Commissioners vote to join in water study

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Lopsided dissent over Midland Draw once again struck the Midland County Commissioners during their regular meeting Monday.

But they, nevertheless, unanimously agreed to join with the city of Midland in spending $53,000 on a hydrological study of Midland's underground water and to search for "every possible alternative for temporary relief" of the water problem.

Commissioner Win Brown cast the only negative vote in the commissioners' 3-1 vote to hire an "outside" hydrologist — William F. Guyton & Associates of Austin — to make a $15,000 study to back up or dispute the findings of Midland's hydrology firm, Ed L. Reed & Associates.

A third suggestion on the same problem came during a border-line melee setting. In that portion of the meeting, Commissioner Charlie Welch's motion for a hearing before the Texas Department of Water Resources to get "lifted" Midland's permit to primarily treat sewer water died for lack of a second. Welch contends that the city "can't live" within its permit and never has.

But Welch didn't expect support from his peers.

"I FEEL THAT the court is being very cautious," Welch said in explaining the non-support of his motion. He said the court, including Commissioners Durward Wright, C. DeWayne Davis and Brown and County Judge Bill Ahders, is striving to "maintain harmony between the two governing bodies (the city and the county)."

"And well they should, but at what cost?" he asked. Welch suggested that it's "possible" that the welfare and health of "the people" might be sacrificed for too much harmony and good will.

In recent weeks, Welch has been outspoken in his criticism of the city's management of its sewage treatment plant and handling of primary-treated effluent and of the city's water-logged sanitary landfill. Since 1979, the city has held a permit to primarily treat sewer water on the condition that the water — still "filthy," says Welch — is only used for agricultural purposes and is not dumped into Midland Draw.

The controversial Midland Draw flows alongside the sanitary landfill and sewage treatment plant in southeast Midland. Welch is charging that the city's mismanagement is causing water to back up and to endanger the health of "the people."

"WHAT THE CITY needs to do for the people," Welch has repeatedly harangued in recent weeks, "is to clean the water — clean the water up."

He wants the city to immediately "flip a switch" and forthwith to start purifying — but far short of pristine quality — the sewage waters that are allegedly creating a stench along Midland Draw. That "flip of a switch" supposedly would cause the effluent to be secondarily treated; the water will be cleaner, more free of solids, but still would be "filthy" — not potable, says Welch.

And this time, Welch, who views the draw's problem as "humongous," gathered support from within the crowded Commissioners' Courtroom.

"WE ALL AGREE," said Judge Ahders, "that the people in the draw have some serious problems." And he even conceded that some engineers and geologists familiar with the draw's blight behold the common problem but are not in agreement on a solution.

"None of them agree on anything," said the judge. "Not any two agree on any option."

"I don't know the solution," said Ahders. "I want a solution."

Civil engineer Bill Rapp, another critic of the city's handling of effluent and garbage, said that sewage waters are getting into the draw. Testimony to that are the floatables — condoms — which get into the canals and which, in theory, should have been screened out in the primary-treatment phase of the so-called cleansing sewer waters.

Rapp said effluent is spilling over the embankment of dikes and is per-

Further budget cuts proposed

It's now up to Congress, Reagan says

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, declaring "the next steps are up to Congress," today proposed $48.6 billion in spending cuts for 1982 across the breadth of government, sparing defense and little else from the chopping block.

The $695.3 billion budget for 1982 would leave a deficit of $45 billion. It contains newly announced spending reductions of $13.8 billion in more than 200 areas, including veteran and job programs, water projects and housing.

The budget includes Reagan's call for a three-year tax cut, but the overall theme of the spending document is simple and dramatic: More guns and relatively less butter.

As a result of the military increases and sharp cuts in social programs, the defense share of the federal budget would rise from 24 percent in 1981 to 27 percent next year and 38 percent by 1986.

Payments to individuals, the chief means of federal help to the poor and near poor, would remain roughly steady at about 48 percent.

The social cuts are certain to provoke a fierce battle in Congress.

Reagan is now seeking to double his proposed reduction in welfare spending to more than $1 billion with a "workfare" requirement that he favored as governor of California.

He wants to build 50,000 fewer units of public housing than he recommended just a month ago, and 85,000 fewer units than proposed by Jimmy Carter in January.

On education, Reagan recommended a 25 percent cutback compared with 20 percent outlined in his February 18 budget message.

His food stamp plan calls for additional cuts of $500 million to a total reduction of $2.3 billion.

"The plan I outlined will stop runaway inflation and revitalize our economy, if given a chance," Reagan declared in a statement that outlined cuts in more than 300 programs from food stamps to space exploration.

"These are unprecedented cuts to meet an unprecedented situation," the president said as he signed the package in the Rose Garden. "They mark the end of an old era and the beginning of a new one."

In a revamped version of his 1982 spending plans, the president said he is prepared to recommend still deeper spending cuts if necessary to keep federal spending from rising faster. In relaying his plan to Congress, Reagan pointedly reminded lawmakers and special interest groups that he felt he was acting on a "mandate for change" delivered by the voters last fall.

"There is nothing more important than putting America's economic house in order. The next steps are up to Congress," he said.

Reagan submitted his revised 1982 budget in tandem with the details on his proposal for a three-year cut in personal income tax rates of 10 percent a year. Top Republicans on Congress' tax-writing committees were to introduce the administration's tax plan later today.

Reagan's budget makes deep cuts in the spending blueprint President Carter recommended before leaving office.

The more than 200 newly disclosed program cuts included:

— A $700 million reduction in Veterans Administration spending, forcing deferral or cancellation of hospital construction;

— Cuts in the Comprehensive Employment and Training Administration (CETA) in addition to the previously announced intention to abolish the $3.6 billion public service jobs program that employs 310,000 people.

— Sharp reductions in Federal Housing Administration and Government National Mortgage Association mortgage insurance and loan guarantee commitments.

— Cutsback of scheduled increases in railroad retirement benefits.

— Reduction of about $180 million in the Corps of Engineers water project program, a politically popular item in Congress.

— Reduced federal subsidies for merchant shipbuilding and a cutback in credit assistance for small businesses.

Reagan also announced further cuts beyond what he specified on Feb. 18 in numerous programs, including food and nutrition, education, scientific research, the space program and the Rural Electrification Administration.

First foreign trip includes some 'explaining'

By MAREEN SANTINI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan set out today on his first goodwill trip to another country and already he has some explaining to do.

Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau and other Canadians were not pleased when Reagan withdrew a U.S.-Canada fisheries treaty from Senate consideration four days before today's trip.

The action was greeted in Ottawa with "profound disappointment and regret," and was sure to be high on the agenda when Reagan and Trudeau meet during the 28-hour trip, Reagan's first foreign excursion since taking office.

Canadians are concerned about other issues also and Trudeau, under political pressure to raise the issue, was expected to tell Reagan Canada thinks it is a mistake for the United States to send military aid to the junta in El Salvador.

Reagan's campaign proposal for a loosely defined North American accord also encountered trepidation in Ottawa. Even American officials concede that proposal for cooperation among continental neighbors had been interpreted as an "energy grab" at Canada's resources.

U.S. officials who briefed reporters in advance of Reagan's trip said the main purpose of the journey was for the conservative president to meet Trudeau, a liberal who has led Canada for the last 12 years except for a brief interruption. Reagan is the first U.S. chief executive to visit Canada since Richard M. Nixon's trip in 1972.

White House press secretary James S. Brady said Monday that Reagan was simply being realistic when he withdrew the fisheries treaty from Senate consideration.

"It was obvious to everyone that the fisheries treaty was not going to go anywhere in Congress," Brady said.

Hijackers announce new deadline

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Hijackers of a Pakistan airliner set a Wednesday deadline today for fulfilling their demands and the more than 100 hostages aboard the plane at Damascus airport were reported getting increasingly nervous. But a top Syrian official expressed optimism their nine-day ordeal "will soon be over."

Brig. Gen. Mohammed Khawli told reporters a message from the Pakistani government included "proposals" and that the three Pakistani hijackers holding the plane had also made new demands. He declined to elaborate.

Syrian sources at the airport said the brigadier was acting as a mediator between the hijackers and Pakistani diplomats in Damascus.

In Islamabad, Pakistan, a ranking defense official said the hijackers had set a new deadline of 7 a.m., EST, Wednesday, for the release of political prisoners or they would take "drastic action."

The hijackers shot a Pakistani diplomat when the plane was in Kabul, Afghanistan, Friday.

At various times during the nine-day drama, the trio have threatened to shoot all Pakistani government officials aboard, every passenger one by one, and blow up the Boeing 720, Defense Secretary General M. Rahin Khan told a news conference in Islamabad. He said the leader of the hijackers was sometimes "wild and abusive."

During talks today, he said, the hijackers gave a list of political prisoners to be freed, but Pakistani officials noted some of the names had appeared on an earlier list.

A 22-year-old flight attendant released by the hijackers Monday night, Farzana Sharif, told reporters the hostages were being treated well. But "the psychological situation of the passengers is extremely difficult," she said. "...especially since they all know the hijackers will blow up the entire plane."

The hijackers, after they brought the Boeing 720 jetliner from Kabul, Afghanistan, to the Damascus airport early Monday, made new demands for the release of imprisoned opponents of Pakistani President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq's authoritarian military regime. They warned they would take an "extremely drastic measure" if their demands were not met.

The demands were radioed to Pakistan.

Truckloads of Syrian troops armed with automatic rifles moved into the airport Monday night and took up positions around the airliner. Zia was reported to have given the Syrians a free hand in dealing with the hijackers, but there was no evidence of preparations to rush the plane.

Syrian officials maintained radio contact with the green-and-white airliner parked on an auxiliary runway about half a mile from the control tower of the busy airport. Apparently trying to keep tension down, they advised the hijackers in advance when the guard was changed or when there was to be other movement around the plane.

The airliner was hijacked by three young armed men Sunday, March 1, during a domestic flight from Karachi to Peshawar and diverted to the Afghan capital.

During seven days of negotiations in Kabul, the hijackers threatened to shoot the passengers one-by-one and to blow up the plane. They released 29 hostages Thursday, killed a Pakistani diplomat who was among the passengers on Friday and freed four more people Saturday.

Rain to prevail until Wednesday

April showers have arrived ahead of schedule this year, and the weatherman claims the rainy atmosphere should hang around through Wednesday.

The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport is calling for considerable cloudiness through Wednesday. Also persisting through Wednesday is a 30 percent chance for light rain.

The light rain that started falling Monday amounted to .03 of an inch of precipitation, the weatherman said. Although just barely into March, the monthly total has risen to .45 of an inch. This puts the yearly total to date at 1.68 inches.

After a low tonight in the upper 30s, the mercury should hop into the middle 50s on Wednesday.

High on Monday was 47 degrees, a cool comparison to the record high of 85 degrees set on that date in 1955.

Rep. Allee says Texans need to carry gun today

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Rep. Henry Allee calls it a "self-help remedy," but to Houston Police Detective David Collier it sounds like a return to the ways of the Wild West.

Allee, D-Houston, wants to allow Texans to carry pistols in their vehicles. You need to pack a pistol when you're driving Texas roads, he told the House Criminal Jurisprudence Committee on Monday.

"We've reached the point in Texas there's no question but that the individual has the need of the right to carry a handgun to protect himself," Allee said.

Texas law now allows you to carry a handgun in your car only if it is locked in the trunk. Allee said the weapons should be where they can be used.

"I trust the people of Texas to use a weapon rationally. Some individuals have commented, 'Well, they'll have every body shooting themselves on the freeways.' I don't think that's true," Allee said.

But Collier, president of the Houston Police Officers Association, said highway murders already are out of hand in Houston.

"We're going to have an increase in the number of freeway shootings," he predicted. "If this bill were to pass I suspect we'd have to double the size of the homicide division."

"We're going back to the old Wild West, I'm afraid," he testified.

Allee said the bill might increase the number of murders but would cut down on rapes and robberies.

The legislator's father was kidnapped last year and released unharmed.

"I'm sorry we have to resort to these self-help remedies," he said.

Collier was the only witness to speak against the bill. Allee brought several former policemen, gun course teachers and citizens who want to carry handguns in their cars. Some, including Houston engineer Walt Christmas, already pack a pistol in their cars. Christmas said he has never shot at anyone but his pistol has ward off potential attackers.

Released following treatment at Midland Memorial Hospital for nose and neck injuries was Kenny Joe Gallaher of 1505 Roosevelt. Police said his 1970 Monte Carlo struck a car owned by Edward Hodges, 3302 W. Neely, then hit a TESCO pole shortly before 11 a.m. Monday. Hodges' car was parked in his driveway at the time.

Sheriff's investigators today were looking into two theft complaints that netted thieves more than $8,000 in tools and construction machinery.

In the first complaint, the Odessa firm of Permian Maintenance Systems reported the disappearance of an asphalt recycling machine.

The machine was on a trailer parked at the Warfield Truck Stop over the weekend. It was valued at $7,800.

And miscellaneous tools worth $602 were said to be missing from the George Tope Pipeyard, 510 Cloverdale Road. That theft also occurred over the weekend.

Role of CIA may be broadened

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is considering a broad expansion of the CIA's authority to use break-ins, physical surveillance and covert infiltration of American groups and businesses, sources say.

Sources familiar with the proposal said Monday it was designed as part of an effort to combat terrorists more effectively, but also was intended to improve leak investigations and the CIA's ability to spy on foreign economic developments.

But they acknowledged it would eliminate some barriers established to prevent the agency, set up in 1947 to gather foreign intelligence, from re-entering the search for alleged domestic subversives.

The barriers were established after scandals over the CIA's spying in the 1960s on American anti-Vietnam war activists. The first restrictions were imposed by President Ford in executive order 11950 in 1976 and modified by President Carter in executive order in 1978.

The Reagan administration proposal was drafted by an interagency working group, chaired by CIA general counsel Daniel Silver and composed of U.S. intelligence agencies including the CIA, FBI, National Security Agency, Defense Department and others, according to the sources, who asked not to be named.

The proposal was circulated, over the signature of CIA Director William Casey, to other government agencies in February and more recently to selected congressmen, the sources said.

The sources said President Reagan had not yet approved the proposal to relax Carter's executive order regulating foreign intelligence gathering.

The sources said the proposal would not so much expand the government's authority to gather information secretly as it would increase the number of agencies that could do so in this country. For instance, they said there is no proposal to end restrictions that have virtually eliminated mail-opening as an intelligence-gathering technique. Nor, they said, would the proposal change the government's need for secret court warrants to use wire-

Person can demand jury to be instructed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A defendant who refuses to testify in his own behalf can insist that the jury be told not to draw any inferences from this exercise of his constitutional right, the Supreme Court says.

The court, in an 8-1 decision Monday, overturned the conviction of Lonnie Joe Carter, who was charged with the 1978 burglary of a Hopkins, Ky., hardware store. Carter also was charged as a repeat offender, a crime carrying a far stiffer penalty under Kentucky law.

To avoid emphasizing his past criminal record, Carter refused to testify, and he asked the trial judge to instruct the jury not to draw any conclusions from this exercise of his constitutional right.

The judge refused.

Carter was convicted and sentenced to two years for the burglary and 20 years as a repeat offender.

The Supreme Court ruled that to function effectively, jurors "must be accurately instructed in the law."

"No judge can prevent jurors from speculating about why a defendant stands mute in the face of a criminal accusation," the court said, "but a judge can, and must, if requested to do so, use the unique power of the jury instruction to reduce that speculation to a minimum."

In a busy day of decisions Monday, the high court rejected the claims of drug smugglers that they cannot be punished separately for both importing and distributing marijuana because it was all part of the same operation.

The court unanimously told Thomas Albernaz and Edward Rodriguez they must serve sentences for both importing and distributing marijuana, which were imposed after federal drug agents intercepted a cargo of 50,000 pounds of marijuana in Miami in 1977.

In other actions, the high court: —Blocked, pending a lower court decision, the release of 58 government computer tapes which, the Internal Revenue Service says, could be used by statistics-minded taxpayers to avoid IRS audits.

—Ordered a halt to a Texas quarantine against California-grown fruit and vegetables, while the high court gives further thought to the constitutionality of one state's blocking shipments by another. Texas, in fact, lifted its week-old quarantine last Saturday, but the order could prevent Texas from reimposing it, for the time being.

