Borger Military Court Questions City And County Officers In Holmes Slaying

INQUIRY HEARS SHERIFF AND CITY OFFICERS

Ownbey Halted in Car as He Passes Hotel by Guardsmen

SECRETARIES TALK

Former Borger Municipal Employes Included in Day's Witnesses

BORGER, Texas, Oct. 1. (AP)—A trio of county officers, one city officer and two former city secretaries were questioned today as Borger's military court of inquiry continued investigation of the slaying of District Attorney John A. Holmes here Sept. 13.

Sheriff Joe Ownbey, relieved of all his duties except those of tax collector when martial law was declared yesterday, was one of the witnesses. Subpoena servers sought him without avail early in the day but in the afternoon spied him passing the hotel, where the court was held, in an automobile. Troopers stopped the machine and served the summons. They also brought along Burlin Millhollon, a deputy sheriff who was in the car.

"Slowly but Surely"

Other officers who went before the military court, the purport of whose queries could not be learned, were Sam Jones, deputy constable, arrested yesterday but released after testifying; Clint Millhollon, city policeman, returned to jail afterward; I. T. Alvis and George Tarrant, the former city secretaries.

Brig. Gen. Jacob F. Wolters, in charge of the town, said the court was progressing "slowly but surely." Asked whether evidence gathered by the court would be presented to the grand jury convening Oct. 14, he said: "Such a mass of evidence is being obtained the court might sit until after the grand jury convenes." He added that "nothing unexpected" had developed in the questioning of witnesses, the testimony "following theories that were already established."

U. S. Men at Work

Meanwhile, it developed that two federal agents were here to begin work. They are George H. Allen and F. W. Harpold of the treasury department at Kansas City. Harpold has been here a month as an undercover man obtaining evidence.

The blotter charge against one of the few prisoners in jail tonight read: "refuses to talk." Officers declined to reveal the subject on which the prisoner, a carbon black employe, "refused to talk."

Street Railway Magnate Drowns In Fish Pond On Vast Private Estate

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 1. (AP)—Thomas E. Mitten, one of the outstanding street railway managers of the world, drowned in a pond on his estate near Milford, Pa., today.

Mr. Mitten, who was 65, was president of Mitten Management, Inc., which operates the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company System, the Inter-Railway company of Buffalo, the Yellow Cab company of Philadelphia and a number of enterprises outside the street railway business.

His offices in this city announced that Mr. Mitten had gone out alone in a small boat and that he was drowned while fishing.

The estate, known as "Sunnyland," is 11 miles west of Milford in the heart of the Pocono mountains. It contains about 4,000 acres.

If a college or university were prepared to confer such a degree as doctor of transportation science, Thomas E. Mitten would have been entitled to that honor.

He had a peculiar genius for taking hold of troubled street railway systems, curing them of their ills, and putting them on a basis of operation with resultant benefits to stockholders, employes and the public.

One of his pet theories in bringing about such conditions was that of labor becoming capital and fostering the cooperative effort between employe and employer. His theory was given the test of time, and in the opinion of Philadelphians at least, was found to be practicable in every respect.

THOMAS E. MITTEN

The achievement of the Mitten policy in Philadelphia might be said to have been the climax of previous efforts in Milwaukee, Buffalo and Chicago.

Although financial reward usually accompanied his successes, Mr. Mitten's chief joy in rehabilitating a street railway system lay in the accomplishment. That he was little interested in material reward for his work was indicated after he had begun to put Philadelphia's transportation system upon its feet.

"When I was 40," he said, "I had all the money I wanted—enough to afford any one man as much as he could reasonably enjoy in this world. Today I have less personal wealth than I had at 40. If I live to be 100 I shall have no more."

Mr. Mitten was born at Brighton, Sussex, England, March 21, 1864. His father, with his family of eight, came to the United States in 1875 and settled on a small farm at Goodland, Ind. The son did his share of the farm work until he was 21, and in his spare time learned telegraphy in the railroad freight office at Goodland.

Mr. Mitten begin his practical railroad experience as joint agent for the Chicago and Indiana Coal

Carl Williams Stands by Guns In Fiery Quiz on Federal Farm Aid

Oklahoma Member of Farm Board Defies Shouting Senators to Maintain Views on Cotton Problem

By RAYMOND Z. HENLE
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Through two hours of fiery questioning and banging of fists Carl Williams of Oklahoma, representing cotton on the federal farm board, insisted before the senate agriculture committee today that there is no short cut to farm relief and that the surest way lies in cooperative marketing development.

It would be of little permanent value, the Oklahoman contended, for the board to issue statements threatening to buy up the cotton crop unless it actually planned to do so.

"The board would have to back its bluff," he said, "and if it did on the present basis of organization of the cotton growers, its $500,000,000 fund soon would be gone and no one would be permanently benefitted.

Senator Smith Shouts

Senator Smith shouted at Williams that a statement merely asserting the board intended to fully exert its powers to do something for the cotton growers would have been sufficient to improve price conditions, but the board member replied that this would have been a temporary expediency which would have helped little in the long run.

"It would take 10 to 20 billions rather than our $500,000,000," Williams said, "if you want us to fix a price for cotton above that which conditions of supply and demand will permit. We couldn't do that except by buying the entire crop."

Four Conditions

"Under four conditions," he said, "stabilization is a powerful weapon in the board's hands. These conditions are:

"First, when the entire crop can be benefitted; second, when there is an organization to carry on the operations; third, when there is a place to put the crop, and fourth, when there is a reasonable assur-

TARIFF BALLOT STILL IN DOUBT

Close Vote Expected Today Or Thursday

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1. (AP)—Senate factions at loggerheads over the flexible tariff policy appeared today to be more hopeful than confident of victory in the first real test of strength in the tariff contest.

So close was the issue after the sixth day of debate that some senators said a tie vote might result, leaving Vice President Curtis to cast the deciding ballot. The outlook was for a vote late tomorrow or Thursday.

SHEPPARD'S VIEW

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1. (AP)—Senator Morris Sheppard of Texas speaking in the senate today, saw in the flexible tariff principle a merging of the capitol with the White House. Its enactment, he asserted, would be a "depositing of the dead body of a suicide congress at the foot of President Hoover."

Nearly a dozen speeches were made during the day. Senator Allen, Republican, Kansas, speaking for the flexible provisions, said he had "waited in vain for the repetition of some words of Democratic leadership upon this subject which became so familiar to us all during the recent political campaign."

He said the words of John J. Raskob and Alfred E. Smith on the tariff were not reconcilable with those now being uttered by Democrats in the senate and asked whether they "were playing politics then for campaign purposes, or if they are playing politics now for party purposes."

Replying, Senator Tydings, Democrat, Maryland, said he was sorry that Allen, by innuendo had "waved the bloody shirt of partisanship," in such a scientific discussion. He also regretted that the Kansan's co-workers in the campaign (William Allen White), had not been brought forward to retract the campaign words which Tydings said had cast aspersions upon the personal character of Alfred E. Smith.

Senator Watson of Indiana, the Republican leader, reiterated a belief that the vote on the flexible issue would be very close.

Reflecting the minority views, Senator Simmons, Democrat, North Carolina, predicted he had enough votes to withdraw the power now delegated to the president to change customs duties after investigation by the tariff commission.

GULF AND W. T. RAIL PROJECT'S CHANCES GOOD

Heads of Proposed Line Decide Not to Oppose Abilene Southern

HEARING CONCLUDED

Officials Believe Everything Has Been Done to Win Permit

SAN ANTONIO, Oct. 1. (AP)—The chances of the Gulf and West Texas railroad to obtain permission to build a line from San Angelo to San Antonio were increased materially today, in the opinion of railroad men, by the decision of officials of the line not to oppose the application of the Abilene and and Southern for permission to extend its line from Ballinger to San Angelo.

The decision to rescind opposition came through a mutual agreement of the two roads not to oppose the application of the other, according to G. O. Bateman, assistant counsel of the Texas and Pacific, owner of the A. & S.

G. and W. T. Hearing Ends

Hearing of the G. & W. T. application closed Tuesday noon and the decision of the I. C. C. is expected about Nov. 15.

Officials of the G. & W. T. brought out in cross-examination before the commission that the road was being promoted by the citizens of the territory affected by the proposed route. Figures presented of the cost of building showed there were no commissions for stock salesmen, fees to promoters or similar expenses.

The G. & W. T. has 20 days in which to file a brief of the hearing in which it will attempt to prove the railroad is a convenience and a necessity.

Officials Confident

Officials of the G. & W. T. said they had no way of knowing what impression the testimony at the hearing had on the commission but they felt confident nothing was left undone to prove the construction of the new line would be of vital importance to the counties northwest of San Antonio which would be served by the new line.

Witnesses from San Angelo said the new line would save shippers 75 per cent in rail haul from San Angelo and it would enable them to reach many points excluded before because of the circuitious routes over existing lines.

The San Angelo delegation remained in San Antonio Tuesday night to appear Wednesday and Thursday as witnesses for the A. & S. in its application to extend its lines from Ballinger to San Angelo.

SANTA FE OPPOSES A. AND S. EXTENSION

SAN ANTONIO, Oct. 1. (AP)—The Santa Fe railroad is expected to offer strenuous opposition when Examiner H. C. Davis conducts a hearing Wednesday and Thursday on the application of the Abilene and Southern railway for a permit to extend its line from Ballinger to San Angelo.

While counsel for both the Santa Fe and the Texas and Pacific were reticent about the case tonight it

Girl Accuses Theft Suspect Of Assault Attempt

One of Two Men Arrested for Robberies Here Identified as Intruder by 16-Year-Old Witness

Following the arrest of two suspects and the positive identification of one of them, a man was being held in the city jail Tuesday in connection with several robberies during the last week and an alleged attempt at criminal assault on a 16-year-old Wichita Falls girl, according to police.

The man was arrested by City Detective Fred Fountain who stated that charges would probably be filed against him Wednesday morning.

According to the story told by the parents of the girl, the man entered their house about 2 a. m. Monday, stole a purse and $5 in cash from the room occupied by the parents and then entered the room occupied by the girl, locking the door behind him. The girl alleged that the man approached her bed and placed the point of a knife at her heart.

Threatening to drive the knife into her if she cried out, the man attempted to assault her, she said. The noise of the scuffle in the next room aroused the parents who found the door locked. When they pounded on the door, the man fled, presumably out a window.

Friends of the prisoner, learning of his arrest, threatened the girl with violence if she brought charges against the man, she told police Tuesday. The charges will probably be filed Wednesday if the girl can be persuaded to disregard the threats, Detective Fountain said. The prisoner is also suspected of connection with several other robberies here, police said. He will be investigated further.

Several arrests were made Tuesday by officers who were keeping a lookout for the criminal element believed to be leaving Borger, where martial law is in effect.

Robbers Fail In Attempt to Open Second Safe Here

While city and county officers were resting from their investigations of the robbery of the safe in the Haley Drug company, Tenth and Broad streets, from which $650 was removed early Monday morning, cracksmen were attempting to break into the safe of the E-Z Automobile Laundry company, Tenth and Bluff streets, one block from the scene of the knob knocking of the night before.

The knockers failed to open the safe in the auto laundry, although an attempt had been made to operate the mechanism of the lock by beating on it with a blunt object.

This second attempt at cracking a safe within two days, each within a block of the other, corroborated the previously expressed fear of officers that a wave of knob-knocking was imminent in Wichita Falls because of the criminal exodus from Borger.

Secret British Document Turned Over to Senators by 'Naval Expert'

Probe Will Wait Until After Premier MacDonald's Visit to Reveal Contents of Paper Produced by Shearer

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1. (AP)—Photostatic copies of a purported secret British document were turned over to senate investigators today by William B. Shearer, as the examination of his activities in behalf of American shipbuilding at the unsuccessful 1927 Geneva naval limitations conference came to a temporary halt.

Turning from his tales of international intrigue Shearer produced the much discussed British paper when Senator Allen, Republican, Kansas, mentioned it. In a high keyed voice, the witness told of obtaining the paper in Washington last winter during the cruiser bill debate, from a Judge Summers.

LOBBY PROBE VOTED

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1. (US)—The senate speedily and without opposition voted a thorough investigation of lobbying activities in Washington. By unanimous action it directed the judiciary committee, of which Senator George Norris, Republican of Nebraska, is chairman, to conduct a sweeping probe of Washington's lobbying racketeers—who spent more than $10,000,000 a year to influence legislative and executive action in the capital.

Committee Adjourns

The Kansas senator immediately questioned the authenticity of the so called British paper. Before he could read a report on it from the navy intelligence however, the committee adjourned.

The next meeting is expected to await the conclusion of the visit in this country of Premier Ramsay MacDonald, who arrives here Friday.

Shearer said the purported British document was signed by Sir William Wiseman, "who everyone knows," he continued "was the head of the British secret service in this country during the war and the chief British spy and who is now with Kuhn, Loeb and Co."

Within a short time after the committee hearing closed, a telegram from William Wiseman describing the document as a "clumsy, absurd forgery" was received by Chairman Shortridge.

Shearer "Wordy"

Shearer surprised the senators with some of his descriptive adjectives. He referred to Charles M. Schwab, chairman of the board of the Bethlehem Steel corporation, as the "star of Bethlehem" and to Frank B. Kellogg, former secretary of state as "nervous Nellie."

He disclosed that since he was

MANGUM, Okla., Oct. 1. (UP)—A 19-year-old high school boy, Paul Brooks, of Kirkland, Texas, was sentenced to 25 years in prison here late today for bank robbery.

Brooks was convicted of participation in the holdup of the First State bank at Willow, Okla., last Aug. 14. G. T. James, former deputy sheriff of Childress county, Texas, pleaded guilty under the same charge and will be sentenced Wednesday by Judge T. P. Clay who heard the case against the men in district court.

Brooks testified he was on a train near Wichita Falls the day of the robbery. Six witnesses, however, said they were positive of his identity as one of the robbers. Most of the money had been recovered by officers who arrested James and Brooks.

In order to bring the attention of residents of Wichita Falls to the observance of fire prevention week, Oct. 6 to 12, Mayor J. W. Akin has issued the following proclamation:

"I hereby proclaim the week beginning Oct. 6 and ending Oct. 12, 1929, as fire prevention week in the city of Wichita Falls, and request the citizenship of the city to lend their support to the efforts of the Junior chamber of commerce to lessen the fire evil in our city.

Definite plans for the program for fire prevention week, which will be under the direction of the Junior chamber of commerce this year, will be made at a meeting of all appointed committees in the chamber of commerce directors' room in the Perkins-Snider building at 8 o'clock Wednesday night, it was announced Tuesday by Wilson N. Reedy, director of the program.

There will be no parade this year, Mr. Reedy said, but the program will be so arranged as to reach every resident of Wichita Falls through some activity. Speeches at all the luncheon clubs, programs in the public schools, window displays, radio programs,

MANIPULATION OF CITY HALL WIRES FOUND

Outside Connection With Executive Offices Is Indicated

POLITICAL SENSATION

Report of 'Static' Leads to Discovery by Linemen In Basement Box

NEW YORK, Oct. 1. (AP)—Discovery that all the telephone wires into the city hall office of Mayor James J. Walker, Tammany candidate for reelection, had been tapped furnished a preelection sensation today.

The discovery followed anti-Tammany charges that more was known in high places of the murder of Arnold Rothstein than had ever been made public, and that the Tammany tiger controlled a "tax racket" by which the poor were made to bear the burdens of the favored rich.

Cable Box Opened

Seventeen telephone instruments are in the mayor's office and all of the wires run through a padlocked cable box in the basement. This box had been wrenched open. An old abandoned wire from the basement to the third floor also ran through this box and a short wire had been spliced to this so that it could be hooked onto any of the cables to the executive office.

Telephone company experts, called in to investigate strange noises and "fading" on the mayor's wires, discovered marks of hook-in clips indicating that a portable listening set had been connected with the abandoned wire in three places.

Asked to comment on the political significance of the wire tapping, if any, Charles Kerrigan, assistant to the mayor, replied that the public could best judge of that, and asked in turn who would have an interest in such tactics "at this time."

