Carter, Schmidt Blister Moscow

BONN, West Germany (AP) — President Carter and West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt joined today in deploring Soviet prosecution of dissidents, with Carter declaring that his criticism will not be silenced and Schmidt citing Eastern European human rights violations.

"Our voice will not be stilled as we consider these violations, and others around the world, of human rights," Carter said.

"We deplore this action by the Soviet government," Carter replied, citing not only Shcharansky's case but similar moves against Alexander Ginzburg and Yuri Orlov.

Speaking in German, Schmidt said: "I would like to express my full agreement with what the president has said."

The German leader added that "such actions" are also taken "in the other part of Germany" and said that he would like to remind U.S. reporters "that there are also people in Eastern Europe who suffer under such conditions but are not give such public prominence" as the Soviet dissidents.

The U.S. president said it was obvious that "the courageous dissidents in the Soviet Union" are being tried, convicted and punished because they "sought basic freedoms" guaranteed under the Helsinki agreement, which he noted the Soviet Union "voluntarily signed."

Carter said there was little in a concrete way that could be done by the United States, except to mobilize the force of public opinion against the prosecutions.

At the same time, the president expressed a willingness to "cooperate with the Soviet Union whereever possible to mobilize public opinion."

He said he had just received a personal report from Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance on what the president termed Vance's "constructive meetings" in Geneva with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko.

Discussing their bilateral talks, both Carter and Schmidt sought to play down differences and emphasize the pursuit of common goals, although Carter acknowledged there was bound to be "some small variance" in their respective attitudes.

Questioned about economic differences between the United States and Germany, the visiting president said there were some, but he cited none.

And he acknowledged the problem of "excessive consumption of oil" by the United States — a point Schmidt and others often emphasize — and in another seemingly conciliatory gesture, noted the United States is less dependent on exports than are Germany and some other allies.

At his news conference with Schmidt, Carter said that German-American relations were "never stronger nor more

Shcharansky Ruled Guilty

MOSCOW (AP) — Anatoly Shcharansky, the dissident whose trial ignited an uproar of protest in the West, was convicted of spying and other anti-Soviet activities today and sentenced to 13 years at hard labor.

Quietly defiant in his closing statement, the young activist uttered the Jewish rallying cry "Next year in Jerusalem!" as he awaited the verdict, his brother reported.

"I am as far from my dreams as I have ever been," the 30-year-old computer programmer, whose frustrated efforts to emigrate to Israel drew him into the dissident movement, reportedly told the court.

Shcharansky's cause had been championed by President Carter, and the verdict against the Jewish activist was the climax of twin dissident trials that have brought Washington into a confrontation with the Kremlin over human rights. Dissident Alexander Ginzburg was sentenced to eight years at hard labor Thursday for anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda.

Carter reiterated the U.S. position today in Bonn, West Germany, telling a news conference, "Our voice will not be stilled as we consider these violations, and others around the world, of human rights."

In a separate trial, a military court today sentenced Anatoly Filatov, a Soviet administrative worker, to death by firing squad for spying. The Soviet news agency Tass called Filatov "an agent of a foreign intelligence service." The Soviets have not disclosed what country he allegedly worked for.

Tass said Shcharansky was sentenced to 13 years on the conviction of espionage and anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda. He had been accused of supplying state secrets to U.S. agents, allegations personally denied by Carter.

The sentence was two years less than the 15 requested by the prosecutor, the longest prison sentence allowed by Soviet law. The charge of treasonable espionage could have meant the death penalty, but the prosecutor had cited the defendant's youth and clean record in asking instead for a prison term.

The 16 months Shcharansky has already served awaiting trial will count against his sentence.

Speaking in a sudden rainstorm outside the courthouse in central Moscow, Shcharansky's brother Leonid said the defendant told the court, "I am happy that I honor my conscience, that I help my people. I am proud to to have worked with brave and honorable people, such as Sakharov, Orlov and Ginzburg," referring to other dissident leaders.

".... To my wife and my people I can only say, 'Next year in Jerusalem!' To this court which decided my fate in advance, I say nothing." The slogan "Next year in Jerusalem!" is a centuries-old rallying cry of Jews dispersed from their homeland.

Shcharansky "spoke very quietly, very self-confidently and concentrated" as he made his 10-minute statement, his brother reported. He looked frequently at Leonid and smiled during the final moments, his brother said.

"He held himself very bravely, without any tension," Leonid said.

He quoted Anatoly as saying in his closing statement: "I am happy although I should be very sad, because I have lived an honest life with my conscience and have never taken the path of hypocrisy."

"Five years ago I applied to emigrate. Now I am as far from my dreams as I have ever been."

Cleveland's Mayor Pleads For Troops

CLEVELAND (AP) — Mayor Dennis J. Kucinich today asked the state for National Guard troops and any other assistance it could provide, after a strike by 1,500 patrolmen left this city of 700,000 virtually without police protection.

But a spokesman for Gov. James A. Rhodes in Columbus said the state would not intervene immediately.

The patrolmen walked out Thursday night over the firing of 13 officers who refused to begin one-man patrols of low-rent housing projects with high crime rates.

The firings and walkout are the latest in a series of troubles confronting Kucinich, 31, who faces a recall election next month. It was Kucinich who promised the daytime patrols to residents of the project.

Kucinich told a news conference that he made the decision to ask for help after it was apparent that the police would not obey a court order to end a walkout.

"I have asked Governor Rhodes for the assistance of the National Guard, state Highway Patrol and whatever military police can be afforded to the people of Cleveland to help us through this crisis," the mayor said.

In Columbus, the governor's office said the Highway Patrol cannot be called out to help in a labor dispute and that the National Guard won't be called out until Kucinich "has exhausted" all possible law enforcement possibilities in Cleveland.

Safety Director James W. Barrett refused to say how many policemen reported for duty today, adding that it was "not in the best interest of the department or the men who are trying to work." He said a "few" police patrol cars were on the streets, but declined to be more specific. Barrett also said several patrolmen and supervisory officers trying to report for work on the 7 a.m. shift change were intimidated by pickets.

The 2,000-member police department includes 1,500 patrolmen.

The strike began Thursday night. Not one patrolman reported for work on the 11 p.m. shift, according to Lt. Edward

Heat At Dallas Fatal To Three

A-J News Services

The record summer heat wave in North Texas has resulted in the deaths of two men and a woman in Dallas.

And while temperatures on the South Plains have not quite matched those in some other sections of the state, readings in the upper 90s and above the century mark persist. It will be the same story this weekend, with temperatures in the upper 90s in Lubbock today and Saturday.

It was 100 degrees in a number of South Plains towns and cities Thursday, and in Dallas, where it has been 100 or more for 12 straight days, the county medical examiner issued a warning to the public about heat stroke after the deaths were discovered.

The men were identified as Grover McDaniel, 42, and Silverio Lopez, 35, and the woman only as a 73-year-old Mexican-American.

McDaniel was found unconscious behind a garbage dumpster in South Dallas Thursday. He died at Parkland Hospital about an hour later.

Lopez became ill Monday, his first day on the job with a Dallas pipeline company, was hospitalized at Charlton Methodist Hospital and died Thursday.

The woman had been bedridden in an un-airconditioned apartment, the medical examiner said.

The initial diagnosis in all three cases was heat stroke, the office said, but final determination will be made later.

It was 102 in Dallas Thursday and 95 in Lubbock.

Readings around the South Plains were 105 at Paducah, 104 at Matador, 103 at Jayton and Spur, 101 at Brownfield and Plainview and 100 at Crosbyton, Lamesa, Post, Silverton and Snyder.

Fair skies and continued hot weather are forecast for Lubbock through Saturday with temperatures in the upper 90s today and Saturday and a low in the low 70s tonight.

Some widely scattered showers in the western counties of the South Plains tonight, forecasters said. No precipitation is expected for other portions of the area through Tuesday.

The wind was expected to be southerly at five to 10 mph today and tonight, weathermen predict.

Texas skies were clear overnight except for some widely scattered thunderstorms in the northern Panhandle and near Beaumont.

Suit Names Two Area Officers

By FRANK PATRICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A Hockley County resident has sued Sheriff Leroy Schulle, claiming the sheriff has unjustly used the weight of his office to try to run him out of the county by depriving him of work.

Hockley County and Deputy Don Franklin were also named defendants in the civil action, filed in U.S. District Court here.

Plaintiff Jim Shaw contends unfair rumors about his morals cost him his job as manager of the Levelland Kentucky Fried Chicken franchise restaurant.

Trouble began, Shaw says in the suit, when one of his employees — Sheriff Schulle's daughter — left the business during her shift. The plaintiff said he called the employee at home to inquire about the situation.

Shaw claims Schulle then accused him of telling an off-color story in front of his daughter. Shaw says in the suit that he requested a conference with the sheriff, and that Schulle closed the conference by indicating he would keep tabs on the plaintiff.

According to the plaintiff's petition, Franklin approached Shaw on or about June 4 to tell him that the sheriff's office had had him under surveillance for two weeks, that he had been behaving improperly with women employees and that the office had affidavits on file.

Franklin advised Shaw to quit his job, stating that Shaw could avoid criminal prosecution only by quitting or by being

Council To Move Cautiously On Tax Slash

By ROBERT M. COCKRUM
Avalanche-Journal Staff

City council members, in their meeting Saturday with representatives of the Lubbock Property Owners Association, will be probing for substance behind the call for a tax cut. The response may not be immediate.

"We're not going in to say cut this and cut that," said Dr. Gene W. Medley, temporary chairman of the association's interim board. "We don't know what the budget is saying at this point. We don't know if any services should be cut."

The meeting is set for 9 a.m. in the Emergency Operations Center (EOC) at City Hall. The location suggests an urgency perhaps out of proportion to the proceedings.

"If there are any differences, we want to see if we can't agree on some things," said Medley. Asked if there would be any suggestions on how to save money, he said, "I don't think that is going to be part of our responsibility."

Mayor Dirk West thinks that it is, because the basic agreement is already there — the need for what West calls a "meaningful tax cut."

"The problem is not ours (the council's) alone, but the entire citizenry's of Lubbock," said West. "None of us on the council has pushed for large increases in spending. We were working for a reduced budget before all this came up."

The mayor, no more than the association, is prepared to say at this point where the $71.9 million budget should be trimmed, other than "those services that will have the least impact on citizens." That could mean virtually hands-off the police, fire and health departments.

The fiscal scissors might go after such things as brush pick-up, recreation programs and some library services — "things that don't count much individually, but together are substantial," West said.

The mayor said the cuts don't necessarily mean giving up services that may have become taken for granted, but "having them on a lesser basis."

The association wants a 25 percent cut in city ad valorem taxes, a substantial increase in the homestead exemption for the elderly and abolishment of the automobile property tax.

"At the meeting we will do everything we can to familiarize them with the services of the city and what they cost," said West, who said that citizen interest may dictate two public meetings instead of the usual one when the budget begins taking on more shape. The council finishes its work sessions on the spending plan next week.

His comment on the additional public gatherings is similar to the view of council member Carolyn Jordan, who was told at Thursday's meeting of the group that time between now and September, when the final budget must be adopted, might be too short.

Councilman Bill McAlister's suggestion to cut the tax assessment ratio from 60 percent to 50 percent was discussed Thursday, but no action on the proposal was taken.

City Manager Larry Cunningham said the ratio change would require an "expensive reprogramming of the computer" in the tax office and said revaluation notices would have to be mailed to all

School Aid Extension Approved

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has approved a five-year extension of the government's supplements to elementary and secondary schools while holding down slightly the cost of the controversial impact aid program.

Instead of altering the formula for impact aid to school districts with large concentrations of federal installations and employes, the House decided on Thursday to continue existing rules.

Rep. Carl Perkins, D-Ky., chairman of the House Education and Labor Committee and sponsor of the plan, said it would mean $215 million less would be spent on impact aid, a program the Carter administration had sought to cut.

But no district would lose funds under the compromise, he added.

The legislative package was adopted 350-20 and must now go to the Senate. Some $51.5 billion is authorized through 1983 for aid to education programs.

The largest single funding area includes aid to state and local agencies to conduct compensatory education programs for educationally deprived children in low-income areas. Some 5.9 million pupils in 90 percent of the nation's school districts participate in these programs.

The House decided to set aside no less than $6 billion a year for these projects.

By adopting the bill the House approved an alteration in the complicated distribution formula for the aid to disadvantaged pupils, set up a new program of supplemental grants to states which have their own compensatory education programs and authorized $400 million in another new program for counties with large concentrations of poor children.

Minimum competency standards provisions were written into the bill. They provide aid to states to help them develop standards for assuring that students are acquiring the basic skills needed to function in society.

Under their terms, the government will not specify what those standards are to be, nor will it provide tests which the states would then administer to their students.

The impact aid question is one which has become a regular subject of debate between members of Congress who don't want their districts to lose federal assistance and presidents who want to cut back or even eliminate it.

Newton Charges Dropped

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. (AP) — Charges of attempted murder and assault against Black Panther leader Huey Newton have been dropped by a judge who called the case, stemming from a barroom melee, "a can of worms."

NEWTON

Municipal Court Judge William Kelsay, however, insisted that one of Newton's bodyguard's be tried on illegal gun possession charges.

In dismissing charges against Newton Thursday, Kelsay complained about conflicting stories by witnesses. "Most importantly, we have people who are drinking."

Newton, however, is scheduled to appear in Alameda County Superior Court Aug. 21 to stand trial on another assault charge in Oakland.

Singer Has Spinal Disease

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country singer Donna Fargo, suffering numbness on one side of her body, doesn't have multiple sclerosis as first feared.

But she has contracted transverse myelitis, an inflammation of the spinal cord that sometimes is a symptom of multiple sclerosis, a serious nerve disease.

Warner Bros. Records announced the diagnosis by her doctors Thursday. Miss Fargo has been hospitalized since June 2 in Santa Barbara, Calif., and had to cancel summer engagements extending through mid-September.

Doctors call her condition — apparently caused by a virus — "favorable." Prognosis: "We are hopeful that within a few months, she may be able to resume her career," they were quoted as saying.

She'll remain hospitalized another week and then return to Nashville to recuperate, a spokesman for Miss Fargo said.

Appealing Cheerleaders

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Three males, who wan to be cheerleaders, claiming they were rebuffed when they tried to join the Los Angeles Rams' new cheering squad are appealing to the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunities Commission.

The Lighter Side Of Today's News

In complaints filed Thursday, Bruce James, 24, Neville Archambault, 20, and Gary Steiner, 22, claim that because of their sex, they were not given a fair chance to join "the Embraceable Ewes."

"Cheerleading is not a thing to show your legs, it's to rouse spirit," said Archambault, who described himself as a "sports freak" with real interest in the game and maintained he could rouse a crowd as well as any woman.

Rams spokesman Jerry Wilcox said the women are volunteers who are paid $15 a game to cover expenses. The Rams have nothing against male cheerleaders, Wilcox said, but it's too late now to add members since the squad is in training.

New Stock Issues Bring Excitement To Market

By CHET CURRIER

NEW YORK (AP) — A few of the names are familiar, like Federal Express, the air freight company. Others are lesser known and sometimes a bit exotic — New World Computer, Tenderfoot International and Pacific Pistachios.

But they all share one distinction. They are among the approximately 18 companies that have gone public so far this year.

Though that represents only a trickle by historical standards on Wall Steet, it has brought a few stirrings of life recently to the market for new stock issues, which has been severely depressed since the early 1970s.

Federal Express' sale of 1.07 million shares on April 24 set off a surge of excitement that recalled the fever of the 1960s, when investors gobbled up new issues with little concern for such details as whether a company was making a profit.

Federal Express stock did just what a hot new issue is supposed to do. From an original price of $24 a share, it climbed to above the $40 level in the over-the-counter market.

Far more spectacular performances were common 10 years ago. Investment advisor Yale Hirsch of Old Tappan, N.J., working with figures gathered from various sources, reports that of 550 first-time offerings of stock in 1968, 125 at least tripled in price and another 124 doubled.

But the skyrockets suddenly stopped going off with the bear markets that hit Wall Street in 1969-70 and 1973-74, and many of the big new names of the late 1960s were only unhappy memories five years later.

Precise figures on new issues aren't easily found. But data collected by Hirsch show that the new-issue market, which reached an annual pace of close to $3 billion at its late-1960s peak, had slackened off to around the $100 million level by 1974.

More than 1,000 new names poured into the market in 1969. In 1975, there were less than 25. By last year the number had edged back up to about 45.

"New issues seem to mirror the condition of the market for existing stocks to a certain extent," Hirsch observed. Big years such as 1961 and 1968, he said, "were marked by ample availability of venture capital and a rather confident psychological environment."

The subject is of interest not only to investors and the financial community, but also to policymakers in Washington faced with several proposals in Congress to give more favorable tax treatment to capital gains.

Bringing out new stock, and thereby raising capital to allow corporations to expand and create new jobs, is a central element of the role the securities industry is supposed to play in the U.S. economic system. And Wall Streeters contend that the present tax structure on capital gains is a major obstacle to achieving that purpose.

"In the last few years it has been virtually impossible for small and medium-sized American businesses to raise capital through the sale of common stock," Arthur Levitt Jr., chairman of the American Stock Exchange, declared in an appearance late last month before a Senate subcommittee studying possible changes in taxes on capital gains.

The Carter administration is strongly opposing the capital-gains tax reduction plans put forward so far. Carter and Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal have maintained that giving bigger tax breaks on capital gains would provide a windfall for a relatively few wealthy individuals.

Blumenthal points out that many capital gains stem from speculation in real estate, commodities and other items "that have nothing to do with increasing the competitiveness of American industry, of aiding capital accumulation and of helping the growth and the creation of jobs in this country."

But if he is unreceptive to proposals made so far, Wall Streeters note that Blumenthal has also expressed some sympathy with their position.

"We aren't saving enough," he has been quoted as saying. "Our financial system is providing insufficient equity capital. We aren't investing near enough in productive plant, equipment and technological innovation."

Postal Strike Possibility Causes Concern In Business World

By WILLIAM GLASGALL
Associated Press Writer

The possibility that Postal Service workers will strike when their contract runs out a week from today has caused concern for companies that rely on the mails to reach the public.

At a few corporations, elaborate contingency plans have been drawn up. But many others apparently plan to sit back and hope that any labor stoppage will not last too long.

There "isn't ... a lot you can do about it," said William End, vice president of marketing at L. L. Bean, a sporting good and clothing mail-order house in Freeport, Maine.

"If they go on strike, we and a lot of other companies that use the mail are going to be in big trouble," he said.

An extended postal strike also would keep companies from mailing bills out and would allow customers to delay paying their debts. This would artificially inflate personal bank balances but would mean businesses might have to step up their borrowing to compensate for the delayed payments.

Consumers also could be hurt if a strike delayed receipt of Social Security and other government checks. A Treasury spokesman said, however, that a contingency plan had been drawn up to get the checks through during a strike, but he would give no details.

The Wall Street Journal, which sends out many of its nearly 1.5 million copies a day by mail from printing plants scattered across the country, has sent subscribers letters explaining they will be able to pick up their papers at designated newsstands, special delivery centers and other retail outlets if there is a strike.

At magazine publisher Time Inc., a spokesman said more than 6 million copies of Time and Sports Illustrated normally are mailed to subscribers each week. "We believe the government has a responsibility for delivery of mail, and we expect them to do so," he said.

But the spokesman, who asked to be quoted anonymously, conceded that actually "there's very little we can do" if the postal workers walk off their jobs.

The nation's 554,000 postal workers are represented by four unions, which are seeking a 14 percent pay increase in the first year of a new contract. About 1,000 of the workers rallied in Washington on Wednesday to protest the slow pace of contract talks with the Postal Service.

The Postal Service handles an average of 180 million pieces of first-class mail and 2.3 million fourth-class parcels a day, a spokesman said.

Some of the major mail-order giants found alternate delivery systems long before the current postal labor dispute.

Sears, Roebuck & Co., for instance, ships most of its parcels by company trucks to local stores, where they are picked up by customers. Spiegel Inc. sends 95 percent of its shipments by United Parcel Service, a national private parcel carrier. At L. L. Bean, 80 percent to 90 percent of the outgoing packages go by United Parcel as well, and End said shipments scheduled for mail service probably would be switched to the private service.

FCC Urged To Permit Non-AT&T Services

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department urged the Federal Communications Commission Thursday to permit telephone customers to buy special long-distance service from competitors of AT&T.

Assistant Attorney General John H. Shenefield, head of the antitrust division, said ordinary users of long-distance telephones should have the same opportunity that is now available to large corporations which contract with separate companies like MCI Corp for such service.

The department filed its comments in a document before the FCC which is considering proposals to expand competition in long-distance telephone service.

Under the special arrangements, companies like MCI provide unlimited long-distance calls for a flat rate.

Shenefield said that private-line customers should have a choice between AT&T and the specialized service provided by MCI and other competitors.

Competition should be permitted in all communication services unless there is clear evidence of injury to the public interest, the Justice Department said. The competition provided by MCI and others permits lower prices for phone service, the department added.

Metzenbaum Vows To Probe Marines

CLEVELAND (AP) — U.S. Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, vowed to seek a federal investigation of Marine enlistment practices following an apparent attempted suicide by a Cleveland Marine recruit who wrote him last week complaining of boot camp pressures.

Pvt. Kevin J. McNeeley, 18, was in serious condition Wednesday night in the intensive care unit of the Naval Regional Medical Center in Balboa, Calif.

A spokesman for the San Diego Marine Corps Recruit Depot, where McNeeley attended boot camp, said the private had swallowed some metal polish Tuesday after a disciplinary hearing. The spokesman refused to cite any charges against McNeeley or if he had been punished.

McNeeley wrote Metzenbaum that he felt compelled to seek psychiatric help due to enlistment and boot camp pressures.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

Crime (Budget) Buster

WHEN HE WAS running for the Democratic nomination as criminal district attorney here, John T. Montford talked about hiring an office administrator if he were elected.

Now that he's assured of being elected, having defeated incumbent Alton Griffin in the primary and facing no opposition in November, Montford is talking about hiring four more investigators and five law clerks.

The question naturally arises why he didn't qualify his campaign pledges of doing "a better job" with the phrase "provided I can hire a bigger staff."

Politics aside, though, the Commissioners Court needs to look at the reasons Montford has for wanting a bigger staff, weigh those against budgetary restrictions, and come to an objective conclusion.

IN HIS BUDGET proposal, the district attorney nominee is asking for 12 assistant attorneys, five law clerks, seven investigators and 10 secretaries.

The additional investigators and law clerks would be partially offset by a reduction of two in the number of prosecuting attorneys and secretaries. With the addition of an office administrator and the pay improvements that Montford proposes, though, the net effect would be to increase the office's budget substantially.

If, as Montford predicts, this extra staff would result in reducing the crime rate substantially it would be money well spent.

Old hands at the Courthouse point out, however, that criminal justice expenditures here—from the police and sheriff's office right on through the prosecuting attorney's office, the courts and the probation offices—have already increased dramatically in recent years.

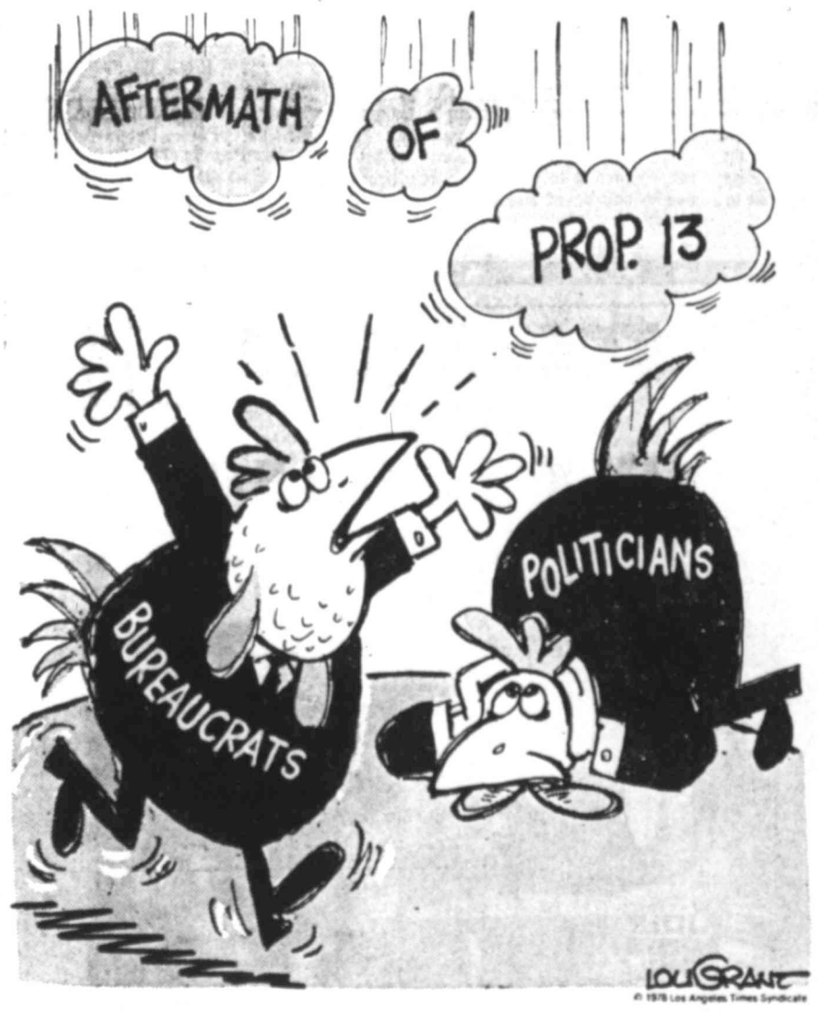

The result to date? A spiraling crime rate.

TAXPAYERS who are concerned both about crime in the streets (not to mention against their homes and properties) and about the ever-increasing cost of government want to see a better job done for less in all areas of operation.

Mr. Montford's smashing victory at the polls in May was a reflection of voters' hope that he would make good on his campaign promises of tougher prosecution, better cooperation with law enforcement agencies and a generally inflexible attitude toward crime and punishment.

In light of recent history, here and nationwide, that "throwing more money" at problems hasn't produced satisfactory results, the voters now can rightly be a bit perplexed that Montford's first move is to ask for more money.

He recommended, and the Citizens Traffic Commission endorsed, that 38th Street be barricaded at University Avenue.

Now it's up to the City Council to veto this scheme.

For the record, 38th Street is the only street between 34th and 50th that goes all the way across town, east-to-west, from Avenue A to Slide Road.

It is therefore heavily traveled—especially, ahem, by motorists seeking an escape route from having to stop at every traffic signal on either 34th or 50th Street.

That being the case, several persons living near the 38th St.-University Ave. intersection petitioned that a traffic signal be provided there.

After using his most modern techniques (No, Virginia, he's progressed beyond the stage of drawing lines in the sand with a stick), McDaniel decided that the $20,000 cost of a signal couldn't be justified.

He recommended, instead, that a median be installed in University Avenue that would block 38th Street cross-traffic but that it be "channelized" so that left-turn lanes off University Avenue onto 38th Street still would be possible.

IN FAIRNESS to McDaniel, his objective of "keeping the traffic moving" on University Avenue by not installing another stoplight on University Avenue is commendable—but, as he himself predicted, his idea for blocking the intersection is "a very controversial thing."

In fact, it's as full of potholes as are Lubbock streets.

You can't force ALL of the traffic in town to use the section-line streets at one-mile intervals. In fact, the need for a good traffic-carrying corridor in the vicinity of 38th Street is so great that an east-west expressway there was recommended in the city's long-range traffic plan.

The expressway is a long way off, if ever, but there's still a need to make 37th and 38th Streets a one-way pair for east-west traffic.

To put up a barrier to prevent 38th Street traffic from crossing University Avenue would be pure folly.

THE PROBLEM Bill Clements faces in convincing voters that John Hill is a big spender is shown by this line from a political analysis story written by a member of the state capitol press corps:

"Clements argues that he is for 'tax relief' while Hill is for 'tax reform'...Both phrases mean more or less the same thing."

Obviously, Clements hasn't phrased his position so that even the "usually well-informed sources" understand it.

As Clements sees it, "tax relief" means giving government less money to spend; "tax reform" means getting the same amount of money as now (or more) but getting it from the other guy.

Red Looks Worst On Yemen

WASHINGTON—Soviet leaders have picked North Yemen in the Strategic Horn of Africa as the next country to test the U.S. and our Middle East and NATO allies.

This is clearly signaled by the movement of more than 6,000 Cuban troops into neighboring South Yemen from Ethiopia in the past three weeks, and preparations are being made to fly in thousands more.

The immediate objective, according to U.S. intelligence experts, is to consolidate that pro-Soviet government hold over the country for the coming military operation against the pro-West Arab government of North Yemen.

LOCATED ON THE Arabian Peninsula, bordering the Red Sea, South Yemen, and oil-rich Saudi Arabia, North Yemen is now being furnished modern arms by the U.S. and Saudi Arabia, which is aiding the country financially.

North Yemen is strategically located across the Red Sea from Eritrea, where the Marxist government of Ethiopia is now trying to crush a long-time rebellion with the help of Soviet, Cuban and East German military advisers.

U.S. intelligence and military planners have warned the White House that the Soviet-Cuban military build-up in South Yemen is the most important strategic development facing the U.S. and NATO in Africa at this time.

THE NEW AND HIGHLY significant development is that Moscow is preparing to use Cuban troops to attack an Arab nation being furnished arms aid from the U.S. and is supported by Saudi Arabia, the biggest oil supplier of the West in the region.

A takeover of North Yemen by pro-Soviet forces of South Yemen and the Cubans would create a direct threat to Saudi Arabia, whose capital, Riyadh, is located less than 500 miles from the border and to tanker traffic passing out of the Persian Gulf through the Strait of Hormuz.

Under the North Atlantic Treaty, the Horn of Africa including North Yemen is within the alliance's potential theater of operation which is bounded on the south by the Tropic of Cancer.

The strategic importance of these sealanes to NATO was stressed recently in Washington by Gen. Alexander M. Haig, the NATO Commander.

He revealed to members of the House International Relatiof Committee that protecting these sealanes had been given the second highest defense priority within NATO. Only the defense of central Europe has a higher priority.

Both Saudi Arabia and Egypt are privately urging President Carter to draw the line in North Yemen by warning Moscow and Havana that the U.S. will not permit a Soviet-Cuban directed takeover there.

President Sadat of Egypt sent a confidential message to President Carter last week warning that developments in North and South Yemen were but "the start of a Soviet plot to cover all Arab countries."

The terse message was dispatved after North Yemen's President Ghashmy was assassinated by a parcel bomb carried by a South Yemeni Envoy.

and President Salem Robaya Ali of South Yemen was ousted and killed by pro-Moscow officers supported by Soviet-Cuban-East German advisers.

These events have caused the Saudi Arabian government to put its military forces on alert. That government also sent a warning to President Carter that the Soviets have begun a power play to surround the entire Middle East oil-producing area and gain control of the oil supplies.

James J. Kilpatrick:

Curses Foiled Again, By Golly

WASHINGTON—Some of my colleagues of the media are howling with outrage and despair at the Supreme Court's decision in the Case of the Seven Dirty Words. I wish they were howling in a better cause.

Granted, this has been a terrible year for the press at the hands of the high tribunal. Lyle Denniston, Supreme Court reporter for the Washington Star, added up the score the other day:

Through June, out of six major decisions, the press had lost five.

Perhaps, the 5-4 verdict of July 3 in the matter of Station WBAI means we lost six of seven. But on this last point, I am not so sure.

In affirming the action of the Federal Communications Commission in this affair, the Supreme Court may have struck a small but useful blow for good taste and simple decency. Rationally viewed, that prospect has a nice appeal.

THESE WERE THE facts: A little after 2 o'clock on the afternoon of Oct. 30, 1973, the New York radio station broadcast a "satiric monologue" by George Carlin.

A transcript of this alleged humor accompanies the Supreme Court's opinion. The 12-minute monologue consisted almost entirely of the repetitive use of the Seven Dirty Words.

The idea, if there was an idea here at all, presumably was that dirty words in themselves are harmless.

A listener who heard the broadcast on his car radio complained to the FCC, and early in 1975 the commission handed WBAI a warning—no more than that—and reasserted its authority under the law to act against "patently offensive" material on the air.

In its 1975 opinion, the FCC cited the legal doctrine of the "public nuisance." In his opinion for the majority, Justice Stevens made the same point.

A PIG IN A pigsty is all well and good; a pig in the parlor is a pig out of place.

Carlin's monologue at 2 in the morning might be forgivable; at 2 in the afternoon, with children tuning in, it was something else entirely.

The majority did not vest the FCC with broad new powers of sweeping censorship; the majority ruled simply that in the case the FCC had not abused its regulatory powers.

It was a mild opinion from the high court. This was not "a harsh blow to the freedom of expression of every person in this country," as the President of the National Association of Broadcasters termed it.

Neither was it an opinion to make civil libertarians "practically dizzy with depression," as another critic charged.

Look. It is high time, it seems to me, that someone stuck up for the rights of the enormous majority of our people who find George Carlin's filthy words offensive.

Why should they be put to the annoyance of "turning off the set" to avoid this rude intrusion upon their sensibilities?

AS A NIGHTCLUB act, this foul-mouthed performance probably has standing in the name of "free speech." No one goes to a nighclub by inadvertence. The radio is accessible to anyone.

Something else: It is also high time for zealous libertarians to stop equating the George Carlins of the garbage circuit with Shakespeare, Chaucer and Twain.

In the name of cultural values, let us discriminate. Not one scintilla of evidence suggests the FCC is about to lay clumsy hands on works of art. The coverage of the Supreme Court's opinion ought to tell us something.

Not a single newspaper, so far as I am advised, has printed the Seven Dirty Words, even though we are in business to answer our readers' reasonable questions.

This is a matter of editorial judgment, which is all the FCC has asked the broadcasters to exercise. It is a matter of taste.

FINALLY, THE sophisticates of our society would be well advised to back off from the notion that scatology and wit go always hand in hand. It isn't so.

There is something pathetic in the performer who relies for his laughs on the "bleeping" this and the "bleeping" that. What a poverty of imagination! What barrenness of mind! Good men can do better.

For the past few months, Reed Irvine, president of Accuracy in Media, has been belaboring the Washington Post for inadequate coverage of the Cambodian massacres.

Irvine finally got under the skin of Executive Editor Ben Bradlee. Bradlee wrote him a note denouncing him as a "carping, vindictive, retromingent vigilante."

This is the kind of line that reduces the Seven Dirty Words to wooden nickels and elevates cursing to a fine art. No court or commission would dare to disturb it.

Sylvia Porter:

Two-Bit Opposition Deserves Lynch-ing

DESPITE PRESIDENT Carter's startlingly misinformed attack on the mounting numbers of congressmen and senators who favor a cut in today's destructively tough capital gains tax in any law enacted in 1978, the odds continue to favor a moderate reduction.

What might this mean to you?

Not you, the millionaire American whom Carter has blasted as due for "huge tax windfalls" if the capital gains tax is lowered, rather than made still tougher, as he urges.

But you—the average jobseeker, jobholder, middle-income family, modest owner of stocks, a small business seeking to raise new capital to compete or expand, a would-be homebuyer who needs a mortgage, an elderly couple selling your home.

IN SUM, IT COULD mean an improved chance of getting and keeping a job or a ceiling on the cost of borrowing money for your business or home.

It could mean a lower tax when you sell your home, even an easing of pressures on your cost of living because reducing the capital gains could cut the inflationary federal budget deficit, not raise it.

All this is spelled out in a private report prepared by Merrill Lynch Economics, Inc., a division of the nation's largest financial services company.

The reasonable assumptions are made in a Merrill Lynch Econometric Model of the U.S. economy from 1978's third quarter through 1980.

Any capital gains tax reduction approved by Congress would be close to the modest compromise plan sponsored by Al Ullman, the powerful Oregon Democrat who heads the House Ways and Means Committee.

ULLMAN'S PROPOSAL would cut back the capital gains tax from today's punitive 49 percent and 1979's proposed "reform" top of 52.5 percent to 35 percent.

This would be achieved merely by removing the complicated "tax preference" label from capital gains and eliminating all the complex alternative tax methods—both major tax simplifications.

A ceiling of 35 percent would be acceptable to an impressive number of liberal Democrats as well as Republicans—and would help average families as much as (if not more than) the millionaires singled out for Carter's wrath.

Specifically, by including a top 35 percent capital gains tax along with other tax changes in its Econometric Model of the U.S. for the end of 1978 through 1980, Merrill Lynch's forecast is improved to this degree:

* THE "REAL" growth in our economy (gross national product with the impact of price hikes on the dollar totals wiped out), would be accelerated from a 3.3 percent average annual growth to 3.4 percent.

* Tiny as that 0.1 percent seems, it would create 100,000 additional jobs by 1980 and lower the jobless rate from 5.7 percent to 5.6 percent (near a realistic bottom in our economy).

* Business investments in new plants and equipment would rise $1.5 billion—an increase in spending which is vital to enhancing our productivity (efficiency), control of inflation and competitiveness in the world's trading markets.

* Reduce our federal budget by $1.4 billion in 1980—on the premise that a lower capital gains tax would spur sales of securities now "locked in" because the owners balk at paying so punishing a tax on gains.

This is a fundamental point because it explains how a lower tax of this type can actually raise the Treasury tax take by encouraging sales and payment of taxes on gains.

* Raise stock prices an average of 2 to 3 percent (an extremely conservative estimate), making it easier for small as well as larger businesses to raise new capital through sales of stocks.

* Reduce long-term interest rates by a moderate fraction of a percent—at the very least putting a ceiling on home mortgage rates and other borrowing costs.

THIS COMING WEEK (to start July 17), House Ways and Means will resume writing a tax bill which a majority of the committee will approve and which will have support of leaders in both houses.

Assuming it contains the Ullman compromise, it will be far more than what Carter denounces as "two bits for the average American."

And if the White House vetos tax legislation both Houses favor, the President will risk a humiliating (and to our economy, violently upsetting) overriding of his veto.

Fed's First Objective Lies With Inflation Fight

By R. GREGORY NOKES

WASHINGTON (AP) — The money-managing Federal Reserve Board is up to its old tricks, pushing interest rates to the highest levels in years and contributing to fears of a new recession.

It's all reminiscent of 1974 when the Fed's pressure on interest rates and the money supply played a major role in the nation's plunge into the deepest and longest recession since World War II.

But wasn't that in the days of Republican presidents and the conservative chairman of the board, crusty old Arthur Burns? Didn't Democrat Jimmy Carter name his own man, G. William Miller, to run the Fed? What goes on here?

What goes on here is that the Fed, like the Congress and the presidency, has a role to play in government that sometimes transcends the inclinations of any particular chairman.

In other words, no matter what Miller's personal views might be, nor no matter how much he would like to please Carter, the business of the Fed comes first, and right now the Fed sees its business as fighting inflation.

The White House and the Congress are the spending branches of government, and, whether for better or worse, they are spending far more than the government has in revenues.

The Fed, on the other hand — because of its control over the nation's money supply — is in a position to try to counter the impact of excess spending, especially when it shows up in worsening inflation. It reacts almost instinctively by tightening the money supply, an action that, theoretically at least, relieves pressure on prices by pushing up interest rates.

The Fed influences the nation's money supply by trading government securities in the nation's financial markets. When it buys securities, it puts money into the system, and when it sells, it takes money out. Such actions influence interest rates, which in turn can affect business activity.

The Fed receives plenty of support and encouragement for its anti-inflationary stance from the nation's traditionally conservative banking system, which it regulates.

With prices rising at an annual rate of more than 10 percent so far this year, the Fed has predictably reacted by tightening the screws on the money supply, pushing interest rates to 1974 levels. The cost of conventional home mortgages is now over 10 percent, the highest in recent history.

But there is a danger that as the Fed pushes up interest rates to slow the economy and cool inflation it may push them too high and plunge the country into a recession. Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal has said the Fed is courting precisely that danger now.

Miller has openly admitted the Fed's actions could result in a recession if the White House and Congress don't cooperate by reducing federal spending.

But even Miller may have had enough of rising interest rates. He voted last week against the latest increase in the Fed's discount rate, which was raised from 7 percent to 7¼ percent, the highest in more than three years. He was outvoted 3-2, however, the first time in recent memory a Fed chairman has been on the losing side in such a vote. The discount rate is the interest charged on loans to banks.

Analysis

The vote focused attention on the other members of the Federal Reserve Board, all of whom were appointed by Republican presidents, and who are generally more conservative than Miller.

They are J. Charles Partee, an economist and former head of the Fed staff; Henry Wallich, a former Yale professor of economics and magazine columnist; Stephen S. Gardner, a former deputy secretary of the Treasury and chairman of the Girard Trust Bank of Philadelphia; Philip Coldwell, former head of the Dallas Federal Reserve Bank, and Philip Jackson, a mortgage banker from Alabama.

Partee voted with Miller on the recent split vote, with the others on the majority side, except for Gardner, who was absent. A seventh seat on the board is vacant, but President Carter is understood to have decided on a woman, Nancy Teeters, 47, a congressional economist and a liberal.

Appointments are for 14 years and once he names a member, the president no longer has any authority over him, or her, which gives the Fed its independent status. It is technically responsible to Congress, but lawmakers frequently complain they have little influence over its actions either, and there have been various proposals in recent years to extend congressional, or presidential influence, or both, over the Fed.

In exerting control over the nation's money supply, which increased nearly 8 percent last year, the Fed uses comparatively little currency. Less than one-third, or $93 billion, of the total money supply of about $350 billion is in currency or coin. The rest is in credit and such things as checking account balances at banks.

But when the Fed does want to put actual currency into the banking system, to replace worn-out currency for example, it does this by placing an order with the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, a Treasury Department agency that prints the money for the Fed. The Fed then sends the money to regional Federal Reserve banks, which place it with member commercial banks.

The Bureau of Engraving and Printing last year printed $19.5 billion in new currency for the Fed. No one except the Fed can have money printed.

Customer-Owned Phones Approved

WASHINGTON (AP) — People who buy their own telephones may connect their sets to the national telephone network without carrier-provided couplers, the Federal Communications Commission says.

The FCC said Thursday that the equipment must comply with FCC standards to protect the national network from damage. The policy became effective last Oct. 17 after the Supreme Court declined to review the FCC ruling.

Ford Votes To Remove Iacocca As President

By PAT KIGHT

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co. President Lee A. Iacocca has been fired, little more than a year after his 32-year rise through the ranks of the world's second biggest automaker was derailed in a corporate shakeup.

Ford's board of directors voted unanimously Thursday to remove Iacocca from the presidency of the auto company, said William Clay Ford, one of the firm's top executives and brother of board chairman Henry Ford II.

"The vote on the recommendation of my brother (that Iacocca be removed from the post) was unanimous," said William Ford, adding he had known for a few weeks that the ouster was in the works.

Iacocca could not be reached for comment. But the industry publication Automotive News quoted him as saying: "There was no reason. He (Henry Ford II) and Bill (Ford) and I sat there and he just said he came to that conclusion and that's it."

Iacocca will vacate the post Oct. 15 — on his 54th birthday — the trade journal reported in an article to be published Monday.

After joining the auto company in 1946 as an engineering trainee and later switching to sales, Iacocca shot to the top. He had been considered the likely successor when Henry Ford, 61, steps down as chief executive in 1980.

But industry insiders said Iacocca had become too visible and aggressive to suit Ford's tastes. "Lee is like a Medici prince," one lieutenant said. "He created his own city-state within the company."

Iacocca won his way into Henry Ford's graces as the marketing genius behind the 1964 introduction of the Mustang, Detroit's first low-priced, sporty car.

His success with the Mustang helped catapult Iacocca to the top of the No. 2 auto company at the age of 46. Industry observers called it one of the fastest climbs to the top ever in the business.

But in April 1977, it became evident Iacocca had fallen from favor.

Ford split the power at the top into a ruling triumvirate of himself, Iacocca and Philip Caldwell.

Ford, who said he would retain decision-making responsibility when the triumvirate disagreed, downplayed suggestions that Caldwell was being elevated to the No. 2 spot at the company. However, he acknowledged that Caldwell would make any crucial decision "if I was out of the country or not available."

Then, last month, Iacocca was bumped down the executive ladder when Ford elevated his brother, William, to the top.

Under that reshuffling, William Ford and Caldwell reported directly to Ford — while Iacocca reported to Caldwell.

That move was seen by industry insiders as an effort by Ford to keep the family's control of the auto company founded by his grandfather, Henry Ford.

Ironically, a corporate shakeup sent Iacocca shooting to the company presidency.

Having caught the eye of Ford executives in the late 1950s when he was assistant manager for the company's sales office in Philadelphia, Iacocca was brought to Detroit by Robert McNamara, then general manager of the Ford Division.

McNamara left to become John F. Kennedy's secretary of defense, and in 1960 Henry Ford promoted Iacocca to general manager of the Ford Division and a corporate vice president.

Five years later, after his success with the Mustang, Iacocca became chief of the car and truck group, and in 1967, he was named executive vice president of North American affairs.

It was the firing in 1969 of Semon E. Knudsen — a move many Ford insiders said Iacocca helped engineer — that gave Iacocca the presidency in 1970.

Next Monday, Iacocca was scheduled to unveil the automaker's 1979 Mustang — the latest edition of the model that helped him climb to power.

Ethiopians Initiate Eritrean Bombing

ROME (AP) — Ethiopian forces have begun air and naval bombardment of Eritrean rebels who have besieged the port of Massawa for seven months, the Eritrean People's Liberation Front says.

The EPLF also reported its forces beat back another attempt by government forces to break the rebels' siege of Asmara, the capital of Eritrea, which Ethiopia annexed in 1962.

Magazine's Playmate Of Year Forbidden To Cut Long Locks

CHICAGO (UPI) — Debra Jo Fondren wants to cut the thick, blond hair that flows more than four feet down to her thighs but she cannot — not if she wants to keep her job.

The 23-year-old beauty from Beaumont — recently named Playboy magazine's 1978 Playmate of the Year — said it takes her an hour every morning just to comb her hair. Washing and drying makes the exceptionally long locks even more of a problem.

"I would like to cut it," Miss Fondren said in an interview. "But I can't. It's in the contract. We can't change our personal appearance."

Still, she said she is enjoying the one-year publicity tour that awaited her as part of her title.

Beside traveling across the United States and overseas, she receives a $10,000 cash bonus, a new sports car and additional gifts with a total value of more than $25,000.

Miss Fondren, a cocktail waitress in Beaumont, was discovered by a Playboy official in a coffee shop while she was vacationing in Las Vegas with her boyfriend. She agreed to pose for the magazine and later was named Playmate of the Year.

"It was nice. I always wanted to be a playmate. It has made me a more outspoken, more assertive woman. Two years ago I was so shy and withdrawn. I didn't think I was beautiful or even pretty."

Her parents were "apprehensive" about her nude modeling but are "tremendously flattered" about the publicity she has received during the tour.

Her boyfriend, who still lives in Texas, "doesn't allow me to put my head in the clouds. He keeps me real sane. I think it helps to have friends who knew you before all this because they keep you in touch with the real you."

Miss Fondren spent a year studying drafting at Lamar University but is now glad she did not stick with it. "Now I'd probably be a big-butted, frustrated draftswoman."

She said she would like to get married and have children when she is about 30. But after the tour, which ends in May, she said would like to go into public relations.

"From a nobody in Beaumont, Texas, to having all this responsibility — it's a big challenge. It's very nice."

Rare Diseases Victim Due To Graduate

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Donald Lee Jr. is scheduled to graduate summa cum laude next month from St. Mary's University. That's not bad, especially since he is afflicted with two rare genetic diseases that were supposed to have killed him 18 years ago.

Lee, 27, who stands only three feet four inches tall because of a brittle bone condition and a malfunctioning pituitary gland, receives his psychology degree Aug. 11. His grade average was 3.84 out of a possible 4.0.

Lee's father, Dr. Donald Lee, said he and his wife were told by medical specialists not to expect their son to live past the age of 9.

Lee wants to use his psychology degree to become a counselor for the disabled. "I think I could do a great job. I am mentally job oriented and I've had a lot of practice as a cheerer-upper."

"I spend hours on the phone talking with people. I just love people and all forms of communication. I can never have too many visitors," Lee added. "People seem to like to discuss their problems with me."

Lee has already gotten a taste of the business world by selling radios and car stereos from his bedside telephone.

When he's not reading, he absorbs himself in his amateur radios, which he has arranged around his bed. The walls of his room are covered with cards and messages from ham radio operators from around the world.

With the help of his parents and a visiting nurse, Lee can lock his wheelchair into the driver's seat of a special van and drive to classes or run errands. He drove himself to classes until multiple fractures of his brittle bones forced him to study independently at home during the past two years.

FDA Says Purchasers Of Contraceptive Misled

By CHRIS CONNELL

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration says women who believed a popular new contraceptive suppository was 99 percent effective in preventing pregnancy were misled.

The agency said Wednesday that Norwich Eaton Pharmaceuticals "overpromoted" the non-prescription suppository, Encare Oval, which has become extremely popular on college campuses and among teenagers since it was introduced to the American market last November.

The FDA, in a notice sent to one million doctors, pharmacists and other health professionals, said the pill is the only birth control method that is 99 percent effective.

In the same drug bulletin, the agency warned that women who use intrauterine contraceptive devices run a risk three to five times higher than normal of developing pelvic inflammatory disease, which could leave them permanently sterile.

It said the risks are particularly serious for women under age 25 who have never had children, those with a history of the inflammation and those "who have more than one sex partner or who frequently change partners."

The agency said it plans to add this warning to leaflets given patients and doctors about IUDs.

Encare Oval, a suppository that fizzes into a foam when placed in the vagina, is probably about as effective as other contraceptive foams and gels, the FDA said. Their effectiveness varies from 71 percent to 98 percent, according to the agency, depending upon how carefully the woman follows the directions.

All the foams, including Encare Oval, contain the same sperm-killing ingredient, nonoxynol-9.

The FDA said two West German studies on which the manufacturer based the claim that Encare Oval had a pregnancy rate of only "1 per 100 woman years" were poorly conducted and unreliable.

The company, under prodding from the FDA, voluntarily changed its advertising and labeling for the suppository in April, dropping mention of the West German studies. It issued a statement Wednesday saying, "We believe that Encare Oval, because it is convenient and easy to use properly, is a highly reliable contraceptive."

The regulatory agency issued a press release in conjunction with the drug bulletin saying Encare Oval had been overpromoted. It expressed the fear that "inflated popular expectations" for the contraceptive "could lead to loss of consumer confidence in the entire class of vaginal contraceptive foams and gels."

The pill is considered more than 99 percent effective and intrauterine devices 94 percent to 99 percent effective, but both those methods entail more physical risks for the woman. Foams, while generally less effective, are far safer.

The FDA said there has been "a recent resurgence of interest in over-the-counter vaginal contraceptive drugs" due to the "growing concern about safety" of the pill and IUDs.