—Backed out of deciding a messy Delaware case involving the state's removal of five children from their natural parents: a woman and her half-brother, a man described by the state as a drinker, frequently unemployed, and with a criminal record. Six justices decided it was a mistake to take the case in the first place because it lacked "a properly presented federal question."

—Ruled that a former stewardess who sued Delta Air Lines for alleged racial bias and turned down a settlement offer does not have to pay the company's legal expenses because she lost the case in court. The decision indicated she would have owed the company its expenses had she won a court award no greater than the offered settlement.

—Ruled that a railroad cannot be sued under state law for abandoning a track with the approval of the U.S. Interstate Commerce Commission. The Kalo Brick & Tile Co. tried to sue Chicago and North Western Transportation Co. for $350,000 when the railroad, with ICC approval, abandoned service because of recurring earthslides on the tracks.

colating at an alarming rate through the porous earth and into the underground water systems.

"When an infraction occurs," Rapp said, "it is to be reported immediately to the state authority."

Rapp also accused "the city of dumping sludge — sewage solids — onto the banks of Midland Draw and suggested that is being done against the health and welfare of the people of Midland County."

"And it's bad news in the raw state," he said of sludge, which, Rapp said, ideally should be thoroughly dried in beds and used as humus and for fertilizer.

"That material (sludge) needs to be impounded, and after it's dried, it can be disposed of. But let's get the sludge away from Midland Draw."

Rapp also lambasted the city for being too "cost effective" in handling its sewage, effluent and garbage.

"What the hell is cost effective?" he asked. "Are we really getting our money's worth?"

"We've been 'cost effective' too long," Rapp said, "and we're going to have to pay the piper. We're in trouble now," he said. "We're in dire need. We had better save our money from the hydrologists and put it in the (sewer) plant."

Judge Ahders, who pointed out that the sewage treatment plant and the effluent holding ponds essentially are the city's problems, suggested that Rapp present his viewpoint to the Midland City Council. He agreed to do just that.

ON THE PROPOSED study by the Austin hydrologist, Welch said that Guyton will "get on it right away."

"It'll be quick; it won't be stalled out," Wright concurred on the need for a second study as long as it doesn't duplicate that of Reed's.

"We've had enough conflicting opinions," Wright said. "We've had enough input, and we need a second opinion."

Wright suggested that the two studies — by Reed and Guyton — just might concur in cause, effect and in proposed solutions.

"We'll get behind (Reed) and say 'Hallelujah' and get with it," Wright said.

"Amen," affirmed Welch, a staunch critic of Reed, the city and the alleged sewage-landfill cover-up.

Police check burglary, theft reports

City police today were investigating a rash of burglary and theft complaints lodged during the past 24 hours.

An employee of the Burger King Restaurant, 710 N. Andrews Highway, told officers $3,000 in cash was missing from a company safe at the establishment.

In a delayed report, Mrs. L.M. Short of 1011 W. Louisiana said a ladies Seiko watch and two diamond rings worth a total of $5,300 were taken in a theft at her residence sometime between Thursday and Friday of last week.

An air compressor and a 12-ton jack were reported stolen from Hall's Tire Service at 510 W. Florida, while $342 in cash was said to be missing by an employee of Basin Aviation at Midland Air Park.

An employee of Midland National Bank, 500 W. Texas, told police $115 was missing from a purse and a 12-gauge shotgun with handmade grips was reported taken from the Affordable Inn at 3838 W. Wall. No value was listed on the weapon.

A 17-jewel gold watch and a gold diamond ring were reported taken in a burglary of the Conrado Molinar residence at 1113 N. Colorado. Entry was gained through a rear bedroom window. No value was placed on the jewelry.

And an employee of the Sound Machine store in San Miguel Square told officers a man entered the establishment about 5 p.m. Monday and walked off with a stereo cassette player valued at $199.

A 16-year-old Midland youth suffered minor injuries when the car he was driving went out of control and struck a parked vehicle before slamming into a utility pole in the 3300 block of West Neely Monday morning.

He died following a March 7 traffic accident in El Paso.

Bills was born Jan. 26, 1931 in Snyder and was a driller for Holiday Drilling Co. in Midland. He was a Korean conflict veteran and was married to Linda June Hardin Oct. 13, 1967 in Andrews.

Survivors include his wife; a son, Gene Harold Bills Jr.; three daughters, Debbie Jean Williams of Shallowater, Sandra Gayle Lumbard of Elk City, Okla., and Sheila Parker of Lovington, N.M.; his parents, Mrs. Rhoda Bills Bonner and C.S. Bonner of Snyder; four sisters, Beth Adcock of Midland, Lenora Winkler of Odessa, Donna Sullenger of Kermit and Joy Watley of Midland; a brother, Larry Bills of Snyder; and five grandchildren.

Lillie P. Barnhill

STANTON — Lillie Pauline Barnhill, 80, of Stanton died Monday morning in a Stanton hospital after a lengthy illness.

Services will be at 10 a.m. Wednesday at the First United Methodist Church in Stanton with the Rev. Harold Quarles, pastor of the First Church of the Nazarene in Midland, officiating. Burial will be in Evergreen Cemetery under the direction of Gilbreath Funeral Home.

Born Oct. 11, 1900, at Cisco, she moved to Stanton in 1928. She married W.S. Barnhill Dec. 13, 1917 at Fort Worth. He died Jan. 14, 1975.

Survivors include three sons, T.D. Barnhill, Roy Lee Barnhill and Billy E. Barnhill; all of Stanton; a daughter, Barbara Blocker of Midland; two sisters, Birtie Travis and Thelma Watson, both of Cisco; a brother, Lawrence Boatman of Cisco; 12 grandchildren and 14 great-grandchildren.

M. Hutschenreuter

BRADY — Services for Max Weldon Hutschenreuter, 75, of Miami, Fla., brother of Mrs. Henry Probst of Midland, were to be at 2 p.m. today at Wilkerson's Northside Memorial Chapel with burial in Live Oak Cemetery.

Hutschenreuter was born Jan. 28, 1906 in Brady, where he lived 33 years before moving to Florida. He was an engineer and a member of First Baptist Church.

Barney McCasland

LUBBOCK — Barney C. McCasland Sr. of Lubbock, father of Barney C. McCasland Jr. of Midland, died March 2 at his home.

Services were March 4 at the First Christian Church. Masonic graveside services also were held at Resthaven Cemetery.

Other survivors include two sons, three daughters, 16 grandchildren and 18 great-grandchildren. Grandsons were pallbearers.

Jesse Crawford

ODESSA — Services for Jesse Edward Crawford, 53, of Odessa and formerly of Midland, were to be at 2 p.m. today in Easterling-Wilson Funeral Home chapel with burial in Sunset Memorial Gardens.

Crawford died Sunday at his residence.

He was born Dec. 3, 1927 in Clarksville and lived in Midland prior to moving to Odessa in 1960. He was a mechanic for the City of Odessa, a U.S. Army World War II veteran and a Baptist.

Survivors include his wife, Olive Crawford; a son, Jesse Don Crawford; two daughters, Deborah McLeod of Midland and Lori Crawford of Odessa; a sister, Pearl Burkett of San Francisco, Calif.; two brothers, Harry Lee Crawford of Paris and Charlie Crawford of Denton; and three grandchildren.

Verdict returned in favor of author

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A lawyer for the one-time wife and lover of slain Houston plastic surgeon John Hill says his client may have lost her $3 million libel suit against author Tommy Thompson because she was an admitted adultress.

"It cast a stigma, so to speak," said Bob Gibbens after a federal jury Monday night rejected Ann Kurth's claim that Thompson's bestselling 1976 book "Blood and Money" libeled her and ruined her planned writing career.

"It was a tough case," added Gibbens. "Truth is a defense against libel," Thompson said after the six-member jury spent only an hour and 40 minutes in deliberation following the week-long trial.

"I wrote the truth and the jury believed me," Thompson said of his 1976 account of the deaths of Houston socialite Joan Robinson Hill and her husband, Dr. John Hill.

The suit was filed by Ms. Kurth, whom Hill married after Joan Hill's death in 1969, against Thompson and his publishers, Doubleday & Co.

Hill died when he was gunned down in his plush River Oaks home in 1972 while awaiting a second trial after being charged in the death of Joan Hill.

Certain jobless benefits denied

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texans who quit a job just because they are "tired of working" would not be able to get jobless benefits if Gov. Bill Clements signs a bill approved by the Senate.

Sen. Roy Blake, the bill sponsor, predicted his proposal would "stabilize the work force and make the Texas (unemployment compensation) law more fairly and evenly administered."

At his urging, the Senate accepted House amendments to a bill that would deny jobless benefits to people who quit their jobs, are fired for misconduct or refuse to accept "suitable" work found for them by the Texas Employment Commission.

They could get future benefits only if they found new jobs, earned the equivalent of six weeks' benefits and then were laid off through no fault of their own.

Currently, workers who quit are denied benefits for one to 25 weeks, with the TEC basing its decision on the facts of each case.

The Senate sent Blake's bill to Clements on 28-1 vote, with Sen. Dee Travis the lone dissenter.

Hill. The first trial was declared a mistrial after Mrs. Kurth testified that Hill had tried to kill her.

Ms. Kurth said the trial "didn't set the record straight," but added that an upcoming television version of her book will. "We feel like the truth will be told," she said.

The suit, which initially asked for $3.75 million in damages, alleged there were 23 inaccuracies in the book, which detail the deaths of Joan and John Hill and the ensuing trials.

Thompson called the book a "metaphor of Texas" because it showed the dark side of money and power in the ultra-rich Houston power structure.

Ms. Kurth and Hill had an affair prior to Joan Hill's death and were married for a brief, stormy period. After the couple divorced, she testified at Hill's trial that he had admitted killing Joan Hill and tried to kill her.

The presiding judge declared a mistrial and Hill was gunned down in front of his family before he could stand trial again.

In "Blood and Money," Thompson described Ms. Kurth's flashy looks, profanity and motivation for testifying against her former husband.

During the drama-filled trial, Ms. Kurth, Thompson, a state district judge who helped prosecute John

"I'm not as happy with the amendments as you are," said Travis, R-Garland. "Why should the state subsidize a spouse who leaves town?"

He referred to an amendment that would allow a person who quits because a 'spouse' must move to a new city to collect jobless benefits after a disqualification period of six to 26 weeks.

"You do have to compromise from time to time," said Blake, D-Nacogdoches.

Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, asked about the estimate that the bill would cost Texas an extra $3 million to administer, and Blake responded, "I don't think it will."

The other amendments would: — Guarantee that military men and women who do not re-enlist would not be denied benefits for "quitting" their jobs.

— Prohibit denial of benefits if a person quit because of medically verified illness, injury, disability or pregnancy.

Kennedy emerging as Reagan critic

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, a good bet to run for president in 1984, is beginning to emerge as one of President Reagan's most outspoken critics on Capitol Hill.

After staying pretty much in the background during Reagan's first six weeks in office, Kennedy let loose last weekend with a three-day barrage that made it clear he does not intend to give Reagan's policies a free ride in Congress.

At a news conference in the Capitol, Kennedy announced Friday that he would introduce legislation to halt American military assistance to El Salvador, saying the United States "must seek a settlement, not a prolonged or wider conflict."

Addressing the Massachusetts Municipal Association in Boston a day later, he said Reagan's tax-cutting proposal "fails the fairness test" and his spending cuts would hit the poor too hard.

And Sunday in New York, the Massachusetts senator said he would attempt to block Reagan's plan to sell military equipment to Saudi Arabia and predicted that "American soldiers will die in El Salvador if we continue on our present course."

Taken in sum, the weekend performance serves notice that there are limits to Kennedy's pledge that "Democrats in Congress will do all we responsibly can to cooperate" with the president.

At the same time, his aides say there was no particular method in the timing of the quick one-two-three punch. Kennedy was merely reiterating well-known concerns and the timing was largely coincidental, they said, pointing out that the speaking engagements had been scheduled for some time.

Kennedy opposed former President Jimmy Carter's original sale of F-15 fighters to the Saudis and spoke out at the first reports that Reagan would approve the sale of auxiliary fuel tanks and air-to-air missiles for them.

And from his first responses to the Reagan budget and tax cuts, Kennedy has argued that they favor the wealthy and oppress the poor.

Nonetheless, the rhetoric is clearly being stepped up.

At his Capitol news conference, for instance, Kennedy said, "The United States must not encourage a coup in any way" in El Salvador and expressed fear that Reagan was leading the country into "an escalating military commitment without conditions."

In Boston, he said, "If sacrifice is fair that takes low income fuel assistance from families struggling to heat their homes; if sacrifice is fair that takes student loans from middle-income families struggling to give their children a college education; if sacrifice is fair that takes ... grants from mayors struggling to revitalize their cities; then I say that fair sacrifice must also take from the oil companies, whose only struggle is to count their enormous profits."

And in New York, speaking to the American Jewish Conference, he lashed the administration's decision to sell weapons "with obvious offensive capability to a government that has sworn to destroy the State of Israel."

Kennedy, who unsuccessfully challenged Carter for the Democratic presidential nomination last year, has left the door open to another run in 1984. One likely opponent for the Democratic nomination would be former Vice President Walter F. Mondale and there are certain to be others.

Rebuilding the navy

"War, once declared, must be waged offensively, aggressively. The enemy must not be fended off, but smitten down." — Alfred Thayer Mahan.

The Reagan administration's new naval doctrine, announced recently by Navy Secretary John Lehman, is nothing less than a reaffirmation of the wise dictum laid down nearly a century ago by America's foremost seapower theoretician.

The notion that a good offense is the best defense is particularly applicable to a U.S. naval strategy capable of yielding victory over the Soviet Union at sea.

One of the U.S. Navy's overriding responsibilities in any general East-West war would be the protection of thousands of miles of vulnerable sea lanes on five oceans. Should these sea lanes, most especially those in the Atlantic, Pacific and Indian Oceans, be cut by Soviet submarines, aircraft, or surface ships, vital American allies and the United States itself would be isolated.

Japan and Western Europe would be left to face Soviet forces on their own, and the United States would be denied the oil and strategic minerals essential to its economy and to defense production.

The Carter administration, attempting presumably to justify its draconian cuts in Navy shipbuilding programs, seemed prepared to adopt a passive strategy under which the Navy would be compelled to simply await Soviet attacks on the sea lanes.

But that defensive strategy conceded the Soviets the crucial initiative at sea and, worse yet, denied the U.S. Navy a fighting chance to exploit the Soviet navy's most serious strategic handicap.

In contrast to the U.S. Navy, which enjoys easy access to open seas from numerous warm water ports, Soviet warships are based in the restrictive and often, ice-clogged waters of the Arctic Ocean, Baltic and Black Seas, and the Sea of Japan.

Submarines and surface ships leaving any of the four largest Soviet naval bases must pass through narrow choke points vulnerable to attack. And what better way could there be to preclude threats to allied sea lanes than by bottling up the Soviet fleets in their ports?

But, of course, a U.S. Navy capable of blocking the passage of Soviet fleets to deep water must have more and better ships — the kind that can fight and survive in close proximity to the Soviet land mass.

The 450-ship fleet Carter bequeathed the Reagan administration is at least 150 ships short of the total needed to fulfill projected wartime demands, including sustained attacks on Soviet choke points.

Thus, Secretary Lehman and the Reagan administration are proposing to double the Navy's shipbuilding program. Even then, it may be eight years before the Navy has enough ships appropriately armed to carry out an offensive strategy that offers the best hope of protecting allied passage on the world's oceans.

Clearly, then, there is no time to lose in getting on with the job of rebuilding the Navy and, in the process, making it strong enough to preserve the peace or, failing that, to prevail over a larger Soviet fleet in any war at sea.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, March 10, the 69th day of 1981. There are 296 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On March 10, 1945, American B-29 bombers began the first firebomb raids on Japan in World War II.

On this date: In 1785, Thomas Jefferson was named U.S. minister to France, succeeding Benjamin Franklin.

In 1922, martial law was declared in Johannesburg, South Africa, as strikes broke out.

In 1963, former French Air Force officer Jean-Marie Bastien was executed for his attempt to assassinate President Charles de Gaulle.

In 1972, Premier Lon Nol took over complete control of the Cambodian government.

Ten years ago: Uruguay's attorney general, Guido Berro Oribes, was kidnapped by anti-government guerrillas in Montevideo.

