All Victims Were Attached To March Field, In California; Officers Think Wing Blocked Chance At Escape

(By The Associated Press)

OCEANSIDE, Calif., July 25. — Seven men were killed today in the wreck of a giant, twin-motor army bomber, which lost a wing in mid-air and careened downward from 1,000 feet into a hollow at the Oceanside city limits.

The dead:

Second Lieut. Carl A. Murray, of Filer, Idaho, the pilot, who was attached to the 17th group headquarters at March Field, Riverside, home base of the plane.

Sergeants Archie W. Snodgrass, San Antonio, of the 64th squadron, and Bonnell L. Herrick, Warsaw, Ind., of the 95th squadron.

Privates of the 95th squadron, Walter T. Taylor, Los Angeles; Stanley Book, Detroit; Albert Overend, Coronado, Calif., and Vincent Galdin, Green Rapids, Mich.

On Service Mission

The plane, an amphibian, was bound from March to Rockwell Field, San Diego, on a service mission, and appeared over Oceanside at noon. It flew smoothly until it reached the southeastern city limits.

Mrs. N. W. Glasco, near whose house the crash occurred, said her attention was attracted to the plane by a loud report when it was overhead.

"I thought they were starting bombing practice and was frightened because they were so close," she said. "I went outside and looked up. I saw what appeared to be small particles and smoke coming from the rear of the plane. I could see they were in difficulty.

Panhandle Areas To Get Millions

AMARILLO, July 25. (AP)—Panhandle wheat farmers will be paid more than $4,000,000 for their part in the acreage reduction campaign, on the basis of figures available here through the office of Congressman Marvin Jones.

Jones said the government's figures credited 23 Panhandle counties with a five-year average production of 27,509,000 bushels. Figured on the basis of 50 per cent domestic consumption, the farmers would receive $4,126,350 from the processing tax of 30 cents a bushel. Two thirds of this amount will be available September 15.

Unofficial estimates had been made that the Panhandle would receive no more than $1,500,000 from the processing tax.

Young Woman Weeps As She Tells Story Of Kidnaping

KANSAS CITY, July 25. (AP)—Miss Mary McElroy, daughter of the city manager, wept copiously today at the trial of Walter McGee, as she testified her alleged kidnaper demanded that she disrobe before her release to permit a search for possible concealed evidence against his gang.

Slumped in her chair, the 25-year-old victim of the kidnap plot said:

"I told them I would rather die than do that; that I never would do it."

Crumbling Bones Found In A Box

(By The Associated Press)

EL PASO, July 25.—Discovery today of the crumbling bones of a skeleton, apparently that of an aged man, in a box left in the check room of an El Paso hotel six months ago, led Sheriff Chris P. Fox to begin an investigation.

The name of Elizabeth McReynolds was on the box. A brother, Allen McReynolds, was located here, but declined to throw any light on the package other than it was left at the hotel several months ago by his sister, who now is in Carthage, Mo., he said.

"My sister asked me to get the package for her some time ago, but the check room porter told me he could not find it," McReynolds said. "I don't know anything about its contents but I do not believe there is any mystery about it. However, I would rather not say anything about it."

Plan Outlined For Gigantic Lake Project

Recreational Center Would Be Established Near City With Federal Funds; Estimated To Cost $200,000

Plans for a gigantic recreational center to be constructed five miles north of Lubbock on the east fork of the Brazos were announced yesterday by Dr. Clyde C. Craig, a dentist. The lake will rival Lake Worth, Lake Kemp, Lake Cisco, and other water sport centers, it was said.

Estimated to cost approximately $200,000 and to offer employment for 400 to 500 men from six to eight months, the project calls for the erection of a large dam on the canyon site just north and west of the Lubbock Country club grounds, forming a lake covering 257.9 acres, exceeding two and one-half miles in length and from one-quarter to a mile in width. It is planned to contain 1,142 acre-feet of water ranging in depth from two to twenty-five feet.

Self-Liquidating

The project is destined to be the largest and most complete of its kind west of Fort Worth and the only lake of its kind in a radius of 125 miles of Lubbock. It is claimed to be self-liquidating and engineers state the loan can and will retire itself over a period of ten years.

Efforts are to be made to seek sponsorship of the project by the Lubbock City commission in the application for the loan under the Recovery act.

Surveys and estimates of the project have been drawn by C. B. Hudspeth, local engineer. A map of the entire project has been made. J. H. Goodman is aiding in the project.

The lake center would offer all

Partial Wage Compromise Is Reached By Industry Heads

WASHINGTON, July 25. (AP) — A partial wage compromise was reached today on the proposed code for the oil industry in the midst of a lively dispute on the practice of binding retail dealers to handle one oil company's products exclusively.

The tentative wage agreement, worked out by a committee representing various factions in the industry, affects only the employees in the marketing end of the business, but approximately 80 per cent are in that division. The proposal is for a 40 hour week and pay scales ranging from 47 cents to 40 cents per hour.

Texan Certain That London Parley Is To Be Resumed

NEW YORK, July 25. (AP) — Certain that the London economic parley will be resumed after its recess, Ralph W. Morrison, of Texas, a member of the American delegation, returned to the United States today on the Ile De France.

"The world is in a state of flux," Morrison said. "Some call it social revolution. But in any case, it is a state of evolution which must quiet down before the conference can be resumed."

Grain Leaders Adopt Reforms For Marketing

Speculation To Be Restricted And Violent Fluctuations In Prices Outlawed Under New Rules To Be Adopted

Important Change

Holdings Of Individuals Are To Be Limited; Margins To Be Higher; Operation On An Excessive Basis Barred

(By The Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, July 25.—Representatives of grain exchanges agreed today on reforms in American grain marketing methods whereby speculation would be restricted and violent fluctuations in prices outlawed.

At the insistence of farm administrators who threatened to step in unless prompt voluntary action was taken by the exchanges, the representatives agreed to recommend changes in the rules of trading to go into effect within a short time.

Incorporated In Case

These later would be incorporated in a code of operation to be submitted by the exchanges to Secretary Wallace.

One of the recommendations would limit the daily fluctuations in futures prices to 5 cents a bushel for wheat, rye and barley; to 4 cents on corn and 3 cents on oats.

The exchanges are expected by officials here to approve these limits soon. Then the present emergency rule, established at Wallace's demand, limiting trading in grain to prices above last Thursday's closing quotations will be removed.

Under Emergency Rule

The exchanges also are operating under an emergency rule limiting fluctuations on wheat to 8 cents a bushel above the minimum, on corn to 5 cents and on oats to 4 cents.

Agricultural officials said limiting the fluctuation limits as permanent policy will mark the most important change in several decades in methods of marketing the products of American grain farms.

This was insisted on by adminis-

Roosevelt Speaks To State Chiefs

WASHINGTON, July 25. (AP) — President Roosevelt, in a talk across the continent tonight to the conference of governors at San Francisco, asserted that "one of the great problems before us" is "to determine the joint responsibilities of many great tasks" by the federal and state governments.

The president cited the proposition of oil production control and developments involving several states, such as the Tennessee and Mississippi valley.

Mr. Roosevelt thanked the governors for their cooperation as expressed in a resolution of support of his national industrial recovery program. He recalled his own four years as governor of New York, of participation in previous governors' conferences and expressed greetings "to you all, old associates and new friends."

A Pleasing Appointment

Mr. Roosevelt's Choice Of Clifford B. Jones Is Wise

LONG before he received the nomination as the Democratic party's candidate for President, Lubbock and the South Plains had faith in Franklin D. Roosevelt and in his ability to lead the nation out of chaos.

After the former governor of New York became his party's standard-bearer his popularity and his hold upon our people grew by leaps and bounds; since his election he has become even more of a favorite son in this territory. But today he is more strongly entrenched than ever before; his appointment of Clifford B. Jones, of Spur, to be regional advisor to the Public Works administration, forms the reason.

If Mr. Roosevelt, himself, with all his vision and his talents for organization, had made a personal search he could not have chosen a better public works advisor for Texas, New Mexico and Louisiana. There simply isn't a better man.

MR. JONES is known in Lubbock; he is known all over West Texas as a tireless worker, a capable executive and—what is even more important in a post of public honor—a thoroughly honest man.

Former president of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce and even now serving as chairman of the directorate of Texas Technological college, Clifford Jones long ago marked himself as a leader among West Texans. The make-up of the man may best be described by his statement to the Morning Avalanche concerning his appointment; said he:

"Yes, I will accept because I realize the unusual opportunity for service to the section of the United States which has long been dear to me.

"My acceptance and the duties of the office call for a personal business sacrifice but I am undertaking the task in the belief that we all must do our part in these unusual times."

Unselfish, straightforward, honorable and able—those words best characterize the advisor for district seven in the National Public works administration.

The Morning Avalanche congratulates the President upon a wise and thoroughly satisfactory appointment.

Four Gunmen Kill A Deputy In Freeing Prisoner And Then Send Bullets Into Body Of Their Captive

(By The Associated Press)

CHARLESTON, W. Va., July 25. Four gunmen today killed a deputy sheriff, wounded another, snatched a convicted robber from the officers and after slaying the prisoner, left him in an alley less than a block from his father's home.

The four opened a deadly pistol gun fire on the officers' car soon after the deputies left Charleston for the state penitentiary at Moundsville with a youth sentenced a few hours earlier to 25 years imprisonment for armed robbery.

Body Is Found

As the deputies car came to a halt, with one dead and one wounded, the gunmen pulled the prisoner into their automobile and sped back toward Charleston.

A short time later, the bullet-riddled body of the robber, Homer Harper, 19, was found in an abandoned automobile near his parents' residence in Huntington, about 40 miles from Charleston.

Marvin Jones Is Called To Capital; Barbecue Delayed

AMARILLO, July 25. (AP)—Congressman Marvin Jones, of Amarillo, chairman of the house agricultural committee, tonight was en route to Washington following summons earlier today to a conference on farm problems confronting the administration.

At the suggestion of President Roosevelt, Representative Jones, leader in framing the farm relief act, was called to the capital by C. A. Cobb, head of the cotton administration set-up, and M. L. Wilson, head of the national wheat administration.

A Panhandle-wide barbecue which was to have honored Mr. Jones here next Monday was postponed until September.

Eastern Texas Areas Damaged

Crop And Property Loss Over Flooded Area Is Estimated At More than $1,000,000 In Last Three Days

(By The Associated Press)

CENTER, Tex., July 25—Extreme East Texas visualized crop and property damage of more than $1,000,000 today as torrential rains of the last three days washed out bridges, disrupted communication, delayed trains and covered lowlands with several feet of water.

Center and the major part of Shelby county were isolated because all highways were impassable and trains had not reached here since Sunday. The county's loss was estimated at $1,000,000. The Sabine river was reported at its highest stage in history.

One Life Lost

Only one loss of life was reported. Mrs. Mary Kennedy, 59, of Eldorado, Ark., drowned east of Marshall when the automobile in which she was riding crashed through a bridge railing, turned over three times and landed in three feet of water, pinning her down. Her daughter, Mrs. W. L. Simmons, and J. W. Simmons were rescued. The Marshall rainfall since Saturday reached 8 1-2 inches.

Eighteen inches of rain fell here beginning Saturday night. The deluge measured 24 inches at Joaquin,

Telegraph Wires To Capital Are Flooded As Replies Are Received After Appeal Made To Entire Nation

BY JAMES P. SELVAGE
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, July 25.—An estimate that between 5,000,000 and 6,000,000 workers would be reemployed before labor day was made tonight by Hugh S. Johnson, the administrator of national recovery, as he told the nation that "nothing can stop" President Roosevelt's economic program.

The key man of the administration's program for better times addressed the nation just 24 hours after his chief had appealed for support of the program, and during the interim some 10,000 replies had poured into the White House pledging support.

Wires Are Burdened

Telegraph wires into the capital were reported burdened by the response of the people, and White House attaches said the deluge of messages were the greatest in history.

It was upon the basis of this inpouring of encouraging reactions to the plan to raise wages and spread employment through limitation of working hours that Johnson based his estimate of new jobs—the first definite calculation he has made since undertaking his colossal task.

In addition to the word from employers that they would enter into the agreement proposed by the chief executive to become effective August 1, new codes were coming from industries to supplement the 400 already in hand, including oil, wool textiles, lumber and rayon upon which hearings proceeded during the day.

Will Not Be Hampered

"Nothing will even hamper the president's program," Johnson said in his address. "The power of this people once aroused and united in a fixed purpose is the most irresistible force in the world.

"Unity and powerful purpose are not frequent in a democracy. They are possible only when two essentials are present—an elemental hu-

The shooting occurred on the front porch of a home occupied by Mrs. Addie Stowe, Henry's mother, and Henry's two brothers. Stowe said Jordan had threatened to kill all the members of the family.

Mrs. Emily Jane Saltsgaber of Edna, who was at the Stowe home at the time of the killing, said Jordan came into the front yard and invited Stowe outside, saying he would "knock his teeth down his throat."

Stock Market Dragged Down After Heavy Profit Taking

NEW YORK, July 25. (AP)—Heavy profit taking and scattered liquidation from shaky margin accounts dragged the stock market down today, but losses, generally, were moderate compared with yesterday's sharp rally.

Led by renewed enthusiasm in the so-called "wet" group, many issues extended their advances of the previous sessoin by $1 to more than $4 per share in early transactions. That expected "secondary" reaction," however, entered the picture in the latter part of the abbreviated proceedings and, despite new support, final losses ranged from $1 to $2 or more.

Petitions For Beer Election Are Out Here

Texas Liberal League Leader Looks For A Close Race In Lubbock County; To Be Given Commissioners Court

Petitions for a local option election in Lubbock county will be presented to Commissioners court on or before August 5, E. H. Robertson, district chairman of Texas Liberal League, said yesterday. The proposed election, to legalize beer in this county, would be held August 26 when the state votes on the same question.

Between "15 and 20" petitions are being circulated, but Robertson said yesterday that he did not know how many persons had signed them. He said he had seen one petition with 144 names. Commissioners court must order an election when petitions bearing the names of 500 qualified voters are offered.

Predicts Close Race

"I think it will be awfully close in Lubbock county," Robertson said when asked what he believed would be the outcome of the election. "I think the state will vote for beer and for repeal of the 18th amendment."

Robertson pointed out that only 20,813 poll taxes had been paid in this state senatorial district, in comparison to about 46,000 votes cast in the district for governor last year.

War Veteran Volunteers Are Aiding In Search For Killer

SAN DIEGO, Calif., July 25. (AP)—One hundred volunteers from war veterans organizations worked with police tonight in a search for the slayer of little Dalbert Aposhian, 7, whose mutilated body was found yesterday in San Diego bay.

Lack of tangible clues, which included only two cypress needles, a blade of grass and a piece of barred rock chicken feather, left authorities working almost blindly. Chief of Detectives Harry J. Kelly said the main hope of identifying the slayer lay in discovery of the place where the boy was killed.

