U.S. troops kill 9 Haitians

Firefight erupts when armed men confront platoon

■ Confrontation injures one Marine in leg; injury was not considered serious.

Associated Press

CAP-HAITIEN, Haiti — In the first deadly confrontation between U.S. troops and Haitians, Marines killed nine armed men outside a police station Saturday night in a clash during the Marines' evening patrol.

The sharp, quick firefight in this city on Haiti's northern coast was followed by a long siege outside the station, as the Marines tried to coax out of the station two men believed to be policemen who were wounded in the shooting.

It wasn't clear whether the men killed were police. Many civilian "attaches" work alongside Haitian police, which are part of the army.

A U.S. Marine, a Haitian who serves as an interpreter, was wounded in the leg. The injury was not considered serious.

Lt. Col. Steve Hartley, the battalion commander who arrived on the scene minutes after the firefight, said the platoon from Echo Company on patrol had stopped across the street from the station.

When armed men came out of the station, "words were exchanged, and there was gunfire," Hartley said.

Cpl. Mike Arnett, a member of the platoon, said armed men came out of the police station and opened fire.

"Four guys came out from the front desk, saw us and got spooked and lit up their weapons," he said. "And we returned fire."

The bodies of eight men remained on the street late Saturday night and were seen by an Associated Press reporter. In Port-au-Prince, U.S. military spokesman Col. Barry Willey said nine Haitians in all were killed

Education program uses techniques that make students think

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Many intellectually gifted students may exhibit a burst of brilliance in the classroom one day, but fail to understand something the next. "It's because they can't generalize from one situation to the next. They don't have the skills they need in their mental 'tool box,' " according to Patricia Maurer.

She said gifted education is all about teaching students to use those mental tools. "It's about teaching kids strategies to solve problems. It's teaching intelligent behavior," said Ms. Maurer, principal of Carver Center and coordinator of programs for gifted students in Midland Independent School District.

A tireless researcher on new directions of gifted education, Ms. Maurer recently wrote the chapter

Teacher identifies intellectual gifts of bilingual students

By Myra Lee Salcedo

Alfonzo, a 6-year-old bilingual student, hummed in class, rewrote the words of songs, made three-dimensional art projects when he was supposed to make them two-dimensional, and had a tendency to make odd analogies.

His behavior — considered annoying and counterproductive by some teachers — was recognized as indicating intellectual giftedness by his teacher Susan Lara.

Now the bilingual coordinator at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin, Ms. Lara drew on her memory of Alfonzo for an article she wrote that was recently published in Gifted Child Today magazine.

The educator said Alfonzo particularly caught her attention when he compared his parents' tendency to move to different houses (within their community) to the behav-

MISD educators to learn types of block schedules

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

While Midland freshman and senior high school students take a holiday Monday, their teachers will be learning about options to restructure the high school day.

Students will be off — for a Texas Education Agency-granted waiver day — but teachers will participate in a day-long staff development session focusing on different types of block scheduling.

Block scheduling is similar to college courses where a class is attended in a "block" of more than an hour several times a week.

Educators from Mansfield and Garland independent school districts will lead the sessions. About 300 local teachers are expected to gather at Lee High School to listen to the presentations on two different types of block scheduling.

Since the issue of restructuring the high school day has caused some confusion and consternation among parents, educators are inviting interested persons to attend the sessions, scheduled for 10 a.m. until noon and 1:30 p.m. until 3:30 p.m.

Local public school principals are researching block scheduling as a way to allow students to earn 24 credit hours by graduation.

The State Board of Education has developed an advanced transcript that would make it difficult for students to continue taking courses like band, choir

Council to decide on required zoning for wildlife refuge

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

The City Council is scheduled Tuesday to lay down the law on what zoning classification and specifications will be required to operate a wildlife rehabilitation center in Midland.

Although the council's action would appear to settle the dispute over the legality of the Eos Wildlife Refuge Center, the decision may be the foundation for another tier in the legal battle between two adjacent property owners.

That's because, as some city officials have said, the decision may be appealed — through a lawsuit against the city — by whichever side doesn't get their way.

"I really think the city is caught in between — whatever decision we make," Mayor Bobby Burns said.

Midge and Woody Erskine — who operate the Eos Wildlife Refuge Center at their 3306 W. Golf Course Road home — claim their facility is already locally sanctioned.

And Dennis and Vanessa Baker, who own the property next door, maintain — in their complaints to the city and in an August 1992 lawsuit against the Erskines — that the facility violates zoning and health codes.

Both sides have argued — predominantly through attorneys — their cases before the City Council on three occa-

Manufacturers urge Federal Reserve not to raise interest rates

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The nation's manufacturers, declaring that their businesses are prospering and their hiring is up, urged the Federal Reserve on Saturday not to raise interest rates again this year. They said higher rates would endanger their prosperity.

In taking this position shortly before a Federal Reserve meeting to consider another rate increase, the National Association of Manufacturers directly challenged a basic tenet of the central bank's policy.

While most Fed officials insist that rising inflation poses the greatest danger to the economy and should be prevented, even at the cost of an economic slowdown, the manufacturers take the opposite view. They even prefer a little inflation, which gives them leeway to raise prices.

The NAM passed no formal resolution at a three-day meeting here, attended by 115 chief executives of large and small companies, from giants like Boeing and the Big Three automakers to small machine shops in Midwestern towns.

But the executives opposed higher rates in a poll taken at the meeting, part of the NAM's emerging effort to prevent another rate increase that might slow the economy and dampen its members' sales. In interviews, many of the manufacturing executives forcefully supported that view.

Summarizing the results of the poll at the final session Saturday, NAM preisdent Jerry Jasinowski said, "The overwhelming majority believe that the Fed should hold interest rates at current levels or delay any further action until late this year or next year."

Stanley C. Gault, chairman of Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. and a former chairman of the manufacturers' group, said: "We have to be particularly careful about what we do now. It is as hard or harder to reverse a slowdown in the economy as it is to reverse rising inflation."

The manufacturers rarely come out so publicly or bluntly against a rate increase. But this time, they said, higher interest rates would catch them just as their sales are expanding, mostly from the ripple effects of strong home construction and surging auto and truck sales.

But even executives of companies removed from the auto and construction industries expressed concern about rates.

Lawrence W. Clarkson, a senior vice president of Boeing Co., for example, said higher rates might discourage people from buying airline tickets on credit, just as air travel was rising and airlines might be ready to order more new planes. "Leisure travel is very interest-rate sensitive," he said.

In their poll, the manufacturers rejected a main argument for a rate increase intended to reduce consumer demand, and with it economic activity, by discouraging borrowing in a nation that runs on credit.

The argument is that shortages of labor and of production capacity will force manufacturers to raise wages to obtain skilled workers and that the higher wages will force businesses to raise prices sharply.

"We have no strains on capacity, and there is certainly" no strong demand for wage increases, said Tracy O'Rourke, the newly elected chairman of the NAM.

Expectations on Wall Street of another interest rate increase — either at a meeting of Federal Reserve policymakers Tuesday, or at their next meeting, on Nov. 15 — have played a role in the steady decline of stock prices in recent days, as well as the upward pressure on interest rates in the bond market.

Women's group fights to keep world population goals alive

UNITED NATIONS (NYT) — In an effort to keep the U.N. population conference from becoming yet another gathering that produces lofty goals but little action, an international women's rights group will try to insure that the conference's plans for women's health care, education and family planning are carried out.

The group, the Women's Environment and Development Organization, intends to pressure governments and international organizations to shift military spending to social programs, and it plans to try to change what it sees as sexist attitudes that blame women for population growth.

Its supporters say the group has pushed the issue of family planning beyond its traditional boundaries to include sex equality and issues of reproductive health.

"They brought the feminist perspective to prominence and they prevailed," said Hugh O'Haire, a spokesman for the U.N. Population Fund, which organized the population conference in Cairo earlier this month.

India declares city plague disaster zone

Indian government appeals to U.S., Russia for more medicine to fight pneumonic plague which is deadlier form of 'Black Death' (bubonic plague).

SURAT, India (AP) — Officials stopped trucks and handed out antibiotics Saturday to people fleeing a deadly plague outbreak in western India in an effort to keep the disease from spreading to the country's major cities.

Pneumonic plague, a strain of the bubonic plague or "Black Death," that ravaged 14th-century Europe and Asia, has so far killed at least 51 people in Surat, a city on India's Arabian Sea coast. Surat's civil hospital was treating 359 cases Saturday, and officials declared the city a disaster zone.

The federal government flew in 8 million capsules of antibiotics to Surat and appealed to the United States and Russia for more medicine, Indian television said.

In Bombay, 160 miles south of Surat, officials stopped 4,000 trucks and sprayed them with anti-flea insecticides, an official said. The plague is spread to people by fleas that have bitten infected rats, and can also be spread from one infected person to another by airborne bacteria.

Authorities handed out tetracycline capsules at six railroad stations in Bombay to anyone they believed was coming from Surat. Garbage workers were given face masks to prevent them from breathing in bacteria.

In Surat, terrified patients showing symptoms of the plague thronged the city hospital. Authorities ordered pharmacies to give free antibiotics to anyone with symptoms after residents mobbed drug stores, forcing police to guard delivery of new supplies.

Seven people died Saturday in Surat's civil hospital, where the corridors were filled with patients. The hospital, which is treating only plague patients, admitted 114 new patients Saturday.

Thousands of people continued to jam into trains to flee the city, and others paid private bus operators five times the normal ticket price just to get out. About 400,000 people have fled Surat, a city of 1.5 million, since the first plague deaths were reported this week, Press Trust of India news agency said.

The plague returned to India for the first time in 30 years last month when an outbreak of bubonic plague hit the neighboring state of Maharashtra, spread by rats drawn by relief food sent after a 1993 earthquake. About 150 people were treated, but no deaths were reported.

Surat is ringed with shanty towns and open sewers, prime breeding grounds for disease.

Today to be sunny, mid-80s

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies with a high in the mid-80s and variable winds at 5 to 10 mph, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight will be clear with a low in the mid-50s.

Monday is expected to be sunny with a high in the upper 80s.

After an overnight low of 49, Saturday's high was 80 compared with the record high for that date of 101 in 1977. The record low for today's date was 42 in 1989.

STATE

Most of Texas was sunny and warm Saturday, and the National Weather Service said clear skies were expected again today.

A cold front extended from Beaumont to Houston Saturday afternoon, but temperatures were mostly in the 70s and 80s. Georgetown had the region's low at 73, while Harlingen had the high of 92. Today should be sunny with highs in the 80s and 90s.

NATION

Severe storms in the South brought a tornado that damaged buildings and injured at least eight. Rain also fell over the central part of the nation.

Two tornadoes were reported in South Carolina. One near lake city downed power lines and damaged roofs. Eight people suffered minor injuries.

In the six-hour spane ending at 2 p.m. EDT, .84 of an inch of rain fell at Columbia, S.C., and Charleston, S.C., got .81 of an inch.

In the West, showers fell in northern California and western Nevada.

FIGHT: U.S. troops open fire on Haitians, kill 9

in the firefight, which he said the Haitians started.

Elsewhere in Haiti on Saturday, thousands of emboldened Haitians danced through the streets of Port-au-Prince in the biggest pro-democracy demonstration since the elected government was toppled three years ago.

Police fired tear gas at demonstrators marching by the capital's army headquarters, and other protesters stoned police headquarters before being chased away.

Meanwhile in Cap-Haitien, after the firefight Marine interpreters and Haitian policemen in the station shouted back and forth in the darkness. The Marines were trying to get the two wounded men to surrender.

"Tell them they must come out. Tell them that's the only way they are going to live," a Marine officer shouted in the darkness.

"They won't come out, and I'm not going to go in and try to get them in the dark," Hartley radioed back to headquarters. Hartley said no attempt would be made to enter the police station before daybreak Sunday.

After tense moments, five other men came out of the station, leaving the two wounded men inside. The five were ordered to lie down and were searched by cautious Marines who removed the prisoners' shoes.

A Marine armored personnel carrier that rushed to support the platoon then turned on its headlights to illuminate the street scene, as Marine riflemen pointed their weapons at the open windows on top floor of the two-story, yellow stucco building.

Civilians ran from the shooting, locking themselves behind shuttered doors and windows. The city's streets became deserted.

Saturday night's incident followed a slow escalation in tension between Marines and Haitian security forces. Marine patrols had been increased and word had come down to the troops of an "escalation of force," giving units more latitude to take action against the Haitian forces.

The escalation followed intelligence reports that the "attaches" were planning some action against Marines, possibly a drive-by shooting, Marines said. On Friday, Marines were shadowed by Haitian forces in utility vehicles scouting Marine positions and interfering with Marine movement.

Marines from that platoon had been patrolling the area around the police station throughout the day, exchanging curt "Bonjours" with the Haitian police there. The shooting incident occurred about 7 p.m., as dusk fell.

Some 1,900 Marines arrived Tuesday in Cap-Haitien to provide security for the U.S-brokered return of exiled President Jean-Bertrand Aristide. There had been no incidents between Marines and local authorities before Saturday's deadly clash. About 10,000 U.S. troops in all were in Haiti by Saturday.

In the capital Port-au-Prince, the demonstrations by thousands of people, unseen since Aristide was overthrown and exiled in September 1991, reflected the swiftly shifting balance of power. Demonstrators defiantly ignored a ban on such rallies issued Wednesday by Haiti's army-backed government.

The joyful outpouring coincided with a visit by Defense Secretary William Perry, who brought a message of pride to the U.S. soldiers deployed here to restore Haiti's elected government.

Haitians waving green branches symbolizing peace swarmed through the seaport and the Cite Soleil slum, which had been terrorized by military-backed gunmen until the arrival of American GIs five days ago.

Demonstrators chanted and waved signs reading: "We Want Aristide," "Disarm the Death Squads," and "(army chief Raoul) Cedras Has to Leave."

Later, away from American forces, about 100 protesters hurled rocks at the Port-au-Prince police headquarters, a torture site under military rulers. Protesters dispersed after police with automatic weapons ran out of building. There were no reports of injuries.

Shortly afterward, about 800 demonstrators yelling "Cedras must go today!" were tear-gassed by police on a plaza between the Presidential Palace and army headquarters.

GIFT: Program uses techniques to make students think

(From 1A)

"Critical Thinking and Gifted Students: Using IMPACT to Improve Teaching and Learning" for S. Lee Winocur's second edition of the "Handbook of Gifted Education."

Ms. Maurer implemented the IMPACT — Increase Maximal Performance by Activating Critical Thinking — into Midland ISD in order to see that critical thinking skills are available to all teachers in the district.

"IMPACT was originally designed as a program to use with low-performing students," she said. "But you can't assume, just because a student has high ability, that student will have the skills he or she needs to be successful from one situation to another."

The educator said gifted students often solve problems intuitively. "They don't always bring their problem-solving skills to a level of consciousness," she said.

Another problem common to gifted students is that they don't focus on what is relevant.

"They are very verbal and may 'bird walk' all over the world telling you everything they know about a subject, except for the answer to your question," Ms. Maurer said. "They need to learn where to put the emphasis."

The Carver Center principal said that when she first began teaching, she thought the key to encourage critical thinking was to ask "high-level questions even though I often got a low-level response."

Now, she prefers probing techniques to make students think.

"We should never let a kid off easy," she said. "Instead, ask them: 'How could you validate that answer? How does that compare with what we learned yesterday?' A series of well-planned questions pushes kids to the edge and makes them grapple with a problem.

"Yes and no answers are too easy. It lets students off the hook. They stay sitting in that little yes/no puddle," she said.

One way to help students grapple with problems is to give them a "thinker's tool box," the educator said. "It gives them tools like comparing and contrasting."

She said Ms. Winocur has spoken about a Harvard Law professor who teaches beginning torts. The professor said his biggest problem is that too many law school students don't understand the process of comparing and contrasting legal arguments.

"If students can't compare and contrast at a concrete level, they can't do it at a complex level," Ms. Maurer said. "We have had first-graders involved in critical thinking activities, such as recognizing and comparing patterns in artists' works. That is very sophisticated thinking for first-graders."

A recent TAAS (Texas Assessment of Academic Skills) test indicated that 97 percent of Midland elementary school pupils — involved in the gifted program Project Think — passed the minimum expectations on the TAAS test in reading, while 91 percent of those students met the same expectations in math.

"And this happened even though there was a large range of scores of the students' cognitive abilities," Ms. Maurer said. Students of all ethnic and socioeconomic backgrounds were successful on the test, something that doesn't translate district-wide.

"Project Think students appear to generalize across subpopulations of students from different backgrounds, who have different abilities," the educator said.

Continuing to succeed in teaching critical thinking strategies, in order to reach out to even more students, "has put us in the business of being education researchers," Ms. Maurer said. "We also need to approach the business of learning in intelligent ways to elicit critical thinking."

BILINGUAL: Teacher recognizes gifted students

ior of migratory birds.

"He compared birds flying south due to cold weather to his family finding a house with a working heating system for the winter months," Ms. Lara said.

She said keen observation is a characteristic of gifted children.

"Some teachers might hear his analogy, and say: 'Oh, brother, what a situation,'" she said, instead of recognizing his observation. "And this creativity might not be demonstrated when he is with a diagnostician."

Ms. Lara said traditional methods of identifying and conducting programs won't fill the bill for bilingual students.

For example, she said the typical competitive environment won't work for students of other cultures who have been taught to value family and group cooperation. She said characteristics of gifted children, such as individual competition and self-direction may not be traits of children from Hispanic homes with traditional values. Her case study, Alfonzo, preferred to work and study in groups.

In her magazine article "Alfonzo: Portrait of a Gifted ESL (English as a Second Language) Student," she said Alfonzo often changed the objectives of classroom games from competitive to cooperative.

"For example, he would be heard saying such things as: 'OK, Jose is going to take two turns now and I'll help him, because it is his turn to win,'" Ms. Lara wrote.

Due to cultural differences and language barriers, Ms. Lara said identifying ESL students as gifted may best be done by parents and teachers.

"Teachers can be the biggest help, but not every teacher is trained," Ms. Lara said.

She said that once students are identified as intellectually gifted then "they must be served in an appropriate way. Students must be served in their native language because that is their strength. You can't build on weaknesses, you must build on strengths.

"Unfortunately, too many school programs are geared to the middle-class Anglo culture, when these students can't be identified or taught in the same way," the UTPB teacher said.

Nationwide, Hispanics represent 9.1 percent of the entire population, but only 4.7 percent of identified gifted students are Hispanic, Ms. Lara said.

She said African American students and ESL students are underserved in gifted programs.

Ms. Lara said she has been working with Patricia Maurer — coordinator of gifted education programs for Midland Independent School District — on developing a model to teach gifted education to bilingual students.

"She (Ms. Maurer) has learned a lot from me about bilingual students and she has taught me a lot about gifted learners," she said.

Ms. Lara, who teaches adults studying to be bilingual teachers, said her focus is on Hispanic students who are learning English. "They are the minority within the minority," she said.

"Creative talent, such as Alfonzo's . . . should be nurtured and allowed to grow in a wholesome environment that is supportive of a child's native language and culture . . . I am sure Alfonzo is one of the most gifted students I have ever encountered."

OPTIONS: Educators to learn about block scheduling and athletics and still earn 24 hours. The board said their degree plan is only recommended, but educators say the state is pushing toward making it a requirement.

"Our fear is if the state drops the other shoe, this plan could immediately fall into place and it would be something we haven't looked into," said Ricardo Torres, executive director of secondary education for Midland Independent School District.

Rather than being caught short, MISD educators and administrators are beginning to study options for changing high school schedules to accommodate the extra credit hours needed. "We want to have a contingency plan for when this does come," Torres said.

In the current structure, students easily can earn the district's required 22 credit hours along with electives. Torres said about 15-25 percent of students opt to take "zero hour," an additional hour of instruction that begins one hour before school starts. Zero hour allows students to earn 24 credit hours.

"But that is voluntary. We can't mandate zero period," Torres said.

With the current structure, Torres said students trying to meet state recommendations would have to go to summer school if they still wanted to take courses in band and athletics.

"We are in a study mode right now," Torres said. "We will be looking at two different types of block configurations."

Educators from Mansfield ISD will give presentations from 10 a.m.-noon. Between 1:30-3:30 p.m., educators from Garland ISD will speak about a modified block plan.

"This is something the school principals are considering. They want to look at everything. They know some changes may be coming, and this concerns people since the status quo has worked well. But, the principals are going into the restructuring mode with their eyes wide open," he said.

Other waiver days for high school students have been set for Nov. 7, Feb. 27, 1995; March 27 and April 24.

CITY: Council to decide on required zoning for center

(From 1A)

sions and the Planning and Zoning Commission once.

Now they appear to have reached the final step in the city's decision process.

"We've done a lot of work and a lot of talking, the whole council has," the mayor said. "I'm relatively sure we'll make a decision on Tuesday."

The council and city staff — by their own admission — has seen "posturing" by attorneys on both sides, been bombarded with information through expert presentations and hand-out notebooks, and endured rumors of being partisan.

But now the council must decide. Each side had their last say at the Sept. 13 council meeting.

"The public hearing has been closed so unless a council member chooses to call upon someone for comment, discussion will be restricted to council members," Assistant City Manager Glen Hackler said.

The agenda item — set for 1 p.m. — calls for a determination on where a wildlife rehabilitation center can physically be located: specifically under what zoning classification and terms for a required specific use permit.

If the council allows such facilities in residential areas, the Erskines would still have to apply for a specific use permit.

If the council allows such facilities in non-residential areas — such as within commercial or agricultural estate zoning — the Erskines could request a zone change. But, one official said, such a request would probably not be granted in light of re-zoning guidelines.

But, as Hackler commented, "Anything beyond Tuesday is very speculative."

IRA squads bully their own, activists say

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Gavin Smyth and several other teen-agers lie in a west Belfast hospital, their limbs slashed and shattered by the nail-spiked cudgels and iron bars of IRA men.

The Irish Republican Army has called a cease-fire against British forces, but in Roman Catholic neighborhoods, its punishment squads continue to bludgeon men and boys implicated in "antisocial behavior."

Activists who support those beaten or forced into exile want American officials to raise the issue with Gerry Adams, leader of the IRA's allied Sinn Fein political party, who began a visit to the United States on Saturday.

"They think in America that the IRA only shoots at army and police, but look what they do to their own people," said Ann Smyth, 39, the mother of Gavin and five other boys. "Their gangs are still beating up anyone they like. It makes a laughingstock of the cease-fire."

She had assumed the IRA truce announced Aug. 31 meant the end of the threat to Gavin, who faces trial next month for a car theft and crash last May that left a friend badly injured.

But on Thursday morning, three men forced their way into her home in Andersonstown. One pushed past her into her 16-year-old son's upstairs bedroom, ordered him to dress and shoved him out the front door.

They wouldn't say who they were, but locals and observers agree they were "the Rah," "the Provies" — two common names for the Provisional IRA — who have been doing such work all through the troubles and readily said so before the cease-fire.

"They were big bullies, dedicated hard men," Mrs. Smyth said, her voice shaking. "Of course they were IRA. No ordinary people would get on like that."

Tutsis murder Hutus who return to Rwanda, U.N. says

■ Most Hutu refugees now stay put in neighboring countries while rumors of Hutu army counteroffensive spread.

Associated Press

GOMA, Zaire — For weeks, the United Nations tried to persuade Rwandan refugees to return home but the vast majority refused to go. Now, there is growing evidence that their fears of reprisals were justified.

The U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees in Geneva says it has evidence of an "unmistakable pattern of murder and persecution" by Tutsi-led government troops against returning Hutu refugees in some parts of the country.

The United Nations also believes the exiled Hutu army is planning an offensive into Rwanda before its soldiers are forced to move from a refugee camp near the Zairean border.

"Conditions are fairly fragile everywhere," said one U.N. official, speaking on condition of anonymity. "We are nowhere out of the woods in terms of the political situation and what this may mean for the refugee situation."

So Rwandan refugees in Zaire, Tanzania, Burundi and Uganda are staying put — and nobody knows for how long.

Lyndall Sachs, spokeswoman for the U.N. High Commissioner For Refugees in Goma, said Saturday that the number of refugees returning to Rwanda, which has always been small, "has been dropping quite dramatically."

Between 1,000 and 2,000 Rwandans had been going home every day, but now the daily number of returnees was only 300 to 400, she said.

And the number of people leaving Rwanda at seven border crossings monitored by the United Nations has been increasing.

"Large numbers" of Rwandans were reported to have crossed the border and arrived at the Jomba refugee camp, about 50 miles north of Goma, she said.

She noted that many Rwandans with machete and bullet wounds were crossing into Tanzania at Ngara.

"There are reports of increased harassment, threats of violence and actual violence — both kidnapping and murder — of people in Rwanda itself," Ms. Sachs said.

Charged U.S. pilot claims innocence

BERLIN (AP) — The Air Force pilot charged with negligent homicide in the downing of two U.S. helicopters over northern Iraq insisted Saturday he is innocent and was not derelict on that fateful April day.

Lt. Col. Randy W. May said that while he felt "terribly sorry" for the "unthinkable heartache" felt by the loved ones of the 26 people killed in the accident, he rejects any criminal culpability.

"My decision to fire was the last action in a long chain of events involving a number of people and agencies. Numerous errors occurred in that chain of events. The decision to fire was based on human error," May said in a statement released by his lead defense counsel.

"I was not derelict in the performance of my duties. I am innocent of the charges which have been brought against me," May said.

The statement was May's first response to the charges announced Sept. 8.

"There were mistakes made at many different levels," May's attorney, Air Force Capt. Earl Martin, said in a telephone interview. He said his client is confident he will be cleared.

The Pentagon has not denied mistakes were made by others, but only May has been charged with negligent homicide. Five others have been charged with dereliction in their duty in connection with the April 14 incident.

May faces the military equivalent of a grand jury hearing on Nov. 7. If the officers conducting the hearing decide to go ahead with a court martial and May is convicted, he could be imprisoned for up to 26 years.

The hearing, which will be closed to the public, is to be held at Sembach Air Base in Germany, headquarters of the 17th Air Force, Martin said.

May was flying with a lower-ranking F-15 pilot who visually misidentified the two U.S. Black Hawk helicopters as Iraqi Hinds violating the no-fly zone set up to protect Kurds from Iraqi air attack, the Pentagon says.

Officers on an AWACS radar plane had transmitted a message to the jet fighters that the two pilots interpreted as confirmation the choppers were Iraqi.

Egyptian wine gets nasty reputation

By Chris Hedges
N.Y. Times News Service

TAFTISH AL-BAHARY, Egypt — Said Ibrahim never met a bottle of wine he didn't like.

"No matter what happens, we can always fix it," said Ibrahim, an official at Egypt's only winery. "We don't throw anything away."

But despite 23 years of making and doctoring Egyptian wines like Cru des Ptolemees, Nefertiti, Omar Khayyam and Reine Cleopatre, Ibrahim has no stomach for his own product.

"I don't let it in my house," he said, seated in his office at the Gianaclis winery in this village 100 miles northwest of Cairo. "I have to taste it here. That's enough."

Some of the first wines in the world came from ancient Egypt. Today, the country offers some of the worst.

The U.S. embassy has warned tourists and foreign residents to avoid Egyptian alcohol, which it says can cause blindness and even death. And those who do drink it complain of gargantuan hangovers and nausea.

U.S. embassy warns tourists to avoid Egyptian alcohol which it says can cause massive hangovers, nausea, blindness and even death.

"I mix the rose with Seven-Up to give it some taste," said John Rees, a 28-year-old English teacher, who is British, as he sat in a bar in Cairo, "but even then I get terrible headaches and diarrhea. The wine tastes and smells like vinegar. It is often a musty, brown color and the corks are dirty. We throw a lot away."

But in a country that severely restricts the import of foreign alcohol and taxes it so heavily that even a bottle of French table wine costs $40, many have no choice if they want to drink wine. Egyptian wine costs $4.50 and foreign tourists often order a bottle — once.

Egyptian Vineyards Co., which says it sells 240,000 bottles a month, has a monopoly on wine production in Egypt. It is one of 10 state companies that the government has agreed to privatize as part of a long-delayed economic program backed by the World Bank.

Western diplomats cite the wine business as an example of the heavy deterioration of industries brought on by nationalization and poor management.

The Gianaclis winery is situated along a canal in a remote area just east of the desert road.

Its 10,000 acres of vineyards are overgrown and unkempt. Peeling yellow stucco buildings surround mounds of discarded green bottles, rotten grapes, old wooden barrels and a dirty bottling plant. Restaurant owners say they know many bottles will be hastily sent back.

"Things were especially bad after President Mubarak's pilot drank our whisky and went blind. But the truth is, Egyptian wine is better than French wine. After all, the French don't have the Nile," said Raouf Abu Kila, a winery manager.

Shadowy Haiti may become tough voodoo nut, analysts warn

■ 'In Haiti, reality is invisible, and invisibility is real. . .Things here are as people choose to see them,' American scholar warns.

By Mort Rosenblum
AP special correspondent

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — Car rental contracts here add a clause about damage from "dechoukaj," Haiti's word for its own brand of big-time mayhem. This is not an easy country to occupy.

Beneath the visible surface, currents swirl against each other in an undertow strong enough to turn a tropical paradise of hard-working people into a desperate, destitute wreck of a nation.

Implications are obvious for U.S. commanders trying to move Haiti at gunpoint: The most limited goals are hard to achieve. One wrong move can turn a joyous welcome bitter overnight. And U.S. troops could get mired in a dangerous long-term mission they are not now counting on.

President Clinton has promised not only to restore an elected president but also help him put Haiti back together again. That second part may prove as difficult as reassembling Humpty Dumpty.

■ News analysis

"Our view is that Haiti today is better off than it was yesterday, and yesterday was better off than it was a day before," embassy spokesman Stanley Schrager said at the first week's end.

But no sooner had U.S. troops run up a flag over the military base at Port-au-Prince airport than political leaders hauled out the hated word — "occupation" — and warned of potential consequences.

Leslie Manigat, a former president who was close to the military but also held popular respect as a political economist, condemned a "national humiliation" in a manifesto.

"We must work to get them to go home," he wrote in the name of his small conservative party. To make his point, he recalled the blood gloriously shed during Haiti's independence struggle against France nearly two centuries ago.

Manigat was talking "dechoukaj." The term literally means to tear out crops by the roots. When Haitians oppose a regime, or an unwelcome presence, that is how they try to do it.

Long-time foreign residents, who know better than to be named when discussing politics, warn that it is not enough for the Americans' motives to be noble and well-explained.

"In Haiti, reality is invisible, and invisibility is real," one American scholar put it. Things here, he said, are as people choose to see them. He offered an unsettling example.

Before U.S. forces landed, he said, loudspeakers in helicopters urged people to stay calm and do nothing. But his watchman swears he heard them incite mobs to arrest all "macoutes," quasi-official thugs.

Most of Haiti's 7 million people are jobless, poor if not penniless, and their quest for food leaves little time for politics. They elected President Jean-Bertrand Aristide to change things.

Much anticipated Simpson murder trial to begin Monday in L.A.

■ Next month probably will be quiet as state tries to find 12 jurors whose minds haven't been polluted by publicity.

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The O.J. Simpson murder trial formally begins Monday amid all the anticipation and hoopla appropriate for a case that has attracted worldwide attention. And hardly anyone will see a thing. The jury selection process will be conducted outside the courtroom pool camera's eye as the judge tries to protect potential jurors from the media glare.

Clark

Ito

For the next month or more, news from the case will be dominated by the tedious yet critical task of finding 12 minds unpolluted by pretrial publicity and Simpson's fame. "We've been through so much," said Robert Pugsley, professor at Southwestern University Law School, "that by the time the 'actual' trial starts, with opening statements and both sides presenting their cases, it will seem like double jeopardy."

Monday, then, will bring the anticlimactic start to a case that has been packed with drama.

The public will have to wait until opening statements, expected in November, for answers to many questions, including a clear narrative from the prosecution on just what it thinks Simpson did and why.

And even then there might not be as much "O.J. info" as people want. The judge, angry over what he called erroneous news reports, has threatened to yank the TV plug.

But whether it's broadcast or not, the Simpson case's grip on the public likely isn't going to loosen — and the information will keep coming. It will take much more than an outraged judge for the networks to dismantle their towering camera platforms across the street from the courthouse.

The case has just too much of everything for everybody — celebrity, sex, high tragedy and low comedy, to say nothing of a vivid cast of characters, including two Katos (one Simpson's house guest, the other a dog with bloody paws).

Indeed, the themes in the Simpson case transcend time and national boundaries.

Shapiro

"O.J. is tragic in the way that figures in Greek literature are tragic," said Ronald Hock, who teaches ancient Greek religion at Simpson's alma mater, the University of Southern California.

He said that Simpson's plunge from elite status to murder suspect is "similar to what happens in Greek tragedy. That has its own fascination. We've never known any other famous person who's been accused of so serious a sin as O.J. Simpson has."

Some would argue that this drama should star the two victims, not Simpson.

But in death, just as in life, Nicole Brown Simpson has been overshadowed by her famous ex-husband. Ronald Goldman often is almost an afterthought, usually mentioned in news accounts as "Nicole's friend" or "the waiter."

Simpson

Their bodies were found near each other just after midnight June 13 outside Ms. Simpson's Brentwood condominium. They had been slashed to death with one or possibly two large knives, and both put up a struggle, according to testimony.

Prosecutors contend Ms. Simpson was the sole target and Goldman was killed only because he happened to stop by Ms. Simpson's condo that night to return a pair of glasses.

Although she was silenced, Ms. Simpson's chilling words have been heard throughout the case, often pointing to a tumultuous relationship with Simpson.

We have heard her frantic 911 call, in which she screams for help while an apparently enraged Simpson crashes into her home. We have heard her note to her ex-husband that reeks of pain of separation, saying she'll never contact him again except in an emergency.

That note and accompanying videos of their wedding and daughter's birth will be introduced into evidence, over the defense's objection, but their purpose is vague, as is so much in this case.

For despite the avalanche of publicity, many things remain unclear or unanswered.

What happened to the murder weapon, described by District Attorney Gil Garcetti as a "substantial knife"? Where are the bloody clothes that Simpson would have been wearing if he were the killer? Could Simpson have killed two people in the roughly 75 minutes he was unaccounted for that night, as prosecutors have suggested?

On the defense side, how does Simpson explain the possible presence of his blood at the murder scene, the bloodied glove behind his guest house, the blood in his driveway, foyer, Bronco and bathroom?

And, possibly the biggest question: Will Simpson testify?

Unlike the figures of Greek mythology, Simpson is flesh and bone.

Big oil slick is spotted off Washington

NEAH BAY, Wash. (AP) — The Coast Guard mounted an air and sea search Saturday for an elusive oil slick reported near a major wildlife refuge.

The heavy fuel oil was found late Friday at three locations bounding an area about 2 miles by 3 miles, but it was later lost in the fog.

"A sheen this large shouldn't just disappear," said Coast Guard Chief Warrant Officer Scotty O'Neal. "The wind may have condensed it, but it should still be fairly large."

More aircraft and ships were sent out Saturday.

"We want to assume the worst case and react accordingly because of the environmental sensitivity of the area," said Lt. Craig Petersen of the Coast Guard's Marine Safety Office in Seattle.

The area is home to hundreds of sea otters and the highest concentration of breeding shore birds in the United States, said Fred Fellerman, state maritime commissioner and a board member of the Washington Environmental Council.

Airports take plague precautions

N.Y. Times News Service

As part of an effort to prevent the spread of plague, federal health officials said Saturday that they plan to increase surveillance at airports in the United States to identify any cases among passengers coming from infected areas of India.

Travelers will not be prevented from entering the United States, even if they are ill, but officials are working out plans on where to hospitalize such people if the need arises.

Cards will be given to travelers from the infected areas to alert them to call a doctor if they develop a fever or become ill, said Dr. Duane J. Gubler, a federal expert on plague. He emphasized that plague is easily treated with antibiotics if the infection is detected early.

Gubler said the U.S. Public Health Service was acting out of concern about reports from western India of the first epidemic of pneumonic plague anywhere since early in the century.

"We are definitely stepping up our activities to monitor for plague," said Gubler, who is an official at the Fort Collins, Colo., field station of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta. His office is a reference center on plague for the World Health Organization, a U.N. agency in Geneva.

'Someone could be incubating plague. . .and if that person gets on an airplane, plague could spread not only in India but out of India.'

— Dr. Duane J. Gubler

"Someone could be incubating plague before feeling sick enough to seek medical care," Gubler said, "and if that person gets on an airplane, plague could spread not only in India but out of India."

Pneumonic plague is the deadliest and most easily communicable form of the disease. The time from exposure to development of symptoms for pneumonic plague can be as short as a day and as long as a week.

"The important message is that we are aware of the ultimate potential for the spread of plague here, so we are just trying to be prepared for it." Gubler said in a telephone interview. "If it happens, we should be able to respond quickly and adequately because it is very treatable disease. There should be no problems."

Indian health officials, acting out of concern about the spread of plague to Bombay or other large cities in India, have taken steps to curtail the mass exodus of people from Surat, the industrial city 150 miles north of Bombay where the epidemic was reported.

Dr. Giorgio Torrigiani, chief of communicable diseases for the World Health Organization, said he doubted "there is any danger of plague spreading outside" the area.

Torrigiani said WHO has confidence in statements from the Indian government that it is taking all necessary steps to control the epidemic. But the agency "does not have exact information of what is going on in India," he added in an interview.

Plague is caused by a bacterium, Yersinia pestis. Last week, federal health officials sent to India through the World Health Organization the reagents that are needed to detect the bacterium in a laboratory, Gubler said. The United States is prepared to send experts in diagnosing and controlling plague if India requests such aid, and a team could be readied in a day or two.

Gubler said his team had also sent materials on the control of plague to doctors in Surat who had requested such information.

He said there was concern about simultaneous epidemics of plague and a mosquito-borne viral infection known as dengue hemorrhagic fever.

Carter leaps into new role on worldwide stage

By Dan Sewell
Associated Press

ATLANTA — There he goes again.

Just back from the dramatic Haiti mission, which followed grueling trips to five African nations and Russia, Jimmy Carter kept up a hectic schedule — meetings with diplomats from both Koreas and other nations, telephone checks with all the key players on Haiti, a trip to Memphis to receive a civil rights award, and three Atlanta speeches to promote the Carter Center's ambitious agenda.

Carter

Disdaining sleep and jogging regularly, as much as 3 miles one morning the week before his 70th birthday on Oct. 1, the former president was back in the world spotlight even as he insisted it was "a normal week" for him.

He seemed combative while contradicting President Clinton on Haiti, petulant about perceived State Department snubs, and even arrogant when suggesting that wars in the Gulf, Panama and Grenada could have been avoided if his successors had only given Carter a chance.

But again and again over the week, he would suddenly soften.

At a memory of the tremendous suffering he sees on his travels, or a mention of the nation he rose to lead from a boyhood in small-town Georgia, or an admirer's salute to the magnitude of his quests, Carter's voice would choke as tears welled in red-rimmed eyes.

"I do get emotional, and I feel very deeply," Carter said in an Associated Press interview. "It's a little bit embarrassing, but it's the way I am. When you're with your friends who appreciate the work you're doing and you know care for you, my defenses get a little weaker."

The agreement that Carter, retired U.S. Army Gen. Colin Powell and Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., made with Haiti's military rulers to avert U.S. invasion came four months after Carter's stunning trip to North Korea to defuse the nuclear crisis there.

The two missions focused attention on a new world role for a man whose presidency was undermined by such foreign policy breakdowns as the Iran hostage crisis, the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan and the Cuban boatlift.

"He's well-recognized as someone who has earned tremendous trust."

Women's hall of fame inducts Abzug, Ferraro, Winfrey, Novello

SENECA FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — When she ran for Congress in 1970, Bella Abzug loved to hammer home the slogan: "Women Belong in the House — The House of Representatives."

"I was running not because I happened to be a woman but because I was a woman," said the feminist icon, one of 25 women inducted Saturday into the National Women's Hall of Fame.

Seven of the nine living inductees attended the ceremony. Talk show host Oprah Winfrey and Olympic champion Wilma Rudolph did not attend.

Attending were Geraldine Ferraro, Dr. Antonia Novello, first woman and first Hispanic American named U.S. Surgeon General; philanthropist Helen Hunt; Catherine East, a career federal employee who helped push the Equal Rights Amendment through Congress in 1972; Muriel Siebert, who in 1967 became the first woman to hold a seat on the New York Stock Exchange; and the Rev. Betty Bone Schiess, one of the first women to be ordained as an Episcopal priest in America

Clinton stumps across U.S. for loyal Dems

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Shunned by some Democrats as a political liability, President Clinton put his fund-raising abilities to work for friendlier candidates Saturday and urged disillusioned Americans to "stay with the politics that work."

Clinton

Clinton, trying to minimize Democratic losses in the midterm congressional elections, acknowledged that many Americans have grown cynical about government and are "in the mood to throw the rascals out without distinguishing who the rascals are."

But at a Minneapolis reception for Minnesota Democratic Senate nominee Ann Wynia, he insisted Americans should "stay with the politics that work" and reeled off a litany of accomplishments he claimed for the Democrats.

"We are making real progress on hard problems against intense organized opposition from the other party and from the special interests," he declared. "That is the fact."

He delivered a similar message at an evening fund-raiser for Senate contender Alan Wheat in Missouri, denouncing Republicans as nay-sayers and obstructionists intent on blocking Democratic initiatives.

"They will peddle fear; we will peddle hope," Clinton said. "They will say no and we will say yes."

Clinton was making a four-state fund-raising tour expected to haul in more than $1 million for Democratic candidates still willing to associate themselves with the president, notwithstanding his low approval ratings.