Five years ago: Former President Richard Nixon said in sworn testimony he had ordered a program of wiretaps in 1969 to investigate news leaks.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Oil industry wants 'V Factor' eliminated

WASHINGTON — The oil profiteers, their bank accounts already fattened by President Reagan's decontrol of petroleum prices, are now trying to loosen the public purse strings so they can grab a few more billions.

This latest money grab is so complicated that the public has had difficulty following all the ramifications. But essentially, it began with the government's attempt to collect past overcharges and to indemnify the short-changed consumers.

The multibillion-dollar reimbursements were based in part on a 1974 pricing regulation, which the oil lawyers challenged. In 1979, it was struck down by the courts on a technicality.

The Carter administration refined the regulation to meet judicial objections and reissued it just four days before Ronald Reagan was inaugurated. The new president nullified most of the Carter administration's last-minute regulations, but he let this one stand.

The reissued regulation is worded to apply back to its original date of issue in 1974. It could help stick the oil companies with a multibillion-dollar bill which they will have to pay the consumers as restitution for past overcharges.

The oil operators, of course, are busy in the backrooms trying to kill the regulation. They are aware that they may be asking the Reagan administration to pay too steep a political price. The president might appear to be a stooge for the oil industry if he followed up price decontrol with steps limiting the overcharges that could be collected.

Jack Anderson

The oilmen are also hard-pressed to explain the legal and economic justification for escaping the consequences of their greed. So they are willing to settle for a compromise that the public might not understand and, therefore, might not oppose.

The petroleum plutocrats would be quite content if the Reagan administration would simply gut the complicated provision called the "V Factor."

The V stands for volume, and the factor determines how much of the cost of a barrel of crude oil can be passed on to the various products refined from it. If 10 percent of a barrel of crude is refined into gasoline, for example, then only 10 percent of that barrel's cost could be applied to the price the refiner charged for the gasoline.

Eliminating the V Factor wouldn't keep the federal government from filing overcharge suits, or even from winning them. But without the V Factor, the oil companies could claim retroactive cost increases on the products made from the entire barrel of crude. This would diminish or wipe out the amount of refunds the oil companies could be compelled to pay.

CHARLEY REESE

South Africa's racial woes unlike those U.S. endured

Already, the American members of the Hate-South Africa Club are gathering to oppose any effort by the new administration to adopt a rational policy toward the Republic of South Africa. The previous administration's policy was virtually indistinguishable from that of the Soviet Union which is to overthrow the present government.

The South African government, we're so often told, is racist. Yes, it is. It practices segregation similar to that practiced by the United States until 1964. That's where the similarity ends.

The irony of South Africa's condemnation is that any fair-minded person who views the country must conclude that while the white South Africans have made mistakes like every other government they are, unequivocally, exceptionally humane. Black South Africans are measurably better off, both politically and economically, than most Africans.

In the world of leftist mythology, the white South African has become a stereotype villain but the facts simply don't support the allegation. Yet, the South African government is in a no-win situation with American liberalism because it is being condemned by a standard which has no application to its situation.

The typical American these days believes in the principle of equality, that there should be no discrimination based on race in either the private or the public sector. If we are honest with ourselves, we must confess that there are two reasons why this principle can be so easily supported. One is that American blacks are a minority of the population (about 13 percent) and the other is that except for skin color they are indistinguishable from whites in terms of language, religion, basic political and moral values. Two at the risk of sounding cynical, I say frankly that whites in the United States can preach equality with such fervor because it doesn't cost them anything.

The white South African is not so lucky. In 1979, there were 4.7 million whites and 16.3 million blacks. Thus one-man-one-vote rule advocated by many naive Americans would mean that white South Africans would lose complete control of their government and therefore of their lives and property. The evidence of black rule in the African nations to the north of them is not exactly encouraging. It has been almost without exception brutal, incompetent and dictatorial. Lest you think me a racist for saying that, check Freedom House and Amnesty International reports. What is, is whether it's fashionable to say it or not.

Furthermore, the 16.3 million South African blacks are not analogous to American blacks. They are tribal. There are Xhosa, Zulu, Swazi, Sepedi, Tswana, Seshele, Shangaan, Venda and other tribes. They speak different languages and dialects, have different religions and customs and values. One certain result of one-man-one-vote would be a tribal civil war. If you are going to draw any analogies, South African blacks today are more similar to American Indians of the 18th Century than they are to 20th Century American blacks.

Thus, South Africa faces a different problem in terms of "race relations" than the United States. It has chosen to try a different solution, a program it calls plural democracy in which different groups are granted political and civil rights within their respective groups.

The fact that American liberals and some politically oriented American blacks don't like it is beside the point. I grant you it may not work, but there are only two alternatives: one is continued apartheid and the other is a bloodbath. The white South Africans are not about to commit suicide. They can mobilize an army of 400,000 and if they don't already have atomic weapons they certainly possess both the resources and the capability to produce them.

The way to avoid that tragedy is to treat the South African government honestly. It does some things which go against our grain; so do many governments with which we maintain diplomatic relations. But if we reject the communist line and recognize that white South Africans are trying to resolve their problems on a humane basis even in the face of subversion, terrorism and a world-wide propaganda campaign, we will do black South Africans a better turn than if we join our own enemies in pushing the nation into a catastrophic civil war.

Too many Americans particularly politicians, are so afraid of being called racists that they don't have the guts to tell the truth.

INSIDE REPORT:

Aides fear El Salvador worries will hurt economic drive

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Although a confidential administration check with 25 Republican senators' offices shows mail running a remarkable 75 percent plus in favor of President Reagan's economic program, some presidential aides are fearful that the El Salvador crisis is hurting Reagan's radical tax and budget cut proposals.

The mail and phone call tally on reaction to the president's program in one state, a liberal Eastern enclave, was 580 for, 12 against. That was typical. Those against listed two major areas of discontent: proposed cuts in higher education subsidies and cuts in the food stamp program.

Despite the overwhelming approval in a survey conducted this past week, political aides of Reagan fear that public preoccupation with events in the Caribbean is becoming an obstacle to the momentum Reagan has built up on his economic proposals starting with his Feb. 18 speech to Congress. They are looking for new ways for Reagan to dramatize his program and keep voters lobbying Congress for it.

TEDDY-REAGAN CONNECTION

While publicly blasting the new president for soaking the poor and helping the rich, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy won private assurance from Ronald Reagan that he would bring up the question of Northern Ireland with British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher on her visit to Washington.

Reagan agreed to the unusual request in a telephone call from the senator, Kennedy did not ask his fellow Irish-American to prod or criticize Thatcher, but to praise her efforts to achieve a peaceful solution in Northern Ireland, implicitly encouraging more of the same.

Evans

A footnote: When Secretary of State Alexander Haig introduced the Irish question in his talks with Lord Carrington, the British foreign secretary, Carrington responded with stony silence.

NIXON'S LONELINESS

Richard M. Nixon, whose quiet rehabilitation started after the election of Ronald Reagan, lamented to an old friend he had not had a single telephone call or personal message directly from the president since Inauguration Day.

That word, delivered without bitterness, was given to one of the top defense specialists in the Reagan transition period who briefed Nixon on parts of the new military budget and the administration's general defense posture.

Nixon received a somewhat similar briefing — this one on the Reagan economic program — from senior

White House aide Martin Anderson in mid-February. But what has looked like an administration effort to help rehabilitate the disgraced former president has been done without any direct communication between him and Reagan since Jan. 20.

CARLUCCI'S TOUGH TALK

Defense hard-liners displeased with the selection of career civil servant Frank Carlucci as deputy secretary of defense were heartened when he gave detente-oriented, left-wing members of West Germany's ruling Social Democratic Party (SPD) an exceedingly hard time during a closed-door, U.S.-German conference in Munich Feb. 20 and 21.

Carlucci not only insisted that the Germans fulfill their defense spending commitments but hit back at SPD Deputy Chairman Horst Ehmke's soft line. When Ehmke contended that El Salvador was too far away for the Europeans to worry about, Carlucci snapped: "Not too far for the Russians."

The tough U.S. mood toward the Germans at the Munich conference also was reflected by remarks by Sen. William Cohen of Maine. Noting German Foreign Minister Hans Apel's lecture that the U.S. should not depend so much on unreliable sources of Mideast oil, Cohen asked whether the supply of natural gas that the Bonn government is contracting to purchase from the Soviet Union is any more reliable.

STOCKMAN'S HOLD

The long delay in President Reagan's official nomination of Democrat Myer Rashish as assistant secretary of state for economic affairs was not so much due to Sen. Jesse Helms's widely publicized misgivings but private hostility from budget director David Stockman.

Unlike Helms, Stockman was not upset by Rashish's non-Republican credentials (including long-ago service as a trade negotiator in the Kennedy administration). Stockman complained that Rashish was responsible for leaking to the press those controversial cuts in the foreign aid budget planned by Stockman's Office of Management and Budget (OMB). Stockman quietly put a hold on Rashish's nomination.

Stockman did not relent until Rashish informed him that he had nothing to do with the leak and was certain it had not even come from the State Department. In addition, Stockman found in Rashish, a private international trade consultant before joining the Reagan administration, an ally in fighting a quota on Japanese auto imports.

Inmates may continue to sleep on prison floors

By LEE JONES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — State prison inmates will continue sleeping on floors if any part of a three-pronged plan for relieving overcrowding is dumped, says director W.J. Estelle of the Texas Department of Corrections.

Texas House members gave a boost to one part of the plan, construction of prefabricated metal buildings to house 2,880 inmates, when they tentatively approved $35 million for the project on Monday.

A final House vote, expected Wednesday, would send the special appropriation bill to the Senate for more action.

Estelle's bosses, the Texas Board of Corrections, also met Monday and voted to construct the buildings as three separate "free-standing, independently administered" prisons of 960 inmates each. The new penitentiaries will be located at the Beto and Coffield units near Palestine and the Jester unit near Richmond.

Other parts of the plan to get some 2,200 inmates off the floors are:

— Ongoing construction of new cell blocks housing 1,460 inmates.
— A work furlough program that would send 2,500 prisoners home to take jobs in their own communities but under the oversight of 50 TDC "field supervisors." Each inmate in the program would pay $78 a month to cover its costs.

"If we withdraw any of these approaches to the immediate problem of immediate overcrowding, it is not going to get off the floor," Estelle told the board.

U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice has ruled that overcrowding at Texas prisons violates the constitutional rights of inmates.

Attorney General Mark White assured board members who met him at his office Monday that he is providing enough manpower to prepare the state's appeal of Justice's order.

"They were wanting to make certain there would be an adequate commitment of resources for the appeal. ... I hopefully have demonstrated there would," White said later.

He sent the board a letter Friday announcing he had hired two additional lawyers and three more law clerks to help the two attorneys and one clerk already working on the appeal.

White claimed in an interview that if he had beefed up the staff any earlier it would have been wasteful since one major issue — medical treatment — had been disposed of by his agreement last month that the state would do a better job.

The work furlough plan has been criticized by Gov. Bill Clements, who contends it needs his approval to take effect.

DMSO users testify about cancer cure

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Tears welled in Alva Ruth Wilson's eyes as she told a House committee that DMSO — now sold in Texas as a cleaning solvent — helped cure her of cancer.

Moments before, Dr. E.J. Tucker of Houston introduced Mrs. Wilson and two other patients as people who owe their lives to DMSO (dimethyl sulfoxide), which cannot be prescribed by Texas physicians.

"I beg you to allow the people of Texas to have it," Tucker said. "These people would all be dead today if not for DMSO."

Mrs. Wilson, 48, of Porter, north of Houston, said, "My three other doctors didn't give me any hope." But, she said, a year of DMSO treatments under Tucker's guidance cured her. The DMSO, which penetrates the skin rapidly, was used to carry other chemicals into the bloodstream, Tucker said.

Rep. Gene Green, D-Houston, wants the Legislature to allow physicians to prescribe DMSO, now purchased as a "degreaser" at chemical supply stores. Veterinarians use it to treat some animal diseases.

House Health Services Committee Chairman Ron Wilson, D-Houston, sent the measure to subcommittee.

Tucker said DMSO is not a cure-all, and his treatments are effective only for some cancer forms.

DMSO has not been approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration. Users of the substance say it relieves the pain of arthritis and other diseases.

Tucker predicted DMSO never would gain FDA approval because the agency requires a "double-blind study" before approving substances. The study requires that subjects not know what substance they are using. DMSO's distinctive garlic-like smell makes it easily detectable, Tucker said.

Witnesses talked about DMSO as a relief for fever blisters, arthritis, ear infections, wasp stings and sinus problems.

Tucker said the treatments cured Clyde Lindsey of Pasadena. The boy, now 15, had cancer at age three, and other doctors said there was no cure, according to Tucker.

Suzanne Frias of Fort Worth testified, "My husband would be alive today if DMSO had been more widely known." She said he died at age 55 because no doctor would tell him about the substance.

Pacake Jamboree proceeds used to fund club projects, activities

All proceeds from the Downtown Lions Club's annual Pancake Jamboree are used to fund the club's numerous, far-reaching projects and activities, according to Frank Marlow, secretary-treasurer. He said the activities budget for this year is in excess of $21,000.

This year's Pancake Jamboree, the club's 25th annual event, will be held from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. Saturday in the Dellwood Mall Shopping Center. Jerry Speck, general chairman, anticipates a record attendance of 10,000 persons.

The 1980-81 activities budget, as listed by Marlow, is as follows: Sight Conservation, $3,500; Scholarships (four), $3,000; Scout Troop, $850; Texas Lions Camp for Crippled Children, $3,100; Golden Agers, $150; West Texas Boys Ranch, $500; Midland Junior Baseball, $200; Exchange Students, $1,000; Lions District 2-A1 LID, $450; Council for Retarded Citizens, $250; Big Spring State Hospital, $100; Wheelchairs and Walkers, $200; Christmas in April, $300; Hearing Fund/TTY, $1,250; District 2-A1 CARE, $325; Girls' State, $100; Junior Achievement, $400.

Also, Midland Miss Softball, $250; Senior Citizens, $150; Visual Aids News-Mobile (VAN), $500; Park Equipment, $1,000; District 2-A1 Eye Bank, $800; Public Service, $150; and undesignated activities, $2,975.

Tickets to the upcoming jamboree may be purchased in advance from club members or at the mall entrance Saturday.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY

One of the theatre's great ladies, the late Dorothy Gish, was born on this day. She is survived by her equally talented sister, Lillian. In the months ahead, your outlook on life may undergo major changes as the result of a romance. Do what you can to broaden your circle of friends and contacts. You are able to handle employment matters best in June, early July, and again in late fall. Dig deep when investigating unusual business opportunity.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Business progress may be somewhat slow. Persevere! Someone who appears to be very attentive. Secrecy is essential if you are to clinch a major contract or agreement.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Contact those individuals who work behind the scenes. Dynamic change will benefit your career or business plans. Ask friends to help you secure important information. Romance flourishes in an atmosphere of trust.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Financial picture shows minor gains. There is a strong danger of deception. Check and doublecheck your sources! Sign nothing without first obtaining professional advice. Romance goes beyond your wildest expectations.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your memory serves you well today. Financial matter is resolved to your advantage. Devote more time, attention to partner's interests. Make amends to a friend you may have accidentally slighted.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Financial matters may require special attention now. Influential associate or higher-up gives you the "go ahead" signal. A small party will delight you this evening. Dress to impress!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): The news from abroad is most encouraging. Money matters begin to take shape. Social life is on an upward swing. It is obvious that someone special cares very deeply for you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Problems involving children require special handling. Professional counseling may be necessary. Discuss long-range plans, goals with partner or mate. Loved one may have valuable suggestion to offer.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be careful not to play favorites today. An attempt to mix business with pleasure could land you in an embarrassing situation. Your reputation for acting in a professional manner is at stake.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Work to repair any rifts between you and romantic partner. Actions will mean more than whispered "sweet nothings". Do not allow relatives or in-laws to interfere in domestic affairs.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Prepare yourself for the career, business challenges that lie ahead. Improve your work habits and learn new skills. Efforts to pave the way for important changes will benefit from your original thinking.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The work scene will become very crowded today. Make decisions based on fact, not emotion. Prominent person will be impressed by your logical thinking. Family members are congenial, affectionate.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Co-workers will be cooperative today. Continue to concentrate on creative projects. Your artistic talents should soon have a beneficial effect on your financial status. Woo romantic partner with open admiration.

now took stock. Declarer almost surely held the ace of diamonds, so there were not many tricks to be had in that suit. And dummy's club suit presented a very obvious threat—declarer might well shed one or more losers on that suit unless the defenders took their tricks quickly. The defense needed three more tricks if they were going to defeat the hand, and the only suit that offered any hope of more than one trick was hearts.