Spur Man Recognizes Unusual Opportunity For Service To Nation; His Territory To Cover Three States

(By The Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, July 25.— President Roosevelt today appointed the ten men who will advise his public works administration on the expenditure throughout the 48 states of federal money to give employment.

Each of the ten will serve as direct representative of the public works administration in a region consisting of several states. The next step in building the decentralized organization will be the selection of state boards to make recommendation on projects to the regional administrators.

Selections Announced

Secretary Ickes, the public works administrator, made public the president's selections after a meeting of the White House executive council. In doing so, Ickes called upon various local governments seeking aid from the public works administration "to present only projects qualified under the announced policies of the administration."

"These non-federal projects are to be presented to the state advisory boards, the personnel of which will be made public shortly," Ickes said.

"Functions of the regional advisors will consist of obtaining from the state boards within the region lists of projects under consideration by them together with recommendations or rejections.

Seek Consistent Action

"Each regional advisor will from time to time visit the offices of the state boards within the region and advise and consult with those boards to the end that action may be consistent with sound local and district planning.

Miss Almeda Murray Is To Become Bride Of Doyle Coe Of Goose Creek In Augu

The Woman's Angle

BY BLANCHE BEAN WILSON
Avalanche Woman's Editor

THESE people who speak so casually of keeping women in the home and of censoring their styles do not always realize how far-reaching are styles or how far women's home influence may reach.

The things women do and wear and buy keep the world turning around. An attempt to keep them inside the four walls of houses, to put them back in the home in the sense that they once were there, is something too vast to contemplate.

Ruth Bryan Owen says that "Woman's sphere is the home today just as it has always been." She adds, however, that the home has changed because it extends as far in every direction as an automobile can travel and return at night since this distance represents the roaming radius of children, and that the interest of the home includes concern about public health, labor conditions, public education and a wide range of other issues—that the home which is woman's sphere, has some interest in every thing else in the world.

Even the ruffles that women wear on their underwear, or the tailored styles that they adopt, have an influence on industry. Up in Portland, Oregon, the other day seven laundry companies petitioned the city council for a reduction of license fees saying that the new styles in women's underwear which eliminate frills, ruffles and such things that required skilled ironers had taken the profit out of their business.

Keeping the women in the home may mean taking them out in to the world to help make conditions better for the home. What goes on in town, in the state capitol and in the nation's capitol have such an influence on the home that the women there need to have a part in all that takes place. To keep her home and her family together, woman's influence is vital in all these things affecting home conditions.

Keeping women in the home isn't the problem. Most of them prefer to be there. The problem is in keeping conditions so that women can stay in the home.

GLASS HOUSES

THERE'S an old saying that "people who live in glass houses should not throw stone." There are later versions of the many things people should not do who live in these traditional glass houses.

Now we are getting around to the actual glass houses and if this next period of prosperity is all that it is heralded to be, you, too, may go in for something in glass.

The latest thing, so we are told, is to have the walls of the room made of mirrors. And, even if all of the walls are not of these mirrors, there are moldings, cornices, panels and furniture all made of mirrors.

HERE AND THERE

WHILE we are being glad about the building that is going on in this vicinity, we could be happier if someone would think up a way of eliminating dust while the building is being torn down.

You might try this way of baking apples: Stuff the center with walnuts, sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon, add a little honey and water and bake. This dessert keeps well in the ice box.

A variety of cold cuts of meat, such as sliced ham, roast lamb, sliced liverwurst and meat loaf arranged on a platter and garnished with parsley makes an excellent summer dish. Stuffed tomato salads can be served with the meats.

When making sandwiches soften the butter by creaming with a fork and then add a little cream. This will make the butter spread easily.

Make French dressing in a bottle, cork tightly and store it in the ice box for future use. Shake it well before using.

Workers Thankful To Beat The Dole

AMARILLO, July 25. (AP)—A majority of the 600 world war veterans stationed in the civilian conservation camps in the Palo Duro canyon look upon the reforestation plan as an opportunity to escape the dole, and are thankful for the privilege of working.

That was the substance of statements to a newspaper reporter regarding life in the conservation corps. They expressed the opinion that the camps offered:

Employment for idle hands and minds; opportunity to preserve self-respect by escaping charity; benefits of healthful foods and advantages of sunshine and fresh air; body building labor and morally strengthening recreational activities, and a chance to earn money to support dependents.

"The question of what I think of the plan is answered by my being here," said a civil engineer, a graduate of a university. "If there were better opportunities for me I would pounce upon them in a minute. But this work affords temporary financial and mental relief, and I am thankful for an opportunity to hurdle part of the depression."

Gandhi Planning Another Campaign

AHMEDABAD, India, July 25. (AP)—The Mahatma Gandhi announced today his decision to disband his "ashram," or college of devotees at Sabarmati to embark on a "fresh and sacred mission in life."

The Indian leader explained that he must discontinue his seminary because it was to him the most precious thing on earth.

Hundreds and thousands of people, he said, had lost everything in the struggle for Indian independence and he felt that it was up to him and the members of the "ashram" to make a sacrifice on the eve of embarking on a new "sacred mission."

The nature of the mission was not disclosed but it was believed to be connected with Gandhi's plan for individual civil disobedience in place of the former mass campaign.

Battle Is Raging Over Plans For Red River Flood Contr

Many Units Are Lined Up In Fight At National Capital; Towns Near Border Of Texas Sponsoring Proposal

OKLAHOMA CITY, July 25. (AP)—A "delegation" war is on in the national capital on the question of building a mammoth flood control lake on Red river.

One side, including the utility interests, claim that the proposed flood control system would wipe out three counties and make lake bottoms of parts of others while the other side envisions a great plant that easily could furnish power for several states.

Many Lined Up

Congressmen from Oklahoma and Texas, chambers of commerce, private citizens and publishers are lined up in the battle. One large chamber of commerce, at Oklahoma City, headed by J. F. Owens, who happens to be general manager of the Oklahoma Gas and Electric Co., is fighting the proposal. Other chambers, particularly those in towns situated near the Texas border and south of the proposed dam location are sponsoring the proposal.

Large delegations have been sent to Washington from Oklahoma City, Hugo, Durant, Ardmore, and other cities, especially the Texas border towns.

Project Before Ickes

The entire Texas congressional delegation has laid the project before Secretary of the Interior Ickes, urging its adoption as a floor control and power project.

Owens claims the dam would inundate all of Marshall, Carter and Love counties, and parts of Johnston and Stephens counties. It would cost an estimated $31,000,000.

The Oklahoma City chamber president said towns and farms, with their millions upon millions of dollars in value, would sink beneath the waters of Red river, to emerge utterly ruined when the backed-up flood waters were gradually released. He said his information is based on reports of army engineers on file in Washington.

Paint Different Picture

But the flood control proponents paint a different picture. Their view is that very little, if any, valuable land would be inundated by the project; that only the vast river bottom and adjoining rocky foothills would be submerged; that the owners of all submerged land would be well paid for their loss.

Then, they point to an area [illegible] hundreds of thousands of acres [illegible] land that would "blossom forth into an agricultural haven" and the extensive power possibilities they believe would give citizens relief from commercial rates.

W. E. Schooler, publisher of the Hugo, News, told the Associated Press that many citizens in the border country resented the efforts [illegible] the Oklahoma City Chamber [illegible] Commerce to thwart the project. [illegible] F. Local Farmers Start Plowing

Work Over County Expected To Be General By Today; More Permit Blanks Are Awaited From Washington

Last of the week should see nearly every acre of the 98,927 acres of cotton pledged the government by 2,497 Lubbock county farmers, plowed under, in the opinion of County Agent O. G. Tumlinson. First plowing was begun yesterday morning and hundreds of farmers were armed with temporary permits to start operations in the afternoon.

"It ought not to take more than a few days for farmers to plow up their cotton," Tumlinson said last night. "The last of the week surely will see most of the work done.

General By Today

"Plowing will be general by Wednesday. Nearly all of the temporary permits were ready for distribution Tuesday. There are a few left over."

No additional permit blanks were received ysterday. However, Monday night Tumlinson and the county committee had 3,000 copies of the two duplicates made, in addition to the 1,000 duplicates received from Washington.

Work Is Begun

Members of each community committee were called into Lubbock yesterday and the work of preparing permit blanks for distribution begun. As fast as a group was finished, they were rushed to the several communities by other committee members.

All available space in the federal building was in use and some of the committeemen went to the Texas Cotton Cooperative association office where they signed up blank permits. By noon many of the 29 communities had almost completed their work.

"We are going ahead with these blanket permits, although we do not have the original blank that is to be sent to Washington. We keep one duplicate in the office here and another one is kept by the farmer," Mr. Tumlinson said.

On applications involving over $1,500 no permits are to be issued until countersigned and inspected by J. H. Taylor of Ralls, federal inspector for the county.

Dawson County Ready To Plow

Authority To Plow Up Cotton In Lamesa Area Is Received Monday; Agents Reports For Two Sections

(Special To The Avalanche)

LAMESA, July 25. — Authority for plowing up cotton was received Monday in Dawson county by Alva Debnam, county agent in charge.

According to Debnam, Dawson county has contracted to retire 13,014 acres; Borden county, 2,-228 acres. Dawson county has 382 contracts, while Borden has 57 contracts.

Debnam, interpreting the immediate cash value of these counties resulting by the execution of contracts, stated that Dawson would benefit by cash $28,727.57, by cash and cotton, $67,171.90. At present price of cotton, an extra $40,000.00. (Six cents per pound profit if sold now). Total 107,171.90. Borden county would receive in cash $6,918.50; cash and cotton, $9,296.00. (Profit considering 6 cents per pound, $2,000.00.) Total, $$11,296.00.

Under the cotton option plan, Debnam states that Dawson county has bought 2,436 bales of government cotton; Borden county, 350 bales. Debnam states that authority for plowing up cotton will be issued at once in these two counties.

Due to good seasons in most parts of these two counties, farmers will plow up their cotton and plant feeds at the same time.

Chasing Father Time around the world in an effort to lop off a day or two from some previous record is a sport that has been luring adventurers for years and years. Records continue to be set—and to be kicked into the discard at an amazing clip, considering what a racing trip from one spot to the same one, by way of the globe, means in the way of courage and stamina. Above are pictured some of the dashers who have been in the spotlight most prominently. The world gasped when Nellie Bly, one of the first of the "sob sisters," turned in that 72-day time—gasped not so much at the record as that any woman should have succeeded in tripping 'round the circle all by herself. And the world still gasps at each new dash, as Wiley Post (right), latest of the intrepid adventurers, is learning.

Capitol Chatter

By Charles E. Simons

Associated Press Staff Writer

Charles E. Simons

AUSTIN, July 25 (AP)—Scarcely had the highway department moved into the recently completed highway building than talk started about the need for another state structure.

This one would be for use of the courts and be known as the state courts building.

At present the Texas supreme court, the third court of civil appeals, and the court of criminal appeals occupy offices in the main capitol. Their offices are congested and none too well lighted or equipped.

Eventually, court attaches believe, a separate building will be constructed for the courts. Already they have picked a site for it on the corner of Congress and Eleventh streets at the foot of Capitol Hill. The state owns the land which is now used for park purposes.

It likely will be several years, however, before the legislature loosens the purse strings of the treasury to build a courts building.

The surcingle that friends of James V. Allred, attorney general, presented to him has been given a place of honor in Allred's office. It reposes on one corner of his desk.

His friends sent with the surcingle the advice that Allred use it to ride into the governor's office.

Recently one of Allred's visitors asked him what he was going to do with it.

"You never can tell," Allred replied with a twinkle. "It's a mighty good surcingle," he added as he patted it fondly.

Another Threat To Kidnap San Antonio Man Revealed

SAN ANTONIO, July 25. (AP)—Another threat to kidnap Isaac Bledsoe, wealthy San Antonio music dealer who three years ago led to the capture of a gang which abducted Ralph W. Morrison, local power magnate and lately a delegate from this country to the London economic conference, was rumored here today after Chief of Police Owen W. Kilday had conducted an all night investigation.

Details of the reported abduction threat were guarded with utmost secrecy by officials, but hints of the affair leaked through. Kilday was understood to have arrested one suspect.

Fire and Police Commissioner Phil Wright denied the truth of the rumor after he said he had communicated with Kilday and Detective Captain Albert Hopkins. Bledsoe also denied it.

Trio Wounded In Polk Area

Three Young Men In Serious Condition After Shooting Monday; One Man Is Held In Jail For Attack

LIVINGSTON, Tex., July 25. (AP)—Three Polk county young men are in a hospital in a serious condition as a result of a shooting late Monday at a roadside lunch wagon sixteen miles south of Livingston.

The injured are Garnet Galloway, son of County Commissioner Hobby Galloway; Rex Holliday, nephew of Sheriff R. D. Holliday of Polk county, and Glenn Williams, son of a Goodrich farmer.

Galloway and Williams were shot through the back and Holliday through the neck.

The shooting followed when the three went into the lunch wagon. A waitress ran across the highway to a neighbor's, Warren Griggs. Griggs returned to the wagon with a shot gun.

Holliday tussled with Griggs over a gun. W. L. Whittington, one-armed owner of the lunch wagon, grabbed a .32 calibre gun and fired, officers were told. Holliday and Galloway were wounded.

Williams ran. Whittington followed, shooting again. A bullet hit Williams in the back and he fell.

Passing motorists picked up the wounded men and brought them to a hospital where emergency operations were performed.

Whittington was put in jail at Cold Spring.

Look at the Brakes when you "look at All Three"

FOR 17 years, Capt. Doughty has sailed out of Portland harbor. Nowadays, you'll see him sailing around Portland streets in the Plymouth sedan that's pictured at the right.

Why a Plymouth? "Out at sea, a man has room to maneuver out of trouble," says the Captain. "On land . . . you have to be able to stop in your tracks!"

So hydraulic brakes win another friend. Because they "stop you on a dime." They are self-equalizing.

No other low-priced car offers you hydraulic brakes. No other low-priced car offers you the combination of Floating Power engine mountings, safety-steel bodies, rigid-X frame.

In short . . . no other low-priced car offers you the balance of comfort, safety, style and performance, and you have only to "look at all three" to find this out. Do that . . . before you buy.

"I know something about mechanics. And I'm proud to show my new Plymouth . . . because it's not only trim-looking but sturdy and dependable."

Lorenzo Meets Post At 3:30 Today; Hubbers Win Over Abernathy Club

Grassland And Abernathy To Play Thursday

Hectic Game Expected Today As Loser Goes Out; Lubbock Remains Unbeaten With 8-1 Victory Over Abernathy

Two deliberate, determined baseball clubs battle it out for the opportunity to get back "in the money" this afternoon at the College Avenue baseball park. The game starts at 3:30 o'clock.

