MX opponents say Reagan may prevail

WASHINGTON (AP) — House opponents of the MX missile, once confident they would defeat the nuclear weapon, conceded today that President Reagan may win a last-minute lobbying campaign to save the centerpiece of his defense buildup.

The House was scheduled to vote this afternoon on whether to give the Pentagon authorization to go ahead and buy more of the 10-warhead weapons in the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

The vote will be only the first of several congressional decisions this year on the MX.

On Tuesday, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill said MX opponents have 220 votes — two more than necessary — and predicted the Democrat-controlled House will send Reagan "a message: the people want arms control, now."

But O'Neill said this morning that "yesterday we lost two regulars that normally vote against the MX in the past because of conversations with the president. I would have to say I think the votes are still there but it's going to be awfully close and the president is working hard."

"I'm doing everything I possibly can (to defeat the MX) and as of yesterday we had the votes," O'Neill said. "It'll be a fight right up to the wire because I appreciate the power of the White House."

At the White House, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said Reagan would meet with about 12 House Democrats and Republicans today in an effort to get their votes.

In addition, Speakes said Reagan would make "several phone calls this morning," and Vice President George Bush, traveling in Pakistan, was making telephone calls to discuss the issue with key congressmen.

"Other members of the administration are joining in this effort to convince Congress that the deployment of the missile ... is essential to our ability to assure a strong deterrent posture and to achieve arms control agreements that promote stability," Speakes said.

In his conversations with congressmen, Reagan will stress that halting production and deployment of the missile "would only reward the Soviets for leaving the bargaining table," Speakes said.

Meanwhile, the Washington Times reported in today's editions that the White House has abandoned its full MX request and will accept a compromise offered by Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., for half the number of missiles initially sought.

Asked about the report, Speakes said the administration had not informed anyone that it was willing to compromise, but he did not deny that the administration would, ultimately, accept a compromise.

"The White House has not told anybody that we're accepting Aspin," he said. "We will be seeking the best possible outcome in the House," Speakes said.

The Aspin proposal would authorize only 15 MX weapons and bar spending any money until 1985, a proposal he hopes will induce the Soviets to return to the nuclear arms control talks and win a further delay in the weapon. The Soviets walked out of those talks last year.

Republican leaders offer amendment to deficit plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican leaders are offering a $2 billion sweetener that they say will break a weeks-long stalemate in the Senate and assure passage of a $144 billion deficit-reduction package that has President Reagan's blessing.

Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., offered an amendment on the Senate floor Tuesday night that would cut $2 billion from the embattled Synthetic Fuels Corp. and sprinkle the money among education, health and environmental research, drug interdiction and foreign aid programs.

A vote on the amendment was expected today.

"We think we have the votes for this amendment," said Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Budget Committee. "We think we have the votes for this (entire deficit-reduction) package."

Twice last week, up to eight GOP moderates, seeking lower defense spending and more domestic outlays than called for in the Reagan-backed proposal, joined with Democrats to nearly dump the Republican package.

Baker met privately with the moderates for several hours with the result being the increase in domestic outlays.

Five Republicans who broke ranks at least once last week are co-sponsoring the amendment, an indication that Baker has been able to cement the 55-45 Republican majority in the Senate by bringing the moderates back into the fold without substantially changing the overall three-year package of about equal amounts of tax boosts, domestic spending cuts and reductions in planned defense increases to which Reagan agreed.

Republican leaders had feared that major reductions in military spending or increases in proposed domestic spending would be unacceptable to Reagan and scuttle deficit-reduction efforts this year.

On Monday, the president had asked Congress to cut the Synthetic Fuels Corp. budget by $9.5 billion, making it likely the $2 billion reduction proposal meets with his approval.

However, Republicans still were not unanimous and Democrats were angry.

Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., the top Democrat on the Budget Committee, called the amendment "a hoax," and he added, "the bottom line is (that) with this amendment we're going to add $2 billion to the deficit."

Lead levels high on Dallas roads

DALLAS (AP) — Potentially dangerous levels of lead — probably caused by automobile exhaust — have been found in soil in 19 areas of Dallas, many along heavily traveled roads, said a study released by city health officials.

Soil measured at two of the heavy traffic areas showed contamination comparable to levels near a lead smelter where soil is being removed under a court-ordered cleanup.

City officials said they bel Expressway, a lead level of 4,472 parts per million was detected, and at the intersection of Yale Boulevard and Central Expressway, 1,685 parts per million were found in the top inch of soil.

At the other 17 sites, levels ranged from 312 parts per million to 886 parts per million. Levels near the RSR plant, which now is closed, were between 3,000 and 4,000 parts per million at some spots.

The Environmental Protection Agency has established 1,000 parts per million as the level of potential danger.

But some scientists believe a level of 300 parts per million, if ingested, can cause health problems in children.

"We have no official evidence 300 parts per million is dangerous," said Callie Struggs, director of the Office of Health and Human Services.

She said, however, there is "reason to be concerned" about the health of children who play in an area where the soil contains significant amounts of lead.

Although experts disagree on the danger level, they concur that lead poisoning can cause mental retardation as well as a number of physical ailments.

The city study found more than 60 other sites in Dallas with lead levels in soil above 100 parts per million.

Sheriff provides details on demotions

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

Sheriff Dallas Smith has released details on the demotions of two ranking officers in the wake of his defeat to former deputy Gary Painter in the May 5 Republican primary.

Two days after the election, G.W. Thompson was demoted from chief deputy to sergeant and W. Patrick Fuller was demoted from captain to patrol deputy.

Smith denied allegations that the demotions resulted from vindictiveness over Thompson and Fuller's friendship with Painter, who resigned from the sheriff's department to run against his former boss. Painter — a political newcomer — beat Smith by a margin of better than 2,000 votes.

Instead, Smith said the demotions resulted from "job performance." He refused to elaborate.

When shown a 1982 state attorney general's opinion that makes disciplinary action against public employees a matter of public record, Smith said, "Sue me."

On Tuesday, however, Smith said he had consulted with the county attorney's office and decided to comply with the attorney general's opinion.

Thompson's demotion, according to Smith, was not a disciplinary action. Instead, it stemmed from "some personal conflicts" between Thompson and other members of the administrative staff "regarding day-to-day operations" of the department.

Thompson was named an administrative aide and his replacement in the chief deputy's position — former chief jailer Bennie Cureton — has assumed control of daily operations.

In Fuller's case, Smith said Fuller "had misrepresented some facts to me over an administrative matter prior to the election — and again at the regular captain's meeting on the Monday after the election.

"I don't argue that the timing (of Fuller's demotion) was bad, but it was done at our regular Monday morning staff meeting. Should I have done what was best for the department, or waited to avoid the political accusations?

Jesse Perez reflects on his daughter's battle with leukemia and the generosity of Midlanders. He is surrounded by many of the gifts they provided.

Midland family recalls girl's fight with leukemia

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Jesse and Julia Perez buried their daughter today.

It would have been four years ago this Sunday that an active fifth grader was taken to the hospital with a temperature of 105 degrees. She was flown the next day to M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute.

It was four years ago that her fight with leukemia began.

It has been long days and months and years of transferring the child to and from Houston. It has been hours of agonizing spinal taps and bone marrow tests, with Jesse beside his daughter while Julia sat in the waiting room, clutching a rosary and listening to her child scream.

Laura Michelle Perez's last years of childhood were periods of remission, a chance to go back to school and chemotherapy treatments. Her life was full of relapses, hair loss and nausea and unfeeling schoolmates yanking off her wig.

For the Perez's, it has been $2,000 a month in medical expenses, changing gauzes on her bloated stomach when stitches broke and watching caring Hospice nurses hooking up IVs in their daughter's room.

And it has been a time of loving their daughter, who never quit smiling until the day before she died.

"It is sad," Jesse, a City of Midland Sanitation Department employee for the past 26 years, said. "We spent Easter Sunday here and then we left for Houston April 24. She had 93 percent leukemia in her body in Houston. They did a spinal tap on April 26 and she had 13 percent leukemia on her spine.

"It was increasing, but they couldn't do anything else for her. It was up to God. She was tired of fighting. She couldn't take it anymore."

But she did fight hard.

After her first surgery in July 1980, the Houston physicians were giving her a week to live. She pulled through, coming home in October after two more surgeries.

When Jesse and Julia received permission to take Michelle home for Christmas 1981 after another lengthy stay in Houston, some doctors didn't think they'd see her again.

One of them told Jesse: "You remember when you took Michelle home Dec. 24?"

"I said I remembered," Jesse said.

The doctor replied, "I expected you to call two weeks later and tell me she had died — that's how sick she was."

Murder charges may be dropped

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

Murder charges may be dropped against a 28-year-old man charged in the death of his live-in girlfriend's teen-aged daughter.

Charles Conaway of 1001½ N. Garfield was indicted in December for kicking 13-year-old Teresa Luscynski to death during a disturbance at the Garfield Street residence on Dec. 21.

Police said they found the girl lying unconscious on a bedroom floor of the home. She had been kicked in the head and died two days later at Midland Memorial Hospital after being on life-support systems. She was an eighth-grade student at San Jacinto Junior High.

Conaway was charged with murder and released on $40,000 bond set by Justice of the Peace Charlie Sprayberry.

Authorities said he jumped that bond and another $7,500 bond set by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine in February. The bond set by Judge Pine was on a subsequent but unrelated charge of unlawful possession of a firearm by a felon. Conaway was convicted of burglary in 1976, according to court records.

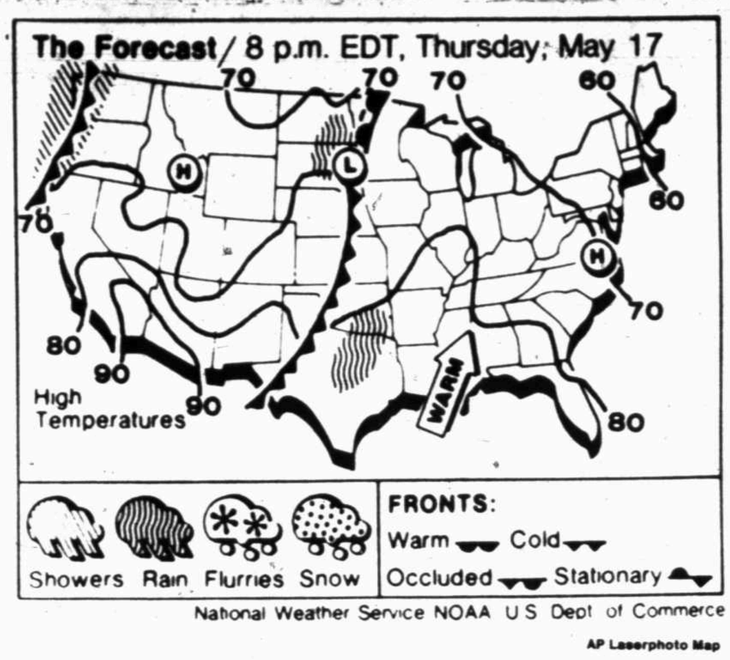

Warrants were issued for his arrest after sheriff's deputies said they could not serve him with the weapons indictment because they were unable to locate him.

He surrendered voluntarily Monday morning, however, and is being held without bond in the county jail.

But his attorney, Tom Parker, said today that he will file a motion next week to have the murder charges dismissed because "as I understand the autopsy report, the girl died of an existing condition that led to an aneurysm."

Parker also said he had talked to District Attorney Vern Martin about the case. Martin is out of town until Monday and could not be reached for comment.

Perez family recalls 4-year fight

But she rallied once again and was in remission for a little more than two years. The routine checkups in Houston continued every three to six weeks. So did the chemotherapy and the painful tests. And so did the contributions of Midlanders who provided gifts for Michelle, support for her family and generous donations to a local trust fund set up to defray medical costs.

And then the leukemia began spreading.

First it had control of 47 percent of her body; then it was pulled down to 20 percent. Another remission followed until last August. The leukemia then took over 6 percent of her body. It grew to 26 percent, 35 percent and then 40 percent.

She returned from her last trip to Houston May 2. "They didn't think she was going to make it," Perez said.

But they never did.

"I wish they were still wrong."

She was placed in Midland Memorial Hospital May 4. It was there that she confided in her sister about the kind of funeral service she wanted, the type of casket. "She knew then she was going to die," Jesse said. "But she never did tell me or my wife anything. She didn't want to hurt us."

On Friday, Michelle's brother-in-law Jesse Ramirez had left the hospital to buy flowers and a special gift — a pewter elephant, which symbolized good luck.

"I arrived about five minutes too late," he said. Michelle was hurting.

After smiling through her pain for four years, the 15-year-old smiled for the last time Friday.

It was when the family was discussing what kind of special cake they would bring to her hospital room Sunday, where the Perez's Mother's Day celebration was to take place.

"She smiled and the tears came out," Jesse said. "She didn't say 'yes' or 'no.' I think she knew she was going to die. At the end, she didn't have no more tears to cry. I guess she just ran out of tears."

At 6 p.m. the next day, she asked for a priest. He arrived at 6:30.

"After he talked to her and gave her last rites, she gave him thanks," Jesse said. "At the last moment, she held her head and said, 'My head hurts.' Then, she held our hands real tight and slowly died."

The phone rang a few minutes later. It was the doctor from Houston who had called Michelle, one of his favorites, regularly to check on her.

"She left a lot of memories," Jesse said. "She left a room full of memories and stuffed animals that people had donated."

Tuesday, he sat on the bed in her pink painted room surrounded by memories and the colorful stuffed animals, dolls from her childhood and more recently, furniture, pictures and a Christmas money tree that were given to her during those four long years by generous friends. And there was the elephant.

"She used to always look in my eyes," he said, remembering with a slight smile the many times he would change her bandages when her stitches broke. "She'd glance at me with her big ol' eyes to see what kind of face I had. Whenever I said, 'You alright, honey,' she'd relax.

"We kept her as much as we could," he said quietly. "It was up to God to do the rest. Somewhere she is resting. And she won't be suffering anymore."

Mexican president addresses Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mexican President Miguel de la Madrid is addressing a joint meeting of Congress after talks with President Reagan ended in respectful disagreement over how to achieve peace in the turmoil of Central America.

Following his late morning speech on Capitol Hill, where many legislators share Mexico's reservations about U.S. policy in Central America, de la Madrid was to attend a luncheon given by Senate Foreign Relations Committee Chairman Charles Percy, R-Ill.

A U.S. official, who briefed reporters Tuesday following de la Madrid's meeting with Reagan, said the trust and respect the two leaders have for each other remain intact despite their differing views on Central America.

The official, who asked not to be identified, said he "wouldn't quarrel" with the view that the two leaders agreed to disagree on Central America.

In their public remarks, both leaders avoided direct criticism of each other's policies but their disagreements could be inferred.

As an example, Reagan said at a White House welcoming ceremony that the "conflagration in Central America appears too close to ignore," suggesting that he believes Mexico, because of its location at the northern edge of the conflict, should show more concern than it has over the implications of leftist rule in that region.

Reagan also was careful not to praise Mexico's role in the Central American peace mediation effort, known as the Contadora process. By noting only that Mexico has "participated" in that effort, Reagan reflected the administration's deeply held view that Mexico has been encouraging Nicaraguan intransigence.

De la Madrid, in turn, in a statement that could be read as directed at growing American military involvement in the region, said each country in the Americas must reject "interventionist solutions of any kind" to Central America's problems.

De la Madrid was far gentler in his comments Tuesday than was Democratic presidential candidate Walter Mondale, who said in a speech in San Francisco that "Mr. Reagan's failed policies are leading us toward war" in Central America.

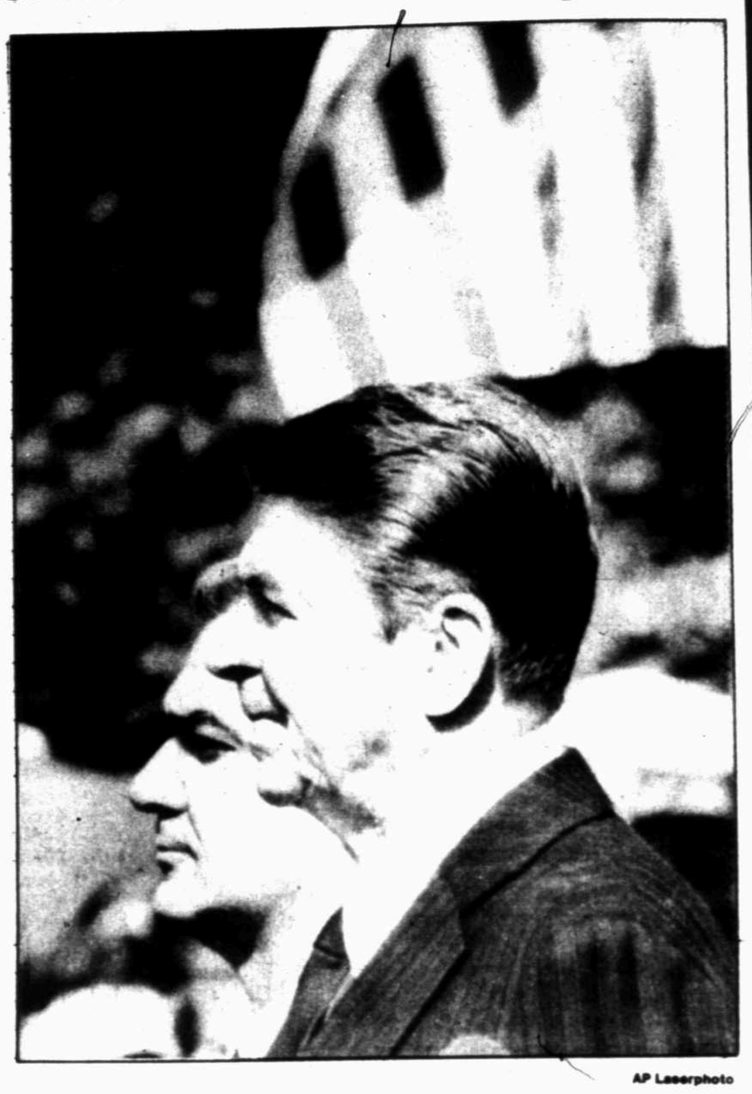

Mexico believes that revolution in Central America is a historical inevitability and should not be discouraged. Thus, it has been supporting the Sandinista government of Nicaragua and the rebel movement in El Salvador. The United States, regarding the movements in both countries as communist-led, has been aiding what it views as the democratic forces in those nations with arms and money.

Tuesday night, in a toast delivered after a black-tie dinner at the White House in de la Madrid's honor, Reagan sought to smooth over their differences, saying that issues, "even those that seem important at the moment, will someday pass from the scene."

"Mr. President," Reagan said, "I hope you agree with me that, although we do not see eye to eye on everything, it is clear that we as individuals, and our two nations as well, remain solid in our friendship and undeterred in our trust."

De la Madrid, in his toast, said his talks with Reagan were "honorable and cordial. They reflect our common purpose: to extend the areas in which we agree and reduce our differences. But the road to travel is a long one."

A high-level Mexican official, briefing Mexican reporters on condition he not be identified, said that at a private meeting with Reagan, de la Madrid stressed "the need to reach a prompt, political, negotiated settlement of the Central American crisis."

Chance for rain continues through tonight, Thursday

From Staff and Wire Reports

A 40 percent chance of showers and thunderstorms tonight could nudge the recorded rainfall past the .59 of an inch received for the year. Thursday's decreasing cloudiness promises only a 20 percent chance of the same, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Tonight, temperatures will drop near 60 with a high Thursday expected in the middle 80s.

Winds will be southeasterly at 15-20 mph and gusty, decreasing to 10-15 mph after midnight. They should shift southerly to southeasterly at 10-20 mph Thursday.

Tuesday's high of 84 missed the record high of 101, set in 1937, by 17 degrees. The overnight low of 67 was 25 degrees warmer than 1945's record low of 42.

STATE

Light showers brought only momentary relief to arid West Texas, but scattered rain was in the forecast through Thursday, the National Weather Service reported.

An easterly moving high pressure system continued to pull moisture from the Gulf of Mexico causing showers and thundershowers in scattered areas of the state Tuesday. Partly cloudy skies and warm, humid conditions were reported elsewhere.

Showers and thundershowers fell south of Lubbock and near San Angelo, the heart of Texas' huge drought area. But most of the showers around San Angelo were "virga" — rain coming out of the clouds but not hitting the ground — according to meteorologist Bryan Harmon in Fort Worth.

NATION

Winter returned to northern New England today, sending snow flying and the mercury tumbling into the 30s, while flood-weary residents in the Rockies looked forward to slightly cooler temperatures to stem run-off from melting snow.

Mount Washington in New Hampshire was blanketed overnight with 3 inches of new snow, the National Weather Service said. Temperatures this morning in Maine were only in the 30s and 40s.

Temperatures in the Rockies, which have hit the 90s this week, should cool to the 60s and 70s today, said Nolan Duke of the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo.

Midland statistics

FORECAST

Mostly cloudy tonight with a 40 percent chance of showers and thunderstorms. Low near 60. Southeasterly winds at 15-20 mph and gusty, decreasing to 10-15 mph after midnight. Decreasing cloudiness Thursday with a 20 percent chance of showers and thunderstorms. High in the middle 80s. Southerly to southeasterly winds at 10-20 mph.

Wyoming town evacuated when dam breaks

By The Associated Press

A dam break today forced authorities to order the evacuation of three small towns in Wyoming as Rocky Mountain states already besieged by damaging flooding and mudslides got a second straight day of rain.

Three people have died and a fourth is missing since temperatures in the 80s and 90s touched off snowmelt flooding over the weekend and forecasters said the "really rapid snowmelt is just starting"

Although cooler temperatures today temporarily slowed the snowmelt, showers spread from Montana to Mexico and the entire mountain region was affected by the runoff.

A small earthen dam on the Little Snake River at Slater, Colo., broke early this morning and officials ordered the evacuation of about 600 people who live in the three small towns of Baggs, Savory and Dixon just across the Wyoming border, about 30 miles downstream. Officials said the reservoir held about 3,000 acre-feet of water.

A mudslide surged through 40 condominiums in the posh Colorado ski resort of Vail on Tuesday, knocking out windows and doors and forcing the evacuation of 70 people.

Residents of Oakley, a town of 700 people in south-central Idaho, were warned to "be prepared to move" as forecasters said the Oakley Dam would overflow by the weekend for the first time in 60 years.

In northwestern Colorado, snow surveyors of the U.S. Soil Conservation Service said the snowpack was still more than twice as deep as normal for this time of year and the Yampa River was at its highest level since 1921.

Demotions detailed

"The demotions were not political. I know of other employees who are friends with Painter and some who actively supported him. They were not fired or demoted. Nor are they going to be — as long they do the job they were hired to do. I didn't hire any of them because they were my friends. I hired them to do a job."

Commenting Tuesday, Fuller said: "Under the circumstances, I don't feel I misrepresented anything. However, he is still the sheriff and I will abide by his decision."

Thompson virtually echoed Fuller: "I will do what's best for the department and the citizens of Midland County. As long as Dallas Smith is sheriff, I will abide by his decision. I hold no animosity toward him."

Couple now in Sri Lankan capital

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — Stanley and Mary Allen, the American newlyweds released by rebel kidnapers after five days in captivity, were welcomed back to this capital city today with champagne, flowers and a presidential reception.

"We are glad to see so many happy, smiling faces," said Allen, 36, as he and his wife, Mary Elizabeth, 29, alighted holding hands from an air force plane that brought them to Colombo from Jaffna in northern Sri Lanka.

The Colombus, Ohio, couple were kidnapped from their home in Jaffna when separatist rebels stormed their bedroom Thursday night. Allen said he was wearing only a bath towel at the time.

The kidnappers threatened to kill the pair unless demands were met for a ransom of $2 million in gold and the release of 20 jailed rebels. After the demands were rejected, the rebels decided instead to free the couple and delivered them Tuesday night to the home of a Roman Catholic bishop in Jaffna.

The couple, wearing jeans and white T-shirts, were met today in pouring rain by about 100 cheering friends, government officials and embassy staff.

Mrs. Allen was given a bouquet of orchids and their friends uncorked champagne to toast their safe return. A friend rushed to embrace Mrs. Allen and they both wept.

Allen said his wife had been "a good trooper" during the ordeal, awd Mrs. Allen said, "We want to see our parents, friends and family back home — they are very anxious,"

They declined to hold a press conference or discuss their captivity.

"We don't want to talk about it all just yet," he said later at a tea party reception at the palace of President Junius R. Jayewardene. "We haven't had too much sleep yet. We have to get back and decide what we want to do."

Bishop Deogu Pillai, at whose home the Allens were released, described the kidnappers as friendly and said the couple were not harmed. He said the six or seven kidnappers left immediately after dropping off the couple.

He said they watched television in his living room for 45 minutes Tuesday night before they were picked up by police and a U.S. Embassy official.

Police said the guerrillas and their captives were in hiding all along not far from the Allen's Jaffna home. But they had abandoned their car on the coast to indicate they had fled by boat to India.

More than 1,000 police and soldiers combed dense jungles infested with panthers and wild boars in a futile search for them.

The kidnappers had accused the Allens of working for the CIA. Allen, an engineer, is employed by the Ruhlin Co. of Columbus.

City's 'helper' to be reimbursed

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — An 86-year-old former firefighter who returned $348.75 of his pay during the Depression to help keep the town afloat can finally have his money back, with gratitude but without interest, the City Council says.

The council voted 9-0 Tuesday night to reimburse Wayne Murphy, who returned 10 percent of his salary to the then-struggling central Illinois city in 1933 and 1934.

The 29-year fire department veteran had asked for repayment after he found receipts for the donations while cleaning out some papers at his home a year ago.

"We all volunteered to kick in because they were hard up," said Murphy, who retired in 1950. "I just handed back part of my pay twice a month. I guess they needed it."

Champaign — home of the University of Illinois — now has a $16 million surplus, and acting city manager John Bloomberg said the time had come to repay the debt.

"It's just very ironic that it's taken over 50 years for the matter to come to light," Bloomberg said. "I'm glad that even though we are 50 years late, we're getting the money returned rightfully."

He said the council approved returning the money without interest.

"We'd be afraid to calculate what that might be with interest, but he asked only that the money be returned," Bloomberg said.

"I just got out of the hospital, so it'll help," said Murphy, who had to go home before the vote because the city council session lasted so late.

Officials have located two other men in their 80s, one living in Illinois and the other in Montana, who served as Champaign firefighters in the 1930s, Bloomberg said.

"We don't know whether they contributed, because the records for them are long since gone," he said. "So we have notified them and indicated that if they can provide documentation as this other gentleman (Murphy) had, we'll consider reimbursing them in a similar manner."

Council rejects rightist challenge of Salvadoran election results

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The Central Election Council rejected a challenge by the far-right candidate and said moderate Jose Napoleon Duarte would be accredited today as official winner of El Salvador's bitter presidential election.

The council announced its decision Tuesday night after a two-hour meeting to consider a request that Duarte's victory in the May 6 runoff be nullified because of alleged improper vote counting.

Roberto d'Aubuisson, candidate of the far-right Republican Nationalist Alliance, said on television Tuesday night, "We still have time to rescue the victory they are trying to steal from us." But at the time of his remarks, he was apparently unaware of the council's decision.

D'Aubuisson has been linked with El Salvador's rightist death squads, but the charges have not been proved.

Julio Adolfo Rey Prendes, secretary general of Duarte's Christian Democratic Party, said Duarte will leave for Washington this weekend for a visit that will include a meeting with President Reagan.

A Duarte aide, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said Duarte will urge key congressmen to approve Reagan's request for military and economic aid to El Salvador, where the government has been battling leftist rebels for more than four years.

Armando Rodriguez Eguizabal, the election council president, said the request by d'Aubuisson's party, known as ARENA, was ruled "inadmissible."

"The petition has been denied," Rodriguez said. "This is a final decision." The petition was the last opportunity under Salvadoran law to challenge Duarte's election.

Rodriguez said Duarte and his vice president-elect, Rodolfo Castillo, will be presented with their credentials today. Duarte's inauguration for a five-year term is scheduled for June 1.

Rodriguez did not say whether the vote rejecting ARENA's petition had been unanimous.

The council has five members representing different political parties. However, the ARENA representative was hospitalized two months ago and was not replaced.

The council proclaimed Duarte the election winner Friday night, saying he got 53.6 percent of the vote and d'Aubuisson 46.4 percent. D'Aubuisson said he won by 52 percent to 48 percent.

On Monday night, ARENA presented a formal challenge to the council, demanding a recount of votes it said were improperly tabulated.

D'Aubuisson's running mate, Hugo Barrera, said a number of ballot boxes were stuffed and invalid votes were counted. ARENA also claimed the United States interfered by supporting Duarte behind the scenes.

Duarte led an eight-candidate field in March 25 voting but failed to get a majority, leading to the runoff between him and the runner-up, d'Aubuisson. Leftists boycotted the election, calling it a "farce."

In other Central American developments Tuesday:

—Unidentifed gunmen killed an army colonel who was a member of ARENA, according to a judicial source in San Salvador.The source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, identified the victim as Fernando Berrios, who served briefly as health minister in 1982.

The source said gunmen entered a drug store owned by Berrios, killing him and seriously wounding his wife. No group claimed responsibility for the attack.

—A Salvadoran civil defense commander, Cpl. Francisco Antonio Fuentes, said leftist guerrillas abducted between 50 and 80 young people from a small village near San Salvador to press them into service with rebel forces.

—The foreign ministers of Costa Rica and Nicaragua signed an agreement aimed at lessening tension on their common border.

Philippine opposition winning several races

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A previously powerless opposition defeated President Ferdinand E. Marcos' candidates in several races in Manila and other areas, but Marcos predicted he would retain a majority in the National Assembly.

Two days after the election, with a little over half the nationwide vote counted, government and independent vote tallies differed today. A government election commission has the final say on the results, and its chairman said today the tabulation might not be completed for seven to 10 days.

The government news agency said Marcos' candidates were leading in 100 of the 183 races for National Assembly seats, while an independent watchdog group said opposition candidates were winning in 87 races, pro-Marcos candidates in 81, and no results available in the contests for the other 15 seats.

The election commission said it had no official results except for one town, the Manila suburb of Las Pinas, where an opposition candidate won.Commission Chairman Vicente Santiago said it would take up to 10 days for the commission to get all the results in.

"Everything must be done to speed up the electoral process and ease the tensions brought about by the intense election campaign," Marcos said today.

Opposition candidates were elated with their showing, but did not predict they would take control of the assembly. They would need 101 seats to gain a majority, since theere are 17 presidentially appointed assembly members in addition to the 183 seats up for election.

Most of the opposition candidates belong to the United Nationalist Democratic Organization, but some were independents or former Marcos supporters left off his party's ticket.

Marcos, who gave live interviews Tuesday on four U.S. television networks but did not appear on Philippine television, predicted his party would have about a three-fourths majority in the assembly.

His New Society Movement currently holds a 90 percent majority in the assembly, and several of the 13 opposition members usually support him.

Marcos acknowledged that the August assassination of his chief rival, former Sen. Benigno Aquino, and the nation's economic problems were factors in the voting. Aquino was killed at Manila's airport after returning from self-imposed exile in the United States.

The government claims he was killed by a communist agent, but Marcos' critics insist he was the victim of a government plot. Aquino's widow, Cory, said in a radio broadcast Tuesday that the elections revealed that "money, guns and political machinery can no longer decide the fate of the people."

Although the counting was incomplete, the election commission declared winners in some races and Marcos conceded that Manila had "reverted to form" as an opposition city with most of his candidates losing.

Yugoslavian government shuffles key personnel

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — The key posts of foreign and interior secretaries have changed hands as part of a high-level government personnel shift, the official Tanjug news agency reports.

Lazar Mjosov, the foreign secretary in the previous government, and former Interior Secretary Stane Dolanc vacated their posts after being named to the non-aligned Communist country's collective presidency.

Premier Milka Planinc named Raif Dizdarevic as the new foreign secretary, and Dobroslav Culafic was appointed the new interior secretary, Tanjug said Tuesday.

Observers said the shuffle was routine, with most former Cabinet members appointed to other senior posts.

British have tradition of exploration

LONDON (AP) — From the untamed rivers of Papua New Guinea to the barren icecap of the North Pole, British explorers are keeping up a centuries-old tradition of setting out to conquer new frontiers.

Every year, descendants of Britain's empire builders demonstrate they haven't lost the spirit of adventure.

The Royal Geographical Society, which has supported explorers since its founding in 1854, screened more than 120 proposed expeditions this year — up 20 percent over last year. It gave official approval to 80 and decided to underwrite 60 financially.

"This country has had a name through the years for exploration of the world. In fact, I would like to say we are foremost in this," said Sir Vivian Fuchs, the society's president and leader of the first expedition that crossed Antarctica in 1955-58.

This week, David Hempleman-Adams scored another first for Britain — a solo 250-mile trek across the Arctic to the magnetic North Pole, the spot toward which every magnetic compass needle points. The 27-year-old explorer reportedly is eying the geographical North Pole, about 700 miles away, as his next target.

"We have got today the spirit of exploration in the young people just as much as there always was in the past .... Young people want to try themselves against the vicissitudes of nature," said Fuchs.

"If you look back in history, we were confined to a small island," the 76-year-old geologist said. "We had to go out from it. This led us to explorations all over the world ... That gets built into a national attitude, into a national vision which is still very strong."

At a ceremony Tuesday, Fuchs presented checks to the leaders of seven upcoming expeditions.

Among their projects are expeditions to study butterfly life cycles in the Peruvian Amazon, the destruction of coral reefs by starfish in the Red Sea and the Caribbean, underwater archeology off Cyprus, rain forests in Sierra Leone, glaciers in Norway, the Karakoram Mountains of north Pakistan, and the first exploration of the underground Nare and Ora rivers in Papua New Guinea.

The Papua New Guinea expedition was described by team member Rod Leach as "the ultimate caving challenge that exists on this planet."

Fugitive not same after stint in Vietnam, mother says

Foster

FORT WORTH (AP) — Richard Donald Foster, a fugitive who took hostages at a West Texas bank and held police at bay for 12 hours last week, was never the same after a stint in Vietnam where he picked up a drug habit and saw his best friend killed in a gun accident, friends and relatives said.

More than a decade after his discharge from the service, Foster is awaiting trial on charges of capital murder in Parker County, attempted capital murder in Throckmorton County and aggravated kidnapping in Stephens County, where he held seven people hostage at Citizens National Bank in Breckenridge last Thursday.

He is charged in the April 5 shotgun slaying of Gary Mitchell Cox in Springtown, west of Fort Worth. Although a warrant was issued in Parker County for his arrest April, he had eluded authorities.

Foster's mother, Bertha Foster, told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram that her son had been a good, church-going child.

"When he got back from Vietnam, he never was the same," she said. "We feel like when he was over there, he started taking dope."

Mrs. Foster and her husband, Clifton, adopted Foster in Duncan, Okla., when he was 2. In 1969, two years after they moved to Grapevine, Foster enlisted in the Army. He was sent to Vietnam a year later.

"Vietnam changed his life," said a friend, Sue Couch of Graham.

He came home in 1972 a wanderer and a drug addict and brought with him the guilt over the death of his best friend, his mother said.

"He and this boy were playing with this gun and it went off," she said. "The friend lived long enough to tell authorities that it was not his (Foster's) fault."

Four years later, Foster was convicted in Dallas for armed robbery and sent to the state prison.

Foster had lived from time to time with his parents, who shuttled him back and forth to a drug treatment program that Mrs. Foster doubts was of much help because it was shortly afterwards that he was arrested for the robbery.

Immediately after the war, Foster behavior became erratic, she said.

"I really think he has two personalities," she said. "He can be real sweet and real good. Other times he can be the opposite if people run him the wrong way."

"He was a calm person — easy going — but he would hurt you if you pushed him to it," said Johnny McCollum, a former prison inmate who served time with Foster.

Congress plods through session week by week

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is plodding through this election-year session one week at a time, literally. Even though fewer than 100 working days remain and many major bills still must be considered, lawmakers have managed to find time for legislation designating a varied quiltwork of special "weeks."

While the Senate was deeply embroiled in a debate on legislation to reduce federal deficits and the House was battling over foreign aid, lawmakers took time out to consider measures designating:

— The week of June 24 as "National Safety in the Workplace Week."

— The week of May 13 as "Smokey Bear Week."

— The week of May 20 as "National Arts with the Handicapped Week."

— The week of June 16 as "National Brick Week."

— The week of Nov. 25 as "National Epidermoloysis Bullosa Awareness Week."

Sometimes, one chamber of Congress doesn't always know what the other is up to and the same week will often end up with more than one designation.

For instance, the week of Nov. 11 was set aside as both "National Blood Pressure Awareness Week" and "Women in Agriculture Week."

Math was never his best subject, Sen. Wendell Ford, D-Ky., confessed at a recent Senate committee session when the subject of percentages came up.

"Now 1 percent of 500, that's 50, right?" asked Ford. An aide told him that it was five.

"That's why I did so well with taxes while I was governor," said the former Kentucky governor.

• • •

Outspoken Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., is on the warpath again — this time on behalf of more advanced first aid kits on airlines. After a friend choked on his dinner during a recent flight, Goldwater introduced legislation to require the Federal Aviation Administration to upgrade its requirements for emergency equipment and supplies to be carried on all U.S. commercial flights.

"The present medical kit is what we used to carry in the Boy Scouts," grumbled Goldwater at a recent committee hearing on his bill.

When former members of Congress assembled recently for an annual Old-Timers' Day, Rep. Trent Lott, R-Miss., tried a philosophical approach in greeting the group.

"It occurs to me that this distinction between current and former members is an artificial one," Lott said. "After all, what is a current member but a former member waiting to happen?"

Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., was a bit more earthy as he temporarily handed the gavel — and his seat — over to former House Minority Leader John C. Rhodes, an Arizona Republican.

