'Reasonable' effort for hostages favored

By LEE BYRD

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department's top counterterrorism official says the Reagan Administration stands "willing and happy to support any reasonable effort" by the Rev. Jesse Jackson to win the release of Americans held hostage in Lebanon by Islamic extremists.

Jackson said late Thursday that "if it is feasible and possible, I am willing to go to Kuwait and Lebanon, and if it would help, even Tehran (Iran)," in behalf of the hostages.

The civil rights leader and relatives of the American prisoners were scheduled for a second round of discussions at the State Department today.

Jackson, family members and Ambassador Robert Oakley, director of the Office of Counterterrorism at the State Department, met Thursday evening at Jackson's "Rainbow Coalition" offices to discuss what the terrorists termed their "final warning" in messages published Wednesday in Beirut newspapers.

Several family members felt they detected a softening of the administration's position in their discussions with Oakley. They declined to be specific, but indicated they expected several new ideas to be explored further in today's meeting.

Vice President George Bush said the hostages have "a very high priority" in the administration and "Yes, there is concern" about the latest threat from their captors. "I can say we're trying in some way, absolutely, but don't pin me down," Bush said. "I think it has a better chance to be more effective if it's kept quiet."

The administration has consistently taken the position that it will not negotiate with the terrorists, who have demanded that the United States pressure Kuwait into releasing several Islamic prisoners. Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said earlier Thursday that "We will not allow ourselves to be intimidated by terrorist threats or permit such threats to compromise our fundamental policies and values."

Referring to Speakes' statement, Jackson said "We need to make another approach to the White House — an appeal for mercy. I would hope no one would be so self-righteous as to hide behind iron-clad policies."

"Human lives are at stake," he said. "Our national security is not at stake."

Jackson and Oakley met with relatives of Terry Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press; the Rev. Benjamin Weir; and the Rev. Martin Lawrence Jenco.

The pictures of Anderson, Weir, Jenco, U.S. embassy official William Buckley and two Frenchmen were sent to a Lebanon newspaper Wednesday, accompanied by the "final warning" addressed to their families, the public and to Jackson.

Chemical unit must re-apply

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

Rising construction costs will force Clearview Behavioral Health Center to submit a new certificate-of-need application before receiving final approval, the Texas Health Facilities Commission ruled Thursday in Austin.

"They denied the hospitals' request for an amendment of the (original) certificate," said Kevin Reed of the Austin law firm of Davis and Davis, which is representing the Midland County Hospital District, Midland Memorial Hospital and its two Arizona partners, Camelback Hospitals and Samaritan Health Service. Reed said the reasons for the 2-to-1 vote by the commissioners "were more procedural than anything else."

The center, which is to provide treatment for chemical dependency, began construction in November and was to be completed in May, but its sponsors are now requesting an extension until Sept. 17, according to Reed. The cost of the project, originally estimated at $3.4 million, has risen to $4.3 million, a 27 percent increase which ran afoul of a THFC rule requiring new certificate-of-need hearings for all projects with cost increases exceeding 20 percent.

"They have a cap on amending applications, and they decided they wanted to keep a firm cap," said Reed, who is confident the new application will be approved: "It's not as if we were just turned down."

Reed said it was his understanding the new application would be expedited, with a decision from the commission within 90 days. Construction will continue in the meantime, he added, so if the new application is approved, "we'll end up with exactly the same result."

And if the application is denied, "Really the only thing they could do was come back and assess you a small fine," said Reed.

Commissioners pick Pate as jail architect

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Midland County commissioners catapulted the County Jail into the renovation cycle Thursday afternoon by unanimously assigning Midland architect Walter Pate to the jail project.

"He has tremendous familiarity that any other architect is going to have to gain with the Commission on Jail Standards..., and the standards themselves," Commissioner Durward Wright said. "He has researched it from cover to cover. We've already trained this boy."

"And trained him well," said Commissioner Win Brown.

The jail renovation project was approved May 11 under a $3 million bond issue which also calls for expansion of Culver Youth Home and the funding of a study of Midland County needs well into the 21st Century.

Pate, who has designed jails elsewhere and saw them through completion, designed the proposed Midland County courthouse-jail addition which was turned down in an $11.69 million bond issue in 1983 and designed the $8.4 million jail and sheriff's office complex which was defeated at the polls on May 11 in a $9.9 million bond election.

"We need to get started," said Sheriff Gary Painter.

Next Wednesday, the sheriff, architects Pate and James Riggen, and Commissioners Brown and Wright are to meet with the Jail Commission in Austin to give a progress report on the county's efforts to bring the jail up to standards.

Meanwhile, Pate and Riggen are preparing detailed plans for the jail renovation and other measures to correct jail deficiencies cited in a Jail Commission inspection report on the 12-year-old jail on the fifth floor of the 1930-vintage Midland County Courthouse.

"We've got one architect (Pate) who has studied the Commission on Jail Standards' requirements from top to bottom and pored over them for years," note Wright.

Pate, who has been involved in designing new jails for Midland County, said he is "somewhat familiar" with the existing jail but has "never seen a copy of the inspection report, so I don't know all of the deficiencies." Pate said he and Riggen, who was project manager on the proposed $8.4 million jail-sheriff's office complex, immediately would start on the renovation project. He said they are accustomed to "burning the midnight oil."

"We're prepared to start today," Pate said. The commissioners agreed to pay Pate a fee equal to 7 percent of the construction costs, which have not been determined. Pate noted that 7 percent is the standard architectual fee for a new project and that the fee for a renovation project usually is somewhat higher.

"I think we could prepare something very soon to submit for a response from the Commission on Jail Standards," Pate said. "As long as they can see progress being made, they are much more receptive to allowing the jail to continue to operate. We would be as judicious about spending the money as we possibly can."

Former bank president given 25-year sentence

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Former Metro Bank President John Edward "Eddie" Thomas Jr., who faced a maximum of 70 years in prison, was sentenced to 25 years in federal prison by U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton.

The judge "stacked" several of the five-year prison terms and ordered others to run concurrently.

Thomas was convicted by a jury on April 26 on 14 counts of embezzling and misapplying $550,000 of Metro Bank funds and making false entries of nearly $1 million between 1981 and 1983. He could have been sentenced up to five years in prison on each of the 14 counts or up to 70 years.

Bunton, who pronounced sentence about noon Thursday in federal court here, also placed Thomas on probation for five years and ordered him to pay more than $550,000 in restitution.

The 42-year-old Thomas was president of Metro Bank at Midland Regional Airport from its inception in 1978 until he resigned on July 14, 1983 — two weeks before the bank failed on July 29, 1983.

Metro Bank was closed by the Texas State Banking Commission for insolvency due to its high percentage of non-performing loans and to $7 million in loan losses. The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. (FDIC) became the bank's receiver.

After the closing, the Federal Bureau of Investigation launched a probe into the bank to detect any possible fraud and criminal tampering of bank records and funds.

Bunton ordered Thomas the U.S. Marshal in Midland on June 17 to begin serving his sentence at an undisclosed location. He was released on a personal recognizance bond.

Thomas, of Odessa, will be eligible for parole after serving one-third of the sentence — about eight years and four months.

Prior to sentencing, Thomas told the court he felt remorse for his crimes. "I know I'm going to spend some time in prison, but I'm going to take it like a man and hopefully come back a better citizen," he said.

Defense attorney John Smith asked that Bunton not make an example out of Thomas, noting "Eddie's been on trial for about two years, and today you're going to pass sentence on him for the crimes those 12 people found him guilty of...I ask you not to be lenient, but to be fair."

Senate voice vote gives Blue Law repeal final approval

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Senate today gave its final approval to a bill that would repeal the Sunday-closing Blue Law.

On a voice vote, senators sent the legislation to the House for action on amendments.

On Thursday, the bill won preliminary approval after the Blue Law was described by some as having outlived its usefulness.

Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, said that with changing lifestyles, "We've reached a time ... where we need to join the rest of the Union and repeal the Blue Law."

The Blue Law, which bans the sale of certain items on consecutive weekend days, was enacted in 1961, at a time when 40 other states had such a law, Farabee said, but most of them have already repealed it.

Sen. John Traeger said, "I wouldn't vote for this bill if there were 1,000 lobbyists here with shotguns aimed at me."

■ White unsure of seat belt legislation— Page 3A
■ Prison pact leaves choices — Page 4A

Traeger, D-Seguin, suggested repealing the law and opening up more shops on Sunday would virtually do away with traditional Sunday family dinners. "You will break up life's pattern, with the kids saying, 'Why's dad got to work on Sunday?' "

Farabee said no employee would have to work seven straight days unless he chose to do so, and employees would get time off for worship.

His argument for repeal included an estimate that an extra shopping day would generate more than $24 million in increased sales tax revenue.

Sen. Bob Glasgow said he doubted that estimate because there is only so much money to spend and the additional shopping day would make no difference. He also said he feared increased competition for Sunday sales would "close mom and pop stores."

Firefighters' guns puzzle public

GRAND PRAIRIE, Texas (AP) — Four members of the Grand Prairie Fire Department are asked a question almost every day that their fellow firefighters are not faced with — "Why do you carry that gun?"

The four gun-toting firefighters are investigators.

Because they are peace officers and because they investigate arson fires and try to arrest arsonists, the investigators are required to carry pistols. They also wear badges and uniforms and drive cars equipped with police-type warning lights.

"I bet I get asked about a half a dozen times a day about why I carry a gun," said Lt. Doug Johnson, an investigator for 10 of his 19 years with the department.

"If I had a $1 for every time I was asked about why I wear a gun, I'd probably be a millionaire," Lt. Bill Kallstom said.

"We make inspections and do investigations, check complaints, review building plans, investigate for the cause of fires, determine if fires were set by arsonsists and do fire prevention work," Johnson said. "We even do stakeouts like police do when we're trying to catch an arsonist."

Much of a fire inspector's time is spent with paperwork, but after a fire they pull on coveralls and boots, grab shovels and start digging through debris to determine the cause of the blaze.

Arson investigators in some cities don't wear uniforms while performing these duties.

Lt. Doug Conner, a 17-year department veteran, said, "Grand Prairie is unique to the area and most of the country because our arson investigators wear uniforms," Conner said. "In most places, arson investigators are plain-clothes policemen or fire investigator. We wear our uniforms so if we are making inspections or something like that people will know we are members of the fire department."

Arson is sometimes a difficult crime to detect and catching an arsonist can be even tougher.

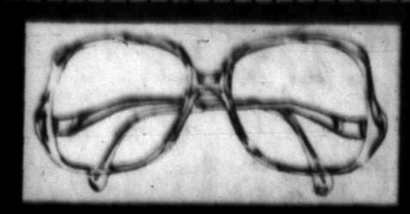

"Arson is second to poisoning as the most difficult crime to prove," Johnson said. "So often the evidence is circumstantial. State law requires that we need something tying an individual to the fire. We don't catch many arsonists because it's a crime of stealth. They won't go out and do it during the day like a robbery that's hard to conceal."

During large fires, the inspectors interview people who were at the site or neighbors that might have seen something suspicious. They also scan the crowd, checking for anyone who has shown up at other fires and might be a suspected arsonist.

The inspectors go to the gun range once a month to sharpen their proficiency with pistols and often attend clinics and seminars that relate to their jobs.

"The work load is tremendous," Conner said. "I didn't realize how heavy it was until after I had this job for about six months and then I said, 'I'm dizzy from all of this.'"

"The only thing I miss is the shift work," said Lt. Mike Taylor, an inspector and former firefighter. "I found out I can't do the same things during the two days of the weekend as I could between shifts."

Seven Fort Hood soldiers held in man's beating death

HARKER HEIGHTS (AP) — Seven Fort Hood soldiers have been arrested in connection with a beating last Friday that led to the death of a Harker Heights resident whose body was dumped near Waxahachie.

Officials said Thursday that as many as 11 people, including 10 soldiers, may have been involved in the killing of Candido Antonio Barroso at his trailer home in Harker Heights, a small town near the Army base.

The dispute apparently was over problems the victim was having with his girlfriend, with whom he had been living in the trailer home, an Ellis County justice of the peace said.

Murder complaints filed against two men Wednesday charge that Barroso was kicked, beaten, and struck with a crowbar, tire tool, horseshoe, and an unknown object.

Charged with murder were Spec. 4 Gregory Toney and Sgt. Derrick Sutton, both 21. They were arrested Wednesday and were being held Thursday in the Bell County Jail on $50,000 bail each.

Five more soldiers were arrested at Fort Hood Thursday and charged with aggravated assault. They are Sgt. Bruce Konieczka, 24; Spec. 4 Michael Webb, 22; Sgt. David C. Duff, 24; Staff Sgt. Raymond G. Wakefield, 23; and Pfc. Robin R. Overby, 21. Bail for each was set at $20,000.

All seven were mechanics and repairmen with the 190th Maintenance Co. at Fort Hood.

"They were going to try to straighten his act out, and it just went too far," Billy Moon of Waxahachie, an Ellis County justice of the peace, said.

"A lot of it took place in the trailer park," Moon said. He was told that the woman and about 10 soldiers "had a meeting in her trailer."

"From what I understand, they had been partying all afternoon."

The body was driven by car to Ellis County and dumped there Friday night, officials said.

Barroso's body was found Tuesday under some bushes west of Waxahachie. He died of head injuries, according to a preliminary autopsy report. His age was not available, but he was said to be in his mid-20s.

Moon said more than one of the 11 people involved in the incident helped law officers try to find the body of Barroso. Law officers searched along Business U.S. 287 just west of the Waxahachie city limits Monday and Tuesday before finding the body near a creek Tuesday afternoon.

Bell County District Attorney Cappy Eads said the case was still being investigated.

"I would not preclude at this time the filing of additional charges against those already charged or against additional parties," Eads said.

"We have a situation where we have some 11 people involved. We are still determining the extent of involvement of each."

Biologists predict very good shrimping season

GALVESTON (AP) — Federal biologists predict the Texas bay shrimping season, which opened this week, will be very good but warned that too much fishing and too many boats could doom the industry.

"A collapse of the industry is within the realm of a possibility," marine scientist Ed Klima of the National Marine Fisheries Service says.

Neil Baxter, a biologist with the same agency, said research shows heavy concentrations of juvenile brown shrimp in Sydnor Bayou, a secondary bay in Galveston Bay.

"We are predicting that the 1985 summer shrimp harvest will be a very good one," Baxter said.

White unsure about buckling up Texans

AUSTIN (AP) — The mandatory seat belt bill was in Gov. Mark White's lap today and he says he was not sure whether he will buckle it into state law.

The governor wears his seat belt, thinks all Texans should, but is not yet sure it's a law with which he would be comfortable.

"I have always maintained that seat belts were useful in cutting down deaths on our highways. We never ask the question when we get in an airplane whether we buckle out seat belts or not. The dangers are much greater for injuries riding in an automobile than any airplane we have ever taken," White said.

He added he would "review" the bill sent to him by a 77-60 House vote Thursday.

"I would hope we would have compliance voluntarily," he said.

Texans have shown little hankering for buckling up. House sponsor Bill Messer said only about 15 percent of Texans now use the life-saving belts.

The mandatory use law could immediately raise that to 80 percent, according to the lawmaker from Belton who wants to make you put your belt on.

The bill would require drivers and front-seat passengers in cars and smaller pick-up trucks to wear their seat belts or face a fine of $25-$50.

"I keep my seat belt on all the time," said White.

Democratic budget plan headed for floor fight

By DAVID ESPO

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Democratic plan to cut federal spending by $56 billion next year without touching Social Security is headed for the House floor and a likely showdown over demands for a new minimum corporate tax to reduce deficits even further.

"I think there is substantial support in the House for a minimum tax on the big corporations," said Democratic Leader Jim Wright, serving notice he will lead the move to attach such a provision to the package of spending cuts the House Budget Committee approved Thursday, 21-12.

Rep. William Gray, D-Pa., the panel's chairman, declined to say whether he would support the proposed minimum tax. Instead, he used a news conference to hail the $967 billion budget as a "very balanced package that provides for national security, protects low income people, protects the elderly and at the same time achieves significant deficit reduction."

The budget denies the Pentagon any increase in spending authority for 1986, and freezes spending on many domestic programs.

But unlike a plan approved by the Republican-controlled Senate last week, it provides for inflation adjustments next year for Social Security benefits as well as programs that aid the poor, such as welfare and Medicaid.

The Democratic alternative also provides for more money for domestic programs, and leaves room for continued funds for 12 of the 13 programs that the GOP package would eliminate. The only exception is revenue sharing, which would be cut by 25 percent next year and then eliminated in 1987.

In all, the Democratic budget would cut $289 billion over three years, slicing deficits nearly in half, to about $120 billion.

The plan was approved on a near party-line vote, with Rep. Henson Moore of Louisiana the sole Republican in support. Moore said he was voting for the "best efforts the Democrats have ever made" to cut deficits, and while he didn't mention it, one provision would free an estimated $700 million in disputed offshore oil receipts for distribution to Louisiana.

Republicans offered several amendments to the Democratic budget, bidding to increase defense spending and cut further some domestic programs. "We got flattened on every issue," lamented Rep. Delbert Latta, R-Ohio, although he said Republicans were likely to propose a budget alternative of their own on the House floor next week.

The GOP won't be the only ones trying to change the Democratic package.

Wright said he believed his proposal for a minimum corporate tax would pass, although many Republicans and some Democrats are expected to oppose it for fear of complicating overall tax reform efforts.

A group of conservative and moderate Democrats is preparing another proposed change, this one providing for both a minimum tax on corporations and a freeze in Social Security benefits.

Gray guided the budget to passage in two days of committee meetings that drifted back and forth between closed and open sessions.

The vote followed a brief, overnight effort to forge a bipartisan agreement on a plan, in which Democrats offered to restore some funds to defense in exchange for GOP support for the balance of the package.

Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., said that effort failed in part because of misunderstandings of what the agreement would involve and in part because Democratic leaders opposed any substantial restoration.

But having failed to reach agreement with the Democrats, Republicans made no concerted effort to delay or block approval of the budget they opposed, offering only a few amendments, which were defeated.

A move by Rep. Bobbi Fiedler of California to grant a 3 percent pay raise to federal employees earning less than $12,000 a year was rejected, 26-6.

A proposal by Rep. Tom Loeffler of Texas to increase defense spending by an additional $3 billion in 1986 and $11 billion over three years was defeated, 22-11.

Prison pact leaves some tough choices

By MICHAEL HOLMES

AUSTIN (AP) — An agreement state officials signed in hopes of ending a 13-year-old prison reform lawsuit still leaves Texans some tough choices in dealing with overcrowding and other prison problems, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby says.

"Citizens and public officials legitimately concerned about public safety must continue to work for a more effective system and be willing to pay for the type of system they want," Hobby said after the agreement was signed Thursday.

"We must realize that neither this settlement nor its implementation addresses fundamental policy issues. The requirements of the settlement demonstrate that prisons are inherently costly and that these costs cannot be avoided," he said.

Attorney General Jim Mattox said the state has asked that the pact quickly be submitted to U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice, whose orders since 1981 have brought sweeping reforms in the nation's second-largest prison system.

"Everything is not perfect, but we believe we have reached the best settlement that is possible," Mattox said. "We are very optimistic that the judge will approve this settlement."

The agreement — signed by Board of Corrections chairman Robert Gunn, Mattox and TDC director Ray Procunier — will cost an additional $173 million, Mattox said. In part to meet court-ordered reforms, the Legislature already is considering a $1 billion prison budget for 1986-1987.

The agreement addresses prison overcrowding, the last major point of contention between the state and lawyers for inmates.

As the agreement was signed, Gunn warned what he called a "subversive element" on the prison system staff to stop fighting change.

"I want to inform them that the war is over. The side of reform has won," Gunn said.

The legal struggle began in June 1972, when convicted armed robbery and jailhouse lawyer David Ruiz filed a handwritten, 45-page petition charging that incarceration was cruel and unusual punishment in Texas.

The state fought for years, but after hearing 349 witnesses, Judge Justice declared that Ruiz was right: The Texas prisons were unconstitutional.

In 1981, Justice ordered wide-ranging reforms, including an end to controversial "building tender" system of using inmates as guards. By this year, overcrowding was the only major unresolved issue in the lawsuit.

Thursday's agreement puts a limit on the number of inmates that can be housed in the state's 26 existing prison units. It also sets minimum space requirements in new cells, calls on prison officials to provide out-of-cell time and make other changes to ease crowding problems.

After signing it, Gunn sharply criticized some current and former TDC employees and officials for trying to stall the settlement.

"We within TDC have for the past few years...been dealing with a certain subversive element," Gunn said. "We've had a group of people working there that are more or less obstructionistic."

Those employees are on notice, Gunn said, that the settlement "marks the end of this confrontation. I think we're going to see a totality of dedication on the part of the staff."

The agreement says Texas will reduce its current inmate population of 37,562 to 32,500 in the 26 existing prison units by Sept. 1, 1987. Half that must be accomplished in two years.

Procunier, who was hired after the TDC board in 1983 asked longtime director James Estelle to resign, said easing overcrowding will make the violence-wracked Texas prisons safer. Last year, 395 inmates were stabbed and 25 were slain behind prison walls.

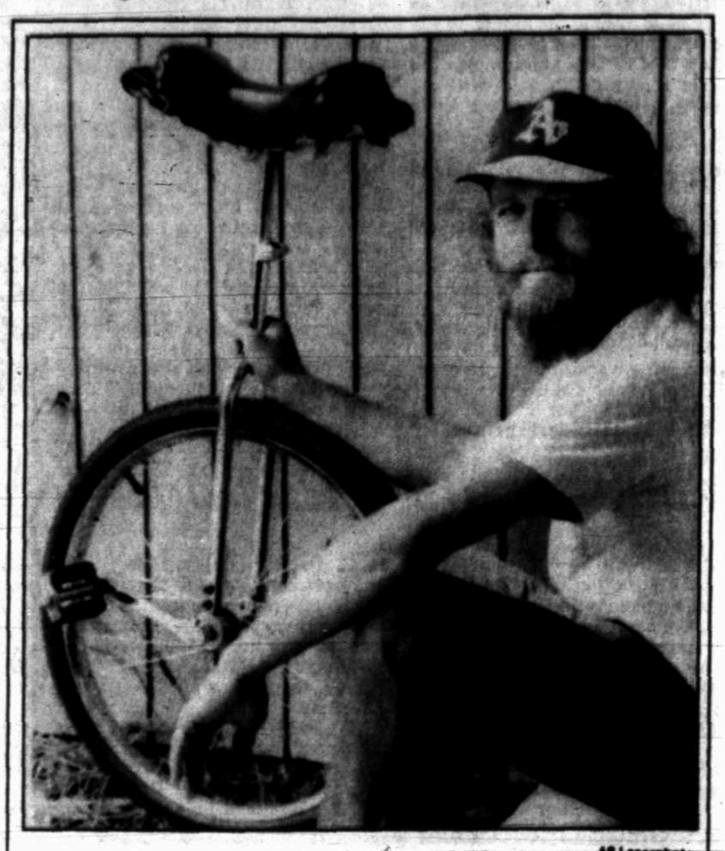

"They should be safer. With less (population) density, we should have less violence," he said.

Mattox said the settlement's reforms will make the prisons meet constitutional standards.

"We're not providing any kind of country club for prisoners. We are not coddling criminals by any stretch of the imagination, but we are providing what would be considered a reasonable level of care," he said.

Rep. Ray Keller, R-Duncanville, chairman of the House Law Enforcement Committee, predicted legislators may be more willing to spend money on prison problems once the court OKs the settlement and stops giving orders.

"I think it's going to be a lot easier to convince legislative members to pursue the necessary steps in the future when they see what it's like not to be under a federal court," Keller said.

'Benevolent' man loses Social Security position

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A bureaucrat who says he was a fan of the television show "The Millionaire" has been fired by the Social Security Administration for using confidential files to send anonymous $50 cash gifts to 39 teen-age girls.

Tim Bindner, 37, says it was just a "little giveaway fantasy," but it cost him his $28,000-a-year job as a claims authorizer.

Social Security fired him after learning he used case files he had access to at work to determine his beneficiaries.

"I started picking out young ladies who had tragedies or hardships early in their lives," Bindner said in a telephone interview Thursday.

Bindner, who sent the cash in cards on the girls' birthdays, said he began sending the money in late 1983 and stopped in February of this year.

All told, he gave away $1,950 to the girls, most of whom were about 14 years old and lived in Colorado.

"I wasn't trying to establish any kind of contact with these kids. I was just trying to play out my own little giveaway fantasy," he said.

Bindner, who sports a beard and used to ride a unicycle to work, said he was a fan of the television show "The Millionaire" when he was young and always had a secret desire to give away money to people who had a tough life.

"I just kind of decided to do it," he said.

But Bindner's supervisors at the Social Security Administration's regional center in Richmond, Calif., were not amused and he was dismissed last week.

They contend the gestures constitute a violation of federal privacy laws.

"He was fired for misuse of confidential Social Security files," said Howard Dentz, a Social Security spokesman in San Francisco.

Dentz would not comment further on the firing because Bindner has said he will appeal the decision.

HOSTAGES

There was no picture and no mention of Peter Kilburn, 60, a librarian at the American University in Beirut who was in poor health when he was abducted on Dec. 3, 1984. All the men were kidnapped between March 16, 1984, and March 22 this year.

Two weeks ago, Jackson published, via Mideast newspaper ads, an "open letter to the Shiite Community in Lebanon" in which he said "the American hostages are an impediment to those of us in the West to argue our case for peace. We appeal to you on humanitarian grounds for their release."

Despite the dire tone of the terrorists' apparent reply, Jackson and several family members said they were somewhat heartened by the release of the pictures and the fact that the messages represented the first direct communication from the group to the outside world.

