Violence mars nationwide truckers' strike

By The Associated Press

A nationwide strike by independent truckers turned bloody during the night with one driver shot to death in North Carolina and at least nine injured by gunfire or flying rocks as they wheeled their rigs through the darkness.

A teen-ager suffered a fractured skull Monday when a brick bounded off a tractor-trailer into her family's car in Pennsylvania.

Since the strike began at 12:01 a.m. Monday, with others joining the shutdown early today, trucks have been fired at, sabotaged or hit by rocks in at least 17 states.

The strike, a protest against higher fuel taxes and highway user fees, appeared to have little immediate effect, except in some isolated cases. A cattle auction Monday night in Pavilion, N.Y., near Buffalo had to be canceled because no trucks were available to haul away the cows.

Officials in many states reported near-normal truck traffic. Some drivers expressed more fear of militant strikers than any desire to stop work themselves, and shippers reported no major problems moving their goods.

George Franklin Capps, 33, of Clayton, N.C., was shot in the neck and killed by a sniper about 11:30 p.m. Monday just outside Newton Grove, N.C., as he was driving a truck along U.S. 701, said Sampson County sheriff's deputy Gerald Tadlock.

Six other trucks were hit by gunfire and two other drivers were slightly injured elsewhere in North Carolina.

A tank truck driver received minor cuts about 4 a.m. today when a sniper's bullet shattered glass and metal just behind his head while he was driving his rig near Baltimore, police said.

In Utah, a truck driver Howard N. Adams, 45, of Riverside, Calif., was shot in the chest Monday afternoon as he unloaded his rig in Brigham City. His condition was upgraded from critical to serious today. Authorities said they were uncertain if the shooting was strike-related.

Reports of violence also came from Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois, Alabama, Mississippi, Oregon, West Virginia, Michigan, Tennessee, Florida, Arizona, Idaho, Indiana, and Connecticut.

State police in Pennsylvania and Michigan said two truckers suffered minor facial cuts when rocks or bricks were tossed through their windshields while they were rolling down interstates. Nails were spread on an Oregon highway, police said.

In Arizona today, two drivers were hurt as bullets hit five trucks near Casa Grande. Police said two men were arrested for questioning but were booked on unrelated charges.

Gunshots fired from a pickup truck hit five trucks in southern Florida near the Everglades town of LaBelle and one driver suffered a minor wound.

Arson investigators were investigating a fire that heavily damaged one 18-wheeler in Loughman and one rig had its tires slashed in Lakeland.

One driver was slightly injured when a rock thrown from an overpass shattered his windshield near Southington, Conn., and another driver was slightly injured by a rock in Portland, Ore.

Although traffic was reported normal at some truck stops and weigh stations, others said activity had slowed to a crawl.

"It's desolate around here," said Jerry Thrailkill, shift manager at Music City Truck Stop in Nashville.

In Missouri, Highway Patrol spokesman Lt. Ralph Biele said highway traffic was down from 10 percent to 60 percent.

But in Nebraska, night supervisor Ron Christiensen at Bosselman Truck Plaza near Grand Island said, "We've done good business today. Everything seems to be rolling just fine."

Some drivers in Nebraska said they would park their rigs out of fear of trouble. "I think the rough weather kept some off the road."

Mike Parkhurst, president of the Independent Truckers Association, which claims to represent about 30,000 of the nation's 100,000 owner-operators, estimated that up to 70 percent of the independents were participating in the strike, based on a sampling of trucker sentiment last week.

Prospecting legislature's first concern

AUSTIN (AP) — A bill to end bargain mineral claims on state land is the first measure sent to Gov. Mark White's desk by the 1983 Legislature.

House members, in a 139-0 Monday vote, joined the Senate in calling for the repeal of state law allowing cheap "prospecting permits" on state land.

Under a 1917 state law, developers can look for minerals on state lands by paying a $1 fee and 10 cents per acre. The developer could take any oil or gas found for $2 per acre and a royalty of 12.5 percent of the oil production, or 10 percent of the gas production.

The law is an attempt to get more money from oil and gas produced on state lands. The money from the leases goes into the state's Permanent School Fund, which helps pay for public school education.

Last year, a Fort Worth company used the law to claim a lease on a potentially valuable tract in Eastland County. West Texas Minerals obtained a "prospecting permit" on 180 acres, a tract circled by 42 producing wells, according to Land Commissioner Garry Mauro.

The tract could produce $12 million worth of oil, Mauro said. The state wanted to sell the lease for a $32,000 bonus payment and royalties of 85 percent of the oil production.

But West Texas Minerals found that state law allowed the company to go to a county clerk and get the prospecting permit, file it with the land commissioner and pay the $2 per acre fee and the low royalty. The courts upheld the company's right to the lease.

El Paso Sen. Tati Santiesteban's bill, if signed by White, would require oil companies to bid for such drilling rights, rather than merely file for permits.

"I am pleased that we were able to act so quickly to end this major threat to the public schools of Texas," Santiestaban said after the House approval Monday. "Had others been able to take advantage of this loophole in our laws, it could have been disasterous and cost the state millions of dollars in lost oil and gas revenues."

The bill got to the House floor only because White tagged it as an emergency. Constitutional rules bar the House from considering legislation during the first 60 days of the session.

Rep. Joe Hanna, D-Breckenridge, carried Santiesteban's bill in the House, where it passed with little discussion.

The new law would not void the lease granted West Texas Minerals. A settlement negotiated by the state and the company will pay the company about $5 million.

Some 'running scared' in face of strike

Traffic declines at truck terminals

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

Although truckers' opinions remain divided on whether or not to support the call for a nationwide strike, violence involving truckers in other states left several drivers at the Warfield Truck Terminal this morning either "lying low" or keeping a wary eye on their side mirrors.

"A lot of them are just plain scared to run," according to Ed Roets, Warfield Terminal manager.

Roets said truck traffic at the terminal "is deader than a mackerel," and he attributed the decline to truckers running scared from the sort of violence that has already left one North Carolina driver dead of a gunshot wound and produced several shooting and windshield-smashing incidents.

Roets said truckers' strikes seem to bring out random violence, much of which comes from persons outside the trucking industry. "It's a license to hunt," he said.

Officials of the Independent Truckers Association called for the nation's 100,000 or more independent truckers to strike beginning midnight Sunday to protest provisions of the Surface Transportation Assistance Act of 1982. The act institutes significant increases in truckers' highway user fees, an additional five cents-a-gallon federal fuel tax and increased federal excise taxes on tires and truck parts.

One Ohio driver, fresh from delivering a load of oil pipe to the Midland-Odessa area, said today he will shut down for a day or more — under orders from the truck's owner — rather than travel the potentially violent gauntlet back to his home state.

"It's already getting crazy," said Jeff Wilson, 30, a truck driver from Fort Pierce, Fla. Wilson and his companion, Ken Aulgur, a truck owner-operator, said they suspect "crazies," rather than truckers, are behind much of the violence.

"It's hard to believe that one truck driver would shoot at another truck driver," said Wilson. "It (a strike) draws a lot of crazies."

The pair said they will be looking for a load to haul back to Florida after they complete delivery of some tropical plants to a local department store. Wilson said they were hoping to be home — safe and snug — before the strike began.

"We didn't want to be out here during the strike," said Wilson. "We're going to try to get home as soon as possible." Wilson said that a return trip would likely involve traveling only by daylight and keeping close watch for trouble.

Wilson and Aulgur both questioned the value of a strike. But they added that because truckers feel their situation is desperate, a strike may be the only means to focus national attention on the industry's troubles.

Wilson said the lack of a uniform rate structure — in addition to greater taxes and fees — is only one example of an extreme trucking industry problem that has gone virtually unaddressed.

Keep on truckin'

Florida truckers Jeff Wilson, left, and Ken Aulgur prepared to complete delivery of some tropical plants to a local department store and plot their next move in light of the violence-studded nationwide independent truckers strike.

"The people that decide the laws for the trucking industry don't have any idea of what's going on out here at all," Wilson said. "I don't know really what the answers are. I think the government is going to have to do something for us.

"Something has to be done, and a shutdown is about the only leverage a trucker has," he said.

Aulgur said uniform operating fees and regulations controlled through the federal goverment — instead of the patchwork system now determined by individual states — might go far in curing the industry's ills.

"It comes right down to it, if you have any bad luck — like a flat tire — you don't make any money at all," Aulgur said.

Truck stops in San Angelo, Lubbock and Midland handled lighter than normal truck traffic this morning, but no acts of violence were reported. About 13 states reported disturbances Monday, including one case in which a 14-year-old girl suffered a skull fracture when a brick lobbed from a Pennsylvania overpass glanced off a truck and struck her family's car.

Ralph Cano echoed the sentiments of many drivers intent on supporting the strike once they dispose of their current loads.

"We've got to go with the flow," said Cano, who left the Warfield Terminal this morning bound for El Paso with a load of poultry.

Wilson said fear, perhaps more than strike support, is causing many truckers to temporarily halt operations. "It's very much fear," he said, "especially with this violence."

"It's hard to believe that one truck driver would shoot at another truck driver. (A strike) draws a lot of crazies."

Reagan indicates awareness of economic ills

ST. LOUIS (AP) — President Reagan, touring a suburban auto plant today, is trying to correct a wrong impression that he "doesn't know how bad it is out there," one top aide says.

That is the way White House Chief of Staff James A. Baker III described the problem with which Reagan is trying to deal in a series of one-day trips the president is making out of Washington.

Today, Reagan flew to St. Louis, where unemployment is above the national average, to visit a Chrysler Corp. plant in Fenton, Mo., 15 miles away. Workers are being rehired at the facility.

Reagan had intended to fly by helicopter to the auto plant, but landed in a rainstorm and, after waiting 10 minutes, was driven to the facility in a motorcade.

At the plant, the president was given a tour by golf cart and stopped to watch robots welding roofs onto Chrysler 400s as sparks flew over the president's head.

Asked how many jobs were lost to the robots, Reagan, referring to the workers, said, "They're all making the robots."

The president also paused where engines were being placed into the cars and shook hands with workers who clustered around him when the assembly line was briefly halted.

One day after submitting to Congress a fiscal 1984 budget of $848.5 billion, in which the entire increase is devoted to Pentagon spending and higher interest charges on the national debt, Reagan was trying to tackle declining support for his handling of the economy by drawing attention to economic good news.

White House officials said there were no plans for Reagan to visit the St. Louis suburb of Times Beach, where more than 2,000 of the town's 2,400 residents have left their homes as a result of high concentrations of toxic dioxin in the soil.

"I've invited him every way but personally," said Sid Hammer, the acting mayor of Times Beach. "But I think he's afraid to come and see what our problems are."

Deputy press secretary Larry Speakes responded Monday night: "President Reagan has made maximum effort to provide accurate information and relief to the people of Times Beach and continues to monitor the situation closely. Just because he will not be able to come to Times Beach tomorrow does not show any lessening of his interest and concern."

The trip is Reagan's fourth in 21 days. Since Jan. 11, he has spoken to farmers in Dallas, students at an inner city high school in Chicago, and workers at a computzr plant in Boston, where he also made a spur-of-the-moment stop at a bar in a working class neighborhood.

The president's aides have been looking for ways to demonstrate Reagan's concern for those hurt by the economy and his budget cuts. But his standing in public opinion polls has slipped to the lowest midterm rating of any recent chief executive, and critics say his new budget plan would spend too much on defense and not enough on jobs.

The latest Harris Poll found that two of every three Americans responding to the survey of about 1,250 adults believe the United States is in a depression. It also found that, compared to a similar survey last November, the president's rating declined on every question asked about how he is handling the economy.

Bush urges Soviets to sign pact on medium-range weapons

BERLIN (AP) — Vice President George Bush urged the Soviet Union today to accept President Reagan's invitation to sign a pact banning medium-range nuclear weapons. He said U.S. negotiators will continue "pounding away" for Soviet acceptance of Reagan's proposals.

"I believe the Soviet leadership should seize the moment and join us in banning the weapons," Bush said at a news conference. "Ours is a moral position and we (NATO members) stand together in this position."

But Novosti, an official Soviet news agency, today denounced the Reagan offer to meet to with Soviet leader Yuri V. Andropov "wherever and whenever he wants" to sign a disarmament pact. The agency called the proposal a rehash of the "zero option," which the Kremlin already has turned down.

Bush on Monday night responded to Soviet overtures to Western European officials and peace groups by reading an "open letter to the people of Europe" in which Reagan made his offer.

Novosti commentator Vladimir Alexeyev said "Mr. Bush's statements so far indicate that the Reagan administration continues to be oblivious of the fact that people expect of it not pompous but empty eulogies on the need to reduce arms, but concrete deeds to further the same."

Bush, who visited the Berlin Wall today, acknowledged that Reagan's offer to ban all land-based, intermediate-range nuclear weapons amounted to a restatement of his "zero option" plan.

"That is no reason that we should not in Geneva be pounding away" to try to get the Soviets to accept the proposal, he said, referring to U.S.-Soviet arms reduction talks in Switzerland.

"What Reagan has done, I hope, is laid to rest the argument that he is unwilling to meet with Andropov," Bush said. "This extends a hand, reaches out, so that we can have a meeting to ban an entire new generation of nuclear weapons."

Bush is making the second stop of a 12-day European tour intended to win popular support for NATO policies and offset opposition to the planned deployment of new U.S. nuclear missiles in Western Europe.

About 8,000 Berlin leftists marched in a cold rain Monday to protest U.S. foreign policy. Most of their placards were directed against U.S. policy in Latin America, but the marchers also demonstrated against the NATO missile plan.

Reagan said in his message that he asked Bush, "in the city where East meets West, to propose to Soviet General Secretary Andropov that he and I meet wherever and whenever he wants in order to sign an agreement banning U.S. and Soviet intermediate-range, land-based nuclear missile weapons from the face of the Earth."

Tower, others fight military pay freeze

By PHILLIP SWANN

From Our Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — President Reagan's proposed $274 billion defense budget for fiscal 1984 calls for a freeze on military pay and a continued limit on cost-of-living adjustments for non-disability military retirees under 62.

Military supporters in Congress announced plans Monday to fight the president's recommendation. Texas Sen. John Tower, head of the Senate Armed Services Committee, introduced a bill that would give military personnel a 4 percent increase effective April 1984.

"(The freeze) would have a devastating impact on morale and retention of personnel," Tower said.

The Pentagon budget, which requests an overall $34 billion increase, was released Monday as part of the president's $848 billion economic blueprint for fiscal 1984. The president projects a $188 billion deficit in 1984.

Pentagon officials contend that the "highly successful" all-volunteer army permitted the administration to hold down defense spending by postponing a military pay increase. The pay raise, the administration believes, is no longer needed to get and keep people in the service because of the high unemployment rate.

"The success our (all volunteer army) has enjoyed in the past two years enabled us to look to military compensation as one way to help reduce the large federal deficit," Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger said in the department's budget report.

Congressional leaders this month warned Reagan that his budget would lack credibility unless he favored cuts in some defense programs.

"We realize that we are asking for a substantial sacrifice from our military people and that we accept some risk that recruiting and retention will suffer. But the need to reduce federal spending is clear," Weinberger stated.

The administration does propose a contingency fund in 1985 for military pay and benefits if the all-volunteer army falters.

The Pentagon last year advocated a 7.4 percent pay increase for military personnel, effective October 1983. But Reagan, seeking ways to cut the defense budget, reportedly overruled his military advisers in January.

After disclosure of Reagan's decision, many congressional military observers predicted that the more liberal 98th Congress would support a smaller pay increase.

However, some of those observers now say Reagan's call for a freeze may go too far.

"Congress won't buy that (a freeze)," said one congressional aide to a Texas congressman whose district includes a military base. "It may come down to paying the PFCs or buying the MX (missile.)"

But a top aide to a key member on the House Armed Services Committee says Congress ultimately will decide that guns come first.

"Not giving the raise makes more sense than scrapping a weapons systems we may need in battle next year," said the aide. "We can wait a year for pay but we can't afford to wait a year for the weapon."

Tower, R-Texas, argues that his proposed pay increase, which would go into effect April 1984, would cost $552 million.

"With all the money in the defense budget, an extra $552 million is not that hard to absorb," said Tower press secretary Linda Hill.

Rep. Thomas Loeffler, R-Hunt, also predicted that the freeze would not pass Congress. He said a four percent increase would be "fair."

Submission of the administration's budget plan for fiscal 1984 is the first step in a long and complex budget process that will remain unfinished until late in the calendar year. Many of the figures are likely to change as the plan wends its way through Congress.

—The Pentagon estimates it will spend $1.8 trillion between 1984 and 1988. The budget recommendation for 1988 is $425.2 billion.

"This program is large, and we are well aware that it is being proposed during a period when economic conditions require constrained or reduced federal spending," Weinberger stated. "However, we must not lose sight of the fact that the defense budget is most appropriately measured against the reality of the threat to our national security."

—There would not be any cost-of-living adjustments for military retirees in 1984 and Reagan said he will offer legislation that would round all military retiree benefits to the next lowest dollar.

—The administration requests funds for the procurement of the Pershing II missile, the new B-IB bomber and the MX missile, which is called the "Peacekeeper" missile in the budget report.

—The Pentagon plans to place 26 new B-IB bombers at Abilene's Dyess Air Force Base in late 1985. The B-IB command crew training squad would also be stationed at Dyess.

Bond set for 17-year-old Midlander who led police on high-speed chase

A youth who led police on a high-speed chase early Saturday morning remained in jail today under $20,000 bond set Monday by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine.

Randy Thomas Stephens, 17, of Route 6, Midland is charged with aggravated assault on a police officer, auto theft, attempting to elude arrest, violation of probation and several traffic offenses.

He was arrested about 2 a.m. Saturday after leading police on a chase along Loop 250 that reached speeds of 100 mph and didn't end until four patrol cars had been damaged.

The pickup truck Stephens was driving had been stolen, according to police, who said they attempted to stop him after seeing him driving the wrong way on a one-way street.

Fire of suspicious origin did minor damage to three lockers and their contents at San Jacinto Junior High, Garfield Street and Community Lane, about 5:15 p.m. Monday. An arson investigation is under way.

West asked to make 'first strike' pledge

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former defense leaders in Germany, Britain and the United States called today for a declaration by the West that it would not be the first to use nuclear weapons against the Soviet Union.

And they called for a buildup of non-nuclear forces by the Western allies to back up such a declaration.

The plan was being outlined at news conferences in Washington, London and Bonn. It was developed by a committee of the Union of Concerned Scientists headed by retired Vice Adm. John Marshall Lee, who served in NATO, the United Nations, the Pentagon and the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency during a 38-year military career.

Among those scheduled to spell out the plan at a Washington news conference were Lee and Robert S. McNamara, former U.S. defense secretary.

In London, Field Marshal Lord Carver, former chief of defense staff, and Lord Zuckerman, former chief scientific adviser to the British government, were joining the effort.

In Bonn, the scheduled participants included two retired West German generals, Karl-Christian Krause and Jochen Loser, and McGeorge Bundy, former special assistant to President Lyndon B. Johnson.

For 25 years, the Soviet Union has proposed that both superpowers pledge themselves not to be the first to use nuclear weapons. But the Reagan administration has argued that it could not forswear responding with nuclear weapons if the Warsaw Pact nations launched an attack against Western Europe.

Such an attack might be successful, the Reagan strategists have said, and therefore the threat must be staved off by the prospect of nuclear retaliation.

When the issue rose last April, Alexander M. Haig Jr., then secretary of state, said a renunciation of the first use of nuclear weapons in a conventional war in Europe would be "tantamount to making Europe safe for conventional aggression."

But the Lee committee disagreed that the Soviet bloc was so strong as to make it impossible for the West to renounce a nuclear response to a non-nuclear attack.

"The Warsaw Pact's superiority in troops and equipment in Central Europe does not attain a numerical level where an attack could be launched with good confidence of success," its report said.

City police officer suspended

Midland police officer Boyce Lann has been suspended for one day without pay after striking a teen-age burglary suspect during a confrontation in the city jail last month, according to Chief of Police Wayne Gideon.

In a Jan. 28 memo to City Personnel Director David Hunter, Gideon said the incident took place after Lann had been instructed to photograph the 17-year-old suspect, who was arrested Jan. 14 following a foot chase in which one shot was fired at him by police who allegedly caught him in the act of burglarizing the westside home of Dr. Henrie E. Mast.

Lann slapped the youth once during the confrontation, which occurred the day of his arrest, and two witnesses noted "it was not a vicious-type blow," Gideon said in the memo, adding that "there was some provocation from the juvenile."

The youth has a lengthy juvenile history and was five days short of his 17th birthday at the time of his arrest.

Gideon went on to say that the 39-year-old Lann, who works in the records division, "has a perfect (12-year record with the department). However, it is our policy to prohibit such acts."

Bond set for 17-year-old Odessan

ODESSA — Bond of $10,000 has been set on 17-year-old Roy Dean Standberry of Odessa, who is charged with burglarizing the Strike-It-Rich Discount Store on East 8th Street Saturday.

Standberry was arrested after officers, who had staked out the store following two burglaries earlier in the month, chased him on foot after allegedly seeing him leave the building with "something under his arm."

Three shotgun blasts were fired at Standberry during the chase, and police said he was treated at Medical Center Hospital for a pellet wound to the head before being taken to jail.

Two windows had been broken to gain entry to the store and police said they recovered a large rock wrapped in a towel that Standberry dropped during the chase.

Weinberger defends defense budget

Weinberger was scheduled to testify today before the Senate Armed Services Committee in the first of three days of appearances before congressional committees.

Weinberger is set to defend Reagan's proposal to spend $238.6 billion on defense in the fiscal year starting Oct. 1. The defense budget represents a $29.7 billion increase at a time when most non-defense spending is being frozen or cut.

Gen. John Vessey Jr., chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, was scheduled to appear with Weinberger.

At a press conference Monday, Weinberger said the defense spending blueprint is "a realistic reassessment of our present and future military capabilities in the face of the growing threat" from the Soviet Union.

But Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., has called for cuts of up to $15 billion from the president's proposal, and there were renewed attacks Monday on the Pentagon budget.

Rep. Jack Edwards, R-Ala., the ranking Republican on the House defense appropriations subcommittee, predicted "reasonable and appropriate cuts" in defense.

Weinberger, as his news conference, said congressional critics sometimes suggest making spending cuts without having a detailed plan on how to achieve them.

"I asked many times, 'What is the $15 billion to consist of,'" Weinberger said. "The answer is, 'we don't know.'"

Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., and Rep. Jim Wright, D-Texas, have suggested that defense spending be increased 5 percent after inflation — not 10 percent as proposed by Reagan.

While the Pentagon got almost everything it wanted, one thing eliminated was a pay raise, part of a government-wide salary cap the White House hopes will help keep down rising deficits.

Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, the panel's chairman, Monday proposed restoration of a 4 percent pay hike for most people in the armed forces.

Tower's bill calls for giving 4 percent pay raises to most of the 2.1 million members of the armed services in April 1984.

A pay freeze would have a "devastating" effect on military morale, Tower argued. "A small pay raise, even if delayed, would send a positive signal of our continued concern and commitment."

Abilene air base will be first to receive B-1, Stenholm says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dyess Air Force Base at Abilene, Texas, will be the first base in the country to receive the new B-1 bomber, according to Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Texas.

Stenholm was informed by the the Air Force that 26 B-1B bombers would be stationed at the base by mid-1985, a spokeswoman for Stenholm said Monday. The result will be an additional 510 military personnel and 20 more civilian personnel employed at the base, she said.

President Reagan's proposed budget for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1 includes $8.4 million for new construction at the base to house the B-1, said the spokeswoman, Jamie Clayton.

Ms. Clayton said 13 B-52 bombers currently operating from the base would be transferred elsewhere.

Judge rules local bank breached agreement

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton has entered a $100,000 judgment against Midland's First National Bank which the court found breached a fiduciary relationship with Colorado real estate investor Ronald L. O'Dell.

In a trial before the judge, Bunton determined that O'Dell on Aug. 12, 1981, had transferred by Federal Funds Wire $100,000 from his account at Rocky Mountain Savings & Loan Association to the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas and that the wire transfer was credited to the Federal Reserve account of the Midland bank.

The transfer of funds was addressed to Charles Fraser, FNB president, and was designated for a "special escrow" account of Chalk Oil & Gas and O'Dell.

The O'Dell funds apparently were to be used to develop oil-and-gas leases in Lee County east of Austin.

Contrary to the wire instructions that the funds were payable "for (the) special escrow account of Chalk Oil & Gas and Ronald L. O'Dell," the bank, through Fraser's executive secretary, Darlene Mary Mertink, opened a new account under the name of Chalk Oil & Gas on Aug. 13, 1981, and did so at the direction of A.C. McGehee, who was doing business in the name of Chalk.

The bank deposited the $100,000 in the Chalk account, and thereafter honored checks drawn on the Chalk account "until there existed an overdraft in excess of the $100,000" deposited in the account.

"At no time...did the First National Bank of Midland...request additional instructions or clarification regarding the wire transfer from Ronald L. O'Dell or any transmitting bank," according to Bunton's finding of facts.

Six to eight weeks after O'Dell had transferred the funds by wire to the Midland bank, he found out that First National Bank had "paid out" the wire-transfer funds to Chalk.

Thereafter, the bank declined to repay O'Dell the funds, and O'Dell opted to sue the bank to recover his loss.

In addition to its breach with O'Dell, the bank "failed to use ordinary care in the handling of" O'Dell's deposit, the court found.

Aside from that, the court determined that Chalk Oil & Gas "did not perform its proposed contractual relationship with Ronald L. O'Dell with regard to the purchase and development of certain leases in Lee County."

If, like Chris Bik, a Houston police officer, your city was just warned to do something about its dirty air or risk losing money from the federal government, you might want to get away from the pollution for awhile too. So Chris and his wife, Lisa, took their dog, Grady, to Galveston and romped around on the beach during a clear, sunny day Monday. Lisa isn't in the picture because she decided to sit and soak up the sun from the sidelines.

Threatened EPA sanctions cause discord on all sides

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration's threat to impose economic penalties against as many as 218 counties for clean air violations is bringing protests from those on all sides of the issue.

Environmentalists accuse the administration of trying to pressure Congress into weakening air standards, businessmen warn of economic catastrophe and a key senator questions the move's legality.

What provoked the uproar was the release Monday of the names of 218 counties in 33 states which the agency said may be violating the Clean Air Act.

The agency stressed that its list was preliminary and the actual number that will suffer sanctions won't be determined until all areas named in the list are given a chance to answer the allegations.

However, for those counties found in violation, the EPA says it is considering a range of penalties including bans on construction of some new factories and withholding millions of dollars in federal highway funds and clean air grants.

Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., called the EPA action "unlawful and unconscionable" and said he had asked the General Accounting Office for an investigation.

"It is an especially appalling act of political hypocrisy for this administration to read rigidity into the Clean Air Act where it is actually flexible," Hart said.

In California, which has the most counties on the list, business leaders warned of job layoffs and economic disruption.

"The impact of the sanctions would be substantial," said Lou Custrini of the 2,600-member Southern California Merchants and Manufacturers Association. "They would work adversely for employers by posing difficulties to increasing production and adding new jobs."

The Clean Air Coalition, an association of environmental groups fighting efforts to liberalize standards in the Clean Air Act, said the administration is trying to stampede members of Congress into voting for an industry-backed bill that would harm air quality.

Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., head of the subcommittee reviewing the air law, agreed, accusing the EPA of "trying to twist the law" to achieve political purposes.

However, EPA officials maintained they have no choice on imposing sanctions and they called on Congress to change the law by extending the current Dec. 31, 1982, deadline.

Dirty air in four Texas cities bothers EPA

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas, Fort Worth and El Paso could lose federal highway and air control funds unless they adopt programs to cut ozone pollution, the regional administrator for the Environmental Protection Agency says.

But Houston is the Texas city that stands to lose the most if the EPA carries through on its threat to cut off millions of dollars in federal highway funds and invoke bans on certain types of construction because of dirty air violations, said Dick Whittington, regional EPA administrator in Dallas.

Construction along the Houston Ship Channel could be shut down by the government unless Houston and Harris County move to clean up the air, Whittington said Monday.

"In the case of Harris County, this is a very extreme measure," he said.

The federal agency has put 218 counties in 33 states on notice that they stand to lose federal benefits if air violations are not curbed.

In Texas, the EPA cited Dallas, Tarrant and El Paso counties as being in violation of ozone standards. Ozone is a pollutant caused by car-engine exhaust. The city of El Paso was cited for carbon monoxide pollution, also caused by engine exhaust, and the cities of San Benito, Houston, Corpus Christi and El Paso were singled out for "total suspended particulates," tiny pieces of polluting materials carried along in the air.

Whittington said the ban on construction, which he estimated would not be imposed before early summer, would not have a major impact on the Dallas area.

The ban "does not mean a whole lot because you are talking about...petrochemical plants, oil refineries, major gasoline storage facilities and these kinds of things," he said. "In as far as we know, there are no present pending permits in Dallas County for these kinds of facilities."

Dallas City Manager Charles Anderson said late Monday that the city would "pursue all legal avenues to avoid disruption of services through the loss of funds" from any EPA-imposed sanctions.

Roger Wallis, deputy director for standards and regulation for the Texas Air Control Board, said the EPA was improperly applying the law for political reasons.

"That's the basis behind all this silliness," Wallis said.

"It has been suggested in some cases, and in some quarters, repeatedly, that the imposition of sanctions by EPA is politically motivated and an attempt by EPA to coerce Congress into gutting the Clean Air Act," Whittington said. "That is total nonsense."

The government set in motion a lengthy process to impose sanctions against the areas even though top EPA officials called the penalties distasteful and counterproductive to the country's goal of cleaning up the air.

Included on the dirty air list were cities like Los Angeles, New York, Denver, Pittsburgh and Houston, which traditionally rank near the top in rankings of the number of "unhealthful" days each year because of dirty air.

Tournament chairman Dorothy Buchanan of Minneapolis and Barbara Morris of Bloomington, Minn., won the Life Masters' Women's Pairs at the recent North American Fall Championships held in Minneapolis. In the process, they gave newly crowned World Women's Pairs champions Carol Sanders and Betty Ann Kennedy a drubbing on this hand.

The bidding needs some explanation. North's jump to two no trump was actually a forcing spade raise. South's jump to four spades showed a minimum opening with no singleton.