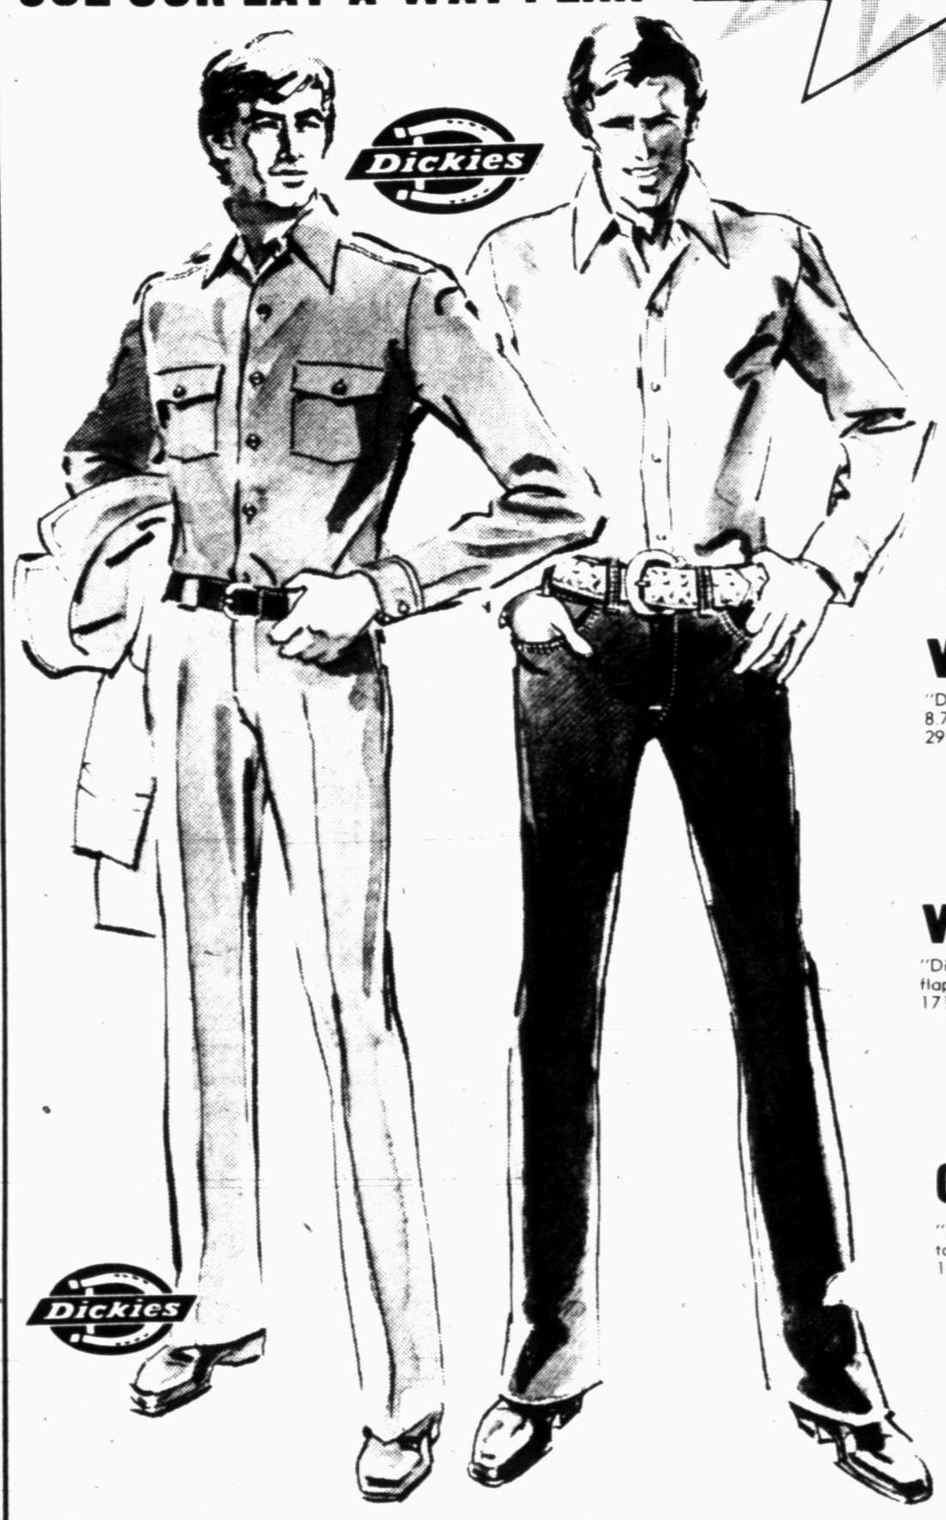

"After having his eye on this seat for so many years, he now has the opportunity to place something else on it," O'Neill said.

Refugees attacked by Israelis

SIDON, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli occupation forces surrounded a Palestinian refugee camp with armored vehicles, then stormed it early today, blowing the doors off houses with explosives and arresting about 150 people, witnesses said.

At least 20 people were injured in the five-hour operation at the Ein el-Hilweh camp, hospital sources said.

Israeli military sources said, "During searches and actions meant to prevent terrorist actions, a few arrests of suspects have been made in Ein Hilweh camp near Sidon and quantities of weapons, ammunition and terrorist materials have been discovered.

"While effecting the arrests, two local persons were injured while opposing the arrests of suspects," the statement said. "A large part of the weapons and ammunition was found in the houses of these two persons."

Residents of the camp on the edge of Sidon, a port city 25 miles south of Beirut, told reporters the Israeli force blew up houses before it withdrew at dawn. Palestinian refugees pointed to about 20 damaged or leveled houses which they said were dynamited.

About 300 refugees protested the operation this morning by setting car tires ablaze and demonstrating inside the camp, chanting slogans in favor of Palestine Liberation Organization chairman Yasser Arafat and denouncing Israel.

Camp residents said there would be a three-day strike in protest of the incident. Schools and shops closed in the camp, which houses more than 26,000 Palestinian refugees registered with the United Nations.

The incident came the day after a demonstration at the camp and the issuance of a statement protesting the founding of the state of Israel in May 1948 as well as Britain's Balfour Declaration of 1917, which expressed Britain's support for a Jewish homeland in Palestine. There were also reports of fighting between rival factions in the camp.

Radio stations in Beirut said the Israeli action was related to the gun battles in the camp on Tuesday. The independent newspaper An-Nahar said unknown gunmen had attacked a post of an Israeli-backed "home guard" unit in Ein el-Hilweh.

It was not clear if the attack reported by An-Nahar was the same as one reported today by Israeli and U.N. military spokesmen. The said an Israeli-backed militiaman was killed and another injured in an attack on their roadside checkpoint in south Lebanon.

Timur Goksel, spokesman for the U.N. Interim Force in Lebanon, said five militiamen from the Christian-commanded South Lebanon Army were at the checkpoint when a grenade was thrown at it late Tuesday night.

Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Arens and the army's chief of staff, Moshe Levy, visited the inland market town of Nabatiyeh today and inspected the site where an Israeli soldier on patrol was killed Friday by a grenade thrown by attackers.

Arens, accompanied by Levy and several high-ranking Israeli officers, toured the town under tight security measures for 45 minutes and left to inspect other Israeli positions in the area, according to local reporters.

Santiago blasted by 19 bombs

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — At least 19 bombs exploded here Tuesday night, damaging nine banks, a municipal office building, a tile factory and the headquarters of Exxon's mining subsidiary, police said.

No injuries were reported in the blasts, which went off within a one-hour span and were heard throughout this city of 4 million people. Seven bombs toppled electricity pylons in southeastern neighborhoods, blacking out thousands of homes.

Police said witnesses saw four gunmen run from the scene of one bombing and two masked suspects speed from another on a motorcycle. Santiago radio stations reported several suspects were arrested.

The hardest hit target appeared to be a bank branch four blocks across the Mapocho River from the city center. An explosion blew the roof off the two-story building and knocked down interior walls.

A night watchman at Exxon's Compania Minera La Disputada office said a device thrown from a Fiat automobile exploded five seconds after he got a telephoned warning. The blast shattered the glass door and windows of the office in Santiago's residential Providencia section.

Bomb blasts demolished the facade of a Chilean bank in Concepcion and caused lesser damage to a branch of the Bank of Boston in that southern city, 300 miles from here. Another bomb damaged a pawn shop in the Pacific resort of Vina del Mar, 75 miles northwest of the capital.

No group claimed responsibility for the blasts - the latest of more than 100 to hit businesses and public utilities in Chile this year. Marxist guerrillas say they set off most of the earlier bombs in a campaign against the 10-year-old military government of President Augusto Pinochet.

Victory could give Khomeini dominance

WASHINGTON (AP) — A victory by Iran in its long war with Iraq could make Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's fundamentalist regime the dominant power in the upper Persian Gulf and in the oil-export market, two analysts conclude in a report on the 44-month war.

Iran would supplant Saudi Arabia, setting the stage for "oil shocks" in the late 1980s when demand for Gulf oil is likely to increase, said the report, released today by Cambridge Energy Research Associates, a private group.

While Gulf oil would still flow to the United States and other Western users, a coalition led by Iran would have control over production, price and investments, the report said. It was prepared by Thomas McNaugher, a military analyst, and William Quandt, who was with the National Security Council in the Carter administration.

On the political level, the report said, conservative Islamic regimes might be hostile to the West and foreign technicians asked to leave.

The war has seesawed since it began with an Iraqi invasion in September 1980. Now, however, Iran appears to be preparing for an all-out assault on Iraq, designed to bring down President Saddam Hussein.

Iraq, with a growing weapons arsenal and well-equipped ground forces, has a better than even chance of holding Iran off, the report said. If that happens, it said, the two hostile neighbors would probably resume their low-level war of attrition.

The United States is basically neutral. But the Reagan administration showed some signs this year of tilting toward Iraq. It encouraged U.S. firms to help Iraq to construct a new oil pipeline to Jordan. The State Department began a campaign to discourage nations and private weapons dealers from arming Iran.

The report said stepped-up arms deliveries from the Soviet Union and France have given Iraq a lead over Iran in weapons. By the end of the year, it said, Iraq will be able to expand its oil shipments through Turkey and by 1986 complete the new pipeline to Jordan.

"This would end Iran's hopes of strangling Iraq economically," the report said, and is probably one of the main reasons Iran is getting ready for an all-out offensive.

President Reagan said in February the United States could not "stand by" if fighting closed the Strait of Hormuz, through which about 60 percent of Western oil supplies pass.

Plane attacked Saudi tanker, company says

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — An unidentified warplane attacked a Saudi Arabian oil tanker in Saudi waters near the industrial center of Jubail today, the company that owns the tanker said.

A fire caused by the attack was under control four hours later and there were no casualties, said a spokesman for the Arabian International Maritime Co.

The ship was the third Saudi tanker to be hit in the Persian Gulf since April 2. Two Kuwaiti tankers also were attacked by warplanes in the gulf waters Sunday and Monday.

The British Foreign Office expressed concern over the mounting attacks on gulf shipping and said it appeared both Iran and Iraq were to blame.

"Such indiscriminate attacks on the shipping of neutral countries are a serious escalation of the conflict," a foreign office statement said in London.

Iran and Iraq, which have been at war since September 1980, have accused each other of the attacks on the Kuwaiti tankers. A U.S. State Department official said he was fairly sure Iran was to blame.

Britain has expressed readiness to join U.S. forces if necessary to maintain the flow of oil through the Persian Gulf. Slightly less than 20 percent of the non-communist world's oil is shipped through gulf waters.

A Japanese newspaper reported today that Japanese oil firms were considering suspending imports from Iran or requesting a cut in its oil price to offset rising insurance rates for oil tankers.

In London, Lloyd's of London insurance underwriters said today that insurance premiums for ships going to the Iran-Iraq war zone have been raised in response to the recent rocket attacks.

Kuwait's Cabinet of Ministers accused Iran of attacking the Kuwaiti tankers and said the six-nation Gulf Cooperation Council would hold a meeting shortly to "discuss Iranian aggression."

"The jetfighters which attacked the Kuwaiti tankers were Iranian," said a Cabinet statement. "These planes took off from an Iranian airport."

The Saudi shipping company spokesman said the vessel attacked today, the Yanbu, was "sailing on its own power and the captain has canceled his distress signal." He said the tanker was attacked about 35 miles north of Jubail and was sailing toward port for repairs.

The Kuwait News Agency quoted Abdel-Fattah Suleiman al-Badr, chairman of the Kuwait Oil Tanker Co., as saying the Yanbu took on 100,000 tons of crude oil in Kuwait earlier in the day, before proceeding to the Saudi terminal of Al-Jaeema where it took on additional 110,000 tons.

Refugees attacked by Israelis

SIDON, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli occupation forces surrounded a Palestinian refugee camp with armored vehicles, then stormed it early today, blowing the doors off houses with explosives and arresting about 150 people, witnesses said.

At least 20 people were injured in the five-hour operation at the Ein el-Hilweh camp, hospital sources said.

Israeli military sources said, "During searches and actions meant to prevent terrorist actions, a few arrests of suspects have been made in Ein Hilweh camp near Sidon and quantities of weapons, ammunition and terrorist materials have been discovered.

"While effecting the arrests, two local persons were injured while opposing the arrests of suspects," the statement said. "A large part of the weapons and ammunition was found in the houses of these two persons."

Residents of the camp on the edge of Sidon, a port city 25 miles south of Beirut, told reporters the Israeli force blew up houses before it withdrew at dawn. Palestinian refugees pointed to about 20 damaged or leveled houses which they said were dynamited.

About 300 refugees protested the operation this morning by setting car tires ablaze and demonstrating inside the camp, chanting slogans in favor of Palestine Liberation Organization chairman Yasser Arafat and denouncing Israel.

Camp residents said there would be a three-day strike in protest of the incident. Schools and shops closed in the camp, which houses more than 26,000 Palestinian refugees registered with the United Nations.

The incident came the day after a demonstration at the camp and the issuance of a statement protesting the founding of the state of Israel in May 1948 as well as Britain's Balfour Declaration of 1917, which expressed Britain's support for a Jewish homeland in Palestine. There were also reports of fighting between rival factions in the camp.

Radio stations in Beirut said the Israeli action was related to the gun battles in the camp on Tuesday. The independent newspaper An-Nahar said unknown gunmen had attacked a post of an Israeli-backed "home guard" unit in Ein el-Hilweh.

It was not clear if the attack reported by An-Nahar was the same as one reported today by Israeli and U.N. military spokesmen. The said an Israeli-backed militiaman was killed and another injured in an attack on their roadside checkpoint in south Lebanon.

Timur Goksel, spokesman for the U.N. Interim Force in Lebanon, said five militiamen from the Christian-commanded South Lebanon Army were at the checkpoint when a grenade was thrown at it late Tuesday night.

Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Arens and the army's chief of staff, Moshe Levy, visited the inland market town of Nabatiyeh today and inspected the site where an Israeli soldier on patrol was killed Friday by a grenade thrown by attackers.

Arens, accompanied by Levy and several high-ranking Israeli officers, toured the town under tight security measures for 45 minutes and left to inspect other Israeli positions in the area, according to local reporters.

Santiago blasted by 19 bombs

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — At least 19 bombs exploded here Tuesday night, damaging nine banks, a municipal office building, a tile factory and the headquarters of Exxon's mining subsidiary, police said.

No injuries were reported in the blasts, which went off within a one-hour span and were heard throughout this city of 4 million people. Seven bombs toppled electricity pylons in southeastern neighborhoods, blacking out thousands of homes.

Police said witnesses saw four gunmen run from the scene of one bombing and two masked suspects speed from another on a motorcycle. Santiago radio stations reported several suspects were arrested.

The hardest hit target appeared to be a bank branch four blocks across the Mapocho River from the city center. An explosion blew the roof off the two-story building and knocked down interior walls.

A night watchman at Exxon's Compania Minera La Disputada office said a device thrown from a Fiat automobile exploded five seconds after he got a telephoned warning. The blast shattered the glass door and windows of the office in Santiago's residential Providencia section.

Bomb blasts demolished the facade of a Chilean bank in Concepcion and caused lesser damage to a branch of the Bank of Boston in that southern city, 300 miles from here. Another bomb damaged a pawn shop in the Pacific resort of Vina del Mar, 75 miles northwest of the capital.

No group claimed responsibility for the blasts - the latest of more than 100 to hit businesses and public utilities in Chile this year. Marxist guerrillas say they set off most of the earlier bombs in a campaign against the 10-year-old military government of President Augusto Pinochet.

Is your family running risk of electrocution at home?

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

You're probably running the risk of electrocuting yourself or someone in your family. It's easier than you think — no exaggeration.

The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission says injury and death are a potential in almost every room of the house due to misuse of appliances, insufficient wiring or worn-out switches and cords.

Here's a room-by-room commission checklist for your home:

BATHROOM

Check appliances like hair dryers and electric toothbrushes and razors. They're dangerous to use near water — even if the water isn't running — and they generate a small, continual amount of current when they are plugged in — even if they're turned off.

LIVING ROOM

Make sure wattage isn't too high, particularly on lights with shade. You could start a fire. If you don't know the proper wattage, make 60 watts a maximum.

Inspect lamp and TV cords to make sure they're out of the way of people walking through, haven't gotten tangled in furniture legs or in each other. Get safety covers for the unused parts of extension cords, check manufacturer's instructions to make sure the cords aren't overloaded and use them temporarily only — not on a permanent basis.

Inspect wall outlets and switches — this applies to every room — and put safety covers on unused ones; make sure they're cool to the touch, that plugs fit snugly and that they have faceplates so there's no exposed wiring. Most problems you can fix yourself — i.e., buy faceplates — but you'll need an electrician to fix switches that don't work.

KITCHEN

Do you unplug appliances when you're not using them? Are the cords — particularly of toasters, ovens and ranges — clear of hot surfaces? Have you ever gotten a slight shock from large or small appliances? Get an electrician to check. Is the area above and around the cooking range free of burnables like potholders, plastic jars and utensils? Don't post the paper towel holder on a cabinet door over the stove; convenient but dangerous.

BEDROOMS

Check your electric blanket to see if wiring, plugs and connectors are cracked or broken and look for charred spots on the blanket itself. If there are trouble spots, it probably doesn't pay to keep the blanket; get a new one. Don't let anything get on top of the blanket when it's on — including the cat — and don't tuck it in too far.

OUTSIDE THE HOUSE

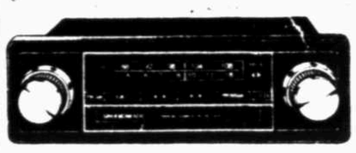

Power tools should be double-insulated or used with a three-pronged plug. Check the fuse box to make sure fuses are the right size for circuits; the wrong size can be a fire hazard. If you use circuit breakers, turn them off and on periodically to exercise them.

INS turns deaf ear to plight of illegal alien

TERLINGUA (AP) — No one really knows where Jose came from. But for the past seven years, the deaf mute has been embraced by Big Bend residents, who are now trying to keep federal officials from deporting him.

To the residents of this far Southwest Texas town, Jose is special. To the Immigration and Naturalization Service, he is an illegal alien — and has been given until June 15 to return to Mexico.

"It'd be a crime to send that man to Mexico, where he doesn't know anyone and he could get killed," Margaret Gage, a 62-year-old retiree who took Jose in as a ranch hand, told the Dallas Times Herald. "Here, people care for him and love him."

Jose's story began when the gaunt, Indian-featured man walked along Highway 118 in the Big Bend country and gestured toward his stomach.

"He couldn't speak a word, but we knew he was real hungry," said Ruth Marsh, owner of The Toasis, a tiny roadside store located in the shadow of the Christmans Mountains. "A rancher...took him home and fed him."

That was seven years ago. Since then, Jose, as he is known, became a ranch hand and an endeared fixture in the rugged, sparsely populated ranch country just north of Big Bend National Park.

Jose offers only cryptic hints of his past. He communicates through primitive sounds, crude hand signs and drawings he sketches with a ball point pen.

His drawings depict images of seas, lush forests and cities in Mexico or Central America.

Residents say Jose should be allowed to stay in the United States because his congenital hearing disability would make him an easy target in Mexico. They're trying to raise $3,300 needed to finance an ear operation they say could restore his hearing.

Though Jose is one of thousands of aliens fighting an uphill battle to win permanent residency in America, his friends say his case is unique because of the degree of support among neighbors of a different culture who can't communicate with him directly.

"He's a person without a country, without a family," said Lucille Muchmore, a 68-year-old retired nurse. "All he has is us."

But INS officials say Jose is an illegal Mexican alien with no right to remain in the United States, handicapped or not. He's been ordered to leave the country by June 15.

"They've been milking this a bit too long," E.M. Trominski, deputy district director with the immigration service in El Paso, told the Times Herald. "I think it's very admirable that the people are trying to help this guy, but the fact is he is an illegal alien."

Jose, believed to be in his mid-30s, is unintelligible but his friends say he is not mentally deficient.

Friends say he appears contented tending a goat herd and a flock of chickens on Mrs. Gage's isolated farm for his room and board and $50 a month.

Democratic presidential hopeful Gary Hart chews on a piece of straw as he heads out for a Tuesday afternoon horseback ride near Denver. Hart spent Tuesday relaxing and riding with his son. He plans to be back on the campaign trail on Wednesday.

Hart attack too much for Mondale, Jackson

By MIKE SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer

Sen. Gary Hart, manhandling Walter F. Mondale in Nebraska and Oregon, has won a psychological lift that overshadows the small number of delegates gained for his longshot drive to rebound and win the Democratic presidential nomination.

Although Walter F. Mondale lost by 2-to-1 margins in the two Western states on Tuesday, he noted his continuing improvement in the delegate count and predicted, "By the time of the convention, I think we'll have enough delegates to secure my nomination."

But Hart, in an interview broadcast today on the CBS-TV "Morning News," predicted that, by the convention, "I'm not going to be substantially behind. That delegate gap will be closed dramatically. It will be a ... neck-and-neck horserace."

The Rev. Jesse L. Jackson, in California, offered no comment on the results from Oregon, where he had not campaigned, and Nebraska, which he visited last week. He finished a distant third in both states.

NOT SURPRISINGLY, Hart said the twin victories were further evidence of his strength as a western candidate capable of defeating Californian Ronald Reagan in next fall's general election.

"Now we've won all but one state west of the Mississippi," Hart told supporters in his adopted hometown in Denver. He apparently was referring to primaries only, with Louisiana the lone loss, since he has lost several Western caucuses including Texas.

After the final round of primaries June 5 including delegate-rich California, he said, "I think I'll be able to say we've still won all but one state west of the Mississippi."

Oliver Henkel, the Hart campaign manager, said the wins "recreated momentum and the sense of vitality in the campaign" and showed a "tremendously broad rejection of his (Mondale's) candidacy by these two states."

Despite Mondale's big delegate lead, Henkel said, "The viability of (Mondale's) candidacy has to be seriously questioned.,".

There were 67 delegates at stake on Tuesday in states where Mondale campaigned not at all in Oregon and only one day in Nebraska.

HART HELD a total of 45 — 29 from Oregon and 16 from Nebraska. Mondale led for 22 — 14 from Oregon and 8 from Nebraska.

With ballots counted from 99 percent of Nebraska's precincts, the vote was:

Hart, 85,997 or 59 percent.
Mondale, 39,103 or 27 percent.
Jackson, 13,402 or 9 percent.

In Oregon, with results from 82 percent of the state's 2,452 precints, the vote was:

Hart, 185,061 or 59 percent.
Mondale, 86,428 or 27 percent.
Jackson, 30,314 or 10 percent.

Based on Tuesday's contests, the delegate totals are:

Hart, 979.75
Mondale, 1,599.05.
Jackson, 295.2.
Uncommitted, 304.
Others, 55.

SOME 1,967 delegates are needed for the nomination.

Besides emphasizing his natural constituency in the West, Hart is hoping to demonstrate that despite his earlier string of losses in industrialized states in the Midwest and Northeast, he is a stronger national opponent than Mondale against Reagan.

A majority of Nebraskans questioned in exit polls by CBS News after leaving the polls said they believe Hart has a better chance of beating Reagan this fall.

Hart plans to use the "electability" argument with about 600 uncommitted and unpledged delegates before and during the party's convention in San Francisco, now just eight weeks away.

Hart's campaign strategists decided it was worthwhile to have their candidate campaign hard in Nebraska and Oregon, not because they were afraid of losing, but as a demonstration that his comeback challenge to Mondale was no fluke.

Mondale's small core of support in Nebraska was built around organized labor unions in Omaha. Hart, meanwhile, was accompanied on campaign stops by the state's popular Gov. Bob Kerrey.

BEFORE HART'S narrow, upset wins in the Indiana and Ohio primaries on May 8, his candidacy was believed to be a dying effort incapable of resuscitation.

Even as Hart celebrated his victories, Mondale could take solace in his growing count of delegates who will support his candidacy at the convention when it begins July 16.

Mondale tacitly conceded Oregon and Nebraska to Hart. After his losses were clear he noted the one campaign stop in Nebraska and said, "I think we spent $3,000 in Oregon."

But campaigning in other states, Mondale sharpened his attack on what he said as Hart's record of flip-flopping on various issues and questioned the 47-year-old senator's experience as a leader.

While staying out of Nebraska and Oregon, Mondale chose to concentrate on a strong opening to his campaign in California, the biggest prize of all, where 306 delegates will be contested on the final primary day of 1984 on June 5.

On the same day, another 107 delegates will be up for grabs in New Jersey, a state where Mondale's strategists hope to prove that their candidate can stop Hart's late surge.

The California and New Jersey primaries are important, not only for their rich delegate totals, but because of the psychological value they could have for either Mondale and Hart.

The only primary between now and then is Idaho where 18 delegates will be contested May 24.

Five boys accused of raping pre-teen girls

QUINCY, Mass. (AP) — Five preteen boys cornered two girls, aged 9 and 10, in a church basement, sexually attacked them and then taunted them about it for more than a month before one of the victims blurted out what had happened, authorities said.

"The strange thing is, these were normal little kids," Capt. David F. Rowell, head of the city's investigative team, said Tuesday. "I feel saddened by the thing. We all feel saddened."

"We have tremendous feelings for the two victims," added Lt. Neil McDonald. "And we also have feelings for the defendants. They could be stigmatized for the rest of their lives."

The boys, 10 to 12 years old, pleaded innocent Tuesday at a closed-door arraignment in the juvenile division of Quincy District Court. The case was held over to June 5.

Few details of the attack, which took place in January, were available as police complied with laws protecting juveniles and rape victims.

Authorities did say that on April 20, a relative of one of the girls called authorities. She said the child had seen a television program about sexual abuse called "This Secret Should Be Told," and blurted out what had happened in the church.

After a series of interviews early this month, three of the boys were charged with assault with intent to rape and indecent assault and battery on one of the girls, said Norfolk District Attorney William D. Delahunt.

A fourth youth was charged with indecent assault and battery on the same girl, and a fifth boy was charged with indecent assault and battery on the other girl, Delahunt said.

A police investigation concluded that the girls had gone into the basement of St. Boniface Catholic Church in Quincy's residential Germantown section to use the bathroom.

"Either the boys followed them in, or were in there hiding," said MacDonald. He said there was no one else in the building at the time.

The boys allegedly trapped the girls in a hallway and attacked them. Police will not say how long the incident lasted.

The boys reportedly taunted the girls at school for more than a month afterwards.

"After the incident happened...the boys continued to harass and threaten the girls," a person who knows the girls told The Patriot Ledger of Quincy.

The person spoke on the condition that his name not be used.

Rowell said he feared the publicity the case might attract, recalling the attention that focused on New Bedford during the trials in which four men were convicted of raping a woman on a tavern pool table while others cheered.

"I don't think there's an analogy here. We're talking about children," he said. "Do you realistically think a 9-year-old boy knows what he's doing in this type of situation?"

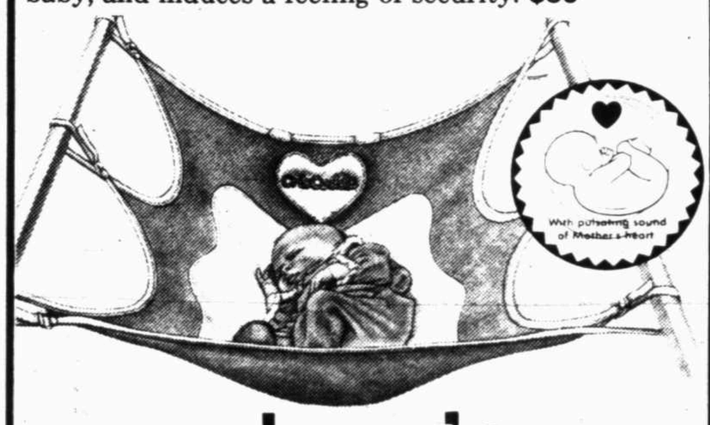

As word of the alleged attack spread through Germantown on Tuesday, the church's co-pastor called upon the community to "help all the children."

Man gives up at end of Monopoly

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — A man who killed his ex-wife and then held off police for five hours while the couple's two children played Monopoly in the apartment had had a "running feud" with the woman since their December divorce, authorities said.

Randy VanWinkle, 30, surrendered after his two children, 8-year-old Lora and 11-year-old Keith, were released unharmed about 11:20 p.m. Monday, Tulsa police Cpl. David Kruithof said Tuesday.

During telephone negotiations, VanWinkle told police that his former wife, Diane, 30, had not been harmed. However, when officers entered the apartment they found she apparently had been shot to death before police arrived at about 6 p.m., Kruithof said.

Indictment not related to probe

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Former Atlantic City Mayor Michael Matthews' latest indictment, on charges of extorting $11,000 from businesses in the resort town, was not related to the 22-month undercover probe that led to earlier extortion charges against him, a prosecutor said.

In the indictment returned Tuesday, Matthews is charged with receiving the money in exchange for influencing zoning decisions on two building projects, U.S. Attorney W. Hunt Dumont said. Matthews' attorney, Frank Lopez, said the former mayor would plead innocent.

Matthews, 50, was charged March 27 with peddling his influence in return for organized crime payoffs. He took office in June 1982 but was ousted in a March 13 recall election which he is challenging.

Housewife claims share of lottery

NEW YORK (AP) — An immigrant housewife who waited an extra day before claiming her $5.5 million share of a record New York State Lotto prize said she was too nervous to come forward immediately.

Braulia Meneses, 33, of the South Bronx, was accompanied to a press conference at lottery headquarters Tuesday by her auto mechanic husband. The other three winners had claimed their shares of the largest lottery prize in U.S. history on Monday.

"I had to settle down and let the excitement calm down," said the mother of four, who came to this country from her native Ecuador 12 years ago.

Thief knew combination to safe

FARGO, N.D. (AP) — An employee charged with stealing more than $30,000 in legal gambling receipts from five safes belonging to Prairie Public Broadcasting knew the combinations and had keys to strongboxes in which the money was kept, authorities said.

Warrants were issued Tuesday for the arrest of Michael Alsman, a 30-year-old assistant gaming manager for the company, which runs gambling operations in 13 bars around the state, authorities said.

Safes were emptied in Fargo, Bismarck, West Fargo and Minot between 1 a.m. Sunday and 8 a.m. Monday, said company President Dennis Falk. Alsman failed to show up for work Monday or Tuesday and has moved out of his Fargo apartment, Falk added.

Federal limits on radiation too strict

WASHINGTON (AP) — Proposed federal limits on radiation from nuclear waste disposal sites are 10 times too strict, a panel of scientists says.

The limits, proposed by the Environmental Protection Agency in 1982 and still under consideration, are substantially "more stringent than those standards generally required or adopted in today's society," the agency's subcommittee on high level-radioactive waste disposal said in a report made public Tuesday.

The EPA must impose limits on five sites where the Energy Department plans to store waste from nuclear power plants, beginning in 1992. Two scientists on the 13-member subcommittee dissented from its report, saying radiation should be kept at as low a rate as reasonably possible.

Drinking on job discouraged

WASHINGTON (AP) — Drinking on the job by railroad workers should be forbidden by federal regulation, the National Transportation Safety Board says.

The board cited Tuesday as an example of the need for such a rule a Sept. 14 accident near Sullivan, Ind., in which an engineer and brakeman fell asleep and their locomotive rammed the caboose of the train ahead, causing two deaths. A vodka bottle was found in their cabin.

The board said the incident was one of several recent examples of drinking and drug abuse that have caused train crashes. Chairman Jim Burnett said he was disturbed that the Federal Railroad Administration had not issued a rule against drinking "despite repeated evidence of a potential for a catstrophic accident caused by train crew members under the influence of alcohol."

AIDS virus test to be evaluated

WASHINGTON (AP) — Field trials of a new test to detect the virus suspected of causing the disease AIDS will be conducted by the American Red Cross in a move that officials say could lead to a screening of the nation's entire blood supply.

The main Red Cross laboratory at Bethesda, Md., will begin in several weeks an extensive evaluation of the test developed by scientists at the National Cancer Institute to detect the virus suspected of causing acquired immune deficiency syndrome, the full name of AIDS, officials said Tuesday.

Similar trials will be conducted at three or more of the nation's blood collection centers, officials said. The federal Centers for Disease Control say more than 4,300 AIDS cases have been reported in the country since 1981 and more than 80 of them have been linked to blood transfusions.

Soviet warship headed home

WASHINGTON (AP) — The biggest Soviet warship ever to operate in the Carribean, the helicopter carrier Leningrad, apparently is heading home after seven weeks of maneuvers with the Cuban navy and visits to Cuban ports, Pentagon officials say.

Children find, play with fetuses

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Authorities are investigating whether any laws were violated when a truck driver dumped several human fetuses he had collected from abortion clinics in a trash bin, where children found and played with what they called the "little people."

A spokesman for Bayshore Clinical Laboratories Ltd. said Tuesday that the unidentified truck driver had been fired. The driver "regrettably and improperly" dumped the plastic containers of fetuses behind a medical clinic, instead of taking them to the lab for disposal, "for personal reasons," the spokesman said.

E. Michael McCann, Milwaukee County district attorney, said he did not yet know whether any laws had been broken. He said his investigation may boil down to confirming that the laboratory service normally disposes of fetuses in acceptable ways, such as by incineration.

Police said three boys and a girl, ages 4 to 11, found the fetuses Monday evening and were playing with them and calling them "little people."

The children directed police to a trash bin from which investigators had by Tuesday afternoon recovered 11 fetuses in containers, 11 more wrapped in paper towels and about 12 empty containers, said Elaine A. Samuels, associate county medical examiner. The containers bore the names of patients and dates of abortions.

The trash bin was behind a medical center whose owner, Darryl L. Eisenberger, called the dumping "despicable" and said his center does not perform abortions.

McCann said the fetuses evidently had been picked up at a downtown clinic for disposal and had not originated at Eisenberger's center.

Informant in De Lorean case paid $111,000

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The prosecution's key witness in John Z. De Lorean's drug trial was a highly paid informant, but lived in constant fear of reprisal and often fled with his family from government-supplied homes just hours after moving in, a federal agent testified.

James Timothy Hoffman collected more than $111,000 in payments and "expenses" in the more than two years he worked for the government, Drug Enforcement Administration agent William Waters told jurors Tuesday.

Defense attorney Donald Re, who prepared to probe more deeply into the financial arrangement today, suggested outside the courtroom Tuesday that Hoffman, a convicted drug smuggler who escaped a 15-year prison sentence by turning informant, was motivated by government money to "set up" De Lorean.

"Hoffman had a good job and he wanted to keep it," said Re. "He knew that the bigger the fish (he caught), the better it was for him."

Re alleged that the government, by paying all of Hoffman's living expenses, gave him "an incentive to make cases that were not legitimate."

Earlier, Waters told jurors that Hoffman began working for the DEA in January 1982 and was the key figure in four cocaine arrests before the De Lorean case. The 59-year-old automaker is charged with conspiring to distribute cocaine to save his failing car company.

Waters said the government paid for Hoffman, his wife and three children to abandon home after home, often fleeing in the middle of the night to avoid reprisals.

"It became necessary on occasion for Mr. Hoffman to uproot his family and abandon the house where he lived in the space of 10 or 12 hours," the agent said.

"In essence, Mr. Hoffman got in his car with his family and left," he said. "The government, the DEA and FBI, would go in afterward with movers and pick up Mr. Hoffman's belongings."

In some instances, he said, Hoffman and his family hid in a hotel "for 10 to 20 days until things cooled off." Each move cost the government about $2,500, he said.

There were other expenses picked up by the DEA, FBI and U.S. Customs, Waters said, including rent, food, clothing, travel and medical bills for the entire Hoffman family, as well as phone bills averaging $900 a month.

Some of the calls were government business, including calls by Hoffman to Cyprus, Lebanon, France and Greece, he said.

Under questioning by Assistant U.S. Attorney James Walsh, Waters showed jurors expense charts he prepared from memory. He said Hoffman was not required to submit receipts and the DEA kept no vouchers for his payments which were all in cash.

The chart showed that $28,338.42 of Hoffman's payments were directly attributable to the "sting" operation in which undercover agents arrested De Lorean.

Another $28,751 was paid for the probe of De Lorean's one-time co-defendant, confessed drug smuggler William Morgan Hetrick.

After De Lorean's arrest on Oct. 19, 1982, Waters said, Hoffman's value as an informant evaporated.

'Kiddie porn queen' gets maximum four-year term

COMPTON, Calif. (AP) — Catherine Stubblefield Wilson, who allegedly controlled 80 percent of the U.S. market for explicit sex films involving children, could be paroled after nine months of a four-year prison term for distributing child pornography, prosecutors say.

The 44-year-old mother of five, whom prosecutors dubbed the "kiddie porn queen," received the maximum sentence Tuesday for the single count to which she had pleaded guilty.

But since Ms. Wilson has already served 488 days since her May 1982 arrest, she will be eligible for parole in about nine months, said Al Albergate, a spokesman for the district attorney.

"I think it is a real outrage that she will now probably only spend another nine months in state prison for these charges," Deputy District Attorney Lael Rubin said.

Ms. Wilson's attorney, Bernard Winsberg, said the manufacturers of child pornography are more culpable than his client.

"Remember, she only distributed the material," Winsberg said. "She didn't create it."

But Ms. Rubin said, "We feel those who distribute this material are equally responsible."

The prosecutor urged the state Legislature to stiffen the penalty for distributing child pornography.

Ms. Wilson, whose mail-order business allegedly earned her $500,000 a year, pleaded guilty to the single felony count on Feb. 14, the day her trial was scheduled to begin.

The judge also sentenced Ms. Wilson to two years in prison for violating the probation she received in 1980 for a child pornography conviction, but ordered that term to run concurrently with the longer sentence.

Woman loses leg battling muggers

NEW YORK (AP) — A woman's left leg was amputated below the knee after it became wedged between a subway train and the platform when two teen-age muggers tried to grab her purse, police said.

The 28-year-old woman, whose identity was not immediately released, underwent surgery Tuesday night at Bellevue Hospital following the assault in a Brooklyn subway station, police said.

"There was tremendous tissue damage," said Bellevue spokesman Steve Matura. "The only option was a mid-calf amputation."

The woman was listed in fair condition today. Her assailants escaped.

According to transit police, the woman was riding a Manhattan-bound train at about 5:25 p.m. when the two suspects tried to snatch a gold chain from her neck. When she resisted, they went for her purse, dragging the woman out of the train in the station, police said.

The woman's leg slipped between a car and the platform and was crushed when the train pulled out, police said.

Nature's heart

The late British poet and scholar A.E. Housman once remarked: "Nature, heartless, witless nature."

Today in Texas and elsewhere in the nation the poet's words take on an added dimension because of a continuing drought — a drought that is laying waste to more than the land. It's shattering futures, changing lives, bringing to an abrupt, dusty end — in some instances — the works of lifetimes.

An Associated Press story that appeared in the Reporter-Telegram Tuesday indicated that the drought now covers the entire state of Texas and that critically dry conditions exist in a large portion of west and south Texas. In fact, the drought is now in its fourth year in some parts of the state, decimating croplands and stock herds.

What can be done? The government — the reputed answer to all man's ills — is not a "rainmaker" and certainly recognized in many regards as more trouble than it's worth. And the power for generating rainstorms eludes even the scientific community at the present.

While it's true that the government can't make it rain and that the drought's impact still would be felt even after a good soaking rainstorm, Uncle Sam can help in other ways. In this regard his help is needed and would be welcomed with open arms.

Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower has called on President Reagan and U.S. Agriculture Secretary John Block to step in and begin gearing up to administer the government's various disaster assistance programs. They should do just that. Experts are saying the drought's effects will be felt for years to come, and the government's assistance would make a real difference.

A drought isn't quite as dramatic as a tornado or a hurricane or an earthquake. And the need for help may not be as readily apparent. A drought sneaks up on a land over a period of months or years. It drains that land of the most precious commodity it has — water. And when the water is gone, the life is gone.

Yes, nature is heartless. We hope Uncle Sam isn't.

Trip was worth it

President Reagan's political foes downplayed the accomplishments of his trip to Communist China to the point of making it appear to have been an exercise in futility. Subsequent disclosures, however, tend to prove otherwise and to explain the cheerful optimism exhibited by the president as he ended his mission.

The agreements reached by the president with the Chinese leaders in several areas are, of course, a matter of record and can be expected to endure as long as anything in these fitful times. But the trip's real bonus for the president was the tempest it obviously stirred in the Kremlin.

It was revealed a few days ago that while the president was in China, an outlaw radio station in that country maintained a running verbal attack on him. The broadcasts, which were embarrassing to the Peking regime, made frequent use of old Chinese proverbs in a manner denigrating to Mr. Reagan and were represented as expressing the opinion of the Chinese armed forces.

A British Broadcasting Corporation monitoring service, however, has traced the station's broadcasts to the Soviet Union. What does that tell you?

Mr. Reagan's efforts to keep the two Communist giants at bay could hardly have been more successful.

Another View:

Reagan's home run

By speaking directly to the American people on May 9 about the communist attempt to enslave Central America, President Reagan loosened the congressional grip on funds desperately needed to give democracy a chance in El Salvador.

