'91 Beaujolais due

PARIS — Expectations are high for this year's production of Beaujolais, the ruby-red French wine known as much for hype quantity as high quality. "The year 1991 is a very good one. It has a harmonious robe, with a very full flavor of red fruits," said Gerard Canard, director of the Interprofessional Union of Beaujolais wines. This year's production is close to 60 million bottles. Much of it has already been shipped to some 80 countries, where consumers wait to uncork their bottles at midnight Thursday, the time that tradition dictates Beaujolais may be opened.

Medicaid vote

WASHINGTON — The House moved forcefully Tuesday to delay a Bush administration rule that would prevent states from using a controversial financing method that increases the Medicaid money they get to help pay for health care for the poor. The vote of 348-71 was 60 more than the two-thirds necessary to override a threatened presidential veto, and could set the stage for the first override after 24 unsuccessful attempts. /7A

Panel on Cranston

WASHINGTON — The Senate Ethics Committee voted Tuesday night to rebuke Sen. Alan Cranston for his role in the Keating Five affair, capping a two-year investigation, a source close to the panel said. Cranston vowed to defend himself before the full Senate on Wednesday. The source, who declined to be identified, said the findings would amount to a "severe action" but declined to provide specifics. Cranston, D-Calif., was among five senators who intervened with federal regulators investigating Charles Keating's California-based Lincoln Savings and Loan while Keating contributed $1.3 million to their campaign funds and causes. Some $900,000 went to Cranston. /5A

Mystery object

LOS ANGELES — A small, mysterious object is going to zoom close to Earth on Dec. 5, but astronomers can't tell yet if it's some previously unseen kind of asteroid or an old spacecraft swinging past its home planet. "We don't know what it is: It just struck me as very curious," said astronomer Brian Marsden, director of the International Astronomical Union's Central Bureau for Astronomical Telegrams, a reporting agency for astronomy discoveries.

MISD's 'clustering' draws local debate

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

The transportation system for Midland public schools — which involves busing students to cluster schools — was taken to task by several parents at Tuesday night's community meeting.

About 100 parents and teachers filled the Bush Elementary school cafeteria in order to attend the school district's second community meeting.

Midland Independent School District will have a new elementary school and junior high in 1993.

House can't override Bush on 'gag rule' bill

■ Anti-abortion forces notch victory

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — President Bush vetoed legislation on Tuesday that would have allowed doctors and counselors in federally financed family planning clinics to discuss abortion with pregnant women. Despite intense Democratic efforts, the House failed by 12 votes to override the veto.

The result was not only a victory for anti-abortion forces and Bush, but a defeat for House Democratic leaders. They had worked hard to persuade their rank

Air terminal plan faces new delays

■ $29 million project is on hold until outlook improves, officials say.

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

City officials and councilmen say the airport terminal project, recently placed on hold for several months, may now have been delayed indefinitely.

"This air terminal is going to be built, it's just a matter of when," said District 1 Councilman James Devenport.

The City Council, after allocating design funding for the project in September, then agreed Oct. 22 to delay work until February, citing lowered enplanements and wavering public opinion.

The plan — construction of a $29 million, five-gate terminal — is on hold until the outlook improves, said officials, who were interviewed Tuesday.

Devenport said he supports a continued delay, with use of the entire year of 1992 for planning. Others have varied schedules in mind, but all agreed February may be too early to see change significant enough to warrant construction.

"My thinking is we delay the actual decision to do any new terminal project for at least three years," said At-large Councilman J.D. Faircloth. He advocated minimal repair work until then.

District 4 Councilman Tom Johnston said the terminal building is a good idea whose time has not yet come.

"I think there's a good possibility of delay, possibly a three- to five-year delay," Johnston said.

Others are not sure how long they envision waiting. Mayor Carroll Thomas said he supports further delay as well, but doesn't want to set time limits yet.

"We've all felt like we need to look into it more thoroughly. It's a matter of waiting to see what our boardings are doing," Thomas said. He said he wanted to delay "at least several months" beyond February.

Deputy City Manager Mike McGregor said the council could make some firm

Weather takes an abrupt turn

By Darren J. Waggoner

The unusual area weather patterns of recent weeks took another sudden turn Tuesday afternoon as the skies again unexpectingly opened up and the thermometer took another plunge in the Tall City.

According to the National Weather Service in Midland, a series of storms passing through the area in recent days has caused the fluctuating temperatures. And Midland residents can expect that trend to continue — at least through the weekend.

"We've had extremely active jet streams," said a NWS spokesman. "They (the jet streams) move across from the

Major oil recovery project to increase old field's life

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

A major tertiary oil recovery project, set to kick off early next year, will significantly increase the life of an old West Texas field.

Officials with Texaco Exploration and Production Inc. said Tuesday operations of the first phase of the CO_2 project in the Mabee Field of Andrews and Martin County will begin in early 1992.

The project is expected to increase reserves in the field by 15 percent and extend the life of the reservoir by 15 years, said Dean Bears, assistant division manager for enhanced recovery. Phase 1, which is in the southeast portion of the field, and includes a recycling facility will cost approximately $50

Questions resurface about Waite, CIA link

By Bernard D. Kaplan
Hearst News Service

PARIS — Terry Waite returned to Britain Tuesday after nearly five years as a hostage in Lebanon to confront a barrage of questions about reputed links to the Central Intelligence Agency and Lt. Col. Oliver North.

The Anglican Church official's release by the Islamic extremist organization, Hezbollah, rekindled suggestions that he may have been duped or manipulated by U.S. authorities during his efforts to win freedom for American hostages held in Beirut during the mid-1980s.

Japanese-owned studio denies censoring 'Mr. Baseball'

■ Rewritten script turns on Tom Selleck's character accepting Japanese way.

By Steven R. Weisman
N.Y. Times News Service

TOKYO — When Universal Pictures first agreed to make "Mr. Baseball," it was intended to be a broad comedy about a genial but boorish baseball player who, after being let go by the New York Yankees, joins a team in Japan and clashes head-on with Japan's devotion to martial spirit, group harmony, saving face, grueling workouts and love-hate feelings for foreigners.

Then last year the Matsushita Electric Industrial Co. acquired MCA Inc., the owner of Universal. Now the film is a more complex romantic tale of an athlete coming to terms with himself and Japan.

"Mr. Baseball" is the first movie about Japan produced by a Japanese-owned Hollywood studio and the first test of the Japanese promise to leave creative control in Hollywood.

The people involved with "Mr. Baseball" say all changes were carried out by Americans to make the movie funnier and more sophisticated and to make the characters more compelling, not to cater to Matsushita. They deny that any self-censorship was involved.

But the script, rewritten this year, now turns more completely on the idea of Jack Elliot (played by Tom Selleck), accepting Japanese ways before he can succeed. First he endures brutal training, sprinting up and down the stadium steps and diving repeatedly for ground balls, but is still not permitted by his Japanese coach to try batting practice.

Only after apologizing to the team for his earlier rudeness, including spitting on the field — "I have been disrespectful to you in words and behavior," he tells them — is Jack told by his team manager: "Now you are ready to hit."

In other ways, the new script sees learning to hit a baseball in Japan as an

■ South Korea worries about nuclear threat

SEOUL, South Korea — Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney arrived Tuesday for talks on South Korea's security, saying the threat posed by North Korea's drive to produce nuclear arms would be at the top of the agenda.

He urged North Korea's leaders to end their nuclear program and warned that the United States and South Korea were determined to resist aggression.

Elsewhere, a North Korean diplomat negotiating formal ties with Japan criticized the growing international campaign to pressure his country to open its nuclear facilities to outside inspectors. But Japanese officials said Japan's worries about the nuclear program were delaying progess in the talks.

The nations of Northeast Asia have become increasingly alarmed over evidence indicating that North Korea is close to being able to produce nuclear weapons. The two Koreas have been bitter enemies since the peninsula was divided in 1945, and their border has been heavily militarized since the 1950-53 Korean War.

■ Looted czarist treasures found in Germany

MOSCOW — Treasures from the famed "Amber Room" of a Czarist palace in Russia — stolen by the Nazis in World War II — have been found in a Soviet military base in eastern Germany, a newspaper reported Tuesday.

The room was one of the great masterpieces of pre-revolutionary Russian artisanry, along with Faberge eggs and the Czar's jewels. It consists of large wall panels and other furnishings made from the rare, honey-colored resin.

The treasures were stripped by German soldiers from the famous chamber in Catherine's Palace at Tsarskoye Selo, a village outside St. Petersburg.

In its report, Rabochaya Tribuna did not identify the military base where it said the treasures were discovered or how they got there. It said the entire cache could be worth $150 million.

Also found were several gold icon frames stolen from the Russian city of Novgorod, the newspaper reported.

It said Soviet military intelligence learned of the whereabouts of the stolen artifacts months ago, but that documents disclosing the news never reached Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev or Russian Federation President Boris Yeltsin.

■ Salvadorans deny part in Jesuit murders

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — El Salvador's two top military men Tuesday denied the allegation of a panel of U.S. congressional Democrats that they took part in planning the killings of six Jesuit priests in 1989.

"We energetically reject these imputations, which are based on speculation that lacks any evidence," Gen. Rene Emilio Ponce, the defense minister, said in a statement he read on behalf of himself and his deputy minister, Gen. Juan Orlando Zepeda.

The two men asserted Rep. Joe Moakley, D-Mass., who signed the report to members of the Speaker's Special Task Force on El Salvador, was motivated by political considerations and his desire to end military aid to El Salvador. The six-page Moakley memo was sent to the 19 other Democratic representatives on the task force over the weekend.

"Congressman Moakley is looking for personal political advantage in this," said Zepeda, who sat beside Ponce at a news conference Tuesday.

In his memo, Moakley said the inquiry by his panel had found strong circumstantial evidence to suggest that the killings of the six Jesuits on the grounds of the Central American University on Nov. 16, 1989, were plotted at a meeting attended by Ponce and Zepeda, plus the air force commander at the time, Gen. Juan Rafael Bustillo, and two colonels.

Shevardnadze regains foreign minister post

MOSCOW (NYT) — Eduard Shevardnadze, the man trusted and respected by both the West and by Soviets, was reappointed Soviet Foreign Minister Tuesday in an apparent bid to restore the Kremlin's standing in international diplomacy.

Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev once again tapped the 63-year-old Shevardnadze as the nation's top diplomat 11 months after he stunned the world by resigning the post he had held for five years.

In a dramatic speech to parliament when he resigned, Shevardnadze correctly warned that hardline Communists were gaining strength and would attempt to replace the country's infant democracy with dictatorship.

Shevardnadze, during his tenure as foreign minister, helped shift the superpower relationship from a silent, potentially explosive standoff to one of friendship.

Even after he had resigned, Shevardnadze was visited by Secretary of State James A. Baker III and most every Western leader when they came to Moscow. He was so trusted that some leaders met him before meeting Gorbachev.

Shevardnadze replaces Boris Pankin, who will become ambassador to Britain. Pankin, in turn, will be replacing the current envoy to Britain, Leonid Zamyatin, a hard-liner retired for supporting the August coup attempt against Gorbachev.

Gorbachev also replaced the Soviet ambassadors to the European Community, France and five other countries, the official Tass news agency reported. The shakeup has been expected for months as a way of purging the diplomatic corps of those suspected of supporting the coup plotters.

The reappointment of Shevardnadze was widely seen here and in the West as an attempt by Gorbachev to bring stature and legitimacy to his government, which is in danger of sinking beneath legitimacy as Soviet republics assert their own authority.

The news was greeted warmly by President Bush. At an Oval Office meeting with Alexander Yakovlev, a close adviser to Gorbachev, Bush told reporters: "We know him well and have great respect for him."

Shevardnadze "has many friends in this country, a lot of close ones sitting right on this couch here," Bush said, gesturing to Baker. Shevardnadze and Baker had developed a close personal relationship during the time they served as the top diplomats for their respective countries.

When Shevardnadze came to the Kremlin in 1985 as a Communist Party boss from his native republic of Georgia, the superpower leaders hadn't met face to face in six years. Now, they meet at least twice yearly.

Eight Soviet republics agree to pay foreign debt

MOSCOW (NYT) — Eight of the remaining 12 Soviet republics reportedly agreed Tuesday that they would shoulder the entire foreign debt of the Soviet Union if necessary to bolster the fractured nation's credibility in the eyes of industrialized countries whose help is considered vital to a rescue of its economy.

In response, officials of the seven leading industrial nations were reported ready to move ahead with a plan to ease debt repayment terms over the next year and provide some relief to the failing Soviet economy.

Before considering the extension of new credit and aid with the approach of winter hardships, wealthy nations have been demanding such reassurances that past Soviet debts will be repaid.

The republics' agreement was reported by a participant at a critical meeting between officials of the now-sovereign republics and ministers of the Group of Seven wealthy industrial countries.

The ministers — representing the United States, Canada, Britain, France, Italy, Germany and Japan — are in Moscow to offer advice and badly needed aid conditioned on evidence of common resolve by the republics to deal with the chaos of the post-Communist economy.

With four republics balking, the others at the meeting "took on themselves the entire external debt," Byelorussian Prime Minister Vyacheslav F. Kebich told correspondents during a break in difficult private discussions over how to reconstruct the economy.

The Ukraine, Uzbekistan, Azerbaijan and Georgia were reportedly skeptical about immediately signing a memorandum committing them to share in the Soviet debt of about $80 billion owed to Western governments and banks.

Three of the original 15 Soviet republics — the Baltic states of Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia — have received international recognition as independent nations in the aftermath of the failed coup by hard-liners in August. They are pursuing the debt issue separately as they attempt to create their own place in the global market economy.

The republics balking over the debt left the discussions when the Group of Seven ministers began disclosing details of their aid proposals, which were not immediately made public.

Quake strikes Colombian coast

WASHINGTON (AP) — An earthquake struck at sea off the coast of Colombia Tuesday, but there were reports of damage ashore more than 100 miles away, the U.S. Geological Survey said.

The quake, measuring 6.8 on the Richter scale, was centered in the Pacific Ocean, about 115 miles northwest of Cali, said Rebecca Phipps, a spokeswoman for the Geological Survey.

It happened about 4:29 p.m. CST.

Ms. Phipps said there had been reports of damage in Cali, but she did not have details.

The Richter scale is a measure of the strength of an earthquake as recorded by the ground motion. Each increase of one whole number indicates a ten-fold increase in the strength of the quake. The great San Francisco earthquake of 1906 has been estimated at 8.3 on the Richter scale.

Cambodia has first official American presence since 1975

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — A U.S. envoy presented his credentials Tuesday to Prince Norodom Sihanouk, reasserting an official American presence here for the first time since the iron-handed Khmer Rouge moved to take power in 1975.

The prince heads the Supreme National Council of Cambodia, a national reconciliation council composed of the four opposing factions in this Southeast Asian country of nearly 7 million people. It is to pave the way for U.N.-sponsored elections in 1993.

After a short ceremony at the Royal Palace at which he received Charles H. Twining's credentials, Sihanouk asked that America not repeat its earlier interference in internal politics here but instead help develop Cambodia.

Twining, 50, a longtime Cambodia expert who speaks fluent Cambodian, holds ambassadorial rank and will serve as a special representative to the council rather than the government now in Phnom Penh. He and four other members of the U.S. mission arrived in Phnom Penh last week.

In a champagne toast to "a new era in Cambodian history," Sihanouk and Twining agreed the only way to prevent Khmer Rouge guerrillas from taking power in Cambodia again was to satisfy the needs of the majority, rural population.

Sihanouk was toppled by a military-led coup in 1970 that was supported by the United States. A bloody five-year war followed between the Khmer Rouge and the Lon Nol government.

As the guerrillas prepared for a final assault, the U.S. Embassy had to evacuate Phnom Penh on April 12, 1975. U.S. Ambassador John Gunther Dean, clutching a U.S. flag, and his staff were flown out by U.S. Marine helicopters.

Sihanouk said to reporters Tuesday, "I think the United States must play a very important role in Cambodia. If you organized a referendum here a clear majority would say: 'We like America.'"

He asked for a "high profile presence of America" and urged that U.S. aid go directly to the rural people instead of through officials who might prove to be corrupt. He also suggested the United States send medical teams, help remove the huge number of land mines and and help repair the highway linking Phnom Penh with Kompong Som, Cambodia's only deep-water port.

A guerrilla coalition that included the Khmer Rouge signed a peace agreement with the Vietnamese-backed Phnom Penh government last month to end a 13-year-long civil war.

U.S. returns 300 Haitian refugees to homeland

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — The United States Tuesday forced home 300 Haitians who fled in small boats after a military coup. But as Haitians kept fleeing, a U.S. judge ordered the government to stop the repatriation.

A U.S. Coast Guard cutter had picked up the 300 Haitians after the Sept. 30 coup and detained them aboard while the Bush administration weighed what steps to take. On Monday, it moved to return them to the impoverished Caribbean country.

