Driscoll, Swinney win in newspaper contest

Big Spring Herald staff writers Patrick Driscoll and Connie Swinney have been named as Western Division winners in the Thomson Newspapers Award of Excellence competition for the month of August.

Driscoll and Swinney were recognized for their reporting efforts in the city of Big Spring's search for a new city manager, winning first place in the competition between newspapers of less than 12,000 circulation in the non-deadline category.

Their entry will now be considered among eight other regional finalists for the overall writing award for the month.

Driscoll has been with the Herald for three years while Swinney, a Big Spring High School and Texas Tech graduate, joined the newspaper this summer.

The August award marks the fifth consecutive month that Herald staff members have been recognized by Thomson Newspapers for outstanding writing and photographic efforts.

Masonic open house set

A Masonic open house will be held Sunday from 2-4 p.m. at the Big Spring Lodge No. 1340, 2102 S. Lancaster, and Staked Plains Lodge No. 598, 211½ S. Main St. The public is encouraged to attend.

Herald not surveying

The Big Spring Herald is not conducting a door-to-door survey at the present time.

Several callers have voiced concern over persons representing themselves as conducting a door-to-door survey in the community. Herald surveys are conducted either by telephone, mail or in the newspaper.

The Herald does contract with independent carriers for home delivery of the newspaper. However, persons soliciting new subscriptions need only to know if you subscribe to the paper or not and if you wish to subscribe.

Bigar begins Sunday

Beginning this Sunday, Jacqueline Bigar's astrology and horoscope column will appear daily in the Big Spring Herald. Bigar's daily column will replace the horoscope written by Jeanne Dixon.

Bigar, 43, is a native of Philadelphia and the mother of two. She has written a horoscope column since 1977.

Bigar's horoscope features the "Five Star Forecast," where she rates each sign daily with from one to five stars — from difficult to dynamic.

Also accessible to readers are two 900 telephone numbers they may call for daily and monthly forecasts as well as a personal reading from a psychic.

Guerrero back on campaign trail

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

FALFURRIAS — In less than a day, former Texas Railroad Commissioner Lena Guerrero has gone from a tearful political retreat to a determined offensive.

RELATED STORIES — 2A, 8A

Guerrero resigned under fire Thursday afternoon in Austin, only to re-initiate her campaign for the same post that night before a welcoming South Texas crowd.

"I don't have to tell you that Guerrero in English means warrior. I'm here to tell you that I'm ready to fight," she said as she shifted the focus away from the controversy that drove her from office.

"I'm painfully aware that my credibility was made an issue in this race. But I believe my record in office should also be an issue," said Guerrero.

The crowd, which included busloads of people from her hometown of Mission, cheered her on loudly, chanting "Lena, Lena."

Earlier Thursday in Austin, Guerrero, flanked by her husband and 4-year-old son, had apologized for falsely claiming for 12 years to be a graduate of the University of Texas.

"I have been in a hurry all my life. In my haste, I was reckless. I made mistakes, deeply serious mistakes," she said in a speech punctuated by applause from supporters who filled the Texas House chamber.

"I allowed misperceptions, embellishments and errors of fact about my academic record to go uncorrected. I didn't admit to the truth of those facts when questioned about them," she said.

"I brought these difficulties upon myself. The deceptions continue to compound my problem I know that I have no one else to blame."

She gave virtually the same resignation speech in Falfurrias, a small town about 60 miles north of McAllen.

But this time, when she declared she would remain the Democratic candidate for Railroad Commission chairman in the Nov. 3 election, she wasn't on the verge of tears. She seemed forceful and confident.

"I'm here to tell you I'm going to run this race on my merits and I'm going to win this race on my merits," Guerrero said.

Gov. Ann Richards, who appointed Guerrero to serve out an unexpired term on the Railroad Commission, called her "an outstanding public official" and predicted she would win the election.

Guerrero faces Dallas oilman Barry Williamson, the Republican nominee, in the race for a seat on the three-member panel that regulates the state's oil and gas industry.

School board approves tax rate

CEDs play role in keeping the increase low

By CONNIE SWINNEY
Staff Writer

Big Spring School District trustees Thursday approved a 51.5 cent tax rate, lower than last year's rate and a one-tenth of a percent below the effective tax rate.

The approved rate is four-tenths of a percent lower than last year's 51.9 cent rate per $100 valuation.

School administrators said the district could maintain a lower rate and operate effectively.

"We didn't have to (raise the rate) because the CED (County Education District) funds helped us," said Ron Plumlee, superintendent for business.

The CEDs collect property taxes from four local school districts, including BSISD, and the state redistributes the money among the schools with the intent of providing equity in funding.

'We didn't have to (raise the rate) because the CED (County Education District) funds helped us.'
Ron Plumlee
Business superintendent

BSISD gained the most from the fund due to its larger attendance.

"We're slightly under the (51.6 cent) effective tax rate," Plumlee said. "We will still be able to do some things like upgrading."

As officials are upgrading school buildings, they are also preparing to demolish some of the district's new property.

BSISD holds the titles to lots across from the high school campus and officials will have the houses demolished and the land cleared as a potential site for a parking lot.

A house on one of the lots had been pinpointed by local law enforcers for alleged, illicit drug activity.

"It was some of the motivation for buying them," said Superintendent Bill McQueary. "We want to keep those kinds of things from happening in the future."

The lots could be cleared as early as late November.

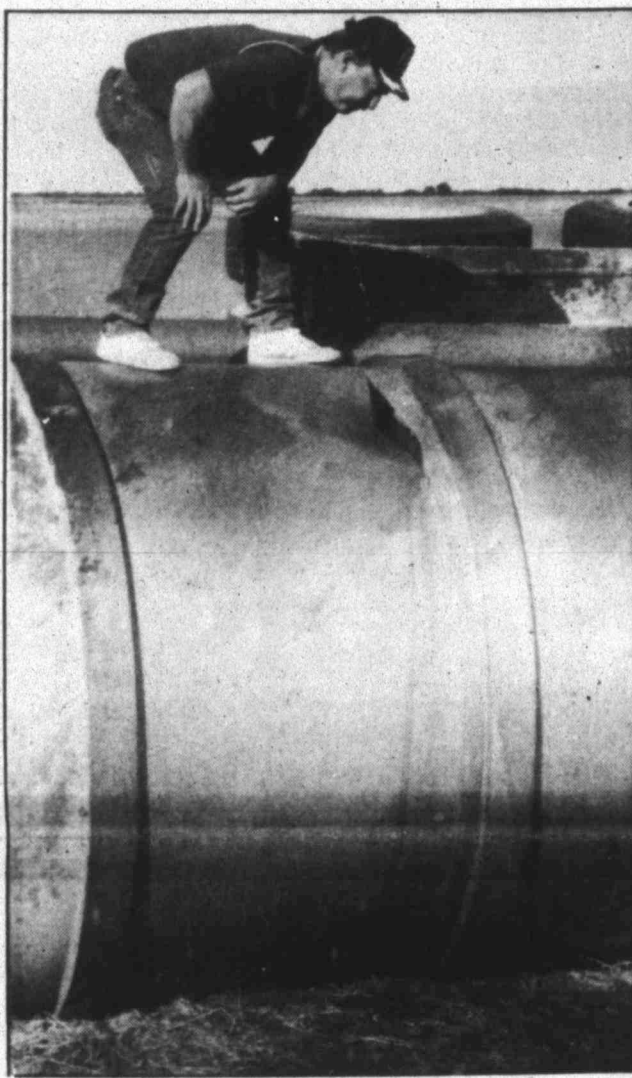

In other business, trustees approved a trip to Disney World in Orlando for the Big Spring High School band.

The band will perform at the Epot Center. Members, with the help of boosters, continue to raise the money necessary to finance the May trip totaling about $30,000.

Trustees also discussed the funding of a trip for the Big Spring High School varsity cheerleaders slated to attend a championship in Dallas.

The board approved funding the difference of the almost $2,200 trip from the amount the cheerleaders can raise up to the December trip.

"Certainly, they don't have the booster club to help them," McQueary said. "It might help them to get a little more involved in raising some of the money."

Crude oil lost when a tanker overturns

By GARY SHANKS

A loaded crude-oil tanker truck overturned north of Big Spring Thursday, injuring one and rupturing the tank.

Damage was light and the driver, Jackie Justin Jobe of Big Spring, sustained only minor injuries when his tractor-trailer overturned 1½ times, according to Texas Department of Public Safety reports.

Although a two-foot gash was opened in the tank, the ruptured side came to rest facing upwards. When another tanker truck from American Crude Transport Inc. pumped out the crude oil still in the tank, only 100 gallons were unaccounted for, according to reports. The oil was owned by Fina Oil and Chemical Co.

The crude oil was being transported from a field near Ira when the driver failed to negotiate a turn on FM 846 about 15 miles north of Big Spring, in the vicinity of the old Luther School.

The truck flipped onto its left side, rupturing the tank on the asphalt road. As the truck left the highway it rolled down an embankment, coming to rest in a field in a driver's-side-down position.

Earthen dikes were constructed to protect the spill area from water runoff. The Texas Water Commission and the Texas Railroad Commission have been notified of the situation, according to Howard County Sheriff's Office reports.

Investigation has shown that 50-percent of the tanker trailer's brakes were non-functioning at the time of the accident.

High-speed collision results in two deaths

By GARY SHANKS

Two people are dead following a high-speed, head-on collision, occurring about 11:30 a.m. Thursday on Texas Highway 158 near Garden City.

Killed in the accident were Eddie Hugh Harnes, 44, of San Angelo and Rhonda Kay Robinson, 34, a claims consultant with State Farm Insurance in Mesquite, according to Department of Public Safety reports.