One problem was solved—the second was which heart to lead. The winning play is the ten because that nets the defenders three tricks in the suit and a one-trick set. East found the correct shift. Had he led a low heart, declarer would simply duck and the defenders would be able to score only two heart tricks. Declarer would later discard his remaining losers on clubs after drawing trumps, and so fulfill his contract.

Sometimes there are ways of finding out what partner holds in the suit he has led. These "discovery plays," as they are called in the trade, lend a touch of elegance to the defense.

North-South might have ended in a no trump contract if North had chosen to respond one no trump or if South had rebid three no trump rather than four spades. Not that the no trump game couldn't be beaten. It would have required exact defense, but basically the same defense was necessary to thwart declarer from scoring up four spades.

West led a low diamond. Since it was highly unlikely that, against a suit contract, West would lead away from an ace into the strong hand, East decided that he had to know who held the queen of diamonds if he was going to conduct an intelligent defense. So he made the expert play of the jack to the first trick. That could not cost if partner had the queen, for it would still force the ace.

Declarer won the queen of diamonds and led the king of spades. East took the ace and

Midland County wildcat planned

A.J. Vogel, has announced plans for a wildcat venture in Midland County. The No. 1 Dunn, located 1,980 feet from the south and 1,650 feet from the east of section 38, block 38, TIS of the T&P railroad survey will be located 4 miles east of Midland. Contract depth is 4,500 feet. The project is 1,000 feet, southwest of the Phillips Dunn failure which had gone to a total depth of 11,675 feet, and 3,500 feet west of the nearest producer the Ladd Petroleum J.I. O'Neill, Jr.

The second wildcat is located in Pecos County and contracted by Getty Oil Co. The No. 2 Mendel Estate, located 2,640 from the north line and 1,320 from the west line of section 14, block 49, T9 of the T&P railroad survey is to be drilled at a total depth of 12,400 feet 23 miles west of Fort Stockton.

The No. 1 KCM Mary Kate Evans, and others, will be a wildcat gas and oil well operated by Phoenix Resources Co., Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. Located 660 feet from the north, and 990 feet from the west of section 1, block A-57, survey PSL, 20 miles east of Kermit, the Winkler County well will be completed at a proposed depth of 13,200 feet. Approximately 1 1/2 miles north of the Matthews and McCollough failure, which went to a depth of 4,100 feet, the well is also situated 4 miles north of the producing Flying W field and the Gulf Keystone No. 217, a producer.

Erser Oil Co. of Litchfield Park.

Arizona has announced plans for a Crane County well to be located in the White Horse (Clear Fork) field 20 miles southwest of Crane. The No. 3 J.M. Moseley, and others, is located 500 feet from the south and 467 feet from the west line of section 18, block 6 H&TC survey at a depth of 3,500.

PECOS COMPLETION
The No. 1 Mueller, completed by Adams Exploration Co. in the Grandma Benoit (Clear Fork) field was finished at a depth of 2,602 feet and plugged back at 3,568 feet. Perforations were 3,448 feet to 3,499 feet and casing was set at 4 1/2" at plugged back depth. Acidized with 1,000 gallons of the well flowed 33 barrels of oil on a 16/64 choke with a gravity of 32.3 and a gas to oil ratio showing 210/1.

Borden County producer

Borden County gained its second producer in the AUSA (Strawp) field with the completion of Aninoli USA Inc., Midland's No. 1-A Evans. Located 2 1/2 miles southwest of Fluvanna production was through perforations of 7,790-862 feet. Located 660 feet from the north and 1,800 feet from the west lines of 161-97-H&TC the well pumped 171 barrels of 34.5 gravity oil, and 18 barrels of water with a gas-oil ratio of 497/1.

The No. 1 Evans discovery finished July 21, 1980 for 219 barrels of 42.5 gravity, oil, no water with a gas-oil ratio of 822/1 through perforations of 7,798 to 7,850 feet through a 20/64 inch choke.

A fourth Canyon reef producer was completed in the Luck-Pot (Fusselman) field, Borden County. Tenneco Oil Co., San Antonio, completed the No. 2-5 Clayton-Johnson, 21 miles southeast of Lamesa, to pump 33 barrels of 39 gravity oil, plus 81 barrels of water, with gas-oil ratio of 30-1. Production was through perforations of 8,100 to 8,210 feet.

The well was located 650 feet from the south and 1,990 feet from the east lines of 5-32-in T&P.

Threshold-Blocker Ventures an nounced a Yoakum confiner in the Sable, North (San Andres) field. The No. 1 J.P. Williams, 1 3/8 miles west of production in the Sable (San Andres) field, separated from both fields by production in the Nannie May (Wolfcamp oil) field, and 8 miles northwest of Plains, to pump five barrels of 32 gravity oil, plus 35 barrels of water.

Production was through perforations of 5,205 feet to 5,240 feet which were acidized with 10,000 gallons. Scheduled in the Nannie May (Wolfcamp) field, and amended to the above field, the well was completed at 9,273 feet, with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 9,270 feet and plugged back to 5,390 feet. Location is 660 feet from the south and 1,980 feet from the west lines of 304-D-J.H. Gibson.

The seventh producer and a 1,500-foot southwest extension, the No. 1-A Kokins pumped 156 barrels of 42.5 gravity oil, plus 28 barrels of water, with gas-oil ratio of 1,000-1.

The Ike Lovelady Inc., project was acidized with 4,032 gallons through perforations of 9,954 to 10,046 feet.

The Anton, South (Strawn) field well is 853 feet from the south and west lines of 64-A-L.M. Thomson.

MGF has Colorado completion

MGF Oil Corp. has successfully completed a discovery oil and gas well in Weld County, Colo., it announced today. The well, the Packard No. 43-22, was drilled to a total depth of 7,002 feet and was completed in the "D" sand at 6,589 feet.

The well initially flowed 147 barrels of oil per day and 250,000 cubic feet of gas per day on a 21/64-inch choke with 175 PSI. The well's initial production rates have been in excess of 60 barrels of oil per day and 200,000 cubic feet of natural gas per day.

MGF President R.O. (Jack) Major said two successful offsets have now been drilled to the discovery well. The first, the Henderson No. 32-22, was drilled to a total depth of 6,850 feet. The well initially flowed 604 barrels of oil per day and 1.4 million cubic feet of natural gas per day on an 8/64-inch choke with 150 PSI.

involved in the project.

It added that for those living around the plant, the maximum "total-body" radiation dosage from controlled releases into the atmosphere in one year would cause an increased risk of fatal cancer of "about one chance in 100,000" and an increased risk of genetic effect on offspring of "about one chance in 20,000."

"These risks are small compared to the current normal incidence rates of fatal cancers and genetic defects among the population," the report said.

It said that for those working on the cleanup operation, the increased risk would amount to "less than one additional cancer death attributable to radiation... among the entire work force" and the risk of genetic effects on workers' offspring would be "not more than two."

The report noted that the current cancer death rate among the U.S. population is 200 per 1,000 people and the rate for genetic defects is 60 per 1,000 people.

The NRC staff did not estimate how much the cleanup will cost. The principal owner of the plant, Metropolitan Edison Co., has estimated the operation will cost $1.5 billion.

The commission staff said the operation would be the same whether the reactor is decommissioned or eventually put back in service, and it made no recommendation on this question.

Countries must use every available source of power

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The world will be able to meet the energy demands of a population expected to double in the next 50 years, but only if countries are willing to use every available source of power from nuclear to solar, a new study says.

"Dirtier and more expensive fossil resources and vast quantities of synthetic fuels will have to be developed as well as both large-scale solar plants and nuclear breeder reactors," the study said.

The seven-year study, released Monday in Washington, was sponsored by the International Institute for Applied Systems Analysis, an Austrian research institute supported by the U.S. National Academy of Sciences and scientific groups in 16 other countries.

The study predicted the world will go through two energy transitions: From now until 2030, the world will go from relatively cheap and clean conventional sources of oil and gas to more expensive and dirtier unconventional sources such as oil shales and tar sands. The second stage will take the world to the essentially infinite supplies of solar, nuclear and renewable energy, but it will not be completed until late in the next century.

However, once that energy system is in place it should be sufficient to sustain a world population of 10 billion for many centuries. The study predicted the world population, now at 4.5 billion, should reach 8.5 billion by 2030 and then stabilize at 10 billion at the end of the 21st century.

The study predicted that coal use would increase five-fold in the next 50 years as vast quantities of coal are turned into synthetic liquid fuels. The study predicted that coal use would increase from 28 percent of current world needs to 34 percent in 2030.

"With 90 percent of world coal supplies in the United States, the Soviet Union and China, these nations will play a central role in the world market that will be needed to match supplies with demand," the study said.

The study predicted that oil, which supplied 47 percent of world energy in 1975, would decline to 20 percent in 2030 while the natural gas share of the total energy picture remains fairly constant at 17 percent.

Nuclear power, now supplying one percent of world energy needs, will grow to 9 percent in 2030 while the fast breeder nuclear reactor, which produces more fuel than it consumes, will be supplying 14 percent of the world's energy needs in 2030.

Development of the breeder has been blocked the past four years by the Carter administration because of concerns the fuel produced could be diverted to nuclear weapons, but the Reagan administration has signaled its intention to move ahead with construction of a breeder at Clinch River, Tenn.

By 2030, solar power will be providing only one percent of world energy needs, but the study said that percentage would grow substantially for the rest of the decade.

World crude prices dropped in '80

TULSA — World crude oil prices dropped four percent to 59.67 million barrels a day during 1980. The drop was caused by flagging demand, the Oil and Gas Journal reports in its recent issue.

War between Iran and Iraq, two key Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) producers, caused a drop of 4.5 million barrels a day in world production.

The supply crunch which some industry analysts predicted if the war dragged on into the spring has not materialized, and will not, the journal reports.

Highlights of the 1980 world crude production include a plunge in OPEC production of 12.9 percent, to 26.8 million barrels a day.

Non-communist production dropped seven percent, to 45.2 million barrels a day.

Communist countries showed an increase to a new high of 14.5 million barrels of oil produced per day. The Soviet Union's production rose 2.6 percent to 12 million barrels a day. The Soviets are the largest communist producer of petroleum.

Non-OPEC and non-communist producers, led by Mexico and the North Sea saw their production increase 3.3 percent to a daily production figure of 18.3 million barrels.

U.S. output climbed one percent to an average of 8.5 million barrels daily. The increase in production is largely due to the first full year of capacity flow from the Prudhoe field on Alaska's North Slope. Production in the other 48 states showed a modest decline.

The journal says the market is determining the production rate of oil and the best of example of price demand is in North America.

With the early decontrol of oil prices in this country, the journal reports the U.S. is in the midst of a drilling boom. The price decontrols are expected to curtail the nation's production decline.

In contrast to American program, the Canadians have imposed an energy policy and tax that has reduced incentives for exploration and production. Canadian production dropped 5.6 percent to 1.4 million barrels a day last year, and the stiffer federal policies will only continue the production decline, the journal states. Worldwide, the short-term key to production will be the extent to which major importing countries can continue to control and cutback on demand. Cutbacks last year resulted in cutbacks by the producing countries, the journal says.

The business magazine says that increases in production by some countries will be offset by decreases by other producers. The journal says that Saudi Arabia may drop its production back to the official ceiling of 8.5 million barrels a day from the current production level of 10 million barrels a day, while Iran and Iraq can be expected to increase production from their 1980 levels.

Overall, experts surmise that production will be determined by demand, which is expected to fall again this year, the journal says.

TMI cleanup may take seven years

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal report says it could take seven more years to clean up the nation's worst commercial nuclear accident, and one official notes that preparation of the report itself may have slowed the cleanup.

The staff of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission presented the report to the commission Monday, saying contaminated wastes at the Three Mile Island plant near Harrisburg, Pa., can be removed "without incurring environmental impacts that exceed acceptable risks."

It recommended cleaning up contamination at the plant "as expeditiously as reasonably possible to reduce the potential for uncontrolled releases of radioactive materials."

It could take at least three more years and possibly seven to clean up after the 1979 accident, the report said.

The report called for storing the radioactive wastes from the plant elsewhere rather than in effect turning TMI into a permanent waste disposal site.

The cleanup operations will remove sources of potential radiation exposure that currently pose risks to the health and safety of station workers and the public, it said. "The location, geology and hydrology of Three Mile Island are among the factors that do not meet the current criteria for a safe long-term waste disposal facility."

Bernard J. Snyder, NRC project director for TMI, said several decisions would have to be made before a cleanup schedule could be outlined.

Acting NRC Chairman Joseph M. Hendrie noted that for "what seems like a lifetime" the first decision necessary had been how to clean up contaminated water in the reactor's basement. Snyder said the staff had been waiting "for a while" for a proposal on this from the plant's operators. However, when asked if the operators hadn't been — in turn — awaiting the staff report before making their proposal, he replied, "I think it was a major factor in their holding up."

John Fidler, a spokesman for companies involved in the plant's operation, said TMI officials were withholding comment on the report until they had studied it fully.

The report, urged by the president's Council on Environmental Quality, was the staff's final environmental impact statement on the cleanup. It will form the basis for commission decisions on ridding the plant's reactor Unit 2 of contamination.

It was in Unit 2 that a near meltdown of the reactor core occurred on March 28, 1979. About 700,000 gallons of contaminated water still stand eight feet deep in the basement of the reactor building.

The report concluded that "most significant environmental impact" from the cleanup would be on workers involved in the project.

It added that for those living around the plant, the maximum "total-body" radiation dosage from controlled releases into the atmosphere in one year would cause an increased risk of fatal cancer of "about one chance in 100,000" and an increased risk of genetic effect on offspring of "about one chance in 20,000."

"These risks are small compared to the current normal incidence rates of fatal cancers and genetic defects among the population," the report said.

It said that for those working on the cleanup operation, the increased risk would amount to "less than one additional cancer death attributable to radiation... among the entire work force" and the risk of genetic effects on workers' offspring would be "not more than two."

The commission staff said the operation would be the same whether the reactor is decommissioned or eventually put back in service, and it made no recommendation on this question.

The report noted that the current cancer death rate among the U.S. population is 200 per 1,000 people and the rate for genetic defects is 60 per 1,000 people.

The NRC staff did not estimate how much the cleanup will cost. The principal owner of the plant, Metropolitan Edison Co., has estimated the operation will cost $1.5 billion.

Windfall Profit Tax misnamed

TULSA — If continued price controls were the only alternative for the U.S. oil industry, then decontrol with the Windfall Profit Tax (WPT) may be an improvement, Oil & Gas Journal says in its March 2 issue.

WPT is still a complicated levy that shifts monstrous sums of money from the oil industry into government coffers, where it will do nothing to produce oil or gas, the Oil & Gas Journal reports. The misnamed tax, designed to raise $227.3 billion for the U.S. government before it begins phasing out, is expensive beyond precedent, it is subject to change and, thus, does not remove all the uncertainty that has befuddled the industry planners for years, the weekly business magazine says.

WPT is still better than price controls because increases in world prices still leave the industry with greater net revenues than it had under regulation, the Journal says, as exemplified by the drilling boom that began after former President Carter began phasing out controls in June 1979.

The Journal adds that the WPT is really an excise tax on decontrol revenue gains. The industry is continuing its fight to at least lighten the burden. There is still a move to repeal the tax, though few Washington sources think this is possible. A constitutional challenge remains in the courts, and numerous proposals are brewing to change the tax through legislation and Internal Revenue Service rules.

In the absence of the repeal of the WPT, the financial load on industry will remain for a decade, the Journal says. The load is considerable. The IRS says its WPT collections totaled $3.052 billion during March-September 1980.

Fire damage high

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Five deliberately set blazes have caused at least $60,000 in damage to two Texas Christian University campus buildings and their contents.

Fire investigators say they have "some leads" but no prime suspects in the fires, which broke out Sunday in a campus science building and the privately-owned Baptist student union.

University spokesmen said no specific damage estimate was available yet, but fire investigators said damage to the buildings and their contents probably would be at least $60,000. About $25,000 damage was done to the Science building and another $35,000 in contents were destroyed, they said. Property damage in the Baptist Student Union amounted to $8,000 and about $3,000 in contents was destroyed.