About 20 policemen looked on while immigration officials processed the returning Haitians, who had risked their lives to flee, many in frail vessels. Red Cross officials said they would examine the refugees and give them $10 each before they rejoined their families.

Said one refugee, who spoke on condition of anonymity: "I've tried to leave before. Every time I do, they catch me. I'm not going to try again."

In Washington, State Department deputy spokesman Richard Boucher said the refugees continued leaving Haiti despite the U.S. decision Monday to return them. The Coast Guard has picked up a total of 2,160 since the coup, he said.

Hours after the first group were returned, U.S. District Judge Donald L. Graham in Miami temporarily halted the repatriation until another hearing Monday.

The Haitian Refugee Center in Miami had challenged the repatriation, saying the government failed to grant the refugees their rights.

Nearly 500 are in U.S. custody at Guantanamo Bay in Cuba.

Freight train derails in Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A freight train derailed and plunged into a busy highway south of the capital Tuesday, crushing buses and cars and killing or injuring at least 50 people, authorities said.

The accident occurred around midday about a mile outside the town of Tehuacan, 152 miles southeast of Mexico City in Puebla state, the Federal Highway Police said.

Reports from the scene indicated the train, heavily loaded with cement and sorghum, jumped the tracks at a curve near an elementary school and plowed into the traffic, said Lt. Susana Garcia Hernandez.

By nightfall, rescue workers were still taking victims out of the wreckage that included at least two crushed buses that had been packed with people, Red Cross spokesman Rene Lezama said in a telephone interview from Tehuacan.

He said there were at least 20 dead and 30 injured, and that some of the injured were dying on the way to hospitals.

TERMINAL: Plan is on hold until outlook improves decisions about the project in April or May.

Construction is planned to be funded with grants from the Federal Aviation Administration, airport revenue and a passenger facility charge (PFC) of $3 per ticket for a 20-year debt repayment period. If the delay continues as expected, McGregor said the airport may move to implement the fee for capital improvements.

"We need the PFC whether we do it (construction) or not," he said, indicating the airport could apply to charge a fee less than $3 or charge the planned fee for a shorter period of time.

Faircloth recommended collecting a PFC for several years and "banking it" to be used later.

Meanwhile, continued delays in the terminal project may encroach on the timely pursuit of other airport projects, officials said. Leaders said repairs of at least $5.5 million are needed.

Members of the airport advisory board on Thursday viewed a slide presentation city officials said is designed to educate the public about its terminal project and the need for extensive renovation if not new construction.

Ed Vogler, chairman of the board, said public opinion against the airport project is largely based on the misconception that tax money is used to support the airport, The airport is self-supporting, depending on revenues to fund operations.

"They're scared their taxes are going up," Vogler said. "That's the main problem. We've got to get across the idea that a new airport is positive for the entire area."

Citing their uncertainty about the terminal project, advisers delayed action on the proposed hiring of a consultant for a study of the parking lot.

"Any dollars we spend right now are going to be looked at very critically," member Bill Williams said. "This is definitely information we're going to need, but those needs might change."

Williams said the board also may have trouble making plans for airport capital improvements, many of which may depend on the status of the terminal project.

Councilmen said they will continue to monitor the opinions of their constituents about the project's future.

District 3 Councilman Buddy Sipes said people remain unconvinced about the project.

"I don't see the people I represent being for it at this point," he said. "They don't think this is the time to spend that kind of money."

District 2 Councilman Michael DeVaughn said he agrees now is not the time.

"From what I'm hearing, there's not a lot of support for it now," he said.

At-large Councilman John Castro said the issue should be brought to a vote.

"We need to educate everybody of the pros and cons and see what they want to do," he said. "We hear from some people, the ones who speak out, but what do the others think? That's what we need to know."

Pacific and lately they have been coming farther south. The more south they come, the more likely they are to pass over us."

These active jet streams have brought higher temperatures and created more pressure areas, which in turn have brought about the higher wind speeds.

"The strong, rising motions with the streams will produce storms if there is any moisture in the air," the spokesman said.

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies with high temperatures to be near 55 degrees. Winds are expected to come from the northwest at five to 15 miles per hour in the morning, shifting to the southwest at five to 15 miles per hour by late afternoon.

Clear skies are expected for tonight with a low temperature of near 30 degrees, according to the National Weather Service.

Thursday should bring sunny skies and high temperatures of between 65 to 70 degrees.

But the weekend outlook should again bring cooler weather as another jet stream is expected from the north.

Tuesday's high temperature reached 56 degrees and the overnight low was 45 degrees, compared to the record low for that date of 22 degrees set in 1988. The record high for November 19 was 83 degrees set in 1950.

QUESTIONS: Was there a link to North, CIA?

(From 1A)

The allegations of Waite's involvement with North and the CIA could revive old arguments over the trading of U.S. arms for hostages.

Waite disappeared in the company of armed Shiites on Jan. 20, 1987, after slipping away from his Druze militia bodyguards in order, he explained, "to keep an appointment" with unidentified contacts.

No reliable information about his fate, even whether he was still alive, reached the West until early this year.

After his capture, a pro-Iranian group, the Revolutionary Justice Organization, charged that he was a spy for the CIA and had a radio device planted in his hair to track the location of the hostages. U.S. officials have long denied the charges.

On Tuesday, British newspapers gave wide prominence to suggestions Waite was caught up, unwittingly or otherwise, in the "arms for hostages" swap with Iran.

British columnist Clifford Longley called him a "central figure" — during a previous trip to Lebanon — in the 1985 release of two Americans, the Rev. Benjamin Weir and Father Martin Jenco, both of whom were set free as part of the deal with Iran.

Robert Allason, a Conservative member of the House of Commons and author of several books on espionage and intelligence, told the London Times that Waite's relationship with the then CIA director, William Casey, and North, a leading actor in the secret transations with Iran, "hopelessly compromised" him and led to his abduction by the hostage-taking Hezbollah group.

Allason said that "only Waite can answer these questions (of how intimately he was involved with the CIA). Oliver North has refused to do so, and the only other person in a position to clarify these issues, William Casey ... is now dead."

(North told the British Broadcasting Corporation Monday that Waite had never known about the U.S. arms deals with Iran. He said Waite had been valuable because he was able to make direct contact with the hostage takers.

(A month before Waite was taken hostage, the Wall Street Journal published a story saying he had been assigned a role, perhaps without his knowledge, in North's plan to trade arms with Iran for the hostages. Waite immediately issued a strong denial of that report.)

DEBATE: Parents, officials discuss cluster system

(From 1A)

"The new elementary school must have defined attendance boundaries," said Joe Cummins, MISD executive director of planning, evaluation and testing.

School-board president Ken Marks explained the district's cluster system, or system of desegregtion, which groups schools into clusters.

Marks said some of the bus routes "seem to be too long while others are satisfactory."

He said the cluster system configuration was designed to satisfy both the plaintive and defendent in a federal court lawsuit filed 15 years ago.

Part of the lawsuit negotiation included allowing children to attend neighborhood schools in kindergarten through third grade. Carver Cultural Center also brings children from neighborhood schools together for activities several times a year.

Children in fourth, fifth and sixth grade attend a different school each year within their respective clusters.

"Children cannot feel at home when they are changing schools every year," said Jeannette Dragisic.

Marks said changing the cluster system — which was approved by the courts — could open the door for a lawsuit.

"We are operating under a court-ordered consent decree right now," he said.

Mary Hahn noted that the only "truly integrated schools," due to ethnic breakdowns, are Travis, Pease, Milam and Washington elementary schools.

"If the basis for the cluster system is desegregation, then it has failed," she said.

Marks said that when the clusters were created, Travis was "naturally integreated." So it was excluded from the cluster system. "They requested to be added to the cluster system," he said. "They felt left out."

One mother said she drives her children to school to avoid the busing system. "I live in the Santa Rita district and my child would have to get on the bus at 6:45 a.m. and get home at 4 p.m. We are asking our kids to put in a full work day here. Spending an hour on the bus is ridiculous."

Benita Baker, a parent from Pease Elementary School, noted her surroundings at the new school (Bush) and said, "Isn't this a beautiful school? I would love for my child to attend here. Pease is a small school and very crowded. But we are proud. I'd love to see this nice big cafeteria or satellite TV at Pease. I think the cluster system is wonderful and I don't want my child to have to stay in just my neighborhood."

Modesta Dunagan, a parent of a child at Bush, said she grew up in Pecos where "the schools were very segregated."

She said students left high schools not being integrated and often didn't become friends with students of other races until they returned from college.

"My daughter is 6 and she has no idea of black, white or Hispanic," Ms. Dunagan said. "One day she asked me: 'Mommy, what's a white person.'

Ms. Dunagan said children are adaptive to their surroundings.

Edmund Anderson said cluster system woes made him decide to keep two of his children in private schools. "I see a community not willing to change," he said. "I see a community bent on mediocrity."

"We don't have average teachers, facilities or average resources, but we produce little better than average students," he said.

"A little better than average is nothing," said his wife, Dianne.

Ms. Anderson said that demographics still are changing and Midland — like the state of Texas — may move to being heavily minority.

"In four or five years will we be busing minorities to minority schools?" she said, calling on the board to "look four years ahead before making boundary changes."

Leonard Dumeyer said he informally surveyed 20 youngsters in Midland public schools concerning busing. "Every single one of the kids said they liked the system. We may not agree with all of it, but they like it."

"Is this the only school district in Texas with this type of cluster system?" Lisa Crawford said.

"As far as we know," Marks said.

Teacher JoAnne Sipko suggested using two schools for year-round school programs since the cluster system will be out of balance with 23 schools next year, rather than 21.

"Well, if it's such a great system, why don't other districts have it?" Ms. Crawford said. "Let's work this out," she said. "There should be no quarrels or lawsuits. You are racists if you file a lawsuit. Kids are the reason we are here, not the color of our skin."

Alma Marshall said, "This is the second one of these meetings I have attended and it mystifies me that most of the time is spent talking about one one thing — busing and the cluster system. I haven't heard anyone discuss curriculum .

"... Everybody wants the minorities in the high schools when they can carry a football down the field. But when they are younger, nobody wants to ride the bus with them. How about building a junior high and a high school in the east side of town and we'll keep our football players there?"

Ms. Marshall decried "people saying, 'I am all for integration, but I don't want my kids riding the bus.'"

"We just need a plan," Marks said. "Give us some way to make it better."

Several speakers said they would support a committee of parents, teachers, and members of the business community to revamp the cluster system.

STUDIO: Movie is the first test of Japanese promise

almost mystical combination of concentration, will power and learning to "accept." The earlier script emphasized plainer elements of technique, such as Jack's changing his batting stance to deal with different kinds of Japanese pitches.

In addition, at least two jokes about World War II from earlier scripts have been eliminated. In one, American ballplayers cheer an old war movie in which a Japanese plane is shot down. Leon Lee, a retired player for the St. Louis Cardinals and for several Japanese teams, who was a technical adviser on the movie, says another was a joke made by Selleck's character upon seeing what is to be his home-town baseball stadium, a rundown relic from before the war in a city that was heavily hit by American firebombs. "I'm sorry we missed it," Selleck was to have said.

Balancing these changes, the script has deepened the complexity of the characters of the American's Japanese love interest (Aya Takanashi) and team manager (Ken Takahura).

The female romantic lead has become an independent woman who teaches Jack to stop fighting Japanese ways but who also has trouble asserting her own identity. The team manager is now also more complicated and troubled, seeing some of the bullheadedness of his own youth in Jack.

Both scripts deal critically with what is seen as anti-foreign bias in Japanese baseball: the fact that umpires have a bigger strike zone for Americans and that Japanese pitchers have walked American hitters to keep them from breaking Japanese home-run records. But there are no references in any script to what some people say is racism and discrimination in Japanese baseball, particularly against players of Chinese or Korean origin.

Other factors in the changes involved the advice sought and received from Japanese comics, playwrights, academics and other experts to strengthen the movie's appeal to the Japanese so it might be a commercial success in Japan as well as the United States.

The studio says the decision to invest more money in the film after the Matsushita purchase was coincidence. The budget is now estimated at $30 million, double the original figure but still lower than some estimates in the Hollywood press.

"There was absolutely no involvement by Matsushita," said Thomas Pollock, chairman of Universal Pictures. "But let's keep in mind that Japan is the second biggest movie market in the world. My job is to make good movies and funny movies. We don't want to insult the Japanese or the Americans.

"This movie is essentially the picture we started before I ever heard of Matsushita. The plot is basically the same. The characters have become more complex, but that's what we hope for in every movie. If you try to read a political agenda into it, you're wrong."

This view is echoed at Matsushita.

VETO: Result is a victory for anti-abortion forces

and file to vote for the bill, both to sting Bush with his first override and to maintain the party's alliance with abortion rights forces in the nation.

Speaker Thomas S. Foley, who is normally cautious in his forecasts, had predicted victory on Monday and again on Tuesday.

The measure was intended to overturn regulations issued by the Bush administration and upheld last June by the Supreme Court, and it was attached to the $205 billion appropriation bill for the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services and Education.

Bush insisted that the regulation was not a "gag rule," as opponents had charged, contending that doctors were free to give a woman "complete medical information about her condition." But he insisted that if the regulation were lifted, the federal family planning program would be entangled with abortion.

Intense lobbying efforts preceded Tuesday's vote as foes of abortion like Roman Catholic bishops and the National Right to Life Committee contended with advocates of the right to abortion like Planned Parenthood and the National Abortion Rights Action League.

The issue of what clinical practitioners could say and still keep federal financing, which could be argued on grounds of free speech and not just in terms of abortion, was clearly the best chance for growing abortion rights strength in Congress to overcome Bush's opposition, and both sides knew it.

RECOVERY: Project to increase reserves in field

million when complete, Bears said.

Construction of field activities, drilling and well work, designed by the Texaco's CO_2 Department in Midland, is well under way, officials said, and will create up to 225 jobs for workers during construction of the injection, gathering and recycle facilities.

Construction of the recycling facility is awaiting permits, but should be complete by the end of the year.

"The project will not create many jobs when complete," Bears said, "because we will continue to use the same employees. But, it will create job security and demonstrates Texaco's long-term commitment to the Permian Basin."

Bears said Texaco had identified several other major recovery projects for construction and that work could start on them in the next couple of years.

"Texaco has short-, medium- and long-term projects. The CO_2 projects in the Permian Basin are long-term projects. They might not compete with overseas drilling in the short term, but in the long term they have significant potential."

Bears said the potential was so great that Texaco considered its CO_2 projects in the Permian Basin a "domestic" oil play. He said that while some oil companies consider $25 to $28 as viable oil prices for tertiary projects, Texaco found such projects viable at current price levels.

"The project demonstrates Texaco's continued commitment to improving its domestic production by employing sophisticated technology to add value to existing fields," said E.L. "Bill" Johnson, Jr., Midland Producing Division Manager.

Johnson said CO_2 projects in mature fields like Mabee are often significantly more profitable than new discoveries, because of the established infrastructure.

The Mabee project will use a water alternating gas (WAG) process, which injects a slug of CO_2, followed by a slug of water.

Carbon dioxide for the project will be supplied by another major oil company which has extensive reserves in Southern Colorado.

The Mabee Field is on 20-acre spacing and many of the producing wells in the field were converted to injector wells, resulting in little infill drilling, Bears said.

He said the entire field would be a phased project, with the projects depending on the success of Phase 1.

The Mabee Field is 100 percent owned by Texaco. It was discovered in 1943, and primary development of the field continued until 1949, at which time there were 92 producing wells. Various enhanced recovery programs followed, reaching complete development with approximately 650 wells.

Peak projection for the Mabee Field occurred in 1980, at a rate of 11,000 barrels per day.

Bears said tertiary recovery projects would play a major oil in the future economy of the Permian Basin and the major oil companies would play a major oil in the projects.

He said the Permian Basin had produced 26 billion barrels of oil to date, but that was only about 30 percent of the oil in place. He also noted that new CO_2 technology, such as the use of foams, and the hybrid WAG systems could increase tertiary recovery significantly.

Ethics panel votes to rebuke Sen. Cranston

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Ethics Committee voted Tuesday night to rebuke Sen. Alan Cranston for his role in the Keating Five affair, capping a two-year investigation, a source close to the panel said. Cranston vowed to defend himself before the full Senate today.

The source, who declined to be identified, said the findings would amount to a "severe action" but declined to provide specifics.

Cranston, D-Calif., was among five senators who intervened with federal regulators investigating Charles Keating's California-based Lincoln Savings and Loan while Keating contributed $1.3 million to their campaign funds and causes. Some $900,000 went to Cranston.

The committee last February criticized the judgment of the other four but took no further action.

Cranston, who has consistently denied any wrongdoing, said he "would be on the Senate floor" today when the committee report is debated. He will be accompanied by the well known Harvard law professor, Alan Dershowitz, who is working without pay.

Cranston, who is 77 and a former Democratic whip in the Senate, has announced plans to retire next year after discovering he was suffering from prostate cancer. He has said repeatedly his fund-raising efforts were no different than those of other senators and is expected to repeat that argument Wednesday.