Harnes was reportedly traveling west at a high rate of speed about 5 miles east of Garden City. His car was reported weaving in and out of both traffic lanes.

According to reports, the collision occurred when Harnes' car veered into the eastbound lane, colliding with Robinson's eastbound vehicle.

Harnes was pronounced dead at the scene by Glasscock County Judge Wilburn Bednar. Robinson reportedly died en route to Midland Memorial Hospital. She was pronounced dead on arrival by Midland County Peace Justice R. H. Pine.

According to the findings of investigating officers, Robinson was wearing her seat belt and the vehicle's protective airbag deployed as designed.

Harnes reportedly was not wearing his seat belt. There were no passengers in either vehicle.

Harnes body was taken to Scenic Mountain Medical Center and later transferred to Nalley-Pickle & Welch Funeral Home. Robinson's body remains at Midland Memorial Hospital.

According to reports, the impact velocity was so great that Robinson's car, which was traveling forward at 55 mph, was knocked backwards almost 200 feet.

Continuing the investigation is DPS Trooper James Rand, assisted by DPS Sgt. Frank Woodall of Big Spring. Also at the scene were DPS troopers from Big Lake and Sterling County Sheriff's Office personnel.

Hispanic chambers help to promote leadership

Editor's Note: In recognition of Hispanic Heritage Month, the Big Spring Herald will publish daily articles and features on Hispanics and Hispanic culture.

By MARTHA E. FLORES
Staff Writer

With 28 chambers of commerce across the state, the Texas Association of Mexican-American Chambers of Commerce are representing the needs of Hispanic men and women business people.

The association is a non-profit corporation, promoting leadership in the Hispanic community through association with individuals and organizations involved in business, trade, civic, education and government. It provides information and assistance to Hispanic businesses about economic opportunities. The organization also responds to advocacy needs of its constituents.

An elected board of directors from each of the local chambers assists in leadership and guidance for the association. The local chapters are governed by its own local board.

"The group is very focused," said Berto Guerra, TAMACC's vice-chairman of legislation and first vice-chairman. "It is the only group in the state of Texas that represents Hispanic men and women business people."

Guerra says local Hispanic chambers were established throughout Texas a few years before the state association was formed in 1975. Locally, a Hispanic chamber was formed in the mid-1980s, but due to internal problems the organization folded soon after it was established.

As the number of Hispanic-owned businesses grew throughout Texas, the need for representation also grew, Guerra said.

"Their interests were not being addressed at the local level," Guerra said. "After numerous Hispanic chambers formed throughout the state, the association was established to share ideas from the local level and to bring issues to the state level."

In recent years, TAMACC has focused on issues such as the workers' compensation, North American Free Trade Agreement and dispersal of government contracts.

TAMACC's chairman, Ernesto M. Chavarria, Jr., has met with President Carlos Salinas de Gortari to discuss NAFTA's impact on Hispanic business in Texas. Main issue concerns are job retraining and the environmental impact. TAMACC also supports business partnerships between United States Hispanic and Mexican businesses and loans to businesses who have been dislocated because of the agreement.

TAMACC has been behind the push for more procurement of government contracts to minority businesses. In the area, the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce with its program, MPAC (Midland Procurement Assistant Center), assisted minority businesses in obtaining more than $13 million in government contracts over the last two and half years.

"TAMACC is a voice for the Hispanic business community, opening doors of opportunity," Guerra said.

The state association is one of 150 members of the National Association of Hispanic Chambers of Commerce, established in 1979. The national association will have their annual convention next week in Dallas.

Williamson defends self; applauds the resignation

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

DALLAS — Railroad Commission candidate Barry Williamson, saying he doesn't know whether his campaign will get a boost from opponent Lena Guerrero's resignation, is ready to discuss issues.

Ms. Guerrero resigned Thursday from the Railroad Commission after her admission that she was not an honors graduate of the University of Texas, as had previously been reported in campaign literature.

"I think we're going to campaign on the issues and this is going to be an issue," said Williamson, a Republican.

"It's an admission she doesn't have the honesty and integrity to hold the position. If you violate the public trust, you don't deserve to hold public office," he said.

The Dallas oilman declined speculation on whether he'll gain from Ms. Guerrero's resignation. He also said he did not want to advise her, but said she should "come clean with the voters."

"For 12 years she misled the people of Texas then, when confronted, she continued to lie," he said Thursday at a news conference at Dallas GOP headquarters.

Another brewing issue in the campaign could be Williamson's admission Thursday that he erred during two recent debates with Ms. Guerrero by taking credit for a well-known investigation into the federal agency he once headed.

He said he did not mean to claim responsibility for launching the study of the hiring of nude and topless dancers for after-hours parties by staffers of the Minerals Management Service, an agency of the U.S. Department of the Interior.

Williamson said he realized after the first debate that his statement may have been misleading. He had repeated it during another debate the following morning.

"There's a difference between misspeaking and misleading intentionally for 12 years," Williamson said.

During the debate, Williamson said "I" contacted the FBI. On Thursday, he said he used the terms "I" and "we" meaning his agency, and that his contact was the Interior Department's investigator general who worked with the FBI.

Williamson said he expects voters to understand the difference between his clarification of "a very detailed process" and Ms. Guerrero not knowing she hadn't graduated from college.

"I find that hard to believe," he said. "How could you remember graduating when you're 19 hours short?"

"She betrayed the trust of the people of Texas. The question is, should she now be rewarded for betraying that trust by being elected Railroad Commissioner the next six years?"

National Guard's records subpoenaed

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

AUSTIN — The U.S. attorney's office has subpoenaed records of 22 people assigned to the Texas National Guard's Camp Mabry, including the adjutant general, officials say.

They included records on travel, pay, promotion, transfer, awards — "the whole works," Lt. Col. Ed Komandovsky, National Guard spokesman, said Thursday.

The subpoena with 22 names — including that of Maj. Gen. William Wilson, the Guard's adjutant general — was delivered Tuesday, Komandovsky said. The records are to be delivered to federal court in Austin by Oct. 20, he said.

The National Guard will cooperate "absolutely, fully, 100 percent," he said.

Gov. Ann Richards has told the National Guard to cooperate with the investigation, said her spokesman, Bill Cryer.

In addition, he said, "The governor has sent the U.S. attorney's office ... a letter saying she stands by to cooperate fully and give him any assistance he requires."

Federal authorities declined to discuss the matter.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Gerald Carruth in Austin said, "I'm not in a position to either confirm or deny that report. It's our policy not to comment on pending investigations ... I cannot confirm or deny the existence of any investigation that's currently pending."

The FBI and the U.S. Army Criminal Investigation Command have been investigating the Guard's use of federal and state money for travel, the Corpus Christi Caller-Times has reported.

Komandovsky said he did not know whether the subpoena was part of that reported investigation.

Black working couples see income levels rise

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — Mike and Aldenia Riley are on the way up, working long hours, making good salaries, accumulating wealth.

A Census Bureau study explains the secret of such success when most black families' income has stalled relative to whites: They are married, and both work.

Together they bring home about $50,000 a year, she as a computer systems administrator, he as a warehouse supervisor. A year ago, they bought a house for more than $80,000.

"We consider it a starter home," said Mrs. Riley, 29.

"We've got big goals, big dreams," her 30-year-old husband agreed.

Working couples were the only kind of black family to see their income rise sharply compared with whites over the past two decades, the Census Bureau said in a study released Thursday.

Black single-earner couples and families headed by men or women alone failed to better their incomes compared with whites.

The study found that the ratio of black to white median incomes for all families did not significantly change from 1967 to 1990: blacks made slightly less than 60 cents on the dollar of white median income.

Among working married couples, income rose from 72 cents on the dollar of white median income in 1967 to 85 cents in 1990, the study said.

Why have black families overall fared so poorly if working couples are doing so well?

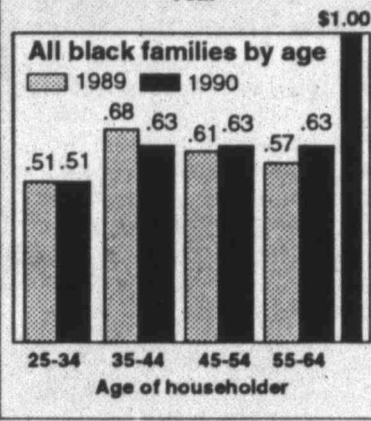

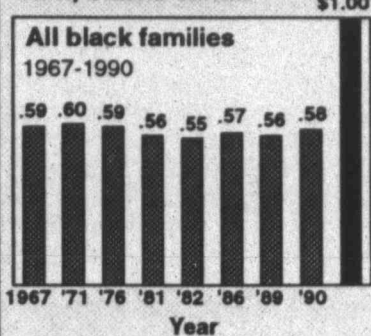

Isabel Sawhill, senior fellow at the Urban Institute, said it's because blacks are less likely to live as married couples today.

Fewer than half of black families have a husband and wife living together today, down from two-thirds 20 years ago. So the married-couple-two-working families — those with higher incomes — have less impact on the average.

And the news for married black couples is not all good. In 1990,

Black income ratio

For each dollar whites earn, blacks earn...

black men and women were nearly twice as likely as whites to work in lower-paying service jobs, said the study's author, Claudette Bennett.

Despite their own progress, the Rileys said they don't ever expect to see parity in income levels for blacks and whites.

Asked why not, Riley said: "Discrimination."

It may not always be overtly racial, but the white majority will always look after itself first, especially in slow economic times, he said, noting that he lost a job when his boss replaced him with the less-qualified son of a friend.

Willis Sheftall, chairman of the economics department at Morehouse College in Atlanta, agrees that slow economic times affect the income gap.