The group, which calls itself the Islamic Jihad, said in an open letter to the hostages' families: "For the last time we wish to stress that all contact with your abducted relatives will be cut off and the consequences will be catastrophic if you do not act seriously and force your government to intervene for the release" of Islamic compatriots in Kuwait.

Peggy Say, Anderson's sister, said that "he looked like he can't see, without his glasses, but other than that I was pleasantly surprised by his apparent health ... he's clean-shaven, he looks healthy ... he's alive."

Mrs. Say, of Batavia, N.Y., said Jackson "is our hope right now," though she believes "The State Department is acting rationally and intensely. I can't at this point consider what is or is not valid U.S. policy. The whole family is frightened, we're panic stricken."

Joseph Jenco, of Joliet, Ill, and brother of Martin Jenco, said he was "encouraged" in the private discussion with Jackson and Oakley by new information he couldn't reveal.

John Weir, Benjamin Weir's son, noted that the families had previously received letters from the hostages, but "this is the first message from the group that holds the hostages."

The younger Weir and his mother, Carol, had previously accused the administration of dragging its feet on the hostage issue. But they were more reserved in their criticism on Thursday. "What everybody wants," John Weir said, "is to get them released."

JAIL

The architects are to present renovation plans to the Jail Commission for approval prior to any construction work on the jail. Wright predicted it would be between 60 and 90 days before construction bids on the project would be advertised.

In rejecting the $9.9 million bond proposal for a new jail apart from the courthouse, voters on May 11 voted in a $3 million bond issue to renovate the jail, to fund the study and to expand Culver Youth Home.

The county's financial adviser, Joe Liberty of the brokerage house of Rauscher Pierce Refsnes Inc., said his firm can "move quickly" in readying the general obligation bonds for sale, since "90 percent of the work is already accomplished....I don't think we'll have to go back to New York to the rating agencies." The county last year got favorable bond ratings from Standard & Poor's and Moody's in preparing for the sale of $9.9 million certificates of obligation to finance the proposed jail. However, that plan was thwarted by the intervention of the Concerned Citizens Committee, which petitioned that the jail financing be submitted to a vote of the people.

LIBERTY SAID the bond sale could be effected "as early as" the third week in June and that the county "could have the money (up to $3 million) in hand" a month later.

Liberty said the county has "very high quality credit."

The jail renovation project is to include the installing of cells in the "bull pen," an undeveloped quadrant of the jail; building a secure excercise area on the courthouse roof; repairing and replacing plumbing in the jail and courthouse; replacing the roof and air-conditioning units; installing remotely-controlled emergency locks in single cells; putting a watercloset in a holding cell; building a firewall between the kitchen and laundry room; enlarging the laundry room; ensuring sight and sound separation between male and female prisoners; putting in adequate artificial lighting in the cells; bringing the fire-fighting standpipe and hose system up to standards; ensuring that at least 30 percent of the cells are single cells; and correcting space problems in double-occupancy cells.

Painter said that ideally all cells in a jail would be single cells. However, such a concept would be far more expensive than mixing single cells with multi-occupancy and dormitory-type cells.

THE SHERIFF also proposed that the county once again seek variances which would exempt the jail from certain standards, such as the 30 percent single-cells rule and space requirements in double-occupancy cells, to cut back on expenses.

"I'm 100 percent for getting as much relief as we can," said County Commissioner Wally Craig, "so we don't have to spend a lot of money." But Craig noted that one variance could lead to another, and "We're right back in the same posture we've been in." Craig said he was concerned about "maintaining" good relationships with the Jail Commission but that requests for variances so soon would have the Jail Commission members saying, "Oh, here goes the merry-go-round again."

"We all know that this (renovation) is a temporary project that we're involved in," Craig said, "and we don't want to spend money on things we don't have to."

At time of the Jail Commission's inspection this week, Painter said he had asked the inspector, Joe Slater, "to write us up for every violation he could possibly find."

In passing sentence, Bunton said, "I can assure you that it (pronouncing sentence) is no luxury. It is even more difficult to pass sentence on someone I've known for a long time. And I've known you, Eddie, for close to 20 years and some of your family even longer.

"I can't help but feel somewhat disappointed by your standing before the court, saying 'I'm ready to take my medicine,'" he remarked.

Calling himself "consistent" in sentencing persons convicted of "white-collar" crimes, Bunton said, "Each individual, even though it caused great hardship and even though they had reasons for taking the money, served prison terms.

"You, Mr. Thomas, had no particular reason except you wanted a little better position or a little richer position in the community in which you live. I can see only greed in your attempt to get rich and, in some instances, to get rich quick," he added.

"I think Mr. Thomas was sentenced on his crimes," Asistant U.S. Attorney Mike McDonald said in response to the judgment. "The court considered this defendant and passed its judgment accordingly."

McDonald spoke on behalf of the prosecutor, Assistant U.S. Attorney Wayne Speck of San Antonio, who was not present at sentencing.

"I'm almost relieved," defense attorney Smith said. "Of course, I wish he would have put him on probation.

"Judge Bunton has always been fair. I don't know what went through his mind, but I do believe he formulated the sentence based on his years of experience as a judge," he added.

Smith said an appeal of the conviction has not yet been decided.

But John Neel, the commission's general counsel, said the hospitals were taking a chance by continuing construction before the ruling came down.

"They do run the risk of continuing to proceed," Neel said, because if the commission fails to authorize the increased cost, "It could mean they simply couldn't open."

Neel wasn't predicting that outcome, but since the 20 percent cap on unauthorized increases was adopted in October, "There hasn't been a situation to come up exactly like this to my knowledge," he said.

Reed said part of the increase resulting from a THFC bookkeeping rule which requires the $250,000 value of the 10-acre site west of Loop 250 and north of Thomason Drive be included in the official cost even though it was donated by the Scharbauer family. Had that sum not been included, the increase would have been under 20 percent and no approval by the commission would have been necessary, he said.

The cost of extending utility services to the site also contributed to the increased cost of the project, and the original estimates for construction, financing and other factors proved optimistic, Reed said.

The center is to provide treatment for adults, young adults and adolescents who are dependent upon alcohol, cocaine, prescription drugs or a combination of drugs.

"Most of our adolescents must go to Houston or Dallas for treatment," said project spokesman Joe Dominey at the November ground-breaking ceremony. "The average stay is about six weeks with stays often lasting longer. It can be very traumatic for them and the family."

Clearview is a joint venture by MMH and the two Arizona firms, resulting from a July agreement which ended several years of competition for the right to open a chemical-dependency center in the area. The 36,500-square-foot facility is to include an auditorium, four classrooms, exercise rooms and group-therapy rooms.

Duarte ready for negotiation, the 'difficult road'

New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — President Jose Napoleon Duarte of El Salvador told President Reagan Thursday that his country had achieved at least a partial turnaround in the military situation and he called for new negotiations with the leftist rebel leaders.

In a meeting at the White House, Duarte also cited progress on human rights and political stability but noted El Salvador still had a "long, difficult road to travel."

He said he wanted the dialogue between his government and the rebels to move into a period of private, low-key meetings in place of the widely publicized sessions held until now.

In remarks after the 30-minute meeting in the Oval Office, Reagan agreed with Duarte's assessment of an improved situation in El Salvador.

"Those who question our efforts in Central America," he said, "should take note of the heartwarming progress that President Duarte has made."

He said he had assured the Salvadoran leader "that we will continue our efforts to thwart Communist aggression and subversion in the region."

A senior administration official said later that Reagan had shown "sympathetic understanding" for El Salvador's need for financial help but had made no specific promises because Duarte did make a specific request.

NATION

"The people of El Salvador had another free election in March, economic reforms are continuing, Communist guerrillas are losing ground," Reagan said when the two men stepped out of the Oval Office. "And none of this would have been possible without the economic assistance and military training and equipment that we provided.

"If there's to be peace and democracy in the region, if our neighbors are to be spared the tragedy that comes from every Communist dictatorship, we must have the courage to help all our friends in Central America."

"We have come far in El Salvador," Duarte said, "but have yet a long, difficult road to travel. The March election reaffirmed the commitment of my people to a peaceful, democratic solution of our problems. I fully share that commitment. But the need to curb foreign intervention is paramount in our purposes."

The two leaders also discussed the slow-moving dialogue between the Duarte administration and rebel groups that have been fighting the government for more than five years. The guerrillas have proposed private meetings in early June and, according to the administration official, Duarte told Reagan that he, too, now favors a period of private, low-key meetings.

Duarte, who must always take account of the views of the Salvadoran military and rightist groups about discussions with the rebels, was said to believe that more could be accomplished without the public polemics and press attention that accompanied the two rounds of talks late last year.

"He said, in effect, that he's prepared to move ahead with the dialogue," the administration official said. He said the Salvadoran had "talked about a private dialogue" with the rebels as a step toward "broader and more open meetings.'"

Duarte, he said, "continues to do all that he can, both by the setting of tight rules of engagement and by their continued enforcement, to insure that his own troops do everything they possibly can not to involve innocent civilians in the war process."

Reagan accepted gifts worth $7,000, report says

WASHINGTON (AP) — A revolver, a chain saw and four hearing aids were among more than $7,000 in gifts kept by President Reagan in 1984, while 26 pairs of running shoes were among nearly $9,000 worth of gifts Vice President George Bush accepted.

On financial disclosure forms filed with the Office of Government Ethics and made public by the White House on Thursday, Reagan lists 15 gifts he accepted and Bush lists 41.

The forms cover gifts worth more than $35, or gifts from one giver totaling more than $100, which Reagan and Bush decided to keep. Other gifts were turned over to the White House gifts unit for disposition as government property.

Reagan valued his gifts at $7,156. Bush's added up to $8,999.

Reagan received the revolver, engraved with the president's signature and valued at $263, from Leopold J. Deters of Springfield, Mass.

Man pleads 'no contest'

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — A man who pleaded no contest to a reduced charge of manslaughter in the shooting death of his 12-year-old son's alleged kidnapper remained free on a $100,000 property bond pending sentencing Aug. 27.

Leon Gary Plauche, 39, entered the plea Thursday in the death of Jeffrey Paul Doucet, and a charge of second-degree murder was dropped. The plea has the same penalty as a guilty plea but is not an admission of guilt.

Plauche, who could face 28 years in prison, admitted slaying Doucet on March 16, 1984, in Metro Airport, while Doucet was being returned from California to face charges.

Laws need overhaul

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — The voiding of a 116-year-old law that required candidates for county supervisor to own land shows the need to overhaul the state's constitution, written in 1890, a former governor says.

In a recent opinion, U.S. District Judge William H. Barbour Jr. wrote that the provision, in effect since 1869, was unconstitutional.

Pie-thrower sentenced

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (AP) — A 30-day jail sentence ordered for a woman who hired a clown to smash her daughter's school principal in the face with a pie during an assembly is excessive and will be appealed, her lawyer says.

Superior Court Judge Robert Burns on Thursday also sentenced Mary Diorio, 37, of Fairfield to pay a $1,000 fine and serve two years' probation on the breach of peace charge. She can serve the sentence on weekends.

"I don't know why he would impose such a harsh sentence for such a minor crime," said Joseph Ganim, attorney for Mrs. Diorio, who said a book publisher had offered to pay her $50,000 for the rights to her story. "I'll go do 30 days standing on my head for 50-grand," she said.

P&G files more lawsuits

CINCINNATI (AP) — Procter & Gamble Co. may file additional lawsuits against people the company claimsare spreading false and malicious statements associating the company with Satanism, a company official said.

In federal lawsuits filed Thursday in three states, P&G asks that four people be stopped from circulating the stories and for unspecified monetary damages. Last month, the company pulled its venerable stars and moon corporate trademark from its products.

Budget battle

There's only one word worth stressing as the House of Representatives wrangles with next year's budget: Deficit. The deficit has to be the pattern around which the remainder of the budget is patterned.

The reason is simple. In any number of polls conducted by any number of polling organizations in recent months, the recurrent concern voiced by Americans was the deficit. It's beginning to loom over Social Security, even defense.

Americans are becoming more aware of the impact of that antiquated philosophy of tax and spend, and they're beginning to call on members of Congress to do something about it. No one else can, apparently.

President Reagan has emphasized the nation's defensive posture as much as the Congress would allow in recent years, but even conservatives are now confessing in light of the deficit's rapid growth under the conservative administration that defense, too, is going to have to be scaled down to meet the restrictions of the budget. Priorities have to be set, of course, but at some point even prioritizing can take on an air of the absurd in the face of staggering deficits.

Not everyone has the same idea on what must be cut to bring the budget within bounds — if that's even possible, at this point. In reality, probably every federal program must share in the cost reduction program equally for the budget to be trimmed sufficiently. This old line of Social Security or defense or social programs being "sacred cows" can't hold water with the threat of world-economy-wrecking budget deficits looming on the horizon.

This isn't the time to throw caution to the wind and forge ahead like there's no tomorrow. There will be a tomorrow — and we'll all be paying for the excesses of today.

It's time, rather, for fiscally prudent leadership to lead the way. As budget negotiators prepare for another round in Washington, we hope they'll keep that fact in mind.

Trip opened eyes

The journey to Moscow by Nicaragua's President Daniel Ortega had one result that could in the long run improve the prospects for peace and stability in all of Central America. It opened the eyes of those in Congress who had refused to believe the Sandinista government in Managua is a Communist regime, actively backed by the Soviet Union.

President Reagan has been saying this for days but much of what he said fell on deaf ears and was greeted with closed eyes in the House of Representatives. On April 24 the House spurned the President's request to provide $14 million for humanitarian aid for the anti-Sandinista guerrillas called contras. Some scoffed at Mr. Reagan's reference to them as "freedom fighters."

Now, President Ortega's mission to the Kremlin is changing a lot of minds. House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill was one of the first to modify his stand. Said he of Ortega's widely publicized friendship with Russian leaders: "He embarrassed us, to be quite truthful."

Other members of the House, whose April vote was 215-213 against the aid package, are admitting their embarrassment. Rep. Dick Cheney, a Wyoming Republican, spoke for many of his colleagues on both sides of the asle when he said of the Ortega trip:

"It was made more abundantly clear than ever before that Ortega is more interested in relations with the Soviet Union than he is in trying to resolve differences in Central America."

Now that eyes have been opened, evidence that Congress is reconsidering aid to the freedom fighters is good news for Central America, and for the USA.

Another View:

Quibbling in crisis

A quibble over burden-sharing now jeopardizes the future of the International Fund for Agricultural Development. But an appropriate compromise is in sight if the government of the United States will accept the payment formula that the other major donors have already approved, and if the oil-producing nations make an adequate pledge.

Survival of this innovative fund is important for two reasons. With its establishment in 1977, IFAD provided an international foreign-aid organization that attracted for the first time substantial support from the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. And the fund has filled an important aid gap by targeting its assistance on the poorest farmers of the Third World, helping directly those most in need of help.

The controversy now centers on OPEC's declining support — a decline due in part to reduced earnings as oil production has been cut back, and in part to the Iran-Iraq war and the revolution in Iran, which have led Tehran to renege on all commitments and Baghdad to reduce support for the fund. In this circumstance the OPEC share, originally 43 percent of the total, then 42 percent is now proposed at 40 percent. This has been accepted by all the contributing nations except the United States.

American resistance has been all the more damaging because it has been matched by declining U.S. contributions, down from 20 percent of the original funding to 17 percent.

Another effort to resolve the controversy will be made at the end of this week at IFAD headquarters in Rome. The project may collapse because of a failure of OPEC to promise an adequate level of funds. The OPEC commitment is still a secret, but it is expected to be adequate to assure continuation of the program. The real risk is that the United States will remain rigid on burden-sharing, and in this way kill the organization at the very moment that it could play an increasingly important role in development — particularly in crisis-ridden Africa.

JAMES RESTON

Who's Dole laughing at now?

WASHINGTON — Bob Dole of Kansas has emerged from the latest battle of the budget as the most interesting and promising character in the Senate.

James Reston

He just barely squeaked through with a budget compromise President Reagan didn't want but accepted and he jokes at the suggestion that he put it over.

He's lucky that in his first major test as majority leader he didn't lose instead of winning with the aid of a hospital patient and a tie-breaking vote by Vice President Bush. But he laughs when he's given credit for the result. That's part of his charm: like Reagan he's always laughing, but unlike him, he's usually laughing at himself.

The revolt of the Senate against the president's defense and Social Security policies were the result of more fundamental things. First, after four years and appropriations of over a trillion dollars — $1,007,900,000,000 — the Senate was in no mood to do more than freeze the Pentagon budget, with allowance for inflation.

Second, with the largest budget deficit and trade deficit in the history of the nation, the Senate suspected that the American people were finally beginning to realize that this was a serious practical problem, not merely a campaign argument as in the last election, and had to be corrected.

Third, to be blunt about it, the Senate got weary of the president's public-relations tricks, his indifference to facts, his television appeals to the people over the heads of Congress, and the presumptuous and aggressive lectures of Secretary of Defense Weinberger.

All this Dole understood, and there was another thing. He knew that 22 Republican senators would be up for re-election in 1986 and that his party would probably lose control of the Senate if they campaigned on the president's military, Social Security and Central American policies. This alarming thought — that the last two years of the Reagan Presidency might be spent with both a Democratic House and Senate — no doubt persuaded Reagan to go along with Dole.

As usual, whenever a senator breaks out of the pack and gets out front, as Dole has, the great "mentioning game" begins and he is hailed, poor man, as a potential presidential candidate. It's not an unreasonable dream. After Presidents Nixon, Ford, Carter and Reagan, most senators and many governors also think that just maybe they could make it, and begin to hear "Hail to the Chief" in the night.

Dole is not immune to this common Washington fantasy. He has made it to the perilous perch as the leader of his party in the Senate, but he has some problems.

He has to decide whether to run for re-election to the Senate in 1986 or to stand down and run for the White House. He will be 62 in July, and like Ted Kennedy, this will be his last call for the dining car.

His predecessor in the Senate, Howard Baker of Tennessee, decided to resign in the belief that he couldn't meet his legislative responsibilities and still run for president.

Dole may very well refuse to do the same and stick it out, trying to lead the new young generation of senators who don't want to be led under rules that he can't abide and can't change.

But you can't tell. Dole has a sense of humor, which hurt him when he ran as vice president in 1976, but may help him now when, looking around at the alternatives, we either have to laugh or cry.

He has been a loyal supporter of Reagan's conservative policies, after his fashion. He was in the Kansas legislature for four terms, in the House for eight years, in the Senate since 1968 and in the Army for five and a half years, twice wounded and decorated for "heroic achievement."

This is not the sort of man you would find by accident in Congress. Outside politics, he has devoted much of his time to abandoned veterans and crippled children, and farmers and their families.

It's a painful thought, but the presidential campaign of 1988 has already started, and the Republicans have two possible and formidable teams:

The Bakers — Howard of Tennessee and James, the Treasury secretary, from Texas; and the Doles — Robert J. of Russell, Kan., and his wife, Elizabeth Hanford, the secretary of Transportation.

It's no wonder the Democrats are so sad these days.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, May 17, the 137th day of 1985. There are 228 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On May 17, 1954, the U.S. Supreme Court issued its landmark Brown vs. the Board of Education of Topeka, Kan., ruling. The court unanimously reversed its 1896 "separate but equal" Plessy vs. Ferguson decision, and declared that racially segregated public schools were inherently unequal.

On this date:

In 1792, the New York Stock Exchange was founded.

In 1814, Norway's constitution was signed, providing for a limited monarchy.

In 1875, the first Kentucky Derby was run at Churchill Downs in Louisville. The winner was Aristides.

In 1940, the Nazis occupied Brussels, Belgium, in World War II.

In 1961, Cuba's Fidel Castro offered to exchange prisoners captured in the abortive Bay of Pigs invasion for American heavy tractors.

In 1973, the Senate Watergate Committee began its hearings.

Ten years ago: Thailand expressed formal indignation that the United States had used a Thai base in the rescue of the merchant ship Mayaguez.

Five years ago: Rioting broke out in Miami hours after an all-white jury in Tampa acquitted four former police officers charged with beating to death a black insurance executive, Arthur McDuffie. Nearly 20 people died in the violence.

One year ago: The Securities and Exchange Commission filed suit charging that a former Wall Street Journal reporter tipped off four other people about his upcoming columns.

Lack of reviews not a concern

Having been told that Midland Community Theatre performances will no longer be reviewed along with the performances of other civic arts, I wish to urge those who have not yet seen "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest" to please go this last weekend. It is a marvelous play and the talented people that we have in this community deserve not only to have someone review their talents, but more importantly to have you come out to share their gifts with them. As one patron who saw the play, let me give you my personal and "unprofessional" critique in case you wonder if it is any good.

The play is poignant and powerful. It is funny and it is very sad. It is a story of personalities in chaos and souls in distress. It is exciting to sit and watch people who you know are all right so accurately portray people with severe mental problems.

Brian Swanitz gives a powerful and, I think, accurate performance of the extreme power and pathos of a strong Indian whose will has been subjected to horrors we can only reflect on and has managed somehow to hang on through sheer unwillingness to give in completely. People in the audience came out of their seats and cheered when he at last was "big enough" again. My compliments on a marvelous performance, Brian.

Gary Askins gives a funny, frantic performance as McMurphy who brings back some of the life and energy into men who had given up trying to cope. Carole Newton is properly sadistic and quietly professional enough for us to hate her and feel sorry for her all at the same time. The men in the ward, Jim Bartlett, especially, as Colonel Matterson, and Mark Slattery, as Billy Bibbit, give outstanding performances. The men of the ward gave convincing and sometimes hilarious performances, even the catatonic ones!

My sincere congratulations to Edwin Gibb for his courage in portraying a black role most people now frown upon and won't "stoop" to do. He was funny, and fun and good.

The set of the play is terrific and astounding, humongous is a good word, and the visuals are exceptional.

As stated above, this is strictly an "unprofessional" opinion, but I have a tendency not to care whether a play is "correctly" interpreted or whether it agrees with the university know-it-alls when it comes to great plays. What matters to me is whether I enjoy what I see, the feeling that I have not wasted my money when I go to see a play and whether it made me feel good, or bad, or interested and whether I think I got my money's worth of entertainment when I come out of the theatre. This one is truly worth the time and money. Don't miss it!

Recalling war's horror reveals myth

The remembrance of the end of World War II in Europe reminds me of the differences between myth and truth.

Myth is simple and reassuring; truth is complex and often uncomfortable. Myth is useful for present political purposes; truth is frequently embarrassing.

Nevertheless, all the warnings to remember history are vain if what is remembered is myth, not truth. If what happened in the past is to be of use in the present, then we must know what actually happened and not be content with regurgitated war time propaganda.

Charley Reese

It is ironic that the Nazi SS, which was the instrument of destruction for Jews chosen as scapegoats, has in turn become a scapegoat for those who would perpetuate the myth of just and righteous conquerors slaying the evil dragon.

It is as if the Justice Department, having issued blanket pardons to all the Mafia chieftains, executed a few hit men and proclaimed that the Mafia had been wiped out and made to pay for its sins. The SS was an organization of underlings, hired hit men, who did not even have the authority to choose their victims. They were indeed following orders.

The truth is that following a few token executions, the Allies functionally issued a blanket pardon to the entire superstructure which created the Holocaust. That's why the cries over President Reagan's visit to Bitburg rang hollow for me. The protests came 35 years after the fact, were directed at the bones of a few underlings, and thus helped perpetuate the myth that a few crazy gangsters kidnapped a great European nation. It is perpetuating a myth to call the surviving and aging camp guards Nazi war criminals. That elevates them to a status they never had. They were so far down on the pecking order as to be barely one notch above the prisoners they so viciously abused.

Neither Great Britain nor the United States went to war to save the victims of the Holocaust. The Nazi government had given the world ample opportunity to save at least the Jewish victims and the world declined. No doubt it was the refusal of countries to accept Jewish refugees that convinced the Nazis that no one really cared what happened to them, as indeed, no one but a few really did.

Another unpleasant truth is that in every occupied nation it was the Jewish leadership which cooperated with the Nazis in effecting the Holocaust. It was the Jewish organizations which transmitted the Nazi orders, helped identify and locate the Jews, even chose which ones would go on which trains. In the Warsaw Ghetto, the one instance of organized resistance, the Jewish resisters had first to murder the Jewish collaborators before they could fight the Nazis.

This truth ought to be factored into any study of why so relatively few non-Jews intervened. It ought to be factored into any assessment of so-called aggressiveness in Israel, the culture of which is in part a rejection of the tradition of passivity or as Zev Jabotinsky, leader of the Revisionists, put it, "the ghetto mentality."

Still another unpleasant truth is that morally the line between the Nazis and the Allies grew thinner as the war progressed. What is the moral difference between the SS shooting 600 civilians with rifles and the Allies killing thousands with bombs? What is the moral difference between shooting a 6-year-old and blowing a 6-year-old to pieces?

Who's more cold-blooded? The German industrialists who decided to use the slave labor at Auschwitz or the American scientists and civilians who chose Hiroshima as a target because it was a densely populated industrial city?

Who was more immoral? The Nazis who gassed the Jews or the British who captured Jews trying to escape to Palestine and sent them back to the Nazi gas chambers?

What is there to celebrate about a war which began with appeasement of the Nazi tyranny and ended with the appeasement of the Soviet tyranny?

Clearly the myths of World War II are more comforting than the reality, but the world we inhabit today is built on that reality, not on the myths. If we are to avert a repeat on a magnified scale of old horrors, then we'd better correctly identify that reality.

The end of World War II was not the end of the book; it was merely the turning of a page. The story isn't finished — yet.

Chinese ports bar U.S. ships carrying nuclear weapons

WASHINGTON (AP) — State Department officials aren't sure when, or even if, a visit by American warships to China will take place after a scheduled port call in Shanghai was postponed this week because of China's insistence the ships not carry nuclear weapons.

