Flash flood watch in effect for Gray County

Lightning strikes McLean school

BY SHEILA ECCLES
Staff Writer

Gray County has been placed under a flash flood watch through today and tonight by the National Weather Service, which also forecasts locally heavy thundershowers through tonight and more fog.

And in a weather - related incident, lightning struck a chimney at McLean High School today causing heavy damage to the building's plumbing, roof and auditorium.

Heavy fog continues to blanket the area playing havoc with area drivers.

McLean School officials learned of the damages early today as they reported to the high school for morning classes.

"The lightning knocked out five feet of the 40 - foot chimney and caused a hole in the ceiling. Debris fell through the room into the gym. Conduit and water lines were dragged down with the debris, and there was running water through the auditorium," and several classrooms, Linda Haynes, editor of the McLean News said today.

Tonight is McLean High School's Homecoming, and the students had been decorating in preparation for the celebration tonight.

"The phone lines are out in the school, and due to the broken water lines, the water has been shut off. Classes were being held as normal because officials didn't have any time to call them off," Haynes said.

There was no estimate of damage from school officials today.

Gary Stephens of Southwestern Bell Service said today that there has been some reported trouble with the phone lines in Pampa. However, the problem is not major.

"Whenever we have this much moisture and rain, the cables get wet and the phones act up. The rain is causing some problems with local calls and some long distance calls," he said.

Several minor accidents have been reported in Pampa, according to Pampa police reports. However, residents seem to be using caution in the heavy fog.

The Department of Public Safety advised residents to use common sense and drive according to weather conditions.

Moisture reports from the area include Pampa - .39 inch; Wheeler - .75 inch; White Deer - a trace to .20 inch; Perryton - 1.16 inch; Amarillo - .15 inch; and Shamrock with 1.03 to 1.30 inch.

"The fog should continue through this afternnon and sock us back in on Saturday. These weather conditions are being caused by a cold front that moved over the area carrying moisture from a tropical storm. The abundance of moisture in the air with no real heat or winds makes for heavy fog conditions," Clinnie Brown of the National Weather Service said today.

The weather forecast from the National Weather Services includes a 50 percent chance of rain today, a 50 percent chance tonight and a 30 percent chance of rain on Saturday.

A MODERN TOM SAWYER. The ghost of Tom Sawyer and friend, Tommy Bowden, 11, left, and Wayne Hoskins, 12, floated on the rain swollen Red Deer Creek for the chance - of - a - lifetime riverbank view of the city. Pampa has received 2.40 inches of moisture in the past 48 hours. More rain is forecast through Saturday.

Newcomers save man's life when motel mattress smolders

BY DEBORAH BRIDGES
Staff Writer

In a time of concern about hotel fire safety, an Oklahoma City man staying at the Coronado Inn who had gone to sleep with a lighted cigarette in his hand almost miraculously escaped serious injury early today.

It was the persistence of a Pampa newcomer and his wife who saved the life of Tim New, in his 20's, of Oklahoma City.

Randy and Delores Mitchell, 22, are trying to find a house in Pampa so they can be closer to Randy's job with Stahl Petroleum.

Unable to find a house to rent, the couple had taken a room at the Coronado Inn.

The Mitchells were asleep in Room 230 at 5 a.m. today when the acrid smell of smoke awoke them.

"We smelled something burning and looked around in our room to see if it was there. Then we went down the hall to see where the smell was the strongest," Mrs. Mitchell said. The smoke odor was coming from Room 228, the room adjoining theirs.

The Mitchells called the front desk of the motel and told the night clerk they had seen smoke in the hall way.

"The lady at the desk called us back and said she had to stay at the front desk with the money, that she had called a maintenance man, and that she couldn't do anymore," Mrs. Mitchell recalled.

By this time, the smoke was beginning to become choking, although it was still barely discernible to the eye, Mrs. Mitchell said.

Concerned, Randy Mitchell climbed over the balcony to the room, tried the door and then looked inside. Through the dense smoke, he could barely see the form of someone lying on the bed.

Afraid the man might already be dead of smoke inhalation, Mitchell pounded on the door, but was unable to rouse him.

Finally, the couple got the desk clerk to phone the man's room. After six or seven rings, he answered the phone and got out of the room.

When the door was opened, smoke billowed out of the room and into the hall of the motel. By this time, sleepy residents began to open their doors to see what the commotion was, concerned only with if the fire had been put out.

The smoldering mattress was thrown out the window and extinguished by motel employees.

The Mitchells did not learn the name of the occupant of the burning room, who fortunately suffered only mild smoke inhalation and burns to his hand.

"The only thing we were worried about in staying in a motel overnight was getting robbed," Mrs. Mitchell said. "We never thought we could be in a fire."

Several things connected with the incident, however, concern the Mitchells.

First, the fire department was never called to the scene. Pampa Fire Department officials confirmed this fact today.

Second, although a place is provided for a fire extinguisher in the hall, there was no fire extinguisher in it, Mrs. Mitchell said today. Also, no smoke alarms were in the hallway, she said.

Third, the maintenance man called to check on the smoke smell did not arrive until 6 a.m., one hour after it was reported, Mrs. Mitchell said. And the desk clerk told her after the Mitchells's call she looked outside to see if there was any smoke. Not seeing any, the clerk said she thought it could not be that bad, Mrs. Mitchell said.

Coronado Inn manager Craig Jones said there was no damage to the room, only a small hole burned in the mattress.

"This isn't Las Vegas," Jones said. "It's no biggie."

City Fire Marshall L. V. Bruce said today he was not aware of the fire until he received a phone call from one of the city's firefighters. The fire department found out about the incident from news media, he said.

Discussing the lack of a fire extinguisher in the motel hall, Bruce commented, "We've had trouble with that for a long time. There are no city ordinances requiring extinguishers in motels. We've tried and tried to change that, but haven't had any luck at it."

Bruce said he is required to inspect fires when there is any damage or if it might be arson.

West says academy will remain open

Jerry West, pastor of the Pampa Baptist Temple and director of the Pampa Christian Academy, said today the school will remain open, despite a temporary restraining order from 223rd District Court to close the academy.

Gray County Sheriff's Deputy Shirley Nickles served all papers Thursday to West, Sheriff Rufe Jordan said today.

Asked about the temporary restraining order today, West said, "We are going to stay open."

The temporary restraining order to close the Pampa Christian Academy was granted Wednesday by the 223rd District Judge Don Cain.

Lynn Collins, regional attorney for the Texas Department of Human Resources said, "We will ask the Attorney General's office to ask that they be held in contempt (of court) if they continue to operate. We will be sending someone to determine if they are still operating."

The temporary restraining order was granted after the State Attorney Gerneral's office filed for an injunction against the Pampa Baptist Temple and the officers and directors of the Pampa Christian Academy in District Court here.

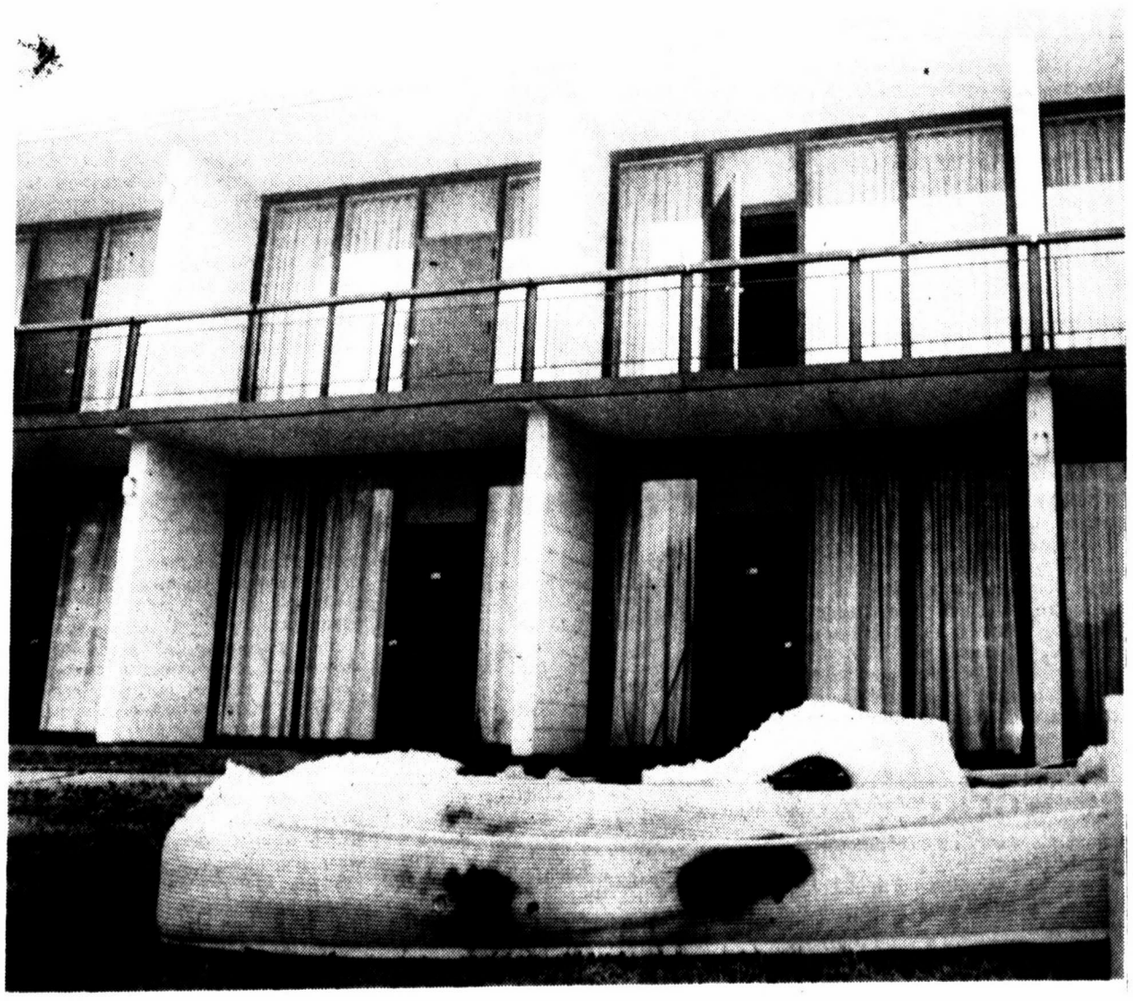

Weather

The forecast calls for a 50 percent chance of thunderstorms today, possibly becoming heavy. The temperature will reach the low 60s today with overnight lows in the mid 40s. The high for Saturday will be in the mid 60s.

Certification hearing conducted in Miami resignation dispute

MIAMI - Results from a teacher certification hearing in Austin for a Miami teacher will not be available for 60 days, according to Annette Hewgley, administrative assistant for the Texas Education Agency.

The hearing for Marcheta Woicikowfski, wife of former Pampa High School choir director John Woicikowfski, was conducted by Patrick Whelan, hearing officer for the Texas Education Agency because of a conflict over resignation between Woicikowfski and the Miami School Board.

Woicikowfski reportedly presented her resignation to the board of trustees at a July 13 meeting. The board refused to accept her resignation and filed a request with TEA asking that Woicikowfski's teaching certificate be suspended for abandonment of contract.

William Breeding, trustee, said that Woicikowfski told the board verbally in the spring of 1980 that she planned to resign. The board contacted and hired a replacement teacher as a result of the verbal resignation.

Breeding said that Woicikowfski then turned in a signed contract, and they compensated the newly hired teacher for travel expenses and accepted Woicikowfski's contract.

Woicikowfski then asked to be released from her contract about the first of August because she had found a position in the Pampa schools. The board turned down her request, and she taught in Miami that year, Breeding said.

Breeding said that Woicikowfski signed her contract by the May 1, 1981 deadline and turned in her resignation in July 1981.

