Planning Division manager Compton retires

City position is vacant for third time in two years, this time during a housing crisis

By Joseph Basco
jbasco@mrt.com

The city of Midland lost its Planning Division manager on Monday, making the position a revolving door in the midst of a housing crisis.

The recent retirement of planning manager Jim Compton is the third time a city hall staffer has left the important position in two years. Two managers vacated the position in 2013. The latter vacancy prompted Compton to be promoted from senior planner to planning manager.

Bob Baronti, who was the senior planner, is now the interim planning manager.

Chuck Harrington, director for the development services department that oversees the planning division, said Compton did not have a reason for retiring after 30-plus years with the city of Midland.

The planning division has had its troubles with full staffing. It was not until earlier this year that the planning division was fully staffed.

"I think they're in a search for people nonstop," said Kevin Wilton, Planning and Zoning Commission chairman. "If they had somebody they could hire they probably would but I think the problem is, they're having a lot of trouble getting people to move to Midland. When people get here, they're thinking, 'When can I get out of here as soon as possible?'"

Even with the manager vacancy, Harrington said it will be "business as usual" at the planning division. There are 14 items on the agenda for Monday's Planning and Zoning Commission meeting; typically there are only about seven items slated.

As city hall moves forward, developers will continue to plan subdivisions with less land to work with and more pressure to meet demand. The planning division and the commission, the gatekeepers of new platting and zoning, has worked in overdrive even when all positions were not filled.

The city plans to find a replacement manager, but has yet to put out a job listing.

Wilton thinks it will be unlikely that the new planning division manager would be someone like Compton who has Midland experience.

"That's one reason it upset me that he's gone," Wilton said. "'Cause now that makes our job a lot harder. The other people are intelligent, they just don't know anything about Midland, because they haven't been here."

Perry criticized for comparing homosexuality with alcoholism

By Maggie Galehouse
Houston Chronicle

Houston medical experts and a gay activist debunked Gov. Rick Perry's remarks comparing homosexuality with alcoholism.

"Whether or not you feel compelled to follow a particular lifestyle or not, you have the ability to decide not to do that," Perry told the Commonwealth Club of California earlier this week. "I may have the genetic coding that I'm inclined to be an alcoholic, but I have the desire not to do that, and I look at the homosexual issue the same way."

The comparison is incorrect, according to the medical community.

UT/TT Poll: Abbott leads Davis by 12 points

By Ross Ramsey
Texas Tribune

Republican Greg Abbott leads Democrat Wendy Davis by 12 percentage points in the race for governor, according to a new University of Texas/Texas Tribune Poll.

That result is close to the 11-point spread, also in Abbott's favor, in the February UT/TT Poll. In this most recent survey, he maintained a 14-point lead among male voters and a 10-percentage point lead among female voters.

"Abbott remains strong and this, in a lot of ways, confirms the strategy that we've seen from his camp: Leave well enough alone," said Jim Henson, director of the Texas Politics Project at the University of Texas at Austin and co-director of the UT/TT Poll. "The Davis campaign seems to be not able to reverse the trend."

Abbott has the support of 44 percent of the voters surveyed. Davis had 32 percent, Libertarian Kathie Glass had 3 percent, the Green Party's Brandon Parmer had 1 percent. Another 3 percent chose "someone else," and 17 percent said they had not formed an opinion.

In the the race for lieutenant governor, Republican Dan Patrick has the biggest margin in the pack of statewide races, leading Democrat Leticia Van de Putte 41 percent to 26 percent, with 23 percent undecided and the remainder going to third-party candidates and unnamed candidates.

Patrick finished a heated runoff with Lt. Gov. David Dewhurst shortly before the survey was conducted, while Van de Putte, who did not have a primary opponent, had been relatively quiet and remains less well-known.

"Maybe the lesson is 'The more bad press, the better'," said Daron Shaw, co-director of the poll and a government professor at UT-Austin. "Look at Patrick's numbers."

In hypothetical primaries for president — an election that is two years away — Texas voters like Republican Ted Cruz and Democrat Hillary Clinton.

Cruz led a pack of Republican prospects with 33 percent of the Republican voters' support. Nobody else got into double digits; Cruz was followed by U.S. Sen. Rand Paul of Kentucky, former Arkansas Gov. Mike Huckabee, Texas Gov. Rick Perry and former Florida Gov. Jeb Bush. Only 13 percent of Republican voters said they have not formed an opinion about who should be the nominee.

"The assumption that negative national press invalidates his status as a candidate, I don't see that," Shaw said of Cruz. "He's really well liked in Texas."

Clinton was even stronger on her party's side, with 64 percent of the Democrats behind her. U.S. Sen. Elizabeth Warren of Massachusetts got 15 percent, and Vice President Joe Biden got 8 percent. Just 10 percent of Democrats were undecided.

Republican candidates lead in all of the other statewide nonjudicial races, with the number of undecided voters climbing as you go down the ballot:

■ U.S. Sen. John Cornyn leads Democrat David Alameel 36 percent to 25 percent in a race where 26 percent of the voters said they have not made up their minds. Rebecca Paddock, a Libertarian, got 5 percent, the Green Party's Emily Sanchez got 3 percent and 5 percent said they would vote for "someone else."

■ In the race for attorney general, Republican Ken Paxton leads Democrat Sam Houston 40 percent to 27 percent, with 27 percent undecided. Libertarian Jamie Balagia and Green Jamar Osborne each have 3 percent.

■ Republican Glenn Hegar leads Democrat Mike Collier 32 percent to 25 percent in the contest for comptroller of public accounts, followed by Libertarian Ben Sanders at 5 percent and Green Deb Shafto at 2 percent. In that race, 37 percent said they had not formed an opinion about their vote.

■ In the race for land commissioner, Republican George P. Bush leads Democrat John Cook 36 percent to 25 percent, followed by Justin Knight, a Libertarian, at 6 percent, and Valerie Alessi from the Green Party at 3 percent. Thirty percent of the voters were undecided.

■ Republican Sid Miller leads Democrat Jim Hogan by 8 percentage points in the agriculture commission race, with 32 percent to Hogan's 24 percent. The Green Party's Kenneth Kendrick got 5 percent and Libertarian Rocky Palmquist got 4 percent in that race. The remaining 34 percent were undecided.

■ The numbers in the race for railroad commissioner were similar: Republican Ryan Sitton, 32 percent; Democrat Steve Brown, 24 percent; Libertarian Mark Miller, 6 percent; and Green Martina Salinas, 4 percent. The other 33 percent have not picked a favorite.

The University of Texas/Texas Tribune internet survey of 1,200 registered voters was conducted May 30 to June 8 and has an overall margin of error of +/- 2.83 percentage points. For this survey, we have shortened the time between polling and reporting the results to get a more timely measurement of sometimes rapidly changing public opinion. For questions of likely Republican primary voters, the margin of error is +/- 4.37 percentage points; for likely Democratic primary voters, +/- 4.75 percentage points. Numbers in the charts might not add up to 100 percent, because of rounding.

BALTIMORE

Police shoot cow running loose in city

Baltimore police shot and killed a steer that escaped from a city slaughterhouse on a downtown street Friday morning, a spokeswoman said.

The animal was shot shortly after 10:15 a.m. in the Mount Vernon neighborhood, and police confirmed it escaped from the George G. Ruppersberger and Sons Inc. slaughterhouse in west Baltimore.

Sgt. Sarah Connolly said police received calls from business owners concerned about the animal running loose. The neighborhood is home to numerous bars, restaurants and shops.

The animal was "increasingly aggressive," and officers made several attempts to trap it before killing it, police said on the department's Facebook page.

Sam Wirtz, who lives three blocks away, said he was walking to visit a friend when he saw the animal running down the street.

"I was trying to get other people to get the hell out of the way," he said.

Wirtz, who grew up around livestock in Texas, said he heard four shots but didn't see the animal fall.

After the shooting, police moved their cars to block from view the dark-colored animal, which was lying on its side next to a black pickup with limbs straight out.

GEORGIA

Couple's killing leaves authorities baffled

EATONTON — The unsolved beheading of a retiree and the killing of his elderly wife has so rattled their gated, lakeside Georgia community that neighbors are casting about for even outlandish explanations. Was it a mob hit? A drug dealer? A hungry alligator?

The peaceful neighborhood where the couple was found dead hadn't seen as much as a burglary in recent memory.

Then, in early May, concerned friends found the headless body of Russell Dermond, 88, in the garage of his home on Lake Oconee. Shirley Dermond, 87, was originally thought to have been abducted until her body was found a few weeks later in the lake. Russell Dermond's head has still not been found.

Even though law enforcement thinks the Dermonds likely knew the person or people who attacked them, their advanced age, the beheading after he was killed, and the fact that it all happened in a seemingly secure community that has a manned guardhouse has left neighbors rattled, according to Putnam County Sheriff Howard Sills.

PERRY

From 1A

"It's not accurate and it's not a reasonable conclusion that the world of medicine and psychiatry would endorse," said Dr. John Oldham, professor of psychiatry and behavioral sciences at Houston's Baylor College of Medicine. Oldham also is chief of staff and senior vice president at the Menninger Clinic.

"Alcoholism is a form of addiction, which is an illness," Oldham said. "Sexual orientation is not an illness."

Defining homosexuality that way is simply outdated, he said.

"Many decades ago, in the diagnostic manual it was listed as a condition thought to be an illness," Oldham said. "We've learned since that that was wrong."

The governor's comment came after he was asked about the Texas Republican Party's new platform that supports "reparative therapy" for gays and lesbians, a process aimed at changing sexual orientation. Pressed to say whether he thought homosexuality could be cured by prayer or counseling, Perry responded, "I don't know. I'm not a psychiatrist; I'm not a doctor."

The idea of changing someone's sexual orientation through therapy has been "entirely debunked," Oldham said.

"Reparative therapy is not a legitimate therapy and, in fact, it can be destructive."

To seek therapy to change one's sexual orientation, he said, "would be like saying, 'I would really like to get reparative therapy because I don't like being short.'"

No LGBT cure needed

A spokeswoman for a Houston organization that works with the gay community and with substance abuse said homosexuality does not need a cure.

"Our expertise is learning what triggers addiction," said Sally Huffer, community projects specialist at The Montrose Center, which has offered behavioral health services to members of Houston's lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender community since 1978.

"In many cases, it is the disenfranchisement of being LGBT - feeling alone, not having the pillars or support others might have, or the coping skills," Huffer said.

"Some people choose to use alcohol and drugs to medicate pain. The difference is that alcoholism can be a destructive disorder that can ruin lives and lead to death," she said. "But being gay, lesbian, bisexual or transgender is not abnormal; it does not need a cure. It, in and of itself, does not ruin lives. People live normal, happy, healthy, productive lives as openly LGBT people."

Labeled 'junk science'

When Perry implies that homosexuality is a disorder, Huffer added, he is focusing too much on the sex part of homosexuality.

"You wouldn't say that a marriage between a man and a woman is all about what happens behind closed doors," she said.

Bryan Hlavinka, who co-hosts the weekly Houston radio show "Queer Voices," called Perry's remarks damaging and "junk science."

"I think it's very offensive that he compared being gay to a disease," said Hlavinka, an LGBT rights advocate.

Perry's position as governor means his words carry more weight with the public, Hlavinka suggested, whether his theories are true or not.

"(Perry's) in a position where if he says something like that, people are going to believe him," Hlavinka said.

moms and survivors of domestic violence. The first MATCH event took place in March, she said.

"Sometimes we work so hard," Spearman said. "We're busy with motherhood, with our jobs, with school and with life. Sometimes we just need a break from it."

The event specifically reaches out to teen mothers to let them know they're not alone, Spearman said. Often, young moms feel isolated from their peers or families, disappointed and confused by life changes, she said.

"The focus is to encourage them, more than anything," she said. "It is going to be a life-changing experience, but it can be a good life-changing experience."

Twelve mothers attended the first MATCH event, but Spearman said she expects more than 30 this month.

Spearman said she promotes the event online and by word of mouth, but has also reached out to the teen mothers and recent graduates of Richard Milburn Academy in Midland.

Carol Kirk, the school's pregnancy-related services coordinator, said it's "extremely important" for young mothers to have social interaction with one another because they share common experiences.

"Sometimes friendships are formed that continue after the babies are born," she said.

MATCH provided gift bags to all nine of the academy's graduates who were mothers or expecting mothers, Spearman said. The academy had 33 graduates, meaning mothers made up nearly a third of the class of 2014, Kirk said.

Kirk said she will let the girls in her pregnancy-related services program next year know about MATCH, which she said she sees as an extension of the support services provided on campus.

"I think it's a real positive thing," she said.

The academy provided pregnancy-related services to 26 girls throughout the last school year, Kirk said.

The focus is preventing young mothers from dropping out of high school, she said.