When plans fell through, U.S. Navy personnel already were in Shanghai making arrangements for a visit in late May by three destroyers, which would have been the first American warships to visit China since the Communist takeover 36 years ago.

A State Department official, who spoke on the condition of anonymity, said Thursday there would be "a cooling off period" before any attempt is made to fix a new date. He said it would be a matter of months at the earliest.

Pentagon officials had said when plans were still going forward that the visit would mark another step in the steadily improving U.S.-Chinese relationship. It also would have been seen as a symbolic step toward increased military cooperation.

Plans are still going forward for a visit to the United States by Chinese President Li Xiannian in July. Li will confer at the White House with President Reagan, who visited China a year ago.

China is the second country, along with New Zealand, to bar port calls by American warships this year, after Washington refused to provide advance assurances they were not nuclear armed.

It has been long-standing American policy to refuse to say what ships are nuclear armed.

Washington also doesn't want to reveal to adversaries, such as the Soviet Union, which ships carry nuclear arms and which don't.

But had it not been for the previous rejection by New Zealand, the issue might never have come up in China, which is itself a nuclear power. U.S. officials doubt it makes much difference to the Chinese government whether visiting American warships are nuclear armed.

Arrangements were understood to be proceeding without any serious hitches until Chinese Communist Party Chairman Hu Yaobang met with Australian reporters on the eve of a visit to New Zealand and Australia last month. He startled American officials by agreeing with a comment by the vice foreign minister, Zhu Qizhen, that "there is agreement" with the United States that the visiting ship would be "a conventional warship."

'No basis' to investigate MOVE action, Meese says

Copley News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — U.S. Attorney General Edwin Meese Thursday said he sees "no basis" for a federal investigation of the death of 11 persons resulting from a Philadelphia police assault on the stronghold of a radical cult.

"The situation that gave rise to the episode was caused by the criminals, not by the police," Meese stated in a brief interview.

Meese did not directly praise the tactics employed in the police attempt to evict the MOVE cult and arrest four members on charges of harassment and possession of explosives.

On Monday, law enforcement authorities used firearms, water hoses, tear gas and finally a two-pound bomb on the group's headquarters. The bomb set off a fire that destroyed or damaged 61 area homes, displaced at least 225 residents of a west Philadelphia neighborhood, and killed 11 persons, including four children.

When asked if this constituted excessive use of force by the police, Meese replied, "I think (Philadelphia Mayor W. Wilson Goode) is handling it in very good fashion. I have been impressed with the way he's supported the police."

In a subsequent speech here before a conference of the California Peace Officers' Association, Meese again praised Goode as he held up the mayor's stated public support of police actions as "rational and reasonable...a good example for us to take note of."

"In strained operating situations, it is very possible that tragedies will occur. But the public has got to know the situation that gave rise to the tragedy was caused by the criminals, not the police," Meese stated.

Goode has announced he would appoint a commission to examine what caused the fatal confrontation. "I see no basis for an investigation by the Justice Department," Meese said.

On another subject, Meese defended the administration's recent handling of the E.F. Hutton case.

The company pleaded guilty to 2,000 separate counts of mail and wire fraud and agreed to pay $2 million in fines for a scheme to use $1 billion in interest-free funds by systematically overdrawing checking accounts at 400 banks.

Criminal indictments were not sought against any company official, leading some members of Congress to criticize the Reagan administration as being soft on white-collar crime.

Meese told his audience Thursday that the administration will "move against white-collar crime of all sorts. We will take aggressive action against this type of criminal activity."

And he told reporters, "The penalties that were obtained in the Hutton case were the maximum the law provides.

"The individuals (that committed the crime) were middle-management people. The attorneys and investigators handling the case had to grant immunity to those individuals."

Without their cooperation, Meese said, further prosecution would not have been possible. "They had to be granted immunity," he said.

Meese said Hutton has been adequately punished for its criminal actions. "The loss to Hutton in public confidence as well as revenues has been extreme," he said.

The attorney general, in his speech, highlighted Justice Department efforts to combat drug trafficking and deter drug use in cooperation with state and local law enforcement officials.

Meese said he will visit Mexico this summer to discuss drug interdiction efforts.

Thunderstorms may cool area

From Staff and Wire Reports

Thunderstorms are expected to bring cooler temperatures to the Midland area through Saturday as forecasters at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport call for a 40 percent chance of thunderstorms tonight, some possibly heavy, and a low in the mid-50s. The possibility of thunderstorms will decrease to a 20 percent chance Saturday with a high in the upper 70s. Tonight's winds from the northeast at five to 15 mph will become easterly Saturday at less than 15 mph.

Heavy rains were reported in parts of West Texas Thursday, including a large area northwest of Lamesa.

Thursday's high of 89 was 11 degrees below the record set in 1946. This morning's low was 11 degrees above the 1932 record of 47.

STATE

Heavy rains pounded South Texas and the Hill Country early today, flooding some low water crossings and causing an overflow at the damaged Upper Guadalupe Lake Dam in Kerrville, authorities said.

Water had risen 4.5 feet over the earthen core dam early today, but the "structure itself appears to be holding," said Bernie Bruns, general manager of the Upper Guadalupe River Authority.

The dam was damaged in a New Year's Eve flood that sent waters 10 feet over the barrier.

Repair work has been ongoing since then and the dam held Feb. 23 when waters rose 4.5 feet above the structure after heavy rains, Bruns said.

Much of West Texas was hit by torrential rains Thursday night.

Streets flooded in San Angelo and Snyder. San Angelo and Lubbock reported about 1.5 inches of rain, while just over a half inch fell in Abilene. San Antonio drew 1.68 inches, while Bandera was drenched by 2.37 inches of downpour, the weather service said.

NATION

Heavy thunderstorms rumbled through parts of the West today while showers and thunderstorms dampened much of the East Coast and rain moved through the Ohio Valley.

Showers and thunderstorms spread from North central Texas through southwest Texas and from the Texas Panhandle and northeast New Mexico through Wyoming. Heavy thunderstorms dumped 2 inches of rain per hour in some areas.

Showers and thunderstorms also spread from the mid-Atlantic Coast states across the Carolinas.

Bulldogs butt heads in Bill Mims game

Midland High concludes spring drills at 7 p.m. today

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Midland High head football coach Doug McCutchen feels he and his coaching staff have accomplished what they set out to do in this year's spring training session.

Tonight, they'll have a chance to take one last look when the Bulldogs take the field for the annual Bill Mims game at 7 p.m. at Memorial Stadium.

"We've been real pleased with our spring," said McCutchen. "We're a lot better ball club now than we were at the start of the spring. We haven't changed much from last year so this year we were able to spend a lot of time on repetition during the three weeks of spring drills."

A year ago, the MHS staff had to spend a lot of their spring time teaching the players the techniques involved in McCutchen's style of play. Offensively, the Bulldogs learned how to run the Houston veer instead of the I-formation. Defensively, the switch was from the eight-man line to the more standard 4-3.

"THIS YEAR, we're also a lot closer to filling our starting positions for the fall than we were last year at this time."

They are also a healthy lot, at least as far as injuries are concerned. Only one player looking at a possible starting role in the fall has fallen to injuries: Center Robert Fortune, who, "broke his thumb and is really the only one who is injured," said McCutchen. "He still suits up but he can't center the ball with his right hand."

Where the Bulldogs took their toughest lumps wasn't on the playing field but in the classroom where as many as 30 players of all levels were academically ineligible this spring because of the controversial "No pass, no play" rule. Still, that isn't concerning McCutchen too much. Numbers are still better than they have been in the past.

"Grades hurt us some in numbers but we still ended up the spring with around 100," said McCutchen. "I expect we'll get most of the 30 we lost to grades back for next fall, through the credits they earn during the summer so we'll be sitting pretty good. I haven't really checked on it yet, but the majority of them should be back."

FOR THE Bill Mims game, McCutchen divided up his coaching staff under the colors of Purple and White. Coaches Greg Manship, Johnny Williams, Davis Corley and Rick Sample head up the Purple team and Bernie Hagins, Rick Wood and Randy Quisenberry the White.

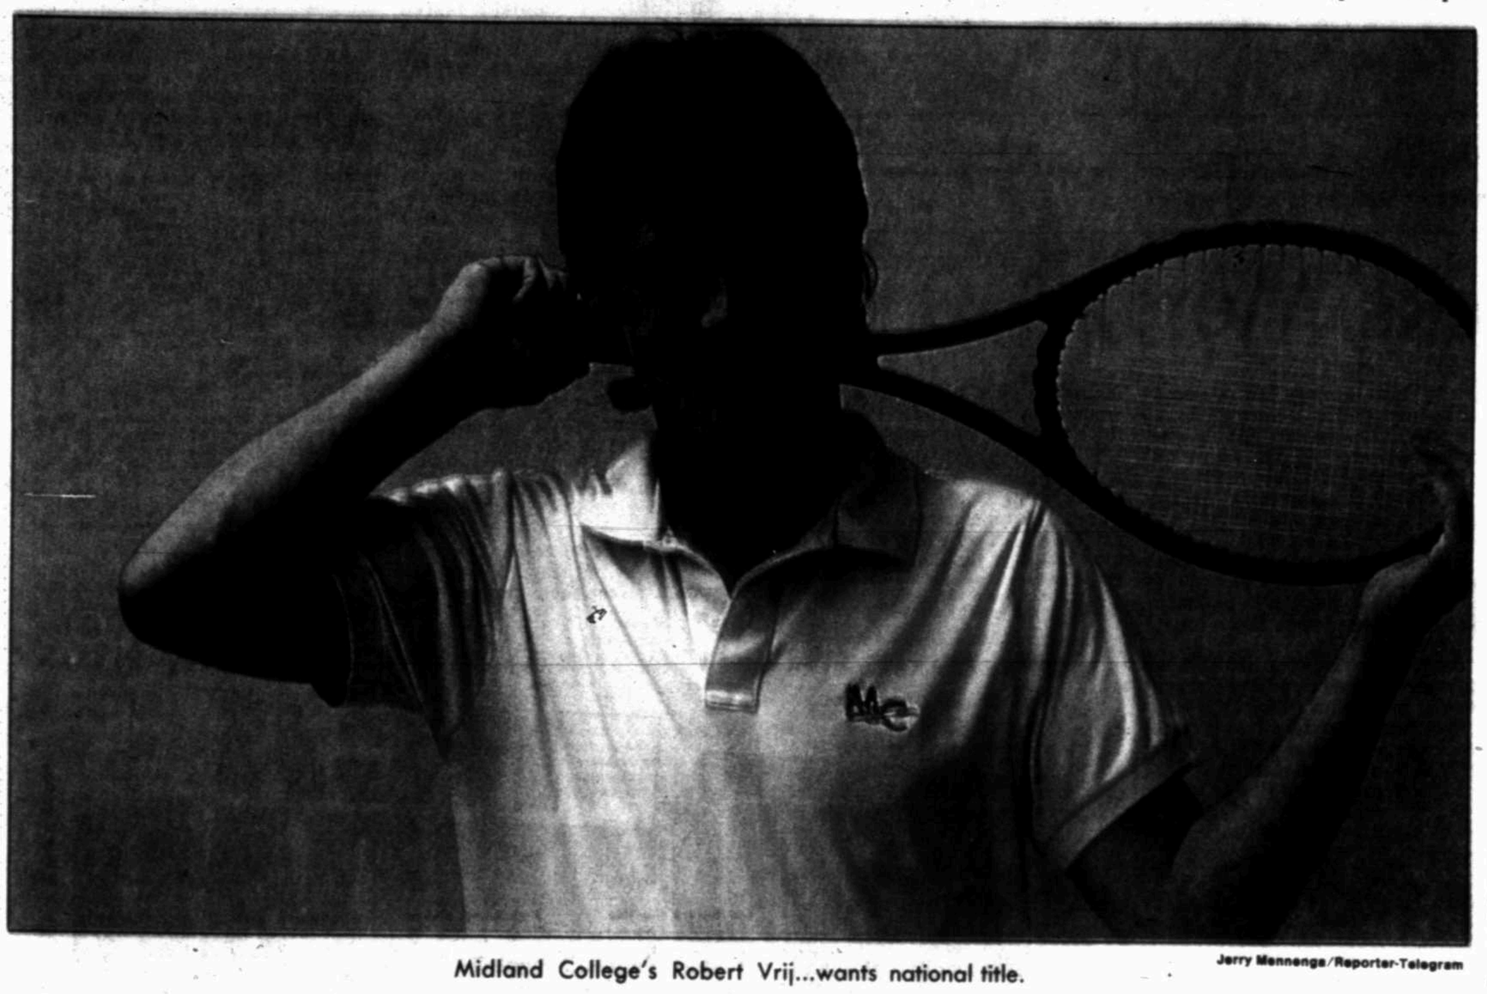

"I just divided the coaches up and they had a NFL-type draft on Tuesday," said McCutchen, who will spend game-time moving from side to side. "The teams may not be divided up equally, but they're about as close as you can get."

McCutchen prefers the divided-up squads to the first team against second team format because "I think the kids enjoy it more. You get 22 first teamers on one team and 22 on the other. You also get a lot better look at the people playing."

The drawback to dividing up the squads is players won't be with the groups they practice with. "It's a little different because they've been working together as teams all spring and now they're divided up," said McCutchen. "They might not be as sharp out there but they'll still be playing the positions they've been practicing and even the backups will know the roles they'll play.

"We just want to end with a good spring game, end up on a positive note," said McCutchen. "We expect a lot of competiveness like we had in the senior game last Friday night."

Proceeds for the game are donated to Bill Mims, a former Midland High football player who was injured in a game.

Wacker labels Frogs too young

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Texas Christian University once made the Cotton Bowl game a habit. But the Horned Frogs haven't been to the Dallas New Year's Day game as the SWC host since 1959. That's 26 years.

Still, whatever you do, don't bet that it will be another 26 years before the Frogs return, not with Jim Wacker around.

In Midland Thursday night for an alumni fund-raising, "rally" might be more accurate, Wacker talked about a rebuilding year ahead ("We graduated four of five offensive line starters and lost three of four in our defensive secondary"), but admits the talent is there.

The only trouble "most of the top kids are freshmen."

"We have 10 seniors and 13 juniors. Seventy-two of the 95 squadmen next fall will be freshmen and sophomores," points out the UNBELEEVABLE Wacker. "We redshirted 25 last year and I just hope a couple of them are good enough to play.

"We have great talent, but it's still a year or two away."

After last season, don't sell the Frogs short.

"UNVELIEVABLE" best describes what Wacker has wrought in his two short years at TCU. From a 1-8-2 debut in 1983, the Horned Frogs became the Cinderella team of 1984, a team on the verge of the national championship, as it turned out, whether anyone realized it or not.

Going into the final two regular season games, TCU was 8-1, that 26-17 loss to SMU, and within reach of not only the SWC title, but the national laurels that eventually went to Brigham Young.

It wasn't just that TCU was shucking the yoke of all those years of travail, it was the way the Frogs were doing it, setting records galore with one of the most prolific offenses since the Blanchard-Davis Army years.

THE ROYAL chariot turned to a pumpkin when Texas A&M upset the Frogs, 35-21, and then Texas completed the job, 31-14.

After ping pong title, tennis natural step

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Since he was the national champion in ping pong, it seemed only natural to his dad that the next step should be tennis. So Robert Vrij was presented with a tennis racket and introduced to the sport.

Vrij, however, didn't win his first tournament until two weeks later.

And now the Houston Westchester graduate next week will be leading Midland College into the National Junior College Athletic Association tournament at Ocala, Fla., a tournament Coach Joe Williams feels confident his Chaparrals are capable of winning.

Williams would like nothing better than to put the lie to the national poll, which ranks Tyler, Texas, No. 2. A California team is ranked No. 1 and California is not a member of the NJCAA.

Westchester? Vrij was asked, "Isn't that where David Clyde pitched before being drafted by the Texas Rangers back in the early 1970s?"

"David Clyde? Pitched? I really wouldn't know." He explained, "I didn't come to the United States until 1978, when I was a freshman in high school.

MC's Robert Vrij

"I WAS born and raised in Europe—The Hague, Holland—and I was a pretty good soccer player. When I got to this country, since I had been ping pong champ of Holland, my father bought me a tennis racquet. That's when I got started."

The MC sophomore is still a native of Holland but will acquire his citizenship papers by the end of the summer.

As a senior in high school, Vrij was playing in a Junior Major Zone tournament at Wichita Falls. "One of the other players I knew at the tournament was being scouted by Coach Williams, who was then coach at Hardin-Simmons University. So I approached Coach Williams. It turned out he had one scholarship left and I got it."

When Williams took the Midland College job and Joe asked Robert to come with him, there was no hesitation.

"I feel I get the best coaching in the country here. When I was trying to decide on a college, I visited several campuses, but was disappointed in the coaches," Vrij explains his willingness to transfer back to a junior college.

"After you reach a certain level, it's difficult finding a coach who can help you in different aspects of the game. Some coaches just recruit the players, supply the balls and that's it. Here, when you take the court you are not out on your own. Coach Williams is there watching and telling you what you do wrong."

AND NOW, two years later, Vrij is coach hunting once again. Right now he is considering Southwest Texas, Baylor, Weber State, University of Nevada-Las Vegas and Oklahoma. "The coach will have a definite influence on that decision," says Vrij, who plans to major in business and minor in law.

"I'd like to attend law school in California and then live in the San Diego or Orange County areas."

The spring trip MC took to the coast and San Diego left its impression on several MC netters who have overseas backgrounds.

VRIJ won the No. 3 singles in conference and Region V and teamed up with Sean Strickling to take No. 1 doubles in conference and Region V as Midland College made a shambles of both competitions.

Strickling won No.1 singles in conference; Brad Bailey won No. 2 singles in conference and region; Emil Bijleveld, took No. 5 conference singles; Andy Bruner, No. 6 singles while Bailey-McCauley won No. 2 doubles in conference and regional; and Bijleveld-Bruner won No. 3 at conference and district.

As for the No. 3 national ranking, Vrij says, "It is a poll and that's all. We feel we have the best team in the country. And, yes, I think we can win. We are experienced with five of six players sophomores. We are very solid in doubles and won at all three positions at regional. That should help us in the seedings at Ocala, giving up a few easier matches in the early rounds."

"My biggest thrill in tennis? I think it is about to happen. I came back a third year just to win nationals. Last fall, I sat out just to be eligible. Any time you can win a national title, it's rewarding."

And whatever happened to that promising soccer career he left back in Holland?

"I've played just once since then. It was a college tournament at Hardin-Simmons. I scored three goals in the finals and we won 3-2, but I tore up some ligaments in my ankle and haven't played since."

Coach Williams just might have influenced that last decision.

COM program coming back

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

A citywide resurgence in swimming is what Brad Swindig, head coach of the City of Midland swim team has been aiming for, and with the talented youngsters assembled at the COM Awards Banquet Thursday night, he just might be on the right track.

Swindig and the COM boosters aren't the only observers who feel that way either. You can add University of Texas head swimming coach Richard Quick's name to that list.

Quick's isn't a name to be taken lightly in the aquatic world, either. Not after his UT women's teams have taken two straight NCAA titles in just three seasons on the job in Austin.

"There is a rich swimming tradition here in Midland, with swimmers like Gold medal winner Doug Russell (1968 Olympics), and one thing is important about tradition, that is you can be back where you were — at least. I can see it here tonight. I can see it in the athletes, and I can see it in the supporters," said Quick, the guest speaker at the banquet.

"I REMEMBER starting out coaching at a Dad's Club in Houston and all the colossal battles we had with Midland. I think Midland is on its way back to that prominence."

Indeed, some surefire steps of improvement were made by COM in 1984-85. As a team, COM improved from 26th at the Texas Age Group Swimming meet to 16th in Swindig's first season. Individually, Michaela Hasek, a 14-year-old, became the first swimmer from Midland in eight years to score points in the Junior National meet in with a 15th place finish in the 200 backstroke in Milwaukee.

Fifteenth place would not seem that impressive but for the fact that Hasek was competing in the 18 and under division at the national meet. Former MHS standout, Andrew Jordan, also competed in the Junior National meet in Milwaukee but did not place in the top 16.

NOT SURPRISINGLY, Hasek and Jordan walked away with the top individual honors Thursday. Hasek was named the best swimmer in the female division, while Jordan earned the award on the male side of the ledger.

Winning the Coaches Award for the most dedicated and sportsmanlike swimmers were Jane Marker for the girls and Sam Perry and Shannon Guignon for the boys.

The Most Improved Swimmer honors went to Megan Kennedy and Matt Houston, while the Outstanding First Year Swimmer award went to Sheila Kennedy and Mark Houston.

Suspense ends for Doug Rader

ARLINGTON (AP) — To Bobby Valentine, the suspense surrounding Doug Rader's leadership of the Texas Rangers is over and he can get on with the job of whipping the major leagues' cellar-dwelling team into shape as the youngest manager.

The Rangers, in an anticipated managerial shuffle, fired Rader and took the 35-year-old New York Mets third base coach the 13th heir to the Texas hot spot. The team released a statement Thursday night from its headquarters after the New York Yankees handed Texas its sixth straight loss, 6-5.

Valentine was in Houston, where the Mets fell to the Astros 1-0.

"It's official; I got the phone call from Tom (Grieve, Texas vice president and general manager) 12 minutes after 10 o'clock," said Valentine, who will take over tonight when the Rangers open a three-game series with the White Sox in Chicago.

"He informed me that it would be announced immediately so I guess I can stop walking around like I'm pregnant," Valentine said. "The baby has been delivered. Now I can just get excited."

Valentine scheduled a press conference at 3:30 p.m. today at Chicago's Comiskey Park.

Rangers vice president Tom Grieve, in Chicago, said the agreement had been ironed out earlier in the day and that the official announcement awaited formal notification to Rader, whose team arrived from New York Thursday evening.

"I feel that the Rangers are extremely fortunate to obtain the services of Bobby Valentine to manage our ballclub," said Grieve. "Although he will be the youngest manager in the major leagues, he brings a wealth of baseball knowledge to our organization.

"He has gained valuable experience during the past three years as a key member of the New York Mets coaching staff," Grieve said. "Bobby's goal has always been to become a major league manager, and the Rangers are proud that he has accepted our offer to start his managerial career with us."

The Rangers' statement released from team headquarters said Valentine signed a contract that extends to the 1986 season and includes an option for 1987.

"The move was made at this time in an attempt to improve the performance of the ballclub, which we believe to be much better than its current record," club president Michael H. Stone said in the statement.

Valentine, in a Houston news conference, said he thanked the Rangers for "going out on a limb and hiring a guy who has never managed before.

"Baseball is a people business," said Valentine, former Mets' third base coach.

Ranger strategy blows another

Associated Press

Dave Winfield, last year's runner-up in the American League batting race, can't remember the last time the opposition walked two batters to pitch to him. But in this case he thought it was justified.

"Normally, I wouldn't walk anybody to get to me — but I haven't driven in people like I should this season," the New York Yankee outfielder said Thursday.

Winfield rectified that a little when he finally got his first game-winning RBI of the year — a forceout grounder in the ninth inning that gave the Yankees a 6-5 victory over the hapless Texas Rangers.

The Rangers' sixth straight loss was the last straw for Manager Doug Rader, who was fired after the game and replaced by Bobby Valentine, the third base coach of the New York Mets.

Winfield's groundout scored pinch-runner Rickey Henderson, who came into the game after pinch-hitter Ron Hassey opened the ninth with a single. Henderson moved up on a balk by Dave Stewart, 0-3, and a sacrifice bunt.

The Yankees, who never led until the final play, tied the score three times. Don Baylor's sixth homer of the year tied the score 5-5 in the eighth.

Don Mattingly also homered for

New York, while shortstop Bobby Meacham had a two-run double.

Twins 7, Tigers 5

Tom Brunansky hit a two-run homer in a four-run first inning and Kirby Puckett drove in three runs to lead Minnesota over Detroit.

Ken Schrom, 3-2, walked leadoff batter Lou Whitaker, then retired 11 Tigers in order before giving up Mike Laga's fourth-inning single. By that time, though, the Twins led 5-0.

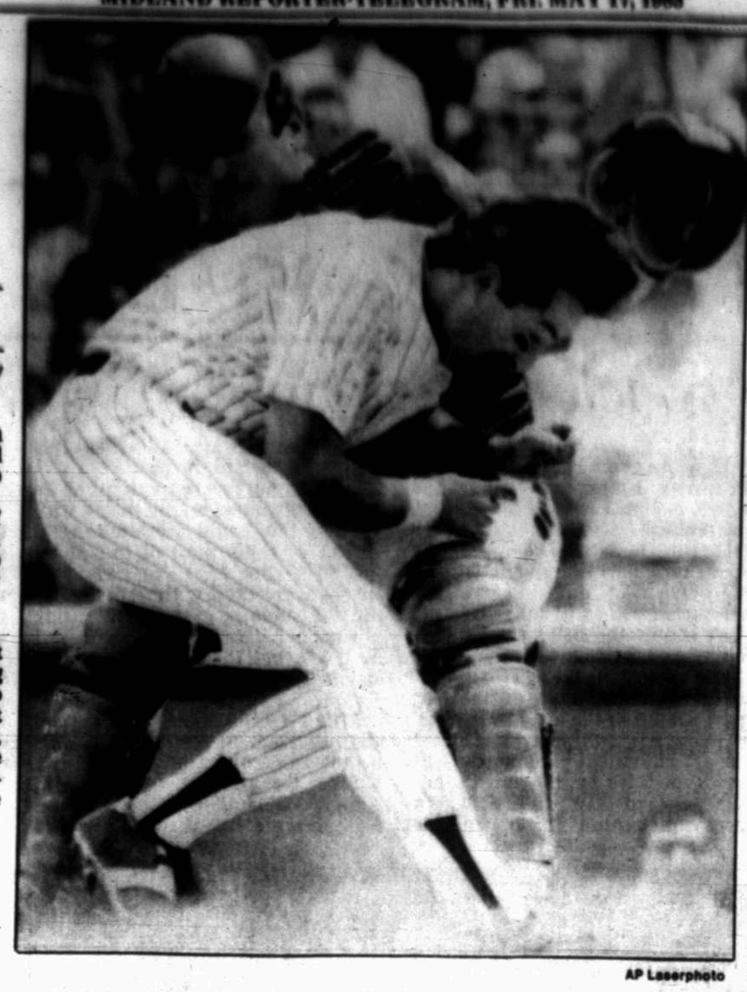

Royals 7, Indians 1

Willie Wilson and George Brett hit solo home runs in the first inning and Bud Black pitched a six-hitter to give Kansas City its fifth straight victory. Brett also had an RBI single, one of three hits for him in the game, and Frank White an RBI double in a three-run ninth for the Royals.

