Polish officials say Walesa free man

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Martial law authorities declared Solidarity chief Lech Walesa a free man Friday, and church sources said his family in Gdansk expected him home "before Sunday" after 11 months in detention.

A Warsaw television program called "Government Monitor" said after the main evening news that Walesa had been released from his "place" of internment, but it was not immediately clear if he had actually left the government resort lodge where he was held.

Government officials could not be reached to confirm the report, but the program had been recorded before the main news, which made no mention of Walesa leaving the Arlamow resort in southeast Poland.

An Interior Ministry spokesman said earlier that the order for Walesa's internment, issued at the start of martial law last Dec. 13, had been canceled. Sources close to the government said his transfer from a government resort in southeastern Poland near the Soviet border was only a matter of time.

"We know he will be brought straight to Gdansk, without any stops on the way, and that Mrs. Walesa was told he would be home before Sunday," said a church source in the Baltic seaport where Solidarity was formed during the 1980 summer of strikes.

Speculation that the decision to release Walesa was part of a new policy of conciliation was heightened when PAP, the official news agency, reported Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, the premier and Communist Party chief, visited the family of a Solidarity member who was shot and killed during a protest Oct. 13 in the steel city of Nowa Huta.

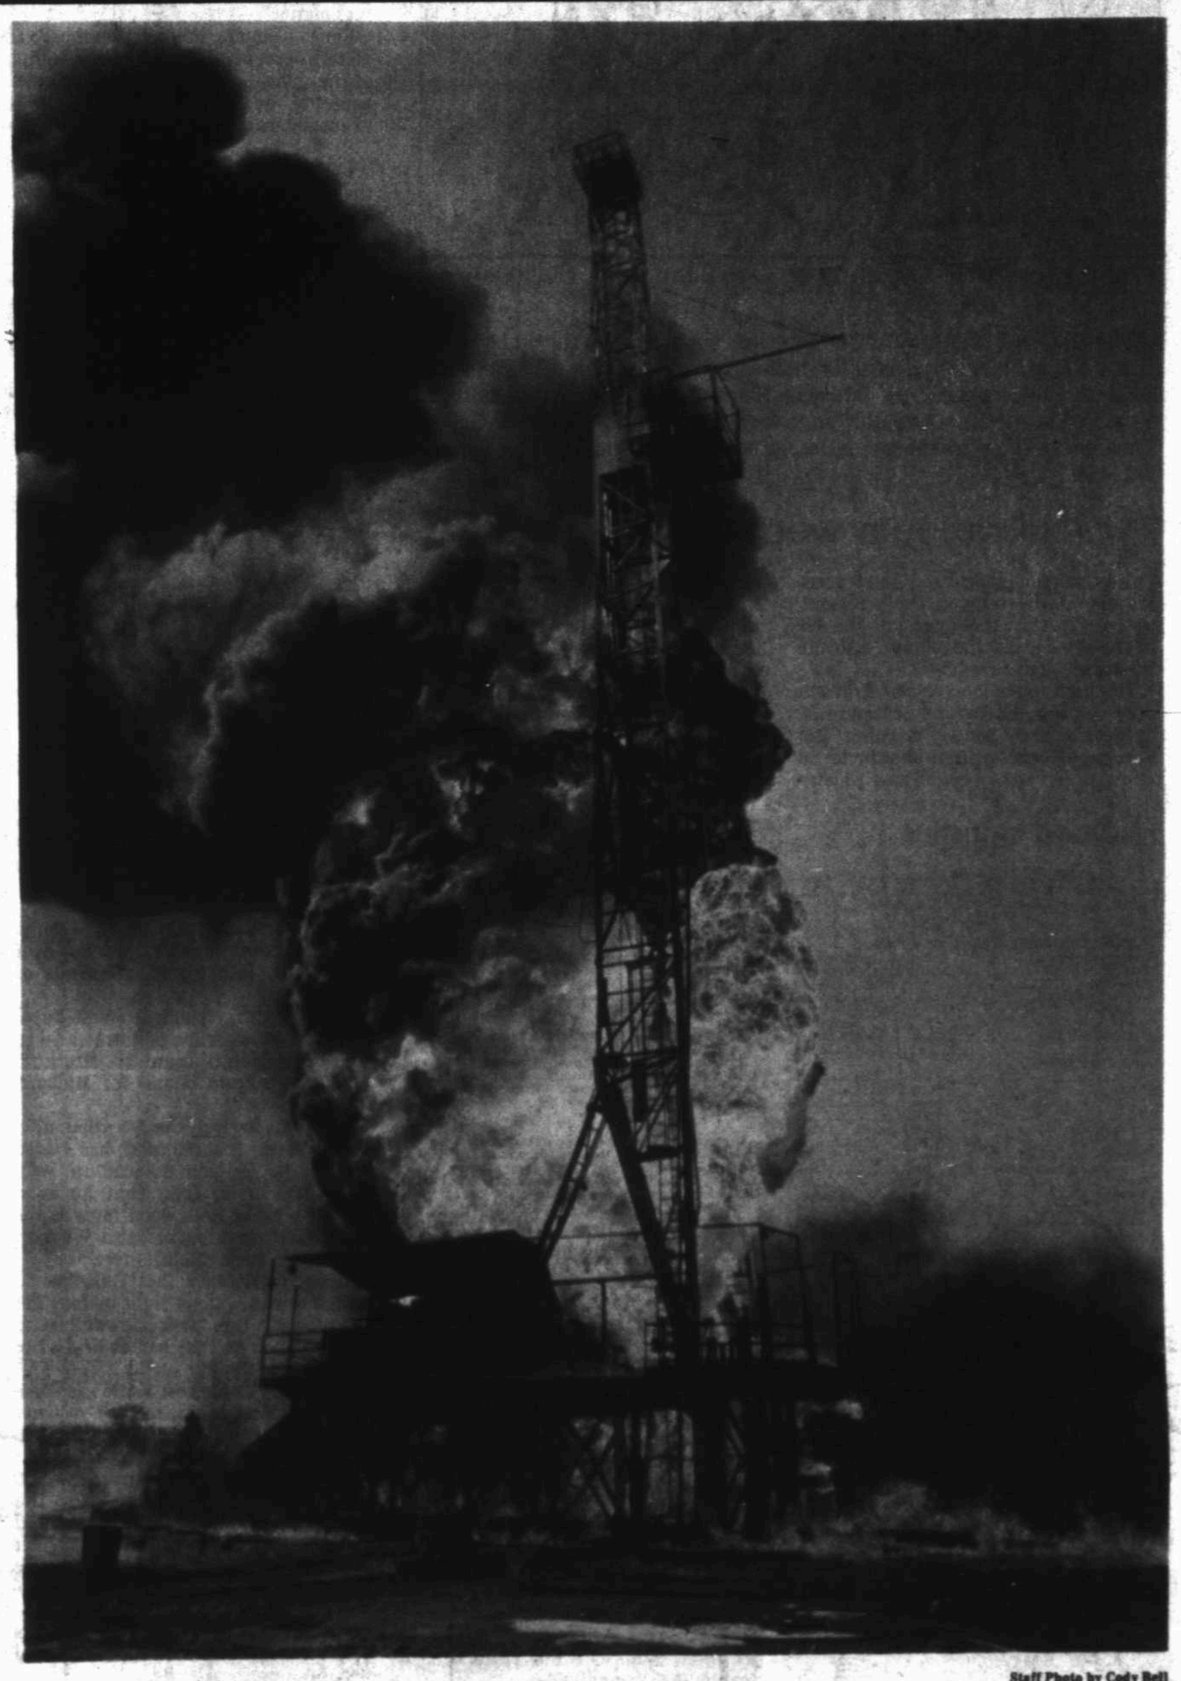

PAP indicated that Irena and Jozef Wlosik refused to cooperate in attempts to use the death of their son Bogdan to whip up anti-government disturbances. The report said Jaruzelski told them: "Our deepest respect goes to you because you did not succumb to emotions which could have resulted in further dramatic developments."

The Wlosiks replied: "We do not want this tragedy to visit other families," PAP said.

Their 20-year-old son was the 15th officially acknowledged victim of clashes with police since martial law was declared. He was killed during a demonstration protesting the outlawing of the independent labor union five days before.

Officials have said that the lifting of martial law, coupled with the release of most of the 700 remaining internees and an amnesty for Solidarity members sentenced for martial-law violations, could persuade the United States and its allies to lift their sanctions against Poland and restore the government credits needed to ease the acute economic crisis.

Polish government spokesman Jerzy Urban, in announcing Thursday that Walesa would be freed, said "no conditions were put to Walesa concerning his release."

Glasscock County rig fire burns off and on

GLASSCOCK COUNTY — Firefighters aided by heavy equipment from several Permian Basin companies finally subdued a stubborn drilling rig fire six miles south of Garden City on FM 33 about 7 p.m. Friday.

An explosion at the MAPCO Production Co. well, the No. 1-47 Wilkerson, about 1:30 a.m. Friday triggered the blaze, which flared intermittently for much of the morning and afternoon. The rig is perched on Section 47, Block 34, Township 4 south of the Texas & Pacific survey, and is owned by Willbros Drilling Inc. of Midland.

A MAPCO employee who declined to be named said that although a seven-man crew was working near the rig and several men were knocked down by the explosion, no one was hurt by the blast.

He said the drill apparently hit a "pressured-up" gas pocket. One crew member attempted to activate a blowout preventor just prior to the explosion but was thrown clear by the powerful burst, he said.

"It came too quick. We were watching real close, but it just took off," he said. A spark on the rig, or, perhaps, a spark caused by rocks blowing up and glancing off metal, apparently triggered the blaze, he said.

Initially, flames soared to the 150-foot structure's peak, according to witnesses. Fire continued to spurt from the hole as the well continued to "head up" at 30-45 minute intervals.

Smoke from the blazing rig could be seen from about 25 miles away at 10:30 a.m. The derrick sits about 40 miles east of Midland.

J.D. Gray, a firefighter and blowout expert for Cudd Pressure Control of Odessa, said he was summoned to the scene about 4 a.m.

Throughout the morning, employees and pumper trucks from Halliburton Services, a Big Spring well service firm, arrived to help battle the blaze. Large tanker trucks filled with 130-180 barrels — 4,095-5,670 gallons — of water and water trucks from the Big Spring fire department assembled to help douse the fire. Gray said tankers filled with mud were requested at about 8:30 from Magcobar Operations of Midland.

Gray said the fire was nearly extinguished at about 10 a.m., shortly before tanker trucks ran dry.

While additional water was being rushed to the scene, the super-heated derrick sparked the bubbling oil-and-gas mixture into another raging inferno.

Gray said the firefighting plan was to catch the well between flareups and cool the sizzling rig with water and foam. Once cooled, mud would be pumped into the hole to quell the torch-like well.

No decision yet on tax ruling appeal

Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration is studying a Wyoming judge's ruling that the windfall profits tax is unconstitutional, but no decision to appeal the ruling has been made.

Despite a request to President Reagan from 18 oil-state congressmen that the administration not appeal the decision, Gary Allen, an attorney for the Justice Department's tax division appellate section, said his office has reached no decision. Allen's office, along with the chief counsel of the Internal Revenue Service, must submit recommendations to Solicitor General Rex E. Lee, who will make the final determination on an appeal.

The solicitor general must make his decision within 30 days of the ruling because it is a direct appeal to the Supreme Court, according to Robert Baker, a Justice Department attorney.

U.S. District Court Judge Ewing T. Kerr last week ruled the windfall profits tax is unconstitutional because it excludes Alaska and therefore does not uniformly apply to all states. In his decision Kerr wrote that all federal taxes "must be uniform throughout the United States."

The 18 congressmen from the oil-producing states of Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana told the president in a letter sent Wednesday that they are eager for the repeal of the domestic crude oil tax to stand.

"As representatives from oil producing states, we strongly urge you to let the Wyoming decision stand," the letter said. "We believe that this important decision gives you the opportunity to fulfill a promise you made in 1980 to abolish the burdensome and unjust tax."

The congressmen added that repeal of the tax "would lead toward a sensible energy policy" and would encourage domestic energy production to "help us achieve our national goal of energy independence."

Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Tex., said in an interview that although he "can't read the president's mind," he believes there is a possibility Reagan will discourage an appeal.

Stenholm said he believed the tax act had constitutional problems. He added that the tax is not a windfall profits tax. "It has always been an excise tax," he said. "It was named wrong."

An aide to Rep. Kent Hance, D-Tex., whose office initiated the letter, said the windfall profits tax is "similar to putting a tax on automobiles made in the U.S. but not in Japan because it only affects domestic producers."

He added that Hance proposed a repeal of the tax in Congress soon after its passage in 1980.

Neither Hance nor Stenholm has received a response from the White House.

Odessan George Curry, 72, trouble-shooting "cat skinner" for many oil-well firefighting firms, sits astride "Old Faithful," a 1963 D-7 Caterpillar, at a drilling rig fire near Garden City Friday.

Well-fire fighting all in a day's work

GLASSCOCK COUNTY — When a drilling rig blew its stack early Friday morning and began spewing ferocious flames and black smoke into the West Texas sky, it was no surprise to find Odessan George Curry and "Old Faithful" happily near the action.

Like moths around a bonfire, "Three-fingers George" and his trusty 1963 D-7 Caterpillar are rarely far behind when an oil well belches forth with a severe case of heartburn.

Curry, who earned his nickname when a blasting cap claimed two fingers from his right hand in 1932, is widely renowned as a consumate "cat skinner," or bulldozer operator.

He's fought oil well fires with some of the best, including Red Adair and the gang at Houston's Boots & Coots. At about 8 a.m. Friday, Cudd Pressure Control of Odessa summoned Curry to the scene of a tenacious drilling rig fire six miles south of Garden City on FM 33.

Although he's worked for Shorty Hall Rig Co. in Odessa for 28 years, Curry has a standing agreement with well-fire fighters.

"Whenever they get a job...they need a cat skinner...I help them," he said. The nation's "blow-out" experts turn to him because "I've got a belly full of guts and no brain," said Curry, jamming his hands into red coverall pockets while chuckling at the thought.

"I've got experience," he said, only slightly more seriously. "I've drove a tractor for 40 years."

Curry, 72, said "cat skinning," like gambling and alcohol, is an addicting pursuit. "You start doing this, it gets in your blood, and you can't get rid of it."

He first opened a vein and climbed

Report becomes subject of interest at hearing

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Legal arguments tangled testimony on the proposed Doctors Hospital of the Permian Basin Friday at the Texas Health Facilities Commission as attorneys for two existing Midland hospitals argued at length over a report giving long-range guidelines for Midland Memorial Hospital.

Attorneys for Parkview Hospital, which Doctor's Hospital would replace, filed a motion early Friday with the health commission requesting the suspension of an application from MMH to build an addition until the report in question was produced.

Testimony on Parkview's proposed hospital has been heard this week, while testimony on MMH's proposed extension project is scheduled to be heard next week.

Hearing officer Gordon W. Hardin said the commission will probably decide Monday if a copy of a report prepared by the TriBrook consulting firm of Oak Brook, Ill., early this year should be given to Parkview attorneys.

The commission issued an order for discovery last Monday asking MMH representatives to give documents relating to long-range planning written since January 1979 to attorneys for Parkview, and attorney Fred Davis for MMH says he has complied with the order.

"We have produced a statement of objectives," Davis said, adding it is the only long-range planning guide adopted by the hospital.

Attorney Ace Pickens, representing Parkview, is interested in the TriBrook report, which Davis maintains is privileged information.

"We have not given Pickens what he wants," Davis said, "but we have complied (with the commission's order)."

If the commission finds attorneys for MMH have violated the order, its case — scheduled to begin next week — could be suspended, Hardin said.

The only testimony heard Friday was from James R. Vinson, an Austin consultant who prepared a feasibility study on the proposed Doctor's Hospital.

Vinson testified the proposed 110-bed facility would not have "an adverse effect on other existing hospitals" in Midland.

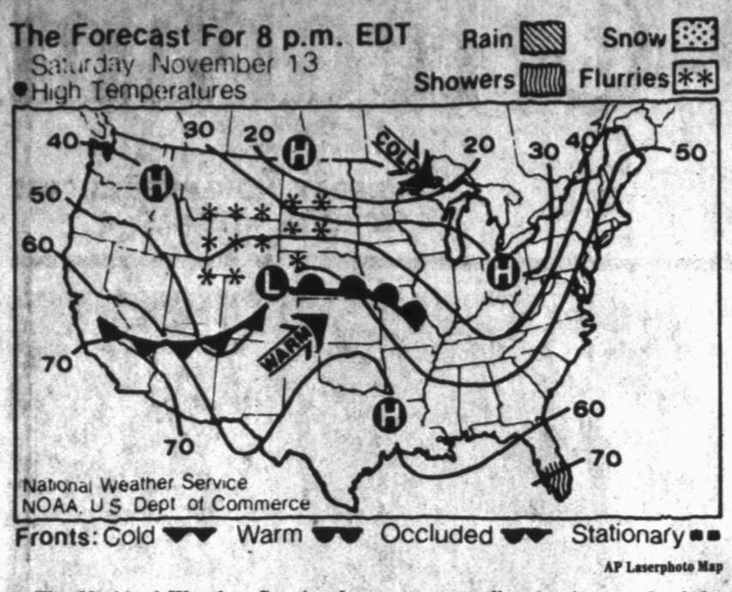

The added beds which Doctor's Hospital would provide are needed to help serve those who live in rural areas in the Midland area, Vinson said. Doctors Hospital would provide 50 more beds than are presently available at Parkview.

Still, Vinson said, the majority of patients admitted at Doctors Hospital would come from within the city.

His study also shows that Midland's "rate of growth is occurring at a lesser rate today than it was earlier."

Parkview's case is scheduled to conclude Monday, when the joint hearings continue at 9 a.m. at the commission.

WEATHER SUMMARY

AP Laserphoto Map

The National Weather Service forecasts snow flurries for much of the Great Plains, including parts of Idaho, Wyoming, Utah, Colorado, the Dakotas and Nebraska, on Saturday. Showers are expected in southern Florida. Temperatures should range from the twenties along the central Canadian border to the seventies in southern Florida, California and Arizona.

Typical autumn weather expected

Seasonal temperatures should greet Permian Basin residents this weekend, as the mercury should rise into the 60s in the afternoons and plunge into the 30s during nighttime hours.

The high today is expected to reach only the low 60s before dropping 30 degrees by early Sunday morning. The Sunday afternoon high should be in the upper 60s, according to the National Weather Service.

The high Friday of 56 degrees was well off the record for the date of 84 in 1938, while the low of 40 was pleasant in comparison to the icy 15 degrees of 1976.

No precipitation has been forecast for this weekend. The monthly total remains at 0.01 of an inch and the yearly amount at 12.64 inches.

Port O'Connor to Brownsville: A small craft advisory is in effect. Winds becoming north and northeast near 20 knots Saturday and east and southeast 10 to 15 knots Saturday night. Very rough seas 6 to 9 feet near shore and 10 to 15 feet offshore Saturday, subsiding Saturday night.

State should expect freezing temperatures

By The Associated Press

Temperatures should hover around the freezing mark Saturday night for the second straight night, but skies should be sunny statewide.

Readings were in the 50s and 60s statewide Friday, but the mercury began heading downward after sunset and lows in the 20s were expected by early Saturday in the Panhandle.

Minimums of around 30 were expected in all of South Texas except for the Rio Grande Valley.

Afternoon skies were generally fair across the state Friday, with far South Texas the only part of the state reporting cloudy skies.

Winds were from the north at 10 to 20 mph except for West Texas, where east winds at 5 to 15 mph were blowing.

Phone deregulation decision upheld

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission's 1980 decision to deregulate the telephone industry was upheld by an appellate court Friday, clearing a potential obstacle to the breakup of the Bell System.

In sweeping language that supported every point of an FCC decision known as Computer II, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia said the agency's policy choices were neither unreasonable nor arbitrary.

"In Computer II the commission took full advantage of its broad powers to serve the public interest by accommodating a new development in the communications industry — the confluence of communications and data processing," the court wrote unanimously. "Our review...convinces us that the commission acted reasonably."

For consumers, the decision means the FCC can proceed with its plan to completely deregulate the telephone equipment market. The most important feature of that plan — once it's fully implemented — will be that the Bell System companies of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. cannot lease phones directly to customers as part of their local-service package.

CONSUMERS WILL be expected to buy any new phones they need, although they will be allowed to continue leasing existing phones from AT&T instead of their Bell company if they wish.