"That will open doors for them in the job world," she said.

Spearman said mothers are encouraged to bring their children to MATCH on Saturday. There will be snacks and drinks, and local businesses donate items as gifts for the mothers, Spearman said.

"We want to let them know, 'you're doing a wonderful job as a mother,'" she said.

Anyone interested in attending MATCH can contact Spearman at 212-8421.

KENTUCKY

Former GOP official dies

FRANKFORT — Nelda Barton-Collings, the first woman to lead the Kentucky Chamber of Commerce and the state's longtime Republican National Committeewoman, has died, a funeral home director said. She was 85.

Barton-Collings was Kentucky's Republican National Committeewoman for 28 years. She spoke at the 1980 Republican National Convention and called to order the 1996 convention in San Diego. Ronald Reagan and George H.W. Bush appointed her to two national advisory boards.

Born in Providence, Barton-Collings graduated from Western Kentucky University. She took over the family's nursing home business after her husband died and grew it into a network of nursing homes across the state. She was a founder of several community banks that, in 2007, were consolidated into Forcht Bank based in Lexington, according to Mike Duncan, Kentucky's Republican National Committeeman and the former chairman of the RNC.

"She was a great good will ambassador for the state of Kentucky," Duncan said.

U.S. Rep. Hal Rogers called Barton-Collings "a woman ahead of her time." And State Senate President Robert Stivers called her "a true stateswoman."

"Nelda's passion for public service and her determination to improve the Commonwealth will serve as her legacy. She was always gracious and kind. There simply will never be another like her," he said.

Shiite cleric urges Iraqis to defend country

By Sameer N. Yacoub and Adam Schrenck
Associated Press

Associated Press

This image posted on a militant news Twitter account on Thursday shows militants from the al-Qaida-inspired Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant (ISIL) people raising their flag at the entrance of an army base in Ninevah Province, Iraq. Fresh gains by insurgents, spearheaded by fighters from the al-Qaida-inspired Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant, come as Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki's Shiite-led government struggles to form a coherent response after militants overran the country's second-largest city of Mosul, Saddam Hussein's hometown of Tikrit and smaller communities, as well as military and police bases — often after meeting little resistance from state security forces.

BAGHDAD — Iraq's Shiite clerical leadership Friday called on all Iraqis to defend their country from Sunni militants who have seized large swaths of territory, and a U.N. official expressed "extreme alarm" at reprisal killings in the offensive, citing reports of hundreds of dead and wounded.

U.S. President Barack Obama said he is weighing options for countering the insurgency, but warned Iraqi leaders that he would not take military action unless they moved to address the country's political divisions.

Fighters from the al-Qaida-inspired Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant made fresh gains, driving government forces at least temporarily from two towns in an ethnically mixed province northeast of Baghdad. The assault threatens to embroil Iraq more deeply in a wider regional conflict feeding off the chaos caused by the civil war in neighboring Syria.

The fast-moving rebellion, which also draws support from former Saddam Hussein-era figures and other disaffected Sunnis, has emerged as the biggest threat to Iraq's stability since the U.S. withdrawal in 2011. It has pushed the nation closer to a precipice that could partition it into Sunni, Shiite and Kurdish zones.

Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki, whose Shiite-led government is struggling to form a coherent response to the crisis, traveled to the city of Samarra to meet with military commanders late Friday, according to state TV.

Militants earlier in the week overran military bases and several communities including the second-largest city of Mosul and Saddam's hometown of Tikrit. Samarra, the site of a prominent Shiite shrine 60 miles north of Baghdad, sits between Tikrit and the capital.

A representative for Grand Ayatollah Ali al-Sistani, the most revered Shiite spiritual leader in Iraq, told worshippers at Friday prayers that it was their civic duty to confront the threat.

"Citizens who can carry weapons and fight the terrorists in defense of their country, its people and its holy sites should volunteer and join the security forces," said Sheik Abdul-Mahdi al-Karbalaie, whose comments are thought to reflect al-Sistani's thinking.

He warned that Iraq faced "great danger," and that fighting the militants "is everybody's responsibility, and is not limited to one specific sect or group."

In Geneva, U.N. human rights chief Navi Pillay warned of "murder of all kinds" and other war crimes in Iraq, and said the number killed in recent days may run into the hundreds, while the wounded could approach 1,000.

Pillay said her office has received reports that militants rounded up and killed Iraqi army soldiers as well as 17 civilians in a single street in Mosul.

Her office heard of "summary executions and extrajudicial killings" as ISIL militants overran Iraqi cities and towns this week, the statement said.

"I am extremely concerned about the acute vulnerability of civilians caught in the cross-fire, or targeted in direct attacks by armed groups, or trapped in areas under the control of ISIL and their allies," Pillay said. "And I am especially concerned about the risk to vulnerable groups, minorities, women and children."

Obama did not specify what options he was considering, but he ruled out sending American troops back into combat in Iraq.

"We're not going to allow ourselves to be dragged back into a situation in which, while we're there we're keeping a lid on things, and after enormous sacrifices by us, after we're not there, people start acting in ways that are not conducive to the long-term stability and prosperity of the country," Obama said on the South Lawn of the White House.

Administration officials said Obama is weighing airstrikes using drones or manned aircraft. Other short-term options include an increase in surveillance and intelligence-gathering. The U.S. also is likely to increase aid to Iraq, including funding, training and both lethal and non-lethal equipment.

Al-Maliki and other Iraqi leaders have pleaded with Washington for more than a year for additional help to combat the growing insurgency.

Neighboring Shiite powerhouse Iran signaled its willingness to confront the growing threat from the militant blitz.

Former members of Tehran's powerful Revolutionary Guard have announced their readiness to fight in Iraq against the Islamic State, the official IRNA news agency reported. Iranian state TV quoted President Hassan Rouhani as saying his country will do all it can to battle terrorism next door.

"The Islamic Republic of Iran will apply all its efforts on the international and regional levels to confront terrorism," the report said Rouhani told al-Maliki by phone.

Iranian officials denied their forces were actively operating in Iraq, however.

Mansour Haghighatpour, who sits on an influential Iranian parliamentary committee on national security and foreign policy, told The Associated Press that Baghdad is capable of fighting the militants, but Tehran would consider other options if asked.

Iran has built close political and economic ties with postwar Iraq, and many influential Iraqi Shiites have spent time in the Islamic Republic. Iran this week halted flights to Baghdad because of security concerns and said it was intensifying security on its borders.

Police said Sunni militants driving machine gun-mounted pickups entered the two newly conquered Iraqi towns in Diyala province late Thursday — Jalula, 80 milesnortheast of Baghdad, and Sadiyah, 60 miles north of the capital. Iraqi soldiers abandoned their posts there without any resistance, they said.

Vets watch as insurgents undo sacrifices in Iraq

By Brian Murphy
Associated Press

Marine Sgt. Colin Archipley's unit suffered heavy casualties in the savage house-to-house fighting against insurgents holed up in the Iraqi city of Fallujah in 2004.

Nearly a decade later, he watched in frustration from his organic farm north of San Diego as an al-Qaida splinter group seized control of Fallujah, Mosul and other Iraqi cities that Lima Company and other units risked so much to protect.

Iraq's opportunity "was squandered," he said. "I'm not sure what else we could have done."

At VFW halls, kitchen tables and rehabilitation clinics around the country, this week's stunning advance into Mosul left many U.S. veterans reflecting with bitterness and sadness on the sacrifices of a war that lasted for more than eight years and killed nearly 4,500 Americans and tens of thousands of Iraqis.

"In many ways, it just feels like a waste — a waste of many lives, a waste of many years," retired Army Col. Barry Johnson said from his home in Potlatch, Idaho.

On the broad stage of Middle East affairs, the unraveling highlights the resilience of extremists and the risks of weakened central authority. It also raises wider questions about the future of Afghanistan after international forces withdraw later this year and about the growing influence of militant Islamic factions among Syrian rebels.

Johnson stood on Iraq's border with Kuwait as the last U.S. military convoy left in late 2011. Even then, he said, it was evident that Iraq's military and security forces were not up to the challenges at hand.

Those tests included trying to confront strongholds of groups such as the Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant, which has managed to drive back better-armed Iraqi forces. Iraq's Shiite-led government — allied with both Washington and Tehran — is also increasingly estranged from Iraq's Sunni minority, which claims the Shiite leadership runs roughshod over their rights and concerns.

"It was clear that the Iraqi government and the Iraqi military were not going to be able to sustain themselves and keep the situation from deteriorating," Johnson said.

Because the cities loom so large on the roll call of Iraq battlefields, their loss sharpens the sting.

Fallujah, a mostly Sunni city west of Baghdad, was the scene in 2004 of some of heaviest U.S. urban combat since Vietnam. It later became a centerpiece of Washington's efforts to recruit Sunni militias as allies against insurgents.

"Losing Fallujah, when I heard that the first time a few months back, I really just honestly wanted to throw chairs across the room, because what I've done there has basically just been undone," said former Marine Sgt. Ben Colin at VFW Post No. 6776 in Albany, New York. "We just basically went there and did nothing, in my opinion."

In Mosul, Iraq's second-largest city, U.S. forces battled block by block against insurgents in 2009 before the deadline for American troops to leave major urban centers.

Martin Schaefer, an Army reservist who did two tours in Iraq and now lives in Darien, Illinois, groped for the right word to define his emotions. Not mad or upset, he said.

"Sad," he decided. "Sad to see that the work that had been accomplished by the U.S. and Iraqi forces is being undone by an insurgency."

In the Boston suburb of Arlington, veteran Jeffrey Chunglo winced at reports of insurgents seizing U.S. military equipment, including armored vehicles and weapons that had been left with Iraqi forces to defend Mosul.

"I think we were in a hurry for an exit strategy," said Chunglo, who served as a senior hospital corpsman with the Navy. "I think, obviously, a little more time could have been spent putting together a better plan for ongoing monitoring — especially over the last year — to limit the (insurgents') impact."

But many veterans acknowledge the pressures in Washington from a war-weary nation, particularly with Taliban violence on the rise in Afghanistan and demands for greater involvement in the Arab Spring uprisings.

New York veteran Matthew Pelak questions the staggering mandate given to U.S. commanders after the 2003 invasion to bridge the huge rifts between Iraq's three major groups: Sunnis who once rode high under Saddam, majority Shiites who took the mantle after Saddam's fall and the semi-autonomous Kurds in the north.

"We removed the government, the standing army, any way for that country to organize itself," said Pelak, a former Army sergeant who served in Iraq from 2004 to 2005 and later returned as a security contractor with the company then called Blackwater. "So it's a bit tough to just say, 'Hey, let's all play nice in the sand box.'"

In Iraq, Marine Staff Sgt. Marcus Berleson of Weatherford served as a squad leader. In Afghanistan, he lost both arms and vision in his left eye trying to disarm an improvised bomb in December 2011.

"When we pulled out of (Iraq), we left a big power void," said Berleson, who now does outreach with wounded veterans. "We didn't have the country stable on its feet yet. It didn't have a true infrastructure. It didn't have true security forces or a military that was actually willing to stand up and secure the country for itself."

But few veterans appeared to support a return of U.S. ground forces to Iraq — a prospect that Pelak called "an incredibly bad idea."

"I think there is no place for the U.S. military right now in there," he said. "It would further just confuse the situation in an already chaotic environment."

For a former top U.S. commander in northern Iraq, the images of Mosul falling to insurgents leave only a sense of helplessness and sorrow.

"I keep going back to the number of soldiers who have given the best part of their lives to help make this country (Iraq) better," said retired Gen. Mark Hertling, who now lives in Orlando, Florida. "It's saddening and it's disheartening, and you know you can't do anything about it to fix it."

Today is Flag Day

People across the United States celebrate Flag Day on June 14 each year to honor the U.S. flag and to commemorate the flag's adoption.

On June 14, 1777, the Continental Congress, meeting in Philadelphia, adopted a resolution specifying that "the Flag of the thirteen United States shall be thirteen stripes, alternate red and white; that the Union be thirteen stars, white on a blue field, representing a new constellation."

Flag Day falls within National Flag Week, a time when Americans reflect on the foundations of the nation's freedom. The flag of the United States represents freedom and has been an enduring symbol of the country's ideals since its early days. During both events, Americans also remember their loyalty to the nation, reaffirm their belief in liberty and justice, and observe the nation's unity.

Many people in the United States honor this day by displaying the American flag at homes and public buildings. Other popular ways of observing this holiday include: flag-raising ceremonies; Flag Day services; school quizzes and essay competitions about the American flag; musical salutes; street parades; and awards for special recognition.

June 14 also is the birthday of the U.S. Army. On this day in 1775, the Continental Army, forerunner of the United States Army, was created.