La Guardia Wise-Cracks

F. H. La Guardia, Republican fusion candidate for mayor who made the "tax racket" charges and who has joined with former Police Commissioner Richard E. Enright, "square deal" candidate, and Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate, in demanding prosecution of the Rothstein case, was informed of the wire tapping.

"If they wanted to find out anything about the city's business," he said, "they wouldn't tap the mayor's office. That certainly is a compliment to Whalen's (police commissioner Grover Whalen) policing. By the time I get ready to go to city hall on Jan. 1 there probably won't be any city hall left."

35,000 Legionnaires March in Parade

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Oct. 1. (AP)—A pageant of brilliant colors, moving between immense masses of spectators, marched over the five mile route today in what was declared by legion officers to be the biggest patriotic display America has ever seen.

It was estimated that 35,000 men and women marched and there were approximately 100 uniformed musical organizations and drill teams.

The women occupied the apartment where Miss Page was confined to her bed because of a recent operation.

JUST THE Baer Facts

CONCRETE LAYER CAKE

NEW YORK, Oct. 1. (US)—Al Smith is building the largest office building in the world.

It's over 900 feet taller than the White House.

Al will have a bungalow on the roof. It will give Al a better view of the South and the West than he got in 1928.

The office buildings in New York are rather complicated. Every elevator is an endurance test and every office boy wears a non-stop frown.

We tried to get in to see the president of a big corporation the other day. The thing you notice about a suite of offices is that the front door is incorporated.

The second thing you pipe is a big, jolly waste basket marked, "Welcome Stranger."

The furniture consists of a desk inhabited by a man whose grandmother must have been a robot.

Every big executive has his floor space divided up into 30 rooms separated by frosted partitions. The density of population is about three vice presidents to a coop.

You are stopped in every room by a needle-nosed investigator who wants to know how you escaped the flu epidemic of 1920.

At the end of the mystic maze is the man you want to see.

By the time they stop shunting you from office to office you feel like one of those little lead bullets in pigs—in aclover.

You never get in to see the president of the corporation because he is either out to lunch or in executive session with another president who hasn't anything to do, either.

We don't know why they build offices so tall. They could make those buildings shorter and be much busier.

Some day we hope to get back to a one-story town. Where they do everything on the ground floor within easy jumping distance of the turnpike.

We know a town like that in Illinois. There isn't a two-story shack in the burg. There was one many years ago. But it was a saloon. It still is.

We want to go back to that one-story town and die. Which shouldn't take more than a week or so.

To make it worse, the revolving door season is on, when every man's hand is raised against his neighbor trying to go the other way.

After a winter in a revolving door, you celebrate the advent of spring by picking peanuts off the ground just like a squirrel.

Rayon Maker Is Suicide

W. G. Kummer Dies After Slashing Wrists

ELIZABETHTON, Tenn., Oct. 1. (UP)—Consul W. G. Kummer, acting president of the American Bemberg and Glanzstoff rayon corporation committed suicide by slashing his wrists while suffering intense physical pain, a coroner's jury announced late today.

The jury's verdict halted temporarily at least, investigations started on the theory he was murdered by enemies and his death made to appear the result of suicide.

The acting head of the strike-torn company was found lying beside a note reading, "I cannot go any further with rayon."

F. E. Mueleden, vice president of the company, and Le Reece, brother of Congressman Carroll Reece, an official at the mills, expressed doubt Kummer had committed suicide.

River Bed Hunting Season To Open Oct. 15

When the season for hunting wild fowl opens on Oct. 15, Texas hunters will enjoy the privilege of stepping over the Red river bank and shooting in the river bed until Jan. 31, 1930 under a $2.50 license instead of the imposing $15 license heretofore required of them.

The Oklahoma lawmakers who provided for this special privilege labeled their measure with a name as long as the struggle waged by Texas and Oklahoma sportsmen for its passage. It is styled as "An act providing a special non-resident migratory water fowl hunting license for the bed of Red river."

Licenses provided for the measure are now available at sporting goods houses in this city, having been supplied in books of 10 forms each by the game and fish commission of Oklahoma, it was announced Tuesday.

Texas hunters generally are expected to take advantage of the material increase in available hunting territory during the duck and goose season. It was pointed out that the river bed has been one of the best hunting areas in this section, particularly in the latter days of the season, when lakes often freeze over sufficiently to drive the birds to running water.

Attention was called by Ben G. Oneal, president of the Izaak Walton league chapter here, to the bag limit effective in the Red river bed under the laws of Oklahoma. The limit for one day is 10 birds, with a season bag limit of 50. This is the lowest limit in the United States at present, Mr. Oneal said. It was indicated that game wardens in Oklahoma will be instructed to require strict compliance with the new license law and the bag restrictions in the river bed.

Negro Uses Ice Pick In Attempt to Rob Safe

Accused of having attempted to pick the cash box in the Hearne hotel here with an ice pick, Leroy Williams, a negro, was ordered held under $500 bond to answer a complaint filed Tuesday afternoon by Mike Anglin, assistant district attorney, following his arrest by Luke Hart and Pat Allen, city detectives.

The arrest was made, according to the report to Mr. Anglin, after Julius Ehlers, night clerk at the hotel, reported he had discovered a negro in the act of attempting to pick the lock. The negro escaped after making a lunge at him with the pick, Ehlers reported.

The man now held, Mr. Anglin said, was identified by Ehlers and another witness.

The taking of a non-suit by the plaintiff brought to an abrupt close in the 89th district court here Tuesday afternoon the suit which had been brought by M. B. Walker against the Retail Merchants association on a claim to $6,500 damages for alleged libel.

Mr. Walker alleged that the credit rating given him in the rating book given him by the company was incorrect.

FIRE WRECKS WICHITA HOME

$3,000 Damage in Blaze on Polk Street

Flames which broke out in the residence of Mack Heck, 1909 Polk street, about 1 a. m. Tuesday, caused damage estimated by fire department officials at $3,000, wrecking a considerable part of the house. No one was at home at the time of the fire and nothing was saved from the flames, firemen said.

Whether the blaze was of incendiary origin fire officials were unable to state. Fire companies Nos. 2 and 5 fought the flames for about an hour and a half, with 2,400 feet of hose laid.

SECRET NAVAL PAPER BARED

Shearer Spends Day Answering Questions

"dropped" by the shipbuilders he has been working for William Randolph Hearst and organizing patriotic societies in Mr. Hearst's name against American adhesion to the world court. Mr. Hearst, however, had "fired" him after the senate investigation was ordered, Shearer explained, and "now I am walking around the streets talking to myself."

A telegram from Schwab to Chairman Shortridge of the committee denying knowledge of any interview with Shearer at any time was made public tonight.

How Document Obtained

In relating the story of how the document was procured, Shearer said that a "Ben McLenden, who worked in the British consulate during the war with the British secret service" had extracted the document from the files of the consulate general, which was the headquarters of Sir William Wiseman.

When he took the document to the office of "Capt. Johnson, of the office of naval intelligence," Shearer said he was told:

"Well, we have known of its existence. We are very pleased to get hold of that."

After the document had been photostated by a Commander Powell, Shearer said he was given a copy and told that he "ought to get it out." Following that suggestion, he said he turned a copy over to former Senator James A. Reed, of Missouri, because of his stand for national defense—"a great statesman and fearless."

Knows His Senators

Asked by Senator Allen if he told Reed what to do with the document and how to use it in the cruiser fight, Shearer replied:

"Senator Reed is not a man that you can tell what to do, or ride him, or anything else."

Shearer added that he did not know what Reed had done with the document. He said he gave a copy to "one other man" and showed one to Homer L. Ferguson, president of the Newport News Shipbuilding company, one of the firms he is suing for $257,000.

Shearer was in perfect command of the situation again today when he took the stand. It was still his "party" and he guided the proceedings in any direction he desired. The committee made several attempts to check him, but he was as unmanageable as a fractious colt.

For the most part, Shearer was composed and fired his answers back with defiance. He rested his elbows on the edge of the committee table and fixed each inquisitor in turn with his steely gray eyes. Only a few futile attempts were made to stop him when he flew off at tangents.

The only time that Shearer appeared to be at all disturbed was when Senator Allen quizzed him about his income tax returns. This was brought up when Shearer testified that he had been paid between $1,000 and $5,000 by William Randolph Hearst in connection with "an education campaign" against the world court.

"I haven't any income tax to pay," said Shearer, "I can't collect what is owing to me," referring to his claim against the shipbuilders.

ance that the government will not lose money."

Asked by Senator Heflin, Democrat, Alabama, whether he favored for the farmer a price equal to cost of production plus a fair profit, Williams replied not when the farmer produces more than the world demands. He said it was necessary for the producer to curtail his production when surpluses exist and said the board intended to help along this line.

Cotton Too Cheap

Under questioning by Senator Caraway, Democrat, Arkansas, and Senator Smith, the board member asserted the price of cotton at this time should be from one cent to a cent and a quarter higher than it is.

This was objected to strenuously by Senator Smith, who said the average price of cotton since 1920 had been 22½ cents and that during the period the average American production was nearly a million bales less than the average world consumption.

"I tell you," Smith thundered, pounding on the table, "that supply and demand has nothing to do with the price as is demonstrated by these figures. There is something else behind this.

"And yet you sit here and tell Senator Caraway that after about five years we might be able to pump a little life into the farmer. The whole thing is absurd on its face."

SANTA FE TO OPPOSE LINE

Abilene Southern Seeks Short Extension

was inferred the Santa Fe is opposing the application chiefly for the purpose of keeping the T. & P. from entering San Angelo, claiming that San Angelo does not need this additional rail service. The T. & P. owns the Abilene and Southern.

San Angelo Wants Line

San Angelo commercial interests, however, are very anxious to have the T. & P. enter their city, according to Claude Wilde, head of the delegation from that city. The San Angelo delegation will appear as witnesses at this hearing in behalf of the A. & S.

The A. & S. in its application to the commission for a permit to extend its line from the present southern terminus at Ballinger to San Angelo, stated the distance between these points was 40 miles. The proposed new line would serve the communities of Veribest and Mareta and two other places where sites for stations have been located but have not been named.

The country through which the proposed extension of the A. & S. will traverse is chiefly agricultural, according to T. D. Gresham, Dallas, chief counsel for the Texas and Pacific.

Ballinger Undecided

J. B. Payne, Dallas, vice president of the T. & P., in charge of traffic, accompanied Gresham to San Antonio and will take an important part in the A. & S. hearing tomorrow and Thursday.

Considerable interest has developed on the conjectures as to what attitude the citizens of Ballinger will take during this hearing. It is known Ballinger will send a delegation to attend the sessions. Officials of the T. & P. are of the opinion the Ballinger delegation will sit in on the sessions of the hearing merely as observers and will not determine what course they will pursue toward the application of the A. & S. until after they have heard the evidence to be presented by the A. & S.

Gresham declined to make known what evidence the A. & S. is planning to submit in support of their contentions that an extension of its lines from Ballinger to San Angelo would be a convenience and a necessity.

Light

Visualizer. Decorator. Artist.

Possibly the greatest contribution which has been made to modern civilization is the electric light. It has turned night into day, increased the efficiency of man's work, made possible comfortable and healthful hours of reading as far into the night as man has felt the urge to follow his studies or his pleasures.

The modern Texas home is a palace of light. Through the use of proper light the simplest home becomes a shrine of beauty. Light is a decorator and an artist.

The home with light, properly located and rightly diffused, is made comfortable, healthful and beautiful with very little expense. Simple furnishings, simple decorations take on new qualities when given the proper lighting background.

The Texas Electric Service Company has made a special study of lighting for the modern home and would be glad to work with you in giving your home the best possible lighting arrangement at the lowest possible cost.

When you have really given serious thought to the lighting possibilities of your home you will be delighted with the changes that can be economically made.

GEORGE NORRIS PAYS NOTHING

Nebraska Senator Works Hard, Anyway

By FRASER EDWARDS
(Copyright, 1929, by Universal Service)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—"What price glory! An untarnished senatorial toga—almost as good as new, gentlemen! What do you bid?"

Three gentlemen and their friends in Pennsylvania bid upwards of $3,000,000. None of the trio has yet donned the coveted garment and none of them is likely to do so.

In view the price placed upon a senatorial nomination in Pennsylvania, it seems all the more incredible that George William Norris, senior senator from Nebraska, refused to spend one red cent, or a penny of any other color, for one.

Still Dissents

In a way, George is in the senate without his knowledge or consent. Of course, he is far too intelligent not to have discovered that he was drafted in 1924 and is still a member of the greatest deliberative body in the world, but he still is dissenting, which is his forte.

After 10 years in the house and 12 in the senate, George was all caught-up and cold on congress. Things did not run to suit him. He could not put over his ideals of government. He was determined to quit. The pleas of his friends could not move him.

On the last day on which his name could be filed for the Nebraska primary, George's colleague made a futile plea. The adamant George dictated a telegram to his friends in Nebraska not to file his name under any circumstances.

Reporter Stops Message

But destiny, in the slender form of a whipper-snapper reporter, stepped in. The reporter, learning the contents of the telegram from the senator's secretary caught the already dispatched messenger, took the telegram away from him and tore it to bits. Hence, George was renominated and reelected without the expenditure of a dime.

When it comes to the presidency, which carries a salary of $75,000 annually for four years, George's regard, is much higher. He spent all of $6 last year to capture the Republican nomination but this was done to reimburse a Nebraska newspaper man for an advertisement which he deemed adequate to get the state delegation for Norris.

George carries the Republican label, but he is the most unorthodox Republican and the most thorough American statesman extant. He is an incorrigible and incorruptible advocate of the masses and yet doesn't look too good nor talk too wise. He is a shirt-sleeve statesman and the only way one can tell he is a statesman by looking at him is a black bow tie.

Overthrew "Uncle Joe"

George began his unorthodox career by overthrowing "Uncle Joe" Cannon's oligarchy in the house back in 1910. Just for that the people of Nebraska sent him to the senate. He has been insurging in approved fashion ever since.

Inasmuch as George did not regard a senatorial nomination worthy a copper, it was only natural that he should step out of character as a Republican and support "Uncle Billy" Wilson, Democratic candidate for senator from Pennsylvania, in 1926.

One of George's queer notions is that water power is a natural God-given inheritance of the people. He believes in it so firmly that last fall he swallowed his teetotlar abhorrence of the demon rum and supported Al Smith, wet-Tammany tag and all.

George is by long odds the smartest parliamentarian in the senate. With a small minority group behind him several years ago, he tied the senate into a double-bow knot on Muscle Shoals legislation. He had the senate pass three bills, substituting one for another, relating to Muscle Shoals and wind up by passing none, which was what George wanted so long as he could not put over his government-ownership bill.

This master of bitter invective and devastating irony, has a surprising sweet smile, like the sun emerging from the clouds. His principles do not interfere with his personal friendships. One of the strangest in the senate is the friendship between George and Charley Curtis of Kansas, now vice president. For they are as far apart as the poles in political philosophy.

Nebraska has thus far failed to send a statue of any of her illustrious sons to the hall of fame in the capitol. He is herewith nominated for a place in that select company. Not only because George Norris wears a 7¾ hat and has a noble brow that would make a handsome contribution in enduring marble or bronze, but because it would be a real monument to American democracy.

358 ARRAIGNED IN U. S. COURT

13 of Big Docket Enter Guilty Pleas

OKLAHOMA CITY, Oct. 1. (UP)—Thirteen of the 358 defendants arraigned today in federal court pleaded guilty to charges against them. The others asked for trials.

The arraignment of 27 defendants was stricken from the assignment until a later date.

James H. Mathers, Oklahoma City attorney, filed two demurrers to indictments under the Jones prohibition act. The motion to dismiss these cases was set for a hearing Friday. Mathers is acting in the true bills returned against F. E. Eirmen and Joe Thompson and a charge against Fred Haynes.

Judge Edgar S. Vaught dismissed the indictment of whisky still possession against G. P. Warden, Custer county deputy sheriff. Government authorities said that Warden had seized a still, taken it to his home and before he could deliver it to his office, he was arrested.

When W. H. Yeager, 19-year-old defendant in a postal violation charge told Judge Vaught that he was going to school at Boynton at the time of the crime, Vaught told him to bring his school grades with him when he came to his trial Jan. 6.

Several sentences for liquor law violations were passed.

