Man to be tried for third time in officer's death

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo. (AP) — A man whose first two convictions for murdering a policeman 22 years ago were overturned on appeal will go on trial a third time for the crime, for which he has already served 19 years in prison.

First-degree murder charges have been refiled against David Wayne Thompson, 48, who was paroled from prison in May 1980, Cape Girardeau County Prosecutor Larry Ferrell said Thursday.

Ferrell said he felt compelled to act since the U.S. Supreme Court in January let stand a federal appeals court ruling that new charges must be filed or Thompson's name cleared.

"The most important fact I have considered in making the decision to retry Thompson," said Ferrell, "is that (Cape Girardeau patrolman) Herbert Goss... was killed in cold blood."

"As matters now stand, no one stands convicted of that murder," he said. "The case stands officially unresolved."

Thompson, who is now back home in Bakersfield, Calif., spent 19 years in the Missouri Penitentiary for the March 10, 1961, shooting death of Goss, a Cape Girardeau police officer.

The shooting occurred when Thompson and another man, Sammy Tucker, were passing through Cape Girardeau after escaping from the prison at San Quentin, Calif. Authorities say they got into a gunfight with police during a routine traffic check. Goss and Officer Ronald Crittendon were killed.

Tucker was convicted of Crittendon's murder and Thompson for Goss's killing.

Both defendants were sentenced to death. Tucker was executed in the state's gas chamber in July 1963, but Thompson won a new trial on the grounds that the state suppressed evidence.

Thompson was convicted again in 1966 and sentenced to two life sentences.

But while in prison in 1975, Thompson petitioned the courts to shorten his sentence on the basis of a number of court errors, including the unfair selection of a jury in his second trial.

That court battle did not end until six months after Thompson was paroled in April 1980. A federal appeals court ruled that the jury in Thompson's second trial was unfairly chosen and ordered him retried or his name cleared in the case.

That ruling was then appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court, which this January upheld the appeals court.

Ferrell's decision to refile the charges stunned Thompson's family in Los Angeles.

"This whole thing is just incredible to all of us," said his sister, Carol Sullivan. "It has gone on for so...many years. I think it's time the state of Missouri dropped the whole thing."

Brett Thompson, the defendant's 24-year-old son, is convinced of his father's innocence, but adds, "Even if he is guilty, he's done his time. Leave him alone."

The Supreme Court gave Ferrell 60 days to refile the charges, but he got an extension. Thompson is now scheduled to go to trial July 8 in Mississippi County Circuit Court in Charleston.

Thompson said he plans to file legal motions seeking a court-appointed attorney of his choosing, a change in the trial location and access to several photos he claimed would exonerate him.

"I've already got the motions typed out," Thompson said.

Ferrell said he has located 18 of the original 20 witnesses still alive after searching through reams of dusty, yellowed records. The prosecuting attorney said Thompson faces a maximum sentence of life imprisonment.

If Thompson is convicted, Ferrell said, the parole board would decide if he had to serve additional time.

In its January ruling, the U.S. Supreme Court agreed with Thompson's contention that the jury in his trial for Goss's murder was improperly chosen and called the process used to pick them "dangerous."

Thompson alleged that former Mississippi County Sheriff Pedro Simmons hand-picked the jury.

The high court also said the method used made it possible that "the entire panel would be unduly sympathetic to the prosecution."

Missile deployment approved

PARIS (AP) — The United States and its NATO allies gave final approval Friday to deployment of new nuclear missiles in Europe this year unless there is agreement with the Soviet Union on an arms reduction pact.

U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz said, "there's absolutely no question about it."

Shultz and foreign ministers from other NATO countries ended their annual two-day spring strategy session with a declaration telling the Soviets, "If concrete results through negotiations cannot be reached, deployments as planned will begin."

The declaration referred to the Geneva negotiations between the Soviet Union and the United States on medium-range missiles in Europe. At the same time, Geneva negotiations also are being conducted on limiting strategic, or long-range, nuclear missiles.

"As of now we see a very clear determination on the part of the alliance and most particularly the governments involved to carry through with that plan and I say at this point there is absolutely no question about it."

NATO Secretary Gen. Joseph Luns said before the meeting that no further go-ahead, even by NATO defense ministers meeting in Canada this fall, would be required to carry out the deployment of the medium-range missiles.

Greece was the only NATO member that declined to endorse the decision. Denmark and Spain listed some reservations, but gave their ultimate assent.

Although NATO has no plans to make a formal announcement as each set of missiles is deployed, it has disclosed some of the sites in Italy, West Germany and Britain, the first countries basing the new missiles.

"We want to see a negotiated outcome," Shultz said. "Whether there will be one or not is simply a question of whether the Soviet Union at some point will decide that they should be reasonable too. It takes two to have a reasonable outcome."

In a conference communique, the ministers repeated charges that deployment of Soviet SS-20 missiles with 3,000-mile ranges "has relentlessly continued."

Soviet buildups of conventional, nuclear and chemical arms, "far exceed defense needs," the communique said.

"Faced with this threatening situation, the allies are resolved to ensure that conditions never exist which could tempt the Soviet Union to exploit its military power against any of the allies."

French Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson, host for the first NATO meeting in France since it dropped out of the military wing of the alliance in 1966, told a news conference his government supported the missile deployment decision.

Bite victim, six other people must receive rabies shots

Seven people — including three Midland Animal Control employees — will receive a series of rabies vaccinations after a rural Midland woman was bitten by a rabid cat Wednesday and six others were exposed to the animal.

According to a Midland Memorial Hospital spokeswoman, Barbara Werner, 29, an Animal Control annex attendant, was treated at the emergency room for puncture wounds and cuts on her left arm after she was attacked by her family's pet male cat about 7 a.m. Wednesday. Ms. Werner was treated with a tetanus shot and antibiotics.

Rice Freeman Zachery, an Animal Control spokeswoman, said the cat had been missing for a few days before Ms. Werner discovered it — slacking jawed and salivating — beside her house about five miles south of Midland Regional Airport in southwest Midland County.

Ms. Freeman Zachery said Ms. Werner intended to bring the sickly cat to the Animal Control shelter to be euthanized when she wrapped it in a towel and picked it up. She said the cat bit Ms. Werner on the arm repeatedly before she shook it loose and it was captured and caged by her husband.

The cat was brought to Animal Control and sent to Austin for rabies tests, which proved positive.

Ms. Freeman Zachery said although Ms. Werner's husband and three daughters were not bitten, they will receive a series of six rabies vaccinations because they were exposed to the rabid cat. The shots include one dose of Human Rabies Immunoglobulin and five injections of Human Diploid Cell Vaccine.

She said Ms. Werner and two other Animal Control employees will likely get fewer injections because they received pre-exposure rabies vaccinations.

Along with Ms. Werner, Animal Control Director Dalton Byerly and Technician Patti Armstrong will receive the rabies vaccinations. Ms.

Freeman Zachery said Byerly was exposed to the cat during visits to Ms. Werner's home. Ms. Armstrong prepared the cat for shipment to Austin for rabies tests.

Ms. Freeman Zachery said the rabies case was Midland County's first in a domestic dog or cat since 1979, when two cats and a dog were found to have rabies. Thirty rabid skunks have been discovered in Midland County this year.

She urged all pet owners to vaccinate their animals against rabies.

State law requires that all pets more than four months old be vaccinated for rabies.

Midland veterinarians are offering rabies vaccinations clinics at five locations between 1 and 3 p.m. today. The locations include Green's Animal Clinic, 3009 N. Big Spring St.; Mesa Verde Animal Clinic, 2215 N. Midland Drive; Tall City Veterinary Hospital, 4606 W. Highway 80; Freddie's Instant Shopping, 1301 E. Front St.; and Midland Freshman School, 100 Gist Ave.

Jet nearly collides with helicopter

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A Western Airlines Boeing 727 landing in Minneapolis had to veer to avoid a law enforcement helicopter guarding President Reagan's motorcade, the airline said.

The Federal Aviation Administration said the two aircraft came within 100 feet of each other and the Western pilot filed a report of a "near mid-air collision."

The FAA said the incident occurred shortly after the president's jet landed at Minneapolis-St. Paul International Airport. Reagan came to Minnesota on Thursday to appear on a panel on educational standards and to attend a fundraiser for Minnesota Sen. Rudy Boschwitz.

Finlay Lewis, a Minneapolis Star and Tribune reporter who was in the president's motorcade, said the jetliner appeared to be about 500 yards ahead of the lead car in the motorcade and not directly over the road when its pilot maneuvered to miss the helicopter.

Lewis said he saw the jetliner swerve, flying closer to the motorcade, while the helicopter climbed and veered in the opposite direction. The jet then appeared to resume its approach to the runway, he said.

"There is a helicopter in your vicinity," James Attwood, an aircraft and radio hobbyist quoted the controller as saying to Western flight 530.

"The Western pilot said,

"Roger, we almost had a collision," Attwood said. "The Western pilots, they were very calm about the whole thing. The air traffic controllers weren't. They didn't expect the helicopter to be there."

The Minnesota State Patrol helicopter had been hovering north of the airport before Air Force One landed, the FAA said in a prepared statement.

"A few minutes later the tower controller spotted a helicopter southwest of the airport but did not immediately identify it as the one which had been hovering north of the airport," the FAA said.

A spokesman at the FAA's regional office in Chicago, Mort Edelman, said he was unsure whether the helicopter took a path not authorized by the control tower.

The FAA said the controller has been relieved of his duties pending a probe.

"The Western flight did nothing wrong," he said. "He was coming in on a final approach."

A Western spokeswoman, Linda Dozier, said the plane "was descending and he veered to the left" when warned of the helicopter. The plane was traveling at 143 mph, she said.

Although the two aircraft passed close to each other, Edelman said they probably were not on a collision course.

Reagan education policies criticized

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic leaders lashed out Friday at President Reagan's education policies, accusing him of "conjuring up figures" to distort his record of slashing aid to schools.

"It embarrasses all of us as Americans to have to point out that the President of the United States is not telling the truth," House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, declared.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., accused Reagan of presiding over

"the most anti-education administration in our modern history."

The National Education Association said, meanwhile, that "the president is using education as a political ploy to shore up his sagging, far-right constituency while raising false hopes with the general public that his education budget-cutting policy will result in better schools."

Sharon Robinson, the NEA's director of instruction and professional development, said that "We think the 'back-to-the-basics movement' should start in the White House. The president needs to learn the difference between addition and subtraction." The NEA is the nation's largest teachers union, with 1.6 million members.

Saying the president "continues to misrepresent the facts and numbers," Kennedy suggested that budget director David Stockman "take Reagan to the White House woodshed and explain the facts of budget life."

The Democrats' ire was sparked by Reagan's claim at an education forum in a Minneapolis suburb on Thursday that "the truth of the matter is we haven't cut any budgets. What we've done is reduce the proposed increase in the budgets. But each budget is still bigger than the last one."

At the White House, deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said Reagan was referring to the overall federal budget, which has kept rising.

Million-dollar winner wins $10,000 more

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — A former truck driver who had just won $1.24 million from a slot machine hit a $10,000 jackpot at the same machine on Friday while posing for publicity pictures — to the dismay of a woman who had been asked to move to another game.

Harrah's Marina casino hotel decided to pay both patrons a $10,000 jackpot.

Antonina Oliveri had been playing the $3 progressive slot machine when casino officials asked her to move so William Robinson could play the machine as photographers took pictures of the new millionaire in action.

It took only three tries before Robinson hit the jackpot again, and Ms. Oliveri stood aghast as she watched the ringing bells and flashing lights.

"It was quite a scene," said Robinson, 59, of Wildwood. "She started screaming that it was hers. I told her I knew how she felt and offered to give her $1,000, but she wanted it all. That's when I started getting hot under the collar."

Casino officials smoothed over the situation by giving Ms. Oliveri, of Hightstown, a check for $10,690.45, Harrah's spokeswoman Alyce Parker said.

"She said she's going to use the money to pay off her mortgage," Ms. Parker said. "We felt we owed it to her because we had asked her to move so we could take publicity photos of Mr. Robinson."

"Later she was all smiles, and she had her arms around me when they took our picture," Robinson said.

Bird may have caused blackout in capital

AUSTIN (AP) — An evening blackout that darkened Texas' capital city and surrounding areas might have been tripped by a bird building a home for its young, an Austin official said Friday.

An estimated half million Central Texans were left without electricity for up to three hours Thursday night. H.L. Peterson, deputy director of the city electric department, said no definite cause had been pinpointed, but there were several possibilities.

"Something initiated the (malfunction), like a snake, or a bird building a nest and getting a wire crossed," he said.

The problem began at one electric substation and relayed throughout the system after safeguards at a substation about four miles away did not work.

"It's possibly like a fuse that was set too high and didn't operate," said Austin Mayor Ron Mullen.

The blackout engulfed all of Travis County and spread as far east as Giddings, 60 miles from here.

Al Erwin, chairman of the Texas Public Utility Commission, said the commission's engineering staff reported the blackout was the result of a "cascading effect" started by the malfunction.

He said the commission wants to find out if the "interconnect" system worked properly in bringing power into Austin when the local system failed.

"We don't know that yet," said Erwin.

Mullen congratulated Austinites for getting through the blackout with no reports of major problems.

"The number of traffic accidents was very low compared to what they could have been. There was a great deal of courtesy. Crime did not rise significantly at all," he said.

Blackouts "can bring out the worst or the best in people, and in our city it brought out the best," said the mayor, who praised local reporters who "helped to keep the city calm."

Peterson said the "complete shutdown" hit at 7:26 p.m., Thursday. Power to some areas was restored by 8:30 p.m., as the city drew electricity from other systems. Most areas had electricity restored by 10:07 p.m.

"We were apprehensive all the time we were bringing the system back that we might have another system shutdown because we did not know at that time where the problem originated," Peterson said.

Mullen said electric department officials were "very professional and organized" as "they went in and put a jigsaw puzzle together to try and bring the system back up."