MPD: Man steals truck from dealership

From staff reports

A Midland man is suspected of stealing a 2013 Ford truck and unlawfully using a lost debit card.

Jonathan R. Soto, 18, was arrested Thursday following a Midland Police Department investigation that lasted several months.

Soto

In March, an MPD detective drove to Big Spring to obtain evidence after a truck — which allegedly was stolen — was involved in an accident. The truck had Rogers Ford tags, and the Midland dealership later confirmed the vehicle was missing from its inventory, according to an arrest affidavit.

The affidavit does not state whether or not Soto was at the scene of the accident.

The detective found inside the truck a paper copy of a driver's license that belonged to another man who had filed a complaint regarding a stolen debit card, the report said.

Eventually, police tracked down Soto after they matched his fingerprints with those lifted from the truck's door handle in March, the affidavit said.

Soto, who used to work at Rogers Ford in Midland, confessed to stealing the vehicle and using a debit card that he found to purchase a cell phone, according to the police report.

The man was charged with credit or debit card abuse, a state felony, and theft valued between $20,000 and $100,000, a third-degree felony. As of Friday, Soto was being held on bonds totaling $30,000.

If convicted of both felony charges, Soto could face up to 12 years in prison.

Fire crews burn house teetering on cliff

Associated Press

WHITNEY — Charred debris from a luxury cliffside home fell 75 feet into a lake below on Friday after fire crews set the $700,000 retreat ablaze rather than wait for it to crumble into the water as the land faltered around it.

It took less than an hour for the fire to level the home above Lake Whitney, about 60 miles south of Fort Worth. Flames consumed exterior walls after crews spread bales of hay and fuel to ignite flames throughout the expansive home.

The ground around the home cracked and became unstable in recent months. Then a few days ago, part of the land gave way beneath the 4,000-square-foot home, leaving pieces of the house dangling off the side of a cliff. Authorities condemned the home and the owners, Robert and Denise Webb, consented to Friday's burn.

Associated Press

Debris falls as a gated community White Bluff home is burned to save Lake Whitney from falling debris Friday in Lake Whitney.

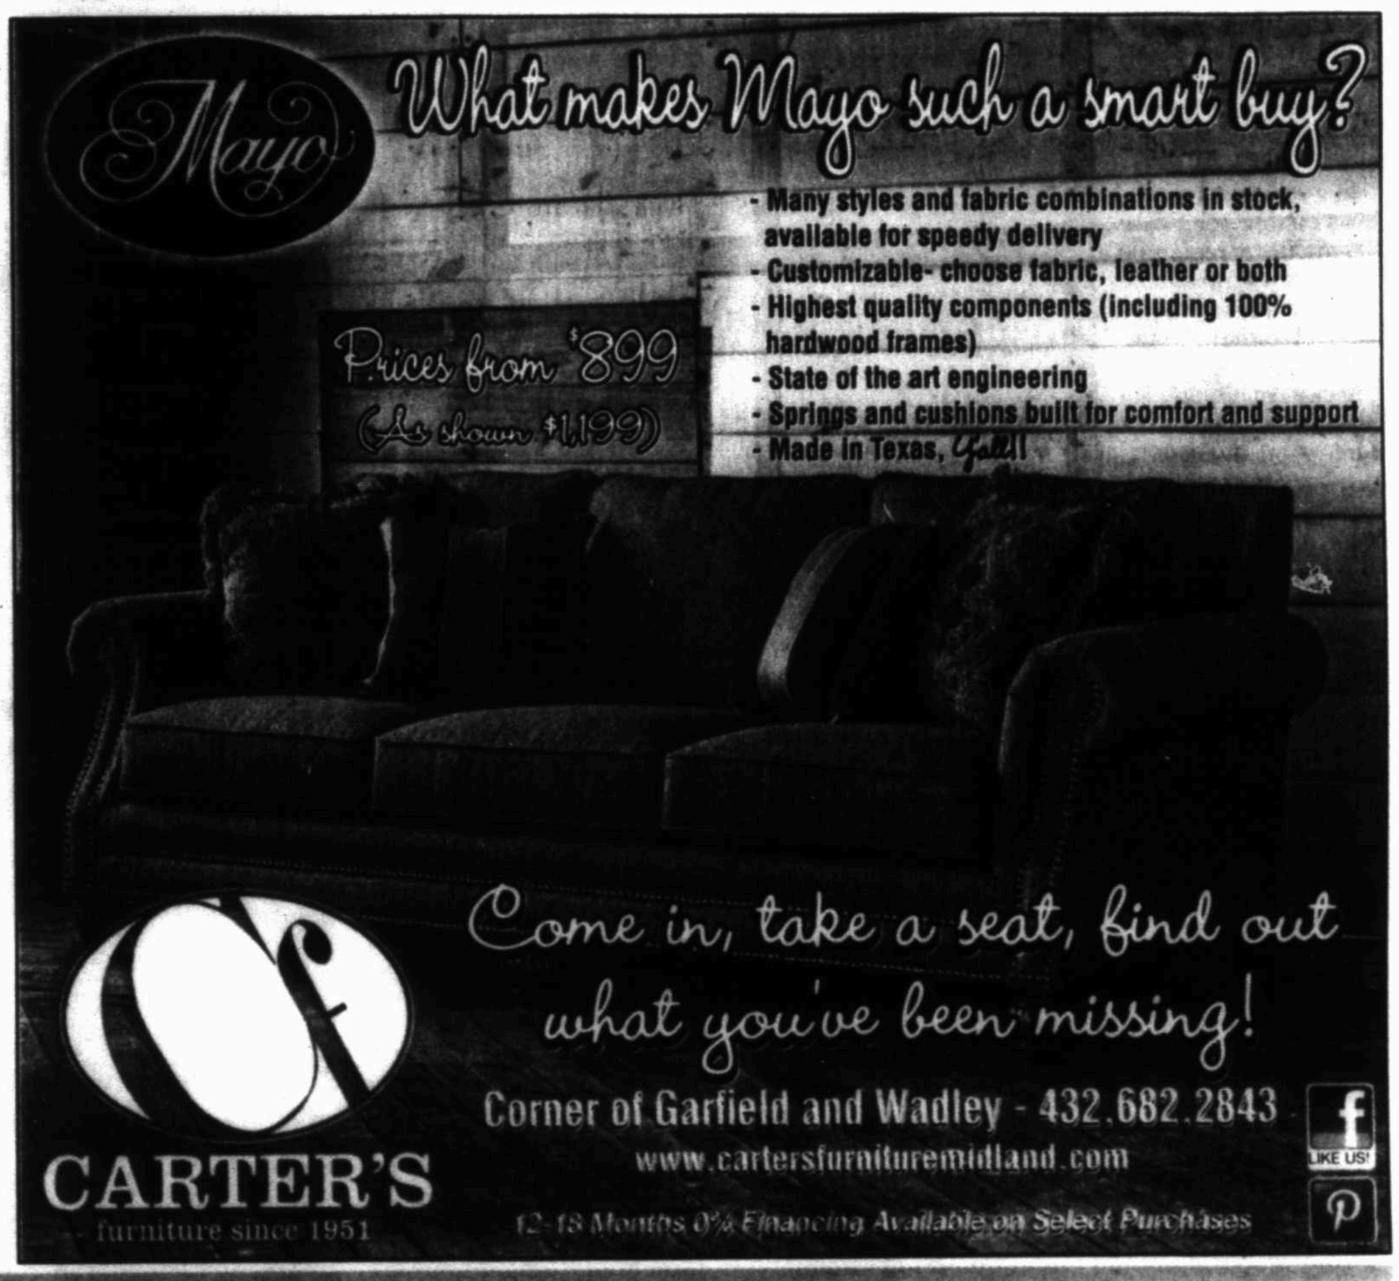
Authorities said destroying the house was better than waiting for it to topple into Lake Whitney. The cost of removing mounds of debris from the lake could prove prohibitive.

Spectators in dozens of boats witnessed the demolition from a safe distance. Live television coverage shared the view of the spiraling black smoke coming from the gated resort community.

The Webbs purchased the home in 2012, but a few weeks ago were forced to remove their personal items and relocate. They expressed shock and sadness at losing their lake house.

The Webbs, who also have a home along Florida's Miami Beach, told WTSP-TV on Thursday that the deterioration of their property has been hard to watch.

"You know, that's my life there that we're watching fall off," Robert Webb said the day before the demolition.



Army: Bergdahl 'looked good' after returning to US

By Juan A. Lozano
Associated Press

Associated Press

Col. Bradley Poppen, left, answers a question during a news conference regarding Sgt. Bowe Bergdahl, Friday in San Antonio. Bergdahl, the Army sergeant who has been recovering in Germany after five years as a Taliban captive, returned to the United States early Friday to continue his medical treatment at Brooke Army Medical Center in San Antonio. Joining Poppen are U.S. Army South Commander Maj. Gen. Joseph P. DiSalvo, center, and Col. Ronald Wool.

SAN ANTONIO — In the moments after Army Sgt. Bowe Bergdahl arrived back in the United States following five years of captivity by the Taliban in Afghanistan, he was nervous but "looked good" and saluted a commanding officer who welcomed him home, military officials said Friday.

Bergdahl is working daily with health professionals to regain a sense of normalcy and move forward with his life, officials added.

Bergdahl's family has not joined him since he arrived at Brooke Army Medical Center at Fort Sam Houston in Texas after midnight Friday, and Army officials would not say when relatives might show up.

In a statement read at a news conference Friday, Bergdahl's parents said they "are overjoyed that their son has returned to the United States" but asked for privacy.

Maj. Gen. Joseph P. DiSalvo, who greeted Bergdahl upon his arrival from an Army medical facility in Germany, said he exchanged a few words with Bergdahl after a three-vehicle convoy met him.

"He appeared just like any sergeant would when they see a two-star general, a little bit nervous. But he looked good and saluted and had good deportment," DiSalvo said at the news conference, adding that Bergdahl was in stable condition.

Officials said there is no timeline for the final step in Bergdahl's reintegration process.

"We will proceed at his pace," said Col. Bradley Poppen, an Army psychologist.

As far as Bergdahl's interaction with relatives, Poppen said a soldier typically determines when to reunite with his or her family. Poppen declined to release further details, citing the family's request for privacy. After the news conference, officials said they did not know if Bergdahl has spoken with his family.

Military officials declined to give details on what Bergdahl might remember about his capture or what he knows about the public uproar surrounding his capture and release.

In the short time he has been back on U.S. soil, Bergdahl, who can walk on his own, has been on a bland diet and has shown a fondness for peanut butter, officials said.

While at Brooke Army Medical Center, Bergdahl will have a "standard patient room" but will not have access to a television, said Col. Ronald Wool, who is in charge of Bergdahl's medical care.

"We will bring him up slowly to what has been transpiring over the last five years," Wool said.

Bergdahl arrived speaking English, though officials indicated his speech had been impacted from being in captivity for so long.

"Overall our assessment is that he did not have the opportunity the past five years to practice and speak his English," said Wool.

Poppen said that during his captivity, Bergdahl had no control over any aspect of his life, including what and when he could eat. "So one of the concepts is to get him a sense of predictability and control of his environment," he said.

Army officials briefed the media at a golf course near Fort Sam Houston and said no reporters would be allowed onto the base or in the hospital. Officials have kept a lid on details of Bergdahl's condition out of concern that he not be rushed back into the public spotlight.

The Idaho native was captured in Afghanistan in June 2009 and released by the Taliban on May 31 in a deal struck by the Obama administration in which five senior Taliban officials were released from detention at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba.

Bergdahl had been at Landstuhl Regional Medical Center in Germany since June 1.

The Army has not formally begun a new review into the circumstances of Bergdahl's capture and whether he walked away without leave or was deserting the Army when he was found and taken by insurgents.

The answers to those questions will be key to whether Bergdahl will receive more than $300,000 in back pay owed to him since he disappeared. If he was determined to have been a prisoner of war, he also could receive roughly another $300,000 or more.

Before his departure from Germany on Thursday, officials in Washington said Bergdahl would not receive the automatic Army promotion that would have taken effect this month if he were still in captivity. Now that he is back in U.S. military control, any promotions would depend on his performance and achievement of certain training and education milestones.

Many have criticized the Obama administration for agreeing to release five Taliban prisoners in exchange for Bergdahl. Some of Bergdahl's former Army colleagues have accused him of deserting his post.

CORPUS CHRISTI

Couple gets probation for neglected 4 children

A South Texas jury spared a couple imprisonment after finding that they had neglected their newborn and three older children while living on a beach.

The Nueces County jury deliberated two hours in Corpus Christi before sentencing Ryan and Heather Sanders to community supervision Friday.

Jurors convicted the pair Thursday of injury to a child by negligence and manufacturing methamphetamine and could have given them life imprisonment.