New 'Wet' Charges Flung at Kansas

TOPEKA, Kan., Oct. 1. (INS)—About the time Gov. Clyde Reed of Kansas thought he had settled all arguments on prohibition in Kansas by squelching Jay House, former mayor of Topeka, who told of Topeka drinking conditions in an eastern newspaper, the governor finds the state stirred up by another newspaper writer.

A writer for a Chicago newspaper has compiled figures showing the number of arrests for drunkenness in Kansas are above average. For instance, the writer said that arrests for drunkenness in Parsons, the governor's home town, averaged 100 per 10,000 inhabitants while in New York the number averages 22 arrests per 10,000 population.

In his article, House contended that in proportion to the population, there was as much drinking in dry Kansas as there was in some of the admittedly wet eastern states. Reed obtained depositions from several Topeka friends of House in which they denied House had ever been served liquor in their homes.

Now Governor Reed must combat the article of the Chicago writer which has created a wide discussion in Kansas.

'RURAL' SNAKE BITES WOMAN

Lady Trouper Sent to Hospital by Green Serpent

HOUSTON, Oct. 1. (AP)—Mlle. Irene, circus snake charmer probably will play only with her own pets in the future as a result of a recent experience while the troupe was in Houston. The mademoiselle was bitten several times on both hands by a country-bred Texas coral snake.

A Houston citizen had one more snake than he could use so he presented it to the charmer. Mlle. Irene, who delights in taming a 15 or 20-foot python, had never seen such a beautiful little reptile. The snake was in a glass bottle but mademoiselle wanted to see it more clearly so she fearlessly poured the few inches of brilliancy into her hand.

An educated snake would have realized it was being handled by a charmer and responded accordingly. But the lady's dainty hand looked just like that of any other person to the diminuative rural product of the Lone Star state. It quietly glided along her hand and embedded its tiny fangs in a forefinger. Unlike all other poisonous serpents, which strike and release their victims, the coral snake bites, hangs on and chews. This one was no exception. The mademoiselle tried to pull the serpent off with her other hand and the snake caught that.

She was rushed to a local hospital and treated with anti-venom serum. Two days later she was reported to be recovering.

We Ask Women To Make This Test of Mountain Coffee Flavor

Drink it three times and then, if you are willing to go back to ordinary coffee, we pay the cost

FROM the fertile volcanic soil of the mountains of Central America come coffees that leading experts concede are not duplicated by any other region in the world. They have the tangiest flavor, the richest mellow body of probably any coffee known today.

We do not want to tell you how good this coffee is. Instead we make this unusual offer through your grocer. Order a pound of Folger's coffee today. Serve it three times. If after this test you are willing to return to ordinary coffee, your grocer will gladly refund the money you paid for it. We make this offer not as philanthropy or to be "different," but because we have found that probably eight out of ten families who make this test never go back to ordinary coffees.

We have built one of the largest coffee businesses in the world simply by letting people taste the flavor of Central American mountain coffees.

Rarest of Coffees

Only a small percentage of the world's supply of coffee comes from the mountain districts of Central America and the high prices these coffees command prohibit their use in ordinary blends.

We have been importing these rare mountain grown Central American coffees for 79 years. For some of the rarest kinds we contract from season to season while the trees are still in blossom.

A New Experience

Ordinarily, when you change from one brand of coffee to another, you note little difference in taste. That is because 70% of all coffee sold in the United States today (regardless of brand names) is of one common type grown in the same general region. Hence Nature has given it the same common flavor. So-called "blending" and special roasting processes (in spite of advertising talk) can not change it. For roasting coffee merely brings out whatever flavor Nature has already put in.

Nature herself makes Folger's coffee different from any you ever tasted. You will notice it the instant you break the seal of the vacuum can. There is a rush of rich fragrance that is unlike any other coffee. And when the clear amber coffee is poured in the cup, you'll find it has a delicious tang and rich mellow body that is never "thin" or "flat."

How to Compare It

Get a pound of Folger's coffee from your grocer today. Drink it tomorrow morning. The next morning drink the coffee you have been using. The third morning drink Folger's again. Then decide which you like best. If, for any reason, you do not choose Folger's, your grocer will gladly refund the full purchase price. We will pay him. That's fair, isn't it? You risk nothing—so why not order Folger's now for the test?

300 Members Attend First Artist Program

Roses from the Woman's Forum rose garden and feathery ferns and goldenrods across the stage, made a lovely setting Tuesday when approximately 300 members gathered there for the first general meeting and artists' program. Music was furnished by a canary bird in the Spanish dining room upstairs, which, growing used to his golden surroundings, poured out song during the program in the auditorium.

Officers and chairmen of different departments were seated on the stage before the program began. Mrs. C. P. Burton, the new president, introduced Mrs. Ben G. Oneal, chairman of the house committee, who told the audience about the new tea room and requested that all questions about department work be referred to the chairmen of the departments. Mrs. T. M. Conrey, chairman of the program committee, told of the wonderful artists to be brought to the club each month and Mrs. A. G. Holmes, chairman of ways and means committee, announced the Spanish fiesta to be held late in October and the coming in December of the Isadora Duncan dancers.

Each officer and chairman in turn, was presented to the audience and after this Olive McClintic Johnson was introduced.

Like a flower in her petaled lilac and lavender gown, she made a favorable impression before she had spoken a word. Her mellow voice made the dramatic interpretation of "The Royal Family," a rare treat. Depth of voice of the old actor in the story was real; the shrillness of dissatisfied age in Kitty's voice and the youth in the 19-year-old girl's were so fully told by tone one might close her eyes, it was said, and fancy the persons on the stage. Every person in the play was splendidly portrayed.

Olive McClintic Johnson so completely lived her parts that each character seemed to have appeared on the stage. The personality of such an artist makes an audience live the play with her, and the personality of Miss Johnson is acknowledged to be rich and rare.

After "The Royal Family" a seated tea was enjoyed, and many guests had the pleasure of meeting the artist of the day.

Parties from Nocona, Henrietta, Electra and Archer City were present, the opening meeting of the forum being always something of a home coming to forum members.

Bread An' Jam

A Daily Illustrated Poem For Children

By Wymond Garthwaite

GOING UP TO BED

When I go up the stairs
There's something following me,
Though when I look around
There's nothing there to see.

And yet I know there is,
There's something just behind,
Although my mother says
There's nothing of the kind.

But daddy understands,
He says that it must be
My shadow right behind,
Just going to bed with me.

PEEPS AT PEOPLE

By MRS L. N. CASON

As we went up the walk to the Woman's Forum Monday we remarked that we must tell people of the lovely rose garden, for standing high in the corner of the grounds, was a mass of pink bloom.

◇ ◇ ◇

October roses. As trees in autumn put on their gorgeous colorings—taking a last fling at life—so it seems, roses bloom—putting all their hearts into one last effort to shower loveliness on the world.

◇ ◇ ◇

Then, when we reached the foyer, the first thing to which our attention was called, was the enormous standing basket of deep red and deep pink roses. Four dozen had been cut in these colorings and still the garden was alive with bloom.

◇ ◇ ◇

When autumn comes in our life, we hope we can make it seem as lovely to those about us, as the autumnal beauty of those flowers.

◇ ◇ ◇

Roses and zinnias and lantana upstairs. And Miss Myrle Neely said she was going to take us on a trip that was far away, to introduce us to lantana that grew in every color to the height of one's waist. We wish it were not just a joke.

◇ ◇ ◇

We find each day something new about Texas. Mrs. Kemp told us the other day that she had dogwood in her grounds. We expect to haunt her home, when another spring comes.

◇ ◇ ◇

In the tea shop at the forum, the Parisian models were lovely. Mrs. South showed positive genius in choosing Misses Schnelle and Fisher to model together. A fair blonde and a clear brunet.

◇ ◇ ◇

Gowns were lovely, and so were hose. It seemed that several tables were interested in knowing what the shade of Miss Schnelle's hose was called. They always look so different on some one else.

◇ ◇ ◇

We learned: when you wish a gone that will go with all the gowns you wish to wear, choose "Ramona." And doesn't it sound romantic, too?

◇ ◇ ◇

The only male guest in the dining room at the opening of the Spanish tea room never uttered a word. The canary must have been frightened to death.

◇ ◇ ◇

We humbly confess to the superiority of red radiance roses. We, who voted and worked for larkspur have been reminded that it is the roses that make fall beds wonderful.

Wife's First Duty To Her Husband, Says Dorothy Dix

Why Mothers Discriminate Against Their Daughters—Is a Woman's First Duty to Husband or Mother?—Straight Talk to a Cry-Baby Wife.

Dear Miss Dix—I have a brother who earns a much bigger salary than I do. He is big and husky, while I have always been small and delicate. My mother is satisfied to have my brother pay her a fair board and have the rest of his money to spend as he pleases on himself, but she makes me turn over my entire pay envelope to her and she gives me only back for my expenses what she thinks I should have. In a word, she considers that what my brother earns in his own, but what I earn belongs to her. When my brother comes home at night she thinks he should rest and she never asks him to do a thing about the house, but she demands that I help her get the dinner and wash the dishes afterward and help out with the sewing. Mother washes and mends my brother's clothes and keeps them looking neat and tidy, but I have to do my own. All of the girls that I work with have the same home conditions. Why do mothers treat their daughters so differently from the way in which they treat their sons?—MAUD.

Answer—Nobody knows, Maud. It is just the way mothers are built. A woman will offer her daughter up as a living sacrifice to the family without ever knowing that she is doing it, but she beats upon the cymbals and calls upon the world to observe what a treasure heaven has blessed her with if her son does the smallest thing for her.

Perhaps the reason that mothers are so much harder on their daughters than they are on their sons is because the wage-earning girl is still so new that her mother has not yet had time to adjust herself to her. Perhaps, too deep for any one generation to eradicate it, there still lies the age-old belief that a mother should control all of her daughter's expenditures. And mothers have not yet been able to see that when a girl becomes independent her whole status in the household is changed and she should stand at least on an equal footing with her brothers.

Certainly to the laborer belongs her hire. Any girl who has intelligence enough to hold down a job and do work for which an employer is willing to pay her, has gumption enough to know how to spend it, and no mother has a right to reduce her daughter to vassalage by making the girl give her all she earns.

It is fair and right the girl should pay a fair amount for her board, but the remainder belongs to her and she should not be deprived of the independence that we all feel in handling our own money.

Nor should a girl be expected to do housework after she has toiled all day in a store or office. That is more than flesh and blood can stand. One of the reasons that so many girls break down or fail to make good in business is because they are worn out doing double duty.

The mothers who force their daughters to help with the housework do not realize what slave-drivers they are because they look upon working downtown as a sort of pastime and diversion. They never think of that kind of work as being exhausting and nerve-wearing, because she has done nothing all day but stand behind a counter or sit in a chair and pound a typewriter.

Of course, there are many exceptions to this rule. There are thousands of mothers who do realize how hard their daughters work and who try to save them all they can at home. But the great majority of mothers still think that their daughters have no right to their pay envelopes and that their sons have a right to theirs and that their daughters should work both outside of the home and inside of it, while all that a boy should be expected to do is to enjoy himself after working hours.

And there you are, Maud. Brother will always be the fair-haired child with mother. She can't help it. It is biological.—DOROTHY DIX.

Business Women Open Fall Activities With Banquet

With 76 members and guests attending, the first autumn meeting of the Business and Professional Woman's club started with a whirl of promise for the new year as they were seated at the long tables in the lounge of the Wichita club Tuesday night.

Autumn was featured in the decorations. The tables were strewn with richly colored oak leaves, and crepe myrtle, snap dragon, goldenrod and fall roses, made the scene a colorful one. At one side was a lovely bowl of "ice on the mountain" in a red bowl—a tribute to the taste of the girls who decorated.

After the invocation, given by Miss Catherine Walker, Miss Arnie Smith, chairman of the program committee announced vocal numbers by Ted Williams, accompanied at the piano by Miss Elizabeth Cole. He sang "One Day," an exquisite composition of A. H. Mahaffey's and as an encore gave "Banjo Song," by Homer.

A delicious four course dinner was served and before the close, Mrs. Hermione Stewart Vaughn, with Miss Lois Baber at the piano, gave "Waters of Minnetonka," by Lieurance, a composition said to suit perfectly her voice, and "Pirate Dreams," by Huerter.

Mesdames T. A. Hicks, H. F. Weldon and Miss Catherine Walker were each asked to say a few words and responded graciously.

Miss Zula McKay, the president, covered the future activities of the club in a brief address, telling of the home talent play to be given at the Woman's Forum clubhouse in November and of the possibility of the Business and Professional Woman's club becoming a monied club through their oil lease on Camp Noble.

Reports were given by each chairman and the minutes covered each meeting since the spring business meeting.

Miss Kuhfuss' report was particularly interesting and the short speech made by Mrs. Joella Terrell Butler, was received with enthusiasm.

The guest list included Mesdames C. C. Bunnenberg, Mary Crane, W. O. Davidson, Mary F. Lyons, W. E. Millican, W. D. Kennedy, Braswell, T. A. Hicks, Ted Ahlers, Ben Elliott, Fruechte, A. H. Airport Notes

Giving the new Braniff airline to Fort Worth and Dallas a fitting send-off, the liner from Dallas which landed at the Municipal airport Tuesday afternoon was loaded to capacity and it was necessary to wire to Oklahoma City as the plane left Dallas to dispatch a special ship to Wichita Falls to pick up two passengers who had bought tickets to Oklahoma City.

BEWARE OF DIETS WITHOUT BULK

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN Will Protect You

People are more careful than ever before about diet. They diet to clear complexions. They avoid certain foods to stay thin. They eat others to get fat. But many are running a serious danger because they are missing the "roughage" or "bulk" foods that every person must have to keep well.

As a result, constipation gets in its deadly work. Headaches, listlessness, circled eyes are only the first symptoms. In the end, constipation ruins health, wrecks beauty and may cause serious disease.

Don't neglect your daily roughage. That is nature's rule. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN will supply it. A healthful cereal to eat each day. To use in cooked dishes or to serve with milk or cream. To mix with other cereals.

ALL-BRAN is guaranteed to relieve constipation—to prevent it. Two tablespoonfuls daily—chronic cases, with every meal. It is 100% bran. Doctors recommend it. Your grocer sells it. Served by hotels, restaurants, dining cars. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

HAVE YOU DISCOVERED THAT FLAVOR CALLED FRENCH'S?

FOR SALAD DRESSINGS, SAUCES, COLD CUTS AND SANDWICHES

Most teeth decay unless you do this daily

Remove the FILM that breeds bacteria and turns white teeth dull and dingy

GERMS cause tooth decay. Germs plus tartar are the chief cause of pyorrhea. Virtually every common disease of teeth and gums results from germ infections.

There is but one way known to fight germs and safeguard teeth and gums. You must remove a slippery, stubborn film that glues bacteria to the tooth's enamel. Film forms in crevices and clings so tenaciously that ordinary brushing fails to remove it successfully.

Today dentists are urging patients to turn from other ways to the special film-removing dentifrice called Pepsodent. You will note the difference from ordinary tooth pastes the instant it touches your teeth. No pumice, no harmful grit or crude abrasive, but a scientific action that recommends it for the most sensitive teeth and gums.

... And no other way can make teeth so dazzling white. Write for free 10-day supply to The Pepsodent Co., 1104 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago.

REZNOR GAS HEATERS

EASY--The Love Story of a Modern Girl--

By Beatrice Burton

Ann Marie's tender heart ached for him. She knew that he had a great many money troubles. She knew that he had put what her brother, Howard, called a "plaster" on the old brown shingle house, and that he was always asking for little loans at Mr. Lawler's bank.

All afternoon she had been intending to ask him to pay her a couple of dollars for the Christmas cards she had been painting for him.

But now she suddenly changed her mind . . . It wouldn't hurt her to do some work for him once in a while and ask nothing for it, would it? Poor little Dad, trying so hard to make his book shop pay. Trying so hard to give his expensive family the things that other folks had—

"Dad, you look tired," she said, and laid one of her small capable hands over one of his for just a second. "Why don't you go home and lie down for an hour before supper? I'll look after the store."

She put up her hands to take off her hat. But he wouldn't let her stay.