Lorenzo and Post, defeated teams in Sunday's double bill which introduced the second annual Avalanche-Journal Invitation tournament, are the opponents this afternoon, and a promise of everything in the books is made to fans of the territory.

GRASSLAND IN JOUST

A fifth club entered the Avalanche-Journal Invitation tournament yesterday when Managers E. L. Flowers and M. C. Thomas submitted the entry of Grassland, a small but baseball-hot community a few miles east of Tahoka.

The Grassland club, known as a sweet fielding bunch of ball players, has combined with Post, already represented here in a combination with the Lubbock Ramblers, to send a club here.

Grassland meets Abernathy Thursday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock on the College Avenue Park. The winner of today's game between Lorenzo and Post will play the Lubbock Hubbers Friday afternoon.

Hubbers On Toes

The Lubbock Hubbers played heads up baseball yesterday to defeat Abernathy, 8 to 1, and remain undefeated in the race for the cash prize, due to the fine pitching of Lefty Wright and the hitting and fielding of Lefty Bettes at first.

Lefty Wright, who allowed three hits, two of them scratches, while beating the Post-Rambler combination Sunday, again took his turn on the mound yesterday, giving up four hits, one of them a questionable bingle, to stand the Abernathy crew on its head and permit but one run. Only two men reached third base for Abernathy during the contest.

Holloway Gets Homer

The lone run by Abernathy was Bill Holloway's four-base blow to left field. Two were out when he pounded out a scorcher in the fourth inning. Scott Prather, next man up, was safe on an error, but was taken at third. Keith drew one of two passes allowed by the Lubbock southpaw.

To the tune of base blows and the squawking on the part of losing players and managers regarding the umpiring, the Lubbock Hubbers batted to four pitchers yesterday. They drove Jean Crossland off the mound in the second inning, Manager Rodgers sending in Keith, who lasted through part of the seventh. Walker pitched to two men in the seventh, and Red Helms came in from second base to pitch the last frame.

First Two Fanned

Wright whiffed the first two batsmen to face him and caused the other to pop out to him. For Lubbock, Burly Burleson drew a pass and swiped second while Crossland was walking Pus Ballard. The latter was caught at second, however, and Cowboy Kyle hit a high one which the high wind caught and played it into the center fielder's hand. Evo Marshall struck out.

Abernathy again was up and down, and Ed Hambright led off for Lubbock with a single. He advanced on Bettes' sacrifice and scored from second on Chuck Webster's single. Satch Hill walked, the first of three times, and Wright hit into a double play.

Charles Pressley was safe on a slight infield hit that struck the plate and bounced toward the pitcher in the third, and then stole second. But one was down before him and the next two flied out. Lubbock enjoyed a good third inning as Keith took the mound. Burleson and Ballard were out to start it, and Kyle drew a free ticket. He pilfered second while Marshall was waiting out a walk, and Hambright's second consecutive single brought him home. Then Lefty Bettes walloped a mighty blow down the right field foul line, which curved out and rolled on while the left-handed first sacker touched all the bases, Marshall and Hambright scoring before him.

Webster stopped a bean-ball and Hill drew another walk, but Wright bounded out to short for the third out.

Another Reaches Third

Abernathy's run came in the fourth after Helms and Barrett were retired, Holloway's homer going past Marshall in left field. Thereafter it was three up and as many down except in the eighth when Catcher Anslay singled, advanced as May walked and got to third on a play at third. Two were out, and Barrett grounded to second. A neat double killing in the ninth staved off an Abernathy rally after Holloway had started with a safe hit.

Lubbock scored thrice in the seventh. Kyle, who had doubled his previous time up, popped out to third; Marshall drew his second walk, and Hambright was safe on a play intended to catch Marshall at second. It was slow. Lefty Bettes then cracked out a triple to clear the sacks. Webster struck out and Hill walked. Keith missed a high infield fly and Bettes ran home, Wright going safe. Burleson walked to intoxicate the hassocks, but Ballard grounded to third.

Bettes, who returned to the Hubber fold Sunday after playing a few months with the Ramblers, cracked out a single in the eighth after two were out.

(By The Associated Press)

ST. LOUIS, July 25. — The St. Louis Cardinals made Frankie Frisch's debut as manager a success today by defeating the Cincinnati Reds, 3 to 1, behind the excellent pitching of the veteran Jess Haines. Haines was in fine form, holding the Reds to six hits and blanking them except in the fourth inning when doubles by Rice and Moore produced the only Cincinnati runs.

BUCS TAKE PAIR

PITTSBURGH, July 25. (AP)—The Pirates defeated the second place Chicago Cubs in both ends of a doubleheader today, 4 to 3, and 4 to 1, and got back into the thick of the National League race.

The double victory left the Bucs only a game and a half behind Chicago while the lead the idle New York Giants hold over the Cubs was increased to three games.

The pitching of Steve Swetonic and Hal Smith was an important factor in the Bucs' triumph while Freddy Lindstorm put in a busy day at bat to run his hitting streak to 22 consecutive games since he came out of a slump about three weeks ago.

(By The Associated Press)

PHILADELPHIA, July 25. — The Washington Senators hung up a 5 to 1 victory over the Athletics today in a game that was shortened to five innings by rain, and increased their lead over the idle New York Yankees to a full game.

The Griffmen took advantage of Roy Mahaffey's wildness to score four runs in the first inning and after that Earl Whitehill's flinging never left the issue in doubt.

Rain halted the action just as the sixth started.

Upsets Feature Softball Games In Both Leagues

An upset in each league featured yesterday's play in the Lubbock Softball association when the Avalanche-Journal team, cellar champs of the National league, trounced Jim Holt's City Hall team and when the Federal Employees won over Quicksall-Pryor, handing that team its first defeat of the season. The scores were 12 to 6 and 12 to 3.

With Truman Hutson pitching four-hit ball, the City Hall team was held to scores in only two innings. They tallied four times in the fourth inning and twice in the seventh, while the Reporters, playing good ball in the field, pounded the City pitcher for scores in every inning but the third and sixth. After a single tally in the first, the Newsies scored five times in the second, added one in the fourth, three in the fifth and two in the seventh.

Johnson Hurls Well

Quicksall-Pryor was held in check by the fine pitching of Lloyd Johnson, who worked his position like a major leaguer and never weakened. The auto parts team registered a couple of runs in the fourth and one in the seventh, while the Federals took a four-run lead in the first, added two in the fourth, a pair in the fifth, and four in the sixth to complete the rout.

Today's schedule calls for two games in the American league, and one in the National. Lubbock Printers meet Weiss-Truck Terminal at Ave. K and 25th street and Peoples Ice meets Hilton Hotel at 22nd street and Ave. R, both games to start at 6:15 o'clock. "They Cannot Beat Us"—Giants

That's The Telegram On The Wall In Clubhouse, Written By Blondy Ryan Whose Sensational Punch Is Great Asset

By ALAN GOULD
Associated Press Sports Editor

NEW YORK, July 25.—Displayed prominently and confidently in the clubhouse of the pace-setting New York Giants at the Polo Grounds is a telegraphic message that stands today as the baseball equivalent of the celebrated Spanish wartime "message from Garcia."

It reads: "They cannot beat us. Enroute. J. C. Ryan."

If the rejuvenated Giants have a slogan, if there are four words that typify the rare fighting spirit of Bill Terry's club, they unquestionably consist of the telegram that Shortstop John C. (Blondy) Ryan dispatched to his manager in St. Louis shortly before he got back into the game, after being laid up with a spiked leg, and promptly proceeded to help break the team's losing streak.

Ryan, playing his first season as a major league regular, has developed into the sparkplug of a team that has knocked baseball dope into a cocked hat this year, cut a sensational swath through National League ranks and just returned from a tough western trip, still in the lead and still confident it can lick any rival in sight.

"They cannot beat us."

That's the way they all feel now. That's the impression they gave, from Terry down to the bat-boy, as they were forced to spend today kidding each other and playing cards instead of having a workout, due to a midday downpour.

"Guts? You never saw anything in your life like this outfit," remarked Terry, who is young and enthusiastic enough himself to participate in, instead of being aloof from his team's "college spirit."

BASEBALL'S BIG 6

(By The Associated Press)

Al Simmons increased his lead in the American League batting race yesterday and crept closer to Chuck Klein, Big Six leader, as he made two hits in four times up against Cleveland and added a point to his average. Jimmy Foxx and Joe Cronin each made one hit in three attempts in their abbreviated game, leaving their averages unchanged, while the three National League members of the Big Six all were unscheduled. Zell Eaton Wins Western Amateur Medal With 141

MEMPHIS, Tenn., July 25. (AP)—Zell Eaton of Oklahoma City, a 19-year-old youngster, romped off with the Western Amateur golf championship's medal honor here today with a 36-hole total of 79-69—141 in the qualifying test.

He was two shots in front of the veteran Jack Westland, the first day's leader, who had 71-72—143.

Playing his entire round today over the country club layout in a steady rain, Eaton had par hanging on the ropes as one birdie after another rolled off his clubs. He was three under perfect figures for 14 holes and needed only par in for a 67. He had thrilled the gallery with three birdies in a five-hole stretch coming in.

Then with par almost at his mercy, he hooked his drive on the 15th and lost a stroke, rallied to par the 16th but dropped another shot as his approach to the 17th sailed over the green into the tall grass.

Eaton had finished before Westland started his second round and the Chicagoan had the advantage—or perhaps the misfortune—of knowing exactly what he would have to tally to win.

Terrors As Captive Of Indians Told In Book By Father Of Abernathy Man

Hand-Made Firearm Also Has Part In Early History

By VIC LAMB
Special Correspondent

ABERNATHY, July 25.—Yellow with age, and with its original cover missing, a small 26-page book, owned by J. P. Nystel, secretary of the chamber of commerce at Abernathy, tells of the experiences of his father when captured and kept prisoner three months by a band of Comanche Indians in 1867.

Although he holds the little book priceless, it does not match the value he places on a hand-made fire-arm, made in 1778, which Nystel's grandfather carried on a search for his missing son in 1867, which he also owns. The gun was made in Norway by one of Nystel's ancestors, and was brought to America in 1849. Nystel's grandfather handed it down to his son, Ole T. Nystel, who in turn passed it to J. P. The gun barrel measures over 40 inches long, hand-wrought from steel. The stock was whittled by hand, and attached to the metal parts with wooden pegs, which testify to its age. Diameter of the barrel is equal to a modern shotgun. Hand-made bullets were used in firing it, and it was loaded in the muzzle.

Tells Of Adventures

In the booklet describing the terrors of his capture, Nystel's father included some Indian customs and also adds reflections and religious experiences attending the adventure.

Title page of the book reads as follows: "Lost and Found; or Three Months With the Wild Indians. A Brief Sketch of the Life of Ole T. Nystel, Embracing His Experience While in Captivity to the Comanches, and Subsequent Liberation from Them. Reflections and Religious Experiences."

It was printed in 1888 by Williams Bros., printers of Dallas. In the opening chapter, he tells of the immigration of his parents to Henderson county, Texas, from Norway in 1848, where he was born in 1853. His mother died when he was eight years old, and following this, the father moved to Van Zandt county, and later to Bosque county, where he wrote the book on reaching manhood.

Assistance Is Granted

When 14 years old, a neighbor, Carl Quested, stopped at his father's home en route to a cedar brake to chop and haul poles. He wanted Ole's assistance, which was readily granted. The brakes were five miles from the Nystel home, among the hills and mountains, surrounded by dense cedar.

"I was at the wagon and Mr. Quested had gone off about fifty steps to commence work," the book reads, "when I heard a noise, and on looking up, I saw two Indians, made hideous with war paint. At the same time, they saw me, giving blood curdling yells and starting toward me. It appeared to my excited imagination they were devils who had come for me, and really, I thought I could see great streams of fire issuing from their mouths. Having been taught that the devil 'would get me' if I was not good, it is not strange I felt as I did.

Started To Run

"I started to run, and had got about 40 yards when an arrow pierced my right leg, passing entirely through the flesh part, just above he knee. At this I fell, and one of them leveled a pistol at me and motioned me to come to him, which I was not long in obeying.

"My companion started to run at the same time I did. In his course was a bluff about twenty feet high, but on reaching it he never stopped to measure the distance, but leaped down the precipice, landing safely. He was fired at during the flight, one shot hitting his right arm. I never knew his fate until liberated, but supposed from the Indian's broken English and gestures that he had escaped, which on my return home I was happy to learn."

Tells Of March

In the third chapter he tells of their march to an Indian village. "By this time my wound was hurting severely, to which they paid no heed, nor applied anything to alleviate the pain, but after a day or two, when it had gotten thoroughly sore, they would carry it through a process of twisting and wrenching every now and then, I suppose to increase my already excruciating pain. They would kick and knock me about just for a pastime, it seemed, whip my bare back until it was perfectly bloody, with frequent repetitions, fire their pistols so close to my head that the caps and powder would fly in my face, producing powder burns and bruises. In fact, I was used so roughly that when I got loose, my head was a solid sore.

White Men Escape

"Once during our march we came upon a man and his son by the name of Fine, who was hunting a horse that had been stolen by these Indians. When they saw us they ran to a live oak thicket, tying their mules and concealing themselves in the dense brush. The Indians surrounded the thicket and began firing into it. They both escaped but not until the old man was wounded in his arm.

"The Indians took the mules, and we resumed our march. Before sundown we came upon a negro man with a wagon. He saw us when a half mile off, and came running toward us, begging for his life. The thirst for blood triumphed over his plea for mercy, and amidst his cries, they stabbed him to the heart. He sank to the ground without a moan, save the death rattle in his throat. One of them pierced him through with his spear, it coming out at his breast. They left him unscalped, showing by signs their disgust for it, pointing to my head as if to show contrast the difference.

Commanded To Laugh

"They commanded me to laugh at this horrible deed, but you can imagine what a sickly effort it was, thinking every minute my time would be next."

The fifth night Ole slept in a cave near the Indian's tent, since he was not allowed its protection during the night. "They missed me on awakening, and after searching long, they finally came upon me when they returned to camp. I was seated in their tent, and on seeing me, they thought I was some spirit, because my tracks in the snow coming to the tent had been filled with snow flakes."

Late in the sixth day as the Indians stopped to water horses, the mule bearing Nystel was so slow to get his fill, and when they became impatient to leave and the mule wouldn't budge, they shot the animal out from under the boy. "I tumbled into the water, and they dragged me out as if I were a sack of corn, throwing me on another horse. My coat soon froze to me, but I dared not complain."