An affidavit said the daughters, aged 4 and younger, lived in a tent and were exposed to methamphetamine. The three older girls were malnourished, and Heather Sanders gave birth on the beach to the fourth daughter just before the couple's April 2013 arrest.

Defense attorneys argued the father was unemployed and the mother had postpartum depression.

The children are now with relatives.

2 men sentenced in teen's death in bungled robbery

Two North Texas men have been sentenced to prison for an attempted robbery that resulted in gunfire that left a teenage accomplice dead.

Tarrant County prosecutors say 23-year-old Curtis Fortenberry and 23-year-old Terrance Crumley reached a plea deal Friday in the June 2012 death of Claudia Hidic. Fortenberry pleaded guilty to murder and was sentenced to 33 years in prison. Crumley admitted to tampering with evidence and received a 15-year sentence.

Prosecutors say Hidic and the two men conspired to rob a Fort Worth home by having the 17-year-old Hidic pretend to be a hostage. Fortenberry and Crumley claimed a man in the home owed them money. An armed person inside confronted them and shots were exchanged.

Hidic was caught in the crossfire, struck by a bullet from Fortenberry's gun.

Oil rises to near $107 a barrel on Iraq violence

The price of oil rose again Friday, nearing $107 a barrel, as the growing crisis in Iraq fuels concerns that crude supplies from OPEC's second-largest producer could be hurt.

Crude oil rose 38 cents, or 0.4 percent, to $106.91 a barrel. Oil prices rose more than $2 a barrel on Thursday and are up 4 percent this week.

Oil prices hit 10-month highs after an al-Qaida-inspired group vowed to march on Baghdad after capturing two key Iraqi cities this week. However, the violence is mostly centered in Iraq's north, away from the major oil-producing regions of the south.

The turmoil hasn't yet slowed exports, though it raised concerns about whether Iraq can continue rebuilding its oil infrastructure and boost output to meet global demand.

Other energy commodities were mostly lower. Heating oil was mostly unchanged at $2.99 a gallon. Wholesale gasoline futures fell 3 cents, or 0.8 percent, to $3.06 a gallon. Natural gas fell 2 cents, or 0.5 percent, to $4.74 per thousand cubic feet.

In metals, gold rose 10 cents to $1,274.10 an ounce and silver rose 12 cents, or 0.6 percent, to $19.66 an ounce. July copper rose a penny, or 0.5 percent, to $3.03 a pound. Platinum for July delivery fell $6.30, or 0.4 percent, to $1,435 an ounce and palladium for September delivery fell $6.80, or 0.8 percent, to $812.60 an ounce.

Crop prices rose. Wheat rose a penny, or 0.1 percent, to $5.86 a bushel, corn rose 3 cents, or 0.7 percent, to $4.47 a bushel and soybeans rose 11 cents, or 0.7 percent, to $14.26 a bushel.

NEW YORK

Stock market rises on merger news

A flurry of corporate deals and a positive outlook for the technology industry gave the stock market a lift Friday.

Intel jumped after the company said sales of business computers have been stronger than expected, and raised its revenue forecast. Technology stocks rose on the news, which was also a positive sign for investors who are betting that higher investment from businesses will help drive the economy this year.

Still, major indexes had their first weekly losses in a month. A combination of so-so economic news and concerns about the impact of higher oil prices weighed on stocks earlier in the week.

"The economy is still on a decent trend, but it's choppy and I think we can expect the same for the market," said Jerry Braakman, chief investment officer at First American Trust.

The Standard & Poor's 500 index climbed 6.05 points, or 0.3 percent, to 1,936.16. The index ended the week down 0.7 percent after closing at an all-time high of 1,951.27 on Monday.

The Dow Jones industrial average gained 41.55 points, or 0.3 percent, to 16,775.74. The Nasdaq composite climbed 13.02 points, or 0.3 percent, to 4,310.65.

Intel was one of the top gainers in the S&P 500 after the company raised its revenue forecast late Thursday and said it expects profit margins to increase. The stock jumped $1.91, or 6.8 percent, to $29.87.

A spurt of merger news also lifted stocks.

Gambling equipment maker International Game Technology was the biggest gainer in the S&P 500. It jumped $1.51, or 10.5 percent, to $15.86 after Reuters reported that a number of companies considered bidding for it.

OpenTable, an online restaurant booking service, surged $34.05, or 48.3 percent, to $104.48 after the company agreed to be acquired by Priceline for $2.6 billion. The deal will help Priceline, an online travel company, branch out into a new business. Priceline's international reach will help OpenTable expand overseas.

Greenwood grad Drennan thinks about next phase in life

By Len Hayward
lhayward@mrt.com

Jocelin Drennan is coming to the realization that her swimming career is winding down.

Drennan, a Greenwood grad, has one year remaining at the University of Nevada, and she knows she doesn't want to completely separate from the sport she loves. But she's also ready to start the next phase in her life.

"I'm not going to quit completely, and I still want to stay in shape," said Drennan, who is on pace to graduate next May with a degree in broadcast journalism. "I'm thinking about doing triathlons, and I think I may take that up. I definitely want to keep swimming in my routine and my life. It's been a part of my life since I could barely walk."

Drennan is back competing at the Frost Bank West Texas Invitational at Doug Russell Pool this weekend in preparation for her final season of swimming at Nevada.

Drennan has returned to Midland every summer since she graduated from Greenwood to swim with the club she's been a part of since those early days. It's not only a chance to keep training at a high level, but also to see family and friends.

Drennan said her college coach, Abby Steketee, has a philosophy that a swimmer has the freedom to train how they need to during the summer.

Drennan, who competed in three different events on Friday at the meet, said she has a specific weight program that the Nevada strength and conditioning coach provides, but she also said coming back and working with the COM staff helps her get ready for the college season.

"I really enjoy coming back, swimming with everybody and catching up," said Drennan, who went to the state swim meet all four years at Greenwood. "Midland is going home for me. I always worry about, 'Am I ready? Am I going to be on ?' I make sure to stick to my plans. I talk with my college coach and talk with (COM Aquatics coach) Bob (Kizer). It's a good summer, and good time to

Martin Kaymer, of Germany, talks with his caddie as he walks up to the 16th hole Friday during the second round of the U.S. Open golf tournament in Pinehurst, N.C. Kaymer shot a 65 for the second day in a row and leads the tournament at 10-under par.

Kaymer sets US Open record at Pinehurst

Associated Press

PINEHURST, N.C. — Martin Kaymer is playing a brand of golf rarely seen in the U.S. Open. It might even be enough for soccer-mad Germany to pay attention.

The other 155 players at Pinehurst No. 2 certainly are.

Kaymer set the 36-hole scoring record at the U.S. Open on Friday with another 5-under 65 — this one without a single bogey — to build a six-shot lead over Brendon Todd and leave the rest of the field wondering if the 29-year-old German was playing a different course, or even a different tournament.

"If he does it for two more days, then we're all playing for second spot," Adam Scott said.

Kaymer was at 10-under 130, breaking by one shot the record set by Rory McIlroy at rain-softened Congressional in 2011. He had an eight-shot lead when he finished his morning round. Todd made some tough par saves to keep bogeys off his card for a 67.

"I heard he played the No. 3 course. Is that true?" Kevin Na said after a 69 put him seven shots behind. "It's unbelievable what he's done. Is 4 or 5 under out there? Yes. Ten under out there? No, I don't think so. I guess it was out there for him. I watched some of the shots he hit and some of the putts he's made and he looks flawless."

The six-shot lead after 36 holes tied the U.S. Open record first set by Tiger Woods at Pebble Beach in 2000 and matched by McIlroy at Congressional. Woods wound up winning by 15 shots. McIlroy won by eight.

"I played Congressional and I thought, 'How can you shoot that low?' And that's probably what a lot of other people think about me right now," Kaymer said.

At least a few of them allowed for some hope going into the weekend. Todd, who won the Byron Nelson Championship last month for his first PGA Tour win, will play in the final group today in his first U.S. Open.

Whose ball is that anyway?

Playing partners Hunter Mahan and Jamie Donaldson finally came up with the right answer Friday — too late to do either much good.

Caught up in one of those mistakes you're more likely to see at a junior tournament than the U.S. Open, each played the other's ball after teeing off on No. 18 — though they were playing their ninth hole of the day. Neither realized the mistake until they arrived at the green. Both were slapped with a two-shot penalty and missed the cut.

"It was 100 percent on me. I was the first one to the ball," said John Wood, Mahan's caddie.

He went on to explain that both players use "kind of an interesting slash across the number, which is not very common" to mark their balls.

"The only thing I can think of is I saw a slash and assumed it was Hunter's. That's all I can think of," Wood added. "But still, it's hard to believe. I don't believe I did something that epically dumb, but I did."

Mahan shouldered plenty of responsibility, as well.

"I mean, I don't know, it was one of those things I couldn't explain to you," he said. "Off the tee, it looked like that's where my ball should have been, and I couldn't explain to you how it ended up where it did."

After sorting out the confusion on the green, both players walked back up the fairway and re-played the shot from the correct spot. Each wound up making a 6. Had they teed off on the next hole without doing so, both would have been disqualified under Rule 15.3.

Mahan, who was 2 under going into the hole, composed himself enough to birdie the next one. But he wound up shooting 37 on his back nine for a 72 and won't be around for the weekend after finishing at 6 over for two rounds.

With Spurs up 3-1, Heat try to stop a machine

By Brian Mahoney
Associated Press

MIAMI — The San Antonio Spurs left Miami last June looking so human. Tim Duncan nearly in tears talking about how close they were to another championship.

They don't look human now. They look like a machine.

Up 3-1 and shooting the ball at a level never seen in the NBA Finals, the Spurs headed home with a chance to wrap things up on Sunday night in Game 5.

The Miami Heat, who were able to deny the Spurs last year, have two days to figure out what can possibly be done to do it again.

"They're a high-oil machine, and they move the ball extremely well," LeBron James said. "They put you in so many difficult positions. If you're not right on time, right on target, they're going to make you pay for it."

The Spurs won by 19 and 21 in the two games in Miami and are shooting 54.2 percent in the series. The NBA Finals record for a series of any length is 52.7 percent.

No team has overcome a 3-1 deficit in the finals, and the Heat were so thoroughly manhandled in Miami that the only reason to think they could be the first is what they did in the past.

Duncan said the memory of last season's loss — the pain that's driven the Spurs through this entire season — would "definitely come up" before Sunday.

"As I said, we know the caliber team they are, and we have a lot of respect for what they're able to do," Duncan said. "They're able to throw it another gear and they're going to do just that. They don't want this to be done."

Duncan probably meant "done" as in the series. Of course, it could also mean the era.

Two off days were sure to be filled by talk of the Heat's uncertain future, with James, Dwyane Wade and Chris Bosh all eligible for free agency. Might such a one-sided beating convince James he had to leave to find a better roster elsewhere? Make him more resolute in his desire to stay and get the Heat back on top?

The two-time champions have more urgent concerns now.

"Did we expect to come here and lose two the way we did at home? No way," Wade said. "But we also expect to go to San Antonio and put up a better effort and try to come out with another win. So we'll get away from it (Friday), but we'll still think about what we need to do to try to get another win to keep the series alive."

James simply acknowledged the

Peralta scores in Mexico's 1-0 win over Cameroon at World Cup

Associated Press

NATAL, Brazil — Mexico overcame the torrential rain and two disallowed goals to beat Cameroon 1-0 on Friday, picking up the three points it needed to have any chance of advancing from a tough group at the World Cup.

Oribe Peralta scored in the 61st minute, giving Mexico its first win over win over an African team at the World Cup and justifying coach Miguel Herrera's decision to start him ahead of striker Javier "Chicharito" Hernandez, arguably the country's best known player.

He broke the deadlock just as thousands of Mexican fans were cheering for Hernandez to come into the game, swooping in with his left foot after Cameroon goalkeeper Charles Itandje parried Giovanni Dos Santos' attempt from the edge of the area.

Dos Santos twice put the ball in the net in the first half hour, only to have both efforts called back. He was ruled offside in the 11th minute and his header from a corner in the 29th was denied when referee Wilmar Roldan apparently called a foul in front of Itandje.

"We could have scored more, but unfortunately we're not used to these conditions," Herrera said. "Frankly, the refereeing took away two clear goals, but at the end of the day you've got to work for it, and we get to the next match with three points and very high spirits."

Tournament host and favorite Brazil leads the group after a 3-1 win over Croatia in the opening game.

While the heat was expected to be an issue in this balmy coastal city, rain soaked the field starting about four hours before the match and never let up, creating a cool day but a slick surface. The conditions didn't dampen the spirits of thousands of Mexico fans, who dominated the crowd and kept up boisterous chants and taunts throughout the match.

Cameroon seldom tested Mexico goalkeeper Guillermo Ochoa, but forced him to make a victory-clinching save when he dived to his left to stop an header by Benjamin Moukandjo.

