muscle strength.

The drug is used cautiously, especially in those with heart disease, for it can produce rhythm disturbances. As a safety edge, a countering drug, atropine, is kept nearby when conducting the test. The procedure has been used safely for years in MG patients.

An honest mistake

78-year-old Nathan Matt of Miami, Fla., a retired truck driver, received a notice from Uncle Sam over this past weekend: Register for the draft or go to jail. The notice from the Selective Service did have a mistake in his birthday. They listed him as being born in 1968 instead of 1908. Nathan and his wife Lillian are taking this lightly, but with a five-year jail sentence and $250,000 fine involved, they are going to check with Uncle Sam to make sure the records are corrected and he isn't expected to register.

Airlines change rules for flier plan

NEW YORK (AP) — U.S. airlines are tightening the rules in their frequent flier programs, worried that the runaway success of the marketing strategy to capture repeat customers is costing tens of millions of dollars in lost income.

Because so many people have been exploiting the programs to qualify for free trips, major carriers say they have been forced to raise the minimum mileage required for the most popular destinations, such as Hawaii.

The airlines also have attempted to stop frequent fliers from selling or sharing their rewards in violation of the programs, a practice that has flourished since the marketing strategy was introduced seven years ago.

The hard-line attitude adopted by the airlines has aroused complaints from many program participants, who claim they suddenly cannot take advantage of the rewards or lack the mileage needed for previously planned vacations.

"From the passenger's point of view, airlines have been able to change the awards with impunity, with no advance notice," said Peter Tanous, president of The Frequent Traveler, a New York-based newsletter that tracks changes in reward programs. "You save up for an award that costs 100,000 miles then the airline changes the rules and says you need more."

American Airlines, for example, has raised the requirement for its most popular reward, two coach tickets to Hawaii, from 50,000 miles to 60,000 miles effective May 1.

Trans World Airlines has raised its requirement for two first-class tickets to Europe from 90,000 miles to 110,000 miles effective April 1. Northwest Airlines has doubled the mileage required for a single coach ticket to Hawaii from 20,000 miles to 40,000.

"I was hoping to get away to Hawaii some time in August, and I don't have my mileage yet," said Roseann Brancatelli, an employee of Dover Handbag Co. in New York who often travels for the company. She had 48,000 miles accrued in American's program when she learned of the mileage increase.

"Now I'll certainly have to take two more business trips," she said. "I think it's very unfair."

At least two groups of frequent fliers have sued to challenge the changes, and law enforcement authorities in California, Kansas and New York are investigating whether some elements of the programs are fraudulent.

"We started looking into this a couple of weeks ago," Lanie Accles, spokeswoman for the New York State Attorney General's office, said Monday.

In one case, she said, a family that had accrued mileage for a free trip was ready to obtain tickets when the airline raised the required mileage. "We think that is not a fair business practice," she said.

The airlines have long reserved the right to change the rules of their frequent flier programs, and emphasize that only some of the mileage requirements were increased.

But complaints about the latest changes have put some airlines on the defensive, and at least one carrier, United, said it might revise the new rules after they take effect. "We are looking at the aspect of retroactivity and expect to make an announcement in coming weeks," said United spokesman Matthew Goning.

Introduced by American Airlines in 1980, frequent flier awards were designed to create passenger loyalty by giving repeat customers free trips or upgrades to first class, depending on the number of miles flown. The rewards were aimed at wooing business travelers, the most lucrative source of income for the airlines because they usually pay full fare.

Since then, nearly every airline has developed its own program to entice frequent fliers, a market that now constitutes nearly 20 million people. But the airline industry did not envision the popularity of the programs and incorrectly assumed many of the awards would go unclaimed.

Many frequent fliers sell their award coupons to brokers, who in turn use the coupons to collect tickets from the airlines and resell them to other customers for profit but still well below full fare.

Frequent Publications, a newsletter on the travel industry based in Colorado Springs, Colo., estimates these brokers account for nearly $80 million annually in tickets, which represents lost revenue to the airlines.

In recent months, United, TWA and some other major carriers have attempted to halt the practice by suing brokers and requiring frequent fliers to collect the tickets in person.

Another new restriction, implemented by United, requires that only people with the same surname as the frequent flier can use the reward. This has aroused complaints from women's groups because it means wives who use their maiden names are disqualified.

INS may test illegal aliens for AIDS

DALLAS (AP) — The Immigration and Naturalization Service wants illegal aliens screened for AIDS when they apply for legalization and those who test positive barred from the country, an INS official said Tuesday.

Aliens who apply for legalization under the new immigration law's amnesty provisions must submit to a blood test for sexually transmitted diseases, but an AIDS test is not now part of those regulations, said William Zimmer, director of the INS regional processing center in Dallas.

He said the INS wants federal public health authorities to declare AIDS a loathsome, contagious and dangerous disease so those who apply for legalization could be tested for the incurable disease and banned if they have it.

The issue is under consideration at INS headquarters in Washington and is being discussed with the Department of Health and Human Services, Zimmer said. His Dallas office is one of four INS regional processing centers in the country.

"We feel in the INS that AIDS should be part of the dangerous and contagious diseases, but we're having difficulty with the help of the surgeon general's office in designating it as a dangerous disease," Zimmer said.

"The surgeon general has to make that call," he said.

Federal regulations exclude aliens from entering the United States on seven grounds, five of them involving health, a spokeswoman for the U.S. Public Health Service said Tuesday.