A market research group has estimated that more than 500,000 women have used Encare Oval, which sells in packages of a dozen suppositories for $3.75. It must be used 10 minutes before intercourse.

FDA Commissioner Donald Kennedy said it is "especially popular on college campuses and among teenagers," who have an "urgent" need for "the clearest and most reliable information about contraceptives."

Encare Oval, sold without a prescription as are other foams and condoms, is so popular at a commercial pharmacy in the FDA's headquarters building that the pharmacist keeps it locked up because shoppers were stealing it.

Dr. Sidney Wolfe of the Ralph Nader-affiliated Health Research Group, said Encare Oval's ads had made it sound like "the magic answer" for people seeking a contraceptive both safe and effective.

Wolfe said using a contraceptive foam with a diaphragm is highly safe and effective. The FDA estimates this dual method is 80 to 98 percent effective. Condoms are anywhere from 64 to 97 percent effective, said FDA spokesman Wayne Pines.

A recent federal report said that in 1976 more families were using sterilization than the pill to avoid pregnancy.

A survey showed that among married women ages 15 to 44, some 30 percent were sterile, nearly 49 percent were using temporary methods of birth control, 13 percent were pregnant or trying to conceive and about 8 percent were not using birth control but not trying for a family.

Moluccan Leader Seeks Inquiry

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — A South Moluccan leader is calling for a parliamentary inquiry into the fruitless negotiations between the Netherlands and Indonesian nationalists 30 years ago over independence for the Moluccan islands.

Johan Alvares Manusama, 67, president of the so-called government-in-exile of the South Moluccan Republic, claims the present Dutch government gave an incomplete account of the late 1949 talks in a recent report to parliament. The government said the Dutch negotiators did all they could in the talks.

Canaries Taught To Sing Harmony

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
Associated Press Writer

NEWS ITEM: A Soviet scientist in the Ukraine says he has taught six canaries to sing in perfect harmony. His method involves auditioning hundreds of canaries.

• • • •

Mulligan's Stew

SCENE: A rehearsal hall somewhere in the heart of downtown Kiev where Commissar Producer Big Bird and Commissar Director Dimitrievich Fussfeathers are auditioning canaries for the People's Barbershop sextet. Ivan Lightfinger is at the upright piano in the corner.

MARY CANARY: (cry of anguish) Oh, god (small "g" as becomes a cry of anguish in godless state) I gotta get this job. I gotta get this job.

MYNAH BYRD: My name is Comrade MYNAH BYRD. I was born in Minsk, raised in Pinsk, made my debut as a peace dove in a people's pageant in Omsk and will sing a little song I learned in Tomak: "Way down upon the Ob River, far, far away; that's where our quotas we deliver, that's the Sov-i-et way ..."

BIG BIRD: O.K., dearie, just leave your address with the party cultural secretary. Next.

MARY CANARY: (cry of anguish) Oh god (small "g") I gotta get this job.

BERTHA BIRDSONG: I'm Bertha Birdsong. My father was born in the Harz Mountains of the German Democratic Republic, famous for its fine singers. He made his debut singing "Happy birthday, Walter Ulbricht." For this he was banished when Ulbricht was dismissed as first party secretary and now we live quietly in Odessa, where I'm clerk of the works at the people's tractor factory. I'd like to dedicate my song to Comrade Party General Secretary Leonid Brezhnev and the members of the Presidium: "Send In the Clowns."

BIG BIRD: Decadent, Imerialist Western trash ... next please.

MARY CANARY: Oh god, I gotta get this job ... Or it's back to the cage in the Kharkov Five and Ten Ruble Store.

NIKOLAEVNA TWEETSKI: I'm little Nikolaevna Tweetski and I've been singing since I was 6, when I sang to the Secret Police about the radio my grandfather had in the barn. I also sang about the envelope with bird food my parents got from America and now I sing solo with the orphanage glee club. Nobody else will sing with me.

FUSSFEATHERS: Get on with it ... (aside) ... a real canary, this one. Compared with her, Joe Bananas is a deaf mute.

NIKOLAEVNA: (trills) "Let's all sing to K.G.B., tweet, tweet-tweet, tweet-tweet; off to Siberia with dis-si-dents, keep your kultur neat neat..."

BIG BIRD: That's ideological harmony, the way I like it, kiddo, er, I mean, comrade. You'll do. Next please ...

OLGA FROM THE VOLGA: They call me Olga from the Volga, although I was actually born Dmitrievna Danalavokov at Dnepropetrovsky on the Dnepr River, but I knew because of power shortages I would never see that name in lights on the marquee of the Bolshoi. So as not to seem critical, I'd like to dedicate my song to the People's Electric Power Cooperative: "You Light Up My Life ..."

LIGHTFINGER: I don't know the tune.

ALL: What? You gotta be kidding. (Other exclamations and derisive howls).

(Shots ring out. Ivan falls from his stool).

FUSSFEATHERS: (Mopping brow tragically) I ask the culture committee for a piano player they send me a tank mechanic ...

BIG BIRD: Get on with it. What do you think we have here, a regular five year plan?

FUSSFEATHERS: Next please, and you'll have to chirp without a musical accompaniment.

MARY CANARY: That's me. Oh, god, I need this job. (nervously) Hello, out there ... I'm Mary Canary, the belle of Byelorussia. I sing a little. I dance a little. And I'd do anything, anything to get out of that cage in the pet section of the Five and Ten Ruble. It's a regular Gulag, if you'll pardon the expression. I just wnat to try my wings and fly ...

BIG BIRD: Please, I haven't all week.

MARY CANARY: Here goes ... oh, god, I need this job ... "One singular sensation, every little chirp she makes ..."

FUSSFEATHERS: That's fine dearie, just leave your address (etc).

MARY CANARY: Cattle. That's what we are. Cattle. It's not an audition; it's a cattle call. (Curtain).

Secret Service Van Recovered 'Intact'

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — A Secret Service van carrying expensive radio installation and repair equipment was recovered nearly intact in New York City, one day after it was stolen from a New Haven parking garage, authorities said.

Two tires were missing from the vehicle discovered Wednesday in the Bronx. The thieves ignored the more expensive equipment inside, taking only a tube tester and a tool box, a Secret Service spokesman said. "The van is probably worth $6,000 and the equipment worth another $8,000-$9,000," he said.

Carter Bothered By News Leaks

By HELEN THOMAS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sometimes Richard Nixom must sit back and smile. Especially when he reads about the woes of successors who worry about news leaks.

With President Nixon, the question of leaks became an obsession, leading to the creation of the "plumbers" unit and all that ensued in his Watergate downfall.

Despite it all, Nixon still is a strong advocate of secret diplomacy and government secrets. Most presidents are. It is an occupational disease and when they wake up in the morning and read in newspapers some of the matters marked "classified" they react angrily.

Analysis

President Carter has become more and more preoccupied with the subject. Recently, he put out an order which will lead to a reduction in the number of classifiers and classifications. But shortly afterwards he called in a group of key congressmen to complain about news leaks which he claims are reducing the number of informants of confidential information.

Carter found a sympathetic audience. No one wants to be accused of defending the disclosure of national security secrets. At the same time, the administration has yet to come up with a sound definition of national security and under the new classification plan, it is still an individual discretionary matter. So be it.

In recent times, it has been found that under the guise of national security, the nation has been deprived of facts that the enemy knew only too well. A case in point is the 14-month secret bombing of Cambodia during the Nixon era.

The Vietnamese, Cambodians, Russians, Chinese, numerous allies knew the truth. Only Americans did not.

The Pentagon Papers are replete with information which could have helped the American people better understand why they were in the Vietnam War and all its ramifications. The Supreme Court upheld the publication of the papers.

The traditional argument over the disclosure of inside information is that it forecloses a president's options. Premature disclosure undoubtedly can wipe out an option, particularly if it causes an uproar.

There have been disclosures which the Carter administration would just as soon not have been published involving the shelving of the neutron bomb and a report that Carter was stalling strategic arms limitation talks.

But Nixon and Carter are not the only presidents who cherish government secrecy. Lyndon Johnson would hit the ceiling over leaks. He also wanted to build a wall between the White House and the Executive Office Building to make sure that reporters did not trespass. The EOB became a fortress under his administration. It still is.

It is remembered that John Kennedy, who kept the secrecy lid on the Bay of Pigs invasion, later wished that the story would have been published by the newspapers that were aware of it. He believed in retrospect that he might have avoided that debacle if there had been publicity.

So it is a two-way street. Sometimes disclosures can avoid foolish acts, or acts that are not debated thoroughtly.

A sidelight to the problem itself is the administration's own penchant for leaking confidential information to win public support for a position. This happened in spades when the White House leaked a sanitized CIA document to try to prove its allegations of heavy Cuban involvement in the invasion and massacre in the Shaba region in Zaire.

The leak was calculated out of frustration when the White House, much as it tried, failed to convince reporters, and thus the public, without a shadow of a doubt that it had a case.

Former Patient Sues Agency

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI) — A former patient of the Veterans Administration hospitals at Albuquerque and Houston has filed a $2 million damage suit against the federal agency, alleging mistreatment.

Robert A. Shadron of Albuquerque filed the suit in federal court.

In the suit, Shadron said he was first admitted to the Albuquerque hospital in October 1973 for treatment of a skin condition. He said he was given a drug which damaged his eyes, caused his jaws to lock and gave him a "pseudo-Parkinsonsim."

Shadron said a month later he was admitted to the Houston Veterans Administration hospital for treatment of a skin condition, tumors and psychosis. He said he was placed in a locked ward and while there was choked by three hospital staff members.

Shadron's suit also alleges he was given a drug which produced a violent reaction and was forced to sleep on the floor for several days at a time.

Administration Unable To Curb Beltway Bandits

BY DONALD LAMBRO

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Shortly after taking office, President Carter bluntly ordered a crackdown on federal consultant contracts. More than a year later, the Carter administration can show little for its efforts to curb what have come to be called "the Beltway Bandits."

The government now spends $2 billion a year paying private companies and individuals for information and advice. Some firms, doing nothing else, have grown rich and influential producing thousands of studies each year on everything from telephone surveys to home floor tile.

The "Beltway Bandits" label speaks to this haul of taeapayers' money and the location of many consultant firms in the surburbs of Maryland and Virginia connected by Interstate 495, the Washington beltway.

But more than money is involved. In many respects, consulting has become a fourth branch of government — influencing federal decision-making on major program policies and priorities.

Many consulting firms are so dependent on federal contracts that their staffs have become a new kind of public servants — paid by tax funds but free of the usual controls on government employees.

Accusing the bureaucracy of hiring consultants "excessively, unnecessarily and improperly," Carter ordered his department and agency heads to curb the practice and asked his budget office for guidelines to control consulting.

But a five-week investigation by United Press International into the largely hidden world of consulting firms reveals that since Carter's order, the problem has grown worse. In fact, say congressional investigators, it "has gotten out of control."

Specifically, the UPI inquiry found:

—Numerous instances of consulting contracts and studies duplicating previous work.

—Studies that appear to be "spinoffs" from earlier or companion contracts, many of which were proposed by the same consultants.

—"Revolving door" practices: experts from private firms taking top positions in government agencies with which they do business; government contract officials moving to consultant jobs.

One federal budget study found that 64 departments and agencies are paying consulting firms at least $1.8 billion a year to perform advisory or consulting work under nearly 34,000 contracts. Some officials estimate the real cost in excess of $2 billion a year.

Last year there were 17,963 consultants or advisers on the federal payroll.

The government buys goods and services each year from an estimated 40,000 companies. No one knows how many of these firms do consulting only.

Noting that the Health, Education and Welfare Department was spending over $194 million this year on consultants, the Senate Appropriations Committee said it is "unaware of any instance where a consultant's recommendation has produced a significant program improvement."

The panel also said many HEW contracts are either unnecessary, repeat work done in previous years, or duplicate consulting work done by other agencies.

And the costs continue to rise. HEW's consulting expenses will climb to $247 million in fiscal year 1979.

"They (consultants) are like parasites who feed off the government," said one committee investigator. "It keeps them going year after year."

"What bugs me," sass a House committee staffer, "is the repetition. You find the same titles for contracts every year. How many times has Head Start been evaluated? Or migrants? An enormous amount of money has been spent on studying the aged."

The degree to which consulting firms are used can be seen in the Federal Home Loan Bank Board's new $47 million building whose amenities include a skating rink and a French restaurant.

Consultant costs included $40,000 to negotiate leases for the building's retail space; $30,000 for "planning, developing and marketing" commercial space; $9,300 to review what kind of eating facilities were needed; $5,000 to review the potential restaurant operators; $4,500 to "review and recommend" the restaurant operator's plans; $2,000 for an analysis of Washington area skating rinks; and $63,000 for a legal opinion on whether the FHLBB could lease out commercial space in the first place.

HUD contracts include $143,000 for research and development of residential flooring systems; $189,000 to develop a citizen participation catalogue; $246,000 for a home improvement finance analysis; and $220,000 to produce a local government productivity handbook.

HUD also is issuing $3.5 million in contracts to, in part, arrange workshops around the country so state and local officials can discuss government finance problems.

The U.S. Conference of Mayors got $49,254 for telephone interviews with mayors and other municipal officials on financial management needs. The International City Management Association got $43,000 to hold financial management workshops for city managers. The Municipal Finance Officers Association obtained $96,280 for a financial management survey in six states.

In many respects, consulting has become a fourth branch of government — influencing federal decision-making on major program policies and priorities.

A knowledgeable Senate budget expert says the program is "ridiculous. It won't change any local or state financial capacity."

Although UPI examined hundreds of consulting contracts throughout the government, much of its inquiry was focused on two typical Washington consulting firms.

One is the Urban Institute, a nonprofit research organization created with federal funds by President Johnson over 10 years ago to study and analyze domestic issues and programs.

HEW Secretary Joseph Califano, then a top assistant to Johnson, sparked the idea. HEW this year has given the Institute $2.5 million in contracts.

With a payroll of $6.5 million a year, the Institute employs 300 researchers, data analysts and others whose work brings in $11 million annually. Eightysix percent of its income comes from 22 federal departments and agencies, the rest from state and local governments, foundations and private corporations.

In addition to its reports, the Institute also is well-known in Washington for its catered dinners where government policymakers, members of Congress and academics gather to hear speakers and exchange views on subjects from unemployment to poverty.

A participant described one of the Institute's recent "welfare symposia" affairs this way:

"Cocktails began at 6:30 p.m. There were bars everywhere. This was followed by a buffet served by tuxedoed waiters, most or all of them Spanish-speaking. The menu included boeuf bourguignon, eclairs, orange slices in liqueur. The silver was Reed and Barton."

The second firm is Mathematica Policy Research, Inc., set up in 1958 by a group of Princeton professors. It earned $23 million last year — 80 percent of it from the federal government.

With a staff of 600 employees and subsidiaries in Washington, Princeton, N.J., and Bethesda, Md., Mathematica's annual report says the firm has "opened new business potential in information processing for government agencies."

Among Washington consultants, however, the Urban Institute and Mathematica are particularly influential because of their development of a highly sophisticated data model used to project costs of everything from food stamps to welfare reform to a guaranteed annual income.

Called the Transfer Income Model, or TRIM, it first was developed by Urban Institute economists under a $1 million government contract. Later, Mathematica got TRIM by hiring several top Institute researchers who improved it under an HEW contract and began selling its data.

HEW now has its own "TRIM" model, but both firms continue to sell data derived from theirs to various agencies.

Meantime, a substantial number of government contracts are issued on a "sole source" basis, meaning no other firms are invited to bid on the project.

Out of 18 HUD consulting contracts — costing from $877,605 to $9,000 each — given to Mathematica and the Urban Institute in fiscal year 1977 and 1978, only two were selected competitively.

Since 1972, the Labor Department's Employment Training Administration has awarded Mathematica and the Urban Institute 16 different contracts totaling $8.5 million.

Fifteen of the contracts — costing from $2.6 million to $4,800 each — were awarded without competition.

The reason often given by contract officials for these and other sole source awards is that only the firm selected possessed the type of experience needed.

Usually when contracts are put up for bid, a special board ranks the bidders' qualifications without considering costs. Later, a contract official selects from the top-ranked choices based on the best bid, which can be the most expensive.

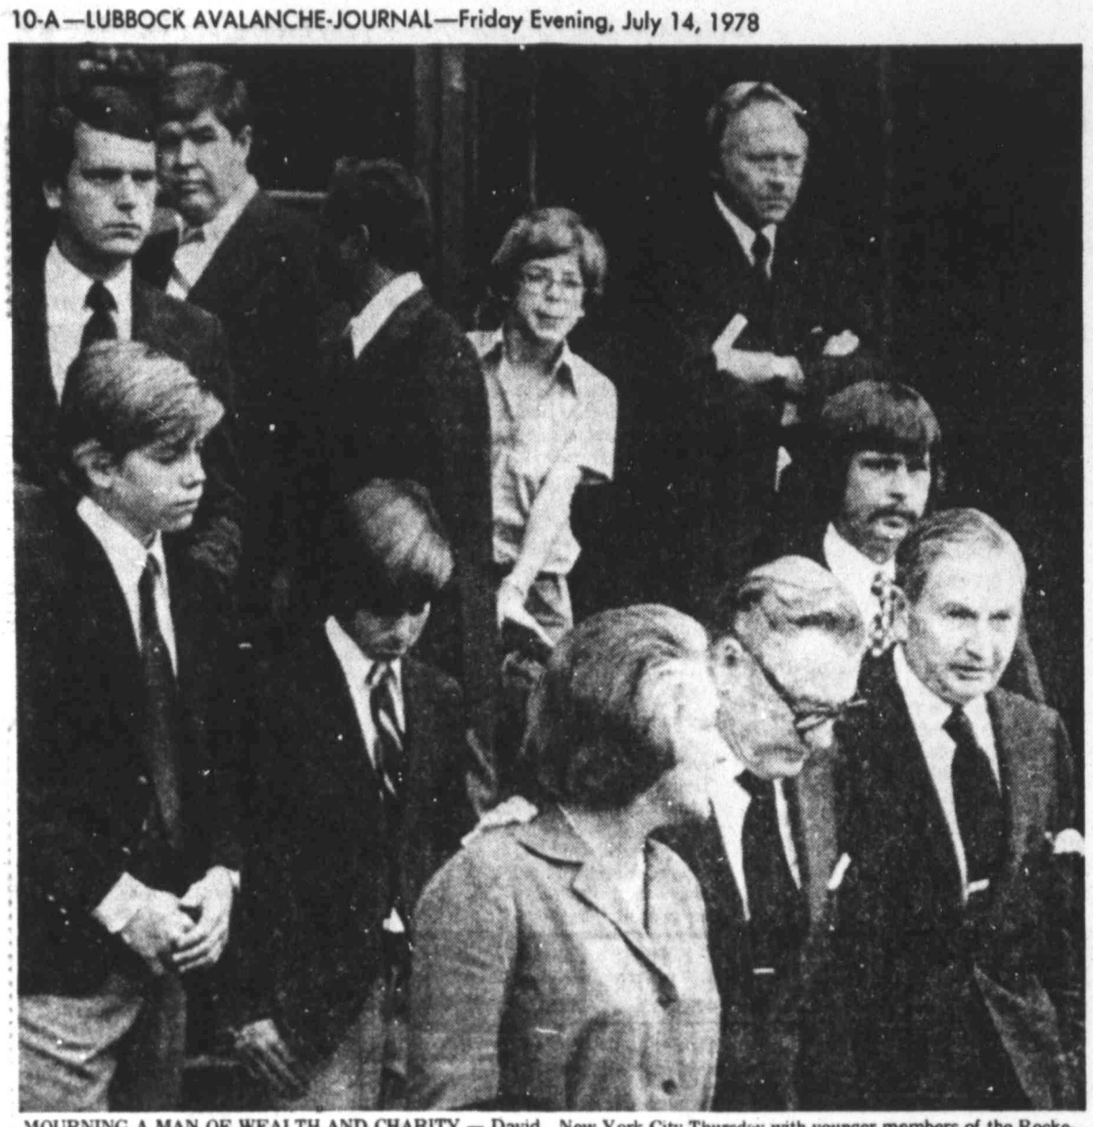

Last year, the National Bureau of Standards issued a contract for $852,051 to the Urban Institute to analyze and project technology advances over the next 20 years. A government spokesman said the Institute was selected over seven other bids even though it had submitted "the highest bid."

2,000 Attend Rockefeller Funeral

NEW YORK (AP) — The ashes of John D. Rockefeller III, who was killed this week in a car crash, have been buried near his family's suburban Pocantico Hills estate.

His only son, West Virginia Gov. John D. "Jay" Rockefeller IV, said at a memorial service Thursday that he was "infinitely, tenderly, fiercely proud of him as a father, as a man, as a Rockefeller, and as an American."

"Daddy, rest in peace," he said.

Jay Rockefeller told some 2,000 persons, including 70 family members, that his "dignified, modest, some said shy" father had spent his life serving mankind, and "there was so much more he wanted to do."

Last Friday, the eldest of John D. Rockefeller Jr.'s sons had just completed arrangements for a two-year study of private, non-profit organizations — "the third sector," his son said.

Former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, pianist Van Cliburn and New York Senators Jacob K. Javits and Daniel P. Moynihan were among the many notables attending the service at the interdenominational Riverside Church on Manhattan's Upper West Side.

The ornate, Gothic church, built with donations by John III's father, had been his place of worship for 58 years.

Rockefeller's body was cremated Wednesday, according to a family spokesman. The interment at a family plot was private.

Rockefeller was killed Monday night when a car in which he was a passenger was struck head on near his North Tarrytown estate. The driver of the other car, 16-year-old David Low of Briarcliff Manor, also was killed. Low was buried on Wednesday.

Rockefeller, oldest of five grandsons of the oil magnate who began amassing the family wealth now estimated at more than $1 billion, chose a philanthropic path while his brothers entered business, banking and politics.

Family members attending the service included Rockefeller's wife, Blanchette, and his three daughters: Sandra Rockefeller of Boston; Hope Aldrich of Santa Fe, N.M., and Alida Dayton of Minneapolis.

Surviving Rockefeller brothers are Nelson, 70, former vice president and former New York governor; Laurance, 68, a businessman and conservationist; and David, 63, chairman of the Chase Manhattan Bank.

Another brother, Winthrop, one-time governor of Arkansas, died of cancer in 1973. A sister, Abby Rockefeller Mauze, died of the same disease two years ago.

Compean Urges Civil Rights Act

By JACK DOUGLAS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Calling for a state civil rights act, Mario Compean, the Raza Unida Party's candidate for governor, said here this morning he supports a planned demonstration Saturday in Hale County protesting the death of a Mexican-American.

Compean, of San Antonio, said he will attend Saturday's activities and will speak out against the death of 25-year-old Timothy Rosales Jr., who was killed June 25 after being stopped by a Hale County reserve deputy at a rural intersection north of Mayfield.

"I favor a state civil rights act that will provide for specific penalties for police officers who violate the civil rights of arrested persons in their custody," the candidate said at a 10 a.m. press conference. "Apparently the federal (civil rights) code is not enough."

The demonstration, spearheaded by the Brown Berets, is scheduled to begin at 2 p.m. at a Hale Center church where participants will move in a car caravan to another church in Plainview, according to local Beret leader Gilbert Herrera.

Demonstrators will then march to the county courthouse in protest of Rosales' death, and the fact that the deputy involved in the killing was no-billed last week by a Hale County grand jury.

Herrera said he estimated a minimum of 500 demonstrators and as many as 1,500. Other members of the Raza Unida Party scheduled to speak Saturday are the party's founder, Jose Angel Gutierrez, and its chairman, Maria Elena Martinez.

Compean labeled the state's investigation into the shooting death as "racist," and said he would telegram U.S. Attorney General Griffin Bell and President Jimmy Carter asking for federal involvement.

"State authorities seem hesitant to do anything constructive," Compean said. Rosales was the sixth Mexican-American in about 14 months to die while in the custody of Texas lawmen.

Compean said several "prominent" Mexican-Americans' endorsements for one of his opponents, State Attorney General John Hill, who is the democratic candidate for governor, do not reflect the overall mood of the Hispanic community.

"Unlike John Hill, I'm not a Johnny-Come-Lately," he said. Compean, who says his background includes work in education and social work, said Hill decided to enter into the investigation of the death of Larry Lozano because he deemed it "politically favorable." Lozano died in February while in an Odessa jail cell.

Hill's office has not entered into the investigation of Rosales' death. Jim Bushala, the attorney general's administrative assistant, said this morning an assistant attorney general went to Plainview to study the case and was present while the grand jury was in session.

"The state investigation is completed as far as I know. What the federal government does, I don't know," Bushala said.

Asked why he was so late in voicing his support for Saturday's demonstration, Compean said, "Until last night, I knew very little about the details (of the Rosales case)."

Blaming it on a "media blackout," Compean said the only accounts reaching South Texas on what happend June 25 in Hale County are coming through Spanish-speaking radio stations.

Compean also offered his stand on the state's taxing system. He called for a complete elimination of the sales tax, replacing it with a tax on corporate profits.

Compean said that as governor he would push for limiting increases of property taxes on residential homeowners and small businesses. He said the burden of taxes should be shifted from owners of small farms to corporate-owned farmlands.

"The family farm has been driven out of business," he said.

The 37-year-old Mexican-American said California's "Proposition 13" could not be possible in this state because Texas' constitution does not allow for a public recall and "initiative referendums."

Power Failure Darkens Mall

South Plains Mall authorities at midday were attempting to restore power after the facility's second blackout in two months.

All power at the mall was cut off about 10:30 a.m. when a transformer east of the structure blew out.

Emergency power was used to restore lighting in the building's corridors. However, individual businesses remained darkened.

Customers were being denied admittance to the area until full power could be restored.

Lubbockite Named In Theft Charge

Also Thursday, Daniel Reyes Tovar, 24, of 1905 15th St., Apt. A, was charged with possession of marijuana.

Tovar was arrested about 10:40 p.m. at the intersection of 17th Street and Avenue V. Officers reported that they found suspected marijuana inside plastic bags in the trunk of the suspect's vehicle.

In another case, Daniel Gonzales, 21, of 908 E. Stanford St., was charged with burglary. Gonzales allegedly burglarized a business at 305 N. Ave. H.

Woolam Named President Of Cancer Society

Dr. Gerald L. Woolam of Lubbock was elected president of the Texas Division of the American Cancer Society during the group's meeting in Houston.

The Texas Division held its 33rd annual meeting Wednesday and Thursday and elected Larry K. Fuller of Borger as chairman of the board for the organization.

Dr. Woolam has been an active American Cancer Society volunteer since 1970, having served as president of the Lubbock unit in 1972. He was elected to the state board in 1972.

The Texas Tech University graduate received his medical degree from Baylor University College of Medicine in 1962 and served his residency in general surgery at the Mayo Clinic. He returned to Lubbock following his residency and is now associate clinical professor of surgery at the Texas Tech University School of Medicine.

Prison Term Set In Forgery Case

Charles Aaron Jones, 37, Thursday was assessed a three-year prison term after being convicted of forgery.

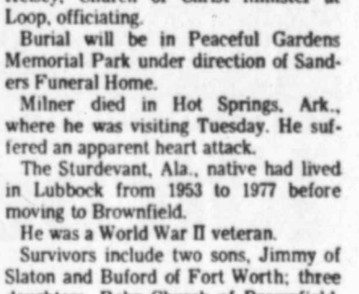

A jury in Judge Thomas L. Clinton's 99th District Court deliberated approximately 20 minutes fendant guilty.

Economist Says Interest Rate Spiral To Continue

By PHILIP GREER
And MYRON KANDEL

When New York's Citibank pegged its prime lending rate at 9 percent almost two weeks ago — followed quickly by other banks all over the country — it not only put the banks' lowest rate at its highest level in more than three years, it also made a prophet out of Henry Kaufman.

For nearly two years, Kaufman, partner and chief economist at the Salomon Brothers investment banking firm, has been almost alone in predicting a 9 percent prime and similar increases in other interest rates. Now he has some more bad news for the economy. He says interest rates are going still higher, and he doesn't yet see any sign of an end to the spiral.

"The cutting edge of interest rates — the point at which the borrowers say they can't pay the price and so they forego borrowing — isn't apparent yet," Kaufman told us. "There have been a number of structural changes in the credit markets that have removed many of the inhibitions that normally might be expected to hold rates down."

Kaufman said that such devices as the floating prime rate itself, which has resulted in far more frequent changes in the interest that banks charge their best customers and reduced the shock value of prime rate changes, have made it easier for rates to climb. The removal of ceilings on interest rates, or increases in ceilings, in many states has also made it easier for charges to climb.

The latest change, he said, was the introduction last month of short-term savings certificates with interest rates pegged to the-payout on short-term U.S. government notes (savings banks and savings and loans can pay one-fourth percent more). That permits the banks to pay more to attract deposits and it "allows the institutions to pass the cost of attracting money along to the users of credit, so the institutions don't have as strong a need to hold rates down," Kaufman said.

"In the past, institutions were a restraining force," he explained, "because when rates went too high they couldn't compete for funds. Now they can compete and they just pass the costs on to the final credit consumer."

In earlier times, Kaufman said, credit consumer conditions that exist today — the 9 percent prime, triple-A utility bonds paying 9 percent and more and two-year government notes with 8 and one-half percent payouts are examples — would indicate a time of credit tightness, stringencies and even rationing of credit by institutional lenders such as banks.

But he says that isn't true now. "Banks still have money to lend and liquidity at corporations is still good, what's happening is that, as the banks and the corporations use up their liquidity — as they sell their government bonds in order to raise cash — others are buying them at even higher rates. So, unlike most other times, the usage of the liquidity itself is helping to drive rates up. Liquidity used to be a cushion against higher interest rates, but it's just the opposite now."

Kaufman says he expects to see the prime rate get up to 9 and three-fourths percent before the end of the year. Triple-A utility bonds, he says, should move up to or even beyond their 1974 high of 10 and one-eighth percent. And, since the second half of the year is traditionally the time when the federal government has to borrow more, he sees short-term Treasury notes paying as much as 7 and three-fourths percent (compared with the 7 percent or slightly higher that they pay out now).

Those rates, he warns, are only what appears likely for the rest of this year. Interest charges, he says, could go even higher in 1979.

Kaufman said he is also concerned about the Federal Reserve Board's posture during the latest increases in rates. When the Fed voted on June 30 to increase its discount rate — the interest member banks pay to borrow from the Fed — to 7 and one-fourth percent from 7 percent, it acted over the objections of its chairman, G. William Miller. Kaufman fears that Miller doesn't understand the situation. "There's been an explosion in debt that I don't believe the Fed is willing to monitor and administer," he told us, "and that doesn't give me much encouragement."

Kaufman said he wouldn't be surprised to see a short-run rally in the credit markets (in interest rate terms, a rally means that rates go down as the prices paid for bonds and other forms of debt paper go up), but he added that he doesn't think it will last long.

Through it all, though, Kaufman thinks the economy could continue growing.

Out-guns other guns
(our TBG makes the grade)

Designed with a positive piston drive, Lindsay's new Traveling Big Gun is as powerful and dependable as a steam engine. Out-guns other guns with up to 13,000 lbs. of pull. Our TBG makes the grade, handles steep hills, rough terrain.

And irrigates almost any size or shape of field, almost any crop. Wide range of travel speeds lets you lay down water at uniform rates, ranging from as little as 1 in. up to 6 in. or more. Over 90% of the water goes through the nozzle. TBG needs less than 10% to power its way across the field, covers a path up to approximately 350 ft. wide and 1,800 ft. long on each pass.

Because it's so compact and easily maneuvered, TBG cuts set-up time down to an easy one-man operation . . . with most of the job handled from the tractor seat.

The separate hose cart is another special Lindsay design. It's low-slung, easily towed across steep slopes, rough fields or down the highway at normal road speeds. Extra-large rollers prevent kinks or scuffing, guide the hose surely onto the over-size, 84-in. reel . . . biggest in the industry. Drive components are strong to withstand tremendous pull. And the reel is removable, easily stored inside to protect hose for longer life.

If you're hunting for a gun, get the Big One. Lindsay's TBG. Call or stop in.

Statistics Support Farmers' Complaints

By JIM SEIERT
A-J Correspondent

HEREFORD — "A lot of folks may wonder what all the complaints by farmers are about these days, but when you are looking at a loss of at least $30 million in an industry that is the lifeblood of the economy, it's not hard to understand why farmers are unhappy."

That's the conclusion Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) Executive Director John Fuston of Hereford has come to after compiling figures on gross income from crop production from 1974-1977 for Deaf Smith County.

Using some estimates, Fuston also compiled figures showing the alarming rate at which the farmer's cost of production has gone up — more than 200 percent for some inputs during the same period.

And while Fuston's compilations bear out the contention that farm income in Deaf Smith County has plummeted alarmingly since 1974, figures prepared by the Deaf Smith Chamber of Commerce on gross sales in Hereford for 1976 and 1977 offer corroborating evidence that a slump in agriculture fortunes here also has led to a corresponding drop in gross sales.

Fuston's figures show income on crops for 1974 at approximately $69,750,000 in Deaf Smith County.

With a relatively good farming year in 1975, gross return on crops climbed to approximately 87,930,000, an increase of $18,180,000.

But from that point, it has been downhill for the county's farm economy, according to Fuston.

And in the disastrous year of 1977, gross income from crops was only about $45,558,000, a drop of $20,996,000 from the 1976 figure and a whopping $42,554,000 decline from the high figure of 1975," said Fuston.

"In 1975, our farmers were receiving an average of $4.13 per bushel for wheat, $4.70 per hundred for milo and $5.27 per hundred for corn. In 1977, farmers were offered only $2.20 for wheat, $2.85 for milo and $3.38 for corn.

"And what makes it hurt even worse is that in 1975, our farmers were harvesting 7,000-9,000-pound per acre corn and milo on the average while in 1977, dry weather and insect problems cut the average to only about 4,000-5,000 pounds per acre. So, they had less to sell to a poorer market when their costs were much higher," the ASCS executive explained.

Fuston further pointed up the severe crunch the modern farmer is in when he cited some random examples of fixed production costs and how they have soared in the past three years.

"A 130 horsepower eight-row tractor equipped with cab, dual wheels and weights sold for $16,850 in 1974," Fuston said, citing figures supplied by a Hereford implement dealer.

"The very same tractor sold for $23,500 in 1977, an increase in price of 39.5 percent," he added.

"With the figures we have compiled here, I would say that we are looking at a $30 million loss by farmers in this county in 1977," he said. "Although gross income from crops exceeded $45 million, production costs had accelerated at an incredible rate, as evidenced by the production cost figures for only four items.

"Farmers were paying more for the things they needed to produce their crops in 1977 and receiving less than their production costs for those commodities. I would like to see one business in town take 50 percent less for their product today than they did in 1975 and see how long they would stay in business," Fuston commented.

The ASCS executive director explained that farmers are receiving deficiency payments because of poor wheat prices and disaster payments due to extremely low corn and grain sorghum yields during 1977, but added that they cannot make up the difference in what farmers have suffered in actual losses.

PESTICIDE DUSTING — A pilot swoops low to douse a wheatfield with pesticides, one of many jobs being done by aircraft for farmers. The state department of agriculture expects the application method will become more widespread unless it is proven harmful. (AP Laserphoto)

Aerial Crop Planting Gaining In Popularity, Ag Fliers Say

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The pilot gradually brings the biplane out of a turn and points it toward the field. Glancing at the instrument panel, he aims the nose midway between two white streamers dropped on a previous pass. Holding his speed at 90 mph and his altitude at 35 feet, he opens a fuselage bay. The plane's cargo spills out.

A World War I raid on a French battlefield? No. It's a typical October day in Tennessee. The pilot is dropping winter wheat on a soybean field.

Dink Dietzel, manager of the Delta Corp.'s flight operations division at Union City, Tenn. says the planting side of his aerial application business is growing fast, particularly for winter wheat.

This kind of seeding is done in September and October when soybean leaves begin turning yellow, Dietzel said. Later, after they mature, the leaves drop from the soybean plants to cover the wheat, which begins growing soon after the beans are harvested.

"The mulch gives the wheat enough coverage to sprout," he said.

Aerial planting, despite the speeds and heights involved, isn't wasteful, he said. "We use about a half-bushel more seed an acre than is used with ground-based planting equipment, but the results are the same — a good stand of winter wheat.

"With farmers operating larger and larger fields, aerial seeding becomes more and more economical. It frees farmers to do other things while we do their planting for them," he said.

John Hammett is supervisor of the Tennessee Agriculture Department's environmental control section which issues licenses to all the aerial application firms operating in the state.

"We list 43 companies licensed to do business in Tennessee at the present time," he said in an interview. "That's about twice as many as we had about 10 years ago."

Among other things, planes are used to re-plant forests, defoliate cotton and soybean plants to speed maturity, kill foraging flocks of blackbirds, apply fertilizers to pastures too steep for ground equipment, destroy fire ant populations, and re-seed grass on reclaimed strip mines.

"The government and a few utilities also use planes — sometimes helicopters — to keep the weeds down along railroad tracks, roads and utility lines. Helicopters often are brought in on jobs where the spraying needs to be more direct and where there's a concern about spray drifting over rights-of-way.

"I expect the trend to use airplanes for insecticide and herbicide spraying will continue to grow until or unless it's proven that such chemicals are harmful to the countryside," he said.

Agriculture Hierarchy Lists Woman Second

WASHINGTON (AP) — If the United States came under enemy attack and Bob Bergland couldn't make it to work, Carol Tucker Foreman would command the Agriculture Department.

Mrs. Foreman, who has been filling in as acting secretary of agriculture when Bergland is out of town, actually is third in succession as head of the agency. But the No. 2 post of deputy secretary has been vacant since John White resigned last January to become chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

The new pecking order was issued Thursday in a memorandum signed by Bergland.

"In the event of my inability to act as secretary of agriculture on account of enemy attack or other national defense emergency, provisional authority is hereby delegated to the individuals named below to exercise all of the authority vested in the secretary of agriculuture," Bergland said.

Although no names were listed, the titles were ranked in descending order with Ms. Foreman's — assistant secretary for food and consumer services — in second position after the deputy.

In line after her are Assistant Secretary M. Rupert Cutler, who oversees conservation, research and education; Assistant Secretary Dale E. Hathaway, international affairs and commodity programs; Assistant Secretary Alex Mercure, rural development; and Assistant Secretary P.R. (Bobby) Smith, marketing services.

Sixteen others also were ranked to take charge in case the top six replacement candidates are not around due to a national emergency.

Berland said his new order superseded one issued March 10, 1975, by then-Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz.

If Butz's order had been allowed to remain on the books, Mrs. Foreman would have ranked fifth in Bergland's line of succession behind the unfilled deputy's post, Hathaway, Mercure and Cutler.

Meat-Cutting Plant Planned

GREELEY, Colo. (AP) — Monfort of Colorado, Inc., the nation's largest cattle feeder, says it has obtained options to purchase land in western Kansas for construction of a $15 million slaughter and custom meat-cutting plant.

Kenneth W. Monfort, co-chairman of the Monfort board, made the announcement at a meeting of the Kansas Cattle Feeders Conference in Garden City Kan., Monfort officials at the home office here said.

The land options obtained by the company are near Scott City and Oakley in western Kansas, they said. The plant the company intends to build would nearly double Monfort's beef-production capacity.

Monfort emphasized in the his address in Kansas that construction of the company's first plant outside Colorado still depends on a number of factors, including financing, further soil and water studies, and manpower surveys.

At full capacity, the new plant, as now planned, would employ 425 persons and would have a daily slaughter capacity of 1,500 cattle, equivalent to 420,000 head a year, he said.

Sale of meat from the planned new plant, at full capacity, would reach $280 million annually, he said.

The company last year reported total revenue of $365.3 million from the sale of 525,000 cattle and 687,000 lambs processed at facilities at its Greeley headquarters.

Immunization Aids Export Of Cattle

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Veterinarians at Texas A&M are fighting fire with fire in a battle against Texas tick fever and anaplasmosis in cattle being exported to Central and South America.

Dr. Gilberto S. Trevino, director of the Institute of Tropical Veterinary Medicine, says a new pre-immunization program has slashed the death toll from about half the cattle exported to almost nil.

The concept, he explained, is the injection of virulent organisms of tick fever, anaplasmosis or both into cattle about three weeks before shipment from the United States.

He said these animals develop a mild case of the disease or diseases, and after reaching their destination where the diseases are prevalent, the animals are immune.

"We have seen death losses running fully 40 percent, or higher, in countries where these diseases are prevalent reduced to as few as one or two percent," said Trevino.

"This same procedure for immunization is not applicable to cattle to remain in the United States because pre-immunization makes these cattle carriers of the disease."

Although Texas generally eradicated tick fever, Trevino warned ticks are causing another threat of the fever, which threatened to put the state's cattle industry "out of business" 40 or 50 years ago.

It was brought under control through mandatory dipping, which triggered a conflict between cattlemen and health officials that included the dynamiting of some dipping vats.

Trevino said the diseases are prevalent in countries between the 30th parallels on either side of the Equator. And he said Mexico is "teeming" with the diseases.

"I'll guarantee that 40 to 50 of a shipment of 100 animals will die ... after they reach their destination in Central or South America, if the animals are not protected," Trevino said.

"If a buyer pays, say $1,000 per animal, and breeding bulls are generally much higher, this means that he would lose $40,000 to $50,000 before getting a pound of beef or a gallon of milk for his investment," Trevino said.

He said pre-immunization costs $50 per animal but reduces the death loss to one or two animals.

Live Cattle Futures Tumble In Trading

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures tumbled 100 to 150 points — with most contracts at the daily limit loss — Thursday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Sales totaled 23,549 cars. Most contracts were sellers over at the close, with more than 500 cars offered in the nearbys. The market reacted after an early gain of 50 points in distant October.

A commission house with a cash cattle connection along with other leading houses led profit-taking and other selling after Wednesday's bulge to the highest levels in more than one month, up seven cents from recent lows.

Wholesale beef was unchanged at 85 1/2 to 86 1/2 cents a pound. The six markets expect 3,400 head today.

Cash cattle were steady to up 50 cents, with the best top at $57 per hundredweight. Slaughter was 141,000 head.

Feeder cattle futures skidded the daily limit of 150 points in all contracts except January, which closed only a tick away from a limit loss. Volume was 3,106 cars.

Some selling spilled over from live cattle futures and traders also noted profit-taking after Wednesday's advance to two-month highs, up 9.50 cents from lows.

The six markets expect 1,100 head today. Cash feeder cattle were steady to up $7, with the best top at $80 per hundredweight at San Antonio.

Hog futures reacted sharply after an early rise of 22 points and broke 72 to 150 points. October, December and distant August were down the limit. Sales were 5,792 cars.

Much of the selling spilled over from the cattle pit and also was attributed to profit-taking after one-month highs Wednesday. Initial buying followed light hog runs and a firmer tone to pork products and a lack of deliveries.

Wholesale hams were unchanged to up 1 1/2 cents at 72 to 77 1/2 cents a pound, f.o.b. river. The six markets expect 19,000 head today.

Cash hogs were up 50 to off 50 cents, with the best top at $48 per hundredweight. Slaughter was 283,000 head.

Pork belly (bacon) futures retreated from an early gain of 145 points in nearby August to finish 200 points lower to 30 points higher. All 1978 contracts were down the limit to one-week lows, with only nearby July higher. Sales were 7,113 ars.

Light hog runs and reduced kill Wednesday along with strength in cash bellies brought early support. Most of the late reaction spilled over from other meat pits.

Wholesale bacon was unchanged to up 2 3/4 cents at 50 1/4 to 59 3/4 cents a pound, f.o.b. river, a one-month high.

Upcoming Report May Indicate Buildup Of Herds By Stockmen

WASHINGTON (AP) — A report to be issued later this month by the Agriculture Department will help put the nation's cattle inventory into perspective and may give some indication that farmers and ranchers have started to rebuild their herds in earnest.

The mid-year report, scheduled for July 26, will include figures for all types of cattle on farms and ranches as of the first of the month, compared with a year ago.

Officials say a further reduction can be expected as part of the sharp cutback by producers over the past few years. The cutback was aimed at unloading "surplus" cattle, and cut losses incurred by depressed prices.

The low cattle inventory has been blamed for beef prices on the grocery shelves jumping to record levels in recent months and spearheading a sharp rise in overall food prices.

Although cattle prices lately have improved and brought the best profits to beef producers in about three years, the U.S. cattle industry is so huge and diversified that it will take some time before a true build-up phase in the beef cycle is firmly entrenched.

Among the figures to watch in the July 26 report are those for heifers being held back for breeding. Those are the young females which will help produce the nation's beef supply in the coming years.

Meanwhile, from a standpoint of total numbers, USDA experts say that cattle inventory probably will continue to shrink for a while. The inventory was a record of 132 million head on Jan. 1, 1975, to 116.3 million the first of this year.

Prices of choice-grade steers, one of the important barometers, rose to more than $60 per 100 pounds at their peak around June 1, but since have sagged to the low $50s at major Midwest markets. Even so, recent prices have been significantly higher than the $40 market of a year ago.

According to USDA analysts, the slaughter of cows so far this year has continued relatively large, indicating that many producers still are being exceedingly cautious about expanding their herds.

A recent report by the department's Economics, Statistics and Cooperatives Service cites some reasons for the continued high rate of cows being slaughtered in the first half of this year:

Localized shortages of hay during the extremely cold winter, selling of cows that lost calves last winter, selling of cows on the higher market to help meet current expenses, and "lack of belief that a new period of relatively favorable returns has actually arrived."

As one livestock economist told a reporter: "A lot of these cattle producers haven't had a payday yet" and are having to sell off breeding stock just to survive until they get enough breathing room — and sustained higher prices — to expand.

Prices of feeder cattle, the lightweight animals which are sold to farmers and feedlot operators for "finishing" into packing plant beef, rose along with choice steer prices earlier this year. Although this was good news for farmers and ranchers with cow-calf operations, it meant added expenses for feeders.

Fairgrounds Hosts South Plains Horse Show

The show qualified 20 individuals to compete July 26-29 in the State 4-H Horse Show at San Antonio.

High-point counties for the district competition were Castro, first with 78 points; Lubbock, second with 48; and Floyd, third, with 39 points.

A total of 149 4-H Club members from 20 South Plains counties participated.

Miss Thornton's gelding, Afton Socks, was named grand champion. It earlier had won first place for registered geldings, any breed, under five years of age.

Grand champion mare was Two-Eyed Pet, shown by Carol Bagwell of Castro County. Jerri Ka Clark, also of Castro County, had the reserve champion mare, Speckasalt.

Earning the right to represent the district in the State 4-H Horse Show by counties were:

LUBBOCK—Todd Wilson and Steve Lee.

FLOYD—Ronee Thornton and Jay Waller.

BRISCOE—Lee Ann McMurtry.

BAILEY—Shonnee Hodnett.

LAMB—Lesa Templeton.

BORDEN—Brice Key.

HALE—Sherry Evans.

DAWSON—Lisa Napper.

Winners of the various classes, listed in first, second and third place order, follow:

Showmanship — Ronee Thornton; Carol Bagwell; Jerri Ka Clark.

Registered mare, any breed, five years and older — Carol Bagwell; Shea Floyd, Gaines; Kathy Evans, Hale.

Grade mare, any breed, all ages — Blaine Lemons, Gaines; Kim Farmer, Bailey; Carla Jo Porter, Lubbock.

Grade gelding, any breed, all ages — Monte Johnson, Castro; Conner Evans, Hale; Mike Anthony, Castro.

Western pleasure — Ronee Thornton; Brad Bradley, Swisher; Paul Garrett, Lubbock.

Western horsemanship — Ronee Thornton; Angie Knox, Lubbock; Steve Lee, Lubbock.

Selected as alternates, in order of succession if any of the top 20 are unable to participate in the state show, were:

Scott Bagley, Castro; Dana Boyer, Dawson; K'Lynn Boyer, Dawson; Danny Wheeler, Yoakum; Jackie Anthony, Castro; Blaine Lemmons, Gaines, Betsy Leatherwood, Crosby; Shane Claunch, Bailey; Kelly Poarch, Scurry, and Kelly Nelson, Castro.

Seed Conference Scheduled Here

Seed analysts with the Texas Department of Agriculture's (TDA) Giddings and Stephenville seed laboratories are making plans to join Lubbock analysts at a seed technology conference here July 25-27, Agriculture Commissioner Reagan V. Brown has announced.

Among those at the three-day conference from the Lubbock area will be Leslie Martin, seed analyst in charge at Lubbock; Virgie Bryant, Irma Dominquez, Betty Griffin, Barbara Howell, Billie H. Kahout, Veronica McCreary, Ferman Salinas, Pam Scott, and Sue Mays.

Experts from throughout the United States will conduct the sessions, sponsored by the Texas Department of Agriculture. Also attending will be seed analysts from the Oklahoma Department of Agriculture.

"The latest techniques in seed purity identification, germination analysis, and varietal differentiation will be emphasized during the conference," said Brown.

Brown explained that crop yield begins with good seed and seed testing is highly important to Texas agriculture. The TDA's seed laboratories test seed as a service for farmers and seedsmen, and conduct official tests in accordance with the seed law enforcement process.

Lubbock Man On Cotton Panel

DON ANDERSON

Don Anderson of Lubbock, widely known cotton producer, has been named to the Agricultural Technical Advisory Committee for Cotton by Trade Ambassador Robert Strauss and Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland.

Purpose of the committee, Bergland said, "is to advise, consult with, and make recommendations to us...in connection with the Multilateral Trade Negoaitions now underway in Geneva."

Anderson, past president of the Plains Cotton Growers, Inc., is a member of the Cotton Board and a Cotton Inc. study committee on international marketing.

He is a past director of Cotton Council International and the National Cotton Council and is former president of the Texas Association of Cotton Producer Organizations.

Anderson is president of Agricultural Investment Consultants, Inc., a private firm involved in developing export markets for products produced on the High Plains, and is board chairman of the Texas Cotton Marketing Corp., which specializes in the merchandising of cotton for open-end spinning.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

ANOTHER PHASE IN THE MARKET development program of the Grain Sorghum Producers Association will begin this week when Elbert Harp, GSPA executive director, leads a grain sorghum mission to Asia.

In cooperation with the U. S. Feed Grains Council, the team will hold seminars and meetings with grain buyers in Hong Kong, Taiwan, Malaysia and the Philippines.

Accompanying Harp will be John Brethour, livestock nutritionist of the Kansas Agricultural Experiment Station, and Dr. Lloyd Rooney, cereal chemist and nutritionist of Texas A&M University.

Grain buyers in Asia have been unhappy with grain sorghum because of "high tannin" grain purchased from other countries, Harp said.

THESE BUYERS MUST BE MADE AWARE of the difference between the sorghum grown in other countries and that grown in the United States, Harp said.