The FCC had also decided in Computer II it would refrain from regulating so-called "enhanced services" — services that rely on computers as well as communication facilities. The court's decision thus is a major victory for AT&T, which is entering the data processing field, as well as existing computer service firms that feared they might be subjected to FCC regulation.

The court's decision does not directly involve the recent antitrust settlement between the Justice Department and AT&T, which requires the giant phone company to give up its 22 wholly owned Bell System companies. But without Friday's ruling, the FCC could have had serious difficulties overseeing the breakup of the Bell System and pursuing its efforts to introduce competition into the communications field.

For example, the FCC specified under Computer II that AT&T was to replace the Bell companies as the provider of telephone equipment through a new, unregulated subsidiary.

The antitrust settlement also requires the Bell companies to get out of the business of leasing telephones through their local service charges. If the FCC's approach had not been upheld, it would have raised doubts about the company's compliance with the settlement.

"ASSUMING THIS is upheld on any further appeals, what this means is that one of the central elements in the restructuring of the American telecommunications industry can now be relied on as secure," said Thomas J. Casey, now a private attorney but a former top FCC official who helped formulate the Computer II decision.

"The appeals court has acted swiftly and decisively and removed one more of the legal uncertainties which had been confronting the telecommunications industry," agreed AT&T spokesman Pic Wagner.

The Computer II decision, approved by the FCC when it was chaired by Charles D. Ferris, stemmed from the agency's increasing difficulty in drawing a line between communications and data processing. The agency had traditionally regulated all interstate communication, as well as phone equipment, while refraining from regulating data processing.

But as the court stated, the FCC faced "a regulatory crossroads" because technology was blurring the line between the two. Phones that included computer circuits were being developed. The telephone network could be used to allow computers to communicate long-distance.

The most reasonable answer, the FCC finally decided, was to regulate only the provision of basic voice service. Competition in the equipment and data processing fields was much more likely to ensure consumers the benefits of new technology at the lowest price, the agency added.

"We believe that the commission's...regulatory scheme is a rational and amply explained policy choice," the court said.

Well fires Odessan's workplace

aboard a dozer back in Illinois, his home state, when he quit the oil fields and sought employment in a friend's dirt-moving company.

"If you've got a Social Security card, come on," came the friend's reply, "and I've been on and off tractors ever since, day and night, all kinds of weather."

In 1952, Curry came to West Texas with an Illinois drilling contractor who loaded his equipment in Midland, Mich., on a train bound for Midland, Texas.

Since his arrival, Curry's reputation as an oil-fire "cat skinner" has soared like the flames from a "head up" well. So much so, in fact, that he even gained a bit of Hollywood fame as the bulldozer operator in John Wayne's 1968 action flick, "Hellfighters."

Curry remembers the "Duke" as "a hell of a man. I stood right by him, got drunk with him, and he was just as much a man in that bar as he was in the movie."

But Curry's toughest work has come not at the end of a director's swagger stick, but on the seat of a tractor, battling treacherous well fires.

He recalled a huge platform fire 40 miles off the Louisiana coast in the Gulf of Mexico. His tractor was towed to a 200-foot platform, jutting 60 feet above the ocean waves. From there, he maneuvered on a narrow perch, helping to snuff the monstrous blaze. Firefighters have doused him until his boots overflowed as he manuevered around super-heated rigs.

Although he's worked at least a hundred such jobs, Curry said he recalled only one instance when a firefighter was seriously hurt. The amazing safety record, he said, is the direct result of a healthy respect for fires and painstaking attention to safety.

"They ask you: 'Are you ever afraid of these?' " said Curry. "You're darn right I'm afraid, that's how I stay alive."

Curry said he won't work on a well fire after dark, "because you can put this iron back together, but you can't put a man back together."

"My wife tried to get me to quit. But heck, I couldn't do that. I'd go crazier than I already am.

"She doesn't like it. But when I take that check home and throw it on the table, you can see every tooth in her head."

As a father of four children and three stepchildren, scheduled for cataract surgery at November's end, Curry may seem a likely candidate for retirement.

"I'd die in six months if I had nothing to do," he said. "As long as there's work, I keep on working. Just as long as I'm able to get off and on that tractor."

sary water and mud, the towering rig listed westward. A large truck equipped with a crane and a bulldozer pulled peripheral equipment away from the structure when the flames ebbed.

Like clockwork, the well continued to blaze at 30-45 minute periods until mud and water trucks were finally assembled and ready at about 2 p.m.

Among the companies represented by tanker trucks were American Well-servicing Co. of Forsan, H&H Trucking Co. of Stanton, BB&C Transport and Quality Transport of Big Spring and Basin Construction of Coahoma.

Several five-gallon cans of concentrated, fire-extinguishing foam were dumped into each of about 13 tanker trucks. The trucks were linked to each other by hose, and in turn connected to a high-pressure pumping apparatus.

The pump roared to life shortly after 2 p.m., and firefighters used five hoses to pelt the steaming structure. Several Halliburton employees, two Big Spring firemen and Gray attacked the rig with foam and water. About ten minutes later, gas and oil began spurting from the hole and the ensuing fire drove workers back.

When the flames subsided at about 2:30 p.m., the rig was again splattered with foam. Fifteen minutes later, the well had not re-ignited and appeared to be under control. However, the rig flared up later and, according to a spokesman for the Glasscock County Sheriff's Department, was finally put out by 7 p.m.

No immediate damage estimate was available, although one observer noted that the drilling rig was likely worth about $2 million. Replacement costs, he said, could be closer to $3.5-$4 million.

The MAPCO employee at the scene said the company would likely attempt to move the demolished drilling eqipment and replace it with another rig as quickly as possible, perhaps within three days. He said the derrick had been drilling for about 47 days.

An employee at MAPCO's Midland office said records indicate the crew had been taking core samples below 10,000 feet when the explosion occurred.

Christopher Kierst, a geologist working at the MAPCO well, said the percolating oil and gas "seems to indicate that we've got something cooking here, literally and figuratively."

Friday's blowout was the second such incident in the area in the last four months.

In August, William E. Hendon Jr.'s, now Cameo Minerals Inc., No. 1 Powell "32," then being drilled in Glasscock County along the Garden City Highway, 13 miles northwest of MAPCO's well, also blew out and burned. In that fire, the drilling rig was saved by firemen from Midland and Stanton.

Threatened demonstrators fail to material at Begin's arrival

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Israeli Prime Minster Menachem Begin arrived amid heavy security Friday for meetings with Jewish leaders as authorities braced for pro- and anti-Israeli protests.

Begin's visit had sparked threats of demonstrations and possible violence between pro-Palestinian and militant Jewish demonstrators, but no incidents were reported upon his arrival at Los Angeles International Airport.

"It is good to be again in hospitable, warm, beautiful, full-of-sunshine California and Los Angeles," Begin said, moments after he walked with a cane from his Israel Air Force passenger jet at a secluded airport site.

"I'm going to meet here mainly with the Jewish community," he said, noting that next week he will meet President Reagan in Washington to discuss relations between the United States and Israel "and the international situation."

With a police helicopter circling overhead, uniformed and plainclothes officers of the Secret Service, Los Angeles police and airport security checked visitors, who included Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. and Mayor Tom Bradley.

The Committee to Oppose the Begin Visit, a coalition supporting Palestinians, has a permit to demonstrate Saturday night in a blocked-off street outside the Bonaventure Hotel, where Begin was to address delegates at the Jewish Federation Council's annual meeting.

Coalition spokeswoman Phyllis Bennis predicted about 1,000 people would demonstrate, calling for a complete Israeli withdrawal from Lebanon, an end to U.S. aid for Israel and "self-determination for the Palestinians."

One of the coalition groups is the New Jewish Agenda, a national organization of Jewish liberals who urge better relations between Israel and the Palestinians.

Three burglaries reported in area

Midland police investigated three burglaries Friday in which several thousand dollars in items were taken.

Some $2,970 in medical electronic equipment and assorted tools was reported missing in the burglary of a vehicle belonging to Lin Hendricks of 1807 E. Front.

Taken in the burglary of Curtis Mathes Company at 4366 W. Illinois sometime before 7:46 a.m. Friday were four 19-inch televisions, investigators were told by Carl Toal. Entry was gained through a front window.

A stereo and television set with total value of $1,302 were reported missing after the burglary of the residence of Ann Fullinwider of 4808 B Country. Entry was gained by breaking a rear window, according to a police report.

Man suffers shot wound

CRANE — A Crane man remained in Odessa Medical Center hospital late Friday after sustaining a gunshot wound in an apparent domestic quarrel here Thursday night.

Bobby Otto was listed in stable condition with a shotgun wound in his left thigh. He had earlier been retained in the intensive care unit.

A youth was taken into custody by Crane Police Department officers in regard to the shooting.

Freak accident kills federal agent

EL PASO (AP) — A federal drug intelligence agent drowned in a freak auto accident after his car struck a fire hydrant, breaking a buried water main, and he tumbled into a six-foot-deep hole, officials said Friday.

The pavement began collapsing as Manuel Valadez, 46, an agent with the Drug Enforcement Agency's El Paso Intelligence Center, was returning to his auto, El Paso police Lt. Harold Vaughn said Friday.

Valadez fell as he started to open the car door, he said.

"He fell into the hole and debris fell on top him. Before he could be helped, he drowned," El Paso police Lt. Harold Vaughn said Friday.

Witnesses told police the agent, a teletype communications expert, refused their warnings that it was dangerous to return to his auto because they believed a watery pool was forming underground.

"Apparently he worried more about his car than about himself," Vaughn said.

Police said Valadez, a retired Air Force sergeant, "appeared to be intoxicated." An autopsy was scheduled.

Rabies increase noted

ATLANTA (AP) — An increase in the number of animal rabies cases has been reported in four mid-Atlantic states since 1977, the national Centers for Disease Control said Friday.

Five years ago, there were no reported cases of animal rabies in Virginia, and there were only seven reported cases in 1980, the CDC said in its Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report.

But 432 cases have been reported so far this year, the federal health agency said. Other states affected by the outbreak are West Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania.

Defense attorneys begin to present case in Wood trial

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The man charged with shooting U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr. in the back for a $250,000 fee promised a dazzling defense Friday, but instead watched the presiding judge turn down his attorney's motions one after the other.

"We're going to dazzle them with our footwork," a smiling Charles V. Harrelson, 44, mouthed to reporters minutes before the government rested its case after calling 83 witnesses and introducing more than 100 exhibits.

Defense attorney Tom Sharpe Jr. then moved for striking various charges against Harrelson in the indictment or for directed verdicts of acquittal.

Chief U.S. District Judge William S. Sessions denied more than a dozen of Sharpe's motions, requiring only brief arguments from prosecutor Ray Jahn before issuing the denials.

Sessions also rejected motions for acquittal or severance of the charges from attorneys for co-defendants Jo Ann Harrelson, 41, the wife of Charles Harrelson, and Elizabeth Chagra, 28, wife of the man who allegedly paid Harrelson to shoot Wood in the back.

Sharpe then began calling witnesses on the 24th day of testimony to defend Harrelson, previously convicted of a hired killing, against government testimony that he stalked Wood for 14 days, then assassinated the judge outside his San Antonio apartment on May 29, 1979.

Lawyer Charles Campion, representing Mrs. Harrelson, and Warren Burnett, acting for Mrs. Chagra, indicated they would require only a day and a half each to present their defenses, but Sharpe has said he may call up to 50 witnesses.

Sharpe said in his opening statement he would show that Harrelson and his wife were in Dallas watching television at the time Wood was killed with a high-powered deer rifle.

The defense attorney said he would show through the government's own witnesses that someone other than Harrelson could have fired the fatal shot, attempting on cross-examination to cast suspicion on several associates of Harrelson and of Jamiel "Jimmy" Chagra, 39, a convicted narcotics trafficker charged with murder for allegedly having Wood killed.

Wood, 63, nicknamed "Maximum John" because of the stiff sentences he gave in narcotics cases, was scheduled to preside at Jimmy Chagra's 1979 narcotics trial at the time he was slain.

One of the prosecutors who practiced in Wood's court, former Assistant U.S. Attorney James Kerr, had been ambushed six months earlier and a mile from where Wood was killed, but Kerr escaped with minor scratches when 19 bullets were fired into the front of his car.

Sharpe opened his case by calling former Assistant U.S. Attorney Ronald Guyer, who presented evidence to the Midland grand jury that indicted Jimmy Chagra on Feb. 26, 1979.

Guyer confirmed previous testimony from El Paso attorney Joseph Chagra that Jimmy Chagra was offered a plea bargain that would have allowed him to admit to one cocaine charge in exchange for a 15-year sentence from Wood.

Joseph Chagra, 35, who pleaded guilty to murder conspiracy in the case, testified as a government witness that his brother refused to plead to the cocaine count and instead offered to plead guilty to two marijuana counts for a total of 10 years.

Crime task force to continue under White

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The chairman of Gov. Bill Clements' "blue ribbon" task force on Texas' criminal justice system said Friday that Gov.-elect Mark White wants the panel to continue its work.

"He has assured us that he considers the work of this commission very essential to the upcoming Legislature," Rep. Bob McFarland, R-Arlington, said of White, who defeated Clements on Nov. 2.

"I supported Gov. Clements, but I'm sure a great friend of Mark White right now," said T. Louis Austin, chairman of the Texas corrections board. Austin said the task force, which was created by Clements as a temporary study group when Texas prisons shut down because of overcrowding last year, should become a permanent advisory panel.

On Friday, the committee heard several organizations' responses to the recommendations the task force plans to forward to the Legislature when it convenes in January.

Most of the testimony before the panel concerned a proposal to establish a central juvenile records system.

Representing Citizens United for the Rehabilitation of Errants was Don Taylor, who said he spent over 11 years in the state criminal justice system — as a convict.

"I practically grew up in prison institutions," said Taylor, who said he was first incarcerated as a juvenile at age 16 on a drug offense. He said he was granted a pardon by Clements last year because of his work on criminal justice reform.

Taylor vehemently opposed creation of a central file on juvenile offenders because, he said, the information should not be available after a person becomes an adult.

"I was classified as incorrigible at age 18 because of my juvenile record," he said.

Anita Marcus, executive director of the Coalition for Juvenile Justice also opposed the juvenile offender file. She recounted the case of a young man turned down for a sensitive government post because of his criminal record as a juvenile.

His offense, she said, had consisted of running a garden hose into a mail box on Halloween. The case, she said, was an example of possible misuse of the records.

Steve Capelle, representing the Texas District and County Attorneys Association, disagreed.

"We need to know who is committing the crimes," he said.

Sunset Commission hearings end

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Sunset Commission ended three days of marathon public hearings Friday, including 16 hours of testimony on the future of the Texas Railroad Commission and the Public Utilities Commission.

Tentative decisions by the 10-member commission on the agencies reviewed will be made Dec.1-3, with the final reports to be made Dec. 12-14 in the form of prospective legislation recommended to the 1983 Legislature.

Under the Texas Sunset Act of 1977 the commission reviews a selected group of state agencies and boards each two years and recommends to the Legislature if they should be terminated or continue to operate.

Final testimony included those interested in the State Board of Insurance.

William P. Daves, chairman of the Sta'.. Board of Insurance, told the commission the department was making every effort to protect elderly persons from unscrupulous health insurance salesemen.

"We are beefing up our investigational efforts in the enforcement section to take care of this," Daves said.

Commissioner Lyndon Olson said the board had one official who did nothing but check advertisements, mailings and other material sent out by life and health insurance companies to be sure they complied with the law.

Tom Bond, state insurance commissioner, said the big problem is that many abuses of health insurance abuses are "hit-and-run scams. They will be gone before anyone knows anything is wrong."

Earlier, Treasurer-elect Ann Richards said she favored adding the comptroller to the three-member State Depository Board, even if it meant doing away with the member appointed by the governor.

She also urged the commission to recommend legislation that would open up proceedings of the State Banking Board, of which she will be a member. "I am concerned there is no written justification when bank charters are approved or denied," she said. "There is far too much left to personal, and perhaps political, consideration."

Tax collection up, Bullock says

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Local sales tax collection in 967 Texas cities are up 9.3 percent over the 1981 total, Comptroller Bob Bullock said Friday.

Bullock said Friday the state has refunded $672 million to cities where the one-cent local sales tax has been approved by voters, compared with $614.7 million for 1981.

Linkletter: 'Not me' common fallacy

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Panic, followed by apathy, have characterized the American public in regard to drug abuse, according to Art Linkletter, in Midland to speak at a campaign victory dinner for Midland Christian School Friday night. And apathy is the most frightening of all, he said.

Linkletter, who travels half a million miles per year speaking at positive-thinking rallies and to student organizations, said that while figures of drug abuse are similar to those in the 1960s, the number of people who think it could never happen to them has increased.

"We have every bit the degree of drug abuse as we did in the '60s," Linkletter said during an afternoon press conference at KMID studios. He added that, along with the apathetic feeling of the general public, the increase in the number of people pushing to legalize and tax drugs such as marijuana is frightening.

Linkletter, who suffered a personal tragedy with the death of his daughter following her experimentation with drugs, said that the experience helps people relate to him to some degree.

"It gets their attention," he said, "but people still don't think anything bad will happen to them."

Linkletter said he could talk with someone who is abusing drugs and, although that person could admit that "he's seen a few people go down the tubes" because of drug addiction, that person could never realize he was headed in the same direction.

Art Linkletter

"I can realize the temptation and the fun and games of drugs and the peer pressures." Because of this, students generally can relate to him, he said.

If not the number one drug of abuse, one of the most abused substances is alcohol, Linkletter said. According to him, the number of people who are deemed alcoholics or problem drinkers has expanded to include other segments of society.

Alcohol-related deaths are increasing as a new group, women 35 to 50 years old from middle to upper classes, are mixing alcohol with barbiturates, he said. The problem stems from an unstable point of life for many women, who are feeling middle-aged and at a loss with grown children and husbands caught up in careers.

And although nicotine causes more deaths than any other drug, Linkletter said that alcohol is faster and affects more people.

"It's like cyanide," he said. "If you're an alcoholic, you're going to die unless you quit drinking."

According to Linkletter, there are 25 million alcoholics and 10 to 15 million problem drinkers in the country.

"Tonight, at 5 or 6 o'clock in literally millions, or at least several thousand, places in very small towns and in very big towns, a sign will go on. Happy Hour — that says it all. 'Come in and get drunk cheaply and be happy for an hour,'" Linkletter said, adding that people pop pills or take other drugs in an unsuccessful search for happiness.

Blaming much of the publicity of drug usage on sensational news and "deplorable" movies, Linkletter said that even more of the glamorization of drugs is brought to people through music.

"I think that music was more responsible in the '60s than movies," he said. "Not only were they singing about it, but they (the rock stars) were living the drug life. It was glamorous and exciting and these people were telling about their lives through songs."

A member of the board of United Artists, Linkletter said he thinks some of the films released contain needless profanity, violence and sex. But, he added, movies with "G" ratings don't make much money.

Presently living in Hollywood, "where cocaine is a very important part of life," Linkletter said his lectures are "not punitive, down talks" but instead focus on positive goal-setting and positive sel- esteem.

"We all have periods of depression," he said, adding that one way to combat those is to "get your eyes off yourself and onto other people.

"The memorial I built (to his daughter) is in the hearts and minds of the young people I've helped," he said.

Spadolini says ministers have to work together

ROME (AP) — Premier Giovanni Spadolini, whose resignation was refused by the president, asked Parliament on Friday to confirm his power to rule but said it was essential that his ministers work together.

A vote of confidence is expected next week.

President Sandro Pertini, in refusing Spadolini's resignation on Thursday, ordered the premier to make Parliament decide the fate of Italy's 42nd postwar government.

Spadolini, 57, told the Chamber of Deputies, or the lower house, that bickering among the dominant Christian Democrats and Socialists in his five-party coalition made it impossible for the government to tackle Italy's 17 percent inflation, 9.2 percent unemployment and public debt projected at $50 billion.

"The efforts of a premier of a coalition government to bring together distant views are frustrated when you can't find a minimum common denominator or maintain the unity of political aims," Spadolini, a Republican, said.

He then gave a copy of the same 30-minute speech to the Senate. Both houses were to discuss the speech for the next few days and then vote on a confidence motion.

Bush visiting Nigeria hoping to improve relations

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

LAGOS, Nigeria — Vice President George Bush arrived Friday in this most powerful of black Africa's nations, the third stop in a scheduled seven-nation tour. The Reagan administration's relations with Nigeria have been strained by U.S. dealings with white-ruled South Africa.

