The State Of The City: The Future Is Expensive

The City of Rockport is moving rapidly toward the first plateau of population growth most expect to reach 30,000 by 1995. That plateau is a population of 5,000, which will make Rockport eligible to decide whether or not it wants home-rule status--and with it changes in the taxing and bond limits of the City, and the form of City government itself.

With this in mind, we checked in with Mayor Walter Falk and City Secretary Herman Johnson on the "state of the city."

Falk, a retired Lt. Col. in the Air Force, and a fast talking, cigar chomping stylist, did most of the talking. Johnson, a former civil servant, was always around to corral him when necessary, just as he does in Council meetings when the intricacies of parliamentary procedure sometimes trip up the Mayor's striding attack on still another long City agenda.

Pilot: Home rule looms as the next big thing for the city. Can you explain what it will mean to the voters and citizens?

Falk: Well, home rule is of course possible only when you've reached 5000 in population. The latest count we've received from the Internal Revenue Service for the Revenue Sharing entitlement period is 4900, and that was four months ago. We think that with the new people moving into the Key Allegro condominiums and the Peninsula Park subdivisions, as well as Harbor Oaks, we'll have reached the 5000 level by January 1 of next year (Falk predicted as much during an address to the Rotary Club in December of 1976).

When we do get a count above 5000, we'll first have to get the Council's concurrence that we have reached that number. If they concur, then they'll appoint a commission of citizens who will look at several alternatives. They can either go for a strong Mayor form of government, a Mayor-City Manager form, or they can opt not to go home rule at all. Not everybody is for this, you see.

There are pros and cons to home rule. On one hand, the city will be able to use an expanded tax rate, and have expanded capacity to pass bond issues. On the other hand, those are negative things to some people who don't want the city to have room to raise their taxes.

Johnson: One good thing is that the city will, if it goes home rule, have the ability to control the land in what is now its extra-territorial jurisdiction. As it stands right now, all we have is the city subdivision ordinance, which doesn't really do much.

Falk: It would give us zoning powers on the land. Take this instance with HO&M for example. That never would have happened if the city would have been able to zone the land in the first place. It would have been business or residential, and the company couldn't even have considered building a plant next to the cemetery.

But the main thing is that it would give us more control over the decor of Rockport, and to better control use through annexation.

Pilot: Speaking of annexation...

Falk: Well, the limits will be the same under a home rule charter as they are under the general law charter the city operates under now. You'll still need two sides, and the residents will still have to petition to be taken in. So it won't be any easier.

Pilot: How is the city thinking of going about the inevitable annexations. Are they going to jump in and take Key Allegro or Fulton?

Falk: No, no. Annexation creates so many problems. There's the provision of services to start with. You have to have increased police and fire protection. We'd have to have at least one more full-time patrolman if we took in any substantial population center, and more fire equipment, the whole thing.

And the city is not really in a position to do that at this time. We've got to take care of the people we've got first. Sewers for example are paramount at this time. The city plant is close to capacity and we'll have to build an extension soon.

Pilot: The Coastal Bend Council of Governments and the Conservation and Reclamation District have both mentioned that they are thinking in terms of two new plants, one near the County Airport and another in the southwest part of Rockport. Is that how it's likely to go?

Falk: Well, the COG planning is just now in the population stage. They won't be getting into the cost stage, the financing, until November. That's the 208 plan that was discussed in a public meeting July 1 here in Rockport.

Johnson: The only thing coming up soon on that is this meeting County Judge (John) Wendell has called for August 16. And I believe he's invited people from the Community Affairs Department of COG, the County, the Texas Water Quality Board. as well as Council members and the members of the Conservation and Reclamation District Board. I believe that's at 1:30 p.m.

Pilot: How is all this going to get paid for?

Falk: Well, this August 16 meeting may end up being a county thing, because all they're talking about is a study for a county-wide sewer system.

But back to finances, the sewers are not the only things

Harbor Board To Ask Spoil Site Approval

Aransas County Navigation District No. 1 Commissioners will come before the Rockport City Council Monday night, August 8, to ask the city's permission to place spoil from the dredging of the Rockport Harbor turning basin on Block 49, 430 of the D&M Subdivision.

The property is owned by Mrs. Juanita Wagley, and has been offered to the District free of charge. The District will name the tract as a spoil site in a later application to the Army Corps of Engineers for a permit to dredge the turning basin if the council approves.

The Corps will be dredging the approach channel to the harbor later this year, as well as the approach channel and turning basin at Fulton. The Environmental Protection Agency had earlier placed the Rockport dredging project in jeopardy by refusing to permit the Corps to use a bay area disposal site for dredged material from the mouth of the channel. The EPA claimed that the bottom of the channel and the basin both contained material which would be toxic to marine life. The inland disposal site should win EPA approval, according to the District Commissioners.

In other business, the Council will:

--Open bids on a backhoe for the City Road crew. The equipment is expected to cost approximately $20,000. The backhoe is a budgeted item.

--Pass an ordinance amending the city zoning map to incorporate changes approved July 25.

--Set a special meeting for August 15 at 5 p.m. to canvas the votes for the August 13 city election.

--Approve an affidavit of residency for use in the August 13 city election. The affidavit has been requested by the Secretary of State's office after an inquiry by City Secretary Herman Johnson.

--Consider further amendments to the City zoning ordinances which would reduce the maximum allowable density per acre to 10 persons.

Fund Raising Plans Discussed

Details of the $250,000 grant from the Sid W. Richardson Foundation of Fort Worth to provide an intermediate emergency medical care facility in Rockport were discussed by Dr. J.M. After reviewing details of how the grant was obtained earlier in the week, Dr. Shellenbergar said plans for obtain-

Second Six-Month Shrimp Season Off To Good Start

Initial shrimp catches in the second six-month season appear to have the potential of making up for a poor first six-month period, but local shrimpers are undecided about the possibilities of surpassing last year's bumper crop.

The first six-months of 1977 were relatively unproductive according to local producers, due to a wet, cold winter and poor conditions for shrimp growth.

But despite the fact that the first catches to come in since the 10-mile off shore restrictions were removed July 15 are looking good, shrimp fleet owners are waiting to see what the next few weeks will bring before drawing any conclusions.

"We're off to a good start," said Johnny Jackson, vice president of the Jackson Seafood Company in Rockport. Jackson emphasised that the first six months had been "extremely slow", but around July 1"... things began to pick up."

"The price is lower than last year at this time," continued Jackson, "But increased production is compensating for the lower price."

Jackson said that the industry could equal or top last years records but it is"...only a maybe, I'm not predicting we are by any means."

Bubba Casterline of the Casterline Fish Company in Fulton said "We're doing real good right now, but it's hard to say. It could play out in a couple of months."

Gene Carter, manager of the Rockport Shrimp Co-op, said co-op, members are averaging between 650 and 850 pounds of tails on a good night. "Personally, I think we're going to have a real good season," said Carter. "We're starting off on the right track, anyway." Carter felt that if the current trends could continue the co-op would experience a better year than last year. Warm water temperature is one of the

Utility Rate Relief Funded

Certification is now in progress for elderly, low-income citizens who can qualify for limited assistance in paying their utility bills.

Such payment may be possible under the Special Crisis Intervention Program for which Governor Dolph Briscoe has applied for the Texas allocation of $4,080,000.

Certification is being made by the local administering organization under the guidelines established by the Community Services Administration, announced Ben F. McDonald, Jr., executive director of the Texas Department of Community Affairs, the state agency which is implementing the program.