But even in friendly territory like Minnesota, some Democrats played down the potential benefits.

Black dialect mingles with English

By Arlene Levinson
Associated Press

NEW HAVEN, Conn. — Ernestine Pugh Huckaby is a prim, 50ish black woman who favors pearls, understated polka dots and wire-rimmed glasses. She may not walk the walk, but she sure knows how to talk the talk.

"Hey, yo! Come here, bro. What's the real deal?" Ms. Huckaby says with a smooth head-dip, rendering one of her conversational starters when out investigating cases for the New Haven public defender.

"They'll smile. We'll talk," she said, regaining her courtly manner. "They'll tell me they were 'beat down.' That means police have assaulted a person. And 'That's messed up,' meaning that wasn't right."

Part translator, part go-between, part sociologist, Ms. Huckaby learns as she travels the precincts of a city where America's color and class divisions are starkly visible — and audible.

Linguists say the gap is widening. On the one hand, it's another sorry symptom of a fracturing society; on the other, it signals an exciting new phase in the contest for cultural influence.

Before the mass black migration from the South this century, blacks and whites lived more closely together. But the northward move, and the later departure of whites and middle-class blacks and jobs from major cities, isolated many blacks from the mainstream.

A separate language is one result.

"The differences between black and white speech are very great, and black English is a creation of the 20th century, and of recent times," said Professor William Labov of the University of Pennsylvania, who for 30 years has studied the languages of whites and blacks.

"Blacks who live in these large cities with large concentrations of black people have very little contact with whites," he said. "It's not just a question of separation from whites. It's also separation from middle-class blacks who have moved out. Language is just reflecting this."

Earlier this century, in the time of mostly European immigration, becoming an American meant adopting values, language and styles rooted in English culture. At the same time, blacks continued their own contribution, bringing with them African-rooted words like gumbo and okra and goober, and inventing new ones like dude and jazz and jive.

These days, the dominance of English culture is weakening.

"Whose values will emerge? Your history or mine? Your speech or mine? That's deep and that's significant in American society. We code it in language and idiom."

Speakers of black English can be sorted into two types, said Geneva Smitherman, distinguished professor of English at Michigan State University and a leading scholar of the subject.

One group tends to be on the economic margin. The other speaks both the dialect and what she calls the language of wider communication.

Many blacks, of course, know no black dialect and have no contact with those who speak it. But most blacks, Ms. Smitherman said, "can speak most aspects of black English, because when they come in contact with people who only speak black English, they want to be understood."

Human-embryo research to begin

By Lauran Neergaard
Associated Press

Some worry that government-funded experiments on human embryos may lead to cloning, human trashing, controlled breeding by scientists.

WASHINGTON — Human embryos are a mystery Roger Pedersen yearns to solve.

"For years I have admired embryos," the reproductive expert says. "But we know less about human development than about any other species, from frogs to sea urchins."

That's about to change, as the government prepares to award the first federal funds for human embryo research. And Tuesday, scientists get their first hint of how this controversial field will be regulated.

At issue is fertilizing a woman's egg in a test tube to study the resulting embryo outside the uterus for the very first days of development — embryos no bigger than the period at the end of this sentence.

Such research led to in vitro fertilization that helps couples have children, and scientists believe it holds the key to fighting cancer, infertility and numerous diseases.

But, sparked by protests against experimenting with and then discarding early life, the government banned federally funded human embryology for 13 years. Laboratories kept the field alive through meager private funds.

Congress last year lifted the ban and the National Institutes of Health received 40 study proposals. NIH Director Harold Varmus asked experts on reproduction and bioethics to help him navigate "the moral and ethical questions" in devising standards for such research.

The panel issues its advice Tuesday and NIH is bracing for the storm.

"Whatever comes is going to be controversial," acknowledged Dr. Vivian Pinn, NIH's women's health chief.

That's an understatement, says American Life League President Judie Brown.

"What the human embryo panel is discussing is evil," she said. "What there should be is legal protection for human beings from fertilization onward that would negate this type of research anywhere in the world."

But scientists say the health of mankind rests heavily upon scientists learning how the body's earliest cells form.

"We can't learn all we need from animals," said Pedersen, who studies embryos at the University of California, San Francisco. "I think we'll realize a tremendous benefit ... if we do this right."

But critics compare this type of research to Nazi experiments, and warn that scientists might go so far as discarding embryos because of their gender or they might clone people.

"The fears are legitimate," said Lisa Cahill, a Boston College ethics expert who urges tight controls to determine which embryos can be studied, such as ones destined to be thrown out by IVF labs anyway, and why.

Some basic research can be done on "non-viable embryos," eggs induced to early development with chemicals instead of sperm, she noted.

But critics are pushing Congress to again ban federally funded embryology. Already Rep. Robert Dornan, R-Calif., and 33 other lawmakers are questioning NIH — even though it will be at least a year before Varmus reviews his advisers' guidelines and issues his final rules.

Others note a ban wouldn't end privately funded research, which needs public oversight.

California voters likely to OK sweeping anti-alien laws, polls suggest

LOS ANGELES (NYT) — As Election Day 1994 approaches, California voters are poised to pass a ballot proposition that would take the far-reaching step of denying illegal immigrants most major government services, including schooling and non-emergency health care.

Polls indicate that the rancorously debated measure, put on the ballot by citizens groups and officially known as Proposition 187, will win overwhelming approval from the nation's largest contingent of voters, sending a strong message to Washington about growing impatience with federal immigration policy.

At the same time, passage of the measure would probably boost the chances of Gov. Pete Wilson to win re-election in one of the most important state races in the country this year, a race whose outcome almost certainly will have an impact on the 1996 presidential race.

Wilson supports passage of the proposition, fully embracing the argument that economically pressed California must take drastic action to stem a costly "invasion" of illegal aliens because the federal government either cannot or will not.

"It's the two-by-four we need to make them take notice in Washington," he said of the initiative. "We will finally force Washington to accept responsibility."

By contrast, his Democratic challenger, state Treasurer Kathleen Brown, opposes the measure on the ground that it would make a bad problem worse and eventually would be declared unconstitutional by the U.S. Supreme Court.

"What we really need," she said, "is for the federal government to properly police our border and enforce laws already on the books."

Like many of the proposition's opponents, Ms. Brown is especially concerned about a section of the measure that would require parents of all schoolchildren, including American citizens, to prove legal residence. She calls that approach "invasive" and an affront to basic human rights.

No one disputes the far-reaching implications of the debate over Proposition 187.

"The fight over 187 is one with a lot of major legal, social and political implications, whichever side you take," said Ira Mehlman of the Federation for American Immigration Reform.

The federation, which favors passage, is one of the many national lobbying groups that have jumped into the fray alongside state lobbying groups. Some groups are broadly concerned about immigration policy.

Protestant churches face money crunch

By Gustav Niebuhr
N.Y. Times News Service

For the nation's major Protestant denominations, the 1990s is shaping up as a troubling decade of financial stress. Dollars that once flowed readily upward from the pews — helping to build seminaries and start missionary corps — are no longer reaching church headquarters the way they once did.

The result is that denominations that helped shape the American religious landscape, including the Presbyterians, the Lutherans and even the Southern Baptists, are often falling short of their budget goals.

In some cases, the result has been reductions in church staffs that echo the wrenching dismissals in the corporate world.

The historically well-heeled Episcopal Church, for example, has been forced to reduce the staff at its New York City headquarters by a third, to about 200 people, since 1991.

At its General Convention, which concluded earlier this month, the denomination set a 1995 national budget at about $42.6 million, a reduction of more than $3.6 million from the current year.

Over the last two years, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has been forced to cut its national staff by a quarter to 150.

The trend has cut across ideological and theological lines, affecting the conservative Southern Baptist Convention and the liberal-leaning United Church of Christ.

At the close of its last fiscal year, on Sept. 30, 1993, contributions to the Southern Baptists' Cooperative Program totaled $136.5 million, down about $1.7 million from the previous year. The program took in $140.7 million in 1990.

Since 1990, the United Church of Christ has seen donations to its national budget fall by about $850,000 to $13.4 million last year.

All this is occurring as some church officials say members are digging deeper into their pockets than ever before, but much of the money is staying at the local level.

"The dollars that a Presbyterian puts in the plate on a Sunday morning, that's at an all-time high," said Jerry Van Marter, a senior report at the Presbyterian News Service.

The same is true for the United Church of Christ, where total giving reached a record $621.9 million last year, according to the denomination's statistics.

Professional big-game hunter puts his own mark on safaris

By Bill Keller
N.Y. Times News Service

VICTORIA FALLS, Zimbabwe — Adrian Read, professional big-game hunter, raised his gun and took quick aim at three tons of wild elephant, startled from a nap in the shade 30 yards away.

Pop! He hit an ear. Pop! A shot to the trunk. Pop! Just above the eyes — a perfect kill shot with a .458-caliber elephant gun.

Fortunately for the elephant, Read was not firing an elephant gun. He was firing gumball-sized pellets of vegetable dye, which produced three bright splats of orange on the elephant's face.

Bewildered, the animal glared briefly at her molester. What a piece of work is a man, she may or may not have marveled before turning to canter away into the acacias.

With the splatball safari, Read says he is pretty sure he has invented a unique market niche between macho and eco — a sport for men who yearn to be Ernest Hemingway but sense that Jacques Cousteau is this age's better model of manliness.

"It's somewhere between hunting and a photo safari," Read explained on a drive through the 30,000-acre private reserve where he expects to launch the pastime he calls "eco-hunting" as soon as the real hunting season ends in November. He will thus test the frequent claim that the thrill of shooting game is as much in the chase as in the kill.

"There are a lot of hunters who enjoy the outdoors, the tracking, and the adrenaline rush of getting in close to an elephant," he said. "But they don't want to kill an elephant."

'There are a lot of hunters who enjoy the outdoors, the tracking, and the adrenaline rush of getting in close to an elephant. But they don't want to kill an elephant.'

— Adrian Read, professional big-game hunter

This is a sentiment Read says he understands in a way few others can. As a professional hunter, safari guide and game warden Read estimates he has taken part in the deaths of 14,000 elephants, some for sport but most in the culling of Zimbabwe's overpopulated national parks.

Now, he says, he finds little satisfaction in laying waste to the great-tusked 40-year-old creature that is a trophy elephant.

Here in this town perched alongside one of nature's most beauteous cascades, his colleagues in the extraction of tourist dollars have yet to recognize the genius of Read's proposal.

Although few complain that the lily of Victoria Falls has been profitably gilded with casinos, Microlight airplane rides and even bungee-jumping into the Zambesi River Gorge, they speak of Read as though his hybrid venture has violated some taboo of the tourist industry Zeitgeist.

The hunters, who have built a prosperous safari business taking Americans and Europeans to kill wild animals in the nearby Matetsi Safari Area, react to eco-hunting the way a steak lover might react to extruded soybean paste.

"Who on earth would pay to shoot an elephant with pink paint?" scoffed Sally Bownes of the Safari Operators Association, the main organization of professional hunters.

Conservationists mock the idea as an insult to animals. "A ridiculous idea," snorted Dick Pitman of the Zambesi Society, while Michael Kock, chief veterinarian of the Zimbabwe Parks Department, said it seemed "bizarre," although probably harmless to the elephants.

One fellow safari guide told Read the idea was "degrading for the elephant," to which Read's partner, David Rhodes, says he replied, "Far more degrading to get a .458 bullet through the brain than to get a splat on the forehead, I would think."

Miniature version of Japan's prime minister to hit store windows in October

By Peter Landers
Associated Press

TOKYO — Japan's Socialist party seems willing to try anything to get ahead. First it allied with its arch-enemy to get its leader the prime ministership. Then it jettisoned almost all of its basic policies.

So it should be no surprise that the man who promised "politics gentle to people" has been immortalized as a toy.

The official Prime Minister Tomiichi Murayama doll is soon to hit the display windows of Socialist party offices everywhere.

One thousand of the limited-edition dolls sporting miniature versions of the prime minister's distinctive, bushy eyebrows will go on sale next month for $18 each.

And buyers better hurry, because 100 people have already called the party to put dibs on a doll.

Murayama's alliance with his former rival, the conservative Liberal Democratic Party, remains unpopular. And veteran leftist activists in the party were outraged when he reversed longtime stands by supporting Japan's military and a sales tax hike.

But the prime minister has performed surprisingly well in opinion polls. A survey published by the Asahi newspaper said more people support his Cabinet than oppose it, contradicting a poll taken just after Murayama took office June 29.

Analysts credit his humble image and those bushy eyebrows, which make Murayama "easy to get to know," in the Asahi's words.

Party public-relations man and doll-creator Hiroshi Imai says maintaining a favorable image is more important than ever.

"Until now, you'd always know who was going to be the next prime minister — it was whoever had the most power, the most money," he said.

"But now Japanese politics is becoming like the United States. Individuality, character are going to be the deciding factors."

That's especially true under a new election system intended to reduce the importance of pork-barrel favors and increase the need for candidates to appeal to a wide range of voters.

The nine-inch Murayama doll wears a tiny T-shirt emblazoned "Ton-chan" — a diminutive for Tomiichi, roughly equivalent to calling President Clinton "Billyboy."

The party is also offering a range of "Ton-chan goods," including telephone cards with Murayama's picture and a Japanese-style folding fan featuring his words.

The practice has spread to the opposition Japan Renewal Party, which plans to offer a "Tsutomu-chan" piggy bank in the shape of the party leader, former Prime Minister Tsutomu Hata.

Blair murder trial enters third week

■ Court reconvenes Monday in trial of 7-year-old Ashley Estell's kidnapping, murder last September.

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Testimony in the Midland capital murder trial of Michael Blair will continue into its third week when Plano District Judge Nathan White reconvenes the change-of-venue trial Monday.

Defense attorneys in the trial were unable to complete their case by late Friday. They had hoped to rest before the court day ended, but unexpected problems arose.

Blair is on trial for the kidnapping and murder of 7-year-old Ashley Estell on Sept. 4, 1993. She was abducted at a Plano park where her brother was playing soccer.

In the preceding weeks of the trial, massive eyewitness testimony and forensic evidence has been presented to a Midland jury of seven women and five men.

During the first week of testimony, Collin County District Attorney Tom O'Connell and assistant District Attorney Bryan Clayton presented witnesses who placed Blair at the scene of the girl's abduction and placed a car matching the description of Blair's black compact car near where the girl's body was later found.

Forensic experts testified extensively about hair and fiber samples linking Blair to the crime.

Hair matching the defendant's was found near hair matching the victim at the crime scene, according to police and forensic testimony. Small body hairs matching the victim were found on a stuffed bunny in the defendant's car, and three head hairs matching the victim were found as well.

There also were matching fibers from stuffed animals and upholstery on the victim's body that prosecutors maintain link Blair to the crime.

Restricted traffic

Beginning Tuesday, Wadley Street east of A Street, will be restricted to two traffic lanes — one westbound, one eastbound — due to water lines being installed. Traffic flow will be restricted, and motorists may want to avoid the roadway. Work should be completed in about a week.

Voter registration

The Midland Jaycees are to host a voter registration drive on Saturday and Oct. 2 at the Community Booth at Midland Park Mall. Hours will be 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Saturday and from noon to 6 p.m. on Oct. 2. Those who register during this drive will be eligible to vote in the Nov. 8 general election.

La Leche League

La Leche League is to meet at 7:30 p.m. Oct. 4 at Grace Presbyterian Church, 2801 N. Garfield St. The meeting topic is to be "The Baby Arrives: The Family and the Breastfed Baby." All women seeking support or information are invited to attend. For more information, call Susan at 694-2018 or Susie at 697-0539.

Rainbow Squares

Rainbow Squares are accepting new students through Wednesday. Classes are from 7 p.m. until 9 p.m. Wednesdays at First United Methodist Church. For more information, call 520-3082 or 683-5853.

Grants for trees

Keep Midland Beautiful has received grants for two tree plantings, made available through the Texas Forest Service and the Small Business Administration. The grants are for tree plantings along Scharbauer Drive and for various trees to be planted at the Museum of the Southwest/Haley Park. Another grant has been received from the Texas Forest Service for a volunteer "Tree Keeper" program to maintain public trees.

Center's help turns woman into survivor after assault

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first in a series of articles featuring people who have been helped by United Way of Midland agencies.

By Lana Cunningham

For eight cents, she was beaten and raped, but the assault cost her much more.

Wendy Storbeck will never forget what happened on March 14, 1991. And she won't forget what it did to her life. But she also will never forget the help she received from the Midland Rape Crisis Center that turned her into a survivor.

TUNE IN! THE UNITED WAY

The engineer at Exxon Co., U.S.A. was at home asleep in her bed and thought she was a having a vivid dream that someone was in her bedroom. But it was no dream.

A man was standing there and when Ms. Storbeck called out, he pushed a pillow over her head. She kept struggling to see him, and the attacker hit her several times in the head with "something hard and metal." Ms. Storbeck thought it was a gun, and later discovered it was a wrench.

The man said he was probably going to kill her and then raped her.

Midland police to hold rally for 3rd annual city Night Out

By Katherine Poteet
Staff Writer

The Midland Police Department will conduct its third annual Midland Night Out Kickoff Rally Saturday with two new events — the McGruff Run for Fun and a Safety City for children.

The run will begin at 9 a.m. Saturday at Midland Park Mall, with prizes being awarded to the winners at 10:30 a.m.

The rally will continue throughout the day inside the mall, with demonstrations, booths and the Safety City.

The rally is designed to promote awareness about Midland Night Out, which will be Oct. 3. The city conducts its Night Out program about two months after the National Night Out in order to be in conjunction with National Crime Prevention Month.

Midland police Officer Phyllis Blair said the Safety City will be set up inside the mall and will run from 10 a.m. - 1 p.m. and 2-5 p.m. The miniature city — complete with battery-operated cars for children to ride in — is designed to teach both vehicle and pedestrian traffic laws.

The Midland Police Department will conduct a canine unit demonstration at 10 a.m. and a Bike Patrol demonstration at 3 p.m. Special appearances will be made by Sgt. McCrime, Trooper Bud, the D.A.R.E. Bear, McGruff the Crime Dog and Pluggie.

Midlander pays tribute to husband, brothers with gift to CAF museum Bush Mission exhibit

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

In reflection, Betty Jo Kerr Moberly today is thankful for the experience of growing up during the World War II era when Americans pulled together to fight and win a war to restore peace.

And it was a period when patriotic Americans were unabashedly proud of their country and its men and women who were working and fighting for freedom on the home-front and "over there."

"It took everybody to make it happen," Mrs. Moberly said of the Allies' victory over the Axis powers in 1945.

"It was a big, stressful time. But we (at home) just did a lot of praying, hoping and working to a make it happen, hoping it would end soon."

Mrs. Moberly was a high school student in the Sanderson ranching community in far West Texas during World War II. Three of her four brothers, Joe, Edward and Campbell Kerr, were fighting the war in Europe and the Pacific. Her youngest brother, James Kerr, "wanted to go with them" but was too young.

He enlisted, in time, for the Korean War.

"I was so excited and so proud," she said of her brothers. "I couldn't have been prouder."

Indeed, Mrs. Moberly said, the "whole country was be-

St. Lawrence community to host its yearly harvest-time German-style festival Oct. 2

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

ST. LAWRENCE — The harvest-time festival in this cotton-farming community southeast of Midland is "one of the greatest things that has happened out here," said farmer Alfred Schwartz.

The annual St. Lawrence Festival, set for Oct. 2, is expected to attract more than 2,000 West Texans who appreciate German-style food, sports, songs and music.

The festival, which has been an annual event since 1956, is a fund-raiser for the community and St. Lawrence Catholic Church, where Mass will be celebrated at 9:30 a.m.

The festival's main meal will be served from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The event's perennial attraction is homemade German-style sausage prepared from pork and beef — 60 percent pork and 40 percent beef.

It is prepared on Saturday morning, cased and smoked for several hours with burning oak in the community's

Down-home Texans usually come up with best quotes in sports

Ott

When I graduated from journalism school back in, oh, 1974 or so, my ambition was to become a famous sportswriter, not so much because I loved the games that were being contested on the fields of battle, but, rather, due to my desire to laugh at funny statements.

And, since government officials rarely said anything even remotely witty, at least not intentionally, it became necessary for me to look elsewhere.

Sports seemed like a logical choice.

While you would never expect a school superintendent to say something like, "Well, son, the budget process ain't over 'til the fat lady sings," coaches, as well as some players, talked like that all the time.

The folksy ones — men like Darrell Royal, Lee Trevino, Bum Phillips and Spike Dykes — were always reaching back into their rural backgrounds and retrieving delightful one-liners that not only made a valid point about an upcoming event, but often offered vivid insights into human behavior.

But most of all they made you laugh.

As luck would have it, Texas has had more than its share of sports comedians. Maybe it is because of the country atmosphere that is so pervasive here, but for whatever reason, the best quotes usually are generated by down-home Texans.

And, now, some of the best have been compiled in a new book by Alan Burton, titled, appropriately enough, ". . . 'til the fat lady sings."

Here are some of the best:

■ "My family was so poor they couldn't afford any kids. The lady next door had me."
— Pro golfer Lee Trevino

■ "People always ask me if success is going to change me, and I tell them I sure hope so."
— Boxer "Tex" Cobb

■ "I'm working as hard as I can to get my life and my cash to run out at the same time. If I die right after lunch on Tuesday, everything will be fine."
— Pro golfer Doug Sanders hind" the American soldiers, sailors and airmen who served in World War II.

Joe Kerr was a decorated fighter pilot who flew the Republic P-47 Thunderbolt with the U.S. Army Air Forces' 9th Air Force in Europe.

Joe Kerr, who was the first of the Kerr brothers in the war effort, volunteered to serve in the U.S. Army Air Corps before the Japanese attack of Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, 1941.

"He knew that we were going to be in a war," Mrs. Moberly said. "It was pretty obvious. He volunteered. I thought it was terribly brave of my mother to give him permission. She knew what was coming."

Campbell Kerr was a yeoman in the U.S. Navy in the Pacific Theater. Edward Kerr was in communications with the U.S. Army Air Corps in Germany.

James Kerr was a U.S. Air Force staff sergeant in Korea during the Korean War — 1950 to 1953.

George Moberly, who later was to marry then-Midland schoolteacher Betty Jo Kerr in 1954, served in World War II as a communications officer with the 15th Air Force in Italy.

"It's just a miracle" that they all survived," Mrs. Moberly said. "I really relish that part of my life. I remember it well, vividly."

Mrs. Moberly is paying tribute to her brothers and to her late husband — whom she had met in Midland in the 1950s — by donating funds in their names, which are to be on the "Wall of Honor" at the Bush Mission exhibit at the Confederate Air Force museum.

The $250,000 interactive American Airpower Heritage Foundation's Bush Mission exhibit is to be dedicated at 7 p.m. Oct. 7 on the eve of the two-day CAF AirSho'94 at Midland International Airport.

Opening, too, will be the American Airpower Heritage Museum's Phase IV exhibit: "Airborne: Gliders and Paratroops."

The Bush Mission exhibit focuses on the role that former President George H.W. Bush played in World War II as a young naval aviator in the war's Pacific Theater.

At age 18 in 1943, Bush was hailed as the nation's youngest naval aviator.

Bush, who piloted the Grumman-designed TBM Avenger torpedo-bomber, was shot down by enemy fire on his mission of Sept. 2, 1944, and was rescued by the crew of the USS Finback submarine.

"The idea is not to do an exhibit about his life, but to do an exhibit about his mission," said Midlander Frank Cahoon, chairman of the American Airpower Heritage Foundation.

The exhibit, which is historical and not political, also salutes the roles that Americans played in the war.

So far, more than 400 contributors have donated funds from $35 to the $50,000 donation of the Abell-Hanger Foundation toward financing the exhibit, which is being produced by PPI — Promotion Products Inc. of Portland, Ore., which specializes in aviation projects, Cahoon said.

While Mrs. Moberly is proud of her heroes — her brothers and her husband — she is also quite proud of her widowed mother, Jo Kerr.

"My mother suffered most," Mrs. Moberly said. "I think she was as big a hero during the war as almost anyone. Looking back on it, I think 'how in the world did she survive with three sons (in World War II) and James later in Korea.' She was a very strong person, very patriotic."

Mrs. Moberly's father, Joe Kerr, a rancher-businessman in Sanderson in Terrell County, died in 1939.

Mrs. Moberly said her mother — who was "well versed in all the classics" — read constantly, especially at night, apparently in part to mitigate her worries about her sons.

"For some reason, parents are big worriers about their children, their safety.

"I remember waiting for mail," Mrs. Moberly said. Mail was the most important thing. Every time we got a letter from one of these brothers, it was a 'big day,' a happy day. The letters might be three weeks old. That was the only news we had."

And during the war, "the thing I did the most (was) write letters" to her brothers. "I would just be rambling" when there was a dearth of news. They didn't care what was in the letters. They were just glad to get a letter."

And on those days when the troop-carrying Southern Pacific System trains came through Sanderson, the townspeople turned out patriotically.

"It was big deal to go down to the troop trains and mail letters for those fellows and give them candy and gum and fruit," Mrs. Moberly recalled.

"It was a patriotic time for everyone. We felt so sorry for those boys hanging off of those cars, wondering where they were going and what would happen to them, how many would get home" from the war.

Persons wishing to donate funds to the Bush Mission may contact Norma Webb, a member of the Foundation board, at 682-0871 or 563-1000.

SURVIVOR: Storbeck remembers help from center

(From 1B)

Then he asked for her money and when her husband was coming home.

"I told him I didn't have any money and I didn't know when my husband was returning. I didn't tell him I didn't have a husband."

The only money Ms. Storbeck had was eight cents, and the man took it.

He sent her into the bathroom. "I could feel the blood running down my face," she recalled. Eventually, she came out of the bathroom — the attacker had left — and she called 911.

A police officer arrived and drove her to the hospital where she was met by two volunteers from the Rape Crisis Center who brought clean clothes and some brochures about the agency.

Ms. Storbeck already had heard about the agency. About eight months before her rape, she had volunteered to be a solicitor for the United Way campaign. As part of the training, she heard a speaker from the Rape Crisis Center.

Not only did Ms. Storbeck call on the center for help in coping with her assault, but the center stepped in to help her parents and friends.

"The issue was the effect it had on my co-workers and peers who knew me. They were outraged," she said. "Friends didn't know what to say. It makes the victim more isolated."

The Rape Crisis Center held seminars at Exxon on how to deal with a victim and how to take precautions against it happening to someone else. Her counselor also helped Ms. Storbeck's parents understand what their daughter was going through. This counselor had been raped several years before, "and they could see she was a functional human being. Meanwhile, I was a blithering idiot," Ms. Storbeck said jokingly.

Midland Rape Crisis Center works to get people "from victim to survivor to thriver," said Martha Weaver Barber, education director.

"The Rape Crisis Center is here for the family and friends. We're here to be a friend, to provide people with information and referrals, for the children of the community and for the male survivors. We're about healing."

In those first months after the assault, Ms. Storbeck called on the center many times for help in coping with the after-effects.

"I couldn't sleep at night; I could not be alone in the dark. I still keep lights on at night. I couldn't go out after dark. I was still afraid someone was watching me, and that they meant me harm."

She would call her counselor, even at night, for reassurance. "The Rape Crisis Center helps you understand it wasn't you that caused the rape, that these people are sick, and they're playing out a fantasy.

"I felt that I would never get over it, and my counselor said, 'yes you will.' From time to time I would try to stretch my wings and go it alone."

She fell to the ground a lot at first, but eventually she found herself flying.

"This has affected me much more than I thought it would. It affected me in personal relationships. It affected me in work relationships. It put me in a constant defense mode."

But Ms. Storbeck didn't want to continue being a victim. "Those volunteers were always available when I called the hotline."

In the last 18 months, Ms. Storbeck said she has gotten most of the problems behind her. She can laugh now about a lot of things that would not have seemed funny before.

Ms. Storbeck's story is not an isolated case. This year, she said, the Rape Crisis Center had seen 133 cases by the end of June. The total number for all of 1993 was 127.

"This tells me there are a lot of people in this community going through a lot of pain. No matter when this (the assault) occurred, whether it was today or several years ago or when they were children, they can get counseling at the center, and it's free."

In the case of Ms. Storbeck, her attacker was never caught. For eight cents, he changed her life forever.

TRIAL: Court reconvenes Monday

(From 1B)

Through cross-examination, defense attorneys attempted to show that hair and fiber matches were not conclusive — not as closely matched as fingerprints and DNA samples.

For most of last week, defense attorneys presented witnesses to show that people other than Blair were plausible suspects in the killing. Since the burden of proof is on prosecutors, the defense must show only reasonable doubt regarding the defendant's guilt.

Much of the testimony presented by the defense centers on a known child molester, Josh Crowley, who was a referee at the 500-game Metroplex soccer tournament.

Investigators dropped Crowley as a suspect early in the case, since his past crimes do not match the girl's death in many important ways, detectives testified.

Witnesses Friday included police and residents near where the victim was found, who testified that an unfamiliar gold four-door car was seen in the area.

"I can't put Crowley at the wheel of that car, but it is a suspicious vehicle," said defense attorney Don McDermitt.

Because of travel problems, an expert witness for the defense was unable to testify Friday. White recessed the trial until Monday and dismissed the jury early Friday, apologizing to jurors for the "glitch" and the subsequent "relatively unproductive day."

"The only good news is that it's a beautiful day outside," he said.

Testimony will continue in the new courtroom on the fourth floor of the Midland County Courthouse.

McDermitt anticipates resting the case Monday, with state rebuttal testimony beginning after that.

Jurors likely will deliberate in the guilt/innocence phase of the trial this week.

Blair could receive the death penalty if found guilty of the charges.

GOP chides senators' attendance of fund-raiser for Bullock

■ Republican Executive Committee adopts resolution that calls decision 'inappropriate'.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — State Republican leaders Saturday chastised eight GOP Texas senators for attending a fund-raiser for Democratic Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, but stopped short of individual reprimands.

During a meeting of the State Republican Executive Committee, members adopted a resolution saying the Texas GOP was "disturbed and upset" by the senators' "inappropriate" decision to attend Bullock's Sept. 13 gathering, which helped raise money for his re-election effort.

Instead of pointing criticism directly at the individuals who attended the Bullock function, the resolution thanked three GOP senators who didn't attend.

Earlier in the week, Bill Price, a conservative Republican who heads Texans United for Life, and other Christian right organizations said the party ought to publicly censure the senators.

Tim Lambert, who chairs the resolution committee of the GOP state executive committee, defended the resolution adopted Saturday.

Lambert said censuring the senators "would have been counterproductive." He said the party still embraces the senators and will work for their re-elections.

"We didn't come here to cut anybody's throat," Lambert said. "We came here to support Republicans. Hopefully, in the future, you won't see this kind of situation again."

Tom Cottar, a member of the executive committee, told fellow members the resolution is "the weakest thing I have ever seen in my life."

"These guys (senators) enthusiastically attended this event against the request of party leaders," Cottar said. "In my opinion, the conduct is intolerable and it damages the efforts of every Republican candidate on the ballot, particularly our lieutenant governor (candidate Tex Lezar)."

Lezar, in an attempt to quell the tension, said in a letter dated Thursday that while he wasn't happy with the decision of the senators, he didn't believe "any formal action should be taken against" them.

The Republican senators who attended Bullock's party were Bill Ratliff of Mount Pleasant; Jerry Patterson of Pasadena; Jane Nelson of Flower Mound; David Sibley of Waco; Jeff Wentworth of San Antonio; Don Henderson of Houston; Teel Bivins of Amarillo; and Chris Harris of Arlington.

Praised in the resolution for not going were John Leedom of Dallas, Buster Brown of Lake Jackson and Florence Shapiro of Plano.

Ratliff said he was trying to avoid partisan gridlock by attending Bullock's gathering.

Task force investigates environmental record of state's largest chicken producer

AUSTIN (AP) — A state task force is investigating the environmental record of Texas' largest chicken producer, according to the chairman of the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission.

John Hall, who heads the three-person TNRCC panel, told the Austin American-Statesman that the agency has assigned a task force to investigate Pilgrim's Pride Corp., which has been fined $551,650 for air, water and land pollution violations over the past decade.

About $286,000 of those fines are still pending because Pilgrim's Pride has appealed, the newspaper reported Saturday.

Officials for Democratic Gov. Ann Richards' campaign say the investigation should raise red flags with voters because the owner of Pilgrim's Pride, Bo Pilgrim, is the East Texas finance coordinator for Republican gubernatorial candidate George W. Bush.

"This company has hundreds of thousands of dollars in pending fines against the state of Texas and yet George W. Bush doesn't see a problem taking money from this man and chumming around with him," said Richards' spokesman Chuck McDonald. "You can't have a more blatant conflict of interest."

But Karen Hughes, a Bush spokeswoman, said Pilgrim's record has nothing to do with the governor's race.

"Yes, Bo Pilgrim has contributed money to us," Ms. Hughes said. "He is raising money for us in East Texas. He is doing a good job raising money for us in East Texas."

Pilgrim has donated $56,486 to Bush and also has held a fund-raiser that yielded $100,000 for the GOP candidate, according to the American-Statesman.

Pilgrim called McDonald's comments "sour grapes."

"It's not unusual for my contributions to run far greater than what I've contributed to the Bush campaign," Pilgrim said. "I probably supported Bill Clements in the area of $100,000, and I gave more than that to Clayton Williams. It's just sour grapes on her (Richards') part."

Clements served two terms as Texas governor; Williams was the 1990 GOP gubernatorial candidate whom Richards defeated.

Complaints have been lodged against Pilgrim's Pride in a lawsuit filed this month by East Texas rancher Susan Nugent. The lawsuit alleges the company has improperly disposed of chicken excrement and has polluted a predominantly black neighborhood by allowing chicken fat to flow in gutters fronting homes.

Pilgrim denies the allegations and says the statute of limitations on the claims have expired.

Pilgrim's Pride Corp. is based in Pittsburg, which is 108 miles east of Dallas.

If you're looking for higher CD yields — call Merrill Lynch.

Certificate of deposit rates have climbed over the past few months, and astute CD buyers are taking advantage by purchasing CDs.

We can suggest one more way to increase the advantages of a CD purchase. Before you buy from your local bank or any other source, call a Merrill Lynch Financial Consultant. Right now, rates on FDIC-insured CDs of banks and thrifts available through Merrill Lynch are higher than the national averages.

Merrill Lynch CDs

TERM	INTEREST RATE	ANNUAL PERCENTAGE YIELD (APY)
3 MONTH	4.70%	4.78%
6 MONTH	5.15%	5.22%
12 MONTH	5.58%	5.58%

The interest rates and the Annual Percentage Yield (APY) are as of 9/22/94 and are subject to change. A minimum deposit of $1,000 is required. In most cases, early withdrawal may not be permitted; however, CDs can be liquidated in the secondary market subject to market conditions. APY may reflect a current market discount.

Don't miss this opportunity for attractive yields and the additional advantages of having one of the world's leading financial services firms behind you.

HOST: St. Lawrence community's harvest-time festival to be Oct. 2 smokehouse, cooled down and then cooked on mesquite-fired grills the day of the festival.

"We start making our sausage at 6 o'clock on Saturday morning," said farmer David Weishuhn, who is president of the St. Lawrence Parish Council.

The community's men will be preparing about 8,800 pounds of sausage and 1,700 pounds of beef.

"It really is a tasty sausage," Schwartz said.

"We use a (sausage-seasoning) recipe that we got back from our mothers and fathers (and grandparents) way back from the early 1900s, back in the old country," Schwartz said. "We use the old German recipes that they used back then."

The beef adds leanness to the spicy sausage.

"We try to do our best to make sure the quality of the sausage is good," Weishuhn said.

Aside from the sausage, plates may be filled with beef, green beans, red beans, potatoes, cole slaw and bread.

The meal costs $6 for adults and $4 for children.

During lunch, The Squeeze-Box Sisters of San Angelo will play the accordion, Schwartz said. They will be playing such songs as "You Are My Sunshine," "Beer Barrel Polka" and German folk songs.

"We have a lot of good, hard-working people" in St. Lawrence, Schwartz said. "They love to have good, clean fun. "All the German women are good cooks."

Weishuhn's wife, Belinda, said "all of us women out here make homemade pies and cakes" and other confections, such as cookies and cakes, for the festival's Country Kitchen.

After lunch, games will be played, including bingo, spinning wheel and football toss. There will be grab bags and face-painting.

Donated goods — including bales of cotton and hardware — will be auctioned beginning 2 p.m.

A supper of sausage sandwiches and the trimmings will be served from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m.

After supper, a dance will be held to further celebrate the festival and the harvest.

"Everyone here is a good caretaker of the soil," Schwartz said, and that makes the work and the fun worthwhile.

The St. Lawrence-area, which was settled in the late 1940s and early 1950s by German descendants from Wall in Tom Green County and Rowena and Olfen in Runnels County, is about 45 miles southeast of Midland. The Glasscock County community is south of Garden City off of Farm-to-Market Road 2401.

POLICE: Rally to be Saturday

(From 1B)

Public Safety will all have vehicles on display throughout the day.

In addition to the law-enforcement demonstrations, booths will be set up throughout the mall by the Allison Cancer Center, American Cancer Society, American Red Cross, Big Brothers/Big Sisters, Boys and Girls Club of Midland, Casa de Amigos, Crime Stoppers, Midland County District Attorney's Victim Assistance Program, Midland Rape Crisis Center, Mothers Against Drunk Driving and the Palmer Drug Abuse Program.

Also setting up booths will be the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children, Permian Basin Regional Blood Center, Greenwood Volunteer Fire Department, Police Department's Crime Prevention unit, D.A.R.E. and Power 106, the Citizens Police Academy Alumni, the Police Department's Physical Training program, Blockbuster, Keep Midland Beautiful, Foster Parents Association, Boy Scout Troop 109, Department of Public Safety, Midland Neighborhood Housing Service and the Police Department's SWAT and Technical Team.

Fingerprinting and face painting will also be available.

This is the third year the Police Department has conducted a kick-off rally. The first was conducted in conjunction with an Angels baseball game; last year's was also held at Midland Park Mall.

"I think it helps get people more involved and more excited about the Midland Night Out," Ms. Blair said.

She said the number of Neighborhood Watch programs in Midland has grown from 47 last year to about 210 this year.

"I went because they were affordable. I stayed because they're wonderful."

I first went to Planned Parenthood because I really couldn't afford a gynecologist. I was young. And nervous. And didn't know what to expect. But now I can afford to go anywhere. And you know what? I still go to Planned Parenthood.

From my very first visit, I felt they sincerely cared about me. They took the time to know me and answered all my questions in plain talk. Every time I go, they're as kind and understanding as ever.

I also feel their medical staff is professional, knowledgeable and very up to date. They're extremely sensitive to a woman's special medical concerns, and everything is kept confidential. I'm glad they offer such a wide range of services. As far as I'm concerned, Planned Parenthood is like family and will always be an important part of my health care.

Demand for vet techs spurs program

Donation of major equipment, animals helps build on a solid foundation

By Elise Coombes

The demand for registered veterinary technicians means that with the hiring of a new director, the acquisition of several large animals and the donation of major equipment, the Midland College Veterinary Technology program is ready to give students new career opportunities.

"All the schools in Texas cannot supply enough veterinary technicians to satisfy the demand," said Interim Vet Tech Program Director Jo Ford.

She said she is pleased the program, which began in 1990, is getting a chance to build on its already solid foundation. Almost 20 students enrolled in the two-year certificate program are already learning lab procedures and surgical assistance procedures, parasitology, pharmacology, immunology and nutrition.

"It's important to our industry that Midland College can produce quality, trained technicians," said Ford, who also is administrator for the Emergency Veterinary Clinic.

Graduates of the program who pass the registration test are qualified to work with a licensed veterinarian. Students have to be capable of working with large and small animals as well as exotic animals including snakes and ostriches, Ford said.

Local veterinarians have been quick to support the program, Ford said. Local vets Henry Lide, Earl Erwin, Bobby Boyd, and Mark Miller have been teaching the college's vet tech courses until the new vet tech director, Kerry Coombs, arrives in October.

These vets also have contributed animals and equipment to help the program meet the national standards for accreditation.

"We will use them, and love them," Ford said of the horse, Pumpjack, the cow, Elsie and her calf, Chap, donated by Boyd and the two goats donated by Lide. Erwin, Craig Cooper and Tom Green have donated other major equipment to help students work with the animals.

Vet Tech Lab Instructor Marcia Bell, student Trina Santiago and Vet Tech Interim Director Jo Ford admire Pumpjack, the program's new horse.

The animals will be used to give students hands-on training with large animals. They, like the small animals that are part of the program, will not be used for experimental surgeries or other "cruel" procedures, Ford said.

The larger animals will be pastured at Boyd's ranch and will not be kept on campus.

Support for the program extends beyond the Permian Basin.

Veterinarian Henry Weir of San Antonio donated a software package that will allow instructors to track everything in the program.

All the schools in Texas cannot supply enough veterinary technicians to satisfy the demand.

Coombs will begin his teaching duties at Midland College Oct. 3. He earned a Doctor of Veterinary Medicine from Colorado State University and a bachelor of science degree from Brigham Young University.

Jazz artists set free performance

It's an annual tradition. For the last 17 years, some of the world's finest jazz musicians have come to Midland to play in the Jazz Classic, and each fall many of those musicians have gathered at Midland College to put on a free concert.

This year the performance will be 2 p.m. Friday in the Midland College Fine Arts Auditorium.

This year trumpet star Randy Sandke will put the Midland College show together and choose the lineup of performers.