Set To Digging Roots

In the afternoon of the seventh day he was set to digging roots, one of the Indians standing near eating them as fast as he could scratch them out with his fingers. They grew on the edge of the pools of water and his hands became so numb with cold, he could hardly move them. "I finally grew desperate and jumped up from my work, feeling I could dig no longer. At this, the Indian knocked me into the water. I arose and struck him with such a blow he fell to the ground, and then I ran. My leg was sore and stiff, I did not think it possible to do this before. The Indian soon jumped up and started after me. I made such good time that he had to return and get a pony. I was soon overtaken, but my feet seemed to awe them.

"On the ninth day, they gave me a little broiled beef, the first food I had eaten since leaving home. From here our course was northwest. I still suffered greatly from my wound and lack of sufficient clothing. Our line of travel was now over the Staked Plains. We came to a steep and rugged mountain and as it was near noon we stopped to rest and eat. I sat down near a heap of leaves and dry brush and was moving the leaves about with my hand when there was disclosed to my view a great ball of shining yellow metal, about as large as a man's two fists. It was as much as I could lift, and I was confident now that it was gold, almost if not wholly in the pure state, for I bit it, and it was soft enough for me to make dents with my teeth. The Indians saw it, too, and made me put it down. From their signs, I gathered some of them wanted to bury it, but finally concluded to leave it as it was. I have often thought of returning to look for the gold, but after all these years I am sure I could not locate it, if some one hasn't already found it."

Reach Indian Village

The march lasted three weeks before the group reached an Indian village of wigwams, where the Indians bade him select a girl from among the tribe as his wife. He refused to, and finally had to thrash one of them before she would let him alone. His duties at the village were to herd horses, carry water, get wood and join in buffalo hunts.

Nystel soon became one of the tribe, entering in some of the sports and taking part when the tribe moved their village to new camping sites. On one occasion, he was the only guest at the chief's table. Their meal consisted of about eight gallons of coffee. The coffee was mixed with one cup of sugar to two cups of coffee, a concoction which soon made Nystel ill. The chief's custom was to not let anyone leave his table until the guest had eaten as much as he. The feast lasted all day long, both indulging in the sweet drink, and with Nystel taking time off to vomit every few minutes after his first fill.

Escape Lingers In Mind

The idea of escape never left the boy's mind, and one dark and cloudy night he procured one of the fleetest horses in the tribe. He headed eastward from the camp, and as soon as rain began falling, he put the horse to all it could stand all night long. At daybreak, he was disappointed to see his pursuers close at his heels.

"When I found they would completely overtake me, my horse almost gone, I dismounted and lay down on the grass. As they came up, I was laughing as if to treat the matter as a huge joke. I had learned it fared easier with me when I did not cry or show sorrow. On catching me this time, they seemed to make up their minds to get rid of me, for I was causing them considerable trouble.

Traded For Supplies

"They carried me to a place near Smoky Hills, Kansas, where they traded me for $250.00 worth of supplies, brown paper, blankets, tobacco, flour, sugar and some money. Mr. Eli Bewell bought me. I was perfectly naked at the time, and much embarrassed. My new found friends provided me with some clothes, however."

From Kansas it took Nystel three months to return to the place where his father lived. Enroute, he happened to run on the Indians that had captured him, but they did not molest him, other than to persuade him to stay in Kansas. "They believe that if I returned to Texas and told my story, the Texans would be harder on them. Kansas people were not so severe with the Indians."

Customs Are Described

The remainder of the book gives some of the Indians' customs as observed during his capture, and it ends with Biblical quotations relating to his beliefs as to his liberation being brought about by Divine power.

Aside from the book and gun, Nystel of Abernathy also owns a pair of hand-made shoes, with heavy wooden soles and leather covering of Holstein bull hide, which he received from a friend several years ago. The shoes originally belonged to Nels Nelson's father in Denmark. Nelson formerly lived near Abernathy, and after his passing, the shoes were willed to a bachelor friend, who in turn, surrendered them to Nystel.

Indian Pottery Believed Found

A piece of what is believed to be Indian pottery, a vase about seven or eight inches tall and six inches wide at the widest part, was found in a sand bank in a ravine in Yellowhouse Canyon, near Buffalo Springs, by Rowland L. Royalty, 1710 Avenue R, yesterday.

"If we had seen the vase before we sunk a pick into the sand, we might have taken it out whole," Mr. Royalty said. "We were at work building a road in a ravine up the side of the canyon.

"Underneath a big rock, we found the sand. A pick struck the vase and broke it into five or six pieces. It was buried about four feet in the sand, beside a tree."

The vase is painted purple, with red stripes about a quarter of an inch wide. Of black clay, the vase is very brittle and broke easily. There are designs on the vase in addition to the stripes.

The city has a force of men building a road in the canyon about a quarter of a mile south of Buffalo Springs, so that rock may be hauled out of the canyon for work on city streets. It was while building the road that the vase was found.

"I have the pieces at my house and if any one from the history department at Texas Tech wants them, they may have them," Mr. Royalty said. "Of course the vase is no use to me, but it will be to Texas Tech."

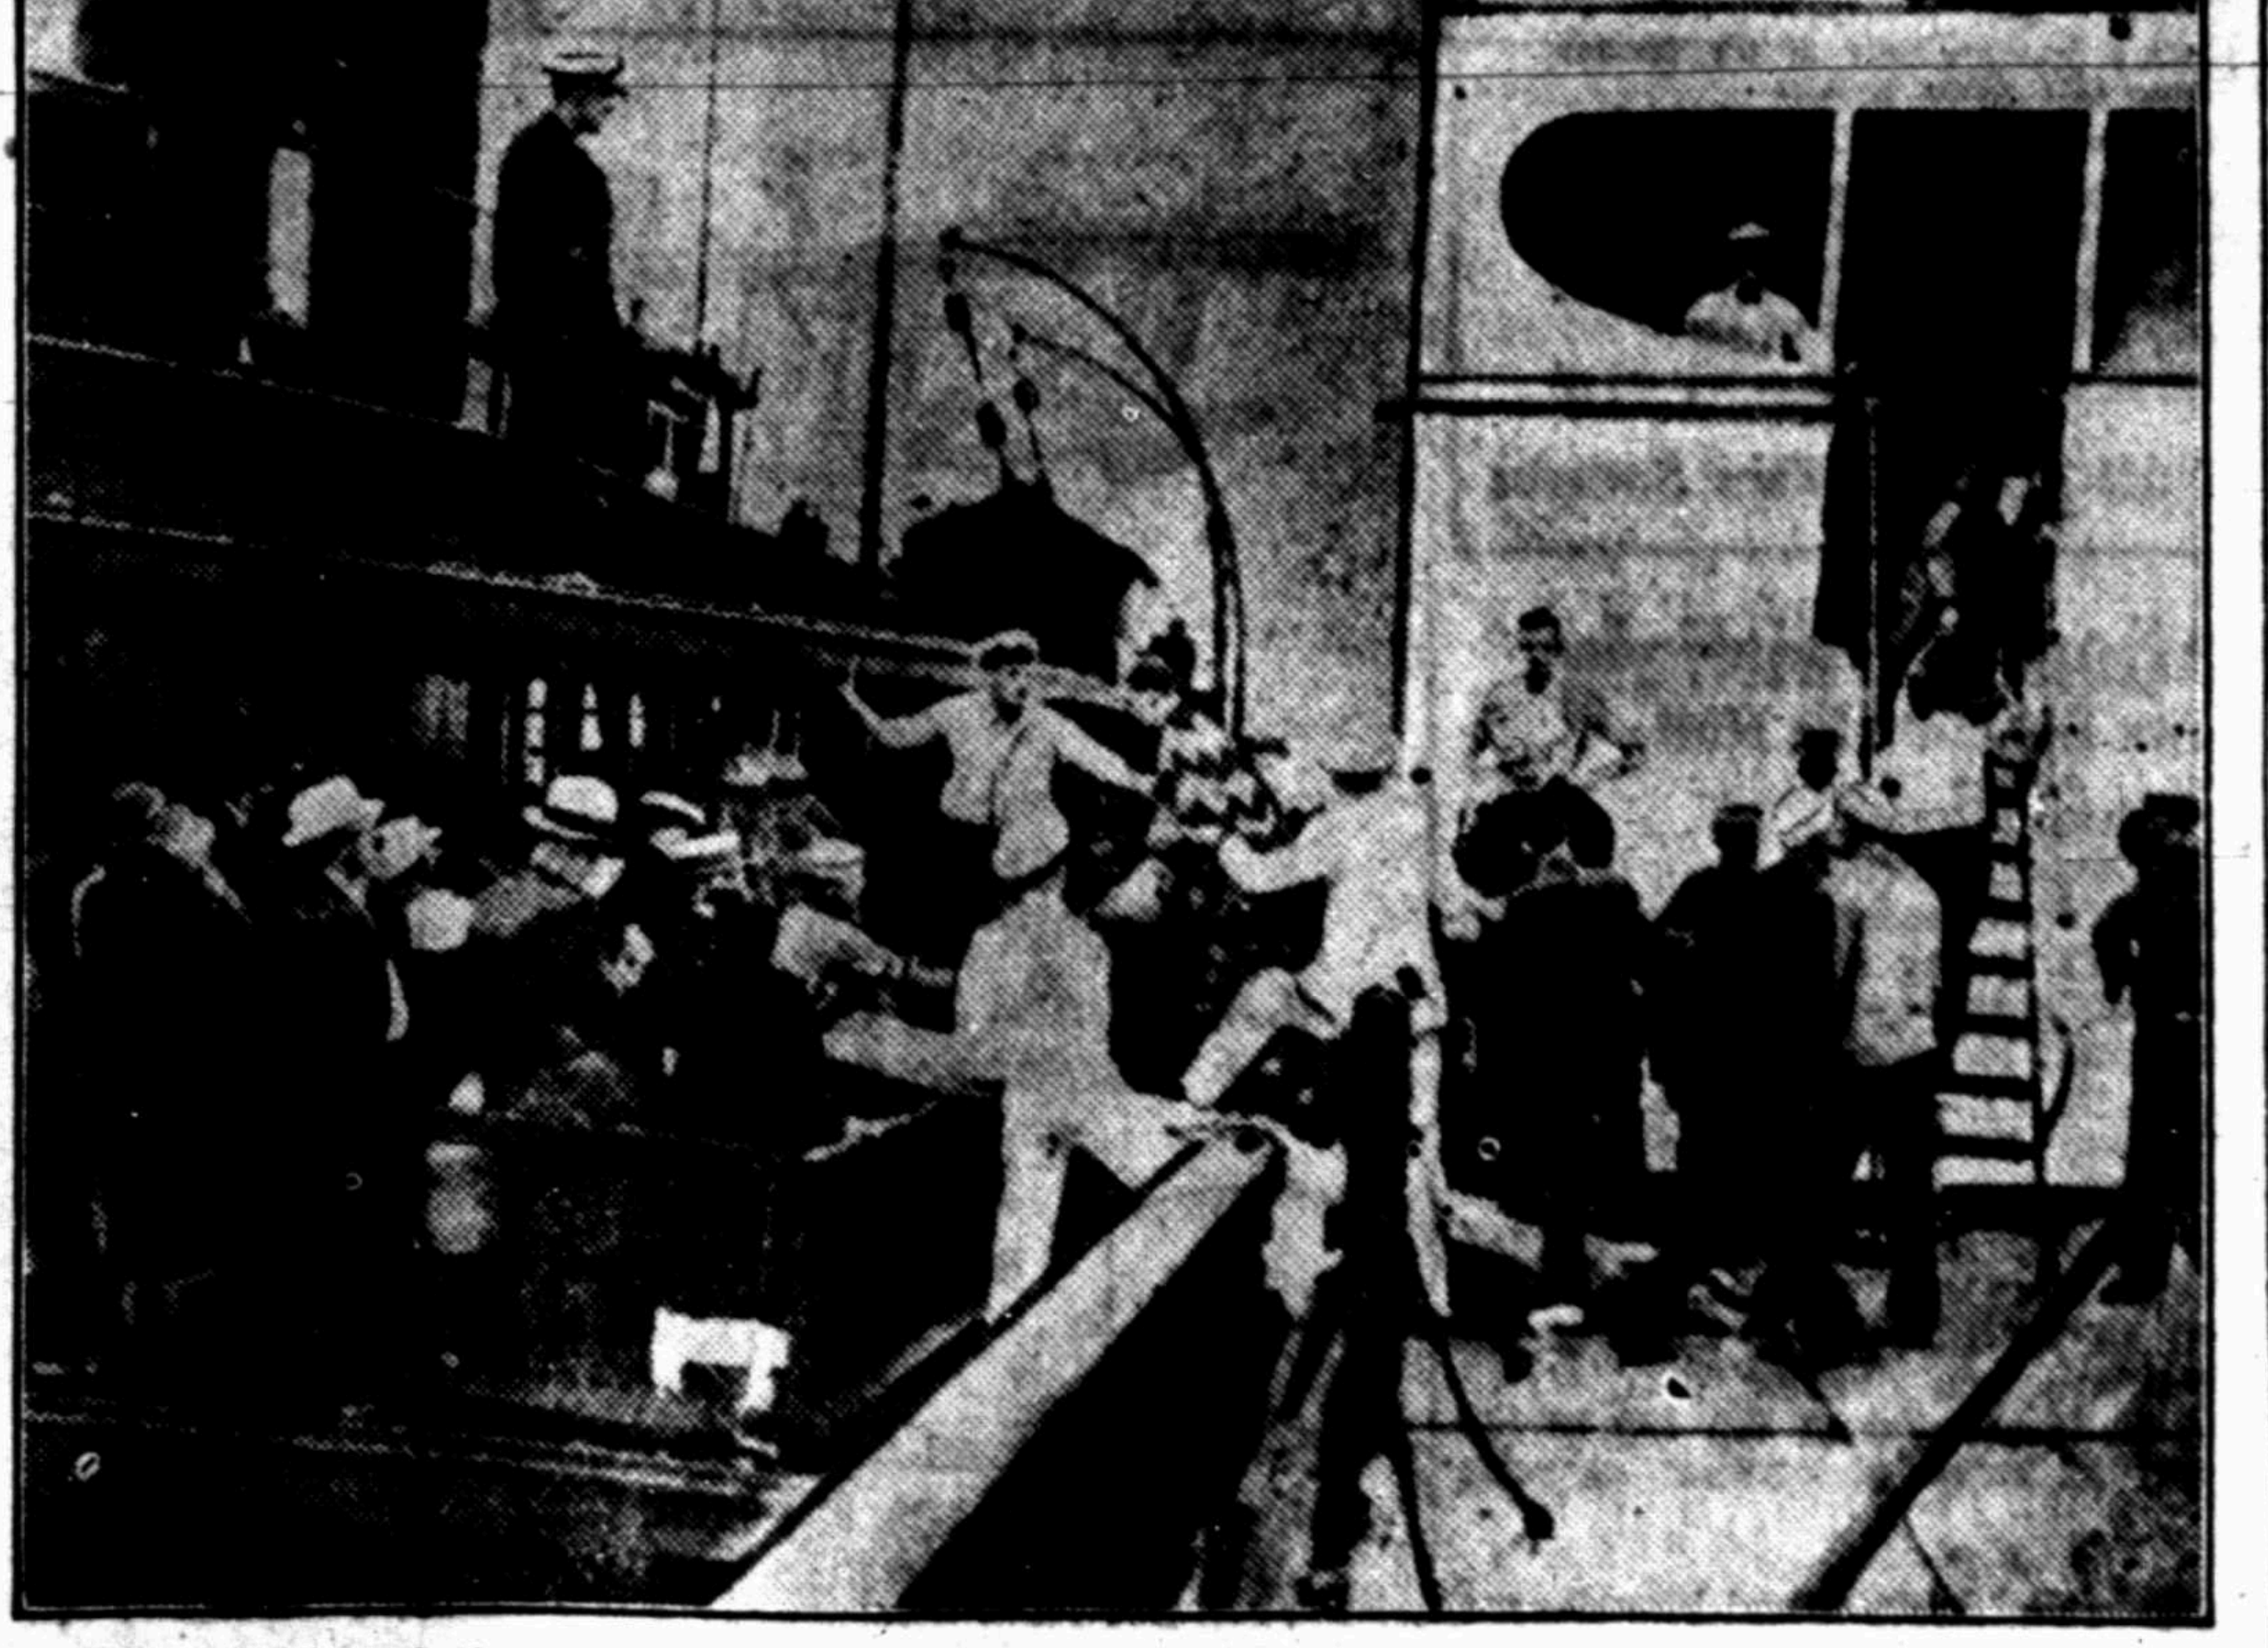
Passengers Removed After Sea Collision



Passengers aboard the Europe bound liner City of Baltimore were transferred to a ferry boat after the vessel collided with a tanker near Baltimore. A sixty-foot hole was torn in the bow of the liner and it was grounded to keep it from sinking. The passengers were removed without disorder and returned to Baltimore for sailing on another ship. This picture taken aboard the stricken liner shows passengers going aboard the ferry. (Associated Press Photo).