The White House announced Thursday that Bush will head the U.S. delegation to the funeral of Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev. Although the departure time was not yet clear, a spokesman said Bush will return to Africa after the funeral and visit all countries previously scheduled. He was scheduled to remain here until Sunday.

Bush, with a nod to the concerns of his Nigerian hosts, announced on arrival that "together, we will discuss the surest means to advance freedom in Namibia." A major U.S. initiative, now apparently stalled, is aimed at achieving independence of that territory now ruled by South Africa in defiance of United Nations demands.

In separate interviews this week, a senior Nigerian foreign policy official and a high-level U.S. diplomat both said there is a growing "unease" in the once warm relations between the two trading partners.

"There hasn't been any movement whatsoever" on achieving Namibia's independence since the Reagan administration took office, said the senior Nigerian official. "We are very distressed about the entire Reagan approach, like linking Namibia's independence to the withdrawal of Cuban troops from Angola. That position is in support of South Africa's and was not a matter of dicussion under Carter." The initial U.S. initiative on Namibia was taken under the presidency of Jimmy Carter.

The U.S. diplomat said the Nigerians have grown increasingly disenchanted with what they perceive as "different approaches" of the Carter and Reagan administations on relations with South Africa. "The Reagan administration has been slow to pick up on this," he said.

The American said an objective of Bush's visit is to address this issue. The Nigerian official, however, said he did not expect anything "substantive" from Bush's scheduled meetings with President Shehu Shagari, Vice President Alex Ekueme and Senate President Joseph Wayas.

Beginning in the mid-1970s, when oil prices began to rise dramatically, the United States has bought about half of Nigeria's oil exports. By 1980, Washington's trade deficit with Lagos had climbed to $9 billion due to crude oil purchases.

Shuttle business now 'two for two'

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Putting business before pleasure, the space shuttle's mission specialists launched a second communications satellite Friday and then savored the prospect of a long-awaited weekend space walk.

"Houston, we're two-for-two," said Joseph Allen after he and William Lenoir deployed Anik-C, a satellite that will beam telephone signals and the first pay-television to Canada.

Twenty-four hours earlier, the shuttle ejected a similar satellite. Mission Control called for an encore and got it as spaceship Columbia passed its first commercial test. Commander Vance Brand quickly proclaimed a new NASA slogan: "We haul and we deliver."

Both deployments went according to the book. With the shuttle coasting 184 miles above Earth, the satellites are now hurtling toward their operating orbit, 22,300 miles high over the equator.

Brand and pilot Robert Overmyer had fine-tuned the shuttle's orbit to unload the satellite for Telesat of Canada, one of the earliest and best customers for the satellite-hauling service NASA inaugurated with this flight.

Brand, at 51, is the second oldest American to fly in space, with no plans to retire from the astronaut corps. And he admits to a secret ambition that will be realized Sunday morning by others — Allen and Lenoir.

"I'd enjoy a space walk," he confided recently. "I really would like to try it." No American has walked in space for nine years and, this flight at least, Brand will have to be content with monitoring the exercise from Columbia's cabin.

But first, to the business.

Anik-C, sitting on a cargo bay turntable, was set spinning at about 50 rpm. High over the Pacific, clamps opened and powerful springs popped the satellite from the cargo bay. Traveling at three feet per second, Anik-C drifted from its shuttle launch pad. Forty-five minutes later a rocket fired, propelling it toward the 22,300-mile point.

At that altitude, the satellite's speed matches that of Earth below and appears to be stationary over one spot.

"We can put our Earth stations right where our customer wants them, in this case this is right on top of the Bell Canada Telephone building in Montreal," said John Almond, a Telesat vice president.

Friday's high-altitude ejection met NASA's first commercial shuttle commitment, and NASA received $17 million for its effort.

Telesat of Canada, 50 percent government-owned, has four more satellites scheduled for shuttle deployment by 1984. For this flight, Telesat paid $9 million.

Anik means "Little Brother" in Eskimo. The "C" designates the firm's third generation of spacecraft.

The departure of Anik-C nearly empties the shuttle's cargo bay and completes the task of the shuttle's first operational mission after four test flights. NASA will have earned the $17 million it gets from Telesat of Canada and Satellite Business Systems of McLean, Va.

But, taking advantage of having four men aboard for the first time, the space agency scheduled the flight for five days, using the extra time to have Allen and Lenoir spend 3½ hours Sunday walking around the open cargo bay.

Decked out in bulky space suits and wearing portable life-support systems, Allen and Lenoir will "translate" — one NASA term for spacewalk — around the cargo bay, move to a stationary tool box and remove a mini work station.

There they will practice working with torque and box wrenches, scissors, cutters and ratchet tools — to demonstrate what will be possible in future flights when repair and construction tasks are called for.

SBS-C and Anik-C, purple satellites that tower 21 feet in their space outpost with solar panel and antenna deployed, are practically twins, but their missions are different.

The SBS satellite is for voice and data communications, owned by a partnership of Aetna Insurance, IBM and Comsat General.

Anik-C's primary task is television distribution. It will bring Canada its first pay television, beginning sometime in January. It will also be used by a network to transmit a second program to Canada's Atlantic provinces.

Committee chosen to pick site of '84 party convention

WASHINGTON (AP) — A top United Auto Workers official will be chairman of the 25-member committee to pick a site for the 1984 Democratic National Convention, party chairman Charles Manatt announced Friday.

The committee, appointed by Manatt and made up of members of the Democratic National Committee, will meet early next year to start the selection process.

Cities mentioned as possibilities for the 1984 meeting include Detroit, Chicago, New York, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Miami. The 1976 and 1980 conventions were in New York.

The Republican Party plans to hold its 1984 convention in Dallas.

Raymond Majerus, UAW secretary-treasurer, will head the panel, assisted by vice-chairmen Peter G. Kelly, DNC finance chairman, and DiAnna Schimek, Nebraska party chief.

Four other union officials are on the panel: Gerald McEntee, president of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees; Evelyn Dubrow of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union; Rachelle Horowitz of the American Federation of Teachers; and Jack Otero of the Brotherhoood of Railway, Airline and Steamship Clerks.

Others on the panel:

Burleigh Arnold, Missouri; Hannah Atkins, Oklahoma; Dominic J. Baranello, New York; Clarence Blount, Maryland; Millie Bruner, Texas; Rep. Tony Coelho, California; Alan Diamonstein, Virginia.

Police stress school zone safety

Despite a widespread belief to the contrary, most police officers don't relish issuing tickets, and the 30 to 40 traffic citations they hand out in and around school zones result primarily from complaints by parents and school officials concerned about the safety of children.

"Most of the tickets are for double parking and loading or unloading passengers in traffic lanes," said Lt. Herman Wicker, head of the police department's traffic division. "It creates hazardous conditions for children having to cross between cars.

"The main reason for strict enforcement is the complaints we receive from parents and school officials."

In an effort to increase safety and cut down on the number of violations that occur daily in school zones, the police department has published the following list of "Do's and Don'ts" for motorists taking children to school:

—Pull to the curb to load or unload students. If the passenger loading zone is congested, move to an adjacent street and let students cross school grounds to the bulding.

—Load or unload all students from the curb side of the vehicle.

—Instruct students to cross only at crosswalks.

—Instruct students to use sidewalks and not to walk in the streets.

—Don't allow students to enter or exit from the left side — "sui-side" — of the vehicle.

—Do not allow students to run in or across streets.

"We've been real fortunate in that the number of serious accidents in school zones has been practically nil — so far," said Wicker. "We'd like to keep it that way."

Thompson lead narrows

CHICAGO (AP) — Gov. James R. Thompson's lead over Democratic challenger Adlai E. Stevenson narrowed to less than 5,000 votes Friday as one county's canvass turned up more than 800 additional votes.

The St. Clair County clerk's office reported that the canvass in that southern Illinois county produced an additional 820 votes for Stevenson and an additional 200 votes for Thompson over previous unofficial totals, a net increase of 620 for Stevenson.

The final returns in St. Clair County, including East St. Louis, were 38,961 votes for Stevenson to 31,232 for Thompson.

Thompson held a lead of 4,941 votes statewide, with official canvasses complete in all but one of the state's 102 counties, according to an Associated Press survey.

Legislator won't leave capital till his time's served

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Rep. Richard Bolling, who has undergone two operations this month to clear arteries to the brain, says he plans to return to Washington to complete his 17th and last session in Congress.

Richard Bolling

"I get elected for a term and I serve out that term. If I were completely incapacitated, that would be different," Bolling said Thursday. "I feel fine."

The Missouri Democrat, chairman of the House Rules Committee, is recovering at St. Joseph Hospital. He underwent surgery Nov. 3 and Nov. 9 to open up arteries that supply blood to the brain.

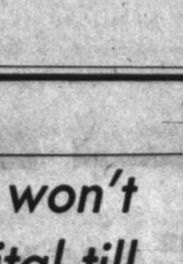

"I'm totally mystified by the whole of modern medicine...It gives you a second shot, a second round," he said of his operations.

Bolling, 66, who is retiring from Congress in January, said he plans to leave the hospital Saturday and recuperate at a friend's country home in New York before returning to Washington.

He said he does not plan to miss a single day's action and will not resign early to give his successor, Democrat Alan Wheat, a head start on other congressional freshmen.

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Britain's Princess Anne arrived in Lebanon Friday for a brief unofficial visit that had been kept secret because of fear for her well-being.

Princess Anne

Lebanese officials said they were not informed of Anne's intention to visit Lebanon until Thursday.

During her 10-hour visit, Anne, president of the British and Commonwealth Save the Children Fund, was to visit a clinic sponsored by the private relief organization and a Palestinian refugee camp and hold talks with relief agency officials. She was to lunch with President Amin Gemayel before leaving for London.

The Save the Children Fund finances education programs for 900 children in Lebanon and also runs clinics in several parts of the country. Following the June 6 Israeli invasion, it coordinated medical aid and supplied drugs, food and equipment to needy children and their families.

HAGERSTOWN, Md. (AP) — Renowned French-horn player Barry Tuckwell sees nothing odd about his decision to make the transition from performer to conductor of the fledgling Maryland Symphony Orchestra.

Barry Tuckwell

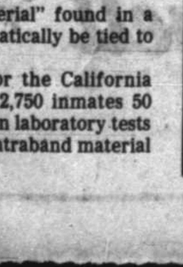

"It is one of those things that you don't decide you are going to do something, you just have to. There are no other alternatives," said Tuckwell, who will be wielding the baton when the orchestra gives its premiere performance Saturday night at the Maryland Theatre here.

"As far as I'm concerned, being a musician is what I have always done," added Tuckwell. "Whatever you do as a musician, I think it is all complementary, so conducting is a natural development to being a musician."

As a musician, Tuckwell has been called "the greatest horn player in the world" by Pittsburgh Symphony Conductor Andre Previn. The native of Australia has been playing his horn for 30 years, 13 of them with the London Symphony. He currently is music director of the Tasmanian Symphony in Australia.

Richard Dreyfuss charged on counts of drug possession

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Felony drug possession charges were filed by the district attorney Friday against Academy Award-winning actor Richard Dreyfuss following the discovery of cocaine and another drug in his clothing after an auto accident last month, officials said.

Richard Dreyfuss

Dreyfuss, 34, was charged with one count of possession of cocaine and one count of possession of oxycodone, a pain-killer commonly known as Percodan, said District Attorney's spokesman Al Albergate.

Each charge is a felony and carries a maximum penalty of three years in prison, Albergate said.

However, Dreyfuss could be eligible for "diversion," meaning he could attend drug classes "for six to 12 months and have the whole thing wiped of his record," Albergate said.

The actor is eligible because "there is no evidence of violence or that the drugs were to be sold," Albergate said.

Dreyfuss is scheduled to be arraigned Nov. 16 in Beverly Hills Municipal Court and he must appear because the charges are felonies, Albergate said.

Dreyfuss is free on $2,500 bond.

He was booked in absentia on Oct. 11 while hospitalized following the one-car crash off a Beverly Hills canyon road. Cedars-Sinai Medical Center personnel found .7 grams of cocaine and 31 Percodan tablets in Dreyfuss' clothing, Albergate said.

Investigators said Dreyfuss probably was saved by his seat belt because his Mercedes 450SL flipped over at least once before slamming into a palm tree. The actor was not seriously injured and was released several days after the accident.

He won an Oscar as best actor for the 1977 film "The Goodbye Girl," and has also starred in "Jaws," "Close Encounters of The Third Kind" and "Whose Life Is It, Anyway?"

Manson said to have pot

VACAVILLE, Calif. (AP) — Convicted mass murderer Charles Manson has been accused by the prison where he is being held of possessing marijuana, an official said Friday.

But the official said "escape material" found in a search at the prison could not automatically be tied to Manson.

Lt. Don Custard, a spokesman for the California Medical Facility, a prison housing 2,750 inmates 50 miles east of San Francisco, said prison laboratory tests showed the marijuana was among contraband material found in Manson's cell on Oct. 29.

Jamie's town raises spirits, money

BRIDGEWATER, Mass. (AP) — Jamie Fiske's hometown threw a party with races, clowns and skywriting Friday to raise money for the "little fighter" who is recovering from a liver transplant. An anonymous donor sent along $10,000 to help.

"You can't believe it. It's really wonderful the way everyone's come out," said Muriel Mynahan, maternal grandmother of the 11-month-old child who is hospitalized in Minneapolis. "You've always known there's an awful lot of good people. Now you see it."

Friday was "Jamie Fiske Day" in Massachusetts and Gov. Edward J. King issued a proclamation saying "Jamie Fiske has captured the hearts of the citizens of Massachusetts."

HUNDREDS OF people came to this town of 17,000 residents 30 miles south of Boston for the fair at the town plaza.

Jamie suffered from a potentially fatal liver disease, biliary atresia, which causes bile to back up into the liver. Last Friday she received the liver of a 10-month-old Utah boy who died following a Nov. 3 auto accident.

On Friday, Dr. John Najarian, chief of surgery at the University of Minnesota Hospitals, said Jamie had been taken off a respirator "and is breathing on her own."

"Her kidney function, as well as her liver, are absolutely normal," Najarian said. "The jaundice is just about completely gone. We are now looking forward to the next step, slowly and progressively allowing her to eat on her own."

No date has been set for Jamie's release from the hospital, but Najarian has said he hopes she will be home by Christmas.

"IT'S REALLY a miracle," Mrs. Mynahan said. "She's a little fighter. I think her father put it very eloquently — he thought the nation had adopted Jamie, and it just seems that way."

Russ Kingman, president of the Bridgewater Savings Bank, where a fund has been set up for the Fiskes, announced that a "marvelous woman" from Massachusetts had put a check in the mail for $10,000. "The woman prefers to remain anonymous," the banker said. "You would recognize her name immediately."

Jamie's father, Charles Fiske, 37, an administrator at the Boston University Medical Center, arrived after flying home from Minneapolis for the celebration. "For us, it's been a long struggle since last February," he said. "We knew with this surgery there was no turning back."

"She came through the surgery well," he said. "Jamie's looking good. Today, Marilyn (Jamie's mother) said she gave her a couple of smiles."

The family's appreciation was expressed by Mrs. Mynahan in a brief speech to 200 people at noon near the Bridgewater State College campus.

"I THINK I should be doing the clapping for all you people. Jamie's a little doll, and we just love her to pieces," she said. "I hope that in due time, you may be able to see her yourself."

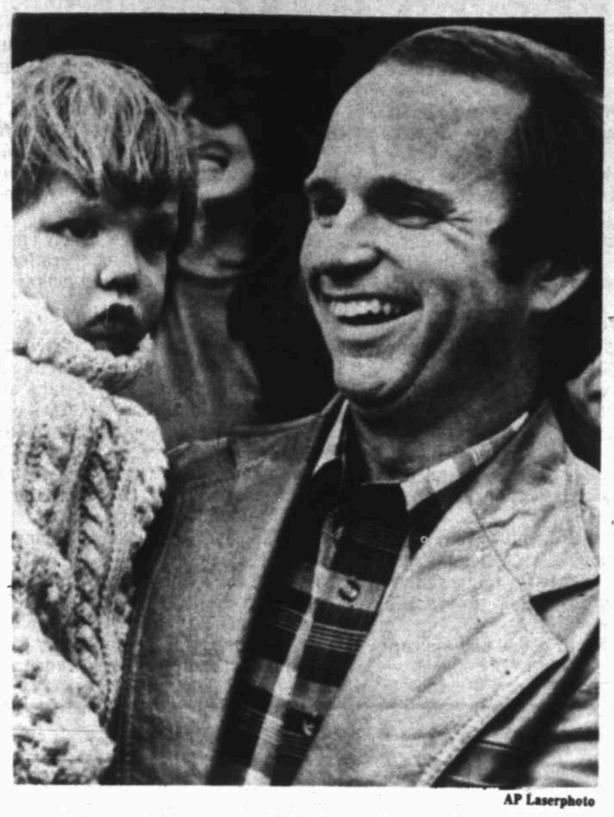

John Hickey, chairman of the town's governing board of selectmen, said the day was organized to help raise money for the Fiske family's medical expenses.

Insurance will cover most of the $60,000 transplant operation, but there are other expenses, such as an $8,000 bill to rent the jet that flew the liver from Utah to Minneapolis.

Hickey said the townspeople "were excited; they were happy" with the news of Jamie's operation. "She's a little fighter; she should be a lesson for older people."

As cows grazed a mile away, the blue-coated East Bridgewater Viking Band opened the day's competition and entertainment.

"We originally conceived the day before Jamie got her liver," said Robert Brown, coordinator and general manager of the local McDonald's fast food franchise, which is helping in the fundraising. "Now it's turned into a celebration."

Charles Fiske, right, holds his 2½-year-old son, Daren, during festivities in their hometown of Bridgewater, Mass., Friday. The town held a celebration to raise money for Fiske's 11-month-old daughter, Jamie, who received a much-needed liver transplant last Friday in Minneapolis. Races, a pancake breakfast and other activities highlighted the day.

THE ACTIVITIES were also sponsored by radio station WPEP-AM in nearby Taunton.

Debbie Conway, a nurse from nearby Mansfield, dressed as a clown.

"I believe in the cause," she said. "We love little Jamie Fiske and the little ones like her. It's just too bad that one child had to die so another could live."

The sentiments were echoed in a sign on a nearby pickup truck that read: "God Bless The Bellon Family From Utah For Jamie," The Bellons donated their child's liver to Jamie.

Singer investigated for cocaine possession

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Grammy Award-winning gospel singer Andrae Crouch was arrested early Friday and booked for investigation of possession of cocaine, authorities said.

Andrae Crouch

Crouch, 40, a five-time Grammy winner, was stopped about 2 a.m. on the Marina Freeway in Marina del Rey by Los Angeles County Sheriff's deputies who said he was traveling "in a very erratic manner," said Sgt. Steve Finley.

A small amount of white powder and a five-inch plastic straw were found in the car, Finley said.

"It was 0.05 grams of cocaine," Finley said Friday afternoon. "It's already been tested and it's positive."

Crouch was jailed, but was later released on $2,500 bond, Finley said. Because the bond is preset for the charge, the singer did not have to appear before a judge, Finley said.

"We're not making any comment right now because he doesn't have an attorney and we want to make sure everything is done right," said Crouch spokesman Ramone Hirvey. "It doesn't make sense for him to try to defend himself now...until I hear from an attorney."

Hirvey would not say where Crouch was Friday and there was no telephone listing for the singer in Woodland Hills, where he lives.

Last February, Crouch won a Grammy Award in the category of best contemporary soul gospel performance for his album "Don't Give Up." He also won Grammys in 1976, 1979, 1980 and 1981 for his contemporary gospel recordings.

Mother temporarily put at head of singer's estate

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — The financial estate of singer Natalie Cole, daughter of the late entertainer Nat King Cole, was placed uncer conservatorship Friday with her consent.

Marie Cole, her mother and the conservator, said that her daughter has been under severe mental stress from the fear of losing her voice because doctors recently discovered a nodule in her throat.

"Right now, it gives her a crutch to have her mother helping," said Mrs. Cole, who added that her daughter would undergo surgery next week and is expected to recover completely after several weeks of rest.

Several singers, including Frankie Laine, Mrs. Cole said, have successfully resumed their careers after having such nodules removed.

O'Neill's husband victim this time

BEDFORD, N.Y. (AP) — The husband of actress Jennifer O'Neill, who accidentally shot herself in the abdomen last month, needed eight stitches in his right elbow after cutting himself with a penknife, police said.

O'Neill

"It was an accident," said Lt. Ted Wyskida of the Bedford police.