In a letter to the TEA, Woicikowfski said that in resigning she had assumed that moving with her husband and family would be considered just cause. Her husband, John, had been notified in June that he had been selected for a job at Lubbock's Coronado High School.

Woicikowfski also said that she signed a contract with Meadow in July at the request of the superintendent. That same month she turned in her resignation to the Miami school system.

In case of a ruling against Woicikowfski, her teaching certificate will be suspended for a year. However, she may appeal to the Texas Board of Education, according to Miami School Superintendent Bill Vestal.

Reagan promises Israel protection from AWACS

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, finding hope in a narrow defeat, is promising a less-reluctant Senate to balance the sale of AWACS planes to Saudi Arabia by offering Israel additional radar-jamming equipment.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee voted 9-8 Thursday to reject the $8.5 billion arms deal as two Republicans switched to support Reagan, who swayed one of them with a long-distance telephone call during the panel's debate.

"I'm gratified it was that close," the president said. "Of course, I wish it went the other way."

It was close enough, though, that an enthusiastic Senate Republican leader Howard H. Baker Jr. told reporters: "It's now winnable. Several weeks ago it wasn't."

Baker's optimism was based partly on the shift by Sen. Larry Pressler, a South Dakota Republican who had been among 50 co-sponsors of a Senate resolution to veto the sale of five Airborne Warning and Control System planes, Sidewinder missiles and new equipment for jet fighters.

Also swinging behind Reagan were Sens. S.I. Hayakawa, R-Calif., who had been leaning against the sale, and Charles Mathias, R-Md., who had been undecided. That cut the Senate lineup, according to an Associated Press count, to 53-37 against the sale, with 10 senators uncommitted and the vote still a week and a half away.

Pressler, who only two days before had rejected Reagan's plea for support at the White House, said he was persuaded by the president's call from Philadelphia, where he was speaking to a foreign policy group.

"The president felt we would impede him in foreign policy if we vetoed the arms sale," Pressler said.

More important, Pressler said, Reagan promised to incorporate in a letter to the Senate an assurance that he would offer Israel new radar-jamming equipment to prevent the AWACS planes from being used to spy on Israeli air operations.

Earlier, Maj. Gen. Richard V. Secord, a deputy assistant secretary of defense, told the committee that "the Israelis have not expressed any interest in radar jammers. It is my judgment that because the AWACS threat is so small, the Israelis will not want additional jammers."

Asked about that later, Pressler replied: "Well, that would end the matter."

The administration also enlisted Maxwell Raab, U.S. ambassador to Italy and a prominent Jewish leader, to win Pressler's vote. Raab, described by Pressler as an old friend, had lunch with the senator to urge his support of the sale.

Reagan's strategy did not work, however, on another senator, Nebraska Democrat Edward Zorinsky.

The president also tried to telephone Zorinsky from Philadelphia, but Art Jaeger, the senator's press secretary, said Zorinsky refused to take the call.

"He thought it would be ludicrous to think a two-minute conversation at this point would cause him to change his mind," Jaeger said. "He felt it was an insult to his intelligence and an insult to his colleagues. He informed the page he would talk to the president tomorrow."

Zorinsky joined with the seven other Democrats to support a resolution disapproving the sale. The only Republican to oppose Reagan was Rudy Boschwitz of Minnesota.

Voting for the sale in addition to Baker, Hayakawa, Mathias and Pressler were Republican Charles H. Percy of Illinois, the committee chairman, Jesse Helms of South Carolina, Richard G. Lugar of Indiana and Nancy Landon Kassebaum of Kansas.

Voting against the sale in addition to Boschwitz and Zorinsky were Democrats Claiborne Pell of Rhode Island, Alan Cranston of California, John Glenn of Ohio, Joseph R. Biden of Delaware, Paul S. Sarbanes of Maryland, Paul E. Tsongas of Massachusetts and Christopher J. Dodd of Connecticut.

The House voted 301-111 Wednesday against the arms deal, which will go through unless also rejected by the Senate.

The vote there originally was scheduled for next Tuesday, but Baker announced it would be held Oct. 26, 27 or 28.

Sudan threatens attack on Libya

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Emboldened by an American AWACS umbrella, Sudan's president is threatening to send commando suicide squads into Libya to avenge sabotage by Libyan "terrorists" and Libya's bombing of Sudanese villages.

"We are seriously thinking of a defensive plan that could move such operations to the Libyan soil and I will ask our friends to assist," President Gaafar Nimeiri was quoted as saying in an interview published today in the semi-official Cairo newspaper Al Ahram.

"These operations would take place soon, God willing, in Tripoli and maybe inside (Libyan leader Col. Moammar) Khadafy's own home," Nimeiri said.

"I will train a large number of what is called suicide army commandos and infantrymen to operate inside Libya. If I was able to send between 500 and 600 persons inside Libya to die there, this would be a success.

"Such battles are easy because they are secret. There are about 100,000 Sudanese in Libya and about 10,000 of them would be willing to carry out such operations for the sake of their country."

Nimeiri called on the Arab League to mediate his quarrel with Khadafy. But he said he is ready for "unlimited cooperation" with the United States provided the Americans do not interfere in "my internal affairs and so long as there is an enemy standing on my borders."

Nimeiri's statement coincided with the arrival in Egypt, Sudan's ally to the north, of two American E-3 Airborne Warning and Control System (AWACS) radar surveillance planes.

The spy planes, with their sophisticated "look down" radar, immediately began patrolling Egypt's western border with Libya, the commander of the Cairo West military airport reported. But Defense Minister Abdel Halim Abu Ghazala indicated their chief mission was to watch Sudan's border with Libya and its satellite Chad.

"We wanted to be sure that we could have early warning about any kind of attack against Sudan, so we could help Sudan," he said in an interview broadcast by ABC-TV.

Abu Ghazala said he canceled a state of alert on the Egyptian-Libyan border Thursday morning "because we noticed the whole thing in Libya; there is no movement, no concentration of forces. It is calm."

Since September, Nimeiri has reported repeated bombing raids on Sudanese villages by Libyan aircraft based in Chad. He also told Al Ahram that Libyan agents — he called them "terrorists" and "murderers" — have carried out subversive operations inside Sudan.

Khadafy has an estimated 18,000 troops in Chad and has vowed Nimeiri will be the next Arab "traitor" to fall following the assassination of his ally Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

Rev. Moon indicted for tax evasion

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal indictment charging the Rev. Sun Myung Moon with income tax evasion is an "attempted assassination" of the Unification Church's founder and its members, a church official says.

The 61-year-old evangelist and businessman from South Korea was indicted Thursday along with one of his top aides. The indictment accuses Moon of filing false personal tax returns for 1973, 1974 and 1975 and failing to report about $112,000 in interest earned on bank deposits in those years.

Moon also was charged with failing to report $70,000 worth of stock he and his wife received in a trade for merchandise in 1973.

Takeru Kamiyama, 39, an aide to Moon who lives in Tarrytown, was charged with conspiracy, aiding in the filing of Moon's allegedly false returns for 1974 and 1975, committing perjury and obstructing the investigation.

The perjury counts stemmed from alleged false material declarations under oath before a federal grand jury.

Representatives of the church denied the charges, claiming their organization was being hounded.

Mose Durst, president of the Unification Church in the United States called the indictments "the attempted assassination of Rev. Moon and the 3 million members of the Unification Church."

He said the indictment was even "more significant than what happened to (slain Egyptian President Anwar) Sadat. Rev. Moon is the most significant religious figure in the world."

If convicted, Moon and his aide could get up to five years in prison on the charge of conspiring to cheat the government of income taxes, and three years on each tax count.

Both defendants were to be arraigned on the indictment Oct. 22 in U.S. District Court here.

Leaders of the sect said Moon was "out of the country," and would not say whether he would return to the United States to face charges.

In a separate case, federal investigators are trying to determine whether Moon and hundreds of his followers had improperly obtained residency status in the United States. The Justice Department said last June that deportation proceedings might begin soon.

Moon's goal is the formation of a world "family" in which all religions and races unite before God. But in this country it has been accused of brainwashing young converts and of using tax-exempt status to buy up property and carry on profit-making businesses.

The church's holdings in the United States are worth more than $40 million, according to church officials.

Moon, Kamiyama and others described in the indictment as their agents were accused of trying to impede the tax inquiry at various times since 1976 by effecting changes in corporate records of Tong Il Enterprises Inc., a concern they formed to import products from Korea.

FBI agent testifies gun parts are related to Wood investigation

DALLAS (AP) — The wooden stock of a rifle found by two boys may be linked to the assassination of U.S. District Juge John H. Wood Jr., a FBI agent has testified.

FBI Special Agent Ronald Iden testified Thursday at a pre-trial hearing for Jo Ann Starr Harrelson, who is charged with making a false statement on a firearms purchase application.

Iden said the government believes the rifle she allegedly purchased 12 days before the judge's slaying is "relevant" to the Wood investigation.

Mrs. Harrelson is married to convicted hit man Charles V. Harrelson, who has been identified by federal authorities as a prime target of the Wood investigation. He is being held in Houston on charges unrelated to the Wood slaying.

Mrs. Harrelson's attorney moved for dismissal of the firearms charge, arguing it is based on testimony before a grand jury at a time when she was immune from prosecution.

However, FBI agents testified that the charge stemmed from information gathered independently of the grand jury testimony.

U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders did not rule on the dismissal motion, but told attorneys to file legal briefs by next Wednesday.

Iden said agents searched El Paso attorney Joe Chagra's home last February and found a sketch that appeared to be a map showing the location of a weapon.

Volcano ash hid bodies of women

MOSES LAKE, Wash. (AP) — A shroud of ash from the eruption of Mount St. Helens hid the bodies of two young women for a year and a half after they were murdered, giving their killer a long head start to flee authorities.

The bodies of hitchhikers Marsha Ann weatter, 18, and Katherine Jean Allen, 20, each with one gunshot wound, were found by pheasant hunters Saturday and authorities have been scrambling ever since to try to pick up the cold trail of the killer. A special police task force has been formed to look for clues.

"Ash being over the bodies no doubt helped cover them up. Maybe 3 inches (of ash) fell along there," said Larry Boyd, chief criminal deputy sheriff in Grant County.

"It's kind of ironic, the volcano covered up some terrible incident," he said.

The layer of ash, he said, prevented birds or small animals from disturbing the remains until they were discovered by the hunters.

The bodies of the women — both from Fairbanks, Alaska — were clothed and lay side by side in a field of grass and sagebrush 150 yards north of Interstate 90 and 10 miles west of Moses Lake, Boyd said.

The ash had compacted to 1½ inches and some had been washed away by rain. Authorities couldn't tell whether the women were shot in the field or killed elsewhere, Boyd said.

Chief Deputy Ken Kernan said an autopsy showed each body had been shot once, but he declined to say where the bullets struck the bodies. He said tests were being made to determine if the women were sexually molested.

There was no ash beneath the bodies and authorities believe the women were killed about six weeks before the May 18 eruption of Mount St. Helens, which spread ash several inches deep on parts of eastern Washington and northern Idaho.

The women's backpacks were found near Yakima in July 1980, but until the discovery of the bodies, there were no other clues to their disappearance.

Grant County authorities said Thursday a five-member team was formed to investigate the killings.

It was "a calous and cold-blooded and senseless act," Kernan said. "We're compiling a nationwide teletype to all police agencies and circulating a flyer with the girls' pictures on it."

House kills sugar, peanut price supports

WASHINGTON (AP) — Proposed price supports for the nation's major commodities are surviving House debate, even as critics of the programs score significant victories in killing sugar subsidies and ending special treatment for peanut growers.

With critics claiming President Reagan's silent support, the House voted Thursday to deny resumption of price-support loans for sugar and to abolish a separate peanut subsidy system restricted to a few producers.

Next up, when the House resumes debate next week on the multibillion-dollar, four-year farm bill, is the tobacco program.