Jazz Classic performers who may appear at Midland College include Snooky Young, trumpet; Harold Ashby, tenor saxophone; Jim Galloway, soprano saxophone; Abe Most, clarinet and flute; Marshall Royal, alto saxophone; George Masso and Bill Watrous, trombones; Paul Smith and Ralph Sutton, piano; Ed Bickert and Bucky Pizzarelli, guitar; Jack Lesberg, bass; and Jack Hanna and Butch Miles, drums.

'Classics' presents classes for special group

With no tests or homework assignments, College Classics is the way everyone dreams of attending college.

For a special group of local residents 50 years of age and older, learning is all fun and no pressure.

Registration for College Classics is underway this week. Even though classes begin Monday, there is still time for students to register for classes, according to Donna Hewett, Special Events coordinator.

Coombes

College Classics instructors are recruited from among the Midland College faculty and Continuing Education teachers as well as from the community.

With their areas of expertise and years of experience, these teachers bring to life subjects that include courses on American History: The Revolution, Create Your Personal History, Current Economic Issues and Dialogues of Plato.

Other courses offered this session are Domestic Politics and the News Media, Genealogy, Investing in the 90s, Opera and Piano.

"Everyone in this age group who has the time should try at least one College Classics course. There are many areas of interest and the instructors are wonderful," said Donna Hewett, College Classics director.

The generosity of the instructors allows the college to offer this unique program to a special segment of the community, Hewett said.

1989, several thousand Midlanders have been through the program.

For $25 per semester, students may enroll in as many classes as they choose. The classes are scheduled between 1-5 p.m. Monday through Thursday. Class attendance is flexible allowing for travel and other commitments.

Session I of the fall semester runs Sept. 26 through Oct. 21. Session II begins Oct. 24 and ends Nov. 18.

College Classics schedules are available at all Albertson's locations and both locations of the Midland County Public Library. For registration information about College Classics, call 685-4518.

The Continuing Education department will mail copies of the schedule to interested persons.

Former NASA worker ordered to be deported denies any wrongdoing

■ Judge decides Jong-Hun Lee, of North Korean descent, to be national security risk, orders him back to Canada.

Associated Press

HOUSTON — A former NASA aerospace researcher ordered deported as a suspected North Korean agent denied any wrongdoing Saturday and said he is being punished for his refusal to spy on the communist country.

Jong-Hun Lee, 48, who said he is of North Korean descent but was born and raised in Japan, was ordered out of the country Friday by federal immigration Judge Michael Suarez.

Lee, a Canadian citizen, has been in the country since 1990 on a temporary work visa. In Friday's hearing, he was petitioning for permanent residency through the Immigration and Naturalization Service, but Suarez decided he was a national security risk and ordered him back to Canada.

The decision was based in part on classified FBI information that Suarez refused to divulge to either Lee or his attorney, Herbert Gee.

The judge said he was presented no evidence that Lee has collected information on behalf of North Korea while working in the United States.

But Suarez cited Lee's past relationship with Korean scientists living in Japan and said he could be subject to pressure from the North Korean government because he has a brother who emigrated there from Japan.

"He (Suarez) was determined to kick me out," Lee said Saturday, adding that neither he nor his attorney was allowed to attend the government's closing arguments Friday. "This is extremely biased because we didn't have an opportunity to see anything."

Lee first came to the United States in 1983 and conducted aerothermodyamic research for NASA at the Ames Research Center in Mountainview, Calif., until 1985, when he returned to Canada. He was questioned by FBI agents and Canadian intelligence agents in 1985 when he was seeking Canadian citizenship.

Authorities presented Suarez with a report on FBI lie-detector tests, saying the exam "revealed deception" to several questions, including, "Are you connected in any way with any non-U.S. Intelligence Service?"

Lee claims the San Francisco-based FBI agents asked him to spy on North Korea for the United States and Canada and he is now being punished for his refusal.

"That's the whole story," Lee said. "They wanted me to go to North Korea. In return they offered me the U.S. permanent residency status and also the secure contract with NASA."

Justice Department officials could not be reached by The Associated Press Saturday. An FBI spokesman in Houston said he could not comment because his office was not involved in the matter.

Lee returned to the United States in 1990 and was granted a temporary work visa. He worked at the Johnson Space Center as a subcontractor from 1990 to 1992, when NASA learned about his security status and barred him

Up to 22 percent of state welfare increases stem from federal mandates, newspaper says

HOUSTON (AP) — GOP gubernatorial candidate George W. Bush blames Gov. Ann Richards for a $10.1 billion increase in state welfare spending, but up to $2.3 billion of that was triggered by federal mandates approved by his father, the Houston Chronicle reported Saturday.

Up to 22 percent of the increases appear to have stemmed from mandates signed by former President George Bush, according to budget documents reviewed by the newspaper.

Bush this week began running television ads blaming Richards for a 142 percent increase in the state's welfare budget and an additional 200,000 recipients in the state's Aid to Families with Dependent Children program.

The Republican has offered a plan to get people off welfare by reforming AFDC, including limiting payments to two years.

Bush says state welfare spending has grown by $10.1 billion since 1990. That includes a $1.5 billion increase in programs such as AFDC and food stamps, some $7.9 billion for Medicaid and about $800,000 for programs for the elderly and disabled.

Richards took office in 1991, halfway into the second fiscal year of the 1990-91 biennium. That two-year budget was signed by her predecessor, Republican Bill Clements.

Richards has called the Bush commercial a "distortion" of the state welfare system and pointed to Medicaid changes signed by former President Bush.

During his tenure, the president approved the expansion of Medicaid eligibility to pregnant women and children up to age 6 who were living below 133 percent of the poverty level. Bush also approved Medicaid coverage for those children until they are 19.

At least 28 Davidians were shot during seige

FORT WORTH (AP) — At least 28 Branch Davidians whose bodies were found in the religious sect's burned-out compound had been shot, 10 more than previously believed, officials said.

The group's 51-day standoff between federal authorities and followers of doomsday prophet David Koresh ended in fire on April 19, 1993. The remains of at least 79 people were found in the ashes, including 58 adults, 19 children and two fetuses, said David Pareya, the McLennan County justice of the peace who has coordinated inquests in the case.

Officials said Friday that the latest count shows that 28 of the Davidians had been shot. Tarrant County Medical Examiner Nizam Peerwani testified in February that 18 had been shot. It was unclear who fired the bullets.

Official causes of death will be determined later, Pareya said.

Surviving cult members said the FBI started the fire. Agents said they saw cult members set the flames.

Four federal agents were killed during the Feb. 28, 1993, raid that initiated the standoff.

City is wise to clear I-20 development

Midland officials are to be commended for their decision to clear the way for a $7 million sewer-line project that eventually will remove one of the major hurdles to business development along Interstate 20.

While retail and business development has been proceeding well along Loop 250, particularly during recent weeks, business development along Interstate 20 has been stalled primarily because of the lack of sewer and water lines, inappropriate zoning and inadequate access along the interstate.

That all appears to be changing, however, with expressed interest by some business developers and a recent move by the City Council to direct the city staff to make the sewer line to the interstate a priority item. What that means is that the city is only about 15 months away from having the sewer line in place at which point developers can begin developing areas along Interstate 20.

And, according to Mayor Bobby Burns, "Right now there are businesses we could nail down if we had a sewer line in."

No doubt there will be other obstacles to overcome before the interstate is ready for that anticipated burst of retail business growth. There is little doubt, however, that business development will come to Interstate 20 just as it is progressing along Loop 250 in north and west Midland.

Business development is a shot in the arm for a community such as Midland, and while some residents may complain about how that development "hurts" their part of town, few complain about having more retail stores at which to shop, increased competition between merchandisers which lowers prices, or a healthier local economy.

We believe that the City Council's move to install the sewer line to the interstate is in the best interests of the city overall and commend them for their action.

GEORGE WILL

National mood may be 'gray is beautiful'

BOSTON — Massachusetts may be the Jurassic Park of American politics, where the dinosaur of liberalism lumbers on, oblivious to the fact that its era has long since passed. But the Tyrannosaurus Rex is endangered.

Will

For some while, whispers have been heard: This time, Ted Kennedy may actually have to break a sweat to get reelected. Then last Sunday a poll by a respected Cambridge firm showed Kennedy in a statistical dead heat with his likely Republican opponent, Mitt Romney.

Romney, a 47-year-old venture capitalist, is approximately what Republicans would have asked central casting to send to them as the ideal contrast with Kennedy. Romney is bemused by the fact that Kennedy has hired detectives to snoop into his past. A Mormon father of five sons, he doesn't drink, not even Coca-Cola with caffeine. People who know him swear he never swears. This race is (in the words of The Boston Globe's Ben Bradlee Jr.) Pat Boone against Dean Martin.

Romney was 15 in 1962 when Kennedy was first elected to the Senate and Romney's father, George, was elected governor of Michigan. Mitt Romney espouses a blend of fiscal conservatism and social tolerance (he is prochoice on abortion) like that of the incumbent governor, Republican Bill Weld, who is romping toward re-election.

In Kennedy's five re-election campaigns he has averaged more than 66 percent of the vote. The Cambridge poll says: Romney 43 percent, Kennedy 42 percent. When those numbers percolate out to the country, conservatives will reach for their checkbooks.

Romney expects to spend $7 million and expects Kennedy to spend more. But Kennedy's real war chest is the federal budget. He is translating his seniority (fourth in the Senate, behind Strom Thurmond, Robert Byrd and Claiborne Pell) into contracts, public works and other ingredients of Massachusetts' high-pork diet.

Massachusetts' economy has been badly bruised by Massachusetts' government (the Dukakis "miracle"), by defense cutbacks and by a shakeout in the computer industry. So the large place Kennedy occupies at the federal trough is an asset people here may be reluctant to surrender.

Furthermore, old habits die hard. There has been at least one Kennedy brother in Congress for all but two of the last 48 years — since Jack went from the Navy to the House in 1946. And Ted, whose wisest detractors will concede that he is a gifted legislator, has arguably had a more consequential career than either Jack or Robert. So Romney is running against a public monument, and in a state in which although it is not actually illegal to register Republican, only 13 percent of voters do.

On the other hand, more than a third of the eligible voters were not yet born when John Kennedy was assassinated. To them, Camelot is as distant as the Taft administration.

Massachusetts went from being the one state George McGovern carried in 1972 to being one of the 44 states Reagan carried twice. Still, in the last seven presidential elections (since 1968) Massachusetts has been just slightly less Democratic than the most Democratic state, Rhode Island. If the issues, from welfare reform through health care reform, get squarely joined, this campaign could be a clear liberal vs. conservative choice.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Jimmy Clinton gives intervention bad name

WASHINGTON — With lust in his heart for a Nobel Prize, Jimmy Carter undermined Bill Clinton's resolve and turned a triumph of American strength in Haiti into a fiasco of wimpish indecision.

Safire

Here is what the last-minute flinch shows us about the first U.S. president to permit a usurpation of his authority:

1. He does moral flip-flops with the greatest of ease. On Thursday, Clinton was portraying the Haitian dictator as a murderer and tyrant; three days later, the thug became a man of honor, and worse, our partner in cracking skulls.

2. His ultimatum means nothing. Clinton swore to the world the negotiating was ended; then he permitted a broker to deal on his behalf; then he cracked under pressure, okaying a deal to let Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras stay in Haiti to try to become another Castro.

3. He can be jerked around by his pacifist predecessor. Carter, with no authority, offered the junta a broker, then enlisted Sam Nunn and Colin Powell, then confronted a president panicked by the prospect of using force; the passive Clinton permitted the negotiation of major concessions while pretending he was permitting only "modalities" of eviction.

4. He can be personally insulted with impunity. Jimmy Carter trumpeted that he told the dictator he was "ashamed of United States policy"; that was Clinton's policy he was ashamed of, but the president cheerfully continues to wear his "Kick Me Again, Jimmy" sign.

5. He returns no loyalty to loyal aides. Warren Christopher, who was criticized in this space long before it became a Beltway pastime, has steadfastly carried Clinton's slopping water buckets. In this episode of foreign-policy freelancing (as in Carter's naive, spare-the-rods intercession in North Korea), the secretary of state was humiliated.

Carter, in a self-immolating interview with Maureen Dowd in The New York Times, is contemptuously rubbing State's nose in its loss of face.

6. Clinton has lost control of his foreign policy. When crisis-is-over Carter denounces "the basic policy of the State Department" on the use of any sanctions against human-rights abusers, the president stands mute.

We have learned a couple of things about the universally lionized Colin Powell, too:

1. He is inclined to wishful thinking that leads to dangerous assumptions. It was Powell who telephoned Vice President Gore to assure him that the brokers had set up circumstances that would force what U.N. Resolution 940 declared was "the departure from Haiti of the military leadership."

Gore then briefed the networks, which reported that the military leaders would soon leave. Carter told Congressional leaders their departure was "likely." Later, we learned it was only "power" the dictator would leave — as he promised before — but not Haiti.

2. He made inevitable a "mission creep." After Gen. John Shalikashvili made clear the mission of U.S. soldiers was not to act as military police, the junta's vicious cops let the celebrating populace know who was still in charge. Now, thanks to the fuzzy deal brokered by Carter-Powell-Nunn, our MP's, who speak no Creole, are forced by photos of clubbings to take over the police function — placing us between an arrogant and undefeated Haitian military and a disappointed people.

3. Colin Powell tends to act as if his primary mission is to avoid bloodshed — a laudable aim — rather than decisively to depose dictators. In Iraq, it was Powell who saved the lives of Saddam Hussein's Republican Guard, which prevented the overthrow of a murderous tyrant; in Haiti, it was Powell who enabled a ragtag army of thugs to preserve its "honor" and power over the people.

The only favor Jimmy Carter did for Bill Clinton was to hype but ultimately diminish Colin Powell's potential as a Republican vice presidential candidate.

As this all began, I expressed the fear that Clinton might give intervention a bad name. By virtue of his pulled punch, "Jimmy Clinton" has done just that. No wonder the isolationists are smirking.

ANOTHER VIEW

TEC could use program to link workers, jobs

The welfare rolls are too long, and poor people need jobs more than handouts. Why, then, is the Texas Employment Commission refusing to cooperate with North Texas and the federal government in a program that seeks to link job seekers with available openings?

"Operation Jobs" seeks to put unemployed citizens and authorized aliens to work. Spearheaded by the federal immigration service, it is currently being undertaken in actual or projected cooperation with Tarrant, Denton and Dallas counties, along with the Dallas Police Department, refugee resettlement agencies and even the Salvation Army.

An example of how Operation Jobs works arose recently when a Dallas-area manufacturing plant was found to have 218 undocumented workers on its payroll. A plan was agreed upon by which the illegal portion of the work force would be replaced with citizens or other authorized workers. But even though the Texas Employment Commission is willing to workl with individual employers who contact their office directly, it refuses to handle requests for Operation Jobs. Given that the commission specializes in linking unemployed workers with jobs, that refusal undermines the goals of the program.

The real issue, says the commission, is one of resources. But last year the commission also argued that being linked in any way to the removal of workers would be viewed unfavorably by most employers. The state agency also argued that employers who use undocumented workers evade employment laws and workplace standards and are thus not worthy of its cooperation. Yet unknowingly hiring unauthorized workers is not against the law, and those employers who occasionally do this are often found to pay minimum wage and above, and provide good working conditions.

Effectively denying willing citizens and other authorized workers the opportunity to work even when work is available is wrong. Gov. Ann Richards should demand that the Texas Employment Commission participate in Operation Jobs.

If a marginal increase in Texas Employment Commission resources is necessary in order to help more people find work, then the Legislature should do so after considering the cost benefits of getting people off the welfare and unemployment rolls. Otherwise, state government risks being exposed not only to charges of dereliction, but hypocrisy as well.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, Sept. 25, the 268th day of 1994. There are 97 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Sept. 25, 1493, Christopher Columbus set sail from Cadiz, Spain, with a flotilla of 17 ships on his second voyage to the Western Hemisphere.

On this date:

In 1513, Spanish explorer Vasco Nunez de Balboa crossed the Isthmus of Panama to reach the Pacific Ocean.

In 1690, one of the earliest American newspapers, Publick Occurrences, published its first — and last — edition in Boston.

In 1775, American Revolutionary War hero Ethan Allen was captured by the British as he led an attack on Montreal.

In 1890, Mormon president Wilford Woodruff issued a manifesto formally renouncing the practice of polygamy.

In 1981, Sandra Day O'Connor was sworn in as the first female justice on the U.S. Supreme Court.

GOP to beg for money after Capitol gala

WASHINGTON — More than 300 Republican House candidates will be herded to the steps of the U.S. Capitol Tuesday morning to offer a "contract with America." Later that night, Republicans will cut another contract with lobbyists and special interests at a GOP gala.

Anderson

During the first two years of the Clinton administration, Republicans have proven they know the price of everything from medical care to midnight basketball. But the fund-raising dinner for this year's congressional candidates shows they also appreciate the value of political access. The National Republican Congressional Committee has fired off a two-page fund-raising letter that reads more like a rate card than a reform agenda.

NRCC Chairman Bill Paxon begins his pitch to GOP contributors by waxing sentimental about standing beneath "the watchful eye of the Statue of Freedom" on Tuesday and restoring "our Founding Fathers' dreams of a government of the people, by the people and for the people."

That's a strange preamble for an old-fashioned political shakedown. For individuals and PACs, a table of 10 is fetching $5,000 for the GOP. Corporations must pay $7,500 for a table — but they won't complain since the GOP "contract" teems with tax breaks they've been coveting. NRCC officials say they've sold 140 tables.

Paxon pleads in the letter, "We cannot do it alone... .Join our team today by purchasing tickets to The U.S. Capitol Steps Gala." He writes:

"With the purchase of a table, donors have the option to request a Member of the U.S. House of Representatives or Congressional Candidate and his/her guest to complete the table of 10... In addition, one attendee per table may join the Private Reception with the House Republican Leadership and other, special VIP guests prior to the Gala."

It's unclear which of the two contracts is binding on Republicans: the written or the unwritten. In both cases, there's a large degree of false advertising.

The unwritten contract will be sealed Tuesday night with the special interests, who will want to collect on it in the future. The written contract is a checklist of 10 bills to be voted on in the first hundred days if Republicans take control of the House.

Though the written contract could turn out to be more fantasy than fact, a senior White House official told our associate Ed Henry that the Clinton administration is taking the Republicans at their word. "Over the next five years, they'd have to cut a total of $858 billion in spending in order to make these tax cuts and still balance the budget," this official said.

Republican pollster Frank Luntz, who has been working on Tuesday's event, explains it this way: "You have to make a commitment to the concept first and then you deal with the details."

There's also the question of how Republicans propose to clean up Congress without reforming the corrupting system of campaign finance. There is no mention of the money chase among the top legislative priorities. "(Campaign finance reform is) a cutting issue with the swing voters," Luntz told us. "A fair conclusion is that you can't change the system if you benefit (from it). It's going to take people on the outside, a new Congress with a lot of freshmen."

To be sure, both Republicans and Democrats have dirty hands. But Republicans have largely stayed in the rafters, jeering and second-guessing Democrats.

LETTERS

Some students didn't enjoy schools in '50s

This letter is in response to the column William Murchison wrote titled, "Schools in '50s taught discipline, respect."

I, too, was a child of the '50s when we worked hard and had tests and homework. There was some kindness now and then when the teacher had a good weekend. We could tell by the way she started the class Monday morning.

I had a different view of the teachers and the school, because the first thing they did was mispronounce my name and told me that I was not to speak a foreign language anywhere on the school grounds, or else I would be sent to the office. I wondered what kind of school this was that would not let me communicate the only way I knew how. I spent many a day trying to figure out what the teacher was saying and trying to read and understand the papers she gave me to take home to sign. I looked forward to P.E. because, there, I could talk to someone like me and laugh and forget about that long morning.

Those years were long and hard, but somehow I began to understand the language. I played it safe and avoided making any mistakes by watching other children and doing what they did so as not to get in trouble. But, one day, this boy in my class pulled this girl's hair, and I was blamed for it. The teacher took me straight to the office, even though I had never been in trouble. I was scared to death, but I told him the truth, and he did not believe me because he gave me my first paddling in school. I went home that day and told my parents, and they said that maybe I had not explained the situation right. They said that they could not go and talk to him because if they did not understand me, who had all that schooling, surely they would not understand them, who had none. The best thing I could do would be to stay away from the children that were making trouble and hope they would not blame me again. That was the day that I swore that I would learn this "gringo" language as good as could be learned, so that I would never stutter again in front of the man in the suit.

So, you see Murchison, some of us did not enjoy that place of kindness, that spirit or the way we learned in those days.

Senator shouldn't scare elderly citizens

A retired Modern Maturity letter writer says she is surprised that some older folks believe that the Clinton health-reform plan is inherently bad. These elderly folks have been unduly scared. Sen. (Phil) Gramm, for instance, declares that the Clinton plan will "cost millions of American jobs" and that the plan betrays Social Security recipients.

Gramm's accusations are false. I believe it is quite improper for a U.S. senator to promote his anti-health care position by scaring elderly citizens.

Businesses support committee's motto

Recently, nearly 50 students were awarded prizes for completing ReadAmerica 1994, a summer reading program sponsored by the Education Combination Committee.

The program challenged older Americans, other adults and teens to become reading partners with kindergarten through sixth-grade youngsters. Participants completed a pledge card, assembled in the Midland Park Mall and were awarded Rex and Rita Saurus T-shirts, books, various gift certificates and free coupons.

Winners of $50 savings bonds donated by Bank One were: Megan Floyd, Christopher Millstead, Keaton Kinzer and Emily Fortuna. Chris Bond and Zachary Taylor won $50 savings bonds from Midland America Bank and Midland National Bank, respectively. Stacey Johnson's name was drawn to collect a $25 savings bond donated by Texas Commerce Bank.

Other businesses donating prizes were: Pages & Prints Bookstore, Blockbuster Video, Hastings, B. Dalton Bookseller, Waldenbooks, Creative Schoolhouse, The Lighthouse, Museum of the Southwest and the Blakemore Memorial Planetarium.

The sponsors of ReadAmerica 1994 wish to thank these businesses for their support in keeping with the motto of the Education Combination Committee, "It takes an entire community to educate a child."

Media give deficient reports on penal code

As students and teachers of criminal law, we are concerned about the accuracy of information provided to the public through your recent series on the justice system. In particular, the chart of changes to the Texas penal code failed to indicate positive aspects of the 1994 amendments. For example, your article leads the reader to believe that solicitation of a child and intentionally exposing another to AIDS are no longer crimes in the state of Texas. Closer attention to the current laws of Texas reveals that the conduct previously prohibited under the solicitation statute, a class A misdemeanor, is now prosecutable as kidnapping, a second-degree felony. The former statute dealing with intentionally infecting another with AIDS, although technically repealed, is defined as attempted murder. according to Weeks vs. State.

Not only are we discovering incomplete reporting in the newspaper, but also in other media reports, such as local newscasts and public affairs programs. Two area broadcasts indicated that aggravated assault on a police officer was now a misdemeanor. In truth, seriously injuring a public servant, who is performing official duties at the time of the assault, is now a felony of the first degree. Public servants include police officers, lawyers, candidates for office and notaries public.

These are illustrative of but a few of the misconceptions about the justice system that are pervasive in today's society. It is all too easy to blame the Legislature for any and everything. In the case of the current penal code, many changes reflect an effort to streamline and simplify prosecution by eliminating duplicate statutes. Perhaps the system isn't perfect, but bandwagon caterwauling about "Injustice for All" isn't responsible journalism.

Readers' views on: MISD board decision

Four imply mothers do not know best

Do mothers know what is best for their children? At the school board meeting on Tuesday, Sept. 13, four board members indicated that a mother does not know what is best for her children. My request for a medical transfer for my two children was denied by the board by a 4-to-3 vote.

My two children, ages 7 and 8, have severe asthma and have been attending Milam Elementary since kindergarten, which is minutes from my employer. I was notified I would have to move my children to Crockett Elementary, located farther from my employer. Upon this notification, I requested a medical transfer so that my children could continue to attend Milam. My reasons for this are: 1) When the children have an asthma attack, I quickly come to their school and administer a breathing treatment. The treatment is administered within minutes so that more medical problems do not develop. 2) My children have always attended Milam, and the teachers and office staff are familiar with the asthma situation and react quickly when notifying me of an attack.

My husband and I went before the school board and brought a letter from the children's pediatrician supporting their medical problems and requested they not be moved from Milam. It is crucial that a severe asthmatic be administered treatment quickly so that there are no further medical problems.

The majority of the school board decided that they know better than a doctor and, "yes," better than a mother, and denied the transfer. I disagree with the majority in the board's decision and find that same majority to be insensitive and non-caring when dealing with children with medical problems.

I would like to thank the three board members that supported my request; they are James Fuller, Adela Marmolejo and Michael Dobey. For the four board members whom I feel did not take the time to evaluate and even consider my request — what if it were your child's health at risk, would you have voted the same?

Board doesn't help family's situation

Recently the Midland school board made a decision not to grant a set of parents the permission to allow their children to remain at Ben Milam Elementary. This is a school where the children have gone since kindergarten. These children have serious problems with asthma. The parents had medical documentation that the children should remain at Milam Elementary because of the mother's close work location to the school.

The parents of these two children have always been volunteers in the neighborhood and schools. Why is it when we do have excellent volunteers and Christian people, as in this family, we cannot help them? To put so much effort forth to make our community a better place and at a time when they need a recommendation from the very school board who pleads with parents to become involved in their community and the schools, our own Midland school board does not help.

I do want to thank the three school board members for voting for the Clay family. And fortunately, one of the members who did vote for them is my school board representative. Thank you, James Fuller.

Readers' views on: Electric bill refunds

We need to wake up about utility firm

Wake up, America, as Earl Pitts says. I just wanted to pass on information to our TU Electric customers.

On Aug. 3, 1993, TU Electric imposed a price increase of 15.3 percent (and all the taxes to go with it) for residential customers and 22.95 percent (1½ times) to businesses without consent of the Public Utilities Commission (PUC).

I called the PUC in Austin and was told TU Electric had put up a bond, plus interest to cover the increase, and all customers would be reimbursed if they did not receive the approved increase.

The PUC met in January 1994 and passed a 8.9 percent increase. Today, one year later, our refund came through. My residential refund would have been in the amount of $345 plus interest by my calculations. My business refund would have been approximately $1,300 plus interest.

I am a decreed accountant and own my own business. I cannot calculate the small amount of this month's electric bill (around 10 percent) as a result of the overcharge for a year. By my calculations, the refund due me should be 10 times the amount refunded, plus interest. With August's bill, at my business, appeared a small pamphlet asking for four new tariffs as of July 11, 1994.

This electric company has blocked Caprock Electric (which services part of Midland County) from purchasing fuel for electricity at a 40 percent reduction in the cost. How can this be? Who are these people on the Public Utilities Commission? Who appoints these people to do this job? Who reaps the benefits from these decisions?

In my opinion, all other increases in our city, MISD taxes, county taxes, etc., are related to this unbelievable increase. As Earl Pitts would put it, wake up America or suffer the consequences.

TU Electric holds Midlanders hostage

Are people as tired and weary of paying huge electric bills as I am? During the hot months of June and July, I struggled to pay my electric bill and was anxiously awaiting my rebate on my August bill. When I received my bill, I eagerly opened it, and much to my surprise, the bill was as high as it had been, even with the credit. After talking to TU Electric, they told me that since we had not been paying enough during the year on the fuel surcharge, they were adjusting that charge on the bill, which wiped out the credit I was expecting. In other words, TU Electric giveth, and TU Electric taketh away!

Do people realize that we are held hostage by TU Electric? We either pay the bill or stay in the dark. It is time for the citizens to realize that TU Electric is a monopoly, and we have no choice in what electric company we use. It is time for government to deregulate the electric companies as they did the telephone companies. We should be able to choose what electric company and what rate we pay. Southwestern Public Service in the Panhandle of Texas is much cheaper than what we pay here in West Texas.

If you are tired of paying huge electric bills and wish to choose your electric company, write letters! Write to the Public Utilities Commission, 7800 Shoal Creek, Suite 450 N, Austin, Texas, 78757. Write to your governor, state representative, state senator or anybody else you can think of to protest being held slaves to TU Electric with the ever-increasing rate hikes. If enough people protest, maybe, just maybe, somebody will notice.

No one seems happy unless they complain

The first time I saw Midge Erskine she was on her way to Stanton to pick up a sick bird. Midge Erskine is one of a kind. If her neighbors are so unhappy with Midge, why don't the Bakers move and leave Midge in peace? No one seems to be happy anymore unless they are complaining about something or somebody.

If the Bakers think Midge has too many birds, they should come out on East U.S. 80 and look at my peas with about 400 pigeons ruining them. These pigeons do not belong to me either, but I have to put up with them. We have 10 acres of peas every spring and the fattest pigeons in Midland. I'm sick of pigeons.

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification. Letters not including this information will not be considered for publication.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations. The shorter the letter, the better its chance of publication.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.
- Letters will be edited for length, taste and legal reasons and are accepted only on that basis.
- We do not publish 'open' letters or copies of letters sent to others.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

DAVE BARRY

Cold War gave Americans guilt-free fun

Back in 1954, when the Russians were evil and I was a first-grader at Wampus Elementary School in Armonk, N.Y., the school authorities regularly conducted emergency drills wherein we students practiced protecting ourselves from nuclear attack by crouching under our desks. We'd hunker down there until Mrs. Hart gave us the word that the nuclear war was over, then we'd crawl back out and resume reading about the fascinating adventures of Dick and Jane. ("Ha!" said Dick. "Ha ha!" said Jane. "Ha ha ha!" said Dick. "Ha ha ha ha" ... etc.)

Barry

I understand this drill was conducted in many schools in the '50s. Apparently the desks used in classrooms back then were made of an exceptionally missile-resistant variety of wood. During the Cold War years I often wondered why it never occurred to our defense planners to protect the entire nation from nuclear attack by simply covering it, from sea to shining sea, with a huge Strategic Classroom Desk.

I now realize that our defense planners did not have time to be fooling around with ridiculous schemes like that. They were too busy spraying deodorant on cows. According to an Associated Press story sent in by many alert readers, the Army recently admitted that in 1963 and 1964, Army scientists went to stockyards in six American cities and "sneaked up on cows and sprayed them with deodorant." I am not making this up. The idea was to find out whether enemy agents could spray American cows with hoof-and-mouth disease germs, thereby spoiling our nation's beef supply, not to mention wreaking havoc in the ketchup industry.

Needless to say, the cow-spraying operation, like just about everything else the federal government did during the Cold War, was a secret. I'm guessing that it had a classified name, perhaps "Operation Cow Pow."

After spraying deodorant on cows, the Army scientists probably went to a bar to celebrate their successful mission by having a few drinks and — in the tradition of suave covert operatives such as James Bond — picking up women.

ARMY SCIENTIST (suavely): Hi. I'm a covert operative. Don't tell anybody.

WOMAN: What's that on your shoes?

Yes, it was a risky job. But somebody had to do it. Because there was a Cold War on, and for all we knew, somewhere over in Russia, communist scientists, bent on world domination, were spraying deodorant on THEIR cows.

Of course those days are gone. The once-mighty Soviet Union has degenerated into a bunch of obscure nations with names like "Kazoobistan," populated by would-be capitalists trying to borrow money from us so they can buy frozen-yogurt franchises. Gone, too, is the very real threat that at any moment, a nuclear war could wipe out human civilization. I frankly miss it. I mean, during the Cold War, you could always say to yourself, "Hey, any minute now I could be blown to atoms, so why should I (pick one):

a. ... clean the toilet?"
b. ... give up heroin?"
c. ... not eat these last seven eclairs?"

Yes, you could have guilt-free fun during the Cold War, as opposed to now, when the prospect of reaching old age has turned us into a bunch of health-obsessed wussies, squinting at product labels in the supermarket, trying to locate the low-fat bean dip. Also, with the Soviet Menace gone, our government hardly ever does fun stuff any more. I'm sure I speak for millions of Americans when I say that I'd rather see my tax money used for covertly spraying deodorant on cows than for printing up yet another 652-pound health-care plan.

Fortunately there is one government outfit that still has some of that old Cold War paranoid spunk. I refer to the Central Intelligence Agency, which recently admitted that it had been hiding four large buildings in suburban Virginia from the rest of the federal government. You probably read about this. Under questioning from a Senate committee, the CIA admitted it was building a $310 million office complex that nobody, including President Clinton, knew anything about. And if you're wondering how a project that large could be kept secret, then you clearly have never seen the federal budget, which is larger than your garage. The CIA could easily have slipped $310 million in there under a heading such as "Snacks."

This story gave me a warm feeling. It reminded me of the good old days, when life was exciting and communists were trying to destroy the nation's moral fiber via such tactics as "rock'n'roll" music and J. Edgar Hoover was keeping an eye on everybody in the United States except actual criminals and Richard M. Nixon was finding enemy microfilm in pumpkins and nobody had ever heard of "dietary fiber." Just for old times' sake, I'm going to crouch under a desk.

CHECKING OUT THE LIBRARIES

Downtown, Centennial branch libraries help children build bookworms

Sandra Wegner

The children's departments of the downtown library and Centennial branch library have gone into the worm business.

Young readers can build their own library bookworms at home and display them on bulletin boards, refrigerator doors, etc.

With each visit to the downtown Rosalind Redfern Building at 301 W. Missouri Ave. or the library branch at Midland Park Mall, children get a piece to add to their worm that is stamped, "I went to the library today."

The downtown library has also scheduled an origami craft time for 6- to 8-year-olds at 2:30 p.m. on Oct. 22.

No preregistration is required, but spaces at the craft session will be filled on a first-come basis.

The downtown library now has a public bulletin board located in the lobby near the front entrance. Notices will be accepted for nonprofit events and public information.

This is one last call for donations to the Friends of the Library book drive. From 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. this week at 401 N. Colorado St., the friends are ready to accept hardback and paperback books, videos and recordings. These will be sold at the 27th annual book sale, Oct. 13-16 at the Midland County Exhibit Building.

The Library Advisory Board has approved a library card replacement policy. Library patrons who have already been issued one free bar-coded green card will be charged $2 for a replacement.

Patrons who lose or report a stolen card will be asked to wait three months before receiving their replacement card, as lost cards frequently are found. Borrowing privileges will continue during the waiting period.

Consider giving a book to the library in memory of family, friends or associates. You may give money for materials in selected subject areas or departments. You may want to suggest a specific title. The person being remembered and your name will be acknowledged in the book. The library will notify whomever you wish of the gift. You can also let a special person know how much you appreciate them now by making a donation in their honor. For more information, call the library at 688-8991.

New resources continue to arrive in the Redfern Genealogical Research Center of the library. The first eight volumes of the "Roll of Honor" are on the shelf. These list names of Union soldiers who died in the Civil War and are buried in national cemeteries.

For southern research, "Records of Louisiana Confederate Soldiers" is ready to use.

The "Combined Alphabetical Index to the South Carolina Department of Archives and History" is on microfilm and assists the genealogist in requesting information from the Columbia, S.C., institution.

Those with German ancestry may find a familiar name in "Germans to America." The library has 40 volumes covering passengers arriving at U.S. ports between 1850 and 1881.

On a walk through the downtown library, this is a sampling of what one might find: a video on the history of the Jeep; a CD of James Galway; a Tom Clancy book on cassette; an art print of Grandma Moses; public domain software for a spreadsheet; the classic "Gone with the Wind"; or the current best seller, "The Bridges of Madison County."

Other examples are: the latest edition of the Texas Penal Code; an issue of KIDCity; a Richard Scarry picture book; topographic maps of Andrews County; state travel brochures; Byram's 1994 Petroleum Producers of Texas; census microfilm of Texas; a CD-ROM of U.S. residential telephone numbers and issues of Bon Appetit and Weight Watchers. Enjoy!

Sandra Wegner is director of the Midland County Library.

West Texas man builds retail utopia in old powdered egg factory

By Steve O'Neil
Lubbock Avalanche-Journal

LAMESA — When Gordon Waldrop bought the old powdered egg factory here 18 years ago, some people thought he was nuts. But in the years that followed, Waldrop turned the sprawling, dilapidated building into a merchant's mecca, a junkman's paradise.

"Sure, a lot of people thought I was crazy when I bought this place," Waldrop says, strolling through the building. "But they could not see what I saw in the place."

Built in the early '30s, the 490,000 square foot building was a creamery. Later, during World War II, it housed what some say was the largest powdered egg factory in the world.

Now, it houses an eclectic array of Waldrop's thingumabobs and thingumajigs.

In the middle rooms of this brick building, Waldrop sells hardware, seed and animal feed — the latter two being his bread and butter.

Thousands upon thousands of metal parts from long-forgotten machines line shelves in some rooms, while antique furniture and antique cars fill other rooms.

"Oh, I have a good time here," he says, stopping frequently to examine various angular pieces of machinery. "I sell a lot of my stuff, but I think I collect it faster than I can unload it."

In an airy, three-story-room in the front of the building sits what looks like an enormous upright steel toy top stretching to the ceiling. On the ground floor are a myriad of oddities: a rheostat the size of a suitcase, lead doors to a boiler, an electric refrigerator from the '40s.

"This is called an air cyclone, and this was about the last step for the powdered eggs," he says referring to the steel top, while clacking up metal stairs along one wall. "They would blow air through there at high velocity, and it would spin, and the centrifugal force would force the powder out of the air, causing it to stick to the sides of the funnel."

When he reaches the top of the staircase he walks up to a hole in the center of the domed structure and peers in. The cement floor can be seen through a hole at the structure's narrow bottom 25 feet below.

"This must have been something else when they had it running and all of those people were working," he says with a smile. "I suppose a lot of eggs have gone through here."

Lamesa's W.B. Osborn, 78, was around when the egg factory was in its heyday. From 1942 until 1945, Osborn was in charge of doling out paychecks. And with 500 employees, that was no small job.

"It was one of the busiest jobs I ever had, but I was younger then and I didn't mind," he says.

Henningsen Lamesa Inc. opened in 1942 to supply the U.S. military with powdered eggs. As far as Osborn knows, it was the largest powdered egg factory in the world.

"At one time people from all over the globe were eating eggs from Lamesa," Osborn says.

And with the military's insatiable need for food, the factory operated 24 hours a day.

Army's Buffalo Soldiers celebrate 125th anniversary of troops' formation

By Scott Rothschild
Associated Press

AUSTIN — Four years after the end of the Civil War, the U.S. government offered black males food, clothing and shelter and $13 a month in exchange for five years service in the Army.

They became known as "Buffalo Soldiers," and although they were given the worst equipment and some of the most difficult assignments they were among the best soldiers the country had and helped settle the West, historians say.

"It was an opportunity to better yourself," said Kenneth Pollard, organizer of a 125th anniversary commemoration at the Capitol on Friday.

"Each regiment was assigned a chaplain to teach reading and writing. The $13 a month wasn't bad either. That soon after the Emancipation Proclamation, this was a good job," he said.

Congress created several all-black regiments, including the 24th Infantry which was headquartered at Fort McKavett in western Menard County.

In 24 years of service, the Buffalo Soldiers protected the expanding frontier and helped build roads and telegraph lines. During that time, they earned nine Congressional Medals of Honor including the first post-Civil War Medal of Honor to Sgt. Emanuel Stance, who was stationed at Fort McKavett.

"They didn't flinch. They worked in hard conditions, they were disciplined. Black regiments had the lowest desertion rates than any other military unit," Pollard said.

John Q. Taylor King, chancellor and president emeritus of Huston-Tillotson College in Austin, said his great uncle William Thomas Anderson, who was born into slavery, had served as a chaplain with the Buffalo Soldiers.

"He took great pride in saying, 'I am a Buffalo Soldier.' History has definitely overlooked the contributions of the Buffalo Soldier," King said. "I am just delighted of this resurgence of interest on the part of African-Americans and other people to bring to light the contributions of the Buffalo Soldier."

Both Pollard and King, and Margaret Vining, a museum specialist from the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C. were to participate Saturday in a symposium on the Buffalo Soldier at the Austin Convention Center.

Raiders trample Ponies

■ Zebbie Lethridge and other freshmen lead Texas Tech to a win over SMU in the teams' SWC opener.

By Mike Butts
Staff Writer

LUBBOCK — Texas Tech accomplished more than a simple victory with Saturday's 35-7 win over SMU. In beating the Mustangs for the sixth straight time the Red Raiders (2-2) also:

■ Probably settled their quarterback question. In his first start freshman Zebbie Lethridge ran for one touchdown and threw for two others while displaying outstanding scrambling ability.

■ Won their Southwest Conference opener for only the fourth time since 1977.

■ Got a much easier win than expected over an improved SMU team.

■ Put themselves in position to go 2-0 in conference play for only the second time in 15 seasons.

"The first conference game is of special significance," Tech coach Spike Dykes said. "There's two football seasons and if you're going to make your mark on the wall you've got to win conference games."

SMU fell to 1-3 in the conference opener for both teams played before a 29,521 homecoming crowd in Lubbock's Jones Stadium.

Tech's defense limited the conferences' leader in total offense — SMU quarterback Ramon Flanigan — to 4-of-13 passing and 30 yards before he left the game in the second quarter with a pulled hamstring.

Stewart steals page from Flutie

■ Kordell Stewart and Michael Westbrook hook up on tipped 64-yard touchdown pass in final seconds to give No. 7 Colorado a 27-26 win over the No. 4 Wolverines..

Associated Press

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Move over, Doug Flutie and Gerard Phelan. Make way for Kordell Stewart and Michael Westbrook.

In a miraculous play reminiscent of Flutie's famous Hail Mary pass in 1984, Westbrook made a diving 64-yard touchdown catch of a tipped toss from Stewart on the final play Saturday to give seventh-ranked Colorado a 27-26 victory over No. 4 Michigan.