The main objectives of the trade mission, he said, will be to:

— Prove that grain sorghum relates pound-per-pound with yellow corn as a high energy feed grain.

— Emphasize the price advantage grain sorghum has over corn.

"In other words," Harp said, "the ultimate objective is to increase grain sorghum sales."

AMERICAN COTTON MERCHANTS AND cooperatives made arrangements to sell half a million bales of cotton to the Republic of China during a visit to Memphis of a purchasing mission from Taiwan.

The National Cotton Council and its overseas arm, Cotton Council International, were among hosts for the team when it arrived in Memphis earlier this month. The Chinese will visit 16 states in 48 days.

They signed agreements totaling 500,000 bales to be bought and shipped during the marketing year which begsins Aug. 1. Assistant Secretary of Agriculture P. R. Smith also attended the signing ceremony.

The cotton covered by the agreements is worth about $150 million.

In addition to the arrangements for purchases in the 1978-79 marketing year, the Chinese also concluded contracts for 50,000 bales from the current season.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Grain futures and soybean contracts representing last year's crop suffered losses on the Chicago Board of Trade Thursday.

The Department of Agriculture's revised supply-demand projections provided the major impetus for selling old crop soybeans, which lost from 12¾ to 15¼ cents a bushel.

The biggest reason was that the estimate of soybean stocks at the end of August, when this year's harvest begins, was cut only slightly to 125 million bushels.

Traders had expected a larger reduction. But analysts noted there was considerable confusion about the report, basically because the department apparently had underestimated 1977 soybean output.

Specifically, the figures showed that 20 million additional bushels of soybeans will be shipped abroad this marketing year. However, they did not reflect a corresponding disappearance in stocks.

And while final 1977 soybean production was unchanged at 1.819 billion bushels, the seed category was reduced by 15 million bushels.

"It looks like they underestimated the size of the crop all along," a soybean trader commented. "And now they're trying to juggle the figures to make up for it."

Although old crop soybeans were lower, more distant months were basically steady.

Trading on the Lubbock spot cotton market was slow on Thursday. Supplies of cotton for sale were heavy and demand was light.

The Lubbock Cotton Exchange's spot quotations advanced 25 points. The base price of grade 41, staple 34, mikes 3.5-4.9, stood at 54.20 cents per pound, 45 points over a week earlier.

LUBBOCK SPOT COTTON

Quotations are the approximate prices reported to the Agricultural Marketing Service for qualities equal to the U.S. Official Grade and Staple Standards. Prices are for micronaire (mike) readings of 3.5 through 4.9, in mixed lots, uncompressed, free of all charges in the warehouse in the market.

Livestock Meeting Set

National focus on the ranching and livestock industry will be drawn to Lubbock Sept. 22, when industry leaders honor one of their members, participate in a livestock and Money Symposium and party together.

The National Golden Spur Award will be presented for the first time to honor one person who has brought distinction to the industry. The award, designed to spotlight humanistic and scientific contributions of the livestock and ranching industries to society, is sponsored by six organizations.

They are the American Quarter Horse Association, the National Cattlemen's Association, the National Wool Growers Association, the Ranching Heritage Association, the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association and the Texas Sheep and Goat Raisers Association.

The Ranching Heritage Association is headquartered in Lubbock. It will hold its annual Ranch Day Sept. 23 at the Ranching Heritage Center of the Museum of Texas Tech University.

The center is a 12-acre outdoor exhibit of authentic ranching structures, furnishings and paraphernalia depicting the history of ranching in America.

The National Golden Spur Award sponsors, the Texas Cattle Feeders Association and the Texas Tech College of Agricultural Sciences, will hold the Livestock and Money Symposium.

It is to attract participants of national prominence discussing, government regulations as they affect the livestock industry and production problems including economic factors as well as the end product.

Prairie Party will begin in the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center. More than 1,000 are expected to attend.

The National Golden Spur Award will be presented at the Prairie Party. Entertainment will include a parade of historic fashions and historic ranch music. Artist John Meigs is designer for the decorations. Dancing will follow the program.

Senators Denounce Trials

WASHINGTON (AP) — Word that a Soviet court sentenced Anatoly Shcharansky to 13 years at hard labor today brought renewed demands from U.S. senators for the United States to retaliate against Moscow.

Some senators already had called for withdrawal of the United States from the 1980 Olympic games in Moscow and cancellation of contracts for equipment the Soviet Union wants.

Sens. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., said today that Shcharansky's conviction on charges of treason was an act which is an "insult to the word of the president of the United States, who personally says Shcharansky never spied for the United States."

Sen. Patrick J. Moynihan, D-N.Y., said that the most fitting immediate response the United States could make would be to cancel the projected sale of a Sperry Rand computer ordered by Tass, the Soviet news agency.

"They punish their creative people and wish to buy our creativity in return," Moynihan said.

Javits said the Russians "have to realize we are engaged in a wrestling match and we can escalate it at will, even to the SALT agreement," Javits said.

Sen. Mike Gravel, D-Alaska, disagreed in the debate on the Senate floor.

"I think we may be carried away here," he told his colleagues.

"The more you move into confrontation the more they will dig in their heels," he said.

On the House side, speaker Thomas P. O'Neill said Shcharansky's conviction was "extremely regrettable."

The Senate voted 90-1 on Thursday to join other parliamentary groups in backing the Soviet dissidents for the 1978 Nobel Peace Prize.

In response to an Associated Press survey, 17 senators said they believe the Carter administration should consider blocking pending deals under which the Soviets would buy an advanced U.S. computer system and specialized oil drilling bits.

However, 40 of those responding also said they would not recommend suspension of Strategic Arms Limitation negotiations in retaliation for the dissidents' trials. Only nine senators advocated suspending the negotiations.

In a letter to his Senate colleagues, Wendell Anderson, D-Minn., said, "Now is the time to change the site of the 1980 Olympics. The Olympics are a rare event that should not be conducted under a cloud of political oppression, harassment and disregard for basic human rights."

Anderson, a member of the 1956 U.S. Olympic hockey team, said he would submit his resolution for Senate action next week.

The resolution supporting the Soviet dissidents for the Nobel Prize was adopted about the same time word reached Washington that Alexander Ginzburg had been sentenced to eight years at hard labor for "anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda."

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., principal sponsor of the resolution said the dissidents "have placed their freedom at risk because they believe individuals rights and free information are directly related to peace among nations."

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., called for halting the computer and oil drilling deals.

POLICE PICKET GARAGE — A Cleveland policeman turns away from the camera as he pickets a police garage early today, after the city's 1,500 patrolmen walked off the job. The action was triggered when 13 officers were fired for disobeying an order by the mayor to start one-man patrols in high-crime areas. (AP Laserphoto)

Patrolmen Strike At Cleveland

Hocevar, a department spokesman. He said 39 of 41 supervisory officers scheduled to be at work were on the job and Barrett said today that the 39, ranging in rank from sergeant to captain, will remain on duty until relieved.

Andy Juniewicz, a spokesman for the mayor's office, said city garbage truck drivers and water department workers were honoring police picket lines.

The city spent a fairly quiet night, Barrett said, despite an unconfirmed homicide about which he had no details.

The striking patrolmen ignored a temporary restraining order issued by Presiding Common Pleas Judge Leo M. Spellacy shortly after the first pickets appeared.

The case was assigned to Judge Daniel O. Corrigan for a hearing today in Cuyahoga County Common Pleas Court.

After the court order was issued, acting Police Chief Edwin A. Nagorski issued a warning that any officer who refused to return to work would face disciplinary action.

The strike was called by the Cleveland Police Patrolmen's Association, and had the support of the Fraternal Order of Police, which represents supervisory officers.

The union was angered at a Kucinich order requiring one-man daytime patrols of housing projects in crime-ridden areas of the city. Thirteen officers who refused the assignments were fired Thursday for allegedly failing to obey a lawful order.

Kucinich began his eighth stormy month in office today by touring the city following the start of the strike. It also was seven months to the day since police staged a two-day walkout in a contract dispute.

Kucinich, whose troubles were heightened earlier this year when he fired former San Francisco Sheriff Richard Hongisto from the post of police chief, faces the recall election on Aug. 13. It was called after Kucinich fired the popular Hongisto and after the mayor had several run-ins with leading members of the City Council.

The patrolmen's association claimed the 13 fired officers were denied an opportunity to present a defense and said the one-man patrol order was not lawful because it involved duty that was too hazardous.

Two-man patrols are allowed during evening hours under the week-old, $1 million program to beef up security at the public housing projects, which have a heavy incidence of murder, rape and robbery.

There were 23 homicides reported in the housing projects in 1977, none involving police officers, housing authorities said. One homicide was reported Thursday.

The association had offered to call off the strike if Kucinich would unconditionally reinstate the "Cleveland 13" and allow officers to pair up on the patrols.

About 45 minutes before the strike deadline, Kucinich said he would allow two-man patrols because "of the climate of fear and hysteria" surrounding the earlier assignments.

But he refused to reinstate the fired officers, saying they still may appeal their dismissals through the civil service system.

Officers Named In Rights Suit

terminated by his employer, the suit contends.

But, according to Shaw, the deputy refused to inform him of specific allegations.

The petition states that, shortly after the alleged meeting with Franklin, Shaw overheard his employer offer Shaw's job to Franklin's wife, reportedly also employed at the restaurant.

Shaw says he was discharged June 12. The suit says the reason given him for the discharge was that the sheriff's office intended to go to the district attorney with the results of its investigation. Shaw's suit said he was told his job would be restored when the controversy was cleared up.

The suit also says Shaw protested that he had not done anything wrong.

For more than a month, the plaintiff contends, he has attempted through his attorney to find out what specific allegations, if any, have been brought against him.

The petition claims requests and demands for information to the county attorney, district attorney and sheriff have not furnished any factual allegation.

Shaw claims requests for specifics have been denied for the reason that the information is part of a pending investigation.

Shaw says he has been unsuccessful in gaining employment at other places as a restaurant manager. He claims he has learned that, in some instances, prospective employers have been told he has undesirable traits and is being prosecuted for them.

The alleged conduct of the defendants damaged him without due process of law in violation of the Constitution, Shaw's suit claims. The suit claims defendants' decided he should be punished without a formal hearing and without granting him the right to confront witnesses against him.

The petition does state at one point that Shaw was advised by the county attorney of a legal conclusion that he had violated a provision of the Texas Penal Code, based on evidence presented by the sheriff.

The suit says the alleged violation, even if proved, would require a maximum fine of $200 and that he was punished to a greater extent than required by law by virtue of the alleged dismissal from employment.

Shaw does not ask in the suit for a specific amount of compensation, but claims he has been damaged in excess of $10,000.

Panel Bars Rate Boost

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Insurance Board voted unanmiously today against any statewide increase in homeowners rates.

Some homeowners will receive a slight increase, however, and others a small decrease because the board decided to adjust the figures for each value of insured house.

Board Chairman Hugh Yantis said that those with homes insured for about $40,000 and up currently were paying too much, while those in a middle group starting at about $15,000 were paying too little; based on the losses paid by insurance companies.

The insurance industry had requested a statewide average increase of about 13 percent, while the board's staff said a rate hike of about 11 percent should be granted.

Homeowner rates have not been changed since July 1976, and today's action will give the average Texas homeowner at least a year without a rate hike.

Yantis has stated for some time that he felt there was no justification for a homeowners rate increase, and the other board members voted with him. Adjusting the relative standing of various value groups was seen as a compromise, and insurance industry spokesman Tom Lee said the adjustment had a higher priority than the rate increase.

After deciding against a statewide homeowners increase, the board voted these increases in other categories of property insurance:

— Fire, 9.4 percent
— Extended coverage, 6.6 percent
— Farm and ranch owners, 7.1 percent
— Tenant homeowners, 21.8 percent.

The increases will raise insurance company premium income by 4.2 percent, or about $35 million.

City Probes Tax Slash Proposals

McAlister's plan would mean cutting the budget by $2.9 million. Mrs. Jordan said the ratio reduction should be put off until next year, so there would be no immediate need to send out revaluation notices.

In another tax-related matter Thursday afternoon, City Attorney Fred Senter advised the council that charter amendments proposed by an anti-busing group have serious legal problems.

The organization, We the People, primarily wants city taxes limited to 80 cents per $100 valuation, a 61-cent cut.

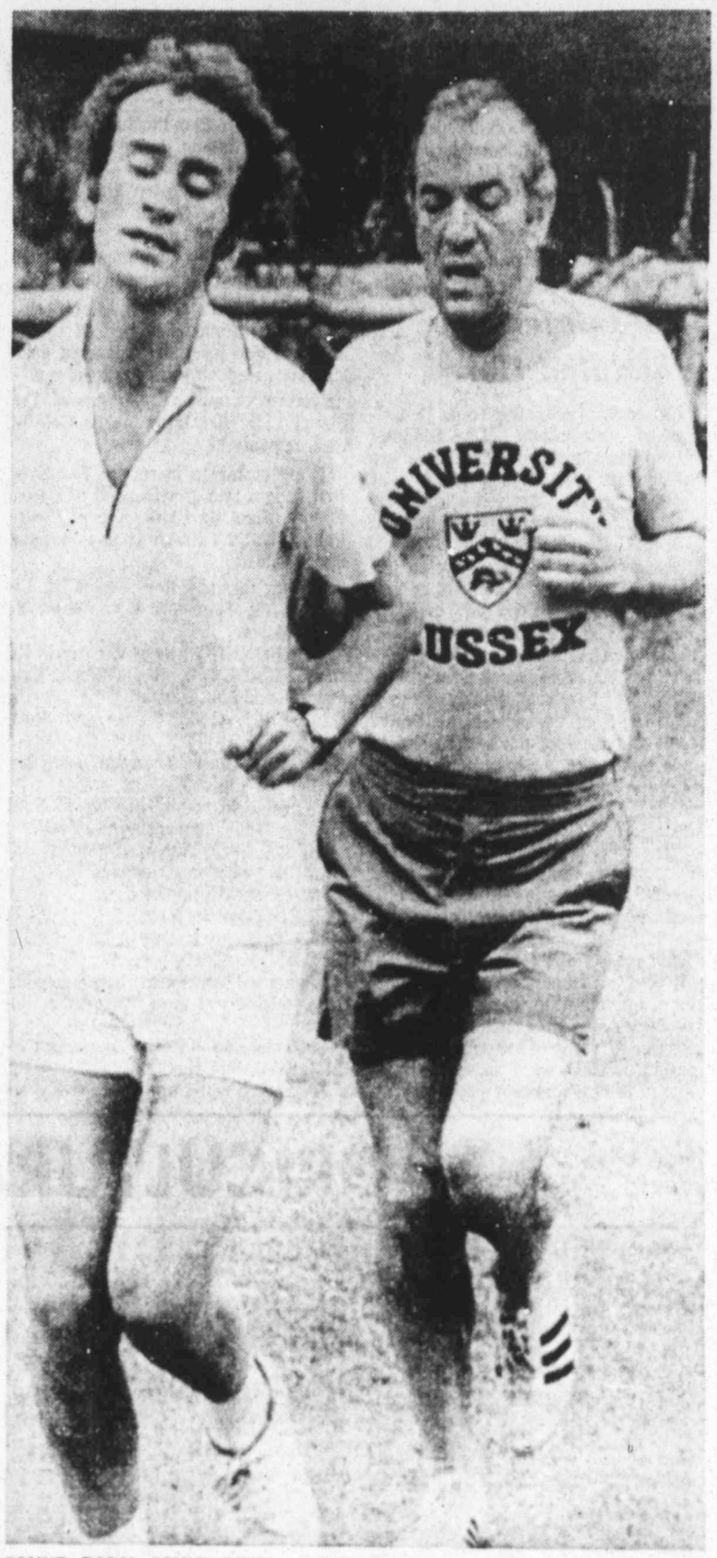

Senter said some of the items in the charter amendment petition conflict with the state constitution or state law. Senter called it "the duty of the council to refuse" to submit the items to the voters, if the wording of the petition is not changed.

The council also decided to mail out copies of a proposed ordinance on substandard housing to the apartment association and Lubbock Board of Realtors, then schedule a public hearing on the matter in about a month.

Construction of a new central fire station at a bid of $356,720 was approved by council members. The new facility, at 18th Street and Avenue K, is expected to be completed by mid-April. The current central station will be used for the department's main offices and maintenance facilities.

Mrs. Jordan also asked that city staff members investigate the possibility of an ordinance requiring cross-arms at "high risk" railroad crossings in the city. Her suggestion follows last month's train-car collision at Brownfield Road and Quaker Avenue in which two children were killed.

Action was postponed on the sale of the auditorium-coliseum and on McAlister's proposed ordinance to reduce the number of false alarms police must answer.

Carter Pledges Freedom Fight

And even in his formal address, the president made a fleeting reference to East-West relations, saying the allies are prepared to maintain their military strength "at a time when the enemies of democracy seemed determined to test us." He did not elaborate.

Several thousand persons cheered Carter in a cobble-stone square as he stood in an open-top limousine at one point during his ride to the city hall.

At a memorial to "the victims of wars and tyranny," he presented a fir, rose and daisy wreath, which bore the words in English and German, "With deep respect — Jimmy Carter." He solemny straightened a blue ribbon on the floral display.

Earlier, the president's wife, Rosalynn, toured the house where Ludwig van Beethoven was born and heard his "32 Variations on an Original Theme" played on his piano.

Carter's meeting with Schmidt followed a sedate official welcome hereafter a btsedate official welcome here after a breakfast conferenct relations.

Carter, who reached Germany so late Thursday night that the welcoming ceremony was delayed, was received by President Walter Scheel under misty skies at Villa Hammerschmidt, the West German chief of state's official residence on the Rhine.

Neither man spoke at the ceremony, nor was a 21-gun salute fired. The two countries' national anthems were played and the leaders reviewed a German military honor guard, to the strains of Prussian marching music, before Carter launched into successive meetings with Scheel and Schmidt.

The U.S. Stars and Stripes alternated with the black, red and gold of the West German flag on flagpoles along major streets in the capital.

The Carter-Vance breakfast, also attended by White House national security assistant Zbigniew Brzezinski, was the U.S. president's first opportunity to get a first-hand report from the secretary of state on Vance's just-concluded strategic arms limitation talks with Gromyko in Geneva.

Vance arrived here Thursday after two days in Geneva, during which there was no apparent breakthrough in the arms talks.

Those talks and, in a sense, the German-American summit here, were overshadowed by heightened Soviet-American tensions.

During Carter's 7½-hour flight from Washington, an American official traveling with the president said Carter's sharp criticism of the trial of Soviet dissident Anatoly Shcharansky "certainly hasn't improved" relations between the United States and the Soviet Union.

The official, who declined to be quoted by name, said he was encouraged, however, by a widespread echoing of Carter's criticism, saying it showed "global sensitivity to the human rights issue."

Acknowledging that "somewhat more friction" now exists between Moscow and Washington, he said that Americans should avoid a tendency to swing between "euphoria and belligerence."

Vance, during his flight to Germany, issued a statement saying he was "deeply distressed to learn of the heavy sentence" — eight years at hard labor — given to Alexander Ginzburg.

Vance said Ginzburg has become "a symbol of selfless courage and dedication to principle," and concluded: "his well-being will be our constant concern."

Schmidt was an unscheduled participant in Carter's low-key arrival at the Cologne-Bonn airport. Because the official welcome was set for today, a protocol official of far lesser rank had been scheduled to greet the president and Mrs. Carter and their 10-year old daughter Amy.

Drop In Hired Farm Workers Levels Off

WASHINGTON (AP) — After following a downward trend for more than a decade, the number of hired farm workers in the United States has stabilized in recent years, according to a new analysis by the Agriculture Department.

The analysis, issued Wednesday, was based on Bureau of Census figures for 1976. Updated annually by the department's Economics, Statistics and Cooperatives Service, the report said that the 1976 hired work force was about 2.8 million persons.

"The number of hired farmworkers has not changed significantly since 1971, when the hired farm working force numbered over 2.6 million persons," it said. "Since that time, annual employment appears to have stabilized after the long-term downward trend of the previous years."

Although there were years of slight increases and decreases, the farm labor force generally declined after 1958, when it totaled about 4.2 million workers. This coincided with increased mechanization in some sectors of agriculture, a continued migration of rural people to cities and the trend to larger and fewer farms on which to work.

"As in previous years, hired farmworkers were predominately young, white and male," the report said of the 1976 statistics. "The majority lived off the farm and more resided in the south than in any other region of the United States."

The report said also that:

—60 percent of the hired workers were less than 25 years old and that half of those were 14 to 17 years of age.

—The median age of all workers was 23 years, meaning that half were older and half were younger.

—74 percent of all farm workers were white.

—74 percent of all farm workers were male.

—81 percent of all workers did not live on farms at the time of the survey in 1976.

The report said that only 12 percent of all hired help worked on farms year-round, meaning 250 days or more. Another 10 percent worked on farms 150 to 249 days a year.

Averaged together, the 1976 hired labor force earned $1,652 per worker, an average of $19.25 a day for 86 days of farm employment, the report said.

Those who worked on the farm year-round earned $6,392 in 1976 for an average of 305 days of employment or $20.95 a day, the survey found.

Looking at migrant farm workers, the report said that in 1976 there were 213,000 — about 8 percent of the total work force — who traveled across county lines from their usual place of residence to stay overnight and do farm work, a definition used by the statisticians.

The study of migrants found that:

—Nearly 60 percent of them were less than 25 years old.

—Almost one-third were students who were out of the work force most of the year.

—Whites accounted for 57 percent of migrant workers; Hispanics, 36 percent; and blacks and "others", 7 percent.

Sunbelt States Lead In Disasters Occurring In U.S.

ATLANTA (UPI) — Over half of all the disasters in the United States happen in 13 Sunbelt states, according to William Wilcox, head of the Federal Disaster Assistance Administration.

Wilcox said Wednesday Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Louisiana, Arkansas, Oklahoma and New Mexico have suffered more distruction caused by flash floods, hurricanes and tornadoes than the remaining 37 states.

He said the tornado belt stretches across the South as well as the vast Gulf and South Atlantic coasts, areas that are usually the first to bear the brunt of any hurricanes.

Participating in a review of disaster preparedness plans with regional federal agency heads, Wilcox said although many governments have emergency plans, most individuals don't. "There has to be a high occurence of flooding before people will even buy flood insurance," Wilcox said.

"Our experience in recent years is about three-quarters of the damage we reimburse for is caused by flooding," he said.

"The FDAA has budgeted this year some $1 billion to relieve all types of disaster victims but this figure doesn't include relief from state and local governments, insurance companies and losses not covered by any agency," Wilcox said. "This figure doesn't even come close."

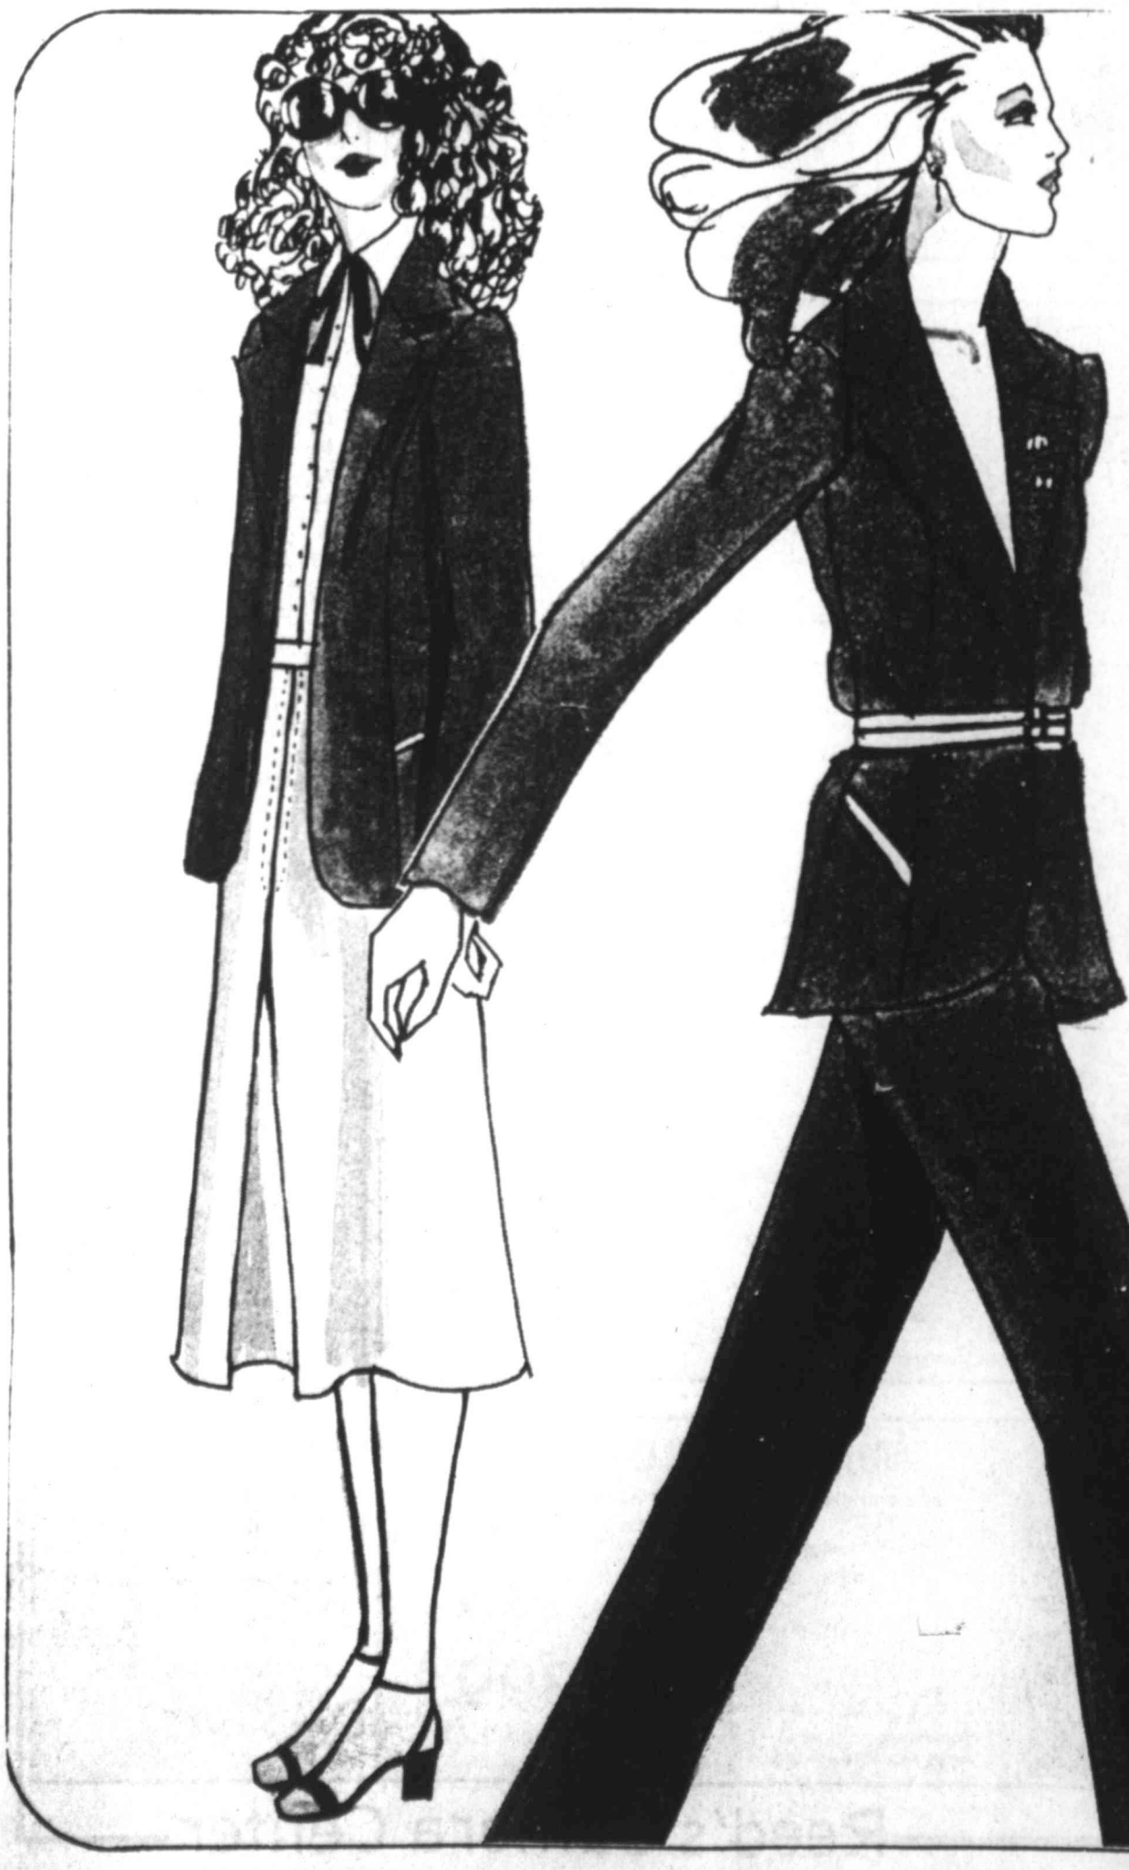

Wilcox also said there is enough time before many natural disasters such as tornados and flooding to warn people. "But with maxi-disasters such as leaking gas from derailed trains, we must depend on the people moving as quickly as possible," he said. He said the FDAA doesn't provide assistance until all state and local resources have been exhausted.

Wilcox said the FDAA recommended that the "President turn down the Georgia shrimpers' request for disaster aid because all state supplies hadn't been exhausted."

AFTER THE BLAST — Agitated seagulls fly past the remains of the Kerry Dancer as smoke from one of several explosive blasts swirls around the craft. The boat was destroyed Thursday by a U.S. Army demolition team. (AP Laserphoto)

Detention Center Plans Presented

Lloyd Watts, Lubbock County juvenile probation administrator, went before county commissioners Thursday with floor plans for the planned juvenile detention center and justifications for its proposed $291,500 first-year budget.

The $1 million center on nine acres of land the county has bought at North University Avenue and Loop 289 is expected to be built and opened in October 1979 at the earliest.

Called to the afternoon budget hearing session, Watts outlined the center program and said there would be too many demands on his time for him to take on the duties of program supervisor, which Commissioner Coy Biggs questioned as a staff addition.

County Judge Rod Shaw asked Biggs after the 90-minute session with Watts if he had been convinced the $13,611-per-year position was justified. Biggs replied that he had been "50-50" percent persuaded.

The commissioners worked through written budget proposals from the various departments of county government Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

Based in their initial revisions, County Auditor Dale Gallimore will make up a revised budget, and it will be revised into perhaps the final budget for adoption in September.

Watts and Criminal District Attorney-elect John T. Montford were the only 1979 departments heads to appear before the commissioners this time.

In his budget for the first year of operations, Watts asks for six more officers to go with the nine he has now, two sets of house parents, a full-time and part-time cook, a physician on retainer and two summer teachers.

The budget would become effective upon the opening of the center.

Watts said the approximately 24,000-square-foot center will have one short-term and two long-term living areas or "clusters" with beds for 12 juveniles each.

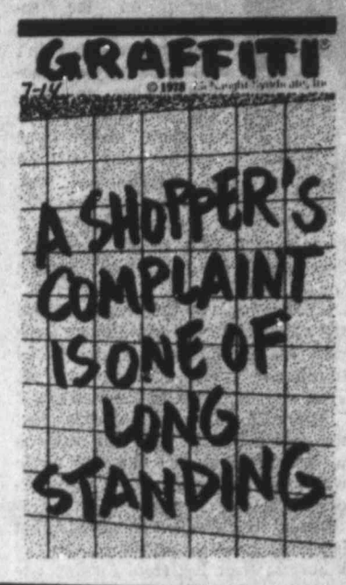

One long-term area and the short-term area will be divided equally into living quarters for boys and girls, he said.

The staff additions are necessary in part because three shifts will be worked, he said, but the salaries he asks probably should be adjusted into line with schedules for other county employees.

Responding to Biggs' questioning of more than $9,200 annually for a janitor, Watts said, "I envision that there will be some adjustments in salaries depending on what you do."

He said he suggested salaries without

Grounded Shrimp Boat Finally Destroyed

By KEN HERMAN

SOUTH PADRE ISLAND (AP) — The Kerry Dancer, a grounded shrimp boat that had confounded officials here since May, is no more.

The 56-foot vessel, which attracted death and injury in the shallow waters here, was destroyed Thursday by a series of shattering explosions that left the beach strewn with charred debris.

A U.S. Army ordnance squad from Corpus Christi had been called in to do away with the deadly hazard.

The boat ran aground here May 4 and quickly became a plaything for swimmers in Andy Bowie park.

One youth died and several were injured while playing in the Gulf waters near the boat.

"We're trying to get rid of the boat the cheapest way possible," said Randy Friebele, an assistant Cameron County district attorney.

The local prosecutors had taken the boat's owners to court in an effort to have the boat removed. But Elizabeth Pierson of nearby Laguna Heights claimed she sold the boat for $1 after it beached. The salvage firm she said she sold it to, however, denied the purchase.

State district Judge Filemon Vela ordered Mrs. Pierson to have the boat removed. On a crowded Saturday at the beach she and a friend tried to set the water-soaked boat ablaze. Deputies stepped in and quashed that effort.

It went back to Vela's court and the judge ordered the county to arrange the boat's removal. The ownership — and financial responsibility — will be decided later.

It took over a week for the county to arrange the demolition. There were questions about whether the boat was technically in the county — it was nestled in the sand some 50 feet from shore.

But the district attorney's office, after consulting with the U.S. Coast Guard, decided the most important thing was to get the menace out of the water.

Mrs. Pierson watched from afar as the demolition crew waded out to the boat with cases of explosives.

Mrs. Pierson and her husband had purchased the Kerry Dancer several months before he died of cancer.

The use of the Army team will save money for whoever the court decides owned the boat. Original estimates showed it would cost some $10,000 to haul the boat ashore, but Friebele said the ordnance team was not charging the county for its services. The only cost will be the $300 per day being paid to local diver-salvager Gene Robeson who aided Thursday.

The explosions splintered the boat and spewed debris some 400 feet into the air. The remains washed ashore and were collected by county employees.

Robeson said he planned to return Friday to remove the remaining fragments. The bottom of the vessel is wedged six feet into the sand below the water, he said.

City Chicanos Plan Confab

Various Lubbock Mexican-American organizations will be sponsoring a voter education conference Saturday from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Lubbock Opportunities Industrialization Center, 2200 E. Broadway.

"The purpose of the event is to motivate and encourage Chicano turnout at the polls," Vivian Mendez, a spokeswoman for the conference, said.

This conference is especially directed at those who do not normally participate in the electoral process, she added.

Guest speakers will include Ruben Bonilla Jr. of Corpus Christi, state director for the League of United Latin American Citizens (LULAC); Martha Cotera of Austin, author of "The Chicana Feminist;" and Jose Angel Gutierrez of Crystal City, county judge for Zavala County.

At the conference, workshops will be conducted on "Politicizing the Chicana and the Question of Community Survival" and "Developing Strategy on Voter Registration."

Persons desiring more information about the conference may call 763-0406.

Braniff's Concorde Flights Considered

WASHINGTON (AP) — Braniff Airways is being given tentative approval to fly the supersonic Concorde jetliner between Washington and Dallas-Fort Worth Airport beginning in October.

The Civil Aeronautics Board issued a show cause order on Thursday giving interested parties 30 days to comment on the plan. Under the plan, Braniff would lease the Concorde from British and French airlines for the Washington-Texas segment of each flight, with Braniff crews flying the domestic route.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

A lot of people deplore the visit with friends or relatives in another city. They say it puts a strain on the relationship.

This can be avoided if guests remember one simple rule: do not visit any longer than 36 hours.

The host who went to the store every three hours to bring in fresh food supplies and said, "What are families for?" is now phrasing it, "I know what families are for — stuffing their faces. Tell me what they're against and I'll do it."

I remember the first night Howard and Fay came to visit us with their three kids. We got into our bathrobes and talked and talked until almost 7:30. Then we said, "What do you want to do?" They said, "Just visit and chat about the good old days." This was tricky as we had met them once at a VFW picnic with my parents and said, "If you're ever out West, give us a call."

One of their children complained that her glass wasn't wrapped in plastic like it was at their last stop. Another one said the white gooey stuff at dinner (scalloped potatoes) looked like a secret weapon from a alien planet. The other child was packing my children's toys in his luggage faster than you can say, "Arrest that creep." Howard was in training for the gargling Olympics. Fay kept saying, "I'd help in the kitchen but I don't know where anything is." (I wanted to label the door.)

At breakfast every morning, they would ask, "What's to see in this town?" We got in the car and took them on a three-hour trip.

"You call this a 'scenic attraction'?"

"We call it the Grand Canyon," we said proudly.

"Fay, take a look at this. Couldn't Esther clean this up and make a rock garden out of it?"

There are several state laws governing the assault of house guests who stay longer than 36 hours. They're very lenient.

Haberer-Tipton Plan Wedding

HABERER—TIPTON

EARTH (Special) — Mr. and Mrs. Roger E. Haberer announce the engagement of a daughter, Camille Gay, to William R. Tipton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Tipton of Lubbock.

The couple plans to be married Aug. 11 in St. John's United Methodist Church in Lubbock.

The bride-elect was graduated from Springlake-Earth High School and Texas Tech University. The future bridegroom was graduated from Monterey High School and attends South Plains College.

WEIGHTY MATTERS

Weight reduction means choosing foods with special care, but it's not difficult to select the meat for the menu when you look to pork. In the roast department you can consider a loin roast, fresh or cured ham or a fresh picnic shoulder. But you aren't limited to roasts. Pork chops are in the low calorie group as are pork tenderloin and a center ham slice. Broil or roast the meat and omit sauces, gravies and stuffings.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: My 15-year-old daughter just told me that she's been intimate with her boyfriend. He is her first and only. My daughter and I are very close, and she has always told me everything, but I'm shocked by this news. She thinks there's nothing wrong with it because she "loves" him.

Should I tell the boy's parents what is going on and ask them to tell their son not to see our daughter anymore? Knowing the boy, he would respect their wishes, but then my daughter would know I told them and it would ruin our good relationship.

Or should I ask the boy to stop seeing our daughter, and threaten to tell his parents if he doesn't comply. I'm sure if we broke them up the chances for the same thing happening with another boy would be greatly reduced since she is quite picky about whom she associates with. In the meantime, she may mature more. Please tell me what to do.

WORRIED MOM

Dear Worried: Please don't call the boy's parents. Your daughter would feel betrayed and may close the door on future confidences. She needs your understanding and mature guidance more than ever now.

Parents rarely succeed in breaking up their children's love affairs. (They usually drive them underground.)

Keep the lines of communication wide open, and be sure your daughter knows everything a sexually active teenager should know in order to protect herself against VD and unwanted pregnancy.

This is not to suggest that you should condone her actions. Rather, it's a plea for facing reality and handling the situation sensibly and unemotionally.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 17, and I sunbathe every chance I get because I like the way I look with a suntan.

Nearly everyone who meets me comments on my "beautiful" suntan, but they spoil it immediately by adding, "But if you don't stop doing that to your skin, you'll look like an old lady by the time you're 30!" Some have even told me that too much exposure to the sun can give me skin cancer. (Is that true?)

Abby, I think it's very rude of people to make such remarks. Please print this. Maybe it will shut up people who offer advice when it's not asked for. Thank you.

LIKES A SUNTAN

Dear Likes: Although unsolicited advice is seldom appreciated, you'd be wise to heed it. Excessive exposure to sun "ages" the skin prematurely, and it can cause skin cancer.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: I recently telephoned a friend and asked her if she was going to be home that evening because I wanted to visit her. She said, "Yes, I'll be home, watching my favorite television program. If you want to come over and watch it with me, you are welcome. Otherwise, let's make it some other time."

What do you think of such a friend?

OFFENDED IN OMAHA

Dear Offended: I'd prefer her forthright brand of frankness to the person who tells me I'm "welcome," foregoes her favorite TV program, and resents me for it. Or the friend who tries to entertain me with one eye on the TV.

Opening lead: Queen of ♡.

It is a sound policy to extract the opponents' trumps before they can be used to ruff away your winners. But don't overdo a good thing.

South judged not to leave the contract in three no trump, despite the fact that the auction strongly suggested that his partner had no more than a doubleton spade. Since neither of his suits were solid, there was a very real possibility that the enemy might get a red suit established before declarer could set up enough tricks for himself. Note that a heart lead would have sunk the no trump game.

Declarer won the opening lead with the ace of hearts and immediately played ace, king and another spade. West won the jack and drew a fourth trump with the queen, leaving declarer with only one trump. Then West reverted to hearts, East unblocking the king, and declarer was forced to ruff with his last trump.

Too late declarer realized his predicament. When he led a club to try to set up the suit, West grabbed the ace and cashed three more heart tricks for a three-trick set.

True, declarer would have made an overtrick if trumps had divided 3-3, but he risked losing control of the hand if trumps broke "normally," i.e., 4-2. Declarer should have seen that he could afford to lose two trump tricks and the ace of clubs.

After winning the ace of hearts, the correct line is to draw only two rounds of trumps and then drive out the ace of clubs. Now declarer will be able to maintain control of the hand because he will have one trump more than the defenders.

Assume West wins the ace of clubs and returns a heart forcing declarer to ruff. Declarer accepts the ruff, but simply continues to run his minor-suit winners. West can ruff at any time, but to no avail. The defenders can never get more than their two trump tricks and the ace of clubs.

The Slim Gourmet

Today we're going to tell you four ways to turn on the flavor of non-fattening foods — Italian, Mexican, Greek and French. The secret is spicy seasoning blends you can mix up yourself and keep handy on your spice shelf. Simply by switching seasonings, any lean favorite can take on a fresh foreign flair. And, since herbs and spices have virtually no calories, all you're adding is sublime flavor. How's that for magic!

Empty spice bottles or any other small-lidded glass jars will do for storing these homemade mixes. Add a stick-on label on which you've penned not only the name of the seasoning mix but also the recipe, so you can duplicate it when your supply runs out...or adjust it to taste.

Use the spice mixes to season hamburger, pot roast, meat loaf, vegetables, poultry, seafood, soups, sauces, even salad dressings.

ITALIAN SEASONING MIX — Blend together: 4 tablespoons dried oregano, 2 tablespoons dried basil, 2 teaspoons dried instant minced garlic, and 1 teaspoon dried red pepper flakes (optional). Store in a covered jar.

MEXICAN SEASONING MIX — 2 tablespoons dried oregano, 1 tablespoon dried marjoram, 2 tablespoons cumin seeds (or 1 tablespoon ground cumin), 2 teaspoons instant minced garlic, 1 teaspoon mixed pumpkin pie spice and 2 (or 4 or 6) teaspoons dried red pepper flakes depending on how hot you like it.

GREEK SEASONING MIX — 4 tablespoons dried peppermint leaves, 2 tablespoons dried thyme, 2 tablespoons dried parsley flakes, 2 teaspoons ground nutmeg, 1 teaspoon ground cinnamon, 2 teaspoons instant dried minced garlic and 2 teaspoons dried (bottled) lemon peel.

FRENCH PROVINCIAL SEASONING MIX — 2 tablespoons dried thyme, 2 tablespoons dried tarragon, 2 tablespoons dried marjoram, 2 teaspoons instant dried minced garlic, 2 teaspoons dried oregano, 2 teaspoons dried basil, 2 bay leaves, well broken up.

What to do with your seasoning mixes? Combine them with a diet-watcher's favorite — chicken, baked in a basting sauce of tomatoes, onion and sliced bell pepper. The same ingredients could also be used in a self-making sauce for a lean beef pot roast. Or over a fine fresh fish.

FOUR FLAGS CHICKEN

2 lbs. cut-up frying chicken
1 onion, peeled, halved, thinly sliced
1 bell pepper, seeded and sliced
16-oz. can stewed tomatoes, well broken up
2 tsps. Italian, Mexican, Greek or French seasoning mix (recipe above)
salt and pepper to taste

Trim fringe fat, if any, from chicken. Spray a large non-stick skillet with cooking spray for no-fat frying. Place chicken pieces skin-side down. Brown slowly, with no fat added, until skin is crisp and well-rendered of fat. Drain fat. Place chicken skin-side up. Combine remaining ingredients and spoon over chicken. Cover and simmer until tender, about 45 to 50 minutes. Stir occasionally. Uncover during last 8 to 10 minutes to permit sauce to reduce. Makes four servings, under 230 calories each.

Optional: For Italian chicken, sprinkle with 6 teaspoons grated sharp Romano cheese before serving. (Adds 15 calories per serving.) Top Mexican chicken with one-quarter cup shredded sharp Cheddar. (Adds 25 calories per serving. Serve Greek chicken with fresh lemon wedges. (About 2 calories per wedge.)

FOUR FLAGS SALAD DRESSING

½ cup cider vinegar, wine vinegar or lemon juice
1/3 cup olive or corn oil
1/3 cup olive juice from jar of olives)
1/3 cup bottled liquid pectin
1 tbsp. Italian, Mexican, Greek or French seasoning mix optional: salt and pepper to taste

Combine ingredients in a covered jar; shake up well before pouring over individual salads. For more "authentic" flavor, use lemon juice for Mexican or Greek salad dressing. Fewer than 30 calories per tablespoon.

FOUR FLAGS POTTED MEATBALLS

1 onion, minced
1 ½ tsps. salt (or to taste)
pinch of pepper
2 eggs (or 4 egg whites, or ½ cup no-cholesterol substitute)
2 slices bread: stale (high-protein, high-fiber or French or Italian) moistened and squeezed out
4 tsps. Italian, Mexican, Greek or French seasoning mix
6-oz. can tomato paste
1 ¼ cups fat-skimmed, undiluted beef broth homemade or canned) ½ cup dry red wine Cor water)

Combine ground meat, onion, salt, pepper, eggs, bread and 2 teaspoons seasoning mix. Blend well. Shape into six large, or 12 small meatballs. Brown the meatballs under the broiler or in a non-stick skillet sprayed with cooking spray for no-fat frying). Drain fat.

Stir tomato paste and beef broth with wine, or water, until smooth. Stir in remaining 2 teaspoons seasoning mix. Combine meatballs and sauce in a saucepan or skillet; cover and simmer 20 minutes. Makes six servings, about 240 calories each.

Clip 'n' Cook

PEANUT BUTTER LENTIL BURGERS

2 tbsps. butter or margarine
1 onion, chopped
3 cups cooked lentils or other beans
½ cup peanut butter
1/3 cup catsup
2 cups whole wheat bread crumbs (soft crumbs)
Salt and pepper
1 egg, well beaten
Wheat germ
3 tbsps. peanut oil

Heat butter in a small skillet and saute onion for 5 minutes. In a bowl mash lentils until pasty and stir in onions and drippings, peanut butter, catsup, crumbs, salt and pepper to taste. Shape mixture into 6 patties. Dip patties into egg and then into wheat germ. Heat oil in a large skillet and fry patties until brown on both sides. Serve on a toasted hamburger bun with crisp bacon slices and pickle spears. Can also be served plain with vegetables and salad.

BARBECUES

The first cooked meat meal probably was served out-of-doors, as primitive man huddled around a makeshift fire. But the idea of an outdoor cookout, or barbecue, appears to be an American custom. The earliest known barbecues took place in the South, and the word, "barbecue" is known to have been used in the Virginia colony prior to 1700.

Writer Enjoys Instant Movies

By IRVING DESFOR
Associated Press Writer

There's nothing like personal experience to make one appreciate the revolutionary achievement of photography's newest area of magic — instant Polaroid movies. I was involved when it recorded a moving tribute to a victim of the Lou Gehrig disease (A-lateral sclerosis). The ability to document memorable moments in motion and then replay the images immediately is thrilling magic indeed.

Here's how the two came together:

As a proud grandpa, and along with other parents and grandparents, I was getting ready to take pictures at an annual children's dance recital. Who can resist the charming pictures of youngsters in action in colorful costumes? My focus, at the time, was on my 9-year-old granddaughter.

Then I heard she was rehearsing for a special ballet number which had a touching human interest story. It was to be a carefully guarded surprise tribute to honor the dance teacher's husband, Frank Mambelli, a recent victim of the Lou Gehrig disease. I remembered Mambelli from the previous year's recital in which he played a vigorous role as master of ceremonies and participated in some of the dances. Now he's confined to a wheelchair.

Mambelli had taught music in New York's Westchester area for 25 years, was active in music teachers' associations and had received citations and awards for his outstanding dedication. The first signs of the affliction were noticed in June 1977. It progressed inexorably, forcing him to retire on disability a year later.

Marianne Bessinger-Mambelli had choreographed a special ballet number to his favorite melody, Tchaikovsky's Serenade for Strings, a piece he had recorded as conductor of the Westchester All-County Symphony. She was donating all proceeds from the dance recital to Medical Research for the Lou Gehrig Disease to aid in combatting the ailment.

It was then that my daughter wondered if it would be possible to photograph the special ballet number in instant movies so that it could be played back for the audience during intermission and at the show's end. Then it could be presented to Mr. Mambelli for future showings.

The idea found approval with Polaroid officials for its humanitarian aspect. We spent an afternoon with Polaroid's Westchester representative going over the camera's handling and the matter of having sufficient light for shooting the ballet number indoors. Tests showed that extra spotlights were required to illuminate the dance action on the high school stage.

The Polavision system consists of a simple-to-use hand-held movie camera; cassettes of Phototape film; and a compact, table-top player which processes the phototape and plays back the finished movies in 90 seconds. The player resembles a portable TV set.

The phototape is exposed, processed, viewed and rewound without ever leaving its sealed cassette. First it is inserted in the camera for filming.

The camera has an f-1.8 zoom lens with a 2-to-1 ratio and two focus positions: near, from 6 to 15 feet; and far, beyond 15 feet. When holding the camera's pistol grip, the thumb squeezes a grip switch at the back which supplies power to the trigger switch. It activates a photocell circuit for automatic setting of the lens aperture. Pressing the trigger switch starts the filming and produces a signal light in the viewfinder. As the phototape nears the end, a warning light in the viewfinder flashes on to signal there are only six seconds left to shoot. Total filming time for each cassette is 2 minutes, 35 seconds.

For indoor shooting, there is an accessory unit which is attached to the top of the camera and holds two small high-power lamps. Its light is adequate for close-up filming but extra light is recommended for subjects beyond eight feet or in large interiors.

After filming, the cassette is inserted in a slot on top of the player and pressed down. That automatically starts the phototape processing action as it rewinds itself. In 90 seconds, the film is processed and the movie is automatically seen in color on the 12-inch screen.