The text of the committee's proposed recommendations was not immediately available, and it seemed likely that the panel would not seek a vote by the full Senate. That seemed to be a compromise following months of deadlock on the committee, during which the panel's three Republicans have urged that Cranston be censured but the three Democrats on the committee resisted.

Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, in announcing plans to debate the issue today, made no mention of a roll call. Under the Senate's rules, any senator may demand one.

The committee decision ended an extraordinary investigation which included public hearings that called into question the combination of fund-raising and intervention with regulators that lies at the heart of a lawmaker's responsibilities.

Past Senate votes critical of an individual senator's behavior have been considered censures. But the source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the committee's action on Cranston marked a departure from past practice.

"It's an innovative way to get this job done. It's not something anybody will be perfectly happy with," said the source. " . . . I think he (Cranston) will consider it a severe action."

The Senate is set to adjourn for the year before Thanksgiving.

The committee found in February that there was substantial credible evidence that Cranston, a California Democrat, improperly linked his solicitation of political donations from Charles H. Keating Jr. with his official assistance to the former S&L owner.

Taxpayers were left with a $2.6 billion bailout bill, the most expensive thrift failure in U.S. history, when Lincoln Savings went under.

Aide says his sister leaked vice president's DEA file

Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — Deborah J. Daniels, a U.S. prosecutor in Indiana with strong family ties to Vice President Dan Quayle, authorized the leak of Quayle's secret DEA file to the media, her brother said Wednesday.

The leak was an effort to disprove drug allegations against the vice president as illustrated in Gary Trudeau's Doonesbury comic strip.

The DEA file reportedly disclosed details of drug allegations against Quayle and also showed that government investigators checked out the charges and concluded they were unfounded. The file was released to one of the Quayle family's newspapers, the Indianapolis Star.

Mitchell Daniels, a former Quayle adviser and the brother of U.S. Attorney Deborah Daniels, said his sister told him she had authorized the disclosure when he called to congratulate her the day the Star story about the DEA file was published.

He added: "When I told her the office had done the right thing, she made it clear she had not discussed it with anyone else in the Justice Department. She didn't really know how they'd react."

The actual disclosure of the Quayle file was made by John J. Thar, an assistant to Deborah Daniels. The Star story said Thar acted "with approval" from superiors and that he did so "simply because so much has been made out of nothing."

The reaction of the Justice Department, which oversees U.S. attorneys and the DEA, has been to order an investigation of who authorized the disclosure.

"It's under review," said Justice spokesman Paul McNulty, who declined to comment further. The department's Office of Professional Responsibility is conducting the probe, sources said.

Disclosing the contents of a Justice Department investigation is a violation of federal law.

The Doonesbury comic strip has suggested that the government is covering up accusations by drug dealers that Quayle has used cocaine, methaqualone and Quaaludes. The cartoons have evoked angry denials and denunciations from Quayle.

Quayle's DEA file, according to the Nov. 13 Star, showed that a DEA agent and police in 1982 had investigated Indianapolis drug dealer Charles Parker.

Survey finds 13,200 schools are inadequate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some 5 million American schoolchildren attend classes in substandard buildings, with problems ranging from severe overcrowding to poor heating and structural hazards, superintendents said Tuesday in a survey.

The survey released by the American Association of School Administrators said that 13,200 schools — one in eight — provide poor environments for learning.

The biggest problem, listed by 49 percent of the superintendents with building troubles, was simply age. That was especially true in the Southeast, where administrators reported that 83 percent of the substandard schools were too old, the survey said.

About 31 percent of the problem schools had troubles with electrical or mechanical systems and with heating and air conditioning. Many superintendents wrote in the survey that children were either too hot or too cold and that systems were outdated or in poor shape — or nonexistent.

Twenty-five percent of the substandard schools had a desperate need for roofing or window repairs, the administrators said. About 8 percent of the problem schools were said to be structurally unsound.

"Imagine being an administrator in a situation where your staff and little children must by law enter a building each day that you know is structurally unsound," said Shirley Hansen, an authority in the field of energy management in non-profit institutions.

Hansen added that some schools are environmentally unsafe. Asbestos, radon and a myriad of indoor air quality problems concern administrators, she added.

Nearly one-third of the nation's 110,000 public schools were built before World War II, the survey said, and many more were built in the 1950s and 1960s and designed to last no more than 30 years. Eleven percent have been constructed since 1980.

Hansen said the survey also found that more than half of the districts with 10,000 or more students have more than 27 portable classrooms. The median is 47.

Although administrators were not asked about the use of other facilities for classrooms, such as abandoned skating rinks or warehouses, Hansen agreed urban school officials searching for space are known to use such buildings.

HR 3515 vital to your future

An important bill now before the Congress is HR 3515 which would establish rules to govern the seven regional Bell Telephone operating companies — the RBOCs — in delivering information services to your home.

HR 3515 is important to you because if it is not passed, the regional Bell companies — not Congress or you — will determine what information is available to the general public over the telephone lines.

In effect, the Bell companies will be controlling what information is available to you.

U.S. District Judge Harold Greene, who originally ruled that phone companies should be prevented from monopolizing electronic information services, stated the danger Americans face from the RBOCs this way: "If the regional (Baby Bell) companies were permitted both to generate information and to transmit it, they would . . . appear to be the only entities in the developed world to have this kind of stranglehold on information."

The RBOCs have been placing full-page ads in major newspapers attacking them "for being against competition" because they are fighting this stranglehold on information. But newspapers are not against competition; we are against illegal monopolies which the Bell companies' entry into the information industry would represent.

Yes, newspapers have a vested interest in this action. Newspapers are the stalwart defender of the right to a free press which guarantees your right to information. If we lose, newspapers will be forced to unfairly compete against companies that hold a decided advantage. But the real loser will be you — the American consumer — who will lose at least a portion of the ability to decide what information can be brought into your home or business via the telephone lines.

All the newspapers want is "fair" competition — a level playing field and your right to control what information you can obtain. HR 3515 would provide such an environment for the expanding information society that is coming.

We urge you to contact your U.S. representative to voice your support for HR 3515. It is your freedom of information at stake in this issue.

Pork barrel leads to pricey stockpile

WASHINGTON — The national defense stockpile includes a cache of jewel bearings that would last 84 years in peace time. Most of them will never be used. Many are already obsolete and a substantial portion of the stockpile cost the government more than it should have.

Anderson

Yet the only plant in the United States that makes jewel bearings keeps churning them out, and the Pentagon keeps buying them, despite a recommendation from Defense Department auditors to shut down the plant and save $1.4 million a year.

This is "buy American" gone awry. One of the goals of the defense stockpile is to have enough domestic sources of arms and equipment to wage a war without having to buy from foreign sources. That sometimes means the Pentagon props up costly manufacturing plants and stockpiles material that will be out of date before it can ever be used.

Since 1952, the William Langer Jewel Bearing Plant in Rolla, N.D., has served its country by producing bearings for use in everything from watches to gyroscopes. The prices were from five to 25 times higher than foreign suppliers charged for the same bearings bought in large lots, according to a Pentagon audit. But that was the price the Pentagon figured it had to pay for remaining self-sufficient in a crisis.

Last year, auditors for the Defense Department inspector general found out that Langer wasn't all American. Since its inception, the plant has had to rely on foreign sources for some of its raw materials, defeating the purpose of having a completely domestic source of jewel bearings.

Add to that the fact that jewel bearings are giving way to more modern digital systems, and there is a strong case to end the Pentagon's long relationship with Langer.

That could put 140 people, many of them American Indians, out of work, and the North Dakota congressional delegation isn't about to let that happen without a fight. Langer is heavily dependent on Uncle Sam as a customer. The plant has seen its sales to commercial clients drop off, but has continued to make bearings at more or less the same rate to maintain the various skills in the plant and feed the government stockpile, just in case.

The 1990 audit by the inspector general found that to cover the costs of this overproduction, the plant sold its bearings for many times the rate that foreign companies were charging for the same merchandise. Langer gives the Pentagon a 25 percent discount, but that still doesn't beat foreign prices.

The auditors said if the Pentagon bought bearings in large lots from foreign suppliers, it could save $1.4 million annually. And more money could be saved if the Pentagon cut its appetite for bearings that it may never need. According to the auditors, the government is grossly overstocked. Some of the supplies were used during the Persian Gulf War, but there is still no shortage.

The case for keeping Langer afloat is almost indefensible, but not in North Dakota, where members of Congress have raised a stink about the auditors' recommendation. That stink reached the Pentagon. Our associate Dean Boyd has obtained an internal Pentagon memo written in March by an assistant defense secretary disputing all of the findings of the audit. In addition to any political pressure the Pentagon might be feeling, the military brass is firmly sold on the concept of an emergency stockpile that relies on domestic suppliers. The decision was to send the auditors back to the drawing board for another time-consuming study of Langer.

Today, nearly a year after the first audit, the plant continues to overproduce jewel bearings that cost more than they are worth. A Langer plant manager refused to talk to us about the issue.

Congressional investigators looking into the issue don't advocate that the plant be shut down altogether, but they agree that there need to be some cost-cutting changes. But if the past is any guide, the pork barrel will win out and Langer will continue to spit out jewel bearings that will never be used.

Ukraine poses American policy problems

KIEV, Ukraine — "Unprincipled" is the word used to describe President Bush by Mykhailo Horyn, a former political prisoner and founder of Rukh, the Ukranian independence movement. "We prefer Thomas Jefferson."

Safire

Fighters for a Ukraine free of Russian imperial rule are still smarting at Bush's speech in Kiev this summer blasting "suicidal nationalism" and touting the Gorbachev center.

That misreading of the forces of history in his "chicken Kiev" speech not only made one American president appear to be anti-liberty but jeopardized our relations with an emerging European power.

Ukraine (the article "the" is dropped when referring to a country, not a province) is the great, hobnailed boot that will drop on Dec. 1 on top of Moscow center's pretensions to empire. On that day of referendum, at least two out of three Ukrainians are likely to vote to assert their country's national sovereignty. On that day, the Soviet "union" will die.

The courageous early move of the Baltic states was the key to disunion, but the departure of Ukraine is the sledgehammer blow. Imagine the United States without its southeastern quadrant; subtract the old Confederacy from our map to get an idea of what an impact on Russian colonialism the separation of Ukraine's 52 million people and productive capacity will have.

We should shake free of our old questions (What will independence do to the Soviet Union? How will Russia survive without its breadbasket?) and address the new: What sort of nation will Ukraine be?

Strongly nationalistic, for openers. The word "Ukraine" means "borderland;" its Catholic west faces Europe, its Greek Orthodox east faces Asia. To win the coming referendum, the Ukrainians in the west have been actively selling the Russian-speaking population in the east (including those in the Crimea, a Black Sea gift to Ukraine from Khrushchev) on the glories of nationhood.

Opportunistic, too. The candidate leading the race for the presidency is Leonid Kravchuk, a longtime Communist subservient to the Kremlin and silent during the coup who has undergone a miraculous conversion to independence. He has stolen the Rukh opposition's platform, and if he gets away with the flip-flop, it will be a measure of the populace's desire for freedom from Moscow without too much change at home.

And Ukraine may spell trouble. American policy makers worry about plans announced in Kiev for a 400,000-man army, but that is a third of the Red Army troops now stationed here and may be a device for shipping the Russians home while keeping Ukrainian troops employed. The real trouble will be in enticing the new nation into giving up its nuclear weapons.

Even with milk in Kiev still suspect after the Chernobyl meltdown, Ukrainian politicians are not eager to give up the Soviet nuclear missiles located on their territory. Privately, some Kievans say that these weapons are bargaining chips for Russian cooperation on oil-for-grain trade and for Western help.

The center, as the poet Yeats predicted, cannot hold. We should stop supporting Moscow center and stop lecturing the Ukrainians on the need to ship the missiles to responsible Russia. That simplistic Bush-Gorbachev approach, typical of the offensive "chicken Kiev" speech, won't work.

Complex? You bet. But with Ukraine as a player, Washington will have to stop wishing for the good old days of union dictatorship.

Bus system hurts all school children

I appreciate the school board taking time to meet with citizens to discuss future plans for the district. However, after attending the Nov. 14th meeting I'm not so sure anything was accomplished. Most of Midland wants an end to the "cluster" system (regardless of ethnicity) despite what National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) or League of Latin American Citizens (LULAC) say.

Where have these people been for the past 15 years? Academically more children are in worse shape now than before any court mandate.

My children and hundreds, possibly thousands, like them will be educated despite clustering and not because they are white middle-class. The children James Fulier, Alma Marshall and their comrades profess concern for are the ones most hurt by artificial integration.

Ken Marks tells us it would cost too much to appeal the mandate and Joe Baressi tells us busing doesn't cost Midland taxpayers a dime. Sure, the state provides funds for mileage. That's gas money, folks. We fund everything else: new buses every year, maintenance, driver wages, maintenance crew wages, facility costs, administrative costs, insurance and heaven knows what all.

It seems to me that the thousands spent each month on busing could easily pay for an appeal and any possible litigation. A novel idea would be to eliminate integrated busing and apply those funds to academics.

The fact is we can educate or we can integrate, but we can't do both. Considering the sorry state education is in today the choice is obvious and we must act now!

Magic Johnson, not God must pay for mistakes

In reference to Jim Murray's article in the Sunday, Nov. 10, edition of the Midland Reporter-Telegram in which he stated "somebody up there goofed," it seems to me that Magic is the one who goofed — not "somebody up there." God makes no mistakes.

I am an avid fan of Magic's and admire his ability and talent for basketball. However, we do make mistakes — not God — and these mistakes will carry some consequences.

Dems offer nobody to compete with Bush

A Los Angeles Times poll revealed last week that if President Bush was running against an unnamed candidate from the Democratic Party, the election would be a dead heat. It was the first time that the Democrats felt they had a chance of beating somebody with nobody.

Buchwald

When the news reached headquarters in Washington the Democratic Tabernacle Chorus broke into "Happy Days Are Here Again." Democratic election specialists tore up their game plans and everyone discussed what the poll results could do for them. "This means that the American people will vote for any Democrat against Bush as long as he doesn't have a name," Mike Mindlin, a Democratic bean counter, said.

"Our job," declared Roquefort Dressing, "is to stop the present candidates from running. The trouble with the poll is that when you ask people if they would vote for Cuomo against Bush — Bush wins big. But when you ask them if they would rather have a cipher challenge Bush, the cipher runs in a dead heat. I know it hasn't been done before, but what would be wrong if we canceled our political convention and nominated nobody on the party's ticket?"

Nobody saw anything wrong with it.

Blackring, the money man, said, "The L.A. Times poll should help us in our fund-raising. We haven't been doing so well with Brown, Harkin, Clinton, Tsongas and Kerrey. I'm calling Arnold Sousa, the dishcloth magnate, right now. He's turned me down for money three times.

"Arnold, this is Blackring. Did you hear the latest? The Democrats have decided to run nobody against Bush. That's right, N-O-B-O-D-Y. The polls indicate that we can take the White House if our candidate is nameless. I'm not making it up. The Los Angeles Times says that the people are so mad at Bush they would rather vote for a Stealth bomber. We could use some big money to launch our campaign."

"We want to feature a TV commercial with Bush on the golf cart all by himself. The voice-over would say, 'You can vote for this man' — then we'll pan to an empty golf cart on the fourth hole — 'or this one.' Next, we'd show Bush in a motor boat in Kennebunkport. The soundtrack begins, 'Would you vote for this President?' And we'd show an empty tennis court and ask, 'Or this one?' . . . You'll raise a million for us? Thanks a lot. You won't be sorry."

Roger Maelstrom, the chief strategist, told the group, "Ladies and gentlemen, this is indeed a shot in the arm. Every Democratic supporter wants to give money as long as we don't have a candidate. That's what makes us the party of the people."

Snowshoes added, "They'll probably bring back Willie Horton, but there is not much they can do if the nobody we run this time ever gave him a furlough."

Dumbstruck was the only skeptic in the room. "We ran with nobody in 1988 and Bush creamed him."

Snowshoes replied, "But he was a nobody with a name. This time our candidate will never be seen or heard."

Dumbstruck sounded doubtful, "I don't think that's constitutional. Eventually we have to put up a candidate."

"We will after the election is over. We'll caucus when the polls close and pull his name out of a hat."

"What about a she?" Gretchen Cloisters wanted to know.

"Whoever heard of a nobody being a woman? Besides, the poll indicated that a male nobody could run a dead heat against Bush — no one asked if a woman could do it."

Gretchen was furious. "We have a right to be heard from. Just because the polls show Bush could be beaten by a nobody, you insist that that nobody has to be a man. Bush would go bonkers if he thought a nobody woman could beat him."

House OKs bill to help states maximize Medicaid money

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The House moved forcefully Tuesday to delay a Bush administration rule that would prevent states from using a controversial financing method that increases the Medicaid money they get to help pay for health care for the poor.

The vote of 348-71 was 60 more than the two-thirds necessary to override a threatened presidential veto, and could set the stage for the first override after 24 unsuccessful attempts.