The loss of high-paying manufacturing jobs has hurt black family income, Sawhill said.

"It's like we're falling back in the hole. You gotta cut back. Some things the children want, you can't get."

Brian Coleman
Carpenter

The earnings of men with little education "have dropped like a stone over the last 20 years, and that means that in order to achieve the middle-class dream, you pretty much have to have two earners," she said.

Brian Coleman, a divorced 29-year-old carpenter paying child support for two children, said it's a struggle to get by on his income of about $23,000 a year.

"It's like we're falling back in the hole," he said. "You gotta cut back. Some things the children want, you can't get."

Families headed by women without husbands — nearly half of all black families — typically earn less than $12,000 a year, which is below the poverty line for a family of four.

Black families in general had median incomes of $21,548 in 1991, $125 more than the year before. But that amounted to only 57 cents for every dollar earned by white families.

Here are 1991 median income figures for the nation's 7.5 million black families and 56.8 million white families:

- Overall: Blacks, $21,548; whites, $37,783.
- Couples, when the wives work: Blacks, $41,353; whites, $48,802.
- Couples, when the wives don't work: Blacks, $20,288; whites, $30,792.
- Families headed by women alone: Blacks, $11,414; whites, $19,547.

POW picture getting very messy over time

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — On March 29, 1973, Vietnam veteran and anti-war activist John Kerry sat "riveted" to his television set watching President Nixon announce the return of "all of our American POWs."

Local newspapers quoted Kerry as saying, "Thank God all the prisoners are coming home."

Today, as chairman of a Senate committee investigating the POW-MIA committee, Kerry is learning that Nixon's statement was probably false and that his top advisers knew it.

For the past week, the Democratic senator from Massachusetts and other members of the Senate Select Committee on POW-MIA Affairs sat riveted as one top Nixon administration official after another said there was strong evidence that more POWs were alive in Southeast Asia after the president said all were returning.

The officials disagreed on matters of interpretation. Henry Kissinger called it a "flat out lie" to suggest that officials willfully abandoned known prisoners. All said they had tried their best under tumultuous political circumstances.

And some, including Kissinger and Republicans on the committee, made a concerted effort to blame the Congress of 1973 for cutting off funding for the war and making it impossible to enforce peace terms with North Vietnam.

But when all the bickering was over, few witnesses challenged the basic idea, supported by scores of newly declassified documents, that the best intelligence estimates indicated scores of POWs might have been alive when U.S. forces pulled out of Vietnam.

A marathon hearing Thursday focused on the critical period between the signing of the Paris peace accords in January 1973 and Nixon's dramatic speech at the end of the following March.

Rebels vow to continue the violence

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

LIMA, Peru — Maoist rebels detonated a string of bombs in the capital, backing up their captured leader's claim the 12-year guerrilla war will continue.

President Alberto Fujimori, meanwhile, stressed that security measures had been severely tightened to prevent the escape of rebel leader Abimael Guzman before his trial next week.

Shining Path rebels bombed three banks in central Lima on Thursday, shattering windows and buckling doors but causing no casualties. The guerrillas also detonated three bombs in the National Engineering University, a one-time stronghold now occupied by the army.

Security forces entered another center of Shining Path influence, San Marcos University, seizing rebel propaganda and detaining six students.

The 57-year-old Guzman, captured in Lima on Sept. 12, spoke in public for the first time since going underground in the late 1970s.

Dressed in prison stripes, the leader of the Shining Path movement denied that his capture meant defeat and vowed that the group would keep fighting until it seized power.

"We're going through a difficult moment, let's not fool ourselves," the bearded Guzman said. "But the people's war will overcome without a doubt."

Pacing the cage and repeatedly thrusting his right fist into the air, Guzman said the country was in the worst crisis in its history and swore to bring about revolutionary change.

"Once more the nation, our history, are at risk," he said. "But the war is a fact. Maoism will fight without quarter."

Guzman spoke for 10 minutes and ignored questions from reporters.

BSH salutes:

The Big Spring Herald, each week, recognizes local persons and groups who who have been singled out for special honors or who have helped make a difference in the quality of life in and around our community.

- United Way of Big Spring/Howard County for bringing for San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros to Big Spring for the annual campaign kickoff.
- Greater Big Spring Rotary Club for its Free Enterprise Day presentation to juniors and seniors of Big Spring and Forsan high schools. The presentation took a light-hearted approach to presenting the differences in capitalism and communism and also featured Cisneros in a question-and-answer session.
- Friends of the Mountain, a support group to help maintain and expand the viability of Big Spring State Recreation Area on Scenic Mountain. The group meets at the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce next Tuesday at 2 p.m.
- West Texas Center for the Arts for featuring the works of Texas artist David Townsend during September and October and for bringing renowned Texas musician Allen Wayne Damron to the community on Oct. 10.
- Big Spring Shrine Club for its efforts on behalf of the community and for bringing the annual Shrine Circus to town. First-year chairman Woodie Howell took a chance by moving the circus indoors and the move paid off in an enjoyable outing for all.
- Coahoma's LeeAnn Reid and Stanton's Ashley Graves, selected as Homecoming Queen at their respective high schools.
- Coahoma's Steven New and Grady's Scottie Welch, named offensive and defensive players of the week by the Big Spring Herald for their respective efforts last week.

It took too long on 'right thing'

Thursday afternoon, embattled Texas Railroad Commissioner Lena Guerrero resigned her post, succumbing to the pressures that built after it became public she lied about graduating from the University of Texas and about being a member of prestigious Phi Beta Kappa.

She told supporters who filled the Texas House chamber where she served for six years that she wanted "to be elected with a clean slate."

She told the audience, "As a matter of principal, this is the only step I can take to make up for what has happened. I believe it is the right thing to do. It is the best thing I can do to show you just how sorry I am."

It's a shame that it took Guerrero, the first appointee named when Gov. Ann Richards took office, a day short of two weeks decide "the right thing to do."

Richards stood by her appointee, as one would expect. But as more and more evidence surfaced regarding Guerrero's untruths, Richards continued to stand by her appointee . . . raising questions about whether the Governor was more interested in honesty and integrity in state government or the future of her protegee.

We agree that Guerrero should have resigned, but we believe that had she addressed her situation openly and honestly when it first came up, she could have avoided most — if not all — of the problems created by her denials.

"I was young and I made a mistake," she could have told us. "I was wrong and my academic record was distorted, but look at my record of service . . . look at what I've done since then."

But she didn't.

She told us she thought she had graduated. Then, she told us she was four hours short of a degree. When Guerrero made her transcript public, it showed she was 19 hours short of a degree and that instead of being an honors graduate, she had a 2.5 grade point average on a 4.0 scale. She was an average student — nothing more, nothing less and nothing to be ashamed of.

Now, Guerrero, a person who has done a credible job as a member of the Texas Railroad Commission, must overcome a number of obstacles to regain the seat — and none of them relate to the duties of the office she once held.

She'll try to move the campaign to issues pertinent to the industry and she'll try to capitalize on questions regarding her opponent's integrity and personal ties to oil and gas.

She may have some successes.

She must put voters at ease. She'll still keep a majority of Democrats and she'll still lose a majority of Republicans, but this was a race that was virtually dead-even when the scandal broke.

She must get those undecided voters that comprised 30 percent of the electorate to ask a question other than, "What else has she lied to us about?"

It might not have been such a monumental task if it hadn't taken her a day short of two weeks to decide "the right thing to do."

Next time, Dan, take aim at Arnold

Enough about Murphy Brown and her baby. What about Arnold Schwarzenegger, one of the biggest of all Hollywood stars?

Here we have a staunch Republican, who was appointed by George Bush as chairman of the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports.

At the GOP convention, Republicans were tripping over each other to get their pictures taken with Big Arnold. Proper Republican ladies pleaded to be allowed to touch a dainty finger to his bicep.

Ah, but what kind of films does this prominent Republican star make? What kind of traditional family values does he reflect? Sordid, that's what kind.

And I'm not just talking about the violence, although that's what he's best known for: blood spitting, body parts flying, murder, mayhem, disfigurement and corpses strewn from the screen to the popcorn machine.

In one of his "Terminator" movies, he barged into a police station and blew away every cop in the place. Mowed them down like empty bottles on a fence. Was there any compassion for the family values of the policemen — their weeping widows and wailing offspring? No, Arnold coolly stepped over their lifeless bodies and went looking for someone else to shoot.

Mike Royko

But does Dan Quayle, in his crusade against Hollywood, say anything about that? When asked about Arnold's mayhem during a TV interview, Quayle's lips trembled, his hands fluttered and he burst into tears and screamed: "Don't ask me about Arnold because I am afraid he will crack my head like a walnut."

(Actually, I'm not sure about that because I dozed off during the interview and maybe I dreamed Quayle said it. But it's probably what he felt in his quivering soul.)

As I said, though, the violence is only a part of it. There is also the issue of illegitimate children, which got Quayle into his great spat with Murphy Brown.

Now, remember, all Murphy Brown did was have a one-night fling with her ex-husband, get pregnant, and have the child.

(And she didn't even apply for welfare or take much maternity leave from her job, which should have been of some comfort to Quayle.)

But consider what happened in a couple of Arnold's movies. In "Twins," Arnold's mom was inseminated with the sperm of nine brilliant men. I'm not sure how it was done. Maybe they mixed it all up in one of those milkshake machines.

So what kind of family values were those? Arnold and Danny DeVito, his twin, being illegitimate and having not one, but nine fathers? Genetic engineering? Test-tube parenting? Is that in the Republican platform?