Each local administering organization is certifying persons in a specified county of counties.

City Voters Must Sign Affidavit

Each voter in the August 13 City election will be required to sign an affidavit of residence similar to the one used in the April 2 election. The affidavit was ordered by the Secretary of State's office after an inquiry by Rockport City Secretary Herman Johnson.

The April 2 election was contested on the grounds that nine of the more than 200 voters were not eleigible because they lived outside the ward at the time of the election.

Shop At Home Campaign Starts

A five month Shop At Home campaign sponsored by the Rockport Chamber of Commerce gets underway this month as an attempt to stimulate shopping in the county and city.

"The object of the campaign is to promote and encourage shopping in the county." said co-chairman Bill Wilson. "In past months more shops and greater selection of merchandise have become available to meet the needs of the community." Wilson and Jim Steelhammers are co-chairmen of the Chamber's Community Planning and Development Committee which is sponsoring the program.

The campaign got underway August 1 and will continue through the Christmas shopping season. Normally the chamber sponsors a Christmas shopping campaign, but the recent increase in businesses and merchandise availability in the local area prompted the committee to opt for a long term campaign.

On reason for the August Kickoff date, said Mrs. Loyce Landrum, Chamber secretary, was to assist in the back-to-school shopping season which occurs in mid-August.

Shop At Home will feature a monthly $25 gift certificate drawing. Residents must regis-

Sandollar By A Nose

District Judge E.H. Patton July 25 reinstituted a stay which prevents First Savings Association of Corpus Christi from foreclosing on the Sandollar Resort pending appeal of the June 7 ruling which gave First Savings the right to take the $1 million property.

The stay had been declared July 1 when Sandollar manager Gary Knostman filed a petition for reorganization with Judge Patton. The petition, coming on a case pending before the court, was an almost unprecedented move in Texas, just daring enough to win the Judge's hesitating approval.

July 12, First Savings petitioned to have the stay annulled, holding that the value of the property was less than the

Spice Island Hero

What a relief to see in the pages of New West a discussion of the possible effects of the Anita Bryant anti-gay campaign on Jerry Brown, governor of California.

The 1980 campaign has already begun with the rise of tensions prior to the gubernatorial campaign in California. Carter is almost certain to be a one-term president, victim of his overreaching and lies, and the already disastrous seat-of-the-pants approach to foreign policy. The GOP is in disarray, with no spokesman, an old guard too old to run, and no new young faces with any proven talent on the national scene, and even less chance of repeating Carter's miracle because he succeeded so totally in exhausting the American people's thirst to trust. (Carter's act is very hard to follow indeed, filled as it was with self-serving betrayal.)

So California is the scene for the first primary, as it were of 1980. Brown, the aesthetic and the man who preaches of a new generation of leadership, should be ripe to take the title in 1980, when there will be a generation between himself and Kennedy. But he must win in 1978 to be in a position to challenge with a national reputation intact, and he will certainly be the target of the hour.

The first volley of the attack will apparently be an attack on his lifestyle, insinuating that since he is 38 and unmarried, he is a homosexual, and therefore unfit for public office.

The fact that Brown has an ongoing relationship with Linda Rhonstadt, a woman who would be roughly three times as sexy as Farah Fawcett-Majors even if she were bald, doesn't seem to phase the mudslingers.

Brown has chosen a silent approach to the attacks, which have been financed in part through a list of Bryant financial supporters released to State Senator Jack Stevenson ("That's how close we are," he told New West, referring to the list.).

It is the only way, ironically "Christian," totally effective in the long run, hopefully effective enough in the short term.

To do anything else would of course tarnish Brown's position as the Mr. Clean of American politics, a position no one probably deserves but one he wears with much more honesty and style than Carter, for example. The California electorate and the rest of the country could do themselves a favor by allowing the issue to slip into the gutter where it belongs, and concentrate on the more substantive discussions of problems which effect us all.

With protests growing daily about the proliferation of nuclear weapons, an uneasy peace in the Mideast inflamed to open sore status by Carter's bungling and unfeeling pronouncements, and an up and down economic situation, the American people are better served by severing themselves from issues which aren't issues

Letters To The Editor

Dear Editor:

We wonder if it was an oversight on the part of the Rockport Pilot's Editor when he omitted the Rockport Recreation Memorial Park from the growth of Rockport.

This part plays such a vital part in the lives of our young people during baseball season. With the Little League, Pony League, Junior League and the young girls league playing base ball games nightly. And tournaments from the older set playing periodically during the spring and summer months. These tournments draw large crowds from a wide area to this community.

The park also offers a playground with picnic tables, barb-que pits to picnickers, a double tennis court well lighted at night for those who enjoy this sport.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Zeisler, the manager and overseers have been working this summer creating some beautification projects to add to the attraction of our community. So far we have built an old corral, a wedding chapel, a circus, chicken coop, a colonial room, and last but not least our heritage room. These will be added to as we go along with the addition of a carnival in the planning for this winter, a wishing well, and a grape arbor. This has been a time consuming project taking up about all of the time, but a very rewarding project for the Zeislers, one we have enjoyed very much.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Clifford Zeisler

Dear Editor:

Rockport and Aransas County have wonderful churches, great schools, good law enforcement, good city and county governments, many fine organizations and the finest ambulance service to be found in the State of Texas. In fact everything we have is great except we do not have a full time hospital with complete medical facilities.

As I have stated before, I sincerely believe that the people in Aransas County would vote for and support a tax based hospital district. With the money that could be raised from local people and companies--along with federal Hill-Burton Grant, it seems to me that a hospital would be feasible and could be built.

Emergency facilities are great, but are hard to keep financed. For those that are hospitalized, you still have a long ride to Corpus Christi hospitals with your ambulance and emergency personnel being out of the county for precious minutes. The modulance type ambulance, with the way it is equiped, and with Bill Aston overseeing this, you have in my opinion as good an emergency room as can be found.

For those who feel that this is too great an undertaking for Aransas County alone, please try to picture that it is feasible and can be done with organization and some hard work. Also picture a hospital district Composed of Aransas County, the area covering the Aransas Pass Independant School District, the area covering the Ingleside School District, and probably the area covering the city of Port Aransas. Theses areas would take in large tax supporters such as DuPont, Harbor Island, Brown & Root, and other tax sources. Then try to picture a great hospital located mid-way between Aransas Pass and Rockport. As area hospital such as this would enable us to have the greatest facilities and specialists of all kinds.

I just hate to see us shoot for the small goal when the large goal is waiting to be won.

If this sounds like a good idea, and if you as an individual think it can be done, speak out, express your ideas and see what we come up with.

Sincerely,
C.W. Marshall

Dear Editor:

"I am extremely distressed that Governor Briscoe failed to include critical money management legislation in the recent special session. His short-sightedness on this matter will cost the taxpayers dearly.

"I don't understand how the Governor could refuse to include this legislation. The only apparent opposition came from the Treasurer, his friends, and some self-serving bankers who would lose the free use of State money.

"I cannot help but wonder if the Governor put partisan politics before the interests of the people of Texas. I introduced legislation in the regular session that would have earned for the people of Texas 42.6 million dollars each biennium. H.B. 1984 passed the House 127-5, only to die a mysterious death in the Senate Economic Development Committee.

"An analysis of the legislation by the Governor's own Budget and Planning office could find no disadvantages, except that the Treasurer does not have personnel qualified for cash management. However, the analysis continued that the Treasury has ample funds appropriated to employ capable staff. Why did the Governor ignore the advice of his own financial experts? And why did he ignore the published findings and recommendations for the Hobby-Clayton Commission, the State Auditor, and the State Comptroller?