AIDS, or acquired immune deficiency syndrome, is not now on that list, but changes are being considered in that area, said the spokeswoman, Ellen Casselberry.

INS spokesman Duke Austin in Washington said the INS as an agency won't take a position on the testing requirements for AIDS until the Public Health Service rules on whether it is an inadmissible disease.

"It's not our responsibility to make that decision. They're the ones evaluating it," he said. "It's their provision of the law. We certainly don't want to legalize people with AIDS."

As many as 3.9 million aliens nationwide are expected to seek legalization under provisions of a sweeping immigration reform act that became law last year, said Stephen Martin, commissioner of the INS southern regional office based in Dallas. The year-long amnesty period begins May 5.

Because aliens applying for legalization must already submit to a blood test for other sexually transmitted diseases, Zimmer said it would be logical to give them AIDS tests and designate any testing positive as inadmissible.

Zimmer said aliens who are found to have AIDS could be designated as likely to become a public health charge because of the prohibitive cost of caring for the incurable disease and could be barred from the country on those grounds.

If AIDS is not listed as a reason not to admit an alien, Zimmer said those found with the disease could still be kept out on the grounds of becoming a public health charge.

Dallas immigration attorney Marcos Ronquillo of Dallas said he has no problems with aliens being tested for AIDS.

"If it's in the public interest and definitely a threat to the public health, I see no problem with it, if it's going to be like the way they test for TB," he said.

Testing for tuberculosis is part of the alien screening process, but is not a reason to exclude someone from amnesty, said Texas Health Commissioner Dr. Robert Bernstein.

"We'd like not to add to our health problems, but the question is, should we treat them differently and I don't know," he said.

Secretaries pray for patience to make it through their day

DEAR ABBY: A word about Secretaries' Day: We hear about it a month in advance through ads for cards, candies, flowers, restaurants, etc. I try to ignore it until it arrives, then I dread that day when attention is showered on the secretary.

Why the secretary? Since the birth of this day, I've been dined, flowered, candied and carded — and I must say embarrassed to death.

How about spreading the glory? Let's make it National Employees Day. Pick a day to send all employees a card, give them a flower or bring in a treat — even a warm handshake for a job well done. It would mean so much.

JUST A SECRETARY IN MINNEAPOLIS

DEAR ABBY: I hate National Secretaries' Day. My boss feels obligated to take me to lunch, and I feel obligated to go. He's a nice man, but all he talks about is himself. How boring! I'm sure there are secretaries who would be thrilled to go to lunch with their bosses, but I'm not one of them.

GIRL FRIDAY IN FLORIDA

DEAR ABBY: Last year, I received a corsage — addressed to the secretary of the president of this company. It must have been a promotion dreamed up by a florist. Never mind that I am a male secretary. The corsage was beautiful — and I wore it!

MOREY IN MANHATTAN

DEAR ABBY: Please print this message to my boss on National Secretaries' Day, but don't use my real name or town: If you want to show me how much you appreciate me, skip the lunch and flowers and give me a raise.

MONEY TALKS IN SACRAMENTO

DEAR ABBY: I am housing a retirement party for a woman who has been my devoted secretary for 34 years. I heard that you published a prayer for secretaries several years ago. I would like to read it at the dinner.

I hope you can find it. Thanking you in advance, I am...

IN OIL IN MIDLAND, TEXAS

DEAR IN: You are also "in luck." Here it is:

PRAYER FOR SECRETARIES

"Dear Lord, help me to do my work well; to have the memory of an elephant, the patience of a saint and the hide of a rhinoceros. And when the boss asks me to stay late to type a three-page letter that absolutely must go out today, and he doesn't get around to signing it until tomorrow, please help me to keep my mouth shut.

"Dear Lord, never let me lose patience, even when the boss has me searching the files for hours for something that is later discovered on his desk!

"Help me to have the knowledge of a genius, although my education is limited to high school and secretarial training.

"Help me to understand and carry out all instructions without any explanation.

"Let me always know exactly where my boss is and when he will be back, even though he never tells me when he leaves.

"And Lord, when the year ends, please give me the foresight not to throw out records that will be asked for in a few days, even though I was told emphatically, 'Destroy these — they are cluttering up the place!' Amen."

DEAR ABBY: You are mistaken. A gift is something that is given without expectation of anything in return. If one expects something in return — it is not a gift.

I am sure Grandma Jones went down a few pegs in love and respect in the eyes of her 16-year-old grandson and his mother.

NAMELESS IN MANVEL, TEXAS

DEAR NAMELESS: Aw, c'mon!

A simple "thank you" is not too much to expect in return for a gift. Show me a person who, for the sheer joy of giving, continues to give to someone who shows no sign of appreciation, and I'll show you a sap — or a saint.

The track buff is ready

The Region I-AA track meet, scheduled for May 1-2, is just around the corner, and for the third straight year Big Spring will be hosting the meet, as well as regional competition in golf and tennis.

I'm a track buff and I'm really getting excited about the action at Blankenship Field. Teams stretching from the Panhandle to the eastern part of West Texas will be competing, including Crossroads Country athletes from Stanton and Forsan.

Although there aren't that many area athletes competing, the Crossroads area will be well represented.

I wouldn't bet against Stanton junior sprinter Kody Newman to make a return trip to Austin. Last year Newman won the region 100 meters in a time of 12.60. Last week in the District 6-2A meet, she blazed to a 12.36. She also ran a 26.25 in the 200. The second place time last year at Blankenship was 26.80.