I'll be interested in hearing Quayle's response if, during his debate with Al Gore, he is asked: "And, Mr. Vice President, how do you feel about Arnold Schwarzenegger, the chairman of your commander in chief's fitness program, playing the role of the offspring of a woman who was inseminated with the seed of nine men? Is that the kind of family value you would recommend to your fellow Hoosiers, hey?"

And there was similar hanky-panky in "The Terminator" movie. There a man comes back from the future to the present and makes the female star of the movie pregnant. (Although we don't actually see the deed, it is assumed that he does it the old-fashioned way, rather than through test tubes.)

He wasn't even the young woman's ex-husband. She hardly knew the fellow. One day he comes popping out of the future. A day or two later, they are having 'what used to be known as a "quickie."

This is the key to the movie's plot, since the illegitimate tyke will grow up to be a great hero in the future and fight the forces of evil who are taking over the world, which is why the forces of evil send the Terminator back in to the past to kill her and prevent the pregnancy, so that the great hero is never born and can't fight the forces of evil.

Well, fighting the forces of evil is a worthy cause, I suppose, and even the most prim Republicans would probably forgive the future hero's mom her indiscretion if it preserves life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

But how does Dan Quayle know that Murphy Brown's tot won't grow up to be a great hero and fight the forces of evil? And if that happens, won't he feel silly? Quayle, I mean, not Murphy Brown's kid.

Anyway, if Quayle is going to wage war on Hollywood's warped view of family values, he should have a heart-to-heart talk with the chairman of the President's fitness and sports commission.

Quayle might ask him: "Nine fathers? Arnold, what kind of sport is that?"

Reliable source ponders politics

By CHARLES McDOWELL
Richmond Times-Dispatch

WASHINGTON — There are several things I admire about my political informant, Reliable Source, besides his passably reliable record, of course.

He is willing to meet in the bur station for lunch rather than going to a fancy restaurant and making a public spectacle of being a secret source.

He does not treat Murphy Brown and Dan Quayle as terribly important competitors for the soul of America.

He has a sense of humor about the press. He razzes us, for instance, for the pitiful weakness of our bias against Republicans in five of the last six presidential elections.

As a matter of fact, he brought up bias at lunch the other day. He said a poll by the Times Mirror Center had found that 49 percent of voters believe journalists' political preferences sway their reporting.

"On the other hand," Reliable Source said brightly, "another 47 percent said your prejudice is apparent only sometimes or seldom."

"Sometimes and seldom are positive judgments?" I asked.

"Actually, you have to look at the whole survey," he said. "Deeper down, it says a massive 71 percent thought the press had been fair in its coverage of President Bush, while 74 percent thought the press was fair to Bill Clinton."

"So what are we supposed to do with all this credibility, Reliable?"

"Glad you asked," he said. "I think the media should come right out and say Clinton has a dominating lead, and the time has come for much more candid national discussion of the deficit and other real problems."

"He's that far ahead?"

"The new Washington Post-ABC News poll says it's Clinton 58 percent, Bush 37 percent. That's 21 points! Likely voters, not random folks. Gallup found two weeks ago that Bush was trailing by 15 points. No candidate so far behind in September has ever won the presidency," Reliable Source said.

"But hasn't Clinton's support tended to be kind of soft?"

"It has but it's getting more solid," he said. "Now Gallup says 46 percent of the electorate sees no chance they'll vote for Bush. Just 32 percent sees no chance they'll vote for Clinton."

"How about Clinton and the draft issue, personal trust, whatever negative TV ads bash him in the final month?" I asked.

"Can a candidate so far behind really risk not having any debates at all?"

"Conventional wisdom says no," Reliable Source said.

Rape Crisis needs your help

I need a computer (386SX or better chip package), a new car, some carpet for the hall, a riding lawn mower and a Lamborghini. So please send your dollars to 1-800-555-GARY.

We all need material things, and we all hate having every organization in the world hitting us up for cash.

But listen up:

I was shocked the other day. For years, I've had this picture of the most gorgeous, sexy, Lamborghini Countach, languishing in the shadow of the Golden Gate Bridge.

For those of you who don't know, this is the hottest, low-slung, Italian sports car ever made. It's horsepower and handling capabilities are rivaled only by its prestige and sticker price.

Anyway, I've coveted this lusty piece of machinery for as long as I can remember. Last time I heard a roll-out price, it was well over $100,000. I might as well have hoped to buy Maui.

The picture has been hanging around for a long time. It's actually kind of neat — the juxtaposition of two very different types of engineering art.

But I digress.

Anyway, I was shocked with the realization that anyone who would buy that car, is either an idiot or a bazzillionaire. Suddenly, I realized desiring this car is stupid and futile.

I mean, for that kind of money, I can think of a thousand better uses . . . No. More than that. The list is enormous.

Wierd.

I can remember — a decade ago, when owning a Countach (Kun-tash) represented the end-all-beat-all of human existence.

Now, on the other hand, I realize the current-day price of that vehicle is roughly equivalent to the total budget of the United Way of Big Spring-Howard County for this year.

For the price of one arrogant prestige car, the United Way can fund 10 area organizations, which provide service to the area's young, elderly, homeless, dispossessed and others that need a helping hand. They help fund 10 organizations from Girl Scouts to the Salvation Army; from after-school activities for children of working mothers, to helping re-house tornado survivors.

I'm not going to make one of those "thousand points of light" speeches, but if we in Howard County have one reason for feeling superior to major metropolitan centers like LA, Dallas or New York — it's because of our willingness to help one another.

I've made plenty of mistakes and misjudgments over the years. But I know that if someday I find my back against the wall, I not only have friends to turn to, but have organizations in town that will help just because I need it!

That's a wondrous thing, not something you're likely to find in Chicago.

But United Way is struggling. Because of reductions in state funding, the Rape Crisis/Victim Services Center desperately needs to become the 11th organization funded under the local United Way umbrella.

But the United Way board simply does not have enough to go around. They're hoping to maintain the same level of funding as last year (and they made last year's goal only by the skin of their teeth).

I'm as scared of the economic future as anybody else, but whatever you can give. If it's only $10, then it's only $10, but give what you can.

Probably everybody, getting more than minimum wage, can come up with $40 or $50 (Hey, I live from check to check, just like a lot of you, and I'm going to try).

Next year, I'd really like to see Rape Crisis/Victim Services get funded by the United Way. Lisa Brooks and the others down there do one heck of a lot with the shoestring budget they have. Last year they helped over 600 victims of various crimes.

Balance is the key for Steers

By MIKE BUTTS
Staff Writer

According to the old nursery rhyme the cow jumped over the moon.

Nobody in Big Spring has witnessed that phenomenon. But anyone in town who's seen the high school football team play this year has seen plenty of Steers taking to the air.

While the Big Spring Steers passing game isn't about to challenge such wide-open programs as San Angelo Central or Killen High, its yardage total places it well ahead of any other District 3-4A team. Big Spring also possesses — with the exception of probable non-contenders San Angelo Lake View and Pecos, which have yardage totals well below the Steers' — a much more balanced attack than any other district school.

And that balance is no accident. "That's one thing we've really strived to do since I got into this position," Steer head coach Dwight Butler says. "Coming from the defensive side of the ball it's always much harder to work against somebody more balanced."