"I think the battle is lost for agriculture programs of this nature," says Rep. Peter Peyser, D-N.Y., who claimed sugar price supports would cost consumers and taxpayers hundreds of millions of dollars a year.

The farm coalition in the House had shown so much strength in killing Reagan's cuts in dairy price supports that Rep. Paul Findley, R-Ill., his chief farm bill ally in the House, dropped plans to challenge wheat, feed grains, rice and cotton price supports which the president says are excessive.

The survival of House support programs at levels much higher than the ones Reagan forced through the Senate last month and the House decisions on peanuts and sugar make the two versions of the new farm bill so diverse that the new law must be written in a conference of just a few House and Senate members.

"The best hope for the administration is in House-Senate conference," Findley conceded after the costly grain, cotton and dairy support programs could not be pared down.

"But now that the forces of reform have won a couple of battles in sugar and peanuts, I see these as developments to the president's advantage," Findley said.

Reagan's budget director, David A. Stockman, says the House farm bill may exceed spending limits through 1985 by as much as $10 billion.

Polish leaders agree to price freeze

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Poland's Communist government met Solidarity's demand for a price freeze, warding off a strike by the independent union. But the Communist Party expelled Bogdan Lis, the most prominent union man in the party, for advocating a cut in defense spending.

Prices were frozen on most staple goods, gasoline, alcohol and vegetables Thursday after six hours of talks between representatives of the independent labor federation and the government.

Solidarity officials told a news conference the freeze would remain in effect until the union and the government worked out a joint plan to combat Poland's acute economic and food crises.

The negotiations were to continue today.

The government has been trying to raise prices on major foodstuffs and commodities for years to get rid of the subsidies constituting a heavy burden on the economy, but each attempt produced public outbursts that resulted in cancellation of the hikes and twice in a change in the Communist Party command.

While conceding the necessity for increases to bring prices into line with costs of production or import, Solidarity's leaders have been insisting that the hikes must be part of a general economic plan formulated jointly by the union and the government.

The government put through an increase in the price of bread last month without adverse reaction. But when it doubled the price of tobacco products earlier this month without consulting Solidarity and while the union's national congress was still in session, the angry labor leaders started talking strike again.

The government tried to bring the official trade unions controlled by the Communist Party into the joint economic planning, but Solidarity said it would negotiate with the government only. The government agreed reluctantly, saying the independent union's refusal to deal with the other unions, which it now outnumbers about 5 to 1, was "outrageous."

Meanwhile, the scarcity of food and commodities continued to cause scattered unrest. A sit-in strike by 12,000 women textile workers protesting food shortages went into its fourth day in Zyrardow, near Warsaw.

Japanese mine blast kills nine workers

TOKYO (AP) — Lethal gas seeped into a coal mine in northern Japan today, killing nine miners and trapping dozens of others underground, local police reported.

Authorities said they were not sure exactly how many men remained underground, but local news reports estimated at least 50 men were trapped.

Police said there were more than 800 miners inside when the unidentified gas began flowing into a shaft at the 10,000-foot level of the Hokkaido Colliery and Steamship Company mine in Yubari, a mining town near Sapporo, capital of Japan's northernmost island of Hokkaido.

Most of the miners made it to the surface, but nine died of gas inhalation and eight others were hospitalized, police said.

Rescue operations were expected to continue through the night as men tried to reach the miners trapped below the leak site, authorities said. There was no immediate word on the condition of the trapped miners.

The mine, 496 miles north of Tokyo, has been plagued by accidents in the past.

It was the scene of one of Japan's worst mine catastrophes when 62 miners died in a gas explosion in February, 1965.

Six years ago another gas leak killed five men at the mine.

There were no reports of an explosion following today's leak.

Evidence is introduced over objections

LIBERTY, Texas (AP) — Prosecutors faced a continuing evidentiary challenge today in their bid to prove Vickie Daniel intentionally killed her husband, former Texas House Speaker Price Daniel Jr.

State's attorneys overrode vigorous defense objections Thursday and hammered into the record several items of physical evidence critical to their case.

Marvin Powell, a former sheriff's investigator and the state's fifth witness, was to return to the stand today to open the third day of testimony.

Mrs. Daniel, 34, is accused of killing her husband last January during a violent argument at their Liberty ranch home.

According to previous testimony, Mrs. Daniel admitted shooting her husband but said the fatal shot discharged accidentally.

She said she recalled firing a warning but could not remember a second shot.

The prosecution introduced the death weapon into evidence Thursday and through Powell tried to show the unlikelihood that the bolt action .22-caliber rifle would discharge accidentally.

Detective John Stapleton, a sheriff's investigator who preceded Powell as a witness, said he did not make an arrest at the shooting scene because he "had no suspect."

"Initially," he said, "I was under the impression it was an accidental shooting.

Asked when he changed his mind, he said: "When I found the two shell casings."

"In your mind," asked prosecutor Kevin Settle, "was finding two spent shell casings consistent with an accidental shooting?"

"No sir," he replied.

A single .22-caliber bullet severed Daniels' main artery and he bled to death.

The state also wove into evidence the torn red shirt and blue jeans Daniel wore when killed and a graphic color photograph of the blood-covered body.

New secretary of state denies political plans

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Despite the job's reputation as a springboard to statewide office, Secretary of State-designate David Dean says he has no political aspirations now.

Gov. Bill Clements on Thursday picked Dean, his general counsel, for secretary of state. It's the highest appointed post in state government, and frequently serves as a good way for would-be candidates to get their names known.

"Others have used it as a stepping stone ... to advance their own personal career," he said. "I come with no political aspirations at all."

The latest secretary of state to try to use the office as a stepping stone is George Strake, the man Dean will replace. Strake wants the GOP nomination to challenge Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby.

In taking his new post, Dean, 33, will complete the switch from the Democrats to the Republicans. He has been in the governor's office for nine years, starting as a law school student working with Democratic Gov. Dolph Briscoe.

When John Hill beat Briscoe in the 1978 primary, Dean jumped to the Clements' team, landing as a campaign worker and eventually general counsel.

"I couldn't in any way, shape or form support Hill," said Dean, who claims to have been a conservative Democrat.

Clements said Thursday, "David told me in the past he really is a Texas ticket-splitter and that all his inclinations, are to be a Republican." Dean now is "declaring himself as a Republican," said the governor.

Clements picked Assistant Secretary of State David Herndon to replace Dean as general counsel.

Dean will earn $52,000 as secretary of state, which includes duties as the state's chief election official. He made $48,900 as Clements' counsel.

Efforts begin on forming statewide 'crime stoppers'

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A citizen council that envisions paying anonymous callers for tips leading to the arrest of criminals has begun its work with the "100 percent" backing of Gov. Bill Clements.

The governor's general counsel, David Dean, said Thursday that Clements would do everything in his power to help state and local citizen groups halt crime.

"Gov. Clements is highly committed to a very effective ... Crime Stoppers program," Dean told the first meeting of the Governor's Crime Stoppers Advisory Council. "He (Clements) wants to do anything and everything he can help it and give it a high profile."

Clements backed up Dean's comments in a statement that said, "I am 100 percent behind this program and am confident that it will be successful in getting criminals off of the streets and behind bars and assisting in the creation of additional local Crime Stoppers programs across this state."

The council chose Maurice Acers of Dallas as its chairman. Acers served with the FBI from 1934 to 1947 and is past chairman of the Greater Dallas Crime Commission.

"If we don't conquer crime," said Acers, "crime ... will conquer the democratic processes we have enjoyed all these many years."

The 1981 Legislature created the council to assist local Crime Stoppers programs. There are now 17 in the state, with five more expected to start up by the end of the year.

The local programs operate with "evangelical zeal," said Dean.

He said the advisory council had a $440,000 state-federal grant, which includes $250,000 to reward people who give law officers tips that lead to arrests and indictments.

Part of the grant money would be spent on television, radi and newspaper advertisements, he said.

The tips would be called in to a toll-free telephone number, and payment of rewards would be handled by the accounting firm of Peat Marwick Mitchell & Co.

Code words, secret identification numbers and fictitious names would be used to insure the anonymity of tipsters, Dean said.

Dean said that "only very, very rarely" would the monthly TV and radio spots feature the recreation of crimes. He said an exception might be a major unsolved crime such as the shooting of federal judge John Wood in San Antonio.

"As a further expression of the governor's commitment," Dean said, Clements would invite newspapers and TV and radio stations to act as sponsors of the Crime Stoppers program.

Sheriff's official is arrested on bribery

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The Bexar County Sheriff's officer in charge of inspecting massage parlors has been arrested on federal charges of soliciting bribes in exchange for protection of prostitution operations.

Thursday's arrest of Lt. Thomas Anthony Chavana was the first resulting from an investigation into allegations that some deputies squeezed operators of massage parlors, gambling halls and cockfight righs for payoffs.

Chavana, 42, was arraigned before U.S. Magistrate Jamie Boyd late Thursday and posted $35,000 bond on the federal charge of soliciting a bribe.

Sheriff Joe Neaves, who appointed Chavana to keep watch on the massage parlors, said he was not aware of the FBI investigation until notified Thursday by Agent-in-Charge Jack Lawn.

"I'm glad to see someone working on this. If someone is doing something no good here, then they're going to have to take the medicine," Neaves said after he was told about the investigation.

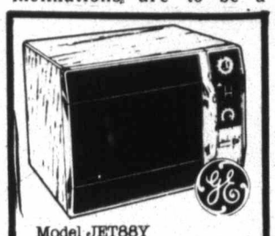

Chavana's arrest came as the Bexar County district attorney's office revealed that 10 cases stemming from the investigation would be presented to the county grand jury this month.

Some novel homebuying ideas

Nowhere in the nation have times been worse for a longer period of time than in the Great Lakes region — notably Michigan, Indiana and Upstate New York.

Two news stories recently, both dealing with housing, show how serious the situation has become:

In Buffalo, N.Y., a bank notified 900 homeowners of its intent to call back mortgages issued five years ago bearing interest rates of 8.5 percent. The hostile reaction was so wisespread that the bank quickly withdrew its proposal and announced Monday it has "fixed a mistake."

In Detroit, General Motors Corp. embarked on a novel plan called "Buy a house — get a car" to unload about 100 Detroit - area homes purchased by GM from employees transferring to other cities. If you buy one of the homes, GM will toss in a 1981 model car which may range from a Chevy Corvette to a Cadillac.

In Southern California, where the economy has remained as strong as ever, home sales and resales have nonetheless become stagnant as a result of high mortgage rates. Imagine the real estate situation in an area where unemployment is twice as high and you have some idea of the situation back East.

When the Buffalo Savings Bank attempted to call back 900 low - interest mortgages, it was like adding insult to injury to residents of New York's second largest city. The call - back was "legal" (an apparently never invoked clause in the loan agreements permitted call backs), but in an area long suffering from the triple agonies of exorbitant taxes, perennial union squabbles and sky - high utility bills, the bank's attempted action was akin to the "last straw."

The Buffalo bank did offer to unilaterally "renegotiate" the loans at 14 percent (in effect, doubling mortgage payments), but the deal so smacked of bad faith that picket lines were threatened and plans were drawn to urge the public to withdraw savings from the bank.

To Buffalo Savings' credit, the old loans were issued during a time when no other lender was financing home purchases in the depressed Buffalo area because of a state - imposed ceiling on loan rates. The bank was in essence taking a gamble that the economy would straighten out. It lost the gamble and lost again when it attempted to make mortgage - holders eat the loss.

General Motors' ingenious plan to unload slow - selling Detroit homes ranging in price from $70,000 to $200,000 is one of those imaginative ideas that will probably catch hold in Detroit and spread elsewhere. GM's plan is that a brand new GM auto carrying a sticker price of about 8 percent to 10 percent of the asking price of the house will be given to each buyer. Altogether, GM presently has a stock of homes valued at $10 million. The offer runs through October.