John Lederer, 34, required emergency treatment at the Northern Westchester Hospital Center in Mount Kisco on Wednesday afternoon.

Nineteen days earlier, Miss O'Neill was taken to a hospital from their sprawling 22-room mansion for a self-inflicted gunshot wound to the abdomen. Police said the weapon accidentally discharged.

The gun was not licensed in New York, and a grand jury is reviewing the case to determine whether charges should be brought.

UAW executive board chooses Fraser's successor

AP Laserphoto

United Auto Workers President Douglas Fraser, right, and secretary treasurer, Raymond Majerus, left, confer Firiday as the Interanational Executive Board of the UAW prepares to nominate a candidate for the presidency of the union to succeed Fraser when he retires next year. Owen Bieber was elected.

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — United Auto Workers union Vice President Owen Bieber was selected Friday to succeed retiring President Douglas A. Fraser as leader of the nation's third-largest union, radio station WWJ reported.

The selection came after the union's 26-member executive board huddled behind closed doors for about four hours casting secret ballots.

Bieber was chosen by the board on a 15-11 vote after a few initial ballots in which none of the three candidates received the necessary 14 votes for the board's nomination, the station said.

The executive board, after making its decision, broke off to meet with the 346-member steering committee, composed of UAW members from the United States and Canada.

The board members avoided reporters, but at least two UAW members on their way in to the steering committee meeting said the executive board's choice was Bieber, head of the union's General Motors Corp. department.

On the way in to the executive board meeting earlier Friday, Bieber told reporters he was confident. "I think I will win," he said as he entered the room at the suburban Detroit hotel. He would not say by how many votes.

The steering committee is expected to approve the board's choice and pass it on to delegates at the UAW convention next May in Dallas.

While convention delegates officially choose the new president, traditionally that has been a formality because they always have backed the board's choice.

President Douglas A. Fraser has reached the union's mandatory retirement age of 65 and is to step down at the convention in Dallas.

Challenging Bieber, 52, for the top spot were Raymond Majerus, 58, secretary-treasurer, and Donald Ephlin, 57, vice president in charge of the UAW's Ford Motor Co. department.

Fraser, the fifth president in the union's 46-year history, has been president since 1977.

Officials say the new president will be the first of a new era. Previous presidents were involved in the union's earliest, and often violent, days but all of those men will be gone after Fraser leaves.

Today, the union's membership million dropped from 1.5 million in the late 1970s to just over 1.1 million and U.S. car sales have dipped from 8.31 million in 1979 to 6.2 million last year.

Most board members, including Fraser, refused to disclose who they support, but speculation had centered on Majerus and Bieber being in a dead heat as the vote neared.

In membership, the UAW ranks behind the Teamsters and Food and Commerical Workers unions in this country.

Bar owner liable for damages

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — A bar owner must pay $57,500 in the case of a drunken 16-year-old who was struck by a car after leaving the nightspot, a jury has decided.

54 cars wrecked

SELMA, Calif. (AP) — Fifty-four new automobiles on their way to dealers were wrecked when a train derailed on a rain-soaked railroad bed, officials say.

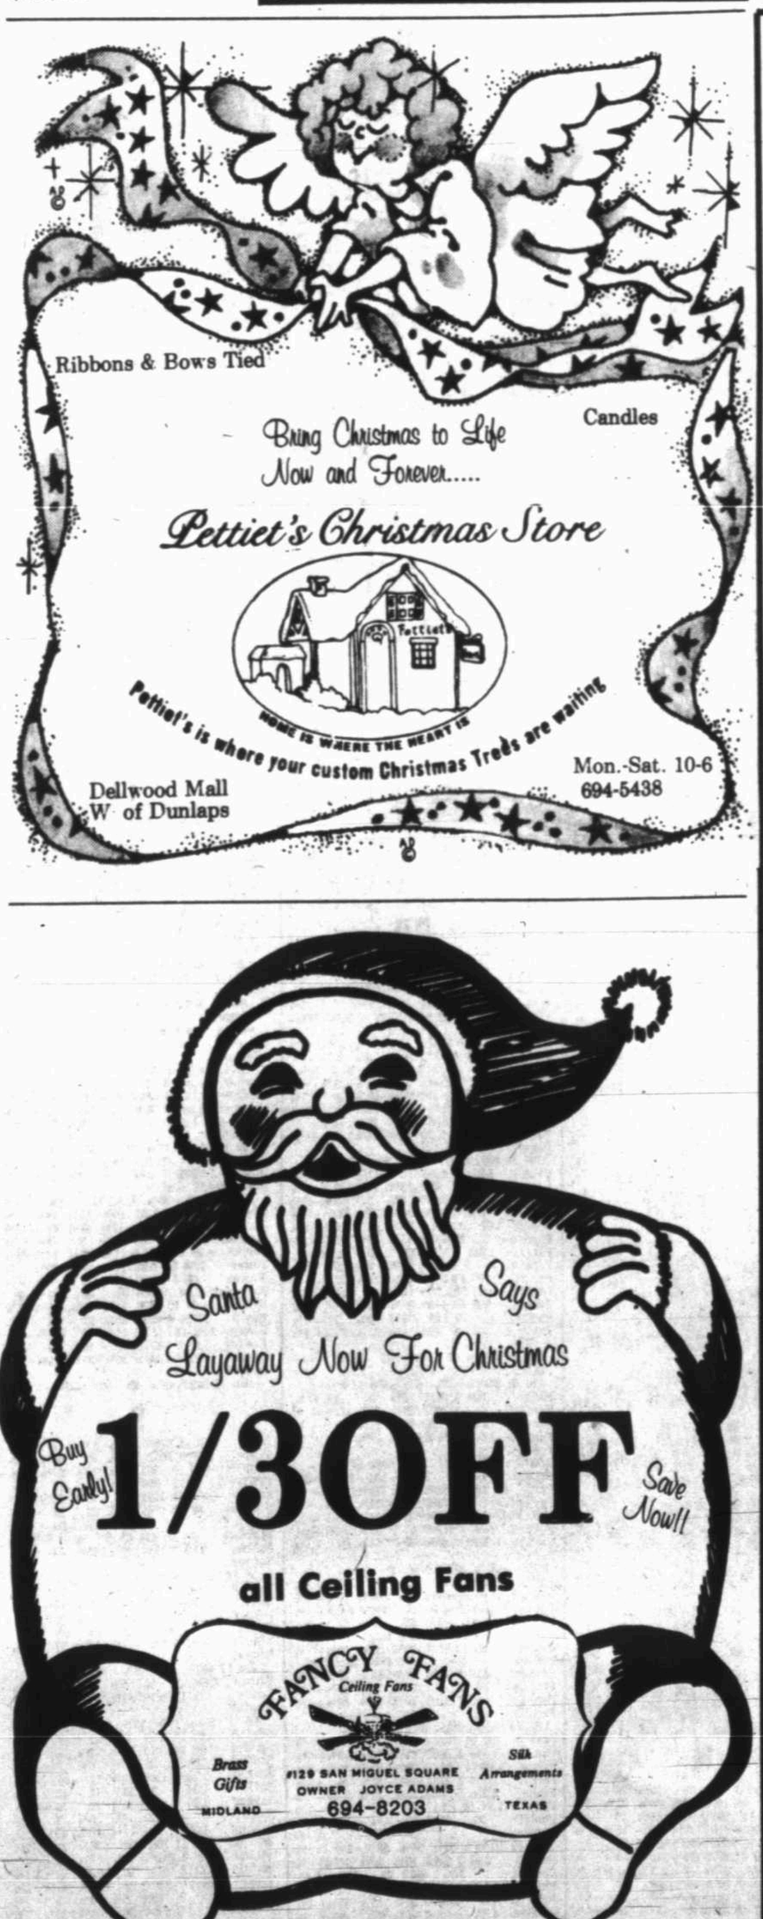

The accident Thursday morning in this town 200 miles north of Los Angeles closed the Southern Pacific line through the San Joaquin Valley. No one was injured.

Lloyd Nations, a division superintendent for Southern Pacific, said damage could reach $750,000.

J.R. symbol of wealthy America to foreigners

Hearst Feature Service

PARIS — Could J.R. Ewing be responsible for the rise of the dollar?

French stock broker Maxim Chautenay thinks the idea is a lot less far-fetched than it sounds. His theory is that the wheeler-dealer anti-hero of "Dallas" has come to represent all that is attractive and adventurous to foreigners, among them, foreign investors, about the American system.

"One reason the dollar keeps going up in value is that people the world over have increasingly come to believe America is one of the few countries still offering an opportunity for wealth to grow," he explained.

"In a zany, but very real way, the Ewings symbolize that for millions of non-Americans. It may sound ridiculous to Americans, but they would be surprised at how seriously others take these television characters as representatives of the American way of life in the late twentieth century."

He pointed out that "J.R." may now be the best-known American personage, real or imaginary, to the rest of the world. It is estimated that 350 million people in 55 nations follow the Ewings' weekly saga. In many of these countries, it is far-and-away the most popular program on TV.

"More people know 'J.R.' than know President Reagan," Chautenay said. "He may already be the most influential fictional character in world history."

The French broker hotly disputed the contention, often heard, that "Dallas" owes its popularity abroad to the garishly unappealing picture it draws of American society. According to this theory, foreigners love it because it helps them justify their anti-Americanism, as well as their sense of cultural superiority.

Chautenay calls this "nonsense."

As he sees it, "the kind of life led by the Ewings seems glamorous and highly desirable to most non-Americans. They would like to be able to do the same. Even J.R.'s amorality in business has its attractive side since it suggests that, in America, businessmen aren't dominated by the bureaucrats, as is the case in Europe and nearly everywhere else."

He thinks that many foreign entrepreneurs "would never admit to wishing to be like J.R. Indeed, they might not be if given the chance. But, nonetheless, they secretly yearn to at least have that chance."

"Dallas", he believes, has helped to revive the myth of America as a land where the sky's the limit.

"It may not be the sole reason for it," he conceded. "But it came along at just the right moment to help influence the rest of the world again in that direction."

University shows 24 straight hours of horror flicks

CHICAGO (AP) — Dennis Doubleday has rented 17 of the most horrible horror flicks he could find and will show them for 24 hours without a break at a Northwestern University auditorium.

It's the second year that the 26-year-old computer programmer and part-time student has headed the film festival, a highlight of NU's Activities and Organizations Film Board.

"Last year we had 15 movies that ran 20 hours," said Doubleday. "At the peak we had an audience of 300, mostly students, but only 40 lasted the distance.

"Some walked out after a couple of hours — that's how bad they thought it was. I stayed through it and really had a good time, because it was so bad."

Rentals average about $35 each. The latest flick is "Invasion of the Astros," a 1970 nail-biter. The oldest is the 1952 "Mesa of Lost Women." The cheapest rental, $15, was for the "Monster From The Ocean Floor."

"They can't get any cheaper than that," he said. "Trying to stay through it all is a challenge to yourself — like finishing a running marathon."

Pakistani junkyard is graveyard where old ships sail to die

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — Along a desolate stretch of shore a few miles up the coast from here, old ships come to die.

Deliberately beached at high tide, they lie side by side waiting to have their innards stripped and rusting hulls torn apart.

Gaddani Beach is the junkyard for as many as 100 vessels a year — many of them priced out of existence by soaring fuel costs.

Thousands of workers swarm over the decks, taking capstans and brass fittings as the ships, rocking gently on the swell, are driven further ashore by the tide.

The vessels are torn to pieces with a minimum of mechanization. Each hold is lopped off with acetylene torches until only the bow is left. For ships in the 30,000-ton class, the process can take six months.

The salvaged metal goes to a nearby Soviet-built steel mill that turns out steel rods and bars for Pakistan's industry.

Pakistan uses 500,000 tons of steel annually and the mill's furnaces are kept roaring around the clock.

There's a market for every part of the ship, says Haji Ghulamali Panjwani, who, in 10 years, has made shipbreaking Pakistan's biggest industry and one which is second only to Taiwan.

Brass rails may end up on a staircase in an affluent suburb of Karachi, a port city of 7 million people on the Arabian Sea. A ship's compass may find its way to one of the many shops specializing in brass and copperware, traditional Pakistani handicrafts.

Besides providing employment to 15,000 unskilled workers, shipbreaking has had an unexpected benefit for nearby rural areas, where life goes on pretty much the same as it did centuries ago.

Instead of using camels to draw water from wells sunk deep into the desert, many villages and some cottage industries have installed boilers from the ships as water pumps.

"As you can see, nothing goes to waste," said Punjwani, in an interview.

He added that he got into the business in the early 1970s while looking around an "easy way to make money." He said he saw the possibilities at Gaddani, arranged a bank loan and bought his first ship. He said he is now trying to form a joint venture with the nations of Bangladesh and Malaysia.

Panjwani said he buys 10 ships a year, mostly Greek-registered because Greece tends to buy old ships from Britain and the United States.

"Eventually, they're so obsolete they deliver them to us," he said with a grin.

All purchases are made through the London-based Baltic Exchange, he said. A 500-ton ship usually costs $850,000 after import duties and other expenses are tacked on.

Panjwani said he has to put up 25 percent of the cost and the banks cover the rest. He said he nets about $100,000 on each vessel.

"Using the steel from ships is the most economical way to get steel," Panjwani said. "The steel is of the highest quality and with labor costs in Europe what they are, it makes sense."

He estimated it costs $40-$50 a ton less to produce steel from old ships, meaning that Pakistan saves about $20 million a year in foreign exchange.

As the price of energy keeps rising, shipbreaking will become even more profitable, added Panjwani, 47, who studied business management at Columbia University in New York City.

The Gaddani yards are on a stretch of coastline that is the site of a nuclear power plant. Thus, the whole area is off-limits to foreigners.

Panjwani said his greatest coup to date has been the purchase of a New York-registered ship, the 7,000-ton American Hawk.

"I'm very excited about that," he said. "American vessels have better quality brass which fetches higher prices. What's more, they arrive with two full month's supply of food aboard; what is not used to feed the workers, I can sell. We can get a very good price for it."

Paleontologist finds fossils that may contain bones of man's ancestors

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Paleontologist Richard E. Leakey has announced the discovery of new fossils that he said may contain the bones of distant ancestors of man.

Leakey, an internationally known specialist on human origins and director of Kenya's National Museums, called the find "a tremendously important turning point in our science." He told a news conference Thursday it would help fill in the story of evolution as it occurred 14 to 15 million years ago.

The 20 fossil fragments, mostly teeth and jawbones, were discovered in Kenya's Samburu Hills on the eastern edge of the Great Rift Valley last month, on the last day of three months of field work by a joint team from Japan's Osaka University and the National Museums.

"Other material like this has been found, but never in this quantity," Leakey told the news conference at which he displayed some of the fossils. "That's really the importance of this, because with the quantity there's the potential for getting the component parts that will tell us what it is."

Leakey and Dr. Martin Pickford of the museum staff, who found the new site near the Rift Valley town of Maralal, said it was too early to determine whether the fossils are of an ancestor of contemporary apes or of man.

They said the new finds are similar to fossils found in 1934 in Pakistan and others discovered at Fort Ternan in western Kenya in 1961 by Leakey's late father, Louis B. Leakey.

The Pakistan fossils, between 8 and 9 million years old, and the Fort Ternan fossils, about 14 million years old, are the remains of a creature dubbed "Ramapithecus."

Louis Leakey originally named his find "Kenyapithecus," but other scientists accused him of nationalism and the name died out in writings on paleontology.

Richard Leakey said fossils from Samburu could bring back the name.

"Dr. Pickford's discovery of this site...suggests that Kenyapithecus is almost certainly distinct from the Asiatic form, but quite similar," Leakey said.

"I can't tell you at the moment whether Kenyapithecus is going to turn out to be a four-legged ape or an incipient hominid (man-like creature). But I can tell you we've now got the site, finally, where we're going to get the evidence to answer that question."

The new fossils have been dated from geological strata in that area at about 15 million years old, still long before the appearance of upright two-legged creatures generally considered human.

Leakey and other paleontologists have placed the origin of man between 3 million and 4 million years ago in East Africa, which has been called the "Cradle of Mankind."

The Kenyan-Japanese team has been working off and on in the sweltering Samburu Hills since 1980.

Jurors get just deserts

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Grand jurors work several hours each day without pay, but they get their just desserts. And appetizers. And main courses, of course.

Twenty-two members of the Orleans Parish grand jury did just that last month, to the tune of $1,188.58 — including a tip of $155 — for more than just a bite at Antoine's, one of New Orleans' most prestigious and expensive restaurants.

The dinner included $167.50 worth of filet mignon, $63.75 in crab dishes, $99 worth of baked Alaska and a bar tab of $258 — despite a City Council resolution passed in March asking that the jurors cut back on dining expenses.

Man repairs house he doesn't own

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — After a week of backbreaking labor to fix up a run-down house, John Halliburton learned he didn't own it. Although an agent showed him the property, Halliburton had really bought the house next door.

Halliburton, a graphic designer at Vanderbilt University, says the mixup was negligence on the part of the real estate agent, Paul Harmon. Harmon calls it "a great big accident...quite unfortunate."

As for Ann Enoch, executive director of the Tennessee Real Estate Commission, all she can say is that she's never heard of such a case.

Halliburton's problems began when he saw the picture of the house in the Multiple Listings Service guide, a brochure of property for sale in the Nashville area. He contacted his real estate agent who called Harmon, the agent who held the listing on the house.

Harmon said the wrong picture was entered in the guide. "The picture is really the bugaboo," he said. Besides, he said, the two houses are similar in appearance and there was no "For Sale" sign in front of either.

Halliburton and his real estate agent met Harmon at the pictured house, got in through a broken door because Harmon's key wouldn't work and looked the place over.

Financing for the house was arranged, Halliburton said, and he put $1,200 down and signed the deed in early summer. After undertaking the cleanup and repair of the house, Halliburton noticed the numbers on the house next door were the same as those on the deed he had signed.

"I knew then I had bought the wrong house," he said in an interview earlier this week. He said the "right" house was in such disrepair that he "wouldn't have even gone into" it, much less bought it.

"Naturally I freaked out," Halliburton said. "I immediately got an attorney."

Houston probably won't host convention

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Houston's fabled muggy summers and snarled mass transit probably will combine to disqualify the Texas city from consideration as the site for the 1984 Democratic National Convention, a Texas member of the site selection committee says.

"I really hate going to Calcutta in July," quipped Miller Bruner of Grand Prairie.

"The logistics are just impossible," she said. "The hotels are spread out all over town. The mass transit is bad. I think the whole thing would be a disaster."

Dallas will host the Republican presidential nominating session.

San Francisco has been reported as having the best shot at landing the Democrats' convention because it is the choice of Los Angeles lawyer Charles Manatt, chairman of the Democratic National Party.

Los Angeles had been mentioned as a possible site but was eliminated because it is also hosting the 1984 Summer Olympics, said Robert Neuman, communications director for the Democratic National Committee.

Texas officials connected with the selection of the July convention say Manatt's influence will outweigh any of the Lone Star State's attraction.

"San Francisco is most likely if Los Angeles is not, because Manatt wants to have it in California," Texas Democratic Party Chairman Bob Slagle told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

Slagle agreed with Ms. Bruner, the only Texan named to the 26-member selection committee, that Houston "would be a tough place to have a national convention."

Other cities sent lengthy questionnaires were Miami, Detroit, Chicago, New York and New Orleans, he said.

"The hotels, because of Houston's lack of planning and zoning, are scattered all over the world," Slagle said. "And they really don't have a good transportation system that's inexpensive for delegates."

Texas party leaders said they feared the national convention, if held in Houston, would detract energies from the 1984 state campaigns, and might not be worth the risk to the state's reputation if something should go wrong.

"Who do they blame?" one party official asked. "They don't blame the national committee. They blame the host state. You can come out of it really bad and get burned. Why take a chance on that?"

Ms. Bruner remembers the 1980 state Democratic convention in Houston with distaste.

Farmer may have found missing executive's body

SULPHUR SPRINGS (AP) — A farmer rounding up loose cows Friday stumbled upon a decomposed body believed to that of a former Braniff International executive who had been missing for almost a month, sheriff's officials said.

Edson Emerson Beckwith, 51, of Dallas, was reported missing by his wife Oct. 14 after he failed to return home from an East Texas business meeting.

The body discovered about 11:30 a.m. was fully clothed, and a wallet found on the body had a drivers license and credit cards with Beckwith's name, said Hopkins County sheriff's deputy R.H. Shackelford.

"We found all the identification and miscellaneous things," he said. "We're just assuming it's Beckwith."