Road Plan Will Receive An Okay

Guy R. Johnston, district resident engineer of Lubbock, said yesterday that a comprehensive road building program for West Texas, approved at a meeting of district agents last week in Abilene, probably would be announced late this week by Gib Gilchrist, engineer in chief.

"The state is planning small lettings of contracts at frequent intervals instead of large ones," Mr. Johnston said. "This is in order to keep costs down and in anticipation of increases in material costs. First letting will be in August, the date to be announced from Austin.

Based On Population

"The program is based on population, rather than some other matter. Relief of unemployment over the state rather than actual connecting up of present paving jobs, is the objective.

"As far as this division is concerned, we got our share of the money appropriated for Texas; perhaps a little bit more. But there will be more lettings soon and we will get more right along."

Right-of-way problems are being settled rapidly over the division. Swisher county reports securing necessary land from Tulia south to Hale county, with the easements for between Tulia and Happy available when needed.

On highway No. 7 the right-of-way is complete from Lubbock county to Farwell. In Floyd county the only papers lacking are between Floydada and Lockney and the county is condemning land there. Lamb and Bailey counties have secured their necessary acreage.

South of Lubbock No. 9 is virtually complete in Dawson and Lynn counties and work on the remainder is under way and nearing completion.

Kansas Farmers Union Head Is Chose As Wheat Adviser

SALINA, Kas., July 25. (AP)—Appointment of Cal A. Ward, president of the Kansas Union, as special farm assistant and advisor to the wheat administration, was announced today in a telegram from M. L. Wilson, wheat administrator.

While not definitely decided, it is probable Mr. Ward will have charge of the campaign in Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado and Missouri and possibly another state or two.

Applications For Postal Work Will Close August 14

Application for examination for postmastership of Lubbock will close in Washington, D. C., August 14, the United States civil service commission announced yesterday.

The three highest in the examination will be certified to the postmaster general for recommendation to the president for nomination, the Associated Press reported. Salary for the position is $3,600 a year. The Lubbock postoffice is of the first class.

To Determine Fitness

Conducted under President Roosevelt's order of July 12, and not under the civil service act and rules, the examination will be of a nonassembled type, consisting of application forms submitted by each competitor and an individual investigation of him and his training, experience, and general fitness.

Competitors will not be required to report for an examination at any place, ratings being based entirely on information in the application forms and separately compiled supplementary and corroborative data.

Forms Available

Application forms may be obtained from the secretary of the board of civil service examiners at the postoffice here or from the civil service commission in Washington. They must be properly executed and filed with the commission in Washington prior to the hour of closing business August 14.

Education and training will have 20 per cent weight, business experience and fitness 80 per cent, in ratings.

FDR's Real Offensive

MR. Roosevelt's battle against depression is something very real. No stilted, theoretical attack is it, but, instead, a very determined campaign to lift the nation from the bogs into which it began tumbling over three years ago.

If you heard his radio address of Monday night, or read a report of his statement's in yesterday's Morning Avalanche you will agree that the President is 'on the war path'. And he has put some teeth into his plans, too.

In order that the people all over the land may know who is co-operating with the President and who is not, a list of co-operating firms and organizations is to be regularly posted in every postoffice in the land. It will be a simple matter then for all to learn whose shoulders are to the wheel and whose are not.

This move, of course, is an innovation in American government. It is unusual for the President of the United States to hang a publicity sword of Damocles over the heads of business men and doubtless there are those who will sharply criticize Mr. Roosevelt for his action which may or may not succeed.

But if Mr. Roosevelt's actions are unusual, so are the times and so are the problems confronting his administration. His actions in this regard form another front along which the patriotic and sympathetic aid of the nation is essential.

For after all, the warnings of the President and his recovery chief, General Johnson, should not go unheeded and if they are to succeed they must be given solid support by the people. They are the commanders of the greatest of all peacetime armies in the greatest of all offensives against rot and decay.

Their warnings are against indifference and selfishness on the part of the industrial employer. There is a degree to which the interests of labor and capital are identical. The employer can have no hope of profit unless labor is employed, as labor can have no hope of employment unless the employer has an ultimate expectation of profit.

The initiative in such a revival as the United States has undertaken must be taken by the employers. The people cannot put themselves back to work unless they junk the country's whole industrial machine with all its equipment and return to the old handcraft methods under which every man was a factory in himself. That the employers certainly do not wish to see, and yet the trend was definitely in that direction until employment began to pick up.

The test of the whole matter becomes one of faith in the cause itself. We can, if we will, restore American prosperity. We cannot do it if those who control industry and business demand their profit before they put people back to work and increase wages.

TRAFFIC MENACE

One by one states are legislating "one-eyed Charlie" off the highways. For those who do not associate the name with the subject, it is explained that "One-eyed Charlie" is the motorist who drives with only one light burning.

It is evident that this "half-blind" user of the highways represents a traffic hazard. Even at close range an automobile with one light out of operation may be mistaken for a motorcycle by the driver of a passing car and there is no way of ascertaining on which side the good light is. Accidents are frequently the result.

Not all motorists caught on the road with one headlight out are negligent. Electric bulbs and wiring are not infallible nor do they endure eternally, and the light that fails doesn't always chose the time and place where its default can be discovered and repaired immediately.

Most motorists, for the protection of themselves and others, do not postpone the replacement of the burned out bulb longer than necessary, but it is apparent that there are others who thoughtlessly keep going as long as they have one light in operation and do not run afoul of other vehicles or the strong arm of the law.

Motorists who deliberately and knowingly operate their machines without two efficient headlights and a rear light make necessary laws which work hardships upon not only themselves, but upon those who would not knowingly drive without the required quota of lights. Legislation should not be necessary to persuade all automobile owners to keep their lights in operation and to carry a set of replacement or auxiliary bulbs, as it requires under some state motor laws.

The height of futility, in our estimation, would be a pickpocket trying to ply his trade at a nudist camp.

Today's One-Minute Sermon

God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble.

Therefore we will not fear, though the earth be removed, and though the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea.

Though the waters thereof roar and be troubled, though the mountains shake with the swelling thereof. Selah.—Psalm 46:1, 2 and 3.

The News Behind The News

WASHINGTON

By George Durno

THE business of codifying industry has done one thing for the bright young men who have left high-powered jobs temporarily to help General Johnson administer industrial recovery.

It has converted them to the new—so far as they are concerned—economic theory that wages should increase before prices go up.

Insiders say that when these raw recruits assembled to hit a lick for Uncle Sam most of the group of top officials shuddered at the thought of boosting pay before the cash register began ringing.

After a lifetime of upbringing in the lap of big business they regarded such a doctrine as rank heresy.

Now this is all changed. Johnson and his aides are one in declaiming—and meaning it—that money must be put in a man's pocket before he can become a customer. They have decided it is a little more than the old question of whether the chicken precedes the egg.

Those of us who depend on current wages to meet those pesky monthly bills are expected to cheer.

TAXES: Lest you get too optimistic about all this prosperity talk the Treasury Department ever so quietly has already started to work on a brand new tax system for submission to Congress next January.

The Brain Trust will sit in an extra-special session on this subject. New tax schedules are going to be plenty necessary. It's all very well to talk about "balancing the ordinary budget," but that other set of books marked "extraordinary" is going to keep this generation and the next one busy paying off.

The administration is hoping against hope prohibition will be repealed before Christmas time. That's the one bright spot of potential new revenue our New Dealers see.

But even hooch isn't going to offset the cost of high pressure recovery. Treasury officials have been going into huddles on the problem with great regularity. So far, they might as well have gone straight into a quandary. That's where they've been ending up.

SOCK: The White House is afraid to apply another sock to the smaller fellows in income tax.

Last March's payment woke the white collar man up with an awful jolt—it was so much bigger than the year before. Most of the old nuisance taxes are now being fairly well worked again also, thank you. The big fellows don't seem to have enough money to make them available for much of an extra impost.

It's really a problem worthy of our world's largest agregation of college professors.

SALES: Each time the tax specialists make a complete circuit they seem to stop at the exit marked "sales tax." Here again they seem afraid to venture—at least so far.

Being Democratic the administration goes as if on eggs at mention of this levy that would touch every single one of us from top to bottm. The men at the helm admit off the record it's their one best bet but they shy away from it. They say it's something the country as to be educated to very gradually as was done in the case of the gas tax.

The low-down is they want it to be adopted state by state as a local revenue measure. When enough states have it Uncle Sam can superimpose one of his own.

FADEAWAY: Secretary of Interior Ickes had one bright idea when he took over his Cabinet job.

He moved into a house, pulled in the street number, buried it and forgot it. The whereabouts of the Ickes home is a deep, dark secret. It isn't listed anywhere and no one around him will tell where it is located.

Ickes foresaw all too accurately the avalanche of job-hunters that was to descend on Washington after March 4. Even Mrs. Ickes sends people to see her husbnad at his office.

While he's on the job—and he spends a goodly time there—he'll see you if it's possible. When he closes his desk there's a fadeaway act until next morning—like the Arab and his tent.

NOTES: Civil Service rules against man and wife both working on the Federal payroll apparently don't apply to Republican ex-Congresmen . . . Victor Christgau who lost out last election in Minnesota has a job with the Agriculture Department . . . His wife is working for the Recovery Administration . . . To say nothing of a sister-in-law . . . Those high government officials living in hotels have to run a gauntlet every time they come in or our . . . A line-up of button-holers forms the minute they appear on the horizon . . . One aspiring gentleman suggested to Postmaster General Jim Farley he'd have breakfast with him and talk things over . . . "That's one meal I eat by myself—and enjoy," replied the harassed Jim.

NEW YORK

By James McMullin

CLOSED banks are still causing plenty of headaches. New York estimates the problem is particularly acute in the South and Southwest. Local interests in that section have been either unable or unwilling to match the R. F. C. dollar for dollar on stock subscriptions for new banks to take over the assets of the old. The plan isn't working and millions in buying power are still tied up.

At this point certain large commercial interests step into the picture. They are planning to subscribe capital for a series of new banks in southern cities. St. Louis, Memphis, New Orleans, and Mobile are mentioned among others. They are getting cordial support from Government officials and Federal Reserve authorities. If the plan goes through it will relieve a difficult situation.

The interests in question are not altruists. The primary market for their products is in the South and their sales will be simulated if tied-up deposits are released. Also they expect a fair return on their capital from the new banks themselves.

The question of new bank managements isn't answred yet. The sponsoring interests are refreshingly frank in saying they know nothing about banking. They have also made it clear that they want part in the managements of the defunct banks they expect to take over. It looks like a golden opportunity for a rising crop of bank executives.

Some New York bankers are inclined to resent the encroachment of industry in the banking field. They wonder what will happen to their sacred profession if industry discovers there's nothing mysterious about it after all. They fear they will lose their dominant position. They are probably right.

Still another banking problem is arising in small western cities. There are hundreds of reopened banks which are perfectly solvent but are making no money for their stockholders. What's more, there's very little chance that they will make money for some time to come. They are obliged to remain as liquid as possible to qualify for deposit insurance.

New York hears that the directors of many such banks are debating whether it wouldn't be better to liquidate now and put their capital into more profitable channels.

EXPLANATION OF YESTERDAY'S CARTOON

THE APHIS

The rate of increase of the Aphis or planthouse is so enormous that were it not for their innumerable natural enemies, the descendants of a single female produced and reproduced within a single season, would represent organic matter sufficient to outweigh the entire population of the earth 8 1-2 to 1. This is due to the fact that the young require but a few days to take up reproduction, and that the succeeding generations can, in turn, reproduce ad infinitum.

BARRETT COLVIN, back in New York after years abroad, falls in love with ELINOR STAFFORD. He is 35 and she 20. Elinor returns his affection but her jealous, scheming mother, LIDA STFFORD, breaks up the romance by convincing Barrett that Elinor is flirting with him.

Rich Miss Ella Seton, Elinor's aunt, dies, and to the despair of the relatives, leaves her entire fortune to Barrett. Lida Stafford has been flirting with VANCE CARTER. When Vance learns she will not divorce her husband, BENTWELL STAFFORD, he shoots Bentwell. It is uncertain whether the wounded man will live or die.

Barrett does not want Miss Ella's money but can not give it back to the rightful inheritors because of their pride. Suddenly a plan comes to him. He tells Elinor that if she will marry him and live as a guest in his home for a year he will give her the entire sum to divide between her relatives. Knowing the money may save her father's life, Elinor agrees.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXII

Barrett said decisively, "Show Mr. Streeter to the hall, please, Benson, and tell him that I—Miss Stafford's fiance—will see him there."

The butler, after one frank look of surprise, stiffly piloted the bill collector toward the front of the apartment.

Elinor had risen. Barrett rose also and stook looking down at her. "There is no other way out of all this for you or me either," he reminded her gently.