Orioles 3, White Sox 1

Cal Ripken and Eddie Murray hit successive doubles to trigger a two-run sixth inning, leading Baltimore over Chicago in a game called after six innings because of rain. The result snapped Baltimore's four-game losing streak and ended Chicago's five-game winning streak.

Mike Boddicker, 6-1, allowed only four hits in boosting his career record to 5-0 over the White Sox.

MC women take third in NJCAA net play

OCALA—Midland College finished in a tie for third place in the NJCAA tennis tournament Thursday as Palm Beach, Fla., took first with 38 points to beat out Tyler, Texas, the 1984 champion, second with 36.

Midland College and Indian River, Fla., each had 28 points while Cooke College of Texas finished fifth with 26.

Coach Joe Williams said he was "extremely proud of of this bunch and I think we finished about as high as we possibly could have."

Two MC players made first team All-America, Sarah Swan and Helene Lebeller, while three others made second team All-Anmerica, Karen Wild, Charissa Pruim and Jane Howe.

In Thursday's final day of play, in No. 6 singles, Karen Wild lost in the finals to Maria Johnsson of Palm Beach, 6-3, 6-4. The No. 1 doubles team of Lebeller-Swan defeated Gough-Walker, Cooke, 6-4, 6-1, in the semifinals and then lost to Srieub-Srieub, Palm Beach, 6-3, 6-1. In No. 3 doubles, Howe-Pruim defeated Nunnally-Ogola, Tyler, 6-1, 7-5, in semifinals and lost in finals to Canizares-Ohlsson, Palm Bearch, 6-4, 6-2.

Angels win, 9-5

From Staff Reports

SHREVEPORT—Midland scored five runs in the final two innings to beat Shreveport, 9-5, and square the Texas League series at 1-1 with the Captains.

Shreveport got two homers against Midland, with Tom Francis hitting a two-run clout and Mike Aldrete a solo blast. But the Angels countered with two-run singles by Juan Cruz, Dan Murphy and Billie Merrifield.

Don Timberlake started, but Gary Psaltis notched the win in relief and Julian Gonzalez picked up his second save as the Angels improved their record to 3-4 on the 10-game road triple.

Merrifield went 3-for-5 while Kevin Davis, Reggie Montgomery and Mark Bonner each had two hits in Midland's 15-hit offense.

In other action, Jeff Hamilton homered in the bottom of the 11th inning to give the San Antonio Dodgers a 3-2 victory over Arkansas.

The dramatic blast enabled the four teams in the league's Western Division to sweep their Eastern Division rivals. Beaumont edged Tulsa 2-1, and El Paso came from behind to beat Jackson 7-5.

Hamilton's homer was his third of the year and enabled Dave Eichorn, 2-1, to get the victory.

Astros' Scott checks Mets, 1-0

Associated Press

Mike Scott made sure that his former teammates lost more than their third base coach.

The 30-year-old right-hander, with three career shutouts coming into Thursday night's game, still has three career shutouts. But his 8 2-3-inning, no-run, five-hit effort was good enough as the Houston Astros beat the New York Mets 1-0.

Scott retired 15 Mets in a row between the fourth and ninth innings and ruined a combined two-hit peformance by Mets starter Sid Fernandez and Tom Gorman.

But Scott's only walk, to Gary Carter after Mookie Wilson's single in the ninth inning, knocked him out of the game. Dave Smith got the last out.

"Tonight was as good as I've thrown this year," said Scott, 2-1, whose last complete game and shutout came on June 21, 1983. His sharp control was especially helpful, given his new-for-1985 forkball.

"When the hitter is ahead in the count he is more selective with the pitches he swings at," Scott said. "I've got to get ahead of the hitters to make the forkball effective."

"He was cutting his fastball and making it run away from right-handed hitters and sinking it on the left-handers," said Astros catcher Mark Bailey.

Fernandez, 1-1, gave up only two hits in seven innings. He retired 14 consecutive batters before giving up a single in the seventh inning. Fernandez has allowed only three hits in his last two starts over 13 innings.

New York came within a few feet of scoring in the second inning.

Reds 4, Expos 2

Tom Foley's triple broke a seventh-inning tie and gave Foley his first RBI of the season as Cincinnati dealt the Expos their fourth straight loss.

Trailing 2-0, the Reds had tied the game in the fourth on Dave Parker's two-run homer, his fifth of the year.

Pete Rose went 1-for-3 to increase his career hit total to 4,-124, 67 short of Ty Cobb's all-time record.

Braves 6, Phillies 3

Terry Harper and Rick Cerone batted in runs in a three-run seventh inning that was helped by a pair of errors as Atlanta handed the Phillies their ninth loss in 10 games.

With the game tied 3-3, Rafael Ramirez scored when Bob Horner's smash went past shortstop Derrel Thomas for an error. Von Hayes misplayed Harper's single, putting a man on third for Cerone's sacrifice fly.

Controversy rages on

Helps more than it hurts

HOUSTON (AP) — The state's new "no pass, no play" rule benefits more students than it hurts, although most children who are failing courses are not involved in extracurricular activities, a Texas school official says.

William M. Kirby, commissioner of the Texas Education Agency, said Thursday the majority of the state's public school students who are failing do not participate in extracurricular activities and therefore are not affected by the law.

Kirby appeared during the second day of testimony in a series of lawsuits challenging the no-pass, no-play rule. According to the statute, a student who receives a failing grade may not participate in extracurricular activities during the ensuing six-week grading period.

State District Judge Marsha D.

No Pass, No Play

Anthony said she would probably rule today in the first suit, filed April 25 against the Alief and Spring Branch School Districts.

Ms. Anthony said that after ruling on the first case, she would hear testimony in the other suits, filed against the Aldine, Klein, Cypress-Fairbanks, Crosby and Deer Park school districts. The Spring school district also had a case pending, but dropped its case Thursday.

The districts are under temporary restraining orders calling for them to allow failing students to participate in extracurricular activities.

Attorneys representing the plaintiff students in the suits contend the no-pass, no-play rule is confusing and that the districts applied it improperly and, in some cases, retroactively.

The commissioner said about 30 cases involving the rule are pending across the state.

Kirby also said that most Texas students who are failing are not involved in extracurricular activities and therefore are not affected by the law.

But he said the rule will benefit all students and that its amendment or repeal would be a setback for Texas education.

The suits have held up the Class 5A schoolboy baseball playoffs, which were postponed Wednesday by University Interscholastic League pending the outcome of the Aldine case.

O'Meara leads Colonial

By MIKE COCHRAN

FORT WORTH (AP) — Fresh from a Japanese odyssey and drowsy from jet lag, Mark O'Meara resumed his bid today for a third 1985 golf title at the $500,000 Colonial National Invitational.

"I guess what I need to do is jump on a plane and fly eight hours every week," he laughed after an opening 4-under-par 66 Thursday earned him a share of the first round lead.

"I woke up at 2 o'clock in the morning raring to go," he quipped, noting that there's a 14-hour time difference between Tokyo and Texas.

O'Meara collected five birdies and a bogey en route to a 33-33—66 and a tie for first with Willie Wood, Corey Pavin and Jim Thorpe in a wide open chase for the $90,000 top prize.

O'Meara took a week off to fly to Toyko and win the Fuji Sanke Classic, then returned Monday with $31,000, a new car and a renewed desire to pursue his quest for the PGA money crown.

With victories at the Crosby Pro-Am and Hawaiian Open, he ranks fifth on the money winning list with $242,311, roughly $155,000 off the torrid pace set by Curtis Strange.

"My goal is still to try to get to No. 1," he said. "Curtis is going to be hard to catch but I'm going to give it my best shot."

Meanwhile, a near-record 45 players in the select field of 102 broke or matched par on the testy 7,096-yard Colonial course overlooking the serpentine Trinty River.

"When you catch a golf course in mint condition like this the scores are gonna be lower," said Thorpe, who played almost flawlessly under perfect playing conditions.

"I think this may be the best round I've shot on tour, because this course is so tough."

Wood could have seized the lead outright except for a bogey at the 18th hole, but he wasn't complaining after firing an amazing eight birdies to more than offset four bogeys.

"I love it," he grinned.

Jordan NBA Rookie of Year

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Michael Jordan, the flashy guard of the Chicago Bulls, was named the NBA Rookie of the Year. Jordan, who was third in the NBA in scoring with a 28.2 average and fourth in steals with 2.39 per game, led the Bulls to the playoffs for the first time since 1981. He outpolled Akeem Olajuwon of the Houston Rockets, 57⅛ votes to 20⅛, in the balloting conducted by 78 media members.

HOCKEY

NEW YORK — The Quebec Nordiques were fined $5,000 by National Hockey League President John Ziegler for "actions and remarks" after Game 5 of the Wales Conference finals. BASEBALL

NEW YORK — Major-league baseball club owners lost at least $36 million last year, and the total could go as high as $42 million, Lee MacPhail, their chief labor negotiator, said. The owners, who never before had made their clubs' figures available, have said they were doing so because the sport is having severe economic problems, and they have asked the Major League Players Association to be aware of that in the contract talks.

HORSE RACING

CAMDEN, N.J. — A U.S. District Court judge has upheld state testing of jockeys for evidence of drug use, according to attorneys in the case. Judge Stanley S. Brotman ruled that the random testing of jockeys by the New Jersey Racing Commission was constitutional. The judge, however, refused a state request to throw out a civil suit filed by a group of prominent jockeys, including Bill Shoemaker, Angel Cordero Jr. and Herbert McCauley, seeking to overturn the regulation.

Texas favored in tournament

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Making a case for all four teams in the Southwest Conference baseball tournament is no problem.

Texas, winner of 12 straight conference games and boasting the top two SWC pitchers, is No. 1 in the country.

Arkansas, on an eight-game winning streak and with six of the top 14 hitters in the league, is at home where it is 32-5.

Baylor is 2-1 in each series against the other three tournament teams.

SWC Baseball

Houston was leading the league in late April and was in the title chase until losing three games to Texas in the final series of the season.

Texas, which overcame a 4-5 SWC start to win the league championship, opens the double elimination tournament at 1:30 p.m. Friday against Houston. In the 7 p.m. game, second-place Baylor plays third-place Arkansas.

Texas, 54-10 and already awarded the NCAA Central Regional tournament, opened the season No. 1 in the country. The Longhorns were at the bottom of the top 20 early in the SWC season, but rallied to win their seventh consecutive conference championship.

The winner of the SWC tournament gets a bid to the NCAA tournament, so if Texas falters, the league would have two representatives.

Baylor, 42-11, was unranked when the season began, but is No. 10 for the third straight week in the Collegiate Baseball newspaper poll.

Arkansas, 41-13, was No. 28 in the early rankings, dropped out of the poll and then climbed as high as fifth in late March.

Arkansas is No. 11 this week. Houston, 42-13, was No. 10 on three occasions this year and is No. 25.

Texas pitchers Greg Swindell and Bruce Ruffin were 14-1 in SWC play. Swindell, a left-hander who was 5-1 in the SWC last year with an ERA of 1.75, was 8-0 this year with a league-leading 1.57 ERA.

Swindell struck out 84 and walked 19 during 69 innings against conference opponents. He only allowed six hits per nine innings. Ruffin had a 3.64 ERA in league play, striking out 37 in 47 innings. Offensively, second baseman Bill Bates led the SWC in hits, triples, stolen bases and runs batted in.

Arkansas, coming into the tournament off a three-game sweep of nationally ranked Oral Roberts, has a half-dozen players who hit .350 or better in league play.

The Razorbacks had a team batting average of .340. Outfielder-first baseman Ralph Kraus led the way at .392 and outfielder Mike Loggins hit .392. Outfielder Mark Jackson hit .387, first baseman Dave Patterson hit .366, second baseman Ellis Roby hit .364 and third baseman Jeff King hit .359.

Flyers eliminate Nordiques, 3-0

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Rarely does one play in a 60-minute hockey game mean so much. When Dave Poulin intercepted a pass, skated down ice and scored with his Philadelphia Flyers short two men, it meant everything.

It meant breaking the spirit of the Quebec Nordiques. It meant clinching the Wales Conference final with a 3-0 victory. It meant a berth in the Stanley Cup finals, a first for all but one Flyer (Brian Propp).

"I think because of the potential it had for them — they were looking at scoring one, maybe two goals and going ahead — it had to be demoralizing," said Poulin, who was the first Flyer ever to score in a playoff game with his team two men short. "But it was a big lift for us and we got the momentum and never lost it."

Poulin's goal, at 2:11 of the second period Thursday night, was preceded by Rick Tocchet's tip-in of Mark Howe's wrist shot in the first period. Doug Crossman slapped in a 40-footer at 11:07 of the middle session on a power play and the Flyers completely shut down the Nordiques. Quebec got only 15 shots on goal, the fewest the Flyers have yielded in a game all season. Only a handful caused goalie Pelle Lindbergh the slightest trouble as he recorded his third post-season shutout.

But it was Poulin's play which made it clear the Flyers were headed for a championship round meeting with the defending National Hockey League titleholders, the Edmonton Oilers.

Oilers' Kurri goes wild

CHICAGO (AP) — Jari Kurri ended the evening the same way he began it — with a goal. And now the Edmonton Oilers, seemingly overloaded with devastating sharpshooters, have the Stanley Cup finals in their sights for the third straight year.

Paced by four goals from Kurri, Edmonton beat the Chicago Black Hawks 8-2 Thursday night in the Campbell Conference finals to capture the series 4-2. The defending Stanley Cup champions will now play the Flyers for the Stanley Cup, starting Tuesday night at Philadelphia.

Several playoff records fell Thursday night. The 10 goals boosted the total for the six-game series to 69, breaking the old record of 62 goals the Black Hawks set with Minnesota in the Norris Division finals earlier this year.

But it was Kurri who accomplished the most.

"These teams can really put the puck in the net," said Kurri, who enjoyed his third hat trick of the series and fourth of the playoffs, both playoff records.

"A record is important only if your team wins," said Kurri, who got assists on all four goals from Wayne Gretzky.

Kurri and Mark Messier opened the scoring in the game with first-period goals against Chicago goaltender Murray Bannerman.

Then the Oilers broke the game open with four goals in the second period.

Messier began the barrage with his second goal, on a power play, with a second consecutive assist by Glenn Anderson.

Then Kurri slapped the puck over Bannerman's shoulder at 13:28.

"After I got my first two goals, I knew I was close to the record (for hat tricks)," Kurri said.

Lee Fogolin scored a minute later. Then Kurri got behind the Chicago defense, took a perfect pass from Gretzky just inside the blue line and scored short-handed on a breakaway, giving the Oilers' a 6-0 lead at 18:05.

Kurri had shared the record of two hat tricks in a series with Doug Bentley of Chicago in 1944, Norm Ullman of Detroit in 1964, and Mike Bossy of the Islanders and teammate Mark Messier, both in 1983.

He also scored 12 goals in the series, breaking the record of nine for a series other than the final shared by Reggie Leach in 1976, Bill Barber in 1980, and Messier and Bossy in 1983.

WACKER

"We may have come close, but we weren't good enough defensively to be what we had to be. When we played a good team that was playing good, we were in trouble," appraised the Illinois native.

Last year really wasn't supposed to be, but Wacker assures, "We're not there yet, but we'll get there. They may be young, but we have the talent and great skill people at positions like running back" where Kenneth Davis and Tony Jeffrey return. This combination accounted for 2,451 yards and 26 touchdowns last year.

Two Midland products figure prominently in TCU's future. Blue Chipper Darrell Davis, a tight-end and linebacker at Midland High, signed with the Frogs last winter, "He's as good as we've ever recruited, a great competitor."

Offensive lineman Coy Stewart, recruited off Midland Lee's state finalists of two years ago, was one of those redshirts last year, but at 6-4, 243 is ready to carry his share of the load this year. "Coy has a great attitude. Last year he was plagued by injuries and appendictis, but he's one of the young talents on which we are pinning our future."

WITH AS much youth as the Frogs will be going with this year, "Those first four games are critical. We open with Tulane and Kansas State," explains Wacker, who came to TCU after a national championship at Southwest Texas State, "and then we play SMU and Arkansas. A 4-0 start would be great. A 3-1 start would be tremendous. A 2-2 would be medicore, but acceptable against that kind of opposition."

After 25 years of losing, Purple Pride is being resurrected. "What's amazing to me," said Wacker, "is that as many stayed with the team as did during those long years of losing."

But the evidence was in the sellout at Amon Carter for the Texas game and the reception at alumni gatherings where spirit and enthusiasm is at an all-time high.

Wacker calls the excitement genuine and claims that Fort Worth is identifying itself with the team. "We need those people. We don't have as big an alumni as most of the others. We need all the support we can get.

"West Texas is coming back. We're are still Cowtown U.S. and I thinking that's something that helps our recruiting."

In the old days, TCU plucked the Sammy Baughs and Bob Lillys out of the Sweetwaters and Throckmortons in the great plains to the west and then Texas Tech joined the SWC and the pickings were sparse for many years.

"TCU used to own West Texas," said Wacker, "And we hope to make it that way again. We just seem to draw a lot of our talent from the rural areas. I think with we have a certain appeal to these kids. In a student body of 7,000, they don't feel as though they they will get lost."

As for next fall's SWC race, Wacker lists SMU, Houston, Arkansas, A&M and Texas as contenders, and tosses in Baylor as a possible "they've got those two good quarterbacks returning. Houston represented the Southwest Conference in the Cotton Bowl last year and they've got everybody back. And you never underrate a Bill Yeoman team.

"You better believe it, parity in the SWC is a reality."

Olympics...greatest film ever

The 1932 Olympics were held at Hollywood's back door but the 1936 Olympic film of the Berlin Games was the greatest of all time. Not just the greatest Olympic film of all time, but maybe one of the greatest films of all time, period. It was, without doubt, the greatest documentary ever photographed.

It was the work of one of the most fascinating women of the century, Leni Riefenstahl.

She was thought to be either Adolf Hitler's or Joe Goebbels' mistress — she wasn't — or someone who had something on those Nazi party bigwigs no one else knew about. That wasn't true, either, and it would have been impossible to blackmail anybody as totally and rigidly amoral as those two, anyway.

No, Leni Riefenstahl was just an extraordinarily gifted film maker, a sensuous, sensitive woman who knew something about the art of movie-making that no one else knew at the time.

PART BRUNNHILDE, part Marlene Dietrich, she was something right out of a Wagner opera, a towering blonde given to wearing the flowing white gowns of Greek goddesses.

Hitler was infatuated with her and she had made the diabolically rousing propaganda movie, "Triumph Of The Will," a film that did more to promote the National Socialist Party than all the jackboots in Bavaria.

Fraulein Riefenstahl was a plumber's daughter from Berlin but she became a protegee of Max Reinhardt, the great impresario. She was a Valkyrie-like presence on screen who specialized in outdoor movies — mountaineering, skiing, aquatics — but she learned more about the art of the camera than anybody in UFA, the German movie-making company.

Her specialty was the celebration of the human body. Nudity, even frontal nudity, was tastefully, almost innocently done in her films, and the Olympic Games were, for her, an orgy of artistic gratification.

Sports cinematography, before her, consisted of stilted newsreel long shots that looked as if they had been photographed by a cameraman with terminal St. Vitus Dance or uncontrollable delirium tremens.

She elevated the art. She wheedled 80 cameras and crews out of a doting Fuhrer. She shot a million-and-a-half feet of film. She shot from Zeppelins. She shot from underground tracks. She used the most sophisticated Telephoto lenses. She worked 20-hour days in her own special building. She brought an intimacy to the film and subject that no one had ever seen in an athletic event.

SHE SHOWED diving from the aspect of the diver as she followed him through every turn into the water below. She lingered lovingly over the form of Jesse Owens, who fascinated her. She showed every nuance of musculature, every straining tendon, every pulsing artery. Da Vinci could not have created a more defined work of art. Tchaikovsky never wrote a ballet more sensual.

It took Riefenstahl two years to assemble the film. Released theatrically in two parts with an intermission, it won the gold medal at the Venice film festival and was a sensation wherever it played in Europe.

It got nowhere in the U.S.

Hollywood snubbed her. Her work got no distribution in this country. "Hitler's girlfriend" was hardly America's sweetheart, and even though she tried to distance herself from the Nazi horror, no one was convinced. She was trying to glorify the human form but she was glorifying human hate. The U.S. wasn't interested.

THAT WAS nearly 50 years ago. There have been eight Olympics and Olympic films since then, and, although all film makers have copied Riefenstahl, none have come up to her artistic dimensions.

Now, it is time for the 1984 film. The Leni Riefenstahl of the Los Angeles Olympics, if he will pardon the allusion, is a longtime film recorder of track and field athletics, Jonah (Bud) Greenspan.

Greenspan's love affair is not with the athlete as an artist but with the athlete as a superhuman performer. Greenspan's cameras are more worshipful of human endeavor than human physiology.

Bud's problems are subtler. Technology that was revolutionary in Riefenstahl's day is ho-hum stuff now. Hundreds of millions have already seen the Olympics on television, compared with the few who saw the Games in person or on newsreels in Riefenstahl's day.

Greenspan celebrates the drama of the Olympics, not the anatomy.

"There are 8,000 stories in an Olympic Games, one for every participant. You have to go find it," Greenspan says.

His film, "16 Days To Glory," is a cornucopia of melodrama ranging from tragedy to comedy, the Olympics as Shakespeare might have viewed them.

"First of all, we want to subtitle this 'The Olympics You Didn't See,'" Greenspan said. "We want to show you the heartbreak, joy, triumph, disaster – the Olympics in human terms. The boy who worked and sacrificed and gave up his childhood for 10 years only to pull a muscle on the verge of making his dreams come true. The girl who lost 70 pounds and turned her child over to her husband to rear so she could make her try for the better life. The agony of a wife watching her husband lose.

"My ambition is to have this film seen by ABC's Roone Arledge and have him say, 'Why didn't we have that?' I want to show the universality of the Olympics, the Olympics as life."

Women on steroids can expect hair, deeper voices

CHICAGO (AP) — Women athletes who take anabolic steroids to improve performance can expect masculine, sometimes irreversible side effects such as deeper voices and increased facial hair, a study says.

Anabolic steroids, or synthetic male hormones, "have received considerable attention during the past decade because of increasing use by male athletes attempting to improve their performance," researchers said in a study in Friday's Journal of the American Medical Association.

"It is clear some female athletes also use these hormones, as shown by the detection of anabolic steroids in the urine of women competing in international events in the shot put, the javelin throw, and running," said the researchers, all from Ohio State University at Columbus.

While steroids are used by athletes to increase muscle strength and size, their only accepted medical use is to replace lost testosterone, a male hormone, or to treat some types of anemia in men, said Dr. Richard Strauss of the university's department of preventive medicine.

The use of steroids "is considered unethical by almost all sports organizations in the United States" and is banned by the International Olympic Committee, Strauss said Wednesday in a telephone interview.

To determine what side effects are experienced by women athletes, researchers interviewed 10 amateur athletes who participate in such sports as track and weightlifting at the national level.

All used steroids in conjunction with weight-training and requested anonymity.

Anabolic steroids are prescription drugs generally obtained by athletes "on the black market," Strauss said. "We didn't ask these women where they got them."

"All women reported a significant increase in muscle strength, muscle size and sports performance," which were the desired effects, the study said.

However, all reported masculine side effects, some of which were considered undesirable.

All said their voices had deepened, nine noticed increased facial hair and eight said their clitorises had enlarged.

While previous studies have shown those side effects may be permanent, the women said they would continue to use steroids, Strauss said.

Other reported side effects usually disappear when steroid use is discontinued, Strauss said. Those included increased aggressiveness, reported by eight of the 10 women; decreased or stopped menstruation, seven reporting; increased sex drive, six reporting; and decreased breast size, five reporting.

All those interviewed said they took a combination of steroids in cycles, increasing the dosage before competition.

The largest dose reported was nine times the recommended medicinal dose for men, taken during a four-week cycle.

The mean age of the participants was 33. The mean height was 5-feet-4.2 and the mean weight, 152 pounds. The mean length of time they had been using steroids was 2.1 years.

While the "incidence and patterns of anabolic steroid use by women athletes, in general, are unknown," the researchers said their findings confirm steroids, "in doses currently used, are masculinizing in women athletes."

Strauss said the amounts used by those interviewed were considered comparable to those used by most women athletes who take steroids.

"The participants justified their use of anabolic steroids on the grounds that (1) these drugs were necessary to win; (2) the side effects, although sometimes undesirable, were acceptable to them and their friends; and (3) it was within their individual rights to use anabolic steroids if they wished," the study said.

Holmes shooting for Rocky's record 49-0

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Marvis Frazier and Randall "Tex" Cobb know how it is to fight Larry Holmes, and both also can understand his decision to continue fighting.

Before and after he stopped David Bey in the 10th round at Las Vegas, Nev., on March 15, Holmes has said it would be his last fight.

Now Holmes, who is 47-0, has decided to try to break Rocky Marciano's 49-0 record. Marciano is the only heavyweight champion to retire undefeated.