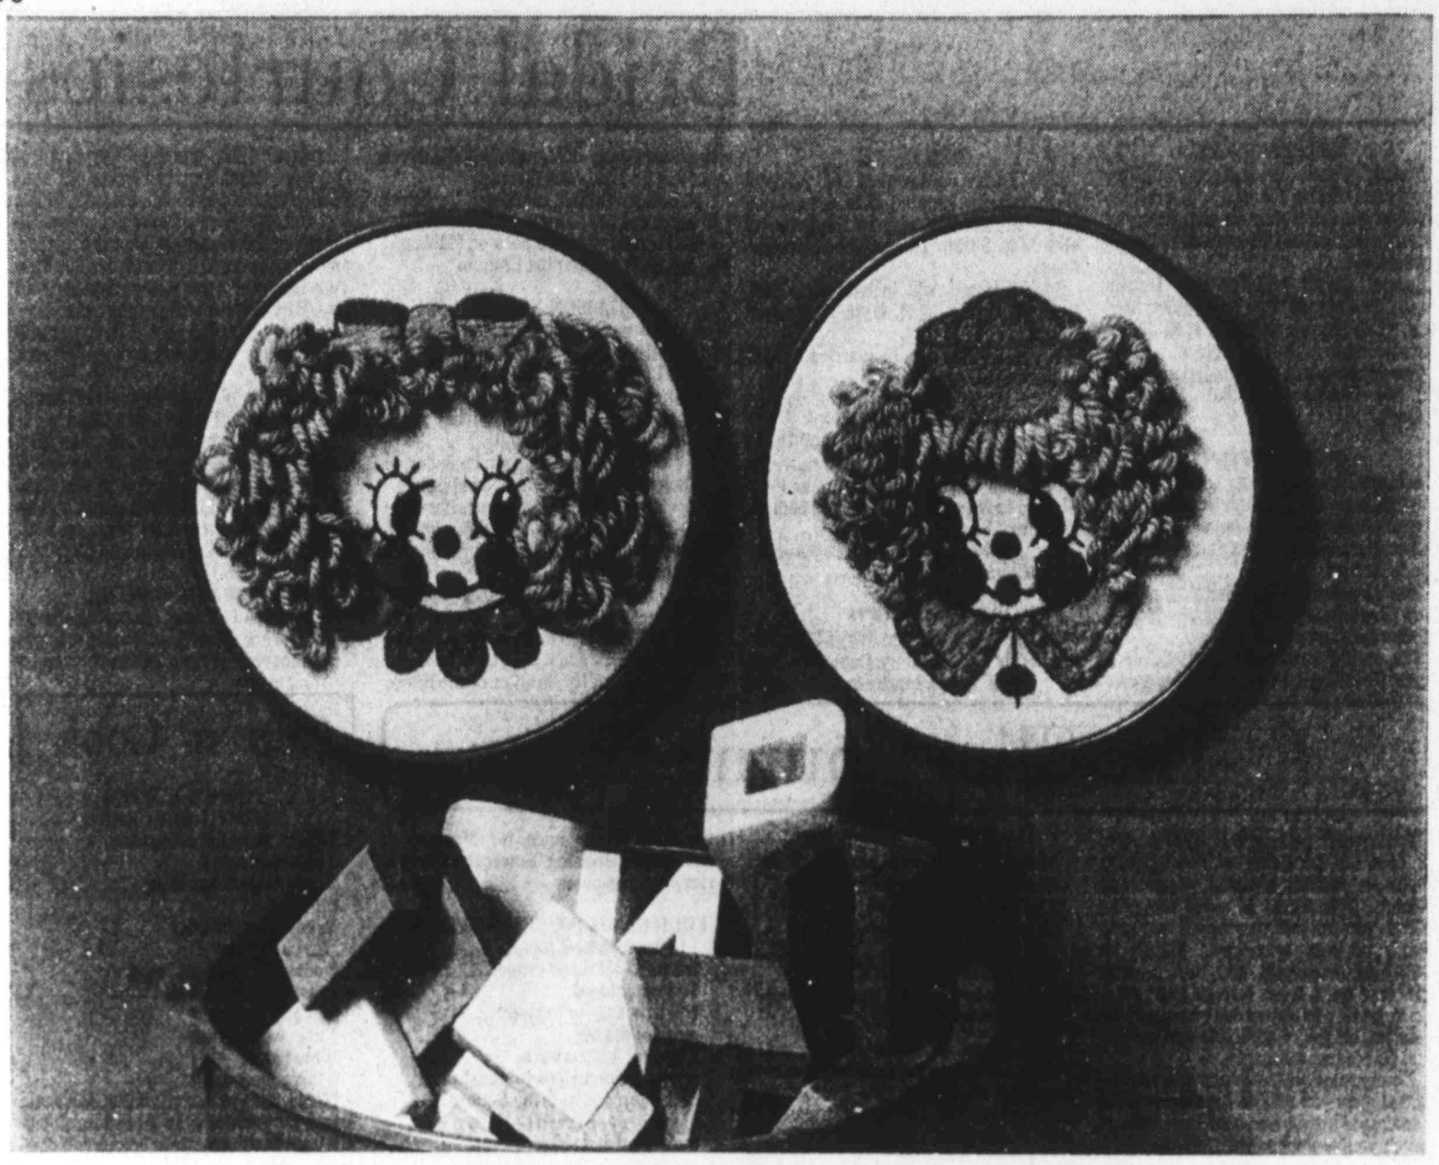

When finished, it automatically rewinds itself and the cassette pops up. To be seen again, it is pushed down.

That night, the camera was aimed at Mambelli in the first row when the announcement of the special ballet number was announced. His reaction was recorded before switching to the ballet dancing on stage. His wife, Marianne, and another teacher, Terry Manikova, were the soloists and they were aided by a ballet corps of five students.

Two phototape cassettes were required to document the dance and the applause of the audience at the finale. By the time intermission was announced, the instant movies were ready for viewing. They were shown again and again for Frank Mambelli and groups of up to 20 people.

At the conclusion of the dance recital, the special ballet movie was replayed again to groups that included Dr. George Cox of Good Samaritan Hospital, Suffern, N.Y., and Dr. Hyman Donnefeld of St. Vincent's Hospital in New York City, who specializes in the Lou Gehrig disease.

The occasion was a vivid reminder that some of today's precious memories can be preserved in motion and still pictures through the magic of photography.

Embroidery Project Brightens Playroom

Two adorable tykes get done up in golden curls and lollipop cheeks in the playroom embroidery project pictured above. And you'll be able to make fast work of them in a sampling of some of your favorite stitches.

A sailor boy cap is outlined in dark orange stem stitch and filled in with light orange split stitching. The same stitches can tie a big blue bow, only with a little extra split stitching for shading. Facial features are red padded satin stitches for nose, mouth, and cheeks. For those wide-awake eyes, straight and split stitches and french knots will do the job in a wink. Yellow loop stitches finish your dolls up with a full head of delightful, moppet curls.

Even fairly inexperienced seamstresses probably appreciate the value of an embroidery hoop — it prevents stitches from becoming too tight or your fabric from gathering. But when your work is finished, you can still put your hoop to good use. A hoop makes a convenient and inexpensive frame for your canvas, and can always be painted before using if it strikes you as too plain looking. Best of all, this resourceful technique can save you from much of the fuss and bother of blocking.

The Rosy Cheek Girl and Boy are each available in kits containing stamped rayon-polyester fabric, 3-ply acrylic yarn, polyester yarn, 7-inch hoops for framing, a needle, and complete instructions.

Order Rosy Cheeks Girl No. 14314 or Rosy Cheeks Boy No. 14315 for $3.99 plus 95 cents postage and handling each. Order Both Kits for $7.49 plus $1.45 postage and handling.

Send your name, address, order and remittance to Creative Home Crafts, Dept 8BB, P.O. Box 1281, Locust at 17th, Des Moines, Iowa 50336. If you wish to use your Visa, Master Charge, or American Express please give the Master Charge interbank number, credit card number and expiration date.

Postal Service Changes Date Of Issuance For Cohan Stamp

By SYD KRONISH
Associated Press Writer

George M. Cohan was a "Yankee Doodle Dandy, born on the Fourth of July." But the U.S. Postal Service changed the date of issuance for a new 15-cent stamp commemorating the 100th birthday of the great showman to July 3 — the real date. First day ceremonies are listed for Brown University at Providence, R.I., Cohan's place of birth.

The Cohan stamp is the second to be issued in a new Performing Arts and Artists Series launched earlier this year with the Jimmie Rodgers commemorative.

George attained fame as an actor, song writer, playwright and producer — but through it all he was intensely patriotic. From 1901 to 1940 he produced 80 Broadway shows, many of which he wrote himself. His songs became American classics, including "Over There," "You're A Grand Old Flag," and "Yankee Doodle Dandy."

The design of the new stamp features two images of Cohan. One is a portrait and the other is a dancing figure wearing the familiar straw hat and carrying a cane. The two images are shown against a square backdrop of etars. The caption "George M. Cohan" appears at the top of the stamp and below that is "Yankee Doodle Dandy." Across the bottom on one line is "Performing Arts USA 15c."

To obtain first-day cancellations, the usual two methods are in effect. The USPS, however, encourages collectors to purchase their own stamps at their local post offices and affix them to their own envelopes. All envelopes must be addressed, and peelable return address labels are recommended. Send your requests to: "First Day Cancellations, Providence, R.I. 02940" prior to July 19. No remittance is required.

If you prefer the USPS to affix the stamps, send your request, with 15 cents per stamp remittance to: "Cohan Stamp, Providence, R.I. 02940," also prior to July 19.

A revised and enlarged edition of the Minkus "Scandinavia and Baltic Countries Stamp Album" was recently released by Minkus Publications. The album is designed to accommodate the stamps issued by Denmark, Danish West Indies, Greenland, Finland and its early occupation areas, Iceland, Norway, Sweden, Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania and Memel. The Faroe Islands has been added as a new stamp-issuing entity.

Insecticides Warrant Cautious Handling

By HERB ALEXANDER

The problem with poisoning insects is that you might also poison yourself. Ever since Rachel Carson's "Silent Spring" a few years ago, with its warnings against the indiscriminate use of insecticides, there has been a growing concern about their safety.

Many advocate not using them at all. If you feel you must use an insecticide, use it properly and with precautions. Even the safest of bug killers can be dangerous if not used as directed.

First, read the label. Those that are labeled "nontoxic to humans" are the safest but must still be handled carefully. Even though exposure to the substance once may not be dangerous, there is a growing concern about cumulative toxicity, the effect of a long-term buildup. So use even the mild insecticides carefuly. Use of the word "caution" also indicates a relatively mild insecticide.

When you get to the word "Warning," you know you have a more dangerous product. Follow directions to the letter.

If you see the word "poison" and the old skull-and-crossbones symbol, skip it and pick another product. Leave that stuff to the professionals and stay out of their way.

Read the instructions carefully. Never mix different insecticides together. Never mix an insecticide in greater strength than directed — it's only the bugs you want to kill, not pets or children or yourself.

Determine what you need it for. If it is one type of bug you're concerned about, then pick that least toxic insecticide that will kill that bug.

Keep the kids and the pets away when you dust or spray and for a good length of time afterward.

Keep insecticides out of reach of children. Such dangerous material should be kept under lock and key. Don't store them with food products. Never use garden insecticides inside the house.

Keep the insecticides in their original containers and keep the label clean and intact. When the containers are empty, get rid of them. Wash out bottles and cans before tossing them in the trash can.

Never mind the ads in which a girl in a bathing suit or a man in Bermuda shorts is spraying or dusting insecticides. Keep covered. Wear clothes that cover you completely. Wear rubber gloves. If working in close quarters or for a long period of time, wear a respirator mask.

Since your clothing is bound to become contaminated, wash it when you are finished spraying.

Wash hands and face immediately. Wash before eating or smoking. Don't smoke while spraying.

Watch out that some products may be inflammable. Assume they are if they have an oil base.

Overkill is not a good idea. Fogging apparatus is dangerous. It drifts where you don't want it. If you can apply a small amount of insecticide to a plant or in a crevice, then don't spray.

Adjust your equipment for the smallest spray pattern possible. Spray so that the wind is blowing away from you. Check your equipment. If it leaks, you may get the dust or spray on yourself. If you have a compressed air sprayer, be careful when you refill it. Turn it over and release any remaining air away from you. Then, if there is any insecticide left in the container, it will not spray in your face.

Mortgage Interest Rate Equals Top Maximum

By ANDY LANG
Associated Press Writer

Q. — You recently told a reader that the maximum interest rate on home mortgage loans backed by the Federal Housing Administration was 8¾ percent. According to my information, it is 9 percent. Which is correct? Also, is this the highest maximum interest rate ever allowed on such mortgages? And why does it keep going up?

A. — Between the time the reply was written and appeared in newspapers, the rate moved up from 8¾ percent to 9 percent. What's more, between the time you sent your letter and the time it was received, the rate moved up another ½ percent, so that it is now 9½ percent. Let's hope this gets into print before there is another increase. In any case, 9½ percent matches the highest maximum interest rate ever permitted on FHA mortgage loans. It is also the new rate for loans guaranteed by the Veterans Administration. Why does it keep going up? Because both lending institutions and builders steered clear of FHA and VA loans whenever they could. In many cases, lenders have charged so-called "points" on such loans. It is the hope of the government that the latest increase will bring federal-backed mortgage loans in line with other competitive rates.

Q. — Our house is 30 years old. It had always been painted with oil paint, but about a year ago we painted it with latex paint. It is now starting to peel. When I examined the walls closely, I saw that both the oil and latex coats are coming off. What causes this, and was it because we used latex over oil?

A. — No. The fact that both types are coming loose indicates that the oil coat or coats began to peel and took the latex coat with it. As to what made the oil paint peel, there are several things that might cause this, but the most likely is that moisture got under the paint and forced it loose. The moisture could have emanated from inside the house and worked its way through the walls or it could have come from some outside source, such as an overflowing gutter that dumped rain behind the exterior walls. Get off as much of the old paint as possible, smooth it where necessary, then apply a coat of primer and repaint. Once you have decided whether to use latex or oil paint, be sure you get the proper primer for that kind of paint.

• • •

Q. — We have been having trouble with peeling paint on the outside of our house. I read somewhere that, before painting again, vents should be installed in the outside walls to allow moisture to escape. Is this so? And if so, where should they be installed? Our house has wood siding.

A. — Yes, such vents serve the purpose of preventing a buildup of moisture behind the exterior walls. They should be inserted through holes drilled in the siding between studs.

Registrations Taken For Art Jamboree

Artist and craftsman registrations are now being accepted for the San Antonio Art League's Art Jamboree to be held on the grounds of the McNay Art Museum.

The jamboree is scheduled from noon to 8:00 p.m. on Saturday, Sept. 23, 1978, and from noon to 6:00 p.m. on Sunday, Sept. 24. Registration blanks may be obtained from Mrs. Joe Rust, 251 Primera, San Antonio, 78212. Telephone: 512-824-5948.

Dr. Spock Has No Regrets

By GEORGE ESPER

ROGERS, Ark. (AP) — He dances the disco and partakes in transcendental meditation. At age 75.

Casual dress has replaced the dark blue suit, vest with gold chain and high collar with pin that were his trademark.

He has become a health food enthusiast.

He has taken a new wife, 40 years his junior, and moved from New York to the idyllic manmade lakes of northern Arkansas.

Life has taken some curious turns for Dr. Benjamin Spock, the grand advisor to mothers whose "Baby and Child Care" book has sold more than 28 million copies and has been translated into more than 30 languages since it was first published in 1946.

Ten years he was convicted in Boston of conspiracy to aid, abet and counsel young men to avoid the draft for the Vietnam war. He was sentenced to two years in prison, but the conviction was overturned by a higher court.

Looking back now, he says he has no regrets except that it took so long to stop the war.

His antiwar protests turned many mothers and old establishment friends against him. Medical colleagues shunned him. He was dubbed the "father of permissiveness," the bearer of a "Spock-marked" generation of hippies whom he marched beside.

"It helped me to grow up," he says. "I'm much more outgoing, much more self-assured. I don't believe there's an equal amount of right anymore on two sides of a question. Either it's right or it's wrong. It's helped me to be bold about making up my own mind."

A lot of people think he's a lot younger now than he was before.

"This partly came from defying a government that was wrong. But it was also from being thrown with young people for eight years," he says.

Spock, known for his impeccable grooming, says, "I would have naturally been highly intolerant of the hippie characteristics of the young, the fact that they didn't get their hair cut, that they wore raggedy clothes. But when they greeted me with open arms saying, 'Wonderful to have you,' I couldn't back away.

"It forced me to realize that external appearances are not important. The important thing is the character and the feelings inside. So I lost most of my old friends and I acquired thousands of at least new acquaintances."

In 1967, at age 64, Spock retired as a professor of child development at Western Reserve University in Cleveland. Within six months he was indicted by the federal government, a move that surprised him because he figured "They're not going to go after an old person, an old pediatrician like me.

"I think the next thing that was surprising to me was that I didn't feel more guilt. I'd always been a goody-goody, very law abiding all my life. I always felt nervous when I was in the presence of a policeman. This was because of my severe upbringing.

"I thought I would have been trembling all through the trial. I didn't feel that nervous at all. I think that one reason was that there were four other persons on trial with me, one of them the chaplain of the Yale University."

Despite his alliance with youth and protests, Spock continued many of his conservative ways until he divorced Jane, his wife of nearly 50 years, and married Mary Morgan, 34, a year and a half ago and moved to her native Arkansas.

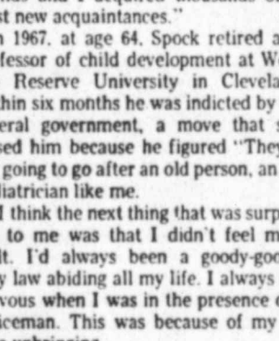

He met Mary when she invited him to speak at a workshop she organized. "And we fell in love almost instantly.

"The last step was marrying Mary, who's much younger than I. I changed most of my attitudes and I've become much more open, much warmer and approachable."

He says an off-hand comment by his new wife that he looked 10 years younger in more casual attire changed his manner of dress. "That did it. Since then I've hardly worn a dark blue suit."

City Woman Cites Loss Of $1,700

Burglars apparently still were winning the property battle today, at least according to the latest group of unhappy residents who complained to police.

According to Yvonne Covarrubio, whoever broke a window at her 2723 Bates St. home Thursday made off with a tape player and television set, together valued at $1,700.

A pried door provided entry for someone at the 2309 34th St., No. 3, residence of Dennis Neal Barnes, who said his $735 trombone was stolen that same day.

Lester Williams of 3306 E. 15th St. told officers whoever got through a window at his house Thursday made off with a .22-caliber blue-steel revolver.

According to police reports, the two men left a club in the 1800-block of 19th Street shortly after 2 a.m. Thursday.

The 25-year-old man told police he had agreed to take the other man, who is 24, to the 24-year-old's home.

The older man said that when he stopped in the 500-block of Guava Ave., the younger man grabbed a rifle that was in the car.

Afraid that the man would shoot him, the 25-year-old said, he grabbed a knife and in the struggle for the weapon, both men were injured.

The younger man fled the scene on foot and was found about 4:30 a.m. at a residence in the 400-block of Guava Ave., according to reports. He was listed in serious, but stable, condition today at Health Sciences Center Hospital suffering from multiple abdominal cuts.

In another knifing incident Thursday morning, 29-year-old Pete Flores was treated at Methodist Hospital for an abdominal wound he suffered in a fight with another man.

Flores said he and a guest at a party at Flores' 2415 Ave. L home had an argument about 1:10 a.m. Thursday and Flores was cut in the melee.

He said the man, whose name he provided the police, fled the residence on foot.

Miscreants early Thursday slashed the tires of eight vehicles parked behind a service station at 2668 34th St., causing at least $100 damage to each of the vehicles, according to station service manager Bobby Lee Bethune.

Another employee of the same station, Frank Ballato, told police that someone also cut the fan belt in his vehicle which was parked at his 4808-B Belton Ave. home. He said that the engine of his car suffered between $500 and $800 damage from the slashed belt when he drove the vehicle to work Thursday.

Congratulations

Mr. and Mrs. Allan Barrett of O'Donnell on the birth of a daughter weighing 6 pounds 12½ ounces at 9:47 p.m. Thursday in Methodist Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. James Vidrine of 4619 35th St. on the birth of a son weighing 6 pounds 9½ ounces at 11:46 a.m. Thursday in Health Sciences Center Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Mackie Buck of 1303 Fifth St. on the birth of a son weighing 9 pounds 8 ounces at 1:40 p.m. Thursday in Health Sciences Center Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Micky Minter of Levelland on the birth of a son weighing 6 pounds 14 ounces at 8:26 a.m. Thursday in Health Sciences Center Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Benny Breshers of Route 7 on the birth of a daughter weighing 7 pounds 1 ounce at 10:10 a.m. Thursday in Health Sciences Center Hospital

Mr. and Mrs. Marion Bouden of 1104 Fordham St. on the birth of a daughter weighing 9 pounds 6½ ounces at 7:38 p.m. Thursday in Health Sciences Center Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Bernie Griego of 37 Dartmouth St. on the birth of a son weighing 7 pounds 2 ounces at 6:42 p.m. Thursday in Health Sciences Center Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Juarez of Meadow on the birth of a son weighing 6 pounds 11¼ ounces at 10:18 a.m. Thursday in Health Sciences Center Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Antonio Pena of 1016 E. 28th St., Apt. 73, on the birth of a son weighing 8 pounds 4 ounces at 10:43 a.m. Thursday in Health Sciences Center Hospital.

TO INTRODUCE BILL — Rep. Wayne Peveto, D-Orange, at a new conference Thursday said he will introduce a property tax reform bill in the House Monday. Peveto said the bill would put a 5 percent limitation on annual increases in local property tax revenues and require that land owned by family farmers and ranchers be appraised for tax purposes on its productive rather than market value. Peveto To Submit Tax Reform Bill

AUSTIN (UPI) — A House member who feels the Legislature has not done enough to provide tax relief for Texans says he will introduce a bill giving farmers a break and all citizens more control over tax increases.

Rep. Wayne Peveto, D-Orange, said Thursday he would submit a version of his unsuccessful 1977 tax bill Monday — a bill that taxes farm land on production and gives the public the power to roll back new taxes.

"It would not make increasing taxes impossible," Peveto said. "It would just make it harder for the local entity to raise them.

"Officials have nothing to fear if they tell the citizens what they are doing."

The bill places a 5 percent limitation on annual increases in local property tax revenue and requires that land owned by family farmers and ranchers be appraised for tax purposes on its productive value rather than market value.

Peveto said citizens were more interested in property tax reform than repeal of some sales taxes, which both the House and Senate approved Wednesday in the special legislative session.

In his call to the Legislature to reduce taxes and cut spending, Gov. Dolph Briscoe did not include the Peveto bill on the agenda, but House Speaker Bill Clayton has given Peveto permission to introduce his proposal.

The Peveto bill would require local officials to conduct public hearings before initiating the 5 percent tax increase, and if the increase would be more than 5 percent, the local entity's governing body would have to approve the increase by a two-thirds vote.

However, local taxpayers would have the right to initiate a referendum to roll back any tax increase. To call a referendum, a petition of 20,000 qualified voters or 10 percent of all registered voters — whichever is less — would have to be presented to the local governing body within 60 days of the tax increase.

Peveto said the Legislative Budget Board predicted local governments would lose $250 million a year if agricultural land was taxed on its productivity rather than its market value. He said he thought that figure "was rather high."

Under Peveto's proposal the state would reimburse the local entities for any revene loss created by the new taxing procedure.

Peveto predicted his bill would pass overwhelmingly in the House, as it did in 1977. The bill died during the last days of the session when the Senate failed to generate a two-thirds vote in order to suspend the rules and vote on Peveto's proposal.

Insufficient Money Deflates Balloonists

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (UPI) — Fund-raising problems have folded Dewey Reinhard and Steve Stephenson's dream of a hot-air balloon crossing of the Atlantic Ocean for another year.

The two balloonists attempted the voyage last year, but were forced down by bad weather within two days of taking off from Maine. Reinhard, 48, said Wednesday he was able to raise only $30,000 of the $100,000 necessary for the flight.

In addition, Reinhard said he still owes $40,000 for last year's flight. Last year's venture ended in Nova Scotia when rain, adverse winds and trouble with the ballasting system forced an emergency landing.

Another Young Remark Upsets French Leaders

By GEORGE GEDDA

WASHINGTON (AP) — France and the United States had been enjoying a period of harmonious relations — until Ambassador Andrew Young spoke his mind about France's role in Africa.

The remarks were almost overlooked amid the furor over Young's allegations about political repression in the United States.

Shortly after Young's celebrated interview with the French Daily Le Matin appeared in Paris, American Embassy officials were summoned to the French Foreign Ministry for an explanation.

Young had said that French intervention in Zaire against Katangan rebels two months ago was not motivated by humanitarian concerns but by a desire to "defend their own economic interests."

He said that France has "very fruitful neo-colonialist relationships" in Africa which help France overcome balance of payments problems. His statements were a clear departure from the Carter administration's enthusiastic support for France's decisive action in routing the Katangan rebels and in evacuating Europeans from the area.

State Department spokesman Thomas Reston disavowed Young's comments, stating that they "do not reflect the policy or the judgment of this administration."

President Carter is likely to do more fence mending when he meets with French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing at the economic summit meeting in Germany.

But Thursday's flap over France was only a small part of what was perhaps the stormiest day of Young's tempestuous 18 months as Carter's ambassador to the United Nations. His assertion to Le Matin that there are "hundreds, perhaps thousands of persons whom I would call political prisoners in the United States" drew a personal rebuke from Secretary of State Cyrus Vance.

Vance took time out from arms talks with the Soviet Union in Geneva to inform Young of his displeasure. Young was there attending a United Nations meeting.

Back home, meanwhile, a resolution to impeach Young was introduced in the House. A motion to table the resolution was approved by a 293-82 vote but even many of Young's supporters felt he had gone too far.

"I think Andy could have done well if he had curbed his tongue at this particular time," House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., said of his former House colleague.

"I don't believe there is such a thing as a political prisoner in America and I don't believe Andy believes there is such a thing either. I guess it is how you interpret the word."

There were calls for Young's resignation from Sen. Barry M. Goldwater, R-Ariz., Republican National Committee Chariman Bill Brock and several congressmen. Even several of Young's supporters at the State Department said they were appalled by his remarks, particularly their timing. They coincided with an administration warning to the Soviet Union that detente may be imperiled by the trials of Soviet dissidents Anatoly Shcharansky and Alexander Ginzburg.

In a clarifying statement Thursday, Young said in Geneva he never meant to "equate the status of political freedom in the United States with that in the Soviet Union."

He said he is in "full accord" with the adminstration's opposition to Moscow's human rights practices.

It was not the first time Young has been forced to back away from a controversial statement.

He once apologized to Great Britain for saying that the British "almost invented racism."

He did the same later on after suggesting that the British might "run out" on Rhodesia as they did on Palestine 30 years ago.

Others who have rated a place in Young's pantheon of racists include Swedes, Russians and the last four American presidents before Carter.

Asked to elaborate, Young said that no one born in the 20th Century can escape being contaminated by racism, himself included.

Young also strayed from the official line when he said last year that Cuban troops were a "stabilizing influence" in Angola.

Again he backed away, finally declaring Cubans in Africa "can only lead to more deaths and suffering" and represented "a new type of colonialism."

Until now, President Carter clearly has felt that Young's value as an administration bridge to third world countries was worth the price of an occasional gaffe. Carter once predicted that Young eventually would emerge as a hero in poor countries.

But after Young's latest display of outspokenness, his stock seemed to be going down.

State Department press officer Thomas Reston indicated Thursday that Vance's rebuke of Young was carried out at Carter's direction. For its part, Moscow was delighted with Young's rhetoric, calling it "an official admission that political persecution is widespread in the United States."

David Hester Attacks Foe's 'Liberal' Voting

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

State representative candidate David Hester today attacked incumbent Froy Salinas for what he described as a liberal voting record on state spending.

Hester, a Republican, said he will go to Austin next week to monitor how Salinas votes during the current special session on tax reform.

He criticized Salinas for voting in favor of a bill allowing the state to pay the Social Security taxes of its employees but said the 75-B representative has voted correctly on the tax reduction bills passed so far in the special session.

"I think the taxpayers forced them into this special session, and I don't think anybody has had the nerve to vote against the things that have come up," Hester said.

Hester, 49, a property developer and former owner-manager of Hester's Office Supply, said he and Salinas, a former employee of the company, "have been friends for 20 years" and that he does not expect the race to damage their friendship.

"I'm sure you've got friends you wouldn't want in the legislature," he said at a 10 a.m. news conference at the Villa Inn. "I just feel that I can do a better job than him."

Hester said Salinas "has represented only one group" in compiling a liberal voting record.

Asked if he could represent the same group, Hester said he has a high regard for the minorities in the district and would represent them in part by promoting more industry and jobs.

"I'm after the same thing that the Mexican-Americans and blacks are after," he said, "a good job, a good home and a good family."

Hester said part of his legislative program would be to abolish automobile and all other city, school and state personal property taxes.

"I think one thing the taxpayers are really sore about is collecting taxes on cars," he said.

He said he will campaign hard through the general election but said he did not know how much his campaign will cost.

He has bachelor's and master's degrees from Texas Tech University and was a tennis coach and business teacher at Lubbock High School in the early 1950s before entering his family office supply business.

Mexican Family Believed To Be Drug Smugglers

By ROBERT MACKAY

CHICAGO (UPI) — When the Mafia's French Connection was severed six years ago, cutting off the major supply of white heroin to the United States, police and federal investigators soon encountered a flood of Mexican Mud.

They blame a huge Mexican outfit known as the Herrera family, with an estimated 2,000 members, for smuggling billions of dollars worth of brown heroin each year into the country.

The heroin comes from Mexico's Durango State to Chicago for distribution in the Midwest, East Coast and even Puerto Rico, according to Vernon Meyer, regional director of the federal Drug Enforcement Administration.

Despite the huge volume — and equally huge profits — of the Mexican Connection, many Herreras hold menial jobs and drive clunker cars as they try to blend in to Chicago's large Spanish-speaking community. And the closed nature of that community and family make penetrating the organization doubly hard.

About 11 tons of heroin arrive in Chicago each year... An ounce sells for about $1,000 wholesale and $5,-000 on the street.

Meyer said the Herrera organization consists of "members of the family or close relatives that have become members of the family through intermarriage, or very close associates."

The family has smuggled heroin into the United States for at least 10 years, Meyer said, but increased operations when the French Connection for white heroin was cut in 1972.

The Herreras, a conglomeration of 15 families, saw the increased demand for their drugs as an opportunity for huge profits and took advantage of it, Meyer said. Other Mexicans began smuggling heroin into the United States at the same time but were not as well organized as the Herreras.

Jaime Herrera-Navarez, 50, is sometimes referred to as the "godfather" of the family and lives in Durango. Elder family members also live in Mexico and younger members are based in Chicago, Washington, D.C., and Los Angeles.

DEA and Chicago Police Department officials said:

—About 11 tons of heroin arrive in Chicago each year, about half supplied by the Herrera family. About half is shipped out to customers in other states, generally in the Midwest and the East. An ounce sells for about $1,000 wholesale and $5,-000 on the street.

—Wholesale heroin sales in the Chicago area amount to about $2 billion annually. Most of the money is invested in legitimate Mexican businesses.

—The Herreras occasionally sell to the mob but more commonly distribute to the street through black dealers who have their own organizations of sellers.

—Dealers, when arrested, routinely post five-figure bonds, jump bail and return to Mexico. At least 2,000 are now fugitives from American courts.

The elder Herreas "control the arrangements to collect the raw opium and convert it to heroin," Meyer said. "The younger members of the family who reside in the Chicago area are responsible for receiving it as it is smuggled up from Mexico and for the distribution at the wholesale market in the city.

"The younger ones also control a great deal for customers coming from other states, primarily from the eastern half of the country. And now we're seeing a great deal of traffic from Puerto Rico to Chicago, where Puerto Rican buyers are coming in here and buying substantial amounts and taking it back there for the market."

The Herreras have lived for generations in Durango state, infamous for frequent violence, political corruption and vanishing Mexican federal agents. They even have a town named after them — Las Herreras.

Little action has been taken against the Herreras by the Mexican authorities until recent prodding by the United States.

The Herreras hire peasants to bring the raw opium from the poppy fields in the nearby Sierra Madre Mountains, Meyer said. They then convert it into heroin in laboratories in Durango; usually hide it inside a car and have a driver — or "mule" — take it across the border and to Chicago.

Frequently, the drivers do not know they are transporting heroin.

After a series of exchanges from one driver to another, the auto finally winds up in a garage where the gas tank, drive shaft or side panels are ripped open and the heroin collected.

Only then do the top members of the Herrera family get involved, Meyer said. They supervise the wholesale sales, keep part of the money and send the rest back to Mexico.

The money is either smuggled back in a car the same way the heroin is brought across the border or money orders are bought at Chicago currency exchanges, under different names and transferred to banks in the Durango area.

Heads of the Hererra families in the United States — like leaders of the Mafia families years ago — live in modest apartments, dress casually and own small taverns, restaurants or neighborhood grocery stores. Less important family members work at jobs like bartending and cab driving.

But the Herreras in Mexico, apparently feeling more secure there, flaunt their wealth, Meyer said. Many live on large ranches, drive expensive cars and have investments in many businesses, including resort hotels.

The Mexican government has issued an program," a joint U.S.-Mexico program started three years ago, Meyer said. "We have found and destroyed millions of (poppy) fields. They follow the Sierra Madre rangs."

The program may be having an impact on the family, he said, because they are now "diluting the heroin during the refinement process ... stretching the basic product."

Three key Herrera family members were arrested and 40 pounds of heroin were confiscated in Chicago last June. Bond for each was set at $750,000 cash and they are now each serving 45-year prison sentences.

The arrests led to information that Manuel Villarreal-Valdez, a Guadalajara millionaire, controlled conversion laboratories in Mexico for the Herreras. Mexican authorities issued a warrant and he fled to the United States where he was arrested and is now in jail. That also led to the arrest warrant for Jaime.

Two months ago, Jose Ramon Herrera-Navarez, 35, described by narcotics officers as a "top don" in Chicago, and Angel Herrera, 30, were arrested in separate raids and a total of 51 pounds of heroin were confiscated. Jose was placed under a $1 million cash bond and remains in jail. But Angel's bond was reduced from $1 million to a $250,000 10 percent cash bond, which he has since posted.

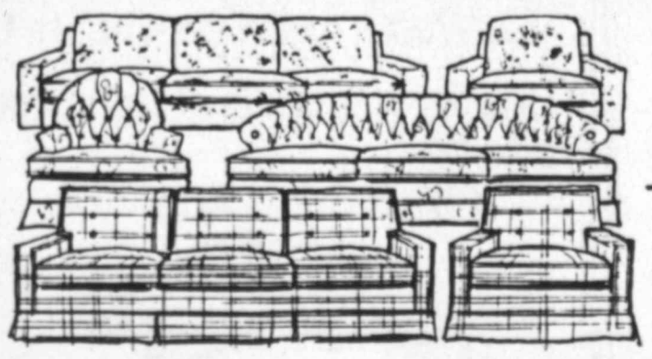

But, Meyer said, the Herreras' narcotics operation continues.

The U.S.S. Nautilus, the first nuclear-powered submarine, was launched at Groton, Conn., Jan. 21, 1954.

WINS EXTRADITION FIGHT — Shelby Barron, 36, of Hot Springs, Ark., won his extradition fight Thursday when a Houston district attorney decided not to press the case in view of evidence turned up by the Hot Springs Sentinel-Record. Barron was charged with rape and robbery of a Houston woman. His sons, Kenneth, 9, and Shelby Jr., 13, seem pleased with the decision. (AP Laserphoto)

Plan Draws Heated Opposition

EL PASO (AP) — Opponents of a Department of Energy proposal to store nuclear wastes near Carlsbad, N.M., haven't minced words with DOE officials at public hearings in Texas this week.

"I hope you are thinking about alternatives, because the residents of El Paso do not want this, and we are not going to let you shove it down our throats," Mollie Smith of Las Cruces, N.M., said Thursday.

Some of the 100 citizens attending the hearing accused the department of using public relations tactics instead of scientific research in attempts to sell the idea of a nuclear waste dump in the area.

The proposed Waste Isolation Pilot Project would store nuclear wastes at a site about 25 miles southeast of Carlsbad between 2,000 and 2,600 feet underground in salt formations.

The five-man DOE team holding the hearing faced similar if less heated opposition at meetings earlier in the week in Midland and Amarillo.

Roger LeGassie of the DOE team said if the project is approved the cost — estimated at $350 million — would be passed on to the power companies.

"These costs will probably be internalized into electricity prices," he said. Nearly $30 million has already spend spent on preliminary studies.

The DOE team said it wanted to explain some of the technology of the proposal "for the benefit of some of you housewives in the audience," but the comment prompted a sarcastic response from one New Mexico woman.

"I'm one of the housewives — so ignorant and naive that I should accept the implication that only clothing and tools will be stored, and therefore they're perfectly harmless," said Edith Kirby of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom.

Peter Montague, director of the Center of Environmental Research and Development at the University of New Mexico said geological studies in the past have shown problems with salt disolution at the proposed underground site, and he accused DOE of running "a well funded public relations campaign" to push the project through "without genuine scientific debate."

Many speakers who voiced their opposition to the proposal received standing ovations.

Ruben Kretzschmar, chief of the El Paso Environmental Health Services, won the most spirited applause when he said the government was more interested in solving the nuclear waste problem quickly than in finding a solution that is scientifically safe and valid.

"The federal officials predicted last fall that 23 of the country's 67 operating nuclear power plants may have to shut down by 1979 if a permanent solution to nuclear waste disposal is not found," he said.

Paul Garland of the Guadalupe Wilderness Committee said "when the people truly understand" that nuclear waste can "kill us, maim us, and alter our genetic structure, we will not allow the government to ram their plans down our throats."

Italian Stowaway Thanks Reporters

WAXAHACHIE (UPI) — Johnny Camera Thompson stowed away on an American troop carrier returning from Italy in 1946. But had it not been for the publicity he received after arriving in New York, he doesn't think he would be an American today.

"Without the write-ups, I don't think I would have gotten to stay," he said. "But it's been worth it all.

Mrs. Lea Devizio had stayed with her mother in Italy until 1955, when she moved to England. But only last month was she able to come to America to see her brother again.

"She was surprised, just like I was when I got here, at how much room and space there is here," Thompson said. "She just couldn't believe there's so much more of everything."

Thompson found out he liked Americans in 1943, when the 36th Infantry Division from Texas was stationed at Salerno. Thompson was a 12-year-old goatherd for the landowner where the Americans were camped.

"There was a lot of stealing, and the soldiers asked me to keep an eye on their stuff," he said. "They got to liking me, and when they moved out, they took me along."

Thompson spent a year acting as a translator for Claren "Curly" Thompson of Waxahachie, the company cook.

"I learned English in about three months. So I helped them trade C-Rations for fresh eggs, potatoes, and stuff like that," Thompson said. "Curly told me that if I ever got to the states, I had a home with him."

Thompson managed to get on the troopship Claymont Victory in 1946, but when the vessel docked in New York he was caught swinging down a hawser to land. He was placed on Ellis Island until reporters publicized the story, calling Thompson a "real-life Dondi," after a comic-strip character.

Texan Tom Clark, then U.S. Attorney General, placed Thompson under the custody of Curly Thompson, and Congress passed an act to ensure that the Italian teen-ager could remain in his new home.

Thompson's sisters remained with their mother in Salerno. In the mid-50s Lea moved to England, but sister Tarsilla stayed in Italy.

Thompson was asked if he and his sister discussed the various paths their lives had taken, and who had come out better.

"I couldn't ask her that," he said. "But I think we both believe things are better here in the states."

And once aain, publicity has helped.

"Some people from England heard about my sister coming over here for the first time, and I think they are going to get her a better job when she goes back," he said.

And although Thompson is hoping all his European relatives can visit him in Texas in a few years, he's not really interested in going back to Italy.

"Things are so unstable over there," he said. "I'd hate to get over there and have as much trouble getting out as I did the last time."

Houston Officials Elect Not To Extradite Man

HOUSTON (UPI) — Prosecutors — faced with an alibi, a questioned identification and a newspaper campaign — Thursday decided against trying to extradite an Arkansas man a woman had accused of rape.

Acting on information from a friend, a waitress traveled to Hot Springs, Ark., and picked Shelby Barron from a lineup as her rapist. Barron denied it, saying he was in Hot Springs at the time of the February attack in Houston.

The article led to petition and defense fund drives for Barron. A Hot Springs judge reduced Barron's bond from $20,000 to $750 and criticized Texas authorities for proceeding.

Houston prosecutor Jack Bodiford, who originally vowed to bring Barron back and convict him, said he began to doubt the case when Houston police arrested five youths for rapes similar to the one he was investigating.

The five were accused of ramming automobiles and raping and robbing the other drivers. The waitress had been raped after someone rammed her car.

"I had her attend lineups in that case," Bodiford said. "She was somewhat confused about one individual and wanted a week to think about it. I told her based on the confusion I would have to decline extradition.

"At the time I vowed to convict him, the only information I had was that there was a positive identification by the victim. I did not have the documented evidence I have come to know exists."

Bodiford said he will dismiss a Harris County grand jury indictment based solely on the identification when he receives that documented evidence from Barron's defense lawyers.

In Hot Springs, Barron said the decision against extradition "makes me feel so much better.

"I'd probably have been sent down the river if the paper hadn't cared about me and believed in me. The past five weeks have been like five years," he said.

Houston police detective Clarence Darrow and the woman said they think Barron should have been extradited to face the charge, although the investigator said he did not have evidence to conflict with Barron's alibi.

"My identification is positive," the woman said. "I have never changed my mind. I still feel like he was the right man."

Yarbrough Wins Damages From Victoria Bank

VICTORIA (AP) — A civil court jury ruled in favor of ousted Texas Supreme Court Justice Donald Yarbrough Thursday, recommending the convicted ex-justice receive a $247,000 judgment from the Bank of Victoria.

An elated Yarbrough told jurors, "I thank you, my wife thanks you, and, who knows — some day maybe even the people of Texas will thank you."

But District Judge Frank Crain said the jury's recommendation is not the final judgment. Crain said he will hand down a ruling in the case at a later date.

Yarbrough, 36, who was sentenced to five years in prison for perjury last spring and is appealing that case, sued the bank in a deal involving $200,000 he borrowed in 1974.

The bank said Yarbrough did not live up to the repayment plan, and it foreclosed on the loan, selling four pieces of heavy construction equipment Yarbrough had used as collateral. But Yarbrough said the bank acted too quickly in selling the equipment and said the bank sold it for less than it was worth.

The jury apparently agreed with him, recommending Yarbrough be awarded $197,000 in actual damages and $50,000 in punitive damages.

After thanking the jurors Yarbrough said, "I am for the first time able to see a silver lining in the clouds."

But Yarbrough said if the decision is approved by Crain it still would not clear him of his entire debt to the bank because of interest and other fees added to the original sum.

Bank officials said they had no regrets about the way they handled the matter.

"We took steps as accurately as possible, and if we were to do it again we would do it in the same manner," said Don Hoffman of Houston, chief security officer for the Bank of Victoria.

The bank sold the equipment in October 1975 for $56,000. Yarbrough said it was worth at least $200,000 and he said the bank did not give enough publicity to the auction.

Watts told the commissioners that his department had "line officer" turnovers of 67 percent in fiscal 1976 and 100 percent for the year ending June 30.

He said the $818 beginning salary could be left unchanged, but the steps to $835 after six months and $852 after a year should be made higher.

His office lost two officers to the adult parole department, two to the police department and one who became an investigator for the criminal district attorney during the past year, he said.

Biggs noted that Carolyn Lanier, president of the Lubbock League of Women Voters, asked in a prepared statement earlier in the week that the salaries of juvenile probation officers be raised to reduce the turnover.

SHARK CAGE BREAKS UP — The torn-up shark cage used by retired cookie baker Walter Poenisch on his swim from Cuba to near the Florida Coast, Thursday is dragged by the tow boat. It was dropped on the shore just before the ship docked. Poenisch, from Grove City, Ohio, is convinced he is the first person ever to swim from Cuba to Florida. He already holds the Guiness record for long-distance ocean swimming. He was forced to end his swim, within 150 yards of the Bahia Honda Bridge to Key West, by the break-up of the protective cage.(AP Laserphoto)

Family Killed As Plane Crashes Into Home

By TOM BALLANTYNE

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Another working day had just ended in Melbourne, and the city was winding down.

In the sprawling suburb west of the city's airport for small planes, lights came on in comfortable brick homes as the sun began to drop over the horizon. The chill of the Australian winter evening began to seep in, and heaters were switched on.

It was 6:45 p.m. July 10, 1978. In the Gulle home at 55 Matthews Ave., Pauline Gulle, 30, sat with her family in the living room watching the news on the color television set.

The children's father, Sam Gulle, 34, was away.

The family had just sold their house after years of running a successful small grocery in the friendly little neighborhood. They were buying a neat little farm at Meredith, about 50 miles away, and Gulle was there getting things ready for the move in three weeks.

Across the back fence of the Gulle home there was a similar peaceful family scene. Joe Corso, his son and his daughter were sitting around the kitchen table after dinner. Mrs. Corso was washing the dishes.

On the Tullamarine Freeway linking Melbourne's international airport with the city, taxi driver John Tyrell was driving toward the airport with two passengers.

Aboard the red-and-white Italian Partenavia were Alan Clement Baskett, 40, Geoffery Walker, 33, and Uwe Meinhardt, 36. They were practicing takeoffs and landings.

At 6:50 p.m., the plane rolled down the runway again, picking up speed as it headed for disaster. It quickly gained altitude, and taxi driver Tyrell glanced casually at it passing 180 feet above him.

The whine of the motors changed, and the nose of the plane dipped. Tyrell screamed frantically over his two-way radio that there was going to be a crash.

The plane tore through telephone lines and crashed into the roof of the Gulle home, killing all six occupants instantly as burning gasoline poured through the house. The plane kept going through the back yard, ripped through a small bungalow and a garage and slammed into the rear of the Corso house, finally stopping in the kitchen.

As fire erupted around them, Corso grabbed his son, daughter and wife and rushed them from the their home. They got minor injuries.

Meinhardt and Baskett, trapped in the wreckage of the plane, were cut loose 45 minutes later. Meinhardt survived a critical head injury. Baskett had minor injuries.

Walker was thrown clear of the wreck, also with minor injuries.

"I never thought anything like this could happen," he said the next day. "Four children and my wife are gone. You plan everything and then ... I think life has been very cruel."

An investigation is under way, but the cause of the crash has not been determined. All that is known is that something went wrong with one or both engines.

Automakers Maintain High Sales

Sales jumped 8.9 percent from early July last year, the companies reported Thursday. General Motors Corp. set its own record for the period as the industry continued its sales resurgence.

Executives looked for sales to stabilize as the automakers entered the second half of 1978. The first six months saw winter sales doldrums and then a dramatic recovery starting in early sring.

"We expect the second half to be considerably more stable, with sales continuing somewhat ahead of the 1977 pace," said Gordon B. MacKenzie, Ford Motor Co. sales vice president.

GM was up 12.3 percent from the year-ago period with sales of 129,575 cars. Ford climbed 7.3 percent to 53,557 cars.

Chrysler Corp. was up less than 1 percent to 23,729 cars and nervously watched a drop in sales of its Dodge Omni and Plymouth Horizon. American Motors Corp. fell 24 percent with sales of 3,103.

AMC blamed its big drop on a major fleet sale to the federal government a year ago, and said actual retail deliveries by dealers were up 5 percent from early July 1977.

The daily sales rate of 29,995 cars was second only to early July in the boom year of 1973.

GM sales were boosted by a Chevrolet dealer sales contest, a repeat of a Chevy contest in the same period last year. A Ford analyst, who asked to remain anonymous, said mid-July sales probably would be less bullish as a result.

The daily sales rate of the twin-model Horizon and Omni fell off sharply from late June to an even 500 cars, the lowest since the new models started reaching dealers in large numbers this spring.

Analysts said that partly reflected attacks on the twin small cars' handling and safety by Consumer Reports magazine. But, they added, the entire industry was off sharply compared to late June.

The Omni-Horizon daily rate dropped 36 percent compared to an industry drop of 24 percent. Late-month sales are traditionally higher than early-month figures.

The U.S. government announced July 7 that it found no safety problems with the Omni and Horizon, but Chrysler officials said that was probably too late to offset negative publicity for the early July period.

The front-wheel-drive small cars were virtually sold out before the June 15 criticism by Consumer Reports. Thus any drop in sales would require that buyers cancel their orders.

Chrysler spokesman Tony Weiss said there had been no "significant" numbers of cancellations, and noted the drop in Omni-Horizon sales coincided with a recent falloff in sales of small cars generally.

Vance Accomplishes Goals At Arms Talks

By BARRY SCHWEID

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance knew there was no way of wrapping up a strategic arms control treaty in his two days of talks here with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko.

Analysis

The issues were too complex, the differences too great.

On top of that, relations between the two superpowers have taken a nose dive over Soviet activities in Africa and the trials of prominent dissidents.

But Vance did want to accomplish two things:

1. To make it clear to the Russians that the United States reserves the option to dig thousands of new silos to move its Minutemen missiles around to hide them from surprise attack;

2. To hand over new U.S. proposals for limiting the development of Russian missiles during the five-year life of the prospective treaty.

Vance did both and in return was given undisclosed "new ideas" by the Russians to ponder before his next meeting with Gromkyo in the fall.

Since the American expectations were limited, the negotiations cannot fairly be called a setback. Vance, in fact, achieved his goals.

And yet the negotiations are being drawn out still further. Hopes for a treaty by the end of the year are approaching the vanishing point.

Two principal roadblocks remain: how to settle the squabble over new missiles, and what to do about the Soviet Backfire bomber.

The Carter administration is trying to limit the growth of new Russian missiles but also to leave the door open to development of a brand new American mobile misile, the MX, in the early 1980s.

As for the Backfire, the United States wants production and deployment restricted. The Russians, contending the plane is not a long-range delivery vehicle, are resisting.

The negotiators were trying to keep their heads above a rising tide of superpower discord. While Soviet activities in Africa receded as a divisive issue, the trials of dissidents were a major distraction, with an enormous emotional wallop.

They "aggravated the climate," as Vance said, and kept U.S. differences with the Soviets up front and out in public for all the world to see.

"This is a question which is within the internal competence of the Soviet Union," he told a reporter. "I have no intention of discussing it with anyone, even with you."

Even if Carter and Vance had not chosen to make an issue of the dissidents, there was no way of escaping the repercussions.

Senators whose votes will be needed for ratification of the arms treaty are beating the Russians over the head with human rights.

Demonstration Charges Dropped

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The district attorney's office, admitting the city jail can't accomodate wheelchairs, will drop all charges against 39 handicapped persons who stalled commuter traffic to protest inaccessible buses.