The pasture is about four miles northwest of Sulphur Springs, about five miles from where Beckwith's car was found abandoned along a highway Oct. 15, Shackelford said.

The body was found in the middle of the pasture, about three miles from a busy state highway, he said.

"We just can't speculate how long he might have been laying in that pasture," Shackelford said. "We can't even speculate how he might have died."

The body was taken to the Dallas County Medical Examiners office Friday afternoon, but a spokesman there refused comment.

The Texas Rangers treated the disappearance as a missing persons case, but Beckwith's wife, Jane, organized search parties and has said she was sure foul play was involved.

"He's always been most prompt," she said shortly after he disappeared. "He is a most precise man, a meticulous man."

Receipts showed Beckwith, a financial consultant, bought gas in Caddo Mills, about 40 miles from Brashear, where his car eventually was found. Brashear is not on the way back to Dallas.

"Somebody else must have driven back east," Mrs. Beckwith has said.

Beckwith left Braniff as senior vice president of finance in March 1981, shortly after president and chairman Harding Lawrence resigned.

Threats demanding rehirings don't close down refinery

TEXAS CITY (AP) — An Amoco Oil Co. refinery operated normally Friday, despite threats demanding terminated employees be rehired, a company spokesman said.

"Employees are coming and going like always. It's business as usual," said spokesman John Vesey.

Amoco received a "demand that terminated employes be reinstated in their jobs. Threats against Amoco facilities were made if Amoco did not comply," Vesey said.

However, he insisted, there was no bomb threat.

Company officials refused to disclose when the demand was made, how many facilities were involved, whether monetary demands were made or deadlines set or security beefed up.

One employee, who asked not to be identified, said security had been tightened and private guards hired.

"Amoco has got rent-a-cops on every hole out there," he said. "They are going through everybody's belongings entering or leaving. One contractor said they made him do everything except empty the gasoline out of his tank."

Vesey said FBI agents were investigating the matter. FBI spokesman Ron Kettler declined comment.

Organizational LULAC meeting set for tonight

The League of United Latin American Citizens has scheduled a Midland chapter organizational meeting for 7 p.m. today at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Mission, 1708 N. Fort Worth St., according to West Texas Legal Services attorney Dilma Quevada.

"Basically, it's a social get-together to determine how much interest there is in the community (for a Midland LULAC chapter)," she said. More information can be obtained by calling 683-8084.

State highways' deterioration told in department report

HOUSTON (AP) — The state will need $61 billion during the next two decades to repair and maintain its long-ignored roadways, bridges and intercoastal waterways, a report says.

The state's highway system was not designed to meet current traffic demands and is deteriorating rapidly, said Mark Yancey, assistant engineer-director of the Texas Highway Department.

The report, which sprang from Gov. Bill Clements' Year 2000 study, concluded that during the next 20 years about $8.5 billion will be needed for "We need a good billion more in constant dollars each year. And it's all auditable. We've done away with all the sky blue trimmings," Yancey said.

Without the funds, the department will have to concentrate maintenance and construction efforts on interstate and U.S. highways and neglect necessary repairs on state highways and farm-to-market roads, Yancey said.

The report, published in Friday's Houston Chronicle, has been issued to members of the budget board and will be distributed to other legislators during the 1983 session.

LUBBOCK—In this age of Jet lag football, the John Elways, Tom Ramseys, Dan Marinos, Todd Blackledges, Dave Hostetlers, Don Fluties ad infinitum, Southern Methodist University and Tium.

And while the Overland Trail may be passe in many parts of the land, the Mustangs and Red Raiders wouldn't have it any other way. At least, SMU wouldn't, not when with a couple of 1,000 yard tailbacks sharing playing time. And Tech last week sent Anthony Hutchinson careening into the melee up front 43 times in a 16-14 victory over TCU.

Last week, James enjoyed his biggest day of the season, 130 yards in rushing, his fourth 100-yard game this year as SMU whipped Rice, 41-14. Dickerson had a paltry 102 yards, his eighth over game of more than 100 yards. In two of those games, Dickerson, a darkhorse Heisman Trophy candidate, has surpassed 200 yards.

DEPENDING UPON how you figure it, it should be a great game or no contest. SMU is unbeaten, 9-0, and No. 2 in the nation. Tech is struggling at 4-5 and some wags claim it should let Odessa Permian, scheduled for an 8 p.m. Jones Stadium date against Lubbock Monterey, play in SMU in their stead.

"Hogwash," Raider loyalists retaliate. "Look at the comparative scores. Tech beat TCU 16-14. SMU beat TCU 16-13. Tech lost to Baylor 23-24. SMU barely beat Baylor 22-19. SMU beat Texas A&M, but so did Tech. SMU hasn't played anyone the caliber of Washington, I don't think, and the then No. 1 Huskies were lucky to win 10-3."

SMU FANS raise the issue of comparative scores against Texas and Rice and Tech fans respond, "We weren't talking about that."

Still, recent history is on the side of the Raiders. SMU hasn't beaten Tech on the wind-swept South Plains in their last six tries in a series Tech leads 18-11.

In fact, the only time the Dickerson-James Mustangs have been shutout was in that 14-0 icebox win of two years ago. Tech nose guard Gabe Rivera was at his best, winning AP SWC Defensive Player of the Week for his destruction of the Mustang running game. In 1978, Tech won a 19-16 thriller it wasn't supposed to.

Last time SMU won in Lubbock was in 1968 when quarterback Chuck Hixon triggered the Ponies' updated version of the Aerial Circus.

So, while the Mustangs are favored by 14, strange things sometimes happen in Lubbock.

A LOT rides on the outcome. Should No. 1 Georgia stumble against Auburn, that would leave the door open for SMU.

Elsewhere in the SWC, Arkansas was a 15-point favorite to handle the Texas Aggies in a night game at Little Rock; Texas was a 13-point favorite to mash Texas Christian in Fort Worth; and Baylor was an 11-point pick over Rice in Houston.

Houston is idle and will regroup after its 50-0 pounding by Texas last weekend.

Arkansas and Texas will be fighting to stay in the title race and a possible Cotton Bowl berth. Each team has one league loss.

Arkansas plays SMU next Saturday in Texas Stadium. If the Razorbacks beat Texas A&M, SMU, and Texas Dec. 4 on national television, then Arkansas goes to the Cotton Bowl.

TEXAS, WHICH lost to SMU, will have to beat TCU, Texas A&M on Thanksgiving Day, and Arkansas while SMU loses to both Tech and Arkansas to make a return visit to the Cotton Bowl.

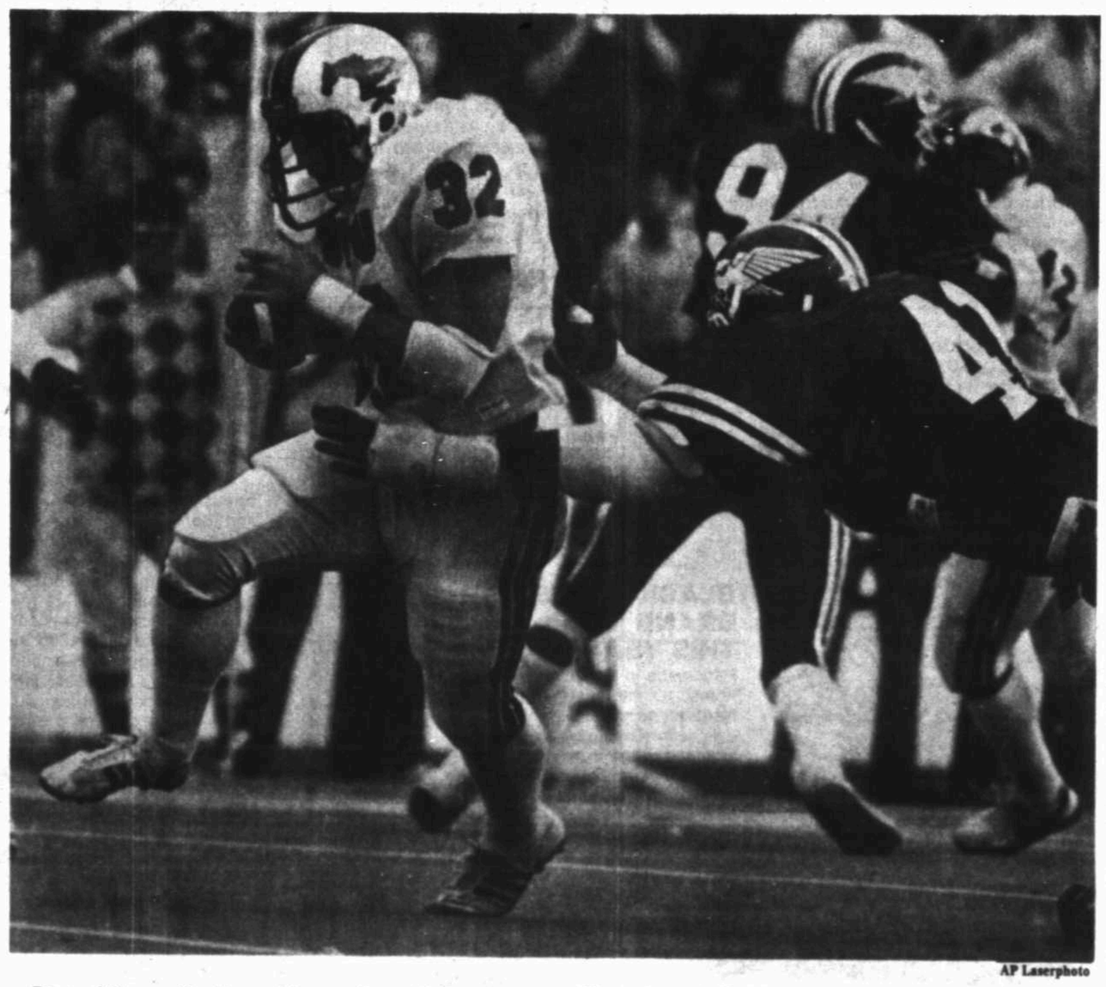

Texas has won 14 straight games over TCU. Most of the current Horned Frogs were first- and second-graders the last time TCU won, 24-17 at Austin in 1967.

TCU hasn't beaten Texas in Amon Carter Stadium since 1958, the year the Horned Frogs last won an SWC title.

Texas hasn't allowed a point in two games, beating Tech 27-0 and, of course, Houston 50-0.

The Owls ambushed the Bears 17-14 last year and are 8-8 in Rice Stadium since 1951.

AP Laserphoto

Part of Texas Tech's problem today will be stopping Craig James (32), who rambles 19 yards against Rice, above. If Raiders can do that, all they'll have to worry about is Eric Dickerson.

BATTLE SCENE

Notre Dame last week took care of the proposed national championship Cotton Bowl game between the SMU-Arkansas winner and unblemished Pittsburgh. In fact, Baylor wiped out the Cotton Bowl's 2-to-1 edge for such a game over the Sugar Bowl by beating Arkansas.

So it's all even now, with Georgia and SMU still unbeaten, but if the Bulldogs remain that way, their No. 1 ranking will give them the edge in landing, what on paper, should be the best post-season game, the one in which No. 1 would be at stake.

But the season has a few weeks to run, yet, and both SMU and Georgia could lose, which would propel Arizona State and LSU to the forefront. Both also are unbeaten.

Penn State, as of now, looms as perhaps the most likely visitor to Dallas, New Year's Day, but Notre Dame could take care of that today, at the same time projecting itself to the top of the Cotton Bowl's most-wanted list.

An SMU-Notre Dame matchup would ring out some memories of Auld Lange Syne, particularly 1949, Kyle Rote and the near upset of the undefeated Irish.

LAST WEEK, we experienced our most successful week of the season in playing the point spread, finally graphically illustrating the evils of gambling on the vagaries of college football. You have undoubtedly seen many beneficiaries of our advice around Midland this last week. They are the ones wearing wheel barrels.

The Southwest Conference...

Texas Tech plus 13½ over SMU—If Raiders could hold No. 1 team to 10-3 win on road, they oughta be able to hold No. 2 to 13½.

Arkansas minus 15½ over Texas A&M—Assuming that those weren't the real Razorbacks against Baylor last week and those are the real Aggies we've been seeing all season.

Texas minus 13½ over TCU—The Frogs' F.A. Dry and Longhorns aren't going to help matters.

Rice plus 11 over Baylor—If you've got money to bet, keep it in your pocket on this one.

The Big Ones...

Washington plus 4 over Arizona State—We like Sun Devils, but four is irresistable, even if it is at Tempe.

Penn State minus 6 over Notre Dame—Lions were alerted by what happened to Pitt last week. Still, is a lot to give at South Bend. Can we change that pick?

Auburn plus 6½ over Georgia—We've underrated Auburn all year. Now, maybe we're underrating Georgia. Talk about confidence in your picks.

Clemson plus 2 over Maryland—Maryland has beaten spread every game this year, so the law of averages is against the Terps this week.

Stanford plus 8 over UCLA—Two passing teams. Anything can happen.

Illinois minus 4 against Indiana—Illini usually loses, but only by a point or two. Indiana beat Wisconsin, but lost to Michigan State. A vote for consistency.

Wisconsin plus 3 over Iowa—The way these teams play, give me the points.

Oklahoma minus 13 over Missouri—Everybody has been showing the Show-Me state boys and Sooners should, too.

USC minus 4 over Arizona—Trojans dominate play.

The not so Big Ones...

VPI plus 5½ over Vanderbilt—I know Commodores are good, but Gobblers aren't all that bad.

Syracuse plus 11½ over Boston College—Unless Flutie has spectacular day, Orange should beat the spread.

Kansas State minus 7 over Oklahoma State—On form, it looks like a cinch, but Wildcats have run a string of emotional games and could be drained.

Alabama minus 10½ over Southern Miss—After the Bear's "changes should be made" quote of last week, it's bad news for Tide's next foe.

Wouldn't touch with a 10-foot pole...

Tennessee plus 3 over Ole Miss—

Andrews gains playoff berth

By CHAD PUERLING
Sports Writer

ANDREWS — The Andrews' defense led the way as the Mustangs won the second playoff spot in District 2-AAAA, beating Monahans 17-7 here Friday night.

The Mustangs will face Lubbock Estacado, 12-6 victors over Lubbock Dunbar, next week in Lubbock. The date and time will be decided Saturday morning when the two coaching staffs meet.

The Mustang defense held Rickey Boysaw, the district's leading rusher with 1,518 yards in nine games, to 94 yards and intercepted the Loboes four times.

Turnovers were a major factor as Andrews suffered two fumbles and two interceptions while the Loboes lost one fumble in addition to their four interceptions.

BOTH DEFENSES played well but Andrews was better able to capitalize on the the turnovers and made the big plays when necessary.

The Mustangs managed only 146 yards of offense while holding Monahans to 186. Not included in the statistics are kickoff returns of 34 and 44 yards, by Andrews' tailback Breg Petross. The later set up the only score of the second half, a 31-yard field goal by Brad Boynton.

Meanwhile Monahans specialty teams had difficulty handling the ball and cost the Loboes valuable field position throughout the game.

By virtue of their field position the Mustangs controlled the game until midway through the first period when they suffered the two consecutive turnovers.

With a defender wrapped around his legs, Quarterback Bill Morrison tried a pitchout that Petross couldn't handle. Greg Winder recovered the loose ball on the on the Mustangs 44 yardline.

ANDREWS held, forcing a punt, but Jerald Brown fumbled the kick and Doug Burke recovered the ball only 13 yards from paydirt.

It was Boysaw for five and Boysaw for eight as the Loboes took the early lead. Todd Welch kicked the extra point to make it 7-0.

The momentum seemed to shift following the two fumbles and the score but the mustangs came roaring back.

Petross returned the kickoff 34 yards to put the Mustangs in good field position on their own 40.

On third and nine Morrison rolled to his right and, on his first pass of the night hit a wide open Ronnie Wallace who scampered into the endzone. It was the only pass completion of the game for Morrison but it was gocd for 59 yards and a touchdown. Todd Welch

Hall decision to skip 500 leaves Johnny looking

(Compiled from wire reports)

Midland's Jim Hall will not enter a car in the Indianapolis 500 this year, which leaves three-time 500 winner Johnny Rutherford without a ride.

Hall's Midland-based Chaparral Racing Team won two Indys in five attempts and was leading in a third when a minor mechanical defect sidelined the car in the 1979 race.

Hall revolutionized racing with his ground effects aerodynamics cars. Hall originally gained world-wide fame in sports car racing in the 1960s with the Chaparral. After an accident, Jim withdrew from racing, but couldn't stay away.

He returned with Brian Redman as his driver to win the Formula I series and then entered his first 500 car in 1977, and amazed the racing world by winning.

Last year, the Chaparral was plagued by problems and couldn't match the speed of some of the other qualifying cars in the Indy Trials. It was a long year, one in which Rutherford wound up racing for the Chaparral Team in a car other than one designed by Hall.

Rutherford, 44, said he did not find out he was out of a job until Thursday.

"I honestly don't know what my prospects are (for next season)," Rutherford said. "I only found out Thursday. I'm a free agent now and I've got some feelers out. I've made a few calls and I've got a couple of things hanging, but it's too soon to know anything.

"I've had a couple of offers to run just Indy, but I'm looking for a complete deal. I'm looking for a home."

Hall said he felt badly for Rutherford because "we've gotten along awfully well and I hated to disappoint him. But I was looking at the future and thinking about what I'd be bringing to the party next year."

Hall had been involved in negotiations with regular sponsor Pennzoil for about six weeks before making his decision. A spokesman for the sponsor said the company expects to stay in auto racing in 1983 and that it is possible that Rutherford, who has done television commercials for Pennzoil, could take the sponsor with him to another ride.

Rutherford, who won Indy and the national driving championship and set a record for most racing miles completed in one Indy car season in 1980 — his first seeson with Hall — won the opening race in 1981 and has not had a victory since. He said that for most of 1981 and the entire 1982 season, during which the team abandoned the aging Hall-designed Chaparral racer in which Rutherford dominated in 1980, were frustrating.

"The 1980 season was the best," said Rutherford, who also won the Indy 500 in 1974 and 1976. "After that, things just went into a glide, and they finally hit the ground."

Rutherford said he passed up several opportunities with other teams while waiting for Hall to make his decision.

"It was a very inopportune time for Hall to make his decision," he said.

Hall, the U.S. road racing champion in 1964 and winner of the 12 hours of Sebring in 1965, quit driving after being seriously injured in a Can-Am race at Las Vegas in 1968. He began to design and build cars, coming up with such innovations as lightweight aluminum and fiberglass chassis, the automatic transmission for racing, wings for race cars and the ground effects principle that uses the air flowing beneath the car to provide downforce, virtually gluing the cars to the track through the turns.

Unser, another three-time Indy winner, drove the Chaparral Indy cars in 1978 and 1979. Unser became the only Indy car Triple Crown winner the first season, winning the Indianapolis, Pocono and Ontario 500-mile races. He won one race in 1979 while breaking in the new ground effects Chaparral, but quit the team following the season, opening the way for Rutherford to step in.

Overall, Hall's Indy cars have won 10 races, including five in 1980.

Hall decision to withdraw from the 500 leaves Midland without a racing team for the 1983 Indy race. Earlier, Bobby Hillin of the Longhorn Racing Team announced he was abandoning racing because the economy was not favorable at present.

Pryor successfully defends his title

MIAMI (AP) — Aaron Pryor is called "The Hawk," but Friday night he was a hurricane who swept away Alexis Arguello's dreams of becoming the first man to win four world boxing titles.

Pryor and Arguello met in savage warfare in the Orange Bowl, and when it was over in the 14th round, Arguello was slumped unconscious on the canvas and Pryor, the World Boxing Association junior lightweight champion, had the recognition he had so long sought.

"He taught me a lot," Pryor said of Arguello, who remained motionless in the ring for several minutes while being tended to by a doctor and given oxygen.

The World Boxing Council lightweight champion walked out of the ring to thunderous cheers, with aides holding him up by his arms.

An aide for Arguello said the Nicaraguan, who lives in nearby Kings Bay, Fla., was talking in his dressing room but would not hold a news conference because "he is emotionally drained."

Arguello later went to a hospital, according to trainer Eddie Futch, who said the fighter was clear-headed and able to walk to the ambulance by himself.

"He showed me their are fighters with hearts as big as mine when he weathered the storm in the first five rounds," said Pryor, who came out attacking in the early rounds but later showed that he knows how to box, too.

But Arguello couldn't weather the storm in the 14th round. It's doubtful any man who weighed only 138½ pounds could have.