The save was yet another big payoff for Herrera, who started Ochoa after the 'keeper had been a reserve at the last two World Cups.

At the final whistle, Herrera kneeled, crossed himself and pumped his right fist. Cameroon

Asencio added his his second homer of the game — a solo shot to right field — to extend the lead to 7-1.

Lee Orr also homered for the Missions as he hit a solo shot in the seventh inning.

Harvick sets qualifying record at Michigan

Associated Press

BROOKLYN, Mich. — Kevin Harvick made Michigan International Speedway's latest track record look routine.

In what is becoming an annual occurrence at MIS, Harvick pushed the track's qualifying mark a little bit higher Friday, winning the pole for this weekend's Sprint Cup race at 204.557 mph. Harvick's pole-winning speed was the fastest since Bill Elliott set the record of 212.809 mph at Talladega Superspeedway in April 1987.

"This is one of those racetracks where you're running fast, but you really can't put it all in perspective, I guess, until you hit something," Harvick said. "It's so wide, it's so fast and so smooth, but you don't really get that huge sensation of speed."

Drivers have broken 200 mph with regularity at Michigan since the track was repaved before the 2012 season. Marcos Ambrose had a speed of 203.241 in 2012, the first time anyone won a pole at over 200 mph since Elliott did it before horsepower-sapping restrictor plates were introduced at Talladega and Daytona.

Last August, Joey Logano increased the track record to 203.949.

Harvick was even faster in winning his third pole of the year and ninth of his career. Points leader Jeff Gordon was second, and Dale Earnhardt Jr. was third. The top three qualifiers for Sunday's 400-mile race were all in Chevrolets.

NASCAR overhauled its qualifying process before this season, switching to a knockout format similar to Formula One and IndyCar. NASCAR now uses three rounds of qualifying at tracks 1 1/4 miles in length or larger. The entire field has 25 minutes to post their fastest single lap and the top 24 advance to the second round.

The second segment lasts 10 minutes, and the fastest 12 advance to a final, 5-minute round.

"This format has obviously been good for me to kind of, I guess, creep up on it as you go through the sessions," Harvick said. "A fast car really solves a lot of problems."

Harvick is 12th in the Cup standings, with victories at Phoenix and Darlington. The latter win came from the pole.

His impressive performance Friday raised more questions about whether these increased speeds are any cause for concern.

"Michigan's been fast for a long time. How fast is too fast?" Harvick said. "The cars will slow down a tremendous amount when we get them in race trim and you get them in a pack, and it's going to be quite a bit hotter on Sunday. They'll slow down. Qualifying speeds are high. It's just a matter of whose opinion is taken on whether it's too fast or not."

Tadlock earns National Coach of the Year honor

From staff reports

LUBBOCK — Texas Tech second-year head baseball coach Tim Tadlock has been named the 2014 National College Baseball Hall of Fame Skip Bertman National Coach of the Year, the organization announced Friday.

Tadlock led his alma mater to the College Baseball World Series for the first time in school history while the Red Raiders have posted a 45-19 overall record this season.

The award is given annually to the top collegiate baseball coach from any level, including NCAA D-I, II, III, NAIA or Junior College. Tadlock will be honored at the Hall of Fame's annual Night of Champions celebration on Saturday, June 28 in Lubbock.

The Red Raiders memorable season includes winning the program's first-ever NCAA Regional Tournament and NCAA Super Regional while recording the biggest turnaround in school history with 19 more victories than in the previous season (26-30 record).

Tech knocked off No. 3 Miami (Fla.) at the Coral Gables Regional before sweeping No. 16 College of Charleston at the Lubbock Super Regional last weekend with a pair of 1-0 victories. Texas Tech will take on TCU at 2 p.m. Sunday in the College World Series in Omaha, Nebraska.

Tech's 45 wins are its most since the 1997 season. The Red Raiders currently lead the Big 12 in batting (.287), slugging percentage (.409), hits (612), doubles (123), triples (24) and fielding percentage (.981).

The Red Raiders broke a school record with nine shutouts this season — four of which have come in the NCAA Tournament. Tech's pitchers bring a 3.17 ERA into the College World Series.

It marks Tadlock's third career National Coach of the Year honor after winning back-to-back National Junior College Athletic Association championships while at Grayson County College in 1999-2000.

The award, sponsored by Easton-Bell Sports, is named for Bertman, who coached at LSU from 1984-2001.

Rays dominate Astros 6-1

Rays	6
Astros	1

HOUSTON — Alex Cobb had 11 of the Rays' season high-tying 16 strikeouts, helping Tampa Bay to its first road win in almost a month, 6-1 over the Houston Astros on Friday night.

Ben Zobrist, Matt Joyce and Evan Longoria drove in two runs apiece to break a 10-game road skid dating to May 16. It's just the third win in the last 17 games overall for the Rays, who have the worst record in the majors at 26-42.

Cobb (2-4) rebounded from his worst start of the year to allow three hits and one run with a season best in strikeouts in 6 1-3 innings. He gave up 10 hits and seven runs in a season-low 4 1-3 innings in his last outing.

Joyce put the Rays up with his two-run double in the second and Zobrist, who finished with three hits, extended the lead to 4-1 with a triple that drove in two in the fifth inning. Longoria padded the lead with his bases-loaded two RBI single in the ninth.

Houston rookie Jon Singleton continued his hot start, hitting his fourth homer in his 11th career game. He also homered on Thursday night. But the rest of the Astros couldn't get anything going as the team managed just three other hits and set a season high for strikeouts.

Collin McHugh (4-4) allowed five hits and four runs in five innings for the loss.

James Loney reached on an error by shortstop Jonathan Villar to start the second inning before a double by Zobrist. Joyce's double made it 2-0.

Houston's Chris Carter singled with two outs in the second inning for his first hit that wasn't a homer since June 3. He had hit five straight homers in that span. Robbie Grossman walked after that but Cobb struck out Marwin Gonzalez to end the threat.

Singleton sent Cobb's first pitch of the fourth inning opposite field into the Crawford Boxes in left field to cut the lead to 2-1.

Cobb walked Matt Dominguez with one out in that inning before he got rolling, retiring the next eight, including striking out the side in the sixth inning. He also struck out the first three batters of the game.

The Astros didn't get another hit until Dominguez singled to start the seventh. Carter followed by knocking a ball about 425 feet to straightaway center field, but Jennings raced up the hill to grab it.

Brad Boxberger replaced Cobb and struck out two batters in 2-3 innings and Joel Peralta fanned the side in the eighth.

Jennings doubled with no outs in the fifth before James Loney drew a two-out walk. Zobrist made it 4-1 with his triple to center field.

NOTES: Houston recalled RHP Josh Zeid from Triple-A Oklahoma City and optioned LHP Rudy Owens to the minor league team before the game. ... Tampa Bay RHP Jeremy Hellickson (elbow) made his second rehab start Thursday for Triple-A Durham.

ATLANTA — Evan Gattis and Chris Johnson hit back-to-back homers in the first inning and the Braves edged the Los Angeles Angels 4-3 on Friday night for their first interleague win.

The Braves were 0-6 against American League teams before taking advantage of four runs in the first on the two homers off C.J. Wilson (7-6), including a three-run shot by Gattis.

Aaron Harang (5-5) allowed one run in six innings to end a streak of five consecutive starts without a win.

Braves right fielder Jason Heyward left the game with a bruised right hand after being hit by a pitch from Wilson in the first inning. The Braves said X-rays were negative and Heyward is day to day.

The Angels trailed 4-1 before Albert Pujols had a two-run single off Shae Simmons in the eighth. Craig Kimbrel struck out Raul Ibanez to cap a perfect ninth inning for his 19th save.

Harang, 36, earned his first win in eight career starts against the Angels. He was 0-4 with a 10.48 ERA in four 2013 starts for Seattle against the Angels.

Boston Red Sox Dustin Pedroia is congratulated by teammate A.J. Pierzynski (40) after scoring on a single by Mike Napoli against the Cleveland Indians during the seventh inning of a baseball game at Fenway Park in Boston, Friday. Both Pedroia and Pierzynski hit two-run doubles as the Red Sox defeated the Indians 10-3.

TWINS 2
TIGERS 0

DETROIT — Kyle Gibson faced Miguel Cabrera with the bases loaded in the fifth inning, clinging to a one-run lead. He delivered the pitch and got the result he wanted.

Gibson's sinker inside was hit into an inning-ending double play to help the Minnesota Twins keep their slim lead in a 2-0 victory over the Detroit Tigers on Friday night.

"It was a big pitch," Gibson acknowledged. "If you want to win a game and you want have a good outing, you've got to make that pitch against one of the best hitters in the game."

Gibson threw seven innings and Eduardo Escobar hit a solo homer in the third and drew a bases-loaded walk in the ninth, helping Minnesota win three straight for the first time in nearly a month and pull within three games of the AL Central-leading Tigers.

"These guys are a great baseball team and everybody knows it," Minnesota manager Ron Gardenhire said. "We have to come in here and win some of these games."

Gibson (6-5) allowed five hits and two walks while striking out three. He threw seven scoreless innings for a second straight start and held an opponent without a run for the third time in four outings.

RED SOX 10

BOSTON — A.J. Pierzynski, Mike Napoli and Dustin Pedroia hit two-run doubles and the Boston Red Sox scored their season-high in runs in a 10-3 victory over the Cleveland Indians on Friday night.

After managing just one run in a three-game series at Baltimore, Boston won its second straight over Cleveland, which has lost four in a row.

The Red Sox entered the game with the fourth-lowest batting average in the AL. But they are 4-2 after a five-game losing streak that began with three consecutive losses in Cleveland.

Xander Bogaerts finished the offensive onslaught with a solo homer in the eighth, his sixth of the season.

John Lackey (8-4) struggled early when he allowed three runs and six hits in three innings. But he gave up just one hit in his next 3 2-3 scoreless innings before being replaced by Andrew Miller and has allowed three runs or less in nine of his last 10 starts.

Justin Masterson (4-5) had his shortest stint of the season — two innings plus two walks in the third — 11 days after he had a season-high 10 strikeouts in seven innings against Boston and beat Lackey 3-2.

BLUE JAYS 4
ORIOLES 0

BALTIMORE — Drew Hutchison scattered six hits over seven innings in another sparkling performance on the road, and the Toronto Blue Jays got a two-run homer from Juan Francisco in a 4-0 victory over the Baltimore Orioles on Friday night.

ROYALS 7
WHITE SOX 2

CHICAGO — Lorenzo Cain had a two-run double to highlight a five-run first inning, Jeremy Guthrie pitched into the sixth inning and the Kansas City Royals extended their winning streak to five games with a 7-2 victory over the Chicago White Sox on Friday night.

Guthrie (3-6) allowed two runs and six hits in 5 2-3 innings to snap an 11-game winless streak. Guthrie's last win was on April 9, against Tampa Bay.

Eric Hosmer and Billy Butler of the White Sox each had two RBIs, including a run-scoring single in the first inning.

Jose Quintana (3-7) never recovered from the slow start, allowing six runs and eight hits in six innings.

Jose Abreu went 1 for 4 with an RBI for the White Sox.

CUBS 2
PHILLIES 1

PHILADELPHIA — Even Starlin Castro knew Roberto Hernandez didn't hit him on purpose.

Jake Arrieta threw seven impressive innings, Castro hit a two-run homer and the Chicago Cubs beat the Philadelphia Phillies 2-1 Friday night in matchup of last-place teams.

A strange ejection occurred in the sixth inning when Hernandez was tossed by plate umpire Mark Ripperger after hitting Castro on the left arm with a fastball. There were no previous warnings, hit batters or inside pitches. Phillies manager Ryne Sandberg also was ejected after he came out to argue.

CARDINALS 1
NATIONALS 0

ST. LOUIS — Lance Lynn threw eight innings of two-hit ball and Matt Adams homered on his first swing since coming off the disabled list, leading the St. Louis Cardinals to a 1-0 victory over Jordan Zimmermann and the Washington Nationals on Friday night.

REDS 6
BREWERS 5

MILWAUKEE — Billy Hamilton drove in the go-ahead run with a single in the ninth inning, and the Cincinnati Reds capitalized on four Milwaukee errors for a 6-5 victory over the Brewers on Friday night.

Hamilton lined his single to right off Francisco Rodriguez (2-2), the Brewers' closer pitching in a non-save situation. Reds counterpart Aroldis Chapman had little trouble in the bottom of the ninth with a 1-2-3 inning for his 11th save.

Hamilton's hit spoiled a special night for Milwaukee, which unveiled its Wall of Honor before the game. Hall of Famer Hank Aaron and baseball Commissioner Bud Selig were among dignitaries at Miller Park, where Milwaukee rallied from a four-run deficit in the seventh on Carlos Gomez's RBI double.