Daniel Weinstein, chief assistant district attorney, said the decision to drop the charges was made "in the interests of justice." But he said keeping the wheelchair-bound protestors in custody would have been "an enormous problem."

Most of those arrested Wednesday were cited for refusing a command to leave state property and were released into their own custody. But Weinstein said it was decided Thursday to drop all the charges.

The 39 arrested were among some 100 persons, most of them handicapped, who lined up their wheelchairs to block buses at a terminal leading across the San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge. Some 15,000 homebound commuters had to catch cabs, hitchhike, or wait from one to four hours to get a ride home.

'Anchor Bible' Cuts Barriers

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP) — Gradually, one by one, the volumes roll out. 30 of them so far, with 30 more to go, in one of the longest, most comprehensive publishing ventures on the Bible ever undertaken.

The library-sized volume, called "The Anchor Bible," blazed an ecumenical trail at its outset 22 years ago that since has become a common pattern.

It enlisted Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish experts in their shared craft and objective: to bring out just what the old Biblical books sought to say when first recorded in their original settings.

"That commonality of Biblical scholarship preceded the ecumenical movement," observes the Rev. Dr. David Noel Freedman, professor of Biblical Studies at the University of Michigan and general editor for the series.

When the project first originated in 1956, under the former general editorship of the late archeologist-Scripture scholar William F. Albright, that interreligious involvement had seemed impossible.

"But he saw it work with his own eyes," says Freedman, an associate of Albright, who died in 1971 with Freedman taking over the editorship. "It was revolutionary when it began. But now it's true of all Biblical scholarship. It's become a common enterprise."

Marking 750,000 in sales of the series so far, the publisher, Sam Vaughan of Doubleday & Co. gave a luncheon for Freedman last week, with the final lap of the long endeavor beginning to come in sight, expected by the late 1980s, three decades after its inception.

In count of volumes, "we are now just passing the halfway mark," said editor Eve F. Roshevsky, who has the task of nudging along the output from the international, interfaith team of authors.

Each, in the project's approach, takes on a Biblical book of his particular interest, translates it freshly from the original language and, in a volume or more devoted to it, offers accompanying commentary and notes putting it in context of its historical situation, its culture, linguistic nuances, authorship and purposes.

Unlike most of the modern surge of Bible translations produced by groups of scholars, the Anchor specialists individually render their translations of the books. "The results are uneven like the Bible itself," Freedman said. "The books originally were produced by different writers."

In regard to the supplementary information and detailed exegesis, the work is somewhat akin to the 12-volume Interpreter's Bible published by Abingdon. However, the Anchor series is more voluminous.

The material draws on recent archeological finds such as the Dead Sea Scrolls, and lately on the newly turned up Ugaritic tablets of ancient Ebla, predating the Bible, but mentioning matters cited in it.

The tablets are "the most important find ever made" in relation to the Bible, Freedman said. "They provide hard information that we've never had before in a way that cannot be challenged."

Freedman cited the tablets' mention of Biblical cities whose existence often has been questioned because no previous reference to them ever had been found outside the Bible.

"Now we have absolute incontrovertible evidence they existed," he said. "Behind those Biblical stories of eras before the first books of the Bible ever were written down are solid historical facts."

He said past assessments of the Bible have been "far too critical and skeptical. We've been chastened." He said he detected a conservative shift in scholarly analysis of the Bible supporting its reliability "in terms of its historical roots."

As a sign of that shift, Alex Leipa, Doubleday's general editor of religious books, said the Anchor series recently has sold more heavily through conservative evangelical outlets than in liberal circles.

As to why, Vaughan suggested it may simply reflect a "healthy, zestful engagement with religion."

GOSPEL GROUP — The Hope of Glory, a popular gospel singing group from Texas, will appear at Trinity Church at 5 p.m. Sunday. Members of the group include Bubba Chambers, Rick Thigpen, Gary Ingram, Melvin Mar as lead guitarist and Tim Wade II.

RELIGION ROUNDUP

Lutheran Sex Report

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A report of an eight-year "action research" project by an agency of the American Lutheran Church says the family is not necessarily the best teacher about sex.

"We can no longer assume that the family is necessarily equipped to share information about sexuality and facilitate development of sexually healthful human beings," the report says.

It was drawn up by the church's Service and Mission division on the basis of a study program on sexuality at the University of Minnesota's Medical School, involving 8,000 students and professionals such as doctors, clergy, social workers and counselors.

"The issue of human sexuality is critical to the life and health of the church and the planet on which we live," the report says. "The project brings the important issue of human sexuality to a place of stature and prominence on the agenda of the American Lutheran Church."

Mid-Life Pressures

NEW YORK (AP) — A report of a study by the American Jewish Committee finds that women in mid-life are under greater pressure than at any other period of their lives. The report states:

"Dissatisfied with their own opportunities for individual achievement, yet tied down by obligations to parents and children, these women are the candidates for anxiety and depression."

Merrell Award Given

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 1978 Jim Merrell Religious Liberty Memorial for the best newspaper writings advancing the cause of religious freedom has been awarded to Laurence Cohen, editorial writer for the Hartford (Conn.) Courant.

The award, set up by Jesse H. Merrell, a writer and public relations consultant, in memory of his father, includes a plaque and $1,000.

SBC Ordains Woman

WAKE FOREST, N.C. (AP) — An ordained Southern Baptist woman, the Rev. Suzanne Martin Davis, is among new faculty members added to the Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary. She is one of only about a score of women who have been ordained in the 13 million-member denomination.

Priests Get Raise

YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO (AP) — Roman Catholic Bishop James W. Malone has approved recommendations of the diocesan Senate of Priests for a temporary salary increase to all diocesan priests, raising the base monthly salary of pastors from $325 to $425 and for associate pastors from $275 to $375. He also asked a further study of priests' income.

Women's Leader Chosen

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Betty A. Mohney of the small, prairie town of Pratt, Kan., who calls herself "grass rootsy", is the new president of the International Christian Women's Fellowship, the women's organization of the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ).

She was elected head of the group which provides 20 percent of the denomination's funds for worldwide operations.

Area Foursome Receive Seminary Degrees

Harold Dean Abney, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Abney of Ropesville, received the master of divinity degree.

Gary Dean Koerner, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Koerner of 1314 47th St., was awarded the master of church music degree.

Bradley Ward Layton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Layton of 3103 79th St., received the master of divinity degree.

Phillip Wayne Williford, son of M. A. Williford Sr. of 3306 30th St., was awarded the master of religious education degree.

Coed Works As Missionary

Kynna Lynnette Gilmore of 3308 77th St. is serving this year as a summer missionary under the Southern Baptist Home Mission Board.

Gilmore, a Texas Tech University student, is working in California for 10 weeks this summer.

Student summer missionaries are college students who give 10 weeks to mission work across the United States, Puerto Rico and American Samoa.

Lubbock Physician To Attend Texas Faith, Order Meeting

Dr. Norma E. Porres, a Lubbock physician in family practice, has been named as a participant in the 14th annual Texas Faith and Order Conference to be conducted Nov. 9-11 at Presbyterian Mo-Ranch near Hunt.

The announcement was made by Mrs. Eloise McDougal of Hereford, chairperson of the planning committee for the Texas Conference of Churches.

Dr. Porres and Dr. Charles O. Galvin, dean of the School of Law at Southern Methodist University in Dallas, will lead special consultations on medical and legal aspects of "the beginnings of life" during the conference.

Topic of the conference is "To Be Or Not To Be: Deciding About the Beginnings Of Life," and participants will discuss how different Christian ethical systems handle such issues as family planning, abortion and cloning.

Dr. Porres, a United Methodist, is a leader in the Planned Parenthood Federation of America, and Dr. Galvin, a Roman Catholic, is a member of the Medical-Morals Committee of Dallas' St. Paul Hospital.

Their workshop-type sessions will complement three major theological presentations by the Rev. Dr. Kenneth L. Vaux, professor and chairman of theology and ethics in the Baylor College of Medicine/Institute of Religion Joint Program in Medical Ethics at the Texas Medical Center in Houston. He will assume a new post at the University of Illinois Medical School in September.

A brochure on the Faith and Order Conference is available from the Texas Conference of Churches, 2704 Rio Grande No. 9, Austin, Texas, 78705.

Lockney Church To Hold Dedication Ceremonies

A-J Correspondent

LOCKNEY -Lockney's First United Methodist Church will hold formal dedication services of its fellowship hall Sunday, following the 11 a.m. worship service.

Bishop Alsie H. Carleton of Albuquerque, N.M., will preach the 11 a.m. worship service sermon and is to dedicate the fellowship hall at the end of the service.

He is to be joined in the dedication ceremony by the Rev. Hugh B. Daniel of Quanah; the Rev. Dewitt Seago, the present pastor; and other United Methodist Church officials.

The Rev. Daniel was pastor of the Lockney church until June. Coincidentally, his father, the late Rev. Newton Daniel, was pastor of the Lockney church when the sanctuary was built.

The local church has been using the new fellowship hall facilities, which includes a kitchen and a bride's room, since December, 1976. United Methodist congregations do not dedicate buildings until all debt is removed.

Bishop Carleton is a native of Floydada and is the resident bishop of the Northwest Texas and New Mexico conferences.

A luncheon is to be held in the fellowship hall following the worship and dedication service.

Anton Baptists Slate Activities

A-J Correspondent

The Rev. Darvey D. Lavender of Lubbock and a former pastor of the church will give the anniversary sermon in the 11 a.m. worship service Sunday.

Ken Bennett of Clayton, N.M., an evangelistic singer and son of the church's original pastor, the late Harvey D. Bennett, will participate in an afternoon service.

A noon luncheon will be served Sunday with the church furnishing meat for the meal.

Former pastors will be recognized during the services.

Mrs. Lawrence Anderson, a charter member, will read a history of the church in services at 3:30 p.m.

Polk Preaching In Lockney

A-J Correspondent

LOCKNEY -Ted Polk of Dallas is preaching during the 10:30 a.m. church service Sunday at the West College and Third Street Church of Christ in Lockney.

An area-wide singing will be held in the church at 2:30 p.m. Sunday.

Polk, vocal music instructor at a Carrollton high school, is holding a singing school at the Lockney Church. Sessions will continue this week, beginning daily at 10:30 a.m., followed by lunch, then again at 1 p.m. and 8 p.m.

The school's final session is July 22, which will be a special occasion for the students participating.

Egyptian Newspaper Restarts Publication

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — The leftist weekly Al Ahali is publishing again after a month's silence in protest against President Anwar Sadat's crackdown on his opponents.

The issue published Wednesday reported Sadat soon will take over the post of prime minister to strengthen his control, and police held up distribution of the paper for most of the day. But Attorney General Ahmed Ali Musa overruled them.

St. Luke's Presents Musical

The music ministry of St. Luke's United Methodist Church is to present a children's musical at 7 p.m. Sunday in the church sanctuary.

The musical, directed by Robert M. Wert, is to feature special sound and lighting effects and 32 animal creations. The musical is entitled "What Do You Do On A Rainy Day In An Ark?"

The musical is to be presented by 71 boys and girls. The children have participated in the church's first annual summer music workshop for children and have been meeting each day this past week, preparing for the musical.

Dr. William R. Fleming and the Rev. Elton Wyatt are ministers of the church, which is located at 44th Street and Memphis Avenue.

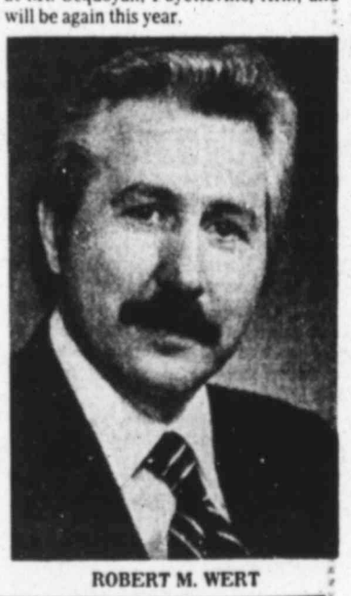

Wert came to St. Luke's United Methodist Church in June from St. Stephen's United Methodist Church at Amarillo. He is a certified lay speaker in the United Methodist Church, a certified director of music and holds the office of diaconal minister in the United Methodist Church.

He is a member and secretary of the Board of Diaconal Ministries of the Northwest Texas Conference of the United Methodist Church. He served as conference song leader at the 1972 and 1974 Northwest Texas Annual Conferences.

In 1974, 1976, and 1977, he was song leader for the Layman's Retreat of the Northwest Texas Conference and also will lead the singing during this year's Layman's Retreat. Wert is guest singer and song leader for revival services throughout the Northwest Texas Conference.

He attended high school in Lynchburg, Va., and is a graduate of Westminster Choir College, Princeton, N.J. He has been director of music at the Hungarian Reform Church of Perth Amboy, N.J.; the First United Methodist Church of Clarksburg, W. Va.; Asbury United Methodist Church in Lubbock; First United Methodist Church at Hereford; and director of music ministries at St. Stephen's United Methodist Church at Amarillo.

In 1977, he was guest soloist and song leader during the Annual Bishops Week at Mt. Sequoyah, Fayetteville, Ark., and will be again this year.

A DAILY MESSAGE FROM

The Newspaper Bible®

Mark 8:27-38, 9:1-3, The Living Bible

27 Jesus and His disciples now left Galilee and went out to the villages of Caesarea Philippi. As they were walking along He asked them, "Who do the people think I am? What are they saying about Me?"

28 "Some of them think You are John the Baptist," the disciples replied, "and others say You are Elijah or some other ancient prophet come back to life again."

29 Then He asked, "Who do you think I am?" Peter replied, "You are the Messiah."

30 But Jesus warned them not to tell anyone!

31 Then He began to tell them about the terrible things He would suffer, and that He would be rejected by the elders and the Chief Priests and the other Jewish leaders--and be killed, and that He would rise again three days afterwards.

32 He talked about it quite frankly with them, so Peter took Him aside and chided Him. "You shouldn't say things like that," he told Jesus.

33 Jesus turned and looked at His disciples and then said to Peter very sternly, "Satan, get behind Me! You are looking at this only from a human point of view and not from God's."

34 Then He called His disciples and the crowds to come over and listen. "If any of you wants to be My follower," He told them, "you must put aside your own pleasures and shoulder your cross, and follow Me closely.

35 If you insist on saving your life, you will lose it. Only those who throw away their lives for My sake and for the sake of the Good News will ever know what it means to really live.

36 And how does a man benefit if he gains the whole world and loses his soul in the process?

37 For is anything worth more than his soul?

38 And anyone who is ashamed of Me and My message in these days of unbelief and sin, I, the Man of Glory, will be ashamed of him when I return in the glory of My Father, with the holy angels."

CHAPTER 9

1 Jesus went on to say to His disciples, "Some of you who are standing here right now will live to see the Kingdom of God arrive in great power!"

2 Six days later Jesus took Peter, James and John to the top of a mountain. No one else was there. Suddenly His face began to shine with glory,

3 And His clothing became dazzling white, far more glorious than any earthly process could ever make it!

Happy Beachhead

If you've ever taken a child to the seashore, you know what that first glimpse of the ocean can mean to a youngster . . . the lure of fascination . . . the foreboding of fear. Which will win the struggle?

But what a delight when hesitation ends and Jeannie finds her happy beachhead down where the waves wane, and the tide seeks its rest.

And if you've ever taken a child to Sunday School, you know what that first glimpse of strange surroundings can mean.

But, even if there are misgivings that first Sunday, Jeannie soon finds her happy beachhead. And one day she'll plunge bravely and confidently into deeper reaches of the vast spiritual ocean that surrounds life.

Anything as vital as religious education deserves an early and earnest beginning.

Educated Have Fewer Attacks

By PATRICK A. MALONE

BOSTON (UPI) — A medical study suggests heart attack survivors with little education have as much as a three times greater risk of a sudden, fatal follow-on heart attack than better educated survivors.

Why education should make such a dramatic difference in recovering from a heart attack is a mystery. But one suggestion from medical researchers is that poorly educated people simply don't have the tools to cope with stressful urban life, and their repeated failures cause anxiety, depression and physical disease.

Both doctors and social critics have known for some time that people with less education and less income die at a markedly younger age and spend more time sick in bed than middle and upper-class people with more schooling.

But specialists say it's been hard to sort out what that means because of what goes with money and education: a more comfortable and presumbably healthier lifestyle.

The new report — from statistics specialists at the Health Insurance Plan of Greater New York — is significant because it shows that education by itself is important in sickness, even in people with the same disease at the same advanced stage.

The study was reported in Thursday's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

The researchers followed for three years a group of 1,739 men who each had had one heart attack. At the end of the period, they tried to sort out why 208 of them had died and why 85 of those deaths had struck without warning in a matter of minutes.

They looked at a list of things that are thought to have something to do with heart disease: age, race, religion, marital status, place of birth, education, work status, occupation, alcohol and coffee drinking, smoking and obesity.

"With one important exception — education — none of these characteristics demonstrated any ability to identify men at relatively high or low risk of death," the report said. "But among men with eight or fewer years of schooling a large disadvantage became apparent."

In the entire group, men with eight or fewer years schooling had more than double the death rate of men with at least a ninth-grade education. And among the sub-group of men who had unhealthy-sounding heartbeats — an indication that their heart disease was even worse than other attack survivors — the poorly educated men had more than triple the death rate.

Eve Weinblatt, head of the study, cautioned that you can't assume from the study that each year of additional schooling makes for better health. In a telephone interview, she said that connection wasn't found, only that whatever reason, the crucial barrier seemed to be between eighth and ninth grades.

"By elimination we have ruled out a great many things, and what is left is an area that we don't have much data on, psychosocial stress, but we're trying to get data on it now," she said.

Dr. C. David Jenkins of the Boston University Medical Center commented on the Weinblatt study and related animal and human studies in an editorial in the same issue of the New England Journal.

He proposed this explanation for the findings: "Persons having very low education are inadequately prepared to deal with the complexities of modern urban society.

"They are less able to solve simply the day-to-day problems that arise, and are less able to use the feedback that they receive to prevent recurrence of difficulties. This drawback tends to force the less educated into subordinate positions in society, where family and work groups are more fragile and social supports less dependable."

DR. LAMB

Determining Calorie Use

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — How much variation is there in two people the same size in terms of the number of calories they can eat and still lose weight? Is there any way to find out what one's personal calorie needs are besides experimenting?

DEAR READER — Two individuals the same size sitting at a desk will use different amounts of calories. Why? Habits have a lot to do with it. One may be moving the legs and the other one may be absolutely quiet. The amount of physical activity in little continuous efforts and in larger ways is extremely important in determining how many calories a person might use in any one day.

Another factor is what percentage of your body is fat. Individuals who have more muscle and less fat tend to use more calories even while they are sitting still than do individuals of the same weight who have a higher percentage of body fat. Fat tissue doesn't use many calories, but muscle cells use considerably more. To show you the difference in how many calories body tissues use: you may be surprised to know that the liver uses about a fourth of all of your calories at rest even though it represents only 2 percent of the normal person's body weight.

The most practical way of finding out how much a person has to restrict his calories in order to lose weight is on an individual basis. If an adult can't lose weight on a reasonable 1200 calories a day diet it's important to look into his life style and see why he isn't using very many calories. Many of these people profit by increasing their level of physical activity.

To give you a sensible 1200 to 1400 calorie diet you can use to build a weight-control program, I am sending you The Health Letter number 4-7, Weight Losing Diet. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y., 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — You have helped my mother with her problems and my grandmother with hers. I hope you can help me with mine. When I was born my feet were turned inward. I had to have several operations which left ugly scars.

Is there something that can remove the scars? Is there some exercise I can do to fatten up the bottom part of my legs?

DEAR READER — Many unsightly scars can be improved by cosmetic surgery. Since you are concerned about it, go to a plastic surgeon and see if something could be done to decrease the obvious appearance of the scars. Sometimes the scars can literally be cut away and the skin brought together with the new fine line scar resulting.

As far as increasing the size of the lower legs, I presume you're referring to the calf area. The best exercises for this are those requiring raising up on your toes. First stand flat-footed on one foot and then raise up on your toes and then let your heels sink back to the floor. This exercises the calf muscle and helps build up its strength.

In a similar fashion you can set and raise the toes up toward the shin bone to exercise the muscles over the front of the skin. If you want to do this under some load to help the muscles grow more rapidly, you might want to go to one of your local health clubs. See it they have some equipment that you can use to help build up the muscles in your legs.

Future In Agribusiness Bright

SAN ANTONIO (UPI) — The president of the 60,000-member Texas Future Farmers of America says he does not want to be a farmer, but that there are many other opportunities open to young people in agribusiness.

"I never realized the business opportunities that are open to young people in farming," said Elvin Caraway, 20, of Spur, as the FFA opened its 50th anniversary state convention. "My research shows that if the trends follow, only about 5 or 6 percent of the people going into farming today will actually be tilling the land tomorrow.

"The emphasis seems to be on agribusiness — marketing, retailing, and public relations."

Ironically, Caraway said he originally did not want to join the FFA in his hometown, located "between Boot Hill and Red Mud" on the South Plains, but it was mandatory at Spur High School.

Now Caraway is a sophomore majoring in agricultural communications at Texas Tech University and said he plans to use that as a springboard into authoring farm journals, doing radio and television farm commentary or public relations work for a large agriculture firm.

"Some people who have never heard of ag journalism may think it's the practice of talking to plants to make them grow," he laughed. "But it's a new field and it's wide open.

"The reason is that scientists and inventors are marketing so many great new products that we are having fewer farmers producing more food. So farming has become a management and economics game."

As president of the state FFA, Caraway has traveled more than 60,000 miles meeting with the state's high school chapters.

He said some urban FFA members do not actually want to go into farming.

"Some of them think of farmers in terms of overalls, boots and dipping snuff. The emphasis in the city seems to be toward horticulture," he said.

Caraway said he did not want to be in an atmosphere of "sandstorms, rattlesnakes and mesquite trees" so he could not be persuaded to be a farmer, but he added he realized he has profited from farmers and has become committed to serve them.

"Commissioner of Agriculture Reagan Brown said it best when he said a lack of communications is the farmer's biggest problem. I think we can bridge that gap between farmers, consumers and the government," Caraway said. "When the farmers went up to Washington to let their goats loose, they were trying to tell us that government support prices were strangling them and reducing their self-sufficiency.

"But because farmers have been so dependent on government subsidies, it will be a gradual process before they can get parity through the free enterprise system and through supply and demand."

Policeman Admits False Wound Tale

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (AP) — Policeman John L. Lee's tale of how he was wounded touched off a widespread search for a motorcyclist and his gun-slinging blonde companion, who Lee said shot him. Now Lee admits his story was a fantasy.

The 32-year-old North Pole policeman said Wednesday he fabricated the story to cover up the fact he shot himself in the upper left arm accidentally. His boss, Chief Phil Ensley, said Lee would be dismissed upon completion of a state police investigation. It was unclear how Lee wounded himself, Ensley said.

Dean's Autograph Sells For $1,000

NEW YORK (UPI) — If you collected autographs in the 1950s, go through your book and see if have one from movie heartthrob James Dean. It could be worth money.

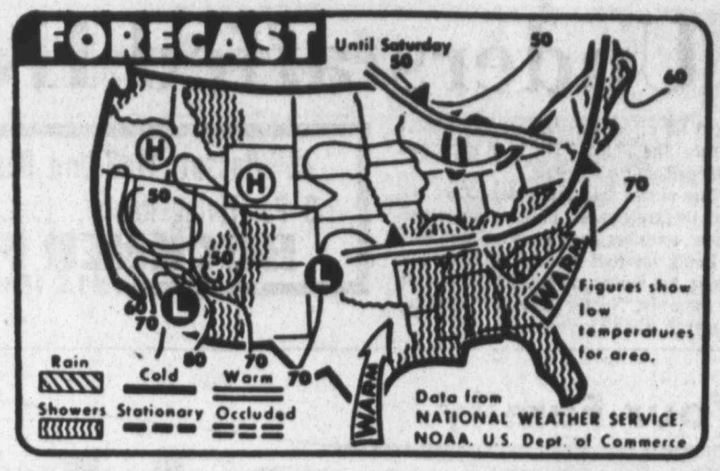

A Dean signature from one such autograph book sold at auction Thursday night for $1,000 — more than twice the price fetched for a signature by Abraham Lincoln.

Charles Hamilton of Charles Hamilton Galleries, which auctioned the signature at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, said it was the first he had ever seen by Dean.

Dean, star of such films as "Rebel Without a Cause" and "East of Eden," died in an auto wreck in 1955.

It was sold to a private collector.

WEATHER FORECAST — Showers were forecast today for the Southeast, the upper Mississippi and Ohio and extending into the Northeast coastal areas. Showers also were expected in the Southwest and northern Rockies. Warm weather was forecast for most areas. (AP Laserphoto)

'Impact Fee' Levied By California Town

By TERESA CHUH

PETALUMA, Calif. (AP) — The rural town that battled developers to the U.S. Supreme Court to win the right to limit its growth has dealt developers another blow — it will charge them a fee to pay for the public services that will be needed for new homes.

The city of 32,000 people got national attention earlier in the decade when it instituted a plan limiting development to 500 new dwelling units a year in an area 35 miles north of San Francisco favored by commuters.

The case went to the Supreme Court, which in 1976 rejected the developers argument that the rule imposed unconstitutional restrictions on people's right to travel and live where they please.

Now, faced with the 1 percent property-tax limitation imposed by California's Proposition 13, the City Council fears the cost of providing services for new residents will exceed the tax revenue generated by new homes.

It has passed an ordinance, described as "revolutionary" by Director of Community Development Frank Gray, to pass the costs of major municipal improvements — such as streets and police and fire stations — to builders.

Gray said this "impact fee" ordinance will boost development costs at the rate of $3,000 an acre or $700 a unit, whichever is less. Developers will have to pay the fees to qualify for a building permit, he said, but the cost likely will be passed on to home-buyers.

The council also is scheduled to consider a second measure on Monday that would require builders to submit analyses proving that revenue generated by new homes would cover the cost of needed public services.

Mayor Helen Putnam said the measures are designed to "create a sense of fiscal responsibility in the developers."

"We want to make sure that we get from them what they say we're going to get," she said. "Under the ordinance, permits just won't be issued if new housing will be any financial burden to the city."

Gray denied the proposed ordinances would stop growth altogether, but said, "Even if we use the most favorable formulas, it looks like most new development will not be able to break even."

The Construction Industry Association of Sonoma County, which brought the original suits against Petaluma's growth control plan, says the city's fears about taxes are unfounded.

"The formulas used by the city are wrong," said Larry Smith, executive director of the association. "The data necessary to draw those conclusions is simply not available."

But Smith sees no revival of the battle between city and developers. "We've already wasted too much time fighting," he said.

Misinformed Police Save 'Ill' Woman

MIAMI (AP) — The police thought they were saving her life. Her doctor thought the officers were overreacting. And Marie Churchwell thought the whole world had gone bananas.

It all took place Thursday after a lab report indicated Miss Churchwell, 21, had a dangerously high level of potassium in her blood, but an electrocardiogram indicated the blood test was wrong. Miss Churchwell, a kidney patient, had had the tests taken the day before at Mt. Sinai Hospital.

Her physician, Dr. D. B. Hoffman Jr., was concerned only that the woman be retested, but he couldn't find her because she was in the process of moving. So he called the police, explained the problem and asked them to help.

That's where confusion ran its course. The message was relayed through police bureaucracy and worsened as it passed along. By Thursday's day shift, police were convinced the woman had only two hours to live and dispatched a helicopter to her home, landing in the back yard.

"From the way they were acting, I knew they were trying not to tell me something," said Miss Churchwell recalling how the officers delicately avoided explaining their urgency in getting her to the hospital.

When Metro police called Hoffman to say she was being taken to the hospital via helicopter, the mystified doctor replied, "She should be coming on a bus."

Miss Churchwell admitted she was a bit worried when it happened.

"I had no idea what was going on, but I enjoyed the ride," she said, laughing as she left the hospital. "It was fun, my first time in a helicopter."

Zale Reports Share Hike

ATLANTA (AP) — The Dallas-based Zale Corp. has declared a regular quarterly dividend of 25 cents per share of common stock payable Oct. 31 to shareholders of record Sept. 22.

The previous quarterly dividend was 23 cents.

During its annual meeting Thursday, the company told stockholders that sales in the first quarter of the 1979 fiscal year were $185.5 million and that earnings for the period could be 90 to 100 percent greater than in the same period in fiscal 1978.

The speciality retailing firm has about 1,680 retail outlets in 49 states, Guam, Puerto Rico, Canada and the United Kingdom.

Donald Zale, president of the firm, said anticipated earnings were about $8 million or more than 59 cents per share for the first quarter of the current fiscal year.

That compares with earnings of $4.2 million or 31 cents per share in the first quarter of fiscal 1978, he said.

Zale said consumer demand for diamond merchandise remained strong and increases in diamond prices over the past 18 months have been absorbed by the marketplace.

Gravel Plans Tactics In Parks Bill Fight

By JAY PERKINS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Armed with a two-volume biography of former President Gerald R. Ford, Sen. Mike Gravel promised today to continue tying up the Senate with "guerrilla tactics" in an effort to prevent a bill that he opposes from getting through committee.

The Alaska Democrat halted the Senate for nearly four hours Thursday night before tossing in the towel when Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., used a parliamentary tactic to deny him the goal he sought.

Gravel said today he would continue his battle against a bill that would turn a Texas-sized chunk of Alaska into federal parks, wildlife refuges and wilderness areas.

One phase of the battle, he said, could be offering the Ford biography as an amendment to legislation. He also said he would use time-consuming quorum calls and other delaying tactics on a selective basis.

Reading of the Ford "amendment" by the clerk of the Senate could take up at least a day.

"Every day I pick up in July is one day I don't have to fight in September," Gravel said of his tactics.

He told reporters he would not try to tie up the Senate every day but would pick and choose his battlegrounds as a guerrilla leader would.

Gravel's goal is to prevent the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee from meeting to consider the Alaska lands bill. He hopes to use a Senate rule that says committees cannot meet while the Senate is in session unless the Senate gives unanimous consent.

His bid to do so Thursday night failed when Byrd invoked a seldom-used rule that allows the majority and minority leaders to jointly give committees permission to meet while the Senate is in session even though there is no unanimous consent.

By tying up the Senate, Gravel hopes to delay the bill until Congress adjourns — probably in late September — to prepare for upcoming elections.

"The leadership won't let me slow down the committee. But I can slow down the Senate. Pressure on the Senate is the only device I have to reach the committee," Gravel said Thursday night.

Gravel's filibuster did not come close to his 1971 late-night bombshell, when he called a midnight meeting of a subcommittee he chaired to emotionally read — and thus put on the public record — the still unreleased Pentagon Papers on the Vietnam war, parts of which had appeared in the media.

The Alaska lands bill, which would place more than 120 million acres of land under federal supervision, is a top priority of environmentalists and the Carter administration but is strongly opposed by Gravel and Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska.

The bill would prohibit oil and mineral exploration and development on more than half of the 120 million acres. And since parcels of the projected wilderness are scattered across the state, Gravel contended that development of state-owned land would be adversely affected because of problems in getting to some sections.

He also contended that passage of the legislation was a means of appeasing environmentalists.

"This is an issue you can give to the environmentalists," he said. "It's 5,000 miles away. This is how a person gets clean — at our (the state's) expense."

The filibuster ended only after Byrd pointedly noted that Gravel might be doing his cause more harm than good.

"Let me say to the senator, I am very sympathetic to his position — to this point," Byrd said. "I have been very helpful to the senator so far. I would hope the senator would alow me to continue to be helpful.

"I'm saying to the senator he's losing points," Byrd concluded.

ICC Violations Alleged

WASHINGTON (AP) — An official of the Interstate Commerce Commission, fired for alleged official misconduct, says ICC Chairman A. Daniel O'Neal Jr. and several other officials are guilty of "flagrant and clear-cut violations" of agency rules of conduct.

Richard W. Kyle, the ICC's deputy congressional relations officer, is leaving his $40,000-a-year post today. He was notified of the firing Thursday after having been given a warning a month ago.

In an affidavit filed with the ICC three weeks ago, Kyle alleged that O'Neal released a "highly confidential" ICC investigative report to a congressional aide who had wanted it for the head of the now-defunct Railway Express Agency.

Kyle, 51, also accused the ICC chairman of hiring a woman friend of an unnamed congressman in exchange for congressional support for the ICC budget.

Details of Kyle's affidavit were confirmed Thursday night.

Douglas Baldwin, an ICC spokesman, denied Kyle's allegations against O'Neal as "flatly and unequivocally untrue." He said most of the other charges had been found groundless by ICC investigators.

Both the ICC and Kyle refused to disclose details of the misconduct charges against Kyle.

The Washington Post in the past has reported that the charges included allegations that Kyle had accepted "hundreds of dollars" in gifts and entertainment from carriers regulated by the ICC and had subsequently lied to ICC investigators looking into the matter.

The ICC issued a statement on Thursday saying it considered Kyle's firing to be final as of late Friday, but that Kyle could appeal his dismissal to the Civil Service Commission if he wished.

Kyle, who had submitted his resignation June 6 and then withdrew it, said he did not know what, if anything, he would do next.

Texas Journalists Receive Fellowships

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two Texans were among 24 professional journalists announced Thursday as recipients of fellowships to study at Stanford University and the University of Michigan in the 1978-79 academic year.

Gregory G. Graze, 30, staff writer for the Dallas Times Herald, will study at Stanford. John Stark, 28, assistant city editor of the El Paso Times, will study at Michigan.

The fellowships, paying the recipients $15,000 each plus tuition, are funded by the National Endowment for the Humanities, an independent federal agency. The non-degree program for the 24 fellows begins in September.

Patients Endangered By Understaffed Hospitals

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
United Press International Writer

Patients face intolerable dangers in U.S. and Canadian hospitals short of nurses, according to many licensed practical nurses and registered nurses who took part in a probe of working conditions and job satisfaction.

The survey, via a questionnaire in the world's largest professional nursing journal, "NURSING 78," drew nearly 17,000 responses from nurses who work in voluntary as well as municipal and Veterans Administration hospitals.

Twenty-two percent said their hospitals were badly understaffed; 60 percent, somewhat understaffed.

Twenty-three percant cited instances of gravely dangerous conditions for patients — the result of understaffing or of care by incompetents, such as an occasional alcoholic doctor as well as malfunctioning or careless nurses.

"Several times," a pediatric licensed practical nurses from Texas reported, "I had it out with the administration because I refused to give medications ordered by an alcoholic doctor when I knew the dosage was wrong. But nothing was ever done."

In an effort to slow down the hospital cost spiral, nursing staffs have been cut to or kept to the minimum by quite a few hospitals, the survey showed.

Among impossible situations cited by nurses were:

—One RN and one LPN and an aide trying to care for 18 spinal cord patients, 15 quadriplegics and 3 paraplegics.

—One RN and an aide trying to care for 30 to 36 post-op surgical patients.

—One RN and an aide caring for 25 newborns and five premies.

The nurse as sex object came up in a comment. The nurse said she had no trouble during 11 years as a floor nurse — "when you encounter a doctor, the patient's always there."

"But as head nurse, confined to the nurses' station, I found the place (hospital) crawling with pinchers, grabbers and propositioners."

The claims of understaffing to save money and even reports of incompetent doctors came as no surprise to either the American Medical Association or the American Hospital Association, United Press International learned.

Alex McMahon, president of the AHA, whose membership includes 6,400 hospitals, said the survey reflects a national problem — the geographic maldistribution of nurses and the fact that nursing manpower sources vary widely from state to state and within states.

"Also, the growing pressure toward cost containment in health care poses difficulties for hospital administrators trying to justify increased staffing."

Registered nurses and licensed practical nurses make up almost one-fourth of 3 million hospital workers in the United States.

McMahon said the AHA last year started a program for nurse managers in an attempt to help them maintain a balance between the needs of patients and the hospital's financial resources.

Concern over the growing staffing problems has led the AHA to schedule a symposium on the issues in November.

Dr. Asher Finkel, the AMA's vice president for scientific affairs, commented on the charges about alcoholic or otherwise incompetent doctors, "The AMA has been concerned with the problem of the physician who is impaired by dependence on alcohol.

"We share the concern of the nurses in helping these individuals get control of their problem. The AMA has had an active program to assist the impaired physician for a number of years."

Nurses who give direct patient care were the ones most concerned, according to an analysis of the probe questionaires. Citing incompetence that was intolerable one reported:

"When I got back from break, they started telling me the condition of my patient: 'His monitor is going flat, but I haven't paged code (the code cart to resuscitate a patient)'.

"The patient was in asystole (arrested condition). The monitor was picking up the movement of his chest caused by the ventilator. I initiated CPR (cardio pulmonary resuscitation), a code was paged, but after several minutes the patient was pronounced dead. . ."

Lack of nursing-management recognition of nurse understaffing is part of the problem, according to the "NURSING 78" report. Forty percent of the patient serving nurses feel badly understaffed. But only 18 percent of the head nurses or supervisors agree.

The farther away the management nurses are from serving patients the less their recognition of the need for more nurses.

Nurses said, as a result, they feel: afraid for patients and themselves; guilty and ashamed; angry and physically and emotionally drained.

Many nurses feel driven to deliver adequate patient care, even if the system won't let them.

"We have paraplegic patients who just want their teeth brushed but are afraid to ask because they see how busy we are," wrote a Veterans Administration nurse.

Only 27 percent of the nurses responding said they had enough time to give patients proper care. Putting that another way — 73 percent do not have enough time.

"Allowing time for medication, doctor roumds, treatments, charting, report and lunch, there was only 2 minutes per patient for direct nursing care," one nurse wrote. She added, "The head nurse had mapped out my schedule."

The nurses said the understaffing has led to carelessness, fatigue, discouragement, transfers, even nurse resignations.

Being on foot endless hours is one thing, but nurses say the emotional drain is the worst. Nurses feel guilty facing patients they don't have time to serve.

Woman Wins Suit Over Buffalo Crash

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — A jury Wednesday awarded a Kansas woman $1,281 for damages to her car in a collision with a buffalo, but rejected her claim for injuries she said she suffered in the crash.

Leona Kulp, 50, of Dodge City, Kan., sought $304,000 damages from Woods County Commissioner Vernon Hackney of Alva, Okla., contending he was negligent in permitting his buffalo to wander onto a highway at night in November 1976.

The jury decided Mrs. Kulp, who had been hospitalized 24 times since 1968 for back and knee ailments, failed to prove her injuries resulted from the collision.

MOZART RANKS FIRST

THURNAU, West Germany (UPI) — Wolgang Amadeus Mozart's operas "Die Zauberfloete (The Magic Flute)" and "Die Hochzeit Des Figaro (The Marriage of Figaro)" have been the prime features of West German opera companies in the past 30 years, according to Dietrich Steinbeck, a professor of music at West Berlin's Free University.

MINIBATTLESHIP — Bruce Mohs prepares to climb into the 31-foot replica of the battleship U.S.S. Wisconsin, which he built in his basement. He cruises Lake Mendota near Madison, Wis., aiming his ship's 32 tiny non-firing guns at boaters who throw beer cans in the water. He says he will seek Liberian or Panamanian registration for the "ship." (AP Laserphoto)

Model Battleship Patrols Lake

By TIMOTHY HARPER

MADISON, Wis. (AP)— There's a renegade battleship plying the waters of Lake Mendota, but the sailboats, row boats and speed boats have little to fear from its guns. It's only Bruce Mohs but for a lark on his 31-foot-long model of the U.S.S. Wisconsin.

"I'd always liked battleships. It's fun, and you have to have fun in this life," says the 45-year-old restaurateur who put $600 and about 200 man-hours into the half-ton model of the World War II battleship.

Launched last month, the Wisconsin, whose namesake has been in mothballs for 20 years, hasn't ventured from its moorings for too long. Mohs is having trouble getting a licence.

"The state wanted me to put big numbers on the side. That would ruin it," he said.

Federal authorities also rejected his efforts to license the "ship" because it isn't big enough, Mohs says, so he might try for a license from Panama or Liberia.

Mohs has managed to manuever his way about the lake without being caught by police boats so far — his longest trip was four miles.

Mohs considers the vessel a pleasure craft, although it sometimes seems like work as he walks the deck, straightening the 32 non-firing model deck guns.

The boat, a mere 41 inches wide, runs on a 1939 2.5-horsepower motor and is made of steel and aluminum filled with foam for bouyancy.

"My 8-year-old son loves it, of course, and my 13-year-old daughter likes to lie on the foredeck like Cleopatra," he said.

But there are other possible uses for the 1-28th scale model, he said, including aiming his guns at boaters who throw beer cans in the water.

He said he may also put wheels on the boat so it can take part in local parades, and he hopes to use it to spread flower petals at next year's University of Wisconsin lakeside Memorial Day services.

"But what I'd really like to do is put a bigger motor on and go zipping through the local water ski show pulling a skier," he said. "I wouldn't tell them I was coming, either."

Parents To Approve Reading Lists

WOONSOCKET, R.I. (UPI) — Woonsocket Junior and Senior High School students will be bringing home reading lists next fall to make sure their parents approve of the assigned material.

The School Committee drafted the plan Wednesday night in the hope of avoiding another furor like the one last spring over a book using four-letter words and street language.

The book, "A Hero Ain't Nothin' But a Sandwich," By Alice Childress, was used in an eighth-grade English class. Parents of one girl objected to the book because of the street language used.

The book is about a teenager's drug addiction in a black ghetto.

Under the new plan, parents who object to a book may ask that their child be exempted from reading it.

HYDRO-MULCH

THE 21 DAY LAWN

It may sound incredible, but it's a fact. You will be mowing your new lawn three weeks after EVERGREEN Landscape & Maintenance installs it. We accomplish this by utilizing a revolutionary process called HYDRO-MULCHING, whereby seed, water, fertilizer, and a wood fiber mulch are mixed together and sprayed over the ground. This process greatly increases seed germination and assures a quick, uniform, thick stand of grass.

- ★ Hydro-Mulch provides an "Instant Green Carpet" immediately which eliminates all dust and mud problems and allows foot traffic the same day it is installed.
- ★ No seams or shrinkage during hot weather as with sod.
- ★ Requires less watering due to "Instant Green" wood fiber which retains 14 times its weight in moisture. It also inhibits growth of weeds and conditions the soil.
- ★ Reduces lawn costs over sod by 50%.

One-Room Living Gives Challenge To Creativity

By VIVIAN BROWN
Associated Press Writer

One-room living — lots of it altered by structural ploys — has become a whole 'nother thing.

The studio room has become a joy, an oasis of creativity, on the whole providing room for essential things that are not only used, but are attractive enough to display decoratively. It is a do-it-yourselfers' challenge.

Air space is captured, and with a lot of headroom, balconies, bunk beds and the like, charm is injected quickly.

Many books have been written about decorating a one-room living space, but a slim volume, "One-Room Living," by Sue Rowlands has been reissued and gives some lively ideas on how to incorporate mass and space.

For students one-room living may be a transient stop, she points out, but also the one room makes a happy sanctuary for newlyweds, too, where they learn about the costs of living.

The one-room place should be cheap to heat, cheap to clean and require a minimum amount of furniture.

Older homemakers seek this same warmth and convenience. Aged parents who value their independence like the one-room setting.

One-room living, of course, can get chaotically out of hand, points out Rowlands. It can lead to untidiness, lack of privacy and failure to organize space. But an open-plan, all-in-one living space offers versatility, flexibility and freedom of space.

Here are some ideas suggested by Rowlands and shown in color illustrations in the book:

— A totally committed large room has separate living spaces at various levels leading up from the living area by an open staircase.

The photos of that room in the book give the appearance of an outdoor experience with green plants, a girl on a swing that hangs from the rafters and a hammock.

After finding the space, the next step should be to decide how to allot it. And that can go in many directions.

The book suggests beginning with basic necessities. But it really is the time to do the structural planning that is determined by the size of the room.

Plan the materials necessary and estimate their cost before acquiring work plans and beginning the project.

After basic essentials, a good bed and other necessary furniture might be chosen, and the space converted to suit one's needs as a student, day worker, whatever. For example, do you eat out a lot? If so, you might have less use for a well stocked culinary center than the gourmet decorator might have.

Landlords may not like what you plan to do on their property, something that must be settled early. You may need to get permission to put up a shelf or do any structural work at all.

Then one might track down small-scale kitchen equipment that is specifically designed for smaller homes — modular furniture and the like, screens that might be found at junk shops and refurbished to match the decorating scheme, roller blinds or Roman blinds hung from the ceiling to conceal storage.

Moveable units are valuable in a small space. Low cabinets can house all sorts of things, and house-plant greenery does a good job of dividing spaces visually.

As for junk-shop decorating, which is usually ideal in the early stages of decorating a one-room — as the book points out — it may later become a junk-shopping mania.

A shopping hint: This year's bargains seem to be heavy on massive pieces of furniture. But some, like the Victorian wardrobes, may be turned into a variety of useful storage devices. The base drawer section can be made into a separate chest of drawers, the top can remain as a more reasonable wardrobe cupboard. The mirrored door can be used as a wall mirror and the remaining wood used to make shelves and cupboard doors.

NINE LIVES RUN OUT FOR MORRIS — Morris, the cat who was the star over a 10-year period in some 40 television commercials for 9-Lives cat food, is shown in a publicity photo with some of his fan mail. The 17-year-old feline died in Chicago on July 7 and is expected to be succeeded by an understudy. (AP Laserphoto)

Cat Food Firm Begins Search For Morris II

CHICAGO (UPI) — The paw prints of Morris the Cat may be difficult to fill, but the hunt is on for a look-alike replacement.

Morris, the big, orange feline star of television pet food commercials, died of a heart attack last Friday at the age of 17 — equivalent to 90 for humans.

A spokesman for Nine Lives, his employer, said Wednesday Morris was buried on the grounds of the home he shared with his handler, Bob Martwick, who "discovered" him in a Chicago animal shelter in 1966.

Advertising executives for Nine Lives said a look-alike — also to be named Morris — will take over as the firm's standard-bearer.

Morris was 7 years old when Martwick picked him out at an animal shelter and set him in front of a camera. From the beginning it was apparent Morris was not to be just another four-legged walk-on.

In his 10 years of stardom, he appeared in more than 40 commercials and became the epitome of feline aloofness.

Brewery Chief Steps Down

BALTIMORE (AP) — Jerold C. Hoffberger announced Wednesday that he is stepping down as chairman and chief executive officer of Carling National Breweries.

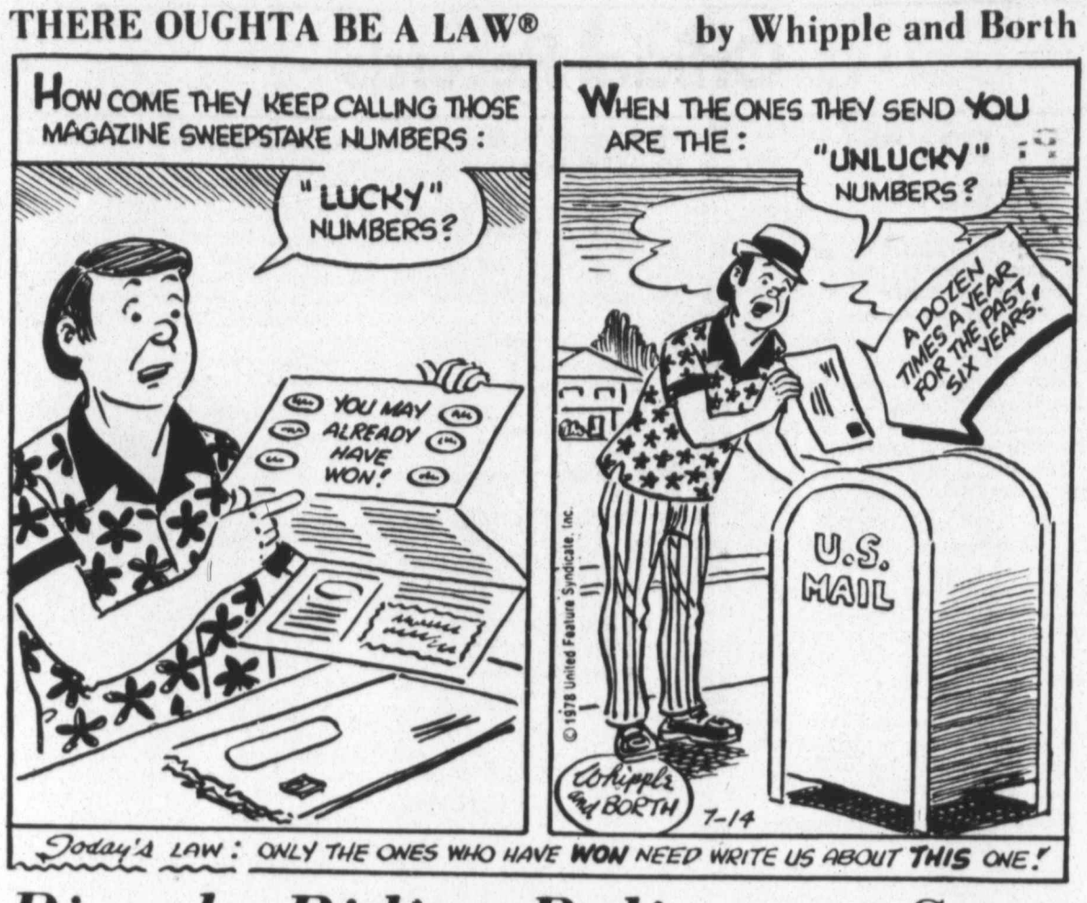

The Baltimore industrialist, whose family founded the National Brewing Co., has spent 30 years as head of National and its successor Carling National.

Hoffberger, 59, said it was time for other leadership within the company, adding that he will continue as a member of the Carling National board, and serve as a consultant to the firm.

The company named Peter Codd, an executive vice president, as chief executive for the company, and Dawson L. Farber, the vice chairman, as acting board chairman.

Hoffberger, whose resignation is effective Saturday, said he will continue as the board chairman for the Baltimore Orioles baseball team, and as chairman of Fairchild Industries' executive committee.

Bicycle-Riding Policemen Save Money, Reduce Crime Rate

By WILLIAM P. COLEMAN

KERMAN, Calif. (UPI) — Policemen Mike Stanford and Tom Gilpin spend half their shifts pedaling around town.

The two officers are riding bicycles as an experiment in saving money — but it also improves law enforcement, Police Chief Jim VanCleaf says.

VanCleaf, who oversees keeping the peace in Kerman, a Fresno County town little more than a square-mile in size, says it puts the officers in closer touch with people.

Stanford, a rookie, and Gilpin, a veteran, spend half their eight-hour shifts Sunday through Thursday pedaling shiny, new 10-speed bikes through Kerman's business, residential and industrial areas.