Another female trackster who has a chance at making state is Forsan quartermiler Robin Soles, who had been running the sprints most of the year. But at district she ran a 63.73 in the 400 meters — not a bad time for someone just getting adjusted to running the race.

There's a strong possibility that the Crossroads could go one-two in the boys high jump in the form of Forsan's Brant Nichols and Stanton's Derek Sorley. At district they waged a good battle and Nichols, a junior, came out on top. Nichols jumped a career-best 6-8. Sorley, a junior, wasn't far behind at 6-6.

The winning jump at regional last year was 6-7 and a leap of 6-6 was good for second.

Forsan runner Lee Morris stands a good chance in the 400 and 200 races. At district, the long striding Morris clocked a 50.14 in the 400 to go along with his 22.64 time in the 200.

The winning time in the metric quarter last year was 50.7. The second place time in the 200 was 22.56. So look for Morris to be in the thick of things.

In the tough luck department, Stanton distance runner Kevin Barnes' fate at the district meet could be termed "so close, and yet so far."

The first two finishers in each race advanced to regional competition and Barnes finished third in both the 800 and 1600 meters. He was nipped for second by five-hundredths of a second in the 800 and by thirty nine-hundredths of a second in the 1600.

What a way to miss a trip to regional.

At the Region 1-4A track meet in Brownwood May 1-2, the Big Spring Steers and Lubbock Estacado Matadors will probably bring the most potential points into the meet.

While racking up 197 points and winning the 2-4A district title, the Steers will send 13 individuals and two relays to regional. Meanwhile, the Matadors, who have won all of their track meets this season, scored 188 points in winning the 1-4A meet. The Matadors will send 11 individuals and two relays to regionals.

Looking at Estacado's times, you can see why they are the defending state champs. The Mats have one of the fastest 400 meter relays times in the state (41.00) as well as a good 1600 relay (3:18.11).

Estacado also has a fine hurdler in Richard Dotsey, who's run a 13.9 110 highs and 37.8, 300 intermediates. Dotsey also has a 6-6 high jump to his credit. Sounds like someone else we know, huh? Estacado also has an 800 runner ranked in the state's best. Arthur Kinney has a best of 1:55.2. Prennis Dial is a good 400 runner who has been running in the mid 48's as of late.

The Steers aren't slouches themselves. The 400 relay team had two bad handoffs and still ran a 42.40 in the district prelims. The 1600 relay team cruised to an uncontested 3:21.42 in the 1600 relay.

The Steers' answer to Dotsey is Brian Mayfield. Dotsey may have too much foot speed for Mayfield in the highs, but Mayfield will give Dotsey all he can handle in the intermediates. The big question in the high jump is when will Mayfield go seven-feet?

But what Estacado doesn't have is two dominating distance runners like Ben Gonzales and Mario Gonzales. It's possible the Big Spring duo can go one-two in the 1600 and 3200.

Oh well, the regional meets are still a week away. But I'm geared up for them right now. After all, once a track buff, always a track buff.

Martina cruises in Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — Martina Navratilova has won the Virginia Slims of Houston six times but said she was a little nervous in early going of first-round action this year.

It took her little time, however, before gaining enough composure Tuesday night for a 6-2, 6-1 victory over Camille Benjamin in the $150,000 event.

Benjamin, 23, kept pace with the world's top-ranked player, Navratilova, through the first four games.

But when Navratilova warmed up she broke Benjamin's serve in the fifth game, and then won 12 consecutive points to win the set 6-3.

Navratilova plays Laura Gildemeister of Peru in second-round action today.

Four of the other top seeds also won first-round matches Tuesday including third-seeded Chris Evert, who glided past Nathalie Herremann of France 6-1, 6-1 in first-round action.

The victory marked the 1,267th career match in Evert's illustrious career.

Defending Houston champion Evert, ranked No. 4 in the world, hopes that playing here and in several upcoming tournaments will help bring her world ranking back to second or third.

"I haven't been fourth since 1973," she said. "It's still sort of a foreign thought."

Evert will take on Argentinian Marianna Perez-Roldan in a second-round match.

Fourth-seeded Zina Garrison of Houston battled 17-year-old Halle Cioffe for one hour, 35 minutes before winning 6-4, 7-5. Garrison will now play Elise Burgin.

Brewers streak stopped

CHICAGO (AP) — No matter what happens from now on, the Milwaukee Brewers will always have their 13-game season-opening winning streak.

The Brewers didn't expect it to last forever, and it didn't, ending Tuesday night with a 7-1 loss to the Chicago White Sox. But the Brewers think the streak shows they're won't be the also-rans they were expected to be.

As proof, they point to the way games were won — a no-hitter, a pair of eight-run innings, two victories by a rookie pitcher, two game-winning hits by a rookie catcher and a five-run, two-homer ninth inning.

"That's the great part of this thing," veteran center fielder Robin Yount said. "You just can't point a finger at one guy. We're finding a different way to win games, with different people doing it every time."

Yount, a 14-year veteran, drove in the game-winner in the record-tying 13th straight victory, a 6-4 defeat of the White Sox on Monday.

"We've had leads, we've had leads and lost them and came back, we've been behind," Yount said. "We've had every kind of game you can imagine." The Brewers, picked by many for a sixth- or seventh-place finish in the American League East, swept the defending AL champion Boston Red Sox in their opening three games. Boston's top three pitchers, Roger Clemens, Dennis Boyd and Bruce Hurst, didn't pitch for a variety of reasons.