The 27-year-old Pryor slammed home a right to the jaw, followed by a left that obviously hurt Arguello and sent him staggering backward across the ring and into the ropes. Pryor pounced.

He trapped Arguello against the ropes and delivered at least 14 savage blows to the head before referee Stanley Christodoulou jumped in to stop it at 1:06 of the round.

As Christodoulou pulled Pryor away, Arguello slumped unscounscious to the canvas and his handlers charged into the ring to aide the stricken fighter.

PLAINVIEW—San Angelo's Bobcats, the No. 2 team in District 4-5A, knocked off the No. 1 team in 5-5A by pushing over a fourth quarter to beat Plainview's Bulldogs in bi-district action Friday night.

San Angelo jumped in front 14-0 in the first period when Mel Wright passed 35 yards to Greg Bingham for a touchdown and then Carl Campbell raced 25 yards for another score.

Plainview battled back with 15 third period points on a five-yard run by Willie Williams and a five-yard run by Johnnie Johnson. Mel George ran the two pointer.

Wright led San Angelo with 62 yards in 22 carries and Klepac had 58 on 15 attempts. For Plainview, Williams rushed for 90 yards in 15 carries.

San Angelo is now 8-3 for the season.

LA Lakers top Houston Rockets

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Earvin "Magic" Johnson scored 28 points and grabbed 10 rebounds Friday night as the Los Angeles Lakers rolled to a 127-96 National Basketball Association victory over the winless Houston Rockets.

The victory was the sixth in a row for Los Angeles after a season-opening loss to Golden State. Houston, the NBA's only winless team, dropped to 0-7.

The Lakers took a commanding lead by outscoring the Rockets 18-6 in the final six minutes of the first quarter to

Americans making inroads in NHL

An AP Sports Analysis
By BARRY WILNER

Hockey might be the Canadian game, but Americans have been making significant inroads in the sport, especially in the last 14 years.

A study of National Hockey League rosters shows that nearly 10 percent of the players are American-born. Contrast that with 1967-68 — the league's first expansion year, when six teams joined the ranks — when six Americans (1.9 percent) skated in the NHL, and you can see how far U.. players have come.

Ten years ago, only 20 American-born players appeared in NHL games, including Craig Patrick, currently the general manager of the New York Rangers, and Robbie Ftorek, a center for the Rangers. Four years later, the number had increased to 34.

BUT THE largest single-season increase came in 1979-80, when four World Hockey Association teams came aboard. Sixty-six Americans — 24 more than the previous year — entered the NHL, including several members of the gold-medal 1980 U.S. Olympic team.

There are plenty of reasons for the increased participation by Americans in the NHL. Many communities which hadn't been exposed to the sport became familiar with hockey as it expanded across the United States. In places like Philadelphia, Long Island and St. Louis, kids began skating and stickhandling as well as punting and dribbling.

Coaching improved on all levels, especially in high school and college. In fact, college hockey coaches are generally considered to be the best in the sport and their teaching skills are only now being fully utilized in the NHL.

With expansion, new sources of talent were needed. The Canadian junior ranks couldn't stock all the professional teams with players, so the pros began looking to U.S. colleges and high schools and to Europe.

The influx of collegiate players into the NHL has been significant. In 1967-68, only five of the 305 players who appeared in NHL games had any college background — the most notable college-trained player was Red Berenson, but he was a Canadian native. But by 1972-73, 26 U.S. college graduates were aboard, an increase of 50 percent over the previous season.

BY 1979-80, almost 12 percent of all NHL performers were college-trained. That percentage has remained virtually the same, with 62 of the 506 players in the league today having American college backgrounds.

And if you think that those players are the kind who fill out rosters and usually ride the bench, consider that the list includes right wing Dave Taylor, probably the best player on the Los Angeles Kings and a perennial All-Star; defenseman Rod Langway, another All-Star; high-scoring center Peter McNab of the Boston Bruins, and All-Star goalies Tony Esposito, Mike Liut and Glenn "Chico" Resch. Plus, of course, all those gold medal-carrying Olympians.

Garvey says owners cracking

NEW YORK (AP) — Declaring that management is feeling the pressure of eight weeks without games, Ed Garvey, executive director of the striking National Football League Players Association, has called again for a return to the bargaining table in the 54-day old walkout.

"Their media blitz shows they're really feeling the pressure," said Garvey. "The time is right financially and from the standpoint of weather ... from every consideration to get back to the table. It's time to resolve this now."

Garvey, whose bid for a resumption of talks was rejected Thursday by Jack Donlan, chief negotiator for the NFL owners, said: "If the networks had not underwritten the strike, it would have been over by now. The Board of Representatives is ready to compromise. It's time to get back to the table for that."

Garvey returned to Washington following a Friday press conference in which he said management's attempt to sell its last proposal for a settlement to the players directly by going over the head of the union had failed.

To prove that, the union paraded in 20 players who testified that their clubs had either rejected or refused to even consider the proposal. San Francisco and Philadelphia sent word of their support to be delivered by other players. Missing were representatives of Houston, Dallas, New Orleans and Denver — all of whom have accepted the offer in principle with various changes — and Atlanta and St. Louis.

Tom Condon of the Kansas City Chiefs, a member of the union's executive board, said his team was not interested in the settlement offer.

"We have unanimous support for the union position," Condon said. "The players have not received copies of the proposal but I read it to our alternate player rep, Clark Gaines, and he relayed it to them.

Stanford serves as reliable trial horse for contenders

The Washington Post
and Los Angeles Times

He's good. But not too good. He hits hard. But not often. He's fast. But not very. His chief virtue is, he can be beat. Also, he looks good on your record. His principal function is, he makes character, builds reputations for those he fights. Everyone tries to get on his schedule.

Stanford is the Tiger Jones of football. You remember Tiger Jones? The thick-necked, plodding, earnest, dependable middleweight of the '50s who always thought things were going to be better. Tiger always showed up, he tried hard, but he was always a punch short, a step slow. He couldn't really get out of the way of a good punch. But he "could take it." An "opponent" has to be able to "take it" Because, he always is.

STANFORD GETS good football players. But not enough of them. Stanford never beats anybody good. It seldom loses to anybody bad. An "opponent" must not become a door mat. It destroys their usefulness.

An "opponent" must always get up, never take the count, throw in the towel, or quit in his corner. If possible, he should lose close, a split decision, maybe. His deficiencies should usually come in defense. He should be able to flurry. Occasionally, very occasionally, he should spring an upset to keep his credibility.

You study Stanford's football record and you see where they are the great trial horses of the gridiron. They can punch with anybody but, by the end of the season, they're talking through their ears. They beat Ohio State. And, then, they lose to San Jose State.

Like all "opponents," their contests are all crowd-pleasers. No one ever wants his money back after a Stanford game. They score 31 points whether they win or lose. They get clobbered by Southern California, 42-21. Then, they turn around and wallop Washington, which thought at the time it was No. 1 in the country. That's one thing about "opponents." They must be no respecters of reputations. "Opponents" must always be optimists.

"OPPONENTS" never get to be "contenders." They're always tangled in the ropes. Stanford gets 11 of the state's best football players every year. But USC get about 60, UCLA, 40, and Arizona State everything that's left.

When you're a punch short, or a nickel light in the pot, you have to take chances. Your only real hope is to knock the other guy out. So, whereas the solid contending teams build from the line out, a Stanford starts with a quarterback. A good team wins games without the ball. It doesn't need it much. And good teams see to it that it doesn't get it much.

STANFORD occasionally musters up a good team. It had the "Vow Boys" in the mid-30s who vowed they would never lose to USC again in their collegiate careers — and they didn't. But the university soon reverts to its ornamental status in Pacific Coast football.

This Saturday, the "opponent" finds itself in a familiar matchup. It faces fading contender, UCLA, in a game which UCLA has to win but Stanford only has to show up for.

If Stanford were a boxer, no one would duck him. The managers' word would be "good, game opponent, but can't hurt you unless you get careless. Don't beat him too bad. The game needs him."

November separates men from boys

By Associated Press

Ohio State's Earle Bruce never has been among the most quotable of college football coaches, but he has some valid points this week.

"This is the month that separates the men from the boys. It's the pretenders in October and the contenders in November," said Bruce.

Saturday's schedule supports his theory. For example:

—Top-ranked Georgia visits Auburn with a chance to clinch the Southeastern Conference championship and the host spot in the Sugar Bowl.

—Third-ranked Arizona State will be shooting for its first Rose Bowl berth and Pacific-10 Conference title when it entertains No.7 Washington in a night game.

Georgia, SMU and Arizona State are the only unbeaten-untied teams in the country, but they are not the only ones playing important games Saturday.

—Fourth-ranked Nebraska, tied with Oklahoma for the Big Eight lead, visits Iowa State, while the No.15 Sooners entertain Missouri. The Oklahoma-Nebrasks showdown is scheduled for Lincoln, Neb. Nov. 26.

—Fifth-ranked Penn State visits No.13 Notre Dame — its first trip ever to South Bend, with the winner emerging as a prime candidate for a New Year's Day bowl.

—Sixth-ranked Louisiana State, still hoping for an SEC title and the Sugar Bowl if Georgia stumbles, visits Mississippi State.

—No.11 Clemson is at No.18 Maryland, with the winner clinching at least a tie for Atlantic Coast Conference honors.

—No. 14 Michigan entertains Purdue needing a victory to win the Big Ten championship and go to the Rose Bowl for the fifth time in seven years.

The rest of the schedule for The Associated Press Top Twenty finds No.8 Pitt at Army; Louisville at No.9 Florida State at night; Texas A&M vs. No.10 Arkansas at night in Little Rock; Stanford at No.12 UCLA, which still has an outside shot at the Rose Bowl; No.16 Southern California at Arizona for a night game; Southern Mississippi at No.17 Alabama, and No.20 Texas at Texas Christian. Thursday night, No.19 West Virginia whipped Rutgers 44-17.

Georgia-Auburn is the South's oldest rivalry, dating back to 1892. Ironically, Georgia Coach Vince Dooley is an Auburn grad, while Auburn's Pat Dye went to Georgia. And Auburn in 1979 was the last SEC team to beat the Bulldogs.

"What impresses me about Auburn is that they are a complete football team," said Dooley. "They have a great defense, an excellent kicking game, a superb Wishbone offense with a great stable of backs."

"Arizona State never has played for the Rose Bowl before, so this could be the biggest game in ASU history," he added. "I probably haven't coached in a game of this magnitude, either, because I've never been in a position to go to the Rose Bowl."

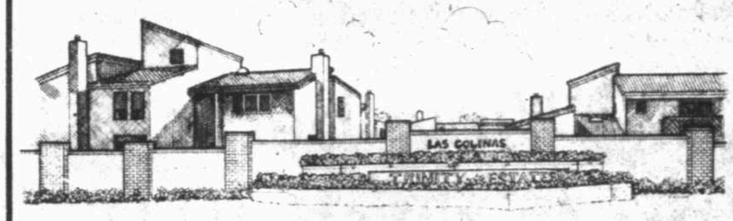

Notre Dame, which knocked Pitt from the top of the rankings last week, has a chance to spoil Penn State's dream of a possible national championship, which it has never won.

"There's nothing more satisfying than beating the No.1 team in the nation, but there's no time to celebrate with Penn State coming to town," said Notre Dame Coach Gerry Faust.

"Penn State's on a roll now. They gained almost 500 yards against a good North Carolina State team, and their defense probably played better than it had all year long.

Q A

Let's Talk. There has been a lot of information lately about where Southwestern Bell is headed. About where our coming separation from AT&T is going to take us. We want you to understand what's ahead. What changes are coming. How they'll affect you. So let's talk.

Q. Is Southwestern Bell really going to be split off from the Bell System?

A. Yes. AT&T will separate Southwestern Bell and the other local Bell telephone companies from the Bell System. Southwestern Bell will be an independent company.

Q. I own AT&T stock. Will my investment be split between AT&T and the local operating companies?

A. Yes. Your AT&T stock represents an investment in the total Bell System—AT&T and each of its units, including Southwestern Bell.

Q. Can I arrange to receive all my holdings only in Southwestern Bell?

A. No. At divestiture, each AT&T shareholder will receive a piece of the new AT&T company plus a proportionate value of the divested companies (organized into seven operating regions). After divestiture, however, each share owner can decide whether to retain all or part of that investment.

If you have other questions, let's talk. Just call 1-800-555-5000 between 11 a.m. and 8 p.m., Monday-Friday.

There'll be someone to talk to.

Sul Ross U. seeks NAIA playoff spot

ALPINE—As far as Joe George is concerned, the NAIA Division II playoffs are something he doesn't want to talk about. Right now, the biggest game on his mind is Lubbock Christian College, winless to be sure, "But if we don't beat them, we can forget the playoffs."

George's Sul Ross University Lobos are 9-0 and finish the season today against LCC.

"If we win the next game," says George, "They can't keep us out (of the playoffs). The way it works is that there are four areas and four voters in each area. If you finish in the top eight in the nation, you've got a a good chance to go. Last week we were No. 6 and then beat Austin College, a ranked team while Westminster, Pa., ranked No. 4, lost, so we should move up.

"Still, if we lose..." George's voice trails off as though the consequences are too horrible to think about.

George's reticence, however, doesn't silence the speculation and if Sul Ross gets into the playoffs, it will probably be against California Lutherna or William Jewell, Mo.

"They don't pair off the teams by ranking, but rather by geographical proximity," says George. "And, yes, we have a good chance of landing a playoff game, since they prefer to keep the games in a warm weather site."

Of course, if it's Lutheran, the West Coast team might have the edge. If it's William Jewell, SRU would be favored.

Today's game against LCC is scheduled for a 2:30 p.m. kickoff. Sul Ross clinched the TIAA title with its win 32-25 win over AC last week, but LCC is the lone barrier between the Lobos and an unbeaten regular season. In the first meeting, SRU won 21-7.

Rankin captures 29-0 win

FORT DAVIS—Dennis Black scored on runs of nine and 18 yards to pace Rankin's Red Devils to a 29-0 win over Fort Davis here Friday night as the season ended for both teams.

Quad Midkiff got Rankin on the board in the first period with a 15-yard run and then Jesse Hernandez kicked his first of three extra points.

Black's score made it 15-0 after a period when Chuck Browning rushed for a two-pointer.

Rolling up 201 yards to 91 for Fort Davis, Rankin scored again in the third period on an 18-yard run by Black.

Frank Quiroz' two-yard plunge in the fourth period was the final TD.

Andrews wins by 17-7

On the first play following the kickoff it was Andrews' turn to take advantage of the turnovers.

On first down Fullback Tom Carrasco fumbled and Bruce Sears recovered on the 21. Sears was a standout for the Mustangs as the senior linbacker had two pass interceptions to go along with his fumble recovery.

On first down Andrews used a trick play straight out of the Nebraska playbook to take the lead.

Center Scott Wallace snapped the ball into Morrison's hands then pulled it back laying the ball on the ground between his legs. Morrison, accompanied by most of the offensive line and the entire backfield, rolled to the right while left guard Mike Phillips picked the ball up from between Wallace's legs and ran to daylight.

The 180 pound senior ramble 21 yards for the score. After Boynton's kick the Mustangs led 14-7.

Only ten seconds elapsed between the Mustang touchdowns.

Lake View beats Tors to finish 10-0

SAN ANGELO—Playoff-bound Lake View finished the season with a 10-0 record by defeating Lamesa, 31-0, here Friday night as running back Dwight Edwards scored two touchdowns and Jerome Rodgers passed for one and ran for another.

Lake View posted a 7-0 record in District 4-4A while Lamesa had a 1-9 record.

Lake View jumped in front 10-0 at halftime as Edwards scored on a one-yard run and Troy Butts, who kicked three extra points, booted a 38-yard field goal.

The Chiefs widened the margin to 24-0 in the third period when Edwards ran nine yards for a score and Drew Whipple whipped a 40-yard pass to Rodgers.

Rodgers concluded the scoring with a three-yard run in the final period.

J.C. Watts wants back in Canadian League

OTTAWA (AP) — Former University of Oklahoma quarterback J.C. Watts wants to return to the Canadian Football League next year, preferably with his old team, the Ottawa Rough Riders.

In an interview published Friday in The Ottawa Citizen, Watts said he wants to talk with Rider General Manager Jake Dunlap after the Nov. 28 Grey Cup game to straighten out his situation. And this time, if there is a new contract to negotiate, he will handle it himself, not through agent Abdul Jalil.

"Jake was at fault and so were we," Watts said. "I've learned a lot in the last year and I think I'm a good enough businessman to negotiate for myself.

"Then I'll hire a lawyer to read the contract and make sure everything is in order."

The former Sooner star demanded a new contract that would pay him in U.S. funds after he led the Riders to a near-victory against the Edmonton Eskimos in last year's Grey Cup — the CFL's Super Bowl.

Dunlap turned him down and, when Watts refused to report to camp this season, suspended him with one year left on his contract, plus an option year. The suspension meant Watts was unable to play anywhere because the National Football League and the new United States Football League honor all existing contracts.

Bills reject proposal

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (AP) — The Buffalo Bills "flatly rejected" the contract proposal submitted directly to players by the National Football League Management Council, assistant player representaive Mark Brammer said Friday.

No vote was taken, Brammer said, because a majority of players clearly opposed the plan and because voting — for or against — might indicate to team owners that they could circumvent the NFL Players Association.

"We flatly rejected the proposal and we expressed urgency for management to get back to the (bargaining) table," Brammer said.

The two-hour meeting, closed to reporters, apparently was stormy.

"You tell everyone in this town I'm not in the union. I don't want to deal with those people," strong safety Steve Freeman, the first player to leave, shouted from his car.

Dallas' WFAA news comes to Alamo City

SAN ANTONIO — There are a few red faces at a billboard company today over a sign promoting Channel 8's news team.

Such signs aren't that unusual here — except this one promoted WFAA's evening newscasts.

WFAA is a Dallas television station.

Joe Minervini, managing director of Foster and Kleiser here, said earlier this week he knew nothing about the billboard, even though it bore his company's name.

Minervini guessed the billboard consisted of old painted panels and would be posted over with paper today.

But the panels use WFAA's latest slogan — "always a step ahead" — complete with the call letters and a display of faces from the station's broadcast team.

The mistake tickled Bob Robinson, WFAA promotions director.

"We have an aggressive marketing program," Robinson said, "but not that aggressive...We have several of these signs up and they are rotated regularly. Sometimes, the panels end up in the wrong place."

At any rate, the sign company said a crew would be dispatched today to end WFAA's unplanned San Antonio promotion.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Sunday, Nov. 14, 1982

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Prince Charles celebrates his 34th birthday today. Also born on this date: King Hussein of Jordan, Chicago White Sox broadcaster Jimmy Piersall, actors Brian Keith and McLean Stevenson and author-journalist Marya Mannes. Your far-reaching ambitions lead you to new heights in the months ahead. An innovative approach helps you solve any problems standing between you and success. Although you put work first, you develop a new understanding of what family means to you. Show loved ones how much you really care. Romance proves sweeter the second time around. Stay on your toes! You are able to build a strong base.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Pay attention to the needs of your parents and children. Forget an ambitious project that would further strain family relations. If asked, loved ones will help you find ways to save money.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A happy financial surprise is featured. Although travel may cut family fun short, it will accelerate business results. Romance puts you in a more cheerful mood.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Be subtle and your friends will come around to your viewpoint. You find success with music, art. A special talent is discovered. Someone who thought he knew you well is surprised.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Make this a special family day. Parent-child relationships are sensitive. Extra rest is essential to you health and peace of mind. An outpouring of love lifts your spirits.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Try to help someone overcome a setback. A child seeks you out. Listen carefully. Be firm with a loved one who expects you to set your principles aside for convenience.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your friends' friends prove to be better company than you anticipated. Put your fears aside and do what you know is right. A call from someone away at school boosts your spirits.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): This should be a beautiful Sunday for you—no matter what the weather is like. Although you are feeling lazy, you rise to the occasion when romantic partner issues an invitation.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A child's enthusiasm rubs off on you. You have a strong desire to go outside and play the games kids play. Help a family member who has a temporary cash shortage.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Today's events will be a source of pleasure. Postpone work and spend some quiet time with loved ones. Your mate is truly in tune with you now. Divide up the household chores.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Money, success and romance are featured this Sunday. Get yourself organized so that the coming work week will not be so wearing. Resolve your differences with a neighbor.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A change of scenery will be good for you and those you want to be with today. Take a walk in the park or a drive in the countryside.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Outdoor pleasures are invigorating. Your friends see a quality in you that they may have overlooked until now. Romance is near at hand.