With 6 seconds remaining, Stewart dropped back and heaved a long pass toward the Michigan goal line, where a group of players from both sides leaped for the ball. It was tipped into the air and caught in the end zone by Westbrook, who grabbed it over the shoulder of Michigan's Ty Law.

"They all jumped up and I just waited because I knew it was going to come back," said Westbrook, a native of nearby Detroit whose parents and high school coach were among the crowd of 106,427 at Michigan Stadium.

"All three receivers were there. I just happened to be the one in the back. It was tipped, and there was no one else around. I was just me and the ball. All I had to do was catch it. I have never had a feeling like this in my life."

Michigan safety Chuck Winters got his hand on the ball first, but it was knocked away by Colorado receiver Blake

Permian holds on to defeat Lee

By Terry Williamson

Midland Lee's Lady Rebels tried desperately Saturday afternoon to make a huge statement in the District 4-5A volleyball race only to see league leading Odessa Permian to survive a 15-13, 8-15, 15-13 win at the Lee gym.

Permian climbs to a perfect 4-0 first half record, and remains as the only unbeaten team in the 4-5A loop. Lee, meanwhile, could have moved into major playoff contention with the upset, only to see a 2-3 district mark as the result.

"This was a very tough one to lose," said Lee coach Anita Corder. "I thought we controlled the match, but not the outcome. This is the best this team has played and they wanted the match and didn't get it.

"I think it is unfortunate that we try to bring a sophisticated style of volleyball to West Texas and we weren't allowed to operate that way. Every play-

Oilers try to avoid 0-4 crisis

By Michael A. Lutz
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON — It's finally beginning to sound and look like the Houston Oilers again.

Their preseason was uncharacteristically harmonious and all it got them was an 0-3 start going into Sunday's game in the Astrodome against the Cincinnati Bengals, also 0-3.

Now the old crisis-driven Oilers are back.

The assistant head coach and defensive coordinators have had words, the defense is accusing the offense of nonsupport and there is general unrest on a team that last year won 11 games in a at our poor performance," SMU coach Tom Rossley said. "Ramon just wasn't able to perform like he would like to.'

Lethridge had split time with Tony Darden in Tech's first three games. But Dykes named him the starter earlier this week and he played almost all of the SMU game.

"Zebbie got better as the game went on," Dykes said. "I saw a different Zebbie in the second half."

The Red Raiders also got good play from several other freshmen on offense. Odessa Permian product Sheldon Bass caught his first career touchdown pass, Dane Johnson returned a punt 69 yards for his first Tech touchdown and Byron Hanspard rushed for 115 yards.

"We had nine or ten freshmen who played well," Dykes said. "Considering how many we've played on offense we've done a tremendous job."

Dykes would not say whether Lethridge had won the permanent starting quarterback position. But he did say the Lubbock Estacado product would start against Texas A&M next week.

"I probably felt better today than I have all year," Lethridge said.

Lethridge's touchdown pass to Bass, which made the score 28-7 in the third quarter, could be the first of many for that freshman combination.

"I hope that Zebbie Lethridge will come to me some more times," Bass said. "I don't want to stop there."

Flaningan's absence certianly hurt SMU. The Mustangs had 293 net yards of offensive to Tech's 452.

"Their whole offense is based around him and that's a tough chore to go the whole day without him," Dykes said.

Tech grabbed a 21-0 first half lead on two drives and a punt return. Lethridge threw 12 yards to Field Scovell to convert a third and nine to the SMU 27-yard line. He later found open space in the left flat on a passing play and ran in for a 7-0 Tech lead.

Lethridge threw to tight end Jerod Fiebiger for a six-yard touchdown in the second quarter. That drive covered 73 yards with the big play coming on 22-yard reverse by Stacy Mitchell.

SMU threatened with a second-quarter drive down to the Tech 23. But a tripping penalty and a sack pushed them back to midfield. Later in the quarter Tech returned its first punt for a TD in four years when Johnson scored to put the Red Raiders up 21-0.

SMU answered that return with one of its own when Larry Wilson brought the kickoff back 85 yards to the Tech 13. The Ponies drove to first and goal at the Tech one but quarterback Chris James fumbled a snap and the Red Raider defense turned back the Mustangs on a fourth down try from the five when Cat Adams intercepted James' pass in the end zone.

SMU held and got the ball back on its 44 yard line. James completed a touchdown pass on the first play to John Biggins to move the Ponies to within 21-7 at halftime.

Tech scored on the Bass pass and a Tony Darden throw to Matt DuBuc in the second half.

"We got Texas A&M looking down the gun barrel," Dykes said of the Red Raiders' next opponent, who they play on the road. "They're the conference champions and they've won 1,000 in a row or 2,000 in a row at College Station."

Or so it seems. But for at least a week, Tech will share the SWC lead.

TECH NOTES: Tech fans may have gotten a bit of a jolt from the game's program cover — a cartoon depicting the Tech Red Raider atop a horse representing SMU's Mustangs. The Mustang pleaded with the Raider, "You ain't ridin' me around the stadium are you?" The joke referred to Tech's quarter horse mascot which the Masked Rider students traditionally ride around Jones Stadium. This years' horse — Double T — was killed in an accident at the Raiders' first game. The program cover was printed before the tragic mishap ... The SMU game is the first of three SWC conference openers Tech will play in this year. Texas A&M starts their conference Oct. 1 against Tech and Rice opens their conference play Oct. 8 against the Red Raiders ... SMU's seven points were its lowest output since losing to Arkansas 10-6 to open the 1993 season.

Aggies use big plays to club Eagles

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Leeland McElroy highlighted a game of big plays with a 100-yard touchdown return of the opening kickoff, leading No. 12 Texas A&M to a 41-17 victory Saturday over Southern Mississippi.

The Aggies (3-0) won their 22nd straight at Kyle Field and took over the nation's longest current home winning streak because Washington beat Miami 38-20 at the Orange Bowl on Saturday, ending the Hurricanes' record run at 58 straight.

A&M jumped to a 27-10 halftime lead over the Golden Eagles (2-2) behind several big plays like McElroy's run, a 57-yard TD pass from Corey Pullig to Ryan Mathews on a fake end around and a 61-yard field goal by freshman Kyle Bryant.

McElroy got it started just 13 seconds into the game when he headed straight up field, darted right then got past kicker Chris Pierce and raced into the end zone. It was his fourth career touchdown on a kickoff return.

McElroy helped set up a second-quarter 3-yard touchdown run by Rodney Thomas with a 47-yard run that went for five more yards when he fumbled and teammate Chris Sanders recovered it upfield.

Bryant, who kicked a 30-yard field goal with 3:53 to go in the half, tried and missed on a 56-yard kick but he got another chance from 61 yards because of a penalty.

This time, Bryant's kick took off low but was dead center and barely eased over the crossbar. He's the first Aggie freshman to start his kicking career with eight straight made kicks.

Bryant's 61-yarder was the second longest kick since the NCAA banned the used of kicking tees in 1989. The longest was a 62-yarder by Jason Hansen of Washington State against Nevada-Las Vegas in 1991.

Southern Mississippi tried to match the big-play flavor of the game, but they were outmanned from the start.

Pierce, subbing for regular kicker Johnny Lomoro, kicked a 30-yard field goal, the first of his career, in the first quarter and Tommy Waters threw a 26-yard touchdown pass to wide receiver Fred Brock in the second quarter.

Brock broke down the sideline and made a diving one-handed catch in the end zone.

Ronald Jones scored Southern Mississippi's final points on a 5-yard TD run with 8:39 to play.

Owls hand Hatfield first Rice win, 28-18

AMES, Iowa — Byron Coston set up a Josh LaRocca touchdown with an 87-yard run and LaRocca passed for two more scores as Rice won a battle of winless teams Saturday, beating Iowa State 28-18.

Rice (1-2) won for the first time under coach Ken Hatfield and sent Iowa State to its first 0-4 start since 1987. Iowa State made it respectable only by scoring two late touchdowns after trailing 28-3 early in the fourth quarter.

Iowa State, which has lost six straight dating back to last season, tried to shake up its sluggish triple-option offense by running more I-formation plays. But the Cyclones continued to struggle in a steady rain and had only 129 total yards after three quarters.

Leading 6-0 late in the first half, Rice faced a first-and-20 situation at its own 9-yard line when Coston took a handoff from LaRocca and broke free up the middle. Russell Johnson made a touchdown-saving tackle at the Iowa State 4 to end the fourth-longest run in Rice history.

But LaRocca dove into the end zone from 1 yard out three plays later and Emerson Allen ran for a two-point conversion on an end around, giving Rice a 14-0 halftime lead.

No. 20 Buckeyes blank hapless Cougars, 52-0

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Eddie George and Jermon Jackson sandwiched touchdown runs around a safety as 20th-ranked Ohio State scored 16 points in a two-minute span of the first quarter on the way to a 52-0 victory over Houston on Saturday.

George finished with 105 yards on 11 carries, his fourth straight game with more than 100 yards rushing, and Jackson scored the first three touchdowns of his college career.

Houston was shut out for the second game in a row for the first time since 1965. The Cougars, who averaged 54 points a game five years ago with Heisman Trophy winner Andre Ware at quarterback, have scored 20 points in four losses this season while giving up 135 points.

They also remained scoreless in the first three quarters of their games this year.

It was the most lopsided shutout by Ohio State since a 63-0 victory over Northwestern in 1980.

Ohio State amassed 373 yards in the first half while piling up a 36-0 lead.

After Trace Craft missed a 30-yard field goal on Houston's best shot at scoring, the Buckeyes reeled off 16 quick points.

George gained 32 yards on the last six carries of an 80-yard drive, scoring on a 2-yard run. Three plays after a muffed kickoff return put the ball at the Houston 3, fullback Ryan Burton was tackled in the end zone for a safety by Ohio State's Matt Bonhaus and Luke Fickell.

TEXAS: Longhorns dominate Horned Frogs

(From 1C)

Austin between Colorado and the Longhorns.

Shea Morenz was 16-of-28 for 169 yards and two touchdowns and Priest Anthony Holmes scored on two short runs as the Longhorns overpowered the Frogs and got off to their best start since 1985.

Texas jumped ahead 14-0 behind two quick touchdowns late in the first period.

Pinkney celebrated his return by outjumping two Horned Frogs on a 24-yard touchdown pass from Morenz. Pinkney had been suspended for improper use of a rental car and he missed a game while a flight he took to Los Angeles was investigated.

On the ensuing kickoff, disaster hit the TCU special teams as Matt Moore had trouble handling a bouncing ball and Taje Allen of Texas recovered at the TCU 21.

A pass interference call set Texas up for a 1-yard TD run by Holmes.

Holmes scored on another 1-yard run in the second quarter after Texas converted a fourth-and-4 from the TCU 36 when Morenz hit tight end Steve Bradley for seven yards.

A field goal exchange gave Texas a 24-3 halftime lead, but the Frogs finally victimized the UT defense midway of the third period on a 29-yard touchdown strike from Max Knake to John Washington.

Thank You

For the past nine years the people of Midland and the Permian Basin have made it a joy to live and work in this area. I wish to take this time to say thank you for all the business and the friendship in those years. It's time for me to move on to other challenges that you have made possible. Thank you.

Lions subject to letdown against Patriots

By Dave Goldberg
AP Football Writer

Barry Sanders ran for just 16 yards two weeks ago against Minnesota. Then he got 194 Monday night against Dallas in as brilliant a performance as he's ever had.

So what will he do when New England brings the NFL's worst defense to Pontiac on Sunday? Probably let Scott Mitchell pass to Herman Moore and Brett Perriman against a secondary that's given up 1,067 yards in the air, an average of 356 a game.

"It's not like they don't go where they were supposed to go," says Bill Parcells, who spent more than $3 million to bring in Myron Guyton and Ricky Reynolds to beef up the New England secondary.

"They're going where they're supposed to go and then they're either getting outrun or the ball's just thrown over their head. They're not doing what they're supposed to do once they get there."

This is a pivotal game for Detroit, which improved to 2-1 with its overtime win at Texas Stadium — both its wins came in overtime. The Lions were as high as they could be after the win, making this the perfect scenario for a letdown against the Patriots, 1-2 after three non-Parcells-like shootouts.

But at least the Lions got a rehearsal for Drew Bledsoe by controlling Troy Aikman in Dallas. They did that largely by dropping eight men into a three-deep zone, forcing Aikman to throw underneath.

Now the Lions have to play the "let's keep an even keel" game to get ready for the Pats and Bledsoe, whose three 300-yard games already have tied a New England season record.

"I'm not worried about a letdown," says Wayne Fontes. "But we're a day short and a lot of hours tired. We just have to get ready for New England."

And hope they're not a game short.

■ NFL This Week

Miami (3-0) at Minnesota (2-1)

The fourth "Super Bowl Preview!!" of the season? The way both teams are playing, it could be.

Miami has turned around its defense by plugging rookie Tim Bowens into the middle of its defensive line. The Dolphins, a sieve for the past few years, lead the NFL against the rush.

That will be tested this week by Terry Allen, who ran for 159 yards in the 42-14 rout of Chicago after the offense had been held to 20 points in the first two games.

Minnesota has an inside rush that should test Dan Marino. Do the Vikings miss Chris Doleman? Tackles Henry Thomas and John Randle have seven sacks between them.

Pittsburgh (2-1) at Seattle (2-1)

A good test for the Seahawks after their letdown loss to San Diego, and the John L. Williams homecoming game.

Williams, who spent eight seasons with the Seahawks has become the guy who turned Barry Foster around by counseling the star running back whose game had fallen off and whose attitude leaves something to be desired.

Then Foster ran for 179 yards last week in the win over the Colts. Williams' blocking at fullback had a lot to do with that, and so did his leadership.

"Sometimes a change in scenery makes veterans feel young again and they're out to prove something all over," says Pittsburgh coach Bill Cowher.

Denver (0-3) at Buffalo (2-1) (Monday night)

They want Wade Phillips' job in Denver, but the real culprits are the front office people who failed to give him a defense while they were getting guys like Anthony Miller and Mike Pritchard for John Elway to play with.

Nor has Elway dazzled anyone. He has seven touchdown passes in three games —four to Broncos, three to other guys (Stanley Richard, Mo Lewis, Terry McDaniel.)

Buffalo has recovered from its dismal home opener, a 23-3 loss to the Jets, with road wins over the Patriots and Oilers.

Chicago (1-2) at N.Y. Jets (2-1)

This is the kind of game the Jets should win, but so often lose against a team that's shown nothing since beating Tampa Bay in an opener it could have lost. Erik Kramer has a separated right shoulder and Steve Walsh may start for Chicago, which could be a break — Walsh was impressive in exhibitions.

The Jets defense was the culprit against Miami after standing up well in wins over Buffalo and Denver. The main problem may have been the heat, but just in case it was personnel, Tony Casillas was signed on Monday to beef up the defensive line.

New Orleans (1-2) at 49ers (3-0)

For the last seven years, this has almost always been a game for control of the NFC West. Now it's a salary cap grudge battle — the Saints were the loudest complainers when the Niners once again manipulated the cap to sign Deion Sanders.

This is the week Sanders may pay off. He will start at left corner, allowing Merton Hanks to return to free safety, where he's more comfortable, and sending Dana Hall to nickel back.

Atlanta (1-2) at Washington (1-2)

The Falcons have never won at RFK Stadium, where they're 0-10, including a loss last year, when the Redskins were dismal.

The Chiefs burst the Jeff George-Andre Rison bubble last week, picking off two of George's passes to break a long string without an interception and holding Rison to three catches after he had 26 in his first two games.

John Friesz, meanwhile, is destroying Norv Turner's master plan for the Redskins by keeping rookie Heath Shuler on the bench. Friesz had four TD passes against New Orleans two weeks ago, then threw for 381 yards against the Giants last week.

Cleveland (2-1) at Indy (1-2)

After an impressive opener, the Colts have reverted to traditional habits, losing in Tampa, then squandering a 14-0 lead in Pittsburgh last week against a team wearing perhaps the ugliest "Throwbacks" uniforms ever devised. Marshall Faulk, who leads the AFC in rushing, has given them a running game, but the defense leaves something to be desired.

Tampa Bay (1-2)-Green Bay (1-2)

Is there anything new about the Bucs, 9-7 losers at home to New Orleans last week? Yes — their defense is reasonably respectable, sixth in the NFL in yards allowed and tied for third in points allowed.

OILERS: AFC Central teams look for 1st win

(From 1C)

row calling itself "Team Turmoil."

"This is the most important game in the history of the Houston Oilers," excitable cornerback Cris Dishman said. "Because of where this team is, it's bigger than the AFL title game of 1960 (won by the Oilers)."

Winning has often followed their most distracting incidents. The Oilers can't explain it, but they seem to thrive on distractions.

"Sometimes this team seems to play better with controversy," wide receiver Ernest Givins said. "Well, if controversy will bring us together and get us going, then I'm ready for some controversy."

Givins got his wish.

Although not as publicized as last season, when former defensive coordinator Buddy Ryan punched offensive coordinator Kevin Gilbride on the sidelines, Gilbride and new defensive coordinator Jeff Fisher also had a halftime verbal skirmish during the game against the Dallas Cowboys.

The coaches admitted there was talk about why the Oilers offense didn't run out the final seconds of the clock — the same type of incident that inspired Ryan to go after Gilbride last year.

Both coaches admitted they discussed the situation, but declined to elaborate.

The offense vs. defense battle continued after the Oilers forced Buffalo to win last week with five field goals, 15-7. Then the defenders attacked the offense for its futility.

Dishman started an emotional postgame assault of the offense, which has had problems scoring points with backup quarterback Bucky Richardson subbing for injured Cody Carlson.

Gilbride, the assistant head coach in charge of offense, has been getting heat this season because of the sluggish start; for trying to include a tight end; for occasional two-back sets; and for keeping the basic run-and-shoot alignment.

"We're in a growth process with a lot of new players in key spots, including a young, developing quarterback who started the last two games," Gilbride said.

Owner Bud Adams wondered why the Oilers' No. 1 draft choices of the past two seasons weren't contributing more. This year's No. 1 pick, Arkansas defensive end Henry Ford, has struggled and Brad Hopkins, last year's top choice, found it hard to hold onto the starting left tackle job.

Cincinnati coach Dave Shula is wary of the Oilers' apparent disorganization.

The Oilers were 1-4 when they defeated New England last year to break a three-game losing streak. Their second victim was Cincinnati and the Bengals don't want to be a part of another Oilers comeback.

"We heard all this same stuff last year when they started slowly," Shula said. "We played them close until the fourth quarter and then they won the game. We just don't want to be the team that they get it turned around against this year."

Shula has his own problems. The Bengals are trying to build around former University of Houston quarterback David Klingler, coming off one of his best games as a pro in last week's 31-28 loss to New England.

The Bengals are the only team in the NFL without a sack this season.

"Last week we played well against the run," Shula said. "Unfortunately, they were able to throw the ball for over 300 yards. So, we're plugging holes, but we still have others that are leaking."

The Oilers expect Carlson to return to the field for the first time since he suffered a second-degree shoulder separation in the season opener against Indianapolis.

Cincinnati has lost nine straight games in the Astrodome, dating back to 1984.

CITYLINE — The Talk of the Town

LOCAL SPORTS

Lee loses Dunson for rest of season

Midland Lee's 37-0 victory over Midland High Friday night did prove to be a costly win.

Lee running back Melvin Dunson, the Rebels' leading rusher with 559 yards this year, was lost for the season to a fracture of the scapula (shoulder blade).

Lee tight end Ronnie Adams dislocated an elbow in that game also. It is not known how long he will be out, but he won't play next week against Abilene High.

Midland High reported no serious injuries.

Mustangs roll over Texas Christian

ABILENE — Midland Christian used a 45-yard touchdown run from Colby Lee on the final play of the first half to propel the Mustangs to a 38-23 win over Texas Christian of Arlington in a battle between the TAPPS No. 2 and No. 3 ranked teams at Elmer Gray Stadium here Saturday.

With the win, Midland Christian improves to 2-2 on the year while Texas Christian falls from the ranks of the unbeaten, 3-1.

The Mustangs fumbled the ball four times, which resulted in two Texas Christian touchdowns, but used a stellar defensive effort from Jerad Zahn, Alan Awtry and Chris Patteson to limit the Spartans to just 193 yards offensively.

"We had a great defensive performance," said Midland Christian coach James Blake. "We controlled the game with the exception of the fumbles. They got us in trouble."

Lee rushed for 100 yards and two touchdowns offensively for MCHS.

The Mustangs will return to action against Grandfalls-Royalty next week.

MHS spikers fall to Bronchos

ODESSA — The Midland High Lady Bulldogs fell into a third place tie with Abilene Cooper here Saturday afternoon after falling to Odessa High, 15-12, 15-5 in straight sets.

MHS now has a 2-2 record in 4-5A action and will host 0-4 Abilene High at the MHS gym Tuesday at 7:30 p.m.

Odessa High climbed into a fifth place tie with Midland Lee after the win with a 2-3 loop record. OHS is open Tuesday from league action.

San Angelo moved into sole possession of second place with a victory over Cooper.

Falcons sweep V-ball twinbill

ODESSA — The University of Texas-Permian Basin volleyball team, playing in its first season, defeated Texas Tech's club team, 15-7, 15-13, 8-15, 15-3 on Saturday.

UTPB followed that by defeating North Lake Community College of Dallas 15-6, 15-4, 15-12.

The Falcons return to action Monday when they face the Howard Payne junior varsity at 7 p.m. at the UTPB gymnasium. Admission is free to the general public.

Lee, MHS fare well at X-country meet

SEMINOLE — Midland Lee's and Midland High's cross country teams showed improved times during the Gaines County Cross Country Meet here Saturday.

Shannon Moore of the Lee girls team turned in a time of 15 minutes, 3 second for a 32nd place finish. LHS' Juan Porras turned in the best city time with a 17:53 for 25th in the boys division.

Both teams return to action next Saturday at the Big Spring Cross Country Meet.

Girls: 32. Shannon Moore, Lee, 15:03; 48. Laura Moore, MHS, 15:56; 62. Marcie Watson, 17:07.

Boys: 25. Juan Parras, Lee, 17:53; 31. Victor Leggett, MHS, 18:09; 37. Mike Johnson, MHS, 18:19; 48. Jeff Lee, MHS, 18:56; 55. Steve Herrera, Lee, 19:15; 60. Rudy Esquivel, Lee, 19:37; 61. Jason Tervooren, 19:39; 68. Wayne Cagle, 20:23.

Permian upends Midland netters

Odessa Permian swept all nine girls matches and then took two boys matches to capture an 11-7 win over Midland High in District 4-5A tennis action at the MHS Courts Saturday.

"I expected things to go down to the wire," said Midland tennis coach Tom Heiting. "We had a couple of disappointing efforts put forth and that was the difference in the outcome of the match."

With the loss, Midland drops to 1-2 on the year. The Bulldogs return to the court Tuesday at Big Spring at 4 p.m.

Purple outlasts Bowie for victory

Midland Purple used 153 yards rushing and two touchdowns from Richard Montez and an 83-yard kickoff return by Kirby Lemons to defeat Odessa Bowie 32-28 in Midland Saturday.

Also scoring for Purple were John Reyes, Joey Schlaffer and Camar Jackson. Zack Inman kicked two extra points for Purple, which improved to 3-1 on the year.

Abell improves to 3-0 in 8th grade

In the eighth grade Midland-Odessa Conference, Midland Abell climbed to 3-0 with a 42-0 win over Odessa Hood as Michael Hunt rushed for 101 yards while Matt Winston and Trevaris Webb each had two touchdowns and Hood was held to under 100 yards rushing.

Odessa Bowie defeated San Jacinto 22-16 as Bashir Jordan and Jacinto Montelongo each scored a touchdown.

In other action, Goddard "A" defeated Alamo 20-18 behind three touchdowns and a two-point conversion from Charles Tatum.

Daniel White scored two touchdowns and Craig Johnson added another for Alamo.

Eric Clodfelter had an interception and Michael Maynez recovered a fumble for Alamo and Shemond Davis intercepted a pass from Goddard. Goddard meets Odessa Bowie while Alamo meets Abell next Saturday. Alamo "B", which was idle Saturday, will face San Jacinto Wednesday.

S.J. 'Buys' 7th grade win

In the seventh grade National Conference, San Jacinto defeated Alamo 20-0 as Charlie Buys had three touchdowns.

In the seventh grade American Conference, San Jacinto White defeated Alamo Maroon 32-20, while S.J. Green upended Alamo Gray 38-20.

Abell White overpowered Goddard White 52-14. Abell quarterback Brooks Stevens and Nathan McWherter scored two touchdowns each to lead Abell. Joseph Norman and Issac Washington each added scores for Abell White.

In "B" action, San Jacinto blanked Alamo 22-0.

Next Saturday, Alamo Maroon faces Abell Blue at the Lee practice field, Alamo Gray battles Abell White at Alamo and Alamo "B" plays at Goddard.

Trinity blanks Union in middle school

Trinity Middle School evened its record at 2-2 with a 33-0 win over Union Saturday.

The seventh and eighth grade team received touchdowns from Richard McMillan, Wyatt Edge and L.T. Burns.

Trinity returns to action Thursday against Westbrook.

Lee freshman spikers claim win

Lee freshman Gray captured a hard-fought victory with a 15-13, 13-15, 18-16 win over Odessa Bowie in ninth grade volleyball action Saturday.

Carol Bombara and Toya Clayter were recognized for their play.

Lee, which has won five of its last six matches, improves to 7-9 overall. LFHS returns to action Wednesday against Crockett.

Gilbert's birdie run gives him co-lead

■ Larry Gilbert and Jim Dent overcome poor weather to share the senior Brickyard Crossing Championship lead.

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Larry Gilbert birdied six straight holes on the back nine Saturday to tie Jim Dent for the second-round lead of the Brickyard Crossing Golf Championship.

■ Golf Roundup

Both shot seven-under 65s, tying the course record in the $700,000 Senior PGA event at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

Five players — Tom Wargo, Simon Hobday, Mike Hill, Graham Marsh and Isao Aoki — are just a stroke back at 66. Aoki won last week's Senior PGA event at Lexington, Ky.

Gilbert might have shot even better, but missed several short putts on the front nine and hit a bad tee shot on 18 on the way to missing a 10-foot par putt.

"I feel very confident in my swing right now," Gilbert said. "If my putter stays with me, I've got a good chance."

J.C. Snead is the only player at 67. Six players shot 68 — Jim Albus, Tom Weiskopf, Jimmey Powell, Walt Zembrisky, Calvin Peete and Dale Douglass.

Chi Chi Rodriquez, second last week at Lexington, was eight strokes off the lead at 73. Dave Stockton, the leading money-winner in the field, shot an even-par 72.

Hill put himself in position to finish the day atop the leader board, posting birdies on five of six holes before double-bogeying 18.

Dent, in the clubhouse early with a 65, played a clean round with seven birdies and no bogeys.

"That's a low number, 65," Dent said with a smile. "You don't get it that often, so when you get it, you've got to appreciate it."

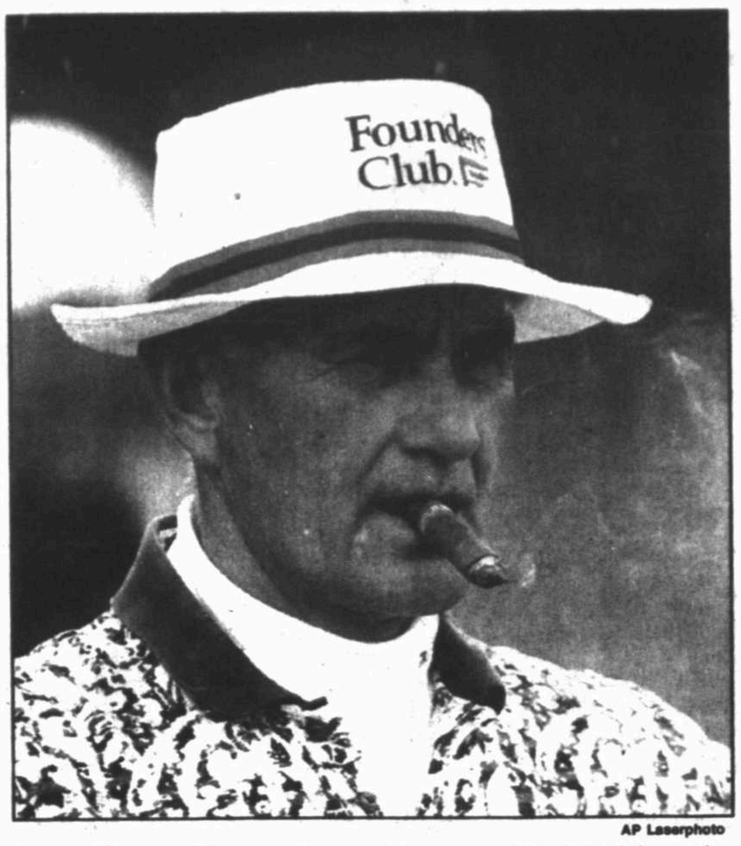
Dent predicted a tight pack because of the wet conditions that allowed players to aim at the pin.

"You're going to have at least 30 guys or more who can win on this golf course," he said.

Friday's first round was washed out by heavy rain at the newly redesigned course at the speedway.

Saturday's play was played under "winter rules," with players allowed to lift and clean balls in fairway lies, contributing to the low scores.

Rain threatens to return for the final round, so today's play will begin with a two-tee start, with foursomes beginning at the first and 10th holes at 9 a.m.



AP Laserphoto

Larry Gilbert puffs on a cigar as he surveys the 18th fairway in the Brickyard Senior Classic. Gilbert is tied with Jim Dent at 7-under for the lead heading into today's final round.

Hardees Classic

COAL VALLEY, Ill. — Kenny Perry made a 12-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole Saturday for a share of the third-round lead with Mark McCumber in the rain-soaked Hardees Classic.

Perry and McCumber shot 5-under-par 65s for 12-under 198 totals. Curt Byrum was a stroke back after a 65.

First-day leader Robert Wrenn was tied for the lead going into the 18th hole but had a double-bogey after hitting his tee shot off the fairway and following with a poor pitch.

Wrenn's disappointing finish and a 67 left him at 10-under, tied with Mike Donald at two shots back. Donald shot 64.

The start of the round was delayed 3 hours, 12 minutes by heavy rains. Split tees and threesomes were used to speed up play at the waterlogged Oakwood Country Club that has been hit by bad weather since the tournament started Thursday.

McCumber, who won the Anheuser-Busch Classic in July for his eighth tour victory, birdied Nos. 15 and 16, both par-4s, to move to 12-under and catch Wrenn. Perry had six birdies and a bogey.

The low round Saturday went to Michael Bradley, who had an 8-under 62 to move within three shots of the lead. His round was one shot off the tournament record.

Senior Amateur

NICHOLASVILLE, Ky. — O. Gordon Brewer, of Huntingdon Valley, Pa., won four of the last five holes against Bob Hullender of San Antonio for a 5-and-4 championship victory at the USGA Senior Amateur Championship at The Champions Golf Club.

A veteran of 25 USGA championships, Brewer was playing in his first Senior Amateur. He was runner-up at the 1985 U.S. Mid-Amateur to Jay Sigel.

He started his final 18-hole match with two straight birdies and allowed Hullender, a retired Air Force general, to win only two holes the rest of the way.

"When he went birdie-birdie to start, I started pressing," said Hullender, who plays despite two artificial hips. "I felt like I had to do something. He wasn't going to make many bogeys."

The Senior Amateur (55-and-over) is one of 13 national championships conducted annually for men and women by the United States Golf Association.

American upsets 4th-seed Sabatini in Nichirei semi

TOKYO (AP) — Amy Frazier defeated fourth-seeded Gabriela Sabatini of Argentina 6-1, 6-3 on Saturday for a berth against Arantxa Sanchez Vicario in the final of the Nichirei International Ladies Championship.

The top-seeded Sanchez Vicario outlasted Japan's upset-minded Nana Miyagi 6-2, 2-6, 6-4 in the other semifinal which ended five minutes shy of two hours on Ariake Colosseum's hard court.

Miyagi upset third-seeded Lindsay Davenport and sixth-seeded Sabine Hack of Germany in successive days to get to the semifinals.

Sabatini had problems with her service, with five doublefaults in the first set, including three in a row in the third game.

Huskies snap 'Canes home win streak

Associated Press

MIAMI — Washington scored 22 points in five minutes Saturday and rallied past Miami 38-20, ending the Hurricanes' NCAA record 58-game winning streak at the Orange Bowl.

The game turned when the Huskies scored on a 75-yard screen pass, a 34-yard interception return and a fumble recovery, all in the first five minutes of the second half.

The sequence, which stunned a crowd of 62,663, erased Miami's 14-3 halftime lead and left the Huskies in command, 25-14.

The loss was the first at home since Sept. 7, 1985, when Florida beat Miami 35-23. Miami's final win in the streak — against Georgia Southern three weeks ago — broke the previous record of 57 home victories set by Alabama.

No. 2 Nebraska 70, Pacific 21

LINCOLN, Neb. — Backup quarterback Brook Berringer, seeing extended duty against an outmanned opponent, threw for three touchdowns and ran for one as No. 2 Nebraska manhandled Pacific 70-21.

The Cornhuskers (4-0) scored the first seven times they touched the ball.

Quarterback Tommie Frazier played in only the first two possessions, driving the Huskers 61 yards in six plays to Damon Benning's 1-yard run, then handing off as Lawrence Phillips ran 74 yards for another score with six minutes gone.

Fullback Cory Schlesinger ran for 8 yards and 39 yards to put the Huskers up 28-0 in the first period over the Tigers (2-2).

The 49-0 halftime lead by Nebraska tied a school record for most points in a half. The Huskers also scored 49 in a 63-42 win over Oklahoma State in 1988.

No. 3 Florida St. 31,
No. 13 N. Carolina 18

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Danny Kanell threw three touchdown passes and Warrick Dunn ran for 121 yards as third-ranked Florida State won its 20th straight Atlantic Coast Conference game with a victory over No. 13 North Carolina.

The Seminoles (4-0, 4-0 ACC) appeared to have built a safe 31-7 lead midway in the third period, but North Carolina (2-1, 0-1) instead took control at the line of scrimmage.

The Tar Heels pulled to within 31-18 early in the fourth quarter and had good field position on two other possessions, but lost fumbles on successive drives including one inside the Florida State 10.

Tripp Pignetti's 42-yard field goal with 12:15 left brought the Tar Heels to within 31-18. Carolina cut its deficit to 31-15 late in the third quarter on Malcolm Marshall's 1-yard TD run and Curtis Johnson's sweep around end for a 2-point conversion.

It was Florida State's closest ACC game since a 13-3 victory at Virginia in October 1992.

No. 5 Penn State 55, Rutgers 27

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — Ki-Jana Carter ran for three touchdowns and Kerry Collins threw for two scores as No. 5 Penn State continued to put up impressive offensive numbers with a 55-27 victory over Rutgers Saturday afternoon.

Rutgers (2-2) gave Penn State (4-0) its toughest challenge to date, pulling within one touchdown late in the first half.

Penn State took advantage of a fumble and pass interception midway through the first quarter to string together three touchdowns in 19 seconds.

No. 8 Arizona 34, Stanford 10

STANFORD, Calif. — Arizona held Stanford to 6 rushing yards and pressured quarterback Steve Stenstrom into three costly turnovers Saturday as the eighth-ranked Wildcats defeated the Cardinal.

The Wildcats (3-0 overall, 1-0 Pac-10) sacked Stenstrom seven times and forced him into two interceptions and a fumble that led to 21 points. Arizona also recovered another fumble and blocked a field goal attempt.

Ontiwaun Carter had scoring runs of 10 and 3 yards for the Wildcats, who also scored on a 14-yard pass from Dan White to Richard Dice and a 49-yard interception return by Tony Bouie. Steve McLaughlin added field goals of 31 and 53 yards.

No. 9 Notre Dame 39, Purdue 21

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Ninth-ranked Notre Dame didn't need leading rusher Lee Becton as Randy Kinder and Ray Zellars each had career-best days, sparking the Irish over Purdue.

With a groin injury sidelining Becton for at least four weeks, Kinder gained a career-high 122 yards in the first half and finished with 143 and two touchdowns. Zellars had 156 yards on 14 carries, including a 62-yard touchdown run.

They led a ground game that accumulated 428 yards on 54 carries, the most by the Irish since gaining 467 against Purdue two years ago.

Notre Dame, which had lost its last home game last season and its home opener this year, avoided losing three straight games at home for the first time since 1984 by accumulating 547 yards.

No. 10 Auburn 38,
East Tennessee 0

AUBURN, Ala. — Stephen Davis rushed for 120 yards and two touchdowns and Frank Sanders caught a career-high eight passes in the first half as No. 10 Auburn defeated Division I-AA East Tennessee State.

Unlike last week, when the Tigers (4-0) needed a furious defensive rally in the fourth quarter to beat LSU, Auburn cruised in extending the nation's longest Division I winning streak to 15 games.

No. 11 Alabama 20, Tulane 10

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Sherman Williams rushed for a career-high 191 yards, but No. 11 Alabama still struggled to beat Tulane, needing a late field goal from Michael Proctor to seal a victory.

Williams continued to be a one-man show on offense for the Crimson Tide (4-0), carrying the ball 31 times and accounting for nearly half of the team's 389 yards. The week before against Arkansas, the senior tailback was responsible for 234 of Alabama's 276 yards.

Tulane (1-3) was coming off a 49-0 rout by North Carolina and entered Legion Field as a 28-point underdog. But the Green Wave held the Alabama offense without a touchdown until Brian Steger scored on a 16-yard run with 2:29 left in the third quarter to break a 10-10 tie.

Tulane managed only 227 yards. Watts completed 11-of-28 passes for 135 yards.

No. 16 Wisconsin 62,
No. 25 Indiana 13

MADISON, Wis. — Darrell Bevell rebounded from the worst half of his life with a perfect first half, triggering No. 16 Wisconsin's 62-13 rout of No. 25 Indiana before a sellout of 77,745 at Camp Randall Stadium.

Bevell threw four first-half interceptions in a 55-17 loss at No. 7 Colorado last week. On Saturday, he completed all 13 of his first-half passes for 184 yards and three touchdowns as the Badgers raced to a 41-0 lead.

Wisconsin (2-1) opened defense of its Big Ten co-championship by scoring on its first seven possessions and forcing punts the first 10 times the Hoosiers had the ball.

Bevell's first eight passes went to eight receivers, including a 3-yard touchdown toss to tight end Michael Roan and a 38-yarder to redshirt freshman wideout Tony Simmons in the first quarter.

Bevell, who finished 13-of-17 with no interceptions, also hit Roan wide open in the end zone from 5 yards out with 3:24 left in the first half for a 41-0 lead.

The 41 first-half points marked the biggest half in Wisconsin's 103-year history.

Wisconsin tailback Terrell Fletcher rushed for 146 yards and two TDs on 10 carries.

No. 22 Washington St. 21,
No. 18 UCLA 0

PASADENA, Calif. — Dewayne Patterson had four sacks as Washington State's defense showed why it's one of the nation's best, and Kevin Hicks ran for two touchdowns as the 22nd-ranked Cougars shut out No. 18 UCLA.

Washington State (3-0) handed UCLA (2-2) only its second shutout in 23 years as the Cougars limited the Bruins to 226 yards of offense in the Pacific-10 opener for both teams.

The nation's top defensive team against the rush, the Cougars held UCLA to just 69 yards in 31 rushes. Washington State had allowed an average of 19.5 yards rushing in its first two games.

The Cougars, ranked ninth nationally in total defense, sacked Bruins starter Wayne Cook six times, and held him to 90 yards passing, 11-of-25 with one interception.

UCLA came into the game averaging 432.3 yards per game on offense.

Mississippi St. 24,
No. 23 Tennessee 21

STARKVILLE, Miss. — Derrick Taite hit Kendall Watkins for a 2-yard touchdown on fourth down with 36 seconds left and Mississippi State beat No. 23 Tennessee 24-21, taking advantage of six Volunteers turnovers in the second half.

The game-winning 11-play, 52-yard drive started after Aaron Hayden fumbled, the fourth straight Tennessee possession ended by a turnover.

On the game-winning drive, Taite hit Eric Moulds for gains of 12, 11 and 22 yards. The last, on fourth-and-12, was a leaping grab to the 8. Four plays later, Taite hit Watkins on a fake counter sweep play to the right.

Mississippi State (2-1, 1-1 Southeastern Conference) was outgained 464 yards to 294, but still left Tennessee (1-3, 1-2) with three September losses for the first time since the Vols started 0-6 in 1988.

No. 24 N. Carolina St. 38,
W. Carolina 13

RALEIGH, N.C. — Brian Fitzgerald rushed for 114 yards and two first-quarter touchdowns and No. 24 North Carolina State used its defense to stymie Western Carolina.

Fitzgerald, who carried 18 times in the first 100-yard game of his career, scored on runs of 4 and 2 yards as N.C. State (3-0) grabbed a 14-0 lead 12 minutes into the game. Then, the Wolfpack let its nationally ranked defense take over.

The Catamounts (?-2) came into the game averaging 247 yards per game on the ground, but were limited to 5 yards on 13 carries in the first half after being manhandled along the line of scrimmage.

BUFFS: Colorado crashes Wolverines' party with last-second TD

(From 1C)

Anderson.

"I saw the ball the whole way," Winters said. "I was coming down with it in my hands, but their guy tipped it up. I did all I could do. I tried to knock the ball down, but it just bounced up."

After Westbrook made the catch, Colorado players and fans stormed the field as the Michigan crowd sat in stunned silence. The pass brought back memories of Flutie's last-play, 48-yard pass to Phelan that gave Boston College a 47-45 victory over Miami in 1984.