"Instead of seeing their 1-2-3 guys, we saw 4-5-6," Brewers manager Tom Trebelhorn said, although he added that the streak was "no fluke."

The Brewers won the opener 5-1 behind seven shutout innings from ace Ted Higuera and then nipped the Red Sox 3-2 in the second game as rookie Chuck Crim got his first big-league victory in relief.

Milwaukee won the final game 12-11 after trailing 4-0 and then blowing an 11-6 lead. Rookie catcher B.J. Surhoff hit his first major-league homer to win the game in the eighth.

Then it was on to Texas where the Brewers put together eight-run innings in each of the first two games in 11-8 and 8-6 victories.

In the third game of the series, Surhoff's two-run single in the 12th drove in the go-ahead run. The Brewers had trailed 2-1 entering the eighth but Paul Molitor tied it with a homer. Milwaukee then squandered a 5-2 lead in the 11th before Surhoff's two-out hit provided a 7-5 victory.

Cecil Cooper came off the disabled list at the start of the Brewers' next series, in Baltimore. He drove in two runs, including the game-winner, with two sacrifice flies in a 6-3 win. The next night the Brewers hit five homers in a 7-4 win.

With eight straight victories, the Brewers suddenly had the attention of all of baseball. Juan Nieves ensured that it didn't waiver by pitching the first no-hitter in the club's history.

The no-hitter was completed when Yount made a diving catch of Eddie Murray's liner to end the 7-0 victory.

Milwaukee General Manager Harry Dalton, who had witnessed five no-hitters while with Baltimore and California, said, "I've never seen one end on such a dramatic play. And I've never seen one thrown by someone so young."

Clemens fires 3-hitter

By The Associated Press

Roger Clemens, whose best outings in 1987 had come in simulated games, finally simulated the form he flashed in 1986.

Clemens held Kansas City hitless for six innings and finished with a three-hitter Tuesday night as the Boston Red Sox trounced the Royals 8-0.

Clemens struck out six and walked one. He hit Willie Wilson with a pitch to start the game, but went on to retire 16 straight batters going into the seventh inning.

Frank White broke Clemens' no-hit bid with a clean single up the middle.

Yankees 3, Tigers 1

Joe Niekro gave up two singles in seven innings before leaving after being hit in the left wrist by a line drive, and Ceciliano Guante finished with hitless relief as host New York defeated Detroit for its eighth straight victory.

Niekro, 1-1, departed after being struck by Johnny Grubb's liner, the Tigers' second hit. The injury was not believed to be serious. Guante took over and got his first AL save.

Niekro and his 48-year-old brother Phil, who pitches for Cleveland, have combined for 526 victories, three short of the major-league record held by Gaylord and Jim Perry.

Walt Terrell, 1-2, pitched a complete game and allowed nine hits, including Dan Pasqua's first home run of the season in the fifth.

Rangers 6, Orioles 4

Ruben Sierra, Larry Parrish and Scott Fletcher homered and

Texas Rangers' second baseman Jerry Browne (8) is tagged by Baltimore Orioles' third baseman Ray Knight as he tried to steal the base in the seventh inning Tuesday night at Arlington.

Charlie Hough survived 10 Baltimore hits, enabling Texas to end its nine-game losing streak.

Sierra connected in the first inning for first homer, a three-run shot that capped a four-run outburst against Mike Flanagan, 0-2. Parrish hit a solo shot in the third for a 5-3 lead and Fletcher homered leading off the eighth.

Hough, 1-1, stranded 10 runners in sending the visiting Orioles to their third straight loss.

Indians 5, Blue Jays 0

Tom Candiotti pitched a six-hitter and Cory Snyder and Pat Tabler hit two-run homers, leading host Cleveland over Toronto.

Twins 6, Mariners 1

Les Straker, a 10-year minor leaguer, won his first big-league game by shutting out Seattle for seven innings in Minnesota.

Tom Brunansky hit a three-run homer in the second inning after a throwing error by shortstop Rey

Quinones on a potential double-play grounder.

Angels 8, Athletics 5

Gary Pettis' RBI single broke a 5-5 tie in the eighth inning and California went on to beat visiting Oakland.

Devon White of the Angels drove in three runs with three hits. White hit his fifth home run of the season in the fifth inning and Wally Joyner followed with his first homer since Aug. 5.

Ranger cuts finger

ARLINGTON (AP) — Oddibe McDowell, center-fielder for the Texas Rangers, slashed the middle finger on his right hand while cutting a dinner roll at a "Welcome Home" team luncheon and could miss several games, club officials said.

The wound during the lunch hour Tuesday took eight stitches to close, but was stitched tight. It will be up to McDowell to determine when he'll be able to play, officials said.

Astros rally by Braves

By The Associated Press

Houston Astros Manager Hal Lanier is a realist.

"You don't come back very many times with that many base hits with two outs to win a game in the last inning," Lanier said after Houston scored four runs in the ninth inning to defeat the Atlanta Braves 7-6 Tuesday night.

Alan Ashby started the inning with a solo home run. Then after two were out, the fun began for the Astros.

Paul Assenmacher walked Bill Doran, bringing on reliever Gene Garber. Billy Hatcher, who extending his hitting streak to 14 games, singled Doran to third, from where he scored on a single by Phil Garner.

Glenn Davis singled in Hatcher and an intentional walk to Kevin Bass loaded the bases, setting the stage for Denny Walling's game-winning single.