"State Treasurer Jesse James has written to Governor Briscoe with promises to invest state funds so as to increase interest income. I have seen a copy of this letter obtained from the Governor's office by the press. It is amazing how many of his promises come directly, word for word, from my H.B. 1984 and H.B. 4, pre-filed for the special session.

"Of course, I am delighted that my efforts have led to these promises from the State Treasurer. However, I cannot help but be skeptical about Jesse James' promises. After decades of incompetent, antiquated operation at the Treasury, how can anybody expect that merely a letter from the Treasurer will result in any substantial improvement? Indeed, how can the Governor depend on these paper promises from James?

"Jesse James' letter promises to continue to improve the Treasury Department's continuous cash flow forecasting system. I believe they do not even have such a system. The letter promises to continue to maximize funds in deposits earning interest, and to minimize checking accounts. The Treasurer would have us believe that they are doing this now, but they are not.

"Even if the Treasurer were to implement all these promised improvements, changes to the existing depository statues would still be necessary to ensure the State receives maximum interest income. This makes it even more questionable why the Governor would settle for a letter full of promises.

"It is my sincere hope that the changes that the State Treasurer is promising are put into effect, for I am in complete agreement with Governor Briscoe that the people of Texas need no new taxes. However, the Governor does not seem to be acting to achieve what he has pledged so often.

"I question the method being used to implement these changes. They should not be brought about at the whim of the Governor and the Treasurer by means of interdepartmental correspondence. They should have been set into law by action of the Legislature, so that receiving maximum interest would be required of the present State Treasurer and those elected in the future.

"The Governor and the Treasurer should recognize that the Legislature, the press, and the public will all be watching to see if Jesse James keeps these promises."

We experience a disproportionate number of serious child abuse cases in the Coastal Bend. The reasons, complex, and not everyone would agree. Most of us can agree we'd like to prevent abuse or neglect of children where it is possible to do so.

You hesitate, at times, in reporting a suspicion that a child is being mistreated. You think, "I have no proof. Am I being a busybody?" The question of whether you should call under such circumstances was put to Jane Duckworth, a social worker for the Department of Public Welfare protective services. Her answer is unequivocal. Report it.

Not to report it because you aren't sure could mean the life of the child. Mrs. Duckworth says a concerned individual does not have the responsibility of deciding whether abuse or neglect is going beyond the prerogative of a family in child care and discipline. That responsibility rests with the social worker who is trained in what questions to ask to bring out crucial facts.

If an assault upon a child is underway and a child is in immediate danger, law enforcement officers should be called for the fastest response. Officers do receive training in handling of these cases. Police and social workers are cooperating much more closely than they did in previous years. They advise one another when a case is reported and they go to a home together to investigate. Both put the welfare of the child first. As a secondary consideration, some difference in outlook may exist. The officer is determining whether a criminal complaint should be filed. The social worker is deciding how the family can best be strengthened to eliminate or moderate causes of abuse.

If an emergency situation does not exist, then a call to report the case can be made either to the police or the Department of Public Welfare. There is also a toll-free hotline to Austin. The number is 1-800-252-5400. A social worker is available to every community around the clock, and in each instance there is a back-up worker.

We are inclined to think of a person who would abuse a child as pathological. Mrs. Duckworth says child abusers can be anyone anywhere. Most frequently, tensions have stretched the elastic of the mind and emotions to the limit and they are released violently. She describes an example. The father has lost his job. The washing machine has broken down. Then a child spills the last glass of milk in the house. That is too much for one parent who strikes out.

GROSS EARNINGS PROTECTION

If a going business comes to a halt from some hazard as, say, fire or flood, the physical loss is almost always covered by such hazard insurance. But, until it gets back into production, there is another loss-one which could put the company into bankruptcy in a matter of time. That is the loss of gross income.

Hence, the Insurance Industry, has produced two Basic forms of Business Interruption coverage [for attachment to the fire policy] to allow the business to sustain itself through the period of shutdown. They are the GROSS EARNINGS [Mercantile or Non Manufacturing] and GROSS EARNINGS-[Manufacturing] policies. Each follows the same formula. They undertake to provide the insured with sums sufficient to cover the loss, or reduction in, gross earnings plus continuing expenses, to the extent that they would have been earned, resulting from the occurence of loss from an insured peril.

The calculation of this amount is based on the historical period of one year prior to the loss with due allowance for increase or decrease in current activity of the business.

Energy-Saving Tips for Hot Weather

During the summer months more than half the electricity used in most air conditioned homes goes for cooling. So, you are probably look.ng for ways you can control the cost of operating your cooling system.

If so, here are some suggestions to help:

- Set the thermostat at the highest comfortable setting, around 78 degrees. Keeping the temperature in your house at 71 degrees could make air conditioning cost twice as much as a 78 degree setting.
- Clean or replace the filter at least once a month—or better yet, every two weeks.
- Keep direct sunlight out of the house with shades or draperies. Trees, shrubs, awnings and shutters also can provide shading for your home and reduce the work load of your air conditioner.
- Clear away tall plants, shrubbery and other obstructions from the outside sections of central air conditioning units. The unit must have free circulation of air for good performance.
- Have your air conditioner cleaned and checked each year to insure that it is running at top efficiency.

If you want more information on operating your air conditioning more economically, we have a free booklet for you. Ask for "How to Save Money on Your Air Conditioning" at your local CPL office.

Conways Win Yard Of Month

The home of Mr. and Mrs. J.I. Conway, 201 Bay, has been given "The Yard of the Month" award for the month of July.

In spite of the dry and hot weather, the Conways have managed to keep their yard looking green and inviting.

A multitude of oak trees almost cover the yard, but offer enough filtered sunlight to enable their shrubs and flowering plants to do well.

Palm trees and a delightful Spanish dagger are in evidence.

A number of hanging baskets containing fern and Jew and Swedish ivy, etc., are at vantage points enhanced by the macrame hangers.

Foundation planting of pyracantha, holly, hydrangea and loquat add to the picture as well as flowering plants such as begonia, petunias, etc. Zebra plants, pepperonia, lilies, elephant ears also add to the overall effect.

For honorable mention the home of Mrs. Rebecca Bateman, 510 Church St., has been selected. She does all of her yard and gardening and is certainly to be congratulated for her efforts.

The award of the month is given by the Rockport Home and Garden Club.

Anyone knowing of a yard that might qualify, please notify Mrs. Frank A. Taylor or Mrs. J. Paul Rogers.

A woman usually recognizes herself as "his wife" and "their mother." Until marriage, her identity is in a holding pattern.

THE ROCKPORT HOME and Garden Club recently bestowed the distinction of August Yard of the Month to Mr. and Mrs. James Conway of 201 Bay St. in Rockport. The Conways profess to have no special secrets except for a "little bit" of time spent each day in the flower beds. The lawn itself gets little attention, and Mr. Conway says the yard hasn't even been watered much this year. "I just like to fool with plants," says Conway. The Conways intend to spend a little more time in the yard in the next few weeks, as Conway pointed out it is the time of year that the exposed lawn and garden tend to "burn up."

TRANQUILITY

Mrs. Baxter looks as if she doesn't have a care in the world. She is always perfectly groomed. Her house and her garden, with its beautiful flowers, are always just so.