Colorado tried its version of the Hail Mary, known as "Rocket," on the last play of the first half, but it was intercepted by Winters in the end zone. The second time worked like magic.

"It has to be one of the great wins of my career," said Stewart, who broke Colorado's career marks for TD passes and total offense. "The coach (Bill McCartney) called the play. I just heaved it up, and it worked."

Michigan coach Gary Moeller was shocked by the incredible ending.

"It's a sad way to lose a game," he said, "but nobody's supposed to give you a win. You have to earn it yourself, and you have to play every play."

Michigan (2-1) took a 26-14 lead on Todd Collins' 65-yard pass to Amani Toomer with 2:43 left in the third quarter, and there was no more scoring until Colorado (3-0) scored twice in the final 2:16.

After Rashaan Salaam's 1-yard TD run made it 26-21, the Buffaloes tried an onside kick that was recovered by Michigan.

But the Buffaloes held the Wolverines and regained possession on their 15 with 15 seconds left following a Michigan punt. Stewart hit Westbrook with a 21-yard pass on the first play and then spiked the ball to stop the clock before lofting the last pass.

"Words can't describe what I'm feeling right now," said McCartney, who was a Michigan assistant coach from 1974-81. "I feel like I had a sideline full of guys that would not give up."

Two incidents during Michigan's final drive proved costly for the Wolverines. At one point, the officials added five seconds to the clock following a penalty — just enough time to give Colorado one extra play.

Michigan also hurt itself with a false start penalty on third-and-2 from the Colorado 37 with under a minute left. The Wolverines came up three yards short on the next play and were forced to punt. Had the Wolverines not committed the penalty, the run would have given them a first down and allowed them to run out the clock.

"This is one of the most frustrating losses we've had," Moeller said.

The ending overshadowed the return of Michigan star Tyrone Wheatley, who returned after missing the Wolverines' first two games with a shoulder injury and broke the school's career TD mark with a 5-yard run in the third quarter that put Michigan ahead 17-14.

"It was just a good feeling to be back out there again," said the preseason Heisman Trophy favorite, who gained 50 yards on 17 carries. "I felt great. My teammates had me pumped up and ready to come back."

Stewart, the nation's second-ranked passer coming into the game, was 21-of-32 for 294 yards and two touchdowns. He also ran 20 times for 85 yards.

His final throw to Westbrook traveled over 70 yards in the air.

"Only a guy with Kordell's ability can throw it that far," McCartney said.

Westbrook caught seven passes for 157 yards and two touchdowns.

Michigan's Todd Collins was 17-of-24 for 258 yards and one touchdown.

It was only the second meeting between the Wolverines and Buffaloes, who lost 31-0 at Michigan Stadium in 1974. Michigan didn't play last week after opening the season with victories over Boston College and Notre Dame.

Colorado took a 14-9 lead in the second period on a 27-yard TD pass from Stewart to Westbrook.

Swedes stall U.S. Davis Cup

GOTEBORG, Sweden (AP) — Sweden kept the United States from clinching a berth in the Davis Cup finals today winning the doubles match.

Jan Apell and Jonas Bjorkman beat Jared Palmer and Jonathan Stark 6-4, 6-4, 3-6, 6-2.

The victory cut the Americans' lead to 2-1 in the best-of-5 series after Todd Martin and Pete Sampras each won Friday's opening singles in four sets.

Sampras, the world's top-ranked player, will play former world No. 1 Stefan Edberg in Sunday's first reverse singles, and Martin goes against Magnus Larsson.

The winner of the U.S.-Sweden series will play Russia, which reached the Davis Cup final for the first time ever by winning the doubles match today in Hamburg for an unbeatable 3-0 lead over defending champion Germany.

Yevgeny Kafelnikov and Andrei Olhovskiy beat Michael Stich and Karsten Braasch 6-4, 7-6 (7-1), 3-6, 6-7 (3-7), 10-8, ending the hopes of the three-time champion.

On Friday, Sampras, the world's top-ranked player, beat Larsson 6-7 (3-7), 6-4, 6-2, 7-6 (7-3).

Martin continued his mastery over Edberg, winning 6-2, 2-6, 6-4, 6-3 in the opening singles on the Scandinavium Area's fast carpet.

Sweden, which has won the Davis Cup four times and made the finals four times, has come back from 0-2 deficits to win Davis Cup matches twice in 61 years.

Sampras said Martin's victory gave him a lot of confidence.

"I'd much rather be up 1-0 than down 1-0," he said. "I felt Todd didn't play his best tennis, but really hit some great shots at the right time."

For Martin, it was the third victory over Edberg in as many matches this year.

Martin, who made his Davis Cup debut earlier this year in the World Group's first round in India, came from 1-3 in the third set to turn the match around.

"I was fortunate to start playing well just in time," Martin said. "After I won the first set I lost 10 out of 14 games, which is very bad.

"Stefan was playing very well. I was almost finished in the third set. To win that set was very important. If Stefan had won that set, it would have been very tough for me to win (the match)."

Martin made some changes in the third set.

"The biggest change was my second serve," he said. "He was returning it very well, so I started hitting it harder and with a little bit more spin. It threw his timing off, I think, and really helped me."

Edberg double-faulted on several crucial moments in the match, including the final point in the second game of the first set, giving Martin a 2-0 lead.

Edberg also ended the eighth game of the third set with a double-fault that enabled Martin to tie the set 4-4.

"I was playing very well up to that point," Edberg said. "Then he hit a good lob, I missed a backhand volley and then double-faulted. "That's when the match changed. I couldn't believe it. Ten minutes I lost the set."

Edberg also lost to Martin this year in the Australian Open and Queens, a Wimbledon tuneup.

"He played better in those two matches," Edberg said. "Just a few points changed the momentum today."

Russia 3, Germany 0

Russia moved to the brink of the final when Alexander Volkov beat Stich to complete a sweep of the two opening singles matches on Friday.

Stich, playing under a death threat on the same court in Hamburg where Monica Seles was stabbed last year, was upset by Volkov 7-5, 1-6, 7-6 (7-5), 6-4.

Kafelnikov beat Bernd Karbacher 7-6 (7-2), 6-1, 2-6, 6-4 in the opening match.

Today, Kafelnikov and Olhovskiy wasted a match point in the fourth set, and saved three in the fifth before winning in three hours, 39 minutes.

After the doubles, Stich said he had talked again Friday to the person who made the threat.

LEE: Rebs fall to Mojo

er on our team can set the ball, not just the setters, and that just wasn't recognized."

Permian climbed out of a major ditch twice to take the match. In the first set, the Lady Panthers fell behind Lee by a 10-3 margin, only to come roaring back for a 15-13 win behind the booming spikes of Angie Brazil.

Lee took the second set rather easily, 15-8, behind some skilled play by Kasay Wolters, Kristen Dunn and Amber Willis.

But it was the third game that hurt the most. Lee fell behind 10-4, only to rally for a 13-12 lead before things fell apart and the potential upset wasn't recorded.

Down 12-6 in the deciding set, the Rebels scored five consecutive points on the serve of Emily Hayes as Dunn came up with a block and spike for points while Crystal Zachry did the same and Roseann Sullivan had a scoring dink.

Permian's Allison Turnbull, the only junior on the Panther varsity roster, put the match away with a booming spike just inside the line.

"I was just hoping the ball would stay fair," Turnbull said. "We expected a tough match with Lee, but we didn't play as well as we usually do. We got behind a couple of times, but that made us want to win just that much more."

Permian coach Linda McMillan was just glad to get the match under the belt and look on down the road.

"Lee played a really good match and they were hitting through our blocks," McMillan said. "We got down 10-3 in the first set and I threw a fit. I usually don't have to do that, but we'll do whatever it takes.

"We just weren't ready to play. We had the Permian-Odessa High game on Friday night and I think everyone really got caught up in all that. I'm just glad this weekend is over. We have San Angelo next."

Lee now has to get back on track with a Tuesday road trip to Abilene Cooper.

The Lee junior varsity also had trouble holding a lead against Permian on Saturday. Permian won the JV match in straight sets, 15-4, 15-13. In the second set, the Lee JV held an 8-1 margin before falling.

Sparring partner McCall turns champion

■ Heavyweight champ Lennox Lewis stunned by Oliver McCall's TKO win in the second round.

By Ed Schuyler Jr.
AP Boxing Writer

WEMBLEY, England — Lennox Lewis called Oliver McCall just a sparring partner. Now he can call him champion.

McCall pulled a stunning upset early Sunday morning when he knocked down Lewis with a crunching right hand counter to the jaw and stopped the British boxer 31 seconds into the second round to win the WBC heavyweight title.

The punch dropped Lewis on the seat of his pants. The champion struggled up, but referee Lupe Garcia of Mexico made a standing 8-count then wrapped his hands around the defending champion and stopped the fight.

"Most people look at McCall and see a sparring partner," McCall, a 5½-1 underdog, said before the fight.

They no longer will say that.

"I was never a sparring partner," McCall said defiantly after the fight, arguing that he was more than a mere punching bag for the men he sparred. "I got the best of every (sparring) round — Tyson, everyone."

Lewis was furious that the fight was stopped.

"I was totally robbed," he said. "I was cleared to fight on."

He did, however, appear to be badly hurt when the referee signaled the end. "It was a counter right hand dead on the nose," a jubillant McCall said. "I talked to Mike Tyson on the phone before the fight and he kept saying, 'Throw the right hook! Throw the right hook!'" McCall said.

The previously unbeaten Lewis, the only British boxer to hold even a piece of the heavyweight title this century, had thrown a couple of punches and started a hook when McCall came over the top with a right hook that dropped him and sent an estimated crowd of 7,000 home in disbelief.

"It was a lucky shot," a dejected Lewis said. "I can't believe it. The referee asked me if I was okay — and it was over. I thought it was an awfully fast count."

The stunning victory knocked Lewis out of a megabuck defense against Riddick Bowe, the former undisputed champion, that was being talked about for March. Michael Moorer holds the WBA and IBF heavyweight titles and is scheduled to fight George Foreman in November.

The victory by McCall also put promoter Don King back into the heavyweight picture. King, who was not involved in the promotion of this fight, is McCall's personal promoter, and now it is possible he might have a piece of the title to give former champion Tyson a shot at when Tyseon gets out of prison sometime next year.

It was the second stunning upset that McCall has been involved in, although his involvement in the first one was indirect.

On July 21, 1989, McCall lost a 10-round decision to James "Buster" Douglas. In his next fight, Douglas, a 42-1 underdog, scored boxing's biggest upset when he knocked out Tyson for the undisputed title on Feb. 19 in Tokyo.

Before the fight, Lewis had called McCall a sparring partner and said: "He's there to be hit."

It was the 29-year-old Lewis, however, that got hit.

Lewis, who weighed 238 pounds to 231¼ for McCall, of Chicago, landed some nice jabs and a hard right to the head in the first round. McCall got in a couple of body punches and also a good right to the head in the opening stanza.

Judges Franz Marti of Switzerland and Guiseppi Ferrari of Italy each scored the first round 10-9 for Lewis. Judge Kim Jae-Bong of South Korea called it even at 10-10.

Lewis started strong in the second round, but then came the right hand from McCall. And although Lewis got up and was on his feet, there was no question he was badly hurt.

"I am absolutely sure of what I did," referee Garcia said. "Lennox Lewis was knocked out. To allow more punches to Lennox Lewis would have fatal consequences. My duty is to protect the health of the fighter."

McCall, who was supposed to make $1 million, improved to 25-5 with 18 knockouts. Lewis, whose purse was $3.5 million, now has a 25-1 record with 21 knockouts.

The fight was televised live in the United States by HBO, beginning at 8:30 p.m. Saturday.

Musgrave, Berger maintain top spots

MARTINSVILLE, Va. — Todd Bodine and Greg Sacks were the only qualifiers Saturday during the rain-delayed second round of time trials for Sunday's Goody's 500 at Martinsville Speedway.

The top 20 qualifiers, led by Ted Musgrave's track record lap of 94.129 mph, locked in starting positions in the first round of qualifying on Friday.

The drivers who had qualified 21st through 32nd chose to stand on their first-round laps, which turned out to be the right decision as none of the nine drivers who made attempts Saturday on the half-mile oval were able to improve on their efforts of Friday.

Rain, which postponed the start of the second round by 2 hours, 55 minutes, also washed away most of the rubber on the track surface, making it considerably slower in the morning practice session.

Bodine, who had turned a lap of 91.895 on Friday, slipped to 91.025, while Sacks, the last driver in the Saturday session, fell from 91.744 to 90.938. But they earned positions 33 and 34 in the lineup.

Rick Mast and Mike Wallace, both of whom slipped under 90 mph, were added to the rear of the field as provisional starters, based on car-owner points.

Failing to make the lineup were Dave Marcis, Bobby Hillin Jr., Loy Allen Jr., Tim Fedewa and Jeremy Mayfield.

Portuguese Grand Prix

ESTORIL, Portugal — Gerhard Berger of Austria kept the pole position for Sunday's Portuguese Grand Prix when no one today was able to beat his top qualifying time.

Briton Damon Hill, driving a Williams-Renault, came the closest. He covered the 2.725-mile course today in one minute 20.766 seconds.

But that was still 0.158 seconds slower than Berger's best time Friday in his Ferrari.

A victory in the Formula One race Sunday would put Hill within one point of suspended standings leader Michael Schumacher. Hill will start in the second position of the first row.

Hill's teammate and countryman David Coulthard, who also improved his time today to 1:21.033, will be in the second row along with fourth fastest qualifier, Finland's Mika Hakkinen in a McLaren-Peugeot.

Jean Alesi of France, Berger's teammate at Ferrari, will line up on the third row of the grid alongside Ukyo Katayama, who clocked sixth fastest time.

Berger wants to show Ferrari is back on a winning track, after several years in the doldrums.

Schumacher is sitting out a two-race ban.

Tabasco Cat, with jockey Pat Day, rallied to win the Kentucky Cup on the muddy Turfway Park in Florence, Ky. Saturday.

Cat stays clean to win

FLORENCE, Ky. (AP) — Tabasco Cat began his comeback bid for Horse of the Year honors Saturday, controlling the pace on a muddy track and then rallying to win the $400,000 Kentucky Cup Classic at Turfway Park.

"The silks tell the story," said trainer D. Wayne Lukas.

Jockey Pat Day's silks were clean.

Longshots Truth of It All and Mighty Avanti headed Tabasco Cat briefly, but the best that Best Pal could do was pass tired horses to finish third.

"We have to have a great finish," said Lukas, who has been lobbying boldly for his horse to be considered for Horse of the Year. "We want to win all our remaining races, no matter what the postseason honors are."

Lukas will send Tabasco Cat to the Jockey Club Gold Cup on Oct. 8 at Belmont and the Breeders' Cup on Nov. 5 at Churchill Downs in an effort to upstage Holy Bull, whose season ended last week with a victory in the Woodward Stakes.

Lukas has been critical of Holy Bull's connections for skipping the Preakness and Belmont — which Tabasco Cat won — after a poor performance in the Kentucky Derby. He also was not nominated to the Breeders' Cup.

"He wasn't even putting in 100 percent," Day said. "He had a lot of gas left in the tank."

Bronchos' Pritchard will not require surgery on kidney

DENVER (AP) — Mike Pritchard's lacerated kidney is not as serious as first believed, and the Denver Broncos wide receiver could be back with the team later this season, coach Wade Phillips said Saturday.

Phillips said Pritchard, in serious condition in the intensive care unit at Presbyterian-St. Luke's Hospital, would not require surgery and that physicians told him the kidney would heal itself.

Pritchard was rushed to the hospital at 8:30 p.m. Friday after he noticed blood in his urine, hospital authorities said.

Phillips said it was still not clear how long Pritchard would remain hospitalized or how long it would be before he could practice with the team.

"It looks like he's going to be able to play at some time, and I don't know when, but he's going to be able to play this year," Phillips said.

He said Pritchard "is doing a lot better today (Saturday) ... and should be out of the hospital in a few days."

The lacerated kidney was pinpointed Friday night by a CAT scan and X-rays, hospital officials said.

Phillips said Pritchard was knocked down while running a pass route, but "I couldn't tell whether he fell on the football or just on the ground."

Sources say NBA season could be in jeopardy

CHICAGO (AP) — The 1994 baseball season is gone, the upcoming NHL season is in jeopardy, and now basketball's labor unrest could result in more lost games.

The Chicago Tribune, quoting sources, reported Friday that the NBA is considering a lockout of players, "probably around Thanksgiving, if no agreement is reached by then."

"Our plan is to open training camps, but if ultimately the union won't talk to you, it's tough to rule out any possibilities you might have to consider down the road," deputy commissioner Russ Granik told the Tribune.

The league, apparently, has not ruled out the possibility.

Brian McIntyre, the NBA's vice president of public relations, said today the league is standing by Granik's reaction to lockout talk.

"It is much too early to making any decisions about anything like that," the league statement said. "We still have six weeks before the season starts. Our goal is to reach a new collective bargaining agreement."

At least one ownership source, however, quoted in today's editions of the New York Daily News, said talk of a lockout is premature.

"To say there's going to be a Thanksgiving lockout is nuts," the source told the Daily News. "But it may be getting some mention from some of the owners. We'll have to see what happens in the Board of Governors meetings."

Those meetings are scheduled to take place Oct. 5 in New York, less than a month before the scheduled start of the season on Nov. 4.

The last agreement between the league and its players expired at the end of the 1993-94 season in June. There have been no negotiating sessions while the players' lawyers pursue relief through the court system.

The players union filed suit in federal court seeking to overturn the NBA draft of college players, restrictions on free agency and the salary cap system, but the court refused to declare them invalid.

The NBA's position is that the courts should not intervene so that the league and players can come to an agreement on their own.

Charles Grantham, head of the NBA Players Association, said he, too, has heard talk of a lockout by the league.

Buffaloes fly by N.M. Highlands

■ With the leading offense in Division II, West Texas A&M rolls up 637 yards in a 48-16 win to stay unbeaten.

Associated Press

CANYON — Grady Benton passed for 349 yards and two touchdowns and Norman White rushed for 138 yards and two more scores as West Texas A&M routed New Mexico Highlands 48-16 Saturday.

Highlands (0-3) took a 7-0 lead four minutes into the game on Jermaine Whitaker's 6-yard TD pass to Keylie Martin, then West Texas A&M (4-0) scored 45 unanswered points.

White scored on first-quarter runs of 3 and 39 yards for the Buffaloes, who led 35-7 at halftime.

Benton, who completed 18-of-32 passes, threw scoring strikes of 48 and 14 yards.

Twin brothers Brian and Brad Bailey combined for 169 yards receiving for West Texas A&M. Brad caught six passes for 85 yards and Brian had five catches for 84 yards.

Whitaker passed for 314 yards on 30-of-53 passing with two touchdowns. He was intercepted twice and sacked three times.

Texas Southern 10, Tuskegee 7

TUSKEGEE, Ala. — Texas Southern's Bryan Solomon ran for a 33-yard touchdown in the fourth quarter, lifting the Tigers to a victory over mistake-prone Tuskegee.

Tuskegee (2-2) led most of the game after quarterback Page Dennis hit Harrison Brown with a 22-yard touchdown pass in the second quarter.

Texas Southern (2-1) got a 22-yard field goal from John Thorn late in the third quarter. Solomon then scored his winning TD with 12:29 left.

Tuskegee missed several scoring opportunities after that, including fumbling the ball at the Texas Southern 2-yard line and missing a field goal that would have tied the score. Tuskegee then had a 28-yard touchdown run called back due to holding.

Montana 21,
North Texas 17

DENTON — Dave Dickenson threw a 20-yard touchdown pass to Damon Boddie with 5:13 left to play, then Montana stopped North Texas at the 3-yard line on the final play of the Grizzlies' victory.

Montana (4-0), the third-ranked team in Division I-AA, trailed 17-7 early in the third quarter.

Kelly Stensrud began the comeback with a two-yard run that put the Grizzlies within 17-14 with 3:32 left. Montana regained the lead for the first time since early in the second quarter on Dickenson's TD pass to Boddie.

North Texas (2-1) tried a desperation heave into the end zone as time expired, but the pass fell incomplete.

E. Texas State 28,
NW Louisiana 24

NATCHITOCHES, La. — Chandler Evans threw four short touchdown passes as East Texas State rallied for an upset of Northwestern State.

The Lions, ranked 18th in Division II, rose to 3-1 by overcoming a 24-14 fourth-quarter deficit. The Demons of the Division I-AA Southland Conference fell to 2-2 and lost to the Lions for the first time in seven seasons.

Evans, a former University of Houston quarterback, guided East Texas on three straight scoring drives in the second half. The decisive touchdown came on a 6-yard pass to Ben Putnam with 6:47 left.

Howard Payne 42,
McMurry 0

BROWNWOOD — Quarterback Jefferie Ellison rushed for four touchdowns to lead Howard Payne to a win over McMurry.

Ellison scored two of his touchdowns in the first quarter when the Yellow Jackets (2-2) jumped to a 21-0 lead over the Indians (2-1-1), who were ranked seventh in the nation in NAIA Division II.

Three of Ellison's touchdowns came on 1-yard runs. He added a 4-yarder in the third quarter.

Howard Payne held McMurry to just 151 total yards, while gaining 341.

Hardin-Simmons 53
Sul Ross St. 6

ABILENE — Kevin Beam threw two touchdown passes and ran for another as Hardin-Simmons pounded Sul Ross State 53-6 Saturday.

Beam, who only played the first half, completed 19-of-29 passes for 231 yards for the Cowboys, who are ranked third in NAIA Division II.

Tommy Cupil and Kyle Cress each ran for two touchdowns as HSU (2-0) ran for 200 yards.

Cupil rushed for 90 yards on 17 carries and scored on runs of 8 and 3 yards as the Cowboys built a 32-0 halftime lead.

HSU gained 552 yards, while Sul Ross (0-3) was held to 241.

Sam Houston St. 48,
Alcorn St. 23

HUNTSVILLE — Steve McNair completed 33-of-56 passes for 395 yards and two touchdowns, but it wasn't enough as Sam Houston State defeated Alcorn State.

McNair also rushed 10 times for 46 yards for Alcorn (2-2).

Tailback Wayne Coleman scored three touchdowns and teammate Lester Leonard added two for Sam Houston (4-0).

McNair's first touchdown pass came in the first quarter on a 9-yard toss to Kobie Jenkins. It capped a six-play, 80-yard drive that took only 2:24 after Coleman had opened the scoring for the Bearkats with a 4-yard TD run.

Jenkins' catch tied the game 7-7, but Sam Houston took a 14-7 lead about two minutes later after Era Palmer recovered a fumbled punt on the Braves' 2-yard line and Leonard scored on the next play.

McNair's 10-yard TD run came late in the third quarter with Sam Houston already leading 42-17.

The loss comes at the end of a week when McNair's bid to become the first Division I-AA player to win the Heisman Trophy began picking up speed.

Air Force 47,
Texas-El Paso 7

SAN ANTONIO — Jake Campbell rushed for 109 yards and scored three touchdowns as Air Force racked up a school record 700 yards of offense and defeated Texas-El Paso.

Fullback Nakia Addison added 105 yards on nine carries and backup quarterback Beau Morgan had 95 yards on 10 carries as Air Force (1-3, 1-0 Western Athletic Conference) rushed for 481 yards.

The game was played before 22,889 at the Alamodome. UTEP, the home team, decided to move the sight from El Paso.

Air Force's 700 yards breaks the school record of 654 yards, set in a 75-7 victory over Northern Colorado in 1984. It was Air Force's first victory away from Falcon Stadium since a 7-3 win at Army on Nov. 7, 1992.

Ouachita Baptist 42,
Tarleton St. 12

STEPHENVILLE — Maurice Fields ran for 209 yards and scored one of Ouachita Baptist's four rushing touchdowns in a 42-12 victory Saturday night over Tarleton State.

The Tigers (2-2) racked up 426 rushing yards, including 70 from Vince Perrin, who scored on runs of 17 and 49 yards.

Idaho 58,
Stephen F. Austin 26

MOSCOW, Idaho — University of Idaho quarterback Eric Hisaw passed for 371 yards and two touchdowns as the Vandals came back in the second half Saturday to defeat Stephen F. Austin 58-26.

Idaho (3-0) went into halftime trailing for the first time this season at 14-7. But the Vandals then scored 17 unanswered points to open the second half, racking up 23 points in the third quarter and 28 in the fourth.

Idaho took the second-half kickoff and drove down for a 37-yard field goal by Ryan Woolverton.

The Lumberjacks (1-2-1) fumbled the ball on the next two possessions and the Vandals took them in for scores.

Hisaw completed 21 of 36 passes, while Sherridan May ran the ball 19 times for 121 yards and two scores. James Ritchey, who missed the last two games for SFA, completed 15 of 33 passes for 253 yards, but threw two interceptions in the second half.

SW Texas St. 28,
CS Northridge 23

SAN MARCOS — Donald Wilkerson rushed for 187 yards and a touchdown and Claude Mathis added two scoring runs as Southwest Texas State defeated Cal-State Northridge.

Bobcats linebacker Joe O'Haver picked off a J.J. O'Laughlin pass with 1:01 left to preserve the victory for SWT (2-2).

Southwest Texas had built a 28-17 fourth-quarter lead, then Mark Harper caught a 7-yard pass from O'Laughlin with 5:17 left.

O'Laughlin, who passed for 358 yards on 25-of-46 passing, threw second-quarter TD passes of 37 and 25 yards to help the Matadors (1-2) to a 17-16 halftime lead.

Trinity, Tex. 3,
Washington, Mo. 0

ST. LOUIS — Marty Thompson's 32-yard field goal as time ran out in the first half was the only score in Trinity's win over Washington University.

Trinity (3-0) showed why its defense is ranked among the best in NCAA Division III, limiting the Bears to 182 yards of total offense. Washington (2-2) was unable to cross the 50-yard line the entire second half.

HOMES & CLASSIFIED

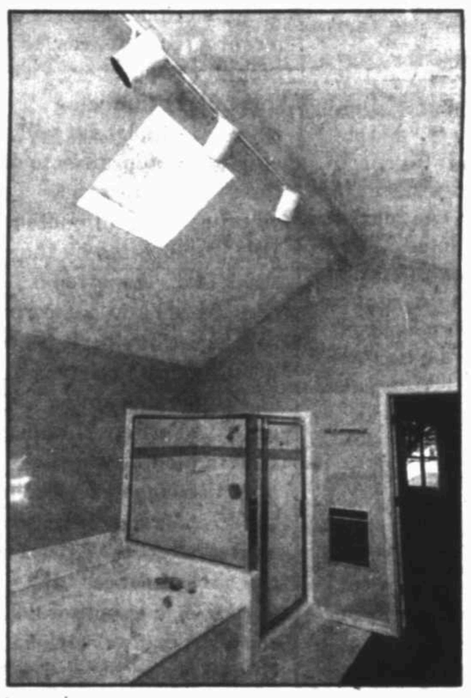
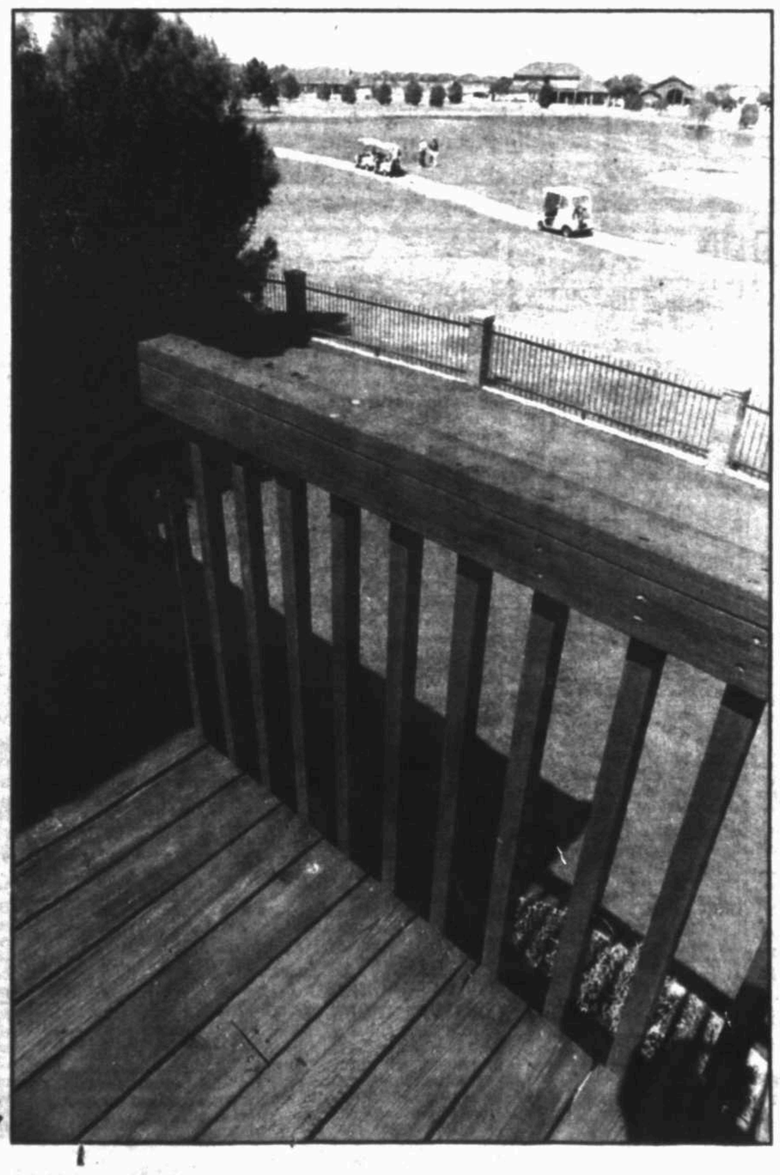
Fully Equipped!





If a fundamental requirement of your ideal home is size, then this house overlooking the golf course in Greentree might just be the one for you.

Its six bedroom, three and a half bath, two story design lends itself to not only the needs of a large family, but also those who love entertaining.

This large house makes an impression as soon as one walks through the leaded front door into the formal living area. Huge windows let light from the golf course flood into the room giving it a bright, airy feeling that is very relaxing. The focal point of this large welcoming room is the large tile fireplace with a wooden mantlepiece that is situated opposite the rather grand flight of stairs and flanked by built-in book cases.

Off from the formal areas, and connected by hard-wearing tile is the family's den. Opening out onto the deep, covered patio, the den has a built-in wet bar which boasts racks for wine and glasses and is complete with fridge and sink.

One of the more unusual aspects of the home is the way in which the staircase accesses both the front room and the kitchen at the same time. Two small flights, one from each room join the main body of the staircase. This gives the kitchen the feel of a cottage, as one steps down into it.

Fully equipped, as one would expect from a house like this, with a full range of quality built-ins, a large pantry and big utility room, this kitchen is well capable of catering to small suppers as well as large formal dinners.

The master suite is located on the ground floor in its own separate wing (away from children and guest rooms), opens out onto the patio and is fully equipped with a luxurious bathroom and plenty of closet space.

The second story of the property is perfect as a children's suite because of the large den that opens out onto the deck. The three bedrooms all open out onto the den (which is large enough to be a game room) and it features a second wet bar for rather more adult parties.

Bill Jackson, the owner of The Prudential Adobe Realtors will be holding an open house this afternoon between two and four o'clock.

This family home at 4475 Hackberry in Greentree is an absolute must see and is listed at $295,000. For more information, or to arrange a private appointment to view, stop by the open-house or call Bill Jackson at 683-9548.

Insect infestation results in loss of value

Pat Orseth
President Midland
Association of Realtors

"Termites. Just the word strikes fear in the pocketbooks of homeowners," said Pat Orseth, President of the Midland Association of REALTORS. "Insect infestation can cause structural damage to a home, resulting in loss of value. Letting professionals deal with a pest problem can give you peace of mind as well as ensure safe treatment of your home and its occupants."

"Extermination services will vary from company to company, so it is important to choose carefully," Orseth said. The Midland Association of REALTORS recommends the following guidelines for choosing a professional exterminator.

If you do not have referrals from friends or neighbors, contact the Better Business Bureau, the Environmental Protection Agency office for Pesticides or a local consumer advocate office for recommendations.

Contact various companies for basic information. Ask if they will provide names of previous customers whom you may call for references.

Have the potential exterminator survey your home to offer a written, detailed statement noting the extent of infestation and the specific measures necessary to solve the problem. The company should explain what pesticides will be used, and what hazards, if any, are associated with the pesticides. Will you need to vacate your home? Are pets or small children endangered?

The Structural Pest Control Board rules and regulations, section 599.2 (a) and (b) provide some guidelines for determining which treatment is best for your home. All pesticide applications must be made in accordance with the directions and precautions listed on the label, according to Section 599.2 (a). Section 299.2(b) states, "A treatment of less than the entire structure will be permitted to accommodate he customer's desire and to allow the treating company to perform the job in a manner prescribed by their professional evaluation."

According to this section, only a certified applicator should decide between spot treatment or full treatment.

"Be an informed consumer and know what you can expect from an exterminating service," Orseth said. "Ridding your home of pests may be your first priority, but for satisfying results, and to maintain the value of your home, take the time to choose a service wisely."

The Midland Association is one of more than 1,800 boards nationwide that comprise the National Association of Realtors, the nation's largest trade association and the voice for real estate.

Real Estate Facts . . .

Cash purchases require processing

Vicky Garrett
Chaparral Realtors

Imagine this scenario. You plan to buy a home, and notice one you like in a great location. You call for an appointment, and drive straight to the home to take a look. You like it. pull out your checkbook, and write a check for $136,000. As you leave, you think to yourself "Homebuying is fun, and easy too!"

Do you see any holes in this idealistic story? Does it seem just a little too easy? Of course it does!

Most home buyers look at more than one home before making their purchase decision. They want to compare features, amenities and price to find the best value. To do this, they must identify a selection of homes in their preferred location which match their housing objectives.

Locating a suitable selection of homes requires comparison by location, architectural style, lot size, bedrooms, baths, condition, amenities, and numerous other criteria. Each home must be seen individually to measure the value offered vs. the price asked. The process can be daunting.

Rarely, if ever, does a buyer write a check on the spot to purchase a home. Even when paying cash, the transaction takes time to allow for a title search, survey, appraisal, and other necessary activities to protect the buyers.

More often than not, buyers choose to borrow a large part of the purchase price. This requires going through the qualification process including verification of income and employment, as well as a credit check. Certain ratios must also be met to qualify for the various available mortgages.

To enjoy the homebuying process, and keep it simple, choose a real estate agent to make it all come together. The agent will research the market for suitable homes, and arrange a prequalification interview with a mortgage lender. You will breath easier, and be in your new home sooner than expected.

Certified appraisals differ from "worth"

Peggy Strong, CRS, GRI
Chaparral Realtors

Charolett and Charlie were totally confused, bordering on outrage and disappointment as they compared the offer they had just received on their home, and the property tax assessment from the City and County. On one hand, the offer to purchase was too low while the tax assessment was just as far off on the high side! Similar situations are sometimes in reverse as the Buyer looks at what the sometimes lower tax assessed value is compared to the higher Seller's list price! What is the Real Deal???

In truth, a home has three values: its appraised value, its assessed value, and its market value. So, where does that leave both Buyers and Sellers in determined REAL value?

APPRAISED VALUE: A real-Estate Expert's Point of View . . . An expert opinion of value is rendered by appraisers and may be obtained under several different circumstances. If property is purchased with third party financing involved, the lender will employ an appraiser to do the proper appraisal, whether Conventional or FHA, as directed by the contract. If an employee is being transferred and has corporate home buy-back benefits, his company's relocation program may initiate an appraisal order. Whatever the circumstances, the appraiser may either follow the FHA or may initiate an appraisal order. Whatever the circumstances, the appraiser may either follow the FHA or Conventional Guidelines or the instructions of the relocation order. Basically, even appraisals themselves come in different shades and colors. For example, a Seller may have an existing recent appraisal prior to entering into a Purchase agreement which in turn results in another appraisal and chances are, the two appraisals will be within a range of value, but not necessarily exactly the same. (Only one FHA appraisal can be of record in any 6 month period). A relocation appraisal, a re-finance appraisal, conventional, or FHA appraisal are based on similar guidelines, but may vary to some degree in final results. In each case, the appraiser's work is very detailed and precise with on-site inspection, measurements, pictures, and check-off lists of amenities and condition. In justifying an estimate of value for your home, the appraiser must show at least three examples of homes that have recently sold within the same area: commonly referred to as sales comparables. Most often this information is obtained from our local Midland Association of Realtors Multiple Listing Service. The appraisal is called "certified" when it is made by a person designated as a certified real-estate appraiser who has met the prescribed education and experience requirements of the Appraisal Institute (a division of the National Association of Realtors).

A real-estate appraisal should not be confused with what's popularly known as a "Competitive Market Analysis." A market analysis is most often prepared by a Realtor and it may or may not be based on the same information with the same results of the appraiser. A market analysis is only as good as the information that is input in. The phrase GIGO: Garbage IN, Garbage OUT can relate to a market analysis. Regardless of how good the information may or may not be, and no matter how knowledgeable the salesperson is, a market analysis is not an appraisal, and should not be regarded as such. Sellers should keep this in mind when reviewing the market analysis, and feel comfortable that his Realtor is one of experience, knowledge, and a leader in sales in his/her neighborhood.

ASSESSED VALUE: The Government's Point of View . . . Charlie has always thought his property taxes were sky high and each year he has fought to lower the value and consequently his tax liability. It never entered his mind that a Buyer would interpret that assessed value as the REAL value of his home! And yet Buyers are informed that the property is taxed on 100% of Assessed Values. Both parties need to understand how the assessed value is determined and should be encouraged to investigate for themselves with their local tax assessor. The local or state official in charge of determining property values are called assessors. They may have the same MLS "sold data" that the appraisers have, but an assessor does not physically inspect and estimate the value of every house every year. Most likely, homes are assessed in "blanket assessments" of sub-divisions or at the time of construction, or from MLS records of sales. The rates applied to the assessed value may increase or decrease according to the amount of revenue needed for the operation of the government entity. Probably whatever the tax assessor says, either the Buyer or Seller will have a difference of opinion!

MARKET VALUE . . . can be defined as the ultimate price that a ready, willing, able Seller (under no duress) sells to a ready, willing, able Buyer (under no duress). That price is not necessarily either the appraised or assessed value. Market conditions determine value based on property condition, specific location, law of supply (available inventory of homes) and demand of buyers. At various times of the year, a home's market value will change according to peak or low sales times. The average home will get its' best price when priced competitively from the beginning thereby obtaining the quickest possible sale with other factors feeding into the equation such as availability of buyers, interest rates, economy, etc. If allowed to linger too long and go "stale" on the market, the value may depreciate on the market. As impersonal as it may sound, Homes are products to be sold and just like clothes in the department store, you don't like to have Summer merchandise dragging on in the middle of Winter. Buyers and Buyers' Agents may make "Clearance" offers! This is NOT what you or your Realtor wants!

So how do Buyers and Sellers determine REAL value of a home? Consult and trust the realtor of your choice and these glossary of terms will become a reality you can certainly deal with!

PERMIAN BASIN OIL REPORT

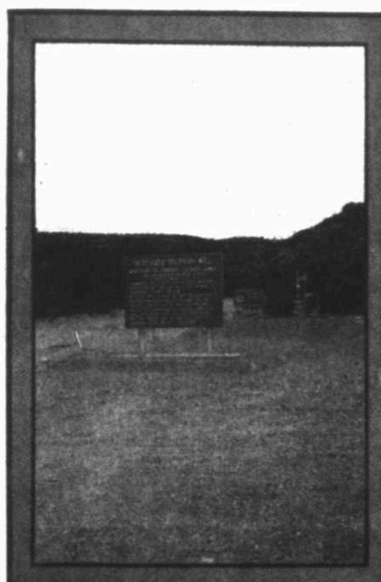
SUNDAY, September 25, 1994 SERVING 54 COUNTIES IN WEST TEXAS AND NEW MEXICO

BRIEFING



The discovery well of the prolific Yates field in Pecos County, still pumping strong.

Prices recover

After hovering near the $17.25 mark much of the week, crude future prices rebounded late in the week, riding on the coattails of rising heating oil prices.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, West Texas Intermediate for November delivery — the near-month contract as of mid-week — closed at $17.67 late in the week. The posted price closed at $16 a barrel.

Natural gas futures prices continued to decline, dropping to $1.44 per thousand cubic feet late in the week.

Activity highlights

Enron Oil & Gas Co. completed a Wolfcamp gas discovery in Pecos County, 24 miles southwest of Fort Stockton.

The No. 2601 La Escalera tested for a calculated absolute open flow of 9100 Mcfd.

In other activity highlights: The Ward-Estes North (Yates) field gained a confirmer as Chevron U.S.A. Inc. completed the No. 1580 G.W. O'Brien et al to flow 295 barrels of oil.

Bledsoe Partners Inc. reopened Bone Spring production in the Soda Lake field of Ward County, recompleting the No. 1 Vermejo "A" — a former Wolfcamp producer in the Vermejo East field — to pump 45 barrels.

Drilling rebounds

After falling the previous week, the rig count rebounded during the week ended September 19, due largely to improved weather.

Baker Hughes Inc. reports that the Permian Basin rig count rose nine rigs to 108 for the week, below last year's count of 121.

Lea County, N.M. was the most active in the Basin with 14 rigs, followed by Eddy County, N.M. with 12 rigs.

Nationwide, the rig count jumped 22 rigs to 804 for the week, still below the 856 posted last year.

Among major producing states, Oklahoma and Texas posted the largest increase, nine rigs each. New Mexico lost four rigs.

Arco in Alaska

Atlantic Richfield officials told oil industry analysts this month that the company remains bullish on finding new oil reserves in Alaska, despite two major setbacks in the last two years.