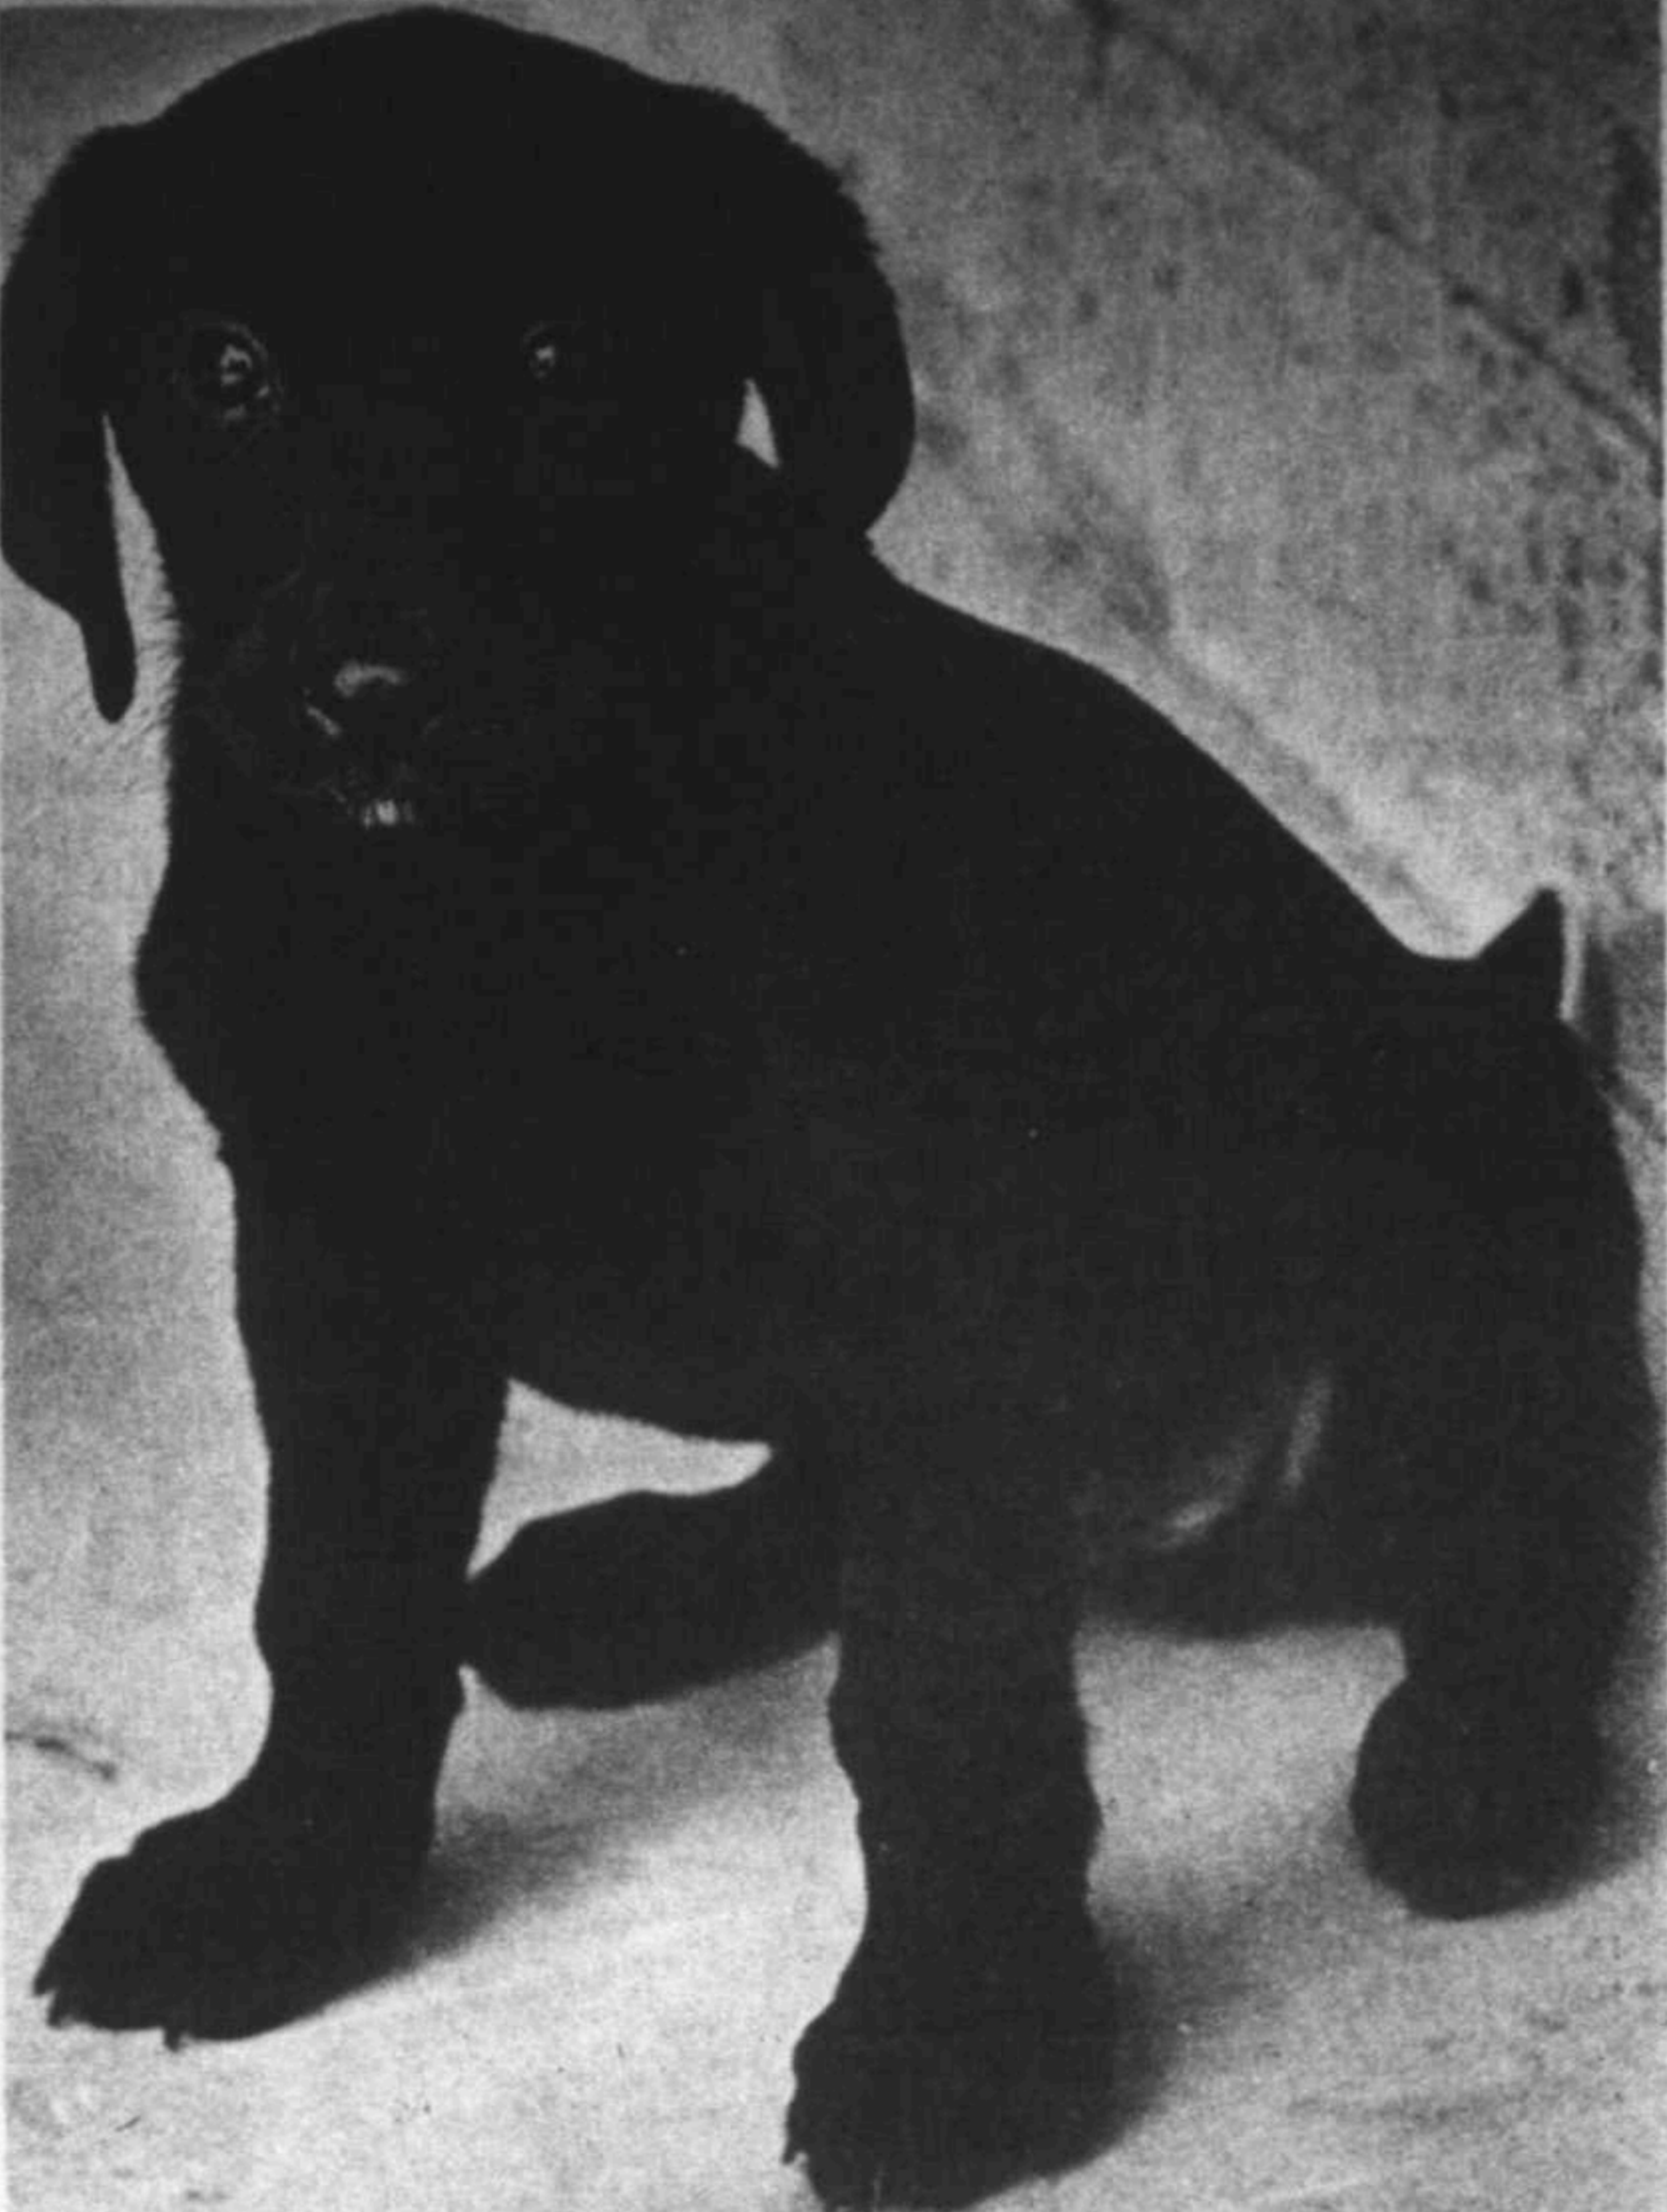

But Peterson said things were not as organized as he would like.

"Our only problem last night was probably too many people in our control room. At times it got too noisy and a little difficult for people to function. We're going to take some action on that," he told reporters.

Peterson said he was at home when the lights went out.

"I saw the lights dim and I knew there had to be a problem. At the time I thought the whole state was shutting down, the way it was reacting," he said.

Mullen added, "All of the important part of the state did shut down."

Democrats lash out at Reagan

Speakes acknowledged that federal outlays for the Education Department fell 2 percent between fiscal 1981 and 1983. But he said the 1983 outlays were 13 percent higher than in fiscal 1980. He did not give the precise figures.

Speakes said the reduction between 1981 and 1983 "stems partly from the president's success in getting interest rates down, because interest reduction has reduced the cost of the student loan program."

Speakes' figures do not square with the Education Department's account of funds appropriated by Congress, though it is not unusual for the administration to trim actual outlays from the figures in appropriation bills.

In any case, it is clear that Reagan wanted to trim the education budget more, but Congress has ignored his call for sharp cuts in many programs.

The president tried unsuccessfully, for example, to slash the Education Department's budget from $14.8 billion in fiscal 1982 to less than $10 billion in fiscal 1983.

Reagan requested $13.2 billion for the education agency for fiscal 1984, but Congress is expected to approve a budget closer to $16 billion.

Reagan also boasted in Minnesota that, "The proposed federal spending for disadvantaged and handicapped children in public schools is $4.1 billion, and that's the highest program."

The Education Department provided a total of $4.3 billion in aid to teach the handicapped and disadvantaged in fiscal 1981, including $200 million in special grants to cities with the largest numbers of disadvantaged children. Those so-called concentration grants no longer exist.

Reagan tried unsuccessfully to make major cuts in the aid programs for the handicapped and disadvantaged. Congress did agree to cut almost $200 million from the Title I remedial program and made major reductions in impact aid, funds for vocational education, research and block grants.

The main reason the department's spending continued to rise was the largely uncontrollable growth of the Guaranteed Student Loan program, whose soaring interest rates pushed up costs rapidly in 1981 and 1982. The Reagan administration and Congress, starting in October 1981, required students from families with incomes above $30,000 to demonstrate need for the loans.

Sally Christiansen, the Education Department's director of budget services, said that total education outlays, including some programs outside the department, such as the Bureau of Indian Affairs' schools, were: $14.3 billion in fiscal 1980, $14.9 billion in fiscal 1981, $14.33 billion in fiscal 1982 and $14.4 billion in fiscal 1983. The president's budget level of funding in the history of the projects them to be $13.5 billion in fiscal 1984, $13.3 billion in fiscal 1985 and $12.9 billion in fiscal 1986.

The administration expects outlays for elementary and secondary education, which fell from $7.2 billion in fiscal 1980 to $6.5 billion currently, to drop to $6 billion by fiscal 1986.

Outlays for post-secondary education rose from $5.7 billion in fiscal 1980 to $6.7 billion currently, but are expected to drop to $6 billion by fiscal 1986. Spending on research, libraries and other areas, which stood at $1.3 billion in fiscal 1980 and is now $1.1 billion, is expected to fall to $800 million by 1986.

Rep. Carl D. Perkins, D-Ky., and Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., joined Wright and Kennedy at a news conference at which the four said Reagan's "sudden and newfound devotion to education is welcome, but with a grain of salt."