The House the next day rejected efforts to impose strict conditions on U.S. military aid to El Salvador and narrowly voted to give President Reagan additional funds to aid Central America.

Democratic House Speaker Tip O'Neill said President Reagan's nationally televised speech swayed some members of Congress who were fearful of grassroots reaction "if El Salvador fell to the communists."

Mr. O'Neill, a leading critic of President Reagan's Central American policy, hit the nail on the head. Many in Congress couldn't care less whether Central America falls to the communists, but they are scared to death about losing their own jobs.

If we read Mr. O'Neill correctly, he is saying that the American people do care about Central America even if he and some of his colleagues don't.

President Reagan took a major step in combating totalitarianism in the Americas by clearly explaining the threat. And by leaving Congress to either stand on the side of democracy or choke on its rationale for dragging its feet.

The final battle with Congress is not yet won, of course. But at least Mr. O'Neill and many other Democrats will not be more clearly held accountable for their actions.

As Mr. Reagan said, "The simple questions are: will we support freedom in this hemisphere or not? Will we act while there is still time?"

Harry Truman would have unhesitatingly responded "yes" to all three questions.

Many in today's Democratic Party probably would like to think about it for a while longer. Perhaps until the latest public opinion polls come in or there no longer is an El Salvador, Honduras, Guatemala or Cost Rica.

Soviets aren't just playing!

The United States has a very serious problem. It doesn't want the Russians in El Salvador, but it does want them in Los Angeles.

Art Buchwald

The Soviets, according to President Reagan, are running all over Central America, but they don't want to send one weight lifter to the Olympics.

The State Department is now working day and night to reverse this situation.

"What do you plan to do about the problem?" I asked one of the American diplomats working on the impasse.

"We're in touch with Moscow now and our message to them is that we have no objection to them testing us in Los Angeles, but we take a serious view of them competing with us in Central America."

"The Russians say the reason they won't come to L.A. is that it's too dangerous for their athletes."

"We're trying to tell them they've read our signals all wrong. Where they are in physical danger is in Nicaragua and Cuba. They have nothing to fear if they show up in California."

"I'm not clear why Ronald Reagan is unnerved about the Soviets being in El Salvador, but is not afraid of them in Los Angeles."

"The reason is quite simple. Los Angeles is farther away from Washington than El Salvador is from Houston. The president is very hurt that the Soviets have decided to boycott the Olympics because they feel they won't get enough protection here. Russian lives are sacred to Mr. Reagan when they are in the United States. At the same time, we have informed Mr. Chernenko the Soviets are not going to win any Gold Medals if they keep swimming in our hemisphere."

"I guess both messages coming at the same time must have Moscow very confused."

"I don't think so. We want the Soviets to compete in the Olympics. We'll give them all the visas they request to come to Los Angeles. But we're not going to give them permission to send one more hammer thrower into Central America."

"Maybe the Soviets are retaliating because we refused to go to their Olympics in 1980."

"We had a very good reason for not going to Moscow then. They invaded Afghanistan and we wanted to send a strong message that we wouldn't stand for this outlaw behavior. Just because we wouldn't go to their Olympics is no reason for them not to come to ours."

"I understand the other reason the Russians decided not to come to L.A. was because of the smog. Have you been able to assure them that there would not be any smog in Los Angeles if they agreed to compete?"

"There's always smog in Los Angeles. The Soviets damn well know that. We consider this excuse a red herring. If you want the truth we suspect that one of the reasons they are not coming is because they will have to be tested for steroids. Everyone knows their athletes are full of it."

"Do you think the Soviets are using steroids in Central America?"

"We have a strong suspicion they are. But it's the arms they are shipping to the rebels, and not the steroids that we're concerned about," he said.

"I know this is a crazy idea. But if the Soviets are in Central America and we're there also, why don't we just move the Olympic Games from Los Angeles to El Salvador?"

"That's the stupidest thing I've ever heard. Suppose the Russians come to El Salvador for the Olympics, and then refuse to leave after they're over? What do we do then?"

"What guarantee did we have that they wouldn't stay in L.A. after the Olympics were over there?"

"None. And frankly, we think that's the main reason the Soviets decided not to come."

Boycott underscores hypocrisy

WASHINGTON — The Soviet boycott of the Summer Olympic Games presents an opportunity to take a sober, second look at this sports spectacular. There is an urgent need for a top-to-bottom overhaul of the Olympic structure.

Jack Anderson

The time has come to stop pretending that the games are above politics. The Soviet-bloc nations have always used Olympic stadiums as political arenas.

They have been assisted, incredibly, by the International Olympic Committee, which has rigged the rules of the games to give Soviet-bloc athletes an advantage. Communist countries count all their athletes as amateurs, though they are subsidized by the state. Every living, breathing Soviet athlete, for example, is eligible for Olympic competition.

In contrast, America's professional athletes are mostly barred from the games, though the rules have become so bollixed that some professionals are accepted as amateurs and some amateurs are considered professionals.

For example, amateur track-and-field stars, if they happen to play professional football, have been ruled ineligible. Yet other amateurs can accept money for track events and product endorsements, without endangering their Olympic amateur standing — provided the money is placed in a trust fund. It can be doled out to pay living, training and other expenses.

Professional basketball teams can't compete in the Olympics — unless they happen to play in a league that the International Basketball Federation recognizes as amateur. An All-America player from Wichita State, for instance, was allowed to try out for the U.S. Olympic team, though he earned a reported $200,000 last year playing in the Italian Basketball League. And the new Olympic tennis competition will be open to professionals if they happen to be under 21 years old.

The hypocrisy has aroused the indignation of former Treasury Secretary William Simon, who is president of the U.S. Olympic Committee. He's a veteran political skirmisher, whose visage looms cheerfully above the wreckage of a hundred battles. Forcefully, he has called on his peers to reform and simplify the eligibility rules.

But the International Olympic Committee is ensconsed behind walls that won't easily crumble before the trumpets of reform. Behind those walls, the Olympic barons tend to be deaf to argument and indiffernt to injustice.

The most practical solution, therefore, might be to throw out the eligibility rules and open up the Olympics to all athletes. "If we can't have honest amateurism," Simon stated, "then let's open it up."

The existing rules are as riddled with loopholes as Swiss cheese and "encourage our young athletes to cheat," he told me.

Simon's lips curled in a gargoyle's inward grin as if he savored the coming confrontation.

INSIDE THE WHITE HOUSE: White House polls show that Gary Hart would make a stronger showing than Walter Mondale against President Reagan in November. But the president isn't worried. "If we have to go against Hart," he cracked to aides, "all we'll need is a barber to win the election." He explained that Hart's John F. Kennedy hair-do conceals a pair of jug ears. "If you cut his hair above the ears," said Reagan, "he'll look like a sail plane."

— The president's campaign strategists are relieved over the results of another poll, which show that the "sleaze" issue may backfire on the Democrats. The strategists say that by harping on the "sleaze factor," the Democrats have given the impression that they're conducting a smear campaign, that they themselves are up to their elbows in sleaze. In the end, they may wind up splattering more sleaze on themsevles than on Reagan.

— Sources close to the president say he's convinced that the Kremlin will do anything short of war to prevent his re-election. This is the real reason, he believes, that the Soviets are boycotting the Summer Olympics in Los Angeles and are refusing to hold disarmament talks. They just want to make him look bad, he thinks.

— President Reagan is furious at Paul Volcker, the towering chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, for pushing up interest rates. The president fears this could choke off the economic recovery before the election. Aides are urging him to summon Volcker to the Oval Office for a confrontation. But Reagan doesn't like to deal with Volcker directly. The Fed chairman's rambling discourses, economic mumbo jumbo and condescending manner turn Reagan off. The president's subordinates, however, have had little success in dealing with Volcker. "Negotiating with the Fed," one White House aide complained, "is like dealing with a foreign government."

— Some presidential advisers are looking beyond the 1984 election to 1988 when they expect Vice President George Bush and Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker to be the top two Republican contenders. Already, aides are choosing sides between Bush and Baker. This factionalism is beginning to split the staff and could hurt Reagan's campaign.

EDWIN FEULNER

Rich have more — taxes, too!

With April behind us, the IRS is sorting through the last of the estimated 96-million income tax returns Americans filed for 1983. The take for the U.S. treasury is an estimated $300 billion — hardly what you'd call pocket change.

Edwin Feulner

And contrary to what the liberal champions of the "oppressed" repeatedly tell us, the wealthy — with all their so-called tax avoidance shcemes — were stuck with the lions share of the tax bill.

Recent analyses by U.S. NEWS & WORLD REPORT and Boston economic analyst Warren Brookes show that the relatively few wealthy people in the United States pay the bulk of all taxes — both as a percentage of income and in real dollars. And, Brookes has shown, cuts in the tax rate actually increase the amount paid by those in the upper-income brackets.

For instance, last year, some 1.5-million taxpayers who earned over $75,000 filed tax returns for 1982. Yet, those 1.5-million taxpayers paid 23 percent of the total revenue collected by the IRS. In the middle-income brackets, those earning $20,000 to $75,000, 34-million taxpayers, paid 62 percent of the revenue collected.

The dollar figures are even more revealing. In real terms, the one-and-a-half million upper-income taxpayers paid $63.8 billion in taxes. The approximately 59-million taxpayers earning less than $20,000 a year, on the other hand, paid less than $42 billion in taxes. Moreover, the roughly 8,200 millionaires who filed in 1983 handed over as much to the feds as did the 34-million wage earners who earned less than $10,000. Is that catering to the rich?

The effective tax rates for those returns filed in 1983 show that those earning over $1 million gave up, on the average, almost 40 percent of their income to the tax man, despite the "tax schemes" that we have been led to believe enable the wealthy to get away without paying any taxes. A person who made $20,000 to $25,000 gave the federal treasury 12.3 percent of his or her income. Some would argue that since a millionaire makes 50 times more than a $20,000 wage earner, he should pay 50 times more in taxes. But if that were the case you'd find youself living in a country where no one has any reason to work any harder or take any more chances than the next fellow. Why would anyone bother?

Tax-and-spend liberals like to cite data showing that the U.S. has the second lowest rate of any industrial nation in the world, second only to Japan. With a 31-percent average tax burden (as a share of total domestic output), the U.S. looks pretty attractive to those paying 44 percent in France, 40 percent in Britain, and 37 percent in West Germany.

Unfortuanately, these figures only take federal taxes into consideration. When one includes city, county, and state income taxes, as well as sales and excise taxes, we find that U.S. working people face one of the highest tax-burdens in the world. And the wealthier one is the more one pays.

Those self-proclaimed "champions of the poor" had better do their homework before they get on the "sock it to the rich" bandwagon. They obviously don't know what they're talking about.

Transplant patient's mom robbed

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A man awaiting a liver transplant for his daughter has been charged with stealing $75 from the mother of heart-liver transplant patient Stormie Jones, police said.

James H. Thompson, 33, was also charged with taking personal items from the laundry room of an apartment house where he and his wife, Tish, were staying, police said.

Thompson, of Santa Rosa, Calif., is accused of stealing the money from Lois Jones' purse while she was visiting the Thompsons, police said.

The Thompsons, whose 1½-year-old daughter is in Pittsburgh's Children's Hospital awaiting a liver transplant, befriended Mrs. Jones while she waited for her daughter to recover from her heart-liver transplant, police said.

Stormie, 6, made medical history on Feb. 14 when she underwent the world's first heart-liver transplant at Children's Hospital.

Thompson was arrested Monday and released on nominal bond over police objections, Patrolman Richard Borghini said.

"I don't know why they (released him)," Borghini said. "We were against it."

He said the theft took place "sometime last week" but was not reported by Mrs. Jones until May 12.

A hearing for Thompson was set for May 21, Borghini said.

Thompson was on parole after serving time for passing bad checks, California authorities said. He had received permission from his parole officer to come to Pittsburgh to be with his daughter, Elaina.

"I have no statement to make to the press at this point until I talk to my attorney," Thompson said.

Police said no charges were leveled against Mrs. Thompson.

The Thompsons were evicted Tuesday from their apartment in Pittsburgh's Oakland section, not far from Children's hospital.

Mrs. Jones and Stormie returned to their Texas home Monday. Stormie had suffered from life-threatening blood fat levels, and doctors said her transplant operation was a medical breakthrough.

Community must stop watering lawns, gardens

GOLDTHWAITE (AP) — Because of a dwindling water supply, residents of this Central Texas community have been asked to stop watering their lawns and gardens.

Goldthwaite pumps out of the Colorado River west of here into a nearby reservoir, but the river stopped flowing four weeks ago.

"We've asked everybody to restrict water usage to inside their homes," City Manager Dale Allen said. "That means no watering yards and no watering gardens."

Allen said the small lake has a 100-acre-foot capacity but now stands at 35 acre-feet — just enough water to supply the town of 1,800 people for 30 days if rationing is observed.

"After that runs out, we have three wells that are capable of pumping 100 gallons a minute, which is 144,000 gallons of water a day. We can survive on that if we have to," said Allen.

The cutback on outside watering, which went into effect on Tuesday, will cut consumption in half if everyone goes along, the city manager said. For now, there is no penalty for non-compliance, he said.

"There is no fine involved," Allen told the Abilene Reporter-News. "But we are urging all residents to abide by the rationing and refrain from any outside watering unless it is an emergency."

Goldthwaite's 860 water customers normally use 400,000 gallons of water a day, Allen said.

The scenario is a familiar one to Goldthwaite residents. The town also had water shortages during the late summer months of 1980, 1981 and 1982.

What is unusual is that the water shortage has come so early this year. Normally, the Colorado River here is flowing in May and June.

The town's chronic summer water shortage prompted officials to let bids April 24 for a new 200-acre-foot reservoir, which will be located two miles southwest of town near where Texas Highway 16 crosses the Colorado River and for a 500,000-gallon water storage tank.

Allen said the city has received a $500,000 community development block grant for the cost of constructing the new reservoir and water storage tank. Bids on renovation of the city's water filtration plant will be let in June.

Feedlots fatten many

Over half of America's "fed cattle" are now fattened in feedlots ranging in capacity from 1,000 head to more than 100,000. In 1964 less than 1 percent of the feedlots had a capacity over 1,000 head.

SCOTT WELCH

An Open Letter to Precinct 3 Residents:

I want to take this opportunity to thank each of you who voted in the Democratic Primary May 5th and ask for your vote in the November general election.

I sincerely appreciate the work my family put into my campaign and the others in and out of Precinct 3 that worked so diligently to help me win the Democratic nomination for county commissioner.

My effectiveness as your future county commissioner will depend in part on your participation and I encourage you to contact me on matters that you feel need attention. My platform during the campaign was "effective representation for the people of Precinct 3" and I intend to do just that with your help and support.

Once again, thank you and remember to cast your vote for me in November.

Sincerely,
Scott Welch

High school junior staged disasters for three years

ORANGE (AP) — It's only a pretend disaster, but the students don't know that.

They hear their school's fire alarm blast, and assume it's a normal fire drill. Then they're aghast to see fire trucks, ambulances and Life Flight helicopter speed to the scene and a police road block.

Firefighters extinguish the fake "fire" and emergency medical technicians rescue students with simulated wounds and burns, placing them on stretchers and transporting them by ambulance to the local hospital.

The mock disaster gives various lifesaving departments a chance to rehearse working together and tests the effectiveness of students' drill evacuations, says Jimmy Sichko, disaster masterminder.

Sichko is a 17-year-old who's been staging disasters, with school officials approval, since he was 14.

His age shocks people.

More than once, adults have pushed Jimmy away during disasters, yelling "Where's the coordinator?" ignoring his insistent "Here I am!"

Sichko is not an ordinary kid. Never has been. He's always preferred adult company and social events to playing games, classical music to rock, and a creative style of independence.

Many people mistakenly assume his "disasters" are a student government activity, but he said, "I'm not in student government any more. I prefer to work independently."

His initial disaster, though, was the result of attending a student government convention as safety chairman.

"They've talked about regular fire drill, and I thought 'I never do anything regular.' "

So he dreamed up the mock disaster, borrowing DuPont's elaborate simulated disaster kit.

"To the best of my knowledge, this never has been done in schools before I started," Sichko says.

The disaster kit is crammed full of rubber masks to cover various body parts: Slip-on wounded arms, burned limbs, ruptured intestines. IV-type plastic bottles splatter blood realistically through the injuries.

Adding water to dry powder, Sichko manufactures fresh "blood."

Realism is important, he says, because it makes everyone involved take the situation seriously — and learn to handle a real disaster more effectively.

"Each year I'm adding challenges for them," he says.

"The first year we had no smoke; the second year we had smoke."

"Response the first year was excellent. But by the second year, some people questioned saying 'My kid was scared.' "

"I'd like to think that disaster would never happen, or that they could happen without scaring people. But life's not like that.

"As for telling the kids what to expect, if a 747 crashed into the school, they wouldn't receive advance warning. They'd have to know how to react.

So far, the West Orange-Stark High School junior has staged drills at his high school's East Campus, at St. Mary's Catholic School, and North Middle School where 10 students were planted in the cafeteria, injured by a "gas oven explosion."

Sichko applied bruise-look makeup and fake wounds, then briefed a team of adult and teen critiquers before ringing the fire bell. Next he called the police department for road blocks, followed by calls to Life Flight, the constable, ambulance, hospital and fire department.

Most of the reaction to these drills has been positive, and the superintendent of schools in West Orange-Cove CISD has asked him to conduct an inservice workshop for district principals in the fall, Sichko says, amazed and delighted at the switch in authority roles.

The young disaster planner, who also serves on the board of local Crime Stoppers, believes he's the youngest on Texas Crime Stoppers, and is a big fan of the Orange Police Department

"I have two fantasies," says Sichko, who is well on his way to a career as an opera singer.

"My fantasies are to sing with Luciano Pavarotti and to dispatch with the Orange Police Department. That's my big thing — dispatching.

"I want to be a police dispatcher on my days off from singing at the Met."

A lyric baritone who has won numerous vocal honors, he plans to attend New England Conservatory of Music.

Body with gunshot wound found in house after fire

ARLINGTON (AP) — The body of an unidentified man was found Tuesday morning with a gunshot wound to the head after a pre-dawn house fire.

Firefighters were called after a neighbor reported hearing an explosion, said Arlington Police Sgt. Hugh Atwell. A preliminary investigation determined arson was the cause of the blaze, he said.

"Some type of accelerant was used in the fire," Atwell said. "There was an initial explosion."

Firefighters found the body, which was sent to Fort Worth for an autopsy, inside the house. He said, "We have it as a homicide right now," Atwell said. "(Suicide is) still a possibility."

Bishop speaks out for aliens

HOUSTON (AP) — The United States is sending Salvadoran refugees to their deaths by expelling them from this country, the bishop of the Houston-Galveston diocese says.

Bishop John L. Morkovsky told KHOU-TV Tuesday the United States should show compassion for Salvadorans and other illegal aliens who are fleeing political oppression and poverty.

He said he was upset by reports of Salvadorans "who have been sent back, who never have been heard from again or who have been known to be killed — not necessarily executed but simply killed by some kind of forces."

Many Americans simply are not aware of the magnitude of the problem, Morkovsky said. "I think it's surprising to know that there are still people who don't know that some of these people are going back to their deaths — almost sure execution, just murder," he said.

Man says he killed grandmother

ARLINGTON (AP) — A man walked into a police station Tuesday and reported that he had killed his grandmother, authorities said.

"We had a guy walk into the station this morning reporting a homicide. He said he had just shot his grandmother," said Arlington police Sgt. Hugh Atwell.

Officers went to the address the man gave and found the body of 83-year-old Elsie Reynolds, Atwell said. A rifle was also found, he said.

The man was questioned by investigators Tuesday afternoon, but had not yet been charged, Atwell said.

White names economic group

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White named Harden H. Wiedemann, director of the Governor's Office of Economic Development, to lead a 25-member Texas delegation to the Jerusalaem Economic Conference May 20-25.

The delegation was organized following the visit last January of Yaacov Meridor, Israeli minister of economy, to Austin and several other Texas cities.

The trade mission will attend the Jerusalaem Economc Conference and Isratech, two major economic development conferences aimed at highlighting Israel's capabilities in high technology industry.

FCC to allow new TV station

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission said Tuesday it had published the decision of an administrative law judge, selecting the Pueblo Broadcasting Corp. as best qualified to build a new TV station on UHF Channel 45 in Rosenberg, Texas. Judge Edward Luton selected Pueblo over one competing applicant, Texas 45 Broadcasting Inc.

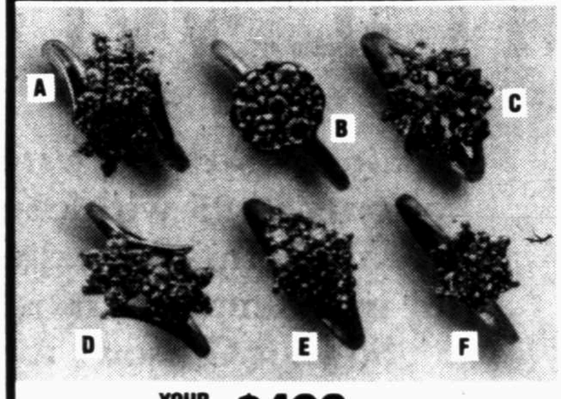

The judge credited Pueblo with a preference on diversification grounds, noting it owns no other stations while the parent firm of Texas 45, Weigel Broadcasting Co., owns WCIU-TV in Chicago. The judge also awarded a preference to Pueblo on so-called integration grounds, finding two of its major stockholders had pledged to work at the new station compared to none of the owners of Texas 45.

The judge's decision will become effective in 50 days unless an appeal is filed within 30 days. Pueblo Broadcasting is a Texas corporation with eight stockholders, all Hispanic. Its president is Jose Adan Trevino and its vice president is Alfonso C. Pena. Pena has pledged to work full time as the station's general manager.

Chap women tied for first

From Staff Reports

OCALA, Fla.—Midland College and three other teams were tied for first place in the National Junior College Athletic Association women's tennis tournament at 19 points each, but, as far as the Chaparrals were concerned, today could be the day of decision.

MC women will be facing higher seeds in three of the six singles matches. Today one round of singles scheduled and two rounds of doubles are on tap. Semifinals are Thursda with finals Friday.

Tied with Midland are Tyler JC of Texas and Indian River and Palm Beach of Florida.

Sixth-seeded Liz Burris, playing No. 1 singles, defeated Hillary Evans, Hutchinson, Kan., 6-2, 6-4 Tuesday and today meets second-seeded Dyan Castillejo, Broward, Fla., in a quarterfinal match.

Nicolle Barrett, ranked No. 5, defeated Toni Craig, Sinclair, 6-0, 7-5, and meets fourth-ranked Josie LaMerre, Indian River, today in No. 2 singles.

Therese Devine, second seeded in No. 3 singles, defeated Cynthia Macaluso, Ocean County JC, 6-0, 6-1; Jill Werternberger, third-seed in No. 4 singles, defeated Barb Hathaway, Sinclair, 6-0, 6-0; Donna Van Auken, second ranked in No. 6 singles, downed Tammy Jackson, Sinclair, 6-1, 6-0.

Jane Howe, who drew a No. 5 seeding, beat Beth Brady, Sauk Valley, 6-0, 6-1 Tuesday but must meet No. 1 seeded Libby Lock, Palm Beach, in the No.5 singles today.

In doubles, MC lost only four games in three matches. Burris-Barrett defeated Volland-Weber, Lewis & Clark, 6-1, 6-3 and meet fifth-seeded Lavarock-Marsey, McLennan, a team the MC duo beat in regionals.

Devine-Wertenberger advanced in No. 2 singles with a 6-0, 6-0 win over Austin-York, Paducah, Ky.; while Howe-Van Auken took a 6-0, 6-0 win over Johnson-Leiberger, Calhoun, Ga.

No. 1 Singles—Liz Burris def. Hillary Evans, Hutchinson, Kan., 6-2 6-4. Meets Dyane Castillejo, Broward, Fla., today.

No. 2 Singles—Nicolle Barrett def. Toni Craig, Sinclair 6-0,7-5. Meets Josie LaMerre, Indian River, today.

No. 3 Singles—Therese Devine def. Cynthia Macaluso, Ocean County, 6-0, 6-1.

No. 4 Singles—Jill Wertenberger def. Barb Hathaway, Sinclair, 6-0, 6-0.

No. 5 Singles—Jane Howe def. Beth Brady, Sauk Valley, 6-0, 6-1. Meets Libby Lock, Palm Beach, today.

No. 6 Singles—Donna Van Auken def. Tammy Jackson, Sinclair, 6-1, 6-0.

No. 1 Doubles—Burris-Barrett def. Volland-Weber, Lewis & Clark, 6-1, 6-0. Meet Lavarock-Massey, McLennan, today.

No. 2 Doubles—Devine-Wertenberger def. Austin-York, Paducah, Ky., 6-0, 6-0.

No. 3 Doubles—Howe-Van Auken def. Johnson-Leiberger, Calhoun, Ga., 6-0, 6-0.

A.J. Foyt mellows

Brawling days behind, maybe

By MIKE HARRIS
AP Motorsports Writer

A.J. Foyt is surprisingly amiable these days.

The often fiery and always unpredictable curmudgeon of Indy car racing may be mellowing as he approaches his 50th birthday and barrels toward the end of his illustrious driving career.

In the past, the only four-time winner of the Indianapolis 500 has brawled with fellow drivers, punched cameramen, grabbed reporters, feuded with sanctioning bodies, pounded on and kicked balky cars, and generally snarled at anyone within close range during the month of May at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

RACING FANS always have been attracted or repelled by the combination of his enormous ability in virtually any kind of race car and his determined, win-at-all-costs ways.

When Foyt wins, his fans are gleeful. When the burly Foyt explodes in rage, they shake their heads, smile and say, "That's ol' A.J." In either case, his detractors just shake their heads in disgust.

But now, at the age of 49 and approaching a record 27th consecutive Indy race, Foyt is having some fun, even at Indianapolis.

Foyt, always a showman, electrified a crowd estimated at more than 200,000 Saturday when he jumped into his traditional orange No. 14 race car and, after going no faster than 204-plus mph during a week of practice, ripped off a lap averaging more than 209 during the first day of qualifications for the May 27 race.

He appeared ready to challenge for one of the front-row positions in the sizzling field, but a burned piston abruptly ended that qualifying attempt. However, the roar from the crowd was deafening when Foyt stepped from the car in the pits.

THE NOISE reached a crescendo when he came back later in the day in an almost untested backup car and put it into the race day lineup with a four-lap average of 203.860 mph, good for the outside of the fourth row.

"We didn't have time to change the springs around like I had on the other car," said the smiling Foyt. "We took the wing off the other car and put it on the car. I was just very loose. I was an accident waiting to happen.

"I spun the first lap, then I hesitated and said, 'I gotta run faster than that,' and I got up a little more, and, I was just playing cat-and-mouse. I was in trouble all four laps.

"We weren't planning on running this car. I've had the car over 200, and that's all. Just kind of a secondary backup, and all of a sudden we had to make a quick decision, and I said, heck, let's go see what we can do."

Before the cheering had died away, the dynamo from Houston — that cherubic smile still fixed in place — already was on his way down pit road to try and help fellow Texan Johnny Rutherford get another of Foyt's entries ready for a qualification attempt.

He was totally in his element.

In the past few years, Foyt has driven fewer Indy car races, opting for an occasional foray to a Grand National stock car event, an International Motor Sports Association sports car endurance race or watching his latest love, his race horses, run at places like Louisville Downs.

And, unlike his usual business-first-and-always attitude at Indianapolis, when he's at a stock car track or preparing for an endurance race, Foyt often holds court for the media, offering racing tales and adventures for all who will listen.

"I take all the racin' I do serious," Foyt said before coming here this month. "But I take Indy very serious. That's a $2 million race.

Here's one that will test the incidental recall abilities of old timers...This pre WW II lefty came up with the Pirates in 1929, went to the Cubs to record 80 of his 197 major league victories. In his final season with Brooklyn, he was 15-4 with a 1.92 ERA, which, surprisingly, was his last year in the majors. A hit batsman to first and wild pitch to second, if you get it.

Tuesday's answer: Dan Corder was the only Midland pitcher to win a Texas League ERA title, back in 1972.

Baseball Today...

1889 — Buck Ewing, remembered primarily as a catcher, took to the mound for the New York Giants and pitched a complete-game win over Cleveland 6-3.

1953 — The Chicago White Sox loaded the bases against the New York Yankees in the ninth inning but Vern Stephens, who had 10 grand-slam homers to his credit, was lifted for a pinch hitter — and pitcher Tommy Bryne, the substitute batter, hit the jackpot with a bases-loaded blast off Ewell Blackwell.

1965 — Jim Palmer, 19, posted his first major-league victory and hit his first homer as the Baltimore Orioles beat the New York Yankees 7-5.

1979 — The Los Angeles Dodgers established a record for consecutive errorless games at 11 straight (May 5-16), breaking the old Dodger record of 10 games set in 1942.

There was plenty of drama at Cubs Stadium Tuesday night, but the Midland Cubs just used another plot for what has become a regular heart-twisting ending.

This play ended in a 10-8 victory for the Arkansas Travelers, their fourth in five games with the Cubs. But the script writer had to work long and hard for this finish.

The ending came from Arkansas catcher Bob Geren, who blasted his third homer of the year with two men on base and two outs in the top of the ninth off Cub reliever and loser Jeff Moscaret. If there is a way, the Cubs, who are now 9-26 on the season, can turn sure victory into humiliating defeat.

"He (Geren) comes in here hitting eighth and batting .228 and no homers. He gets three (homers) off of us and a double in the series. You figure it out," said a discouraged Cub manager George Enright. "You can lose by one or 10, but those losses keep mounting up. That's 26 (losses) now. Where does it stop?"

BUT GEREN wasn't trying to figure anything out. He has loved his trip to Midland.

"I wish I played in this division," said Geren. "This is a hitter's division with the parks they have and the stats of players look better in this division and this is a game of statistics. I love playing here.

"I didn't put any pressure on myself because I was just hoping for a chance to bat in the ninth. I was fifth up in the inning and I just wanted to hit. I got a fastball on a one ball count and it was down the middle."

Moscaret had replaced Jorge Carpio in the ninth with the Cubs leading 8-7 after Carpio gave up a one out single to Dave Clements. Carpio had pitched five innings and had given up only one unearned run to that point. Moscaret gave up a single to Dan Stryffeler before Geren connected deep to left with the Cubs only one out away from a victory.

Former major leaguer Andy Hassler retired the Cubs in order in the bottom of the ninth for his second save of the series.

"This is really nothing new for me. You see the same situations anywhere. There is just different hitters and you have to get them out," said the 32-year-old Hassler, who was released by the California Angels during the last week of spring training.

"I wouldn't be here if I didn't think I could still pitch," said Hassler. "I took a month off (after the release) to try and work something out with another major league team. And then I came here and things have been going well."

ENRIGHT would agree. "He hasn't shown me that he can't pitch. We've seen Hassler four nights now and we haven't got to him yet.

Cub coach Goose Gregson added, "You'll see Andy back in the majors sometime this year and I think you can count on that."

The Cubs erupted for six unearned runs in the first inning while sending 11 men to the plate and chasing Trav starter Todd Worrell. "You just can't lose when you score six runs early in a game. It kills you," said Enright.

Knicks series pays off for Celtics

BOSTON (AP) — During the past two weeks, the Boston Celtics were hardly grateful toward New York as they fought for their lives against the Knicks. Now, they realize what they gained from that hotly contested series.

As it did in its four Eastern Conference semifinal victories over the Knicks, Boston jumped in front early Tuesday night and cruised to a 119-96 romp over the Milwaukee Bucks in the opener of their best-of-seven Eastern Conference final.

"We came out aggressively," said Celtics' guard Gerald Henderson. "I have to thank New York for this one."

While Milwaukee won its conference semifinal series last Thursday, Boston was pushed to the limit — the seventh game — here Sunday against the surprisingly strong Knicks.

"I'm sure the fact that they had not played in a while had something to do with their starting slow," Boston forward Cedric Maxwell said of the Bucks. "And, I'm sure our playing Sunday and then today helped us. We just got right back into the flow."

Milwaukee, which will try to even the NBA playoff series here Thursday night, never did.

The Bucks, who swept the Celtics in four games in last year's conference semifinals, managed just six points in the first seven minutes. An 8-2 closing run brought them to within 22-17 after one period.

But Larry Bird, who led all scorers with 24 points, sparked a late second-half surge that put the game firmly in the Celtics' grasp.

With Boston leading 37-33, he sank three free throws to kick off a 17-9 burst that stretched the margin to 54-42 at halftime. Bird had nine of those 17 points. The Celtics' lead ranged from 11 to 23 points the rest of the way.

"It's true, we had a chance to rest, but that might have worked to our detriment," said Marques Johnson, who led the Bucks with 18 points. "We were rested but were never into our tempo."

Milwaukee's shooting was way off — just 28 percent in the first quarter and 42 percent in the game — and no Buck had more trouble than veteran center Bob Lanier. He made just one of eight field-goal attempts and scored only two points.

"They double-teamed me quite a bit down low," Lanier said. "It seemed every time I looked (center Robert) Parish had Bird at his side."

"Center is the dominant position for any basketball team. You've got to get your center involved in your offense," said Milwaukee Coach Don Nelson.

Magic passes out 24 assists as Lakers romp

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — While Earvin "Magic" Johnson was handing out a record number of assists, Los Angeles Lakers Coach Pat Riley was paying him a rather unique compliment — he wasn't really noticing.

"He does it every night," the Lakers coach said after Johnson had a playoff record 24 assists in Los Angeles' 118-102 victory over the Phoenix Suns Tuesday night.

"I was unaware of the large number of assists he passed out," said Riley. "He does a great job night in and night out."

Abdul-Jabbar said of Johnson's record outing: "It doesn't surprise us. He does it all the time; he's amazing with his talents and it's something he has done all year and throughout his career."

Johnson's 24 assists rewrote the playoff record of 20 set by San Antonio's Johnny Moore last year.

The victory gave the Lakers, who've lost just one of their 10 playoff games this year, a 2-0 edge over the Suns in the best-of-seven Western Conference Championships. The clubs now switch to Phoenix for games Friday and Sunday.

Abdul-Jabbar led the well-balanced Los Angeles scoring with 21 points, as seven Lakers scored in double figures. James Worthy and Bob McAdoo came off the bench to chip in 19 and 16 points.

Larry Nance paced the Suns, who fell behind in the second period and got no closer than nine points in the second half, with 29 points. James Edwards added 16 and Walter Davis 14.

Africans expected to compete in Games

By Associated Press

An African sports official says it's unlikely that African nations will follow the Soviet Union and its allies in boycotting the Summer Olympics in Los Angeles.

Amadou Lamine Ba, secretary general of the Supreme Council for Sport in Africa, called the Soviet withdrawal "a sovereign act which is not for us to approve or disapprove," but added that withdrawals by African countries "on the request or influence of the Soviet Union ... is not envisioned for the moment."

He said only unforseen developments before the June 2 entry deadline would prevent African nations from going to Los Angeles.

In 1976 at Montreal, 26 African nations boycotted the Olympics to protest New Zealand's participation after a rugby team from that nation had toured South Africa, which has a racial policy of apartheid. Lamine Ba called a South African tour by the British Rugby Union "an unfortunate decision," which "we perceive as an act of deliberate provocation," adding that the Supreme Council would meet in Upper Volta June 16-17 to decide on how to react.

The Republic of China also said it would attend the Games.

BOWLING BEAT

Huegele's 265 leads bowlers

BY RANDY ISENBERG

A 710 series, paced by a 265 game, by Paul Huegele led Midland bowlers over the past week while Vern Williams rolled a 708 on the strength of a 255 game. Rike Tipton had a 703 series with a high game of 266 and Mark Reilly hit a 239 game to produce a 644 series.

Pam Sanchez led all women bowlers with a 242 game and 641 series and Christine Rodriquez produced a 631 series on the strength of a 257 game. Cory Sprague rolled a 228-625 and Lynn Cooke had a 245-618. Bobbie McCormick's 223 game set up a 594 three-game set as part of a 755 four-game effort.

Midland Map is carrying a 204-plus average in the Oil Star League.

In other bowling news, Vera Vincent was honored at least three times during the week. The retiring matriarch of ladies bowling in Midland over the past 26 years is moving to Dallas. She was secretary of the Mop & Broom Ladies League for 26 years and secretary in the His & Hers Mixed League for the past 17 years.

Vincent also held numerous Midland Bowling Association offices and has earned the coveted Bowlin' Bertha award, the highest award given by the MBA.

The Midland Womens Bowling Association recently held its spring meeting at Fairmont Park Lanes. Lil Poole, TWBA state secretary, was an honored guest. During the meeting, Vincent and Ida Robinson were presented with life membership in the MWBA.

Officers selected at the MWAB meeting were Ellie Shelton, president; Jo Steward, first vice-president; Judy Bolin, second vice-president; JoAnne King, secretary; and Pat Francis, treasurer. Betty Seay won the Bowlin' Bertha award.

Cagers charged in rape

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Four Duquesne University basketball players, including leading scorer Emmett Sellers, were arraigned Tuesday on charges of raping a business school student, authorities said.

Sellers, 20, a sophomore guard from Newark, N.J., was charged with rape, involuntary deviate sexual intercourse, simple assault and terroristic threats, said university spokesman Kenneth Service.

Also charged with the same offenses were Greg Harrison, 18, of Lynn, Mass.; Ron Stevenson, 19, of Pittsburgh, and Eric Compton, 18, of Long Beach, N.Y. All three are freshmen.

Sellers, Stevenson and Harrison were three of the Dukes' four leading scorers this past season.

Paciorek named AL's top player

From wire reports

BASEBALL—Chicago White Sox outfielder-first baseman Tom Paciorek, who went 14-for-25 last week to raise his average from .275 to .333, was unanimously selected as the American League Player of the Week. Included in his 14 hits were a pair of doubles, a triple and seven RBI...

Ryne Sandberg of the Chicago Cubs, who had 13 hits in 29 at-bats for a .448 batting average last week and stretched his batting streak to 16 games, was named Monday the National League Player of the Week.

FOOTBALL—Artesia, N.M., Coach Mike Phipps has given up his coaching job to become assistant principal of the high school. Phipps is a graduate of Eastern New Mexico and has been employed by the Artesia schools since 1970. He led the Bulldogs to seven district and seven state AAA football championships, including titles in the last two years in compiling a 96-28-1 record since 1975...

Members of the Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium Authority will meet with representatives of the Atlanta Braves and Atlanta Falcons today to discuss renovation or replacement of the present stadium. The officials will discuss the results of a study that explored ways to improve the stadium, including a proposal to build a new stadium at an estimated cost of $50 million to $60 million. The study was funded jointly by the authority, the baseball team and the football team...

HOCKEY—Bobby Clarke, the outspoken center of the NHL Philadelphia Flyers of the National Hockey League, was named GM of the club he led to two Stanley Cup championships. The announcement was a surprise to those who thought Keith Allen would be back for a second term and was made by owner Ed Snider's son Jay...

BASKETBALL—Jack McKinney, whose Indiana Pacers finished with the worst record in the NBA the past two seasons, was named coach of the Kansas City Kings. McKinney, who was fired by the Pacers at the end of the 1983-84 season, succeeds Cotton Fitzsimmons, who jumped to the San Antonio Spurs after his contract expired at the end of the season...

Boston's Danny Ainge and the Knicks' Darrell Walker and 14 of their teammates were fined a total of $3,750 for a bench-clearing brawl during a May 9 playoff game. Ainge, whose foul of Walker with 50 seconds left in the third quarter touched off the incident, drew the stiffest penalty, $750. Walker, whose retaliation heightened the matter, was fined $500. Both amounts included the automatic $250 fine that comes with being ejected from a game. In a letter to Ainge, Scotty Stirling, NBA vice president for operations, said: "You clearly ran into Walker with both forearms driving into his neck and head area. Your actions precipitated a fight between yourself and Walker which escalated into a bench-clearing melee with the potential to erupt into an even more serious incident." In writing to Walker, Stirling said: "While your initial actions were prompted by Ainge's action, we do not consider provocation justification for retaliation..."