"While crime prevention is their main goal, the bicycle officers are also out there to provide more personal contact with the citizens," VanCleaf says.

He says he has talked with residents in the past year and many complained about the lack of personal contact with his officers.

"The patrolmen on bicycles provide the personal contact we've been lacking," he says. "They are somewhat like the old beat cop who was known and liked by everyone on his beat."

"These officers will end up meeting most of the city's residents on their bike patrols and that's the name of the game in small town law enforcement," VanCleaf says.

He also hopes the bicycle patrol will cut down on crimes because the officers will be visible and "folks will know they are somewhere around the area."

Both Gipin and Stanford wear full uniform while riding the bikes, carrying report forms and citation books with them. They patrol together on the bicycles and carry two-way hand radios so they are in constant contact with a patrol car.

"They spend a good part of their shift just stopping to chat," VanCleaf says. "On a bike it's difficult not to say 'hi' when you pass someone and its easy to stop for a few minutes to pass the time."

In the two weeks since the bike patrols began, the chief says, progress already is evident.

"They are finding the citizens they have gotten to know so far are more receptive and more willing to report anything suspicious in their neighborhoods."

He said the officers also find themselves on better terms with youngsters.

"They are spending a good amount of time in the parks and drive-in restaurants, talking with the kids," VanCleaf said. "It's not the same as having an officer drive up in a patrol car. On bicycles the officers appear to be meeting the kids on their own level."

Carter-Schmidt Relations Cool

By WELLINGTON LONG

BONN, West Germany (UPI) — Chancellor Helmut Schmidt is determined not to let the obvious coolness between himself and President Carter block progress at the seven-nation economic summit he is hosting in Bonn this weekend.

Eighteen months of working together has brought a degree of informality to Schmidt's relations with Carter.

But those relations remain cool. Everyone has noted that, although Carter has a free Saturday night, Schmidt did not invite him to dinner at his home in Hamburg as he has many other government leaders in the past.

Schmidt and Carter phone each other often — the German chancellor speaks idiomatic English — and exchange a lot of letters.

But their relationship still lacks the warmth and spontaneity of that between Schmidt and French President Valery Giscard D'Estaing.

The relationship between Schmidt and Carter got off to an unfortunate start when the chancellor told an American news magazine before the last U.S. presidential elections that he thought and hoped Gerald Ford would defeat Carter and return to the White House.

As soon as Carter took office, he made several moves that brought him into immediate confrontation with Schmidt.

First, the president tried to halt West German nuclear power plant exports, an action seen in Bonn as favoring American exporters while undermining West Germany's whole economic future.

Second, the Carter administration seemed to the Germans to be deliberately devaluing the dollar at the expense of the German mark, a policy that again struck at the exports so vital to the German economy. West Germany exports 30 percent of its gross national product.

Third, Carter's declamatory human rights campaign seemed to Schmidt to be undermining his own more successful low key negotiations with the Soviet Union, Poland and East Germany to assure more protection for human rights in those countries, including the right to emigrate.

Fourth, the Carter administration tried to put the burden of the decision whether to make the neutron bomb on Schmidt because the weapons, if made, would be stationed with American units in West Germany. Schmidt refused to accept that buck.

Economic problems dominate Carter's Friday talk with Schmidt as they do the summit meetings Sunday and Monday in which France, Britain, Canada, Italy and Japan also are taking part.

In all of his statements leading up to the summit, Schmidt has pushed aside any suggestion that it will be a personal Schmidt-Carter showdown with one or the other to emerge as winner. He insists instead on the interdependence of world economies and of the necessity of each participant making certain moves as part of a package deal.

But the American president must make the first move, Schmidt says. The huge deficit in U.S. trading with the oil-producing countries must be reduced if the dollar is to be stabilized, and only if that happpens can other measures by other countries be effective, Schmidt says.

Furthermore, Schmidt resists suggestions by spokesmen for Carter that West Germany reinflate its economy. Inflation merely creates greater unemployment. He points out that West Germany has both one of the lowest rates of inflation and one of the lowest rates of unemployment in the world.

Schmidt likes to note that he and France's Giscard are the only two chiefs of industrial nation governments who are trained economists. He always has been impatient with anyone he deems less well informed or skilled than himself.

Surpringly in a politician, he is not a gladhander but keeps most persons at arm's length. He chats almost affectionately with Giscard, in English — the one language they have in common — and they call each by their first names.

But though he tries to overcome it, his face tightens just a shade every time Carter calls him "Helmut." Forcing him to reply by calling the U.S. chief executive "Jimmy."

Argentine Labor Force Seeks Unity To Help Regain Power

Analysis

By JOHN REICHERTZ

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — Argentina's onge-powerful labor force is moving to rediscover the unity and strength that it had found previously only under the guidance of one man, former President Juan Peron.

Peron's charisma lingers, despite his death on July 1, 1974, and is playing an important role in the resurgence of labor.

On the fourth anniversary of Peron's death, July 1, 3,000 people gathered outside a church where a mass was held in his memory.

The crowd chanted "Viva Peron," "We Shall Return" and "Neither Yankees nor Marxists — Peronists" as labor leaders emerged from the church after the service.

Police then intervened, bringing an abrupt end to the demonstration with tear gas.

Before its end, however, the mass had brought together a diverse group of labor leaders who over the last 30 days have been increasing their contacts and activity in search of one goal: to bring unity to the labor movement.

Argentine labor unions, once the most powerful in Latin America, have been hog-tied by anti-labor regulations ever since the armed forces ousted President Isabel Peron, Peron's widow, in March 1976.

President Jorge Videla's government stripped labor of a wide variety of contract privileges won during the Peronist era, prohibited strikes and held wages down in its fight against the world's highest inflation rate.

The General Labor Confederation, the 2.9 million-member congress that had been the citadel of Peronism, was given a military director.

Independent unions, at least those not affected by military intervention, have petitioned the government for the restoration of basic rights, wage increases and the release of imprisoned union leaders and Isabel Peron, jailed since the coup.

Without the support of the Peronist labor federation, however, the independent unions represent at the most only 30 percent of the labor force and do not have the necessary backing to speak with authority.

The International Labor Organization met in June at Geneva and the Argentine government went seeking to improve its image abroad.

Representatives of the Commission of 25, a group of the unions that have been forced to accept military directors, represented Argentina's labor sector at the meeting.

The first advance already had been made. Argentine labor was represented abroad by a labor organization that was not under government control and was recognized by the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions.

But at home labor is split into different factions

The Almanac
TODAY IN HISTORY

By United Press International

Today is Friday, July 14, the 195th day of 1978 with 170 to follow.

The moon is between its first quarter and full phase.

The morning star is Jupiter.

The evening stars are Mercury, Mars, Venus and Saturn.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Cancer.

Swedish film director Ingmar Bergman was born July 14, 1918.

On this day in history:

In 1965, American statesman Adlai Stevenson, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations and former governor of Illinois, died of a heart attack in London at the age of 65.

In 1966, eight nurses were found murdered in Chicago. Drifter Richard Speck later was convicted of the slayings and sentenced to death. The U.S. Supreme Court subsequently ruled out the death sentence and Speck remains in prison.

Agency's Personnel Policies Approved

WASHINGTON (AP) — The personnel policies of the Consumer Products Safety Commission have been approved during the past six months, according to the Civil Service Commission.

The commission had been highly critical of the consumer agency last January, saying it was guilty of widespread favoritism and other violations of federal personnel regulations.

But John Cole, an official of the Civil Service Commission, said in a letter Thursday there has been "an attitudinal change" on the part of some managerial personnel in the consumer agency "insuring that promotion actions from now on are in accord with merit principles..."

TIPS FOR GARDENERS

Friends To Help Restore Farm

By EARL ARONSON
Associated Press Writer

There's going to be a "farm-raising" in Frederick County, Md., on Aug. 19, that will rejuvenate a once-beautiful 245-acre tract.

Thousands of friends and strangers will help restore the property of farmer Warren Roelkey. At dawn, hundreds of men, women and children, neighbors, farmers, businessmen, laborers, technicians, homemakers and other volunteers, will swarm onto the hillside property. And about 80,000 well-wishers will cheer them on.

The volunteers will bring tools, tractors, bulldozers and wagons. Convoys of trucks with donated seed, lime, fertilizer, fuel, sod, concrete, pipe and other items will roll up the South Mountain valley on brand new roads.

And "Project Clearwater" will be under way. The volunteers hope that by dusk they will complete five years of soil and water conservation work.

The effort comes under the Clean Water Act, which, Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland says, means help for small farmers such as Roelkey and clean waters for everybody. Under the act, the Soil Conservation Service develops procedures, manages budgeting, provides technical support, gives leadership and approves financial plans for landowners.

Erosion now moves 2,500 tons of soil per year somewhere on the Roelkey farm, and 350 tons leave the farmlands and reach the Potomac. When the crews leave Roelkey's farm, soil movement will be cut by 82 percent, which means only 440 tons will move annually, and only 40 tons will slip into the river.

Agriculture officials say they eventually hope to keep each drop of rain almost as clean when it leaves the farm as it was when it fell.

The Extension Service will show the best ways to grow crops and manage livestock. County Soil Conservation District officials want to show how soil and water conservation is vital to the fertility of the land and purity of the water.

Dozens of teams with specific jobs are organizing just as an army does. They will:

Help remodel a weary stone house, landscape the yard, build a fence, give the barn a new look, fix up a smokehouse and springhouse and build a new hog building away from a stream.

They'll build new fencing to halt destructive grazing in 85 acres of woodland, chop down low quality trees, plant seedlings for future timber, insure a clean watershed and raise the quality of life for birds and wild animals.

Henceforth, plows will not rip soil vertically, permitting rain and melting snow to plunge downward. Croplands will be contoured horizontally, trapping water in furrows. Grassed ditches will protect 83 acres of croplands from erosion. Waterways will guide rain to plants, animals and man for clean and safe water. Lime will be added for the first time in 12 years, and many acres will be fertilized and seeded.

Bulldozers will push down an old silo to make way for a new concrete-lined, leakproof structure. An animal drinking trough will be built and food planted for wildlife.

This won't be the first farm-raising in the area. Thirty years ago, 500 volunteer workers and 40,000 spectators trooped onto Widow Thrasher's farm eight miles away and did five years' work in one day. They contoured the land, removed erosion scars and the Widow Thrasher took over. The farm literally glows today.

Warren Roelkey, who has lacked the resources for the tough task of rebuilding the farm, asked for help and is getting it.

Hanging Plants Popular

Expanding interest in hanging variety plants has brought many handsome, decorative and ingenious hangers.

For instance, one company (Stanley Hardware) has more than 50 items. One is Hang-A-Plant, which converts up to eight-inch diameter pots into decorative plant hangers in a kit that has four eight-inch lengths of decorative chain, "C" hook connector and metal saddle. Another sets a greenhouse atmosphere with an adjustable plant hanging system that allows variation in decorating. Four swivel hooks slide to desired position on a ceiling mounted track for rotation of plants toward the light.

And there are decorative ceiling hooks, rotating ceiling hooks, plant swivel attachments, decorative chain kit and chain extenders, hooks for use on drapery rods, rain gutters, and a plant shelving system.

Malathion Kills Bugs

To get rid of mealybugs on your cactus (or other) plants, spray with Malathion. It does not harm most house plants and is safe. Use two teaspoons of 57 percent concentrate in a gallon of water. However, don't spray on African violets or ferns.

Peonies Need Dividing

If your peonies haven't been divided for a dozen years or so, do it in August and replant them. Perhaps their flowering has been reduced by crowding or shading by other plants. However, peonies less than three years old should not be dug up because flowering will be slowed.

When you dig, don't break off roots, especially taproots. Divide the tuber so that each section has three to five eyes and a taproot. Tubers showing signs of disease should be destroyed. Replant the divided plants in fertile, well-drained sunny areas.

Book Recommended

Cacti and Succulents, by Clive Innes, (Van Nostrand Reinhold, N.Y.C.) is a handsome volume with color and black and white photos to interest the increasing number of cacti and succulent growers. Innes has put 40 years of experience into his book, which deals with cultivation and practical advice for growing cacti indoors, in the greenhouse and in the garden. One section has a comprehensive alphabetical summary of all the known genera of cacti and succulents.

Second Big Solar Flare Predicted

BOULDER, Colo. (UPI) — A government scientist says a solar flare which sent off record-breaking surges of ultraviolet radiation this week probably will be followed by another major flare causing power and communications problems in northern states from Seattle to New England.

Gary Heckman, Chief of the Space Environmental Services Center at the National Oceanic Atmospheric Administration, said Wednesday that Tuesday's huge solar flare and a second flare expected within 10 days would affect the government's orbiting Skylab.

"The flare will definitely slow down Skylab," he said. "We can't say what its exact impact will be, but the flare will slow it down."

Heckman said Tuesday's flare, the largest ever seen on X-ray, blacked out high frequency radio communication in the North Atlantic and European sections.

"It principally affected ship to shore communication and some aviation communication," he said.

Heckman said a magnetic storm from the flare was expected within 72 hours but it was not expected to cause serious power distribution problems because it was "too far from the east on the sun."

Heckman, however, said scientists were 70 percent certain a second major flare would occur within the next 10 days and would cause possibly serious communication and power systems disruptions.

"People operating communications, power and satellite systems will be aware of the flare," he said. "Those on the streets probably won't know what's going on."

Heckman said power companies in Newfoundland would be crippled by the anticipated flare as well as electrical firms in the Northeastern United States, if the flare occurs within the next 10 days.

Entrepreneurs Disliked By Big Business

By LEROY POPE

NEW YORK (UPI)— Several business leaders recently have bewailed the fact the typical bigger American corporation appears to have little use for the true entrepreneur.

The fellow who is in a hurry to be creative in business simply doesn't fit into a hierarchy, it was argued.

But there seem to be plenty of opportunities going begging for the services of would-be entrepreneurs who are willing to desert the big companies and strike out on their own in an innovative way.

Two workshops for would-be entrepreneurs will be held on the weekends of July 21-23 and Aug. 4-6 in Lexington, Ky., by a company called Kentucky Highlands Investment Corp. that has been responsible for the creation of a dozen substantial businesses in the part of Appalachia around London, Ky.

Then there is William McCrea, who runs the Entrepreneurship Institute based at Worthington, Ohio. McCrea, an MIT alumnus, has been conducting seminars in major cities across the country for the past dozen years on how to go about setting up your own business. n

McCrea says an army of would-be entrepreneurs is made up of men and women between 35 and 45, probably now working for big companies and dissatisfied at it although earning $30,000 a year or more. They are well educated and have imaginative bees buzzing in their heads which may develop into growing businesses employing 50 or more persons in the next five years.

McCrea's institute is a nonprofit organization sponsored by a group of midwestern corporations, including Ford and General Motors. Those who attend the seminars are charged a fee of $295. Many of those who have attended have gone on to set up new businesses.

Kentucky Highlands Investment Corp., on the other hand, is financed mainly by the federal government's Office of Economic Opportunity. It hunts for entrepreneurs who can create jobs in Appalachia.

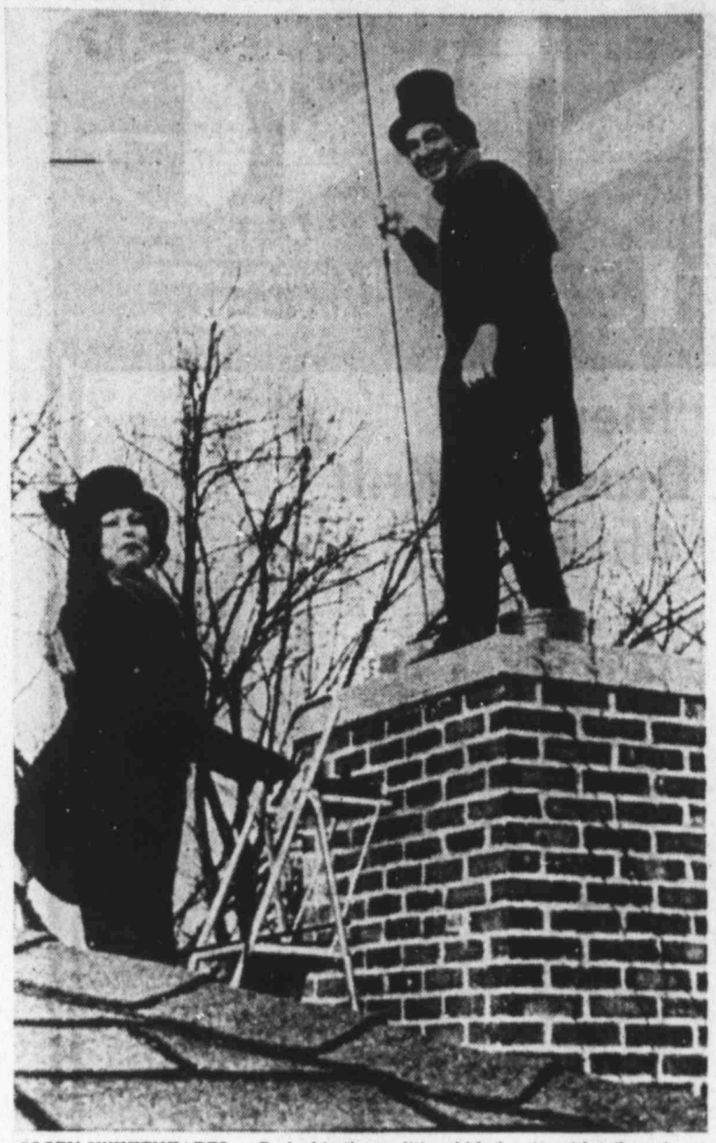

Among ventures set up by business men recruited by KHIC are Outdoor Venture Corp., a tentmaker employing 125 Possum Trot Corp., a maker of stuffed toys with 115 workers, Phoenix Products, which quickly became the country's biggest maker of kayak canoes, Kirby Steel, maker of truck bodies, Americun Bag Corp., which turns out sleeping bags, also a trophy manufacturer, a hog fattening firm, a designer and producer of decorative pillows and a retail produce store.

KHIC president Thomas F. Miller said the company has interviewed almost 300 men und women in order to select the 30 most promising would-be entrepreneurs who actually will attend the two-week-end seminars this summer. Each will present his or her business idea and it will be analyzed by those present.

KHIC will make investments of from $50,000 to $500,000 in the projects finally chosen.

Robert Schwartz, who operates a seminar resort at Tarrytown, N. Y., also conducts a school for entrepreneurs. He makes the point that a successful entrepreneur must be the kind of man who sets his own goals and is unafraid of posturing officialdom.

Bridgeford Hunt, a New York executive recruiter, says the reluctance of big business to make use of the services of entrepreneurs and the play-it-safe policy that results makes it dangerous to trust the nation's future to big business.

SOOTY SWEETHEARTS — Garbed in the traditional black suits with tails, red mufflers and top hats, Dee Miller, left, 40, and David Stoll, 49, prepare to clean a chimney in Roselle, Ill., a suburb northwest of Chicago. After four years of work as chimney sweeps, the couple plan to marry atop Chicago's Sears Tower. (AP Laserphoto)

All at once here come a Gal we couldn't resist. ("Bettye Turner"). She ain't kin to me, except she is a working motor scooter. Interested in people, Good Looking, 'cept she ain't bald & fat. She loves people. She has 3 daughters, is a Grandma, has 2 or 3 degrees, is a teacher & learner and has some real estate experience (which is noteworthy).
Says she ain't but 38 years old, but I figure she is at least mature & smart as a whoop. (40 some odd).
She is a Christian person with a wealth of knowledge about people & this here is our business. She can serve you & charm you & you will enjoy buying a home from this fine lady! We present for your edification pleasure Bettye Turner! (We are proud she is a part of our stoar.)

'GALLERY SPOTLIGHT
BEST SELLER
Lovely three bedroom, two bath home located in Melonie Gardens. Features den plus gameroom, circular drive, intercom and luxurious master bath. And the price is pleasant reading, too!

'GALLERY SPOTLIGHT'
*ZYMURGY HOMES
*Why do we call Flagg Homes "zymurgy"? Because zymurgy is the last word in the English language and Flagg is the last word in homes. You'll never want to see any other home again. Marketed by Landmark, Realtors — the last word in Real Estate.

'GALLERY SPOTLIGHT'
STAR WARS

A KING'S RANSOM?
NO! A mere $33,500! Tops in this range. Three bedrooms, living-den + isolated master. Tastefully decorated. Assumable FHA loan. Low equity. Payments of $297.00.

LOOK ME OVER
Then call one of our Agents to see inside! 4520 54 is three bedrooms, plus office or sewing room. Just old enough to have all the "kinks" out. Fireplace, built-in kitchen, refrigerated, custom drapes. Owner leaving town, so it is priced right for quick sale!

COMFORTABLE COUNTRY HOME
On one acre NE of Lubbock, just 10 minutes from T.I. Three bedrooms, one and one-half baths in "mint" condition. Many, many fruit trees.

Sign Up For Independence

When young people sign up for newspaper route work, they are really signing up for independence. The kind of independence that goes with earning your own money, running your own business and dealing with people on a one-to-one basis.

Our carriers are young business men and women. They provide a vital service, handle their own finances and reap a handsome profit from their efforts. What better training to prepare them for the future?

If you are interested in stepping into the business world and declaring your own independence, contact our carrier manager right now. He'll give you all of the important facts about carrier work. Then, if you are still interested, he'll provide the pen and show you where to sign . . . even if your name is John Hancock.

Divorced Fathers Now Getting Child Support

GETTING CHILD SUPPORT — Divorced fathers, who win custody of their children, are beginning to seek and receive child support payments from their former wives. Women's rights groups have voiced favor with the new trend, which is helping make divorce settlements be based on financial ability to pay rather than sex. (AP Laserphoto)

By LEE MITGANG

NEW YORK (AP) — Divorced fathers are collecting a dividend from the drive for women's equality: They have started to demand and get child support payments.

Consider Allan S. Carter, a New York City school teacher in his late 30s. His former wife, Carolyn R. Carter, also in her 30s, was a New York City school secretary until she remarried and moved to Texas.

Then, on July 25 of last year, a landmark ruling in New York State appeals court gave Carter something else — $25 a week for child support from his former wife, even though she no longer works.

The ruling said, in effect, that her ability to work obligated her to help with the expense of raising her son.

Such a ruling would have been almost unheard of a few years ago. Divorce laws in most states had always placed the financial burden of child-rearing on the father, unless he was physically or otherwise disabled.

But today, an increasing number of divorced men with children are being granted child support from their ex-wives. More and more, the important factor is which parent can best afford to pay for child-rearing, and less and less what sex that parent is.

Practically every state has adopted law changes in the past few years that make the financial support of children in divorce cases the responsiblity of both parents, according to Dr. Doris Jonas Freed, chairman of the American Bar Association family law research committee.

And many feminist groups aren't at all sorry to concede this gain to divorced men. They say it is a fair price for divorced women to pay for the freedom to pursue careers that divorced men have always had.

The trend is difficult to measure, because lawyers are reluctant to talk about the confidential terms of divorce settlements. Certainly, the great majority of divorce settlements still require men to pay the child support.

But divorce lawyers and other family court officials around the country assert the trend is there.

"It's a clear movement, of recent origin, linked to the ERA (the proposed Equal Rights Amendment) and the whole process by which the former preference of women as the child's natural custodian has been held constitutionally unsound," says Joseph DuCanto, president of the American Academy of Matrimonial Lawyers, based in Chicago.

"Child support payments have been de-sexed," says Dr. Freed. "It's a phenomenon of the '70s but it's become increasingly true lately. I think this is definitely an outgrowth of so many more women in the workforce."

"It's no longer a matter of sex, it's a matter of dollars," says Philip F. Solomon, a past president of the matrimonial lawyers academy.

Dr. Freed also says 37 states now make provisions for alimony to be awarded to either the man or the woman.

This seeming role reversal, in which divorced fathers want a larger part in child-raising, and career-minded women are increasingly willing to grant it, so far is most noticeable in urbanized states such as California, Illinois and New York.

The federal government estimates there have been slightly more than one million divorces each year since 1975, and the number of children involved has been more than 1.1 million each year. Those figures are roughly double the levels of a decade earlier.

No one knows how many of those cases involved wives paying child support to the husband.

But in New York, for instance, following the Carter decision, there have been hundreds of cases in which men have won such claims from their divorced wives, according to Solomon.

A psychologist for the Chicago conciliation service described in general terms a recent case in which the wife, a corporate attorney, had an income about three times that of the husband.

The man was granted custody of the couple's two young children and is getting child support payments from his former wife.

"It worked out very well because daddy played what is characteristically described as mommy in the household," the Chicago psychologist says. "We're frequently seeing the whole business in divorced women of 'now I'm getting to do my thing,' and she is quite willing to give up the children."

The impetus for change in many states came when judges ruled old statutes unconstitutional, and not so much because advocates had lobbied in state legislatures. But feminist groups seeking the same career and family choices as divorced men did not oppose the changes. And a growing array of "men's lib" organizations, claiming divorce laws put an unfair financial strain on men, supported the revisions.

Such groups include Fathers United for Equal Rights, Male Equality Now, Inc., Men's Liberation, America's Society of Divorced Men, and the Committee for Fair Divorce Alimony Laws.

"Men have begun to realize they can get custody of their children. I think the fact that the men's groups have been vocal has brought this along," she says.

And Susanne Duval of the Department of Health Education and Welfare's Office of Child Support Enforcement says, "Judges are awarding custody more and more to men. What follows is that women should have to help support the children. My own view as a feminist is that this is good."

House Ethics Panel Charges Misconduct By Congressmen

WASHINGTON (AP) — The committee investigating alleged South Korean influence-buying in the House is accusing four present congressmen of possible misconduct but says none knew Seoul was trying to buy favors.

The House ethics committee on Thursday announced proceedings to determine if the four committed violations and should be punished for allegedly taking money from Tongsun Park, a Korean rice dealer.

Its decision papers called Park a South Korean agent — rejecting his denial that he was an agent — but said it has no evidence any current congressmen should have known that.

The committee said, however, it has not completed its investigation of allegations that former South Korean Ambassador Kim Dong Jo tried to give congressmen envelopes stuffed with $100 bills.

The committee said it has reason to believe two former congressmen "committed perjury" and that it has turned their testimony over to the Justice Department for possible prosecution.

It said it has no evidence to warrant further investigation of nine other present congressmen who purportedly got money from Park — or of Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill for permitting Park to throw two parties for him.

The committee released "statements of alleged violations" naming former Democratic Whip John J. McFall of California, California Democratic Reps. Edward R. Roybal and Charles H. Wilson and Rep. Edward J. Patten, D-N.J.

The statements are the first step in proceedings to determine if the allegations are true and if the House should punish the four or turn any violations over to the Justice Department for criminal prosecution.

The four have 21 days to answer the allegations and committee sources said public hearings are likely after that.

The panel did not identify the two former congressmen it said it "has reason to believe ... committed perjury," but sources who declined to be named said the two were Democrats Nick Galifianakis of North Carolina and John R. Rarick of Louisiana.

Galifianakis declined comment, and Rarick said, "I don't know anything about this."

The closest the committee came to alleging influence selling was to say that McFall accepted $4,000 cash from Park "under circumstances that might be construed by reasonable persons as influencing the performance of his government duties."

It said he violated campaign finance law by not reporting $3,000 of the money as a campaign contribution.

McFall, who has said the money was not a campaign contribution, said he is confident the committee will clear him.

The committee said Roybal allegedly converted a $1,000 cash contribution from Park to his personal use, did not report it and denied under oath, in violation of law, that he had received it.

Roybal said he was "surprised and distressed" at the allegations and did not comment on them except to say he intends to make a forceful presentation of his case.

The committee said Patten allegedly violated New Jersey state law by giving contributions to the Middlesex County (N.J.) Democratic Organization as his own when the money was Park's.

Patten denied the allegations and said a former aide, Stephen Callas, has publicly claimed responsibility for not reporting Park as the source of the money.

The committee said Wilson made a willful false statement, in violation of law, by saying he got no money from Park when Park said he gave Wilson $1,000 in cash as a wedding gift.

Wilson said he had forgotten about the gift and notified the committee of it later.

The committee said it investigated a number of allegations against Speaker O'Neill who was then House Democratic leader and found no evidence to support any of them.

"The only thing the evidence shows Mr. O'Neill to have done of questionable propriety is to accept two parties in his honor paid for by Tongsun Park," the committee said.

It said by today's standards it may be unwise for a congressman to permit a foreigner or suspected lobbyist to give him a party but "there appears to be no warrant for disciplinary proceedings."

It said it also finds no warrant for proceedings against Democratic Whip John Brademas of Indiana, for accepting $5,000 from Tongsun Park except for the fact that Brademas and Park were once social friends, the committee said. There is nothing "to suggest that Brademas knew or should have known that Park was an agent of the government of Korea."

It also said Brademas may have committed a technical violation by incorrectly reporting $800 of the money from Park.

Committee To Schedule Hearings On ERA Bid

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Judiciary Committee is expected to schedule a full day of hearings Tuesday on proposals to extend the ratification dealine for the Equal Rights Amendment, with ERA supporters saying they believe they have the needed votes.

Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., chairman of the civil and constitutional rights subcommittee, had vowed he would not schedule a full committee vote on the proposal unless he had the votes to stave off attempts by Rep. Thomas Railsback, R-Ill., to let states use the extra time to change their minds about previous ratification.

The principal strategist of the ERA extension, Rep. Elizabeth Holtzman, D-N.Y., said Thursday she believed ERA supporters definitely had the votes to defeat the Railsback amendment and said it appears that last weekend's march in Washington supporting the extension and the following lobbying changed enough minds to ensure that at least some extension of time would be approved by the full committee.

The White House and House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., have been working vigorously to increase the votes on the extension question since the Sunday march which attracted an extimated 100,000 demonstrators.

Edwards, Mrs. Holtzman, and Reps. Patricia Schroder, D-Colo., Margaret Heckler, R-Mass., and Yvonne Burke, D-Calif. met with White House officials Tuesday night to urge them to do better about lobbying on the ERA issue.

"This is our Panama Canal," Mrs. Schroder said she told them.

She said she had also commented that the ERA supporters had gotten more help from former President Gerald Ford and his wife, Betty, on the ERA extension issue than they had out of the Carter administration's lobbyist.

The next day President Carter sent a strong letter of support for the ERA extension to Judicary Chairman Peter Rodino, D-N.J., and Edwards. Carter urged Congress to extend the time, said they had every constitutional right to do so and said the current seven-year time limit was an artificial barrier that might block 100 million Americans from the benefits of the amendment.

The ERA will die March 22 unless it is ratified by three more states or Congrss extends the time for ratification.

Thirty-five of the 38 states required to pass on the amendment have voted to ratify the ERA. Four of those states subsequently voted to rescind their previous approvals, an action the Justice Department says is probably not legal but about which Congress will eventually have to decide.

Entertainment Industry To Be Probed

LOS ANGELES (AP) — District Attorney John Van de Kamp has formed a special investigative squad to investigate white collar crime in the entertainment industry.

The move stems from a series of recent scandals involving executive crime in Hollywood, Van de Kamp said Thursday.

Van de Kamp said in a news release that the investigative group would be comprised of lawyers and investigators from the district attorney's office.

The district attorney said "our concern has been aroused by the (David) Begelman, (Audrey) Lisner and Deluxe Filmlab incidents," three recent criminal cases involving industry executives.

Begelman, former chief of Columbia Pictures, was fined $5,000 and sentenced to three years' probation for stealing $40,000 from the studio, a crime that "the studio showed a lack of interest in prosecuting," Van de Kamp said.

The DeLuxe Filmlab case involved a $1 million loss suffered by the film distributing company due to alleged mishandling of accounts by a DeLuxe employee. The case was not brought to the attention of authorities until a civil suit was filed in connection with the loss.

In the Lisner case, Audrey Lisner, accounting director for the Screen Gems Division of Columbia Pictures, was charged with embezzling $275,000. A warrant has been issued for her arrest.

"This effort is not limited to the motion picture industry," Van de Kamp said, "but will include other elements of the entertainment industry. We are meeting with people in the industry and we want to let people in the industry to know that they have a place to come if they have information about white-collar crime."

Panel Approves Documents Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation which would make presidential documents the property of the U.S. government is advancing in the House.

The bill was approved by a voice vote Thursday by the House government operations subcommittee.

If it becomes law, all presidential documents would be turned over to the government, although presidents would still be able to seal some documents for 10 years after leaving office.

Under current law, presidential papers are the property of the outgoing president. Such papers are the focus of a number of presidential libraries around the country.

The move to change the law developed when then President Richard M. Nixon left office in August, 1974.

Although Nixon had worked out an agreement giving him control over his papers, Congress approved a special law declaring that they were government property.

Under the legislation now before the House, the president would have authority to restrict access to documents for 10 years after he left office if the documents are classified or material involving national defense, trade secrets, foreign poicy, appointments, medical matters, and advice from aides.

Miss Lillian's Remarks Range From Nursing Billy To Hunger

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's mother drank three bottles of home brew a day while nursing youngest son Billy, has no use for organized charity and doesn't ever intend to "rot" in a rocking chair.

These diverse and wide-ranging comments peppered 79-year-old Miss Lillian Carter's remarks on Thursday to an informal meeting of members of Congress interested in the problems of hunger and population planning.

—To her audience: "This is going to be a fun thing. If you think you're going to be bored, you can get up and walk out right now. It won't hurt my feelings because I get bored myself."

—On nursing her four children: "I had had three babies and I nursed them all but when Billy was born I kind of gave out of milk. And then my father had a solution. Home brew. We couldn't get beer. And I drank three bottles of home brew every day ... Believe me, Billy got plenty of milk. I'm not plugging Billy beer, hear. It was home brew that I drank."

—On charity: "I never give a penny to organized charities because I'm disillusioned. Because I've always heard and know to be a fact that very little of the money that we give to these agencies gets to the poor ... I give my money to direct charities. I give it to groups which are feeding the hungry."

"If you believe in all of these things (organized charities), please don't let me disillusion you. I am disillusioned. I give to someone I know is going to help directly ... I give to someone who is building a hospital in Bombay."

Then she added, with a grin, "I reckon one reason I send it is that they're going to name the hospital for me."

—On retirement: "I preach against retiring. I haven't retired and I'll be 80 in August. I know you're not surprised. I know I look it. But my mind is a lot younger than 79.

"Don't retire until you have to. And if you do retire, find a hobby and just keep on living. Don't get in a rocking chair and rot out."

—On politicians: "I'm not a politician. I just politick all the time."

—To Rep. Milicent Fenwick, R-N.J., who smokes a pipe: "If you're a pipe smoker, I glory in your spunk. I had a bet one time with a man that I wouldn't smoke a cigarette for a whole year. And I went off to my daughter's cabin where nobody could see me. And I lit it. And I took two or three puffs. And it threw me. I couldn't get to the bed hardly."

—On the new postmaster in Plains, Thomas R. Harris: "We have a black postmaster now ... I would have given anything on earth for that to happen. Its like I almost prayed for a black postmaster and I got it."

—On being asked to try to influence her son the president: "I'll try. But he'll say, 'Goodbye, mama, I've got to go.' "

—On her seven-year tenure as a house mother of Kappa Alpha Order at Auburn University: "My fraternity had the boys who didn't drink and didn't go with wild women and studied until 12 o'clock at night. And that's the biggest lie I ever told."

—On her eating habits: She said that during her time in India with the Peace Corps eating between meals meant wasting desperately needed food. "So I don't eat anything between meals and I don't drink anything unless its black coffee. Except in the afternoon I have a little toddy before I eat."

—On her acceptance by the Peace Corps:

"They sent me to a psychiatrist once a week for all the time I was in training ... They wanted to find out why I wanted to leave a comfortable home, a son who was running for governor and a Cadillac ... In his final report he said I had been frustrated living in such a segregated part of the world (the deep South) and what I wanted was to go and treat people who had nothing and do what I could in my declining years.

"I think he thought I'd be dead by now, but I fooled him."

AT&T Warned To Pay Bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — American Telephone and Telegraph Co., the world's largest private corporation, recently was warned one of its telephones would be disconnected if it did not pay an overdue $448.08 bill.

"We value you as a customer...," said the computer-written dunning notice from the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co., one of 23 telephone companies in the "Ma Bell" chain that AT&T owns.

"However, unless payment of $448.08 is received by Jun (computer spelling) 20, we will have to interrupt your service," the notice said.

Officially, at least, AT&T was not at all miffed at getting dunned by a subsidiary.

"It is refreshing to know the C&P treats its owner like all the rest of its customers," said Pic Wagner, AT&T media-relations manager. He said the bill was paid.

A team of AT&T lawyers had this particular telephone installed months ago in a Justice Department office they are using to prepare defenses against a 1974 government antitrust suit to break up the huge telephone empire.

By mistake the notice fell into the hands of a Justice Department official who passed it on to AT&T — after making a photocopy that was slipped to a reporter.

THREE BALLETS PREMIERED

STUTTGART, West Germany (UPI) — Three ballets were premiered recently by the Stuttgart State Opera Company. The program featured Patrice Montagnon's "Der Tod Und Das Maedchen (Death And The Girl)", "Mein Bruder, Meine Schwester (My Brother, My Sister)" by Kenneth McMillan and "Traum Des Galilei (The Dream Of Galilei)" by William Forsyte.

Schools Employing Competency Tests

(EDITOR'S NOTE — The word opposite in meaning to "unique" is: a, crowded. b, narrow. c, close. d, common. If antonyms aren't your bag, try this one: Write the numbers 1 to 100 in sequence. Both are sample questions on minimum competency tests which are sweeping the education field in the rush to return to classroom basics.)

By TERRY KIRKPATRICK
Associated Press Writer

More and more school children are trudging home these days to tell their parents of a new kind of exam some of them probably can't even pronounce: the minimum competency test.

"Competencies," as the jargonists call them, are an outgrowth of the national Johnny-can't-read lament and back-to-basics clamor of recent years. Their purpose is to find if students are learning what they should.

But the demands by taxpayers that their schools be held accountable have been matched in fervor by charges that the tests are too easy or unfair, by cries of some school districts that they are too costly, and by protests of some educators that they don't work anyway. With the dust of these issues far from settled, one thing is clear:

Minimum comptency testing is in vogue.

Two years ago only two states had passed legislation requiring the tests. Today, lawmakers or education board members in 31 states have taken action requiring them.

They range from comprehensive statewide testing programs to simple requirements that local districts set them up. Subjects covered vary widely, as do uses for the tests. Twenty states have minimum standards for graduation, four tie the tests to promotion to the next grade. Remedial work for students who fail is a part of most state programs. Two states, Florida and California, have special "early exit" tests that allow students to leave school early if they pass.

"It's one of the fastest moving things I've seen in all the time I've been in education," says Chris Pipho, a former teacher and principal who now keeps track of competency test legislation for the Education Commission of the States. What makes its overnight popularity unusual, he says, is that it came from outside the education establishment. It was a grass roots movement. Legislators, who feel the pressure of public opinion, have been the prime movers.

"For the most part educators have set their heels in on the thing," Pipho says. "They have closed their eyes to the whole notion that the public is fed up. Sixty to 70 percent of the people on the street are asking questions about the guts of education: What have you been doing with all the money we've been giving you?"

Whether to have competency tests at all may be the easiest decision for a legislature or school board. Then the decisions get stickier. For instance, what should be the minimum? Competence in what?

English literature? "My guess is that most people don't care about Shakespeare," says Dr. Thomas Knapp, who teaches statistics and testing at the University of Rochester.

A hundred years ago school curricula were rigorous, classical and non-practical, he says, "but schools have taken on more responsibility, rightly or wrongly.

The tests in most states stress reading, writing or speaking and mathematics. Some add practical applications called survival or life skills.

A 117-question test was given to high school juniors for the first time last November. It included filling out a job application or tax form, writing a letter, balancing a checkbook and reading a road map.

Of the 110,000 students who took the test, 40,700 failed. The highest failure rate — 77 percent — was among blacks.

NEWLYWEDS — Princess Caroline of Monaco and her husband Philippe Junot talked with reporters on the Island of Moorea near Tahiti this week in the home of French doctor Christian Jonville with whom the couple is staying. Princess Caroline said that she had gotten married for herself, not the whole public in defending her "scaled-down" wedding recently. (AP Laserphoto)

Princess Caroline Says 'Tough' To Critics Of Small Wedding

PAPEETE, Tahiti (AP) — Princess Caroline of Monaco says it's "tough" if the world thinks her wedding to Philippe Junot was too small. She also says she wants to have at least four children.

"I was getting married for myself. I was not getting married for the public," she told reporters Tuesday.

"I didn't want my wedding to be a three-ring circus. It's my own personal affair. I don't care what the world says. It was for me and it was a beautiful wedding because I had the people I love and wanted to be there. The press is upset, but that's tough."

Caroline and Philippe were married in relatively small, private civil and religious ceremonies at the palace in Monaco last month, to the consternation of some of the press and public.

Philippe said they will be moving into a new apartment in Paris.

Asked if they plan to have children Philippe, 38, said "absolutely" and Caroline, 21, said "oh yes," adding she wanted to haved a large family. "It starts from four," she said.

She and Philippe are known by the Tuamotu natives on the small atoll of Arutua as Putahi and Manua respectively.

These are the ancient Tuamotu names given the couple, who have been honeymooning in French Polynesia since July 9.

Philippe said they expect to remain here another 10 days to two weeks. Both said they are looking forward to seeing some of the traditional Bastille Day festivities which begin today.

They met the press at the home of French doctor Christian Jonville on the nearby island of Moorea. Caroline said she first knew they were headed for a honeymoon in Tahiti a few hours out of Paris on a flight to Los Angeles. "I wasn't as informed as most people, newspapermen or whatever. It was a surprise," she said. Philippe said when he told her "she looked happy."

She said her parents knew all along but kept it secret.

"I talked to them a week ago," she said. "I told them everything was beautiful and great."

In Arutua, an island in the Tuamotus, the couple stayed with a local policeman and his wife, who is nurse on the atoll.

"We stayed in their house. That was really amazing," Caroline said. "It was beautiful and they were so nice. And they had a lunch for us with all the local food and music. The kids just came and played and everything was beautiful. It was so much fun."

Both enjoyed local food. "Some dishes were fantastic. We asked for some recipes," Philippe said.

They also visited a pearl farm on Arutua, the private atoll of Jean-Claude Brouillet, who flew them on his private plane to the islands.

Brouillet also owns the cultured pearl farm they visited where Caroline said she found a pearl in an oyster she opened.

"We'll be in Monaco in early August," she said. "Until then we don't have any specific plans. We're just taking it easy."

Philippe said he was looking forward to going deep sea fishing "and I think we are very excited about the July festivities, to see all the outrigger canoes. It must be fantastic, very colorful, beautiful."

Tomorrow's Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

CANCER (June 21-July 22) The old adage, "the best things in life are free," will hold true for you tomorrow. Pleasurable pursuits that slim down your bankroll could be disappointing.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) For someone who usually appreciates life to the fullest you may fail to get fully immersed tomorrow. Your day could be just so-so.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Unfortunately, tomorrow you may not hold yourself in the same high regard your friends do. Trust their opinions and not yours.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) There will be persons tomorrow who will help advance your interests and others who are not in a position to do so. Regardless, you should avoid any preferential treatment.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Because your influence over your peer group will be markedly pronounced tomorrow, someone may try to use you to serve his or her purposes.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Overall conditions will be promising tomorrow, especially in joint ventures. Your doubts regarding your own capabilities will be the only fly in the ointment.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You will be a welcome addition to any social gathering tomorrow. You'll be warmly received on that basis. Don't use the occasion as a platform for personal ambitions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Persons in positions to give you a boost will see nothing but good in you tomorrow. The fault-finders will be those who couldn't help you anyway.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Lady Luck will be your ally tomorrow as long as you keep up a full head of steam. If you start to put on the brakes, she's likely to do the same.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You will have an ingenious knack for sorting out situations for others tomorrow, provided you don't take small but foolish risks.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Do things you find pleasurable tomorrow, yet know when to leave the ball. Recall what happened to Cinderella and the pumpkin.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Possibilities for personal gain appear favorable tomorrow. Others will help, but if you fail to show proper gratitude they won't assist you again.

Miss Lillian Starts Seven-Nation Tour

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter's mother, Miss Lillian, will go on a European and African tour beginning Monday as Carter's emissary.

The White House said her journey to West Africa "will express the president's deep interest in the problem of world hunger, the disparity between rich and poor, and the role of women in the development process.

During her stop in Rome, Miss Lillian will be presented the Food and Agriculture Organization's Ceres medal.

Her July 17-Aug. 2 trip will take her to Paris, Rome and the African nations of Gambia, Senegal, Upper Volta and Mali with a brief unofficial rest stop in Morocco.

Phil Harris Fails To Fit Mold Of Disney Actors

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOO (UPI) — The Disney studios is a pristine bastion of probity dedicated to "G" rated moviews, the flag, motherhood and God.

Since Mickey Mouse first squeaked his way to fame some 50 years ago, the Disney reputution has been unsullied by scandal and unseemly skylarking, much less public displays of drunkenness or lechery.

It comes as a distinct shock, therefore, to discover that Disney nurtures a reprobate of heroic proportions, a figure who looms large in the show business Who's Who of topers, swingers and rascals.

Through the hallowed gates of Disney these days strolls a man who has become a fixture in the studio's feature length cartoons. He provided the voice of Baloo, the bear in "Jungle Book," of J. Pat O'Mally, the hip cat in "the Aristocats," and of Little John in "Robin Hood."

At present he is the voice of Feathers Valentino, a crane of dubious reputation who messes around with Charo in "Fox and Mounds."

This rampant blot on the Disney escutcheon is none other than Phil Harris, as unlikely a figure on the campus-like Disney lot as he would be occupying the office of headmaster at a girls finishing school.

It was Phil Harris, one must be reminded, who toured Scotland with Bing Crosby many years ago. One night on the road to Aberdeen they passed several distilleries of Scotch whisky, lights aglow, operating full blast.

Crosby wryly observed, "Look at that, Phil, they're making it faster than you can drink it!"

Undaunted, Harris fired back, "Yeah, but I got them working nights."

On a domestic tour through the south with Bing a few years later a group of Crosby fans asked what the stars were doing in Dixie. Bing told the ladies, "Phil's here to lay a wreath on the grave of Jack Daniels."

Harris recalled those glory daqs in his distinctive whiskey baritone at lunch in the Disney commissary, his innocent blue eyes twinkling with pleasure.

The lovable reprobate has dedicated most of his 72 years to creating a reputation for wine, women and song as Crosy's crony off-screen and as Jack Benny's band leader-foil for 16 years on Benny's radio show. He also devoted seven years to defaming himself on his own radio show with wife Alica Faye.

He was every God-fearing wife's admonition to her husband, the horrible example. Few were the men who did not envy Phil's carefree lifestyle. The Walter Mittys of the world lived vicariously through his adventures.

Harris, despite his tenure at Disney, says he is unchanged. "I'm on the wagon right now, but only to lose weight," he said. "The minute I drop 10 pounds I'm heading right back to the nipple.

"Alice and I have been married since 1941 and I'm still looking for her money. We've lived in Palm Springs 30 years and I travel so much Alice used to tell people she saw me only when I brought my laundry home. Now she says she brings my laundry to me."

Phil's low-life reputation was responsible for one of the longest sustained laughs in the history of radio.

In one skit, Benny was sitting in the parlor of the polished Ronald Coleman and his fastidious wife, Benita. Coleman was munching an apple when Benny began a story and mentioned the name of Phil Harris.

There was a pregnant silence and then Coleman said disdainfully, "Please, Jack, not while I'm eating." The audience roared for a full minute and a half.

Now that Phil has become a Disney standby, he has discovered a whole new world of fans. Little kids, who once might have asked why he led their fathers astray, now point him out and yell, "Hi, Baloo."

"It's just great," said Harris happily, "and now 'Jungle Book' is being re-released. Walt Disney himself wanted me for the voice of Baloo. But when I read the script I turned it down.

"The dialogue didn't sound like me. And I didn't want to be typed as a bear. But they asked me to try it once using my own words. That worked out fine. But Alice made me bring a recording home to prove I really worked at Disney.

"I'm here because they can use my voice, phrasing and inflection but the producers keep it clean. I sound like everyone else to me, but the voice must be distinctive. Long distance operators always ask, 'Is this Phil Harris?'

"Baloo has resurrected my career. I love having kids recognize me and follow me down the street.

"I was down south not long ago at a social doing when a guy comes up to me and says, 'The Reverend Billy Graham would like to meet you.' I'm a big fan of Graham and I considered it an honor.

"But we're not exactly the same type of character. When I shook hands with Billy my whole right side went sober."

70 Guerrillas Attack Colombian Police

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Seventy guerrillas firing machine guns and throwing firebombs attacked the six-man police station in the tiny village of Callejas, in northern Colombia, early Wednesday. Police said one of the guerrillas was killed, and two policemen were wounded seriously.

HY GARDNER HAS THE ANSWER:

Glad You Asked That!

By MARILYN and HY GARDNER

Q: We Americans love gossip. However, recently in London we read more such trivia than we ever see back home. How do our English cousins explain this custom? — Barbara and Tony Sweet, Miami Beach, Fla.

A: Gossiper Nigel Dempster once put it this way: "I think human beings are unpleasant and they should be shown as such. In my view we live in a banana-peel society, where people who are having a rotten, miserable life — as 99.9 percent of the world is — can only gain enjoyment by seeing the decline and fall of others. They only enjoy people's sordidness, their divorces, whether their wives relieved them of $5 million, how their children turned around and beat the 'bleep' out of them. Then they suddenly realize that everyone else is leading a miserable, filthy life which — but for me and other journalists around — they would not know about. They see that those who obtain riches or high position are no happier than they are. It helps them get long."

Q: When did Franklin Roosevelt say, "It is a socialist idea that making profits is a vice ... I consider the real vice is making losses"? — Mrs. achel D., Philadelphia.

A: It wasn't FDR who made that comment, but his wartime crony, Sir Winston Churchill.

Q: Is it true that policewomen are ordered not to wear hoop earrings while on duty in civilian attire? If so, why? — Miss Myles D., Memphis.

A: Because they're dangerous. In hand-to-hand scuffles attackers have been known to distract or injure policewomen by tugging at the earrings — painfully ripping the earlobes.

Bob Orben's comment about a report that claims we've just about wiped out illiteracy in this country — "That's frightening. Who's going to write the lyrics for those rock songs?"

Q: In addition to being confined to a wheelchair, doesn't Gov. Wallace also have to wear a hearing aid as a result of his being shot? — L. O'Connor, Montgomery, Ala.

A: "Though I do wear a hearing aid, the hearing loss is in no way attributed to the attempt on my life," the stalwart governor informed us. "I sustained a loss of hearing as a result of my service in the armed forces as an engineer on a bomber."

Q: Did anyone ever win Oscars as best actor or best actress in two successive years? — Mindy D., Tulsa.