PIRATES 8
MARLINS 6, 13 INNINGS

MIAMI — Gregory Polanco broke a tie in the 13th inning with his first major league homer, and the Pittsburgh Pirates overcame a ninth-inning meltdown to beat the Miami Marlins 8-6 Friday night.

Polanco, playing in his fourth big league game, went 5 for 7, scored three times and made a run-saving catch in right field.

Clint Barmes singled off Mike Dunn (5-4) to start the 13th and advanced on a sacrifice.

METS 6
PADRES 2

NEW YORK — Bobby Abreu went 4 for 4 with two RBIs and Bartolo Colon pitched four-hit ball into the eighth inning as the New York Mets turned to a pair of 40-somethings to beat the San Diego Padres 6-2 on Friday night.

Abreu scored twice in the rain-delayed opener of a three-game series between fourth-place teams struggling to score. Colon (6-5) set down 18 straight batters and won his fourth consecutive decision, sending the Mets to only their second victory in 10 games.

Rene Rivera hit a two-run homer but Andrew Cashner (2-6) failed to hold a rare lead for the Padres, who have dropped five straight and nine of 11.

Midland GMC Invite event to showcase top bull riders

By Chris Hummer
chummer@mrt.com

The sport in which the first rule is to "stay alive" will make a stop at the Horseshoe Arena today, as 35 of the top bull riders in the world will compete in the Midland GMC Invitational.

The event, held for the sixth time in Midland, will feature three of the top 30 bull riders in the Professional Bull Riders (PBR) rankings, including L.J. Jenkins, who is ranked 12th.

In total, 35 riders will compete for 10 spots in the final round, drawing from a pool of 50 bulls, five of which were raised in the Midland area. These local bulls will be in addition to many PBR mainstays, including Speckled Ivory and Little Kombat. Kombat, for its part, holds a sparkling buckoff rate of 94.5 percent, knocking off riders in an average of 3.92 seconds a ride.

In bull riding, the goal for each rider is to stay on the bull for eight seconds or longer. Riders are awarded points by a panel of four judges on a scale of 0-100 for each successful ride. Most riders accomplish this feat less than 25 percent of the time, with the best riders in the world staying on the bull at a 40 percent clip or better.

Two local competitors are set to ride in the event today. Bonner Bolton of Gardendale and Wrangler Dunda of Odessa will seek to captivate the hometown fans. The 35 athletes are riding for a $12,000 purse.

Dunda described bull riding as a battle that's he's constantly attempting to gain control of. But he said fans get a similar adrenaline rush to that of the riders, only from the safety of the stands.

"(Bull riding) is kind of something out of control and you're trying to control it," Dunda said. "It's the same thing for fans, and they can get at (the thrill)."

Collisions between the bulls and riders happen often, Dunda said, adding to the excitement for the crowd.

PBR, founded in 1992, attracts 1.5 million viewers per year at its 300 bull riding events across the country. Tickets are available at the gate for $26 today. The doors will open at 6 p.m., and the competition will start at 7 p.m.

keep up the training."

Drennan's events in college have varied from the 200-yard individual medley to the 1,650-yard freestyle. Drennan, who swam the 100 butterfly and 200 IM in high school, said last year her coaches asked her to do more distance events.

This past season as a junior at Nevada, Drennan swam the 500 freestyle, 400 IM and 1,650 freestyle.

Drennan won the C Final, which was the 17th best time, at the Mountain West Conference meet this past year, and she was 22nd in the 1,650 freestyle. Drennan said the plan is to swim the same events this year.

"I thought it would be a great challenge, and the coach said, 'I believe you can do it,' and I said let's go for it," Drennan said. "I focused on my distance swimming my junior year."

Kizer said having a swimmer such as a Drennan return to the program helps show the younger swimmers how to train and that if they keep training hard they can succeed and reach their goals.

Drennan does do some different dry land training, but Kizer said that in the pool, Drennan is just another part of the team.

"It's a great example when you see somebody so committed, so dedicated and is a great leader that comes back and is a part of your group," Kizer said. "All of those are a big benefit for those younger kids because they see what's next."

Drennan knows what's next is her final season of swimming, but she's also ready for what the next phase in her life may hold.

"It's weird to think I have one more season, one more year," Drennan said. "It's like my days are numbered and you go into 'retired mode.' But it's also really exciting, too, to get to switch gears and start another chapter in my life."

Masters champion Watson headlines US Open cuts

Associated Press

PINEHURST, N.C. — Masters champion Bubba Watson avoided major mistakes, putted well and seemed more comfortable in his second run through Pinehurst No. 2 at the U.S. Open.

Too bad it came a day late.

Watson shot an even-par 70 on Friday, not enough following an opening 76 that ultimately cost him a shot of playing on the weekend.

"It's easy today," Watson joked. "After you're out of it, it's kind of easy just to go around and play golf."

Watson finished at 6-over 146, putting him atop the list of notable names headed home after missing the cut.

That group included Jason Dufner, who has missed the cut in two straight majors after winning the PGA Championship. Luke Donald also missed out, along with 2011 Masters champion Charl Schwartzel and Hunter Mahan — who was done in by a two-shot penalty for playing the wrong ball on his ninth hole.

Like Watson, each finished at 146. The cut was projected to be no higher than 5 over.

Watson won his second green jacket in three years in April — his second PGA Tour victory this year — then led late at the Memorial before faltering and finishing third. He arrived at Pinehurst hoping to become the first player since Tiger Woods in 2002 to win the year's first two majors.

But he never gave himself a chance, his stay cut short by Thursday's miserable round of five bogeys and one double-bogey — a performance that had Watson lamenting that the course "is better than me right now."

He got off to a better start Friday on a layout softened by overnight rain with birdies on two of his first three holes. He was more accurate hitting fairways and greens while also making more putts than a day earlier, but three bogeys in four holes just before the turn did him in.

Watson tied for fifth at the U.S. Open in 2007 at Oakmont, but has missed the cut three times since.

"The greens are very difficult," Watson said about Pinehurst. "For me personally, I don't like the look of it. The targets are really small to try to hit the greens. You've got to hit the ball really straight I believe to hit it in the 10-foot circles on each green. So for me, it's just a very difficult course."

Donald was worse off than Watson after a 7-over 77 in his first round. He was much better Friday with only one bogey and a 69, but missed the U.S. Open cut for the second time in three years.

Bubba Watson misses his birdie putt on the eighth hole Thursday during the first round of the U.S. Open golf tournament in Pinehurst, N.C. Watson, who won the Masters this year, finished Friday with a two-day combined score of 6-over 146, which wasn't enough to make the cut.

OPEN

From 1B

Brandt Snedeker had a 68 and joined Na at 3-under 137.

Phil Mickelson was 13 shots behind after going back to his conventional putting grip and giving up too many shots. He had a 73.

A fast-moving thunderstorm dumped rain on Pinehurst overnight, though it didn't make the course that much easier. The pins were in tougher locations. Trouble is waiting around any corner at Pinehurst No. 2. Kaymer rarely found it.

He opened with a short birdie on the par-5 10th hole, added birdie putts from 20 and 25 feet, and then hit a gorgeous drive on the par-4 third hole, where the tee was moved up to make it play 315 yards. His shot landed perfectly between two bunkers and bounced onto the green to set up a two-putt birdie.

And the lead kept growing.

"I look at the scoreboards. It's enjoyable," Kaymer said. "To see what's going on, to watch yourself, how you react if you're leading by five, by six. ... I don't know, but it's quite nice to play golf that way."

It looks like a typical U.S. Open — except for Kaymer.

Dustin Johnson opened with a pair of 69s, a score he would have gladly taken at the start of the week and perhaps thought it would be good enough to lead.

"I wouldn't have thought it would be eight shots behind," Johnson said.

Brooks Koepka, the American who is carving his way through the European Tour, birdied his last hole for a 68 and joined the group at 2-under 138 with Brendon de Jonge (70), Henrik Stenson (69) and former PGA champion Keegan Bradley, who played in the same group with Kaymer and rallied for a 69.

"He's as dialed in as I've seen," Bradley said.

Kaymer was the sixth player in U.S. Open history to reach double-digits under par, though McIlroy was the only other player to get there before the weekend. Kaymer already won the PGA Championship in 2010 at Whistling Straits, and he added the next best thing to a major last month at The Players Championship.

PURSUING: Brendon Todd, who shot 67 for a two-round total of 4-under 136, followed by Kevin Na and Brandt Snedeker at 3 under.

DEPARTING: Masters champion Bubba Masters led an exodus of top players — including Hunter Mahan, done in by a two-shot penalty for playing the wrong ball — heading home after missing the cut.

WHERE'S PHIL?: Slipping. Mickelson, a runner-up at the U.S. Open a record six times, was at 3 over after following his opening even-par 70 with a 73.

NOTEWORTHY: Kaymer was just the sixth player in U.S. Open history to reach double-digits under par. Rory McIlroy was the only other player to get there before the weekend, at Congressional in 2011.

QUOTEWORTHY: "If he does it for two more days, then we're all playing for second spot." — Adam Scott, who's ranked No. 1 in the world, talking about Kaymer.

KEY PAIRINGS: Phil Mickelson and Webb Simpson (10:56 a.m.); Adam Scott and Jordan Spieth (1:19 p.m.); Chris Kirk and Rory McIlroy (1:30); Brendon Todd and Martin Kaymer (2:25 p.m.)

Iran goalkeepers coach Dan Gaspar works with goalies at the Corinthians soccer team training center in Sao Paulo, Brazil, on June 8.

Far from home, an American coaches Iran

By Ronald Blum
Associated Press

SAO PAULO — On a side field at Corinthians' training complex on the eastern edge of South America's biggest city, the sun was setting and the shadows were growing long as Dan Gaspar worked with goalkeepers on saving close-range shots.

The 58-year-old from Connecticut is at the World Cup, soccer's pinnacle. But for the most part, his players speak Farsi, not English.

Gaspar is in his third season as goalkeepers coach of Iran, which opens Monday against Nigeria.

"I believe they find me more interesting. In three-plus years working in Iran, I have never have had any issues as a result of my nationality, Portuguese-American," he said. "I have been impressed by the Iranian hospitality and kindness."

Gaspar was coach at the University of Hartford from 2005-11, leading the Hawks to 36 wins, 46 losses and 21 ties and finishing no higher than third in the America East Conference. That stretch interrupted a longtime career as an assistant to Carlos Queiroz, the Mozambique-born Portuguese.

Gaspar says he learned from Queiroz's "demanding and obsessive" attention to details, and the pair have "unconditional trust." When Queiroz was hired by Iran in April 2011, Gaspar followed.

"I am who I am professionally as a result of the opportunities that coach Queiroz has given me," Gaspar said. "There are times we don't need to speak because after so many experiences we understand each other so well. When I first had the opportunity to work with him, it was a rude awakening to the world of the winning business. I came from the U.S. environment, where in most cases it was about the business of soccer. The business of soccer and the business of winning are two completely different mentalities."

Gaspar has made four to five trips annually to Tehran, flying from New York with layovers in either Dubai, United Arab Emirates; Frankfurt, Germany; or Istanbul.

Gaspar is deferential to his boss. He wanted to check first whether he should go ahead with an interview. Gaspar preferred to exchange questions and answers by email rather than talking at Iran's practice field.

He said cultural differences have taken time to learn as he's commuted from the northeast U.S. to the Middle East. In Iran, a thumbs up is interpreted as the equivalent of a raised middle finger in other parts of the world.

Iran's staff also includes people from Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Brazil, Cape Verde Islands and Finland.

Chile nets 3 goals in win over Australia

CUIABA, Brazil — Chile capitalized on a sluggish start by Australia to earn a 3-1 win in their World Cup opener on Friday, with Alexis Sanchez carrying over his prolific form for Barcelona with a goal and assist for the dangerous tournament outsiders.

Sanchez poked home from close range in the 12th minute, before setting up Jorge Valdivia barely a minute later for the playmaker to finish from the edge of the area.

A young Australia team, written off by most before a ball had been kicked, looked in danger of falling apart but the experienced Tim Cahill brought them back into the game with a trademark header in the 35th.

Cahill, dominant in the air throughout, had several chances to equalize before and after halftime as Chile slipped off the pace in muggy conditions in Cuiaba. But a drilled, low shot by substitute Jean Beausejour settled the match in the second minute of injury time, sending the Chilean bench running onto the pitch and making fans set off fireworks.

Chile moved level with Netherlands, which thrashed Spain 5-1 earlier Friday, and has a chance to eliminate the reigning champions when they meet in their next Group B game on Wednesday.

Netherlands thrashes Spain in opener

Associated Press

SALVADOR, Brazil — Louis van Gaal, one of the game's greatest coaches, was criticized before the World Cup for being too defensive for a nation that loves attacking play.