CUBS LOSE:

Arkansas got back in the game with two in the third and four in the fourth off starter Darryl Banks. The Cubs got the lead back with a single runs in the fifth and sixth, but Geren was pasted in Bruin fate for the ninth.

CUB PAWS: The Cubs released pitchers Neil Bryant (1-3, 5.86 ERA) and Ron Richardson (1-2, 6.24) Tuesday afternoon. "We have an idea of who we will get in their place, but no official word has come yet," said Enright...The Cubs open a five-game series at Cubs Stadium at 7 p.m. today against the Tulsa Drillers, a Texas Ranger farm...Not only are the losses piling up, but the Cubs are suffering from some major gaps in the lineup. "We now are two pitchers short with after releasing two today. Joe Henderson had X-rays on an ankle this afternoon. Danny Norman has a bad back and now Shawon Dunston comes up with a hurt ankle after scoring a run. That leaves us pretty well strapped and whipped right now...

Jim Palmer on way out?

BALTIMORE (AP) — Veteran Oriole pitcher Jim Palmer, who has been reduced to only mop-up pitching this season, is likely to be released by the organization within a few days, according to published reports today.

The Hall of Fame candidate and three-time Cy Young Award winner met with club officials Tuesday night in an effort to clarify his status.

Palmer, his attorney, Ron Shapiro, club owner Edward Bennett Williams and General Manager Hank Peters all refused to give details about the meeting, but the Baltimore Sun and News American both reported that Palmer's days as an Oriole are numbered.

Angels move into first place

By Associated Press

Sometimes, it's the little things that get a team going, Brian Downing says. Sometimes, it's bigger things.

The California Angels were off to bigger and better things Tuesday night, moving into first place in the AL West with a 5-2 victory over the defending World Series champion Orioles.

The Angels got their first run off Baltimore left-hander Mike Flanagan, 2-3, in the fourth inning on three infield hits, then Downing broke out of a 5-for-38 slump with a three-run homer to cap the four-run inning.

"Sometimes it takes breaks to get going," Downing said. "I was glad we could take advantage of it. That's the beauty of a three-run homer."

The victory, coupled with Minnesota's 5-2, 10-inning loss to Toronto, moved the Angels, who finished fifth in the AL West last season, a half-game into first.

Eddie Murray homered off Angels rookie Ron Romanick, 4-3, in the sixth inning.

Blue Jays 5, Twins 2

Toronto tied the score 1-1 in the ninth, then scored four more runs in the 10th — two on George Bell's triple — to upend the Twins. Mitch Webster scored the tying run, and he drove in one of the runs in the 10th.

After consecutive singles by Damaso Garcia and Dave Collins to start the 10th, Lloyd Moseby knocked in the tie-breaker with a single. Willie Upshaw then walked, and Webster followed with a run-scoring double. Bell's triple drove in the final two runs of the inning.

Tigers 6, Mariners 4

Kirk Gibson and Howard Johnson drove in two runs apiece to back Jack Morris to his seventh victory. Morris pitched seven innings, and Willie Hernandez struck out five in the final two innings for Detroit, now 28-5 and eight games ahead of Toronto in the AL East.

Spike Owen hit a three-run homer for the Mariners.

American League

White Sox 3, Royals 2

Rich Dotson pitched a four-hitter for his fifth victory, and Julio Cruz singled home the tie-breaking run in the seventh inning.

The score was tied 1-1 when Royals rookie Danny Jackson hit leadoff batter Dave Stegman with a pitch in the seventh. Stegman stole second, went to third on a sacrifice bunt and scored on Cruz's single. Cruz went to second on a balk and scored on a single by Scott Fletcher.

Indians 7, Red Sox 5

Andre Thornton had three RBI, including one in the eighth inning that broke a 5-5 tie and enabled Cleveland to beat Boston. Thornton's single came after consecutive walks to Tony Bernazard and Pat Tabler. Another run scored on a sacrifice fly by Julio Franco.

Thornton's sacrifice fly in the sixth snapped a 4-4 tie, but the Red Sox tied it again when Rich Gedman homered in the seventh inning.

Yankees 9, A's 6

Omar Moreno drove in four runs in his first start since April 22, and Ron Guidry survived an 11-hit, 7 2-3 inning outing to even his record at 2-2. Three of Moreno's RBI came on a bases-loaded triple in the seventh inning.

The A's, however, chased Guidry with three runs in the eighth on an RBI double by Mike Heath, a pinch single by Jeff Burroughs and Joe Morgan's run-scoring pinch-single.

New York erased a 3-2 A's lead in the fifth inning on run-scoring triples by Toby Harrah and Dave Winfield.

Brewers 3, Rangers 2

Milwaukee scored three runs in the seventh inning to beat Texas. Ben Oglivie had a two-run double, and Bobby Clark scored a run on a wild pitch by Dave Tobik.

Robin Yount started the inning with a bunt single. One out later, Ted Simmons blooped a single to right, and Mike Mason walked Clark. Oglivie then doubled to right-center for two runs, with Clark going to third, and Tobik then threw the wild pitch.

Schiraldi hurls four-hitter

By The Associated Press

Calvin Schiraldi's four-hitter gave the Jackson Mets a 4-1 victory over the Beaumont Golden Gators in a battle of Texas League division leaders, but the Gators exploded for six runs in the final inning of the nightcap for a 6-3 victory that salvaged a split of a doubleheader.

Beaumont's only run in the first game Tuesday night came on three walks and a ground out. Jackson scored on RBI singles by Greg Olson, Bill Max and Al Padrique and on a throwing error by losing pitcher Ed Vosberg, 3-4. Schiraldi, hurling his second straight complete game, raised his record to 4-2.

Jackson appeared en route to a sweep, but its 2-0 lead going into the ninth inning didn't hold up. Beaumont got its six runs on three hits, five walks and a wild pitch. Three of the walks in the inning came successively against different pitchers.

In other Texas League action Tuesday night, the home team lost both times. San Antonio defeated Shreveport 4-3.

Police charged in runner death

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (AP) — Four policemen have been charged in the town of Iringa with the murder of a young marathon runner, Richard Mbelwa, the Daily News reported Tuesday.

Mbelwa, 22, was fatally wounded by police bullets last Wednesday when he was mistaken for a thief at a track where he was training, according to previous official media reports.

The government-owned Daily News identified the accused as Julius Enock, 28; Peter Matola, 25, and two other policemen who were listed only by their surnames, Nkingwa and Mbambanisye.

The newspaper said the policemen were chasing a suspected thief with the help of residents of the southern highlands town and that Mbelwa also had joined in the pursuit.

Mbelwa was training for a marathon race in Munich, West Germany this month. In his first international marathon race in March in Austria, Mbelwa finished 11th.

Clippers jump to Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two years ago, the San Diego Clippers wanted to move to Los Angeles, and the National Basketball Association didn't allow it. Now, they're trying again, and think they'll be successful.

"Fate wouldn't allow it to happen two years ago," said Alan I. Rothenberg, president of the Clippers, at a news conference Tuesday where he announced the team was moving to the Los Angeles Sports Arena, about 10 miles from Inglewood where the Lakers play at the Forum. "Fate is on our side now."

NBA Commissioner David J. Stern said the Clippers' relocation "request" would be studied by a special committee and would be put before the Board of Governors at its meeting in Salt Lake City on June 26 and 27.

Rothenberg apparently had no doubt about the outcome.

"We informed them (the NBA advisory committee) of our intentions. I don't think they're going to say no. In my opinion, the Raiders' decision has something to do with it."

Rothenberg referred to the verdict of a Federal court jury two years ago in favor of the Raiders moving their National Football League franchise from Oakland to Los Angeles.

Stern, in a statement issued by the league, did not treat the move as an accomplished fact.

Andujar slams Braves

Cards ride homer to 9-1 win

By Associated Press

Joaquin Andujar, who plummeted in one year from World Series hero to a 6-16 loser, is making like Babe Ruth this year. Both on the mound and at bat.

The St. Louis Cardinal right-hander equalled last year's win total Tuesday by beating the Atlanta Braves 9-1 and chipped in with a grand slam home run — that like the legendary Babe he called before he hit.

"In the on-deck circle, if they walked (Tom) Nieto, I told George (Hendrick) I was going to hit it," Andujar said of the grand slam, which climaxed a six-run Cardinal eighth. "When I hit them, I go. I just swung and the ball went over the fence."

Andujar, who was 15-10 in 1982 with two wins against Milwaukee in the World Series before inexplicably losing his edge last year, was in total control against Atlanta. He scattered eight hits, struck out six and walked none in running his record to 6-3.

But he was prouder of his home run, which he stroked left-handed. It was the fifth homer of his career, but the first from the left side of the plate.

"Every day I hit about five or six home runs in practice," he said. But Braves Manager Joe Torre, who ordered the intentional passes that set up Andujar's grand slam, was more impressed by his pitching.

Cubs 6, Reds 3

Gary Matthews had four hits as the Cubs won in Cincinnati.

"When I hit, it seems like we're winning," said Matthews, acquired from the Philadelphia Phillies just before the start of the season. "When I hit, it seems like we're winning. I was glad to come out of my slump today."

Dickie Noles relieved Scott Sanderson who suffered back spasms after pitching to two batters and went six innings, allowing five hits and one run. Tim Stoddard finished up for his second save.

"One of the things we've been getting is good, consistent pitching," said Cubs Manager Jim Frey. "In the spring, a lot of people questioned our pitching, but it's been good."

Pirates 3, Astros 2, 10 innings

Tony Pena's two-out single in the 10th inning with the winning run, but it was a squeeze that failed that was the key to the game.

With runners at first and third and one out and the game tied in the ninth, Houston tried a suicide squeeze. But Bill Doran pulled away from the pitch by Pirate reliever Rod Scurry and Enos Cabell was caught in a rundown, thwarting the rally.

"Billy had the sign, but he pulled the bat out of the way for some reason," said Houston Manager Bob Lillis.

Scurry, making his first appearance in Pittsburgh since undergoing a month-long treatment for a cocaine problem, received a warm hand from the 2,978 who showed up in 40-degree weather.

Expos 6, Padres 4

Pete Rose, relegated to the bench with a heel injury, pinch-hit a two-run double that keyed a three-run sixth inning rally in Montreal's come-from-behind victory.

"It's kind of fun," Rose said of substitute's role. "I take my hat off to guys who pinch-hit for a living. It's a tough job."

Rose's double scored the tying runs and Doug Flynn followed with a single to send home the game-winner and send the Padres to their sixth straight defeat.

Bryn Smith got the win, his fifth in seven starts. Dan Schatzeder allowed only one hit over the final four innings to get his first save.

National League

Phillies 12, Dodgers 1

Mike Schmidt became the 19th player in big league history to reach the 400 home-run plateau and Len Matuszek and Luis Aguayo also cracked homers.

"Eleven years ago when I came up I never dreamed I'd hit 400," Schmidt said.

Jerry Koosman won his third for the Phillies. Bob Welch, 3-4, was the loser.

Mets 7, Giants 6

Keith Hernandez, batting with the bases-loaded and one out after Manager Frank Robinson ordered light-hitting Jose Oquendo walked intentionally, stroked and 11th-inning sacrifice fly.

Darryl Strawberry and Hubie Brooks each stroked two-run singles in the eighth inning as the Mets scored four times to take a 6-5 lead. But the Giants tied it in the bottom of the inning with a run off Jesse Orosco, 3-1, who eventually became the winner.

Jeff Leonard had a three-run homer in the first and Jack Clark a two-run shot in the third as the Giants surged to a 5-0 lead. Mark Davis, 0-5, was the loser.

Sooners, Illini in Tipoff Classic

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Oklahoma and Illinois will meet in the annual baskletball Hall of Fame Tipoff Classic at the Springfield Civic Center Nov. 17, Tipoff chairman Dan Walsh announced Tuesday.

He told a news conference that Georgetown University, which won the National Collegiate Athletic Association championship this year, declined an invitation to participate.

The 1983 Hall of Fame tipoff was a rematch of the previous year's NCAA final, with North Carolina State defeating Houston.

Edmonton suspects Islanders Smith may be mortal

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — It took the Edmonton Oilers seven games of Stanley Cup finals play before they could solve the riddle of Billy Smith. Now that they have done so — at least for one night — they just might be a different team.

"We showed ourselves that maybe Billy Smith isn't invincible after all," said Edmonton's Mark Messier, who scored two goals in leading the Oilers to a 7-2 blitzing of the four-time National Hockey League champions Tuesday night. The victory — Edmonton's second in the series against one loss — was built on the kind of lightning-quick offensive spurts for which the Oilers are known. They scored twice in a span of 17 seconds in the final minute of the second period, then twice more in 20 seconds in the third.

And they drove Smith to the bench in favor of Roland Melanson with the score 6-2. It was the first time Smith had faltered against the Oilers in the championship round — he was the most valuable player of last year's playoffs, when New York swept the Oilers in the finals to clinch the Islanders' fourth straitght Stanley Cup. And he had given up only two goals in the first two games this year.

"Against a hot goaltender, you tend to not shoot enough," added Messier, one of the Oilers' big guns who had been shooting blanks against Smith. "You look for the perfect shot. You won't get the perfect shot against that defense."

The Oilers didn't need the perfect shot Tuesday night. They got enough sloppy rebounds from Smith to turn matters their way.

"The main thing is I didn't have a good game," said Smith, who left the game to derisive chants of "Billy, Billy" from the crowd. "They're a good hockey team and they capitalize on your mistakes. I made too many tonight and so did the rest of the guys."

Stanley Cup

The Islanders actually led twice. Clark Gillies, who had 12 goals during a poor regular season, knocked in his 11th and 12th of these playoffs. Gillies made it 1-0 only 92 seconds into the game when he converted a nice backhand feed by Pat Flatley after Edmonton turned the puck over in its zone.

Oilers defenseman Kevin Lowe tied it at 13:49 with a short backhander off a pass by Anderson. But Gillies connected on a power play 2:54 into the middle period to make it 2-1.

That's when Edmonton's renowned sharpshooters got started. Messier faked rookie defenseman Gord Dineen before blasting the puck past Smith to tie it at 8:38. Anderson knocked in the rebound of Charlie Huddy's shot with Smith lying on the ice at 19:12 and Coffey deposited a backhander into an unguarded cage at 19:29 after Smith stopped his initial drive.

"Goals scored in the last minute or two of a period seem to have a difference on the game," said Oilers Coach Glen Sather. "They're big goals."

Edmonton got two more big goals in 20 seconds of the final session. Messier skated from his own zone and, despite being hacked at by Flatley, beat Smith with a wrist shot at 5:32. Then Kevin McClelland put home a backhander on a rebound to make it 6-2, bringing on Melanson in the New York net.

Melanson surrendered the final goal of the game, by Dave Semenko. Gretzky assisted on that one and on Anderson's, the first two points of the finals for the NHL scoring king.

"I don't care if I score at all as long as we win four games," said Gretzky. "If that happens, I'll be as happy as anyone."

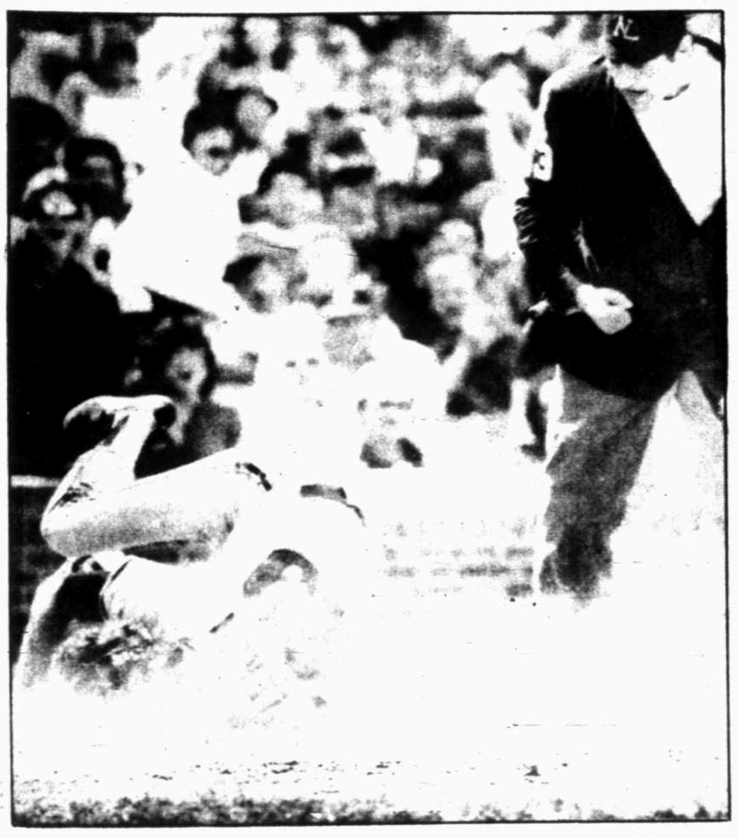

Gretzky and his comrades were encouraged by their ability to finally get their high-powered attack in gear.

"This opens it up because they can't concentrate on one guy anymore," Gretzky said. "It's a big confidence-builder."

Messier agreed.

"It's a nice thing to see us get some quick goals, put a few together," he said. "It's important that we score goals, not who scores. If we have a five-man attack, then it is a five-man goal."

The Islanders faltered as a unit and didn't have a spectacular Smith to fall back on.

Holmes-Coetzee bout faces technical KO

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Next month's scheduled heavyweight title fight between undefeated Larry Holmes and Gerrie Coetzee is on the ropes after Caesars Palace withdrew as the site.

Holmes was pictured as trying to save the bout, and said late Tuesday "so far as we know, the fight is still on."

The bout, which was to take place June 8 at a 25,000-seat outdoor stadium at Caesars Palace, was being promoted by JPD Productions, headed by Kenny Bounds, who did not return repeated phone calls Tuesday.

A breach of contract was cited by the hotel for bouncing the fight.

Bounds reportedly had been having problems financing the fight and was counting on a $16 million letter of credit from a California doctor to pull the fight off. But that money never came, and Caesars pulled out barely three weeks before the fight date.

"From our interpretation they breached the contract," said Bruce Aguiler, a Caesars Palace vice president.

Holmes, hoping to make the first defense of his International Boxing Federation title, said he still and wanted to go through with the fight.

"I'm still in training and as far as I know, Gerrie Coetzee still wants to fight," said Holmes. Coetzee is the World Boxing Association champion.

"Caesars Palace says they don't want it, but that doesn't mean the fighters don't want it," Holmes added.

Falcigno said the fight still could go on at a different site, but probably with a major cut in Holmes' purse.

Holmes reportedly was to receive $12 million for the defense of his IBF title. Coetzee, a South African, reportedly was to get about $3.5 million from an $8 million payment promoter Don King was to get for giving up his exclusive rights to promote Coetzee fights.

Tom Watson returns as Colonial favorite

FORT WORTH (AP) — Tom Watson makes his first appearance in three years in the Colonial National Invitation Tournament this week and comes in as a probable favorite.

After finishing fourth or better for four consecutive seasons, Watson did not qualify to play the final two rounds in 1981 and skipped the prestigious old tournament the last two seasons.

Now, actively and eagerly reasserting himself as golf's premier performer, Watson ranks as the man to beat in the elite, invitational field of 102 that begins a chase Thursday over the tough, old Colonial Country Club course. At stake is a total purse of $500,000 with $90,000 for the winner.

"I'm looking forward to it," Watson said before a practice round on 7,116- yard, par 70 layout on the banks of the Trinity River.

"I'm on a roll right now.," he added. "Second, first and third in my last three starts. That's not bad."

Watson confirmed the end to his early-season slump with a runner-up finish in the Masters, scored his second victory of the season in the Tournament of Champions and was third last Sunday in the Byron Nelson Classic. He's in his customary postion as the game's leading money-winner with $318,468.

"I'm playing well, and it's getting better," he said. "I have a good feeling about this week, about the next few weeks."

A.J. FOYT:

"And there's some pride mixed in there (at Indianapolis) with the fact they (the fans and the media) expect you do do miracles even when things are goin' wrong. They don't really understand. But I don't consider it a burden. It's just something I gotta live with."

THE COMBINATION of Foyt's lack of success at Indianapolis the past few years — he last won in 1977, finished second in 1979 and has ranged from 13th to 31st since — plus a compressed vertebrae that kept him out of a race car from July to November last year, has increased speculation about his retirement.

"I don't pay no attention to it," he said. "A lot depends on my health. But, right now, I feel real good, and I'm just thinking about the Speedway."

Pressed, gently, about when he might consider retiring, at least from Indy car racing, Foyt grinned, winked and said: "When it's time, I'll know it. I'll just get out of the car and never get back in. I don't even know when that's gonna be."

Oberammergau to mark play's 350th anniversary

By NESHA STARCEVIC
Associated Press Writer

OBERAMMERGAU, West Germany — Jerusalem will move to the Alps once again this month as the villagers of Oberammergau stage their world-renowned Passion Play to mark the 350th anniversary of an oath they took to ward off the plague.

Undaunted by strong opposition from Jews who claim the play is anti-Semitic, the lavish production depicting the life and death of Jesus Christ opens in this quaint Bavarian village on May 21 and runs through Sept. 20 with 95 performances.

Originally started as a gesture of thanksgiving, the Passion Play has become an economic windfall for the village of woodcarvers, tucked in the Ammer Valley beneath the snow-capped peaks of the Alps.

A half-million visitors attended the 1980 performances in a huge theater with an open-air stage, and most spent at least one night in the village.

"The play has catapulted Oberammergau onto the world map," Mayor Klement Fendt said.

The Passion Play dates to 1633, when the bubonic plague ravaged the Ammer Valley, killing 85 villagers in a period of several months.

When the Roman Catholic residents vowed to stage a Passion Play every 10 years if the disease abated, the "black plague" vanished in what was regarded as a miracle.

The first play was held in 1634, and the cycle has been repeated at the start of every decade since then except when prevented by anti-Catholic rulers in 1770, 1810 and World War II.

The Passion Play has been dogged by criticism from Jewish groups that object to what they say is the play's tendency to blame the Jews for the death of Jesus, and its defamatory depiction of Jews.

An attempt to introduce an entirely new play, based on an old text by Benedictine monk Ferdinand Rosner, was rejected by two-thirds of the villagers after a trial performance in 1978.

The current play is based on the text written by the Rev. Othmar Weis in 1810 and revised in 1950 by the Rev. Joseph Alois Daisenberger, both of the nearby Benedictine Monastery of Ettal. The text has been approved by the Ecumenical Committee of the German Bishops' Conference and the Second Vatican Council.

"From the historical viewpoint, the play has nothing to do with anti-Semitism," the Rev. Josef Forstmayr, the priest of Oberammergau, wrote in a foreword to the official text.

The text, also used in the 1980 performances, was at the time described by a group of American Jewish Committee officials as a "nightmare of anti-Semitism."

The play has been further purged since, but the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith said earlier this year that revisions "do not go far enough in reducing its anti-Jewish content."

"The charges of anti-Semitism are incomprehensible," said Fendt, a 29-year-old banker. "Anti-Semitism is totally alien to the historical roots and the intellectual content of the play."

The jubilee play, unusual because it doesn't come at the beginning of a decade, has encountered unusual booking problems. Only 250,000 tourists had confirmed reservations two weeks before the play opening, but officials aren't worried.

"The booking started slowly but it's picking up now," Paul Lindlbauer, a spokesman for the village travel office, said in an interview.

"We expect about 100,000 Americans and that is the usual number," he said. Most of the other foreign visitors come from Scandinavia, Britain, Japan and Australia.

Lindlbauer said public interest may have diminished because only four years have passed since the 1980 production and because of competition from the Los Angeles summer Olympic Games.

Package arrangements, including a hotel room and meals and a ticket, cost the equivalent of between $80 to $190 per person.

Officials are reluctant to discuss financial aspects of the play but Fendt conceded that the town hopes to clear the equivalent of about $3 million from this summer's performances.

The pageant is the major source of income for the village which has no industry other than handicrafts and depends on tourism for its livelihood. Dozens of souvenir shops, displaying credit card signs, sell depictions of play scenes from local woodcarvers.

Raimund Hans, owner of the first-class Hotel Boeld, said that his 20 rooms are booked out for the five months of performances but there was little business before and after the Passion Play.

Woman tops Naval Academy class

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — For the first time since women were admitted to the service academies in 1976, a woman will graduate at the top of her class.

Naval Academy officials announced Tuesday that the No. 1 graduate this year is Kristine Holderied, a 21-year-old oceanography major from Maryland.

Miss Holderied completed her four years at the academy with a grade point average of 3.88 out of a possible 4.0, the academy said. Class standing at the Naval Academy is based on both academic grades and marks in military performance.

Dean A. Miller of Dunwoody, Ga., will graduate second at commencement exercises May 23. John Abbot of Birmingham, Ala., finished third.

Miss Holderied's high marks in professional training helped boost her ahead of Miller and Abbot, both of whom had slightly higher grade averages.

Miss Holderied, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Holderied, was away from the academy on leave and could not be reached Tuesday for a reaction to the announcement that she is the top graduate of the class of 1984.

NEW YORK (AP) — Fast was the tempo and modern the mood for Twyla Tharp's "Bach Partita" ballet, seen here for the first time Tuesday night at the Metropolitan Opera.

American Ballet Theater gave the premiere of "Bach Partita" Dec. 9 in Washington. The company currently is dancing at the Met, through June 16.

Starring were Cynthia Gregory and Fernando Bujones and Martine van Hamel and Clark Tippet.

Dennis Cleveland played solo violin for Bach's "Partita No. 2 in D minor." Santo Loquasto created costumes in gold and olive which hinted at past times. The production received a grant from Manufacturers Hanover Corp.

The evening began with Michel Fokine's "Les Sylphides," in which Peter Fonseca replaced Kevin McKenzie, who had injured a toe. Paul Connelly conducted, with some shifts in tempo. George Balanchine's "Bourree Fantasque" ended the evening.

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A radio station says lead singer Boy George of Culture Club has given permission for a Milwaukee-boosting spin-off of the group's hit record "Karma Chameleon."

The song, with the refrain "I'm a I'm a I'm a I'm a I'm a Mil-wauk-ee-an," follows the melody of the rock music hit.

Lawyers for Boy George were earlier reported to have threatened court action if WBTT did not stop broadcasting the spin-off. In response, the station refused to play any Culture Club songs.

But Rick Harris, a WBTT disc jockey, said British Broadcasting Co. disc jockey Simon Gates called Tuesday to advise that Boy George had given permission for production and broadcast of the song — as long as "every penny of profit" goes to leukemia research.

Harris said his station then checked with Boy George's management in London and received approval.

The song, entitled "I'm a Milwaukeean," was recorded in suburban Wauwatosa by Guy Herman, whose real name is Derek Procell, and his group, the Bubbler Boys.

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Apollo 14 astronaut Edgar Mitchell, the sixth man to walk on the moon, has been slapped with a paternity suit by a woman who claims Mitchell kicked her out of his home after she became pregnant.

Sheila Ann Ledbetter, who is about six months pregnant, is seeking support after the child is born and is asking that Mitchell be named the father, according to the suit filed Monday in Palm Beach County Circuit Court.

Ms. Ledbetter claims that in December, Mitchell threw her out of the house the couple shared and demanded she undergo an abortion. The suit says she became pregnant on or about Nov. 20.

The suit claims she had nowhere to live but the former astronaut's car, and that Mitchell repeatedly harassed her.

Mitchell, 53, now a business consultant in Jupiter, Fla., and an advocate of self-awareness techniques, was out of the country this week and could not be reached for comment. His two marriages ended in divorce.

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — World renowned pianist Claudio Arrau, visiting his native Chile for the first time in 17 years, is suffering from gastroenteritis and was forced to cancel a concert, a spokeswoman says.

Gloria Leiva said the 81-year-old artist is expected to recover quickly and that Tuesday night's concert, the second of four scheduled during his two-week Chilean tour, has been tentatively rescheduled for tonight.

Arrau, who lives in New York, arrived here May 10. His first concert was held Saturday in Santiago.

IRVINE, Calif. (AP) — Former President Richard M. Nixon walked down 17 flights from his penthouse suite at the new Irvine Marriott Hotel when fire broke out in a basement clothes dryer, forcing the evacuation of the hotel's 400 guests, a spokesman said.

The fire Tuesday morning was put out by employees, said hotel general manager Ron Cribbett, but the Orange County Fire Department evacuated guests for about an hour as a precaution.

Nixon "went downstairs until the fire department said it was OK to come back up," his administrative assistant, John Taylor, said. "He walked down all 17 flights at a normal pace."

The 71-year-old former president was in town for a foreign policy address at Chapman College.

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — South African playwright Athol Fugard says his new play, "The Road to Mecca," is the first he has written since giving up drinking 16 months ago — but that doesn't mean his struggle with alcoholism is over.

"For the moment, I'm sober. But I'm still Athol Fugard, and I'm an alcoholic," he said in a recent interview.

NEW YORK (AP) — A painting by Paul Gauguin that had been in storage for more than 20 years brought a record auction price of $3,850,000 at a Sotheby's auction which sold $32.9 million worth of art work.

Gauguin's "Mata Mua," a Tahitian scene painted in 1892, was purchased Tuesday evening by a London art dealer for Baron Hans Heinrich Thyssen, a well-known collector who is a director of Sotheby's and a trustee of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, said Batya Monder, a spokeswoman for the auction house.

The price was a record for a Gauguin sold at auction, Ms. Monder said. The previous record at auction was $2.9 million for his "La Plage du Pouldu" in 1980. However, a Gauguin painting sold privately 18 months ago, "Man with An Axe," went for $6 million.

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Five elderly men, their arms raised in the Nazi salute, shouted "Heil Hitler" at the graveside of Nazi fugitive Walter Rauff following a funeral service for him.

The ceremony Tuesday was attended by about 200 relatives and friends of Rauff, who died of lung cancer Monday at his home. After most of the crowd left, the five men gave their salute.

"Heil Rauff," one added in a final farewell to the 77-year-old former SS colonel.

Rauff was accused by Israel and West Germany of designing "black raven" vans in which at least 97,000 Eastern European Jews were killed. The victims were asphyxiated by the vehicles' exhaust fumes.

CHURCHVILLE, Va. (AP) — Brice Aaron Miller, president and chief operating officer of Shenandoah Valley Broadcasting Inc., died Tuesday after a long illness. He was 42.

The company ons WKDW and WSGM-FM in Staunton. Miller also was president of WLVA in Lynchburg and a stockholder in WCOK in Sparta, N.C.

ABC rates 'A' despite NBC's 'V'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — NBC's earthlings repelled the reptile invaders from outer space as "V: The Final Battle" took the top two places in the Nielsen ratings for the week ended May 13.

Still, ABC claimed its fourth straight week as the winning network. NBC was second and CBS was third.

The final episode of "V" was the highest-rated show for the week. In second place was the second chapter. Despite the victory by the earthlings, reptilian femme fatale Jane Badler escaped to return in the fall when "V" becomes a regular series.

Over at ABC's "Happy Days," the Fonz and friends took their leave in the Top 10 after 11 years as one of TV's most popular situation comedies. The final one-hour special episode was 10th, its first time in the Top 10 since August 31, 1982, when it was also 10th. After the appearance of NBC's "The A-Team" the show's ratings fell off sharply.

ABC's "Dynasty" came in third with its cliffhanger show ending the season. CBS' "Dallas," building up to its own cliffhanger this week, was fourth. In sixth place was another CBS soap opera, "Falcon Crest," also bound for summer suspense after this Friday.

Jane Fonda's television dramatic debut in the ABC movie "The Dollmaker" captured fifth place. Its Mother's Day opposition on NBC, "Family Secrets," tied for 16th place.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Cholesterol does have uses in body's nerve tissue

Dear Dr. Solomon: If cholesterol is so harmful to a person's health, why does nature provide it? I always thought there was a reason for everything that makes our bodies function properly. — Mr. F.J., San Francisco, Calif.

Dear Mr. J.: Cholesterol does serve a useful purpose. It is a part of nerve tissue and cell membranes, and is used by certain glands to make hormones. Cholesterol also aids in digestion since it is converted by the liver into bile acids.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Some foods carry labels that indicate they contain sorbitol or mannitol instead of sugar. Is it a good idea to use these foods as part of a reducing diet? — Hannah, Chapel Hill, N.C.

Dear Hannah: Both sorbitol and mannitol are sugar substitutes, but both contain calories. In addition, some people tend to develop diarrhea when they use even moderate amounts of either of these products.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am a high school student and I can stick to a diet fairly well except when I am out with my friends and they're eating potato chips and candy. Then I lose control of myself and of my diet. Is there anything I can snack on while they are having their goodies that will not cancel out all my dieting? — Jane, Columbia, S.C.

Dear Jane: How about trying unsalted, unbuttered popcorn? Three cups of plain popcorn contain about 70 calories. When you are at home, of course, raw vegetables can't be beat as a low-calorie, high-fiber snack.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I can understand it when you say that people who have a good diet generally don't have to take vitamins. But aren't there cases where an older person might have to take some? — Jennie, Jersey City, N.J.

Dear Jennie: Persons of any age may at times benefit from vitamin supplementation. My point is that vitamins should not be taken indiscriminately, but only for specific reasons and under medical supervision.

For example, psychiatrists at the University of North Carolina School of Medicine have reported on the effects of a vitamin B12 deficiency in a 47-year-old woman, certainly not a elderly person. She had been behaving in a bizarre fashion and had to be hospitalized. After tests revealed the deficiency, injections of the vitamin resulted in a disappearance of her symptoms.

This does not mean that vitamin B12 therapy is needed by, or would be of value to, all patients with psychiatric symptoms. Most normal diets supply adequate amounts of the vitamin. What the case does illustrate is that vitamin supplmentation that is targeted to meet specific problems can be extremely beneficial.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My father had high blood pressure, my brother has high blood pressure and I have high blood pressure; however, the similarity ends there. My brother's doctor prescribed medicine for what he called mild hypertension. My doctor also says I have mild hypertension but that I should just watch my diet. I have a simple question: Which doctor is right? — Mr. T.Y., Valparaiso, Ind.

Dear Mr. Y: Your question may be simple but the answer requires some elaboration. The fact is that physicians are not in complete agreement about the best approach to the treatment of mild hypertension. Some physicians recommend weight control and salt restriction and then prescribe medication if these initial efforts are not successful. Other physicians will not prescribe drugs for patients with diastolic blood pressures (the lower figure) below 100 unless they have a number of other risk factors for cardio-vascular disease. Since there is this difference of opinion, it would be an oversimplification to say that one is right and that the other is wrong.

If you have known your physician for an extended period of time and have confidence in him, I suggest you follow his advice. I have used both approaches with my own patients, but I have the advantage of knowing them personally and can tailor my treatment to their individual needs.

Dear Dr. Solomon: A sore throat isn't as serious a problem as most of those that people write to you about, but it can be a pain in the neck in more ways than one. What I would like to know is whether aspirin or acetaminophen would be better to soothe a sore throat, or whether neither one is any good. — Alex, Raleigh, N.C.

Dear Alex: According to Dr. Bernard P. Schachtel of the Richardson-Vicks Research Center in Shelton, Conn., aspirin and acetaminophen have been found to be equally effective in relieving sore throat pain.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Do autistic children have normal intelligence? I've heard different opinions about this, including statements that their I.Q.s are higher, lower and the same as those of other children. — Amy, N.Y.C.

Dear Amy: Most — but not all — autistic children have below-normal I.Q.s. However, many are particularly skilled in specialized areas, such as in music or mathematics.

For Mattie, Pittsburgh, Pa.: Social isolation does appear to have a detrimental effect on elderly people. Studies have shown that older individuals who maintain social and community contacts have a lower mortality risk than similarly situated people who do not.

I agree, however, that it might not be easy for an older person to reach out and touch someone. Some communities sponsor group meals for elderly people, and I suggest you look into this. The program not only provides nutritious meals but an opportunity for socialization as well.

Neil Solomon, M.D., is a columnist for the Los Angeles Times Syndicate. If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.

Quest renewed to lower minimum wage for teens

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, putting last year's congressional setback out of mind, is renewing its quest to lower the minimum wage for teen-agers taking summertime jobs.

Administration officials call the proposal the "Youth Employment Opportunity Wage," while the bill is derided by the AFL-CIO as a "sub-minimum wage" that would allow companies to exploit young workers while laying off older workers.

Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan was to announce introduction of the legislation in the House and Senate at a Capitol Hill news conference today.

The proposal, if enacted, would amend the Fair Labor Standards Act to permit employers to pay people between the ages of 16-21 at a rate of $2.50 an hour — 85 cents below the current legal $3.35-an-hour minimum — for jobs performed between May and September.

To address fears of those who argue a cut-rate young worker would replace adult workers, sponsors included penalties for employers who discharge adult workers, including a $10,000 fine, six months in jail and payment of back wages to the fired worker.

In an interview today, Donovan said the proposed legislation would contain safeguards against the displacement of older workers with youths working for the lower wage.

The secretary, appearing on the NBC-TV "Today" show, said that if such displacement should occur as a result of the youth differential, "there's a lot of teeth" in the proposed legislation to prevent any such abuse.

"The youth of today are being denied, as a result of the minimum wage, the opportunity you and I had when we were young ... to stand 10 feet tall, to get a first job," Donovan said.

Donovan, who has declared that "I'm going to fight for this because I think it's right," lined up supporters of the bill, along with the congressional sponsors, to appear with him at the session with reporters.

During an apperance Tuesday before the Agudatah Israel, an Orthodox Jewish group in New York, Donovan said joblessness among minorities is over 50 percent in many of the nation's urban areas, and called that "a national tragedy."

The secretary said at the time that "I won't go into the legislation, but it's called the youth opportunity wage, which we're sending up to the Hill ... to attack the problem."

Administration officials have maintained that enactment of the lower minimum wage rate could provide summertime jobs for some half-million out-of-school teen-agers.

Last year, the youth wage differential was contained in President Reagan's Employment Act of 1983, which included a host of other employment initiatives, but it got nowhere in Congress.

The administration lobbied hard for endorsement of the proposal by the National Conference of Black Mayors, and that organization came out in support of the legislation at its conference in St. Louis, Mo., last month.

AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland criticized the black mayors for endorsing the decision, telling reporters in Piney Point, Md., last week he believes the group was "sold a bill of goods."

Kirkland maintained that because the legal minimum wage has been frozen at the $3.35-an-hour rate since Jan. 1, 1981, people working for that rate have fallen far behind inflation and thus have, in effect, been drawing a sub-minimum wage.

Silicas are used to reinforce tires and rubber shoe soles, as dry carriers for liquid chemicals, and in paints and coatings.

Three indicted for fraud in fuel formula case

DALLAS (AP) — Three men — two of them from England — have been indicted for fraud in connection with a formula they say could allow water to replace petroleum as the world's predominant water source.

Ronald Albert Lasteed and Raymond Samuel, both of England, and Joseph Shea Peeples of Houston were named in a federal indictment returned Thursday, U.S. Attorney James A. Rolfe said.

Rolfe convinced a grand jury that Lasteed and his two associates may have told grandiose lies in an attempt to get Dallas oilman Al G. Hill Jr. — the nephew of billionaire Nelson Bunker Hunt — to invest $10 million in the formula, the Dallas Morning News said today.

According to court records, Hunt also was approached concerning investment in the formula.

Some people familiar with the case say they are convinced the formula works but are unsure whether the fuel it produces is as cheap as the nickel a gallon that the federal government alleges Lasteed has claimed, the newspaper said.

Rolfe said Tuesday that his case does not require a decision as to "whether it works or doesn't work." The indictment, he said, stems from "false representations" made by Lasteed during efforts to secure investors for fuel production.