Holmes will go after No. 48 Monday night when he defends the International Boxing Federation championship against Carl "The Truth" Williams in a scheduled 15-round bout at the Lawlor Events Center on the campus of the University of Nevada-Reno.

Frazier, who was knocked out in the first round by Holmes on Nov. 25, 1983, and Cobb, who lost a one-sided 15-round decision to Holmes Nov. 26, 1982, will fight in scheduled 10-rounders on the card that will be televised live by NBC from 8 p.m. to 10 p.m.

Frazier will fight James "Quick" Tillis, and Cobb will fight Eddie Gregg.

"Larry is his own man, and it's his decision," Frazier said Thursday of the 35-year-old Holmes' decision to continue fight.

"If I was him and felt the way he's feeling I'd go ahead and try to break Marciano's record," said the son of former heavyweight champion Joe Frazier.

THE OUTSPOKEN Cobb, wearing a T-shirt that said, "I Am The Person Your Mother Warned You About," felt that more than Marciano's record was involved in Holmes' decision to keep fighting.

"Nobody was suprised," Cobb said. "He's a fighter and when he gets the record, he's going to come back one more time."

Frazier knows about the urge to fight "one more time."

Smokin' Joe Frazier fought Jumbo Cummings to a 10-round draw Dec. 3, 1981, almost 5½ years after his previous match, a fifth-round knockout loss to George Foreman.

Now Smokin' Joe, at age 41, plans to fight 47-year-old Robert Cleroux on June 22 in a suburb of Montreal.

Maybe Holmes will fight Joe for No. 49, someone suggested to Marvis.

Marvis smiled.

The younger Frazer also knows how Williams must be feeling, hearing and reading that he is being overmatched against Holmes, who is a 7½-1 favorite.

He heard and read the same things when he challenged Holmes with just a 10-0 record. The first-round knockout seemed to uphold the criticisms.

BUT FRAZIER, now 13-1, said, "I feel I was experienced enough to go in there with Larry. I was working in the gym with guys like Jimmy Young, Tex Cobb and Michael Dokes.

Williams, 25, will take a 16-0 record, with 12 knockouts, into the title shot. His best-known opponent has been Tillis, who knocked him down twice in the first round. But Williams got up to win a 10-round decision last Oct. 23, which was his last fight.

Other COM swimmers honored for their participation in the TAGS meet in Austin were: Sam Perry, Clay Brown, Alan Reed, John Green, Matt Horn, Jay Green, Brian Phillips, Paul Harris, Megan Kennedy, Becky Simpson, Michaela Hasek, Eric Jines, Andrew Jordan, Matt Welch, Shannon Guignon, Jane Marker, Kristin Henry, John Waller, Matt Seay and Matt Houston.

Special awards went to parents and volunteers David Whytlaw, Josie Birdwell, Laura Brown, Janice Henry, Stacy Smith and departing assistant coach Mike Shrader.

The backbone of the COM program, however, are the dozens of 'B' and 'C' level swimmers that will someday make up the competitive portion of the swim team. Since Swindig took the job at COM, participation has more than doubled. Membership is now up to 135, up from 60 when he assumed the title, and there is strength in numbers.

In his address, Quick had sound advice for those 'B' and 'C' level swimmers, as well as the already competitive 'A' group.

"Learn the process of goal-setting," Quick said, "striving for a goal is an important lesson. If a goal doesn't change your behaviour on a daily basis, it isn't a goal. Every day ask yourself, 'did you do something today to bring you closer to your goal?' Do something right every day.

"For COM to contnue growth, keep a perspective on your goals. No team is unbeatable, take a little at a time, you'll be surprised how far you get."

COM NOTES: Shrader, who was Swindig's top assistant in his first season with COM, has accepted a teaching assistant's job with Southern Methodist in the Southwest Conference...

There are wild stories floating around about bridge experts who can place every card after the auction! If there is such an animal, we would have hired him long ago to play for us. However, it is certainly true that, by the time the play of the hand is halfway over, a skilled player should have a pretty good idea of the lie of the land. Consider this example from the Spring North American Championships.

The auction was straightforward if you overlook North's substandard opening bid. Once North supported hearts, South's hand was ideal for the Blackwood Convention, since it had first- or second-round control of all suits.

Against six hearts West led the jack of spades. When dummy came down it was obvious that the fate of the hand would rest on the location of the queen of clubs. You might think that you should play the over-caller for that card, but South, Adele Stewart of Halifax, Nova Scotia, decided that she wanted to know more about the hand before committing herself to a club finesse.

East won the ace of spades and returned the suit to declarer's king. South cashed the ace of trumps and crossed to dummy's queen, revealing the 4-1 trump break. The remaining trumps were drawn with the help of a finesse, and the diamond suit was cashed out. When East followed to all these tricks, declarer had a virtual complete count of the hand.

East surely had five spades for his overcall, and he had already shown up with seven cards in the red suits. Therefore, he was marked with no more than one club. So declarer cashed the ace of clubs and confidently ran the jack to bring home her slam—and with it the gold points she needed to become an ACBL Life Master.

Margaret Hamilton: 'Witch is dead'

SALISBURY, Conn. (AP) — Margaret Hamilton, the veteran character actress who died of an apparent heart attack, once said she passed up many requests to recreate her green-skinned witch from "The Wizard of Oz."

"I suppose I've turned down a fortune too, but I just don't want to spoil the magic. Little children's minds can't cope with seeing a mean witch alive again," Miss Hamilton said in a 1973 interview.

Hamilton

A veteran of more than 75 films and scores of plays, Miss Hamilton died Thursday at the Noble Horizons nursing home in Salisbury, where she had been in declining health for the past year, said director of nursing Joann Lunning. She was 82.

Although she appeared in films with W.C. Fields and Mae West, Miss Hamilton remained best-known as the cackling Wicked Witch of the West who melted at the feet of Dorothy in the 1939 film classic.

"I hope that when I die, someone has the presence of mind to say, 'Ding, dong, the witch is really dead,'" her agent, Michael Thomas, quoted her as telling him.

All of the actors who played major roles in "The Wizard of Oz" — except Ray Bolger, the Scarecrow — are dead.

NEW YORK (AP) — A $6.5 million royalty check from the "We Are the World" hit record will send the rock music collaborative's first planeload of food, clothing, and medicines to famine-stricken Africa next month.

With a wide smile, USA for Africa President Ken Kragen said, "I'd be happy to take that" as a Columbia Records executive handed him the check at a news conference Thursday in Manhattan.

"This is only the first in a number of checks to follow," said Al Teller, senior vice president of the CBS subsidiary.

USA for Africa plans to charter a 747 cargo plane, Kragen said, which will carry 240,000 pounds of goods, including high-protein biscuits, vitamins, intravenous solutions and rehydration salts, tents and blankets to Africa.

The plane will also carry a large shipment of T-shirts for the needy, part of a campaign sponsored by the MTV rock video television network and Catholic Relief Services.

NEW YORK (AP) — It takes more than beauty to be a beauty queen, according to the new Miss USA, Laura Martinez-Herring of El Paso, Texas.

"It's all in your mind. If you don't believe in yourself, nobody else will either," she said Thursday during a bilingual interview with metropolitan-area reporters, her first appearance since winning the title.

Miss Herring, 21, is the first naturalized citizen and the first Hispanic to win the crown in the 34-year history of the Miss USA pageant. She was named Miss USA on Monday in Lakeland, Fla.

"It's a wonderful feeling to be representing the most powerful country in the world," she said in an interview in the penthouse suite of the Mayflower Hotel overlooking Central Park.

She also said she was proud to have won her first title last year, that of Miss El Paso, because a Hispanic had never before won a beauty title in Texas. She later became Miss Texas.

Miss Herring, 5 foot 7 and 112 pounds with long brown hair and brown eyes, is in New York for a week to publicize the Miss Universe pageant to be televised July 15 from Miami.

NEW YORK (AP) — "Well, I'm rich. I'm famous. Maybe it's too much to ask to be talented too," says Cher, who after two decades in entertainment only recently has been considered a "serious" actress.

"At first, all I wanted was to be famous," Cher confesses in an interview in the coming issue of Parade magazine. "Then it happened. I was Cher of Sonny and Cher. Then I realized that fame had nothing to do with talent. So then I wanted to be good."

Cher, who will be 39 on Monday, made it big in the 1960s with the Sonny and Cher hit "I Got You, Babe" and was a popular television entertainer until taking up acting in the '80s.

She won an Academy Award nomination for her portrayal of a nuclear plant worker in "Silkwood" and got good reviews for her role in the current film "Mask."

NEW YORK (AP) — Woody Allen is known to millions of film fans for his tousled hair, high forehead and black-rimmed glasses. Phil Boroff is not.

A federal judge on Thursday agreed with Allen, 49, that an advertising campaign by National Video, which had Boroff pose with videocassettes of two Allen films, "Annie Hall" and "Bananas," was an illegal use of a famous visage.

U.S. District Judge Constance Baker Motley ordered an end to any advertisement that could lead readers to conclude that Allen has endorsed National.

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — Dethroned Miss America Vanessa Williams has amended her lawsuit over the sexually explicit photos of her published last year in Penthouse magazine because she thinks the publication has a "deeper pocket," its lawyer said.

The suit, now asking $400 million in damages, charges the magazine and photographer Tom Chiapel with breach of contract, fraud, unjust enrichment and violation of civil rights, Miss Williams' attorney, Helene Freeman, said Thursday.

The original suit, filed only against Chiapel, sought $70,000.

Miss Williams, now 22, became the first black Miss America when she was crowned in 1983.

Roy Grutman, attorney for Penthouse and Chiapel, said: "The case is as preposterous as the amount of damages. She simply added Penthouse because she thinks there's a deeper pocket."

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — Comedian Richard Pryor is picking up the motel tab for parents who came to town for a college graduation ceremony but were told there was no room at the inn because Pryor's film crew had extended its stay there.

Pryor, a Peoria native, will shell out $2,700 for lodging four dozen parents who lost their pre-paid weekend reservations at Jumer's Castle Lodge, said Victoria Horsford, publicist for Pryor's Indigo Productions Co.

"It was a lightning bolt out of the blue," said Elizabeth Roffol, manager of Jumer's, near the Bradley University campus. Some of the parents had paid for their reservations as early as last fall, she said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Having kissed about 20,000 women on TV's "Family Feud," host Richard Dawson has smooched his last and tearfully closed the long-running game show.

After nine years, the Mark Goodson Production show fell victim Thursday to the ABC network programmer's ax, and the studio audience honored Dawson with a standing ovation.

"Please sit down," Dawson said shakily. "I have to do at least 30 minutes of fun and laughter and you make me want to cry."

Astronauts find photography a snap

Hearst News Service

No professional photographer yet has rocketed into space, but some of the photos that have come back from space missions have been masterpieces: well-composed, sharp, perfectly exposed and focused.

The good photographic results turned in by the astronauts aren't accidental. As a regular part of their training, all astronauts attend a photography class at the Johnson Space Center in Houston before hurtling into orbit aboard the space shuttles Challenger or Discovery.

The man responsible for teaching the astronauts to take professional photograhs in space is Ernst Wildi, an award-winning veteran filmmaker and writer who is the author of NASA's Astronaut's Photography Manual.

"Some of the techniques taught in my NASA photo class are aimed specifically at space travelers," Wildi said. "Astronauts face conditions that are different than those encountered by earth-bound photographers."

The main difference, of course, is weightlessness.

"If there is one thing that is vital to good photography and sharp images, it is a steady hand," Wildi said. "More pictures are ruined because of camera motion than for any other reason."

Even at fairly fast shutter speeds that stop motion, the cameraman's hands have to provide a steady platform for the camera, Wildi said.

"And this is doubly true if the photographer is using a telescopic lens, because the long lens magnifies any kind of motion. Of course I have not been into space myself, but the astronauts report that it is difficult to hold the camera steady while they're floating around the cabin."

The photos taken while floating in weightless motion usually are blurred, Wildi said.

Wildi said that for the shots of Earth out the spacecraft window the astronauts need not bother about focusing, instead simply setting the lens for infinity.

"But for shots taken in the cabin, or of the cargo bay, or of astronauts going outside the shuttle to do repair work, they need to be instructed in the principles of depth of field so they can focus properly."

Wildi said he also teaches composition as it applies to photography in space.

"What the astronaut photograher wants to avoid is a lot of pictures in which the horizon, that is, the outline of the Earth, is placed right in the middle, splitting the image into two equal halves. The horizon line should be 1/3 from either the top or bottom."

From trial and error, the astronauts have found that one of the easiest ways to ensure clear pictures of Earth from the shuttle is to turn the spacecraft upside down.

"The triple-pane window on top of the spacecraft is usually the cleanest, the least smudged from the blast on takeoff, so shooting pictures out this window produces the best results," Wildi said. "I also remind the astronauts that they should wipe off the inside of the window before taking pictures."

Underground laser tests successfully in Nevada

NEW YORK (AP) — Scientists developing an X-ray laser space weapon powered by a nuclear bomb have increased the brightness and power of the device by focusing its rays, The New York Times reported this week.

The so-called "Super Excalibur" is being developed at the Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory in California, and was tested in an underground explosion in Nevada on March 23, the Times said. The test was generally positive, although it was ambiguous in certain areas, the Times said. The newspaper did not elaborate.

According to the Times, increasing the brightness of the rays is crucial if the weapon is ever to be effective against satellites and missiles in space.

The X-ray laser has been under development at the California laboratory for the past five years and kicked off the interest in the space-based missile defense system, known commonly as "Star Wars."

GOPs debate, socialize weekly in elite club

WASHINGTON (AP) — Get 34 members of Congress together and normally you're bound to have equivocating, grandstanding and a press release. But it doesn't work that way on Wednesdays, when the House Wednesday Group, a chummy association of 34 Republican congressmen, assembles in near obscurity.

Twenty-two years after this institution was founded by seven moderate-to-liberal Republicans, members of the Wednesday Group say they have resisted the temptation to use the organization as a vehicle for self-promotion.

The group has no constitution or bylaws. Meetings are closed, except for occasional invited speakers.Publicity is neither sought nor discouraged.

"It's an anomaly in this town," said Rep. Thomas Ridge, R-Pa. "That's why it's so attractive to a lot of us, I'd bet."

Alumni include David Stockman, the Reagan administration budget director; Margaret Heckler, secretary of health and human services; John Anderson, the 1980 independent candidate for president; and John V. Lindsay, former mayor of New York City.

"It's a bunch of people who are pretty darn busy but think it's important to get together and let their hair down and be the kinds of people who take the broad perspective to government envisioned by the founding fathers," said Steve Hofman, the group's salaried staff director.

"It's really the only place where you can sit down and collect your wits about this place," said Rep. Stewart McKinney, R-Conn. "I think when I leave here, it will be the most pleasant thing I've been associated with."

The group's most important function is providing an overview of congressional and national issues — a perspective difficult to obtain in these days of specialized committees, caucuses and subcommittees, said William Clinger, R-Pa., the pipe-smoking current chairman.

"In the old days, before electronic voting, you spent a lot of time on the floor chatting with colleagues during roll calls," Clinger said. "Now, you tend to get very focused on your world."

"It was a great help to me," said former congressman Joel Pritchard. "I was the only Republican from the state of Washington and it gave me something to tie into."

Tax-fleeing 'Yuppies' may flood Texas

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas could become a popular destination for young urban professionals — Yuppies — if the U.S. Treasury Department's tax simplification proposals take effect, the state comptroller's office says.

"Corporations commonly move in search of more favorable tax climates. Now tax experts are advising young urban professionals...to move for the same reason," says the latest issue of the comptroller publication Fiscal Notes.

"Where?" the report said. "Texas, of course."

If enacted, the Treasury Department plan would abolish the federal income tax deduction now allowed for state and local taxes paid.

"Eliminating the deductions for state and local taxes would significantly increase the amount residents pay in federal taxes. People in states such as Texas, which touch residents only lightly with state taxes, would fare best," the comptroller's report said.

The report said residents of high-tax states would be hit hardest under the plan. Among those states are New York, New Jersey, Rhode Island, Delaware, Wisconsin, Massachusetts, Maryland, Minnesota and California.

For example, the report said a two-income couple living in New York City and earning $25,000 a year with typical deductions would find their tax bill 23 percent higher under the proposal.

"The average family living in New York City paid $4,933 in state and local taxes in 1982. This compares to an approximate $1,694 tax bill the same family would have paid in Houston," the comptroller said.

"The federal tax system overhaul may give some individuals who rely heavily on state and local tax deductions incentive enough to move — and Texas may be their destination," it said.

Dollar higher

LONDON (AP) — A rise in U.S. interest rates helped to push the dollar higher on European exchange markets today in post-holiday trading. Gold bullion prices were little changed.

Dealers said the dollar was rising largely on technically based buying following the closing of most markets on the European continent Thursday for Ascension Day observances.

They also cited Thursday's firming of U.S. short-term interest rates, which they said ran contrary to market expectations. The U.S. federal funds rate — what banks charge each other for overnight loans — traded at 8 3/16 percent late Thursday, up from 8⅛ percent at the opening and 8 percent late Wednesday.

Higher U.S. interest rates make dollar-denominated investments more attractive and non-interest-bearing commodities such as gold less attractive.

Midmorning dollar rates compared with levels in Europe late Thursday included:

—3.1080 West German marks, up from 3.0945.

—2.6055 Swiss francs, up from 2.5975.

—9.4550 French francs, up from 9.4450.

—3.5150 Dutch guilders, up from 3.5010.

—1,983.00 Italian lire, up from 1,977.50.

—1.3740 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3725.

The dollar rose in relation to the British pound. Sterling's value was quoted at $1.2555, down from $1.2592.

In Tokyo, the dollar closed at 251.90 yen, up from 251.30 yen. Later in London, the U.S. currency was quoted at 251.70 yen.

London's five biggest bullion houses fixed a recommended midmorning gold price of $319.80 an ounce, down from $320.25 late Thursday. A trader described the market as "very, very quiet."

In Zurich, gold was bid at $319.75, down from $323 late Wednesday. Swiss markets were closed Thursday.

Earlier in Hong Kong, gold lost 9 cents to close at a bid of $320.82.

The metal was quoted at $320.50 in New York late Thursday.

Silver was bid at $6.44 an ounce in London, down from $6.51 late Thursday.

Business mixers

Over 400 members of the Midland Chamber of Commerce turned out Thursday for a business mixer sponsored by the four major airlines serving Midland Regional Airport. Joining together to provide food and drink for the event were: (left to right) Eric Downward, Midland general manager for American Airlines; Leonard Peterson, city manager for Frontier Airlines; Ed Hildenbrand, Muse Air city manager and Rudy Lopez, Southwest Airlines station manager at Midland.

Failed bank reopens under new ownership

DALLAS (AP) — A newly chartered institution geared up today to welcome old customers of the Energy Bank N.A., which was declared insolvent by the Comptroller of the Currency, officials said.

The new Oaks Bank and Trust Co. of Dallas scheduled a 9 a.m. reopening today with $24.3 million in 2,500 accounts it assumed from the failed bank, said officials of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, which was appointed the Energy Bank's receiver.

FDIC officials in Dallas and Washington said the Energy Bank failed because of heavy loan losses and dependence on so-called brokered deposits, usually placed by other institutions through brokers who know a troubled bank will pay higher-than-average interest sates fos such funds.

"The Energy Bank had a substantial number of brokered deposits which, during the early part of this year, ran off," Ken Gorham, closing manager for the FDIC's Dallas regional office, said.

He said the bank lost about $12 million in brokered deposits early this year but that loan losses hurt the Energy Bank more.

"The Energy Bank had experienced a substantial amount of loan losses, enough to wipe out the capital accounts of the bank," Gorham said.

He said depositors of the failed bank automatically become depositors of the assuming bank. The new institution's deposits include $2.8 million in 28 accounts originated by deposit brokers, officials said.

The Energy Bank's deposits totaled about $24 million on May 10, said Dean DeBuck, information officer for the comptroller's office, which regulates federally chartered banks.

The FDIC said the bank, chartered on June 15, 1982, was the 34th bank failure nationwide this year and the third in Texas.

Michael Patriarca, deputy comptroller of the currency, declared the bank insolvent at 3 p.m. Thursday, DeBuck said.

"The (Energy) bank began using brokered deposits in June 1984 and such deposits reached a high of about $12 million in November," said Alan Whitney, an FDIC spokesman in Washington. "These deposits were used to fund loans, many of poor credit quality."

Agency officials said Oaks Bank and Trust will pay the FDIC a purchase premium of $1.2 million and also will buy the failed bank's good installment and real estate loans and certain other assets for $7.1 million.

Money supply jump confuses economic forecasters

Associated Press

An unexpected surge in the nation's basic money supply has added to confusion among interest rate forecasters.

The Federal Reserve Board said Thursday that the money supply, known as M1, shot up $2.1 billion in the first week of May, leaving it above the upper limits of the Fed's growth targets.

Early in the day, the government reported that housing construction in April climbed to its highest level in a year.

But on the downside, the Federal Reserve Board said the operating rate at the nation's factories, mines and utilities fell 0.5 percentage point in April to 80.6 percent.

The rise in the money supply was especially disappointing to financial economists because it reversed a slowdown in money supply growth that began in April.

Many analysts not only had been predicting a decline, but also were hoping that a slowing of growth in the money supply, combined with the sluggish performance of the economy, would persuade the Fed to push interest rates lower.

Now, the analysts say the Fed may take more time before deciding whether to adopt a more accommodative stance.

The Fed said M1 — funds readily available for spending — rose to a seasonally adjusted $577.6 billion in the week ended May 6 from a revised $575.5 billion the previous week. The previous week's figure originally was reported as $575.2 billion.

M1 includes cash in circulation, deposits in checking accounts and non-bank travelers checks.

For the latest 13 weeks, M1 averaged $573 billion, a 10 percent rate of gain from the previous 13 weeks.

Delaware Supreme Court to rule on Unocal-Pickens plea

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Unocal Corp., fighting a takeover bid by T. Boone Pickens Jr., is pinning its hopes on the Delaware Supreme Court to exclude a Pickens-led group from a lucrative stock-repurchase offer.

The court is expected to rule today on an attempt by Unocal to keep Pickens from taking part in the deal and making a windfall profit of an estimated $178 million.

The Wilmington, Del., court heard two hours of arguments Thursday on an appeal by Unocal, which lost two earlier rounds to Pickens in Delaware Chancery Court.

Unocal, the nation's 13th largest oil concern, is the parent of Los Angeles-based Union Oil Co. of California. The case is being heard in Delaware because that is where Unocal is incorporated.

As part of a complex series of defensive maneuvers, Unocal has offered to buy back 50 million shares, or about 29 percent, of its stock for $72 per share. That is about 56 percent over what Unocal stock has been selling for recently.

Unocal made the offer to lure shareholders away from a competing bid by the Pickens group for 64 million shares at $54 each. Unocal's offer also would burden the Los Angeles company with an additional $3.6 billion in debt, making it less attractive to an unwanted suitor.

The Pickens group, Mesa Partners II, now owns 23.7 million shares, or 13.6 percent, of Unocal. The additional stock would increase its holdings to 50.1 percent. Pickens is chairman of Amarillo, Texas-based Mesa Petroleum Co., which owns 90 percent of Mesa Partners.

The Pickens group, which paid an average of $46.41 per share for its Unocal stock, challenged its exclusion from Unocal's stock-buyback offer as discriminatory. Unocal defended the move as an appropriate means to protect a company from a corporate raider.

Striking pilots force United to cut service

Union pilots struck United Airlines today, stranding passengers and forcing the nation's largest air carrier to cut off service to 89 airports. United vowed to continue flying with non-union pilots.

Talks between the company and the Air Line Pilots Association, meeting with federal mediators, had stalled over United's proposal to pay beginning pilots at a lower salary scale than the one currently in effect.

Negotiators met in Boston Thursday for a fifth straight day and continued until about 2:30 a.m. EDT today. No time was set for a resumption of talks.

After the midnight EDT deadline by United's 5,300 pilots passed, picket lines went up in Chicago, Cleveland, San Francisco, Denver, Portland, Ore., Honolulu, Los Angeles, Newark, N.J., Boston and Seattle. It is the airline's first pilot strike since 1951.

"Most of us have made preparations to stay out for a long time if necessary," said Douglas Nolker, a DC-10 pilot. "We're a united group of pilots like I have never seen in my 18 years at United."

"I expect to see at least 98 percent of the United pilots honor the picket line," Nolker said.

Even before the strike was announced United canceled 155 flights, about 10 percent of the airline's system, because pilots called in sick at higher than the normal rate, said Chuck Novak, a spokesman for the Chicago-based airline.

"United Airlines, in the face of a strike, will continue daily operations. Operations initially are scheduled to serve 50 airports, and we will temporarily discontinue service at 89," Novak said.

Oil firm expects earnings to drop

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Diamond Shamrock Corp. expects its annual earnings to drop this year because of tighter markets, overcapacity and the falling prices of petroleum products, the company's president said Thursday.

"If current industry trends continue, we expect 1985 earnings to be below 1984, in spite of increased volume," J.L. Jackson, Diamond Shamrock's president and chief operating officer, said at the company's annual meeting.

Jackson said the company "did fairly well" during 1984, which was "a tough year for the oil and gas business."

"We are not, however, immune from the forces that are reshaping the trade," he said. "We are facing unprecedented dynamics: tighter markets, overcapacity and disinflation, resulting in a contraction of the entire energy industry."

During the formal business session, stockholders approved a proposal intended to deter "greenmail" and self-dealing transactions, as well as a proposal to to appoint the board of directors to staggered terms.

(Averages for all 262 taxable funds)		44	7.77	8.07
30-day average yield 7.85

Yield columns represent: annualized total return to shareholders for past seven days and 7-day compounded (effective) rates of return. Past returns are not necessarily indicative of future yields. Investment quality and maturity may vary among funds. r - restricted availability.