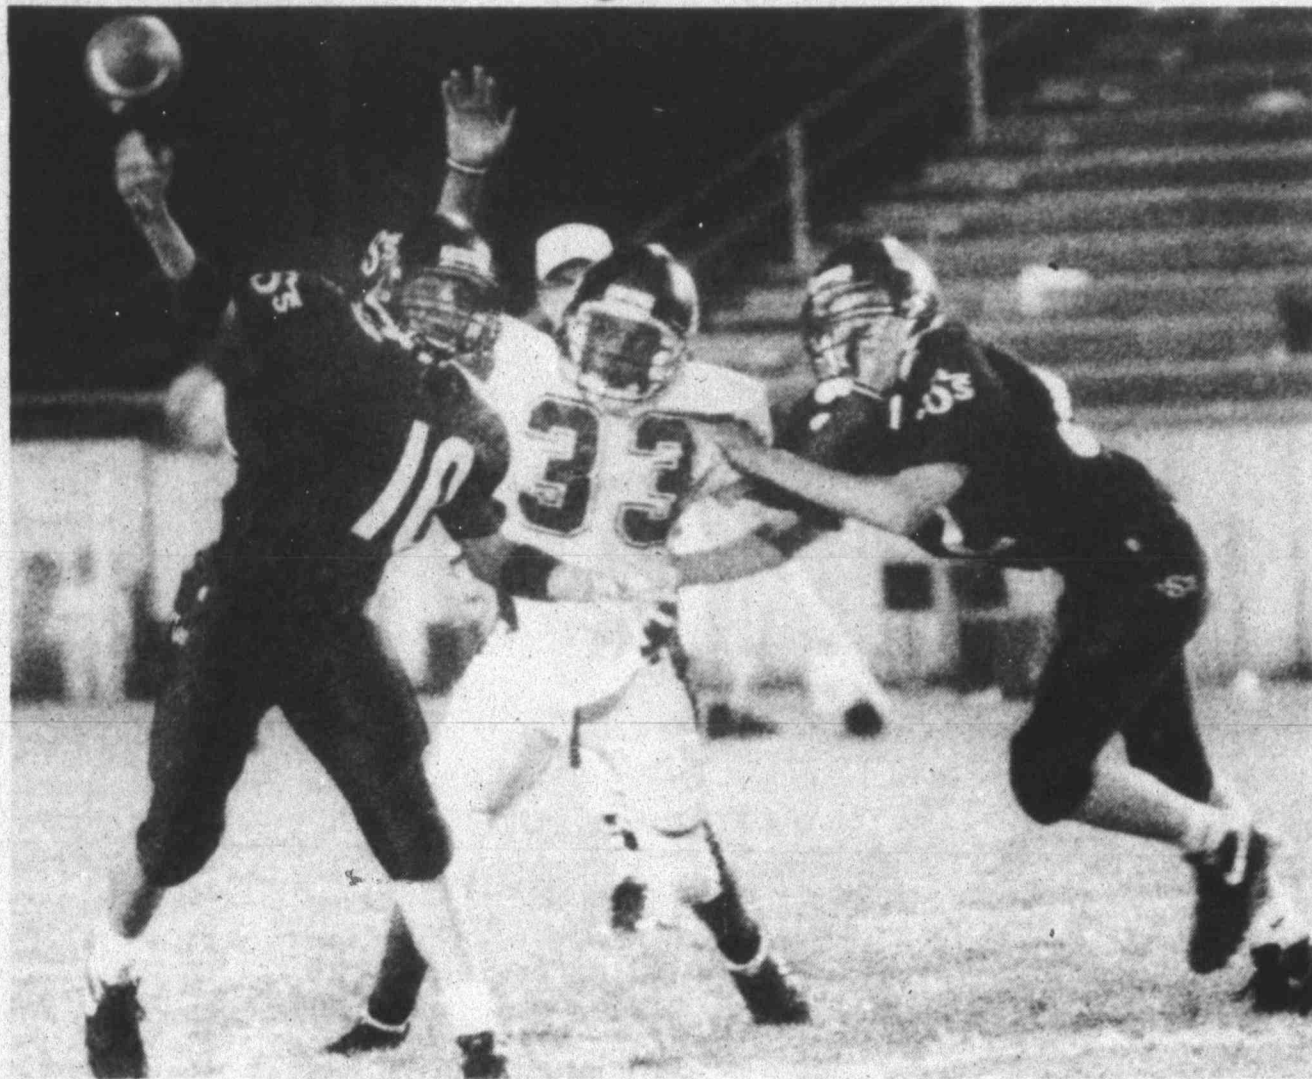

Big Spring's 668 yards passing far outpaces the totals of the other top teams in District 3-4A. In fact Sweetwater, Monahans and Andrews combined passing yardage of 645 falls short of the Steers' total.

"You look at successful college teams and successful pro teams and they're always throwing the ball," receivers coach Tim Tannehill says. "You've got to have a balanced attack to be successful. You can't rely (completely) on the run or the pass. We try to set up the run by throwing the ball."

Steer receivers Oscar Cervantes, Tim Pearson and Pat Martinez fill the top three spots in individual catching yardage in the district. And tag-team quarterbacks Wes Hughes and Clay Klatt rank second and third among district signal callers, combining for 36 of 69 passes for seven touchdowns.

Big Spring's rushing and passing totals of 592 and 668 are a far cry from the lopsided totals of Sweetwater (751 and 168) Andrews (1,114 and 234) and Monahans (957 and 243).

Butler says the success of the passing game this early in the Big Spring Steers senior quarterback Clay Klatt (10) gets ready to throw a pass against the Lubbock High Westerners last Friday. Tonight the season has surpassed his expectations. Last season the Steers came into the year with a quarterback who had started 13 games. With the relative greenhorn combination of Hughes and Klatt the team is about 100 yards ahead of their three-game passing total of 1991.

Steers play Snyder at 8 p.m. at Memorial Stadium.

"That could fall apart anytime, but here early both quarterbacks are doing a lot better job than I anticipated," Butler says.

The Steer offense has 36 or 37 formations and is adding more this week, Tannehill says. That makes it tougher for defenses to prepare for Big Spring.

"I'd certainly hate to try to defense us every week," says Big Spring defensive coordinator Jay Kennedy. "You spend so much time worrying about the different sets it takes away from teaching time."

Tannehill says Big Spring likes to keep defenses guessing by throwing in any down and yardage situation and running the ball even in formations that include three or four receivers.

The Steers offensive line has done a decent job of pass protection, allowing seven sacks in over 70 pass plays. Kennedy feels the offensive line is better than last year's because of a more consistent group of starters. In '91 injuries and attempts to find the right mix led to changes in the starting front positions.

"We had kids last year that were good run blockers but not good pass blockers, and we had to find a combination that worked," Kennedy says.

Tight end Cervantes, fourth among state 4A receivers with 15 receptions for 301 yards, and wingback Pearson have their own explanations for the Steers' passing success.

"We're just going out and catching the ball like we're supposed to," Cervantes says.

"We get away from guys a lot better than last year," Pearson says. "We're finding the open spots."

As for the 37-plus offensive formations the players have to learn, Cervantes isn't especially bothered by the extra homework.

"The formations are pretty complicated, but once you've had them for three years they're just locked in your head," says the Steers' leading receiver.

Is it about gender, or is it about money?

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAS VEGAS — Two decades ago it was an admitted male chauvinistic pig against a proposition of Women's Lib in a tennis match that galvanized the nation.

When Martina Navratilova and Jimmy Connors resurrect the mixed-gender tennis tradition tonight after a 19-year absence, however, the battle of the sexes has been reduced to a mere tussle over money — $500,000 to be exact.

With no apologies to Billie Jean King and Bobby Riggs, Navratilova and Connors meet in a best 2-out-of-3 set match at Caesars Palace that isn't likely to solve the gender question, but will make both tennis superstars a bit richer.

"It's an entertainment event rather than an emotional battle of sexes," Navratilova admits. "If we'd played this 20 years ago it would have been more tense because of the times."

A half million dollars in prize money will go to the winner, but both players will receive huge fees — reportedly up to $500,000 apiece — just to show up.

Unlike the King-Riggs meeting, the pre-match hype has been muted this time around, although Connors has vowed revenge for Riggs' loss.

"This has been pretty much in good spirits," Navratilova said. "I think it's going to be very entertaining, very competitive."

Connors is a 4-1 favorite despite agreeing in pre-match negotiations to give up half his doubles' alley and being limited to only one serve.

"I just want to avoid being hampered," the 40-year-old five-time U.S. Open champion said.

"It doesn't prove anything," said John McEnroe, Connors' long-time rival who's in Minneapolis for the Davis Cup semifinals between the United States and Sweden. "I mean, Connors is only getting one serve and he has to give away four more feet. And he's still gonna win, 2 and 2. So I don't see what that possibly can prove except how much money you can make in a shorter period of time."

The match hasn't exactly captured the nation's attention, but it has done well enough to sell out the 14,100-seat stadium and promoters are hoping as many as 200,000 households across the nation spend $24.95 to watch on pay-per-view.

What they'll see should be better tennis than the then 55-year-old Riggs put on in an Astrodome match that drew more than 30,000 people. That, despite the fact Connors and Navratilova are on the downside of their careers.

"I've been waiting 20 years to get even," Connors said.

No. 24 Kansas falls

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAWRENCE, Kan. — After atoning for an embarrassing loss to Purdue with a convincing 27-23 victory over No. 24 Kansas Thursday night, the California Bears may be headed back to prominence.

California senior running back Russell White carried 39 times for 153 yards and ran his career all-purpose yardage total to 4,273, erasing Chuck Muncie's school record of 4,194.

White and wide receiver Sean Dawkins accounted for 251 of Cal's 416 yards.

Cal never trailed in the first night game at Kansas since 1931.

"We had to prove to ourselves about where we were," defensive end Scott Roseman said. "I think we're back."

Kansas, which was last ranked in 1976, closed to 20-17 on Maurice Douglas' 31-yard touchdown run with 4:22 left in the third period following Charley Bowen's 21-yard interception return.

Moments later Dan Eichloff tried a 47-yard field goal that could have tied it, but Brad Bowers blocked the kick and the ball rolled to the Kansas 40. Six plays later, Barr's 11-yard touchdown pass to Dawkins restored the Bears' 10-point lead.

Snyder (2-1) at Big Spring (2-1)

For the past several years, this one has always been a knock-down, drag-out affair, especially since former Big Spring assistant Jack Dorsett is the defensive coordinator at Snyder.

The Steers have played consistently well in three games, despite turning the ball over five times versus Lubbock Estacado. Snyder played well in wins over Sweetwater and Wylie, but stunk-it-up in a homecoming loss to Monahans.

Tonight both teams will play well. But Big Spring's offensive versatility will be major factor.
BIG SPRING 20, SNYDER 14

Coahoma (2-1) at Colorado City (2-1)

These two team renew an intense I-20 rivalry after a year's absence.

The Colorado City Wolves finally get to come home after a three-game road trip. The Wolves lost last week to a good Slaton team 27-0. The Coahoma Bulldogs are coming off a 39-7 thumping of Tahoka, a game in which they had almost 400 yards rushing.

This one is a toss up, the Wolves at home, but Coahoma has shown a better offensive attack. The coin landed in Coahoma's favor.
COAHOMA 21, COLORADO CITY 17

Alpine (3-0) at Greenwood (1-2)

The Greenwood Rangers get their second consecutive home game against a good, experienced Alpine Bucks team.

Alpine has been impressive in wins over Crane, Marfa and Dimmitt. Greenwood looked good against Coahoma, got manhandled by Fort Stockton and edged out by Denver City.

The odds say go with the Bucks. But in what you could say could be a minor upset, the Rangers will hold on to the football and come away with a win.

Iraan (2-1) at Stanton (2-1)

This one is for keeps. The district opener for both teams. The Iraan Braves are picked to be one of the front-runners in District 6-2A and Stanton is picked to be among the cellar-dwellers.