Dale Murphy's solo homer and Glenn Hubbard's three-run double had helped give Atlanta a 6-3 lead going into the bottom of the ninth.

Padres 3, Reds 2

Garry Templeton's two-out single in the eighth scored Steve Garvey as San Diego edged Cincinnati. Rob Murphy, 2-1, gave up an infield single to Garvey with one out, then struck out Benito Santiago and walked Marvell Wynne before Templeton delivered the game-

Edmonton wins in overtime

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — Playing four overtime periods did not appeal to Glenn Anderson, so he ended the opening game of the Smythe Division final on the first overtime shot, 36 seconds into the extra period.

Anderson's partly-screened shot from the right faceoff circle eluded Winnipeg goaltender Daniel Berthiaume and gave the Edmonton Oilers a 3-2 victory over the Jets and a 1-0 lead in the best-of-seven NHL series.

"I was thinking about that," Anderson said when asked about the New York Islanders-Washington Capitals marathon last Saturday, the fifth longest game in league history. "I was fortunate I got the shot through."

The shot hit the stick of defenseman Tim Watters and Berthiaume's pads before it found its way into the net.

In the first game of the Norris Division final Tuesday night, Toronto beat Detroit 4-2.

Tonight, the New York Islanders play the homestanding Flyers in Game 2 of the Patrick Division finals. Philadelphia took the first game, 4-2, as Tim Kerr scored three goals. In the Adams Division, Quebec plays at Montreal with the Nordiques leading the series 1-0.

Edmonton and Winnipeg played 29 scoreless minutes to send the game into overtime.

Each team scored once in the first and second periods; Laurie Boschman and Brian Mullen for Winnipeg, Anderson and Dave Hunter for Edmonton.

Good scoring chances were almost as limited as the goals, largely because of Winnipeg's tight checking.

The Oilers, who were frustrated at times by the close checking but maintained their cool, couldn't force Winnipeg out of that style because they couldn't get the lead until overtime.

The Jets, who have lost 11 consecutive playoff games to Edmonton, opened scoring on the game's first shot at 1:20. But they didn't get another shot, except for a long one from their own end, until the 10th minute.

Overall they had only 16 shots while Edmonton had 30, not counting three that rattled off goal posts in the second period.

"We wanted to play with patience and discipline," MacLean said of the style that enabled the Jets to eliminate the Calgary Flames in a six-game semifinal. "We had some quality opportunities ... but Grant Fuhr made some big saves."

Each team had only one good scoring chance in the third period. The tight-checking of the Jets, who twice held one-goal leads, had frustrated the Oilers through the game's first 25 minutes. But the Oilers finally began to find some skating room early in the second period. The pace of the middle period was dramatically quicker than that of the first.

Edmonton did not have a shot on goal in 90 seconds of manpower advantage to open the period, then fell behind 2-1 on Mullen's goal at 2:32.

Mullen's spin-around shot deflected into the net off Edmonton defenseman Craig Muni.

Anderson tied the game 1-1 at 17:13, when he deflected Messier's goalmouth pass.

winning hit as the Padres snapped a four-game losing streak.

Dodgers 11, Giants 8
Mike Marshall was the night's final hero, hitting a game-winning home run in the 10th inning for Los Angeles. But he was in an apologetic mood later.

"My emotions got carried away," Marshall admitted, voicing regret for his actions while rounding the bases. "I apologize to Roger Craig for it. I regret I made those gestures. It was sheer emotion and frustration."

Mets 9, Pirates 6
Rafael Santana's three-run homer powered a six-run New York fourth inning and the Mets went on to defeat Pittsburgh and end a four-game losing streak.

On the next pitch after Marshall's homer, loser Scott Garrels sent batter Alex Trevino into the dirt with an inside fastball, bringing players from both teams out of their dugouts for a confrontation. Then fans tossed beer, ice and other things at the Dodgers as they returned to their dugout.

Cubs 5, Cardinals 4
A ninth-inning homer by Jody Davis powered the Chicago Cubs over St. Louis in a rain-interrupted contest and snapped the Cardinals' three-game winning streak.

After the Pirates narrowed the Mets' lead to 7-6 in the eighth inning, New York scored twice more in the ninth before Pittsburgh ended the inning with a triple play.

Vince Coleman, who had been in a 1-for-13 slump, singled home Steve Lake and Jose Oquendo to pull St. Louis into a 4-4 tie in the seventh.

Nieves is 22.

Returning home, the Brewers rallied three times to beat the hapless Rangers, who were on a nine-game losing streak.

They scored seven runs in the seventh inning of the opener in a 10-2 win and in the second game rallied from 2-0 for a 4-3 victory as Glenn Braggs drove in three runs and Rob Deer homered.

Sunday afternoon's game is the one the Brewers will remember the rest of the season, regardless of where the team finishes.

Down 4-1 headed into the ninth inning and with an 11-game winning streak — one away from the AL record — in jeopardy, the Brewers tied the game on Deer's three-run homer and won it on Dale Sveum's two-run shot three batters later.

"This one stands by itself, out of the context of the streak," Trebelhorn said after the game. Trailing 4-3 at Chicago on Monday night, Molitor, off to one of his best starts ever, doubled home the tying run with two outs in the seventh and scored on Yount's bloop to right. Crim got his second victory and Dan Plesac his fifth save without giving up an earned run.

"Everybody's contributed," hitting coach Tony Muser said. "That's the sign of a good ball club, when the players can pick each other up."