West led the ten of hearts, declarer played low from dummy and won the ace in her hand. After cashing the ace and king of spades, declarer led a low diamond. West followed low and dummy's king won. Now declarer exited with the two of diamonds from the table.

If East grabbed the queen, she would have been end played. So she played low and West won the ace. But the relief was only temporary. West could attack only one of the remaining side suits, and whichever she led, her partner would eventually be end played in that suit to concede a trick in the other.

In the event, West chose to play another heart. East took her two heart tricks, but now she had either to return a diamond, allowing declarer to ruff in one hand and discard a club from the other, or else lead a club into dummy's tenace. Either way, the contract was secure.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Competence of therapist more important than sex

Dear Dr. Solomon: I recently broke off a long-standing relationship with my boy friend, and I've been thinking of going for counseling. My regular doctor told me about a psychiatrist in the community that he went to school with. I feel that I would find it easier to confide in a woman. Is it foolish of me to insist on a woman? I have no one in particular in mind. — Ms. F.M., Oakland, Calif.

Dear Ms. M.: In general, the skill and competence of a psychiatrist, rather than the sex, is of overriding importance. Where therapists are apparently of equal skill and competence, however, your preference as to the individual's sex is certainly a valid consideration.

Under the circumstances you describe in your letter, the mere fact that your physician went to school with someone who is now practicing psychiatry in the community does not seem to be sufficient reason to enter into treatment with him. He may be an excellent therapist, but apparently that was not the basis for the referral to him.

I suggest you again discuss the issue with your regular doctor and if it is still not resolved to your satisfaction contact the medical society in your city for the names of female therapists. If you believe you would feel better in discussing your situation with a woman, I see no reason why you should not start with one.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've read a lot lately about how good exercise is for people with diabetes. In fact I have a brother who was just taken off insulin because he watched his diet and got enough exercise. What I'd like to know is when doctors found out about this. Is it all part of the exercise kick the whole country has been on over the past few years? — Mark, York, Pa.

Dear Mark: The beneficial effects of exercise in patients with diabetes have been known for some time. In fact exercise was probably the most important form of treatment for diabetes before insulin began to be used.

Physical exercise, as your brother has learned, reduces insulin requirements. Therefore, patients should inform their physicians of any change in their level of physical activity so that treatment can be changed accordingly.

For Eleanor, Lincoln, Neb.: According to Drs. Arthur M. Tiber and Mukunda D. Mukherjee, of the Wright State University School of Medicine in Dayton, Ohio, zinc deficiency can lead to a number of abnormalities, including growth retardation, retarded sexual development, delayed wound healing, and emotional disturbances, among others. Treatment of children with nutritional dwarfism with supplemental zinc resulted in a gain in height, weight, and sexual development; this tends to confirm the assumption that a deficiency in zinc can affect an individual's growth and development.

The Food and Nutrition Board of the National Academy of Science recommends that adults get 15 milligrams of zinc daily; pregnant women and breast-feeding mothers should have even higher amounts of zinc.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Suppose a woman examines her breasts regularly and finds a lump, isn't it too late to do anything about it? I don't see how this guarantees against dying from breast cancer. — Ms. C.G., Chicago, Ill.

Dear Ms. G.: I suggest you not look for guarantees because there aren't any. Stopping smoking is no guarantee that a person will not get a heart attack, yet I advise my patients to give up cigarettes.

A breast mass can begin to be felt when it is about one centimeter (a centimer is 0.39 inches). At that time, there is a 50 percent likelihood that the cancer has already spread. Nevertheless, the American College of Surgeons estimates that almost one-quarter of deaths from breast cancer could be eliminated if the mass was detected at one centimeter. This appears to me to be sufficient reason for a woman to perform breast self-examination regularly.

You should also be aware that up to 90 percent of all breast cancers are found by women who perform self-examination.

Dear Dr. Solomon: What would cause a person to get dizzy? — Fran, Jersey City, N.J.

Dear Fran: I wish I could answer your question as simply as you ask it, but there are so many answers to your question that this is not possible. To name just a few, dizziness can be the result of a heart abnormality, anemia, a metabolic problem such as diabetes, drugs and alcohol, and neurologic disorders, among many others. Sometimes the cause of the problem is obvious, while at other times it is not uncovered until there has been extensive exploration of the condition.

If you are referring to yourself or to a member of you family, I would suggest a visit to your physician to help pinpoint the cause.

Dear Dr. Solomon: A friend of mine who is in his early thirties recently had a stroke. As you can imagine, his family and friends were completely shocked. How do you explain this? I thought stroke only happened in older people. — Stacey, New Brunswick, N.J.

Dear Stacey: The incidence of stroke may increase with age, but even children are not immune to it. The results of one study of 11 children who suffered from stroke showed that the relative levels of high-density lipoprotein cholesterol and low-density lipoprotein cholesterol, about which I've written in this column and in my books, were important factors.

For Alfred, Wilmington, Del.: You are wrong on all three counts: Epilepsy is not a contagious condition; it is not a mental illness; and it is not a sign of low intelligence. It is unfortunate that these misconceptions are still prevalent today, although I tend to believe — or at least hope — that your attitude is the exception rather than the rule.

In most cases, the attitude reflected by people like yourself is a bigger burden to patients with epilepsy than is the condition itself.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Kidney cancer responds to interferon

HOUSTON (AP) — Kidney cancer, an incurable and invariably fatal disease, has been shown for the first time to be sensitive to treatment by human interferon, according to a research team here.

In a paper published today in the February issue of "Cancer Research," a group of doctors at The University of Texas M. D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute reported that 12 of 19 kidney cancer patients experienced favorable results from massive injections of interferon.

The patients all had cancer that had originated in the kidneys and then spread to the lungs, bone or liver, or to all three.

"A significant number" of the patients experienced a reduction in the size of tumors, or a halt in tumor growth or spread as a result of injections of interferon, according to Dr. Jordan U. Gutterman, leader of the M.D. Anderson research team.

The findings do not mean the disease can now be cured, said Gutterman.

But, he noted, "This is an important advance for this type of tumor. We have more work to do, but we now have a foot in the door."

Better health picture

You've probably heard plenty of those good news-bad news jokes in recent years. They're the ones wherein you're first told the "good news" before the teller unleashes the bad.

Well, on the American medical scene there's a good news-bad news story for the past century. Americans are living longer nowadays, but some of the old life-threatening ailments which have plagued the American public are still around and just as potent although in some respects medical research truly has benefitted modern man.

In fact, around the turn of the century, says a recent edition of Newsweek magazine, life expectancy at birth was only slightly over 45 years. Now life expectancy at birth is more than 73 years for the general population.

But now, get ready for the bad news. Cancer, especially lung cancer among older women, remains a cruel killer and what's worse it's on the rise among that segment of the population.

The magazine notes, "If you're poor and undereducated, you're probably in worse health than those who are more privileged. Health care still varies widely among the regions of the country; folks down South, for instance, have one-third fewer active dentists per 100,000 people than those in the Northeast."

The life expectancy of Americans primarily has increased during the past century because of the steady decline in the infant mortality rate. Since 1940, when the infant mortality rate was 47 per 1,000 live births, the rate has steadily fallen. It dropped to 29.2 in 1950, 26 for 1960 and 20 for 1970. In fact, the provisional count for 1981 showed an infant mortality rate of only 11.7 percent.

Despite the increase in lung cancer for older women, the century brought good medical news for much of the population. The mortality rates for two of the nation's biggest killers — heart disease and stroke — declined in the 1970s. And cancer rates for Americans under 50 years of age also declined.

At least the century has brought progress on health concerns. The fact that in some areas mortality rates remain high should serve as a reminder that effort still must be exerted to reduce the prevalence of life-threatening diseases.

Fleecing the fleecer

The originator of the "Golden Fleece" awards for spendthrift federal bureaucrats, Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., has been offered his very own Golden Fleece award.

The Wall Street Journal discovered that the Wisconsin senator pushed through an amendment to the appropriations bill for the Department of Health and Human Services specifying that "not less than $1.5 million shall be obligated to continue research on poverty conducted by the Institute for Research on Poverty."

Where is the Institute for Research on Poverty located? By a not-so-strange coincidence it's in Madison, Wis.

For many years the Madison poverty institute has been the recipient of generous federal grants to carry on its investigations. But the Reagan administration in 1981 decided that poverty research shouldn't necessarily be confined to such longtime recipients as the institute and opened up the funds to competitive bidding.

Under the new system, the Institute for Research on Poverty didn't fare as well as it did previously. It received less than $175,000 in 1982. Other research agencies, however, did better than before.

Officials at the Department of Health and Human Services were reported pleased about the results of the new diversified bidding. However, Proxmire apparently was not pleased at all. He devised his fleecy amendment. Officials of Health and Human Services complained that his sponsorship of the $1.5 million guarantee for the Madison research institute not only sabotaged the new competitive bidding plan but cut into funds for other projects the institute had bid on previously and lost.

It does appear that the senator has earned the Golden Fleece award. Whether he will accept it is another matter.

Another View:

Good and bad news

Over the past decade, the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries became rich and arrogant at the expense of industrial and Third World nations. By controlling the world's oil production, it could insist upon a tenfold price increase.

But now all of us who have been gouged by OPEC's greed must be mindful of the mixed blessings of its possible collapse.

OPEC's share of the world market, which was about 50 percent or 31 million barrels a day in 1979, has shrunk to 35 percent or 17.5 million barrels, thanks in large part to American sacrifice and conservation efforts. Its $34-a-barrel base price is being undercut by both OPEC members and non-OPEC producers like Mexico and Britain.

Failure of the OPEC oil ministers to agree in Geneva on a common strategy for prices and production raises the possibility of an internal price-cutting war.

Any long-term drop in petroleum prices would be a delight to people who drive cars and heat their homes. It also should give the United States and other nations a boost in their efforts to recover from the worldwide recession, caused in large part by oil inflation.

Unfortunately, OPEC's disarray has its negative aspects for officials of some international banks who made bad loans and leaders of oil-producing states.

Mexico, with an $80 billion foreign debt, counts on income from the sale of its oil to avoid outright default on obligations to Western banks. A drop of $2 a barrel, which is estimated to bring a 5-cent-a-gallon price reduction in the United States, also means about a $1 billion loss in annual revenue for Mexico.

Other major debtor nations include OPEC members Venezuela and Nigeria. Meanwhile, non-OPEC oil producing nations like Britain, Canada and Norway could suffer economic difficulties if oil prices start tumbling. If prices drop drastically, some oil exporters face default or bankruptcy, which could pull down some banks with them and disrupt the international banking and trading system.

Unfair as it may seem, that could result in a loss of American jobs, homes or cars. And that is one reason why the stock market and foreign exchanges reacted negatively to the OPEC news on Jan. 24. (Although another reason for a Wall Street rebound the next day was investor confidence in airline stocks bouyed by the prospect of lower fuel prices.)

OPEC is talking about another emergency meeting in February or March in order to regroup. And some oil analysts, including the American Petroleum Institute's Dan Lundberg, are predicting only modest price reductions in the near future.

Whatever the result, most Americans probably will gladly accept the risks inherent in an OPEC collapse to see a cartel humbled that has hampered international economic development for so long.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Abscam probers ignored FBI misconduct

WASHINGTON — Senate investigators managed to spend nine months in the ABSCAM closet without disturbing the skeletons.

Jack Anderson

The investigators couldn't help stumbling over ABSCAM abuses, which are duly noted in their report. But they ignored their own evidence when they drafted their conclusions.

I have a special interest in this investigation since I started it. I offered evidence of the government's misconduct in the ABSCAM case to the Senate. Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., laid out the evidence before the Senate on March 3, 1982.

He inserted in the Senate record 33 columns that I had written exposing the ABSCAM abuses, together with backup documents. "This material is very important," he said, "to gain a full understanding of the extent of government misconduct ... and the extent to which the government itself was a victim of Mel Weinberg's personal ABSCAM."

The columns described how Weinberg, a convicted swindler, flagrantly violated the law while he was on the FBI payroll. He set up politicians who accepted bribe money from undercover FBI agents. Then Weinberg slipped around behind the FBI's back and collected cash kickbacks and expensive gifts from the targets.

He manufactured phony securities and collected bonuses from the FBI for "recovering" them. Then he covered up his sleazy profiteering by perjuring himself at the ABSCAM trials.

Cranston demanded a Senate investigation, and a select committee was formed to investigate the misconduct. The committee was given subpoena powers even more extensive than the Watergate committee's. Its chairman, Sen. Charles Mathias, R-Md., assured me personally that he would leave no stone unturned.

His investigators turned over stones all right, not to uncover new evidence, but to obscure the evidence that Cranston had already cited. The unavoidable findings of misconduct were buried deep in the committee's report, like gemstones in a mountain of slag.

Then the committee concluded, incredibly, that its own findings of government wrongdoing did not mean the ABSCAM defendant's rights had been violated seriously. It was almost as if the report's conclusions and its findings of fact were written by people who had nothing to do with each other.

Scattered throughout the report were findings which, taken together, confirm my original charges. Yet the committee not only obscured these findings but almost aborted the investigation. Here are the specifics:

— Early in the Senate investigation, I sat down with Chairman Mathias and offered to provide his investigators with taped interviews, sworn statements, names and witnesses and other details that my associate Indy Badhwar had spent several months gathering. I never heard another word from the committee.

— Instead, the committee's investigators established a close working relationship with the Justice Department and the FBI whose misconduct they were investigating. The closeness between the investigators and the investigated can only be described as cozy.

— The committee never used its subpoena powers to obtain crucial Justice Department documents which were arbitrarily withheld from the Senate. These included a report on ABSCAM abuses and their coverup written by the department's own internal watchdog, Michael Shaheen. Instead, committee investigators often accepted oral briefings about the contents of these documents.

— Key witnesses weren't even called. Robert DelTufo and William Robertson, former New Jersey prosecutors who handled the early ABSCAM investigation, would have decried the ABSCAM methods. They would have testified, for example, that at least one defendant was indicted because of improper pressure from the Justice Department. And Joseph Sylvestri, an ABSCAM middleman, was willing to offer evidence of political targeting of defendants.

— Witness interviews were conducted with unprofessional disregard for standard investigative techniques. For example, ABSCAM prosecutor Thomas Puccio and chief supervising agent John Good were interviewed together, though they should have been meticulously cross-examined separately. Individuals critical of the FBI were interviewed in the presence of FBI official Michael Wilson.

— Defense attorneys were not given an equal opportunity to tell their side of the ABSCAM story. At least one defense lawyer, who is listed in the Senate report as having been interviewed, actually pleaded to be heard but was shut out, except for a luncheon meeting to discuss the committee's procedure.

— The committee was directed by the Senate to investigate the activities of the Justice Department and its undercover operatives. But instead, the committee focused redundantly on the guilt or innocence of the defendants.

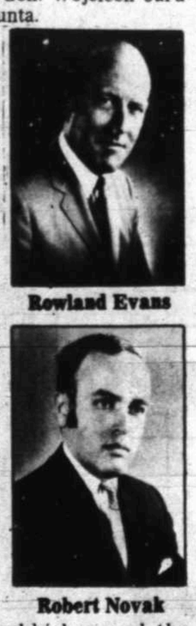

A House Judiciary subcommittee, meanwhile, is preparing a separate report on the ABSCAM abuses. The draft version is scathing and winds up calling for the appointment of a special prosecutor. But staff members with close ties to the Justice Department are urging chairman Don Edwards, D-Calif., to spike this recommendation. The attempt to cover up ABSCAM misconduct continues.

INSIDE REPORT

Poland's Catholic agony sustained by Glemp

WASHINGTON — Archbishop Josef Glemp, Catholic primate of Poland, was the target of an unprecedented challenge last month from parish priests who demanded that he, as nheir spiritual leader, show more spine in dealing with Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski's military junta.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Decrying the primate's successful appeal to television actors to end their strike against the regime, one priest spoke bitterly to Glemp: "It was an appeal against the people! We are under occupation. If they (the strikers) would have performed in reaction to such an appeal under Hitler's occupation (of Poland) they would be called collaborators and traitors!"

The embittered Dec. 7 dialogue in Warsaw between the archbishop and the priests, smuggled out of Poland, confirms the Reagan administration's unannounced decision not to lift economic sanctions against the regime. It supports the administration's finding that suspension of martial law was a charade to lull the West and obscure new suppression of political and human rights, even more ruthless than ever.

Emotional fevers rose high. After an hour of listening respectfully to the primate's appeal for restraint, even submission ("We must learn how to accept defeat with hope," he said), many of the 300 priests took the floor to challenge Glemp's passivity.

Particularly galling to them was the primate's apparent eagerness to pay Jaruzelski's price for the long-awaited visit of Pope John Paul II, the tough-minded Pole now under attack by the Soviet Communist Party. The Vatican now feels that price is so high there is little or no chance of the pope soon returning to his native soil.

The third priest to rise in protest after Glemp's defense of his conduct hit hard on the proposed papal visit: "The question has been asked: Are we not collaborating? The aim seems to be this — the pope's visit for the price of the Church's consent to liquidate Solidarity. We are deeply concerned about your excellency and about Poland."

Those words were applauded. But Glemp, who speaks with painful effort, defended his policy toward the military regime and its relentless security thugs. He defended his decision to pay a high price for the pope's visit, calling it "a great religious experience for the nation." He called for "such order in the country as will enable the pope to come." He ascribed to the visit "absolute priority" over all else, a concession to the regime that is almost certainly unacceptable to the pope himself.

The priests who declared themselves on this issue lined up solidly for the pope and against Glemp. They rejected Jaruzelski's demands: authority to censor all papal sermons and homilies; clearance by Jaruzelski of every detail of the pope's movements; control over the size and placement of the crowds who want to cheer and pray with him; a "proper attitude" by the clergy (a phrase used in one closed-door meeting by a member of the Polish Communist Politburo).

Another priest pressed on Glemp an argument that must have cut him to the quick. "The Church's line seems to be divided," he said. "The Vatican has one, the Episcopate (Glemp's ruling hierarchy) another." Glemp interrupted, exclaiming: "That is journalistic! Please give me evidence. This is a serious accusation ... I cannot talk about my discussions with the pope here, but I can assure you, nothing is divided."

Beneath the agonizing split is one of modern-day Catholicism's most critical challenges. In Rome, the pope (who will elevate Glemp to cardinal early next month) has given intimates strong hints, but not proof, that he is displeased with the Polish primate's interpretation of the Church's proper role in Poland's agony.

But in Warsaw, Glemp defends his appeasement doctrine as the only safe way during maximum peril to maintain the Church's unique place in Communist Poland. "We have managed to keep from becoming the regime's partner," he told the priests in a remark of staggering admission.

The secular West's apathy, in the face of post-martial law Poland's Stalinization, leaves the Church naked and alone.

CHARLEY REESE

Ideals more valuable than wealth

Economics is the study of wealth — its production and distribution. Economics can tell you what the options are and what the probable consequences of choosing each option are. It cannot tell you, however, what you ought to do.

Charley Reese

It is a mistake to assume that what you always ought to do is what will provide the greatest economic return. To do that means you have reduced life to materialism alone.

It was not the purpose of the American Revolution to create a situation in which everyone could make a lot of money. The purpose of the American Revolution was human justice and human freedom. The relative prosperity that eventually followed was a by-product of the freedom. It was the frosting on the cake but not the cake.

Morality and philosophy, not economics, tell you what you ought to do and it is the job of politics to see that what ought to be done is done. Hence, political decisions should be moral and philosophical decisions, not economic. To remove morality and philosophy from politics is to remove also the strength and dignity of politics. Unfortunately that is what we have done.

Virtually every public issue these days is couched in economic terms. We hear talk about the solvency and insolvency of the Social Security system but not much about fairness and compassion. We hear people talk of education as an inducement to attract industry, but there's little conversation about the value of education in terms of improving the individual. Even the environment is often discussed only in terms of economics.

I believe the abandonment of moral and philosophical issues by public officials also accounts for a great deal of the public apathy. Unless you have a direct financial interest in government, there is not much going on to excite you. Government has been made the province of economic interests which quarrel and fight over the loot and over the question of whose pocket is going to be picked to benefit which group.

The trouble with a purely economic outlook is that it is sterile. Once you get beyond a certain point necessary for survival, concentration on materialism for the sake of consumption becomes boring. You can only eat so much no matter how rich you are; you can only sleep in one bed at a time; you can only wear one pair of shoes at a time.

Of course some people are vain. They like to be admired and some like the feeling they get from having control over other people's lives. Some people like to be better at doing things than others as if another's weakness contributed anything to their own strength.

But a nation motivated by greed and vanity is doomed. Greed breeds the worst kind of conservatism. Vanity blinds a person to reality. Such a nation will inevitably be toppled by those more willing to take risks and to make sacrifices. In a sense, greed and vanity are the symptoms of spiritual senility, a harbinger of death. The American Establishment is senile in this sense and that is why we are losing the global war to communism.

It is a great paradox, but communism, however falsely, appeals to people's sense of idealism while capitalism, as presented by our leaders, offers them only a little more cash in their pockets. Read communist propaganda and read American political speeches. The communists talk less of economics and more of freedom and justice and peace and human dignity. Communists, who don't practice freedom, know better than we its power to motivate the human spirit.

Unless we return to our ideals, we shall continue to decline as a nation and lose our prosperity as well. The job of the American government is not to create either jobs or a climate beneficial to big business. The job of the American government is to foster and protect the liberty of the American people and to provide a just society. In pursuing those goals, government should crack the heads of big business and big labor impartially as the need arises, always mindful that the government represents all of the people and not any particular group or institution.

What I see in Republicans are representatives of big business and what I see in Democrats are representatives of Big Labor and other liberal groups. What I don't see are representatives of the American people.

Democrats attack Reagan's budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — Less than a day after President Reagan sent his 1984 budget to Capitol Hill, the $848.5 billion spending plan is under bombardment from Democrats who have their own proposals for reducing federal deficits.

"I don't think his (Reagan's) budget would have much chance of passing the House," said Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass.

"It's going to be pretty difficult," for Reagan to get his budget enacted, said Sen. Lawton Chiles of Florida, the senior Democrat on the Senate Budget Committee.

"This is the same stay-the-course budget we have seen for the past two years," said Rep. James Jones, D-Okla., chairman of the House Budget Committee.

Republican criticism was more muted, but members of the president's party freely agreed that Congress would make big changes in the budget blueprint which Reagan formally submitted Monday.

All three of Reagan's chief economic advisers were called to defend it before the House Appropriations Committee.

David Stockman, director of the Office of Management and Budget; Martin Feldstein, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers; and Treasury Secretary Donald Regan, were scheduled to testify today.

On Capitol Hill Monday, congressional leaders of both parties were talking about significant changes they plan in Reagan's proposals for federal spending starting Oct. 1.

Jones said he believes Democrats can produce a lower deficit than Reagan.

"That is my personal goal," he said.

First on the list is deeper cuts than Reagan has said he will allow in his $238.6 billion defense budget for next year.

Chiles, for one, said $8 billion in cuts to which Reagan has already agreed is the product of a decision by Reagan's aides to use different guesses about the impact of inflation than members of Congress are employing.

"It's as if you had a sale and announced 25 per cent off, but you had marked up your products 26 per cent before the start of the sale," said Chiles.

"You really don't have a cut in defense in those numbers," he said.

Assistant Democratic House leader Jim Wright, Jones and Senate Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd, called for a 5 percent increase in defense spending, not including other increases allowed for inflation.

That would save $100 billion over three years, Jones said, and the cuts are expected to be made by delaying production of some big strategic weapons programs.

Reagan is seeking a $30 billion, 10 percent increase in spending, also excluding inflation.

Byrd said the Reagan budget is "short on jobs and long on Pentagon spending."

Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker and Pete Domenici of New Mexico, chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, were among Republicans agreeing that Reagan's defense proposals are vulnerable.

"I think there will be a greater saving than that now proposed," said Baker, who is from Tennessee.

Also high on the Democratic list was repeal or delay of the third year of the Reagan administration's tax cut enacted in 1981.

That would reduce the federal deficit by at least $35 billion in 1984, according to administration estimates.

Republicans and Democrats alike said Reagan' plan for a standby tax increase was probably dead before it reached the steps of the Capitol.

Chiles called it "a Mickey Mouse scheme...I don't think that has a chance. I think it is stillborn."

Baker and Rep. Barber Conable, R-N.Y., both oppose the tax, which Reagan wants to go into effect if deficits have not sunk to a certain level by 1986 and the Congress agrees to a spending freeze.

While Democrats praised Reagan for making realistic, if pessimistic, economic forecasts, they said his programs do not provide solutions to the country's economic ills.

First off, O'Neill said Democrats will agree on a two-stage jobs proposal costing $5 billion to $7 billion.

The first step will be designed to provide emergency help for workers who are nearly out of unemployment benefits.

Many of the workers would repair roads and bridges, Veterans Administration Hospitals, and similar projects in need of restoration.

O'Neill said he made a personal appeal to Reagan on Monday to accept a jobs program, but received little encouragement.

Once an emergency jobs package is approved by Congress, O'Neill said Democrats will also enact a job training measure to help workers laid off from heavy industries where their skills are no longer needed, like steel or autos.

House panel to consider Social Security bailout plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee says quick action will be the key to enacting a delicate Social Security rescue plan that would increase payroll taxes and freeze benefits.

"The longer the deliberation, the larger the enemy's army gets," said Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., whose tax-writing panel was beginning hearings today on a $168 billion bipartisan bailout package drafted by the National Commission on Social Security Reform.

Republican economist Alan Greenspan, chairman of the reform commission, was leading off testimony about the plan's politically unpleasant elements, including a six-month delay in this July's cost-of-living increase in benefits, a tax next year on half of Social Security benefits for middle- and upper-income retirees, higher payroll taxes in 1984, 1988 and 1989 and other steps.

While generating $168 billion in new revenues or savings for the beleaguered retirement system between now and the end of 1989, the package would wipe out two-thirds of its long-term deficit over the next 75 years.

Meanwhile, Rep. J.J. Pickle, D-Texas, chairman of the Ways and Means subcommittee on Social Security, is cautioning that the reform commission's report is only the start in the drive to keep the Social Security system from crumbling.

"The president gave the impression at the State of the Union address (last week) that the Social Security question had been settled," Pickle said. "But this is just the beginning...this matter is far from settled."

Rostenkowski, Pickle and other congressional leaders stress that while some modifications will be made in the bailout plan drafted by the reform commission, too much tinkering will cause the package to collapse.

"It's fragile," Rostenkowski said in an interview. "We're going to be very constant that this little Dresden doll that we're moving around is going to be cushioned on all sides."

Rostenkowski said that quick legislative action will prevent opponents from mustering enough strength to defeat the package or give wavering supporters time to abandon it.

"I analyze this as the train moving through the depot at a pace fast enough so that nobody can jump off," he said.

In addition to quick action, Rostenkowski and Pickle agreed that President Reagan and congressional leaders will have to keep the pressure on.

In his State of the Union address last week, Reagan said he joined House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., and Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., "in urging the Congress to enact this plan by Easter," which is April 3.

Rostenkowski said he told Reagan the legislation can be on his desk by Easter if the president "can get the cooperation of the Senate."

The Ways and Means Committee will hold hearing and draft its legislation this month, with the full House considering the bill in March.

The Senate Finance Committee is opening its Social Security hearings on Feb. 15.

The president's 1984 budget sent to Congress on Monday stated that "over the past five years the (Social Security) system's reserve assets have been steadily drained," and "In June, the system will be without sufficient assets to cover the next monthly benefit payment."

While the reform commission's plan has the endorsement of Reagan, O'Neill and other congressional leaders, there is opposition from conservative Republicans and representatives of business groups opposed to the higher taxes in the package.

In addition, a coalition of 25 organizations representing million of active and retired federal workers are campaigning vigorously to knock out a provision of the package that would bring all newly-hired government workers into the Social Security system starting in 1984.

Union bill reintroduced

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate advocates of tougher punishment for convicted union officials are urging the House to pass the labor-management racketeering bill.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, chairman of the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee, and Sens. Don Nickles, R-Okla., and Sam Nunn, D-Ga., are among 13 co-sponsors of the 1983 version of legislation that was approved unanimously by the Senate twice last year but died in the House subcommittee on labor-management relations.

U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz ponders a question Tuesday during a Tokyo news conference which followed talks with Japanese leaders. Schultz called on Japan to exert greater effort in the defense of important sea lanes. Shultz flies to China Wednesday and will also visit Korea before returning to the U.S.

Shultz says Japan should exercise more responsibility for its defense

TOKYO (AP) — Japan should do more than it has been to take responsibility for defending its own sea lanes and air space, U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz said today.

Shultz, on the third day of a 12-day Asian tour, said at a news conference that Japan "has set for herself the mission of being responsible for the air space of Japan and the seas around Japan, and I think that is a very appropriate mission."

"It is clear that to fulfill responsibilities in that connection, more needs to be done," Shultz said. "How much more remains to be seen, but certainly a greater effort is necessary...The question is how rapidly."

The United States has urged Japan to gain the capability to defend its sea lanes up to 1,000 nautical miles from its shores, freeing U.S. forces in the area to defend a wider range of Asian waters against what Washington says is a growing Soviet threat.

Shultz, who leaves Tokyo on Wednesday for China, also discussed President Reagan's proposal to meet with Soviet leader Yuri V. Andropov to sign a pact banning all land-based, medium-range nuclear missiles.

In talks with Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone and other officials, Shultz reassured the Japanese that the United States would not sign an arms control agreement that could lead to deployment of more than the present 90 Soviet medium-range SS-20 missiles in Asia.

According to State Department spokesman John Hughes, Japanese officials have been worried that U.S. and Soviet arms negotiators might reach an agreement which would allow the Soviets to transfer European-based SS-20s to the Far East.

On another topics, Shultz applauded efforts by Nakasone's government to ease the entry of foreign goods into Japan.

Japan and the United States, he said, "share a common stake in maintaining the general openness of the world trade system. That openness is under severe attack by forces of protectionism around the world."

Shultz also strongly denied reports that U.S. Ambassador to Japan Mike Mansfield will resign soon. Mansfield, who will be 80 in March, joined Shultz at the news conference.

> Japan and the United States "share a common stake in maintaining the general openness of the world trade system. That openness is under severe attack by forces of protectionism around the world."