They charged Reagan had tried to "knock down...and destroy" the entire network of federal programs to help American schools. And they said, "The president has earned a special place in history for his habit of conjuring up figures or situations to match the point he wants to make."

Reagan will continue his emphasis on education issues in a visit to a public high school in Tennessee next Tuesday and in a speech on Wednesday before a Parents Teachers Association convention in New Mexico. He said Thursday in Hopkins, Minn., that he intends to keep up the pressure to raise standards in schools and change the way teachers are paid.

Walter S. Mondale, the former vice-president and contender for the Democratic presidential nomination, told reporters in Minneapolis on Thursday, "I don't intend to let him whitewash his own record on education."

Mondale said Reagan was trying to depict himself as "a friend of education, but his record cannot be laundered."

Food slicer taken from restaurant

A food slicer worth more than $1,000 taken from a recently opened restaurant was one item missing in four burglaries and two thefts reported to Midland police Friday.

Johnny Okrasinski reported the theft of a food slicer at Yalon's Restaurant, 4519 N. Midland Drive, about 12:45 p.m. Friday. Total value of the appliance was set at $1,795.

The theft of two guns worth $300 was reported by Jules Louis Boone of 2715 Kessler. The guns were taken from the residence.

A wrench and hammer were reported missing in a burglary of Henderson Elementary School, 4800 Graceland. Along with damage to two vents, costs were placed at $220.

Rosia Burns of 2615 Delano reported the burglary of her residence about 1 p.m. A gas stove, valued at $200, was taken between 7:30 p.m. Thursday and the time of the report.

Jorge Luis Carrasco of 1409 S. Terrell reported the burglary of a vehicle parked at his residence about noon Friday. A gun, valued at $267, was reported taken from the trunk sometime between 3:30 a.m. Thursday and 9 a.m. Friday.

Donald Wootten of Route 6, Box 502 reported the burglary of his van at the Motel 6 parking lot. Entry apparently was gained through the window vent on the driver's side of the vehicle. Taken were two suitcases and clothes, a briefcase, camera and revolver. Total value was placed at $590.

White cites employment programs

Gov. Mark White made June 1 a memorable day for almost 2,000 older Texans, including many in Midland and Odessa, by designating it as Texas Farmers Union Green Thumb-Senior Texans Employment Program Day across the state.

Citing the "meaningful employment opportunities" offered by the two senior employment programs since the early 1970s, the governor signed a special proclamation during ceremonies at the Capitol.

Texas Farmers Union has sponsored the Green Thumb program in Texas since 1970. The largest and oldest federally funded senior employment program, Green Thumb has more than 17,000 enrollees nationwide, including 1,059 in 108 Texas counties.

More information on the local program can be obtained by calling Field Supervisor Cam George Monday thru Friday in Odessa at 367-0847.

Dead sheriff's deputy appeals to Reagan

WALNUT RIDGE, Ark. (AP) — A sheriff's deputy whose boss was killed in a shootout with fugitive Gordon Kahl has written to President Reagan asking for help against the tax-protest group Posse Comitatus, which he called "a national threat to law and order."

However, Lawrence County deputy Bob Johnson emphasized that there did not appear to be an imminent threat of a violent confrontation between authorities and members of the group a week after a gunbattle in which Kahl and Sheriff Gene Matthews died.

"Sheriff Matthews died attempting to eradicate what we feel to be a national threat to law and order, the Posse Comitatus," Johnson said in the letter he mailed Thursday to Reagan.

He told Reagan it was believed that tax protesters were filtering into the county to reorganize and retaliate, but, speaking Thursday, he said he did not necessarily mean there would be another violent confrontation.

"We don't have any facts that any of these people left in the county are violent," Johnson said.

In his letter, Johnson asked the president for help buying equipment, including flak jackets, saying he did not think Matthews would have died if he had worn a flak jacket, which he said provided more protection than the bulletproof vest Matthews wore.

Johnson told Reagan the county could not afford the purchases.

On Tuesday, The Kansas City Times reported that up to 10 Posse Comitatus encampments in northern Arkansas were being watched by federal authorities.

FBI spokesman Ray McElhane Jr. said Wednesday the agency was conducting no statewide investigation of Posse Comitatus, and Maj. Quimby Johnson of the state police Criminal Investigation Division in Little Rock said the same of his agency.

Kahl, 63, a retired farmer from Heaton, N.D., had been a fugitive since February after the government charged him with killing two federal marshals in North Dakota.

Youth dies in Russian roulette

MELON (AP) — A 19-year-old man was jailed Friday after he shot and killed a younger friend during a "stupid and senseless" form of Russian roulette in this South Texas community, sheriff's authorities said. Joe Richard Ramirez, 16, was pronounced dead on arrival Thursday at Frio Hospital in nearby Pearsall with a single gunshot wound to the chest. Carlos Marquez was charged with murder and was being held on $50,000 bond set by Frio County Peace Justice Frank Robledo. Ramirez, Marquez and an 18-year-old boy whom authorities refused to identify were talking and drinking beer on Marquez' property before the 4:30 a.m. shooting, Schelcher said.

DPS cuts down marijuana plants

AUSTIN (AP) — The Department of Public Safety has raided 11 counties in East and Southeast Texas this week and cut down nearly 10,000 marijuana plants, including some patches planted on national forest land, an official said Friday. The biggest haul was in Walker County, where they pulled marijuana plants weighing 5,900 pounds. He estimated all the plants would have a street value of $3.8 million when they reached maturity, said DPS spokesman Larry Todd. Todd said no arrests have been made in any of the seizures but that the DPS will continue its raids and investigation.

Revenues should cover spending bill

AUSTIN (AP) — Comptroller Bob Bullock certified Friday that expected revenues the next two years will pay for the $30.9 billion state spending bill passed by the recent Legislature. Bullock said that based on his last 1984-85 revenue estimate the Legislature left only $15.1 million unspent in general revenue. According to the state constitution's pay-as-you-go provision, unless the comptroller certifies that an expenditure approved by the Legislature is covered by expected revenue, the legislative act cannot become effective.

Klan vows to keep returning to San Antonio

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The Ku Klux Klan plans to return to San Antonio "month after month" if police don't follow the security measures hammered out for a planned June 26 march, a Klansman says.

that members of the public could not hear their anti-Communist message.

"We are not coming here to cause trouble," said Klan Grand Dragon Charles Lee. "We just want the constitutional right to express ourselves.

"If it comes off as it should," he said, "I don't suppose we'll have to come back soon."

An agreement reached Thursday allows the Klan members to have their traditional prayer before the march and use bull horns during their speeches, and gives them a full hour on the downtown streets, Lee said.

"We won't be shoved down the streets this time," he said.

Interim Police Chief Frank Hoyack declined to discuss any details of the plans, which cost the city about $40,000 in May, for security reasons.

Houston-area residents voting on spending for rail system

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston-area residents vote today on a hotly-contested plan to spend up to $2.35 billion for construction of a 18.5-mile rail passenger system.

The proposed bond issue is the largest in Harris County history and would finance the most expensive public works project here since construction of the Houston Ship Channel.

Houston now has no rail service and its bus system is limited. The city depends largely on a freeway system that has been overwhelmed by an explosive population growth.

Most major civic groups and many prominent community leaders have chosen sides on the issue.

Supporters of the transit plan, including Houston Mayor Kathy Whitmire and many prominent business and civic groups, say the transit plan would create jobs and improve the city's traffic problems. Officials of the Metropolitan Transit Authority officials claim the rail system would be a part of 3.2 percent of all trips in the Houston area by the year 2000.

"The city has obvious transportation needs," said Roliff Purrington, treasurer of the Committee for Houston Bus and Rail, the focal referendum support group. He said MTA general manager Alan Kiepper "has been highly proven." Kiepper headed the transit program in Atlanta when that city constructed its rail system.

Opponents of the Houston plan say it is too expensive and would not improve sufficiently the city's congested freeway system.

City Councilman John Goodner, who heads the Neighborhood Transportation Forum, an anti-rail-system group, said he opposes the bond issue "because we'd be taking 80 percent of available funds to address the needs of something like 3 percent of this city's residents."

"We're opposed to that kind of financing," Goodner said.

Referendum supporters have raised about $100,000 for television, radio and newspaper advertisements, while opponents have come up with about half that amount.

Reynos convicted of murder

Priest's brother says Ryan 'pardoned'

ODESSA (AP) — James Harry Reynolds was convicted Friday of the murder of a Roman Catholic priest who was beaten to death after an alleged homosexual encounter with his killer.

A jury deliberated for 7½ hours before announcing the verdict about 10:20 p.m.

Reynos was arrested last November when he told New Mexico police he killed the Rev. Patrick Ryan in an Odessa motel room after a homosexual encounter with the priest.

Ryan's brother, Roger of San Jose, Calif., said the verdict gave his brother "some sort of a pardon from those terrible descriptions" of him in the trial.

The brother sat through the trial. "The character assassination of the previous days was very detrimental, the previous days were very difficult," he said after the verdict. "Father Paddy was put on trial before the people this week."

The punishment phase of the trial was set for 10 a.m. today. Ryan's body — nude, bound and beaten — was found in the motel room Dec. 22, 1981. He was identified after his Denver City parishioners became alarmed when he missed Christmas Eve services.

Defense attorneys have contended Reynolds' statements to authorities were false confessions prompted by guilt over the defendant's homosexual contact with the priest.

Reynos' attorneys also introduced evidence that he was in Roswell, N.M. at the time of the slaying.

But prosecutors called Reynolds' alibi "handy," and said Reynolds confessed because the priest's killing began to "weigh on his mind."

Ector County Assistant District Attorney Anthony Foster told jurors that Reynolds killed and robbed Ryan in the motel room.

"Suddenly he can't take it any more. The guilt consumes him. He gets it out and feels cleansed," Foster said of Reynolds' confession.

Foster told the jury that later Reynolds "became scared." "Later he tries to backtrack. He's been backtracking ever since," Foster said.

In testimony Thursday, psychologist Dr. Samuel Roll told the court that Reynolds was not likely to have killed the priest.

"It is extremely unlikely Mr. Reynolds could have committed a crime of this nature," said Roll. "It is my opinion that the confession he gave police concerning his killing Father Ryan is a false confession. That is my opinion based on a high degree of scientific certainty."

He said after extensive testing in May, he found Reynolds had had homosexual tendencies from a very early age. Reynolds had a very difficult time accepting his sexuality, which caused "him a great deal of guilt and a great deal of shame," Roll said.

Reynos testified that he was drunk and drugged and does not remember calling Albuquerque police about the slaying.

'Walking time bomb' sentenced

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — A 30-year-old man convicted in the only slaying in Disneyland's history was sentenced to 16 years in prison by a judge who called him "a walking time bomb."
Orange County Superior Court Judge Everett Dickey said Thursday he opted for a prison sentence rather than probation in the second-degree murder case because of James O'Driscoll's attitude and because the stabbing occurred in a public place in a dispute between strangers.
O'Driscoll was convicted in a retrial May 5 of murdering Mel Christian Yorba, 18, of Riverside in 1981. O'Driscoll contended that Yorba had accosted his girlfriend, Julie Holderer, park and was accidentally impaled on O'Driscoll's knife.

Men allegedly fenced stolen goods

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Two businessmen were charged with receiving stolen goods and criminal conspiracy after police confiscated nearly $200,000 worth of stolen merchandise, police said.
Ernest Hoffmaster, 46, of Bellevue, and David McBride, 42, of Pittsburgh's Uptown section, were arraigned Thursday on charges of receiving $344 worth of stolen merchandise. Police said other counts of receiving stolen property will be filed later.
Detective Steve Tercsak alleged the two fenced goods through their businesses for about 20 people who shoplifted to support drug habits.

Man to be tried for killing deputy

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — A 38-year-old man has been returned to Orlando for trial on charges of wounding two FBI agents and participating in a 1977 drugstore robbery which resulted in the fatal shooting of a reserve deputy.
Federal marshals on Thursday brought Clarence Eugene Robinson, 38, to Orlando from Miami, where he surrendered to the FBI on Tuesday.
Robinson became the target of an intensive manhunt following the shooting last week in front of a restaurant in Orange City. One of the agents said he recognized Robinson, and they were trying to question him when he opened fire.

Marksmen kill sleeping bear

PASO ROBLES, Calif. (AP) — A brown bear that lumbered into town and then perched in a tree for a nap was killed after an attempt to subdue and capture the beast failed.
The 6- or 7-year-old brown bear, weighing less than 200 pounds, spent three hours sleeping in the oak tree Wednesday while police, fire and Fish and Game Department officials worked out a plan to tranquilize the animal with a dart gun.

Demonstrators call for efforts to curb shootings

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — About 50 demonstrators on the next-to-last leg of a 300-mile march and motorcade paraded past the Montgomery police station Friday, calling for new efforts to curb the shooting of blacks by police.
Meanwhile, five of the protesters also headed to a prayer vigil at the Montgomery County Courthouse, where a special grand jury is investigating several violent encounters between Montgomery police and blacks, including one that resulted in the death of a black man.

The Rev. Joseph Lowery, president of the Atlanta-based Southern Christian Leadership Conference, led the march and five-minute prayer session, calling for peace between blacks and police in Alabama.
"We have always been a people of hope," Lowery said. "It is our hope the country will one day live up to its commitments."
The march turnout Friday, like that at many stops along the week-long route from Eufaula to Montgomery, was far below the 200 predicted by march organizers.
They have predicted about 10,000 will participate today in the final leg, which will retrace the route taken through the capital at the close of the 1965 Selma-to-Montgomery voting rights march.

Lowery, who earlier criticized a Henry County grand jury that exonerated a white policeman in the shooting deaths of two blacks, said he has hope for the Montgomery panel.
"People are letting us know they are so glad we touched their lives," Lowery said.

The minister's comments were not so calm Thursday night when 50 blacks — mostly young — gradually drifted out of a rally in Tuskegee, attended by about 200 people. Lowery said he was "sick and tired of fighting for folks who don't want to be free."
"I'd just as soon be in Atlanta playing golf, or in Birmingham with my grandchildren. But as long as brothers and sisters are being shot down in the streets of our cities, somebody has to raise a voice."
Lowery, dressed in a clerical collar and blue jeans, stood at the front Friday as the demonstrators paraded about 1 1/2 miles from Interstate 85 to a black church across the street from the Montgomery police station.
Montgomery police have been involved in several violent incidents with blacks in recent months. In one case, a white officer shot an unarmed black man he mistook for a jail escapee. In another, a black policewoman shot and killed an unarmed black man who, police said, was intoxicated and attacked the officer.