The overwhelming margin also gave the nation's governors a stronger hand in their attempts to reach a compromise with the administration in negotiations that are to resume today.

The House bill would place a moratorium on the rule — issued Oct. 31 and scheduled to take effect Jan. 1, 1992 — through the end of the federal fiscal year, Sept. 30, 1992.

A similar bill has been filed in the Senate, but Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said he would propose a moratorium only through March 1, 1992. Bentsen held a hearing earlier Tuesday on the same issue.

Gail Wilensky, head of the Health Care Financing Administration, which oversees Medicare and Medicaid, said she would recommend a veto of the House bill, but would support a brief moratorium if it also prevented any additional states from adopting the controversial financing methods already used by 38.

Support for the moratorium came overwhelmingly from Democrats who objected to the rule because it would squeeze states facing rising Medicaid costs spurred by the weak economy and by mandates issued by the federal government.

"This rule represents the Bush administration at its worst," said Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo.

Opposition came almost entirely from Republican members who warned that it was a $5.5 billion "budget buster" which would encourage states to boost their Medicaid spending at the expense of the federal government.

Even so, 101 Republicans joined 247 Democrats and one Independent in voting for the bill. Eight Democrats and 63 Republicans voted against.

At issue is a conflict between the administration and 38 states over how they raise their share of money for the Medicaid program. The federal government pays between 50 and 85 cents for every Medicaid dollar spent.

Recently, state governments have begun raising some of their share through methods which involve donations and taxes levied on hospitals that provide Medicaid services. Those donations and taxes are then matched up to four-to-one by the federal government and sent back to the same hospitals.

In Pennsylvania, for example, 170 hospitals formed a foundation that borrowed $360 million in order to qualify for $385 million in federal matching money.

Freight train plunges off bridge in Kentucky

SHEPHERDSVILLE, Ky. (AP) — A freight train derailment sent 14 cars, including one carrying explosive chemicals, plunging off a railroad bridge Tuesday, prompting the evacuation of about 1,000 people, authorities said.

About half of the metal bridge spanning the Salt River collapsed, but the CSX train's three engines had already passed over the bridge. No injuries were reported.

The car with explosive chemicals was next to burning cars containing corn syrup and construction material. Firefighters stayed away because of the possibility of explosion.

The car contained methylene diphenyl diisocyanate, used to make plastics, officials said.

"The foremost concern is ... the fact that we have an insulated tanker car that has been subject to flame for some time," said Charlie Frazee, regional director of the Kentucky Division of Disaster and Emergency Services.

Police blocked all roads leading into Shepherdsville, a town of about 4,400. Officials said they waited Tuesday night and hoped the fires would burn themselves out.

The cars fell about 40 feet to the riverbank and in the river, a tributary of the Ohio River. The accident occurred just after noon on the main rail line between Louisville and Nashville.

Another car carrying a hazardous chemical — propylene oxide — remained on the 460-foot-long bridge, officials said.

A car carrying 9,000 pounds of explosives, including 90 cluster bombs, wasn't among those that fell off the bridge and was much farther down the tracks and away from any danger, DES spokesman Mike Lynch said. He gave no further detail on the car's cargo or its destination.

A garbage truck struck a trestle leading to the bridge before the derailment, but authorities hadn't determined whether that accident was responsible for the derailment.

Subcommittee demands census correction tapes be turned over

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House subcommittee on Tuesday issued a subpoena demanding the Bush administration hand over tapes containing corrections to last year's census.

The tapes could be used to challenge how political districts are drawn and where the government spends its money.

The tapes add in 5.3 million people the Census Bureau estimates it missed in the 1990 count of Americans. Many were poor blacks and Hispanics living in big cities.

Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher in July refused to use the tapes to correct the census. He said the corrections themselves were inaccurate.

Census numbers are used to draw boundaries of election districts for the House, state legislatures, city councils and other government bodies. They also help the federal government decide where to spend $116 billion in federal aid to state and local governments.

Rep. Tom Sawyer, D-Ohio and chairman of the House census and population subcommittee, said he wanted the tapes so experts outside the Census Bureau could determine how accurate the corrections were.

"I cannot identify a sound reason for the secretary's refusal to release the information," Sawyer said. "The desire to ensure a smooth redistricting process is a laudable goal, but it is not the responsibility of the Commerce Department."

Commerce Undersecretary Michael Darby said Mosbacher's offer of a sampling of the data was sufficient "for any scientific purpose."

On-job injuries, illnesses surge to new high

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of on-the-job injuries and illnesses in America surged last year to 6.8 million, the highest level on record, the government reported Tuesday.

The job-related injuries and illnesses reported by U.S. employers marked an increase of about 200,000 from the previous year, according to a study by the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

It was the highest number of work-related injuries and illnesses since the Labor Department began tracking such figures in 1972, about the time the Occupational Safety and Health Administration laws took effect. Those federal laws govern workplace safety.

Nearly 9 out of every 100 workers either got sick or injured because of their job last year, the Labor Department said. That 8.8 out of 100 rate was the highest since 1979, when the rate was 9.5 per 100 workers, the agency said.

The AFL-CIO, which represents about 14 million workers, said the new numbers demonstrate the need to strengthen OSHA laws. A measure now pending before Congress would require employers to let workers have more say in policing a company's safety procedures.

"Our nation's job safety law is failing to protect workers," said Peg Seminario, director of the AFL-CIO's safety and health division. "The simple fact is more workers were injured and became ill from workplace hazards in 1990 than at any other time in the past decade."

But OSHA director Gerard Scannell said there were bright spots in the data, noting that both construction and manufacturing — two areas where the agency has been active — experienced declines.

But the AFL-CIO dismissed those declines, noting there has been a "recession and widespread layoffs" over the past year.

Nearly half of the 1990 cases were serious enough to require workers to lose time on the job or have their work activity restricted, the Labor Department said.

The agency said that work-related fatalities cannot be measured accurately through the sample survey it used for the study.

While 2,900 work-related deaths were reported in private industry establishments with 11 workers or more in the 1990 survey, the BLS said it believes "that this count significantly understates work-related fatalities for the year."

The AFL-CIO estimates some 10,000 workers die on the job each year.

Eight industries reported at least 100,000 injury cases each. Those were eating and drinking places, hospitals, retail grocery stores, trucking and over the road couriers, nursing and personal care facilities, department stores, motor vehicle manufacturing and hotels and motels.

Though manufacturing cases were down slightly — they fell by about 36,000 cases, down to 2.4 million — factory injuries and illnesses still made up for about a third of the total reported injuries, the Labor Department said. Manufacturing accounts for about 20 percent of private industry employment.

NASA delays shuttle launch

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (NYT) — The planned launching of the space shuttle Atlantis on Tuesday was postponed for up to a week because of a faulty navigational unit on a rocket that will be carried aloft to propel a satellite into orbit.

Officials of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration called off the flight Tuesday morning, shortly before technicians were to start loading fuel into the shuttle's external tank for a planned evening flight carrying a military watchdog satellite.

Robert B. Sieck, who directs launchings at the Kennedy Space Center here, said the inertial measurement unit aboard the two-stage solid rocket booster attached to the satellite would have to be replaced with a spare unit and the new components tested, a process that would delay the flight for five to seven days.

"Our approach is to be ready to go when we get all the work done," Seick said at a news briefing. "This will take us into next week." In a statement later on Tuesday, NASA said engineers had worked out a repair schedule that could lead to the launching of the shuttle as early as Sunday.

Until the satellite booster problem arose about 8 a.m., flight officials said the countdown was moving flawlessly. The only concern had been the possibility of showers or low clouds during the launching period.

The primary mission for Atlantis and its six crew members is to deploy an Air Force satellite designed to detect missile and rocket launchings, as well as nuclear detonations.

The rest of the scheduled 10-day flight will be devoted primarily to military experiments, including testing the idea of having soldiers in space to observe military operations and movements, and relaying the tactical information to commanders on the ground.

The malfunction that caused the delay occurred with one of five pairs of gyroscopes and accelerometers housed in a unit that tells the rocket, called the inertial upper stage, where it is in space in relation to the ground.

Nashville school district closes for flu outbreak

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The city's 67,400 school children got the rest of the week off Tuesday because of a flu outbreak that kept a quarter of them home sick the day before.

"As far as anyone knows, this is the first time ever that the entire school system has closed for medical reasons," said Eugene Deitz, director of communications for the Metro Nashville schools.

Schools in Nashville reported as many as 40 percent of their students absent Monday. Districts in surrounding counties also had high absentee rates. Humphreys County, 50 miles west, also closed schools for the rest of the week.

School officials hope the four-day closure will allow time for the flu, a strain called Type A Beijing flu, to run its course.

"If we bring them back to school this Thursday or Friday, it increases the chances of it flaring up and transmitting again," said Fredia Wadley, health director for the school system. "Four days plus the weekend — that should be long enough."

Teachers also were stricken. Schools requested 304 substitute teachers on Monday, but only 197 of the system's 400 substitutes were available, said Mary Parks, who coordinates substitute teachers.

Parks said 107 classrooms went unsupervised and some job-seekers she interviewed Monday morning went to work as substitutes that afternoon.

Symptoms of the Type A Beijing flu include high temperatures, vomiting and general aches and pains.

Diania Traweek, and her son, Lucas, benefit from the efforts of some big-hearted neighbors who helped harvest the family's cotton fields earlier this week.

Farmers pitch in to harvest crop

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

A group of local farmers gave up two valuable days of harvesting time this week to help a widow bring in her crop.

Diania Traweek's 33-year-old husband Timothy died suddenly in July, leaving her alone with their 18-month-old son. In their nine-year marriage, the couple had successfully farmed several fields of cotton, including one east of Midland that badly needed stripping this week.

"She could have done it herself," said Mrs. Traweek's father-in-law, C.B. Traweek of Midland. "She worked in the fields just like he did, with no problem at all."

But bringing in the 180-acre crop alone was an almost insurmountable task. So a group of friends, neighbors and relatives pitched in Monday and Tuesday to help.

"I wasn't surprised at all. People help each other out," Mrs. Traweek said. "I knew I had so many friends."

The men gave up two days of clear weather to assist, bringing their own equipment and the wisdom of experience. They finished the job in a day and a half, bringing in the last cotton just before the rain showers began.

Roy Graham left his own cotton crop waiting in the fields to help.

"We want to do what we can to help, anything we can," he said. "People have helped me. You don't know how good people are until you realize how they're willing to drop what they're doing and help their neighbors."

"We've been lucky," said Albert Traweek, another of C.B.'s sons. "It's been a pretty close-knit community."

Mrs. Traweek said she doubts she'll continue to farm next year, but may keep cattle.

"I've got to take care of my son," she said. "It's too much work alone."

Tim Traweek had grown up in the area southeast of Midland and attended school at Greenwood. Many of those helping to bring in the crop had known him since childhood.

Mrs. Traweek said many of the neighbors who came to help are like part of the family. Among them was Andy Schumann, who had been the best man at her wedding.

Graham said local farmers had been planning to help the widow shortly after they heard of her tragedy. The word-of-mouth message drew a group of about 15 men, expecting nothing but a meal for the day's labor.

But the volunteers also knew they were giving something they could expect in return.

"He would have done it for any of them," Mrs. Traweek said. "And he'd be proud. Real proud."

College cinches Coca-Cola deal

■ Southwest Coca-Cola Bottling Co. has given Midland College a package that includes an electronic marquee.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Motorists driving up to Midland College's new entrance next fall, will be greeted by a message marquee.

The $28,000 electronic marquee is part of an almost $100,000 package being given to the college by Southwest Coca-Cola Bottling Co.

The package will include a $12,000 electronic scoreboard for Chaparral Center, $15,000 in scholarships, $10,000 product donation, a $5,000 ticket purchase, $1,000 of customized cups, $10,000 in a basketball center investment spread and $18,000 in equipment upgrading for the athletic department.

In exchange, MC agrees to give Coca-Cola "exclusive right and privilege to sell the undersigned all fountain, vended beverage and snack product."

Coca-Cola will also set up beverage vending machines on campus, according to Mike Stevens, Chaparral Center director.

MC board trustees deliberated on the proposal in executive session for about 45 minutes during Tuesday afternoon's board meeting before approving the proposal.

Trustees approved it "with all fringe benefits attached to it."

"We are real excited about it," Stevens said. "The new scoreboard will replace the old one, and we expect to have the marquee at the new college entrance for the 1992-93 school year."

The new entrance will be constructed on the north end of the campus across from the south Siesta Street access.

"Progress on the new entrance is being made," said MC President David Daniel. "The city is in the process of surveying the site and route. We hope to have the actual construction take place in early spring."

The college expects to spend about $60,000 on the project. The city of Midland is engineering the project and providing signage.

In other action, trustees approved a consent and release form for nursing students to perform "invasive health care procedures."

Eileen Piwetz, MC chairman of health sciences, said, "We were advised to have a consent form by an accreditating body."

Ms. Piwetz said that "with all the influence of AIDS and the risks involved to health care workers, we wanted to do this."

Daniel said the policy will allow students — specifically those in nursing — to engage in various invasive procedures with each other, such as giving each other injections, "and in doing so, waive any liability of the college."

"It sure helps for them to give an injection to another student before going to Midland Memorial Hospital and giving someone an

Redistricting has some races still up in the air

■ Redistricting plans will affect U.S. congressional districts, state senate and representative districts, and state board of education member districts.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Midlanders will go to the polls next year to cast their votes for many races, ranging from president to the county constable.

But what choice of candidates local residents will have to choose from at the state and national level will depend on whether several redistricting plans are upheld.

Redistricting will affect U.S. congressional districts, as well as state senate and representative districts. In addition, the state board of education member districts will be affected.

Although the Justice Department approved the state's redistricting plan, a federal lawsuit filed by the Republican Party still challenges the new lines.

The tentative plan calls for Midland, currently represented in the U.S. House of Representatives by the 21st District, to be divided among the 19th, 21st and 23rd districts. Midlanders, depending on where they reside, would be in one of the three districts.

On the state representative level, the redistricting plan calls for Midland to remain in the 76th District, represented by Republican Tom Craddick.

The state senatorial district that will represent the Tall City would change under redistricting, from the 25th District to the 31st District. Democrat Bill Sims of San Angelo currently represents Midland.

Rick Davis, Midland County Republican Party chairman, supports his party's lawsuit that challenges the redistricting.

Police support preventive plan

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff Writer

Local crime prevention advocates gathered Tuesday night to discuss crime problem areas in Midland and the various means of helping reduce criminal incidents.

Crime Prevention Commission members hope to substantially add to their ranks by increasing the number of neighborhood watch programs in the city.

"I have to stress the importance of the neighborhood watch programs," said Midland Police Chief Richard Czech. "You people provide a tremendous help to us and we certainly don't have the manpower to do it alone."

Between January and the end of September, members of the police department worked on 3,250 assigned cases — an increased case load of five percent compared to last year during the same period.

Significant categorical breakdowns include 750 burglaries, 350 thefts and 235 assigned narcotics cases.

Major patrol problems include the south and east sections of the city, Czeck said.

Sheriff Gary Painter also discussed concentrated problem areas in the county, including south of the Mission Country Club. He also reported 253 burglaries between January and September — a figure nearly identical to last year at the same time, said Painter.

Significant categorical breakdowns for the county compared to last year at this time include: 253 burglaries in 1991, 254 last year; 299 misdemeanor thefts

Cook considers rehiring offer

Staff Report

BIG SPRING — Following another day of meetings between fired police chief Joe Cook and Big Spring city officials, mediated by State Rep. Troy Frazier, Cook has not yet accepted the city's offer to rehire him.

Frazier said Mayor Max Green is expected to call an emergency city council meeting at 7:30 p.m. today that will include an executive session to discuss Cook's reinstatement.

"Everything went very well today," Frazier said Tuesday night. "I hope something good will come out of it."

Cook was dismissed last Thursday by City Manager Hal Boyd. Frazier then mediated several meetings between the former chief and city council members, leading Boyd to offer reinstatement early Monday.

School tax goes under fire

By Peggy Fikac
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — Texas Supreme Court justices raised questions Tuesday about the constitutionality of the state's new school property tax system, which is under challenge by wealthy school districts and individual taxpayers.

The court took no immediate action after a hearing on the school finance law. The measure is designed to shift hundreds of millions of local property tax dollars from wealthier to poorer school districts within new education taxing regions, made up of one or several counties.

The law was passed in response to a Supreme Court order for the state to even out school districts' access to education funding. The nine-member Supreme Court has ruled two previous laws unconstitutional.

RACE: Plan will split district

(From 1B)

"I think the lines drawn by a Democrat-controlled legislation in Austin are unfair and gerrymandering to protect Anglo Democratic incumbents," Davis said.

But Chris McCormack, Midland County Democrat Party chairman, had different view on how the redistricting will affect Midland's U.S. Representative district division.

"I believe the congressional redistricting has the potential of being beneficial to Midland," he said. "It will provide Midland with three different representatives" who will each haye an interest in Midland.