Earlier in the day, Shultz met with Japanese Finance Minister Noboru Takeshita and voiced concern about a sharp decline in crude oil prices as a result of falling world demand, ministry officials said.

While Japan, which relies on imports for 99 percent of its oil, stands to benefit from a drop in prices, Takeshita agreed that falling prices could be detrimental in weakening efforts to develop alternative energy sources.

The failure of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to reach an accord on production levels in Geneva last month is expected to bring world oil prices down in the near future.

Finance ministry officials said Shultz also briefed Takeshita on Reagan's proposed budget for fiscal 1984.

U.S., Honduran troop exercise called 'provocation'

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — About 1,600 U.S. soldiers join 4,000 Honduran infantrymen today near the Nicaraguan border for military exercises that Nicaragua's leftist government has denounced as "one more provocation."

The six-day training exercise in a remote area roughly 300 miles northeast of Tegucigalpa is believed to mark the largest U.S. role in any military exercise in Honduras.

U.S. officials, who have repeatedly denied Nicaraguan charges of aggression, describe it as a series of routine maneuvers.

Maj. Arthur Torres, a U.S. Army spokesman, said Monday that the American role in the war games would consist of such activities as supply, transportation and coordination. He said no combat troops would be among the U.S. Army, Navy and Air Force units participating.

"We need to know what type of logistic support is needed to support an operation by Honduras," Torres said.

Two American dock landing ships, the Boulder and the Spiegel Grove, will ferry troops and supplies throughout the exercises, code-named Big Pine. Some U.S. transport helicopters also will take part.

Pentagon officials earlier said U.S. and Honduran troops will come no closer than about 10 miles to Nicaraguan territory.

The United States and Honduras have held similar joint exercises almost every year since 1965, though on a smaller scale.

Last July, 30 U.S. military advisers assisted about 1,000 Honduran troops in field exercises.

Nicaragua, which protested those maneuvers, issued a statement last week calling the current exercise "one more provocation to our country, condemnable from all points of view."

Nicaragua described the operation as the biggest of its kind in Central American history and said it would "give support and encouragement" to anti-Sandinista groups.

Thousands of troops loyal to the late Nicaraguan dictator Anastasio Somoza fled to Honduras after his regime was toppled by the Sandinista National Liberation Front in July 1979. Those pro-Somoza forces are blamed for carrying out cross-border raids that Nicaraguan officials say have left 400 people dead, wounded or unaccounted for since 1979.

Nicaragua claims that the United States is encouraging the "counter-revolutionaries" and developing Honduras as a staging area for aggression against the Sandinista junta.

Negotiator nixes Reagan's plan

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Soviet arms negotiator Yuli A. Kvitsinsky responded with a simple "No" today when asked if he thought President Reagan's latest disarmament overture was a good one.

Reagan's offer to ban all intermediate-range nuclear missiles based on land, which amounted to a restatement of his "zero option" plan, was made in an open letter read in Berlin on Monday by Vice President George Bush.

In the letter, Reagan also offered to meet Soviet leader Yuri V. Andropov "whenever and wherever he wants" to sign such a pact.

The Kremlin has rejected Reagan's "zero option" plan, which would have NATO scrap plans to deploy 572 new missiles if Moscow dismantles its medium-range European arsenal.

North Korea puts army, militias on alert to counter joint maneuvers

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — North Korea said it put its army and militias on alert today as U.S. and South Korean forces began their annual joint military exercise. The North Koreans called the maneuvers "an open provocation."

The military exercise, code-named "Team Spirit '83," continues through mid-April. With 188,000 troops including 70,000 Americans taking part, it is described as the biggest non-communist military exercise.

In a dispatch monitored in Tokyo, North Korea's official Korean Central News Agency said President Kim Il-sung ordered all army and militia forces "to enter into a semi-war state from Feb. 1 to mid-April, the period of the enemy's joint military exercise."

The dispatch said Team Spirit is "an escalation of their criminal war moves against our republic and an open military provocation harassing peace in Korea and leading the situation in our country to the brink of war."

North Korea watchers in Tokyo said they could not recall such an alert during previous U.S.-South Korean exercises. A similar alert was proclaimed, and later canceled, during a period of tension that followed the axe murder of two U.S. Army officers by North Korean soldiers in August, 1976.

South Korea and the U.S.-backed United Nations Command in Seoul have defended the annual Team Spirit maneuvers as defensive exercises allowed by the Korean Armistice Agreement, which ended the 3-year war in 1953.

The U.N. Command notified North Korea last Dec. 15 that the exercises would be held to avoid any misunderstanding about their "defensive" nature, a command spokesman said. The United Nations invited communist observers to the 1981 exercises, but the invitation was ignored.

Lady Bulldogs take over second

By CHAD PUERLING
Sports Writer

Monday was described as D-Day for the Midland High girl's basketball team, but it should have been Armistice Day as the Bulldogs beat the invading forces from Big Spring 71-41 at the MHS gym Monday.

"I'm glad this one's out of the way," Bulldog coach Jane Young said. "But we've got our work cut out for us."

The win was crucial to Midland's chances of making the playoffs and just as important was San Angelo's loss to Midland Lee. MHS, San Angelo and Big Spring were tied for the second spot in the district race with 7-4 records. Now the Bulldogs stand alone in second at 8-4 while San Angelo, Big Spring and Abilene High are tied for third with 7-5 records.

"Big Spring beat us (45-37) at their gym last time we played them," the happy Young said. "It seemed like everything they put up in Big Spring went in, but this time we stopped their outside shooting game."

But taking away a team's outside shot doesn't explain the 38-point difference in the final scores.

It takes rebounding. "We rebounded with them, something we had trouble with in Big Spring."

And it takes offense. "We shot well."

FROM THE opening tip the Purple Pack was in control as they doubled the Steers' score at 10-5 early and held a similar ratio at the end of the first quarter 22-11.

(See related district story on Page 3B)

Big Spring opened with a full court press but Denise Lanz found the holes, scoring six of Midland's first eight points. For the game, the sophomore matched her season high output of 12, which first occured 21 games ago against Odessa High. It was the first district outing in which Lanz finished in double figures.

"Denise had a super game," Young said, "It was her best of the year."

Midland stretched its lead to 14, 35-19, at the half, led by Rebecca Caton's 10 points.

"It helped us when Rebecca made a lot of long shots early," Young said. "That takes the pressure off the inside game."

The 17-year old's 20-point performance was the third consecutive game she has hit for 20 or more.

"I don't know...let me think...," Caton said, trying to explain her hot shooting streak. "The Lord has really been blessing me."

But pratice hasn't hurt the senior's shooting eye one bit.

"I got moved up from the JV to the varsity at mid-season last year," she said. "And during the summer, I worked on my shot."

Sheila Christian was the only other Bulldog in double figures, hitting right at her average, 14.

ABOUT THE only excitment the lopsided game provided was an altercation between some Big Spring fans and referees Ken Davis and Sam Evans.

With less than a minute left in the half, Big Spring coach Anette Fowler, disturbed by the lack of fouls being called, stepped on to the court and was tagged with a technical foul.

Turning to the referee that called the violation, Fowler said, "Keep your eye on the game." At which point the other referee hit her with a second technical.

That angered the already irritated Big Spring fans, who unleashed a verbal barrage at the referees. When the buzzer sounded for the half, one of the referees walked over to a voiceterous Steer follower and said, "If you think you can do better then get out here."

Both teams were called for six violations in the first half. Big Spring was tagged with three fouls in the second half while Midland was caught breaking the rules 13 times.

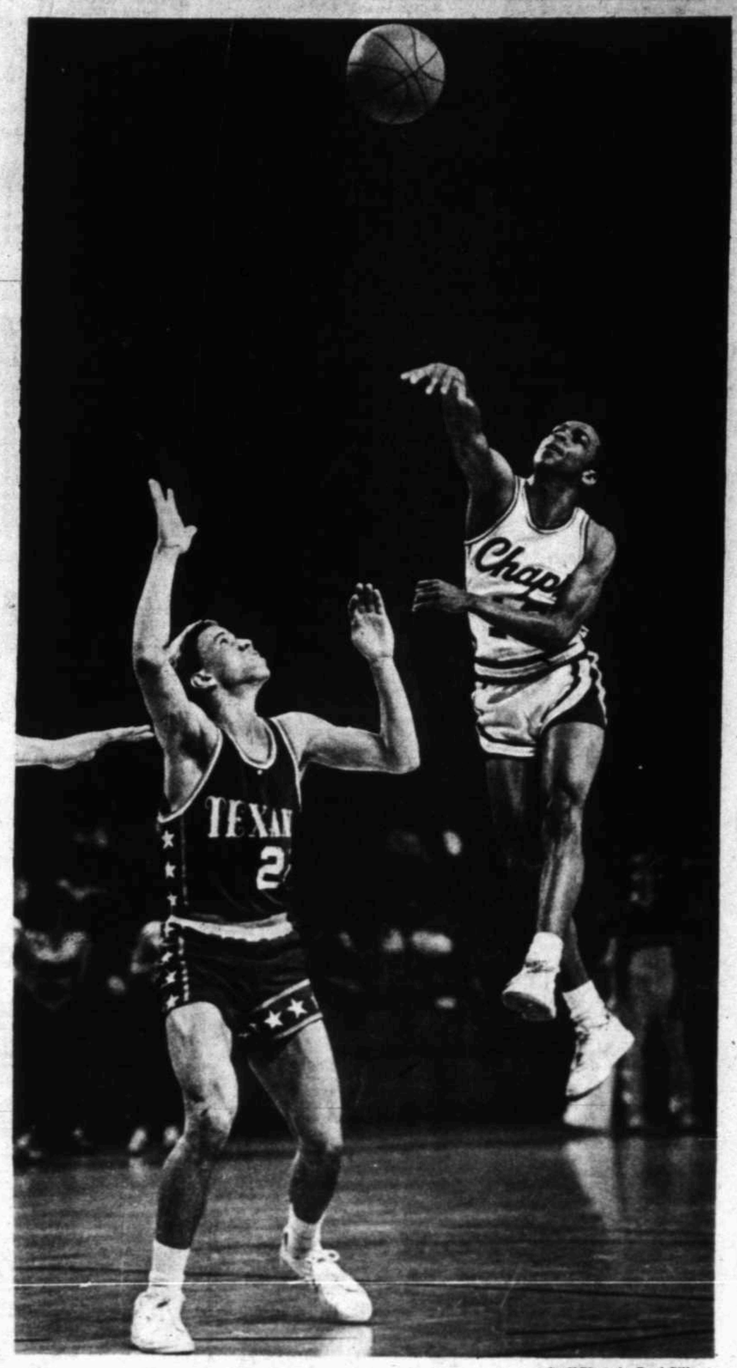

In the junior varsity game, Midland had a much tougher time but pulled out a 37-35 win.

Rozelle: 'God loves the Super Bowl'

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

PASADENA, Calif. — "God loves the Super Bowl," said Pete Rozelle, breaking out into a broad grin.

The words coming from the National Football League commissioner's lips weren't sacriligious. They were said with fervent thanks and relief that Super Bowl XVII Sunday didn't turn into a total disaster as many doomsday prophets had predicted.

On the contrary, it turned into one of the most exciting — if not the most exciting — of the hyped NFL championships, a big-play thriller won 27-17 by the Washington Redskins over the Miami Dolphins.

EVEN WITH heavy rainstorms playing hide-and-seek around the West Coast for weeks and due for a return visit on Super Bowl Sunday, the sun broke out in full splendor.

It was about the first good thing that happened to pro football all year.

The season had been one of almost continuous controversy and agony for the National Football League, normally the most prosperous and smoothest working major organization in sports.

Don Reese, who played with the Dolphins and a couple of other clubs, came out with a "kiss and tell" article in Sports Illustrated in which he charged widespread dope abuse among NFL players.

Maverick Al Davis, a holdover from the old American Football League, engaged the league in a bitter court battle over transfer of his Oakland Raiders franchise to Los Angeles — and he won.

Mercury Morris, a ball-carrying hero on the great Miami championship teams of a decade ago, got 20 years on a drug charge in a case where an appeal is still pending.

Then, more recently, there was the heavily promoted "Front Line" television documentary on the Public Broadcasting Service network which made allegations about widespread gambling and fixed games in the NFL in 1968-69-70 and suggested that Carroll Rosenbloom, late owner of the Los Angeles Rams, was murdered by drowning.

The most damaging of blows was the players' strike, full of acrimony between players and owners, which wiped out almost half the games and left a gaping hole in the schedule.

"Everything was going so smoothly that we thought nothing bad could happen to us," said Rozelle, " and then the roof fell in.

"It's been a tough year."

THERE WAS grave doubt that a legitimate Super Bowl could be salvaged from the debris. A makeshift schedule followed by a 16-team tournament was an emergency measure. Fan interest deteriorated alarmingly.

Then came the Redskins and Dolphins right out of the blue, a pair of scrappy, wildly exciting teams which before the season would have been 10-1 shots to reach the ultimate goal.

Both had to endure ridicule and widespread criticism as they marched through the abbreviated campaign — 8-1 for the Redskins and 7-2 for the Dolphins — and then made mincemeat of playoff foes.

They won their way fairly into Pasadena's Rose Bowl and then gave 103,000 live fans and millions of television watchers an afternoon of high drama with performances never before equalled in Super Bowl history.

Miami's Fulton Walker ran a kickoff back 98 yards for a touchdown. Nobody had ever done that in a Super Bowl before. The Dolphins' boyish David Woodley and wide receiver Jimmy Cefalo collaborated on an 76-yard pass play.

THIS CAME early in the game before Washington's "Hogs," the dirt-eating offensive linemen, and their 245-pound army tank named John Riggins had got decently warmed up.

Riggins, an eccentric 11-year veteran who one day effects a Mohawk hair style and maybe the next top hat, white tie, tails, white gloves and cane, smashed for 166 yards in 38 carries, both records, to seal the victory.

Both were fun teams with crazy nicknames for their specialists — "Hogs," "Smurfs," "Mushrooms" and "Killer Bees." With their stunting, aggressive, go-for-broke styles they spoiled fans accustomed to dull exhibitions by disciplined, machine-like robots.

The coaches presented the only contrast — Don Shula of Miami, old granite-jaw, seeking his third Super Bowl ring in four appearances, and Joe Gibbs, a baby-faced, two-year novice in big time coaching.

Shula is the winningest coach in the NFL. Gibbs is a highly dedicated young man who lists his priorities as "God, family and team," in that order and calls himself "no genius, just an average person."

He was genius for a day, however, and Redskin fans, in their painted faces, feathers and garb, responded with one earth-shaking war hoop. Now we know how Custer felt.

Prairie running Chaps on fire

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

The Harlem Globetrotters aren't due at the Langford Chaparral Center until Saturday night, but Midland College played like it was the advance preview of coming attractions in blowing bulky South Plains College off the court, 92-71, Monday night.

The win enabled the prairie running Chaparrals to retain their grip on first place in the Western Junior College Conference with a 10-1 record while pushing their season's mark to 21-3.

The Texans, who could have moved into a tie for first with a win, left the Tall City 9-3 and 15-7.

After a three-point squeaker at Levelland earlier in the season, the Chaps were either running scared or just hot. Whatever it was, Midland College never looked better.

ACTUALLY, THE 21-point final margin is misleading. When Coach Jerry Stone began emptying his bench with five minutes to go, it was 81-52.

Stone allowed it was a good night "for us. We played well at both ends of the court. We seem to be coming together. We've been having good practices and at this time of the year, that's unusual."

Nate Bufford moving outside after producing most of his 25 points against Clarendon last Thursday from under the rim, was devastating. After sinking only one of his first six shots, the Alabaman razed the SPC zone with nine straight buckets.

"He's something, isn't he," marveled Stone.

BUT NATE wasn't the only hot hand. Jerome Crowe hit seven-of-his first eight shots for a 16 point night. "No, it wasn't my biggest night, I had 19 on the trip to Kansas." As for the scintillating team performance " we're getting ready for what's ahead, polishing our game."

Six-seven Chester Smith had 22 points, sinking his first nine shots from the field, and no telling what he might have done if he'd been in the game for any length of time. Chester had three personals in five minutes and was on the bench for the rest of the half. He picked up No. 4 with 12:04 in the game and served more time on the bench.

"Yes, they were big," Smith said of the Texans front line which looked like the Redskins defensive four, "And they were also rough," he added by way of explaining the fouls.

IT WASN'T so much how many the Chaps scored, but how they scored them, with a flourish that would have made the Trotters nod admiringly. And, of course, the guy who provides the flourish is 5-6 Spud Webb, who, believe it or not, was scoreless the first half and almost unnoticed.

He got his first basket 1:22 into the second half and wound up with 16 points, a blocked shot, a resounding dunk, his usual bundle of assists that had the plaudits of the crowd ringing in his ears.

"NO, I didn't notice that Spud hadn't scored in the first half," Stone said. "We have been impressing upon him that we want him to be the floor general, to direct the attack. I'm more interested in his assists than his points."

Trailing 31-12, MC opened up a 31-17 lead with 7:58 left in the half as Bufford found the range from the 15-20 foot range and bombed away relentlessly. SPC rallied to trail 39-32 at half, but MC quickly zoomed out of reach, outscoring the Texans 14-2 for a 53-34 lead.

South Plains crept back to trail by 11, 53-42, before the Chaps turned the game into shambles as Smith, with three baskets and Webb with four were the backbone of a 23-point spurt that made it 76-50 with just over six minutes to go.

CHAPSTYQUES — MC travels to Hobbs, N.M., Thursday to play New Mexico JC, the Chaps closest pursuer...Howard Coach Harold Wilder was an unexpected visitor at the Center Monday. He was still smarting over an 85-70 loss to Frank Phillips at Borger Friday. "It was tied at 68 with three minutes left and they outscored us 15-2." He claimed that wasn't hair lotion on his comb, but basteing sauce. FPC and Howard were supposed to play Monday at Big Spring, but the coach of the Plainsmen called to say he was sick and couldn't come...The game has been rescheduled for Saturday night...Smith wound up 10 of 13 from the field, Bufford 12 of 20 and Crowe 8 of 12, and the Chaps 38 of 63, 60 percent...The Chaps got some more good news Monday after learning that Clarendon defeated New Mexico Junior College, 84-80, giving the Chaps a two-game lead over the WJCAC field. 4-5A worm turns against Midland

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

The worm contiunes to turn against the Midland schools in the District 4-5A basketball race. With six games left on the schedule, Midland High desperately needs a string of victories while Midland Lee faces the prospect of becoming the first district team to be mathematically eliminated from the race.

The Bulldogs of MHS takes a 5-3 record to the unfriendly confines of the Big Spring gym in an effort to vault themselves back into the thick of the playoff picture against the 3-5 Steers while 1-7 Lee hosts 5-3 San Angelo, a team that is in the same shape as Midland High, at 8 p.m. today at Chaparral Center.

Heading into the stretch district run, both Odessa High and Abilene High own 6-2 records to share the lead. If district play ended before tonight's games, those two teams would be playoff bound. So it's easy to see that both San Angelo and MHS can't afford many more losses if they expect to make the playoffs in 1983.

Odessa High will test 3-5 Abilene Cooper on the road tonight while Abilene High travels to 3-5 Odessa Permian.

It's Permian who has thrown the 4-5A script out of kilter. Two of their three district wins have come against Midland High and if it hadn't been for those two major upsets, the Bulldogs would own sole possession of first place in the league race and looking for an almost wure playoff berth.

But as things now stand, the Bulldogs have their back to the wall and only a string of victories can remedy the situation. In the Bulldogs' favor is the fact that the Bulldogs have both OHS and AHS at home before the final gun sounds, but now it appears that they will have to win those games.

The Lee Rebels feel that now is time for a victory. The Rebs were obviously upset over a loss to Odessa High Friday, the third heart breaking loss in a row where the Rebs played well enough to win and didn't. The frustration showed in the Lee locker room Friday in Odessa when an overtime period lifted the league leading Bronchos over Lee.

So far eight nights of district play have gone by the boards and only one of those nights has passed without an upset being recorded. This is the type of race that is going on and tonight's schedule could produce some more eye openers. It looks like this race will go to the final Feb. 18 playing date to determine the two playoff berths.

Rice's Suitts suspends two basketball players

HOUSTON (AP) — Two Rice University basketball players have been suspended from the team for the rest of the season for allowing the season's pressure to "adversely affect their behavior," head coach Tommy Suitts says.

Suitts refused Monday to elaborate on the dismissal of Tyrone Washington and Teddy Johnson, both 6-2 guards who have started some games for the Owls this year.

Their suspension was announced before practice started Monday afternoon.

Rice is 0-7 in the Southwest Conference, and 6-11 on the season.

"Our coaching staff feels that Ty and Teddy have let the pressure of our season adversely affect their behavior," Suitts said in a prepared statement.

"We therefore feel it is in the best interests of Ty and Teddy and the best interests of our basketball team if they do not continue as members of our team for the remainder of the 1982-83 season," he said.

Suitts said both men will retain their scholarships for the remainder of the year.

"We will help them and encourage them to do well in school, and we will meet with them after the season is completed to discuss the 1983-84 school year," he said.

Washington averaged 5.8 points in 16 games this year, shooting 36.8 percent from the field and 60.5 percent on free throws.

Johnson averaged 4.2 points in 17 games, hitting 33.3 percent from the field and 56.7 percent of his free throws.

Atlanta's Dale Murphy

Braves ink Murphy to $8 million pact

ATLANTA (AP) — The Atlanta Braves and center fielder Dale Murphy have agreed on a contract that reportedly is worth $8 million over five years.

The Atlanta Journal reported Monday that Murphy, National League Most Valuable Player in 1982, will receive $1.1 million this coming season, and the contract will escalate until 1987, when it will be worth $2 million.

The contract would be the richest ever offered by the Braves, and one of the top deals in baseball history.

Braves officials did not disclose terms of the agreement, but Executive Vice President Al Thornwell called the numbers "huge."

MURPHY'S AGENT, Bruce Church of Atlanta, said he expected the agreement to be signed, "probably by the end of the week."

The contract would tie the 26-year-old slugger to the Braves through the '87 season. He otherwise could have become a free agent after this year.

"We arrived at the value of the contract by looking at all the precedents set in baseball," Church said. Church said precedents included contracts of players "at the top end of the game," such as Gary Carter of Montreal, Mike Schmidt of Philadelphia and Dave Winfield of the New York Yankees.

Murphy hit .281 with 36 home runs and 109 runs batted in for the Western Division champions last season.

Murphy, who was in Portland Monday night for Oregon's annual sports awards banquet, said he was "extremely happy" with the new contract.

"The Braves have been nice to me and my family," he said.

Asked if he really signed for $8 million, he said, "You know I can't answer that. With figures what they are today, all you can do is go in in a businesslike mannner and discuss the situation sensibly. That's what we did."

Lee girls near playoff berth

SAN ANGELO — Midland Lee clinched at least a tie for second place in the the District 4-5A girls basketball race by defeating San Angelo 50-44 here Monday night.

Lee, now 10-1, holds a two-game lead over Midland High, 8-3, and a three game lead over San Angelo, Big Spring, and Odessa Permian, all with 7-4 marks, with only three games left in loop action.

The best news is that the Rebels' hopes for post season play are all but in the bag as they host Abilene High Thursday at Chaparral Center. The Eagles have yet to win a district game and sport a dismal 3-19 season record.

Midland High is also in good shape after knocking off Big Spring, but the Bulldogs must avoid slipping as their second place standing is but one game above the hungry pack in third place. Midland will travel to Abilene Thursday to take on Cooper.

The Rebels started slow and trailed San Angelo 10-8 at the end of the first period. But Lee shut down the Bobcats in the second stanza and took a 20-15 lead into the dressing room.

The Rebels pushed the cusion to eight points, 34-26, by the end of the third quater and held on for the 50-44 final.

Stacy Harmon and Felicia Farias canned a dozen points each for the Rebs and Yshun King pumped in an additional 10.

San Angelo's Bonnie Smith led all scorers with 17.

In other district games Monday, Odessa Permian stayed in the hunt by crushing Abilene High 77-45 at home and Cooper rallied from a 10-point deficit to beat Odessa High 42-40 in Odessa.

Permian climbed back into the race as Sheree Itz hit 14 and Debbie Hinds 13 points against Abilene High.

It seemed as though the Panthers were scoring points before the game started as they led 18-5 at the end of the first period. It was all down hill from there with Mojo coasting to the 32-point victory.

Tracy Scott scored on a layin at the final buzzer to give Abilene Cooper its 42-40 win over Odessa. Cooper had trailed 38-30 with three minutes left but Angela Riggins' tip-in with eight seconds remaining tied the score at 40. Scott then made her steal and the winning basket.

The game was a see-saw battle with the teams swaping the lead at the end of each period. Fortunately for the Cougars their final lead came at the end of the fourth quarter.

Angela Riggins was the difference for the Cougars as she scored her game high 14 points in the second half.

Huskies jump into Top 20

By The Associated Press

A lot of things can happen to a team that loses its top scorer and rebounder. Moving into the Top 20 isn't usually one of them.

Washington State, whose best all-around player, Guy Williams, was injured and lost for the season 10 days ago, defied the odds.

The Cougars squeaked past California and Stanford last weekend by a total of six points to run their record to 15-2, 7-0 in the Pac-10. This week they moved into 18th place in The Associated Press college basketball poll.

"I told a friend of mind, that we kind of feel like an illegitimate child at a family reunion," said Coach George Raveling.

But he added that he's not surprised at his team's performance: "I said before the season started that people were downplaying us when they shouldn't be."

Washington State's move into the Top 20 coincides with North Carolina's move into the top spot. It's been a rollercoaster year for the national champion Tar Heels, who started the season ranked third, dropped out of the poll after losing three of their first six, and moved back to the top with 14 straight wins.

"There are too many good teams to say someone is the best," said North Carolina coach Dean Smith. "Since we're such a young team, maybe this will be good for our confidence."

The Tar Heels received 34 first-place votes and 1,073 points from a panel of 56 sports writers and broadcasters, becoming the fifth team to top the poll this year, succeeding Virginia, Indiana, Memphis State and UCLA.

The Miami Dolphins may have lost the Super Bowl, but they didn't lose their fans as over 3,000 greeted the team home Monday night.

'Dolfans' receive losers back 3,000 strong

MIAMI (AP) — Her orange baseball cap outfitted with blinking aqua-colored number "one" will be put away along with the rest of her Miami Dolphin regalia, but "wait 'til next year," said Dennise Roberts.

Mrs. Roberts, 26, a mother of two, summed up the mood of a crowd of 3,000 "Dolfans" who flocked to Miami International Airport Monday night to welcome their heroes, despite a 27-17 loss to the Washington Redskins in Super Bowl XVII.

"I just had to be here to show 'em I love 'em," the Hollywood woman yelled over the din of the chanting crowd. "I'm still a Dolfan no matter what. Just wait 'til next year."

The crowd's enthusiastic reception warmed Dolphin Coach Don Shula, who waved and blew the crowd a kiss as he walked off the Pan American World Airways charter flight shortly after 10 p.m. EST.

"Thank you for your great support. I love you," the normally staid Shula said before introducing the 49-man squad and the coaching staff.

The throng surged forward and broke down a restraining fence when members of the American Football Conference championship team appeared from the plane, but no injuries were reported, police said.

Earlier, Shula announced the Dolphins would not participate in a ticker-tape parade scheduled to begin at noon today in downtown Miami.

"Ticker-tape parades are for champions, and the Washington Redskins are the champions," he said before the plane touched down on the flight from Pasadena, Calif.

However, Shula urged his players to attend a rally on the steps of the Dade County Courthouse where the parade was scheduled to end.

Hand-held banners proclaiming "Dolphins We Love You," and "Shula for President," billowed over the crowd, which was awash in a sea of orange and aqua T-shirts, caps, and over-sized cowboy hats.

'Skin fans out; Reagan slips in

The fans get their chance Wednesday with a parade up Constitution Avenue to the Capitol.

Team officials and police discouraged people from attending the arrival Monday of the Redskins, who won Super Bowl XVII with a 27-17 victory over the Miami Dolphins Sunday in Pasadena, Calif. Police blocked roadways leading to Dulles International Airport.

The Redskins charter plane from Los Angeles arrived about 10 minutes before Reagan's helicopter landed, and team owner Jack Kent Cooke waited in the chill at the top of the stairs before going down to meet the president.

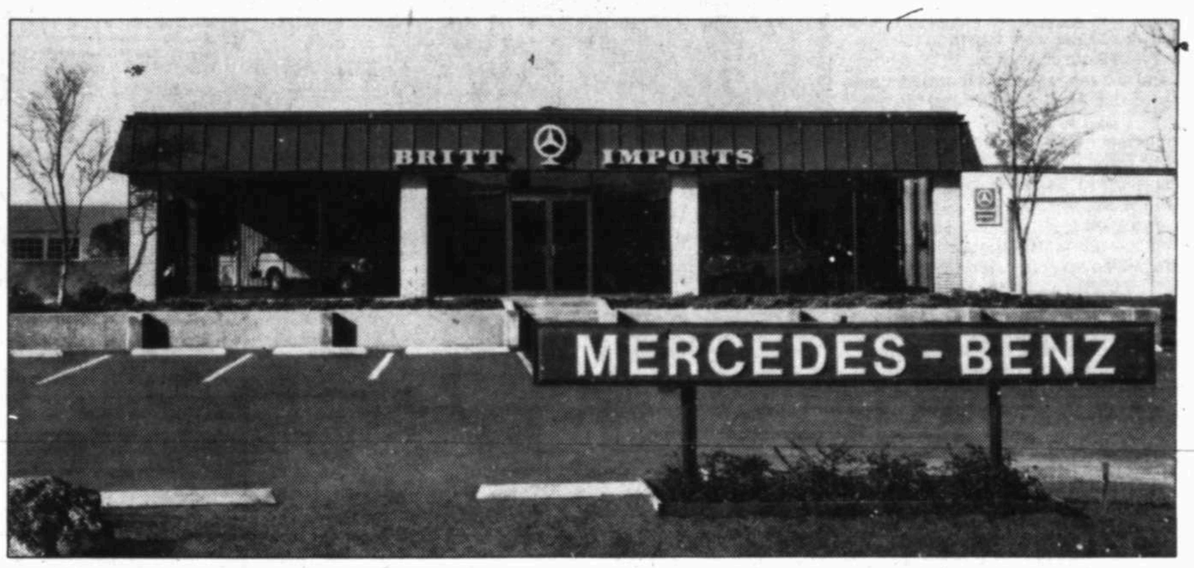

Reagan and his wife shook hands with all the players and coaches as they got off the plane, and one player presented the smiling Reagan with a baseball-type cap with Redskin colors.