Driver of missile truck goes wrong way on highway

GURLEY, Ala. (AP) — Officers said they halted a misguided missile truck Friday.

A truck transporting an unarmed Air Force guided missile was stopped for moving on the wrong side of an interstate highway, and the driver was jailed for drunken driving and other traffic violations, police said.

The truck, carrying a Hellfire missile, was on the wrong side of U.S. 72 after the driver apparently missed a turn at Redstone Arsenal at Huntsville, 10 miles to the west in northern Alabama, Gurley Police Chief Steve Adams said.

Officials said there was virtually no danger of an explosion if the truck had been involved in an accident.

John H. Runyon Jr., 35, State Line, Pa., was charged with driving under the influence of alcohol, reckless driving and driving on the wrong side of the road, Adams said.

The chief said tests showed Runyon was highly intoxicated and "we took him on up and locked him up. He couldn't even stay awake."

Runyon was being held in the Madison County jail at Huntsville in lieu of $500 bond.

The six-wheel truck was carrying the 88-pound Hellfire missile from Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., to Redstone for Rockwell International, prime contractor for the helicopter-based weapon.

An information officer at Redstone, Dave Harris, said the Hellfire was in a metal shipping container.

"I won't say it would be impossible, but there is no way that missile could have gone off as the result of an accident," he said. "It had no warhead and there is no way it could have been ignited."

Temple-EastTex: Where deer and antelope play

SCRAPPIN' VALLEY (AP) — Deer and antelope roam the Temple-EastTex exotic game preserve nestled in an 11,000-acre wildlife research area on Texas 87, 14 miles north of Burkeville.

Exotic game such as Asian and European deer and American elk were introduced into the area about 15 years ago, and through wildlife management, they have adapted to the East Texas terrain.

The timber and wildlife research area, called the Scrappin' Valley Conference Center, also features an impressive lodge used by guests and members of the staff of all the divisions of Time Inc., the parent company of Temple-EastTex.

Wild turkeys mix with exotic and domestic deer and wild horses and burros on some of the most beautiful land in deep East Texas.

Dallas Chandler, an East Texas native, has lived in a house on the grounds and acted as caretaker for 11 years.

Chandler knows the quirks of all the animals, and he has developed a respect for them.

The actual management of the wildlife is done by Darryl Stanley, manager of all wildlife owned by Temple-EastTex.

Stanley says whitetail are the most prevalent deer at Scrappin' Valley. The last survey showed a population of about 40 whitetails, or one deer to every 25 acres.

A trek into the woods is needed to glimpse the elusive American elk. The elk were brought in from the Wyoming mountains about 12 years ago and are thriving now in the river bottoms.

The European axis deer are popular with guests and are daring enough to stand and watch as people approach for a look. The exotic axis is a reddish color with white spots on the rump.

The fallow deer, an Asian breed, also thrive with the axis deer.

The sika deer is imported from Japan and Formosa. Smaller than the whitetail, they are black or silver-gray. Although the sika co-exist with other deer, Stanley says, they have not produced well and only number about four or five.

The most elusive game is the East Indian nilgai, an exotic antelope known for its speed and antlers.

"In the four years I've been here, I've seen the five nilgai about four times. They look like a cross between a horse, a mule and deer," Stanley says.

The animals eat from automated feeders controlled by timers. Located in the woods, the feeders drop from perch in a tree and release the feed on schedule.

Several years ago Temple-EastTex joined a program to adopt wild horses off federal land in Wyoming.

Stanley says the government was giving the horses away because they were overgrazing federal lands. Later, burros were adopted through a similar program to bring them from the Grand Canyon area, where they were overpopulating.

Now, about 35 horses and six burros graze in the southern area of the acreage.

Temple-EastTex works with the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department in a program to adapt an Eastern strain of the wild turkey into East Texas, an experiment Stanley says has been effective.

"What we're trying to do with this wildlife program is to show what can be accomplished if it is managed," he says. "We want to stress that timber production and harvesting can be compatible with wildlife."

Only once has Temple-EastTex opened the woods to hunters. That was when the whitetail deer began overpopulating and a few were killed to control the herd. There is no hunting of exotic game.

Several colleges use the preserve for graduate studies, and Stephen F. Austin University students work with Temple-EastTex officials in a special deer management program.

The lodge itself is flanked on one side by a five-acre lake. The lake is stocked with fish and in season, with mallard ducks for shooting.

The lodge has 12 bedrooms and a sauna, den and recreation room. Outside, three cottages have two bedrooms each. Guests can enjoy an outdoor swimming pool, tennis court, skeet shooting and shuffle board.

Chandler says the lodge will be busy from now until July, when activity begins to slack off for the rest of the summer.

Queen's yacht Britannia is floating palace

Hearst Feature Service

Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth's yacht Britannia is the largest and most luxurious yacht in the world. At 412 feet, it's larger than a football field but smaller than an aircraft carrier. But the Britannia is vastly more comfortable than a carrier. It is literally a floating palace and much, much more.

As can be expected, the Britannia is extremely seaworthy, with special touches for the owner, reports Motor Boating and Sailing in its June issue. The yacht has single-fin stabilizers that reduce the roll by as much as 70 percent. The queen, by some accounts, "gets queasy" in rough waters just like the rest of us.

A picked crew of 227 persons including 21 officers and a 26-member Royal Marine band, attend to operations and some ceremony. Orders are communicated by hand signals or in writing.

On longer cruises, the queen brings along her own entourage of up to 40 Buckingham Palace household members. They include the Master of the Household, the Mistress of the Robes, Ladies-in-Waiting, Ladies of the Bedchamber, a press secretary, a private secretary and assorted yeomen, pages, footmen, valets, maids, chefs, stewards, a hairdresser and the family doctor.

The queen and Prince Philip, of course, have private quarters linked by intercoms and scramblers. There are luxurious sitting rooms and the dining room seats 56. Should someone aboard perform a heroic deed, there is a knightly stool so that the hero can be dubbed a knight.

The Britannia served as the official love nest for three royal honeymoons: Princesses Margaret and Anne and Prince Charles. According to the magazine, Princess Anne and Captain Mark Phillips are said to have had two single beds lashed together while Prince Charles and Princess Diana had a queen-sized bed installed.

The royal yacht sports a Rolls Royce, a Land Rover and her own mini-flotilla of boats bigger than many yachts. Escorting the Britannia on her round-the-world jaunts is her own personal fuel tanker/supply ship, the H.M.S. Blue Rover.

Lack of candy-eaters closes factory

Hard candy has fallen on hard times. Sales have slumped, hundreds of candy makers have been laid off, and now Life Savers Inc. plans to close its oldest plant and allow the gargantuan rolls of mock candy that stand outside to be turned into park decorations.

To the government officials who monitor lollipops, lemon drops, sourballs and suckers, it's all a matter of demographics.

America's median age rose from 28 to 30 between 1970 and 1980, meaning half the population is now 30 or older. Neil Kenney, an analyst for the Commerce Department in Washington, said the changing population mix and the growing sophistication of adults have had an effect on candy sales.

"As the population matures, its taste preferences mature," Kenney said.

Americans are eating less candy than they were a decade ago. At the same time, hard candy's share of the market is shrinking while candy containing chocolate is increasing its market share, he said.

"Candy containing chocolate generally is a more complex taste sensation," Kenney said Wednesday in a telephone interview, "and, one might argue, a sophisticated combination of tastes and flavors."

Life Savers nevertheless have their adult admirers, such as Maryanne Morgan, who often eats them as she commutes to her job at a Manhattan credit union from New York's Dutchess County. She likes them because they're unobtrusive on the train.

"You just leave it in your mouth and it disappears," Ms. Morgan said. "I like (chocolate) but it doesn't like me," she said. "It makes me fat."

At a press conference Tuesday in Port Chester, N.Y., Peter Rogers, president of Life Savers Inc., announced that the company will close its candy plant there in April after 64 years of operation. The shutdown will put 145 people out of work. In 1981, 300 employees were laid off because of slumping sales.

"Sugar-rolled candy consumption is down 35 percent in the past six years," Rogers said. After April, all Life Savers candies will be produced at the company's plant in Holland, Mich., near Grand Rapids.

The plant in Port Chester is the oldest belonging to the company, which has been owned by Nabisco Inc. for a year and a half. It is located within sight of the railroad tracks that carry commuters into New York City from Connecticut's Fairfield County, and the 10-foot-long rolls of Life Savers that decorate the building grounds have reminded more than a few passing commuters to pop candy into their mouths.

The building has been sold and is to be developed into office space.

ACLU wants prayer barred from graduations

LIVERMORE, Calif. (AP) — With graduation just a day away, a judge has agreed to hear arguments from the American Civil Liberties Union to bar prayer invocations from commencements at two public high schools.

Judge Raymond Marsh was to hear arguments in Alameda County Superior Court today from the ACLU on behalf of a group of seniors at Granada and Livermore high schools seeking an injunction against the invocations.

"This particular issue is a very important case because there hasn't been a definitive ruling on prayer at graduation ceremonies," said Elaine Elinson, spokeswoman for the ACLU in San Francisco. The group contends the invocations violate the constitutional separation of church and state.

The students first took their objection to the Granada student graduation commission, a group of pupils who planned that school's ceremonies. After the group voted 35-11 to retain the invocation, the protesters turned to the school administration and the ACLU.

The Livermore school board, after two hours of debate, voted 3-2 Tuesday to allow the invocation at both Granada and Livermore high schools.

The district's legal counsel determined that the invocation, which is to be delivered by students, would be legal on the premise that it was going to be brief, ceremonial in nature and after school hours, schools spokeswoman Kay Honodel said.

Female legislator comes under fire from women

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Faith Whittlesey came to the White House this spring with impressive credentials and there were high hopes that she could cement relations with business and improve them with women's groups and minorities.

But the high-voltage conservative Pennsylvania legislator who was brought home from Switzerland, where she had been ambassador, to become President Reagan's liaison with special groups is already coming under fire from Republican as well as Democratic women.

Women's groups no longer try to meet with Whittlesey. They are switching their focus to presidential assistant Michael Deaver, who has taken over a coordinating council on women which had been Whittlesey's responsibility but which she never convened.

Business groups, however, have no complaints. She has met with them frequently, spoken at their breakfasts and luncheons and received them at the White House.

Chief executives at the Business Council's semi-annual meeting last month said Whittlesey is not nearly as effective at keeping in touch with them as President Carter's last liaison chief, Anne Wexler, but they gave her high marks so far for effort and energy.

"At least we know she doesn't take us for granted," said one corporate executive.

Jeffrey H. Joseph, vice president of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, was cautiously optimistic. He said that Whittlesey's predecessor, Elizabeth Dole (now Secretary of Transportation), "had been around and had strong Washington connections. (Whittlesey) comes to town and needs to learn her way around. She has more of a startup curve but I think in the long run hers will be a higher curve."

"She comes from grass roots politics, she's interested in reaching out and in building stronger bridges to those who don't think they've had the best deal (under Reagan)," Joseph said.

That's an understatement if it applies to women's groups or to the Republican women in Congress, for few of them have met with Whittlesey, despite many attempts.

They were astounded when Whittlesey echoed Reagan's view that the gender gap would vanish with economic recovery and indicated that women had no special needs that a better economy would not cure. She and Reagan are virtually the only ones left at the White House, or in GOP circles nationally, who believe that.

Rep. Olympia Snowe, R-Maine, says that because Reagan opposes the Equal Rights Amendment and a pro-choice position on abortion, "two major issues that are of interest predominantly to women—" I think you have to go the extra mile" to take other steps to attract that bloc.

She says Whittlesey hasn't done that—and, because she is in charge of women's issues, this has left a vacuum that Snowe says has done Reagan a disservice. Virtually no action has been taken on the array of economic and legal issues she and other GOP congresswomen recommended to him two months ago.

Whittlesey spoke up in a White House staff meeting against one of those recommendations, legislation to require unisex insurance and pension rates and benefits. Much to the shock of Reagan communications advisor David Gergen and others, Whittlesey argued against any action, even on the pension equity proposal which Reagan had promised to support in his State of the Union address in January. She said women might be hurt more than helped.

Last Friday, as the Senate Commerce Committee began final action on the proposed unisex pension and insurance bill, the White House still had not taken a stand. One aide who had participated in the many staff meetings on the issue said some recommendation might be forthcoming on pension equity—although possibly not before Congress moved ahead first. Reagan is seen as likely to oppose action on the insurance equity proposal, citing Whittlesey's premise that women might wind up paying more.

When Reagan's political advisor Edward J. Rollins warned last week that the "gender gap" threatened the president's re-election chances, his message seemed aimed as much at Whittlesey as at his immediate Republican audience in Indianapolis.

Rollins, in his speech to midwestern Republican women, noted that Democrats hold a 31 percentage-point edge in support from single women. With women in the job market now outnumbering their at-home counterparts by a 3-1 margin, and with recent polls saying only 30 percent of women would vote for Reagan, Rollins said the combination of the gender gap and the demographics could "swamp Republicans" in 1984.

Another White House aide said Whittlesey came with highly rated credentials as a Pennsylvania state legislator and did a very good job in Switzerland as a tireless, problem-solving ambassador.

She's now looked upon with alarm, the aide said, as a potential loose cannon similar to Interior Secretary James Watt, who has ardent admirers but is a political liability with the general public.

Foremost among her goals is making sure that Reagan keeps the blue collar constituency, including the 40 percent of union members who voted for him in 1980 despite formal endorsements of their unions for Carter.

'U.S. not spending enough money to study aircraft fires'

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — The United States "hasn't made the commitment" to research that could save lives in aircraft fires such as the one that killed 23 people on an Air Canada jet, an investigator says.

"We are operating on a shoestring," said K.T. Yang, a mechanical engineer at the University of Notre Dame, a member of a research team exploring the dynamics of fire, smoke and heat in aircraft cabins for the Federal Aviation Administration.

The June 2 disaster that killed 23 people aboard an Air Canada DC-9 at Cincinnati's airport drove home how little scientists know about fire in the skies, Yang said.

"Really, the pathetic thing is that our country just hasn't made the commitment," Yang said Thursday.

"With more fire research 10 to 15 years ago, we might have more answers now," he said. "We are probably at the bottom of the totem pole in terms of fire research."

Yang said Japan's Fire Research Institute spends twice as much as the $4 million to $5 million spent annually by the National Bureau of Standards' Center for Fire Research.