Redistricting has also shifted State Board of Education representation from the present District 14 to District 1.

In 1992, Midlanders will go to the polls to vote in officials for all the above offices.

In addition, on the state level, local residents will be asked to vote for a railroad commissioner, three members of the Supreme Court, three members of the Court of Criminal Appeals, and a justice in the 8th Court of Appeals.

Positions in the County of Midland to be determined next year include County Commissioners, precincts 1 and 4; tax assessor/collector; County Attorney; Justice of the Peace, Place 1; Constable; Midland County Sheriff; 142nd District Court judge; and District Attorney.

Those seeking to run for office within Midland County have between Dec. 3 and Jan. 2 to file, which includes a filing fee, with their respective local party chairman. Independents file with the County Judge.

Candidates are first required to submit a designated treasurer form with the Elections Administrator Office. In addition, those who seek elected office are later required to fill out a contributions and expenditures disclosure with the office.

Primaries are set for March 10, and run-off elections on April 14. The general election is scheduled for Nov. 3.

In non-partisan races, Midlanders will also cast their votes in a mayoral election and two City Council places, districts 3 and 4.

Offices open to election in 1992 also include the Hospital District directors, districts 3 and 4; the Midland Independent School District, districts 1 and 7; and Midland College, four places on the board.

CRIME: Gangs are targeting city

in 1991, 257 last year; 106 felony thefts in 1991, 111 last year; 39 auto thefts in 1991, 29 last year; 49 forgeries in 1991, 26 last year; and 140 driving while intoxicated arrests in 1991 with 89 occurring last year.

"Our big problem is in the area of lost property," said Painter. "People aren't writing down the serial numbers and it makes our job nearly impossible as far as recovering stolen property."

Last year, the sheriff's department received reports of more than $1.2 million in lost property, while recovering only $275,000 of it.

Detective John Anastasio discussed gang problems in Midland. Many people appeared surprised the city even had such a problem.

"The large gangs from California, Houston and Fort Worth, for example, are moving into the smaller communities," he said. "Midland is a prime target for them. There is a lot of money in the community and they think they can come in here and fool us."

Anastasio mentioned four individuals, all with significant prior arrests in cities including Houston and Fort Worth, that the department has recently busted.

According to Anastasio, high profits on drug sales entices such gangs to Midland.

"Nine hundred dollars worth of crack will sell for $3,500 in Midland," he said. "These people are extremely organized. And they move around quickly."

Nick Taylor, president of the Crime Prevention Commission, believes the neighborhood watch program helps.

"Right now it's the only thing that works toward preventing home burglaries and neighborhood crimes," he said. "We started the program here in 1982 but we still have areas that are hard hit and we need to get the program going in those areas."

TAX: Court questions constitutionality

have defended the new tax structure as constitutional, although some poor districts have cited concerns about other parts of the law, such as whether it includes enough state funding.

Justice Bob Gammage asked whether the law was a "back door" to effectively impose a state property tax, which is prohibited by the Texas Constitution.

Those fighting the law contend it sets up such a tax. And if the tax is a local one, they say, a local election should have been provided to authorize it.

Jim George, representing taxpayers and about 50 property-rich school districts, said local property taxes should be only a limited supplement to a state-funded school finance system. That system legally could be funded through such means as a state income tax, he said.

The state share of public school funding currently is 47 percent, excluding federal aid, education officials say. That is projected to grow to almost 51 percent under the new law by 1994-95.

Assistant Attorney General Toni Hunter said that lawmakers are allowed to choose how to fund public education. She said that a totally state-funded education system would require an additional $9 billion a year.

Under the law, enacted this year, school districts in each county education taxing region share revenue from a basic local property tax. Local school districts also may tax more, without pooling the revenue, to enrich programs and for construction.

Ms. Hunter said the county property tax is locally collected and distributed. The state does not directly set a statewide property tax rate, she said, but instead mandates how much money must be raised.

A new election is not required because voters previously have authorized their school districts to levy taxes, she said in response to justices' questions.

Justice Eugene Cook asked at one point, "Aren't we really just playing with words to cover the fact that we are violating the constitution?"

And Justice Nathan Hecht asked, "If all you have to do to keep from having a state ad valorem tax is to not put the money in the (State) Treasury, why don't we tax property, use it for prisons and not put the money in the Treasury?"

But Justice Lloyd Doggett asked whether a supplemental Supreme Court opinion issued this year virtually invited lawmakers to devise a system like the current one. He had dissented from that opinion.

injection for the first time," Ms. Piwetz said.

The health sciences chairman said administering injections to fellow students bolsters their self confidence. When they later confront a patient for the first time, if asked if they had "done this before, they can say, 'Yes, I have.' "

Ms. Piwetz said accidents can also occur and the consent would keep the college from being liable for mishaps.

The board meeting had an added international flavor when English instructor Pamela Howell discussed a club to benefit foreign students. Also, a host of MC athletes from Brazil, Columbia, Australia and Scotland were introduced to trustees.

Ms. Howell said the International Club, with 50 students, is seeking hosts to provide off-campus activities for foreign students. "This could be a visit to plays, a museum, a movie with popcorn, anything to get them out of their apartments," she said.

She said the hosts could serve as "English liaisons for the foreign students," many who are athletes.

Ms. Howell, club sponsor, is also seeking sponsors to purchase tickets to events for the students.

In other action, trustees approved a part-time tax shelter annuity plan and Ted North of Grant Thornton said the college passed auditing with flying colors.

"The college is in good financial condition," he said. "There has been good stewardship during the year and responsible management of assets and investments."

Daniel said that one "late-breaking item," not on the agenda, concerned the state comptroller's office "speaking to a 2 percent raise of all qualifying employees, paid by state funds."

The state will provide the college with $70,203 in additional funds. The college — which usually offers employees a 1.5 percent raise in the step program — will raise employees up to 2 percent at a cost of $59,750 to the college.

"The formula for doing this is not yet finalized," said Bob Phillips, MC vice president of business and finance.

Two injured by tornado

CHANDLER (AP) — A tornado that plowed through this East Texas town Tuesday caused two minor injuries and damaged cars and buildings.

At least one building and two cars were damaged by the tornado, which struck in a business section of town.

"It hit Chandler about 10:30 a.m., causing possible damage to a Dairy Queen," Marvin Suell, a dispatcher for the Smith County sheriff's office in Tyler, said.

A 57-year-old woman remained in good condition at Mother Frances Hospital with lacerations, hospital spokesman Joe Domm said.

A Tyler Emergency Medical Service official said the other person also suffered minor injuries and was not transported to the hospital.

Funnel sightings were also reported five miles west of Kilgore, north of Jacksonville, east-northeast of Palestine and near Rusk.

A tornado watch was posted for 46 counties in East and Central Texas through 6 p.m. by the National Weather Service.

In Chandler, the roof of a building next to the Dairy Queen was damaged, a Henderson County sheriff's spokeswoman said.

Other twister damage was reported in the Red Springs and Sand Flats areas north of Tyler. Trees were damaged in Wood County, the weather service said.

Large hail accompanied some of the storms Tuesday morning.

Cloud rotation was reported 5 miles southwest of Jacksonville, but police spokeswoman Marian Lindsey said there were no reports of damage or injuries there.

Secretary vows to make education better

AUSTIN (AP) — U.S. Education Secretary Lamar Alexander said Tuesday the education movement "will be to the 1990s what the civil rights movement was to the 1960s."

"That may be saying a lot, but I believe it's true," Alexander told the Texas Business and Education Coalition, whose goal is making Texas public education internationally competitive by the year 2000.

Alexander, Tennessee governor in 1979-87 and University of Tennessee president in 1988-91, was confirmed as education secretary in March.

He outlined "America 2000," a national strategy aimed at increasing the high school graduation rate to 90 percent, world-first ranking in science and mathematics, and 100 percent adult literacy.

Alexander quoted a Tennessee teacher as saying "education is in continuous need of reform because the world is changing."

"The difference is we've never had to change this much," he said. "And we've insisted on not changing so long that we're in a little bit of a time warp.

"We're going to have to make more changes within the next few years than most of us expected, than most of us understand or that most of us will be comfortable with, and we're just beginning to tune into that."

More federal money is not the answer, Alexander said.

"The amount of federal tax dollars spent on elementary and secondary education is only about 6 or 7 percent of the total, and it's not going to change much during our lifetimes," he said.

"So, the schools of Austin or Waco or Victoria or Dallas will be just as good as the citizens of Austin or Waco or Victoria or Dallas and the citizens of Texas want them to be," he said.

Man robs cab driver Monday

Staff Report

A 19-year-old cab driver doing paperwork in the cab was robbed Monday morning when a man pulled a knife and demanded money at 3205 W. Cuthbert St., police said.

David Dean Weston, 5401 E. County Road 120, handed over $32 before the robber fled on foot shortly after 3 a.m. A Midland police canine unit tracked the man for a short distance before losing him.

The man was wearing a ball cap, gray jacket and black pants.

Teen-ager proves to experts she is 'one smart cookie'

By Nita Lelyveld

FAIRFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Jill Sheiman had volunteered to do some baking for a local homeless shelter when she stumbled on a recipe for a rich, spicy chocolate cookie.

"I was tired of the recipes we had," she said. "I was tired of chocolate chip cookies and oatmeal raisin cookies. They're the cookies everyone's grown up with and they're boring."

A number of other local cookie lovers felt the same way. The new treats got rave reviews from family and friends, and that gave Sheiman the idea to start a business selling them.

Two years later to her amazement, Sheiman is finalizing plans to widely distribute "Slightly Hot Chocolate" cookies through her own company, Jill's One Smart Cookie Inc.

What's even more amazing, though, is that Sheiman is only 15.

A year ago, she placed a $15 ad in The Westport News for help with the "creative aspects" of starting a new cookie company. She did not mention her age.

Much to her surprise, more than 50 people responded — including several high-powered New York advertising executives, many of whom make their homes in the affluent suburbs of southeastern Connecticut.

"THEY THOUGHT I was a large cookie company like Nabisco or Sunshine trying to sneak out a new cookie," Sheiman said. "When they found out I was just a teen-ager, most of them just thought it was a joke."

But not Peter Cornish, now a senior vice president at the advertising giant J. Walter Thompson Co. Cornish was between jobs at the time, and responded to the ad in hopes of bringing in a little extra money.

Cornish admits he was suspicious of the project at first and thought some adults must be behind it. But when he discovered the teen really was going it alone, he was impressed by her determination and volunteered his help.

"I thought it was kind of an impossible dream at first, but then I tasted the cookie and realized it was unique," he said. "Since her goals were modest at the time and she wasn't trying to take over from Pillsbury, I thought we might be able to find a little niche."

Under the expert tutelage of the 48-year-old advertising executive, Sheiman has since become fluent in the ins and outs of marketing, including concept boards, focus groups and the importance of packaging.

AP LaserPhoto

Jill Sheiman, 15, shows some of the cookies that she sells under the name of "One Smart Cookie Inc." Sheiman has recieved advice and help from experts to start her cookie company, which is based in her Fairfield, Conn., home.

Right now, the cookies are only sold in a small store in Fairfield and to people who contact Jill directly. They cost 75 cents apiece.

But several major chain stores have expressed interest both in the cookie and its creator. And Sheiman has contracted with Leon's Bakery in North Haven, an automated plant that can produce 10,000 cookies an hour, to bake her cookies when she's ready to start taking big orders.

SHE ALSO hopes to market the frozen dough for customers who want to bake their own cookies, which incorporates different elements of many recipes and has a taste similar to old-fashioned ginger bread.

Sheiman said she had learned quickly that establishing a real business involved a lot more than just putting a few cookie sheets in the oven.

For one thing, the family kitchen didn't meet sanitary standards, and baking cookies in bulk wasn't something that could be fit in after school.

Sheiman had to go in search of someone else to do the baking for her.

She said she didn't realize until Leon's began test producing the cookie that its current shelf life is only about a week. It often takes that long just to get cookies from a bakery into a store.

The problem seemed insurmountable until Sheiman contacted the Culinary Institute of America in Hyde Park, N.Y. Bakers there are now reformulating her recipe for free, and she's hoping to start full production within a few months.

The cookie project has pretty much taken over the girl's family.

Her father, an attorney, provided her with financial backing. Her mother, Deborah, an educational consultant, has taken time off from work to help field business inquiries and to attend meetings that only can be scheduled during school hours.

"It's turned out to be a much bigger project than we expected," she said. "I think Jill has taught us all a lesson."

THE YOUNGER Sheiman says she wants to be a sports attorney, not a corporate mogul when she gets older. But the experience of starting a company will always stay with her, as well as the generosity of all those who helped her, she said.

"What I've found is since I'm 15, people want to volunteer their services and their talents because they think that I represent the entrepreneurial spirit that's diminishing in America," said Sheiman, who has yet to make a profit on her new venture.

"But they weren't required to help me. They weren't required to teach me how to run a cookie business. And I never thought when I started that I'd get this much help. People have been so giving, it's amazing."

Guidelines to leaner, healthier living offered

Staff Report

The 1990s consumer is concerned about overall health, diet and fitness. With consumer focus expanded well beyond calorie control, Stouffer's Lean Cuisine has created the "Guide to Healthier Living."

The 32-page booklet incorporates important information about the most common nutritional issues among consumers — fat, cholesterol, sodium, carbohydrates and fiber. A highlight of the guide is a 14-day balanced menu plan which monitors and measures grams of fat and features many of the new and recently reformulated Lean Cuisine entrees.

"Calories from carbohydrates and protein burn much more efficiently than those from fat. For this reason, as well as the fact that fat is associated with health risks, we've paid particular attention to reducing fat calories in our plan," said Tami Bloch, registered dietician at Stouffer's. "As a result, we're offering healthy and satisfying menus."

Daily menus are based on the most recent nutritional guidelines from leading health organizations. The composite two-week diet plan follows the recommended daily maximums of:

- 30 percent of calories from total fat;
- 10 percent of calories from saturated fat;
- 2400 milligrams of sodium; and
- 300 milligrams of cholesterol.

"Because fat is so imporatant, we have noted the number of grams of fat in all components of the meal, and provided a simple way to count fat grams in an easy-to-read Fat Guide Chart," she said. Ms. Bloch also noted that the 14-day menu plan simplifies confusing calculations for consumers. "Consumers have a difficult time understanding how to fit a variety of foods in a meal plan and come in under the guidelines of 30 percent of calories from fat. Consumers don't have to sit with a calculator when they use our 'Guide to Healthier Living,' and that's an advantage," Ms. Bloch.

The Stouffer's Lean Cuisine "Guide to Healthier Living" also includes general reminders on how to reduce fat in the diet, and tips on how to improve health and burn calories through exercise.

A copy of the booklet is available free of charge to all consumers and professionals who call 1-800-626-LEAN.

Rice versatile

NEW YORK (AP) — Rice is a versatile food that can be used in everything from snacks to desserts. A one-half cup of rice contains 82 calories. It is free of sodium, with only a trace of fat.

The USA Rice Council says there are 25,000 rice growers in America. The major rice producing states are Arkansas, California, Louisiana, Missouri, Mississippi and Texas.

Cookware system really works! Honest!

By Linda Anderson

I have been known to say, out loud and in public as well as in print, that I don't use my microwave oven for much except heating water for coffee or tea, popping popcorn and nuking frozen dinners. I know there are many people who can prepare full seven-course meals plus dessert in their microwave ovens without even breaking a sweat, but I'm not one of them. To me, microwave cooking sounds like a real pain, what with all the stirring and turning you have to do every few minutes (you can't get too far from the microwave while you are cooking) and the fact that microwaves don't brown like regular ovens, foods can come out looking kind of anemic.

Anderson

I got a call from a woman here in Midland who is a Tupperware dealer. She told me she might have a solution to my refusal to fully utilize my microwave. She said TupperWave stack cooker was designed for people like me who don't really cook in the microwave. The stack cooker consists of three microwaveable casseroles dishes (a three-quart, a 1¾-quart and a cover that doubles as a ¾-quart casserole) plus two lids so you can seal up any leftovers in the pots they were cooked in, and put them in the refrigerator.

Excuse me for being skeptical. I know of and like Tupperware (although it's kind of expensive for my budget), and I know and like my microwave, no matter what it's limitations. I just wasn't sure getting them together was going to change my mind about microwave cooking.

The Tupperware dealer said she understood that; she had been skeptical too, before she got to know the TupperWave stack cooker, and that she'd really like me to give it a try. She even volunteered to cook a three-course dinner for me just to prove her point.

Never let it be said that I turn down free food. The youngest taste-tester and I went to the dealer's house, where she educated us about the TupperWave stack cooker in particular and microwave cooking in general. Seems that if you really want to cook in your microwave and have the food come out edible, you have to learn how — the rules are different than those used when cooking in a conventional oven.