Arson investigators suspect that a man who apparently was trying to break into the university's administration building at the height of the fires was responsible for the arson.

The blazes were set within 10 to 15 minutes of each other. They charred the inside of the Baptist center and damaged the Winston-Scott Science Building, killing 54 trained laboratory rats.

The rats had been used in motivation and behavior projects, and had been trained for years to perform stunts such as high jumps and hurdles.

WATER: OUR TROUBLED RESOURCE

Part II: Down to the last drop

EDITOR'S NOTE—Residents of Greenwich, Conn., with only an 18-day supply of water left, were told this winter they must cut back consumption by 60 percent. This second part of a five-part series on problems with the nation's water supply tells what happens when the tap starts running dry.

By DAVID L. LANGFORD
Associated Press Writer

GREENWICH, Conn. (AP) — It was a fine day in Greenwich, raining like hell.

The lunchtime regulars at the Greenwich Restaurant were talking happily of their recent good fortune — the end of the drought and a Republican back in the White House — as they watched the fat raindrops splashing on Greenwich Avenue, the street of smart shops that slopes down to the harbor where the yachts from Newport and Palm Beach tie up in the summer.

"You know what really caused the water shortage in Greenwich?" asked a portly lawyer finishing off an omelette with mushrooms.

"Two Perrier trucks collided."

Thus, with the coming of the rains that had filled their reservoirs to more than half full by early March, the residents of this New England seacoast city were able to joke about the long dry spell that had left them with just an 18-day supply of water at one point.

But just as there is no guarantee that President Reagan's economic program will work, there is no assurance the water supply will hold out during the months ahead.

Mandatory water conservation remained in effect even as the rains came down. Residents were told in late January they must cut back water consumption by 60 percent.

In this affluent city of 60,000 people, you can buy a Rolls-Royce, a Mercedes or a Ferrari from a local dealer, but you can't wash it. At the Greenwich Country Club they serve lunch in paper plates and martinis in plastic cups.

ON THE BAR car of the 5:33 commuter train out of Grand Central, stock brokers and advertising executives swap ideas about how to save water. One catches water in a bucket in his shower to flush the toilet. Another says his wife won't allow him more than an inch of water in the bathtub.

Alluding to the curtailed bathing habits of Connecticut commuters, New York Mayor Edward I. Koch told a plumbing workshop, "It's getting so you can tell when someone comes from Greenwich."

In late January, city officials had begun gearing for "Condition Red," making plans to dig slit trenches, install portable toilets and dole out drinking water by the bucket at street corners. Greenwich Hospital dug a well, but it produced only 10 gallons a minute. Tank trucks were parked outside, waiting in case the tap ran dry. The fire department mapped plans to draw salt water from Long Island Sound to keep the city from going up in smoke.

The February rains forestalled doomsday, for at least four months, but officials worried about the approaching summer. The question was whether there would be enough water even if the present reservoirs were full.

Why did this city with numerous nearby rivers and streams and an underground aquifer almost run out of water? A study group appointed by First Selectwoman Ruth Sims puts much of the blame on the private water company that supplies the area for failing to increase its storage capacity.

"The town was living at the breaking points," said the group's chairman, John R. Raben Jr. of Greenwich, a vice president of the First Boston Corp. "As soon as we hit a dry period there was going to be a problem."

The Connecticut-American Water Co., which has four reservoirs with a total capacity of 3.6 billion gallons to serve Greenwich and the neighboring towns of Port Chester and Rye, N.Y., blames Mother nature.

"WE WOULD NOT agree that our supply has not kept pace with demands," said John Murzycki, a spokesman for Connecticut-American.

Whatever the cause of the shortage, the residents of Greenwich responded. Water consumption dropped about 25 percent within days.

"It's scary as hell when they tell you the tap is going to run dry," said Paul Tillman, a salesman. "You don't mind missing a shower now and then."

A dirty car became a status symbol. Children scolded their fathers for letting the water run while they shave. Neighbors called police when one woman started filling her 2,000-gallon hot tub. With families told to allow only one toilet flush per day per person, a four-flusher was likely to be run out of town.

The Greenwich Time, the local newspaper, called five people a day at random out of the telephone directory to ask what they were doing to conserve water. In three weeks, only one person said he was not doing anything.

Some of the more affluent, who maintain residences in Manhattan as well as Greenwich, had a choice of which city's water to use for washing clothes and themselves.

"We've begun using our apartment in New York more often," said Mrs. John Leshner.

BUT MORE TYPICAL is Mrs. Paul Lindemeyer, who lives in the Riverside section. She said her three children take baths together and the water is used to flush the toilets.

"I made my husband go over and fill buckets of snow to melt for my humidifier," said Elizabeth Coughlin.

Elaine de Beauport, who teaches weekend courses in "multidimensional learning" in a frame house near the center of town, says her out-of-town students help keep the hot tub full by bringing with them five-gallon jugs of water.

One resident of the Byram neighborhood said that when it rained one day, "I took a sponge and with the rainwater I loosened all the dirt off my car."

Bernard Cohen of neighboring Stamford said, "We have closed the inlet valve to our toilet tank, thereby insuring that no water from the main city water can flow directly into the toilet tank. After each toilet flush we refill the tank by using a pot to transfer water from the bathtub."

Douglas Maroldi, vice president and general services manager of Pray Volkswagen, said that while dirty cars might be a status symbol, "You can't sell cars that aren't clean."

And with car washes that don't recycle their water severely restricted, Maroldi says, "We're washing cars with water from Horseneck Brook."

The car dealership got permission from city hall to pump water from the brook that runs behind its property and Maroldi says his people are now washing 100 cars a day.

"The water runs into Long Island Sound anyway," he said.

Xerox Corp., one of the top 10 water users in town, installed 12 portable toilets in its underground parking facility for its 750 employees and tenants.

IN AN EFFORT to find solutions to the area's water problem, Gov. Bill O'Neill held a water conservation workshop in late February. The State Department of Environmental Protection and the New England River Basin Commission provided information to help cities develop contingency plans for water emergencies and control of water supplies.

"Even though our state has had rain for the past few days, the water shortage in Connecticut poses long-term challenges, and our officials must cooperate fully to meet these challenges," the governor said.

NO ONE WILL HAVE TO TELL YOU: YOU'LL KNOW!

Later Jesus talked again about this with His disciples. "The time is coming when you will long for Me to be with you even for a single day, but I won't be here." He said. Reports will reach you that I have returned and that I am in this place or that; don't believe it or go out to look for Me. For when I return, you will now it beyond doubt. It will be as evident as the lighting that flashes across the skies. But first I must suffer terribly and be rejected by this whole nation.

"When I return the world will be as indifferent to the things of God as the people were in Noah's day. They ate and drank and married—everything just as usual right up to the day when Noah went into the ark and the flood came and destroyed them all.

"And the world will be as it was in the days of Lot: people went about their daily business—eating and drinking, buying and selling, farming and building—until the morning Lot left Sodom. Then fire and brimstone rained down from heaven and destroyed them all.

"Yes, it will be 'business as usual' right up to the hour of My return. Those away from home that day must not return to pack; those in the fields must not return to town—remember what happened to Lot's wife! Whoever clings to his life shall lose it, and whoever loses his life shall save it.

"That night two men will be asleep in the same room, and one will be taken away, the other left. Two women will be working together at household tasks; one will be taken, the other left; and so it will be with men working side by side in the fields."

"Lord, where will they be taken?" the disciples asked. Jesus replied, "Where the body is, the vultures gather!"

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Adolescence difficult

Dear Dr. Solomon: When I had young children and would complain to my friends about their behavior, they would jokingly tell me to wait until they were teen-agers; then I would know what problems really are. Now I have teen-agers. What is there about adolescence that makes it such a serious problem, and what can be done about it? — Mrs. N.F.

Dear Mrs. F.: It has been said that the best cure for adolescence is five years, but often the problem is too serious to joke about. Dr. David Jones, an associate professor at the Duke University Medical Center who specializes in youth psychiatry, estimates that about 25 percent of all teen-agers experience difficulty in adjusting to adolescence. More than 3 million teen-agers in the United States are alcoholics, and teen-age pregnancies are a national problem. In Washington, D.C., for example, there are more children born each year to unmarried mothers than to married women.

Other statistics also highlight the problems of adolescence. The number one cause of death among teen-agers is automobile accidents, while suicide ranks number three. Moreover, the actual suicide figure probably is even higher since statistics do not show how many accidents actually are suicides.

Dr. Jones lists four tasks that an adolescent must master: First, seeing the parents as human beings and realizing that they don't know everything; a teen-ager will not be able to function well as an adult if he or she thinks parents have all the answers. Second, establishing a strong sexual role, a task that requires the child to have a good identification with the parent of the same sex. Third, developing a value system — that is, a good moral and ethical sense of what is right and wrong. And fourth, gaining a good solid commitment in terms of a work life, a more difficult task today because of the complexity of today's work world.

While everyone must pass through adolescence with all of the emotional trauma it involves, it does not necessarily have to produce adverse effects. The ability to master adolescence and pass on to adulthood rests in large part on communication between the child and parents. If communication does not exist, pressures can build in the adolescent and problems develop as a consequence. Strange as it may seem, all of us who are now adults were once adolescents, and most of us came through the experience in pretty good shape.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've found your comments about the benefits of hospice care very informative and helpful. What I would like to know now is whether the costs of such care are covered by medical insurance. — Joan

Dear Joan: The Connecticut Blue Cross and Blue Shield is the first insurance carrier in the country to offer benefits for hospice care of terminally ill patients. Since it is possible that others may follow suit, I suggest you check with whatever carrier covers you for medical insurance.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Shuttle flight could be shortened

By HOWARD BENEDICT
Associated Press Writer

SPACE CENTER, HOUSTON (AP) — The astronauts who will fly the first space shuttle say they have great confidence in the machine, but they warn there's a chance the mission could end early because of a system failure.

They emphasized, however, that a shortened flight could not necessarily mean a failed flight.

"If we get Columbia up and back down again and it's in shape to fly again, it will be a successful mission," astronaut Bob Crippin said Monday. "This is the most complex vehicle ever flown."

"The way we've designed the mission right now, we'll probably come home early," he said. "Just about anything can break and we'll decide to go ahead and terminate it."

Crippin, a rookie astronaut, and Mission Commander John Young, a veteran of four space flights, are scheduled to take Columbia up for a 54-hour orbital test flight on April 8.

"We'll check everything from the solid fuel rockets that get us off to the potty we use in waste management," Crippin reported.

Columbia is the first of a planned fleet of four or five shuttles which will spearhead this nation's military and civilian space effort for most of the remainder of this century. Each will be capable of 100 or more round-trips into space, landing back on Earth like an airplane.

But before Columbia becomes operational, it is slated to undergo four orbital test flights in the next year.

Young, Crippin and space agency officials told reporters during a series of briefings here Monday not to be surprised if there is an early return to earth.

"We've taken a very conservative approach — we're going to play it safe," said Flight Director Charles Lewis. "It's like the first test flight of a new airplane. Why push it? We can accomplish most of what we want by just getting it up and down."

Lewis said he would consider the flight a success if the launch and landing are good and the astronauts have a chance to exercise each of the major systems, such as computers and control jets.

"A second day up there would be gravy," Lewis said.

Crippin said a major task in the first 90 minutes will be to remotely open and close two giant doors on Columbia's 60-foot-long cargo bay. These doors must be kept open during the flight to expose large radiators that dissipate heat from the spacecraft.

There are 10 pairs of motors which drive the latches that close the doors.

Spillway problems discovered

BIG SPRING — The $98,000 the Colorado River Municipal Water District spent for construction and tests of a scale model of the Stacy reservoir service spillway seems likely to prove a wise investment.

Two major problems were demonstrated during a series of tests of the model at Colorado State University at Fort Collins. Correcting them before final plans are made not only will save multiplied thousands of dollars, O.H. Ivie, CRMWD general manager pointed out, but they also will guarantee safety of the structure.

The model, which had its final tests in mid-February, was scaled down to 1/45th of actual size — even down to rock which will be used in the stilling basin. The six Tanter (discharge) gates were designed to show exactly how varying volumes of water would be let out during different-sized floods.

"Probably the structure never will be subjected to the stresses and extreme conditions of the tests," said Ivie, "but with a $50 million dam at stake, you can't afford to take even the remotest of chances."

One of the problems revealed by the tests was water during a maximum flood cutting across a bend of the river to exert diagonal instead of perpendicular pressure on the dam, thus making the gates discharge unevenly. Engineers say a spur dike can cure this.

Another, and more difficult, problem concerns the period of absolute flood. The tests showed that water from the emergency spillway had a pinching effect on the river at the point where the emergency surplus spill came back into the river. Because of the narrowing effect, velocity of the water in the river channel would be increased tremendously, causing great damage and erosion. This may be cured by extending walls of the service spillway further down river, or to divert, by dikes parallel to the river, the emergency flow about a mile further downstream.

Deliveries increase

Water deliveries by the Colorado River Municipal Water District gained in February over the previous year, with most of the increase coming from municipal customers.

All customers took 982,872,972 gallons of water during the month, a 10.22 percent increase over February 1980. This brought to 2,033,249,954 gallons the deliveries for the year. Of this, 827,606,500 gallons went to cities, an increase of 11.15 percent for the month. Oil and industrial customers used 155,266,472 gallons, a gain of 5.51 percent, despite SACROC repessuring unit being down part of the month during preparations to convert lake water.

By municipal customers, the picture was like this: Midland, 229,100,500 gallons, up 24.50 percent; Big Spring, 173,640,000, up 2.39 percent; Odessa, 257,832,000, up 9.66 percent; Snyder, 59,642,000, up 6.85 percent; Stanton, 7,392,000, down 16.30 percent.

An exhibit of paintings by artist Jean Johnson is featured this month at the Midland Woman's Club.

The exhibit will include oils and watercolors, with considerable variety in subject and media. While originally from Auckland, New Zealand, her work clearly reflects the influence of the Southwest area where she has lived for many years.

She won "Best of Show" in the Midland Art Show in 1969 with her portrait "The Ingenue" and has been the recipient of many other awards since then.

Other art activities include initiating the Fiesta del Arte now in its ninth year. She has also held numerous offices in the Odessa Art Association. She conducts workshops in oils and watercolors and has taught classes at Odessa College.

Paintings are currently on exhibit in Midland at the Hanging Tree Gallery and in El Paso at Dos Pajaros and Casa Adobe.

This show may be seen from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. weekdays. The Woman's Club is located on Wadley in nearby Hogan Park.

Mrs. Johnson was scheduled to conduct a demonstration at the Midland Palette Club today.

EN AMIE REVIEW CLUB will meet at noon Wednesday in the Midland Woman's Club for a luncheon and book review.

Reviewer is Mrs. Charles Lutrick who will discuss "George Burns...The Third Time Around."

Election of officers will be held. Co-hostesses are Mrs. Jim Waterman, chairman; Mrs. Karl Wilkeski, Mrs. Conran Reeves, Mrs. Reid Collins, Mrs. Jack Nottingham and Mrs. Susie Howell.

PAINT DAUBERS will have a sale for one day only Saturday at San Miguel Square.

The sale of original and handcrafted art from area artists will be held from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

PAT FLETCHER, who has hunted for his own Irish ancestors in Ireland and who recently attended an Irish genealogy seminar in Dallas, will be the speaker for the Midland Genealogical Society's meeting Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in Commercial Bank and Trust Co.

Plans will be made for Seminar '81 featuring William Miller of Bowie, Maryland.

TWO MIDLAND COUNTY residents were among the 1,443 students whose 1980 fall semester grades earned them places on the dean's list at Southwest Texas State University.

To qualify for the dean's list, an undergraduate student must have earned a grade point average of at least 3.5 during the semester while taking at least 12 semester hours of course work.

The students were Martha H. Garza, 1111 E. Maple, and Sharon J. Snyder, 2502 Maxwell.

MARY LOUISE HAWKINS, daughter of Mrs. Morene Odom, 4312 Leddy, has been awarded a doctor of philosophy degree in educational administration from St. Louis University.

Dr. Hawkins' father, the late Grady H. Odom, was employed by Getty Oil Co. in Midland.

She received a bachelor of arts degree from Oklahoma State University and a master's degree from Southern Illinois University, majoring in guidance and counseling.