The Notre Dame fire research group, which is nearly three years old, is composed of Yang, John R. Lloyd and A.M. Kanury of the aerospace and mechanical engineering department. The group has developed computer simulations that trace the pattern of fire and smoke in an airplane cabin.

Known as UNSAFE — University of Notre Dame Smoke and Fire in Enclosures — the program applies mathematics and physics to determine how smoke and toxic gases spread in airplane cabins.

The program is funded by a grant from the FAA and administered by the National Bureau of Standards.

Using three scenarios provided by the FAA, the UNSAFE researchers try to determine mathematically what will happen if fire breaks out in a plane.

Their calculations are fed into a computer to plot how smoke and flames move through a cabin of a wide-bodied jet. The result predicts how severe a fire would be and how much smoke it would generate based on where it starts on the plane.

Limitations to be put on money

WASHINGTON (AP) — Conceding their effort is a long shot, five House members say it's time to put legal limits on the amount of money — and influence — special interest groups can pour into election campaigns.

Members of Congress "wind up spending as much time seeking out people and groups who have money, as they do finding groups and people who have good ideas," said Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., a sponsor of the Clean Campaign Act of 1983.

"It is fast placing Congress on the auction block and turning elections into auctions," he said. "I detest what money and the candidates' need for money is doing to the political system. It is a national obscenity."

"I'm not saying any member of Congress knowingly sells his or her vote," said Rep. Dan Glickman, D-Kan. "But if you give a dog a bone, he'll be loyal forever. If you give a candidate money, he probably won't fetch your slippers, but he'll sure as heck be around to greet you."

A dozen members of Congress made similar comments to the House Administration Committee's elections task force Thursday as it began examining proposals for curbing the growing power of political action committees and interest groups.

The bill backed by Obey, Glickman, and Reps. Jim Leach, R-Iowa; Morris Udall, D-Ariz.; and Matthew Rinaldo, R-N.J., would limit the amount House candidates can take from political action committees to $90,000.

It also would set up a partial system of public financing of House elections.

Most waste dumps won't pass demands

WASHINGTON (AP) — A government survey of 171 hazardous waste dumps required to check nearby groundwater for possible contamination has determined that 64 percent don't meet testing or record keeping standards.

The Internal Environmental Protection Agency report released Thursday by a House panel stated that 109 sites have not met government standards for monitoring groundwater.

According to the EPA report, record keeping problems or deficient sampling methods were found at 45 sites. The operators of 64 wells had either failed to drill enough test wells or drilled them at incorrect locations or depths.

The survey was made public by a House Government Operations subcommittee chaired by Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla., who released another survey estimating that 81 percent of hazardous waste sites in Ohio weren't complying with the monitoring regulations.

Synar said Wisconsin officials believed that none of the dumps in that state were meeting the federal requirements.

Once guest star, now regular star

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When "Three's Company" was just a spring tryout series in 1977, Richard Kline made a guest appearance as John Ritter's swinging bachelor friend, Larry.

ABC renewed the show for the following season and Kline hoped he might make another appearance. He was called back for two more shows.

"Larry was never meant to be anything regular," he said. "But I asked my agent to call the producers and see if they wanted to make something more of this character. The next day he called me and said I had a four-year contract."

Kline has been a regular on the comedy since then.

"Larry is often a catalyst for the plot," he said. "He gets John Ritter's character into compromising situations. Fortunately, through his cunning, he finds a way to get him out. My opinion is that Larry's there to inject 10 or 15 minutes of high energy into the show."

"Occasionally, maybe three times a year, a show revolves around me. I'm getting married, I'm not getting married. One show I was going to be a Las Vegas-type singer in a restaurant."

Kline explained, "He's John Ritter's alter ego. If John's the All-American boy with a gleam in his eye, Larry's that gleam. He says the unpeakable. If John asks, 'Should I do it, Larry?' I tell him to go for it — 'All you've got to lose is your reputation.'"

As any television viewer knows, "Three's Company" is a show that has gone further on sexual innuendo than Larry could ever hope to go. The concept is that Ritter shares an apartment with two women, played by Joyce DeWitt and Priscilla Barnes. Virtually every plot arises from that complication. Larry lives in the same apartment building.

Originally Suzanne Somers shared the apartment with Ritter and Miss DeWitt, but she left the show in 1981 after a salary dispute. Norman Fell and Audra Lindley were the original owners of the building, but they departed in 1979 for a spinoff series called "The Ropers." Their place was taken by Don Knotts.

"Three's Company" is based on the British series "Man About the House." The British version has finally reached our shores and is being shown in New York. It is expected to be available later in other parts of the country.

"The industry dumps on 'Three's Company,'" Kline said. "So how do you explain the success? I don't know, unless it's because people see it as a diversion."

"I think it's the best farce since 'I Love Lucy.' All we're trying to do is divert and entertain. It's physical comedy — falling over sofas. We don't attempt to deal with social issues or intellectual comedy. I hope I can say this without sounding too self-serving, but John Ritter is so underrated. What he does is brilliant. I think it's very difficult to do the physical comedy he does and do it well."

"Secretly, in the back of my mind, I'd have to say, yes, I wish we were appreciated on a higher level, like a 'Mary Tyler Moore Show,' but I have no regrets about doing our show."

Kline, a bachelor for many years, was married last November. "I met my wife when she sold me a house," he said. "Sandy used to be with an investment company that bought houses, fixed them up and sold them."

He laughed and said his dowry was a golden retriever named Chami. "She came with the new wife," he said. "I'd always had cats before, but this dog took to me and I took to her. We jog together."

ACLU questions security wiretaps

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Civil Liberties Union says it is "deeply concerned" that rights of U.S. residents may be violated during government bugging in national security cases.

Staff counsel Mark H. Lynch expressed the ACLU's view Wednesday in the first public hearing to scrutinize the 1978 Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act.

The law permits eavesdropping against foreign governments and their agents within the United States, but only after a special court approves a warrant when Americans are likely to be overheard.

Lynch told a House Judiciary subcommittee "we simply do not know" whether the bugging violates the rights of Americans "because of the extraordinary secrecy which cloaks the operations."

He added, "Because of the record of abuse of civil liberties under the guise of national security electronic surveillance and because of the potential for repetition of these abuses, the ACLU is deeply concerned over...whether (the act) is adequately protecting civil liberties."

The testimony contrasted with the comment of Justice Department lawyer Mary C. Lawton that the law is working "extraordinarily well." She is the agency's counsel for intelligence policy.

The law was passed because of abuses during the Watergate era, when U.S. citizens active in the anti-Vietnam War and civil rights movements were bugged by the executive branch in the name of national security.

To protect constitutional rights, the act took the final decision for approving national security surveillance out of the hands of the executive branch.

Instead, a seven-member court of U.S. district judges was established to secretly review applications for surveillance warrants.

Ms. Lawton said the court has approved 1,422 applications since the act took effect, but she declined a direct response when Rep. Robert W. Kastenmeier, D-Wis., asked:

"How many of these applications involve U.S. persons?"

"Not in open session, Mr. Chairman," Ms. Lawton replied. "The figures are here, of course, the Congress has them, but not in open session."

Chinese officers must go to school

PEKING (AP) — China's army has stopped its long-established practice of promoting officers from the ranks, and now requires that they be trained in military academies, the armed forces chief of staff, Yang Dezhi, said Friday.

In an interview with the newspaper China Daily, Yang said soldiers now receive mainly tactical and technical training while officers are expected to learn how to organize and direct combined operations in modern warfare.

He described the 4.2 million-member army as "much younger, stronger and more effective than before."

France to salvage Napoleon fleet

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — The Egyptian Antiquities' Department on Friday approved a request by the French government to salvage wrecks from the fleet that brought Napoleon and his army to Egypt in 1798, the newspaper Al-Akhabar reported.

According to the report, the Egyptians have claimed L'Orient, while the rest of the vessels will be divided equally between France and Egypt.

The French fleet was sunk by the British under Admiral Nelson in Abukir Bay off Alexandria. The engagement became known as the Battle of the Nile although it was not fought in the famous river.

Explosive allegedly causes crash

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — A special army investigator has evidence that an explosive caused the crash of a helicopter in northeastern Thailand that killed 11 senior civil servants and military officers, Radio Thailand said Friday.

The radio quoted Maj Gen. Sunthon Khongsompong, commander of the army aviation center and chairman of the investigation team, as saying that "only the force of a blast from explosive materials could have ripped both passenger and pilot doors from the body of the helicopter."

The Bell helicopter exploded Wednesday after taking off from an army base in Korat, 150 miles northeast of Bangkok.

Poland's union movement rebuilds

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The Federation of Metallurgical Unions, the first labor group linking local chapters since Solidarity was outlawed last October, will hold its first national congress in Katowice Saturday, the official PAP news agency reported.

It said the federation, which represents workers in steel mills in Katowice and other cities "opens another stage" in the rebuilding of a union movement in the wake of martial law, which was imposed Dec. 13, 1981 and lifted a year later.

The authorities have recently altered sections of last October's labor law that decreed no such nationwide federations could even begin forming until next year. The action apparently was an effort to stimulate workers to join new unions formed after Solidarity was in the wake of Solidarity.

Students boycott in response to three hangings

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Students at a black university boycotted classes Friday and a top opponent of apartheid warned of increased racial violence after South Africa hanged three black guerrillas.

Police arrested three students during a demonstration at Fort Hare University in the tribal homeland of Ciskei as some classes were boycotted for a second day.

Police sources said about 100 students were involved in the boycott at Fort Hare, which is currently holding examinations. About 900 other students at the university were not taking part in the boycott.

Police arrested 24 students at another black school in Zululand Thursday when several hundred militants attacked police cars and other vehicles to protest the hangings.

Bishop Desmond Tutu, the world's best-known South African anti-apartheid activist, told a prayer service after the executions Thursday that the hangings invite worse guerrilla strikes.

"Those who have opted for armed struggle, whom many regard as freedom fighters, and those who are prepared to make the supreme sacrifice, will say, 'We must perpetrate the worst possible damage because we are going to hang in any case.'"

The three belonged to the banned African National Congress and it vowed Thursday to avenge the executions.

Despite international appeals for mercy, South Africa hanged Simon Mogerane, 23, Jerry Mosololi, 25, and Marcus Motaung, 27, shortly after dawn Thursday inside police-ringed Pretoria Central Prison.

The three lived in black townships until after the bloody Soweto riots of 1976 when according to government testimony they joined thousands of other young blacks who traveled to Communist-bloc countries for sabotage training.

The three were convicted of murder and high treason after admitting to attacks on police stations and economic facilities between 1979 and 1981.

Four black policemen died in the attacks and a number of people were wounded.

Reagan: Criticism of arms reduction offer 'unhelpful'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan feels that Soviet criticism of his revised strategic arms reduction offer is "unhelpful," White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Friday.

The statement followed criticism by the official Soviet news agency Tass that Reagan's proposal was aimed at gaining military superiority over the Kremlin and "pressing the Soviet Union into unilateral disarmament."

And later, in another commentary, Tass said the U.S. proposal was "patently unacceptable," and was "aimed at disrupting the strategic parity which has taken shape in recent years in order to clear the way for the United States to gain military superiority."

The article said the new proposals toughened the U.S. stance at the Geneva talks on limiting strategic arms and would force the Soviet Union into "radically restructuring" its strategic arsenal.

Speakes said Reagan's new offer, unveiled Wednesday, was "an important new proposal to move the strategic negotiations forward, taking into account basic Soviet concerns."

"Because we are serious about making progress in START (strategic arms reduction talks), we do not intend to negotiate these matters through an exchange of press headlines and instant commentary such as yesterday's unhelpful Tass article," Speakes said.

B.B. King chases away inmates' blues with concert

PARCHMAN, Miss. (AP) — Bluesman B.B. King, who was born just 20 miles east of the Mississippi State Penitentiary, helped hundreds of inmates chase the blues with a concert under the blistering Delta sun.

"I know you love me," King said, waving to a crowd of inmates who held aloft a bed sheet with a welcome printed in colored ink. "You've more than paid me. I love you too."

His two-hour concert Thursday in the prison rodeo arena was peppered with remarks encouraging the inmates to sing or "shake something."

The 57-year-old King was born on a plantation at Itta Bena and earned an international reputation after playing for years in roadhouses and juke joints across the South. He played here four years ago when he first started his "homecoming" visits to Sunflower County.

Corrections Commissioner Morris Thigpen had encouraged inmates to show their appreciation to King.

"He's here at no cost to the state," Thigpen told them. "The only payment he is getting is your applause."

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A 24-year-old man who last year became the first to fly a helicopter around the world has joined the ranks of Air Force officers.

H. Ross Perot Jr., the son of Dallas millionaire H. Ross Perot, graduated from the Air Force's Officer Training School here Thursday.

"I guess it was the way I was raised," the new second lieutenant said. "I had always planned to serve my country and then I decided I'd better do it now."

He will be assigned to Vance Air Force Base in Oklahoma to learn how to fly an F-4 jet fighter before serving as a reservist at Fort Worth's Carswell Air Force Base.

Perot was elected by his classmates to receive the school's Kiefer Award for "esprit de corps, patriotism and loyalty."

"Frankly, I had nothing to do with Ross's decision to join the Air Force Reserves, but I am proud of him for making it," said the elder Perot, who operates Dallas-based Electronic Data Systems Corp.

In 1979, Perot successfully dispatched a group of civilian commandos into Iran to rescue two of his EDS employees.

The younger Perot and co-pilot Jay Coburn flew a helicopter dubbed "Spirit of Texas" around the world. They stopped in 26 nations during the 26,000-mile trip, which ended in September.

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Former Gov. Hugh Carey has settled an old debt with taxpayers over his personal use of state aircraft while in office.

The state Department of Environmental Conservation received a check this week for $2,842 from the former governor, department spokesman John Moore said Friday.

Carey was billed by the department, which operates the state's four airplanes and three helicopters, for vacation trips he took last summer to Martha's Vineyard, off Cape Cod. The department charged Carey for 4.9 hours of flight time at a rate of $580 an hour to cover fuel, insurance, hangar rental and maintenance.

Ono hurt by thefts, friend says

NEW YORK (AP) — Yoko Ono, the widow of former Beatle John Lennon, has been hurt "enormously" by the theft of love letters, papers and stereo and video equipment, a friend said Friday.

A diary that Lennon wrote in his last year and unpublished music by the late rock star were among the material stolen in the year after Lennon was gunned down, said Eliot Mintz.