She isn't trying to give a false impression; in fact, she would be horrified at the thought. But the truth is that things have not been all that easy for her. Her husband is a semi-invalid; their only son was killed in a tragic accident. She works in her husband's business three days a week, to help keep things going.

Where does she get her serenity? How has she had the courage to accept so much adversity with so much grace? A friend asked her one day, and she pointed to the tall, white steeple at the end of the street.

Many people have found their answer in the Church. Have you looked there?

The City Secretary And The Origin Of Storms

This boom is like so many others. Not a land rush but a series of small stands and grinding details that mark the trail of the various forces.

Which is not to say that the generals don't try cowboy moves or guerilla attacks. They do, which may explain the hunted look City Secretary Herman Johnson wears from time to time.

He can handle the hustlers. "They are in and out of here every day," Johnson says, waving his hands outward. "They want to build a shopping center here. They're planning an apartment complex over there." He pauses for effect, and the eyes that usually display little more than a resigned intensity, than a resigned intensity, twinkle a little bit. "And they all have lots of money." And he smiles.

So the hustlers are no problem. It's the stuff mama never told you about, like the Moonies. "They were in here a few days ago," Johnson told City Council members recently. "That's the third time they've come back wanting a permit (to go door to door), and I have to turn them down. They're always polite, they just won't take no for an answer. I just don't...I really don't know what...They're just..." It was plain Johnson was struggling with the old politeness equals guilt trick, and the council won't touch it with a 10 foot pole.

Then there's the federales, to use Robert Blake's phrase. When the Flood Plain regulations came down from above recently, they were like 10 inches of rain in the dark for Johnson.

Constant questions from all concerned and some hot-mouthed complaints (many of whom were bewilderingly right --the regulations were illegal under state law until the legislature wiped out a technicality in the July special session), and no real hope for a let up.

So it was dog days when Johnson hit the trail one Thursday to talk to local trailer park owners to explain the rules to them, and stress the tight compliance deadlines.

Amazingly, the park owners were in the best of moods. One woman owner said she thought it was the best thing that had happened lately, and nobody seemed to think it was a big problem.

Johnson all but floated through. Normally a chain smoker, he only had to draw his pack a few times, and finished early.

Which doesn't mean the job was done, that or any other. Johnson says with only a hint of humor that things have gone "berserk" at City Hall the last year, what with hustlers, Moonies and federales knocking on all the doors at once.

Johnson And Helen Braffett

Even the "real" people are getting in line. There were eight rezoning requests on a recent council agenda, and Johnson says that if he lives it will get much worse.

He secretly enjoys it, of course, looks more vigorous than most people in town and is the only man in city government with enough patience to have mastered Roberts Rules of Order (sounds easy but try it), the better to rope a council that sometimes seems determined to break before the bull.

Johnson got where he is by a suitably strange route. Nothing less would enable him to survive, probably.

He was going great guns in 1948 as Chief of Storage at the San Antonio Civil Depot when the government decided to wind down a little after the war (little did they know), and he was offered a Catch-22--transfer or drop a few rankings.

He and an assistant rebelled, and began looking around for an out. His assistant was a Rockport fan, and came up with a drive-in grocery they could buy with combined credit.

Johnson and his new partner took over the grocery store in 1950, and stayed in the business eight years, when they sold out and bought Suttle's Furniture Store, a business operation which at one time included the whole block of office space next to Western Auto on Austin Street.

Things went very well for the first couple of years, and Johnson had enough spare time to run and win the race for Mayor in 1960.

In 1961, Suttle's took order on a new inventory valued at more than $100,000, and it was still in the crate's when Hurricane Carla entered the Gulf of Mexico.

Johnson, although he'd been on the coast for more than a decade, was new to the hurricane game, and asked his partner if they should put the new inventory up on crates.

His partner told him no hurricane would ever put water in the store, and that it was going inland closer to Galveston than Corpus Christi anyway. No cause for worry.

The furniture stayed where it was, and when Johnson came back after the storm most of it was floating.

"After that," Johnson says soberly. "I just closed up shop and went to work for the city."

The months which followed the storm were confused and anxious for most of the populace, and Johson had many of the details of rebuilding placed on his Mayoral shoulders. While the city cleaned up, Johnson pursued and got a federal assistance grant.

In 1962, he was named Tax Assessor-Collector in addition to his post as Mayor, and was given authoriy to make the first tax valuation in the city's history. He spent three years on the task, and has done it yearly ever since, even though his title now reads City Secreary as well as TA-C.

Fittingly, he is also the city's ivil Defense director. After his first tragic meeting with Carla his luck got only marginally better. While sitting in his office directing local operations during Celia, he chanced to remember something from a closet storeroom, and left briefly to get it. While he was gone, a gust of wind blew out the picture window in his office wall and blanketed the furnishings and floor with a hail of glass and rainwater.

The next alert will find him at the Sheriff's Office with the rest of the mortals.

With another hurricane season cranking up, you'd think Johnson would be hearing footsteps or his name in the wind; but he's too busy these days with other storms to fund an obsession.

The hustlers, Moonies and federales of course, are at the door, along with citizens fending off or bringing on the newest wave of change. In recent months, Johnson has waded through battles over Houston Oil and Minerals plans to build a separation facility near the Rockport Cemetery, HO&M's plans to drill wells which will slant inside the city limits, the Little League Association's request for exclusive use of Memorial Park baseball diamonds, and a recent move to erect a highrise condominium complex in Harbor Oaks.

In addition, Johnson has struggled with the establishment of a dogcatching system for the city, If an application for a grant for revision of the city's master plan, and making the Memorial Park contractor level the new ball diamond (the contractor put the fence in first).

All that and low pay, too. As Judge John Wendell says about his own duty-heavy job: "I can stay here as County Judge or I can go over to Reynold's and make more money as a janitor."

At least he doesn't have to fake understanding to make "stands" on the "issues." Because he does so much, people would like him to wave the future like a flag, and sometimes accuse him of handicapping. In the recent debate on the ill-fated Harbor Oaks highrise, Johnson was accused of being selective with the evidence. He looked dumbstruck at first, then like a man who'd love to be carrying a gun, and finally like a man who'd had enough. "Mr. , let me tell you something. All I've done and all I ever do is to present the information I have to the best of my ability..." He went on to mop up, but the crowd had turned so completely for him that by the time he finished the man had apologized twice and sagged back in to the crowd.

Point made. And just two hours and a few crises later, the meeting was over.

Twelve Complete Basic CPR Course

Twelve local citizens received cardio-pulmonary resuscitation training and received their certificates for successfully completing the basic life support course. The C.P.R. course was sponsored by the American Heart Association with Roy and Patsy Blair as instructors.

Those completing the course were George Snider, Margaret Hight, Peggy M. Davis, Elka Davis, Elizabeth Trank, Juanita Horan, Beth F. Weekly, Donie Meador, Marie Clark, Ruth Davis, Mary Ballou and Kim Breineg.

Previous courses were given to groups within various clubs and organizations. This was our first time to try an open class through public announcement. The response was so great your Heart Association will conduct classes that meet the people's desires when ever participation is adequate for a class. At present we have a request for a class to be conducted in the morning. In addition, an evening class is beginning to form. If you are interested in either, please call Ken Clark, 729-1146, to enroll. Remember, this course is provided free of charge by your Aransas County Heart Association.

Your Heart Association has now trained about 300 people in the local community. It appears we have a population sufficient to conduct an instructors course locally. We have four people signed up now, so with a few more, we will start this program. If you are a Basic Graduate and want to be an instructor, please call Ken Clark, 729-1146.