Arco's capital budget includes $370 million for Alaskan operations, $200 million for exploration.

Oil Show sold out

■ Permian Basin event is officially largest in the world.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

The 1994 Permian Basin Oil Show is now officially sold out according to Show officials. "We are sold out wall-to-wall, every single space and have a stand-by waiting list of 60," said Don Narrell, president of the Oil Show Board.

Narrell said the 1994 Oil Show, set for October 19-21 at Ector County Coliseum, could be the biggest in history. "Lower oil prices, expanding technology, growing environmental regulation, make it imperative that oil companies learn to produce more oil for less money."

Basin gets new DOE projects

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Three Permian Basin-area projects were among nine chosen for federal funding under the Department of Energy's oil assistance program.

The two proposals were among 31 candidate projects submitted in early June 1994 for the DOE's "Class III Oil Recovery Field Demonstration Program."

Parker & Parsley was selected for a $13 million project in Midland County, of which the DOE will fund 40 percent. This project will test the economic feasibility of injecting carbon dioxide into a naturally-fractured reservoir to produce oil from the low-permeability rock matrix via a gravity-assisted drainage mechanism.

Production equipment seminar set

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

A seminar to acquaint oil company personnel with the technology of surface production equipment and controls has been set for Tuesday at the Center for Energy and Economic Diversification.

The day long seminar, sponsored by James S. Kone & Co., Linco-Electromatic Inc., Sivalls Inc., Vinson Supply Co. and the Small Business Development Center at the University of Texas Permian Basin, is designed to assist oil company personnel gain a broader understanding and knowledge of surface production equipment, including vessels, controls and monitoring equipment.

A MAJOR OIL REVIEW

Brian Adamcik/ Reporter-Telegram

Despite restructuring and downsizing, major oil company signs still decorate the Midland landscape, and most still have substantial oil and gas holdings and development programs.

Majors slimmer, still here

■ An annual review and status report on the position, activity and contributions of major oil companies in the Permian Basin

By Ellen Hopkins

Despite the downturns, downsizing, divestments and restructuring that has brought significant shrinkage to major oil companies in the Permian Basin, most major or integrated oil companies still maintain a prominent presence in the Permian Basin, contributing significantly to the area's economy.

But along with their exploration and development activity levels, major oil companies, through community volunteerism and donations also play a major role in building a strong social fabric in the Permian Basin. What follows is a brief review of the major oil companies of the Permian Basin, their presence, activity level and contributions:

AMOCO — Amoco operates oil and gas producing fields across the Permian Basin from 17 operations centers and plants. The company also operates the Bravo Dome CO_2 resource in northeast New Mexico which supplies CO_2 for enhanced oil recovery in the Permian Basin, as well as a sophisticated pipeline system to transport oil and CO_2.

One of Amoco's most notable projects in the Permian Basin is the Cedar Lake CO_2 flood in Gaines County. This flood and the related gas collection system to Amoco's Mallet CO_2 recovery plant represent a significant investment in the Permian Basin.

Amoco also has another CO_2 project at its North Cowden operations, and is wrapping up a 3-D seismic evaluation in the south Permian Basin which the company hopes will result in additional exploitation and infill drilling opportunities.

Other infill drilling has occurred in Levelland, Sundown and North Cowden during the year.

In 1995 and beyond, Amoco expects to complete the Cedar Lake CO_2 flood and implement further CO_2 floods within the Basin. The company also expects to complete 3-D seismic evaluations and the resultant follow up drilling in the Midland Farms and North Cowden area.

Amoco announced plans in July 1994 to eliminate 4,500 jobs, including 1,000 in Houston. Currently there are more than 750 Amoco employees in the Permian Basin.

Amoco's employees in Midland, Odessa and Andrews are actively involved in dozens of charity and service organizations for which Amoco provides financial support.

Employees support youth academics, music, science enrichment, scouting and sports; local law enforcement and fire departments; crisis centers, food banks and hospice; chambers of commerce, Rotary, and Lions clubs; livestock associations and hunter education, among others.

In addition, the Amoco Foundation donates to local United Way

Rewriting a doomed U.S. energy policy

Pitts

Now that the world has confirmed knowledge that world oil prices do not function within a free market framework and can be manipulated secretly at will by a handful of world leaders, it is time for America to re-examine its energy policy.

While there is no formal written treaty recorded anywhere, and while the parties involved may scream denials, it would be hard to find anyone who believes there is not some secret deal between Saudi Arabia and the U.S whereby the U.S. continues to provide protection in exchange for the Saudi's using their spigots to keep oil prices within a mutually beneficial range.

Neither would there be many in the industry that feel this is arrangement i not the foundation for present U.S. energy policy.

On the surface this "not-so-secret" arrangement that has been unofficially endorsed by Reagan, Bush and Clinton, seems like a good one. America gets all the cheap oil it wants, Saudi Arabia gets assurance that it will be protected. But in truth it is an energy policy that is doomed to failure.

It it doomed, because it is a quick fix policy, that has thrown long term solutions and national security to the wind, in favor of cheap oil.

In a day when energy is so critical to a nation's safety, security, It is a foolish nation and a foolish policy that looks to foreign supplier for its energy salvation, while treating its own energy industry with contempt.

It is also pure foolishness for a nation to count on someone else's energy resources, while letting its own resources go undeveloped. Chrysler Chairman Lee Iaccoca noted in the late eighties that any nation today that did not have a degree of energy independence was doomed to become a victim.

Any nation that practices the foolishness of total energy dependency is doomed, eventually, to suffer the gravest of social, economic and military consequences. Larry Strahan, president of People for an Energy Policy points out: "If for some reason America could not get oil from the Middle East we would not be able to make it."

As my daddy used to tell me: "Any behavior, law or policy that violates common sense will eventually have to suffer the consequences." He didn't actually say that. What he did say was: "If you keep on driving that damned car fast and crazy you're going to have a wreck." The message is the same.

Other nation's hold their energy industries — which create jobs, provide fuels for heating, cooling, transporation, power generation and manufacturing — in high esteem.

America plays dumb, mean political tricks on its energy industry, holding it up for ridicule, singling it out for punitive taxation, environmental terrorism, excessive regulation and any other form of harassment it can dream up. It is an attitude of hostility that will someday bring dire consequences.

The fact that the Reagan adminis-

SHOW: Oil Show full

(From 1E)

Narrell said the Oil Show focus on technology this year should draw an unusually large crowd, as producers look for better solutions. "We are expecting between 90-100,000 at the Show this year," he said. "Attendance will include everyone from roughnecks to top corporate officials."

Jay Alvey, executive director of the Show, said they were also expecting a large contingent of foreign visitors to the Oil Show.

Narrell said the Permian Basin Oil Show is the largest petroleum exposition in the world, having approximately 100,000 square feet more than the Offshore Technology Conference in Houston. The Show now has 1,110 spaces or 210 more than it had its 1990 Golden Anniversary exhibition.

Admission to the Oil Show on the first two days is limited to oil industry personnel only, and the general public is invited to attend only on the last day of the Show.

SEMINAR: Discusses production

"There are many in the oilpatch who have been narrowly focused in a production specialty, and now, as a result of downsizing and restructuring, find they must take a broader view of the oil business," said James Upham, who represents Fisher Controls for Vinson Supply. "This seminar will provide them an opportunity to learn how to design, size and select quality and reliability in the buying and installation of surface production equipment."

Morning sessions planned for the seminar will deal with an overview of production equipment, and will be followed by sessions on control valves, level control, gas measurement and liquid measurement.

Afternoon sessions, will cover overpressure protection, level gauges and fugitive emissions.

The seminar begins at 8:30 a.m. and ends at 4:40 p.m., and is free to the public.

PROJECTS: Basin proposals get DOE funding

(From 1E)

The project calls for 16 wells to be drilled, including one dual-lateral horizontal well, which will be cored to study local fracture orientation and frequency. The wells will be drilled in the Spraberry Trend, where CO_2 injection has never been attempted. Advanced reservoir characterization techniques will be used to analyze the natural fracture system, investigate the interaction of the rock matrix with the fracture network, reevaluate the cause of poor waterflood performance, and understand the flow paths for injected CO_2.

Laboratory studies will determine rock properties and CO_2-oil phase behavior and investigate gravity drainage mechanisms using reservoir rock at in-situ conditions. A reservoir simulation will be conducted.

The second Permian Basin project chosen was proposed by the Bureau of Economic Geology of the University of Texas. The Bureau was selected for a $3.2 million project, of which DOE will fund 50 percent, in Culberson and Reeves counties.

The Bureau proposes the study to demonstrate that determining the characteristics of a reservoir using 3-D seismic data and reservoir simulation can optimize infill drilling and CO_2 flooding in two Class III reservoirs.

The project proposes studies in the Geraldine Ford field that produces from the Upper Permian Bell Canyon and West Ford field that produces from the Upper Permian Cherry Canyon formation. Both fields are located in the Delaware Basin.

In the first budget period, integrated reservoir characterization studies of both fields will be carried out to provide a detailed reservoir model and allow comparison of the two reservoirs. Technologies used for the reservoir characterization include include 3-D seismic surveys; log, core and petrophsyical studies; high resolution sequence stratigraphic analysis; study of nearby outcrops; petrography; analysis of production history, and geostatistical analysis.

In the second budget period, a geologically optimized enhanced oil recovery project (CO_2, waterflood or polymer flood) will be designed and one to three infill wells will be drilled and cored. The infill wells will be drilled to investigate oil saturations in reservoir compartments, be part of the enhanced oil recovery pilot, and test deeper pool potential.

A third project, proposed by Strata Production Co., is an $18.4 million five-year project, 43 percent funded by DOE, to conduct an advanced reservoir characterization and advanced reservoir management project in the Nash Draw Bushy Canyon pool at an average depth of 6,800 feet in the Delaware/Permian Basin in Eddy County, N.M.

The remaining six projects are set in California oil fields, including one on the Outer Continental Shelf.

The DOE will make approximately $38 million in federal funding available for the projects, and the federal funds are expected to attract more than $50 million in private or local government funding for the projects.

This is the third group of oil field demonstration projects chosen by the department, bringing the total number of projects in the demonstration program to 33, carrying a public-private funding commitment of nearly $290 million.

The demonstration program is an effort by the federal government to assist the domestic oil industry by financing up to 50 percent of the costs for projects that offer possible approaches to overcoming specific problems hindering the production of oil from many of the nation's still-productive fields.

PITTS: America's doomed policy

tration, a so-called friend of the oil industry, was willing to sacrifice the U.S. oil industry with a rapid run down of oil prices and was unwilling to provide a cushion or safety net is indicative of an unhealthy disrespect for the oil industry. Comments made since by members of the Reagan administration only reinforces that feeling.

But the Clinton administration, is no better. Hazel O'Leary says she was misunderstood when she noted that the oil industry was a dying industry and she could not be concerned with the problems of every under capitalized oil company. I think she was perfectly understood. The fact that Al Gore now has a plant in the Department of Energy (Mark Chupka) writing an energy policy that could become environmental warfare against the petroleum industry is further indication of the "high disregard" in which the oil industry is held by both parties.

This adversarial relationship between the U.S. government and the U.S. oil industry is a festering sore that has resulted in a long string of bad policy decisions that has brought the biggest and best energy producer in the world to its knees. Oil production is an industry in retreat, divesting, merging, downsizing, restructuring and retreating overseas in an effort to survive.

King of the bad policy decisions is the decision to build America's energy destiny on cheap foreign oil and not develop its own vast energy resources that include: natural gas, ethanol, oil shale, coal gasification, coal, nuclear, hydroelectric, wind and solar.

When it comes to natural gas, oil shale, coal and nuclear energy America is the Saudi Arabia of the world. All of which have been sidetracked by an oil price policy that made them economically or environmentally unattractive.

Recent years has brought favor to natural gas, as a homegrown, clean-burning transportation fuel (CNG) with the potential to back out millions of barrels of foreign oil. But federal favor came only after gas producing states like Texas began their own natural gas marketing campaigns and clean air programs.

The Clean Air Act of 1990 followed on the heels of Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro's Texas Clean Air Initiative and John Sharp's efforts as a Texas Railroad Commissioner to promote natural gas.

Not only did the Reagan administration strip federal budgets of funds for alternative energy research, calling them uneconomical, but it set oil prices at a level that deliberately keeps alternative fuels out of the market.

That is good for OPEC, because low oil prices not only discourage competition from other fuels, but encourage U.S. consumption of more and more cheap oil, thereby assuring foreign oil exporters of an expanding American market. But it is not good for America.

Not only do low prices discourage the development of abundant, but higher- priced U.S. alternatives from coming into the market. They also do not provide the margins oil companies need to adequately discover and recover domestic reserves.

Wells are plugged, enhanced oil recovery project don't get funded, wells don't get drilled, oil companies are downsized, jobs are lost, revenues diminish, and the basic infrastructure of the domestic petroleum industry is damaged, rendering it a non-competitor.

It is a flawed policy that eventually will have its day of reckoning. But try and tell that to people who are paying $1.23 per gallon of gasoline, when most european countries pay well over $2.00 per gallon.

To have a viable, sustainable energy policy America must first chart an energy policy based solely on what is best for America — today and tomorrow.

Then it must make friends with its oil industry. As Carol Rylander, candidate for Texas Railroad Commissioner points out: We need to "dehassle" the industry.

Next, it must set about to develop its own abundant energy resources — even if it does cost more.

Nuclear energy is the safest energy in the world and could be one the cheapest, but government and environmental hassle has driven it from the market in this country.

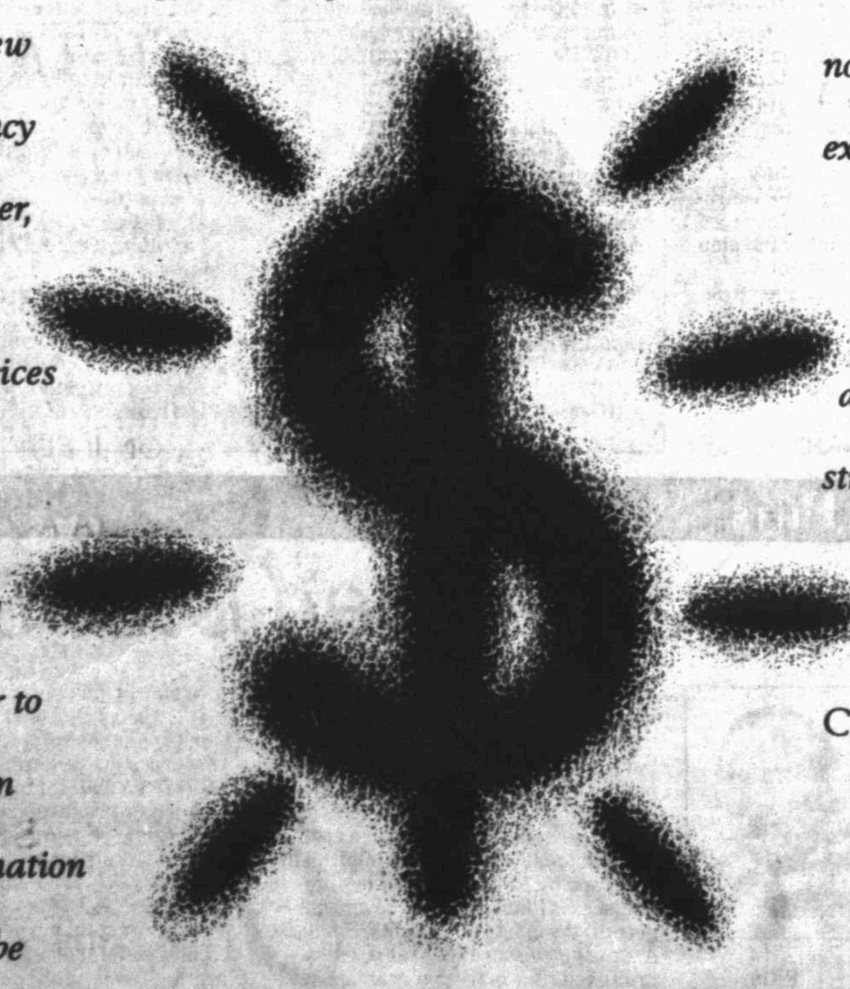
There are signs our innovations give better results.

Today at GPM you'll find any number of innovations bringing producers better results. From new technology that increases efficiency to our continuous push for quicker, more effective solutions.

Our focus on producer services is a prime example. Featuring electronic flow measurement and radio telemetry, this automated system makes production easier to monitor than ever before. You can have accurate, up-to-date information at your fingertips. Problems can be detected earlier and corrected sooner.

We're now considering applying this technology to help manage your lease operations and achieve greater productivity.



GPM's extensive high and low pressure gathering systems and modern plants deliver the efficiency and reliability you need. Your gas moves on our systems without the hassle of nominations, dispatching or operating expensive lease compression.

Even our contracts have been revised – with simpler language and new information that streamlines negotiation time.

To see how these signs can mean better results for you, call Chris Wren at 713-297-5972.

organizations, the Permian Basin Rehabilitation Center, the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, and the Amoco Hispanic Mentoring Program.

ARCO — ARCO Permian is an autonomous production and exploitation Unit of Atlantic Richfield Company based in Midland.

The Unit operates in the Permian Basin, East Texas, Oklahoma and Colorado. Active marketing is handled through the ARCO Crude Oil and NGL Marketing group in Dallas and Los Angeles.

ARCO Permian has approximately 500 employees, most of whom work in the Permian Basin.

Some of ARCO Permian's current major projects are the South Justis waterflood and multiple 3-D programs including Brown Bassett and Wasson.

In the past three years the company has undergone a series of reorganizations that date back to 1991, when the company announced restructuring plans that merged the Midland-based Central District and the Bakersfield-based Western District into a Midland-headquartered West District. That move transferred 80 employees to Midland and cut another 80 positions.

During 1992, several packages of non-core properties were sold. Anadarko purchased nearly $209 million worth of Permian Basin properties, Frontier Acquisition Corp. purchased a package of Oklahoma and Kansas properties from ARCO, and Castle Energy Corp. of Pennsylvania agreed to buy 77 miles of natural gas pipeline and interest in Texas oil and gas wells from ARCO.

Additional properties in Texas, Louisiana, Arkansas and Mississippi were sold in June 1993, to Cody Energy Co. of Denver. And in May '93 Cross Timbers Oil Co. purchased a package of select Permian Basin properties from ARCO for $37 million.

In November '93, ARCO officials said the Midland work force would be reduced by 265 jobs, 75 of which would be transferred to ARCO's Natural Gas Growth Unit in Houston. This move reduced ARCO Permian's employees from 440 to 175. Nationally, ARCO reduced its work force by more than 900 jobs last fall in a reorganization move to make the company more profitable.

The reorganization created four business units within the corporation: Natural Gas Growth, Permian/East Texas, California Oil, and ARCO Long Beach.

This past July, ARCO announced that it would cut capital spending 36 percent and reduce costs by $400 million a year through a reorganization that would eliminate 3,300 jobs. The Los Angeles-based company said its emphasis was shifting from Alaska to foreign operations, and was looking for international oil and gas acquisition opportunities.

In recent social and service projects, ARCO found an opportunity to help the oil industry counter much of the unneeded environmental regulation being imposed on it by presenting a $5,000 grant from the Arco Foundation to the National Resources Foundation of Texas in July this year. The Foundation, whose executive director is Midlander Mike Bradford, is a free market environmental education-based organization which is trying to help the industry overturn some of the regulations.

Before Ken Thompson, former ARCO senior vice president of the Western District, transferred to Plano as ARCO's vp of exploration and production technology, he was instrumental in steering the ARCO Foundation award of $50,000 to the United Way of Midland's Project Blueprint -- a minority leadership enhancement program. ARCO gave $20,000 to Project Blueprint in 1992.

ARCO Foundation had also awarded $10,000 to Midland's EPIC program in May. This was the second year ARCO Foundation funded the program.

In 1992, ARCO Vice President Ken Thompson received the key to the city for his efforts in supervisory training programs for Midland's city managers.

Earlier in '91, ARCO unveiled a "clean" gasoline with one-third less pollutants, and funded a desert reclamation project to share information with the industry on ways to restore old tank battery sites.

Company employees are also active in a broad variety of organizations including The Boys and Girls Club of Midland, Casa de Amigos, Community and Senior Services, Junior Achievement, Midland Association of Retarded Citizens, ToastMasters, United Way, YMCA, Permian Basin API and the Permian Basin Chapters of SPE and the Texas Society of CPAs.

CHEVRON — Chevron has had a significant season of divestiture and restructuring, but has not had any major cut backs in the last two year.

It was announced in November '92 that Chevron Corp. planned to cut 1,500 jobs, most of them in California, in order to get costs in line with its competitors and improve earnings.

One month earlier the company announced that it would concentrate on buying and trading properties in core areas. This announcement came after Chevron swapped 350 oil fields to Pennzoil for stock. The fields in West Texas included Sacroc, University Waddell, Slaughter and Penwell.

Restructuring efforts announced in May 1992 eliminated nearly 400 of Chevron's 970 Permian Basin jobs. The company's Midland staff would remain at over 200 employees.

At the same time, Chevron divided the Permian Basin Business Unit into two smaller profit centers: The North and South Permian Basin Profit Centers. Chevron closed its Denver Business Unit.

Though it was divided into two business units, the company has been united in its support of community projects.

In May 1993, Midland's Chevron USA office teamed up with the American Red Cross to be the first area company to offer first aid and emergency training to its employees through the Community First Aid and Safety Course.

The all-inclusive training was designed to help employees aid each other in case of an emergency or accident on the job, and also to benefit them should they need the training at home.

In January, two Midland Boy Scout troops were recipients of donations made by Chevron through the company's Employee Involvement Fund.

CONOCO — Despite undergoing the rigors of several restructuring moves in recent months Conoco has taken the lead on several fronts, including deep drilling and environmental innovation.

Recent restructuring efforts by Conoco have increased the geographical scope of the Midland office, which now handles all the company's U.S. operations except Gulf Coast. Production, exploration and facilities in Colorado, Utah, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Kansas, New Mexico and Texas are handled from this office.

The restructuring closed the company's Casper, WY exploration and production office and some employees were moved to Midland. Conoco also closed its Oklahoma City office and moved 35 employees to Midland.

The Midland office now has approximately 240 employees. There are another 200 employees in the field bringing the Permian Basin total to 440.

Conoco announced earlier this year that its Midland office would oversee drilling operations of the deepest gas wildcat ever in Illinois. Exploration Manager Mark Wheeler said recently that although this well was a dry hole and has since been plugged, Conoco is continuing to evaluate the Illinois Basin, as well as specific areas in the Rocky Mountains and the Val Verde Basin.

By September '93, Conoco had already completed two Ellenburger wells in the Val Verde Basin and was setting location for a third. Conoco and Tom Brown had earlier announced a major Strawn discovery in the ACU well in the area. Division Manager Bob Irelan said Val Verde is an active area for Conoco and the potential site of pipeline and other facilities.

This year's exploration plans called for drilling 50 stepout and exploration wells, and Wheeler said the '95 plan is about the same. Conoco is also spending about $10 million in '94 on 3-D seismic, some of which is shooting existing fields and some exploratory.

Along with the company's active drilling program, Conoco employees are active in a number of community ventures including Christmas in April for which 60 employees and their families completed nine projects this year. Employees also adopted two stretches of highway this year under the Adopt-a-Highway program, and 16 employees rode bicycles 150 miles in the multiple sclerosis "MS150" this year.

Conoco's recent restructuring projects has increased the geographical area overseen by the Midland office. The company has 440 employees in the Permian Basin.

An ongoing Dress a Live Doll promotion, a Juvenile Diabetes golf tournament and Toys for Tots are other employee activities. This year Conoco's Midland office also adopted a school through Partners in Education and doubled its United Way goal. The company contributed $10,000 to the Midland United Way's Project Blueprint early in 1993.

Only six jobs in the Permian Basin were affected by Conoco's announcement in mid-August that 370 employees overall in its exploration and production divisions would be subject to another round of job cuts. The reductions affect workers in Texas, Louisiana and Wyoming.

On the environmental front, Conoco applied for a patent in 1992 for its vapor jet system which utilizes produced water to suction tank vapors and put them into a sales line rather than allow them to be vented to the air.

EXXON — Once the dominant major in the Permian Basin, Exxon's stature has slipped dramatically over the years.

The biggest slip came this year when the company announced in June that approximately 140 jobs would be eliminated in Midland and operations here would be downgraded from a division office to a production office status, leaving 270 professional, technical and clerical employees to support field operations currently being served from Midland.

In August of 1992 Exxon annouced planned cutbacks of 50 Midland jobs in the company's Southwestern Production Division office.

At the time, Exxon had more than 500 employees in Midland. The company's Midland drilling operations were consolidated into Houston. In announcing the cutbacks, Exxon joined a growing list of major oil producers who were downsizing domestic operations to cope with low oil and gas prices, sluggish demand and government restrictions.

The company's support of Midland and education includes its donation of an 80,000 sq. ft., $1.5 million, downtown building to Midland Independent School District for its administrative operations.

In community affairs, Exxon's Southwestern Division reservoir management group joined the Texas Department of Transportation's "Adopt-A-Highway" anti-litter campaign in May 1993. The pledge requires Exxon employees to pick up litter four times a year along its adopted two-mile stretch of Hwy. 349, about 14 miles north of Midland in Martin County.

FINA OIL & CHEMICAL CO. — Fina is unique in its position in the Permian Basin in that its downstream employees outnumber its upstream employees.

(From 3E)

The company has 150 employees in its upstream group, and 370 employees, primarily at its Big Spring refinery, in its downstream group. Total Permian Basin operations involve exploration, production, gas processing, gathering (crude and gas), refining and retail marketing.

The company says it is not looking for any significant changes in its operations in the future. Permian Basin properties will continue to be core assets and operated to increase profitability.

Fina's current major projects include exploration activities concentrated in the Val Verde Basin, a DOE (Department of Energy) project regarding optimized infill drilling of the North Robertson Unit, and downspacing of other waterflood units.

Fina's employees are involved with a number of community projects. On a local level employees participate in: Dress a Live Doll, Newspaper in Education and the Midland Soup Kitchen. Nationally, employees are involved with the Multiple Sclerosis Society, March of Dimes and United Way.

The 260 employees of Fina's Big Spring Refinery marked one million hours without a lost-time injury and 600,000 hours without a recordable injury. Both milestones were achieved in August 1994.

MARATHON — As operator of the prolific Yates field, Marathon has had a long presence in Midland, and is expected to be around for a few more decades. But it too is downsizing.

The corporation announced in April that it would eliminate 1,500 jobs through early retirement or severance packages, and in May, Midland's Marathon office announced that 70 employees had received severance packages. The company employs 180 in the Midland office and 22,000 worldwide.

Two years earlier 100 Marathon jobs were eliminated at various locations throughout the company, including 16 in Midland's exploration and production division, due to negative business conditions. The terminations followed a voluntary early retirement program accepted by 351 Marathon employees.

The company also underwent restructuring in 1990 as a result of its merger with TXO.

Marathon's Mid-Continent Region employs 207 people at its Midland office, and approximately 431 in the region. Most of the workforce is concentrated in West Texas and SE New Mexico.

About 340 of the total work in Texas where the company has offices in Midland, Iraan, Olson, McCamey, Big Lake and San Angelo. Another 60 New Mexico employees work out of offices or live in Artesia, Carlsbad, Eunice, Farmington and Hobbs.

The geographic area handled by Marathon's Region office includes the western half of Texas, including South Texas, West Texas, the Texas Panhandle and all of New Mexico. Most of the Region's operations fall within the Permian Basin.

Marathon operates the Indian Basin Gas Plant in New Mexico's Eddy County and the Yates Gas Plant in Pecos County. Marathon Pipe Line Co. also owns and operates a 16-inch crude oil pipeline system which extends from the Yates Field to the Midland area.

Marathon's most important field worldwide has been and continues to be the Yates Field which covers over 26,000 acres in Pecos and Crockett Counties. Discovered in 1926, this field has since produced some 1.3 billion barrels of oil and still ranks as one of the largest fields in the lower 48 states. Unitized in 1976, the Yates Field is operated and 50 percent owned by Marathon.

The company's Mid-Continent Region operates 2,100 West Texas wells and more than 550 in New Mexico. West Texas production from operated wells during 1993 averaged 58,000 barrels of hydrocarbons per day and 24 MMCF of natural gas per day. In New Mexico production currently averages about 10,000 barrels of hydrocarbons per day and 200 MMCF of natural gas per day. Marathon operates 400 injection wells in Texas and another 58 in New Mexico.

A major goal for the Region remains to maximize the ultimate recovery and value from the Yates Field reservoir. As part of the company's ongoing effort to manage the reservoir, reduce field decline and improve overall recovery, Marathon has been using short-radius horizontal wells.

As old wells are plugged, they are replaced by new short-radius wells through which a Marathon-patented polymer gel is injected to prevent gas production from the gas cap through natural fractures. To date over 60 of these wells have been drilled and, along with other advanced production techniques, will help maximize production.

Innovative efforts at Yates have won Marathon a number of awards in the last two years, including Hart's Oil & Gas World's "Best New Technology." Reflecting the success of Marathon's efforts at Yates is that production was stabilized last year after seven years of decline.

Marathon's Mid-Continent Region is going forward with activity and, as in the past, no major changes are expected for the coming year.

Marathon's employees are also active in a number of community programs including Midland's Junior Achievement program. Region Manager Bob Kukla is the current chairman of the Board of Directors and a number of Marathon employees serve as classroom consultants. Marathon secured the highest amount of financial pledges from the business community in the 1992, 1993, and 1994 Midland Junior Achievement Fund Drives.

Marathon employees are also active in the United Way campaign with contributions increasing significantly in '93 over '92. The company has entered into a Partnership in Education with Pease Elementary School and up to 75 employees and spouses are donating a portion of their time every month to this partnership.

The company is also active in the Permian Basin Petroleum Association and the local Chamber of Commerce. In Iraan, five Marathon employees serve on the School Board and about 60 percent of the city's Volunteer Fire Dept. work for Marathon.

MOBIL — Mobil's Midland office consists of two business asset teams, plus a technical team and drilling and administrative support.

Midland South Asset Team operates oil and gas production in 20 fields stretched across 10 West Texas counties located south and west of Midland and in SE New Mexico. Six gas fields are grouped with seven oil fields to form the Delaware Basin Operations Area. The remaining seven oil fields are grouped with the Pegasus gas plant to form the Midland Basin Operations Area.

Approximately 1,365 active wells (815 oil, 165 gas, 385 service) are maintained by the 231 Mobil Permian Basin employees. There are 75 of these employees in the Midland office.

Current production for the South Asset Team properties is 16,800 BOPD and 335 MMCFPD, with 5700 BNGLPD. Nearly 80 percent of the light oil production is from fields currently being waterflooded and five percent is from fields being CO_2 flooded.

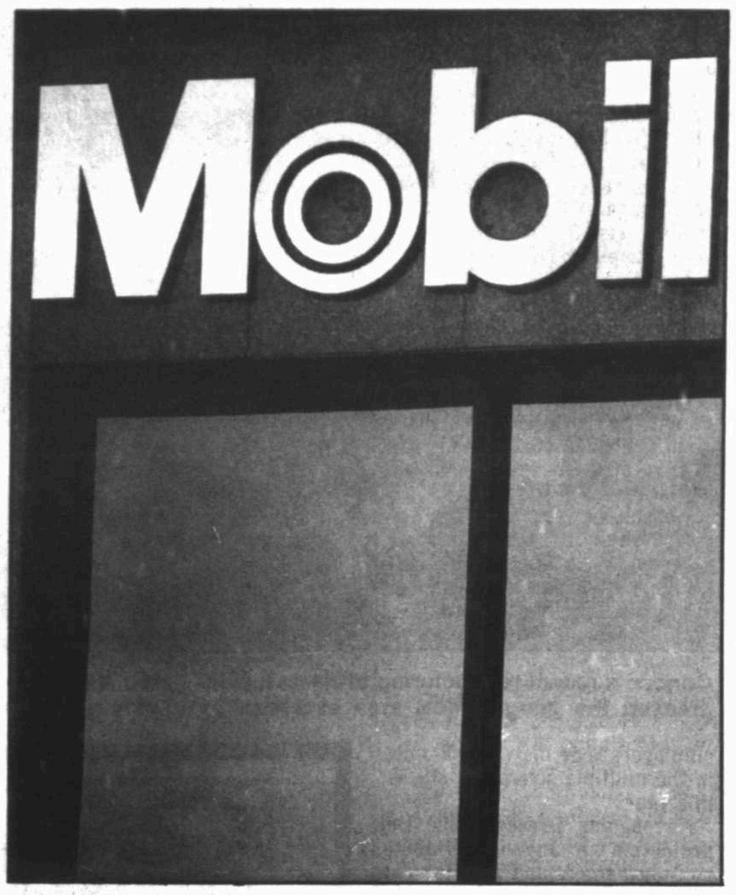
Future projects for the South Asset Team include continued development of its light oil pressure maintenance gas projects in the Pegasus Devonian, Ellenburger and Parks Devonian reservoirs. Also, continued light oil waterflood development of the East Dollarhide and Pegasus/Parks fields is on tap, with future plans for infill development.

Various gas areas in the Delaware and Val Verde Basins are also being looked at for exploitation potential.

Midland North Asset Team operates properties located from north of Midland to the four corners area of Utah. Key assets in the group include Salt Creek, Slaughter, Levelland, Wasson, Greater Aneth and Ratherford.

The North Asset Team currently operates seven CO_2 floods. The group owns a fully integrated CO_2 infrastructure including the McElmo Dome CO_2 Field in SW Colorado, the Cortez Pipeline from SW Colorado to Denver City, the Slaughter Pipeline from Denver City to the Slaughter/Levelland Fields, and Este Pipeline from Denver City to Salt Creek.

Mobil officially dedicated its Salt Creek unit CO_2 project in November 1993. Over $120 million dollars was planned for the project which is expected to extend the life of the field another 20 years. The Salt Creek field is a milestone to the Permian Basin in that it resulted in the building of the 128-mile long CO_2 Este Pipeline from Denver City.



Mobil's Midland office is comprised of two business management teams, the North Asset Team and the South Asset Team, overseeing the company's operations in the Permian Basin.

Mobil's North Asset Team plans to continue waterflood optimization of its current projects through infill drilling and to study the reservoirs for future tertiary EOR operations.

This effort includes the Ratherford waterflood development program planned for 1995 to 1998. Mobil assumed ownership of the Ratherford from Phillips in July '93.

Mobil's Sandhills and Waddell facilities in Crane County were purchased in December 1992 by American Central Gas Companies, Inc. of Tulsa, Houston and Odessa.

Mobil's restructuring efforts in mid-1992 began with an announcement that 2,000 jobs would be cut by year-end. Most of the cuts involved U.S. oil and gas exploration and refining operations.

Mobil had already announced in April '92 that 55 employees in Midland would be laid off, part of the 300 then employed. The company's Denver and Oklahoma City offices were closed, and exploration was centralized in Dallas. The company's restructuring plan announced that February was designed to downsize its producing units 20 to 30 percent.

PHILLIPS — Phillips is now in the process of rationalizing its major assets in the Permian Basin and dealing with an announced employee reduction.

The company announced earlier this month that it would reduce its work force world wide by 800 employees, but to date the number that could be impacted in the Permian Basin has not been decided.

Phillips began shooting 3-D seismic over its main producing fields in 1989 and experienced an excellent success rate on wells drilled based on the 3-D data. The company shot or participated in six 3-D surveys in the Permian Basin in 1994 and plan a similar number next year.

Phillips plans to continue exploring in the Permian Basin primarily near its existing production. Drilling activity for the company is expected to stay flat this year.

The company's 260 Permian Basin employees have been and are continuing to remain actively involved in a number of local community organizations. Among them are United Way, Business Education Partnership (with Midland and Odessa schools), TAME (Texas Alliance for Minorities in Engineering), Junior Achievement, Earth Day Presentations, Salvation Army, and Walk-a-thons

MEETINGS

WTGS to host Arco research advisor

The West Texas Geological Society will meet Tuesday at the Midland Center beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Guest speaker will be Charles L. Vavra, a research advisor for Arco Exploration and Production Technology in Plano. His topic will be "Pore Geometry and Reservoir Quality: A Link Between Geology and Reservoir Engineering."

One of the major issues that must be addressed during evaluation of exploration or development plays is reservoir quality, which not only involves porosity and permeability but also capillarity, relative permeability, recovery efficiency and fluid saturations.

By integrating geologic information and engineering data with a "hydrocarbon's eye-view" of the pore system, porosity, permeability, capillarity relative permeability, fluid saturations and recovery efficiency can be related to pore-level geologic factors. In this way, pore-level reservoir characterization provides a critical link among geology, engineering and petrophysics, a link that can lead to improved evaluations of exploration and development plays.

Cost is $7 per person and reservations can be made by calling 683-1573 by Monday afternoon.

PITTS: Doomed policy

(From 2E)

America is the world's leading coal producer, and coal burned with natural gas could be cleaner answer boiler fuel demand. Natural gas as a transportation fuel, could be the answer, to making America energy independent. Only a handful of technological and infrastructure problems remain to be solved, but the solutions are coming painfully slow.

America has more oil locked up in the oil shales of Western Colorado than exists in Saudi Arabia, but cannot economically produce it. Oil shale projects, which came along during the energy crunch, have all been closed. But that technology and the oil shale option must not be allowed to die. Even if it takes $100 per barrel subsidies.

If America doesn't act now to establish a policy to lessen its dependency on foreign oil, the day is coming — when they start counting the body bags — that $100 a barrel will sound like a bargain.

John Paul Pitts is business/oil editor of the Reporter-Telegram.

Editors Note: This the second in a series of analytical columns on America's energy policy. Next week: Oil and National Security.

Arco remains bullish on Alaska prospects

N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Atlantic Richfield Co. remains bullish on finding new oil deposits in Alaska despite suffering two big drilling setbacks in as many years.

"Alaska will continue to generate projects that add to producing rates and reserves in existing fields," Arco president and chief executive officer Mike R. Bowlin told oil industry analysts during a meeting earlier this month in New York.

Bowlin said he expects Alaskan projects to add 100 million barrels to the company's reserves over the next five years.

His comments came after Los Angeles-based Arco announced early last week that its Sunfish oil discovery in Alaska's Cook Inlet, once believed to contain up to 750 million barrels, is not big enough to sustain commercial development.

At that size, the field would have been the largest ever found in the inlet and the third-largest in Alaska.

But in October one of Sunfish's test wells hit water. Then in December, Arco said the field was significantly smaller than originally thought.

The company spent about $170 million on oil leases, seismic studies and exploratory drilling.

Last summer, the company made a similar decision about its Kuvlum discovery in the Beaufort Sea, 60 miles from Prudhoe Bay, the nation's largest oil field.

"We are disappointed by the outcome," said Arco spokesman Albert Greenstein. "We obviously had high hopes early last year of two (new) major areas where we might continue to develop oil."

Jack N. Aydin, an analyst at McDonald & Co. Investments in Cleveland, said Arco should have been more reserved about the initial finds.

"They made a big deal out of it and that was probably a mistake. It's very disappointing news," he said of the Sunfish analysis. "They were looking to have a new source of production coming and they spent a lot of money and resources on it."

Arco said it will record a $30 million charge against third-quarter earnings this year as a result of the Sunfish project.

Greenstein said Arco passed on the Sunfish and Kuvlum projects because of the costs associated with recovering the oil. The reservoir is also "thinner and more discontinuous" than originally thought, the company said.

Now Arco is trying to sell its Sunfish interest to Phillips Petroleum Co. in Bartlesville, Okla.

Arco and Phillips were 60-40 partners, respectively, in the project.

"We're definitely interested. Our economic profile is different because we already have a platform in place," said Phillips spokesman Jere Smith. "Just the fact we have a platform in place is good news."

The company is evaluating its own seismic studies on the region, he said.

Meanwhile, Arco says the Kuvlum and Sunfish setbacks won't keep it from future Alaskan exploratory projects.

Alaska accounts for 60 percent of Arco's worldwide oil production.

During 1993, Alaskan projects yielded 419,000 barrels per day of oil for Arco and the company expects the figure to climb to 425,000 this year.

Alaskan oil is important because it is the source of crude for Arco's West Coast gasoline market.

Last month the company said it would cut capital spending by 36 percent to $9.2 billion as it shifts focus from Alaska to overseas projects during the next five years.

Greenstein points out that the plan still includes about $970 million for Alaskan operations, $200 million for exploration.

MAJORS: Basin holds core properties for the March of Dimes, American Heart Walk and the Cancer Society among others.

(From 4E)

Phillips has been instructing area school children for the second year, in grades four to six, about environmental issues and hazardous products. This year's program has targeted 20 schools and 4,300 children.

GPM Gas Corp., a subsidiary of Phillips, donated $25,000 toward enriching the American Airpower Heritage Museum in July 1993. Phillips has supported the museum and the Confederate Air Force for a number of years with contributions of fuel, equipment and services.

A check for $5,000 from Phillips was given to Midland High School students in April '93. This PEP (Phillips Environmental Partnership) award was used to create an outdoor learning laboratory at Midland's Wadley-Barron Park.

SHELL — The Shell Building was once a common fixture in downtown Midland, but it has been many years since Shell consolidated in Houston, taking with it all of its E&P people, and leaving only field personnel.

The company's biggest property in the Permian Basin is the Denver Unit in the Wasson field.

The company is continuing to consolidate. In July 1991, Shell announced it would cut its nationwide work force by 10 to 15 percent, a reduction necessitated according to Shell "by an adverse ongoing environment for the oil and gas industry in this country."