He was very firm about it. "No, No," he said positively. "You're not going to work down here. Howdy's coming in at five o'clock to look after things. I'll come home then. You run along."

"At five?" Ann Marie lifted her eyes to the Swiss clock that hung on the wall above his head. "Why, Dad, it's 10 minutes past now!"

But as she spoke the front door of the shop was thrown open, letting in a blast of cold wet air and her brother, Howard.

"Howdy" was 21—a year older than Ann Marie. He was tall and broad. His hair was jet black, his deep-set eyes were blue, and he had a fine Roman nose.

But he was not good-looking in the way that a man ought to be good-looking. For his mouth was sulky, and his chin was weak.

Howdy "went around" with Florence Lawler, and for six months he had been a cashier in the bank. He and John Lawler were great pals.

His first words now were for John. "Just came from your house," he said.

John laughed. "Tell me something I don't know, will you?"

Then they both laughed, as if there were something terribly funny in the fact that Howdy was at the Lawler house to see Florence, morning, noon and night.

Mr. Macy trotted to the back of the shop and began to get into his shiny black overcoat.

"Look here, young fellow," he said to his son, "You stick here in the shop until I get back. No running out to get supper while I'm gone . . . Understand?"

"I get you, Dad."

He put his hand on the knob of the door to open it for his father. But he did not open it.

He began to laugh again and held out his other hand.

"What's the outlook for a little touch, Dad?" he asked. "I sure could use five bucks if you've got that much on you."

Mr. Lacy hesitated for a second. Then his hand went slowly into his trousers' pocket and came out with a two-dollar bill in it.

"That's all I have just now, Howdy," he said, handling it over. "I sent everything I had over to the bank at 3 o'clock. There's only a little silver in the cash drawer."

"Rotten luck," was Howdy's only comment. Without a word of thanks he crushed the money into his own pocket and opened the door for his father.

"Gosh-a-mighty, the Old Boy's getting to be tight with his coin," he said as soon as the door had swung shut. "Expects me to hang around the store for a couple of hours at a stretch, whenever he wants to beat it . . . But whenever I need a little money——"

"You get it." Ann Marie finished his sentence for him. "He's just given you two dollars for two hours' work—and that's mighty good pay, Howard Macy! You ought to be ashamed to say that Dad's tight!"

Her voice, usually soft and husky, was sharp and shrill for once. Her eyes were a burning blue between their thick dark lashes as they flashed with indignation.

Howdy laughed. "You don't need to spit fire at me, kid," he said lasily. "I'm not going to let the Old Boy work me the way he works you. Half the time he never gives you a nickel for the cards you paint for him. . . . Now does he?"

But Ann Marie wouldn't answer him.

"Coming along, Johnny, if you're going to take me home," she said to John Lawler, and marched out of the store.

"I can't imagine what Howdy does with his own money—the money he earns at the bank," she went on when they were standing outside in the shelter of the doorway.

"I hope I'm not making trouble between you and Ann Marie, Johnny," she said coyly.

"He doesn't make very much," John told her, lighting a cigaret. "Not even as much as I do—and I don't make anything. I'm so poor that I couldn't even have a car if my Dad didn't kick in with a little cash once in a while."

Ann Marie looked him over, measuring him, taking him in point by point—his expensive-looking gray hat, his blue linen shirt with collar to match, his tailormade clothes, his platinum watch-chain, the diamond in his signet ring.

"Yes, but your father is a very rich man, Johnny," she said solemnly, "And our Dad—Howdy's and mine—is as poor as Job's turkey. Howdy hasn't any right to ask him for a cent. Instead of that he ought to be helping Dad a little."

Before she had finished talking she saw that he was only half-listening to her. She had laid her hand on his arm as she talked to him, and he was looking down at it intently.

Then he looked from it to her face. His eyes had darkened and they met hers with a sort of hunger in them. She saw his nostrils quiver as he drew his breath in quickly, keenly.

"Come along," he said and took her arm, drawing her close to him as he never had tried to draw her before.

The roadster waited for them at the curbstone, its side-curtains on, all warm and dark and snug.

Ann Marie shook her head . . . . She didn't want to climb into that roadster just then and she wasn't going to! For some sixth sense told her that if she did, Johnny Lawler was going to make love to her as sure as Fate!—And she did not want him to.

Not that he or any other man ever had tried to make love to her . . . But any girl knows when a man is going to kiss her. She knows it just as she knows how to breathe. By instinct.

"Wait a minute, Johnny," she said, one foot on the step of the roadster, "I want to look into that show-window across the street."

And before he could say a word to stop her she was running across the wet pavement to the Boston store on the other side fo Front street.

In the middle of the brightly-lighted show windows was a pair of yellow stockings—pale yellow fishnet stockings just the color of Ann Marie's one and only dancing dress. The dress that she was going to wear the country club dance on Christmas eve.

A price tag was fastened on them. They were just two dollars . . . . Only two dollars, and she had intended to ask her father for two dollars for her afternoon's work! . . . Two dollars, and Howdy had taken just that much away from him five minutes before.

She turned away from the window and started slowly back to the car.

Johnny stood beside it, waiting for her. His cigaret glowed like a red star in the darkness.

It became a shower of sparks—a make-believe sky rocket—as he tossed it down into the streaming gutter.

He held open the door of the roadster and she got into it. He dropped down on the leather seat beside her and slammed the door. The windshield was covered with raindrops that ran down the glass on the outside. Raindrops pattered on the top of the little car. . . . It was very dark inside.

But even in the darkness Ann Marie could tell that Johnny Lawler was looking at her very hard and earnestly—intently.

"Ann Marie," he said. His voice wasn't like his voice as she knew it.

His arms went around her.

"Don't!" Ann Marie shook her head, "I don't want you to."

Hotel Men Oppose Quanah Parking Law

Special to The Record News.

QUANAH, Texas, Oct. 1.—The recently enacted ordinance which stipulates that no cars may remain parked on the streets of Quanah after midnight has drawn a protest from the hotel men which W. H. Crawford of the Crawford hotel, acting as spokesman, has presented to the city council in the form of a petition for rescinding or modifying insofar as the cars of traveling men stopping at hotels are concerned. The petition sets forth that many traveling men are passing through Quanah each night rather than be forced to place their cars in storage. Mr. Crawford also requested a change in the parking rule on East Third street in front of the Crawford hotel to reverse the rule for parallel parking from the south to the north side of the street.

Mayor Frizzell speaking for the ordinance stated it had been passed to enable the street department to clean the streets during the night, and prevent clogging of storm sewers because of inadequate cleaning.

Millions More Each Year Turn to Famous External Method of Treating Colds

Each year more and more mothers turn to Vicks VapoRub, the modern external treatment for colds, because it is just rubbed on and cannot upset children's stomachs, as "dosing" is so apt to do.

Originally designed and first used largely for children's colds, this better external method gradually spreads as one enthusiastic mother told another. Years of actual use also proved it equally effective for the colds of grown-ups. Today the whole trend of medical practice is away from needless "dosing" and Vicks—a household word in America—is used in more than 60 countries abroad.

The ever-growing demand for Vicks is shown in its familiar slogan, expressing the number of jars used yearly. First announced when Vicks reached "17 Million Jars Yearly"—later raised to "21 Million"—the figures are again being changed, as there are now "Over 26 Million Jars Used Yearly."—Adv.

Physicians Favor Use of Cascara

Doctors who warn against the use of violent, habit-forming purgatives will tell you that cascara is one of the gentlest and most beneficial laxatives known to science. Cascarets are nothing but pure cascara, sweetened with cane sugar and flavored with licorice. You can take them any time that Nature needs a little help with the process of elimination—and never experience any discomfort, nausea or unpleasant after effects.

You can easily tell when you are suffering from faulty elimination. You feel listless, out of sorts, perhaps your tongue is coated or you have a bilious, headachy feeling. Cascarets will clear up this sluggish feeling every time and soon have your system functioning as it should. You needn't hesitate to give them to children or old folks either.

Cascarets always act, and they always act the same way; gentle but thorough. They don't stir up the stomach or upset the system, but they cleanse the entire thirty feet of bowels in one comfortable, thorough action that leaves the system sweet and clean. You'll wake up feeling like a new person; tongue uncoated, breath sweetened, eyes bright, appetite on edge, life worth living again!

Take a delicious, candy Cascaret the next time you have that sluggish feeling—or give them to the children when they are out of sorts. Full medical endorsement proves the principle of Cascarets is right.

SOON GETS RID OF BILIOUSNESS

Georgia Man Tells How He Takes Black-Draught When Bilious.

Valdosta, Ga.—In telling how Thedford's Black-Draught has helped to keep him well, Mr. O. A. Aldrich, of this city, says:

"Black-Draught is a good medicine. I began taking it when just a boy, for biliousness and as a laxative.

"When I get bilious, my mouth has a bad taste and I get dizzy, feel light-headed. A few doses of Black-Draught usually make me feel like new. It seems to cleanse my system of impurities, my head gets clearer, and the bad taste is gone from my mouth.

"I am a rather healthy, strong man, taking very little medicine, except for the dizziness I mentioned.

"It is good to know that there is a good laxative like Black-Draught to take and give quick relief."

Thedford's Black-Draught is prepared from medicinal roots and herbs, of highest quality, finely powdered, carefully combined and packaged by automatic machinery.

Easy to take—no disagreeable after-effects. Price 25 cents.

HOW MELONS GROW

◆ ◆ ◆

Daily Editorial

THE mounting profits of big business reflect economies far oftener than exorbitance. Manufacture has simply learned to make better merchandise with less material and fewer operations.

Some corporations are growing stockholders' melons in consumers' pockets, but still more of 'em are rooted in rubbish heaps and scientific penny-pinching.

Building costs grin at a ductile tubing, guaranteed to withstand 1,800 pounds pressure and sub-zero weather.

The makers furnish a jiffy coupling that any householder can attach in less time than it takes to read this far.

By dispensing with threading, the pipe wall is reduced 50 per cent. Pipes have always been twice as thick as wear and tear required, but threading demanded the excess metal, which neither adds strength nor endurance beyond the thinner points of juncture.

Now the country will annually save enormous sums while bringing permanent plumbing within universal reach.

Folks, who couldn't previously afford the expense, may enjoy additional bathrooms and radiation—labor will be more continuously employed—and industry increase output without hastening exhaustion of national copper stores.

Waste-piles, everywhere, begin to shrink, as producing engineers simplify processes and plug the leaks in clock and payroll with improved formulas and devices.

Packing, folding, labeling, bottle filling and measurement are already in charge of automata.

◆ ◆ ◆

ROAD paving and masonry will soon abandon manual help—perfected sprayers have sentenced paint brushes to join the buggy whip—and electric shingle layers are rehearsing in a dozen experimental minds.

Craftsmen, thus displaced, will later drift to plants issuing the very mechanical substitutes that stole their old jobs—just as the application of power to weaving, transportation, glass-blowing and steel forging promoted multitudes of nineteenth century spinners, waggoners, smiths and journeymen to preferable berths and wider outlook.

Efficiency isn't robbing people of livelihoods, but diverting their energies—providing opportunity to apply judgment, exercise intelligence and escape from rut-drudgery.

Thriftless practice, needless bulk and over-manned staffs must increasingly render account of investigative budgets and cross-checking analysis.

All substances and techniques are under suspicion of incompetence and cited to justify their continued employment.

Fiber and chip boards, composition doors and mouldings, iron window frames and patent floors are leaps ahead of government in conservation programs.

Shavings and sawdust are earning millions where, yesterday, they were burning on bonfires.

Straws, grasses, canes, earths and gypsum are undergoing laboratory instruction as successors to inferior and higher-priced staples.

Robots are taking short cuts that human adeptness can never follow.

And all the equipment and systems, in present sight, will be lying on the dump within another 20 years, or the concerns who delay their replacement will land there instead.

Unnatural Color

"You should take this mulberry colored dress, madam. It would suit you excellently as you are so pale."

"But I am not usually pale—I am only shocked at the price."—Passing Show.

Loses, But Gains

"I have bought a car and given my piano in exchange."

"Do motor dealers take pianos in exchange?"

"Not usually, but this dealer lives in the flat under mine."—Interessantes Blatt, Vienna.

A Boston merchant bit a holdup man who tried to rob his store. The storekeeper, it seems, was armed to the teeth.

The name of a new book is "The Runaway Sardine." Probably some flat-dwellers who fled screaming to the wilds.

Second-Hand Triumphs

THE CHIEF CRITICISM of American sports has always been that most people participate in them as spectators rather than as players. Several million people will enjoy our college football games this autumn—but only a few hundred will do any of the playing. The rest will sit in the grandstand and watch.

It is the same with baseball. Millions of people are extremely fond of the game—but not one in a thousand ever plays. Most of us get our baseball at second-hand, watching someone else get the exercise that we might be getting.

Now, however, comes Dr. A. A. Brill, famous psychiatrist, to say that this state of affairs is altogether proper.

Writing in the current North American Review, Dr. Brill declares that sitting in the grandstand is good for us—better for us, in fact, in most cases, than actually playing the games themselves.

Here's the way he explains it:

The average man has an itch for athletic supremacy. He longs to display physical prowess, But the cards are stacked against him. It simply isn't in him. No matter how hard he tried, he could never make a good athlete.

Yet his spirit demands that he become one. So he goes to a baseball game as a spectator and subconsciously identifies himself with the men on the field. When Babe Ruth slams the ball over the scoreboard the fan, in the secret recesses of his heart, does the same thing himself. He shares in Ruth's triumph. His psychic urge for supremacy is satisfied—and he is, actually, healthier than he would have been if he had stayed at home.

Perhaps this explains more things than our fondness for watching baseball, football and boxing contests. It may explain, also, our age-old tendency to be hero worshipers in other walks of life.

Lindbergh, for instance, did something that none of us can ever do, but that all of us, secretly, would like to do. He triumphed over darkness, loneliness and fear. Quite aside from the mechanics of flying, we know that we ourselves could never do that. We should not have the nerve. So we transfer our desires to Lindy's shoulders, and share in his victory.

Then there was a president named Roosevelt. He was the very thing that we would like to be and are not. He was outspoken, always. He feared neither man nor devil. He had a genius for defying powerful people, powerful forces.

We—most of us—are too submissive for our own good, and we know it. But Teddy—couldn't we identify ourselves with him, bare our teeth when he bared his, thunder when he thundered, rage when he raged? We could and we did; and Roosevelt, in consequence, was idolized by millions of people.

It'll be a long time before the race gets over its hero worship. If the day comes when all men are brave, loyal, honest, far-sighted and energetic, the Roosevelts and Lindbergs will lose their luster—just as Babe Ruth and Red Grange wouldn't excite a race of athletes.

Until then, however, most of us will have to take our triumphs at second-hand.

A Wider Field for Manual Training

IN A LABOR DAY address given in a local church last month by Mrs. Grover C. Johnson, a critical finger was pointed at the lack of vocational guidance in our educational system, and the futility of withholding children from factories without providing other occupation for their thought and energy. With much study and means being devoted to the rapid improvement of public schools in Texas, it is to be hoped that methods for correcting the weakness mentioned by Mrs. Johnson will be worked out in Texas as they have in other states.

It is an obvious fact that many of the children, particularly boys, who drop out of school between the fifth and eleventh grades do so because of an inability to advance with others of their respective ages. The standard curriculum includes subjects which they cannot grasp. Both the pupil and his parents become discouraged and embarrassed as he falls gradually into classes whose members are much younger than he. The result is his withdrawal, which in the majority of cases merely augments the already large number of unskilled laborers.

The public schools in Wisconsin furnish one example of corrective methods. Pupils whose records and mental tests show sub-normal capacity for standard academic progress are switched to classes which endeavor to discover the branches of manual training for which greatest aptitude is shown, and to provide training which will lead to the maximum development in those trades. The plan has the double virtue of retaining the pupil's interest in continuing his attendance at school, removing the probability of his early inclusion in the ranks of child-labor, and of producing many skilled workmen for industrial fields which are now short-handed.

The public schools can be utilized for the material reduction of harmful child labor and for a material increase in a supply of skilled labor which now is far short of the country's need.