For one thing, how you arrange the food to be cooked is vitally important because microwaves used to cook food only penetrate the first inch or two of the food, and the heat from those couple of inches is what cooks the rest of the item. That's why things need to be arranged in thin layers with the fattest part (such as the thick end of chicken drumsticks) toward the outside. Also, allowing the dish to "set" a few minutes after the oven shuts off is important to the actual cooking time of the dish.

Learning all this information about microwave ovens was interesting, but watching — and tasting — the result of putting that information into action was better. The dealer made creamed corn, herbed chicken and spicy baked beans — all in about 25 minutes and all at the same time in the stack cooker. Plus, she gave us some of the chocolate cheesecake she had already prepared.

The youngest taste-tester and I were extremely impressed. You have to understand, the young taste-tester is not known for her open mind when it comes to trying anything new, culinarily speaking. She has developed a reputation for being a semi-picky eater, at the very least. So when I say she was impressed, that's saying something. Everything was as delicious and pleasing as if it had been prepared in a conventional oven — and coming from me, that's something.

I don't have enough space to go into exactly how you cook with a TupperWave stack cooker, but I can tell you that it seems to work just exactly the way it is supposed to, resulting in delicious and probably more nutritious homemade meals.

Tupperware is guaranteed "for life," it's easy to clean and it fills a multitude of uses; it can help you prepare tasty meals that save calories, energy and time.

Tupperware is still kind of expensive though.

Linda Anderson is a Reporter-Telegram staff writer.

Thanksgiving tradition is new

By Carrie White
N.Y. Times News Service

More than any other holiday, Thanksgiving evokes food loyalties. The thought of doing without Mom's sweet potato mash or Nana's creamed onions is unthinkable.

That predictability is something we all anticipate. It's comforting to know that year after year the family will gather around the table for the same meal. The stuffed celery, turkey, mashed potatoes and pumpkin pie are all touchstones to the past, and a promise for the future. Every family has its own "special" food. Ours has been Steamed Walnut Pudding with Brandy Whipped Cream Sauce.

I made that dessert again last year, as my mother had always done and her mother before her. Last year, though, I made a second dessert. It caught my eye on the cover of the November 1990 Gourmet.

Pumpkin Cheesecake with Bourbon Sour Cream Topping combines two wonderful flavors — pumpkin and cheesecake. One might think the bourbon would dominate, but it is fairly inconsequential. Another flavoring could easily be substituted for the bourbon.

I've made this cheesecake several times since last Thanksgiving, so let me pass along a couple of tips. The cake needs to be baked in the center of the oven. I've tried it at other levels and it just does not work.

Next, it's very important to grease the cheesecake pan before laying in the crust. Otherwise, you're going to have a heck of a time getting a complete piece out.

Also, when the sour cream topping is applied and baked for 5 minutes, it is still — at least initially — going to appear fairly fluid. Don't worry. It will firm up as it cools.

This is a very rich cheesecake and will serve eight easily.

I plan to make it again this year, along with our traditional steamed pudding, because I've come to terms with the fact that it isn't sacrilegious to change the Thanksgiving meal.

The addition of this cheesecake actually makes me feel like I'm passing on something to the family tradition, just like when Nana added creamed onions to the lineup so many years ago.

New Thanksgiving desserts, such as this spicy pumpkin cheesecake, are proof that not all holiday traditions are old.

I plan to make it (pumpkin cheesecake) again this year ... because I've come to terms with the fact that it isn't sacrilegious to change the Thanksgiving meal.

PUMPKIN CHEESECAKE WITH BOURBON SOUR CREAM TOPPING

CRUST:
¾ cup graham cracker crumbs
½ cup finely chopped pecans
¼ cup firmly packed light brown sugar
¼ cup granulated sugar
¼ cup unsalted butter, melted and cooled

FOR THE FILLING:
1½ cups solid-pack pumpkin
3 large eggs
1½ teaspoons cinnamon
½ teaspoon nutmeg
½ teaspoon ground ginger
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup firmly packed brown sugar
3 (8-ounce) packages cream cheese cut into bits and softened
½ cup granulated sugar
2 tablespoons heavy cream
1 tablespoon cornstarch
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 tablespoon bourbon liqueur or bourbon, if desired

FOR THE TOPPING:
2 cups sour cream
2 tablespoons granulated sugar
1 tablespoon bourbon liqueur or bourbon, to taste

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Make sure rack is situated so cheesecake will bake in oven's center.

FOR THE CRUST: In bowl, combine cracker crumbs, pecans, sugars and butter; press mixture into bottom and ½-inch up the side of buttered 9-inch springform pan. Chill crust for 1 hour.

FOR THE FILLING: Whisk together pumpkin, eggs, cinnamon, nutmeg, ginger, salt and brown sugar. In large bowl, with electric mixer, cream together cream cheese and sugar. Beat in cream, cornstarch, vanilla, bourbon or bourbon liqueur and pumpkin mixture. Beat until smooth. Pour filling into crust, bake cheesecake for 55 minutes and let cool in pan on rack for 5 minutes.

FOR THE TOPPING: Combine sour cream, sugar and bourbon or bourbon liqueur. Spread on top of cheesecake and bake for 5 minutes longer. Let cheesecake cool in pan on rack and chill it, covered, overnight. Remove sides of pan and garnish top of cheesecake with pecans.

The 1991 "Stay At Home" Party
For M S
is almost here!!!

You Are Invited To Be A Part Of a 13 Year Old Tradition:

Baskets filled with gourmet cheese, a smoked sausage roll, freshly baked French loaf, cookie assortment, fresh fruit, and a choice of vintage wine or sparkling cider all wrapped in holiday colors will be delivered throughout the area December 2nd, 3rd and 4th.

Guests are asked to "STAY AT HOME" for the evening and donate the cost of an evening out to benefit the West Texas Chapter of the Multiple Sclerosis Society.

Over 800 people are affected by MS in our West Texas area. MS is the #1 neurological disease of the central nervous system. It strikes our young adults and robs families of their moms, dads, or college sons or daughters. We are supported solely through fund raising projects such as this. Suggested donation has been the same for 13 years.

DEAR ABBY

Smokeout clears way for smokers hoping to quit

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: In 1990, you gave the nation's smokers a wonderful gift the week before Thanksgiving: a column encouraging them to participate in the American Cancer Society's Great American Smokeout.

Van Buren

Your support helped millions across the country make the decision to quit smoking, at least for the day. Your column was a terrific morale-booster for our 2.5 million American Cancer Society volunteers in the United States.

Would you please run that lovely Smokeout column again? And thank you for your continued help in the fight against cancer. — LINDA S. HAASE, ASSOCIATE DIRECTOR OF COMMUNICATIONS, AMERICAN CANCER SOCIETY, ILLINOIS DIVISION

DEAR MS. HAASE: With pleasure!

DEAR READERS: Tomorrow, Nov. 21, 1991, will mark the 15th Annual Great American Smokeout, a one-day campaign to encourage smokers to quit smoking for 24 hours, just to prove they can do it.

Last year, 19 million smokers tried to quit for the day. This represents 38 percent of the nation's 50 million smokers. Breast cancer used to be the biggest killer for women. But the No. 1 cause of cancer death among women and men today is lung cancer. Tobacco claims one life every 13 seconds. An estimated 143,000 will die of lung cancer in 1991.

And now, a word about smoking-related diseases — emphysema, chronic bronchitis and heart disease: This year an estimated 434,000 will die from one of these. This total exceeds the number of U.S. battle deaths in World War II — nine times as many people who die in automobile accidents every year.

A congressional study has reported that health costs from the adverse effects of smoking have reached a new high of $100 billion a year in increased medical bills and lost productivity. The loss in death and disability cannot be measured.

What about "secondhand" smoke? Is it damaging to nonsmokers to be in the presence of those of you who are smoking? Yes! One non-smoker dies of secondhand smoke for every eight smokers. And studies reveal that the children of smokers are more prone to lung problems and allergies than are children of nonsmokers.

For years I have begged my young readers, "If you smoke, quit now. If you don't smoke, don't start!" Yet an estimated 3,000 to 5,000 kids light up for the first time every day. Why? Peer pressure, no doubt. Cigarette companies sell $1 billion of cigarettes to children each year.

Quitting "cold turkey" is the hardest way to quit, but my readers tell me it's the most effective, and in the long run, the easiest. Those who need help to break their habit: Call your local chapter of the American Cancer Society or call (800) 227-2345 for information.

If you're hooked, and have been telling yourself, "One of these days I'm going to quit," why not start tomorrow? It won't be easy — but it will be the best Thanksgiving present you can give yourself — and those who love you. — Love, Abby

NTF announces Turkey Lovers' Recipe Contest

Staff Report

The National Turkey Federation introduces its third annual National Turkey Lovers' Recipe Contest for young chefs, ages 12-18.

Contest entries will be accepted through April 1, 1992. Each entry will be judged on three parts: the recipe (60 percent), a nutritional content essay, and food handling techniques essay (20 percent each).

Recipes must use at least one pound of fresh or full-cooked turkey meat, and serve 4 to 8. They can be for appetizers, salads, entrees, sandwiches and snacks. A panel of food professional will judge each recipe for taste, originality, appearance, appeal, simplicity and two written essays. One essay should describe the nutritional quality of the recipe and the other essay should describe proper food handling techniques to use when preparing and storing the dish. Essays, not to exceed 200 words, must be printed or typed on an 8½x11-inch piece of paper, attached to the recipe.

A complete copy of the rules may be obtained by sending a self-addressed, stamped, business-sized (#10) envelope to RULES, National Turkey Federation, 11319 Sunset Hills Road, Reston, Va., 22090.

Landry award

DALLAS — Tom Landry, who had 20 consecutive winning seasons and two Super Bowl victories with the Dallas Cowboys, now has an award for public service.

On Monday, the former Cowboys coach received the Russell H. Perry Free Enterprise Award in a ceremony attended by more than 700 business and civic leaders.

Landry, founder of the Landry Investment Group, was perfectly suited for the honor, said a Dallas Baptist University official.

"When this award was created four years ago, we had four criteria. And Landry meets all of them," said John Clem, the university's director of development.

Requirements for the award, named for the late Dallas insurance executive and financial supporter of the university, include demonstrating integrity and character and showing a commitment to the community.

Texas festival

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — San Antonio became host of the 1993 U.S. Olympic Festival on Tuesday as Olympic Committee representatives and local sports organizers signed a formal contract for the event.

"You're going to feel so wonderful and so great," Harvey Schiller, U.S. Olympic Committee executive director, told more than 500 business and civic leaders at Palo Alto College.

The college's new $13 million gymnasium and swimming center will be event sites for the festival, to be held July 23-Aug. 1 in 1993. Approximately 4,200 participants are expected.

The city's domed stadium is scheduled for completion in 1993, just in time for the festival. Schiller earlier toured the construction site of the $177 million Alamodome.

Cowboys try to look ahead

■ Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson turns his attention toward the unbeaten Washington Redskins.

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — Jimmy Johnson is trying to get his Dallas Cowboys to forget the NFL's questionable officiating and get their minds on knocking the Washington Redskins out of the unbeaten ranks.

"Washington is playing at the highest level of what I've seen since I've been in the league," Johnson said Tuesday. "They find a way to win when they play the top teams and then they play the middle teams and just dominate them."

Johnson said Washington is now much better than the team that escaped Texas Stadium with a 33-31 victory Sept. 9.

"Washington has put all the pieces of the puzzle together," Johnson said. "At every position they have an experienced, talented player."

The 12-point favorite Redskins dominate teams because their opponents can't get to quarterback Mark Rypien, Johnson said.

"They don't have any leakage on their pass rush," Johnson said. "I think Rypien has been sacked just four times. Rypien stands back there all day long."

Johnson said the Redskins defense is a benefactor of Washington's strong offense, which ranks third in the NFL.

"Their defense plays well because other teams are always playing catchup," Johnson said. "If you get behind then their defense can tee off against you."

Johnson was also singing the injury blues.

He said tight end Jay Novacek definitely won't play because of a sprained knee and will be replaced by Alfredo Roberts.

"The last few games have taken a toll on us physically," Johnson said.

However, he did get some good news. Linebacker Vincent Smith, who has missed four weeks with hepatitis, will be available to play Sunday.

The Cowboys (6-5) are battling for one of the three NFC wildcard playoff spots. They lost 22-9 on Sunday to the New York Giants in which Johnson called officiating the worst he had ever seen. He was not fined by the NFL for his remarks.

"We can still win," said Johnson, who earned his first NFL victory three years ago in RFK Stadium. "We know we can be successful against the Redskins."

Johnson said he still believes the Cowboys can make the playoffs.

"I still haven't changed my playoff expectations," Johnson said. "We've had a difficult schedule with three straight games on the road, but I feel good about my players, about every phase of the team. And I think we will be one heckuva team in the near future."

Ripken AL's first MVP to play for losing team

Associated Press

BALTIMORE — Cal Ripken said winning his second American League MVP award didn't make up for a losing season. Cecil Fielder said nothing can make up for finishing second again.

Ripken

"When you're an athlete in a team sport, the only thing that really matters is winning," Baltimore's shortstop said Tuesday after he became the first AL player to capture the MVP award as member of a losing team. "Having gone through winning, I can stand up here and say there's nothing like it. Not to downplay being awarded the MVP, but in comparison, there is no comparison."

Ripken hit .323 with 34 homers and 114 RBIs, but Baltimore finished sixth in the seven-team AL East with a 67-95 record. He received 15 first-place votes, eight seconds, four thirds and one seventh for 318 points in balloting by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

Fielder, who led the majors with 133 RBIs and tied for the major-league lead in homers with 44 homers, was second. He got 286 points with got nine first-place votes, 12 seconds, six thirds and one seventh.

Last year, Fielder finished second to Oakland's Rickey Henderson despite a 50-home run season. The knock was that the Tigers finished last.

This season, Detroit contended until the final weeks.

"They told me last year I had to play on a contender," Fielder said. "Now, Cal Ripken plays on a sixth-place team and they tell me he's an MVP. It's a shame. It's a shame the way things go down. I understand Cal might have been the MVP. I'm not saying he didn't have that kind of season, but he played with a sixth-place team.

"It's a joke as far as I'm concerned. The way things were done this year, I'm just done with it. If anybody put together two years like I did, they'd be MVP. So it's just a bunch of garbage."

Although the BBWAA does not release a complete list of how each writer voted, executive secretary Jack Lang did say that Joe Giuliotti of the Boston Herald voted Ripken seventh and Kit Stier of the Oakland Tribune voted Fielder seventh.

Ripken chose not to try understand the voting process.

Chaps put away Ranger, 116-103

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

Midland College scored the first 16 points of the second half and went on a 29-10 run to take control down the stretch Monday night and defeat the Ranger College Rangers 116-103 in the Chaps' last home game until January.

It took MC almost a full half to finally gain adequate advantage of a game they were clearly favored to win.

Tied at 32 and with 6:03 showing in the first half, the Chaps reeled off nine straight points in just 30 seconds to give them the advantage they later would need going into halftime. The Chaps held a 57-49 lead at the break, but before the nine point surge, the lead had changed hands six times and saw six ties.

When the Rangers came out of the halftime locker room as flat as the economy, the Chaps' 29-10 run sent the Rangers tumbling like stock traders during last week's collapse.

To make the visitors' plunge that much more horrific, the Rangers failed to put any second-half points on the board until 4:42 had elapsed.

All these factors combined to make it appear MC was well on the way to its sixth victory in seven games.

"We score points like the Miami Hurricanes score touchdowns," MC head coach Steve Green said of his explosive-at-times offense.

Unfortunately, the Chaps also looked a little like Texas A&M did against the Tulsa Hurricanes earlier this season when the Aggies held a 28-point halftime lead before eventually losing.

For the fourth time this season, MC saw a 30-point lead shrink to near nothing before ultimately putting a lid on the victory.

After the Chaps' run to open the second half, MC relaxed the full court pressure that had worked so well for them coming out of the second half gates.

When the MC defense laid back, Ranger took advantage and proceeded to outscore MC 33-18 during an eight-minute stretch late in the game. MC's lead had gone from a game-high 31 points to just 10, 110-100, with 51 seconds remaining in the game.

Officials wheel Detroit Lions' offensive guard Mike Utley from the floor of the Pontiac Silverdome.

Utley not expected to regain mobility

■ Return of lower body movement for injured Detroit Lion would take "a miracle," doctor says.

Associated Press

PONTIAC, Mich. — Mike Utley, according to friends, likes heavy-metal music and hard hitting on the football field. Now they hope Utley's fierce strength will help him cope with the neck injury that has left him a paraplegic.

"Mike's a fighter and he's a competitor," said teammate Roman Fortin, one of two visitors allowed to see Utley on Tuesday. "The pushing they'll put him through, he'll be able to do it. He doesn't want a lot of to-do made about him."

Dr. David J. Collon, the Lions' orthopedic consultant, said Tuesday that Utley has been able to use his hands and arms but not his legs since the injury in Sunday's game.

"At this time, we don't expect him to regain any mobility," Collon said.

Collon answered "yes" when asked if it would take a miracle for the 6-foot-6, 290-pound offensive guard to walk again.