State Of The City

that will require expansion. The City Hall has reached the saturation point. It's gotten to where we will have to either extend this one or build a new building.

Johnson: And you can't really extend this one. There's no place to go. You'd either be building on the highway or using up more of the parking area. And parking is already impossible.

Pilot: Does this mean it's bond issue time?

Falk: Not really. We feel like after taking a look at the budget and the new valuations that we can pay for the new bulding if we decide to go that way out of the general fund: The possible bond issues are the possible new sewer lift station south of town, plus the new lines that would have to go to it, and the enlargement of the present sewer plant. We may be able to get by on revenue bonds and a raise in the sewer rates, but that remains to be seen. We do think that a new City Hall could be financed without a rise in taxes.

Pilot: So we have enough to keep our hands full right now. Where does that leave annexation. What will you take if you get the chance?

Falk and Johnson: The water.

Falk: We'd probably take in the water first. There's no maintenance of course, and with an extra half-mile jurisdiction we'd be able to get some of the wells in the bay.

The second thing would probably be all of the small enclaves which are inside the city limits but not part of the city. There are some near Little Bay Shores, and along other stretches of Highway 35 some by Super D.

We wouldn't take in Key Allegro right away because that would involve the bridge, which needs maintenance. They may even need a new one. and street maintenance, police protection, sewers, etc. All this would require study before the City could act in everybody's best interests.

As far as Fulton goes, the situation is right now that the City doesn't have the two sides it must have to annex legally. Plus there will be more streets, sewers, etc. And the city doesn't have a surplus right now to provide those kinds of services. We'd be picking up new values that would help offset the cost, but we'd have to give it a. look before doing anything.

The best thing on land after the enclaves would be to take in the undeveloped tracts.

But again, all this will require careful study. We can't really speak for anyone but ourselves. The Council will be making the decisions.

Pilot: Switching horses, there has been some talk in the past about a hotel-motel tax with proceeds to go toward promotion of the area. Is there any sympathy on the council for such a tax?

Johnson: No. You couldn't just do it inside the city. It would have to be a county-wide thing. Most of the larger hotels and motels are outside the city limits, and it wouldn't be fair to the owners here to give the other a tax break unless it went into effect all over at the same time.

Falk: We considered that one time and the local hotel-motel owners got up in arms about it. It's just something that will have to be done equally.

Pilot: What about changes in the coming years. What will be happening to the City economy?

Falk: Things look very good. We think that the health care problems of the community will be met. We have several fine citizen groups already meeting the challenge. The Hospital Volunteers with their emergency ambulance service, and the Heart Association with the CPR. There are others too.

And I think that the retired members of the community will continue to be viable. The AARP is one of the biggest and best local organizations and should continue to grow.

We think that the shrimp industry will continue to grow in value once they get the harbor dredging problems out of the way. The Mexican ban won't be hurting the local people as much as it will the shrimper further south and as you might have heard, the Shrimp Producers Association is already thinking on moving its headquarters from Brownsville to this area, Aransas Pass, which is lumped with Rockport-Fulton in most of the reports you see.

Falk: How about oil and gas? That could go up some, or it could go way up. If some of those wells that HO&M and others are drilling here go in, it would mean an increase in the valuation for the city. All we have right now is the wells which slant under the city. Inside the city there's nothing, of course, since the Edwin L. Cox people plugged the dry hole.

Pilot: Anything else?

Johnson: Rockport Yacht and Supply, RYSCO, should continue to expand. They're already among the biggest industries in town. Their payroll looks something like $1½ million.

Pilot: Speaking of industry, is the city actively soliciting industry for the area?

Falk: The city does not look for industry. We're a retirement community and a resort town, and we don't really need it. And it's too expensive for industry to come here because of the small labor pool. The unemployment here is only about, well I think the last figures said 4.6 percent, which is way below the national average. There's just no ready supply of workers willing to work for low wages, as there are in other parts of South Texas.

Pilot: What about the last 10 years? What can you look back on and name as definite plusses for the city or the area?

Falk: One of the main things would have to be the development of Key Allegro in the early sixties. Also the development of other subdivisions like Harbor Oaks and Palm Harbor, Little Bay Shores a little earlier, and there are others. Just the growth of the subdivision as the major source of valuation for the City is significant.

Johnson: Then you have Memorial Park, of course. That was finished in about 1960.

Falk: Then you have the SeaAire shopping center, where Super D and Winn's, as well as several other shops are located.

The growth of local banking has been a force in the community. We now have two fast growing banks instead of one with First National and Live Oak. Neither one seems to be suffering a bit.

Johnson: We've also doubled the size of the existing sewer plant within the past 10 years, from 500,000 to 1,000,000 gallons.

And then there's the new fire department and police department buildings.

Falk: The one other big thing is the city obtaining an adequate water supply. And the creation of the Conservation and Reclamation District.

ing matching funds of $250,000 were begun on a tentative basis even before final word was received that the Richardson Foundation board of directors had taken favorable action on the ACHVI application.

It is planned to begin solicitation for matching funds just as soon as necessary committees are appointed and organized. He expressed full confidence in success of the campaign, asserting that emergency medical service provided by ACHVI ambulance since the service started Jan. 15 has been widely acclaimed as one of the most successful and popular community projects ever undertaken in the Aransas County area.

He cited the fact that a number of lives already have been saved by the volunteer ambulance crews led by Paramedic Bill Aston. He added that the projected and now assured stabilization center will add substantially to the effectiveness and efficiency of the Aransas County emergency ambulance service. He emphasized that the new facility would not be a hospital.

Dr. Shellbergar reported that both foundations and individuals will be asked to contribute to the $250,000 matching funds required as a condition of the Richardson Foundation's grant. This endowment will be used to maintain, replace or add to equipment and facilities paid for by the foundation's initial grant. This locally solicited fund also could be used to expand the original facility if it becomes necessary in the future, Dr. Shellenbergar said.

Production of brochures explaining the entire emergency medical program including both the ambulance service and the projected emergency facilities already is underway. It will point out the importance of the whole project and attempt to convey a sense of its importance to the community.

Dr. Shellenbergar said the Rockport area might well become the outstanding smaller community in the country as far as emergency medical service facilities are concerned. He cited the ambulance service, the emergency medical care facility and the intensive campaign now underway to train more residents in Cardio-pulmonary Resuscitation, popularly known as CPR. Aransas Chapter, American Heart Association is planning at least one training course a month to qualify as many adults as possible in this emergency life-saving program.

Seattle, Wash., already is known as the best protected large city in the country with six or more modulances and a high percentage of its adults trained in CPR.

Sandollar

total money owed the Corpus Christi firm. The Judge accepted the First Savings petition at that time, and annulled the stay.

During the July 25 hearing, Knostman and attorneys held that the Sandollar had cash and assets of value to general creditors, and that summer business would make it possible to accumulate still more funds for the value of same creditors, if the stay were reinstated. They also held that the true value of the property and adjacent real estate were in fact more than the note value.

Patton reversed his July 12 stand upon hearing the evidence, and the Sandollar is assured of new life until all routes of appeal have been exhausted. The appeal process could take several months, and perhaps a year or more.

The first appeal will be filed with the U.S. Federal District Judge in Corpus Christi. If the appeal is denied, the case will then go before the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans.

Knostman has held throughout three years of money problems and negotiations with First Savings that the Sandollar was of more value to its creditors as a going concern, and has only recently taken over the thrust of its legal defense. He has the controlling corporation, Ramrock, in Chapter 11 Bankruptcy, a protective statute which allows businesses overwhelmingly in debt to operate for the benefit of their creditors.