Christmas cards alive with doves, teddy bears

WASHINGTON (AP) — The dove of peace, a cavalcade of teddy bears and many nostalgic themes are among the most popular designs in this year's Christmas greeting cards.

These are among the findings of the National Association of Greeting Card Publishers, which makes an annual check of its members on trends in Christmas greetings.

"Greeting cards reflect the finer and more gracious elements of our culture and lifestyle," said Gary K. Smith, executive vice president of the publishers' association.

"This Christmas we are seeing a strengthened desire to communicate with loved ones. After a troubled year of economic and political strife, I believe that many people sense a deep need to exchange messages of hope, love and thoughtfulness. An example of this is the popularity of the dove of peace as a dominant design theme."

Margery Forer, a New York publisher and president of the publishers' association, believes budget-conscious consumers will cut back on expensive gift-giving in this year of recession and will make a gift of the Christmas card itself.

Noting a return to many traditional designs, Mrs. Forer sees the teddy bear themes as a combination of nostalgia and popular culture.

"For generations, children have been charmed by books about bears," said Mrs. Forer. "First, A. A. Milne's Pooh Bear. Then, the Paddington Bear. More recently have come the popular 'The Teddy Bear Catalog' and four other teddy bear books.

"A teddy bear named Sebastian drew as much attention as the actors in the popular television series 'Brideshead Revisited.' All these factors bring teddy bears to greeting cards."

On this year's Christmas cards, teddy bears hang from evergreen trees, sleigh and ski down slopes, ride a train across a snowy landscape and march in a parade with a banner that proclaims season's greetings.

One publisher is distributing greeting cards for pet owners to give their cats and dogs. Each card is boxed with a tin cookie cutter, one in the shape of a mouse and the other in the shape of a dog bone. Included with the cards are recipes for tuna and meat dishes. The publisher suggests that the card-giver use the appropriate cookie cutter for serving holiday morsels to the family pets.

Nostalgic greetings include adaptations from the children's poem, "The Night Before Christmas," published in 1870; engravings from the Dickensian Era in England; and drawings by Thomas Nast, the turn-of-the-century cartoonist who did the first renderings of Santa Claus in this country.

Religious and ethnic greeting cards continue in popularity. Many religious cards are closely related to this year's peace themes. Some make use of innovative designs and advanced techniques in the graphic arts. Embossing, die-cuts and colored foils are used extensively.

As an accommodation to last-minute shoppers, many publishers of "personalized greeting cards," on which the name of the sender is imprinted, are setting up toll-free numbers and hot lines for use by retailers.

Illinois voters have whimsical sense of humor

That's the way one Illinois voter wanted it, as residents sometimes whimsically reshuffled the political deck while writing in votes in last week's election.

Former president Richard M. Nixon got a vote as a commissioner of the Metropolitan Sanitary District. Write-in votes in the race for Cook County schools superintendent went to Daffy Duck, Garfield the cat and cartoon character Mike Doonesbury, though the voter spelled it "Doonesberry."

Mike Royko, the popular Chicago Sun-Times columnist, got two write-in votes in Chicago for governor. So did William Scott, the former attorney general recently released from prison after serving time on a charge of income tax fraud.

Satellite will be used to map water quality

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Scientists are conducting experiments near New Bern in an attempt to discover if satellite technology can be useful in determining the quality of North Carolina's river water.

"It's a very experimental thing," said Jim Sheppard of the state Department of Natural Resources and Community Development. "We're a long way from making it a part of the program."

A team of government and university scientists will use digital data from a National Aeronautics and Space Administration satellite to map water qualty in the Neuse River estuary.

The team, led by Dr. Siamak Khorram of North Carolina State University in Raleigh, includes scientists from the state divisions of Environmental Management, Marine Fisheries and Inland Fisheries.

"What they're going to do is take a picture from the satellite and, at the same time, gather samples from the ground," Sheppard said. "They're going to look at the results of the sampling and the satellite picture and try to find a correlation, if indeed they can."

"Monitoring water quality from space may have the potential to provide a cost-effective and timely method for gathering important water quality information," said Jay Langfelder, assistant secretary of the natural resources division in NRCD. "This is an exciting concept, and we all hope that this technology will give us some more effective ways to monitor water quality in our state."

Current sampling methods are slow, costly and in some ways limited, he said.

"This can open up all kinds of things for us to determine water quality of large bodies of water," Sheppard said.

Antiserum helps blood infection victims

BOSTON (AP) — A single transfusion of blood plasma enriched with a natural immunity can dramatically reduce the death rate among patients seriously ill with a blood infection, a study shows.

The infection, bacteremia, is a major killer of people fighting other serious illnesses, such as cancer, which reduce the body's ability to fight disease.

The treatment involves giving killed bacteria to healthy people and transferring the blood to the sick.

The treatment, developed by doctors at the University of California San Diego School of Medicine, was used to treat disease caused by a broad category of microbes called gram-negative bacteria.

A report on the work, directed by Dr. Elizabeth J. Ziegler, was published in Friday's edition of the New England Journal of Medicine.

In an accompanying editorial, Dr. Sheldon M. Wolff of Tufts Medical School in Boston said the researchers "have greatly enhanced our ability to treat successfully a large number of very sick patients."

Bacteremia is a potentially devastating blood infection that can be caused by a variety of bacteria. The disease causes fever, shock and other symptoms, and often strikes victims of cancer, blood disorders, burns, alcoholism and other illnesses that weaken the body's natural immune system.

A survey eight years ago showed that bacteremia strikes 71,000 people in the United States a year, of whom 18,000 die. Wolff called it "a major public health problem."

Also working on the new treatment were doctors from Walter Reed Army Medical Center in Washington and Center Hospitalier Universitaire Vaudois in Lausanne, Switzerland.

They found that the death rate among bacteremia victims dropped by nearly half when they received the immunity-enriched blood, which doctors called J5 antiserum.

The doctors first injected killed E. coli bacteria into healthy volunteers. Two weeks later, doctors drew blood from them and saved the serum remaining when blood cells were removed.

Two women buried in same coffin

MIAMI (AP) — The body of an elderly woman whose remains were sought by relatives was mistakenly buried with another woman inside the same coffin, authorities say.

The mistake was discovered earlier this week after authorities opened six graves in a potter's field looking for the corpse of Emilie Spath, 82, who died Oct. 16. Relatives in West Germany had contacted the German consulate in Miami for help in locating her body.

Mrs. Spath's remains had been left in a body bag in the Dade County medical examiner's office. Funeral home workers, arranging the burial of a woman who wanted to be interred with her pets, had picked up the wrong bag, said deputy medical examiner Charles Wetli.

Have treasure hunters discovered Pinta?

Have treasure hunters discovered Christopher Columbus' vanished vessel, the Pinta?

Treasure hunter Olin Frick says the Caribbean wreck he found is what is left of the Pinta, lost during a storm off Molasses Reef in the Bahamas in 1500. But George Bass, who founded the non-profit Institute of Nautical Archaeology (INA) in Texas, says that even though the wreck may be the oldest ever salvaged in the New World, he's not so sure it's the Pinta.

In August 1976, Frick and John Gasque were searching for wrecks off the Turks and Caicos Islands, a small British crown colony southeast of the Bahamas. The treacherous waters off Molasses Reef have claimed an estimated 800 Spanish, French and British ships.

Frick was in the wheelhouse of the salvage vessel, towing divers on outriggers, when Gasque spotted orangish-green scraps of metal which he thought were pipes or parts of an old lighthouse. The metal was hoisted aboard; after the coral was chipped off, Frick recognized two rare old cannon typical of those used about 1500. A cannonball was drilled, revealing a lead core.

Frick was sure he had found the Pinta. "The guns were the biggest factor. They were so rudely made, short, typical of those used in the latter half of the 15th century. The shots for the bombards were solid lead. They started putting iron cores in them early in the 15th century. We figured, hell, that's the time of Columbus."

Frick and Gasque returned to Miami, where after "extensive research" they concluded that the Pinta had sailed on an expedition that discovered the mouth of the Amazon River in 1499. The ship returned via Hispanola and the Bahamas, where the trip ended tragically in a hurricane.

Two of the expedition's four vessels were struck in an area described as "the seven islands of the Barbura," according to Frick. No hurricanes were recorded in the Bahamas for another 54 years and no records exist of ships sinking there during the next 25 years, he says.

"Many references were made to the seven islands of Barbura," Frick said. "Then I remembered standing in my crow's nest on the wreck site and seeing seven islands on the horizon. There is no other place in the Bahamas that fits that description."

In need of funds to salvage the wreck, Frick and his associates sought the aid of the National Geographic Society, which hired researcher-historian Eugene Lyon to research the voyage.

"It is clear that this was a very old ship of the caravel type," Lyon recalls. "But I am certain I did not say it was the Pinta. Caravels were used until the 1560s or '70s along the north coast of Hispanola. If you can find a ship bearing serial ingots or numbered cannon that have reference to an archival document, then you can make positive identification." He said that as far as he knows, nothing datable has been uncovered.

The two treasure hunters dispatched a Spanish teacher to the archives in Seville to research the voyage further. From tax records, she concluded a second ship, the Frailia, sank near the Pinta.

King of hydroponic farming in Japan dreams of growing wheat, rice, corn

JUSHIYAMA VILLAGE, Japan (AP) — Kunihiko Murai, the self-styled king of hydroponic farming in Japan, grows vegetables in water and dreams of the day when he can do the same with wheat, rice and corn.

For 20 of his 40 years, the burly Murai has experimented with water-farming techniques in an expanse of greenhouses and plastic airdomes in this valley farm community nine miles south of Nagoya, central Japan.

His business, called M Hydroponic Research Co. Ltd. — the "M" is for Murai — covers 3.75 acres, with vegetables growing out of water-filled troughs. It has earned him a fortune.

As Japan's premier booster of the hydroponic way, Murai says he expects about 30,000 people — farmers, agronomists, school children, budding biologists and housewives — to tour his water-borne garden by the end of the year.

He calls himself a farmer-teacher, and says he divides his time between teaching the gospel of soilless gardening to interested farmers — about 100 a year — and raising and marketing parsley, spring onions, watercress, radishes, bitter lettuce (saradana), tomatoes, and other vegetables.

Hydroponics, the art of growing plants in water instead of earth, represents a "natural leap in the inevitable growth of plant power" said Murai.

He says the art is particularly suitable for Japan, with its abundant rainfall and limited land area making highly intensive farming necessary. Murai said Japan now has about 800 farmers who grow vegetables using hydroponic techniques.

In Murai's garden, the life of a spring onion plant, for example, starts with a lone seed sitting atop a half-inch sponge cube. After about a week, platters of sponges with delicate roots showing beneath are transplanted into water-filled tanks. Each is then placed in one of 64 holes in Styrofoam panels. The roots soak in water sometimes infused with fertilizers, and the plants rise from the Styrofoam. Every 40 days, a new crop of foot-high spring onions is plucked, trimmed, packaged and sent to market.

Murai looks to the day when hydroponic techniques can be applied to the cultivation of staples — rice, wheat, corn, soy beans.

Brezhnev, Russia and the world

Soviet mourners file past Brezhnev's open casket

Tens of thousands of Soviet citizens, warmly dressed against a cold, gray day, then walked past a mile-long line of soldiers and police into the House of Unions on the first of three days the open casket will be on display.

Brezhnev, who died Wednesday after 18 years in power, will be buried Monday in the place of highest honor at Red Square, with many government leaders from East and West in attendance at the ceremony.

Red Soviet flags bordered in black hung outside the columned, pastel green and white union building Friday. No one without a special pass was permitted near it during the official ceremony.

Police blocked off subway stations around the Red Square area to prevent unauthorized pedestrians from getting close to the hall for thevisit of leaders.

More than 300 members of the Communist Party Central Committee were the first to pay their respects. They converged shortly after holding an emergency meeting at party headquarters a mile away to ratify former KGB chief Yuri V. Andropov as head of the Soviet Communist Party, succeeding Brezhnev.

The late president's 74-year-old widow Viktoria, seldom seen in public, wept silently and gazed at the casket, which lay on a bier banked with red and white flowers under chandeliers draped in black bunting. Three flags were ranked at the head of the bier and Brezhnev's dozens of ribboned medals, pinned on red satin, were displayed at the foot.

Mrs. Brezhnev, making her first appearance since the death of her husband on Wednesday, sat with their daughter Galina about 20 feet from the casket along with about 40 other family members.

Brezhnev's son, Yuri, could not be seen with the family in television film or during a visit by Western correspondents. The 49-year-old Yuri Brezhnev is a first deputy foreign trade minister.

Galina, who is in her 40s is married to Yuri M. Churbanov, first deputy minister of the Ministry of Internal Affairs. Her first husband was an animal trainer at the Moscow Circus and her second was an economist.

Andropov, 68, led other members of the ruling Politburo who filed into the room and stood in a line facing the casket.

Dressed in dark suits with red and black armbands, the elderly members of the top Kremlin echelon stared somberly at the casket for about one minute.

Then the gaunt, white-haired Andropov walked over to Mrs. Brezhnev and took her hands as he expressed condolences. She raised her black veil to receive kisses on both checks, and Andropov moved a step to the right to kiss Galina.

Nine other full members of the ruling Politburo followed Andropov in offering condolences and kisses to both women, who were dressed in black suits.

Andrei P. Kirilenko, who disappeared without explanation from the Politburo lineup last week shortly before the annual Revolution Day parade on Red Square, reappeared at the ceremony, witnesses said.

The official news agency Tass did not include Kirilenko's name on the published list of Kremlin mourners.

The Soviet sources said Kirilenko stood separately from the members of the Politburo, apparently signifying that he is no longer a member of the secretive policy-making body.

Soviet witnesses said Kirilenko wept as he stopped to offer condolences to Mrs. Brezhnev and other members of the family he has known since the 1930s, when he and Brezhnev began their rise to the top from party administrative jobs in the Ukraine.

Andropov to continue Brezhnev's policies

MOSCOW (AP) — Yuri V. Andropov, Leonid Brezhnev's successor in the top job in the Soviet Union, is a former chief of the KGB secret police with the reputation of being one of the shrewdest members of the Soviet leadership.

After the announcement Friday of his promotion to be general secretary of the all-powerful Communist Party, the official Soviet news agency Tass quoted Andropov as saying he would continue the "domestic and foreign policies that had been pursued under Leonid Brezhnev."

Some Western analysts have called Andropov a "liberal," but Soviet sources say he is not.

Andropov moved into contention to succeed Brezhnev in May, when he was promoted to the Central Committee Secretariat, placing him on an equal footing in the succession stakes with Konstantin U. Chernenko, another Brezhnev protege and fellow member of the ruling Politburo.

Two days after joining the Secretariat, Andropov resigned from his 15-year job as head of the secret police, the Committee of State Security more widely known as the KGB. It was widely believed at the time that it was an effort to disassociate himself from the secret police apparatus.

ANDROPOV'S promotion to the 10-member Secretariat is believed to have strengthened his hand in executing day-to-day domestic policy, and to have given him a greater voice in preparing the agenda for the policy-making Politburo.

Among his duties in the Secretariat, Soviet sources said at the time, was overall supervision of the state radio, television and newspapers, and cultural affairs. These were formerly the preserves of Mikhail A. Suslov, the Kremlin's No. 2 figure and chief ideologist who died Jan. 25, 1982, at age 79.

His death set off the maneuvering for succession to Brezhnev.

Andropov, born to Russian parents June 15, 1914, started his political ascendancy as ambassador to Hungary during the 1956 uprising there and the ensuing Soviet invasion to crush the rebellion.

At first, Andropov denied to the ill-fated Hungarian government of Imre Nagy that Soviet tanks had crossed Hungary's northeastern border and were moving on Budapest, the capital. Later, he refused to give Nagy a promise that the troop movements would halt.

Andropov returned from Hungary in 1957 to serve as chief of the Central Committee's department for liaison with the Socialist bloc. He was made KGB chief in 1967.

In that job, Andropov effectively throttled dissidents at home and supervised the collection of intelligence data from a vast network of agents in the Soviet Union and abroad. He is believed to have built up the size and importance of the KGB after it had fallen into disrepute for terrorizing the Soviet population under Josef Stalin.

IN A widely quoted speech in 1973, Andropov asserted that the number of dissidents in the Soviet Union was dropping and compared them with common criminals. "We have such people in minuscule numbers," he said. "We still have them. Unfortunately they exist — as thieves, bribe-takers, speculators and other criminals...."

He said both criminals and dissidents were inflicting harm on Soviet society and that was why "they should bear punishment in complete accordance with the demands of Soviet law."

Typical of how authorities implemented that policy was the treatment of an independent group of Soviet intellecutals who banded together to monitor Soviet compliance with the East-West Helsinki Accords on human rights in 1975.

Virtually all of its two dozen members were convicted of anti-socialist agitation, sent into foreign exile or condemned to life in remote regions of the Soviet Union. The most famous member of that group was Nobel Peace Prize laureate Andrei Sakharov, who was expelled from Moscow in early 1980 and sent to live under house arrest in the Volga River city of Gorky.

Some Western analysts viewed Andropov at the time of his appointment to the Secretariat as a potential reformer, who would be receptive to experiments with incentive agriculture and private enterprise in other socialist countries — particularly Hungary — to revamp the Soviet Union's economy.

Such steps would inevitably encourage some degree of political liberalization in the Soviet Union and prompt new efforts to improve relations with the United States, the analysts said.

In a speech April 22, 1982, Andropov referred to what he described as the creative nature of Marxism-Leninism — apparently meaning the need to modify it — and the overriding issue of war and peace. He also suggested it was time for the Soviet Union to get to work at solving its various economic problems.

BUT OTHER Western analysts saw a harsher tone in Andropov's Kremlin address that suggested he would not move quickly toward domestic reform or improved relations with the United States if he became party chief.

He then rejected "political pluralism" in an obvious swipe at worker unrest in Poland and the ideological dispute with Italy's maverick Communist Party, which had challenged Moscow's leading role.

Andropov also said at the time that Soviet society was developing well in a healthy atmosphere and suggested that the building of socialism came before any need to expand democracy.

Some analysts said Andropov, mindful of the impending struggle to succeed Brezhnev, appeared to be courting hard-line ideological cadres in the party, the KGB and members of the armed forces who had complained about "elements of pacificism" in Soviet youth.

Yuri V. Andropov

Andropov was born in Nagutskaya in the northern Caucasus to a railway employee's family. He started working at age 16 as a telegraph operator, then became a movie projectionist and a Volga boatman.

He studied water transportation at Rybinsk in 1936, then attended Petrozavodsk University but did not graduate. By then he had embarked on a career as a Communist Party official.

From 1940 to 1951, Andropov held posts in the party apparatus in the Karelo-Finnish Republic — now an autonomous region — under the tutelage of Otto Kuusinen, a Soviet leader of Finnish extraction whom some analysts regarded as a reformist, non-dogmatic figure.

ANDROPOV WAS brought to Moscow in the early 1950's and was then assigned to Hungary as a junior diplomat. He was appointed ambassador there in 1954.

Returning to Moscow, Andropov was assigned to the Central Committee's socialist countries department as head of the liaison department.

He became a full member of the Central Committee in 1961, was a non-voting candidate member of the Politburo from 1967 to 1973, and became a full member after being named chief of the KGB in 1973. He was named a Soviet army general in 1976.

Andropov traveled extensively in Eastern Europee and also to China, North Vietnam, North Korea and Mongolia. Although little is known about his private life, his son, Igor Yurievich, is the fourth-ranking member of the Soviet delegation at the European Security Conference in Madrid. He was reported in the 1970s to be working as a researcher in political science at the Institute of the U.S.A. and Canada in Moscow under Andropov's one-time foreign policy adviser, Georgy Arbatov.

Congratulations sent

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Moscow's East-bloc allies sent congratulations Friday to Yuri V. Andropov on his election as chief of the Soviet Communist Party, but most of the news media reported the selection with little comment.

Instead, they continued to give sweeping coverage to eulogies of Leonid I. Brezhnev, the Soviet president and party chief who died Wednesday.

Bush to represent U.S. at Brezhnev's funeral

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan named Vice President George Bush to head the U.S. delegation to the funeral of Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev. A senator called the decision a "lost opportunity" which spurned the advice of Secretary of State George P. Shultz that Reagan go himself.

Reagan said it was not "too much of a surprise for anyone" that Yuri V. Andropov was named to succeed Brezhnev as the general secretary of the Soviet Communist Party. "I think they made a swift transition in the interests of order," said the president.