Iraan will be a contender and Stanton won't be a cellar-dweller. But on this particular night go with the Braves and winning tradition.
IRAAN 18, STANTON 14

Garden City (2-1) at Robert Lee (3-0)

The Robert Lee Steers are rolling along with a surprising perfect mark. The Garden City Bearkats got a good ol' country whipping from Roscoe last week.

Robert Lee has a team of good athletes but they haven't played the caliber of teams Garden City has. Therefore the Bearkats will get it back together this week, but it won't be easy.
GARDEN CITY 24, ROBERT LEE 14

O'Donnell (0-3) at Forsan (0-3)

A homecoming tale of two teams with the same records but different foundations. Forsan is a young team that is on a 13-game losing streak. O'Donnell is a young team that lost virtually all of its players from a 10-2 squad last season.

Forsan is finally starting to move the ball on offense. A couple of early scores will give the defense a boost. O'Donnell will battle back however. But in the end a Chris Evans to Clark Fields touchdown pass will be the difference.

End of losing streak. Happy homecoming. Upset Special of the Week.

Grady (2-1) at Midland Trinity (0-1)

The Grady Wildcats pulled off a big upset last week with a 33-21 win

"A Brief History of The Dunlap Stores"

One hundred years ago, Hillard G.W. (George Washington) Dunlap arrived in Wagoner Indian Territory, now Oklahoma, to engage in selling merchandise in a General Store.

He was born in Crockett County Tennessee and later moved with his family to Russellville, Arkansas. He clerked in a General Store until he accumulated enough money to move on to Wagoner Indian Territory. At that time, his family consisted of his wife, Julia and several children including three sons, Ira, Carl and Clyde. His sons later became partners with him in what was to become the largest Department Store chain in Oklahoma at that time, with 20 stores.

In the early days, Hillard Dunlap may have sold from a wagon. However, he soon opened a store, in Wagoner, with his cousin, Harvey Taylor. This store was known as the "Blue Star" or "Star Store", as it had a blue star painted on the front of the building. Soon after that, it became Dunlap and Taylor and then Dunlaps, as he bought out his cousin Taylor.

During this time, the Katy Railroad was pushing South through Indian Territory and Mr. Dunlap and his son, Ira, began opening stores at construction towns along the railroad. It was during this time that the younger brothers Carl and Clyde joined the business.

The early stores were General Stores, selling dry goods, groceries, hardware, guns and coffins. Later the stores sold only dry goods and staple groceries. In 1915, the Company was joined by a young man who would eventually, with Ira Dunlap and Ira Dunlap Jr., expand The Dunlap Company into the largest independently owned and operated Department Store chain in the southwest. His name was Retha R. Martin. Through his guidance, beginning in the early 30's, the company grew into the present 48 store group. His untimely death, in an automobile accident, having been head of the company for more than 50 years, ended a prominent retail career.

Corporate Headquarters are now located in Fort Worth with second generation, Reg Martin, as Chairman of the Board and his brother Edward Martin, as President.

During the late 30's, through the effort of Ira Dunlap Sr., who was the Companies' location finder, stores were opened in Hobbs, New Mexico in 1938, Odessa, Texas in 1939, Midland, Texas in 1942 and Lubbock, Texas in 1943. The Big Spring Store was opened in 1975 with the aquisition of the Hemphill Wells Store. More recent Dunlap stores are located in Abilene, Amarillo, Pampa, San Angelo and Victoria, Texas.

In addition to The Dunlap Group, there are a number of other stores trading under the names of Stripling & Cox, The White House, Lintz, Russell's, M.M. Cohn, Clarks, Gabriels, Vandevors, Goldstein-Migel, McClurkans, Steketees, Porteous, Schreiners and Kerrs. These stores total 48 in all, and make-up the largest independently owned group of retail department stores in the Southwest. Three generations of Dunlaps are presently active in the Company, Ira G. Dunlap, Jr., former President, is now Corporate Senior Vice-President of Store Operations and Grandson, Jeff Dunlap is still in school but works part-time in the Corporate Office.

Supporters hug Lena Guerrero as she leaves the House chamber of the State Capitol in Austin after resigning from the Texas Railroad Commission.

Richards: Lena still has a shot at position

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

AUSTIN — Gov. Ann Richards says Lena Guerrero still has a shot at winning back the seat on the Texas Railroad Commission that she gave up.

"I think she will be a very tough contender," Richards said Thursday.

Ms. Guerrero, 34, resigned from the commission Thursday, almost two weeks after it was revealed that she had falsely claimed to have been an honors school student and graduate of the University of Texas.

She said she wanted to wipe the slate clean and let voters decide her political fate against Republican Barry Williamson, a Dallas oilman.

"When the public and the people of Texas get an opportunity to see both of these candidates and hear both of their records, I think she is going to do very well," Richards said.

Richards said in 1991 that her appointment of Ms. Guerrero to the commission signaled a new age in Texas of inclusive politics. Ms. Guerrero was the first Hispanic and first woman to serve on the commission.

On Thursday, Richards said she did not believe that the subsequent controversy surrounding Ms. Guerrero would reflect on her.

"I think people will judge me on what I do. I don't think they judge me on someone else," she said.

Republicans were less forgiving. The GOP's Carole Keeton Rylander, a former Railroad Commission candidate, said, "Shame on you Ann Richards. Lena Guerrero is Ann Richards' New Texas. I reject it, and the people of Texas will reject it. I look forward to a future Texas that rewards and encourages our Texas traditions of trustworthiness and veracity."

But Richards said the incident shows that "we are all very human beings. Public officials are no more, no less... they are not endowed with super human characteristics."

Texas Democratic Party executive director Ed Martin said Ms. Guerrero faces an uphill battle against Williamson.

"It's a real, real tough call. By going straight to the people, making her apologies... she is now in the fight of her life for the trust in her that she's fought to earn as an elected official," he said.

The Libertarian Party urged voters to reject Ms. Guerrero and Williamson by electing its candidate Richard Draheim, a bank auditor from Rockwall.

Symphony association season begins Saturday

HERALD STAFF REPORT

The Big Spring Symphony Association launches its 13th season Saturday at 8 p.m. with a performance by the Big Spring Symphony Orchestra at the Municipal Auditorium.

Gene Chartier Smith will conduct. Following the inaugural concert, the Big Spring Symphony Guild will host a reception in the auditorium lobby for concert goers.

The evening's program will feature "Festive Overture" (Shostakovich); "Adagio for Strings" (Barber); "Lieutenant Kije Suite," Kije's Birth, Song, Kije's Death (Prokofiev); overture to "The Italian in Algiers" (Rossini); "Invitation to the Dance," (Weber), and "Bolero," (Ravel).

Tickets to the concert, including booklets of season tickets, will be available at the door. The five-concert season ticket is $35 for adults and $25 for seniors and students, representing a substantial savings over single-ticket admissions, according to symphony officials.

This year's printed concert program features the largest number of ads of any past season, said Melinda Clark, advertising sales chairman. The program contains 116 ads by Big Spring business and corporate supporters, for a total contribution of $8,207.

"We were moved by the enthusiasm shown by local businesses in support of our symphony this year," said Clark. "Our sincere thanks."

Court refuses to hear case

By CONNIE SWINNEY
Staff Writer

The Texas Supreme Court refused this week to hear the appeal of a local woman requesting money from the Big Spring Independent School District for Worker's Compensation.

The court's decision upholds district and appeals court judgments that Macki Millaway was not injured as a result of her employment for the district.

"We had a doctor who said she was injured because of her job, and they had one that said she wasn't," said Abner Burnett, Millaway's attorney.

In February 1988, Millaway suffered a heart attack at the district's bus barn. Her attorney argued she had the attack because she strained herself opening and closing a bus entrance gate.

Millaway had approached the Industrial Accident Board requesting Worker's Compensation and was denied.

She appealed to a Howard County district court, and later that year a jury determined her attack was not job-related.

The Court of Appeals also upheld the judgement.

"The fact that you're working for someone and have a heart attack does not mean you're entitled to compensation from your employer," said Mike McKinney, the Worker's Compensation attorney arguing against the plaintiffs.

"It's already been looked at three times," he said. "I think it was a fair and proper judgement."

Millaway, 69, had worked for BSISD for 11 years as a bus driver and lunchroom cashier. She said she did not want to comment on the case.

Sheriff's log

The Howard County Sheriff's Department reported the following incidents:

- Librado Garza Canales Jr., 36, of Big Spring, was arrested for revocation of probation for driving while intoxicated, second offense.
- Crude oil worth $2,200, reportedly, was illegally pumped from a tank battery near Chalk on Highway 821. Sheriff's deputies have recorded tracks and area checking with potential buyers for the 100 barrels of missing crude.

budget, saying she preferred across-the-board raises.

"They're always hitting the water," she said of the rates.

Councilman John Coffee, who two weeks ago voted no on the budget, tax rate and utility rates, was absent. He opposed the budget and tax rates because no money was allotted to the Spring City Senior Citizens Center. He said he opposed the utility rate changes because he would rather the new city manager, due next month, be involved.

Also absent Tuesday was Councilman Charles Beil.

Next year's budget, effective Oct. 1, would spend 2 percent less than this year but is not expected to keep up with the "anticipated accelerated rate" of decay of the city's infrastructure.

In unrelated business, the council on Tuesday also:

- Approved on the first of two scheduled readings several traffic ordinance changes that include erecting barricades at Marcy School on Connally Street between Wasson and Laurie, offsetting the center line on Scurry Street between 5th Street and 10th Street, installing no-parking signs on the east side of Goliad Street from the south side parking lot of Goliad School and with no-parking times the same as school zone times.
- Accepted annual service contract bids.

"For 12 years, she misled the people of Texas. Then when confronted, she continued to lie," Williamson said. "It's sad to see a once-promising political career come apart like Lena's has."