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGNER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, APRIL 23, 1987

GENERAL TENDENCIES: There's an opportunity to extend your deep-seated desires today. Go through with that wise course of action you've planned. Get your mind and emotions in sync.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Confidentially see the wisest adviser you know. A good friend can be of assistance to you now.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Look to a good friend for assistance in gaining your personal aims, but steer clear of a greedy entrepreneur.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Place your efforts in worldly affairs and civic duties. It's not a good day to consider your personal goals.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Study into new outlets that can help you advance, but be more broad-minded for best results.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) A wise person can tell you how to solve a practical matter. Try to please your mate in some special way tonight.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Ask an associate for advice on how to improve your routines. Avoid an important person who's not so friendly.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Try to get your environment more as you would like it. Co-workers can be helpful, but not your mate.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) There are several ways you can get your abilities to the attention of influential people, thus gaining their backing.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Don't go off on any outside tangents today. Kin can give you fine advice, but outsiders have poor ideas.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Be alert to communications that can bring you greater success. Steer clear of an irate co-worker.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Focus your attention on whatever can bring you greater success. Avoid arguments with your mate.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Your ideas can be fine provided you enlarge them in scope. Be with good friends tonight and have fun.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he, or she, will have intuitive perceptions that are excellent and will be alert to whatever is going on around him, or her. Teach your progeny to keep promises made. Restlessness may develop if this child's sensitivity is hurt, so be gentle with discipline.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Spousal rape bill closer in House

AUSTIN (AP) — A bill outlawing sexual assault of a spouse has moved forward in the House, but if finally approved would still face the obstacle that killed a similar measure last year — the Senate.

The House tentatively approved the bill Tuesday in a non-record vote. The measure still faces another House vote before it can be sent to the Senate.

A similar measure was deleted from a 1983 legislative package that rewrote the state's sexual assault laws because it drew significant opposition. In 1985, it was approved by the House, but died in a Senate committee.

Despite the defeats, Rep. Debra Danburg, D-Houston is carrying the bill a third time and this year is optimistic she will succeed.

"Marriage licenses are not only a license to love, honor and obey ... apparently they also are a license to assault," Ms. Danburg said, referring to current state law that bars sexual assault prosecution in cases in which the victim is the attacker's spouse.

Ms. Danburg said one-third of the people in family violence shelters have been sexually assaulted by their spouses.

Rep. Jim McWilliams, D-Hallsville, Tuesday won approval for an amendment that would make it illegal for a person with AIDS to have sexual relations with his or her spouse without telling the spouse about the AIDS problem.

Acquired immune deficiency syndrome is a sexually-transmitted disease that kills by destroying the body's ability to fight infections.

"He's trying to attach AIDS-related amendments to everything that has to do with sex," Ms. Danburg said.

However, she said she did not oppose the McWilliams amendment because such opposition might have hurt the bill's chance of passing.

Ms. Danburg said she is optimistic the bill will be approved by the Senate this year because an "enthusiastic sponsor," Sen. Cyndi Krier, R-San Antonio, is carrying it.

A Senate committee has approved a similar bill, but the full Senate has not yet acted.

Appeal bond issue drawing debate

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas lawmakers were told Tuesday that a $1 billion cap on appeal bonds in civil suits would be good for the state and the fact it would benefit Texaco Inc. was coincidental.

"It is just coincidental and fortuitous that Texaco and Pennzoil are involved," said Rep. Charles Evans, who then chuckled. "I introduced this because it's a good bill."

But Laurence H. Tribe, a professor at the Harvard Law School who was representing Pennzoil, said the bill, "would accomplish nothing but constitutional mischief."

The legislative conflict stems from a 1985 state jury verdict that awarded Pennzoil $10.53 billion after determining Texaco unlawfully interfered with Pennzoil's attempted merger with Getty Oil Co. An appeals court cut the judgment to $8.5 billion but with interest the judgment is about $11 billion.

Under present Texas law, the losing side in a court suit must post a bond roughly equal to the judgment.

The pending bill by Evans, and another by Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, would limit that appeals bond to $1 billion.

The House Judiciary Committee will not vote on the controversial proposal until next week, said committee Chairman Mike Toomey, R-Houston.

Hurst, R-Hurst, asked that the bill be kept pending until a Senate committee can hear the companion measure next Tuesday.

Mountain lion attacks hiking woman

BIG BEND NATIONAL PARK (AP) — A woman was attacked by a mountain lion and a Midland man on a family outing died of thirst and heat exhaustion over the Easter weekend, authorities said Tuesday.

Linda Burt, 31, of Humble was attacked by a young mountain lion while hiking with her family in the Basin area of the park Sunday, said Mike Fleming, a resource management specialist in Big Bend National Park.

Park rangers treated Mrs. Burt for cuts on her left thigh and buttock. She received further treatment at Big Bend Memorial Hospital in Alpine.

Mrs. Burt's husband, Steve, and their 2-year-old son, Mike, were not injured in the attack, Fleming said.

The body of Jan Neal Woodard, a geologist with Marathon Oil Co. of Midland, was found about 7:40 p.m.

Sunday in a thicket of river cane about 200 feet from the Rio Grande, said Raymond Olivias, a park spokesman.

Woodard, 37, apparently died of dehydration and heat exhaustion after wandering off Mariscal Trail on his way to get water for his wife and child Saturday, Olivias said. Temperatures in the Big Bend area rose to above 100 degrees Saturday, he said.