Clearly, mortgage rates cannot long stay at the 17 and 18 percent level without quickly destroying the American dream of home ownership, and we feel rates will drop in the months to come as the Federal Reserve Board loosens its control in the economy. Meanwhile, however, GM has shown inventiveness in dealing with the current situation. The results should be interesting to watch.

Military muscle or Pentagon flab?

If President Reagan wants to make a quick - and symbolically useful cut in military spending, he might eliminate the taxpayer subsidies for inexpensive lunches provided to top military and civilian brass at five exclusive dining rooms in the Pentagon.

Those special dining rooms, which serve the top two percent of the military, have been a sore point among military critics for years. Their prices to the brass are, to put it mildly, modest. A recent menu listed soup at 55 cents, Delmonico Steak for $3.55, and a tossed green salad for fifty cents. In today's inflated economy, and in high - priced Washington, those are quite modest prices. The justification for keeping them so low is a little obscure. The 100 "selected senior level members" who are eligible to use the secretary of defense's private dining room are paid somewhat more than buck privates.

The taxpayers make up the difference, of course. Rep. Les Aspin (D - WI), a persistent and usually accurate critic of military waste, has calculated that the actual cost is about $14.93 per meal. Those who eat them pay $2.87, and taxpayers pay $12.06.

All this was supposed to have changed in 1974, when the Pentagon issued a reform directive saying that "meal prices must be sufficient to cover operating expenses and food costs."

That sounded good, but it hasn't eliminated taxpayer subsidies. In fact, while taxpayers subsidized the five special Pentagon dining rooms to the tune of $1,033,000 in Fiscal Year 1974, before the "reform" went into effect, in FY 1980, the taxpayers anted up $1,438,322.

How did this happen after the situation was supposed to have been reformed? Well, the Pentagon has a rather eccentric definition of "operating expenses." Its definition does not include, for example, the cost of utilities or space rental, the cost of repairing and replacing stoves, refrigerators or other equipment. And it doesn't include the biggest cost of all — the wages of cooks and waiters.

The continuing abuse in the Pentagon dining rooms does point up the massive problem facing the president in trying to bring federal spending under control. Government employees, both military and civilian, foreign and domestic, have become accustomed to continually rising levels of salary and benefits, and an interesting array of perquisites which they have come to feel are tantamount to sacred rights. The bureaucracy has become entrenched, and it has grown expert at creating the illusion of reform while the reality hovers over the horizon.

The Pentagon top brass probably doesn't think of the special dining rooms as a massive ripoff of taxpayers, but simply as a nice little fringe benefit. After all, top executives in private companies get nice little fringes, so what's the matter with top bureaucrats getting a little extra gravy?

If the Pentagon were a private concern that sold its services on the open market, we'd have no quarrel with whatever lavish fringe benefits it wanted to bestow on its top people (though we note in passing that a lot of corporate fringes would probably disappear if they weren't tax - deductible). But the Pentagon isn't a private concern. It lives on money extracted by force from working men and women, most of whom can't afford $14.93 for lunch on a regular basis.

So long as bureaucrats are fallible human beings, there will be abuses of power, corruption and ripoffs. We don't pretend to believe that all of them can be eliminated. But some of the more egregious (and well - publicized) abuses should be ripe for harvest by the supposedly ruthless budget - cutters working with David Stockman.

Eliminating the Pentagon dining rooms would save only about one and a half million in a bloated budget. But it would send an important signal to the rest of the bureaucracy. It might help to persuade people that the Reagan administration is more interested in military muscle than Penagon free lunches. And it would eliminate an indefensible subsidy of the affluent.

Avoiding panic

By ANTHONY HARRIGAN

When President Reagan set out to reorder the nations' priorities, he knew that it would be an immense and difficult task. Let's hope the American people appreciate the difficulties and give him the support he needs and deserves.

The President has to overcome the fierce opposition of those who are determined that big - spending policies continue forever and that the welfare constituency be appeased at any cost. What columnist Patrick Buchanan calls the monopoly press — the networks, for example, are determined to create a crisis of confidence that will undermine Mr. Reagan's program and cause Congress to scuttle conservative reforms.

Unfortunately for the liberals, there is no way to continue the massive welfare programs without creating vast new deficits that will lead to hyper - inflation. The liberal bloc in Congress, for all its emotionalism over the President's budget cuts, simply hasn't a workable alternative to the retrenchment proposed by the President.

The public has to realize that the nation's current economic troubles stem from 20 years of mistaken federal policies, beginning with the Kennedy New Frontier. Two decades of bread and circuses has brought us to hard times.

Consider the tragedy of foreign aid. Secretary of State Haig recently noted that in the last decade the United States spent $50 billion on foreign aid. Think what that would have achieved at home if devoted to industrial revitalization, to new plants that would provide new jobs. Giveaways on this scale have been the stock in trade of liberal administrations and their supporters in Congress.

To dismantle even the outbuildings of the welfare state causes a furious reaction, as Congress is learning. And there are many congressmen, nominally conservative, who are getting cold feet. They fear the voting power of the welfare constituency. It will be necessary for those who believe in new priorities to mobilize in support of the President's reforms.

The liberal pundits also are determined to use an air of panic in order to abort the necessary rebuilding of the country's armed forces. The anti - defense lobby is strong here, as in Western Europe. They don't want the U.S. to rebuild its deteriorated defenses.

President Reagan will have to campaign hard to retain public confidence. Presidents always have to fight vigorously for their programs. Political honeymoons never last four years. Mr. Reagan also may have to bolster his administration. Every administration undergoes change as events take place. Arrangements and personnel that suffice for the days of smooth sailing prove inadequate as the political firestorms begin to rage.

To date, Mr. Reagan has relied on a trio of White House advisers — Messrs. Meese, Baker and Deaver. It may be that, in order to achieve his economic objectives, he will need a unified command over the administration's economic programs and activities.

Already the suggestion has been voiced that the President needs a powerful executive and persuader — Gov. John Connally of Texas has been named — to convince the public and Wall Street and to supervise the Treasury, the Council of Economic Advisers, the Office of Budget and Management, and the U.S. Trade Representatives.

It should be recalled that President Roosevelt took this approach, at one point naming James F. Byrnes as "Assistant President." It is an appraoch that President Reagan may need to adopt.

Whatever the administrative changes, if any, the President must go to the people repeatedly to stress that salvaging the American economy is a long - haul proposition. Wonders can't be achieved overnight.

Soviets missing link in shooting of pope?

Mehmet Ali Agca, the would - be assassin of Pope John II, has been tried, convicted and sentenced. But the world still wonders whether there was more to the attempt on the pontiff's life than simply the lone act of an ostensibly crazed Turkish terrorist.

The Vatican and Italian intelligence officials reportedly think there was. Britain's highly regarded newspaper, the Guardian, and a British television documentary both reported recently that the Vatican and the Italian government have reason to suspect that Agca was part of a conspiracy that orginated within the Soviet bloc.

Specifically, they suspect that the Soviet KGB intelligence service initiated or at least abetted a plot that culminated in the shooting of the pope last May 13.

Whatever evidence Rome may have for this hypothesis isn't being made public just now. Presumably, the investigation continues in search of a tangible link connecting Agca and the KGB.

But certainly the Soviets didn't lack a motive for trying to eliminate this most charismatic and outspokenly anti - Communist pope. The Polish - born John Paul II was, and is, a source of incalculable moral strength and inspiration for Poles engaged in an unprecedented challenge to Soviet and Communist Party supremacy in Eastern Europe.

And there is the matter of Agca's curious transit of Bulgaria, perhaps Eastern Europe's most tightly controlled Soviet satellite, on his way from Turkey to West Germany and then to Rome.

No one has yet offered an entirely plausible explanation of how a supposedly right - wing Turkish terrorist recently escaped from prison and wanted for murder could enter and then leave a Soviet - controlled police state without Soviet complicity.

According to the Guardian, Rome's suspicions plus whatever evidence it possesses have been passed to Washington for review and evaluation. And the possibility of an Agca - KGB link is apparently being taken seriously enough to warrant intensive study by the Central Intelligence Agency and the National Security Council.

Where all this will end is anyone's guess. What we do know is that the Soviets possessed the means, the motive and no doubt the will to attempt a crime of staggering proportions. The moral and political value of being able to demonstrate their involvement would be such that no stone must be left unturned.

It's hard to take it easy

It's hard to take it easy.

The children of Israel were able to survive 40 years of deprivation and hunger and wilderness hardship — but they couldn't take it easy.

They got to the land of milk and honey — and were consumed by their own excesses.

It was ever thus.

Arabs, drunk on oil, are getting ulcers from it; literally.

Saudi Arabia's ancient Muslim traditions remain intact: Sexes remain segregated, women must be veiled, are forbidden to drive cars.

Alcohol and pornography are banned.

There are no theaters.

But . . .

If that remains the traditional and accepted code of public conduct, almost nobody is paying any attention to it any more.

They've gone from poor to rich in 20 years.

And if they still go through the motions of respecting religion - imposed restraint, wearing their shrouded hair and black robes at their all - girls' Muslim schools —

The same girls are wearing bikinis on the beaches.

Their parents are drinking $200 a quart scotch.

Saudis, especially those under 30, are driving American cars; sexes are mixing at parties and surreptitiously watching video cassettes of X - rated American movies.

The Wall Street Journal followed those billions of American dollars to the Middle East to discover that prosperity may be costing these new rich more than it's worth.

Traditional hospitality has given away to fear and greed.

Crime and corruption are increasing, especially in the cities.

And ulcers — unheard of in Saudi Arabia a dozen years ago — are second only to car accidents as that nation's major health problem.

Money has confused values, produced anxiety. Psychiatrists report a brisk side - door business.

There are only 4.5 million Saudis to share that enormous bonanza of oil money. They can afford to hire help for the hard work — Pakistanis, Filipinos, Koreans.

The government is generous with money for land, for homes, for medical care, for education, for food, for starting businesses.

Yet — and it is ironic, if not surprising to historians, that economic prosperity has spawned social instability.

The country built for its people some of the most elegant high - rise apartment towers in the world — yet many stand empty because many prefer Bedouin tents or lavish mansions.