Managed under this statute, the Sandollar has increased its cash on hand substantially since the June 7 ruling, and should remain booked solid throughout the summer, leaving the business in good shape to face a traditionally slack winter season.

The Sandollar employs from 35-50 persons, and has a local payroll of more than $130,000--facts Judge Patton apparently took into consideration when he reinstated the stay. Chapter 11 prohibits foreclosure if there is tangible reserve for the general creditors, and was intended to protect the local community in which the business operates as well.

ter at businesses participating in the campaign for eligibility. The certificates will be good at Chamber members, business places according to Mrs. Landrum. The registration forms will be discarded after each drawing thus requiring reregistration each month.

Bumper stickers promoting the campaign are currently available at participating Chamber members' establishments. Plans for other Shop At Home promotions are being discussed by the committee and will be made public when they are formalized.

Approximately 40 Chamber members are participating in the promotions, and the Chamber is encouraging additional businesses to join in. Participation in the shop At Home campaign does not require an entry fee or additional costs. The program is open to all Chamber members who with to take part.

Further information reguarding the Shop At Home campaign may be obtained by contacting Mrs. Landrum at the Chamber offices or members of the Community Planning and Development Committee.

ment of $41,000 from the program. The money will be administered by the San Patricio County Commitee on Youth Education and Job Opportunities, 111 North Odem, Sinton, Texas 78387, and 1/364/4290.

The Special Crisis Intervention Program is designed to provide emergency financial assistance to those heads of households 65 years of age or older living within the poverty guideline income levels and who can prove eligibility. Eligibilty includes proving that large unpaid energy/fuel bills caused utilities to be shut off, and/or that the person is threatened with inability to obtain delivery of fuel; and/or being in dire financial need at time of application as a result of having paid large energy/fuel bills in whole or in part.

No household will receive over $250 and most will receive less under other limitations of the program, but all households must be certified through one of the local administering organizations by August 31, 1977, to receive any assistance.

Shrimp

aspects which has contributed to good shrimp growth this year, said Carter.

Jackson said that it would be difficult for shrimpers to beat last year's crop, the best year the industry has ever seen. Most of this years production has been to the east and north noted Jackson. The majority of good catches have come off Port O'Connor, Freeport, Galveston, Sabine, Cameron, La. and Morgan City, La. Catches to the south have been "spotty" according to Jackson.

Jackson pointed out that because of last year's bumper crop, a number of fleets ordered new boats. The Jackson Company has new boats ordered last year working the Gulf waters and it is in part through these new boats that Jackson is hoping to bring his company's production up.

The Casterline Company is also using boats it purchased last year. Five new vessels are in use now, and company president L.E. Casterline says that most of his boats are fishing in the Texas and Louisiana coastal waters out to around 25 fathoms. Casterline said that his company is presently behind last years total pounds of shrimp to date and felt that last years income would be hard to beat. Prices stayed high last year and they had"...had a tendency to fall this year." said Caterline. When asked if he though the fleets could net a better income this year, Caterline replied "I don't believe so."

But for the moment, local producers are keeping occupied with the catches presently coming in. In an optomistic note, Jackson said "Conditions are obviously right or we wouldn't be getting the production we're getting.

Girl Scouts Have Busy Summer

The Rockport and Fulton Girls Scouts have been busy this summer, attending Camp Greenhill Girl Scout Camp on Lake Corpus Christi in Mathis, and going to the International Girl Scout/Guide House in Cuernavaca, Mexico. Kerry Ogle and Wynne Armstrong were counselors at the camp, and eight local girls went as campers. These girls were Andrea McLester, Leia Midgett, Patricia Cosby, Robbin Biggs, Joyce Henneke, Karen Barre, Tracy Sorenson, and Jeanette Jack. They were instructed in the ways of camping, swimming, and crafts and sports of various kinds at this encampment.

Two other local Scouts were chosen to attend the session of the Cabana International Scout/Guide House in Mexico. Miss Betty Whitney and Wynne Armstrong were selected to represent the Corpus Christi Area Council, along with three other girls from the other towns. Miss Whitney served as adviser to the group in its travels, as well as travel agent at times. The group spent a week at the scenic "resort", as they considered it, participating in various programs, and traveling to the nearby villages and to the Silver Capital of Taxco. After their stay there had ended, they journeyed to Mexico City, where they spent three days taking in the sights of our Southern neighbor. They went on tours of the famous cathedrals, parks, and castles, and visited the Pyramids of the Sun and the Moon. They returned with an overall greater knowledge of the history and culture of Mexico, as well as of its relation to Texas' background.

Marine Agent Smooths Fishing Industry Changes

Ralph Rayburn is the Marine Extension Agent for Aransas and San Patricio Counties, with offices in the Aransas County Courthouse in Rockport. To understand his function, it is necessary to know something about the program he represents.

The National Sea Grant College Act was passed in 1966 to accelerate development of marine resources. Texas Agricultural and Mechanical University in College Station was designated a Sea Grant College in 1971 and used its authority to establish a Marine Extention program which is similar to TAMU's long-term Agricultural Extension agency.

The first Marine Extension officer went to Calhoun County (Port Lavaca), and six more, serving a total of seven counties, followed. In addition to the six Extension Agents, there are two fisheries specialists, one in Brazoria County at Angleton, and another in Nueces County at Corpus Christi.

Whereas fishing specialists concentrate on commercial fishing for the most part--Angleton's Gary Graham designs new types of fishing nets, for example, the Marine Extension Agents have broader duties. Rayburn said the program divides its objectives into three broad categories -- education, encouragement and advisory counseling.

Rayburn arrived with those three objectives as a mandate and a budget of $20-25,000, financed by the TAES and the Commissioners' Courts of San Patricio and Aransas Counties, in cooperation with the TAMU Sea Grant program.

The budget includes a secretary, salaries, and office equipment. The office is free from the county.

His duties include keeping up with current trends in commercial and sport fishing, and other aspects of marine development in his two-county area, something which keeps his nose in mounds of technical journals and trade magazines. He says he stays a week behind in his reading, and to bear them out there are mounds of literature on most of his desk and on all the shelves and cabinets in his tiny office.

None of its is rote material. Local commercial fishermen are active in their professional associations, and Rayburn concentrates on material which could lend perspective to his approach, or be the source of new ideas on the development of alternative fisheries, as well as technological developments and scientific discoveries.