Ed Garvey steps down

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Ed Garvey, who led the National Football League Players Association in a 57-day strike last season, said Friday he was stepping down as the union's executive director to become Wisconsin's deputy attorney general.

Texas' Jeff Hearn can't get back to first base in time as Michigan first baseman Ken Hayward takes the throw from catcher Rich Bair during College World Series play Friday night.

Grand slam saves Texas

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Mike Brumley belted a bases-loaded home run and Mike Capel tossed a four-hitter to lead No. 1-ranked Texas to a 4-2 College World Series baseball victory over Michigan here Friday night.

Bryan Burrows and a single to right by Bill Bates in the bottom of the fifth. The blast over the right field fence erased a 2-0 lead Michigan grabbed in the top of the inning.

Series hopes alive with a 6-0 victory. Alabama, 46-10, was beaten by Texas Thursday night. Arizona State is now eliminated from the double-elimination tournament after losing its first game to the Tide in 11 innings, 6-5.

Wright is right for Cubs' staff

BY TED BATTLES Sports Editor
If it isn't rehabilitation month in Midland, it should be. First, Mel Hall came to Midland for five days of recuperation and returned to Chicago to make the Cubs a pennant threat, all of a sudden.

in disgust, but Wright "is a battler. He won't give up and now it's beginning to pay off," said Harmon. "He was struggling mechanically the first four innings," said pitching coach Glenn Gregson. That's when he gave up four of the five runs he allowed.

THE WIN not only snapped a three-game losing streak, but knocked the Golden Gators out of first place in the Texas League West. Tom Lombarski hit a three-run homer in the six-run third that provided Midland and Wright with the impetus for the win.

BAUMONT scored two in the first and a hit batsman lead off batter Steve Garcia and walk to Dan Purpura were the guys who scored. After that, Wright walked just one the rest of the way.

Slew o' Gold is Belmont favorite

NEW YORK (AP) — Slew o' Gold will try to follow his bloodlines to victory today in the 115th Belmont Stakes. In 1977, Seattle Slew, Slew o' Gold's sire, won the 1 1/2-mile Belmont by four lengths and became the 10th of thoroughbred racing's 11 Triple Crown champions.

Others entered in the Belmont with previous experience in Triple Crown competition are Balboa Native, ninth in the Derby; Current Hope, 11th in the Derby; and Law Talk, 19th in the Derby.

'Horns may add baseball titles, but past isn't bad

With the Longhorns in the process of adding another chapter to the continuing saga at Omaha this weekend, the history of baseball at the University of Texas may still have its best days ahead.

Ernie Koy were teammates on the baseball and football teams. It was against the Aggies that "Walter" hit his homer at College Station and was yanked by an enraged Coach Disch for tipping his cap to the Aggie crowd, which brought the expected reaction, while circling the bases.

Snyder rips DeSoto for first baseball title

AUSTIN (AP) — Charles Bollinger checked DeSoto on six hits and Snyder exploded for eight runs on only three hits in the sixth inning Friday to give the Tigers a 13-4 Class 4A state championship baseball victory over DeSoto.

It was Snyder's first state title in six trips to the tournament, starting in 1957. DeSoto, a champion in 1979, also lost in the finals in 1980.

DeSoto led 4-2 in the fourth when Snyder catcher Johnny Overton pulled his team within one with a home run over the 375-foot sign in left field.

The next inning, with one out and two runners on, Britt Vincent poked a bloop single off DeSoto ace Steve Foster — who had just relieved starter Craig Gummelt — and Gummelt's throw from his new position in right field sailed over the catcher's head for a 5-4 Snyder lead.

Snyder padded its lead in the sixth on five walks, one error, Curtis Gafford's RBI single, a two-run Casey Peterson hit and a two-run double by Barry Davis.

Bollinger, 6-1 on the season, shut out DeSoto in the final three innings and did not give up a hit after pinch hitter David Scruggs belted an RBI triple in the fourth.

Gummelt, 7-3, was the loser, although most of Snyder's runs came off Foster and Brad Weber, the third pitcher for DeSoto. Foster, 14-2, won the semifinal game over Austin Westlake 3-2 on a five-hitter Thursday.

State Playoffs

PA Jefferson 6, Corps Christi Moody 1
Port Arthur Jefferson second baseman Mitch Gaspard blasted a home run and made two key defensive plays to halt a rally as the Yellow Jackets defeated Corpus Christi Moody 6-1 for their first Class 5A championship.

David Matt held free-swinging Moody to five singles and was in trouble in only the fifth inning when Gaspard's defensive heroics bailed him out.

Jefferson was leading 6-0 but Moody opened the bottom of the fifth with two straight line drive singles and its large crowd of supporters was roaring.

Chris Hubbard, the starting pitcher who had moved to third base on defense, lined a shot toward right field that seemed a certain hit, but Gaspard dove, speared the ball and rolled over but held on for the out.

After Rene Garcia lashed a run-scoring single, Eulalio "Pokie" Villalon hit a line drive to the right side but Gaspard lunged and grabbed it and doubled Garcia off first to end the inning.

Moody never threatened again.

Kenedy 3, LaGrange 2
Danny Reyna struck out 10 and Paul Sotelo smashed a game-tying triple and scored the winning run as Kenedy squeezed by LaGrange 3-2 for the Class 3A title.

The swift Leopards, who set base stealing records for Class 3A, took a 2-0 lead in the first on singles by Brent Vasuet and Craig Prause, three stolen bases, a passed ball and a wild pitch.