The question could be answered in the Dallas courtroom of U.S. District Judge Jerry Buchmeyer in a criminal case that would pit Rolfe, the Hunt family, the FBI and science advisers to President Reagan against Lasteed, his two colleagues and a battery of attorneys headed by trial lawyer F. Lee Bailey.

The three are scheduled to be arraigned by Buchmeyer on June 1.

The three defendants were arrested in Hill's Dallas office and charged more than a year ago in a complaint filed through Rolfe's office by the FBI, the newspaper said.

Shortly after the indictment was returned in Dallas last week, FBI agents seized nearly a quart of liquid — believed to be a sample of Lasteed's fuel — from a dentist — an investor — in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., the Morning News said.

Prime rate hike to cost poor countries $1.25 billion more

WASHINGTON (AP) — Poor countries will owe at least $1.25 billion more to banks this year because of the rise in the U.S. prime rate last week from 12 to 12.5 percent, the World Bank estimates.

A.W. Clausen, the bank's president, has put the total foreign debt of such nations at $810 billion and many economists doubt it can ever be repaid.

A large portion of this debt pays interest at rates that rise and fall with the money market. When U.S. interest rates move higher, rates on many loans to poor countries do the same.

The new figure comes on the eve of a major conference in Paris where high U.S. interest rates are again expected to come in for heavy criticism. Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan will head the U.S. delegation to the two-day annual meeting of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, which opens on Thursday.

Its 24 members include West Germany, Japan, Britain and the other major industrial countries of the non-Communist world. Many of their leaders blame U.S. policies for high interest rates. They believe that the big federal deficit requires the U.S. government to borrow so much money that interest rates — the price of borrowed money — are forced up.

The meeting will be followed early next month in London by the annual economic summit of seven leading industrial countries, which President Reagan will attend.

The latest increase of interest rates has revived worry about the effects of poor country debt, especially after a warning from President Raul Alfonsin of Argentina that it endangers "social peace" in his nation. Argentina is spending 85 percent of all it earns from selling its goods just to pay interest on $44 billion in debts.

Big debts are often linked to shaky security situations.

Last month, there were 54 known dead in the Dominican Republic from rioting brought on by price increases.

Williams announces two gas completions

Clayton W. Williams Jr., independent Midland oilman, has announced the completion of a gas discovery in Hidalgo County and a gas discovery in Washington County. In addition, the operator reported completion of three wells in the Monte Christi field of Hidalgo County.

The Hidalgo County gas discovery is Williams No. 1 Chandler-Stroot. This well finaled for a calculated absolute open flow potential of 1,900,000 cubic feet of gas per day, from the Frio 16-A sand and to open a new pay in the Monte Christi, North multipay field. Completion was through perforations from 9,314 to 9,226 feet.

During the four-point test, the well delivered 1,550,000 cubic feet of gas and 4.56 barrels of condensate per day, through a 12/64 inch choke. Flowing tubing pressure was 1,920 pounds.

The Washington County discovery is Williams No. 1 David Wolff. This well was completed for a calculated absolute open flow potential of 10,920,000 cubic feet of gas per day from the Austin Chalk, through casing perforations at 11,886-12,050 feet.

During the four-point test, the well delivered 3,360,000 cubic feet of gas, plus 41 barrels of condensate per day through a 14/64 inch choke. Flowing tubing pressure was 3,760 pounds.

Williams has suggested that this well be designated the opener of the Clayton (Austin Chalk) field.

Williams has 5,000 acres under lease in the Wolff area.

The three development wells in the Monte Christi field are Williams No. 2, No. 3 and No. 4 Mary Johnson.

The highest potential on these three wells was recorded by No. 3 Mary Johnson. The well was completed from the Vicksburg KK zone for a calculated absolute open flow potential of 14,000,000 cubic feet of gas and 98 barrels of condensate per day.

Total depth is 15,803 feet, and completion was through perforations from 15,440 to 1,639 feet. This well was fractured with 820,000 pounds of Interprop.

No. 2 Mary Johnson was completed for a calculated absolute open flow potential of 2,950,000 cubic feet of gas, through perforations at 9,634-10,019 feet opposite the Vicksburg-Eckhart zone.

No. 4 Mary Johnson was finaled for a calculated absolute open flow potential of 3,300,000 cubic feet of gas, through casing perforations in the Frio (15,000 Zone). Total depth is 14,650 feet and plugged back depth is 8,847 feet.

During four-point testing, the well flowed 1,485,00 cubic feet of gas, 12 barrels of condensate and 197 barrels of water per day, through an 11/64 inch choke. Flowing tubing pressure was 3,360 pounds.

Fivefold expansion of 'superfund' program sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — Citing a new study predicting that the $1.6 billion "superfund" program to clean up hazardous waste will be hopelessly inadequate, congressional sponsors are pressing for a fivefold expansion of the program this year.

The study by the General Accounting Office, an investigative arm of Congress, says the cost of cleaning up polluted waste sites could fall anywhere between $5.3 billion and $26 billion.

The GAO estimates, released Tuesday, are even more far ranging than estimates offered earlier by the Environmental Protection Agency, which suggested the cost could range from $8.4 billion to $16 billion.

The GAO said the range reflects the lack of hard information on how much of a hazard is posed by the abandoned waste dumps. EPA also has argued that further study is needed before recommendations can be made on what to do with the "superfund" program.

But Rep. James J. Florio, D-N.J., chairman of the House Energy and Commerce subcommittee on commerce, said the estimates show clearly that the present $1.6 billion "superfund" program will never be able to accomplish its goals.

OIL & GAS DIGEST

Amoco to show increase separately

BALTIMORE — Due to a large increase in the Alabama gasoline inspection fee, Amoco Oil Co. will now show that fee as a separate item on bills to dealers.

Effective immediately, the Alabama gasoline inspection fee will be increased, from .00025 cents per gallon to two cents per gallon. Had the increase been in effect in 1983, it would have cost state motorists about $37 million.

"The inspection fee had previously been included in our dealer buying price since the amount was negligible," said R.D. McMullen, Amoco's regional vice president. "With an increase of this size, our dealers need to know exactly where this two cents per gallon increase is coming from," McMullen added.

Nugget Oil completes restructuring

MINNEAPOLIS — Nugget Oil Corp., Minneapolis-based oil and gas exploration and production company, has announced the completion of its debt restructuring with a subsidiary of The Greyhound Corp., and the terminitation of contract drilling activities.

Under the terms of the agreement Nugget returned its remaining rig to the secured lendor and issued $1.5 million of convertible promissory nots and $1.5 million of convertible subordinated debentures. This agreement cancels the prior 18.95 percent, $6.1 million secured loan in which the company was in default since October 1983. The settlement also cures cross-default provisions in the company's bank loan agreements.

"The settlement marks the end of the compay's contract drilling operations and the fiscal April 30, 1984 financial statement will show a loss of approximately $5.5 million primarily due to the non-cash accounting treatment frm the withdrawal of contract drilling operations. This agreement was necessary to remove a substantial financia burden from the company and alow it to concentrate on the oil and gas exploration and production business," said Stphen C. Heidecker, Nugget president.

Nugget Oil Corp. is traded on the national over-the-counter market. The company actively carries out oil and gas exploration, development and drilling activities in Texas, Colorado, Montana, Louisiana, Nebraska, Utah and Wyoming.

Firms ask for help to save wetlands

HOSTON — Twelve major corporations have called upon private industry to help stem the loss of the nation's swamps, marshes and other valuable wetland resources.

Dr. Casey Westell, citing ayear-long study conducted by the National Wildlife Federation's Corporate Conservation Council, termed the continuing loss of wetlands a "serious national problm" and urged government, corporations and private landowners to work to develop ways to conserve these "critical areas."

Westell is Tenneco Inc.'s director of industrial ecology and newly-named chairman of the 12-company council, created in 1982 to encourage dialogue between the federation and the business community on conservation issues.

"The loss of nearly half a million etland acres eac year is among the greatest threats toour wildlife heritage, and the trend must be reversed," said Jay D. Hair, executive vice president of the federation.

Hair said the council members are committeed to identifying opportunities in their corporate practices to avoid the unnecessary destruction of wetlands. They also will seek similar commitments from other corporations, he said.

Cold winter, improved economy to hike use of energy

DENVER — A colder than normal winter across America and the improved economy will reverse a four year decline in energy consumption, according to the Supply and Demend Committee of the Independent Petroleum Association of America (IPAA).

In a report released at the association's midyear meeting in Denver, the committee reports energy consumption should rise 3.5 percent this year over 1983.

The committee also forecasts an increase in oil demand, gasoline consumption and oil imports.

Oil demand this year is expected to increase 3.2 prcent on a BTU basis this year, reversing an unprecedented period of five consecutive annual decreases. "The stimulus from the economy and cold weather in the early part of 1984 will more than offset the effects on continuing conservation," the committee said.

The Supply and Demand Committee also expects natural gas consumption to increase 23.5 percent this year, ending a four year decline.

The committee forescasts a 612000 barrel per day increase in oil imports this year.

NAME DROPPING

Stockholders of Valero Energy Corp. have elected W. RICHARD BINGHAM, a managing director of the investment banking firm of Lehman Brothers Kuhn Loeb Inc., to the company's board of directors.

Bingham currently serves as managing director of Lehman Brothers Kuhn Loeb's San Francisco office. In addition to serving on the firm's board of directors, Bingham has served as director of corporate finance and director of mergers and acquisitions.

Bingham received a B.A. at Stanford University and a M.B.A. from Harvard School of Business. He served as a partner in the investment banking firm of Kuhn, Loeb & co. prior to its merger with Lehman Brothers. He also served as a director of Avis, Inc. and ITT Life Insurance Co. of New York and currently serves as director of Genway Corp.

The promotion of MICHAEL D. McCORD to vice president of lending in the Dallas office of Independence Mortgage, Inc. was made by President Charles P. Bell Jr. McCord, who previously had 10 years commercial banking experiencein the metroplex, joined the firm in May of 1983, and has been active in the development of the Dallas office portfolio of SBA guaranteed loans.

RAYMOND B. SHEPARD, who has more than 10 years experience in hotel sales and marketing, has been named director of marketing and sales for Wyndham hotel Greenspoint, under construction in the heart of the greater Greenspoint area, nine miles west of the Houston Intercontinental Airport.

The announcement of Shepard's appointment ws made by Peter F. Streit, president of Wyndham Hotels, which manage the hotel. Wyndham Hotels is a Crow Hotel Co. subsidiary which was formed in 1982 to manage select Crow-owned properties as well as hotels for other owners.

Prior to joining Wyndham Hotels, Shepard served for more than four years in several sales and marketing capacities with Adam's Mark Hotels, a division of the St. Louis, Missouri-based HBE Corp. He most recently was director of sales for the 604-room Adam's Mark Hotel in houston. He also has held various sales and marketing positions with Marriott Corp.

DANIEL L. CORNELISON, of Midland has received Time Insurance Company's Excellence Award in recognition of his outstanding life sales and quality customer service. He is one of only 113 Time agents to receive this performance award. The award was presented to Daniel L. Cornelison at the company's annual regional meeting in Lubbock.

VICTOR S. PESCE has joined Texas Gas Exploration Corp. as vice president of acquisitions and planning, and WILLIAM V. McHUGH has joined the company as assistant vice president of acquisitions and planning.

The new additions to the staff of the Houston-based subsidiary of Texas Gas Resources Corp. were announced by John F. Schwarz, president and chief executive officer of Texas Gas Exploration.

HANK MARTIN HUDSON of Midland has been approved for licensure as a professional engineer by the State Board of Registration for Professional Engineers.

Upon filing acopy of his official Texas engineer's seal with the board, Hudson will be licensed by the state. He was one of 141 individuals approved by the board for licensure.

John F. Brown, president of United Gas Pipe Line Co., the interstate natural gas transmission subsidiary of United Energy Resources, Inc., has announced election by the board of directors of a new board member and several new officers.

JAMES E. HAYNES, executive vice president was elected to the board of directors of United Gas. He is responsible for the company's marketing, rates, and transportation and exchange functions.

W. RALPH PEAL and R. JEFF SIMMONS, JR. were elected executive vice presidents replacing D. Lamar Smith, who has assumed additional corporate responsibilities with United Energy. In their new positions, Peal will be responsible for operations and engineering and Simmons will be responsible for gas supply, personnel, administration, and pipeline ventures. Both were formerly senior vice presidents of United Gas.

JAMES C. RICKER, formerly vice president of gas acquisition, was elected senior vice president — gas acquisition. JAMES R. TEMPLETON, senior vice president, who was previously responsible for gas acquisition, will now be responsible for gas imports and joint ventures.

FRANCIS S. KALMAN and ALVIN WHITE, JR. were elected vice presidents. Kalman will continue in his capacity as controller of United Gas and White, formerly director and general manager of personnel, will continue to be responsible for the personnel function.

MARTIN L. WEILAND has been named general manager of auditing for Standard Oil (Indiana).

Weiland started with Amoco Oil Co. in Chicago as a supervisor in general accounting in 1961. He has held several managerial assignments, including director of profit improvement for Amoco Oil and for Amoco Chemicals. In 1982, Weiland was named executive vice president for Amoco Container Co., headquartered in Atlanta, Ga. He returned to the Chicago general office in 1983 as controller for Amoco Chemicals, a position he held until his new assignment.

SHERMAN M. SIEGAL has joined the staff of Hrubetz Oil Co. in its Oklahoma regional office as exploration geologist. The announcement was made by Jim Savage, senior vice president-exploration.

Price of drilling for oil, gas down

DENVER — Costs of drilling oil and natural gas wells are down substantially according to a report prepared by the Cost Study Committee of the Independent Petroleum Association of America (IPAA).

The committee's "judgement index", which includes price/cost information from numerous sources, shows drilling costs are down by 32.5 percent for contractor payments and 19.3 percent for total purchased items. "Of particular interest," the committee says, "is that these indexes show that the average 1983 cost of drilling and equipping a well is back to the 1979 level."

The "judgement index" is compiled for the years 1981 through 1983.

The committee noted that in 1983, "the statistics finally caught up with what many believe were actual drilling cost changes in 1982. The Cost of Drilling Index compiled by this committee showed a decrease for the first time since 1953, when a decline of 0.1 percent was shown in the cost of drilling. The decrease registered in our Index for 1983, after adjusting for well distribution and depth was a large 17.9 percent, as compiled from the surveys and other data with methods used for many years."

The Cost Study Committee observed price declined in ten of 21 items surveyed, seven showed no change in cost, and four items increased. Payments to contractors dropped over 30 percent, drilling muds and additives declined by nearly 24 percent, and road and site preparations increased the most by 6.5 percent.

Resale activity of homes rises

AUSTIN — Home resale activity in Texas during the first quarter this year was 17.3 percent higher than in the same quarter last year, the Texas Association of Realtors (TAR) reports.

On a seasonally adjusted annual basis, home resales in Texas (including existing single-family homes, apartment condominium units and cooperative units) rose to 220.8 units during the first three months of 1984, compared with 188.2 units during the same three-month period in 1983.

Home resales in Texas achieved the following levels, on a seasonally adjusted annual basis,during the last three quarters of 1983: Second quarter, 198.2 units; third quarter, 198.7 units, and fourth quarter, 176.4 units.

Mid-America to drill 101 wells

Mid-America Petroleum, Inc. has announced its $35 million MAP 1984-85 100 percent Development Drilling Partnership offering has been declared effective by the Securities & Exchange Commission.

The company expects to form up to four limited partnerships this year to conduct exclusively development drilling of 101 wells on two West Texas oil fields and one North Central Oklahoma gas field.

Jesse G. Edwards, president of MAP, said the company intends to invest up to $3.5 million of its own capital in the same projects as its partnerships, representing the largest capital commitment to development drilling in the company's history.

Foster pets ready for adoption

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Seven perky puppies and nine cute kittens, the first two groups in the Midland Animal Control's foster parents of pets program, are ready to be adopted.

The black puppies, deposited along with their mother at the front gate of the shelter, have been fattened up, thanks to their mom and Sharron and Brad Blankenburg, two of many Midlanders who offered the litter and mother a home.

When the friendly family was deposited at the front gate of the shelter, animal control officers were faced with the difficult decision of putting the newborn puppies to sleep because they were too young to be separated from their mother. Facilities at the shelter can't accommodate a nursing mother and puppies.

The foster parents of pets program expanded soon after with the arrival of lots of little kittens. Two litters had their mothers with them while five kittens arrived without parental supervision.

Susan Lucas and her husband Paul took in the 13 calico, yellow and white, gray and tabby kittens, which the two mothers nursed. All but four are old enough to be adopted out now.

According to Rice Freeman-Zachery, Animal Control Public Informations officer, the puppies are available for adoption at the shelter. The kittens are still at the Lucas' home.

A $20 adoption fee, which can be deducted from the veterinarian's spay or neuter surgery fee, is required at the time of adoption. A contract also is signed, stating the adopting parents will have the animals spayed or neutered when they reach six months of age.

Also, Midland veterinarians will give any kitten or puppy adopted from the animal control shelter a free checkup with proof of adoption.

For more information about adopting the pets, or providing a foster home for young ones and their mothers in the future, contact the Animal Control Shelter at 683-2941 between 10 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. Mondays through Friday, and noon and 2 p.m. Saturdays.

'Wrong' man files lawsuit over arrest

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

One Joe Garcia somehow got mistaken for another Joe Garcia, was arrested, handcuffed and jailed under a 1982 Midland County theft indictment. He was outraged.

He was the "wrong" Garcia.

The "right" Garcia is still under indictment and apparently is unarrested.

Joe Monillas Garcia, the "wrong" one, has filed in federal district court in Lubbock a $100,000 lawsuit against Midland County, Lubbock County and the city of Lubbock. He claims he was illegally arrested and detained, was embarrassed, lost income, and incurred attorneys' fees by retaining lawyers in Lubbock, Midland and Big Spring to substantiate he was not the Joe Garcia named in the indictment.

After Joe M. Garcia, Lubbock, proved he was not the Joe Garcia, 41, Big Spring, who allegedly wrote a "hot check" for supplies at McCoy's Building Supply Center in Midland, he was discharged from the case by 142nd State District Court Judge Pat Baskin. Even prior to the discharge, Joe M. Garcia's Lubbock lawyer, Tom Sawyer, had thanked the judge for his "professional courtesy and cooperation" in trying to resolve the dispute.

In defense of Midland County, First Assistant County Attorney Mark H. Dettman said he would file "an appropriate answer denying any wrong-doing and denying any liability on the part of Midland County."

Jim Frazier, assistant district attorney who recommended to Baskin that Joe M. Garcia be discharged from the case, on Tuesday said the district attorney's investigation into the Garcia case "indicated that Joe (M.) Garcia who was arrested in Lubbock was not the Joe Garcia that we had indicted."

He said "the other Joe Garcia" is still under indictment.

"There were many similarities between the two besides their names," Frazier said. "Any mistake on the part of law enforcement officers was probably reasonable in view of the similarities between the two (Garcias)."

Frazier said he did not know exactly how or why Lubbock police got the warrant to arrest a supposed Big Spring man in Lubbock.

Midland Housing Authority hires new executive director

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

A retired naval officer who has specialized in allied health services has been hired as the new executive director for the Midland Housing Authority.

Donald Craig was approved by the Housing Board of Commissioners during a regular meeting Tuesday afternoon in City Hall Council Chambers. The move to hire him becomes effective immediately.

Craig will replace L. Roy Prescott, who was hired in October 1983. Prescott had turned in his resignation at the March meeting, citing health reasons. He will stay through the end of May.

A native Texan, Craig received his bachelor's degree from the University of Houston and a master's degree from University of San Diego. He retired from the U.S. Navy as a captain after 20 years service.

He recently worked as director of a health occupation school with a staff of 50. Craig also has represented a government agency in the construction of a new school building.

The city has been approved to construct a housing project for low income elderly and handicapped persons across the street from Hillcrest Manor, a similar facility operated by the Housing Authority.

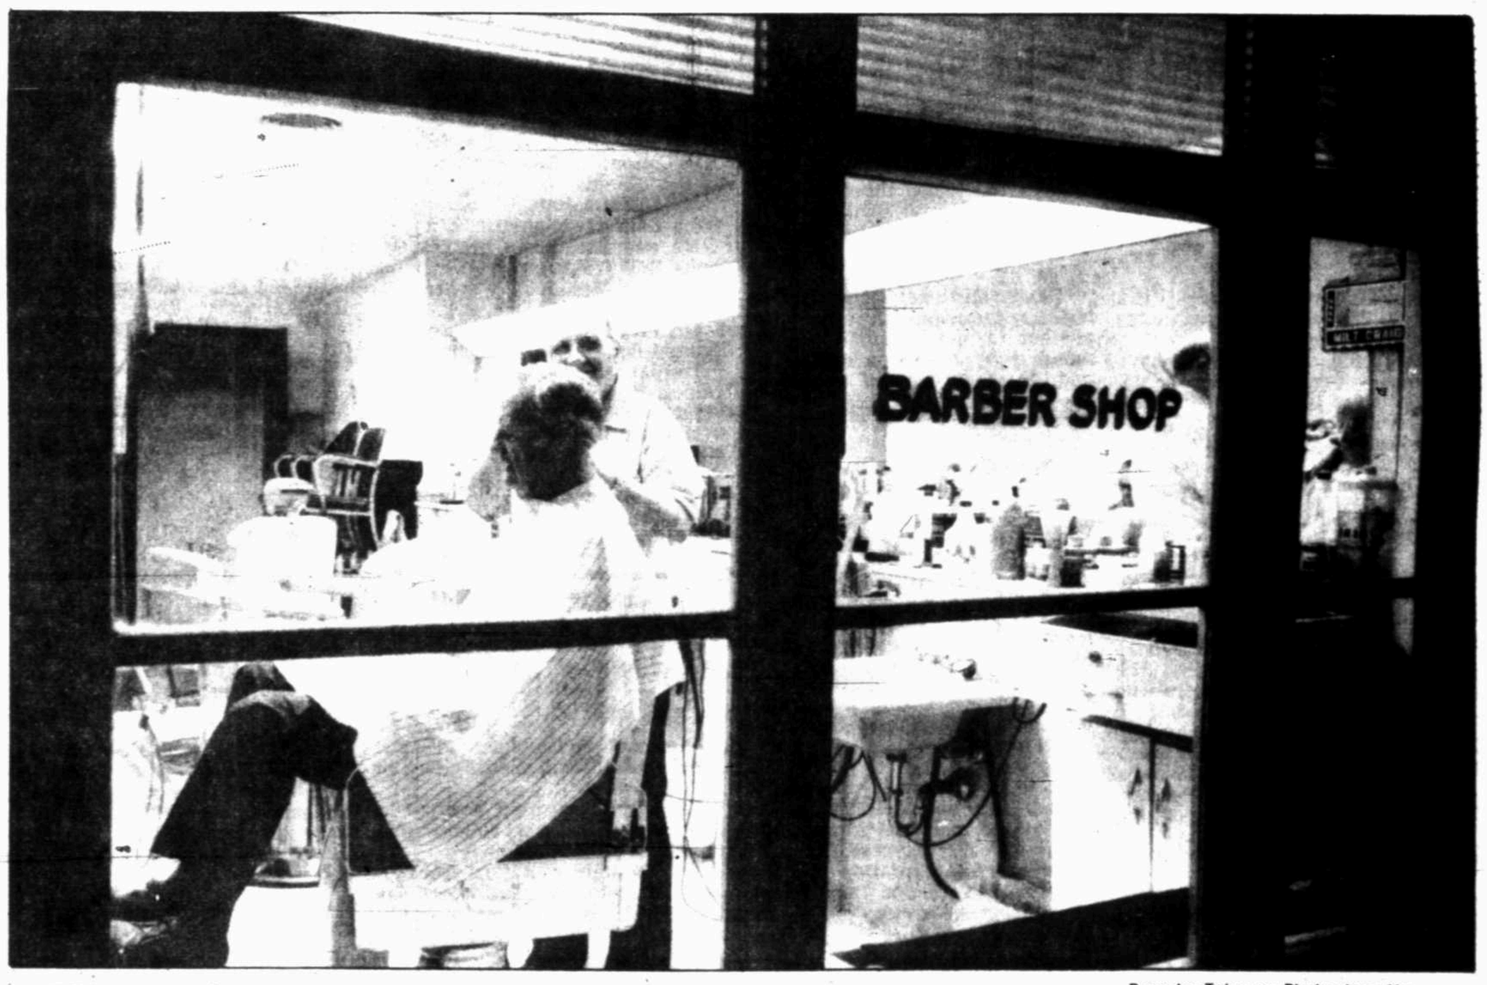

Money for the apartment building was approved by the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

It is Hillcrest Manor with its 100 senior citizens which Craig will be directing.

The board thanked Prescott for his service and the resigning executive director said, "That bunch of people (at Hillcrest Manor). They're wonderful. I'll miss the association with them."

In other action, the board heard a report from Horace Berry on the housing rehabilitation program in which 18 houses have been repaired at a cost of $86,858.66, or $4,825.48 per house. Berry, rehabilitation inspector, said about three more houses can be repaired with the money left from the $100,000 that had been allotted to the program.

Chairman Gene Abbott asked why the average cost per house was dropping and Berry replied that there wasn't much other work for contractors in Midland. "They really bid to get these jobs. I hate to see them go so cheap; they're just getting wages out of it."

Getting a trim

Most people are slow to get started in the morning, but R.M. Carroll is not one to let the grass grow under his feet or the hair grow over his ears. Instead of lingering over a cup of coffee, Carroll, of 3313 Bauman, began his day recently with a brisk early morning haircut at barber Milton Craig's shop in the Western United Life Building.

Old Odessa school still has a chance

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A last-minute change to the recommendation to entertain bids for demolition of the original Odessa High School Tuesday night left open options other than complete destruction.

Had the school board followed the recommendation of the Ector County Independent School District staff, the wrecking ball would have been a virtual certainty for the 56-year-old building. But board member Mickey Jones offered an amendment to a motion to demolish the entire building which carried a majority vote.

Instead, bids will be solicited for demolition of all and part of the building, leaving some hope for those working to save the old school.

Catherine Halford of the Ector County Historical Commission called for preservation of the original building, which has been added on to several times since its construction in 1928.

"There is not any other building in Odessa that in any way symbolizes that early change from a little ranch town to a city that was going to last," said Ms. Halford after the meeting.

Supporting demolition of the additions to provide for playground space for the elementary school adjacent to the old school, she suggested the dual-bid idea which the board passed.

Ms. Halford — representing the historical commission — called the building which has housed college, high school, junior high and elementary students "probably the most valuable piece of historical property in West Texas."

A task force which included Ms. Halford studied possible options for the building for which the district felt it had no use. The final recommendation of the task force was to preserve the building until June 1 to give the public time to raise the money needed to renovate the building.

But Ms. Halford suggested several members of the task force never considered anything other than destruction for the building. "I think it was approached from a negative viewpoint from the very beginning," she said.

"If there had not been public pressure, the building would have been torn down," said Ms. Halford. And it may still be, depending on the bids offered on the demolition.

"There wasn't any leadership for a public movement," she said. The ECISD has been embroiled in the court action stemming from the desegregation suit and making $2.2 million in budget cutbacks forced by the rollback over the past year.

While Tuesday night's decision does not mean the building will be saved, Ms. Halford said she thought the bids would "show that we can keep that original part as cheaply as we can get rid of it."

The school district has indicated no interest in spending money to renovate the building. Construction of a new administration building is under way and plans for renovations of the present adminstration offices after this building has been completed were discussed Tuesday night.

MC board names health sciences chairperson

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

Midland College trustees Tuesday named Dr. Eileen Piwetz interim chairperson of health sciences and interim director of associate degree nursing.

The chair is a newly created position created by the board at its last meeting. The health sciences division, to be housed in the new health science building, consolidates programs in vocational nursing, fire protection technology, respiratory therapy, radiology technology and child care and development.

Former ADN director Celia Harris asked to be made a fulltime instructor. Beginning July 1, Ms. Piwetz will hold both positions for a year.

Ms. Piwetz has been a nursing instructor at MC since 1981, when the ADN program began. She received RN training at Hermann Hospital School of Professional Nursing, earned a bachelor's degree from Texas Woman's University and a master's degree from The University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

She taught in nursing programs at Tyler Junior College and Odessa College and had hospital nursing experience at Wharton, College Station, Gainesville, Kilgore, Houston and Andrews.

The programs to be included in the health sciences division had previously been administered by other divisions. Radiology technology will begin in September of 1985 with completion of the new building. At the same time child care and development will be expanded to include a model on-campus day care center.

In other action, the board voted to hire Main Hurdman to conduct the annual audit for the 12th year. Trustees discussed bidding the job of auditing MC's $11 million budget. Law does not require bidding for selection of an auditing firm.

"Frankly, we have been getting a bargain," said Bob Phillips, vice president of finance. "Main Hurdman has been more or less writing off part of the cost of our audit as a community service."

MC last year paid $16,000 for the audit, compared to Odessa College's cost of $40,000, Phillips said.

Local talent provides 'delightful evening'

By GEORGIA TEMPLE

Georgia Temple

With a program which ranged from barbershop quartet singing to breakdancing, Monday's "Encore '84" provided a showcase for Midland talent. A festive mood prevailed at the Yucca Theatre as 11 local acts showed the three-fourths full house the abundance of talent available in Midland.

The show started with Harmony, Barbershoppers from the Permian Basin Chapter of the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quartet Singing in America, Inc., and closed with the darling duo. (Not the daring duo of Batman notoriety, but the darling duo of Midland Community Theatre renown, Daphne Pemberton and Louis Kluck.)

Other acts included David LeMaster, performing a selection from Hal Holbrook's "A Night with Mark Twain;" Ron Franklin, classical guitar; Ethel Barnes with Norma Short and Aretha Roberts, singers; Steve Hagegeorge, David Nail and Felix Dozier, The Roc rock music players from Midland High School; Trudie Thomason, narrating a selection of classic vintage film from the Summer Mummers; Charles Bridges, Jason Fuller, Michael Gatewood, Albert Ray, Harold Stewart and Terry Stewart, breakdancers; and Stagnasia, a special witch who came out of retirement just for the event.

The musical variety show was strung together by comments from emcees J.J. Baskin and Bill Pomeroy. Both did a charming job of keeping the show moving at a fast pace.

It was a delightful evening. However, it would have been even better had it not been so cold. I had forgotton since last summer's Summer Mummers just how strong the air conditioning system is at the Yucca Theatre. It was so cold Monday that sitting in the balcony felt like standing in an ice locker doorway. I hope I don't forget again. It may have been just right downstairs Monday night for the 2½ hour variety show, but I also remember freezing sitting downstairs during the Mummers last summer.

The adverse weather conditions did not take away from the wealth of talent onstage. All were good. Out of the talent presented there were two outstanding performances.

One was Ethel Barnes. The other act was the breakdancers. Mrs. Barnes has a powerful, lusty voice. And the breakdancers? Well, they almost spun themselves into a low flight over Midland.

"Encore '84" was put together in a very short period of time to provide an evening's entertainment during Midland's first annual Celebration of the Arts. The production crew that helped make this charming evening possible included many Midlanders who worked to make last summer's "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas" as successful as it was.

The Celebration of the Arts closes with a full calendar of Midland artists performing and demonstrating their abilities at Midland Center Saturday.

Panel: More data needed to choose waste site

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A $23,550 study by the Texas Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations has determined information is lacking on the process under way in Texas to choose a site for low-level radioactive waste disposal.

The state agency began the study in late January, which consisted of interviews with county and local officials in areas where sites are being considered. Jim Reed, a research analyst with the commission who authored the report, noted the study had "increased the level of understanding, but didn't decrease the opposition."

Among the recommendations in the study were that the Low-Level Radioactive Waste Disposal Authority — created by the state to coordinate the site selection process — hire a public information specialist, install a telephone information line and publish newsletters.

But LLRWDA General Manager Rick Jacobi said legislators would need to appropriate more funding to the authority before any of the recommended steps could be taken.

In the interim, an Austin public affairs consultant has been hired to design information brochures on the site selection project. Federal legislators passed the Low-Level Radioactive Waste Policy Act in 1980, which gives states until Jan. 1, 1986 to find a place to put their low-level wastes.

Jacobi said meetings will be planned with local officials in the areas being studied as possible sites, rather than larger town hall meetings, which he felt drew too many citizens opposed to the project.

With the mid-April decision by the Board of Regents of the University of Texas not to make available two state-owned sites in Hudspeth County, the authority is faced with finding two candidate sites from which the final location can be chosen. The state law creating the authority and defining its purpose mandates that two sites be identified.

An option was renewed on a privately owned plot in Dimmit County. Still under consideration are sites in Borden County in North Central Texas and McMullen County in the southern part of the state, and state-owned land in Brewster County.

Keystone Workshops are being organized by the Sierra Club to inform the public on hazardous waste management and the group's aim of getting the public involved early in the site selection process.

One is scheduled for the Midland/Odessa area on Sept. 8 at the Airport Executel.

Printed by the Texas Departments of Health and Water Resources, the Keystone Siting Process Handbook outlines a different process from the one set up by state law. This process calls for a committee to meet outside the established regulatory framework with the developer of the site before the necessary permits have been granted to settle local concerns and resolve issues.

Currently, sites in Barnwell, S.C.; Beatty, Nev.; and Richland, Wash. dispose of the 3 million cubic feet of low-level radwastes produced annually by the entire country. The Nuclear Regulatory Commission projects this to grow to 4.3 million cubic feet by 1985, with most of the increase attributed to nuclear power plants.

Texas is expected to produce 105,000 cubic feet of the 1985 total, with 75 percent projected to come from nuclear power plants which have yet to begin operations.

A tentative deadline for site selection has been set for late August. Other deadlines set in the process have been set back as opposition has grown to the placement of such a disposal site in the state.

Event will raise funds for home for black foster children

From Staff Reports

A musical event to help raise $5,000 needed for a foster home in which to place black foster children is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Saturday at the Washington Center YMCA, 1600 E. Wall.

Of the 64 foster children in Midland in 1983, 20 were black. But only three were placed in black foster homes.

Freewill Foster Home, Inc., a nine-member citizen group dedicated to changing those statistics, has located a house that could be used as a foster home for Midland's black foster children.

The group would buy the house and aid in the upkeep of it as an extra incentive for someone to foster the children. The Texas Department of Human Resources would place up to six foster children in the home. The DHR also will take applications and study anyone interested in being foster parents.

A gospel and contemporary music fund raiser, including Mayor Thane Akins and his barber shop quartet, will be open to the public with no admission charge. Donations will be accepted.

"The theme of this project is feeling good because getting a chance to help foster children is truly an opportunity to love," said Ernestine Hunt, who is in charge of the fund raiser.

Other performers will include Eddie Pleasant, Texas Tech University music student; Sue Roseberry, gifted singer from Faith Temple C.O.G.I.C.; Jane Dabenport, composer and teacher of singing at Trinity School and to private students; the United Spiritual Singers, a recorded group of eight young people who have been together for 10 years; the Light of Praise, a branch of the United Spiritual Singers; Diane Thomas, a former singer with the United Spirtual Singers; and the Pertile Family, a group originally from the Ideal Baptist Church Choir.

Man sues for being arrested because of mistaken identity

"Without knowing more," he said, "I would assume that Lubbock received its information through the usual channels."

Court records indicate Joe M. Garcia of Lubbock was awaken by Lubbock police officers at his Lubbock home shortly after midnight on Aug. 30, 1983, and was arrested, handcuffed and booked into Lubbock County Jail over "repeated protests, denials and attempted explanations."

The "wrong" Garcia said he told arresting officers he had never been in Midland. Further, Joe M. Garcia said he was "forced" to make the 250-mile Lubbock-Big Spring round-trip to prove he was not the other Joe Garcia.

In Big Spring, he said Howard County sheriff's officers "immediately and definitely" determined that he was not the Joe Garcia under indictment. Howard County sheriff's officers were familiar with the other Joe Garcia "because of numerous prior offenses for insufficient checks," according to the court petition.

In seeking $100,000 in damages, Joe M. Garcia is citing the "outrageous conduct and conscious indifference toward his rights" by Midland County, Lubbock County and the city of Lubbock; humiliation over the arrest and the violation of his constitutional rights.

In a similar mistaken-identify case last year, Midland County commissioners agreed to pay a Ricky Ramirez of Odessa $1,475 for the legal fees he incurred and for his loss of income but nothing for his "embarrassment" over the wrongful arrest. His attorney had sought $2,000 in compensation.

The "other" Ricky Ramirez was indicted for aggravated assault by use of a handgun on his brother.

"It's a very rare thing," District Attorney Vern Martin had said of mistaken-identity arrests. "It's happened before when the son did something, and they arrested the father. That's usually the case."

Hightower wants government aid

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower called on the Reagan Administration Monday to give immediate attention to the critical drought affecting most of the state, including Midland County.

According to Hightower, the county is "critically dry," with most of the crops ruined.

"The spring rains obviously have not come — a fact that's clearly evident to every farmer, rancher and backyard gardener in the state," Hightower said in a prepared statement. "In those areas of West Texas that have not received adequate rainfall in four consecutive years now, foundation herds of cattle, sheep and goats are being sold off and ranchers are calling it quits."

Hightower urged the fedeal government to use "everything in its bag of tricks" to assist hard-pressed farmers and ranchers.

"First, additional steps must be taken by the federal government to protect farmers from longterm, senseless wind erosion losses," he said. "Already drought conditions have caused a three-fold increase in wind erosion losses over last year, with over 1.1 million acres of Texas topsoil severely damaged in the first five months of this year."

Auto burglaries result in loss of items worth $11,000

Police Round-up

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — More than $11,000 in cash and merchandise was taken in three auto burglaries reported Tuesday to Odessa police which occurred in the same northeast neighborhoods.

Guns, a radar detector and a camera were taken from a van parked in the driveway of a residence in the 3000 block of Laurel. Two trap and skeet shooting guns — a $3,700 12-gauge, single-shot Ljutic shotgun and a $3,000 12-gauge, over-under Perazzi shotgun — a $500 Whistler radar detector and a $500 Hanimex camera with accessories were taken from the van after the burglars reportedly gained entrance by breaking the hinge on one of the vent windows and opening a door.

During the same period — 10:30 a.m., April 14 to 8 a.m., April 15 — $1,200 in watches, rings, cash and credit cards was taken from a car parked at a residence in the 3100 block of Bonham. Among the things reported missing by the car owner were seven credit cards, $300, a gold watch and two gold rings with diamond settings.

Sometime between 6 p.m., April 14 and 10 a.m., April 15, a third vehicle was reported burglarized in the 3000 block of Century. The victim reported $2,550 in merchandise — including another Whistler radar detector, a .38-caliber revolver and a $1,850 Longhorn Anniversary model saddle was taken from his vehicle while it was parked in his driveway.

Also possibly related is a burglary of a home in the 2700 block of Walnut that occurred between 6:30 a.m. and 8:15 p.m., May 15. Reported missing in this burglary was a Kenwood amplifier and receiver valued at $950, a $165 Yamaha turntable and 400 record albums valued at $2,500.

Disc-catching dogs can compete

The Gaines Ashley Whippet Invitational for disc-catching dogs will be held at 6 p.m. June 6 in Hill Park.

Sponsored by the Midland Parks and Recreation Department, the contest is open to all owners who have trained their dogs to catch a Frisbee. "This is a great opportunity for families and present and potential dog owners to witness some of the fun of dog ownership," according to the news release.

A team of officials will judge the contestants on their catching and leaping ability, poise and grace. Winner will receive an official Gaines Ashley Whippet T-shirt and trophy. Each contestant will be given a specially minted Gaines Ashley Whippet Frisbee and an award of commendation.

The contest is named for Ashley Whippet, the three-time world champion canine athlete, television and film star.

There is no entry fee. The event is open to any dog that can catch a Frisbee. It is not necessary for the dog to have competed previously or to have a qualifying score.

For more information call the Parks and Recreation Department, 683-4281, extension 316.

"Either now or in the near future, there will be programs put somewhere that could just as appropriately be put in this building and we feel they should be," she said.