Pinckney steals thunder from Georgetown's Ewing

By The Associated Press

Pat who?

"He's positively never played better," said Villanova Coach Rollie Massimino after watching his own Ed Pinckney steal the thunder from the more celebrated Pat Ewing of Georgetown.

The result was a tingling 68-67 basketball victory Monday night for the 11th-ranked Wildcats over the No. 14 Hoyas.

Villanova's ominpresent forward hauled down 20 rebounds and scored 27 points, including the two winning free throws with eight seconds left. The seven-foot Ewing, meanwhile, was in foul trouble most of the night and left the Big East game with 6:45 remaining after collecting only eight points and six rebounds.

College Basketball

"That was the finest, most thrilling, most hard-fought victory that I've coached in my 26 years," said Massimino after watching his Wildcats beat a Georgetown team for the first time since 1965.

Georgetown had beaten Villanova the last six times the teams met.

"We got the ball inside when we had to," Massimino said. "And everything just worked down the stretch. They (Georgetown) are a tough, tough team. They play terrific defense."

Top Ten

Keith Lee scored 24 points, grabbed 14 rebounds and blocked five shots as Memphis State, 17-1, avenged its only loss of the season by beating Virginia Tech.The Hokies defeated the Tigers 69-56 Jan. 10 at Blacksburg, Va. Memphis State was 11-0 and ranked No. 1 at the time.

Virginia Tech's Keith Colbert, who had held foul-plagued Lee to a career-low six points in the first game, had three fouls in the first half of Monday night's game and played only 17 minutes.

Second Ten

Tennessee shook off a 42-point scoring spree by Mel Turpin and the Volunteers used 22 points by Dale Ellis, including two free throws in the final seven seconds, to beat Kentucky.Kentucky came back from a seven-point deficit in the final minute and Turpin, who topped his previous career-high 28 points, connected on a layup with 12 seconds remaining to trim Tennessee's lead to 63-61.

After a Kentucky timeout, the Wildcats deflected a pass by Tennessee's Kevin Woods out of bounds. Then Kentucky's Charles Hurt fouled Ellis on the inbounds pass, allowing the 6-7 senior Volunteer his clutch one-and-one, which gave Tennessee a four-point advantage with seven seconds left.

Hank Cornley scored 14 points and Rick Lamb 13 as Illinois State squeezed by Bradley. The victory put the streaking Redbirds at 8-0 in the Missouri Valley Conference and 16-1 overall.

Terry Fair poured in 22 points as Georgia took control early with an 11-0 run and buried Vanderbilt to retain its share of the Southeastern Conference lead.The Bulldogs had little trouble with the Commodores from the start, surging to a 19-point lead four times during the first half and leading 41-24 at intermission.

A&M Aggies bomb Red Raiders, 78-63

By The Associated Press

Texas A&M beat Texas Tech handily in a Southwest Conference basketball game by forcing the Red Raiders to play their game, says Tech Coach Gerald Myers.

Claude Riley scored 20 points and pulled down nine rebounds and Reggie Roberts added 18 points to lead the Aggies to a 78-63 win Monday night in College Station.

"A&M got us playing their game," Myers said. "They were hot and made us change our defense. We got behind early and we can't play that kind of game."

Riley, a 6-10 senior, scored 16 of his points in the first half as A&M built a 42-31 lead at intermission.

SWC Roundup

Roberts got 11 of his points in the second half on steals and fast breaks. Tyren Naulls added 13 and Roy Jones had 10 for the Aggies.

A&M broke through the .500 barrier with the win, upping its overall record to 11-10 and its SWC mark to 5-3. Tech fell to 6-15 on the season and 3-5 in league play.

A&M Coach Shelby Metcalf said he was happy with the performance of the Aggies, now fourth in the SWC after also beating Texas Saturday.

"We shot well and we rebounded well and at times we played some good defense," Metcalf said. "So overall I was pleased."

Texas Tech Guard David Reynolds said the Aggies simply outmuscled the Red Raiders.

"On top of everying else, we did not shoot well," Reynolds said. "We got into a running game with the Aggies and there's just no way we could keep up with them. They're just too big for us to be able to rebound with them."

A&M hit 64.3 percent of its shots, making 36 of 56 attempts, while Tech hit on 28 of 59 for 47.5 percent.

New home sales worse than ever; Have to get better, optimistic experts say

Sales of new houses fell last year to the lowest level since the government began keeping track 20 years ago, but some economists are predicting a turnaround.

A goverment report Monday said sales of new single-family houses dropped 8.5 percent in December to close out a year in which 413,000 new houses were sold. That full-year total was down 5.3 percent from 1981 and the lowest on record.

The increase in new house prices was held to less than 1 percent last year. The median price was $69,300.

The government had said last week that builders started work on just 1,061,000 houses last year, the fewest in 36 years. The slump in the housing industry was tied directly to high interest rates, which discouraged builders and buyers alike.

"The housing depression is over and recovery is clearly on the way," said Jack Carlson, chief economist at the National Association of Realtors in Washington, D.C.

Michael Sumichrast, chief economist at the National Association of Home Builders, said he believes interest rates will fall further, "and that will help" stimulate home building and sales. He predicted sales this year would hit at least 535,000.

In other economic developments Monday:

—President Reagan sent Congress his $848.5 billion budget for fiscal 1984. Congressional leaders made clear the president's proposed cuts in social programs and his $30 billion increase for defense will run into trouble.

—Chrysler Corp. announced it has called back to work 233 autoworkers in Michigan, Ohio and Alabama because of increased production plans. They are in addition to 585 workers the automaker called back from indefinite layoff last week.

—J.C. Penney Co. Inc. unveiled a $1 billion facelifting program that will push the nation's third-largest retailer out of the auto care and appliance business by the end of the year. The change will put about 8,000 of Penney's 187,000 employees out of work, the company said.

—Federal Bankruptcy Judge John Flowers approved Braniff International's plan to lease 30 planes to Pacific Southwest Airlines, which hopes to hire up to 2,000 former Braniff employees, and cleared an agreement to partially repay creditors owed an estimated $1 billion by the grounded airline.

—Continental Airlines, trying to cope with heavy losses, announced it is laying off 2,000 employees and will cut back on the number of miles it flies by 15 percent. Continental, based in Los Angeles, reported losses of $60 million in 1981 and $23 million in the first nine months of 1982. The carrier has 13,800 employees.

—The American Iron and Steel Institute said steel production fell to 1.291 million tons in the week ended Jan. 29, a decrease of 1.7 percent from the previous week's 1.313 million tons. The industry's production amounted to 44.5 percent of capacity during the week, compared with 45.3 percent in the previous week.

—Gulf Oil Corp. said it was lowering the price it offers for domestic crude oil by $1 a barrel, effective today. If other American oil companies follow Gulf's lead, a $1-a-barrel drop in U.S. crude prices would likely lower prices for gasoline and other products made from crude. It also may trigger cuts in crude prices in other oil-producing nations. No other companies announced price reductions.

—Starting today, the interest rate paid on six-month savings certificates sold by savings institutions goes up to 8.725 percent from 8.644 percent the previous week. The rate at commercial banks rises to 8.475 percent from 8.394 percent.

—Silver soared above $14 a troy ounce for the first time in more than two years and gold climbed to a 22-month high of $510 an ounce. Gold for current delivery was up $15.30 at the close on the New York Commodity Exchange. Silver, on Comex, closed up 63 cents at $14.25.

Tax on gains from sale of residence

Fourth in a series of "tax tip" articles provided by the Permian Basin Chapter of the Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants.

Q. My company transferred me to Texas this year from California. When I sold my house in California, I made a $50,000 profit. Is this profit taxable for Federal income tax purpose?

A. Under certain circumstances, the Internal Revenue Code requires the gain on the sale of a personal residence to be postponed. The deferral works this way: John Doe buys a house in California for $60,000. He lives in it for five years, then sells it for $110,000 when he is transferred to Texas by his employer. If he spends $110,000 or more on his new residence within twenty-four months of the date of sale, the $50,000 gain will not be taxable this year.

The gain is used to reduce the tax basis in the new residence. This means John Doe may be required to pay capital gains tax when he sells his new house for more than $60,000. He can defer payment again if he invests the proceeds in another new residence. The only restriction is that he cannot defer the gain on more than one house within a period beginning two years before and ending two years after the date of sale. An exception may apply if a subsequent sale results from starting work at a new place of business.

For more information on this and other income tax questions, attend the "You and Your Income Tax" class sponsored by the Permian Basin Chapter of the Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants. The class, scheduled for Tuesday, February 8th, from 7:00 to 10:00 p.m. is presented as a public service.

Classes will be held at Midland College in the Allison Fine Arts Building. To register send $2.00 with your name and address to Taxpayer Education, P.O. Box 151, Midland, Texas 79702. Pre-registration is encouraged, but walk-in registration will be accepted.

Continental Airlines laying off 2,000

Hearst Feature Service

Struggling to prevent mounting losses, Continental Airlines said it is cutting operating expenses and overhead by laying off 2,000 employees and cutting back the number of miles it flies by 15 percent.

"The economy has not improved over the last year and a half," said Bruce Hicks, Continental spokesman.

Stock market mixed

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices turned mixed today as more U.S. oil companies cut the price they are offering to pay for domestic oil and confusion continued over the course of interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, which rose 10.95 points Monday, slid .74 point to 1,074.96 after two hours of trading.

But seven stocks rose in price for every six that fell in the midday tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Texaco and Cities Service today followed a move Monday by Gulf Oil and reduced their offering price for domestic crude oil by $1 a barrel.

Among oil company stocks, Gulf rose ¼ to 29⅞ in trading that included two blocks totaling 521,800 shares changing hands at 30 a share.

On the down side were Exxon, off ¼ at 29⅞, Texaco, off ⅛ at 31⅜, Mobil, off ¼ at 25¾, and Standard Oil of California, down ¼ at 32⅞. All four companies have commitments to buy Saudi Arabian oil at prices well above current spot market rates.

In economic news, Treasury Secretary Donald Regan told the House Appropriations Committee today that government figures indicate a recovery from recession has started. Martin Feldstein, the chief economist at the White House, said that if recovery does begin this quarter, the rate of economic growth is likely to increase as the year progresses.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks fell .21 to 83.54. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .07 at 362.46.

Big Board volume reached 39.57 million shares a third of the way through today's session, up from 29.02 million in the same period Monday.

BUSINESS MIRROR

Bad habits may tell nation's budget tale

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK — Along with the annual bustle and bluster of budgets there arises anew the question of President Reagan's ability to slow the pace of spending in social programs, and in fact spending in general.

The good intentions are there, the rhetoric too, and even a plan. Whether Congress and the public goes along is another matter, because cuts are easier made on paper than implemented in the real world.

It is much easier, as the nation has learned, to run up big debts for future generations rather than bite the bullet and pay the bills now.

The president proposes "workfare" for certain welfare recipients, a six-month delay in raises for food-stamp and Social Security recipients, and a one-year freeze on federal pay and retirement benefits increases.

Reagan has lots of ammunition to defend such moves, including evidence that Social Security expenditures this year might be nearly six times and Civil Service retirement eight times what they were in 1970.

But, with the constituent strength of the elderly growing, can he make such moves stick? And can he demand work from some welfare recipients who have grown accustomed to no more work than just signing up for benefits?

In short, can the clock be stopped and even, perhaps, moved back a bit?

That problem is not unique to the U.S. budget either, and it isn't just elected officials who find it difficult to deal with. It arises whenever human expectations are raised, and then threatened. And in unlikely places.

The U.S. financial community, an outspoken critic of domestic social spending, finds that having lent money to lift poor-nation living standards, it cannot now foreclose in spite of delinqencies. Its solution: Lend more.

That too is the "solution" often offered by Congress in dealing with restraints on spending of any sort that might displease its constituents, a weakness exploited by Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger.

If Congress really wants to cut defense spending, he suggested, perhaps they might start with port-barrel items that benefit mainly their own constituency and that the Defense Department feels are unnecessary.

But the biggest constituency of all might be that for social spending programs, the very programs in which the administration sees the possibility of holding the line. And biggest of these is Social Security.

When first developed, Social Security was meant as a supplemental retirement insurance program. Now it is a so-called entitlement, and for many people it is the major source of retirement income.

Medicare, Medicade and food stamps have developed along similar routes.

Begun as aids, they are now widely considered necessities. According to the Center for the Study of American Business, headed by President Reagan's former White House economist, Murray Weidenbaum, such items cost $12.1 billion in 1970, and $106 billion in 1982.

Such increases no longer can be supported, either logically or financially, according to the Reagan administration. To pay for them, they argue, forces the country to borrow and pay huge interest payments.

Perhaps more damaging as the supply-siders see it, is that borrowing by the federal government leaves that much less for private-sector companies to grow and create jobs that would take people off welfare.

In the past, the issue of desire versus the ability to finance the desire often was dodged. Bills were passed that in effect borrowed money from future generations for their financing. Some say Social Security fits that category.

Now, the administration says, that option is closed, or must be closed very soon. Its legacy, the Reagan people say, was unrealizable expectations, ruinous inflation, recession, and an economy on a treadmill.

Can the administration and Congress change American habits? And still get re-elected?

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Money market accounts offer liquidity, return

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I have a friend, an elderly lady, who has $20,000 in a passbook savings account. I have encouraged her to put her money in savings certificates or a money market mutual fund, but can't convince her. She is fearful and suspicious of anything new. She demands instant liquidity, just in case she ever needs her money.

She will only deal with big banks and will not put her money anyplace where she would be subjected to an early withdrawal penalty. What options are there to give her a better return and on-the-spot liquidity?

Doyle

A. You and your friend evidently haven't been reading the newspapers lately. The papers have been full of information about the money market deposit accounts banks have been offering since Dec. 14.

That kind of account should be just about perfect for her. Money can be withdrawn at any time, without penalty. Unlike passbook savings, on which federal regulations set a maximum 5.5 percent interest rate, there is no interest "cap" on the new accounts. Each bank sets its own rate.

Suggest to your friend that she inquire where she now has her savings account and at other banks in which she has confidence, to find out which one pays the highest rate on the new account, which requires a minimum deposit of $2,500.

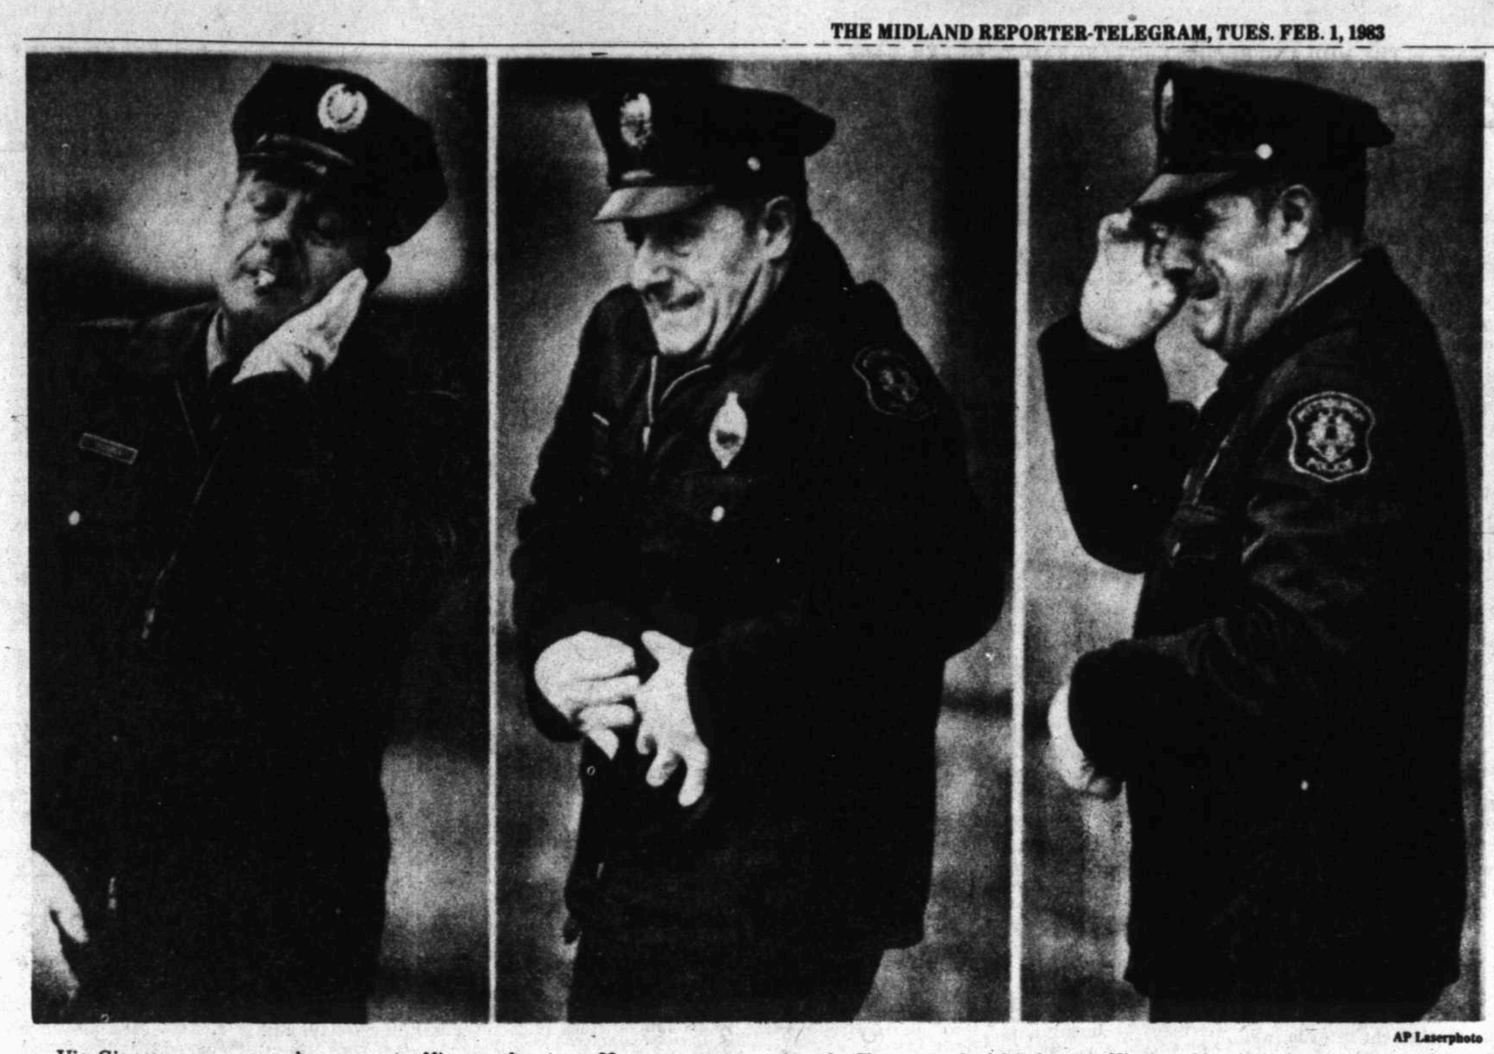

And don't be harsh on her. Lots of folks distrust new financial ideas, sometimes with good reason. But, once your friend understands the money market deposit account, she should realize it's too good a deal for her to pass up.

Vic Gianca, a one-man show as a traffic cop for over 30 years, goes through some of his moves while directing traffic in downtown Pittsburgh. Cianca worked his last traffic jam Monday after being forced to retire due to the city's mandatory retirement age of 65.

Entertaining Pittsburgh traffic cop's act is canceled

PITTSBURGH (AP) — His whistle silent and his white gloves headed for a display case, traffic cop Vic Cianca has retired after untangling thousands of traffic jams over 30 years, conducting cars like a maestro from his asphalt podium.

"I just hate to leave. It's like losing someone in your family," said the misty-eyed Cianca, whose agile footwork and mime-like moves couldn't save him from the city's mandatory retirement age of 65.

"(Today) will be the hardest part. I'll get up and put the suit on and I can't be a cop no more," he said before working the evening rush hour Monday and then walking a beat until midnight.

No mere gridlock buster, Cianca elevated directing traffic into an art form. His flair for theatrics earned him spots on television's Candid Camera, Real People, the Tonight Show and countless commercials. He was also honorary conductor of the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra.

Pittsburghers showered him with gifts and good wishes in his final performance on the pavement. Bus and trolley drivers stopped to shake hands and give him greeting cards while admirers presented flowers, kisses and handshakes.

"At midnight when I'm done, there won't be a soul around and I'll just drift off. That's the way I want it," said Cianca. "Gen. MacArthur said old soldiers never die, they just fade away. Well, old traffic cops never die, they just blow away."

Cianca's white gloves are to be permanently displayed at the Allegheny County Police Academy. Mayor Richard Caliguiri and the City Council presented Cianca with a plaque in an emotional farewell.

"I had tears in my ears," said Cianca, who plans to run for the council.

Just before he manned his post at a downtown intersection, Cianca got a bouquet of roses, carnations and daisies from Jacques Kahn, executive director of the Golden Triangle Association, a merchants' organization.

"You're watching a Pittsburgh legend going out in his final act," said Kahn, watching with scores of others as Cianca shooed pedestrians, guided motorists and chirped incessantly on his whistle.

His gestures were as always — cupping his hands as if praying for motorists to move on, twiddling his thumbs or imitating a sleeping baby to prod pokey drivers. His arms intertwined like a pretzel when traffic snarled.

May Carroll, an elementary school teacher, made a special trip downtown to plant a kiss on Cianca's cheek.

"I had to come down to say goodbye. He's always been something special," she said.

Barbara Dinger, a phone company employee, gave Cianca a beer mug with his name engraved on it.

"He's a terrific person. He's part of Pittsburgh. I don't feel he's a stranger," she said.

People move less because of interest rates, survey says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans moved into new homes less frequently in 1980 in part because of smaller families and higher mortgage interest rates, the Census Bureau says.

The bureau said Monday about 17 percent of all Americans changed residence between March 1980 and March 1981, down from 19 percent in the same period in 1970 and 21 percent in 1960.

The new report said a total of 38.2 million Americans moved in 1980, up in numbers slightly from 1960 and 1970 but not enough to keep pace with the jump in overall population.

"I would think that the interest rates and the cost of new housing is certainly affecting" the rate of moving, said Kristin A. Hansen of the bueau's population division.

Typical interest rates for Federal Housing Administration insured home mortgages climbed from 5.5 percent in 1960 to 8.5 percent in 1970, and in 1980 ranged from 14 percent to 17.5 percent, according to the Mortgage Bankers Association.

And the National Association of Home Builders reported that the median price of a new home grew from about $16,700 in 1960 to $23,400 in 1970 and $64,600 in 1980.

Miss Hansen also said the trend to smaller families would be another influence on moving.

"If you have six kids you've got to move, you need a bigger house. If you only have two kids you can sit in the size house you could afford to buy the first time you buy a house," Miss Hansen commented.

According to the 1980 census, the typical U.S. family included 3.27 people, down from 3.58 in 1970 and 3.67 in 1960.

Miss Hansen stressed that she could only speculate about exact causes for the decline in moving. But she added the slight increase in homeownership is also a factor, since renters tend to move more often than owners.

Most of the decline occurred in local moving, such as within the same county, she said. But long-distance moving was down also, she said.

The growth in the number of two-wage-earner families likely has some effect in reducing the long-distance moves, she said, because it is harder to find new jobs for two people than for one.

The national moving decline occurred despite a growth in the population group most likely to move, those aged between 20 an 29 years, the bureau said.

People in this age group leave their parents' homes, go to college, get married and enter the armed forces — all changes that are likely to encourage move, the bureau said.

In general, as age increases the likelihood of moving declines, according to the new bureau report "Geographical Mobility: March 1980 to March 1981."

Groucho Marx's 'helper' curses lawyer in court

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Erin Fleming, portraying herself as Groucho Marx's "helper" in his old age, cursed a lawyer in court and insisted there were no strings attached to money Marx gave her.

"Groucho did not give me a house," Miss Fleming testified Monday. "Groucho just gave me money, period. I could spend it as I liked. I could go buy the biggest diamond downtown and he didn't care.

"He gave me the money free and clear," she told attorney J. Brin Schulman, "and it's none of your goddamn business what I did with it."

Superior Court Judge Jacqueline Weiss interrupted, declaring Miss Fleming was out of order and should calm down.

The outburst came late in a full day of testimony which was interrupted when Miss Fleming became ill, rested for two hours in the judge's chambers and then returned to the witness stand. She was scheduled to resume her testimony today.

The 42-year-old former companion of Marx, embroiled in a bitter court battle with his estate, came to court in a condition her attorney described as "tranquilized."

Attorney David Sabih said Miss Fleming had been taking "mood elevating" drugs on the advice of a doctor treating her for emotional problems.

"She just can't take all this stress," he said of the case in which Bank of America, executor of the Marx estate, is seeking the return from Miss Fleming of $400,000, plus two houses, cars and other gifts the bank says she got from him.

Asked to describe Marx at age 83, Miss Fleming, wearing a mink coat over a knit dress, launched into her testimony with dramatic gestures.

"He was a knockout," she said. "He was dancing in the living room and playing Cole Porter records. He was dangerous, positively dangerous."

"Dangerous?" Schulman asked.

"Yes," Miss Fleming said with a laugh, "like Bette Davis in the movie 'Dangerous.' He was smoking cigars and sneaking chocolates in the bathroom."

Schulman noted that during this period in 1974, Marx, who had suffered several strokes, had nurses tending him around the clock.

"Wasn't he in a closely guarded condition?" the attorney asked.

"No," Miss Fleming said. "My opinion is he found out he could have nurses for free. He was covered by three insurance companies...the girls were gorgeous."

Landers says letters from Yale students phony

Ann Landers

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Advice columnist Ann Landers has turned the tables on students at Yale — and sent a letter to them.

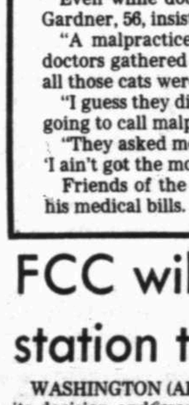

Miss Landers says she can always spot letters from Yale because of their "special flavor."

"The guys are always literate and the vocabulary is excellent," she added in a letter printed last week on the front page of the Yale Daily News, the student newspaper.

But, Miss Landers added, the letters tend to be phony. And, she says, she's received "hundreds" of them over the years.

"Those phony letters from your campus are suspiciously put together in a way that suggests the writer is producing a novel," she wrote. "In other words, the story gets more preposterous as it goes along."

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Susan Ford Vance, daughter of former President Gerald Ford, is "doing well" after giving birth to a 5-pound, 8½-ounce girl, the family says.

Heather Elizabeth Vance was born Monday at a Washington hospital, according to an announcement from the Ford's home here. The baby, their couple's second child, is the fourth grandchild for Ford and his wife, Betty.

Susan Ford and Charles Vance were married in February 1979. He is a Secret Service agent. The couple met while he was guarding the Ford family in the White House.

Mrs. Vance, 25, has worked as a free-lance photographer and once did a commercial singing the praises of a Japanese import car.

Vance, 40, had been married before and has two adopted children who live with his former wife in the San Francisco area.

PARIS (AP) — Princess Caroline of Monaco is taking over some of the social and business duties that had been held by her mother, the late Princess Grace.

Caroline, 26, and her father, Prince Rainier, had lunch here Monday with French President Francois Mitterand and three of his top advisers. It was the first time in several years that members of Monaco's royal family have dined at the Elysee Palace.

Since Princess Grace was killed in an auto accident last September, Caroline has been appointed by her father to head several Monaco charitable organizations that her mother had supervised.

Rainier and his daughter were accompanied to the palace by several of Monaco's economic and political advisers.

ATLANTA (AP) — Brother Dave Gardner, whose irreverent comic style gained popularity in the 1950s, hasn't lost his sense of humor despite a heart attack.

Recuperating at home this week after being fitted with a pacemaker, Gardner said, "Yeah, they tell me I died three times but, man, I didn't see the devil. I didn't see God. I didn't go nowhere."

He added, "I ain't got nothing to report except that I'm $20,000 in debt."

Even while doctors worked furiously to save his life earlier this month, Gardner, 56, insists he still found a place for humor.

"A malpractice suit... that's it," the comedian says he muttered to the doctors gathered around his hospital bed. "Then I looked around, man, and all those cats were off in a corner talking instead of working on me.

"I guess they didn't understand I was talking about a line of clothing I was going to call malpractice suits.

"They asked me if I wanted to pay cash when I left the hospital and I said, 'I ain't got the money with me, but I'll be back next Friday.'"

Friends of the comedian are planning a benefit Sunday to help him pay his medical bills.

FCC will allow Illinois radio station to use call letters WSEX

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission has reversed its decision and granted an Illinois broadcaster's request to use the call letters WSEX.

After four months of trying, Darrell Peters, president of Darrell Peters Productions Inc., won FCC approval to change his radio station's call letters to WSEX.

The station, formerly WTCO-FM in Arlington Heights, Ill., officially swtiched to the new letters on Monday. The decision to allow the letters was made by Larry Harris, chief of the FCC's mass media bureau, overturning an order by his staff.

Michael Krafcisin, a vice president of the company, said the new call letters were sought as a way to attract attention for the station, which plays "soft contemporary music."

"It's an attention-grabbing device, that's all," he said. "You won't hear us talking about sex on the air or doing anything off-color."

The FCC originally rejected the request last September on grounds the call letters were not in "good taste." Peters appealed, arguing the commission had no business trying to judge what was or wasn't in good taste.

Israeli president to step down at term's end, retire from politics

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

JERUSALEM — Israeli President Yitzhak Navon said Monday that he would step down when his present term ends May 4 and retire from active politics.

"I am not planning and I do not intend to enter political life," Navon told a press conference. "At the end of the term, I intend to divide my time between writing and social and educational activities that are close to my heart."

Although Navon's declaration sounded unequivocal, the opposition Labor Party may try to draft him as its candidate for prime minister against Menachem Begin. Public opinion polls show Navon is the most popular labor party leader and the only one of the party's possible candidates with much of a chance of unseating Begin.