Dr. Hawkins is presently a director of curriculum research and development projects for the Ferguson-Florissant School District located in suburban St. Louis County.

She has developed several educational programs of national prominence, including an advisement program for secondary schools and a curriculum management system, both of which are disseminated through Title IV-C of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act.

EASY WRITER'S CALLIGRAPHY GUILD is set to meet today at 7 p.m. at Paint & Palette, 20 Oak Ridge Square. Members are to bring work materials and ideas to this work session.

McSorley, Betty Edgar, Molly Bedrich and Harriet Horton. Theme of this troupe is "Patriotism." A

VIPS program works due to volunteers

"When Volunteers in Public Schools (VIPS) became a major project in 1978 of Midland City Council PTA, it became apparent that some schools within our community had an abundance of school volunteers, while other schools had few, if any," said Gayle Dodson, PTA council president.

"To encourage volunteers to work throughout the city, a library enrichment committee was formed. This committee includes two storytelling troupes for kindergarten through fourth grade and a book review for fifth grade," she explained.

This committee of 14 represents a cross section of Midland. The programs are offered to all elementary schools, thus providing volunteers to schools that might not have regular library storytellers.

"The main goal of this committee is to encourage use and appreciation of the school library, and to instill a love of reading for facts and fiction," explained Mrs. Dodson.

This goal has been obtained through use of costumes, stories, puppets, songs, dance and audience participation.

The program was well received by students, teachers and principals last year and all evaluations indicated that the program should be continued each year," she said.

This year's theme for Troupe I is "Patriotism," with emphasis being on favorite American symbols, such as Uncle Sam, the State of Liberty, Betsy Ross, the American Indian, the Pilgrim and the American Clown.

Troupe II features "Nutrition," with emphasis on the four food groups. A PTA member on the committee who has been impressed with the National PTA's effort in educating the public about nutrition wrote this skit. In it, children are encouraged to read more about proper and nutritional foods.

Ann Page, another member of this committee, will offer a book review of "Buttons in the Back" by Elizabeth Kirkland to Midland fifth graders. Many fifth and sixth graders have made requests for library book reviews, according to Mrs. Dodson, and VIPS will be recruiting volunteers next year for this area of service.

Volunteers themselves have been the secret to the program's success, according to Mrs. Dodson.

Volunteers from Troupe I attempt to rekindle patriotism and extend this idea to the school children.

For example, Betty Edgar, PTA

Ruth Newton, a grandmother and first grade teacher in the Midland school district for 35 years before she retired last year said, "I just can't stay away from PTA and children...they are so much a part of my life. I love patriotism and I think children need patriotism!" She also has grandchildren at Burnet Elementary and Alamo Junior High School.

Mary Bright is one volunteer who does not have any children, but enjoys giving her time to children. She moved to Midland recently from Alaska where she was in a puppet storytelling troupe. "Patriotism is a great thing to promote to children," she said.

Harriet Horton, PTA volunteer with children at Fannin Elementary School and Hillander, a private elementary school here, has more than one reason for her work. "To give of my time for the children so as to promote their enthusiasm for reading and patriotism...and understanding the symbols of the United States and how they can become good citizens."

In Troupe II, one of the volunteers, Annalyn Gilbreath who has two children at Rusk Elementary, enjoys performing for children. She is interested in nutrition and feels children should become aware of the four food groups. Annalyn wrote one story used in his skit.

Marlyn Butler has two students at Ben Milan and one at Lee Freshman. She enjoys the opportunity to visit various schools in Midland and meet other school volunteers.

While Marjie Lewis has no children in school, she says that she found the troupe to be an opportunity to be with young children. "Having a keen interest in reading, I find this is a way to share," she said.

VIPS is a program of the Midland Independent School District, a major project of the City Council PTA and funded through four Midland banks, including First National Bank, Midland National Bank, Commercial Bank and Trust Co. and Texas National Bank.

The library is just one of many areas in which Midlanders serve as volunteers in the Midland schools. VIPS will continue to spotlight special programs.

volunteer with children at Midland High School and San Jacinto, says "I do his to encourage reading and patriotism."

"I love to act and have extremely strong feeling about patriotism," said Tommie McSorley, PTA volunteer with children at Emerson and Midland High School.

DEAR ABBY

'Sensible' choice not always right

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My problem is a conflict between my head and my heart. Two men want to marry me. "A" is successful, attractive, attentive and we share many of the same interests and beliefs. He has loved me for years, and I know he would make a wonderful husband and provider. Everyone thinks I'm crazy for putting him off as I have. My head tells me that marriage with "A" would be very sensible, but Abby, my heart just isn't in it. I make our good-night kisses as brief as possible.

The other man, "B," is the reason I have been putting off "A." "B" will always make a good living because he's hard-working and industrious, but he will never be rich because he helps so many friends and family members. He's supporting both his parents, and he's helping a nephew through college. Abby, I really love this man; just holding his hand excites me.

Both men are waiting for my answer. I want to marry before my 30th birthday. What do you say? — A 29-YEAR-OLD VIRGIN

DEAR VIRGIN: Use your head, and listen to your heart.

DEAR ABBY: May I comment on your men's underwear debate? We in our briefcase "Fruit-of-the-Looms" remain fruitless, while our brothers in their boxer shorts remain "heir-conditioned." — ROBERT W. IN WALTERBORO, S.C.

DEAR ROBERT: I wish I'd thought of that.

DEAR ABBY: The letters in your column about "the other woman" really hit home because I have been the other woman in a married man's life for six years. He has never told me that his wife was fat, homely, cold, a shrew or that he hasn't slept with her for 10 years.

I know he sleeps with her because she's had four kids in the last six years. After the last one, he told me not to feel bad — that he sleeps with her because he has to, but he sleeps with me because he wants to. I have no complaints. He's a man enough for both of us. — HAPPY IN HAGERSTOWN

Members of former Girl Scout Troop No. 4 have reunion

Shown in top photo are former members of Girl Scout Troop No. 4 who attended from out-of-town. They are, from left, Debbie Anderson of Houston, Sheri Gaunt of Plano, Helen Eve Lowe of San Antonio, Cindy Lawson of Tahoka, Denise Hale of Odessa and Sandra Sutphen of Dallas. Troop leaders, in left photo, are Mrs. Robert Frazier, left, Mrs. Brent Watson, Mrs. Clifford Anderson of Houston and Mrs. Bob Joseph.

Twenty-one graduating seniors of former Girl Scout Troop No. 4 were recently honored by their original Brownie scout leaders, Mrs. Brent Watson and Mrs. Robert Frazier at a reunion in the home of Mrs. Frazier, No. 7 Auburn Court. Mrs. Frazier's home was the weekly meeting place of the troop when the group was organized in 1970.

Theme for the event was "A Trip Down Memory Lane." Decorations carried out this theme, complete with a cake decorated with a Girl Scout in full uniform. The cake was designed by Eva Dennis.

Serving refreshments were Mrs. Bob Joseph and Mrs. Clifford Anderson, who were the troop's assistant leaders. Mrs. Anderson now lives in Houston.

Other decorations included craft and gift items made by the girls throughout their scout years, pictures of scout activities and functions, Brownie and Girl Scout uniforms and a tree bearing trefails inscribed with each girl's name decorated the home.

Entertainment for the afternoon consisted of singing songs and playing games that had been a part of the troop activities in the past. Movies were shown of trips and camping outings.

Each girl related her current activities and told of her plans for the future. Hostesses designed and made double picture frames for each of the girls with pictures from the 1972 mother-daughter tea and a picture from the reunion party.

Scouts present at the reunion included Debbie Anderson of Houston, Sheri Gaunt of Plano, Denise Hale of Odessa, Helen Eve Lowe of San Antonio, Sandra Sutphen of Dallas and Cindy Lawson of Tahoka.

Midland girls attending were Susan Bicknell, Cindy Buresh, Meredi Frazier, Leslie Griffin, Holly Joseph, Elaine Kimbro, Stacy Lewis, Patricia Moreland, Karen Moseley, Lynne Nolen, Jana Prigmore, Tami Spears, Shari Sullivan, Linda Vitrano and Kari Watson.

Mothers attending were Mrs. Billie Hale of Odessa, Mrs. Jim Gaunt of Plano, Mrs. Ted Bicknell, Mrs. Richard Prigmore, Mrs. Scott Lewis, Mrs. Charles Kimbro, Mrs. Louis Moseley, Mrs. Frank Vitrano and Mrs. John Moreland, all of Midland.

AT WIT'S END

Commercial cold

By ERMA BOMBECK

Aaaachooo!
What do you mean where did I get this cold? It should be obvious to everyone where I got it. Watching television.

Night after night I sat in front of the tube while one sickie after another peered out at me through red eyes (cleared up only by eyedrops), runny nose (dammed up only by the miracle of an antihistamine), fevered lips (brought down by an aspirin containing extra strength) and irritating coughs. I don't want to talk about it.

For awhile, I felt pretty good. Then one night, a tall blonde with a stuffed-up nose was trying to breathe through a balloon, and my husband said, "Can you do that?"

"Why would I want to blow up a balloon with my nose?"
"I didn't mean that. I just thought that for the last couple of days you've sounded like your head is stopped up."

At the next commercial break, a woman wrapped in a blanket who looked like she was living only for her residuals coughed and said, "My cold capsule lasts for eight hours instead of two."

I said aloud, "Sweetie, it doesn't matter. Your capsule is going to outlive you by two hours."

When I went to bed, I felt a little flushed, but nothing serious. The next night, I counted eight people on commercials who wheezed, sniffed, hacked, snuffled, gargled, moaned and gasped, and still looked better than I did. I wanted to reach over and turn them off or change the channel, but I was afraid to get too close to any of them.

Instead, I crouched on the other side of the room and tried to figure out where they find all these sick people. I've seen one actress on three different cold commercials. It's the biggest thing that has happened to her in her entire career. I never saw her on anything when she was well.

Imagine answering an ad for a "consumptive, feverish actress with a stopped-up nasal passage and shallow breathing" and having to wait in an office of 3,000 unemployed flu victims who are applying for the same job.

I feel lousy as I sit in front of the TV set in my bathrobe. It's like Tom Sawyer watching his own funeral. Last night I was watching a commercial about a man in bed who was coughing so hard he couldn't talk. His wife said she'd get him a cough depressant. At that moment our screen went black.

It was probably a power failure, but frankly, I'm worried.

Black cowboy seeks stardom

By DENIS SEARLES

Associated Press Writer
DENVER (AP) —

Charley Sampson wears a big black hat and boots, rides wild bucking bulls for a living on the rodeo circuit and just might qualify for the title "King of the Urban Cowboys."

"I'm strictly from the city. I was born right downtown" in the Watts area of Los Angeles into a family of six brothers and six sisters, the 23-year-old black cowboy said as he loafed in the stall area behind the National Western Rodeo here.

The 5-foot-4 Sampson tips the scales at 134 pounds and has specialized in riding the 1,500- to 1,750-pound bulls for six rodeo seasons, the last three as a card-carrying pro with the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association. He's won 15 times.

"My goal is to be world's champion. Well, with all the injuries I've acquired, I have to take it one day at a time," Sampson said.

His list of rodeo wounds include a knee injury, twice-broken right leg, broken sternum, punctured lung, hyper-extended wrist, pulled groin and two broken fingers.

Sampson admits he's a tad small for a bull rider but "a cowboy like me has an advantage because I get less whip from a powerful bull while a cowboy 6 feet tall will get all the whip" from the bucking, plunging critter.

Sampson said his father had wanted him to be a housepainter like his uncles and grandfather. But a Cub Scout field trip when he was 10 years old scotched that.

"We went on a trip to ride some ponies in the summer of '68. I decided to go back and ride a little more ... and I decided that what I wanted to do was be around horses."

He hung around the El Fig Stables in Gardena so much he finally talked the owners into a job.

"The guys around the stable had been rodeopers and after I started working there I learned roping. That's where I learned to be a cowboy and started going to rodeos."

Sampson said he got started riding rough stock at team-roping jackpot events.

His first year as a pro, Sampson earned $22,000 before "I got hurt by a bull that dropped me to 20th." His second season he earned $7,000 before being sidelined with a broken leg.

He launched this season recently at the National Western by getting bucked off a notorious bull named "Macho Velvet," who only gets ridden two or three times a season.

Sampson plans to enter 115-120 rodeos this season.

"I drive to most rodeos. We can pool. If my schedule's pretty steep, I'll charter an airplane. I've gone to as many as three in one day."

Has he met racism in rodeoing?

"If it's out there, I never saw it. Most of these guys I associate with just know I'm here for the same reason they are. To compete. I can't say anything bad about rodeoing."

"I like the freedom, the idea I'm my own boss. I don't have to report to anybody. I like the traveling. I've met so many nice people."

Ashes disguise water rings

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q — A wet glass was left on our varnished dining room table for several days. A white mark now is there. We have hesitated to do anything about it for fear of ruining the finish altogether. What can we do about it other than refinishing the entire table top? We have received a number of suggestions, including using cigarette ashes.

A — Cigarette ashes, mixed with camphorated oil, sometimes work. So does camphorated oil used alone. Denatured alcohol also is good for this purpose, although it might affect the finish if used on a surface that has been coated with shellac. Whichever product is used, the area must be rubbed with a clean, soft cloth. If the stain doesn't disappear immediately, keep rubbing. Sometimes it may take as much as 10 minutes of rubbing to get the desired result.

B & B Appliance's only business is repair, service

Harold Ervin, owner of B & B Appliance at 1109 N. Midkiff Road, probably knows more about vacuum cleaners than anyone in Midland. A 27-year veteran in the field of vacuum cleaner repair, Ervin can assess the problem and give you a free estimate of the repair cost in a matter of minutes.

A former serviceman trainer for Hoover, Ervin says he'll do "anything that has to be done" to a vacuum cleaner to keep it operating at maximum efficiency.

What's more, Ervin does all the repairs himself. "If something doesn't work, there's no one to blame but me," he said.

But Ervin says he's not in the sales business. "My only business is service," he says, adding that there will be no high-pressure pitch to buy a new machine in his shop.

With low overhead, B & B Appliance can offer low repair costs, too. Ervin says any vacuum cleaner fan can be replaced for under $20, for example.

Ervin also repairs some small appliances, and says he specializes in mixer repairs.

Open from 9 a.m. until 5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, B & B Appliance features general vacuum cleaner repair with overnight service.

Bring your faulty vacuum to B & B Appliance at 1109 N. Midkiff Road for friendly, professional servicing, or give Harold Ervin a call at 697-2369.

Study shows slow sales gain

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — American buying habits should improve in 1981, but the expansion in consumer sales will be tempered by fear of high interest rates and tight credit, according to a University of Michigan survey.

"It is not so much a matter of consumer unwillingness to purchase as consumer inability to purchase, especially in terms of credit conditions," the school's Institute for Social Research said in a report released today.

"Given recent increases in interest rates, and the ephemeral nature of the presidential honeymoon, it is likely that consumer sentiment will follow a volatile path during the coming months," survey director Richard T. Curtin said.

President Reagan's proposed tax cut plus lower interest rates in 1981 would greatly strengthen recovery, he said.

On a scale based on 100 in February 1966, the latest index of consumer attitudes was 72.1 — up 1.3 points from the third quarter of 1980, 10 points ahead of the year-ago figure and 18 points above the record low in the second quarter of 1980.

The survey, which has been conducted quarterly since 1946, involved 2,063 people telephoned between Oct. 1 and Dec. 30. The margin of error was four percentage points, the institute said. "The pace of improvement has slowed as a result of offsetting shifts in consumer attitudes and expectations," Curtin said.

In the fourth quarter of the year, he said, consumer sentiment grew less favorable because of rising interest rates.

Don't forget details when buying a house

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

An 11-year-old mistake may cost five New York area families the houses they lived in for years — and thought they owned.

The incident highlights the importance of what may seem like minor details involved in buying a house.

The problem faced by the New York families centers around something called a title search — a check of ownership records to make sure that the seller of a property actually has the right to sell it.

A title search is one of the steps in "closing" a purchase — arranging for the actual transfer of property from one owner to another.

The New Yorkers bought their homes from a builder with the understanding that a proper title search had been made. It hadn't.

The land the houses were built on 11 years ago actually was owned by a Brooklyn woman, now dead. The woman's heirs went to court and a judge ruled that the homeowners had to surrender their property, even though they were not at fault.