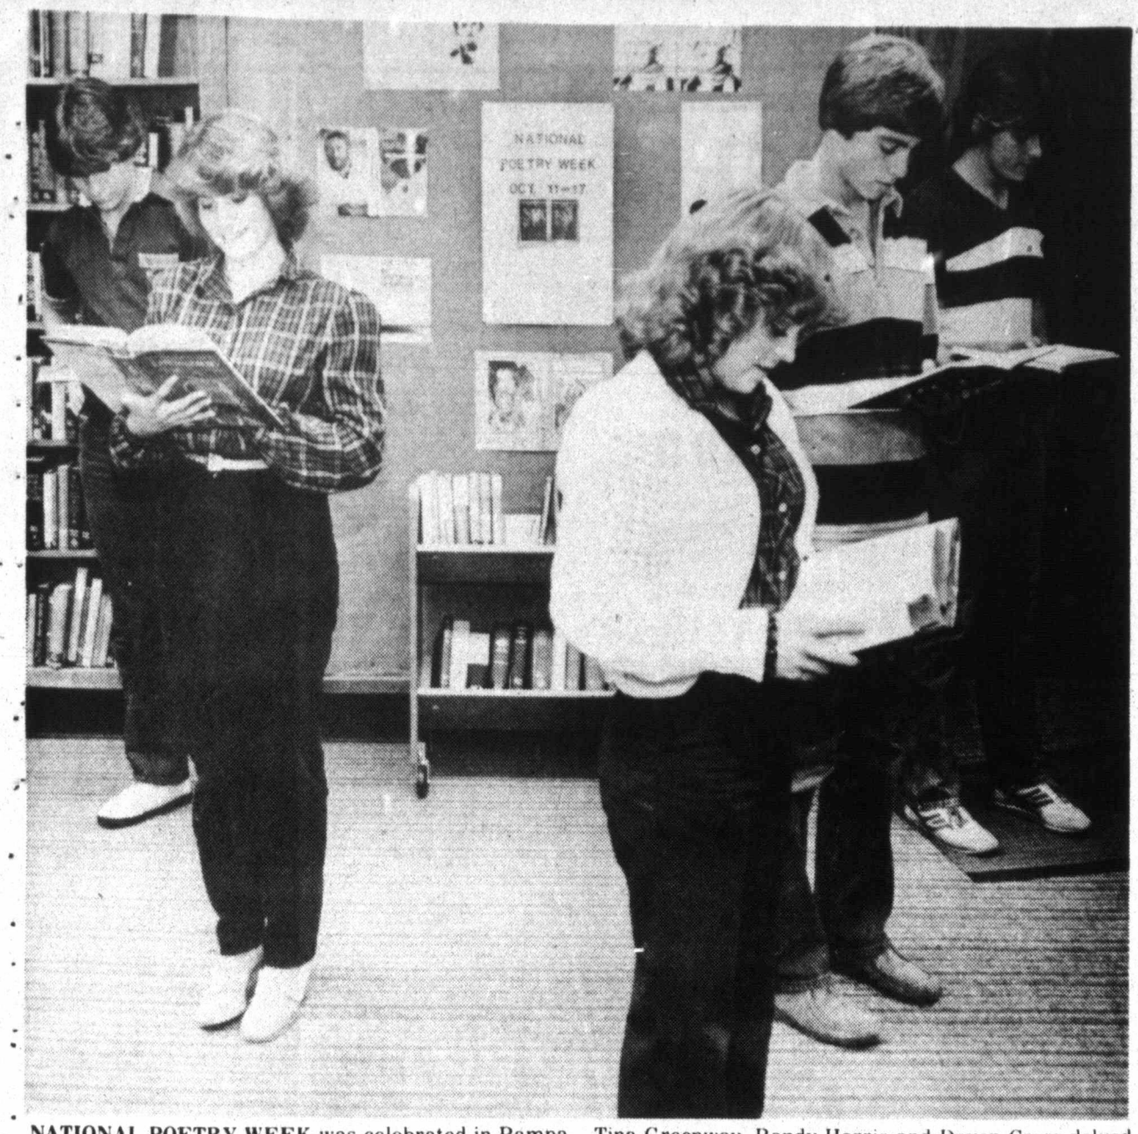

Some Saudis, heretofore happy with the prosperity of heaven, are now anxiously laying up treasures instead in Switzerland and London and Houston.

Unusual drug ring used free pills

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Investigators say they've broken a huge drug ring that ferried caravans of poor people to doctors for free prescription pills that were then mixed together to form a potent narcotic and sold for millions of dollars.

The poor people, participants in the state-financed health care program for the needy, were offered free drugs such as heroin and cocaine for their prescription pills, authorities said.

Fifty-one recipients of the Medi-Cal health-care benefits have been charged with fraudulently obtaining prescription pills and many more arrests are expected, the California Health Services Department announced Thursday. Up to 400 people participated in the scheme, authorities said.

One by one, the participants would go into the doctors' offices and complain of symptoms that they knew would require treatment with codeine or tranquilizers, investigators said. Then, prescriptions in hand, the Medi-Cal recipients would go to pharmacies and get them filled for free.

The tranquilizers were then mixed with the codeine to produce the potent and occasionally lethal heroin-like combination known on the street as "loads" or "four doors," and sold, sometimes right in the pharmacy parking lots, investigators said.

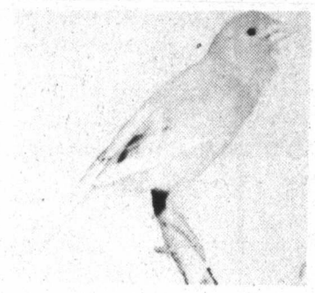

The operation in five California counties purchased 1.5 million pills a year, investigators said. The pills were worth $500,000 a year at the counter and the resultant "loads" were sold on the street for an estimated $3 million, officials said.

No doctors or pharmacists have been charged, but authorities said some were under investigation and charges might develop.

The organizers also have not been arrested.

Academic success doesn't always transfer into the world of reality

WASHINGTON (AP) — From the way Americans keep winning the Nobel Prize for economics, one might expect the U.S. economy to be a trouble-free, stable and prosperous system.

But success in the academic world, for which the Nobel is awarded, does not necessarily translate into success in the real world. The uncertain, troubled state of the economy is proof.

Since 1969, when an economics category was created, ten U.S. economists have won or shared the Nobel Prize. Four of them, including the latest winner, Yale University professor James Tobin, have been advisers to American presidents at some time in their careers.

As scholars, the Nobel laureates have been hailed in all economic quarters as giants in their field. But as public policy advisers, they have been assailed and ridiculed. Their advice often represents conflicting views. On some occassions it has been ignored by politicans; other times it has been off the mark.

Tobin was a key adviser 20 years ago to President Kennedy and is an influential proponent of the Keynesian school of thought, which Reagan administration economists are now trying to discredit.

The Keynesian view is that the government should increase spending, even at the risk of budget deficits and inflation, to stimulate economic growth and full employment. That view was popularized during the 1960s by Paul A. Samuelson, the 1970 Nobel Prize winner, who also was an influential Kennedy adviser.

Similar views propelled government policy for 20 years until the election of Ronald Reagan, who criticizes the Keynesians for leading the U.S. economy down a path of slow growth, high inflation and high unemployment.

"Samuelson and Tobin are in large part responsible for where we are now," complains Washington economist Michael Evans, who is an enthusiastic advocate of Reagan's policy of reducing federal spending, taxes and the growth in the nation's money supply. "They have given surprisingly bad advice."

But Walter Heller, another Kennedy era economic adviser, insists defensively that economists "sometimes take a bad rap" for the misuse of their theories by politicians.

Heller also notes that the Nobel Prize recognizes technical achievements that advance the study of economics as a science. The prize is not intended to condone an economic course for governments to pursue.

Thus, this year's winner was cited, not for his former role as a Kennedy adviser or more recent role as a stern critic of Reaganomics, but for his "portfolio theory," which advises investors to diversify their investments.

New restrictions proposed on freedom of information

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration proposed new restrictions on the Freedom of Information Act today but declined to take a position on the Central Intelligence Agency's request for exemptions from the act.

Jonathan C. Rose, assistant attorney general for legal policy, said he was "personally sympathetic" to CIA director William J. Casey's arguments that the agency's work is impeded by the disclosure law.

But, Rose told a reporter, "The White House has taken the view that we are not going to deal with that situation now."

Rose outlined the administration's proposed amendments to the act at a hearing by the Senate Judiciary subcommittee on the Constitution.

In response to a question by Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, about the act's applicability to the CIA, Rose said, "The administration takes no position with regard to that subject."

Rose also told the committee that he personally thought Casey and Bobby Ray Inman, deputy director of the CIA, had made a "very persuasive case" in raising "the fundamental question of whether it makes sense to have this statute apply to the agency at all."

Afterward the testimony, Gary Chase of the CIA general counsel's office followed Rose into the hallway and told him that he had understood the administration was going to take a position. Rose replied that the White House had said it would not.

Religion in the news

NEW YORK (AP) — As a college professor of literature in Oakland, Calif., Mose Durst was visited at home one day by an attractive young Korean woman, Onni. "She said she had come to make an end of God's suffering and the suffering of the world," he relates.

He was impressed and became more so as they became better acquainted, sharing an interest in Oriental art in which he was setting up an inter-disciplinary program of college studies.

"Seeing the quality of her life, I was deeply moved, the depth and the purity."

That was the beginning, eight years ago, of a tie that led Durst to become a member of the Unification Church, a "Moonie," later the husband of Onni, and recently the U.S. president of the controversial religious import.

"It's not rinky-dink stuff," he said in an interview, even though the group has encountered extensive opposition. "We're in the major leagues."

Relaxed, genial in manner, Durst explicitly asserted a previously veiled claim — that the group's founder and central authority, the Rev. Sun Myung Moon, succeeds Jesus as a "second messiah" to restore earthly righteousness.

Durst, 42, born in Brooklyn, reared an orthodox Jew, holds a doctorate in literature from the University of Oregon. He taught there and at colleges in New York and Pennsylvania before his 10 years at Laney College in Oakland ending in 1980.

He was chosen by Moon last year to replace Niel A. Salonen, a former Lutheran, as the U.S. president of a group that has met widespread opposition, accusations by parents and ex-members of brainwashing, abductions for "deprogramming" and vandalism of some centers.

Durst said the hostilities against Moon's mission some day will be keenly regretted but that Moonies aren't daunted by it.

He conceded that the group's unusual theology probably causes some of the antagonisms. It holds that Jesus partly failed because he was crucified instead of marrying and starting a perfect human lineage.

The "second messiah" is to do that, the group holds, and Moon picks marriage partners for members when considered ready for it, marries them in mass ceremonies, with their offspring regarded free of original sin to initiate a purified human strain.

The Ultimate in Satisfaction

When we were children, the ultimate in satisfaction was an ice cream cone, a nickel's worth of candy, a handful of homemade cookies. But now that we are grown-up, God's spirit has shown us there are more important things in life than satisfying our appetites. There is a higher plane of living — that of loving and serving God and one's neighbor. God wants us to respond to His love by showing this same kind of love to others. The church is the place to center your mature living. Attend church

"When I was a child, I spake as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as a child: but when I became a man, I put away childish things." I Cor. 13:11.

EVERYONE IN THE CHURCH
THE CHURCH IN EVERYONE

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Meat, poultry advisors group underway

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department is re-establishing a National Advisory Committee on Meat and Poultry Inspection to help deal with a variety of federal regulations that affect farmers and consumers.

But the 17-member panel, which was announced Wednesday by Assistant Agriculture Secretary C.W. McMillan, identifies only one appointee as a farmer and none as a consumer representative.

As McMillan's announcement described it, the committee represents "scientific and public health organizations, federal and state government agencies, academic circles and various private interest and trade groups."

The lone farmer on the committee was identified as William D. Waters of Palmyra, N.C.

"The selection of committee members is based on nominations submitted by various groups," McMillan said. "Every effort was made to gain national geographic distribution as well as a divergence of backgrounds and expertise, to achieve a broadly balance membership," he said.

Some of the topics to be taken up by the committee include mechanically processed meat, sodium content and labeling of meat and poultry products, food safety and legislative issues.

The advisory committee is required by law. Its organizational charter was established by Congress in 1971, renewed in 1978 and then renewed again, for an indefincte period, in 1980.

Rod Leonard, executive director of the Community Nutrition Institute, said his organization submitted several nominations to the committee but none was chosen. The non-profit institute act vely engages in consumer issues relating to agriculture and the food supply.

Leonard said in a telephone interview that he was not surprised the new committee did not include a consumer representative. He said it was an indication of Reagan administration policies that have cut away from consumerism in favor of "a strong industry bias."

The previous panel — which served during the Carter administration — included two consumer representatives but no farmers.

Other members of the new committee included:

—Roslyn B. Alfin-Slater, School of Public Health, University of California, Los Angeles.

—Carrroll S. Brickenkamp, National Bureau of Standards, Commerce Department, Washington, D.C.

—Mahlon Burnette, The Nutrition Consortium, Washington, D.C.

—Mason Carbaugh, Virginia state commissioner of agriculture and consumer services, Richmond.

—Frank Rankin Craig, director of health services, Perdue Farms Inc., Salisbury, Md.

—Esther Cramer, vice president for community relations, Alpha Beta Co., La Habra, Calif.

—E.M. Foster, director, Food Research Institute and chairman of the Department of Food Microbiology and Toxicology, University of Wisconsin, Madison.

—Robert H. Lounsberry, secretary, Iowa state agriculture department, Des Moines.

—John E. McDade, vice president, Norbest Inc., Salt Lake City, Utah.