The Knees of the Male

THE ARBITERS of men's fashion seem to have devised a number of radical innovations for the male's garb next summer. It is written, we hear, that a new kind of pants is to make its appearance; a gaudy, Sybaritic affair, somewhat like a pair of basket ball trunks, cut off six inches above the knee, which will leave a lengthy bit of leg exposed to the fresh air, the inclement August rains and the curious public gaze.

This, they say, will be much cooler and more comfortable than the present trousers. Very likely that is true. Yet we shudder at the idea, somehow.

For, if the horrid truth must be told, the average male knee is not pretty. It is usually knobby, somewhat hirsute, and altogether unprepossessing. Much as we like frankness and comfort, we feel that most men should, out of kindness to the great American public, keep their knees concealed.

Parting After a Quarrel

You looked at me with eyes grown bright with pain
Like some trapped thing's. And then you moved your head
Slowly from side to side, as tho' the strain
Ached in your throat with anger and with dread.

And then you turned and left me, and I stood
With a queer sense of deadness over me,
And only wondered dully that you could
Muster the courage that would make you free

Till you were gone. Then all the air was thick
With my last words that seemed to leap and quiver;
And in my heart I heard the little click
Of a door that closes—quietly, forever.

The Chic Sales Influence

Gene Fowler, crack editor of oh so many newspapers, was recently engaged for an executive job with the new Waldorf-Astoria hotel soon to rise. His first day brought him in contact with someone who said: "Mr. Fowler, we all have titles, what do you want?"

"I need no titles," said Gene, "just call me Fowler."

"But everyone must have a title," persisted the other, "it looks good; come, now, name the title you want."

"Well, if you insist," said Fowler, "call me 'The Specialist.'"

Haw!

Lester Allen tells the story of a third rate theatrical company who were giving a performance of a pantomime in which a large number of supers were employed. The audience was scanty, but noisily unfriendly. Finally one of the actors came down to the footlights and, addressing them, said: "You had better be careful. There are more of us than there are of you!"

Little Cold Broadway?

The one line that appeared here Monday urging her old friends and admirers to forward some coin to help Truly Shattuck, once the toast of Broadway and now in distress, brought $111 the first morning, and we thank the senders fervently for being such good sports. Forty-six dollars came from a group of Friars who'd rather not have their names listed here. Fifteen dollars came from Dorothy Fields, the lyric writer of "I Can't Give You Anything but Love" and other delightful songs, and Finch, Wilson & Co., of 120 Broadway, enclose $50 with this note: "Dear Sir: We send you herewith our check in amount of $50 for the Truly Shattuck fund for an unnamed client of ours."

Gracia!

Little Things

A string of pearls—a fond caress—
The strain of an oft-sung tune.
A scarlet gown, a silent church,
The thrill of the night's new moon.

Our pulses throb to such little things,
A letter—a new chapeau,
It doesn't seem quite right to me
That hearts keep aching so.

—Martha Lee.

The Great What?

The Great Raymond, as he bills himself, always enjoyed the distinction of being Houdini's only rival. Wherever he appeared he posted $1,000 with the local bank, offering the sum to anyone who could invent a lock or prison from which he couldn't escape.

In Rutland, Vt., however, he was in a tough spot, and waited three hours in the hotel foyer for his press agent, who had to climb through a window to open Raymond's door, because the very great Raymond dreaded telling the clerk that he couldn't locate his key.

Quitsee, Quitsee

It was at the Colony restaurant where the snootier set sip and sup at so much a karat. At one table, frixample, was George Jean Nathan. At another sat Adele Astaire, and Ralph Barton, and at other spots sat Billy Baxter, the best known man about town; Edgar Selwyn, Ruth Wilcox, and so on.

"Ah me," ventured the lady sitting with Harry Reichenbach, "as I look about me I realize what a lot of four flush there is in New York."

"I don't agree with you at all," observed Harry, "New York is the greatest experimental laboratory in the world, where you get the acid test and either come through it gilt edge or tin!"

By Way of Report

Revenge is an obsession which finds expression in divers ways. Murder, arson, rape and slander are a few of them. But the strangest of all, probably, is that of Karavaeff, former partner of Anna Pavlowa, and now dancing for the Loew's theaters.

Because he was born without thumbs, Karsvaeff was rejected in boyhood by the masters of the Russian Imperial ballet to whom he applied. He was a thing imperfect. So he taught himself to dance, without a single lesson, working in tea shops and vodka mills until Pavlowa discovered him and brought him to dance with her at the Metropolitan Opera house.

Ziegfeld later found use for his talents, and his fame was recognized. But revenge was the uppermost thing in Karavaeff's mind—smoldering resentment against those who had rejected him. And now he has found it. He has made a burlesque of that beautiful Russian ballet art which they hold so dear by turning it into a tap dance.

Always Belittlin'

Frisco, the hoofer, and the Broadway columnist with whom he is tiffing, encountered each other again in a restaurant last night and the irritated hoofer was striving to be comical again. He whispered something to a go-between and added: "Relay that for me, will you?"

"Hey," shouted the go-between across the room, "Frisco just said something very clever!"

"Well," was the retort, "it's high time."

Gag

Lou Holtz offers the story about the three colored piano jugglers who were moving a Steinway from an 18th story apartment. Something went wrong and the darky on the ground who had a strong hold on the rope was jerked swiftly into the air and later fell to the pavement a total wreck.

Rushing down to the unconscious form on the sidewalk, one of his co-workers went hysterical. Leaning over the prostrate fellow, he cried: "Oh, Joe, are yo' alive or daid? Talk to me, Joe, here is yo' friend, please say somethin'!"

Opening one eye slowly, Joe replied: "A hell of a lot you care! Ah passed you by twice, an' you wouldn't even talk t'me!"

"All Quiet on the Western Front"

By ERICH MARIA REMARQUE

CHAPTER XVI

In one part of the trench I suddenly run into Himmelstoss. We dive into the same dug-out. Breathless, we are all lying one beside the other waiting for the charge.

When we run out again, although I am very excited, I suddenly think: "Where's Himmelstoss?" Quickly I jump back into the dug-out and find him with a small scratch lying in a corner pretending to be wounded. His face looks sullen. He is in a panic; he is new to it, too. But it makes me mad that the young recruits should be out there and he here.

"Get out!" I spit.

He does not stir, his lips quiver, his mustache twitches.

"Out!" I repeat.

He draws up his legs, crouches back against the wall, and shows his teeth like a cur.

I seize him by the arm and try to pull him up. He barks.

That is too much for me. I grab him by the neck and shake him like a sack, his head jerks from side to side.

"You lump, you will get out—you hound, you skunk, sneak out of it, would you?" His eyes becomes glassy. I knock his head against the wall—"You cow"—I kick him in the ribs—"You swine"—I push him toward the door and shove him out head first.

Another wave of our attack has just come up. A lieutenant is with them. He sees us and yells: "Forward, forward, join in, follow." And the word of command does what all my banging could not. Himmelstoss hears the order, looks round him as if awakened, and follows on.

I come after and watch him go over. Once more he is the smart Himmelstoss of the parade-ground, he has outstripped the lieutenant and is far ahead.

Bombardments, barrage, curtain-fire, mines, gas, tanks, machine-guns, hand-grenades—words, words, but they hold the horror of the world.

Our faces are encrusted, our thoughts are devastated, we are weary to death; when the attack comes we shall have to strike many of the men with our fists to waken them and make them come with us—our eyes are burnt, our hands are torn, our knees bleed, our elbows are raw.

How long has it been? Weeks—months—years? Only four days. We see time pass in the colorless faces of the dying, we cram food into us, we run, we throw, we shoot, we kill, we lie about, we are feeble and spent, and nothing supports us but the knowledge that there are still feebler, still more spent, still more helpless ones there who, with starring yes, look upon us as gods and escape death many times.

In the few hours of rest we teach them. "There, see that waggle-top? That's a mortar coming. Keep down, it will go clean over. But if it comes this way, then run for it. You can run from a mortar."

We sharpen their ears to the malicious, hardly audible buzz of the smaller shells that are not so easily distinguished. They must pick them out from the general din by their insect-like hum—we explain to them that these are far more dangerous than the big ones that can be heard long beforehand.

We show them how to take cover from aircraft, how to simulate a dead man when one is overrun in an attack, how to time hand-grenades so that they explode half a second before hitting the ground; we teach them to fling themselves into holes as quick as lighting before the shells with instantaneous fuses; we show them how to clean up a trench with a handful of bombs; we explain the difference between the fuse-length of the enemy bombs and our own; we put them wise to the sound of gas shells—show them all the tricks that can save them from death.

They listen, they are docile—but when it begins again, in their excitement they do everything wrong.

Hale Westhus drags off with a great wound in his back through which the lung pulses at every breath. I can only press his hand: "It's all up, Paul," he groans and bites his arm because of the pain.

We see men living with their skulls blown open; we see soldiers run with their two feet cut off, they stagger on their splintered stumps into the next shell-hole; a lance-corporal crawls a mile and a half on his hands dragging his smashed knee after him; another goes to the dressing-station and over his clasped hands bulge his intestines; we see men without mouths, without jaws, without faces; we find one man who has held the artery of his arm in his teeth for two hours in order not to bleed to death. The sun goes down, night comes, the shells whine, life is at an end.

We have been relieved. The wheels roll beneath us, we stand dully, and when the call "Mind—wire" comes, we bend our knees. It was summer when we came up, the trees were still green, now it is autumn and the night is gray and wet. The lorries stop, we climb out—a confused heap, a remnant of many names. On either side stand people, dark, calling out the numbers of the regiments, the companies. And at each call a little group separates itself off, a small handful of dirty, pallid soldiers, a dreadfully small remnant.

Now someone is calling the number of our company, it is, yes, the company-commander, he has got one too, his arm is in a sling. We go over to him and I recognise Kat and Albert; we stand together, lean against each other, and look at one another.

And we hear the number of our company called again and again. He will call a long time, they do not hear him in the hospitals and shell holes.

Once again: "Second company, this way!"

And then more softly: "Nobody else. Second company?"

He is silent, and then huskily he says: "Is that all?" and gives the order: "Number!"

The morning is gray, it was still summer when we came up, and we were 150 strong. Now we freeze, it is autumn, the leaves rustle, the voices flutter out wearily: "One—two—three—four——" and cease at 32. And there is a long silence before the voice asks: "Anybody else?"—and waits and then says softly: "In squads——" and then breaks off and is only able to finish: Second company——" with difficulty: "Second company—march easy!"

A line, a short line, trudges off into the morning.

Thirty-two men.

They have taken us further back than usual to a field depot so that we can be reorganized. Our company needs more than a hundred reinforcements.

In the meantime, when we are off duty, we loaf around. After a couple of days Himmelstoss comes up to us. He has had the bounce nocked out of him since he has been in the trenches and wants to get on good terms with us. I am willing enough, because I saw how he brought Hale Westhus in when he was hit in the back. Besides he's decent enough to treat us at the canteen when we are out of funds. Only Tjaden is still reserved and suspicious.

But he is won over, too, when Himmelstoss tells us that he is taking the place of the sergeant-cook who has gone on leave. As a proof he produces on the spot two pounds of sugar for us and a half-pound of butter specially for Tjaden. He even sees to it that we are detailed the next two or three days to the cookhouse for potato and turnip peeling. The grub he gives us there is real officers' fare.

Thus for the moment we have the two things a soldier needs for contentment: good food and rest. That's not much when one comes to think of it. A couple of years ago we would have despised ourselves terribly. But now we are quite happy. It is all a matter of habit—even the front-line.

Habit is the explanation of why we seem to forget things so quickly. Yesterday we were under fire, today we act the fool and go foraging through the countryside, tomorrow we go up to the trenches again. We forget nothing really. But so long as we have to stay stroyed long ago, I soon found out here in the field, the front line-days, when they are past, sink down in us like a stone; they are too serious for us to be able to reflect on them at once. If we did that, we should have been de- this much:—terror can be endured so long as a man simply ducks—but it kills, if a man thinks about it.

Just as we turn into animals when we go up to the line, because that is the only thing which brings us through safely, so we turn into wags and loafers when we are out resting. We can do nothing else, it is a sheer necessity. We want to live at any price: so we cannot burden ourselves with feelings which, though they might be ornamental enough in peace time, would be out of place here.

Kemmerich is dead, Hale Westhus is dying, they will have a job with Hans Kramers' body at the Judgment Day, piecing it together after a direct hit; Martens has no legs any more, Meyer is dead, Max is dead, Bever is dead. Hammerling is dead, there are 120 wounded men lying somewhere or other; it is a damnable business, but what has it to do with us now—we live. If it were possible for us to save them, then it would be seen how much we cared—we would have a shot at it though we went under ourselves; for we can be damned quixotic when we like; fear we do not know much about—terror of death, yes; but that is a different matter, that is physical.

But our comrades are dead, we cannot help them, they have their rest—and who knows what is waiting for us? We will make ourselves comfortable and sleep, and eat as much as we can stuff into our bellies, and drink and smoke so that the hours are not wasted. Life is short.

The Once Over

By H. I. PHILLIPS

What Bank Mergers Mean to You—and You, Too!

Sir: Will you please explain the orgy of bank mergers? I never pick up a paper without reading about another big bank consolidation. Is it a new sport of something.—GUS, the Depositor.

Dear Gus: Your curiosity is quite general. It is surprising how few people seem to realize the benefits that will result from the elimination of the smaller banks. In the first place, Gus, the bringing of many banks into one big institution works for economy. It makes it possible to handle money for less money. It gets it from the producer to the consumer with less waste.

◆ ◆ ◆

You take a small bank, Gus. (Go ahead and take one. Everybody else has). Now a small bank can't possibly carry as big a stock of money as a big bank. It can't give the customer as much variety. When you go to a bank for some money you don't want to take whatever the cashier hands you, do you, Gus? Of course not.

◆ ◆ ◆

You want to see the stock. You want to get smart, up to date money. You want to feel that the bank carries the kind of money the best people are using.

◆ ◆ ◆

Now a big powerful bank has resources. Money means nothing to it. It can afford to carry a complete line of money from the latest design dime to the very smartest $10,000 bill. It keeps in touch with things. Then there is the matter of quantity, Gus. When you go to a small bank and ask for a $10,000 bill the cashier probably won't have one in stock. He will suggest that you leave your name and let him order one for you. That's inconvenient. When a man wants a $10,000 bill he wants it quick. Am I right, Gus?

◆ ◆ ◆

Now a big bank can afford to carry show-cases full of them. It can even afford to let a customer take money home on approval.

◆ ◆ ◆

The big bank of today is really a personal service station. It will even tell you the baseball scores, correct your golf faults and solve your bridge problems. It is only a question of time when there will be but one or two big banks in a city and each one will have lounging rooms, swimming pools, tea terraces and afternoon concerts. The bank president of the future will be somebody like Rudy Vallee.

◆ ◆ ◆

There may come a time when most of the banking will be done by big mail order houses. You will have a catalog and you can get your money by mail.

◆ ◆ ◆

It all tends toward bringing money within the reach of the masses and making them like it.

◆ ◆ ◆

This should explain everything to your satisfaction, Gus, and thanks for asking.

STORM CLAIMS LIVES OF TWO

Diminishing Gale Goes Up Atlantic Coast

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 1. (AP)—Excessive rainfall, high winds and two deaths marked the progress of the tropical storm which squirmed northeastward through Georgia today, after entering the state through the Gulf of Mexico.

Shorn of its hurricane force by contact with land, the storm vented its wrath in gales and rain which exacted heavy toll of all communication lines and sent many streams toward the flood stage.

The 30 to 50-mile gales accompanying the storm took one life at Albany, Dewey Moore, 30, carpenter, was killed by flying debris at a crumbling brick cotton gin where he had stopped to repair his automobile.

Mrs. Isham Douberly was electrocuted near Blackshear, Ga., when she came in contact with a high voltage wire blown down by the winds. Otherwise, damage from winds throughout the storm area appeared to be minor.

Late today Brunswick reported a falling barometer and a 50-mile gale, and Savannah was expected to experience 45 to 60-mile winds tonight.

East Georgia in the vicinity of Augusta, which has just emerged from a battle with the Savannah river after it reached a 46-foot stage, the highest in history, again will bear the brunt of a high water stage. The 35-foot stage is expected at Augusta.