A: Yes. The two-times-in-a-row winners include Spencer Tracy, who won that double-header in 1937 for "Captains Courageous" and in 1938 for "Boys Town." Luise Rainer matched that monumental achievement by winning an Oscar in 1936 for "The Great Ziegfeld" and in 1937 for "The Good Earth." Katharine Hepburn tied for that distinction in 1967 when she won the Best Actress Award for "Guess Who's Coming to Dinner?" and followed it a year later for "The Lion In Winter."

Q: Exactly what is meant by the phrase "rule of thumb"? J. McNamara, St. Louis.

A: It's a way of roughly guessing a measurement. Based on practice or experience as distinguished from theory. It comes from the use of the thumb for rough measurements.

Q: Where did the expression, "say uncle," uttered by the cocksure winner of a tussle between two persons, come from? And what other "uncles" became famous? — Mrs. Wm. Rowland, Halifax, Va.

A: "Say uncle" evolved from the Roman notion of a patruus (uncle) who, as a legal guardian, overdid the privilege of castigating his young charges. Other famous "uncles" were: Uncle Remus, the old plantation Negro whose quaint and proverbial wisdom, and stories of Brer Rabbit and Brer Fox, were related by Joel Chandler Harris (1848-1908). Uncle is also an old euphemism for any pawnbroker. Uncle Joe was a British World War II nickname for Joseph Stalin. Uncle Tom now signifies blacks who act subservient to the white establishment. Uncle Miltie — an affectionate reference to Milton Berle back in the early TV days when the comedian's ratings were so high some movie theaters didn't even bother opening on Tuesday nights when his program was on — so few patrons showed up. And, of course, there's Uncle Sam — the softest touch of all.

Town Snubs Owner Of Egg Farm

TURNER, Maine (UPI) — When Dennis Damon walks down the street, people who have known him for more than 20 years treat him like a stranger. They used to be friends.

When his wife goes to the corner store for groceries, people turn their backs and won't speak to her.

Damon is the production manager for the DeCoster Egg Farms, the nation's largest producer of brown eggs. And in the past two months, millions of beetles have crawled out of deep piles of chicken manure on the DeCoster farms and other nearby egg farms and infested more than 100 homes in the Turner area.

Angry homeowners have been forced to sweep down walls and vacuum the floors of their houses daily to get rid of the small, brown clinging bugs.

Damon has worked closely with state officials in an effort to control the plague and the DeCoster Farms have spent thousands of dollars to kill the beetles.

But Mrs. Damon said Wednesday many townspeople, even close friends, blame her husband for the beetle invasion and now treat them with contempt.

"People I have known for years won't even speak to me. They turn their backs and look away when I'm at the corner store," Mrs. Damon said. "It's very wrong and very unfair. A good neighbor of ours even hollered at me as I drove by yesterday."

Richard Dearborn, a state entomologist, said the beetles are common to chicken farms across the nation, but usually don't breed in large enough numbers to be a public nuisance. Scientists are unable to explain why the small, brown beetles are breeding in such large numbers this year in the Turner area, he said.

Dearborn said, if anything, DeCoster Farms, and Damon in particular, deserve a great deal of credit for voluntarily seeking state help and spending thousands of dollars to develop a way of killing the beetles.

Damon said he can understand why people are upset, because he would be too if his home was infested. He refused to talk, however, about how local people have treated him.

Ironically, the Damons' new green one-story ranch house near the DeCoster farm has not been infested by the beetles. But Mrs. Damon said she is afraid irate and resentful neighbors may try to collect beetles and turn them loose on the house.

"It has gotten so out of hand that after watching the TV news my own father called up and wanted to take me and the children away," she said. "We've gotten nasty phone calls at night and people my husband has known for 22 years have turned their backs on him.

"After 22 years, they act like they don't know him. It's not fair, but I guess it is just a storm we will have to weather out. But for now, it has literally turned our lives into a living hell. Life in this nice little town has literally become a living hell," she said.

Mrs. Damon said she is afraid the news accounts blaming DeCoster will hurt its business.

If that happens and DeCoster goes under, she said she and her husband won't have to worry about having beetles in their home, because they'll have to sell the house and move on.

New Television Series Offers Bilingual Education

AUSTIN (UPI) — Dona Rosario Villanueva, already faced with eviction from here home, is angered by a troop of neighborhood children who want to use here carriage house to replace their clubhouse being condemned by city officials.

The children could not find another hangout. And, one day a short time ago, they accompanied El Ratoncito, who wanted to apologize to Dona Rosario for stealing her pecans and damage to her property, and discovered the carriage house.

"This would be perfect," one exclaims.

"Aqui hay historia (there's history here)," Dona Rosario sternly tells them. "You young kids don't care about history ... of when a leader was needed."

The exchange is from "The Horse of Pancho Villa," the pilot program of Sonrisas, a new bilingual national television series intended for a viewing audience of children, who may be monolingual in English or Spanish or bilingual, ages 7 through 11. It is a gentle method of teaching, and the rest of the film showed how.

After the mention of history in the carriage house, Dona Rosario, in a passionate portrayal, recollects for the children the time Pancho Villa spent the night in her carriage house when she was very young.

"They say he was a bandit, but he was a gentleman of the revolution. And you want to play in my carriage house? Absolutely no."

The children, moved by the Pancho Villa story, begin chanting and a neighborhood policeman, who is friend to Dona Rosario and the innocent young scoundrels, figures out how to prevent the eviction. The policeman petitions to have the carriage house dedicated a historical landmark — and all is solved.

Sonrisas is being sponsored by a $2.1 million grant from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. When all the 39 half-hour shows are completed by March, 1979, the Public Broadcasting System (PBS) will have the option of broadcasting the program. After a first showing any television station, commercial or public, can obtain rights to show the programs.

The pilot, which was viewed this spring by audiences in several Texas cities as well as Miami, Los Angeles, Washington and New York, stressed themes of space, connectedness, change and conflict, control, communication and community.

Sonrisas (meaning smiles) works under the concept that children can confront everyday problems and learn to deal with them in constructive and creativ ways.

Instead of working in an entertainment-like fantasy atmosphere, the youngsters working in Sonrisas deal with such topics as prejudice against the handicapped and the perilous life of an illegal alien.

Every show is completely bilingual and every script must be closely inspected before production to ensure that the dialogue is evenly divided among the two languages, with no more than 60 percent being devoted to one language.

"We literally count every word in the script to make sure there is no more than a 60-40 ratio," said Marye Benjamin, Sonrisas' assistant director for content.

Heading the program is Dr. Ramon H. Tanguma, a career educator and public school administrator whose speciality is bilingual education. Tanguma, 39, is on leave of absence as superintendent of the San Diego, Texas, Independent School District while he directs the program.

"This is a very unique program," said Tanguma. "First of all, it's bilingual. It's suppose to be educational, but entertaining as well. And the characters and the situations are created in way to reflect reality."

Tanguma said every script undergoes close inspection by a committee composed og the program director, assistant directors, producers and head writers. Story ideas, treatment of the script, dialogue technical aspects are all closely scrutinized by the committee before the script is given the go-ahead for taping.

The multi-ethnic cast in most shows also presents more problems.

"For example," said Tanguma, "if the script calls for a Cuban, then we have to make sure the character talks like a Cuban. If the character is suppose to be Mexican-American, the same thing. Whatever."

Because the program is geared for the particular age group, the majority of the cast in the shows are children. Sonrisas runs a workshop for the young actors and actresses under contract with the program.

All of the 24 child performers, age 9 through 18, in the workshop are area students, most with little or no prior acting experience. However, the children's inexperience is not a handicap, for for it allows them the opportunity to contribute their own unique qualities to some improvise sections of the shows.

Tanguma has assembled a formidable staff to nurture the program's progress, recruiting producers, directors and staff personnel from throughout the country.

Mrs. Benjamin, who was worked both in commercial and educational television for more than 35 years, previously served as senior writer and director of research for the four-year production of Carrascolendas, a bilingual Sesame Street-type educational program produced by KLRN, the PBS station for Austin and San Antonio. Carrascolendas was viewed nationally for three years.

Three Sonrisas' staff members have won Emmy awards for their work in educational television.

Michael Riva-Diaz, the program's associate director for production, garnered an Emmy for producing "Pochtlan," a bilingual television series in Los Angeles that focused on teaching English as a second language.

Norberto Lopez, a native of Venezuela who is one of two directors for Sonrisas, won an Emmy for co-producing the film, "Ain't Going to Eat My Mind," for educational television in New York.

The production of "Jill and Jack: Fact and Fiction" earned Mina Korn, the program's associate producer, an Emmy.

Alaskan Art On Display

WASHINGTON (AP) — The first comprehensive showing of contemporary Alaskan art to be seen in the lower 48 states is on display this summer at the Smithsonian's National Collection of Fine Arts.

The 57 works by 42 artists range from native carvings to realistic landscapes to abstract paintings. All the artists live and work in Alaska, and their works have been lent by 41 institutions and individuals.

They include paintings, watercolors, prints, drawings and sculptures. The exhibition, organized with the assistance of the Alaskan State Council on the Arts, opened recently and will continue through Sept. 17.

It is accompanied by a 64-page illustrated catalogue in which Peter Birmingham, the museum's curator of education, says that the artists "with considerable imagination and intelligence provide provocative fusions of an old culture and a newer one still far short of definition. ... The chance to be part of this change or to remain independent of it is an option open to all Alaskan artists."

Of the 41 artists represented, nine were born in Alaska. The others came from 18 states, Hong Kong and Leningrad, but all have been living in Alaska.

Disabled Protest Transit Barriers

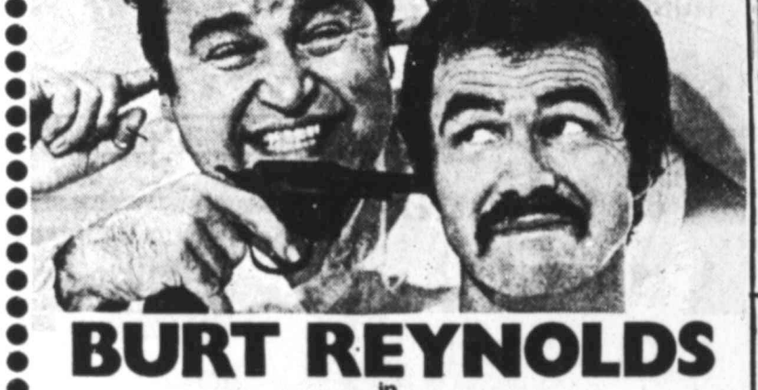

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Downtown rush-hour traffic was snarled by about 50 people who planted their wheelchairs on city streetcar tracks to protest architectural barriers to the handicapped.

The demonstrators demanded Wednesday that the city railway replace current streetcars with low-floor vehicles equipped with wide doors, ramps and lifts. The protest was sponsored by the American Coalition of Citizens with Disabilities.

Presley Airplane Scheme Fails

BENTON, Ill. (UPI) — The Rev. J. Lloyd Tomer says "we maybe led with our chin a little" in a plan to use Elvis Presley's old airplane to sell an oil additive in hopes of paying off a $1 million building debt of the First Church of God.

"But you have never seen me give up," said Tomer, 44. "I've got over 50 years to battle."

Tomer and Robert Dean Philpot, a Texas promoter, had hoped thousands of Americans would pay $300 a couple for a look at the posh interior of the "Lisa Marie."

The tax-exempt fee would have gone to the church building fund and Philpot hoped the visitors would sign up as distributors for his oil additive, "Add-a-Tune."

The planned nationwide tour opened May 1 at Texas Stadium but the attorney general charged the method of promoting Add-a-Tune violated Texas' deceptive trade practices law. "I wasn't a part of that battle between the attorney general and Philpot," said Tomer. "We were just bystanders."

Philpot this week filed for bankruptcy, listing $2,800 in assets and $7.4 million in liabilities.

"It just didn't work out with the adverse publicity," said Tomer. "One of the television stations down there chopped him (Philpot) up pretty good. It looked like a good, marketable product and an opportunity to pay off our church debt."

He said Philpot came to Benton to see him last Feb. 20. "He certainly impressed me as being a very nice guy. I talked to the president of his bank and he said he never had a better customer in his life.

"I think he (Philpot) had a great idea, a great product and a great marketing plan. I think maybe some people he had run-ins with earlier maybe were taking shots at him. You go at life. Some things work out good and some don't. To blame someone else is ridiculous. You just keep going."

When Tomer came here from Poplar Bluff, Mo., a decade ago, he said the church had an attendance of about 25 in a small building.

The church bought a former theater on the town square and brought in Pat Boone for its dedication as a sanctuary in 1972.

Tomer said the peak church attendance in recent years has been about 2,000.

The church built a new sanctuary along Interstate 57 and moved into it Easter Sunday. Last fall, it began operating the Benton Christian School with 75 students from four counties, Tomer said.

Tom Westrick, president of Omni Aircraft of Washington, D.C., which owns the Lisa Marie, said the plane was repossessed from the church and no money changed hands.

Tomer said he is working on other plans but declined to be specific. But he indicated he has not forgotten the Lisa Marie.

FOR TANK CAR SAFETY — Sparks flew recently as Midland-Ross Corp. foundry workers in Melrose Park, Ill., worked on special railroad couplers designed to avert tank car punctures. The U.S. Department of Transportation on July 12 ordered the devices (which have overhangs at top and bottom to reduce the threat of couplers separating and spearing nearby cars) installed by December 31 on all tank cars carrying hazardous materials. China Tries To Curb Influence Of Soviets

HONG KONG (AP) — Chinese officials are criss-crossing the globe in an effort to counter growing Soviet influence in the Third World and to strengthen ties with the West.

In the past few months, more high-ranking and middle-level Chinese officials have been traveling abroad than at any time since the early 1960s when Premier Chou En-lai led huge delegations to Africa and the Middle East.

Western diplomats and observers here generally agree that the new era of traveling diplomacy is part of the whole outward thrust of the current moderate Chinese leadership.

"China is entering the world today in a way it never did even under Chou," said Professor Robert A. Scalapino, director of the Institute of East Asian Studies at the University of California at Berkeley who recently returned from China.

"They've done more in the last months in letting people out on the hustings than perhaps at any time since the Cultural Revolution," said Professor Daniel Tretiak, an expert on Chinese foreign policy from York University in Toronto, Canada, who is currently doing research at the University of Hong Kong.

The Chinese delegations have been to Asia, Africa, Europe, Latin America and Canada, but the flurry of diplomatic activity hasn't included a single high-level visit to the United States.

The United States and China have found themselves on the same side of many global issues and are closer than at any time now since the communists came to power in 1949, but observers said that in the absence of full diplomatic relations the Chinese are deliberately keeping their top leaders out of the United States.

Chairman Hua Kuo-feng leads the list of Chinese travelers and appears to be concentrating on Communist countries which have remained neutral in the Sino-Soviet ideological and political conflict. In May, he traveled to North Korea, the first trip abroad by a party chairman since Mao Tse-tung visited Moscow in 1957, and next month he heads to Romania and Yugoslavia with a possible stop in Iran.

Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping visited Burma and Nepal in February, Vice Premier Li Hsien-nien went to the Philippines and Bangladesh in March and Vice Premier Keng Piao toured Pakistan and Sri Lanka in June — all part of an announced Chinese policy to promote good relations with its Asian neighbors.

Both India and China have also expressed a desire to bury their differences over a border dispute which led to a war in 1962.

In the Middle East, Chinese Foreign Minister Huang Hua stopped in Tehran, Vice Foreign Minister Ho Ying toured Kuwait and Jordan and National People's Congress Vice Chairman Chi Peng-fei visited Syria — all in the past five weeks. Observers say these visits reflected China's concern not only about the Arab-Israeli conflict but about the expanding Soviet influence in the oil-rich Persian Gulf area.

In Africa, Foreign Minister Huang flew to Zaire last month to show China's support for the government of President Mobuto Sese Seko against the invasion of Katanga province. A Chinese military delegation arrived shortly afterwards and reports from Peking said Vice Premier Mrs. Chen Mu-ha will leave at the end of July for a five-nation African tour. Observers say these trips are part of an apparent move by China to reactivate its role in Africa and counter what it sees as growing Soviet influence.

Last month, Vice Chairman Chi led a National People's Congress delegation to Mexico and Venezuela as well as Canada searching for new trade links. The Chinese signed a trade deal with Argentina in Peking last month and is promoting economic cooperation with Brazil.

Two Boys Deny Guilt In Death

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Two 9-year-old Pawtucket boys pleaded innocent to charges they pushed a playmate into a flooded gravel pit and prevented him from climbing out until he drowned.

The youngsters, whose identities have not been released because of their ages, were arraigned on manslaughter charges Wednesday in Family Court. Trial was set for Oct. 17 and they were placed in their parents' custody.

Cruise Ships Sail Despite Failing Health Tests

By MATTHEW J. BOKOR

MIAMI (UPI) — Four months ago, an intestinal bug spoiled a seven-day, $600-a-ticket New York to Bermuda cruise for 145 passengers aboard the luxury liner Cunard Princess.

It was the most recent major incident aboard cruise liners of a recurring problem blamed on health conditions.

The 750-passenger Cunard Princess, in fact, last year failed eight of nine public health inspections — tests the cruise lines say are so unfair ordinary restaurants ashore would flunk them too

The Princess this year passed an inspection but last year it sailed on, as have other cruise ships that failed inspections, and failed again. Simply put, authorities lack enforcement powers.

Sixty-seven of 76 luxury cruise ships sailing from U.S. ports last year failed U.S. Public Health Service inspections, according to information obtained by UPI.

Health officials themselves, however, agree with cruise line spokesmen who say there is less likelihood today than in the past that passengers will wind up taking a voyage into a sea of nausea.

A 1975 U.S. Health Inspection law has added tough new health standards on paper. Though it lacks enforcement powers for inspectors in the field, both sides say it has had a significant effect.

No skipper wants it said he runs a dirty ship. Cruise lines, the officials agree, are of the same mind.

Still, copies of federal health inspection reports obtained under the Freedom of Information Act show that, in almost monthly checks by inspectors of at least 76 pussenger liners last year, 31 ships failed all inspections.

Seventeen failed more than half, 19 failed one or more but passed more than half. Only nine had perfect records.

The U.S. Public Health Service says its inspections help ward off health hazards aboard passenger liners.

A failure doesn't mean a ship is a sailing disease dispenser. But it does mean a liner carries potential hazards to the safety of its passengers and crew, said John Yashuk, chief sanitation officer for the Public Health Service at Miami.

Two ships have been stricken in the past two years with epidemic outbreaks of disease: the British vessel Cunard Princess and the Dutch liner Statendam, which returned to Miami's port in December, 1976, with 82 passengers suffering intestinal problems. There were hundreds of other comparatively healthy voyages in that time span.

But since the government stiffened its inspection standards in 1975, no outbreak has approached the magnitude of a 1973 incident aboard the Skyward, whose 720 passengers and half its crew of 300 contracted diarrhea.

However, the updated standards fuel complaints from cruise line officials, who charge the tests — while valuable — are unfair.

Under the 42-item test, a ship can automatically flunk an inspection if it does not meet standards on any one of 32 items, which count 20 points each. A passing grade is 85 or better.

Besides, cruise line spokesmen say, restaurants on land would fail under the same standards.

"If hotels and restaurants were to be subject to our standards, I dare say not one would pass," says John Reurs, chairman of the International Committee of Passenger Liners, a New-York based organization representing 15 cruise lines and 50 ships.

Bob Dickinson, vice president of sales and marketing for Carnival Cruise Lines which operates two luxury liners, says: "There isn't a restaurant in the country that is evaluated as harshly as cruise ships."

Dade County health inspectors in Miami disagree. They point out that they shut down 51 restaurants that failed to meet county requirements last year. They also condemned and threw away 300,000 pounds of food.

OPERA FOR CHILDREN

BERLIN (UPI) — Contemporary East German composer Kurt Schwaens' opera "Pinocchios' Adventures" recently had its premiere by the East Berlin State Opera company. Schwaens composed the opera chiefly for audiences of children.

Report On Health Dangers To Be Issued

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Here's a message from your government, which worries about your waistline, your vitamin deficiency, your smoking and alcohol problems, the dirty air you breathe and other costly health pitfalls:

Take heart. Help is coming.

HEW Secretary Joseph Califano said Wednesday the surgeon general will issue a major report this fall to help people avoid all types of everyday dangers to health, from accidents to possible cancer-causing agents in air and water.

Califano also said in a UPI interview that his Health, Education and Welfare Department will begin cracking down soon on colleges that lack equal sports programs for women, although those schools probably will not lose federal funds in September.

July 21 is the deadline for colleges to be in compliance with Title IX of the federal education law requiring equal facilities.

Califano indicated the forthcoming surgeon general's sweeping report will be based partly on studies of how many Americans manage to avoid such problems and partly on how the government can help through education and preventive care.

"It will be the first surgeon general's report in that area," Califano said. "I have asked him to work on it with care. I think it will be an important part of our program to cut health care costs."

The report by Surgeon General Julius Richmond would appear to be the government's most comprehensive health report since the surgeon general's office issued its controversial study of smoking and health 14 years ago.

"It would cover alcohol, it would cover accidents, it would cover nutrition, it would cover obesity," said Califano.

He said it would also touch upon the hazards of smoking, but that subject will be dealt with in much greater depth by a follow-up smoking and health report to be issued next year.

A spokesman for Richmond said a preventative health task force is busy analyzing the effectiveness of sickness prevention in neighborhood health centers and migrant worker programs.

The spokesman also said much of the new effort will be devoted to educating health officials and the public on everything from childhood immunization to the detection of such diseases as high blood pressure and some forms of cancer.

On the subject of equal sports programs, Califano said women's groups have filed complaints against a number of colleges under the Title IX amendment, but he does not know if HEW will actually bring any charges soon.

"We are in the process of investigating some colleges," he said. "I think if there are findings before September, and I don't know whether there will be, I think it's unlikely that any college or university will lose funds."

Califano said he expects HEW to sign a contract within a couple of weeks with the American Council on Education, under which the council would advise colleges on how best to stop slighting girls and women in sports programs.

"My own judgment," he said, "is that, over the long haul, the most effective thing for making Title IX fly in the athletic area in colleges and universities is getting the ACE deeply involved on our side."

Casino Gets Permission To Expand

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Resorts International Hotel Casino has won the state's permission to expand its casino floor space and add a handful of slot machines table games, but not before receiving serious reprimands for its first seven weeks of operation.

After a tedious 13-hour hearing here Wednesday, the New Jersey Casino Control Commission voted unanimously to allow the casino to add 158 more slot machines, 12 blackjack tables and one wheel of fortune and spread out its present games over an increased floor space.

However, the five commissioners and state inspectors sharply criticized the firm on a number of points including failure to follow through on past pledges, slowness in affirmative action compliance, long waits for slot machine jackpots, broken down slots, marathon hours for licensed casino workers, lack of qualified casino personnel and even trash in the aisles.

"The mechanics of the total (Resorts International) operation gives me problems," said Commissioner Alice Corsey, who complained that the firm failed to carry out promises it had made while frantically trying to get the East's first legal casino open by Memorial Day.

"I think we're now about ready to open (the original casino)," Commissioner Albert W. Merck said. He added that the casino didn't have the "gracious" atmosphere mandated by state law.

Commission Chairman Joseph P. Lordi warned the firm that the state was watching it closely and may order it to close down or move certain games if conditions don't improve.

Lordi said, however, the firm could return in two weeks for permission to open additional games, including 303 slot machines, if it shows it can adequately staff and manage them.

"We were browbeaten," company attorney Joel Sterns admitted afterwards, "but there just has not been enough time to comply with some of the orders. The commission is very understanding of the problems we faced."

Stern said the company would try to open the expanded casino on Friday morning.

Man Begins Life With 19th Wife

BLYTHE, Calif. (AP) — As Glynn DeMoss Wolfe settles into his 21st marriage, his 14-year-old son says he is hoping to embark on his first one soon.

"No way," said Johnny Wolfe, when asked Wednesday if he's going to try and break the record which won his 69-year-old dad a mention in the Guiness Book of World Records after marriage No. 19. The father, who has appeared frequently on television talk shows, has actually married only 19 women, but he married two of them twice.

Johnny, son of Wolfe's 14th wife, said he has taken a fancy to the half-sister of Dad's latest wife.

Wolfe married Guadelupe Sanchez Mendez, 19, last Friday in nearby Yuma, Ariz. Wolfe said he met her when she took a break from their lettuce-picking duties to pop into the small hotel Wolfe runs in Blythe.

The new Mrs. Wolfe said she was not jealous of her husband's former wives, "just looking forward to our life." It was her first marriage.

The elder Wolfe says one reason he has married so often is that, "I just don't believe in this idea of shacking up.

"There has to be some responsibility, some discipline, some respect. We could cut this nation's welfare bill in half if we had proper marriage records so fathers could be forced to support their offspring," he said.

Johnny Wolfe, who will be a high school freshman next fall, said the idea of his getting married was his father's. Johnny said he would support his bride by working as a houseboy at the hotel. Under California law, Johnny would need a court order to marry.

"We're hoping it will be a couple of weeks from now, and then all of us will take sort of a honeymoon down at Disneyland," Johnny said.

U.S. To Sell India Enriched Uranium

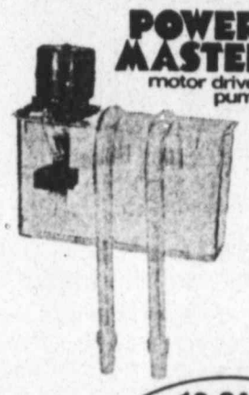

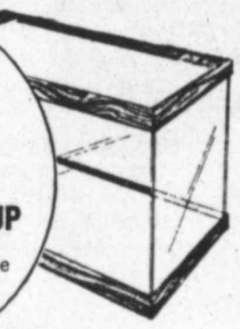

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States will sell India about 8.4 tons — 7,638 metric tons — of enriched uranium for use in its Tarapur nuclear power plant.

Opponents of the four-month supply argued India should get no more U. S. uranium because it did not agree to full international safeguards against nuclear proliferation. But the House voted Wednesday 227-181 to give the sale final approval.

GENERIC LABEL PRODUCTS

HERE ARE SOME COMMONLY ASKED QUESTIONS CONCERNING GENERIC LABELED PRODUCTS

Generic labeled products have no manufacturer's promotional costs and no fancy packaging; and since Furr's can buy standard grade products from manufacturers in larger quantities, also helps keep prices low. Then, by eliminating extras such as easy open cans and pour spouts, manufacturing costs are further reduced. Sizes, colors, fragrances and flavors are limited, realizing even more savings. Plain packaging, no advertising cost and quantity — a plain and simple way to help save food dollars.

How does the quality of Generic Labeled Products compare with name brand or Food Club?

The Food and Drug Administration establishes and regulates quality standards for food products in four categories . . . A-Fancy, B-Choice, C-Standard and Sub-Standard. Name brand products and Food Club products are classified as A-Fancy. Furr's generic products are either rated as B-Choice or C-Standard. When compared to name brands; generic labeled products may contain broken pieces and be less uniform in color and size. However, generic products offer outstanding alternatives to the higher priced products. They are especially recommended for use in casseroles, stews or those dishes where appearance is not quite so important.

Do Generic Labeled foods compare nutritionally with other products I serve my family?

They certainly do. Furr's generic labeled foods compare very favorably with similar products you may be using. Nutritional information will be found on each label whenever possible.

How should I shop for Generic Labeled Products?

As with all smart food shoppers, you are concerned with saving as much as you can on your total food bill. Make the generic labeled product section your first stop when you come to Furr's. Select those generic items and then proceed through the store to complete your shopping. With a growing selection of generic label products from which to choose, this method provides the most value for your dollar. Plain and simple.

Do all Furr's have Generic Labeled Products and how can I find them?

Furr's has generic labeled products in all of its stores. Check your own Furr's for the generic labeled products. They will be stocked in specially marked sections. Watch for our displays and save even more on your total food bill.

How much can I save on my food bill?

It all depends on you and your shopping habits. As always, Furr's concern is to help you budget your food dollars. Generic labeled products provides yet another choice — a money saving alternative. Truly, generic labeled products can help save you money. If food costs is your concern, then you owe it to yourself and your family's budget to try them. The choice is yours. Plain and simple, a lower total food bill is easier than ever before.

British Field Chases International Trio

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland (AP) — The third round of the British Open, with a field cut to 80 from its original 155, started Friday in ideal golfing weather — mild and with only the slightest breeze.

Leading the field after the first two rounds were Ben Crenshaw, Isao Aoki of Japan and Severiano Ballesteros of Spain, all on 139 — five under par for the 6,933 par 72 course. But only four strokes separated the top 22 scorers, who included former Open champions Jack Nicklaus, Arnold Palmer, Tom Watson, Tom Weiskopf and Peter Thomson of Australia.

Hubert Green, who ust made Thursday's cut with a 4-over-par 148, shot a 67 today to go one under par three rounds. Green had shot a 78 first round, followed by a 70 Thursday.

The final round, cut to the top 60 will be played Saturday.

Lee Trevino, Open winner in 1971-72 shot a 1-over-par 73. With his first-round 75 and second-round 72, this gave him an overall total of 220 — four over par.

Scores were high in the early stages, and of the first 18 home, only Green managed to get under par for the three rounds.

Ben Crenshaw, one of the three leaders at 139 after the second round, consolidated his position by starting with two par-4s. But both Aoki and Ballesteros, even with Crenshaw Thursday, dropped back a stroke after both had bogey 4s at the first.

Bob Shearer of Australia joined Crenshaw in the lead, 5 under par, by taking a birdie 3 on the second.

Coming up from behind with a 67 was Simon Owen of New Zealand. Owen had started at 145, 1 over par, and his third-round put him at 212, 4 ahead of par.

With him, and also coming through the field in the early stages, was Peter Oosterhuis of Britain. Oosterhuis, 142 after two rounds, birdied the fourth and fifth and by the seventh was 4 under par.

Nicklaus got his second birdie of the round on the fourth, but on the short eighth took a 4. He recouped on the ninth with another birdie and turned in a 2-under-par 34, 3 under par overall.

Tom Weiskopf and John Schroeder each gained a stroke in the early stages. Weiskopf, starting at 3-under 141, birdied the fourth and was 4 under by the fifth, while Schroeder recovered from his first hole bogey with birdies on the second and fifth, and by the seventh was 2 under.

Ballesteros got his dropped stroke back on the par-5 fifth to go back to 5 under par. With him were Shearer and Tom Kite, who started the day at 141 and picked up two birdies on the fifth and sixth.

Also at 5 under was Oosterhuis with a birdie on the short 11th.

But Aoki and Crenshaw dropped back. Aoki took 5 on the par 4 fourth to drop 2 strokes so far during the morning and dip to an overall 3 under par, while Crenshaw bogeyed two in a row — the par 4 third and fourth. He also was 3 under.

Andy Bean, playing his first British open, birdied twice and bogeyed twice going out in a par 36 and remained at his overnight 1-under-par. But Arnold Palmer, trying for his third Open title at the age of 48, improved his figures. Starting at 2-under 142, he bogeyed the third, but then picked up birdies at the next two holes to turn 3-under-par.

Tom Watson, the defending champion, trying for his third Open in four years, started at 3-under 141, dropped a stroke on the second but birdied both the fifth and short par-3 eighth to be 4 under.

Weiskopf joined the leaders at 5 under with a birdie 3 on the 10th, but dropped back to 4 under with a bogey 4 on the next hole.

This meant that Ballesteros, who had parred three holes after his birdie on the fifth, Oosterhuis and Kite were leading the field at 5 under.

And then they were joined by Nicklaus, making a late rush with birdies on the 14th and 15th. Nicklaus had started with a two-round figure of 141, only 1 under par. But in his first 15 holes today he had five birdies and only one bogey.

Hippos Slapped By UIL

AUSTIN (AP) — In the small town of Hutto — where there should be few secrets — a talkative janitor tipped superintendent Ike Coward that overaged boys were playing high school sports.

Thursday, the University Interscholastic League put the Class B school on two-year probation in football, basketball and track because three-sport athlete Odell Kerley was 19 and 20 his final two years of competition.

UIL director Bailey Marshall said Kerley's school record had been altered to make it appear that his birthdate was Oct. 16, 1958. His birth certificate shows his birthdate as June 16, 1957.

Marshall told the UIL state executive committee there were indications the ages of others had been changed in school records to give them more eligibility.

A player must be 19 after Sept. 1 to be eligible for sports that school year.

It said the Hippos already have forfeited the games and track victories in which Kerley took part as a junior and senior. The forfeits cost Hutto two district basketball titles, a 1977 zone title in football and district and regional victories in the 400-meter relay this year.

Coaches said Kerley was a sub halfback in football; junior sub and senior part-time starter in basketball and a member of the sprint relay team.

A motion was made for one-year probation, but it was changed to two years at Marshall's suggestion.

The committee apparently decided not to disqualify Hutto from future championship honors because it was unable to determine who had changed the records. Marshall said, however, there "were indications that students had handled the records."

Committee member Jesse Villarreal said probation means "everybody had better watch it."

"If we could find the guilty party, hanging him up by his toes—as far as I'm concerned—would be legitimate," said Marshall.

"I know that in Hutto, some people knew this youngster was too old," said Marshall. "This worries me. . . there had to be adults knowing."

Hutto had a population of only 697 in the 1970 census.

Coward, who retired June 30, reported the apparent record change to the UIL on June 5, three days after a "pretty windy" janitor who had a boy in high school told him that "overaged boys were playing."

"Once I made the discovery, I had no alternative but to do what I did" in reporting the violation, said Coward.

New superintendent Homer Jefferson said, "When the kids come back to school, it will eventually get back to me who changed the records."

"I'm shutting the gate after the horse is out, but the records will be locked," he said.

Ex-Pro Selected Fem Cage Coach

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — "I would like to teach fundamentals," said former Indiana Pacer and Purdue University guard Billy Keller when asked about goals in his new role as a girls basketball coach.

Keller, who has worked with girls previously at his summer basketball camp at Rose-Hulman Institute in Terre Haute, has been named girls basketball coach at Indianapolis Brebeuf High School.

Injured Rangers Rip Bosox 12-7

BOSTON (AP) — Maybe all the Texas Rangers have needed is a dose of good health to make their charge in the American League West.

"Our DL (disabled list) boys got seven hits," said Rangers manager Billy Hunter. "It's nice to have them back."

It was no treat for the Boston Red Sox, the AL East leaders, who were clubbed 12-7 Thursday night.

The Rangers piled up 17 hits off three Boston pitchers, including five home runs—two by previously slumping Toby Harrah, one by Bobby Bonds and solo shots by Juan Beniquez and Al Oliver.

Beniquez and Oliver, had been on the disabled list for a month. They hit their shots in the first inning off Luis Tiant, 7-2.

"I love to beat the Red Sox here. . . before the playoffs," said a hopeful Hunter, whose team had lost 10 of 13 before the All-Star break.

In fact, the Rangers are happy to beat anyone. The victory moved Texas two games above .500, 43-41, although the club has been in contention in the West along with every other team except Seattle.

"This is the kind of game that can get us going," said Oliver, the designated hitter who had been idle since June 14 with a muscle pull in his rib cage.

"I enjoyed hitting the home run off my friend Luis," said the center fielder. "This is the team that traded me."

Beniquez was shipped to Texas in 1975 for pitcher Ferguson Jenkins, who, in turn, was sent back to the Rangers last winter.

The victory went to Dock Ellis, 8-4, who seemed in control until the ninth inning. Leading 12-3, Ellis gave up a solo homer to Carlton Fisk and a two-run shot by George Scott with nobody out.

Texas reliever, Steve Comer shut off the rally and lowered his ERA to 0.90, allowing an unearned run.

"We haven't had many nights like this," said Boston manager Don Zimmer. "Every time I looked up it was Harrah. We just couldn't keep it in the park tonight."

"We haven't gotten hot yet but we will," said Harrah, hitting only .208 when the game began.

Texas' five homers tied a one-game team record. And the Rangers used singles to pile up runs in the middle innings, setting the stage for Harrah's three-run clinching shot in the seven off Allen Ripley.

Boston's Fred Lynn hit a solo homer in the fifth.

Redbud Lions Welcome Tracksters

The Lubbock Red Bud Lions Club will hold its recreational track and field meet Saturday at the Coronado High School track, and about 800 competitors are expected.

Registration will begin at 8 a.m., and the events will start at 9 a.m.

Boys and girls competition will be staged, and the various groups will be determined by each entrant's age on Jan. 1, 1978.

Age divisions will be Squirts (4-5), Pee Wee (6-7), Bantam (8-9), Midget (10-11), Junior (12-13) and Intermediate (14-15).

Each competitor may enter up to five events, and the members of each relay team must be from the same track club.

The entry fee is 50 cents per person. Price of admission is $1 for adults and 50 cents for children.

Red Remains With Celtics

NEW YORK (AP) — Red Auerbach will remain with the Boston Celtics, his wife, Dorothy, told The Associated Press today.

Auerbach, president and general manager of the National Basketball Association team, met with Madison Square Garden boss Sonny Werblin Thursday, at which time Werblin offered Auerbach the chance to become president of the New York Knicks. For personal reasons, Auerbach declined.

He was to make his decision known at a news conference in Boston this afternoon.

"It was a tremendous offer from New York and, at the age of 61, it is flattering to receive something like that," said Mrs. Auerbach, contacted at home in Washington.

"But Red has been synonomous with the Celtics for so many years and I had always hoped he would finish his career with the Celtics. I'm glad he made this decision."

Explosions Rock Fenway Park

By The Associated Press

It was another typical day in Boston's Fenway Park. . .eight home runs and a lot of stitch-popping hits.

But guess what? It wasn't the Red Sox doing most of the damage this time.

The Texas Rangers looked as irrepressible Thursday night as the hard-hitting Red Sox usually do in their colorful ballpark and beat a steady tattoo off Boston pitching.

Before it was over, the Rangers pounded five homers and three doubles among their 17 hits and had a 12-7 victory over the team fearfully nicknamed the "Boston Manglers."

"This is the kind of game that can get us going," said Texas outfielder Al Oliver. The Rangers had lost 10 of 13 games before the All-Star break.

Toby Harrah was the most persistent of the Texas hitters, belting two homers and a single and driving in five runs.

"It's good to get out of Arlington Stadium," said Harrah, who has hit below par all season, batting only .208 before the game. "It's great to come here and hit. Everyone looks forward to it. I enjoy playing here."

Orioles 8, Twins 6

Two home runs by Ken Singleton and one each by Rich Dauer and Doug DeCinces, accounting for seven runs, led Baltimore over Minnesota. The triumph ended a four-game losing streak for the Orioles and halted an eight-game winning streak by the Twins.

Mike Flanagan, 13-6, who tied New York's Ron Guidry for the most victories in the American League, had a no-hitter for 5 1/3 innings, but needed late relief help.

A's 7, Indians 3

Mitchell Page and Taylor Duncan each drove in two runs as Oakland snapped a five-game losing streak by beating Cleveland. The A's scored four unearned runs off loser Rick Waits in the second inning and added two more runs in the sixth on a leadoff home run by Dave Revering and an another unearned run.

Winning pitcher John Johnson, 6-5, gave up a two-run homer to Gary Alexander in the sixth, his 18th of the season. Dave Heaverlo took over for Johnson after he walked leadoff batter Andy Thornton in the eighth inning and blanked the Indians over the final two innings for his sixth save of the season.

Brewers 13, Royals 2

Robin Yount's bases-loaded triple capped a four-run first inning, while Gorman Thomas hit a two-run homer and Don Money added a bases-empty shot as Milwaukee bombed Kansas City.

Yount drove in four runs and Thomas and Jim Wohlford knocked in three apiece and Money lashed five hits and scored three times to back the four-hit pitching of Mike Caldwell, 10-5, as the Brewers won their fourth straight game.

White Sox 6, Yankees 1

Veteran knuckleballer Wilbur Wood hurled a six-hitter, retiring 15 batters in a row at one stretch, to lead Chicago over New York. Wood, 10-5, allowed five singles, only one after the third inning, and Reggie Jackson's 14th home run.

"I was throwing the ball good," said Wood, "although Reggie hit a knuckler with no movement on it."

Angels 5, Blue Jays 0

Don Aase, a last-minute substitution for Chris Knapp, who jumped the club in a contract dispute, pitched a four-hitter to lead California over Toronto. Knapp was placed on the disqualified list when he failed to report to the park. His agent had been unsuccessful in obtaining a raise after the right-hander compiled a 10-6 record at the All-Star break.

Aase, 7-4, struck out six and walked three in throwing his first shutout as an Angel. Dave Lemanczyk, 3-11, took the loss.

"I was stunned," said Aase when asked his reaction to learning that he was going to pitch against the Blue Jays. "They asked me if I wanted to pitch. I thought they were joking."

Mariners 5, Tigers 4

Larry Milbourne's run-scoring single capped a four-run, eighth-inning rally that carried Seattle over Detroit. The victory went to reliever Enrique Romo, 7-2. Jim Crawford, 2-3, took the loss in relief.

Leon Roberts' three-run homer, his 12th of the season, tied the score at 4-4 in the eighth inning before Milbourne's game-winning hit.

Entry fee is $12 for persons who have not registered. Some tee times for Saturday afternoon are available. Persons can call Bill Bruffey, 747-2721, or Ken Field, 762-0241, for a tee time.

Prizes will be awarded in each of six flights, as well as overall prizes to be handed out at completion of the day's marathon. All prizes have been donated, thus freeing the entry fee cash for the scholarship fund.

The flights are set up on basis of tee-off times, and scores in each flight are figured on the bankers' handicap formula. In each flight, prizes will go to the first and second placers using gross score, first and second net scores, lowest number of putts—and the highest gross score.

Overall, there will be a medalist award and championship trophy, low gross and net scorers among NAA members, plus prizes for the longest drive on the 13th fairway and the shortest drive on No. 10.

Also, each entrant is eligible for a series of prizes to be given away following the entire tournament. These will include sets of woods and irons, golf bags, golf shoes, golf balls and other golf-related equipment.

HARDCOURT CROWN

CLEVELAND (AP) — The National Hardcourt Amateur Tennis Championship has opened with unranked Maria Rothschild of New Jersey defeating fourth-seeded Sherry Acker from the University of Florida in straight sets. In the men's opening match, No. 1 seed John Sadri, the National Collegiate Athletic Association's runnerup from North Carolina State University, defeated Jack Conlan of Warren, Ohio, 6-4, 6-2.

MORE FOR $3498.
THE TOYOTA COROLLA 2-DOOR SEDAN. GIVES YOU YOUR MONEY'S WORTH AND MORE. TOYOTA'S HIGHEST GAS MILEAGE AND LOWEST PRICE IN ONE CAR.

More durability. Corollas aren't bolted together like some vehicles. They're welded into one solid body. You'll notice the "tightness" of welded unitized body construction when you examine a Toyota, drive a Toyota and own a Toyota.

More fuel economy. The Toyota Corolla 2-Door Sedan's combined EPA mileage is 39 mpg, 21 miles per gallon more than the national fleet standard for all cars. In 1978 EPA tests, the Toyota Corolla 2-Door Sedan is rated at 46 mpg highway, 34 mpg city. These 1978 EPA ratings are estimates. Your mileage will vary depending on your driving habits and your car's condition and equipment.

4-speed synchromesh manual transmission

Fully transistorized ignition system

Power boosted flo-thru ventilation

Hi-back vinyl front bucket seats

Rust protecting fender liners

More and less. The Toyota Corolla 2-Door Sedan featured offers all these "Toyota mores" and costs less than any other Toyota. At $3498* it gives you Toyota toughness at the lowest price possible. *Based on manufacturer's suggested retail price. Price does not include tax, license, transportation. California emissions or optional equipment.

Power-assisted front disc brakes

MacPherson strut front suspension

More confidence. More and more people are buying Toyotas, finding out that Toyotas are built better than they thought possible. More and more people discover why we can say, "If you can find a better built small car than a Toyota...buy it."

MORE NOW. RIGHT NOW.
Inflation. As long as it's with us all prices will continue to go up—including cars. So if you're thinking about buying a new car, think about buying a Toyota now. There will probably never be a better time than right now, to get more.

YOU ASKED FOR IT. YOU GOT IT.

Struggling Yanks, Martin Bow To Owner's Wishes

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON

NEW YORK (AP) — If there was ever any doubt about who calls the shots for the New York Yankees—and there really wasn't—it is all out in the open now.

The name (no surprise) is owner George M. Steinbrenner.

"He owns the team," slugger Reggie Jackson said Thursday following the Yankees' latest brouhaha—as well as the latest defeat, a 6-1 loss to the Chicago White Sox. "When George comes down and says what he's gonna do—if he tells me to go home, I go home. In my home I'm the boss, and if you don't like it—quit."

That essentially was what Steinbrenner told his stumbling, injury-riddled troops in a pregame clubhouse meeting in which he lashed out at what he called a lack of discipline and too much griping. He said from now on club rules would be enforced "with no exceptions."

Earlier, Steinbrenner met with manager Billy Martin, club president Al Rosen and general manager Cedric Tallis and announced a series of lineup changes with Jackson becoming a part-time designated hitter—at least temporarily—sore-legged catcher Thurman Munson moving to the outfield and outfielder Gary Thomasson getting a shot as an everyday player. Rookie Mike Heath will be the No. 1 catcher.

There also was a report that Steinbrenner offered to allow Martin to resign—staying with the club on a longterm, consulting basis—if his health had become too much of a problem. Martin, who has suffered from a lingering virus infection and almost fainted before a game in Minnesota, declined, and that was that, the New York Daily News said.

"I'm not a quitter," Martin told the News. "I want to try to win this thing. I owe it to Yankee fans all over the country to stay and see if I can turn things around."

The upshot of the changes is that Lou Piniella, the team's leading hitter, and Roy White will ride the bench for a spell while Jackson DH's against right-handers and selected lefties. Those involved followed Steinbrenner's orders without griping, but that didn't mean they were happy.

"I've been doing what I've been doing for 11 years—hitting .270, hitting some home runs and driving in some runs," Jackson said. "If that's not good enough, then they've got the wrong guy here.

"I'm gonna do all I can, the best I can. I've got no demands. . .no gripes. If I've got a complaint, I'll talk to George like he said. He's paying me a lot of money, so he can tell me what to do whether I agree with it or not.

"My opinion doesn't mean much. I don't care to confer on Reggie Jackson, except to say that I'll hit somewhere around .270, somewhere around 30 home runs, somewhere around 100 RBIs, somewhere around 120 strikeouts. But the less I play against left-handers, the worse I'll do. They made the investment in me and I'm making no demands, no threats.

"When you're me, nothing really surprises you. I went to a movie last night and got sued," said Jackson, who was involved in a scuffle with a woman at a movie theater Wednesday night. "All I know is that everybody who's come here has played right field, except me. Maybe I'll just moonlight and sell candy."

"It's his ballclub; he's paying the salaries," said Piniella. "What choice have I got? Naturally I'd like to play, but they want to see what certain people can do. But I don't think I was playing that badly. I don't think I was disgracing myself hitting .300 all year."

"There's a lot I can say, but there's no sense in going through all that," said White, who made a fuss about lack of playing time earlier in the season and then hit well when he was given a shot. "When I played regularly, I did what I was supposed to do. It's not going to help to go around hollering and screaming about not playing. I did that earlier and I proved what I could do. I saw George just to re-evaluate my status and he assured me that nothing is permanent."

"There are going to be some changes made," he said.

"There is going to be a sense of discipline brought about and strengthened and the rules will be enforced with no exceptions. I told them I was not going to lie down an die like a dog and neither are they. I told them I expect them to accept whatever role they are given without griping.

"I want no griping and no running to the manager because someone's not playing. I want each player to give 110 percent, even if he's sitting on the bench. If they choose not to accept that, I'll try to accommodate them and send them elsewhere. That's not a threat, merely a statement.

"I'm not pushing the panic button and we're absolutely not giving up on this season. I'm no cure-all and we're not going to turn it 180 degrees overnight, but we're going to try it this way.

"This is no condemnation of Billy. This morning's meeting was the best I've ever had with Billy and he was completely amenable. If he had said no to any of these moves they would not have been done."

Martin, who received more bad news when pitcher Don Gullett suddenly showed up with a recurrence of a lingering shoulder problem, spouted the party line, insisting that he "listened to the proposal, it sounded reasonable and I'm willing to try it."

But he didn't seem overjoyed and after the game the following repartee took place with a newsman:

"Are you happy with the moves?"

"I'm using them, aren't I, so I must be happy."

"But do you wholeheartedly endorse them?"

"I answered the question the way I wanted." Pause. "Okay, I wholeheartedly endorse them, does that satisfy you?"

NFL Wants No Multi-Team Bosses

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The National Football League has voted to bar owners from owning teams in other sports, the Los Angeles Times reported in today's editions.

The Times quoted NFL sources as saying that when made final, the action would require owners to dispose of either their football interests or other sports holdings.

The Times said that in the case of Jack Kent Cooke, he would have to dispose of either his majority interest in the NFL Washington Redskins or his interests in the Los Angeles Lakers of the National Basketball Association and Los Angeles Kings of the National Hockey League.

An amendment to the NFL constitution and bylaws has been prepared to formalize long-standing league policy prohibiting NFL owners from owning teams in other sports because of potential conflicts of interest, the Times reported.

The NFL will call a special meeting in August or September to ratify the amendment, the Times said, adding that at least 24 of the 28 teams are believed to be in favor. Ratification requires 21 votes.

If Cooke or other NFL owners failed to dispose of their non-NFL holdings by 1980, they would be subject to heavy fines, the Times said.

The Times story said that a formula favored by many in the league would fine violators $25,000 a month for three months, $50,000 a month for the subsequent three months and $75,000 a month thereafter. To insure collection, the Times said, the amendment would empower Commissioner Pete Rozelle to withhold payments due the clubs from national television receipts.

The amendment also applies to families of NFL owners, the Times said. Thus, San Francisco and Miami are affected, along with Washington and Kansas City.

Ongais Enters Half Of Race Twin Bill

CAMBRIDGE JUNCTION, Mich. (AP) — It should come as good news to some of the participants in Sunday's twin 200-mile U.S. Auto Club races here that Danny Ongais is only competing in half the program.

Ongais, a three-time winner in eight races this season on the USAC Indianapolis car circuit, is the defending champion and a solid bet to repeat in Sunday's Indy car 200-miler. But the 36-year-old Californian will leave the 100-lap stock car race up for grabs.

Ongais has really shaken up the championship division in 1978, winning the pole position five times, leading every race and winning three.

At the distance of 200 miles, Ongais is almost unbeatable. In the longer races, reliability has been a problem — Ongais has the ability to drive his car faster, longer than the car has the ability to go.

Ongais, the Rookie of the Year last year after leading six of 13 races he entered as well as winning one race — this race, in fact — started off the season by winning a 200-miler at Ontario, Calif.