MONEY FUND TABLE COMMENTARY: Assets of the 262 taxable money funds reported by Donoghue's MONEY FUND REPORT (R) of Holliston, Mass. 01746 increased $368.1 million to $199.1 billion during the week ended May 14, 1985. The taxable funds' 7-day average yield decreased to 7.77 percent from 7.82 percent. The taxable funds' 30-day average yield decreased to 7.85 percent from 7.93 percent. The taxable funds' average maturity remained the same at 44 days.

William E. Donoghue says, "Money fund asset activity was quiet this week as investors stayed put in the funds. The institutional money funds experienced the only asset increase, an inflow of $400 million. Investors are waiting for an upward trend to emerge in the stock market, and are using the money funds as a safe harbor in the meantime. The 7-day average yield for all taxable money funds decreased from 7.82 percent to 7.77 percent, its lowest level since March 25, 1983."

UNITED

TEXARKANA, Texas (AP) — Attorneys general from Arkansas, Louisiana and Oklahoma called a news conference today — apparently to announce that the three states are throwing their support behind proposals to locate the General Motors' Saturn automobile plant in Texarkana.

Robert E. "Swede" Lee, president of the Texarkana Chamber of Commerce, announced the 10 a.m. news conference and said it would be about the location of the $5 billion GM plant, but declined further comment.

Ironically, Texas officials were not represented at the meeting, at least not directly.

Harden Wiedemann, executive director of the Texas Economic Development Commission, told the Dallas Times Herald Wednesday that Texas officials support the plan but decided not to get involved. To do so would be to show favoritism to Texarkana at the expense of the more than 80 other Texas cities also bidding for the Saturn plant, he said.

Officials of the three states remained generally mum Wednesday on the purpose of the meeting, but Wiedemann speculated that officials from the other states devised the plan in recognition of Texas' status as a frontrunner in what has become a municipal and state sweepstakes to attract the manufacturing plant.

The certain regional economic benefits of a Saturn plant at Texarkana — which sits on the Texas-Arkansas border and is less than 40 miles from Oklahoma and Louisiana — would be sufficient to excite Oklahoma, Arkansas and Louisiana about the prospects of having a plant located near, albeit not inside of their borders, Wiedemann told the Times Herald.

He said he did not know the specific inducements that would be offered GM, but said the proposal was based on the notion that "it makes sense from a geographical distribution standpoint, plus GM gets favors from four states instead of one by putting (Saturn) in Texarkana," Wiedemann added.

GM has been conducting a national search for a site for the Saturn plant, which would create 6,000 jobs. The plant is to produce an inexpensive compact car to compete with foreign imports. GM has said it hopes to choose a site sometime this summer.

Three states push Texarkana for auto plant

"The focus of the service will be on major hub airports in Chicago and Denver, with service flowing through those hubs," Novak said.

United, the primary carrier at Cleveland Hopkins International Airport, with 55 arrivals and departures daily, revised its schedule there to four flights a day, all to Chicago.

Pilots still wearing their uniforms began picketing after 9 p.m. PDT in Seattle, where a 9:25 p.m. flight was canceled and passengers mobbed the United ticket counter.

"Our phone lines have been jammed and about 95 percent of them have been about this (strike)," said Ron Kyles, supervisor of United's Seattle reservations office. "We've been advising them to hold onto their tickets and will inform them of a new schedule." He said ticket-holders would be protected by re-routing or re-booking.

Telephone lines to the information desk at United Airlines at Logan International Airport in Boston were busy early today, but a man who identified himself as the manager of the lost baggage department said three of the day's 14 scheduled flights would take off, all bound for Chicago, he said.

All United flights out of Baltimore-Washington International Airport were canceled, said airline spokesman Larry Dunn at the airport. United normally has a dozen flights in and out of the airport daily.

As pickets toted signs outside the terminal at Los Angeles International Airport, United executive Alan Kline said United will work with other airlines to ensure that flight plans of passengers will not be compromised.

"I made these travel arrangements a month ago and I don't know what I'm going to do if I miss my connection in New York," said Los Angeles resident Lydia Delarosa, who was en route from Los Angeles to Europe.

Gloria Hornecker, of Ventura, Calif., said, "If my flight doesn't leave on time tonight it's going to cause a lot of problems in Baltimore. I have my family waiting to meet me at the airport there."

"I've been trying to reach the airline since last night. I haven't been able to," said Daniel Cubik of Stanford, Conn.., stranded today at LaGuardia Airport in New York. "Now we get to the airport at ten after one this morning and no one came out here to explain to us what was going on at all. Now (at 7 a.m.) we're on a line. Six different flights were canceled, one at a time. Now we have two people working up here. They don't even know what's going on."

Since Monday, the airline and the ALPA negotiators have focused on United's proposal to start new pilots at $21,600 a year, instead of the current $22,452, and to slow their raises. United captains with 20 years' flying experience make up to $152,000 a year.

United has said it must start pilots at lower salaries to compete with other airlines who pay their top-scale pilots much less than United.

In a statement released today by UAL Inc., United's parent company, Richard Ferris, chairman and chief executive officer, said: "This company cannot afford to mortgage its future and the future of its employees by agreeing to a contract that fails to assure we can compete effectively."

American boosts staff, equipment

IRVING, Texas (AP) — The pilots' strike against United Airlines has generated additional passenger demand, prompting competitor American Airlines to begin increasing staffing and installing extra equipment to deal with the crunch, officials said.

United pilots began picketing early Friday after contract talks stalled over the company's demand to pay lower salaries to beginning pilots, said a union spokesman.

In response, American has accelerated its training, cancelled vacations, increased part-time hours and extended work shifts to add the equivalent of 1,500 reservations personnel and 600 airport agents to deal with anticipated demand.

An American spokesman said that the airline has installed an additional 200 computer terminals and 250 extra toll-free "800" telephone numbers to help process callers and passengers.

American's reservations offices, ticket counters and airport facilities will be fully staffed as long as the strike lasts, the company spokesman said.

Occasional extra flights may be added to meet exceptional passenger demand, the spokesman said.

House approves final passage of logging bill

Austin Bureau

The House Thursday gave final passage to legislation by Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, providing for filing of electric logs on oil and gas wells with the Railroad Commission.

HB 2431 was sent to the Senate after House members renewed argument on whether the bill accounted to a taking of proprietary information from oil and gas operators.

Rep. Fred Agnich, R-Dallas, joined Craddick in urging approval of the measure, saying that information from logs is now being lost, when it could be used to benefit the entire oil and gas industry.

Government reported to be slowing probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — An auto safety group is accusing the government of not actively pursuing an investigation into reports that certain General Motors cars suddenly accelerate and run out of control, causing an accident.

The Center for Auto Safety said it has evidence over the past seven years of at least 650 injuries and 45 deaths in accidents in which GM cars accelerated without warning.

Man gets three-year sentence for robbery

HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

A 30-year-old laborer, who confessed to police he wanted to buy a "real" gun to rob a convenience store but could only afford a $19 pellet gun, was sentenced Thursday to three years in prison for robbery.

Alvino Lujan, 3713 Monty Drive, pleaded guilty before asking the six-man, six-woman jury selected Thursday morning to set punishment.

It took jurors only an hour to assess the sentence after 142nd State District Court Judge Pat Baskin allowed into evidence a statement Alvino made to police confessing he robbed the 7-Eleven convenience store at 3302 W. Illinois Ave March 1.

Despite defense attorney Allen McFall's claims that Lujan had a drinking problem and was drunk the night of the robbery, the convenience store clerk, a witness and police testified Alvino did not appear to be highly intoxicated that evening.

The defendant stated to police that "he'd been thinking about it for a couple of days," according to Detective Lt. Gayle Reeves, who took Lujan's statement. "He said he wanted to buy a real gun but couldn't afford it so he went to K-Mart and bought this gun because it looked like a real gun. He said he paid $19 for it at K-Mart."

Tina Chatham, the 24-year-old clerk and mother of two, testified she feared for her life when Alvino walked up to the counter while she worked the 5 p.m. to 11 p.m. shift, propped "what appeared to be a rifle" on the counter and said, "Give me your money."

"I said, 'You're kidding, aren't you?' " Mrs. Chatham said. "He raised his voice and said, 'No, I'm not.' "

The clerk said she handed him a small amount of cash, including a marked $2 bill, from the drawer and when "he didn't seem satisfied," pulled the drawer out of the cash register, "backed off and said, 'That's all I have.' "

She then said the defendant rummaged through food stamps and coupons before making her sack two cans of beer and leaving the store.

"My whole life just went in front of me," testified the clerk, who has worked for several other convenience store chains. "I was really shook up. Nothing like that had happened to me before."

Jim Hernandez, 2905 Mariana, testified he was in the store with his wife at 10 p.m. for a cup of coffee when he saw Lujan with the rifle, grabbed his wife and ran up another aisle and out the door.

"That's when I said, 'Feet, don't fail me now,' " Hernandez said.

The witness said he and his wife stayed in their car until they saw Lujan leave the store with a sack in his left hand and the gun in his right. He "sort of aimed it at us...and then he started running toward the west side of the store."

According to testimony from patrol officer T.P. Bostick, Bostick arrived at the scene about 10 seconds after the call was dispatched over police radio. Obtaining directions from Ms. Chatham and Hernandez, the officer said he located the defendant and chased him to a residence at 300 Thomas, where he was arrested.

Lujan pointed the gun at Bostick, the officer testified: "The call came over as a shotgun and I already thought it was a shotgun."

He and Officer Ron Keck testified the pellet gun, which was unloaded, can put out an eye if shot with the proper velocity. Keck, a gunsmith, said he considers pellet guns "lethal weapons," and agreed that the gun is easily mistaken for a .22-caliber rifle from a distance.

A box of .177-caliber pellets and loose pellets were found in Lujan's pocket when he was arrested, according to testimony.

Lujan's mother, Lillie Garcia Lujan, also of 3713 Monty, testified her son was "different" after he returned from three years in the service. She said Lujan "drank all day" the day of the robbery and spent the afternoon with "a canteen of water and he was digging holes" similar to foxholes in the backyard.

"He was talking about the army and the Russians and the Cubans," Mrs. Lujan testified through court-appointed interpretor Margaret Leyva. "He said that they were coming, the Russians and the Cubans."

But prosecutor District Attorney Al Schorre reminded jurors that other witnesses, including neighbors, testified they didn't think Lujan had a drinking problem.

He pointed out that Lujan had testified he was digging the holes for his father and that Lujan did not fight in a war. "He didn't go to Vietnam or Korea; he went to Germany."

The second-degree felony is punishable by a prison sentence of two to 20 years and a fine of up to $10,000. If sentenced to less than 10 years, the jurors could have given the defendant probation because he has no prior felony convictions.

McFall had asked jurors to consider a two-year sentence, probated to four years of "strict supervision."

Odessa secretary's forced resignation still controversial

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The controversy concerning the forced resignation of Odessa City Secretary Tena Walker Tuesday by a majority of City Council members continues with Mayor John Minor contending he opposed the action and Councilman Thomas Perkins saying he'll vote against abolition of the city secretary's office.

Minor said Thursday he believes the people of Odessa are also opposed to the forced resignation of Ms. Walker, who had served as city secretary for 10 years and had been with the City of Odessa a total of about 18 years.

At-large Councilman Sherman Cox says council members have been looking seriously at various city government departments for some time, with an eye toward economizing wherever possible in anticipation of reduced revenue for city governmental operations in the coming fiscal year.

Noting that council members shortly will begin considering the budget for 1985-86, Cox said all department heads have been instructed to look for ways to cut their budgets.

Cox defended Tuesday's closed session council action that resulted in the resignation of Ms. Walker, saying that, contrary to Minor's contention, no formal vote was taken. He said the four council members present merely established an informal consensus to abolish the position of city secretary and allow someone within the city administration to assume the duties of city secretary.

According to Cox, City Manager John Harrison will probably be designated city secretary, with Deputy City Secretary Cindy Weir continuing to do the actual work, since she is already familiar with the day-to-day responsibilities of the office.

Concerning rumors the former city secretary had aligned herself with him, Minor Thursday said Ms. Walker's office had provided secretarial services for him but he didn't think she had aligned herself with him any more than with anyone else. He said she was just loyal to the office of mayor, helping in any way she could.

Minor reiterated his contention that council members had violated the spirit of the Texas Open Meetings Law by voting in closed session to absorb the functions of the city secretary's office into the city manager's office.

However, City Attorney Joel Roberts said Thursday he saw nothing wrong with the action the council took, since, under the City Charter, the council is empowered to appoint the city secretary and structure the office any way it (the council) sees fit.

Grandmother convicted of felony theft

HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Judge Vann Culp of 238th State District Court is expected early next week to assess punishment in the case of a 51-year-old grandmother convicted Thursday of felony theft.

Paula Lovett of rural Midland was charged by indictment of stealing $880 in cash from patients at the Midland's Women's Clinic, 2009 W. Wall, during the month of December 1983.

According to testimony, however, she is suspected of misappropriating more than $3,000 by pocketing cash payments from patients and entering the amounts into the computer as discounts and adjustments.

After retiring at 10:30 a.m. Thursday, the seven-man, five-woman jury selected Monday found Mrs. Lovett guilty and defense attorney Jim Osborn of Odessa made a motion asking the judge to assess punishment. Culp ordered a pre-sentence investigation and said he would make a decision early next week.

Other than the felony charge, the jurors had the option of considering two Class A misdemeanor charges and a Class B misdemeanor charge against the defendant, who was accused of stealing $500 Dec. 1, 1983; $200 Dec. 5, 1983; and $180 Dec. 21, 1983.

Osborn, who pointed to the state's "bits and pieces" of circumstantial evidence, reminded jurors during closing arguments Thursday no one had seen Mrs. Lovett make the false entries into the computer. He also pointed to discrepancies in testimony from employees at the clinic about their training on the system and the number of former employees who had access to office keys.

"Just because a dog runs out of your yard and mangles someone's leg on the street doesn't mean it's your dog," he told jurors.

"But if everyone sees that dog in your yard for a whole year, then it's your dog," countered prosecutor Jack Connors, assistant district attorney.

Four physicians and 13 employees at the clinic in December 1983 testified Mrs. Lovett was the primary suspect in the thefts because she was the only one trained to post acounts received in the computer. The defendant was employed at the clinic from April 1982 until April 1984.

An investigation into the transactions began in April 1984, when the defendant left on vacation. After she was confronted, Mrs. Lovett took a leave of absence, according to testimony.

"More than 100" erroneous entries were discovered in the in-house investigation, according to Mark Price of American Physician Services, which programmed the clinic's computers.

Bess Pruitt, administrative coordinator for the clinic, testified she first became suspicious when a patient who was called into the office in January 1984 about a delinquent payment appeared with a cash receipt in hand.

The patient was called three more times before the payment was entered correctly, despite Mrs. Lovett's claims that she would take care of it, Mrs. Pruitt said.

Testimony also indicated cash receipts gathered from patients and clinic books totaled $4,527.79 but cash deposits during that month at First City National Bank only came to $1,243.50.

Osborn, who did not put Mrs. Lovett or defense witnesses on the stand, told jurors his client suffered from heart problems and high blood pressure.

DA's office will keep fighting gambling bill

From Staff Reports

The Midland County District Attorney's Office has vowed to keep fighting a bill which would legalize gambling at carnivals sponsored by non-profit organizations, despite the Senate Jurisprudence Committee's favorable vote Thursday.

House Bill 1776, sponsored by Rep. Bill Messer, D-Belton, passed by a 4-1 vote, according to a Senate spokesperson in Austin.

Voting against the bill was Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock. In favor were Sens. Oscar Mauzy, D-Grand Prairie; Don Henderson, D-Houston; John Whitmire, D-Houston and Sen. Cyndi Taylor Krier, R-San Antonio.

Absent from the vote were Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, and Sen. James E. Brown, R-Lake Jackson, chairman of the committee.

The bill is expected to go to the floor of the Senate Monday.

"This is a disaster," said District Attorney Investigator J.D. Luckie. "This limits the control law enforcement would have over carnivals. It's supposed to help non-profit organizations but all it's going to do is help the carnivals."

The district attorney's office contends most non-profit sponsors of traveling carnivals only get a percent of profits from rides, not games. Luckie said the only time he has seen a contract that included revenues from games was one which gave a flat rate of $15 per game for the sponsoring organization.

Luckie, District Attorney Al Schorre and Assistant District Attorney Robin Sams testified Tuesday in Austin against the bill and its companion bill, Senate Bill 914, sponsored by Sen. Ike Harris, R-Dallas. The Senate bill was dropped by the committee Thursday when they pushed HB 1776 through.

The district attorney's office has been publicly pushing restrictions for carnival operators after seven arrests were made in April at a local carnival on a murder warrant, gambling and drug possession charges.

Bail bond board grants six licenses

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Licenses were granted Thursday night to six county bail bond companies during the third meeting of the Midland County Bail Bond Board.

The licensing, required under recently implemented state statutes, is a method of ensuring the bondsmen have the finanical resources to pay off bond forfeitures, according to Tom Morgan, board chairman. The board also is responsible for investigating complaints filed against bonding companies for alleged unethical or illegal practices.

Three recent complaints were discussed at the meeting after an investigation was conducted by Morgan.

"I think it borders on being sleazy," Morgan said of a complaint filed by Cen-Tex stating a client was bonded by another company although the client had contacted Cen-Tex first.

The woman, who said she knew she was going to be arrested, had contacted Cen-Tex about posting bond, Morgan said. When she was arrested, she contacted the company and was about to be released when "another company stepped in."

The other company apparently had been contacted by the woman's employer. When a bondsman arrived after Cen-Tex was at the jail, "words were exchanged," Morgan said.

"Cen-Tex ended up not going on the bond but the other one did," Morgan said. "Once a bonding company is called by an inmate, do not try to have them (the original bonding company) go off so you can go on."

Odessan sentenced to 99 years for murder

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — District Judge Gene Ater Thursday afternoon formally sentenced Kenneth Wayne Richards to prison after a jury of 11 women and one man deliberated slightly less than two hours to determine he should serve 99 years for the September 1984 murder of 47-year-old Curtis D. Smith.

Richards displayed no emotion as he stood and heard Ater read the sentence imposed by jurors, who could have sentenced him to life in prison. Jurors were instructed not to consider the actual length of time Richards will serve in prison. The 99-year sentence, imposed because a deadly weapon was used, will mean he will serve not less than 20 years in prison before being eligible for parole.

Richards and 38-year-old Danny Fletcher McCubbin, 9600 Westridge Drive, were both indicted by the Ector County grand jury on charges of capital murder in the death of Smith. District Attorney Eric Augesen, however, moved to reindict Richards on the lesser charge of murder May 9 because Richards had no serious prior criminal record, a fact that might have made it difficult to convince a jury to impose the death penalty.

After Richards was sentenced Thursday, Smith's widow said she felt justice had been served, that now she could go home and tell her children one of the men who killed their father had been punished. Once the trial of McCubbin is over, she said they would be able to get on with their lives, knowing justice has been done.

Smith, an operations manager for Roy's Tong Service, 8150 W. Highway 80, was found shot to death and robbed of his wallet containing about $3,900. He had been shot twice with a .410 gauge shotgun and four times with a .38 caliber revolver. His body was discovered about 1 a.m. Sept. 5 by members of a crew for which he had been preparing equipment for an early morning job.

Richards, testifying in his own defense Wednesday afternoon, told jurors Smith owed him $1,200 for stolen diesel fuel he (Richards) had sold him. He said Smith refused to pay him for the fuel until Richards delivered another load. According to Richards, they argued and he shot Smith when he (Richards) thought Smith was moving toward him threateningly. Richards also stated that, after being shot twice with the shotgun, Smith lay on the ground moaning and was shot again with the handgun.

In closing arguments, Augesen characterized Richards' actions as "cutting his losses" by eliminating any possible witness to the incident. As to the sale of stolen diesel and money owed, the district attorney said Richards was merely fabricating a story he had never told before to establish a motive for voluntary manslaughter rather than murder.

No date yet has been set for the trial of McCubbin, who remains in Ector County jail in lieu of $100,000 bond on a charge of capital murder. The district attorney's office has not yet indicated if the reindictment of McCubbin on a lesser charge of murder is being considered.

MMH stages health fair at Midland mall

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

An "iron lung," popularly used for polio patients during the 1950s and modern state-of-the-art "special procedures scopes" will be among the displays and demonstrations at Midland Memorial Hospital's annual health fair to be held Saturday at Midland Park Mall.

Odessa's Medical Center Hospital will also be hosting their annual health fair at Permian Mall in Odessa.

Both facilities are observing National Hospital Week (May 12-18), designated by the American Hospital Association.

"Mayor Thane Akins has issued a proclamation designating this week as National Hospital Week in Midland," said Cynthia Brust, a MMH spokeswoman.

Both hospitals have adopted themes to symbolize their respective celebrations of the event. "Sharing and Caring" is the special theme of MCH in their fourth annual health fair.

The all-day fair will feature 40 screening and information booths including blood pressure checks, cancer risk assessments, blood typing and blood sugar tests.

MMH will have similar booths.

"We'll have the computerized cancer risk assessment," said Ms. Brust. "The person fills out a form and the information is entered into a computor."

"Lifework" is the theme for the MMH fair.

"This symbolizes the hospital employees' and volunteers' role in providing health care services to the community," she said.

"Lifework" will feature displays, demonstrations, information and free public services from several departments within MMH, as well as several community organizations.

"The emergency department will be providing information on sexual assault and videos on poison control," said Ms. Brust. "Also, emergency treatment forms will be distributed at the fair for children."

"These forms will be completed and held on file at MMH for parents who may be out of town and have children under someone else's care. Before, a babysitter would have to remember to bring a form that had been filled out by the parent, if something happened while the parent was out of town," she said.

"Of course, the hospital doesn't require a form for life-threatening situations — the child will always be treated right away."

Also included in the MMH display will be nursing presentations, obstetric displays such as fetal monitors and childbirth information, glucose scans, cardio-pulmonary equipment and a "surgery booth" showing different implants, prostheses and sutures used.

Still other displays include plates of different bacteria and a presentation on how to draw blood, by the MMH laboratory; paraffin baths used to treat burn patients, presented by the physical therapy department; a food display by the dietary department; and a photo display by pastoral care.

"Several outside groups will have booths there as well," said Ms. Brust. "Hospice, Midland College and Red Cross will be there and YMCA will offer strength tests, skin fold measurements and flexibility tests."

Children will also play a role in MCH's fair.

"'Future doctors and nurses' hats will be given out along with balloons," said Kathy Porter of MCH. "Drawings from the year-long second grade tours of the hospital also will be displayed."

Deputies search for man wanted in chase

From Staff Reports

Midland County Sheriff's Office deputies were searching this morning for a man believed to be involved Thursday night in a chase in which speeds reached 100 miles an hour.

A passenger in the car who bailed out after officers fired shots at the vehicle claimed to be the victim of false imprisonment, according to reports.

Deputy Juan Silva was responding at 8:48 p.m. to a robbery report with his lights and siren on when a car in front of him "just took off," said Lt. Roy Harrison.

A chase ensued west on U.S. Highway 80 and north on FM 1788, several miles north of State Highway 158. Reports indicate the passenger, 25-year-old Sparky Traxler of Midland raised his hands after shots were fired but the driver, whose identity has not been determined, kept driving.

Traxler, who said he had gotten a ride home after his car broke down, jumped from the car north of SH 158, where he was placed in custody for questioning, deputies said. According to Harrison, Traxler said he was the victim of false imprisonment and intends to press charges against the man.

The man, driving a blue Buick Skylark with license plates that deputies have not been able to track down, continued north on FM 1788 before he lost deputies about five to six miles north of SH 158.

Silva and Deputies Steve Mild, B. John McDaniel and Gary Cannon combed lease roads in an attempt to locate the man. Also notified were Midland and Odessa police, the Department of Public Safety, and Andrews and Ector county officers.

Units with the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission and the Midland County Constable's Office also were notified, reports said.

The robbery to which Silva was responding turned out to be a misdemeanor theft, according to Harrison. A male and a female suspected of stealing items from the Quick Mart No. 4 at 8:36 p.m. were apprehended by Sgt. Jerry Baggs on Industrial Road by the Recovery Room Bar, reports said.

A 38-year-old Midland man, released Thursday after being jailed for burglary of a business, was arrested early today on charges of burglarizing the same building.

According to reports, police officers responding at 12:41 a.m. to a burglary alarm at Birkhead Feed Store, Inc., 100 N. Terrell, saw the suspect running from the back of the business and gave chase. The man, who was caught a half a block away in front of the Jamaica Club Tavern, 610 E. Indiana, was wearing a pair of boots E.P. Birkhead identified as stolen from his store May 7.

Officers said they found a broken window at the feed store and almost $200 worth of sacks of feed, boots and water hoses stacked under a raised garage door.

Police also are responsible for catching three men accused of stealing two turkeys and a box of candy from a garage freezer Thursday afternoon. According to reports, Mrs. Jackie Cunningham, 2820 Maxwell, reported at 4:26 p.m. that three men in a white Buick Riviera had burglarized her residence.

According to Lt. Jim Colburn, the woman said she approached the car and demanded the items, valued at a total of $36, be returned. The men gave her back the items before driving west down an alley behind her house.

Police located the car about 15 minutes later in Oakridge Apartment complex parking lot, 4400 N. Holiday Hill Road. The men, who were found in an apartment, were arrested and charged with burglary of a building.

Justice of the Peace Charlie Sprayberry set bond Thursday night at $10,000 for Michael David Bond, 22, who was released.

An 18-year-old man and a 23-year-old man are expected to be filed on this morning by Detective Sgt. Jeff Haile.

Police today are investigating the reported stabbing Thursday night of a 53-year-old Midland man.