Police Arrest Strike Agitator in Kansas City

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 1. (UP)—Roy Stephens, 26-year-old labor organizer who told police he had been arrested in New York and Omaha, Neb., for causing labor disturbances, today was taken from his rostrum among striking Loose-Wiles Biscuit company employes by police. Stephens, who said he was secretary of the "trade union unity league," was attempting to organize the 500 strikers, who are protesting a new wage payment system at the plant.

State's Opening Strategy Throws Alex Pantages' Counsel in Turmoil

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 1. (UP)—Selection of a jury to try Alexander Pantages was started in superior court today after one of two charges accusing the millionaire theater man with attacking 17-year-old Eunice Pringle had been dismissed.

The count dropped upon the motion of Chief Deputy District Attorney Robert P. Stewart, alleged that Pantages had made a forcible assault on the young dancer. Only a charge of statutory assault against a girl under 18 years old remains.

The defense made another futile attempt to obtain a continuance, pleading that the dismissal of the first charge had come as a surprise for which it was not prepared and that Pantages was in poor physical condition. Judge Charles Fricke denied both motions for delay.

With the forcible attack charge dropped, the defense will be unable to introduce evidence regarding the chastity of Miss Pringle and no testimony concerning her past will be permitted, it was said in explanation of the state's strategy.

Christians Should Be Proud Of Christ, Taylor Says in Sermon

"There is a glory in being a Christian not found in any other calling on earth, yet thousands of Christians face the world like whipped curs," said Charlie Taylor Tuesday night at the First Baptist church.

"No American is ashamed of America, no Christian should be ashamed of Christ," the evangelist stated.

"If you claim to be a Christian, then in the name of God, be one. None of your backboneless, retreating, will-less professionalism, but a real seven-day-a-week living of what you believe.

"Every non-Christian is condemned in sin. Christ makes you free. Has not the free man more right to be happy than the slave?

"Every man is accused by the devil before God, but the Christian has an advocate in Christ, one who pleads his cause. Representation at the supreme court of heaven is something to be glad about.

"We are all separated from our friends and possessions by adversity, misunderstanding and death. But all hell can't separate us from the love of Christ."

Wednesday night the young evangelist will speak on a text of two words. There are only three letters in each word, he said, and it is a text that for once the congregation will not forget.

Thursday night will be music night.

S. A. F. E. OPENS NEW SERVICE

Model Station Planned for Wichita

Wichita Falls moved one notch forward in the scale of aerial transportation centers Tuesday when the Safeway air line carried through to completion its announced extension of service to Fort Worth and Dallas, making the Municipal airport here the division point for three branches of the Southwest Air Fast Express.

The first ship in the new service landed at the Municipal port at 9:55 Tuesday morning, just in time to connect with the Sweetwater ship headed north toward Oklahoma City, Tulsa and St. Louis, with connections for Kansas City and other points. At 3:20 Tuesday afternoon, 10 minutes after the southbound ship from Oklahoma City had landed with passengers to be transferred, another of the trimotored, 14 passenger, all metal Ford ships took off for Fort Worth. The Sweetwater bound ship, just in from Oklahoma City, preceded it by a few seconds.

The first southbound ship on the extended schedule made Fort Worth exactly on time, arriving at Meacham field at 4:25, with Capt. Ray Blendorf at the controls and Mate George Todd in charge of the passengers. The final landing at Love field came 20 minutes later, the trip from Wichita Falls requiring exactly one hour and 25 minutes.

The new schedule was put into operation without a hitch although the definite announcements of its inauguration did not reach local traffic agents until Monday afternoon. The service has been permanently incorporated into the Safeway schedules and two ships will cover the distance each day, J. Glenn Grove, local traffic manager, has announced. The initial dispatching of the ships along the extension was supervised by Bob Cantwell, chief pilot of the line, who was in Wichita Falls several hours Tuesday.

At Love field in Dallas, Wichita Falls passengers were given an opportunity to see the model, standard Safeway depot which is soon to become a part of the equipment at the Municipal airport, Mr. Groves has announced. The miniature station is fashioned after the manner of an English cottage, lifting a steep, tiled gable to the skies. Its low door step bears the legend "Safe." Inside is a comfortable waiting room, furnished with wicker rockers and generously supplied with reading material. Behind the railing are the more business like furnishings of the office. Wichita Falls has been promised a replica of the little white cottage within the next few weeks.

BASS PROVIDED FOR 3 LAKES

30,000 Baby Fish Ready for Distribution Here

Thirty thousand bass from three to eight inches in length will be available this month for distribution in Lake Kemp, Diversion lake, and Lake Wichita from the state fish hatchery located near Diversion dam, according to information given by Joe Dixon, superintendent, to Ben G. Oneal, president of the Isaak Walton league chapter here.

This will make a total of 60,000 young bass placed in the fishing waters near Wichita Falls during the present year, 20,000 having been delivered to Lake Kemp and 10,000 to Lake Wichita last spring, Mr. Oneal said.

Mr. Dixon also stated that during the fall the hatchery will be able to supply 60,000 bream each to the three lakes, besides a large number of crappie.

Efforts to obtain the services of an additional game warden for duty in the vicinity of Lake Wichita are being continued, it was said. With adequate protection for that body of water against illegal depredations of its supply of fish, it could be stocked rapidly to afford excellent fishing facilities for citizens of this city, according to Mr. Oneal. The warden now responsible for the Lake Wichita area is required to divide his time between that territory and Diversion lake, it was said.

Robbins Bros. Circus to Arrive Here Early Thursday on Special Train

All set, kids? The trains carrying the much heralded Robbins Bros. circus will arrive over the Fort Worth and Denver railway promptly at 6 o'clock Thursday morning and will begin unloading preparatory to the erection of their 40 tents near the Spudder ball park.

No event in life quite equals that of the circus when it comes to town, from the viewpoint of the lads and lassies of this American continent. Many youngsters will be up bright and early, even before daylight, listening for the first whistle of the approaching circus trains and they begin to pull into the terminal yards.

Chief among the attractions of the show this year is Buck Jones, one of America's famous movie stars, who brings with him his favorite horses, which are also favorites of the movie world. He will have with him his troupe of Hollywood stars and will arrive Thursday morning in a special car. Another of the main features will be Herr Merkel, the human fly, whose act was brought from Europe only a few weeks ago. He will walk, in defiance of all the laws of gravitation, upside down on an improvised ceiling 60 feet in the air. He walks and skips along the ceiling, his feet above his head, with no apparent fear of falling. How he does it is a secret.

Still other features will be the Kanawana troupe of acrobats from Japan, the 600 wild animals and the 200 trained horses.

When a "White Collar Man" Goes into the Army

He's pretty sure to find out something besides how to salute

Worth Leaving a Job to Learn How to Live

YOU might envy a man who makes his living just by writing things on a typewriter, but there's a lot about his job that isn't so good.

So we were told at any rate by Mr. Solon S. Bloom of 3508 Woodbrook Avenue, Baltimore, Md., whose health began to give way because his work kept him bowed over his desk and gave him no bodily exercise.

"I decided to get away to a military training camp," says Mr. Bloom, "thinking the rough and tumble with the army would do me good for a month. I asked the doctor what to do about my condition. 'I've seen men, I've known men,' he said, 'I know what they eat, drink, and how they live. I know cathartics, physics, and all the ways men try to keep themselves regular—and the only two that go together well are men and Nujol. Physics gripe, cathartics take the moisture out of the stomach and intestines; both may be harmful and may become habitual. Nujol gets into the system in the best way, soothes and heals the membranes and expels bodily poisons normally, naturally, easily, so that you are regular as clock work.'"

That was what Mr. Bloom learned when he left his typewriter and went into the army, and you can learn the same thing if you are like most other people.

Remember Nujol is not a medicine, for it contains no drugs of any kind. It is simply bodily lubrication that everybody needs.

You can get a bottle of Nujol at any good drug store, in a sealed package, for the price of a couple of good cigars. If you will start today and try it for two weeks you will agree with Mr. Bloom's discovery that Nujol is the easy normal way to keep well and make a success out of your life. You will be astonished at the results!

BARONS AND STEERS RESUME DIXIE PLAY-OFF SERIES TODAY

HASTY IS MOST LIKELY TO HURL

Victory Today Would Give Barons Series

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Oct. 1. (AP)—The Birmingham Barons, potential Dixie champions, came back home tonight, needing only a victory tomorrow over Dallas to give the Southern association its second southern title in 10 years of play with the Texas league.

Robert Hasty, big Birmingham righthander, is expected to be Johnny Dobbs' choice for hurling duties in his quest for the deciding game while Milton Stock will depend on "Whitey" Glazner, blonde righthander, in an attempt to square the series and send the two teams back to Texas for the seventh game.

Glazner, who got his baseball start on the sand lots of Birmingham, turned in a victory over the Barons Saturday in Dallas, although needing relief to turn the trick. The Barons consider him a hard man to beat but feel confident they will be able to break through before a home crowd.

The Southern association's representatives hopped out in front yesterday with a one game margin by beating George Connally to cover while the ancient Ray Caldwell was holding the Texans safe. It was the latter's second win of the series and Conally's second defeat, the Texas star having dropped a three-hit affray to the Barons in the first game of the series.

The Dallas aggregation did not appear so confident as they did last week when they invaded Rickwood to open the championship battle for they are faced with an almost impossible task of winning two games in a row with their pitching staff pretty well shot.

Indian Colony Resents Help

Alabamas and Coushatis Prefer Simple Life

AUSTIN, Oct. 1. (AP)—Texas' colony of Indians of the Alabama and Coushati tribes, who have been living on a reservation in Polk county since before the days of Gen. Sam Houston, are not entirely pleased with the campaign to modernize their surroundings.

They prefer having the 50 cottages which will be built by the state, with $30,000 appropriated by the legislature, scattered over the approximately 4,000 acres of their reservation instead of arranged along surveyed streets in the form of a village. They would like to live their lives in "the wilds" as near as possible.

The federal government has spent about $40,000 on the colony, building the school house for their use.

Texas not only proposes to put adequate roofs over their heads, but it has made provision to see after their teeth, and general health, having allotted $1,500 annually for salary of a health nurse and $1,000 for dental work. Twelve hundred dollars a year have been set aside for medical purposes. Twenty-six miles of fencing at the cost of $7,500 will be built on the reservation. Texas is spending $49,900 for the colony during the current biennium. Half of the $3,000 annual salary of F. H. Fain, Indian agent, will be paid by the federal government.

City Court Collects $1,973 in September

With a total of 618 arrests made by the police department during the month of September, the collections of the corporation court of Wichita Falls amounted to $1,973 and the fines imposed to $2,343, according to the monthly report of the court issued Tuesday by R. M. Hurst, clerk of the court.

The report indicated a total of 504 cases disposed of in the court, 16 prisoners having served time, 189 having been lodged in jail, six held for other counties, eight transferred to federal authorities, four transferred to state authorities and seven transferred to county authorities. The department recovered 15 stolen automobiles unassisted, with a value of $6,800, and recovered with assistance eight cars with a value of $3,200.

Former Henryetta Mayor Loses Election Dispute

OKLAHOMA CITY, Oct. 1. (UP)—The supreme court held against J. W. Orendorff, former mayor of Henryetta in an election dispute between Orendorff and B. A. Jackson.

Orendorff contended that if a vote in which the ballot had been mutilated had been counted for him, the election would have been a tie and that he would have remained mayor.

The court held the election officials were right in not counting this vote for Orendorff.

Two Left-Handers and the Series.

The present generation of baseball's earnest camp followers may or may not recall a left-hander by the name of Doc White who pitched for the White Sox back in the old days of Ed Walsh and Nick Altrock.

Whether they do or not, Doc White, a Georgetown graduate, was one of the smartest and one of the best left-handers baseball ever knew. At least he was good enough to be the one man that gave Ty Cobb in his early prime more trouble than any other pitcher in the game. Cobb could outguess the others most of the time, but he usually found Doc White outguessing him.

Doc White, minus any great speed, proved what a pitcher could do with brains, courage and control, to say nothing of a curve ball that could make a pretzel look like the shortest distance between two points.

A day or two ago I went out, in Washington, with Ring Lardner, the dramatist, co-author with George Kaufman of "June Moon," to pay a call on the Doc and naturally a discussion of the world series came up. There was one point that White introduced, which others have also mentioned. But it is worth mentioning again.

"I know," he said, "that many people believe Chicago's right-hand hitters will do a lot of damage to Mack's left-handers. But there is one point they may have overlooked. Grove and Walberg are not two ordinary left-handers. They have more stuff than anything the Cubs have seen this season. When these two work I think the Cubs will look at more speed than any of them have seen in a long time. And speed isn't all of the story. They have the rest of it. I don't believe any ball club is going to murder this pair. They can pitch. The Cubs may win, but I don't believe they are going to win by driving these two left-handers off the field."

Hitting and Pitching

This is one series where both the hitters and the pitchers are in a tough spot. There is an extra allotment of heavy artillery on both sides, but the batters must tackle such pitchers as Grove, Walberg, Earnshaw, Bush, Malone, Root, Blake and others.

There is excellent pitching power on both sides, but the pitchers must hold back such talent as Foxx, Simmons, Cochrane, Haas, Miller, Wilson, Hornsby, Cuyler and Stephenson. It is seldom that any world series has such combined pitching and batting strength in two casts.

The struggle among the pitchers to check the heavy hitting will be matched by the struggle of the heavy hitters to break through good pitching in every game. All this sharpens up the competition.

The Yankees had both in 1927 and 1928 and the snappy result was eight straight victories over the Pirates and Cardinals, who were not blessed with any such combination. The Pirates and Cardinals couldn't hit Yankee pitching and the Yankees could blast opposing pitchers from the lot. The case is different this year. There is no margin of hard hitting and good pitching either way.

It is quite natural that Dr. Mack doesn't care to go too far in making any world series predictions. He still remembers his last one. He had a ball club that slaughtered the Cubs and Giants in 1910, 1911 and 1913. In 1914 he faced the Boston Braves. The Braves had no hitting strength to match Collins, Baker and McInnis. They had no pitching that should have outclassed Plank, Bender and Coombs. The dope certainly had to favor a ball club that had won four pennants in five years and three world series out of three starts. So far as the dope went the best the Braves could be given was just a scrappy chance, an outside shot.

But for all that the Braves won in four straight games. Rudolph, Tyler and James outpitched Mack's able headliners. Hank Gowdy outhit any two of Mack's slugging wonders. That series did something more than cost Connie another championship. It also cost him a great ball club and about 14 years of mental anguish. He dismantled his cast in the hope and belief he could build another winner quickly as he had done before more than once. But after spending the next si xseasons in the cellar he found that fate doesn't always lead with the same hand. It has taken him 15 years to get back where he used to be on top of the surf. But after that world series of 1914 he understands the futility of any prediction. He has a fine ball club ready for the big show, but so has Joe McCarthy. Mack has better catching and a better outfield than he had with the old guard, but there has been no better pitching staff then Bender, Plank and Coombs, and no better infield than McInnis, Collins, Barry and Baker.

Mack has been in five world series engagements. From this number he has won three and dropped two. He is now facing one of the toughest of them all, but he knows the other party is in the same fix, and that at least is something.

Gould, Okla., Store Loses $1,000 in Raid

Special to The Record News.

HOLLIS, Okla., Oct. 1.—The Gardners Dry Goods store of Gould was robbed Sunday night of approximately $1,000 of merchandise. The merchandise included a full rack of ladies' silk dresses, practically the entire stock of ladies' lingerie, about eight men's suits, several top coats, several suitcases, shoes and other clothing.

Both the front and back doors of the store were discovered open Monday morning. It was evident that entry was made at both doors with a simple wedge. The combination knob had been knocked off the safe in an unsuccessful effort to open it. Much of the goods left in the store was disarranged.

No trace of the robbers has been found yet. Sheriff Ed Smith is in charge of the investigation. The Ed Thompson blacksmith shop missed a number of tools such as a sledge hammer, chisel and punch Monday morning. The tools were left on the floor of the store. The B. F. Cannady filling station reported the theft of some gasoline Monday morning. It is believed that the robbery was committed by professional thieves, coming here from some distance. This is the third time in the past two years that the dry goods store has been robbed.