Most title searches are routine. They are carried out by lawyers or title or abstract companies. The buyer of a house pays for the cost of the title search.

As a protection against problems — like the one in New York — lenders usually require homebuyers to purchase title insurance, just in case there is a claim that did not turn up in the title search. There is only one payment, due at the time the policy is issued. The mortgagee's policy protects only the lender; if you want protection for yourself, you must buy a separate owner's policy.

The Department of Housing and Urban Development, in a guide to closing costs, says an owner's title insurance policy may be a good idea even if you are sure that a complete title search has been made.

"Some types of land title problems, such as a past deed that was forged or signed by a minor, will not appear on the public record. And you could not expect to learn of such problems no matter how carefully a lawyer searched the public records," the HUD guide says. "Title insurance protects you against these and other risks, and also pays the expenses of going to court if it becomes necessary to establish the validity of the title."

The New York area families are now trying to work out a settlement with the company that holds the title insurance on their homes.

The cost of a title search and title insurance can add up to several hundred dollars. You should be prepared for these and other closing or settlement costs you will face in connection with buying a house. Prices vary from area to area, but you probably can expect closing costs to total about 5 percent of the purchase price of your house. On a $60,000 house, therefore, closing costs would be $3,000. You probably will have to pay these costs — in cash — at the time of the settlement.

Former football star faces charges

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — A former college football star who once was convicted of armed robbery was going to court today for arraignment on charges of murder, attempted murder and sodomy stemming from two attacks blamed on the "I-5 bandit," officials said.

Randall B. Woodfield, 30, Springfield, appeared before Marion County District Judge Tom Beck on Monday, but the arraignment was postponed to give Woodfield time to confer with his attorney.

The former wide receiver for Portland State University was a 17th round draft pick of the Green Bay Packers in 1974 but failed to make the National Football League team.

He had been held since Thursday in Springfield, where Police Chief Brian Riley said investigation of the I-5 bandit cases was focusing on Woodfield.

Officials have said they believe a man usually wearing a piece of tape across his nose and carrying a silver-colored pistol was responsible for two dozen crimes since Dec. 13 along 500 miles of Interstate 5 from Redding, Calif., to Bellevue, Wash.

Law enforcement agencies from Oregon, California and Washington set twice to compare notes on the incidents, which they believe were committed by the same man.

In Salem, Marion County District Attorney Chris Van Dyke filed a district attorney's information charging Woodfield with shooting to death Shri Hull, 19, and wounding Lisa Garcia, 19.

The women were clearing an insurance office Jan. 18 when a man sodomized them and shot both in the head, Van Dyke said. Ms. Garcia survived and helped in the investigation.

Police said bullets recovered from the scene of the Salem shooting matched those used in the Feb. 3 slaying of a 37-year-old woman, Donna Eckard, and her daughter, Janell Jarvis, 14, near Redding, Calif.

"We're looking at him," Shasta County, Calif., Sheriff's Capt. Jim Carter said of Woodfield.

Asked about a connection between the Salem incident and the I-5 bandit, Van Dyke said: "It really remains to be seen at trial whether or not there is a link between those — the various crimes. There are a number of similarities."

Van Dyke said Woodfield's arrest resulted from the investigation of a fatal shooting in the Portland suburb of Beaverton last month. Woodfield was an acquaintance of the victim, Julie Reitz, 18, Beaverton police said. No one has been charged in her death.

"There are numerous similarities which led us to Mr. Woodfield and to the arrest of Mr. Woodfield," Van Dyke said. "I'm going to have to refrain from making that connection right now. The most I can say is it was the investigation into that individual which led us to Mr. Woodfield and the charge being filed here."

Woodfield had been held in Springfield on a charge of violating parole by leaving the state. He was paroled in June 1979 from a 1975 armed robbery conviction in Portland.

He was arrested at a home where he had been renting a room for three months. Authorities said they had the house under surveillance, but have not said why.

Vickie Daniel to claim she killed husband accidentally

HOUSTON (AP) — The widow of Price Daniel Jr. will testify at a child custody trial she accidentally shot and killed the former Texas House Speaker after he became violent when she flushed away his stash of marijuana, a Houston newspaper has reported.

Mrs. Daniel, who is accused of killing her estranged husband Jan. 19 at their Liberty County ranch home, goes to court Thursday in a fight to retain custody of the couple's two young sons.

Mrs. Daniel waived her Fifth Amendment protection against self incrimination as part of an agreement to keep her sons until a jury resolves the dispute.

Sources close to the investigation told the Houston Post on Monday that Mrs. Daniel grabbed the marijuana and flushed the weed down the toilet during a squabble.

Daniel, son of former Texas Gov. Price Daniel Sr., became enraged and threatened to physically harm his wife, sources said. Mrs. Daniel then got a .22-caliber rifle and fired a warning shot, according to sources. A short time later, sources said, the gun accidentally discharged and the bullet struck Daniel in the abdomen, severing the aorta artery.

Mrs. Daniel, who twice threatened to divorce her husband, spent 14 hours behind closed doors last Friday and Monday giving a deposition in the custody suit filed by her sister-in-law. She returns today for more questioning.

Attorneys representing Mrs. Daniel and Mrs. Murphy refused to comment on the depositions.

Daniel's sister, Jean Daniel Murphy, is seeking custody of Franklin Baldwin Daniel, 3, and Marion Price Daniel IV, 1, claiming her sister-in-law is an unfit mother.

Houston attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes, representing Mrs. Daniel, has said he planned to submit evidence showing his client was a battered wife. During a hearing on pre-trial motions, Haynes alluded to the use of drugs and bisexual behavior by Daniel.

Students qualify for national contest

Three students from the Lee High School speech and drama squads qualified for the National Forensic League's national tournament in competition held late last week in Abilene.

Bobby Dawson and Kenny Jonsson placed first in cross-examination debate, while Eric Fryar was named most outstanding speaker at the NFL District Tournament held at Abilene Christian University. All three qualified for the national tournament to be held in Salt Lake City, Utah, in June.

Lee placed second overall in sweepstakes to San Antonio Churchill. A total of 25 of the top teams in the state competed in the meet.

Other finalists for Lee in the tourney were Tracey King, fourth place in persuasive speaking; Shelton Walsmith, fourth in dramatic reading; and Robyn Rose, fourth in oratory.

Lee's speech and drama squads also competed in the West Texas State University TFA Invitational Tournament in Canyon Feb. 27-28. Lee was third in sweepstakes in a field of 45 Texas and New Mexico teams.

Placing first for Lee were Fryar in boys' persuasive, Dawson and Jonsson in cross examination debate and Beverly Walker in television.

Sonja Goza was second in radio, while Tracey King and Jennifer King placed third in standard debate. Jonsson took third in boys' persuasive and John Shrode was third in humorous interpretation.

Placing fourth for Lee were Beverly Walker in radio and Miss Goza in television.

Semi-finalists were Miss Goza and Billy Todd in dramatic interpretation, Dawson and Marcia Norton in informative, Jimmy Moseley in impromptu and the teams of Paige Pendleton and Billy Todd and Carrie Beck and Barri Baird in duet acting.

89 PUBLIC NOTICE

On February 12, 1981, American Christian Television System, Inc., a Texas nonprofit corporation, filed an application with the Federal Communications Commission seeking authority to construct a new television translator station with low-power features on Channel 24, to serve Midland, Texas. The proposed facility, operating at 1.000 watts, will broadcast its programming from an antenna site located at the First National Bank Building, 303 West Wall Street, Midland, Texas.

Notice is hereby given that on February 19, 1981 one 1979 Ford Thunderbird 2-Door, VIN #9J87H17808, with accessories, was seized at Lubbock, Texas, for violation of 21 USC 881. Any person desiring to place the matter in U.S. District Court in order to contest the probable cause for such seizure, must file with the Special Agent in Charge, Drug Enforcement Administration, 1410 Rio Bravo, El Paso, Texas a claim and cost bond of $250.00 with approved sureties, on or before March 23, 1981. Otherwise, the property will be administratively forfeited pursuant to 19 USC 1608, and will be disposed of according to law. Interested parties may file petitions for remission or mitigation of forfeiture with the Special Agent in Charge pursuant to 19 USC 1618 and 21 CFR 1316.7b and 28 CFR 9.1-9.7 without filing Claim and Cost Bond. Case No. MB-81-X011. Special Agent in Charge Henry H. Washington.

Herbert Johnson turns MHS' frowns to smiles

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Sports Writer

ABILENE — When things aren't going just right, let the Magic Man pull a rabbit or two out of a hat and frowns turn to smiles.

That's what the Midland High Bulldogs did here Monday night against the Denton Broncos. Herbert "Magic" Johnson scored 13 of the Bulldogs' first 15 points in the second half to lead a 67-53 bi-district basketball rout over a game but helpless Denton crew to move into the Region I tournament at Chaparral Center Friday at 6 p.m. against tonight's bi-district winner between Fort Worth Dunbar and Arlington High.

JOHNSON, WHO hit for a game high 31 points, is not really magic at all, because his stuff is no illusion as the Broncos found out. Pure intimidation is probably a better term.

The 6-foot-9 All America choice, who has college coaches foaming at the mouth and in the stands when he plays, scored 11 of Midland High's 13 points in the third period to stake MHS to seven point, 46-39, lead. From there it was a cakewalk. During Johnson's power move, he connected on two dunks (one on an offensive rebound over two Denton players), converted a three-point play and dealt off an assist to Horace Brown for the other two points.

Johnson hit only 12 of 29 shots on the night, but his every move seem to take a little out of the Broncos.

Denton coach Judd Pritchard assessed the loss, "We lost because we didn't have the giant on our team. I know one thing, all these college coaches here tonight didn't come to here to see me. That kid (Johnson) is something special."

But the Bulldogs did seem to be in trouble in the second quarter after leading by as many as eight points in the first quarter after two charity conversions by Justin Morrett. The Bulldogs went dead from the field and free throw line. They were struggling.

MHS HIT only four of 17 shots in the second period while Denton pulled into a 27-27 tie with 2:03 left in the half on a pair of free throws by sophomore Doyle Franklin, who led Denton with 12 points on the night. The Bulldogs also hit only three of seven free throw chances.

"We didn't shoot the ball very well all night, but these kids always give of their best when they hit the court," said MHS coach Jack Stephenson. "I know we never got discouraged. We were concerned, but not because we weren't playing hard."

"Herbert didn't shoot as well as he can, but he was a big force in the game. But Mike Velasco is a good example of how we played all night. He had a ball stolen from him for what should have been an easy layup, but Mike recovered and went back down court and knocked the ball out of bounds and Denton ended up not getting any points. We played well and that is just an example."

Velasco added 14 points in one of his best overall outings of the season. He got six of his eight points with three of four long range balls. And his defensive play was beyond reproach. His defensive recovery after the turnover brought the response, "I knew if I didn't get the ball back, I would be on the bench." Velasco, as well as the other Bulldogs, know all about Stephenson's liberal substitution policy.

AS IT ended up, Midland High never trailed in the contest. After Denton tied the score at 27 in the second period, Johnson hit a layup, was fouled after the shot and converted two free throws for a four-point play to end the half with 16 points. Johnson then went on his third quarter spree as the Bulldogs started thinking of returning to Chaparral Center where they have won 28 games in a row. Their last loss at the Chap was a one-point setback to Snyder in December of 1979.

Despite the fugal second quarter by the Dogs, MHS started like a house on fire. Don Sharnowski opened the scoring with a 20-foot jumper from the baseline while MHS was off and running to a 22-14 margin. Denton's Franklin hit eight points in the period to keep the Broncos in the game and he is a class player. Johnson, however countered with 10 of his own. He could have had more, but he missed six shots and three free throw attempts.

Denton's Paul Berg kept Denton in the game in the third period with six points by dialing long range and ended the game with 10. MHS led by a 46-41 margin heading into the fourth period, but a Johnson dunk and Velasco's feed to Brown gave MHS a nine-point lead with 6:16 left to play.

WITH ABOUT five minutes left to play, the Bulldogs went into their seldom used four corner offense and ran it to near perfection, committing only one turnover. With the four-corner setup, MHS reeled off 10 unanswered points for a 16 point lead. Velasco got a field goal and two free throws off the four corner and Sharnowski got an easy layup.

"We've been working on the four corner a lot, but it wasn't the first time we've run it well," said guard Michael Feldt. "We used it in the first half of district against Cooper and ran it well then. But this was probably the best."

Feldt was another defensive stand out for the Bulldogs, getting several steals while haunting the Denton passing lanes. Booker Mackey also used his lightning quick reflexes to great use on the MHS press, which caused six Denton turnovers.

Midland High hit only 35 percent from the field with 24 of 68 shots while Denton hit an even 50 percent with 23 of 46. Still, the Bulldogs had 22 more shots at the basket after outrebounding the Broncos by 15. The Bulldogs also hit 14 of 16 free throws in the second half while Denton had four of seven. The Dogs had only five of 12 free throws in the first half while Denton was three of four.

THE VICTORY gave Midland High its sixth bi-district title since 1960 and they can now shoot for their third regional crown. Stephenson now has raised his two-year coaching record at MHS to 62-11. The Bulldogs will carry a 32-4 mark into the Region tournament Friday. Johnson, the only three-year starter on the club, has now been part of two bi-district championships, two district titles and one district co-championship. MHS' record with Johnson on the team has been 90-20.

Denton leaves the playoffs with a 20-13 mark, but they lost four of their last five games this season.

Big second inning lifts Dogs to win

By MIKE CRUVER
Sports Writer

The Midland High Bulldogs evened their season baseball record at 2-2 Tuesday afternoon with a 7-3 win over Class AAAA Snyder at Memorial Stadium diamond on a cold, damp day.

Midland scored all its runs in a big seven-run second inning. Frank Garramone opened the second by hitting a routine grounder to third. The Tigers' third basemen, Barry Davis, threw the ball into the Dogs' dugout for a two-base error. Benny Ozuna struckout, before Davis threw Tim Davis' ground ball into the dugout for his second error of the inning. With runners on second and third and nobody out, Snyder's starting pitcher Mike Roemisch, cut loose with a fastball that catcher Neil Evans couldn't handle as Garramone trotted home with the first run of the game. Roemisch proceeded to make the situation stickier by walking Peter Galindo and Fabian Ramos to load the bases.

Eddie Portillo, the fifth batter of the inning, hit a nubber toward third that Davis grabbed, threw to home but Evans fumbled away the ball as Davis scored and the bases were still loaded with just one out. Kyle Ford delivered two more runs with a Texas leaguer into left field. Joel Castanada became the second out of the inning when he hit into a second to first put out. On the play, Davis advanced to second.

Jerry Zachery followed with a sizzling liner into left field for a hit. The ball got away from Perry Echols allowing Ford to score and Zachery came to rest at third. Garramone, getting his second turn at bat in the inning, scored the final Purple Pack run with a wicked line drive single up the middle. Finally, Roemisch retired Benny Ozuna on a second to first putout to end the long inning.

IN ALL, the Bulldogs scored seven runs on three hits, three errors, two passed balls and one wild pitch.

Roemisch was relieved by Ralph Hernandez in the third inning and he held the Bulldogs to a single over the last three innings.

Doug McLean, who had been cru-ing along with a one-hitter gave into the first Tiger run of the game in the fourth inning.

Jesse Hernandez lashed a double into right field with one away. Brent Roemisch struck out before Evans reached first on an error by shortstop Portillo. With runners on first and third and one away Hernandez scored on an error by Garramone. On the play, McLean struckout Gary Don Edmiston but Garramone dropped the third strike then fired the ball wildly to second in an attempt to get Evans. On the throw, Hernandez scored the first Snyder run.

SNYDER THREATENED again in the fifth inning. With one away, Tony DeGrate got ahold of a McLean fast ball and sent it into the parking lot behind left field. Hernandez followed by reaching on an error by Daniel Castanada and then Brent Roemisch reached as Isaac Rodriguez mis-played his grounder. With runners on first and second, Evans belted a drive into left center field to score one run and put runners at second and third.

Just when it looked like McLean wouldn't last the day he made five good pitches to end the game. Facing Edmiston, McLean threw a curve that Edmiston tapped back to McLean who went to first for the second out. Up stepped Gerald Don Hicks, a strikeout victim his two previous trips. McLean threw a fast ball for a strike, a curve that was outside and then two more fastballs that sent Edmiston back to the bench on a called strike three.