Ongais led the Indianapolis 500 and Schaefer 500 each until about the 300-mile mark when his car broke down. He led the first 61 laps at Milwaukee until another breakdown.

"With better reliability, he could be eight-for-eight. It's been years since anyone has dominated like that. And he just came on the scene last year," marveled a USAC official.

Mentioned Briefly

GOLF

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland — Severiano Ballesteros double bogeyed the 17th hole and ended up tied with Ben Crenshaw and Isao Aoki for the second-round lead in the 107th British Open Golf Championship. All three are at 139, five-under-par. One stroke off the pace were Bob Shearer of Australia and Gary Cullen of England, who turned in the best round of the tournament with a 5-under-par 67. Defending champion Tom Watson was tied for fifth at 141 with Tom Kite, Tom Weiskopf, Jumbo Ozaki and Tsuneyuki Nakajima.

COAL VALLEY, Ill. — Mike Morley and Fred Marti shared the lead at 5-under-par 66 after the first round of the $150,000 Quad Cities Open golf tournament. Roger Maltbie was among seven players 1 stroke back at 67. Tied with Maltbie were Victor Regalado, Randy Erskine, Don Iverson, Mike Reid, Jack Renner and D.A. Weibring.

TENNIS

CINCINNATI — Top-seeded Eddie Dibbs scored a 6-1, 6-3 triumph over Eric Friedler in the $125,000 Western Tennis Championships. Earlier, Eric Iskersky scored a 3-6, 6-3, 6-2 victory over seventh-seeded Pat DuPre. In other matches, third-seeded Harold Solomon defeated Butch Seewagen 7-6, 6-1; Australian Paul McNamara beat Eliot Teltscher 4-6, 6-0, 7-6; Francisco Gonzalez beat sixth-seeded Nick Saviano, 5-7, 7-6, 6-3 and Raul Ramirez, Mexico, eliminated Mike Cahill of Waukesha, Wis., 7-6, 6-1.

NEWPORT, R.I. — South Africa's Bernie Mitton upset top-seeded Arthur Ashe 6-4, 6-4 in the Hall of Fame Tennis Championship. Seventh-seeded Bob Giltinan of Australia beat Russell Simpson 6-4, 6-3. Mitton will face Giltinan in the semifinals.

NEW YORK — Vitas Gerulaitis and Ilie Nastase won their third straight matches in the $300,000 Forest Hills Invitational. Gerulaitis survived a scare from Victor Pecci of Paraguay before winning 6-4, 1-6, 7-5 and Nastase downed Dick Stockton 5-7, 7-5, 6-3. John McEnroe upped his record to 2-0 in the round-robin event by beating Billy Martin 7-5, 4-6, 7-5. John Alexander beat Peter Fleming 6-2, 2-6, 6-3.

YACHTING

NCAA Expands Cage Tourney

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The NCAA Division I Basketball Tournament Committee has recommended Albequerque as the site of the 1983 basketball finals, and Seattle as host city in 1984.

The committee also recommended Thursday that the field of teams in championship play be expanded in 1979 from 32 to 40.

The recommendations will go to the NCAA Executive Committee which meets Aug. 10-11 in Colorado Springs, Colo.

Wayne Duke, Big 10 commissioner and the committee's chairman, said the expansion is to increase competition in the tournament, which began in 1939.

Duke said the 1978 tournament drew 233,362 fans, second only to 1977 tournament action. He said the tournament netted $6,088,955.11 for the NCAA, half of which was paid in varying amounts to participating teams.

Effective with the 1980 championship, the committee recommended automatic qualification be granted those allied conferences playing a single-round schedule in a post-season tournament or a double round-robin tournament.

Any newly formed Div. I conference also may apply for automatic qualification after five years under the committee's proposal, said Duke.

Duke said first-round byes would be granted the 16 conferences with the best win-loss record in tournament competition over the past five years. The remaining seven automatic qualifiers in Div. I and all independent institutions and second conference representatives selected for the championship will be considered as at-large qualifiers.

All seeding will be done by the committee at its March 1979 meeting, Duke said.

There shall be 10 teams per region. Six teams will receive byes and the remaining four teams will be paired in the first round of the tournament.

These winners will advance to the second round to join the 24 teams awarded byes to complete the 40 team bracket, Duke explained.

Beginning with the 1979 chmpionship, two teams from the same conference may not compete against each other in the finals. Duke said two teams from the same conference would be paired prior to the final.

The 16 automatic conference qualifiers receiving byes are the Atlantic Coast, the Eastern Athletic Association, Southern, and ECAC—New England in the East region; the Big Ten, Sun Belt, SEC, and Mid-American in the Mideast region; the Big 8, Southwest Conference, Metro-7 and Missouri Valley in the Midwest region; and the Pacific-10, Pacific Coast Athletic Association, WAC, and the West Coast Athletic Conference in the West region.

The remaining automatic qualifiers include the ECAC—Upstate New York; ECAC—Metropolitan New York-New Jersey, Ivy Group, and East Coast, Ohio Valley, Southland and Big Sky conferences.

The committee also selected sites for 1980 tournament play. In the first round, East teams will compete at Greensboro, N.C., and Providence, R.I.; Mideast, at Purdue University and Western Kentucky University; Midwest, at Nebraska and North Texas State University; and West, at Arizona State and Weber State in Ogden, Utah.

Regionals will be at Philadephia's Spectrum in the East; at Rupp Arena, Lexington, Ky., in the Mideast; at the Summit, Houston, in the Midwest; and at the University of Arizona in the West.

Lubbock Speedway Sets Saturday Night Change

Automobile racing at Lubbock Speedway, up to now a regular Friday night event, this week will switch to a Saturday night format in an effort to bolster sagging attendance.

"I think it has been inconvenient for people to go to races on Friday night," said Don Zahn, track owner, in explaining the move. "I know that a lot of our spectators are people who work on Saturdays; and, too, there are other conflicting Friday night activities."

Special events — such as a West Texas championship race and an Independence Holiday race featuring fireworks — have drawn well at the southside paved oval, but they also have come on Sundays or preceding holidays, Zahn pointed out.

"We want to make it possible for people to see quality racing at a time that's convenient for them," he concluded.

As part of the change, the track will offer a revised pricing schedule which puts the adult fare at $2 and that for children 6 to 12 at $1. The backstretch parking area allowing in-car viewing also will be a buck cheaper at $3 per adult.

In still another phase, sprint car racing will be put back on a weekly — as opposed to once a month — basis to complement the regular program of late model, street stock car and Volkswagen races.

Zahn, himself a sprint car driver, said he felt that the switch to a Saturday night operation would enable more drivers to make the show. This week's program will mark the initial appearance of Marvin Fillip's sprinter from San Angelo as well as Fillip's Camaro late model. Richard Wheat will field a new sprinter Saturday night as part of what Zahn hopes will be a 10 to 12 car field.

Asked if he felt the conflict with Lubbock Speed Bowl, which also runs on Saturday night, might diminish either the crowd or the lineup of street stocks, Zahn observed that for the most part each track had a different following.

"Only a few of the street stock drivers try to race at both tracks, and I don't think this will cause a shortage of cars at either one; it's difficult to maintain a car for both paved and dirt tracks and race on consecutive nights," he said.

In his second year of ownership of the track, Zahn has made extensive improvements at the 14-year-old layout. The paving was renewed last year and this year the pit area has been graded and caliche added preparatory to anticipated paving. Similar spectator area improvements have been made.

Racing will start at 8:30 p.m. Saturday, with a minimum of 16 races — for sprints, late models, street stocks and Volkswagens — in store. Lubbock Speedway is 3½ miles south of the Traffic Circle on U.S. 87 and is reached via the FM 1585 exit.

Oilers Preach Togetherness

SAN ANGELO (AP) — Houston Oilers defensive coordinator Ed Biles says he's not worried about two offense-oriented drafts or his cornerbacks — togetherness will be the key for 1978.

Biles notes that his front seven plus the two starting cornerbacks will be starting their fourth season intact.

"The great defenses have to play together at least that long, maybe six or seven years," Biles said. "We know each other now. We're getting better. We have a chance to be a great defense."

Biles said despite fan criticism last season, he likes the cornerback situation.

"The public thinks our cornerbacking is more of a problem than we think it is," Biles said. "If you check with fans of the league's 28 teams, you'd be told that at least 22 teams had secondary problems."

Biles said only 12 touchdown were thrown against the Oilers last season and the defenses' 28 interceptions was third in the league behind Pittsburgh's 31 and Baltimore's 30.

"Does that sound like a cornerback problem? It sounds more to me like cornerback is a position where people find fault," Biles said.

Expansion Plan For Local Sporting Goods Store

Cleveland Athletics announced this week plans for 4,000 sq. ft. additional warehouse space. Joe Lombard, Store Mgr. stated that due to plans for larger inventories for soccer, softball & baseball the new two story structure was needed. Work is to begin in early July at the 34th Street location between Slide Rd. & Loop 289.

Winless Marti Leads 'Cities'

COAL VALLEY, Ill. (AP) — Fred Marti, who has labored 14 years on the PGA tour without a victory, was a co-leader with defending champion Mike Morley going into the second round today of the $150,000 Ed McMahon-Quad Cities Open.

"I missed three greens, but I got the ball up and down with nice putts and when you do that, it helps your confidence," said Marti, who had five birdies and no bogeys for a 66.

Morley, who has not played well since early this year, had a round similar to Marti's with five birdies, despite driving with a spare club he had previously used only on the practice tee.

"I'd used that old driver for five years. That driver and I were pretty close," said Morley.

"But maybe I should have broken it years ago," he joked. "This one is about six ounces heavier and I think I hit the ball a little farther with it."

Morley, who had sent to Phoenix for a backup driver similar to the one he broke, said he'd stick with the heavier spare that helped him Thursday.

"I nearly lost all my clubs after the U.S. Open," he said. "I got on a plane to go fishing in Alaska and my clubs got on a plane for the Amana pro-am and ended up in a hotel room in Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

"After about three days, they called my wife to tell her where they were. She had about panicked by then, but I didn't know anything about it."

One shot back at 67 were Roger Maltbie, who won this tournament in 1975, Victor Regalado, Randy Erskine, Don Iverson, Jack Renner, D.A. Weibring and Mike Reid.

Altogether, 47 pros broke par over the relatively short Oakwood Country Club Course, a 6,561-yard, par-71 layout. The field will be trimmed to the low 70 scorers and ties Friday.

Artie McNickle, who was in contention at the Greater Milwaukee Open a week ago until he soared to a 76 Sunday, settled down and shot 1-under-par 70.

"I guess I started to speed Sunday, and after one little bad break I went to pieces," said McNickle. "Then the frustration caught up with me and I suppose I dogged it toward the end.

"All I know is you can't win a tournament on Thursday, but you can sure lose it on Sunday."

Poke Rookies See Peacock Score Thrice

FULLERTON, Calif. (UPI)— The Los Angeles Rams rookied, led by running-back Elvis Peacock, scored five touchdowns and a field goal Thursday in an hour-and-a-half scrimmage against the Dallas Cowboys rookie defense squad.

Peacock, the No. 1-draft choice from Oklahoma rushed for three touchdowns on short yardage, and Teddy Farmer, a free agent from Oregon, ran for one.

The fifth Ram touchdown was scored by Ron Smith, wide receiver from San Diego State, on a 24-yard pass from quarterback Carlos Brown, a third-year-man from University of the Pacific.

Peacock carried the ball 20 times and gained 94 yards. Farmer carried twice for 29 yards.

Coach George Allen was pleased with the performance of the rookies and said:

"It was a good scrimmage. It was just what we needed at this time. Everybody participated that was able and we made a lot of progress in a short time. This was most important to us and also important was that we had no injuries.

"I was impressed with Ron Smith, who caught everything we threw at him along with the runners, especially Peacock and Farmer. We worked hard and we're going to continue to work hard."

In Thousand Oaks, the Cowboys' second-round draft choice Todd Christenson carried 15 times for 81 yards in an hour-and-a-half offensive scrimmage with the Rams rookies.

Christensen, a 6-foot-2, 225-pound running back from Brigham Young, also caught three passes for 53 yards as the Dallas offense struggled with rookie mistakes in their first summer meeting against an outside opponent.

Free agent Ken Smith of North Texas State was the top passer for Dallas, with three completions in four attempts for 51 yards and scored the lone touchdown for the Cowboys on a 1-yard quarterback sneak.

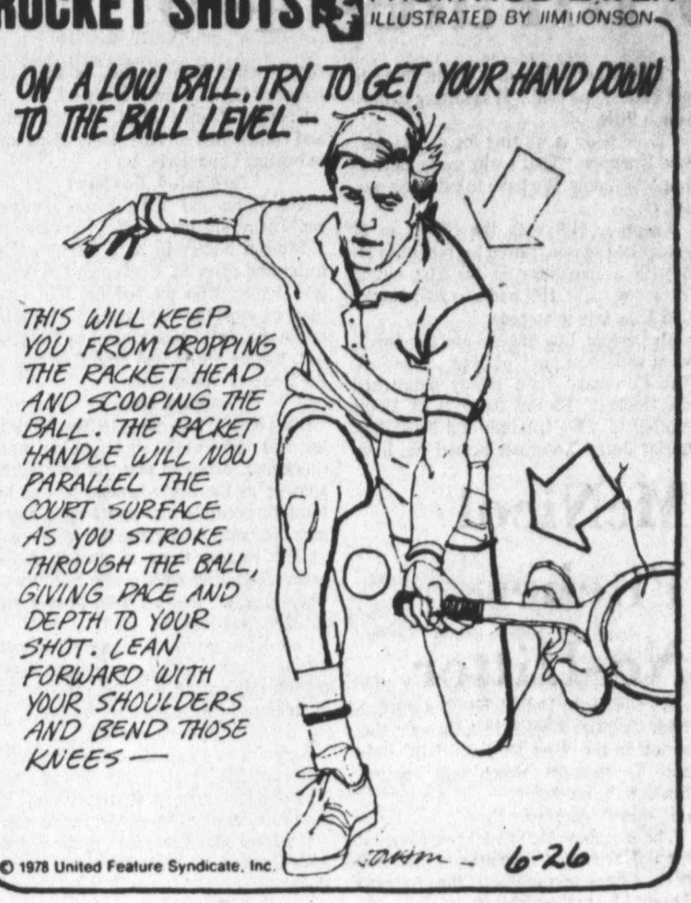

Also for Dallas, second-year quarterback Clenn Carano hit eight of 17 for 96 yards.

SERVICES SLATED

GRUNDY CENTER, Iowa (AP) — Funeral services are scheduled here Saturday for Delmar "Del" Williams, 56, a former St. Louis Cardinals baseball player. Williams died Wednesday in a Waterloo hospital of complications following a stroke. He will be buried Saturday at Cape Giradeau, Mo.

Lopez Given Nod In Borden Tourney

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — JoAnne Carner takes nothing away from Nancy Lopez's great year, but she offers an explanation for part of the rookie sensation's success.

The established stars of the Ladies Professional Golf Association have been mired in off-years at the same time.

Kathy Whitworth, Judy Rankin, Sandra Palmer, Sandra Haynie and Carol Mann, the game's top five all-time money winners before 1978, had collected a combined $3 million and 189 victories.

All are active in 1978 save Miss Haynie, with these results: No victories and earnings of $70,000, little more than half of Miss Lopez's money-leading total.

Mrs. Carner, seventh on the all-time money list with more than $443,000 going into this season, shook her head.

"I've never seen a year like it," she said. "We're like the Yankees — all the good hitters are in a slump at once. You don't know when the Palmers, the Rankins, the Whitworths are going to break out."

Miss Lopez's scores in her seven victories this year support Mrs. Carner's claim that the anticipated big guns have been silenced.

Five of Miss Lopez's totals have been higher than the 1977 winner in the same event. In all, she's been a combined 13 shots higher than last year's champions in the same tournaments.

Mrs. Carner has survived the superstars slump. She had won three times going into the $85,000 Borden LPGA Tournament that began today at Riviera Country Club.

Even though Miss Lopez is back on tour this week, Mrs. Carner likes her chances of winning a second consecutive title in this event that carries first prize of $12,750.

Her own game is near its zenith after a third-place tie with Penny Pulz at Wheeling, W.Va., last week.

Ex-Raider Reaches Trans-Miss Quarters

DALLAS (AP) — John Shackleford, a 38-year-old IBM executive from Austin, looked out of place this week at Brook Hollow Golf Course where he was trying to qualify for the Trans-Miss amateur championship.

The three college players in his foursome were having contortions, calling their balls names or throwing clubs when misfortune occurred. One player threw his putter 125 feet on one green and broke his 6-iron against a tree two holes later.

"I used to do stuff like that 20 years ago," said Shackleford, the only one of the four who made it to today's third round.

He had his hands full Thursday with Oklahoma State's Jim Woodward, who birdied the first two holes. Shackleford finally got even at No. 12, went ahead at No. 15 and won 1-up, as both shot about even par.

"I just did the best I could, a stroke at a time, and hoped experience would overcome youth," said Shackleford, a former Texas Tech golfer who turned pro and toured the pro circuit for two years.

He qualified for the tour in 1968 with Hale Irwin and Larry Hinson, then applied for reinstatement as an amateur in 1970 to spend more time with his family. He gave up golf for six years.

Oklahoma State's Bob Tway and Lindy Miller won easily Thursday and marched toward a possible meeting in Saturday's semifinals.

Tway, the medalist in qualifying rounds, ousted Scott Fitzgerald of San Antonio, 7 and 6, and Miller, the pretournament favorite, defeated Mike Hughett of Oral Roberts University 5 and 4.

Doug Clarke of Stanford, the 1976 Trans-Miss champion, beat Mark O'Meara of Long Beach State 3 and 2 despite not having his putter the first six holes. He holed a 30-foot birdie with his 2-iron on No. 3 and had a two-hole lead by the time he retrieved his putter after the sixth hole.

Battling Clarke today in a feature match was Wake Forest's Gary Pinns, who was down three holes with four to play but rallied to beat USC's Joe Flood 1-up in 19 holes.

Lubbock's Rex Robertson advanced in the president's flight by defeating Bill Wade 3-1. He played Jim Goss of Dallas this morning. Robertson had missed qualifying for the championship flight by a stroke.

Thursday's results:

Bob Tway, Marietta, Ga., def. Scott Fitzgerald, San Antonio, 7 and 6; Wilson Schoellkopf, Dallas, def. Joey Mooneyham, Wharton, 4 and 3; Jimmy Johnson, Roanoke, def. Britt Harrison, Beaumont, 1-up; Craig Steinberg, Tarzana, Calif., def. Andy Blossom, Stockton, Calif., 2 and 1.

Giants Roll, Clip Pirates 4-0

By The Associated Press

The San Francisco Giants' record is "top of the charts" in the National League.

A five-hitter by Bob Knepper helped San Francisco to its fifth victory in seven games, a 4-0 triumph over the Pittsburgh Pirates Thursday night. Now the first-place Giants, who have finished no higher than third the last six seasons, have the best record in the NL—and a widening lead over Los Angeles and Cincinnati.

It started in February, when San Francisco committed itself to ending the string of disappointments.

"In spring training you could tell," said Hill, who had a pair of RBI singles against the Pirates. "Everybody wanted to play. We wanted to get a lead and quit hearing this fourth-and fifth-place stuff."

They've been no worse than third since May 10, and have every intention of keeping it that way, says manager Joe Altobelli.

"I think our ball club is on the move to get better," he said. "It's starting to blossom a little."

"Everybody is waiting for us to fold," said Knepper. "That's why every game is important now. We have to establish ourselves."

Knepper, 11-9 with the Giants in 27 games last season, raised his record to 11-5 with a five-hitter in his 21st outing Thursday night. Hill had two RBI singles and Mike Ivie homered.

Meanwhile, Los Angeles and Cincinnati went with their pitching aces. . . and lost. The Cardinals' John Denny outpitched the Dodgers' Tommy John as St. Louis cruised to a 6-1 triumph and New York hurler Jerry Koosman bested his long-time friend, Tom Seaver, as the Mets trimmed the Cincinnati Reds 4-2.

Cardinals 6, Dodgers 1

Ken Reitz and Mike Tyson smacked run-scoring singles and Ted Simmons hit a two-run homer to back Denny's five-hitter and carry St. Louis past Los Angeles. Denny, who pitched his 10th complete game of the campaign, lost his shutout in the ninth when singles by Bill Russell, Reggie Smith and Ron Cey pushed the Dodgers' run across.

Mets 4, Reds 2

Doug Flynn, who came to New York in the deal that sent the star right-hander to Cincinnati, drove in one run and scored another as the Mets handed Seaver his third consecutive loss and helped Koosman, 3-9, snap a six-game losing streak.

"The biggest thing is getting in the groove," said Koosman, who hadn't won since May 4. "Beating Tom Seaver and the Reds just tops that off."

Pete Rose extended his career-longest hitting streak to 26 games—tops in the majors this season and one short of the team record—with a single and double.

Expos 6, Astros 0

Gary Carter's two-run double capped a four-run Montreal sixth inning and backed a five-hitter by Ross Grimsley, 12-6, in carrying the Expos past the Astros.

Padres 5, Cubs 2

Rookie first baseman Broderick Perkins drove in two runs with a single and his first major league home run to power the Padres and Gaylord Perry, 10-4, past the Cubs.

Perkins connected in the fourth off Rick Reuschel, 8-6, and sparked a four-run sixth with his single. Perry retired the first 16 batters he faced.

McNicol Pitches No-Hitter

A no-hitter by Bob McNicol of the Lubbock Chaps highlighted Thursday night's action in the West Regional NBC Baseball Tournament which will continue through the weekend.

Play is at Mackenzie Park.

The southpaw McNicol threw a one-hitter and struck out six batters, as the Lubbock Texans 10-0 in the nightcap.

Don Reynolds and Larry Green each had two hits, with Reynolds and Max Martin driving in 2 runs apiece during the rout.

The Chaps' scored three times in the first inning and six times in the third, with five Texan errors in those frames aiding the cause.

The only hit the Texans got was a third-inning single by the No. 9 hitter, Julian Flores, a clean shot over the shortstop's head.

Prior to that no-hitter, John Campbell threw a six-hitter and fanned ten batters as the Lubbock Z's nudged the Lubbock Indians 4-2.

Kenny Toney was the only Indians to solve Campbell's offerings, as he had three hits, including a 2-run triple in the fourth, which momentarily knotted the game.

The Z's jumped in front in the second inning on a single, a walk, three stolen bases and Marlin Hamilton's 2-run single.

After Toney's triple tied the game in the fourth, a single, walk, two stolen bases and a balk—along with Jim Fanin's 2-run single—wrapped up the scoring.

Toney pitched four innings in relief, allowing only one hit, no walks and fanned five. Campbell issued four walks and allowed half the Indians' hits in the last two innings.

Tonight's action will begin at 6:30 p.m. when the Lubbock Rebels stake on the Lubbock Bulls. At 8:30 p.m., the Lubbock Cardinals will face the Town Draw Brewers.

Tennis-Ball Squabble Affects WCT Tourney

NEW YORK (AP) — A truce of sorts has been reached in the great tennis ball controversy at the $300,000 Forest Hills Invitational, while two of its leading contenders prepared to play each other tonight some 2,500 miles away.

Vitas Gerulaitis and Ilie Nastase both raised their records to 3-0 with victories Thursday night in this round-robin chase for a $100,000 first prize at the West Side Tennis Club. Today they boarded a plane for Las Vegas, where they will be on opposite sides of the net in tonight's World Team Tennis All-Star Match.

After playing their singles set they'll head back to New York, arriving Saturday morning. The semifinals at the Invitational will be held Saturday afternoon and evening.

Whether either Gerulaitis or Nastase will have to compete in the afternoon has not yet been determined.

"I wish we could play the set here and just tell them the score," Nastase said of the commitment to WTT. "It would save us both a lot of time."

As for the tennis balls, tournament director Gene Scott gave the competitors in three of Thursday's four matches an option of using the original ball selected for this tournament, the Spalding 56, or the less lively Spalding Davis Cup. Just about all the players competing here have complained about the original balls being too bouncy and hard to control, thus producing less than top-grade tennis.

Scott said he would make a decision prior to today's matches on which balls would be used for the rest of the tournament.

"I waited three days to see if they could adjust," said Scott. "Obvously there's still a problem. All I'm concerned about now is the fairest possible conditions for the players."

Nastase, the player-coach of the Los Angeles Strings, who had $7,000 deducted from his paycheck for missing a WTT match Wednesday night, outfought Dick Stockton 5-7, 7-5, 6-3 Thursday night to assure himself a place in the semifinals.

Stockton was leading 5-4 in the second set and serving for the match when he became involved in a verbal exchange with part of the pro-Nastase crowd of 6,885, largest of the seven sessions to date. "This is a tennis match, not a football game," complained Stockton. "It got out of control."

Gerulaitis survived a scare before defeating Victor Pecci of Paraguay 6-4, 1-6, 7-5 in the second night match.

Pecci, charging the net effectively and also hitting sparkling passing shots, won seven games in a row to lead Gerulaitis 2-0 in the third set before the tournament's No. 1 seed recovered to beat the little-known 22-year-old Paraguayan.

In afternoon play, 19-year-old John McEnroe beat Billy Martin 7-5, 4-6, 7-5 and John Alexander downed Peter Fleming 6-2, 2-6, 6-3.

The remaining two semifinalists will be determined today and tonight. Pecci, 1-1, meets Phil Dent, 1-1, and McEnroe, 2-0, opposes Wojtek Fibak, 2-0, in the afternoon session and Martin, 0-2, takes on John Newcombe, 0-2, and Alexander, 1-1, faces Stockton, 1-1, at night.

Lubbock East, Slaton To Vie

SLATON (Special)—Slaton defeated Levelland 5-3 Thursday night in a losers'-bracket game in the District 3 (13-15-year-olds) Babe Ruth League Tournament.

Slaton will play undefeated Lubbock East tonight at 6:30. If Lubbock East wins, it will win the tournament championship. A Slaton victory would force a second game for the title, and it would immediately follow the first contest.

Lubbock East had moved into the finals with a 10-5 win over Levelland Wednesday night.

Cepeda Admits Guilt, Plans To Tell All In Book

EGLIN AIR FORCE BASE, Fla. (AP) — Admitting his guilt, former major league baseball player Orlando Cepeda says he has no regrets and plans to tell the full story behind his marijuana conviction in a book he is writing in prison.

"I made a mistake, but I didn't do it because I was going to sell the stuff," the 40-year-old Cepeda said from the minimum security prison in an interview published Thursday in the Miami News.

Until recently, Cepeda maintained he was innocent of the drug charge stemming from his arrest Dec. 12, 1975, when federal agents found 160 pounds of Colombian marijuana valued at about $60,000 in his car.

The arrest came after Cepeda, who was the National League's 1958 Rookie of the Year and 1967 Most Valuable Player, and a friend put two suitcases and boxes containing the illegal drug in the vehicle.

"I haven't done anything to anybody," he said in the interview. "It's no harm. Out of a hundred, I did 99 good to people."

In an earlier interview with the Orlando Sentinel-Star, he said, "Look it's only grass. I didn't kill anybody or hurt anybody."

A federal jury sentenced Cepeda Nov. 19, 1976, to five years in prison and a $10,000 fine. An appeal failed and on June 28 he reported to prison here, reiterating his innocence.

However, in the News interview, Cepeda — in blue prison work clothes — freely admitted his guilt, but refused to discuss details of the smuggling operation that led to his imprisonment.

Cepeda declined to say what he had planned to do with the pot.

"No, I don't want to get into that," he said. "In my book, I say everything."

Cepeda said he plans to have a book written about his life, but admitted that he did not yet have a publisher.

"I'm looking for the best deal," said Cepeda, who played for six clubs before retiring after the 1974 season.

Asked why he got involved in smuggling, Cepeda said, "Things go through your mind. You run a red light. Boom! O.K., nobody stops me. But someday, they stop me and you get in trouble."

Cookie Rojas, a former major league infielder who is now a coach with the Chicago Cubs, is leading a group of major leaguers who have petitioned President Carter for Cepeda's release.

Indian Tribes Near End Of 'Longest Walk'

By JAMES PHILLIPS

PATAPSCO STATE PARK, Md. (AP) — The Indians sit in small clusters on a grassy knoll, waiting to complete the final leg of their "Longest Walk," the protest march that has spanned a continent.

Perhaps 800 Indians are gathered in this rural park west of Baltimore, representing more than 80 tribes. At the entrance to the campground is a sign: "No weapons. No alcohol. No drugs."

Under the warm July sun, a mood of serenity prevails. But in less than 24 hours the Indians will descend on Washington to plead their case: to seek lost lands, to reclaim water and fishing rights, to be given the right of sovereignty to conduct their affairs without interference, and to speak out against legislation designed to end rights given them under treaties with the United States.

One day before they break camp and begin the final walk to the nation's capital, Red Cloud, an Apathascan who has walked the entire distance from Alcatraz, Calif., says: "A lot of people are afraid. The end of an era is at hand."

The campground is a series of contrasts. The Indians are young and old, from high plains and coastal forests. Modern backpacking tents are pitched next to teepees whose spires reach toward the sky. New sedans park next to mud-spattered, rusty pickup trucks — vehicles bearing license plates from Maine and Oregon, New York and Arizona.

But the diversity is deceiving. Despite the dissimilar backgrounds, despite the contrast of the old with the new, the Indians have been brought together on the march by what they describe as a new-found spirituality, an inner peace deriving from the Great Spirit.

Through blizzard and rain, fog and sunshine, political and police harassment, "spirituality has continued to hold us together," said Red Cloud.

"I have grown so much spiritually that I cannot measure it. That's the important thing," he continues. "It may take two or three years for some things to come forth."

To the Indians, this spirituality is the key to their survival.

But their survival depends on more than that. Even their spiritual leader, Ernie Peters, says, "They've taken away our total land base and put us on reservations, and they want to take that. They want our mineral resources, our coal, uranium and oil."

"They want us to stop fishing. They say we're deleting the salmon runs. They built dams on the rivers, let lumber mills pollute the streams, let cities dump filth into the rivers, built atomic plants on the rivers. One commercial fisherman takes more salmon than all the Indians. Yet they say a handful of Indians is depleting the salmon run.

"This is what we're marching against."

Peters, a soft-spoken Sisseton Sioux from South Dakota, is a portly 52-year-old man who bears scars on his chest and back, scars stemming from a religious rite in which rawhide thongs were threaded through his flesh. He said he danced until the thongs ripped out.

"My body I've given to the people. My soul belongs to the Great Spirit," he said.

This march, which began Feb. 11 in California, has been peaceful.

Now the march is nearing an end, the longest march in North American history.

For Peters, some changes already are evident. Hatred, alcoholism, lethargy, physical ailments are disappearing among Indians who have found spirituality because of the march, he said.

"These are being replaced by love, compassion, need for survival, unity" says Peters. "This is what the march is doing. This march is for survival. I've reached my goal. The rest is formality.

"The U.S. government is still treating us as they did 200 years ago. We're still wards of the government. We're still illiterate and incompetent.

"How many people out there can speak the native language? Many of us speak four native languages and English, a foreign language."

As for Red Cloud, he was asked where he would go at the end of the march. He looked at the sky for a moment, and then spoke:

"You see the wind? Where does the wind go when it leaves here? We know not where the wind goes . . ."

FLAG FLEW UPSIDE DOWN — The American flag flies third on the staff and upside down at the American Indian encampment at Marriottsville, Md., as a protest to what the group says is the Indians' plight in the U.S. The demonstrators were slated to leave today for Washington on the final leg of the Longest Walk, a transcontinental protest march. Fed Chief Supports Democratic Tax Bill

By EDMOND Le BRETON

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats trying to bring President Carter's tax-reduction proposal to a House vote without Republican-backed additions are gaining support from the Federal Reserve Board chairman.

But the majority party leaders still don't know how much appeal the GOP election-year tax cut proposals may have to Democrats facing campaigns. And they have no immediate plans to find out.

Chairman G. William Miller of the autonomous agency that largely determines credit and interest policies advised Congress Thursday not to enact either of the two leading Republican proposals.

If one-third of the proposed $15 billion to $20 billion tax cut is earmarked for business, he said, the major emphasis should be on quicker writeoff of investments in plant and equipment.

One of the pending Republican proposals is a rollback of capital gains taxes. Under present law these gains, the profits from the sale of assets held at least a year, may in exceptional cases be taxed by more than 49 percent, though the Treasury says the average rate is 18.5 percent.

The GOP proposal would set a maximum of 25 percent. A compromise version with appeal to many Democrats would place the ceiling at 35 percent. It will be the starting point next week when the Ways and Means Committee, long deadlocked on a tax bill, resumes consideration of it.

The other GOP proposal, designated by the national party leadership as a major campaign issue, calls for a one-third reduction in individual income tax rates over three years, accompanied by cuts in corporate taxes.

Miller said capital gains reduction would have only a slow and indirect effect in stimulating investment, which he said should have high priority. And he said future across the board tax cuts should be geared to progressive reductions in the growth of federal spending and progress toward a balanced budget by 1982.

The House Democratic whip, Rep. John Brademas of Indiana, told reporters the party leadership has not polled Democrats on capital gains tax reduction, the immediate issue stalling the tax bill.

Brademas said Miller's views on ways to stimulate investment warrant consideration, while his opposition to the Republican proposals reflect "his background as an able corporate executive."

Brademas, the third-ranking member of the Democratic leadership, said its commitment to a bill reducing taxes for the majority of Americans is unchanged.

"It would be most unfortunate if there were not a bill containing a substantial tax reduction," he said.

Miller told the House Budget Committee he hopes, but cannot promise, that the rise in interest rates will stop by the end of this year as the wave of buying in anticipation of higher prices subsides. He cautioned the committee, however, not to expect interest rates to drop.

He also suggested that Congress consider postponing the minimum wage increase effective Jan. 1 under present law. The increase from $2.30 an hour to $2.65 last Jan. 1, Miller said, added 0.5 of a percentage point to the inflation rate. The next scheduled increase to $2.90 would have a similar effect, he said.

ARCHAEOLOGICAL FIND BARED

DEERFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Researchers say a site where wandering hunters camped up to 12,000 years ago is a major archaeological discovery and among the oldest uncovered in New England. University of Massachusetts archaeologists are preparing reports on what they have found at a secluded site in this western Massachusetts town near the Connecticut River. They have uncovered arrowheads and other relics of the Paleo-Indian period, 8,000 to 12,000 years ago.

Jarvis Denies Drunk Charge

OXNARD, Calif. (AP) — Tax crusader Howard Jarvis, fighting a misdemeanor drunken driving charge, says "I'm not a regular drinker" and that he was sober the night he was stopped by a sheriff's deputy.

The 75-year-old Jarvis conceded during his trial Thursday that he had dropped the names of a few friends in law enforcement when he was pulled over March 15. But he denied he threatened to have Ventura County sheriff's Deputy Michael Kipp fired.

"That would be silly," Jarvis testified. "I would never say that."

Jarvis said that on the day he was detained he had eaten dinner at the home of the Ventura County chairman of his Proposition 13 campaign. He probably drank one vodka and orange juice before dinner, and after dinner he had three cups of coffee that he later learned his host had laced with a liqueur, he said.

He said he began the drive home to Los Angeles about midnight.

Kipp has said he saw Jarvis weaving from lane to lane on U.S. 101, traveling "at a very high rate of speed."

"We had the car in cruise," Jarvis said. "I always do on the freeway. It's cheaper." He said the car was set at 63 mph when his wife spotted a car behind them.

He said he had become a bit fearful about cars following him — presumably because of intense emotions stirred up by his tax-limitation proposal. He said police had warned him to avoid any car that looked threatening.

"I think I stepped on it a little. The car was coming pretty fast," he said. "I was apprehensive. I tried to get this car to pass me."

He said he pulled from the left lane to the right lane and made several other lane changes before the deputy pulled him over.

On cross-examination, Jarvis also sought to explain why he was unable to recite the alphabet — one of the roadside tests given by Kipp.

"He (Kipp) said, 'Would you recite the alphabet,' and I said I hadn't done that since kindergarten. I recited it perfectly until I got to 'R.'" Jarvis said.

Jarvis testified that he agreed to a blood test only after a deputy had told him he had passed a breathalyzer test that showed he was not intoxicated.

The blood test showed Jarvis to have an alcohol concentration of .06 percent. Under California law, a person found to have a level of .10 or higher is presumed to be under the influence of liquor. Under that level, and they can be convicted if they fail a sobriety test.

Tax Revolt Unlikely Despite High Increase

MISSION HILLS, Kan. (AP) — Property taxes quadrupled in this wealthy Kansas City suburb last year and that rate likely will be tripled this year. But there is little chance of a local edition of California's tax revolt.

The owner of a $50,000 home here was required to pay only about $8 in property taxes to the city in 1977. That figure for the same home rose to $34.68 in 1978 and, if the next increase is approved by voters, will be $102 in 1979.

The average income per resident was almost $20,000 in 1974, according to the Census Bureau, putting Mission Hills among the 10 richest cities in the country and making it the wealthiest city in Johnson County. Homeowners include Ewing Kauffman, owner of the Kansas City Royals baseball club, Hallmark Cards president Donald J. Hall and other Kansas City luminaries.

The city is increasing its property tax to offset a reduction in its intangibles tax on dividends and interest income, which voters decided to cut.

The intangibles tax has dropped from 2.25 percent in 1977 to a proposed 1 percent this year. As a result, income produced by the intangibles tax — once nearly three-fourths of the city's budgeted income — will drop to less than half of the city's budget.

The city had little choice but to use the property tax to take up the slack.

A sales tax would not work because this city of about 4,000 people does not have a single business or store. Its 1,300 homes and three golf clubs cover just over two square miles that hug the Kansas-Missouri line.

For 1979, the average Mission Hills resident will see his total payment to the city increase about 2 percent.

City Administraor Carl Schliffke says there is little doubt that the voters in the suburb will approve the proposed property tax increase because it amounts to a tax of $8.50 on every $100 of assessed valuation — sharply lower than the city's neighbors which generally exceed $10.

"Yes, this will clear," Schliffke says. "We'll have a public hearing of course,

Institute Offers Tough Courses

By DALE SINGER

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — If the thought of summer school brings to mind remedial reading and students trying to master algebra for the fourth time, take a look at the Mark Twain Summer Institute.

Here, the area's top high school students devote 3½ hours a day to intensive study of economics, advanced chemistry, creative writing, probability and statistics and other topics often not available during the regular school year.

"The idea is to create a milieu where highly gifted students can come together with the best teachers we can find on what you could call neutral ground," said Harvey B. Sperling, director of the institute that is celebrating its 20th year.

"We want to give them course work they can't get at their regular schools, and get them together to meet each other. No one is embarrassed to be bright at the institute."

This year, 310 students from 85 schools paid the $100 tuition to spend six weeks in the classroom instead of in the sun or on the job. "There isn't a better education buy in the country," Sperling said.

Mark Twain began in 1958 after Russia startled the American educational establishment by winning the race to put a satellite in orbit. The Danforth Foundation provided the initial money, and the area's leading businesses have helped with scholarships through the years.

The atmosphere is informal, with softball games and chess and backgammon matches added to help break up the rigors of academia. Pressure is created by the course material itself, not by the other classmates, 14-year-old David Epstein said.

"If you're on top of the class in regular school, you have the feeling you have to stay there," he said. "Here everyone is at the top of their class, so it doesn't make so much difference."

There are no credits or tests, with an evaluation at the end of the summer to judge students one of three ways — honors, pass or don't return. The emphasis is on individual projects, and some can be quite creative, according to chemistry teacher Joe Hale.

He recalls one student who tried to devise a more effective suntan lotion. He divided his stomach into various areas and tried different preparations, then came to class to present his findings and merely pulled up his shirt. "He looked like a checkerboard," Hale said.

Sperling is enthusiastic about classes designed especially for top students, but he is sensitive to charges that resources should be spent on students having a hard time, not those already doing well.

"Every child has a right to an education, but education is not an equal process," he said.

"Every student has different needs, and these students have special needs. Because they're bright, those needs tend to be forgotten.

"These people come into contact with students of equal ability. If nothing else, it's a great lesson in humility, because they see there are students just as bright as they are."

"I thought it would be a real grind, just sitting here and taking notes all the time," Kurt Jaeger, 17, said. "But it's been a lot of fun, too. It beats working, I'll tell you."

Federal Standards Set On Cellulose

WASHINGTON (AP) — New federal safety standards for cellulose products used in home insulation will be in effect by fall when demand for such products is heaviest, the Consumer Product Safety Commission says.

President Carter signed the legislation Wednesday. The cellulose products consist of ground newspaper treated with chemicals to prevent fires. Those products can become a fire hazard if improperly manufactured.

GROWING OLDER

Exchanging Skills Proves Profitable

By LOU COTTIN

Here's a rare situation: Two magazines, as different as day is from night, recently have written of similar plans to help the elderly.

The usually conservative "Bulletin" of the American Association of Retired Persons (AARP) tells us about the Useful Service Exchange (USE) in Reston, Va.

Both programs trade time, skills and labor without using money.

"Mother Jones" informs us that Brasstown's 30 co-op members represent an interesting alliance between Christendom and Freakdom.

"Somehow," writes the magazine's John Rothchild, "living in the country has put a human override on the cultural and political differences that might otherwise divide these people. It is a loving group."

In Brasstown, negotiating the exchange of skills takes place at "covered dish suppers." The skilled and the unskilled hustle around good naturedly while they eat.

What it amounts to is a direct exchange of time and sweat. A doctor offers physical exams in return for so many hours of manual labor. A yoga teacher gives lessons in return for needlepoint. A soapmaker swaps soap for a psychologist's expertise.

There's a dynamite expert among the members. He babysits for the certified accountant's children. The accountant does the babysitter's tax work.

Most of the people of Brasstown are farmers. The professionals are relocated urbanites.

The big idea behind the Brasstown cooperative is simple enough. People simply ignore the wage-tax-profit system. Farm people have always operated this way.

More systemized and sophisticated is the exchange project in Reston. Henry H. Ware, an economist with experience in marketing and bartering systems, runs USE with greater efficiency -- but without sacrificing neighborliness.

The principle is the same. It's a neighbor-to-neighbor self-help exchange of services. No money changes hands.

The accounts of USE are not kept in dollars. Instead, credits and debits are calculated in hours of work.

No USE member can be too heavily overdrawn, but participants are encouraged to ask for need services before they have accumulated the necessary credit hours.

USE provides members with a sign-up sheet and list of services offered and services needed. Offerings include almost every skill imaginable, from secretarial to home maintenance, from arts and crafts to cleaning and housekeeping.

Glenn Ellison, age 84, repairs lamps and household appliances on an exchange-of-time basis. Artist Prudence Herrick, 79, custom designs gourmet recipe cards with illustrations. In exchange, she receive free transportation from the neighbors for whom she paints the attractive cards.

Director Ware says he will publish a manual explaining how to start and operate this type of project if he can get the financing.

The thought here is that self-help swapping services like USE can be started in communities throughout the country. The elderly should lead in this endeavor.

A project like USE can be started from the top, at county, township or village offices of senior affairs. Or it can begin at centers for the elderly. Multi-purpose centers, especialy, should be interested.

There is no doubt that we seniors have varied talents and skills. When we swap them with younger people we establish friendships that grow in the sharing. Everybody gains.

The project gets going as soon as a central clearing house of time-central clearing house of time-swaps is set up. Local community organizations will be glad to help in the effort's planning and organization.

But the program must begin somewhere. That's a job for seniors, working with professionals on aging in their communities.

For more information on how work-swap services work, write to USE, 1614 Washington Plaza, Wellborn Building, Reston, Va. 22090. Make sure your senior club director does the same. And enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

So, to paraphrase Shakespeare, "If you have skills, prepare to share them now."

Gannett Cites Net Gain

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (UPI) — The Rochester-based Gannett Co. Inc. reported Wednesday a 21 percent net earnings gain for the first half of 1978, aided in large part by an 8.2 percent gain in advertising lineage.

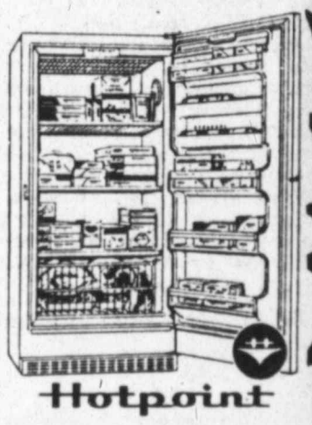

The newspaper group also reported a net earnings increase of 20 percent for the second quarter of this year. It marked the 43rd consecutive quarter of increased comparative earnings.

Net income for the second quarter was $22,524,647, compared with $18,724,354 in 1977.

Aircraft Buy Stirs Rise In Market

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market pushed sharply higher today, bouyed by a large purchase of domestic aircraft and shrugging off a sharp rise in the money supply and a disappointing report on industrial output.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, which fell .17 points Thursday, gained 8.31 to 833.07 by noon today.

Gainers took an almost 2-1 edge over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said investors appeared to be discounting the sharp rise reported Thursday in the money supply and this morning's report that industrial output in June rose at a slower rate than in May or April.

In addition, investors seemed encouraged by reports that the Carter administration will propose a capital gains tax reduction plan next week.

Boeing Co. was up 1¾ to 58½ when trading in the stock was halted before United Airlines' announced that it had placed a large aircraft order with the Seattle-based firm. United Technologies, whose Pratt Whitney unit will provide engines for the aircraft, led the NYSE's most-active list, up 2⅝ to 46⅛.

The NYSE composite index was up .28 to 54.40. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index gained .74 to 149.36.

Volume on the Big Board reached 11.49 million shares over the first two hours, down from 11.81 million in the comparable period Thursday.

Texaco, which released an ambiguous statement Thursday concerning its drilling operation in the Baltimore Canyon, resumed its upward swing today. The issue was up ½ to 26¼. Exxon also was up, gaining ¼ to 45⅛.

Production Rises In Industries

WASHINGTON (AP) — Output by the nation's industries increased by 0.3 percent in June, the smallest rise in four months, the Federal Reserve Board said today.

The industrial production report, an important indicator of the nation's economic health, showed that the economy is growing at a slower pace after a rapid expansion during the spring.

Government economists are expecting economic growth to slow down during the summer, but they are not sure by how much.

Increases in industrial output are needed to create new jobs and keep the nation's unemployment rate from worsening. A week ago, the government reported that the nation's jobless rate dropped to 5.7 percent, the lowest in nearly four years.

Industrial production measures the combined output of the nation's factories, utilites and mines.

The June increase followed a 0.6 percent rise in May and robust gains of 1.5 percent in April and 1.2 percent in March, as the economy staged a rebound from the ill effects of a severe winter and the lengthy coal strike.

The Federal Reserve Board said industrial production for the 12-month period since June 1977 rose 4.7 percent. During the second quarter, output rose 12.3 percent at an annual rate from the first quarter.

The latest rise boosted the government's index of industrial production to 144.3 percent of the 1967 base level.

Despite a small decline in auto production during June, output of consumer goods advanced 0.3 percent after declining 0.3 percent in May, the government said.

Business equipment output rose 0.4 percent in June following a 0.8 advance in May, while production of durable materials advanced 0.6 percent, due mainly to the continued strength in equipment parts and basic metals, the Fed reported.

Because of the coal strike and weather, output rose 0.3 percent in February and declined 0.6 percent in January.

Woman Ruled Not Guilty

HOUSTON (AP) — A state district court jury has found a 24-year-old Jacinto City woman innocent of the beating death of her four-year-old son.

Another defendant, who earlier pleaded guilty to the boy's death, had agreed to testify against Marianne Willette in return for a 20-year sentence rather than life in prison.

Terry Clifford, 24, Mrs. Willette's former boyfriend, told the court she habitually punched Joey Allen and hit him with a hairbrush "to make him tough."

Judge Wallace "Pete" Moore said the six-man, six-woman jury deliberated six hours before returning the verdict in the woman's four-day trial.

Mrs. Willette told the court she had returned home from work Dec. 19, 1976 and found her son badly beaten. He died the next day in Ben Taub Hospital where she had taken him in an ambulance.

A medical examiner said the boy died of severe brain damage and an internal infection caused by a ruptured pancreas.

Clifford told the court Wednesday his confession had been coerced out of him by former Jacinto City police chief Allan Jamail. Jamail is now a Jacinto City councilman and is under federal investigation for alleged abuse of prisoners during his time as chief.

Shell Proposes New Coal Field

ROCKDALE (AP) — An estimated one million tons of lignite would be mined the first year of operations at a proposed Milam County lignite surface mine, a Shell Oil Co. official said Thursday.

Neil J. Isto, Shell mining manager, made the forecast at a Texas Railroad Commission hearing on the company's request to mine lignite on a 7,708-acre tract near here.

No outright opposition was voiced, but a landowner in the area questioned whether Shell's control of surface rights would endanger future oil and gas exploration.

Nicolai Von Kreisler of Mustang Exploration Co. said his company owns 400 acres in the proposed mine area and has filed applications to drill on the tract.

Shell officials said a "reasonable accommodation" could be reached.

The company said it expects to employ 385 people with an annual payroll of $5.2 million.

The lignite to be produced is a "low-grade coal which will most likely be used for production of steam for use in generating electricity anad as process heat for industrial users," Isto said.

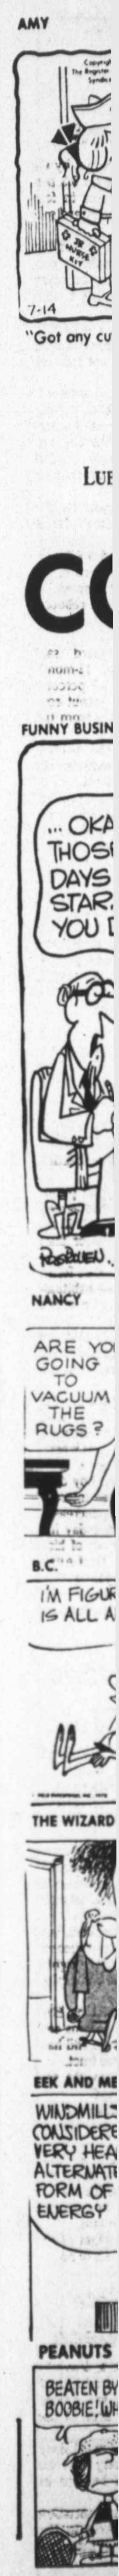

He compared production to that of an oil field producing 33,000 barrels of oil.

Teachers To Fete Texas Senate Dean

AUSTIN (AP) — Educators, lawmakers, state officials and other friends of Sen. A. M. Aikin, D-Paris, will gather Tuesday night to honor the dean of the Texas Senate.

Aikin, a member of the Senate since 1937, announced last January that he would not seek re-election because of health reasons.

The Texas State Teachers Association said the dinner would be held in the University of Texas Special Events Center.