"I don't—suppose there is," she agreed.

"I hope you don't mind my making the decision for you?" he added.

"No," she answered. "I don't—"

There was a moment's silence. Barrett broke it with, "Elinor—I shall have to call you that, you know—" He paused.

"Yes."

"I don't want anyone to know of this arrangement of ours. Least of all, your mother—"

"Neither do I!" she agreed with a gasp.

It was settled, he saw. He had done it! "Because of all that has happened," he went on, "I think we should be married as soon as possible. Would tomorrow be all right?"

"Oh—!"

"At what time tomorrow, Elinor?"

She moistened her lips. "I don't care," she whispered. "Whenever you like—whenever you think best."

"Then noon if that suits you."

"It will suit me as well as any time," she answered. She was deeply shaken, he saw, and afraid.

He stepped closer to her. "Look up at me," he ordered. She obeyed. "Do you trust me?" he went on.

"I—think so!" she responded weakly.

"You must, you know," he stated inflexibly. "There must be no 'think' about it, and—you can! I want you to understand that."

She nodded; he saw she could not trust herself to speak.

"I'll see that man now," he said.

"Oh—if you would!" she answered, a little calmed. "I've had nothing but that sort of thing all day. It's been dreadful. It makes me ashamed. I hate—cheating!"

"Do you?" he thought bitterly, staring down at her. But he would not let himself brood so.

"Wait here, will you?" he asked. "I want to see you a moment before I go."

"I'll wait," she promised.

Mr. Streeter, the determined collector, gave Barrett a long, itemized bill headed, "Madame Yvette." On it were listed frocks, underthings, a sweater, a hat or two, and an amazing total.

"They were bought by Mrs. Stafford," the man explained.

"Um—are you Madame Yvette?" Barrett questioned. He felt absurdly light-hearted.

Mr. Streeter grinned sheepishly. "You have to have some kind of name," he replied.

"I am Barrett Colvin," said Barrett. "Miss Stafford and I are to be married soon. Your bill will be attended to. I'll send you my check as soon as Miss Stafford becomes Mrs. Colvin. Does that satisfy you?"

He heard the man's assurances that it did. In Barrett's mind the words re-echoed, "Mrs. Colvin—Mrs. Barrett Colvin — Elinor Colvin—"

"The engagement is not secret," Barrett went on, "but I do not want this interview reported. Do I make myself understood?".

"Oh, certainly!" Mr. Streeter assured him. Suddenly the collector melted and became human. He saw that Barrett was obviously happy and excited. It took him back to his own courting days.

"Mr. Colvin," he said weightily, "I'm sure you're going to be very happy!"

Barrett laughed delightedly. "Thanks," he said.

"The signs are right!" Streeter assured him, bowing from the doorway.

When Barrett left a half hour later it was with the consciousness that he was to be married to Elinor Stafford at noon the following day. He had Marcia to tell, a clergyman to see and a ring to buy—no, two rings to buy. Her room must be arranged in his house. Her room—the one that connected with his own, so that the servants would not suspect how things were.

It was a bit upsetting to realize that within 24 hours he was to be married to a girl with whom he must masquerade every sign of affection, a girl whom he could not respect as he should, a girl who did not love him and whom he did not love.

As soon as he had reached home he said sharply, "Higgins, get Mrs. Radnor on the telephone for me, please."

Marcia, he knew, could direct him to someone who would make Elinor's room as attractive as it should be. He was determined that everything should be made pleasant for the girl during the year in which together they must make the world believe their lie.

Marcia was amazed, she repeated again and again that she was "so happy" for Barrett. He heard her fluttering, excited comment and, after he had put down the telephone again, paused thoughtfully. All this was not going to be entirely easy.

Then, hurrying to the hall, he picked up his hat and set out once more. He had to see Arthur Palmer who was both a personal friend and the clergyman of the church the Colvins had attended for years.

Twenty minutes later Palmer, a pleasantly athletic type of man with keen, kind eyes, rose from behind a littered desk. "What's up?" he asked. "Another trip to Gobi?"

"Better than that!" Barrett answered, dropping his hat and gloves to the one cleared space on the desk. "Will you marry me tomorrow at noon?"

"Will I? Great hat! Of course I will. Who's the girl?"

Barrett sat down and told him. "Know her?" he asked.

His old friend nodded slowly. "I know of her," he said. "I've always looked on you Barry, as one finest men I know but I'm darned if you aren't lucky. I've never understood how Miss Stafford could be the sort of girl she is. She hasn't had much to help her but she's beautiful inside as well as out. I'm glad for you, Barrett—"

"Thanks, awfully."

"Did it happen suddenly?"

"Rather."

"And for her, too, I suppose?"

"She seems to think I'm all right," Barrett answered, thinking, "If she did I might play the credulous fool again but—she doesn't."

Arthur Palmer wondered whether Elinor Stafford knew of the existence of his friend's ward and the truth of that matter. He hoped so. Otherwise the facts could so easily be misunderstood and lead to difficulties. He had seen Gerald at Barrett's request. He had helped Barrett find a new home for the youngster and had been struck by the fact that the boy resembled Barrett so closely.

Arthur Palmer considered speaking of all this but dismissed the thought. He would mention it later, he decided.

"Noon, you said?" he asked, flipping the leaves of an engagement book.

"Yes, if that suits you."

"Great hat, you know you can have your wedding when you [illegible] it! I'd do anything to make [illegible] matters suit. Want to be ma[illegible] in the church?"

"I would," Barrett said sl[illegible] "if that's what she wants—"

"Why not telephone her?" [illegible]mer suggested, pushing the ins[illegible]ment forward.

Barrett called the number.

Letters To The Editor

Politics And Prohibition Draw Opinions Of Readers

Editor, The Avalanche: With reference to your editorial in this morning Avalanche, "Make It A Pep Meeting," I want to heartily second the motion on this matter. I have known Congressman Marvin Jones and State Senator Clint Small since our school days, and so knowing them, I do not believe there are two more able, honorable, conscientious and high-minded officials in all this broad land. The other gentlemen I have not known so long but I have no doubt but what they are just the kind of characters that Senator Small and Congressman Jones are, and I have been greatly impressed with their ability. I hope in the instance of these gentlemen the old saw "That a Prophet is not without honor save in his own home town" will not apply.

The world should know that we at home are behind our representatives one hundred per cent, and I hope the City of Lubbock will officially recognize this meeting by sending a delegation, and that a large number of our citizens will make the trip to Amarillo, and give honor where honor is due, to our public officials. Thus let the world know that West Texas is behind her representatives.

Most cordially yours,
TOM GARRARD.
Lubbock.

A PROHIBITIONIST SPEAKS

Editor, The Avalanche: Dear friends and American citizens may I, as your friend and in all kindness ask a few very important questions?

For whom do you want booze? Do you want it for your wife, sons and daughters? For your neighbor's wife and children, for your state, town and community? Do you want it for the schools, public offices, institutions and places of business? Do you want women, children and the public exposed to the dangers, effects and results and the demoralizing influences of insane, brutal, dangerous and destructive intoxication?

If your answer is in the affirmative, then may I ask in all kindness and sincerity, are you not a participant and accessory to the crimes and results of intoxicating drink? You know that both the moral and spiritual laws prohibit it and denounce and condemn it as shameful, degrading, demoralizing and destructive in principle, practice, action, influence and effect on the person, family, public and business in general.

Am I my brother's keeper or his destroyer? Am I the friends of women, children, happy homes, public safety, morality and spirituality? Is not my ballot and influence the truthful and effective answer? Also the effective answer of every father, mother and responsible American Citizen?

Yours for God, home, safety humanity,
T. J. Estes.
Lubbock.

AGAINST RETURN OF BEE[illegible]

Editor, The Avalanche: I wo[illegible] like to say a few words on prohi[illegible]tion, if our editor will permit.

I cannot see how any man t[illegible] has boys could be anything else [illegible] a true prohibitionist, if he feels a[illegible] responsibility as a father. Real, tr[illegible] Christians I don't think want [illegible] drink beer, and they want to so li[illegible] and vote that they will not p[illegible] beer before their boy or th[illegible] neighbor's boy or girl.

It seems to me that if anythi[illegible] would look bad, it would be a m[illegible] or a woman that claimed to b[illegible] Christian drinking their [illegible] Worldly people will drink wh[illegible] and beer as long as time shall [illegible] Some of them will put up argum[illegible] in favor of it. But with the de[illegible] conviction I don't think that [illegible]key or beer or any other s[illegible] drink will help the moral or spir[illegible]ual life of any man.

To my mind a drinking chur[illegible] member is worse than a world[illegible] man that drinks. It is true that o[illegible] state needs money and it is [illegible] that our churches need money [illegible] the Christian people do not be[illegible] God would have them to bui[illegible] barroom inside of our churches [illegible] even on the street corners of [illegible] cities in order to secure money [illegible] pay our church needs. And the sa[illegible] thing will work in governme[illegible] affairs. Just because times are h[illegible] and money sorely needed, let's [illegible] just on that account throw u[illegible] hands and say "let anything [illegible] just so we get the money."

Some will drink beer anyho[illegible] be sly with it. You turn this [illegible] loose among these cars and [illegible] will be wreck and ruin for ou[illegible]tion. But some one will say "I[illegible] temperate, 'I'll take my beer". [illegible] did you ever stop to think some[illegible] might take their beer and feel [illegible] effects of it, causing them to [illegible] drunkard or maybe causing [illegible] to increase. I don't think tha[illegible] need to fool ourselves but [illegible] there will be some kick in this [illegible] even though it is only 3.2. If [illegible] wasn't any kick in it what [illegible] they want the alcohol in it for[illegible]

Our preachers are taking up [illegible] fight. Let's stand by them for [illegible] are our spiritual leaders. If [illegible] whiskey or beer business does [illegible] back let's all be able to say [illegible] down in our hearts that we [illegible] all of our influence and [illegible] against it.

And may I make a statement th[illegible] is rather plain and broad? I [illegible] the man that wants beer back [illegible] only helping the devil and is not [illegible] true Christian.

Respectfully,
Harold B. Reynolds,
Shallowater, Route 1.

illions Will Get New Jobs

gh Johnson Believes That From Five To Six Million Men Will Be Re-Employed By Next Labor Day

h aspiration and a leadership ard which it can turn."

Johnson said the response to sident Roosevelt's address preted "a cross section of employers, t and small, so thorough as of f to insure success."

Most Inspiring Thing

It is the most inspiring thing t has happened in this country e the war," he added.

ntermingled with his appeal for tinued support, Johnson warned inst strife between employers workers.

We can't do this job in an atsphere of sniping and suspicion," asserted. "There is no doubt at that as soon as this law was sed some companies which had er before thought it necessary consult their own workers about ditions of employment went ut the hurried organization of apany-dominated unions with ething less than unseemly haste , in a few cases, with questione statements to the men as to t the recovery act really res.

Statements Circulated

Neither is there the slightest bt that the workers in many intries here circulated with equalquestionable statements that men ld not get the benefits of this without joining some particular on.

This jumping the gun was equalad on both sides. It was unwise, air, highly provocative of disd, and directly contrary to the sident's purpose in this great eft to put people back to work.

There is no doubt that a small unt of real racketeering is also ng on—efforts to incite workers n a basis of outright bolshevism ctions that are as vigorously conned by our own labor leaders in s organization as they are by intrial leaders and by the adminration as a unit.

Appeal To Public

Is is public conscience and opin that is being appealed to and point I want to make to that is t when this whole country is king a united effort to take the rse of the past four years off backs of the whole working ment of this population is a r time for misrepresentation, acation, bickering and sniping over tives, intent and proper purpose."

The administrator warned that culative price increases before rchasing power is built up is the st way to kill the goose that lays golden egg, and as most busis men will agree, that is a pretsickly looking goose right now."

He said the program for setting neral minimum wages and maxim hours of work for all indues and business means that emyers will have to take on more ple to do the same amount of rk and that the cost of business l be increased.

Public Will Pay

"Of course the consuming public l eventually pay for this," he exined. "All the president asks of u is that you lean over backward t to mark up prices one cent furr or faster than you have to, to sorb these actual increased costs.

"Of course there are ways to beat e rules of any game. We know at they are. We are not issuing y regulations about that. We e just asking people in this crisis, very general terms, to rise above ese cheap little ingenuities and to n with the president to beat the pression and not to beat the rules the game.

Another Thought

"On this price raising business ere is another thought. It is a lot sier to secure profits through bigr business than it is through gher price.

"In spite of the very best the esident may be able to plan and s men to carry out his plans, if don't get purchasing power to e proper level and do it now, ere isn't going to be any bigger siness. There is going to be less siness.

"Prices are way ahead of purses ht now. The only way anybody s yet suggested to get purses ead of prices is the plan of the esident.

Goose Looks Sick

"Speculative price advances are best way to kill the goose that s the golden egg, and as most siness men will agree, that is a etty sickly looking goose right w."

Asserting "there is a starved dend" for merchandise throughout e country, Johnson said "as this n begins to work we are going see some real business."

"All that is needed to start a flood business is to take away the fear unemployment and get a little ney into the hands of people at need things and this is the way do it," the administrator said.

No Time To Complain

"Of course the plan bears harder some people than it does on ers. So does everything else in e. This is not the time to comin about that.

"This country understands all is. It approves all this. It is at t aroused. The president's recovy drive is on its way. It is an irstible march. The unemployed are eady going back to work and lar day has been set as the great jective."

Johnson added that before Presint Roosevelt's talk "it had been id that the plan to explain this ogram to every person in the untry is ballyhoo and the idea of e badge of honor of N. R. A. for ployers who follow the president blackmail."

Epithets Deserve Reply

"After that talk there will be less that but their epithets deserve a mark," Johnson continued. "Ballyhoo is what a ticket seller for a circus sideshow says to induce people to come in to see the freaks.

"Our present work is an effort to explain with absolute frankness, to the people of the country, the president's plan to put people back to work—a plan that is already working in mass reemployment by the hundreds of thousands.

"If this is ballyhoo so is a navigation chart for the homeward voyage of a sailor."

Stocks

WALL STREET REPORT

BY JOHN L. COOLEY
Associated Press Financial Writer

NEW YORK, July 25. (AP)—Profit-taking today claimed part of the stock market's recovery from last week's losses, but not until the market had had a general rally. By closing time early gains of 1 to 4 points for many of the favorites had been more than surrendered and there was a liberal representation of 1 to 2 point net losses, due to late realizing.

Wheat at Chicago and Winnipeg was firmer than on Monday, but stock traders seemed willing to move cautiously. "Repeal" shares had a good early boom and rails were anxious to get ahead for a time. Standard industrials, however, tended to lag, even while the rally was at its best, and finally reaction became fairly inclusive. Last prices were somewhat above the lows. Sales totaled 3,539,140 shares.