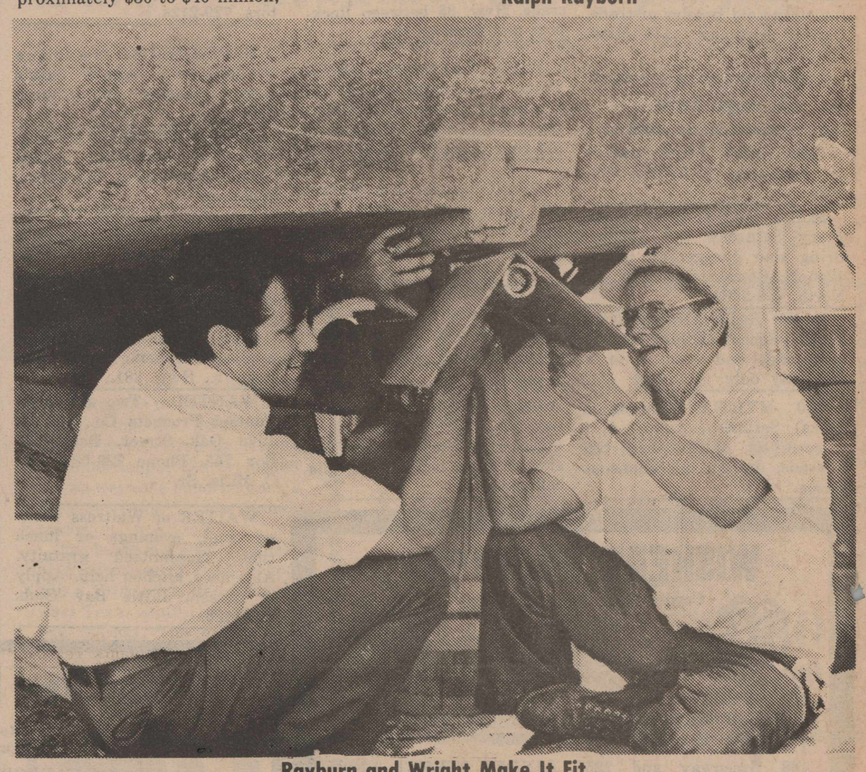

He is corresponding now with researchers on the East Coast about the potential of several of Gulf species currently being used in the Atlantic. The lag in the local season as a result of Texas Parks and Wildlife regulations makes it potentially profitable for fishermen to rig their nets for species such as mullet, croaker, deep water shrimp, shark and other species eaten readily in most of the world.

Current discussions are preliminary, according to Rayburn, but if regulations continue to tighten on local fishermen, many will be pursuing other species in the near future. And Graham's revolutionary net designs and Rayburn's correspondence are steps toward an immediate industry alternative.

Rayburn notes, and it would be hard to ignore, that the state of local fishing is currently excellent despite new regulations like the Mexican phase-out and the 200 mile limit. Rayburn says his figures show that commercial fishing adds $30 million to the economics of Rockport, Fulton and Aransas Pass, and that most economists add a multiplier of three for a total impact of $90 million. Rockport-Fulton realizes approximately $30 to $40 million, including the multiplier.

Ralph Rayburn

Rayburn and Wright Make It Fit

The industry is traditional big money in this area, and has been the love of a sabculture for generations, spawning specialists in a bizaare (to the layman) collection of trades. Some of the trades are suffering a brain drain in these restless days, and Rayburn has been working recently in one of those weekend trade areas--net construction. He got word of the decline on trips to the docks, and worked with the Aransas Pass Independent School District to set up a class, which was funded by the Texas Education Agency.

The first class in July was a staggering success, with applicants overrunning facilities about two to one. Another class has been set, and the graduates could well be the new generation of a still-honored craft.

Rayburn also found a potential success called Wimpy Wright on the docks. Wright, who has a brother named Peanut, has been fishing commercially since 1932, and been a shrimp boat captain since 1940.

For the past several years, Wright has been wrestling with a new type of rudder he says will cut vibration, save gas and make boats easier to steer.

Rayburn has been working with Wright for several months, and has given the inventor help in getting the inventor to a patent attorney, and convincing captains to use the device in Gulf runs and bay fishing.

Both Rayburn and Wright get a little wild about the prospects if current testing comes out favorably. Wright says the device in his experience on runs as far away as Mexico is a 15 to 20 percent savings on fuel, and a almost complete loss of vibration. Vibration is important because of the stress inherent in most hull designs. Wright claims his new rudder makes so little it could double the life spans of most boats.

Rayburn is looking for new ways to test the device, and will be putting information on the rudder into trade journals soon. Wright continues to work on the design as feedback comes in, and the two have been an unstoppable team so far. A patent should be issued sometime next year, and one manufacturer, Jack Jordon of Ingleside Fabricators, is already producing the device under a license from Wright.

Rockport Yacht and Supply has also expressed an interest, and may use the device in some prototype testing.

Successes such as those he's had with the net classes and Wright lead Rayburn to believe that any increase in communication between his office and working fishermen is favorable. He says one of his future goals is to establish a board of working fishermen he could meet regularly with to air potential problems and get input about future projects for his office to tackle. He makes his dock rounds regularly, but says that its not always the best place to brainstorm with the pressures of day-to-day business closing in from all sides.

He also feels that face-to-face would be a more effective way for him to get across some of the information contained in his regular newsletter, "Dock Talk".

The committee idea is common as salt water, but it should go over. Rayburn will be the main ingredient, and he has the kind of soft-spoken style and humor that make group discussions bearable. His is a good old boy attack, except that he's got a mind-gun instead of a shotgun. His recent successes fall neatly into the three program objectives which make up his mandate, education, encouragement and advisory counseling, evidence that he can deal with levels of perspective, a talent which will continue to make his office credible and productive in the midst of growing regulation, technological advances and unprecedented growth.

RFTA Tennis Tourney Aug. 5-7

Arrangements have been completed for the fifth annual Summer Fun Mixed doubles tennis tournament to be played at Key Allegro Tennis Club courts and the courts of Rockport Racquet Club, Aug. 5-7, it was announced Tuesday by Reece Rozzell, president of the Rockport Tennis Association, which is sponsoring the tournament.

The tournament also is known as the Fred Whittle Memorial tournament because the focal point of interest in the event is the awarding of the Whittle revolving trophy presented each year to winners of adult Division A. The late Col. Fred Whittle spent the last years of his life interesting and coaching young local tennis players, many of whom have become outstanding players.

The tournament is believed to be the first ever played in Rockport and traditionally has attracted the most participants. Resident or property owner in Aransas County and members of the two local clubs are eligible to participate.

For adult players there will be three divisions depending on degree of skill. This year there also will be a Junior division. In addition to the Whittle trophy, there will be trophies for winners and runners-up in each division. Entry fees are $7.50 for adults and $4.50 for juniors. Balls will be furnished by the tournament committee and the fee also covers a barbecue supper following final matches Sunday afternoon. Cost of the dinner for non-players is $3.

Beer, soft drinks and other refreshments will be available courtside Saturday and Sunday. At a "draw" party Aug. 4 at 6 p.m. in the Bayhouse restaurant parings and schedule of matches will be announced. Appetizers will be provided and drinks will be available. As an added attraction, George Falk, general manager of the Rockport Racquet Club, has contributed a racquet to be awarded at his meeting.

In general charge of the tournament are Roy Acree, Key Allegro Tennis Club professional, and Dewy Lingo, who ariginated the annual tournament five years ago in memory of his long-time friend and playing companion, Colonel Whittle. Chris Craig is responsible for trophies, Leon Bateman and Jim Allen are directin the Junior division, David Roaten is in charge of promotion and Joe Hugenberg is responsible for the barbecue supper.

ROCKPORT-FULTON FOOTBALL Coach Roy Chapa checks the scales as members of this year's squad began the first part of their physical examinations in preparation for the 1977 football season. Participating in the first day of examinations are Keith Barrett, Sam Solis, Scott Casterline, Newlin Parker and Charlie Edler. Organized practice gets underway Monday, August 8, at 8 a.m. prompt. Afternoon practice will get underway the same day at 5:30 p.m. on the field. First scrimmage game for the Pirates will be against 2-AA Ingleside on August 19 at Ingleside. Time for the scrimmage will be announced as soon as it is formally set. Pirate head football coach Vollie Williams is predicting a tough season, calling District 15-AAA one of the most competitive and largest districts in the state. "200 pound kids are small in this district," says Williams. Gregory-Portland has been picked as the number two AAA school in the state with 22 lettermen returning to the team this year. West Oso and Beeville, says the coaching staff, will also provide plenty of mean action for the Pirates. Despite a lack in size, Williams feels that the Rockport-Fulton team can make it up with some good speed, particularly in Edler, who runs a 22.7 220 and returning quarterback Darryl Green who sports a 9.8 100 and a 4.4 40. The Pirates will bring seven district honorable mention players back this year. Joe Brooks, linebcker; Parker, tackle; Reggie Morgan, tackle; Gary Heasley, center; Edler, safety and running back; Barrett, cornerback; and Green, quarterback. Thirteen lettermen are returning to the team this season, including four two-year lettermen. Nine offensive starters and six defensive starters will be back in the lineup.