Navon earlier had told associates that if he decided to seek the prime minister's office — a step down in protocol from his present post but a job with far greater real power — he would abide by a self-enforced "cooling off period" in an effort to avoid politicizing the non-partisan presidency.

Therefore, it is possible that Navon's announced retirement was a ploy to remove him briefly from politics and to give the grass-roots demand for his candidacy a chance to build up.

Navon, 61, is a member of a family that has lived in Jerusalem for 300 years, having originally migrated from Spain when all Jews were expelled from that country. That makes Navon a member of the Sephardic Jewish community, which traces its ancestry to Spain by way of the Middle East and North Africa.

The urbane Navon, who speaks Hebrew, Arabic, English and Ladino (a Jewish dialect of Spanish) fluently, has long been a leader in Israeli society. Most Sephardic Jews, however, migrated to Israel in the 1950's from Morocco, Yemen and other Middle Eastern and North African countries, and find themselves at the lower end of the ladder in education and income.

Begin, although born in Poland, enjoys overwhelming support from the Sephardic community. If Navon changes his decision and runs for the prime minister's office, the Labor Party would expect him to make some inroads into Begin's popularity among Sephardic Jews who hold a narrow majority in population statistics.

Begin's second term as prime minister expires in November 1985. However, the Knesset (parliament) can call an early election at any time by a majority vote.

In his press conference, Navon said, "I did not take this decision lightly or in haste. I know many citizens will be sorry about my step. I'm sorry I am causing them disappointment. But I can only act according to my own logic and feeling."

Israeli newspapers published before Navon's press conference generally predicted that he would run against Begin.

Maariv, a Tel Aviv daily newspaper, said in an editorial Monday that Navon possessed the "moderation and balanced judgement" to enable him to "knit up the holes" in Israeli politics.

Palestine council to weigh joining of guerrilla groups

By The Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

MANANA, Bahrain — Khaled Fahoum, chairman of the Palestine National Council, confirmed in a statement Monday that the council would meet Feb. 14 in Algiers to decide on plans to merge various Palestinian guerrilla groups.

Fahoum denied reports that the meeting would be postponed because of continuing difference on the future political line of the Palestine liberation movement.

The council, a Palestinian Parliament in exile, will also adopt a stand on Middle East peace plans and future relations between the Palestine Liberation Organization and Jordan.

Khomeini's relative charged with narcotics violations

From Wire Reports

DUESSELDORF, West Germany — Justice authorities said here Monday they have formally charged Sadegh Tabatabai, a relative of Iran's Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, with violating West Germany's narcotics laws.

Tabatabai was arrested Jan. 8, when customs officers found 1.6 kilograms of raw opium in his baggage when he arrived at Duesseldorf airport from Zurich.

Oficials released him one day later on $85,000 bail, but prosecution officials for West Germany's North Rhine-Westphalia state later won court orders for his re-arrest. Tabatabai was taken into custody a second time Jan. 17.

Justice officials here predicted that Tabatabai's trial would begin sometime before mid-year.

Admiral: NATO readiness hurt by stay in Lebanon

ABOARD THE USS PUGET SOUND (AP) — The commander of the U.S. 6th Fleet, Vice Adm. William H. Rowden, says a protracted stay in Lebanese waters eventually could impair NATO readiness by keeping his flotilla out of the allies' military exercises.

In a recent interview aboard the USS Puget Sound, stationed off the coast of Lebanon, Rowden said Navy commitments to support 1,200 U.S. Marine peacekeepers in Lebanon would mean the 6th Fleet might have to miss a NATO exercise scheduled in spring.

At the same time, he said other joint exercises with European allies also were being delayed or canceled because the U.S. fleet was stretched thin.

"We will be hard pressed in finding the necessary assets to be able to go and work in that exercise so while we will maintain our training level here we won't participate in a NATO exercise that helps out NATO and the other people who are in NATO," Rowden, 52, said.

"We are having to delay, cancel or put off (exercises) and over time they'll take their toll," Rowden said as the 643-foot repair ship steamed one mile off the coast of Lebanon.

"Being tied down in the eastern Mediterranean for long periods of time has those determinental effects. I don't think it reduces our level of capability but I think it does reduce our allies' capability...," he said. "That is a detriment, there is no question about it."

The 6th Fleet has nearly 10,000 officers and men tied up in Lebanon-related duties. This includes a task force with an aircraft carrier, the USS Nimitz, sailing 100 to 150 miles off the coast, plus seven ships permanently stationed within sight of the shore to support the Marines and show the stars and stripes.

The U.S. troops are part of a 4,000-man peace force that also includes French and Italian contingents. Lebanon wants them all to stay as part of a multinational force to support the government even if agreement is reached on a withdrawal of the 60,000 Syrian, Israeli and Palestinian forces on Lebanese territory.

Talks turn 'tense, nasty'

From Wire Reports

KHALDE, Lebanon — Negotiations between Lebanon and Israel turned tense Monday after a report that Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon is threatening a premature pullback of his troops, a move that could upset the delicate power balance within Lebanon.

A source inside the negotiations, in which the United States is also a participant, described the talks as "tense and nasty" when the Lebanese delegation asked questions about the report, broadcast Sunday over Israeli radio. The report said Sharon directed his statement to Pierre Gemayel, leader of the Christian Falangist Party and father of Lebanese President Amin Gemayel.

Sharon, who was in Beirut last Thursday, reportedly said that Israeli forces in Lebanon might be moved south to a defensive zone 45 kilometers north of the border if Lebanese authorities continued to oppose Israel's proposals for a peace settlement. When Israel invaded Lebanon last June, the 45-kilometer mark — about 28 miles — was the initial stated goal.

"Mr. Sharon told Mr. Gemayel that Israeli troops may withdraw to (their) previously proclaimed security zone and leave the Christians to their fate if the Lebanese government persists in its refusal to accept Israeli settlement proposals," the broadcast said.

Lebanon is insisting on the withdrawal of all foreign forces from the country, and the current negotiations are in part aimed at achieving that withdrawal.

Martin Countians cheer family, fun, friendship

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

STANTON — In Small Town, West Texas, where life is as laid-back as the squeak of a rocker, two events traditionally stir the lifeblood: high school football and the annual chamber of commerce banquet.

The pigskin now in hibernation, it was the friendly get-together of community supporters at Martin County Chamber of Commerce banquet at Cap Rock Auditorium Monday night which perked ears, piqued interest and painted smiles. Bound by a common heritage of amiability, concern and dedication unique to the land of the 32nd parallel, more than 100 persons initiated what they hope is a new era in the success of Martin County.

"We would ask You to help us do all we can for our community," prayed Ed Carson during the invocation, and that request of the Creator preluded the philosophies later to be voiced.

"As a small community we are going to have to band together," said outgoing president Grant Mabry. "We've got the groundwork laid for some super times ahead."

THAT HERITAGE plays a paramount role in the lives of this community was evidenced by an update of plans to restore the historic Martin County Jail and convert a portion of it into new chamber headquarters. "Our main priority for 1983 is to move the chamber from the old depot to the old jail," said incoming president Terry Blair. "About 40 percent of the architect's plans are completed, bids will be let in March...and by this time next year we hope to be in the jail."

Not only did optimism for the future reign, but appreciation for deeds already accomplished also was expressed, with Bob Haislip recognized as outstanding man of the year and June Reid as outstanding woman of the year.

"Irregardless of what kind of project we undertook, he always supplied the know-how and the effort," said Bob Deavenport in presenting Haislip his award. "You knew you'd never have to worry about his part of the assignment...Over the years he has contributed a world of concern, sweat and dedication to all manners of projects...and has been a business asset to the community."

Haislip, whom Deavenport kidded as being "a charter member of the old soreheads" in reference to the sign along Interstate 20 near Stanton city limits, has served 30 years with Stanton Fire Department, the last 12 as chief, and also has been instrumental in Sunday School work and the disaster preparedness program.

Bob Haislip

June Reid

OUTSTANDING WOMAN Mrs. Reid was lauded by Mary Brown as having "a patriotic and democratic spirit" and displaying "devotion to family and church."

When the pioneers settled what is now Martin County, said Mrs. Brown, "the women did all the work...With women's liberation today and the more we know, we've circled our wagons and some have taken up the law insteading of laying it down. She's one who has both taken it up and laid it down...She's a pleasure to work with...and a fabulous person."

Mrs. Reid is active in Martin County Historical Commission and Martin County Museum and has been instrumental in efforts to restore the old jail.

The Raymond T. Kingsfield Memorial Award to further the advancement of agri-business in Martin County went to Kara Welch. The award is in honor of the late Kingsfield, who was a staunch supporter of agricultural interests.

"He believed if you weren't farming, you should be farming," said Martin County Sheriff Dan Saunders.

FEATURED SPEAKER Dean Rippetoe, known in some quarters as one who reflects the philosophy of Will Rogers, took a humorous look at country life and interjected a few serious thoughts.

"Those of us who live in the Permian Basin and in the Stanton community are very fortunate indeed," he said. "We are so blessed we haven't had to suffer like so many people...This community has proved the oil and agriculture businesses are compatible. In my travels from one end of the nation to the other, I have found where those two industries exist, there are good churches and homes and schools full of good people."

Three pillars stand at the very base of the nation, said Rippetoe, looming so important that were they to crumble "America as we know it will be no more:"

—HOME.

"True love is when the husband takes out the trash and the wife goes with him," he said. "A marriage is not a 50-50 proposition; it's a 100-100 proposition."

He then related an anecdote concerning a woman who suddenly tore into her husband with both fists flying. "That's for being such a lousy lover," she snapped.

Petroleum industry stands firm, vo-ed group told

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

There is little doubt that the future of the Permian Basin economy is a deep concern to all. The issue is important not only to the bankers and investors, the laid-off employees, the housewives and the college graduates; the future of the economy also affects the curriculum of the city's vocational education programs.

For that reason, Walter Ashby was the main speaker at the second meeting of the 108-member Vocational Advisory Council/Committee Monday night at the new Midland High School library.

Ashby, vice president of the marketing and research division of The First National Bank of Midland, remained optimistic about the growth potential of Midland during the next five years.

He also was optimistic throughout 1982's pessimistic predictions.

"I'm sick of (the gloomy forecasts)," Ashby said. "There are so many negative comments — so many negative forecasts that are not coming true. The reason is because people are still measuring with an old yardstick.

"The economics of the petroleum industry are clearly the strongest they have ever been," he said. "There has never been a period of time so attractive to the petroleum industry."

Citing Midland's uniqueness, Ashby pointed out that the city is one of the fastest-growing in the state; per capita, it appears to be the fastest-growing city in the nation.

Total bank deposits in Lubbock were significantly below those in Midland last year, he said. In fact, the total bank deposits of Lubbock and Odessa together equal those of Midland. However, the important aspect is the difference in population, he said.

Twelve thousand housing permits were granted in Midland during the last five years, he continued. About 4,000 were granted last year.

Although that might not make much of an impression on some, Ashby pointed out that there also were 4,000 housing permits granted in Austin and in Fort Worth last year. Perspective must be kept, he cautioned.

"We are not backing off," he said. "We've built at absolutely staggering rates."

The 10 to 11 percent growth in previous years is "very extraordinary," he continued. Although 1982 was a somewhat more "normal" year of growth, it still was very rapid. "We see that drilling has continued to grow — and that has a correlation to the growth of Midland.

"I'm hopeful that in the next five years...we'll see a period of strong, sustained growth — strong and stable growth," he said.

Although it is difficult to predict the future, Ashby said he wouldn't be surprised to see an average growth of 3 to 6 percent in the next five years. Urbanologists agree that an average growth of 2 percent reflects a strong growth, he noted.

According to Ashby, the improved efficiency makes the petroleum industry "extremely attractive" for investors.

"It's possible to drill three wells this year for the cost of two last year." And, he added once again, the drill count is not related to the amount of footage drilled.

"It's important because, like a student, a certain amount of homework needs to be done on every footage," said Ashby, who divides the industry into two facets: mechanical and intellectual. Midland is concerned with the intellectual, or research, side of activity, he added.

The industry looks good, he said, because the reserves in the ground are "grossly undervalued" and some say that one of the two best sources for good investments and tax shelters is oil and gas.

"During the last seven recessions — this one makes the eighth — they were all average. This one might be a bit stronger than average and that is related directly to vocational counseling, classes and trends," he said.

"We're looking at a new frontier — an electrical frontier and a mechanical frontier. We've gone through decades of feeling that "The economics of the petroleum industry are clearly the strongest they have ever been. There has never been a period of time so attractive to the petroleum industry."

Vocational education's importance continues to grow

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

According to Dr. Duane Moore, the community has been "supportive, responsive and dedicated" in its involvement with the vocational education of Midland students.

The remarks of the Midland Independent School District assistant superintendent of instruction were confirmed at the Vocational Advisory Council/Committee meeting Monday night.

The meeting, which precedes National Vocational Education Week Feb. 6-12, provides an opportunity for members of the council and the committees to review programs and make suggestions for future curriculum.

Made up of businessmen and women from the community, teachers and administrators, the 108 Midlanders are divided into 13 committees which meet about three times a year to discuss possible courses and directions for their specific programs. A member from each of the committees makes up the Vocational Advisory Council, which meets another three times a year with the committees.

"We do this in order to get feedback from the community," Dr. Charles Thompson, MISD vocational coordinator, explained. "We continually are looking at the redirection of old programs to new programs, or initiating new ones."

Community members involved usually are referred to Thompson through instructors "who know of people in the community who would be helpful to us," he said, adding his recommendations are forwarded to superintendent Dr. Joseph P. Baressi Jr.

The committees work on the 13 specific divisions offered through MISD's vocational education program. Those include, to name a few, vocational agriculture, distributive education, vocational office education, home economics, individual cooperative training and general construction trades.

Focus of the meeting Monday was on an analysis of the future growth of Midland's economy, given by the vice president of the marketing and research division of the First National Bank of Midland. According to Walter Ashby, the trend toward mechanical and electrical training continues to grow, just as Midland does. That growth, explained Thompson, has a direct impact on the type of training the vocational education program needs to offer.

"(These meetings are) a method we have for staying as current as we can and still staying within the state guidelines," Thompson said. "There is always room for local adaptation."

Several activities are scheduled next week for MISD vocational education students. Beginning Monday, each high school will have a display consisting of posters with photographs of students working at their job sites. The posters will be displayed all week.

Cosmetology units will be giving free haircuts and manicures during the week while health occupation students at Midland Freshman High School will host a free blood-pressure clinic at Midland Park Mall Friday and Satur-

Oil lease subject of suit

By ED TODD

Two independent oil operators who allege that the Midland-based King Ranch Oil & Gas Co. used the federal courts to try to wrest from them the oil-and-gas lease on 134.18 mineral acres under Indian-owned land in Oklahoma have filed an almost $30 million suit in federal court in Midland against the King enterprise.

The oil operators, Clark Ellison of Oklahoma County, Okla., and M.P. Appleby of Maricopa County, Ariz., say that on April 3, 1981, they paid $2,012,700 for the mineral lease to the heirs of Nancy Phifer, a Wichita Indian, who in 1887 was allotted by trust patent a 160-acre tract in Caddo County, Okla. The Indian owners' lease to Ellison and Appleby was approved by the U.S. Interior Department's Bureau of Indian Affairs, the suit's petition contends.

In addition to paying the Indians the $2 million-plus at $15,000 per acre, the oil operators gave the Indian owners a 25 percent royalty interest on the lease.

To finance the transaction, Ellison and Appleby say that they borrowed the $2 million from a bank at a "high rate of interest." Subsequently, they "reached an agreement in principle" to sell one-half interest in their lease for $2 million to a third party; that transaction would have allowed Ellison and Appleby to pay their bank note off in full and still retain a one-half interest which they could retain or sell "for substantial monies."

However, before Ellison and Appleby could finalize the third-party agreement and before they could sell their retained one-half interest in the lease, King "wrongfully and maliciously" filed suit in federal court in Oklahoma on April 15, 1981, against Ellison and Appleby and the Indian owners and claimed that the lease was void and invalid.

Subsequently, Federal Judge Lee

Local radio station has new owner

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

As of Monday, KNFM 92.3 FM Radio changed management for the second time in less than two years.

Once locally owned by Permian Broadcasters Inc., the station was sold to the Austin-based Citimedia Corp. April 20, 1981. At that time KNFM's programming was changed from a jazz, mellow-sound format to country.

Monday's purchase of KNFM-Radio by Bakcor Broadcasting Inc. returned it once again to local ownership and management. Although the actual exchange took place at midnight Monday, Bakcor was actually "granted an FCC license on the 22nd of December to operate KNFM pending close of the sale," said Bakcor's president George Bakke.

Bakcor Broadcasting Inc., which purchased KMND 1510 AM Radio May 12, 1982, is owned and operated by Bakke, now general manager of both stations, and Betsy Anne Dwyer. Both are Midland residents.

KNFM-Radio and KMND-Radio (then referred to as KNAM-Radio) were previously owned by Permian Broadcasting Inc., with programming on both being simulcast from 2001 W. Wall Ave.

The May purchase of KMND-Radio brought about programming changes. The station moved from country to the mellow-sound Music of Your Life format.

When asked if the music format at KNFM would be changed, Bakke said, "Absolutely not. The age-old adage is in effect — 'If it works, don't fix it.'

"In our endeavor to bring the greatest entertainment and information broadcasts to the people of Midland, Odessa and the Permian Basin, we have chosen to become affiliates of ABC, in line with our existing ABC affiliate with KMND."

When Bakcor acquired KMND, in addition to its music format change and affiliation with ABC, the station added such national programs as ABC News, Paul Harvey and Lou Boda Sports.

KNMD also reinstituted the locally-produced "Breakfast-A-La-Carte" with Max Howard, a regular part of KNFM programming for approximately 17 years, as well as initiating such local programs as Joe Salman's "Permian Basin Oil and Gas Report," a stock market report from the Midland office of E.F. Hutton with emphasis on stocks of local interest, and "On My Mind" with Georgia Temple.

When asked if these programs would be incorporated into the KNFM format, Bakke said, "That possibility is being studied at this time."

Both stations will once again be owned and operated out of the same office at 2001 W. Wall Ave. R.D. "Bud" Calvert will be general sales manager for both, with Craig Anderson serving as program director for KNFM and Howard as KMND's program director.

The transition in ownership has meant major changes in the KNFM staff. Employees there were informed in writing by Citimedia of the change in ownership last week.

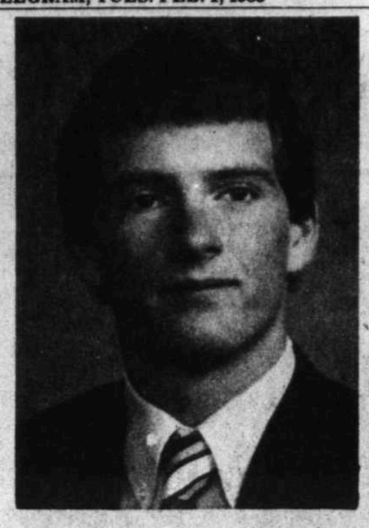

Douglas Raab, station manager of KNFM under Citimedia, said of the transition, "We did not change anybody who wanted to stay with us (when Citimedia purchased the station). Bakcor Broadcasting chose not to do it that way and by agreement of attorneys, we informed our employees that Citimedia was not the employer as of midnight the 31st and they should seek interviews with Bakcor Broadcasting to see if they would be retained." He then added, "Selected employees were retained.

"I myself chose, when this deal first came up, to stay with Citimedia and I'm going down to Killeen as vice president and general manager of KIXS-KIIZ."

Raab added that none of the KNFM employees were going with him.

Bakke said of the transitions, "Because we already have a viable local station and a staff on hand, we were therefore prepared to own and operate two stations by adding five of KNFM's current employees. The bottom line is you need less people to operate two stations together than you do two independently."

Suzanne Wiger and Wade Perry, both seniors at Midland High School, are recipients of the Youth Merit Awards this week from the Midland Downtown Rotary Club. Miss Wiger, daughter of Donald and Jean Wiger of 1204 Douglas, is the MHS school mascot, a pianist and is involved in the National Honor Society. Her favorite courses include accounting, Latin and calculus. Perry, son of Robert and Annette Perry of 1910 Hughes, is involved in Young Life and the Industrial Arts Club. He is a two-year baseball letterman and enjoys English and trigonometry.

few moments, then suddenly rose and gave her a good paddling in return.

—SCHOOL.

"We've got the most sophisticated education system in the world, and yet we're turning out people with bachelor's degrees who can't read or write," he said. "We're living in a country that pays teachers less than the oil industry pays roustabouts. The students they're teaching are the America of tomorrow."

—CHURCH.

"Sometimes we're so busy playing church...we forget who died and provided for us," he said, likening the I-don't-want-to-get-involved attitude prevalent in many denominations to the church in Central Texas known as "Jehovah's Bystanders...They have four commandments and six do-the-best-you-cans. And a drive-in window with a sign that says 'Toot'n Tell or Go to Hell.'"

RIPPETOE ALSO reminisced about his boyhood days in the backwoods of Comanche County. "You know, we lived seven miles from a dirt road," he quipped. "For two years we had to use an owl for a rooster, and you didn't go to the doctor unless you were pregnant or dying."

These days, he said, hospitals have become considerably more sophisticated in that neck of the woods. One man, he recounted, went in a doctor's offices and proclaimed "I've got the shingles." The nurse promptly sat him down, had him fill out a multitude of forms, then ordered him into a back room to "take off all your clothes."

The man acquiesced, and after a long while the doctor finally came in to survey him head-to-toe. "Now let's take a look at your shingles," he said.

Also at the mall will be demonstrations by Industrial Arts students, as well as a career booth manned by students and counselors.

Midland College vocational students also will set up displays at the mall, including mechanics, machine shop and welding projects.

According to a statement from the Advisory Council for Technical-Vocational Education in Texas, estimates indicate there will be 242,000 job openings in 1983 that will require vocational-technical skills, while the supply of graduates from vo-tech programs will total just over 97,000.

Unemployment for 1981-82 vo-tech program graduates is a low 3.1 percent, according to the statement.

Although 80 percent of the jobs in Texas require vocational-technical training, only one out of every four graduates from high school has specific skills.

As Ashby said Monday night, "I think the old possibility of a person graduating from high school and having a place in society as a warm body is about gone. I think robotics has something to do with it."

According to James Rehg, director of the Piedmont Technical College Robotics Center in Greenwood, S.C., "High technology is changing the three R's to mean retrain, relocate or retire."

the bright kid should be dutifully ushered off (into a college) to become a well-rounded individual. I think we're entering an era where we'll have greater appreciation for a craft, a skill, and not necessarily a degree."

The level of sophistication has increased, he said. "I think an individual who is going to be an achiever in a vocation will have to continue to upgrade himself for the rest of his life. I think we'll see it in the multi-degreed person."

Candidate feels planning important board concern

Bill Jackson

Bill Jackson, current vice president of the Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees, announced his candidacy for re-election to Place 2 in the April 2 election during a press conference this morning at the MISD administration building.

"I have enjoyed the past three years on the school board and I feel like I do have something to contribute to the school district and to Midland with my background in education," Jackson told members of the media.

A former elementary teacher, principal and junior high school principal, Jackson served 19 years in the Midland school district.

"When I was in the school business, I saw the side of the teachers and the administrators," he said. "Then on the school board, I see the other side of financing the needs of the district and the needs of the community.

"Having two children in public schools myself, I feel that we are at a crossroads in this school district," he continued. "We need more community imput and involvement as well as more emphasis on the basics in education."

Midland is facing a crossroads because of its tremendous growth and the need for advanced planning, he explained.

"The town is not a small town anymore," he said. "We've got to do some planning for the next 10 years for the needs of buildings, curriculum — these types of needs."

The biggest challenge facing the board of trustees besides the expansion of the district's buildings is "meeting the needs of the community and the students of this community," Jackson noted. "This district has a lot of professional people and a lot of people that will go out into the job world."

He pointed out that board members and school administrators presently are trying to determine the best possible location for the elementary school passed during the last bond issue.

"The town is growing to the north and northeast," he said, "and we're planning for the need of where this elementary school will be built. We're looking at the needs for the next 10 years of the growth of the district."

Turning to teacher salary raises, Jackson said, "I think whatever you pay a good teacher is not enough. This school district has been a leader in the state of providing big salaries in this state."

Concerning Gov. Mark White's promise of a 24 percent teacher salary raise, Jackson said, "We'll just have to look at what comes out of the Legislature. We're looking at (MISD's) budget now as far as expenditures go. But salary-wise, we'll look at the state and see what comes from there."

Jackson served as principal at North, Crockett, Long and Bowie elementary schools and at Edison and Alamo junior high schools.

Presently he is a Realtor with Langston Monarch Associates and is involved in real estate, land and business investments.

He received his bachelor's and master's degrees from East Texas State University and has done graduate work at Texas A&M University.

A resident of Midland for 27 years, he is past president of the Downtown Lions Club and is a member of the Midland Board of Realtors, the Midland Chamber of Commerce and the Masonic Lodge.

He and his wife Judy have two children: Jennifer, a senior at Midland High School; and Stephanie, a fifth grader at Bowie Elementary School.

Mansion has supervisor

AUSTIN (AP) — Anne DeBois, former general manager of the Zachary Scott Theatre in Austin, has been hired as administrator of the Governor's Mansion.

Ms. DeBois, 45, recently spent 1½ years studying food service management at El Centro Hospitality Institute in Dallas and serving as chef's apprentice in the French Kitchen of the Plaza of the Americas Hotel, also in Dallas.

She will supervise entertainment, meals, tours, maintenance of the building and grounds and household staff at the mansion.

MISD trustee candidate's been on board since '80

Ronald A. Britton announced today he will seek re-election to Place 1 of the Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees in the April 2 election.

Britton has served on the board since April 1980 and was secretary-treasurer in 1981.

"I hope that I may continue to assist the Midland community and the many fine young adults that we serve," Britton said in his announcement. "They are by far our greatest asset in today's changing world."

He pointed out the tremendous growth of the district during the past three years and said that current enrollment projections indicate this trend will continue.

Britton, president of Britton Industries Drilling, Britton Management Corporation, Rohill Energy, Inc. and Pro-Bro, Inc., has lived in Midland for the past 18 years.

The father of three children, Britton is on the board of directors of the I.A.D.C. and has served on the executive board of the Palmer Drug Abuse Program.

He is a member of the Downtown Rotary Club, the Midland Chamber of Commerce, a director of the Texas Research League, the Society of Professional Engineers of AIME, the Independent Petroleum Association of America, the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, the National Gas Society of the Permian Basin and the Mid-Continent Oil & Gas Association.

He is a registered professional engineer in Texas and Oklahoma and is a member of the National Society of Professional Engineers.

Afterward, the third party refused to honor its prior agreement, and Allison and Appleby were locked into the high interest rates on the $2 million loan. The third party backed out due to the civil action taken by King, says the Ellison-Appleby petition.

—Lost the $2 million one-half interest sale to the third party.

—Made $220,000 in interest payments.

—Paid $35,000 in attorney fees and costs in defending their position in the civil action brought by King.

—Are due $25 million in exemplary damages due to King's interference.

Common-Sense Diet recipes delicious

MILK SAUCE (With poached rex sole)

1 1/2 cups low-fat milk
1 small onion, sliced
2 tablespoons cornstarch
Juice of 1/2 lemon
Salt, pepper
1/2 cup poaching liquid from fish

Note: Poach 4 fillets of rex sole in dry white wine to cover, in a covered skillet or saucepan until done. Meanwhile, make the sauce:

Simmer the milk in a saucepan with the sliced onion. Meanwhile, blend the cornstarch and lemon juice in a mixing bowl. When the fish is almost done, strain the milk into the bowl with the cornstarch mixture and blend it well with a wire whisk. Discard the onion and return the milk to the saucepan to heat and thicken. Season it to taste with salt and pepper. When the fish is done, strain 1/2 cup of the now de-alcoholized poaching liquid into the sauce. Makes enough for 4 servings, 70 calories per serving.

FRUIT SALAD WITH CHEESE

For each serving:
1/2 medium apple, diced
1/2 medium pear, diced
1/2 cup pineapple, diced
1/2 orange, diced and seeded
1 tablespoon raisins
1 tablespoon sunflower seeds
1 ounce Cheddar cheese, diced
3 tablespoons plain low-fat yogurt
1 teaspoon kirsch or other liqueur

Combine all the ingredients and toss them well to coat. The fruit juices will thin out the yogurt into a sort of soup. Just eat it with a spoon. Makes 1 serving, 275 calories.

TOFU-MUSHROOM STEW

For 2 main-dish servings:
1/2 cup bottled or homemade marinara sauce
1/2 cup chicken stock or broth
1 package tofu (12 ounces) cut in 1/2-inch cubes
1 tablespoon olive oil
1/2 pound mushrooms, sliced
2 ribs celery, thinly sliced
2 tablespoons dry sherry
1/2 cup frozen peas
1/2 cup frozen corn
3 green onions, thinly sliced

Combine the marinara, chicken stock and tofu in a bowl. Let it marinate 30 minutes if possible.

Heat the olive oil in a deep, nonstick skillet or saucepan. Saute the mushrooms and celery gently until the mushrooms exude their juices and the juices evaporate. Add the sherry and boil it until it is almost evaporated. Add the tofu and marinade, plus the peas and corn. Simmer the stew for 5 minutes. Taste for salt and pepper.

TURKEY WALDORF SALAD WITH SWEET ANISE

3 ounces cooked turkey breast, skinless, cut in 1/3-inch dice
1 tart apple, cored and sliced
1 cup sliced sweet anise (fennel) or celery
3 tablespoons sour cream sauce (recipe follows)

ENDIVE WITH MUSHROOM-CLAM MORSELS

4 heads Belgian endive
4 tablespoons cream cheese, whipped
1 tablespoon milk (or more if necessary)
1/4 pound fresh mushrooms
1/2 cup minced clams (fresh or canned)
2 green onions, finely chopped

Carefully tear off 36 endive leaves and arrange them on a platter. In a mixing bowl, whip the cream cheese with the milk to make a smooth, creamy base. Blend in the remaining ingredients. Divide the mixture by teaspoonfuls among the endive leaves, placing them on the "blunt" (root) end. These are picked up and eaten as cocktail snacks. Makes 36, approximately 9 to 10 calories apiece.