Shell's work force dropped from 31,500 in January 1991, to 23,000 in July 1993. Reductions included normal attrition and the sales of several assets including the company's credit card operation in Tulsa, part of a southern California plant and its mining subsidiary.

TEXACO — One of the biggest shocks to Midland and the Basin was Texaco's announcement last month that it would downsize its operations here and reduce its workforce.

In early August, Texaco announced a restructuring designed to reduce its number of exploration and production divisions from seven to four. The four E & P divisions remaining are Denver, Bakersfield, Calif., Onshore in New Orleans, and Offshore, also based in New Orleans. Midland E & P employees were reduced from 214 to 155; they will remain at the same Midland office.

Midland's accounting department, 86 jobs, will relocate to Houston in 1995.

The Midland office, which was previously a Texaco division office, is now divided into two Business Units: Permian East (Hobbs and Levelland areas) and Permian West (Big Spring and Odessa areas). The Farmington area responsibility that previously was overseen by Midland has been transferred to the Rocky Mt. Business Unit.

Bill Johnson, manager of Permian West, said the reorganization added additional responsibilities to the Midland office. Rather than concentrating strictly on exploration and production, the broadened scope for this office resulted in intensified accountability including E & P as well as gas plants and properties operated jointly or by others.

The current year has been another active one for Texaco. The company's Slaughter CO_2 Project near the Levelland area was kicked off earlier this year. Johnson said this major project has been performing well with over 60 MMCF injecting daily.

He added that Texaco's Mabee CO_2 project is on schedule and performing well. Injection began in January 1992. Four waterflood projects were started that year and four more in 1993.

Several smaller waterfloods were also initiated this year. Johnson said Texaco plans to stay active because the Permian Basin is an important part of Texaco's core development plans. He said this focus on core properties means the Permian Basin will grow in value to the company.

Don Lancon, manager of the Permian East Business Unit, said Texaco is one of the most active majors in the Permian Basin.

The Conger area of Sterling County is moving towards completion of a drilling program that has consisted of 200 exploitation and infill wells. Lancon said another 30 to 40 wells may be drilled in Sterling County next year and about 30 exploitation wells are planned in the Eumont Field in Lea County this year and into '95. Texaco has drilled 15 to 20 Spraberry wells this year and plans the same in '95.

Lancon said they just completed a sizeable 3-D seismic shoot in the Vacuum Field and are processing the data now. A current shoot is taking place in the TXL-Fee area south of Midland.

He said with the new organization's increased emphasis on the Permian Basin, they expect an increased capital budget also. He looks for a slight increase in exploration and development, and a 20 to 25 percent increase in overall activity for Texaco and the number of wells drilled in the Basin.

In April this year, the Texaco Star Academic Challenge was won by a team of students from Lee High School who triumphed over teams from other Permian Basin schools. Texaco awarded the team $5,000 in scholarships and $20,000 for the scholarship fund at Lee High School.

Texaco employees held a garage sale in 1993 to benefit United Way. Charlie Rentz, public affairs manager for Texaco's Midland office, said the United Way is the premier campaign for the local Texaco office because the money is kept in Midland to help those in need. Last year Texaco reached the platinum level with an average of over $200 pledged per employee.

In 1992, employees joined forces with Keep Midland Beautiful, the Texas Forest Service and the city of Midland, and planted 200 trees along Lamesa Road. Texaco provided the $25,000 to buy the trees. Rentz said employees will plant another 150 trees this year along N. Big Spring St.

Rentz said employees are involved in other community activities like March of Dimes, Christmas in April, daily delivery of Meals on Wheels, and the Telephone Reassurance program through Community and Senior Services.

He said Texaco is proud of the level of community involvement and dedication demonstrated by its employees. Texaco was named Corporate Volunteer of the Year in both Midland and Odessa for 1992.

Cooper to spinoff petroleum equipment unit

HOUSTON (AP) — Cooper Industries Inc. plans to spin off its petroleum and industrial equipment unit through an exchange offer to shareholders, the company said.

The offer will provide shareholders with the chance to exchange some or all of their Cooper common stock for shares in the new company.

Cooper Industries' petroleum and industrial equipment business reported 1993 revenues of $1.3 billion.

Robert Cizik, Cooper's chairman and chief executive officer, said the decision to separate the segment is the natural outcome of the company's long-term diversification strategy.

"The separation of the two parts should allow the financial markets to evaluate each company more effectively and investor returns should then relate more directly to each business and its markets," Cizik said.

The new company's operations include Cooper Energy Services, of Mount Vernon, Ohio: Cooper Oil Tool, of Houston: Cooper Turbocompressor, of Buffalo, N.Y. and Wheeling Machine Products, of Pine Bluff, Ark.

The new independent company will have its own management and board of directors. The segment's assets will be transferred to the new company and it will be leveraged with appropriate amount of debt.

The terms of the offer, including the exchange rate, will be announced when the offer commences in the second quarter of 1995.

The Permian Basin.
Important to our past.
Essential to our future.

Since the 1940s Mobil has been investing in technology and people to produce from the Permian Basin.

But, the way we see it, what's happened in the past is just the start. Today we're planning significant, long-term investments for the Permian Basin – investments in enhanced oil recovery technology that will take us well into the next century.

Our people also are making substantial investments in the Permian Basin – investments of themselves in civic, educational and charitable organizations that will be paying off for everyone here for years to come.

Pecos yields Wolfcamp gas discovery

Staff Report

A Wolfcamp gas discovery has been completed in Pecos County, 24 miles southwest of Fort Stockton.

ENRON OIL & GAS CO. tested the No. 2601 La Escalera for a calculated absolute open flow of 9,100 Mcfd from perforations 7,413 to 7,553 ft. The interval was fractured with 59,600 gallons of gel and 127,500 lbs. 20/40 sand.

Permitted as an 8,200 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 7,700 ft., where 4 1/2 inch casing was set.

Location is 600 ft. from south and 1,334 ft. from west lines of Section 26, Block D, Dario de la Cruz survey, Abst. 6263.

Chevron finals Ward confirmer

CHEVRON U.S.A. INC. has completed a confirmer to the Ward Estes North (Yates) field of Ward County, 10 miles southeast of Kermit.

On potential test, the No. 1580 G.W. O'Brien et al flowed 295 barrels of 28.2 gravity crude, 260 Mcfd and six barrels of water on a 19/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 300 psi. The well flowed from perforations 2,780 to 2,810 ft., which had been acidized with 650 gallons of 15 percent NeFeHCL acid and fractured with 10,760 gallons of frac and 29,000 lbs. sand.

Permitted as a 3,400 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 3,250 ft. and plugged back to 3,154 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 3,249 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,717 ft., include the Rustler at 1,808 ft., Tansill at 2,574, Yates at 2,704 and Seven Rivers at 2,952 ft.

Location is 1,530 ft. from south and 2,190 ft. from west lines of Section 34, Block F, G&MMB&A survey, Abst. 972.

Ward recompletion reopens Bone Spring

A recompletion project has reopened Bone Spring production in the Soda Lake field of Ward County, 14 miles south of Barstow.

BLEDSOE PARTNERS INC. recompleted the No. 1 Vermejo "A", testing it to pump 45 barrels of 40 gravity crude, 100 Mcfd and six barrels of water from perforations 9,170 to 9,867 ft. The interval was acidized with 17,500 gallons of 15 percent HCL acid.

Originally drilled to 11,508 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 11,505 ft., the well was plugged back to 10,500 ft.

The well topped the Cherry Canyon at 5,890 ft., Bone Spring at 8,200 and Wolfcamp at 10,676 ft.

Location is 467 ft. from northwest and 1,080 ft. from southwest lines of Sectio 38, Block 1, W&NW survey, Abst. 791.

The well was originally completed as a Wolfcamp producer in the Vermejo East field, drilled by Energy Reserves Group. It was tested to flow 96 barrels of crude and 49 barrels of water from Wolfcamp perforations 11,020 to 11,030 ft.

More horizontal permits granted

AUSTIN — The Railroad Commission granted 65 permits for horizontal wells statewide in August, reflecting an increase in activity from the previous month.

By comparison, 46 permits for the advanced technology wells were issued in July, 70 in June and 58 in May.

There were no new horizontal permits issued in the Pearsall (Austin Chalk) field in August.

By comparison, 31 permits were issued to those drilling horizontal holes in the Giddings (Austin Chalk) field last month. Fayette County led the pack with 15, followed by Lee County with nine and Washington County with four. Brazos County added another six permits last month, driving its cumulative total to 405.

Horizontal completions remained relatively steady in August as drilling was concluded on 51 wells, raising to 3,305 the number of horizontal wells completed in Texas since 1984.

Overall operators in 103 Texas counties have now received commission permits to drill horizontal wells, as a permit was granted for the first horizontal project in Milam County last month.

Gas projects planned in Brazil

HOUSTON (AP) — The BTB Group, a consortium of BHP of Australia, Tenneco Gas and British Gas, signed a deal for two natural gas projects in Brazil.

The BTB Group, together with Petroleo Brasileiro S.A., Yacimientos Petroliferos Fiscales Bolivianos and others, plan a 2,100-mile natural gas pipeline is part of $5 billion integrated natural gas project that includes reserve and market development.

Under the agreements, the BTB Group will look at converting an existing oil-fired thermal power plant to burn natural gas and building a natural gas distribution system in Sao Paulo.

In addition, they'll convert the 470-megawatt Piratininga power plant from oil to natural gas.

Geco-Prakla gets contract from Shell

HOUSTON — Geco-Prakla announced the successful award of a 28,000 CMP kilometer 3-D seismic acquisition program for Shell Offshore Inc. in the Gulf of Mexico.

Marine Vessel Geco Tau will tow three 5800 meter streamers and three 5400 cubic inch source arrays, acquiring nine simultaneous lines of coverage with each vessel pass. The triple source array, three source arrays all firing alternatively, towed by one vessel, is called flip-flop-flip by Geco-Prakla.

Onboard, Shell will use several modules of the Trilogy system which includes tightly integrated modules for acquisition (Triacq), digital insea source controller (Trisor), navigation/positioning system (Trinav), total acquisition quality control (Trilogy QC), and onboard processing (Tripro), all sharing a common database. By using selected Trilogy modules, Shell will be able to make exploration and production decisions while acquisition is still in progress.

Geco-Prakla, a member of the Schlumberger Oilfield Services group, provides integrated exploration services worldwide.

Enron to set up new company

HOUSTON (AP) — Enron Corp. has announced plans to set up a separate company to handle most of its existing power and pipeline operations in developing countries.

The new company, whose shares would be traded on the New York Stock Exchange, would allow Enron to reduce its direct investment in the projects and make more cash available for other investments.

In a separate move, subsidiary Enron International C.V. announced an agreement with two private Ecuadoran companies to develop a 150- to 200-megawatt power plant in Guayaquil, Ecuador.

The companies will develop the plant jointly at an expected cost of between $125 million and $170 million, Enron said.

Enron will have a 50 percent stake. The rest will be held by Empresa Electrica del Ecuador, a privately owned utility; Electroquil S.A., a private power company; and other Ecuadoran companies.

Enron officials said the plant is needed to eliminate power shortages suffered by Guayaquil, the largest industrial region in Ecuador.

Pasadena chosen for Amoco office

HOUSTON (AP) — Amoco Corp. has chosen a site in Pasadena for up to 700 engineers and construction employees as part of the company's massive restructuring program.

Chicago-based Amoco plans to lease four floors, or 190,000-square-feet and will transfer the company's engineering and construction functions there, company officials said.

Amoco previously had revealed that it would consolidate the group in Houston, but had not chosen a site.

Six hundred to 700 Amoco employees are slated to move into the building during the second quarter of next year. Amoco plans to sign a seven-year lease effective March 1.

Amoco officials say they do not know how many workers will be moving into the greater Houston area as part of the consolidation. Some of the employees will be moving to the new office from other locations in the area.

Business leaders have been told the consolidation will mean an influx of about 400 workers to the area and the retention of about 300 jobs.

Company officials said they picked Pasadena in part because of its proximity to Amoco's Texas City refinery and chemical plant, as well as chemical plants at Chocolate Bayou and Cedar Bayou.

The consolidation of Amoco's engineering and construction operations is part of a massive restructuring under way at the Chicago-based company.

As part of that program, Amoco plans to slash 4,500 jobs, or 10 percent of its worldwide work force, including 1,100 in greater Houston. Before the restructuring, Amoco had about 8,000 employees in Houston, making it one of the area's largest employers.

Survey finds utilities give NGV market incentives

ATLANTA — Nearly 90 percent of the natural gas utilities responding to an industry survey say they provide incentives for the natural gas vehicle market, the American Gas Association reports.

The 1994 Natural Gas Vehicles Incentive Survey shows that 103 of the 116 gas companies responding to the survey offer incentives for the NGV market. Companies in 22 states and two Canadian provinces offer incentives for NGV conversions and/or for the purchase of original equipment manufacturer vehicles. Companies in 41 states and three Canadian provinces offer incentives for natural gas fueling station construction. In addition, the report says that companies in 30 states and three Canadian provinces offer NGV leasing programs.

Connelly joined Coastal in 1967, serving in various positions in financial management, mostly recently as senior vice president and treasurer.

BRIEFS

Noble Affiliates curtailing gas production

ARDMORE, Okla. — Noble Affiliates Inc. has announced it will voluntarily curtail its natural gas production for September 1994.

The company estimates it will shut in approximately 80 million cubic feet of gas per day.

During the six months ended June 30, 1994, the company produced an average of 261.8 Mmcfd.

The company expects its voluntary curtailment to last until domestic natural gas prices improve from current levels.

Noble Affiliates Inc. is an independent energy company with exploration and production operations throughout major basins in the United States

Halliburton, Ensco Technology announce alliance agreement

HOUSTON — Halliburton Energy Services and Ensco Technology Co. have signed an exclusive alliance agreement to jointly provide directional and horizontal coiiled tubing drilling services on a global basis.

The alliance seeks to maximize the respective strengths of each company. Ensco is well-known for its highly-reliable and proven downhole tools for drilling directional and horizontal wells with coiled tubing. Halliburton is the world's largest provider of coiled tubing equipment and services with over 120 coiled tubing units worldwide.

Signed on September 19, the exclusive agreement means that the two companies will work jointly on all directional and horizontal coiled tubing drilling projects worldwide, both land and offshore. The alliance will not affect current obligations of either party with customers or third parties.

"Ensco has a very strong reputation for its patented bottom-hole orienting tool and other technologies used in drilling wells with coiled tubing" said Ken LeSuer, president and chief executive of Halliburton Energy Services. "We believe that this alliance will allow us to provide a great deal of value to our customers worldwide who choose to use coiled tubing for certain directional and horizontal drilling applications."

Using coiled tubing for drilling has significant economic and operational benefits in certain situations. It has distinct advantages for re-entering high pressure wells through casing and tubing production strings. It is also beneficial in situations where location size or environmental concerns don't allow for conventional rotary rigs. It can take less time to drill in some cases and, because of hole size, there is less drilling fluid required and less cuttings for disposal. This is especially advantageous when drilling underbalanced to minimize formation damage.

According to Stan Buffington, president of Ensco Technology, the alliance allows both Halliburton and Ensco to take advantage of their respective strengths in order to provide the highest-quality coiled tubing drilling services to oil and gas operators around the world.

"We are extremely pleased to work with Halliburton in this mutually-beneficial relationship," he said.

Ensco Technology Co., a wholly-owned subsidiary of Energy Service Co. Inc., is recognized as an industry leader in the supply of directional and horizontal drilling services and related technology to the oil and gas industry.

Halliburton Energy Services, a Halliburton Co. organization, is one of the world's leading suppliers of energy products and services. Now in its 75th year of business, the organization provides a broad range of services and products to the energy industry on a global basis.

AGA presents achievement awards

ATLANTA — Ten natural gas companies were presented with 1994 American Gas Association Consumer and Community Affairs Achievement Awards at the association's Consumer and Community Affairs Exchange.

The top award, the Platinum Award, was won by SCANA Corp., Columbia, S.C., for "Partners for a Better Community." This program is designed to help address the needs of rural South Carolina. The company encourages economic development by helping communities develop local leadership and facilitate strategic planning. SCANA also provides grants to assist with local infrastructure and loans to aid small businesses. In 1993, SCANA provided $321,761 in grants to 15 community projects. The program helped leverage $15.4 million in state and federal funds.

The Gold Awards in the three section categories were: Missouri Pride Service, Kansas City, Mo., in the Community Enhancement Category for "Caring for Kids," the utility's employee volunteer program designed to ad abused, neglected and needy children in its service territory; Southern California Gas Co., Los Angeles, in the Special Publics category for the "Los Angeles Compact for Environmental Justice," a policy initiative, spearheaded by the company, that promotes the participation of all citizens, regardless of ethnic or racial identity, in the public policy arena where decisions are made that affect the environment in which people live; and Citizens Gas & Coke Utility, Indianapolis, in the Customer Relations category for organizing and sponsoring "Race for Heat," a 10K run/5K walk whose proceeds helped pay the winter heating bills of needy customers.

Silver awards were won by National Fuel Gas Distribution Corp., Buffalo, N.Y., in the Customer Relations section for its "Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program Outreach"; the Brooklyn Union Gas Co., Brooklyn, N.Y., in the Community Enhancement section for its "Area Development fund"; and Equitable Gas and The Peoples Natural Gas Co., Pittsburgh, in the Special Publics section for their joint program "HEAT'S ON."

Bronze Awards were given in the Community Enhancement section to The East Ohio Gas Co., Cleveland, for its "Neighborhood Enrichment Award Program"; and in the Special Publics section, to Columbia Gas Distributions Cos., Columbus, for its "Grassroots and Legislative Initiatives to Ensure Adequate LIHEAP Funding."

AN EQUAL OPPORTUNITY EMPLOYER

Union Texas senior debt rated well

CHICAGO — Duff and Phelps Credit Rating Co. has assigned an initial rating of 'BBB+' (Triple-B-Plus) to the senior unsecured debt of Union Texas Petroleum Holdings Inc. Approximately $100 million of outstanding debt securities are affected. The rating also applies to the company's $200 million shelf registration of debt securities with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The rating recognizes the strong financial protection measures exhibited by Union Texas and the fact that the company should generate excess cash flow over the next few years. Union Texas owns major interests i high quality assets in two proven petroleum provinces. In Indonesia, stability of earnings is enhanced by long-lived reserves, long-term sales contracts, growing Far East Asian demand for liquefied natural gas and cost recovery features in the production sharing contract. Contributing to strong cash flows in the U.K. are rising production levels from the Piper/Claymore blocks, Sean gas field capacity charges and pipeline tariff revenues. In addition, the company generates cash flow from its interest in a Pakistan joint venture and a U.S.-based petrochemical business. As a result of Union Texas' high degree of operating focus, the organizational structure is lean and overhead costs are exceptionally low.

The rating also recognized the challenges faced by Union Texas in maintaining its reserve base. Operating for a number of years as a sale candidate impaired the company's ability to generate a high-quality portfolio of exploration prospects. As a result, the company may have to rely more heavily on acquisitions as a growth vehicle over the near- to intermediate term. However, the lean organizational structure should streamline the decision-making process and enhance the company's ability to respond to emerging exploration and acquisition opportunities.

Union Texas plans to concentrate approximately two-thirds of its capital spending on developing its core holdings, with the balance devoted to exploration within and outside of its major operating areas. Excess cash flow would most likely be used for development of any exploration successes or acquisition of proved undeveloped properties. Consequently, the company's fixed obligations ratio could be somewhat volatile depending on the size and method of financing of any acquisition. However, barring a major debt-financed acquisition, Union Texas' fixed charge coverage ratio should strengthen from a current multiple of about 6 times (first half 1994) due to improved earnings.

Brock reports quarterly loss

NEW ORLEANS — Brock Exploration Corp. has reported a net loss of $60,000 or 2 cents per share on revenues of $2.5 million for the quarter ended June 30, 1994.

These results compare with net income of $436,000 or 11 cents per share on revenues of $2.9 million for the same quarter in 1993.

The reduction in revenue to $2.5 million resulted from the decrease in gas volumes produced and the decrease in the price of natural gas to $1.69 from $2.11 for the quarters. Also contributing to the decline in revenues was $126,000 related to expenses the company recognized on closing out its outstanding commodity futures transactions in natural gas.

Texas Crude Oil Production

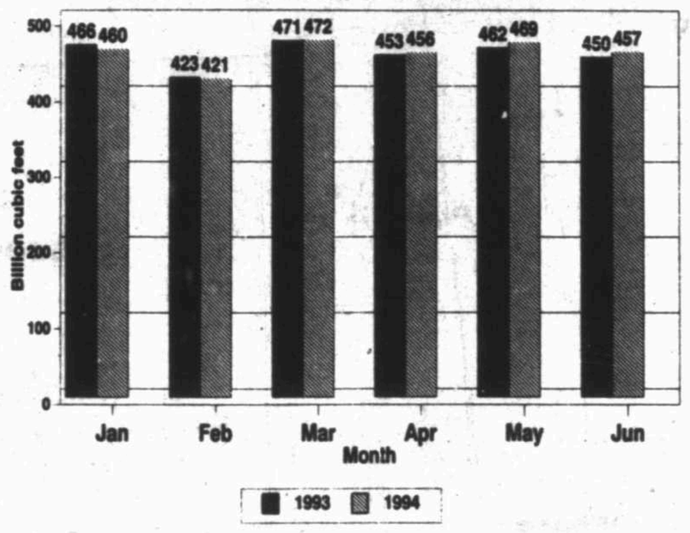
Texas Natural Gas Production

Statewide Monthly Totals, 1993-94



Texas production

Texas preliminary June crude oil production averaged 1,439,733 barrels daily, down from the 1,547,041 barrels daily average for June 1993. The preliminary Texas oil production figure for June is 43,191,987 barrels, down from 46,411,234 barrels reported in June 1993. Texas oil and gas wells produced 457,352,017 thousand cubic feet of gas in preliminary production for June, up 1.61 percent compared to June 1993's gas production total of 449,967,430 Mcf.

RICHARDSON, Texas — The "Energy of Change" is the theme of the 1994 Society of Petroleum Engineers Annual Technical Conference and Exhibition to be held in New Orleans September 25-28.

Society officials expect some 9,000 registrants for this 69th edition of the conference as well as more than 300 companies participating in the international exhibition which will cover 70,000-plus square feet at the Ernest N. Morial Convention Center.

The annual president's luncheon, set for September 28, will feature 1994 SPE President E.A. Breitenbach of Scientific Software-Intercomp Inc. delivering his "State of the Society" address. In addition, Roy Koerner, Texaco U.S.A., will be installed as 1995 SPE President following Breitenbach's presentation, and five new board members will be welcomed.

The incoming directors are W. Burt Nelson of Sonat Exploration Co.; J. Michael Gatens III of S.A. Holditch and Associates; Jeff R. Gibbs of North American Royalties Inc.; James D. McFarland of Imperial Oil Ltd.; and SPE Treasurer Robert D. Steele of Canadian Hunter Exploration Ltd.

The September 26 Awards Banquet will honor SPE members' contributions to the industry, profession, society and community.

William E. Brigham, John M. Campbell Sr. and Orville D. Gaither have been named honorary members, the SPE's highest form of recognition.

Brigham, associate chairman of the Petroleum Engineering department at Stanford University, recognized for nearly four decades of technical and scientific contributions to petroleum engineering.

Campbell, retired CEO of the Campbell Group of Companies, has spent his career pioneering technology and its applications. He is being recognized for pioneering contributions in the field of gas and natural gas liquids processing.

Gaither is a 42-year veteran of Amoco Production Co., retiring in 1991. He is being recognized for his outstanding leadership and dedicated service to the Institute and the society.

The Anthony F. Lucas Gold Medal, recognizing distinguished achievements in improving the technique and practice of finding and producing petroleum, will be given to Lawrence B. Curtis, retired from Conoco.

The DeGolyer Distinguished Service Medal, recognizing distinguished and outstanding service to SPE, the profession of petroleum engineering and the petroleum industry, will go to Ben H. Caudle, professor at the University of Texas Petroleum Engineering departent.

The SPE Distinguished Service Award for society-wide contributions will go to A. Ali Daneshy and D. Raymond Perry Jr.

The Lester C. Uren Award honors distinguished achievement in petroleum engineering technology made by a member before reaching age 45. This year the award goes to Stephen A. Holditch, a professor at Texas A&M University and president of S.A. Holditch & Associates.

The John Franklin Carll Award, honoring distinguished achievements that advance petroleum engineering technology or professionalism will be presented to Robert S. Schechter, a professor of chemical and petroleum engineering at the University of Texas.

The Young Member Outstanding Service award, given for contributions and leadership to the public and the community as well as to SPE, the profession and the industry by a member under age 63, will be given to Sandra L. Gentile, a team facilitator for Texaco Inc. and to Keith C. Seanard, a staff production engineer with Fina Oil & Chemical Co.

The Cedric K. Ferguson medal, recognizing an outstanding paper in any field of petroleum engineering written by an SPE members under age 33, will go to Russell T. Johns and Birol Dindoruk.

Additional awards include the Drilling Engineering Award (to Martin E. Chenevert), Formation Evaluation Award (to Robert J.S. Brown), Reservor Engineering Award (Fikri Kuchuk), Environment, Health and Safety Award (J.P. Visser) and Production Engineering Award (James P. Brill).

The Economic and Evaluation Award goes to Robert S. Thompson, associate professor at Colorado School of Mines.

SPE Distinguished Members include Richard J. Stegemeier, Joseph J. Taber, Daniel M. Bass (deceased), Richard Dumbrell, Robert J. O'Brien, Michael J. Economides and Richard A. Startzman, Jack R. Elenbaas, and Richard E. Wyman.

The Monday afternoon keynote Management and General Interest session, "Achieving Expectations Without Price Growth" will offer viewpoints from a range of distinguished industry leaders discussing how petroleum professionals can continue to fulfill their responsibilities and goals while operating in today's tight economic environment.

Speakers include Philip J. Carroll, president of Shell Oil Co.; Victor G. Beghini, president, Marathon Oil Co.; Michael J. Pink, chief operating officer, Enterprise Oil plc.; and A.A. Kozinski, group vice president of refining for Amoco Oil Co.

The session is co-chaired by Ansel L. Condray, senior vice president of Exxon Co. U.S.A. and C.C. Stewart Jr., group vice president of Kerr-McGee Corp.

Among the technical sessions will be "Professionalism in Transition"; "Slimhole and Coiled Tubing Drilling"; "Career Management: Charting Your Own Course"; "EOR Case Studies"; "Tight Gas Resources"; "Safety and Environmental Management" and "Topics in Gas Technology."

Well...school and all its extra-curricular activities are back in full swing, and the end of the first six weeks is just around the corner. That means report cards can't be far behind — a time that many students and parents are not fond of.

Because report cards are the yardstick which teachers must use to measure a student's performance and progress during a designated time period, the arrival of that list of grades is often dreaded.

Whether a student's grades are good or not so good, it is important that parents take an active role in their child's success in school.

To help parents know "how" to help their children in school, the Centers for Children and Families presented a seminar titled "Helping Children Succeed in School" Tuesday at the Center, 1031 Andrews Hwy. The seminar was the third in a series of 15 seminars the Center is presenting about common parenting issues.

"Our parent information seminars are all about helping parents make their households run like homes," said Debbie Lindsay, parent education manager for Centers for Children and Families.

"I believe it is real important to let the child have responsibility for their own school work," Ms. Lindsay said. "Then parents should praise them for their initiative."

AS FOR DREADING the arrival of report cards: a flyer, developed by the Child Abuse Prevention Council, distributed to parents simply states in large, bold letters, "STOP THE REPORT CARD REFLEX."

This is followed by six steps parents should keep in mind when reviewing a child's report card with them.

1) Sit down with your child and look over the report card.

2) Praise your child. Find at least one good thing: attendance, no tardies.

3) Be calm. Let your child tell you about his poor grades.

4) Ask how you can help your child do better.

5) Ask what you child can do to make better grades.

6) Make a plan with your child's teacher and your child to do better.

When a child is not doing well in school, often there is a underlying problem that needs to be worked out. If a child tends to be an underachiever, unmotivated or discouraged, the two primary reasons are that they fear failing and/or they feel inadequate, according to a flyer distributed by the Texas Department of Protective and Regulatory Service.

"A lot of kids think they can just get by, they think it's cool to act like school doesn't matter to them. But I really feel it's more of a cover-up for a feeling of inadequacy," Ms. Lindsay said.

One trap many children fall into is feeling they cannot meet the expectations of teachers and parents, so rather than try and fail, they simply don't try. These children automatically question their own abilities if they cannot meet their perceived expectations, which undermines their self-esteem.

Oscar Bejil, parent resource coordinator for Centers for Children and Families, who taught the two-hour seminar, said, "There is no way I can cover everything a parent can do (to help their child do better in school) in a short time. After years, I'm still learning new things that parents find work for them.

"But it is important for parents to encourage their children throughout their lives."

Bejil said parents must be careful when trying to help their children.

"A parent cannot do the work for the kids. As much as they want to help, they (parents) must teach the child to think for himself," he said. "And sometimes a parent runs into a wall and they can't help. A lot of the math now is way over our (parents) heads, but a parent can still help the child by teaching him basic decision making processes so they can work through the problem."

The best time to start teaching a child the basics is from the beginning.

"For example, when they are small, give them an option of one outfit or another when they are dressing. When making out a chore list, let them have a say in which chores they will be responsible for," Bejil said. "Start early teaching them their telephone numbers, their address, to dial 911 and why. All of this helps them process important information."

Around the fourth or fifth grade, role playing between parents and children begin. Children are at a point where they want to be treated as adults, yet they may often still act like children.

"It is important that parents be sensitive to their children's

Friendships form at summer camp

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

Midland High School senior Janeen Gibbs recently returned from what she calls "the experience of a lifetime." She participated in a Girl Scout International Wider Opportunity at Camp "Bla Sommer" in Denmark this past summer.

McKnight-Harrison

The daughter of Janet and Bill Gibbs and a member of Girl Scout Troop 52, Janeen was selected to represent the Permian Basin Girl Scout Council at the event. Approximately 3,000 Girl Scouts and Girl Guides from many countries attended the camp.

Janeen enjoyed several days of home hospitality in Chicago for orientation before and evaluations after the camp. She also spent several days of home hospitality in Denmark, where her host family cooked Danish food for her, and she reciprocated by cooking American cuisine.

Janeen's patrol lashed an above ground swimming pool for its camp project, and Janeen came back from her trip most impressed with the Danish lashing technique, which she describes as "very elaborate and on a much bigger scale."

"They lash huge logs into three story homes and then mud pack them. No cement or anything is used. It's an amazing technique," she said. Everything at the camp, including buildings, equipment and tools, were lashed together to be taken apart and moved at a later date.

Janeen feels the friendships she made with girls from all over the world were the most valuable part of her experience. She has become pen pals with girls she met from England, Germany and Denmark.

MIDLANDERS Dave and Mossie LeMaster recently returned from a three-week excursion through the Northeast United States, including New York City, Philadelphia, Washington, D.C., and Atlantic City.

The trip was a 29th wedding anniversary gift from Dave's brother and mother, Dr. A. James LeMaster and Mrs. Ruth LeMaster Hall, and included a Broadway musical, the World Trade Center, the United Nations, the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the nation's capital, the White House, the Smithsonian, Trump Plaza, the Taj Mahal, Independence Hall and the U.S. Mint.

But the highlight of the trip for the Midland couple occurred when their son, Marv, performed in Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream" at Princeton University. Marv is a graduating senior at Rider University in Lawrenceville, N.J.

TWENTY-FOUR PERSONS recently enjoyed the exciting sights and sounds of Northern New Mexico when they participated in the 1994 Santa Fe Opera Trip, sponsored by the Music Ministry of Midland's First United Methodist Church.

The group attended stunning performances of Rossini's "Barber of Seville" and Puccini's "Tosca." Pre-opera lectures were given each evening by Jane Ward in the lobby of the Hotel St. Francis, where the group stayed for the seventh consecutive year.

Another highlight of the trip was a visit to the village of Chimayo, where the group toured the historic Santuario de Chimayo, built in 1814 and still the sight of many religious pilgrimages. Afterwards, they dined at the lovely Rancho de Chimayo restaurant.

Other activities included dining at several of Santa Fe's noted restaurants, dinner theater at La Casa Sena Cantina, shopping in capital city's unique stores and galleries, and touring the many museums.

Midlanders traveling with the group were Mary Bechner, Herb and Elizabeth Blankinship, Joyce Brickey, Sue Cason, Margaret Cerf, Edna Corey, Ruth Culley, Aida Dunlap, Jo Fouts, Heidi Goebel, Brad and Jane Kisner, Suzanne Martin, Arthur and Lulene Oldham, Jane Schulte, Bob and Jane Ward and Mary White.

They were joined by the Wards' daughters, Teresa Compton of Longview and Carol Ward of Dallas, Mrs. White's daughter, Linda of Kayenta, Ariz., and former Midlander Tiene Richardson of Dallas.

CORRECTIONS — Candice Maynard is a new pledge of Zeta Tau Alpha sorority at Texas Tech University. Her sorority affiliation appeared incorrectly in last Sunday's column.

Mabel Humphrey's name was inadvertently misspelled in last week's column. She was one of the hostesses for the Midland Woman's Club fall tea.

DAZE: Quality time is important feelings and encourage them to act as adults when they seem ready. But parents also must allow their children to be who they are," Bejil said.

"Parents really need to know their children," he said. "Every child is different. If you have five children, you may have to handle the same situation five different ways."

In today's busy world where many homes are single-parent homes or homes where both parents work, it becomes harder and harder to find time to get to know your children. Bejil said that's where a parent's commitment must come into play.

"It's not how much time you spend with a child that is important, it is how that time is spent. You've got to set some time aside that is family time," Bejil said. "For working parents, this is a commitment that may be hard, but it is very important. After working all day, coming home and needing to fix dinner, eat, get baths and get to bed, it makes it very hard to have any real family time. Then there are all the activities after school, soccer, band, and all that.

"All of these things make it very difficult for a family to have much time together during the week, but you still have the weekends," he said.

"And parents need to remember to have fun with their kids too. If all they ever hear from you is you criticizing them, they won't want to be with you," Ms. Lindsay said.

"And don't be shocked by what they say," Bejil added. "When they are young, they will tell you stories about their friends and what they did. But as they grow into adolescents, they get more involved in what's on the streets.

"When they bring up something about drugs, or weapons or sex, parents need to be calm. If they blow up at the kid, they have closed the door on communication. They won't ever tell that parent anything again," Bejil said.

"Instead, parents need to learn to ask questions about what is happening, get the child to open up. This is a building process, and if the child learns to trust the parent, then possibly it will leave the door open for the parent to offer advice or direction in the future."

To detect a learning problem early, Bejil recommends watching for a lack of interest in reading.

"Very early in life, kids develop a love for reading; whether it is having someone read to them or learning to read the words themselves," Bejil said.

Ms. Lindsay said it also is important for parents to be involved in the child's education. "The Midland schools are good about sending home notices if there is a problem, but it is so beneficial if the child knows the parent is involved with the school and with the teacher. In many cases, the teachers can even help the parents learn how to better help their child."

Parents should set a good example for their children as well. Some recommendations include: going to the library and researching something while the children do their work there, setting aside a time at home for reading or studying where the parent reads or studies something as well, and setting aside a family time to discuss anything from school work or problems to accomplishments.

At the high school level, Bejil said it is often more difficult for a parent to help a child. "There already is so much that has happened between a parent and a child at that point, that we often need to work with the child and the parents together.

"All children need nurturing, and if they don't find it in their parents, they will seek it elsewhere," he said, "whether that be from their peers, other adults or a false sense of nurturing from alcohol and drugs."

"Sometimes it is good if a parent can open up their own vulnerabilities to the child. Children sometimes get the impression that mom or dad is perfect and so they can never be good enough to have their parents' approval," Ms. Lindsay said. "But if you can admit you made mistakes and you learned from them, then you may be able to teach your children to do the same."

"All children are looking for that unconditional love," Bejil said.

Bejil believes the seminars are helpful not only for the information he shares with those who attend, but also for the information other parents bring and share with the group. "I might give out 20 ideas, and you may only need two of them, where other parents may use 18 of them. You may have tried everything I've said, yet another parent may offer another suggestion, and that will be the one that works for you."

Both parents and children need to realize they are developing a relationship together.

"Parents wear many hats. If you could just put on your parent hat and be done with it, that would be one thing. But parents are teachers, chauffeurs, cooks, baby sitters, maids, providers, friends and a lot more," Bejil said.

While some parents would like to be "buddies" with their children, Bejil warns that they are on the wrong track. He recommends finding a balance between being friends and being parents to their children.

"Parents should think about what they are doing. When a child needs help, it makes more sense for them to reach up to a parent instead of reaching across to a peer," Ms. Lindsay said.

Because there is no training required to become a parent, most people draw on their own background for how to be parents. Therefore, adults who are not happy with the way they were reared might consider attending semi-

Parenting seminars offered

By Elizabeth Edwin Lifestyle Editor

Seminars being presented throughout the rest of the year by Centers for Children & Families address specific parenting issues. They are conducted every Tuesday at the office of Centers for Children & Families, located in the Western building at 1031 Andrews Hwy. Signs from the elevator on the second floor direct the way to the room where the seminars are presented.

"Each seminar addresses a common parenting concern in a single, solution-oriented session. We've discovered that many working parents have difficulties attending a workshop series stretched over several weeks so we wanted to provide a format more helpful for those parents," said Debbie Lindsay, parent education manager of Centers for Children & Families.

"With these seminars, we are trying to give practical information, not textbook fixes. We encourage parents to ask questions, to share ideas that have worked for them with other parents," Ms. Lindsey said.

Oscar Bejil, parent resource coordinator for Centers for Children and Families, will teach the evening classes, while the morning sessions will be taught by Janie Alcocer, parent resource coordinator, or Ms. Lindsay.

Each seminar is an individual topic. Parents are invited to attend any seminar that appeals to their needs, and there is no long-term commitment to attend all workshops. These seminars are $10 per person and no reservation is required. Scholarships are available. For information, call Ms. Lindsay at 561-5508.

The remaining seminar times and dates are:

Sept. 27 from 7-9 p.m. Building Self Esteem in Your Family
Oct. 4 from 10 a.m.-noon Building Self Esteem in Your Family
Oct. 11 from 7-9 p.m. Making Rules & Enforcing Consequences
Oct. 18 from 7-9 p.m. Alternatives to Punishment
Oct. 25 from 7-9 p.m. Developing Responsibility in Children
Nov. 1 from 10 a.m.-noon Help With Biting, Whining and Tantrums
Nov. 8 from 7-9 p.m. Single Parenting
Nov. 15 from 7-9 p.m. Handling Anger
Nov. 22 from 7-9 p.m. Stress Management (Work and Home)
Dec. 6 fromm 10 a.m.-noon Siblings Without Rivalry
Dec. 13 from 7-9 p.m. Parenting Teens

'Survival' tips help college freshmen

Associated Press

ALLENTOWN, Pa. — Going off to college can be both a frightening and exciting experience. However, Muhlenberg College's director of counseling says kids — and their parents — can survive that difficult first semester.

"Most high-school seniors are fearful of leaving their old friends and scared they won't meet new people," says Linda Bips, director for Counseling and Development. "They don't realize that their world is about to open up with new experiences and friendships."

Bips says the start of college is also a difficult time for parents. She has this advice: "Try to step back and believe in your son or daughter's ability to be an adult."

And for college freshmen, she has these suggestions:

- It's OK to feel scared, lonely and homesick during those first days and weeks on campus.
- Bring some of your favorite possessions from home; anything that makes you feel more comfortable in your new surroundings.
- Join a club or participate in an activity you enjoy. Make the effort to get out of your room.
- Have patience. Students often don't make close friends until the second semester.
- Stay at school several weekends in a row. Give yourself at least six weeks to adjust. If you want to see your family, invite them to visit you.
- If you're really feeling down, talk to a school counselor or student advisor.

Jim O'Leary
Master Crystal Designer For Waterford

When Waterford Crystal needed a crystal design for a vase that would be presented to Princess Grace of Monaco, one man was called upon for his expertise: master crystal designer Jim O'Leary.

As head of the Waterford Crystal design team and creator of hundreds of crystal objects for this legendary crystal company -- Jim O'Leary knows crystal -- from designing a piece on paper to mouth-blowing the shape to hand-cutting ever facet and edge. Over the years, his designs have been presented to President Reagan, Senator Ted Kennedy and hundreds of celebrities and heads of state around the world.

A 30-year veteran of the company, Mr. O'Learly began his career as an apprentice. Working under a mentor, he immersed himself in the art of crystal making, learning the difficult process of mouth-blowing molten glass into blank shapes and developing the skill to intricately cut and polish the cooled object into its final form -- a sparkling, multi-faceted goblet, bowl or piece of giftware, to name a few.

After five years, he qualified as a cutter which allowed him an opportunity to create his own pieces independently. Three years later, he won the distinction of master cutter, a position requiring rigorous training and study. His body of work as a master cutter has left a legacy of examples for consumer to enjoy and his colleagues to emulate.

In 1982, after 20 years with Waterford, he was invited to join its design team, an honor bestowed upon only a handful of the company's craftsmen.

In 1988, Jim O'Leary was paid the highest compliment possible in his profession when he rose to the level of Director of the Waterford design department. There he is responsible for overseeing the work of designers and the development of new items which are added continually to the Waterford collection.

Mr. O'Leary, whose personality is as sparkling as the crystal he creates. He will be traveling to selected cities where he will be conducting media interviews and appearances including Midland.