Satan Himself Seems to Have Opposed This Church Service

HASLAM, Texas, Oct. 1. (AP)—Night services recently at the Haslam Union church were considerably beset with difficulties

An automobile crash nearby was the first thing to disturb the worship. A young man ran his car into a post, wrecking it and hurting one of his hands badly

Just as the congregation re entered the house and began singing the first song, two automobiles met in a head-on collision. Both cars were wrecked but no one was hurt.

The opening song finally was sung and the minister began reading his text. About that time a black cat, which had followed its owner to church, had a fit in the aisle. The feline was removed and order again restored.

REDS EDGE OUT CUBS BY 3-2

Hornsby Gets Three Hits in Four Trips

CINCINNATI, Oct. 1. (AP)—The Cubs outhit the Reds seven safe drives to six in the opener of a five-game series here today but the home team bunched three blows with an error in the eighth to nose out the new champions, 3 to 2. Red Lucas not only scattered the Chicago blows save in the second, but led the eighth inning assault upon Guy Bush with a single. Swanson followed this blow hith a single, and Critz then tripled, tieing the score. Critz himself scored the winning run a moment later when Grimm threw wildly to the plate after fielding Walker's bounder.

Cuyler's triple and Stephenson's single gave the Bruins one run in the second, and Ford's error and McMillan's single added another. It was Lucas' 19th victory and Bush's seventh defeat.

Rogers Hornsby got three singles in four trips to the plate, lifting his batting average three points to .380. Score:

S. M. U. Coach Locks Gate On Team's Drill Session

DALLAS, Oct. 1. (AP)—Locked gates have for the last two days greeted visitors to Ownby stadium where Coach Ray Morrison is priming Southern Methodist university for the intersectional tilt with Nebraska Saturday at Lincoln.

As the Ponies displayed almost an utter lack of scoring power in their game with the Denton Teachers and Howard Payne, it is certain they will open a bag full of tricks against the Huskers. Practice sessions indicate they will fill the air with footballs at Lincoln, as Morrison has little hopes of breaking through the powerful Nebraskans with a running attack.

The Ponies will be put through a stiff scrimmage tomorrow, with only a light workout scheduled Thursday before the squad leaves for Lincoln.

Baylor Coach Looks For Fight From Trinity Tigers

WACO, Texas, Oct. 1. (AP)—Facing a game Saturday with the Trinity Tigers, but with all plans being laid for the Arkansas Razorbacks, the Baylor Bruins continued practice behind barred gates today.

Coach Marley Jennings expressed his opinion today that the Tigers would put up a fight, and is hoping, he says, that they will open up against his eleven with a strong aerial attack.

There will be no change in the lineup Saturday, Jennings announced.

ONLY ONE UPSET IN WOMANS GOLF

N. J. Girl Wallops "Old Man Par"

By PAUL R. MICKELSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

OAKLAND HILLS, Birmingham, Mich., Oct. 1. (AP)—Sweeping over the trap-sliced Oakland Hills course with probably the most meteoric round of golf ever carded by a woman, Mureen Orcutt of White Beeches, N. J., halted the march of Helen Hicks in the initial match play skirmishes of the women's national championship today.

Miss Orcutt gave old man par a merciless threshing and her 18-year-old rival from Hewlett, Long Island, couldn't keep up though she played better than perfect golf. Miss Orcutt strode over the first nine holes in 35 strokes, to equal men's par and better women's par six strokes. It was easily the best round registered in the national events 33 years of play.

Most of the favorites including the defending champion, Glenna Collett, sailed through today's rounds. One glaring exception, however, was the upset of Mrs. Alexa Stirling Fraser, of Ottawa, Can., three times national champion, by a comparatively champion far off her game, Miss Hunter blasted out a two-up victory.

Another record for national tournament play fell today, when Mrs. Leo Federman, an in-and-outer from New York, and Mrs. Helen B. Stetson of Philadelphia, 1926 champion, fought to the 24th green before the New York player won. All square at the end of the regulation 18 holes both missed several chances to win but on the 24th, Mrs. Federman slapped a pretty shot from the rough to within four feet of the pin and then sank her putt for a birdie three and the match.

K. C. CLUB PILOT IS BANQUETED

Little World's Series Opening Game Today

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 1. (UP)—Kansas City gave a banquet today for Manager "Dutch" Zwilling and his Blues in celebration of the first American association pennant brought to this city since 1923 and to launch the team on the little world's series which opens Wednesday against the Rochester Red Wings, International league champions.

Manager Billy Southworth declined an invitation to bring his team to the dinner and put them through batting and fielding practice at Muehlebach field during the afternoon.

The Rochester manager said he would make his pitching selection shortly before the game started, but that he would use either Bell or Derringer if Day works for Kansas City.

Zwilling had indicated he probably would start Thomas or Day. Rochester will use Florence in the backstop position and Kansas City Peters.

The opening day crowd was expected to reach 60,000 on the basis of advance ticket sales.

FOOD COMBINATIONS

In yesterday's article I gave you a list of foods in their different classifications. Today's article will be concerned entirely with how these foods may be properly combined.

Protein Combinations

When a protein food is used it is best to observe one of these rules:

Use one protein by itself.

Use one protein with either cooked non-starchy vegetables or with an uncooked one, or with a selection from both the cooked and uncooked vegetables.

Use of the above combination with the addition of one kind of stewed fruit.

No highly starchy food should be used in combination with any of the proteins. An exception can be made with those of good digestions if they wish to use a small amount of real whole wheat bread or wholewheat crackers.

No more than one protein should be used at any one meal.

A small amount of milk may be used with such proteins as eggs, providing the milk and eggs are cooked together, which seems to blend their proteins in a digestible form.

Starch Combinations

Make a meal entirely of one kind of starchy food.

Combine one starchy food with one or more cooked and raw non-starchy vegetables.

Do not use either acid or stewed fruits with any kind of highly starchy food.

Do not use protein foods at the same meal with the starchy food. For example, do not use meat and rice together, and do not use two kinds of starchy foods at the same meal. For example, do not use spaghetti and bread at the same meal.

Non-Starchy Combinations

Cooked or uncooked non-starchy vegetables may be used with any single article of food.

There is no food material with which non-starchy vegetables do not mix. For example, they may be used with either proteins, starches, stewed fruits, acid fruits or fats and oils.

Fats and Oils Combinations

Any of the vegetables or animal oil may be used with any of the other classified foods, providing such foods are not cooked in the fats or oils.

Acid Fruit Combinations

Any one acid fruit may be used in combination with any one protein, with any of the non-starchy vegetables, or with protein and non-starchy vegetable combinations.

Acid fruit should not be used at a meal containing starchy foods.

Stewed Fruit Combination

Any one kind of stewed fruit may be used with one protein or in combination with a protein and non-starchy vegetable. Stewed fruit may be used with any of the non-starchy vegetables. A small amount of any ope stewed fruit may be used at a meal containing real wholewheat bread.

Tomorrow's article will explain about proportions and quantities of the foods discussed in the last two articles.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Pinguecula and Pterygium

Question—G. H. Asks: "Is there any cure for pinguecula or pterygium?"

Answer—The diseases you have named mean formations on the cornea of the eye which are due to irritation from some cause such as outside infection through dust or bacteria, or from an over-acid secretion of the eye lubricants. This trouble can be checked and even cured by proper dieting and the use of a simple eye wash applied several times daily.

Toast

Question—H. V. N. writes: "You say when making melba toast to use white bread and cut all the crust away. Why not use wholewheat and leave the crust on the slices?"

Answer—I suggest cutting away the crust as it has already been "toasted" in the original baking of the loaf, and will burn before the inside of the slice is sufficiently dextrinized. The average wholewheat bread which is made partly of white flour may be used in making melba toast, but the real wholewheat bread, if toasted through, develops a bitter taste because of the burning of the protein and bran elements. Wholewheat bread only partially toasted makes an excellent food if there is no reason why you should not use the starch which it contains.

Arthritis

Question—G. H. asks: "What is arthritis—what are its causes? Everyone seems to have a different definition for it."

Answer—Arthritis simply means rheumatism in the joints. Acute inflamatory rheumatism is sometimes found in the muscles but most rheumatism, including arthritis, comes from a deposit of rheumatic toxins in the joints.

Rio Grande Produce Crop Promising

SAN BENITO, Texas, Oct. 1. (AP)—The best produce year in the history of the lower Rio Grande valley, with an acreage of 20 per cent larger than that of last year, and with at least 30,000 carloads of fruits and vegetables expected to move, is predicted by shippers at the outset of the planting season.

The valley shipped approximately 25,000 carloads last season. Of the expected increase from 1,500 to 2,000 carloads probably will be citrus fruit and the remainder vegetables. The weather, financial condition of the farmers, advance preparation and crop conditions in other sections are among the factors which have contributed to the predictions of a record year. The only serious drawback seems to be the possibility of a labor shortage. If that materializes more of the small tract farmers will do their own work, it was stated.

Indications now point to about the same acreage of potatoes, a large increase in tomatoes, about the same in cabbage, and an increase in carrots, beets and beans, with scattering increases in the minor crops, it was said.

Harmon County to Have National Dairy Exhibit

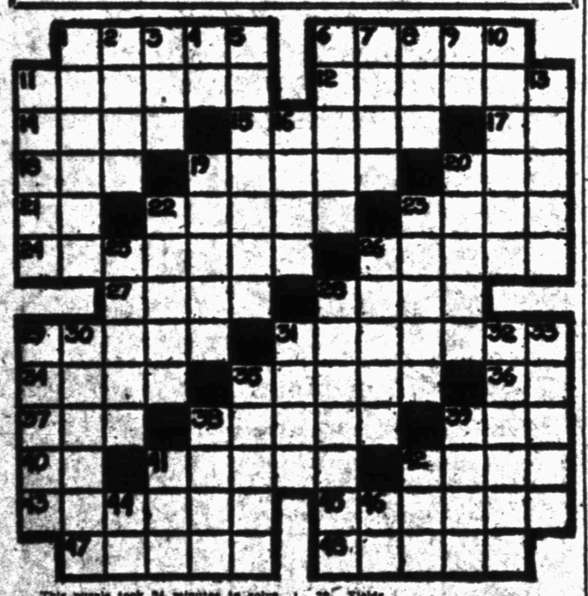

Special to The Record News

HOLLIS, Okla., Oct. 1.—Harmon county will have an exhibit at the National Dairy show at St. Louis, to be held the middle of October, according to Secretary Ratekin, of the chamber of commerce.

So far as is known this will be the first time in the history of the county that a dairy exhibit has been made at any state or national show. Many farmers are taking enthusiastic interest in the dairy project and are planning to build up profitable dairy herds.

HUFF LEADS VOTERS' LIST

Pioneer Is Again First to Qualify Here

Judge R. E. Huff, pioneer of Wichita Falls, Tuesday became the first Wichita county citizen qualified to vote as he had done for 21 consecutive years preceding.

Tuesday was the first day on which city, county and school taxes could be paid, and on which poll tax receipts and exemption certificates could be issued for the new year, it was explained by Guy C. Raley, county tax collector.

Judge Huff procured exemption certificate No. 1, while Judge and Mrs. J. P. Jones, also pioneers, received certificates Nos. 2 and 3. Poll tax receipt No. 1 was obtained by Mr. Raley and No. 2 by Mrs. Raley.

Joe Webb, 1323 Twenty-first street, was the first to pay state and county taxes for the new year and Mrs. Mollie McElroy, 807 Burnett avenue, was the second.

TEXAS LIVESTOCK

FORT WORTH, Oct. 1. (AP)—(U. S. D. A.)—Except for canners all classes of cattle and calves at Fort Worth today were slow, with butcher and beef cows tending lower. No early sales of steers with few bulls offered fully steady. Few morning sales in sheep division 25c to 50c lower, aged shorn fat wethers at $6.50. No early sales in the rail division for hogs, with truck sales 15c to 25c lower on the sales made.

About nine loads of slaughter steers offered. Most of them were low costing common steers with two loads of fairly good quality cattle that lacked finish. Bids about steady.

Bulls fully steady, heavy bulls at $7.25 and common light bulls at $5.75 to $6.25.

Slaughter yearlings and heifers about steady with carloads due to sell at $10.00 and $11.00.

Cows and mixed loads made up the bulk of the grown cattle supply with fat cows tending lower. Canners and cutters fairly active with order buyers adding to competition and some sales a little higher. Canners sold at $4.75 in carload lots; cutters at $5.60. Order buyers paid up to $5.00 for thin cows.

Not many good calves included in the day's supply with packers paying up to $9.50 for fairly good heavy calves or about steady. Culls around $6.00, order buyers paid up to $10.00 for heavy calves.

A few shorn aged wethers sold at $6.50, or a further decline of 25c to 50c. Bulk of the sheep unsold.

Hogs slow with a lower tendency in evidence. No morning sales in the rail division.

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Oct. 1. (AP)—Unfavorable weather and crop reports were reflected by increasing strength in the cotton market today. Broadening demand sent prices up to 19.08 for December and 19.38 for March or 34 to 38 points above yesterday's closing quotations. December closed at 19.04 and March at 19.33 with the general market closing steady at net advances of 31 to 36 points.

The market opened steady at an advance of 14 to 20 points on apprehensions of storm damage to cotton in the eastern belt, and Liverpool cables. Southern hedging was absorbed on slight setbacks. The demand seemed to receive impetus from a private crop report making the condition 52.4 compared with a report of 57.7 by the same authority a month ago. Some bullish crop advices also reached here with reference to the effects of recent wet weather in the eastern belt as well as to the tropical storm. Buying was quite general in the late trading, when active months sold 34 to 38 points above yesterday's closing quotations and about 56 points above the low level of last Saturday in the case of December contracts.

Closing quotations were a few points off from the best under realizing. Part of the late buying was supposed to be in anticipation of bullish features in the weekly report of the weather bureau tomorrow, particularly with reference to the eastern belt conditions.

Liverpool cables reported continental and Bombay buying in that market on the southern storm news. Exports today 47,551. Port receipts 86,388. U. S. port stocks 1,189,368.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 1. (AP)—Cotton was active today and prices advanced on fears that heavy rains in the eastern belt will reduce crop prospects. Cables were higher than due. As a result prices were on the upgrade all day, opening 12 to 13 points higher and showing gains of 34 to 38 points just before the close. December which closed yesterday at 18.52 advanced to 18.89, up 37 points and closed at 18.86 or 34 points net higher for the day. The general market closed very steady at net gains of 33 to 42 points.

Liverpool came in 6 to 9 points better than due and first trades here showed gains of 12 to 13 points. Bad weather in the eastern belt stimulated prices and at the end of the first hour December traded at 18.70, January at 18.80 and March at 19.04 or 17 to 18 points above the previous close.

Although there were slight reactions on realizing prices continued to advance nearly all day. With speculative buying active the highs of the day came at the end with December up to 18.89, January to 18.97 and March to 19.24 or 34 to 38 points above the previous close. The close was at or near the best with active months 33 to 36 points net higher for the day.

Stock Market Averages Close Lower Under Continued Pressure

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, Oct. 1. (US)—Continued pressure against the general stock list today forced numerous leaders down to new lows on the movement and many issues down to the lowest quotations of the year. The pressure was lifted for a while during the early afternoon chiefly on the covering by shorts and rallies of a few points ensued from the bottom. Nevertheless the buying was not maintained and the averages closed the day at lower levels. "Resistance" points, at which the better grade stocks, such as Steel Common, were to exhibit strength, were easily broken on comparatively small volume. Steel Common sold down to 218¾ before it rallied a few points to close ⅝ off for the day.

During the morning session the selling in a few issues became drastic. International Combustion was one of the chief sufferers as substantial long lines were liquidated because of inadequate margins. Recessions of 10 points or more occurred in numerous issues before some signs of support were forthcoming. The volume of trading remained below five million shares, a fact which was interpreted to mean that widespread public liquidation has not yet taken place.