His decision to field five defenders against Spain though, proved a masterstroke.

His team thrashed the defending world champions 5-1 Friday with a clinical display of counterattacking football that had Spain chasing shadows at the end as Dutch fans roared "Ole!" each time their team passed the ball.

"If you see how he prepared us, and how he predicted the game would go, and you see how it went — unbelievable," said Robin van Persie whose stunning header to equalize just before half time turned the tide of the match and lit up social media accounts around the world. "It went exactly as the entire technical staff predicted."

It was Spain's worst loss in the tournament since a 6-1 defeat to Brazil in 1950.

In the day's other matches, Chile beat Australia 3-1, leaving Spain at the bottom of Group B. In Group A, Mexico edged Cameroon 1-0 on a 61st-minute goal by Oribe Peralta to take second spot behind Brazil.

But it was the Dutch performance that shocked even casual fans on the second day of World Cup, showing why Manchester United was so keen to sign Van Gaal to rebuild the storied club.

He starts work at Old Trafford when the Netherlands leave Brazil. If they keep playing this way, he could keep Manchester fans waiting until mid-July.

The 62-year-old Dutchman has a history of getting the best out of teams and blending youth with experience, taking Ajax to the Champions League title in 1995.

He is bidding to make the Netherlands world champions for the first time after losing three finals — including four years ago when Andres Iniesta's extra-time goal won it for Spain.

It wasn't shocking for the Dutch to get revenge for that loss, but the way they demolished Spain — the dominant world football power since 2008 — sent a signal that the run of this generation of Spanish stars may be coming to an end.

Spain, which won the last two European Championships and the 2010 World Cup, will probably have to beat Chile and Australia to qualify for the next round, where a likely date with favorite Brazil awaits.

coach Volker Finke stood with his arms crossed, scowling as the rain dripped off his face.

For the Cameroon players, the match was a chance to put behind them a bonus pay dispute that created so much turmoil back home and delayed their arrival in Brazil. But the loss and lackluster performance will only magnify the perception that the Indomitable Lions are a fractured team.

NEW YORK

World Cup viewership up 8 percent in US

Television viewership of the World Cup's opening game in the United States was up 8 percent over 2010, due to increased interest in ESPN's English-language telecast.

The Nielsen company said Friday that 9.5 million people in the U.S. watched Brazil's tournament-opening victory over Croatia, compared to the 8.8 million who saw Mexico take on South Africa in 2010's first game.

Univision's Spanish-language audience of 5.1 million was down from the 5.9 million who watched in 2010. That's not a surprise, given the game four years ago involved Mexico, and a large percentage of Univision's audience is of Mexican descent.

ESPN's opening day audience Thursday was 4.4 million, up 55 percent from the 2.9 million who watched in 2010.

Facebook said that some 58 million people worldwide posted messages about the first game, 16 million of them in the host country of Brazil, which won the game.

Twitter said that more than 12.2 million tweets were sent about the first day's match during the live telecast. Neymar was the most tweeted-about player for Brazil, and he gained 165,000 followers.

The sport's governing body FIFA said the opening match attracted record audiences for the year in Europe.

German broadcaster ZDF's coverage of Brazil's victory reached 15.9 million viewers, the biggest TV audience of 2014 so far in Germany. The match in Sao Paulo also drew in the biggest sports television audiences for 2014 in the United Kingdom, France and Italy.

ITV's live match broadcast in the UK was watched by 10.7 million people — 6.4 million more than the opening game from the 2010 FIFA World Cup in South Africa. RAI 1 in Italy broadcast the match to an audience of 9.1 million, while coverage from TF1 in France reached 8.7 million viewers.

Grounds crew makes sure field is green

MANAUS — The grass at the Arena da Amazonia will be green for England's game against Italy, either naturally or artificially.

Workers at the stadium in Manaus have been using green dye on the dead areas of the playing surface to make sure it looks good for today's Group D match at the World Cup.

It's not an unusual move, but it comes after the head groundsman said this week that the field is "in bad shape."

Despite concerns over the quality of the field, FIFA is clearly satisfied with its condition. Both England and Italy trained on it Friday, standard procedure for a match at a major tournament. If the field was not in playing shape, then FIFA could cancel the practices and ask the teams to train elsewhere.

obvious, that the Spurs were the better team, when they swept his Cleveland Cavaliers in 2007 for the last of their four NBA championships. But he wasn't supposed to be on the wrong side of the talent differential once he bolted for Miami, where the Heat would build a Big Three for this decade that would rival what San Antonio's did last decade.

But the Spurs go so far beyond Duncan, Tony Parker and Manu Ginobili now. There's Kawhi Leonard, who followed his career-high, 29-point night in Game 3 with 20 points and 14 rebounds Thursday and has done no worse than battled James to a draw over the last two games.

Or Boris Diaw, who wasn't even in the starting lineup until Game 3 and had eight points, nine rebounds and nine assists in Game 4, serving as one of the catalysts for the Spurs' mesmerizing ball movement.

Individual players get hot all the time. The Spurs are on a team-wide hot streak.

"I just think we're playing Spurs basketball," Parker said. "We're just moving the ball and we're just playing the way we've been playing all season. We'd like to do a 'good to great,' the extra pass, and we preach that, and right now we're clicking."

It gets a little harder to keep that going when trying for that fourth win, the one the Spurs couldn't quite get last year, when even the real freewheeling teams tend to tighten up a bit.

"I mean, every closeout game is very difficult, for all the obvious reasons," Spurs coach Gregg Popovich said.

Especially if James delivers as so often when the Heat faced elimination, from his 45-point game in Boston in the 2012 Eastern Conference finals, to a triple-double against the Spurs in Game 6 last year, followed by 37 points in Game 7.

Rangers, Kings tied 2-2 after 1st OT in Game 5

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Game 5 of the Stanley Cup finals went to double overtime tied at 2 on Friday night, with the Los Angeles Kings struggling to finish off their series with the New York Rangers.

Marian Gaborik scored the tying power-play goal with 12:04 left in regulation for the Kings, who were attempting to wrap up their second NHL title in three years on home ice.

Justin Williams scored an early goal and Jonathan Quick made 23 saves for Los Angeles, which won three of the series' first four games.

Chris Kreider scored a power-play goal and Brian Boyle added a short-handed score late in the second period for the Rangers, who were trying to avoid elimination again after winning Game 4 at Madison Square Garden.

Henrik Lundqvist stopped 40 shots in another standout performance, but Gaborik poked the tying goal between his legs on a rebound for his 14th goal in a spectacular postseason by the Kings' late-season acquisition.

The finalists headed to overtime for the third time in their three games at Staples Center, and they needed a second OT period for the second time.

Both teams had tantalizing scoring chances in the first overtime, but couldn't convert.

Ryan McDonagh hit Quick's post with a long shot during an early power play. Tyler Toffoli rang a shot off Lundqvist's post with 7:15 left, and the Kings trapped New York in its own end for an exhausting stretch late in the period.

Kreider got a breakaway in the final minute after Drew Doughty fell down, but he missed the net.

After falling behind early, New York outplayed the Kings and finally got the equalizer with 4:23 left in the second period while Dwight King was in the box for high-sticking.

After several sharp passes in a prolonged possession, Ryan McDonagh found Kreider in front for New York's second power-play score of the series.

Boyle then got a stunner, capitalizing on the Kings' poor power-play work in the final minute of the period. He skated around Doughty and wired a shot into the far top corner behind Quick with 29 seconds left.

It was Boyle's third goal in 25 postseason games.

Chuck Noll, the Hall of Fame coach who won a record four Super Bowl titles with the Pittsburgh Steelers, died late Friday night at his home. He was 82.

The Allegheny County Medical Examiner said Noll died of natural causes.

The Steelers won the four Super Bowls over six seasons from 1974-79, an unprecedented run that made Pittsburgh one of the NFL's marquee franchises.

Noll's 16-8 record in postseason play remains one of the best in league history. He retired in 1991 with a 209-156-1 record in 23 seasons, after inheriting a team that had never won a postseason game in club history.

Texans' Clowney has sports hernia surgery

Jadeveon Clowney, the No. 1 overall pick in the draft by the Houston Texans, is recovering from sports hernia surgery.

Coach Bill O'Brien disclosed the procedure Friday and said Clowney had been struggling with a groin issue. O'Brien said the standout from South Carolina was sent to a specialist in Philadelphia.

"We decided the best thing for (Clowney) and for the best team for our team and the best thing for the organization was to have sports hernia surgery," O'Brien said.

The surgery was performed Thursday. O'Brien expects Clowney to be ready for training camp, which begins in late July.

O'Brien wasn't sure exactly how long he's been dealing with this issue.

"I don't think it was too long," O'Brien said. "I think it wasn't too long, but again you know, we looked at it as let's take care of it now and he will be ready to go for training camp."

Clowney signed a four-year contract with the Texans a week ago. Houston has an option for a fifth year.

COLLEGE WORLD SERIES

Midlanders get chance to help Tech make more history

By Len Hayward
lhayward@mrt.com

It might be the first time the Texas Tech baseball team is playing in the College World Series. But it's not the first time that Hunter Redman or Bryant Burleson have been to Omaha to watch games at college baseball's annual championship tournament.

When the pair were playing for their select team — the Midland Colts — at about 13 and 14 years old, the two went to Rosenblatt Stadium to watch games in the College World Series while playing in a tournament in Omaha.

It was an experience the two would not forget, and like any kids at that age they had dreams of playing in the same venue. Now flash forward a few years and the duo are there, but this time they will be on the field and playing in front of those large crowds they were a part of nearly a decade ago.

CWS: 10 things to know

OMAHA, Neb. — The College World Series begins Saturday, and predicting a winner is as hard as hitting a ball out of the cavernous TD Ameritrade Park.

Of the eight teams that made it to Omaha, only No. 3 Virginia and No. 7 TCU are national seeds. UC Irvine and Texas Tech are the surprise teams that undoubtedly will be favorites of the local fans who love to cheer for underdogs. Here are 10 things to know as you try to figure out which two teams will make it to the finals:

1. BRAVO, BIG 12: Three of the Big 12's nine baseball-playing members reached the CWS. Texas is in Bracket 1 and Texas Tech and TCU, which meet Sunday, are in Bracket 2. The only other year the Big 12 had three teams in the CWS was 2005 (Baylor, Nebraska, Texas). It's the first time the Lone Star State has had three teams in Omaha in the same year.

2. HOMER HAVEN IT'S NOT: If you and your buddy are making a friendly bet on number of CWS home runs, take the "under" if the over-under is set in double digits. Only 22 have been hit in three years at TD Ameritrade, including three in 2013, and no one has cleared the fence in center field.

3. IF THE BALL DOES GO OUT: Mississippi appears to be the team best-suited to knock it out of the park. The Rebels have hit six homers in six NCAA tournament games, and their total of 42 is most among CWS teams. Junior first baseman Sikes Orvis has hit 14 of his 18 career homers for the Rebels this season. UC Irvine, on the other hand, has gone deep just 12 times.

4. YES, THAT'S ROGER'S KID: Kacy Clemens, son of seven-time Cy Young Award winner Roger Clemens, is Texas' starting first baseman. The freshman is batting .220 with one homer and 18 RBIs. He wears No. 42, double the now-retired No. 21 his dad wore for the Longhorns when they won the 1983 national championship.

5. YES, THAT'S CALVIN'S KID: Lukas Schiraldi, son of former big-league pitcher Calvin Schiraldi, is in the rotation for Texas. Calvin was the Most Outstanding Player of the 1983 CWS and was teammates with Roger Clemens, not just at Texas but with the 1986 Boston Red Sox. Calvin was the hard-luck loser against the New York Mets in Games 6 and 7 of the '86 World Series. Lukas, drafted in the 15th round by the Texas Rangers, is 7-3 with a 4.08 ERA.

6. FUTURE PROS: The highest draft pick in Omaha is Vanderbilt pitcher Tyler Beede, who went 14th overall to the Giants. Beede had a school-record 14 wins last year but enters the CWS 8-7 with a 3.58 ERA. Other first-rounders are pitchers Brandon Finnegan of TCU (17th, Royals) and Nick Howard of Virginia (19th, Reds).

7. WELCOME BACK, COACH: If Virginia coach Brian O'Connor feels at home at the CWS, it's not just because it's his third appearance in six years. He grew up in neighboring Council Bluffs, Iowa, and went to college a few blocks away at Creighton. O'Connor pitched on CU's 1991 CWS team, and he was an assistant on Notre Dame's 2002 team that reached Omaha.

8. REDEMPTION TOUR: Louisville, the only returning team from 2013, hopes to leave town in better spirits this time. The Cardinals went two-and-out a year ago, losing 2-0 to Indiana and falling behind 10-0 on their way to an 11-4, four-error loss to Oregon State.