Rangers were able to locate and to destroy the 65-pound lion that attacked Mrs. Burt after a 2½-hour search. The lion was believed to be 12 to 14 months old, Fleming said.

Fleming said the lion was under weight and appeared not to have eaten regularly. He speculated the animal was too immature to kill normal prey and had apparently been abandoned by its mother before it was capable of hunting.

Dancin' in Anson issue draws ACLU

ANSON (AP) — An American Civil Liberties Union lawyer will help the local Footloose Club in its fight to change an ordinance and allow high school proms at the high school.

The City Council approved a new dancing ordinance in an emergency session April 14. The new ordinance replaced a 1933 law that prohibited dancing in public places — except for the Cowboys' Christmas Ball, which is held every year the week before Christmas.

The new ordinance allows dancing, but only if dances are 300 feet away from a church or hospital, if dance promoters have a "good moral character" and if dance pro-motors pay a dance permit fee. Dancing is not allowed on city property, or after midnight or before 6 p.m.

"The basic issue is freedom of expression," Texas ACLU executive director Gara LaMarche said Tuesday. "There shouldn't be an outright ban on dancing or a license requirement."

"The U.S. Supreme Court has supported topless dancing, of all things, so it would almost certainly support regular dancing," he said.

The ACLU will most likely hire a local lawyer, he said, who could take the case to a state or federal court. Both the Texas and U.S. constitutions would allow Anson residents to dance as they please, he said.

B-1B doesn't make a good neighbor

TYE (AP) — The B-1B may be a strategic weapon, but it is rough being a neighbor to the bomber's headquarters, residents say.

"It just shakes everything," said Lynnette Sheffield, who lives near the end of the Dyess Air Force Base runway. "It's like you're sitting in a massage chair ... glasses rattle ... windows shake ... it'll wake you from a dead sleep."

Sgt. James Carlisle, a Dyess public information officer, said that 10 people have complained about noise from the B-1B since January and that usually he receives one complaint a week.

"You can't say whether noise complaints increased because we've had few of them," he said.

Two residents have complained of home damage from B-1B noise in the past two years, Carlisle said. They were given the forms needed to file a claim but haven't given the applications to Air Force officials, he said.

Ms. Sheffield says the vibrations caused by the bomber also have caused the insulation in the walls to settle, something that the insulation is guaranteed not to do. She says the settling has caused the walls of her home to "bow out" near the foundation.

"The Air Force is supposed to fix our windows and the stuff they break," she said. "But it's a lot of red tape."

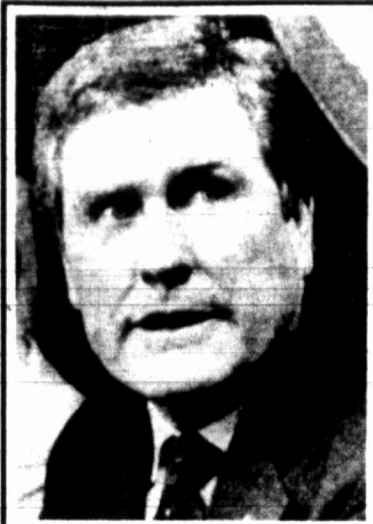

Last week, Robert Dempsey, the 96th Bomb Wing commander, Lt. Monica Hart, a public information officer, and Carlisle toured Tye to see how much noise the jets create.

Dempsey is considering the use of take-off patterns that would decrease the noise level, Carlisle said. In one such maneuver, the planes would turn as soon as possible after taking off to avoid flying over Tye, he said.

Ken Law Jr. says the noise problem is at its worst when the planes are on the ground.

"The biggest complaint I have is that they sit on the runway and rev their engines," Law said. "It's not so bad when they're in the air. Inevitably on Sunday morning before it's time to get up, it'll sit out there and rev its engines."

"The shaking has got to have an effect on my brickwork," Law said.

GIB LEWIS ... supporting bill

Lewis pushes abortion bill

AUSTIN (AP) — House Speaker Gi Lewis said Tuesday he is adding his name to a long list of supporters of a bill that would outlaw late-term abortions.

The Fort Worth Democrat said the bill represents "the best compromise possible and one I will gladly add my name to as co-sponsor."

On Monday, Rep. Mike Millsap dropped from his bill a provision that would have required minors seeking abortions to obtain the consent of at least one parent.

He also promised to discourage amendments to the bill on the House floor.

Millsap said he dropped the parental consent provision to increase the bill's chance of passage.

Sen. Ted Lyon, D-Rockwall, erased the same provision from a Senate version of the bill.

Shark 16-year-old in fair condition

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — As Robert Voglino responded to his daughter's cries and saw a shark biting her, he thought she might need only stitches. But after he drove the shark away by pounding on it, she raised her right arm.

"There was no flesh left for several inches above where the elbow should have been," Voglino, of Kingsland, said Tuesday. "I grabbed the stump and told her, 'Let's go to shore!'"

As April Dawn Voglino, 16, ran the 75 feet toward shore Saturday, however, the 5-foot-long shark headed toward them again in the chest-high water.

"It was getting closer, and I had the impression it was going to attempt to swim past me and go for her again," her father said. "I grabbed one of its fins sticking out of the water and attempted to hold it while she got to shore."

"I had the fin in one hand, and was trying to get a hold on it underneath with the other hand. I held it, I think for about 20 seconds, and then it jerked out of my hands and swam to deeper waters."