Reagan, asked by reporters if he could work with Andropov. "I am sure we can," he said.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes, saying the Soviets had asked that other nations keep their delegations small, announced that Shultz and the U.S. ambassador to Moscow, Arthur A. Hartman, would accompany the vice president and Mrs. Bush at the ceremonies in Moscow on Monday.

Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., declared later that "The decision by President Reagan not to attend the funeral of Chairman Brezhnev is a lost opportunity. It would have been a dramatic gesture for all the world to see and would have cost absolutely nothing. The well-known fact that he disregarded the advice of moderates within the administration, like Secretary of State Shultz, and accepted the advice of the hardliners is exactly the wrong decision at the wrong timne."

Egyptian minister urges U.S. to open talks with PLO

WASHINGTON (AP) — Egyptian Foreign Minister Kamal Hassan Ali accused Israel on Friday of planning to annex the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, and urged the United States to open discussions with the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Emerging from a long meeting with Secretary of State George Shultz, Ali told reporters he brought President Reagan and Shultz a proposal from the PLO on how best to involve Palestinians in the Middle East peace process.

The Egyptian official, who met in Paris recently with PLO representatives, said the PLO leadership continues to refuse to meet U.S. demands that it recognize the right of Israel to exist. This is the longstanding U.S. precondition for any recognition of or negotiations with the PLO.

"From what I learn from the PLO, this is not to take place for the time being at least," Ali said.

He said he brought Shultz no promises from the PLO. "I just explained their views," he said.

"The PLO has an essential role in the forthcoming discussions and negotiations for (resolution) of the Palestinian problem," he said.

Did those views include mutual recognition, involving Palestinian recognition of Israel's right to exist and U.S. recognition of the PLO? Ali was asked.

"It didn't include such a mutual recognition," he replied.

However, he made clear that Egypt believes the United States should meet soon with PLO leaders. He said he will discuss "the possibilities" further Friday with Philip Habib, Reagan's Middle East envoy.

The Door and The Key

The hopes and visions of mankind . . . the ideals to which we aspire.

Can we fulfill them? Is there a DOOR to our spiritual hunger?

Men say the Church is the Door! Jesus said He was!

No contradiction . . . Christ founded the Church!

But useless is the door without a key.

Why not gather the family together and head for your place of worship this week?

The decision to seek the Door—that is the KEY.

'God's Clowns' 'fools for Christ'

Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO — Al and Jean Buck, otherwise known as "God's Clowns," have taken literally St. Paul's call to be "fools for Christ."

The Bucks, who occasionally do their act in services at Northminster Presbyterian Church, says they are only following the words of St. Paul when he called on Christ's followers to be "fools for Christ."

"Paul said we should all be fools for Christ and that's what we're doing," Buck, a retired engineer and salesman, said in an interview.

Buck says the justification for his Gospel clown ministry comes from I Corinthians 9-10, in which St. Paul, having called Christians "a spectacle" because of their beliefs, says that "we are fools for Christ's sake, but ye are wise in Christ."

The Bucks are members of Fools For Christ, a gospel clown ministry whose motto is "Be a Fool For Christ's Sake."

Besides regularly visiting a nearby guest home once a week and entertaining Northminster preschoolers, they take part in Northminster services conducted by the Rev. John Boller, pastor, and are official members of the Northminster ministry.

"They've become an important part of our ministry," Boller said.

He says the Bucks' purpose is to interrupt, not disrupt, a service.

"Many times they're not in the worship service at the beginning, but will just walk in at some point," he said. "For us the important part of the ministry is that it interrupts the service and brings reality to the congregation.

"Whether it's funny or sad is not important, but I always emphasize that their purpose is to be interruptive, not disruptive."

"Sometimes you get in a set mood and you need something to shake you up and bring you back to reality or get you thinking in another way. So their ministry to our congregation, whether it's in worship or at dinners or whatever, is simply to interrupt and help people think about what the theme or worship service is about before we pick that up and carry it on.

"I don't think anybody walks out of that worship service saying it was silly or disruptive or that God wouldn't want it."

Buck said he turned to clowning about three-and-a-half years ago.

"The idea appealed to me because I love kids and it gives you a chance to work with kids of any age," Buck said.

Buck said he took a course on clownology at East San Diego Presbyterian Church and joined the national organization, Clowns for America.

When the Bucks later joined Northminster, Boller greeted them with open arms because for about 10 years Boller has been collecting material on how clowns can participate in worship services. Boller said the Bucks were somewhat unsure of themselves at first, but a 1980 Thanksgiving service in which they took part fixed all that.

"Everybody liked it," Boller said.

Last spring the Northminster session placed the Bucks on the church staff.

A LETTER TO YOU POSTMARKED: "HEAVEN"

Write a letter to the leader of the church at Ephesus and tell him this:

"I write to inform you of a message from him who walks among the churches and holds their leaders in his right hand.

"He says to you: I know how many good things you are doing. I have watched your hard work and your patience; I know you don't tolerate sin among your members, and you have carefully examined the claims of those who say they are apostles but aren't. You have found out how they lie. You have patiently suffered for me without quitting.

"Yet there is one thing wrong; you don't love me as at first! Think about those times of your first love (how different now!) and turn back to me again and work as you did before; or else I will come and remove your candlestick from its place among the churches.

"But there is this about you that is good: You hate the deeds of the licentious Nicolaitans, just as I do.

"Let this message sink into the ears of anyone who listens to what the Spirit is saying to the churches: To everyone who is victorious I will give fruit from the Tree of Life in the Paradise of God." (Revelation 2:1-7)

Fifty percent of Catholic men in U.S. back womens' ordination

MOUNT RAINIER, Md. (AP) — A new Gallup poll says that 50 percent of U.S. Roman Catholic men support the ordination of women to the priesthood, compared to 39 percent of Catholic women.

A Catholic social justice group, the Quixote Center, which has commissioned a series of Gallup polls on the issue, says the latest results show a steady, significant increase in Catholic support for women's ordination.

The overall figure is now 44 percent, compared to only 29 percent in 1974, the center says. It says strong opposition has dropped steadily, from 47 percent in 1974 to 34 percent now.

"If these trends continue, we will see a majority of U.S. Roman Catholics supporting women's ordination within three to five years," says Dolores Pomerleau, co-director of the center.

Such ordination already has majority support in several segments of Catholics, including those under 30, white-collar Catholics and college-educated Catholics. While the figures show growing support among both men and women, the female-male gap has widened from 8 points in 1977 and 1979 to the present 11 points.

Jews start social action groups

NEW YORK (AP) — Conservative Judaism has laid plans for organizing social action groups among its 1.5 million members across the country to look at issues such as American policy on Israel and economic problems.

Concern about those matters prompted a special meeting of the Rabbinical Assembly, representing 1,200 Conservative rabbis. Rabbi Arnold M. Goodman of Atlanta, the assembly's president, says:

"Today's questions demand a more intensive participation by our spiritual leaders and lay people."

He says a growing anti-Israael sentiment tends to "isolate Israel" and presents "grave dangers to the Middle East peace process."

U.S. priest appointed to council

LONDON, England (AP) — A U.S. Episcopal priest, the Rev. Samuel Van Culin, has been appointed secretary-general of the Anglican Consultative Council, serving the 28 national branches of the worldwide Anglican communion of 65 million Christians.

Van Culin, who has served since 1976 as world mission executive of the Episcopal Church, was named by Archbishop of Canterbury Robert Runcie, to fill the post. It involves planning international mission policy, ecumenical initiatives and fostering inter-Anglican cooperation.

Jewish leader stands up for pope

NEW YORK (AP) — A Jewish leader says it's time to tone down "embittered reactions" to Pope John Paul II's meeting with the Palestine Liberation Organization's Yaser Arafat so as not to damage progress in Jewish-Catholic relations.

Rabbi Marc Tanenbaum, interreligious affairs director for the American Jewish Committee, says it now is known from reliable sources that the pope "forcefully demanded" that Arafat's PLO give up violence and terrorism, recognize Israel's right to security, and that Jeruslalem remain unified with appropriate international guarantees.

"These positions are far closer to those of Israel...than they are to the PLO and Arab extremists," Tanenbaum says.

Solzhenitsyn's wife says U.S.S.R. in ferment

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK — A woman of grace, charm and stouthearted faith, Natalya Solzhenitsyn says Soviet attempts to stamp out religion have produced instead a spiritual ferment resembling the ancient origins of Christianity.

"The persecution has brought people to such a spirit of confession that has not existed since the first century," she says. "Faith has not been conquered. It has not died in Russia."

Mrs. Solzhenitsyn, wife of the exiled Russian writer Alexander Solzhenitsyn, spoke at a dinner marking the 20th anniversary of a documentary journal, Religion in Communist Dominated Areas.

She also met later with reporters at headquarters of the National Council of Churches, saying the religious stirrings in the Soviet Union are not yet a full-robed renascence and face intensified official reprisals, but she added:

"There are many signs of confession of faith, very joyous signs. There has been a drastic increase in the number of baptisms. Even the Soviet press admits 70 percent of the children are baptized.

"Lenin would be turning over in his grave on account of such statistics."

Mrs. Solzhenitsyn, an articulate, youngish 43 with short, silver-streaked hair, said that besides the increased baptisms in the Soviet Union, the conversion of adult "neophytes" to faith "have increased dramatically."

"CONVERSIONS TAKE PLACE in various parts of Soviet society," she said. "Not only among simple people, but in the Soviet bureaucracy. The conversions have no political character. People are simply looking for spiritual values."

She said Soviet authorities "see great danger in the movement" and have stepped up anti-religious propaganda along with "increasing incidents of searches and arrests."

"The authorites fear a national religious revitalization," she said, seeing in it a basic challenge to their own power. "The Soviet system still is struggling in its fight against God.

"The authorities are right in their fears. I do not see any other movement of any serious resistance. This opposition is passive, but those who convert do not serve those in power as they did before — Caesar as God."

Mrs. Solzhenitsyn and her Nobel Prize-winning husband, who came to this country in 1976, live in Cavendish, Vt., with their three young children. He is completing an eight-volume account of the communist revolution, "The Red Wheel."

"The leaders are enslaved to their ideology, even more enslaved that those they have imprisoned," Mrs. Solzhenitsyn said. "Their only goal is to preserve their power — a demonic goal."

RECALLING JESUS' admonition not to fear those who kill the body but rather those who kill the soul, she said the Russian religious protest is against those who seek to "kill both body and soul."

"The communist regime claims power not only over the body but over the soul," she said, detailing the restrictions against religious classes for children, religious literature or any religious meetings outside registered churches.

She described how as a child, her family would draw the window blinds for prayers, and how, when she was a young mathematics teacher at the University of Moscow, it cost her a full month's salary for a copy of the New Testament.

She said that when she and her husband were exiled in 1974, initially to Switzerland, they came across a copy of the journal, Religion in Communist Dominated Areas, which convinced them the west understood the Soviet situation.

"But we've come to realize that the West understands very little," she said, adding that those who compile the journal and who follow its disclosures are "a very small flock."

THE JOURNAL FOR 20 years has been edited by the Rev. Blahoslav Hruby, a Czech-born, former OSS officer with secret sources throughout the Soviet orbit. His wife, Olga, does the tranlating of documents from Russian.

Christian scholars claim anti-Semitism behind criticism

WESTON, Vt. (AP) — A group of Christian scholars says that anti-Semitism causes the world to exercise a double standard — a demanding one in judging Israel and a lax one about other nations.

At a semi-annual meeting of an Israel study group, the 14 scholars said people who for years have been silent about Palestine Liberation Organization atrocities in Lebanon are "stridently raising their voices" to condemn Israel about the massacre in West Beirut.

But there has been little criticism of the Christian militia that carried out the massacre, the group said. Citing a list of mass slaughters elsewhere that have caused little outcry, the statement said:

"The history of anti-Semitism demonstrates that the world has too often remained silent in the face of atrocities except where Israel stands accused."

United Methodists fail to launch television ministry

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (AP) — Voicing regret at failure to raise $25 million to launch a national United Methodist television ministry, the denomination's communication commission says it hopes a new try will be made.

Because of various setbacks, the commission said it was giving up on the current effort authorized by the denomination's 1980 governing conference, and that wider planning was needed to involve the whole church.

Clements: Togetherness important

AUSTIN (AP) — Republican Gov. Bill Clements, making his first public speech Friday since losing his bid for re-election, said he had proven "Republicans and Democrats can work together" in state government.

"One of the highlights of my administration has been my relationship with the Democratic leadership" in the Legislature, said Clements, one of only two Republicans now holding statewide office. The other is Sen. John Tower, R-Texas.

"We proved that Democrats and Republicans can work together — and must work together — for the benefit of all Texans," Clements told a luncheon meeting of the Texas Research League.

The group, composed mostly of conservative businessmen, is a privately funded organization that studies problems of state government and makes recommendations to elected officials.

Clements said he would help Gov.-elect Mark White, currently the state attorney general, in a "smooth transition in the coming months." White, elected in a Democratic sweep of statewide offices Nov. 2, will be inaugurated Jan. 18.

"I wish my successor nothing but good," Clements said.

He said during his four years in office, "Rita and I have given it our very best."

Clements listed among his accomplishments increasing funding for public schools and "the toughest package of anti-crime, anti-drug laws since World War II."

He said Texas still faces major problems, including not enough water and too much crime.

"Texas is a water-short state," he said. "Water problems must be solved if we are to maintain our quality of life."

He called for solutions to the state's overcrowded prison system and said "we must reassess our entire criminal justice system" in an effort to curb the rising crime rate.

Clements, who created the Texas 2000 Commission of private citizens to study the state's needs and problems through the end of the century, said Texas faces an exploding population, a dwindling oil and gas industry and an increasing burden of the federal government.

But he said, "I am optimistic about the future of Texas because we in Texas have the spirit of the entrepreneur. We have a strong work ethic. We thrive on opportunity. We have a strong spirit of independence."

He also urged the research league to study what he called a lack of accountability in state government.

"If I were going to make an informal critique of our state government as an outgoing governor, it would be that there is not sufficient accountability" among the state's boards, commissions and agencies, Clements said. "There's a lot of responsibility, but accountability in state government is a fragmented thing."

Pollster claims turnout hurt his projections

HOUSTON (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements' pollster says his projections failed to predict that masses of Democrats would turn out for the Nov. 2 election.

V. Lance Tarrance Jr. said the record turnout of 50 percent, including many straight-ticket-voting Democrats, was the downfall of his client. Clements garnered 47 percent of the vote against Democratic Attorney General Mark White, who received 53 percent.

Tarrance's firm had predicted Clements would win with 52 percent of the vote.

"Based on the numbers, we feel that we got caught in a straight-ticket landslide," he said during an election post-mortem at his office Thursday.

"I've never seen turnout destroy as many polls as it did this time in the South," he added.

In conducting daily telephone polls for Clements, Tarrance said, his firm disregarded voters who had not voted in the 1980 presidential election, reasoning that they probably would not vote in a non-presidential year.

"Maybe we are going to need to rethink," he said.

Many voters linked Clements to national issues, despite previous polls that indicated voters don't blame governors for national problems, Tarrance said.

"I always believed that the governors' elections were separate events," he said. "...Maybe the New Federalism has linked them all together. We ran the governor's races as (if) in a vacuum, and there wasn't a vacuum."

Tarrance also said he had believed Clements' $12 million campaign tab — twice what White spent — would make him "immune" to the national Democratic trend.

Voting by Hispanics and women also hurt Clements more than anticipated, Tarrance said. The pollster said he had expected more Hispanics to vote for Clements.

Another factor, he said, was that White's name was sandwiched on the ballot between two strong Democrats, U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby.

The pollster, who also has offices in San Francisco and Washington, released Election Day data that correctly showed all other Democratic candidates for statewide office would beat their Republican opponents.

Government files suit against Big Spring ISD

ABILENE (AP) — The Justice Department filed a complaint Friday against school officials in Big Spring, accusing them of keeping an elementary school all black and Mexican-American by busing some 150 rural students past the school to another one which has a majority of white students.

The department's complaint adds to a civil rights suit filed against Big Spring Sept. 18, 1980.

The department said the school district bused students from northern rural areas past Bauer elementary school, which is made up entirely of minorities, to Washington elementary, a predominantly white school.

The suit says the busing arrangement violates the 1974 Equal Educational Opportunity Act, which forbids assignment of a student to a school other than the one closest to home if that results in increased segregation.

The department said the group of rural students being bused is about two-thirds white Anglo and one-third Mexican-American. Bauer school has about 175 Mexican-American and black students in grades one through five while Washington school, with about 400 students, is about two-thirds Anglo and one-third black or Hispanic.

The original suit seeks to prevent school officials from alleged discrimination against blacks and Mexican-Americans and to dismantle the alleged dual school system before the next school year.

Dodge Ramcharger
In 1983, the only 2 Wheel Drive Sport Utility.

Stock no. 1051

$1000 Rebate on 1982 and 1983 2 and 4 wheels drive Ramcharger.

LIST	$13,877
Dealer Discount	$1645
Rebate	$1000
	$11,232 Sale Price

Just what is the difference between a 2 wheel and 4 wheel drive sport utility. Unless all terrain travel is important to you, consider these advantages in a 2 wheel drive. Less machinery in the 2 wheel Ramcharger means less on the sticker price and the cost of repair. 2 wheel drive uses normal highway tires for less cost and for a more comfortable ride. And the 2 wheel drive tows your boat, camper or trailer with as much ease as the 4 wheeler. Over all the 2 wheeler is a practical choice. But we of course, stock 4 wheel drive Ramchargers.

The Best Thing About Trinity Place Is The Neighborhood.

Where you live is an extension of your personality, your tastes and values. Living at Trinity Place is an expression of a special way of life, not just for everyone. Trinity Place was built for the contemporary lifestyle of the 80's.

Tucked away in Midland's newest residential subdivisions, Trinity Place is off the beaten path and insulated from highway noise and the hemmed-in feeling of a commercial neighborhood. Yet, Trinity Place is within

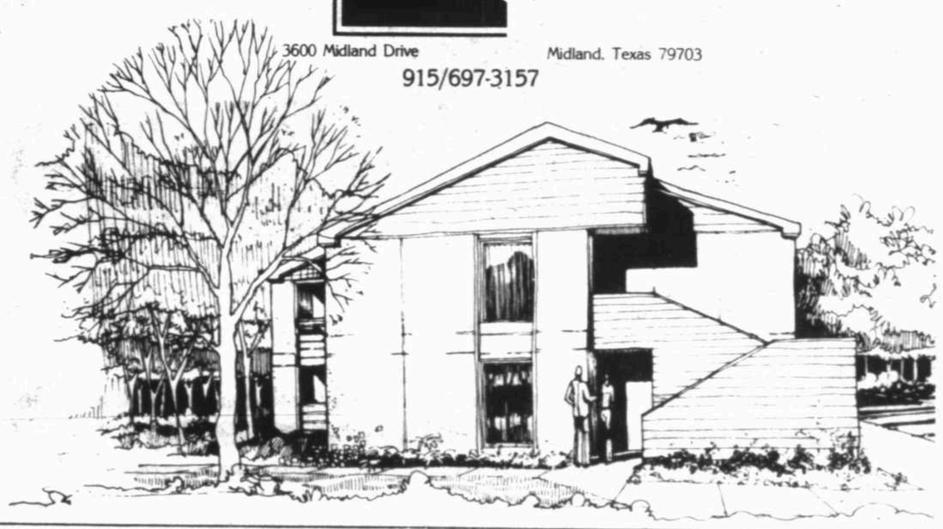

- ☐ 3 minutes of the new Midland Park Regional Mall
- ☐ 6 minutes of Midland Memorial Hospital
- ☐ 10 minutes of downtown Midland
- ☐ 5 minutes of Midland College
- ☐ 15 minutes of Midland Regional Airport
- ☐ 6 minutes of Midland Air Park
- ☐ 7 minutes of Interstate 20

The first year's payment and buyer qualification will be calculated equivalent to a rate of 83/8%. The loan to value interval will be charged at a rate of 123/8% for first 6 months of the loan. After the first 6 months interval will be charged at the then current Monthly Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. Payments on these mortgages are graduated so as to increase the principal and interest payments 7.50% each year for the next 4 years. At the end of the first 5 year period the graduation in payments will cease. A new payment schedule will be computed using a variable rate mortgage to amortize the remaining balance over the remaining 25 years of the mortgage based upon the then current Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. The 7.5% maximum increase can be made if the original loan principle exceeds 125% at each 5 year anniversary date the payment may be adjusted to allow the remaining payments to fully amortize the loan. ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE APPROXIMATES 12.875%