The market had finished its second successive abbreviated session before two striking testimonials to the business recovery had been made public. The first of these was General Motors' quarterly earnings statement, showing 90 cents a common share for the year's second three month period against eleven cents in the first and seven cents a year ago. The cash position was also strengthened.

The came the figures for U. S. Steel corporation, always a good yardstick for measuring business trends. The company's June quarter was the best in a year and a half, for it had a net operating profit before depreciation, depletion and interest charges.

Wall Street's reactions to President Roosevelt's message to the country on employment was favorable, and the financial community noted the prompt response which it received.

Cotton

NEW ORLEANS REPORT

NEW ORLEANS, July 25. (AP) — Trading in cotton contracts was only moderately active today but prices fluctuated rather freely. Early gains were followed by reactions and then a partial recovery and the close was steady with the active months 6 to 10 points net lower. The July delivery expired at noon at 10.51, up 25 points net on some belated covering by shorts.

The opening was steady in sympathy with Liverpool cables which were better than due and sterling was steady. Manchester cabled there was little business in either cloth or yarns.

Later in the morning the market rallied owing to a firmer opening of the stock market and to reports of excessive rains in the central belt and increasing weevil activity.

After ruling fairly steady in the early afternoon, the market weakened later in sympathy with stocks and rather heavy selling by commission houses. October dropped to 10.43 and December to 10.65, down 35 to 37 points from the highs of the morning and 20 points below the previous close. In final trading prices rallied 10 to 12 points and October closed at 10.53, and December at 10.75, both down 10 points net.

Liverpool is due on New Orleans tomorrow 5 penny points down.

Port receipts 15,887, for week 56,215, for season 8,964,195, last season 10,108,934. Exports 12,184, for week 59,860, for season 8,280,439, last season 8,506,831. Port stock 3,108,819, last year 3,445,562.

Combined shipboard stock at New Orleans, Galveston and Houston 110,156, last year 89,820.

Spot sales at southern markets 5,365, last year 2,687.

NEW YORK REPORT

NEW YORK, July 25. (AP)—After ruling fairly steady during most of today's session, cotton eased near the close under realising and a renewal of scattering liquidation promoted by reactions in the stock market. December contracts after selling up from 10.85@11.06, or 15 points net higher broke to 10.67, but recovered part of the loss, closing at 10.80. The general market closed steady at net declines of 6 to 13 points.

The opening was up 5 to 9 points in response to steady Liverpool cables and trade buying. The initial demand was supplied by realizing together with some New Orleans and southern selling. This eased prices several points after the call, but the market soon firmed again and demand becoming more active following the opening of the grain and stock markets. October advanced to 10.84 and March to 11.35, with active months generally showing net gains of 13 to 19 points during the early afternoon. Prices broke following reactions in the grain and stock markets. October sold off to 10.45, and March to 10.96 making net losses of 23 to 26. Closing quotations however showed rallies of 10 to 14 points from the lowest.

Liverpool cables attributed the early steadiness there to scattered buying in a quite market. Exports today 12,014 making 8,437,364 so far this season. U. S. port stocks 3,146,905.

Wing Tears Away

"I heard a rasping noise, and the right wing tore away and went soaring off by itself. The main body of the plane floated for an instant and then plummeted down in our pasture."

Scores of other Oceanside residents saw the accident.

Army officers, who came from March Field to investigate the crash, said they believed the wing broke in such a way as to block the hatch and imprison the victims in the falling wreckage, preventing use of parachutes.

The bodies were taken to San Diego, where a military inquiry will be conducted.

Marvin Barrow Confesses To Slaying Of Arkansas Officer

DES MOINES, Iowa, July 25 (AP)—A confession by Marvin Barrow, wounded Texas outlaw, that he killed an Alma, Ark., marshall several weeks ago was given officers today as search for three members of the gang he headed with his brother, Clyde, was virtually abandoned.

After a hunt extending over western Iowa for two days and a night, federal, state and county officers said they were convinced that Clyde Barrow, a man known as Jack Sherman and a woman had eluded them.

Only a few of the large force of officers who took part in the chase remained near Sutherland, in northwest Iowa, on the long chance that the fugitives might return to an old hideout there.

FORT WORTH REPORT

FORT WORTH, July 25. (AP)—With buyers and sellers still far apart in their ideas of values, trading on the Fort Worth cash grain market Tuesday was largely restricted to immediate needs. However, a good demand is reported which will develop as soon as trading settles to a normal basis.

Prices, largely nominal, ranged as follows, basis car loads on track at Fort Worth, freight paid to destination: delivered Texas Gulf ports, export rate, or Texas common points: Wheat No. 1 hard 97 3-4@$1.01. Barley No. 2, 61@64; No. 3, 60@63.

Sorghums No. 2 milo per 100 pounds 1.40@1.60; No. 3 milo 1.35@1.50; No. 2 kaffir per 100 pounds 1.35@1.50; No. 3 kaffir 1.30@1.40.

Delivered Texas common points or group three: corn No. 2 mixed 61@62; No. 2 white 63@66; No. 2 yellow 62@64.

Delivered Texas common points: Oats No. 2 red 43@46; No. 3 red 42@45.

CHICAGO REPORT

CHICAGO, July 25. (AP)—Bounding upward to almost 10 cents a bushel above the extreme low prices current during recent panicky selling, wheat values today recovered normal equilibrium.

The maximum net advance scored today in wheat, 4 3-4 cents, came after evidence developed that the end of liquidation of huge distressed speculative holdings had virtually been reached. Acting as if emerging from a nightmare, the market advanced steadily from then until just before the close, when brisk profit-taking led to material setbacks from the day's top figures.

Helping to rally prices were reports indicating likelihood that the Canadian wheat crop had passed the limit where drought relief this season was possible. Before the rally took place, however, a transient sinking spell was witnessed owing to announcement that a grain firm had suspended, the third within two days, but the disturbing effect quickly disappeared on receipt of word that in this case the house affected was relatively small, by no means in the $5,000,000 class like one of the two preceding suspensions.

Wheat closed unsettled, 1 1-4 to 1 3-4 cents above yesterday's finish, corn 3-4 to 2 1-8 higher, oats 1 1-4 to 3 5-8 up, and provisions 5 cents to 75 cents advanced.

Local Markets

These prices are furnished by the following Lubbock firms: Poultry—Lubbock Poultry and Egg company, delivered Lubbock; Grain—S. E. Cone Grain and Seed company, following prices being bid by Lubbock grain dealers; Cotton—Blocker Cotton company. All prices subject to change during day.

Texas Rains

close to the Louisiana border and continued. Joaquin and Desota parish, Louisiana, experienced the most destructive flood since 1884. Loss in that section was estimated at $200,000.

Shreveport Flooded

Nineteen and two-tenths inches of rain had fallen in Shreveport, La., to the north and east, in a 72-hour period. The Red river there rose 6.1 feet in 24 hours to 17.4. Flood stage is 39 feet. There was little danger of a flood there, however, because the river was extremely low before the rise began.

Work crews anticipated an early resumption of rail service between Center and Beaumont but only a few highways were expected to be open by tomorrow. Telegraph service disrupted since Sunday, was resumed today.

Lakes Destroyed

Nearly every artificially made lake in the county was destroyed by flood waters and a dam break at Crystal lake near Joaquin Sunday caused a serious washout on the Southern Pacific railroad. Business was almost at a standstill here but stores were well-stocked with foodstuffs except vegetables.

Acres of cotton were washed away and feed crops, which had suffered from a drought of more than a month were drowned out. Untold numbers of livestock were killed and were picked up by the raging creeks and rivers.

The Attoyac river crest, reached early today, lacked less than a foot of going over highway No. 21 near San Augustine. A highway department crew saved the river bridge with several hundred sacks of sand. Intermittent showers fell during the day near San Augustine.

Red Cross Heads Advised To Be Ready For An Emergency

SAN JUAN, PUERTO RICO, July 25. (AP)—Governor Robert H. Gore late today conferred with Red Cross heads and advised them to prepare for any emergency in the face of weather reports from the eastern Caribbean that a storm centering over Guadeloupe probably would reach the island Wednesday morning.

A weather bulletin said the disturbance probably would reach the east coast of Puerto Rico in the early morning hours and San Juan by noon.

Tech Director Is Given Post

Clifford B. Jones, Of Spur, Named Regional Advisor In Public Works Set-Up; Plans To Accept Position

federal public works administration in any manner that he may order for the purpose of speeding up the work, investigating and solving such problems as may arise."

Clifford Jones of Spur, Texas, former president of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, will be the representative at Fort Worth for Texas, Louisiana and New Mexico.

Vincent M. Miles of Fort Smith, Ark., World war veteran and lawyer, will maintain offices at Kansas City, Mo., for Colorado, Kansas, Oklahoma, Missouri and Arkansas.

Will Make Sacrifice To Aid Administration

Clifford B. Jones, of Spur, representative of the far-flung S. M. Swenson estate's interests in northwest Texas, told the Lubbock Morning Avalanche over long distance phone late Tuesday that he will accept the appointment as district seven's advisor to the Public Works administration.

He did not know of his appointment until an Associated Press dispatch was read to him. His area includes the states of Texas, New Mexico and Louisiana.

Is Civic Builder

Jones, president of West Texas Chamber of Commerce in 1921 and present chairman of the directorate of Texas Technological college here, has long been identified with progress in this area. Wherever civic leaders gather in Northwest Texas his name is mentioned as a builder of this vast domain.

"I recognize the unusual opportunity for service," Mr. Jones said regarding his appointment, "and for that reason I am accepting. While I am mindful of the fact that it will mean a personal sacrifice, I believe every citizen should do whatever he can to aid the administration in its efforts to improve conditions at this time."

Born In Colorado

Born in Rico, Colorado, in 1885, the public works appointee was taken to Kansas City by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Jones, as a child. After graduation from Kansas City Central high school he moved, in 1911, to Spur, where his father was in charge of Swenson interests. Two years later, when the elder Jones went to Freeport, Texas, to take over the Swenson sulphur interests, the son succeeded to the northwest Texas management of Swenson properties and has, to use his own words, "been sitting at this desk ever since."

But Clifford Jones has been doing much more than sitting at a desk in Spur, Dickens county, city of some 2,000 souls. As the years passed by he has sold off many of the 500,000 acres which originally comprised Swenson ranch lands; he has had charge of townsites and allied interests. He has been advisor to his home country as well as banker for a goodly part of it—in short, he has been a vital force in the upbuilding of a great, new agricultural empire.

Railroad Director

At the present time, in addition to his educational work in connection with Texas Technological college and as Swenson manager, he is serving on the directorate of five railroads, the Spur National bank, regional agricultural credit corporation in Ft. Worth and Dickens county, and the Trinity Bond and Investment company of Ft. Worth. Between times he manages to sit on the executive board of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, the regional organization he helped found a decade and a half ago.

Mr. Jones said while he has received no instructions from Washington as yet he will be "ready to carry any and all of them to completion" as soon as they come in. He will take up a temporary residence in Ft. Worth whenever his duties call him there, realizing, he said, that "promptitude in this matter is highly essential."

His father, lately in retirement in Los Angeles, will return to Spur to take over the management of the Swenson interests for as long a time as the public works appointee is engaged in government business.

Grain Reforms

trators, with the approval of President Roosevelt, in an effort to provide greater stability for prices and to make markets less attractive to speculators who do not handle grain physically at any time.

Rules Recommended

Representatives of the exchanges also agreed to recommend to their organizations early adoption of rules to:

Limit the holdings of individuals of either "long" or "short" contracts for future delivery, probably at a figure between 2,000,000 bushels and 5,000,000 bushels.

Require higher margins for grain traders.

Permanently eliminate trading in both weekly and daily indemnities ordinarily known as "Bids and offers" are privilege trading in market centers.

The group proposed that close contact be established between commodity and security exchanges to prevent speculators from operating on an "excessive" basis in several markets at one time.

Principal Intermediary In Urschel Kidnaping Arrives

OKLAHOMA CITY, July 25. (AP)—A belief that the kidnapers of Charles F. Urschel, wealthy oil man, would soon contact with the family grew tonight after the arrival of Arthur Seeligson, who has been designated the principal Urschel intermediary.

Seeligson, an oil man and attorney associated with the kidnaped multimillionaire, arrived at noon from North Carolina.

He announced after a brief conference with Mrs. Urschel, widow of the late T. B. Slick, spectacular oil explorer, that he was willing and eager to "do anything that is necessary to assure the quick return, unharmed" of his friend.

Lake Project

sorts of outdoor amusement including boating, fishing, swimming, hunting and other water sports. Tennis courts, dance pavilion, board walk, bathing beaches, casino, concessions and other projects would be included in the amusement center besides several hundred lake cottages, a $20,000 club house and parks. The upper end of the lake is planned as a duck hunting ground with several miles of shallow water planted to cattails and grass suitable for hunting.

Will Be Stocked

The lake will afford excellent fishing within two years time, Dr. Craig said. It will be stocked with all sorts of game fish including bass, crappie, and brim.

There will be practically 80 miles of shore line to the lake and approximately 11 miles of shore roads, Dr. Craig said.

Water for the lake would come from the Yellowhouse canyon drainage area and watershed for a distance of 125 miles extending to beyond the eastern New Mexico line. Principal drainage would be from Bailey, Lamb, Hale and Lubbock counties. Other water source will be springs in the present channel of the canyon and should a dry year cause the water line to decline, a battery of shallow wells working from a single pump-jack would supply water for the lake, Dr. Craig said.

The dam site will be located approximately one-quarter of a mile back of the Country club grounds. The depth of the water at the dam will be 17 feet while the depth runs to 25 feet further back in the lake. The principal part of the lake will be from the dam to approximately three-quarters of a mile and approximately one-half mile in width.

The dam spillway would allow ample water for the Country club lake, Shannon park and other dams along the canyon.

Trees Planned

Several thousand trees will be planted on the edge of the lake and around the camp sites and parks, Dr. Craig said. Boathouses will be constructed at various points along the lake.

Estimated revenue of the lake is placed at $33,140 yearly by Mr. Hudspeth. Club memberships at $25 a year expect to total $5,000 annually. Sites for permanent cottages will be sold to individuals while approximately seventy cottages will be constructed for lease. The cottages would be built at a cost of $30,000.

Other revenues of the amusement center are estimated as follows: lots for camp sites, $3,600 per year; cottages, $5,500 per year; swimming, $2,600 a year; fishing, $2,700 a year; boating, motor, canoeing, sail, fishing boats, $4,140 a year; shacks (thirty at $60 each lease), $1,800 a year; concessions (50 at $10 per month), $3,000; Arcadia, $600; filling station, $300; cafe, $300; dance pavilion, $2,600 and refreshments sale, $1,000.