"By this time, April was in shallow water. We both collapsed on shore from exhaustion. By now, Beth and the girls realized that something was wrong and that we weren't just playing out in the waves."

Beth Voglino, April's mother, said, "I ran down to April and Robert. Robert was still holding onto her arm, but he was very weak. From that point on I used everything I had learned in a first aid class I had taken about three years ago."

"They told us to stop the bleeding with our hands — and it worked. They told us that no one else will know what to do, that we'd have to give instructions for everything. And that was true, too."

Other people on the beach gathered around to keep April warm, she said. Some brought blankets and towels, while others moved cars to block the wind.

"A young man named James stayed right by April's head the whole time, stroking her hair, and ready to give CPR if her breathing stopped," Mrs. Voglino said. "He was praying to Jesus the whole time."

Attack 'rare, isolated incident'

PORT ARANSAS (AP) — Marine scientists and public officials held a session to reassure beachgoers that a shark attack in which a 16-year-old girl lost an arm was a rare, isolated incident.

Instead, they had to try to convince reporters that there is not a rogue shark lurking in the Gulf of Mexico, wanting another taste of human blood.

"That's movie script stuff," said Scott Holt, a fish ecologist with the University of Texas Marine Science Institute. "It's a myth. We don't have a great white shark in those waters making attack after attack on human beings."

Holt and other marine scientists and public officials at the Tuesday afternoon meeting strongly emphasized that shark attacks along Mustang Island and northern Padre Island are extremely rare.

"This is not a 'Jaws' movie-type situation," added Nueces County Precinct 4 Commissioner J.P. Luby, who organized the session.

Officials said they can't explain why the shark attacked the girl.

"It was a tragic thing," said Robert Jones, director of the University of Texas Marine Science Institute, of the Saturday attack on April Dawn Voglino.

He said most incidents involving shark bites along the Texas coast are minor, involving "nips" and small bites as well as abrasions made when a shark brushes up against a person in its effort to identify the object.

But even those incidents are rare, he said. Port Aransas Mayor Dale Bietendorf, while relaying his city's sympathy for the family of April Dawn, said that any suggestion that beaches be closed because of the Saturday attack is overreaction.

"We will be as diligent as possible to make sure it doesn't happen again. But any action to close the beaches is not warranted. This is not anything but an isolated shark attack," Bietendorf said.

"This was a bad bite," Jones said of the attack. "We don't want to try and play down the damage done to this young lady ... But the probability of getting bit by a shark is very, very remote."

Said Luby: "We're here to protect the public and to protect the tourist industry. We don't want to alarm the public into thinking that it's more dangerous than it is."

They were required to take a 50-question multiple-choice test and answer an essay question.

They received medals for their achievement.

Other Coahoma participants were Sarah Mathison in world history and geography; Andrew Griffin and Will Doyle in current events; Brandy Taylor and Lori Rich in United States history; and Dan Perkins in U.S. government.

About 150 students from 15 area high schools competed in the five contests. Schools were divided into Division I and Division II. Coahoma, Sweetwater, Clyde, Abilene and Snyder competed in Division I.

Les White, a Big Spring native, was recently notified that he is the recipient of a $5,000 scholarship to continue his graduate studies at the University of Texas at El Paso.

BUSINESS & INDUSTRY REVIEW

HOUSE OF SWEETS — Doris and George Williams are on hand to personally greet visitors to George's Candyland, 1711 Benton. They make all the candies themselves — from scratch — fresh every day.

GARAGE CONVERSION — Reclaim all that valuable space now in your garage. When Bob's Custom Woodwork does the job, the staff carefully matches windows, materials and design (both inside and out) so that the conversion does not look like it's just been "added on." Pictured is an example of the firm's work.

George's Candyland has Mother's Day gifts

Nothing quite expresses your sentiments on Mother's Day like a box of fresh, handmade candy from George's Candyland, 1711 Benton. This year George has collected a treasure trove of gift boxes — for example, a bombe chest with jewelstone insets or a colorful enameled tin box. These lovely boxes can be filled with candy, and when mother has eaten every morsel, she'll have a trinket chest to remember you by. All the candy at George's Candyland is made from scratch — every day — by George and Doris Williams. Candy connoisseurs will appreciate the fact that they use no mixes, pre-packaged ingredients or preservatives. Let them pack mother's box (and one for yourself, too) with any combination of turtles, peanut brittle, toffee, divinity or peanut patties. Or George's famous hand-dipped chocolates with flavored centers. Or pralines, cherry cordials, and fudges in chocolate, peanut butter, vanilla and butterscotch. George's popular pecan roll is a hefty concoction of handmade nougat, thickly swathed in pecans. Truffles — the ultimate candy experience — are now available in seven liqueur flavors: cherry brandy, coconut, amaretto, Irish cream, rum-raisin, cafe mocha and Roman punch. George and Doris are currently doing candy trays in colors to coordinate with a local hostess' party theme. "This is just an example of the personal touch we provide our customers," says George. By popular request, George now stocks a Texas souvenir box filled with truffles, pralines or brittle — or custom-packed to your order. Before the store opens each day, the Williamses have already worked four hours making candy of every description. The sweet shop is open from 1:30 to 5:30 Monday through Saturday. Candy from George's Candyland is distributed at a few carefully chosen outlets: Newsom's, Highland Road Grocery, Wasson Road Grocery, Parks Convenience Store, Lil Sooper in Coahoma and gift shops in Seminole and Stephenville.