She discounted the suggestions the building would need extensive renovation to ensure the safety of those inside, pointing out that students awaiting completion of Murry Fly Elementary were housed in the building two years ago.

"If it had been dangerous, they would never have let those kids in it," she said, suggesting the additional time and definition of the cost to renovate the original sections may encourage public donations.

Costs to renovate the building provided in the task force report varied from $1.2 million-$3.5 million, depending on the intended use. Bids for demolition offered in July 1983 varied from $111,000-$125,000 for the entire structure and from $104,000-$171,000 for the partial structure.

The report projected demolition costs at $60,000-$65,000 and the cost to leave it as it is at $40,000. The land is valued at $250,000-$300,000.

Lions Club to hold Taco Fiesta

The East Side Lions Club will be holding its 10th annual Taco Fiesta Saturday at the Dellwood Mall.

A $2.50 donation ($3 at the door) is good for three tacos and a beverage, and all proceeds will go to help needy families, the sightless and crippled children, said S.B. Lara, chairman of the East Side Lions.

"Taco Fiesta in the past has been used to help a lot of people, and we're looking forward to helping some more people with this year's fiesta," Lara said. "We urge everyone in Midland to come by and have a taco with us and help us help people."

The fiesta will be from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. The Lions are also accepting donations from businesses; for more information, call Lara at 684-9389.

Burial will be in Oak Lawn Cemetery under the direction of the Robertson, Mueller & Harper Funeral Home.

Hackney died Tuesday at Carswell Air Force Base after a lengthy illness. He lived in Fort Worth since his retirement from the Air Force in 1970.

Other survivors include his wife and two daughters.

Izabel Irons

Izabel Irons died Tuesday evening at her home.

Services are pending at Ellis Funeral Home.

Judge sequesters jury in Odessa murder trial

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — District Judge Joe Connally has sequestered the jury selected for the trial of Johnny Foote, which is set to begin Wednesday in the 244th District Court.

Foote, 22, is charged with the murder of Velma Nesset, a 65-year-old cleaning lady at Permian Mall where the defendant also worked. Ms. Nesset's mutilated body was found under a culvert near the mall April 19, 1983 by a security officer for the mall.

Connally decided to sequester the jury to protect them from publicity surrounding the trial, which Prosecutor David Rosado estimated might take 10 days.

John Hoestenbach, one of Foote's court-appointed attorneys, told the jury panel Tuesday the evidence presented at the trial would develop like a detective novel for the 12 jurors picked.

Police obtained a statement in October 1983 from Foote that he had committed the crime, but Hoestenbach told the panel from which the jury was selected that Foote is mentally disabled and that "questionable tactics" may have been used to get the confession.

The defense attorney said he plans to bring two witnesses that will testify Foote was with them when the murder is alleged to have occurred, at 4:30-5 a.m.

Although there were indications Ms. Nesset had been also been sexually assaulted, the state has not charged Foote with rape. The victim was stabbed to death.

Hoestenbach also said he plans to bring a witness to testify to seeing another man walking toward the scene of the attack at 4:30 a.m.

City employee charged with marijuana possession

From Staff Reports

A city employee has been released on bond after being charged with felony possession of marijuana.

Ecipio Jesse Lucero, a 20-year-old equipment operator for the city's sewer and water department, was released from the county jail after posting $10,000 bond set by Justice of the Peace Charlie Sprayberry.

Lucero, of 4201 Andrews Highway, was arrested Friday at his residence after sheriff's deputies received a Crime Stoppers tip. Deputies said they confiscated more than six pounds of grass worth about $5,000.

Carrier torpedoed

The British aircraft carrier Ark Royal was torpedoed and sunk Nov. 13, 1941, during World War II.

White, teachers, student lobby before joint education committees

AUSTIN (AP) — Lawmakers preparing for a special session on education have had their first public look at the lobbying barrage they face — from a governor who wants higher taxes to a vocational student complaining about "Academic Albert."

Gov. Mark White and Carey Andrews of Madisonville were among the witnesses Tuesday as the House and Senate education committees opened a two-day joint hearing.

White is luring support for his education reform package that carries a price tag requiring a three-year, $4.8 billion tax hike. He told the legislators they can reserve a place in history by backing his plan.

The governor plans a special legislative session — perhaps starting June 4 — to look at education reform.

"The coming weeks will be long and hard, but I am confident that, working together, we can develop the very finest education system in the 50 states," he said.

The Select Committee on Public Education, chaired by H. Ross Perot, has produced a reform package that translated into more than 175 pages of legislation.

Andrews was Tuesday's final witness. Reacting to Perot's pointed criticism of vocational education programs, the high school senior said such programs produce "a well-rounded education." Andrews said his education includes running a cash register at a food store.

He asked the lawmakers if they preferred the future leaders to be "Academic Albert" whose education included "a casual glance at the outside world" and is nothing more than an "inexperienced book worm."

Teachers, some representing themselves and some representing organizations, brought their concerns to the committees. Money was among the top issues.

Betty Powledge, a teacher in Trinity, said she has been in he classroom for 19 years, but earned only $20,749 last year.

"I have the title 'professional teacher.' But I'm not paid that way," she said.

Sue McGarvey of Hallsville, representing the 40,000-member Association of Texas Professional Educators, called for a "career ladder" that would reward outstanding teachers.

"In the past the only way up has been out," she said.

Curtis Hill of Garland, president of the Texas Association of School Boards, called for a "significant increase" in teacher pay, and cautioned that increased funding for poor school districts should be coupled with aggressive tax collections in those districts.

Some poor districts "unquestionably" use state "equalization" money "to keep local taxes artificially low," he said.

Hill said he has had to vote for higher taxes 11 of his 12 years on the Garland school board.

"Many of you have never voted on a tax increase measure. It's difficult," he said.

Judge may stop monitoring desegregation

HOUSTON (AP) — City schools plan to depart from strict hiring guidelines which required replacing teachers leaving the system with people of the same race, officials say.

The change is one of several school officials plan to implement if U.S. District Judge Robert O'Conor releases the district from court-ordered monitoring of desegregation next month, administrators said Tuesday.

Felix Cook, deputy superintendent for personnel, said all the recommendations are preliminary but probably will not be greatly altered.

School district Trustee Elizabeth Spates said she worried about planned changes in the Singleton rule, which requires staff at each school to reflect the racial makeup of the entire district.

"(I have) a concern that the Singleton ratio, which has just begun to reflect favorable numbers of black teachers in inner-city schools, will be thrown out if the judge takes the district from under the court order," Mrs. Spates said last week.

Plans call for a committee of teachers and administrators to review teacher assignments that would violate the ratio, officials said.

Midland will host state LULAC convention in 1987

From Staff Reports

Midland will be the site of the Texas LULAC Convention in 1987, bringing in an expected 1,200 to 1,500 persons, according to Edia Hernandez with the local organization.

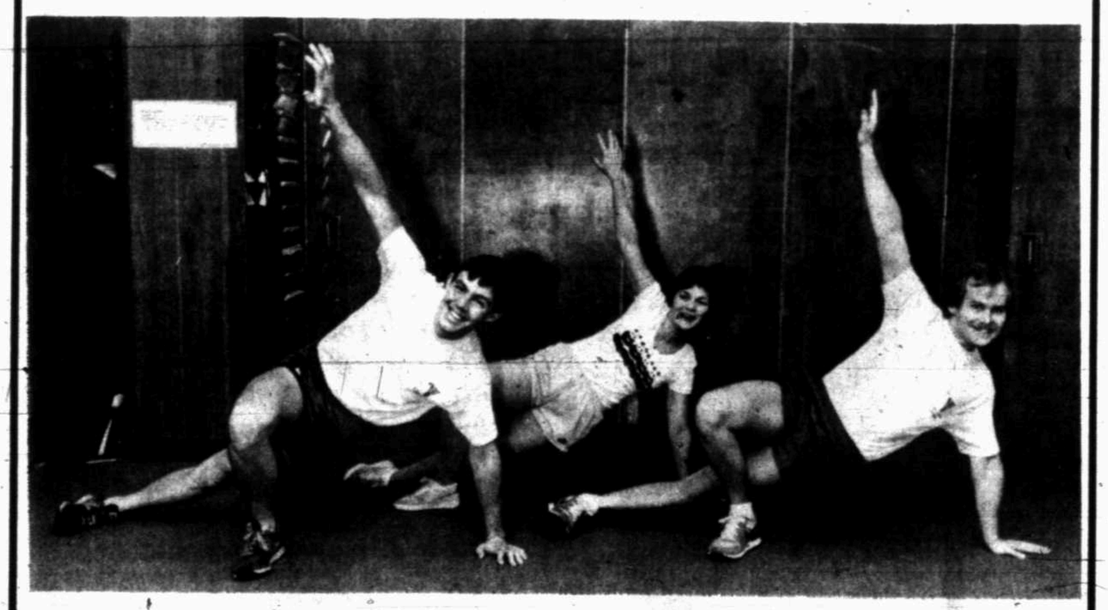

She and 11 other Midlanders attended the state convention in Lubbock last weekend and made the bid for the convention.

The Midland Hilton and Midland Center will be headquarters for the convention, which will be in mid-May.

"It will take us that long to get it together," she said.

Midland is included in District 5, the largest geographical region for LULAC in Texas, stretching from Brady to Abilene, Bandera, Andrews, Coleman and Pecos.

Grocery prices drop a slim 0.1 percent matching March decline

By COTTEN TIMBERLAKE
AP Business Writer

Grocery prices edged down one-tenth of 1 percent in April, matching the March decline, according to an Associated Press marketbasket survey.

Prices for pork chops and milk fell. Eggs were more expensive.

"Obviously, its good for the consumer because it means you're paying less — even if it's not very much less," Donald Ratajczak, an economist at Georgia State University in Atlanta, said Tuesday.

"Unfortunately, this is not the beginning of a downward trend. This is the result of unusual circumstances," he added.

The marketbasket bill decreased in nine cities, falling an average 2.7 percent, if New York is not included. Counting New York, where a new checklist store in a less expensive neighborhood was used for the most recent survey, the average decline in the nine cities was 4.7 percent.

The tab rose in three cities — Chicago, Philadelphia and Salt Lake City — with an average increase of 7.4 percent. Salt Lake City had the biggest jump, 19.33 percent, primarily because of a big boost in the price of sugar there.

IF NEW YORK, which had the biggest decline, 21.12 percent, is taken into account, the overall marketbasket bill was 1.7 percent lower than in March.

Atlanta had the second largest decline, 4.96 percent.

A look at the overall number of items in the AP survey showed more increases during April than during March. Here are the percentages of increases and decreases:

	March	April
Up	26.4	27.5
Down	34.6	33.0
Unchanged	35.2	34.0
Unavailable	3.8	5.5

From January through April, grocery prices rose 2.5 percent, not including New York, and 1.3 percent if that city is included. Seven cities had increases, at an average pace of 5.3 percent. The six that declined did so at an average rate of 1.4 percent, without New York. Including New York, the decline was 3.5 percent.

February saw the largest increase in more than three years. The 2.1 percent average surge was blamed on bad weather.

IN THE LATEST month, pork prices declined because farmers, who could not work their fields on account of wet weather, instead slaughtered an unusually large numbers of livestock, Ratajczak said. In addition, a late Easter pressured meat prices: many consumers turn to fish and chicken during Lent.

"Unfortunately, neither of those (factors) are expected to persist," he said.

He attributed the decline in milk prices, as sharp as 25.3 percent in Atlanta, to discounting by supermarkets to attract business.

The economist said the increase in egg prices stemmed from the avian flu's reducing flocks significantly.

He added, however, "That is rapidly being corrected. It only takes eight weeks for flock numbers to change." Flocks will be 10 percent larger in June than they are now, which will put downward pressure on egg prices, he said.

The Associated Press drew up a random list of 15 commonly purchased food and non-food items, checked the price at one supermarket in each of 13 cities on March 1, 1973, and has rechecked on or about the start of each succeeding month.

ONE ITEM, chocolate chip cookies, was dropped from the list because the manufacturer discontinued the package size used in the survey.

No attempt was made to weight the AP survey results according to population density or in terms of what percentage of a family's actual grocery outlay each item represents.

The day of the week on which the check was made varied depending on the month. Standard brands and sizes were used when available. If the requested size and brand was not available on March 1, 1973, a comparable substitute was selected. Items temporarily out of stock on one of the survey dates being compared were not included in the overall total.

The AP did not try to compare actual prices from city to city — to say, for example, that eggs cost more in one area than another. The only comparisons were made in terms of percentages of increase or decrease — saying a particular item went up 10 percent in one city and 6 percent in another.

The USDA marketbasket issued each month is based on a complex set of statistics. It is used to keep track of changes in the proportion of the food dollar received by the farmer, wholesaler and retailer and does not correspond to actual family spending.

THE ITEMS on the AP checklist were: chopped chuck, center cut pork chops, frozen orange juice concentrate, coffee, paper towels, butter, Grade-A medium white eggs, creamy peanut butter, laundry detergent, fabric softener, tomato sauce, milk, frankfurters and granulated sugar.

The cities checked were: Albuquerque, N.M., Atlanta, Boston, Chicago, Dallas, Detroit, Los Angeles, Miami, New York, Philadelphia, Providence, R.I., Salt Lake City and Seattle.

Here is a city-by-city breakdown of what happened during April:

ALBUQUERQUE: Marketbasket prices edged down 0.23 percent to $21.47 from $21.52, with pork chops, eggs, and peanut butter declining. Detergent and orange juice climbed and the other nine items remained the same.

ATLANTA: The bill dropped 4.96 percent to $20.67 from $21.75 with chopped chuck, pork chops, paper towels, butter, milk, and franks cheaper. The items that rose in price were: coffee, eggs, and tomato sauce. The other five items were unchanged.

BOSTON: The tab dipped 0.72 percent from $20.76 to $20.61 with fabric softener, detergent, milk and sugar prices going down. Rising were butter and eggs, with the remaining eight items unchanged.

CHICAGO: Marketbasket prices rose 1.6 percent to $17.13 from $16.86, not including coffee, which was not available in March. Chopped chuck, paper towels, and eggs rose. The 10 remaining items were unchanged.

DALLAS: The bill fell 3.8 percent from $21.73 to $20.90. Butter, detergent and tomato sauce rose but chopped chuck, pork chops, coffee and franks fell. Eggs also rose — but on special, fell. The six other items were unchanged.

DETROIT: The tab fell 3.9 percent to $15.77 from $16.41, with five items were not available either in April or March. Coffee rose and pork chops, eggs, milk, franks and sugar fell. Chopped chuck, butter and detergent were unchanged.

LOS ANGELES: The total was unchanged at $19.03. The following items rose: chopped chuck, coffee, paper towels, butter, peanut butter, fabric softener, detergent, tomato sauce and franks. These fell: pork chops, orange juice, eggs and sugar. Milk was unchanged.

MIAMI: Marketbasket prices fell 1.18 percent to $20.06 from $20.30, with chopped chuck, pork chops, and sugar declining. Increasing were coffee, butter, eggs, and fabric softener. The other seven items were unchanged.

NEW YORK: The total plummeted 21.12 percent from $30.12 to $23.76, but the checklist store was changed to one in a less expensive neighborhood. All items fell.

PHILADELPHIA: The bill rose 1.33 percent to $19.06 from $18.81, not including orange juice and fabric softener, which weren't available in March. Coffee, eggs, and tomato sauce rose. The nine other items were unchanged.

PROVIDENCE, R.I.: The tab fell 4.76 percent to $18.80 from $19.74 with chopped chuck, pork chops, orange juice, butter and milk declining. The following rose: paper towels, eggs, peanut butter, fabric softener, detergent, tomato sauce and sugar. The other two items were unchanged.

SALT LAKE CITY: The total jumped 19.33 percent to $23.83 from $21.16, with sugar soaring. The other items that rose were: chopped chuck, peanut butter, detergent, tomato sauce, milk and franks. Pork chops, orange juice, coffee, paper towels, eggs, and fabric softener fell. Butter was unchanged.

SEATTLE: Market basket prices slipped 3.99 percent to $18.03 from $18.77, not including paper towels and eggs, which weren't available in March. Chopped chuck, pork chops, peanut butter, detergent, tomato sauce and milk dropped. Orange juice, coffee, butter, fabric softener, and sugar rose. Franks were unchanged.

Tavern owner elected mayor

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Tavern owner Bud Clark, beating incumbent Frank Ivancie for mayor in one of the biggest political upsets in the city's history, said his business experience played a major role in his victory.

At a jubilant, crowded victory party, Clark, 52, also said he won because Ivancie "hasn't been listening to people in the city of Portland."

Ivancie, 59, a fixture in Portland politics for more than two decades, conceded the race Tuesday shortly before midnight.

"I wish him well in office and I hope to make it an easy transition," he said. "I'm going to take the advice I see on my barber's window once in awhile. I'm going fishing."

Given virtually no chance to derail Ivancie's bid for a second four-year term when the campaign began, Clark had hoped to force a runoff by holding the incumbent to less than 50 percent of the vote.

Instead, it appeared Clark won without having to worry about a runoff and can take office in the city of 366,000 in January.

With 194 of the city's 305 precincts reporting in the non-partisan race, Clark had 34,788 votes or 54.4 percent, compared with 42 percent or 26,839 votes for Ivancie.

The rest of the votes were split among four other candidates.

Clark entered the race after better-known potential challengers decided against a race against Ivancie. Clark is the owner of four Portland businesses, the most notable being the Goose Hollow Inn, a popular tavern near downtown.

The experience in business was a key factor in his win, Clark said, adding that his opponent has "never made a payroll."

A poll published Monday in The Oregonian newspaper in Portland showed the race headed for a photo finish.

The race was tinged with controversy when a last-minute Ivancie radio advertisement said that the city of Portland "should not be turned over to someone who considers that it might be fun to be mayor, someone without credit, someone without a belief in God..."

Clark called the remark a lie.

Ivancie also issued a campaign flier describing Clark as a "born-again pagan" whose claim to fame "is exposing himself to a downtown statue."

Reception guests literally drop out of sight

MONTVILLE, Conn. (AP) — A happy wedding reception turned to chaos for Judy and Wayne Martin, when a wooden porch collapsed sending their guests tumbling.

"My husband and I were inside the kitchen area in a receiving line and the guests were going out to the deck, where the drinks and gifts were. There were 10 guests out there, and all of a sudden the porch gave way," Mrs. Martin said Tuesday.

"All you could hear was glass breaking and screaming," she said.

The trouble struck the New London couple's reception five minutes after it started Sunday. None of the guests was hospitalized, but several suffered broken bones, cuts and bruises.

The bride, a grandmother who says she's in her 40s, was treated for dizziness and mild shock.

"We were remarking on what a good day for a wedding it was and the next thing, everybody is going every which way and then I'm on the ground," said Donald B. Brigham Jr. of Waterford, who suffered a fractured shoulder blade and broken or bruised ribs.

The reception was at the house of Mrs. Martin's daughter, Linda Hrabe. The deck fell about 8 feet to the ground.

Recovering at home Tuesday, Mrs. Martin moved from laughter to tears as she described the scene. She said she and her husband had been on the deck earlier in the afternoon.

"We're both heavy, but the ones who went down were skinny.... We were laughing about that afterwards," she said.

Their wedding gifts were shattered in the fall, Mrs. Martin said.

"It was a nightmare," she said. "We were going off for a honeymoon trip, but this took the pleasure out of everything. We didn't go. I just hope that's all the badness we're going to have."

Parasites living in water

SCRANTON, Pa. (AP) — A little-known illness once viewed by doctors as one of the hazards of traveling to developing countries is being reported as close to home as America's kitchen sinks.

Three separate water systems in Pennsylvania are currently shut down because of the Giardia parasite, forcing some 80,000 people to boil their water or get it from out of town.

Since November more than 750 Pennsylvanians have been diagnosed as having the intestinal parasite. It is debilitating and sometimes painful, but can be treated with prescription drugs.

Pennsylvania is not the only state to have firsthand experience of the illness, which is called giardiasis and is believed to originate with animal droppings and untreated human sewage. The communities of Missoula, Mont., Berlin, N.H., Rome, N.Y., and Aspen, Colo., also have firsthand experience of giardiasis.

THE PARASITE, once associated almost exclusively with the poor sanitary conditions and overcrowding in developing countries, has at one time infected between 2 percent and 25 percent of the world's population, according to the National Institutes of Health.

In the United States, it is typically found in stream water contaminated by human or animal feces. But it does not have to be transmitted through water, and sometimes crops up in day care centers where there is fecal contamination.

At least 30 water-borne outbreaks of giardiasis have been reported since 1970 in the United States, NIH said.

"It's on the ups out here," said Greg Oliver of the Missoula health department.

Between 1,000 and 1,500 people were infected last summer, he said, after surface water leading into a reservoir serving the Missoula area became contaminated.

THE HEALTH department believed that beavers, which sometimes act as incubators for the disease, may have been involved.

In Pennsylvania, the Giardia cyst showed up in November in the water system serving the rural Houtzdale area, in the western part of the state. Then came outbreaks at reservoirs near Wilkes-Barre, roughly 170 miles away; in McKeesport, near Pittsburgh; and near Scranton, 18 miles north of Wilkes-Barre.

Last week, state officials advised 140,000 Scrantonians, who had been boiling their water since the problem was diagnosed on March 9, that they could resume drinking their water straight from the tap.

BUT CITY officials told city bars, restaurants and residents to continue boiling their water, saying they weren't convinced that the parasite was removed from the water distribution system.

A Wilkes-Barre attorney has filed two class-action suits against Pennsylvania Gas & Water Co. (PG&W), which owns the two tainted reservoirs in the Scranton-Wilkes-Barre area.

The suits charge that the utility "acted in a reckless manner in allowing giardiasis to penetrate the water system," said attorney Ronald Oley.

But PG&W denies it was negligent.

"WE TEST FOR phosphates, iron content, a great number of things. We test over and above what any regulatory agency requires," said spokesman William Bachman.

But those tests did not include samplings for the Giardia cyst because "we never received directives at the federal or the state level saying, 'Watch out for this as a water-borne disease.'"

"It seems to be the sort of problem that unless and until it arrives, nobody bothers to test for it," he said.

PG&W has been ordered by the state to begin planning filtration plants for the reservoirs. The utility has estimated that the plants will cost more than $26 million; Bachman said he is not sure just where the money will come from.

Supreme Court justice's value increased after marriage to his former secretary

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supreme Court Justice William J. Brennan's net worth jumped considerably when he married his ex-secretary last year, his financial disclosure report shows.

But the 78-year-old Brennan still remains a man of modest means compared to many of his brethren on the nation's highest court, the reports made public Tuesday disclosed. He listed assets of between $52,000 and $185,000, compared to a range a year earlier of $10,000 to $30,000.

Justice Lewis F. Powell remains the wealthiest member of the court, according to the disclosure reports, with assets worth between $2.6 million and $5.6 million

Justice Thurgood Marshall listed the smallest amount of assets: a savings account containing $1,000 to $5,000.

The disclosure law does not require officials to report exactly what their assets are worth. But they must the range of value.

Brennan, whose wife of 54 years died of cancer in 1982, married Mary Fowler, his secretary for 27 years. His financial disclosure statement said the new Mrs. Brennan had property of "substantial value" of her own that were reflected in his increased net worth.

Powell's listed net worth could represent a slight drop — or a slight increase — from 1983, when he reported assets in a range of $2.74 million to $5.27 million.

Justice Sandra Day O'Connor listed family assets of at least $784,000 and perhaps as much as $1.76 million or more.

Chief Justice Warren Burger listed assets in the range of $618,000 to $1.19 million or more; Justice Harry Blackmun $202,000 to $540,000; Justice William H. Rehnquist $45,000 to $150,000; Justice John Paul Stevens $40,000 to $130,000; and Justice Byron R. White $50,000 to $160,000.

FOOD

Fresh kiwi salad cool, elegant

Summertime is the season to celebrate good friends, sunny days and warm nights. Jazz up the celebration with the festive elegance of kiwifruit in summer's fine food.

Kiwifruit is a delicious surprise. Disguised in a furry light-brown skin, the fruit is sliced open to reveal a brilliant emerald flesh laced with a sunburst of tiny black seeds. This versatile fruit adds a touch of elegance to any dish from breakfast to salads, main dishes and desserts.

Delicious spooned from its own "cup," a kiwifruit has a flavor that hints of a light, refreshing cross between a melon and a strawberry. And kiwifruit has only 55 calories per fruit.

This New Zealand Kiwi Club Salad is a variation of the Presidential Salad created exclusively for President Reagan by the Century Plaza Hotel in Los Angeles.

NEW ZEALAND KIWI CLUB SALAD

1/2 cup vegetable oil
1/4 cup white wine vinegar
1/2 teaspoon tarragon
Salt and pepper to taste
1 cup sliced mushrooms
1 tomato, sliced into half rounds
3/4 pound asparagus, trimmed and cooked crisp-tender
4 skinned and boned chicken breast halves, cooked and chilled
3 kiwifruit, peeled and sliced 1/4-inch thick
Lettuce leaves
Toasted sesame seeds for garnish

Combine oil, vinegar, tarragon, salt and pepper; whisk to blend. Pour over mushrooms, tomato and asparagus in shallow dish; cover and refrigerate to marinate, 30 minutes to one hour. With sharp knife slice each chicken breast half on the diagonal into five pieces. To assemble salads: Alternate slices of chicken and kiwifruit down one side of lettuce-lined plates, dividing equally. Arrange tomato, mushrooms and asparagus spears on opposite side of plates; spoon some of the marinade over salads as dressing. Sprinkle with sesame seeds. Makes four servings.

Discover the elegance of this cool and delicious New Zealand Kiwi Club Salad featuring a tempting blend of chicken breast, fresh vegetables and kiwifruit.

Super Slim Stack Up is a calorie counters sandwich delight with turkey, fresh vegetables, cheese and reduced calorie dressing.

This Sunburst Salad, stuffed with celery and cottage cheese topped with a lightly curried cucumber dressing is 75 calories a serving.

Creativity makes salads fun

Produce counters offer an abundance of fresh produce that ripe for the salad bowl, and supermarket shelves are filled with an unequaled variety of pourable dressings for salads.

In recent years, as salads have moved from the side dish to the center of the plate, more innovative salad ideas have flourished. Salad meals have become more popular as Americans have taken a lighter approach to daily meal planning. The light-eating trend is evident in the salad category where more growth has been reported in the sales of reduced calorie dressings. By definition, dressings with a "reduced calorie" label must contain 1/3 fewer calories than regular salad dressings.

For summer's peak salad days, when fresh produce is abundant and a salad meal has special appeal, these two entree salad ideas are worth trying. Super Slim Stack-Up, a layered combination of turkey, cheese and vegetables on a slice of iceberg lettuce, topped with bacon and tomato reduced calorie dressing is perfect for calorie counters.

The second entree salad brings leftover ham to the table for an encore. The dressing for the blend of ham, peas and ripe olives in Towhouse Ham Salad is a refreshing combination of buttermilk creamy dressing and chopped fresh mint. To complete this innovative offering, the salad is served on a bed of chilled cooked fresh asparagus spears.

SUPER SLIM STACK UP

4 shredded lettuce iceberg slices
1/2 cup shredded carrots
8 cooked turkey slices
8 thin red onion slices
8 green pepper rings
4 single slices process cheese
8 tomato slices
12 cucumber slices
1/2 cup bacon and tomato reduced calorie dressing

Top each lettuce slice with carrot, turkey, onion, green pepper, process cheese, tomato, cucumber and dressing.

Yield: 4 servings

"Eat lots of salad and include plenty of fresh vegetables." Top directions to those who wish to eat healthy while losing a few pounds and or keeping them off. Eating fresh vegetable salads is so easy these days because there are lots of good salad ingredients available this time of year, such as tomatoes, celery, lettuce, radishes, cucumbers and new potatoes.

Pictured is a Sunburst Salad, a cool-as-a-cucumber main dish that's a mere 75 calories a serving. Before you start making it, however, but the tomatoes a few days ahead and let them ripen and redden fully on your kitchen couter. Directions for turing your tomatoes into stars are in the recipe. Stuff the stars with celery and cottage cheese and serve with a lightly curried cucumber dressing. (Cool tip: When you bring celery home from the market rinse in warm water, cut in a thin slice from the bottom and store in a plastic bag with a few holes for "breathing.")

SUNBURST SALAD

4 large tomatoes
2 small cucumbers
1/4 cup low-fat plain yogurt
1/4 teaspoon curry powder
1/8 teaspoon salt
1 1/2 cups low-fat cottage cheese
1/2 cup sliced celery

Use tomatoes held at toom temperature until fully ripe. Remove cores from tomatoes. Turn tomatoes stem side down; cut each tomato into wedges almost to the bottom. gently open to form a star; set aside. Peel cucmbers; cut in halves lengthwise and scoop out seeds with a spoon. Dice cucmber (makes 1 1/4 cups). Place 1 cup of the diced cucmbers in the container of an electric blender along with yogurt, curry powder and salt.

Whirl at high speed imtil smooth. Pour into a serving bowl; stir in reserved 1/4 cup cucmber; setaside. Combine cottage cheese and celery. Spoon 1/2 cup of mixture into each tomato. Serve with reserved cucumber dressing on a bed of lettuce if desired.

Pozole a favorite in Puerto Vallarta

By The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

PUERTO VALLARTA, Mexico — Some of the best food in Puerto Vallarta is found in little cafes known primarily to local people, not tourists.

One such place, located just below the church of Guadalupe, does not even have a name. Cheerful and spotless, it opens for only a few hours in the evening, when customers must vie for a handful of seats. On a steamy day, it is steamy inside because there is no air conditioning. But who cares? The food — tostadas, tacos, tamales and beverages such as atole and refreshing aguas frescas — is terrific.

When pressed for a name, Antonio Lopez, who runs this little cafe with his wife, Leticia, calls it El Campanario (the bell tower) because of its proximity to the church. The few tourists who wander in either hear about it from someone who lives in Puerto Vallarta or stumble across it while strolling the cobblestone streets.

Lopez, who works days in the administration of the Garza Blanca Hotel, waits on tables. Leticia Lopez does much of the cooking. One dish for which they are especially known is pozole, a clear broth brimming with pork, chicken and cooked dried corn. No complicated ingreidients disguise the simple, perfect flavor. Instead, one chooses condiments from side dishes of shredded cabbage, chopped onion, lime wedges and hot salsa.

If going to Puerto Vallarta, look for the Lopez restaurant at 339 Hidalgo. Closed Sundays, it is open other days from 7 to 11 p.m. It is advisable to go early, as this is home-style rather than quantity restaurant cooking, and popular dishes may be gone well before closing.

If no trip to Mexico is in the offing, you can taste the pozole anyway, for Lopez was generous enough to give his recipe. Only slight adaptations are needed. Instead of wild mountain oregano, one can use ordinary dried oregano. And packaged nixtamal, available in some supermarkets, saves the step of soaking the dried corn.

EL CAMPANARIO'S POZOLE

2 pounds prepared nixtamal
Water
3½ pounds pork leg
2 pounds pork back ribs
½ chicken
2 heads garlic
2 onions
2 bay leaves
2 tablespoons salt
Several sprigs fresh oregano or 1½ teaspoons dried
Finely shredded cabbage
Chopped onion
Lime wedges
Homemade or bottled hot salsa

Place nixtamal in colander and rinse thoroughly. Place in large pot and add 5 quarts water. Bring to boil and boil gently 5 hours, adding another 5 quarts water as original water is absorbed.

Place pork leg and back ribs in another large pot. Add enough water to cover, about 3 quarts. Add 1 head garlic, 1 whole onion, 1 bay leaf and 1 tablespoon salt. Bring to boil, reduce heat and simmer 3 hours. Place chicken in separate pot. Add 3 quarts water, remaining head garlic, 1 whole onion, 1 bay leaf and 1 tablespoon salt. Bring to boil, reduce heat and boil gently 1 hour.

Remove meats from each pot when cooked. Strain stocks. Combine stocks in 10-quart pot or 2 6-quart pots. Shred pork and chicken and add to pot. Add nixtamal and oregano. Heat to serving temperature. Serve in large soup bowls. Arrange cabbage, chopped onion, lime wedges and salsa in separate bowls to be added to each serving as desired. Makes 15 main dish servings.

TWICE THE WASHES. TWICE THE SAVINGS.

SNOWY'S® VALUE GOES A LONG WAY.

There are 20 washes in a 40 oz. box of Snowy; only 10 in a 40 oz. box of Clorox 2. That's twice as many washes with Snowy. The Snowy box costs more. But, because it contains twice as many washes, it ends up costing a lot less to use. And not even Clorox 2 out cleans Snowy's powerful stain fighters.

Cooks rediscover homemade bread

Homemade bread is being rediscovered by today's cooks.

Today a new generation of breadbakers has re-discovered the goodness of homemade bread. Whole grain bread-making at home is growing in popularity as more people take an interest in nutrition and healthy cooking.

And for convenience for both the novice and the knowledgeable cook, making bread today is also easy, using a doughmaker appliance.

A whole grain is made from the entire kernel of the grain and provides a valuable supply of B vitamins, protein, minerals and fiber roughage.

Here's to good health with delicious and nutritious homemade whole-grain bread recipes:

OATMEAL BREAD

1-3/4 cups water
1/4 cup butter or margarine
1/4 cup honey
2-3/4 cups all-purpose flour
2 cups oats, uncooked
2 eggs
2 packages active dry yeast
1 tablespoon salt
2-1/2 to 3 cups all-purpose flour
1 egg white
1 tablespoon water oats, uncooked

Heat water, butter and honey to 120-F. In large mixer bowl combine 2-3/4 cups flour, oats, eggs, yeast, salt and warmed water mixture. Mix with doughmaker at recommended speed for three minutes. (It may be necessary to scrape sides of bowl with rubber scraper and rotate bowl slightly by hand.) Add 2-1/2 cups flour and continue kneading three more minutes. If dough is sticky, knead in enough remaining 1/2 cup flour to form moderately stiff dough. Place in greased bowl, turning once to grease top. Cover and let rise in warm place until doubled, about 45 minutes. Punch dough down and divide into two equal parts. Shape each piece into loaf and place in two greased 9x5x3-inch pans. Cover and let rise until doubled, about one hour. Mix together egg white and water. Brush on loaves. Sprinkle top of loaves with oats. Bake in preheated 375-F. oven 40 minutes. Remove from pan and cool on wire rack. Makes two loaves.

PUMPERNICKEL

1-2/3 cups water
1/4 cup dark molasses
1 square (1 oz.) bittersweet chocolate, melted
2-3/4 cups all-purpose flour
1/2 cups cornmeal
2 tablespoons brown sugar
2 tablespoons caraway seed
1 tablespoon plus 1 teaspoon salt
3 packages active dry yeast
2 cups rye or pumpernickel flour
1/2 cup all-purpose flour
1 egg white
1 tablespoon water

Heat water, molasses and chocolate to 120-F. In large mixer bowl combine 2-1/2 cups all-purpose flour, cornmeal, sugar, caraway seed, salt, yeast and warmed water mixture. Mix with doughmaker at recommended speed for three minutes. Add rye flour and continue kneading three more minutes. If dough is sticky knead in enough remaining 1/2 cup flour to form moderately stiff dough. Place dough in greased bowl, turning once to grease top. Cover and let rise in warm place until doubled, about one hour. Punch down and shape into round ball. Place on greased cookie sheet, cover and let rise until doubled, about one hour. Mix together egg white and water. Brush on bread. Bake in preheated 375-F. oven 30-35 minutes. Remove from pan and cool on wire rack.

More to cooking than meets the rye

Being a good cook doesn't just mean knowing how to make a decent loaf of bread. A wise food specialist also knows sources: the good butchers, where to find a variety of fresh fruits and vegetables, and informational sources, too. Here is a collection of companies offering recipes, information, services and tips related to cooking:

Nuts about nuts? A nifty cookbook published entitled,"California Walnuts — Talk of the Town." This new 40-page book features 48 walnut recipes for every occasion from fancy dinners to picnics. Also featured are a forward by food authority Marion Cuningham and several of her favorite walnut recipes.

For a recipe booklet full of ideas for cooking with turkey, send 25 cents in coin to the California Turkey Industry Board, 814 14th St., No. 3, Modesto, CA 95354, and ask for "30 Ways to Serve California Turkey."

Jessica's Biscuit Cookbook Catalog Co. (P.O. Box 301, Newtonville, MS 02160) has released its spring catalog. The company, the fastest-growing mail order cookbook company in the country, has doubled its distribution each year of its three-year history. The color catalog offers a complete selection of culinary guides and kitchen handbooks. For those last-minute-gotta-get-that-cookbook urges, there is a toll-free cookbook hot line in operation from 7 a.m. to 2 p.m., PST. That number is 800-322-4027.

Looking for ways to cut cholesterol from your diet? Here's one idea: As a substitute for whipped cream, beat 2⅓ tablespoons each nonfat dry skim milk and water with 1 tablespoon lemon juice and 1 tablespoon vanilla until stiff.

On your mark, get set, go ... send for an entry blank for the 1985 Chicken Cooking Contest, which will take place May 16 next year in Asheville, N.C. I know that the Dec. 31 deadline is far off, yet those who enter cooking contests with this scope ($10,000 for grand winner), start planning years in advance.

Entry blanks are available but are not required. Write your name, address and telephone number on the first page of each recipe and mail to: Chicken Contest, Box 28158 Central Station, Washington, D.C. 20005.

One contestant from each state and the District of Columbia will receive an expenses-paid trip to the cook-off.

The winter '84 issue covered such subjects as an explanation of government grading of meat, poultry, fruits and eggs and an article on the fact that pawpaw fruit might become a more popular food based on its vitamin-packed content.

Holiday contest to award over $4,000 in prizes

More than $4,000 in cash prizes await winners of the all new La Creme whipped topping Thanksgiving/Christmas Holiday Recipe Contest.

Quick and easy recipes from the following three categories may be entered:

— La Creme crust with filling: This category requires one 9-inch La Creme crust, either plain or with added flavors or ingredients, and a filling suitable for freezing. The basic La Creme topping, thawed, spooned into a 9-inch pie plate, shaped into a crust and frozen. Any filling suitable for freezing is added to the frozen crust and frozen before slicing and serving.

— Other holiday desserts: Recipes in this category may include both refrigerated and frozen desserts such as bars, tortes, cakes, souffles, parfaits, trifles and mousse.

— Beverages for the holidays: Category includes both hot and cold beverages appropriate for holiday serving. The drink must include a minimum of two cups La Creme topping which must be used as part of the recipe, not only as topping.

Every recipe entered must include at least two cups La Creme topping as a recipe ingredient.

Entries (only one to an envelope) may be printed or typed on a plain sheet of 8-1/2x11-inch paper. Name, complete address and name of the recipe category must appear on the top right hand corner.

Send entries to La Creme Topping Holiday Recipe Contest, P.O. Box 2775, Littleton, Colo. 80122. Entries must be postmarked by July 31 and received no later than Aug. 10. To receive a complete set of rules send a stamped, self-addressed No. 10 envelope to the same address.

Contest void where prohibited or restricted by law. All Federal, state and local laws apply.

DEAR ABBY

Husband's herpes ends couple's communications

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Eight years ago my husband came home and told me the doctor told him he had genital herpes. I'm 53 and he is 54.

I was shocked and hurt and tried to believe he caught it some way other than the obvious. He listed several possibilities, from building a house near an open sewer to kissing a lot of girls at a Christmas party. I never commented except to say that if I had come home and told him I had caught genital herpes that way, I wouldn't have been able to finish the second sentence. He laughed and agreed.

We rarely have sex, as he always has an excuse. I keep myself immaculate, am nice looking and wear size 9 jeans. I know other men find me attractive, but I never give them any encouragement. My husband and I occupy the same house but seldom talk. We can ride for two hours and no words are spoken except to criticize my shoes, clothes, etc. I never answer anymore; it's easier that way.