—Rosemary Mucklow, executive director, Pacific Coast Meat Association Inc., San Francisco.

—Dean Pridgeon, director of Michigan state department of agriculture, Lansing.

—Ernest Ross, poultry scientist, department of animal sciences, University of Hawaii, Honolulu.

—Former U.S. Rep. Keith Sebelius, lawyer, Norton, Kan.

—Yvonne Vizzier, director of laboratory services, Marshall Durbin Companies, Jackson, Miss.

—Elizabeth Whelan, executive director, American Council on Science and Health, Summit, N.J.

—George D. Wilson, American Meat Institute, Rosslyn, Va.

WASHINGTON (AP) — American soybean farmers can breathe a little easier because of a decision by the European Common Market not to impose an internal tax on vegetable oil.

The Agriculture Department said Wednesday that the proposal, which had been under consideration for some time, was recently rejected in Brussels by the Common Market commission.

Wallace Lindell of the department's Foreign Agricultural Service said Wayne Sharp, the U.S. agricultural counselor in Brussels, informed department officials earlier this week that the tax plan had been turned down by the commission, at least for now.

Annual event planned for area authors

The annual Book and Author Dinner sponsored by the Friends of the Amarillo Library has ballooned into a three - day Festival of Books this year, including a book fair at the Civic Center, with programming and workshops planned by the Texas Circuit of Austin.

Publishers and authors interested in renting a booth for book sales at the fair, set for noon Friday, Oct. 23, through Saturday evening, should contact George Huffman, Amarillo College, book fair arrangements chairman. Jerry Hollingsworth, Friends president, emphasizes that the fair is a totally different event from the used book sale in April each year, which will continue to be held.

Festivities will culminate in the 13th annual Book and Author Dinner, 7 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 24 at the Civic Center, with Dan True as speaker. The dinner honors area authors who have had a book published since March 1980, the date of the last dinner. The list totals 28 names to date, and information on others should be sent to the library office. Bob Watson is general arrangements chairman and will be master of ceremonies.

Attending from the Pampa area will be John Erickson, now of John Little Ranch, Knowles, Okla., formerly of Perryton.

Reservations for the dinner are now being accepted in the library office or by telephone. Although all Friends activities are for the benefit of the library, the Festival of Books is planned chiefly as a community event celebrating the importance of books and literature in the quality of life. Admission to the book fair and all programs and workshops is free.

A reception at 7 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 22 at the Central Library, 413 East 4th, will initiate the weekend Festival of Books and will feature readings by area authors from their own published works. Those reading include Mildred Crabtree Speer, Pauline Robertson, Nova Bair and Jerry McDonough. Music will be by Bruce Loyd and Mike Raillard.

Workshop sessions of an hour each will include "How to Get Your Work Published" and "Small Press Books: an Annotated Lecture," both by Susan Bright. A roundtable reading of poems or passages from other works by the authors, hosted by Mildred Crabtree Speer, will last two hours on Saturday afternoon.

All workshops will be held at the library multipurpose room, with times to be announced, and are open to all at no charge.

Louella Stewart, Amarillo College Learning Resources Center, is local coordinator for programs and workshops. Texas Circuit, an organization of small press publishers and authors, exists to increase public awareness of contemporary literature, to make small press books available to the public, and to foster literary programming in Texas. The Circuit's booth at the book fair will have 400 titles.

Everyone needs a will

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Where there's a will, there's a way — to protect your family and property.

No one likes to think about death, and many people delay drawing up a will in the mistaken belief that they don't need one or don't have enough money to worry about.

According to experts at Citibank, the nation's second largest commercial bank, just about everyone — married or single, with or without children — needs a will. "Chances are, your estate is larger than you think," says a Citibank consumer guide.

The rising value of real estate has made many people rich, on paper at least. Add the worth of your house to personal property such as an automobile, jewelry and furniture, and you can easily find yourself with an estate topping $100,000. Your savings account also is part of your estate. So are employee benefits.

If you die without a will your assets will be distributed according to state law. The court will appoint an administrator to handle the job and the way the money is divided could surprise you. In New York, for example, if you are married, have no children and die, your estate will be shared by your spouse and your parents, if they are surviving. In some states, a distant relative can take precedence over a husband or wife.

The tax bill passed by Congress may affect your will. Until now, an individual could transfer half the value of an estate, up to $250,000, to a surviving spouse without paying taxes on it. The new law removes the limit. It also increases the size of an estate which can be passed on to heirs, without taxes. By 1987, an estate worth $600,000 will be tax - free; the current limit is just over $175,000.

As a general rule, you should have your will drawn up by a lawyer. Costs vary, depending on the complexity of your financial affairs, but you should be able to get a simple will for $100 to $200. Don't be shy about asking the price before you come to any agreement.

Do - it - yourself wills are risky. "More often than not these wills are invalid and may not represent your wishes," advises the Credit Union National Association.

Prepare for your first meeting with the lawyer by putting together a list of all your assets and their current value. Plan a tentative division of property, considering family needs and expectations, and select a guardian or guardians for minor children.

List everything you own — stocks and bonds and everything that would be due on your death: pensions, for example, or insurance benefits. A complete picture of your estate can help your lawyer plan for your family's future, even if some of the items are not actually included in the will.

Many couples assume that they can avoid a will by joint ownership of all property. The Citibank guide points out, however, that a will is still necessary in case husband and wife die at the same time.

Dear Abby

Son's guest is 'for the birds'

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: While I was away from home, a young woman came into my home as a guest of my son. This young woman took "Freddy," my precious parakeet, out of his cage, opened the front door and threw him out, saying he was "born free."

Abby, I had had Freddy for five years and I had grown to love him very much. It has been three weeks since this incident occurred and now I have given up all hope of ever seeing my sweet bird again.

I pray that you will print this so that young woman will realize the sorrow she has caused.

J.M.T., FOSTER CITY, MICH.

DEAR J.M.T.: "Realizing the sorrow she has caused" is hardly adequate restitution for having robbed you of your beloved pet. That cruel and thoughtless young woman owes you a replacement for Freddy. And since it was your son who brought her into your home, he should assume some responsibility for the loss of your pet.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I am an 18-year-old virgin (girl) who is tired of hearing the statistic: "Only three out of every 10 teens under the age of 18 are virgins."

I have been going steady with my boyfriend for two years. We plan to marry as virgins when we finish college. Our relationship is very strong and we don't feel that sex would make it any stronger at this time. I find it hard to believe that our values are not shared by more teens.

My question to you, Abby, is: How accurate do you think these statistics are? With so much peer pressure and so much stress on sex today, I'll bet there are a lot of teens who are still virgins, but they wouldn't dare admit it.

I question that there is really a valid way to get accurate statistics. I would appreciate your opinion.

WAITING FOR MARRIAGE

DEAR WAITING: What you say makes sense, but much depends on how the statistics were gathered. In a written questionnaire where participants are not required to identify themselves, the chances for 100 percent honesty are almost a certainty. But in a face-to-face confrontation, that's something else again.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I'm confused. When does one use "further" as opposed to "farther"? I never know for sure which word to use. Thanks.

MURRAY IN MADISON

DEAR MURRAY: When referring to physical distance, use "farther." Use "further" for everything else. The late Ted Bernstein, in "The Careful Writer," wrote: "Fifty years hence copy editors probably won't have to worry about this distinction because it looks as if 'farther' is going to be mowed down by the scythe of Old Further Time."

* * *

DEAR ABBY: My fiancee and I plan to marry next month. Although I know it is traditional for the wife to write the thank-you notes for wedding gifts, I see no reason for her to be saddled with that task — especially for gifts from my relatives and long-time friends.

Would it be improper for me to write a substantial number of thank-you notes myself?

GROOM-TO-BE

DEAR GROOM: Improper? Are you kidding? I think it's a wonderful idea, and not nearly as untraditional as you might think. Right On! Write on!

Author's divorce forms basis of novel

ANNETTE BROOKS, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Brooks of 604 Deane Drive, has been named art and layout editor for the 1981 - 82 Clarendon College annual. Annette is a sophomore at the college, where she is a member of Phi Theta Kappa, Art Club, Spanish Club, Drama Club and Sportsman Club.

By MARLENE AIG
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Howard Crook is not afraid to declare that "for the first time, I have a good happy life."

The 43 - year - old author whose first novel, "The Brownstone Cavalry," has attracted both critical praise and a movie option, explains, "I have my kids, I have someone I care about, I'm in a city I like and I'm writing fiction, which I've always wanted to do."

But such a declaration comes only after years of literary frustration ("I was a great one for burning manuscripts," he says) and after the painful dissolution to his 10 - year marriage.

His novel is, in fact, a kind of catharsis for that pain, a resolution for what he calls his "worst two years of hell," the years he adjusted to his marital breakup. "The Brownstone Cavalry" is the story of three men whose lives have been disastrously disjointed by divorce. It is not a story, Crook emphasizes, about how to make the marriage work. It's about how men must cope with post - divorce depression.

"Marriage is a kind of unit," he says. "In a divorce, a man gets expelled. You're in a wilderness. The woman keeps the house, the children, the friends. The man experiences the loss and so many turn it against themselves."

Speaking from experience, Crook, the father of two, says, "The biggest sense of loss a man has is the loss of his children."

But divorce creates another kind of loss as well. "All the time you're married, you think of yourself as a 'we.' All of a sudden, you're alone and you've forgotten how to be a 'me.' So many bad second marriages happen because men can't stand being alone."

The solution in his novel is the friendship of other men going through the same experience and their mutual efforts to understand what has happened. Their support and sympathy for each other is vital.

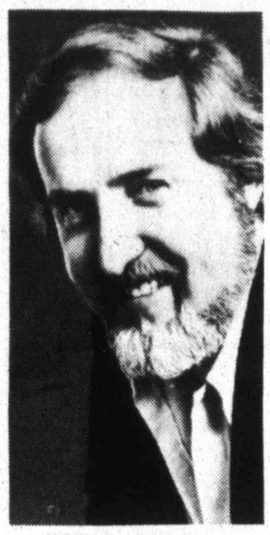

The story is set in Brooklyn Heights, where Crook now lives. He was born in Brooklyn, but by the time he was 5, he had had pneumonia five times. So the family first moved to Florida for his health, then finally settled in El Paso, Texas, where, he says, "I got very healthy."

He graduated from the University of Texas at Austin with an English - economics major and went off to Denver with dreams of being another Joyce or Chekhov.

After "literally starving," it occurred to him that reporters make money writing, albeit not fiction. All he knew of journalism, he says, was Humphrey Bogart in "Deadline: U.S.A." So, equipped with trenchcoat and slouch hat, he went to San Francisco in search of a job and finally landed one at the Oakland Tribune as a copyboy.

He progressed eastward and landed in New York with a wire service and later worked for newspapers. All along, he was writing fiction and throwing it away.

In the middle of it, his marriage broke up. He was bitter. A car accident left him with a broken pelvis and a long recuperation period in Texas, where he finally understood "what kind of self - destructive person I'd become."

He returned to New York, got a copy - editing job at The New York Times and slowly, "got my act together," writing the book over a two - year period. Once he got an advance on the book, he says, he quit his job and is now, with several novels in progress, a full - time writer — something he's always wanted to be.

Because he works at home his two sons, 8 and 11, live with him during the week. His former wife, Paula, a computer programmer whom he now calls "my best friend," has weekend custody.

"Raising my kids," he says, "is a wonderful challenge" and one he clearly enjoys.

He admits that, before and during his marriage, he was a "moderate male chauvinist pig." But now, he is a great supporter of women.

"Women," he says, "are answering the call of our time. They're entering the 21st century on schedule. Men are still locked in their father's armor, trapped in the 19th century. They need to have more awareness of the equality of roles and of entering a new era."

He hopes his experience will help other men in the same situation come to grips with their emotions. "First comes feeling," he says, "then comes insight. Then," he smiles knowingly, "comes change."