Outdoors 'n Things

By L.D. Nuckles
TP&WD Information Officer

This is the time of year that weeds, grass and algae growing in freshwater lakes, both large and small, begin to give fishermen, swimmers and boaters a problem.

Plants that are rooted in the bottom of the lake or pond depend on sunlight to be able to grow, so the water depth and clarity controls the area that they are able to take over. Floating plants are able to reach sunlight regardless of the depth of the water. Water hyacinth is a good example of a floating plant although it can also grow rooted in mud.

Algae can be the biggest problem in some situations, especially in very fertile water. There are many forms of algae and some are worse than others. These tiny floating plants can cause everything from greenish tint to the water to huge, unsightly, stinking mats on the surface. Many deaths to pets, livestock, fish, wildlife and even man have been attributed to the presence of certain types of algae in the water. The algae causing this sickness and death is almost always one of the kinds known as "blue-green bloom-forming." Some of these plants release toxin into the water when they die while others secrete the lethal substances from the living cells. A great deal is left to learn about these substances, but it is important that water purification engineers, livestock raisers, wildlife specialists, pond owners and lake property owners be aware of this potential danger.

Most of the common nuisance weeds in lakes and ponds can be controlled by mechanical or chemical means. Many of them are seasonal things and the problem will go away if you look the other way long enough. On the other hand, the control of some of these plants is such an expensive undertaking that the project is far beyond the scope of the ordinary property owner or small group of property owners or fishermen. The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department (TP&WD) has crews at work the year round trying to establish control over such plants as the water hyacinth and hydrilla. Water hyacinths can be controlled if there is enough money and manpower. Many areas in Texas' public waters are now open to fishing and other outdoor recreation that a few years ago were covered with an impregnable carpet of the green plants.

One of the best aids I have seen for the layman with an aquatic vegetation problem is a small paperbacked book published by APPLED BIOCHEMISTS, INC., 5300 West County Road, Mequon, Wisconsin 53092. The book costs $3.95.

Clean water is becoming more valuable every day to realtors and land developers, campgrounds, fishing and hunting clubs, resort and motel owners, golf courses, municipalities and sanitary districts, industries, irrigation districts and property owners. To be useful much of this water must be kept free of an over-abundance of aquatic vegetation. This is becoming a problem to more and more people and the more they learn about the subject the better they are equipped to cope with it.

Hitt-Howley Lead Club 55 Bowling League

Bob Hitt rolled a 239 game and a 649 series and Aries Howley a 226 game and a 634 series to pace the Club 55 Bowling League in action at the Coastal Bend Lanes in Aransas Pass last week.

In other results, Marie Mullinax finished with a 203, 205 set and a 569 series, and Myrtle DeForrest bowled a 219 game and a 571 series.

Ethel Hargus rolled a 207 game and a 576 series.

Johnny Potter had a 213 game on the way to a 600 sereis, third high for the week.

Senior Citizens On Coastal Advisory Board

Senior citizens in Coastal Bend Area Aging Agency will account for 25 new positions to be added to the Senior Texans Employment Program which is administered by the Texas Farmers Union in Waco.

STEP Director Bob Girard has announced the ability to serve these additional rural elderly due to a grant of $1,431,000 from the U.S. Department of Labor under Title IX of the Older Americans Act. The program employs senior citizens who engage in community development and public service projects and is coordinated through the offices of the county and the Area Aging Agency, a part of the Governor's Committee on Aging.

The Governor's Committee recommended STEP as recipient of the federal funds due to its "excellent record of success and its efficient administrative system which allows greatest direct application of funds to the senior citizen participants."

"We are elated at the potential for expansion," said Girard. "It is a program which not only provides manpower for worthy public service projects, but also instills the pride of accomplishment and financial reward within its participants."

The official contract between the Governor's Committee on Aging and the Texas Farmers Union has been signed by GCOA Executive Director Vernon McDaniel and TFU President Jay Naman. The positions will officially be filled in the area beginning July 15, 1977 and will be handled through the area Aging Office.

Further information can be sought through the state office of STEP in Waco, (817) 772-7233.

City, County Receive Rebate Of $2 400

Comptroller Bob Bullock said Wednesday that mixed drink sales reported for the April June quarter of 1977 totalled $134 million, nearly a 25 percent increase over the same quarter a year ago.

Bullock said he mailed checks today totalling $3.9 million to 196 counties and 327 cities as their share of the 10 percent mixed drink tax collected during the April-June quarter.

Aransas County received a total rebate of $2,082.95. The City of Rockport's share was $303.73. Both the county and city received 15 percent of the total collected within their borders.

The remaining 85 percent of the overall tax collected goes into the state's general fund, according to Bullock.

Bullock said the 196 counties receiving rebates received a total of $2 million, and 327 cities a total of $1.9 million.

Harris County received the largest check, $599,383, based on total report mixed drink sales of $39.9 million. Dallas County reported sales of $24.6 million, Bexar County, $10.3 million, and Tarrant County, $9.9 million.

The mixed drink gross receipts tax is collected by the Alocoholic Berverage Commission.

Schwartz On Beach, Sunset Committees

This week Lieutenant Governor Bill Hobby announced the appointment of Senator A.R. "Babe" Schwartz of Galveston to serve on the interim committee on Texas beaches, created by SR 581, 65th Regular Session.

Senator Schwartz stated, "That since the passage of the resolution some cities including my hometown of Galveston have moved forward with ordinances under long standing existing authority, and I think the committee will find that whereever city and county government have acted in a responsible manner then all that the cities and counties may need from the state is money for free offbeach parking."

Senator Schwartz also announced his appointment by Lieutenant Governor Hobby to serve a four year term on the Texas Sunset Advisory Commission.

Schwartz stated, "This gives the state a golden opportunity to streamline state government to get rid of the wasteful and useless state agencies that have been accumulated over the years even though the initial need for such state agencies has long since passed." Schwartz added that "The goal of the Sunset Commission is tso eliminate unnecessary agencies and improve those that remain in existence."

County Heart Assn. Needs CPR Teachers

The Aransas County Heart Association is currently looking for qualified personnel to teach a Cardio-Pulmonary Resuscitation course in the mornings, according to Mrs. Betty Verret, secretary for the local group.

Evening classes are now being scheduled and should begin sometime later this month said Mrs. Verret.

Completion of the CPR course entitles participants to Heart Association certification.

Persons interested in taking the course should contact Ken Clark at 729-1146 for information.

The Aransas Chapter is also making preparations for a fishing tournament to benefit their information programs and projects. The tournament is scheduled to begin at day break on August 13. Further information reguarding the tourney may be obtained from Clark.

The smallest amount of natural gas on reserve in a long time is what we have now. Domestic supplies are dwindling. Proved reserves are at their lowest levels since 1955 and some industries have been suffering shutdowns because of shortages.