Cost of the project as detailed by Mr. Hudspeth is as follows: land, $37.60; dam, $25,000; clubhouse, $20,000; dance pavilion, $15,000; Arcadia, $7,000; filling station, $3,000; water plant, $15,000; roads, $10,000; trees and beautification, $5,000; bathhouse, $5,000; boathouse, $2,000; boats and boating equipment, $5,000; public park and equipment, $5,000; cottages (70), $30,000 and maintenance, $15,740.

A vast need for the project by the people of this section is seen by Dr. Craig and his associates.

"Lubbock and the South Plains has citizens who are crying for this project," Mr. Hudspeth said. "It can be sponsored as a self-liquidating project by the City commission and this amusement center can be obtained through the National Recovery act without costing the city one cent."

Motorboat regattas, canoe racing, sailboat racing, bathing beauty revues and carnivals, picnics and other outdoor amusements could be staged at the lake at all times of the year. There is a possibility that ice skating would be provided for portions of the lake in the winter.

Dr. Craig, who has been in Lubbock about a year, is an outdoor enthusiast, having formerly resided at Corpus Christi where aquatic sports form the greatest amusement for thousands of South Texans. The doctor came to Lubbock from Ranger.

The bulk of the lake site is located on property owned by Sid Rouse, although the upper portion of the lake would lie on land belonging to Mrs. Elizabeth J. Vickers.

Count Against One Dismissed

County Grand Jury Fails To Return An Indictment For Slaying And Robbery Count Will Be Quashed

FORT WORTH, July 25. (AP)—M. D. (Blackie) Howard, whom the county grand jury failed to indict last week in the Handley triple-murder, will be released from mail robbery charges because the government does not have a case against him, U. S. District Attorney Eastus announced today.

Howard was charged with the murder of J. B. and Harry Rutherford and Jack Strudivant and his bond was set at $30,000. However, the grand jury which indicted O. D. Stevens, M. T. Howard and W. D. May on the same charges failed to return a bill against Blackie Howard.

These four—Stevens, the Howards, May—were also charged along with Claude Hill and Weldon Routt with the $71,000 mail robbery at the T. and P. station on February 21.

Eastus said also that the robbery charge against Hill probably will be dismissed and a charge of conspiracy will be filed against him. Eastus said that he has agreed to reduce the bonds of Stevens, M. T. Howard and May from $50,000 to $25,000 in the robbery cases, and that Hill's bond will be reduced to $5,000.

Pastor Has Good Offer For Lands

"I have had the best offer for land of anybody in this section since 1929," said Rev. J. W. Watson, yesterday afternoon. "I was offered $70 an acre for 80 acres of land near Rule, in Haskell county. It is a mile from town and unimproved."

The land, Mr. Watson explained, is in the estate of his father and he is settling the estate as administrator. He plans to go to Rule today to see about the offer. There are no improvements on the place, not even a well, the minister added.

This year's crop of cotton, now up to a stand about knee high, will go to Mr. Watson if the deal is completed. The plants have some bolls on them, all down under the top and none on top. It is growing and there are no insects.

Description Of Burns Found On Man Given In Testimony

CLOVIS, N. M., July 25. (AP)—Description of burns found on the hands and arms of Roy Reed, jointly charged with Leonard Beck in connection with the "torch murder" of Lee Marshall, Quay county homesteader, formed the state's first testimony in their trial here today.

Dr. J. M. Daughty of Tucumcari was the first witness to be called after selection of a jury had been completed at noon.

Dr. Daughty said he was called to examine Reed seven days after Marshall had been burned by robbers who set fire to his clothing after failing to obtain loot. He said he found burns on Reeds' hands which he estimated to be from five to eight days old.

"I Will Deal With You Myself," Is Message Woman Sends Kidnapers

OKLAHOMA CITY, July 25. (AP)—"I will deal with you myself." These terse words comprised the message Mrs. Charles F. Urschel asked the Associated Press today to offer the criminals who kidnaped her husband from the family home Saturday night.

To her husband, if the kidnapers allow him to read newspapers wherever he is held, Mrs. Urschel asked that these heartening words be sent:

"I am not prostrated. We are doing everything that is humanly possible to bring about your return."

Amazingly self-possessed, brown eyes resolute, Mrs. Urschel sat in the sun parlor of her mansion—the same room from which two men snatched her husband Saturday night.

"And I can do it," she finished. "We have let the kidnapers know in every way we can that we are ready to negotiate with them. I want you to tell them that they can get in touch with any one of the men here in the house.

"If they don't want to do that, tell them that I will deal with them myself."

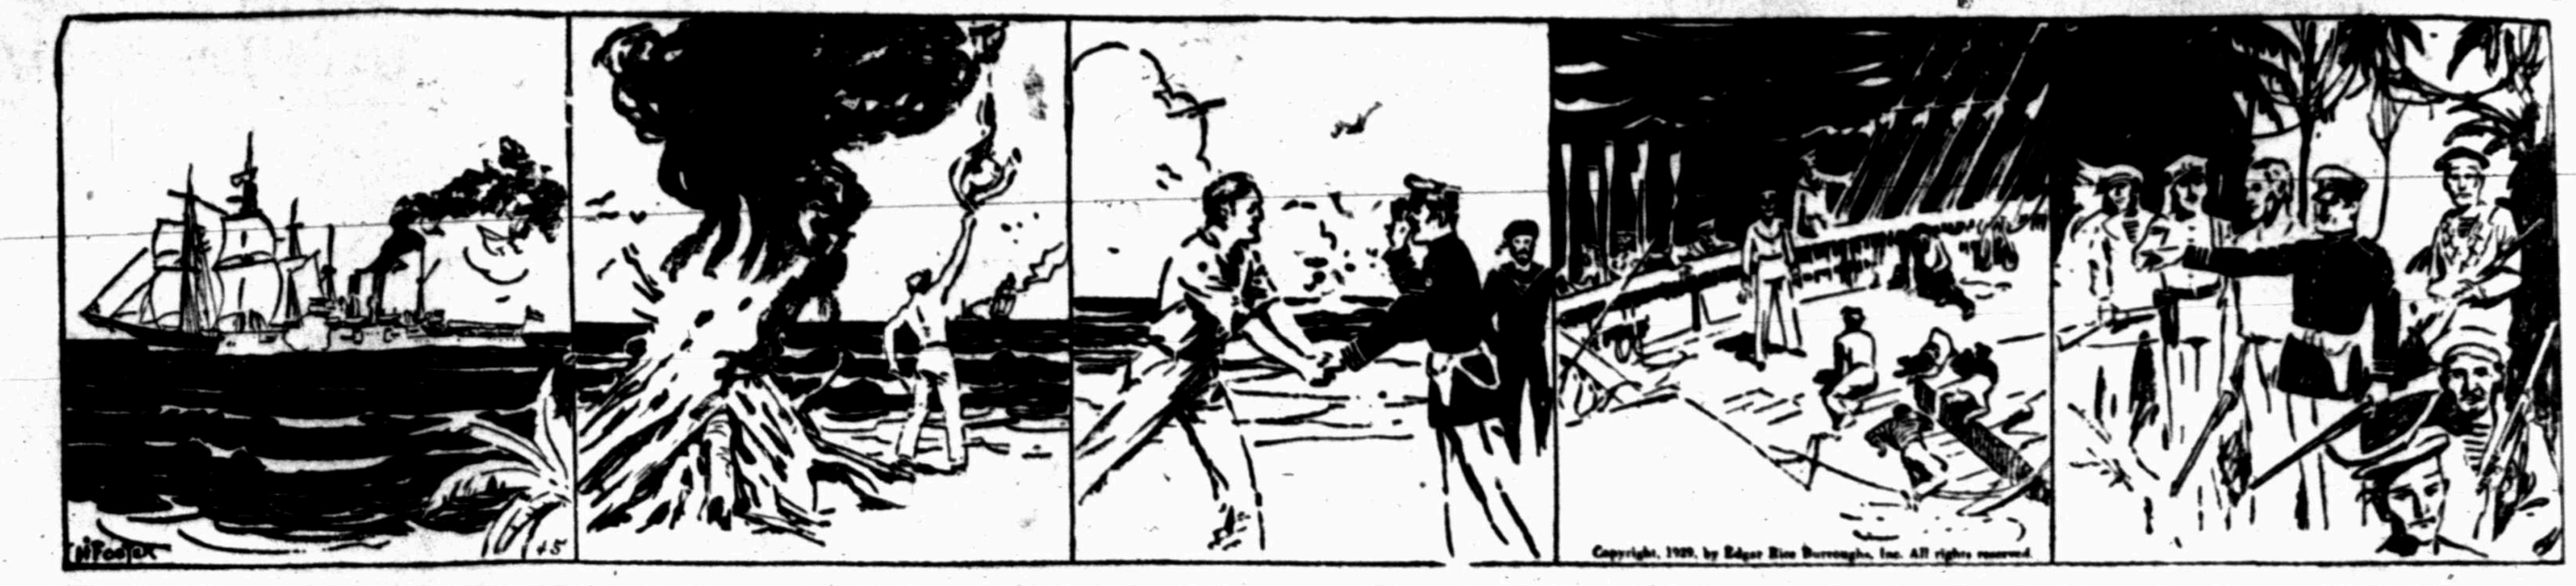
TARZAN OF THE APES No. 45

By Edgar Rice Burroughs



45
Copyright, 1929, by Edgar Rice Burroughs, Inc. All rights reserved.

Early the following morning, the men in the cabin were awakened by the boocing of a cannon. Clayton rushed out and saw two vessels lying in the harbor. One was the Arrow—the other a small French cruiser. Quickly he ran to light the pile of wood he kept in readiness.

Before the flames arose, Clayton saw in consternation the cru'ser steaming away. Stripping of fhis shirt he waved it back and forth above him. Now the great column of smoke rose high, attracting the attention of the ship's lookout. The cruiser steamed slowly back toward shore. A boat was lowered.

As it beached, a young officer stepped out. Quickly Clayton told their story, ending with Jane's abduction. Lieutenant l'Arnot then narrated the capture of the Arrow; how it had drifted in heavy seas many days, without water or food until all but two of the mutineers were dead.

The sight that met the Frenchmen's eyes as they clambered over the sip's side was appalling! Dead and dying rolled upon the pitching deck. Two of the corpses appeared partially devoured. Hunger had changed the mutineers to wild beasts. The sole survivor told the whole ghastly tale to the French commander.

The cruiser then sought the little camp. By the time the two paries had naraetd their several adventures, the cruiser's boat returned with supplies and arms. With twenty sailors, they set off upon that hopeless and ill-fated quest into the untracked jungle to find the solen girl.

Aimee Gets Glimpse Of The Shores Of America As She Returns To See If Marriage Is Actually On Rocks

BY MEVLIN E. COLEMAN
Associated Press Staff Writer

Aimee Semple McPherson Hutton yesterday glimpsed American shores, en route to California to learn whether her third matrimonial venture, like the second, is to be wrecked in a divorce court. Her ship from France was due to touch Norfolk, Va., and then proceed to Baltimore.

The master-showwoman of evangelism, glamorous in word and act, may land as the sorrowing wife that one of her wireless messages from the ship depicted. But her roles switch frequently.

"Sweetheart, reassure me your confidence. Wife," said her message to David Hutton when word of the divorce action reached her aboard ship. Hutton consulted his attorney.

"I was just Aimee's pet poodle," he said in explaining his charges of mental cruelty.

Her second marriage ended in the divorce courts years ago. It was Harold McPherson, a grocery clerk. He said that her magnetic charm was undoubted but she had "wildcat habits at home."

The first marriage was different. Robert Semple, a roaming missionary, found her at a little town in Ontario. At 19 she married him, went with her husband to China and was left a widow with a baby daughter when Semple succumbed to an Oriental epidemic.

Since then she has developed into a white-robed exhorter who sways thousands by the magic of her husky but far-carrying voice, large eyes, flashing smile and gleaming crown of her red gold hair. This last, however, only when she doesn't change nature. Not so long ago she suddenly appeared as a blonde.

Choisters in blue and white, a dim auditorium, a spot light on the pulpit. The plea for help in carrying on the work. Once she wound up by saying:

"My nerves are on edge. Make it a silent offering. I can't hear paper money." There was no jingle of quarters against dimes that night.

County Road Association Is Formed To Assure Projects

BRADY, July 25. (AP)—A countywide road association has been formed for the passage of McCulloch county's $48,000 road bond issue on July 31.

The bonds are to be used for the purchase of rights-of-way in order to place the county into position to share in the three billion dollar federal construction program under the national industrial recovery act.

Assurance has been received from state highway officials that highways number 9 (federal 385), number 10 and number 74, a total of 66 miles, will be constructed provided the rights-of-way are purchased. A bridge across the Colorado river on highway 16 will be constructed and highway 16 hard surfaced. The first unit of construction on highway 16 is now nearing completion.

I'VE GOT SOMETHING THAT PREVENTS CONSTIPATION

NO MORE SLAVERY TO HARSH LAXATIVES

This cow has recently given to Medical Science an easy, natural way to stop constipation—without injurious drugs. This new product is taken from the livers of healthy cattle. The best doctors are prescribing it, and thousands can tell you it corrects the stubbornest bowel delay overnight.

As you know, most constipation comes from sluggish liver. The liver manufactures a liquid called the bile, which is Nature's own purgative. When not enough bile flows into your bowels, you are constipated. Yet ordinary physics and laxatives never touch the liver.

Now scientists have taken the bile from cattle and put it up in convenient little tablets called Kompo and Bile Salts Tablets. They quickly get your own liver working naturally. If you want to stop constipation entirely and quit taking habit-forming laxatives and physics, get Kompo Tablets from your druggist today. Results guaranteed or every cent back.

SPECIAL FREE OFFER: Clip out this offer and mail it to us with your name and address and a small trial package of Kompo Tablets will be sent you absolutely FREE. Kompo Company, Dept. R27, Atlanta, Ga.

Negro Search Goes Forward

Funeral Services Arranged As Aftermath Of Double Killing; Crippled Negro Hunted Over Wide Area

FORT WORTH, July 25. (AP)—While authorities sought a crippled negro, funeral plans went forward today for A. S. (Pete) Michael, 33, electrical warehouse foreman, and Geneva Cantrell, 19-year-old halfbreed Indian, who were found slain on the outskirts of town yesterday.

The girl was attacked and killed on the night before she was to have taken a job. After living for several weeks in a wagon yard, paying her board by keeping books for a vegetable vendor, the girl was given employment as housekeeper and was to have taken up her new duties yesterday.

The funeral for Michael, native of Fort Worth, will be held this afternoon in Cleburne. Burial will be in Rice.

Officials awaited word from Jim Cantrell of Talihina, Okla., father of the slain girl, before announcing arrangements for her funeral.

The negro suspect was named after deputy sheriffs discovered footprints near the scene of the double murder. The same negro also is sought in connection with a dance hall row Saturday night in which a negro was killed and five were wounded.