Radio furnished the bullish contingent with some degree of comfort by staging a rally which lifted its price more than four points and in reality instituted short covering elsewhere. The advance in Radio was occasioned chiefly against the short interest, which in this particular issue had grown to sizeable proportion. The remainder of the market, however, has only a small short interest, brokers declaring that the borrowing demand for stocks is surprisingly light. It was noticeable that the Public Utility shares yielded more readily to comparatively light selling, many of the stocks in this group declining to the lowest prices of several weeks. Consolidated Gas broke through 150 before rallying. Failure of usually effective bullish ammunition was displayed in Montgomery Ward, which sold down to a new low on the movement in the face of an announced 25 per cent gain in sales for September.

While the great body of stocks were steadily declining, Burroughs Adding Machine and Remington-Rand achieved record high prices. Their ability to withstand the selling added strength to the expectation that the two companies would be united in a single organization which would rank as the largest of its kind in the office-equipment industry.

The rally which developed was helped along by a rumor to the effect that Roger Babson, the economist who recently forecast a spectacular break in the stock prices, had changed his opinion and would modify his views in an address after the close. Whatever his opinion it had no direct influence on prices today but was merely utilized to frighten the short interest into covering. Developments of the day, such as an increase in steel operations, exerted little influence on prices. It is merely a question of how powerfully protected the general public is in regard to margins. The big professional operators are on the sidelines.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Oct. 1. (AP)—Wheat suffered a decided setback today on severe downturns in stock market values. The lowest prices of the day were reached during the final transactions.

Closing quotations on wheat were heavy, 1⅛c to 1⅞c a bushel lower than yesterday's finish. Corn closed ¼c to ⅝c down, oats ⅛c to ⅝c off and provisions ranging from 5c decline to an equal advance.

Extreme nervousness prevailed as the day drew to an end. Earlier, the fact that sterling exchanges had risen to the highest level since July, 1928, and that this circumstance appeared likely to stimulate export demand, was hopefully noted in various quarters. Comment on unusual moisture shortage in the principal wheat growing region of Canada was likewise a source of buying that caused temporary price rallies.

Overshadowing all other factors, however, was the disturbing effect of violent tumbles in stock market prices. Under this influence, wheat values crumpled, and buying support for future deliveries of wheat was waning fast when the gong stopped trading. Purchases today of North American wheat to be shipped to Europe were estimated at 750,000 bushels. The world's available supply of wheat was reported as having increased 21,505,000 bushels for the week, making the total now 414,998,000 bushels compared with 244,244,000 bushels a year ago.

Corn and oats weakened with wheat. Weather over the corn belt was generally favorable, with the forecast pointing to a continuance.

Provisions were easier, influenced by downturns in the value of hogs.

MIDWESTERN LIVESTOCK

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 1. (AP)—(U. S. D. A.)—Hog prices around the 11-market circuit sank to the lowest levels since the forepart of February. A few early sales were completed on a 15-25c lower basis. The day's extreme top of $10.45 was paid at Chicago. Offerings 86,700.

Fat lamb trade was slow at generally steady to 25c lower figures, while aged stock held around steady. A few choice native lambs in Chicago made $13.00. Supply 77,600.

Receipts of cattle estimated at 59,700. Trade continued slow on killing classes with better grades of native fed steers and yearlings holding around steady but other offerings on a weak to 25c lower basis. Packers were especially bearish on the lower grades of steers and fat she stock. Light weight stockers of good to choice quality command a 50c to $1.00 premium over comparable grades of feeders.

FALL PASTURES IN GOOD SHAPE

Ample Supply of Forage Provided Herds

Considerable aid to farmers and cattle men of this community in the matter of live stock feeding has been derived from the rains which fell plentifully during the middle part of the past month, according to reports brought in from rural districts Tuesday.

Pastures in Wichita and surrounding counties were endowed with a prolific growth of grass during the spring as a result of frequent heavy rains, and until well into the summer, afforded unusually good grazing for the many herds maintained in this territory.

Native forage suffered materially during the intensely hot weather of July and early August, and during the following 30 days offered meager picking for grazing cattle. Following the rains of September, however, with numerous warm days, a new growth of grass has sprung up quickly. It will serve for some time yet as the principal source of feed for range and dairy herds, it was stated. Alfalfa fields also are expected to benefit materially from the new supply of moisture, with much better chances for successful production of fifth and in some cases, sixth crops during the year.

The importance of a plentiful supply of grass throughout the major portion of th year, which decreased with the great reduction in ranching in this section, has been greatly increased through the extensive development of dairying activities. With numerous large herds of milk cows in all parts of the county to be maintained, the addition of several weeks of good pasture feeding as a result of recent rains was regarded as of great value to farmers and dairymen.

Wichita county gins turned out 520 bales of cotton Tuesday to bring the season's total to 5,518.

CHAIN BANKING VIRTUES TOLD

Chicago Financier Explains New Movement

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 1. (UP)—The "full dinner basket" will be filled to even greater roundness under the new American system of chain, group and branch banking, in the opinion of C. B. Hazlewood, retiring president of the American Bankers association, in session here.

"This era of huge banking organizations may seem to be taking finance further away from the bread and butter interests of the great mass of our people," Hazlewood told The United Press today, "but it should not be considered as doing any such thing."

Hazlewood, who is vice president of the First National Bank of Chicago, has been one of the outstanding speakers of the present convention on the subject of the new movement in American banking.

"We are witnessing some of the outstanding developments, the most significant changes and the most constructive thinking in banking history," he said.

"Bankers have learned to measure themselves by the needs and requirements of their customers. Insofar as bigger banks mean stronger instrumentalities to co-operate with industry, and stimulate well considered trade activities, they mean more economic production and distribution, steadier employment and larger payrolls.

"These things are the basis of the welfare of all our people."

"Prosperous plain people," the banker said, will bring success to the men who administer banks who "remember with due humility."

"So long as these great institutions mean increased stability and safety for savings and investments," said Hazlewood, "they serve intimately the every day welfare of great masses of our people.

"Small, well conducted banks meet these ends also, but big banks, where conditions warrant them, do so on larger scales and equally well.

The address of A. V. Morton, vice president of the Pennsylvania Company for Insurance on Lives and Granting of Annuities, read to the convention by John C. Mechem of Chicago, commented especially on the increased service that trust companies are giving under the merger banking system.

"There are more than 3,200 active trust departments in the country," Morton's paper said. "Whereas only 165 were in operation before 1900. The greatest increase has been since 1920, 1,807 having been established in less than nine years."

Today { At the Theaters
By W. L. UNDERWOOD

MAJESTIC: Ruth Chatterton and Clive Brook in "Charming Sinners." A fine play if you can hear what they say. Talking comedy. Vitaphone vaudeville. Paramount sound news.

STRAND: "A Dangerous Woman," with Baclanova, Clive Brook and Neil Hamilton. Composite reproduction of other good plays. Talking comedy. Vitaphone vaudeville. Movietone news.

OLYMPIC: Sally O'Neill in "The Girl on the Barge." Comedy. Pathe news. Lillian Murry and company on stage.

GEM: Clara Bow in "The Wild Party." Comedy.

Evolutionists teach us that such appendages as wings, feet, and ears have been developed gradually on living creatures as the result of constant use in rendering particular service to the proprietor. Following the same theory, it appears probable that if talkies survive as the public's principal entertainment, our children's children will be equipped with large, extensive ears like the jack-rabbit's. The average person's ear-spread now is much too small to gather in the volume of tone wave required for even a fair understanding of what it's all about. Could statistics be it's all about. Could statistics be found that at least half the daily crop of headaches originates with too great and prolonged tension on the auditory nerve in an earnest effort to be entertained at the talkie theaters.

The house in which "Charming Sinners" is now showing has given its patrons exceptionally clear sound projection during the entire year until the present film arrived. There has been no play shown on the screen here which depended so heavily upon clear audition for constant dialog for the progress of dramatic developments, and in this photographed-play it appears that the manufacturers turned out a sour cake. During the closing moments of the performance, when lines were almost exclusively given to the three principals in close-up shots, speech was quite intelligible. But the garbled mumbling of the early portions give one who has not read the play practically no idea of its motivation, or the three major lines of action.

Which brings to mind some pointed observations made by Gilbert Seldes in "Harper's" in a criticism which aims, not to consign the talkies summarily to the land of yo-yo's, but to point out some of its problems. With the exception of the gabble of Groucho in "The Coconuts," he says, speech in the movie-talkies is too slow; the lip movements do not coincide with the speech; speech still fails to come from the mouth of the speaker; voices are not easily differentiated, and sounds are differentiated hardly at all; acoustics of theaters may be faulty; and sobs, or angry voices hurled rapidly back and forth in highly dramatic moments, cause giggles in the audience instead of deep emotion, as was intended.

One does not need to be a precocious critic to recognize that Mr. Seldes has put his finger on many of the elements in talkie-drama which relieve it effectively of all entertaining qualities save that of its novelty—for it still is new. In "A Dangerous Woman," now at the Strand, a very acceptable play with an excellent cast is reduced to exasperating boredom by its dependence upon speech which comes out only as booming, muffled, inarticulate noises.

"A Dangerous Woman" has the elements of a highly effective drama. It presents not the spectacle of a new garment with old patches, but of large sections from excellent old weaves brought together with new thread under a fascinating title. Stewart Edward White's stirring novel, "The Leopard Woman"; Jeanne Eagels' great stage success, "Rain"; and the same actress' screen play, "The Letter," actually shout their presence in the plot and atmosphere of "A Dangerous Woman." The superstitious natives, the acclimated English lackey, maddening isolation from English-speaking whites, "the rains," beating monotonously on the roof for weeks—and the restful charm of a beautiful woman to the wearied government officers—these well-known elements combine smoothly for an effective play.

For those who enjoy a vibrant, musical voice with passionate feeling uppermost in its quality, "A Dangerous Woman" will offer several minutes of satisfying entertainment. Whether it really was Baclanova singing is of no consequence, but it appeared to be a genuine reproduction without doubling. She is supposed to have gained success in operatic roles in Russia before migrating to Hollywood. No one expects to understand what she says, in broken English, so the songs are given in a foreign tongue. But the tones are one of the strongest features of the performance.

CIRCUS FOR KIDS

Needy Children Here to Attend Show Free Of Charge

Twenty-five children of the Texas Children's Aid society will attend the Hagenback-Wallace circus here on Oct. 7 along with the children of the Day Nursery as guests of the circus management, the Wichita Daily Times and Record News, according to an announcement made Tuesday.

The Hagenback-Wallace management customarily extends to children who are not so situated as to provide for their own attendance at the circus the privilege of enjoying the display of animals and other attractions which the circus affords, it was stated.

OIL LEADERS MEET OCT. 3

Deep Drilling Committee Invites Opinions

Further progress toward the inauguration of a deep oil drilling campaign in this section is expected to develop Thursday, Oct. 3, when the planning committee appointed at a meeting of 75 interested business men last Friday will meet at 3 p. m. in the office of N. H. Martin, chairman, in the Hamilton building to consider plans for an organization.

It was announced Tuesday that the meeting to be held Thursday afternoon will be in the nature of an open hearing, and any persons wishing to offer suggestions or plans to the committee are invited to be present.

The first meeting of the planning committee was held Tuesday morning at Mr. Martin's office, when its organization was completed with the election of Mr. Martin as chairman and J. C. Mytinger as secretary. Others present were W. M. McGregor, J. J. Perkins, Dr. A. B. Edwards of Henrietta, and Luther Webb of Vernon. Frank Powers of Archer City was the only absentee.

The planning committee includes four representatives of Wichita county, one each from Clay and Wilbarger and one from Archer and Young counties combined. The meeting at which its formation was provided stipulated that it is to be self-perpetuating. Any vacancies which may occur are to be filled by the committee, maintaining the same proportion of representation by districts.

Upon the completion of a definite plan for operation, it will be presented to another general meeting of oil and business men from the counties concerned, it was announced.

An application for a new trial was filed before Judge W. W. Cook on behalf of Iowa Park.

Burk Man Fined $100 On Vagrancy Charge

A fine of $100 and costs was imposed by a jury in justice court at Burkburnett Tuesday upon a man accused of vagrancy after a 17-year-old girl had appeared as the principal state witness, according to information given by L. V. Abernathy, assistant county attorney, who prosecuted the case.

The fine is the highest imposed in the county on such a charge in several months, the prosecutor said.

Attorneys for the defendant filed a formal motion for a new trial before Judge H. I. Johnson.

Church Greatest Organized Force For Righteousness, Says Evangelist

"Despite the imperfections and blunders of the church, it is the greatest organized force for righteousness that we have in this present day," declared Evangelist Albert E. Davis in his sermon at the Wichita Gospel Tabernacle, 200 Buchanan street, Tuesday night.

"Jesus meant what He said and said what He meant when He announced that upon this rock I build my church and the gates of hell will not prevail against it. The rock of which He was speaking was not a human being, but the power of Divine Revelation which is given to every man so that he can know for himself that Jesus Christ is the Son of the living God. In all of our denominational ranks we have men who have had the vision and have stemmed the tide of worldliness and ungodliness. It was because of this revelation that the ministry of John Wesley averted a bloody war in England. It was because of this revelation that John Knox became so mighty in prayer that Queen Mary of Scotts said that she feared his prayers more than she did the armies of Europe. It was because of this revelation that we have Dr. A. B. Simpson bringing to the world the wonderful truth of divine healing. Doctor Simpson was a product of the Presbyterian church. Thank God for a church which can produce such a man as Doctor Sampson."

Various churches of the city were represented in the audience as is always the case in the "Davis meetings."

Rev. Mr. Davis stated that it was not the design of this revival to pull people out of their churches. The only objective of the meeting was to edify the body of Christ and save souls and heal bodies, he declared.

South Coleman Well Promising

Special to The Record News

COLEMAN, Texas, Oct. 1.—Joines and others' No. 1 Stewartson, nine miles south of Santa Anna has prospects at the present time of opening a new producing area in south Coleman county. This well, located near the northeast corner of section 96, G. L. Stewartson land, encountered 1,000,000 cubic feet of gas in sand at 1457-59 feet, and oil at 1459½ feet. The well has flowed several times during the last two days, and at the present time the hole has considerable cavings in it, which has prevented an accurate test. Company scouts have estimated the well from 50 to 75 barrels per day. The producing sand correlates with the Brenecke horizon, which is producing in the pool west of Santa Anna. This well is approximately seven miles from the nearest oil production.

In the Eastland Oil company pool seven miles northeast of Coleman, the White Eagle Nos. 6 and 8 Morris were drilled in Sunday. No. 6 gauged 20 barrels per hour, and No. 8 swabbed 145 barrels in the first 24 hours. The Permian Oil company and Gibson & Johnson No. 1 Crowder, the banner well in the pool to date, gauged 1,834 barrels Monday, and has produced to date approximately $30,000 barrels of oil.

It was announced that Mrs. Davis and C. A. Spragins of this city were elected directors of the tenth district of the state association.

Plans recently made by the Community chest for its work during the coming months were discussed by Mr. Kelly.

GRAY FIELD TO REMAIN IDLE

Operators Agree on Full Shut Down

Special to The Record News

TULSA, Okla., Oct. 1.—Except for the White Eagle Oil and Refining company, a 100 per cent agreement to continue the shutdown of 27 wells on top of the pay in the Bowers-Finley-Brown and west LaFors pools of Gray county in the Panhandle field of northwest Texas was reached Tuesday at Pampa. At the morning session all operators agreed to not drill in the 27 wells until Nov. 1, but the White Eagle asked for another hearing and in the afternoon it expressed its objection and favored a proration plan.

It was finally allowed to let the White Eagle drill in its No. 1 Faulkner, in section 29, block B2, and to allow three or four offsets to be drilled in, so as to hold contracts.

Operators and company representatives will meet at Pampa on Oct. 30 to decide the next move. In the meanwhile Oklahoma City operators are discussing the adoption of the 50 per cent curtailment plan for its producing wells when the 100 per cent shutdown ends Oct. 12. The Wright-Valley Center shutdown goes into effect in Kansas on Oct. 5.

East Earlsboro pool of Seminole field made 23,500 barrels Tuesday or 1,500 barrels under what amount sought in a 50 per cent proration plan for that flush area.

The long friendship existing between the two families concerned and the accidental nature of the tragedy were given as reasons for not filing charges, Woodall said.