According to reports, police were dispatched at 9:15 p.m. Thursday to the Midland Memorial Hospital emergency room where Lewis Lane, 1806 E. Missouri Ave., was being treated for a stab wound to the back.

The victim was unable to give officers information about the aggravated assault while being treated, but doctors said he would be admitted although no vital organs had been damaged, reports said. It had not been determined whether charges would be filed.

In other complaints filed with city police, Suekay Reeder of Arlington told officers an unoccupied house at 402 Sunset, owned by her mother, Jamie Trimmier of Odessa, was burglarized between 10 a.m. April 28 and 12:15 p.m. Thursday.

Reports indicate entry was gained by kicking open a back door. A television, lamps and four homemade quilts valued at a total of $1,400 were stolen.

Mike Flores, 3609 Caldera Blvd., No. 289, reported a microwave oven, valued at $300, was stolen between 8 a.m. Wednesday and 8 a.m. Thursday from the cafeteria at Midland Memorial Hospital, 2200 W. Illinois. The oven was on loan from Key City Vending, according to reports.

West Texas rancher appointed to head Soil Conservation Service

By PEGGY ROBERSON
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Secretary of Agriculture John R. Block Thursday appointed a 46-year-old Texas rancher, Wilson Scaling, to be chief of the Soil Conservation Service.

Block made the announcement with Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, and Rep. Beau Boulter, R-Amarillo, at a news conference in Gramm's Capitol office.

Scaling was not present. "He had some ranching to finish up so he can be here to go to work next Tuesday morning," Block said.

Scaling is general manager for the family ranching operation, which dates back to the early 1880s, near Henrietta, a community about 40 miles east of Wichita Falls.

The new Soil Conservation Service chief will have to make do with considerably less money than his predecessors. The Reagan administration recommended cutting the agency's budget from the present $603 million to $453 million in fiscal 1986.

Both the Senate and House, however, refused to make such a severe cut. The Senate recommended a $58 million slash in fiscal 1986; $97 million in fiscal 1987, and $131 million in fiscal 1988.

Scaling will be the eighth SCS chief in the agency's 50-year history. He replaces Peter C. Myers, who has been confirmed by the Senate as assistant secretary of agriculture for natural resources and environment.

Scaling was described by Block as "an active conservationist and a leader in the agricultural community." Questioned about Scaling's political affiliation, Block asked, "What do you think? He's a Republican."

Scaling is a director of the Little Wichita Soil and Water Conservation District, an area director of the Texas Association of Conservation Districts.

Another concern Morgan voiced was about undercutting fees.

"This board cannot regulate prices," he said, "this is a free-enterprise system. But if a bonding company charges such a low price that they drive others out of business, and if I get wind of it, then I will not hesitate to call an emergency meeting of this board."

Morgan said he would not allow it because if the businesses were closed, the jails would become overcrowded and the county might have to resort to releasing inmates on personal bonds.

"They are almost impossible to collect," he said.

Television and Yellow-Pages advertisements for SOS Bail Bond, which uses Don "The Lawman" Slatton, a former professional wrestler, for publicity in agencies across the state, were considered "misleading," according to Morgan.

"When you see the ad, you pick up the phone and would ask for Mr. Slatten," he said. According to Morgan, either Slatten must file for a license as a bail bondsman in Midland County or the advertisments must be changed to reflect Brenda Evans as the company manager.

Bill Nichols, regional manager for Texas Fire & Casualty Co. in Dallas, which underwrites SOS, said that Slatten is licensed as a bondsman in other counties, and that the company is changing the ad "where it will not focus on Don, but on SOS."

The ad runs statewide, Nichols said, adding he would provide the board at the next meeting with information on SOS' advertising contracts and obligations.

Bonding companies granted licenses were The Walker Company Bail Bond Service, AA Bail Bonds, A-Bob's Bail Bonds, Lanco Bail Bond, SOS Bail Bond, and B&E Bonding Co.

Cen-Tex Bonding was granted temporary approval pending local letters of recommendation.

The board voted to post the list of licensees in alphabetical order near all courtrooms and in the county and city jails. The names will be rotated every 30 days by members of the sheriff's office.

In other action, Odell Walker was elected to the board to represent the licensed bondsmen. He joins Morgan, 238th State District Court Judge Vann Culp, Midland County Judge Bill Ahders, Justice of the Peace Robert Pine, Sheriff Gary Painter, and County Court-at-Law Willie DuBose on the seven-member board.

DuBose was elected vice-chairman of the board and Fred Stubbs, county sheriff's office deputy, was elected bailiff.

SECRETARY

Council member Melissa Hirsch says the council definitely does not plan to name anyone else to fill Ms. Walker's position. She said the purpose of abolishing the position was to save the city money, which she estimated would be about $40,000 in salary and benefits alone.

Councilman Thomas Perkins, who arrived late for Tuesday's regular council session and left early, said that he had asked, before leaving, if anything important was to be discussed in executive session and was told no.

Ms. Hirsch and Cox said they didn't recall Perkins saying anything; he just left.

According to Perkins, he plans to vote against any effort to abolish the office of city secretary, though he said the city attorney has informed him no further action is necessary.

Cox said an overriding reason for abolishing the position of city secretary is that it is not really a full-time position. "Anytime you can go down and see people sitting around doing nothing you wonder if they're really needed," stated Cox.

'Midnight compromise' halts wiretap filibuster

AUSTIN (AP) — A "midnight compromise" that halted a 12-hour filibuster has been accepted by the Senate, which approved a bill to reenact a wiretap law designed to catch big-money drug dealers.

The Senate also voted Thursday, for the second time, to raise the drinking age from 19 to 21.

The measure raising the drinking age also would slap stiffer penalties on a drunken driver who has an open container of alcoholic beverage in his or her car.

Sen. Craig Washington blocked Senate votes Wednesday with a wiretap filibuster that carried until nearly midnight.

The 1981 Legislature approved electronic eavesdropping as a four-year experiment to catch big-time drug dealers. Without legislative approval, the wiretap law would expire on Sept. 1.

After Washington halted his filibuster Wednesday, he told reporters a compromise had been worked out so the state could use "covert" entries to plant a wiretap only as a last resort. Other safeguards include a provision that there would have to be probable cause that the people to be "bugged" have committed or are about to commit a crime covered by the wiretap law.

"This amendment addresses the concerns I tried to articulate yesterday," Washington, D-Houston, said Thursday.

His amendment was approved on voice vote, and senators also adopted an amendment putting "pen registers" under the act. A pen register is a device that can record outgoing numbers dialed from a line but cannot record an incoming call or conversation.

Court orders would be necessary for the use of wiretaps and pen registers.

The wiretap bill was returned to the House on a 27-4 vote.

Executive Director Gara LaMarche of the Texas Civil Liberties Union said Texans owe Washington "a debt of gratitude for standing up — literally — to protect them from unwarranted government intrusion."

"No compromise is perfect," LaMarche said, "and we would prefer that the wasteful and invasive use of wiretaps be ended entirely. But we live in a real world, and Sen. Washington's efforts have resulted in a modest gain for endangered privacy rights."

A House bill changing a few words in the Alcoholic Beverage Code was amended by the Senate to include a higher drinking age and increased penalties for drunken drivers being caught with open containers of alcoholic beverages.

Sen. Bill Sarpalius accused Rep. Kenneth Armbrister, D-Victoria, of killing his bill prohibiting a driver from drinking while driving. "It looks like it's a dead issue this session," Sarpalius said.

Even with the amendment by Sarpalius and Sen. Bob Glasgow, D-Stephenville, "It would still be legal to drink and drive," Sarpalius said.

Jail time and fines, however, would increase for drunken drivers.

"Maybe we can discourage a few people," said Sarpalius, D-Canyon.

A Senate bill raising the drinking age to 21, which was approved earlier, has cleared House committee but has not been voted on by the full House. The federal government has threatened to cut highway funds in 1986-87 if the drinking age is not raised.

The bill prohibiting drinking while driving is mired in a House subcommittee.

In other action Thursday, the Senate approved proposals that would:

— Allow county, city and precinct officers to accept credit-card payment of fines, fees and court costs. "You can get out of jail with a plastic card," said Sen. Ted Lyon, D-Rockwall. The bill was returned to the House 31-0 with an amendment.

— Authorize a $5,305,355 supplemental appropriation to the Texas Department of Corrections to hire additional security guards. The measure was sent to the House on a 31-0 vote.

— Raise filing fees for political office. The bill, which would raise an additional $1.7 million, was advanced to the House on voice vote.

STATE IN BRIEF

Resolution would create higher education panel

AUSTIN (AP) — The Legislature completed action Thursday on a resolution that would create a special committee to conduct a "comprehensive examination" of higher education in Texas.

Such a study would be of "inestimable long-term benefit to all Texans," said the resolution sponsored by Rep. Larry Don Shaw, D-Big Spring, and Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur.

The House resolution, approved by the Senate on voice vote Thursday, calls for the Select Committee on Higher Education to "give particular emphasis to the issues of long-term enrollment projections."

The committee would include the governor; lieutenant governor; House speaker; House and Senate education committee chairmen; five members appointed by the governor; four each appointed by the lieutenant governor and speaker; and the chairman of the Texas College Coordinating Board.

Breeder attacks race track

AUSTIN (AP) — A Louisiana race track funded lobbying in the Texas Legislature to defeat a bill that would allow pari-mutuel betting in the state, a former president of Texas Thoroughbred Breeders Association charged.

Former breeders association leader Tom Russell told a news conference that Louisiana Downs, a Shreveport, La., track, provided money to a Texas law firm to lobby against legalized wagering on horse racing.

But officials of the track denied it.

The bill died in the House earlier this year.

David Vance, vice president for operations at Louisiana Downs, said Russell's charge was false.

Court denies hitman's plea

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals has thrown out the no contest pleas entered by convicted hitman Charles V. Harrelson at a trial in Van Horn.

Harrelson, 46, convicted of being the triggerman in the assassination of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr., entered the pleas Dec. 7, 1981, to charges of cocaine possession and possession of a firearm by a convicted felon.

The charges stemmed from Harrelson's arrest after a four-hour standoff with West Texas law officers the night of Aug. 31, 1980. He put a .44-caliber revolver to his head and threatened to kill himself, officers said.

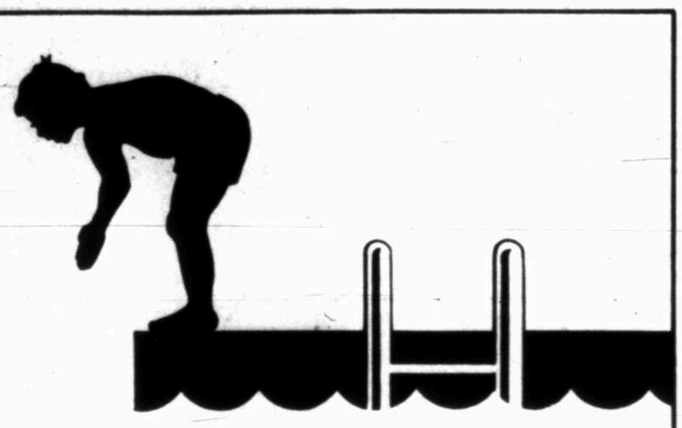

Texas judge honored

AUSTIN (AP) — Judge John Brown of Houston, senior judge of the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, will receive the Herbert Harley Award of the American Judicature Society.

The society said Brown will be honored May 20.

Brown was appointed to the United States Court of Appeals in 1955 and has served as the Fifth Cicuit Court Chief Judge between 1967 and 1979. He began serving as senior judge of the court in 1984.

Carriage making not one-horse business

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

OAKLAND, Ore. — The biggest industry in this hamlet, filled with 19th-century houses and stores, is a turn-back-the-clock factory called the Carriage Works, which makes replicas of century-old stagecoaches, buggies, surreys with the fringe on top, Stanhope gigs, four-wheel phaeton carriages, cutters and sleighs.

"Our customers are people who believe we've gone far enough forward and prefer boing back in time," explains Barbara Evansizer, 38, who owns and operates the Carriage Works with her husband, John 37.

The old-fashioned buggy shop, which has been in business 10 years in old-time farm town, population 825, did $350,000 worth of business this year, triple the sales of five years ago.

"We're six months to two years behind in back orders. Way things are going, we could double the size of our operation and still not meet the demand," John Evensizer says.

Word of mouth and "ads in just about every horse magazine published" bring in the customers. The Carriage Works has shipped rigs as far away as Sweden, Japan, Costa Rica, Australia and South Africa.

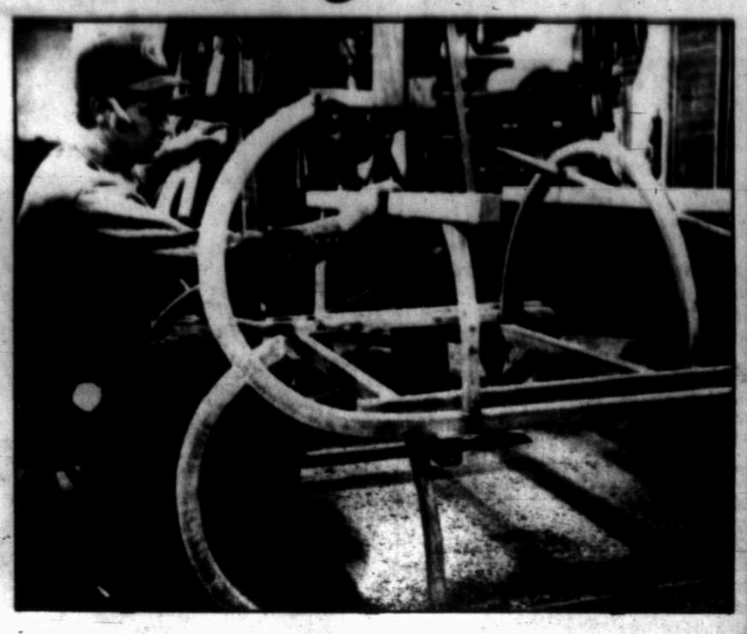

A TEXAS doctor ordered a buggy to fulfill a lifelong dream of making house calls the old-fashioned way.

Much of the company's business comes from carriage clubs, which are popular in scattered communities across the nation. Members in horse-drawn buggies and sleighs get off the highways and hit the dirt roads, reliving "the good old days."

Ski resort buy cutters and sleighs from the Evensizers, while summer resorts purchase buggies and stagecoaches.

When Steven J. Ross, chairman of Warner Communications Inc., and his wife, Courtney, wanted a 40th birthday present for George Lucas, creator of "Star Wars," they put in a call to the Evensizers.

Barbara Evensizer personally delivered the custom, single-seat top buggy to Lucas' 3,000-acre San Rafael, Calif., ranch, where she also instructed the film producer in how to drive it.

LAT Laserphotos

John Evensizer builds runners for a horse-drawn sleigh he is constructing in his own carriage-building factory.

Carriages created by the Evensizers appeared in the 1983 TV miniseries "The Thorn Birds." And the late actor Slim Pickens once bought a surrey with a fringe on top.

"We can make anything horse-drawn to custom specification, from stagecoaches ($26,000) to pony carts ($275), in the same quality and precision craftsmanship as they were constructed 100 to 150 years ago," Evensizer boasts.

WHEELWRIGHTS, CARPENTERS, woodworkers, blacksmiths and upholsterers in the shop use 19th-century tools, such as hub borers, spoke pointers and tenon augers (for boring holes in wood), as well as modern production techniques to make the carriages of oak (primarily for the frames), maples, ash and hickory.

The company publishes a catalog with descriptions, photographs and prices.

Restoration is a big part of its business, as is the manufacture of buggy wheels and spare parts for horse-drawn vehicles.

Evensizer, a Vietnam vetean, grew up on a ranch. "My grandparents were raised on Canadian homestead working the land with horses," he recalls. "They did everything with horses, plowing their farmland, hauling potatoes to market in horse-drawn wagons. In winter their only transportation was horse-drawn sleighs."

Before getting into the buggy business, Evensizer was a logger who lived in a cabin without electricity in a remote Oregon canyon. Barbara Evensizer grew up in Southern California. "I have always been nuts about horses. My first word was horsey, not mommy or daddy," she says.

The idea for their buggy business came to the Evensizers in 1974, when they spotted an old single-seat top buggy gathering dust in a neighbor's chicken coop.

Barbara and John Evensizer examine a replica of an old-fashioned carriage for two they built in their Carriage Works factory in Oakland, Ore.

"We fell in love with that old buggy at first sight. The owner sold it to us for $300. We cleaned (it) and went to work fixing it up," Barbara Evensizer recalls.

Craftsmen at the Carriage Works consider their work a dream come true.

"It's like stepping back in time every day when I go to work," says Greg DeLeon, 59, who spent 33 years in the automobile body-and-fender business before hiring on at the Carriage Works.

The Oregon buggy shop advertises itself as "No. 1 in the Carriage Trade." It may well be. There is not much competition out there.

'Daughters' convention concludes

From Staff Reports

The 94th annual state convention of the Daughters of the Republic of Texas hosted by Midland's Aaron Estes Chapter of the DRT concluded Thursday afternoon with installation of new officers.

"The most important thing for Midland that happened during the convention was the election of two Midlanders to the board of management," said Nancy McKinley.

Mrs. McKinley was the general chairman of the convention and is the outgoing representative of DRT's District I, which is Midland's district.

Mrs. F.H. McGuigan of Midland was elected fourth vice president general and Mrs. Stanley Erskine, also of Midland, was elected to be the new District I representative.

Other persons from District I elected to prominent DRT positions, according to Mrs. McKinley, were Mrs. Richard Bowers of Alpine, who became chaplain, and Mrs. Melvin Sellers of Canutillo, who was elected to the nominating committee.

The DRT's new president general will be Mrs. Martha Rash.

Another area resident elected to a position was Mrs. Donald Naylor of Odessa, who was elected as District X representative.

Another highlight of the convention was a U.S.A. Historical Evening Awards banquet Wednesday evening at the Midland Hilton Hotel.

Many of the DRT members attending were dressed in costumes representing different periods of Texan history or the various ethnic groups that helped settle Texas.

Midland's own Aaron Estes Chapter won the President General's Award, the Texas History Award and received the second place Achievement Award.

Among the other major awards given at the banquet was the 1985 Kate Bates Award for Historical Research which went to the book "Maps of Texas and the Southwest."

Mildred Brixey Gernentz, who was sponsored by Britt Bailey Chapter of Port Arthur, was awarded Outstanding Texas History Teacher. Chris Cooksey of Bay City, sponsored by Freeport's Cradle of Texas Chapter, won the Texas History Student Essay award.

The Outstanding Sesquicentennial Report Award was given to the James Butler Bonham Chapter of Dallas.

The DRT also awarded a $3,600 student scholarship to Chester W. Dingler III of Tyler and a $2,000 scholarship to Christy Cunningham of San Antonio.

Folklorist seeks remembrances of things past

New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Marjorie Hunt coaxes ordinary people into surrendering remembrances of things past. In a city often given to a frenzied search for what's next, she specializes in what has been, recording Nimrod Workman's sad and happy times as a Tennessee coal miner or the separate tales behind the "memory pictures" that Ethel Mohamed hand-embroidered as her family saga over 50 years.

Miss Hunt is a folklorist at the Smithsonian Institution who has been going around seeking vital recollections from scores of older people she considers influential for having survived well enough. The intent of Miss Hunt and her colleagues at the Smithsonian's office of folk life programs is to weave these various slender-threaded personal stories at least as firmly into the nation's history as the silken memoirs that emerge from the capital's sagaciously jaded statesmen.

She thus prefers to hear 103-year-old Rosina Tucker on the founding of the sleeping-car porters' union rather than more contemporaneous ramblings on power from the capital's usual sources.

"OLDER PEOPLE are cultural historians who live just around the corner from us," said Miss Hunt, a 30-year-old with a doctorate in folklore who suggests a Mark Twain portrait of well-scrubbed, omnivorously curious youth. She is in the midst of working on a film, book and traveling exhibit for the Smithsonian to be built, basically, from the memories of old people. Her aim is to document the knack and beauty of surviving into old age, both as a simple fact and as a cultural tool for those who follow.

"This is not in books, this is wisdom," she said. "It's the past, but so much of it continues forward in our present."

Fueling her determination to tap the folklore of the elderly, Miss Hunt has her own remembrances of her grandfather Ira and his homesteading tales of the Ozarks. She also has remembrances of Oscar, the Hollywood statuette that she won this year for a folklore film documentary, "The Stone Carvers," made with Paul Wagner, an independent film maker, about the artisans decorating the National Cathedral.

With such a track record for spotting overlooked things and making them interesting to the public, Miss Hunt is determined to show people "the strength of one's own past and how to make use of it."

HER PROJECT can be distilled to a single question that she frequently finds opens a flood of valuable memories: "What is your favorite story about your life?" Quite often, Miss Hunt says, the answers are framed in plain terms about life and death and the wiles of surviving that sound directed at grandchildren more than children, a key to the recycling path she finds at the heart of folklore. "Every culture needs three generations," Miss Hunt said, quoting Margaret Mead.

Wagner is working with her again on the new documenary film, "The Grand Generation." Working on the book and travel show is Steven Zeitlin, a folklorist in New York. Overall inspiration and guidance, she said, has come from Barbara Kirshenblatt-Gimblett, a folklore professor at New York University, and from the late Barbara Myerhoff, the anthropolgist, who, Miss Hunt said, believed in letting people be "witness to themselves." Their work is assisted by grants from the American Association for Retired Persons, the National Institute on Aging and the Atlantic Richfield Foundation.

Over-50 joggers find running beneficial, fascinating

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Not many years ago, 50 was considered the age at which people became grandparents, dangerously cautious drivers and serious canasta players.

Today, 50-and-over men and women turn sidewalks into playgrounds as they jog along in $80 shoes and demeanors ranging from joyful through determined to agonized.

AMONG THE nation's 13 million joggers are more than 600,000 men and women who have lived half a century or more, said Jennifer Young, co-director of the National Running Data Center in Tucson, Ariz., which keeps track of such details.

Why these semi-centenarians take up pavement pounding, and what keeps them at it, is the subject of a study by Keith Johnsgard, a 57-year-old San Jose State University psychology professor who seven years ago pulled on his first pair of running shoes to run his first mile because he wanted to accompany his son. He is fast approaching his 30th pair of shoes and 11,000th mile.

"The most fascinating results of my study are that we start running for both physical and mental benefits, and as time goes on the mental become more and more powerful and the physical drop off some," the professor said.

For most over-50 runners who have run for a few years, Johnsgard said, "The strong initial motives concerning physical fitness and weight control both decrease slightly in value, while those initially important motives which dealt with tension reduction, mood elevation, increased energy and identity become even stronger.

"Basically, the results of the test indicate we run for three important reasons: physical health (and I throw weight control in there), emotional health and mood control," Johnsgard said.

TO ARRIVE AT HIS results, Johnsgard surveyed 180 members of the 50 percent Runners Association, "very experienced American distance runners from all over the United States." Men who took part averaged 56 years of age and had run an average of 26 miles a week for a decade. Women averaged 53 years old and had run an average of 24 miles weekly for six years.

But the study applies to more than "very experienced" runners.

Some of the people in Johnsgard's sample ran 10 miles a week or less. "Older runners who put in less mileage report that a short run immunizes them from the day's stresses and energizes them for greater productivity," Johnsgard said. "I'm convinced that running increases both the quantity and quality of our lives."

While running, in general, may be a good thing, physicians warn that runners — especially new runners — must be careful.

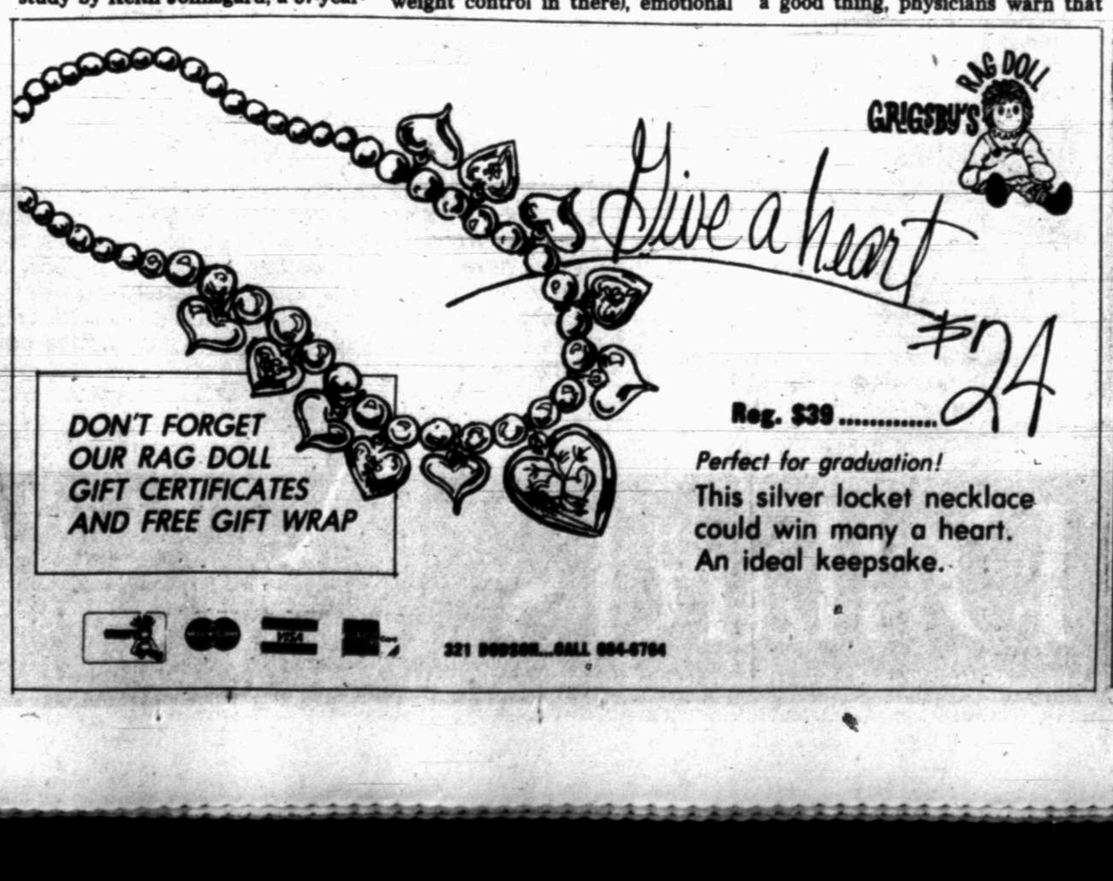

"The person who has been running for years usually knows the signals if something goes wrong, and he or she can do something about it," said Dr. Albert A. Kattus, a Los Angeles cardiologist who is a clinical professor of cardiology at the University of California, Los Angeles, Medical School and former chairman of the Exercise Committee of the American Heart Association.