Utley's girlfriend visited him Tuesday. His parents, Frank and Irene Ut-

How will we feed our high schools?

A new junior high will be coming on board in the fall of 1993 and the process of making hard decisions that will have a great impact on Midland education is underway.

Williamson

Any decision made will also impact the local athletic scene and the University Interscholastic League says that activities such as sports, band, choir and other extracurricular activities are part of the education process.

No decision should be made purely for the sake of athletics or extracurricular activities, but it should be considered wisely. The greatest decision in this regard in whether or not to have pure feeder schools.

Pure feeders mean that two junior highs will furnish students for Midland Lee and two will furnish students for Midland High. With the current three junior highs, it was impossible to have pure feeders.

For both local high schools to have a chance to compete at the level required in District 4-5A, pure feeders are essential. It gives coaches a chance to reach all the way down to the seventh grade level to develop their programs, whether it be football, basketball, track, band, etc.

Midland competes in a district that has pure feeder schools in Abilene, Odessa and San Angelo. It's like giving teams from those cities a two-year head start.

It wouldn't be a surprise that some of the same people who are against pure feeders will be the same people who want to see a coach fired because of a losing record. If we make a decision not to have a pure feeder system in Midland, then we shouldn't expect a coach to have his job on the line for losing records.

This corner favors a pure feeder system for Midland, but I am smart enough to realize that there are other major considerations involved like boundary changes and minority distribution.

Pure feeders are the way to go as far as extracurricular activities are concerned, but if we choose not to go this route, don't give coaches a short stick to fight with and then bring out the tar and feathers two years later.

With the addition of a fourth junior high, we have the opportunity to build a solid athletic base in Midland, one that is fair for both local high schools and fair for those youngsters who wish to compete outside the classroom. It's at least a decision that deserves a hard look.

WE WERE saddened to hear of the death of Odessa's Peggy Steding Sunday. Steding, 55, lost her battle with cancer, but won a nation with her ability.

Peggy gave the sport of racquetball a national focus. She is probably the best player to ever play the game. She won over 200 straight matches and won 15 national racquetball championships, playing against men for the most part. She was a dominant force in the sport. We will all miss her.

Terry Williamson is sports editor of the Reporter-Telegram.

UTLEY: Lineman has use of hands and arms only

(From 1C)

ley, were en route from their home in Seattle.

"His spirits are high. He seemed a lot better than I expected going in," Fortin said.

That didn't surprise Charlie Sanders, a former Lions all-pro who now coaches receivers. Sanders said Utley was a fighter from the day he arrived as a rookie out of Washington State.

"I realized right away that football was his life," Sanders said. "He couldn't wait to hit someone. He said, 'I want my equipment.' He didn't like running around in shorts and T-shirt. He wanted to hit something or someone."

Utley, 25, will undergo a spinal fusion operation either late this week or early next week. Collon said Utley likely will be moved to a rehabilitation facility in about two weeks.

There was the usual pushing and shoving in Sunday's game with the Los Angeles Rams, and Utley was always in the middle of it.

"Blood excites him, whether it's his or somebody else's," Sanders said. "Mike practices hard. He gets into a few fights."

Collon said Utley should eventually be able to drive specially equipped cars and possibly do some types of athletic activity.

The injury occurred when Utley was pass-blocking David Rocker of the Rams on Erik Kramer's 11-yard touchdown pass to Robert Clark. Rocker jumped into the air in an attempt to deflect the pass and came down on Utley.

Utley subsequently lost his balance and fell forward, landing on the top of his head and snapping it back.

"He sacrifices for all of us, especially me," center Kevin Glover said. "Whenever I'm in a scuffle or shoving match, Mike is always there for me."

He has stood out in the clubhouse, too, with his long hair died blond at the tips.

Utley loves motorcycles and heavy-metal music, especially the rock group Whitesnake. He changes the earring in his left earlobe every other day from a skull-and-crossbones to a dagger.

It's all in fun, Utley said during training camp.

"It gives the guys a new outlook on things," Utley said at the time. "I don't sit and think about it."

Utley once was asked what kind of job he'd have if he weren't playing pro football.

"A lumberjack," he said. "I'd be doing something outside. I enjoy that kind of stuff. No offense, but I can't see myself sitting in an office, pushing a pencil."

Utley came to the Lions in 1989 as a third-round draft choice. A knee injury limited him to five games his rookie season. He was rotated between guard and tackle last year and started only one game.

This year, he started all 11 games at right guard.

"This hurts me," said Eric Andolsek, the left guard. "He's right there next to you. You're laughing and clowning around. Now he's fighting to walk. He's a heavy-metal type of guy. He likes that type of music. He's a guy you'd like to have for a brother."

Peebles still hospitalized

Associated Press

BEREA, Ohio — Cleveland Browns wide receiver Danny Peebles remained in a Houston hospital for tests Tuesday after sustaining a neck injury during Sunday night's loss to the Oilers.

Peebles, 25, momentarily lost feeling in his arms and legs when he was hit by Bubba McDowell on an incomplete pass near the end of the third quarter. Peebles' head was snapped back on the play and he had to be driven off the field on a stretcher.

The Browns placed Peebles on injured reserve Tuesday and said they expect him to miss the rest of the season.

"I don't know all the details but it was serious enough where he doesn't need any contact for four or five weeks or longer," coach Bill Belichick said. "Maybe it could take it. It's a precautionary measure."

Belichick said Peebles has regained all feeling and movement and is expected to be released from Houston's Methodist Hospital on Wednesday.

The Browns also signed former New York Giants linebacker Johnie Cooks and waived cornerback Anthony Florence and linebacker Randy Kirk.

CHAPS: MC reaches 6-1 season mark

(From 1C)

"We were flat," Green said. "I couldn't get any fire from my bench. We're just looking for some reckless abandon. We have it that way in practice but not in a game. We're just playing tentative."

Despite hitting only 2-of-8 from the field in the first half, MC post Ari Rodriques again led the Chaps with 23 points. Freshman guard Terrance Rone pumped in 21 points and sophomore guard Chris McKinney added 18.

Charles Sanders (13), Kelon Haynie (11) and Fabian Mina (10) also finished in double figures. Mina also posted 12 rebounds, high for the Chaps.

Sophomore Derrick Hunter led the Rangers with 23.

"We've been a 35-minute team," first-year Ranger head coach Denny Downing said. "We've never played a solid 40. We lose concentration sometime during the game. It's hard to keep up with the pace of the athletes they have here."

MC, which won't return to Chap Center until a doubleheader the weekend of January 3-4, travels to the San Jacinto Classic this Thursday and Friday.

Ranger Junior College (103) — Derrick Hunter 10-17 0-0 23; Tony Clemons 8-12 5-5 21; Richard Griffin 8-17 4-5 21; Anthony Snowden 7-8 3-5 17; John Thomas 4-10 2-5 10; Gary Wilson 2-3 0-2 6; Broderick Harris 2-3 1-2 5; Daniel Fielder 0-1 0-0 0. Totals: 41-71 15-24 103.

SuperSonics cruise to third straight triumph

Associated Press

NBA

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Gary Payton scored 16 points in the second half and Michael Cage had 20 rebounds to help Seattle overcome Washington 113-106 on Tuesday night, the SuperSonics' third straight victory.

Trailing 68-61 in the third quarter, Payton had eight points in a 20-4 run which gave Seattle 9-point lead and helped send the Bullets to their second straight loss and fifth straight defeat at the Capital Centre.

Mavericks 96, Nuggets 93

DENVER — Dallas started with a three-guard offense, but it was fourth guard Brad Davis that ended up playing a key role in the Mavericks' third straight victory.

Davis, a reserve in his 13th season, scored all seven of his points in the final period and made two assists to help Dallas take command in a contest that featured 12 lead changes and nine ties.

Rockets 90, Knicks 79

HOUSTON — Hakeem Olajuwon scored 12 points in the fourth quarter and Houston held an opponent under 100 points in regulation for the ninth straight game.

Heat 111, Jazz 91

MIAMI — Rony Seikaly had 23 points and 17 rebounds to lead Miami to its fourth straight victory.

The Heat moved to 6-2, the first time the franchise has ever been four games above .500.

Nets 122, Kings 118

EAST RUTHERFORD N.J. — Sam Bowie scored 27 points and Chris Morris had a key basket and two clutch free throws in the final minute as New Jersey snapped a seven-game losing streak.

It was the 41st consecutive road loss for the Kings, who are 0-5 away from home this season.

Bucks 127, Hornets 104

MILWAUKEE — Moses Malone had 23 points and Dale Ellis scored 11 straight in the third quarter as Milwaukee snapped a four-game losing streak.

MVP: Award is bunch of garbage, Fielder says

(From 1C)

"It's unfair for me to get involved in the specifics of the voting and the interpretation of the MVP," he said. "My job is go out and do the best I can. Then, after your job is over, it's out of your control whether you win the award or finish second. But now that I've won it, I'm very happy about it."

Frank Thomas of the Chicago White Sox was third with 181 points, Jose Canseco of the Athletics was fourth with 145 points and Joe Carter of the Toronto Blue Jays was fifth with 136 points.

Ripken was AL Rookie of the Year in 1982 and MVP in 1983, when the Orioles won the World Series. This time, he earned MVP honors with a team that was out of contention by early May, and that took some of the fun out of the award.

Excalibur takes Turkey Shootout

Staff Report

Midland Excalibur nipped Midland Blast '76 to win the Under 16 Open Division while the Midland Wildcats won the Under 10 Girls Division over the weekend in the Midland Turkey Shootout.

Excalibur scored three unanswered goals in the second half to win its championship in a dramatic game that saw Ross Hunter score the winning goal, his sixth of the tournament.

The Wildcats beat the Parker & Parsley "Hot Shots" in the finals. The Wildcats got to the finals with an overtime win over the Lubbock Twisters while the "Hot Shots" beat the Midland Fireballs in the semifinals. The Twisters finished third and the Fireballs fourth.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 20, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Be resourceful and your career will take a giant leap forward! Early in 1992, someone gives you the benefit of the doubt. Repay this person's faith in you with loyal service. Joining a study group next spring will lead to new friendships. Do not expect your romantic partner to make a commitment you have not yet made. Travel for business and pleasure in late fall of 1992.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: journalist Judy Woodruff, actress Veronica Hamel, journalist Alistair Cooke, baseball's Jay Johnstone.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Spend part of today developing long-term plans. Do not involve someone in the decision-making process just because he is paying you for a certain service. Seek advice from experts only.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Travel could complicate your efforts to get things done today. Rely on others to follow your instructions. Take tests and welcome challenges. Being on time to an appointment could make you a winner.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Be as flexible as possible when planning your work schedule for today. Look for opportunities to advance a pet cause and increase business. Romance takes a temporary backseat to your career.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A good day for making an inventory, disposing of clutter and getting your home ready for colder weather. Enjoy a platonic relationship without trying to change it.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Respect a. .l courage are the code words that will bring success today. Stand up for your principles and you will emerge the big winner now. Keep spending to a minimum this week.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Refuse to be kept in the dark about financial matters. Know what is going on and what people are talking about. Higher-ups ask probing questions. Have the answers at your fingertips.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A good day for spontaneous invitations, heart-to-heart conversations and short business trips. Although your evening may be demanding, you feel proud to be a part of things!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Opportunity knocks very loudly today. The resources you have mustered recently will come in handy. Do not join others in making unnecessary criticisms. Emphasize the need for teamwork.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Push financial, domestic and budgetary matters. A child's disposition may cause some concern. Set a good example! Getting married now may have its drawbacks. Plunge into a creative hobby tonight.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): The day generates strong convictions and a rather conservative attitude. Do not allow prejudice to influence public policy. Tolerance breeds harmony. A friend shares wonderful news.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Someone could urge you to spend money unwisely. Make your own decisions. Purchase what you need before buying what you want. Avoid people who try to nag or flatter you into doing their bidding.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Prudence and teamwork are essential to business success. Be more adaptable to changing circumstances. Temptation is strong during the evening hours. Remember your promises to a loved one.

Opening lead: Jack of ♣

How would you play this hand if you were declaring six spades? Let's suppose that you get there on a power auction such as above. Once North makes it clear he is not taking a courtesy preference to your first suit, it would be pusillanimous of you to refrain from bidding a slam in the light of partner's initial two-over-one response.

Obviously, the fate of the hand rests on how you guess the hearts, assuming East does not have both missing high honors. Most players we know would win the opening lead, draw trumps and then cash a few winners in trumps and the side suits.

Since neither defender is likely to make a revealing discard in hearts, it all comes down to a guess. Those declarers who futilely postponed the moment of truth would then lead a heart and squirm for a while before making a decision. Some would cast their eyes heavenward looking for divine inspiration, which is unlikely to come; others would apply some pet theory that the queen always lies over the jack, or on odd-numbered days you always finesse the jack.

In his Bols bridge tip, Bobby Wolff suggests that you should lead a heart at trick two! Few defenders, holding the ace, would have the presence of mind to duck smoothly. Indeed, Wolff says that if West does duck smoothly, you will be right more often than not by electing to finesse the jack rather than rise with the king.

Wolff's advice: Make yourself more difficult to play against. Play confidently with a steady demeanor and consistent tempo, and you will find your results will improve considerably. Amen!

Kiefer Sutherland just beat her to it, Julia Roberts says

LOS ANGELES — Julia Roberts said she intended to break off her engagement with Kiefer Sutherland, but he beat her to it just days before their ballyhooed nuptials.

Roberts

"I had returned from a trip to Arizona intending to tell Kiefer that I thought it would be best for both of us not to get married," she told Entertainment Weekly in her first interview since the June split.

"But the next time I talked to Kiefer, he called me on the telephone," said the actress, who starred in "Pretty Woman."

"The only thing I said was, 'Where have you been?' And he proceeded to tell me what I was going to tell him, which is he did not want to marry me, he did not want this to happen."

Miss Roberts, 24, said she was a "little surprised that he had said this before I had had a chance to say it, so I said nothing. But he was far more nasty about it than I was going to be."

In the magazine, which hit newsstands Monday, Miss Roberts said Sutherland wasn't "left at the altar."

"I feel like Kiefer, for whatever reasons, tried to make it seem like he was the victim of the situation," she said.

NEW YORK — Dustin Hoffman said his Captain Hook is based in part on conservative columnist William F. Buckley Jr.

Hoffman

"He's bright and educated, but there's something scary there," Hoffman said in the Dec. 8 issue of USA Weekend.

"I know what interested me was the combination of violence and effeteness," Hoffman said of Hook, "and Buckley came to mind — in a nice way."

Hoffman plays the title character in "Hook," Steven Spielberg's $70 million Peter Pan movie opening Dec. 11.

"Buckley came into my head because I used to imitate him at parties," Hoffman said. "In fact, (Robert) Duvall and I used to do him together!"

USA Weekend said that Buckley, told about Hoffman's remarks, replied: "Well, that's me. There's something extreee-mely scary about me."

MADRID, Spain — Marlon Brando has signed on for the role of Grand Inquisitor Tomas de Torquemada in the movie "Christopher Columbus: The Discovery," a Spanish newspaper said Tuesday.

Producers Alexander and Ilya Salkind, best known for "Superman," were negotiating with Matt Dillon, Tom Selleck and Isabella Rosellini to appear in the $40 million movie, said the newspaper El Pais.

Brando signed on Friday, the newspaper quoted Spanish production chief Victor Albarran as saying. El Pais cited other sources as saying Brando would be paid $2.5 million for playing Torquemada, one of Columbus' chief enemies in the court of royal patrons Ferdinand and Isabella.

Neither Albarran nor Spanish co-producer Maria Monreal were available for comment.

The producers want Dillon as Columbus — replacing Timothy Dalton — while Selleck and Rosellini would play the Spanish royal couple, El Pais said.

LAS VEGAS — Rodney Dangerfield said he might take Caesars Palace back to trial for eye injuries he suffered in a 1988 steam room accident.

The two sides met Monday, but failed to reach a settlement agreement.

Dangerfield was awarded $725,000 after a trial last year on his claim that the hotel was negligent in allowing a steam bath to spurt hot steam at him following a performance.

U.S. District Judge Roger Foley cut the award by $450,000 in July, saying it was excessive. Dangerfield was given the option of accepting the reduced award or going back to trial next month.

The comedian said his burned eye is worse now and has forced him to drastically cut back nightclub appearances.

MINNEAPOLIS — Humorist Garrison Keillor said he's not worried about alienating fans of Lake Wobegon with his new novel.

"We continually alienate people in our line of work. And if we should ever worry about alienating people, we will shrivel up and fall to the floor," he said Tuesday during a promotional tour for "WLT: A Radio Romance."

"What keeps us going, and the urge that keeps us in this business, is not politeness," he said. "It's curiosity and it's passion and it's love of people and wanting to give them something. And of course, you alienate people, and then, if they please, they come back."

The book is about a fictional Minneapolis radio station. It contains bawdy limericks and other ribald bits that may surprise readers of Keillor's earlier writings about the mythical Minnesota town of Lake Wobegon.