CONSOMME BRUNOISE

For each serving:
1 tablespoon finely diced celery
1 tablespoon finely diced leek
1 tablespoon finely diced carrot
1 tablespoon finely diced turnip
1 cup beef consomme, heated

In a skillet or saucepan, combine the vegetables with 2 tablespoons of the consomme and 2 tablespoons water. Boil the vegetables gently, covered, until they are barely tender, about 2 minutes. Place the vegetables in a soup bowl and pour in the remaining hot consomme. About 30 calories per serving.

EGGLESS EGG SALAD (From "The Enchanted Broccoli Forest," by Mollie Katzen)

3 firm cakes tofu (3/4 pound)
3 green onions, finely chopped
1 medium carrot, coarsely grated
1 rib celery, finely chopped
1 small bell pepper, seeded and finely chopped
1/3 cup toasted sunflower seeds
Tofu mayonnaise, below
Salt, pepper, tamari sauce (a form of soy sauce) to taste.

Cut the tofu into dice. Add the remaining ingredients, except salt, pepper, tamari and tofu mayonnaise. Toss the salad gently, then add the tofu mayonnaise and season the salad to taste with salt, pepper and tamari. Serve on fresh greens. Makes 4 servings, 390 calories each.

Tofu mayonnaise: In a blender or food processor, combine 1 cake (1/4 pound) tofu, 2 teaspoons Chinese sesame oil, 2 tablespoons cider vinegar, 1/2 teaspoon dry mustard, and 1/2 teaspoon salt. Run the motor until the mixture is smooth. With the motor running, dribble in 1/2 cup peanut oil or vegetable oil until it forms a smooth, mayonnaise-like emulsion.

POTATO SALAD

For each serving:
1/2 cup cooked potato, diced
1 tablespoon finely chopped celery
1 tablespoon finely sliced green onion
salt, pepper
1 teaspoon mustard
1 tablespoon sour cream

Combine all the ingredients. Toss the salad to coat the potato well. Serve chilled. One serving, 100 calories.

DEAR ABBY

Should broken wife break with husband?

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a good provider and a wonderful person, but when he loses his temper — watch out! He's big and powerful, and when he's angry he hits first and apologizes later. Twice last year I had to go to the emergency room at the hospital to have a broken jaw set and get some stitches in my head.

A few months ago, I adopted a stray cat. My husband never liked her because she always hissed at him. Last week I found her dead. The vet said she had a broken neck. I think my husband killed her.

We have no children. I recently had to stop taking the pill. What if I get pregnant? I'm afraid my husband might harm the child. I'm afraid to refuse his advances.

The minister tells me to "pray and have faith." My therapist tells me to "make a decision." The Bible says a woman is supposed to "obey" her husband. My parents tell me to come home — that life is too short to live in fear. My nerves tell me I'm heading for a nervous breakdown. What should I do? — FRIGHTENED

DEAR FRIGHTENED: Not to diminish the power of "faith and prayer" or the words of the Bible, but since you asked for my advice, I say, listen to your parents and follow the advice of your therapist. If your husband is not in therapy, he desperately needs to be. He's not only sick, he's dangerous. And if you continue to live with him, you are sicker than he is.

DEAR ABBY: Is it proper to substitute an adolescent for an adult? I was recently married and did not want any kids at my reception. All my friends and relatives knew this.

An invitation was sent to Mr. and Mrs. John Jones, and a reply came back that two would be attending. Well, the "two" were Mrs. Jones and her 13-year-old son! I was furious, and even more so when I saw this kid drinking champagne!

I asked Mrs. Jones where Mr. Jones was, and she said she prefers to have her son escort her.

Please comment. — BURNING BRIDE

DEAR BURNING: Mrs. Jones should have asked permission to bring her 13-year-old son instead of her husband.

Although it's improper to write "Not Transferable" on an invitation, one day it may not only be acceptable but routine.

DEAR ABBY: I'm sure other hospitals have this problem, so you'd be doing a lot of people a tremendous favor by mentioning this in your column:

Inform your readers that they should use the woman's FIRST name when addressing cards, letters and packages to a patient in the hospital. "Mrs. George Brown" should be addressed as "Margaret Ann Brown" because in large hospitals, there could conceivably be two Mrs. George Browns.

Also, using the patient's room number only is unwise because patients are frequently moved from one room to the other.

And while I'm at it, let me suggest that no "nicknames" be used. We have no way of knowing that "Bud" is Vincent, "Dolly" is Bertha Mae and "Sissie" is Charlotte.

In our hospital, you would be amazed at the number of letters that are discarded because they are undeliverable. Pity.

AT WIT'S END

Favorite chairs

By ERMA BOMBECK

I've learned a thing or two about men in my time.

One of the things I've learned is that a man may love several wives, embrace several cars, be true to more than one political philosophy and be equally committed to several careers, but he will have only one comfortable chair in his lifetime.

It will be an ugly chair. Count on it.

It will match nothing in the entire house.

It will never wear out.

Separate him from it and his heart will stop beating.

I have seen men who couldn't care less how you decorate a house. They don't care if the sofa is covered with spit-up green chintz, if the bed revolves on an axis, or if the walls are covered in Astroturf. Just give them their comfortable chair with a light beside it and they'll be happy for the rest of their lives.

I have one of the few marriages in North America that has survived getting rid of her husband's favorite chair. Maybe survived is too strong a word. Floundered is better. The chair, in my vernacular, had "stayed too long at the fair." When it was young it had been gold brocade. Now it was faded and dull. The arms were threadbare. When you pushed a lever on the side, a footrest slid out to the center of the room and the back hit the wall. Traffic in the room always had to accommodate the chair. It was like walking around someone who was "laid out."

I gave the chair away.

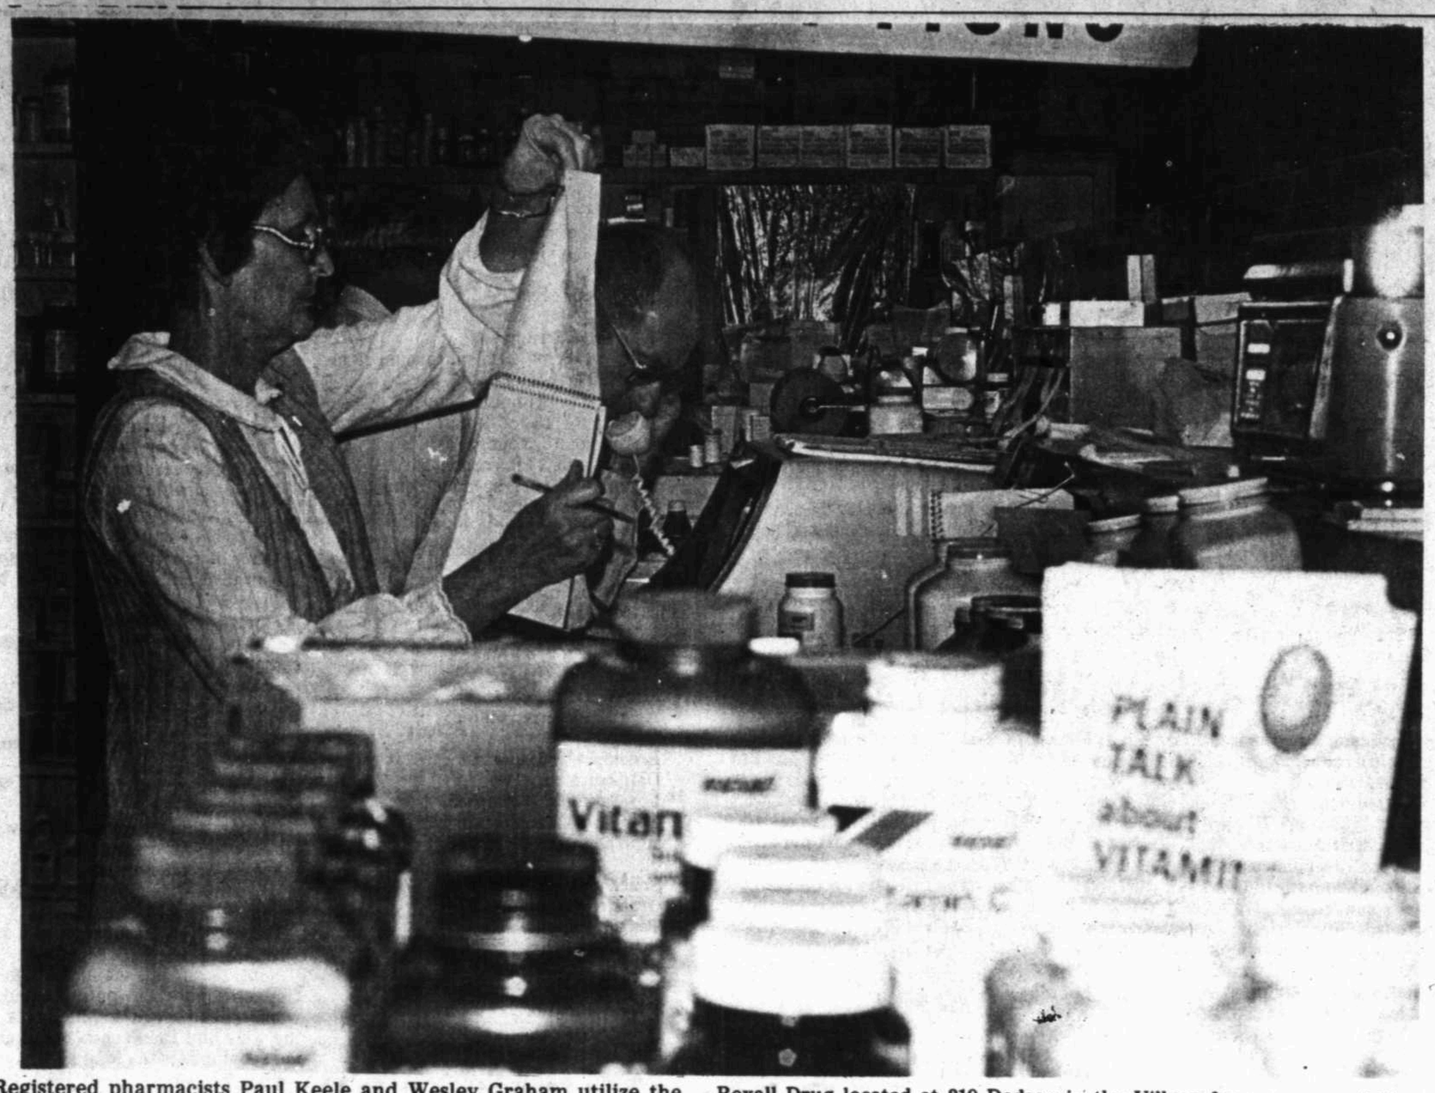

My husband looked at me like the dog after we had him spayed.

I won't bore you with the arguments and the trial separation that ensued. It is sufficient to say that we eventually got together to shop for a new "favorite chair." There was no pleasing the man. He wanted one that was soft, supported his back, had a head rest, arms big enough to relax his arms, a stool to stretch his feet out and material that didn't scratch. ("You have just described your bed!" I said.)

I felt I was reasonable. I wanted a Louis XIV antique with a seat measuring no more than 14 inches with a hot pink satin cushion. "You'll love it," I said. "You've always made new friends easily."

We bought the chair. I don't know how I'm going to tell him if he sits on it, he has to sit in the spare bedroom and wear beige.

With belongings piled high, thousands of Ghana citizens wait in Benin, a tiny West African country sandwiched between Nigeria and Ghana, Saturday. They were forced to wait until Ghana opened its borders to them. The Nigerian government expelled tens of thousands of Ghana citizens living illegally in Nigeria.

Nigerians search for illegal aliens

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — Armed immigration officers began searching hotels and businesses today in a sweep for illegal aliens defying an expulsion order that took effect at midnight Monday, the government announced.

The search, announced by the Immigration Department, appeared to be low-key and there were no reports of violence or mass arrests. Although the government said officers armed with hand guns were hunting for illegal aliens, no increased police and military patrols were visible in the streets.

Nigerian President Shehu Shagari has said aliens who remain behind in defiance of the explusion order face trial and jail terms. But the order could affect as many as 2 million West African aliens, the majority of them from Ghana.

Downtown Lagos was calm today but there was confusion in the harbor, where thousands of Ghanaians were jammed shoulder to shoulder aboard two ships waiting to sail home. The Ghanaians on the ships have been stranded in the port for more than a week.

Port authorities blocked off the dock with trucks in an attempt to make the boarding operation more orderly, but Ghanaians seeking to avoid the wait in line climbed onto the trucks and tried to jump on one of the ships.

The Nigerian Television Service said several people were feared drowned during the stampede to get on board.

Ghanaians unable to board the ships have been fleeing by canoe, bicycle, car, truck and on foot.

Internal Minister Alhaji A. Baba said two weeks ago that illegal aliens would have to leave Nigeria by Jan. 31. The order later was modified to allow aliens with job skills to remain until Feb. 28.

Ten years ago, when Nigeria's oil industry began to flourish, hundreds of thousands of Ghanaians came east in search of jobs and money.

Now they are headed in the opposite direction, expelled from economically shaky Nigeria and sent back 400 miles to Ghana, whose economy is close to collapse. In Ghana, Accra radio said four people had died — at least two from exhaustion — during the overland trek homeward.

Ghana initially refused to open its borders — closed since Sept. 21 to prevent smuggling, the government said. But one post on the border with Togo was opened Saturday after Benin President Ahmed Mathieu Kerekou threatened to open it himself.

Tiny Benin and Togo, stuck between Nigeria and Ghana, have been crowded with desperate Ghanaians since the expulsion order was issued.

Explaining the order, Nigerian officials said gangs of aliens had contributed to a rising crime rate. They also said Nigeria needed to become more self-reliant in a time of economic recession.

Nigeria is expected to announce this week that it will sell its oil at less than the $34-a-barrel price set by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, an indication that the government needs more money.

In addition to economic problems, Nigerian politicians face congressional and presidential elections this summer.

Nigeria is black Africa's most populous nation with an estimated 90 million people. Immigration director Lawa Sambo said Monday there were enough Nigerians to "build the nation on their own."

Under terms of the 1975 treaty establishing the 16-nation Economic Community of West African States — largely funded by Nigeria — citizens of member states can travel freely in the region.

During the oil boom in the 1970s, the Nigerian government tolerated the more than 2 million aliens who arrived to take jobs.

New evidence unearthed linking Bulgaria, KGB to terrorists

Hearst Feature Service

ROME — Exactly one year after Gen. James Dozier was freed from the Red Brigades, Italian magistrates have uncovered new evidence linking Bulgaria and the Soviet KGB to both the Red Brigades and the May 1981 plot to kill Pope John Paul II.

The case being put together by four separate magistrates no longer depends exclusively on the testimony of Mehmet Ali Agca, the Turkish terrorist who tried to assassinate the pope. Nor is it an accident that new evidence has suddenly come to light.

Interviews here with Judge Ilario Martella, the chief magistrate investigating the case, and other officials disclosed several of the avenues they are now exploring. The key informant is an Italian labor leader who was arrested in February 1982.

He is Luigi Scricciolo, who already has admitted to having been a spy for Bulgaria since the mid-1970s. He came up through the "Lotta Continua (Continuing Struggle)" movement that spawned the Red Brigades. He also has admitted knowing the assassin.

According to Italian law, Scricciolo had until midnight Sunday to take advantage of a provision for repentent terrorists that would grant him clemency from all but the espionage charges. According to the magistrates here, he "unloaded the sack."

That is an Italian expression for spilling the beans. The magistrate refused to publicly specify the new evidence of a Bulgarian connection to the shooting of the pope. But other sources indicated this was what has been learned:

(Bullet) Scricciolo was assigned by the Bulgarian secret service to be the "point man" in contacts with the Red Brigades. "The Bulgarians wanted to be in on the grilling of Dozier," an Italian judicial official said, "and Scricciolo was their man."

Was he more deeply involved in the planning of the Dozier kidnapping? Dozier was the chief U.S. officer assigned to NATO.

On the attacks against NATO installations in West Germany?

"We don't know," one source said here, "but he seems to have been a lot closer to attacks focusing on NATO objectives than anyone thought."

(Bullet) Scricciolo, as head of the international office of the UIL, the Socialist Labor Union, has admitted to being assigned chief go-between with Solidarity, the Polish free trade union movement.

"Do you realize what that means?" an official source here asked. "It meant a lot of contact with Lech Walesa. All those secret and sensitive things Waleska told him went right to the Bulgarians and the Soviets.

"It meant that when Walesa visited Rome (just prior to the assasination attempt on the pope), Scricciolo was at his side."

There even is speculation, unproven, that Agca checked into the same hotel and followed the same routine prior to Walesa's arrival as he did when a few days later he attempted to assasinate the pope.

If so, it conceivably could have been Scricciolo who made the arrangements for him.

"The Scricciolo case is no longer in the realm of probablity," another official here familiar with the case said. "Scricciolo worked for the Bulgarians doing at least espionage. That's rock hard.

"Also, that he was responsible for contacts with Italian terrorists and attempted contacts – that's rock hard. He, his wife and the Red Brigades all have said that is the case."

Unemployed man finds jewels, returns to owner

SAN DIEGO (AP) — An unemployed man with a pregnant wife found riches when he moved to San Diego — $50,000 worth of jewelry — but returned the gems to the grateful owner.

"It looked like they really had some value, so we called police right away," said Gerald O'Connell, 34, adding that his 26-year-old wife, Rebecca, and their 28-year-old roommate, Debra Lynch, shared in the decision.

O'Connell found the gems last Tuesday in a canvas tote bag along with a baby bottle, baby clothes and milk. He said he spotted the bag in the middle of the road while driving to the store.

"I stopped, threw it in the car and opened it up looking for some identification," O'Connell said Monday.

Inside were gold rings with precious gems, gold bracelets and a gold watch.

The bag belonged to restaurateur Guy Storniolo, O'Connell said. Storniolo plans to treat the O'Connells and their roommate to a sumptuous meal at his San Diego restaurant, the Mona Lisa.

"It was reward enough for them to get it (the jewelry) back so soon," said O'Connell. "They were grieving. I guess the jewelry has been in the family for years and years.

"They did say they were seriously thinking about getting a safe-deposit box," he said.

After O'Connell reported finding the bag, a police officer came to his house and took the tote. As the officer was leaving, a neighbor told him what happened to Storniolo, Robinson said.

When the restaurant owner identified the jewelry, the bag and the items were returned the same day they were lost.

O'Connell says Storniolo came over a couple of days later and thanked him and Mrs. O'Connell, who is expecting the couple's baby at the end of May.

O'Connell and his wife moved to San Diego from Whitefish, Mont., a month ago. "Basically, I've spent the whole month looking for a job," said O'Connell, a former kitchen manager at a Montana restaurant.

They moved to San Diego because there "just seemed to be a better opportunity for work," he said. "Plus, my wife's family all lives here, and with the baby coming, it's good to be close to the family."

O'Connell says the decision to call police about the discovery wasn't difficult.

"What's a person going to do with a bunch of jewelry?" he asked. "I just knew somebody was missing it. I remember once when I was in high school I found a wallet with $150 and I turned it in. That was a long time ago, but the owner was happy then, too."

Fair organizers sue lawyer over use of logo, names

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Organizers of the 1984 World's Fair have won a 10-day order halting sales of fair-related T-shirts and trinkets sold by competitors.

The order Monday by U.S. District Judge Peter H. Beer forbids attorney R. Gordon Logue Jr. from selling merchandise bearing any of nine names he registered in 1981 "or any other marks, logos or names confusingly similar to those of Louisiana World Exposition."

"Logue is selling shirts that contain a logo that is obviously and unmistakably associated with the fair or exposition that is scheduled to be held in New Orleans in 1984," the judge said.

Both Logue's logo and the official one use mostly blue and gray and contain a globe and a river. The merchandise being sold through Logue also includes the words "1984 New Orleans World's Fair" — one of nine names he registered with the secretary of state's office in 1981.

However, Louisiana World Exposition Inc. contends it has a legal lock on the phrase, because it has been used in connection with the fair since the mid 1970s.

"We're still fighting for the little guy," Logue said after the order. "Hopefully, he'll come out ahead."

POSITIVE THINKING

If strongly committed, goals become reality

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

It could just be that we fail to get the things we want in life simply because we don't care enough. It may be that idle wishing and lack of deep desire is what defeats us.

One of the wisest thinkers in American history was Professor William James, father of psychological science in the U.S. He said, "If you only care enough for a result you will most certainly obtain it." So it's an important question. How much do you want it?

That reminds me of the athletic coach who said, "The great men in sports are not the hold outs but rather the all outs." How much do you really want what you say you want? If the desire is strong enough to bring forth all your creative thinking, all your best effort, all your determinations you're in; otherwise you're out, still wistfully wishing.

When a wish is strong enough to be written down it becomes a goal and a committed goal means one is on the way to that goal becoming reality.

In speeches and in writing I have been suggesting that the positive way to success is to formulate a sharp, clearly defined goal, not a fuzzy vague wish. Then to write it on a card and put it in the shirt pocket which location is directly over the heart. Then read it several times every day especially just before going to sleep. Gradually this written goal will seep into the consciousness becoming an indigenous part of you. If you haven't a shirt with a pocket get one. A shirt without a pocket is no good to you as you climb the ladder to success.

I once knew a salesman named Charlie, an affable, easygoing and very likeable fellow. But unhappily Charlie never got anywhere. He just muddled along. Speaking as I do at sales and motivational rallies he would often turn up at these meetings. He was always building up my ego by telling me enthusiastically what a "terrific speech that was" and that he had "half a mind" to put into practice the success suggestions made in the talk.

Then Charlie would get onto an idea from someone and declare, "You know, I've got half a mind to give that one a try." Then it came, the reason for Charlie's inability to get anywhere, for his always hoping to succeed but never doing so.

"I've got it Charlie, I've got it," I exclaimed. "You are a half a minder. That's your problem. You've got to become not a half a minder but a whole minder, not a half out but a whole out. You must care, really care deeply, intensely care. Then your whole personality, your potentially great personality will project with force and power. Then goals will fall in your favor, one after another."

Charlie looked at me with a look of wonder on his face. "I see myself," he said hesitantly. "Yes, sir, for the first time in my life I really see myself. If my car worked on half its cylinders I would have turned it in long ago. And here I've been going along on partial power." So saying he wrote out a goal and handed it to me.

"Write it out in fewer words. Make it terse and succinct," I said.

Chewing his pencil he wrote the goal on another card and shoved it across the desk. "How's that?" he grunted.

"Perfect," I responded.

He stuck the card in his shirt pocket patting it as he did so. "Right over the heart," he said. "I get the message," and Charlie walked out to become the successful man he had it in him to be.

Reagan: Nation hungry for spiritual revival

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says Americans should study the Bible, and he suggests the federal budget would be easier to balance "if all of us simply tried to live up to the Ten Commandments and the Golden Rule."

Speaking to a convention of religious broadcasters Monday, Reagan said the nation is "hungry for a spiritual revival."

He repeated his calls for constitutional amendments banning abortion and permitting prayer in public schools, and renewed his support for legislation authorizing tuition tax credits for families that send children to private schools.

Urging Americans to read and study the Bible, Reagan said, "It is my firm belief that the enduring values presented in its pages have great meaning for each of us and our nation. The Bible can touch our hearts, order our minds and refresh our souls."

Reagan noted that the government spends billions of dollars each year on problems related to alcoholism, drug abuse and disease, and he said: "Has anyone stopped to consider that we might come closer to balancing the budget if all of us simply tried to live up to the Ten Commandments and the Golden Rule?"

Reagan said he understood it was "fashionable, in some circles," that government officials should not encourage others to read the Bible because of the constitutional separation of church and state.

But he said George Washington kissed the Bible at his inauguration.

Chagall's Bible

"I did not see the Bible, I dreamed it."

— Marc Chagall

The work was completed 25 years after it was begun. Commissioned in 1930 by publisher Ambroise Vollard, the art dealer who represented every noteworthy artist of the early 20th century, The Bible was finally completed and published in 1956. Much happened during those 25 years which made it appear as if the project might not ever be finished.

With the imminent threat of war hanging over Europe, the artist commissioned to do the illustrations, Marc Chagall, fled his adopted home of Paris in the late 1930s, leaving behind the 66 finished plates as well as the 39 which were in progress. It is believed that these plates rested safely in a Paris basement vault during the war and the years that followed until Chagall resumed work on them in 1952.

In 1939, Vollard was killed in an automobile accident. When Chagall returned to Paris from the United States where he had fled, the project was resumed by Teriade, with Chagall reworking the remaining 39 plates with Haasen, who printed them.

Forty of the 105 etchings, which are the property of the Perkins School of Theology at Southern Methodist University, are currently on display in conjunction with the Gutenberg Bible at Midland College's McCormick Gallery. The exhibitions close Sunday.

Born in 1887, Chagall spent his childhood in a large Jewish family in the village of Vitebsk, Russia. He settled in Paris in 1910 and, through friendships with Montparnasse artists, evolved his own vision of painting from Amedeo Modigliani's erotic humanism, Robert Delaunay's orphism and Guillaume Apollinaire's theories of cubism.

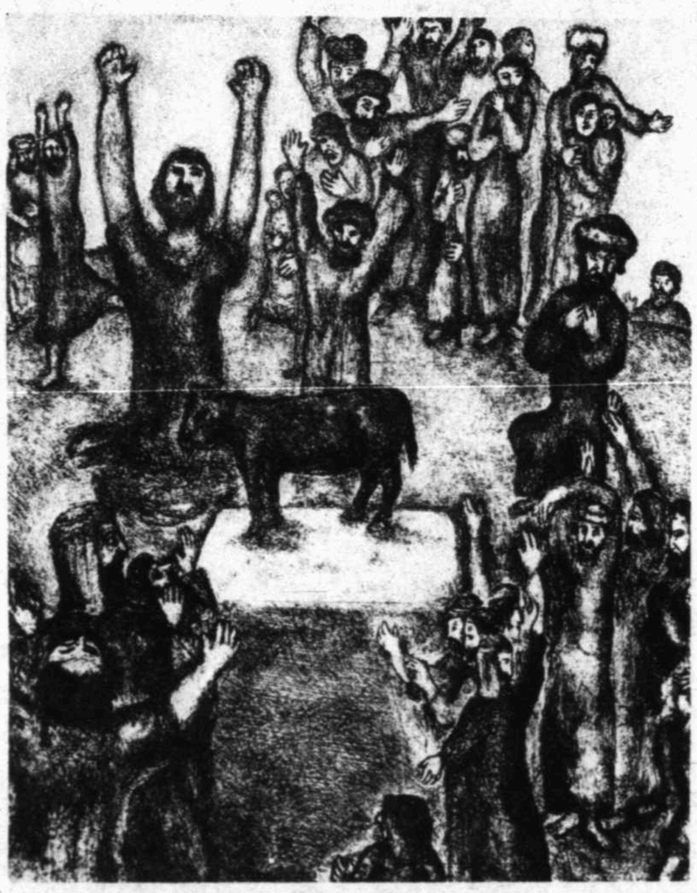

Chagall created an art whose flat composition of geometric forms, as in cubism, and whose dynamic interplay of splinters of intense colors, as in orphism, conferred on animals and inanimate objects, on human and animal figures, equal aesthetic status.

He was to become a master colorist, one of the ablest in an able time. Although the works on display at MC are not in color, the actual etchings used for the printing Chagall embellished with watercolors.

It was his early childhood which was to most influence his work on The Bible. From viewing these etchings, it is apparent that Chagall has outgrown his early cubist influence.

The overwhelming quality about them is the strong feeling one gets that he is reliving his childhood experiences in Russia. The influence of the Russian folk tales and Jewish proverbs is very evident. His vision in creating these etchings is certainly informed by the strong rabbinical instructions he received as a child; teachings which were so intense that his imagination shaped and reshaped them for years without diminishing their power.

TO ALL INTERESTED PERSONS

You are hereby notified of the opportunity to request a public hearing and/or submit written comment concerning construction permit applications C-9101 and PSD-TX-466 by L&B Oil Company, Incorporated, to construct a natural gas sweetening plant near Garden City, Glasscock County, Texas. The proposed location is about 14 miles north-northwest of Garden City. The proposed facility will emit sulfur dioxide in amounts significant enough to require a Prevention of Significant Deterioration (PSD) permit review. Other pollutants to be emitted are: volatile organic compounds and nitrogen oxides. Emissions of these compounds did not trigger PSD review.

The Executive Director of the Texas Air Control Board has determined that the proposed source will not violate any state or federal air quality regulations and will not have any significant adverse impact on soils, vegetation or visibility. He, therefore, has made the preliminary determination to issue this permit.

The degree of PSD increment predicted to be consumed by the proposed facility and other increment consuming sources in the area are as follows:

Particulate matter is not emitted from this facility.

A copy of the administrative record, including all materials submitted by the applicant and additional information, are available at the office of Mr. Charley Sims, Acting Regional Supervisor, Texas Air Control Board Region VI, at 1901 East 37th Street, Suite 101, Odessa, Texas 79762 telephone number (915) 367-3871 and at the Texas Air Control Board at 6330 Highway 290 East, Austin, Texas 78723. Interested parties may inspect these materials during regular business hours and submit written comments and/or request for hearing to the Executive Director of the Texas Air Control Board. Requests for hearing must be in writing and shall state the nature of the issues proposed to be raised in the hearing. Comments should be limited to the air pollution aspects of the proposed project and should not concern land use aspects which are beyond the jurisdiction of the Texas Air Control Board. All air pollution related comments received in writing by February 13, 1983 will be considered by the Board in making its final decision on these applications. All comments will be available for public inspection at the Texas Air Control Board office in Austin.

Violence mars nationwide truckers' strike

By The Associated Press

Violence escalated overnight in a nationwide strike by independent truckers when one man was killed and another wounded by snipers in unrelated shootings as they wheeled their rigs through the darkness, authorities said.

A third driver was in critical condition after being wounded by a sniper, and a teen-ager suffered a fractured skull when a brick bounded off a tractor-trailer into her family's car, as violence and acts of sabotage in 10 states marked the first day of the protest against higher fuel taxes and user fees.