A rising Democratic Party star, Guerrero had addressed the party's national convention in July.

She was elected to the Texas House from an Austin district in 1984. She was re-elected in 1986, 1988 and 1990.

On Dec. 3, 1990, Gov.-elect Richards announced that her first appointment would be naming Guerrero as the first woman and first Hispanic to serve on the commission.

Richards had called that appointment of her protégé "historic" and one that would "send a message to the people of Texas" that state government was being opened to all.

Recently, however, Guerrero's academic background was called into question.

Interim pastor Alan Abraham is guiding First Christian through a period of transition and setting goals for the future.

Planning to grow First Christian members set goals

By DEBBIE LINCECUM
Features Editor

The congregation of First Christian Church began to face the future Saturday.

About 40 adults of all ages met with interim pastor Alan Abraham for a seven-hour, in-depth planning session. They began designing a plan to take the church family where it wants to go.

"God brought us to this place," said Abraham, whose specialty as a pastor is leading churches through transitions. "We wanted to find out what he is calling us to do now."

So church members spent the entire day at Circle Six Ranch, 30 minutes from their homes. They worked in small groups and compiled information as a larger unit.

As a tool, the congregation followed a planning program, "Twelve Keys to an Effective Church," by Kennon L. Callahan. A Methodist minister and frequent consultant, Callahan published his planning method.

First Christian members began with four basic goals:

- Develop a realistic assessment of the congregation's standing.
- Choose a primary direction for its future.
- Assess the congregation's strengths.
- Choose objectives that advance the congregation's future.

Members began by describing themselves as a medium-sized congregation.

"We didn't want to think of

First Christian Church is affiliated with the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ). The denomination's symbol is the chalice, at right.

ourselves as small and grow ourselves to a small mission," Abraham explained. Then they began to develop a plan for growth.

They discovered 50-60 percent of the local population is "effectively unchurched," meaning they aren't active, involved members of another congregation. Taking other factors into consideration, the congregation decided First Christian there is a pool available of at least 1,700 possible new members in Big Spring.

"We didn't want to run to our weakness," Abraham said. "We want to build on our strengths. That's the important part."

A major concern is choosing a permanent minister for the congregation, but other factors are important as well, Abraham said.

Among their ideas, members are considering expanding the number of "relational" groups in the church — choir rehearsal groups, prayer and study clubs and other ways new members can get involved.

"People have the need to be in some type of relationship to other people," Abraham said. "How can you belong to a sanctuary full of spectators?"

First Christian may create some new groups as part of its plan.

The congregation also plans to make their church more "user friendly" in other ways.

In their evaluation, members discovered there were not enough signs directing visitors to areas of the church. The parking lot needs striping, and access for people with disabilities can be improved.

Abraham said First Christian, as other churches, will need to choose what he calls a "concrete mission objective." That would be a program supervised by the church that would give it a purpose in the community — most likely a service project to help those in need.

At this point, Abraham is pleased with the church's progress. Members will meet again next week to finish their long-range plan.

With changes in attitudes toward church, and attendance dropping, many congregations are turning to new planning methods to meet the requirements of the future.

"This isn't a panacea," Abraham said. "But it gets people talking a common language and thinking along those lines."

"Right now, we're where we should be."

Barney Lara sings one of his religious compositions last month in Palestine. He has composed several songs for the Spanish Hymnal at a catholic church there.

Ways to praise

He writes Spanish hymns

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PALESTINE — Barney Lara will look man right in the eye, but when he sings to his Lord he turns his face toward heaven.

And when he writes songs for the Spanish hymnal at Sacred Heart Catholic Church, he turns his heart the same direction.

"When he is sad, or when he is happy, he gets the urge to write something," said his wife of 15 years, Rose. "It's not very often: every once in a while."

"I sometimes start, I pick up my guitar and just..." he said. "And sometimes I hear a melody that I've never heard before. And I start writing the words."

And when worshippers gather for 5 p.m. Saturday Mass, which Sacred Heart devotes to its Hispanic community, they express what they feel toward God with Lara's words. Some eight songs in the hymnal are his work.

The lyrics are not so much simple as they are straightforward statements Lara makes to a God who, to him, is as alive and active as his five children, Maribel, Rosa, Cynthia, Sylvia and B.G.:

"You are, you are; the King of the Sky;

"You are, you are; the King of Love;

"You are the one that brings comfort to the sad;

"You are our savior."

Lara, 38, has lived in the United States since he was 15 when he came here to help his family in San Luis Potosi, Mexico. And though he's worked in several U.S. cities, he chose to settle in Palestine because the town suited his personality, his wife said.

"He's always been a peaceful man," said Rose. "He was never a wild kid and all that. So he looked for a town that was peaceful."

He supplements his pay at Winkle and Sons Oil Co. by playing mariachi music with his brothers, but his first musical love remains devotional.

"The people ask him to go singing at parties and like that," Rose said.

"But he doesn't care for it. Always, anything for God. Always."

DAV auxiliary

Disabled American Veterans Auxiliary met Sept. 21.

They discussed their Aug. 29 cleanup of the hall. Participants included Omar Cashion, Carl Knappe, Clara Lewis, Tammy Evans, Jennifer Evans and Heidrun Covington. Moral support was given by Bernice Gibbs and Vicki Dittmore.

Coffee and cake was served to patients at the VA Medical Center by Tammy Evans and Heidrun Covington Sept. 12. Members enjoyed hotdogs with all the trimmings after the meeting.

Next meeting is set for Oct. 18, 6:30 p.m. with a hobo supper.

Prison mothers see children

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TULSA, Okla. — The towering double fences topped with razor wire that surround the Bassett Correctional Center for women hold back thieves, murderers, drug offenders and mothers.

For inmate Bonnie Fulton, being separated from her two young children made prison almost unbearable. She feared they would grow up without knowing that she was their mother and that she loved them.

But a program started by the Word of Life Church in Sand Springs allows Ms. Fulton and other mothers in prison from the Tulsa area to see their children up to once each week.

"Without this program, I would hardly ever see my babies," said Ms. Fulton, 25, imprisoned three years ago for possession of methamphetamines and writing bad checks. "After I first came in here, my son considered my mom his mom. That killed me. Now, he knows I am his mom."

Ms. Fulton was sentenced to 12 years in prison. Her children, 5-year-old James and 6-year-old Ashley, live with their grandmother and have been visiting their mother regularly with the help of Open Heart for two years.

Judy McKnight, 56, of Sand Springs founded the Open Heart Ministries about two years ago. Now Open Heart helps unite about 15 Bassett inmates with their children every week.

"I really have a mother's heart for these women," Ms. McKnight said. She said she does not think it is harmful for the children to visit the prison.

"It helps the children understand their mother made a mistake, but that she did not desert them," Ms. McKnight said.

Judy Berry, a psychology professor at the University of Tulsa, agreed with Ms. McKnight that the visits are beneficial for children.

"For the kids the point is visiting their mother," Berry said. "If you separate a mother and her kids for a long period of time, it will be harder for them to connect later. The visits could prevent the mother from becoming a stranger to her children."

Open Heart also has placed six babies born to inmates in church members' homes until the mothers get out of prison.

It also helps Tulsa mothers who have been released from prison go to the grocery and the doctor. Eventually, Ms. McKnight said, Open Heart will be able to run a halfway house.

Since 1987 Bassett has offered a camp program that allows mothers in the Oklahoma City prison to see their children once a week. However, the prison does not provide transportation, so relatives are responsible for bringing the children to the prison from across the state. Many people cannot afford to make the drive.

Open Heart transports the children from the Tulsa area for free.

"If it weren't for Judy and Open Heart, camp wouldn't be as successful as it is," said Felecia Rowland, programs coordinator for Bassett.

Grady and Zelpha Parish help Ms. McKnight by taking children to the prison for visits. The Parishes have transported up to nine children from the Tulsa area to the prison every Tuesday in their van for almost two years.

The Parishes, who have five children, say they love volunteering. During a trip two weeks ago, their passengers were James and Ashley Fulton and 3-year-old Justin Colley.

At the prison, Justin's mom, Pam Colley, could hardly wait to see him.

"I want my baby," she said.

"Where's my baby?"

Ms. Colley was imprisoned for possession of cocaine just before Justin's first birthday.

"This program is letting Justin and me form the bond between us," she said.

25 years of renewal Charismatic anniversary

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOUSTON — The Rev. Richard E. Paulissen was sliding into agnosticism. He celebrated Mass only when he had to, did not pray and had not opened a Bible in three years.

"I was your typical angry young priest," Paulissen said.

A personal encounter with God in 1970 revived his faith and changed his life.

Today, the 60-year-old priest directs the Catholic Charismatic Center, 2500 Bell. As the Catholic charismatic renewal movement marks its 25th anniversary, Paulissen celebrates a Sunday Mass in Houston that draws 800 worshippers. Weekday activities at the center attract 900 people weekly. The priest also oversees 85 parish prayer groups in the Diocese of Galveston-Houston.

Paulissen's turnaround resulted from the charismatic movement's advent in the Roman Catholic Church. The movement, a widespread renewal marked by emotional expressions of faith that swept through mainline churches in the 1960s, moved into Catholic churches in February 1967 during a Pittsburgh-area retreat for 25 Duquesne University students.

Patti Gallagher Mansfield, author of "As By a New Pentecost: The Dramatic Beginning of the Catholic Charismatic Renewal" (Franciscan University Press, $9.95), was among the students who received the "baptism of the Holy Spirit" at that retreat.

Charismatic Catholics believe the outward signs of the baptism include glossolalia, or speaking in tongues, and the ability to heal by faith. For many, charismatic worship is much more joyful and expressive than traditional Catholic services. Worshipers raise their hands in praise and sway to the music. Although the charismatic movement claims roughly 8 percent of the nation's 58 million Catholics, many priests and laity remain skeptical.