API: Pollution laws impose unacceptable costs

■ Institute's study is first to total projected costs of all changes expected in federal environmental regulation.

N.Y. Times News Service

HOUSTON — New federal regulations meant to reduce air pollution, oil spills and contamination of underground water supplies will cost the oil industry $15 billion to $23 billion a year by the late 1990s, the American Petroleum Institute predicted Tuesday.

It is not clear how these estimated costs would be divided among gasoline, diesel fuel and other products made from oil. If they were spread evenly, the higher figure represents a cost of about 10 cents a gallon, said Michael E. Canes, the institute's vice president of statistics, analysis and information systems.

At a news conference at the institute's annual meeting here, Canes called the $23 billion figure high, but "not a number completely out of historic context."

The institute's study is the first to total the projected costs of all of the changes expected in federal environmental regulation. Although it draws on some previous work by the Environmental Protection Agency and some other government departments, some of the estimates were made directly by the industry institute. The costs would presumably be borne by customers, because the total is almost as large as the oil industry's recent annual profits.

Of the 18 categories listed, the most costly would be manufacturing cleaner-burning gasoline, at an estimated cost ranging from $1.4 billion to $7.9 billion a year. Historically, the oil companies have done poorly in predicting the cost of reformulated fuel.

The second-largest cost, estimated at $2.7 billion to $5.5 billion a year, was estimated for the disposal of wastes produced by drilling and pumping oil from underground. Some of those wastes are now considered toxic under the Resource Recovery and Conservation Act.

The industry will also incur costs from limiting emissions of toxic gases from refineries; putting double hulls on oil tankers; taking the sulfur out of diesel oil, and changing the recipe for gasoline to reduce the amount that evaporates into the air.

The figures are stated in a range because, among other things, they include other anticipaated costs that federal agencies have not yet stated in detail. In addition, they do not include regulations imposed by the states.

The institute's study did not attempt to estimate the benefits of the new regulations. Canes said that some components could change with technological developments or the discovery of new problems.

Prices slide

NEW YORK — Oil prices slipped to a two-month low Tuesday, as traders decided demand could stay weak as long as the economy stays sick.

Light sweet crude oil for delivery in December settled at $22.00 per barrel, down 40 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange. That was crude's lowest price since Sept. 20, when the next-month delivery contract settled at $21.97.

"It's like somebody let the parking brake go on a car parked on the top of a hill in San Francisco. It's just sliding," said Peter Beutel, an oil futures analyst at Pegasus Econometric Group Inc., in Hoboken, N.J.

Over the past month, crude oil has fallen about $2 per barrel, heating oil has fallen nearly 6 cents a gallon and gasoline has fallen about 3 cents a gallon.

Natural gas prices were mixed, although contracts for delivery this winter took huge hits. Gas for delivery in December setted at $1.910 per 1,000 cubic feet, down 9.1 cents.

But gas for delivery in the spring and summer moved higher.

The nation's refinerys were running at 82.3 percent of capacity, up from 81.5 percent a week earlier.

Dollar tumbles

NEW YORK — The dollar tumbled against most major currencies Tuesday as traders took their cues from the slide in stock prices.

Gold prices moved higher.

John McCarthy, chief dealer with ABN-AMRO Bank NV, said the dollar "followed the Dow." The Dow Jones industrial averaged skidded 41 points Tuesday amid growing concerns about the economy.

McCarthy said comments by President Bush and Michael Boskin, chairman of Bush's Council of Economic Advisers, also darkened the foreign exchange market's mood. Bush called the economy sluggish while Boskin conceded that economic growth has slowed.

The dollar closed at 1.5965 marks in New York, down from 1.6105 late Monday. In earlier European trading, the dollar fell to 1.6020 marks from 1.6065.

The pound advanced agains the dollar, rising to $1.8000 in New York from $1.7900. In London, sterling rose to $1.7965 from $1.7915 late Monday.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Monday's quotes, included: 1.4165 Swiss francs, down from 1.4295; 5.4525 French francs, down from 5.5055; 1,207.00 Italian lire, down from 1,217.00; and 1.12875 Canadian dollars, unchanged.

Stocks drop 41; tumble triggers 'circuit breaker'

■ Heavy selling comes amid growing frustration over Washington's mishandling of the economy.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Stock prices fell sharply Tuesday in what was widely viewed as a continuation of Friday's 120-point fall.

Analysts said the heavy selling came amid growing frustration over Washington's mishandling of the economy.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down more than 75 points in early afternoon, recovered slightly to close down 41.15 points at 2,931.57.

The sharp drop triggered a "circuit breaker" at the New York Stock Exchange, which restricts computer-driven program selling when the average falls at least 50 points. The rule was designed to prevent declines from accelerating and was put in place after the 1987 stock market crash.

The Dow on Monday gained 29.52 points after falling 120.31 points on Friday, the worst decline in two years.

"This is a follow through from last Friday," said Edgar Kam, a stock market analyst for Ernst & Co. "(Monday) was a reflex rally, so to say."

Kam said Monday's market was deceptive: Though the Dow average advanced modestly, losing stocks far outstripped advancing ones in the broader market.

The broader market was hit again Tuesday. Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 4 to 1 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Big Board volume totaled 241.38 million shares as of 4 p.m., against 238.17 million in the previous session.

The most actively traded issue on the NYSE was Glaxo Holdings, down 1⅝ at 28¾. American Telephone and Telegraph fell 1¼ to 35¾, Telefonos del Mexico dropped 1⅜ to 42⅛ and Phillip Morris dipped ⅝ to 68⅜.

Despite the overall downward trend, U.S. Bioscience reported a dramatic gain. The company rose 7½ at 47⅛ on the American Stock Exchange after it acquired rights to market an anti-cancer agent in western Europe.

Market analysts blamed the sell-off largely on continued nervousness about the economy and a belief stock prices remain too high amid languid economic conditions.

"People are more nervous now because of the declines experienced over the last four days, especially the biotech stocks," said Walter Murphy, senior international market specialist for Merrill Lynch & Co.

A new economic report released Tuesday didn't cheer sour investors. The government said the U.S. trade deficit grew to $6.79 billion in September.

397 earned at least $200,000 in 1989 but paid no tax

The IRS has been reporting on high-income non-taxpayers since 1977, when there were 53. The peak year was in 1986, when 613 were reported.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Being rich and avoiding federal income tax is not as easy as it used to be.

But 397 couples and individuals, with incomes of $200,000 or more, found a way.

That's how many high-income earners showed no tax liability on returns filed in 1989, the Internal Revenue Service said in a report Tuesday.

The average income for this group: $575,000.

An additional 4,192 high-income tax return filers paid less than 5 percent of their earnings in federal taxes; 8,495 paid 5 percent to 10 percent, and 19,114 paid 10 percent to 15 percent.

All told, 32,198 couples and individuals with annual incomes of $200,000 or more paid less than 15 percent of their earnings in federal taxes. On the other hand, more than 80 percent of the 737,659 high-income filers paid 20 percent to 30 percent.

The IRS found 2,377 returns reported incomes of $100,000 to $200,000 but paying no tax.

The 397 of the richest Americans who paid no tax on returns filed in 1989 compares with 472 in 1988 and 595 in 1987.

The IRS has been reporting on high-income non-taxpayers since 1977, when there were 53. The peak year was in 1986, when 613 were reported.

In general, the number of filers able to avoid federal tax has declined while the number of $200,000-plus earners has increased steadily. On returns filed in 1987, 529,460 reported income of $200,000 or more; within two years the number had increased by 40 percent.

That is no accident. Laws enacted in 1981 and 1986 slashed tax rates dramatically on top earners while reducing their ability to shelter income from taxation.

But the new report shows that some shelter opportunities still survive. The biggest: tax-exempt interest, most of it from city and state bonds. The IRS said 184 of the high-income non-taxpayers reported tax-free interest of $98.6 million on returns filed in 1989. That was an average of $536,000 apiece.

The IRS said 183 of the untaxed $200,000-plus earners reported capital gains, or profits from the sale of investments, totaling nearly $71 million — or $386,000 each. By comparison, 223 had salaries and wages totaling just under $55 million, an average of $246,000.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Parents must charge son interest for loan

By Bill Doyle

Q. We have agreed to loan our son $100,000, to put along with his $140,000, to purchase a vacation home. How do we handle this on our income tax return?

Doyle

A. Because the loan tops $10,000, under cockamamie rules put into the 1984 federal tax act, you are required to charge interest of at least 110 percent of what is called the "applicable federal rate" — AFR, for short. On your respective income tax returns, you report that as interest income and your son reports it as an interest expense.

If you don't follow the rules and the Internal Revenue Service gets wind of the deal, it will "impute" interest at 120 percent of the AFR.

The AFR is based on the yield of marketable U.S. government securities and is revised monthly. But the rate for each loan is set at the time the loan is made and varies depending on the loan's length and period for compounding.

Let's assume the loan you make to your son is "long term," meaning nine years or longer, and interest is compounded monthly. A table in IRS Revenue Ruling 91-57 shows the AFR for the loan to be 7.57 percent.

The same IRS table shows 110 percent of that AFR as 8.31 percent, but my calculator works it out to 8.33 percent. Since you clearly are generous parents, go with the IRS number and charge your son 8.31 percent interest on that loan.

I can't let this go by without commenting on the amount of money involved. $240,000 buys a heck of a lot of vacation home, even in posh resorts.

Q. Where can I learn the applicable federal rate on a loan I intend to make to a friend?

A. On or about the 20th of each month, the IRS announces AFR numbers for the coming month and publishes them in an Internal Revenue Bulletin early in the month for which they take effect.

You should be able to obtain current AFR numbers from your local IRS office.

Q. I am a 78-year-old widow. My home, worth approximately $150,000, if fully paid for. I have $80,000 in 6.77 percent certificates of deposit maturing this month and $2,000 in a bank money market account. My Social Security benefit is $677 a month. I do mot use credit cards and have no debts.

An accountant suggests I put my money in equipment leasing, where he says I can get 14 percent and my full capital back after five years.

A relative in real estate wants me to put $50,000 in his company. He says he will give me 11 percent up front and, at the end of a year, I can renew my investment or get my $50,000 back.

They make it sound so secure, but you say high interest is high risk. I don't want greed to get to me. What do you advise?

A. To say no to both the accountant and your relative. While there is a possibility either or both of their deals might work out well and be profitable for you, there definitely is relatively high risk involved.

Q. On several occasions, you have written about the wisdom of making extra payments on a mortgage to shorten the length of the mortgage and greatly reduce the interest paid.

Rather than make the extra payments to the mortgage company, wouldn't it be smarter to put that money in an interest-producing account and, when the account equalled the remaining balance on the mortgage, retire the mortgage with one payment?

A. It would be only if the interest earned on the account into which the money is being put is higher than the interest being paid on the mortgage. The chance of that being the case has to be counted as mighty slim.

Rebuilding begins month after Oakland fire

By Michelle Locke
Associated Press writer

OAKLAND, Calif. — At 4 o'clock most mornings, architect Randolph Langenbach is startled awake by a recurring nightmare: a wall of flame, gusts of smoke, fiery fangs tearing at the house he loved.

"I relive that fire over and over again, standing on the roof of the house with structures burning all around," he said. "It was like going into the gates of hell."

A long month has passed since one of the most devastating fires in U.S. history swept the sumptuous hills above Oakland and Berkeley. At dawn, Langenbach brushes away the cobwebs of a catastrophe: Like everyone else who lost a home, he has work to do.

He's busy juggling rebuilding, finding a new place to work as a consultant (he used to work out of his house) and squeezing in some consulting to make ends meet. "It just all takes time," he said.

The Oct. 20 inferno killed 25 people, destroyed more than 3,000 homes and caused an estimated $1.5 billion in damage.

Most people have found temporary quarters and have restocked towels, sheets, clothes with harried shopping sprees.

Now comes the paperwork.

"It's awful," said Barbara McFadden, an investigator with the state Department of Real Estate who is used to digging through mounds of documents. McFadden, who lost her home, is all but overwhelmed by "millions of forms and meetings everywhere to go to."

"The grubby details time has set in," said Oakland City Councilwoman Marge Gibson Haskell, who's been filling out a few forms herself. She lost her home, too.

Even something as simple as balancing a checkbook is a disaster when bank statements and checks were lost. McFadden laughs as she recounts how in the mad packing rush she "carefully got down the box of checks, took out one package and put the rest of them safely away in the closet to burn up."

Compounding calamity, during a restocking trip someone crashed into her car at the hardware store parking lot and she later learned a growth on her nose would have to be removed.

"But there's a good side," McFadden said. "I looked at it while I was holding my husband's hand and I said, 'Well, we got the people and the dog out of the house. The car was not immobilized and the nose growth was (treatable)."

With the onset of rebuilding, some friction has developed as homeowners bump into bureaucracy.

Berkeley officials backed off a plan to require homeowners to use a single debris-removal contractor after residents protested.

Haskell, the councilwoman, said officials are trying to be responsive. For example, new one-stop centers offer everything from city permit processing to veterans' benefits to a pet adoption table.

Still, she acknowledged "there's a level of frustration going on right now ... people's emotions are right out on the cutting edge."

Frustrations are likely to get worse.

"This is probably the largest building project in the history of Northern California and it could result in 10,000 building and construction jobs before it's over," said James Brown, secretary-treasurer of the Alameda County Building Trades Council.

Most who lost their homes were insured, but Haskell said it's not known how many carried enough insurance to replace their homes.

Officials estimate it could take between seven and 20 months to rebuild, depending on whether existing plans are used and how recently they were approved.

But even as rebuilding begins, there are reminders of things that can never be replaced.

Fire survivors invariably point out that they're lucky to have their lives and their families.

Scientists spot mysterious object heading toward Earth

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A small, mysterious object is going to zoom close to Earth on Dec. 5, but astronomers can't tell yet if it's some previously unseen kind of asteroid or an old spacecraft swinging past its home planet.

"We don't know what it is. It just struck me as very curious," said astronomer Brian Marsden, director of the International Astronomical Union's Central Bureau for Astronomical Telegrams, a reporting agency for astronomy discoveries.

James Scotti, a University of Arizona scientist, first spotted the object Nov. 6 through the university's 36-inch Spacewatch telescope on Kitt Peak in southern Arizona.

The telescope is used to look for asteroids that might smash into the planet. Many scientists believe large asteroid impacts wiped out the dinosaurs and caused other prehistoric mass extinctions on Earth and also might threaten the planet in the future.

This object — with a diameter estimated at one yard to 11 yards — won't hit Earth or the moon on its orbit around the sun, but it will pass within 290,000 miles of Earth at about 5 a.m. or 6 a.m. CST on Dec. 5, Marsden said Monday by phone from Cambridge, Mass.

The only asteroid observed flying closer to the planet was a 30-foot-wide chunk of rock designated 1991BA, which flew within 106,000 miles of Earth last Jan. 15, he said. That was less than half the distance between Earth and the moon, and was considered a "near miss" by astronomers.

Paul Chodas, an aerospace engineer at NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, said his calculations suggest the object is an asteroid. But it also could be a spacecraft, perhaps an upper stage from one of the rockets that sent manned Apollo spacecraft to the moon from 1968 through 1972.

Some of those rockets were intentionally crashed on the moon for seismic studies by Apollo landers, but four flew past the moon, escaped Earth's gravitational pull and starting orbiting the sun, he said.

Scientists began to suspect the object may be a spacecraft because its orbit around the sun is "just a little bit larger and little bit more elliptical than Earth's orbit around the sun," Marsden said.

"We haven't seen a natural object in an orbit so much like the Earth's orbit," Chodas said. "Its orbit around the sun is very much like a spacecraft's orbit or a rocket body's orbit that launched one of these ... lunar spacecraft."

Most man-made space debris stays in orbit around the Earth.

Asteroids are chunks of rock and metal, leftovers from the formation of the solar system. Most are located in the asteroid belt between the orbits of Mars and Jupiter.

Chicago suburb sues over car sculpture

GLENCOE, Ill. (AP) — Pricey foreign cars are commonplace in this posh Chicago suburb, so a 1966 Pontiac sitting indiscreetly on a homeowner's lawn in the name of art is causing quite a tiff.

The village filed a lawsuit Monday against resident Themis Klotz over her artwork — a station wagon covered with 44 tons of sand.

Klotz says the sculpture is a monument to man's inhumanity to man. She titled it "The Monument to Humanity No One Will Be Left to Build After George Bush Has His Winnable Limited Protracted Nuclear War With 20 Million Americans Acceptable Lost."

But the village's lawsuit says the sculpture violates nine ordinances and is an environmental and safety hazard.

Klotz said her artistic freedom is at stake and she'll fight the lawsuit.

"An artist has the right to redefine material," she said. "This is not an automobile on my front yard. What was once an auto has become an armature of sculpture."

"She's not going to make it easy," said neighbor Nancy Gandelman. "She's going to go to the Supreme Court if she has to."