McLean, who coach Tim Whalen said, was making his first start since shaking a hamstring injury, gave up five hits, walked two and struck out seven.

Whalen said, "I was pleased, of course, after this weekend we should play better. There was a tongue lashing and some changes were going to be made if things didn't straighten out. We didn't hit the ball very well, (five hits) but we looked a lot better in the field."

MHS is back on the Memorial Stadium diamond today at 4 p.m. to host Coronado.

Miller ousted as Denver head coach

Reeves tabbed as new man

DENVER (AP) — Red Miller has been fired as head coach of the Denver Broncos, and Dan Reeves, offensive coordinator for the Dallas Cowboys, has been hired to take his place, team sources say.

MILLER WAS fired Monday afternoon along with Fred Gehrke, general manager of the National Football League team. Gehrke will be replaced by Grady Alderman, 43, director of planning and development for the Minnesota Vikings, said Mike Lynn, vice president of the Vikings.

Gehrke said he was surprised by the action, taken just 12 days after the team was sold to Edgar Kaiser Jr. of Vancouver, British Columbia.

"Red has been a good coach. I hired him. It's all a surprise," Gehrke said.

Asked if he felt bitter, Gehrke, 62, said, "No, no way." He said he may retire from professional sports and devote himself to playing golf.

Tom Landry, head coach at Dallas, said Reeves was offered the Broncos coaching position after Reeves talked with Kaiser over the weekend.

"Dan came in today from Denver and informed me, the flew back to Denver tonight," Landry said.

"We're delighted that he has the opportunity to become a head coach."

MILLER SPENT the evening removing his personal belongings from his office. From a second-story window, he told a group of newsmen assembled outside the Bronco offices that he was "unavailable" for comment.

"I treated you guys good, now you can treat me good. I have nothing to say, nothing, nothing," Miller said.

Miller's firing was the first major change to take place since the team was sold Feb. 25 by Gerald Phipps of Denver. The new owner, 38-year-old Kaiser, is chairman and chief executive officer of Kaiser Resources Ltd.

of Vancouver and Kaiser Oil, U.S. Ltd., a Denver-based oil and gas exploration company.

No sale price was announced, but sources indicated it was in excess of $30 million.

Miller, 53, has coached the Broncos for the past four seasons. A former offensive coordinator for the New England Patriots, Miller succeeded John Ralston as the team's head coach in February 1977.

THE FOLLOWING season, Miller led the Broncos to the Super Bowl in New Orleans after the team posted its best regular-season record ever, 12-2. At Super Bowl XII, the team bowed to the Dallas Cowboys, 27-10.

In 1980, the Broncos had their worst finish in Miller's four years as head coach. At 8-8, the team tied with Kansas City for third place in the American Conference Western Division. But the Chiefs' two victories over Denver gave Kansas City third place, and the Broncos dropped to fourth place for scheduling purposes.

NCAA and NIT open play tonight

By The Associated Press
Termed by one official "the best field we've ever had," the National Invitation Tournament opens tonight with Fordham facing Dayton — and the NCAA playoffs not very far behind.

"Dayton has a reputation of being a tough place to play," says Fordham Coach Tom Penders as his basketball team prepared to meet the Flyers in the only first-round NIT game on tap. "I know it'll be a full house, but I think we'll match up well."

Until last week, the Rams were shooting or the more prestigious NCAA playoffs, but were upst by Long Island University in the ECAC Metro Division playoffs. The Rams were one of two New York City teams in the 4th NIT along with St. John's.

It is Fordham's ninth appearance in the NIT, but the first since 1972 when the Rams lost to Jacksonville. They have lost two previous meetings with Dayton, in 1958 and 1968. The Flyers have appeared in the NIT 14 times and won championships in 1962 and 1968.

The University of Dayton Arena, incidentally, will be a busy one this week with both the NIT and NCAA playing regional games there. On Thursday night, Dayton will host a National Collegiate Athletic Association Midwest Regional double-header featuring Creighton against St. Joseph's, Pa., and Maryland against Tennessee-Chattanooga.

The NIT has more first-round games Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

On Wednesday night, it will be Old Dominion at Georgia; American at Toledo; San Jose State at Texas-El Paso; Drake at Minnesota and Texas-Arlington versus South Alabama at Mobile, Ala.

Thursday night's schedule features Rhode Island at Purdue; Connecticut at South Florida; Duquesne at Michigan; North Carolina A&T at Duke; Temple at Clemson; Alabama at St. John's and Holy Cross at Southern Mississippi.

On Friday night, Tulsa will host Pan American and Marquette will play at Syracuse. West Virginia will play at a game to be determined, possibly the loser of tonight's Ivy League playoff game between Penn and Princeton.

The second and third rounds in the 32-team tournament will be played the following week before the semifinals and finals March 23 and 25 at Madison Square Garden in New York.

"I think it's the best field we've ever had," says P.J. Carlesimo, one of the five-man selection committee that corralled 11 teams with 20 or more victories. "There is great balance and an awful lot of quality teams."

Minnesota Coach Jim Dutcher is apt to agree.

"The NIT field," he says, "may be almost as strong as the NCAA's."

Meanwhile, the NCAA's Midwest action at Dayton will be one of four regional double-headers across the country Thursday night.

In the East-Regionals at Providence, R.I., it's Georgetown against James Madison and Brigham Young against the Ivy League champion. In the Midwest at Austin, Texas, Missouri faces Lamar and Arkansas plays Mercer. The West Regional at Los Angeles matches Kansas State against San Francisco and Wyoming against Howard.

First-round action in the 48-team tournament continues with four more regional double-headers Friday night.

In an East regional at Charlotte, N.C., it's Virginia Commonwealth against LIU and Houston against Villanova. In the Midwest at Tuscaloosa, Ala., Ball State will play Boston College and Alabama-Birmingham will take on Western Kentucky.

Kansas meets Mississippi and Southern University faces Wichita

State in a Midwest Regional double-header at Wichita, Kan. In a West twinbill at El Paso, Texas, it's Idaho against Pittsburgh and Fresno State against Northeastern.

Regional play continues this weekend with second-round games Saturday and Sunday, with all teams pointing for the national championships in Philadelphia March 28 and 30.

The teams will not only be shooting for recognition as the best in college basketball, but for the richest payday in NCAA playoff history. The NCAA has promised each of the 48 teams involved at least $90,000.

The regional winners who make Philadelphia are guaranteed $360,000 apiece, thanks to a $1.5 million increase in the television contract, the NCAA announced.

MHS boosters to meet Thursday

The Midland High Booster Club will meet at 7 p.m. Thursday at the MHS Youth Center to view the Bulldogs' 67-52 bi-district championship victory over the Denton Broncos.

MHS basketball coach Jack Stephenson also said that tickets for the Region I playoff tournament, scheduled Friday and Saturday for Chaparral Center, will also be on sale. Stephenson said that each school would be given only 1,500 tickets each and other tickets will be on a first come, first serve basis at Chaparral Center Friday and Saturday.

The tournament is expected to draw a large number of people and MHS fans should get their tickets early. All basketball fans are invited to attend the meeting.

'Tomorrow's Champions' for real?

By The Associated Press

They call it "Tomorrow's Champions," a television showcase for several promising young fighters. But are the possible future champs being fed a diet of chumps in order to fatten their records and earn them big-money fights?

The charge of building up a fighter with a weak opposition is a charge as old as the fight game itself. It's an automatic charge. Of course, it often is true.

"None of these kids has fought anyone with a losing record," said Teddy Brenner, the matchmaker for Bob Arum's Top Rank, Inc., which is the promoter of the series.

DR. FERDIE Pacheco, the boxing consultant for NBC, which has televised six "Tomorrow's Champions" shows under a two-year, eight-shows-a-year minimum contract with Arum, also is rankled by any suggestions that the youngsters are being coddled.

Ali's former ring doctor noted that middleweight Tony Ayala, in his fourth pro fight met and beat Mike Baker, a veteran of about 50 fights who fought for the world junior middleweight title. "You call that a mismatch," said Pacheco.

Brenner pointed out that heavy-weight Mitchell Green in his first fight knocked out Chuck Gardner in the first round and that Gardner recently was knocked out by Trevor Berbick, who will fight champion Larry Holmes for the World Boxing Council title. He wondered which fight was the mismatch.

OF COURSE, Pacheco and Brenner have a product to sell. But they must be given the benefit of the doubt at this point. A matchmaker would be crazy to go out of the way to get beat fighters his boss is trying to build up, and a network boxing consultant would be crazy to try and destroy young fighters who could later be of benefit to his network. But that doesn't convict them of selling setups.

Under the agreement, Pacheco said, "Bob Arum would provide us with a package of eight fighters." These fighters were medalists in the trials for the 1980 Olympics, which were boycotted by the United States.

But new talent can be added to the series — fighters like middleweight Bobby Crzyz and featherweight Freddy Roach and probably lightweights Jon Vederosa and Ray Mancini.

Fighters also can be dropped and opponents of the showcased fighters be changed. "The only thing I am involved with — and it is an important involvement is that I can cancel fighters who I don't feel are up to it," said Pacheco.

Brenner said Pacheco can refuse a certain matchup, but it is he who makes the matches.

"We also give their opponents a chance," said Pacheco of the fact that opponents for "Tomorrow's Champions" get a chance for exposure which could pay off with a victory.

"I took this program," said Pacheco, "because this is something I would have dreamed of doing for these kids, who should have gone to the Olympics."

BUT THE doctor also feels that the series is not all plus for the young fighters. "Maybe this kind of exposure shouldn't be given to these kids because they make mistakes in public," Pacheco said. He feels that flaws publicly displayed can channel a young fighter's career in the wrong direction.

So far, "Tomorrow's Champions" has not been a knockout in the ratings. The last two shows, both early on Sunday afternoon, have gotten a 3.1 rating with a 9 audience share and a 4.4 with a 14, respectively. But they were cleared only for 64 and 63 percent of the NBC affiliates, respectively. "NBC is not promoting this wildly," said Pacheco.

But he feels, "We're very satisfied with the progress. I think the concept is sound." And if it creates future fighting stars for the other networks, "we have absolutely no qualms," he said.

Carlton Fisk, former Boston Red Sox catcher, right, is introduced to reporters by Chicago White Sox General Manager Roland Hemond in Chicago Monday. Hemond and Fisk announced that they had reached general agreement on the veteran catcher joining the team.

Fisk expected to sign with Chisox

CHICAGO (AP) — Veteran catcher Carlton Fisk, who became a free agent when the Boston Red Sox failed to mail him a contract in time, soon will become a member of the Chicago White Sox.

Fisk appeared at a White Sox press conference Monday but officially has not yet signed a contract.

Jerry Reinsdorf, chairman of the board of the White Sox, said, "I'll be very, very surprised if a contract were not executed by the end of the week."

Fisk, who came from San Diego with Reinsdorf and White Sox General Manager Roland Hemond, said he reached his decision to sign with the White Sox during the flight.

Several stars missing from Dallas tennis meet

DALLAS (AP) — Top seed Martina Navratilova meets Julie Harrington today in first round action at the injury-depleted field at the Avon Championships of Dallas.

Ms. Navratilova, who has won three of the eight tournaments on the indoor winter circuit, meets Ms. Harrington of Spokane, Wash. in one of the feature matches of first round competition today.

Several top stars of the women's circuit, including Tracy Austin, are missing from this week's tournament.

Another top match has Billie Jean King facing Felicia Raschiatore.

If Ms. King prevails it would set up a second round match between her and Virginia Wade, who saved a match point and a second-set tiebreaker Monday night and rallied to defeat Sandy Collins of Odessa, Tex.

in the first round

In other matches Monday, seventh-seeded Mima Jausovec of Yugoslavia cruised past Leslie Allen of New York City in the day's quickest match, 6-0, 6-4.

Ms. Collins was able to dominate Ms. Wade for most of the first two sets with a variety of slices, spins and soft lobs that frustrated the former Wimbledon champion. Ms. Collins had a match point in the tiebreaker, leading 6-5, but Ms. Wade sprinted across court and hit a forehand volley to save the point, and two points later, she won the tiebreaker, 8-6, on an error by Ms. Collins.

Ms. Wade used an improved serve and volley to run out the final set by denying Ms. Collins a single serve.

Mary Lou Piatek of Muenster, Ind., upset No. 8 seed Barbara Potter of Woodbury, Conn., 6-4, 6-2 in another first round match Monday.

Lineup moves highlight UT spring drills

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The start of Texas Longhorn spring football training Monday saw numerous lineup changes.

The most publicized has been the shift of quarterback Donnie Little to split end.

Three highly touted freshmen also are moving. Mike Ruether, who trained at center and right tackle last fall, will work a left tackle. Middle linebacker Jeff Leiding will shift to weakside linebacker, and Ed Williams is moving from weakside linebacker to right defensive end.

Coach Fred Akers is coaching the offensive backfield in the absence of assistant Bobby Warmack, who is recovering from a back operation.

The National Basketball Association will revamp its policy regarding zone defenses at the next set of league meetings this summer. But how it will resolve the perplexing zone problem is up in the air.

One good sign is that everyone recognizes the need to make a change, the current rule prohibiting zones having proven itself to be inadequate. There have already been more than 150 technical fouls called against teams for violating the no-zone rule, and by the end of the season last year's total of 65 will have been tripled.

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Olympic flame will burn again today

JEFFERSONVILLE, Vt. (AP) — An Olympic flame will burn again today for competitors in the International Winter Special Olympics.

The Games for the mentally retarded, officially begin today with the lighting of the flame. U.S. Olympic speed skating medalists Eric and Beth Heiden are the honorary coaches for the Games, which will bring together 650 athletes, 250 coaches and 2,000 volunteers from 47 states and more than a dozen other countries.

POCATELLO, Idaho (AP) — Some 600 entries are expected this weekend as Idaho State University hosts the Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women's indoor track and field championships.

It's only the second time AIAW has conducted a national championship event and the defending champion Texa-El Paso women's team is expected to challenge for the title again. Competition in the Minidoka starts Friday with most championships to be decided Saturday night.

NEW YORK (AP) — Left-hander Sylvia Hanika and Barbara Potter have qualified for the singles competition in the $300,000 Avon Tennis Championships at Madison Square Garden March 25-29.

They join Martina Navratilova, Andrea Jaeger and Hana Mandlikova. Three berths remain open.

Sue Barker and Ann Kiyomura have joined Rosie Casals and Wendy Turnbull in the doubles field with two more teams to be selected.

YUMA, Ariz. (AP) — Ray Kroc, owner of the San Diego Padres, says he will keep the money-losing National League baseball club "forever" if he can explain what he called reasonable losses.

Kroc was quoted last weekend as saying he might sell the team because it lost $2.7 million last season. "All I said was I don't want to go on losing $2.7 million," Kroc said in a new interview Sunday.

Americans still have problems on skiing circuit

ASPEN, Colo. (AP) — Phil Mahre's victory and Steve Mahre's third-place finish in the World Cup giant slalom here underscored both a strength and a weakness of the U.S. men's ski team.

Phil's triumph, his second straight over incomparable slalom specialist Ingemar Stenmark of Sweden, helped move him closer to Stenmark in the race for the World Cup overall title this season. Even Stenmark, a three-time overall champion, admitted he feels Mahre has the inside track toward winning the cup.

Meanwhile, Phil's twin brother, Steve, moved into fourth place on the overall list, and has a solid shot at moving past

Peter Mueller of Switzerland into third place.

That would clearly be the best finish ever for the United States on the World Cup circuit.

Americans have won six World Cup races this season, with Phil Mahre taking two, Steve one and Tamara McKinney three — the latest being McKinney's triumph in the women's giant slalom on Sunday.

But the Mahres, of Yakima, Wash., find the situation unsettling because of the lack of depth on the men's team.

Put simply, there's nobody behind them. Doug Powell of Chappaqua, N.Y., managed a career-best ninth-place finish in the downhill on Friday, but in Saturday's giant slalom, the highest American after the Mahres was Scott Hoffman of Ogden, Utah, who wound up 28th.

"It's frustrating for me and my brother that we don't have anybody to fill our shoes if we retire," said Phil. "We have some talented young kids on our men's team, but they're not progressing, not taking off."

Mahre mentioned three young racers with potential — Mark Tache, Dave Stapleton and Mike Farny — and said, "I can't make them good racers. They have to do it themselves."