SPEAKING OF SOAPS

BY MARY ANN COOPER

The world of soaps seems to be filled with song these days. Here are just a few examples of daytime stars who are showing off their musical talents.

Tom Nielsen, one of the younger stars of the popular serial "The Guiding Light" in the role of hospital maintenance man and former lover of the wicked Nola Reardon, has been seen occasionally on the series singing and playing the guitar and saxaphone. Now, arrangements have been made for Nielsen to record his own album, which will consist mainly of songs he has written himself, in the rock music vein.

Meanwhile, also on "The Guiding Light," John Wesley Shipp, who plays Kelly on that serial, called upon another Kelly to join him for a musical happening recently. Allen Fawcett who plays Kelly McGrath on "The Edge of Night," showed another side of his many talents -- that of a flautist -- when he played on several tracks of Shipp's upcoming, independently-produced album. It may come as a surprise to his fans to learn that Allen made his show business debut as flautist with the Doc Severinsen band. Who knows what other surprises this talented young man may have up his sleeve.

Elsewhere on CBS, Eileen Fulton who plays Lisa on "As The World Turns" has recorded a single written by Earl Wilson entitled "Doggie Bag" which is due to be released soon.

Of course, one of the most recognizable soap stars with a singing career is Rick Springfield who plays Noah on "General Hospital." Currently working its way up the charts is Rick's album "Working Class Dog."

Finally on "The Young and the Restless," Wings Hauser has clipped his 'wings' and changed his name. It seems that Hauser was advised by a leading record company that using his first name on an album would cause confusion since Paul McCartney's band is also named "Wings." So from now on look for Hauser to be billed under a new heading, "J.D. Hauser."

Now a look at what's been happening and what will happen on all the afternoon dramas.

Injury-riddled Harvesters meet Caprock in loop opener

When it rains it pours!

Pampa's heavy rainfall, dense fog and the deluge of injuries that has the Pampa High football team is almost too much to handle in one week. Especially if you're a motorist trying to get to work or a football coach trying to get ready for district play.

The injuries couldn't have been more ill-timed since the Harvesters open District 3-5A action at 7:30 p.m. tonight against Caprock in Amarillo's Dick Bivins Stadium.

For starters, noseguard-fullback Harold Landers, who played key roles in Pampa's last two victories, may miss the game.

"Harold hasn't worked out all week," Harvester coach Larry Gilbert said. "He felt better Thursday so it's just a wait and see situation now."

Landers, the only returning starter, has rushed for 99 yards and scored three touchdowns since he started playing fullback two weeks ago. The 195-pound senior anchors the defense and has come up with crucial stops in Pampa's wins over Altus Okla. (13-10) and Lubbock Monterey (16-7).

"Harold is the best athlete on the team and we've counted on him coming up with the big play," Gilbert added. "He's a competitor and he wants to play, but I'm not going to play him if he's seriously hurting."

Tackle Bryan Bowen reinjured a thigh in Tuesday's practice and backup guard-linebacker Mark Rove sprained an ankle just five minutes before Wednesday's practice ended.

Gilbert said Todd Mitchell would fill Bowen's tackle spot and Jimmy Ontiveros has been called up from the junior varsity to take Rove's place.

"These guys may be able to go tonight, but we'll just have to wait and see," Gilbert said. "I'm hoping Landers will be able to see a little spot duty."

Should Landers be unable to play, Bill Carter and David Parr would rotate at noseguard while Ricky Stout and Danny Sebastian would rotate at fullback, Gilbert said.

Linebacker Ricky Beard, who sprained an ankle in last week's game with Monterey, worked out Wednesday for the first time this week. His status is still up in the air.

Gilbert can still see the rainbow despite the injury problems.

"We haven't lost anybody for an entire season like we did last year, but I'm keeping my fingers crossed," Gilbert added. "We've got the type of players who will suck it up and give it everything they've got, whether it's Landers or anyone else who is injured."

Caprock enters the district clash with a 3-3 record, losing a 19-18 heartbreaker to Lubbock High last week.

"I thought Caprock had the better football team, but they gave Lubbock two touchdowns when they fumbled the ball away," Gilbert said.

Gilbert says he fears the Longhorns' passing attack more than the running of Stephon Hodge, the district's top rusher with 626 yards. Hodge has already scored 11 touchdowns this season.

"Hodge is a running threat, but their passing worries me the most," Gilbert said. "One of the keys to winning the game is to not giving up a big play on a pass. Their quarterback, David Moore, throws the ball on a par with Alan Wartes (Hereford quarterback). He's got a lot of poise and he doesn't let the pass rush bother him."

Moore's favorite receiver is Chris Carpenter, who has caught 17 passes for 343 yards and one touchdown.

"Carpenter reminds me a lot of Steve McDougall (Pampa split end who led the district in receptions)," Gilbert said. "He has a knack for coming up with the big play."

Another key to winning is ball control, Gilbert said.

"I look for it to be a low scoring game, but we've got to be able to move the football on them," he added.

Pampa blanked Caprock, 21-0, in 1980, but Gilbert feels the Longhorns are the team to beat this season.

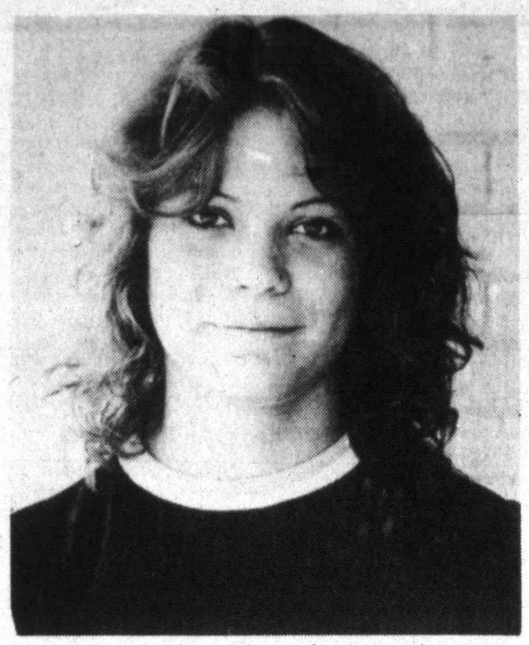

"I'm not just saying that because we're playing them," Gilbert added. "Caprock is first in total defense and second in total offense. Sometimes statistics are misleading, but in this case they tell the story."

Pampa has an overall 2-4 record going into district play.

"We could have easily gone into district with no wins because of the people we've played," Gilbert said. "We could have had another win at Dumas, but we let it slip away due to lack of experience. The past is history now. It's just like the baseball playoffs. What the teams did before doesn't mean anything now."

In the wake of two victories, practice sessions have been much more enjoyable for the Harvesters.

"Practice is a lot more fun when you win," Gilbert said. "If we can get after Caprock the way we did against Monterey, I'll be proud of this young team no matter what the outcome."

LESLIE ALBUS....Serves Pampa to victory.

Georgia angler leads tourney

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Stanley Mitchell has a very precious possession — the one lure on which he caught a limit of seven fish that gave him the lead going into today's second round of the $100,000 BASS Masters Classic fishing tournament.

Mitchell, 21, of Fitzgerald, Ga., is the youngest angler in the tournament sponsored by the Bass Anglers Sportsman Society.

He checked in 15 pounds, 5-ounces of black bass Thursday for the first step toward the $40,000 first prize.

The timber business operator refused to say what lure he was using, but admitted the fish were hitting a little behind it and he may add a trailing hook.

"I've got six or seven places to go where I think there are fish. I don't think the fish will move" to other spots in the 75-mile-long Lake Montgomery, he said.

Mitchell's fish included a 5-pound, 9-ounce largemouth that earned him $1,000 for the biggest fish caught by any of the 42 contestants Thursday.

The tournament winds up Saturday with the winner

Harvesters post vb wins over Borger

Pampa defeated Borger, 13-15, 15-13 and 15-6 in a slow-moving non-district girls' volleyball match Thursday night in Harvester Fieldhouse.

The Harvesters, now 16-7 overall, resume District 3-5A play against Caprock Tuesday night in Amarillo.

"Borger was hitting the ball straight back over the net at us," Pampa coach Lynn Wolfe said. "We had numerous ball-handling errors in the first game that gave them an advantage."

Pampa slipped by Caprock in the second game to even the match, but fell behind in the finale before Leslie Albus took command at the service line.

"We were able to dominate the game due to the composure of Albus," coach Wolfe said. "We were behind, 2-6, when she started serving."

With Albus serving, Pampa ran off 13 consecutive points behind some solid hitting by Lena Young and Sharolyn Salisbury.

Pampa misfired on only two serves, both ironically by Albus, who was 18 of 20 from the line. Borger missed seven serves.

Harvesters who had perfect serves were Paula Sims (13-13), Carla Rogers (16-16), Alicia Brewer (7-7), Paula Fulton (7-7), and Teresa Glover (5-5).

Pampa also won the JV match, 14-15, 8-6 and 15-3.

"Our lack of serving ability hurt us," coach Wolfe said. "We missed nine serves and Borger missed three."

Pampa's Cynthia Powell was perfect from the service line.

Pampa JVs are now 15-2 on the season.

Yankees shut out Oakland to win American League championship

OAKLAND (AP) — The New York Yankees are in another World Series, lending a touch of tradition to a strange, strike-marred baseball season.

"I want a Yankees-Dodgers Series. I hate the Dodgers," said rookie pitcher Dave Righetti, one of the most openly delighted members of the team that won the American League pennant by beating the Oakland A's 4-0 Thursday night, sweeping the best-of-five league playoff.

The Yankees, who have made 32 previous World Series appearances, will open at home Tuesday night against either the Los Angeles Dodgers or Montreal Expos, tied 1-1 in the National League playoff that resumes tonight in Montreal.

All of the Yankees' Series teams of the past won 90 or more regular season games. The 1981 team won 59 in a season interrupted for two months because of the players' strike.

There was no champagne in the Yankees' clubhouse, on orders of owner George Steinbrenner. And there were no complaints.

"We haven't won anything yet," said Steinbrenner, who embraced his most celebrated former employee, Billy Martin, and told the A's manager, "You never gave up, you little rat."

Martin predicted that his young team would win the AL West again next season. "And we'll go all the way then."

But Yankee Manager Bob Lemon, who replaced Martin during the championship season of 1978 and took over after Gene Michael was fired this year, is the man in charge as the Yankees go after a 23rd world championship.

"This ballclub has won a lot," said Reggie Jackson, who didn't even notice the absence of champagne until it was pointed out to him. "We're like the A's team of 1974. I think we broke open one bottle of champagne when we won the pennant that year, then headed for Los Angeles and won the Series in five games.

"We know we haven't reached our ultimate goal."

Jackson, a member of the A's world championship teams of 1972-73-74, said he expects to be in the Yankees' starting lineup for the Series opener despite being held out of Thursday night's game because of a torn calf muscle.

"Nothing surprises me about our club. We knew what we had to do and we did it," said Graig Nettles, the veteran third baseman whose three-run double in the ninth inning off reliever Tom Underwood gave him a playoff record of nine runs batted in, earning him the series Most Valuable Player Award.

Righetti went six innings for the pitching victory and the Yankees' overpowering relievers, Ron Davis and Rich Gossage, came on to complete the five-hit shutout.

Willie Randolph, the New York second baseman demoted recently from the top of the batting order to the No. 9 spot, accounted for game's first run with a two-out homer in the sixth off A's starter Matt Keough.

"If I hadn't made that pitch, we still might be playing," said Keough, who was 2-0 against the Yankees in regular-season appearances and earned added respect Thursday night.

But the right-hander, who left after an error by second baseman Dave McKay got him in trouble in the ninth, probably could have hoped for only a 0-0 tie.

"We didn't hit the ball, didn't score runs," said A's right fielder Tony Armas, summing up the game and the series, in which the A's totaled four runs.