9. RED RAIDERS STRONG-ARMED: The pitchers deserve lots of credit for leading Texas Tech to its first CWS. In six NCAA tournament games, the Red Raiders have scored a total of nine runs and are batting .208 with one homer. Seven pitchers, however, have combined for an 0.65 ERA in 55 innings, with opponents batting .166.

10. BEEN THERE, DONE THAT: Two members of the UC Irvine coaching staff were on the 2007 CWS team that infected Omaha with "Anteater Fever" by winning two extra-inning games in final at-bats. Pitching coach Daniel Bibona was a freshman on that team who was Big West pitcher of the year in 2009 and '10. Assistant Ben Orloff was a sophomore shortstop who was 2009 Big West player of the year.

TECH

From 1C

"Just being able to sit there with our team in the stands and watch North Carolina and UC-Irvine, and those teams like that, I'm thinking, 'Man, one of these days what if that's us?'" Burleson said. "Every kid says that I'm sure but to actually get to do it is pretty special."

The venue has changed since the pair were playing for the Colts as the series is now contested at 24,000-seat TD Ameritrade Park, but the feeling of being a part of a Texas Tech team that made history certainly hasn't changed.

The Red Raiders begin their quest for a national championship at 2 p.m. Sunday against Big 12 rival TCU, and the reality of what they helped Tech accomplish likely won't hit until the first pitch on Sunday.

"It's been one heck of a ride," Redman said. "It hasn't been the easiest and I wouldn't trade one step of the way. It's been fun and I'm really happy and blessed to be here."

The two former Colts teammates, who also played at Midland Christian along with current Red Raider pitcher Matt Withrow, have certainly taken different routes to Tech this year.

Burleson signed out of high school and is a two-year letter winner who has played every infield position but first base at Tech, and has been a regular starter for the past two years.

He started 61 games at second base this season, and is hitting .275 so far this season.

But the chance to play with one of his best friends again in Redman at Tech was certainly something that Burleson has cherished.

"We've been buddies since we were 10 or 12, playing with each other on teams," Burleson said. "To be able to do it with one of my best friends has been pretty special."

Redman, meanwhile, had a more interesting route to Tech.

Redman started his college career at Texas where he was a late signee for the Longhorns and saw limited playing time as a catcher. He decided to transfer to Midland College last year, and the move certainly paid off both for his career and being able to experience a national tournament.

Redman, who has started 39 games at catcher for Tech this season, helped Midland College to its first berth in the JUCO World Series in 2013 as a catcher, and now a year later is getting to experience another World Series, only this one is on a bigger stage.

"I remember last year winning the regional tournament and dog piling when we were going to Grand Junction," said Redman, who was an eighth round pick of the Los Angeles Dodgers last week. "That felt just as good as this, but to do this on the bigger stage here at Tech ... everybody didn't think it could've been done. It's something special."

Now the two get a chance to help Tech make some more history this week and are certainly glad this time around their trip to Omaha will include them playing on teams that are participating and not just watching.

"It was fun being there and not playing," Burleson said. "But I can't imagine how fun it's going to be getting to play."

Two's a crowd in bedroom shared by teenage sisters

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 14-year-old girl and I need my own bedroom. Ever since I was born, I have shared a room with my 17-year-old sister. Maybe it was OK when we were younger, but now it is impossible. It's crowded and annoying. I have no privacy, and I can't decorate it how I want.

What makes this worse is that we have an extra room. My parents refuse to consider it and won't give me a reason. It has gotten so bad I have moved into a closet. Every time I walk into my room I get a headache. I never hang out there anymore. Please help. — IN THE CLOSET IN N.Y.

DEAR IN THE CLOSET: Your parents may be hoping you can come to a truce with your sister without having to sacrifice their guest room. If you feel your bedroom is crowded, it must be the same for her. If a truce isn't possible, then you will have to continue hanging out in other parts of the house.

Although it may be inconvenient for you, your sister can't help that she exists, and the sooner you accept it, the sooner your headache will lessen. As to redecorating the bedroom to suit your taste, be patient awhile longer. At 17, your sister should be nearly out of high school. In another year she'll be 18, and the room will be all yours if she plans on going to college or finding a job, roommates and independence.

P.S. At that point, don't be surprised if you miss her.

DEAR ABBY: A friend I have known for about 10 years messaged me again tonight saying she was going to commit suicide. I tried to get her to go to a hospital, but she refused. When I told her I was going to contact the police, she backed down a bit. This has become an almost-nightly occurrence.

She's going through a rough patch right now. She's breaking things off with her drug-addicted longtime partner. She is also underemployed, in danger of being evicted and has cancer.

It is tough on me to talk her down from the ledge every night. Many of her problems are of her own making, but she can't seem to see that. She can't afford therapy. I have taken her to Al-Anon, but she quit after a short time.

I don't know what to do. I hate to break it off with her because I'm afraid she will kill herself. I am the only friend she has left. How much longer do I hold on? — SUCKED DRY IN KANSAS

DEAR SUCKED DRY: Because your friend is calling nightly threatening to harm herself, it appears she is using you to vent. That's all right if it's consensual and you have the emotional strength to handle it. If you don't, and because you describe yourself as emotionally depleted ("sucked dry"), I'm advising you to start screening your calls. I'm not advising you to shut her out completely, but to allow yourself not to answer your phone unless you are feeling up for it. And if she threatens suicide again, follow through on contacting the police.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The stars show the kind of day you'll have: 5-dynamic; 4-positive; 3-average; 2-so-so; 1-difficult.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, June 14, 2014:

This year you will be more willing to experiment, as you'll feel more secure both emotionally and financially. Communication opens up with others in a way that you have not experienced in years. August signifies the beginning of a period when your social life nearly takes over your life. This period will continue through your next birthday. If you are single, you are likely to meet someone during this time. If you are attached, you will want to indulge your sweetie more. CAPRICORN handles money well.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★ You might have to deal with controlling people who are determined to have their way. You will want to buck any power plays, as you are likely to need some extra R and R. The only way to win a control game is not to play. Bypass the dance. Tonight: A force to be dealt with.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★ Make several calls regarding a potential trip. You might need to adjust your plans if you want to visit certain people. If you hit a lot of resistance, step back. Join a friend for a movie or head to a baseball game. Be a spectator for now. Tonight: Togetherness is the theme.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★ Others will seize the moment and run with it. Understand that you don't need to follow them. You might have a meeting or an activity to attend that means more to you than what other people have going on. Tonight: Find your favorite person.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★ You could defer to others and make your day easier, yet you might express an interest in something else. No one seems to hear you. You can give yourself permission to pursue your inclinations. A loved one will make a caring gesture later in the day. Tonight: Out and about.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★ You filled your plate yesterday with a lot plans for today. Choose to honor any appointments that might make you feel better. Expect to be in the limelight wherever you are in the late afternoon. Know that you have been missed. Tonight: Establish boundaries.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★★ Though you might find a new love interest to be unruly or moody, you still will manage to have a good time. This person will need to see how OK you really are on your own in order for him or her to apply greater self-discipline. Tonight: Make the most of the moment.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★ Sometimes you need time off from your friends and loved ones. Today the time has come to take a break from your tried-and-true routine. Indulge your whims and fantasies. Do not feel as if you need to answer to everyone. Tonight: Entertain at home.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★ You could encounter some resistance from a neighbor or family member. Go where you can be yourself. You won't have to go far — just to a favorite local spot. You might want to catch an art show that no one else wants to go to. Tonight: Present and accounted for.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★ Be aware of how much you are spending while you try to have a good time. It is important to stay within your budget. You won't want to regret anything about today. A loved one will want to indulge you, once he or she sees your restraint. Tonight: Accept an invitation for dinner.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★★ You don't need to manipulate anyone to get what you want. A major lifestyle change — like letting go of the need to control others — might be hard to make, but it will be worth it. Give up your controlling ways for a day. Tonight: You call the shots.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★ You might want some time to yourself, so do something on your own. You will enjoy your freedom. Today you'll decide to indulge. You might want to spend some time with someone you rarely get to see, but who you enjoy immensely. Tonight: Allow mystery to surround you!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★ Find your friends, as you will be happiest surrounded by people. You might want to buy a gift for a loved one for no specific reason. Give it to this person today, and allow the good feelings to flow. Tonight: If you are open to romance, it could happen.

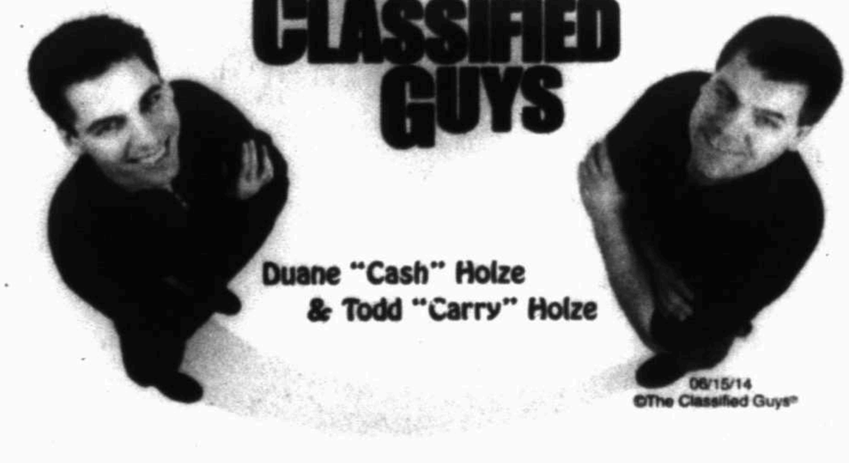
Ask the Guys



Dear Classified Guys,
My wife is a real chatter bug. She just can't keep anything to herself. So when we decided to have a yard sale, it wasn't long before she told her friends and relatives. I didn't mind, but her sister told her husband. The next thing I know, he's dropping off things while we're not at home. Then, he leaves a note telling me to sell it at our yard sale. Normally I wouldn't mind, but frankly, I don't like the guy. However since he's family, I have to tolerate him. Also, the stuff he dropped off is junk. I'd sell it to help him out, but the shovel with the rust holes in it and the box fan that's missing a blade isn't worth anything. It's almost embarrassing to put it out at my yard sale with an actual price tag. I would toss it all and hand him $20 telling him it sold, but it would irritate me to pay him for junk. I could speak my mind, but then it might upset my wife. In a situation like this, what's the best way to get out of selling his stuff?

Cash: Word certainly travels fast around your family. We can just imagine how quickly rumors can spread.

Carry: As you've learned first hand, you may be able to pick your friends, but you can't choose your relatives. Whether you like it or not, you have to learn to deal with them.

Cash: The first problem to resolve is that you and your wife need to be on the same page. If she's going to inform everyone you're having a yard sale, then you both need to agree on whether it's okay for other people to drop things off for you to sell. That way she can share that information as well and hopefully prevent situations like this.

Carry: You could choose to be deceptive and offer your brother-in-law $20 like you mentioned, however as with most things in life, it just pays to be upfront and honest.

Cash: Fortunately since this is your event, you can set the boundaries for what you will and won't sell. If you don't think the items are up to par, tell your brother-in-law they are not worth putting out at the sale. Instead, maybe you could put them on a free pile in the corner.

Carry: Being honest now will help prevent these situations in the future. Just think, if you gave him $20, he might just bring you more junk to sell next time!

Fast Facts

Confessing

It's traditionally believed that George Washington is responsible for uttering the words "I cannot tell a lie" after chopping down a cherry tree. Despite the story's good moral tone, the incident is believed to be nothing more that a tale created by author Mason Locke Weems, who wrote Washington's biography in 1800. Weems had a sense of what the population wanted and added the event to sell copies of his book. It must have worked since the biography went through eighty-two editions, including translations into French and German, with the last one appearing in 1927.

Truth or Dare

Most of us would like to think we are honest individuals, but surprisingly, we tend to think it's okay to lie. A recent survey by an international polling firm, found that 48% of those surveyed thought it was okay to sometimes lie. Even more, nearly 65%, thought it was okay to lie to protect someone's feelings. Others, nearly four out of ten, said it was acceptable to exaggerate a story, lie about your age, or fake being sick for a day off from work.

Hearing Loss

I recently went to my grandparent's house to help them setup for a yard sale. While I was there, I got to see what silly things made them a perfect fit for each other.

After arguing over who had better hearing, my grandfather replaced the battery on his hearing aid. Then to try and win the disagreement, he decided to test her hearing.

From behind he whispered, "Can you hear me?" But my grandmother, giving me a wink, didn't move. He took a few steps closer and asked again. Still she didn't acknowledge him. Finally he whispered from right behind her, "Can you hear me now?"

Trying to keep a straight face she turned around and yelled, "For the third time dear, yes I hear you!"