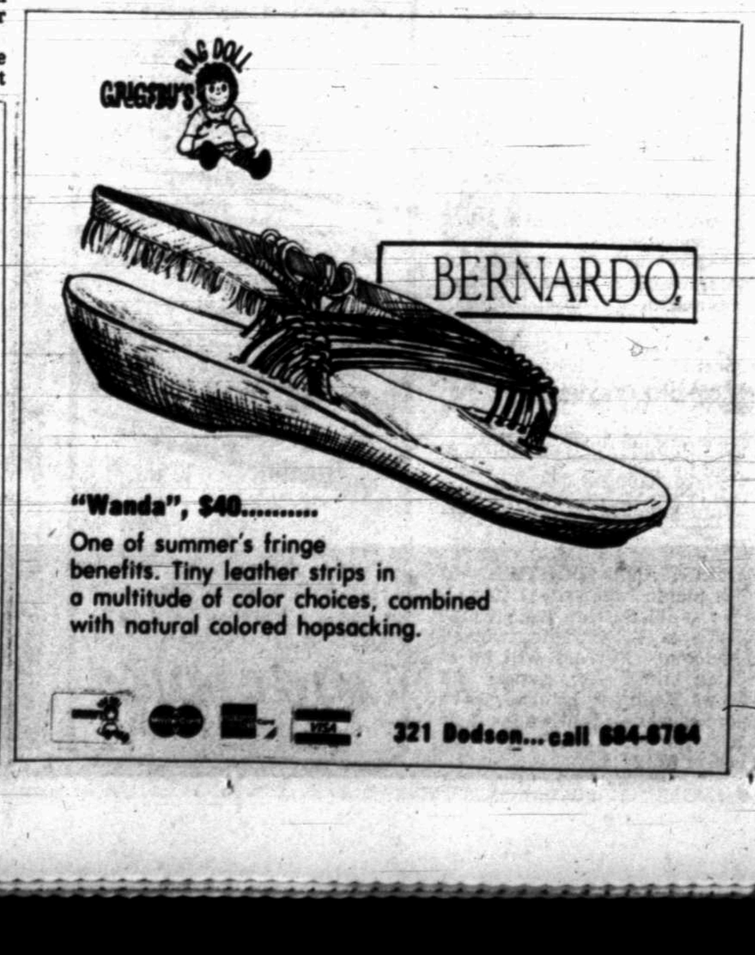

"But even the person who has been running for years, when he or she gets to the age of 40 or above, should have an exercise electrocardiogram on a treadmill or a stationary bicycle once every two or three years.

"THE TESTS ARE NOT foolproof," Kattus continued, "but they are the most effective things we have to get the pertinent information.

"Of course, the ones we worry about most are runners who have been sedentary most of their lives and then get the idea that running is a way to renovate health and get back vigor. Those people should definitely have an exercise electrocardiogram before they do any running.

"I definitely support the idea of people exercising at any age, so long as they know it's safe for them," Kattus said. "Running is one of the best ways to exercise, but people who haven't done any of it should start off walking, then fast walking, then jogging intervals and eventually jogging or running at whatever is a comfortable pace for them."

DEAR ABBY

Guest's early entrance upsets harried hostess

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I invited some friends over for cocktails at 6:30 p.m. That afternoon one of my guests called to confirm the time. We talked a while, and just before she hung up, she said, "I'll come by early. Goodbye." I was so surprised, I didn't say anything, but it was too late anyway.

She arrived at 5:45. I was still dressing, so I let her in and I returned to finish dressing. Then I had several last-minute things to do for the cocktail party, so I wasn't able to visit with her, or even listen to her while she followed me around babbling about one thing or another. She really upset me because I couldn't concentrate on the things I had to do, and I'm afraid I wasn't a very gracious hostess.

Is it acceptable in today's society for guests to inform the hostess that they will be coming by early? And how could I have avoided this unsettling experience? — OLD-FASHIONED

DEAR OLD-FASHIONED: The problem here is not what is "acceptable" in today's society; it's the difference between how you perceive your relationship with this woman, and how she perceives it.

She was presumptuous to assume that she would be welcome to come early. And you lacked the backbone to call her back and tell her it would not be convenient for her to come early — which is what you should have done.

DEAR ABBY: I wrote to you three years ago saying my husband had asked for a divorce (another woman). I was 42 at the time and thought my life was over. Suicide even crossed my mind, but I couldn't do that to my children.

You advised me to get into therapy, even though I said I couldn't afford counseling. You said, "You can't afford not to have it; call your local mental health facility — you'll be charged only what you can afford to pay."

Well, I went for counseling, and it really turned my life around. Now I realize that my husband did me a big favor when he left me because I met and married a loving, caring man whom my "ex" couldn't compare to.

Sometimes when it seems like the end of the world, it's really only the beginning. — BEEN THERE

DEAR BEEN THERE: Thanks, I needed that. I recommend "counseling" so frequently, many readers think it's a cop-out on my part. It's not. Sometimes it's a lifesaver.

DEAR ABBY: My 42-year-old husband's "get up and go" has been gone for a long time. He comes home from an office job, eats his dinner, then falls asleep in his recliner. He wakes up two hours later and goes to bed.

Should I get rid of the recliner or my husband? — NO ONE TO TALK TO

DEAR NO ONE: First, ask yourself if your company or conversation could be putting your husband to sleep, and your question may answer itself. If it's not you, your listless mate could be sick or depressed. Insist that he see his physician before you get rid of him or the recliner.

AT WIT'S END

1940s 'scary' for housewives

By ERMA BOMBECK

I was baby-sitting Chris (my great-niece) the other day when I ran out of fairy stories.

"Don't you know any that aren't in a book?" she said.

"I know one, but it's pretty scary and your mother might not appreciate it."

"I want to hear it," she demanded. "I won't have bad dreams. I promise."

"Well," I began, "once upon a time there was a whole country of women who stayed at home and kept house. Most of the time they were in the kitchen cooking."

"Is this the one where the witch puts the kids in the oven and eats them?" she said flatly.

"No, no. Every Monday the women washed clothes. Every Tuesday they ironed them. Every Wednesday they shopped for groceries. On Thursdays they washed windows and polished floors, and on Friday they dusted and vacuumed the entire house. On weekends they played with the children."

"This is the Stephen King story where the cat sucks the breath out of the little girl, isn't it?"

"No. In between, the women used to scrub toilets with a toothbrush."

"Gross," she said turning pale.

"When the oven got dirty, she had to chisel off the crud with a knife, and when the refrigerator needed defrosting she had to set pans of hot water in it and dig at it with her fingernails."

"Maybe you're right. I shouldn't hear this."

"Sometimes," I continued, "the wax would build up on the floor and it had to be melted and scraped while she was on her hands and knees."

"Couldn't she escape? I know! There was a crazy man guarding the door with an ax."

"No. There was just so much to do. She cooked from scratch and never went out to dinner. There was always dirty laundry and the sheets to iron. Clean, flush, wax and dust — day after day."

"You're scaring me, Aunt Erma," she said moving closer.

"Every spring she would take rugs out and beat them along with the mattresses. Then one day the war came along and she went to a small, dark factory and got a job making shoelaces for Army boots and lived happily ever after."

A few days later, my niece told me Chris had had bad dreams. "You didn't tell her the story of the snake that ate a playground, did you?"

"No, I told her the one about the housewife of the '40s."

"You didn't," gasped my niece."

"It's all right. She thinks I made it up."

Barnaby Jones' fans finally meet idol

ENTERTAINMENT

Buddy Ebsen

NEW YORK — The members of the Barnaby Jones Luncheon Club had been waiting four years to meet the man who played their silver-haired hero on television. The other day, Buddy Ebsen finally came to lunch.

The 77-year-old actor was upstaged a bit in the beginning when one of his biggest fans and a fellow political conservative — former president Richard M. Nixon — dropped by for a glass of iced coffee.

But Nixon didn't stay long, and soon Ebsen was the sole object of affection of about 30 club members, most of them businessmen aged 55 to 70. He seemed to enjoy it.

"I feel very warmly towards them," he said, sitting at the head of a long table in Le Vert-Galant restaurant, 109 West 46th St., where the club meets every Wednesday for lunch. "It's always gratifying when you spend eight years of your life doing something and know that some people like it and want more."

He was speaking, of course, of the old television show "Barnaby Jones," on which he played a well-mannered private detective. The show is now in reruns.

Nixon arrived carrying a shopping bag containing a wedding present — drinking glasses with the presidential seal — for Ebsen and his third wife, the former Dorothy Knott, who were just back from a honeymoon in Hawaii.

"I don't look at much entertainment television," Nixon said, "buu I likee 'Basnacy Jooes,' Iu was a gooe mysuesy wiese you koew uhe gooe guys grom uhe cad guys. I've also known Buddy Ebsen for 35 years. He has been a personal friend of mine and Mrs. Nixon and a personal supporter."

Ebsen, looking dapper in a navy blazer with the crest of the New York Yacht Club, recalled that he campaigned for Nixon as early as 1952 when he ran for vice president on the ticket with Dwight D. Eisenhower. Breaking into a soft-shoe routine, Ebsen started singing, "Ike and Dick are the pair I pick."

The Barnaby Jones Luncheon Club was formed four years ago among lunchtime regulars at Le Vert-Galant after the club's president, Jordayne B. (Skip) Thomas, 67, had surgery and during his recuperation became hooked on "Barnaby Jones" reruns, which were then broadcast every day at 4 P.M.

He learned at the restaurant that other men his age also liked the show, and pretty soon they began leaving work early to go home and watch it at 4 p.m. It broke their hearts, several said, when the show moved to late Sunday nights in New York.

"We're all seniors, we're gray hairs, and we don't stay up that late," Thomas said.

He said the club had about 400 card-carrying members, including women. Some even have T-shirts with decals of the cast members of "Barnaby Jones," which were sent by Ebsen. Last year, Lee Meriwether, who played Barnaby Jones's secretary, had lunch with the group.

The members, who include bankers, salesmen, lawyers, law-enforcement officers, an interior designer and a jeweler, seemed to like Ebsen and "Barnaby Jones" mainly because they are all about the same age. One of them, John Garrison, 60, a retired banker, even bears a strong resemblance to the actor.

"I'm here because some people think that just because a guy has gray hair, he can't investigate or make arrests," said Jack Cuddy, 59, a gray-haired former New York City police officer who is now chief investigator for the Nassau County district attorney's office.

"'Barnaby Jones' encourages men not to give up at 65," added James Malloy, 68, sales manager of a credit agency. "Sixty-five is just a beginning. I'm making more money now than I ever have. The show is a fine illustration that 65 is not dead."

Reagan stands at turning point for his second term

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
AP White House Correspondent

WASHINGTON — Little more than 100 days into his second term, President Reagan stands at a turning point that could determine whether his last four years in office will bring the "Second American Revolution" he sought, or lapse into premature political paralysis.

The stunning, 49-state landslide Reagan achieved in November has been eclipsed by a series of setbacks that threaten his dream of a smaller, less intrusive, less expensive government.

The administration's problems in Congress, ranging from its first fight over farm credit to the continuing struggle to devise some sort of acceptable, deficit-cutting budget, have shown that Reagan no longer has the kind of support it took four years ago to win the historic budget and tax cuts that set his course for the first term.

But the narrow victories he has won this year, including the battle over continued funds for the MX missile and the Senate's approval of a compromise budget plan, show Reagan still has considerable power to control the debate in Congress.

Several tactical miscalculations, however, have left some self-inflicted wounds that have brought Reagan to a critical point in his presidency.

Wholesale changes in the White House staff, which drained it of much political expertise, and overloading the legislative calendar left the president with too many battles and too few resources to devote to each one.

An Analysis

After losing the farm credit vote to regional interests and casting his first veto in a show of presidential power, Reagan plunged into the MX fight and — using the start of U.S.-Soviet arms talks as a club — managed to pull off a key victory.

But with the budget fight looming in front of him, he diverted the debate and his own forces to the even more divisive issue of aid for Nicaragua's anti-government rebels. And despite giving ground on one issue after another trying to forge a compromise, Reagan finally was defeated in his quest to help the guerrillas he calls freedom fighters.

It was a fight some of his legislative strategists wish he hadn't picked, at least not yet. And one experienced White House aide, speaking privately, said the loss cost him much more than a mere $14 million in aid to the Contras; it cost him the momentum he must have if he hopes to win any meaningful reduction in the deficit and overhaul of the income tax system.

Those are the issues, after all, on which Reagan has pinned his hopes in the second term. And with no breakthroughs in sight yet in the arms talks, in the Middle East or in Central America, domestic economic issues still form the keystone of Reagan's presidency.

The official said White House Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan, who returned home with Reagan from a lackluster trip to Europe last week, has begun a review of his staff operation, determined to avoid further unnecessary or ill-timed fights that sap Reagan's political strength and devour precious time in the legislative session.

Since Regan swapped jobs in February with Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III, the White House staff has been in a nearly constant state of flux, with Regan's new people buffeted by their many new responsibilities, jockeying for position in the new order while watching the departure of many first-term staff members who had had enough of the high-status, but high-stress life at the White House.

With the House likely to vote next week on a budget plan of its own and with Reagan poised to propose his long-awaited tax simplification proposal at about the same time, the administration will again have loaded the congressional agenda with only two months before the long August recess that often signals the end of the line for new initiatives.

Congress will return after Labor Day to focus attention and action on major spending bills as the fiscal year expires, and it will then rush toward adjournment and the 1986 congressional campaign that lies just ahead.

'In the beginning was the REA,' House learns

By EVANS WITT

WASHINGTON (AP) — None of his colleagues doubted that Rep. Kika de la Garza was quoting from a higher authority as the Texas Democrat addressed the House last week.

"Mr. Speaker, in the beginning, when God created the Heavens and the Earth, the Earth was a formless wasteland, and darkness covered the abyss, while..." de la Garza began, just about as Genesis begins the Bible.

After all, the higher the authority one can cite in a political argument, the better one's chances of being persuasive.

But then the Texan veered a bit from the expected text.

"Here, my friends, began the quest for fire and light...and it was for man to bring light into the darkness," he said. "Eventually, man conceived light that would shine upon the darkness from fire and he utilized his genius to use his intellect and the tools at his disposal to make light.

"And thus we had...the Rural Electrification Administration."

The House went on for about two hours praising and reminiscing about the REA, a program born a half century ago to bring electricity to rural America.

Perhaps quoting the Bible helped a bit this time. The Reagan administration originally proposed wiping out the REA, but the latest budget resolution out of the Senate preserves the program.

An old use for Irish potatoes drew some attention on the House floor as well.

Rep. J.J. Pickle, D-Texas, recalled how as a youngster he used an Irish potato to replace the lost stopper on a kerosene lamp.

"You could just slap that old potato in there and that held it pretty good," he said, sparking the curiosity of of Rep. Parren Mitchell, D-Md.

"For the education of a poor old city fellow," Mitchell asked, "what was the advantage of the Irish potato? What qualities does it have?"

"Did the Irish potato have some absorptive capacities that took up some of the fumes?" he asked.

Pickle explained that the potato was nothing more than a stopper, and another Texas Democrat, Jim Wright, stepped forward.

"I think our friend from Maryland needs to understand that no one sought then to eat an Irish potato that had been soaked by kerosene," Wright said. "In fact, it was highly discouraged."

Sen. Howard M. Metzenbaum, one of the most liberal members of the Senate, last week invoked "states' rights" — a long-cherished touchstone for conservatives — but he ran into the wrong senator with that move.

The Ohio Democrat was trying to win Senate Judiciary Committee approval of language that would stop the Justice Department from reopening consent decrees involving state and local governments.

LaBelle recalls old Apollo

NEW YORK (AP) — Although uptown's Apollo Theatre has gone upscale with a $10.5 million facelift that includes $250,000 chandeliers from Czechoslovakia, singer Patti La Belle will never forget the days of wardrobes from Woolworths and day-old hotdogs warmed over a lightbulb.

Miss La Belle's memories came bounding back when she joined other Apollo headliners such as Stevie Wonder, Smokey Robinson and Little Richard for the famed Harlem hall's 50th anniversary celebration. The three-hour show, "Motown Returns to the Apollo," will be broadcast on NBC Sunday night.

The Apollo, the 125th Street black music mecca, closed in 1976, but has been refurbished and will reopen this week as a studio for live TV events and a part-time concert hall.

Miss La Belle fondly remembers when the Apollo was a bustling revue hall with a vibrancy on stage, backstage and in the audience.

"If you passed the test at the Apollo, you could do it anywhere," said Miss La Belle, currently a hot number right now with her hits from "Beverly Hills Cop," "New Attitude" and "Stir It Up."

Miss La Belle was the only performer to get a standing ovation at the May 4 taping of Sunday's TV special. She sang a rousing rendition of "You'll Never Walk Alone," the same number she did with her group, The Bluebells, in their Apollo debut some 15 years ago.

"As first-time performers we only were allowed to do one number, but after the crowd called for more, Honi Coles (the famed tap dancer who was master of ceremonies that night) asked if we could do another song. We didn't hold out. We went on."

Miss La Belle and her group were high-class vocalists with a polyester label. "Since we didn't have money, all the groups — the Supremes, Vandellas — ended up with the same costumes from Sears & Roebuck or Woolworths: gold lame suits. Whoever went on first made it look like their idea. If we went on second or third, we'd tie bows around our waists to look different."

The Bluebells were a wholesome act. "We were called the 'Sweethearts of the Apollo,' and we always had a chaperone and a manager around," Miss La Belle said. "But one night they weren't there and Sam Cooke and Otis Redding became our protectors. They stood guard in our room protecting us from the wolves."

But their goody-goody image only went so far. "In reality, we played a lot of cards between shows and bought hot furs and other items that fell off trucks," she said.

They weren't very good at cards, either, losing their per-diem to the likes of Dionne Warwick, the Shirelles and Wilson Pickett. "Just in case we lost, we had bought hot dogs in the morning and left them on the light bulbs in the dressing room. We'd survive all week on hot dogs and sardines."

The competition was tough on stage as well. One star on Sunday's show — Miss La Belle wouldn't say who — was one of the performers who would order the curtain to come down, just as the audience was calling for another number from the Bluebells.

And on those infamous "Wednesday Night Amateur Nights," a costumed character called Porto Rico would pull feeble acts with a wailing siren, a cap pistol and the vocal support of the masses.

Percy Sutton, former Manhattan borough president, was one of the masses. Now, as chairman of Inner City Broadcasting Corp., he's spearheading the Apollo's revival.

"The first time I went there was in 1946. I was just a country boy from Texas, working 4 p.m. until midnight at the post office, and from 12:30 to 8 as a conductor on the D train. The only recreation I had was the Apollo."

Many Americans oppose government arts subsidies

NEW YORK (AP) — Seven in 10 Americans rarely visit art museums. Nearly six in 10 dislike abstract art. And half oppose government subsidies to artists, a Media General-Associated Press poll says.

Only 35 percent of the 1,532 respondents in the nationwide telephone poll said they favored government subsidies to artists. Fifty percent opposed subsidies and 15 percent were unsure. The survey was taken shortly after the Reagan administration proposed cutting the budget of the National Endowment for the arts.

Four in 10 said the use of public funds for artists should be a lower priority of government, three in 10 said it should remain the same and one in 10 said it should be a higher priority.

President Reagan has proposed slashing the 1986 spending authority of the endowment by 11.7 percent, from $163.7 million to $144.5 million. The endowment, an independent federal agency, awarded about 5,000 grants totaling $149 million to artists and arts organizations last year.

Although half of the respondents in the Media General-AP poll were opposed to direct subsidies to artists, six in 10 said they favored the purchase of art for use in public buildings.

Asked about their personal exposure to the arts, seven in 10 said they visited art museums less than once a year. Thirty-five percent said they never visited art museums, 27 percent never attended music concerts and 39 percent never attended live theater.

Sixty-four percent said they lived within 30 miles of an art museum. Of those who live farther away than 30 miles, eight in 10 visit museums less than once a year, while half of those who live within 10 miles visit museums less than once a year.

When it comes to support for the arts, education and income also seem to mean a great deal.

Forty-five percent of those who make less than $20,000 a year say they never visit art museums, while only 21 percent of those who make more than $35,000 never go.

The Mitsubishi Minami Oh Yubari Mine at Yubari, near Sapporo on Japan's northernmost island of Hokkaido, was the scene of an underground gas explosion today. About 75 miners were believed killed or trapped by the blast.

Japanese mine torn by explosion

TOKYO (AP) — A gas explosion ripped through an underground coal mine in northern Japan today, killing three miners and trapping at least 72 others, a police spokesman said.

Ichiro Natsui, a spokesman for Yubari Police on Hokkaido, Japan's northernmost main island, said three miners were confirmed dead at a hospital and eight others were injured.

He said the eight escaped from the Mitsubishi Minami Oh Yubari mine.

Natsui said first reports indicated between 150 to 160 other miners were trapped in a shaft, but he later revised the number to 72.

Police estimated that 336 people were in the mine when the explosion occurred about half a mile underground this afternoon.

The Fuji News Network reported that a rescue team of 10 company miners could not enter the shaft because of dense smoke. Mining officials in Yubari, a coal mining town about 560 miles north of Tokyo, were not available for comment.

The mine, which is operated by the Mitsubishi Coal Mining Co. Ltd., was the scene of another gas explosion accident in 1979, when 15 miners were killed.

About one million tons of coal are hauled each year from the mine, a company official said.

Today's accident follows a gas explosion on April 25 in a coal mine on the island of Takashima in southwestern Japan's Nagasaki Prefecture (state), in which 11 miners were killed and four others were injured. That mine also belonged to Mitsubishi Coal Mining.

In the Hokutan Yubari mine, a different colliery in the same area, 93 people were killed in a gas explosion in July 1983.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Pontiff acknowledges paternalism

ANTWERP, Belgium (AP) — Pope John Paul II acknowledged before about 2,000 church lay workers today that women suffer from paternalism and discrimination in the Roman Catholic church.

The pontiff made his comments in response to a statement by the head of an organization of lay workers, who said women eventually may turn away from the church if they are not given a bigger role.

John Paul, who has defended conservative church doctrines during his tour of the Netherlands, Luxembourg and Belgium, said that women "suffer from certain forms of paternalism and discrimination," but he did not give examples.

The pope termed the influence of women "essential" to the church.

Afghan rebels form common front

PESHAWAR, Pakistan (AP) — The seven main Afghan rebel groups say they have put aside their differences and formed a common front to fight Soviet troops in Afghanistan.

At a news conference Thursday in this Pakistani border city, the rebels also said they would seek recognition from the United Nations and other international groups as the representatives of the Afghan people.

"It is the beginning of complete unity," said Gulbaddin Hekmatyar, head of one group. "We hope this will ultimately lead to the liberation of our country."

Sinn Fein wins 40 town council seats

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — The IRA's political ally, Sinn Fein, captured more than 40 of 566 seats on town councils in Northern Ireland, giving it a new role in local politics, according to incomplete election returns today.

Danny Morrison, Sinn Fein's No. 2 man, said the elections had given the organization a popular mandate in its support for the Irish Republican Army's nearly 16-year campaign of violence to end British rule in the stricken province.

As expected, the Official Unionist Party, the mainstream majority Protestant grouping, was emerging with the greatest share of votes in Wednesday's balloting.

But hardline parties on both sides of the sectarian divide scored gains, portending bitter clashes in the province's 26 council chambers, which have a total of 566 seats.

Soviet airliner disappears at sea

TOKYO (NYT) — A Soviet plane described as an Aeroflot airliner disappeared Thursday over the Sea of Japan off the Soviet coast, the Japanese government reported.

Japanese officials said the plane vanished from military radar screens somewhere between the coast and the Soviet Union's Sakhalin Island, just north of Hokkaido, the northern main island of Japan.

Soviets take steps to fight alcoholism

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet authorities have announced plans to stamp out alcoholism by raising the drinking age from 18 to 21, making liquor harder to buy and increasing penalties for drunkenness.

The nation's Communist leadership has launched periodic, less vigorous campaigns against alcoholism for generations, with little success. Until a few years ago, throwaway caps were put on vodka bottles because it was assumed they would be emptied at one sitting.

Thursday's announcement was preceded by a growing campaign in the news media against absenteeism from the job. Statistics were published blaming drink for 75 percent of murders and rapes, 80 percent of robberies, 90 percent of general hooliganism and most divorces.

DON'T GAMBLE

Did you buy a diesel powered vehicle two or three years ago and wonder now how you are going to pay off the note when it's due without using all your down payment money? You no longer have to gamble on the future value of a vehicle you purchase—let someone else take the loss, unless of course it goes up, then you pocket the difference. See our professional sales department for an excellent buy, and then they will introduce you to the best Business Manager in town who can explain how to protect your truck or auto investment.