Martin talked before the series of having a pitching edge because the Yankees would be unable to use Ron Guidry and Righetti in the first two games at Yankee Stadium.

"I felt all along we had the pitching edge," said Nettles. "All our starters are strong, and we have the best bullpen in baseball."

Davis retired all six batters he faced in the series finale. Gossage pitched the ninth and earned his fifth post-season save of the year, striking out two batters, giving up an Armas single and ending the game by retiring Wayne Gross on a popup.

Neither reliever had to face Rickey Henderson or Dwayne Murphy, the top two men in the Oakland order. Both A's outfielders left early in the game, Murphy with an injured ribcage and Henderson with a bruised wrist.

"That was an awfully big thing for them," said Gossage. "Those two are among the best players in either league."

The Yankees' bullpen strength, as Lemon said, "makes it cut and dried what we're going to do" late in games.

"If you let a runner get on base after the seventh, you know you're probably coming out," said Righetti, who is 3-0 in postseason play incluing his two divisional playoff victories over Milwaukee.

"The way the Goose (Gossage) was firing, it was just 'Forget It' for the A's," said Righetti.

Brown leads Texas Open

HORSESHOE BAY, Texas (AP) — Doug Brown fired a six-under-par 66 Thursday to take a one stroke edge going into Friday's final round of the rain-shortened Texas State Open golf tournament at the Horseshoe Bay Country Club.

Brown, an Arlington pro, got seven birdies and just one bogey over the 6,839-yard par-72 course. He shot a one-under par 71 in Wednesday's first round.

Wednesday's leader, Robert Hoyt, shot 72 Thursday and dropped to fourth place just one stroke behind Roger Parker of San Antonio and Terry Snodgrass of Arlington who posted two-day totals of 138.

Four strokes behind the leader were Dave Davis of Fort Worth, Greg Young of Dallas and Don Massengale of Conroe.

Cowboys-Rams renew intense rivalry

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

Few interdivisional rivalries have reached the intensity in recent years of the Los Angeles Rams and Dallas Cowboys. On Sunday night they renew it in Texas Stadium.

The two teams are heading in opposite directions. The Rams, after losing their first two games, have won four in a row, most recently 37-35 in Atlanta. The Cowboys, after winning four in a row, have dropped the past two games, most recently 45-14 in San Francisco.

Dallas routed the Rams 34-13 in last year's playoffs, when Danny White threw three touchdown passes, one of them to Tony Dorsett, who also scored on a 12-yard run, part of his 160-yard day on the ground.

In 1979, Dallas ripped the Rams 30-6 during the regular season — but Los Angeles avenged that with a 21-19 National Conference championship triumph that propelled it into the Super Bowl.

In 1978 it was the Rams who won the regular-season meeting 27-14 but the Cowboys who prevailed in the playoffs 28-0. In all, Los Angeles has won nine of the 17 times the teams have met.

Sunday afternoon's games are Tampa Bay at Oakland, Denver at Kansas City, Pittsburgh at Cincinnati, Philadelphia at Minnesota, San Diego at Baltimore, the New York Giants at Seattle, Buffalo at the New York Jets, Houston at New England, Washington at Miami, San Francisco at Green Bay (Milwaukee) and New Orleans at Cleveland. On Monday night it's Chicago at Detroit.

The Oakland Raiders are hoping to avoid matching the single-season record of four consecutive shutout losses suffered by the Brooklyn Dodgers of 1943 (the Dodgers failed to score a point in their last two games of '42 as well as the first four of '43) when they face Tampa Bay. The Bucs have pulled into a first-place tie with Minnesota in the NFC Central Division.

The Broncos can retain their grip on first place in the AFC West by beating Kansas City, which won both games from Denver last year to end an eight-year losing streak. Denver has both the No.1 defense in the league and the No.1-rated passer, Craig Morton. If both the Chiefs and San Diego win on Sunday, the top of the division will be thrown into a three-way tie.

Cincinnati, Pittsburgh and Houston all share the lead in the AFC Central Division. The Steelers are on a roll — four consecutive victories. They are out to avenge losses to the Bengals in both meetings last year. Riverfront Stadium has been somewhat of a problem the past two seasons — 16 turnovers in their two most recent games there.

Philadelphia, now the only unbeaten team in the league and two games ahead of Dallas in the NFC East, goes against charged-up Minnesota which rallied last Sunday to upset San Diego 33-31 for its fourth consecutive victory. The Vikings' offense is the best in the NFC.

Monday night's game in Detroit will revive memories of one of the most electrifying finishes to a Thanksgiving Day game. Last year, when the Bears invaded the Silverdome, they scored on the final play of regulation time to tie the score, then David Williams ran the ensuing kickoff 95 yards for a touchdown in 21 seconds, the shortest overtime game in NFL history.

"Coal is decreasing the increase. Fuel is the biggest cost factor in your monthly electric bill and that cost would be much higher if Southwestern had not begun a move away from gas as fuel. Even figuring the costs of transportation, regulation and environmental protection, coal is still a less expensive fuel than gas. SPS was a 100% natural gas-fired system as recently as 1976. Now more than 40% of the electricity we generate is coal-fired, and by 1985 more than half will be by coal. In this way, SPS will be able to continue to decrease the increase in your electric bill."
Morris Rantz, Manager, Fuel Administration, Amarillo

"How a heat pump works. The heat pump does just what the name implies . . . it pumps heat into your home in winter and out in summer. The electric heat pump consumes less energy than any other electric heating and cooling system. There is warmth in the air in winter (even at 0 degrees F), and the heat pump squeezes out every bit of that warmth. Supplemental electric heaters are used in the heat pump for extremely cold temperatures, but in the generally mild temperatures of our service area, the heat pump simply takes advantage of mother nature. This means savings to you while you enjoy the clean comfort of electric heating or air conditioning."
Allan Carleton, Heating & Air Conditioning Specialist, Amarillo

"One kilowatt-hour costs about 6¢. Your electric bill is figured on the number of kilowatt-hours of electricity you use. A kilowatt-hour is 1,000 watts of electric power used for one hour, so if you use a hair dryer for an hour you have used a kilowatt-hour of electricity. (Hair dryers use an average of 1,000 watts.) Today that kilowatt-hour costs about 6¢—less than it cost in 1927! In those days, electricity was used for lighting only. Today electricity does many other tasks for you and saves you time . . . and that's money."

CHICAGO (AP) — Former Chicago Bear linebacker Dick Butkus is the first-round draft choice of the Republican Party to run for congress in a district which ecompasses several suburbs south of Chicago.

Butkus said Thursday he had changed his mind from last week, when he flatly rejected the party's suggestion he run against Rep. Marty Russo, D-Ill.

"The more I thought about it, why not me?" Butkus said during an interview on Chicago radio station WGN.

James McAvoy, a field representative for the National Republican Congressional Committee, said Butkus "wants to bide his time for three or four weeks."

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — FBI agents made a videotape of a sheriff's officer taking a $400 bribe from a massage parlor operator while he promised her protection from prostitution arrests, a newspaper reports.

As part of the investigation into focal corruption, agents on Thursday arrested sheriff's Lt. Anthony Chavana, a 16-year veteran of the Bexar County Sheriff's Department. Agent-in-Charge Jack Lawn said Chavana allegedly solicited and accepted bribes from massage parlors.

The San Antonio Light, in a copyright story, said unidentified sources claimed at least two other officers in the sheriff's department have been targeted by the FBI in the investigation.

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A sheriff's decision to pick jurors off the street 20 years ago for an escaped convict's murder trial has led to a new trial order for the defendant, just months after his parole.

Douglas Thompson, now living in Granada Hills, Calif., said he is prepared to face the new trial, even if it means a new prison sentence, his attorney said Thursday after learning of the decision by the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Thompson was convicted and sentenced to two concurrent life terms after a 1961 trial for three killings in Missouri, including the deaths of two police officers during a shootout. Another convict who escaped with Thompson was sent to the gas chamber.

BELVIDERE, Ill. (AP) — Chrysler Corp. claims it was overcharged in local taxes at its assembly plant here, and the city council must curtail police protection to meet the reimbursement bill.

Police Chief William Redding warned Thursday that "while the council is arguing, Rome is burning." The city of 17,000 people is suffering a major increase in crime, Redding said.

The council voted to eliminate all but emegency police patrols to save $35,000 a year. The city council says it must find $260,000 in its current budget to reimburse Chrysler.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A 4.8 percent pay hike for 1.4 million federal white collar workers will cost the government an estimated $2 billion, according to a White House statement.

President Reagan approved the raise Thursday, but the action came as no surprise to those who will get the increase in their next paychecks.

The executive order carrying out a plan Reagan submitted to Congress on Aug. 31 raises the salary of a beginning GS-1 employee to $8,342 and brings about 11,000 more senior civil servants to the present top salary of $50,112 a year.

About 37,000 federal employees who already have reached that ceiling won't get an increase unless Congress lifts the cap.

The government's half-million blue collar workers will get similar increases, but they are paid according to regional pay scales, and the dates and amounts vary from state to state.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A voluntary recall is under way by an Albany, N.Y., company after tests confirmed at least two samples of its roast beef contained the food poisoning organism salmonella.

State National Provision Inc. sold the roast beef under the brand names of Orlev and State National to retailers and wholesalers in New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Massachusetts and Rhode Island, officials said. The product is sold in delicatessens and cafeterias.

Donald L. Houston, administrator of the U.S. Agriculture Department's Food Safety and Inspection Service, said Thursday in announcing the recall that several students at the State University of New York, Oswego, reported becoming ill after eating some of the beef.

Salmonellosis is the most common form of food poisoning in the United States, Houston said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — There is a "broad and deep consensus across the land" favoring pollution controls, pollster Louis Harris says.

Harris on Thursday gave a congressional committee survey results which he said showed "lopsided majorities" opposed to weakening the Clean Air Act.

But Republican members of the Energy and Commerce Committee countered with the results of other, previously unpublicized Harris polls which they said supported other conclusions.

Harris said majorities up to 80 percent favored strengthening the act, which expires next year, or extending it without changes.

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — Nearly 14 months after seizing power, Turkey's ruling military junta says it has picked a 160-member Consultative Assembly, whose duties including drafting a new constitution.

The ruling National Security Council said Thursday that the assembly will meet Oct. 23, calling it a first step to the return of democracy in this NATO-member nation.

But the assembly will have little power since all its actions must be approved by the junta's five generals. They took power in a bloodless coup Sept. 12, 1980 to crush increasing political violence.

The junta said assembly members include 50 civil servants, 20 retired army officers and 15 judges; the rest are academicians, lawyers, doctors and trade unionists.

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Poland, Guyana, Jordan, Togo and Zaire were named to two-year terms on the Security Council starting next Jan. 1.

The General Assembly elected them Thursday by secret ballot to succeed East Germany, Mexico, the Philippines, Niger and Tunisia. The five will serve as non-permanent members of the council alongside Panama, Japan, Uganda, Ireland and Spain, which have another year to go in their two-year term.

Five permanent members also serve on the council — China, the Soviet Union, Britain, France and the United States.

The Security Council is the most powerful U.N. body. The U.N. charter gives it responsibility to maintain peace and security and authorizes it to order U.N. members to impose sanctions on countries threatening peace.

ROME (AP) — The City Council elected Communist Ugo Vetere mayor of Rome to replace Luigi Petroselli, also a Communist, who died Oct. 7 of a heart attack.

Vetere received 39 votes in the Thursday election, compared to 25 for his Christian Democrat opponent Giovanni Galloni.

Vetere, 57, had been chief city councilman for budget matters. He was elected with support of the Communists, Socialists, and the small left-wing Democratic Party for Proletarian Unity.

Vetere joined the Communist Party in 1946, and headed the Communist union Federation of Government Employees from 1957 to 1967. He was elected in 1966 to Parliament's Chamber of Deputies, where he still serves.