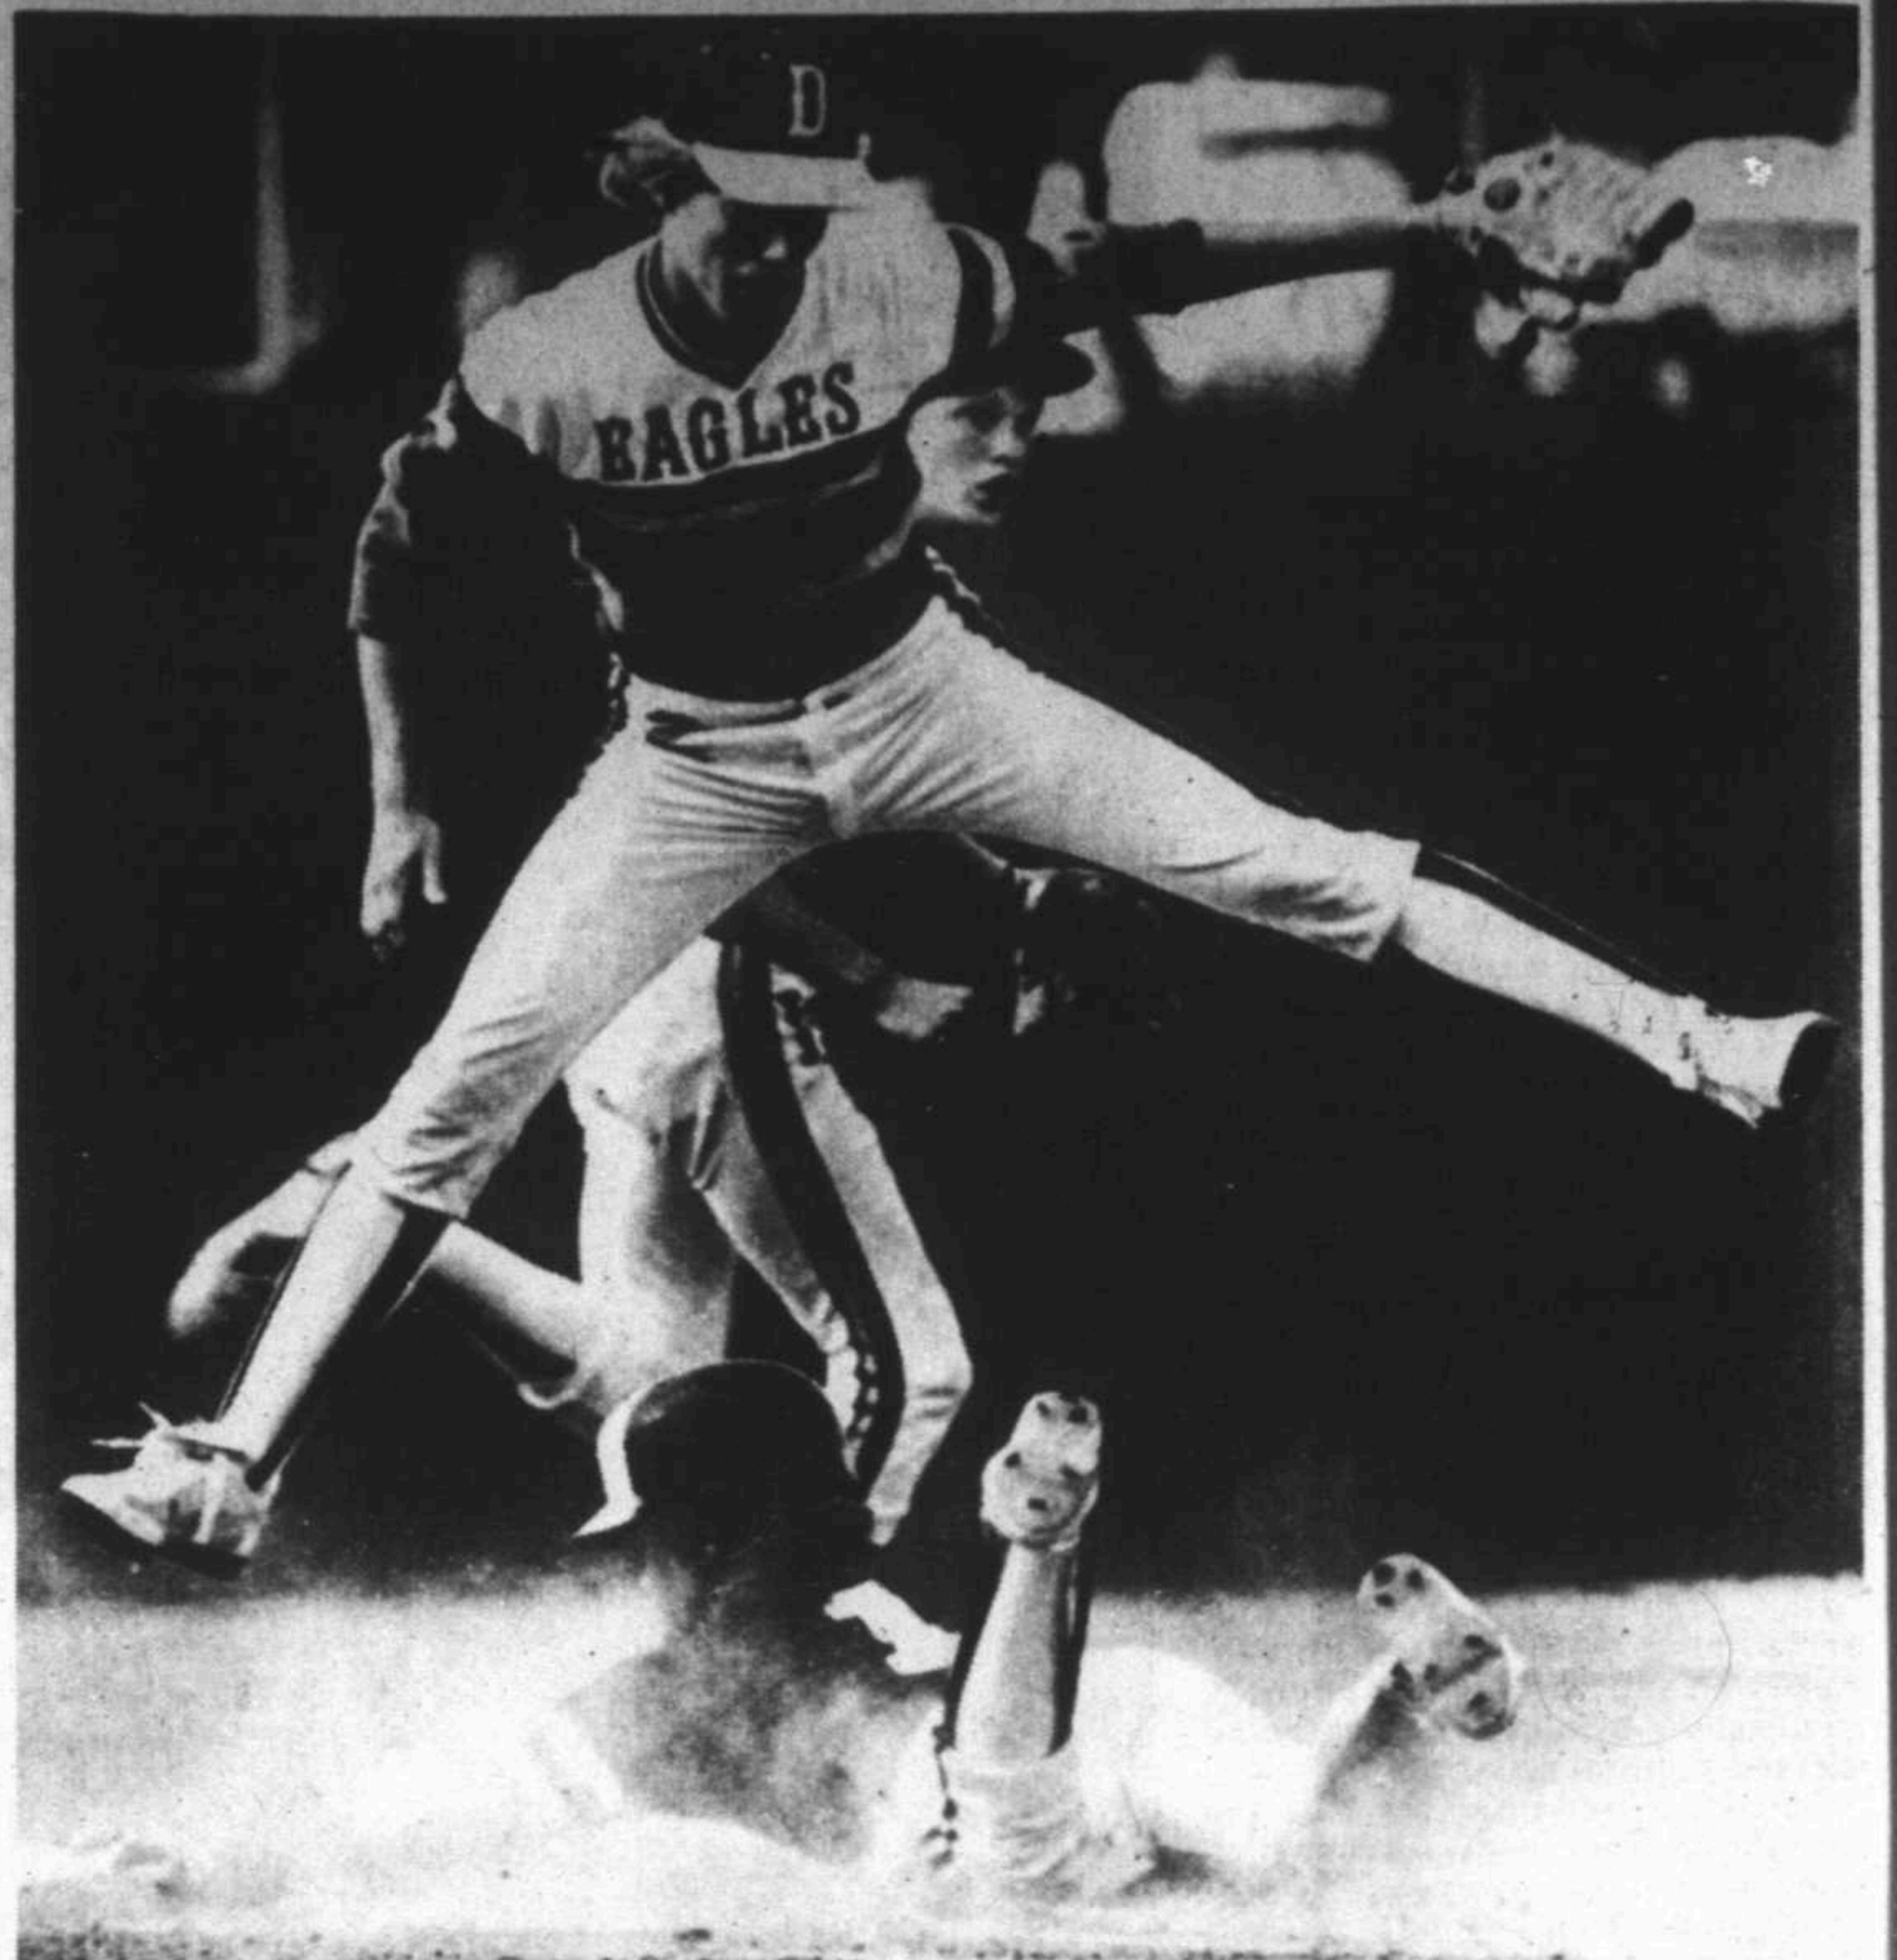

Reyna, 10-1, allowed only two more LaGrange singles in the final six innings and retired the last 12 batters in a row, including three straight pinch-hitters in the bottom of the seventh.

Pollok Central 9, Union Grove 1
Sophomore Adrian Neal pitched a two-hitter and right fielder Mike Thigpen collected three hits, including an inside-the-park home run, as Pollok Central defeated Gladewater Union Grove 9-1 for the Class 2A crown.

Central scored a single run in the first inning on Charlie McClendon's RBI triple and also in the second when Thigpen's fly ball bounced over center fielder Mike Scott's head for a home run.

Valley Mills 12, Cayuga 0
Senior Tim Vannatta threw a three-hitter and his brother, junior shortstop Danny Vannatta, cracked a two-run, inside-the-park home run as Valley Mills walloped Cayuga, 12-0, for the Class A title.

The game was halted after five innings by the University Interscholastic League's 10-run rule.

Snyder's Casey Peterson (1) slides safely into second with a stolen base under DeSoto's Chris Norton during first inning 4A state championship baseball game in Austin.

Seve Ballesteros lifts a ball out of the sand trap for a birdie on the 18th hole to tie Fuzzy Zoeller for the Westchester golf lead Friday.

Ballesteros' late bird catches Fuzzy Zoeller

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — Spain's Seve Ballesteros, making his first American appearance since winning the famed Masters golf tournament, birdied the final hole Friday and tied Fuzzy Zoeller for the second-round lead in the $450,000 Manufacturers Hanover-Westchester Classic.

The 26-year-old Ballesteros, who won the British PGA two weeks ago, shot a four-under-par 67 in the mild, sunny weather and birdied all the par-five holes.

"Another good, consistent round," said Ballesteros, who has made only two bogeys in two rounds. "Maybe a little better, little more consistent than yesterday (Thursday)."

USF to revive basketball in 1985

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The University of San Francisco, which dropped its troubled men's basketball program a year ago, will revive it beginning in the 1985-86 season, it was announced Friday.

The university's president, the Rev. John LoSchiavo, said that although San Francisco will compete on the NCAA Division I level again as a member of the West Coast Athletic Conference. "We will not be striving for the gold ring. We won't be aiming for the Top 20."

The Dons won two NCAA titles in the 1950s with great teams led by Bill Russell, and San Francisco teams have been ranked in the nation's Top 20 often since then. But the program was penalized several times in recent years for violating NCAA rules, and it was scrapped by LoSchiavo when new, serious violations were uncovered in the spring of 1982.

New golfing facility provides new fun

For Dave Hand, the opening of Water Wonderland Golf was the opportunity to fulfill his niche in life.

"I'm a teacher and I love teaching golf," he said. "At a private golf course, teaching dropped in priority so I opened this place to get back to teaching."

What Hand did was open his own golfing complex which includes a driving range, pro shop, repair shop and two miniature golf courses.

"My idea was to have a teaching center with good quality help. We want to be able to help people with their game whether it be equipment or instruction," he explained.

Hand had a less than a spectacular start when the center first opened back in December of '82.

"I was working out of a trailer house on the property and the only publicity we had was by word of mouth," he said. "But we did real well. We were seeing the same faces over and over again, then those people started bringing friends and business has gone real well...extremely well," he said.

Hand was a former assistant golf professional at Midland's Ranchland Hills Country Club and head pro at Mission Country Club in Odessa before striking out on his own.

Joining Hand are Ken Garrison, a former head pro in Muleshoe, and Arlan Scott a long time

Alexandra Reinhardt scorches LPGA course

MASON, Ohio (AP) — Alexandra Reinhardt, posting the lowest mid-way total in the 29 years of the tournament, fired a four-under-par 68 Friday and opened a four-shot lead in the LPGA Championship.

The surprising Reinhardt, a non-winner in nine seasons on the women's pro golf tour, had a 36-hole total of 135, nine strokes under par over the Nicklaus Sports Center course.

She broke the 36-hole LPGA Championship mark of 136, which was shared by Nancy Lopez, Amy Alcott, Jo Ann Washam and Jerilyn Britz. Lopez, Alcott and Washam set the record in 1978 and Britz tied it in 1979.

Their performances also came on this 6,277-yard course, which Jack Nicklaus designed and built just north of Cincinnati. It has been the home for the tournament, the second of the year's four major events in women's golf, for the past six years.

Reinhardt, playing in the third group of golfers to tee off on the warm, pleasant day, completed her round before many of her closest pursuers started. Her two rounds, laced with 12 birdies, even surprised her. "I don't think I ever put two rounds like that together," she said. "I've never made that many birdies in two days."

Five players, headed by two-time U.S. Open champion Hollis Stacy and 42-tournament winner Sandra Haynie, shared second at 139. Also at 139 were LPGA President Dot Germain, Lauren Howe and Patty Sheehan.

Germain had the day's low round, a 66, two strokes off the women's course record. Stacy shot a 68, Haynie a 69, Howe a 70 and Sheehan a 71.

Texas bar fights control of FTC

FTC wants authority over restraints

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The state bar of Texas, composed of all the lawyers licensed to practice in the state, and now controlled by the Texas Supreme Court, is fighting off controls by the Federal Trade Commission in Washington.

The Commission says it does not want to tell the lawyers of Texas what to do but wants to exercise its authority to see what kind of restraints Texas lawyers impose on the public.

The FTC is interested in two areas, anti-trust matters and consumer protection.

The state bar of Texas has organized a lobby in Washington to fight the authorization bill which would extend the life of the FTC.

The Texas bar is the only one fighting the FTC although the California bar is said to be in similar circumstances.

The FTC fought a heated battle over the same type of professional control with the American Medical Association last year, finally winning in the Senate after an all night debate during the lame duck session last December only to lose by a few votes in the House.

Since then the FTC has been limping along on a continuing resolution which kept it alive. Now it is fighting for another authorization bill.

The FTC also successfully fought against five doctors in Brownfield who objected to competition in delivering babies.

At present it looks as if the fight will be decided when the authorization bill gets to the House floor where Rep. Sam Hall, D-Marshall, member of the House Judiciary committee, is expected to offer an amendment exempting the Texas bar on grounds it is now well regulated by the Texas Supreme Court. The bill has been written by former Rep. Bob Eckhardt of Houston, now a Washington lawyer, who said that he is "lobbying for the Texas bar to keep FTC from exercising regulation over Texas lawyers."

Another who has presented the state bar's side to Texas congressmen is Douglas M. Smith of Annapolis, Md., who was vice chairman of a committee of the state bar to fight off FTC regulation. Formerly of Dallas, he is reported to represent Texas members of the state bar, who practice from Washington.

Smith, after admitting that he served on a committee working on this question, said "This conversation is ended; I am on vacation." Eckhardt said he did not know Smith. Eckhardt readily agreed to discuss all facts in the case. He added that as a former member of Congress who helped write "the rule" for FTC, "If I did not think this was a just case, I would not be working on it."

The reason the Texas bar would fall under the law being administered by FTC is that "it is an integrated bar, that means, controlled by the state, in this case, the State

Washington lawyer

Supreme court," said a congressman who did not wish to be named in the matter. All lawyers in Texas must belong to the state bar and be regulated.

All Texas congressional offices including those of Reps. Hall and Marvin Leath, D-Marlin, have been studying the matter. Letters from lawyers say "Texas can handle its own business and does not need for the FTC to get into this."

The FTC authorization bill has been approved by the House Committee on Energy and Commerce which then sent it to the House Judiciary committee at the request of the chairman, Rep. Peter Rodino of New Jersey. The Judiciary committee can act on the matter but is considering the bill under rules that specifically preclude public hearings or discussion of the Texas bar case, for reasons unexplained. The bill is expected to reach the House floor some time this summer.

The FTC has many enemies, principally the American Medical Association. This enmity, arising over the attempt of FTC to regulate professional ethics and practices, is credited with the AMA's raising of $3 millions for Political Action committees to give to the election campaign funds of members of Congress. But AMA is now said to be staying out of this year's battle because 33 professional organizations including nurses and the Washington Business Group on Health (including Fortune 500 corporations with insurance plans) turned against them in last year's congressional battle over the FTC. The AMA was also attacked in many newspaper editorials.

The Brownfield case arose when there was a great lack of doctors skilled in obstetrics or gynecology in a 35-mile area. Many women were having babies. They were being treated largely by general practitioners. A small hospital sought to bring in a specialist. This was opposed by five general practitioners who threatened to boycott the hospital if the specialist were brought in, according to a spokesman for the FTC. Finally the FTC's general counsel was able to work out an agreement with the physicians whereby they dropped their boycott when FTC sought to make sure the consuming public was protected, according to a spokesman.

The FTC has a study underway now to see if law firms advertise with safeguards and do not use trade names or agreements to restrict trade.

Price biggest deterrent to cocaine consumption

SUMMIT, N.J. (AP) — Cocaine's price, not its harmful side effects, is the primary deterrent to further consumption among young, upwardly mobile users, says a physician who runs a national cocaine telephone hotline.

Dr. Mark Gold, who directs research at Fair Oaks Hospital, said he drew his conclusions from interviews with 150 callers to the cocaine hotline, dubbed 800-COCAINE for its toll-free number.

Only the price of cocaine consumption — ranging from $50 to more than $8,000 a week — seemed to serve as a deterrent, he said Thursday.

"The majority of cocaine user callers suffer physical and psychological problems which they attribute to the drug, but this recognition does not make them stop using it or prompt them to seek treatment," Gold said.

Fair Oaks, a private psychiatric and drug rehabilitation hospital, started the around-the-clock hotline after receiving an "unbelievable" number of inquiries from users around the country, said Jeffery Shore, who supervises the 12 hospital counselors staffing the hotline.

The service, which provides information and referrals, has received more than 30,000 calls since it began May 6, Gold said.

Gold said the interviews indicate that cocaine is an addictive drug, although many in the medical community dispute that finding. "The research thus far has been very extreme," he said. "The single dose given in research is on one side of the spectrum and on the other side are the coroners (who report on overdose victims). In the middle is where all these people are and that is totally uncharted territory."

"We have found that these people are falling apart. They are attempting to keep themselves afloat. They know they are going downhill, but they can't stop themselves. That's the closest evidence for this drug being addictive as anything."

Based on interviews, Gold described the typical cocaine user as a 30-year-old male professional, college educated, with little previous drug experience "who found cocaine was useful as almost a self-medication for giving a sense of confidence, enthusiasm and energy."

Spontaneous attacks of remorse, depression and tearfulness were reported by the largest number of respondents, and almost half those surveyed considered suicide, he said. Callers also mentioned memory loss, problems with concentration, headaches, nose bleeds, insomnia, loss of energy and reduced sex drive, Gold said.

"Loss of concentration and memory were of most concern to attorneys, financial experts and others whose professional performance depends on acquisition and retention of new data," he said.

Police officers' sexual habits in question

Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — Police Chief Daryl Gates does not prohibit his undercover officers from having sex with subjects of their surveillance.

To make such a rule would mean "seriously endangering" the lives of undercover officers because refusal to have sex could lead to discovery of their identities, Gates explained in sworn but as yet unsigned testimony made public Wednesday by the American Civil Liberties Union in connection with a series of lawsuits alleging illegal police spying.

"If I were to say that there is a flat prohibition against it, and if I were to declare that tomorrow, there is no reason why every undercover operator would not be tested in that fashion," Gates said. "Bring a girl in and say, 'Have sex with her. If you don't have sex with her, we know you are an undercover operator, and we are going to off your head.'"

"I just would tell you that if I were the undercover operator, I would have sex rather than lose my life," Gates said. "I don't think you can make those kinds of flat statements without endangering, seriously endangering, the lives of your undercover people."

PAUL HOFFMAN, the ACLU lawyer who questioned Gates on the matter, said he wanted to establish whether sexual activity between undercover officers and their targets has occurred.