Thanks for letting me "talk" to you, Abby. I feel better already. — EMPTY MARRIAGE

DEAR EMPTY: The herpes virus could have been dormant in your husband's body for years until his lowered resistance caused it to become active. But where he caught it is the least of your troubles. You and your husband haven't been communicating either sexually or verbally for many years.

You're both too young to go on as you are, sharing only an empty marriage. At the risk of sounding like a broken record: Somewhere there is a marriage counselor who can replace this cold war with a reasonably warm relationship. "Seek and ye shall find."

DEAR ABBY: I am an animal lover — always have been. I've often wondered how animals "know" this. Domestic dogs and cats always sleep on top of me. Parakeets perch on my fingers even while I'm pounding a typewriter. Even in the wilds of the Pocono Mountains, wild birds have rested on my shoulder and chipmunks have eaten from my hand.

Is there an explanation for this? Maybe some of your readers know. I have no idea. — JULIET BRIDGMAN IN NEW YORK

DEAR JULIET: Animals and birds are born with an instinctive sense that signals a warning in the presence of potential danger, as well as trust when there is no threat to fur or feather. They "know" intuitively who their friends are. Would that man were so blessed.

Pies, comics combine for party fun

Copley News Service

Throw the pies! How American can you get?

The combination of pie-in-the-face humor and the goodness of fruit or cream-filled one-crust pies is an unbeatable duo when it comes to fantasy and delicious fun.

And creating one-crust pies fits easily into today's lifestyle. It entails filling a basic pie crust — baked or unbaked, depending upon the filling — then mounding a meringue or crumb crust on top for final browning. Or, the filled crust can be chilled and slathered with a layer of whipped cream, the likes of which would appeal to Abbott and Costello at their slapstick best.

With the focus on open-face pies, consider this party idea to make delicious memories for family and friends: Arrange a dessert buffet featuring some of the pies in today's recipe collection. Then line up videos of Laurel and Hardy, Charlie Chaplin, the Three Stooges or other favorite knee-slappers and get ready for a celebration of fun and food.

Given a wide lawn and trusty hose for quick cleanup, thought might be given to a pie-throwing or two; but the object is to revel in the creative ways to fill simple pie crusts with a rainbow of flavors.

STRAWBERRY CREAM CHEESE PIE

9-inch baked pie shell
5 cups strawberries (about 4 boxes)
2 tbsps. cornstarch
¾ cup sugar
½ cup water
2 tbsps. lemon juice
3 ozs. cream cheese
¼ cup powdered sugar

In saucepan, put about 1 cup sliced strawberries, cornstarch, sugar, water nd lemon juice. Bring to boil, stirring. Boil until thick and clear. Remove from heat, cool. Beat together cream cheese and powdered sugar until smooth. Spread evenly in pie shell. Put large raw strawberries over cream cheese. Pour cooled strawberry puree over strawberries. Chill until serving time. May top with whipped cream or use pastry bag to pipe swirls of cream between berries.

DEEP-DISH PEACH PIE

Pastry for Single-Crust Pie
¾ cup sugar
3 tbsps. all-purpose flour
¼ tsp. ground nutmeg
6 cups peeled, thickly sliced fresh peaches (3 lbs.)
3 tbsps. grenadine syrup
2 tbsps. lemon juice
2 tbsps. butter or margarine

Prepare pastry and roll out into an even 9-inch or 11-inch circle (depending on dish size). Cut slits in pastry. Combine sugar, flour and nutmeg. Add sugar mixture to peaches and toss to coat. Let stand 5 minutes. Stir in grenadine syrup and lemon juice. Turn mixture into 1½-quart casserole or a deep 10-inch round baking dish, spreading peaches evenly; dot with butter. Place pastry over peach mixture in baking dish. Flute to sides of dish but not over the edge. Cover edge with foil. Place dish on baking sheet. Bake in 375-F oven 25 minutes. Remove foil; bake 30 to 35 minutes more or until crust is golden. Cool. Makes 8 servings.

VANILLA CREAM PIE

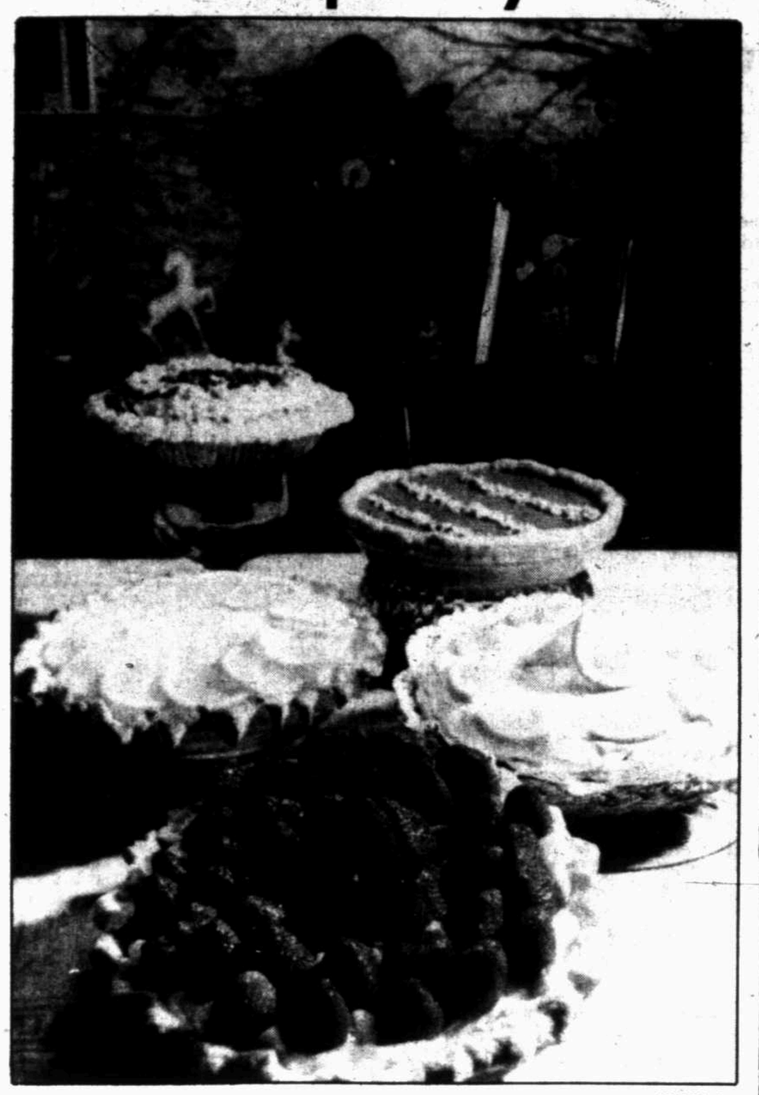

1 cup sugar
½ cup all-purpose flour or ¼ cup cornstarch
¼ tsp. salt
3 cups milk
4 eggs
3 tbsps. butter or margarine
1½ tsps. vanilla
1 9-inch Baked Pastry Shell

Filling: In medium saucepan, combine sugar, flour or cornstarch, and salt; radually stir in milk. Cook and stir over medium heat until thick and bubbly. Reduce heat; cook and stir 2 minutes more. Remove from heat.

Separate egg yolks from whites; set whites aside for meringue. Beat egg yolks slightly. Gradually stir 1 cup of hot mixture into yolks. Return egg mixture to saucepan; bring to a gentle boil. Cook and stir 2 minutes more. Remove from heat.

Stir in butter or margarine and vanilla. Pour hot filling into baked pastry shell. Cool. Cover with ¾ cup heavy cream whipped with 1½ tablespoons sugar and 1 teaspoon vanilla; chill to store.

OR make a meringue, using 3 egg whites, ½ teaspoon vanilla, ¼ teaspoon cream of tartar, and 6 tablespoons sugar, and spread it over the hot filling in baked pastry shell, sealing it to crust edge. Bake in 350-F oven 12 to 15 minutes or until golden. Cool and cover. Makes 8 servings.

Open-face pies can be thrown, but eating them may be even more enjoyable.

VARIATIONS

Chocolate Cream Pie: Prepare Vanilla Cream Pie, but increase sugar to 1¼ cups and add 3 ounces unsweetened chocolate along with milk.

Coconut Cream Pie: Prepare Vanilla Cream Pie, but stir in 1 cup flaked coconut with vanilla. Sprinkle another one-third cup flaked coconut over meringue and bake or top cooled pie with whipped cream.

Berries top cheesecake pie

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

American cooks began to be strongly interested in baking cheesecake pies in the 1940s. Not only did the dessert taste delectable, but it was easier to prepare and less expensive than baking large cheesecakes in springform pans.

At first these cheesecake pies were unadorned. Later cooks added toppings of fruits and glazes. Of these, perhaps the most widely welcomed was the one made with fresh strawberries and a jelly glaze.

The crust called for here is made with graham crackers, butter and sugar in plentiful amounts and makes a thick shell.

CREAMY STRAWBERRY CHEESE PIE

Graham Cracker Crust (recipe follows)
One 8-ounce package and one 3-ounce package cream cheese, soft ½ cup plus 3 tablespoons sugar
2 large eggs
Grated rind of 1 lemon
2 teaspoons vanilla
1 cup sour cream
1 pint basket fresh strawberries, stemmed and halved
2 tablespoons strawberry jelly

Prepare Graham Cracker Crust.

In a medium bowl beat together until smooth the cheese, ⅓ cup of the sugar, eggs, lemon rind and 1 teaspoon of the vanilla. Pour into the prepared crust. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven for 20 minutes.

Meanwhile, in a small bowl, stir together until blended the sour cream, remaining sugar and vanilla. Spread evenly over hot cream cheese filling and continue baking at 375 degrees for 5 minutes.

Cool on a wire rack to room temperature. Arrange strawberry halves on top of pie to cover filling.

In a 6-inch skillet over low heat, stirring constantly, melt the jelly; cool slightly and brush the strawberries with it. Chill at least 2 hours before serving.

Makes 8 servings.

Graham Cracker Crust: In an electric blender, a food processor or with a rolling pin, finely crush 22 (each 2½-inch) graham cracker squares — there should be about 1⅔ cups crumbs.

In a medium bowl stir together to blend well the crumbs, ⅓ cup butter (soft) and ¼ cup sugar. Press evenly into a 9-inch pie plate to line completely.

Cherry season: Time for fresh enjoyment

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

Soon, America will begin to harvest one of its most delicious fruits, the Northwest Cherry.

The rich, juicy Bing and Lambert cherries are grown in the volcanic soil of the Northwest states of Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Utah.

Cherries from this region begin appearing in the markets in mid-June and usually last through early August. So short a season for one of our most delicious fruits!

The more prolific Bing cherry is known for its large size, plump shape and mahogany hue. The Lambert has the same rich taste but is usually elongated or sometimes heart-shaped.

Usually picked in the cool, early-morning hours, the fruit is placed in buckets, then transferred to bins and trucked to nearby packing houses.

To maintain their flavor and firmness these cherries must be kept cool, so they are chilled in ice water and placed in storage areas to await packaging.

Before shipping, the fruit is packed in boxes lined with polyethylene to preserve the moisture, and finally placed in refrigerated rail cars, planes and trucks. This sounds complicated, but the fruit is usually en route to market within 48 hours of picking.

Since freshness is so vital, the fruit should be eaten within hours of purchase. Or you can place it unwashed in plastic bags in your refrigerator. Then wash and serve as needed. This way it keeps for a few days.

If you want to preserve the fruit, directions are available from such places as Northwest Cherry Growers, 1005 Tieton Drive, Yakima, WA 98902-3587. They will tell you how to freeze, can or dry the cherries.

There are a number of recipes for using cherries in salads, appetizers and desserts, such as this one for Cherry Ham Canapes.

CHERRY HAM CANAPES

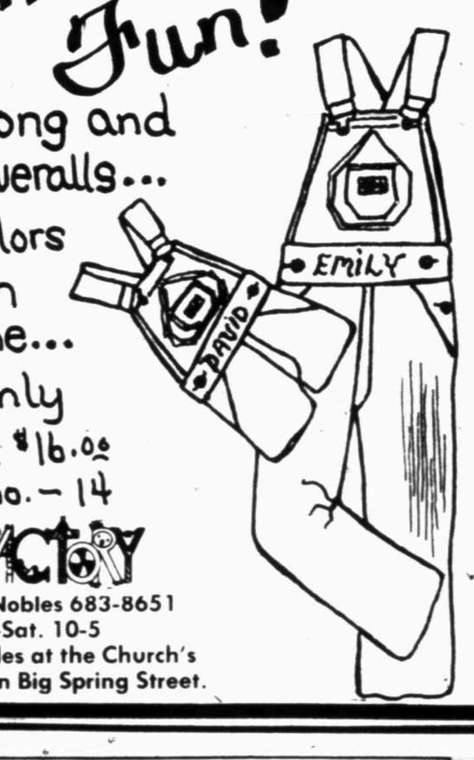

1 package (3 ounces) cream cheese, softened
1 tablespoon orange juice
2 tablespoons finely chopped walnuts
½ teaspoon grated orange peel
16 slices party rye bread
4 slices (4 ounces) thinly sliced ham
16 Northwest fresh sweet cherries, pitted

Combine cream cheese, orange juice, walnuts and orange peel. Spread about ½ tablespoon of the cheese mixture on each slice of bread.

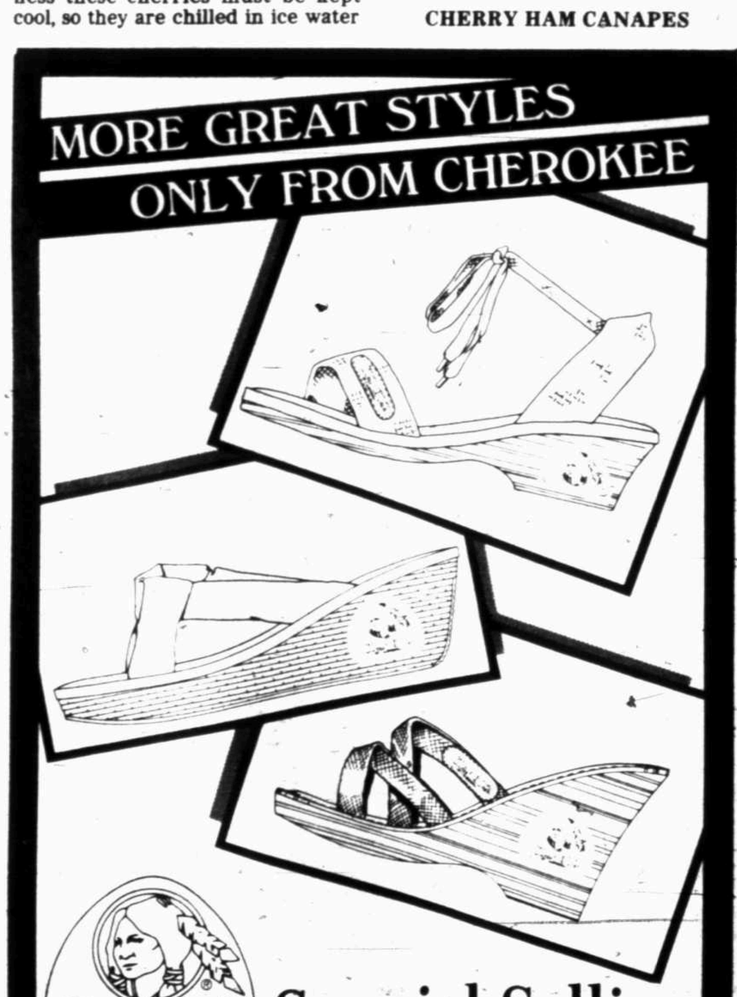

Cut each slice of ham into 4 triangles. Place on triangle on top of cream cheese mixture. Top each canape with a pitted cherry. Makes 16 canapes.

THE BUTCHER

Butchers a vanishing breed

By MERLE ELLIS

Contemporary cookbook writers, it seems, have not kept pace with current trends in the meat business. Or, perhaps, it is that cookbook writers make it a point, even in contemporary times, to seek out old-fashioned butchers when they buy their meat. Whichever the case, the instructions given in many meat recipes make me laugh. For example:

Turkey gallantine: "Have your butcher bone out one 13-pound turkey."

Crown roast of lamb: "Ask your butcher to form a crown roast from two racks of lamb."

Grilled boneless leg of lamb: "Have the butcher butterfly the meat."

Be serious! It is obvious that the people who are telling us to "have your butcher . . ." or "ask the butcher . . ." have not rung the bell at many modern American meat markets lately. I have — and have found myself being told, "I'm sorry sir, there is no butcher on duty. All of our meat is cut and wrapped at our main store in Milpiakuk."

Even if there was a butcher on duty, the possibility of his being able to do what your cookbook tells you he can is somewhat remote. It is possible for people to go through the training program that qualfies them to answer the bell at the meat counter of a modern American supermarket without ever having seen a side of beef or a carcass of lamb.

They're there to keep the meat case full not to provide much service. Why do you think a "self-service" meat case is called just that?

There still are markets around with the kind of butchers that cookbooks speak of, anl if you know of one such butcher, cherish him, for he's one of a vanishing breed. The time seems to be approaching rapidly, when if you want a turkey boned for a gallantine, a leg of lamb butterflied for the grill or any of those things done for you that the cookbooks tell you the butcher will do, forget it! You're just going to have to B-Y-O-B. I'm not suggesting that you go on a binge, rather, that you "Be Your Own Butcher."

To help prepare you for that seemingly inevitable fate, we will attempt to teach you some basic butchering skills from time to time in this column. (It beats discarding all those cookbooks.)

Because spring is upon us and many of you are likely to be fixing more lamb than usual, let's start with how to bone a leg of lamb. It's really a simple skill to master.

The best leg of lamb to work with, and the one you're likely to find in most markets, is the three-quarter leg. It's a full leg that has had the sirloin section removed and with it most of the complicated hipbone, making the boning process much easier. If your market has only full legs, and if there still is a butcher behind the bell, ask that three or four chops be cut from the sirloin end for an additional meal.

Put the leg, with the exposed hipbone side up, on your cutting board. If a piece of the tail bone has been left on the leg, remove it first. Next run the tip of your boning knife along the inside edge of the hipbone (aitch bone). Work the knife around the bone to loosen it, keeping the blade close to the bone. You should feel the blade against the bone as you cut.

When you reach the joint where the leg bone fits into the socket of the hipbone wiggle the aitch bone a bit to find the space between the two bones, then slip your knife through the space and continue cutting along the aitch bone to free it. Then lift it out.

After the hipbone has been removed, the rest is easy. There are three bones left in the leg: The center leg bone with the knob-like end that extends from the hip to the knee or stifle joint, a tiny kneecap bone and the lower leg bone or shank.

Starting at the round knob end of the leg bone, make a cut down to and along the leg bone to the stifle joint. Work your knife under the kneecap and on down the length of the shank bone. Once you have exposed the bones, simply cut around them and lift them out. Cut away the little kneecap and you have boned out a leg of lamb.

For a butterflied leg for the grill, simply cut along the natural seams to spread or flatten the leg slightly.

To make a rolled leg roast, tuck the shank meat into the space where the center leg bone was removed. Tie a couple of strings (not too tightly) around the roast lengthwise to hold its general shape. Then tie strings around the circumference at about one-inch intervals to roll the muscles together firmly.

If you would like illustrated instructions on how to tie a butcher's knot to help you tie up all manner of meat, along with a wonderfully simple stuffed leg of lamb recipe that I got from one of those old-fashioned butchers that cookbooks mention so casually, send a self-addressed, stamped, legal-sized envelope to: "Butcher's Knot," P.O. Box 907, Tiburon, CA 94920.

Keg wine gurgles way to popularity

By DAN BERGER
Copley News Service

Is that glass of restaurant house wine worth the $2 or more you're paying?

It depends. If you're satisfied with it; if it doesn't make you gag; if chilling it near the winter temperature of International Falls, Minn., helps its flavor; if you don't demand much, then, sure, two bucks for a six-ounce pour of the stuff isn't bad.

Consider this. Many restaurants pour "house wines" that they buy by the 18-liter box. (There is a sealed plastic bag in the box that holds the wine; it's dispensed via a spigot. The whole thing can be tossed out when the wine is gone.)

These 18-liter boxes cost in the neighborhood of $18 to $20. (Yet prices in this segment of the wine industry are subject to various pressures, and I have heard of much lower prices than these.) This makes the cost of a six-ounce glass of house wine about 20 cents, or less.

THUS THE restaurateur is making a small fortune selling house wine. So, for that matter, are wineries. ("House" wine is not the same as "premium-pour" wine, which sells for $4 to $5 a glass and is of premium quality.)

Wine served out of a keg that is three times the size of an 18-liter box is easier to manage (less switching is involved) so keg wine has been making inroads into the nation's restaurants in the last two years.

One of the first to explore the national market for wine in kegs was a beer maker — the nation's largest. Anheuser-Busch, which already had steel kegs of tap beer in the market, began a keg-wine program two years ago, and that got the rest of the industry thinking.

Now Almaden is experimenting with the idea; Paul Masson is going forward with a project in keg wine in Orange County, Calif.; Inglenook is looking at the situation in Chicago, Denver and in some East Coast cities.

And one of the most aggressive in this line of wines is a company you probably never heard of before, but it's a company that appears to have a solid lead in at least one department: enthusiasm.

LOUIS GLUNZ INC. is the name of the "winery." Well, actually the name of the "winery" is Coastal Valley Cellars. Well, actually there's no winery, as such and Louis Glunz Inc. is really a beer distributor in the Chicago area and it happens to market wines called Coastal Valley that are made to its specifications.

Joseph Glunz is vice president of this firm, which was founded 95 years ago by his grandfather. Today it is the oldest Schlitz distributor in the nation and a wine importer, among other things. And Joe likes to say he pioneered wine in a keg.

"It was in 1976, in Illinois," he said. "We started slowly, with only 500 barrels." By 1980, he had expanded into Ohio and Minnesota, and today is offering wine by the keg nationwide.

House wines for restaurants used to be poured out of four-gallon bottles with screw caps. In the late 1970s, 18-liter bag-in-box wine became popular. Geyser Peak Winery made the first major splash in the market with bag-in-box wine. Many others followed, most recently the Carlo Rossi line of Gallo.

THE KEG idea, Glunz readily admits, bothered some restaurateurs.

"I know," he said, looking up in frustration. "They say they want Chateau Cheapest," but he said they looked at the stainless steel cask he offers, which holds 58.7 liters, and weren't sure about it.

Fears that the wine would spoil before all of it was sold were dispelled, he said, by showing that the wine inside was blanketed by the inert gas nitrogen, protecting it from air. And he began to gain supporters based on the good quality of the wine and on the fact that it doesn't need refrigeration, yet the wines may still be served chilled.

Glunz's wine is made at Sierra winery in Delano, Calif., one of the largest bulk wineries in the United States. And Glunz says he achieves better quality than some of the bulk producers by going to Sierra himself each year to make up the master blends.

AS FOR the refrigeration problem, that is solved by a device attached to the keg called a cold plate. It sits in a tray or barrel of ice, and the wine is drawn through a coil attached to the cold plate. As the wine runs through the coil, it is chilled to serving temperature.

Glunz charges $67.75 for a 58.7-liter keg of white, red or rose Coastal Valley wine in Chicago (prices vary around the country due to lesser or greater taxes), and he says the wines are better than other keg wines, if slightly more expensive.

I tasted the white and found it quite acceptable. It had an aroma faintly reminiscent of chenin blanc, and wasn't as sweet as many of the bulk wines I've had in the last year.

"We think it's a superior product, and we can sell it at a price that's fair," he said. "We don't have the cost of the glass (the bottle) or the cork or the cardboard (the box), and the keg is reusable.

"The cost of an ounce of the cheapest bag-in-box wine is about 3 cents; our wine works out to 3.4 cents an ounce. The average cost of a glass of house wine to the restaurant is 15 to 17 cents, and we feel that if the restaurateur puts an extra penny or two into the glass of wine, his chances of selling a second glass are much better than if he served 'Chateau Cheapest.'"

"But we know this is a better wine than a lot of them out there," he said.

Southeast Asian dish interesting

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

A new restaurant, a few blocks from my house in New York City, specializes in Southeast Asian food. It has wakened my neighbors' and my interest in that cuisine and we particularly like the chef's satay — grilled skewered beef or pork — accompanied by a peanut sauce and rice.

As luck would have it, the newly revised "Oriental Cookbook" by the editors of Sunset Books and Sunset Magazine (Lane) includes an inviting recipe for beef or pork satay with a peanut sauce. Because we think this combination is worth trying, we are passing along the recipe.

The 1984 edition of the "Oriental Cookbook" (a large format paperback) is especially worthwhile because it has been expanded to include the cooking of the nine Southeast Asian countries — Burma, Thailand, Vietnam, Laos, Cambodia (Kampuchea), Malaysia, Singapore, Indonesia and the Philippines. Other cuisines treated are China, Japan and Korea.

As is customary in the cookbooks published by Lane, the recipes are of high standard, well-chosen and clearly written. There are 120 of them in the "Oriental Cookbook" and they make a fine sampling. Four pages of "Menus for Oriental Meals" are an excellent addition.

BEEF OR PORK SATAY

1½ pounds lean boneless beef (sirloin or top round) or pork (butt or leg)
1 clove garlic, minced or pressed
2 tablespoons soy sauce
1 tablespoon salad oil
1 teaspoon each ground cumin and coriander
Basting Sauce (recipe follows)
Peanut Sauce (recipe follows)

Cut meat into ¾-inch cubes. In a bowl, stir together garlic, soy, oil, cumin and coriander. Add meat and stir to coat evenly. Cover and refrigerate for 1½ to 2 hours. Meanwhile, prepare Basting Sauce and Peanut Sauce; set aside.

Thread about 4 cubes of meat on each of about 18 small bamboo skewers. Place on a lightly greased grill 4 to 6 inches above a solid bed of medium-glowing coals (or place on a rack in a broiler pan about 4 to 6 inches below heat); cook, turning often, until beef is done to your liking when slashed (8 to 10 minutes for medium-rare) or until pork is no longer pink when slashed (about 15 minutes).

Three minutes before end of estimated cooking time, brush meat all over with Basting Sauce. Serve with Peanut Sauce. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Basting Sauce: In a small bowl, stir together 3 tablespoons lemon juice, 2 tablespoons soy sauce, and ¼ teaspoon each ground cumin and coriander.

Peanut Sauce: In a small pan, combine 1 cup water, 2-3rds cup creamy or crunchy peanut butter, and 2 cloves garlic, minced or pressed. Cook over medium heat, stirring, until mixture boils and thickens. Remove from heat and stir in 2 tablespoons brown sugar, 1½ tablespoons lemon juice, 1 tablespoon soy sauce, and ¼ to ½ teaspoon crushed red pepper. Let cool to room temperature before serving.

If made ahead, cover and refrigerate until next day; to reheat, cook over medium-low heat, stirring, until hot. Thin with water, if necessary, to make a medium-thick sauce. Makes about 2 cups.

From "Oriental Cookbook" (Lane).

"After 38 years, we finally won the war against roaches."

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Baxley, Kansas City, Kansas.

"We sprayed over and over again— and still had roaches. Combat is the only thing we found that kills roaches for three whole months."

"We have lived in the same house for at least 38 years and even though we tried everything, we still had a roach problem.

After using Combat,® we virtually eliminated our roach problem."

"We followed the instructions to the letter."

"We put the Combat discs in the kitchen—on shelves, under the sink, near the range and refrigerator, on cabinet tops, and inside food and dish cabinets. We also put them in the bathroom—under the sink and behind the toilet.

We did the whole thing in 10 or 15 minutes.

Another thing that we like so much is you can hide them—out of sight."

"Combat is convenient. No odor. No mess."

"There was always a terrible odor with sprays. We'd have to raise the windows to let the darn stuff out of the house. It was awful.

For large roaches, water and palmetto bugs

For small roaches

KILLS WITHOUT A TRACE

More powerful than leading sprays or foggers.

With Combat, there's no odor, no mess, no bother. There's just no comparison with sprays."

"It's better because it works for three months."

"We started using Combat more than a year ago. Combat lasts so long we only have to replace the Combat discs every three months. Now, our roach problem is really under control."

Combat is a new, completely different roach killer. So exclusive, it's patented. So powerful, it kills more roaches in a three-month period than repeated applications of sprays and foggers.

Combat's powerful roach killer is contained in child-proof, spill-proof discs. It's dry, so there's no possibility of evaporation.

Simply place the Combat discs according to directions—10 in the kitchen, 2 in the bathroom. Wherever you've seen roaches. Even where you wouldn't dare spray. In food and dish cabinets. In silver and utensil drawers.

With Combat, there are no fumes, odor, oily film or contamination worry.

Replace Combat discs every three months, and you can virtually eliminate your roach problem.

We're so confident Combat works, we guarantee it. Or your money back.

Pudding made with apples, currants

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

CLAIRE'S PUDDING

An elegant version of a homey favorite.

⅓ cup dried currants
¼ cup brandy
¼ cup butter
3 medium (1¼ pounds) Golden Delicious apples (peeled, cored and thinly sliced to make 4 cups)
2½ cups cubed (1-inch) French bread, dried
4 large eggs
1¾ cups milk
⅓ cup heavy cream
⅓ cup firmly packed dark brown sugar
½ cup chopped (medium fine) walnuts mixed with 2 tablespoons dark brown sugar

Soak currants in brandy, covered, at room temperature overnight. In a 12-inch skillet, melt butter and cook apples gently until transparent.

Off heat, add bread cubes and toss until they absorb butter; stir in currants and any brandy not absorbed.

Turn into a buttered 1½-quart souffle dish. Beat eggs slightly; add milk, cream and sugar; beat to blend; pour over bread mixture; sprinkle with walnut mixture.

Place in a baking pan; fill pan with enough boiling water to come halfway up souffle dish.

Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a knife inserted in center comes out clean — 1 to 1½ hours. Serve warm with heavy cream. Makes 8 servings.

Rack of lamb easily prepared

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

ROAST RACK OF LAMB

8-rib rack of lamb, in one piece (about 2¼ pounds)
Salt and pepper
1 tablespoon butter
¼ cup fine dry bread crumbs
2 tablespoons parsley leaves, minced
1 clove garlic, minced

Have butcher trim fat from surface of the meat and saw or crack about 1 inch from the bottom between each rib for ease in carving.

With a knife, gently push down the meat between the tops of the ribs, leaving about 1 inch bone exposed.

Line a 13 by 9 by 2-inch roasting pan with foil. Place the rack of lamb in the roasting pan, lying flat and meat side down; sprinkle with salt and pepper.

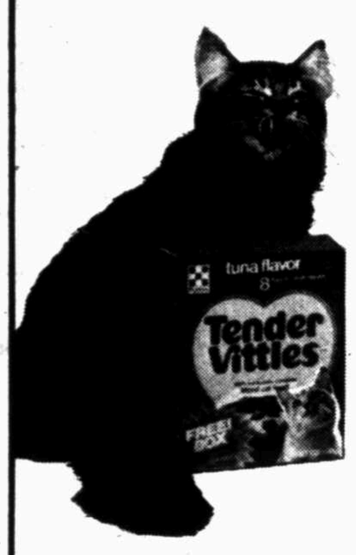

Roast on the middle rack of a preheated 500-degree oven for about 15 minutes; leave oven control at 500 degrees.

In a small skillet, melt butter. Off heat, stir in bread crumbs, parsley and garlic. Remove pan from the oven, turn lamb over and spread the meat side with crumb mixture. Return pan to oven and roast lamb about 10 minutes longer. Makes 4 servings.

Carve rack of lamb by cutting off each rib at the table. Or, carve rack in the kitchen and arrange on a heated serving platter.

Note: These directions yield well-done ribs at end of roast and medium-rare ribs at the center.

Experienced child cooks discover joy in the kitchen

By LOUISE LAGUE
The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

One of the great joys of being the family cook is not being the family cook now and then.

Wise is the cook who hums and sings about her work, Huck Finn-style, and makes it look like so much fun that everybody else is itching to get a crack at it.

Lucky is the family cook who, every now and then, reads magazines until suppertime, then ambles over to the dinner table when the bell clangs, just like everybody else.

Lucky, and a little street-smart, too; it pays to teach the kids that cooking is as artsy-craftsy as finger-painting or Play Doh, and let them take it from there.

ACTUALLY, TEACHING or forcing a child to cook never seems to work. The most enthusiastic kid cooks always seem to be the unlikeliest candidates.

If there is a bully in our neighborhood, it is 5-year-old Jason, and yet it is Jason who surprised his mother in her sickbed with a croissant stuffed with swiss cheese and carefully melted to perfection in the toaster oven, plus a glass of flat ginger ale and a sliver of cake.

I once babysat for a terror named Andrea who, at 18 months, showed an alarming proclivity for sharp knives. Today, at age 8, she is an accomplished (and unscarred) salad chef.

And it was my brother Dick, the unholiest of the three children in our family, who had the energy to bounce out of bed on weekend mornings and scramble the eggs, with the accents (peppers, cheese, onions, garlic, sausage) growing more sophisticated as he grew older.

One of the best ways to get children to cook is to not cook for them. "But," warns an experienced mother of three, "be sure to have all the ingredients around."

Early experimentation is apt to take place between meals during the bottomless-pit teen-age years, and it is not likely to include a trip to the supermarket.

IF EXPENSIVE experimentation is a problem (and anything involving chocolate these days is expensive), perhaps the family cook could leave the recipe lying around too. There is great satisfaction for some children in following all the steps and making it come out looking just like the picture.

Andrew Anello, 13, began to cook because he is always hungry. "He just puts all sorts of things together," says his mother, "then he puts it in the oven to kill whatever bacteria there might be from all these leftovers hanging around."

Tom Brawley, 17, is a master cake-baker, but his mother can't bake a cake to save her life, which is no coincidence. "I never had any sweets in the house and never bought any desserts," says Peggy, his mom. "First thing I know, he's putting all these ingredients together and making cakes. Now he makes all our cakes."

Melissa and Gillian Lord are 12-year-old twins who held the inevitable pajama party not long ago. At midmorning, they soothed their parents' unslept souls with magnificent bacon-and-apple pancakes.

For the very young cook, there is terrific joy in watching cheese melt and eggs fry. It must look something like magic.

MY NIECE Molly, 12, routinely makes eggs-in-a-hole. (Cut a shape out of a slice of bread with a cookie cutter, place in buttered skillet, drop egg in hole, cook.) She also loves making english-muffin pizzas and melting cheese on top of rice cakes in the toaster oven.

Christiane Anello, 10, makes melted cheese and tomato sandwiches in pita bread, and is now lobbying for her own toaster oven.

And what posture should the family cook take toward these infringements on her turf? Applause for these efforts should be thunderous, if not deafening.

It doesn't matter if the five basic food groups are not represented in each meal, or if you have to trim a little blackened crust. So what if you're hungry again an hour later?

What's important is to get the little substitute to realize the magic of the chemistry in cooking, the joy of creativity and the nice afterglow of positive feedback. The job of family cook, after all, is one that can be shared often — and still be there.

BACON AND APPLE PANCAKES

(8 to 10 pancakes)
6 slices bacon
2 apples
1 cup sifted flour
1-2 teaspoon baking soda
3-4 teaspoon baking powder
1 egg
1 cup buttermilk
1 tablespoon melted butter
1-2 teaspoon salt

Fry the bacon until brown, drain on paper towels, let cool, and crumble. Peel and slice the apples thinly, saute' briefly in bacon fat remaining in skillet. Remove from skillet and drain on paper towels. Pour off fat. Combine dry ingredients (flour, baking soda, baking powder) in a bowl. In another bowl, mix egg, milk, butter and salt. Add dry ingredients and combine. Stir in bacon and apples. Drop in ladlefuls onto hot skillet. When bubbles form around the edges, turn once and cook for about 1 minute more.

CHOCOLATE CAKE LIKE MOMMA DOESN'T MAKE

For the cake:
1-2 cup cocoa
3-4 cup boiling water
1-2 cup butter
2 cups sugar
1-2 cup sour cream
1 teaspoon vanilla
1-2 teaspoon baking soda
1-8 teaspoon salt
2 cups cake flour, sifted
3 egg whites beaten stiff
Butter and flour for pan

For the icing:
1-2 cup brown sugar
1-2 cup water
2 tablespoons butter
2 squares (2 ounces) unsweetened chocolate
2 cups confectioners' sugar
Dash of salt
1 teaspoon vanilla

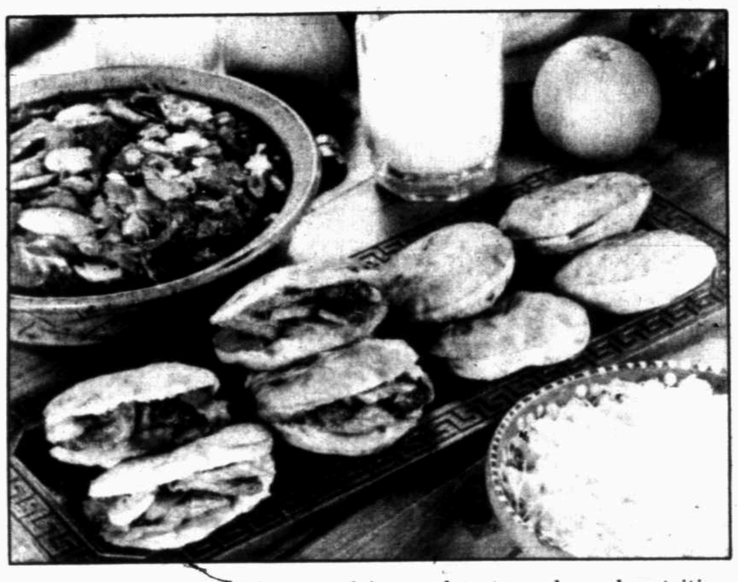

To make the cake, dissolve cocoa in hot water and allow to cool. Cream the butter, adding sugar slowly. Add cocoa mixture and sour cream. Add vanilla. Fold in flour to which salt and baking soda have been added. Fold in beaten egg whites. Butter and flour two 9-inch round layer cake pans, divide batter between them, and bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes. Cool before removing from pan.

To make the icing, boil brown sugar, water, butter and chocolate about 5 minutes, until chocolate melts. Put confectioners' sugar in a bowl with the salt, and slowly add the boiled mixture and vanilla, beating by hand constantly until smooth and of proper icing consistency. Spread icing between cooled cake layers and ice top and sides.

Pita sandwiches excel in taste and nutrition

Nutritionists recommend lighter meals focusing on low fat and cholesteral, and more vegetables and complex carbohydrates. If the usual menus fall short of these recommendations, try Stir-Fry Pockets and Meatball Stew. Both recipes excel in good taste and good nutrition.

Stir-Fry pockets contain all four food groups neatly packaged in fun-to-eat treats. Stir-frying — quickly stirring ingredients over medium-high heat in a small amount of oil — saves valuable nutrients.

Pocket pita sandwiches excel in good taste and good nutrition. Stir-Fry pockets combine all four food groups neatly packaged in fun-to-eat treats.

STIR-FRY POCKETS

1-1/2 cups thinly sliced broccoli (1 small stalk)
2 small carrots, thinly sliced
1/2 red pepper, coarsely diced
3 tablespoons oil
1 cup sliced fresh mushrooms
1/2 package (6 oz.) frozen pea pods, cut in half crosswise
1/4 cup sliced green onions
3/4 pound beef top round steak, very thinly sliced
1/2 cup water
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
1-1/2 teaspoons cornstarch
1/2 teaspoon ground ginger
1/4 teaspoon garlic salt
6 medium or 8 small pita bread pockets (preferably whole wheat)
1/2 cup shredded Cheddar cheese

Stir-fry broccoli, carrots and pepper in two tablespoons oil in wok or skillet over medium-high heat for three minutes. Add mushrooms, pea pods and onions; stir-fry three minutes or until vegetables are tender-crisp. Remove vegetables. Stir-fry beef in remaining one tablespoon oil three minutes until loses red color. Combine water, Worcestershire sauce, cornstarch, ginger and garlic salt; add to meat in wok. Cook and stir until thickened. Return vegetables to wok; heat through. Spoon into pita bread; top with cheese. Makes four to six servings.