But the initial success of the strike appeared limited Monday. Officials in many states reported near-normal truck traffic, some drivers expressed more fear of militant strikers than any desire to stop work themselves, and shippers reported no major problems moving their goods.

George Franklin Capps, 33, was shot and killed by a single rifle shot about 11:30 p.m. Monday just outside Newton Grove, N.C., as he was driving a truck along U.S. 701, said Sampson County sheriff's deputy Gerald Tadlock.

Officers said bullets from a high-powered rifle struck two other trucks on U.S. 701 about nine miles away, knocking out the windshield on one vehicle. Their drivers were not hurt.

A tank truck driver received minor cuts about 4 a.m. today when a sniper's bullet shattered glass and metal just behind his head while he was driving his rig near Baltimore, police said.

James Edwards, 62, of Roseboro, N.C., was treated for minor injuries at South Baltimore General Hospital and released, said Pat Gainey, a Baltimore Harbor Tunnel police officer.

"That guy was lucky," said Baltimore Police Sgt. Joseph Darchicourt. "He just got grazed. That's when you know someone's on your side." A hospital nursing supervisor said it was unclear if Edwards' wounds were from the bullet or the glass.

In Utah, truck driver Howard N. Adams, 45, of Riverside, Calif., was listed in critical but stable condition today after he was shot in the chest as he unloaded his rig in Brigham City. Authorities said they were uncertain if the shooting was strike-related.

"We don't even know where the shot came from or anything as yet," said Police Chief J.N. Herbert. "In talking to the driver, he gave us no information that anyone was looking for him."

State police in Pennsylvania and Michigan said two truckers suffered minor facial cuts when rocks or bricks were tossed through their windshields while they were rolling down interstates. Nails were spread on an Oregon highway.

Reports of violence came from Pennsylvania, Illinois, Alabama, Mississippi, North Carolina, Utah, Oregon, West Virginia, Michigan and Tennessee. In Maryland, state police said an early report of a gunshot proved to be a tire blowout.

Although traffic was reported normal at some truck stops and weigh stations, others said activity had slowed to a crawl.

In Missouri, Highway Patrol spokesman Lt. Ralph Biele said highway traffic was down from 10 percent to 60 percent.

But in Nebraska, night supervisor Ron Christiensen at Bosselman Truck Plaza near Grand Island said, "We've done good business today. Everything seems to be rolling just fine."

Some drivers in Nebraska said they would park their rigs out of fear of trouble. "I think the rough weather kept some off the road, but I'm sure others are parked, waiting to see what's going to happen," said Scott Conger, manager of Sapp Bros. Truck Plaza near Omaha. "But I don't things here are going to be slow because those guys can't afford to pull off."

Mike Parkhurst, president of the Independent Truckers Association, which claims to represent about 30,000 of the nation's 100,000 owner-operators, estimated that up to 70 percent of the independents were participating in the strike, based on a sampling of trucker sentiment last week.

Prospecting legislature's first concern

AUSTIN (AP) — A bill to end bargain mineral claims on state land is the first measure sent to Gov. Mark White's desk by the 1983 Legislature.

House members, in a 139-0 Monday vote, joined the Senate in calling for the repeal of state law allowing cheap "prospecting permits" on state land.

Under a 1917 state law, developers can look for minerals on state lands by paying a $1 fee and 10 cents per acre. The developer could take any oil or gas found for $2 per acre and a royalty of 12.5 percent of the oil production, or 10 percent of the gas production.

The law is an attempt to get more money from oil and gas produced on state lands. The money from the leases goes into the state's Permanent School Fund, which helps pay for public school education.

Last year, a Fort Worth company used the law to claim a lease on a potentially valuable tract in Eastland County. West Texas Minerals obtained a "prospecting permit" on 180 acres, a tract circled by 42 producing wells, according to Land Commissioner Garry Mauro.

The tract could produce $12 million worth of oil, Mauro said. The state wanted to sell the lease for a $32,000 bonus payment and royalties of 85 percent of the oil production.

But West Texas Minerals found that state law allowed the company to go to a county clerk and get the prospecting permit, file it with the land commissioner and pay the $2 per acre fee and the low royalty. The courts upheld the company's right to the lease.

El Paso Sen. Tati Santiesteban's bill, if signed by White, would require oil companies to bid for such drilling rights, rather than merely file for permits.

"I am pleased that we were able to act so quickly to end this major threat to the public schools of Texas," Santiestaban said after the House approval Monday. "Had others been able to take advantage of this loophole in our laws, it could have been disasterous and cost the state millions of dollars in lost oil and gas revenues."

The bill got to the House floor only because White tagged it as an emergency. Constitutional rules bar the House from considering legislation during the first 60 days of the session.

Rep. Joe Hanna, D-Breckenridge, carried Santiesteban's bill in the House, where it passed with little discussion.

The new law would not void the lease granted West Texas Minerals. A settlement negotiated by the state and the company will pay the company about $5 million.

Bush urges Soviets to sign arms pact

BERLIN (AP) — Vice President George Bush urged the Soviet Union today to accept President Reagan's invitation to sign a pact banning medium-range nuclear weapons. He said U.S. negotiators will continue "pounding away" for Soviet acceptance of Reagan's proposals.

"I believe the Soviet leadership should seize the moment and join us in banning the weapons," Bush said at a news conference. "Ours is a moral position and we (NATO members) stand together in this position."

But Novosti, an official Soviet news agency, today denounced the Reagan offer to meet to with Soviet leader Yuri V. Andropov "wherever and whenever he wants" to sign a disarmament pact. The agency called the proposal a rehash of the "zero option," which the Kremlin already has turned down.

Bush on Monday night responded to Soviet overtures to Western European officials and peace groups by reading an "open letter to the people of Europe" in which Reagan made his offer.

Novosti commentator Vladimir Alexeyev said "Mr. Bush's statements so far indicate that the Reagan administration continues to be oblivious of the fact that people expect of it not pompous but empty eulogies on the need to reduce arms, but concrete deeds to further the same."

Bush, who visited the Berlin Wall today, acknowledged that Reagan's offer to ban all land-based, intermediate-range nuclear weapons amounted to a restatement of his "zero option" plan.

"That is no reason that we should not in Geneva be pounding away" to try to get the Soviets to accept the proposal, he said, referring to U.S.-Soviet arms reduction talks in Switzerland.

"What Reagan has done, I hope, is laid to rest the argument that he is unwilling to meet with Andropov," Bush said. "This extends a hand, reaches out, so that we can have a meeting to ban an entire new generation of nuclear weapons."

Bush is making the second stop of a 12-day European tour intended to win popular support for NATO policies and offset opposition to the planned deployment of new U.S. nuclear missiles in Western Europe.

About 8,000 Berlin leftists marched in a cold rain Monday to protest U.S. foreign policy. Most of their placards were directed against U.S. policy in Latin America, but the marchers also demonstrated against the NATO missile plan.

Reagan said in his message that he asked Bush, "in the city where East meets West, to propose to Soviet General Secretary Andropov that he and I meet wherever and whenever he wants in order to sign an agreement banning U.S. and Soviet intermediate-range, land-based nuclear missile weapons from the face of the Earth."

"I make this offer out of a conviction that such an agreement would serve the interests of both sides and, most importantly, that the people of Europe want nothing more," he said. "I urge Mr. Andropov to accept it."

In Washington, deputy White House press secretary Lyndon Allin said Reagan was not introducing a new proposal but rather restating his willingness to sign a pact with Andropov if the Soviet Union changes its mind and accepts the U.S. "zero-option" plan.

The proposal would have NATO cancel plans to deploy 572 new, U.S.-built Pershing 2 and cruise missiles if the Soviets scrap their entire arsenal of 300-plus medium-range rockets based in Europe. The Soviets object to the proposal because it leaves French and British nuclear forces intact.

There was no immediate official Soviet reaction, but Soviet arms negotiator Yuli Kvitsinsky gave reporters in Geneva a curt "No" today when asked if he thought Reagan's letter represented a good offer.

Reagan's letter appeared to be an effort to try to assume the offensive in public debate over nuclear weapons from the Soviet Union, which has made a series of disarmament overtures aimed at increasing European opposition to the NATO missile plan.

During a visit to Bonn last month, Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko offered to destroy part of the Soviets' medium-range SS-20 arsenal if the NATO deployment, which is to begin in December, were scrapped entirely. He advised West Germany to steer its own course independent of the United States.

Before reading Reagan's letter to 600 guests at a dinner, Bush said in a speech that "Soviet SS-20s have been sprouting like fields of asparagus" since 1977. He said Western Europe must be willing to station new nuclear rockets on its soil to avoid war.

"If we are to be credible in our arms negotiations, the alliance must be united in its determination to deploy the intermediate force systems if necessary," he said. "Otherwise the Soviet Union will simply have no incentive at all to negotiate."

West German reaction to Reagan's overture was mixed, as it was to Gromyko's visit.

Chancellor Helmut Kohl, who supports the NATO missile deployment, told reporters he hoped "that this readiness for a summit falls on an open ear and finds an outstretched hand."

Reagan indicates awareness of economic ills

SAINT LOUIS (AP) — President Reagan, expressing confidence that the long-sought economic recovery is underway, said today that Americans "are beginning to receive the payoff we have all been waiting for."

Speaking to an audience of businessmen on a one-day trip intended to demonstrate his awareness of the nation's economic problems, Reagan also sought to counter an interpretation of his State of the Union address that hinted at a change in his economic policy.

The president, who said a week ago that government should take the lead in restoring the economy — a speech line that brought Democrats in his congresional audience to their feet in cheers — said today "some people seemed to think I was advocating a return to the old ways. I didn't mean anything of the kind.

"I meant, government was largely responsible for creating the economic mess of recent years; now it must recognize that and start un-doing the damage it has done."

The trip, one in a recent series of one-day excursion, was intended to alter the impression that the president "doesn't know how bad it is out there," said his chief of staff, James A. Baker III.

Today's trip comes just a day after Reagan submitted to Congress a fiscal 1984 budget proposal totaling $848.5 billion, with the entire increase devoted to Pentagon spending and higher interest charges on the national debt.

In the speech to the businessmen's luncheon, Reagan sought to tackle declining support for his handling of the economy by drawing attention to economic good news.

"We are beginning to receive the payoff we have all been waiting for — the reward for painful but essential steps to cure a disease that was crippling America and undermining our security." the president said, echoing forecasts from his economic advisers that the recovery will be evident in the next few months.

The president sharply criticized efforts to remove from his tax plan a provision intended to keep taxpayers from being pushed into higher brackets by inflation and cost-of-living raises.

"Repealing indexing is just a sleight of hand," he said.

"Rather than bring spending down closer to revenues," he added, those who would do away with indexing would "simply raise revenues the sneaky way — by using inflation to push every working family in America toward higher and higher tax brackets."

Reagan, who this week proposed standby tax increases to take effect in October 1985 if the the spiraling national debt is not brought under control, said, however, "We aren't reducing tax rates in 1981, '82 and '83 just so we can turn around and raise the rates in '84, '85 and every year after that.

Leftist guerrillas take largest town yet in El Salvadoran war

MERCEDES UMANA, El Salvador (AP) — Leftist guerrillas have claimed their biggest prize of the 39-month-old war, seizing the city of Berlin after two days of heavy fighting and bombing that witnesses said left the town in flaming ruins.

Journalists coming out of Berlin reported seeing the corpses of two soldiers and said they saw at least three policemen taken prisoner. The Berlin garrison numbered about 100 government troops and police.

The guerrillas' clandestine Radio Venceremos said 22 prisoners had been taken. The military offered no immediate comment on the fighting, the claims of prisoners or casualties.

They seized several boxes of ammunition and new rifles that had been stored inside and declared total control over the city. Berlin, whose population normally is about 30,000, was largely in flames by that time and the journalists said the claim of control appeared justified at least temporarily.

They said the guerrillas vowed to stand and fight if the government tried to recapture Berlin.

Late Monday, about 500 of the 2,000 residents who were unable to flee the city when the fighting broke out were huddled into temporary structures set up by the Red and Green Cross.

Large white crosses were stretched out on the street to prevent air force bombers from accidentally bombing civilian targets.

Until this week Berlin, about 70 miles east of the capital of San Salvador and seven miles south of here, was untouched by guerrillas in their war against the government.

In the attack that began at midnight Saturday, about 500 rebels overpowered less than 100 government forces, including national guardsmen, policemen and local members of the civil defense force.

The U.S.-supported government fought the guerrillas' attack on Berlin with bombing runs that began before dawn Sunday and ended at about 3 p.m. EST Monday.

Tower, others fight military pay freeze

By PHILLIP SWANN

From Our Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — President Reagan's proposed $274 billion defense budget for fiscal 1984 calls for a freeze on military pay and a continued limit on cost-of-living adjustments for non-disability military retirees under 62.

Military supporters in Congress announced plans Monday to fight the president's recommendation. Texas Sen. John Tower, head of the Senate Armed Services Committee, introduced a bill that would give military personnel a 4 percent increase effective April 1984.

"(The freeze) would have a devastating impact on morale and retention of personnel," Tower said.

The Pentagon budget, which requests an overall $34 billion increase, was released Monday as part of the president's $848 billion economic blueprint for fiscal 1984. The president projects a $188 billion deficit in 1984.

Pentagon officials contend that the "highly successful" all-volunteer army permitted the administration to hold down defense spending by postponing a military pay increase. The pay raise, the administration believes, is no longer needed to get and keep people in the service because of the high unemployment rate.

"The success our (all volunteer army) has enjoyed in the past two years enabled us to look to military compensation as one way to help reduce the large federal deficit," Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger said in the department's budget report.

Congressional leaders this month warned Reagan that his budget would lack credibility unless he favored cuts in some defense programs.

"We realize that we are asking for a substantial sacrifice from our military people and that we accept some risk that recruiting and retention will suffer. But the need to reduce federal spending is clear," Weinberger stated.

The administration does propose a contingency fund in 1985 for military pay and benefits if the all-volunteer army falters.

The Pentagon last year advocated a 7.4 percent pay increase for military personnel, effective October 1983. But Reagan, seeking ways to cut the defense budget, reportedly overruled his military advisers in January.

After disclosure of Reagan's decision, many congressional military observers predicted that the more liberal 98th Congress would support a smaller pay increase.

However, some of those observers now say Reagan's call for a freeze may go too far.

"Congress won't buy that (a freeze)," said one congressional aide to a Texas congressman whose district includes a military base. "It may come down to paying the PFCs or buying the MX (missile.)"

But a top aide to a key member on the House Armed Services Committee says Congress ultimately will decide that guns come first.

"Not giving the raise makes more sense than scrapping a weapons systems we may need in battle next year," said the aide. "We can wait a year for pay but we can't afford to wait a year for the weapon."

Tower, R-Texas, argues that his proposed pay increase, which would go into effect April 1984, would cost $552 million.

"With all the money in the defense budget, an extra $552 million is not that hard to absorb," said Tower press secretary Linda Hill.

Rep. Thomas Loeffler, R-Hunt, also predicted that the freeze would not pass Congress. He said a four percent increase would be "fair."

Submission of the administration's budget plan for fiscal 1984 is the first step in a long and complex budget process that will remain unfinished until late in the calendar year. Many of the figures are likely to change as the plan wends its way through Congress.

– The Pentagon estimates it will spend $1.8 trillion between 1984 and 1988. The budget recommendation for 1988 is $425.2 billion.

"This program is large, and we are well aware that it is being proposed during a period when economic conditions require constrained or reduced federal spending," Weinberger stated. "However, we must not lose sight of the fact that the defense budget is most appropriately measured against the reality of the threat to our national security."

– There would not be any cost-of-living adjustments for military retirees in 1984 and Reagan said he will offer legislation that would round all military retiree benefits to the next lowest dollar.

– The administration requests funds for the procurement of the Pershing II missile, the new B-IB bomber and the MX missile, which is called the "Peacekeeper" missile in the budget report.

– The Pentagon plans to place 26 new B-IB bombers at Abilene's Dyess Air Force Base in late 1985. The B-IB command crew training squad would also be stationed at Dyess.

West asked to make 'first strike' pledge

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former defense leaders in Germany, Britain and the United States called today for a declaration by the West that it would not be the first to use nuclear weapons against the Soviet Union.

And they called for a buildup of non-nuclear forces by the Western allies to back up such a declaration.

The plan was being outlined at news conferences in Washington, London and Bonn. It was developed by a committee of the Union of Concerned Scientists headed by retired Vice Adm. John Marshall Lee, who served in NATO, the United Nations, the Pentagon and the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency during a 38-year military career.

Among those scheduled to spell out the plan at a Washington news conference were Lee and Robert S. McNamara, former U.S. defense secretary.

In London, Field Marshal Lord Carver, former chief of defense staff, and Lord Zuckerman, former chief scientific adviser to the British government, were joining the effort.

In Bonn, the scheduled participants included two retired West German generals, Karl-Christian Krause and Jochen Loser, and McGeorge Bundy, former special assistant to President Lyndon B. Johnson.

For 25 years, the Soviet Union has proposed that both superpowers pledge themselves not to be the first to use nuclear weapons. But the Reagan administration has argued that it could not forswear responding with nuclear weapons if the Warsaw Pact nations launched an attack against Western Europe.

Such an attack might be successful, the Reagan strategists have said, and therefore the threat must be staved off by the prospect of nuclear retaliation.

When the issue rose last April, Alexander M. Haig Jr., then secretary of state, said a renunciation of the first use of nuclear weapons in a conventional war in Europe would be "tantamount to making Europe safe for conventional aggression."

But the Lee committee disagreed that the Soviet bloc was so strong as to make it impossible for the West to renounce a nuclear response to a non-nuclear attack.

"The Warsaw Pact's superiority in troops and equipment in Central Europe does not attain a numerical level where an attack could be launched with good confidence of success," its report said.

Weinberger defends defense budget

Weinberger was scheduled to testify today before the Senate Armed Services Committee in the first of three days of appearances before congressional committees.

Weinberger is set to defend Reagan's proposal to spend $238.6 billion on defense in the fiscal year starting Oct. 1. The defense budget represents a $29.7-billion increase at a time when most non-defense spending is being frozen or cut.

Gen. John Vessey Jr., chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, was scheduled to appear with Weinberger.

At a press conference Monday, Weinberger said the defense spending blueprint is "a realistic reassessment of our present and future military capabilities in the face of the growing threat" from the Soviet Union.

But Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., has called for cuts of up to $15 billion from the president's proposal, and there were renewed attacks Monday on the Pentagon budget.

Rep. Jack Edwards, R-Ala., the ranking Republican on the House defense appropriations subcommittee, predicted "reasonable and appropriate cuts" in defense.

Weinberger, as his news conference, said congressional critics sometimes suggest making spending cuts without having a detailed plan on how to achieve them.

"I asked many times, 'What is the $15 billion to consist of,'" Weinberger said. "The answer is, 'we don't know.'"

Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., and Rep. Jim Wright, D-Texas, have suggested that defense spending be increased 5 percent after inflation — not 10 percent as proposed by Reagan.

While the Pentagon got almost everything it wanted, one thing eliminated was a pay raise, part of a government-wide salary cap the White House hopes will help keep down rising deficits.

Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, the panel's chairman, Monday proposed restoration of a 4 percent pay hike for most people in the armed forces.

Tower's bill calls for giving 4 percent pay raises to most of the 2.1 million members of the armed services in April 1984.

A pay freeze would have a "devastating" effect on military morale, Tower argued. "A small pay raise, even if delayed, would send a positive signal of our continued concern and commitment."

Abilene air base will be first to receive B-1, Stenholm says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dyess Air Force Base at Abilene, Texas, will be the first base in the country to receive the new B-1 bomber, according to Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Texas.

Stenholm was informed by the the Air Force that 26 B-1B bombers would be stationed at the base by mid-1985, a spokeswoman for Stenholm said Monday. The result will be an additional 510 military personnel and 20 more civilian personnel employed at the base, she said.

President Reagan's proposed budget for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1 includes $8.4 million for new construction at the base to house the B-1, said the spokeswoman, Jamie Clayton.

Ms. Clayton said 13 B-52 bombers currently operating from the base would be transferred elsewhere.

Bond set for 17-year-old Midlander who led police on high-speed chase

A youth who led police on a high-speed chase early Saturday morning remained in jail today under $20,000 bond set Monday by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine.

Randy Thomas Stephens, 17, of Route 6, Midland is charged with aggravated assault on a police officer, auto theft, attempting to elude arrest, violation of probation and several traffic offenses.

He was arrested about 2 a.m. Saturday after leading police on a chase along Loop 250 that reached speeds of 100 mph and didn't end until four patrol cars had been damaged.

The pickup truck Stephens was driving had been stolen, according to police, who said they attempted to stop him after seeing him driving the wrong way on a one-way street.

Fire of suspicious origin did minor damage to three lockers and their contents at San Jacinto Junior High, Garfield Street and Community Lane, about 5:15 p.m. Monday. An arson investigation is under way.

Weinberger outlines nuclear weapons policy, long-range needs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon needs to spend $18 billion on long-range nuclear weapons even though it is unlikely either the United States or the Soviet Union could actually "win" a nuclear war, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger says.

Weinberger's outline of U.S. nuclear weapons policy was aimed at refuting critics who say the administration has drafted a plan to fight and win a protracted nuclear war.

In his annual report to Congress Monday, Weinberger portrayed the current administration's policy on nuclear arms as a continuation of previous administrations.

"We believe that neither side could win such a war," Weinberger said.

Until 1974, the basis for American policy was the concept of "mutual assured destruction," or MAD, which held that neither America nor the Soviet Union would start a war because either side would still have enough weapons left after a first strike to devastate the attacker.

But in 1974, the United States began moving to a policy of "flexible response," in which smaller nuclear weapons were developed that gave a president a range of options for responding to an attack strike.

As part of his defense buildup, Reagan has proposed modernizing the nation's long-range nuclear weapons force, including replacing the aging Minuteman and Titan land-based missiles with the MX, building the powerful new Trident II missile for nuclear subs, and building two new nuclear bombers, the B-1 and the "stealth" plane.

About one-third of the $18 billion for the strategic buildup would go for the MX missile.

The administration's plans have been attacked by advocates of a nuclear freeze, who want both the United States and Soviets to stop building new weapons.

Weinberger said, "The movement for a nuclear freeze has been inspired in part by the mistaken belief that the United States has been steadily piling up more and more nuclear weapons."

In fact, his report said, the number of weapons and their firepower has declined steadily over the past 20 years.

What the report didn't say is that one reason for the decline is that the U.S. atomic arms have become so accurate that fewer weapons are needed to hit enemy targets.

The United States and the Soviets are now involved in two sets of arms limitation talks in Geneva, aimed at reducing intermediate-range nuclear arms in Europe and long-range weapons.

The report said "one of the principals ploys" used by Soviet propagandists in the public relations battle surrounding the talks is that there are U.S. plans to limit a nuclear war to Europe.

"Nothing could be further from the truth," said the report.

The United States has long refused to rule the first use of atomic weapons in Europe.

New home sales worse than ever; Have to get better, optimistic experts say

Sales of new houses fell last year to the lowest level since the government began keeping track 20 years ago, but some economists are predicting a turnaround.

A goverment report Monday said sales of new single-family houses dropped 8.5 percent in December to close out a year in which 413,000 new houses were sold. That full-year total was down 5.3 percent from 1981 and the lowest on record.

The increase in new house prices was held to less than 1 percent last year. The median price was $69,300.

The government had said last week that builders started work on just 1,061,000 houses last year, the fewest in 36 years. The slump in the housing industry was tied directly to high interest rates, which discouraged builders and buyers alike.

"The housing depression is over and recovery is clearly on the way," said Jack Carlson, chief economist at the National Association of Realtors in Washington, D.C.

Michael Sumichrast, chief economist at the National Association of Home Builders, said he believes interest rates will fall further, "and that will help" stimulate home building and sales. He predicted sales this year would hit at least 535,000.

In other economic developments Monday:

—President Reagan sent Congress his $848.5 billion budget for fiscal 1984. Congressional leaders made clear the president's proposed cuts in social programs and his $30 billion increase for defense will run into trouble.

—Chrysler Corp. announced it has called back to work 233 autoworkers in Michigan, Ohio and Alabama because of increased production plans. They are in addition to 585 workers the automaker called back from indefinite layoff last week.

—J.C. Penney Co. Inc. unveiled a $1 billion facelifting program that will push the nation's third-largest retailer out of the auto care and appliance business by the end of the year. The change will put about 8,000 of Penney's 187,000 employees out of work, the company said.

—Federal Bankruptcy Judge John Flowers approved Braniff International's plan to lease 30 planes to Pacific Southwest Airlines, which hopes to hire up to 2,000 former Braniff employees, and cleared an agreement to partially repay creditors owed an estimated $1 billion by the grounded airline.

—Continental Airlines, trying to cope with heavy losses, announced it is laying off 2,000 employees and will cut back on the number of miles it flies by 15 percent. Continental, based in Los Angeles, reported losses of $60 million in 1981 and $23 million in the first nine months of 1982. The carrier has 13,800 employees.

—The American Iron and Steel Institute said steel production fell to 1.291 million tons in the week ended Jan. 29, a decrease of 1.7 percent from the previous week's 1.313 million tons. The industry's production amounted to 44.5 percent of capacity during the week, compared with 45.3 percent in the previous week.

—Gulf Oil Corp. said it was lowering the price it offers for domestic crude oil by $1 a barrel, effective today. If other American oil companies follow Gulf's lead, a $1-a-barrel drop in U.S. crude prices would likely lower prices for gasoline and other products made from crude. It also may trigger cuts in crude prices in other oil-producing nations. No other companies announced price reductions.

—Starting today, the interest rate paid on six-month savings certificates sold by savings institutions goes up to 8.725 percent from 8.644 percent the previous week. The rate at commercial banks rises to 8.475 percent from 8.394 percent.

—Silver soared above $14 a troy ounce for the first time in more than two years and gold climbed to a 22-month high of $510 an ounce. Gold for current delivery was up $15.30 at the close on the New York Commodity Exchange. Silver, on Comex, closed up 63 cents at $14.25.

Tax on gains from sale of residence

Fourth in a series of "tax tip" articles provided by the Permian Basin Chapter of the Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants.

Q. My company transferred me to Texas this year from California. When I sold my house in California, I made a $50,000 profit. Is this profit taxable for Federal income tax purpose?

A. Under certain circumstances, the Internal Revenue Code requires the gain on the sale of a personal residence to be postponed. The deferral works this way: John Doe buys a house in California for $60,000. He lives in it for five years, then sells it for $110,000 when he is transferred to Texas by his employer. If he spends $110,000 or more on his new residence within twenty-four months of the date of sale, the $50,000 gain will not be taxable this year.

The gain is used to reduce the tax basis in the new residence. This means John Doe may be required to pay capital gains tax when he sells his new house for more than $60,000. He can defer payment again if he invests the proceeds in another new residence. The only restriction is that he cannot defer the gain on more than one house within a period beginning two years before and ending two years after the date of sale. An exception may apply if a subsequent sale results from starting work at a new place of business.

For more information on this and other income tax questions, attend the "You and Your Income Tax" class sponsored by the Permian Basin Chapter of the Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants. The class, scheduled for Tuesday, February 8th, from 7:00 to 10:00 p.m. is presented as a public service.

Classes will be held at Midland College in the Allison Fine Arts Building. To register send $2.00 with your name and address to Taxpayer Education, P.O. Box 151, Midland, Texas 79702. Pre-registration is encouraged, but walk-in registration will be accepted.

Continental Airlines laying off 2,000

Hearst Feature Service

Struggling to prevent mounting losses, Continental Airlines said it is cutting operating expenses and overhead by laying off 2,000 employees and cutting back the number of miles it flies by 15 percent.

"The economy has not improved over the last year and a half," said Bruce Hicks, Continental spokesman.

Stock market gains

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices staged a late rally to post their third straight gain Monday as investors studied President Reagan's budget proposals.

Shares of General Electric, J.C. Penney and Texas In- struments paced the advance, which came on relatively light trading volume.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, almost unchanged for much of the day, closed 10.95 higher at 1,075.70. The average finished the first month of 1983 with a net gain of 29.26 points.

Turnover on the New York Stock Exchange hit a four-week low of 67.14 million shares, against 89.49 million Friday.

The Reagan budget for the year beginning next Oct. 1 proj- ected gaping government defi- cits, and warned that they must be "decisively and steadily re- duced." But with all the som- ber notes it sounded, analysts said, the budget message contained no big surprises for in- vestors.

There was more upbeat news for stock traders last Friday, when the Commerce Depart- ment reported that its index of leading economic indicators rose 1.5 percent in December, for its biggest increase in more than two years.

With that barometer of busi- ness activity showing gains in eight of the last nine months, a good many economists said it was likely that a recovery from the recession had begun.

General Electric, coming off a 4⅜ gain Friday, rose another 3⅝ to 103¼ in active trading. Late last week the company announced plans to sell most of its Utah International sub- sidiary, and to concentrate in the future on high-growth tech- nology and service businesses.

J.C. Penney, meanwhile, jumped 3¾ to 52. The company plans a $1 billion facelifting to change the merchandising em- phasis of its large and medium- sized shopping center outlets.

Texas Instruments, which in- troduced a "professional" per- sonal computer, climbed 11⅛ to 176.

At the Big Board, gold and silver stocks soared as the prices of those precious metals climbed to their highest levels since early 1981. Gold was up $15.30 an ounce, at $510.10, and silver 63 cents an ounce, at $14.25, on the Commodity Ex- change in New York.

ASA picked up 3¾ to 78¾; Campbell Red Lake Mines 2⅛ to 30½; Homestake Mining 1⅞ to 61¾; Hecla Mining 2¼ to 25⅞, and Sunshine Mining 1¼ to 17¼.

About four issues rose in price for every three that de- clined on the Big Board, and the exchange's composite index gained .40 to 83.75.

Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on re- gional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, total- ed 78.37 million shares.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrials added .89 to 163.52, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was up .79 at 145.30.

The Amex market value in- dex rose 2.50 to 362.39, and the NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market closed at 248.35, up 1.42.

Cotton

Grain

HOUSTON (AP) — Wheat, $4.48-4.54; sorghum, $5.30-5.39; corn, no bids; soybeans, $6.14¼-6.15½.

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Export wheat $4.52—4.57. Domestic milo 5.94—6.04. Export milo 5.39—5.44. Yellow corn 3.43—3.48. Oats 2.43—2.48. Soybeans 6.14—6.19.