Mansfield, who lives in New Orleans, remembers that it was a Saturday night during the retreat when she felt compelled to kneel and pray after going to the retreat house's chapel to invite colleagues to a birthday party.

"I experienced the reality of God's holiness in a way I had never known before," said Mansfield, adding that she fell prostrate on the floor. Others fell in a swoon described as being "slain in the Spirit," some spoke in tongues.

Soon the phenomenon spread to parishes and other college campuses, especially the University of Notre Dame and the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor.

It spread to Catholics of all socioeconomic groups, and was especially strong among lay people.

But back in 1970, Paulissen did not know of the charismatic movement. The church did not recognize charisma, Greek for spiritual gifts, holding that Christianity's Pentecostal phase had ended in apostolic times.

He was in intense inner turmoil, trying to understand the theological and philosophical changes in the church after the Second Vatican Council, or Vatican II. The Council revolutionized the church with changes that included promoting openness to Protestants and redefining the roles of the clergy and laity in the early 1960s.

Paulissen played a major role in the movement's rapid growth during the 1970's in Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico. He established prayer groups, many of which continue today. His spirituality confounded his Maryknoll superiors, and he was allowed to dedicate himself to the charismatic movement.

He first worked from an office on the former Dominican College campus. After the college closed in 1975, St. Nicholas Church, an inner-city parish, offered him a condemned, dilapidated school building that the parish could not afford to demolish.

Paulissen was ready to reject the site when he felt a spiritual prompt to accept it. The renovated center acts as a home parish to many Catholic charismatics. More than 3,000 people pack it when a well-known charismatic speaker is featured, Paulissen said.

Challenges face SBC's new top administrator

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — One of the chief challenges facing the Rev. Morris Chapman as the Southern Baptist Convention's new top administrator is the moderate faction's emerging organization.

Chapman, 51, became president and treasurer of the denomination's executive committee Tuesday, with fundamentalists firmly in charge after a decade of battling moderates for control of the convention.

Chapman, a Kosciusko, Miss., native, leaves the 7,700-member First Baptist Church in Wichita Falls, Texas, to take his new administrative post in Nashville.

The moderates held power within the 15-million member SBC for many decades before fundamentalists convinced grassroots Baptists that moderates had grown too liberal in their interpretations of the Bible.

Moderates have formed a rival organization, the Cooperative Baptist Fellowship.

Not a new denomination in an official sense, the Fellowship has begun sponsoring their own missionaries and seminary, prompting conservative SBC leaders to accuse it of derailing the SBC's traditional missions and agencies.

"It does appear the Fellowship is demanding they have their own way," Chapman said. "It's a mentality of, 'Either I lead or I take my ball and go home.'"

Many moderate churches are shifting contributions from the convention to the Fellowship. The Associated Baptist Press reported last week that contributions to the Fellowship in August totaled $496,857, bringing the year-to-date contributions to $4.3 million, an increase of 63 percent over the same period last year.

Chapman served two terms as president of the Southern Baptist Convention.

The new president of the SBC, elected this summer in New Orleans, is the Rev. H. Edwin Young of Houston.

Chapman succeeds Harold Bennett, who retires from the executive committee on Oct. 1 after 12 years.

"America needs spiritual awakening, and I believe God will use Southern Baptists in that awakening," Chapman told The Tennessean, Nashville's morning newspaper.

Chapman said he hopes to slip a pastoral dimension into his presidency by being available to pastors who face burnout and as a mediator to congregations paralyzed by inner feuding.

Boy meets girl ends in winter wedding

DEAR ABBY: Remember the saga of Patty and Pat who met through "Operation Dear Abby"? We had everything in common: We both came from Irish Catholic families with seven children. I (Patty) went to an all-girl Catholic school; Pat went to an all-boy Catholic school. We had both dreamed of biking through Ireland, and we were both single and had never been married. You printed our story Nov. 12, 1991.

Well, Abby, here's an update: Pat proposed to me over Thanksgiving weekend (1991) and I said yes! He's been living in Milwaukee since January when he got out of the Army, and he's now living less than two miles from me! He's my best friend, and we fall more and more in love every time we meet. I still can't believe it. We went to Omaha to visit his family, and they couldn't have been more wonderful to me. At first they were a little skeptical, but after seeing Pat and Patty together, they knew we were right for each other.

We are planning to get married in the cathedral of my alma mater,

Marquette University in Milwaukee, on Dec. 19, 1992. — PATTY TREACY, GREEN FIELD, WIS.

DEAR PATTY: Wisconsin in December? A Christmas fantasy! I will be with you in spirit, wishing you both much happiness and success in your marriage.

DEAR ABBY: I am 20 years old with a baby and a husband. My problem is my husband. It all started when I was six months pregnant. "George" started staying out late, saying he was with the guys. After the baby was born, I found out he had been seeing a young girl who lives next door to his mother. A friend had told me this, but I didn't believe it. When I asked George if there was anything between them, he denied it.

A month later, I found a letter he had written to an Army buddy — but never mailed. In the letter he said he got a girl pregnant and had to rush her to an abortion clinic! That's not all. He got 90 days in the county jail for firing a gun at a girl he had been seeing. (The bullet missed her.)

When I visited him in jail, he broke down and told me he was sorry for cheating on me, but he said he is now a born-again Christian, and he's learned his lesson and wants another chance.

Should I give him another chance? He has lied so much, I don't know if I can ever trust him. He has even agreed to counseling. Our second anniversary is next week. What should I do? I still love him. — GEORGE'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Since you still love him, give him another chance. I hope his being born-again will keep him straight and honest. But if it doesn't, say goodbye and close the door on this relationship.

Jeane Dixon

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: Singer Olivia Newton-John, actresses Julie London and Linda Hamilton, fitness expert Jack LaLanne.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Mischief could be afoot despite the sincere desire of many to make this a day of good will. Give a thumbs-down to unusual business deals. The evening should be quite romantic.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Put family and home life first today. Dedicate yourself to bringing happiness to those closest to your heart. Check over your wardrobe, personal bills and correspondence.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A good weekend to make important decisions. Forge ahead with plans to change your residence, start a new career or launch a business. Give a loved one the benefit of the doubt.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Channel your restlessness into constructive outlets. You will be amazed by what you can accomplish! A hobby can be turned into a real moneymaker with the help of experts.

Red Raiders face jump-started Bears

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

The snapshots coming out of Waco aren't very pretty from the perspective of Texas Tech coach Spike Dykes.

They show the Baylor Bears coming out of hibernation.

"The second quarter of the Colorado game and the Utah State game gave us a glimpse of what we can do and what we should do," Baylor quarterback J.J. Joe said. "We kept on plugging, and it just takes one strike of lightning for everything to change."

Tell Dykes about it. The Red Raiders have been looking for that strike all season, trying to avoid the 1-4 start of last year. And yet they're on pace to repeat with a 1-2 start this season.

SWC Preview

Now they catch Baylor in the SWC opener, just when the Bears seem to be jump-starting after losing their first two games to Louisiana Tech and Colorado before beating Utah State 45-10 last week.

"This is a big tempo setter," Dykes said. "We talk about two seasons (SWC and non-conference) and we talk about this not just after an unsuccessful preseason. If we're ever going to make a mark on the wall, we've got to belly up and do it right now."

Texas Christian and Southern Methodist play the other SWC opener with the Mustangs trying to extend their first two-game winning streak since 1986, the year before they disbanded for two seasons due to NCAA sanctions.

The Horned Frogs are a six-point favorite and the Raiders rate a two-point edge over Baylor.

In non-conference games, Houston is an 18-point underdog, playing at Northern Michigan; Texas, rested after an open date, hosts North Texas University and winless Rice plays its first home game against Sam Houston State.

Tech got the lightning it needed to win last year's game in Waco on a 99-yard fumble return by Donny Brooks but the Raiders have lost 10 of their last 13 games to the Bears. Baylor lost to Colorado 57-38, but starting in the second half, the Bears started their turnaround, Coach Grant Teaff says.

"Those moments in the second half were critical to this football team, and in the long run, to this whole program," Teaff said.

The Rice Owls also find themselves on the brink of another disaster season after losing their first two games. Coach Fred Goldsmith also will face Sam Houston with a new quarterback since starter Josh LaRocca is likely out for the season with a broken collarbone.

Bert Emanuel, who saw little playing time in the first two games, will step into the starting role and be backed up by Greg Willig, who was the starter at the beginning of last season.

Sam Houston (2-0) of NCAA Division I-AA has a reputation for playing tough against Division I-A opponents. They lost to Houston 38-34 in 1987 and scared Baylor before losing 13-9 in 1990.

"The way they played Baylor two years ago, we're probably the underdog," Goldsmith said. "They're the ones that won nine games last year. We're frustrated and antsy. We don't like being 0-2."

The Longhorns will be heavy favorites to beat North Texas, a game that should allow plenty of substitution but Coach John Mackovic won't say if freshman quarterback Shea Morenz will play.

"All three of our quarterbacks are developing," Mackovic said. "Any one of the three is in a position where he could play."

SMU has improved the run portion of its run-and-shoot offense because of the development of Kevin Shepard, who gained 156 rushing yards in last week's 20-13 victory over New Mexico.

"They are probably playing with more confidence since they started back playing football," TCU coach Pat Sullivan said of SMU. "All those seniors who have been on the short end in the past are beginning to come together."

The Houston Cougars take on their second consecutive Big 10 foe by meeting the Wolverines in Michigan Stadium with an anticipated crowd of 100,000-plus.