MEATBALL STEW

1 egg, slightly beaten
1 tablespoon milk
1/2 cup soft whole wheat bread curmbs (1 slice)
1/2 cup finely chopped onion
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon ground allspice
1/2 teaspoon garlic powder
Pepper to taste
1 pound lean ground beef
Water
1 cup dry white wine
1 envelope (3/4 oz.) brown gravy mix
2 medium-size sweet potatoes, peeled and cut into 1-1/2-inch pieces
1 jar (16 oz.) whole boiled onions, drained
1 package (9 oz.) frozen cut green beans
1 tablespoon cornstarch

Combine egg, milk, bread crumbs, onion, salt, allspice, 1/4 teaspoon garlic powder and 1/4 teaspoon pepper. Add ground beef; mix well. Shape into 16 meatballs. Brown in large Dutch oven over medium heat. Remove meatballs and pour off excess fat. Combine 1 cup water, wine, gravy mix and remaining 1/4 teaspoon garlic powder; add to Dutch oven. Add meatballs and sweet potatoes; bring to boil. Simmer 20-30 minutes, covered, or until potatoes are just tender. Add onions and green beans; simmer five to seven minutes or until beans are tender. Combine cornstarch with two tablespoons cold water; stir into stew.

Caffeine boosts aspirin's effects

CHICAGO (AP) — Aspirin and other over-the-counter pain relievers that contain the amount of caffeine found in one or two cups of coffee are about 40 percent more effective than those without the substance, according to a report today.

The study was underwritten by the maker of a pain reliever that contains caffeine.

"Taking two tablets of an analgesic with caffeine would be about the same (in giving relief) as taking three tablets without caffeine," Eugene M. Laska, of the Rockland Research Institute in Orangeburg, N.Y., wrote in today's Journal of the American Medical Association.

But the research did not look at whether drinking coffee and taking plain aspirin could have the same effect as taking caffeinated pain relievers.

"I have no idea whether you're getting the same effect because of the variety of other chemical constituents in coffee," Laska said in a telephone interview Thursday. "It's possible. The studies just didn't look at that."

Laska and his colleagues analyzed 30 studies of pain relievers — most containing 65 milligrams of caffeine per tablet, or 130 milligrams per dose — involving more than 10,000 patients over the past 20 years.

"We're talking about the amount of caffeine in one or two cups of coffee," Laska said.

The studies, conducted at independent research institutes, concluded that "to obtain the same amount of response from an analgesic without caffeine requires a dose that is approximately 40 percent greater (on an average) than one with caffeine."

Caffeine was also shown to speed the action of acetaminophen by 20 percent to 30 percent in four of the 30 studies, Laska said. Acetaminophen is the generic name for the active ingredient in Tylenol and several other non-aspirin over-the-counter pain relievers.

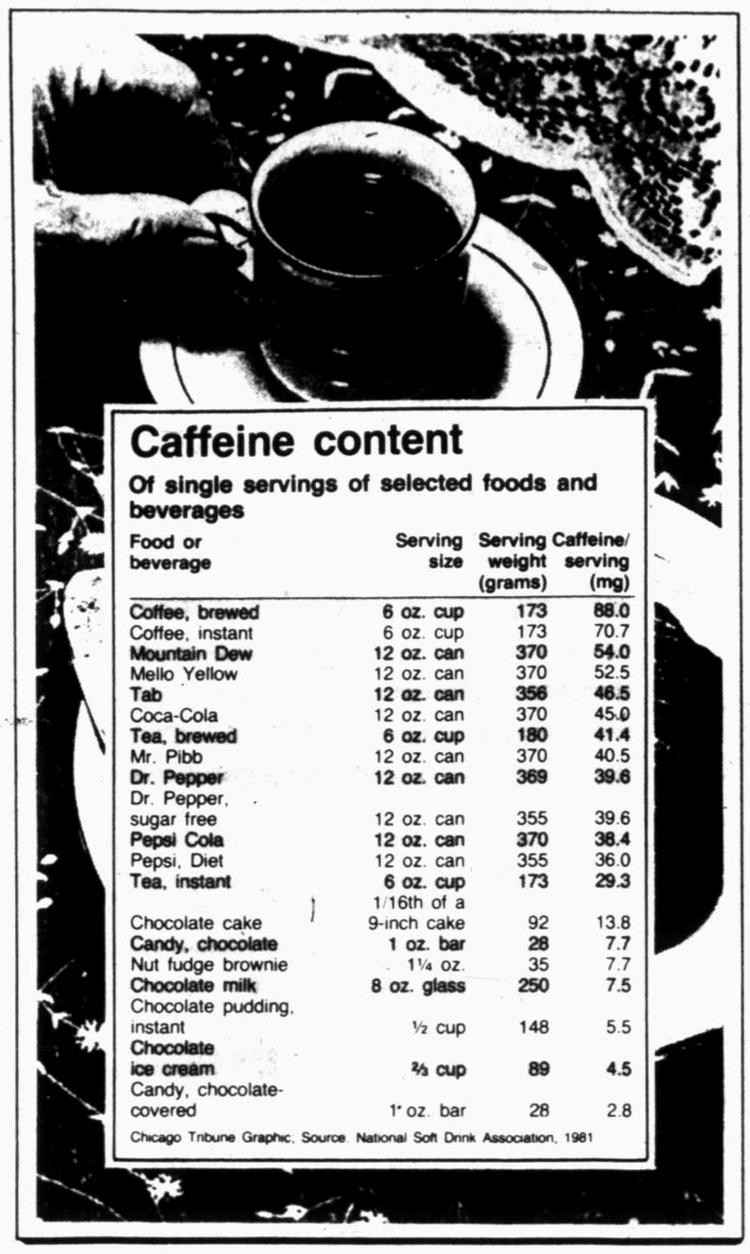

Mood enhancement may be part of caffeine's effect, and "for many patients, this could be of considerable clinical importance," the report said.

Women suffering pain from uterine cramps or surgical incisions after giving birth comprised most of the subjects, but oral surgery patients, headache sufferers and cancer victims were affected in the same way, an accompanying editorial in the medical journal noted.

The findings are significant because most over-the-counter pain relievers can be toxic if users exceed maximum recommended doses, said the editorial by Dr. William T. Beaver of Georgetown University Schools of Medicine and Dentistry in Washington, D.C.

"Given the small repertoire of over-the-counter analgesic constituents available, the addition of caffeine seems to be a safe and useful way to extend (their) efficacy," Beaver wrote.

Because their separate findings were not statistically significant, most of the individual studies have never been published, the researchers said. Designing a clinical trial sensitive enough to test mild pain relievers is difficult, they added.

Mushrooms: The fabulous fungus

By DESIREE VIVEA
Copley News Service

All right, so "sauteed fungus" doesn't sound exactly appetizing. But use the word "mushrooms," instead — and if you're like me, your mouth starts watering in eager anticipation.

Lacking leaves or roots, and unable to perform photosynthesis, this edible fungus is among the simplest of plants. And it's simply delicious added to soups, stews, egg dishes, casseroles, salads or just about anything that could use a touch of gourmet elegance.

Whenever I'm cooking with mushrooms, I always set out more than I plan to use. I just can't seem to refrain from nibbling on the little dears, and I'm lucky if half of them make it into the pot.

Mushrooms are mostly water (88 percent). Evaporation during shipping and storage may result in a rather shriveled product by the time it reaches the market. So be selective when you shop, and feel free to pick through your store's fungus section for only the best-looking ones. Those which have partially evaporated will have open caps, and will be tougher and less flavorful. Really fresh mushrooms will have tightly closed caps, with no gills showing, and no blemishes.

With most vegetables, smaller means more tender and flavorful. This rule does not apply to mushrooms, and larger ones are just as tasty as small. However, the stems are tougher than the caps, so it's a good idea to choose mushrooms with as much cap, and as little stem, as possible.

Wash mushrooms by wiping with a damp cloth, by rinsing briefly under the tap or by swishing for a few moments in a bowl of cold water. Dry immediately with paper towels. Never soak, or mushrooms will become waterlogged and soggy. If you peel mushrooms, you're paring away much of the flavor. Leave the skin, and the flavor, intact.

Today's recipes feature the "fabulous fungus" — try one of these, or add a handful of mushrooms to your favorite dishes. You'll be adding subtle flavor, delicate texture and a touch of elegance.

STROGANOFF CASSEROLE

1 (1 lb.) beef top round steak
3 tbsps. flour
¼ tsp. each salt, pepper and paprika
1½ tbsps. vegetable oil
1 clove garlic, crushed
1 cup beef broth, canned or from bouillon
4 ozs. egg noodles, uncooked
¼ lb. fresh mushrooms, washed and sliced
2 tbsps. fresh chopped parsley
½ cup sour cream

Slice beef into thin, ⅛-inch strips. (This is easier to do if meat is partially frozen.) In paper sack, mix together flour, salt, pepper and paprika. Close top and shake. Add meat slices to bag and shake again to evenly coat meat.

Pour oil into bottom of 9-by-5-inch glass loaf pan. Add crushed garlic and microwave 15 seconds at HIGH. Spread beef strips evenly in bottom of pan and cover with two layers of plastic wrap. Microwave at 50 percent power (MEDIUM) for 6 minutes, stirring once halfway through cooking time, and rotating dish ¼-turn.

Pour beef broth into glass measuring cup. Microwave at HIGH for 2 minutes, until hot. Pour over beef strips, adding raw noodles, mushrooms and parsley. Stir gently to mix. Cover again with plastic wrap and microwave at 50 percent power (MEDIUM) for 12 minutes, stirring once halfway through cooking time.

Remove from oven, stir in sour cream, cover and let stand for several minutes before serving.

SAVORY MUSHROOM APPETIZERS

½ lb. medium-size fresh mushrooms
4 slices bacon
2 tbsps. minced onion
1 slice fresh, soft bread, torn into small pieces
⅛ tsp. pepper
⅛ tsp. garlic salt
Dash dried parsley
2 tbsps. water
Paprika

Wash mushrooms and dry carefully. Remove stems, chop and set aside. Place bcon strips on microwave bacon rack, paper plate or glass plate. Cover with paper towels and microwave about 4 minutes, or until cooked. Chop fine with sharp knife.

In bowl, blend together mushroom stems, bacon, onion, bread pieces, seasonings (except paprika) and water. Mound filling into mushroom caps and arrange on microwave-safe serving plate.

Sprinkle lightly with paprika and cover with waxed paper. Microwave 2 to 2½ minutes, until hot. Makes 25 to 30 appetizers.

Meat muffins offer variety

MEAT LOAF MUFFINS

Good way to vary a sandwich.

Slice cold meat loaf and brown slices on both sides in a little butter or oil in a skillet. Meanwhile split and toast English muffins; spread surfaces with a blue cheese spread; sandwich together with the hot meat loaf; cut each sandwich in half.

To make a blue cheese spread, mash together blue cheese and cream cheese until smooth, seasoning with Worcestershire sauce or sherry.

Some people don't know their electric bills can be about the same all year round.

Some do.

The Average Payment Plan will put you in the know; and just in time to take the heat off your hot weather bills.

You'll still pay for all the electricity you use. But under the Average Payment Plan, your bills will be more even all year round.

The plan is based on a 12-month average that's refigured each month. So you can pay less during the months you use the most electricity, by paying more during the months you use less.

The Average Payment Plan is available to Texas Electric residential customers. So look into it today. It's definitely worth knowing about.

Salt consumption can be reduced

By DESIREE VIVEA
Copley News Service

Animals will journey miles to a "salt lick" to satisfy their craving for the stuff. Aren't you doing the same thing when you drive two miles out of your way to a fast-food place for a large order of salty fries?

Not hardly. Animals are likely to seek out salt because of a real physical need for it — while most of us go for salty foods because we like the taste.

Table salt contains 40 percent sodium, an element necessary to the body for proper water distribution, muscle contraction and nerve stimulation. Sure, we need salt, but not much. Only one-tenth of a teaspoon a day is enough to maintain normal bodily functions, but most Americans ingest from twice to 30 times that amount daily.

Today's consumer is pretty well informed about the dangers of a salty diet. We all know that such a diet can lead to high blood pressure and heart disease, and many people are taking steps to cut back on the amount of salt they use. If you have high blood pressure, or want to prevent it, there are a few simple things you can do to ease up on salt.

Leave the salt shaker off the table. Instead, use herbs or lemon juice as seasonings. Don't add salt to cooking water or recipes. Avoid obviously salty foods (potato chips, pickles, pretzels, etc.), and don't eat at fast-food restaurants — they're notorious for heavily salted foods.

Some processed foods, even though they don't taste salty, do contain high sodium levels. Processed meats, bakery goods and snack foods, cheese (even cottage cheese!), canned soups and commercial sauces and relishes can contain hidden amounts of salt, and sometimes a lot of it. Instant pudding and instant cereals may be quite high in salt, even though you don't taste it.

How can you tell how much salt is hidden in a processed food? Right now it's a little difficult. But starting in July of 1985, manufacturers will be required to list the sodium content on the labels of packaged processed foods. Consumers who want to avoid salty foods will then know which ones NOT to buy.

There is evidence that potassium in the diet may act to reduce the body's sodium level. We need far more potassium every day than we do sodium. Good sources are fresh fruits, vegetables, flours and grains, nuts and seeds (unsalted!).

If you do have high blood pressure, or are worried about it, see a doctor. Eat more fresh, unprocessed foods, and leave that salt shaker on the shelf.

Microwave recipes salt-free

Copley News Service

The following microwave recipes "go easy on the salt" for those concerned about their salt consumption.

NO SALT MEATBALLS
1 lb. ground beef
1 egg
½ cup bread
1 clove garlic, crushed
2 tbsps. red wine
½ tsp. oregano
¼ tsp. paprika
Dash pepper

In bowl, mix together all ingredients, blending well. Shape into 12 balls, nd arrange in circle on 10-inch glass pie plate; cover with waxed paper.

Microwave 10 to 12 minutes, rotating dish ½-turn after 5 minutes, and turning meatballs over. Let stand 1 minute before serving. Makes 12 meatballs.

HOMEMADE RELISH
1 tbsp. prepared mustard
1 tbsp. packed brown sugar
2 tsps. white vinegar
2 tsps. lemon juice
1 clove garlic, crushed
2 cups finely chopped tomatoes
½ cup minced celery
½ cup minced green pepper
¼ cup minced green onions

Combine mustard, brown sugar, vinegar, lemon juice, and garlic in 1½-quartcasserole. Stir to blend, and microwave 1 minute, uncovered. Add remaining ingredients and microwave 2 minutes longer, uncovered.

Stir well and refrigerate at least 1 hour before serving. (This allows flavors to blend.) Keep refrigerated. Serve on hamburgers, hot dogs, etc. Makes about 3 cups.

HOT CURRY CHICKEN
1 cup mayonnaise
2 tbsps. lemon juice
5 cups cubed cooked chicken
2 cups finely chopped celery
½ cup slivered almonds
2 green onions, finely chopped
½ tsp. curry powder
Dash pepper

Combine all ingredients in 2-quart glass bowl or casserole. Stir to blend wll and cover with lid or plastic wrap. Microwave 3 minutes; stir and rotate dish ¼-turn. Microwave 3 minutes longer. Let stand, covered, 3 minutes before serving. Serve on rice, noodles, or bread as a hot sandwich. Makes about 4 servings.

LIVING TODAY

Older persons also need good health habits

By SHARON A. HILLIS

For older Texans, healthy habits can make a difference. The theme for this year's older Texan month is "Health — Make It Last A Lifetime."

Past health habits may not be worth bragging about, but if they are changed for the better now, they can increase the chance for longer, healthier, more enjoyable lives. Experts in aging say developing positive habits in diet, exercise and stress management can help anyone, no matter their age.

To develop positive dietary habits, first take a critical look at daily diet. Eating a nutritious balanced diet and avoiding excessive amount of sugar, salt, fat, alcohol and calories is important. Changing eating habits at age 60 cannot completely erase the results of a lifetime of poor nutrition, but an increase in healthy eating practices can benefit health status and feeling of well being.

Losing excess weight may help arthritics be more mobile with less pain; increasing water and fiber intake can enable some people to discontinue laxatives; and reducing salt can contribute to lowered blood pressure.

Exercise is important, too. Regular exercise increases circulation, flexibility, strength, coordination and stamina. Exercise improves physical and mental outlook and strengthens the heart.

An exercise program doesn't have to be complicated. Walking, dancing, swimming or even a movement routine performed sitting in a chair can be a healthy exercise program. Whatever the program, a regular exercise program of at least 15-20 minutes, three times a week is effective.

Coping with and reducing stress has been linked to health and happiness. Chronic stress can lead to high blood pressure, ulcers and depression. Everyone has some stress in his life, but too much can be a threat to health. Recognize stressful events and find some ways to deal with that stress.

Plenty of help is available to help improve diet, begin an exercise program or reduce stress. Free nutrition and stress control information is provided at the public library or County Extension office. Hobbies, friends, family and religious activities can help some people deal with stress.

Senior citizens centers, community education programs and Extension offices also sponsor special programs in which people can socialize while learning about nutrition and exercise.

To make health last a lifetime, start improving health habits now.

Sharon A. Hillis is Midland County Extension Agent, Home Economics.

'Grazing' changes U.S. eating habits

Hearst Feature Service

Real meals — the meat-and-potatoes variety prepared from scratch and eaten at home by real men and real women — are becoming passe, say food and nutrition experts. In their place, diners — particularly younger working people — are grabbing garden variety snacks on the run at salad bars and fast-food restaurants.

The food experts have coined a name for this change in eating habits: They call it "grazing," to refer to eating lighter snack-style meals on impulse, rather than three square meals a day.

The experts point to these changes as evidence that a generation of grazers — young adults brought up on McDonald's and other fast-food in the '50s and '60s — has come of age and is having a pronounced impact on the types of food sold in supermarkets and restaurants:

— Restaurants are altering their menus in favor of lighter fare, to reflect increased concern for the effect of diet on health.

— Finger foods, such as zucchini sticks, potato skins and nacho chips, are proliferating at restaurants to satisfy a generation of snackers.

— Supermarket produce sections are expanding to offer a wider variety of fresh vegetables.

— Salad bars are springing up in supermarkets and restaurants.

— Sales of frozen dinners and other pre-packaged foods are increasing.

Two factors underly the trend: Busy lifestyles and increased concern about diet and health, according to the experts.

Grazing and nutrition are not necessarily in conflict, according to Ruth Klippstein, a professor at Cornell University's Division of Nutritional Sciences.

"Certainly people can subsist on a fast-food diet. If you choose corectly, you can do a good job," she said. "There's nothing wrong with fast food. You have to know what you're doing. You have to choose, for example, orange juice over soda."

According to the National Restaurant Association, diners are beginning to choose more wisely. A Gallup survey conducted for the association in August found that 40 percent of those polled said they had changed the food they ordered in restaurants to reflect concern about nutrition.

Four in 10 adults surveyed said they were eating more fruits, vegetables and whole grains and less refined sugar, animal fat or salt when dining out.

The largest change — mentioned by a quarter of those who had altered their restaurant eating habits — was the decreased consumption of salt.

Dorothy Dee, the restaurant association's manager of media relations, said the survey found those groups most likely to have improved their restaurant eating habits were women, people 25 and older, college graduates and people with annual household incomes over $30,000.

"The whole idea of light fare, such as salads and less fatty foods, started at upscale restaurants and is now in all segments of the industry," Dee said. "Chain hotel restaurants and fast-food chains are now offering salad bars, whole-grain buns and fruit juices. We do feel it is something that is seen across the board now."

As evidence of ongoing change, Dee noted that some fast food restaurants are experimenting with fish dishes to replace beef. In addition, some restaurant menus are using heart-shaped symbols to show that food has been prepared in accordance with American Heart Association guidelines.

There definitely is a trend toward more snacking, Dee said. Zucchini sticks, nacho chips and potato skins are popping up at "more and more" restaurants, she said. "People enjoy snacking. I think they like the idea of having a little bit of a lot of things."

Grilled shrimp 'simply delicious'

By OLIVIA and PAUL BENSEN
Copley News Service

One of the most enjoyable things about seafood, in addition to its variety, lightness and healthfulness, is the vast number of ways in which it can be prepared.

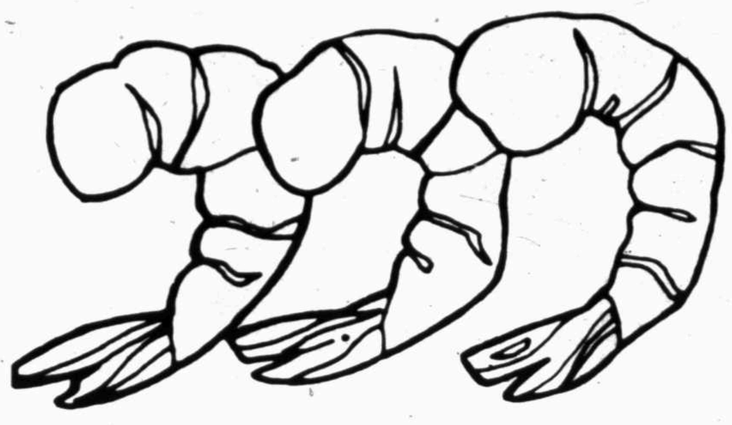

In the last several years, fresh seafood has become available yearround, in even the most inland portions of the United States and Canada, so seafood fanciers don't have to wait for a visit to the coast to indulge their taste for fish and shellfish.

Our recipe for today is for a simple but especially delicious way to prepare shrimp.

The jumbo shrimp in the recipe are somewhat more expensive per pound than the smaller sizes. Four of these outsized shrimp make a satisfying portion, however, and the big shrimp lend themselves to a variety of beautiful presentations.

When we prepared the dish recently, eight of the shrimp we used (big, even by "jumbo" standards) weighed 12 ounces. If the shrimp you buy are smaller, you may want to ncrease the number of shrimp per serving — as a rule of thumb, 6 ounces of unpeeled, headless shrimp make a good portion.

Rice makes an excellent accompaniment to the shrimp and hollandaise sauce. If you want a bit of hollandaise for the rice, increase the sauce recipe by half. Vegetables that go well with hollandaise, such as asparagus, broccoli and cauliflower, also would be good choices to serve with this dish.

Grilling the shrimp on a very hot griddle, after tossing them in a lemon juice-olive oil mixture, gives them an especially pleasing flavor, and one very different from the usual boiled or broiled shrimp.

Many cooks seem to avoid preparing their own sauces — maybe because they're afraid that they won't turn out well. Today's recipe for garlic hollandaise is very quick and easy to prepare.

The dry mustard and cayenne give it a bit of spiciness and the garlic brings out the flavor of the shrimp very well. The second time you make it, if you'd like the sauce to have a bit more tang, you may want to add a bit more cayenne or dry mustard.

GRILLED SHRIMP

8 jumbo shrimp
1 tbsp. lemon juice
1 tbsp. olive oil
Salt and pepper to taste

Shell and de-vein shrimp, leaving the tails on. In a fairly small bowl, mixthe lemon juice, olive oil, salt and pepper. Toss the shrimp well in the mixture.

Heat a griddle or heavy cast iron skillet over high heat. When very hot, grill the shrimp until they are brown on both sides (2 to 3 minutes per side).

Serve with individual bowls of garlic hollandaise for dipping. Serves two.

EASY GARLIC HOLLANDAISE SAUCE

4 to 6 cloves garlic, minced
2 tbsps. fresh lemon juice
4 egg yolks
½ tsp. salt
1 pinch white cayenne
½ tsp. dry mustard
1 stick unsalted butter

In a blender or food processor, blend the garlic, lemon juice, egg yolks, slt, pepper, cayenne and mustard. Melt the butter in a small skillet or saucepan until bubbling (it must be bubbling or the hollandaise will not thicken).

With the blender running on medium or high speed, slowly add the hot butter in a thin stream. Serve hot.

Makes about ¾ cup.

Note: For thicker hollandaise, or to reheat, the sauce may be placed over hot water in a double boiler.

Shrimp baked with herbs, spices

BAKED SHRIMP

1 pound (28 to 30) shrimp
¼-pound stick butter (½ cup)
1 cup fresh bread crumbs
2 tablespoons parsley leaves, minced
1 small scallion, minced
1 clove garlic, minced
½ teaspoon crushed dry thyme
½ teaspoon crushed dry tarragon
¼ teaspoon ground nutmeg
¼ cup dry sherry

Cook shrimp; shell and devein; arrange in a buttered 10 by 6 by 2-inch baking dish. In an 8-inch skillet melt butter; off heat stir in crumbs, parsley, scallion, garlic, thyme, tarragon, nutmeg and sherry. Sprinkle over shrimp. Bake in a preheated 400-degree oven until hot — about 10 minutes. Makes 4 servings. —(AP)

Sardines prepared with tomatoes

SARDINE TOMATOES

3¼-ounce can brisling sardines, drained
1 tablespoon lemon juice
Minced scallion
Mayonnaise
4 medium tomatoes, halved crosswise
Lettuce
Sliced cucumber
Paprika

Mash sardines with lemon juice, scallion and mayonnaise to taste. Arrange tomatoes cut side up, on lettuce on salad plates. Mound sardine mixture on tomatoes; top with cucumber; sprinkle cucumber with paprika. Makes 4 servings. —(AP)

Cioppino seafood dish native to California

Copley News Service

Most authorities agree that cioppino (pronounced "choh-PEEN-oh") was first prepared in this country in the San Francisco area, about the time of the Gold Rush. Many San Franciscans swear that the name comes from the cry of failed prospectors who carried cooking pots up and down the docks begging for a share of the returning fishermen's catch, calling "Chip in, oh!"

A more likely explanation, though by no means certain, is that the name originated with the Italian crews on fishing boats that docked in San Francisco Bay to sell their catch.

Cioppino can be varied almost endlessly. In the days of the Gold Rush it would include whatever seafood was most plentiful. The most popular ingredients are clams, mussels, crab, lobster, fish, shrimp and scallops.

Either red or white wine may be used in the broth, and seasonings may be varied to suit your preference.

This version of cioppino uses use cherrystone clams, mussels, grouper, bay scallops and Dungeness crab. The choice of Dungeness crab was a nod to tradition, since this native of the northern Pacific coastal waters is mentioned in many of the old recipes; king crab or snow crab would do just fine.

Cioppino is quite easy to prepare, the cost per serving was only about $3 and, best of all, the resulting dish is every bit as delicious as the ones along California's coast.

When you create your own version of cioppino, you may want to include some shrimp, as many of the traditional recipes do. Just peel and devein the shrimp and simmer them in the broth for the last 10 minutes of the cooking time. Instead of our mixture of clams and mussels, you may want to use one or the other, depending on your preference and local availability.

The crushed red pepper called for in our recipe makes the broth pungent, though not really hot. If you generally avoid spicy foods, you may want to reduce the amount or red pepper somewhat.

Be sure to scrub the clams, mussels and crab shells very well before cooking, so that no grit or sediment gets into the broth. Soaking the clams or mussels for 30 minutes to an hour in cold water with a tablespoon or two of dissolved cornstarch will help to remove any sediment inside the shells.

If you use whole crabs, remove the legs and claws, cut the body in half with a sharp knife, remove the gills and rinse out the shells carefully. Break the legs and body pieces into sections that can be managed easily at the table.

CIOPPINO

1 Dungeness crab
1 lb. grouper or other mild, firm-fleshed fish
12 live cherrystone clams
24 live mussels
½ lb. bay or sea scallops
1 cup chopped celery (4-6 stalks, plus some leafy tops)
1 cup chopped onion
4 scallions, sliced
2 green peppers, chopped
4 cups chopped fresh tomatoes
¼ cup olive oil
½ cup chopped fresh parsley
4 cloves garlic, finely chopped
4 cups clam/mussel broth (see instructions)
2 8-oz. bottles clam juice
1 small can tomato paste
2 tsps. dried thyme
½ tsp. crushed red pepper
1 large bay leaf
1 cup dry white wine

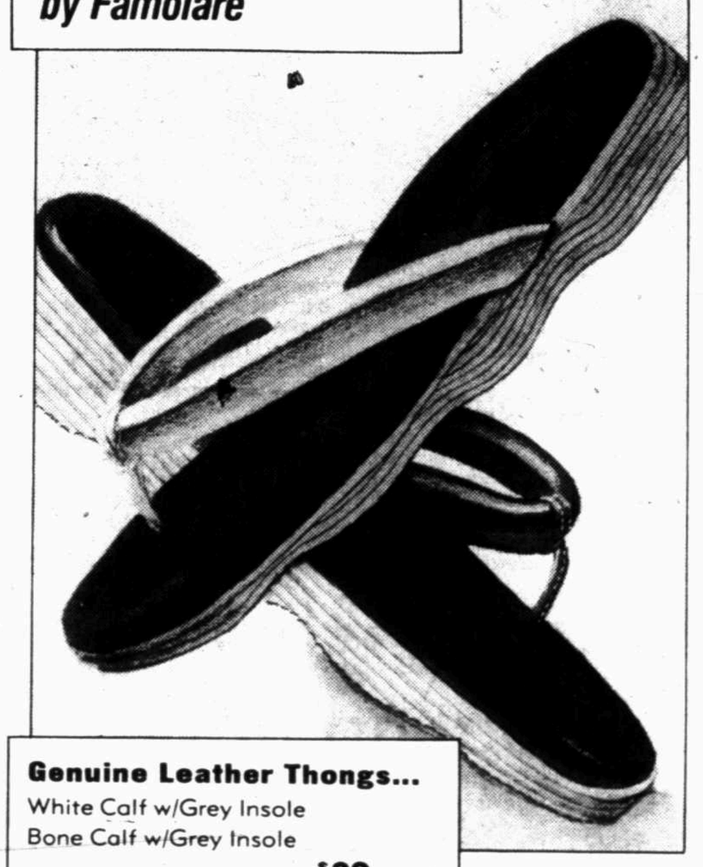

Soak the clams and mussels 30 minutes to an hour in cold water with 1-2 tabespoons dissolved cornstarch. In a steamer or large pot fitted with metal colander and loosely covered, steam clams and mussels until they open. Discard any that do not open. Strain 4 cups of broth and reserve. Set clams and mussels aside.

In a large soup pot or Dutch oven, heat the olive oil over medium heat and add the onion, garlic, celery, scallions, green pepper, tomatoes, parsley, thyme, red pepper and bay leaf. Saute until tomatoes are soft — about 10 minutes. Add salt and pepper to taste.

To vegetables, add the clam juice, reserved broth, wine and tomato paste. Mix in well.

Bring to a simmer, add the fish and simmer 10 minutes. Add scallops and crab and simmer 5 minutes more. Add clams and mussels in their shells, stirring gently. When the clams and mussels have heated through, serve in large soup bowls, dividing the ingredients evenly. Serves 6.

FISH ROLLS

The way a Southern cook makes them.
4 large or 6 small fish fillets (about 2 pounds)
¼ cup butter
2 tablespoons finely diced onion
2½ cups soft bread crumbs
½ cup chopped pecans
½ cup finely diced celery
2 tablespoons finely chopped parsley
Salt and pepper to taste
3 tablespoons water

Wash and dry fillets. In a medium skillet over low heat cook onion in butter until wilted; stir in bread crumbs, pecans, celery, parsley, salt and pepper; sprinkle with water and mix lightly.

Spread mixture over each fillet; roll up; place seam sides down in a 11½ by 8½ by 1¾-inch baking dish.

Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until fish is opaque through and flakes easily — about 30 minutes.

Makes 4 servings.

Spaghetti, clams unusual combination

CLAM SPAGHETTI

Simple but so satisfying for pasta devotees.
8-ounce package thin spaghetti
¼ cup fine grade olive oil
3 garlic cloves, crushed
10½-ounce can minced clams, undrained

Cook spaghetti, according to package directions; turn into a colander to drain. In the clean dry saucepot in which the spaghetti was cooked, heat oil and garlic; stir in clams and pasta; toss well over moderately low heat until pasta has absorbed clam juice and mixture is very hot. Serve at once or reheat in a microwave oven. Makes 2 large main-dish servings.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Thursday, May 17, 1984

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: One of America's most respected journalists, the late Stewart Alsop, was born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: welterweight champion Sugar Ray Leonard, Braves ace Pasqual Perez, singer Birgit Nilsson, actor-director Dennis Hopper and attorney Archibald Cox. Concentrate on one or two major goals and you will find new success in many areas. There is no way you can please every member of your family or team. Get all financial promises in writing. Romance can be better than ever if you keep mate informed of your plans. He/she wants to help but cannot operate in the dark.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A major change holds great appeal today. A friend or college chum helps you cut through red tape. A family emergency could arise late this afternoon. Plan on relaxing at home tonight.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Work should go smoothly. Refuse to be baited into revealing company secrets. You get a chance to star at a community or fraternal affair. Share the applause. Romance holds few surprises.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A work project could interfere with more pleasurable pursuits. Be patient. Expect good news regarding real estate or stock market investments. Research produces valuable data. Confidential meetings go well.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your head is full of new ideas and happy schemes. The long work hours that are part of your success formula could lead to conflict at home. Enlist mate's cooperation.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You could face greater financial responsibilities now. Encourage mate or partner to carry more of the load. A younger person holds the key to your future happiness.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A fine day to shop for clothes or furniture. An uninhibited person says something that shocks you. Act friendlier to an older relative or neighbor. Your patience will be rewarded.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Business activity intensifies. New financial gains put you in a celebrating mood. Specialized knowledge helps you implement your plans. Get together with family members or good friends tonight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Rely on logic, not emotion, when making business decisions. Travel proves profitable. Soft-pedal any differences with mate or co-worker. A change will be beneficial if you are the one to suggest it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): An excellent day to tackle something you have been postponing. A "new" idea may be an old one in disguise. Someone special has a positive influence on your thinking.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Domestic tension lessens following a heart-to-heart talk with loved one. A burst of energy lets you complete a difficult work assignment. Spend more time with a teenager.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Intellectual endeavors have splendid results. You make many new contacts. Potential allies spring up on all sides. A conversation with a newcomer could put thoughts of romance in your head.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your work performance is being evaluated. Redouble your efforts. Your reputation or prestige could be on the line. Spend the evening at home with those closest to your heart.

ABC still fairytale network

NEW YORK (AP) — When Henry Kissinger put in a cameo appearance on ABC's "Dynasty," he partied with Joan Collins. They were not talking foreign policy.

If you watch shows like "Dynasty," "The Love Boat" and "Hotel," you get lush lifestyles, expensive clothes and the beautiful people. If you want reality on ABC, you have to wait for Ted Koppel and "Nightline."

ABC, even with the cancellation of "Fantasy Island," remains the Fairytale Network.

ABC has made a lot of money and finished a healthy second to CBS the past five seasons with prime-time series that drip glitter and glamour, dreams and wishes.

ABC does not hold up a mirror to real life; it stares at the good life from behind sunglasses. On ABC, the carriage never turns into a pumpkin. The biggest problem its characters face is which dress to wear to the ball.

So, when ABC announced it would drop "Fantasy Island" after five years of making dreams come true, it didn't miss a beat with a replacement. "Finder of Lost Loves" stars Tony Franciosa as a widower who reunites couples who have drifted apart.

For ABC's objectives, the two shows are interchangeable. ABC wants to reach women at home on Saturday nights who wish they could be anywhere but home on Saturday nights. They used to travel on "The Love Boat" and get off on "Fantasy Island." Next season, after "The Love Boat" docks, they can search for "Lost Loves."

The shows all come from the same fantasy factory, Aaron Spelling Productions, which is ABC's exclusive supplier through 1988.

Spelling produced seven of ABC's 22 prime-time hours in 1983-84, and he'll control the same amount of time and programs this fall. Out are "Fantasy Island" and "Hart to Hart," in are "Finders of Lost Loves" and "Glitter," about a magazine that seeks out glamorous people and enchanting places.

ABC, which might stand for Aaron's Broadcasting Comp., also has Spelling's popular "Dynasty," "Love Boat," "Hotel," "Matt Houston" and "T.J. Hooker" — none of which will ever compete with "Hill Street Blues" for the Emmy as best dramatic series, an award ABC last won in 1970, with "Marcus Welby, M.D."

Not surprisingly, ABC is the No. 1 network among women aged 18 to 49 and the advertisers who want them. It doesn't matter that ABC's programs are anti-intellectual and propopcorn.

Opening lead: Nine of ♡.

Tournament players tend to complain about the distributional quirks of computer-dealt hands. However, hands dealt normally seem to be even wilder, and the Spring North American Championships in San Antonio produced more than its share of weird distributions. This one swung a match in the quarterfinals of the Vanderbilt Team Championship.

In one room North opened the bidding with six hearts and East overcalled seven diamonds. That contract was doubled and defeated five tricks. So East-West lost 900 points — hardly an optimum result, since North was going to have considerable difficulty at any heart contract.

In the other room the bidding proceeded at a somewhat more leisurely pace. East's two heart overcall showed spades and a minor suit. South introduced his club suit and North took a fair gamble when he elected to try a grand slam in clubs. East's double was lead-directing; it requested the lead of dummy's first-bid suit. South redoubled to warn partner not to run back to hearts.

Consider West's predicament. The opponents had reached a grand slam and he was on lead holding an ace in the unbid suit. Yet his partner had announced that he wanted a heart lead, so he either had the ace or, more likely, was void in the suit.

After much agonizing, West decided to lead a heart. East did ruff, but declarer overruffed, finessed West for the king of trumps successfully and claimed his grand slam.

The team captained by John Devine of Tenafly, N.J., gained 17 IMPS on this deal; had the grand slam been defeated, they would have lost 16 IMPs — a swing of 33 IMPs. They won this match by a margin of 30.

Inflation may reach 400 percent

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel's consumer price index climbed 20.6 percent in April, bringing the projected 1984 inflation rate to 400 percent, double that of a year ago, the Central Bureau of Statistics reports.

The April increase, announced Tuesday, was the highest ever for the month and the second highest in Israel's history after last October's 21.1 percent.

The jump in inflation is likely to be a key issue in the July 23 national elections and could hurt Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's chances of re-election.

The economic spokesman for the opposition Labor Party, favored in recent polls to win the elections, charged that the policies of Finance Minister Yigal Cohen-Orgad were producing "economic madness" and endangering the country's economic growth.

The spokesman, Gad Ya'Acobi, also blamed the inflation increase on Israel's 23-month-old involvement in Lebanon, which since the June 1982 invasion has cost the government an average of $1 million a day.

Officers seek Greek shopowner

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Police have issued a warrant for the arrest of a Greek shopowner whose pizza parlor in downtown Athens was the scene of an explosion that injured 53 people.

Michalis Mavroyannis was charged with negligence for failing to fix a gas leak in his shop, a police spokesman said Tuesday.

Three of the injured were in critical condition from severe burns and cuts received when Monday's blast showered broken glass and masonry onto a crowded street during the afternoon rush-hour, said a hospital spokesman.

The blast, which destroyed 30 shops and 10 offices, was caused by a leak in a hose attached to two gas canisters belonging to Mavroyannis' shop on the ground-floor of a nine-story office block, police said.

Sudan robber to have limbs amputated

KHARTOUM, Sudan (AP) — A martial court has convicted a man of armed robbery and ordered his right hand and left foot amputated, in accordance with Moslem law proclaimed in Sudan last fall, the official news agency reports.

The agency said Aly Hassan Abuanga was convicted Monday by the court in Omdurman, one of more than a dozen President Gaafar Nimeiri established after announcing a state of emergency April 29.

The agency did not say when the amputation would take place.

Seven convicted criminals have had one hand cut off since Nimeiri declared islamic law in September.

Exportation of chemicals to be banned

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The European Common Market has agreed in principle to prohibit exports of five compounds used to make chemical weapons.

The 10 member nations decided to impose joint controls on exports of "some chemical products which run the risk of being directly or indirectly delivered to countries at war," a statement by the Council of Foreign Ministers said Tuesday.