"I want to know whether or not the police department still permits that activity or not, and if it does permit that activity, I am going to go for an injunction to stop it," Hoffman said during Gates' deposition, taken May 20.

"There are at least two instances in our case where undercover officers were engaged in sexual relations in connection with their duties," Hoffman claimed in an interview Wednesday. "They really become intimately associated with people . . . and that does extreme damage to people's lives."

"What we are alleging in the complaint is that these (undercover operators) are loose cannons running around in the community who are really hurting people."

"Certainly we do not assign people to have sex with somebody," replied a spokesman for Gates, who pointed out that the chief had not yet reviewed or signed his testimony.

"That would be an interesting action for the ACLU — to restrict the activities of two consenting adults," said the spokesman, Cmdr. William Booth. "That would be an unusual position for anybody to take, especially the ACLU."

WILLARD CARR, spokesman for the Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher law firm representing the city in the lawsuits, said the chief's deposition as released by the ACLU is not complete because the plaintiffs still have "many more questions to ask Chief Gates." Carr also noted that the transcript was unsigned and said its release was "at least premature."

Gates also was questioned during the deposition about the department's new Anti-Terrorist Division, which is being organized to replace the Public Disorder Intelligence Division. The Police Commission, with Gates' concurrence, voted to abolish PIDID because of allegations of misconduct by its officers.

IN HIS TESTIMONY, however, Gates said standards for maintaining files on individuals and organizations "will be substantially the same" as with PIDID.

But Gates noted that the new division's mission will be "narrowed" to encompass only terrorists.

The old division has been accused of keeping dossiers on a variety of public officials ranging from police commissioners to city councilmen and judges.

But attached to Gates' deposition was a list of PIDID's accomplishments since 1969.

The 13-page chronology, compiled in June 1982 by a PIDID detective, said the division had foiled a plan by black militants to murder then-City Councilman Tom Bradley in April 1969.

Three cities unable to feed needy

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Declaring that emergency food "need is outstripping . . . resources," the U.S. Conference of Mayors today singled out Oakland, San Antonio and New Orleans as being unable to feed their needy.

The report said an estimated 30,000 eligible persons in Oakland alone are not receiving food aid, even though the city's food aid program last year experienced a one-third increase in the number of persons served.

The conference's findings, to be formally presented to Congress next week during a hearing in Denver, are part of a study of eight U.S. cities and the impact of the economy upon them.

The conclusion of the report, entitled "Hunger in American Cities," said that "in the past year, local communities have pulled together, possibly in way not seen in the last half century, since the tragedy of the Great Depression."

In its case study of Oakland, the conference said that "during 1982 the number of Oakland residents participating in emergency food programs increased by one-third, from 15,000 to 20,000 people."

In San Antonio, it is estimated that as many as 100,000 persons need additional food on a regular basis in San Antonio. At present, there is only enough food to meet half of this need."

"Currently all emergency cases of people who have completely run out of food are being served. However, much more food is required in order to serve all persons who need additional food to supplement their diet."

New Orleans, the third major city cited as having trouble feeding its needy, was described as "being stretched to its limit."

Local officials "indicated that in order to meet the current demand without difficulty" the city "needs to maintain a five-day supply of food. Currently, it is only able to maintain a three-day supply."

Town wants historic hotel reopened

By JAY JORDEN

MINERAL WELLS (AP) — Behind the orange and blue labels of bottles containing bitter, brackish water lies the birthright of this North Central Texas community and the hope for its rejuvenation.

The water, which once bubbled up through several hundred wells into bathhouses and hotels, propelled the city in the 1900s into a resort and a health sanatorium.

Early settlers, who swore it could cure mental disease, called it "crazy water" after an insane woman drank from a well. Visitors to the wells and baths later ranged from actresses to the sick and crippled looking for miracles.

Most of the wells have been capped, and the city's biggest hotel, which attracted thousands to its baths with the slogan "where America drinks its way to health," lies vacant. But several entrepreneurs want to resurrect the city's dream.

A Phoenix real estate developer is studying whether the 14-story Baker Hotel downtown can be reopened. Nearby, a 33-year-old man has bought the city's only producing mineral water well and wants to market it regionally.

"Naturally, you'd like to retain some of the charm of the past," said Mineral Wells Mayor Ellis White. "The past is not gone. But it takes new interest, desire, enthusiasm and money for progress. So that's the way I see it — I see retaining part of the past."

Ellis, 72, said one of his goals before retirement was to see the 54-year-old Baker Hotel reopen. Vacant since 1972, it was built by developer T.B. Baker as part of his Texas chain that included the Baker Hotel in Dallas.

"I think it will reopen," Ellis said. The entire second floor of the decaying hotel contains a bath department designed for guests, and a Fort Worth real estate developer said one plan considered by its present owner would include a version of the old health spas.

They once attracted guests like Mary Pickford, Helen Keller, D.W.

Bill Gabriel, liaison for hotel owner M. Seth Horne of Phoenix, said five different architects have examined the hotel since last July.

"All believe that it can be brought back to life," he told members of the Palo Pinto County Historical Society.

A spokesman for Horne said his real estate development company, James Stewart Co., has asked consultants from Dallas, Fort Worth, Albuquerque and Seattle to look at the hotel.

"We have plans in our minds, but we don't even have anything down on paper," said Steve Halbert, assistant to the president. "Nothing has been formalized yet."

One architectural study reported that restoring the hotel would require $15.5 million to $18 million. Halbert said his company has not yet decided to go ahead with hotel redevelopment.

"The owner is investigating the renovation of the hotel," said Halbert. "That is a true statement... We are trying. But we have not made a decision to renovate it, just as we have not made a decision against reopening it."

Residents of this community of about 14,500 have been disappointed before when plans to reopen the hotel fell through.

A deadline set in November 1981 by Horne passed before a Bedford real estate developer could raise funds for the hotel's acquisition and renovation. Vernon Hulme had received an option to purchase the property.

Hulme wanted to renovate the structure as a multipurpose facility, including a hotel, condominiums and an office and commercial center.

In 1979, Horne had announced plans to develop a retirement home in the Baker. Another downtown structure, the Crazy Water Hotel, is now a retirement center with about 150 residents, said spokesman Peggy Ocam.

Another plan to reopen the Baker Hotel, its red-carpeted Brazos Club and ballrooms failed in 1975.

Some of the building's red brick exterior was remodeled in 1977. And there have been four other renovation and reopening announcements, but none actually materialized.

Rain now seeps through a damaged tile roof into a 12th-floor ballroom, warping the dance floor where guests once danced to the tunes of show bands from Dallas and Fort Worth. Pigeons roost outside broken windows, and the only human resident is a night watchman.

Gabriel, in a tour through the 450-room hotel, said architects had been experimenting with different plastering techniques on its 30 acres of wall space.

"Only 40 percent of the space is rentable," he said, explaining that other service-related facilities are housed in the hotel.

They include a complete plumbing shop, a steam-driven generator capable of powering the hotel in an emergency and Baker's private quarters on the 7th and 11th floors.

The hotel, when it opened at a cost of $1 million, was only the second in the world with a swimming pool, Gabriel said.

"They don't make buildings like this anymore," he said, pointing to an upper-floor window. "The hardwood window frames are set in metal casings."

The rooms have valet doors with a built-in compartment in which guests could hang dirty suits and dresses for pickup, cleaning and return.

The hotel's basement contain a central vacuuming system and water chilling equipment.

The 7½ acres of floor space are adorned with crystal chandeliers, ornate wood trim and brass fixtures.

Its bath department has marble basins and stainless steel steam cabinets. The prices for baths, massages and other treatments are still visible on a sign at a reception area, amid peeling paint and stained tiles.

"You soaked and then went into the steam cabinets," said businesswoman Agnes Campbell, recalling the days when her parents owned a bakery in the hotel. "Then you received a massage, they rubbed you down with wintergreen, and it really felt nice."

Casino wants

Beach Boys

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — A casino hopes to lure the Beach Boys here July 4.

Dennis Gorski, spokesman for Caesars Boardwalk Regency, said he hoped the Beach Boys would be able to perform at a free concert sponsored by the casino.

Gorski said Interior Secretary James Watt's criticisms of the group "freed up one of the nation's best rock 'n roll bands to come to the beach and play for us."

How the audio laser works

Compact disc digital audio system

A highly concentrated beam of light passes through a prism and several lenses onto the reflective side of the disc

The light beam reflects off the microscopic pits and flat areas, which contain the music information, back through the lenses to the prism, where it is diverted to the photodetector

The photodetector then channels the data into the system's electronics

GIs jolted by replacement of jeep

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

NEW YORK (AP) — So the U.S. Army is mustering out the jeep after more than four bouncing, often bizarre decades of distinguished service and replacing it with something bigger and more powerful called "The Hummer."

At the same time the Pentagon was blowing taps for this venerable and most versatile of all military vehicles, word was leaked that jeeps would soon be rolling off a Peking assembly line in a Chinese joint venture with American Motors Corp., which will continue manufacturing the sleek, duded-up civilian version in this country.

The jolt to GI morale is probably as numbing as when they pensioned off the last mule. It's hard to imagine a military post without the garbage cans, water, the ammunition, the field stoves, the battalion CP (command post), the USO showgirls, the general, the chaplain, or the MPs arriving in a jeep.

No item of government issue, not even the mess kit, was more beloved than the jeep — or to give its full authorized military nomenclature: "Truck Quarter-ton, Four-by-Four, and Command Reconnaissance."

Cartoonist Bill Mauldin caught the feeling of the average GI for his jeep in a famous Willy and Joe cartoon that showed a cavalry sergeant shielding his tear-filled eyes as he put his disabled jeep out of its misery with a .45 slug to the radiator.

Actually a wounded jeep on Guadalcanal's bloody Lunga Beach was formally awarded the Purple Heart by the Marine Corps in 1943.

War-time Chief of Staff Gen.

Mulligan's Stew

George C. Marshall called the jeep "America's main contribution to modern war."

It was a "divine instrument of wartime locomotion" to correspondent Ernie Pyle, who wrote: "Good Lord, I don't think we could continue the war without the jeep. It does everything. It goes everywhere. It's as faithful as a dog, as strong as a mule, and as agile as a goat. It constantly carries twice what it was designed for, and still keeps going. It doesn't even ride so badly after you get used to it."

Getting used to its quirky disregard for the terrain and its teetering defiance of gravity took some wear and tear on the system. Jeep passengers turned up at sick call with a complaint officially diagnosed as "Jeep Disease" or "a pilonidal cyst" in the language of the Medical Corps.

The stubby little olive drab combination of car, tractor and truck more than fulfilled its destiny of doing away with the wretched shrieks of horses and mules dying in combat and replacing the noisy, vulnerable, unstable motorcycle sidecar. It carried heavy weapons, served as a mobile command post and radio relay station, was used as a frontline ambulance, hearse and fire truck, towed a 37mm antitank gun, hauled planes to the flight line at forward air bases, went ashore with the assault boats, anchored barrage balloons, shoved planes around on the decks of aircraft carriers, floated across the Rhine with built-in buoyancy, transported President Franklin D. Roosevelt to a troop review, and starred in the movie "Four Jills in a Jeep."

Jeeps with snowplows cleared the way for George Patton's tanks at Bastogne. When the Japanese retreating from Burma blew up all the railroad locomotives, jeeps fitted with flanged wheels pulled the boxcars. Jeeps with power-sprayers fought malaria from Wake Island to New Guinea. Jeeps laid thousands of miles of communications wire across battlefields. Jeeps with plows tilled the first fields for the peacetime recovery of Germany. Jeeps fitted with snorkels became amphibious vehicles called "peeps." The British lashed one to the deck of a submarine and transported it underwater for a commando raid on the Mediterranean island of Leros. In Korea and Vietnam, jeeps roared into combat from the belly ramp of cargo planes and giant helicopters.

The hood of a jeep was an altar for the chaplain and a gaming table for the card players. Its radiator, as another Willy and Joe cartoon showed, dispensed hot water for shaving. Image-conscious generals like Field Marshal Montgomery and Patton gussied up their jeeps with sheepskin seat covers and chromium hubcaps, which had to be mudded over in forward areas.

With its ability to turn a circle within 30 feet, the jeep could and often had to outmaneuver a low-strafing fighter plane. Sometimes it encountered a situation beyond the dreams of its designers. Street thieves in Korea could deftly remove the spare tire as the jeep negotiated a narrow lane at 20 mph. Historians are divided over whether the jeep got its name from the initials "GP" for general purpose vehicle or from a cartoon character in the strip "Popeye," which "was neither fowl nor beast, but knew all the answers and could do most anything." The jeep was born when the War Department in 1940, after Hitler's blitzkrieg plunged Europe into war, asked 35 automobile manufacturers to come up with designs for a compact, open body, three-passenger squad car. Only tiny Bantam Motors, with 15 employees in Butler, Pa., and Willys-Overland in Toledo, Ohio, responded. Bantam landed the first contract by quickly putting on its payroll a design genius named Karl Probst, who invented the yet-unnamed jeep in 18 hours and got complete blueprints to Washington in five days.

Willys, because of its huge assembly line, was chosen for mass production and was soon turning out a jeep every minute and a third. Ford, whose Model-T flivver had once been fitted out with surplus airplane tires as an early recon car, became a co-producer in 1942. First jeeps off the assembly lines went to Britain, Russia and the Far East under lend lease.

From Pearl Harbor to the fall of Saigon, nearly 600,000 jeeps went to war for Uncle Sam. Its life cycle far outdistanced the legendary Model T, which Henry Ford cranked out from 1908 to 1927.

You can tell how old the jeep is by its price tag. Willys' low bid in July 1941, was $738 per vehicle. The civilian version today retails at $11,500. The Hummers will cost something in the neighborhood of $20,000 apiece.

PLUS OR MINUS GOD?

This young man, like multitudes of others his age, realizes he must soon be earning a living and perplexing questions arise.

What vocation shall he follow? Will the life-work he has in mind offer him a suitable outlet for his talents? Will he be happy and contented in that work?

And questions arise about the ethical standards he should set for himself. Just how honest ought a fellow be anyway? How loyal to the truth? Do moral compromises pay?

In other words, this young man is inquiring into the meaning of life itself. In essence, his question is, shall a fellow plan his life plus or minus God?

How he works things out depends largely upon his earlier training. If his religious life has been neglected, he is more likely to make the fatal mistake of trying to get along without God.

If he has been more wisely led, he will place God and truth at the right of center of his thoughts. If he seeks the better way, his House of Worship stands ready to offer him every aid.