ANNIVERSARY

Gamels celebrate 50 years together

Minnie and Jake Gamel of Midland celebrated their golden wedding anniversary with a cake and ice cream party Sept. 18 in the home of Bill and Sue Overby. Also hosting were Kathy Greenwood and James Gamel.

Gamel and the former Minnie Overby were married Sept. 16, 1944, at the County Courthouse in Stanton. They have two children — Kathy Greenwood of Midland and James Gamel of Sweetwater — as well as four grandchildren.

The Gamels have been farmers in Midland County throughout their marriage. Gamel worked for Paul Crawford for 18 years.

'Love Police' say '90s marked by cynicism, distrust in dating game

By Ronda Templeton
Hearst News Service

SAN ANTONIO — Detectives say dating in the '90s is marked by cynicism, distrust — and undercover surveillance.

Private eyes are the new "love police," hired to conduct premarital investigations. They are the newest trend in sleuthing.

Daters want the low-down on prospective partners: Are they married? Have they been honest about bank account balances? Do they have histories of violent or criminal behavior? Are there children to support?

Local investigator Robert Galloway, an avowed cynic, described dating as a battle between "hunter and prey."

Galloway, owner of GAL-SADD Investigations, is licensed in four states and is an agent with the Bureau of Missing Children in Tampa, Fla., a private agency specializing in locating children who have been abducted by a parent.

He said many women are eager to trust men, making them vulnerable to "silver-tongued devils" who tell them what they want to hear.

But Galloway said women also take gullible men on bumpy rides down the road to romance.

Galloway said "you can go to the bank" with the promises of just 2 percent of the population.

"The rest of them are liars," he said. "I should know, I've been doing this for 25 years."

One woman who encountered dating disaster is Serene Warren of San Antonio. A banking professional in her early 30s, Warren met an apparently successful executive in New Orleans.

The couple dated for more than a year — meeting in Atlanta, San Francisco, Kansas City and in the man's hometown of Minneapolis — before an investigation determined he had been married for almost 25 years.

"He told me, 'I've been married to my job,'" she said tearfully. "He said: 'I've never been married and I have no kids.'"

Warren said the lies left her feeling violated.

"Look at all the people who are willing to have affairs with married men," she said. "I'm not one of them, but I didn't have the chance to say, 'No.'"

Warren said her former lover, who works for a business firm famous for its computers, "played a good game" and gave no hint that he had a wife.

Joint vacations were planned in advance, he didn't receive mysterious telephone calls, and she freely called him at home. Now she knows that he had two incoming phone lines — and his wife didn't answer one of them.

Warren emphasized that she is not a desperate woman looking for marriage. She has a good job, many friends and a position on the board of directors of a national foundation.

Warren had her beau investigated while contemplating a move to Minneapolis. In less than a week, she had a certified copy of his marriage certificate.

She is planning a face-to-face confrontation.

Many women who request premarital investigations discover their boyfriends have another title: husband.

Frequently, also, they uncover other disturbing data, such as criminal records or a history of financial insolvency.

Steven Ballard, president of Automated Information Services, said 90 percent of those seeking premarital investigations are women.

Many want to know whether the man that interests them is prone to violence; quite a few find the answer is "yes."

"A liar will always lie," he said, adding that new acquaintances rarely confess to past illegal activities.

Galloway said confessions of sexual indiscretions also are rare. He urges clients to include medical histories in their premarital investigation portfolios.

AIDS is a specter that hangs over new relationships, but Galloway cautioned that obtaining confidential medical files can be a daunting task for detectives.

Warren became concerned about sexually transmitted disease when she learned her lover was married. She fears that he may have been sexually intimate with women other than his wife.

Glen Perciful of Aegis Investigations said premarital background checks are a sign of changing times.

He said people move frequently, and small towns — where everyone knows everyone else's business — largely are relics of the past.

Bad news from a background investigation usually puts the brakes on a budding relationship, but Galloway said it's better to learn the truth than to suffer a broken heart later.

Vary menu with venison

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

During hunting season, venison has long been the hunter's favorite way to replenish meat supplies in the freezer. Today, however, you can enjoy the savory taste of venison anytime, without having to don hunting gear.

Farm-raised venison is less gamy tasting and more tender than wild venison. It is available frozen in some specialty stores and supermarkets or can be ordered through the mail year-round.

Venison has a fine texture, with a flavor similar to beef and is generally leaner than beef. When prepared properly, the taste of venison rivals the best beef or lamb. Follow these hints:

Choose the cut to fit your schedule. As with beef, venison cuts include roasts, steaks and chops, with roasts requiring longer cooking than steaks or chops. Quick-cooking ground venison and fully-cooked venison luncheon meats are also available.

Because the fat carries most of the strong flavor, trim away as much fat as possible, leaving only a thin covering to keep the meat from drying out as it cooks.

Remove any sinew or skin before you pan-fry or grill venison. Also be sure to remove the silver membrane around the meat muscles. (You can purchase deskinned and desinewed venison.)

Marinate wild venison cuts from the shoulder or leg to tenderize the meat. Marinate the more tender cuts from the ribs, loin or rump to complement the venison flavor. Fruit marinades, such as pineapple, raspberry or kiwi, accent the venison flavor deliciously.

Because farm-raised venison meat is more tender than wild venison, it really needs no marinating. Instead, use light-flavored marinades or sauces.

Serve venison rare or medium-rare (130 degrees F to 135 degrees F). If it's cooked to 140 degrees F or above, venison dries out and toughens because the meat is so lean.

nars such as the ones provided at Centers for Children and Families in order to learn a fresh approach.

"And any parent is lying if they say they know what they are doing," Bejil said. "Going to a class or a seminar is not a sign of being a bad parent, but rather it is a sign of being a caring parent, a parent who wants to do the very best he can for his child."

Bejil said it is possible that parents could attend one of the parenting seminars and be able to leave saying they knew everything before they came...but not likely.

"Everyone shares their experiences. Some very good information comes from other parents. This is a group of people meeting with a common goal — to become better parents," Bejil said.

But the most important piece of advice is "What you praise is what you get," Ms. Lindsay said. "They (children) thrive on attention and if you praise the good things, they will continue to try to please you to get that positive attention again and again."

DEAR ABBY

Hot tip on water heaters is life saver

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Every day we read and hear about people caught in floods, earthquakes, avalanches, etc. I would like to alert people to a danger that lurks in many older homes:

Van Buren

I flushed the toilet at 10 o'clock at night, heard a sudden explosive "bang" under the sink, then I saw rusty water gush up in the toilet! For some reason, I decided to check the water heater down the hall. Hot air poured out of the closet in which it was stored. I reached over the tank and felt the pipe. It was like touching a hot stove.

I called the neighborhood plumber. His wife answered the phone, and when I explained the problem, she said her husband was asleep — and although she could hear the explosions, she assured me that they had nothing to do with the water heater. Then she said she'd have her husband call me in the morning.

I telephoned my son, who told me to trip the circuit breaker, and he was at my side in minutes. We opened the hot water taps in both bathrooms, and steam came out for almost a half hour! It was so thick we could barely see each other. Water dripped from the ceilings.

The next morning, my NEW plumber shook his head in disbelief. My 30-year-old electric heater had no safety-release device. (We had built the house ourselves and had used the best equipment available at the time.) The plumber told me that he knew of cases where water heaters had exploded through two-story buildings!

All I could think of was my little grandson, who often played not 15 feet away from that killer tank.

Abby, you'd be doing your readers a favor if you urged them to have their utility company check old water heaters for safety systems. (This service is usually free.) — GRANTS PASS, ORE.

DEAR GRANTS PASS: You are indeed lucky. Not long ago, I read that an old water heater not only exploded and crashed through two stories — it landed in a yard several houses away. (As I recall, there was no release valve.)

DEAR ABBY: My son was recently married at a formal wedding held at a posh country club. He and his wife realized, after having opened all their gifts, that they had received nothing from two of the groomsmen who had been friends of my son for more than 15 years.

Should my son say something to the two groomsmen? And if so, how can it be tactfully phrased? — NO NAME, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAME: If there is a "tactful" way to ask, "How come you didn't give me a wedding gift?" I am not aware of it.

DEAR ABBY: Recently an acquaintance of my wife stopped by our house to discuss PTA business. Much to my disgust, I noticed this lady walking through my house with bare feet!

Is it or is it not socially acceptable to enter someone's home with bare feet? I would just about as soon have this person go into my bathroom and use my toothbrush!

Please let me know if I am overreacting. Thanks. — DISGUSTED IN DALLAS

DEAR DISGUSTED: Of course it's not "socially acceptable" for a grown woman to walk through someone's house with bare feet. But given a choice between her using my toothbrush and walking barefoot — I'd take the bare feet, hands down.

DEAR ABBY: I thought you might like to have this for your collection. It came from an English church leaflet. — JAMES G. PATERSON, ST. CATHARINES, ONTARIO, CANADA

DEAR MR. PATERSON: Not only would I like to have it, I think it's worth sharing:

TAKE THESE LINES TO HEART

I dreamed death came to me one night and heaven's gates flew open wide.
With kindly grace St. Peter came and ushered me inside.
There to my astonishment were friends
I had known on earth,
Some I had labeled as unfit and some of little worth.
Indignant words flew to my lips:
Words I could not set free,
For every face showed stunned surprise —
No one expected me.

DEAR ABBY: My father is 82 years old and still leads a very active life. My mother died 10 years ago, after 50 years of a happy marriage.

I am married and have three children. My sister, Tina, is divorced and she's raising two children. We grew up in a household where sex was never discussed.

Now the problem: Dad calls us both daily, and he always has a dirty joke to tell us. Tina and I have told Dad we are uncomfortable and embarrassed by his off-color jokes, but he continues to call daily with yet another dirty joke.

Last week he came to a family gathering with a newspaper ad he was carrying around. It was an advertisement for a penile enlargement. I was completely disgusted, and took him aside and told him I was embarrassed by his behavior. He just laughed and said, "Where's your sense of humor?"

He reads your column faithfully, Abby, and I'm hoping you can help me persuade him that certain subjects should not be discussed between fathers and daughters. — HUMILIATED

DEAR HUMILIATED: I agree with you. It's inappropriate for fathers to tell their daughters dirty jokes. Perhaps he's getting a little senile and his judgment is impaired. (If this change in behavior is recent, a call to his physician might be in order to determine if there's a physical problem.)

Meanwhile, the next time your father launches into another suggestive story, remind him that it's not "nice" for fathers to tell their daughters such stories. If he persists, tell him you are too busy to talk right now, and get off the phone.

Old family photographs need careful restoration

Associated Press

The family album is family history captured in images. For some, the pictures may include daguerreotypes and tintypes from the 1800s as well as contemporary color prints, reports Country Home magazine.

In many families, the photographic record of milestones might begin with a portrait of great-grandparents on their wedding day, then continue with pictures of other important occasions: babies' baptisms, high school graduations, or fathers posed in military uniforms before heading off to war.

Most antique personal photographs that have survived in good condition were either sealed under glass in standard-size, hinged tintype cases, or inserted carefully into the thick cardboard leaves of a picture album. Remarkably large numbers of these containers can be discovered today, still filled with photographs in almost pristine condition.

However, careless handling, humid or overly bright environments, and inevitable chemical deterioration have damaged thousands of old family photographs beyond repair. Daguerreotypes cannot be restored, and any tintype restoration should be attempted by experts only.

Many color photographs have suffered greatly, too, from improper storage or handling. If you are concerned about keeping valued images in a particular environment, seek counsel from a reputable authority on old photographs. Replace worn albums, if necessary. Buy acid-free envelopes and partitioned boxes for storing loose prints and negatives.

To learn whether or not your damaged family photographs can be restored, contact the American Instiutute for Conservation of Historic and Artistic Works. This organization offers a free referral system, called Foundation of the American Institute for Conservation, that will help you identify and locate conservation professionals. Mail your written request to: Foundation of American Institute for Conservation, 1717 K St., N.W., Suite 301, Washington, D.C., 26000.

AT WIT'S END

Body for '90s is still under construction

By Erma Bombeck

For women who stop short of driving up to a plastic surgeon's window and commanding, "Check the pressure on my lips and pump in a few pounds of collagen," there's a new product on the market. You brush on a thin coat of concealer that fills in the creases so that your lips look smoother, fuller and poutier.

Bombeck

OK, I can see the wisdom of a tuck here and there, a snippet to make bags disappear, vacuuming a little fat off the thighs, and maybe a skin rejuvenation, but how did fat lips get to be so sexy?

Women are going around with the same sneer that prompted my mother to say, "You get that look off your face, Missy, or you'll spend puberty chained to your bed!"

What this amounts to is that the women of the '90s are unhappy with what they were born with, so they're all undergoing construction. The results are rather astounding. Leaf through a magazine sometime, or watch a parade of starlets on talk shows, and you will be struck with the realization that women are beginning to look alike. Maybe it's the same makeup, the same weight charts, the same clothing styles. It's scary how we're all down to about three prototypes.

There's the Katie Couric type: simple, unadorned, no fuss, with followers like Sissy Spacek, Jodie Foster, Martina Navratilova, Hillary Clinton and model Isabella Rossellini.

There's the Reba McIntyre group: the ones with 50 pounds of wiry hair and large eyes that look like they have just witnessed a murder. These include LaToya Jackson, Farrah Fawcett, Dolly Parton and Charo.

The biggest group of clones, who wear the same blush, the same lipstick and the same bleach formula, are the blondes. This includes every anchorwoman on every TV news show in the country.

None of these categories has anything to do with IQ or ability. It has to do with a "look." And we're down to three.

If we continue to avail ourselves of cosmetic surgery and requests for Diane Sawyer's nose, Whitney Houston's eyes, Brooke Shields' chin and Sharon Stone's legs, our mothers won't be able to recognize us.

But then we probably won't be able to identify our mothers, who have opted for Barbara Walters' nose, Angela Lansbury's cheekbones, Sophia Loren's eyes and Carol Burnett's lips.

Computer networks have many purposes

Associated Press

Americans are going "on-line" by signing up with computer networks that offer everything from interactive games to stock market quotes and libraries of data.

To go on-line, John K. Hawks wrote in an article in the current issue of Good Housekeeping, you need a personal computer — IBM-compatible or Macintosh — and a modem, a telephone device that sends and receives computer data.

Then you sign up with a network that offers the services you want for a monthly fee.

You can use an on-line network for many purposes — to pay bills, invest in mutual funds, research any subject, shop at home, read newspapers and magazines, check into job possibilities or plan your vacation, as well as play games and other activities.

There are bulletin boards where subscribers post messages that permit people to communicate via their computers.

The major networks charge flat monthly fees for their basic services plus higher hourly rates for premium services. Most of the networks give you a free trial month so you can "test-drive" their offerings. The major networks include:

■ CompuServe provides the widest selection of research sources — more than 900 databases, including Phone File to track down an old friend's telephone number; Medline, to gather the latest information on illnesses; Peterson's College Database, and Roger Ebert's movie reviews. Subscribers can browse through the U.S. Newspaper Library with nearly 50 participating newspapers, or U.S. News & World Report.

Cost: Basic service, $8.95 per month; average hourly rates for premium services, $4.80.

■ Prodigy operates its own 24-hour newsroom to give subscribers instant updates on world events. It offers many family oriented features, from children's games and a recipe database to daily listings for 41 cable TV networks.

Cost: Startup Prodigy kit is $4.95; monthly fee is $14.95.

■ America Online offers an extensive array of conferences and chat lines. Your children can tap into tutoring sessions in different subjects or prepare for standardized tests with the Exam Prep Center. You can check out new jobs in the Career Center or share notes on the Parents' Information Network.

Cost: $9.95 per month for five hours' worth of all services; $3.50 for each subsequent hour.

■ GEnie provides a wide selection of games and services, such as the Romance Exchange, which allows users to review novels and exchange ideas with romance writers.

Cost: $8.85 per month, including four hours of standard usage; $3 per additional hour.

■ Other networks include Delphi, which provides mostly business services, and Women's Wire, a service targeted exclusively to the needs of women. Interchange Online Network will give serious computer buffs answers to their personal computing questions.

Parents may have a problem when their children go on-line — some kids are finding their way to bulletin boards devoted to hardcore pornography. These bulletin boards are not related to the commercial networks described above.

"Virtually anyone with a computer and a modem can plug into this stuff," said Nancy Clausen, director of communications for the National Coalition Against Pornography.

Clausen said parents must be diligent in keeping these risque materials away from children.

SEEDS FOR THOUGHT

Plant spring flowering annuals in fall

By Deborah A. Benge

Fall is definitely for planting. This is an excellent time to be planting early spring flowering annuals. It may seem logical to plant the seeds in the spring, but if you'll plant this fall, the results will be far superior to those planted in spring.

Benge

In the wild many plants shed their seeds during summer and late summer, prior to late season rains. The ripe seeds, moist soils and warm weather are conditions that encourage seed germination. These little seedlings generally spend the winter in a ground-hugging rosette until spring when they will shoot up and bloom with a spectacular color show.

So if we take our lessons from nature, right now is a prime time to be planting many spring blooming plants. Some of the tried and true include larkspur, poppies, cornflower and violas. Many native wildflowers do well with fall planting, like gaillardia, coreopsis, nemophila and bluebonnets. Some of these will germinate in the fall and others need the cold, harsh conditions of winter to overcome seed dormancy and allow seed sprouting.

A misconception held by many is that old-fashioned and native wildflowers require little or no care — merely throw the seed out and stand back. Well you might get a few flowers that way, there there can be a night-and-day difference if you'll take a few extra steps.

Site selection, soil preparation and follow-up care are all important if you are wanting a truly spectacular spring show.

Before selecting the site you'll need to know something about the species you'll be growing and their needs. Most flowers will do best in full sun with good drainage, but there are some that will grow in shade and tolerate wetter than moist conditions. After you've picked out the best exposure, clear it of weeds and grass. If bermuda and other hard-to-kill perennial plants are growing there, you'll want to spray with glyphosate first or tarp it with clear polyethylene plastic through June and July or July and August. After the undesirable plants have died, the soil needs to be spaded or tilled up. Even with native flowers, improving the soil with compost or other organic matter is helpful. Just make sure it is thoroughly incorporated. Rake the soil smooth, breaking up clods, and seeds can be planted.

Before sowing seeds, make sure you know the mature height and spread of the plant. This way you can plan and plant so tall things don't cover short things. It's good to mass the same plants together for a better color impact, so avoid the temptation of planting one of this, one of that. Try planting a mass or several plants of the same kind together. You'll want to think about color combinations while in the planning stage as well. For instance, Texas bluebonnets and California poppies or the Mexican poppy look great together because of their complementary colors.

Seeds will be planted differently based on seed size. Seed packets generally have planting depths printed on them. Very small seeds can be surface sown. If sowing these tiny seeds is difficult, mix them with sand to get a more even distribution. Larger seeds may need a one-sixteenth, one-eighth or one-fourth-inch planting depth, depending on their size. Regardless of how deep you plant, all seeds need good seed-soil contact. If the soil is fluffy with lot of air around the seed, germination will be poor. Press the soil around the seed by using your hand, hoe or board and this can make a tremendous difference in germination rate and amount.

After planting, water the bed thoroughly and keep it moist, not wet, until germination occurs. Some natives like bluebonnets will rot in a heartbeat if kept too wet, so use the "finger in the soil"-method to check soil moisture. Some annuals will germinate quickly and others more slowly, and it can be a waiting game on some of these.

There's no doubt about it, nature is the best teacher. Take a lesson from nature and plant your spring flowering plants this fall.

For more information on wildflowers and native plants, attend "Natives '94," presented by Midland chapter, Native Plant Society of Texas. This program will be presented 8:30 a.m.-4 p.m. Oct. 1 at Sibley Environmental Learning Center, 1307 E. Wadley in Midland. Topics will include the use of native plants in traditional landscapes, recognizing worthy native annuals and perennials, and more. For individual help, bring a plat of your home landscape. Parents' response to children's questions important

Associated Press

When children begin to communicate verbally, the whole world opens up to them. Along with the ability to marvel over observations come inevitable questions about those observations and the duty to answer those questions usually falls to parents.

As conscientious parents, we want to answer those questions as honestly and thoroughly as possible. But how much information is too much for a child to handle, and how little is deficient?

Here is advice from Crayola Kids magazine to help us provide responses to satisfy our little learners:

■ Expect questions about nearly everything. "Kids will ask about anything that happens to wander into their minds," says Judi Craig, Ph.D., a clinical psychologist and author of "Little Kids, Big Questions." "They will start by asking questions about their environment; why the sky is blue, for example, or how the wind blows. At a young age, questions that start with 'why' are vital to a child's growth, as questioning is fundamental to the learning process."

■ Think ahead. E. A. Hass, national children's radio host and author of "Big Questions Little Kids Ask," says being unprepared is a common error. "It's far better to have an answer ready than to be put on the spot," Hass says. "Think about answers before their questions come, particularly if there are certain areas you're unsure about." If parents can't come up with an answer, Hass suggests telling the child, "I'm not sure, but let's find the answer together."

■ Be on the same track. "This will show you you're on the right track," Dr. Craig explains. "We've all heard the joke about the little boy who asks where he came from. His father launches into a lengthy discussion about reproduction. After the father finishes, the boy replies, 'No, Dad, I mean Jeremy comes from L.A. Do we come from there, too?' Question your child first to make sure the two of you are on the same wavelength."

■ Keep answers simple. "If a child of 4 or 5 asks why pregnant Aunt Lucy has a fat belly, your initial response might be that there's a baby growing inside her," suggests Dr. Craig. "In this scenario, many parents would be tempted to launch into a discussion about just how the baby got started. But if the child is satisfied and walks away, that shows you your short answer was adequate. If he needs more, he'll certainly ask."

■ Anticipate questions. "As children get older," Dr. Craig says, "they tend to ask about subjects relating to their lives or those close to them. A divorcing couple, for example, should prepare for concerns relating to the upheaval of the family. Children are immensely perceptive."

Fun with farce

Rumors indicate Permian Playhouse is opening its season this year with a comedy rather than a musical.

"We normally open with a musical," said Barbara Robinson, director of Permian Playhouse. "But we lose audience at the very beginning of our season. Because it starts in the fall, we lose so much audience to football.

"Plus, we just finished 'Annie,' so rather than do two big musicals back to back and lose audiences to football season, we thought it would be better to open with a comedy, which didn't cost too much to produce, so we wouldn't be doing such a large financial risk."

Comedies are a "standard rate," Ms. Robinson said. "They are not based on your number of seats and the ticket price as musicals are. Plus, it's a one set show, one costume per person and 10 people. So, the production costs are a lot lower than a musical."

Although this rumor is correct, other rumors currently coming from the theater's stage are the work of Neil Simon and don't necessarily have any basis in fact. Or do they?

"It's not a true story," Ms. Robinson said. "It's not like it's based on anybody's life."

"Rumors" will be onstage at The Playhouse, 310 W. 42nd St., at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday and for a 2:30 p.m. matinee Oct. 2. For reservations or information on individual or season tickets, call the theater, 1-362-2329, between 10 a.m. and 5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. Next up will be "Little Shop of Horrors" followed by "Blithe Spirit" and "Steel Magnolias."

house was looking for a production with popular appeal.

"We wanted something light, something funny to open the season on a light note," Ms. Robinson said. "Neil Simon is usually very popular. And, it's a really funny show."

"Rumors" is not a biographical comedy drama but a farce.

"Farces are larger than life, a little bit campy and have a heightened acting style," Ms. Robinson said.

The plot revolves around a dinner party, concealed information, mistaken identities and life in the 1990s. Charlie Brock, deputy mayor of New York City, and his wife, Myra, are celebrating their 10th anniversary with a formal dinner party for eight of their closest friends.

The first to arrive are Ken and Chris Gorman, who discover the home empty except for a semi-conscious Charlie who has a bullet hole in his ear lobe. Since they cannot find Myra or the domestic help, Ken insists that he and Chris hide the situation from the other three couples coming to the party.

Thus begins an effort to hide the truth, which culminates in a second act where almost everyone is pretending to be someone else to fool the two officers, played by Terri Francell and Alan McCoy, who have come to investigate the situation.

Veteran actors from Odessa in the 10-member cast include Christie Flynn as Chris, last seen at the Playhouse as Annie Sullivan in "The Miracle Worker," and Jo Richards, as Cookie, last seen at the Playhouse as Miss Hannigan in "Annie."

Ms. Richards finds the cast balanced between veteran actors and newcomers.

—Barbara Robinson
Permian Playhouse

"There's enough veteran actors in this show to pull it off and the newcomers seem to be real quick learners," said Ms. Richards.

Midlanders in the production are Donna-Michelle Adair as Clair, Edward Shaw as Ernie, Charles R. Vanorsdale as Ken, Jim Huddleston as Glenn and his wife in real life, Sue Smith, as Cassie.

For Ms. Smith, the part of Cassie represents the largest role she has played on stage.

"I've done small things before, but nothing this big," she said. "This isn't a real big part, but its big in my experience. It's almost my first time to say words on stage."

Her audition, she said, was a matter of "self defense.

"I'm tired of being a theater widow. And, I'm having a wonderful time. I recommend doing a show to anyone. If I can do it, anyone can. It's great fun."

She particularly enjoys farce.

"It's just more fun than anything," Ms. Smith said. "You can ham it up."

Husband Jim Huddleston auditioned because he likes Simon's work and finds "Rumors" a funny show.

As for his wife being in the comedy with him, he is pleased they both got roles in the play.

"I've been trying to get her to join me for some time in one of these productions," said Huddleston, who was last seen on the Playhouse stage in "The Miracle Worker" and at Midland Community Theatre in "My Fair Lady."

This is the first time I managed," Huddleston said. "It's been a whole lot more fun doing it together than to do it alone."

Also a Simon fan, Ms. Adair has lived here for two years and originally hails from Nashville.

"I've been in 'Plaza Suite,' " said Ms. Adair, who has performed in community theater, church dramas and repertory theater including Dallas Repertory Theatre. "I thought this would be an interesting play to audition for. And I love it. It's great. The people are awesome. It's really a great cast to work with. The director is very good, very thorough and the crew will help you with anything you need."

"Rumors" marks Ms. Adair's West Texas debut. For Edward Shaw, McCoy and Jim King, the Simon farce marks their stage debuts.

"I did sound for 'Annie' and then when they did the reading, there was room for someone to come out and read, and I felt open to it," said Shaw, an independent landman. "I wasn't anticipating being cast. I didn't think about it."

So far, he's enjoyed the experience.

"You learn to depend on people and to trust people and to know they are depending on you. It really is a team effort."

King, who is program director at KRIL and works weekends at KCDQ, has taken acting classes and "always wanted to try" acting.

"I think it's a blast, a lot of fun," King said. "It's a rush."

'Rumors' is not a biographical comedy drama but a farce. Farces are larger than life, a little bit campy and have a heightened acting style.'

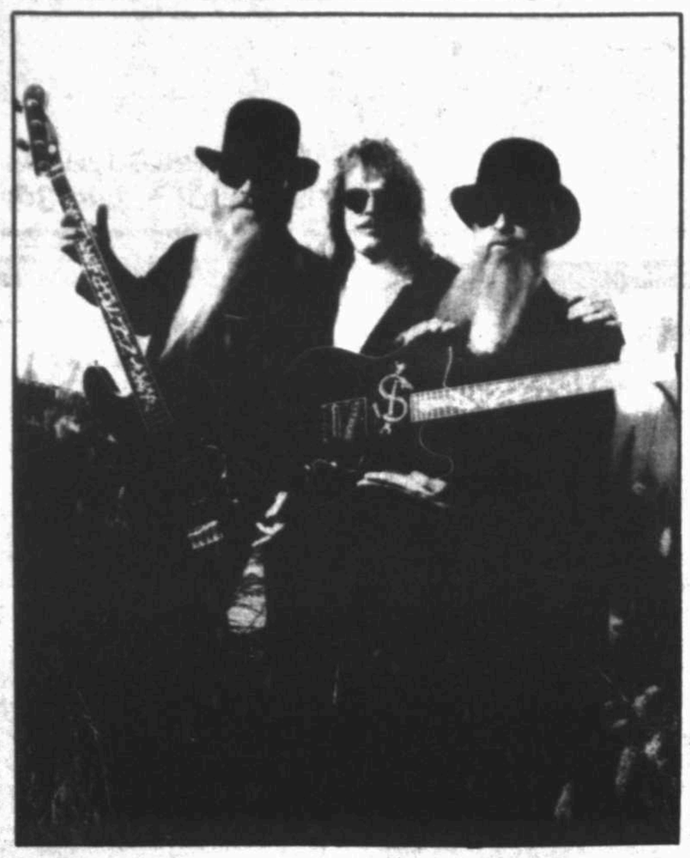
McCoy, who teaches third grade at Sam Houston Elementary School, Odessa, has found the experience "enriching.

"The friendships I have made with the cast members have been really phenomenal," McCoy said. "I think I have really learned a lot from each and every cast member and crew member.

"Even if I never do anything else, I will really cherish this time. I really wish everyone could experience something like this. It's been wonderful."



ZZ Top

ZZ Top, along with special guest Jackyl, is to perform at Lubbock Coliseum Oct. 25. ZZ Top — Billy F. Gibbons, Dusty Hill and Frank Beard — began its Antenna World Tour on April 30. By Nov. 12 the band will have given more than 100 concerts. Tickets for the Lubbock show may be charged by phone by calling 1-806-770-2000 or 1-800-735-1288.

Permian Playhouse to host open house

Staff Report

ODESSA — The Permian Playhouse, 310 W. 42nd St., is hosting an open house from 1 to 5 p.m. today.

The public is invited to join the staff for refreshments, tours of the facility and face painting for the children.

Rehearsals will be in progress for the upcoming Mainstage and Kaleidoscope Company seasons. Those attending will have the opportunity to learn what goes on behind the scenes of a production and sign up for membership giveaways and other prizes.

The 1994-95 season marks the 45th Mainstage season and the Silver Anniversary of the Kaleidoscope Company, the Playhouse's youth performing troupe. For more information call 1-362-2329.

HOROSCOPE

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 25, 1994

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Welcome an occasional change in routine. Always doing things the same way can cause mental stagnation. Be open to new ideas and technical advances. Launching a public relations campaign early in 1995 will boost your career or business. A springtime romantic fling could blossom into true love. Vacation abroad in midsummer.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor Michael Douglas, TV host Barbara Walters, actress Heather Locklear, basketball player Scottie Pippen.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A change of lifestyle will boost the spirits of your entire family. Keep personal spending under control but do not turn miserly. Be certain a cherished goal is realistic and not based on false hopes.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Peace of mind is of paramount importance today. Do not be afraid to make an occasional mistake. There is no reason for you to be nervous about a new enterprise. Romance looks thrilling.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your perfectionism may be coming between you and a loved one. Soft-pedal any criticism on the home front. Emphasizing a young person's strengths will build self-confidence.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): An ingenious youngster will keep you on your toes. Be glad about a loved one's success; jealousy is counterproductive! A major challenge may inspire you to intellectual greatness. Be strong. Show true grit.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Someone's grace and charm stir you deeply. Follow your heart. A child who develops a yearning for excellence will find pleasure in meeting high standards.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Concern for quality could turn you away from what originally looked like a good buy. Your choice saves money and prevents disappointment. Loved one's anxiety may be based on a false premise. Offer reassurance.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Not a good day for tackling detailed or monotonous jobs. All visitors to your home should be made to feel welcome. A family member's thoughtfulness is a true gift. Show proper appreciation.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your romantic partner takes to a suggestion like a duck to water. Stay on the right side of someone who has always been loyal. Ask yourself what you can learn from a parent's mistakes.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A touch of humor can sometimes work wonders if things get tense at a family gathering. Medical researchers are developing information you can use. The defection of an ally may work to your advantage.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): The grass is not always greener elsewhere. Look carefully before you leap! Balanced thinking is essential now. Family life will be affected in a positive way by what someone volunteers to do. Show appreciation.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A book of poetry has answers you will not find elsewhere. Too much self-analysis can be a downer. Follow the dictates of your heart for a change! An unexpected visit turns out great.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your love for your family is evident in a decision you make today. An inspirational religious service gives you a wonderful new idea. Peace of mind is far more valuable than temporary financial gains.

The bidding:

NORTH	EAST	SOUTH	WEST
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
1 NT	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♣

How you play certain suit combinations depends on how many tricks you must win, or how many you can afford to lose. The trump suit on this deal is an example of structuring the play to meet your needs.

Since North's one-no-trump rebid guaranteed at least two spades, South was certainly worth a jump to four spades on the second round. To make an invitational jump of three spades would be putting too much strain on partner.

West led the jack of clubs. How should declarer tackle the trump suit?

With two losers outside of trumps, the best way to play spades for only one loser would be to bang out the ace of spades and continue with a trump. That would limit the loss to one trick if trumps were 2-2 or if either defender held a singleton honor.

Here, however, declarer has only one loser outside the trump suit and can afford to surrender two trump tricks. Therefore, declarer's efforts should be concentrated on guarding against a possible 4-0 trump break, in which case there is a danger of losing three trump tricks.

Correct technique is to win the opening lead in hand and fire a low spade toward dummy. If West shows out, insert the ten, forcing an honor from East. Later you can cross to dummy and take the marked finesse of the jack of spades — mission accomplished.

The safety play also works if the cards are distributed as in the diagram. West must win the first trump trick with an honor. When you regain the lead, you simply lead the ten of trumps and surrender a trick to the remaining honor. The ace and jack will then pick up the remaining trumps and again the contract is safe.

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

■ Bassist joins Classic

Bassist Bob Haggart will join this year's Jazz Classic, set for Sept. 29 through Oct. 2 at the Midland Hilton.

Haggart is replacing bassist Milt Hinton who is unable to appear due to illness in his family.

Haggart is the composer of such tunes as "South Rampart Street Parade," "What's New" and "Big Noise from Winnetka."

Admission is $150 per badge and entitles bearer to attend all sessions. The badge may be shared with another person. For out-of-town guests, the special rate at the Hilton is $52 a night.

"We are encouraging people to participate in the 'share-a-badge' program in which they can attend single performances," said Midland Jazz Association member Bobby Crues. "Anyone interested can contact me for details or show up at the door on the night or nights they wish to attend."

Checks are being accepted by writing Bobby J. Crues, Box 4054, Midland, 79704.

■ Theater plans revival

Midland Community Theatre will be doing a revival of the comedy "Gargoyles and Scarecrow Sins" beginning Friday at the Yucca Theatre.

Written by Big Spring playwright Rick Hamby, "Gargoyles" takes place at Tanner's Funeral Home in Big Spring and centers on where to put the remains of Miss Opal, the town prostitute.

The show runs through Oct. 15. Parental guidance is suggested. For reservations call 682-4111.

■ Quartet to perform

ODESSA — The Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale presents the Everest String Quartet in concert at 2 p.m. today at the Art Institute for the Permian Basin, 4909 E. University.

The concert is sponsored by Mr. and Mrs. Ray Perryman.

Tickets are $10 for adults, $9 for seniors, $5 for students and free to music students.

A reception will follow the performance.

Also, country artist Lorrie Morgan will perform a gala pops concert with the Symphony Pops Orchestra Oct. 1.

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

■ Performance set

Rick Trevino is to perform at Cactus Moon Sept. 30.

Trevino, 22, said he's known since he was 3 that he wanted to play music.

Rick Trevino

Trevino spent his youth studying clarinet and piano and playing baseball. By the time he was 11, he was well versed in classical music. He was offered a baseball scholarship to Memphis State, but he opted to try and walk on at Texas A&M. He got to the final cut but once he knew he wasn't making the team, he moved on.

"I went as far as I could with (baseball), farther than I expected, so I wasn't disappointed. And music was always something I was doing along the way, playing churches, weddings, playing with local bands, whatever."

Gates open for the outdoor concert at Cactus Moon at 6 p.m. Tickets are $10 at the gate.

Advance tickets for the concert, which is sponsored by KNFM, may be purchased at Luskey's.

Those attending the concert must be 18 or older.

■ Season to open

SAN ANGELO — The San Angelo Symphony will open its 1994-95 season Oct. 1 and 2 with the GTE Concerts.

Guest artist is Wendy Warner, first prize winner of the 1990 Rostropovich Competition in Paris, who will perform Saint-Saens' Concerto No. 1 for Cello and Orchestra.

Tickets are $8.50 for adults and $4 for students. The concert will begin at 8 p.m. Oct. 1 and at 2 p.m. Oct. 2 in the City Auditorium. For more information or to make reservations call 1-658-5877.

■ Ballet scheduled

The Tulsa Ballet Theatre will present "The Nutcracker" in Midland Nov. 19-20 at Lee High School Auditorium.

Tulsa Ballet's 28 professional dancers will be joined by 35 local children who will perform as angels, toy soldiers, mice, bakers and clowns. Auditions will be held Sept. 25. A requirement for auditions is at least two years of ballet training. Girls must be ages 6-13 and boys 7-13. Minimum ages must be attained by date of audition.

To register for auditions call Ballet Midland at 683-7696.

■ Handbell concerts set

"Bells, Brass and Pipes," a free handbell concert, will be presented by three area churches at 3 p.m. Oct. 2 at First Presbyterian Church, 800 W. Texas Ave.

McChesney

This is the second joint concert for Celebration! of Grace Presbyterian Church, The Agape Ringers of First Presbyterian Church and the Jubilate Deo Ringers of First Presbyterian Church in Odessa.

Guest conductor will be Kevin McChesney, a church music conductor. He is accompanist and co-director for the vocal music department at Air Academy High School in Colorado Springs, Colo., and directs the Pike Peak Ringers, a community handbell choir.

Highlighting the concert will be the world premiere of McChesney's arrangement of "For All the Saints."

Also performing with the choirs will be the Lone Star Brass Quintet and organist Lester Ackerman.

A reception will follow.

■ Posters displayed

ODESSA — An exhibit of posters from the Metropolitan Museum of Art is on permanent display at Odessa College in the Instructional Building gallery.

The exhibit was organized by the OC art department and funded by the school's office of student activities. Featured are works by such European and American painters as Matisse, Van Gogh, Monet, O'Keefe, Hopper and De Kooning.

■ Musical scheduled

ODESSA — The Globe Theatre at Odessa College is presenting the musical "Shenandoah" Oct. 6-8 and 14-16.

Evening performances are at 8 p.m. Sunday matinee is at 2:30 p.m. Tickets are $6 for seniors and students and $8 for adults. No charge will be made to OC students who have a voucher and student ID card.

For reservations or more information call the Globe, 1-332-1586.

■ Performance set

Tickets go on sale Oct. 1 for the Oct. 8 performance by world-renowned mezzo-soprano Marilyn Horne.

Her performance is set for 8 p.m. at Lee High School Auditorium.

Ms. Horne is being brought to Midland by Midland Opera Theater.

Ticket prices are $25 for preferred seating, $15 for general admission and $10 for students.

The box office opens at Pages and Prints, 40 Plaza Center, Oct. 1-8 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. For ticket information call 684-4101.

The concert is being sponsored by the Reporter-Telegram and Texaco Inc. The program is partially supported by the Texas Commission on the Arts and the Arts Assembly of Midland.

Season sponsors for this concert are Exxon Co. USA, and Midland National Bank.

■ Workshop set

Artist Betty Lynch is presenting a watercolor workshop from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday at the Stables Gallery, Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave.

The workshop is being hosted by Midland Arts Association. To make a reservations call Jan Williams at 699-6812.

■ China on display

Hand painted china painted by the Midland Porcelain Art Club will remain on display at Midland Women's Club until Oct. 1.

Some items are for sale. To view the china call the Midland Women's Club.

■ Painting displayed

A drybrush watercolor painting by Nancy Klingler is hanging at Bank One this month.

The artist is a member of the Palette Club of Midland.

Duo organists to hold recital

Duo organists Elizabeth and Raymond Chenault perform a free organ recital at First Presbyterian Church at 7:30 p.m. Monday.

The Chenaults serve as organists and choirmasters at All Saints Episcopal Church in Atlanta, where they direct the music program and concert series.

Mrs. Chenault is choral director of the middle school; Chenault is director of fine arts and choral director of the upper school.

Chenault has composed and published many works for chorus and organ.

The concert, which is part of First Presbyterian Church's Festival Music Series, and sponsored by the West Texas Chapter of the American Guild of Organists, is open to the public and is free of charge.

For more information, call 684-7821.

MERRY MERRY MIDLAND

Light It Up!

LET'S JOIN IN THIS COMMUNITY-WIDE EFFORT TO LIGHT UP DOWNTOWN FOR THE HOLIDAYS!!!

KEEP THE SPIRIT OF THE SEASON ALIVE.

THE CITY OF MIDLAND, TEXAS

OFFICE OF THE MAYOR

Dear Fellow Midlander:

The spirit of a city is often best reflected during the holidays: the lights, garlands, and other festive decorations lining the downtown streets. These symbols of the gaiety and spirit of the holidays have not been in evidence on our city streets over the last several years. In order to revitalize our downtown area for this holiday season, I recently convened a small task force to research and recommend some options for replenishing Midland's holiday decorations.

The group has reported to me that we can place attractive and festive decorations on utility poles along Wall Street, Texas Street, and around the Courthouse for approximately $35,000.

A number of civic organizations, corporations, businesses and private citizens have already made a commitment to this cause. I would like to offer you an opportunity to also be a part of "MERRY MERRY MIDLAND".

Please give this your sincere consideration, choose your level of giving from the list of categories below, and forward your generous contribution to the Permian Basin Area Foundation, who has graciously allowed checks to be routed through it as tax deductible contributions. As time is obviously of the essence, a prompt reply would be greatly appreciated.

Gratefully yours,

Bobby Burns
Mayor

Recognition will be given to ALL donors. Special recognition will be given to contributors of $250 and more!