BUSINESS MIRROR

Bad habits may tell nation's budget tale

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK — Along with the annual bustle and bluster of budgets there arises anew the question of President Reagan's ability to slow the pace of spending in social programs, and in fact spending in general.

The good intentions are there, the rhetoric too, and even a plan. Whether Congress and the public goes along is another matter, because cuts are easier made on paper than implemented in the real world.

It is much easier, as the nation has learned, to run up big debts for future generations rather than bite the bullet and pay the bills now.

The president proposes "workfare" for certain welfare recipients, a six-month delay in raises for food-stamp and Social Security recipients, and a one-year freeze on federal pay and retirement benefits increases.

Reagan has lots of ammunition to defend such moves, including evidence that Social Security expenditures this year might be nearly six times and Civil Service retirement eight times what they were in 1970.

But, with the constituent strength of the elderly growing, can he make such moves stick? And can he demand work from some welfare recipients who have grown accustomed to no more work than just signing up for benefits?

In short, can the clock be stopped and even, perhaps, moved back a bit?

That problem is not unique to the U.S. budget either, and it isn't just elected officials who find it difficult to deal with. It arises whenever human expectations are raised, and then threatened. And in unlikely places.

The U.S. financial community, an outspoken critic of domestic social spending, finds that having lent money to lift poor-nation living standards, it cannot now foreclose in spite of delinqencies. Its solution: Lend more.

That too is the "solution" often offered by Congress in dealing with restraints on spending of any sort that might displease its constituents, a weakness exploited by Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger.

If Congress really wants to cut defense spending, he suggested, perhaps they might start with port-barrel items that benefit mainly their own constituency and that the Defense Department feels are unnecessary.

But the biggest constituency of all might be that for social spending programs, the very programs in which the administration sees the possibility of holding the line. And biggest of these is Social Security.

When first developed, Social Security was meant as a supplemental retirement insurance program. Now it is a so-called entitlement, and for many people it is the major source of retirement income..

Medicare, Medicade and food stamps have developed along similar routes.

Begun as aids, they are now widely considered necessities. According to the Center for the Study of American Business, headed by President Reagan's former White House economist, Murray Weidenbaum, such items cost $12.1 billion in 1970, and $106 billion in 1982.

Such increases no longer can be supported, either logically or financially, according to the Reagan administration. To pay for them, they argue, forces the country to borrow and pay huge interest payments.

Perhaps more damaging as the supply-siders see it, is that borrowing by the federal government leaves that much less for private-sector companies to grow and create jobs that would take people off welfare.

In the past, the issue of desire versus the ability to finance the desire often was dodged. Bills were passed that in effect borrowed money from future generations for their financing. Some say Social Security fits that category.

Now, the administration says, that option is closed, or must be closed very soon. Its legacy, the Reagan people say, was unrealizable expectations, ruinous inflation, recession, and an economy on a treadmill.

Can the administration and Congress change American habits? And still get re-elected?

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I have a friend, an elderly lady, who has $20,000 in a passbook savings account. I have encouraged her to put her money in savings certificates or a money market mutual fund, but can't convince her. She is fearful and suspicious of anything new. She demands instant liquidity, just in case she ever needs her money.

She will only deal with big banks and will not put her money anyplace where she would be subjected to an early withdrawal penalty. What options are there to give her a better return and on-the-spot liquidity?

Doyle

A. You and your friend evidently haven't been reading the newspapers lately. The papers have been full of information about the money market deposit accounts banks have been offering since Dec. 14.

That kind of account should be just about perfect for her. Money can be withdrawn at any time, without penalty. Unlike passbook savings, on which federal regulations set a maximum 5.5 percent interest rate, there is no interest "cap" on the new accounts. Each bank sets its own rate.

Suggest to your friend that she inquire where she now has her savings account and at other banks in which she has confidence, to find out which one pays the highest rate on the new account, which requires a minimum deposit of $2,500.

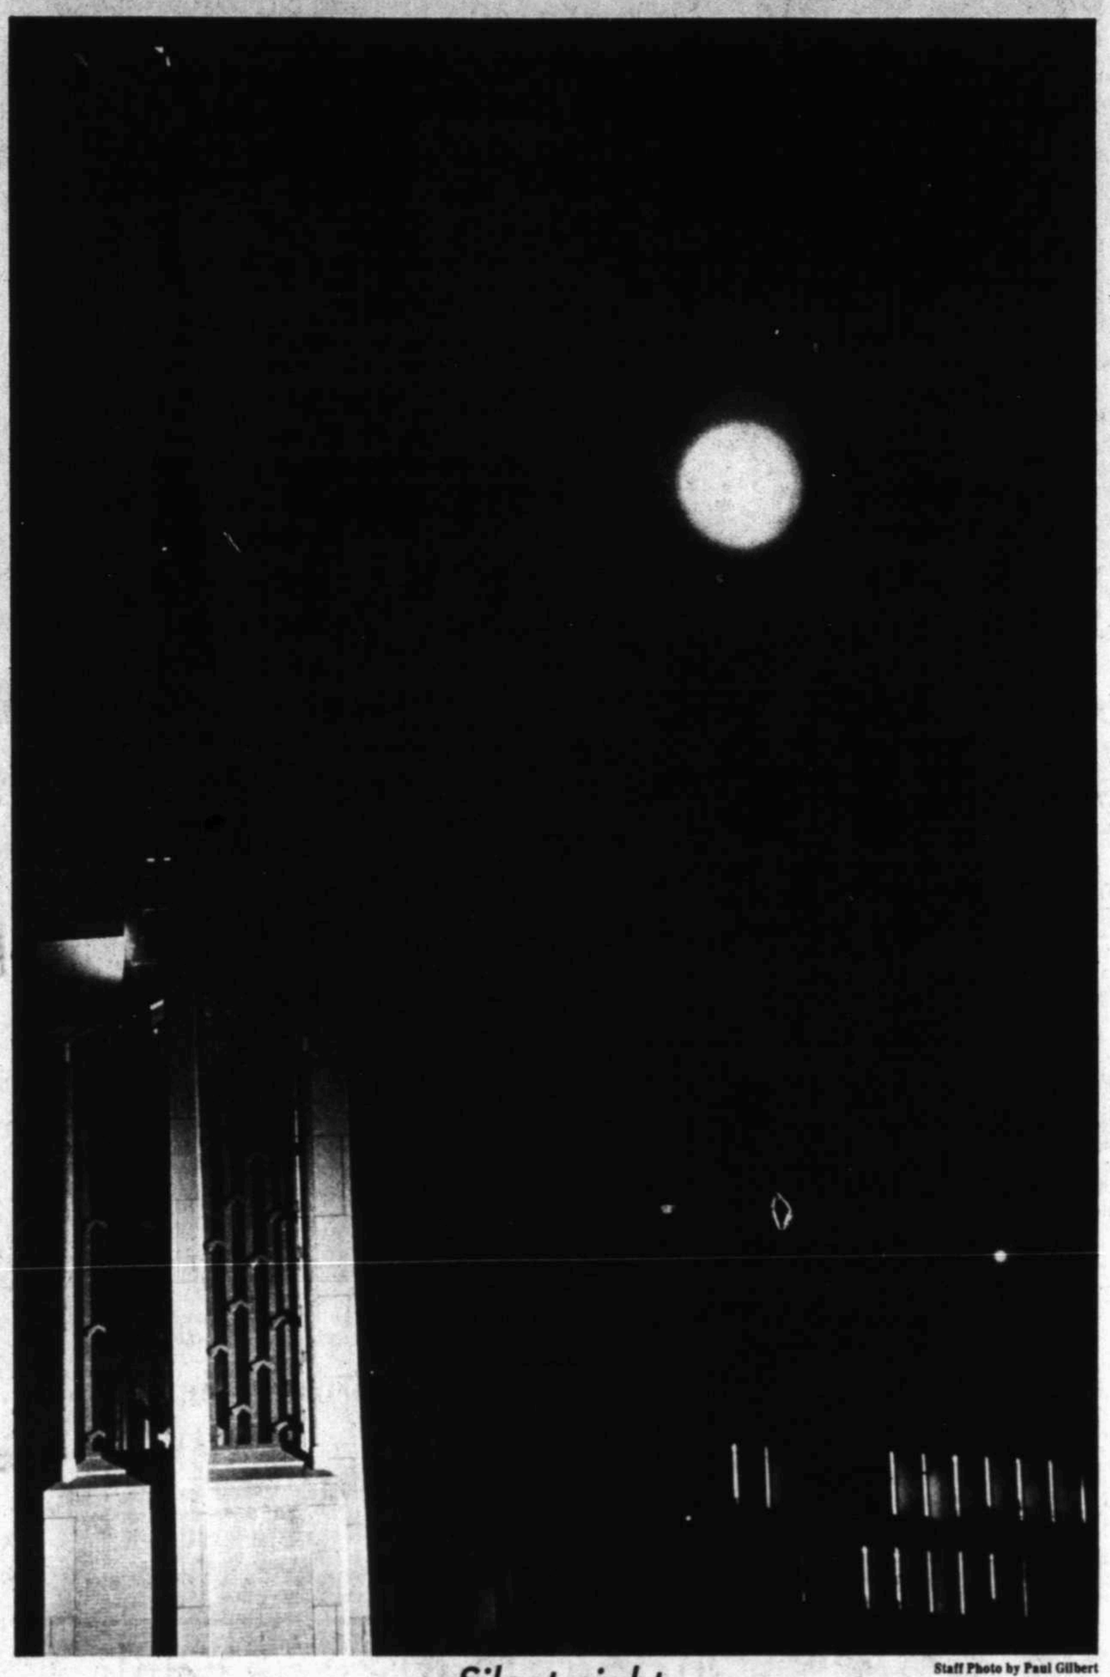

And don't be harsh on her. Lots of folks distrust new financial ideas, sometimes with good reason. But, once your friend understands the money market deposit account, she should realize it's too good a deal for her to pass up.

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

STANTON — In Small Town, West Texas, where life is as laid-back as the squeak of a rocker, two events traditionally stir the lifeblood: high school football and the annual chamber of commerce banquet.

The pigskin now in hibernation, it was the friendly get-together of community supporters at Martin County Chamber of Commerce banquet at Cap Rock Auditorium Monday night which perked ears, piqued interest and painted smiles. Bound by a common heritage of amiability, concern and dedication unique to the land of the 32nd parallel, more than 100 persons initiated what they hope is a new era in the success of Martin County.

"We would ask You to help us do all we can for our community," prayed Ed Carson during the invocation, and that request of the Creator preluded the philosophies later to be voiced.

"As a small community we are going to have to band together," said outgoing president Grant Mabry. "We've got the groundwork laid for some super times ahead."

THAT HERITAGE plays a paramount role in the lives of this community was evidenced by an update of plans to restore the historic Martin County Jail and convert a portion of it into new chamber headquarters. "Our main priority for 1983 is to move the chamber from the old depot to the old jail," said incoming president Terry Blair. "About 40 percent of the architect's plans are completed, bids will be let in March...and by this time next year we hope to be in the jail."

Not only did optimism for the future reign, but appreciation for deeds already accomplished also was expressed, with Bob Haislip recognized as outstanding man of the year and June Reid as outstanding woman of the year.

"Irregardless of what kind of project we undertook, he always supplied the know-how and the effort," said Bob Deavenport in presenting Haislip his award. "You knew you'd never have to worry about his part of the assignment...Over the years he has contributed a world of concern, sweat and dedication to all manners of projects...and has been a business asset to the community."

Haislip, whom Deavenport kidded as being "a charter member of the old soreheads" in reference to the sign along Interstate 20 near Stanton city limits, has served 30 years with Stanton Fire Department, the last 12 as chief, and also has been instrumental in Sunday School work and the disaster preparedness program.

Bob Haislip

June Reid

OUTSTANDING WOMAN Mrs. Reid was lauded by Mary Brown as having "a patriotic and democratic spirit" and displaying "devotion to family and church."

When the pioneers settled what is now Martin County, said Mrs. Brown, "the women did all the work...With women's liberation today and the more we know, we've circled our wagons and some have taken up the law insteading of laying it down. She's one who has both taken it up and laid it down...She's a pleasure to work with...and a fabulous person."

Mrs. Reid is active in Martin County Historical Commission and Martin County Museum and has been instrumental in efforts to restore the old jail.

The Raymond T. Kingsfield Memorial Award to further the advancement of agri-business in Martin County went to Kara Welch. The award is in honor of the late Kingsfield, who was a staunch supporter of agricultural interests.

"He believed if you weren't farming, you should be farming," said Martin County Sheriff Dan Saunders.

FEATURED SPEAKER Dean Rippetoe, known in some quarters as one who reflects the philosophy of Will Rogers, took a humorous look at country life and interjected a few serious thoughts.

"Those of us who live in the Permian Basin and in the Stanton community are very fortunate indeed," he said. "We are so blessed we haven't had to suffer like so many people...This community has proved the oil and agriculture businesses are compatible. In my travels from one end of the nation to the other, I have found where those two industries exist, there are good churches and homes and schools full of good people."

Three pillars stand at the very base of the nation, said Rippetoe, looming so important that were they to crumble "America as we know it will be no more:"

—HOME.

"True love is when the husband takes out the trash and the wife goes with him," he said. "A marriage is not a 50-50 proposition; it's a 100-100 proposition."

He then related an anecdote concerning a woman who suddenly tore into her husband with both fists flying. "That's for being such a lousy lover," she snapped.

Petroleum industry stands firm, vo-ed group told

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

There is little doubt that the future of the Permian Basin economy is a deep concern to all. The issue is important not only to the bankers and investors, the laid-off employees, the housewives and the college graduates; the future of the economy also affects the curriculum of the city's vocational education programs.

For that reason, Walter Ashby was the main speaker at the second meeting of the 108-member Vocational Advisory Council/Committee Monday night at the new Midland High School library.

Ashby, vice president of the marketing and research division of The First National Bank of Midland, remained optimistic about the growth potential of Midland during the next five years.

He also was optimistic throughout 1982's pessimistic predictions.

"I'm sick of (the gloomy forecasts)," Ashby said. "There are so many negative comments — so many negative forecasts that are not coming true. The reason is because people are still measuring with an old yardstick.

"The economics of the petroleum industry are clearly the strongest they have ever been," he said. "There has never been a period of time so attractive to the petroleum industry."

Citing Midland's uniqueness, Ashby pointed out that the city is one of the fastest-growing in the state; per capita, it appears to be the fastest-growing city in the nation.

Total bank deposits in Lubbock were significantly below those in Midland last year, he said. In fact, the total bank deposits of Lubbock and Odessa together equal those of Midland. However, the important aspect is the difference in population, he said.

Twelve thousand housing permits were granted in Midland during the last five years, he continued. About 4,000 were granted last year.

Although that might not make much of an impression on some, Ashby pointed out that there also were 4,000 housing permits granted in Austin and in Fort Worth last year. Perspective must be kept, he cautioned.

"We are not backing off," he said. "We've built at absolutely staggering rates."

The 10 to 11 percent growth in previous years is "very extraordinary," he continued. Although 1982 was a somewhat more "normal" year of growth, it still was very rapid. "We see that drilling has continued to grow — and that has a correlation to the growth of Midland.

"I'm hopeful that in the next five years...we'll see a period of strong, sustained growth — strong and stable growth," he said.

Although it is difficult to predict the future, Ashby said he wouldn't be surprised to see an average growth of 3 to 6 percent in the next five years. Urbanologists agree that an average growth of 2 percent reflects a strong growth, he noted.

According to Ashby, the improved efficiency makes the petroleum industry "extremely attractive" for investors.

"It's possible to drill three wells this year for the cost of two last year." And, he added once again, the drill count is not related to the amount of footage drilled.

"It's important because, like a student, a certain amount of homework needs to be done on every footage," said Ashby, who divides the industry into two facets: mechanical and intellectual. Midland is concerned with the intellectual, or research, side of activity, he added.

The industry looks good, he said, because the reserves in the ground are "grossly undervalued" and some say that one of the two best sources for good investments and tax shelters is oil and gas.

"During the last seven recessions — this one makes the eighth — they were all average. This one might be a bit stronger than average and that is related directly to vocational counseling, classes and trends," he said.

"We're looking at a new frontier — an electrical frontier and a mechanical frontier. We've gone through decades of feeling that

Vocational education's importance continues to grow

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

According to Dr. Duane Moore, the community has been "supportive, responsive and dedicated" in its involvement with the vocational education of Midland students.

The remarks of the Midland Independent School District assistant superintendent of instruction were confirmed at the Vocational Advisory Council/Committee meeting Monday night.

The meeting, which precedes National Vocational Education Week Feb. 6-12, provides an opportunity for members of the council and the committees to review programs and make suggestions for future curriculum.

Made up of businessmen and women from the community, teachers and administrators, the 108 Midlanders are divided into 13 committees which meet about three times a year to discuss possible courses and directions for their specific programs. A member from each of the committees makes up the Vocational Advisory Council, which meets another three times a year with the committees.

"We do this in order to get feedback from the community," Dr. Charles Thompson, MISD vocational coordinator, explained. "We continually are looking at the redirection of old programs to new programs, or initiating new ones."

Community members involved usually are referred to Thompson through instructors "who know of people in the community who would be helpful to us," he said, adding his recommendations are forwarded to superintendent Dr. Joseph P. Baressi Jr.

The committees work on the 13 specific divisions offered through MISD's vocational education program. Those include, to name a few, vocational agriculture, distributive education, vocational office education, home economics, individual cooperative training and general construction trades.

Focus of the meeting Monday was on an analysis of the future growth of Midland's economy, given by the vice president of the marketing and research division of the First National Bank of Midland. According to Walter Ashby, the trend toward mechanical and electrical training continues to grow, just as Midland does. That growth, explained Thompson, has a direct impact on the type of training the vocational education program needs to offer.

"(These meetings are) a method we have for staying as current as we can and still staying within the state guidelines," Thompson said. "There is always room for local adaptation."

Several activities are scheduled next week for MISD vocational education students. Beginning Monday, each high school will have a display consisting of posters with photographs of students working at their job sites. The posters will be displayed all week.

Cosmetology units will be giving free haircuts and manicures during the week while health occupation students at Midland Freshman High School will host a free blood-pressure clinic at Midland Park Mall Friday and Satur-

Oil lease subject of suit

By ED TODD

Two independent oil operators who allege that the Midland-based King Ranch Oil & Gas Co. used the federal courts to try to wrest from them the oil-and-gas lease on 134.18 mineral acres under Indian-owned land in Oklahoma have filed an almost $30 million suit in federal court in Midland against the King enterprise.

The oil operators, Clark Ellison of Oklahoma County, Okla., and M.P. Appleby of Maricopa County, Ariz., say that on April 3, 1981, they paid $2,012,700 for the mineral lease to the heirs of Nancy Phifer, a Wichita Indian, who in 1887 was allotted by trust patent a 160-acre tract in Caddo County, Okla. The Indian owners' lease to Ellison and Appleby was approved by the U.S. Interior Department's Bureau of Indian Affairs, the suit's petition contends.

In addition to paying the Indians the $2 million-plus at $15,000 per acre, the oil operators gave the Indian owners a 25 percent royalty interest on the lease.

To finance the transaction, Ellison and Appleby say that they borrowed the $2 million from a bank at a "high rate of interest." Subsequently, they "reached an agreement in principle" to sell one-half interest in their lease for $2 million to a third party; that transaction would have allowed Ellison and Appleby to pay their bank note off in full and still retain a one-half interest which they could retain or sell "for substantial monies."

However, before Ellison and Appleby could finalize the third-party agreement and before they could sell their retained one-half interest in the lease, King "wrongfully and maliciously" filed suit in federal court in Oklahoma on April 15, 1981, against Ellison and Appleby and the Indian owners and claimed that the lease was void and invalid.

Subsequently, Federal Judge Lee

Local radio station has new owner

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

As of Monday, KNFM 92.3 FM Radio changed management for the second time in less than two years.

Once locally owned by Permian Broadcasters Inc., the station was sold to the Austin-based Citimedia Corp. April 20, 1981. At that time KNFM's programming was changed from a jazz, mellow-sound format to country.

Monday's purchase of KNFM-Radio by Bakcor Broadcasting Inc. returned it once again to local ownership and management. Although the actual exchange took place at midnight Monday, Bakcor was actually "granted an FCC license on the 22nd of December to operate KNFM pending close of the sale," said Bakcor's president George Bakke.

Bakcor Broadcasting Inc., which purchased KMND 1510 AM Radio May 12, 1982, is owned and operated by Bakke, now general manager of both stations, and Betsy Anne Dwyer. Both are Midland residents.

KNFM-Radio and KMND-Radio (then referred to as KNAM-Radio) were previously owned by Permian Broadcasting Inc., with programming on both being simulcast from 2001 W. Wall Ave.

The May purchase of KMND-Radio brought about programming changes. The station moved from country to the mellow-sound Music of Your Life format.

When asked if the music format at KNFM would be changed, Bakke said, "Absolutely not. The age-old adage is in effect — 'If it works, don't fix it.'

"In our endeavor to bring the greatest entertainment and information broadcasts to the people of Midland, Odessa and the Permian Basin, we have chosen to become affiliates of ABC, in line with our existing ABC affiliate with KMND."

When Bakcor acquired KMND, in addition to its music format change and affiliation with ABC, the station added such national programs as ABC News, Paul Harvey and Lou Boda Sports.

KNMD also reinstituted the locally-produced "Breakfast-A-La-Carte" with Max Howard, a regular part of KNFM programming for approximately 17 years, as well as initiating such local programs as Joe Salman's "Permian Basin Oil and Gas Report," a stock market report from the Midland office of E.F. Hutton with emphasis on stocks of local interest, and "On My Mind" with Georgia Temple.

When asked if these programs would be incorporated into the KNFM format, Bakke said, "That possibility is being studied at this time."

Both stations will once again be owned and operated out of the same office at 2001 W. Wall Ave. R.D. "Bud" Calvert will be general sales manager for both, with Craig Anderson serving as program director for KNFM and Howard as KMND's program director.

The transition in ownership has meant major changes in the KNFM staff. Employees there were informed in writing by Citimedia of the change in ownership last week.

Douglas Raab, station manager of KNFM under Citimedia, said of the transition, "We did not change anybody who wanted to stay with us (when Citimedia purchased the station). Bakcor Broadcasting chose not to do it that way and by agreement of attorneys, we informed our employees that Citimedia was not the employer as of midnight the 31st and they should seek interviews with Bakcor Broadcasting to see if they would be retained." He then added, "Selected employees were retained.

"I myself chose, when this deal first came up, to stay with Citimedia and I'm going down to Killeen as vice president and general manager of KIXS-KIIZ."

Raab added that none of the KNFM employees were going with him.

Bakke said of the transitions, "Because we already have a viable local station and a staff on hand, we were therefore prepared to own and operate two stations by adding five of KNFM's current employees. The bottom line is you need less people to operate two stations together than you do two independently."

Storm blamed for five deaths

By The Associated Press

At least five deaths were blamed on a storm that brought snow and ice to the Panhandle after triggering violent thunderstorms and tornadoes across Texas.

The spring-like storm that spawned tornadoes in the Southeast Texas area Monday had moved out of the state early today, leaving thunderstorms along the Coastal Plains.

But snow and freezing rain continued to fall across the Panhandle, leaving major highways closed because of snow accumulations of up to four inches, icy conditions and stalled trucks, the Department of Public Safety said.

The winter weather was blamed for at least five traffic deaths in the Panhandle.

Two Dumas men were killed Monday near the Panhandle town of Stinnett when the station wagon in which they were traveling skidded on ice and collided head-on with a truck, the DPS said.

The victims were identified as Antonio Martinez Moranda, 24, and Jesus Moranda Morina, 34. The truck driver escaped serious injury, troopers said.

Afterward, the third party refused to honor its prior agreement, and Allison and Appleby were locked into the high interest rates on the $2 million loan. The third party backed out due to the civil action taken by King, says the Ellison-Appleby petition.

—Lost the $2 million one-half interest sale to the third party.

—Made $220,000 in interest payments.

—Paid $35,000 in attorney fees and costs in defending their position in the civil action brought by King.

—Are due $25 million in exemplary damages due to King's interference.

few moments, then suddenly rose and gave her a good paddling in return.

"What was that for?" she cried.

"That was for knowin' the difference."

—SCHOOL.

"We've got the most sophisticated education system in the world, and yet we're turning out people with bachelor's degrees who can't read or write," he said. "We're living in a country that pays teachers less than the oil industry pays roustabouts. The students they're teaching are the America of tomorrow."

—CHURCH.

"Sometimes we're so busy playing church...we forget who died and provided for us," he said, likening the I-don't-want-to-get-involved attitude prevalent in many denominations to the church in Central Texas known as "Jehovah's Bystanders...They have four commandments and six do-the-best-you-cans. And a drive-in window with a sign that says 'Toot'n Tell or Go to Hell.'"

RIPPETOE ALSO reminisced about his boyhood days in the backwoods of Comanche County. "You know, we lived seven miles from a dirt road," he quipped. "For two years we had to use an owl for a rooster, and you didn't go to the doctor unless you were pregnant or dying."

These days, he said, hospitals have become considerably more sophisticated in that neck of the woods. One man, he recounted, went in a doctor's offices and proclaimed "I've got the shingles." The nurse promptly sat him down, had him fill out a multitude of forms, then ordered him into a back room to "take off all your clothes."

The man acquiesced, and after a long while the doctor finally came in to survey him head-to-toe. "Now let's take a look at your shingles," he said.

day.

Also at the mall will be demonstrations by Industrial Arts students, as well as a career booth manned by students and counselors.

Midland College vocational students also will set up displays at the mall, including mechanics, machine shop and welding projects.

According to a statement from the Advisory Council for Technical-Vocational Education in Texas, estimates indicate there will be 242,000 job openings in 1983 that will require vocational-technical skills, while the supply of graduates from vo-tech programs will total just over 97,000.

Unemployment for 1981-82 vo-tech program graduates is a low 3.1 percent, according to the statement.

Although 80 percent of the jobs in Texas require vocational-technical training, only one out of every four graduates from high school has specific skills.

As Ashby said Monday night, "I think the old possibility of a person graduating from high school and having a place in society as a warm body is about gone. I think robotics has something to do with it."

According to James Rehg, director of the Piedmont Technical College Robotics Center in Greenwood, S.C., "High technology is changing the three R's to mean retrain, relocate or retire."

the bright kid should be dutifully ushered off (into a college) to become a well-rounded individual. I think we're entering an era where we'll have greater appreciation for a craft, a skill, and not necessarily a degree."

The level of sophistication has increased, he said. "I think an individual who is going to be an achiever in a vocation will have to continue to upgrade himself for the rest of his life. I think we'll see it in the multi-degreed person."

Judge rules local bank breached agreement

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton has entered a $100,000 judgment against Midland's First National Bank which the court found breached a fiduciary relationship with Colorado real estate investor Ronald L. O'Dell.

In a trial before the judge, Bunton determined that O'Dell on Aug. 12, 1981, had transferred by Federal Funds Wire $100,000 from his account at Rocky Mountain Savings & Loan Association to the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas and that the wire transfer was credited to the Federal Reserve account of the Midland bank.

The transfer of funds was addressed to Charles Fraser, FNB president, and was designated for a "special escrow" account of Chalk Oil & Gas and O'Dell.

The O'Dell funds apparently were to be used to develop oil-and-gas leases in Lee County east of Austin.

Contrary to the wire instructions that the funds were payable "for (the) special escrow account of Chalk Oil & Gas and Ronald L. O'Dell," the bank, through Fraser's executive secretary, Darlene Mary Mertink, opened a new account under the name of Chalk Oil & Gas on Aug. 13, 1981, and did so at the direction of A.C. McGehee, who was doing business in the name of Chalk.

The bank deposited the $100,000 in the Chalk account, and thereafter honored checks drawn on the Chalk account "until there existed an overdraft in excess of the $100,000" deposited in the account.

"At no time...did the First National Bank of Midland...request additional instructions or clarification regarding the wire transfer from Ronald L. O'Dell or any transmitting bank," according to Bunton's finding of facts.

Six to eight weeks after O'Dell had transferred the funds by wire to the Midland bank, he found out that First National Bank had "paid out" the wire-transfer funds to Chalk.

Thereafter, the bank declined to repay O'Dell the funds, and O'Dell opted to sue the bank to recover his loss.

In addition to its breach with O'Dell, the bank "failed to use ordinary care in the handling of" O'Dell's deposit, the court found.

Aside from that, the court determined that Chalk Oil & Gas "did not perform its proposed contractual relationship with Ronald L. O'Dell with regard to the purchase and development of certain leases in Lee County."

Man shoots, kills father, self

HOUSTON (AP) — A self-employed building contractor confronted his father with a briefcase full of weapons and a list of complaints, then shot and killed his parent before turning a gun on himself, a sheriff's investigator says.

Donald Vanderhider, 27, killed his father then himself in the Monday morning confrontation, Sheriff's Detective Anthony Rossi said.

Rossi said Vanderhider was upset over past arguments with Lawrence M. Vanderhider, 53, a supervisor for Allied Industries here.

The younger man, who had not seen his father for some time, called early Monday and asked to visit, Rossi said. The detective said when Donald arrived at his father's home, he pulled a .44-Magnum pistol and a list from his briefcase and began reading the complaints.

Rossi said the briefcase also contained another pistol and several rounds of ammunition and said investigators found more boxes of ammunition and a bow and arrow in Donald's car.

Paula Corkins, 46, a neighbor in the Prestonwood Forest subdivision, said the elder Vanderhider's wife, Margaret, said her husband was elated at the prospect of seeing his son and had made coffee and assembled Christmas gifts Donald had never picked up.

"Margaret said Larry was so happy this morning," Mrs. Corkins said. Officers said Donald was Lawrence's son by an earlier marriage.

Mrs. Corkins said the elder Vanderhider's wife ran across the street for help shortly after her stepson entered the house. Two gunshots were heard minutes after sheriff's officers arrived.

Rossi said officers did not enter the Vanderhider home for another two hours, fearing that someone might be inside with a gun.

The son was found face up on the kitchen floor with a bullet wound to the right temple and gun by his side, Rossi said. The elder Vanderhider was found slumped face down in the backyard where he had tried to run, with bullet wounds to the midsection and back of the neck and head, he said.
